MEXICANS REPORTED MOBBING AMERICANS

BABIES IN HOSPITAL, SICK WITH MEASLES, STOLEN BY MOTHER

Mrs. Estelle Law, of Savannah, Visits Grady and Regains Children Taken From Her by Law.

MOTHER IS ARRESTED AND PLACED IN TOWER

Big Legal Battle Now Expected Between Parents and the Georgia Children's Home Society.

A daring case of kidnaping, in which a mother stole two babies, aged 3, from the Grady hospital in broad daylight, was revealed yesterday afternoon when warrants were issued for Mrs. Estelle Law, of Savannah.

She was arrested at Kimballville farm, where she was found by County Policeman Butler, in company with the children she had abducted. She is now lodged in Fulton Tower. Her husband, Robert Law, was with her at the time of the arrest.

The kidnaping occurred last Wednesday afternoon while the graduation exercises were being held by the nurses of Grady hospital. It came as a culmination of a dramatic fight in the courts between the desperate mother and the Georgia Children's Home society, which is seeking to retain the babies.

Gave Them to Society.

On November 29 of last year, the children's court of Savannah, in which Mr. and Mrs. Law reside, took possession of the two children, Marion and Thomas, twins, and turned them over to the Children's Home society on grounds that the parents were unfit to care for the babies.

Recently both children developed measles. They were put in Grady hospital. Since the court action which took them from the father and mother, both had been inmates of the Home for the Friendless, in this city. The mother, it was learned Saturday, had been in hiding in Atlanta for some time, seeking an opportunity to steal the children.

They were put in the children's ward of Grady. For days the mother sought a chance to invade the hospital. She found it Wednesday, when the ward was well nigh deserted because of the graduation exercises that were being held for the class of nurses who were receiving diplomas from the hospital service.

Kidnaps Children.

Stealing into the ward, she bundled the twins into her arms, stole through the rear entrance and disappeared. Dr. Summerall, upon learning of the kidnaping, notified the Children's Home society, of which Robert McCord is superintendent, and Mr. McCord began an investigation.

Upon locating the woman and the children at Kimballville farm, where she and her husband had taken up residence in order to hide the stolen twins, McCord appeared in municipal court Saturday and issued warrants. He stated that the courts had awarded the children to his organization, and that the woman had stolen them. The arrest followed.

Another court fight is predicted as a result of the arrest, as it was stated both the mother and father will resist efforts to regain possession of the children, who are now again in charge of the home society.

DANIELS PAYS TRIBUTE TO NAVY AND ITS DEAD

Secretary Reads the Names of the Seventeen Bluejackets Killed at Vera Cruz.

Washington, April 25.—The fighting at Vera Cruz, "due to the studied insult" of Huerta, was made the subject of a brief but impressive public tribute to the navy and its dead by Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy, tonight. Speaking before the Society of Naval Engineers at the Army and Navy club, Secretary Daniels repeated his tribute to the officers and continued:

"I did not say it then, but I felt the hope in my heart that fate would not decree that these men should soon be called upon to rally with their splendid powers and training and patriotism to the call of their country in crisis, but it has been even so. The studied insult of Victoriano Huerta, who calls himself the provisional president of Mexico, in refusing to salute the American flag, has made necessary the sacrifice of human life and this is the honor roll of the first dead in the fighting at Vera Cruz."

Mr. Daniels then read the names of the seventeen bluejackets and marines killed at Vera Cruz.

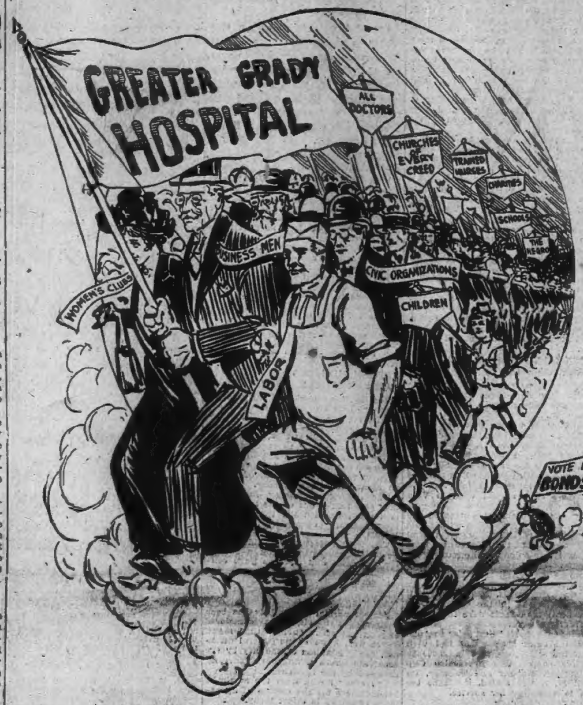
THE ATLANTA SPIRIT



SAYS LOVE LETTERS WRITTEN BY CONLEY PROVE HIM GUILTY

Detective Burns Declares They Are Conclusive Evidence That He Was Author of the Murder Notes.

"I have just come into possession of evidence that is proof conclusive that the murder notes found by Mary Phagan's body emanated from the brain of Jim Conley, and, therefore, that Jim Conley slew the girl.

"This evidence is in the form of a number of love letters that were written by Conley in jail to Anna Maud Carter, the negro woman, who was also a prisoner in the Tower, and who has made an affidavit that Conley confessed the murder to her."

This was the statement made by Detective William J. Burns last night to a reporter for The Constitution. Original copies of the letters referred to were furnished The Constitution man, but their contents were so vile and vulgar that their publication is impossible.

Frank Asks Fairness.

A statement in which he makes an appeal to public fairness, and in which he also accuses Chief of Detectives Newport A. Lanford of silly, impudent falsehoods and of uttering idiotic drivel was given out last night by Leo M. Frank.

"I submit to the people of Atlanta," a portion of his statement reads, "that Lanford's bluff has been called. He knows perfectly well that the charge of perversion against me was a cowardly lie. I now make this solemn declaration: I am not a pervert, nor an immoral man. These charges against me are a vicious mass of lies.

"I further state and send my message straight to the heart and conscience of every man and woman in Georgia, that I did not kill Mary Phagan; that I am absolutely innocent of her death, and that my execution will not avenge her death. I simply ask for a fair show for my life."

Confers With Assistants.

Burns was interviewed by The Constitution reporter last night at the offices of his Atlanta agency in the Healey building. He was busy at the time with a group of his assistants, which included Dan Lebon and Guy Biddinger.

War Slogans Will Be Heard In the Halls of Congress

GERMAN SAILORS SAVE AMERICANS

Members of Both Houses Express Dissatisfaction With the Delay in Regard to Mexico.

Galveston, Texas, April 25.—The Tampico situation continued so serious, according to a wireless message reaching here today, that two torpedo boats were yesterday sent up the Panuco river at Tampico to get Americans. Refugees arriving here from Tampico today said they were saved from rioting Mexicans early Wednesday morning by German sailors.

The story of the riot was told by Americans on the collier Cyclops, which anchored in quarantine here this afternoon.

United States Warships Withdrew.

The trouble started Tuesday night after the American warships at Tampico had left their positions near shore and steamed some miles out to sea during the afternoon. The refugees said they believed the warships withdrew because they had orders not to seize Tampico and believed their immediate presence might excite the Mexicans. After dark, bands of Mexicans began to range the streets shouting insults at Americans, who had withdrawn to the shelter of the principal hotels in Tampico, the Imperial and the Southern.

About midnight a mob, estimated at 500, began throwing stones at the Southern hotel, where there were 30 or 50 American women and a little more than 100 American men, according to the refugees' estimate. Bill Hanson, a former United States deputy marshal in south Texas, organized the American men, who had a few rifles and pistols, for resistance.

The Americans, however, had no little ammunition that they did not dare open fire, fearing the Mexicans would kill them after their ammunition was exhausted.

Saved by Germans.

The mob, emboldened, began pounding on the doors with clubs and fists. One Mexican fired through a window, but no one was wounded. Captain Von Kohler, of the German cruiser Dresden, the refugees said, sent officers ashore notifying the mob that unless they dispersed within 15 minutes he would land marines. The mob withdrew.

The German sailors then took the men from the Southern and from the imperial hotels aboard boats to ships in the harbor. The men marched out. Some gave their cases to Mexican porters. A few of the suit cases, the refugees said, were torn from the porters' hands by other Mexicans, thrown upon the ground and trampled. There was some rioting at the Imperial hotel, but not much damage was done. The Southern has been for years the headquarters for all men in the Tampico district.

Wilson Is Not Sanguine About Mediation But He Is Willing to Give Mexicans a Chance To Remain on the Earth as a Nation

Washington, April 25.—Pan-American diplomacy tonight made its first attempt to solve the Mexican crisis by peaceful negotiation.

The United States government accepted from Argentina, Brazil and Chile a formal offer to act as intermediaries in the present situation, but reservedly pointed out that an act of aggression by the military forces or hostile demonstrations toward Americans might upset hopes of immediate peace.

Coincidentally with the acceptance of the mediation offer, administration officials announced there would be no cessation of preparations by the army and navy for future emergencies and no orders would be issued to the naval forces at Vera Cruz or the ships at sea changing original plans. No further steps, however, to secure reparation for the indignities which gave rise to the present situation will be attempted while the effort is being made to bring about a settlement through diplomacy.

PLAN ELIMINATION OF GEN. HUERTA.

Although the offer made by the three South American countries did not reveal their plans, it was learned that they contemplate a broad settlement of the Mexican problem through the elimination of Huerta, upon which the United States has insisted from the beginning.

Notification of the offer of intermediation was sent not only to the diplomatic representatives of Argentina, Brazil and Chile in Mexico City, but to General Carranza and the constitutionalists in northern Mexico.

President Wilson summoned Senators Stone, Shively and Lodge of the senate foreign relations committee and Chairman Flood and Representative Cooper of the house committee on foreign affairs to discuss the new turn in events, the first ray of hope after a day of worry and anxiety over the scores of Americans held up in their flight from the Mexican capital.

The three countries made their offer through Secretary Bryan, who laid it before the president and also transmitted the latter's reply.

TEXT OF OFFER BY THREE COUNTRIES.

The text of the offer made by the three countries was:

"Mr. Secretary of State: With the purpose of subserving the interest of peace and civilization in our continent, and with the earnest desire to prevent any further bloodshed to the prejudice of the cordiality and union which have always surrounded the relations of the governments and the people of America, we, the plenipotentiaries of Brazil, Argentina and Chile, duly authorized hereto, have the honor to tender to your excellency's government our good offices for the peaceful and friendly settlement of the conflict between the United States and Mexico.

"This offer puts in due form the suggestions which we have had occasion to offer heretofore on this subject

Seven Americans Doomed By Mexic General Maas; Their Execution Ordered

New Orleans, April 25.—Wireless advices tonight from Vera Cruz state that General Maas, of the Mexican forces, has found seven American prisoners guilty of certain charges, and that he proposes to execute them.

Consul Canada, at Vera Cruz, the wireless says, has notified the state department at Washington of the reported intention of General Maas to execute certain American prisoners.

It was further stated that General Maas has about thirty-three prisoners, including fourteen women and seven or eight children. The consul sent a messenger to General Maas, appealing to him in the name of humanity to release the women and children.

The nature of the charges brought against the seven Americans was not indicated by wireless or whether they were given a trial.

AMERICANS SLAIN IN MEXICO CITY.

Vera Cruz, April 25.—El Dictamen, a Vera Cruz newspaper, today says four Americans have been killed by mobs in Mexico City. It declares it has received this information from the federal capital.

Three of the American victims were taken out of street cars and killed on the streets, while the fourth was killed in the Young Men's Christian Association building by members of the baseball team to which he belonged, according to El Dictamen, which made its reappearance today.

The information as to the massacre of Americans is not confirmed from any other source and is considered doubtful in many quarters.

SPECIAL TRAIN WITH REFUGEES.

A special train carrying refugees from the capital arrived here tonight. The refugees, who left Mexico City at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, report the continued destruction of American property there. Up to the

WORKING TO SAVE ALL FOREIGNERS IN RIVEN MEXICO

Washington, April 25.—Among the most important happenings of the day in the Mexican situation were:

Administration accepted good offices of Argentina, Brazil and Chile in Mexican situation.

American Consul Canada reported that Americans were being detained in Mexico City because it was believed there that Mexicans were restrained by Americans from leaving Vera Cruz. Immediate steps were taken through the British embassy here and the British legation in Mexico City to correct the impression prevailing in the Mexican capital.

FARMERS BREEDING VARIETY OF COTTON TO RESIST WEEVIL

As an evidence of the tremendous interest which has been aroused throughout the state in the fight on the boll weevil, there are now engaged in breeding a resistant variety of cotton, between five and six hundred Georgia farmers. According to Dr. Worsham, who has just returned from south Georgia, they are experimenting with over one hundred varieties, in an effort to secure a breed which will anticipate the boll weevil and be resistant to anthracnose and black root. The department of entomology has established over forty clubs for cotton breeding purposes in south Georgia to carry on this work. They are receiving the heartiest co-operation from the Cotton Seed Crushers' Association of Georgia, which organization is lending its every effort to improve the cotton seed.

MAN OF 60 COMMITS SUICIDE; BLOWS OFF HEAD WITH SHOTGUN

After feeding the chickens Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock, on his large farm at Clarkston, Ga., A. A. Harris, a wealthy farmer of that place, came into the house and blew off his head with a shotgun.

According to the facts brought out at the coroner's inquest later in the evening, Mr. Harris placed the muzzle of the gun in his mouth and, by means of a small stick, succeeded in pulling the trigger. No reason for Mr. Harris' deed is known, as he was in good health and had not been known to be despondent.

Mr. Harris was 60 years old, and is survived by his wife and one daughter, who is Mrs. Spivey, of Alexander, Va. The body was brought to Harry G. Poole's chapel, and the funeral arrangements will be announced later. His wife is prostrated at the tragedy and can attach no cause for her husband's act.

LOVE LETTER FAILS TO GIVE A REASON FOR GIRL'S SUICIDE

The "mysterious" love letter that pretty Miss Helene Eberhardt received Friday afternoon, and the contents of which were believed to have caused her to swallow carbolic acid Friday night at the Winnie Davis ice cream parlor, her death resulting, was found Saturday to throw no light upon the suicide. It is not now believed to have played any part in her suicide.

Why the pretty young girl chose to end her young life is still as great a mystery as ever. At the coroner's inquest, held Saturday morning, a verdict of suicide was returned.

ROBBER INVADES STORES THEN BEATS A RETREAT

A negro highwayman entered the grocery store of H. Webster, at No. 178 East Cain street, last night about 8 o'clock, and ordered him to open his cash register. Webster rushed to the rear of his store to get his pistol, telling the bold bandit that he would shoot his brains out.

The negro drew a revolver and shot once at Webster, missing his mark, and fled. He is described as being tall and dark, with a black slouch hat, and wearing overalls.

Pitiable and Shameful Conditions at Grady Hospital Are Illustrated by Inadequate Provisions for Nurses

Wholly inadequate provision is made for nurses, the working girls, at Grady hospital, but under present conditions it is impossible to do any better.

The situation is well illustrated in the comparison of the dormitories for nurses at Grady and at the municipal hospital of Louisville. In the Louisville hospital the nurses are given quarters in an attractive, modern four-story building, well equipped and up-to-date.

Sleep in Linen Closets.

The Grady hospital nurses, or all of them who can be crowded into it, are housed in an antiquated one-story building with wood floors and no excellent sanitary arrangements. Here the nurses are sleeping four in a room, with just sufficient space for their cots and trunks, and scarcely room left them in which to turn around. Two of them are sleeping in linen closets, and they almost have to get out in the hall to dress.

A young woman from middle Georgia recently came to Grady to serve as a nurse. She spent one night in the dormitory, and the next day packed her trunk and departed, saying:

Father's Barn Is Better.

"My father's barn is better than that. I am going back home."

Other Grady nurses are housed in one of the large rooms of the new building, with their cots so close together that each of them has little more room than if they had to occupy a linen closet.

Grady now has forty-five nurses and needs ninety, but if they were secured there would be no place to put them. Considering the work they have to do the Grady force is wholly inadequate. Grady is purely an emergency hospital; practically all of its patients are in bed all the time and need constant attention, day and night. Although economizing in every conceivable way, it is impossible with the present force to give the more than 300 patients all the attention they should have.

These nurses work for three years and receive only $9 a month each, from which they are compelled to pay for their uniforms, their text-books and their street clothing. The city is, therefore, under obligation to take proper care of them, not only to supply them with good food, but to give them convenient and comfortable quarters. Instead of that, the nurses are sleeping anywhere and everywhere around the buildings where it is impossible for them to get proper rest and to have the necessary conveniences that are required for the best work.

A get-together service will be held on Sunday, the 17th of May, at the First church at 3 o'clock. The evangelists engaged in the campaign will be introduced to the public. Also Dr. Bruner, the director of the meetings, will preach a short sermon. It is desired that all the pastors and evangelists and the workers in the several churches be present.

The evangelists will be at their appointed churches at 11 o'clock Sunday, May 17, and each will continue in his field with pastor just as long as the prospects will encourage it.

Every day of the week, except Saturday, there will be held at the First Baptist church, which will be headquarters during the campaign, some special services every morning. At 9:15 o'clock a personal workers' conference will be held under the direction of E. V. Lamb. Atlanta Plant Employees Share in a Pension Fund Set Aside by the Company

The employees of the Atlanta plant of the Virginia Bridge and Iron company, are the beneficiaries of a plan adopted this year by the directors of the company establishing a pension fund for the employees at all the plants of the company, the plan becoming effective January 1, 1914.

The company has set aside a substantial pension fund for its employees, this fund being invested in the stock of the company or other dividend-paying securities. The company has established rules of the time of service and of age under which their employees shall receive the pensions, which amount to 2 per cent of the average monthly pay received during the last ten years of service.

This is a plan which has been approved and found successful by many large corporations and is always a source of gratification to the employees. The pension plan of the Virginia Bridge and Iron company is similar to that of the United States Steel company except that the rate upon which the pension is based is double that of the steel corporation.

Pennsylvania's Last Wild Elk.

(From The Philadelphia Record.)

The last wild elk in Pennsylvania is supposed to have been killed in the winter of 1867 by an Indian named Jim Jacobs, from the Cattaraugus reservation. Jacobs followed the elk from Flagg swamp in Elk county to the wilds of Clinton county through a hard snowstorm, when it came to bay on a rock and the Indian shot it. It was a bull, and none of the species had been seen or heard in the region for several years before that.

WOMEN MAKE INCOMES BY PAWNING ARTICLES

London Police Court Case Calls Attention to a Queer Avocation.

London, April 25.—A police court case has called attention to the existence in London of an avocation which is not known to exist anywhere else in the world. It is that of pawnee, a profession given entirely to women who, in the poorer districts of London, undertake for a small compensation to carry the goods of their necessitous, but sensitive neighbors, to the pawnshops. Most of this work of pawning is done for women who are ashamed to be seen entering a pawnshop, but some of it is done for other women who are too busy to attend to the formality.

In certain districts these pawners are known as "runners" and they live on this work, charging from 1 to 3 cents for each journey, according to the means of their clients. In one of the meanest streets of the East End, which has a pawnshop at either end, two women ply a busy trade as pawners. One of these women is a widow, known and trusted in this work, and she has built up a big connection in the neighborhood. She uses a perambulator and is frequently seen passing along the street with a load of miscellaneous articles destined for the hungry maw of the pawnshop. Monday morning is her busy day, as hundreds of ill-paid casual laborers living in the district depend many times for their maintenance upon pawning something that day. On Saturday when the head of the family brings home his money the pawnee is called upon to redeem the goods, which she carried away the previous Monday, and usually the next Monday the first journey is repeated.

NEW HIGHWAY ASSO. ORGANIZED AT THE ASHBURN MEETING

Ashburn, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—About 200 good road enthusiasts met yesterday at Ashburn in attendance upon the meeting for the promotion of the Cordele-Pitzgerald highway, which is to be a section of the proposed Savannah to Montgomery highway. Delegates were present from Cordele, Fitzgerald, Rebecca, Abbe, Arp, Double Run, Hatley and other points.

The meeting went into permanent organization with the election of Mayor Drew W. Paul, of Fitzgerald, as president, and Louis Spencer Daniel, of Cordele, as secretary. The organization declared itself under the title of the Savannah-Montgomery Highway association.

The commissioners of Crisp, Ben Hill and Turner counties pledged themselves to get busy at once on their sections of the proposed highway. Plans are being laid by the citizens of Turner and Ashburn to connect with a splendid road from Ashburn to Fitzgerald. The secretary was instructed to immediately get in touch with the commissioners of Wilcox county and urge them to improve the roads included in the proposed highway through that county.

The meeting adjourned about 1 o'clock for a banquet to the delegates extended at the courtesy of the citizens of Ashburn. Dan C. McCrary and Adams and Mr. Shingler acted as hosts for Ashburn.

It is proposed that the Cordele-Fitzgerald highway, extending over about forty miles, will be completed within six months. Several meetings will be held later to keep the movement alive and push it to culmination.

SITTING IN A CHAIR, VETERAN DROPS DEAD

Lyerly, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—B. F. Atkins, an old confederate soldier, passed away suddenly at his home in Summerville, removing another of the few remaining old soldiers in the county. Mr. Atkins, while he had been ill for a few days, was sitting up in a chair when he was stricken. He fell over and was dead before he could be reached.

Mr. Atkins was 75 years of age. He served in the war in the early sixties in Colonel Beavers' company, Twenty-fourth Georgia volunteers, in General Wafford's brigade and General Lowe's corps.

Funeral services were conducted at the Baptist church by Rev. H. H. Cunnell, of Summerville, and the interment was in the Johnson cemetery, near Summerville. Surviving him are four sons and daughters—W. T. Atkins, of Gayleseille, Ala.; Philmore Atkins, Mrs. John Waite and Mrs. Nancy Keith, of this county.

PECAN GROWERS' ASSO. TO MEET MAY 27-28

Thomasville, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—Pecan growers in this section of the state and in Florida are looking forward to the meeting of the Georgia-Florida Pecan Growers' association in Thomasville on May 27 and 28, and which promises to be the most interesting and best attended in the history of the association.

Many subjects of great interest will come up for discussion and will be handled by those of long experience in the pecan business. The subject of greatest interest to the growers perhaps will be the market and marketing of pecans and it will be handled by Colonel C. A. Goodwin, A. J. Hill, Frank H. Lewis and others. Pecan exotts, which is a perplexing subject to the growers, will be taken up by H. C. White, H. K. Miller and W. W. Carroll, together with E. M. Ashbran; special agent of the United States department.

The executive committee of the National Nut Growers' association will be in attendance upon the meetings and will make arrangements for the coming of that association here, October 28, 29 and 30. Other prominent growers who have notified the committee that they will be in attendance are E. M. Young and C. A. Reed of Louisiana, F. H. Lewis and Theo Bechtel of Mississippi and several others.

GILBERT RESIGNS AS TRADE BOARD HEAD

Columbus, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—At a meeting of the directors of the board of trade tonight, Judge E. Price Gilbert tendered his resignation as president of the board of trade, effective as soon as his successor can be chosen.

This step was due to the fact that duties on the bench call the judge away from home a great deal, together with the fact that recent business connections call for much of his time when not engaged in judicial work.

Revival at Dawson.

Dawson, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—The revival meetings which are being conducted at the Methodist church here and which began on Wednesday evening of last week, have been growing in interest and attendance, and will be continued through next week. Rev. R. F. Morgan, pastor of the church, is being assisted by Dr. T. D. Ellis, presiding elder of the district, and Rev. J. N. Hudson, pastor of the Brownwood church.

ON the left is shown a simple little camisole, made of plaited net and filet lace. The skirt is trimmed with filet lace squares and deep lace ruffle.

The princess slip, which is cut on the new straight lines, is trimmed with a very deep lace flounce, slashed up the front and edged with lace and tiny rosebuds.

The figure in the center is wearing a crepe de chine petticoat, laced up the sides with a filmy underbodice of shadow lace.

to the secretary, to whom we renew the assurances of our highest and most distinguished consideration.

"D. DA GAMA,
"R. S. NAON,
"EDUARDO SUAREZ MUJICA."

REPLY OF WILSON TO MEDIATION OFFER.

President Wilson replied as follows:

The government of the United States is deeply sensible of the friendliness, the good feeling, and the generous concern for the peace and welfare of America manifested in the joint note just received, tendering the good offices of your governments to effect if possible a settlement of the present difficulty between the government of the United States and those who now claim to represent our sister republic of Mexico.

"Conscious of the purpose with which the proffer is made, this government does not feel at liberty to decline it.

"Its own chief interest is in the peace of America, the cordial intercourse of her republics and their people, and the happiness and prosperity which can spring only out of frank, mutual understandings and the friendship which is created by common purpose. The generous offer of your governments is therefore accepted.

"This government hopes most earnestly that you may find those who speak for the several elements of the Mexican people willing and ready to discuss terms of satisfactory and, therefore, permanent settlement.

TO CONSIDER ANY PROPOSALS.

"If you should find them willing this government will be glad to take up with you for discussion in the frankest and most conciliatory spirit any proposals that may be authoritatively formulated, and will hope that they may prove feasible and prophetic of a new day of mutual co-operation and confidence in America.

"This government feels bound in candor to say that its diplomatic relations with Mexico being for the present severed, it is not possible for it to make sure of an uninterrupted opportunity to carry out the plan of intermediation which you propose.

"It is, of course, possible that some act of aggression on the part of those who control the military forces of Mexico might oblige the United States to act to the upsetting of the hopes of immediate peace, but this does not justify us in hesitating to accept your generous suggestion. We shall hope for the best results within a brief time, enough to relieve our anxiety lest most lifconsidered hostile demonstrations should interrupt negotiation and disappoint our hopes of peace."

WILSON NOT SANGUINE OF SUCCESS OF PLAN.

From these at tonight's white house conference it was learned that while the president was not sanguine of the success of the intermediation plan, he felt it to be the duty of the American government to avail itself of the offer of the three great South American countries. It was suggested that the interim of negotiations, even though they might be unsuccessful, might serve to repress anti-American outbursts or afford an opportunity for Americans to depart from Mexico.

The president had the subject under consideration most of the day with Secretary Bryan and other members of the cabinet. The matter had been informally discussed by the three diplomats among themselves and the joint note was presented in person to Mr. Bryan early today. Late in the afternoon the president and Mr. Bryan conferred about the reply, and it was transmitted to the diplomats at the state department just as the president began his conference at the white house with the leading democratic and republican members of the congressional committee in charge of foreign affairs.

The senators and representatives declined to be quoted, but those who discussed it believed it was right for the United States to accept good offices, though not agreeing in advance to any cessation of its preparations for emergencies.

STRIKING FEATURE OF MEDIATION PLAN.

The feature of the plan which some of the president's visitors lauded was the fact that the United States was joining hands with three big nations of this hemisphere, emphasizing the American solidarity and principle of the Monroe doctrine, and at the same time showing to Central and South America as a whole the peaceful intentions of the American government.

The fact that Argentina, Brazil and Chile have stood with the United States in refusing to recognize the Huerta government is an element in the situation which rose conspicuously to the surface as discussion of the new situation turned official circles for the moment at least from thoughts of war to those of peace. It generally was realized that the task of the three conferees would be difficult, for they have been dealing with Huerta only as de facto ruler and could not become parties to steps of formal recognition any more than could the United States in its refusal to sign the Mexican protocol for the adjustment of the incidents at Tampico and the salute to the American flag.

EFFORT TO COMPOSE ENTIRE SITUATION.

The three diplomats met tonight after receiving the American government's reply to their offer. While not discussing it, it is understood they will endeavor to compose the entire Mexican situation in order to restore constitutional government in Mexico. Officials who have studied Huerta's personality say he will have no confidence to any plan which would eliminate him from the head of the Mexico City government, were skeptical of the success of the peace plan. Also those officials who know of Carranza's absolute unwillingness in any way to compromise with Huerta adopted to the undertaking as extremely difficult, should it extend beyond an adjustment of the Tampico incident and the present critical relations between the United States and the Huerta authorities.

On the other hand, the belief was expressed in diplomatic circles that Huerta might be willing to yield if convinced by the principal functions of South America of the true situation; that the possibility of foreign war and international complications generally, not only with the United States, but with South American countries, who might support the Washington government.

VERY IMPORTANT FOR THE FUTURE.

While administration officials discussed the peace offer freely, and many did not believe it would produce results, the fact that the American government had favorably received the good offices of three great powers was regarded as of great importance in the future relations of the Pan American republics to each other. Some officials expressed the view also that even though armed intervention on an extensive scale became necessary the United States would have completed its record for a settlement of the Mexican difficulty through peaceful means.

While there was much discussion in congressional circles of the necessity of a more drastic and aggressive course in dealing with Huerta, this preceded the announcement tonight of the peace offer, and was evident also that the formal discussion today that congress be on the brink of general debate on a war declaration. Whether or not the effort of the South American countries to settle the difficulties brought diplomacy would have any effect in forestalling such a debate was not known tonight.

ALL SOUTH AMERICA WORKING ON FROKLEM.

The Costa Rican envoy, Joaquin Calvo, ranking minister of the diplomatic corps, and Dr. Alberto Membreno, minister from Honduras, joined the three South American plenipotentiaries while they were conferring on their plans for mediation.

Ignacio Calderon, minister of Bolivia; Federico Alfonso Benet, minister of Peru; Eusebio Morales, minister from Panama, and Manuel de la Vega-Calderon, charge d'affaires of Cuba, joined the conference later.

The Latin-American diplomats spent an hour and a half in discussing the offer for mediation.

"No plans for the future were considered," declared Secretary Bryan upon leaving the conference. "But we have the best hope."

The three South American envoys who proposed intermediation to the United States today, before the conferees the notes that passed between them and the American government. After a general discussion of the matter it was decided nothing further could be done until a reply from Mexico City as to the attitude of General Huerta toward their proposals.

Secretaries Garrison and Daniels had a long conference with the president tonight. It was understood that the intermediation plan would have on the war department's activities. Secretary Garrison said there was no immediate prospect of important army orders being issued and that the army situation would probably remain in "status quo" until the mediation plan developed further.

Secretary Daniels said the point work of the navy would be to care for American refugees.

WORKING TO SAVE ALL FOREIGNERS

of four Americans in Mexico City were called to the attention of the Brazilian embassy here, with the request that its legation in Mexico City now looking after American interests here seek verification.

ANTI-AMERICAN RIOTS REPORTED.

Consul Canada at Vera Cruz sent reports of anti-American demonstrations and general unrest in Mexico City. He heard that 125 Americans were put off a train at Pachucah by the train crew but that another train had gone out from Mexico City to assist them in continuing their journey to Vera Cruz.

Secretary Garrison announced he had issued no orders for any further troop movements and that army officers were to use their own discretion in protecting international bridges on the border.

The German vessel Ypiranga, whose consignment of war munitions for Huerta caused the United States peremptorily to seize the Vera Cruz customs house, ordered back to Hamburg, Germany, without landing her cargo.

VESSELS SENT TO GET REFUGEES.

The navy department dispatched vessels up and down the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of Mexico to take away American consuls and refugees generally. Between 3,000 and 3,500 refugees already have been protected or are en route to the United States.

Secretary Bryan today said Charge O'Shaughnessy probably would leave for the United States on the first available ship.

Lieutenant General Nelson A. Miles, U. S. A., retired, senior officer, commanding the army in the Spanish-American war, called on Secretary Garrison and General Wood, and it is understood offered his services should war be declared.

It was announced today that the interests of the Mexican embassy here and the consulates throughout the country would be looked after by the Spanish embassy and consulates.

Mexico City officials were much exercised over the reported assassination of Americans in Mexico City. Serious eventualities there, it was pointed out, might aggravate the present situation and serve to arouse sentiment among the people that would demand more aggressive action Mexico on the part of this government. It was further emphasized, however, that mob violence could not be construed as any deliberate act of General Huerta, and that it could be claimed by his government that it was powerless to control the situation owing to the anti-American feeling aroused by the seizure of Vera Cruz.

Vera Cruz Base for Operations.

Although no new military orders were issued by the war department, plans for perfecting the operations at Vera Cruz and along the Mexican border were considered by Secretary Garrison, General Wotherspoon, chief of staff, and Major General Wood, who has been chosen to direct the military operations in co-operation with Secretary of the Navy Daniels.

After a long conference of the department officials early in the day, Secretary Garrison declared the troops en route to Vera Cruz to reinforce the naval forces there were being sent there "for duty." What form this duty would take, or how extensive or aggressive the operation of the troops would be, the secretary would not say. It was declared, however, that there had been no change in the policy of the government.

However, should war be forced upon this government, it was pointed out, the base of operations would be at Vera Cruz and the plan would be to confine the advance, if possible, to the territory controlled by Huerta, with Mexico City as the objective point of the American forces. The movement, it was generally believed, would be extensive. Although it still is the determined policy of the president to prevent war, the army and navy are prepared for any emergency, and should the word come for actions to the interior, it is said the war department is ready to send an army of 35,000 to 50,000 men, and to increase the forces to a great degree along the Mexican border.

Today there were appeals for more troops from border points, and the war department officials, while considering plans for co-operating with the militia in those states, also were working out plans for calling into the service the militia of various states, under the terms of the volunteer army bill just passed.

FEARS FOR SAFETY OF RAILWAY BRIDGES.

Officers of both the war and navy departments were concerned today over reports from Vera Cruz that a small Mexican force was prepared to blow up the railroad bridges between Vera Cruz and Mexico City. Several of these bridges could not be replaced and temporary provision for getting trains by them would be impossible. The plans of the navy and war departments for possible operations out of Vera Cruz hinge on the possession of the railroad and it was feared they would be hampered if the bridges were destroyed.

The navy department believes that an expedition out of Vera Cruz along the railroad would insure the safety of the bridges, but it is pointed out that this would be an act of war. This probably would be the first move in case war actually is declared. Meanwhile the naval forces in Vera Cruz must confine their operations to that city and its immediate environs.

In an official report from Consul Canada, at Vera Cruz, the state department was informed today that several Americans were placed under arrest in Mexico City, after being taken from the refugee train that carried Charge O'Shaughnessy and his wife to Vera Cruz. J. Starr Hunt and his family were among those arrested. Burton Hillen was taken from the train at the first station out of Mexico City.

REIGN OF TERROR IN MEXICO CITY.

Further details as to conditions in Mexico City were given Consul Canada by the refugees who have reached Vera Cruz.

They report a reign of terror in the capital and confirm the reports of anti-American outbreaks. A mob entered Porter's hotel, an American institution, insulted guests, smashed windows and emptied the hotel. The guests were taken to other hotels and the managers of the hotel went to Vera Cruz.

The American club was attacked and several stores were sacked with a loss estimated at 50,000 pesos. Consul Canada said that the refugees reported the American colony well organized for self defense. All foreigners had concentrated to withstand an attack. They are well armed, but fear an attack by overwhelming mobs. On Tuesday all business houses in the capital were closed and the streets were filled with disorderly crowds.

Refugees reported that prior to April 23 the Huerta government had been conscripting soldiers, securing 2,000 by forcible conscription in Mexico City on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. On April 23, it was stated, Mexicans began to volunteer for service.

SINISTER COST OF FIRST MOVE.

The sinister cost of the first move in the war drama was shown by official figures that seventeen Americans were killed and seventy-five were wounded in the seizure of the Mexican port. That was more than the casualties of naval engagements of the entire Spanish-American war, when sixteen Americans were killed and sixty-eight wounded. Additional messages early today reported that the wounded on the hospital ship in Vera Cruz harbor were satisfactorily responding to treatment.

The note which the state department has dispatched to General Carranza through American Consular Agent Carothers, it was made known today, reiterates the intention of the American government, merely to secure reparation from the Huerta government and not engage in hostilities against the constitutionalists.

Secretary Bryan said today that he has notified Ambassador Spring-Rice of the reported arrest of a British subject at Ortaba. He was one of twenty foreign railroad employees, nineteen of them Americans, who were reported arrested there. Mr. Bryan denied the reports that these prisoners had been executed, and stated that the Brazilian consulate had been appealed to for their release.

WAR BEING URGED BY CONGRESSMEN

son and inform him that the sentiment of the house was for war.

Want War Declared.

Developments of the day, however, interfered with this plan, and the conferences ended without definite conclusion.

Out of the many conferences the attitude of the house leaders became very clear. They said that war should be declared; that the United States should send the army into Mexico and "go through with what it has started," that in this way only can peace be established on a sound and permanent basis.

Although the news of proffered mediation put a new aspect on the situation, it was the general understanding that house leaders expect to make their representations to the president as soon as the army has been concentrated at Vera Cruz.

In the senate there was no such concerted action as was evident in the house, but there was evidence that the bond of silence which many senators have observed for months will be broken Monday, and that war talk will flourish again.

Settled With Navy.

"I wish I were as well satisfied with the strength of our land forces as Vera Cruz as I am of the naval strength there," said Representative Farr, of Pennsylvania, in a speech on the naval appropriation bill today. "Are our forces there protected against possible overwhelming numbers?"

Mr. Farr portrayed the international rivalry for South and Central American trade, declaring that it was the Monroe doctrine that brought on the Mexican complications.

"Can anyone," he asked, "foresee the trouble, turmoil and tragic history that would follow a surrender of the Monroe doctrine?"

Representative Padgett, of Tennessee, chairman of the naval affairs committee, in a tribute to naval officers, defended the navy from the attacks made upon it in the house.

MEXICANS TO UNITE, SWEARS CARRANZA

Rebel Leader Cables Madrid That Invasion by United States Will Be Fought to Last Breath.

London, April 25.—A cablegram from Venustiano Carranza, dated Chihuahua, saying he protests most energetically against American invasion of Mexico, is published by a press association in Madrid. "The Mexican people," the message adds, "will unite to fight against the invaders to the last breath. Of the 17,000 Spaniards in Mexico, many are ready to fight by the side of the Mexicans."

AMERICANS DOOMED BY HUERTA GENERAL

time of their departure no Americans had been killed.

Consul Canada is seeking a messenger to go to General Maas. The American prisoners are said to number 53. They include C. B. Herron, the secretary of the Vera Cruz-Isthmus railroad, with his wife and their children; Chief Surgeon Jocock, of the same concern, and John S. Schneider, a conductor.

GROWING WORSE FOR AMERICANS.

Vera Cruz was today isolated from direct communication with the interior, but dispatches were brought here by refugees indicates that the state of affairs is bad and rapidly growing worse so far as Americans are concerned.

The refugees arriving here bring word of increased anti-American feeling in all directions.

The American military authorities in Vera Cruz consider the situation of the American in the capital and all over the republic grave.

Consul Canada is arranging to send a demand to General Gustave Maas to guarantee the safety of the Americans imprisoned at Cordoba, who he has reason to believe are in grave peril.

BRITISH SUBJECTS ARE BEING HELD.

The British consul here has received a demand that 1,000 British subjects are among the refugees marooned at Cordoba in the state of Vera Cruz, on the railroad from Mexico City.

Mexicans desiring to reach the interior from Vera Cruz are to be exchanged for American refugees who wish to reach the coast, according to an arrangement made today.

The American embassy in Mexico City has delivered out of the 400 rifles in its possession when the order for their seizure came from General Huerta.

The fifty rifles were hidden and Nelson O'Shaughnessy took a receipt for the rifles and machine guns confiscated.

ALMOST NORMAL AT VERA CRUZ.

Almost normal tranquility has been restored in the city, but occasional sniping occurred during the night. There was, however, no general disorder, the domination of the city by the American forces having been generally accepted by the residents.

The order issued from the admiral's headquarters for the closing of all saloons remained in effect today.

The restaurants are having difficulty in furnishing the usual quantity and quality of food owing to the impossibility of obtaining supplies. Prices have, therefore, been advanced.

The American lines, some ten miles in length, now completely encircle the city. Outposts have been established covering all points from one to five miles out.

American naval officers on duty in Vera Cruz became convinced after an investigation of the sniping which occurred last night that they had to deal with a secret organization which posts snipers after dark at points where their fire is most effective.

AIRSHIP FLIES OVER VERA CRUZ.

An aeroplane from the American fleet made a flight over Vera Cruz shortly before noon today.

Cristobal Martinez, a wealthy Mexican who enjoyed a wide circle of friendship for Americans, and whose wife was an American, escaped from the city and is believed to be perhaps a mile distant. He was killed yesterday as the result of a wound received during the fighting Wednesday. Martinez was in a house from which persistent sniping operations were carried on. It was suspected he was the marksman. He was watched and warned. Finally he was detected on a balcony with his kimona covered with a newspaper. From time to time the newspaper was seen to rise simultaneously with a second. This evidently was regarded as so convincing that Martinez became a mark of the American sharpshooters.

Martinez' wife is among the American refugees aboard the steamer bound for Galveston.

400 FOREIGNERS REACH VERA CRUZ.

Washington, April 25.—Admiral Fletcher tonight reported:

"Saturday a train under flag of truce, left Vera Cruz at 8 a. m. with refugees, proceeded ten kilometers to the break in the Mexican road, meeting a train there with about 400 foreigners, five of whom were Americans, and all of whom were brought to Vera Cruz.

"I said there had been no change in the situation there and that additional conferences with the city officials this forenoon resulted in a proclamation which was issued and ordered the disarmament of all inhabitants.

U. S. CITIZENS AT HUERTA'S MERCY.

Washington, April 25.—Americans remaining in Mexico City are entirely dependent upon the Huerta government and the small guards maintained at the foreign legations for protection, it was stated at the state department today. There are between 60 and 100 Americans in the city, attached to the various foreign legations in the Mexican capital, armed with small arms and machine guns upon which the Americans might depend. These, the department said, would be effective against sporadic mob violence, but would be practically powerless against any general movement on the part of the mob attack which the Mexican government might make. It was stated that the Americans, in the event of an attack, would take refuge in other foreign legations.

The state department said that no official dispatches confirmed the report that four Americans had been killed in Mexico City, and that Consul Canada, at Vera Cruz, still in communication with the department, made no mention of such an occurrence. Consul Canada had reported nothing more serious from Mexico City than the pulling down of the Washington statue and the burning of the American flag.

The state department announced today that Americans in the vicinity of Ciudad Porfirio Diaz, opposite Eagle Pass, Texas, had been assured safe conduct by General Guajardo, chief of constitutional forces, and arrangements made for the withdrawal of such Americans as remained in the neighborhood.

The department also has been informed that a Chinese colony at Guaymas, on the west coast, is anxious to leave Mexico. Though in no danger at present, the Chinese fear developments.

MANY REFUGEES REACH EL PASO.

El Paso, Texas, April 25.—With the arrival of trains today of refugees, American men, women and children, stripped from Madero and twelve picked up by the train at Chihuahua, Americans who have been leaving the country since the Tampico incident are now practically all out of the state of Chihuahua.

The remnant in the city of Chihuahua, with the exception of a few who are expected to remain to the last, will leave tomorrow on the regular train.

At Nuco, Douglas and Nogales, on the Arizona-Mexican border, they are arriving in large numbers every day and the state of Sonora, save in isolated instances and remote from the line of warnings, is now practically denuded of foreigners.

After four years of revolution practically every American in northern Mexico is now a refugee and property worth many millions of dollars in mines, ranches, factories and other industries has been left behind.

Many of these industries have remained in operation partially all the time through every difficulty and discouragement of robbery, taxation and even personal danger to employees, but almost the last of those Americans who still are clinging to them have been driven out by the developments of the affair at Tampico.

Ninety refugees, mostly from Torreon, but including a few from Chihuahua and Parral, arrived here at noon. They reported that the exodus was general. They had not heard what the attitude of the people was. started from Durango with Consul Dunn, but thought the necessity of repairing the railroad might account for the delay.

REFUGEE VANGUARD AT GALVESTON.

Galveston, Texas, April 25.—The vanguard of several thousand refugees from Mexico, headed for Galveston, arrived here today on the United States collier Cyclops from Vera Cruz and Tampico, and the steamer Orizaba from Tampico. Each vessel carried several hundred refugees, the majority Americans. Tomorrow 1,500 more refugees are due on the steamer Esperanza, from both Vera Cruz and Tampico.

A most serious problem in receiving the rush of refugees is the quarantine regulation that they must spend six days in detention quarters because the ports from which they come are believed to harbor yellow fever. Already there are many sick. Plans have been made with Major I. L. McGlasson, state quarantine officer, bringing him to find certain individuals among the incoming mass of refugees, and to send them home without delay because mothers or other relatives are believed to be dying.

Dr. McGlasson has ordered 400 new cots installed in the hospital at the United States Immigration station at Pelican island, where the refugees will be housed during detention. Efforts to induce authorities to waive or mitigate immigration restrictions have not yet succeeded.

WIFE AND CHILD KILLED BY MEXICANS.

Tampa, Fla., April 25.—His wife and child killed by Mexican brigands who raided his ranch near Vera Cruz, Mexico, eighteen days ago, carried off all of his live stock and burned the buildings, Joseph Smith, formerly of this city, arrived last night from Havana, to which place he made his way from Vera Cruz. Smith was wounded in two places with bullets from the bandits' guns in defending his place. He says the bandits left him for dead. When he recovered consciousness he found the dead bodies of his wife and child on the ground near him.

ANXIETY EXPRESSED FOR MISSIONARIES.

New York, April 25.—Anxiety was expressed today at the headquarters of the Presbyterian board of foreign missions over the safety of several of its missionaries in Mexico, including the Rev. and Mrs. J. T. Malloy, of Coralitos, Texas.

Fears for the safety of its missionaries in Mexico were relieved this morning by a cablegram from Vera Cruz, received at headquarters of the Methodist board of foreign missions in this city. According to this, seven of the thirty missionaries have arrived in Vera Cruz, and the others are said to be in Mexico City, Puebla and Guanajuato.

Nashville, Tenn., April 25.—Three Southern Methodist missionaries who have been stationed at San Luis continue unaccounted for, they are Misses Charlotte M. Cunningham, of Lindsay, Cal.; Ellen Arter, of Zora, Mo., and Frances Moling, of McCall, Mo. Except those who reached Vera Cruz yesterday, these three young ladies are the only missionaries of this church left in Mexico. The mission board is hopeful that they foresaw the trouble and reached a place of safety.

TAMPICO REFUGEES AT PORT ARANSAS.

Port Aransas, Texas, April 25.—The yacht Wachita, arrived in port this morning with 130 refugees from Tampico. Captain Jollison said that the Mexican federals refused to allow the Wachita to sail and the British admiral had to board her and hoist a British admiral's flag. He then ordered her out to sea and they were not molested further.

Admiral Mayo requested Washington to have refugees released from quarantine at once, as there is no accommodation on board the yacht for them. The refugees are officials and employees of the Standard Petroleum company.

HONORS ARE PLANNED FOR THE DEAD HEROES

Public Funerals to Be Given Southerners Who Fell at Vera Cruz.

Mobile, Ala., April 25.—A public funeral will be accorded the body of Ensign Worth Bagley, first naval officer killed in the fighting at Vera Cruz, in accordance with a request made to the navy department from this city, where Frolichstein was born and reared. The department replied in response to inquiries made on behalf of relatives of the dead officer that all naval dead would be sent back to the United States for burial, and that Bagley's body would be sent here to Mobile.

Frolichstein was only 20 years of age, and had been in the navy two years. He enlisted in opposition to the wishes of his father, who are influential residents of Mobile.

Fried to Be Honored.

New Orleans, April 25.—Augustus, La., a small town across the river from New Orleans, is arranging a public funeral for Louis D. Fried, who Congressman Dupre yesterday stated in the house of representatives was the first southerner to shed his blood for the American flag in the fighting at Vera Cruz. Admiral Blue, chief of the bureau of navigation at Washington, has informed Mother Fried, the boy's father, that the body will be shipped home as soon as possible. Louis Fried was an ordinary seaman on the battleship Arkansas, and was killed Wednesday in the land attack on Vera Cruz.

JAPAN TO OBSERVE STRICT NEUTRALITY

Tokio, April 25.—Count Shigenobu Okuma, the Japanese premier, in a statement given the Associated Press on the Mexican situation, says:

"Japan is paying no attention to the American-Mexican question. The present situation is of no direct interest to Japan, but if a declaration of war is issued, Japan will, of course, observe strict neutrality. But Japan has made no official decision as yet, owing to the fact that there has been no declaration of war."

The cabinet discussed the Mexican situation yesterday.

The newspapers generally adopt a neutral tone in their comments on the situation. A few of the jingoist organs attack the United States and express sympathy with Mexico. Prominent persons are urging the newspapers to be careful and not to show disappointment over the outcome of the California question, saying that Japan is closely watching Japan to determine its attitude toward the United States.

VERA CRUZ MEXICANS FREE TO COME AND GO

Washington, April 25.—Secretary Daniels has instructed Admiral Badger at Vera Cruz to issue a proclamation informing all Mexicans in the vicinity that they are free to come and go as they please. This, it was hoped, would induce General Huerta to permit Americans to leave Mexico City, where they have been detained in consequence of the report that the Mexicans were not permitted to leave Vera Cruz.

Remedy Used By Three Generations

Mothers Who Took it When Children Now Giving it to Their Children.

There must be genuine merit to an article that has stood the test of two generations of users.

In field of medicine none has had greater success, nor retained that success to a greater degree, than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is now being used by three generations of people. Its use in families is constantly becoming more general. The reason, primarily, is that it has merit. It is what it represents itself to be, a laxative-tonic; it uses not make exaggerated claims nor use coarse language to set forth its virtues.

It is medicine, but so mild and gentle a medicine that thousands of mothers give it to tiny infants, and yet, in a slightly larger dose, it is equally effective for grown-ups. It is for any disorder of the stomach, liver or bowels, for constipation, no matter how chronic, for dyspepsia no matter how severe, for biliousness, sour stomach, gas on the stomach, headaches, drowsiness after eating and similar complaints arising from a clogged-up condition of the bowels. It is pleasant to the taste and does not gripe. It can be used with safety and good results by anyone at any age or in any condition of health, and that person's health will improve. Every druggist sells it and the price is only fifty cents and one dollar a bottle.

Thousands of families throughout the country are never without Syrup Pepsin in the house, among them Mrs. W. A. Taylor, 717 Locust Ave., Shelbyville, Ind., the five children, and gives Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin to all of them in infancy. Little babies required to cry half the night with cramps and pain, but since being given Syrup Pepsin the doses no longer. The use of this remedy will teach you to avoid cathartics, salts, calomel and physics generally as they are entirely too harsh. Syrup Pepsin cures gradually, but the cure is comforting and permanent.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it postpaid by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 459 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. A postal card with your name and address on it will do.

He Says That Affiliation of White and Negro Unions in South Is Blow to White Supremacy.

ASSERTS SOCIAL SYSTEM IS PUT IN JEOPARDY

In His Second Card Former Governor Brown Pays His Respects to Jerome Jones, W. C. Puckett and Others.

Former Governor Joseph M. Brown, in his second card dealing with union labor, lays particular stress on the fact that here in the south labor white unions have affiliated with negro unions and that by so doing a vital blow at white supremacy has been struck. He declares that the negro in many counties of the state of Georgia would have the white people utterly at their mercy if they were organized and backed up by leaders of the white unions.

In the course of his card, the principal part of which is produced herewith, he pays his respects to Jerome Jones, W. C. Puckett and other local labor leaders.

Ex-Governor's Card.

To the People of Georgia: It has been deemed that there was an impassable gulf between the social equality of the whites and negroes, but the members of white labor unions, in voting to affiliate with members of negro labor unions, have made the first move calculated to bridge that gulf.

In my communication, published last Sunday on the subject of labor unions, I said that in amazing as this statement might appear, I would show that labor unionism is taking steps calculated to undermine the social fabric upon which our civilization is built. This statement I will verify by reference to the voluntary acts of labor union organizations. The first of these were in the south, the last section, by the way, to which I would have looked for such acts. I quote from the press dispatches which were in various Georgia newspapers.

"White Men Strike to Get Negro's Demands.

"Mobile, Ala., September 16, 1913.—All members of the white longshoremen's union quit work today to enforce the demands of the negro locals, over 2,000 strong, for increase in pay, and have demanded that the stevedores sign the scale proposed by the negroes. The strike threatens to assume a national phase, as the men claim that vessels which the longshoremen refuse to load at Mobile will not be handled by longshoremen at other ports. Over 3,000 men are out."

(Governor Brown at this point quoted dispatches from Galveston, Texas City and other points. Continuing, he said):

Note the strikes of white labor union organizations in Mobile "to enforce the demands of the negro locals." Note the "demand" by the Galveston and Texas City white labor union men that the negroes affiliate with them. Note the Southern Labor Congress voting, with only two negative votes out of the delegates from thirteen states represented, to allow negro laboring organizations to affiliate with the organization."

Now, what does "affiliate" mean? Webster's dictionary says: "to receive into a family as a son." But what does this latest union demand it as meaning?

Labor Demanding It.

And the labor unions are not sullenly yielding it to before the coercive power of vital conditions, they are not simply consenting to it, controlled by artful reasoning, but they are "demanding it," and openly holding up the commerce of the world in their militant movement to enforce it.

To us who are uncompromisingly opposed to negro social equality there is no astonishment in noting that this was not the request of the plea of the negroes. Yet the paradox is that the initiative was taken, the demand was made by the white men of the labor unions at southern seaports, and that this equality, forced upon the negroes by the white local unions at Mobile and Galveston, was ratified with only two dissenting votes by the Southern Labor Congress, presided over by our own Atlanta Jerome Jones, and "sanctified" by our Atlanta W. C. Puckett.

Now, some may look upon these developments are "peaches," but to me they are more like a pauper fish of delicious looking black gum fruit.

But let us look at President Jerome Jones and Secretary Treasurer W. C. Puckett in another assemblage and interpret them. At the labor services in the Universalist church in Atlanta, January 25, 1914, Mr. Puckett said: "Wherever there has been the need of votes to place a measure looking towards the betterment of mankind upon the statute book, there we have found organised labor in line."

And Mr. Jerome Jones, at the same meeting, said: "It may not be too much to say we (labor union men) are in a great measure the molders of the character of the state."

Not Labor Union State.

Well, to Mr. Puckett I will say: "Whenever you labor unionists attempt, by your votes, to place negro affiliation with white men on the statute book of Georgia, we will have placed it on the membership book of labor unionism, you are going to find that Georgia is not a labor union state."

And to Jerome Jones I will remark: It is too much, entirely too much, to say that you labor unionists will succeed in molding the white men of Georgia in the labor union die, which makes the white and the negro part of the same "brotherhood" pattern. And, besides, I think you have greatly misjudged the origin of "the character of the state." The foundations of Georgia's character were laid by Oglethorpe. The structure was successively raised, strengthened and beautified by the revolutionary patriots, by preachers, school teachers, statesmen and liberty-loving mothers and by pious women and God-fearing men in log cabins, town houses and city mansions during the last six generations. And labor unionism has no monopoly of "character molding" in Georgia, even now. It claims only 12,000 members in the state. However, if the annual percentage of growth during this decade equals that during the last, we now have about 24,000 white men. The other 2,000,000 are some character molders themselves.

Unionism Is Secret.

And then think about such counties as Towns, Dawson, Heard, Twiggs, Cherokee, Echols, Stewart and the like, over a hundred in number, where labor unionism is practically unknown. Are they not in character-darkness because labor union's sun has not shed its beneficent rays there? Or is their character a monstrosity because not molded by the labor union?

Now, Jerome, behold, don't you think you and your brother labor union leaders are a little at gratuitous men to be denouncing as "infamous" my speech wherein I declared that the members of labor unions ought to be made to obey the laws exactly as all other men are required to obey them?

And do you think that many Georgians, outside of the labor unions, or any great percentage in the state, are going to agree with your nerfervid declamation of my exercising myself to the legislature in which I contended that you were mistaken in your belief that your union label carried greater authority in Georgia than does her great seal of state? Let the advice you and your 12,000 labor union affiliates that you do not give too many dares to the other 2,000,000 white men in Georgia. They might take one of them. No more would be needed.

In proof that the white labor unions are already taking steps to unionise the negroes and to stand together with them, now read the following extract from a dispatch:

"Pullman Porters' Federation Received Notice of Aid.

"Chicago, January 17, 1914.—The recently formed Federation of Pullman Porters have received a promise of assistance from the railway brotherhoods in a campaign against the present tipping system on Pullman cars."

I will remark, in passing, that no doubt the general public will be glad to render assistance in all such matter. But I am a little skeptical about the porters.

Macon's Mayoralty Race.

In the race for mayor last fall between my friend, Bridges Smith, and Wallace Miller, it was charged that Wallace Miller, in building a house, had employed non-union bricklayers. It was answered that he had employed union and non-union men. This was denied in a communication signed by A. J. Cooper, president of the bricklayers' union. In this Mr. Cooper said:

"There are two unions in Macon, No. 17, for the white bricklayers, and No. 4, for the negro bricklayers.

That the negro, when he has once tasted the fruits of labor unionism is inclined to use this strength for his racial advantage is shown in the following dispatch from Paris:

"Colour Line Drawn in Paris Labor War.

"Paris, January 24, 1914.—Fifteen thousand negroes in Paris are forming a trade union to resist the efforts of white workmen to oust their obtaining better pay."

The Federation of Labor is astute in its methods. It moves from several bases, now simultaneously, now successively, it cajoles here, coerces there. But as the needle, though it temporarily follows a magnet in any direction, always, when left free, points to the north, so the above federation is ever and everywhere inevitably moving toward one goal, and that is class dominance. And to secure that, it will break traditions, ruin trade, nullify laws and, we now see, destroy conditions which make for racial integrity.

Negro Has Gratitude.

Undeniably the negro has the merit of gratitude. The republican party, forty-six years ago, having already freed the negroes in every state, to that extent made him "just as good as the white man." From that year to this the negroes in every state vote the republican ticket almost unanimously. Their votes in the southern states brought such disaster that the white race, for its self-preservation, was forced to devise means whereby the law to suppress the negro vote.

Now, the Federation of Labor can secure the entranchisement of the negro in Tennessee we may certainly look for it to attempt the same in Georgia. Why not? The white brother in the labor union lodge votes, should the negro brother be robbed of an equal right? And, if the labor union can destroy this barrier between the negro and the ballot, see what an enormous balance of power it will vote! And the labor union white vote to the present negro manhood vote—probably 286,000—and what becomes of white supremacy?

Hours of Mischief.

We may properly inquire what effect on the negro will the labor unions' eight-hour or six-hour day have? The surplus hours with many of them would be to idle hours, in which enough mischief would be hatched to sorely vex the white race, including even members of the labor unions.

Already one of the labor organizations has invaded the rural portions of California and brought about a strike which resulted in the killing of a district attorney, sheriff and deputy sheriff, who had come together to the scene of the strike.

Suppose all the peach packers in Houston and Macon counties should strike for double wages and shorter hours, when the fruit would be shipped. The result would be the loss of the crop or of the fruit.

Suppose all the negroes in Morgan, Putnam, Greene and Newton counties should strike for double their present wages, and should be supported out of the "defense fund" of the negro and white labor unions of all the other counties from April to August inclusive. The result would be disastrous to the white people of those counties. As the case now stands, the negro, alone, even in localities where they are in the majority, realize their practical helplessness and do not organize into guilds, or associations, to resist or hold up the white people or any portion of them, but given the aid and affiliation of the militant labor unions, they will, at least measurably, so organize and act.

Negro Nationality.

Professor Albert E. Park, of the University of Chicago, in a speech before the American sociological society, recently declared that "social conditions in the United States are tending to develop in the negro a racial consciousness, and to organize a negro nationality."

Now, the facts I have herein adduced are beyond question. They cannot be dismissed with a wave of the hand or with personal sneers. It is for the labor union leaders to explain why they have found it necessary to affiliate—to place themselves in the intimate relationship of brotherhood—with the negro race; why they are seeking to organize that race and it for a hold-up of every white man and woman in Georgia; why they are planning to get its labor associations which say they will work only eight or six hours per day and demand pay for the entire day, and if needs be, enforce those demands with the club, the ax the rifle, the dynamite stick, or the torch, for all of them. I can give scores of instances, reaching from Massachusetts to California, which prove that within the past nine months the labor unions have used those very instruments of anarchy and murder in their war upon American society. Does not any shutern person know the danger in a community if thronged with idle negroes "on strike" and inspired by the lawless principles of white labor unionists, whether in this state or out of it?

No Words of Abuse.

I have no words of personal abuse of Messrs. Jones, Puckett, Hicks, Marks, Pachour, Lawyer Ledson or other labor union leaders, and I am sure that many hundreds of their fellow members, who are as white as any of us, who are as free from the false pride of race as we are, are not going to follow them in "brotherizing" the negroes; but I say these leaders have made themselves partners in a movement which, if carried to its logical conclusion, means not only serious economic embarrassment, but the entire white race, and in the country districts, absolute personal danger to many of the weaker members, but also the undermining of the very foundations of the social fabric of the south.

Fellow citizens, are you prepared to let the labor union minority of 12,000 out of 2,500,000 white men in Georgia bluff you into interruption of your commerce and mails and your power to travel; bluff you into suspension of work in your factories and in the erection of your buildings; bluff you into tolerating, even in its own manner, the social equality of the negroes? Are you prepared to allow it to exercise class preference and enforce class dominance in favor of growth in our state? Are you prepared to further allow its union label to confer greater allegiance in Georgia than does her great seal of state?

GERMAN GUNS LANDED FOR ULSTER REBELS

800,000 Rounds of Ammunition and 40,000 Rifles Furnished Anti-Home Rulers.

Belfast, Ireland, April 25.—A consignment of 40,000 rifles and 800,000 rounds of ammunition from Germany was landed at isolated points on the coast of Ulster last night and distributed by means of 300 automobiles to the various headquarters of the Ulster "volunteers."

The Ulstermen who declare themselves determined to offer armed resistance to the introduction of home rule were mobilized early last night and guarded the landing places and the roads until the distribution of the arms had been completed.

The police were powerless and all communications were interrupted.

British Cabinet Stirred.

London, April 25.—The gun-running exploit of the Ulster "volunteers" stirred the British cabinet into sudden activity today. Premier Asquith, who was on the way to his country residence for the week-end, was stopped by telegraph and returned to London immediately. On his arrival he conferred with Augustin Birrell, chief secretary for Ireland, and other colleagues in the cabinet. Major General Sir Cecil MacReady, of the war office, participated in the conference.

ATLANTAN CAPTURED BY MEXICAN FEDERALS

W. B. Wofford Has Four Sisters Here, and a Brother in Birmingham.

Among the first Americans to be captured by the Mexicans was an Atlantan.

This man is W. B. Wofford, who is now held by the Mexican federals either at Cordoba or Orizaba, and may be stood against a wall and shot to death at any moment.

Mr. Wofford has living in Atlanta four sisters, who are Misses Mary, Minnie, Jamie and Sallie Wofford, of 156 West Baker street. He also has one brother living in Birmingham.

Mr. Wofford has been for about ten or twelve years the superintendent of the plant of the Mexico Rubber company, of Rhode Island, at Orizaba, south of Mexico City, and about fifty miles from the railroad.

The last time his sisters heard from him he told them that he would be safe unless the United States intervened in Mexico. It is presumed here that when he heard of the trouble at Tampico and Vera Cruz he started for the coast and was captured on the way. Great fears are entertained for his safety.

Mr. Wofford is about 38 years old, and was born in Barton county. He moved to Atlanta while he was very young, and lived here for many years. While here he was connected with the Southern Messenger Service. He has also lived in California and Alaska.

He was captured on Friday with ten other Americans.

U. S. WILL MOBILIZE 10,000 MEN AT PENSACOLA

Pensacola, Fla., April 25.—The war department today requested from the navy department the use of about 250 acres of the naval reservation, west of the city, which was granted, and the mobilization of about ten thousand troops at that point will be commenced at an early date. All of the coast artillery regiments on the Atlantic seaboard are now under orders, it is understood, to proceed to Pensacola. They will occupy the army reservation, while the army barracks, while the naval reservation will be utilized in concentrating the volunteers should the latter be called upon for service, which is momentarily expected by army and navy officers. At Fort Barrancas it was admitted that orders had come from the war department to prepare the grounds for two brigades of regulars, and it is believed all of the coast artillery on the Atlantic coast will be mobilized there and sent as rapidly as troops to embark on transports for Mexico.

Victor Herbert Ill.

London, April 25.—The condition of Victor Herbert, the composer, who was operated on today for appendicitis, was reported to be critical tonight.

For Miss Ansley.

Athens, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—One of the season's loveliest functions was the beautiful and elaborate dinner party given by Miss Lil Hodgson Wednesday evening at her home on Cobb street.

The lovely event complimented her guest, Miss Mamie Ansley, of Atlanta.

After dinner bridge was enjoyed.

The handsomely-appointed home was exquisitely decorated with graceful ferns and pink snap dragons. The long table was very beautiful, the centerpiece was a large Marie Antoinette basket of the flowers and ferns. Unique favors marked each plate. "When Patty Went To College."

The play "When Patty Went to College," given by the high school students of the North Avenue Presbyterian school Friday evening was an event enjoyed by the friends and patrons of the school. Miss Mary Willis, a dainty and petite maid, in the character of Patty, was charming, and in the able handling of her part illustrated the well-known fact that small women often have a force and ability incommensurate with their size of stature.

Miss Willis was ably assisted by the following cast:

Priscilla Pond—Marion Stearns.
Georgia Merrigan—Anna carpenter.
Theodora Bartlett—Annie Winship Bates.
Lucile Carter—Mary Barnett.
Lady Clara Vere de Vere—Jane Bates.

Crystal Wedding.

An interesting event of April was the crystal wedding of Colonel and Mrs. L. F. McClelland. Their beautiful new home on Cleburne avenue, Inman Park, was thrown open for the first time. The entire lower floor of the spacious home was banked with palms and on the mantels and cabinets were French baskets of Killarney roses.

Colonel and Mrs. McClelland stood at one end of the long living room. Mrs. McClelland's exquisite toilet was of white lace, with this she wore a necklace of pearls and carried white roses and valley lilies.

Master Livingston McClelland and little Miss Gladys McClelland, the interesting children of Colonel and Mrs. McClelland, received the guests. Miss Lillian McClelland, the beautiful young daughter of the house, with Miss Martha Buchanan, served punch in the dining room.

The many handsome gifts that attested the popularity of the young couple, were shown in the breakfast room.

An orchestra, concealed by palms, furnished delightful music during the evening.

A delicious salad course followed by ices further carried out the color scheme of pink. A hundred guests called between 7 and 9 o'clock.

Colonel McClelland is a popular member of the Atlanta bar and a judge of the municipal court. Mrs. McClelland, as Miss Louise Goldsmith, was a popular society girl of Stone Mountain.

Mr. Richard Rogers, brother of the groom, was best man. Miss Rosina Jones played the wedding march and several beautiful selections were sung by Mr. John E. Mulvey.

Cox College Notes.

The recital on Friday evening by Misses Eugenia and Allene Chapman marked the beginning of a brilliant commencement at Cox college and conservatory. The recitals by certificate students will take place between now and commencement week, and will be interesting musical events as well as social affairs. The program by the Misses Chapman was rendered in a thoroughly artistic manner and showed the versatility of the young women. Besides being an accomplished pianist, Miss Eugenia is a gifted reader, and her selection on Friday evening was highly enjoyed. Miss Allene is a talented violinist as well as pianist, and her rendition of Saint-Saens' "Swan Song" was one of the most pleasing numbers on the program. The piano numbers were difficult and the young women showed excellent training.

The next certificate recital was given on Saturday evening by Miss Pauline Trimble and Miss Helen Martin. One of the features of the program was the duo for pianos by the two young ladies. The students were assisted in these recitals by Misses Julia and Allie Purser and Mrs. Philip Shaw.

A most interesting event of the past week was the oration delivered to the students and faculty on Saturday morning at chapel exercises by Mr. George Warren, of Birmingham college. Mr. Warren won the oratorial medal which is given every year by our president, Mr. William S. Cox, to the leading colleges for men in Alabama. His subject on Saturday morning was "Silent Influences," and the

GEORGIA FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS

ATLANTA CLUB GIVES $250 TO TALLULAH

Sum Was Raised Under Leadership of Mrs. Spencer Atkinson.

The educational committee of the Atlanta Woman's club has sent the generous check of $250 to Mrs. Lipscomb for the maintenance of our federation school at Tallulah Falls.

This gift was raised by the club under the leadership of Mrs. Spencer Atkinson, the chairman of the educational committee. Her efforts have been untiring, as chairman of that committee, her aim being to maintain the reputation of the Atlanta Woman's club in the past for generosity in all the federation work.

Tallulah Falls Letter.

Dear Club Women: Easter has come and gone and we have missed our regular cold spell. The week ago the woods were full of that sweetest little flower, trailing arbutus, and now they are beginning to be blue with violets.

Saturday we had a very delightful egg hunt. Mrs. Mae Hicks was really the moving factor in it, for she sent us six dozen eggs really dyed, and so many ways encouraged us in it. The children brought some and we gave some, so there were a good supply. The time was set for 3 o'clock, but Clarence White, C. A. and Edwin Woodall came early and had dinner with us. Most of the children came by 3 and spent the time in hide-and-seek, playing ball and other games. When Boyce and I were ready to hide the eggs we had Grady corral the "bunch," carry them into the porch and sitting room, where they were entertained by music on the graphophone, the gift of Mrs. Pope, of Athens. Everybody knows the bliss these children have had from that graphophone. When Mrs. Lipscomb wrote me that Mrs. Pope had given us one and with it over a hundred records I was not long in myself to see if it were really so; but when it came and was set up and the lovely opera music was heard no others were heard, right in our own living room, when Mama Lipscomb entered the children were my heart just nearly bursted with gratitude to Mrs. Pope. The problem of how to keep them entertained had been preying on my mind—for the problem is how to keep them at work. They want to start the graphophone as soon as they rise in the morning, and I have had to keep it going to the wee small hours, but draw the line there.

To return to the egg hunt. Boyce and I hid the eggs in the leaves and brush up on the hill behind the Side-a-Wee, and then turned the youngsters loose to hunt them. Mrs. Hicks had the largest number and was given a copy of "Nanny's Happy Childhood," as a prize. For the colors, we had made those who had found many divided with those who found few. It was a success and we all felt glad that the children enjoyed themselves.

This afternoon Grady, Carlin and Edwin went fishing, with no idea on my part that they would do more than get a walk and some fresh air, but here they came at nightfall carrying as a result of several small catfish.

"Uncle Jake" (Virgil's) the assistant breakfast cook. Tonight when I heard the following conversation between Uncle Jake and Bess:

Jake—I just can't cook fish for breakfast; it makes me sick.

Bess—Well, never mind, Jakie, I'll cook in your place. You just call me. With best wishes, Yours truly,

LOUISE HEMINGWAY.

BIENNIAL NOTES

Progress of General Federation.

Requests of clubs from Yokio, Japan, from Montreal and from France, for membership in the General federation have been answered during this past month.

News of the federation has reached many countries; much correspondence has resulted and there may be great accessions within a short time.

Countess Okuma has asked Mme. Ritaro Ichinomiya, of Tokio, to represent her at the biennial. This will doubtless be brought out, the lady is in the country at the time. We shall have present a number of delegates from Europe, from China, Hawaii, when Mrs. Henrotin had charge of the congresses.

A Gift to Women's Clubs.

Through the kindness of a lady who desires to remain anonymous, 106 copies of "Woven on Roughahara," by Mrs. Laois Anne Mead, have been purchased at 11 each and deposited with the World Peace Foundation to give to women's clubs in states which have organized their schools committee, working under the department of education. This, it will be remembered, was provided for at the last biennial, at which every state now should have its committee actively at work and preparing for celebration of the hundred years' peace.

"Seven Flowing Streams," is a fine illustrated volume of 250 pages, with a foreword by the Baroness von Suttner, who says of it: "A book of great earnestness, with knowledge, with logic, and reports with boldness, with a vast amount of much-needed information. It must be put in the hands of clubwomen into most available and helpful form for students and for lecturers and teachers, and should be found in the library of the historian, the politician and the sociologist. The women have declared it the best book adapted to the needs of club women.

Endowment Fund Report.

On the Mary T. Bryan memorial in Chicago the report of the endowment will be given, as will the request to send a statement of all money for the endowment in her hands June 1, and only money sent in by that time. The date can be given in that report. Every club should report yearly during the biennial, whether the whole amount be raised or not, and a supplementary report will be given on the closing day. Will you keep this in mind and send the entire apportionment of your state to the treasurer some time in May?

State Presidents Will Speak.

State presidents' evening, always a unique feature, will be rendered especially interesting this year by reason of the fact that Mrs. Ellen M. Henrotin, second president of the federation, will deliver an address at the close, this being in the nature of a resume of the achievement of this organization of more than a million women, whose unity is in diversity," and that whose object is to make better homes, better communities and, as a necessary result, better men and women.

Food Sanitation.

Endeavor to secure for your town—

Wrapped bread.

Inspection of dairies.

Inspection of meats.

Clean and sanitary early a "Head-em-off" Fly Campaign.

School Hygiene.

IMPORTANT REPORT FROM CONSERVATION CHAIRMAN

Valuable Suggestions to Clubs Are Made by Mrs. Searcy.

A few years ago a president of these United States used the word conservation. He spoke it so loud and with so much energy it immediately rang through our country and has been ringing ever since.

The word glowed with a new meaning, stood apart filled with new possibilities, flamed with opportunity and responsibility.

To me it is so broad in its mission it holds in its embrace home, state and the nation, having the vital interests of all.

As club women, what does it mean in our state? What can the conservation committees of the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs do?

Let us note first the dangers in our state, then the remedies.

Health is menaced wherever there is no medical inspection in the schools.

Where sanitation is neglected, whether by ignorance or indifference. Where dangerous places or occupations are not safeguarded. Where intemperance in any form is unchecked.

The home is menaced wherever there is parental neglect, vicious surroundings, improper and insufficient nourishment.

The city is menaced by greed, vice, ignorance and the need of men who will not only make the laws but enforce them.

The state is menaced by the vice element in the cities, by the prodigal use of its natural resources, by wasteful destruction of forest, stream and birds; all being necessary to the health and wealth and life of the state.

It is also menaced by careless indifference to contagious and infectious diseases, and such insects and conditions that aggravate and cause disease.

It is menaced by neglecting the many opportunities the climate, soil and mineral wealth affords us.

What the Women Can Do.

What can the women of the state do? Conserve, guard the health of our homes, our neighbors' houses; the home in the alley; on the boat.

Urge state inspection.

For compulsory education, that our state may stand from the standpoint of efficiency, which blights its fair name now. Help our legislature, our "power behind the throne" for the best men for office. Those who are fearless and conscientious that our cities, towns and our state may be clean, "healthy, wealthy and wise."

If the women of Georgia will arouse themselves and meet and study the conditions existing today and look into the future and realize the wonderful possibilities of the future; will show, by their enthusiasm and by their appreciation of a state wonderfully blessed by nature and rich in abundance, then tomorrow will dawn on a state blessed with strong competent women, who are physically fitted to be the hands to rock the cradle and to have a care for the sick.

I urge every club in the Georgia woman's federation to give conservation serious thought. Work and report to me.

ALICE W. SEARCY.

Note—Club presidents should clip this article and use the information as suggestions to the clubs for conservation work.—Editor.

ACTIVE WORK PLANNED BY CLARKSTON CLUB

Several years ago a few ladies in the town of Clarkston began to meet once a week in their various homes to spend a social hour or two. These occasions, so informal and delightful, crystallized into the Pleasant Afternoon circle. Congenial spirits, gathered thus, naturally were anxious to widen the circle of their usefulness. They sought membership in the International Sunshine society, and in a quiet way made sunshine for all within their reach.

A copy of the records for these new members were added to the circle. Life, growth and progress bring change, so the circle has developed into the Clarkston Civic club, and is now identified with the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. These ladies had often planned and talked of building a room in which to hold their meetings. About two years ago, with great enthusiasm and determination, they selected practical plans for raising the money to build. They have now the sincere satisfaction to an attractive and commodious clubhouse, centrally located in the town of Clarkston.

Last December a bazar, lasting several days, netted the handsome club $100. It is the intention of the club to make the bazar an annual event.

Since Clarkston was the home of the late Hon. Mary E. Bryan, the memorial in Chicago the report of the endowment will be given, as will the request to send a statement of all money for the endowment in her hands June 1, and only money sent in by that time. The date can be given in that report. Every club should report yearly during the biennial, whether the whole amount be raised or not, and a supplementary report will be given on the closing day. Will you keep this in mind and send the entire apportionment of your state to the treasurer some time in May?

State Presidents Will Speak.

State presidents' evening, always a unique feature, will be rendered especially interesting this year by reason of the fact that Mrs. Ellen M. Henrotin, second president of the federation, will deliver an address at the close, this being in the nature of a resume of the achievement of this organization of more than a million women, whose unity is in diversity," and that whose object is to make better homes, better communities and, as a necessary result, better men and women.

Food Sanitation.

Endeavor to secure for your town—

Wrapped bread.

Inspection of dairies.

Inspection of meats.

And inaugurate early a "Head-em-off" Fly Campaign.

School Hygiene.

Co-operate with the school authorities in working for—

Medical inspection in schools.

School nurses.

The teaching of oral and personal hygiene.

Properly cleaned and properly ventilated school rooms.

A Hen Boon.

"He used to have quite a reputation in aviation circles."

"Yes, but circles soon became tame, and not being able to loop the loop he lost prestige."

A Concession.

"Is this a first-class restaurant?" asked the haughty individual.

"Yes, sir," answered the waiter, "but we will serve you."

ALBANY WOMAN'S CLUB TO COMPLETE FUND

The Woman's club of Albany needs about $600 more to complete the fund necessary for the entertainment of the annual meeting of the State Federation of Woman's Clubs in October. The business men are co-operating with the club women to make this one of the biggest and most interesting ever held in Albany.

A committee will make a canvass for new homes in which the delegates will be entertained at the same time.

The last meeting of the Woman's club was in charge of the literary attention committee and the interesting program was enjoyed by a large and appreciative audience.

An invitation was read from the Camilla City Federation to the Second District Federation, which meets in their city on May 7.

Mrs. Baldwin was appointed delegate to the meeting. These district meetings are a source of inspiration as well as being delightful from the social standpoint.

A chairman of Junior Civics was appointed. Mrs. Bruce needs having just organized a league.

American Red Cross Memorial

There is a very general interest in the tidings that the American Red Cross is soon to be the possessor of a building in Washington city that will be the working headquarters of the society and a memorial to heroines of the civil war. Private munificence has so complemented public appropriation as to provide this splendid building. The necessary $300,000 has been raised to make the $400,000 appropriated by congress available. The magnificent work of the Red Cross has resulted in the confidence of the public being given to the organization.

The Red Cross is working all the time, constructively, preventively, giving the American people an incalculable benefit in the form of instruction and training. Most of us are familiar with the Red Cross Christmas seal, while we may not know the part it is playing in the campaign against tuberculosis. In 1907, when the American Red Cross issued its tuberculosis stamps for the first time on a national scale, $135,000 was realized from their sale.

Last year's sales, approximating 40,000,000, realised $400,000. The money derived from this source is devoted to anti-tuberculosis work along lines approved by the national organization. Together with the vital financial function of these seals is the other great service which they render.

These little educational agents carry the gospel of health and right living over a breadth of range and with a power of penetration unrivaled in effectiveness.

Nearly every state now has its active society for the study and prevention of tuberculosis, and the national association acts as a clearing house for all. The organized campaign in the United States is nine years old. In 1905, there were twenty-one local societies; in 1912, they number 1,238. Each society has a definite program of organized effort. With its chief function as an educational agent, it endeavors to secure appropriate legislation and adequate provision for the treatment of existing cases of tuberculosis.

After one year's experience, the Red Cross Town and County Nursing Service already promises wonderful development. This organization was made possible by the generosity of Mr. Jacob Schiff. Mr. Schiff prophesies the time when the visiting nurse shall be found in every community, even the most isolated within our boundaries. The Red Cross nurse now enrolled for a continuous work in time of peace finds a rapidly increasing demand for her services as a visiting nurse. Each locality presents its own problems, which call for a nurse equipped with special training or experience.

A subcommittee on education has been appointed by the committee on town and country nursing to prepare such courses of instruction as will equip nurses to meet the broad demands of public health nursing. In a small community a nurse cannot limit her aid to tuberculosis patients.

The rural nurse's services are for all the sick in their own homes. She is qualified to teach the proper care and feeding of infants, and may be helpful to prospective mothers. She visits the children in the schoolrooms and inspects eyes, throats, heads, etc., and through such inspections epidemics are often prevented. She gives talks in the schools showing the necessity of personal and domestic hygiene. As a sanitary inspector she plays an important role, teaching the principles of hygiene as applied to homes and surroundings, as well as of person.

The rural nursing service represents an effort to standardize, systematize, and, in a general way, supervise public health nursing in small communities.

The Red Cross extends a general supervision over its rural nurses. There is an enrollment of 4,200 Red Cross nurses, and over 400 were called on for service during the past year. Thirty-six state associations of nurses are organized for Red Cross work.

Miss Mabel Boardman, chairman of the committee on rural nursing, says: "The hoped-for beautiful building for the Red Cross, in Washington, will soon be a reality and I personally have faith that some day this new dream for a training school for visiting nurses will also be realized."

Mrs. Bolling Jones Writes To Delegates to Biennial

Delegates to the biennial, stop! Listen! I am having printed today for your special information the notice to delegates and alternates sent out by our general federation secretary, Mrs. Reilley. Please preserve it for future reference, as it gives all necessary biennial data. Let me stress two items in her article. The visiting card of each delegate and alternate must be attached to her credential card.

A copy of the receipt for dues of your organization to the general federation must be presented by each delegate to the credential committee, such copy to be furnished by the treasurer of your organization. Ladies, please do not neglect this. The Blackstone was appointed Georgia headquarters, but if too late to make your reservations there write to the Auditorium, the Congress, the Palmer house, Hotel Sherman, Hotel Le Salle. All of these hotels are in the state delegations assigned them. Stress you will be a delegate from Georgia to the biennial, so as to insure your being able to make your hotel reservations. Should any trouble arise write to Miss Florence Lathrop LaGrange, Ill., chairman hotels committee.

Now a word as to railroad transportation. When purchasing your summer ticket is the only rate given by all of the railroads in our southeastern division. Unless tickets are good until October 31, with stopover privileges at all points. From Atlanta the round trip ticket will be $30 with proportionate cost from other points in Georgia, which your local agent can give you. Lower berths $4.50 each way. All train service will be a la carte, so you can make cost of meals what you wish.

The Entire Cost of Trip.

Having made your hotel reservation according to price you desire, with the above information you can easily approximate the entire cost of the trip. After making a thorough and comprehensive investigation of the advantages and disadvantages of all routes, being assisted by all of our kind and courteous railroad representatives, I think the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis over the Western and Atlantic road by Chattanooga will be the most direct and satisfactory route. This route has two trains a day, one known as the "Dixie Flyer," which leaves Atlanta at 8 a. m., arriving in Chicago next morning at 8:50 o'clock, but you can remain in berth late as you desire. This is the train our Florida club sisters will use, as it comes directly from Jacksonville and touches most of our Georgia cities. The other train over the same route leaves Atlanta at 4:50 p. m. and arrives in Chicago next afternoon at 4:40 o'clock. If we have twenty delegates we will have a special Pullman or as many special cars as we will fill.

Now, sisters, I recommend either one of the above trains, but am subject to your wishes, and the exact route, time of leaving, etc., will be settled at our state executive board meeting on April 29. In the meantime I have given you all the information I have to help you solve all biennial questions. As the biennial will meet on Tuesday, June 9, I suppose our official train will leave Atlanta on Monday, June 8, arriving in Chicago in time for all delegates to attend the brilliant opening concert on Tuesday evening and be present at the open council meeting Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

Tickets Must Be Validated.

Do not forget that your tickets must be validated at Chicago to make them good for the return trip. This can be done in the foyer of the Auditorium Hotel on the afternoon of June 9 or 11. The last two days of the convention a representative of the transfer company will be on hand to give information and check baggage. I have written on Blackstone hotel to please make an effort to place all Georgia delegates and to give them the best rates they can.

Now, "get busy," every one of you, and "with a long pull, a strong pull and a pull together," let us make this biennial a record-breaker for Georgia, at least in point of attendance. Oh, sisters, let's forget to wear our Georgia colors, the banner in the southeast as regards new clubs in the General Federation, so our national chairman of membership, Mrs. Wm. A. White, of North Dakota, writes me. Ten new clubs and more than seven hundred in membership.

The Item of Dress for the Biennial.

Queries have come concerning the kind of dress one will need in Chicago in June. I quote from Miss Ina Clarke, chairman local press committee: "Chicago never promises anything as to weather. The delegates and visiting club members should have both lightweight and heavier-weight clothing. It was asked if there would be occasion for evening dress. The entire convention is to be entertained at a big reception in the Art Institute on the evening of June 11. Evening dress can be appropriately worn, yet a guest in street costume will be just as heartily welcomed. Club women are rated not by dress, but by their appreciative understanding of and co-operation with the federation work in all its plans and purposes. A past state president was once asked a question concerning dress by a member who said that she could meet the expenses of the trip to the convention if she did not have to supply a new wardrobe. Let there be no hesitation on the part of dress. Chicago bids every club woman a hearty, cordial welcome."

Georgia women have grander and nobler things to rest their reputation upon than dress—they do things!

LINCOLN HIGHWAY TREE COMMITTEE

The conservation department of the general federation has taken up the work of planting the Lincoln highway from New York to San Francisco. The department is to work through the Lincoln memorial committees, which it is planned to have consist of the chairmen of conservation of the thirteen states through which this highway passes. The chairmen of states having main roads leading direct to and connecting with the Lincoln way will be invited to co-operate with the committee by planting the main roads of their respective states.

Mrs. Simmons Crocker, chairman of conservation, is deeply interested in the work of the Lincoln way tree committee. Chicago is the chairman, Miss Myra Dock, who has accomplished such splendid forestry work in Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Philip N. Moore, from the beginning, is ardent advocate of this great work, has accepted honorary membership on the Lincoln way tree committee. Mrs. Frederick A. Dow, president of the Illinois federation, has also accepted honorary membership.

The first meeting of the committee will be called during the biennial meeting at Chicago in June. The chairmen of conservation are expected to meet with the women's clubs of their respective states to plant the trees on either side of the Lincoln way. The state federation board should choose one tree indigenous to the soil of the state and the tree planting should be as nearly uniform as possible throughout the state.

At the biennial the chairmen of conservation will earnestly espouse this great cause in the interest of our country and help build this monument as a benefit to the country and to the wisdom of the conservation department, and what is even more important, to the fact that this auto-to-ocean highway as an example to the world, a glory to the Lincoln way and a blessing to generations to come. Thus working shoulder to shoulder the labor may be lightened and the result become a magnificent achievement.—General Federation Magazine.

FINE EDUCATIONAL PROGRAM AT CHICAGO

Mrs. Grace Julian Clark, press chairman of the General Federation, in the April number of The Federation Bulletin says:

"Chicago is the place for this biennial, which is undoubtedly going to be the largest and most important gathering of women the world has ever seen, for the delegates come together every state in the nation, not at their own expense, not for any personal or partisan aim, not to promote any sect or hobby, but as wives, mothers, homemakers, citizens, to study the best development of society, materially, intellectually and morally. They care especially about education in its national and original legends told in the most attractive style. Mrs. Foster has donated $1,000 to this department in the federation above the balcony, and the formal dedication of this room at the sessions was a feature of Friday afternoon.

A meeting of the national old trails road committee was called by Mrs. Elisabeth Butler Gentry, chairman. This committee is working for the establishment by the United States congress of a national highway across the continent following the pathway of the pioneer.

Purple hues in dresses prevailed at the congress. Purple hats were also in evidence, as called by Mrs. Sheppard on every one of the officers on the reception floors which had added to the general color effect.

The report of the committee on credentials showed 1,396 chapters, of which only 1,000 delegates will be accredited at the congress, and that 2,000 delegates were entitled to vote.

INFORMATION FOR DELEGATES.

The credential committee headquarters will be in the Auditorium hotel on the 9th floor.

The credential committee will be in session at Auditorium hotel:

The visiting card of each delegate and alternate must be attached to her credential card.

A copy of the receipt for dues of your organization to the general federation must be presented by each delegate to the credential committee, such copy to be furnished by the treasurer of your organization.

All club women are requested to display upon arrival a knot of light blue ribbon as a badge of identification by the local trains committee, members of which will wear a white badge with blue letters.

All delegates, alternates and visiting club members are urged to register promptly at the registration bureau. Telegrams sent to the Auditorium theatre will be delivered promptly to those who have registered.

Mail may be addressed during the convention to the Auditorium theater, Chicago, Ill.

State delegations will be seated by local states, the chairman of each directors will draw for the several states for which they are correspondents, and the seating will then be done by a committee under the direction of the corresponding secretary.

There will be no hotel headquarters. The Auditorium theater will be headquarters.

State headquarters will be provided without charge.

The local board will render a complimentary concert to delegates, alternates and visiting club women, on Tuesday evening, June 9, 1914, at the Auditorium theater, Congress street and Michigan boulevard, at 8:15 p. m.

The opening session will occur on Wednesday morning, June 10, at 9:15. The local biennial board will tender a reception to the delegates, alternates and visiting club women on the occasion for evening dress. The entire convention is to be entertained at a big reception in the Art Institute on the evening of June 11. Evening dress can be appropriately worn, yet a guest in street costume will be just as heartily welcomed. Club women are rated not by dress, but by their appreciative understanding of and co-operation with the federation work in all its plans and purposes. The Twenty-Third Congress

The important business of the twenty-third congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution, now in session in Washington, will be given in full next week, when your new state editor, Miss Ruby Felder Ray, of Atlanta, assumes charge of this page.

Miss Ray needs no introduction to the Georgia D. A. R. She is well known to many personally and has served you faithfully and well as your state historian for the past two years.

As your state editor for two years before then, her department proved her capabilities.

Realizing that the press is a potent factor among the forces working for the good of humanity, I ask for Miss Ray the co-operation of the D. A. R.

Today you will find only the social side, the notes culled from the Washington papers, as congress is still in session.

The Constitution very kindly held the page open, but the news from the election did not reach me in time for this issue.

I thank you for your good will and co-operation while I have been acting state editor, and wish for this department of the D. A. R. many years of continued usefulness.

MRS. HOWARD M'CALL,
State Corresponding Secretary.

Sidelights on D. A. R. Congress

The following notices have been taken from the Washington papers and will be interesting reading for the Georgia Daughters:

Mrs. William Cumming Story never appeared to better advantage than she did at the opening of the congress. At the morning session Mrs. Story was richly gowned in purple. She entered the hall attended by eighty pages uniformly gowned in white, a departure from the usual custom, that added greatly to the beauty of the occasion. Whatever differences of opinion may exists among the members of the congress, it is a fact that no other president general of the D. A. R. ever received more enthusiastic applause than was given Mrs. Story at the opening session.

Mrs. Sheppard W. Foster, regent of Georgia, is one of the gifted women attending the congress. She has recently compiled a Revolutionary Reader which is already being used in Georgia schools and private schools. The distinction is that it contains a number of historical incidents and Indian legends told in the most attractive style. Mrs. Foster has donated $1,000 to the department in this federation above the balcony, and the formal dedication of this room at the sessions was a feature of Friday afternoon.

Mrs. William Lawton Peel, vice president general of Georgia, is one of the leading women at the congress. She is entertaining at dinner in independents as candidate for re-election. At the reception given by Mrs. Story Mrs. Peel was one of the receiving party, and was beautifully gowned in white satin with point lace.

The general opinion prevailing at this congress is to the effect that there has never been so many attractive and charming pages in attendance as this year. Among these, two of the most attractive are Georgia's representatives, Miss Julia Hamilton Johnson, and Miss Cena Whitehead, of Albany.

Politics, religion, woman suffrage, fatal absentees and kindred subjects are nothing in the province of discussion of the Connecticut delegation, according to a resolution adopted at their annual business meeting. The president general in reading the national board of management received copies of this resolution.

Sunday in all the Washington churches there were patriotic sermons in recognition of the congress. Hotel lobbies were bedecked with American flags, and national airs comprised the programs of the various orchestras.

Of interest to the Atlanta chapter, which is the second oldest in the organization, is the following:

Mrs. Frank A. Osborn is one of the leading women in the New York delegation. She is the regent of the Mary Desha Memorial chapter, which she organized in New York in memory of the late Miss Desha, one of the founders of the society. Mrs. Osborn also organized the Chicago chapter before she was 20 years old. It was the first chapter organized after the society was established by the original New York members over a thousand members.

The state flags, which are a new feature this year, are greatly admired. They hang all around the auditorium above the balcony, and the formal introduction of these state flag agents was a feature of Friday afternoon.

A meeting of the national old trails road committee was called by Mrs. Elisabeth Butler Gentry, chairman. This committee is working for the establishment by the United States congress of a national highway across the continent following the pathway of the pioneer.

Purple hues in dresses prevailed at the congress. Purple hats were also in evidence, as called by Mrs. Sheppard on every one of the officers on the reception floors which had added to the general color effect.

The report of the committee on credentials showed 1,396 chapters, of which only 1,000 delegates will be accredited at the congress, and that 2,000 delegates were entitled to vote.

CERTAIN SUBJECTS ARE BANNED FOR FUTURE DISCUSSION

The twenty-third congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution, up to the present writing, has been one of the most interesting ever held. An newspaper notice has been given to a letter written by a man, who entered a protest against a delegate to the Daughters of the American Revolution wearing a badge of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, side by side, with the badge of the organization Revolution, and asking that official notice of this letter be taken. It seems proper to relate the facts and conclusion on this point.

Hisses from practically every delegate present greeted this letter when read at the opening of the congress. Mrs. Livingston Rowe Schuyler, of New York, a member of the house committee of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and equally prominent, Daughters of the Confederacy, was the first recognized by the presiding officer, and in eloquent manner spoke of the principles of brotherhood and kindness. She was followed by others, who could hardly be heard above the demonstrations.

Mrs. Story severely condemned the sentiment expressed in this letter and declared it to be a man of the south. She also said "that the Daughters of the American Revolution do not recognize north, south, east or west; that only the splendid ideals of American patriotism are recognized without regard to section."

A resolution was passed eliminating this letter from the records.

The resolution was immediately offered and unanimously adopted expecting from future discussion at the congress of the society all matters pertaining to the war between the states, politics, suffrage or total abstinence.

SOCIAL SIDE OF THE 23D CONGRESS

The reception given at Memorial Continental hall by Mrs. William Cumming Story was the largest and most brilliant in the history of the organization. The hall and stage on which the receiving line stood was banked with palms and American Beauty roses. The president general, Mrs. Story, was handsomely gowned in silver and gray brocade with a bodice of embroidered chiffon and duchess lace.

She was assisted in receiving by the national officers including the vice presidents general.

Georgia was represented by her vice president general, Mrs. William Lawton Peel.

The reception planned in honor of the Daughters of the American Revolution by Frederick A. Dow, was held at the white house for Tuesday afternoon was changed until Wednesday and then when the Mexican situation became so grave was abandoned altogether. Mrs. Wilson, receiving this notice in a letter from President Wilson, asked to thank Mrs. Dow and set regards and sincere best wishes for the success of this meeting of patriotic women.

On Thursday afternoon, Mrs. Champ Clark, wife of the speaker of the house of representatives, was hostess at an informal reception at her home on Massachusetts avenue in compliment to Mrs. William Cumming Story and the speaker's cousin, Miss Sarah Doughty, who is a delegate to the Continental Congress.

The reception proved to be the largest social event of the congress, as

DAUGHTERS OFFER SERVICES TO U. S. IN MEXICAN WAR

At the morning session on Tuesday, before being aware that actual warfare between the United States and Mexico was being waged, the Daughters of the American Revolution passed a resolution offering their services to the country in case eventualities in Mexico should require field and hospital nurses.

This resolution was passed unanimously and was immediately transmitted to Secretary of War Garrison. This will meet most, coming from such a body of well organized women.

The Mexican crisis has pervaded the congress, the acuteness of the Mexican situation was apparent in the many changes in prominent officials who were to appear at the opening session.

Vice President Marshall and Senator Works, of California, who were to give welcome, were both absent.

Speakers made passing reference to the country's grave situation

LUCILLE LOVE. The Girl of Mystery

A Soul Thrilling Story of Love, Devotion, Danger and Intrigue

Copyright, 1914. All moving picture rights reserved by the Universal Film Manufacturing company. This instalment of the story will be shown in moving pictures tomorrow at the Savoy and Alamo No. 1; later at the Hoppin and American.

SYNOPSIS OF THE FOREGOING CHAPTERS.

While students together at West Point, and in love with the same girl, Sumpter Love is dishonorably discharged. Love wins the girl. The enmity thus begun finds outlet in later years at Manila, when a butler-thief in the employ of Loubeque, now an international spy, steals valuable papers from the Government safe of General Love. Loubeque sails with them on the steamship Empress and General Love assumes Lieut. Gibson, his aide and the sweetheart of his daughter Lucille, of the crime. Loubeque sends a wireless message allowingly insinuating that General Love had sold the papers to a foreign power. To save the honor of the man she loved and to erase the stigma from her father's name, Lucille prevails upon Harley, a Government aviator, to take her out to the ship, in his monoplane. To foil Lucille, Loubeque destroys the wireless apparatus on the Empress and is hurt in the resulting explosion. In her search for the papers, Lucille becomes his nurse, and when the ship takes fire, rescues them. The vessel is burned to the water's edge and Lucille drifts to a strange island on the eve of a crushed lifeboat.

CHAPTER IX.

A Castaway.

CONSCIOUSNESS lapsed slightly and was followed by a state of dull apathy. Some instinct held Lucille's arms upon the oar that had floated to her when the life boat launched itself against the side of the burning Empress. First, the immensity, the ridiculousness of expecting to reach safety from the mighty ocean impressed her. Only the natural fight inherent in human flesh inclined her to continue the effort to float.

Mountains of waves sifted along her path, bearing her gently to their crests and passing her through the trough of sea to the next wave in line. From watching the myriad stars blazing in the heavens she became interested in trifles, never thinking of the precious papers she had rescued at so great effort from the international spy, forgetting even the ones at Manila on whose behalf she had taken such risks to get them back. Came a long interval of restfulness where everything grew dim and indistinct and the water in which she was being tossed about seemed like a fostering mother upon which, in perfect confidence, she could rest her weary head and sleep. The lap-lap of the waves wove itself into a lullaby and slowly her eyes closed and, dreaming, she slept.

Little needles continually prickling at her flesh brought her from slumber so abruptly she straightened bolt upright, staring about her incredulously. Before her stretched the giant ocean, peaceful now save for playful white caps that rushed ferociously at her from far down a long sand bar then wore themselves out by the time they touched the soles of her feet. Every nerve and sinew of her body ached terribly, cramping her so she could barely look about the long expanse of beach that seemed to stretch interminably in every direction. Behind her she finally managed to clear her eyes enough to make out a luxurious vegetation, obviously tropical. The sun, a copper cauldron glared upon her, almost burning her flesh with the ferocity with which he applied his heat in an effort to loosen the joints stiffened by so long cold and exposure.

Safety meant little to her. Her brain was in such a state that the providential escape seemed natural. That she was alone upon an island in the Pacific seemed simple enough. Nothing mattered. Again she closed her eyes and gave herself over to slumber which lasted until nightfall.

Securely hidden by the thick vegetation, she settled down, taking a firm grip on herself and trying to reassemble the things that had happened to her in such fashion that she might know what was best to be done. And always primarily did her thoughts revert to the papers concealed in the lining of her dress, the papers and the man who sought them.

Even here she shuddered at recollecting the features of the man, so expressive of his character. The premonition came to her that nothing could thwart him; that his will resolve was so great as even to force the elements to battle with him. And yet—what was it all about? Why should this man so desire to ruin the ones she held dear?

The papers—Undoubtedly there was something in them which would afford the clue. She stared at the oiled belt thoughtfully, fighting down the instinct which repelled her touching the secrets of another. There was something in the very air which the oiled belt had been wrapped about its contents that told her how imperative it was she should have no scruples in fighting one so versed in warfare as Hugo Loubeque.

The bulky envelope from Washington to her father which the butler had stolen from the safe was still unbroken. She placed the packet to one side, knowing that if the spy did not care to investigate the contents there could be nothing in them which would matter. The diary she investigated next, reading there until the shafts of moonlight which penetrated the thick foliage wandered away, leaving but a pale, silver shadow.

But Lucille paid no attention to the lack of light, she was not even thinking of her predicament. Thoughtfully she sat there, the diary in her lap, the picture of her mother in her hands. She knew the life of Hugo Loubeque now, knew the dominating hatred of his life, the love of his life, the gigantic efforts of the man, involving nations and humanity, the thousand tentacles of the man, stretching to every quarter of the globe.

But as she looked at the faded picture the spy had cherished through all the years of pity filmed her eyes, pity for the man who could allow love to associate itself inseparably with hatred.

The unselfish love for a wrongly accused man was the motive that impelled her every move, had led her to take such great risks, would lead her to take any that might be even greater. Hate, misshapen offspring of a wrongly founded love, dominated the international spy. She realized now that Destiny itself was fighting in her behalf; that, giant intellect though he was, Hugo Loubeque had more than herself to contend with because of the unnatural baseness of his motives.

But it was a fight, would be a fight to the bitter end. She must find out where she was, what nature of place this might be, what chance for rescue there was. She must get back to Manila, for the papers were no better than rags here. She must start immediately.

A long shadow suddenly reached out before her, a very different shadow from the grotesque ones thrown by the stately palms, the gnarled and twisted Jumbo trees. First she could not make out what it was, though a premonition of disaster chilled her. Motionless she stood and stared at it. From another direction came the crackling report of a broken twig. In every direction, as though the sound had been a signal, shadows filtered. The sounds were louder now, more frequent. Then, with a rush, Lucille saw the shadows resolve themselves into figures of men.

She had but time to make out their brown color, fear blinding her. She closed her eyes fearfully, knowing she was surrounded. A hand touched her forearm timidly. Something in the touch was reassuring. She looked about upon a solid ring of scantily clad natives who stared at her in bewildered amazement. Again the hand touched her arm.

The native stood beside her, evidently much bolder than his fellows. Lucille could scarcely repress a smile as she caught the incredulity on the native's face as he looked at his hand, evidently expecting the white of her flesh to rub off.

Already her brain was working at lightning speed. The reason for the fear and astonishment that possessed her captors was obvious. They had never before seen a white woman. And the girl was thinking how she might use this thing which must appear a miracle to them.

CHAPTER X.

A Chief's Daughter.

SHE was white.

Lucille found time even in her strange predicament to wonder at the way the most natural things could turn itself to her advantage. She could feel the hesitation of the natives who had come upon her so unexpectedly, knew that they were prepared to regard this phenomenon from any angle, that they might fear her, reverence her, hate her, love her. So she stayed close to the chief; the one who had touched her arm.

An old man he was from the heavy wrinkles that criss-crossed his face, but his naked torso was magnificently muscular, his carriage that of a man to whom obedience always comes. There was something very splendid about his steady, black eyes—narrowed a bit as though to hint of Mongolian origin—about the thin nostrilled nose, the full lips.

All through the night the march continued. Lucille shuddered as, from the black fastnesses of the semi-jungle that hedged them in the glow of yellow eyes gleamed. Fire balls they might have been, so steady and silent were the animals who watched the procession, but the pat of stealthy feet, the crunch of broken twigs, an occasional growl or cry told her what they were.

Her feeling that this forced march might have some other object than merely getting back to a village was made doubly strong by noticing the masterful manner in which the leader combated any desire for rest on the part of the natives. He himself led the way, finding hidden paths as though by intuition, forcing his way through creepers that grew so thickly at times they seemed to form a solid wall.

It was well into the day when their party was met by a native coming from the opposite direction. Lucille was attracted by the rapid conversation he held with the Chief, noticing the perturbation which showed so strongly on the old man's face when he turned away and redoubled his pace. It was well nigh impossible for her to keep up now. Worn out by exposure and this tramp through the jungle there seemed times when she could not drag herself along, when the tired muscles kinked and refused to work.

Then quite unexpectedly, through a wall of vegetation, the party emerged into a great clearing upon which the sun beat fiercely. A few old men squatted before the openings to the hundred or more huts that filled the open space, set down here in the midst of the jungle. Many children played about, dressed only in the garments of their birth. Here and there dogs prowled, silently nosing into the huts, slinking furtively about the edge of the clearing. The leader of the party lifted his hand in signal for a halt, his splendid body flexed.

From a hut, many times the size of any other and set at the extreme head of the clearing facing down the double row as would an officer scan his files of men, came a droning sound, the low pitched wailing of many women's voices, never varying in its dreary monotone. A terrible anxiety for her dress, the papers and the man who sought them.

Even here she shuddered at recollecting the features of the man, so expressive of his character. The premonition came to her that nothing could thwart him; that his will resolve was so great as even to force the elements to battle with him. And yet—what was it all about? Why should this man so desire to ruin the ones she held dear?

The papers—Undoubtedly there was something in them which would afford the clue. She stared at the oiled belt thoughtfully, fighting down the instinct which repelled her touching the secrets of another. There was something in the very air which the oiled belt had been wrapped about its contents that told her how imperative it was she should have no scruples in fighting one so versed in warfare as Hugo Loubeque.

The bulky envelope from Washington to her father which the butler had stolen from the safe was still unbroken. She placed the packet to one side, knowing that if the spy did not care to investigate the contents there could be nothing in them which would matter. The diary she investigated next, reading there until the shafts of moonlight which penetrated the thick foliage wandered away, leaving but a pale, silver shadow.

But Lucille paid no attention to the lack of light, she was not even thinking of her predicament. Thoughtfully she sat there, the diary in her lap, the picture of her mother in her hands. She knew the life of Hugo Loubeque now, knew the dominating hatred of his life, the love of his life, the gigantic efforts of the man, involving nations and humanity, the thousand tentacles of the man, stretching to every quarter of the globe.

But as she looked at the faded picture the spy had cherished through all the years of pity filmed her eyes, pity for the man who could allow love to associate itself inseparably with hatred.

The unselfish love for a wrongly accused man was the motive that impelled her every move, had led her to take such great risks, would lead her to take any that might be even greater. Hate, misshapen offspring of a wrongly founded love, dominated the international spy. She realized now that Destiny itself was fighting in her behalf; that, giant intellect though he was, Hugo Loubeque had more than herself to contend with because of the unnatural baseness of his motives.

But it was a fight, would be a fight to the bitter end. She must find out where she was, what nature of place this might be, what chance for rescue there was. She must get back to Manila, for the papers were no better than rags here. She must start immediately.

A long shadow suddenly reached out before her, a very different shadow from the grotesque ones thrown by the stately palms, the gnarled and twisted Jumbo trees. First she could not make out what it was, though a premonition of disaster chilled her. Motionless she stood and stared at it. From another direction came the crackling report of a broken twig. In every direction, as though the sound had been a signal, shadows filtered. The sounds were louder now, more frequent. Then, with a rush, Lucille saw the shadows resolve themselves into figures of men.

She had but time to make out their brown color, fear blinding her. She closed her eyes fearfully, knowing she was surrounded. A hand touched her forearm timidly. Something in the touch was reassuring. She looked about upon a solid ring of scantily clad natives who stared at her in bewildered amazement. Again the hand touched her arm.

The native stood beside her, evidently much bolder than his fellows. Lucille could scarcely repress a smile as she caught the incredulity on the native's face as he looked at his hand, evidently expecting the white of her flesh to rub off.

Already her brain was working at lightning speed. The reason for the fear and astonishment that possessed her captors was obvious. They had never before seen a white woman. And the girl was thinking how she might use this thing which must appear a miracle to them.

CHAPTER X.

A Chief's Daughter.

SHE was white.

Lucille found time even in her strange predicament to wonder at the way the most natural things could turn itself to her advantage. She could feel the hesitation of the natives who had come upon her so unexpectedly, knew that they were prepared to regard this phenomenon from any angle, that they might fear her, reverence her, hate her, love her. So she stayed close to the chief; the one who had touched her arm.

An old man he was from the heavy wrinkles that criss-crossed his face, but his naked torso was magnificently muscular, his carriage that of a man to whom obedience always comes. There was something very splendid about his steady, black eyes—narrowed a bit as though to hint of Mongolian origin—about the thin nostrilled nose, the full lips.

All through the night the march continued. Lucille shuddered as, from the black fastnesses of the semi-jungle that hedged them in the glow of yellow eyes gleamed. Fire balls they might have been, so steady and silent were the animals who watched the procession, but the pat of stealthy feet, the crunch of broken twigs, an occasional growl or cry told her what they were.

Her feeling that this forced march might have some other object than merely getting back to a village was made doubly strong by noticing the masterful manner in which the leader combated any desire for rest on the part of the natives. He himself led the way, finding hidden paths as though by intuition, forcing his way through creepers that grew so thickly at times they seemed to form a solid wall.

It was well into the day when their party was met by a native coming from the opposite direction. Lucille was attracted by the rapid conversation he held with the Chief, noticing the perturbation which showed so strongly on the old man's face when he turned away and redoubled his pace. It was well nigh impossible for her to keep up now. Worn out by exposure and this tramp through the jungle there seemed times when she could not drag herself along, when the tired muscles kinked and refused to work.

Then quite unexpectedly, through a wall of vegetation, the party emerged into a great clearing upon which the sun beat fiercely. A few old men squatted before the openings to the hundred or more huts that filled the open space, set down here in the midst of the jungle. Many children played about, dressed only in the garments of their birth. Here and there dogs prowled, silently nosing into the huts, slinking furtively about the edge of the clearing. The leader of the party lifted his hand in signal for a halt, his splendid body flexed.

From a hut, many times the size of any other and set at the extreme head of the clearing facing down the double row as would an officer scan his files of men, came a droning sound, the low pitched wailing of many women's voices, never varying in its dreary monotone. A terrible anxiety for her dress, the papers and the man who sought them.

A swift gleam crossed his stern face. At a few sharp words the party disbanded, disappearing in the huts. At his nod she followed his swift stride toward the great hut from which the sound came.

Even as she followed the man, she marvelled at the implicit confidence that seemed to have become a part of her since trusting herself to his escort. In one of her own races she would have known it for instinctive liking. The interior of the hut was crowded with women, the atmosphere so close as to fairly drive her back toward the tiny door through which she had entered. Above the squatting, wailing women towered the splendid figure of the old chief. There was a slight droop to his shoulders now, a failing away about the muscles of his face. And to the ears of the girl, dominating the dirge-like wail, came a simple note that told her the story in its entirety, even as it struck to her woman's heart, arousing every atom of tenderness there—the crying out of a child.

Impulsively she brushed through the women, stooping over the pallet of rushes where the patient lay. Even with the emaciation which her illness had caused, despite the blaze of delirium in the widened eyes, the black splotches of fever in the cheeks, Lucille would have known the girl for the daughter of the old man. As she turned to look at the Chief the pity of ignorance rushed upon her, and she rose and grasped both his hands in her own, unconscious of the horrified looks bestowed upon her by the women.

By signs she made it clear to the old man that the hut must be cleared before anything could be done to assist his daughter. It was difficult, communicating with him, but her obvious sympathy and understanding seemed to make the task easier. Gradually it dawned upon her that this was a custom of his people which required vast faith to go against. She watched him eagerly, her very heart crying out for the sick child whose last chance for recovery was being stolen by this crowd of women, using up all the oxygen in the room when it was the most necessary thing for her recovery.

The Chief made his decision quickly. With a little cry of delight, quickly suppressed, she realized that the mystery of her coloring had made such an impression upon him that he was willing to follow her instructions to the letter. With the same dignity he had used in forcing his men to double their pace through the jungle he observed the women's protests and drove them from the hut, leaving the opening wide.

Lucille opened her mouth, laving her throat with the intoxicating air that drove out the odors the conception had left behind. Then she turned her attention to the child.

There is a certain quality in the maternal woman which gives her intuition when it comes to the nursing of an invalid or the caring for a baby, a quality which makes a cry coherent, a moan intelligible. Lucille, restricted though her experience had been, had sensed the proper thing to do for the girl, giving her lunge a chance to feed the body properly.

That it was a fever was all she knew, the type was beyond her. She knew that some custom of the people had been violated by sending forth the women. She could feel it in the attitude of the natives when she emerged at short intervals to take a bit of exercise. But she was playing a lone game and the stakes were huge.

Day and night she ministered to the girl, now encouraged at a diminution of the fever, now downcast at discouraging symptoms. All she had to work with were the natural weapons which Nature leaves to the hands of the sensible nurse. Where the patient had been fed meat, Lucille made a broth; where witch doctors had stimulated a weakened heart and system, she soothed. And so much depended upon the little brown girl. If she recovered then Lucille knew she would have made no mean friend in the grim chief who called daily to watch his daughter for a few moments then, without a word, would disappear. And friends meant so much to her now. It was such a task she had laid out for herself, the way was so stormy and beset with thorns. But she could not lose. She must get back to Manila and clear her sweetheart of the charge against him.

At times the task seemed impossible and there was no language for her misery save a moan. Then she would take a fresh brace as the picture of Lieutenant Gibson rose before her, stern, masterful, every inch a man even while her father was accusing him of betraying his country for money.

It was on the eighth day she was awakened from one of the naps she had accustomed herself to taking by the girl's turning on her pallet and regarding her out of eyes that held the light of sanity in lieu of the delirium it had seemed so impossible to combat. Lucille rose quickly, her hand feeling the steadying pulse, smoothing the forehead that had been so feverish before.

Slowly, very slowly, under the abrupt relaxation of the strain under which she had been, her knees sank from under her and beside the bed of rushes she knelt, shaking with incoherent sobs, filled with a joy so great the tears refused to flow.

How long she knelt she did not know, was never to know. But merciful slumber came to her and she was awakened by the tender touch of a calloused hand upon her shoulder. Startled she sprang to her feet, then laughed at her alarm as she looked at the Chief and saw from the expression upon his face that he knew his child was out of danger.

She turned to the patient, still sleeping. Yes, no one could fail to see that the crisis was reached and passed. The girl's emaciated bosom was rising and falling evenly, the breath coming with none of the effort that had racked the fragile frame before. And the black fever spots upon the brown cheeks had disappeared.

From outside came a sudden clash of sound, a rippling, drumming sound that diminished to almost an echo only to rise slowly, gradually into a perfect thunderous wave. There was something musically triumphant about it which seemed to her to glow with the majestic tones of a huge organ. Fascinated Lucille listened to the barbaric music, suddenly becoming aware that the old Chief was standing motionless beside the hut opening, his face emotionless save for the gleam of gratitude that suffused his eyes.

Slowly his right hand reached out, his head slowly bending in obedience. Lucille wonderingly placed her fingers upon the forearm of the man and emerged into the open, her eyes rounded in wonderment at the sight that greeted her.

Gorgeously caparisoned in scarlet and gold, a wonderful throne of the same colors upon his back, a bronzed native astride his head, knelt a milk white elephant almost at her feet. Before the huts stood the natives, their wide shields held across the forearms of their right hands while they drummed out the chorus she had observed before by clapping their spears against the tightly drawn surfaces. The old Chief stood motionless beside the elephant and she realized slowly that he meant for her to take the seat.

She shook her head in negation. She was too utterly tired and worn out to do anything. Before she had time to regret her decision, the old man stepped toward her, unwinding a curiously shaped amulet from about his neck. Came a crowding forward of the natives from every direction, the men in the forefront, the women and children in the rear. Something in the silence that succeeded the drumming noise, in the sober faces of the orderly throng surrounding her made her turn toward the chief rather expectantly.

Gravely as any king bestowing an order upon a loyal subject, the old man lifted the amulet by its two golden threads and dropped it about her neck, an amulet of a curious milky stone carved into the semblance of an elephant and glittering with tiny precious stones, so set as to spell out certain native words.

Immediately the ceremony had been performed, every native lifted his shield and brought his spear against it with all his strength. The sound grew to such a volume she thought it would deafen her. Bewildered, she looked about, smiling at what she knew to be a sign of these people's belief in her. And then the smile died upon her lips, faded from her eyes and was succeeded by one of fear.

For, behind the throng, arms folded, his saturnine face impassive, cold, determined stood Hugo Loubeque, his eyes fastened undeviatingly upon her.

CHAPTER XI.

The Power of an Amulet.

WHAT followed the ceremonial attendant upon the presentation of the White Elephant to Lucille was all a blur to her. She remembered being taken to some temple, the triumphant return in the chair upon the back of the sacred beast but always before her eyes had loomed the figure of Hugo Loubeque. This afternoon, when she had come back to the hut which the Chief assigned to her, she felt a certain relief at knowing the man was about.

Vaguely she had dreaded his coming before but always had she thought it inevitable that he would come upon her. She knew him too well to imagine he could have survived the ship's fire and still lose track of the papers for which he had fought so hard. And the diary with his life's story, his mapped out scheme of revenge; the picture of the woman he loved which he had kept so many years—— No, she had always felt that the man was far from defeated even though the belt had been thrown away long since and the contents transferred to a bag she carried next her heart.

Times there were when she would have fled from the place in a sudden fit of hysteria induced by thinking of the urgency for the information in her possession being in Manila. Cooler thought always made her grapple with the impulse for haste and place herself in the hands of this superior power which had looked over her through such startling happenings.

If the international spy was at work—and at work she knew he assuredly was, now he had located her—why did he not strike? That was the latent part of her stay in the village—the constant strain of waiting for the inevitable.

The thought grew to be an obsession. She longed for something to do, something to occupy her mind that she might get the nervous terror out of her waking moments. She tried to think of the place in which she lived, what it was, who these people were, whether there might not be some chance of getting back to civilization, but Hugo Loubeque was too dominant a figure in the working out of her ambition to allow of anything else coming in.

It was the fourth day that her attention was irresistibly drawn to a native whose facial traits differed so materially from that of any of the men she had seen about the village that she studied him more closely. Everything and everybody drew her scrutiny now, in every nook and corner she looked, suspecting something, she had no idea what, to happen that would be engineered by Loubeque. She had found that simply by constantly in her effort to study out the possible limitations of the man that it had become an obsession with her.

The man was seated, cross legged, upon a fallen log just a little ways beyond the village. His eyes were narrow slits that emitted sharp slants of evil light when they fell upon her, a light that frightened her and made her turn hurriedly back toward her hut.

She had not made over twenty steps before an unseen menace cast its shadow upon her heart. Though she could hear nothing, she knew unconsciously that the man was following her at such a pace he was obviously doing so for a purpose. Lucille knew by running that the man was confident. By an effort she conquered the impulse, trying to bring her pace to a slow walk. Then she realized the futility of such a method.

Slowly, relentlessly, the pat pat of the native's feet came to her. She halted and whirled upon him. The slits of eyes met her own and she read there the light of an unconquerable purpose. Her lips opened but no words would come. She had not especially feared the Chief of the village and his followers, but the man was different, different in every way.

Cautiously, stealthily he advanced upon her. There was a deathlike coldness about him that reminded her of the one she knew to be his master, the man under whose orders he was doing this thing. Her breath was coming fast but she knew she could do nothing unless the Providence that had looked over her up to now should intervene once more. She could feel the glitter of his eyes, could read the meaning in the terrible hands which were outstretched toward her.

She felt a curious constriction at her throat from the terror inspired within her by the appalling figure of the man. Her fingers clutched there for relief, pressing, pressing at the skin to loosen it sufficiently for the breath to come. And always the terrible figure of the native moved toward her, hands outstretched, the narrow slits of eyes growing more narrow until they were but a glitter from out the pasty brown of the lids.

There seemed nothing to do, no way out of his clutches. She tried to shriek but felt the sounds strangling in her throat. Her fingers encountered the slender golden threads that wound the amulet about her neck. She ripped at them as though they had caused her fright. And then everything became more distinct, more astonishing.

For, with a little gasp of fright, the menacing figure dropped flat upon the ground, dropped before her. For a second she thought the man was dead, then her eyes widened with astonishment as slowly, with face turned always down, the man crawled in a wriggling motion suggestive of a snake, back, back, back, until his body was lost in the tangle of shrubbery where she had come across him first, only a swaying of the leaves there as occasional crackling of twigs betraying the fact that such a one had ever existed.

Lucille stared straight ahead of her. The terror that had fallen upon her was too great for immediate relief. Again her fingers sought the tortured throat, falling upon the amulet which the grateful chief had presented to her and immediately she realized what had saved her from the man.

She took the amulet from her neck and looked at it more thoughtfully than she had done before. Then she went swiftly back to her hut in the village. But her mind was revolving the incongruity of the ways in which Fate assisted her in her purpose, a contrast extending from the aeroplane of Harley to the mystic effigy of the sacred white elephant.

Incongruous truly, yet both were equally effective in blocking the fertile brain of a man who, with far less effort, had brought nations to war, had changed the map of continents.

CHAPTER XII.

Loubeque Narrows Down His Search.

PERHAPS it was the shock from her encounter with the strange native that made her slumber light, for the sound was very faint that wakened Lucille from the doze into which she finally had fallen. Like the rippling of a breeze through the leaves it was and yet something ominous about it brought her bolt upright in bed, her every faculty alert.

Like no other sound she had ever heard it grew more and more distinct as wakefulness claimed her fully. Gradually she made out that it came from immediately over her head. Her ears and eyes worked together and she followed the motion of sound until it ceased and was followed by another and more ominous one, such a sound as a rat makes gnawing at a hole. And yet it was not at all like such a sound.

The noise ceased abruptly. Startled at the suddenness of it she looked at the spot from which the last noise had come, then, with a shriek of horror, her eyes followed the stealthy, graceful reptile that seemed to grow from out the very root of the thatched hut, its spineless body wavering longer and longer before her horror-stricken eyes, its flat head moving in all directions, two little threads continually flickering from out its hideous mouth.

With a wild scream of terror she darted through the hut opening, heaving a sigh of relief at feeling the warm, clean air of the open window upon her cheek after the fetid atmosphere which the snake-thrower had seemed to bring with him. After a long effort she had conquered the chill of icy terror which the serpent had thrown upon her. Her heart was very heavy for it was the first time anything had happened to her which seemed apart from human agency.

There at the outskirts of the village she fought against her terror, fought down the horror of the apparition which had wakened her from slumber and driven her forth into the night. And then she steeled herself against the fear, the cowardice. About her neck was the little bag with the papers and diary of Hugo Loubeque, the papers that meant so much to the man to whom she was engaged.

Fighting against herself, against everything feminine in her nature, she forced herself back to the hut. And then a great feeling of relief engulfed her. For the snake was gone. Listen closely as she would, no sound came to her ears save the myriad noises of the surrounding country, the jungle. But the hut was in wild disorder. Everything inside it had been torn apart. Not an inch of its surface but had been covered carefully in the disruption. No snake had brought about this confusion.

Lucille smiled to herself. Hugo Loubeque was the man who had frightened her so artfully. But she still had the papers.

Columbus Guards are Ready To Duplicate Their Brilliant Mexican Service of The '40s

Columbus, Ga., April 25.—(Special)—The Columbus Guards are in readiness to go to Mexico at a moment's notice. The company held a drill at which the officers made a statement as to the situation, and the members are arranging their affairs so as to be in position to respond promptly to a call.

If the company is called, this will not be its first trip into Mexico. The Columbus Guards, one of the historic military organizations of the south, had a brilliant record in the Mexican war in the forties. The company also made a gallant record in the war between the states.

CHILEANS ARE BITTER AGAINST UNITED STATES

Val Paraiso, Chile, April 25.—Public opinion here is bitter against the United States as a result of the Mexican crisis. In an editorial The Union asks if there is any international morality, and continues:

"The war in Mexico is the result of a want of common sense and of the revolutions in Mexico. The proceedings of the United States are not justified. That country cannot be the judge of foreign civil wars, and ought to have limited its protection to its nationals and its frontiers. The war against Huerta offends the Mexican nation. The conflict will end as on other occasions—in a new dismemberment of Mexico. The punishment is out of proportion to the offense—the incident at Tampico—and is a threat against the rest of America."

The Mercurio says it is astonished at the excessive importance attached to the Monroe doctrine in Europe. It adds that the Latin-American republics are in the same condition of perfect equality as other nations, and are not subject to and never will accept foreign interference.

HALF MILLION TO AID AMERICAN REFUGEES

Washington, April 25.—The president has today signed the bill passed by congress appropriating $500,000 for the relief and transportation to the United States of American citizens in Mexico.

Late today Secretary Daniels estimated that between 2,000 and 2,500 refugees either are on their way from Mexico or, under protection, are awaiting departure for the United States.

Annie Russell will produce with her company, as a Little Theater, in Philadelphia, a modern love comedy by Paul Kester, called "The Lady in the Case."

DECREASE IN THE WOMEN WHO RIDE MAN-FASHION

The London Ladies Are Mostly Riding in the Good Old Way.

London, April 25.—The number of women riding astride in Rotten Row is showing a marked decline. Of seventy-one female riders counted on the Row recently, only twenty-two were astride, and ten of these were little girls.

One woman was wearing khaki riding breeches, brown leather leggings and boots, a man's grey jacket and yellow waistcoat, white collar and sailor tie, and a grey bowler hat. Some wear long coat which reaches below the knees and others have a form of divided skirt.

Lately there has been a notable freedom among women riders as to coling breeches, brown leather leggings and boots, a man's grey jacket and yellow waistcoat, white collar and sailor tie, and a grey bowler hat. Some wear long coat which reaches below the knees and others have a form of divided skirt.

Lately there has been a notable freedom among women riders as to coloring. Pink, which was used to be closely prescribed as docked tails for the horses. Many still wear the regulation white stocks, but the soft white double collar fastened with a safety pin is said to be a safer knot tie is popular. All sorts of hats are worn from the conventional bowler to the straw tied under the throat with a veil.

ARRESTED THE MARINES AND INSULTED THE FLAG

Seaman on the Dolphin Writes His Sister of the Incident at Tampico.

St. Louis, April 25.—A story of the arrest of the United States marines at Tampico, which precipitated the present Mexican crisis, is contained in a letter received here today by Mrs. John H. Hayden from her brother, James Cole, a sailor on the gunboat Dolphin.

The letter was written at Tampico, April 14, and described the arrest of the marines of the gunboat Dolphin as follows:

"The other day we went ashore, ten of us and the paymaster, to get supplies, and we got too far down the river on the firing line. As soon as we hit the beach the federal army captured us, and we were flying the American flag, too. They held us prisoners about fifteen hours. Our captain came over and got us. They took the American flag off our boat and threw it overboard. They thought the paymaster was a relative of ex-President Madero.

"The admiral certainly did rave. He sent word to the Mexicans to offer an apology and fire a salute of twenty-one guns to the American flag or he would blow the city of Tampico up. Two Mexican officers came aboard and apologized, but they wouldn't fire the salute. The admiral told them to fire it within twenty-four hours, but nothing stirring. He gave them a twenty-four hour extension. Word was sent here from Washington that if he didn't receive word from Washington by 6 o'clock last night we were to take the city.

"We never got word until yesterday afternoon. We were all ready for action. We had 4,000 sailors ready to land from the ships."

Weight of a Gallon of Milk.

(From The Progressive Farmer.)

"What is the standard weight for sweet milk?"

A quart of milk weighs 2.152 pounds and a gallon 8.612 pounds, or a quart 2.15 pounds and a gallon 8.6 pounds. It is understood that the temperature of the milk and the relative proportions of the butter fat and solids not butter fat cause the weight of milk to vary, but the weight stated above are those generally used.

LOVE LETTERS USED TO CONVICT CONLEY

He was also conferring with various members of Frank's counsel.

"An examination of these letters written by Conley will prove conclusively that the murder notes emanated exclusively from the negro's perverted brain. It is evidence of a nature more powerful and convincing than an actual confession from the negro himself.

"This evidence consists of a large number of letters written by the negro, Jim Conley, while in jail. They were addressed do the negro woman, Anna Maude Carter. These letters are some of the letters referred to by the Carter woman in her affidavit as having been written to her.

"They show beyond a peradventure of a doubt that Conley is an abnormal man—just the vile, degenerate creature that I have heretofore pictured him. They are full of the vilest, most abominable language, dealing with Conley's lust. His perverted passion was aroused by the contents of the letters are full of this vile stuff.

"It fills one with a loathing disgust to even handle them. Conley uses the most nauseating things imaginable. As you see here (Burns displayed one of the letters) most of the letters are addressed to Anna Maude Carter, but Conley addressed some of them to 'Anna Maude Conley.'

Explode State's Argument.

"It is well enough to note that these letters contain the words 'did' and 'negro.' These words are most significant in view of the fact that, at the trial, it was maintained by the state that Frank must have conceived and dictated the death notes, because they contained the words 'did' and 'negro,' and that if Conley had conceived them he would have written the words 'done' and 'nigger.'

"These letters completely explode the argument of the state, because they contain, as before stated, the words 'did' and 'negro' in the plainest writing. The defense contended on the trial that no white man, especially one of Frank's character, could possibly have conceived and dictated the notes found by the body, and the only answer that the state attempted to make to this contention was that Frank must have dictated them because they contained these aforementioned words.

"The authenticity of these letters is beyond question. A mere glance at them shows the identity of Conley's handwriting. It is identical with the death notes. The Bs, the Ss, the Os and the Ws are typical."

Frank's Statement.

The striking statement of Leo Frank, which was written by him in his cell in the Tower, is published in full below. It is headed: To the people of Atlanta.

I make this appeal to your fairness. It was the horrible charge that I was a pervert that poisoned your minds, infuriated you against me, and put me beyond the pale of human sympathy, "where nothing would be believed, where the word of a vile negro and self-confessed perjurer was eagerly accepted in preference to mine, and where I could not obtain even the common privilege to which every man is entitled, a fair and impartial trial. It was this charge that so enraged the crowds around the courthouse that the judge upon the bench, fearing that I and my lawyers might be killed if the verdict was one of acquittal, advised them to remain away, and keep me out of the courthouse. It is this charge that has poisoned and still poisons the minds of the public against me and denies me the commonest rights of a human being.

About two weeks ago, Mr. Burns made, through the newspapers, the request that if anyone had information as to any acts of immorality on my part that they would communicate with him. He received not a single response, and on the next day, through the same newspapers, he made an offer of $1,000 for such information. Again there was no response except from Newport A Lanford, the chief of detectives of the police department of Atlanta, who stated that he had in his possession the information that Burns was seeking and added, sneeringly, "Probably more than he wants." Mr. Burns being then out of the city, Mr. Lebon, his assistant, called, and the chief of detectives told him that while he had the information that he could not show it to him, but would show it to Mr. Burns when he returned. When Mr. Burns returned to Atlanta he immediately called on Lanford and was told then by him that while he had the affidavits, he would not show them to him, because the motion for the new trial was then pending. How that could be any reason for him to conceal this information, if he had it, I do not understand, but this is what he is quoted as saying in The Constitution: That he refused on the ground that he did not believe it would be doing justice to himself, to the state, or "even to Frank" for any publicity to be given as to the perversion affidavits until after the hearing, and then added: "At the trial of Frank we did not bring up the subject of perversion. It was brought out by Frank's lawyers." On last Friday again, after my side had closed its evidence, Mr Lanford was again approached for these affidavits and he repeated the statement that neither the state nor the police department of Atlanta had ever claimed and did not now claim that I was a pervert, and that that charge had been put into the case by my own lawyers!

An Idiotic Statement.

To this silly drivel, this pitiful failure of the man to realize his duties as an officer of the public, it is difficult for me to make any reply. I can only say that his idiotic statement that the charge of perversion was brought into the case by my own lawyers is known to be a silly, impudent falsehood by thousands, if not millions of people, who know perfectly well that it was brought into the case by the testimony of Conley when he was first put upon the stand and examined by the solicitor general, representing the state of Georgia.

I submit to the people of Atlanta that Lanford has only taken this position because his bluff has been called. He knows perfectly well now and he has always known that the charge of perversion against me was a miserable, cowardly lie; and I further charge that if Mr. Burns had not demanded his proof he never would have opened his mouth, but would have allowed the public and the courts to remain under the impression that he and the police still believed and charged me with being a pervert. I now make this solemn declaration, that I am not a pervert nor an immoral man in any sense of the word, and that these charges against me are a mass of horrible, atrocious lies. I further state and send my message straight to the heart and conscience of every man and woman in Georgia that I did not kill Mary Phagan; that I am absolutely innocent, and that my execution would not avenge her death.

The charge of perversion having been withdrawn against me, I do not see how any man, with a love of justice and fair play in his heart, could deny me the privilege of a new trial, a fair trial, which I have never had. I am asking for that which the people of Atlanta would not refuse to a dirty mongrel cur slinking through its streets—the right to a fair showing before its life is taken. The charge of perversion that is now withdrawn made it impossible for me to get a fair trial. I have had none. I simply ask that I be given a fair show for my life; that I be allowed to make my defense before a jury that knows the truth, that I am not a pervert; a jury that will not be intimidated by fear of being shot down or killed should it acquit me; a jury whose minds will be calm to weigh my testimony against that of a self-confessed negro perjurer. A fair trial is what I want, is what I am entitled to and what no fair-minded man should deny me, and I appeal to the fair-minded people, whose silent influence stands back of the courts and whose servants the courts are, to see that I am given a fair trial.

REBELS AND FEDERALS FIGHTING AT TAMPICO

United States War Vessels Are Some Distance Out From the Coast.

Vera Cruz, April 25.—Fighting between the Mexican federal troops and the constitutionalists was in progress at Tampico last night, according to a report received by Rear Admiral Badger from the British war vessels.

The British commander off Tampico says he had heard a Mexican gunboat in action, but was unable to learn the extent of the fighting. The American war vessels were lying a considerable distance out from the coast.

Refugees to the number of 1,950 have been removed from Tampico during the last few days.

At Puerto Mexico everything was quiet last night. Rear Admiral Badger is relying on the British vessels there which are in charge of the situation. The American liners at the docks of Puerto Mexico are not been interfered with.

The American torpedo boat destroyer Patterson, which is at Tuxpan, has been instructed to take on board twenty-five Chinese refugees and send them to Galveston at the first opportunity.

It is probable that the liner Monterey, now here, will be chartered today to proceed to Tuxpan and pick up refugees at the small intermediate ports.

Caballero's Report.

Brownsville, Texas, April 25.—The following report signed by General Caballero, rebel commander at Tampico, to constitutionalist headquarters at Matamoros, under date of the 24th, was given out here today:

"Having come to my notice that the federals in Tampico were offering further insults to Americans, I immediately reopened my attack at 4 o'clock this morning, and already have captured the cemetery, where strong federal forces resisted. Expect triumph by night."

WILSON IS CRITICISED BY LONDON NEWSPAPERS

London, April 25.—While acknowledging that on broad grounds the American government's action toward Mexico is justified, The Nation severely criticises President Wilson. "A statesman who interferes to restore order," it says, "may argue that at most cost its lives and treasure he is putting an end to intolerable violence and cruelty, but the statesman who sacrifices lives because some ceremonial detail is lacking in the ritual of an apology is behaving with levity unworthy of a civilised ruler."

The Saturday Review says if the intention is avowed to establish "a stable and satisfactory government in Mexico City, the United States can feel certain that their action will be watched with sympathy and approval by the other great powers."

FAREWELL BANQUET GIVEN J. D. CARTER

Railroad Men Dine Popular Santa Fe Official on Eve of Departure.

The freight and passenger traffic men of Atlanta held an elaborate banquet last night at the Winecoff hotel in honor of John D. Carter, the popular southern freight and passenger agent of the Sante Fe railroad, who has just been promoted to general agent of that company, with headquarters in Detroit.

One hundred guests were present. Toasts were made by the following prominent railway officials: R. D. Baylor, G. C. Sheppard, O. P. Barrett, Paul Wright, James Scott, J. F. Mathews and Toastmaster J. F. Billups.

Mr. Carter has been with the Sante Fe in Atlanta for thirteen years, entering the freight service office in 1901 as stenographer. He was promoted to traveling freight and passenger agent in 1903, and succeeded J. C. Sartelle as southern agent in 1909. He goes to Detroit May 1.

Plans were discussed last night to organize the several hundred traffic men in Atlanta into a traffic club, and Mr. Billups was appointed as chairman of an executive committee to be chosen by himself to carry out the work of organization.

Paul E. Rogers, of Atlanta, traveling freight and passenger agent of the Illinois Central system, will succeed John D. Carter, May 1, as general southern agent of the company, with headquarters at 14 North Pryor street.

A Vicious Principle.

(From The Philadelphia Ledger.)

Dr. Van Hise, of Wisconsin university, declares that breaking big corporations into little ones has resulted in a higher cost of living. Compulsion and competition generally increases the cost of operation, which in turn raises the price which consumers must pay for a commodity.

This reads like sensible doctrine. The mere size of a business ought to arouse no enmity. It is only what the business does that should concern the public.

The law of efficiency will regulate to a large degree the size of any producer. There is a point beyond which, as it now appears, bigness does not decrease the cost of output. Thus steel mills with a tenth of the capital of United States Steel can compete with it successfully and profitably.

The Chilean nitrate fields have a line railroad into its 200 constituent parts, or to dismember into as many fragments a manufacturing industry, might so disorganize all operating costs that the public would pay dearly for this economic blunder.

To attack a business because it is big is simply to assail prosperity. America never attained its present greatness by taxing success, and to begin it now would plunge the country into an unprecedented trade calamity.

Devil Wagons Among the Sunflowers.

(From The Hutchinson News.)

If Kansas really cared about it she could crank up the automobile and hauling five people at a load, take the entire population of the state for a ride of 30 miles in a day. She could take each bunch of five a spin of 30 miles, and by making eight loads of it, by the end of the eight-hour day every man, woman and child would have had an outing in an automobile.

BODY OF SUMMERLIN TO BE BROUGHT HOME

Governor Slaton Wires to Senator West Asking Him to Look After It.

Governor Slaton received a telegram Saturday from the relatives of Randolph Summerlin, the young Georgia boy who was killed by the Mexicans at Vera Cruz, asking that if possible he make some arrangement with the authorities at Washington for the return of the body to his native state.

Governor Slaton immediately wired to Senator West requesting that he take the matter up with the war department and see that the body is sent to Georgia. Summerlin's home was in Blackcoodes, Berrien county. He was one of the first six to be killed in the struggle with Mexico.

Relief For The Kidneys

Improper kidney action causes more sickness, suffering and serious complications than any other organ. The kidneys are two large glands situated near the middle of the back and their purpose is to purify every ounce of blood in the body, and to do this they must be in a healthy condition. If they become inflamed, congested or otherwise weakened in their action, the poison remains in the blood, and the whole system becomes impregnated. The general symptoms are backache, loss of appetite, headache, torpid liver, constipation, indigestion, nervousness, drowsiness, sleeplessness, kidney troubles, malaria, etc. If you have any of these symptoms, you should at once commence taking Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy, which for 37 years has been a standard remedy for the kidneys and liver, and today it stands without a rival in healing with certainty the frail tubular structures constituting these important organs. It is a sure antidote to poisons formed in the human body, owing to incapable action of the kidneys and liver, eliminating through the kidneys, bowels and skin all morbid and unhealthy accumulations from the system. It will help you from the very first dose. At all druggists in 50c and $1.00 sizes. Free sample and valuable information if you write, Warner Safe Remedies Co., Dept. 214, Rochester, N. Y.

NEW PRINCETON HOTEL

Better Service For the Terminal District

A Mecca For the Tired Traveling Man

Handsome Remodeled Hotel, With 150 Rooms, Thrown Open to the Public. Elegantly Furnished and Every Modern Convenience Offered to the Traveling Man and Visitors to Opera and Shriners' Convention.

Transient visitors in Atlanta have one more delightful place to spend their hours of rest while doing business here. The Princeton Hotel, on Mitchell street, has opened with 150 rooms elegantly furnished by the J. M. High company, one hundred of the rooms being directly connected with modern bathrooms.

Every room is equipped with hot and cold water, steam heat and a Bell telephone connecting with the city service. Sample room combinations are arranged for traveling men who wish to display their wares to customers. Every room has two windows with steel frames and wired glass as a protection against fire. Fire escapes lead to the ground from every floor.

The men presenting this hostelry to the traveling public are H. R. Cannon, proprietor, and C. H. Cannon, his brother, who is in detailed charge as manager, although H. R. Cannon gives most of his personal attention to the comfort of the guests.

Best Service for Public.

"Two of us are not too many," says Mr. Cannon. "The traveling public deserves the best of service and they are going to get it here. Most of our guests remain only two or three nights, many of them only one night at a time, but they return often. When they come to us they generally are tired from a day's hard work tramping about the city or in wearing argumentation with merchants to whom they wish to sell goods. A clean, cool, quiet room with an abundance of sparkling water, hot and cold; fluffy, crisp towels and a soft bed give these gentlemen a new grip on themselves and they do business with a vim and vigor the next day."

Every bed in the house is fitted with mattresses and springs that sooth a man to sleep "ere he is aware," and the furniture, oak in some rooms and mahogany in others, according to the scheme of decoration, is of an elegance and sturdiness seldom encountered in smaller hotels of the country.

Rooms Cool and Comfortable.

There is an electric fan in every room and two windows, some of the corner rooms being exposed on two sides with four large windows. Rooms on the first floor have dark red carpets, white beds and mahogany furniture. The large, wide corridor is carpeted with green, and the effect is artistic and restful. On the second floor the hall carpet is green, the rooms are carpeted with autumn brown, the beds are of bronze and the furniture is mission oak. This floor is a delight to the eye and the peaceful atmosphere of nature-colored forests in fall surrounds the visitor. Bright vivacity is suggested by the scheme of decoration on the sun-lighted third floor. The corridor is covered with a dark red hall carpet, the rooms are carpeted with soft green, the beds are white and the furniture is mahogany.

Many of the New Princeton rooms are fitted with shower baths, which have of late become very popular with traveling men.

One of the most attractive features of the Princeton will be the new glassed court, with a fountain in the center. The contractors have removed all the debris of building from the extraordinarily large yard, and landscape gardeners are preparing it for grass and flowers, which verdant decorations will radiate from a flowing fountain in the center. The design for this fountain has been accepted from the architects and it is being cast for immediate setting in the Princeton yard.

An Out-of-Door Feature.

This out-of-door feature will be unique in Atlanta and promises to add great popularity to this enterprising hostelry. On hot nights the flowing stream of cold water from a beautiful fountain set amidst grass and flowers will be cool and pleasant to worn and weary traveling men.

The heating plant for the Princeton was installed by H. Hitchcock. It is a smokeless system and operates with the Royal Smokeless Water Tube boilers, manufactured by the Hart & Crouse company, of Utica, N. Y. This system makes it possible to burn soft coal without causing smoke and soot to pour forth from the chimney, and besides adds to the efficiency of the plant. Soft coal, ton for ton, gives more heat than hard coal. It is easier and more responsive to use, and where smoke can be eliminated it proves most economical. Therefore, it was installed in the Princeton in the hope of keeping down the smoke and cost at the same time.

The handsome leather chairs in the lobby, veritable smiling invitations to rest and enjoy a visit to Atlanta, were made here by the Capital City Chair company. They were sold through the J. M. High company, as were the magnificent bedroom suites, manufactured by the Burnett-Klapper Furniture company.

Impressive Appearance.

The front of the Princeton hotel is of pressed brick, decorated with bronze trimmings, and at the entrance the main door is set back from the sidewalk several feet. Little recesses are marked off by brass rails that lend richness and dignity to the general picture and at each side of the entrance handsome ferns and palms will be kept constantly growing, green and fresh. Full plate glass windows give the entire great lobby all the light of outdoors, and from within a full view of busy Mitchell street and all its traffic from the Terminal station is afforded.

The Princeton Hotel is only half a block from the Terminal station. It is in the center of the block, and the gentlemen who have expended great sums in its equipment for the traveling public believe it will prove a great gathering place for travelers.

S. A. L. TRAIN DELAYED BY BURNING TRESTLE

On account of the trestle on the Seaboard railway between Athens and Bogart being partially burned Saturday afternoon, train No. 5, from Washington, D. C., due in Atlanta at 4:50 o'clock Saturday afternoon, did not arrive until 1 o'clock this morning, and No. 29, from Monroe, N. C., due at 3 o'clock last night, was delayed until 1:15 o'clock this morning.

The fire started from unknown cause. An investigation is being made, but the railroad officials think the affair accidental. The condition of the trestle was discovered before No. 5 reached Athens and the trains were held at that city until temporary repairs were made.

AMERICAN RAILWAY MEN ORDERED TO MEXICO

New York, April 25.—At the office of the National Railways of Mexico the report from Mexico City that President Huerta had asked all Americans in the employ of the railway company, with the exception of President E. N. Brown, to resign, was confirmed. Mr. Brown is in this city, but it is not known whether he will accede to the request of the Mexican government to continue in charge of the railway.

The local offices of the road will continue to operate the property as best they can from this point. Officials stationed here had no direct word from any operating offices of the company in any part of Mexico for the last three days.

UNITED STATES TROOPS TO VERA CRUZ FOR DUTY

Washington, April 25.—Secretary Garrison said today that the United States troops which have been ordered to Vera Cruz were going there "for duty," when asked as to the purpose of the military movement. He would make no further explanation of the departure of the Fifth army division from Galveston.

The war department announced later that as many of the troops of the Fifth field artillery as can be taken on the liner San Marcos will leave Galveston late today for Vera Cruz.

The troopers will take their equipment with them. The remainder of the regiment and the animals will sail later on the liner Satilla.

TRAINLOAD OF BEEF FOR AMERICAN TROOPS

Chicago, April 25.—Upon orders from the commissary department of the United States army, a Chicago packing company yesterday shipped a train load of fresh beef and other supplies to Galveston for transportation to the American troops in Mexico.

J. M. HIGH FURNISHES NEW PRINCETON HOTEL

In competition with a number of active seekers after the order, the J. M. High company succeeded in offering the ideas and goods that were selected for the fitting up of the New Princeton hotel. The most conspicuous work of this company is seen in the handsome furniture in the great lobby. The huge, comfortable chairs, upholstered in beautifully designed and colored imported leather, are examples of the excellent taste of the furnishers.

The rooms are models of utility and excellence in many ways, but especially in the mahogany and mission furniture. The writing tables with small stationery desks hidden uniquely in the drawers add a metropolitan touch to the rooms. The beds were selected according to the patterns recommended by the High company and are regarded the most satisfactory beds made for hotel purposes.

Burglars Loot Bank.

Little Rock, Ark., April 25.—Burglars early today dynamited the bank at Cass, Ark., and escaped with $1,500. The vault and fixtures were demolished. Fifteen charges of nitro-glycerin, it is said, were used.

GUNBOAT YORKTOWN REACHES GUAYMAS

Washington, April 25.—The gunboat Yorktown arrived today at Guaymas from Mare Island, and her commander reported all quiet at the Mexican port. The Mexican federal gunboat Guerrero has just reached Guaymas from Mazatlan. Guaymas is held by the Mexican federals, but a strong detachment of rebels is encamped nearby.

In the Social Whirl

By Isma Dooly

THE coming of Mrs. Delos Blodgett, of Grand Rapids, Mich., and Washington, D. C., and her handsome young daughter, Miss Helen Blodgett, for the opera season will give pleasure to her many Atlanta friends. She arrives Sunday and will be one of the guests of honor at the brilliant dinner party Colonel Regan gives Tuesday evening. Mrs. Blodgett was Miss Daisy Peck, of Atlanta, the youngest daughter of the late Professor William Henry Peck, who was one of the most distinguished story writers of his day.

Their home was a picturesque one which occupied the site on which the Imperial hotel now is, and was the center of a charming social life, when his daughters were the belles of Atlanta. The eldest, Bertha Peck, married Mr. George Schaeffer. Several years after his death she married Mr. Trower, of England. Subsequently he became a member of the British diplomatic corps, and is now consul at Capri. Another daughter was the late Mrs. Dugas, of Atlanta, and a third, Mrs. Matthews, of Charleston.

Mrs. Blodgett's home is one of the handsomest in Grand Rapids, and this winter she has been one of the most popular hostesses in Washington city, having purchased the home of the late Senator Foraker.

Mrs. Blodgett will be in the city for opera week, and among the entertainments at which she will be an honor guest will be those given by Mr. and Mrs. John Little, Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Inman. She will be among the visiting guests at the Peel reception Friday afternoon, and at the opening of the golf club Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Evans, who are at the Georgian Terrace, will be in Atlanta for opera week, and will be among the guests at the various social functions of the week. They have had a delightful visit to England, and later to Italy, returning home ten days ago. In England they were guests at Norton house, the beautiful country home of Sir William Kirk. Later they visited Lady Avonmore, the sister of Mr. Evans, and Mrs. Lyon, another sister, who has an estate in Ireland. They will go to Toronto in early May and remain there for several months.

KNOXVILLE GUESTS.

Ross, Mr. and Mrs. David Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Sanford and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Sanford, and Mrs. Herbert Hall. Mrs. Hall arrives Tuesday morning and will be with her aunt, Mrs. William T. Newman. She will be among the charming visitors at the dinner-dance Tuesday night, and she will be with Colonel and Mrs. Lowry in their box Wednesday night, the other guests to be Mr. and Mrs. Edward Schaefer, of Toccoa, Ga. Mr. and Mrs. George Baxter will be with Colonel and Mrs. Lowry at the matinee Thursday afternoon, and at dinner with them at the Capital City club Thursday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Chapman and Mr. and Mrs. Ross will be with Colonel and Mrs. Lowry Friday night. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Sanford and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Sanford will be with Colonel and Mrs. Lowry Saturday night. Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell entertain Mr. and Mrs. Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Chapman; Colonel and Mrs. Lowry, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Sanford, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Sanford at supper at the Capital City club after the opera Saturday night.

BRIGHT EVENTS.

The breakfast at which Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gray entertain Thursday morning at 11 o'clock, at Grayston, will be a delightful affair characteristic in spirit and hospitality of all entertainments at which they preside. There will be a group of the opera stars entertained, also Mr. Otto Kahn and his party of eight. Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wilson, of Nashville, will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gray for opera week, and will assist them entertain; also Mr. and Mrs. Inman Gray, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gray, Mr. and Mrs. T. Miss Patterson was lovely Margaret [illegible]man, of Atlanta, and one of the most admired young women in southern society.

Letters announce the charming trip being enjoyed on the continent by Mrs. Belle Newman Howard and Miss Frances Newman, who are now in Italy, and will be very much missed among the opera guests.

Tupper will entertain for them and they will be among the visiting people at the Lowry breakfast Friday morning and the Peel reception Friday afternoon.

The supper at which Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson entertain tonight will be a most enjoyable one, marking the first of a series of parties to be given by Atlanta hostesses. GOWNS TO BE WORN AT OPERA.

They test descriptive power, the gowns to be worn at opera this year, and a number seen yesterday make one wonder at what the beauty and brilliancy and style of the opera will be!

At the "premiere," the first night, one of Atlanta's prettiest women will wear a white taffetas gown. Over it is a skirt of sheerest lace and a panier overskirt of white taffetas flowered in blossoms of pink and French blue. A touch of the same blue will give finish to the corsage of lace. The wrap to be worn with it is of palest blue moire bangoline, showing a design in Dresden flowers. It is lined with flesh color and trimmed in lace.

English thread lace of exquisite pattern finishes a gown of lavender silk of French fashion. The wrap to be worn with it is threaded in gold, and trimmed in Irish point applique lace.

An evening wrap draped to the figure which will be worn over a black evening gown, is of black satin lined with flesh color.

Cream moire bangoline is the material of another wrap, which is draped, and will be worn with an elegant toilet of cream moire silk flowered.

A garden party gown much admired is of bluette taffetas silk combined with a chiffon cloth in black and white stripe and printed in flowers in the shades of bluette and rose.

One of the smartest of toilets designed for a matinee is of black taffetas, with a short coat opening over a blouse of white lace and a corselet of black taffetah.

A taffetas gown in jonquil yellow, and combined with lace and chiffon, will be one of the prettiest of toilets to be seen the first night. A mafines gown is of electric blue taffetas silk, made in the bouffante over dress fashion. In biscuit-colored brocade charmeuse is another for an afternoon function. It is trimmed daintily in blue velvet. Crisp and springlike in white taffetas is the gown, selected by a stylish Atlanta woman for an afternoon occasion, and a black taffetas for luncheon.

A beautiful gown for an afternoon reception is of orchid colored moire, brocaded in a design of flowers showing the palest pink and orchid shades. It has a fichi drapery of exquisite lace over the shoulders, and with it a satin wrap of the same colors will be worn.

Dinner Party.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Hewitt entertained at a pretty dinner party Thursday evening in celebration of Mrs. Hewitt's birthday. The house was artistically decorated with quantities of dogwood and tulips. A large silver loving cup, filled with yellow roses and garden[illegible] was the centerpiece of the table, and the place cards were painted in yellow flowers.

Mrs. Hewitt wore a becoming [illegible] of pink taffeta and white embroidered chiffon. There were thirty guests.

Dainty and Exquisite Finery

Ready-to-Wear For Grand Opera

ALLEN'S is reputed to be the store of style service for women. Who would not go "his length" to live up to such reputation?

Our buying plan is the limitless "length" on which we depend for the things made possible only thru this avenue.

Our great volume of business and vast assortment of styles—styles of assured good form—make for satisfactory selections and insure prices within a modest keeping. We employ more salespeople than we need all the time in order to have all that we need some of the time. This means prompt, unhurried service. It means correct fitting. May we serve you on this perfect plan?

This Week—Yours and Our Busy Week

During the next few days there will be much buying of fine evening and afternoon wear. There will be good business for all who deserve it. Many people will be deciding three things:

First—Where they can get the best quality.
Second—Where they will find the lowest price for the best quality.
Third—Where the service will best respond to their demands.

The store that for the longest time has shown these three things oftenest will get the greatest single part of that trade.

The charm of the circular cape attracts the world of fashion. It appears in all lengths—half lengths, three-quarter lengths, and those lengths which are quite long. One feature only is possessed by all capes in common, and that is voluminousness. Cape is untrimmed except on collar and shoulders. Gorgeous linings of all varieties are shown. The loose coates with hip belt is also a favorite.—Paris Special Correspondence.

The Newest Opera Wrap Is the Circular Cape

Materials are moire, silk crepe, silk poplin, satin, with linings of gaily flowered chiffon—lending a soft, luxurious value so far unattained in the heavier silken linings—

Considering the wonderful beauty and richness of these wraps you will say the prices are surprisingly modest—Black and wonderfully beautiful colors—SILK WRAPS $25, $30, $35, $40 and up to $75—

These handsome capes reached us only two days ago.

Parisiennes have fallen willing victims to the charm of the circular cape. At the present moment this picturesque and eminently practical garment may be said to rule the world of fashion, and it is to be seen in many different guises.

We have a voluminous cape which is almost exactly like the famous "capa" of the Spaniards; we have flowing military capes and long cloaks, equally flowing, which might have been copied from the stately "Roman cape" of Catholic priests. And then we have in our midst a fascinating little circular mantle which is neither long nor short, but amazingly attractive.

Light Broadcloth Military Capes For Street Wear

Dresses Beautiful and Appropriate for Grand Opera Wear

It is in no sense compulsory to wear a full evening gown during the Grand Opera season. Music-loving people prepare for comfort, ease, enjoyment. A handsome dinner gown of semi-cut, a beautiful afternoon dress of light shade—and graceful style—what more for beauty and comfort might one ask?

We will show you a perfectly fascinating assortment of charming art taffetas and crepes, creations to delight every artistic fiber of your being. White taffeta dresses with Panniers of oddly figured silk and Watteau backs—frocks involving every spark of the charm you loved in picture books long ago—and here are the single tunic models, attaining the new long lines—these in rich laces over soft charmeuse skirts, and in every conceivable art known to Parisian designers—where silks and fine laces and art combine.

DINNER DRESSES, AFTERNOON FROCKS, EVENING GOWNS, $35, $40, $45, $50 and up to $85. Also some beautiful simple effects in both afternoon and evening styles—$12.95, $14.75, $19.75 and $25.

TECH HIGH LOSES TO FAST G. M. C.

Local Preps Have Ascension in Fourth Inning — Meyers and Goodwin Hit Ball Week.

By slowing up in the fourth inning, Tech High lost their game to the Georgia Military college nine last Friday afternoon at Ponce de Leon by the score of 15 to 5.

With the exception of the one fateful inning, the local boys more than held their own with the Milledgeville school.

G. M. C. cinched the game in the fourth when, by taking advantage of four errors by Tech High, coupled with five hits, they succeeded in scoring eight tallies.

Both teams hit the pill to all corners of the lot. G. M. C. secured a total of twelve bingles, while Tech High made nine.

Tech High had a horrible day in the field, making eleven errors throughout the course of the contest. G. M. C. put up some good fielding, coming out with but one miscue to her credit.

Meyers did the best work for the Tech High school. Out of four trips to the pan he secured two safeties and a triple.

Goodwin was the leading slugger for the visitors. In four attempts he connected for a total of seven bases, his hits being one double and a triple.

The two teams meet again later on in the season, when Tech High goes to Milledgeville for a double bill on Memorial day.

PEEPLES SCHOOL

Baseball Team Makes Hot Race for Grammar Reg.

A very enjoyable debate was the feature of the meeting held in the sixth grade society, which met Friday. It being the first debate of the year, the subject was, "Resolved, That School Children Should Have No Home Lessons." The affirmative side was represented by Margret White, Julian Bauknight and Laura Woodcraft. The negative representatives were Virginia Bryan, Randolph Walker and Evelyn Pressley. The judges were Wilson Eastman, Embry Kendrick, Lucile Reed and Lenora Lott spoke. They rendered their decision in favor of the affirmatives. Recitations by Lucile Kelly and Thurston Springer were greatly enjoyed. The fifth grade B enjoyed the hospitality of the fifth grade on Friday.

The fourth grade children are so glad that they have completed the volunteers to give them an entry in the shuttle-ball relay race on May 1st.

Virginia Kelly, Annie Woodruff and Julia Green composed the honor roll of the seventh grade for last month.

James Hargrave, of the third grade, led his class in mental arithmetic last week.

A reading match of much interest took place in third grade B last week. The boys, James Miller and Harry McGinty, took sides against the girls, Nettie Colquitt and Leila Barton. The boys were victorious.

Mr. Landrum visited us Friday. His visit was long-expected, but very short.

Miss Harrison came to see the seventh and eight grades Wednesday. She gave both grades "Exercise," both grades are practicing their concert songs with the piano every day.

Our baseball team has improved greatly in the last few days. By defeating Fraser they have completed 10 to 5 and the Hill street team by a score of 8 to 4, we are leaders of all of our closest rivals. The "all-round" hitting of the entire team was the feature of both games.

The sixth, seventh and eight grades are studying about the Egyptians and Pyramids. Mrs. Osgood is going to examine us on the topography and history of this ancient architecture. As we compare our present architecture with that of old, we see an amazing amount of difference, not only in the beauty, but in the work. We should have the chance to go abroad it will be of great interest to go through these wonderful works of man.

Our front yard is being greatly improved by the large package of flower seeds arrived from McMillan's seed store last week. Recently the entire Civic Improvement committee helped in planting the beautiful seeds.

Monday the parkkeeper was no kind as to let us have enough hedge cuttings to inclose our entire front yard. The boys, with the aid of several girls (who serve special function), Nellie Jentsen, Margret Ford, Jane Reiley, Martha Carter and Ruby Garner and Mamie Ramsaur upheld the negative with their coats and picks. The girls did not mind the work, but they seemed to be as strong as the boys, because they had not yet tired out. Next week the boys and girls proved to be "expert gardeners," and with the hope John that soon flowers will grow under their management. The front lawn is being replanted in grass.

"Company, attention! Forward, march!" Since our boys have been practicing for the Memorial day parade, the girls, even as if they were surrounded by soldiers in the future, if our boys are called "to arms," we hope that they will be as brave and good a show as they now make in their parade drills. MARY PRESSELL.

TENTH SCHOOL.

Program by Eighth Grade Society Greatly Enjoyed.

A debate which was a great success, between the eighth grade boys, was held in the eighth grade last week. The following program was given:

"Origin of the Opal"—Recitation, by Irene Hart.

"Mark Anthony's Speech at Caesar's Funeral"—Declamation, by Clifford Hutchcr

"The Lass of Richmond Hill"—Song, by the class.

The question of the debate was, "Resolved, That wood is of greater use to man than steel."

The names of the debaters on the affirmative side were Henry Reid, leader; John Owens and Clifford Near. The debaters on the negative side were Lynn Ford, leader; Lenwood Bowman and George E. Smith

It had been arranged for the Normal school to send us some judges, but at the last moment it was found that it would be impossible for them to come. Therefore, Dan Green, a member of the board of education, who, fortunately, was visiting us at the time, consented to act as the committee. When he and the [illegible] two members were out making the decision, the remainder of the program was carried out, as follows.

"Isle of Beauty," Song, by the class.

"Hiem's Address to the Romans"—Declamation, by Oscar Davis.

"It Was a Lover and His Lass"—Song, by the class.

"Wolsey's Address to Cromwell"—Declamation, by Wayne Martin.

"Good Night"—Song, by the class.

The committee then returned and rendered a unique decision. The debate was declared a tie. Our principal said it was the best balanced debate ever held in the Tenth Street school. All enjoyed Mr. Greene's talk.

WEEK'S SCHEDULE OF PREP BATTLES

Interest in the Prep league received a kind of knock-out punch lately when three of the coaches decided to write draw from the association

Boys High, Peacock-Fleet and Stone Mountain were the schools to do the deserting. They have now formed a new league among themselves and are playing their contests regularly.

The teams who remained in the league have revised their schedule of play, which started with games last week. The schedule will wind up on May 19.

It is not altogether unlikely that the winners of the two branches will hook up in a series for the prep honors after the regular season is over.

STATE ST. SCHOOL TO MAKE GRAND SHOW IN MEMORIAL PARADE

We are all ready for the Memorial day parade tomorrow. Our company, commanded by Captain M. T. Shackleford, and Lieutenants Hassel Morris, Emory Jenks and Harvey Wilson has been on the march for two weeks. Attention, "halt," "column right" and other military terms, have become household phrases. Hereafter the schools have lined up according to seniority, but this year there is to be a new order of things. Official notice has been given that the schools will be arranged alphabetically. This places "state" fourth to last in the line of march, owing to a freak of the alphabet, which puts "s" before "t." However, Tenth, Williams and Walker are jolly good company, and we intend to bring up the rear with delight and we will have the satisfaction that the test was saved for the last.

The girls have five new swings and their drill is now in order. The girls fully indorse Robert Louis Stevenson's delightful little poem beginning,

"How do you like to go up in a swing,
Up in the air so blue?
Oh, I do think it's the pleasantest thing
Ever a child can do."

The sixth grade had the top-notch attendance for the month, and they were honor guests at the eighth grade society meeting Tuesday. President James Ford presided. Bernice Wallace is secretary. A most interesting program had been arranged, the chief feature being a debate on the question, resolved, "That Wealth Causes More Sorrow than Poverty." Nellie Robbins and Pearl Mitchell were on the affirmative, while Irvine Garner and Mamie Ramsaur upheld the negative.

The eighth grade is studying the metric system. As this is the system in use in South America and most foreign countries, it is necessary for us to familiarize ourselves with it. South America will soon be our next door neighbor and we will want to know her language of weights and measures.

Miss Pitts told us this little story: "I am going to see clearly the relation of our measures to the metric measures." "John's father gave him 40 rods (r) acre of land. He planted 2-3 bushels (b) of peanuts. He wanted to know the crop. John walked 1 kilometer (k-m) mile) to the nearest village and sold his crop at 5 cents a liter (k-m) (1-10 qt.) of the money, he made the following purchases: 1 meter (1 1-10 yd.) of linen, 1 kilogram (2 1-5 lb.) of rice; 1 liter (1 1-10 qt.) of vinegar.

So, dear, is it really true that they are going to put another war into the histories? Surely we are all agreed that the six wars we have had are quite enough to fill our small heads.

NELLIE GENTLE.

NATIONAL SPIRIT SHOWN BY PLATOONS AT FRASER SCHOOL

Miss Haralson paid us a visit Thursday and she was pleased with the work of the grades, the seventh and eighth. Both received excellent, and Miss Haralson left with a broad smile. The seventh grade has received excellent every time this year, while the eighth grade celebrated its second excellent.

The fifth grades are practicing their dance very hard, and they now can dance by the compulsions. The eighth grade is also practicing their exercises, and by Field day the Fraser pupils will be well drilled.

The boys who are in the Memorial day parade are practicing very hard every day. So far we have marched to Georgia Avenue school, Fry-er Street school and Grant Street school, and we made quick time, too. Our new banner was held with fear and it has put a new hope in our hearts. Ever since we have had our new banner, the boys march better. If President Wilson calls for volunteers, Fraser will respond by sending their four platoons to the border.

Thursday afternoon the eighth grade had a good discussion on the Mexican situation. As soon as our principal, Miss Johnson, mentioned the word "Mexico" everybody in the room at once put their hands up and were eager to talk. The reason of the war, the Tampico affair, and the final results were discussed.

Marist Cadets to Undergo Inspection By U.S. War Dept.

By EUGENE OBERDORFER, JR.

The Marist cadets, having enjoyed a week's Easter vacation, resumed their scholastic, military and athletic duties on Wednesday. Refreshed by their brief holiday, the cadets have commenced anew their former activities with great vigor and enthusiasm.

The battalion is to undergo the annual United States inspection by the war department on Monday. For the past two weeks the corps has been drilling and working under Captain E. T. Winston, the detailed United States army officer. The cadets are proficient in all the drills, exercises and manuals and they doubtless will pass a very creditable examination. Several recent changes have occurred in the corps' organization, and accordingly a number of the officers and noncoms is here given:

Staff.

Captain E. T. Winston, U. S. A. (retired), professor military tactics.
Captain R. E. Schmidt, fifth regiment national guard of Georgia, commandant.
First lieutenant, P. Saxton Lewis, battalion adjutant.
Second lieutenant, L. L. Lewis, quartermaster.
Sergeant major, Alex Farlinger.
Color sergeant, Julius Jernigan.
Color sergeant, W. A. Dodge.
Drum major, W. L. Simpson

Mr. "Colonel" Barber, director.
Lieutenant Robert Hubert, chief musician.
Sergeant George Manning, principal musician.
Sergeant, Emory Cocke.
Sergeant, Gene Wrigley.
Lance corporal, Percy Ansley.

Company A.

Captain Howard H. McCall, Jr., commanding.
First lieutenant, Frank W. Harrison.
First sergeant, Ellsworth Simmons.
Sergeant, Joseph Williams.
Sergeant, Joseph Bowen.
Sergeant, Julius Jernigan.
Sergeant, Owen, Taffe.
Corporal, Dwight McClain.
Corporal, Louis M. Brown.
L. corporal, J. P. Cheves.
L. corporal, W. C. Cathey.
L. corporal, George A. Haynes.
Musician, Ludwig R. Scipio.

Company B.

Captain Eugene Oberdorfer, Jr., commanding.
Second lieutenant, Y. L. Joel.
First sergeant, George A. Eckford.
Sergeant, C. P. Adair.
Sergeant, James Turner.
Sergeant, Kenan Smith.
Sergeant, Leonard B. Roan.
Corporal, Steve Grady.
Corporal, Ed Petuska.
L. corporal, George Molts.
L. corporal, Joe Jernigan.
Musician, Frank Meador.
Musician, M. Clarke.

The baseball team is hard at work, daily out for practice, conscientiously carrying out orders, endeavoring to succeed, and if the team does not finish near the top it will not be because of lack of spirit and work on the team's part.

The student body at Marist is giving the team little or no support. There is scarcely ever a handful of rooters at the games. If the Marist cadets want their team to succeed they must come out and support it on the field of battle.

The "Swagger" club of Marist college is now a constitutional organization with a legitimate existence. Meetings of the club are held every Thursday night. The charter members number the following: Major Schmidt, Lieutenant L. Lewis, Lieutenant Moss, Lieutenant Joel, Captain Oberdorfer, Sergeant Cocke.

Before the end of the term a play is to be produced by the Marist cadets under the direction of Major Schmidt. The play is entitled "If I Were King." Its leading roles are carried by Julian Mott, Saxton Lewis and Howard McCall.

PREP BUNTS AND BINGLES

The local Prep league has not been getting on so well since the withdrawal of the Boys' High school team or other the teams left in the organization seem to be playing their games in a listless, half-hearted manner. The schools have been playing together so as to get in no double-headers and to out of place not to be meeting each other as in former days.

The team—Tech High—that endeavored to uphold the prestige of the local prep recently against the prep teams of other parts, received a rather severe jolt lately in their game with the Georgia Military college. The game was turned into a track meet in the fourth inning, when Tech High made four errors, paving the way for the visitors' eight tallies.

The two races in the Grammar School league will be over pretty soon and then the two winners will meet in a three-game series to determine the championship of the public schools. Judging by the past form of the various teams, it will be a pretty safe guess to say that Formwalt, as usual, and Oakland City will meet for the honors.

Formwalt has been waltzing her way into so many pennants during the past that it seems almost useless for her to be announced as a contender for the big honors, but the writer is not mistaken, Formwalt has copped every cup offered for the championship of the grammar schools again.

The interest that the various classes are taking in the national pastime over at Boys' High school speaks well for the athletic teams of the future. Usually the men that make the team are new to the game somewhat, but by causing a weaker nine than would otherwise be had, the players get the habit of team play and are very easily coached. The main essentials when they get on the varsity squad.

The prep track meet that was held at G. M. A. yesterday afternoon was certainly a pippin. All of the events were closely contested, which fact suited the large crowd of spectators to a fare-ye-well. Field sports have been somewhat on the bum in prep circles lately, so this meet should serve to bolster them up a bit.

It was a pity that the first year that the Boys' High nine ever had a coach for their team that they dropped out of the league. Judging by the teams that High school has turned out without a coach in the past, their team would have no doubt succeeded in capping the top. They have especially well balanced club—good fielding, strong hitting and a fair pitching staff.

The progress that tennis has made among the preps has been very rapid of late. Boys' High is holding tennis tourneys for the last few years, but this is the first season that the other schools have followed suit. At the end of the separate tourneys another one may be held to determine the tennis championship of the various schools.

This is the first season that the local preps have brought out-of-town schools into Atlanta to meet them. Tech High played G. M. C. Friday, and later on Boys' High will bring Riverside down for a game. These things help advance prep ball to a startling degree.

Tech High was doped to have the best twirling staff in the prep schools of the state at the start of the season. However, after the first few starts, Shurlor of last year's nine, forsook the school to accept an office from Lee-Grange, the staff does not look quite so formidable. At that, prep teams are hard to get and even pennants with much weaker staffs.

Another member of Boys' High's last year's champs has made good in college circles in his first year. This time it is no other than "Abe" Aronstead, who up until this season, held down the catching staff in such approved style for the past three seasons. "Abe" is now down at Georgia, and according to reports, he is fulfilling the predictions made by his friends that he would make good.

PREP BASEBALL.

Tech High Wins Over Marist by 11 to 3 Count.

In the first game of the reorganized prep League, Tech High walloped the Marist nine by the overwhelming score of 11 to 3.

Up until the ninth inning Tech High had smeared the ivy street lads with whitewash, but in the last round, however, Marist got busy and managed to push over three tallies.

Parks pitched nine solid for Tech High during the time that he was on the mound. After his teammates had given him a good lead, he retired in favor of Smith, who came out in great shape with the exception of the final round.

Tech High also had their hitting clothes on. They pounded out ten safe bingles, many of which went for extra bases.

Both teams fielded in grand style, neither being charged with a miscue.

Score by innings: R. H. E.
Marist. . . . . 000 003 000—3 4 6
Tech High. . . . . 141 050 02x—11 10 0
Batteries: Brock and Hubert; Parks, Smith and Hooper.

FIRST GRADERS AT THE ASHBY SCHOOL ARE FINE SPELLERS

The second grade got the highest in attendance last week. They had a reward.

The fifth grade boys and girls got the most stars for their lessons last week. The boys played basketball for their reward, and the girls swung in the new swings for their reward.

The first grade had three rounds in spelling without a miss. Don't you think that is very smart for little first grade children?

Mr. Slaton was here last Thursday. We were very glad to see him.

Mack Shepard, one of the little deaf children, has been absent from school on account of illness. He has come back to school.

Mr. Slaton had the deaf children to write on the board for him.

"CLEAN-UP" DAY WAS REALLY OBSERVED BY CHILDREN OF LEE

Clean up! That's what we did! Armed with brooms, shovels and rakes, we attacked and cleaned every nook and corner we could find.

The children of the fifth grade brought in 6,208 names for "Clean-Up" day, and the eighth grade teachers gave us very interesting talks on the different ancient ruins. We have studied the pyramids, the sphinx, the ruins of the city of Thebes, with its famous colufnns, the beautiful temple of Parthenon at Athens, Greece, and the colosseum in Rome, Italy.

The fourth grade has decided to take part in the 'fold day exercises at Ponce de Leon.

Miss Sarah Lisle, the second grade teacher, has been absent, and Miss Hubert has taken her place. We hope to see Miss Lisle at school soon.

Nancy Trippe, Ruth Mulkey, Mattie Willard, Frank Shaw, Raymond Mitchell, Charles Mooney, Hal Dobbs and Roy Garrison stood up in a spelling match in the sixth grade last week.

Our boys have organized into two platoons, and will march in the Memorial day parade. Hudson Peurifoy was elected captain; John Ellis and Charles Hardage, lieutenants; Charles Mooney, Lewis Wyatt and Charlie Brown, flag bearers.

The seventh grade is deeply interested in the civil war, and is now studying about the conditions of the country at that time.

Willie Male Miller, Lucy Crabtree and Ruth Gattis, three of our last year girls, paid us a visit last week, which we enjoyed very much.

BOYS' NIGHT SCHOOL HAS FINE MEETING OF 'CURRENT EVENTS'

The eighth grade is glad to welcome back Glen Chapman, one of our most satisfactory pupils, who has been out of school for over a month. For the first time in the history of the present eighth grade, no one stood up in the spelling match on last Friday night, the whole class being spelled down.

The Seventh Grade Current Events club held an interesting meeting last Friday night. The Panama canal toll was the question for discussion. Most of the boys are supporters of President Wilson. We are glad to add the name of Walter Callahan, formerly of Walker street school, to our roll.

Aston Johnson, who has been absent a week on account of having to work at night, has returned to school.

Miss Mills, teacher of the fifth grade, was out of school Wednesday on account of sickness. We hope to have her with us again soon.

Edward Page, a former pupil of the fourth grade, had to undergo an operation last week. We are very glad to say that he is doing well.

Miss Carrie Scott, teacher of the foreign class, and who has been quite ill for over a month, is back at school.

The boys in the foreign class are delighted at having their teacher back again.

A great many of the teachers of the night school are having fine time riding to and from school in an automobile belonging to Austin Abbot, a young man in the commercial class. The teachers hope that he and his auto will stay with us a long time.

GRADES REWARDED WITH PICNICS AT HOME PARK SCHOOL

Every pleasant day at recess, the boys of Home Park school are seen marching up and down in front of the school, practicing for Memorial day. This shows how interested they are in their secretary, and how happy they are to be like them in any way.

In our second grade B, Lena Stanley has made 100 in arithmetic every month since September, and Mary Chapman has made 100 in spelling every month.

The second grade has received a blue star every day this week so far for spelling and they are working to make 100 every time, so that they will get a silver star. Ruth Barnwell was the only child in the third grade last month who made above 95 in everything.

The second, fifth and sixth grades are all going to have picnics. The second grade will especially enjoy theirs, as it is a reward for making perfect in their tasks.

The fourth grade has had a reading contest, and Louise Buice was selected as the best reader.

Mary Oxford made the highest average in the fourth grade last month.

BATTLE HILL PUPILS ENJOY THE STUDY OF ANCIENT NATIONS

We are enjoying very much the drawing lessons which Mrs. Osgood has mapped out for us. We are studying the countries that were highly advanced in architecture is olden days. Our seventh and eighth grade teachers give us very interesting talks on the different ancient ruins. We have studied the pyramids, the sphinx, the ruins of the city of Thebes, with its famous colufnns, the beautiful temple of Parthenon at Athens, Greece, and the colosseum in Rome, Italy.

The fourth grade has decided to take part in the 'fold day exercises at Ponce de Leon.

GRAMMAR LEAGUE GAMES FOR THIS WEEK'S PLAY

All of the teams in the two Grammar leagues have been putting up some good exhibitions of baseball in playing lately, with the result of the tightening up of the races in both associations.

There remain only a few more battles before the close of the season, so the teams who are fighting out the pennant are straining hard in order to come out winners.

At the close of the season the winners of the two leagues will meet in a three-game series for the championship of the Atlanta public schools. Formwalt and Edgewood met last year, the former finally winning out after some close and hard-fought games.

BOYS' HIGH ELATED OVER HOLIDAYS

By Robert Foreman.

R. H. S. won from the Atlanta Dental college on Friday afternoon by the score of 5 to 4. This is the second game that the Purple and White boys have played since their withdrawal from the league, and they will continue playing with various teams. The three teams which left the league have not formed any league among themselves, but will play at each other. The money paid by the students for the season tickets was refunded by the school recently.

The students of Boys Hi are greatly elated over the prospect of many holidays in the next two weeks. All the students of the Atlanta public schools will be given a holiday Monday, for Memorial day. Tuesday, May 1, for Skinners day, and will be let out at 1 o'clock on Tuesday and Thursday of the coming week for the grand opera. It is said that the students of R. H. S. will also be given a holiday on Friday, May 1. The students will take part in the regular Memorial day parade on Monday.

"Noodles" Fagan, who is on the bill at the Grand this week, visited R. H. S. recently. One whole school was not assembled to hear his lecture, as the school has its exercises only on Friday. However, he delivered a very interesting lecture to the seniors, senior business and Two A. His lecture was about the cigarette habit, and was humorous and interesting. Mr. Fagan visited R. H. S. about a year ago, and he is very popular with the students.

A tennis tournament will be held on May 1 by R. H. S. tennis cranks. The tournament will be held at East Lake, and will be very interesting, as about seventy boys have entered the singles contest, and seventeen couples are trying to win the doubles prize.

The senior class team surprised everyone by going down in defeat at the hands of the juniors. This puts the juniors and the freshmen ahead of the seniors, as the latter two teams are tied for first. The sophomores forfeited their game to the freshmen. The following is the present standing of the class league:

	Won.	Lost.	P. C.
Seniors.	3	1	.600
Juniors.	3	1	.750
Freshmen.	3	1	.750
Sophomores.	0	5	.000

HILL STREET SCHOOL

Pupils Are Jubilant Over Their Holiday on Monday.

As vacation time gets closer, things become a little busier for the closer of school. Although a larger number prefer vacation, a number are very much set in their studies. The remaining days are being whittled closely.

The Earlie Hill club of Hill street school held its meeting Friday, April 24. A creditable number were present.

Miss Harralson, the music director, visited the grades last week. She was pleased with all of the work. The fifth grade, under the leadership of the auditorium, received "Excellent."

Miss Pearl Osgood, director of physical culture, visited us last week. He spent most of his time with the grades that are to take part in the field day exercises.

The fifth grade, under the guidance of Miss Hubert, has begun to read the Scotch dances perfectly. They demonstrated this at a recent rehearsal before Mr. Osgood.

With the open summer air inviting to be out, the little boys are putting in extra hours. Many children are taking advantage of the grand opera matinees, etc., and expect to make a good report for the first week in May on them with three straight "fives" in three studies. Three were also to put over four more in the sixth inning of a game.

Scores by innings: R. H. E.
Fraser . . . . . 000 004 0—4 7 3
Hill . . . . . 045 000 0—15 15 0
Walker's players were highly elated to the entrance come in very handy some days, and they will be grateful to the looks of the toll.

It will be a pretty sight to see a flag was flying over our school. For three years no flag has ever sailed over the building. It will be flying on field day.

For the second time this season we defeated Fraser yesterday afternoon, again. The game was slow and fast, careless and accurate by turns, but with three straight "fives" in three innings, Walker was able to put over four more in the sixth inning of a game.

Scores by innings: R. H. E.
Fraser . . . . . 000 004 0—4 7 3
Hill . . . . . 045 000 0—15 15 0
Walker's players were highly elated to the entrance come in very handy some days, and they will be grateful to the looks of the toll.

In the league, composed of Formwalt, Peeples, Hill, Fraser, Walker and Battle Hill, we stand in third place, within one blow of second. Watch out for second and forward, for we're on our stride.

The Grammar league began its last round of play on Friday, the 24th. Four more games remain for us to play.

Our team has been organized in every line at field day. There will be a relay race and a baseball game in the general athletic contests.

The seventh and eighth graders will put on a relay race in the contest with the other schools.

The fifth grade will have their dance and it is sure to "make good" with the spectators.

Hill will play almost any team of their size if the challengers will play a return game. We would be challenged by calling during big recess, or by calling at Lamb's plantation and ask for Charlie Winburn. Our team ranges in age from 13 to 15.

CHARLES WINBURN.

Big Entertainment to Be Held at Close of School.

Our school has had a very pleasant visit from Mr. Slaton. His visit was much enjoyed.

Miss Haralson paid the eighth grade a visit and heard the songs that are to be sung at the concert. She was much pleased.

The fourth grade has laid in a new supply of flowers for spring. They have been set out in rows and in the window-boxes, which are looking very pretty.

The eighth grade, with the help of other children, is getting up a cantata for the entertainment at the close of school. The parts are represented as fairies and flowers, and I think it will be very pretty. Several other grades are getting up dialogues and songs. We hope to have a very pleasant entertainment.

The third grade had the highest average in attendance last week, 98.1. The attendance is not as good as usual on account of the whooping cough and mumps.

The fourth grade school are taking great interest in the marching for Memorial day. They practice every school day and march finely. They have a big bass drum and two kettle-drums.

The first grade B set a trap for mice, and Tuesday they caught one. They enjoyed the excitement very much.

The sixth grade is enjoying the drawing lessons on the old world. They have had several lessons and think it very interesting.

MIKE GIBBONS DECLARES SELF

St. Paul "Phantom" to Assume More Aggressive Tactics in Future—Ritchie Being Panned.

By JAMES J. CORBETT.
(Former Heavyweight Champion of the World.)

New York, April 25.—(Special.)—Mike Gibbons has again declared himself in the race for the middleweight title, according to reports from St. Paul, the "Phantom's" home town. Mike begins his campaign next Tuesday night at the Broadway Sporting club—the same place, by the way, where George Chip met his Waterloo with Johnny Howard, the Jersey middle or light heavy as his opponent.

Gibbons is said to be worrying now because Al McCoy refuses to acknowledge receipt of his communications requesting a match at the earliest convenience of the Brooklyn scrapper. Mike had Al in the ring with him several months ago and, though he did not put the K. O. over, those who saw the mill agreed that it was only through kindness on his part that McCoy stayed the limit.

Gibbons must realise now that he has been altogether too shy in pressing his championship claims. I have contended right along that Gibbons on all form outclassed the rest of the aspiring bunch of middleweights and Mike probably feels that way about it himself but about this time McCoy's knockout of Chip was the convince.

Likes Scientific.

This will not be the first time Gibbons has "declared" himself in on the championship thing. Mike has several times intimated that he was going right after the title, but somehow or other he never got very far. Eddie McGoorty is the only man Mike has boxed in recent years who appeared to have anything like a chance with the St. Paul expert, and considering his remarkable fighting ability, Mike's retiring disposition where the question of the title is concerned has always been a mystery to ring followers, the majority of whom regard him as the class of the division.

While Howard is considered a second-rater, so was Al McCoy, and it should be remembered that Johnny recently earned the popular verdict in a ten-round bout with Bob Moha. Howard is not especially clever; in fact, if he had been boxing a decade ago he would not be mentioned in the same breath with the middleweight stars of that day, but barring Gibbons, McAllister and McGoorty, he compares favorably with the rest of the middleweights in that respect.

It is to be hoped that Gibbons will profit by his experience and assume a more aggressive attitude in the future. As a championship possibility he appears to fill the bill and would unquestionably prove a title-holder the public would respect and have confidence in, but it requires more than the McCoys, Chips, Mohas and the rest. Mike is clever, two-handed fighter and represents the highest standard of ring craft as it is understood today.

Ritchie's Rights.

Those who are attempting to pick flaws in Willie Ritchie's claim to the lightweight title might, because the champion did not stop Tommy Murphy are taking the wrong stand. If ever a boxer was completely outclassed it was Murphy in the bout last week. That he stayed the limit is a tribute to Tommy's gameness and powers of endurance. From reports of the battle which have been sent to me by eye-witnesses, men who know the game backwards, I gather that Tommy put on one of the greatest exhibitions of gameness ever seen in the ring.

Tommy Murphy has been in the game a long time and is no easy mark for any lightweight—champion or near-champion. He took a terrible lacing from Ritchie and other topnotchers, coupled with his never-say-die spirit enabled him to entertain the opponent for twenty rounds. A less experienced fighter would probably have succumbed long before the limit. But Tommy knows every angle of the game, and when the gaff came into play he would stall and rest, and experienced fighters know what a few seconds' respite, grabbed here and there, means in a long bout to a man on the receiving end.

Murphy is entitled to praise for his exhibition of gameness and generalship and Ritchie for his splendid victory. Murphy was fit and Willie had been another night. Whether he will ever be able to come back after the beating he took is doubtful. He is about 35 years of age, and that is getting along pretty well from an athletic standpoint.

Leach Cross fought ten terrific rounds with Ritchie at Madison Square Garden last fall, and took a fierce lacing. But Leach has failed to accomplish very much since that battle. And I reckon the future will prove that last week's battle exhausted much of Murphy's store of stamina and endurance.

A Real Champion.

Willie Ritchie has proved himself a real champion. Since winning the title he has defended the lightweight cities with four of the acknowledged best boys in the American lightweight division. Of all the recent crop of lightweights there appears to be only two who might make the champion contend himself. One is the veteran, Jack Britton, and the other, Young Shugrue, at present on the way to Australia.

Freddy Welsh, the English title-holder, might outpoint Ritchie, but I doubt very much if even his great skill would avail in a twenty-round bout with the champion.

Joe Rivers' untested strength and punching powers proved unequal to the task of humiliating Freddy Welsh. Leach Cross believes that his wallop can accomplish what Rivers' failed to do. Anyway, next Tuesday night Freddy and Leach are to meet in a twenty-round bout, and even if Leach does lose, he will draw down a nice piece of change. And the probabilities are that he will have to be satisfied with the loser's end.

Rivers is a better boxer than Cross. He has several times proved that. Therefore, it is a pretty safe gamble that Cross will be beaten by the British champion. At the same time calculations are that the bout will go the limit. Welsh has never been noted as a knock-out artist, but it is certain that his punches will damage Cross very much. Good will overlook me if Leach will be his inability to land a damaging punch on the little Englishman's anatomy. Freddy is one of the finest boxers in the world, and ought to outpoint Cross over the route of the twenty. Barring the always possible chance of a "lucky" punch, Welsh does not appear to have a chance on earth to defeat Welsh.

Rivers v. Welsh.

Another lightweight bout that will attract considerable attention from fans the country over is that arranged between Joe Wolgast and Joe Rivers for the latter part of next month This match has been talked about ever since Ad won that questionable decision in thirteen rounds several years ago, and Mr. Vernon Stanley has staged the match at his Los Angeles club is approved by ring followers the country over.

While no championship hinges on this bout it should be an interesting exhibition, for all that, with Rivers trying hard to re-establish himself in the ranks of the top-notchers and Wolgast to earn a decisive victory to satisfy the public that he was entitled to that famous "decision" by Referee Jack Welsh in their former meeting. And it will be Rivers' chance to get the money if he falls before the Michigan wildcat. Joe has been slipping, in the estimation of fight fans, ever since Ritchie stopped him, and when Freddy Welsh made him look like a novice he passed out of the running for championship honors.

"Rocky Kansas."

In Buffalo the fans and critics are raving about a young pugilist who is called "Rocky Kansas." He is already regarded in the up-state metropolis as the coming featherweight champion. I have at hand a letter from a well-known sporting man telling me of his wonderful fighting skill and predicting a brilliant future for the youngster.

"Rocky" is a new one on me, but he must be the goods to make the Buffalonians go daffy over him. Clipping sent me tells how Kansas knocked Tommy Dreamhan out in two rounds, and while I don't know what Tommy's rating was before he fell before the onslaughts of the Buffalo boy, the feat, according to my worthy informant, entitles him to a match with Johnny Kilbane for the title.

No doubt the chances will be pleased to accommodate the young aspirant. That's Johnny's long suit—attending to inexperienced youngsters.

Playthings.

The streets are full of human toys,
Wound up for three score years!
Their springs are hungers, hopes and fears.

And jealousies and fears.
They move their arms, their lips, their hands;

They are marvelously dressed:
And here my body stirs or stranda,
A plaything like the rest.
The toys are played with till they fall
Worn out and thrown away.
Why were they ever made at all?
Who sits to watch the play?
—Edmund Gosse.

Galaxy of Georgia Beauties Who Will Be Sponsors and Maids Of Honor at the Approaching Reunion in Jacksonville, Fla.

Social Side of 1914 Confederate Reunion Will Be Unusually Elaborate.

Jacksonville, Fla., April 11.—(Special.)—With the assembling in Jacksonville on May 6 of the twenty-fourth annual reunion of the United Confederate Veterans, there will be gathered together simultaneously several hundred of the fairest daughters of Dixie. The calling together each spring of the veteran organization is the signal for the mobilization at the same time and place of the best blood in the social fabric of the south. The social side of the reunion this year is to be more elaborate than usual.

In recent years the reunion of the veterans has been moulded into a great social occasion. The belles of Dixie will be out this year in full force. Old soldiers who followed the gallant Lee from the shores of Appomattox, men who dared death and disaster upon a hundred fields, will bend the knee in homage to the young maids and sponsors—the beauty and chivalry of the south who had gathered to do them honor. The sponsors and their maids are the official ladies of the reunion.

The sons of Veterans, following in the footsteps of their fathers, held their reunions on the same dates. They also appoint sponsors and maids. These, together with the Daughters of the Confederacy, form a galaxy of womanhood that is unsurpassed anywhere in the world. The big reunion demonstration anywhere brings together so large a number of handsome and accomplished girls. These are always entertained by the city in which the reunion is held. There are always several hundred of them, and they all stand high in the social scale.

Mapping out a social program for a reunion is a difficult and pleasing task. All cities in which reunions are held vie with each other in the appointment of these social programs. There are dinners, receptions, teas and balls—and the crowning event of all, the annual ball for sponsors and maids. Nothing equaling a reunion ball in size and splendor can be seen in the United States unless it be the inauguration ball at the national capital, and these have latterly fallen into social desuetude.

The ladies who participate in these balls and their escorts are descendants of the men and women of that splendid time in the south which, during the war, was known and applauded around the world. No section of any country knew better how to entertain than the south in those days. It was a proud people, jealous of its traditions and of its knightly courtesy. It finally suffered as no other social system has suffered in the history of the world. Out of the wreck of that system the south has emerged with the same ideals under a new order, and the system can be studied to the best advantage than at a confederate reunion—which is the annual beauty show of the south.

This will be the first time that a reunion has ever been held in Florida city, and Jacksonville and the state are preparing to make the occasion one of pleasant memories. The hotel accommodations at Jacksonville can not be excelled anywhere in the south of similar size. All of the private residences have been thrown open to the visitors, and a city of tents in the warm southern metropolis will give protection to those who cannot be accommodated elsewhere. The business meetings of the veterans and associated bodies will be held in a vast auditorium. The weather in Florida in May is particularly delightful.

Realizing that the entertainment of the maids and sponsors will probably be the main feature of the reunions, Jacksonville is preparing to see to it that people at the time of their lives. There will not be a dull moment during the week of the veterans' reunion. It will be a carnival of pretty girls in a riot of flowers. With the idea uppermost a great flower festival is being arranged. It will be worth traveling hundreds of miles to see the beautiful collection of fair women on parade against the background of May blossoms in Florida.

Preventing House Flies.

Last summer I visited a community, and one of the first things I noticed was the small number of house flies. Upon investigation I found the reason why this neighborhood elected to put up with millions and flies than usual.

When the first fly showed up there were fly-paper, fly-traps and fly swatters waiting to get him. The folks said they saved the battle by getting the early flies.

I found all doors and windows screened, traps about the kitchen door and near the stables, all rags and rubbish kept burned, and no flies.

The neighbors kept the manure in fly-proof closets and the manure pits sprinkled with a small snowfall of chloride of lime. The manure closets were screened where there were windows left for ventilation purposes.

Since the flies breed in the stable more than elsewhere, those progressive farmers cleaned the stable every day and sprinkled lime on the floors.

The results of these clean conditions about the homes had been a reduction in the typhoid fever in the community, as well as lessening other worries occasioned by the pest. The physicians are authority for the statement.

Moral: Get the first fly when he arrives, and maybe you'll save having to bother with the second one.—Charles W. Casther, Lavon, Texas.

Burden of Wars.

(From The Indianapolis Star.)

Turn the pages of literature and you will find for every tribute to the heroic dead a cry of protest against the sword. In Mrs. Browning's beautiful Mother and Poet, she says that some day the women will refuse to continue these sacrifices; the inspired vision of Shelley produced a passionate and almost continuous protest against war; it was Cowper who suggested that when subjects became wise enough the power of kings in this respect would be curtailed; our American poets besought the reign of universal peace, even while they honored the martyred dead and the eulogist, of Wellington and Nelson is the same who foresaw the day

When the war dreams beat no longer
And the battlefields are furled
In the parliament of man, the federation of the world.

Somebody will show us one of these days how we can ask release from the burdens of war without seeming to relax our loyalty to the dead and gone; somebody will point the way how the heroic spirit of military patriotism and sacrifice may be turned with equal nobleness and far higher beneficence into search for lives to be saved instead of to be destroyed; somebody will take the lead in compelling rulers to use the brief authority with which they are clothed for the promotion of peace instead of strife and life instead of death. Is no more sure and splendid way could it be brought to pass that these dead shall not have died in vain.

Why the Wall Street Man Fails.

(From Collier's Weekly.)

Let us take up the so-called Wall street man first. Clearly to understand why he fails for the buccaneer with an easy conscience is almost beyond belief you must realize that he is controlled by two strong influences that contribute largely to his fate.

First, he is perhaps the most credulous of intelligent persons; second, a man interested or allied with the shifting hazards of the stock market must keep on playing some sort of game. It is wine to his blood; the very taste of life.

Take this quality of credulity, queer strain in the make-up of men whose daily work demands keenness of mind and swiftness of action, and find its cause. It is in the air they breathe.

Long experience has proved that anybody can make Wall street believe anything, if in the course of the rally rumor, favorite stamping ground of liars and unfounded report. The wonder all these years has been that men who in a definite financial operation would resort to the most stringent investigation not only accept rumors as gospel truth, but refuse to act on them without the slightest inquiry.

If a broker, for instance, casually mentioned that he heard that the president of the United States had gone insane or that the supreme court had been corrupted or that Mr. Baker had Mr. Schiff had fought on the corner of Broad and Wall streets, it would be taken up at once as a definite fact by a score of other brokers and before you knew it the news, as an actual happening, would be traveling like wildfire, a reliq up and down the seas, and the chances are that prices would be affected. No one would stop to make sober investigation as to the truth of the wildest of gossip.

The skillful manipulator of the type of the late James R. Keene, whose business was to make and unmake markets, found the rumor a very useful asset. He enlisted rumor and press to gain his ends. All that he had to do was to set a report in motion. The rest was why the Wall street man is credulous.

HAIR-LINE VICTORY OF SINGLE POINT MARGIN

Koji Yamada, the Japanese, Noses Out Schaefer in the Billiard Tourney.

New York, April 25.—A hair-line victory of a single point margin by Koji Yamada over Jacob Schaefer in one of the two games played here tonight for the world's professional 14.1 balk line billiard championship, closed a contest in which the ghost of the late Chicago wizard proved that he possesses a great deal of his parent's skill. The Japanese expert, with two to go for the game in the twenty-third inning, scored only one carom. Schaefer's total was 500. The Chicago lad ran 113. Then he, too, had only to make a single count for the game, but he failed by a hair's breath on a long attempt, and Yamada scored the four hundredth and winning carom.

In the other match, Ora Morningstar scored his second win of the day, and George Sutton became a double loser.

Tonight's scores:

Yamada 400, average 16 14-34; high runs, 113, 56, 43.

MEXICAN NEWSPAPERS SUSPENDED AT LAREDO

Laredo, Texas, April 25.—El Guarda del Bravo, a Mexican paper published here in the interests of the Huerta government, was suspended today by order of District Judge Mullally and Mayor McComb.

For months past Priscellano Aldama, publisher, has been printing veiled attacks on the American government, which have been overlooked, but today he published a bitter attack on the American government as responsible for all the troubles with which Mexico is now and has been afflicted. A committee informed the authorities that if the latter did not put a stop to the continued attacks the citizens of Laredo would.

The Old Fellows Are Learning.

A good friend said the other day: "There's no use worrying over us old fellows. We are set in our ways. Bringing your time on the young folks and try to get them interested in better ways of farming and living."

This morning, despite our friend's pessimism, we find evidence almost every day that the older men on our southern farms are giving the young fellows a pretty good chase in the race for progress. Many of them are seeking the spirit of Thomas A. Edison, now 67 years old, who said the other day: "I expect to do my greatest work in years to come. I am just in the state of learning and my accomplishments will come later."

Thousands of farmers whose school advantages were poor have educated themselves by reading good papers. Even the old men who have not been able to read and write are learning in a hard way. Thousands of them have learned in the moonlight schools in Kentucky, and we hope this movement is going to sweep over the south. We saw an old lady recently who learned to read after she had eleven children. Only today we heard of a man who educated himself by studying along with his growing children. And here is a letter now before us which breathes the same sort of helpful partnership between young and old—where youth helps age, and age helps youth. The writer says:

"Please send me a receipt book for taking subscriptions for The Progressive Farmer. If I can do you any favor I am going to do it. I want to see if I can get you a few men in the county to read it if I can. I cannot read it myself, but my boy of 13 years can read it for me, and he enjoys doing it, because he likes it and says that when he goes into business he is going to have it in his home. He loves to work on the farm."

The old fellows are coming on all right, and some of the young ones will have to hustle to get out of their way yet!

Wanted—A Miracle.

(From Collier's Weekly.)

Two or three years ago a Frenchman wrote a novel founded on this idea: Christ returns to earth and visits Paris. His personality has a tremendous influence. Long articles, editorials and various modern miracles are published. Finally he vanishes. Newspapers crowded with news and advertisements appear next morning almost blank. The only lie contained in them has miraculously faded into blank paper. What would happen if a miracle of this sort occurred in Tacoma, Wash., and what would be left of The Ledger-Tribune? A reader of ours put out there sends us a marked copy containing thirty-four patent medicine advertisements, many of them making ridiculously excessive claims. Incidentally, it is a striking feature of the present day reaction against patent medicine fakery that it is the columns of newspapers who do the protesting against these advertisements. When will enlightened publishers realize that it pays to be good?

The same steam engine has been pumping the water out of a coal mine in England for more than one hundred years.

Litmus Paper.

What is litmus paper, which you use to use to ascertain acidity? Litmus paper is paper saturated with a substance called litmus. It is mainly made in Holland, and the litmus is from a lichen—the Lecanora Tartarea. It naturally makes the paper red, but is changed to blue with ammonia. Then the blue, when put in acid substances in the presence of moisture, turns the paper back to red. And the red paper put in alkaline material turns blue. I do not think that the exact chemistry of litmus is well known even to chemists.—W. F. Massey, in The Progressive Farmer.

FIFTH IS ANXIOUS TO GO TO MEXICO

Captain Wynne Will Begin Enlisting Men at Auditorium Today—Early Election of Officers Called.

In wartime, a young man's thoughts lightly turn to Mexico.

Ready to move and anxious to get under arms is the situation today among 800 or 1,000 Atlanta boys—members of the national guard—although no orders of a war nature have been received by the commanding officers.

But a significant feature of the military activities Saturday was the announcement by Colonel Orville H. Hall, commanding the Fifth regiment, that the election of an major to fill the vacancy caused by the promotion of Lieutenant Colonel Hendrix will be held on the first Monday in May instead of three weeks later, on the date originally selected.

Report of Mobilization.

Quietly, the report spread among national guardsmen that Colonel Hall has been given the tip that within a few days Atlanta's own Fifth will be ordered mobilized in camp and equipped and prepared to go to Mexico.

The vacancies to be filled are major of second battalion, caused by the promotion of Major Hendrix to lieutenant colonel; second lieutenant in company A, caused by the resignation of Lieutenant Wynne; lieutenant in company M, caused by transfer of Lieutenant Quillian to the sanitarium corps.

Colonel Hall stated Saturday that he has ordered Captain Don R. Wynne, staff officer, to begin enlisting the men at the auditorium Monday. Sundry company captains have been urging the men to enlist, and according to reports a number have declared that they will enlist immediately, and a number of others will fall in when orders are received.

Will Enlist 20 Men.

Captain Hartlaub, of the German company, will enlist twenty men. It might be stated here that Captain Hartlaub is a veteran of the Spanish-American war, and is itching for a chance to take a whack at Huerta. Captain Leahy has already enlisted ten men, and company C has seven ready to answer the call at once. Company B is said to have three volunteer enlistments.

According to Colonel Hall, the Fifth will enlist between 800 and 1,000 men and officers, also a company of fifteen scouts, artificers, hostlers, farriers and others

A "Dangerous Business."

(From The Kansas City Star.)

This phrase may have caught your eye: "The dangerous business of being a baby."

It is the most dangerous business in the world. No regiment of soldiers ever charged a battery of such dangers as many thousands of regiments of little children face. The pitiful "Children's Crusade" that melted away in the eastern forests—back there in the middle ages—was its counterpart today for ever and ever so many babies.

Hinmer describes one of his heroes as having all the courage of a fly. John Ruskin has a most delectable comment on the simile. The utter fearlessness that comes from utter ignorance of fear, from utter ignorance of danger—no lion has it, no Richard has it. But the fly has it, and the Greek god-hero, and the little baby of the slums.

Al Baldava "someone had blundered." They are blunders that make this dangerous business of being a baby so needlessly dangerous. What better orders can be given by the civilization that rules the fate of children than to countermand the blunders of the past?

John Hyams and Lelia McIntyre may star again next season in "The Girl of My Dreams."

GLASS OF SALTS IF YOUR KIDNEYS HURT

Eat Less Meat If You Feel Backachy or Have Bladder Trouble.

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve you like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to go two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.

Views of Vera Cruz Seized by United States

1. VERA CRUZ. 2. CATHEDRAL AND PUBLIC SQUARE.

The entire Fifth brigade, comprising the Fourth, Seventh, Nineteenth and Twenty-eighth infantry, has been ordered to embark on transports at Galveston for Vera Cruz. The transports were loaded with rations and supplies for 10,000 men for thirty days. They will go to Vera Cruz and will probably be brought into Tampico if the Mexico City if invasion results. Vera Cruz will undoubtedly prove the center of American operations in Mexico. It is the chief seaport of the republic and is the key to Mexico City, being connected with the capital city by two lines of railroad.

ANGLEY AND HEADLONY.

(Lists will be published Monday.)

It Pays to Use Good Seed.

(Felix Williams, in The Progressive Farmer.)

It is hard to over-estimate the value of well-bred seed. I used to read of the great difference in yield of the different varieties of corn and cotton, stories generally written by the seedsmen, and think, Oh, it's all in the attention he gives his pet patches.

It may be that we have dishonest seedsmen who claim unmerited things for their seed, but we had as well get down to "brass tacks." We lose millions every year through poor, unimproved seed. I had this fact of good seed demonstrated a few years ago in this way: I had a two-acre field adjoining two other fields, all the same grade of land and all fertilized alike and cultivated alike. The two-acre field was planted with seed cotton which had been bred up by individual plant selection by a man who had a definite idea, and he had worked years in doing it. The other two fields were planted with seed said to be pure-bred, which had simply been kept separate and ginned on a gin where every conceivable variety had been ginned. I saw that the two acres of well-bred seed was going to make a lot more, so I measured off the same amount of ground in the other two fields. The two acres of specially selected seed produced 1,525 pounds of lint cotton; the two acres of unimproved seed produced 900 pounds of lint cotton, a difference of 12½ pounds per acre in favor of the specially selected seed.

Every farmer, by taking time and pains, can improve his pure-bred variety of cotton, so that it will make a difference something like this. Figure it out for yourself. If all my cotton planted in the best seed I would have been a thousand dollars better off that fall than I was by planting the kinds I did.

Congress and Its Powers.

(From The Omaha Bee.)

With all the complaint of the growing tendency of the executive encroachment upon legislative functions and prerogatives, congress is not wholly blameless for the dissipation of its powers. Its policy of delegating authority to boards and commissions of wide, sometimes even sweeping regulatory power must be considered, together with the infringement of the executive to get at a real analysis of the situation. Congress, undoubtedly, would be ready with explanations and defenses in behalf of its position, yet the fact remains that it cannot keep its normal interest powers and at the same time delegate them to such agencies as it may create.

A New York publication cites several such investments recently made by congress, the effect of which is to diminish, if not weaken, its own resident power. For example, it delegates power to the treasury department over importers, a right of espionage to the postoffice department over the mails, railroad regulation to the interstate commerce commission, sweeping powers of a similar character to the new trade commission, and so on. Now, all this represents a process of subtraction, which congress sustains only at a direct loss to itself. It seems wholly inconsistent, therefore, for its members to continue to remonstrate so loudly against executive usurpation so long as they, themselves, are equal offenders.

Out of a Furnace Alive.

While fighting a fire at the John Deaton foundry early this morning Dan Stafford, an Atchison fireman, fell head first through the roof of a core furnace and was rescued alive by fellow firemen. The entombed man called for help, and his brother, acting fire chief, hurried down the ladder and opened the furnace door, less than 19 inches square, through which coal is fed into the furnace. A mass of red coals were piled all around Stafford, and he was compelled to crowl over them to reach the little door through which he escaped. Twice he fell on the coals, and his forehead and arms were burned severely. It is believed he will recover without permanent injury.

REBELS WILL NOT FIGHT UNITED STATES TROOPS

They Will Retreat Before They Will Engage in Conflict.

Brownsville, Texas, April 25.—In an interview with American Consul J. H. Johnson at Matamoras late today, Major Ricaut, a nephew of General Venustiano Carranza, and his personal representative, declared the rebels would evacuate Matamoros rather than engage in warfare with the United States.

Major Ricaut stated that the constitutionalists in the event of declaration of war, would leave their wives and children to the mercy of American soldiers.

General Carranza instructed Major Ricaut to assure Consul Johnson of an escort to the border should hostilities between the United States and Mexico begin.

General Carranza's agent said that the general had great faith in the honor and justice of President Wilson and that he did not believe the president had any desire to wage strife against the Mexican people. Consul Johnson made the statements of Major Ricaut the basis of a report to the state department at Washington, which he forwarded tonight.

Quiet prevails at Matamoros tonight. Nobody is allowed to pass in or out of the city after midnight.

A Suggestion to Opportunity.

(From Collier's Weekly.)

When opportunity, hot-footing by,
Knocks on the door of bowl and of hat,
Sometimes he gives a gentle "rat-tat-tat,"
As soft as air—as noiseless as a sigh,
And far within some boy with bulging eye
Reads on of presidents unstirred whereat
Old Opp. with vigor grabs a baseball bat
And bangs the next door once—ere he can fly,
The boy within has seized him with a cry,
"Sign me," he pleads; "I'd give my neck to try
That big league game. Just watch my spitter hop!
I've got more speed, too, than that Johnson guy.
Think of the pennants I can help
Why can't the old chap try a louder knock
Upon the presidential brand of boys!

One Australian ranchman is stated to have about 250,000 cattle and 500,000 sheep.

The world's production of pig iron in 1913 is estimated at 76,500,000 tons, a new high record.

If You Take Too Much Calomel You Will Bring On Rheumatism

Calomel Attacks the Bones and Develops a Painful Mercurial Rheumatism.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is better than calomel. And every dose of calomel that you take is putting mercury into your system, and mercury is a powerful chemical which attacks the bones and causes a gradual wasting away, necrosis of the bone, or mercurial rheumatism, the most painful and the most dangerous form of rheumatism.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT beats calomel every way. It contains no mercury; it flushes the intestinal canal and bowels and cleanses them of all sourness and undigested waste; and it dissolves the uric acid poison which has generated from the fermenting food that has lain in the stomach, and passes it off in the urine, thus removing the cause, which has poisoned the blood and clogged the liver and the liver itself resumes its normal activity.

The action of JACOBS' LIVER SALT is quick and mild. It contains the same sulphates that are in the system to digest food, stimulating their deficiency, and consequently it combines easily with the juices of the stomach and acts naturally, without griping, nausea or vomiting.

We claim that JACOBS' LIVER SALT is the best liver stimulant made. If you are bilious it will cure you. If you are well, take it and keep well, for everyone's liver is apt to get sluggish occasionally, and prevention is always better than cure. A glass of JACOBS' LIVER SALT EFFERVESCENT WATER before breakfast is a fine every morning habit—try it. One-half pound jar, 25c. Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta, Ga., and all druggists.—(adv.)

The Crisis in Japan.

(From The Philadelphia Ledger.)

So little is understood of the inner workings of the Japanese mind that a deliberate attempt at interpreting the ministerial crisis in that country would be rash, yet the resignation of the Yamamoto ministry, and the long interregnum which has only just culminated in the choice by the elder statesmen of Count Okuma for the premiership, would appear to be the direct result of the popular condemnation of the ruling officials for their part in the naval scandals.

If it is safe at all to judge by western parallels, the fall of the cabinet is in direct obedience to public opinion, which deeply resented the implication of high naval officials in corruption in the award of contracts, and upheld the two houses of the diet in reducing the estimates. The situation has been greatly complicated by the conflict between the house of peers and the house of representatives, both apparently bent upon rebuking the cabinet, but unable to agree upon the terms of the sentence or want of confidence.

Japan, like France, possesses a two-chambered legislature, each branch of which has equal control over finances, but, unlike France, the upper branch is apt to exercise its constitutional rights to revise budgets. This conflict between the two houses served to delay for a time the surrender of the cabinet to the popular demand, but the failure to compose the differences in parliament and the popular disorders forced the culmination of the crisis.

Divorce and Delinquency.

(From The Cleveland Plain Dealer.)

A close connection between divorce and juvenile delinquency is indicated in a recent report by Superintendent Hastings, of the boys' school at Lancaster, analyzing the work of the institution for the past year. Forty per cent of the boys committed to the school, he finds, come from homes that have been broken up by divorce.

Sometimes, however, the superintendent believes, the courts themselves have been in large measure at fault. He says he has found repeated cases where the judge should not have committed the child, but should have exercised his authority to enforce parental responsibility. Too often, he points out, parents have used the courts to relieve themselves of the care and expense of their own children.

He offers the suggestion that juvenile courts be given their present powers in large part to make it possible to call delinquent parents to account. These powers were included, and in most cases are used, for the protection of childhood; certainly not for the relief of parenthood of its just obligations. But instances where the court has failed to grasp the situation rightly are frequent enough, Mr. Hastings thinks, to justify a protest.

Elsie Janis is to appear in London in a new musical review, called "The Passing Show." In this piece she will give her imitations.

TURN GRAY HAIR DARK WITH Q-BAN

Not Greasy or Messy—Harmless—Darkens Naturally and Evenly.

That old-time hair remedy, Q-Ban Hair Color Restorer, for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair, and folks are using it to keep their hair a good, dark, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage. Q-Ban Hair Color Restorer is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied, as Q-Ban darkens the hair so evenly and naturally. Simply rub Q-Ban, like a shampoo, on hair and scalp on retiring, and the gray disappears, but what delights everybody with Q-Ban is that besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft luster and appearance of abundance which makes the hair so attractive and fascinating; besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair. Mrs. Smythe's Luncheon.

Mrs. Robert Adger Smythe entertained fifty ladies at a beautiful luncheon yesterday in honor of Mrs. Francis O'Neill, of Charleston, and Mrs. Carrington.

The party assembled at 1 o'clock, and were received in the drawing room; the perfume of summer flowers and their colors expressed in roses, snap dragons and iris, made a charming atmosphere.

Luncheon was served the ladies in small parties in the living room and dining room. In the dining room the table from which the sweets were served had an artistic decoration in pink snap dragons and iris. They filled baskets, and the same flowers were in vases on the buffet and serving table. The bonbons were in pink and the ices reflected the same color.

A delicious menu was served, and it was far into the afternoon when the ladies said adieu to their charming hostess. Mrs. Smythe wore a handsome toilet in pink taffetas with trimmings of lace. MRS. THEODORE MORGAN STEPHENS AND MISS ELLIOTT JOHNSON, Popular members of Atlanta's musical circle.

MARIETTA, GA.

Mrs. Owens Johnson entertained her Forty-two club at her hospitable home on Whitlock avenue. There were several visitors present. Mrs. Willis Milner, Jr., of Atlanta; Mrs. Gilmore, of Chicago, who is staying with Mrs. Estes, and Mrs. S. H. Hall. After an interesting game, dainty and delicious refreshments were served.

Miss Nina Moon gave a linen shower for Miss Irene Northcutt on Wednesday, the 14th, which was quite a pleasant occasion. Green and white were used as the schems for decorating. A white parasol formed the center piece of the round table, from which lilies of the valley were suspended. Green candles and white and green mints assisted in carrying out the idea. A pair of "Kewpies" dressed as bride and groom was also a unique feature. A salad course with sherbert was served when the "shower" was over. An imaginary journey through the cities to be visited on the bridal tour was cleverly arranged. A delightful time was spent.

Quite the most beautiful event of the blossoming spring season was the marriage Thursday evening of Miss Irene Northcutt and Mr. Harold Hawkins at the Baptist church at 8 o'clock. The ceremony was performed by the pastor, Rev. G. S. Tumlin, in the presence of a large number of friends of the happy pair. The bridal party entered to the strains of the bridal chorus from Lohengrin, played by Miss Maude Foster on the organ, assisted by Mr. George Bonnyman, on the violin. The bride, who was attired in duchess satin, trimmed in lace and tulle and wearing a veil adjusted with orange blossoms, came in with her father, Mr. E. W. Northcutt, who bestowed her in marriage. The bridegroom, with his best man, Mr. George Edwards entered from the pastor's study. The matron-of-honor, Mrs. Grady Conway, wore white duchess satin; Miss Mary Marsten, the maid-of-honor, wore light blue crepe meteor, and the bride's maids, who were Misses Pauline Collins and Edna Barrett, were dressed respectively in pink and blue crepe meteor. The groomsmen were Messrs. William Holland, Alvan Smith and Norman Coffins. Elizabeth Northcutt and Mary Frances Northcutt, the small nieces of the bride, acted as flower girls and Douglas Northcutt, her little brother, bore the ring in a lily. Preceding the ceremony, Mrs. Ralph Northcutt sang, "I Love You Truly," accompanied by Miss Foster and Mr. Hardeman, and Schumann's "Traumerei" was softly played during the ceremony.

The ushers were Messrs. Grady Conway, Ralph Northcutt, Lindley Camp and Roy Lovingood. Mendelssohn's wedding march was played as the bridal party left the church.

A reception was given the wedding party, relatives and intimate friends at the home of the bride's parents on Church street. Mrs. Montgomery, Miss Hall, Mrs. Len Baldwin and Miss Nina Moon assisted in entertaining the guests.

The young ladies serving in the dining room were Misses Jean Wallace, Alice Wellons, Rosa Willingham, Virginia Barnes, Helen Lewis, Matt Black, Anna May Jones and Hooper Wilds.

Miss Ethel Irene Moore and Mr. Pat Dobbins were married at the Methodist parsonage last Monday evening by Rev. C. W. Duval, and are at home for the present with the bride's sister, Mrs. Dempsey Medford. The bride is a young lady of sweet and amiable disposition and the groom is a sterling young business man. Their many friends wish them much happiness.

One of the pretty pre-nuptial entertainments given Miss Irene Northcutt was that at which Misses Anna May Jones and Matt Black were the joint hostesses. Lilacs and wistaria were used as decorations. The game of hearts furnished entertainment, after which dainty refreshments were served.

Mrs. Will Stephens entertained the Northcutt-Hawkins bridal party after rehearsal Tuesday evening.

Miss Helen Lewis entertained a large number of 6th Mrs. S. R. Dull as teacher. noon, April 15th, the occasion being a tea in honor of her friend, Miss Irene Northcutt, a bride-elect. The lovely wistaria, lilacs, and violets formed the decorations, and green candles with purple rosettes were used. Silver dishes upon lace mats held green and purple mints and nuts. A "kewpie" arranged as a bride formed the center piece, surrounded with lilies of the valley and wistaria blossoms. The guests were met at the door by Misses Minnie Lou McDaniel and Sarah Patton. Misses Lewis, Miss Northcutt and Miss Mary Marsten presided over the punch bowl. The prize in a guessing contest, a bisque kewpie, was won by the rare honoree, while the booby went to Mrs. W. M. Murray.

Katherine DuPre distributed tiny golden slippers to the guests as souvenirs of the happy occasion.

Punch was served from an immense bowl, decorated in grapes. By Mrs Harry DuPre. The girls assisting in the dining room were Misses Hooper Wilds, Rosa Willingham, Jean Wallace, Alice Wellons, and Mamie Pearce.

A skin you love to touch

Why it is so rare

A skin you love to touch is rarely found because so few people understand the skin and its needs.

Begin now to take your skin seriously.

You can make it what you would love to have it by using the following treatment regularly.

Make this treatment a daily habit

Just before retiring, work up a warm water lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and rub it into the skin gently until the skin is softened, the pores opened and the face feels fresh and clean. Rinse in cooler water, then apply cold water—the colder the better—for a full minute. Whenever possible, rub your face for a few minutes with a piece of ice. Always dry the skin thoroughly.

Use this treatment persistently for ten days or two weeks and your skin will show a marked improvement. Use Woodbury's regularly thereafter, and before long your skin will take on that finer texture, that greater freshness and clearness of "a skin you love to touch."

Woodbury's Facial Soap is the work of a skin specialist. It costs 25c a cake. No one hesitates at the price after their first cake.

Do this today—Now! Tear out the illustration of the cake below and put it in your purse as a reminder to get Woodbury's. Tear out the cake now. Take it to your druggist or toilet counter today. Begin tonight to get the benefits of this Facial soap. For sale by dealers everywhere.

GRAND OPERA.

With the opening tomorrow night of Atlanta's fifth consecutive season of grand opera there comes the climax to one of the most brilliant chapters written in the history of any American municipality.

The greatness and destiny of a city are not measured exclusively by population or by wealth.

These two factors are indispensable to any growth of truly metropolitan proportions.

More important still, is the spirit back of these factors, the spirit of daring and achievement, the civic spirit with the imagination to dream colossal dreams and the courage to work them out in actuality.

Atlanta has dreamed, and made come true, a vision never materialized by any other city of her size in the world.

Atlanta saw several years ago the possibility of inaugurating here what a city of Atlanta's class had never before attempted —a season of grand opera, with the world's most famous artists singing in repertoire, directed by the world's most eminent conductors, playing on a stage set with scenery straight from the institution in New York that represents the apex of the operatic art in America.

Nowhere outside of the greatest cities on the continent had such an experiment been launched.

The first guarantee fund was quickly subscribed, and every subscriber was prepared to make good his part of the deficit that was expected.

But for the first time in the history of grand opera in America, even including New York, it was unnecessary to draw on the subsidy fund. The impossible in the world of music and entertainment had been accomplished.

The following seasons duplicated the first, on an ascending scale.

Each season was staged on a larger scope, with greater pretension.

And with each season the people of Atlanta and of the south outside the expectations of the public-spirited men who first blazed the trail.

The season to open tomorrow night will fix new precedents in every direction.

Box office receipts give assurance that the attendance will reach high-water mark.

It is drawn from rank and file in Atlanta, from every class in the southern states and from states outside of the south.

In artistic finish and social brilliance, the season will eclipse any of its predecessors.

It is no wonder that, under these conditions, the Metropolitan Opera company, with its world-famed casts, should enthuse perennially over the return to Atlanta. It is no wonder that Otto H. Kahn, chairman of the board of directors of the Metropolitan, New York millionaire and art connoisseur, impressed by Atlanta's achievement, should have laid down the rule that thecoforth the company would play in repertoire in Atlanta and New York only.

The Constitution extends a cordial welcome to the distinguished guests who will throng Atlanta through the week.

UNDER WHICH FLAG?

Every element that combines to make progress and prosperity in Atlanta has lined up under the flag of Greater Grady hospital.

On the first page today Cartoonist Gregg puts the issue with obvious emphasis.

All of the doctors of all the schools of medicine, the men whose business it is to safeguard life and health—

Are for Greater Grady.

All of the club women, the wives, the mothers in every walk of life—

Are for Greater Grady.

All the business men, who look at health from the dollars and cents standpoint—

Are for Greater Grady.

The organized real estate men of Atlanta—

Are for Greater Grady.

All the religious creeds, Protestant, Catholic and Hebrew, the leaders of which know the connection between a sound body and a sound spirit—

Are for Greater Grady.

The Federation of Labor, representing organized labor in Atlanta, and mindful of the value of an adequate municipal hospital to the working man—

Is for Greater Grady.

All the civic, charitable and philanthropic organizations, whose efforts are expanded by the acid-test of efficiency—

Are for Greater Grady.

All the responsible negro leaders, who know how vital is the bearing of hospital facilities upon the interlocking health of both races—

Are for Greater Grady.

One feature alone of the sordid inadequacy of Grady, the disgraceful quarters for faithful trained nurses, justifies the bond issue. A committee of unbiased college women visited Grady and inspected the nurses' quarters. One of them said, "It's awful for women to have to live in such places. To look at their living quarters you'd think the nurses at the hospital had committed some crime and were being punished for it, instead of being members of the noblest profession women can enter."

The indictment is understated. Some states would not house their convicts where these nurses are compelled to live.

The people who make the "Atlanta spirit," who make Atlanta's destiny, are united under the flag of Greater Grady.

Can any citizen of Atlanta afford to ally himself against Grady and under the flag of a swollen death rate?

A HISTORIC WEEK.

The week just passed is likely to rank as epochal in political history on this hemisphere.

The Mexican crisis, so long and rightously deferred, has broken.

The event itself is subsidiary to a score of collateral considerations which must date their occurrence from the day we invested Vera Cruz.

The reprisals aimed at Huerta mean the supreme end, let us hope, the final application of the Monroe doctrine.

America is paramount on this hemisphere.

As the custodian on this side of the world of free institutions, her responsibilities in Latin-America have been constant and inescapable.

If many, if not all, of the governments to the south of us are not now European dependencies it is through no valor or foresight on their own part. Their status today is due solely to the courageous persistence with which the United States has held that no alien power should set up sovereignty on this hemisphere.

With the enunciation and enforcement of that principle, came definite obligations.

If we would not allow European powers to intervene in protection of their own citizens, the duty of policeman of Latin-America came more sharply home to us.

If we do not covet and do not care to annex one foot of Mexican territory, it is none the less certain that we cannot allow anarchy, chaos and organized murder to rage at our doors; insults to our dignity and flag to go unwhipped; Mexico or any other nation, large or small, to misinterpret tolerance for weakness.

The application of all these principles underlie the occupation of Vera Cruz.

It is possible the task, thus begun, cannot easily be completed.

It is not inconceivable that all Mexico may unite against us, confronting us with a tedious and costly guerrilla warfare of years' duration.

It is equally possible that reason may prevail in the north of Mexico, to the end that the United States will be permitted, unincumbered, to discharge its duty in the southern part.

In any event, the United States has prepared itself.

We are ready to restore order with the co-operation of the Mexicans, or minus their co-operation, if that job is thrust upon us.

When the ugly and complicated chapter shall finally have been written, it will be seen that the United States has determinedly upheld its political sovereignty on this side of the world.

THE Y. W. C. A.

One of the most remarkable civic campaigns in the history of Atlanta has just concluded with an addition of one thousand new members to the Young Women's Christian association.

For ten days representative women of Atlanta have been fine-toothcombing the city in the determination to increase the strength of this splendid organization.

The upset number they gave themselves was 1,000 new members.

Already they have secured a new roster far in advance of that figure.

The eventual purpose of the campaign is to broaden the membership of the Y. W. C. A. preliminary to a campaign for making this institution mean to Atlanta what it means to other cities of Atlanta's size and wealth.

The friends of the movement recognize that the working girl in Atlanta does not have the fair chance and the equal show for self-improvement given the working boy.

They know that the perils, actual and potential, that confront her are greater.

Many softening and protecting influences are thrown around the boys, but are not available for the girls.

The boys have open to them many opportunities for advancement, in the way of learning trades in odd hours, of reading, of mental and of physical culture.

The girls have enjoyed a minimum only of these privileges.

The idea of the promoters of the Greater Y. W. C. A. is to remove this inadvertent discrimination, inadvertent because it has grown up out of failure to recognize the needs of Atlanta in this respect.

There has been no fanfare of trumpets about this campaign, no element of the spectacular.

It has just gone steadily forward to success, results speaking louder than assertion.

What Atlanta women can do when they put their strength and heart behind any cause is pertinently illustrated in this one successful civic venture.

FROM POPPY TO COTTON.

According to Richard Spillane, writing in The American Review of Reviews, the south's long-vaunted international cotton production supremacy has at last been successfully challenged by the world. Mr. Spillane says that in the season of 1912-13 the south raised approximately two-thirds of all the cotton grown in the world. The season of 1913-14 is likely to see the south's proportion of the world's supply driven down to 50 per cent or even lower. If that were all, the situation would not be so menacing, thinks Mr. Spillane. But he says that the phenomenal outside increase in cotton production is only a forerunner of still further increases which may, unless the south takes steps in time, shake its fundamental agricultural industry to the very foundations.

China is the country that has, in a manner of speaking, "put a spoke in the wheel" of the south's boasted monopoly. And she has done so in a manner nothing short of dramatic. Cotton has been produced in China for about 1,000 years. But so vagrant and unreliable have been statistics from the big nation that the Chinese crop until a few years ago has not been considered as a serious factor in the world's cotton production.

Things now are changed. Last season China produced nearly five and a half millions of bales of 500 pounds each. That is nearly a million increase in a year. The national ban upon opium is the cause of the recent tremendous increase. Formerly a tremendous percentage of China's arable land was devoted to cultivation of the poppy, since opium with China was almost as staple a cash product as cotton with the south. Then came the edict that China must throw off the chains of opium, and with it the eventual mandate that death was to be the portion of the Chinese farmer who grew the poppy for commercial purposes after a stipulated term.

The acres formerly devoted to the poppy have been given over to cotton. As the Chinese find the profit in cotton, and as they perfect themselves in its cultivation, it is probable they will increase their crop indefinitely. In the meantime, France is moving to subsidize cotton-growing in Morocco. England long has pursued that course. The Indian and the Russian crops are increasing.

Mr. Spillane points out that if the south's challenged supremacy is to be held, three courses are indicated:

1. Stopping the grievous and unscientific waste in picking, marketing and shipping cotton, ranging between forty to fifty million dollars a year.

2. Lowering the expense of production, by intensive and intelligent methods and more reliable labor, by mechanical devices, such as cotton picking machinery and other labor-saving and expediting processes.

3. Diversification of crops in the southern [redacted].

All three of these changes should be made, whether a pound of cotton is raised outside of this country. The menace of foreign competition ought to hasten their application. And there is no time to lose. We are entering the era of the keenest industrial and economic competition in the world's history. If the south is not to lose one of its foremost assets, it must straightway set its agricultural house in order.

This time John Ling said a few things—in a whisper; but his voice was powerful enough to move battleships.

Says the Florida Times-Union: "When a man does something in England they call him 'Sir.' Up in Georgia they call him 'Colonel.'"

The Sun of Tomorrow.

I'm not for the summing
Of sorrow.
Sighing that Joy takes his flight;
I think of the sun of tomorrow,
And pass from the grief of tonight.
In the depths of the shadow I borrow
A blessing of bloom and of light.

II.

Not to a cross am I clinging
While the light beckons on—ever on;
The bells of the future are ringing.
The dreams of the dim past are gone;
And a bird in the spring-blooms is singing
Its soul to the soul of the Dawn.

III.

Love lives, and the whole world grows brighter,
The spirit of heaven draws nigh;
The burden grows lighter—still lighter,
And the song comes after the sigh;
And the soul, strong through trial, is whiter
As it nears the last port of "Goodbye!"

The Evolution.

In his latest book, "Social Forces in England and America," Mr. H. G. Wells writes poetically of what the Darkness reveals to him:

"Sometimes in the dark, sleepless solitudes of night comes to be so-and-so, ceases to bear a proper name, forgets quarrels and vanities, forgives and understands, knowing himself indeed to be a being greater than his personal accidents. Man on his planet, flying swiftly to unmeasured destinies through the starry stillnesses of space!"

The Song of Fighting.

I.

Sing a song of fighting—
Patriotic sons;
Keen gleam of sword-blades.
Thunder of guns;
Clash of the battle
Life's music mars,
Still, pallid faces
Staring at stars.

II.

Sing a song of fighting.
Crimsoned is the sod;
Weeping wives and mothers
Asking things of God;
And when the strife is ended
Hearts that bleed and beat
In Life's lonely dwellings,
For vacant, empty seat.

Their Satanic Highness.

The following item is from "Pa the Editor," appears in a Georgia weekly:

"To the Editor, sur and frun, we hear that some Politicianers are comin' to speake in our Town. They say they will raise the Devil, which we hoap they won't, for if they do we will hav to git six preachers to help run the Devil back, for we can't half support one preacher now, so we hoap they can come and speake without a-risin' of the Devil; if we was to git six preachers we could run him ourself, hopin' you will publish this to warn them to not rise the devil round here, I remain to oblige you as a reeder of your paper."

The Elevated Brothers.

He raised the blues in meetin' with a hallelula sound,
But his eyes were elevated when they passed the hat around;
Some said that he was lookin' where Canaan's Land was at,
How could he see the brother who was passin' at the hat?

"On the other side of Jordan,
In the sweet fields of Eden,"
That's where his soul was roamin'
When the dollars they was needin'.

At the rattlin' of the pennies in the hat
He shouted to the shingles:
"Fly, mighty Gospel, fly!
Fly cross the stormy ocean to heathen lands so dim"—
Oh, he didn't for a moment think it needed wings from him!

Oh, his soul is allus roamin'
Where Canaan's Land is at,
When they take up a collection—
When they're passin' of the hat.

Pa Will Do to Bet On.

This is all a western editor has to say in regard to the new styles in women's dress:

"Suppose that pa should come downtown one of these chilly days without his coat or collar, and his shirt unbuttoned down about six inches from his adam's apple, his trouser leg slit half way to the belt straps, and hose so thin you could see the corns on his instep. I say, just suppose he would, but I don't think he will."

The Home Guards.

While the boys are ready for battle,
He's home, a-fightin' for office,
And that's the extent of his fight.

When the office is going begging
His quick to heed its call;
His generous soul he can't control;
He says: "Take me, and all"

Young Colonels to the Front.

A Baltimore correspondent writes: "The old colonels around here are too old to go to war, but there are lots of young colonels in their families who are ready and willing to enlist. They are not colonels that have seen warfare, but colonels by inheritance, the title being theirs at birth, running in the blood from generation to generation."

The War Correspondent.

Life to him was still a riddle; sigh there was in every song.

But the trouble is forever on this rocky earthly way,
You forget, while you are dancing, that the fiddler is to pay;
And the dancing folk like lightning are a-sittin' over ground
When the fiddle-strings are silent and the fiddler's hat goes 'round.

DAILY GRIST from the STATE'S POLITICAL GRIND

GRICE ANNOUNCES HIS CANDIDACY FOR ATTORNEY GENERAL OF STATE

Hon. Warren Grice, of Hawkinsville, recently appointed attorney general to fill the unexpired term of Thomas S. Felder, who resigned to run for United States senator, has issued his formal announcement for attorney general. Mr. Grice is one of the best known lawyers in the state. For five sessions he represented the county of Pulaski in the legislature and has a wide following all over the state.

Mr. Grice left Atlanta Friday night and will be out of the city until Wednesday of this week. The duties of attorney general are of such an exacting nature that it will be impossible for him to make a personal canvass of the state. From letters and telegrams received since his appointment he feels gratified at his prospects of election. His announcement follows:

"To the People of Georgia: Upon the resignation of Hon. T. S Felder, the governor appointed me attorney general of the state, and the many telegrams and letters that have come to me I am obliged to feel that the appointment has met the approval of a very large number of our citizens. I should be grateful for the people to endorse me in our democratic primary in August.

"For twenty years, save for slight interruptions during a service of five sessions of the legislature as a representative from the county of Pulaski, I have devoted myself exclusively to the study and practice of the law. The judges and lawyers and people generally, I think, in the counties into which an attorney has taken me, believe me qualified for the place.

"It will be impossible, of course, for me to perform the duties of the office between now and August 19 and at the same time make a personal canvass of the state. I shall undertake to keep in touch with the situation and will appreciate greatly the aid of my friends.

"The office of attorney general is an important one, and has been filled in the past by men of distinction and a high order of ability. I would consider it a signal honor to be authorized by the people of Georgia to take my place in this honorable line of public service.

"Yours truly,
"WARREN GRICE."

ANNOUNCEMENT OF RENDER TERRELL FOR GOVERNOR MAY COME THIS WEEK

Greenville, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—No list of probable candidates for governor can be considered complete without including in it conspicuously the name of Hon. J. Render Terrell, solicitor general of the Coweta circuit and brother of the late Governor Joseph M. Terrell.

Developments of the past few days all but put Mr. Terrell squarely in the race and his friends here are confidently expecting a definite announcement of his candidacy before the end of the week.

Mr. Terrell is one of the shrewdest political managers in the state and there is no doubt that much of the late governor's political success was due to the adroit advice of the brother, Render. The closest relations existed between the two and his word went further with Governor Terrell than that of any man in Georgia.

Probably no solicitor in the state has made a better record than Mr. Terrell, whose ability as a lawyer and as a business man is recognized wherever he is known.

Practically every county in his circuit has been importuning him to permit the use of his name for the governorship and in addition to this he is receiving letters from prominent Georgians in all parts of the state.

The announcement of his candidacy may be expected at any date.

CHATHAM COUNTY VOTERS KEPT BUSY BY CANDIDATES LAST WEEK

Savannah, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—The movement started in Chatham county this week to organize a Burwell club to further the candidacy of Speaker W. H. Burwell for the governorship has been abandoned.

When J. Randolph Anderson announced his candidacy some of his political enemies in this section immediately tried to start a boom for Burwell. They soon discovered, however, that sentiment is almost unanimously in favor of Mr. Anderson, because he is a Savannah man and because it is felt that Savannah cannot lose the opportunity to fill the gubernatorial chair the next term.

The announcement of several other probable gubernatorial candidacies did not disturb the Anderson followers in the least, they declare. They are confident that he is the popular choice of south Georgia and that he is the only south Georgian mentioned so far who can draw support from other sections of the state.

Governor John M. Slaton was in Savannah this week, and announced that he was thoroughly pleased with the progress of his senatorial campaign.

Governor Slaton had an exceptional opportunity of mixing with the voters of this section on an excursion to Tybee island. This excursion was given for the visitors to the National Drainage congress. It is reported that the governor shook hands with every person on the train en route to the island.

A Slaton club probably will be organized in Savannah shortly. His friends have been talking about it and are waiting until the time is ripe to begin activities in his behalf.

J. W. Overstreet, who is running for congress from the First district, invaded the home territory of Charles G. Edwards, the incumbent, a few days ago and did a lot of campaigning.

Mr. Edwards has done no campaigning so far, but has remained in Washington. It is expected that he will visit the district shortly and make a few speeches.

FRIENDS OF MILLER URGING HIM TO ENTER RACE FOR GOVERNOR

Columbus, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—Hon. R. B. Miller, of Columbus, who has been urged to enter the gubernatorial race, had received many letters on the subject. These letters come from all parts of the state and from men of influence in their respective sections.

Mr. Miller has been prominent in public life for quite a number of years in both branches of the legislature and has been the father of some conspicuously useful legislation during that period. He has originated several measures of great merit and has worked earnestly for the enactment of useful legislation proposed by others. Mr. Miller is an extensive planter as well as lawyer, and is in close touch with agricultural conditions in the state.

Hon. William Charles Adamson will in all probability be returned from the fourth congressional district without opposition. Some months ago there was talk that the extreme lower portion of the district might furnish an opposing candidate, but this gossip has about ceased. Judge Adamson is one of the oldest and most useful members of congress and in his seven years has risen to national prominence. He at all times has been alive to the interests of his district and his faithful and highly efficient services are held in genuine appreciation by his constituents.

W. D. Berry, of Cusseta, has withdrawn from the race for senator from the twenty-fourth district, and C. C. Minter, the Cusseta lawyer, is at present the only announced [redacted] date.

VINSON IN FAVOR OF UNIT PLAN IN TENTH CONGRESSIONAL RACE

Milledgeville, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—Judge Carl Vinson, candidate for congress from this district, has many engagements for future speeches. He speaks on Monday, April 27, at Lincolnton, Ga.; at Wrens, Ga., on May 2; Wadley May 9, Louisville May 11, Spread May 16, Gibson May 18, Bartow May 23 and Crawfordville May 24.

Judge Vinson's headquarters are receiving encouraging advices from all sections of the district. Hon. T. D. Howard, his campaign manager, who has been by to report today in regard to the rules to be adopted by the executive committee, which meets at Milledgeville on May 4, had the following to say:

"I expect, if permitted, to go before the executive committee and urge the adoption of the county unit system. This is a democratic principle and should not be departed from. Rules should not be formulated so as to eliminate the small country counties.

"In the event no candidate receives a majority of the unit votes in the convention, then I am in favor of a second primary, and the two candidates receiving the highest votes in the convention shall run the race over. That is fair and equitable to all the candidates."

BY MARGIN OF ONLY FEW VOTES LEE COUNTY RACES ARE DECIDED

Leesburg, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—The county primary held here resulted in the election of the following officers: James Morgan, clerk of court; D. R. Moreland, sheriff; D. W. Tyson, treasurer; E. E. Bouche, tax collector; J. F. Sykes, tax receiver; T. F. Ford, coroner.

Hines won by six majority, Fonche by six and Tyson by twenty-seven votes, making one of the most closely contested primaries ever known in the county. Local school tax won by large majority.

MITCHELL COUNTY GRAND JURY INDORSES THOMAS FOR GOVERNOR

Camilla, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—The Mitchell county grand jury, which adjourned this afternoon, indorsed Judge W. E. Thomas, of the southern circuit, for governor.

Judge Thomas presided in Mitchell superior court last week for Judge M. H. Cox, of the Albany circuit, and made a very favorable impression on the people of this county in attendance at court.

At that time Judge Thomas would make no statement regarding the probability of his becoming a candidate for governor, but he received much encouragement from prominent citizens here. The expression of the grand jury may be regarded as expressing the sentiment in this county.

REYNOLDS GIVES REASONS FOR OPPOSING JOINT DEBATES

Louisville, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—The candidates for congress from the tenth congressional district are canvassing this county. Hon. Joe Reynolds, of Augusta, was in Louisville Thursday night and yesterday morning and was busily engaged shaking with his friends. He says he is meeting with much encouragement, not only from different sections of this county, but from over the district.

Mr. Reynolds positively declares his opposition to the joint debates which have been suggested by the candidates. His reason for refusing is that he wants as much good feeling as possible to obtain all through the campaign, and he does not think joint debates will conserve this end.

DR. HARDMAN SPENDS DAY IN CEDARTOWN SEEING THE VOTERS

Cedartown, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—Dr. L. G. Hardman, of Commerce, candidate for governor, was in the city yesterday and was busy shaking hands with his old friends and forming new acquaintances.

While here he was shown around and introduced by Dr. E. H. Richardson.

LINES OF BLUEJACKETS EXTENDED AT VERA CRUZ

Admiral Badger Reports No Contract With Mexicans—Collecting the Refugees.

Washington, April 25.—Admiral Badger tonight reported from Vera Cruz that he was extending his lines of bluejackets and marines further beyond the city. The battalion of marines from the South Carolina are well entrenched two and one-half miles west of the city.

No contact had been had with the Mexican forces and none was expected in the immediate future.

One Private Wounded.

Admiral Badger's telegram, dated 5 p. m. Saturday, said:

"Last night drizzling desultory and continued for considerable period. One private slightly wounded in forearm. Names not yet ascertained. Will be reported.

"Have conferred with influential citizens unite and arrange for conduct of municipal affairs by people themselves. Quite certain that former officials will not resume offices under present conditions, but possibly citizens' committee will be formed to influence city's affairs along lines of law and order and create confidence among inhabitants. Meeting of this kind will be held this afternoon.

"Question of food and water still gives anxiety, but up to present time no actual distress. Seems probable, however, that ultimately government will have to obtain poorer classes of inhabitants. Customs house is open and vessels ready to discharge, but much difficulty being experienced obtaining labor.

"Extending line of bluejackets and marines about two miles further out into the country today. South Carolina battalion well entrenched, about two and one-half miles from center of city, and connection has been made with Mexican forces and no attack expected at present. Miscellaneous marines handed this morning. Aeroplane made flight over harbor. Will make another today if weather permits. Ships' bands giving concerts ashore.

Collecting Refugees.

The Hawaiian-American steamers reported sailed from Puerto Mexico, 10 a. m. Saturday for Vera Cruz, with about 200 refugees. Will transfer them to steamer Mexico and as soon as reasonably filled that vessel will proceed to New Orleans, land refugees and return.

Jason and Paulding now at Tuxpam collecting refugees in that region. Rear Admiral Craddock and commanding officers of British ships Hermione at Tampico and Berwick at Puerto Mexico have been notified in efforts to collect and forward American refugees' ships. These services have been of greatest value. Further offers of continuation of these kindly efforts still being made."

The navy department tonight received word that the American consulate at Mazatlan, on the Pacific coast of Mexico, had been stoned by a mob yesterday. Other anti-American demonstrations occurred there.

The auxiliary Celtic, with a cargo of supplies for the naval forces, arrived at Vera Cruz today from New York.

EX-SOLDIERS ELIGIBLE FOR ACTIVE SERVICE

New York, April 25.—Officers in charge of army recruiting stations here called the attention of former soldiers to the army reserve act of 1913, under which they are eligible for active service if called upon by the president. This act provides that men honorably discharged with a rating of "good" can enlist in the reserves if not over 45 years old and physically capable.

There is a great army of these former soldiers who can join the regular army and serve while needed and not for a stated term. They cannot reenlist with the ranks they held when discharged, but as privates. Married men are not barred from the reserves.

ADMIRAL IS ORDERED TO AID ALL FOREIGNERS

Washington, April 25.—Secretary Daniels today instructed Rear Admiral Howard to bend every effort for the protection of the American consuls and their families and all foreigners on the Pacific coast of Mexico. The last instructions of Admiral Howard's instructions reads:

"Consider these instructions first duty of your fleet at this time."

Admiral Howard was directed first to make such arrangements as would be advisable to assemble at some safe place the American consuls and their families and other Americans until transportation to the United States can be provided. He has been authorized to charter a merchant craft to bring Americans out to the United States warships, and his attention was called to the successful use of this method at Tampico through the courtesy of foreign men-of-war. As soon as he has gathered refugees together he is authorized to charter a vessel to transport them to the United States.

WILSON'S ACCEPTANCE; JUST WHAT IT MEANS

No Binding Force and It Does Not Preclude Preparing for War.

Washington, April 25.—President Wilson's acceptance of the good offices of Brazil, Argentina and Chile to compose the Mexican conflict has centered the attention of international authorities on just what the proceeding will be and what "good offices, are under the practice of nations.

The tender of the South American envoys speaks of good offices, and the reply of the United States government makes reference to mediation.

John Bassett Moore, former counselor of the state department, and an authority on international law, points out a distinction between the case of good offices and mediation, and says:

"The demand of good offices or the acceptance does not confer the right of mediating."

John Hay, when secretary of state, said: "The phrase good offices, having somewhat elastic, should be conferred to two contingencies. In its first sense, it corresponds to the French term 'offificux.' In its second sense, it is allied to arbitral intermediation as an impartial adviser of both parties, and not only implies but it requires the assent of both parties and, oftener, a spontaneous invitation from each."

The Hague Provisions.

The Hague convention uses the two terms good offices and mediation interchangeably. The Hague provisions follow:

"Article 2. In case of serious disagreement or conflict, before an appeal to arms the signatory powers agree to have recourse, as far as circumstances allow, to the good offices or mediation of one or more friendly powers.

"Article 3. Independently of this recourse, the signatory powwes recommend that one or more powers strangers to the dispute, should, on their own initiative, and as far as circumstances may allow, offer their good offices or mediation to the states at variances.

"Powers, strangers to dispute, have the right to offer their good offices or mediation even during the course of hostilities.

"The exercise of this right never can be regarded by one or the other of the parties in conflict as an unfriendly act."

That the work of the three South American envoys in the present case will be purely advisory and not of a binding character appears to follow from Article 6 of The Hague convention, which provides:

"Good offices and mediation, either at the request of the parties at variance, or on the initiative of powers, strangers to the dispute, have exclusively the character of advice and never having binding force."

Doesn't Delay Preparations.

The Hague convention also provides that "the acceptance of mediation can not, unless there be agreement to the contrary, have the effect of interrupting, delaying or hindering mobilization or other measures of preparation for war. If mediation occurs after the commencement of hostilities, it causes no interruption to the military operations in progress unless there be an agreement to the contrary."

Most of the precedents on good offices and mediation are those in which established governments are concerned and to what extent the practice would apply to a de facto government is not clear. But the adoption in the present case of the usual course of tendering good offices, and its acceptance by the United States, would probably result in the usual procedure being employed.

One of the precedents in good offices was during the Cleveland administration and involved Mexico. At that time Secretary Bayard tendered to Mexico the good offices of the United States in settling the conflict between Mexico and Guatemala. Another precedent involving Mexico was when that country and France were in conflict in 1838. Then the American minister to Paris, Mr. Cass, was instructed to offer his assistance in any form which might prove beneficial, and it was added that the president "would feel no delicacy in tendering his good offices." President Buchanan also sought to employ his good offices in the war between Great Britain and France and the Chinese empire, and there were numerous other precedents under later administrations.

DOCTORS ENDANGERED BY INFERNAL MACHINE

Tears a Hole in the Grady Hospital Walls When It Explodes.

The explosion of an infernal machine, which Dr. Ferdinand Hermann, working in the clinic at the Grady hospital, had just picked up off the accident, caused great excitement among the clinic nurses and physicians.

Not knowing what the curious looking machine was, the doctors and nurses were playing with it in a reckless manner, handling it at random.

Dr. Hermann began to make a further examination of the curio, when he pressed a spring, and the machine exploded, tearing a hole as big as a plate in the side of the wall. He escaped injury, outside of the excitement of his nerves.

GOV. COLQUITT FIGHTS VOLUNTEER ARMY BILL

Austin, Texas, April 25.—Governor O. B. Colquitt today telegraphed President Wilson protesting against the volunteer army bill, which yesterday passed both houses of congress and asking that the president withhold his signature to the measure.

"The measure is an 'invasion of the rights of states and would destroy the national guard," said the governor, in that it gives the president the appointment of officers of the guard and the formation of brigades regardless of state lines.

"This protest is made," Governor Colquitt declared "on the assumption that there will be no need of calling out the national guard at this time unless Mexico declares war."

Many of the new hats are of shiny straw, and is sailor, turban, Watteau and Louis XVI. shapes. There is nothing gayer or more attractive than the dainty shepherdess hats which have been handed down to us on the canvas of the great painter, Watteau, and given his name. They are usually in soft straw, and trimmed with velvet ribbon and brightly-colored flowers in such a way that their sugar-scoop silhouette is not lost. This hat is meant to be worn well over the face; the high French twist of the hair appears to cause this tilt; but a bandeau at the back, covered with ribbon or massed flowers, also holds the hat aloft; while a band of velvet or flowers often extends around the head below the twist, keeping the hat securely in place.

The Louis XVI. plaques are being looked at and admired; but many women feel that they are not becoming, and can be worn only with dainty frilled frocks whose accessories correspond with them. This style of a hat with a tailored suit would scarcely be is good form.

The jaunty all-black hat is the smartest for general wear. Colored hats are both beautiful and chic, but for practical use they lack the distinction of the black hat. There are a few leghorn hats worn, for this is a straw which is always modish. No matter what straw or what type of hat, they are pretty sure to flare abruptly at the side; and in order that it may fit the head comfortably, a bandeau of the same is fastened on that side. The close-fitting round hat, having a high crown, with or without a straight narrow brim, is in vogue. These are trimmed with wings, flowers and fruits, the favorites being grapes and cherries.

Taffeta and moire ribbon, and a shiny satin ribbon with a patent-leather finish, are used extensively in trimming the morning or tailor-made hat. Tete de negre is used a great deal on black hats, and is very practical for the every-day hat, as the dusky brown goes with almost everything.

The style which most fashion experts believe to be among the smartest for summer wear is the long tunic, or Dutch skirt, very full and worn over a narrow underskirt, which shows about eight inches below the bottom of the tunic. A most striking suit which I saw in this type of gown. The difference being that the tunic does not quite come together in the back, and is therefore more of an apron than a tunic. This apron is of Roman stripes over an underskirt of blue gabardine. The gabardine jacket, of kimono cut, has narrow sleeves, and the rounded back drops below the waist line and slants up to a point over the chest, where it is fastened with a single button. This is worn over a moire silk waistcoat with a large, flaring collar. The striking little hat which was worn with this costume was divided into thirds, with a straight quill standing upright from each third.

For my first illustration this week I have chosen a simple and stylish frock for morning and house wear. The material used is a mottled lavender and white ratine, a fabric which is woven one way of the goods with a rough, knotted cord, which gives the whole fabric an uneven surface. This material has widely taken the place of pique and linen for dresses and separate cotton skirts, as it is much easier to launder. If carefully hung and pulled out while wet, it is not necessary to iron it at all. The ragian sleeves of the model, and the simple-closing waist are as simple to make as the skirt, whose practical adornments are the two hip-pockets. A hemstitched collar, vest and cuffs give the dainty finishing touches.

Materials for house dresses are as varied in design this year as the materials for other frocks. Gingham is being shown in a variety of new patterns, among them being Roman stripes and many new plaids. Percale has some of the quaint Dolly Varden designs, which makes it attractive and out of the ordinary. The Japanese and English crepes come in a variety of plain colors and a number of designs, besides possessing, by ratine, the same advantage of making ironing unnecessary. Pique crepes are also attractive for warm weather, as they are as light weight as lawn, can be washed and dried quickly, and in an hour or so are ready again for service.

In my second illustration I have shown a shirtwaist and skirt. The model of striped novelty cloth is an unusually up-to-date and conservative skirt for traveling, shopping and outing wear. Concealed in the folds of the lifted pleat are pockets, which are a necessary addition to all this mannish tailor-made skirts. The waist of Habutai silk is a late and fashionable cut, with its long shoulder-line and set-in sleeves.

It has been a number of years since colored shirtwaists have had the vogue that they are having this spring, seven miles long, built of native materials at a cost of $375,000.

SURE WAY TO GET RID OF DANDRUFF

End Itching Scalp and Stop Falling Hair—At Once.

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it no matter how much dandruff you have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

If you want to keep your hair looking rich, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for nothing destroys the hair so quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out, but it makes it stringy, straggly, dull, dry, brittle and lifeless, and everybody notices it. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

DEATH TO "SNIPERS" DECREED BY AMERICANS

Mexicans Who Have Been Pot-Shotting Americans Are to Be Exterminated.

Vera Cruz, April 25.—By the effective method of extermination, sniping by Mexicans, which has been responsible for the killing or wounding of many Americans, is to be stopped. It was decided today that hereafter American marines and bluejackets shall be withdrawn from all roofs except at a few designated points, and that the patrols shall be instructed to shoot to kill any other individual seen on any other roof after 7:30 o'clock in the morning.

Patrols will also be instructed to surround and search any house from which sniping occurs, and to shoot any person guilty of indulging in this practice.

It is likely that steps will also be taken to regulate, or even suppress, certain local newspapers which have been printing articles calculated to inflame the people against the Americans.

There are two wage-earning women to every five wage-earning men in Great Britain.

Mrs. William Waldorf Astor has given $1,000 toward a co-ordinate women's college at the University of Virginia.

In Japan recently there was completed a railway bridge nearly seven miles long, built of native materials at a cost of $375,000.

Boys' Court.

(From The Ohio State Journal.)

Chicago has made another judicial experiment, and that is the "boys' court." It is a court where the spirit of boyhood is permitted to interpret the law, and to separate them from the hardened cases of crime. There is as much in a boy's life that is technically criminal and yet not really so, and there is much that is innocent and yet not really as bad as criminal. For instance, the other day three boys were brought into court. They were 11 to 13 years old and were making their way westward, as they said, "to fight Indians." They had $4 to pay the expenses of the war. The court ordered them to be taken home to their parents.

The big-brother feature of the various church and civic organizations has a close relation to the "boys' court," and there is always one of them around to see that the judgment of the court is kindly complied with. They see that the kindness of the law is not plotted out by its justice.

PROTECTION IS ASKED FOR JAPS AND CHINESE

Washington, April 25.—The Japanese ambassador, Viscount Chinda, and the Chinese minister, K. T. Liach, conferred with Secretary Bryan late today at the secretary's request on the question of protection of Japanese and Chinese subjects in Mexico.

It is understood Viscount Chinda told Secretary Bryan that Japan at present had no intention of sending more warships to Mexico, as had been reported.

Badly Crippled Locals Blanked In Chattanooga

Welchonce and Long Being Out of Game, Demoralized Entire Team—Lorenzen Wild, But Effective.

By W. G. Foster.

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 25.—(Special.)—Southpaw Lorenzen, the Wingo Anderson of 1914, treated the Atlanta team and the Chattanooga fans to the surprise of their lives this afternoon and shut out the Crackers, while the locals were hitting Dent in timely fashion for a quintet of tallies.

The Crackers presented a crippled battle front, Long's injured hand would not permit him to enter the game, and Welchonce developed fever this morning. Reynolds was tried out in centerfield, but after he had misplayed a couple of drives, one of them costly, Lynch replaced him.

Kircher filled Long's place in left acceptably. The absence of the team's two best sluggers seemed to have a dispiriting effect on the Cracker offense. The locals were also patched up, Gilleapie being sick and replaced by Gillespie until the eighth, and Street smashing a zinger in the first inning.

Lost Opportunities.

The Crackers squandered opportunities in the early innings or they would have made several runs. Lorenzen had been knocked out in his two previous appearances on the mound for Chattanooga, due to utter inability to locate the plate.

When he passed McConnell to start the game what little hope the locals had of winning was dispelled. Holland followed with a single. When all things portended a bunch of runs, McConnell started the natives by making a rash attempt to steal third and was out. Kircher followed with a hit to right, which would have scored McConnell easily. It could not be told from the stand whether the hit-and-run sign was on or not when McConnell went to third, but Kircher did not even swing at the ball. Jennings ended the inning with a liner to Flick, for a double killing.

Again in the second, Lorenzen passed the first man, Kibel, but Reynolds smashed to Flick, who started a double play. Chestnutt called Reynolds safe at first, but was reversed by Rudderman, after an argument. The throw was mild and Coyle tagged the runner. Flanagan followed this with a double, the last hit.

How Runs Came.

Lorenzen continued wild until the fourth, after which he steadied, and the Crackers could not touch him. Dent pitched a great game until the eighth inning, when the locals got to him in a bunch.

McCormick and Jacobsen again were the hitting heroes, the manager getting three hits and a sacrifice fly.

The first run was made in the fourth. Reynolds was playing too close in for Jake and the batter's liner went over his head for a triple. He scored on McCormick's long fly to Flanagan.

In the next inning, Dent's support faltered to the extent of one run. With one down, Graff singled, stole, went to third on Graham's out and came over on Lorenzen's fluke in front of the plate.

The last three runs were made in the eighth on Johnston's single, Coyle's sacrifice, Jacobsen's hit, McCormick's smashing double to center, Balgent's scratch hit and Flick's out, Mauck killing a hit, but too late to retire the runner at the plate.

Balgent's scratch was a peculiar play. It was rolling foul when Holland stopped it, but Holland was on fair territory. Holland saved a run for Dent in the fifth by knocking down Coyle's hit right over the third sack.

Mobile, Ala., April 25.—For the second time during the series New Orleans and Mobile battled extra innings without a decision, today's game being called at the end of the tenth inning with the score a tie, 5 to 5. Both hit three pitchers for eighteen safeties, but they bunched them better than two or three innings, seventeen runs being left on the bases. New Orleans also hit the ball hard and timely. Mobile came to bat in the tenth two runs behind and after successive hits by Clark and Miller, Styles was relieved by Walker. Schmidt singled, scoring Clark and Mogg, pinch hitting for Prita, singled, scoring Miller with the tying run. Walker then weakened up and prevented a Mobile victory by great pitching, while Gudger was equally as well in the extra frame.

MERCER REVERSES COUNT ON AUBURN

Baptists Had on Their Batting Clothes, While Hunt and Forrester Twirled Wonderful Ball.

By John L. Westmoreland.

Macon, Ga., April 25.—Special.)—Mercer reversed the count on Auburn this afternoon and defeated them by the score of 11 to 1.

The Mercer boys had their hitting eyes with them and there was simply no stopping them. Beaore and Davis both being hit at will. Hunt was in his usual rare form and struck out eleven men in the seven innings that he pitched, retiring in favor of Forrester, who showed that he had the goods by striking out the first three men to face him. He struck out five men in two innings.

Mercer stole bases at will, making a total of ten. The hitting of Farmer and Clements was the batting feature for Mercer. By winning today, Mercer holds her record of not having lost a series this season.

Mercer began the scoring in the second, when they scored three runs without the aid of a single hit. Pitcher Basore appeared to be rather wild. There were four bases stolen on Harrison in the same inning.

Mercer scored two more in the third as a result of two hits and squeeze play, pulled off by Clements and Farmer. Davis relieved Basore at the beginning of the fourth, and struck out the first batter, but he was allowed to go to first when the catcher missed the ball.

Mercer touched Davis up for four hits and three runs in the fifth. Davis showed the effects of having pitched yesterday in this inning. Three runs were added in the sixth on two hits and a couple of errors.

Auburn, in the seventh, scored one on a single by Harrison and a double by Davis. Driver relieved Davis in the seventh. Mercer having faced Davis' offerings to all corners of the lot. Hunt gave way to Forrester in the eighth, the game being apparently won. Adams relieved Clements at the same time.

TECH TRACK TEAM DEFEATS CLEMSON

By Score of 65 to 49 the Yellow Jackets Are Returned Victors—Two Near Records.

By Hal Reynolds.

By winning yesterday's track meet from Clemson 65 to 49, the Tech Yellow Jackets scored their first victory over the Tigers in many years.

There was a good crowd out to witness the meet, which was the first ever held on the new track. All of the events were hard fought, which served to keep the spectators on edge throughout.

Clemson started the meet off strong by taking all of the first events. Tech came back in good fashion toward the close, however, and succeeded in scoring enough points to clinch the meet.

There were not any records broken, but two came within an eyelash of being smashed. Walter Robinson, in the high jump, came within a fifth of an inch of equalling the southern record held by himself. Hugh Mauck approached the hammer-throw mark very close by his heave of 113 feet.

The main thing that turned the tide of victory toward the local collegians was the two events, the high jump and the broad jump. In these events Tech grabbed all of the three places, scoring 13 points.

The best work of the afternoon in the sporting line was that of Legrande, of Clemson. He won all three events that he was entered in.

Logan, Tech's captain, did some pretty running. He captured one first and two seconds during the meet.

Lewis, the Clemson leader, showed a clean pair of heels to all competitors in the half-mile and mile run.

Joe Hayes, of Tech, added 7 points to his team's score by taking one second and three thirds.

The men who won their track "T" by good work in the meet are as follows: Logan, Street, W. M. Robinson, Hayes, Jordon, Cowles, Mauck and Churchill. Of these the last named are new men.

The Results.

100-Yard Dash—Legrande, Clemson; Logan, Tech; Hayes, Tech. Time, 10½ seconds.

Half-mile Run—Lewis, Clemson; Cowles, Tech; Odon, Clemson. Time, 2 minutes 14 seconds.

120-Yard Dash—Legrande, Clemson; Logan, Tech; Hayes, Tech. Time, 12 1-4 seconds.

Pole Vault—Stribbling, Clemson; Verner, Clemson, and Jordon, Tech, tied for second place. Height, 10 feet 6 inches.

High Jump—W. M. Robinson, Tech; Jordon, Tech, R. E. Robinson, Tech. Height, 5 feet 9¼ inches.

220-Yard Low Hurdles—Logan, Tech; Burdick, Tech; Verner, Clemson. Time, 27.3 seconds.

Shot Put—Gaudy, Clemson, Churchill, Tech; Johnson, Tech. Distance, 34 feet 3 inches.

Mile-Mile Run—Lewis, Clemson; Cowles, Tech; Powell, [redacted]. Time, 5 minutes 21⅘ seconds.

Broad Jump—Street, Tech; Fielder, Tech; Hayes, Tech. Distance, 19 feet 2 inches.

Hammer Throw—Mauck, Tech; Burdick, Tech; Stribbling, Clemson. Distance, 113 feet 1 inch.

High Hurdles—Verner, Clemson; McMahon, Clemson; W. M. Robinson, Tech. Time, 17.3 seconds.

440-Yard Dash—Jones, Clemson; Hayes, Tech; Jackson, Clemson. Time, 53.7 seconds.

HARRY WELCHONCE SERIOUSLY ILL

Crackers' Captain Is Down With Fever—Exact Condition Not Known—May Be Out of Game Some Time.

Dame Fortune has turned her back on the Crackers, causing the sledding to be mighty rough at this stage of the pennant race.

First, Tommy Long, the team's regular left fielder, and at present its leading batsman, was removed from the game by a spike wound, secured when he stole second in the third game of the series at Chattanooga.

Just how long Tommy will be out of the game is not known. It may still be several days, though the team has hopes of getting him back in uniform Monday.

On top of this came illness to Captain Harry Welchonce, the team's best pinch hitter and the leading batsman of the Southern league for the past two campaigns.

Harry Has Fever.

Harry was suffering with a severe cold when the team left for its road trip that came to a close Saturday. This was aggravated by the cold weather in Memphis.

Harry was unable to play in Saturday's game, and Manager Smith wired to President Callaway to have a doctor meet the train at midnight last night.

Just how serious the local captain's illness is and just how long he will be out of the game, will not be determined until the physicians make a thorough examination this afternoon. He has fever symptoms, and unless checked at once, may cause the locals no little field leader trouble when they need him and his big bat the most.

Every man on the team is suffering from a cold, some more grievous than others, and that they played as good ball as they did in Chattanooga is considered remarkable.

But they are still fighting, and when they get their full fighting strength back in the field, and with every one in good condition, they are going to make some one smart for those Chattanooga defeats. Mark that prediction.

FINN PLANS CHANGES IN HIS TURTLE CAMP

McDermott Reinstated and Will Play Third in Game Here Monday.

Memphis, Tenn., April 25.—(Special.) Red McDermott, third baseman, secured from Providence, and who was suspended by Manager Finn several days ago, was reinstated today. It is said McDermott did not care to play in the Southern and when the Indianapolis club offered the Turtles a nice price for the player, he contracted a good 18.

RIVERSIDE PLAYS GORDON MONDAY

Fierce Prep Rivals Meet at Gainesville—Play Second Game of the Series Tuesday.

Barnesville, Ga., April 25.—(Special.) The Gordon institute baseball team will leave tomorrow morning for Gainesville, Ga., where they will play two games with the strong Riverside Military Academy on Monday and Tuesday.

This will be one of the most important series that the two teams will have to play, and it is a safe bet that the two teams will fight hard from the start for both of the games.

Riverside and Gordon both have an excellent chance of winning the G. I. A. honors this year, and as neither has yet lost a series, they will play the hardest.

Two Old Men.

Riverside, like Gordon, only has two old men on their team this year. They are Holleman, playing second, and Captain Carraway, in center. However, the two coaches at Riverside have been working faithfully with the wealth of new material that turned out at the first call for baseball men and they have built a good team from the men that reported.

Gordon has two old men playing on their team this year, and they are Captain Hughes, second, and Hughes, in right field. Hughes is captain of Gordon this year. Coach Van Tassell had a hard row to hoe in developing a team this year from the men that reported.

Hughes is the only man that is holding down the place this year that he occupied last season, as Kingery was on short last year.

However, the team is in great shape and has not yet lost a series to any G. I. A. team. They have been playing teams that are a good deal longer than they are for the past two weeks and the practice that these games gave them has been a wonderful help to the team.

Mutual Rivals.

Riverside and Gordon have both played G. M. C. two games and Gordon defeated them once, and lost once, while Riverside got off with a tie and a defeat.

The two games that will be played Monday and Tuesday in Gainesville promise to be great pitchers' battles, Miller, Driggers, Page and Morris being the aristocrats on the R. M. A. team, while Dozier, Maxey and Slappey compose the Gordon firing line. All of the above men are heirs of considerable skill and on them will rest the largest part of the struggle.

On Friday and Saturday of this week Riverside plays a return engagement with Gordon locally.

JACKETS SECURE AMPLE REVENGE

Win Both Ends of Double-Header From Alabama on Saturday by Hitting Ball Fiercely.

By Michael Cody, Jr.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., April 25.—(Special.) Tech took two from Alabama. The Atlanta boys, resentful of yesterday's defeat, came back with a vengeance, walloping Graves' men to the tune of 12 to 8 and 7 to 5.

The first was lost in the fatal seventh, when Alabama went skyward and presented the visitors with six tallies.

The second, a five-inning affair, was won in the fourth, when five hits, three errors and a walk netted five runs. In this game Eubanks was complete master, allowing only one hit. He completed his big day by hitting safely twice out of three trips to the plate. The fans were somewhat disappointed, for never was a more perfect exhibition of "country" baseball presented to the public.

Tech men made up for their "boners" with their heavy stick work, while the home team fell short in all phases of the game.

Finn's Turtles At Poncey Park For Four Games

Crackers Home From Chattanooga—Play Finns and Then Hike for Nashville for Four Games.

By Dick Jemison.

The Crackers are back home after eight strenuous games on hostile shores, where they made a splendid showing and demonstrated convincingly to the opposition that they possess a ball club that must be reckoned with when the final returns are in.

The locals are back for a brief stay, playing only four games on the home lot, after which they hike away again. Monday's game will start at 4 o'clock on account of the Memorial day parade. The others will be at 3:30.

Mike Finn, the pilot who as head of the Mobile Gulls last season, was ensconced out of the 1913 pennant by a margin of half a game by the same Crackers, will be here Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, but at the head of a different club.

Sir Mique, the Knight of the Signs, is mogul of the Memphis Turtles this season, at present tailender of the league.

Second Meeting.

This is the second meeting between the two teams this season, the locals trimming Finn's Turtles three out of four games right in their old back yard at Red Elm last week. Naturally the superstitious Mike is out after revenge.

Mike will bring many new faces to Ponce de Leon—new in Memphis uniforms, but familiar to fans who have been following the game for years.

Of last year's Memphis team, Mike will show Love in center field, Shanley at short and George Merritt and Liebhardt on the mound.

In the other two outfield positions, Duggan, in left, and Coyle, a younger brother of Mickey, of Chattanooga, in right, are new men.

At third base, Dolly Stark, who will be remembered locally as a member of the Little Rock club, will be seen. Captain Mullen at second and Allison at first base are new to local fans. Also Danckel, the regular first baseman, who was injured when he collided with Red Lynch in the series at Memphis.

Veteran Catchers.

Schiel, former Giant and Red, and Bemis, former Nap, are the receivers of the Turtles, giving Finn two veteran handlers of his young pitchers.

The other pitchers are Smith, a young left-hander; Johnson, H. Merritt and Steele, all of whom will make their bow locally.

Which of these pitchers Manager Finn will use against the locals in the opener is not known, but it will be either Smith or Liebhardt's turn.

Pat Browning will probably draw the hurling assignment for the locals, with Jack Doescher in reserve.

Here is the probable batting order of the two teams:

MEMPHIS.	ATLANTA.

Bedell-Mowry.

The wedding of Miss Margaret Bedell and Mr. Grant Beatley Mowry, of Lawrence, Mass., was a beautiful event of last night, taking place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Bedell, in Druid Hills.

The handsome home was decorated with palms and ferns and a wealth of flowers. The ceremony took place at 9 o'clock in the library, where the flowers used for decorating were pink and white roses and orange blossoms.

An improvised altar at one end of the long room was massed with ferns and palms and white roses.

In the dining room and breakfast room Killarney roses filled bowls and vases on mantels and cabinets.

The bride's table in the dining room had as a centerpiece a French basket, filled with pink roses, and silver dishes held pink bonbons. An orchestra was stationed in the music room, where quantities of dogwood and wild smilax were used with artistic effect. The bride was lovely in a gown of white olga crepe brocade and tulle, held in tulle and in rose point lace which had formed her mother's wedding gown. She wore a diamond la vallaere, the gift of her grandmother. Her tulle veil was caught with orange blossoms, and her flowers were a shower of valley lilies. Miss Ellison Bedell, wearing a gown of green crepe and carrying pink roses, was her sister's maid of honor, and Mr. W. I. Nolen, of Kentucky, was best man.

The bride was given away by her father, and Rev. W. W. Memminger, of All Saints' church, performed the ceremony.

A small reception to relatives and a few close friends followed the ceremony.

The bride's mother wore a handsome gown of yellow crepe with tunic of silver and iridescent beads, and her flowers were a corsage bouquet of orchids.

The groom's mother, Mrs. H. E. Mowry, of Lawrence, Mass., wore lavender charmeuse and orchids. Mrs. Robert Daniel, of Memphis, wore white satin charmeuse, and Miss Bedell, of Columbus, wore white lace.

Assisting in entertaining were Mrs. Charles Satterlee, Mrs. E. H. Daniel, Mrs. Rix Stafford and Miss Sallie Nelson.

During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Mowry left for a trip, and after living in June will be at Copper Hill, Tenn.

The bride's going-away gown was blue georgette, with hat to match.

Among the out-of-town guests were the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Mowry, of Lawrence, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Daniel, of Memphis, and Miss Bedell, of Columbus.

Peace Day at Woman's Club

Peace day, Monday, May 18, will be celebrated for the first time in Atlanta by the Atlanta Woman's club, and appropriate exercises are being arranged for the occasion, to be held at the clubhouse, on Baker street. This was decided at a meeting of the club last Monday, when Miss Alice Baxter, chairman of the international peace committee for the Georgia state federation; the Rev. J. J. Hall, secretary of the Georgia Peace society and director for the south of the American Peace society; Mrs. Howard McCall, Mrs. Lott Warren and Mrs. Linton Hopkins made eloquent pleas for international peace. A special committee was appointed to make plans for the celebration of Peace day, and is composed of Mrs. Howard McCall, chairman of program; Mrs. Hamilton Douglas, chairman of schools, and Mrs. James Jackson, chairman of churches. Bishop C. K. Nelson will be asked to be the orator of the afternoon, and all the patriotic organizations of the city will be invited to take part in the exercises.

The meeting of the club last Monday was in charge of the industrial committee, of which Mrs. Frank H. Neely is chairman, and a most entertaining program was given.

Mrs. Neely gave a brief outline of the work done by her committee this year, chief among which was that in connection with the child welfare exhibit, held at the old Leyden house. The committee had many hundred bulletins explanatory of the exhibit printed and distributed among the factories in the city, and did various sorts of publicity work to advertise the exhibit among those who most needed to know about it. She was followed by Mr. W. H. Leahy, secretary of the industrial bureau of the chamber of commerce, who spoke on "Industrial Conditions in Atlanta, Among Women and Children." Mr. H. W. Smith, who is inspector for the Kress stores in Georgia, made a splendid talk on the welfare work done by large commercial establishments for their employees. He cited the efficiency schools which many of them conduct, and said that in his opinion these schools would do more toward solving the problem of a living wage for working girls than anything else. He stressed the fact that the average woman shopper makes things hard for the girl behind the counter, because she demands experience and is impatient with the green girls whom the stores are trying to help become efficient bread-winners.

The last speaker of the afternoon was Mr. Charles Jenkinson, of the American Red Cross society. Mr. Jenkinson explained the work of his organization and told of the recently organized chapter in Atlanta. Through this chapter, home care of the sick and first aid to the injured will be taught by trained nurses.

The Shoes of Youth

"A woman is as old as she looks" is an old saying. She cannot look very youthful if her feet hurt. Shoes that are not made right, that are not fitted right, that are not Dorothy Dodd shoes, cause an "old look" to creep over the face.

Dorothy Dodd Shoes renew the youth in the elderly and retain the spirit of youth in the young. These are scientific facts.

The Parent-Teacher Clubs Helping Hospital Movement

No finer illustration of the value of the Parent-Teacher association to the community-at-large, as well as to the home and the school, could be given than the present work being done by the Parent-Teacher associations of Atlanta in the interest of the greater hospital movement.

Acting on the call made by Mrs. Samuel Lumpkin, president of the City Federation of Women's organizations, to all affiliating organizations, for a mass meeting which was held in Atlanta, April 13, to consider the greater hospital movement, the Parent-Teacher associations had as their representatives Mrs. W. H. Wiggs, chairman of the extension department, and Mrs. George Haugh, vice president of the Atlanta district.

At this meeting Dr. Summerall, superintendent of the hospital; Dr. W. S. Elkin, president of the central committee making for the greater hospital, and Mr. Ivan Allen, of the Business Men's league, addressed the meeting. They told the needs of the hospital, especially stressing the demand for wards for children's diseases—not only for the protection of the individual child, and the family, but for the community-at-large. No one knew better the truth of what was told than the Parent-Teacher representatives.

A meeting of the presidents of the Atlanta associations was called at the home of Mrs. John W. Rowlett, Tuesday afternoon, and they planned a work through neighborhood committees, which is now in successful activity. The woman who is kept home by household cares is being visited; told about the hospital; what it would mean to her and her children, and she is urged to see to it that the men of her family vote. The indifferent citizens, the women know, are more dangerous than the open opponents. The latter can be talked to, given information they have not, and convinced to vote the right way, but the man who is not interested, and who does not vote at all, is the man the women are prodding in Atlanta at present.

The Atlanta heads of associations are urged to pursue their work until the day of the election for the bond issue. If that measure passes, Atlanta will have the most complete and perfected hospital south of Mason and Dixon's line, and the women will have helped build it.

Extracts From Mrs. Schoff's Address

Extracts from the address of Mrs. Frederick Schoff, president of the National Congress of Mothers, at the annual convention, holding in Washington city today, are:

"The home is the greatest force for good or ill in the life of every child. The lack of definite constructive work of character building in the home is lacking, largely through parental ignorance as to the necessity of it and the way to do it.

"To help parents to have a constructive system of character building is the fundamental need in prevention of crime. Without that work in the home, recognised and understood as part of the duty of every parent, the work of courts cannot be decreased.

"The child is the victim, and the home one of the factors in his downfall.

"Too long have parents felt they could force the state to train their ways and duties. Too long has the state attempted to take it from the parental hands, rather than to strengthen the home's place by definite teaching of parental responsibility and efficiency.

"All material interests are as nothing compared with the interest of helping American boys and girls to increase in numbers, in health, in true ideals of life.

"What America becomes depends on the child welfare spells the future of any nation.

"In legislation for protection of child hood mothers and fathers need to look over the entire field, over the entire nation and see the weak places, the places that need strengthening.

"The country child pleading for equal advantages with the city child, the city child pleading for room and space and protection of childhood's rights, the baby pleading for the chance to live, the boys all over the country pleading for the education which will set a single standard of morality, the girls' cries pleading for treatment which will set them on the same road, the child soaring in heavy work the burden and care of adult life, the boys and girls pleading for home economy against divorce, these are some of the questions the state must meet by just, comprehensive, well-studied laws which will be put into action.

"Entire change of procedure for youthful offenders, entire change in procedure for the care of dependent and orphan children, is needed. Thoughtful fathers and mothers are required in these conditions.

"The provision of education in homemaking and child nurture which may be available for every one would promote the child welfare more than all else."

WITH THE CLUBS

Tenth Street School Report.

An interesting feature of the Tenth Street Parent-Teacher association contained in the report made to the state convention, is the following:

Trees Planted.

The committee on trees was composed of Mr. George Hinman, chairman; Mrs. F. G. Spain and Mrs. A. D. Whitaker. This committee made a study of the most desirable trees for the schoolyard and fifty trees were purchased and put out, among them maple, locust, sweetgum, blackgum, dogwood, crabapple and Lombardy poplars. Quite a number died and have been replaced.

Garden Work.

The garden committee, which consists of Mrs. F. G. Spain, chairman; Mrs. W. E. Floding and Mrs. A. D. Whitaker, have shown their deep interest in the work by the splendid appearance of the flower garden, which is quite attractive even at this season. There are roses, shrubs and many varieties of flowers; there are dainty little walks dividing off the several beds, which are cultivated by the different classes.

School Overcrowded.

We are dreaming of a time when the overcrowded condition of the school will have been remedied and we have in our hearts a glad for an annex to our school building which will give us more room for the classes, and also an indoor playroom or gymnasium, the top floor of this annex to contain an auditorium.

Mrs. Claud E. Buchanan is chairman of a committee to investigate the subject of "playground apparatus," and Mrs. John Kiser and Mrs. J. E. Mitchell to assist her.

Mr. George Hinman appeared before the association in February 1913, and gave a most unusually talk combining the importance of the right kind of sports.

In April, 1913 Mr. Lawton B. Evans, of Augusta, addressed the association on "What to Do With the Children During Vacation."

Miss Collins, the state organizer of parent-teacher associations, made a splendid appeal for the right kind of play on the ground.

Dr. Theodore Toepel, physical director of the city schools, gave an interesting account of his work.

Miss Wrigley, an experienced playground worker, has also addressed the association, and her ideas were very fine, being most practical and beneficial.

Mrs. James R. Little, president of the Mothers' congress of Georgia, explained at one of the meetings the relation of the individual association to the national and international bodies.

The association has enjoyed the privilege of hearing an address on "The Normal Developments of a Child Between the Ages of Six and Sixteen," by Dr. Fred G Hodgson also one on "The Diet of Children."

The association is deeply interested in the child welfare exhibit and feel that it is doing a most wonderful work.

Our president, Mrs. Tom K. Glenn, has been untiring in her efforts to bring about the best possible results for the association, school and for the children. Much of the success of every undertaking has been due to her.

The following are the officers elected for the new year, beginning June, 1913:

Mrs. R. Murdock Walker, president; Mrs. Walter I. Middleton, vice president; Mrs. J. H. Hubbard, treasurer; Mrs. George P. Moore, secretary. Respectfully submitted,

MRS. GEORGE P. MOORE.

Lakewood Heights Association.

The Lakewood Heights Parent-Teacher club has been quite busy this year.

In December the county normal met with us and we entertained about one hundred teachers.

We have sodded the bank in front of the school and have bought a great many new books for the library.

We are planning this spring to plant a hedge around the schoolyard, and have fences built to divide the boys and girls' yards.

There are so few large boys in the school that the work of improvement progresses slowly, but we hope by constant effort to soon have one of the prettiest schoolyards in Fulton county.

The Political Rights of Women

MRS. MARY L. McLENDON, Editor

President Georgia Woman's Suffrage Association

Reports From the Auxiliaries.

Mrs. Minnie Battle Allen, of Sharon, Ga., has recently joined the Georgia Woman Suffrage association, as there was no local association in Sharon at that time. A telegram from Mrs. Allen informs us that fifty people joined a suffrage association organized by herself and great enthusiasm prevails in Sharon and the surrounding neighborhood.

Mrs. Allen has been appointed president of the tenth congressional district by the executive committee of the woman's suffrage party, Inc., which is an auxiliary to the Georgia Woman Suffrage association. She expects to organize in that district several hundred women and men are outspoken in favor of woman suffrage, honestly believing in equal rights for all, special privilege for none.

The report of the Rome Woman's Suffrage association sent by Miss Madaline Morgan, who has been transferred in Atlanta, is most encouraging. Ten new members were added last week to the membership. A meeting to be held on May 2, when many additions will follow. Mrs. John H. Reynolds, the president, is at present in Florida, but feels sure that the interests of the association are well cared for in her absence by Miss Wyly, vice president; Mrs. Paul Waite, recording secretary, and Mrs. Jonte De Journette, treasurer. They are calling for good speakers from the National American Woman Suffrage association, and Miss Kate Gordon of New Orleans, Mrs. W. M. Stoner of Jacksonville, Fla.; Mrs. Antoinette Funk of Chicago, and Mrs. Desha Breckinridge of Kentucky, second vice president of the, national, will answer the call the latter part of May. They will also speak in Atlanta, Athens, Macon and doubtless in Sharon and Augusta, if their auditors' appointments materialize, and she knows no such word as fail.

Atlanta Suffrage Bureau.

The rapid strides the Macon suffragists are making are most wonderful. The beautiful rooms tendered by Mr. T. C. Hooks, of the Hotel Lanier, filled with handsome mahogany furniture, excel any headquarters of suffragists in Georgia. The certificate of membership as an auxiliary to the Georgia Woman Suffrage association is neatly framed and holds a conspicuous position on the beautifully tinted walls. Stacks of suffrage literature await the coming of those sufficiently interested to wish to read, and there is always somebody present to talk about woman suffrage.

Upon invitation of the chamber of commerce they will open up the Georgia jubilee with a suffrage float, entitled "How the Vote Was Won." During the jubilee they will also stage a flower festival and a suffrage pageant. Within the next thirty days they will hold two monster mass meetings, the first of which is scheduled for April 25, when hundreds of teachers will be attending the teachers' convention in Macon. At both these rallies, in addition to Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, president of the Georgia Woman Suffrage association, and other state suffrage leaders, these widesawke women have invited and expect to be present the foremost women in the National American Woman Suffrage association.

Miss Kate Gordon, president of the Southern Suffrage conference, and vice president of the Louisiana Suffrage association; Mrs. Martin Stoner, Mrs. Antoinette Funk, attorney for the national congressional committee, and rated as the foremost woman orator in the United States, and Mrs. Desha Breckinridge, a descendant of Henry Clay, and second vice president of the national association, will be the four speakers authorized by the national at the coming suffrage rallies during the month of May in Macon and in Atlanta. Athens, Rome, Decatur, Sharon and Augusta, and possibly other places in Georgia.

Federation of Labor Convention.

Macon has also been favored highly last week by the annual convention of the Federation af Labor to meet in that lovely city. Attorney Leonard J. Grossman, president of the Georgia Men's League for Woman Suffrage, and also legal advisor for the Georgia Woman's Suffrage association, was invited to speak before that body in favor of woman suffrage by S. B. Marks, the president of the State Federation of Labor.

Every measure which the Georgia Men's League for Woman Suffrage has indorsed, every bill which has been advocated by the Georgia Woman Suffrage association for twenty-four years with perhaps but one isolated exception received the unanimous stamp of approval of the labor convention just adjourned. Child labor legislation, compulsory education, proper textbooks in the schools, the Bills health bill, factory inspection and sanitation, safety appliances for hazardous occupations and all the long list of legislation recommended by suffragists in their campaign for a state-wide uplift movement were indorsed by this labor convention. President Marks, himself a member of the Atlanta Equal Suffrage association, paid a beautiful tribute to the effective work Mr. Grossman had done all over Georgia for the enfranchisement of woman and asked him to carry back to the organized suffragists of the state the hearty indorsement of organized labor. Later the convention unanimously indorsed woman suffrage through a resolution introduced by Delegate George A. Scarratt, of Atlanta, which read as follows:

"We, the delegates in session of the Georgia federation of Labor, put ourselves on record as indorsing woman suffrage and the good work the suffragists are doing."

Another resolution of local interest was introduced by Delegate Penny, of Atlanta, providing for a law creating the position of state mine, who, it is proposed, shall be not less than 30 years of age, of motherly nature, who shall inspect the factories and mills of the state in the interest of the women and children working therein.

Such a grip has the suffrage movement on the people of the state, and particularly in Macon, because of this great meeting of the voting laboring men, that last Saturday evening announcement was made that Hon. Bridges Smith, mayor of Macon, had come out in the open in favor of woman suffrage, and the feature front page story in The Sunday Macon Telegraph is an expression of his views on the suffrage question by the mayor of Macon. He is the recognised leader of thousands throughout his section of the state, and such favorable announcements are the pebbles which start the avalanch of public sentiment for woman suffrage.

The Atlanta Association.

This is the only local suffrage association in Atlanta which is auxiliary to the Georgia Woman Suffrage association. The executive committee held a business meeting in the parlors of the Hotel Ansley Wednesday afternoon and much business was transacted, which will be reported at the regular session of the association on Wednesday, April 29, which will be held in the same place—Hotel Ansley.

One hundred new members were presented by the committee as membership to the executive committee.

Faculty of Girls' High School Organized.

At last the teachers are "sitting up and taking notice" that they are handicapped in their pursuit of happiness, if not life and liberty, by being born disfranchised and classed politically with lunatics, criminals, idiots, paupers, minions and aliens. They have gone so far as to send a letter to the members of the general council calling attention to the difference between salaries paid associate teachers in the Girls' high school and salaries paid associate teachers in the Boys' high school. According to a schedule of salaries, which they inclosed in their letter, a Boys' high school teacher is paid $1,475 the first year, $1,575 the second year, $1,440 the third year, $1,785 the fourth year, $1,900 the fifth year, which is the maximum, whereas a Girls' high school teacher is paid $900 the first year, $960 the second year, $1,080 the third year, $1,200 the fourth year, $1,320 the fifth year, which is the maximum. Heads of departments in the Boys' high school are paid a straight salary of $1,800, whereas in the Girls' high the heads of departments are started at $1,200 a year and raised in five years to $1,400, which is their maximum. Now, what these women want to know is why this discrimination is made between the two halves of our common humanity. Is it not sufficiently unjust to commit this grave mistake because of the mere accident of sex? Common sense enables us to see that it is because man has grasped the situation by "grabbing" the ballot, the right preservative of all rights, and ordering the weaker (?) sex to "go way back and sit down" till we say to you come and we will give you a "scrap." These women say that the curriculum of the two high schools is practically the same, with a difference in favor of the Boys' high school teachers because their classes are smaller. They say a man fresh from college, without experience, is started as a teacher in the Boys' high at $1,470, while an applicant for a teacher's position in the Girls' high school is not considered unless she has had three years previous successful experience, and then at the end of that three years they are started at only $900. Those teachers in the Girls' high school are at the same place Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Lucretia Mott, Lucy Stone and other brave pioneer women were when they called a convention at Seneca Falls, N. Y., and formulated their bill of rights and proclaimed it to the nation. The women have been unreasoningly at it since that memorable occasion in 1848, but victory is soon to perch upon their banners during the twentieth century. Men would not have stood such foolishness half as long as women have done, but women are for peace and arbitration and do not want to see their best beloved set up as targets for bullets. They will, however, carry on their bloodless revolution until we will have equal rights for all and special privileges for none, which will hurt nobody.

Woman's Independence Day, May 2.

Mrs. Medill McCormick, of Chicago, had been appointed chairman of the committee on demonstrations for the National American Woman Suffrage association. May 2 was appointed as Woman's Independence day and a call was sent to every suffrage organization in the country to hold some kind of demonstration or meeting on that day. Upon the call of the bugle all will unite in singing a suffrage hymn. Speeches will be made and a resolution offered calling upon congress for federal legislation which will insure to women equal rights with men. From every state in the union have come letters and notices telling of places for celebrating this national woman suffrage day.

Suffrage Movement in South Carolina.

Woman suffrage in South Carolina is growing fast, and it is declared by their leaders that the women are prepared that it is both a political and religious movement for the good of the world.

MISS PARRISH TO SURVEY CITY SCHOOL SYSTEMS

Miss Celeste Parrish has been selected by the board of education of Atlanta to make a survey of the school system. Completing the work here, she will make a survey of the public school system of Augusta.

Miss Parrish addressed the Parent-Teacher association of the Tenth street school at their meeting Tuesday afternoon on the subject of "Summer Play for Children."

FRESHMAN DEBATE AT THE UNIVERSITY

Athens, Ga., April 25.—(Special)—The Mexican question, as it affects the future of the United States and the republic of Mexico, has been settled by the freshman debaters at the University of Georgia, who had a record audience last night at their annual debate in the chapel. The question was "Resolved, That the annexation of Mexico by the United States would be the best for both countries."

Frank Carter, of Atlanta, was master of ceremonies; the Phi Kappa affirmative debaters were Irvin Levy, A. Fawcett and J. R. Seeley; the Demosthenians, arguing for the negative, were T. N. Murphey, G. C. Miller and G. T. Towns.

Athens Chief Acquitted.

Athens, Ga., April 25.—(Special).—Chief of Police L. E. Brooks, charged with being intoxicated at the fire which burned a Broad street business block Thursday, was, by unanimous vote of the mayor and council last night, cleared of the charge, and he was at once reinstated.

Chief Brooks had forty-two witnesses ready to swear in his behalf, but nineteen who swore for the city gave only testimony in his favor.

Women Push Bond Measure; Realize Needs of Hospital

Read this, women of Atlanta!

"The other day," said Joe Logan, secretary of the Associated Charities, "a man, his wife and a child applied to the charities for lodging. They had failed to pay their rent and had been dispossessed. The family had lived in Atlanta for six years. I investigated the case, and found the man was a steady worker, but had been ill and unable, for some time, to procure employment. The child looked a little feverish. An examination showed that she had a pulse of 104 and a temperature of 103. We sent her to Grady at once. The doctors there found she had typhoid fever. They had to find a bed for her, and they did.

"Now, the whole point of that story is not in what happened, but what might have happened. We are rapidly getting to the point where there would have been no bed for that child. The population is growing every week. Grady has been overcrowded for a year. Grady doesn't keep up with the population, what is going to become of cases like that in another twelve months? The hospital is full now. They won't be able to go there.

Not long ago, in one of Atlanta's best-known families, a faithful servant was taken violently ill with diphtheria. There were white children exposed to it, if she were kept in her room in the house. There was no place in the city hospital for a negro patient with a contagious disease. What was to become of the faithful servant who had helped raise the little white folks upstairs?

The other day a man in Atlanta developed a case of malignant diphtheria. His thought he had only sore throat, and was walking about looking for some place to be cured. When his case was diagnosed by a local physician it was discovered that he had with diphtheria a well marked case of tuberculosis. The tuberculosis hospital could not take him because they had no contagious ward.

Now cases similar to these arise every day. The entire community is exposed to them.

But when the Grady hospital becomes the "Greater Grady," and Atlanta has a hospital worthy of her, there will always be a bed for the poor little sick baby.

There will be a place for the faithful negro servant with the contagious disease.

There will be the emergency ward for the unfortunate man stricken with contagious disease.

The women of Atlanta are urged to use their influences as they never have before to have the bond issue passed.

Your Grandmother's Remedy for Purifying the Blood

And Renovating the System in the Springtime

[illegible]

What was grandmother's unexcelled remedy? Haven't you heard of it? Yes, you have! It was sulphur, cream of tartar and molasses. The main trouble with it was its nauseous taste.

A modern method puts the cream of tartar and sulphur into sugar-coated tablets and mixes them with herbs, roots, etc., making a wonderful tonic blood purifier and system cleanser.

Just try Sulpherb Tablets (not sulphur tablets), but Sulpherb—remember the name—and get the tablets in sealed tubes at 50c per tube.

Grown-up people and children who don't feel well, who are constipated or sluggish, or who have pimples, boils, carbuncles, liver and skin like, can soon rid the system of these impurities by taking the good old-fashioned remedy in modern form. Their action satisfies or money is refunded by the Prescription Products Company, Dayton, Ohio. A free trial sent to any address. Buy of any well-stocked druggist.

PUNCH AND QUALITY AS RIVALS

Putting the "punch" into your business is a fine art. But putting quality into it is a finer one.

The "punch" is epigrammatic—electrifying—but it is unstable; while quality—not so dramatic by half—is convincing and permanent.

34 FIREMEN ARE OVERCOME WHILE BATTLING WITH FIRE; SEVERAL STILL IN HOSPITAL

Fire broke out in the basement of the Black building, Nos. 50 to 56 Auburn avenue, at 1:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and great volumes of smoke belched forth from the basement windows and first floor windows continuously for seven hours, greatly hindering the work of the several fire departments in putting out the stubborn flames.

Eight firemen were dragged from the basement of the building, overcome by the smoke. Rushing these men to the Grady hospital for resuscitation kept the Grady ambulance busy throughout the afternoon.

As a result of suffocation by smoke three of the firemen are at the hospital in a critical condition. Fireman L. S. King was given a hypodermic injection to relieve his condition. Amos Rhae, of station house No. 2, was the first fireman to become overcome fighting the fire in the basement. Joseph E. Carwile, ladderman of No. 4 house, was overcome, and also sent to the hospital in a semi-conscious condition.

Overcomed by Smoke.

A score of firemen were slightly overcome by the dense smoke and sent to the No. 4 engine house, around the corner, on North Pryor street, to recover.

Throughout the afternoon a large crowd stood around watching the fire fighting. Several times the crowd would press too far over the fire line and hinder the firemen in their efforts to quench the flames.

The origin of the fire was in the basement, and after a short time this was filled with water, making it very dangerous for the firemen to continue the fire fight in the basement for fear of suffocation, while at times a fireman would fall into the deep pool of water and probably drown.

The great volumes of dense smoke were caused by the slow burning of bombay reeds, stored in the basement of the Bombayreed Manufacturing and Importing company, 50-56 Auburn avenue. E. K. Ward, the manager, estimated that more than $6,000 damage had been done to his stock of baskets, chairs and willow work.

A $6,000 consignment of typewriters had just been received at the Oliver Typewriter company's store, at 54 Auburn avenue, and these are reported to have been damaged considerably by water and smoke.

Origin of Fire Unknown.

The origin of the fire is unknown. It originated in the basement of the stores in the Black building and was first detected about 1:30 o'clock by J. O. Stewart, sales manager of the Oliver Typewriter company.

Fireman P. B. McKinney, while directing a stream of water into the basement, was badly hurt, being thrown about six feet into the air when the fire hose he was holding bursted. McKinney stuck gamely to his work, though.

Captain John Anderson, of engine house No. 3, was badly burned by the explosion of gasoline, stored in the basement. His trousers were burned off him.

Five firemen sent to the Grady hospital for treatment in addition to the three named above were W. T. Cody, William Reed, I. C. McGee, W. L. Gilbert and Thomas A. Finley. They were resuscitated and gamely insisted upon being allowed to return to aid in fighting the stubborn fire.

Thirty-four Firemen Suffer.

In addition to the eleven firemen who were sent to the Grady hospital in a semi-conscious, a few unconscious, condition, there were twenty-three others who were either sent back to their homes or engine houses to recuperate from the suffocating smoke.

The cause of so many firemen being knocked out by smoke is believed to lie in the chemical decomposition

RED AND BLACK ON LONG JAUNT

Play Six Road Games This Week—Tackle Maryland Aggies Monday—At Home Next Week.

College Park, Md., April 25.—(Special.)—The University of Georgia baseball nine will arrive here Monday morning for one game with the Maryland Agricultural and Mechanical college here.

The team will arrive here from Annapolis, Md., where they played the Navy one game. This team is touring the south Atlantic states and play some of the best teams in this section before returning to Athens.

On Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week the team will play the Washington and Lee team at Lexington, Va., and this series will be probably the hardest that the Georgia boys will have to play, as the Washington and Lee team is probably the best in the south Atlantic states and looked upon as being the champions of this section.

The final games of the road trip will be played at Chapel Hill, N. C., and the University of North Carolina will be the opponents.

G. M. A. TRACK TEAM DEFEATS TECH HIGH

Fast Time Made—Three Records Broken—Good Crowd in Attendance.

Despite the fact that only two teams competed in the Prep track meet held yesterday afternoon on the Georgia Military academy campus in College Park, it was one of the fastest meets ever held by this organization, and one of the biggest crowds that has ever turned out for this annual event was present.

The two teams that participated were Tech High school and Georgia Military academy. Georgia Military academy scored 55 points, while Tech High gathered in 44.

The individual winner was Fowler, of Tech High, who scored 11 points. Smith, of Georgia Military academy, and Myers, of Tech High, tied for second place, with 10 points each. Parks was third, with 8 points to his credit.

Georgia Military academy will receive a very handsome cup offered to the winner of the meet by A. G. Spalding. Fowler will be given a gold medal for scoring the largest number of points during the meet.

The Records Broken.

Three of the Prep league records were broken during the meet. The 440-yard dash record of 55 minutes was broken by Parmalee, of Tech High, who made the distance in 54 4-5 seconds. Rodriguez, of Georgia Military academy, clipped nearly two seconds off of the record in the 220 low hurdles. The record for this was 29 seconds, while Rodriguez made it in 27 1-5 seconds. Fowler, of Tech High school, broke the record for the hammer throw, when he hurled it 113 feet and 7 1-2 inches. The former record was 113 feet.

The judges of the meet were Professors Weems, clerk of course; D. H. Jameson, field judge, and Bill Oldknow, timer.

Here is a list of the events in the order held:

J. H. Norris Is Suspended For Aiding Stool Pigeon Against Clubs to Leave

Chief Beavers, after he had suspended Policeman J. H. Norris, Saturday morning, for arranging matters so that W. C. Jones, the police stool pigeon, who created a sensation on his recent return to the city in testifying against certain locker clubs for illegally selling whisky, could leave the city and thereby avoid giving his testimony, severely criticised the officer for failing to carry out his oath of office.

Norris has been suspended pending action by the board of police commissioners, who will try the officer at its next meeting.

Norris admitted that he aided Jones in leaving the city.

Rodel and Willard Are Confident of Outcome In Tuesday's Big Bout

Atlanta boxing fans get their first glimpse of two real heavyweights next Tuesday night at the Orpheum theater when Jesse Willard, the 250-pound Cowboy, meets George (Boer) Rodel in a ten-round contest. Here are two of the very best big men in the game, both are real contenders for the white heavyweight.

Willard has never been beaten—that is not since he became a contender. Rodel has suffered only one defeat—that when Willard stopped him in nine rounds of wonderful slugging. And just previous to that Rodel had earned a ten-round decision over the Cowboy.

With the count standing one victory each, Willard and Rodel will battle at top speed on Tuesday night. To the victor goes a match with Gunboat Smith here during Shriners' week. The loser will be declared out of the running for the title.

Although Willard weighs 250 pounds and Rodel 215, both are fast, clever two-handed boxers. There should be plenty of slugging for those fans who care for that stuff, and still there will be enough clever work to suit a Jim Corbett.

Willard's Claims.

"I expect to win in about eight rounds," claims Willard. "But I will drop the Boer just as soon as possible. I am going to make the bout a slam-bang affair. Rodel may outbox me for three or four rounds, but I am too big, too strong, and too hard a puncher for him to stall off over four or five rounds.

"When he was given a questionable newspaper decision over me in Milwaukee he caught me out of condition. I had just recovered from a severe attack of grip and did less than two days' training. When we clashed later in Youngstown I stopped him in the ninth round. I admit that he stood up and mixed with me all the way, but I am faster now than I was then and know how to hit a much better blow. I have tipped off all my friends to get a wager down on me. I am willing to bet Rodel my share of the purse that I win; if not by a K. O. by such a big margin that there won't be any doubt as to who is the winner."

Rodel Confident.

Rodel is every bit as confident as Willard of victory.

"I will make Willard look foolish this time. I beat him in Milwaukee cleanly and had him out in our second battle when he pulled a wild right hand punch from the floor that happened to land on my jaw. I took too big a chance, I didn't think the big fellow had anything left, and left myself wide open.

"But he won't ever catch me that way again. I can outbox Willard with one hand tied behind my back. But if he wants to make a slugging match out of it I will accommodate him. I am willing to run it that way but wants. I am his master as a boxer and also as a puncher.

"I look for the finish in about seven rounds."

The Orpheum theater has been remodeled into one of the best boxing clubs in the country. The ringside seats on the stage have been gradually elevated so that a seat in the fifth or sixth row will be just as good as those right up against the ropes.

Although Rodel and Willard have demanded big money, Promoter Castro is confident that he can break even by charging only $1, $2 and $3. Ringside seats bring the top prices, the entire orchestra is $2, while the $1 seats consists of the entire balcony.

There will be three other corking bouts, the first being scheduled to start at 8:30 o'clock.

Seats are on sale at the box and the Tumlin Bros. stores.

Harvard Crews Win and Lose.

Annapolis, Md., April 25.—By a margin of a little more than half a length, Navy's varsity eight-oared crew today defeated Harvard varsity crew, covering the distance, 1 mile and 5-16 in 5 minutes and 42 seconds. Harvard crossed the finish line two seconds later.

Harvard's second crew won from Navy's second eight over the same course by three lengths in exactly the same time.

Gordon Scrubs Win.

Barnesville, Ga., April 25.—(Special.) The Gordon Scrubs defeated Woodbury at Woodbury yesterday afternoon by the score of 11 to 5. Slapper, for Gordon, struck out nineteen men. Gordon made a total of twenty hits. Williams played well for Woodbury.

Who Will Imitate Jeffery Next Year?

The Thomas B. Jeffery Company
Jeffery
Kenosha, Wis. U.S.A.

Wide public endorsement has been given to the idea which Jeffery brought over from Europe last fall—the high speed, light weight, economical, four cylinder motor. He it was who first put this dominant idea into American practice—produced the first light weight, economical, high grade Four to sell at $1550.

There are persistent reports that other makers will pay tribute to Jeffery by producing cars of a similar type—next year. Imitation is, indeed, the most sincere flattery and we welcome this imitation with hearty good will.

The unmistakable demand for light weight and economy has become so pronounced that engineers do not hesitate to publicly endorse the idea which has made the Jeffery a big success.

It is well known that the biggest successes of the industry have been founded upon cars of this type. Yet, during the past two years, the tendency towards heavy weight in design became so pronounced that people who valued economy, light weight and low upkeep expense were forced to buy low priced cars.

For two years there was little improvement in the design of motor cars except in body details and such features as starting devices. Then a great wave of economy spread over the country. People were forced to take inferior quality, scant comfort and sacrifice appearance to realize economy.

Jeffery saw that the industry was traveling in the wrong direction. He sent his engineers to Europe where the best makers have already had the same experience which most American makers must yet go through. The high speed motor is dominant over there—it has made good. Jeffery brought that idea to America. Then he built the Jeffery Four at $1550 and the Jeffery Six at $2250. Power he attained, through speed instead of bulk.

In five months orders have been taken for seven thousand Jeffery cars.

Now the light, economical car has won the victory. The big sale of Jeffery cars is evidence enough of that. Our shipments during the first three months of the year exceeded those of last year by 103 per cent.

Read the clipping from Motor-Age below and you have concrete evidence of what will certainly be the dominant type in years to come.

The Jeffery Four represents that dominant type.

The leading trade papers are commenting every day upon the superiority of the small, high speed motor. Jeffery introduced that type into America last fall.

It is quite likely that other light Fours will be built, but we do not fear this competition because there is embodied in the Jeffery Four the best material that the market affords and the best ideas developed by the best mechanics in the world.

Fortunately, Jeffery is in the best position to meet the keenest competition. He has no stockholders to satisfy. He is the one man in the United States who controls a complete automobile factory and every dollars' worth of equipment is paid for. He discounts all bills. Therefore, he is able to buy right. He is satisfied with a small profit. Therefore, he can build the best four cylinder car in America and sell it at a price which cannot be duplicated by manufacturers lacking his capital, equipment and experience.

Here are the specifications which gave Jeffery leadership in sales after he attained leadership in ideas.

SMALL HIGH SPEED MOTOR, introduced by Jeffery November, 1913.

IMPORTED ANNULAR BALL BEARINGS—endorsed by cars selling above $4,000—adopted by Jeffery.

RAYFIELD CARBURETOR—endorsed by dealers—adopted by Jeffery.

VANADIUM STEEL SPRINGS AND AXLES—endorsed by everybody—adopted by Jeffery.

FOUR SPEED TRANSMISSION—demanded by the public—adopted by Jeffery.

MOST EXPENSIVE FULL FLOATING REAR AXLE—most costly—most quiet starting and lighting system—most expensive body in design and finish—Spicer universals—the last word with mechanics—pressure feed gasoline tank—Neverleek top—oiling system best known—Bosch Duplex ignition—left steer and center control—cone clutch—wheel base 116 inches—demountable rims—equipment—top made of best material, top cover, rain vision windshield, robe rail and foot rest—Klaxet horn, Solar electric lamps, power tire pump and complete tool equipment.

Electric lighted auxiliary dash, on which is mounted Warner autometer, ammeter, gasoline and oil pressure gauges, light switch, coil switch, electric horn button and two compartments for valuables. The one electric light switch has four positions to operate the side, head, dash and tail lights. Switch can be locked in any position. Tail light and dash light work on relay.

THE WISE BUYER WILL GET A JEFFERY FOUR now because next year his car will still embody all the leading construction principles. It is made from the best materials that can be put into any car at any price. Find the nearest Jeffery dealer today.

Small High-Speed Motors Pronounced a Success in Europe

English Engineer Describes Design of Efficient Engines Before Detroit S. A. E.

By D. McCall White

EDITOR'S NOTE—Americans are just beginning to wake up to the possibilities of small motors designed to run at high speed. It may be expected that the interest will be increased before the year is out by the appearance of some of those very small racers to represent Europe in racing events. Indianapolis will see at least one of these Memorial day. Few men are more qualified to discuss the high-speed motor than D. McCall White, former writer a eager of the Crossley Motors, Ltd., Manchester, England, and late chief engineer for D. Napier & Son, Ltd., London, England, who is now employed with the Cadillac Motor Car Co. He addressed the Detroit section of the Society of Automobile Engineers on this subject last week and his remarks are reproduced herewith.

I HAVE been asked to say a few words regarding the development of the high-speed engine in Great Britain. We have been producing, in some of our factories on the other side, high-speed engines for the last 4 or 5 years which will run successfully in touring cars without any more trouble than the ordinary slow-speed engines. In fact, 5 years ago the company I was connected with in a position to give a 2 years' guarantee with its cars, the engines of which ran at a maximum speed of about 2,500 to 2,600 revolutions per minute.

Made Good in Turbidan

Within the last 2 or 3 years we have been producing engines which have been running maximum power at 3,000 revolutions per minute, and these have on the slightest down grade accelerated to 3,500 revolutions per minute. These particular cars have been successful not only in the British Isles, but have been highly satisfactory and successful in our colonies, such as, for example, Australia, New Zealand, etc., where the roads are, I think, pretty much on a par with American roads. In fact, I have, just before leaving England, inspected a report from one of my associates who was out in Australia inspecting, and generally looking into the matter, and his report, as well as the agent's report on the behavior of cars out there, not only of our own production but those produced by other firms which were also of the high-speed class, was entirely satisfactory.

Another firm, with whom I have not been connected, has been most successful in the colonies, not only in competitions such as hill climbing, but in competitions of great hardships over large tracts of land such as you are accustomed to in this country. I am particularly aware of the points in connection with this particular firm, as the engineer is a very good personal friend of my own.

I am stating these points because, in discussing them with some of your engineers, I have found that quite an erroneous idea seems to exist regarding the durability of the high-speed engine, fitted into a moderately light chassis. In the first place, the chassis which these engines are called upon to pull are not very light chassis, being in most cases just about the same weight as some of your most modern chassis. These chassis are designed to stand up, and they do stand up, not only in Britain but also in the colonies. A horsepower represents 33,000 foot-pounds of work, whether it be developed in Britain or in America, and if this horsepower can be obtained with a smaller engine, then greater economy will be the result.

Gasoline may be cheaper here than it is in Britain, but I have yet to see the man who refuses to accept the same result as he previously obtained by paying less money for it. As examples of what has been done, I have designed a four-cylinder engine 3½ inch bore by 5 inch stroke, which developed 56 brake horsepower at 2,500 r. p. m., fitting it to a chassis with a wheelbase of 120 inches, the weight being 1,900 pounds. This car was beautiful to handle and it was a marvel to me what it could do on the top gear with a load. It could pull on top gear at 10 miles an hour, on a very decent gradient, in practically the same manner as a six-cylinder engine. 3¼ by 5. The wheelbase of the six was 126 inches and the chassis weight, so far as I can recollect, about 2,352 lbs., both chassis carrying a load of driver and one passenger, plus the weight of 200 lbs.

Kappa Alpha Dance.

A delightful occasion of Friday night was the masquerade dance given by the Kappa Alpha fraternity at Segadlo's.

The hall was elaborately and beautifully decorated to represent a Japanese garden. White lattice, over which was trimmed vines and blooming wistaria, lined the walls, and big jardinieres of dogwood were effectively placed. Japanese umbrellas were suspended from the ceiling and the lights were under Japanese shades. An orchestra furnished the music for dancing, and at 11 o'clock supper was served, after which dancing was continued.

Many pretty figures were danced, and the favors were Japanese. About 150 members of the college set attended. The chaperons were Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Woodruff, Mrs. W. C. Humphries, Miss Lillian Hubbard, Mrs. Ben Hawkins, Mrs. J. W. Patterson, Dr. and Mrs. Nalms, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Redding, Professor W. G. Parry and Dr. Hughes.

For Mrs. Hasseli.

Mrs. R. L. Washington entertained at a buffet supper, followed by dancing, last night at her home on Myrtle street, in compliment to her guest, Mrs. Hasell, of Great Neck, Long Island.

Palms, snowballs and pink snap dragons decorated the apartments excepting the dining room, where Japanese iris was used with ferns. A basket, tied with pink ribbon and with two shades of purple tulle, and the basket filled with purple iris, was in the center of the table on which the sweets were served. Other details were in purple and white. The ices were frozen in the shapes of iris blooms, and the cakes were decorated with the same flowers.

Mrs. Washington wore a gown of two-toned yellow taffeta, trimmed in silver lace.

Mrs. Hasell wore a French gown of red brocade draped with purple tulle.

Each contestant is entitled to one coupon good for 5,000 votes. Contestants may nominate themselves. They do not have to be subscribers to The Constitution. It costs nothing to enter this contest, and no obligations are involved in doing so. Send your name or that of a friend or relative, today.

2. Any white woman in the territory covered by this paper is eligible to enter this great voting contest.

HOW VOTES ARE SECURED

3. Besides voting certificates issued on subscriptions a daily ballot, good for a certain number of votes, will be published in each issue unless otherwise announced. Each daily ballot printed will be limited and must be in The Constitution office before the expiration date printed thereon.

4. Candidates are not restricted to getting votes or subscriptions in their own particular district, but may secure subscriptions in any part of the United States; and if cash accompanies the order, voting certificates will be issued, but voting certificates will be issued only on cash-in-advance subscriptions.

5. Candidates in one district are not competing with candidates in another district, except in the instance of the grand prizes. The division of districts, as shown elsewhere in this paper, so equalizes competition that every candidate has an equal chance to win.

6. No votes will be allowed on subscriptions held more than one week after being secured by contestants. Subscriptions must be turned in promptly, together with the money collected on them. Votes will be issued when the money is received, but the contestants may retain these votes and cast them whenever they wish within the rules.

7. No votes will be issued on subscription payments less than the amounts stipulated in the voting schedule.

8. Votes will not be allowed on arrearages either for subscriptions due The Constitution or to the carrier unless the payment is sufficient to bring the subscription account up to date and at least six months in advance of the date on which payment is made. In such instances votes may be issued for the full amount paid on old subscriptions, according to the schedule.

9. On payments other than those scheduled, votes will be issued according to the scheduled amount next below the amount so paid.

10. Ballots cannot be bought. They can be obtained only by subscribing and prepaying a subscription to The Constitution or by cutting daily ballots from the paper.

11. To insure being counted all daily ballots must be neatly trimmed to uniform size, fastened together and sent in flat. Do not fold the ballots.

FILL OUT THE TOP

12. In sending in daily ballots it is unnecessary to fill out more than the top ballot in each package. Then write on this ballot the number of votes the package contains. Contestants who fail to comply with this rule must accept the count of the contest department of The Constitution as final. We do not acknowledge the receipt of daily ballots unless an error is discovered in your count.

Only one nomination ballot good for 5,000 votes is placed to the credit of each candidate in the published score. Daily ballots are also credited in the published score. Voting certificates are issued on subscriptions only.

12. Each publication of daily ballots will be final, except in case of typographical error or mistake of the contest department. It is impossible to save all daily ballots and they will be destroyed three days after date of publication.

14. By the filing of votes all contestants must accept and agree to all conditions.

15. Votes once issued to one contestant cannot be transferred to the credit of another.

16. No voting certificates can be cast for publication and the subscriptions upon which they were issued used in making up clubs then forming.

17. Votes issued in error will be declared void by the campaign department of The Constitution and thrown out if cast.

19. In the event of a tie, a prize identical in all respects with that tied for will be given to each tying contestant.

20. The Constitution will recognize no promise either written or verbal made by agents, solicitors or canvassers contrary to the published rules and regulations governing this contest.

21. The right is reserved to reject the name of any candidate for cause, or to alter the rules and regulations should occasion demand, except that the manner of distribution of prizes and schedule of votes is to remain unchanged.

22. Any question that may arise between the contestants will be decided by the campaign manager and his decision will be final.

23. This contest officially begins April 13 and ends at midnight June 27, 1914.

SUBSCRIPTION RULES

24. Anyone taking The Constitution regularly when the contest was announced, April 5, 1914, will be classed as an old subscriber. A subscription will not be counted as new if it is simply transferred from one member of the family or household to another, or individual to firm or corporation, or vice versa.

A second paper ordered delivered to an address at which the paper was regularly delivered at the time the contest was announced will be considered as new only on payment of an equal amount or more made on the subscription originally going to that address. Exceptions may be made to this rule in the case of boarders and roomers. But The Constitution reserves the right to decide all such cases. Any combination of circumstances by which The Constitution does not gain a subscriber, the subscription cannot and will not be classed as new. A subscription which is new when first payment is made will be considered new on any subsequent payment during the contest.

TWELVE SUBSCRIPTIONS

25. Subscriptions will not be taken for a longer period than two years in advance.

26. No votes will be issued on subscription payments made direct to The Constitution or its agents unless a request for votes is made at the time of payment and the name of the candidate for whom said votes are to be cast is given.

27. Contestants may replace a subscription or subscriptions, turned in as new and found to be old, and count same in the club offer in effect at the time that the original subscription is sent in, provided such subscription or subscriptions are sent in within three days from the time contestant is notified of the facts.

28. Contestants having subscriptions to apply on a club offer and being unable to get the letter postmarked in time, may telephone or telegraph the contest department the exact amount of remittance they are sending, before midnight of date upon which the club offer expires, and that amount will be counted in the period then in effect; provided the amount is forwarded by first following mail. Go Out and See It and Judge for Yourself What the Future Has in Store for It

Proposition to Capital City Club, With Explanation of Same

ATLANTA, GA., March 28, 1914.

MR. R. F. MADDOX, President Capital City Club, City,

Dear Sir:—Believing that the present Country Club house and grounds are rather contracted and inadequate for a club of the dignity and standing of the Capital City, I have been trying to find a way to make the approaches to the club more convenient, and to furnish a beautiful and adequate site for the club's permanent club house, and to that end I have secured the agreements (shown by copies herewith enclosed) from Mr. S. C. Stovall and Mr. A. V. Gude, Jr., which explain themselves.

The present club house can always be used for refreshment and bath house purposes, but the club should have a handsome country club house, with large restaurant and ball room, plenty of porches and sleeping rooms above, for such of its members as would like to make their week-end or permanent home there.

The members of the Capital City Club are Atlanta's wealthiest and most influential citizens, and its membership contributes ninety-five per cent of the money for all public enterprises for Atlanta's good that are brought to a successful conclusion.

If the club had a beautiful site on which to erect its permanent club, I believe its members would quickly subscribe to a bond issue to pay for such a club, and to induce the street car company to extend its car line to said site.

Mr. Stovall has agreed to donate the lot or tract marked "B" adjoining the club property, and I am willing to donate the tract marked "C" for a club site, and I am also willing to co-operate with Mr. Stovall in grading the driveway marked "Club Drive" across the club's property and that agreed to be deeded to it, provided the club will secure an extension of the Peachtree and Brookhaven car line from its present terminus to the north line of the property agreed to be donated to the club by me.

For the consideration named, and in order for the Club to secure additional land for its new Golf Course, at a point where the new links are very much congested, I am willing to deed to the Club the tract of land marked "D" on the enclosed plat provided the Club agrees to maintain said tract for Club purposes, such as Golf Link, Park.

The Driveway marked "Club Drive" could connect the present and proposed new Club Building, both with an electric and an automobile drive. The driveways shown on the enclosed plat will furnish the most attractive driving system in the South.

As I am having permanent plats made of Oglethorpe Park, showing its Driveway system and subdivision into tracts for country estates, and the connections of its drives with existing or proposed driveways, and with adjoining properties, I ask that you have a call meeting of your Directors immediately and see if they favor, and will recommend an acceptance of the proposed system of driveways through the Club's property, and of the tracts agreed to be donated for Club purposes on the terms and conditions herein outlined.

I think it is well, in all growing communities to "look to the future." Eight years ago Ansley Park was a tangled mass of laps, limbs and underbrush; today it is one of the handsomest residence parks in America, with nearly three hundred homes, and last year, was assessed by the city at $2,600,000.00, and paid to the city and county $50,000.00 in taxes. I t increased 11,000 per cent in eight years.

The Forsyth street section increased in property and taxable values 1,000 per cent in five years.

The street car line can be extended along Oglethorpe University road to a point where "Club Drive" can connect with it and other proposed roads about 1,000 feet from the present club house. A road is planned from this point to the Weiauca road and to the Peachtree and Dunwoody road, which last named road is now being regraded and widened by the county.

As Oglethorpe Park will soon have nine or ten driveways into it, a few weeks' work will convert from sage fields, logs and limbs, into a beautiful suburban residence section.

When the Piedmont Driving club burned, a few years ago, I offered my present home site (then in the rough) and forty acres adjoining, for a Golf Course, in exchange for its present five acre site. Some of its members hooted at the proposition. Since that time, dozens of these same members have come to me and expressed their regrets. Therefore, I say let's look to the future growth of Atlanta and its suburbs, before the Club rejects an offer to acquire additional property that it will never have again, except at a large cost. Respectfully submitted, EDWIN P. ANSLEY.

ATLANTA, GA., March 26th, 1914.

Mr. Edwin P. Ansley, Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir:—I am willing to grade the 50-foot driveway shown on the plat of Oglethorpe Park marked "Club Drive," from Peachtree Road to the entrance to the present Capital City Country Club, provided the Brookhaven estates will donate to me the five-foot strip, or reservation lying between my property and lots marked 21, 22, 23 and 24 of their plat, and also provided that Mr. A. V. Gude, Jr., will donate a strip fifty feet wide across the lots controlled by him for street purposes, so as to give the best possible entrance to the club for driveway and street car purposes. And in consideration of Mr. Gude's donating said strip, I agree to donate to him sufficient of my land adjoining his to compensate him for the loan of said strip, and any damage that he may sustain by reason of the driveway going diagonally across his lots.

I am further willing to co-operate with you in grading the driveway marked "Club Drive" its entire length and deeding to the Club the lots or tracts marked on the Oglethorpe Park plat as lots "A" and "B," provided the Club will secure the extension of the Peachtree and Brookhaven car line to the Northern limit of the property that you offer to deed to them for club purposes.

Very truly,

S. C. STOVALL

ATLANTA, GA., March 28th, 1914.

Mr. Edwin P. Ansley, Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir:—In consideration of the agreement of Mr. S. C. Stovall to compensate me out of land immediately adjoining the lots controlled by me in the Brookhaven Subdivision, I hereby agree that the Driveway provided in Mr. Stovall' agreement may be constructed across the said lots controlled by me.

Very truly yours,

A. V. GUDE, JR.

Explaining My Proposition

ATLANTA, GA., April 20th, 1914.

TO MY FELLOW MEMBERS OF THE CAPITAL CITY CLUB:

I find that my proposition to the club has been misunderstood by some of its members. The accompanying map shows the land that Mr. S. C. Stovall proposes to deed to the club, marked "A" and "B", for the purpose of widening the club grounds on the west. The tracts marked "C" and "D" are the ones that I propose to deed to the club to widen its boundaries on the northwest for a club site, and to widen the golf course.

The map shows that the club has only a small triangle located between tracts "A," "B," "C" and "D." The tracts marked "D" and "C," taken in connection with the triangle now owned by the club (which is covered with a pine forest) embraces one of the highest and most attractive hills around Atlanta. The view from this point of the golf links, the lake and the present club house, is the most attractive of any of the beautiful views that can be had from the hills surrounding the club property.

I have never suggested that the club abandon its present club house, or change the plan of its new golf links in any particular. I stated that the present club house would always be useful as a place where refreshments can be served, a convenient point from which to reach the lake for boating, fishing and bathing purposes, and also for lockers for the golf players. I do now repeat that the club will soon need a handsome, typical country club house, with ample restaurant, dining room, ball room, covered porches, and sleeping rooms for such of its members as wish to live there, either part of the year or "week-ends."

A great deal of time is lost in going to and from the club, and some busy men would like to spend their week-ends at the club, and utilize both the early mornings and late evenings in playing golf, bathing, boating or fishing, as they do in 71 prominent golf clubs located within thirty miles of the Times Square building in New York.

Outdoor exercise is acknowledged to be the only protection against "nervous breakdown" for the "strenuous business man" of today; so let's do what every other city is doing; provide a way for him to get a maximum amount of it within the limited time that he can spend from his business.

Every reasonable man knows that the Capital City Club is going to exercise its option in June, 1916, to take over its present club grounds, by giving the Brookhaven Estates Company $100,000 5 per cent bonds, secured by the property embraced in the club grounds, for the reason that the club has already spent $25,000 in improving these grounds, and will spend that much more before June 16th, 1916.

If the club will acquire the five to ten-foot strip on the north side of the golf links, which is preventing the new 18-hole links from being properly constructed, and will also secure a deed to the triangle shown on the accompanying plat, and take the deeds that are offered by Mr. S. C. Stovall and I, it can issue bonds, and begin the erection of its "living club", and perfect its golf links immediately, and its members can get the full benefit of its country club without waiting until June 16th, 1916, to begin to build its "living club."

My object in securing the donations from Mr. Stovall and offering the tracts of land owned by me to the club, to help perfect its club grounds, are two-fold. It enables the club to get land to perfect its country club that would otherwise cost it a great many thousand dollars, and if the club accepts the donations and locates a handsome club at this point, it will enhance the adjoining land more than the land donated is worth at the present time.

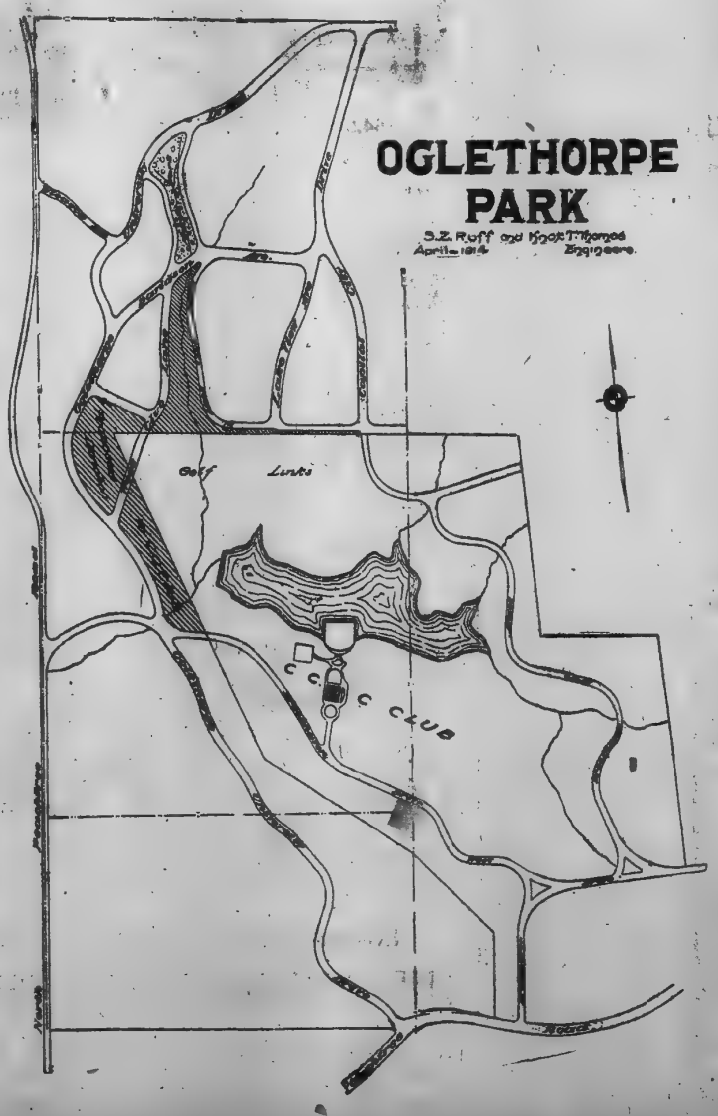
It is simply a plain business proposition, that if carried out will inure to the benefit of all parties at interest.

If the club does not accept the tracts of land offered, of course, this land will be divided into building lots, fronting on Oglethorpe University Drive (which has been made a public road) and Club Drive N. W., and after these lots have passed into private hands it will be very difficult to secure the lots from individuals, and unless secured it will be impossible to regulate the position of improvements of their lots.

Respectfully submitted,

EDWIN P. ANSLEY.

P. S.—The property offered to the club shown in shaded lines will have 3,000 feet of frontage on Oglethorpe University Drive, Club Drive Northwest and Club Drive Northeast.



Drive out and look over this property Go up on the hill that is offered for a Club House site and get the beautiful view of the lake and Golf Course, and see if you do not think the Club could afford to accept this property with its 3,000 feet of frontage as a gift

ATLANTA, GA., March 14, 1914.

MR. EDWIN P. ANSLEY, Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir:—I have seen the preliminary plans for connecting from Peachtree road the Capital City Country Club properties and the Oglethorpe University and Silver Lake properties by the development of Land Lots 10, 11 and 12. This will mold these valuable properties closely together, and, when carried out, will be of much benefit to all the properties involved, and one of the most important improvements made in the northern end of Fulton and western part of DeKalb county for many years.

I should think the merits of this proposition would fully warrant the County Commissioners of Fulton and DeKalb in co-operating liberally with you and your associates in opening up this property, which is sure to mean a large increase in the taxable returns from this section, and it rapid development.

As you know, I have no personal interest whatever in any of this property, except my interest, as president, in the future welfare of the Capital City Club. Knowing your ability and success in developing property in this and other sections of the country, I have confidence in your judgment, and believe that if your present plans are carried out, your expectations in the success of this enterprise will be fully realized, and a second Ansley Park is destined to be developed in this beautiful section of Fulton and rapidly growing part of DeKalb county.

Yours truly, ECBT. F. MADDOX.

ATLANTA, GA., March 13, 1914.

MR. EDWIN P. ANSLEY, Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir:—The plan you have outlined for connecting property adjoining the Capital City Country Club with that adjoining the site set aside for Oglethorpe University with a splendid driveway, in which you make provision for a private right-of-way for the car line, is one of the broadest developments undertaken around Atlanta.

I did not know until I saw your plat that only one Land Lot separates the properties of Brookhaven Estates from that of the Silver Lake Estates, nor that a drive could be built on the north side of the Capital City Club property to connect with the University site, that would be only a few hundred feet longer than by Peachtree Road.

The fact that you are willing to change your plans, so that your proposed driveways around the Club property form an attractive Boulevard system around the Golf Links, and are willing to locate your drive on the north of the Links, fifty or more feet from the Club property, and allow the Club the use of this space that is very necessary to make this part of the Links as wide as they should be, is another evidence of your generosity in dealing with your neighbors. It occurs to me that your neighbors, and the public, have profited more than you have, in all of your successful developments.

I believe the Club and the University will certainly co-operate with you to the fullest extent in carrying out your development plans, and I hope that all adjoining property owners will do the same.

Wishing you success in all your plans, I am,

Very truly, T. JULIAN M'GILL.

Chairman Golf Committee, Capital City Country Club.

PARRISH WINS THE GOLD MEDAL

For the Best Total Score in the Three Endurance Runs of the Atlanta Motorcycle Club.

The third and last of the three endurance runs staged by the Atlanta Motorcycle club was brought to a successful close on Sunday, April 19.

The route selected was over the circuit, which was the same course as the second run held March 15. From Atlanta to Kennesaw mountain, Cartersville, over York and Brush mountains into Rome.

Dinner was scheduled at Rome. From Rome the route wended its way to Cave Springs, Rockmart, Cedartown, Austell and back to Atlanta, a distance of 190 miles.

A fast schedule was fixed and Rome was reached before noon. From Rome to Atlanta a heavy rain was encountered and the riders rode in mud most of the way.

Two Finish.

Only two of the original bunch of fifty started finished. They were R. B. Parrish and Johnny Aiken.

This series of three runs was termed the elimination endurance contest. No harder runs have ever been scheduled for Georgia motorcyclists than the last two.

Altoona mountains, which the riders had to cross, was nothing but a terraced footpath filled with rocks and sand. Creeks, hidden behind sharp bends, made it possible only to ride on two speeds and the rain over Georgia's red clay made the going doubly hard.

Riders were expected to mail cards back to Atlanta from each control. Several of them have not reported yet, and most of them were days late in reporting. The ride was so severe that several of the riders had to eat their meals standing up.

Parrish Wins Medal.

R. B. Parrish made the only perfect score during the three runs, this counting on the first run. All riders agreed that it was impossible for a perfect score to be registered over the last two courses.

Parrish won the gold medal offered to the rider making the best total score for the three runs. Aiken won the first prize in the last three runs and second best score among the riders.

The five best total scores are as follows:

Rider and Machine.	Score.
R. B. Parrish, Harley-Davidson..	1,971
Johnny Aiken, Harley-Davidson..	1,946
N. H. Hudson, Thor	1,896
H. Badinger, Indian	1891
L. Ewing, Harley-Davidson	886

In the three contests, 6 Harley-Davidsons, 4 Thors, 3 Popes, 2 Excelsiors and 2 Indians, with scattering others, competed. The total mileage for the three runs was 480 miles.

Excellent prizes were offered by local dealers in addition to the gold medal that Parrish won.

The race scheduled for April 26 has been called off. The rough going April 19 tore up most of the machines and the riders do not care to risk them again.

ONCE MORE INDIAN WINS FAMOUS JARROTT TROPHY

For the second time since it was offered for competition, the famous Jarrott cup motorcycle trial in Great Britain has been won by an Indian, the repeat being scored in the seventh competition for the trophy conducted by the Motor Cycling Club of London, April 11-12. E. A. Collyer, riding a standard touring model Indian "T" was the winner against a field of 132 starters representing the best riders of Great Britain. The course was from London to Land's End and return over various routes, the distance being 568 miles. Two difficult hills also had to be negotiated non-stop to qualify for medals. The object of the contest was to demonstrate the reliability of competing machines, and entries were in from all leading factories, who sent their best riders.

Collyer's performance is a consistent follow-up to the first capturing of the trophy by the Indian in 1911 with the late Arthur Moorhouse "up." Moorhouse scored over a field of sixty-nine starters of whom only thirty-seven finished. The Indian is the only American motorcycle which ever has won the Jarrott cup

RALPH SPOTTS WINS AMATEUR TRAP SHOOT

New York, April 26.—Ralph L. Spotts, of the New York Athletic club, won the ninth annual American amateur trap shooting championship at Travers Island today. In doing so he also made a new record for this event by breaking 186 out of 200 targets. There were 134 contestants.

L. H. Davis and S. W. Putnam, of the Boston Athletic association, won the two-man interclub team championship. The five-man interclub teams championship was won by Philadelphia.

Chalmers Trophy Commission Named for 1914 Campaign

Ren Mulford, Jr., of Cincinnati, chairman of the Chalmers trophy commission, has announced the names of the newspaper men who will serve on this commission for the season of 1914. The Chalmers trophy commission is a jury of newspaper men who annually select the player in both the National and American leagues, who has been of most value to his club during the league pennant race, and to the two men selected by this commission, Hugh Chalmers, of Detroit, presents the Chalmers trophy—which each season consists of two automobiles.

The Chalmers trophy commission for 1914 is as follows:

L. E. Sanborn, Chicago Tribune.
Tim Murnane, Boston Globe.
Al Vager, Brooklyn Eagle.
Jack Ryder, Cincinnati Enquirer.
H. G. Salsinger, Detroit News.
Grantland Rice, New York Mail.
Ralph S. Davis, Pittsburg Press.
J. C. Zamminger, Philadelphia North American.
Sid C. Keener, St. Louis Times.
J. Ed. Grillo, Washington Star.
Henry P. Edwards, Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Fifth Year.

The present season will be the fifth consecutive year during which the Chalmers trophy has been awarded in major league baseball. Mr. Chalmers' original offer to the national commission in presenting this trophy was that he would give automobiles to the most valuable players in the major leagues for five years. Since this is the last season included in the acceptance of the trophy by the national commission, 1914 may terminate the trophy commission and the awards.

For the past four years the Chalmers trophy awards have created favorable comment in baseball circles everywhere; in fact, the competition among the players for these major league prizes has at times closely rivaled the interest in the pennant race among followers of the game.

Mr. Chalmers' idea in offering these annual awards for the players of greatest proved ability was to establish a sort of baseball hall of fame. He felt that in the period of five years, the trophy awards would automatically create such a hall of fame. It is generally conceded by both followers and critics of baseball that Mr. Chalmers' original idea has worked out in the most satisfactory manner. The Chalmers trophy has been awarded to the most famous baseball players in the country, and almost without exception the decisions of the jury of newspaper men forming the Chalmers commission, have been favorably received by the baseball public.

Gave Two Cars.

In the first year of Mr. Chalmers' offer, the trophy was officially presented to the player who finished with the highest batting average. Fans will recall that both Cobb and Lajoie, of the American league, finished with a much higher average than any player in the National league; and that the race between the Detroit and Cleveland stars was so close that the official figures had to decide it. The margin in favor of Cobb was only a fraction of 1-000 per cent.

In view of the extreme closeness of the race, Mr. Chalmers very liberally awarded a second car, giving a trophy to each of these great batsmen.

Keen rivalry was aroused by the very closeness of this batting competition, and some unjust criticism was offered. To obviate the possibility of any similar unfortunate situation Mr. Chalmers offered the trophy for the next four years on a different basis: the award to be made to the major league players who proved of greatest value to their teams. Ren Mulford, Jr., a former newspaper man, an old friend of Mr. Chalmers, was asked by the donor to act as chairman of a trophy commission. Under the new award a jury of the leading baseball writers of the country, known as the Chalmers trophy commission, was appointed by Mr. Mulford. This commission is composed of one newspaper man from each city in which a major league is represented, and all cities where both National and American leagues are represented, the commission votes on players from both leagues. In cities represented by only one major league, the commissioner votes only for the league in which his city is represented.

By this method the commission of eleven men virtually makes two committees of eight. These eight men, serving for each league, vote for eight players of the league, naming the players as they would rank them in ability and value to their respective teams. In considering the value of a player to his team, his conduct on and off the field, his recognition of discipline, are considered as well as batting, fielding and all around playing ability

Eight Ballots.

When the eight ballots come in from each league, the players who receive eight points each are placed first on the ballots; those who receive seven points each are placed second, and so on, down to those who receive one point each who are placed eighth. The player who receives the greatest number of points in either league from the eight ballots gets the trophy. This method assures absolute fairness, as a player must be pretty generally recognized over the entire circuit to get the award.

In 1913, the first time the award was made under this system, Ty Cobb received 1st per cent of the votes—in other words he was placed first on all of the American league ballots for a total of 44 points. No other player has been unanimous choice of the Chalmers commission.

The Winners.

The players in the Chalmers' ball hall of fame are as follows:

1911—For the highest batting percentage only—Ty Cobb and Larry Lajoie.

For best all-round playing ability: American League—1911, Ty Cobb, Detroit; 1912, Tris Speaker, Boston; 1913, Walter Johnson, Washington.

National League—1911, Frank Schulte, Chicago; 1912, Larry Doyle, New York; 1913, Jake Daubert, Brooklyn.

EMORY STUDENTS ARE PULLING HARD FOR PERRYMAN

Emory College, Oxford, Ga., April 25. (Special.)—The Emory college student body has experienced some several pleasant sensations during its existence, but one topic has never been under so much and favorable discussion as the one in which Emmett Key Perryman, the former Emory college pitcher and graduate, has made good with the Atlanta team in the Southern league. In fact, when the average student begins to ruminate on his prospects of attending a ball game in Atlanta with the Cracker club as one party to the festivities, the invariable inquiry is, when do you suppose Perry will pitch again?

The win which he secured over Nashville in his last series when he made his debut and only permitted the Vols to secure but three hits has set the student body to a high pitch, and over the season's attendance, and this will be greatly augmented on the days that Perryman works. He will find well-wishers and backers pulling for him among every student that composes Emory's undergraduate ranks.

MILLER DISMUKES CO. PURCHASES THE BULL

Will Give Hat to Every Player That Hits It During the Present Season.

The Miller Dismukes Hat company at 41 Peachtree street, has purchased the bull sign at Ponce de Leon park.

Commencing with the game Monday with the Memphis Turtles the hatters will give to every player hitting the sign a new hat on order from the official scorer, who is sporting editor of The Constitution.

The Bull Durham company had done away with their awards in this way, and, quick to realize the advertising he would get from the same source, Mr. Dismukes has purchased the wooden bovine and has had his sign printed with his spikes or struts the college campus is the one who secured a hit, or several hits, off Perryman during his local days. Back yonder, and it has only been a year, some of the students who are present junior, junior and sophomore teams faced Perry in the box, and, not to his discredit, took oftimes defeated him. And, once thoughts loom up every time his name is seen on the sporting pages of the daily papers.

Although Birmingham won the opening day attendance trophy over Atlanta, many times during the present season the Cracker moguls will find Emory students adding a few numbers to the season's attendance, and this will be greatly augmented on the days that Perryman works. He will find well-wishers and backers pulling for him among every student that composes Emory's undergraduate ranks.

REDS FILE SUIT AGAINST KAYSEE FEDERAL CLUB

Chicago, April 25.—The Cincinnati Exhibition company, which operates the National League Baseball club, has filed suits in the superior court here asking $34,000 damages from C. C. Madison, president of the Kansas City Federal League club, and $10,000 from George Johnson, pitcher, as a result of Johnson's "jumping" to the Federal league. The complaint charges Madison with obtaining a player under contract with the Cincinnati club, and charges Johnson with breach of contract.

Johnson has been formally suspended from the players' fraternity, according to official notification from President David Fultz, of that organization, because of his alleged disregard of his Cincinnati contract.

The Greatest Tire

Yet 16 Makes Now Sell at Higher Prices

We Dropped 28%

In 1913, No-Rim-Cut tire prices dropped 28 per cent. No other tire dropped that much. Our mammoth output and new equipment gave us great advantage. And we pared our average profit last year down to 6½ per cent.

Now 16 makes sell at higher prices. Some up to one-half higher. You can get four Goodyears for the price of three of several rival makes.

Our All-Weather tread, double-thick and tough, as flat as a smooth tread, yet presenting to wet roads the deepest, sharpest, most ruthless grips.

These features have made No-Rim-Cut tires the most popular tires in the world. They have won, we judge, at least 400,000 users. They have saved tire users many millions of dollars. Yet not a tire sold at higher prices offers you any one of them.

Yet All Lack These

Yet all those higher-priced tires lack these four exclusive features:

Our No-Rim-Cut feature, which has ended rim-cutting entirely.

Our "On-Air" cure, which extra process costs us $1,500 daily. It is done to save the countless blow-outs due to wrinkled fabric.

Our rubber rivets, hundreds of which we create in each tire before we vulcanize. They are formed at the point where tread separation occurs, and they lessen this danger by 60 per cent.

Then Why Over-Pay?

Men are right in seeking the utmost in a tire, whatever the utmost costs. Tires skimped to sell at an underprice are the costliest tires in the long run.

But the evidence is that No-Rim-Cut tires are the best tires built today. And no reasonable reason can be given for a higher price.

ECONOMY vs. POLICY

VERY APTLY THE QUESTION has been asked: "How much should a car weigh?" The answer is just as apt: "It should weigh just what the proper margins of safety require in the whole unit, as shown by thorough experience and test by men competent to know."

FOR FOURTEEN YEARS the National has been a successful car, with no expenses required by mistakes of omission or commission. The new model Six 5-Passenger weighs but 3,650 pounds. It should weigh just that.

MANUFACTURERS BUILDING FOURS, so committed by design that the production of any other type would destroy every talking point on hand by reason of the fact that a six-cylinder of the same design would be of prohibitive weight, and a six-cylinder of standard design place them in direct competition with more experienced manufacturers, have asked this question—the answer is contained in this paragraph—Read between the lines—Policy dictates.

AS A MATTER OF FACT—there is no reason for war between sixes and fours—The Six is here to stay. No set of tests or engineers' efficiency tables can be confined to change facts.

THE NATIONAL SIX, weighing 3,650 pounds, is the best the market affords, and averages in fuel consumption, by one with personal experience, from 16.61 to 16.63 miles to the gallon.

THE WEIGHT OF A CAR should be consistent with modern engineering practice—not that of years gone by—and it should be with some consideration of the man who pays the bills.

National Six Roadster	$2,375.00
National Six 4-Passenger	$2,375.00
National Six 5-Passenger	$2,375.00
National Six 6-Passenger	$2,500.00

Barnesville, Ga., April 25.—(Special) The marriage of Miss Florrie Howard and Mr. Walter G. Jackson on the afternoon of Tuesday, April 28, was a brilliant social event in which several hundred guests were the happy participants.

The drawing room of the lovely home presented all the solemnity of the holy altar, where a background of fern gave myriads of white carnations the appearance of immortelles of snow. Six white pillars on either side of the altar supported many tall tapers that illuminated the scene with the ancient light of the sacred candle. A large butterfly of white tulle quivered on invisible wire just above the altar and valley lilies showered chandeliers and cabinets. The stairway was draped with smilax and clusters of roses terminating in a sash of white ribbon leading to the altar.

Miss Martha Stafford and Miss Katherine Summers entered followed by Miss Ruhle Stafford and Miss Maurine Woodburn. The maid of honor, Miss Cecil Beckham, of Atlanta, preceded the two little flower girls, Irene Simmons Murphey and Eugenia Hahr, who came down the stair way scattering rose petals before the bride. The DOCTOR'S ADVICE

by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply to any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College Street Sta., Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

ed. I would advise balmwort tablets, a compound well suited to such cases. Obtain in sealed tubes with directions for home use.

"Helen" writes: "Can you give me a reliable remedy for coughs and colds? My cough is so tight that I am afraid of pneumonia."

Answer: The tightest cough can be loosened in one hour by using the following: Get from your druggist a 1½ oz. package of essence mentho-laxene and make according to directions on bottle. This will break up any cold and loosen the tightest cough and soon cure it by its laxative tonic action.

"Miriam G." writes: "I am afflicted with stomach and bowel trouble and am fearful that it will result in appendicitis. Please advise me."

Answer: Undoubtedly a great many people could prevent appendicitis by using precaution, and overcoming stomach and bowel disorders in time. I advise that you take tablets triopeptine.

"Carpenter" writes: "I have pains in my spine and frightful headache in back of head, fainting spells, twitching and trembling, nervousness, sleeplessness, loss of appetite and strength, and in fact am a 'has been,' when it comes to performing accustomed work and duties. Please advise."

Answer: In all such cases the assimilative functions have not kept pace with waste functions and a powerful, harmless tonic treatment is needed. I find three grain cadomene tablets unexcelled and astonishingly beneficial in such cases and advise them for you.

"Mrs. W. C." asks: "Is it safe to reduce one's weight when it is excessive? I have often wanted to take something but have been afraid that it might do more harm than good."

Answer: Some remedies might not be safe, but I prescribe one which is both safe and effective. Ask any well stocked pharmacy for 1-grain arbelone tablets, packed in sealed tubes, with full directions for home use. They will usually reduce at the rate of a pound a day.

"Geraldine" writes "I am troubled a great deal with headache, dizzy spells, dark spots before my eyes, twinges of rheumatism. Can I be helped at all?"

Answer: You can not only be "helped" but you can be freed of all the troubles you mention. You need three-grain sulphets tablets (not sulphur) which are packed in sealed tubes and contain full directions for use. They are made of sulphur, cream of tartar and barb medicinal. If these are taken regularly they purify the blood, stimulate the liver and bowels into healthy action and will gradually effect a cure.

"Mother"—Bedwetting in children is usually a disease which can be corrected by the use of the following: Tincture cubebs, 1 dram; tincture rhus aromatic, 1 dram, comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz. Mix and give the child 15 to 30 drops in water one hour before each meal.

"Mrs. Jowsi C. writes: My husband is sorely afflicted with some kidney disease. He has become weak and suffers with headache and pains in his back and groins. Pains are like rheumatism. His ankles swell and his feet seem to be tired all the time. Some days he has chills and no appetite. Please prescribe."

Answer: The symptoms indicate derangement of kidneys and should not be neglected.

THE CONSTITUTION'S FIRE LINE

UNTERMYER SAYS LAWS DISCRIMINATE

"Allow Farmers to Combine But Suppress Merchants," Claims This New York Lawyer.

The morality of having anti-trust laws aimed to suppress co-operation in mercantile business and oppress business men, yet permitting all forms of combination among farmers and labor organizations, was the theme of an address by Samuel Untermyer, of New York. Mr. Untermyer was the chief speaker at the annual banquet in Chicago of the Western Economic society, an organization which promoted the first national farm conference last year and which has been active in promoting the second such conference, in session

Substitution of "regulated competition" for "unrestricted, ruinous competition," was advocated by Mr. Untermyer, who discussed the relation of the farmer to the trust problem and endorsed pending legislation banning various forms of combinations for marketing products of farms, factories and other industries.

"The chief criticism of legislation now under consideration in congress is that it does not go far enough on the constructive side of the regulation of competition," Mr. Untermyer said. "Various co-operative arrangements for marketing remain under the ban of the law. They include farm products as they should, if the prohibition of such agreements is to culminate to be the policy of the government.

Predicts End of System.

"The time must come soon when, with the aid of the industrial trade commission, the law, whatever it may be, will be generally and impartially enforced. This incredible situation of standing general immunity to the farmers to violate the law while they are demanding and securing its enforcement against the industrial world will not be longer tolerated.

"What is the real attitude of the farmer as a producer to the trust question? Is it just, sincere, consistent or public spirited? What should be his attitude both in his own interest and as a citizen? To this I answer, and shall endeavor to prove, that it is unjust, inconsistent and unwise.

"This broad indictment is based upon the drastic character of the anti-trust laws in the farming states as applied to all forms of industry other than farming; the exemptions that have been engrafted upon these laws in favor of the farmers, the failure to enforce the laws against them in states in which the exemptions do not exist, and the attitude of their representatives in congress, and the many open violations of the federal anti-trust law that exists by sufferance in the various forms, of pooling and selling arrangements among the farmers in the different sections of the country.

Trade Agreements Needed.

"Agreements between competitors that have for their sole purpose the prevention of ruinous competition and the securing of a reasonable profit should be made possible and lawful in all industries, subject to the approval and regulation of the new trade commission.

"Unrestricted, ruinous competition should be superseded by regulated competition," the former inevitably leads to monopoly; the latter does away with the temptation of the weak competitors and with every vestige of pretext for combination.

"The distinction between co-operation and combination is fundamental. The former is economically unsound and oppressive; the latter is distinctly beneficent if so supervised and restricted that the levying of tribute upon the public is prevented."

FAIN & STAMPS DISTRIBUTE CAR OF PRESERVES

On last Thursday Fain & Stamps received a solid carload of canned preserves, jellies and jams. The car was unloaded and the goods assorted on the same day. Friday morning they began to fill orders on these goods and before closing Friday they had filled orders and shipped out to the trade the entire carload.

SUCCESSFUL RETAILING RULES SUGGESTED

New York wholesale houses selling goods to the smaller merchants throughout the country, have formulated six rules for successful retailing. The following six were written doubtless with smaller general merchants in mind, and they are prime and well-worth careful consideration. It does not contemplate letting goods stand around until every one is sick of seeing them. It rather means moving and turning capital. This the department of business other than has gone it heretofore if he is to hold his individual position. The six rules are very simple—almost partaking, one would think, of the mercantile kindergarten. But ever needs look them over. Here they are:

1. Always keep the store and its people bright and clean.

2. Buy only after making careful and thorough comparisons, and then often and in small quantities.

3. Sell a few things at no profit that many things may be sold at a good profit.

4. Mark all prices in plain figures.

5. Have one price for all.

6. Continually crowd the selling of the utmost.

W. J. HAYES WORKS CITY TRADE IN NEW FORD CAR

W. J. Hayes, city salesman for Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, in future will be seen riding around town in a Ford automobile. Yes, he owns the car, bought it last week, and has decided that he couldn't get around on his daily visit to the trade quite as fast as he thought was necessary, and after due deliberation, the purchase of a Ford was agreed out to be the best remedy. Now he is petting on speed all right, and his battle cry is "Watch my sales record climb."

No Room for Doubt.

"Are they union made?" asked the congenial Irishman, as he stood in his doorway inspecting some goods offered for sale by a peddler.

"If they are," he continued, "I don't see any label on them."

"Is everything you have in your house union made?" asked the peddler in rankee-like fashion, and he cast his eye about, finally resting on a couple of little "kiddies" as they clung to their father's knees.

"You bet your life they are!" answered the Irishman, with a bright twinkle in his blue eyes.

"Everything here is union made, and there is the label," and he pointed his finger to the marriage certificate, which was framed and hanging upon the wall, "and it is signed by Father Gunn, the president of the union."

The Garb of Spring

All nature now is budding forth in bloom, leaf and bloom.
And lovers strolling 'midst such scene should soon be bride and groom.

It's said that plants have life and breathe and drink as people do
But as I am no scientist I'll leave that thought to you.

There's lots of things we do not know;
this much well confess,
But speaking of the life of plants we know that live ones dress.

For see the dogwood and the peach,
the apple and the plum.
The way that they're bedecked I'd say that "sure" is dressing "some."

Now all this verdant scenery, with weather getting warm,
Makes mankind want to harmonize somewhat with nature's charm.

And here I'll drop a gentle hint to those who read my rhyme
If they go where I tell them to to buy their merchandise.

The place I have in mind is where your money buys much more.
It is the well known Smith & Higgins big department store.

ATTEMPT TO DISRUPT NATIONAL RETAILERS

J. H. Hellweg, of Wisconsin, Charges Officers With Attempt to Perpetuate Their Control.

According to The Interstate Grocer of St. Louis, the enterprise of the National Retail Grocers' association in starting the publication of an official monthly trade paper of its own, greatly to the dislike of the Grocery and Commercial Trade Journal, caused some of its members, is likely to result in the formation of a rival grocery trade association, and will most certainly be the liveliest thing heard of at the forthcoming convention of the National retailers at Louisville next month.

Charges made according to The Interstate Grocer, that J. H. Hellweg, former president of the Wisconsin Retail Grocers' association and a prominent figure in grocery trade association circles, is the pivot for the involution of the new organization. In a letter he is quoted as saying: "We have always had the good will of manufacturers, wholesalers and jobbers, but in issuing a national paper we are antagonizing them. The officers of the national association are becoming too much.

"Do you know that I have letters asking that we, of the middle west, organize an association to be known as the Mississippi Valley Retail Dealers' association? I am advising modification and urging them to attend the National association convention and work together for good measures. I am nearly 70 years old, and do not want to enter into organizing a new association, but favor a larger national association—one which will not work to accumulate money simply for a toy meeting of a sectional administration society, but one which will see the danger of the elimination of the rural trade."

PROHIBITS MAILING FALSE STATEMENTS

Credit Men's Association Seeks Federal Legislation. Bill Already Introduced in Congress.

The National Association of Credit Men, which was largely responsible for the legislation strengthening the bankruptcy law, has recommended to congress the enacting of a law prohibiting the transmission through the mails of false statements for the purpose of procuring credit. A bill (H. R. 14328) to that effect has just been introduced by Representative Sabath. It reads as follows:

"That any person who shall deposit or cause to be deposited in any postoffice or station thereof, branch postoffice, or street or other letter box of the United States, or authorized depository for mail matter to be conveyed or delivered by the postoffice establishment of the United States, or shall knowingly cause to be delivered by mail according to the direction thereon, any letter, writing or circulars, containing or being a statement of a false or fictitious nature, or a request for the discount of an account receivable, or the making of an acceptance, discount, sale or indorsement of a bill of exchange, or promissory note, for the benefit either of himself or such person, firm or corporation in whom he is interested or for whom he is acting, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or by imprisonment of not more than one year, or both, by fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the court."

SMILING SMITH HOLDS BIG TRADE THAT OTHERS LOSE

Did I ever tell you about old man Smith, who owned a little grocery store on one of the corners away down the street in Charlotte?

I don't believe I have, so I want you to tilt back in your chair and hear about a man who knew how to hold business.

If the old man was as happy as he looked and acted, he was the personification of happiness. And this never failing trait always is in evidence—not a noisy, make-you-weary, hypocritical exhibition, but the real, genuine article. A happiness that was not supreme unless he could help you to be happy, too.

When you stepped in the door of Smith's store, Smith always seemed to be there, and you always looked for him. You also always found him and no matter what he was doing, he looked up, spoke your name, and smiled.

A Smile Like the Sun.

Not one of those you've-got-10-cents-in-your pocket-and-I-want-it grins, but a nice, warm, cheering, really-glad-to-see-you smile that made you feel at home.

If your little son, Sammie, was with you, Sammie would get a bigger smile than you and also a "Hello, there, Sammie, you haven't been in for two weeks. Where you been keeping yourself"—which made Sammie regale with pleasure over getting so much unusual notice all in one bunch, and also pleased you immensely because you realised that Sammie was a very dear friend of Smith's children and you felt really kindly toward Smith because he was one of the few people who observed it.

If Smith was waiting on a customer his attention came back quickly to that customer after you and Sammie were duly greeted, and you were supposed to make yourself "at home" until your turn came to be waited on.

Your turn came and while you were untangling the little strip of paper from the lining in your vest pocket, Smith was busy passing a nice big stick of candy across to Sammie, accompanied by one of his Simon-pure smiles, which was followed immediately with inquiries from you about the wife and the rest of the family.

Trade Won by Memory.

It seemed as if Smith knew the names of every man, woman, child, dog and cat for nine miles in every direction, and that faculty was worth thousands of dollars of business to him every year—that and his smile.

There was a large double store down in the main part of the town, that carried a stock ten times as big as Smith's, but many a time have I gone by there, nothing to do, and there were no customers in or going in, while Smith would be waiting on one, his clerk on another, and with one or two more waiting as I walked in. The smile did it.

John Bivey & Co. had an exceptional business last week on chickens and molines, reported Mr. Rambo. The stock on hand was rather low at the beginning of the week; fortunately, however, about the time the demand began a large shipment of Chase poultry was received from the east by express.

Points on Buying For Retail Trade In Country Store

By S. A. Sanderson.

I have been asked to discuss a topic that I have never before attempted, and that is the subject of buying. My hobby, and practically all of my attention has been devoted to selling, hence the question my ability to guide your thoughts along the line of what constitutes intelligent buying.

There are all kinds of buyers. Business is a task and profits, and capital is a myriad of sponges. These sponges should be dipped in one at a time, taken out and squeezed dry, squeezed dry. Very few of us squeeze these sponges dry.

This is an age of science. Science moves our commerce. Science replaced the messenger with the mail system of today; science replaced the tallow candle with our modern gas and electric light. It has replaced the old-fashioned cobbler's shop with the modern shoe factory, and the blacksmith with the great giant the steel industry. Science is nothing more or less than classified knowledge and must be used in buying as well as in selling.

Efficiency in Buying.

"Efficiency in buying." That is a good one. The keynote of business today is service. When you sell a man a label or ribbon or any article, you are likewise selling him your service. Chain stores right company recognized it better than any one for they charge you for their readiness to serve, and when they buy goods you must remember that only so much money can enter their store at the end of the month. When we sell a dollar's worth of goods we should have a minimum profit. You have your advertising of 1½ to 2 per cent, you have a miscellaneous expense of perhaps 4 to 7 per cent. Salary is also another important element. You must have good merchandise that you have to buy and good salesman to sell it, and if either of these be weak your business will be weak. The rent is fixed. With these elements entering into the matter the cost of the merchandise becomes a very vital one. How much can you afford to pay for the merchandise that you expect to sell for the dollar?

This talk is divided into several subdivisions. The first is variety versus variety. There is only one answer. If you have a thousand yards of calico and your customer wants gingham, you could not sell the calico if you talked yourself blind. If a man wants 5-penny nails and you had ten cars of 20-penny nails you could not sell him the 20-penny. Many of us make the mistake of tieing up our money in merchandise that is only 5 or 10 per cent off of the regular price, tieing it up to quantity rather than keeping the variety.

Overstocks.—We should keep a systematic watch of our buying and this can be easily guarded against. There is no reason why a merchant should have an overstock of over 10 per cent. Do this systematically.

Stickers.—This occurs usually when you buy against your own judgment. The traveling men overpersuades you, and the result is a sticker, first, because you buy against your own judgment, and second, because in all probability you do not consult your clerks about it. They stay with it and the goods is interested and you should consult him.

As to the Jobber.

Relation to Jobber.—Many merchants are short-sighted in their relation to the people from whom they buy their goods. You can get better terms from the traveling man, or the manufacturer, or anybody else if you apply the golden rule. Suppose you were the seller, how would you want to be treated if you came in to try to sell a bit of goods? Treat him with courtesy, then you will do business, and he will be glad to do you a favor. I admit some traveling men are coarse, but we are not all that. Another thing is, do not buy of all jobbers, but decide on the man who you think will give you the best of service and stay with him and he will give you the best prices. If he doesn't, then, of course, go to some one else.

Seasonable Goods.—The idea of the buyer is to have the right goods in the right quantity at the right time and to be out of them at the moment the call for them ceases. When you do that you are a judicious buyer. The best suggestion I can offer is, when you are convinced you want a line of goods, cut the quantity you want to buy in two. Put them in stock and first see how they sell. You can always reorder, as the factories do not go out of business.

Style Changes.—In the millinery business the style changes after the goods are ordered. They must be ordered by express, as they change in New York every thirty days, but even in other articles this matter should be carefully watched.

Reorders.—I have already covered this.

Future Orders.—This means buying goods ahead. That has to be done sometimes. There are certain lines of goods that it is necessary to anticipate on, and you can do this, but in this you should carefully go back to last year's purchases and sales and use your very best judgment and do not buy beyond your requirement for sixty or ninety days. There may be extreme cases where it might be wise to buy a four months' supply.

Nat Gunter, of the Ragan-Malone company sales force, has been making trips during the past two weeks, showing his fall lines of ladies' and misses' cloaks. Mr. Gunter is showing over thirty different manufacturers' lines which Ragan-Malone contracted for, to make orders according to specifications.

NEW RULE ON SAMPLES TREASURY PRESCRIBES

Treasury Department Prescribed Method of Marking for Identification.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Malburn issued an order modifying the customs regulations relating to the importation under bond of commercial samples. In a letter to the collector at New York, Mr. Malburn authorizes the collector "to receive samples solely for use in taking orders for merchandise when entered under bond for exportation, to be marked by such means as will insure the identification thereof upon exportation." The old instructions as to the method of marking articles of wearing apparel and similar articles will stand with the following additions:

"Articles not readily susceptible of marking by cord and seal may be marked for identification in such manner as the nature of the article will permit, and the examiner shall indorse on the invoice a description of the manner in which the articles have been marked.

"Such marking and labeling shall be done at the expense of the importer.

"The ruling further modifies the regulations relating to manufactures of commercial value to read as follows:

"Samples of cloth, edgings, laces, embroideries, upholstery goods, textile fabrics and other articles not suitable for use otherwise than as samples for the sale of merchandise, either because of small size or because so punched, cut or slashed, as to render them incapable of such use, when reported by the appraiser to be of no commercial value, may be admitted free of duty without any bond for their exportation being given.

"Wines, liquors, perfumes, biscuits, buttons and other articles imported for free distribution as advertising matter should not be returned as being of no commercial value."

Recreation Mad, Atlanta Fills Cemeteries Each Sunday Afternoon

The season of Sunday outings is at hand. The suns hine and greenery lure us all to the parks and woods. Left to right: Mrs. Alberta Richardson, Lillian Boyd and Lucille Harden. Mrs. J. Thomas Marsh on the shore of the West View lake. Mrs. Bowles Mackell exploring spring blossoms in the outskirts of Druid Hills.

By Britt Craig.

Now that the straw hat is beginning to bud and spring styles are fast eclipsing the garb of winter, tired city folks are hieing their weary selves on Sundays to the recreation parks, where they get a lot more weary by walking over endless hills and trying to take at the same time the baby and the kodak and the bundle of lunch that insists upon becoming untied.

This business of finding recreation is a quite popular diversion. It is one of our national pastimes. You start out bright and early of a Sunday morning—which, on Sunday mornings means anywhere between 10 o'clock and noon—feeling fit as a fiddle, owing to the liberal sleep you had in the morning.

You finally get the wife under way, and there is only one further obstacle in your path of progress, which lies from the apartment door to the next corner where the trolley car stops. And that obstacle is the beveled glass doorway at the entrance to your apartment house, where the good wife invariably perceives in the glass that there isn't sufficient powder thereon to conceal the incandescence of her nasal projection—and has to stop to do it all over again.

Heard Where You Get Busy.

Because the wife's hands are so overwhelmingly engaged with purse, powder box, vanity box, chatelle bags and Lord knows what all else—everything that Pandora had, and more, too —you consider it your painful duty to carry the baby, bead fashion, across two, if not younger—by the hand, and all your arms with lunch, kodak and anything else the wife thinks necessary to carry along. If you yourself fail to consider this your duty, the wife will consider it for you.

It naturally as trouble, therefore, to do the cons ing on your own book. Some of have let our husbands trained ity in this gentle art. Others ha —as yet—but the bubbles are well under way. That's the dickens of living women her rights. She tries to take too many. She doesn't leave the other half any.

But, as I started to say, and neglected, you start out feeling fit as a fiddle, or any other musical instrument that is physically fit. You have had a good night's sleep, and, though slumbered two hours overtime—it being Sunday, and Sunday possessing no business cares except to the newspaper man who is unfortunate enough to have to take a job on a morning newspaper.

You feel fit and fine, all right, but the moment the wife suggests recreation—one phase of domestic life where wifey does the considering herself—you get the delusion that you aren't feeling quite as fit as you would feel if you went out in pursuit of a bit of recreation. So, you—aided and abetted by the good wife—set about to spend most of the day in assimilating recreation.

Goodby Care.

You throw dull, workyday cares in whatever winds are blowing, let down the windows, dodge the dust and leave a note for the cook. Do you? But, maybe not! I seem to have overlooked the fact that everybody eats cold snack at supper on Sundays. These hall rooms (three flights up, first door to the left) and Greek lunch counters certainly demoralize one's ideas of home life!

Well, then in the case of Cold Snack versus the State of Having No Cook on Sunday Nights, you won't write a note to the presiding genius of the street, but, instead, you will shave the Maltese into the dumb-waiter and send her below to associate with bad company on neighboring backyard fences until your return.

Then, still feeling fit as a fiddle, but laboring under the wrong impression that you are not fit enough, you start out to chase recreation over a dozen hills and across wide areas of broiling sun. After awhile recreation becomes as elusive as the streakedly-effected butterfly your wife pursues into a thicket and after having driven it therein, insists upon you flushing it therefrom.

And, gradually but surely, you begin to lose what fitness you possessed at the praticular hour you carried the shaving mug into the bathroom preparatory to the facial mowing, and complained because the bath-fiends downstairs used all the hot water before you reached your own spigot.

And, after you have walked miles and miles and more miles and your wife lags along and her hair begins to straggle across her cheeks and she says you to hold her hand-load of trinkets while she fixes it back again, and baby begins to cry and Marjorie pleads to be allowed to sit down for awhile, you begin to cast about for a place to spread lunch.

Picnics Everywhere.

And fin Right where the ants are thickest and redbugs the most dastardly. In this instance might also be mention d pine needles and last winter's dead and crackly leaves that make the premises anything but a bed of roses, and likewise, fail to add to the pleasure of your outdoor repast. Along about the time you get to making great inroads into the jam and chicken sandwiches, various personages heave into sight and giggle at the spectacle of Marjorie's jam-adorned mouth and cheeks and her inky-black fingers. Other hungry youngins whose filial owners happened not to bring their lunches—thereby happening to have none at all that day—gaze with gaping envy at your spread, and inspire great embarrassment within your bosom. You turn your eye upon them with much anger, as though you could fling them all into the creek down in the hollow. In general, you present an aspect much on the order of, as the expressive Baltimore Criddle puts it: "A bundle of accidents looking around for somewhere to happen."

You eat peerishly and your lunch doesn't do you as much good as it would have done within the cosy and comfortable environs of the apartment. You pick up baby and the camera and thank Providence that you and your family have wrapped your tired and woebegone selves around the lunch that you now don't have to carry.

And, taking Marjorie again by the hand—after you have eradicated the jam from her face and hands, which process transferred most of the black stuff to your own fingers—you resume pursuit of the fugitive recreation. By this time, you are so weary and discontented that you don't care whether you overtake it or not—or whether it gets so far beyond your reach that some other fellow nabs it.

By and by something seems to tell you it is getting late. Maybe it's your aching bones, or baby's fretfulness, or Marjorie's whimpers, or the way wifie straggles in the rear. Anyway the hunch is a good one, and you look toward the west and see the sun lowering to the horizon with the same kind of a droop you feel in your own shoulders.

And, right then and there you consider—absolutely on your own initiative—that it's time to go home. And, the wife, who is too tired to combat your opinion, allows you to consider just as you confounded please. Then you meander without alacrity—or anything remotely related to it—to the car line, some several miles distant.

They Droop and Lag.

Gathered around the place where the cars stop is a crowd of individuals in the same tragic condition as yourself. They droop and lag and seem to be totally indifferent whether the car runs or not. The only time you note a change in them is when the trolleyed chariot comes up to the spot, when they clamber aboard like a herd of frightened cattle—and just as gracefully.

You climb aboard and find convenient standing room betwen two fat ladies and in front of a fatter gentleman. You hold baby and a strap at the same time, although you feel constantly that you haven't a firm clutch on either. These trolley straps are so constructed that they can't be formed a combine. It is impossible to get an option—a satisfactory option—on even one of the blooming things.

Wifie sits on three square inches of seat and a square foot of imagination and holds Marjorie on her knee, and persists in pointing out spots of interest as the trolley jolts townward. However, the particular and undefined haven in which you are scheduled by the fates to spend eternity would hold no interest to you if the car stopped directly in front of it, and wifie pointed an accusing finger in its direction.

Within an age or so, after you have transferred a half dozen times, you arrive at the corner near your apartment building, where you began the tragedy-drama in which you searched for outdoor comfort, and, in its quest, you still hold on the perfectly satisfactory indoor comfort you felt when you started out.

Glad to Be Home.

Dusk is abroad over the city in drab. You reach the apartment entrance. Wifie is too fatigued to gaze upon her reflection in the bevel glass. It doesn't matter now if her nose has the appearance of a pickled beet and is twice as glossy. Often you have cursed the building which you now are entering for the last lap of a defeated race with recreation, and frequently you have threatened to move to some of your own, but, in your present state, the flowers and half-darkened old apartment building looks like the kind of loving domicile that John Howard Payne wrote about. And you climb the stairs with eagerness, wondering, possibly, if the Maltese is safe and uncontaminated by her back-fance associates.

Half way up the tedious stairs you meet Mrs. C. Hollingsworth Smyth, tripping lightly downward, humming something cheery and fanciful. Mrs. Smyth lives in the next apartment. She stayed home all day in search of recreation—and found it. She can afford to trip lightly down the steps and hum a cherry something as she trips.

"Oh, hello!" greets Mrs. Smyth "Spend an enjoyable day?"

"Certainly," you answer, too egotistic to admit otherwise. "Great, glorious time!"

"Oh, how lovely! Some day you must carry me with you!"

"Sure! The very next time we go! You must come along!"

You might really have felt that way about it while you talked to Mrs. Smyth, but, as you wend your weary way to the apartment, you inwardly wonder what Mrs. Smyth has done to you that you should hold such a grievance against her.

And, later, you conclude that it would indeed be a terrible vengeance to impose upon Mrs. Smyth.

But, next Sunday, it's the same.

We all need recreation.

Recreation Mad.

Atlanta goes recreation mad of Sundays in the summer time. Along about 2 p. m., during our summer Sabbaths there are not enough citizens left in the city limits to organise a self-respecting sewing circle. They are out in the woods, and the fields, and the parks, and other outdoor spots.

Atlanta has utilized every available source of outdoor recreation. The parks each Sunday are filled to capacity. Verily, most of them overflow. There aren't enough to go around. As a consequence, some of the most popular spots sought by the seeker of Sabbath outdoor freedom have now become the cemeteries.

And why shouldn't they?

There are some beautiful spot in Atlanta than West View cemetery or the others. Long, gravel walks, with expansive areas of lawn and flower beds are a lot more inviting for the seeker of quietude and recreation than the professional or public park, where one must indulge in the strenuous pastime of boating or swiming or other active amusements. If not that, he must submit to the cry of the popcorn and candy vender and the wail of the misfortunates of the zoos.

You can either ride or walk in the cemeteries, for in most of them automobiles are allowed. You pass through beautiful and fragrant flower gardens thriving admist towering monuments and marble designs. Here and there are artistic floral figures blooming in the green and spacious beds of grass.

Forget Presence of Dead.

Unless you are there to view the grave of a loved one, you forget the presence of the dead. There is certainly nothing to remind you of death other than a fresh mound here and there and vari-colored floral tributes that denote recent funerals. Then, too, as you round a curve of the graceful drives, you're likely to come upon a sad and tearful widow in black, who is planting fresh flowers upon a fresh mound.

There is a melancholy something that is entertaining about these black-clad figures that stoop over the heap of earth in the green-sward areas. You cannot help but halt and gaze upon them. Their very faithfulness to a love that has gone into eternity is absorbing. The tenderness with which they arrange their flower tributes—as though they were stroking the locks of the one on whose last resting place their attentions are being bestowed—is absorbing. Everything about them is absorbing. The fresh mound, their black-clad presence, the flowers, everything.

There seems to be a gladness in their grief—an exultation in the faithfulness to the love that sleeps beneath the sod. Love, itself, is a mystic. The lover feels greatness in love when there is sacrifice to be made. When there is no spirit of ready sacrifice, there is no love.

The comely little woman in black, with dark veil clinging to her face and blowing, now and then, in the breeze, who climbs the green sod fewsecond knoll to fetch a bag of earth that rises mound-like from the surface, is an enrapturing picture. It is something you don't care to look upon, but is something you cannot help but watching.

And then you change to another picture. You round the curves on the picturesque walk and you come upon a gay party of youths and girls snapshotting in the exquisite scenery of the place. There is the fullness of youth about them and the very atmosphere around them blankets the vision of sadness you have just left.

Grief and pleasure go hand-in-hand nowadays in the cemeteries. Like the great authors who wrote stories that were interlined with bits of tragedy and laughter, the cemetery of today links pathos with pleasure. You can go to it for recreation or grieved communion with the spirit departed. For recreation or for vent of sorrow; for laughter or tears.

Truly, the cemetery has become a democratic caring house of emotions.

Woods Lie Beyond.

And beyond them lie the woods, the deep shady stretches of forest, where the tall trees beckon the lovers and invite the fugitive from the sun's steady rays—and tempt the philosophic soul who wishes to wander alone. The crystal brooklets gurgle their incessant songs in the woodland valleys, and there is a bit of adventure in the footlage across them, where a fall means a lot more than it looks, and where to cross in safety means a feat.

The cemetery is no longer the sad and shunned city of dead. It is an outdoor haven, and it's the mecca of thousands of weary souls who seek the beauty of the flower lands that thrive along the graceful drives, and the tonic of a day in the open.

The artistic achievements that arise at every turn are inspirational, and the daintily chiseled stone at the head of a mound vies with the beauty of the tasty flower bed nearby. The statues bold uplifted hands from their white pedestals over the vast stretches of color as though they wished to crown the scene with the stone wreaths they hold aloft.

Over yonder is a green pool that ripples from shore to shore upon the cast of stone. Weeping willows lean over its brink as though to express one sentiment of the cemetery, while the laughing stream that plays over the dam expresses the other.

And there are countless other attractions to the recreation-seeker—attractions too numerous to mention here, for, verily, even the public park has ceased to be a resort of grief, and has become the mecca of lovers of out-of-door journeys and of beauty incomparable.

MRS. ISABEL GORDON CURTIS.

The Congress Woman. By Isabel Gordon Curtis. Author of "The Woman from Wolverton," etc. Mrs. Cynthia Pike, a refined, cultured woman of an, has been left a widow, with plenty of money, one young son, Deborah, and Teenie, an old Scotch nurse, who was much companion as servant, and whose sorrow was very deep over the loss of the departed Bunyan Pike. She worked for years to get Cynthia coulding help but what a light hand the latter kept on the lines, sick though he was. Then are like life itself. It's the reason I've stayed plain Teenie With a consistently strong mind myself. If there were two of us pulling the reins, life would has been a mir tug of war. Then she decided that he's gone ye ought tae begin tae ta'ntotice," she told her mistress.

The Lone Squaw Strip, which was called the widow's mite, when the will was read, proved to be a gold mine, and she woke up to the fact that she was a young lady of wealth, ripe properly at her command. In Oklahoma, her state, the suffrage movement is very active and her circle of women friends persuade her to become a candidate for congress. She consents to run and wins the election, which causes her to realise the big job she has taken on upon her hands, that is, being the only woman in congress, but with her tact and ability manages to find time to hold her own; she soon finds, however, that the work involves many things not suitable for women. She rents one of the handsomest mansions in Washington and on account of her wealth becomes a social leader, but in the game of politics, although she has the very best advice and assistance, she is unable to contend with the antagonistic and unscrupulous forces that are combined against her. The culmination comes when a sensational newspaper publicly charges her with having accepted a large check from a big corporation for her vote on an important question, and while she is able to prove this charge untrue it thoroughly disgusts her with the role she has undertaken—the "congress woman." She is sick of the suffragettes, feminists, and many other women who plead daily for her to go through legislation in their behalf, of the large that are open on all sides to which she is not blind until she finally tells the women in a strong public speech just what she thinks of the suffrage movement which caused the public forces to break out and call her a traitor, a renegade and a wobbler. Then Cynthia Pike care for Washington politics, for she had made up her mind to go back to her old Oklahoma home and marry the sensible, devoted man who had been the power behind her throne through it all and who had been waiting patiently for it to end, as he felt sure it would all along.

Mrs. Curtis has written one of the most interesting and powerful stories of the year, and it comes at a time when the entire country is interested in suffrage. There are no dull pages in it, but many lively ones, and it will be one of the most popular of the spring books. (Brown & Howell Co., Chicago.)

Women's Who's Who of America. A Biographical Dictionary of Contemporary Women of the United States and Canada—1914-15. John William Leonard, editor-in-chief.

The idea for publishing a "Who's Who" originated in England about sixty years ago, but until about fifteen years ago it was confined solely to the aristocracy of that country. Miss Douglas Sladen, an Australian writer, revised the first volume and attempted to make then this present writer Americanized and democratized the idea. In reality the first volume cover the United States subjects. This, too, was met with instant recognition and now his books have become among the best reference books in regard to American people that the press has ever brought out. After coming to New York and engaging an editor for two editions, relating to the notables of the Empire State, Mr. Leonard became convinced that there was need for a book which would deal entirely with women, and with the late L. R. Hafferty began to gather data for such a book, but it was abandoned. Two years ago this present enterprise was projected and Mr. Leonard was asked to undertake its editorial direction.

The reasons for a "Women's Who's Who" are many. The "Who's Who" of the past have given comparatively little attention to women. And now that Women's activities have so rapidly increased during the past few years that there is not now a single professional or intellectual field, even the agricultural, which has not been entered by women, and they have made good outside of the collegiate institutions, which are now open to women, the great number of women's clubs are now not only found in the cities, but in every town and village in the country composed of women who are studying literature, civics, sociology, current events, and with this education comes ambition, and today woman is asserting herself not only in these activities grouped under the name of "the feminist movement," but in competition with men in all avenues which heretofore have been considered masculine.

The volume contains brief personal sketches of 9,844 women, of whom 5,203 are or have been married, and 3,241 are unmarried. Every state in the United States and every province in the Dominion of Canada is represented. If readers, men and women, will stop and think it will be a revelation of the different lines, the different fields in which women of this century are working and influencing the movements for better living, higher ideals, cleaner politics and for the uplift of society, education and religion which is truly a woman's work. In the preface Mr. Leonard explains all the above lines and the earnest effort he is making to have this "Woman's Who's Who of America" a reference book of permanent value to those who wish information about the women of the United States and Canada, should make it one of the most successful volumes of information ever published. (Publishers, The American Commonwealth company, New York.)

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY.

Frankby Parsonage. For Anthony Trollope. The Barsetshire novels of Bohn's libraries are among the most popular of 1914 literature, and this new novel of the Framley set, and the Chaldicotes set, is interesting from first to the last. (C. Bell & Sons, London, and the MacMillan company, New York.)

The Story of Phaedrus. By that wonderful scholar, Newell Dwight Hillis, "How We Got the Greatest Book in the World." There is a little history, a little legend dashed with some fiction, and you have one of the most interesting tales of early Christian days. While it is truly dramatic it is also human, and we feel a deep interest in those real, once living human people in those far-off days when religion was but a white rose bud of promise.

Democracy and Race Friction. By John M. Mecklin. The author in his preface disclaims any pretensions toward a final solution of the race problem, although he claims to have given a true statement of the facts and conditions he asks, and perhaps to answer himself are agreed. He claims that his view of this question is frank, concise and clear, and that he deals with the essential and fundamental which never loomed larger than at the present moment."

The Montessori Method of the American School. By Florence Elizabeth Ward. We gave a notice of this book some time ago, and it is one of the best known, best read books in the libraries, homes and schools today.

The Posterflex. By Rabindranath Tagore. The author having won the Nobel prize for literature not long before that won the admiration of two worlds, does not need any comments on his work, but we add a word given to another volume of idealistic literature by this great Hindu poet and preacher.

DOUBLEDAY, PAFE & CO.

Psychology and Social Sanity. By Hugo Munsterberg. The author, a popular writer, whose books are now twenty in number, have touched upon many of the most interesting topics of the day, has now written "Psychology and Social Sanity," New York, 1914. Among the table of contents are Socialism, Thought Transference, Sex Education, Social Sins in Advertising, Society and the Dance, Native Psychology, etc. The book tells how social problems may be settled, social reforms and soundness hastened by its study.

Vandover and the Brute. By Frank Norris. Author of "The Octopus," etc. The manuscript of this story went through the San Francisco earthquake and fire, and being fortunate enough to escape is now making its debut direct from the author's hands to the publishers. It is said to be very unusual, for manuscripts are generally revised many times before they reach the publisher. (Review of Reviews.)

Ade's Fables. It is useless to announce that it is George Ade, for there is only one Ade, and you know him as the author of "Pink Marsh," "Doc Thorne," or, perhaps, "The College Widow," on the stage, or "The County Chairman" or "The Old Town." Mr. Ade has been so busy for the past few years in writing for Gentlemen's Farmer on his splendid Indiana farm and writing a few successful plays that he has not given any time to books, and now that you have the opportunity of reading another with the title of "Ade's Fables" you will realise how much you have missed by his absence from the literary world "down on the farm."

JOHN C. WINSTON COMPANY.

The Merchant of Venice (novel from Shakespeare Series, by a popular novelist). A romance founded on Shakespeare's play which it complies in the form of fiction. This novel will not only appeal to the lovers of Shakespeare who read the works in any form, but to all lovers of the best of the world's romances which are told in prose by this author, and yet expressed in Shakespeare's own words.

The Uttermost Farthing. By R. Austin Freeman, author of "The Mystery of the 31, New Inn," etc. Another mystery story and as much of a thriller as his other stories, and the reader who lives to be entertained with a weird and irresistible story should not overlook Mr. Freeman's latest.

The Sorcerer's Stone. By Beatrice Grimshaw, author of "Vaiti of the Islands," etc. Miss Grimshaw is also a traveler as well as writer, usually takes her readers into the unexplored parts of New Guinea—just as far away from the feminist movement, the currency question, eugenics, etc., as she can take you and still remain on the globe. The author has traveled alone throughout the remotest southern tropics and knows them all like a well-studied lesson, and she has become an experienced story-teller as you will learn when you travel over 340 pages with the Sorcerer's Stone." Illustrations by Charles Barks.

The Story of Panama Canal. By Logan Marshall, author of "The Universal Handbook," etc. Illustrated. The volume is dedicated to the "Men on the Isthmus." The story of the canal is now so well known by readers and even school children that it is unnecessary to say more than that the author has written a very interesting account of the greatest work of the century and that all the available data at the command of the Isthmian canal commission was placed at his disposal, so it presents a complete history of every noteworthy feature of the work.

LITERARY NOTES.

Newell Dwight Hillis, pastor of Plymouth Congregational church of Brooklyn, has written a new book, "The Story of Phaedrus," which will be read with interest and is valuable.

The Harvard University Press has printed a little volume entitled, "The Care and Feeding of Children," which presents the substance of the popular lectures which Dr. Morse has given.

"What led me to write 'Home,'" said Chamberlain, "is the life I lived." Then he left a sentence in that book that he wasn't soaked into me on the spot."

Monsignor Bishop Hugh Benson, son of the late Archbishop of Canterbury, youngest of the three celebrated Benson brothers, and the author of many striking novels, is now in New York on a lecture tour.

"The Mental Health of the School Child," by Dr. Thomas Edward Wallin, of the University of Pittsburg, is just been published.

"The Anti-Alcohol Movement in Europe," by Ernest Gordon, a brother of Rev. Arthur H. Gordon, pastor of the Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church, is a very interesting book on a subject which is of vital importance to Americans at the present time, and as Mr. Gordon was for many years a resident of Europe, he is thoroughly familiar with the movement. The book is of exceeding value to temperance workers.

MAGAZINE CLIPPINGS.

"The Winged Armageddon," by Harold McGrath in the history of the government's heroic struggles against the trusts and other pests, and will be in the May Century. Also a story by Thomas Wilby, called "The Rise of Manat Tarfely," which is the Lunikuit, as it goes a step further than the Century announces another story by Miss Harris, called "The Birth of the God of War."

The book-length novel which is a feature of the Twice-a-Month Popular Magazine for May is a stirring story that he has not given any time to books, and now that you have the opportunity of reading another with the title of "Ade's Fables" you will realise how much you have missed by his absence from the literary world "down on the farm."

The Green Book for May is full of interesting articles, beautiful photographs and popular authors. There are the usual "Current Plays and Players." How the Highest Paid of All Picture Playwrights Gets His Material;" a story by Anne Warwick, "A Visit With Ho Stevens," and the closing of William Elliott, son-in-law of David Belasco; "Lauretta Taylor," and some interesting data called "Little Stories of the Last Plays."

The Metropolitan Magazine for May contains the second of John Reed's articles, "The Battle of La Cadena." Reed is at the front with General Villa and his articles are wonderful word pictures of the situation in Mexico. "The Sunset Horses," by Maurice Mactinchick, is the first instalment of a two-part article, and then there are short stories by Richard Harding Davis, Booth Tarkington, Mary Roberts Rinehart, etc.

Woman's World for May has some very interesting features, among them Mary Fuller's description of the business of playing for the movies in "Thrilling Times is My Life as a Photo Play Actress," and with the editorial page, the Home Sewing page and other articles by popular writers which will make it a very attractive and popular number.

The Smart Set for May has a very clever table of contents, some of our very best writers contributing to it.

The Man Century is another fine number—the fiction leaders this month being James Allen and Rush Mc-Enary Stuart. An interesting article is "An Englishman's Review of President Wilson's First Year," by A. Maurice Low, for many years Washington correspondent of The London Morning Post.

Reclaiming the Soudan.

(From The New York World.)

While the United States and the world in general have been hoarding Colonel Goethals for probably the greatest engineering feat of all time it is interesting to note that another great engineering engineer has also attracted attention to his work and capabilities. The selection of Hugh L. Cooper, of Manchester, Minn., the man who harnessed the Niagara and dammed the Mississippi, as consulting engineer of the new government in the great work of reclaiming the Anglo-Egyptian part of the Soudan, brings into notice an engineer who has been called the master of rivers.

The great work to which Mr. Cooper has been called is one that appeals to the imagination, as it has for its object adding a great territory to the Anglo-Agricultural resources of the oldest country of the globe. The work is a natural and necessary corollary to that of the great Assuan dam. The latter assures Egypt of perpetual fertility by a regulated water supply, while what is now proposed is to reclaim a large part of the upper regions of the Nile. This will be done by building a barrage on the Blue Nile at Sennaar, south of Khartoum, at an estimated cost of $12,000,000, and also a dam across the White Nile, at a cost of about $4,000,000. By means of these two dams the floods of the upper Nile will be conserved and devoted to irrigation of this part of the Soudan. Of the 8,000,000 acres of the Egyptian Soudan it is estimated three-quarters can thus be irrigated and brought under cultivation, thereby marking a new era in the prosperity of Egypt.

Knowledge.

Would you believe in Presence Unseen,
In life beyond this earthly life? Be still.

Be stiller ye; and listen. Set the screen
Of silence at the portal of your will
And shut out the world and only unheard
And seal your lips with some all-sacred word.

Breathe "God" in any tongue—it means the same.
Love Absolute; Think, feel, absorb Good thought
And shut out all else; until a subtle flame
(A spark from God's creative center caught)
Shall permeate your being, and shall grow,
Increasing, in its splendor, till you know.

Not in a moment, or an hour, or day
The knowledge comes; the power is for you
To win in any desultory way.
No goal is worthy till it learns to wait,
Dar better day by patient, then, oh soul!
Month after month—till, lo! the goal!
The goal!

An Automorphosis.

(From Judge.)

She was once a sweet, romancing slip
Of maidenhood entrancing;
Furtive eyes so shyly glancing under
Eyelids downward cast.
Dreams of love could then state her—
Now she uses an inflator.
Tender thoughts could animate her—now she scorches hot and fast.

Once so softly sympathetic, so demure
And so poetic;
Now aggressively athletic, tanned
With exercise and heat.
Once discovering verse and fiction, now
she's versed in auto diction,
And her best is an attention to the papers in the street.

Over hearts she then rode glorious—
over bodies now victorious;
And her voice is now uproarious that was then so low and sweet.
And the limits of her caring are for car and hub and bearing,
Skidding, puncturing, repairing, tire and cylinder and seat.

SOUTH PRYOR WORK HAS BEEN APPROVED

Conference With Mayor Results in Agreement to Proceed With Widening Below Georgia Avenue.

Following a conference between Mayor James G. Woodward and Councilman McCord, of the second ward, announcement came from the city's executive department that the resolution authorizing the work to proceed on the regrading and widening to South Pryor street, from Georgia avenue to the Southern railway, has been approved.

In making up the apportionment sheet in January, the finance committee, after hearing strenuous arguments from Councilman C. D. Knight and Alderman J. H. Kelley, put $15,000 in the budget for South Pryor street. Shortly afterwards, Councilmen Knight and McCord and Alderman Kelley went before the finance committee of the county commissioners and succeeded in getting an additional $10,000 as the county's share of cost in making the improvement. Since the time both appropriations have been secured, the representatives of the second ward have been diligently working to get the plans in shape in order to get the work started.

Conference Saturday.

Councilman McCord conferred with Mayor Woodward Saturday. The purpose of the conference was to acquaint the mayor with the fact that the property owners have all signed waivers, and that it is the desire of all interested in the big second ward improvement to have the work started as early as possible, beginning work at Georgia avenue and continuing to the railroad.

Councilman McCord assured the mayor that a majority of the property owners had signed waivers allowing the city to cut off a portion of their property to make the street conform with the width decided on. About ten or twelve have not yet waived damages, but Mayor Woodward said that he was not willing to hold up the work because of the refusal of so few. Councilman McCord said that the chances are that the waivers will all be secured before the work is progressed to any extent.

Substantial Improvement.

The widening and regrading of South Pryor street is one of the most progressive and substantial improvements secured for the south side in many years. Councilman Knight and Alderman Kelley, with the aid and co-operation of the South Side Improvement club, started work on the project during the early part of the year, and kept hammering at it until the finance committee and the street committee awakened to the necessity of the improvement and gave sanction to it.

Councilman McCord, a new member of the delegation, also worked faithfully on the project, and accomplished much in the matter of interesting the property owners and citizens.

SOCIAL CLUBS HAVE ADDED GREATLY TO PRESTIGE OF GATE CITY

Will Make Opening of Druid Hills Golf Club a Brilliant Event

Druid Hills Golf club, showing entrance to the grounds, and rear of clubhouse.

By Isma Dooly

No event of the week will be of more local social significance than the opening, Wednesday, April 29, of the Druid Hills Golf club, which is one of the most beautiful and picturesque country clubs in the south.

The reception Wednesday is in the afternoon, and beside the Atlanta company invited, many distinguished people from all sections attending opera will be present. The Metropolitan stars have been invited. Mr. Otto Kahn and his party, the charming group of people from Knoxville, who will be among these. There will be music and refreshments, and the entire clubhouse will be thrown open for the inspection and entertainment of guests.

Parties are being arranged for the afternoon, and the occasion marks again Atlanta's growth, and marks, too, the importance of the social club to a community. Atlanta's hospitality has been one of her greatest assets. The fact that with her steps to assert herself as a city, she had a place, a social club in which to entertain her guests in large numbers, has been one of the factors of her success. The meetings between people of the north and south, which took place at the Capital City club and the Piedmont Driving club, when the makers of Atlanta in her constructive life were the entertainers, did more than any one influence to wipe out the sectional feeling which might have hampered progress.

How could the large numbers of people, the companies of many hundreds which Atlanta has entertained in the last twenty-five years, been handled, if not in the social clubs? No matter how hospitable the citizen individually is, no private home can carry the banquets which have been given in Atlanta during political demonstrations, during the conventions which have brought thousands of people to Atlanta.

The First Days of Clubdom.

In the first days of the Capital City club the expenses of large entertainments were entirely defrayed by the club members. Later the club permitted other organizations to participate in the matter of expense in entertainment of the more civic nature.

The management of the Piedmont Driving club has been equally generous in extending the courtesies of the clubhouse, while the Atlanta Athletic club brought to Atlanta citizens the first opportunities for out-of-door sport. Golf, the lake sports, tennis and the usual clubhouse facilities, have established the pleasure and hospitality of that club.

Later has come the country end of the Capital City club, in the Brookhaven reservation. Golf there has an enthusiastic hold, the dinner-dances last summer were charming, and will be resumed. The hunt club had their "field," there, and "afternoon tea" was one of the features of that club's pleasure.

But more golf and more places to go Atlanta needed. The city has grown in every direction. Men more rational in their ways of living are beginning to see they must get close to nature, sometimes during the stress and strain of the day's labor. Every man can't have his home in the suburbs and in the country, but he can have the privileges of membership in a club not too far removed from home. The growth made the call, which is answered in the Druid Hills Golf club.

A Golf Club.

It is called the "Golf club," but I predict that, though essentially, the out-of-door club in purpose of establishment, the beautiful construction of the clubhouse, the ballroom, the terraces without, will tempt the inauguration there of the same brilliant entertainments in dinners and balls and smart functions which have made the other clubs centers of social life the year round.

No more propitious site for a country club could have been selected than that crowned now by the Druid Hills clubhouse. From the terraces is commanded a view of hills forested with wild azaleas. The green of naturally terraced ground is broken here and there, now by the fluttering blossoms of the woodland dogwood, its branches rising high under the branches of the trees which have been left to do their part in the landscape beauty of the whole.

The eye meets restful beauty everywhere, and the sky line is marked by the symmetrical pinetrees which hedge in the reservation.

A survey of the golf facilities brings joy to the experts, and already citizens visiting the club for the first time go out the next time and discuss the lots they have bought to build near by.

The Architectural Scheme.

Mr. Edward Dougherty, who designed and superintended personally the construction of the clubhouse, has mastered the situation. He selected the highest knoll within the entrance to the reservation to locate the clubhouse. Though the back of the clubhouse is to the entrance, the structure is marked by dignity, and once the entrance door is reached and the eye sees beyond the broad doorway and without the panorama of blue skies, and forested hills, and wild azalea and dogwood, the conquest of the club is complete.

The building is of stone and brick constructed along the lines of English architecture. The suggestion is first and always substantial, and the size of the apartments, the height of the ceilings and the openness of the architectural scheme are great advantages in a southern clubhouse. Air and light and ventilation have been everywhere considered. The hallway, which marks the place of assembly in the club, and will be the general living room, is the central apartment, and the one from which the other apartments of the club open out. On the right of this is the ballroom, a very large one, ideal for the purpose of for use as a banqueting hall, or for large assemblies. On the right, of the main apartment is the ladies' room, where private entertainments may be given, and a tea room is beyond.

A stairway of imposing structure is on the right entrance and leads to the second story, which continues the style of the first floor. On this floor is the ladies' dressing room, a commodious one with all the accessories; a retiring room, the apartment of the superintendent, the ladies' locker rooms, shower baths and dressing rooms after golf.

Every Facility.

The men's lockers are on the other side of the stairway and are most commodious; have every facility for convenience and comfort with the baths and shower baths, lounging room, etc.

The terraces outside the clubhouse which mark the front of the building tertaining. The first of these is under cover of the porch and the second has a fountain which is a feature of refreshing ornamentation which will carry with it the ferns and flowers, which will in time add to the exterior beauty of the house.

Mr. W. K. Browne designed and carried out the interior decoration and furnishing which is in perfect harmony with the architectural scheme.

The woodwork and wall paneling and general woodwork is in pine, with English waxed finish in soft tobacco brown. The wall decoration is in the dark tones of mulberry and old blue, the lights of these colors in harmony with the woodwork. The rugs, woven in Scotland, combine the same colors, and the substantial furniture is pure English oak with the finish in tobacco brown. The light fixtures are in Gothic style in dull gold, and the lights, known as semi-indirect, give a beautiful glow rather than striking light.

In the ladies' room the furniture is in ivory enamel with willow and the mural decorations and general color scheme is in grey and soft purple, these colors brought out in the chintz coverings.

A Wonderful Kitchen.

The golf club boasts the possession of the most wonderful kitchen in the South.

The dinner dishes are the coming of years the superintendent of the Piedmont Driving club and an expert in his line, collaborated with Mr. Dougherty in designing the kitchen, which indeed is almost the size of a banqueting hall, and as perfectly constructed, lighted and ventilated as any part of the building. Every facility of the modern cuisine is established there.

Mr. Kahn having made the purchases for the club. The cooking equipment, the refrigeration, the heaters, etc., are complete.

Closets, cupboards, emergency ice boxes, sinks, etc., are in exactly the right place, and there are the accessory storerooms.

There are closets for silver and china in general use and these for private entertainments, and there are the candlesticks, vases, etc., for decorations, all in the right place.

Besides that, and most important of all there is the organized corps of competent servants on hand, those cooks who know the real art of the fried chicken, the hot rolls and biscuits for suppers and cookies and dainties for "tea time."

Whether for the banquet, the reception repast, the dinner, large or small, the Druid Hills kitchen is ready to meet the demand.

ATLANTA'S STRIDES FROM DAY TO DAY

An Encouraging Week Ends With the Announcement of Several Interesting Deals.

The week closed with several interesting sales announced on Saturday. Especially interesting are the sales in Druid Hills.

The Forrest & George Adair agency has made the following sales in Druid Hills, on Clifton road, at a consideration of $50 per front foot:

For Druid Hills to Thomas Egleston, a lot on the east side of Clifton road, 1,000 feet north of Ponce de Leon avenue. The lot has a frontage of 200 feet.

For Druid Hills to William R. Prescott, a lot fronting 100 feet just south of the lot sold to Mr. Egleston.

For Druid Hills to Beverly M. Du-Bose, a lot fronting 100 feet just south of the lot sold to Mr. Prescott.

These lots have depths ranging from 400 to 800 feet.

W. E. Worley has sold to W. R. C. Smith and J. T. Rose, lots Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 7 and 8, in block A, of Woodland Hills division, for a consideration of $12.50 per front foot.

The lots average 90 to 150 feet front, fronting on Cheshire and Woodland roads.

Ashby Street Corner Sold.

John W. Evans, of the Cheatham Brothers' agency, has sold for E. C. Little to C. C. Gentry, a bungalow at the corner of Ashby and Oglethorpe, for $5,875.

Acreage Sale.

A. J. & H. F. West have sold for L. P. Atwood, two acres near Fourteenth, between East street and State street, to William L. Thorpe for $1,500.

A. J. & H. F. West are now selling this tract, and will put it on the market at an early date.

MANY NEW APARTMENTS ARE NOW BEING BUILT

Apartment Figure Largely in Market Activities—John C. Battle Drawing Plans.

John C. Battle, the architect, is drawing plans for another north side apartment house.

This building will be erected by G. R. T. Fraser, on Seventh street, between Peachtree street and Juniper street, at a cost of about $15,000. It will be of brick veneer construction, with tile roof and all modern conveniences.

Not in several years have apartment houses figured so prominently in the building and selling activities of Atlanta's real estate market as during this year.

There are now in course of construction two splendid apartment houses of the medium size type, costing $80,000 each. One is that of John D. Babbage, Jr., on Lafayette drive in Ansley Park, and the other is that of George W. Parrot, at Peachtree street and Peachtree circle.

Francis E. Mackie and Tom Swift will shortly begin construction on their $50,000 apartment building on Third street, and as soon as the Fraser building gets under way it will make the fourth apartment house being erected at the same time.

Also, apartment houses which have already been built have figured more prominently in real estate transactions in recent months, perhaps, than any other kind of improved realty. No less than half a dozen such buildings have changed hands, and several of them have been sold more than once.

REALTY PROSPECTS GOOD; BIG DEALS UNDER WAY

The last week has been a fairly good week in real estate, and left the agents feeling pretty good over the prospects of the coming week.

The greater part of the activity was in residence property and vacant lots, none of these being of any considerable size, but all of which keep the market going.

There are several good-sized deals "in soak" which may be expected for announcement during the coming week. There is also some building of importance which will probably also be ready to be made public before the end of the week.

BREAK GROUND MONDAY FOR NEW M. E. CHURCH

A substantial improvement and a valuable addition to the civic and religious life of the community of East Atlanta will be Martin Brown Memorial Methodist church. Ground will be broken for this building at the corner of Moreland and Metropolitan avenues Monday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

Robbed of Dollar Watch.

Charlie Gerber, a young white boy, while returning home last night about 11 o'clock from the morning pictures down town, was held up and robbed of a dollar watch at the corner of Richardson and Pulliam street by two negroes. The robbery took place within half a block of the boy's home, No. 291 Pulliam street. When Garber started to give the alarm the negroes

RUFF'S HAY DRYER SAVES HIS CROPS

Florida Farmer Tells How He Has Been Able to Evade the Merchant and Banker by His Own Invention.

"To bring his farm lands to the highest value possible the Georgia farmer must not only diversify his crops and cultivate them in scientific manner, but must become independent of the merchant and the banker."

That such a millenial condition may be absolutely realized is not the contention of E. E. Ruff, of Edwin P. Ansley's agency, and himself a scientific farmer, but that it may be approximated he has demonstrated on his own magnificent farm near Tallahassee, Fla.

The saving of the crop after it has been raised constitutes a very substantial factor in Mr. Ruff's methods.

"Prior to 1900," says Mr. Ruff, "the Georgia farmer raised hardly anything but cotton and was dependent absolutely on the banker and merchant for his supplies. The first thing the merchant or the banker wanted to know was how many mules the farmer worked, and then he required that farmer to cultivate 40 acres of cotton to the mule. Upon the results of this were based the farmers credit, and it kept his nose to the grindstone.

Improvement Is Coming.

"The Georgia farmer today is gradually getting away from that and is diversifying his crop and using scientific methods of cultivation with very desirable results. He is still dependent upon the banks, though, and the proposition of his getting money practically narrows itself down to how little he can get along with and how much can be got out of him for that little. Rates of interest range from 8 per cent to grand larceny.

"If our farmers can get away from that feature of farming they have solved the problem of making a farm not merely a means of livelihood, but a paying investment.

"A defect that I find in the methods of some of the very best and most successful farmers in Georgia is lack of provision for the saving of a crop after it is raised. As every farmer knows it is not infrequent for him to see his wheat, shocked in the field, sprout and spoil because weather conditions are not proper for its preservation.

"This is a problem over which I have pondered a great deal, and I have in a large measure solved it on my farm by the invention and construction of a hay dryer, which I can also use for curing other crops. The idea is not patented and will not be. It is somewhat of an expensive proposition, but an asset which an extensive farmer cannot do without. And if he makes a great deal of stuff he will find it an enormous saving.

"I can cut my wheat or oats, or even corn, and run it soggy-wet through my hay dryer and thresh it and store it the moment it comes out.

Never Lost a Bale.

"Last year I raised 7,000 bales of peavine hay and by the use of my dryer never lost a bale.

"The Georgia farmer will also find it to his benefit to raise beef. As far north as Atlanta cattle can have all-winter grazing on rye and oats grass in the summer and in the fall conditions in this section are fine for root crops, which make excellent feed. In raising beef, too, the farmer has at hand a large and excellent supply of fertilizer.

"The injudicious purchase of fertilizers, incidentally, is another item of useless expense to which we Georgia farmers often put ourselves.

"But to get back to the original proposition; if the Georgia farmer will look to saving his crop after he has raised it he will find himself becoming emancipated from the merchant and the banker and will find his farm lands becoming valuable beyond his dreams."

"GREATER GRADY" WILL BOOST REAL ESTATE

And Albert Adams, Who Had Realty Board Indorse It, Now Tells Why.

Upon the suggestion of Albert Adams, of the B. M. Grant agency, the Atlanta Real Estate Board, at Friday's meeting, indorsed the bond issue for the enlargement and improvement of Grady hospital.

Realty men regard this improvement not only as a great benefit to the city, but one of actual direct benefit to the realty business inasmuch as a growing city means an active real estate market.

"There is no greater asset to a city nor a surer guarantee of its rapid growth than anything which makes for the betterment of its health conditions," said Mr. Adams. "With such a municipal institution as the proposed improved Grady would be, Atlanta will have gained an asset which will tell largely in the future growth of the city. It will bring many new citizens here.

"More than that, I expect to see the new Grady become a world-wide famous institution, become one of the greatest factors in Atlanta's possession for bringing big industries and manufacturers to the city. This is for the simple and splendid reason that the modern captain of industry knows that the success of his business depends upon the health and producing power of his employees, and the greater facilities a city can offer for improving an employee's service, as much the greater are that city's opportunities for growth."

To the Voters of Fulton County:

Did you vote for the "Salary System!"

Do you favor it now?

If so, you should vote for W. F. Wesley for "Tax Receiver of Fulton County." For he is the only candidate running for "Tax Receiver" that favors the "SALARY SYSTEM." T. M. Armistead and W. H. Abbott voted against it.

T. M. Armistead went into the courts and defeated the will of eighty-five per cent of the voters and taxpayers of Fulton County. And in doing so he has compelled you to pay him fifteen thousand dollars for four months' service in receiving your taxes, instead of four thousand dollars, as you wanted to pay him. Therefore I say he should be defeated for re-election.

W. H. Abbott is also opposed to the salary system and would have you pay him fifteen thousand dollars to serve you as "Tax Receiver" for four months.

Mr. Abbott has been a candidate for eighteen months and knowing all this time that eighty-five per cent of the people favored the "SALARY SYSTEM," he has never said that he favors the "SALARY SYSTEM."

He has scattered his advertising matter over the country by the thousands, but not one word that he favors the "SALARY SYSTEM."

He has been asked by a number of people how he stood on the "SALARY SYSTEM." To each he gave an evasive answer; to some he would say, "That it is unconstitutional;" to others he would say "read between the lines;" to others he would say "let that take care of itself;" and to others he would say "I am Democratic."

When he could have said in five words what the majority of the people wanted to hear. I favor the "SALARY SYSTEM."

But Mr. Abbott is a truthful man, and as he does not favor the "SALARY SYSTEM" he will not say so.

So if you favor the "SALARY SYSTEM" vote for WESLEY, he's a winner.

Respectfully,

W. F. WESLEY

Deputy, C. Wilmer Ferguson

OSCAR MILLS

To the Citizens of Fulton County:

For County Commissioner
From Country Districts

On May 6 you will say by your ballots whether Mr. Tull C. Waters shall serve another four years as county commissioner from the country districts, or whether I shall take his place. One county commissioner must live outside of the city. For this particularly designated place on the board Mr. Waters and I are the only candidates. The issue is between us two and nobody else.

In the first place, I want to say the report that if I am elected I will vote for Mr. Shelby Smith as superintendent of public works is a malicious falsehood. Mr. Waters, to my surprise, has helped to circulate this report. Mr. Smith is not even a candidate for the place in question. He has not asked me to vote for him, but, on the contrary, has stated in the public prints that he would not have the place.

As stated in my formal announcement, I am a candidate for this place because I feel that I am fitted by years of practical experience to render valuable service to this county as a member of the county board. I have moved thousands of yards of dirt and paved miles of roads, and I know from actual experience what could be done with modern equipment in the public works department.

I believe in running the county affairs in an up-to-date, business manner, using economy in all departments. I know that by using more machinery and less picks and shovels that we can accomplish infinitely more in grading and paving, and lessen the burden on both men and mules.

I believe the convicts should be properly fed and humanely treated, but I also think they should do a full day's work. I think the county should co-operate thoroughly in sewer building, paving and other needed work in Atlanta, as well as give to all outlying sections what they are entitled to.

I am familiar with the needs of this county, and if you can give me your vote and influence I assure you that you shall have no cause to regret it.

Very respectfully,

OSCAR MILLS

In the Social Whirl

By Isma Dooly

THE old story of "Wives and Sweethearts" and war is being repeated. While the public reaches out for the extras carrying the latest war news, a group of women and children at the deserted Fort McPherson wait anxiously for the news of the husbands and fathers and brothers they have given up to the country's cause.

The public reads about the "number killed;" comments on the "political phases" of the situation, and asks the bromidic question, "Is it worth the lives of the soldiers we will lose?"

The women and children at Fort McPherson start when they hear the telephone ring; they meet every messenger they see with the anxious "What news?" They sit together and wonder and apprehend and anticipate all day, and they sigh and dream and dreams at night. They cheer the little ones, big enough to talk of war, and they are glad they do not have to explain to the baby ones.

Those who went through the Spanish-American war go back to those days; they recall the experience in the Philippines, and they wonder again what this war will bring. There is no music to cheer them; the regiment band has gone; no games on the campus, except those of the care-free little folks. The homes are dismantled; the furniture is packed, and these wives and sweethearts and mothers are ready to go as near to the front as they can—but the word comes for them to stay, for the Seventeenth regiment may be one of the first to go into the fighting line.

The officers and their wives from the fort will be missed on the brilliant scene of Atlanta's opera next week, for though remembered by their friends, "the wives and sweethearts" will stay at home.

Of War, Richard le Gallienne has written:

War
I abhor!
And yet how sweet
The sound along the marching street
Of drum and fife, and I forget
Wet eyes of widows, and forget
Broken old mothers, and the whole
Dark butchering without a soul,
Without a soul—save this bright drink
Of heady music, sweet as hell;
And even my peace-abiding feet
Go marching with the marching feet,
For yonder, yonder goes the fife,
And what care I for human life!
The tears fill my astonished eyes,
And my full heart is like to break,
And yet 'tis all embannered lies,
A dream those little drummers make.
Oh, it is wickedness to clothe
Yon hideous, grinning thing that
Hidden in music, like a queen
That in a garden of glory walks,
Till good men love the things they loathe;
Art, thou hast many infamies,
But not an infamy like this,
Oh, snap the fife, and still the drum,
And show the monster as she is!

HIS CHIVALRY IS TRIED.

The chivalry of Mr. Robert L. Cooney was somewhat tried in the recent convention held here of the agents of the New York Life Insurance company, by an incident which occurred at one of the business sessions. Mr. Cooney had promised as a personal gift a dozen handsome shirts to the agent giving report of the greatest amount of work accomplished during the year. When the reports were read it was found that the one woman agent in the group had made the best record for the amount of business accomplished, this woman, by the way, a most charming and gracious one, the central figure at many entertainments incident to the convention.

DANCING AND ROMANCE.

"Is the new fad of dancing conducive to marriage?" was the question which arose in a group of gay people recently, the question prompted by the statement of a New York beau that the reason people danced so well there was because a man had the same partner all the time!

"Why the same partner?" Then he explained that when a man discovered the girl he could dance best with, he naturally preferred dancing with her everywhere he went. "She knows my steps and I know hers," he explained. "In New York there are so many ways to dance any one dance as there are people who dance it.

"Nothing tires a man more when he knows how to dance a certain way and finds that his partner either does not know that step or wants to teach him hers. Men are rather conscious about learning anything, and they don't like to be made monkeys of by trying to dance something that it would require study to learn.

"Far from necessarily being in love with the girl with whom you are seen most in New York," he continued, "you escape it. The girl becomes rather your good comrade and she looks upon you as the partner for the dance and never expects any sort of 'life contract' about it.

"I don't say you are not apt to fall in love with the girl you prefer to dance with, but it doesn't necessarily argue because you take the same one to all the dances that it means anything serious, as the gossips term it!"

With dancing the most popular mode of recreation, men having dancing affinities may give the carpers against dancing a new cry—that of its dangers to romance and sentiment.

In small towns where each girl's beau is called her "steady" there are more marriages than in the larger cities, and it is just as logical to suppose a dancing "steady" would as often prove the right one as the wrong one.

BEEFSTEAK VERSUS FLOWERS.

A thrifty woman, and yet one with markedly artistic taste, led a debate not long since about an incident which savored of romance in one way, and the more practical side of things in another.

A gentleman, single and unattached, was very attentive to a charming lady who resided in the most attractive of bungalows, and was noted for her dainty housekeeping (all this in a distant city).

He was in the habit of dropping in about tea time, and accepting the invitation usually extended—"just a little tea, and a salad, but won't you stay?"

"Yes," he stayed, always, and far into the evening!

One late afternoon he sauntered to the inviting bungalow and had under his arm a brown paper bundle. Graciously greeted by the lady, he said in tender tone, "I was passing by the butcher's, saw a good steak, and just brought it. I thought you might like it for supper!"

The story teller was here interrupted by an exclamation of disgust. "Of course, she did not accept it. I have heard of a man sending flowers or fruit, or even vegetables from his farm, if he had one, but—perish the thought—beef steak!"

"I do not agree with you," said another woman. "It is well to be practical these days. The man had frequently partaken of the woman's hospitality. A steak is not generally selected by a woman for supper, and he possibly thought it was a dainty remembrance." The debate which ensued was so heated that the woman who told the story never had the chance to tell just what did happen about the original incident of the steak.

This is not an age of romance, it is said, and young people are urged to be practical; therefore, it may be just an incident of the advanced method of attention that may some day exist. With the cost of meat growing greater each day it may come to be a delicate attention for a gentleman to "come courting" with steak under his arm rather than with chocolate drops and violets.

POPULARITY OF MISS FARRAR.

It is said that if Miss Geraldine Farrar were to accept all the invitations which has been extended to her by her Atlanta admirers for opera week she would have to stay two weeks instead of one short one to accept them. She has always been a star guest at the most charming entertainments given during her previous visits to Atlanta and her acceptance to invitations this year is being eagerly anticipated.

How American Women May Keep Faces Young

"The American smart woman ages early, far earlier than the English woman," says Christian Miller, F. R. S., the famous English health expert. She adds that our climate "so exhilarates that you over-exert yourselves and grow old before you know it. That same exhilarating air dries the skin. The skin that lacks moisture grows pale and withered looking and soon forms wrinkles.

"The American complexion" is best treated by applying narcolised wax, which causes the faded, lifeless cuticle to flake off in minute particles, a little each day, until the fresh, young skin beneath is wholly in evidence. Every druggist has this wax; one ounce is sufficient. Spread on at night like cold cream, washing it off next morning.

For wrinkles, dissolve an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel; baths the face in this. Immediately every wrinkle is affected, even the deeper lines. Both treatments are remarkable facial rejuvenators.

QUICK WORK LANDS GOOD SHOE ORDER

Columbus Merchant Orders on Friday Afternoon and Shows Goods on Saturday Morning.

A merchant in Columbus, Ga., last Friday telephoned to Cliff C. Johnson, salesman in that territory for the J. K. Orr company, that he wanted a bill of shoes providing he could get them for Saturday's trade.

Mr. Johnson telephoned the house in Atlanta an order for twenty-five dozen pairs at 2:20 p. m. The shipment was in the depot at 3:30; left Atlanta by express at 4:10, and reached Columbus that night. The shoes were unpacked, displayed and ready for sale when the store opened Saturday morning. There's a moral in this story. Service counted.

FREE DEALS MEN BUMPED HARD BY N. Y. WHOLESALERS

The New York Wholesale Grocers' association is on the warpath against free deals, and has apparently come pretty near its limits of patience, to judge by the following letter:

To Wholesale Grocers: We regret to find that in spite of our past efforts deals of different kinds are being put on by the manufacturers.

It must be evident to all that deals are only in the interest of the manufacturer, for who ever heard of a deal being put on when they were behind with their orders. Their purpose is to unload their surplus stock on the retailers and collect their bills in ten days from the jobbers.

Deals of all kinds are bad enough, but the last one is the limit. It not only requires extra bookkeeping to keep the account straight, but it sets a bad precedent of making allowances on each bill sold that will be bound to extend to other lines.

Deals cannot exist without the consent of the jobbers, and a united protest on your part will end them in less than thirty days.

We trust all the wholesale grocers will see it is to their interest to not only decline deals, but to write their reasons to the manufacturer who put them on. Yours truly,

NELSON GRAY,
April 8, 1914. Secretary.

T. S. Matthews, who has been with Dinkins-Davison Hardware company for the past seven years, has left that firm to enter the service of the King Hardware company. When Mr. Matthews took the road for Dinkins-Davison, in south Georgia territory, they were practically unknown below Macon. Now they employ three men to cover that territory. Mr. Matthews should have no trouble in making good with the King Hardware company back of him.

TRADE NEWS

The "ins" at Fain & Stamps yesterday morning were Cliff Edwards, S. E. Smith and W. T. Bailey. They all had a good business last week.

W. H. Stavis, manager of the John Deere Plow Company of Atlanta, returned from St. Louis, where he attended a special meeting of John Deere branch managers.

T. W. McHan, with John Silvey & Co., is expected in tomorrow to make up his line of samples for fall.

Ben Dawson, one of Fain & Stamps' mighty capable salesmen, was in the city for a day or so the first part of the week.

T. K. Johnson, division sales manager of the John Deere Plow Company of Atlanta, is relieved from duty for two weeks' vacation, which time he is spending at Tate Springs, Tenn.

Ed Callaway, of the Callaway department stores, LaGrange, Ga., was a visitor at Fain & Stamps Friday.

F. H. Covey, S. A. Johnson and H. T. Burton constituted the "ins" at John Silvey & Co.'s late Friday afternoon.

E. L. Adams, of the E. L. Adams company, has been slightly under the weather for the past several days. Mr. Adams has been battling with a spell of grip and for a day or two the first of the week he was confined to bed. His spell of sickness, Mr. Adams figures, came at the wrong time, as he is a Shriner and would very much preferred to have participated in the ceremonies of last week.

Frank King, representing the Burnham-Morrill Company of Portland, Ore., packers of the famous Parish corn, for which Fain & Stamps are distributors, has been working the city trade for the past several days.

J. K. England and J. A. Massey, members of the sales force of E. L. Adams company, participated in the Shriner ceremonies last week to the extent of initiations on Wednesday night.

"Sport Ramsey, of the shipping department of Fain & Stamps, reports that Friday was the biggest day's business he ever filled out.

The "ins" at Dougherty-Little-Redwine company Saturday morning were J. O. Castleberry, W. F. Seay, J. M. McKibben, J. A. Woodliff, A. E. Wilkins and H. L. Truett. The report of every man showed an exceptionally good business last week.

W. M. Johnson, Sam Hanes, Morris Croft and Carlton Hanes made up on the list of "ins" at Regan-Malone company yesterday morning.

E. L. Bolt, a prominent retail merchant of Easley, S. C., was a visitor at Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company one day last week.

Warren B. Hatcher, an Atlanta boy, accepted a position in the Big Battle-Axe shoe plant. He has made good and is now on the road in Kentucky, having a nice business. Hatcher says, "It is easy to get ahead if you have a purpose to get up the ladder." His motto has been, "Forget the clock, stay on the job, let booze alone, tell the truth, talk less and think more and the greatest of all to hark back to the days of childhood and remember what dear old mother taught him."

N. K. Smith, the Battle-Axe shoe man, says: "That if many of the people who are barely eking out a living in the larger cities knew what a delight would be theirs if they would come to Georgia, go out into the country and take small farms and till them carefully, they would make a good living on half the work with no worry. With the same hours of work they would be prosperous. Today the soil of Georgia is ready for seed to nurture and turn into a beautiful harvest to supply all the wants of man."

Fain & Stamps declare the price of canned asparagus 1914 packed, will be lower by 10 per cent than heretofore. This seems to be a good indication that canned asparagus is becoming more of a staple. Another canned goods article that will be marketed at a lower price is Hawaiian pineapple. During past seasons the price has been against this article and there has not been a great deal handled in this territory. However, merchants can buy all they want in Atlanta for fall delivery, and the price reduction will be something like 20 per cent under last year.

Arthur Whitmeyer, of Regan-Malone company, was in for a couple of days last week looking after his line of fall samples.

J. P. Armstrong, J. S. Cheek and D. L. Lassiter registered in at Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company yesterday morning, with postscripts that business during the last week was mighty good in their territories.

Manager Ed Longbern, of the Binder Frame Manufacturing company, returned yesterday from a trip down the Central of Georgia road, where he found a very satisfactory business.

J. W. Vaughan, of Cartersville, Ga., president of the Southern Merchants' convention, was a visitor at Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company one day last week.

J. R. Little, of Dougherty-Little-Redwine company, passed through Atlanta yesterday on the Birmingham special en route from New York to Hatin, Ala., to attend the funeral of the late J. R. Perryman.

J. J. Cooper, of Vienna, Ga., was a visitor at Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company during the past week.

Is Never Turned Down.

There's a man in the world who is never turned down, wherever he chances to stray; he gets the glad hand in the populous town, or out where the farmers make hay; he's greeted with pleasure on deserts of sand and deep in the aisles of the woods; wherever he goes there's the welcoming hand—He's the Man Who Delivers the Goods.

The failures of life sit around and complain; the gods haven't treated them white; they've lost their umbrellas whenever there's rain, and they haven't their lanterns at night; men tire of the failures who fill with their sighs the air of their own neighborhoods; there's the man who is greeted with love-lighted eyes—He's the Man Who Delivers the Goods.

Parcel Post Beats Freight.

(Lewiston (Idaho) Correspondence to The New York Sun.)

A ton of flour going from Nezperce to Pierce City by mail passed through the depot here, and, although the flour is in 50-pound sacks, it is necessary to weigh it every time it is transferred in any way to get the weight for the mail contracts. This means putting it on the scales at Nezperce, Vollmer, Lewiston and Orofer.

A Spokane concern this week shipped 5,000 pounds of crackers to local dealers on the Camas prairie, the rate being 4 cents per 100 pounds less than freight on that class of goods.

Frocks for Class Festivities

WHILE the three gowns in the sketch were designed mainly for the college or school girl, who is, even now, planning her frock for the many festivities which take place during commencement week; they might also furnish ideas for Summer dance frocks. The figure on the right pictures an extremely dainty little gown of embroidered white net. The lower part of the skirt is composed of innumerable tiny ruffles on a narrow foundation while the upper half is a full net puff held in place with a band of blue ribbon fastened in front just above the knees with a pink rose. A wide soft panel extends from the knees to the line of the decolletage, where it is caught with another rose; a blue satin waist and runs under this panel. The bodice and sleeves are merely a scarf-like drapery of the net.

The central gown is of yellow chiffon taffeta, which, by the way, is the "dernier cri" in fabrics. The skirt is made with the bouffant bustle drapery. There is a girdle of black velvet and a shawl bertha of shadow lace.

The figure on the balustrade shows a frock of fresh pink crepe de chine with a tunic and bodice of beaded tulle and a butterfly girdle of pink satin.

I believe in a business administration of a business office; impartial efficiency rather than unnecessary brutality; in upholding the law rather than yielding to prejudice and passion; that prisoners should be treated humanely by their custodian; that punishment should be inflicted by the courts and not by subordinate officers; that the duties of a sheriff should be administered without fear, favor or affection in accordance with his sworn and bonded duty. In addition to my promise, the personnel of my deputies is a guarantee that this policy will be pursued in the future as in the past. We are thankful for what we have received and will appreciate your vote and influence in the primary of May 5, 1914.

Very respectfully yours,

GLAD HANDSHAKERS GREETING PUBLIC

Seventeen Men Want Six Vacancies in County Offices—Everybody and His Friends Busy.

The hand-shaking candidate is abroad in the land. On every corner where little groups of men gather can be seen the office-seeker pouring into the ear of a voter his claims for the latter's suffrage.

In the primary to be held on Tuesday, May 5, will be settled the question as to who shall handle, for the next two years, certain affairs of the county, and in the scramble for office, seventeen men—all good, tried and true—are trying to nestle into just six berths where they can serve the public with courtesy, efficiency and much faithfulness.

In a few instances candidates for offices are unopposed, and these can look on with serenity with nothing to upset their equanimity except perhaps an alarming reflection that Uncle Sam might need them down in Mexico before they can be installed for another term in their respective offices.

These unopposed candidates are Arnold Broyles, for clerk superior court; H. L. Culberson, for county treasurer; Paul Donahoo, for coroner, and C. S. Robert, for county surveyor.

In the race for sheriff appear three well-known men—C. Wheeler Mangum, who has held the office for a couple of terms, and whom his friends say, has made a record which will mean his re-election; W. H. Mayo, a police captain, who has seen long service on the police force, and by reason of which his friends say would make an ideal sheriff, and L. O. Wright, a deputy in the city marshal's office, but an ex-sheriff of a Georgia county, with a good record, and his friends declare he is just the man for Fulton's sheriff. All are good fellows, with hosts of friends, who are pulling for their favorites and for the list of splendid deputies each man has on his ticket.

For tax collector, Chas. L. Branan, well and popularly known, and former member of the state legislature, is opposing the present incumbent, Uncle Andy Stewart, who says he is running on his past record, which record appears to please his numerous friends, and they predict another term for him. However, Mr. Branan and his deputies are mixing mightily with the people, and his friends are sanguine for him.

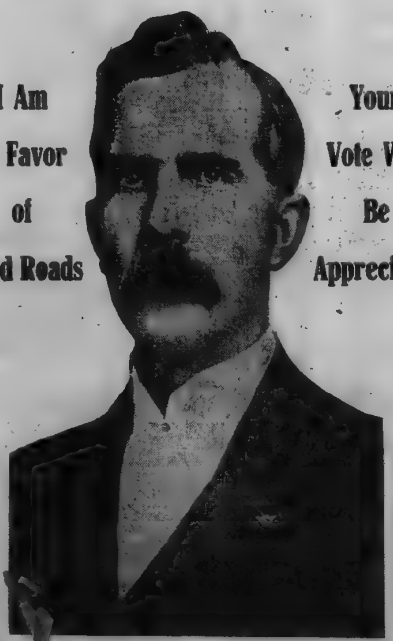
The race for tax receiver is a three-cornered affair. T. M. Armistead, who has served the public for years—and his friends say well, too—is being opposed by W. H. Abbott and W. F. Wesley, both of whom are being strongly backed by a large coterie of friends. Mr. Abbott has been for years the affable clerk in the record room of the county, while Mr. Wesley is a well-liked and successful business man of the city.

In the race for membership on the county board nine men are seeking the three vacancies, and there seems to be much doing among these candidates and their friends. For the vacancy from the county districts two candidates are striving—Full Waters, the present encumbent, and Oscar Mills. Both are well known and popular, and friends of each predict their favorite a winner.

For the commissioners' places from the county-at-large, two to be filled, and the executive committee says you must vote for two or your vote won't count, seven of Fulton's leading citizens are offering. The friends of each declare them a winner, consequently some one is going to be slightly disappointed on the morning of the 6th. These candidates are W. A. Chastain, Geo. B. Findlay, Dr. Wm. L. Gilbert, T. J. Hightower, Jr., Jas. W. Maddox, Chas. G. Turner and William S. Wier.

Chas. G. Turner

I Am In Favor of Good Roads



Your Vote Will Be Appreciated

Candidate for County Commissioner

I will not remain in ignorance of what is going on in our Convict Camps, and I will do my duty to all sections of the County in the same fair and impartial way.

Efficiency Is Economy

TO THE VOTERS OF FULTON COUNTY:

I congratulate the people of this County upon the fact that all the Candidates for the position of County Commissioner have now pledged themselves to reorganize the system of conducting the Public Works Department in such manner as to put into use modern methods and up-to-date equipment. This was my original platform and all my opponents approve my position.

I am confident that this reorganization, if made by practical men, will secure greater efficiency and guarantee an increase in grading and paving work of at least 20 per cent. I reaffirm my position on this question and pledge myself, if elected, to bring about this reorganization without delay.

I believe in being as economical in the disbursement of County Funds as is consistent with progressive methods. I believe the tax rate can be reduced without injury to the public improvements of the County, and shall advocate such reduction.

I believe that it is the duty of the Members of the Board of County Commissioners to be at all times familiar with the conditions as they exist. I shall never plead ignorance of such conditions.

The convicts should do the work required of them. They should be accorded humane treatment. They should live in sanitary and wholesome surroundings, and their physical welfare should in no case be neglected. No cruelties will be permitted. They should be required to perform the labor directed in the sentence of the Court; but they should not be deprived of the opportunity to receive religious and moral instruction on the Sabbath Day and at such other times as convenience will permit.

The public forces should work for the public. I shall oppose the use of County convicts or other facilities of the County to improve any private property. There should be a fair distribution of the work of the County forces so that no section will be neglected, but all will receive fair treatment and every community will be allowed to grow with the others.

I favor the completion of the sewer work now under way without the endless delay that has been attending its execution since it was agreed upon.

I have no private interests to serve. My age and my experience have been diversified enough to justify me in the belief that I can render efficient and satisfactory service to my fellow citizens, and that I can assist in safeguarding the public money as well as in carrying on the public work.

I shall advocate a system of co-operation by the county board with the municipal authorities of the cities of Atlanta, East Point, Hapeville and College Park, to the end that these cities shall be treated with fairness in the carrying on of public improvements.

In conclusion I beg to say:

My own experience has proven that modern methods and modern equipment will be the means of securing a large increase in the efficiency of the County forces, and at the same time will afford the means of lighter work for the convicts.

I am familiar with all sections of the County, having had occasion to visit all sections in the course of my duty in the past, and I shall favor a completion of the main thoroughfares to the county lines on all sides and in all directions, and shall advocate a just and proper distribution of the improvements of the County in such way as to bring development into all sections together, giving to those sections which have been neglected first consideration.

I shall advocate the dissemination of information so that all citizens and tax payers may know what is being done with their money by their servants.

If elected I promise the people of this county faithful and intelligent service. I will be always on the job for them, and will keep informed as to all things that are needed and all things that are being done, and will let the people know what they are.

I will thank you to cast your ballots for me on May 5.

Respectfully,

J. W. Maddox

Seeds and Plants for This Week

Gardening operations have gone forward steadily the last week, and great progress has been made toward getting the gardens and lawns in good order.

With summer so close at hand, seeding and planting cannot be delayed much longer. If you have not already begun, this week is the right time. If you have gone part way—it's time to finish up.

It's now absolutely safe to sow all sorts of vegetables and flowers, even the most tender ones.

It's now absolutely safe to plant out tomatoes, peppers and eggplant in the garden; geraniums, coleus, salvia, etc., in the flower beds.

Let's all help make Atlanta a city clean and beautiful in 1914, not only for the visiting Shriners, but for ourselves as well, who have to see Atlanta all the year.

This cleaning up, painting up and planting flowers and vegetables is really worth while, from not only the civic beauty standpoint, but the health-saving, money-saving standpoint as well. Do your share this week!

Geraniums Best French and American sun and heat resisting varieties. Strong, healthy plants, for bedding out now. 15 cents; 2 for 25 cents.

Tuberoses Always popular, with their delicious fragrance. Large size, sure blooming bulbs of the Double Excelsior Pearl variety. 15 cents dozen.

THE CONSTITUTION'S FIRING LINE

Useless Burdens.

It does seem that if a man started on a long journey and the road led over steep hills and through many long, tiresome, sandy stretches, he would not ever be adding to his load, adding one burden after another; and yet there are many that would do this very thing. So often you have heard it said: "If I was rich, I would like to have a million dollars just to see how it feels."

Now, anyone making such idle wishes does not realize one thing—with every dollar of added wealth comes exactly a like proportion of added care and responsibility. In fact, take a balance and put on one side of the scales gold. Keep on adding gold and watch the balance on the other side and you will see care and responsibility that will balance the gold and even weigh heavier often than the gold.

Many who make this idle wish do not know that if by some magic wand their wish could be made a reality it would spell disaster and sorrow at once. To some the sudden increase of wealth would be out of proportion to their judgment and they would run wild in dissipation. This has been often the case that it scarcely needs mention.

Many, so many, would find that with moderate means they had reason and understanding, with wealth out of proportion to their capacity to handle, that they had only folly to guide them and misery in the end.

Riches not earned make for idleness; this means uselessness, and in all nature that which is useless she begins to destroy.

The wish of the poor is that they might be rich. The motive of the wish is that then they would not have to work at all, or possibly not have to work so hard.

And if such became a fact they would find that God made man to work and work in a fairly steady and constant way, and if he did not work than he was unhappy. Happiness is more to be desired than anything material, from the fact that with unhappiness and discontent it is impossible to enjoy anything temporal.

If only one wish could be given to a man and he given time to think it over, knowing that when he made the wish it would be granted, his wish would be first health, and that condition would be equalized to his wishing the power to work, not for personal gain, not to pile up wealth in the abstract, but simply to work for the glory of working, for the joy of exercise and for the delight in living.

From early childhood when he played games all day it was work, and if you do not believe it, then get out with a lot of children and follow them in their games, and when the sweat is pouring from your brow and your muscles are sore, you will see that you have been working.

The most idle, useless, foolish thing to wish for is wealth. If it be necessary means care, taxes, insurance, constant watching to keep it from loss. If it be gold it means constant trouble and worry to keep it safe from thieves, or to keep some one else from getting it by some hook or crook. And the worst of it is that after a life has been spent in the making and keeping of a fortune and the piling up of riches, when the last day comes you may pile about him in shining mounds his gold, put before him on a tray of ebony myriads of diamonds, and before his eyes sheafs of stocks and bonds, and in that last day he will turn his face away to close his eyes and before his vision will come the figure of his mother and the tiny daisies and deep blue of the first violets that grew in the garden, the faint odor of the hyacinth. With the memory will come sweeter moments than can be bought with gold, for he will be back with nature, back to childhood, realizing that after all 'tis best to be "even as a little child."

Who's Who and How

With happy smile.
Ways to beguile.
Wares fully guaranteed.
He entered bold.
The shelves were old.
"Tightwad" sat on the lid.

The shelves were lean.
Few sunnis were seen.
The prospect loomed inviting;
He oped his wares.
Laid well his snares.
While "Tightwad" sat there writing.

The moments sped.
His patience fled.
Likewise his smile beguiling.
With wrath unloaded.
This man vamoosed—
Old "Tightwad" sat there smiling.

Another came.
With wares the same.
But methods' Time had seasoned.
Nor smiled nor frowned.
But stood his ground.
And with old "Tightwad" [redacted]

Suffice to say.
He came away.
Happier, wealthier, wiser;
For at the wind-up.
"Tightwad" signed up—
"Tightwad," the grouchy miser.

MORAL:
Salesmen should worry,
Get in a hurry,
Go at the man "on the lid."
Pound, plead or placate,
Till perforce he vacate,
Or sign up, as "Tightwad" did.

Memphis Retailers' Exchange.

Organization of another association of retail grocers on a big scale to buy goods on a co-operative plan has just been completed in Memphis. Charles Keeler has been elected president of the organization and C. W. Young will act as secretary, with offices in room 1021 of the Falls building.

By purchasing goods on the co-operative plan Memphis grocers affiliated with the association hope to buy merchandise at greatly reduced prices and to aim a blow at the high cost of living by lowering the retail prices as much as possible.

"Uncle Jeff" was in the city the early part of last week, getting together his complete line of fall goods. "Uncle Jeff" doesn't patronize the railroads; he uses his own conveyance, and, by the way, he has just finished the initial trip in his new hack. He remarked that it was running like a clock, and all he could do to keep Old Jack in tow. [redacted]

AT LOCAL THEATERS THIS WEEK

Keith Vaudeville.
(At the Forsyth.)

Valerie Bergere will make her third visit to Atlanta, headlining the vaudeville bill at the Forsyth this week. Miss Bergere has never repeated a playlet here or anywhere else. Believing that the theater-going public demands new material, she has succeeded in securing for each season's tour something new, and in returning to the Forsyth for the third time, she will bring Roy Farrell's intensely interesting one-act play, "A Bowery Gamble."

This play deals with the experiences of an artist with his model in an east side studio in New York. The characters will, naturally, be typical of that famous section. Miss Bergere, as the model, will have a role absolutely removed from anything heretofore introduced by her in Atlanta. Her support is declared to be the most expert dramatic organization in the varieties. The scenic equipment will be perfect as to detail and it is predicted that the act will be one of the triumphant successes of the Forsyth.

The management has surrounded this star with an extraordinary bill. There are some headline features, and there are other numbers that promise to make the show one of the excellent entertainments of the year.

John F. Conroy, the world's famous life-saver, and his beautiful diving models, are worthy of headline honors, and are billed as extraordinary features. There has never been exhibited on any stage a more beautiful stage setting than this $4,000 combination of scenic and light effects. Conroy has personally drilled the young ladies who assist him, and will show some diving feats absolutely original. It is conceded that this act is superior to anything of this sort on the American stages.

The famous Australian bushman, Fred Lindsay, will make his appearance in Atlanta, giving an exhibition of the wonderful talents of his countrymen in handling whips instead of lariats in the latter's pastime. Lindsay is the undisputed king of the stockwhip men. He will demonstrate not only how to cut the necks off of bottles with one swing of his whip and wrap his name and address around the tender neck of a beautiful girl, without doing her injury.

Baseball's idol, Adrian C. Anson, the famous leader of the Chicago Cubs, will be a special feature of the bill. Pop Anson is now well past baseball age, but has a fund of good stories of the days when he won pennants, which will interest a multitude of baseball fans, and those who like to hear baseball stories.

Mabel Fitzgerald, the laughing girl, direct from George Edwards' Gayety theater, London, will be a popular member of the bill, and Mason and Murray, in singing and talking, will be among the other features.

There will be daily matinees and evening performances, and already a heavy advance sale indicates a big week.

Ann Boyd.
(At the Lyric.)

This week will be home week at the Lyric. Atlanta is justly proud of Georgia's celebrated author, Will N. Harben; his books are devoured eagerly here as elsewhere, and "Ann Boyd" has been the biggest seller of them all.

All this week "Ann Boyd" will hold the boards at the Lyric. Under the Shubert management, Miss LaVerne starred in this her own dramatization for three seasons, including a run at Wallack's theater, New York, and at the Shubert theater, Boston, playing always to packed houses at $2 admission prices. Its production this week will be in keeping with the high standard that Miss LaVerne has established and maintained, for even in the New York production she could not have been better supported than by her present company.

The opening scene discloses Thanksgiving eve preparations in the home of Joe and Ann Boyd. Their 4-year-old daughter, Nettie, has planned for the day with a row of Christmas stockings. A singularly sweet scene of domestic happiness holds the attention of the audience until Nettie is tucked away for the night. From then on troubles hatch at the rate of compound interest. The life of the heroine of the play is wrecked by the perfidy of a false friend who betrays her with deliberate and studied falsification to her husband, and wrecks her home life by encompassing her separation from her husband. The ensuing action preaches a sermon from the text, "Judge not that ye be not judged." In the end the great splendid character of the real woman triumphs. The play, as stated, is preachy, but it is not preachy. There is never a dull moment, and the philosophy of all goes straight home, to the heart and mind and to the eye.

Willie Miss LaVerne will appear in the title role in which she originally starred, there will be another star in the production in Marguerite Charles, who calls Atlanta home. She has the part of a worldly society woman, a novice said of her. What a favorite she is is shown by the reception and the applause she brings forth at every performance.

Miss Helen Hackett, too, will have splendid opportunity. This charming actress has become one of the most important cogs in the company. Robert Middlemass will play the husband of Miss Charles, believes the stories told about his wife and leaves her, to return finally, after learning the truth, to ask forgiveness. Mr. Middlemass, by reason of his finished acting and magnetic personality, impressed all who have seen him, and has become one of the most popular men in town. Forbes Winslow and Guy Milham will appear in two of the leading roles.

The scenic equipment will be the most pretentious of the season, particularly in the second act, where a stream of real water is seen rushing down from the mountains.

Louis Mason will demonstrate the latest in the maxixe at each performance and the company will hold tango teas on the stage after the matinees Tuesday and Thursday.

Junior Keith Vaudeville.
(At the Grand.)

"Excellent business all week" is the report given out by the management of the Grand when inquiry was made by a representative of this paper as to how the theatergoers of the city were taking to the new policy of Junior Keith vaudeville.

Promise is given that the new attractions that open a three days' engagement tomorrow will surprise all by their class and general excellence as entertainers. Several of the acts have appeared in the city before, but not at small prices.

For instance, the Castillians and Golden and Hughes are among the best entertainers in their line in this or any other country. The former present a series of art studies that have made them famous here and abroad, and the latter are equally as well known for their character impersonations of the southern darkey.

Others to appear comprise Hodge and Lowell, in songs, dances and comedy; the Tropical trio, will present a spectacular novelty, "A September Morn in Africa," with special scenery and effects; Aerwin and Blake, attractive girls, will dance in a manner to capitivate all, and "The Dead Man Who Killed" will be shown in four interesting reels of motion pictures.

The usual three performances a day will be gives at 2:30, 7:30 and 9 p. m. A complete new show is announced for Thursday.

"The Woman Who Dared."
(At the Bijou.)

The desire to produce a Russian play with a story entirely different from anything that has ever been offered by the Eddie Black Stock company has induced the management of this company to present for the coming week "The Woman Who Dared," a remarkable melodrama depicting the political and nihilistic plots of Russia. The story gives ample opportunity for intensely dramatic scenes, the action is swift, the plot most interesting and the play one of the most exciting that could be offered in a melodramatic production. Eddie Black, Edwin Vail, Marie Claire, Walter VanDyke and Miss Brandt will all be cast in splendid roles, and special costumes and elaborate scenic effects will make the production one of the most noteworthy of the stock season. "The Woman Who Dares" has long been considered one of the most popular plays in the melodramatic field and its selection for next week's play at the Bijou should bring the largest crowds of the season to the Marietta street theater. During the week matinees will be given daily at 2:10 o'clock and night performances at 8:10 o'clock. Monday night ladies will be admitted free under the usual conditions.

WOULD APPRECIATE AN ANSWER TO HIS LETTER

Jacksonville, Fla., April 19, 1914.—Editor Firing Line: Will you please, or in other words elucidate the following occurrence? I was due in Rockmart, Ga., Saturday, June 14, was delayed a little and found I could not get there till 8 p. m. Saturday, which would necessitate spending Sunday and the best part of Monday. Rather than do this I decided to push up the town. I was expecting some mail at the hotel, and as soon as I made up my mind not to go there, I wrote the hotel to forward mail to Covington, Ga., instead. Now, either the hotel people returned the letter to my house, whose printed address was on an outside corner. Now, what I would like to know is, did the hotel people want to call the attention of my firm to the fact that I was passing up this town? The letter was in their care only two hours after I had mailed it to my house I did not get it till Thursday, which they had done as I asked. I would have received it Monday. Very truly,

MEL STEWART.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE MEETS AT BLACKSHEAR

Waycross, Ga., April 26.—(Special.)—Monday the Waycross district will hold its annual conference at Blackshear.

The opening sermon will be preached by Rev. A. Jackson, pastor of the First Methodist church, of Brunswick. Rev. L. F. Tyson, presiding elder, will formally organize the conference Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock.

Among the visitors invited to attend are Dr. Charles R. Jenkins, president of Wesleyan college at Macon; Dr. James Kilgo, president of Emory college at Oxford; Rev. J. C. G. Brooks, president of Wartburg college at Wrightsville; Dr. W. C. Lovett, editor of The Wesleyan Christian Advocate, of Atlanta; Rev. W. F. Smith of Valdosta; Rev. P. W. Ellis, of Savannah, and Rev. M. W. Carmichael, Sunday school expert, from Byron. Hon. W. B. Stubbs, of Savannah, is also among the visitors expected, and will make an appeal Wednesday evening in behalf of "Civic Righteousness."

Dawson City Court.

Dawson, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—The April quarterly term of the city court of Dawson came to an end Friday afternoon. Judge Edwards having been engaged since last Monday morning with the disposing of cases on the civil docket. The case that attracted most attention, which took some time to try, was the suit of J. M. Fletcher v. the Central of Georgia Railway company, based on the killing of his 15-year-old son, Dewey Fletcher, about six months ago at a road crossing on Mr. Fletcher's farm, near Bronwood. The jury returned a verdict in favor of the railroad company. Mr. Fletcher's attorney, H. A. Wilkinson, has made a motion for a new trial, and the same will be heard July 5 next. The railway company was represented by Attorneys A. B. Hawkins, of Americus, and James G. Parks, of Dawson.

After Waycross Loafers.

Waycross, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—Police of Waycross are going to begin a crusade at once against loafing, and everybody found out of employment and apparently making no effort to find employment will be given a series of lessons in agriculture at the city's farm.

Hope is a good thing, but a meal ticket enables one to eat.

Using the Movies to Teach Bible to the Atlanta Public; Pictures Will Be Here for Month With Free Admission

Atlanta is to have a four weeks' run of the world-famous Biblical picture drama, "The Creation." The pictures will be produced at the Atlanta theater, starting Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, also at 8 p. m., and continuing twice daily ever after until May 24, inclusive. There is not a cent of charge and no appeal for funds made in any manner to those who witness the wonderful story of the Bible as portrayed in this manner.

The production is under the auspices of the International Bible Students' association, and all expenses incident to the Atlanta exhibition has already been met by the Bible students. As to the motive of the enterprise, it is purely philanthropic, and is supported by voluntary contributions to attract funds by Bible students whose hearts and heads have been gladdened by the story of glad tidings of great joy, and they are desirous of extending the blessing to others.

"We believe that infidelity and skepticism is on the increase, and our object is to restore the people to faith in the Bible as the inspired word of God relative to His plan of redemption," said P. D. Pottle, manager of the local exhibition. Continuing he said: "An impression made on the mind through the eye is much more efficacious than an impression made on the mind through the ear. Our method is to use both channels.

"There are a goodly number of persons who are well taken care of religiously by the various churches, and who are thoroughly satisfied with their church home, and there is a class of people who are looked after by the Salvation Army, but there is a large mass of people between these two classes who have no religious instruction commonly styled the unchurched. It is this class of people we are catering to chiefly."

The photo-drama of Creation is in four parts, of about two hours each. It takes up the Bible story of creation from the time when the earth was without form and void, and gradually leads the audience through the seven creative days, thence through the annals of history to the time of the great deluge, the experiences of Israel in Egypt and the wilderness on to the first advent of our Lord. The films portraying the life of Christ from the manger to the cross are very realistic, and are said to be the finest films ever produced on the great Bible story. The last part of the big Bible pictures lead from the day of Pentecost down through the dark ages and the reformation up to the present time.

The International Bible Students' association, which is financing the "Drama of Creation" and offering it entirely free to the public twice daily at the Atlanta theater, is an unsectarian evangelical society founded about forty years ago by Pastor Russell, of Brooklyn Tabernacle and Washington temple. Its object is to encourage and stimulate individual Bible study, or to get the people to return to the faith once delivered unto the saints, and to apply the precepts of the Good Book to their daily lives.

The association aims to teach four principles to its members, as follows:

1. Recognition of Jehovah, God, as creator and sustainer of the universe.

2. Faith in His only begotten Son, our Lord Jesus Christ, as the redeemer of the world through His sacrificial death.

3. Faith in the Bible as the inspired word of God relative to His great plan of redemption.

4. A clean and honorable life.

There are about eighteen companies now showing the photo "Drama of Creation" in as many cities of this country. The exhibition opened at Knoxville and Memphis last Sunday, and will open in Atlanta and Tampa, Fla., this Sunday.

The Bible students say that in Part 1 of the drama, science, history and the Bible are shown to be in harmony with each other. This fact alone is very encouraging to the conscientious, thinking Christian.

MOTORCYCLE RACES WILL BEGIN SOON

Manager Noon Hudson Has Signed Bunch of Good Riders. Shriners Buy Tickets.

The Atlanta Motordrome will re-open its gates again in the very near future, for a series of race meets to be held throughout the present summer.

The first race meet will be held Saturday, May 9, and races will be held every day during Shriners' Week, which commences the following Monday.

Manager Hudson has been working like a Trojan on all his plans for the past two months, and has all of the best motorcycle riders in the world signed up to race here this year.

Graves the Leader.

Morty Graves, who has been named captain of the riders, has been signing the riders for Manager Hudson and announces that he has listed all of the cracks to appear here.

Morty is one of the wisest motorcycle riders in the game. He rides with his head and knows the game backwards and crossways. Under his leadership, the riders at the local track are sure to give the fans a run for their money at all meets.

The Shriners have taken a big block of tickets for the races and will take a big block more, and it is more likely that during their stay here the big motordrome will play to them alone with their famous bands occupying the arena and dispensing music.

It is also possible that there may be Sunday racing here this summer. The following letter from City Attorney Grayson shows the possibilities:

Grayson's Letter.

Mr. D. Noon Hudson, City.—Dear Sir: In re: Motor Cycles Races on Sunday. I beg to advise there is no law against motorcycle racing on Sunday unless charges are made for admission to the grounds or seats or something of that sort. I think the same ruling would apply to the matter that applies to moving pictures, namely, they can accept voluntary contributions without violation of the law provided, of course, the contributions are voluntary and not forced in any way.

The ruling above given does not cover any complaint that might be made for disorderly conduct, nuisances, etc., but covers only the question as to whether such races can be operated without charge on the basis of voluntary contributions.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) JAM. L. MAYSON,
City Attorney.

From the general outlook, the motorcycle racing season in Atlanta this year is going to be the best and most exciting season of racing ever held on any track in the world.

LONG JOURNEY MADE BY AN OAKLAND CAR TO SHOW CUSTOMER

J. Felix Castillo, of Montevideo, Uruguay, may never have lived in Missouri, but nevertheless he has the well-known habit of the people of that state—"you have to show him."

Johnson Martin, who represents the Oakland company in South America, made extraordinary claims for the Oakland and Castillo was interested but skeptical.

He had his own ideas of an automobile demonstration, but Martin was hardly prepared for the unusual conditions he imposed for a test. Castillo had planned a 15-mile test!

A 155-mile journey in Uruguay means [illegible] Castillo [illegible] the route. It led over the roughest roads and unpopulated plains and hills. Tools and clothes must be carried and they were placed in the extra tires at the rear with food and water under the front seat.

It was agreed that a stripped chassis of a stock car should be used and that Martin and Castillo should make the trip, the former driving.

Castillo returned from the test fully convinced as to the capabilities of the Oakland; and Martin had another sale to his credit.

Athens Mayor and Chamber Will Declare Half Holiday For the Georgia-Tech Game

Athens, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—The mayor of Athens, the president of the chamber of commerce, and other organizations are to declare officially and formally a half holiday on the 8th of May, the Friday on which the first of the four games of baseball between the University of Georgia and the Georgia Technological school is to be played.

This is the first time in the history of the state, so far as is known, that a college ball game has called for an official cessation of all business. The city hall will be closed, and the police chief's office, the business places generally over the city will shut their doors at 2 p. m. and everybody will go to Sanford field to witness the struggle between the old-time interstate rivals.

Messrs. Hugh Gerdon and E. H. Dorsey, of the Athletic association, have authorized additional bleachers constructed to take care of the special crowds that will wintness both games—Friday and Saturday, May 7 and 9—between the Athens and Atlanta ends of the University of Georgia system.

The railroad will afford special service from Gainesville, on the G. M. R. R.; from Lula on the Southern; from Union Point, on the Georgia; from Macon, on the Central, and from Elberton and from Lawrenceville, on the S. A. L. besides the extra train that is to bring the Tech rooters and the University alumni to Athens from Atlanta and the two days. The merchants of Athens have associated themselves into a strict trade league, which offers to refund the railroad fare to every visitor to Athens over the line, who trades with the Athens concern to the extent of a reasonable amount.

Other games never before have just the interest taken in the Georgia-Tech games as Athens is going to play around the year. And the biggest will be, even more acute for the two games that are to be played in Atlanta on the 15th and 16th of May.

HEBREW ORPHANS' HOME OPENS BASEBALL SEASON

The H. O. H. league opened its second season last Friday. Like last year, the league only consists of three teams, but these three teams fight with a will and a fight game is always predicted.

At the big meeting of the directors, managers and players, Sam Fasko, the founder of the league, was elected president, secretary and treasurer. The new rules were also adopted, and the schedule for the coming 1914 season was agreed upon and passed.

The baseball season of last year was a big success. It played nearly games and never was the league in danger of disbanding or going to pieces. The Flying Eagles, under the good management of Red Apthepy, won the pennant, while the Grizzly Bears finished second and Baby Elephants last.

This year the league opened Friday morning. A big parade preceded the opening game. The Tin Can brigade furnished the music and the drum corps. The three rival teams marched behind each other with the banners flying and shouting the battle cries. The parade formed sixty yards long and the Hebrew Orphan home witnessed its greatest demonstration. After the parade the opening game of the season started amid cheers and shouts.

The followings is the standing of the league up to date:

	Played.	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Grizzly Bears.	2	2	0	1.000
Baby Elephants.	2	1	1	.333
Flying Eagles.	2	1	1	.333
Baby Elephants.	2	0	2	.000

Punctures 90% Less

Investigations prove that with "Nobby Tread" Tires punctures are 90% less than with the average tire.

The big, thick "nobs" on "Nobby Tread" Tires stand out so far from the shoe that nails, glass, sharp stones, etc., hardly ever reach the shoe.

Study the "nobs," their size, their thickness, and the way they are placed, and you will understand why.

And remember this—you have got to wear out these big, thick, tough "nobs" before you even start to wear out the extra strong tire underneath—that is one reason why experts call "Nobby Treads"

Two Tires in One

The original wear-resisting quality, the quantity of rubber, the methods of construction—all have been rigidly maintained in "Nobby Tread" Tires, and maintained regardless of cost and regardless of price competition.

TEACHERS OPPOSE PLAN OF M'CRORY

Do Not Approve State's Printing of Text Books. J. C. Wardlaw Is Elected President.

Macon, Ga., April 12.—(Special.)—The Georgia Educational association went on record today as opposing C. R. McCrory's plan for the state to publish text books for the public schools of Georgia, and did so in no uncertain terms, a resolution introduced by Otis Aahmore, superintendent of schools in Savanah, decrying the McCrory plan as a "dangerous proposition" being unanimously adopted.

The Ashmore resolution was reported favorably by the resolutions committee and was adopted without the least discussion. It calls on the legislature to turn down the McCrory bill now pending before the legislature and to permit national and open competition in the sale of school books, encouraging an effort on the part of the state to enter the doubtful enterprise of editing school books.

Resolution Adopted.

The resolution as adopted follows:

"Resolved, That the Georgia Educational association has listened with interest to what the Hon. C. R. McCrory has said on the subject of the state manufacture and control of school books, but respectfully urge that his proposition is an unwise policy for the state, and a dangerous experiment for the schools.

"We are of the opinion that the quality of text books should be considered rather than their price, and that the possible saving of a few cents for each child, each year, is insignificant in comparison to the greater advantage of securing the best texts for his instruction.

"We hold that the open market of the nation should be at the disposal of the citizen for school books, in the same way as it is for other things they need. We express our grave doubt regarding the ability of the state to secure as well made books at less cost to the state than we now pay, in view of the close competition of the publishing houses of the country at large.

"We feel assured that the author of a good book should not be asked to sell his copyright for sale in other editions in the state, thereby restricting its sale and usefulness.

"On the other hand, we look with grave apprehension upon the damage that may be done to the schools by the acceptance of inferior manuscripts, and the compulsory use of poor text books.

"We respectfully request the Georgia legislature not to adopt measures that may seriously involve the state in the doubtful enterprise of editing and publishing text books for the public schools."

New Officers Named.

J. C. Wardlaw, of Athens, formerly first vice president of the association, was elected president today; succeeding T. G. Pelhill, of LaGrange. Other officers elected were:

Ralph Newton, Fort Valley, first vice president.

Miss Florence Beard, Macon, second vice president.

C. L. Smith, LaGrange, secretary.

R. E. Brooks, Dublin, treasurer.

Three new directors, J. C. Harris, Rome; Jason Scarboro, Tifton, and E. T. Holmes, Barnesville.

The association adopted a resolution calling on the trustees to select Macon as the meeting place again in 1915. Because of a clause in the constitution, placing in the trustees the power of designating the meeting places, the association was unable to make Macon the permanent meeting place, but a way may be found later to do this.

Among the other resolutions adopted today were:

One placing the association on record as favoring the Sweat compulsory education bill now pending before congress.

Indorsing the bill now pending in congress providing for vocational schools.

Favoring the permissive free kindergarten bill now before the Georgia legislature.

EVERY INDICATION IS FOR EXCELLENT 1914 PEACH CROP

Every indication received by the Georgia Fruit Exchange is to the effect that the 1914 peach crop has escaped all danger of damage, and the prospects for 1914 are the brightest in the history of the exchange. According to these reports the orchards were never in better condition than now, and unless there comes an unexpected freeze, frost or setback, Georgia is expected to produce over six thousand carload of peaches. Reports from Texas and Arkansas are to the effect that the fruit crop in those states will be only about half of the normal crop, which will give Georgia the right-of-way in the fruit [redacted]

Pity These Ailing Monarchs of the Old World

Hardly a Royal Family in Europe of Which at Least One Member Is Not Seriously Ill—Enormous Insurance Policies Carried by the German Emperor, the Czar and the King of Italy.

(Copyright, 1914, by Curtis Brown.)

London, April 25.—From all quarters of Europe comes news of ailing monarchs or monarchs-to-be. There is hardly a royal family on the continent that can point to universal good health as a family asset. The Archduke Franz Ferdinand, heir-prospective of the thrones of Austria-Hungary, whose accession cannot be long delayed, is said to be suffering from consumption; King Alfonso of Spain is suffering from a weak throat, while one of his sons is deaf and dumb; the young czarewitch has bleeding disease or something worse; the German crown prince, according to constant report, is suffering from the dreadful throat malady that carried off his grandfather; while King George of England, in addition to a constitutionally weak throat, like his late father, for the protection of which he is compelled to wear a beard, is said to be a nervous wreck, due to the long-drawn-out political crisis into which he has been inevitably drawn from the day he ascended the throne.

High Death Rate for Kings.

Of late years there has been a frightfully high death rate among European rulers. In the little more than a decade since the death of Queen Victoria no less than nine sovereigns have passed away—the king of Norway and Sweden, King Leopold of Belgium, King Carlos of Portugal, King Alexander of Servia, King Edward of England, two kings of Denmark and two grand dukes of Luxembourg. Extraordinary precautions are taken to maintain the health of the European monarchs, hundreds of thousands of dollars being spent every year in retaining the best doctors and surgeons in the world in almost day to day attendance upon the kings and queens. But despite all this, the several sovereigns seem to sicken and see to it that they are heavily insured. Thus the czar of Russia is insured for $4,000,000 in an English company, which, in turn, distributed the amount of risk among other leading companies. The czar has paid a heavy annual premium on this policy ever since he was born. When the Grand Duchess Olga, his first child, was born the czar immediately insured her life for $2,500,000, distributing the risk among British, French and Russian companies. The czarina is insured for half that amount. The German emperor is said to carry close to $5,000,000 insurance, while the late King Humbert of Italy was insured for a like amount. King Emmanuel is said to be satisfied with $2,500,000.

Some idea of the elaborate efforts that are made to shield these precious men from sickness may be gained by an examination of the conditions at the English court, which, despite its enormous expenditure, remains today one of the most conservative in that respect. Recently King George has attempted to reduce the enormous cost of the medical staff attached to his household, which in numbers, in and of all proportion to the work they are required to perform, but his majesty has quite failed to affect any economy in this particular direction. At the time of his accession, all the existing medical appointments in the royal household were confirmed and several young doctors and surgeons with influence at court also received appointments and none of the officials could be discharged without liberal compensation, unless for some much weightier reason than that their services were not required.

During the past twenty years the medical staff in the royal household has grown enormously. In the beginning of the reign of Queen Victoria there were but five physicians and two surgeons on the staff. When King Edward came to the throne this number had increased to eighteen, and King Edward, during his reign, raised it to twenty-four. Now there are actually thirty-three physicians, surgeons, dentists and other specialists on the medical staff.

The physicians in direct charge of the health of the king are five in number. They are elected from the best known members of the medical profession and each receives a salary of $5,000 per annum. The chief of these is Sir Francis Laking and either he or one of the "five P's" physicians, as they are called, go through the rather absurd performance every day of seeing the king in regard to his health. The interview between the sovereign and one of his physicians lasts but a few minutes, and could, of course, be easily dispensed with, but it is one of the antiquated customs of the court that the medical profession are interested in maintaining.

Doctor Every Morning.

When the king is at Buckingham palace, there is no physician in residence; the physician in attendance simply calls at the palace in the morning to see the king. But when the court is at Balmoral, or any other of the royal residences out of London, one of the king's doctors must be in residence with the sovereign and another must hold himself in readiness to come to the court at any moment, if required to do so.

Thus $25,000 a year is spent in simply ascertaining the fact every day that the king is in good health. But lest the monarch should be attacked by some complaint requiring the aid of a surgeon, the services of five of the most distinguished men in their calling are retained at even larger salaries than those paid to the doctors. Each of the king's surgeons receives 17,500 per annum and none of them, when the king is in good health, ever sees his majesty unless as one of his guests. One of the surgeons has, however, always to hold himself in readiness to go to the sovereign and each takes it in turn to be what is called in attendance on the king, which simply means that he must not be out of London during the time he is in attendance.

The five surgeons attached to the royal household are Sir Frederick Treves, Sir Havelock Charles, Sir Rickman Godlee, Sir Alfred Fripp and Sir William Cheyne. Thus between doctors and surgeons, $62,500 per annum is spent in securing medical and surgical attendance for the sovereign that certainly could be quite efficiently permitted for about $2,500 a year.

In addition to the physicians and surgeons there is a surgeon dentist and surgeon oculist attached to the medical staff; the first mentioned receives $6,000 per annum and the second $5,000 per annum. The pay to these two men exceeds the salary paid to the physicians, the reason being that they do much more for their money than the doctors. The dentist looks after the teeth not only of the king and queen, but also of the royal children, and the oculist gives his services not only to the royal family but to the members of the royal household. Members of the household who employ the dentist have to pay him, however, should they require his services.

There is also a laryngologist at a salary of $4,000 per annum; a bacteriologist at $2,500 per annum, and an anaesthetist, the only unpaid official in the royal medical staff; Sir William Hewitt, the anaesthetist, would be paid $105 for attendance on the king or any members of the royal family were his services required.

But in addition to all these medical men, there are a number of young doctors and surgeons attached to the royal medical staff. Their appointments were first made in the reign of Queen Victoria, when a few young doctors who had influence at court were given positions on the medical staff, but they were then unpaid. Their duties were and are practically all, though some of them are occasionally called upon to attend the royal servants and employes. Now, however, they are paid salaries varying from $1,250 to $2,500 per year. At the present time the junior medical staff attached to the royal household numbers eighteen, and taking their salaries on an average of $1,500, they cost the country $27,000 per year.

Young Doctors on Job.

As medical attendant to the royal household, Sir Robert Burnett receives a salary of $5,000 per annum, but so well to do member of the royal establishment, if he (or she) were ill, would dream of calling upon Sir Robert to attend him without paying him his ordinary fee. As a matter of fact, two members of the royal household are among the distinguished physician's best paying patients.

Cost of Medical Staff.

The cost of the whole medical staff of the royal establishment works out at more than $114,000 per annum. But the truly remarkable thing is that even for this rather considerable sum, King George does not, when he is ill, receive the best medical attention, for without having to pay for it. When the late king was taken ill with appendicitis at the time of his coronation, Sir Frederick Treves, one of the other doctors of the royal household who attended his majesty were paid substantial fees for their services, if the monarch were to be taken seriously ill it is long odds that some newly risen star or stars in the medical profession, and not one of the royal medical staff, would be called into consultation with the king's physicians and surgeons are of course, be paid big fees. Further, even if the physicians and surgeons are paid for attendance on the queen and the royal family if their services are required.

The real fact is that the cost of the royal medical staff and the present medical attendance on the king if he happens to be suffering from a slight chill or the like, is a pure waste of money, the sort of maladies which ordinary folk cure for a dime or so at the nearest drug store.

KOREA FAST ADOPTING WAYS OF THE MODERN

Great Change Has Come Over People Since the Arrival of the Japanese.

Seoul, Korea, April 25.—Modernization has begun to make itself felt in Korea. American visitors will find the white-robed Korean with his sparse black beard, his majestical walk and stove-pipe hat still moving picturesquely through the wide streets of Seoul, carelessly puffing his long bamboo pipe, but the general life of the city has lost much of its languor and ease. A new energy has sprung up since the arrival of the Japanese.

The immediate problems of the Japanese administration concern education, and the arranging of employment for the people. The correspondent of the Associated Press was recently informed by the Japanese authorities that the government was greatly in debt to the American missionaries for the work they have rendered in establishing schools. The Young Men's Christian association was said to be doing fine work in its industrial school, and the Japanese government is pushing forward the governmental industrial schools which were founded by Prince Ito during the protectorate over Korea.

The government will erect a new set of buildings for its offices on the grounds of the old North palace. Although the principal imperial Korean buildings are to be preserved, a number of the smaller historic structures will be razed to give additional space and to eliminate expensive upkeep.

There is no open evidence of organized revolt against the new order of things, and it is believed that Japan has nothing to fear in the way of rebellion, but there remain some strong feelings among the functionaries of the old regime, who have been thrown out of office, and among the wayward student class, who are crowded with an interest in politics like that found among students in Japan proper. Neither of the opposing forces, however, has as yet given their opposition any concrete form.

Among the missionary workers, those of the Presbyterian church of the United States are at present conspicuous for the extent of their work. A recent report accounted for 125 Presbyterian missionaries in the Korean field and showed that their evangelical work is carried on by 52 native ordained ministers and by 211 unordained preachers in the pay and 1,136 unorganized churches. It is said that in the field of 4,000,000 population, where the Presbyterians have been carrying on their work, 100,000 have joined the church.

All of the American missionaries are exerting themselves in the educational education of youth, including manual training, and it is this phase of their work which is most satisfactory to both the Korean and Japanese, who see in it the first step toward industrial prosperity.

The Presbyterian mission has established hospitals and dispensaries where 2,400 in-patients and 67,000 dispensary patients have received treatment. The Severance medical college, which owes so much to the American philanthropist, L. H. Severance, has been especially useful in meeting the needs of the country. There are now 37 students who come from all parts of Korea. The training school for nurses is an important adjunct to the college. All other missionaries are representative to teach in the college.

The bold mountainous country of Korea still abounds in tigers, and not only recently one of them came to the southern gates of Seoul itself. In outlying points peasants have either been slain or carried away by wild beasts. In the old days guilds or associations of peasants existed for protection against wild animals, but since Japan has taken Korea these guilds have ceased to exist, owing to the Japanese prohibition of men carrying arms. It is not unlikely that this prohibition will be removed for the mountainous districts where dangerous animals thrive.

Japanese officials report that the bandits of the north have been hunted down by the Korean and Japanese gendarmes, and few, if any, now exist.

During his experience as city boss, however, Alderman Wilson had been finding out things that shocked him as a business man. He learned that the various city departments worked quite independently of each other and that no chief of one department had any idea of what any other chief was doing. He discovered, for instance, that the gas works and the street railways were making separate contracts for coal at different prices and that neither price was as low as could be obtained, if the whole city contract for coal were placed with one colliery. He discovered that every department had its own transportation department with horses, carts, firemen and superintendents, and that some of these plants were lying idle a great part of the time. He also discovered, what is probably the most amazing thing of all, that a number of old and inefficient men were being carried on the pay-rolls and that there were also a number of well paid officials whose only claim to their jobs seemed to be the possession of influence with leading members of the council.

He figured out that in the street cleaning department alone, there were 400 more than were needed, and that the work of street paving, etc., done by the Highways department, could be done at about half the prices by private contract. He also pointed out that if the street railways were used for removing refuse at night, a large force of horses and carts could be saved.

The result of it all was that Alderman Wilson, who, by his success in breaking the strike, had earned the confidence of Leeds, proposed what practically amounted to the abolition of the city council and, what is more, persuaded the council to commit suicide. Under his plan, which was adopted last week, the council, instead of meeting once a week, will meet only once every three months.

Run by a Committee.

All its administrative power has been delegated to an executive committee of seven aldermen of whom, of course, Wilson is one, and this committee of seven has appointed J. R. Hamilton, who was manager of the street railway department, boss of Leeds. Hamilton's salary has been raised from $5,000 to $7,500 and he is to be allowed 100 free days every year to earn more money, if he wishes, by acting as consulting engineer to other towns. His first act was to dispense with the heads of the street cleaning and highways departments, who were paid $3,000 a year each, and to "sack" a number of minor chiefs and superintendents. So far the changes he has made represent an annual saving of $30,000, and he declares that he will be able to give Leeds a better administration than it ever had before.

Hamilton proposes to run Leeds just as he would if he were the manager of a great business. Every department of the municipal administration will come under his hands, and he will go through it department by department, seeing where expense can be saved and efficiency increased. Superfluous men will have to go as matter of course, but they will be, and competence and ability to get results will be the only factors considered in making promotions. Hamilton will be responsible only to the seven who will be in the position of the board of directors of a great company and who will, of course, give their manager a free hand so long as the results are satisfactory.

Labor Party Furious.

Of course this revolutionary change has not been accomplished without some opposition. The labor party, which has sixteen members out of sixty-eight in the council, is furious and declares that it will do all in its power to upset the scheme. Of course it was hopelessly outwitted, but it hopes to be able to upset the whole scheme in the courts. This hope is based on the theory that under the English law no municipal corporation, or for that matter, no company, has the right to delegate its powers to a committee. Whether this plan to upset the scheme succeeds or not, the labor party is going to make a great campaign against it at the polls.

In any case, Hamilton has at least a year in his new job as boss of Leeds, and much depends on his success. There is no doubt that Englishmen are getting tired of the political and amateur management of their cities and are ripe for some sort of reform.

Something similar to the Leeds experiment, on a much more restricted scale, was undertaken in London about a year ago when the London county council appointed a general purchasing agent. Before that each department of the government of the metropolis bought its own supplies without reference to the others, with the result, of course, that all sorts of prices, good, bad and all too high, were paid. No report has been issued by the council since this appointment, but it is stated that the saving has been

It is also evident that the British public is growing tired of the party "graft" which is just as prevalent in English municipal life as it is in America. In many of the towns and municipal boroughs the councils are made up largely of contractors and tradesmen, who benefit directly by work done or goods supplied to the public and, of course, under such circumstances, no efficient check on expenditure can be kept. It looks as if the Leeds strike might lead to an entire revolution in English municipal life.

JOHN E. STREET.

One Man Plays Boss In British City

Leeds, in Yorkshire, Appoints a Business Manager and Board of Directors to Run Its Affairs, and the City Council Practically Abdicates—Estimated Saving of $30,000 a Year.

BRIGGATE, LEEDS.

Principal street of the Yorkshire town, which has been turned over to a general manager to run on business lines.

London, April 25.—When the United States started municipal government by commission all the world hailed it as an almost revolutionary step in the science of city administration, but England has gone one better, and Leeds, one of the great industrial cities of Yorkshire, has gone in for a business manager. While the American experiment may be described as a step from municipal democracy to oligarchy that of Leeds is a further step to municipal autocracy.

In order to fully understand what has happened at Leeds it is necessary to be familiar with the recent municipal history of the Yorkshire city. It may be well to say at the start that Leeds has been a fairly well managed city, even according to the English standard, which is high. It has a population of about 500,000, keen, hard-headed Yorkshire manufacturers and workmen, who are used to driving a hard bargain in their private business and who carried the habit into their municipal affairs. Its death rate is low, its streets are clean, it has an excellent street railway system and gas works, both municipally-owned, and altogether, were it not for the smoky atmosphere inseparable from English industrial towns, it would be almost an ideal place to live in.

Driving a Hard Bargain.

The tendency toward driving a hard bargain, however, brought trouble, for some months ago the municipal workmen, of whom there were about 3,000 and 4,000 all told, made up their minds that they were not getting enough money. Other cities of equal rank with Leeds, they declared, were paying higher wages and they sent a deputation to the city fathers and asked for a rise of 50 cents a week all round.

The city council refused to grant the advance and told the men that they were being as well paid as similar workmen in private employment and had many advantages, such as pensions, holidays, and shorter hours, which private workmen did not enjoy.

In the end, after much negotiation, the men went on strike last December and for five weeks the business affairs of Leeds were more or less disorganized. For two or three days there were no street cars, and no light, and the streets were not cleaned. Then came the strong man in the person of Alderman C. H. Wilson, leader of the conservative party in the city council. Alderman Wilson is a successful manufacturer who is accustomed to getting things done, and he told the council that if they would give him a free hand he would break the strike. The council gave him full power and Alderman Wilson, in a few days, had organized a fairly efficient municipal service manned by volunteers.

Men Crushed.

Students at Leeds university took off their shirts and shovelled coal in the gas works, while others put on their overcoats and drove street cars. Staid business men wielded brooms in the streets, while clerks and bookkeepers drove garbage carts. The strikers threw a few half bricks at the "black legs," as strike breakers are called in the country, but Alderman Wilson had control of the police and the result of it all was that on January 13 the strikers applied to be allowed to return to work unconditionally.

GERMAN WOMEN TO MOVE ON THE WORLD COUNCIL

More Than a Hundred Leaders Will Attend Great Meeting in Rome.

Berlin, April 25.—It is announced by the League of German Woman's associations that over a hundred leaders of the woman's movement in Germany will be in Rome next month for the quinquennial meeting of the International Council of Women and the general women's congress.

Dr. Gertrude Baeumer, president of the German league, will present a report on the progress of the movement in Germany during the past five years and will also deliver an address before the council on "The Value of the Work of the Housewife."

Among the other German representatives at Rome will be Frau Ernst Rassermann, wife of the leader of the national liberal party. Dr. Alice Solomon, who, as honorary corresponding secretary, has done a great share of the preliminary and organization work for the meeting of the council; Fraulein Pappenheim, of the Jewish Woman's league, and Fraulein Paula Muller, of the Evangelical Woman's league, and Fraulein Israel, head of a large and recently organized association for female clerks and business employees. Some twenty of the German representatives can sit as delegates and alternates at the meetings of the council, but ladies may attend only the public meetings and the subsequent general congress organized by the Italian women, but the presence of more than a hundred German women at Rome under these conditions is a striking testimonial to the enthusiasm in Germany for the feminist cause.

The work of the women's organizations in Germany since the last meeting of the council in 1909 has been largely directed toward legislation, and the league, with its more than half a million members, has become a power before which the government and parliaments have frequently had to bow. Petitions and demonstrations have been launched repeatedly against measures affecting the economic status of women, and its aspect of the program of the Rome conference will receive the particular attention of German delegates.

The question of female suffrage, on the other hand, is for the German women more a matter of academic interest. Practically all the organizations connected with the league are in favor of giving the vote to women, but it is generally recognized that this cannot be won in Germany in the immediate future, and attention is concentrated on other efforts. Women's associations have been organized within most of the political parties, even among the conservatives, in spite of their general attitude that the proper sphere of woman is limited to the "three C's," children, church and cooking.

WOMEN PLAN DEFEAT OF THE PANKHURSTS

New Suffrage Body Working to Overthrow the Noted Leaders.

London, April 25.—The "Pankhursts must go" promises to be the rallying cry of a new suffragette organization formed by leaders who believe woman's cause has suffered a setback by the practice of the leading militant society. A significant feature of the new movement is that it is fathered by suffragists who were once strong supporters of militant tactics, but who, at various times, have been forced to withdraw from the Woman's Social and Political Union.

The simmer of discontent, which now promises to break into open revolt, began last year when Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Pethick Lawrence, on their return from Canada, were informed that Mrs. Pankhurst no longer desired their services on the executive committee of the organization. This intimation was carried to the Lawrences before their boat reached the dock. They were inclined at first to laugh at it as preposterous, but on landing they found that Mrs. Pankhurst had made herself so powerful during their absence that it would be hopeless to fight her edict, so out they went.

As firm believers in the efficacy of militant tactics, the Lawrences did not air their grievance, in the hope that the autocratic regime of the Pankhursts would advance the cause, which they had above all else. This truce and the determination of the various constitutional societies not to criticize any tactics which might mean personal gain, gave Mrs. Pankhurst and her daughter, Christobel, abundant time in which to perfect their organization before opposition was offered to their leadership, and the long promised results did not materialize, and now the Women's Social and Political Union faces both opposition without and dissension within.

While dismissing members of her personal staff, Mrs. Pankhurst has also been discharging privates in the ranks. One of these women, who was expelled from the organization last week, declared that she was dismissed on the most trivial pretext possible and that the latest Mrs. Pankhurst has dismissed a number of the workers from the organization apparently through caprice. The dismissed member asserted that the militants are dwindling daily until at the present moment there are only 2,000 active workers in the Women's Social and Political Union.

THRILLING STORIES OF JAP EARTHQUAKE

About a Thousand Houses Destroyed on Hondo Island and Hundred Lives Lost.

London, April 25.—The plight of poor Japanese in the north who have been suffering from famine has been increased by the disastrous earthquake of March, which caused great devastation in a zone of about twenty miles square around Akita, on the island of Hondo. The city of Akita was damaged only slightly, but in the country nine towns and forty-one villages were seriously damaged, some villages being entirely annihilated. About 1,000 houses were completely destroyed and about 100 persons were killed, according to the latest reports.

The earthquake came at dawn. The motion was horizontal at first, but after twenty seconds turned into a violent perpendicular movement greatly increasing in velocity until it broke the seismographs. The upward movement, which is particularly feared in Japan, caused hundreds of houses to collapse, and scores of people were crushed to death, having no time to escape. The afflicted people who succeeded in getting out, rushed to the railroad in an attempt to escape from the earthquake belt, but found the rails blocked with stones and earth. Dangerous holes and trenches were opened in the streets, from which rose a cloud of dust and debris.

Several thrilling tales were told by survivors. At Yodokawa, the houses of a whole village caught fire and the family of seventeen people, as well as the neighbors, were burned alive. The two-storied house of Kantaro Saito, at Arashamura, was razed to the ground. His family of five and three others were asleep on the first floor when the earthquake struck. First the building was falling the man upstairs managed to crawl from the debris and rescued seven of those below. Five were taken out injured, but three perished in the ruins. One of the house, his son and servant, were found dead.

A shrine to the memory of the emperor, one of the first acts of the mikado's reign, was left standing almost by the disaster, was to rush to the hill top and recover the imperial flag floating from the roof. It was then rededicated to the late Emperor Mutsuhito.

A Japanese reporter, who made a trip through the devastated district, found many sad scenes. Some victims had erected huts in the roadway where the dead lay deep. He found the village of Kowakuhi in absolute darkness except where a few straggling lights had showed a scene of destruction. Not one of the 400 houses in the village remained standing intact, a score of people had been instantly killed and eighty were more or less severely injured. The tremblement had gone mad from seeing the violent death of its victims.

A few days after the earthquake the long extinct volcano on Mount Chokai suddenly became active. The mountain, which is near the coast and overlooks the sea of Japan, is known as the Fuji of Akita. Its summit is covered with snow even in mid-summer. A great mass of smoke and fire suddenly burst from the southwest crater, and soared heavenward.

NASHVILLE FANS HAVE TAKEN HEART

The Showing Made by the Baseball Team Lately Has Got Everyone at Sulphur Dell Wild.

Nashville, Tenn., April 25.—(Special.) Baseball stock is booming in Nashville these days, the result of the Vols amassing three out of four from the Lookouts in the opening series on home grounds. Local fans who were inclined to knock Manager Schwartz and his gang of pastimers were forced to admit that the boy pilot had assembled a combination which was bound to make a good showing in the ribbon race.

One feature which keeps Skipper Schwartz and Vol moguls' mugs wreathed in smiles is the way the locals have been hammering the ball. Callahan, Sloan and Lindsay have especially been cutting in with wallops at the psychological moment, and the showing made at home during the week is due largely to the efforts of the aforementioned trio.

Callahan has been coming through with nothing short of doubles and triples, and in the third game on home grounds annexed the distinction of being the first player to drive the sphere out of the local park for the circuit this season.

Williams a Hit.

A great addition to the club is Otto Williams, secured from the Kansas City club, who has been playing second. Williams is a veteran, and is slow on the paths, due mainly to a charley-horse which attacked him down in Atlanta last week, but back in the recesses of his cupola there rests large quantities of gray matter which is continually cropping out at the right time. He has fifty-seven varieties of baseball experience, and the youngsters on the local club are finding him somewhat valuable as a teacher, since Williams coaches them on and off the field and is always teaching them some new play.

Williams has also been hitting up around the big mark, and Manager Schwartz says he's a fixture at the keystone.

Another valuable addition to the local roster this week was McNellis, a classy young infielder secured from the South Michigan league, who reported to the Vols at Memphis. McNellis was originally purchased for second base, but as Otto Williams has been contributing all varieties of class around the middle bag, McNellis will find it difficult to beat him out even if he is given a chance. It is the general opinion in baseball circles that McNellis [illegible] be retained as utility man, as it is understood that he can play the outfield as well as any on the bases.

Outfield Good.

Pinch McCabe, who has been performing in the role of utility man with fair success, will, in all probability be released, since McNellis is expected to be several notches higher than McCabe in hitting. McCabe was secured from Jersey City to play the outfield, but King, Callahan and Sloan got the jump on him and secured the regular berths. Callahan is an old-timer in center, but Sloan and King are new members of the Vol machine.

King has been demonstrating his worth every day by being to the good as a lead-off man, managing to walk thrice as much as any other member of the club. In the Chattanooga-Nashville series, King walked eight times, being able to look 'em over and making himself a very difficult man to pitch to.

The Vols' only weakness is behind the bat. Red Smith, the spectacled pad lad, secured from the Kitty, has been doing good work, but the stolen-base record of the opposing clubs is sufficient evidence that he is not as strong behind the wood as a Class A catcher should be. Manager Schwartz has a couple of colt catchers on his roster—Snell and Rogers—but Red Smith has it on them a mile, and it now looks as if one or both will be released some time soon.

In case Manager Schwartz can secure a first-class receiver, Red will be retained as second catcher, but from the present outlook it is hardly probable that a catcher of any kind will be signed within the next few weeks.

GEORGIA LEAGUE

Americus 9, Brunswick 2.

Brunswick, Ga., April 25.—(Special.) By taking this afternoon's game from Brunswick by a score of 9 to 2, Americus made a clean sweep of the series. Another twirler was on the mount for the locals, and he was hit hard. Killed in the sweatiest with a home run, a triple and a double in four times up. He drove in four of Americus' eight runs. Tudy, who pitched for the visitors, was wild, walking nine and hitting four batsmen, but he was effective in the pinches and pulled out of several difficult holes.

Score by innings: R. H. E.
Americus . . . .000 207 021—9 12 2
Brunswick . . . .000 001 001—2 3 1
Batteries—Tudy and Manchester; Seapeke and Reese. Time, 1 hours. Umpires, Duggleby and McNamara.

Waycross 2, Thomasville 0.

Thomasville, Ga., April 25.—(Special.) In a wonderful pitchers' battle between Roth and Miller, Waycross came out in the ninth with two tallies, due to Ehlen's slow fielding and Roth's error in throwing to first.

Up to that time both teams had secured only one hit each. The fielding of Wansem and Fenton was sure and saved several singles.

Thomasville got only one hit for the second consecutive day, establishing a league record.

Score by innings: R. H. E.
Waycross . . . .000 000 002—2 2 3
Thomasville . . .000 000 000—0 1 2
Batteries—Miller and Coveney; Roth and Wilkes.

Cordele 2, Valdosta 1.

Valdosta, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—The locals lost another pretty game to Cordele this afternoon, the score being 2 to 1. Hall worked a beautiful game for the visitors, allowing the locals but three hits. Garwood twirled pretty ball also and had but one bad inning when three hits, one a double, netted them two runs. The game was devoid of features except the all-round good work of both teams.

Score by innings: R. H. E.
Cordele . . . .000 000 020—2 8 2
Valdosta . . . .001 000 000—1 3 1

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Naps 1, White Sox 0.

Cleveland, Ohio, April 25.—Hagerman, a recruit pitcher, had the edge on Benz, of Chicago today, and Cleveland won, 1 to 0. The winning run was secured in the ninth inning. Both pitchers worked in great style, and there were many fine fielding features. Turner, Lord, Weaver, Boehe, Hagerman, Chase and Carlisch each contributing sensations.

Score by innings: R. H. E.
Chicago . . . .000 000 000—0 6 0
Cleveland . . . .000 000 001—1 5 1

St. Louis, Mo., April 25.—Harry Coveleski's pitching was too much for St. Louis today, Detroit winning again, 4 to 0. The big Detroit left-hander allowed but six hits. His opponent, Hamilton, was hit timely, and his teammates fielded in ragged fashion. Hamilton gave way to a pinch hitter in the eighth inning, and Baumgardner finished the game for the home club.

The Mechanical Construction of This—The World's Greatest Motor Car Value—Could Not be a Bit Finer

THE Overland motor is the same in principle, design, action and fundamental construction as the motor used in the $3000, $4000 and $5000 cars!

The Overland frame is of open-hearth steel, identical with that used in the $3000, $4000 and $5000 cars!

The Overland steering knuckle bolt is of 3½% nickel steel, just the same as those used in the $3000, $4000 and $5000 cars!

The Overland drive pinion is of 3½% nickel steel, the same as used in the $3000, $4000 and $5000 cars!

The Overland live axle, which is the driving shaft of the rear axle, is of Chrome nickel steel, the same as used in the $3000, $4000 and $5000 cars!

The Overland front axle, a one-piece drop-forging, is the same as used in the $3000, $4000 and $5000 cars!

The Overland steering knuckle is the same as that used in the $3000, $4000 and $5000 cars!

The Overland radiator in quality is the same as used in one of the most prominent $4000 cars!

The Overland fenders, in quality and material, are the same as used on the $3000, $4000 and $5000 cars!

We use more aluminum, on larger and more important parts, than any other manufacturer in the world. Where others and often makers of $3000 cars, use cast iron at 3 cents per pound we use aluminum at 28c per pound!

Each separate Overland test and inspection for quality of material and accuracy of machining is far more thorough than the methods used by manufacturers of $3000, $4000 and $5000 cars!

The significance of these facts should mean much to those who expect to buy a car. A practical demonstration will mean a great deal more.

Telephone the Overland dealer and make your appointments early as possible.

Mitchell Sixes
Products of Long Experience

This company has been building popular priced sixes longer than any other concern in this country. Hence the sixes we offer are the product of many years of experience and in no sense experiments.

The Mitchell Little Six which was known as the "Baby Six" in 1912, is, in our opinion, the most logical investment in the automobile market. It is not only the sensible compromise between big and little power and passenger capacity, but it has everything that any high-priced car can offer you.

It has quality that insures long life. It has the style of beauty that the exacting mind demands. It has as much speed and power as any person can desire. It will hold its place in any company and look classy and work perfectly for several years to come. Its equipment is complete, and details thereof sterling in character. The price $1,895, brings this smart car to you ready for instant use. There is nothing left for you to buy—no extras—no appurtenances.

The Mitchell Big Six is the big[illegible] and best car at the price that has ever been produced. It is built along the same lines as the Little Six save that it has 144-inch wheel base, somewhat larger tires, greater passenger capacity. Yet the quality of the two are identical. The equipment is precisely the same—the outward beauty similar. For a big family car the Big Six has no equal in America and there is nothing as good for less than $3,500 or $4,000. The price of the Mitchell Big Six is only $2,350.

The Mitchell Four is intended for those who feel that they cannot afford either of the Sixes. It is the only four-cylinder car we make. We build it to meet the demand of those persons who still like a four-cylinder car of class at a popular price. It has the same equipment as the other two cars and sells for $1,595. We want you to look this car over minutely and then ask yourself if there is a four-cylinder car at anywhere near the price that can compare with this one in any detail.

Here is the Equipment for all the Mitchell Models Which is Included in the List Prices as Given:

Electric self-starter and generator—electric lights—electric horn—electric magnetic exploring lamp—mohair top and dust cover—Tungsten valves—Fifty quick-action side curtains—quick-action two-piece rain vision wind shield—demountable rims with one extra—speedometer—double extra tire carrier—Bair bow holders—license plate bracket—pump—jack—and complete set of first-class tools.

CITIZENS' LEAGUE HEAD PLEASED WITH RESULTS

City-Wide Canvass for New Members Wonderfully Successful, He Says.

President Bartow M. Blount, of the Citizens' league, of Atlanta, Saturday declared that the city-wide canvass for new members for the organization is proving wonderfully successful.

"Our membership is already well up in the thousands," he said, "and we are still busy sending out letters. Every registered voter who has not already enrolled will receive a personal invitation, for we believe that the cause should appeal to every patriotic Atlantan.

"We urge everyone in sympathy with the movement send in his reply at once. We are highly pleased with the number of replies coming in.

"We can assure them that there will be opportunity a-plenty for service. With our canvass for membership finished and the grand opera season and the meeting of the imperial council of the Shrine over, we plan a big public rally, where we will assert our force.

"It is well to consider the objects of this organization in connection with such high lights of our civic progress as grand opera week and the meeting here of the Shrine. These things were secured by sane, co-operative effort, and it is obvious that to continue with like successes that spirit must be kept alive."

GOVERNOR IS VISITED BY SENIOR CLASS

The senior class of the Georgia Normal and Industrial school, at Milledgeville, paid their annual visit to Atlanta Saturday and called on Governor Slaton, after which they visited the state museum and various parts of the capitol.

Governor Slaton greeted the young women in the reception hall of the executive office, and after making them a brief talk, shook hands with each one of them.

Diagram Shows How Autos Should Come to Auditorium

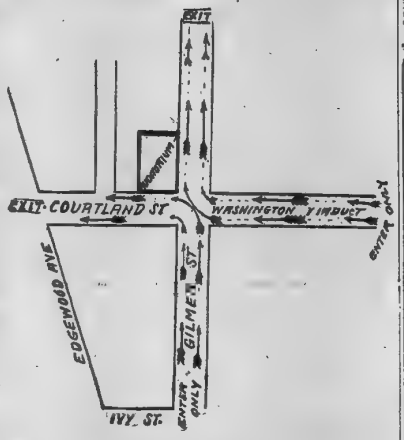

Diagram showing how vehicles should approach the Auditorium for grand opera.

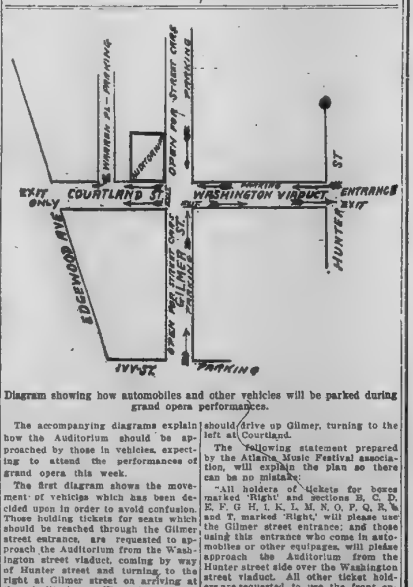

Diagram showing how automobiles and other vehicles will be parked during grand opera performances.

The accompanying diagrams explain how the Auditorium should be approached by those in vehicles, expecting to attend the performances of grand opera this week.

The first diagram shows the movement of vehicles which has been decided upon in order to avoid confusion. Those holding tickets for seats which should be reached through the Gilmer street entrance, are requested to approach the Auditorium from the Washington street viaduct, coming by way of Hunter street and turning to the right at Gilmer street on arriving at the Auditorium. Those in vehicles holding tickets for seats adjacent to the main entrance on Courtland street, should drive up Gilmer, turning to the left at Courtland.

The following statement prepared by the Atlanta Music Festival association, will explain the plan so there can be no mistake:

"All holders of tickets for boxes marked 'Right' and sections B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, K, L, M, N, O, P, Q, R, and T, marked 'Right,' will please use the Gilmer street entrance; and those using this entrance who come in automobiles or other equipages, will please approach the Auditorium from the Hunter street side over the Washington street viaduct. All other ticket holders are requested to use the front entrance on Courtland street; and those using this entrance, who come in equipages of any kind, will please approach the building from Ivy street through Gilmer street.

"In approaching the Auditorium to unload, both sides of Gilmer street and the Washington street viaduct may be used."

"POP" ANSON COMING TO FORSYTH THEATER

"Pop" Anson, known to practically every baseball fan of the United States, will appear at the Forsyth theater next week, Hugh Cardoza, manager of the theater, received a wire from the booking office in New York Tuesday night to the effect that Anson would appear.

"Pop" Anson is one of the few old baseball players living in America and will be tendered a hearty welcome at his first week Monday.

"Pop" will put on his regular monologue act with which he has been winning praise all over the country.

The new R-C-H corporation has issued its data regarding the new R-C-H model, which will start at 1000. The motor is 3 1-4x5-inch bore and stroke, wheel base 119 inches and the body stream line in effect. Two models, a touring car and roadster, are listed.

The Two Hundred club, of which nearly a score of Detroiters are members, through qualification last year, when they drove 200 miles without stopping, held a meeting in Chicago Friday last and decided to work hand in hand with the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce in bringing success to national automobile touring week, starting June 27. The club will hold 200-mile runs in all parts of the country.

Velie 1915 Model 11

$1500--ENTIRELY NEW BOAT TYPE TOURING CAR--$1500

Medium size, Medium Power, but big Power in proportion to weight—and a Big, Roomy, Comfortable Body. The most Economical Car you can buy---Low Tire Cost---Low Fuel Cost---Low Cost for Upkeep

HERE IS WHAT YOU WANT—A car that is up to the minute and a little ahead in design, that has all the power you can ever demand, that gives it to you at low cost, and a car that drives easily, rides easily, and that will stay good as long as you want to run it.

AND HERE IS HOW WE GIVE IT TO YOU—By building a car of high quality and selling it at a price possible only because of the high financial standing of the Velie Company. Design and material come first. We have put everything into the car that you can possibly demand — made a car that will last, for what we want is your continued satisfaction.

YOU CANNOT BUY MORE and a quick examination will show you why. Light, strong aluminum where others cars use cheaper, heavier, cast iron. Carefully heat-treated materials which give sturdiness without bulk, where other cars use heavier, cheaper materials that only add weight and expense.

AND YOU CANNOT GET GREATER PLEASURE than riding in the deep, roomy body of this new car with all the usual jolts and shocks of riding taken up in the long, wide springs. Riding in the "Velie" is entirely different from riding in any other automobile. Take a demonstration.

SO WE ARE MAKING PLANS TO TAKE CARE OF YOU, and it is hard work. Advance orders have practically taken up the entire output of this Model until the middle of Summer, but we placed our order early for a big number. It will be a case of "first come, first served." We are ready for you now if you come early.

AND YOU CAN HAVE A DEMONSTRATION TODAY, for the first 1915 Model 11 has just reached Atlanta. We have already had scores of requests for this particular car, but we are holding it for a demonstrator. We want everyone to get an opportunity to see the real value it has established. Telephone now, or come in early. Ivy 5534.

MANY SUBSCRIPTIONS TO MONUMENT FUND

Old Guard Committee Will Care for Walker and McPherson Memorials.

The committee of members of the "Old Guard," appointed to solicit subscriptions, with a view to cleaning, putting up railing, sodding and decorating the Walker and McPherson monuments, has stirred up a good deal of local interest, and subscriptions are being received generally from northern, as well as southern, residents of Atlanta, without regard as to whether the money is to be spent on the northern or southern heroes' monuments.

La P. Gibson contributed $5 cash, and will furnish team to do the grading around the McPherson monument.

The Lest Lumber company contributed $10 toward the railing.

The Dozier-Gay Paint company has contributed paint, for repainting both monuments.

The Cherokee Marble and Granite company has contributed $15 toward putting up the rail and cleaning both monuments.

Mr. Lawrence, of the Lawrence Floral company, has very generously offered to take charge of the sodding and decorating the grounds.

The "Old Guard" committee, composed of S. B. Turman, chairman; Colonel F. J. Paxon and H. M. Ashe, states that anyone who has not as yet contributed, will confer a favor by sending their check in care of H. M. Ashe, 1329 Healey building, who has charge of the work.

The following is a list of the subscriptions received to date:

Ed L. Wight, $5; S. B. Turman, $5; H. M. Ashe, $5; J. F. Brown, $5; Fred Koch, $5; H. N. Randolph, $5; F. J. Paxon, $5; W. S. Witham, $5; S. B. Brown, $3; J. D. Cloudman, $1; J. B. METHODIST REVIVAL COMES TO END TODAY

Dr. Chas. Goodell Will Preach at Morning and at Afternoon Services.

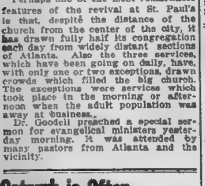
This is the last day of the big revival at St. Paul's Methodist church. Dr. Charles L. Goodell, the famous New York evangelist, and the pastor of the largest Methodist church in the world, will preach at the regular service this morning, and again at a special service for men, this afternoon. Dr. Fred Durham, whose work throughout the closing days of the revival has done much to contribute towards it huge success, will preach the final sermon tonight.

Perhaps one of the most remarkable features of the revival at St. Paul's is that, despite the distance of the church from the center of the city, it has drawn fully half its congregation each day from widely distant sections of Atlanta. Also the three services, which have been going on daily, have, with only one or two exceptions, drawn crowds which filled the big church. The exceptions were services which took place in the morning or afternoon when the adult population was away at business.

Dr. Goodell preached a special sermon for evangelical ministers yesterday morning. It was attended by many pastors from Atlanta and the vicinity.

Catarrh is Often Deep Seated

Local Congestions May Indicate Much Internal Inflammation.



Just because catarrh affects the nose and throat, few people realize how deep-seated it may be until it creeps into the bronchial tubes and settles down into the lungs. The way to treat catarrh is to recognize the fact that it is in the blood.

And there is only one blood purifier that can be safely used. It is S. S. S., the most powerful, the most searching, the most scientific blood remedy known today. As it is not a mineral, but a vegetable remedy.

The medicinal components of S. S. S. are relatively just as essential to well-balanced health as the nutritive properties of the grains, meats, sugars and fats of foods. Any local irritating influence in the blood is rejected by the tissue cells and eliminated by reason of the stimulating influence of S. S. S.

You will soon realize its wonderful influence by the clearing of headaches, the decided clearing of the air passages, a steadily improved nasal condition, and a sense of bodily relief that shows the disease in catarrh often infests the entire system. You will find S. S. S. on sale at all drug stores. It is a remarkable remedy for any and all blood affections, such as eczema, rash, tetter, pustules, boils, and all other diseased conditions of the blood. For special advice on any blood disease, write Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Co., 532 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Carefully avoid any and all substitutes for S. S. S. There is nothing "just as good."

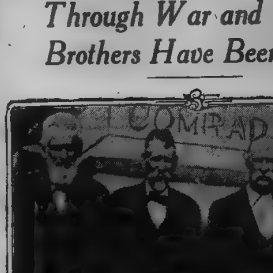
For Over Seventy Years, Through War and Peace, Brothers Have Been Together



Four Georgia brothers who have been together for over seventy years.

McDonough, Ga., April 25.—(Special.) The accompanying picture represents a state of facts probably without a parallel in the whole country.

All the brothers in the family, four in number, known in Henry county as the Nail brothers, enlisted in the same company of the confederate army, went through the war between the states together, came out unhurt and still live in the county of their birth, nearly sixty years after the war's close.

All were born in Henry county, enlisted in Henry county and joined Company H, Twenty-seventh Georgia regiment, Colquitt's brigade, at Camp Stephens, near Griffin.

They were in all the great battles of the war in Virginia and Maryland, and also in the battle of Olustee, in Florida, and in the last battle of the war, at Bentonville, N. C.

Robert J. Nail is the eldest of the brothers and was born September 29, 1838. He was in charge of the baggage of Colquitt's brigade when that command surrendered at Lexington, N. C. He was twice wounded, once at Seven Pines and again at Petersburg. T. J. Nail was born February 19, 1839. He tells of how he often had to travel by day and throw up breastworks by night. In the battle of Seven Pines he fought all day, firing so continuously that he was using his fourth gun at night. He was wounded twice in the right arm at Cold Arbor. He was again wounded and captured near Raleigh, N. C., in April, 1865, was recaped and was placed in the Raleigh hospital. There he was again captured by Sherman's army and was there paroled on May 12.

B. W. Nail was born December 31, 1841. He was not absent a day without leave and had but twenty days' furlough during the war. He was part of the ambulance corps at Petersburg and was one of a squad of eight who had been detailed in capturing an entire federal regiment of 1,700 men.

R. W. J. Nail was born October 14, 1844. He was wounded in the left wrist by a piece of shell, but his hand was disabled for only a few days.

The four brothers are among Henry county's best citizens. They are noted for their strict integrity and high sense of honor. They are very quiet and retiring, do not indulge in the use of profane language and lead a sober and moral life. Having reared excellent families, they are themselves still strong and active.

Monday Is the Anniversary Of Death of Mary Phagan

A special car will be chartered to carry the friends to Marietta Monday afternoon to lay flowers upon her grave and be present at a special memorial service conducted by an Atlanta minister. The car will carry about eighty persons, and there will be no charge. The cost will be covered by subscriptions.

Subscriptions already made are as follows: V. O. Rankin, $2; D. E. Shumaker, $1; G. C. Tucker, $1, and W. H. Higgins, $1. A complete list of the names of those subscribing will be published in Monday's Constitution.

If the subscriptions are more than sufficient to pay for the car, the remaining funds will be expended on flowers, or if the surplus amount is large enough, two cars will be chartered. But this trip will be free to all. All who are interested are invited and those who cannot get a seat in the special car are invited to pay their way on regular cars and be present at the services at the grave.

The special car will leave from the Walton street car barn Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock and will return at 5 o'clock. All who wish to go are requested to meet at that place.

REGIONAL BANK SYSTEM DESCRIBED BY M'CORD

Atlanta Banker Delivers Address Before Florida Bankers' Association Convention.

Lakeland, Fla., April 25.—(Special.) Joseph A. McCord, vice president of the Third National Bank of Atlanta, was one of the chief speakers at today's sessions of the annual meeting of the Florida Bankers' association. Mr. McCord spoke on "The Advantages to the State Banks and Trust Companies Becoming Members of Federal Reserve System," and his address was received with closest attention by his hearers.

In concluding his address Mr. McCord said, after explaining the scope of the new regional banks:

"Every bank's success is measured by its deposits, and deposits come by confidence, and every agency which stimulates confidence strengthens the bank, and therefore, the bank examinations which will be made under the new law, I am led to believe, will impose stricter standards than have heretofore prevailed. Bank failures will be reduced and the public will soon appreciate that they have greater security and safety with the members banks than with the non-member banks which will be subjected to less rigid scrutiny and discipline; hence, there is no need of a bank guaranty law.

Will Increase Confidence.

"The very knowledge the public will have that the banks can take refuge, when needful or necessary, under the new law, will instill a greater confidence in the general banking fabric, and not be rent apart as in the past, but it will when conditions are adverse that its provisions and facilities will be more appreciated.

"It is for this reason that I am most heartily in favor of a complete unification of our banking system, and I believe that the new law furnishes the framework upon which it can be built.

"It looks reasonable to suppose that during the crop-moving season currency will be easier and faster handled than heretofore, lessening cost of transportation, and facilities for handling and financing cotton will be almost unlimited, and who will say that this is not an immense benefit and a distinct step forward.

"The question has been asked if the new currency law reduces interest rates and eliminates exchange charges, will not the effect be to cut down earnings where it would be unprofitable and necessitate liquidation or merging? The question cannot be answered until we know more about the ruling of the federal reserve board.

The Benefits of the System.

"The benefits of the new system will ultimately permeate and filter through until it reaches the producer and if the middleman is not willing to in a measure pass the benefits on to his neighbor and customer, and be a channel of blessing, then someone else will, for it was for this purpose that the new law was created.

"There seems to be some confusion as to the regional banks and that they belong to the government. Such is far from facts. The regional bank will be owned by the banks who will subscribe to its capital stock and get a dividend on same. The banks will elect some of the directors, but the bank will be controlled by the provision of the new law, under government supervision. It is a bank organized by banks and for banks only.

"Time forbids discussing ownership, choosing directors, substitution of federal reserve notes for state bank notes, method of retiring bonds, paying interest on reserve deposits and many other interesting topics. Suffice it to say that the reflex influence of this beneficent new currency law will be felt by every bank and individual in our country, and state bankers should co-operate all they can and become members if found practical and show as united, patriotic and unselfish spirit as have our national banks."

FIRST PAYMENT ASKED FOR NEW UNIVERSITY

Deeds Have Now Been Perfected and Survey of Property Is Made.

The first call for payment of subscriptions made to Oglethorpe university is now in the mails. They have all been ready for some time, waiting on the final perfecting of the deed to the site at Silver Lake. It was necessary for this deed to be officially approved by three different corporations and some time also was consumed in the securing of an accurate survey of the property.

All this has been done to the satisfaction of those concerned, and as a consequence the Oglethorpe office in the Empire Life building is busy with the call for the first payment on all pledges to the institution. This includes not only the Atlanta subscriptions, but all pledges from all over the nation.

In the meantime the work of securing more funds for Oglethorpe is going steadily forward and new pledges are being added at something over $10,000 per month.

RALPH COCHRAN TALKS OF RACE IN COLUMBUS

Columbus, Ga., April 25.—(Special.) Ralph O. Cochran, of Atlanta, who is in the United States senate race to succeed Senator Hoke Smith, spent today in Columbus mixing about and shaking hands. Mr. Cochran was the center of considerable interest and talked freely of his campaign and his prospects for winning his race.

"From assurances I have received to date from various parts of the state," he said, "I am highly gratified over my prospects. I have probed the sentiment of Fulton county pretty thoroughly and believe that my chances now of carrying that county are excellent. This, of course, is a matter of great reassurance to any candidate. That Campbell county, where I was born and reared, will go solid for me, I am sure. Other reports are very encouraging and give me a great deal of confidence, but, to be sure, there's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip."

PUBLIC ACCOUNTANTS EXAMINED ON MAY 20

Applications Must Be Filed With Georgia Board of Examiners by May 10.

Reports indicate that there will be an unusual number of applicants for license this year as certified public accountants when the semi-annual examination is held on May 20 and 21.

Since Georgia enacted a law requiring that all public accountants should stand an examination showing their qualifications, before entering on their business career, the number of accountants in the state has been held down somewhat, but the quality is higher. In this connection it is an interesting fact that there are now in Georgia only about thirty-three holders of certified public accountants' certificates from the state.

The Georgia examinations are conducted by a board of three examiners consisting, by requirement, of two certified public accountants and one attorney. The members of the state board appointed by the governor are Joel Hunter, of Atlanta, chairman; R. W. Jemison, of Macon, secretary, and Hudson Moore, of Atlanta, attorney-at-law.

All applications for examination must be filed with the board by May 10, and should be sent to the office of the board, 1004 Empire building.

GRAND JURY MUST CONSIDER ALL CASES BROUGHT BEFORE IT

Savannah, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—A grand jury must consider cases brought to its attention. Judge W. G. Charlton made this plain today in hearing the mandamus petition filed by Major Georges H. Richter, attorney for the anti-saloon movement to compel the grand jury to investigate cases of violating the prohibition law presented by representatives of the league.

Judge Charlton said he could not interfere with the discretionary powers of the jury, but that he could say that it is its duty to consider cases that have been properly presented.

The court said he would prepare a formal opinion and present it later. Solicitor General W. G. Hartridge said the grand jury was not inclined to be arbitrary and would consider the cases. Major Richter said that was all he wanted.

LOVING ORGANIST, HE TOOK HIS LIFE ON CHURCH ALTAR

Providence, R. I., April 25.—Edwin W. Stilwell, 15 years of age, killed himself last night on the altar at the Calvary Baptist church. According to a note left by the boy, he was in love with Miriam Frances Gleason, aged 17, who shot and killed herself earlier in the week. The girl's father had frowned on young Stilwell's attentions to Miriam.

Stilwell entered the church while the girls' choir was practicing, and a few minutes later went up the rear stairs to the pulpit. He lighted the desk lamp and laid the letter to his father beneath it and a second later the choir members heard two shots. The choirmaster found the boy dead.

VIRGINIA AND MORGAN IN CLASH OVER RELICS

Morgan Makes Propositions About Martha Washington Will.

Washington, April 25.—Correspondence between Governor Stuart, of Virginia, and J. P. Morgan concerning the will of Martha Washington, which is in Mr. Morgan's possession, was read to the Daughters of the American Revolution today by Mrs. William Cummings Storey.

The letters show that the matter was opened by Governor Stuart through W. L. McCorkle, president of the New York Southern society in March last. In reply, Mr. Morgan said: "My desire was that the document should be placed where it could be best preserved and of most use to the people of the United States. Not considering the courthouse building of Fairfax county, Virginia, to which Governor Stuart desired the document returned, and where the will of George Washington now is, as fireproof or accessible to any large number of people, Mr. Morgan made two propositions.

One was that the state of Virginia or Fairfax county should place the original will of George Washington on exhibition at Mount Vernon for an indefinite period and that if this were done he would present the will of Martha Washington to the Mount Vernon association for permanent exhibition there. The other was that should the Virginia authorities not be willing to do this the will of George Washington should be presented to the library of Congress and that he would in turn present the will of Martha Washington to the nation for the same disposition.

Neither of these proposals met with the approval of Governor Stuart, who stated that people of Virginia held that Martha Washington's will was a part of the legitimate records of Fairfax county. Governor Stuart then renewed his request that some agreement could be arrived at and once upon this matter rests, so far as disclosed by correspondence given out by Mrs. Storey.

I. SPRINGER GOES NORTH TO PURCHASE NEW GOODS

Mr. Springer intends to bring back all the latest styles and creations from the eastern style centers.

E. G. Mabie Here to Put The Stamp of Broadway On Peachtree's Clothes

"He's got Broadway stamped all over him."

"This summing up of a man's appearance and characteristics," says E. G. Mabie, of New York city, "at once conjures up in one's mind the picture of the modern, wide-awake, well-dressed man. Nine times out of ten it is the man's clothes that give one the impression of the 'Broadway stamp.' That doesn't mean that a man is made all of clothes, either. Show me a man who has judgment about how to dress and I'll show a man who has judgment in business and affairs of the world."

Mr. Mabie is in Atlanta to open here a branch of Mabie & Co., Fifth avenue tailors, of New York.

This is an old established firm, but Atlanta is a new field for it. Mr. Mabie is greatly pleased with the progressive spirit of Atlanta. He declares that he is here to "put the stamp of Broadway on Peachtree's clothes."

The Atlanta branch of Mabie & Co. will be in the shop of Louis Asher, 89 Peachtree street.

FLAMES BADLY DAMAGE BIG PLANT AT ALBANY

Albany, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—The plant of the Planters' Oil company, just beyond the corporate limits in East Albany, was badly damaged by fire this afternoon. At 7 o'clock the flames were entirely under control, but the water supply had given out. However, water was relayed from a city main a mile north of the plant and the big seed houses and fertilizer house saved.

The fire gutted the main building, containing $60,000 worth of machinery. The seed presses were probably only slightly damaged, but the other machinery is a complete loss and the total loss will probably reach $56,000.

The city firemen went to the assistance of the mill crew, a reserve steamer being pressed into service. The loss is fully covered by insurance.

The Planters' Oil company were the owners of a cotton mill destroyed at East Albany, Ala., several months ago with a loss of $140,000.

NORTH ATLANTA SCHOOL HOUSE WITH $20,000 PLAYGROUND.

It's going to be built. A new brick, eight-grade, up-to-date school house is going to be added to the many other home conveniences in Peachtree Heights Park.

Recognizing that North Atlanta has grown to where a modern public school is essential, the Peachtree Heights Park Co. has decided to give the county free of cost, two acres of its property for school purposes, worth at regular prices $15,000 to $20,000.

Then, again—

BATTLE AVENUE WILL BE MADE A 100-FOOT PARKED DRIVEWAY.

Extending through from Peachtree Road at The Lodge, to the Howell Mill road.

Upon the 25-foot parked strip in the center, the Federal Government will place markers, indicating the positions of the troops who fought in the famous Peachtree battle.

It will be the equal of, if not superior to, any driveway in the south.

These are just a few of the leading North Atlanta improvements.

Atlantans who don't know what is going on here, should wake up and find out.

Let us show you Peachtree Heights Park, or see your own agent.

A SNOW BALL HAS AS MUCH SHOW—

IN A FIREY FURNACE as a poor man has who tries to buy a home on the north side. I mean every word I say. A man who hasn't over $100 or $200 in CASH, whose salary is from $100 to $150 per month, is acting the—well, he is using BAD JUDGMENT, to say the least of it, if he is trying to buy a $3,500, $4,000 or $5,000 home. But you need not take my advice unless you want to; it makes no difference with me. Out of 100 homes I have sold at Lakewood Heights for the last few years there were only TWO who fell down with their payments. Sold one this week. I have two more bungalows under way on large lots, just off the car line, and they are not BARNS, but BUNGALOWS; go out and take a look at them; get off car at Adair avenue; it will cost you nothing. It might be just what you have been looking for. I don't have to beg anybody to buy my bungalows; there is no use, they sell too fast for that. If you are in earnest and are determined to buy a home that you CAN PAY for, I will be glad to hear from you. Prices $1,100 and $1,200 (the same kind you paid $4,000 for on the north side). Sixteen dollars per month up. Enough said—P. B. Hopkins, 516 Empire Bldg. Ivy 5111.

Harley-Davidson Motor Climbs Stone Mountain

Probably the greatest stunt in the way of hill-climbing ever pulled off in Georgia was accomplished by a Harley-Davidson motorcycle on last Thursday, when it went from the foot to the top of Stone Mountain. It is claimed that this is the first time that any vehicle of any kind, gasoline or otherwise, has ever accomplished this feat.

On Thursday morning, to settle an argument that has been passed around among a number of Atlanta motorcyclists that there was not a motorcycle made nor could any rider ride to the top of Stone Mountain nor was there any machine that could be brought down from the top under its own power.

When they reached the foot of the mountain, the Harley-Davidson started to ascend and went along safely until it reached that part close to the top called the slide, which for a distance of about 180 yards has an angle of about 50 per cent grade and this surface is a smooth, polished granite block. Before reaching this spot there is a level space of possibly 20 feet. The rider dismounted and removed his shoes so that in the event of a slip or a fall he would be able to get a better hold on this smooth surface, in his stocking feet. The rider again mounted his machine and without any trouble whatever continued on up the steep grade to the top of the mountain, where photographs were made. The return trip was turned over to another rider, who rode the same machine down.

This performance was witnessed by quite a large crowd of Stone Mountain citizens and all of them stated that this was the first time any machine of any kind had ever gone to the top and returned under its own power.

Several years ago, this same performance was tried by a well-known make of automobile, and while this automobile was made to ascend to the top of the mountain, it had to be let down from the top to the bottom by the aid of a derrick.

When the riders and their trusty Harley-Davidson returned to Atlanta and let it be known that they had successfully ascended and descended to the top of Stone Mountain they were congratulated on all sides by many riders who had stated that it would be impossible for any machine to climb the mountain. Their remarkable feat of the Harley-Davidson attracted so much attention that the riders have arranged to repeat their performance in a few days for the benefit of a moving picture company who will make films of the ascent and descent and they will be shown in one of the leading moving picture houses.

NINETY CARS PER DAY AVERAGED BY OVERLAND

Railroads Kept Busy Furnishing Raw Material and Carrying Out Autos.

Though the figures in themselves are impressive, few people who are unfamiliar with the magnitude of the industry can appreciate what an annual production of 50,000 automobiles really means. The total makes a fine mouth-filling set of figures to handle, but it is not until a comparison is made with something with which he is familiar that the average layman realizes the vast volume of effort such a business entails. In this respect the monthly car movement report, made by the traffic department of the Willys-Overland company, of Toledo, makers of the Overland automobile, is an enlightening document.

Taking the figures for March, in which there were twenty-six working days, the report shows that a total of 2,254 railroad cars, incoming and outgoing, were handled at the Overland plant. This is an average of more than ninety cars per day, or more than one loaded car every seven minutes of a ten-hour day. Of the total number of cars moved, 745 were inbound, bringing raw materials and parts, and 1,810 were outbound, carrying finished Overland cars for every part of the civilized world. As each outbound car has a capacity of at least three complete automobiles and some are loaded with as many as six, the figures show an output of well over 5,000 Overlands in twenty-six days.

Railroad officials declare that a city of 10,000 to 20,000 inhabitants which would use twenty carloads of freight per day would be a marvel of industrial and business thrift, and that would mean only 520 cars for the whole city in a twenty-day month. The Overland incoming freight for March shows a total of more than 43 per cent greater business. If this freight could be hauled in a single train it would stretch nearly seven and one-half miles across country, and seventeen of the largest freight engines made would be required to handle the cars. The combined incoming and outgoing business would make a train more than twenty-two miles and a capacity load for fifty-three of the biggest "mogul" locomotives.

The description of the loads carried by the incoming cars also furnishes an interesting view of the motor car industry. Among the articles listed on the report are coal, fuel, oil, cylinder oil, gasoline, sand, fire brick, lumber, machinery, hair, wheels, springs, electric starting motors, batteries, magnetos, paint, white cotton, bow sockets, rims and rings, tires, tubing, several varieties of steel and other metals, leather, rubber matting, wadding and linoleum. And when one stops to consider that these materials never come in less than carload lots and sometimes, as in the case of forge steel, in shipments that require a whole train, the automobile business takes on very respectable proportions.

George W. Wadsworth, engineer manager of Gray & Davis, has started on an extensive European trip.

Charles Booth, southwestern branch manager for the Maxwell Motor company, was in Detroit recently and reported the sale throughout his territory enormous. Maxwell dealers all over the country are sending in the same reports, and the output of the Maxwell has been doubled over that of last month.

When Edwin Pullen, winner of the grand prize race at Santa Monica, returned to Trenton, N. J., where the Mercer car is made, he was given a reception worthy of medieval times and was placed at the head of a huge procession which passed through Trenton streets for a distance of approximately six miles. There were 500 automobiles, many of them decorated, in the line.

It will be July, 1914, before Ford electric cars are placed upon the market, and the rumor that demonstration cars have been supplied to dealers is denied. It is reported that the plant in which Ford electrics will be manufactured will be in the east, probably on Long Island, this being nearer the Edison plant at Orange, at which place the batteries will be made.

PREMIER CONVENTION IS GREAT SUCCESS

Premier Dealers of South and Thousands of Auto Owners Pleased With New Car.

The two-day session of the southern Premier dealers' convention came to a close Saturday night with a banquet at the Hotel Ansley.

Joe Levy, southern district manager of the Premier company, was host and toastmaster for the evening.

Talks were made by H. O. Smith, president of the company; Wylie West, D. T. Bussey and Mr. Levi. Mr. Smith spoke at length on the development of the motor car, its relation to the commercial and social life of the country and the increase in value of all suburban property.

"It has been made possible through good roads and the motor car," said Mr. Smith, "to bring the city to the farmer's front door. It has also caused many city folks to move their homes to the country, thus causing great increase in real estate values in every city of this country."

The meeting proved a very enthusiastic one, and every dealer was very much impressed with the new Weidely-Premier, and left many orders with Mr. Levi for both Weidely and Premier "specials."

Mr. Bussey, Atlanta dealer for the Premier, said that more than a thousand people visited the show rooms during the convention.

Those present at the banquet from out of the city were:

T. C. Morris, Birmingham, Ala.; J. J. McDonough, Savannah, Ga.; Fred Wallace, Chattanooga, Tenn.; A. B. Green, Meridian, Miss.; H. H. Hart, Knoxville, Tenn.; R. C. Willforce, Wilson, N. C.; H. O. Smith, president of the Premier Motor company; Walter Weidely and O. M. Mothershead, all of Indianapolis.

Percy Haswell will have her usual summer stock company in Toronto this season.

NEW YORK TWIRLERS WIN THE MOST GAMES

By Bennet J. Lanigan.

Pitchers employed by New York clubs hold the major league records (counting from 1901 on) for winning the greatest number of games in a season. Jack Chesbro led the Yankees to 41 victories in 1904, the year he sprang the spitball on the objecting opposition, and that mark never has been beaten. Christy Mathewson piloted the Giants to 37 wins four years later, and then hung up a National league record that still stands.

Chesbro's record of 41 wins was equalled by Ed Walsh, of the White Sox, in 1908, the big spitball expert coming through with 40 triumphs the third best record in the American league is held by Walter Johnson, of Washington, who, while winning 3 Chalmers [illegible] year, captured 36 contests. Joe Wood, of the Red Sox, the year previous, annexed 34. American leaguers who have won 30 games in a season are Johnson and Cy Young, while Jack Coombs and Cy succeeded in winning 31 games in a campaign.

In the National league, in the last thirteen years, the men who have won 30 or more games in one season are Mathewson, who has turned the trick four times, and Joe McGinnity, who has turned it twice. Christy came out on top in 37 battles in 1908, won 33 in 1904, landed 31 in 1905 and was victorious in 30 in 1903.

Just 30 men have succeeded in winning 25 or more games in a year since the American league expanded in 1901. Of these heroes not one was a Cardinal, a Brown, a Redleg or a Brewer. Milwaukee having been in the fast company in 1901.

Why Studebaker FOUR Sales Are Enormous:

Electrically Lighted

Electrically Started

Bluntly—because no car now on the market reveals equal value.

Because, for instance, no other car in the world at this price has a full floating rear axle equipped even to the hubs with Timken bearings.

Because this axle could not be made better, no matter how much we were willing to spend, or you were willing to pay.

The same thing is true of Studebaker-Wagner starting and lighting—the cars of highest cost may show its equal—but they cannot show its superior.

The same thing is true of the proportion of parts actually manufactured in the parent plant—the costliest cars may make as good a showing, but none of them can show more.

The same thing is true of the accuracy of the processes which enter into the manufacturing—they may be equalled in the costliest cars, but they are not surpassed.

We repeat, with added emphasis—the sales of this $1050 FOUR are enormous because no car now on the market reveals equal value.

AUSTRIA KEEPS GRIP ON ALL THE YOUNG MEN

Not Allowed to Emigrate Because They Are Wanted for the Army.

Vienna, April 25.—By a simple ministerial decree, without the passage of any new law, or even reference to parliament, the Austrian cabinet has stopped the emigration of youths and men under the ages of 24. They will not be permitted to cross the frontier unless they can produce a passport, and the local authorities have received strict instructions to issue such papers only to applicants who can prove that they have performed their military service, including the full term in the reserve, and have been passed into the "landsturm," the last line of reserves for home defense. This really means twelve years of service for the average man.

The decree promises to be even more sweeping in its effects than would at first sight appear. It applies not only to bona fide emigrants leaving their native land for the United States or Canada, possibly intending to remain away for many years, but it will also prevent many thousands of farm laborers from going to Germany for field work and harvest as has been the custom every summer. And further, since the decree makes no mention of any exceptions it is supposed that waiters, tailors, mechanics and other workers who want to go abroad to complete their trade education will no longer be able to do so.

For at the age of 24 a man has usually contracted family and business ties which effectually prevent him from leaving his native land.

The new regulation apparently has been made because the military authorities recently discovered, when the recruiting levies were called up, that more and more of the young men entered on the rolls had gone to foreign parts. It was this which first led to the investigation of the steamship companies' emigration activities.

Whilst this sudden and drastic restriction of emigration will effect to some extent the whole monarchy, certain provinces will feel it more acutely than others, notably Galicia, one of the most densely populated lands in Europe, with its large peasant population eking out the barest subsistence on a barren soil. The country being entirely too poor to support this population, thousands of peasants go to work on the best farms of Saxony and the corn lands in Germany every year and thousands of others go still further afield to America and Canada. But every fall the laborers return to their homes from Germany and in the course of a few years many also come back from America to their native land. All bring money with which they buy stock, and whenever possible, land. In fact, there are now districts in Galicia where the soil is gradually passing out of the hands of the great landed proprietors into the possession of peasants.

There are other parts of Austria where home conditions are so unfavorable that the people are forced to seek a livelihood elsewhere. In northern Moravia and Silesia, in the Bohemian forest and in the Erz mountains there are districts where the utmost poverty prevails and thousands of young men leave their homes every year to escape what is practically a state of starvation.

The ministerial decree threatens to stop this most necessary outlet for labor and thereby to entail an enormous amount of unnecessary suffering and hardship. Coming just at this time it is especially severe when the whole monarchy is groaning under the heavy depression in trade and industry consequent on the recent war crisis.

The social democratic party is exceedingly indignant at what it terms the arbitrary and illegal action of the cabinet and accuses the government of acting in the interest of the agrarians who complain that they are no longer able to get sufficient labor for their farms. The social democrats declare that such procedure is only possible in Austria, whose true constitution is anarchy.

It is stated on the authority of the immigration commissioner at Winnipeg that the 118,858 immigrants who have crossed from the United States to Canada during the last three years have brought with them, in cash and effects, over $350,000,000. In November, 1912, the immigration into Canada from the United States Kingdom totaled 6,216, while in the corresponding month of 1913 it amounted to only 3,592, and in October, 1912, the number was 10,166, while in the same month of 1913 it dropped to 7,464. The immigration from the United States for November, 1912, was 7,895, while in November, 1913, it was only 5,422.

SHRINERS' OPENING PLANS ANNOUNCED

Gov. Slaton, Mayor Woodward and John Temple Graves Will Deliver Addresses of Welcome.

Announcement is made today of the program for the opening exercises of the Shriners' imperial council in Atlanta two weeks from Tuesday, the beginning of the official body, whose meeting furnishes the excuse for tens of thousands of other Shriners and non-Shriners to visit Atlanta.

On this program appears the name of Noble John M. Slaton, member of Yaarab Temple, governor, who will welcome the imperial council in behalf of the state of Georgia.

Other addresses of welcome will be spoken by Mayor James G. Woodward and Noble John Temple Graves. The response will be made by the imperial potentate, W. W. Irwin, of Wheeling, W. Va.

At the conclusion of the public program, announced here, the imperial council will devote itself to the real business of its annual session. While that session is in progress, Atlanta and all the surrounding country of Georgia will be busy watching the unofficial Shriners have a good time.

All Temples Represented.

Every one of the 133 temples of North American Shrinedom will be represented by one or more delegates in the imperial council. This body will number some five hundred members.

Following is the program of the program of the opening exercises for the fortieth session, in Atlanta, of the nobles of the Mystic Shrine:

Invocation—Noble David Marx, rabbi of the Congregation of the Temple, Atlanta.

Selection by the quartet of Euhrah Temple, Minneapolis, Minn.

Welcome on Behalf of the State of Georgia—Noble John M. Slaton, governor.

Selection—Choir of Hoolah Temple, St. Louis.

Welcome on Behalf of the City of Atlanta—James G. Woodward, mayor.

Selection—Orchestra of Moolah Temple, St. Louis.

Welcome on Behalf of the Nobility of Georgia—John Temple Graves.

Selection—Chanters of Medinah Temple, Chicago.

Response to All Welcomes—Noble William W. Irwin, Wheeling, W. Va., imperial potentate of North America, on behalf of the imperial council.

Selection—Glee club of Aladdin Temple, Columbus, Ohio.

Plans Well Advanced.

Atlanta is well advanced now in her plans for receiving the Shriners. The decorations designed for hotels and other downtown buildings have been ordered, and work on them will start this week. Crescents have appeared and are beginning to bloom on many lawns of the city. The Ansley hotel headquarters of the imperial potentate, will be almost hid behind flags and lights. One of its illuminated pieces will be the biggest Shrine emblem in the city. The crescent and scimitar have been blazing for some nights past over the electric sign on the Hotel Winecoff.

Carroll McGaughey, the electrician representing Yaarab Temple, in charge of the street illumination, is progressing rapidly with his plans. Wires have been stretched between the White Way posts and overhead above the principal street corners for the incandescent lights that are to be strung that week. Lines have been swung over the middle of Five Points, over the plaza in front of the Grand theater and at other points for some of the heavier pieces of illumination.

Chairman A. S. Adams, of the committee in charge of gathering automobiles for use by the visiting Shriners, reports a generous response to his recent call for the loan of as many cars as Atlanta owners can spare. A surprising answer came from Marietta, whence Len C. Baldwin telegraphed that the Shriners can have practically all of the 196 automobiles owned in that city. Mr. Baldwin is a noble of Yaarab Temple, and there are about thirty other Shriners in Marietta.

"We are with you to the finish," he wired to Mr. Adams, "and the ladies of Marietta want to serve your fried chicken dinner to Mecca Temple at the foot of Kennesaw mountain."

Should Decorate All Autos.

It has been suggested that all automobiles be decorated with the Shrine colors and that the decorations be left on them during Shrine week.

Active preparations among the moving picture men for the films they expect to make of the parades and patrol stunts has reached the point where the committee must arbitrate among them. Each asks exceptional privileges, hoping to get better films than the others. Locations will be assigned to them this week.

Business headquarters of the local committee in charge of the gathering will be established in the Empire Life building—the Flatiron building—at Peachtree and Broad. The headquarters will be on the ground floor in the Poplar street side. These headquarters have been tendered for the free use of the Shriners by W. W. Reid, president of the Empire Life insurance company. Information will be given out there, and souvenirs and programs will be distributed. It is there, too, that all visiting Shriners will register.

Other information bureaus will be maintained night and day in all hotels and both railway stations.

If you have weak lungs and your system is run down, you are more susceptible to serious lung trouble. By the use of Eckman's Alterative many have been restored to health. Read of this case:

221 S. Atlantic Ave., Haddonfield, N. J.

"Gentlemen: In the fall of 1905 I contracted a very severe cold which settled on my lungs. At last I began to raise sputum, and my physician then told me I must go to California immediately. At this time I was advised to take Eckman's Alterative. I stayed at home and commenced taking it the last week of October. I began to improve and the first week in January, 1906, I resumed my regular occupation, having gained 25 pounds, fully restored to health. It is now seven years since my recovery has been effected, and I cannot praise Eckman's Alterative too highly." (Abbreviated)

(Signed) W. M. TATEM.

Eckman's Alterative is most efficacious in bronchial catarrh and severe throat and lung affections and upbuilding the system. Contains no harmful or habit-forming drugs. Accept no substitutes. Sold by all Jacobs' drug stores. Write Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet of recoveries.

SPALDING GRAYS READY TO ANSWER WAR CALL

Griffin, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—Griffin military men, both officers and members of the Spalding Grays, are ready to answer a call for the state military forces in the Mexican war service. They are, moreover, daily expecting a call to mobilize with the national guard of Georgia, and are already prepared to engage in the maneuvers.

Fixing the Blame.

(From The Toledo Blade.)

Friends of Secretary Bryan have volunteered the information to the news correspondents at Washington that President Wilson, and not his right-hand man, originated the administration's foreign policy.

They recite the fact that "five days" after the administration came into power President Wilson issued the declaration that only those governments in Latin-America would be recognized which were based on the will of the people." He had more to do with our attitude in connection with the controversies with Japan than Secretary Bryan—so insist the secretary's loyal friends. Only a few of the ambassadors and ministers were selected or recommended by Mr. Bryan. The president did the choosing and picking and naming. Furthermore, it was the chief executive and not the secretary of state who devised the policy of "watchful waiting" in the case of our interesting-ly murderous neighbors over the Mexican border.

But why have the friends of Bryan, like patriotic swords from their scabbards, leaped to his defense?

Can it be the friends are ashamed of the administration of foreign policy and are bringing in the hasin and the soap that the secretary may wash his hands of all responsibility?

Building Future Atlanta at Oglethorpe Park

Here is a scene in Oglethorpe Park, which Edwin P. Ansley is now developing, showing a gang of workmen grading one of the beautiful winding drives of this country residence district. Oglethorpe Park, a part of future Atlanta, is now scarcely more than several hundred acres of woodland lying between the Capital City Country club and the site of Oglethorpe university, but the roar of dynamite under stump and the shout of teamster to straining team all day long presages a development of the character that has made Atlanta believe in Ed Ansley.

Two New Apartment Buildings

The remaining apartment will contain five rooms and one bath. The building will cost in the neighborhood of $50,000. The interior finish of it will be the same as that of the interior of the Piedmont hotel. Emil Seiz is the architect. The bottom picture is of the apartment house being built by John D. Babbage, Jr., on Lafayette drive, in Ansley park. This building is of brick veneer construction and will also cost in the neighborhood of $50,000. A. N. Canton is the architect and R. M. Walker is the contractor.

BASEBALL GAME.

Kirkwood Wins Opener.

The Kirkwood team met and defeated the fast Capitol View team in a close and exciting game to the tune of 7 to 6. The game abounded with hits and errors and it was anybody's game until the last inning. It was retired in the ninth inning. The features of the game for Kirkwood, was the hitting of Plowden and Southard and a fast double executed by Decker to first which cut down a hot rally in the ninth inning with one man out.

The features for Capitol View was the heavy hitting of Barrett, Shockley and the pitching of Shockley, who struck out thirteen of the Kirkwood sluggers. Barrett was at bat four times, getting a single, double and two three-ply smashes. Both teams featured on the bases and played good ball, considering it the opening game.

Capitol View	100 020 103—6	13	3

Agoga Wins Opener.

The Agoga champs started off in their old time form by defeating the Central Presbyterian nine yesterday by the score of 10 to 4. Neither side scored until the fifth when the Agogas got next to Priddell and pounded out five runs. The feature of the game was the batting of Roberts of the Agoga team, he twice put the ball over right field fence and also annexed a two-bagger to center field. Both teams played well for the opener, but after the fifth the winner was never in doubt. Simmons and Priddell pitched nice ball, with Simmons having the best of the argument.

Automobile manufacturers are entering cars for the Glidden tour, to be a non-stop engine, run-and-day tour this year, and the entries are expected to be more numerous from the makers just as soon as the Chicago automobile club can assure the makers of a stock car class. It will be recalled that Detroit manufacturers, withheld entry last year owing to the non-stock nature of the event. The A. A. A. has not yet made its report on the stock car matter and this is being thrashed out. Many long night and day sessions have been held by American Automobile association officials in New York.

Old-Time Fan Comments On the Federals' Success

By Charles A. Lesser.

It begins to look as though the troubles of "Organized Ball" had not wholly passed away on the vanguard breezes of the vernal equinox.

No reference is intended, of course, to the clashings of the legal exponents of the bludgeon at Grand Rapids, over one Mr. B. Killifer, a very ordinary ball player and as rabid and contemptible a contract jumper as ever meandered up and down the pike.

But to the far more tragic impact now more clearly foreshadowed than ever before between the Federals and the paid hirelings of "O. B." Save the mark!

The Killifer case was a grand moral triumph for the Federal league, and everybody knows it. It is true, to be sure, that Killifer was allowed to remain with the Philadelphias.

But that is a matter of very small importance. The Federals do not want him and, what's more, in the main contention, viz. that the "reserve clause" is illegal, they whiffed "O. B." into a state of coma, like water gurgling through a trap in the bottom of a cistern. That's the important point, and all the sophistry and tiresome platitudes ever written can have no effect in changing it.

As a matter of fact, the Federal league has the "O. B." outfit roped to the fence. Mr. Ban Johnson, the Poo Bah of the American league, and Mr. John K. Tener, the noble Crusader of the Nationals, have failed utterly in their campaign of vituperation and biting satire waged with relentless malignity against the so-called "outlaws."

They were heralded with the tooting of horns and the beating of drums, as a pair of warriors not equaled since Orpheus harped his way into the Plutonian shades.

Yes, indeed! What's more, they assured the baseball populace that the Federals consisted of a bunch of wolves and two-handed cracters that ought to be in jail. But are they? Not at all!

Federals Look Good.

The Federals have organized a first-class major league, with a splendid circuit and have put eight teams on the field composed of skilled ball players. They have made good with every promise, and also almost every prediction.

And judging from press reports, they are outdrawing both the American and National leagues, and playing just as good ball. In Baltimore they are liable to starve to death, only 37,000 persons attending the opening game there.

They have won the sympathy and support of the loyal and fair-minded fanatics of this great country, which must settle the issue, because there is no appeal from their verdict. They have done all this in an honorable and dignified manner and in a very short time.

It is at once the most significant and far-reaching victory ever before achieved in the history of the game.

Tener's Bantling.

Governor Tener recently said that the public would soon tire of the Federals. That shows how much he knows about the pop-eyed fanatics. They want what they want when they want it, and if the Federals can furnish it what can the "governor" do about it? The "governor" ought to know that even the Arctic frost and icy stare can't buffalo the educated and intelligent fans into overlooking the fact that "O. B." is up against the real thing now.

Governor Tener and Mr. B. Johnson, aided and abetted by Mr. G. Herrmann, of the National Commish, and also boss of the Cincinnati Reds, are busily engaged in raging at the Federals with guns at bay, injunctions and, so on and so forth, ad nauseum. All of which is enough to make the angels weep. What Mr. G. Herrmann needs is a baseball team and then a manager.

It would seem to a man up a tree that if the president is given both propositions. Mr. C. Herzog, with his McGraw "tactics," can't win for losing. But if the explosion of stiff words can do any good, he is destined to "rule" the Reds out of the league. Great is the efficacy of the commodity known as bunkarine!

Some of Them.

The courts so far have not been a modern Babylon for the Feds or "O. B." Not by a long shot, or a shot long, full of shot. And when the grand old swatsman of the Legal league finish jolting the brickbats to all corners of the ballyard, all hands will prefer to take a long chance in making a stand with the Colonel at Armageddon and a law degree will look a lot bigger than a baseball diploma. That's the dope. Nothing to it at all.

Some Ball.

Some of the baseball experts—so-called—can't figure the Pittsburgers as a factor in the National league race, because, forsooth, the German artillery—Honus Wagner—must blow up soon or late.

Well, they need not let that disturb them. Honus has been called to "crank" for about ten years, but steadily refuses to do so. Maybe he will decide to put it off until very "late." What? Sure!

Speculating on baseball is an uncertain proposition, for sure.

John J. Evers, the prime crab of the baseball business, tries to explain that in his opinion playing golf aids the "batting eye" of a ball player. And maybe he is right. Anyway, it will get him the glad hand from the golf galleries from Dundee to Pinehurst, N. C.

Yet, granting that a golf ball is a most alluring thing to swat, it would aid a ball player only in the sense that it would have a tendency to "train" his eye to speed and accuracy, and that's all.

The technique necessary to hit the specialized modern pitching of today would not be solved at all. The conditions are vastly different, and to say that a gifted golfer ought to make a first-class baseball batsman, per se—is far from clear to my mind.

Crackers Holding Own.

Mr. B. Smith and his loyal side partners are holding their own with admirable skill and poise. The first road trip was not as successful as could be wished. But never mind about that.

The psychology of baseball—the "breaks"—as they are called by the players, handed the Crackers some pretty stiff jolts, but it can't last all summer. The Crackers have the "class" of the fighting spirit and the stamina, and that's the combination that will show in the long run.

The season is yet quite young, and the players have not yet struck their true stride. Yes, even at that, to be beaten a series at Moccasin Hollow by one means proves the superiority of the Chattanooga team. Mr. B. Smith is in this contest, and all along the line at that.

Some months ago Mr. G. Herrmann said that the Federals were helping the Reds. What? Now listen: Last week the manager of the Kansas City Federals signed Johnson, Herzog's Indian pitcher. What do you know about that? Can you beat it for a cross hook to the jaw in the shape of a coincident? Not much!

It looks as though Stallings and his Bostons can't even get started. Tough luck all around.

And the hapless Cleveland. They can't get out of a rut. They'll have no smoke up or the Toledo team will put the morgue sign on them.

I should worry, fancy the hapless Feds, and get whilted to the discards!

SLOOP RESOLUTE HAS BEEN LAUNCHED

Bristol, R. I., April 25.—The centerboard sloop Resolute slipped down the ways at sunset today, the first of the three America's cup defense candidates to take the water. She will be rigged immediately and is expected to show her sailing abilities in a week from today.

All secrecy regarding the yacht was removed a few hours before the launching, and as her rivals at Bath and Neponset have also been inspected, something of the strength of the American yachting defense is now known.

The actual dimensions of the yacht will be withheld and even her rating may not be known except approximately. She looks to be about 167 feet over all, 21 feet beam and 13½ draught.

Miss Grace Vanderbilt, daughter of Commodore Vanderbilt, carried out the traditional ceremony by smashing a bottle of wine on the port bow as the yacht started down the ways.

The owners' co-operative department of the Regal Motor Car company was started to bring the general average of repair cost and operating expenses to the lowest possible minimum, and in that way offset the increased cost of operation, and this department has resulted, according to Vice President C. P. Henderson, in a very large percentage of satisfied users. Ten thousand letters were sent recently circularizing replied willingly, with the result that the company found that but one on the hundred on an average had any complaint to make.

Charles J. Glidden, donor of the trophy bearing his name, has formally consented to the transfer of the Glidden trophy to the Chicago Automobile club for the Chicago-Boston non-stop run, but insists that the contest must be the national tour, to which the Chicago Automobile association has consented, provided the organization does not allow its grip to lax on what it believed will be the greatest contest of modern times. The Chicago club insists that it must [illegible] the contest from the beginning to the end.

J. R. Eccleston, former general sales manager of the Oakland Motor Car [illegible]pany, has just returned to his farm at Pine Lake, and denies any intention of again entering the automobile selling business, as it is his intention to carry out a promise to Mrs. Eccleston, made long ago, and arrange for a trip around the world, going eastward and making the Panama-Pacific exposition on the return journey, the entire trip to take over a year, with several months of touring in Europe.

Imperative Needs of Grady Ably Shown in a Pamphlet Just Mailed to the Voters

If you are a voter you have received—or will receive some time in the next 48 hours—an interesting bit of literature entitled—

On second inspection, the interesting bit of literature has no title. This, if nothing else, should make it worthy of reading. Most authors spend more time thinking about the title than they do writing the book. The author of this one, apparently, thought the contents so worth while that he didn't bother giving them a title.

If it had a title, however, the book would probably be called "Vote for Grady," or "Why Atlanta Needs a New Hospital."

The book is illustrated, and covers its subject very thoroughly, both with photographs and with facts. It informs you that the typical Grady ward is dilapidated and worn out, and then, just to prove it, prints a photograph of a typical ward. If you were to run across one of those pictures minus the information that it was a typical Grady ward, you'd probably imagine it was an abandoned ice house or some recent excavation in Pompeii. There is one thing you'd never imagine it to be and that is a hospital ward.

Then Rubs It In.

Then by way of rubbing it in, the booklet prints on the opposite page a picture of a typical Louisville ward. Now, Louisville isn't much larger than Atlanta, and not one-tenth so live, but about two years ago it realized—as Atlanta is realising now—that it was something like fifty years behind the remainder of the United States in its hospital facilities. Immediately Louisville dug down in its pocket and forked out $1,000,000 for a modern hospital. The result is that today a typical Grady ward and a typical Louisville ward compare about as favorably as an ox-cart would compare with a modern, high-power passenger locomotive.

Again, the reader is invited to contrast the contagious disease ward of the Louisville hospital with that of Grady. Now the contagious disease ward of the Louisville hospital looks like a comfortable row of cottages, whereas the contagious disease ward of Grady is a disaster and a crime. The one for whites is a typical ice house, and the one for blacks is a four-room cottage, which the Rotary club rented a few weeks ago. Until then Atlanta's contagious disease patients could have been nicely and accurately represented by a large, blank space.

Beneath the pictures there is interveyed interesting bits of information, such as that no provision is made in Atlanta for the isolation and care of measles, meningitis, whooping cough, erysipelas, venereal diseases and the like, either among white or colored people. It is also pointed one that if the bond issue goes through separate wards will be provided for the treatment of each of these.

Nurses' Dormitories.

On another page there is portrayed to the great disadvantage of Atlanta the difference between the nurses' dormitory at Grady and the one at Louisville. The nurses' dormitory at Grady used to be the contagious disease ward, but the patients got to dying in it too fast—for lack of air or light or something like that—and they turned it over to the nurses. Grady hospital nurses don't need light nor air because they are always working, except when they are asleep. The nurses' dormitory is a slight degeneration from the ice house form of architecture. It looks more like the average country railway station of twenty years ago. The architects thoughtfully excluded light and air as much as possible—doubtless to discourage the nurses from thinking they are large enough. the nurses sleep four in a room. The smaller rooms are exclusive and private. They are so exclusive and private that the occupant has to leave her trunk in the corridor and sit on the edge of the bed when she combs her hair. They are some rooms—those apartments in the nurses' dormitory at Grady hospital.

One's civic pride is outraged to think that the compilers of this notable work have been so dead to all sense of municipal shame as to print on the opposite page that picture of the nurses' dormitory in Louisville. For the nurses' dormitory in Louisville is four stories high, and looks as though it had been built for human habitation.

Was it not Dogberry who said comparisons are odorous? It certainly applies to that work of art entitled "Vote for Grady" or "Why Atlanta Needs a New Hospital."

Not a Fair Deal.

Still, it isn't all comparison. Some of the facts are so obviously frightful that they add considerably to the overdoing it. No comparison is needed when the reader is informed that the normal capacity of Grady is 250 patients; that the present capacity is 317 patients, and that something like 20 patients are turned away every day. No comparison is needed when one reads that Grady, facing every day without a vacant bed. No comparison is needed when one is informed that negroes and white people are treated together in the same outdoor clinic. And no comparison is needed when one is invited to come to the hospital and see for himself—if he doesn't believe the folder.

Still, it might be possible to think of a better name for that booklet. How would this do: "A Study in Comparisons!"

SAYS SULPHUR DRIVES ECZEMA FROM THE SKIN

Use Like Cold Cream to Instantly Stop Itching and Clear the Skin.

Sulphur, says a renowned dermatologist, just common bold-sulphur made into a thick cream, will soothe and heal the skin when irritated and broken out with Eczema or any form of eruption. The moment it is applied all itching ceases and after two or three applications the Eczema disappears, leaving the skin clear and smooth.

He tells Eczema sufferers to get from any good pharmacy an ounce of bold-sulphur cream and apply it to the irritated parts the same as you would any cold cream.

For many years common bold-sulphur has occupied a secure position in the practice of dermatology and cutaneous affections by reason of its parasite-destroying property. It is not only parasiticidal, but also antipruritic, antiseptic and remarkably healing in all irritable and inflammatory conditions of the skin. While not always effecting a permanent cure it never fails to instantly subdue the angry itching and irritation and heal the Eczema right up and it is often years later before any eruption again appears on the skin.

GERMANY IS STIRRED OVER THE NUDE IN ART

Berlin, April 25.—German moralists and artists are waging battle over the question of what are the limits of propriety in art.

After a long campaign for the "protection of the youth against filth in word and picture," at the moment in termed, the moralists have succeeded in getting a bill before parliament for a law stamping as indecent pictures which might "arouse the phantasies of unripe youth."

The Goethe association, an organization of artists and literary men and women, has risen in protest. At a recent meeting Dr. Ludwig Fulda reported to the recent decision of the imperial supreme court in the cases arising from the confiscation by the police of a great quantity of postcard reproductions of famous paintings. This court held that the provision of the law stamping as indecent work which "tend to cause offense to or injure the feelings of modesty of a normal person" clearly contemplated a normal adult person, and that pictures were not necessarily indecent from the mere fact that they might "arouse the phantasies of unripe youth." The court also ruled that nudity is not in itself indecency. This latter ruling, said Dr. Fulda, was undoubtably a vote of confidence in the Creator of all things.

The measure to which the Goethe association objects seeks to counteract the ruling of the superior court. It provides that acts may legally be "offense" at pictures, books, etc., which they consider a menace to youth. The term "normal person" is replaced by "person," and the provision of the existing law requiring that criminal intent be shown is dropped.

Dr. Fulda, as well as the speakers who followed him at the protest meeting, declared that the proposed law would "put all Germans into the nursery." It constituted an unreasonable guardianship of adults in its efforts to guard children. It would mean that works of art would be judged from the viewpoint of the immature, and that would mean in turn that art would be throttled. The Goethe association, said Dr. Fulda, was also interested in the welfare of the youth of the family. The unripeness of youth must not be made the standard for judging work of art.

Defenders of the proposed law declare that apart from the recent postcard confiscations, which are generally admitted to have been rather indiscrous exhibitions of misused zeal, both pictorial and literary art have extended protection in Germany. The new law, they point out, is chiefly designed to do away with immodest exhibitions in shop windows.

A very considerable number of artists in Germany maintain that there is no possible subject which a painter or sculptor cannot properly handle, if his work is artistic, they declare, it must be free from interference, no matter what subject is represented. The views of this school were recently summed up by a satirical writer as follows:

"The test of whether a painting is a true work of art is this: If, when you look at it, it causes no evil thoughts, that proves that it is a work of art. If it does cause evil thoughts, that proves that you are a hog."

SONGBIRDS HERE FOR OPERA WEEK

Geraldine Farrar and Enrico Caruso Are First of Metropolitan Stars to Arrive in Atlanta.

Geraldine Farrar, as charming and as beautiful as ever, accompanied by a maid and a companion, and Enrico Caruso, the world's greatest tenor, with two valets, arrived in Atlanta at 7:20 o'clock over the Southern railway from New York city, where the season closed some days ago.

Both were driven immediately to the Georgian Terrace, where they had engaged apartments.

Miss Farrar, who has scores of warm friends in Atlanta, and who has been the recipient of many social attentions during her several engagements in this city, was given an enthusiastic welcome by many at the Terrace. This time Miss Farrar comes to sing and Miss Farrar was tired out from the long journey south. However, she expressed great pleasure at being in Atlanta, where she is always accorded such a flattering ovation.

"Well, we are here, and we are glad to be here," said Miss Farrar. "I have a genuine fondness for Atlanta and I always look forward with pleasure to my annual spring engagement here. The crowds are so large and the appreciation of one's efforts is so marked that one feels like doing one's best work.

"Say to the people of Atlanta that I am glad to be with them once more. I am very tired and hungry now, and I will ask you to excuse me."

Miss Farrar is a trifle slenderer than last year and looks even more girlish than ever.

She will be heard in two operas this year—"Manon," which will be sung Monday night, and "Madam Butterfly," in which she has been heard before in this city.

Caruso likewise expressed pleasure at returning to Atlanta. He, too, was fatigued from the trip and went immediately to his apartments. On the way south he and Miss Farrar spent most of his time playing cards and indulging in his favorite pastime of sketching his fellow passengers.

All in Readiness.

Other stars of the Metropolitan Opera company will arrive in Atlanta Monday morning, and a special train on Monday also Otto Kahn and a party of directors of the Metropolitan Opera company are expected to arrive for the Atlanta engagement.

All is in readiness for opera week, which gives every promise of being the most brilliant in the history of grand opera in this city. For weeks past the local hotels have been making reservations for out-of-town guests, many of whom are coming from as far off as Texas and Missouri. By Monday every hotel in the city will be crowded to its utmost capacity. Several of the hotels have decorated the lobbies with flags and bunting in honor of the visiting stars. In the Georgian Terrace lobby there is an attractive group of Italian, French, German and American flags over the main arch.

Sale Has Been Large.

The sale of both season and individual tickets this year has been larger by several thousand than ever before. At 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon the sale of individual tickets was closed at Phillips & Crew, and the Cable Piano company, but those who have not purchased tickets will have an opportunity of doing so at the Auditorium Monday and all during the engagement.

BURNS CLUB BARBECUE MONDAY AFTERNOON

The Burns Club of Atlanta will give a barbecue in honor of the Burns Club of Lithonia, at the Atlanta Burns cottage Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The Lithonia Burns lovers and Scotchmen entertained the Atlanta colony Saturday a week ago at Lithonia in celebration of "Dogwood day," an annual fete of the Atlanta and Lithonia Scots.

REPORT OF STATE SUFFRAGISTS

At a business meeting of the Atlanta Equal Suffrage association, held on Wednesday afternoon at the Ansley hotel, resolutions were passed indorsing the movement to give employees of stores, offices and factories a Saturday half-holiday during the summer months. The suffragists further decided to co-operate with and aid in every possible way the grocers and butchers in their efforts to close early on Wednesdays.

Mrs. McLendon read a number of letters from different parts of the state showing the progress being made by the suffrage movement in the south. Mrs. Minnie Battle Allyn reports eighty new members of the Georgia Woman's Suffrage association in Talliaferro county. Miss Madeline Wyly, of Rome, and Mrs. Chas Fuller, of Macon, write that plans are going forward in their respective cities for suffrage celebrations on May 2.

Letters from all parts of Georgia show great enthusiasm over the news that Hon. Barry Wright will at the coming session of the legislature, introduce a bill to enfranchise the women of Georgia. Suffragists are elated over the success of the suffrage petition which is being circulated by the Georgia Woman's Suffrage association and by the woman suffrage party. Mrs. Amelia Woodall urges Atlanta suffragists to roll up a monster petition from this city.

Vacancies in the executive committee were filled as follows: Miss Mamie L. Pitts, first vice president; Mrs. C. W. McClure, second vice president; Miss Emma V. Paul, corresponding secretary.

Membership reports from Miss Stella Lynch, Mrs. Amelia Woodall and Miss Margaret Koch showed an increase of seventy new members.

A letter from Mrs. Victor Kriegshaber, of the Atlanta Woman's club, was read asking the co-operation of the suffragists in a peace day celebration. The Atlanta Equal Suffrage association decided to prepare a suitable program for May 12.

The Telephone a Community Builder

A TELEPHONE system, like the street cars, is an aid to the city's growth and suburban development. It makes it convenient for the city-employed man to live in the suburbs or country.

"Handy to business" now means a pretty suburban residence or a home in the real country.

Factories are built where land is cheap.

The population of the over-crowded cities flows out into the country, relieving unsanitary conditions and improving the general health of the community.

The telephone has brought the city and country closer together.

The Bell Telephone system is aiding in the upbuilding and growth of 70,000 communities, and giving impetus to the "back to the land" movement.

COTTON MARKET STILL UNSETTLED

Reports of Heavy Rains Caused Some Selling Towards the Close—Opened Steady at Advance.

New York, April 25.—Today's cotton market was unsettled by rather heavy near month liquidation and scattered realizing for over the week-end. Reports of heavy rains in the southwest caused some covering toward the close and last prices were steady but at practically the lowest point of the day, net unchanged to 2 points lower on all months except March, which was 7 points higher.

The market opened steady at an advance of 1 to 4 points. There appeared to be a good many of the night buying orders ground over the ring while the relatively firm showing of Liverpool and some trade and local covering and a scattering demand. It very soon became apparent, however, that there was a good deal of old crop cotton for sale, particularly in May.

One of the more prominent locals was credited with selling the near month actively, and this tended to increase confusion as to the probable extent and reception of any notices which may be due on Tuesday. These did not seem to be much pressure against new crop months, although scattering liquidation for over the week-end was prompted by the official forecast for clearing weather in the western belt, and the decline was less than 40 points below which the July and 4 to 7 points not lower in the case of May and July.

Private cables attributed the firmness in Liverpool to a scattering demand and small offerings. Reports from the dry goods trades showed no particular change in the situation. It is said that there have been sales of heavy goods such as would be suitable for spring requirements, but otherwise primary markets are reported quiet and local bears are still laying considerable stress upon the talk of accumulating yarns and possible short time.

Hubbard Bros. & Co.

New York, April 25.—(Special.)—Liverpool showed unexpected strength in the cotton market during the last hour of today's session advancing above last evening, when a decline of 10 points was noted. When advices were opened 4 higher to slowly sell off on realizing sales by outside holders who thought that the top had not yet been taken up. It is generally understood, however, that the southern interests continue to receive some forty to fifty thousand bales, and as the largest of the short interests was eliminated on the advance last week the market should be free of fresh realizing sales. Weather throughout the south was decidedly favorable, except the extreme northwest Texas. The trade is generally bullish over the entire situation with all of the rumors afloat.

Jay, Bond & Co.

New York, April 25.—(Special.)—Despite firm cables from Liverpool and further heavy rain in north and west Texas, the market today met with considerable liquidation, closing at a net decline of 12 points. Week-end ramsing undoubtedly had a good deal to do with the selling, but the unsettled political conditions and uneasiness in the financial markets as a result thereof have further contributed to the downward tone, and are causing holders to liquidate.

John F. Black & Co.

New York, April 25.—The cables were better than due this today, but it is said certain interests had bought in Liverpool in order to put in shorts, and are unable to sell here, and this market was shunned. There was, from a commission house point of view, a good deal of bullish news today. The close was steady at a net decline of 2 to 6 points by means of liquidation and by down in new crops.

The market is working itself into an overbought position and if the other is the belt what week should expect to be extraordinary there would be a sharp advance. Warm spring weather is much needed in a very large part of the belt. War talk seems to have ceased to be a market factor, but it is very probable that south Texas will be short of pickers this fall.

Cotton Seed Oil.

New York, April 25.—The cotton seed oil was irregular with the near months weak under active liquidation in anticipation of liberal receipts and the new months were steady on buying by sellers of May. The close was 6 points lower to 2 points net higher.

CORN SHIPMENTS HAVE FALLEN OFF

This Causes Activity and Strength—Wheat and Oats Sympathize With the Rallies.

Chicago, April 25.—Sudden restriction of supplies from Argentina brought about great activity and strength today in the corn market here. Prices closed at ½ to 1⅝@1¾c net advance. Wheat and oats gained ⅝ to ⅞@¾c. In provisions the outcome varied from 2½c decline to a rise of 10c.

Renewal of torrential rains adversely affecting the quality of 5 per cent of the Argentine crop, and pointing to a heavy falling off in Argentine shipments during the last few weeks seemed to put an entirely different face on the corn situation. Prices for the grain a decided scene. They took fright especially at word from the Seaboard that engagements were being offered for the privilege of cancelling contracts for May and July shipments from Argentina.

Promise of a big decrease being shown who have taken place this week in the heretofore burdensome Chicago stock created also a bullish influence in corn bulge. Besides, liberal sales were made here today of industrial concern warehouses were reported to have good cash demand at Kansas City. Little pressure to sell was apparently indulged in by commission house longs heading gen. on the theory that there was any important downturn in the market.

Wheat rose with corn, and as a result of forecasts of smaller world's supply to arrivals being scanty at Russian ports. It was said the figures for the world shipments would be considerably diminished. Holders were accordingly slow to sell in spite of a demand for exports from this side of the Atlantic. Further buying power was given by continued lightness of the May option checked the bears, despite the flattering domestic outlook for crops.

Oats sympathized with the rally in other grain. Buying of an investment character was noticeable in the deferred futures.

The rise in provisions was largely laid to the influence of war contracts. That was evident, however, that the character of the corn market was not without some effect.

WORTH STRIVING FOR

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 25.—(Special.)—The accompanying illustration shows the Rose diamond trophy for the season of 1914. While the cut does not adequately convey the expensive and elaborate nature of the watch fob, of which the trophy consists, some idea of its "class" can be obtained. No pains or expense have been spared and the winner of the 1914 trophy will find himself possessed of a jewel more valuable than the one won by Bob Messenger, Bill Prough and Dave Robertson last year, combined. The trophy will be one that can be converted into ready cash at any time should the winner hit hard times, or it can be treasured and exhibited by the veteran in after years as proof of what he could do in the days of his prime.

LOZIER MOTOR COMPANY HAVING BIGGEST YEAR

Produced and Sold More Cars in Six Months Than in All of 1913.

"Nineteen hundred and fourteen is the biggest year in the history of the Lozier Motor company," says President J. M. Gilbert. "Up to April 1 we had produced and sold more Lozier cars in 1914 than during the first six months of last year. In February we established the highest record for sales since we began the manufacture of automobiles. March sales exceeded February by a wide margin, and our April sales will undoubtedly wipe out all previous records in volume.

"Our March sales were actually 143 per cent ahead of sales in the corresponding period of a year ago. We have to rub our eyes occasionally to realize the unparalleled growth of the business.

"Congratulatory messages on the quality of the new $2,100 light four are pouring in from every quarter to our offices and they prove that we have accomplished the feat of almost quadrupling our output and yet keeping the quality of our cars up to high standards.

"Among messages received the last few days is one from Kansas City, which is particularly interesting in view of the fact that Kansas City is one of the hilliest towns in the country and offers strenuous tests for any new automobile. The telegram reads: 'New light Lozier four is showing up wonderfully well in our Kansas City hills. Every prospect we take out becomes enthusiastic about it. Have every reason to believe that the new model will prove to be one of the best sellers in this territory.'

"A message from Frederick D. Murphy, Lozier distributor in Minneapolis, reads: 'Our four demonstrator has arrived and is taking the prospects by storm. People looked for a real Lozier, of course, but naturally couldn't appreciate just what the car would be until they rode in it. Am highly elated and predict a wonderful success in the northwest and elsewhere for the Lozier four.'

Sales Manager Paul Smith reports that the Lozier company is far oversold on this new model, and that there is no immediate prospect of the supply catching up with the demand, although the output of the Lozier factories has been increased to twenty cars per day.

Dry roads are conducive to good road racing, but a dry country is apparently not as conducive, for the rumor went around that because Elgin and Kane county, in which the Elgin road racing course is located, went dry at the recent election, the proposed race would be abandoned. This is emphatically denied from Chicago.

Oxford Wins Four-Mile International Relay Race by a Scant Foot

Philadelphia, April 25.—Oxford university, of England, won the four-mile college relay championship of America from the University of Pennsylvania here today in the most sensational finish ever seen in that event in the seventeen years the race has been run on Franklin field. The English team won the remarkable race by a scant eight inches.

Jackson, Olympic 1,500-meter champion, the anchor man of the English team, was pushed to the limit of human endurance by McCurdy, of Pennsylvania, the two-mile intercollegiate champion, and fell into the arms of his supporters when he breasted the tape.

The race was run in a heavy rainstorm and the time, 18 minutes 4 seconds, broke the four-mile record for the Penn Relay classic, which Cornell and world's record is held by Cornell, 17 minutes 45 seconds. Experts agree that the track was about five seconds slow to the mile. So close was the race between Jackson and McCurdy that it was several minutes before the spectators could learn who had won. Thirty yards from the tape McCurdy led by about a foot. Jackson at the finish just managed to shove his shoulder ahead of McCurdy, who was close to the pole. When Jackson got by, which of his shoulders was in front of McCurdy, he swerved slightly in toward the pole and the backers of the two men were almost touching, with Jackson's just in front. This was their position at the tape.

As the two men fell across the line an excited spectator rushed at James K. Sullivan, the referee, and wildly protested that McCurdy had been fouled, but Sullivan waved him away and declared the English team the winner.

Cornell and Pennsylvania State colleges also were in the race, but after the second mile their runners were distanced.

Aside from the showing made by McCurdy against the Olympic champion, the surprise of the race was the easy way in which Maddock, of Pennsylvania, beat Tabor, of Oxford, in the third mile by 15 yards. The one-mile college relay championship of America was won by Harvard, with Pennsylvania second. The time was 3:23 3-5.

The two-mile college relay championship was captured by Illinois in 8 minutes 6 seconds.

G. M. C. BASEBALL TEAM HAS SUCCESSFUL TRIP

Milledgeville, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—Bearing directly upon the prep championship of 1914, the first curtain was raised and lowered in a two-act series, staged at Barnesville, between Gordon and Georgia Military college, which resulted in an even break, placing the schools on an equal footing for the pennant.

Coach Maddox, with his team, just completed his annual week's trip, beginning with Riverside, where the second curtain was raised and lowered in a two-game series, which resulted in a complete victory for Maddox's crew, the score being 3 to 1 in the first game and 5 to 4 in the second.

Riverside has a good team, however, and when they come to play on the local diamond, May 18 and 19, the Milledgeville fans will possibly witness two of the hardest-fought battles ever played.

From Riverside the team took a two days' outing over to Dahlonega, where they faced the strong N. G. A. C. in a two-game battle, copping both games, the first 9 to 0 and the second 7 to 4.

The last game played on the circuit was Friday afternoon with Tech High at Ponce de Leon park, Tech High has decidedly the best prep team in the Gate City league, and when G. M. C. defeated them with Camp in the box, taking every game on the road from the strongest prep teams in the south, it puts G. M. C. squarely in the spotlight as being one of the best teams, if not the best, in the state.

Coach Maddox and his team arrived back Saturday feeling proud of the record the team made, and the fans of Milledgeville, in order to show the coach and his team their appreciation of their splendid success, gave them a 6 o'clock dinner at the Baldwin which was indeed a pleasant affair.

The school authorities are pleased with the progress the cadets are making in their literary, military and other school duties, as well as in athletics. Those who compose the team are not relieved from any of the duties of the routine work, as many times on guard mount or walking extra duty the same as those who do not play.

The school tries to impress upon the cadets that athletics is all right in its place, but that it is not and should not be the all-absorbing interest. The school is indeed fortunate in having its athletic field so admirably situated.

Owing to the close proximity of the grounds to the school buildings, the cadets lose no time in getting on their uniforms and out to practice after the school work is over for the day. While the local diamond will compare favorably with any in the state, a movement is being started to spend a large sum of money to make it one of the best ball diamonds in the entire south.

The King Motor Car Company of Detroit is making plans for a general sales convention of the dealers during the early part of June. In all probability Artemus Ward, Sr., of New York city, owner of the King company, will be present at this convention.

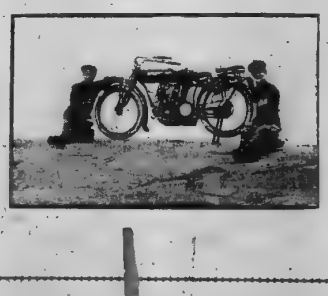
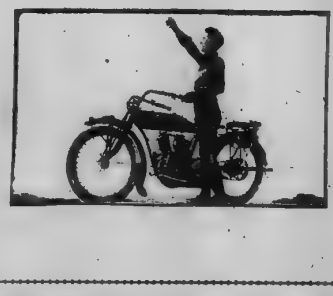
1914 REGULAR STOCK
INDIAN
With Two Men
Climbs Slippery Stone Mountain





Wilcox and Smith on a regular 1914 7-h. p. two-speed Indian fresh from a crate climbed the slippery side of Stone Mountain without one dismount and planted the flag at the top.

Just another link in the long chain of evidence which confirms the strength and power of Indian motorcycles, proving again to the most skeptical the wonderful ability of the Indian as a climber that gets there.

Without any previous tryout of machine; without any charting of their path, but picking the way as they climbed, these two men went up, up, up, clean to the top.

What they did with their Indian you or any other man can do with any 7-h. p. two-speed Indian. We knew they'd do it because we know the power of the Indian. You can call it a stunt, but it's just part of a day's work for an Indian.

COUNT THE INDIANS ON THE ROAD

See them everywhere, skipping along country roads no matter how rough, taking men and women out into the clean, sweet air; making good red blood zing through the body. See them in town scooting along with and without comfy little side cars on pleasure trips, delivering goods for merchants in every line of business.

The sturdiest, speediest and most efficient and economical motorcycle built—The Indian.

Colorado Utters a Shout For United States Troops

Gov. Ammons Wires President Wilson That Situation in Mine Region Is Beyond State Control.

WOMEN MADE GOVERNOR APPEAL TO WASHINGTON

The Women Went to Capitol and Would Not Leave Until the Governor Wired His Appeal to President.

Denver, Colo., April 25.—Governor Elias M. Ammons tonight at 9 o'clock by wire, requested President Wilson to "send federal troops into Colorado immediately," to compose the strike situation.

Governor Ammons determined to ask President Wilson directly for federal troops, rather than through the congressional channels, after a all-day session with women of the state who declared they would not leave the statehouse until the governor had complied with their demands that federal troops be asked for from the president himself.

Appeal of Governor.

The telegram which the governor caused to be sent to the president reads, in part:

"Conditions in this state compel me to request of you that federal troops be sent immediately into the state of Colorado.

"Armed men in open defiance of law are congregating from various portions of the state in the affected district. There are probably 2,000 men armed in open insurrection.

"I have available 650 militiamen without ability materially to increase this number. The situation has passed beyond the ability of the state to control.

"This domestic violence is the result of an industrial controversy between interstate organizations with headquarters outside of the state of Colorado.

"I, therefore, urgently request that you send forthwith to Ludlow, Colo., and to such other portions of the state as the commanding officer may deem necessary not less than one battalion of infantry and one troop of cavalry.

"The legislature of this state cannot be convened in time to meet this emergency and I therefore have the honor to make this request as governor of the state pursuant to section four, article four of the constitution of the United States."

The delegation of women refused to leave the executive chambers until they had read and approved the telegram. They had declared they were not in sympathy with either of the warring factions and that they were urging federal aid as the only effective means of putting down the strife.

President to Governors.

Earlier in the day the governor sent the following message to President Wilson:

"Conflicting reports as to action of cabinet meeting yesterday morning have been received here. What I would be greatly obliged to know is, if we cannot control the situation in the southern Colorado coal field, can we have federal troops?"

President Wilson's reply follows:

"Discussion at cabinet meeting referred to was merely for the sake of information. I cannot concede to the authority of the state of Colorado being ineffective and earnestly suggest that renewed efforts be made to prevent hostile action on either side, or any action that might provoke hostility. Congressional committee about to revisit state for conference on grounds."

Peace to Continue Sunday.

Trinidad, Colo., April 25.—Peace in the Colorado coal camps will continue over Sunday if orders given by strike leaders to their followers are obeyed. After a conference late today between Adjutant General John Chase and officers of the United Mine Workers of America, John R. Lawson addressed a mass meeting of strikers here and urged them to abstain from violence until a conference to be held in Denver tomorrow, in which state officers and citizens will endeavor to effect a settlement of the miners' strike. The outcome of the conference was virtually a continuation of the truce arranged last night at Denver.

A party carrying a Red Cross flag and representing itself as being authorized to act for that organization was ordered under military detention today by General Chase at the Ludlow military headquarters, and later turned back to Trinidad.

Union leaders asked that the present arrangement be permitted to stand and that no troops be sent to Trinidad.

They asked that no attacks be made on the strikers and in return asked that no attack be made on a detail which will be sent to Aguilar tonight to get Superintendent Waddell, said General Chase.

J. H. Mateson, assistant manager of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company, today caused to be posted at the company's mines copies of a telegram from President J. F. Welborn, declaring as follows:

"There is no truth in the report that Mr. Rockefeller has wired me to settle with the union. Neither Mr. Rockefeller nor anyone else has made such a request or suggestion, and the Colorado Fuel and Iron company will have absolutely nothing to do with the United Mine Workers."

EMPEROR OF GERMANY THANKED BY REFUGEES

Galveston, Texas, April 25.—When the refugee ship Esperanza arrived late tonight from Vera Cruz and Tampico with 1,000 refugees and passed the quarantine boat a cablegram of thanks to be sent to the Emperor of Germany for protection given Americans by the German cruiser Dresden, at Tampico, Tuesday.

VOLUNTEER MEASURE SIGNED BY PRESIDENT

Washington, April 25.—President Wilson late today signed the volunteer army bill, which provides for the organization of volunteer forces in time of war. Under the measure bodies of militia would be taken into the federal service with their officers, who would be commissioned by the president.

HAVERTY FURNITURE CO. HAS NEW LOCAL MANAGER

Other Changes Made to Care for Steadily Increasing Business of Popular Concern.

Large and steadily increasing business has made necessary some changes in management by The Haverty Furniture company, news of which is of interest to the general public.

The Haverty Furniture company operates eleven stores in ten cities, the main store and general offices being in Atlanta. The president of the company is Mr. J. J. Haverty, one of the pioneers in the southern furniture field and nationally recognized as a leader in the furniture trade.

Mr. Clarence Haverty, vice president and treasurer, now becomes general manager of the entire business, wholesale and retail, of the company with direct supervision over all the Haverty stores.

The management of the main Atlanta store is now in charge of Mr. D. C. Vorus, a young man of marked ability and successful experience.

Mr. Vorus is a native Atlantan, but for several years has been manager for the John A. Cunningham company, of Jacksonville, one of the largest furniture houses in the state of Florida.

In his new connection Mr. Vorus will have a splendid opportunity for the exercise of his originality and untiring energy. He already is putting into operation well thought out plans for the still greater development and expansion of the Haverty business.

The assistant manager of the main Atlanta store is Mr. F. P. Whitten, a well-known and popular furniture man with a business experience of eighteen years in this city.

SLAIN MARINE WAS FORMER GRIFFIN MAN

John F. Shumaker, Coxwain of Florida, Well Remembered in Georgia.

Griffin, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—A former citizen of this city was one of the first Americans to be killed in the attack by the United States bluejackets and marines, which marked the beginning of the actual hostilities in the Mexican-embroglio. The name of the unfortunate fighter was John F. Shumaker, who at the time of his death was serving as coxswain on the battleship Florida.

Several years ago Shumaker was a resident of Griffin, and many people here remember him as a clever and excellent young gentleman. During his residence here he was employed by the Grecham Manufacturing company in the buggy department.

At the outbreak of the Spanish-American war, Shumaker tried to enlist with the Spalding Grays, in order that he might serve his country in that conflict, but was not allowed to join the company on account of age. Later he left Griffin and joined the navy at New York.

Nothing had been heard of him until press dispatches this week announced his death. He had no relatives here.

BROTHERS-IN-LAW FIGHT AND BOTH ARE INJURED

R. F. Dobbs, the street car conductor who recently ejected the rubber who attempted to hold up a negro bank from his Mounston street car while a mob of negroes were pursuing the bandit, and succeeded in dodging several bullets, was unsuccessful last night in dodging a bullet fired at him by his brother-in-law, M. G. Garrett, who shot him underneath the right arm in a fight at the corner of Kennedy and Gray streets.

Dobbs stated that the trouble began when he tried to get his brother-in-law to pay him $12 that he had been owing him for some time past. According to his story, Garrett threatened to shoot him, and then did so. He grabbed the revolver from Garrett's hand, and struck him over the head, inflicting a dangerous wound.

Both men were carried to the Grady hospital, and also placed under arrest. Dobbs lives at 33 Kennedy street and Garrett at 20 Kennedy.

MONEY LACKING TO PAY TEXAS NATIONAL GUARD

Washington, April 25.—Governor Colquitt, of Texas, telegraphed Representative Garrett that unless the war department would stand the expense of defense of the Mexican border by the Texas national guard he would be glad to put the entire guard on duty there. Acting upon the governor's representations, Mr. Garner conferred with Secretary Garrison and telegraphed this reply to Governor Colquitt:

"Secretary Garrison says he has no money out of which he can pay the Texas guards. He contends that sufficient troops have been ordered to the border, including Brownsville, to give every necessary protection. He shall insist that congress pay the expense of the guards you already have ordered to the border."

The governor in his telegrams referred to "alarming appeals" from towns all along the Rio Grande from Presidio to Brownsville, and the "inadequacy of the federal garrisons, especially in Brownsville," and told of his ordering twelve companies of the Texas national guard to concentrate at Brownsville.

RECRUITS ARE WANTED FOR THE MARINE CORPS

Washington, April 25.—Secretary Daniels, through Brigadier General Barnett, commandant of marines, today ordered the following retired marine corps officers to special recruiting duty at these stations:

Captain F. M. Wallick, of Gadsden, Ala., to St. Louis.

Captain R. C. Walker, of Middletown, N. Y., to Boston.

Captain D. W. B. Blake, of Pass Christian, Miss., to St. Paul.

Captain H. T. Swain, of Saratoga, Cal., to Portland, Ore.

RENEWS ATTACK ON GAS COMPANY

Turner Says Philadelphia Corporation Owns 66 Per Cent of Atlanta Gas Light Company.

Charging that the United Gas Improvement company, a Philadelphia corporation, owns 66 per cent of the stock of the Atlanta Gas Light company, City Electrician R. C. Turner renewed his attack on the local corporation yesterday in a statement supporting his claim for a rate of 80 cents per 1,000 feet in Atlanta.

Turner explained that the Gas Consumers' League of Atlanta, the organization behind the movement for lower gas rates, has petitions to which are attached more than 10 per cent of the registered voters of Atlanta.

"The petitions are going to council just as soon as the county election is over," Turner said Saturday. "We have been holding back because we did not want the gas issue to be voted on at the same time the county candidates are being elected. But you can state for me that the fight is on and will be waged to a finish."

Turner's Statement.

Under his signature, Turner issued the following statement:

"To those who are familiar with the gas business, it is hardly necessary to explain the influence that the United Gas Improvement company, of Philadelphia, exerts on the gas business throughout the country.

"The Atlanta Gas company is one of the eighteen gas companies that the United company of Philadelphia controls; owning a little over 66 per cent of the company's securities and only permits the remaining 34 per cent to be held by parties who are friendly to the United Gas Improvement company.

"Of the eighty-eight properties controlled by the Philadelphia Gas company, no fixed price has ever been established by the parent company for gas sold by their numerous subsidiary companies, the practice being to allow them to charge all that the consumer will stand for.

"About twenty years ago, the U. G. I. people persuaded the city council of Philadelphia to surrender the holdings of the city in the local gas company and in return gave the city absolutely nothing.

"At the time they were trading with the city council of Atlanta they were also negotiating with the city fathers of Philadelphia for the renewal of the franchise which they were unable to secure until they agreed to give the city 30 per cent of the profits derived from the sale of gas in Philadelphia as a consideration. Consequent, the city of Philadelphia received over a million dollars last year as the city's share of profits from gas sales in Philadelphia.

No Reductions, No Concessions.

"For something that the city council of Atlanta gave away, Philadelphia receives over a million dollars a year for, still the average Atlantan will tell you that Philadelphia is a 'rich' city.

"The United Gas Improvement company, like a majority of the public utilities companies, makes no reductions or concessions to the public until they are forced to by the people they serve.

"However, during the past year the gas monopoly has been forced to grant consumers, in a number of American cities, a reduction in the price of gas. Some of the towns to get cheaper gas in 1913 are as follows:

"Baltimore, Md., gas reduced from 90 cents a thousand cubic feet to 80 cents per thousand cubic feet; Los Angeles, Cal., reduced from 75 cents per thousand to 70 cents per thousand.

"In Louisville, Ky., the price of gas used for cooking and heating purposes was reduced from 75 cents a thousand to 65 cents a thousand.

"In all of these cities the gas sold by the gas companies is manufactured product, the same as the gas furnished in Atlanta.

"The gas consumers of Atlanta are entitled to cheaper gas and like the consumers of Louisville, Baltimore and numerous other cities, intend to get them."

No Answer From Concessions.

Officials of the Atlanta Gas Light company declined to comment on or reply to Turner's attack.

Washington, a dispatch from Philadelphia announced that Attorney General McReynolds was preparing an investigation into the operations of the United Gas Improvement company. It was also reported that the investigation would take in the Atlanta Gas Light company. A review of a statement containing how much stock the United Gas owned in the local corporation.

At about the time the statement S. Arkwright replied that while the United Gas did hold stock in the Atlanta Gas Light company, its holdings amounted to a minority interest and that the corporation in no way controlled the local company.

ARMS ARE REQUESTED FOR ARIZONA CITIZENS

Washington, April 25.—An appeal for government guns to arm citizens of Bisbee, Ariz., to repel any invasion from Mexican territory was laid before Secretary of War Garrison today by Senator Ashurst. Governor Hunt, in a telegram to Senator Ashurst, asked that 1,400 rifles be sent from the nearest army post. A telegram to Senator Ashurst from Captain John C. Greenway at Bisbee said that 900 Mexicans "said to belong to the constitutionalist forces" were driving Americans out of Cananea, across the border.

SCALY RINGWORM ON FACE AND HEAD

Kept Spreading, Itching and Burning. Hair Fell Out. Disfigured Very Much. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

R. F. D. No. 1, Pocahontas, Tenn.—"I took something resembling ringworm and thought it would soon go well but it just kept spreading until it began to look serious. It first appeared on my face as a small spot itching and burning and it gradually spread until it got over my face and head. Wherever it went it would leave the skin with white scales. I was compelled to scratch and that irritated the skin. My hair fell out gradually and looked dead. I was disfigured very much and I certainly got tired of people asking me what was the matter with my face. I lost a good many nights' sleep. The disease got so far along it didn't look like ringworm. The frightened me. They said it was barber's itch.

"I was advised to use ——— which would stop it, but as the outside of the ring it would soon appear again leaving the skin rough and scaly. I was given treatment but it did not do any good. Then I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment, washing with the Cuticura Soap then applying the Cuticura Ointment three and four times a day and at night. In a little less than two weeks I was cured of that skin trouble." (Signed) W. H. Nall, June 3, 1913.

Cuticura Soap 25c. and Cuticura Ointment 25c. are sold everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

Secret Wedding Announcement Breaks Up Students' Banquet

MR. AND MRS. ERNEST BENTLEY.

When Ernest G. Bentley, a senior at the Atlanta Law school, and an assistant in the office of Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey, and Miss Esther Hitchcock, of Dallas, Ga., a talented student at the Atlanta Conservatory of Music, were secretly married yesterday at 1 o'clock in the ordinary's office, they swore each of the few witnesses to solemn silence and thought they'd keep it "all to themselves" until 1 p.m. They were both to graduate in June—one in law and the other in music. They then would announce their marriage to the world and receive the blessings of the bride's father, who is Dr. W. O. Hitchcock, a prominent physician of Dallas, Ala., their plans "easy for sights."

According to the popular parody of a time-worn saying, "marriage will out." A fellow law student of Mr. Bentley's, while nosing around in the records of the ordinary's office, made the discovery, Saturday afternoon, of the marriage.

At 7:30 o'clock Saturday night, when the Kilpatrick Literary and Debating society, of the Atlanta Law school, gathered for its annual banquet at the Kimball house, Mr. Bentley entered the dining hall and took his seat. The banquet proceeded.

When the program of speeches was nearing its close and the hour of 10 o'clock approached, the fellow student arose from his seat and solemnly said:

"Gentlemen, there is something on my conscience which I can no longer keep secret. A serious crime has been committed by one of our number. Mr. Ernest G. Bentley was married today at 1 o'clock."

Pandemonium broke out in the banquet hall at the announcement. The students leaped to their feet and demanded if it were the truth. It was the first time in three years that a student had married while a member of the Atlanta Law school. Sitting in his chair, Mr. Bentley was almost dazed and could at first answer nothing. When he saw there was no escape he admitted it and was lifted on the shoulders of his fellow students to make a speech. The banquet broke up in the celebration.

When Dr. Hitchcock reads this article in Dallas, Ga., Sunday morning, it will be the first news he has received of the marriage. Likewise will the news first reach the bride's brother, the pell-known star pitcher of Georgia university, "Ed" Hitchcock.

As for the banquet of the law students, it was a big success—up to the time the wedding announcement was sprung. William F. Slaton, Jr., acted as toastmaster, and the following speeches were made: "The Literary Society," Franklin S. Chalmers; "Lawyers and the Press," J. Walter LeCraw; "Socialism," A. A. Baumstark; "Wine, Woman and Song," R. C. Thorell; "At the Bar," Allen G. Leahy; "Good Fellowship," J. S. Highsmith; "The Senior and Junior Classes," John C. Hart, Jr., and "What the Literary Society Is to the Law School," B. B. Patterson.

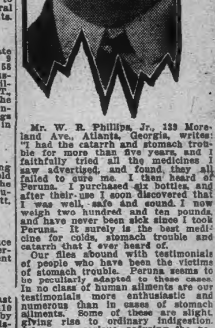
Mr. Phillips had Stomach Trouble for More than Five Years.



Mr. W. R. Phillips, Jr., 139 Moreland Ave., Atlanta, Georgia, writes: "I had the catarrh and stomach trouble for more than five years, and I faithfully tried all the medicines I saw advertised, and found they all failed to cure me. I then heard of Peruna. I purchased six bottles and after their use I soon discovered that I was well, safe and sound. I now weigh two hundred and five pounds and have never been sick since I took Peruna. I surely is the best medicine for colds, stomach trouble and catarrh that I ever heard of."

Our files contain many testimonials of people who have been the victims of stomach troubles. Peruna seems to be peculiarly adapted to these cases. In no class of human ailments are our testimonials more enthusiastic and numerous than in cases of stomach ailments. Some of these are slight, giving rise to ordinary indigestion. Others are serious, reducing the patient to almost a skeleton. Peruna, because of its tonic laxative qualities, seems to be specifically adapted to catarrh of the stomach and similar ailments.

Those who object to liquid medicines can now procure Peruna Tablets.

AMERICANS FLEE BEFORE MEXICANS

Mexic Mob Is Threatening the U. S. Consulate at Cananea—One Man Remains and Defies the Mob.

Nogales, Ariz., April 25.—A band of armed Mexicans started from Pagonia, Ariz., 27 miles northeast of here, today, and while marching southward toward the border have been robbing and firing on Americans.

C. L. Montague, American consular agent at Cananea, a rich copper mining town, 45 miles south of Naco, Ariz., telegraphed to Consul Frederick Simpich that at 5 o'clock this morning soon a mob of rebels was congregating about the consulate and speeches threatening Americans were being made.

He Braves the Mob.

All of the Americans except Montague, however, had reached the border safely. Montague had remained to pack up the consulate archives. The dispatch said:

"Am now in office attempting to pack up archives, a very large mob now on all sides of the consulate. Strong speeches being made against Americans. Some advocate breaking into consulate, others to take down American flag. I have decided not to take down the flag until 5:30 o'clock, the usual time, so as not to create excitement. Do not know what the result will be."

Consul Simpich immediately wired a vigorous note to the rebel authorities at Cananea, advising that American interests must be protected and deprecating any show of violence against the American consular agent.

Except for the acts of what was said to be irresponsible Mexicans the demeanor of Americans continued quietly today. Louis Hostetter, American consul at Hermosillo, wired he would reach the border Monday. Americans as far south of Hermosillo as Culiacan are to be brought north on a special train under protection of General Calixto Obregon, rebel commander. Fears for the safety of foreigners are centered only in possible acts of the more lawless elements, who have become outspoken in anti-American sentiment.

Raid by Mexicans.

A raid of armed Mexicans on the United States side of the border occurred this side of Nogales, when a dozen Mexicans started from Patagonia, Ariz., to rob mining camps on the Mexican line. Americans from Nogales and surrounding towns quickly armed themselves and started in pursuit.

A long distance telephone message from Cananea said the Americans in that mining camp and at Patagonia had armed themselves and were prepared to fire on the Mexicans. Only eight armed Mexicans started from Patagonia, but they were said to have gathered recruits and were headed for the border. Later the sheriff of Duquesne called for help and at 2 o'clock this afternoon two automobiles loaded with armed American civilians and a lieutenant of the United States army started from Nogales over the 16-mile mountain road to the border in the hope of capturing them.

The orders of the Americans are to shoot if the Mexicans show fight. Americans in the copper mining region west of here have been terrorized by the rising of the Mexicans.

BRYAN DENIES REPORTS HE WILL RESIGN CABINET

Secretary of State Says He Has Never Thought of Leaving His Post.

Washington, April 25.—Secretary of State Bryan today emphatically denied widespread and persistent reports that he would resign from the cabinet. When informed of published reports that he would relinquish his post should war be declared against Mexico, Mr. Bryan said:

"The subject of my resignation has never been discussed with anybody nor thought of by me."

White house officials pointed to the general denial issued a few days ago of the story that Secretary Bryan would resign, saying that statement was sufficient to cover all rumors of cabinet dissention.

They said they did not regard it as necessary to repeat the denial with each published report.

Outside of the white house there has been considerable discussion of the individual views known to be held by members of the cabinet on the present situation. None of these is said to be serious or approaching any breach in the president's official family, but there have been natural differences of opinion as to what aggressive measures should be pursued. The president himself, it is said, has invited the widest range of suggestions from his advisers and has steered a middle course between those who favor a quickly aggressive policy and those who believe war can be best averted by patient observation and carefully deliberated action.

Persons close to the administration described the divergence of views as the product of natural differences among those charged with responsibility for executive action. Officials point out, for instance, that the war department is naturally anxious to take every reasonable precaution with its military forces and the navy is bending its energies likewise to perfecting its preparations for actual warfare. They say also that the state department, which is directly responsible for relations with other foreign governments, and which is trying, through diplomacy, to prevent aggressive movements which might aggravate action by the constitutionalists, and the Mexican people as a whole, is busily occupied in friendly representation of the war spirit of its allied departments.

All the cabinet secretaries themselves denied that there is any serious division and point to their close and frequent conferences as evidence of their co-operation.

It is stated on authority that in no case has Secretary Bryan declared that he would resign his office in case it became necessary for the United States to engage in war, and he had let it be known to his personal friends that he could be relied upon to do his full duty as the administration saw fit to remain at his post under present conditions and any others that he thought could possibly arise.

The rumors of Mr. Bryan's intention to retire from the cabinet in various contingencies, are ascribed by his friends to sentiments uttered by the secretary early in his incumbency. Among other things, in speaking on the subject of universal peace, he has said there would be no war while he was secretary of state. The secretary's purpose, it is explained, was to emphasize his general conviction that the growing feeling of disapproval of warfare could be relied upon to prevent the country from drifting into war.

It is further stated on the authority of the members of the cabinet that nothing has occurred in any cabinet meeting to develop any dissatisfaction. It is true, they state, that various cabinet members have viewed certain subjects from different angles, but that invariably has applied to the preliminary phases.

In every case, however, according to

Winfield Dudley Takes Charge Of Griffin Daily News Today

Progressive Griffin is soon to have a live, progressive and brisk daily newspaper.

This is the assurance given by Winfield W. Dudley, formerly head of the advertisers' service and promotion department of The Constitution, who takes charge as editor and publisher of The Griffin Daily News today. Mr. Dudley has acquired control of the property from Mrs. Boyd, widow of the late Joseph D. Boyd, member of the legislature from Spalding county.

"My aim is to give Griffin and Spalding county as live and interesting a newspaper as my experience can make it," Mr. Dudley said before his departure to his new field. "Not only from the standpoint of news, but from an advertising standpoint, I am going to try and make The Griffin Daily News a paper the entire state of Georgia will be proud of."

Active in Newspaper Work.

Mr. Dudley has been active in newspaper and magazine work in the United States for sixteen years. He has been editor of papers in Fort Smith, Ark., and Alton, Ill., and reporter, city editor, Sunday editor, telegraph editor and correspondent in the field for Denver, St. Louis and Chicago papers, including seven years of work for The Chicago Tribune. For three years he was in the Chicago office of the United Press association, during which time he "scooped" the world with Judge Landis' decision fining the Standard Oil company $29,000,000, and was first to the wires with the indictment of the great packers of the stock yards.

During Mr. Dudley's service in the field he enlisted as a soldier in the Colorado National Guard and wrote the story of the great Western Federation of Miners' strike of 1903 from inside the lines of General Sherman Bell. For several years he held rank as a commissioned officer in the Illinois Naval Reserves.

Partner of Kaufman.

Leaving the editorial side of newspaper work, Mr. Dudley became a partner of Herbert Kaufman in the advertising agency business, and is still associated with Mr. Kaufman in a number of large enterprises. For a year he was in the service of the Street Railways Advertising company, of New York, of which Barron G. Collier, well known in Atlanta, is president. He is married and has one child, a boy. He is a son of Colonel George Warren Dudley, of St. Louis.

Griffin is a manufacturing city of approximately 10,000 people, forty miles south of Atlanta, in one of the richest and most attractive counties of Georgia.

NUEVO LAREDO MARKED BY SMOLDERING RUINS

Trouble Across River From Laredo, Tex., Over—No Second Attempt to Destroy Bridge.

Laredo, Texas, April 25.—After a night of suppressed excitement and anxiety, Laredo this morning awoke to the realization that the trouble across the river was over. A few smoldering ruins still showed the presence of fire, but most of the fires were out, either extinguished by the rain that fell during the early part of the night, or dying out for lack of material to burn.

None of the Mexicans returned to Nuevo Laredo this morning. A few adventurous young men crossed the international bridge, but there was nothing to see but the ruins of the buildings.

A saloon belonging to Dario Sanchez, a citizen of the United States, and a resident of Laredo, was saved from the flames, although the other buildings in the same block were destroyed. The drug store of Shelby Theriot, American vice consul, suffered no damage, although buildings directly in front of it were completely destroyed.

A conservative estimate of the damage done places the loss at nearly $100,000. Although many of the buildings burned were the property of poor men and were all they had. Some of the property owners who suffered the most had contributed large sums to the federal cause, some of it willingly, although the greater part was in the form of forced "contributions."

During the night no attempt was made to fire or blow up either of the bridges across the Rio Grande. This may, in part, be due to the fact that the railroad bridge was brilliantly illuminated by headlights from two locomotives, while the international bridge was lighted from a searchlight made from a moving picture projector, which flashed from the piers and approaches on the Mexican side. The guards at the bridges and the patrols through the streets reported all quiet during the night. In fact, a steady rain for some time drove all who had no business indoors for shelter, and after 10 o'clock the streets were practically deserted, except for soldiers and police.

Two Mexicans were shot yesterday in attempting to destroy the bridges. Some of the more nervous citizens fear another visit of the federals to attack Laredo itself, but army officials, though every precaution is being taken, do not believe there is any danger.

It was definitely ascertained today that the wild shooting of the Mexicans had done no damage on the American side.

DANIEL-DEARING.

Millen, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—A beautiful home wedding, a loving circle of relatives and friends and a happy bride and groom made the sum total of the charming event which took place at the home of Mrs. R. G. Daniel Wednesday evening.

Miss Julia Daniel and Mr. Monroe Dearing, of Athens, were the contracting parties.

Just before the bridal party came down the stairs "At Dawning" was sung by Mrs. E. F. Jones. Then Mendelssohn's wedding march was played as the party entered the parlor. During the ceremony Lohengrin's "Chorus" was softly played. The maids of honor were Misses Kate Dearing and Paulina Daniel. Mrs. Charlie Wilcox was matron of honor. Mr. Harry Dearing and Mr. Brantley Daniel entered and took their places by the bridesmaids. The bride entered on the arm of her father.

Miss Daniel comes of one of Millen's most prominent families, and added to her beauty is a rare personal charm which has made her a social favorite in Millen and Savannah.

Mr. Monroe Dearing is a scion of an old southern family.

Mr. and Mrs. Dearing will be at home to their friends at Athens after May 15.

RIVERS-HOWARD.

Thomson, Ga., April 25.—(Special.)—A lovely marriage was that Tuesday morning of Miss Virginia Rivers and Mr. Fred Howard, of Dearing, Ga. The ceremony was performed at the Baptist church by Dr. W. H. Young, assisted by Rev. Albert Howard, of Wrens.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Boyd Rivers.

Miss Gertie Wars was the maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Miss Norma Watson, Miss Ada Hawes, Miss Nina Burnside and Miss Hattie Ruth Farmer, of Augusta.

The best man was Dr. Samms, of Dearing, and the ushers were J. B. Boyd, Jr., W. C. Bentley, Leon Farmer, of Augusta, and Eben Smith, of Wrens.

Mrs. C. A. Calhoun, of Washington, played the wedding march. Mrs. R. F. Butler sang "Because I Love You" and "The Song of the Heart."

Mr. and Mrs. Howard are spending their honeymoon in Florida. They will make Dearing their home, where the groom is cashier of the Bank of Dearing. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Lucy Boyd Rivers, of Thomson.
