NEXT FRANK TRIAL MAY BE HELD IN CHATHAM COUNTY

Believing Their Client Will Secure Another Chance, Lawyers Declare Savannah Desirable Place.

WITH BITTER SARCASM RUBE ARNOLD ARRAIGNS PROSECUTION'S TACTICS

Attributes Conviction to Race Persecution, Biased Jury and Corrupt Witnesses. Dorsey Next, Then Hooper Rosser Concludes.

So confident are they of success in their efforts to gain a new trial, counsel for Leo M. Frank's defense already are looking forward to Savannah as the city in which to stage the anticipated second arraignment of their client.

The defense was in high spirits yesterday afternoon over the force and strength of Mr. Arnold's second-day argument before Judge Roan, in the state library. Upon adjournment at the o'clock in the afternoon Messrs. Arnold and Rosser left the capitol, frankly expressing their expectation of securing a new trial.

If a new trial is granted on grounds of prejudice and mob feeling, there will unquestionably be a change of venue. In this case, Atlanta is decided upon by the defense as being the most logical place in which to hold a secon trial. The decision upon a change of venue will be reached by attorneys and the presiding Judge in conference.

Looking to Savannah.

It is said that an investigation is being promoted even this early into Savannah as a logical place for change of venue, which will probably be brought about in case of a new trial. Neither Mr. Rosser nor Mr. Arnold would verify this rumor.

They said to a Constitution reporter, however, that Savannah is a most desirable place in which to hold a second trial, and that, in all probability, the venue would be changed to that city. Its distance from Atlanta and the natural lack of interest the people had likely taken in the Frank case would make it the logical point, they intimated.

"There would be no fever of excitement, no prejudice, no sensationalism as has been noted locally," they said.

In case a new trial and change of venue are granted, the task of prosecution will be upon the shoulders of the solicitor general of the circuit to which the venue has been shifted. In this event, it will be merely a matter of courtesy for the solicitor of the new circuit to grant Solicitor Dorsey the privilege to prosecute.

The defense of Frank, it is rumored, will try to balk this in case they are successful, by pleading that Dorsey was unfair in his matter of prosecuting Frank, and that it would be unjust for him to participate in the new trial. This, however, has not been verified.

Arnold Charges Race Persecution.

Perhaps the most dramatic utterance in Colonel Arnold's speech Saturday was his declaration that the Frank trial was akin in many respects to the crucifixion of Christ.

"It is the most horrible persecution of a Jew since the death of Christ," he said.

Through his argument frequent and wide reference was made to racial prejudice which he alleged existed poignantly in the trial of Frank, and to which he attributed the greatest effect in Frank's conviction.

"Everywhere," he said, "you heard these who believed in his guilt refer to him as that damned Jew." No one spoke of the merits of the case. He was always, 'that damned Jew,' and nothing else."

Because of repeated reference to certain evidence submitted by the prosecution, Mr. Arnold was forced to discontinue his speech when a number of women attaches of the state library appeared in the room to exhibit in their duties. The hearing was then continued until 9 o'clock Monday morning.

Assails Detectives.

Much of Arnold's speech was devoted to attacks upon Solicitor Dorsey and the detective department, who, he said, bounded Frank like a pack of wolves, driven on by prejudice and fear that if they shifted to a negative, public opinion would cause them disaster.

"If there ever was a case in which the scene of prosecution was sent out to dragnet in the nose and slime of degeneracy, it was in the Frank trial. Look at Dalton, for instance. He even had a face like a mule and you could tell from his very face and speech and deportment that his mind was like a mud.

"They put him on the stand to bolster up the story of the diabolical Conley. Dalton, the filthy, amazing, unutterable Conley. The only reason Dalton's story was believed was because of the highly receptive attitude of the jury mind, which was willing and ready to believe anything against the defendant, against whom they and much of the public were prejudiced.

"Dalton begins as a thief and winds up as a moral ferret—and, sadly, is proud of the fact when he tells his miserable story. Your honor unfortunately erred in letting in such testimony, produced by such a person as Dalton. You must remember that Frank was being tried on purely a lone issue, and that issue alone.

Says State's Witnesses Rehearsed.

"Then, there was Dewey Howell, the little 15-year-old girl who had been sent to the home of the Good Shepherd in Cincinnati. After much hullabaloo and mystery, she went on the stand and testified that she had seen Frank talking to Mary Phagan and that he had put his hand on Mary's shoulder.

"We didn't cross-examine her. Neither did we cross-examine any of the other character witnesses introduced by the state. These witnesses

TAX ON INCOMES BEGINS SATURDAY

Washington, October 25.—The treasury department tonight issued the finally revised regulations for deduction of the new income tax at the source, on interest maturing on bonds, notes and similar obligations of corporations, joint stock companies or associations and insurance companies, classed by the department under the general term of "debtor" for collection purposes. The promulgation of the regulations followed an all-day series of conferences between Secretary McAdoo and his assistants.

The regulations embody various forms of certificates as to ownership, exemption, partnership, etc., and are technical in terms. Because of the short time allowed for the interpretation of the law and the issuance of these regulations, bringing the date so near November 1, when the deduction must begin, it is temporarily provided that on November 1, 1913, and for fifteen days thereafter interest coupons presented to a debtor need be accompanied only by temporary informal certificates.

Tax Begins Next Saturday.

A tax of 1 per cent will be deducted at the source beginning next Saturday from all incomes accruing and payable to every United States citizen residing at home or abroad and to every person residing in the United States, though not a citizen, which income may be derived from interest upon bonds and mortgages or deeds of trust or other similar obligations, including equipment, trust agreements and joint stock certificates of corporations, joint stock companies or associations and insurance companies, although such interest does not amount to $3,000, government obligations being excepted. Certificates claiming exemption may be filed by bond-holding individuals.

There are detailed provisions to guard against duplication of the withholding of the tax. The coupons or registered interest must be accompanied by certificates of ownership signed by each holder of bonds for each separate issue of bonds or obligations of each debtor. If the coupons are not accompanied by the prescribed certificates, the first bank or collecting agency receiving the coupons for collection, or otherwise, shall deduct and withhold the tax and attach to the coupons its own certificate with descriptive memoranda.

Debtors Must Deduct.

Debtors whose bonds may be registered must deduct the normal tax of 1 per cent from the accruing interest on all bonds before sending out checks for the interest to registered owners or before paying such interest upon interest orders until proper certificates claiming exemption are filed with the debtor or its fiscal agent.

The tax shall not be withheld, the regulations provide, on coupons or registered interest maturing and payable before March 1, 1913 though later presented for payment.

All persons, firms or corporations undertaking for accomodation or profit the collecting of the coupons or checks or bills of exchange for payment of interest or dividends upon foreign obligations must obtain a license of internal revenue commissioner and give bond. These licenses first receiving for-eign income for collection will withhold the 1 per cent tax and endorse that fact to relieve subsequent holders or purchasers from withholding the tax.

Failure to obtain license or comply with the regulations is made punishable by a $5,000 maximum fine or one year maximum imprisonment, or both. There are severe penalties for knowingly making false statements or false representations to obtain any allowance of reduction for himself or any other person.

Non-resident foreigners are not subject to taxation on income from interest-bearing bonds if they furnish proper certificates.

WITHOUT A QUIVER WILBURN RECEIVES DEATH SENTENCE

Verdict Is Received in Silence by Crowd in the Courtroom at Gray—Condemned Man Now in Bibb County Jail.

APPEAL FOR NEW TRIAL IS MADE BY ATTORNEYS

Nick Wilburn Sentenced to Hang on First Anniversary of Killing of King—Mrs. King's Trial Starts Monday

Gray, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—As calmly as though he were only one of the spectators, Nick Wilburn, the 22-year-old farmer boy convicted of the murder on December 12, 1912, of his kinsman, James A. King, and accused of violating the chastity of King's home, heard the death sentence passed upon him by Judge J. B. Park.

His attorneys immediately moved for a new trial, and the hearing was set for December 4 at Milledgeville, where Judge Park will be holding court in December.

Attorney Cooper on leaving for Macon tonight, announced that he believed he could obtain a new trial on the ground of kinship alleged by him between Jurors John A. and W. L. Middlebrooks and One Middlebrooks, of Houston county, who married Miss Sallie King, sister of the slain man.

Other reasons will also be given by the defense as a basis for a new trial, but no direct intimation of what they will be has been announced.

The youth was sentenced to hang on Friday, December 12, one year to a day from the death of King. The jury was out only fifty minutes, and reached a verdict of guilty, with no recommendation for mercy, on one ballot.

"Now that the verdict has been read," said Judge Park, before passing sentence, "I can say what I think about the case.

"Mr. Wilburn," he said, "I think that no one but you is responsible for the death of Mr. King. I could not give an opinion before the verdict, and I have given you every advantage under the law from the time the motion for a change of venue came before me last April.

"I am sorry such a crime has been committed in our section, and I am sorry for you."

Judge Park, who in his three years on the Ocmulgee circuit has never been reversed by either the supreme court or the court of appeals, told Wilburn that he believed that he had been given a fair and impartial trial.

Attorney John H. Cooper, of Macon, leading counsel for the defense, finished his speech at 10:25 o'clock Saturday morning, and at 10:55 the jury finished his charge and the jury went out.

Wilburn was taken to the Bibb county jail in an automobile by ex-Sheriff Bob Ridgeway this afternoon. The condemned man will remain there pending the hearing for a new trial.

Wilburn's Aged Father in Court.

John M. Wilburn, the aged father of the youth, sat in court with him throughout the trial, but his mother was never present. Father and son refused to allow her to undergo the ordeal of hearing the trial, and she remained at her home near Round Oak.

"My boy will never hang; I'm no more afraid of their hanging him than I am of their hanging me," said the father after the verdict had been returned and the death sentence passed.

"I told my boy to 'make his mark,' might come like a man; that it would not do any good to break down, and that I wanted him to bear up and I am proud he did. Somebody killed King, but my boy did not," he added.

There was a small crowd in the courtroom Saturday. Only a fourth of the people who jammed the room during the other days of the trial were present, and the tenseness of the atmosphere had relaxed.

While Attorney Cooper closed in a calm and dispassionate plea for the jury to follow the law, and while he also pleaded the youth of the prisoner, he at one time waxed vehement.

"I am against mob law," he said, "but I'd rather see this boy taken out in the woods and shot dead than to see him mobbed here in court by law."

Trial of Mrs. King Monday.

Following Wilburn's conviction, Mrs. Kate King, wife of the dead man, will go on trial Monday morning as an accessory before the fact. Her attorneys, W. D. McNeill and J. A. Henderson, stated that they were ready, and the state is also prepared, that is with the case.

It is believed that there will be even larger crowds at her trial than at Wilburn's, and interest seems to center around it. That the trial will be a hard fought, or even more so, if possible, than was Wilburn's is evident.

When court convened Saturday Attorney Cooper, fully recovered from his exhaustion of the previous day, returned to his speech.

He seemed as vigorous as ever, but devoted himself to calmer pleas, touching up points of law and asking the judge to charge the jury on certain phases.

From a lengthy plea for the judge to follow the law, which he said would result in Wilburn's freedom, Attorney Cooper took up a strong arraignment of circumstantial evidence, declaring that no man ought to be hung up on it.

As he ended, Judge Park delivered his charge, bringing out the points of the law applicable to the case and telling the jury they could return a verdict of guilty, or one of acquittal, or could find the prisoner guilty and recommend him to the mercy of the court. The judge took about forty minutes for his charge.

Court then adjourned for dinner, and at 12:45 the jury sent for the judge.

Judge Warns Crowd.

Dictator Huerta Orders Mexico to Polls Today; After the Election the United States Will Act

MONTEREY FALLS BEFORE ASSAULT OF MEXIC REBELS

1,000 PERSONS KILLED AND AS MANY WOUNDED

Artillery Fire Destroyed Property Valued at Millions. The Fighting Was Continuous for Several Days.

Brownsville, Texas, October 25.—"Monterey has been captured." This was the message received today by Consul-general Ismael Lauro Blanco, at Matamoros, opposite here. It came from his Chief of Staff Manuel Muglea, who is today at Reynosa, 60 miles from here, on the railroad line to Monterey.

A field telephone which constitutionalist claim runs to within 15 miles of Monterey, and stories of wounded and refugees arriving at points back of the front, confirm the city's fall, according to Matamoros advices.

The constitutionalists began closing in on Monterey October 15 with 2,000 men, under Pablo Gonsales, 1,000 of the veterans of Torreon, under Colonel Contreras, and 300 men under Colonel Coss. Against this attacking army of 3,500 were pitted 2,000 federals.

Hushed City on All Sides.

The first skirmish was apparently at Morales, 39 miles from Monterey, on the 15th. That same day canonnading began about the city. Early in the fighting the constitutionalists divided, part of them rushing Monterey from the west and part from the east, one division getting into the city over the lines of the international railway, while the other captured San Lusito, a suburb.

A murderous artillery fire is said to have been poured across the city, killing or wounding many persons and destroying millions of dollars' worth of property. Although the reports do not specify, it seems that this big gun fire came from both sides.

Consul Severo De La Garza, constitutionalist, wounded at Morales, who arrived in Matamoros today, said that the constitutionalist besiegers had only three machine guns.

Fighting is said to have been continuous from October 15 until last night. Loss of life is placed at 1,000 with another even thousand wounded, but whether this was all soldiers or included many helpless non-combatants, as in the bombardment of Mexico City, the dispatches do not say.

Constitutionalist General Mugia was probably fatally wounded in the opening day's fight, being shot four times. General Luis Carranza, brother of the constitutionalist leader, directed the campaign, which included an elaborate network of small forces scattered far to the north and the south of Monterey, to hold back relief from the city.

In the Morales fight, Captain De La Garza said, a federal relief train, carrying 150 soldiers, was captured with all equipment. This train was from Salmasan, north of Monterey.

HUERTA ARRESTS FOES IN MEXICAN CAPITAL

Mexico City, October 25.—General Don Leon Garza Martinez, former chief of staff of General Mondragon while the latter was minister for war, was arrested today on a charge of being concerned in a plot to creat a disturbance in the federal capitol on the occasion of the elections tomorrow.

Manuel Madero, a cousin of the late President Francisco Madero, was arrested today at Saltillo on account of his alleged connection with a recently discovered plot in that city against the federal government.

The arrests in this city constituted the first indication that had come to the surface of any possible trouble.

It is not expected that any outbreak will occur but troops in the capitol have been held in readiness for instant action and other emergency measures have been taken to preserve peace.

The precincts have been instructed not to allow anything that would conflict with the right of the citizens to cast their votes.

Daniel and Evaristo Madero, relatives of the late president, who previously had been arrested, were released today. Gustavo Madero, they will be sent to Vera Cruz, where they are to be imprisoned pending their trial on charges of sedition.

HUERTA ORDERS DIAZ TO COME TO CAPITAL

Vera Cruz, Mexico, October 25.—General Felix Diaz today received a "request" from the Mexican government to proceed at once to the federal capital.

Colonel Manuel Vidaurraga, secretary to the Mexican minister of war, arrived here on a special train with the invitation, which was practically an order for Diaz to accompany him to Mexico City.

General Diaz did not decide immediately to comply and no effort was Leading Figures in Mexico Crisis

Conditions in Mexico City were never more unsettled than at the present time, and the future attitude of the United States toward the republic is a topic for endless comment. General Felix Diaz, Manuel Madero and Frederico Gamboa by entering the presidential race naturally stirred up many smoldering antagonisms, and President Huerta's regime has been tottering on the brink of disaster for weeks. Diaz has always had the support of the followers of his uncle, Porfirio Diaz, former president, and many Americans believe that he would meet with less opposition than Huerta at the head of affairs than the ill-started republic. Calero, who is a wealthy owner of real estate, has held several important governmental positions. Huerta's opponents assert that the president has sought to influence the army unfairly to support his candidature against all other presidential aspirants.

BLOODY REGIMES BARRED BY WILSON

Western Hemisphere Dedicated to Self-Governed Nations, Says President—He Touches on Mexico.

Swarthmore, Pa., October 25.—President Wilson, in a speech here today, proclaimed the doctrine that the whole western hemisphere should be devoted to one sacred purpose—"that nowhere can any government endure which is stained by blood or supported by anything but the consent of the governed."

It was while extolling the spirit with which William Penn sought to establish "a free commonwealth" in America that the president incidentally revealed his thoughts on present-day problems. His utterances, it is known, reflect the ideas which the Washington administration is preparing to announce to the nations of the world in a formal note on the policy of the United States towards Mexico. The president spoke in a big tent not far from the place where Penn landed. the exercises being commemorative also of founder's day at Swarthmore College.

"I would not be interested," said the president, "in celebrating the memory of William Penn, if his conquest had been merely a material one. Sometimes we have been laughed at, by foreigners in particular, for boasting of the size of the American continent, the size of our own domain as a nation; for they have, naturally, suggested that we did not make it.

Home of Self-Governed People.

"But I claim that every face and every man is as big as the thing he takes possession of, an dthat the size of Japan does not in any sense a standard of the size and capacity of the American people. But the extent of the American continent is not what gives America distinction in the annals of the world.

"But the professed purpose of the conquest which was to see to it that every foot of that land should be the home of free self-governed people, who should have a government in whatever which did not rest upon the consent of the governed, I would like to believe that all this hemisphere is devoted to the same sacred purpose and that nowhere can any government endure which is stained by blood or supported by anything but the consent of the governed.

"And the spirit of Penn will not be stayed. You cannot set limits to such knightly achievements. Perhaps the day is gone, their spirits stalk the earth carrying inspiration everywhere they go, and reminding men of the true lineage of those who have sought justice and liberty. It is no small matter, therefore, for a college to have as its patron saint a man who went out upon such an errand, and what I would like to ask you young people today is, how many of you have devoted yourselves to the like service? How many of you will volunteer to carry these spiritual messages of liberty to the world? How many of you will forego anything except your allegiance to that which is just and that which is right? We die but once, and we die without distinction if we are not willing to die the death of sacrifice. You can covet honor? You will never get it by serving yourself. Do you covet honor? You will get it only as the servant of mankind.

College a Nursery of Principle.

"You are not here merely to prepare to make a living. You are here to enrich the world and you impoverish yourself if you forget the errand. But what a man ought never to forget is that a college is a nursery of principle and of honor. So it seems to me there is no great difference in the ideals of the college and the ideals of the state.

PRESIDENT COMES TO ATLANTA TODAY

Woodrow Wilson Will Be in City for Twenty Minutes This Afternoon While En Route to Mobile.

President Woodrow Wilson, accompanied by Joseph Tumulty, his secretary, and a personal party, will arrive in Atlanta at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon over the Southern railway. The president's stay in Atlanta will be very brief, for the special upon which he is traveling is scheduled to leave here at 5:30. It is not probable that the president will leave his car "Columbia," during the twenty minutes he is here for a peek at the city in which he keeps the practice of law.

No arrangements have been made for receiving the president upon his arrival in Atlanta. However, it is expected that a number of his intimate friends in Atlanta will be at the station to shake hands.

Train on Way to Mobile.

The train will go to Mobile, where the president expects to arrive early Monday morning.

The first definitive announcement of the fact that President Wilson will be in Atlanta was received in a telegram from Clarence J. Owens, as follows:

"Mr. Clark Howell, Editor Constitution, Atlanta.—Official telegram from southern railway and Senator Fletcher, by rush message, announces that president's party has been enlarged by one car. Absolute certainty of his attendance. Be absolutely positive in full announcement to the press.

"CLARENCE J. OWENS."

Ewing Will Arrive.

Hon. Robert Ewing, of New Orleans, national committeeman from Louisiana, will arrive in Atlanta at 10:45 o'clock this morning, to join President Wilson's party.

A special car has been engaged by prominent citizens, of Mobile who will arrive in Atlanta at 2:25 o'clock this afternoon in order to meet the president's party. Those arriving at that time are:

A. J. Thompson, M. J. McDermott, A. P. Bush, Hon. W. B. Inge, W. H. Monk, Hon. W. H. Ambrecht, S. J. Bloch, Hon. Marx Mahorner, John T. Cochran, and Don Farnsworth.

POWERS OF EUROPE EXCHANGING VIEWS ON MEXIC MUDDLE

NO AMERICAN ACTION TILL AFTER ELECTIONS

Then United States Will Declare Its Attitude to World. No European Interference to Be Tolerated in Mexico.

JOINT POLICY IS SOUGHT BY THE EUROPEAN POWERS

Paris, October 25.—Exchanges of views are taking place between various European powers concerning large economic interests in Mexico with the object of defining common policies there, especially a joint attitude after the elections, as it is understood that the government at Washington will decline to recognize a result which the European governments might consider provisionally unjust.

The initiative in the matter is understood to come from London.

It is pointed out here that the joint economic interests of Europe in Mexico exceed those of the United States. It is felt there should be a concerted policy on the part of the United States and Europe.

Washington, October 25.—Official Washington tonight awaits with keen interest the outcome of tomorrow's elections in Mexico under supervision of the Huerta provisional government, recognition of which already has been denied by the American government.

Interest in the outcome was enlivened by the news of the fall of Monterey into the hands of the rebel forces, and the departure of General Felix Diaz, one of the presidential candidates, and discussion of the reported determination of the Washington administration to notify foreign powers that any interference in Mexico would be regarded as an act unfriendly to the United States.

The Reported European Concert.

In the absence from Washington of President Wilson and Secretary Bryan the official government was silent, but reports from Paris that foreign powers were exchanging views as a proposition to co-operate with this nation in some concerted Mexican policy following tomorrow's election, was received with marked interest in government circles.

Significance was attached to the dispatches from abroad, coming on the heels of reports from Washington that the president and secretary of state were at work on a pronunciamento which would define this nation's attitude with relation to the policy in Mexico of the foreign nations and also of the statement issued in Philadelphia by Thomas Bacon, of the senate foreign relations committee, to the effect that the interests of the United States in Mexico are "infinitely greater" than that of the other great powers.

It was the prevailing opinion that once the elections were over and the policy of the Huerta government for the future revealed, there may be found a ground for an international understanding in dealing with the perplexing situation.

May Be Trouble in Mexico.

PICKPOCKETS BUSY AT FOOTBALL GAME

Ray Baumberger, twenty-six years old, who gave his address as No. 32 West Baker street, was arrested during the Georgia-Virginia football game at Ponce de Leon park yesterday afternoon by detectives Cowan and Osborn, charged by F. L. Wooten, of No. 275 Moreland avenue, with picking his pocket and stealing a gold watch and a stickpin.

When taken to police headquarters Baumberger stoutly denied any knowledge of the theft, stating that he was an employee of the Monroe Electric company and that his employers would give an excellent account of his reputation. Upon his stating that he had a room-mate named W. T. Farley, officers Cowan and Osborn went to the rooming house of the two, and promptly placed Farley under arrest as an accomplice, charging him with suspicion.

When searched by the police a watch was discovered on Farley's person, which the police believe to be the one lost by Wooten, although the latter has not yet identified it as his property.

When notified that Baumberger and Farley were under arrest, J. R. Smith and E. W. White, the last named being the manager of the Monroe Electric company furnished bond for the two young men in the sum of $500 each. Attorney William Smith has been retained to defend the alleged pickpockets.

Walraven Makes Capture.

All honor of the capture of Baumberger is due to ex-councilman Dan Walraven, for it was he who held the alleged pickpocket until city detectives arrived.

A large crowd had packed the grand stand at Ponce de Leon and there was much enthusiasm. Men stood up and shouted when the play became exciting. Mr. Walraven was seated just next to a young man, who later developed to be Wooten. On Wooten's left sat Baumberger.

Presently Baumberger arose and as he did so a gold watch chain dropped on the seat. Mr. Walraven noticed it, but said nothing. Baumberger soon returned and sat down again. Not long after this the entire grand stand was thrown into a panic by the sound of Wooten shouting, "Pickpocket! Thief!"

Mr. Walraven arose and openly accused Baumberger of the theft of the watch. An argument followed and Baumberger asserted his innocence and told Walraven that he was a "small town guy."

"Never mind that," said Mr. Walraven, "don't you try to get away, for you can't do it," and he took hold of him.

City Detectives Cowan and Osburn attracted by the commotion, hurried up and Mr. Walraven stated his grounds for accusing Baumberger.

More Pickpocket Victims.

Dr. William C. Warren, of 360 West Peachtree street, reported to the police Saturday afternoon that his pockets had been picked to the extent of $25 at the football game at Ponce de Leon park Saturday afternoon. He had no clue to the robber.

Another victim of pickpockets came to police station Saturday night minus his entire big pocketbook, which earlier in the night had contained, he said, about $15. He said that while standing on a five points corner early in the night someone cut his pocket out of the back of his trousers and made away with the contents.

EDUCATIONAL MEETING WILL BE HELD TODAY

An educational mass-meeting at St. Paul Methodist church, in Humphries street, under the auspices of the Atlanta Normal and Industrial Institute (colored) will be held this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock for the purpose of raising a $1,000 fund needed by the institution in the furtherance of its work in this locality.

A. Montgomery, the general manager of the Coca-Cola Bottling Works of this city, will preside at the meeting.

Judge W. R. Hammond, H. M. Hastings, Rev. R. O. Flynn, Rev. W. R. Hendrix, Rev. Lincoln McDonald and other prominent speakers will deliver short talks during the afternoon.

CANAL IN NO DANGER FROM EARTHQUAKES

Washington, October 25.—Little danger, if any, to the Panama canal exists from earthquakes, in the opinion of Rev. F. A. Torndorf, of Georgetown university, a recognized authority on seismology. In a published statement today he takes issue on certain scientists, his chief views of certain scientists. He cannot see that the conformation of the earth at Panama will result in the conclusion that earth convulsions are to be feared.

"I do not believe there is any possible danger to the canal from earthquakes," said Dr. Torndorf. "I base this conclusion mainly on the past history of the isthmus of Panama, which shows that it is free from earthquakes. There have been serious disturbances in the Pacific to the south of Panama and in certain of the islands of that ocean, but there is nothing to indicate that Panama itself is subject to earthquakes.

"The recent tremors felt in the Canal Zone, Dr. Torndorf believes, were merely reflections of violent disturbances elsewhere in the Pacific ocean.

YOUNG GIRL IS HELD ON VAGRANCY CHARGE

Annie Howell, the petite 18-year-old Montgomery miss at whose instigation O. H. Harris and wife were bound over to a higher court, charged with seducing her and operating a disorderly house at No. 103 Mills street by Recorder Broyles in police court, was herself before the recorder yesterday afternoon to face a charge of vagrancy.

The young woman admitted that she had no means of obtaining support and that she was a frequent visitor for immoral purposes in Atlanta's leading hotels and that she had been warned to leave town. Judge Broyles bound the girl over to Judge Calhoun's court on a bond of $1,000.

It is altogether probable that the Howell girl will be sent to the Industrial Home for girls, which was but recently opened under the supervision of Professor T. A. Means. If so, she will be the first inmate.

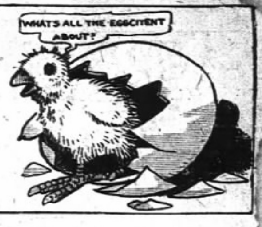
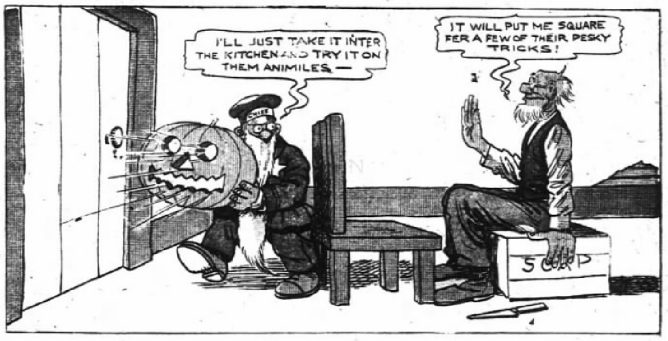
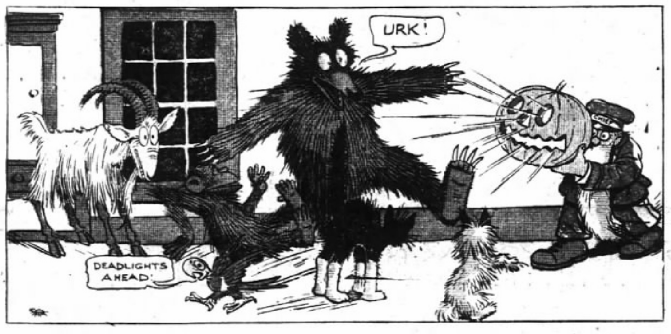
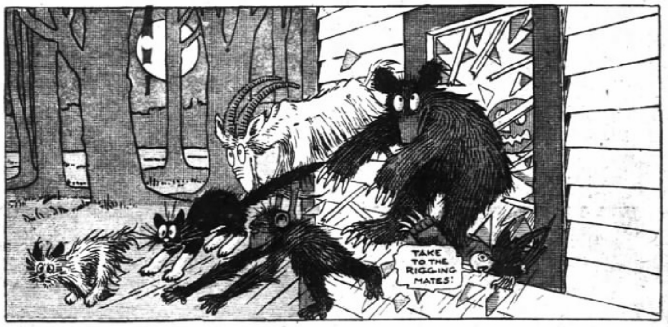
SUNDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1913.



HANK: AND HIS ANIMAL FRIENDS By Walt McDougall







cated tonight that election day might precipitate some trouble in certain parts of the republic, as dispatches reached the state department which indicated any cause for unusual alarm and few serious clashes were anticipated. Chief interest here in the elections is in the manner in which the returns will be handled and how the vote will be canvassed, in view of the overthrow by Huerta of the legislative body which is the legally constituted authority for review of the returns.

It was because of the dissolution of congress and the arrest of its members that the Washington administration gave notice that it could not recognize tomorrow's election. Whether Huerta will appoint a special election board to turn the ballots over to the supreme court or permit them to be reviewed by a new congress shown to have been chosen in the face of the returns, is not known here. Whatever method is resorted to, it was pointed out, would have no effect upon the determination of this government not to recognize the result.

To Keep in Touch With Mexico.

Plans were made tonight in the state department to keep in communication with Mexican points tomorrow as closely as possible. Secretary Bryan returned late Saturday to be at his office Sunday. Owing to the demoralized condition of the service of communication in Mexico, there was no expectation here that any definite news of the election would be known for many days. Returns, it was pointed out, eventually might show a majority for no candidate. In this contingency there has been discussion the possibility that General Huerta would still hold the reins of power and the legislature might be proclaimed and Huerta again chosen provisional president.

Numerous private advices reached Washington tonight confirming the fall of Monterey to the constitutionalists and this, it was believed, would have the effect of encouraging the revolting forces in other sections of the republic. Other advices told of several attacks upon planters in the vicinity of the city of San Luis Potosi by revolutionists. In this vicinity the federals in their operations were reported as not very effective.

GREAT BRITAIN WAITS RESULT OF ELECTIONS

London, October 25.—The British government is awaiting quietly the outcome of the Mexican elections, believing that they will help to solve the difficulties of that much perplexed country and that when once they have been disposed of the United States, Great Britain and the other interested powers will find a common ground for action tending to bring about peace.

At any rate, the British government does not wish to interfere and declares that it has not attempted in any way with the internal affairs of Mexico.

Every move it has made has been simply with the object of protecting its interests. Even now, while other European powers are sending warships to the disturbed area, it is pointed out, Great Britain has refrained from doing so because it does not believe that there is any danger.

So far as the relations of the United States and England are concerned, there has not been any development since Ambassador Walter H. Page visited Sir Edward Grey at the foreign office last Monday, and none is expected until after the results of the Mexican elections are known. Sir Edward Grey will not return to London until Tuesday, which tends to belie reports that there has been a serious strain.

Huerta Statement Received.

The British foreign office has received from Sir Lionel Carden, British minister to Mexico, a summary of Provisional President Huerta's statement to the foreign diplomats in Mexico City, but this omits several points which, coupled with the above, clarify the situation. Sir Lionel Carden had visited Huerta at the latter's request and had been assured that the provisional president would not be a candidate for election. Huerta also declared that he would not interfere with the election, but would maintain order and protect foreigners and their interests.

STATEMENT BY BACON ON MEXICAN SITUATION

Philadelphia, October 25.—President Wilson had no comment to make on the Mexican situation when he reached here today to speak at the dedication of Congress Hall.

On the special train bearing a delegation from both houses of congress the Mexican situation was a constant subject of conversation.

Senator Bacon, chairman of the committee on foreign relations, expressed his views on the international phases of the situation as brought about by the attitude of some European governments with reference especially to the sending of warships and the possibility that marines might have to be landed. Senator Bacon's view is that if any marines have to be landed in Mexico they should be American marines. He was the only one of the party who would express himself on the subject.

The interests of the United States in Mexico and Mexican affairs are indeed greater than the interests of the other great powers of the earth, and consequently we are principally concerned in the protection of matters involving the welfare of their subjects or citizens in Mexico have investments in industrial enterprises, and they naturally desire to see them protected. In this matter it is not a matter only of humanity but that feature is not a matter of great value connected with the influences of the particular kind of government which may have authority in Mexico that that feature is not a matter of great value connected with them. All they wish is protection for their property, subjects and citizens.

"What we fear is a vastly greater and more important interest. Our interests have, in the first place, more in the neighborhood of three times as many of the other foreigners put together, in addition we have great interests which has been any question of such action on our part.

The Pall Mall Gazette concludes that England can have no complicity with an European league to thwart the policy of the United States on the American continent.

The Globe says:

"England's only attitude in regard to Mexico is one of neutrality. Even Mr. Monroe's doctrine itself cannot compel England to refrain from recognizing a new government in Mexico if action has entrusted with the government.

"Great Britain has no desire or intention of picking a quarrel with any body over the question of Mexico," says The Globe, "the recognition of conditions in Mexico particularly concerns the United States, because it has her own commercial interests and the rights of her nationals are involved, she is not greatly concerned in the matter. Maybe Britain recognized Provisional President Huerta for reasons not particularly obvious, but this country does not share the illusions of Washington and the United States, that Mexico has reached the stage of constitutional government according to our ideas. Therefore England is content to recognize any form of government which is stable and promises security for the country.

"Inasmuch as Great Britain and the United States has become responsible in the last resort for the order and maintenance of her own interests, but those of other countries as well, that is in a difficult position, but one of its own seeking.

"It is inadvisable to take them snapishly when Britain is called to be the pinch of the burden they have voluntarily assumed."

The Globe thinks that the United States should accept the British assurances that he will not become a dictator.

HUERTA HAS PLANNED TO HOLD PRESIDENCY

Hermosillo, Mexico, October 25.—There will be no election in the state of Sonora tomorrow except in Guaymas, which is held by federals. Constitutionalist officials reiterated today the recent assertion that the federal General Venustiano Carranza, that the successful election of any candidate not recognized but would be "treated by constitutionalist adherents as a traitor to Mexico."

Conditions regarding the election are said to be similar in the entire state of Sonora.

General Carranza said despite Huerta's declarations to the contrary, he had so arranged matters that the ballots would show him to be the virtually unanimous choice of the electors.

MONTEREY FALLS BEFORE ASSAULT

made this morning to force him to accept the initiative.

Unless General Diaz alters his sentiments he will not return to the capital. The "invitation" was signed by Provisional President Huerta.

Whether Colonel Vidaurrasaga bore orders to arrest General Diaz was not known, but did not deliver a formal ultimatum to Huerta's invitation. This urged Diaz to go to the capital immediately, "for his own benefits as well as for that of the government." It was written in affectionate terms and bore the signature of Frederico Gamboa for the presidency.

Colonel Vidaurrasaga would be direct interference in the internal affairs of Mexico, a course which the British government is opposing.

As a matter of fact, the British policy is one of non-interference and by this means the foreign office's instructions to Sir Lionel Carden had told President Huerta that Great Britain intended him to support Frederico Gamboa for the presidency.

Other European powers, notably Germany, with which, however, no direct negotiations have taken place, still are quoted as supporting that view.

It was brought forward to the promised statement of Washington that the moment it is issued the differences between the views of the United States and Great Britain will be shown to be so slight that they will almost disappear.

LONDON EDITORS AWAKE TO PERIL OF SITUATION

London, October 26.—The Mexican situation now occupies the most prominent place in the public mind in the press of the British isles, and more particularly the American crisis. The United States and England as to the best policy to bring about order in that country.

So much is told in official circles here that differences between the United States and England could not in any way lead to any trouble.

Reports state here that any signs of ill-feeling should have been displayed over the situation. The main point out that England, like some other powers, has been in existence so as to be "special interests" for money, as he said bitterly resented this intimation. Even some 4,000 troops in barracks will be ready to support any attempt at disorder. Neither the government officials nor the candidates are making any trouble.

Order is Urged.

All the candidates have publicly exhorted their followers to do their duty at the polls, but to preserve orderly conduct. Mr. Crawley found on the third the total number of eligible voters must exercise their right to suffrage in order to make the election valid. Failing to do this sum, $2,000 went to the election void, whereupon General Huerta will continue as president of the interim until conditions permit of new elections.

There is no excitement in the capital tonight and only a mild interest is noticeable. The light vote is anticipated throughout the republic.

Senor Lascurain, minister of General Felix Diaz, doubt was expressed tonight that he would accept office. It was explained, however, that on account of the refusal of the federal officials to transmit telegraphic messages, Lascurain's orders were completely out of touch with Diaz.

Six Negroes Killed.

Garyville, La., October 25.—Six negro laborers met death and seven others were hurt, more or less seriously in this here today when a cow stepped in front of the train, upsetting a flat car and its freight into a six-foot ditch, the car toppled over into the ditch, pinning the struggling negroes beneath.

THAT RYAN CASH WENT TO MURPHY

Sulzer Says the Tammany Boss Received the $10,000, and That Murphy Then Cried for More Money.

New York, October 25.—"I never asked Ryan for money; I never said, 'Tell your father I'm the same old Bill.'" declared William Sulzer tonight in a speech to the voters of the sixth assembly district where he is campaigning for election to the legislature on the progressive ticket.

Sulzer declared that Allan A. Ryan, a witness at the impeachment trial, in Albany, in testifying that he had sent $10,000 when he was a candidate for governor, did not tell the whole story.

"I have made up my mind to tell it myself," said Sulzer. His only conversation with Ryan during the campaign was a brief one over the telephone after John Delaney, personal representative of Thomas F. Murphy, leader of Tammany hall, had called Ryan up from Sulzer's office, he said.

Alleges Murphy Got $10,000.

"I gave that $10,000 to Mr. Delaney," Sulzer continued, "and he took it uptown and gave it to Mr. Murphy. Late that afternoon I saw Mr. Murphy at Delmonico's. During our conversation he said, 'Did John give you the ten from Ryan?' Mr. Murphy replied, 'Yes, that's right, but it's kept in the bucket. You will have to do better than that.'

"So far as I know, and I am pretty well advised, Mr. Murphy has never counted for that $10,000 any more than for the $125,000 which I refused, and which he accepted from Judge Hasbrouck.

Sulzer started his explanation of the Ryan contribution tonight by declaring that after he was nominated for governor Murphy had no intention of helping him to get campaign funds. Sulzer declared that Murphy said he "kept special interests" for money, as he said bitterly resented this intimation. Even some 4,000 troops in barracks will be ready to support any attempt at disorder. Neither the government officials nor the candidates are making any trouble.

All the candidates have publicly exhorted their followers to do their duty at the polls, but to preserve orderly conduct. DEATH HAS CALLED TO DR. A. M. WINN OF LAWRENCEVILLE

Lawrenceville, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—Dr. A. M. Winn, a wealthy retired physician and a confederate veteran, died here at midnight, after a lingering illness. He is survived by his wife, one daughter, Miss Annie Winn, of Lawrenceville, and three brothers, Hon. Thomas E. Winn, of Lawrenceville; Rev. W. M. Winn, of Nemon, and Judge Samuel J. Winn, of Atlanta. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

FELIX DIAZ PROTECTED BY SPECIAL ENVOY LIND

Mexico City, October 25.—Foreign Minister Mohene said tonight that while he had no official knowledge, interested had come to him that General Felix Diaz had appealed for protection to John Lind at Vera Cruz, and he believed through him was given a free pass to the American consul.

No danger threatened General Diaz, said Minister Mohene, and he added that he could not understand why General Diaz had asked protection of a foreign country.

WILBURN RECEIVES DEATH SENTENCE

Park complimented the people of Jones county on the order which had been marked by the case during the progress of the trial. He told them that he would countenance no approval or disapproval of the verdict, whatever it might be.

"If you people show the same good order during the reading of the verdict as you have done during the trial you will sink your praises in other counties," he said, "and I want to ask these newspaper men here to tell the entire world what good order has been observed by the citizens in the most exciting trial held in this section."

"I'm sorry for old man Wilburn," was the usual comment, "I'm sorry for the boy, too."

Ends Hard Legal Battle.

On all sides praise was given Attorney Cooper for his hard fight, and also for Solicitor Joseph E. Pottle, for the masterful way in which he had arranged the state's evidence and brought it before the jury.

Both attorneys were assisted by able counsel. Dean and Dean, of Macon, and Judge J. C. Barron, of Gray, aided the defense, while the solicitor was assisted by Attorneys Holmes, Johnson and J. B. Jackson.

Wilburn Refuses to Talk.

"I haven't," was Wilburn's only reply when asked if he had anything to say why sentence of death should not be passed upon him.

Those were the only words he had uttered in the courtroom, and they were spoken in a quiet and even tone that caused no disappointment to spectators, all of whom leaned forward as the judge addressed the convicted man. Attorney Cooper then arose and pleaded for a life sentence, claiming the state had only weak evidence and that most of it was circumstantial.

Judge Park stated that he could not give anything but the death sentence and after a few kind words to the boy and for his parents, passed sentence, prefacing it with "I'm only the mouthpiece of the people of Georgia in this but it's always hard for me to sentence a man."

Why?

There is a use for everything.
The wisest men tell me.
This may be very true, by jing,
But why is a goatee?

CANDIDATES EXHORTED BY DICTATOR HUERTA

General Calls Candidates to the Palace and Issues His Final Instructions to Them.

Mexico City, October 25.—As a final preliminary to the holding of the general elections tomorrow all the candidates present in the capital gathered this afternoon at the national palace at the call of President Huerta to discuss questions relating to the future conduct of the candidates. As a result of the conference General Huerta announced his intention to make a formal proclamation embodying the agreements arrived at.

These agreements in general terms were that the candidates aside by the results of tomorrow's voting, should any candidate be shown to have polled enough votes to constitute a majority the others are to assist him in pacifying the country by placing it on a sound financial and industrial basis.

On the other hand, should there not be enough votes cast to fulfill the requirements of the law and the elections for that reason be declared of no effect, all the conferees are to aid General Huerta in every possible way to accomplish the same ends, pending the calling of new elections.

Candidates at Conference.

The conference was attended by Federico Gamboa, presidential candidate of the Catholic party, David De la Fuente, the Republican presidential candidate, and Manuel Calero, candidate of the liberal party. Jose Maria Lozano, vice presidential candidate on the ticket headed by Felix Diaz, the latter's generals Rascon, Dr. Gregorio Mondisabel and Federico Magallanes, the anticipated vice presidential candidates. The conference lasted for two hours harmonious, all the candidates pledging themselves to the agreement.

All preparations have been completed for the elections of president and vice president, deputies and senators. Certain instructions have been distributed to the committees who will preside over the polling places. The police assigned to the various districts, have been instructed to observe most strictly neutrality. In addition, some 4,000 troops in barracks will be ready to support any attempt at disorder. Neither the government officials nor the candidates are making any trouble.

Order is Urged.

All the candidates have publicly exhorted their followers to do their duty at the polls, but to preserve orderly conduct. Mr. Crawley found on the third the total number of eligible voters must exercise their right to suffrage in order to make the election valid. Failing to do this sum, $2,000 went to the election void, whereupon General Huerta will continue as president of the interim until conditions permit of new elections.

There is no excitement in the capital tonight and only a mild interest is noticeable. The light vote is anticipated throughout the republic.

Senor Lascurain, minister of General Felix Diaz, doubt was expressed tonight that he would accept office. It was explained, however, that on account of the refusal of the federal officials to transmit telegraphic messages, Lascurain's orders were completely out of touch with Diaz.

Six Negroes Killed.

Garyville, La., October 25.—Six negro laborers met death and seven others, more or less seriously injured here today when a cow stepped in front of the train, upsetting a flat car and its freight into a six-foot ditch, the car toppled over into the ditch, pinning the struggling negroes beneath.

BLACKHEADS AND PIMPLES ON FACE

Would Itch and Burn. Caused Great Disfigurement. Also Had Dandruff on Scalp. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured Perfectly.

R. F. D. No. 2, Box 46, Matthews, Ga. — "For three years or more I was troubled with pimples and blackheads. At first my face would itch and burn and then the pimples would break out. They looked almost as if I had measles, causing great disfigurement. I had a bad scalp and was troubled with dandruff. My hair fell out very red and sore. Then they festered and came to a head and large boils would come on my chin and neck.

"I also had dandruff which caused my scalp to itch and burn. It itched and burned so that I had to scratch. My hair was irritated. The dandruff scaled off and showed plainly in my hair. It also caused my hair to break off and become very thin. I used several remedies which did not cure and gave but little relief. After I received a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment I began using them according to directions. I secured two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment which cured me perfectly." (Signed) Miss Willie M. Walker, July 31, 1912.

What you buy a 25c toilet soap think of the advantages Cuticura Soap possesses over the most expensive toilet soap ever made. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Eczema is Only Skin Deep

Proven by D. D. D.

A few skin troubles originate in the blood. But very few. Dr. Bruns, Recommended Health Author, a leading writer on medical subjects, says:

"We shall learn to make headway with skin disease when we learn two things: First, that eczema does not come from impure blood; second, that external treatment must have as much stress laid upon it as internal.

Get busy on and clear up your skin. Stop that itching and burning. Drive out those pimples.

Make up your mind to start now and give yourself a smooth, velvet complexion.

You can do it with the aid of the wonderful D. D. D. Disease origin—a cooling, refreshing lotion—not a salve or grease—to soothe your tender skin, opens the pores, drives out the old impurities and gives you a skin like a baby, smooth and clear.

All druggists have D. D. D. We sell it on a positive no-pay guarantee. If you don't risk a cent. Don't suffer another day. Call at our store today. Ask also about D. D. D. Soap—best for tender skin.

PYTHIANS PREPARE FOR DISTRICT CONVENTION

Delegates From Every Lodge in the District Are Expected to Attend.

The Pythians of Atlanta are putting everything in readiness for the district convention to be held in this city on next Wednesday.

Preparations are being made for a large gathering of visiting Pythians, as delegates from every Pythian lodge in the fifth congressional district are expected to be in attendance.

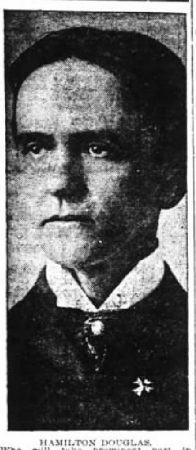
The afternoon session, beginning at 3 o'clock, will be devoted to business matters. At this session a movement will be put on foot to build a new Pythian castle hall in Atlanta. For some time past the various lodges of the city have had under advisement the beginning of such a movement, and it is expected that the convention here next week will outline and put in motion some concerted action along this line.

The night session of this convention will be devoted solely to entertainment and sociability, and elaborate arrangements are being made for the entertainment of the large crowd of Pythians that is expected to be in attendance.

All of the grand lodge officers of this state have been invited, and a good many have announced their intention to be on hand. Those who have been placed on the program and will address the Atlanta Knights are Grand Chancellor Miller S. Bell, from Milledgeville; Grand Vice Chancellor A. M. Stanley, commissioner of commerce and labor, state capitol, and Grand Prelate Troy Beacham, from Athens.

In addition to these distinguished knights from out of town, several of the local prominent knights have been placed on the program, among whom are Colonel James W. Austin, Colonel Shepard Bryan and Colonel Hamilton Douglas.

The sessions of the convention will be held at the castle hall, Kiser building.



HAMILTON DOUGLAS,
Who will take prominent part in Pythian Convention Program.

DRAMA LEAGUE ISSUES FIRST INDORSEMENT

"She Stoops to Conquer" Is First Play of Atlanta's Season to Have League's Sanction.

Annie Russell appearing at the Atlanta theater Monday night will be the first star of the season of 1913-14 to receive the indorsement of the Drama league, and "She Stoops to Conquer," in which Miss Russell appears will be the first play of the season bearing the league's sanction.

Unqualified indorsement is given by the Drama league both to Miss Russell and to the two plays in which she will be seen in her Atlanta engagement, "She Stoops to Conquer" and "The Rivals." The indorsement is announced today by the Atlanta center to the Drama league, in accordance with a bulletin issued from the national headquarters of the league. The complete bulletin reads as follows:

BULLETIN OF THE DRAMA LEAGUE.

PLAY — "She Stoops to Conquer," by Oliver Goldsmith.

COMPANY — Miss Annie Russell's Old English Comedy company.

CYNOSURE — As performed by Miss Annie Russell and her admirable company, "She Stoops to Conquer" is not simply a classic more or less dull, which literary conscience urges one to attend, but a brisk and sparkling comedy that calls forth spontaneous laughter. The acting shows true humor, without travesty or farcical treatment. Even young Marlow, generally a prig, becomes really human. The delightful eighteenth century manners are intelligently and skillfully portrayed. The stage settings are accurate, unobtrusive and in good taste.

MILLEDGEVILLE WOMEN ORGANIZE STRONG CLUB

Milledgeville, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—A Woman's club has been organized in Milledgeville, a large number of representative women of the city being members. The club is called "The Milledgeville Woman's club," and its purpose is to stimulate self-improvement and to work for community betterment.

Mrs. M. M. Parks has been elected president of the club. At the next meeting it will be decided what line of study will receive attention for the coming year and departments will be formed for those primarily interested in domestic art and science, child study, library extension, music, civics and other subjects that will interest the wide-awake women of Milledgeville.

Mrs. M. M. Parks and Mrs. Miller S. Bell were chosen to represent the club at the meeting of the Georgia State Federation, with which it will unite, to be held at Cuthbert later on.

CHARLES LAMAR DENIES MARRIAGE OF HIS SON

Charles A. Lamar, of Atlanta, in a communication to The Constitution, denies that his son James H. Lamar was married on April 6, of this year, to Miss Dollie Bencken, as stated in the newspapers of that date. "No such marriage occurred," writes Mr. Lamar.

Little Women Will Appeal To All Atlanta Children

Students of the Atlanta schools, public and private, will be much in evidence at the performances of "Little Women," when the dramatization of Louisa M. Alcott's much-loved story comes to the Atlanta theater for three days, beginning Wednesday, November 12. Arrangements have been made by an advance representative of the attraction for the handling of large delegations from the Agnes Scott Institute, Washington seminary, Cox college, Miss Hanna's school and Miss Woodberry's school, and owing to the strong appeal of the story for young people of both sexes it is safe to predict that the public schools will be equally well represented.

"Little Women" has found tremendous favor with parents and teachers throughout the country as a play that carries neither "problem" nor "punch." It is a distinct, simple story told in the wholesome, gentle fashion that distinguishes the Alcott writings from the best sellers of today. For the convenience of the great number of women and children who will avail themselves of the opportunity to see Meg, Joe, Beth, Amy and the other characters of the story in real life, the management of the Atlanta theater has arranged for daily matinees at 2 o'clock. This will enable students and many office workers to take advantage of the matinee prices.

The company that will present "Little Women" here is recommended as one of the strongest touring the colors of William A. Brady. Mr. Brady produced the play last year and it ran almost the season at his playhouse in the West Forty-eighth street, New York.

Dr. Sterrs Returns.

Dr. J. G. Sterrs, local colored physician, has returned from Edinburgh, where he took a post-graduate course in surgery at the University of Edinburgh.

ANTI-JEWISH OUTBREAKS ARE FEARED IN RUSSIA

Feeling Is Becoming Very Bitter Over the Ritual Murder Case.

Kiev, October 25.—As the trial of Mendel Beilies, charged with murdering the Christian boy, Andrew Yushinsky, in March, 1911, proceeds the uneasy feeling is growing that whatever its results, attempts at Jewish pogoms will follow. Dispatches from various quarters indicate active preparations in this direction.

The Black Hundred organ, The Two Headed Eagle, in an inflammatory article today commenting on alleged Jewish threats against Russia published in the Viennese press, calls on its readers "to remember always and everywhere the infamous words uttered by Jewish publicists and that the Jews dare to insult the sacred name of our adored emperor and menace his sacred person and the whole imperial family."

Vera Tchebriak's convict brother, Singalevsky, and his accomplice, Rodzinsky, testified today. Vera's brother denied he ever had seen Yushinsky. Rodzinsky denied knowing Vera.

At the trial yesterday two secret police agents in confirming former Chief of Police Krasovsky's evidence, testified that while posing as criminals they had learned from Singalevsky that he, with Rudzinsky and Latcheff, had killed Yushinsky in Vera's house.

The police today arrested many persons in the suburbs of Kiev on the charge of attempting to incite riots against the Jews.

CANE-GRINDING TIME IN SOUTH GEORGIA

Thomasville, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—The heavy frost this week started the growers of sugar cane to cutting and banking their seed cane for the use of another frost. Reports indicate that the cane was not injured to any extent by the recent cold, but there will be plenty of it for seed.

Already some of the growers have started to grinding their cane, and by next week these cane grindings will be in full swing and the average south Georgian will have plenty of juice to drink, and just possible he may be able to get a little cane beer on the side for a change, as well. The cane crop is reported to be a fair one, not as large as last year, but about up to the average of several years past.

Ex-Slave Comes to Atlanta to See Great-Grandson of First Owner

William Paxton, 85 years old—or 85 years young, to be more accurate—black as the ace of spades, with a thatch of white wool covering his head, is a splendid example of the rapidly vanishing "befo' de war" negro made famous in story and song.

He lives in Walton county and has lived there since the day of his birth. He comes to Atlanta every once in awhile to see Paul Wesley, the well-known builder, who is the great-grandson of his first owner, Ben Paxton.

William—no one would think of calling him Bill—has been married but once, and his wife is still living. She bore him ten children, four of whom are still living. He rents some twenty acres in Walton county, and last year he and his wife raised twelve bales of cotton and 150 bushels of corn.

William doesn't have a very exalted opinion of the present generation of country negroes who come to town and forsake the farm for city life. The place for them, he says, is in the country.

"They ain't living as well as I did," he says.

It is told of William that during slavery days he could get along on less sleep than any negro on the plantation. He and his wife lived six miles apart. One time she became ill with typhoid fever, and every night for eight weeks he walked over to see her, remaining at her bedside for hours and returning to work early in the morning, many times not getting more than an hour's sleep a night.

English cotton mills sold to China $2,000,000 worth of cloth in August, more than twice as much as a year ago.

Mitchell Free on Bond.

Z. F. Mitchell, arrested here Friday night on a warrant from Warren county, charging cheating and swindling, was released last night on $500 bond.

"Didn't Oliver Goldsmith once live here?" asked the tourist.

"I don't remember the name," said the janitor. "Who was the gentleman?"

"Then it's hardly likely that he ever lived here, sir. We always demand the rent in advance."—Kansas City Journal.

In Many Respects Cuthbert Convention

ELABORATE ENTERTAINMENT PLANNED

Will Be a Most Notable Gathering

Mrs. A. H. McCoy, president of the Woman's club, will be an ideal hostess for the annual meeting of the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs convening in Cuthbert, October 28-30. She will be in the very heart and soul of the social features planned by Cuthbert's cordial people.

The state officers and the district presidents are invited to be in the receiving party at the reception to be tendered the visiting clubs Tuesday evening.

Two elaborate luncheons will be tendered, at which officers and distinguished visitors will respond to toasts upon the important issues of club work.

The Daughters of the Confederacy will entertain the visitors at a reception at the home of Mrs. Georgia McDonald.

A Unique Dinner.

A unique character of entertainment will be a 6 o'clock dinner given to the entire federation.

This extensive affair will be at the Masonic Temple hall by the ladies of the Order of the Eastern Star, of which Mrs. H. J. Knowles is grand matron. One hundred and seventy-five have already accepted the invitation to this dinner, besides the local guests.

The musical features will be a prominent attraction. Artists of note are on the program, and the fame of the Cuthbert orchestra has gone abroad.

Mr. Wellmer's work for reforms is well known. It was largely through this aid that the passage of the bill establishing a "Home for Wayward Girls" was passed.

A prominent visitor will be Dr. McKelway, of the United States child labor bureau, who will make an address on "Child Labor."

Dr. McKelway was in Atlanta during the recent session of the legislature preparing the statement in his talk on "Literature and the Drama."

Dr. Spiker has recently returned from Chautauqua, N. Y., and other leading centers of art in the east, where she was in touch with leading lecturers of expression and students of the drama.

It will be a privilege and pleasure to hear Miss Celeste Parrish speak of the "Problems and Progress of Rural Schools."

Dr. Thomas R. Thompson, of Indiana, one of the most noted dramatic readers of the country, will be heard at the evening session.

Mrs. Nichols Peterson will tell of the National Federation's coming meeting in Washington in April.

Of very especial interest will be the address of Mr. Fitzgerald on "The Derelict," on Wednesday afternoon. As secretary of the prison commission on the kindergarten work.

Convention News Items

Atlanta chapter won the banner presented by Mrs. L. Baisley, of Savannah, for increase of membership during the year. Atlanta added 41 members to her chapter roll. The banner was presented by Mrs. H. M. Franklin, of Tennille, in behalf of the division, and accepted by Mrs. William McCarthy, president Atlanta chapter.

The recorder of crosses of honor, Miss Rebecca Black Dupont, of Savannah, reported 120 crosses bestowed in Georgia during the past year.

On Wednesday afternoon Judge Horace Holden, of Athens, addressed the convention in the interest of an Andrew Stephens Memorial school at Crawfordville.

The following resolutions were submitted by a committee, of which Mrs. Holden is chairman, and were unanimously adopted by the convention:

Whereas, The Georgia Daughters of the Confederacy, Georgia division, have at their last several annual conventions considered making an effort to raise the money with which to establish a school at "Liberty Hall," Crawfordville, the birthplace of the memory of Alexander H. Stephens, who was vice president of the Confederacy; and

Whereas, The purpose of establishing said school was to honor the memory of Governor Stephens and to afford an opportunity for poor boys and girls throughout the state to obtain an education with but little expense, it being thought that the establishment of said school would be the most appropriate way in which to honor the memory of Mr. Stephens, who did so much for the education of poor boys in this state; and

Whereas, The United Daughters of the Confederacy expect to undertake to establish said school unless the state establishes a branch college of the University of Georgia at "Liberty Hall," believe that the purposes for which we mainly desire to establish said school may be accomplished by the state establishing a branch college of the University at "Liberty Hall;" therefore, be it

Resolved, That we earnestly request the next general assembly of this state to favor the act establishing a branch college of the university at Liberty Hall as hereinbefore the memory of Mr. Stephens; provided that the Georgia Memorial association, who own "Liberty Hall" and the grounds surrounding the same, will convey the fee simple title to "Liberty Hall" and said grounds to the state; and be it further

Resolved, That each local chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy in this state be requested to see their local representative in the next general assembly and urge them to favorably consider the passage of the act above referred to; and be it further

Resolved, That the president of this convention be instructed to appoint such number as to her seems proper to urge the next general assembly of Georgia to pass the act to which reference is hereinbefore made.

Two Real Daughters Are Now Living in Georgia

At the last congress a resolution was passed recommending that certificates of descent be presented to every real daughter by the chapters of which they are members, and that from the records of the general's office active Georgia two real daughters. They are Mrs. Marie Young Berry, member of Joseph Habersham chapter, and Mrs. Priscilla Ayers Inslee, member of Atlanta chapter.

Many of you possibly are not familiar with the fact that when you have reached the period of a real daughter and the national society has been formed, when we were given our own file the record of a real daughter, please do so at once and communicate with Mrs. H. J. Hardaway, chairman, Newnan, Ga.

It has often been questioned if there were any real daughters, after over 120 years have passed since the war of the revolution, but there are still living links, though frail, when connect us with that period, when we were given our liberty and freedom.

Suppose some one can brighten the lives of these dear ones by sending a postal card, Mrs. Mark Lyon, R. F. D. address is Pork Shoals, Greenville County, South Carolina; Mrs. Priscilla Ayers (John R.), New Brunswick, N. J.

BRILLIANT GATHERING OF WOMEN IN MOBILE

Active preparations have been made for the meeting of the Woman's auxiliary of the Southern Commercial congress, to be held in Mobile October 27-29.

This will be one of the greatest gathering of women ever held in the south and many noted club women will be in attendance.

Among the brilliant women who will be on the program will be Mrs. Alice Stone Blackwell, of Ireland, who will talk on "Rural Life and Conditions in Ireland;" Miss Jane Addams, of Hull House, Chicago, whose subject will be "Social Morals and Social Welfare;" Miss Julia Lathrop, superintendent of the children's bureau of Washington, D. C., who will deliver an address on "Child Welfare," and Mrs. Caroline Bartlett Crane, of Kalamazoo, Mich., who will address the convention on "Health and Hygiene."

Mrs. Pennybacker to Speak.

Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, will address the "Club Woman," and Miss M. Carey Thomas, president of Bryn Mawr, will deliver an address on "Education."

Mrs. Edward Ingle, of Baltimore, will give the address of welcome to the delegates in the convention.

This will be the first annual convention of the Woman's auxiliary of the congress. It was called into being by the parent organization at the last convention that there was certain work to be done in town and country and particularly within the province of woman's influence and effort.

The movement holds great promise for future usefulness, if the women conducting the activities are trained leadership and well fitted for their tasks.

Prize for Mrs. Owen.

Of Mrs. Thomas M. Owen, who is the president general, a recent periodical says:

"She is full of sympathy with the problems of rural life, for she was born and reared upon the farm, remote from city comforts, and was thus prepared by later experience in organizations of literature and social and anthropic character to undertake leadership in modern progressive movements.

"Mrs. Owen has entered upon her duties with a zeal that is characteristic of the virtue of the progressive woman of today."

The duty of the Southern Commercial congress and of the Woman's auxiliary is expressed in their motto: "For a greater nation through a greater south."

Walter Page's "The Southerner" Attacked By Mrs. Lamar

The nineteenth annual convention of the Georgia division, United Daughters of the Confederacy, was held this week in Moultrie. The entire city was fairly aglow with the memorable colors and the Moultrie brass band met all the visiting trains and gave the delegates a musical welcome.

Never has the convention been more royally entertained and the Moultrie chapter has covered itself with glory in the state with its own enthusiasm. Mrs. W. L. Screven, general U. D. C. organizer; Mrs. Everett Daniel, vice president, and every member of the chapter worked with tireless energy for the success of the occasion.

Walter Page's "The Southerner" was the subject of the address of state president, in her annual address. She said: "The effort of Mr. Page seems to me to come to you from the various officials of the U. D. C. not treasure upon this time. But there is no recommendation I desire to stress to you with all the power of my soul, all the fervor of a loyal America, all the earnestness of a loyal citizen, daughter of a loyal sire, all others, entirely outside the U. D. C., and yet having to do with the fact of a man now holding the office of ambassador to Spain in the gift of this country.

Revision His Own People.

"In a book called 'The Southerner,' Walter H. Page, now ambassador at the court of St. James, explodes such delusions concerning the south and her people as that the south is a land of flowers and bright his future before any self-respecting people. He is a southern man, educated at Harvard, and under the aegis of Nicholas Murray Butler and his own people, advocates miscegenation, ridicules the glorification of those great Christian gentlemen, Lee and Jackson, feats at Daughters of the Confederacy and confederate veterans. Such views as these would be intellectually among the women of the south, avers that the condition of affairs in Virginia, which he claims as his own state, when he was a child after the declaration of war, was laughable.'

"Mr. Page is a friend to a distinguished southern woman who wrote him regarding his book, and he in his reply implies that the attacks on his book are the baseless opinions of the administration that his story was fiction, saying that the fifteen pages he assigned are now in his possession and the book is outgrown.

"The misfortune of a man take to his own people, representing America, at a great court, was stressed in the address of welcome to Mr. Page, who, when regretted not having learned from the book that he had appointed was ratified. The unfortunate color given to 'dirty' politics in the south was foolish, has been frequently stressed by papers that are the tools of the administration, notably The Macon News, which brought William Jennings Bryan forward for the nomination and has done him valiant service.

"That Mr. Page says it is only fiction does not matter. Was ever a more harm done by any book than by 'Uncle Tom's Cabin?' And 'The Clansman?' And was there ever launched upon the world more absolute falsification, the subtle handmaid of the lie, than has accomplished what strokes cannot. Therefore I earnestly recommend that the convention instruct their president to offer condemnatory resolutions at the general convention, and I trust that similar resolutions presented in the state will receive your unanimous approval."

9 A. M.—Meeting of executive board.

Lon Dickey alternate. The club's appropriation remained unchanged.

The first visit was of most importance at the meeting was the selection and lease of the club home for the year. The women feel they have imposed upon the various men's organizations of the town long for a place of meeting enough. By nature women crave a place to keep and a band of women wants and they have realized this sensation. This home is a beautiful little bungalow that our club architect, Mrs. J. R. Seanor, built over this summer, and it is ideally situated, being quite a central location, and in every way adapted to the needs of the club. The furnishing of the club women. A committee has been appointed by the president, and a delightful feature of the year will be grandmothers' day, when the social committee has in charge.

Sanitary Selections.

Sing a song of microbes
On a city street,
Four and twenty millions
Underneath the feet.
When the mud is drying,
The hearts begin to float—
Aren't they very dreadful things
To gallop down one's throat?

Jack and Jill
Went up the hill
To get vinegar, a baker;
They found one cake
Nonsense
Them need the undertaker.

Wriggle, wriggle, little bug,
Cuddled in the mud so snug
When you eat your tootly in me
How I wonder which 'twill be!

When I feel your talons nip,
Will I have typhoid or grippe?
Must I wade through whooping cough
Or just sneeze my topknot off?

College Women.

One of the delightful club events of the week was the address to the college women Friday afternoon by Dr. McKelway, of Washington. Dr. McKelway is southern secretary of the National Labor association and in planning for a child labor campaign in Georgia, it was only a keen insight into the constructive force of an organization that caused him to request the co-operation of the college women, knowing the splendid work they did for the Girls' Industrial home. Dr. McKelway received the closest attention from his audience, composed of many of Atlanta's most talented women. Under the leadership of Miss Rhoda Kaufman, president, the program for the year, not only includes a study of municipal problems, especially of Atlanta, but the work as outlined by Dr. McKelway is receiving enthusiastic consideration.

Miss Pappenheimer's Tea.

Evening In Old South.

From time to time the Uncle Remus Memorial association has entertained, never yet having failed to please, but upon the evening of October 31, Hallowe'en night, they promise to give one of, if not the very best, entertainments Atlanta society has enjoyed. Miss Louise Williams is known from coast to coast, having appeared before audiences in Washington, with Mrs. William Taft and recently Mrs. Woodrow Wilson as patronesses. Her dialect and impersonations are above criticism, her entire repertoire replete with excellencies. She will be assisted by some of the city's best local talent in songs of ante-bellum days, suited to the night. Ghost stories and Uncle Remus tales will be told, a number of the daintiest and prettiest of the children of our new south will give an imitation of "Mammy's Shuffle Dance," as engaged in by little pickaninnies "before the war." The magnificent ballroom of the Ansley hotel has been tendered the association, with all the weird decorations befitting a Hallowe'en entertainment. So come, bring your friends and spend an evening with "Uncle Remus," "Brer Rabbit," "Miss Sally," "Miss Meadows and the gals." General admission, 50c; reserved seats, 75c.

MINNIE'S AFTERNOON OFF

MRS. EATON DENIES KILLING HUSBAND

Accused Woman Says Poison Charge Is Absurd—Alleges She Was Devoted Wife to the Admiral.

Plymouth, Mass., October 25.—An insistent denial that she ever gave her husband poison of any sort brought to a dramatic close today the direct examination of Mrs. Jennie May Eaton, widow of Rear Admiral Joseph Eaton, with whose murder she is charged.

Sitting in the witness chair where she had passed the entire day reviewing the story of her life, Mrs. Eaton leaned forward in her earnestness, but her face still bore a trace of its habitual easy smile as her counsel, William A. Morse, put the concluding questions as to her guilt.

"Do you know anything about poison?" she was asked.

"No, sir, I do not," she replied.

"Did you administer any white arsenic to your husband?"

"Why, that is the most absurd thing I ever heard of," replied the witness. "No, sir, never in my life, she added.

"Did you ever give your husband any other poison?"

"No, never," was the reply.

Attorney Morse announced at this point that the direct examination was ended and adjournment was taken until Monday, when the state will cross-examine the defendant.

Devoted to the Admiral.

During most of her six hours in the witness box, Mrs. Eaton was confronted by District Attorney Barker, who sat two yards away, and when she replied to the questions about poison her glance often met his squarely. Mrs. Eaton described her life with the admiral as that of a wife devoted to his comfort and striving to lift from his shoulders the burden of debt under which he labored. She declared she had sacrified her furs and her jewels to assist in supporting the family.

Mrs. Eaton said her husband was despondent at times, particularly after indigestion in drugs, and that it was also when under the influence of these drugs that he had flirted with other women. She denied that she was jealous, but added that she was jealous at such times of her husband's dignity as a rear admiral of the navy.

Regarding letters to Miss Grace P. Howard, of New Bedford and others complaining of her husband's alleged flirtations, Mrs. Eaton said she wrote these only because she wanted to show in court the state of the admiral's mind, should it be found that the adopted cable which had killed him was killed by poison.

Denied Testimony of Physician.

Mrs. Eaton denied portions of the testimony given earlier in the trial by Dr. C. H. Colgate, of Rockland. Dr. Colgate had testified that Mrs. Eaton asked his assistance in having the admiral committed to an asylum.

She testified she asked Dr. Colgate to examine her husband to better his condition. She declared she had not taken any steps towards committing her husband as insane, other than to ask local physicians to examine him. The witness described in detail the last week of the admiral's life.

Regarding the admiral's last illness, Mrs. Eaton said he had at other times had perfect paroxysms of vomiting, so that she was not alarmed at the attack he had on the Thursday night preceding his death. The next day Dr. Frame examined the admiral, but said he did not think him seriously ill, according to Mrs. Eaton.

In the middle of Friday night Mrs. Eaton said she left her own room twice and attended to the sick man. The second time, she said, she got into bed with him and both soon fell asleep.

She awoke to find him cold. "I shook him and called 'Joe,' but he was dead," she said, with a slight tremor in her voice.

Mrs. Eaton was self-possessed as she began her testimony. Under the questioning of her attorney, Mrs. Eaton described her early life. She was born at Alexandria, Va., thirty-nine years ago, she said, her family later removing to Michigan and then to Washington, where she met her first husband, D. H. Ainsworth.

Life With Ainsworth Unhappy.

Her life with Ainsworth was unhappy. She said that her husband lost two positions and that she was forced to aid in the support of the family, selling books from house-to-house. During her life with Ainsworth she and her two children, Lita and Dorothy, lived successively at Washington, Guthrie, Tulsa, Leeds, Chicago and then returned to Washington, where she bought a house, paying $1,200 down.

Mrs. Eaton said she placed her daughter Lita at school at Frederick, Md., and took up nursing. In September, 1905, she went to Admiral Eaton's Washington home to attend the admiral's invalid wife. The latter died a week later, but the witness remained to care for the admiral, who had been drinking heavily. She accompanied him to Boston at his request, and because of "his pitiable condition." While attending the admiral she received her final divorce papers from Ainsworth.

Alleges Eaton Insulted Daughter.

Witness and the admiral were married at Boston, April 25, 1906. They began housekeeping on an elaborate scale in Brookline, but because of debts and the admiral's intemperance, Mrs. Eaton decided to buy a country place. She said she had to discharge three maids from the Brookline home because of the admiral's attention to them, that Eaton had insulted her daughter, June.

When the Plymouth place was bought on August 21, 1907, the family had only $500 in cash, with an indebtedness of $12,000. Mrs. Eaton stocked the farm with cattle.

"I put my mind into making the home a success," she said, "and did all the house work, and the admiral's retired pay, $375 a month, was used in paying the debts. Had he lived another year we would have been free and clear, with money in the bank."

She Loses Composure.

Mrs. Eaton lost her composure for the first time when she described the death of the infant which she secretly adopted in 1899. The boy was left in the care of the admiral, while she visited at Sand Hills while Mrs. Eaton looked in the sun. When she returned to the cottage the baby was ill and died a few hours later.

At the time her husband appeared to be under the influence of a drug, and the witness told the physician who was summoned that "the admiral has done something to this baby."

NEXT FRANK TRIAL MAY BE HELD IN CHATHAM

were all hostile to Frank. They were coached, rehearsed, prepared to tell their little tales, and, had we cross-examined them, there is no telling on God's earth what they would have been ready to tell. The Lord only knows what fabrications they would have put before the court.

"The prosecution had a regular school for training and rehearsing its witnesses, and whoever was the most perfect—remembered his or her story the best—was put at the head of the class. Therefore, we would have made a very, very disastrous mistake in cross-examining any of them.

"The state, in retaining its witnesses, gave a bid to the discharged employes, the men or women who hated wealth and was willing to defeat it in the spirit of the anarchist, and the barely ignorant persons who were prejudiced against the law.

Defense Was Trapped.

"We were trapped. We were between a conspiracy hatched up by Dorsey and his colleagues, the detectives, and a jury untrained in weighing the jury dence and too frightened to do so had they been properly trained. Sure there was a conspiracy. It takes no power of divination to see that.

"Why, during those old barbaric days of England, when a man was hanged for a list of 130 crimes that ran everywhere from stealing a handkerchief to committing murder, you would never found just such men as Dorsey and the police and detectives of Atlanta, crying and yelping for the blood of the poor man on trial.

"This veneer of civilization is mighty thin. It is thin on all of us. We don't have to scratch down deep before you find the barbarian and the beast. We all have primeval instincts. We haven't evolved so far that there is much of the heathen smuldering in our nature and crying for blood.

Capital Punishment Going.

"Fifty years from today capital punishment will be abolished. Time rights all things. It is only evolution that civilizes us—growth—that is all. It's slow, but it's sure. Remember, we use to have hairy backs and big lungs and tails that clung to limbs and held us in bed on a limb.

"Some people say we are getting worse. But it's not true. We are not. We are really getting better. It is true that we go through some terrible periods of process now and then which seems these calamity howlers a chance to say we are getting worse, but they are wrong and for good.

"We will soon lose all the fangs of savagery, the chief one of them being capital punishment.

"The trial of Leo Frank, gentlemen, is a reversion back to the beginning of the worst instances of reversion I have ever seen. There was something psychological about the situation. It reminded me of a wagon running down a hill. The farther it traveled the greater momentum it gained.

Make Sport of Dr. Harris.

"Now, I'm coming to something in the case that causes me to blush and feel sympathetic at the same time. I am thinking of poor old Dr. Harris—Roy Harris—the man who can look at a corpse and tell by the completeness of the nose the date of birth, religious beliefs and entire history. Wasn't he a peach? He can't do you any good when you're alive, but he can certainly hold some autopsy on you when you pass beyond the pearly gates. Treat us, considering you go there.

"If I were sick and saw Harris coming up the front steps, I'd say: 'Wife, put cotton in the door, order my shroud and send for the cheapest undertaker in town. Tell him to hurry.' No wonder that preacher, Miss Daisy Hopkins, the thirsest of the fair—according to one Mr. Jack Dulle—could not get the witness stand perfectly still. Old Doc Harris had just been in it.

"Harris lives just two doors above me. I had a case pertaining to the death of old Uncle Josh Crawford some time ago, and the first thing I knew Doc Harris had old Uncle Josh, who'd been dead for years, up in his cellar, grinding him up in a sausage mill. If I'd have known it at the time I'd have moved from the neighborhood.

"Your honor, we are not asking for so much as a new trial as we are asking for a trial, a real trial, not a mock trial, which we didn't get. We deserve a trial. Justice itself demands that we have one. You cannot allow the stream of purity to be polluted from which justice flows.

"Some of these jurors have said that they were not influenced by the crowds and the demonstrations. I don't believe, however, says that you cannot take their opinions, that you must take the effect of such incidents as you see for yourself. Your honor has got to give a new trial simply on this one point if nothing else.

Calls Jury Jaybirds.

"The jurors would naturally say that they were not affected. The jury itself. I am afraid, did not feel as it should have felt. When these jurors should have felt. When these Dorsey was feeding poison to the court indirectly because he would not be allowed to do it directly, those twelve jaybirds sat in the jury box with gaping mouths, gulping down with avidity everything that was said and done.

"The trial of Frank was the most infamous, the most injurious, the most diabolical on record. There never was a prosecution of a Jew so stinking since the crucifixion of Christ.

Most of Arnold's morning argument was devoted to bitter arraignment of Solicitor Dorsey for the solicitor's alleged attitude toward Frank and for his tactics, which Arnold termed "nasty and unfair."

At one time the speaker declared that a tramp would have more fear of justice and a fairer trial than Frank. Justice and a fairer trial than Frank. This, he said, because of prejudice and feeling against Frank because he was a Jew.

He accused Dorsey of having brought in every conceivable crime to try the defendant on the lone charge of murder, and that these tactics were employed merely to prejudice the jury. "And," he said, "to tell the truth, I don't think it required much effort to prejudice that particular jury."

Rosser to Conclude.

Mr. Arnold also dwelt at length upon the murder notes that were found beside the body. He declared it no white man, especially an intellectual man of Frank's type, could have composed the notes. Also that it should be proof conclusive of Conley's guilt when it was discovered that the notes were in his handwriting and language.

Mr. Arnold will resume his argument Monday morning at 9 o'clock in the state library, where the entire hearing is being held. He will be followed by Solicitor Dorsey and Frank Hooper will then speak for the state. The concluding speech will be made by Colonel Rosser.

MALLORY BADLY CUT IN AVENGING INSULT

Stabbed by Lavada Rowe, Who He Alleged Insulted Wife, on Dublin's Main Street.

Dublin, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—G. S. Mallory, of this county, was cut by Lavada Rowe in a fight the two had on one of the main streets of the city this afternoon. Mallory claims that Rowe, who is a cousin of his wife, insulted both his wife and his daughter some time ago.

Mallory saw Rowe here this afternoon and called to him, according to Rowe's statement, and when he got in reach Mallory began beating him with a stick. Rowe immediately pulled out his knife and cut Mallory, making two ugly gashes in his throat, which, although not necessarily fatal, are serious. Rowe was locked up a few minutes after the cutting and admitted it.

Mallory is a brick mason and was formerly chief of police of Dublin, being well known in the city and county.

For more than five years the Cloud-Stanford Co. have conducted the most exclusive establishment for men's high grade wearing apparel in Atlanta.

ATLANTANS HONORED AT NATIONAL MEETING

White and Glover Back From Knoxville With Big Organization Plans.

Harris G. White, president of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, and Charles P. Glover, ex-President of the board, have just returned from Knoxville, where they attended the meeting of the executive committee of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges.

At this meeting the date of the next national convention of realty men in Pittsburg was set for either July 15 or 22.

In January the next quarterly meeting of the executive committee will be held in Jacksonville. From Jacksonville the committee with a large number of other prominent realty men of the country will go to Tampa for the first "national session" in ten history of making great plans for the entertainment of the realty men and their families expecting a big time.

At a luncheon at the Country club in Knoxville on Friday, President White addressed the realty men. Ex-President Glover spoke Thursday evening at the banquet.

While in Knoxville, President White talked with J. H. H. Simpson, president of the national organization, in regard to the proposed organization of a Georgia association of real estate exchanges. President Simpson was greatly pleased over the idea, and urged President White to push the project, offering him any support in the plan that he might be able to give.

President White has sent out letters to the realty men of every city in the state of any size, urging co-operation, and is receiving much encouragement from them for the plan of a state organization.

President White is also writing letters to prominent realty men in other States asking that they push state organizations, so that a federation of the real estate exchanges of six southern states may be effected. This federation, as at present planned, will include Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, North and South Carolina.

Plans are being made for a meeting of delegates from these six States at a near date for the discussion of plans for the southern federation. The delegates from the Georgia cities will also be asked to be present at this time to formulate plans for the state organization.

MASSEE SELLS COMPANY; RATES WILL BE RAISED

Property of the Georgia Public Service Corporation Bought by Leach Interests.

Macon, Ga., October 25.—(Special.) President W. H. Felton, of the Leach properties in Macon, including the Central Georgia Power company, and the Macon Railway and Light company, today confirmed the report that the Leach interests had purchased the property of the Georgia Public Service corporation, owned by J. Massee, and which has been waging a fight against competitive companies.

The amount involved in the transaction has not been made public. Mr. Massee also gave out no statement today confirming the sale. He declared he will invest his money in his other business here and will soon leave for a six months tour of Europe.

The Central Georgia Power company announces that three cents per k.w. increase in rates for lights and power now that the rate war has ended. The present rate of 7 1-2 cents will be increased to 10 cents, less 10 per cent if paid in ten days after due.

PLAN "SPELLING BEE" FOR ATLANTA AD MEN

"Be new-fashioned spelling bee" to be held at the Kimball house on Tuesday night by the Ad Men's Club of Atlanta, promises to be one of the most enjoyable occasions yet carried on by this organization.

At the "spelling bee" the "teacher" will confine his list of words to the registered trademark names. Such words as "Ivory Soap," "Uneeda" and "Cuticura" will be the last to spell correctly.

Words that Noah Webster never dreamed of in his dictionary will have to be striving. All of them should be spelled correctly by the ad men, who see them every day.

There will be valuable cash prizes to the winners of the contest, and an unusual noot to the session.

A dinner at 7 o'clock will precede the spelling bee, and it is believed that a large number of the local ad men will attend.

SUFFRAGETTES FORCE GOVERNMENT TO YIELD

London, October 25.—The government was obliged to abandon today from its threats made in the announcement by the home secretary October 9 that sufficient measures to prevent acts of violence would not be given their freedom under the "cat and mouse" act.

On that date the home secretary refused to release Miss May Richardson, who was released on parole on the discharge of arson. Miss Richardson released food from the moment of her arrest and forcible feeding was resorted to five weeks ago. Her condition became so serious that her release was ordered today.

In his previous announcement the home secretary declared the act would be applied only to minor suffragette offenders whose crimes did not include acts of serious violence.

ROOSEVELT TAKES RIDE ON RIO JANEIRO BAY

Rio Janeiro, October 25.—An excursion on the bay gave Colonel Roosevelt an opportunity today to view the picturesque beauties of the harbor. He was accompanied by the minister of marine, the Chilean minister, several government officials and Brazilian naval officers. Prior to this the former president visited the naval school, where he was received with military honors.

During the afternoon a big delegation of teachers and pupils of the superior schools called on Mr. Roosevelt at the Guanabara palace.

NEGRO'S WAGON STRUCK BY ASA CANDLER'S AUTO

An automobile belonging to Asa G. Candler collided with a wagon driven by an old negro at dusk last night on Ponce de Leon avenue near Hunt street. The rear end of the wagon was demolished and the negro Henry Hubert, of No. 226 Fraser street, was catapulted thirty feet into the air, landing on the pavement on his head. He was carried to Grady hospital where his wounds were found to be serious.

The Candler car was driven by Eli Hopkins, the negro chauffeur. The driver has been arrested.

ATLANTA'S SKYLINE IN 1913.

ATLANTA'S SKYLINE IN 1903 AND 1803.

Twenty years of Atlanta's skyline! The above pictures speak eloquently enough for themselves of the miraculous progress which Atlanta has made in the last two decades.

The top picture shows the skyline of 1913, the picture having been made in September of this year. In the center of the picture is the new Healy building, almost complete. Through the framework of this structure may be seen the faint outlines of the Hurt building.

On the left at the bottom is the skyline of 1903, at which time Atlanta boasted of two large buildings, the English-American building, as it was then known, or what is now known as the Empire Life building, and the Piedmont hotel, both of which form the main features of this picture.

On the right, at the bottom, is Atlanta's skyline in 1892, twenty years ago. At that time the Equitable building had just been completed and was the wonder of the southern states. This building is visable in the extreme left side of the picture.

It will be noted in both the bottom pictures that the spire of the old Methodist church, which formerly stood on the site of the Candler building, is visible.

It is a peculiar fact that the oldest and newest large buildings shown in this skyline are owned by Joel Hurt. There were those at the time he built the Equitable building who made no bones of predicting that in two years he would go broke through expending his money for such a foolish proposition. Quite to the contrary, however, his latest achievement tells the story, and according to his announced plans the sky line of Atlanta ten years from now will see more lofty buildings as a result of Mr. Hurt's enterprise.

Prosperity and Good Roads Bless Georgia Says Ansley

By Edwin P. Ansley.

A recent automobile trip of 1,200 miles through south Georgia not only convinced me that Georgia is making splendid progress in her road building, but that that section has splendid crops this year and is developing probably faster than any section of the United States.

Take Mitchell county as an example. Five years ago, before the good roads movement had started, there were then no good roads in Mitchell county, and as one of the best land in the county could have been bought at from $10 to $25 per acre. A week ago Colonel L. H. Threlkeld met the Mitchell county man has now spent $200,000 in good roads, and ex-State Senator Bunn, of Mitchell, told me that he had a large number of acres of land in Mitchell county that he had refused $50 per acre for a number of times.

Good Roads Help Values.

The effect of good roads on land values is very strikingly illustrated in Tift county, 2 miles from Tifton, on the national highway, sold at public outcry for over $100 per acre.

The fact that I left Atlanta at 1 p. m. on October 6 and returned at 8 p. m. on October 18, with an automobile measuring 1,216 miles for the trip, is the best evidence that I had good roads on which to make my inspection tour.

Full of Cotton Money.

Dr. J. W. Mayson and J. Hoge Tigner, two prominent men, were with me, and that while in had intended to spend several days in the counties which, in the legislature, that since taking the automobile trip over the state I have changed my plans and will be back here before the middle west, and besides the climatic conditions here are far more favorable to have a corps of engineers on this property, and will, within a few days, begin settling this property with prosperous white farmers.

cotton in cash, and a similar amount paid out in advances, so following week $70,000 was paid in one day to farmers in Barnesville. This clearly indicates the prosperity of this wonderful section. I mention these instances just as a sample of what was occurring throughout this entire section, and these data were no exception, but the rule. Every one that we came in contact with, whether farmer, merchant or banker were rejoicing over this wonderful era of prosperity.

History Repeats Itself.

History is simply repeating itself by having the cotton of the south bring gold to America, when our friends in Wall street were predicting that it was impossible to turn the tide of gold to this country.

I noticed in every section a greater diversity of crops than any of us had ever seen in Georgia, and we were told that there was more grain, corn and hay produced in Georgia this year than has ever been known in the history of the state.

As evidence of my belief in the future of south Georgia, I have entered into a contract with Mr. G. M. Pinson, who owns 2,700 acres of land situated in Worth county, immediately on the Atlantic Coast Line railroad, about half way between Sylvester and Albany, to develop and subdivide into desirable size farms and offer same to prosperous white farmers of the middle west and other sections of the United states, where land values have increased to a high price, and where are no more productive than the lands in south Georgia. Facts I am fully convinced than ever that the lands in the section of south Georgia, with the proper treatment, will yield more per acre than the lands in the

WINECOFF HAMPERED BY NARROW STREET

New Hotel, Set Back for Wider Street, Is Hidden by Adjoining Buildings.

One more large building will have been completed and offered to the use of the public when the Winecoff hotel, at the southwest corner of Peachtree and Carnegie streets, is opened next Monday.

This handsome twelve-story building is one of a number of large buildings which are expected to go up in this neighborhood within the next few years.

There has been considerable comment on the disadvantage to which this new hotel is put by the tardiness in the widening of Peachtree street between Baker street and Carnegie way.

The Winecoff has been built ten feet back from the present pavement under the agreement for this proposed widening. The hotel is now complete, but the street has not been widened. As a result the adjoining buildings and ten feet out in front the Winecoff, completely cutting off the entrance from the city to the business section of the city.

The movement for doing this widening work is being rejuvenated for the purpose of relieving this embarrassing circumstance. The four property owners affected by the planned widening to the city the land necessary for this widening and hold deeds for enough property in the rear to move the alley back ten feet.

Incidentally, this will give J. C. Smith, who at present has six inches frontage on Peachtree at the corner of Carnegie way, a frontage of something more than 8 feet, while Hugh Richardson, who at present has no frontage on Carnegie way, will gain a frontage of about 8 feet at the southwest corner of his property.

Dr. Little Returns.

After a successful visit to Memphis, Tenn., where he conducted a series of meetings, Dr. A. A. Little, pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian church, will again officiate in his pulpit Sunday, as both services. Dr. Little expects a large congregation to be out for both of the services Sunday.

PLAN A WIDER PEACHTREE BEFORE WEST PEACHTREE

Property Owners Suggest Rushing This to Care for West Peachtree Traffic.

It now seems almost certain that West Peachtree street will be widened from Baker street to the Plunkett street at the same time that the regrading work, which has already been started, is being done. With the exception of perhaps one, it is understood that all owners of property in these blocks on West Peachtree have agreed to give the street the necessary ten feet.

Meanwhile there is a probability that Peachtree street, between Baker street and Porter place, may be widened first.

The work on West Peachtree street will make it necessary to reroute the traffic of that street over Peachtree for several blocks. Owing to the already congested traffic conditions on Peachtree in the block corresponding to the blocks to be regraded on West Peachtree the additional traffic will make this portion of Peachtree well nigh impassable. The property owners on the west side of Peachtree between Baker and Porter place have agreed to give a strip 10 feet wide to have the part of Peachtree widened before traffic is entirely blocked on West Peachtree. This, it is thought, will be done to relieve the additional congestion to a considerable degree.

The work planned includes the cutting diagonal cut between Baker and Porter place in order to straighten Peachtree street where it turns. The present proposition will be in keeping with the ultimate plan.

GEORGIA GIRL IN "HONEYMOON EXPRESS"

Washington, October 25.—(Special.) One of the principals in the case of "The Honeymoon Express" which has been playing in Washington this week, was Miss Anna Wheaton, of Savannah, Ga. Although still under twenty, she has been five years on the stage. Her piquant charm and grace in dancing, added to a rarely sweet voice, has carried her to the front rank in the big Winter Garden production. Miss Wheaton, who is accompanied by her mother, is a granddaughter of the late Captain J. F. Wheaton, of Savannah.

ATLANTA'S STRIDES FROM DAY TO DAY

All the Latest Real Estate and Building News.

Farm lands in south Georgia and Florida, figured rather conspicuously in the activities of the Atlanta realty men during the latter part of the week.

Two announcements of importance were made of farm land deals on Saturday. One of these was the contract of Edwin P. Ansley, who has just returned from south Georgia, to subdivide and develop a large tract of land in that section of the state.

The facts of this contract are considered elsewhere in The Constitution's real estate page. It is of great interest not only to realty men, but to business men generally, to note what Mr. Ansley has to say about the increase of cotton money in south Georgia, as well as the fine and improving condition of the cotton market.

The second farm deal announced on Saturday was a large sale by R. A. Ryder, which is as follows:

Farm Tract Sold.

R. A. Ryder, of the agency bearing his name, has sold for himself and John F. Flournoy, of Columbus, Ga., a tract of farm lands in Berrien county, Florida, for a consideration of $15 per acre, or $15,000 for the tract.

This is a part of a 15,000-acre tract which Mr. Ryder and Mr. Flournoy purchased in 1910, at which time they paid $10 per acre for the entire 15,000 acres. The present price, $15 per acre, for the tract was to less Angeles parties who will go into the land.

News of Renting Property.

Mr. R. McClatchey's agency announces the following sales:

Mrs. W. J. Blalock to Mrs. P. M. Brown, Mrs. Mary Hart, six renting houses, for $3,500. Mrs. Welsh will occupy one of the houses with two more houses.

For Miss Ada Perrine to Mutual Realty Investments, No. 21 Yonge street, a lot 84x185. This will be improved by 2 and 4-room apartment houses.

For a client to F. J. McCormack, a 4-room cottage on First avenue, in Lake View, for $2,600 cash.

Mr. R. McClatchey has recently taken an option on a large tract of farm land, consisting of 2,560 acres, near Douglasville, Mr. McClatchey plans to subdivide this tract into 30-acre farms and place them on the market.

Mr. R. McClatchey is building two 16-room renting houses and one 5-room house at No. 131 East Harris street.

Fourteen Sales.

Hugh Richardson has leased to the Ashford Trunk and Bag company No. 166 Peachtree street, next to the Scotia building, on the west side of Peachtree, between Edgewood and Carnegie way. The term is for two years, providing for a cancellation or suspension of the lease in case of the street improvements necessitate the "neck of the bottle."

Street Improvements.

Hugh Richardson has had plans drawn for the remodeling of the 3-story and basement building at No. 83-5 Ivy street, formerly occupied by the Franklin Printing company. This building is on the south side of the street, about 100 feet from the Edgewood avenue, and adjoins the Nunnally candy factory.

The front of this building will be changed to two entrances for stores. Elevators and stairways will be built in the rear, and floors will be used for offices, business and manufacturing establishments.

The Students' Annuity building, which is at the corner of Ivy and Edgewood avenue, is receiving the additional store fronting on Edgewood and Ivy.

These improvements come as a result of the recent regrading of Ivy street. Already a driving lane on Edgewood avenue, and this may be expected to extend up Ivy street.

It is planned to have the car line extended down Ivy street to Edgewood avenue, so that a service directly from the north side of the city to the Auditorium will be furnished. Such a service would be of inestimable value during grand opera and like conventions at the auditorium.

Allatoona Notes.

W. P. Cole reports the usual amount of sales in Allatoona for the week, notwithstanding the fact that the rain on last Sunday prevented many from taking advantage of the regular Sunday free excursion. Mr. Cole also reports having closed several acreage sales in the Gould and Pasco annex to Allatoona, and states that the demand for acreage tracts is steadily on the increase, since the announcement that the Stone Mountain car line will begin to operate November 16.

Sales in West End.

The Field Realty company has sold to C. W. Reed and L. S. Sloan two houses on Field avenue, known as Nos. 13 and 15 West End avenue, for the consideration of $10,000 each.

Lake View Sales.

The Martin-Osburn Realty company has sold for R. F. Willing two vacant lots, 84x185 each, on Lake View avenue, to T. W. Abbott and the other to H. H. Vicard. The consideration in each sale was $1,600.

Sale of Business.

B. B. Bryant, of the business agency of Ware & Harper, has sold to A. B. Bragg, formerly of Richmond, Va., the soda water and tobacco establishment located at No. 14 Walton street. Mr. Bragg has closed the place for renovation and remodeling, and will open again in a few days. Mr. Bragg was engaged in business brokerage in Richmond.

Architects Meet.

The former Atlanta chapter of the American Institute of Architects has just held a meeting and changed its name to a Georgia chapter of the American Institute of Architects, that architects from all parts of the state may be included in the membership.

At this meeting the chapter indorsed the plan for a plaza over the railroad tracks in the center of Pryor street, Hansell Bleckley, author of the plaza plan, stated that council was expected to appropriate $10,000 in January for the preliminary survey for this plan, and that $5,000 is expected from the county.

P. Thornton Marye was appointed to read at the next meeting a paper on "Architectural Supervision."

H. J. Lynch Opens Office.

Hugh J. Lynch, formerly sales manager for C. P. Buttenfield's agency, has severed his connection with that concern to engage in the real estate business for himself, having opened an office at No. 209 Walton street.

Mr. Lynch is thoroughly up on Atlanta real estate, especially in the marketing of subdivisions. It is the probability that he will follow particularly in his new office. He has a number of interesting listings.

Mr. Lynch announces that he will have offices in the Healy building as soon as the latter is completed.

North Side Apartment.

J. C. Shelverton has purchased from J. W. Goldsby a lot on the northeast corner of Piedmont avenue and Pourtalai street, now occupying Goldsby's residence, for a consideration in the neighborhood of $25,000. The transaction was handled by T. J. Orme & Son and R. M. Grant agency.

Mr. Shelverton plans to erect a handsome apartment house on this corner. The building will be four stories high, the present with provisions for additional stories in the future. Mr. Shelverton has just completed an apartment house on Eleventh street, this also overlooking Piedmont park.

National Real Estate Officials Will Speak at Atlanta Banquet

President Harris G. White, of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, announced on Saturday that while in Knoxville last week he was able to get President Simpson, of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges, and Secretary Thomas Ingersoll, of the executive committee of the national organization, here. Both will attend the annual banquet of the Atlanta Real Estate Board next January and address the realty men.

Mr. Simpson, who is Jacksonville, ex-governor of Florida, and vice president of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges, has also accepted an invitation to be present and speak at the annual banquet.

Just how wise or wiser heads in the real estate business cannot be found in the United States than the array of speakers who will be at the annual meeting in Atlanta.

President Simpson is from Kansas City, and Secretary Ingersoll is from Minneapolis. Both are national characters in the real estate world.

J. R. Smith is chairman of the committee on arrangements for the annual banquet, and is making extensive plans.

SKYSCRAPER PLANS HAVE BEEN APPROVED

W. L. Stoddart, Architect of Thirty-Story Structure, Arrives in Atlanta.

The plans for a thirty-story office and theatre building at the northeast corner of Marietta and Forsyth streets, known as the Delive property, have been completed and approved.

W. L. Stoddart, the architect who built the Georgian Terrace, the Ponce de Leon apartments and the Ansley and Winecoff hotels, is in Atlanta with the plans, and on Thursday had them accepted by the Strasburger Building company, of which Amos Brasselton is president, which is financing the construction of the building.

The building will consist of two sections, the main part being an office building on the corner, while the adjoining structure will consist of a two-story theater building.

Description of Building.

The office building will have a frontage of 55 feet on Marietta street, beginning at the corner of Forsyth, and a frontage of 105 feet on Forsyth, occupying the entire frontage from Marietta street to the alley in the rear of the theater building.

The theater will have a frontage of 45 feet on Marietta street, or about the entrance space of the present Bijou theater, and will extend through to the alley.

The plans for the office building call for a structure ideally arranged in every particular for office purposes.

The entire structure will be open on four sides, so that every office in the building will have an ample supply of light and air.

The entire first floor will be occupied by a banking room, for the lease of which a large banking concern is now negotiating. The public lobby of the banking room will extend along the Forsyth street frontage, which will be completed almost the entire depth of the plate glass so that the entire floor will be flooded with light.

Banking Department.

The entrances to the elevators, which will be two in number and on the north end of the building, will be from the southeast corner of the building, on Marietta street, and the northwest corner on Forsyth street. These elevator lobbies will be cut off from the banking compartment so that the business in the banking rooms will be in no manner hampered by the traffic in the offices above.

The banking room will also have a mezzanine floor.

On each of the floors above will be seventeen offices opening off either side of a corridor running the northern and southern length of the building. There will be but the one straight corridor, so that there can be no confusion as to locating any office. The building will contain a total of 210 offices. Any adjoining or all offices on any floor may be thrown into a suite.

There will be six or more high-speed 1-to-1 electric elevators. These, with the stairways, dressing rooms and smoke stacks, will be arranged in the northern end of the building in a manner so as to produce the greatest economy in space.

Lined With Marble.

All corridors will be lined with marble.

The exterior of the building will be a handsome, handsome. It will tower thirteen stories higher than any building in the city. The architect will get this effect by the use of many perpendicular lines in the construction of the building. The exterior of the building will be after the steel skeleton style, stone and terra cotta being used for the walls.

The two stories of the building will consist of an ornamented tower.

Work will probably begin Thursday that the scheme has been finished, and that construction will probably begin next spring.

YOUNG MAN IS SHOT ON MILLEDGEVILLE STREET

Milledgeville, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—Early this morning, well-known young white man of this city, in the heart of Confederate row, was shot last night by an unknown person. The shot was fired on Greene street to-ward the Central depot. The wounded man took place on the sidewalk and ordered to the rear of his home. He was shot through the arm. His assailant, it is thought, had made a mistake in his man.

Medical attention was given the wounded man at once, and, though he lost much blood, the wound was found to be more painful than serious. Every effort will be made to find the footpad.

HONOR PAID TO BUSCH BY BREWERY EMPLOYEES

St. Louis, Mo., October 25.—Employees of the brewery of which Adolphus Busch, the late, was head, to 500 secretaries and officials of the company, this morning passed slowly through the Busch home here and for the last time the features of their old employer. The house was open to the employees, and in that manner they passed through the door.

The home was closed at noon, but at 1:30 o'clock it was opened again to allow Governor Hadley, of Missouri, and the Republic to enter to place on the casket floral tributes in memory of the services of Mr. Busch in the upbuilding of the city.

The private services in the home early this morning, at which only the body was taken to Bellefontaine cemetery, a long distance through the park and residence section of the city, were conducted by Dr. Busch were held in thirty-five cities in the United States and Canada, on which he had business interests.

Atlanta Favorites Will Draw Crowds to Theaters This Week

ANNIE RUSSELL at the Atlanta.

MONTGOMERY & HEALEY at the FORSYTH

Frances McHenry at the ATLANTA

GRACE SCOTT at the LYRIC

PRIMROSE and DOCKSTADER at the Atlanta

Annie Russell's Comedy Co.

(At the Atlanta.)

Miss Annie Russell will open her three days' engagement at the Atlanta Monday with "She Stoops to Conquer," that rare comedy of youth and manners, by Oliver Goldsmith, which has stood the test of time. Generations of theatergoers have enjoyed the half humorous and half tragic complications of the plot, but it can been so long since the character of Kate Hardcastle has been seen that there are almost no existing standards by which to measure Miss Russell's embodiment. Most of the famous actresses who shone in the role have disappeared, and the talented younger women who succeeded them have not been attracted by the part. Theatergoers, therefore, await with interest Miss Russell's portrayal of the charming and volatile Kate. Young Marlowe will be taken by Oswald Yorke, who lends to the production years of experience with the famous Benson players of England. Tony Lumpkin, that rapstering, jokeloving, irresponsible Anglish student, will be played by Percival Stevens, whose characteristifalian has been in demand for important English revivals.

"She Stoops to Conquer" will be given Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday matinee.

"The Rivals," Sheridan's famous fun-making comedy, will be the only other offering of the Atlanta. It will be played Wednesday night.

Miss Russell will lend to Lydia Languish all the convincing gentility and charming refinement of her own personality. Oswald Yorke will be seen as Captain Absolute, and Percival Stevens as that much loved and most amusing Bob Acres.

Miss Russell has sought to frame both these comedies in appropriate and tasteful surroundings, and public exposition of Miss Russell's effort to give artistic performances of the English classics has been particularly marked during her recent New York engagement at the Thirty-ninth Street theater.

Besides Annie Russell, Oswald Yorke and Percival Stevens, the cast includes Fred Permalee, Murray Kinnell, Violet Pagett, Henrietta Goodwin and twenty others.

Primrose and Dockstader.

(At the Atlanta.)

At the Atlanta Thursday, Friday and Saturday, with a Saturday matinee, Primrose and Dockstader, the reunited veteran minstrel stars and their all-star minstrel company, will present their big spectacular producti on and old-time minstrels. It promises to be the most conspicuous and meritorious offering of the current season. Associated with Messrs. Primrose and Dockstader in the presentation of this perennially popular form of entertainment are the Six Musical Brown Brothers, instrumentalists extraordinary; Raymond Wylie, the phenomenal male soprano; the Four Meteors, an exceptionally brilliant octette of vocalists; "Happy Jack" Lambert, distinguished interpreter of Ethiopian character songs; Foley and Murphy (protegee of George Primrose), America's representative soft shoe dancers and many others of equal prominence in the minstrel world. Not since the days of the old California minstrels, it is claimed, has there been assembled together any permanent minstrel organization possessing a tithe of the combined talent, renown and attainment or so calculated to set a new standard in the perfection of well-rounded minstrel achievement as this one of Primrose and Dockstader's assemblage. Not only does this revival of old-time minstrelsy exercise a rare fascination over the habitual theatergoer by reason of its sumptuousness, its throbbing vitality and its superb presentation, but because of its strict adherence to all good traditions and its emphatic portrayal of the loftiest ideals of minstrelsy. Even in the minutest detail, the revival represents the highest attainments and accomplishments of the modern stage. No single effort has been spared, it is claimed, that could add to the revival of pictorial delight, perfect ensemble and lingering melody. The tour is under the personal management of Mr. Earl Burgess. A street parade will be given at noon on the days of the performances, headed by Messrs. Primrose and Dockstader.

Keith Vaudeville.

(At the Forsyth.)

Some of the best stars of the legitimate, now extra features in musical vaudeville, will be among the attractions for the Forsyth the week starting with matinee on Monday. The advance in the quality of vaudeville since the beginning of this season has been wonderful and it is a remarkable truth that more stars have been recruited in the few weeks than in the seasons that have come and gone. These facts suggest that vaudeville is being accepted everywhere as the most popular form of entertainment and its comfortable independence appeal with great strength to entertainers who have heretofore confined their visits to cities like Atlanta to a limit of a day and night, and then on to the next stand.

Harry Bulger, the musical comedy comedian, who has been identified with some of the most brilliant musical comedy successes, and who has been a recognized Broadway star for years, is one of the recent accretts to vaudeville. With Herbert Corthell whose successes in Cohan and Harris shows is a pleasant memory, the musical comedy star will offer a comedy idea created by a well known author of laughter. Bulger and Corthell will appear in character impersonations of two very well known advertisers. They promise a unique and original entertainment and will surely be drawing cards.

Another distinguished headline feature will be Clayton White and company in one of their newest sketches. There is not a better combination of talent in vaudeville than this quartette of artists. In the larger cities where Mr. White is better known than now in Atlanta, his name is quite sufficient to guarantee that the theater in which he appears will be crowded. It is predicted that the success of Clayton White and company at the Forsyth will surpass the best hit that has been recorded by a sketch combination in Atlanta.

Harry Montgomery and the Healy Sisters will supply the dainty number on the bill. Montgomery is a Cohancock sort of comedian and the Misses Healy are pretty girls who are nifty dancers and better than average vaudeville vocalists. Kimberly and Mohr in the original creation "Cubiana," will be popular in their presentation of a piano playing and singing specialty. Both young men are clever and with their own compositions promise a treat that will swell attendance figures. Bonner Miles and company are scheduled for a hit in an act that is all unusual and Rayner Bolt Dean will entertain those who are interested in an exhibition of canine intelligence. The feature that is a real novelty will be the appearance of Lolotta the South American skating bear. This bear has been taught to perform on roller skates and her act is a genuine feature for any vaudeville program.

"The Third Degree."

(At the Lyric.)

If one were to ask "Who is the foremost American dramatist" the answer would undoubtedly be, Charles Klein. Mr. Klein has written many successful plays. It was his play, "The Music Master," that did more than anything else to establish David Belasco's great star, David Warfield, in his present position. Edmund Breese and Grace Elliston owe in a great measure to Mr. Klein's "The Lion and the Mouse," the fact that they are stars, and it was his play, "The Third Degree," that advanced Miss Helen Ware to stellar honors.

Charles Klein always writes with a purpose. He takes for his theme some big public menace and around it builds a play that not only amuses but instructs as well. It was so with "The Lion and the Mouse." It was so with "The Gamblers," and it is so with "The Third Degree," which play comes to the Lyric theater this week, beginning with the performance on Monday evening.

Briefly the story concerns Howard Jeffries, Jr., the son of an old-fashioned New York family, who, while at college, marries the daughter of a man who has been fashionable to the pen. Of course it is impossible for the socially prominent Jeffries family to accept her, so she and her husband are living close to poverty. Howard visits his friend Underwood, a rascal who has formerly been a suitor for the hand of the second Mrs. Howard Jeffries, Sr. Young Howard leaves two drinks too many and falls into a drunken stupor in Underwood's sitting room. Then comes to Underwood's apartment, Mrs. Jeffries, Sr., to beg Underwood to cease his attentions to her, for he had written that unless she would receive him he would commit suicide. After delivering her final request that he annoy her no more with his attentions, Mrs. Jeffries, Sr., leaves and Underwood, with his creditors pressing hard and threatened arrest for fraud, steps into the next room and blows out his worthless brains.

The police arrive and discover Jeffries, Jr., who they believe committed the crime. They put him through the third degree and he is sent to prison. Then begins his young wife's desperate fight for his freedom. His father believing him guilty, refuses to pay for his defense, except under the condition that his wife consent to a divorce. This she promises to do, but when she learns that the family refuses to furnish financial assistance only, she reconsiders and decides to take up the matter of his defense herself. She visits the old family lawyer and after many rebuffs, in a scene that has much original finesse in treatment, succeeds in winning him over to take the case. From that moment on it becomes a battle of wits between the young wife and the lawyer on one side and the police department on the other.

In the part of Annie Jeffries, originally created by Miss Helen Ware, Miss Grayce Scott has many splendid opportunities and that she makes the most of them has been attested by many of the best known critics throughout the country. Her performance of the courageous young wife in one then will bring smiles and tears to all who see it and will live long in the memory. Mr. Harrison Ford will be seen in the part of the lawyer who comes to the rescue and aids materially in the fight for freedom. The supporting company is one of excellence throughout. Matinees will be given on Wednesday, Friday and Saturday and popular prices will prevail.

"The Leopard's Spots."

(At the Atlanta.)

Thomas Dixon's new play, "The Leopard's Spots," adapted from his famous novel, will be seen here on November 3, 4 and 5 at the Atlanta under the author's personal management. Mr. Dixon's latest effort follows the book close enough to embody the salient and most interesting features of it, but combining several new incidents and characters which serve to make the play more attractive, startling and sensational.

Those familiar characters in the book that have been retained in the stage version are Tom Camp, the crippled confederate soldier, his wife and daughter, General Wroth, Shelby, the negro leader, and Allan McLeod. A new hero and one of intense dramatic situations, delightful love scenes and touches of humor are intermingled. Expert authorities on the drama in New York have pronounced "The Leopard's Spots" to be a perfect piece of dramatic construction and superior to any of Mr. Dixon's previous successes.

Mable and Edith Taliaferro.

(At the Atlanta.)

Owing to a change in the bookings at the Atlanta, "The Conspirator" will not be given at the new theater on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, November 3, 4 and 5. In place of this show the Atlanta will get a new offering and two stars, both of whom have won universal praise. These stars are Mable and Edith Taliaferro, and they will appear with a fine company in a new play, "Young Wisdom." This play has been produced and has been received with enthusiasm in the east. The southern tour was booked to fill the time which was scheduled for "The Conspirator."

Mable and Edith Taliaferro have never starred together. Each has been an unqualified success in recent starring ventures, and the appearance of both in the same play means an attraction which is sure to hit the hearts of the admirers of each. Mable was last seen here in "Polly of the Circus," while Edith has just returned to America after being sent to Europe by Klaw & Erlanger. The tour on which she scored such a tremendous success. The announcement of the coming of the two stars was received yesterday by Manager Homer George. Seats for their appearance go on sale Thursday.

"The Orphan's Prayer."

(At the Bijou.)

The stock company at the Bijou announces for next week the four-act rural comedy drama, "The Orphan's Prayer," one of the most interesting and pretentious productions that has been given by the company during its ten week's engagement. The story of the play tells the trials of a young orphan girl who, being adopted into a family, finds herself despised and persecuted by her benefactor's daughter. All sorts of schemes are resorted to in order to blacken the character of the young orphan and finally she is driven from her adopted home an outcast in the world. Years pass and fate meets out punishment to those who have persecuted her, and at last she finds love and marriage. The curtain comes down on a happy marriage. The settings are typical of dramatic material. A pretty love story runs through the play, and the comedy is well worked up and in the hands of Eddie Black and Earl Hagler. Eddie Nace plays the part of Silas Rickady, a country constable and Hagler will play Finnigan, an Irish policeman. Both roles are full of opportunities for good comedy work and the friends of these two comedians know how capable they are of filling any role entrusted to them. Rose Morris, another very popular member of the company, will play the part of the orphan girl. Much care and attention will be devoted to the scenic equipment of this production and complete and elaborate scenes are promised. During the week matinees will be given daily at 2:30, and on Monday night ladies will be admitted free under the usual conditions. Seats may be reserved now for this performance.

"The New Office Girl."

(At the Columbia.)

Roaring comedy—the kind that appeals to lovers of bright fun—is promised to be the offering at the Columbia burlesque theater for the week beginning with matinee Monday at 3 o'clock. Fred Kennedy's immense success, "The New Office Girl," will be the highly favored morsel, and, judging from the praise bestowed by newspaper critics throughout the east, Atlanta theatergoers are going to relish the bill. The New Office Girl" is a sprightly burlesque comedy. There is not a dull moment during the two acts, and it is said to be an admirable vehicle to exploit Miss Lucretia Vincent, New York's burlesque queen, who will make her southern debut in this city. Miss Vincent is withheld a doubt, the most gifted woman in burlesque. Aside from her stunning stage presence, she carries a dazzling wardrobe. Fred Kennedy, who will be seen in the principal comedy lead, also comes to Atlanta for his first visit. For many seasons he has been leading comedian in some of the biggest burlesque successes in America. Carrying out its policy of billing the best talent obtainable, the Columbia management has secured several new chorus leads for the nine clever musical numbers which run through the show. The olio numbers will be the best offered during the present season. In addition to the special attraction which has been one of the delights of the patrons of the theater, Wallace and Beach, comedy acrobats, and Herman Lewis and Dorothy Weldon, in a comedy skit, have been secured to round out the bill. Without a doubt "The New Office Girl" is the most pretentious bill thus far attempted, and promises to make Miss Vincent instantly popular with the patrons of the popular Central street house.

Remarkable Photography.

(Baltimore Correspondence New York Herald.)

Fourth-year students of the Johns Hopkins medical school, beginning their first clinical lesson in psychiatry in the new Henry Phipps psychiatric clinic today, had the advantage of Dr. Adolph Meyer's new system of brain photography.

Brain sketching and photography as introduced in the Phipps clinic are the result of careful study of psychopathic methods in Europe by Dr. Meyer.

A human brain is preserved in a solution until it becomes hardened. Then it is sliced in very thin transverse sections, showing the lines of the brain cell. These are traced on glass. Consecutive sections are traced on lates in the manner, and then the plates are bound together. Highly magnified, the sklecta on the plates are projected by stereopticons upon screens, and the student can see the lines on canvas, showing the cells. Brains taken from persons of different mentality and characteristics thus can be compared.

With Tooting of Calliope and Roar of Lions, Barnum & Bailey Big Show Arrives

That dear old institution—old, yet ever new—the circus, and its Barnum and Bailey's top—arrives in Atlanta this morning coming over the Southern railway upon its own four special trains, from Columbus, where performances were given yesterday. Detraining will start immediately upon arrival and horses, animals and all paraphernalia sent to the grounds at Ponce de Leon park, opposite the ball grounds, where anorn of its dress parade dignity and dash, its tinsel and glamour, the huge organization will rest in ragtime today, and relapse into as much of a condition of indolence and rest as is ever possible with such an organization.

Only necessary work looking to the comfort of the humans and animals will be executed today, the work of raising the "big top" to go over until tomorrow morning. The first thing on the circus day schedule will be the parade in the morning which leaves the grounds at 10 o'clock. The circus folk say it will be a more effective dispeller of melancholia than a good liver pill.

Remarkable Menagerie.

About everything of any standing in the natural history line will be seen, either openly displayed or carefully concealed in closed cages, and two caravans of camels and a long string of elephants will make the parade under their own steam. There'll be chariots and tableaux wagons galore, and many of the ballet girls who appear in the "Cleopatra" spectacle will ride thoroughbred horses attended by gallant cavaliers. A woman's brass band will be one of the new features of the pageant which will stretch out a distance of almost two miles. The leading band chariot is drawn by 12, and where conditions allow, 24 horses, and the chap who has trouble with one horse when he takes his best girl out for a livery stable ride on Sunday will gaze with astonishment at the nonchalant charioteer who pilots this remarkable "hitch."

Barnum Wouldn't Know It.

But it is under the "big top" at 2 and 8 o'clock p. m. that this thousand-sided miracle of the amusement world takes live up to its trade-marked title. This circus goes on each year improving and turning up all the laudatory adjectives, until alas! all the superlatives are exhausted and the circus man finds it a difficult matter to write of the entertainment flying the Barnum and Bailey pennant. All New York applauded it for five weeks last spring, and found that, like all good things, it keeps growing better as it gains in years. Old P. T. Barnum is well and did well enough in his ancient day, but if he wandered into his own show today he would feel like Watt in the engine roe mof a dreadnaught. Years before, it is promised, has the circus been as rich in novelties and unusual performances as is the case this season. The stereotyped "grand entree," long a convenient part of all circuses, has been discarded, and the show starts with the brilliant spectacle of the most costly and most pretentious offering ever given by the circus. Over 1,000 persons take part and there is a large ballet of dancing girls especially recruited and trained by Ottokar Bartik, of the Metropolitan opera house.

Antony and Cleopatra.

This wordless play depicting Antony's infatuation for Egypt's beautiful queen is expressed in a series of mighty ensembles and tableaux, the costumes, music and all properties being historically correct. It is a gorgeous affair with a perfect ocean of color to dazzle the eye, and enlists the entire resources of the circus in people, horses and animals present in the story and the period of time involved.

Following the glittering spectacle will come the rapid and diverting succession of arenic acts given in three rings, four stages and the immense track, under the largest spread of canvas in the world. The college-bred elephants, trained by Harry Mooney, come first. They are splashed all over three rings and provide fresh surprises for those who have thought that the limit in trained animal intelligence had been reached. As a finale to their demonstrations of intelligence a group of the pachyderms present a baseball game with all the appointments of bases, bat, ball, mask and glove.

The climax is reached with Pilot making a circuit of the bases only to be touched out at home after a terrific slide.

Japanese Experts.

The mikado's jiu jitsu experts will show how even a frail woman trained in the art of Japanese scientific defense may easily overcome an assailant, and slap-bang wrestling combats will be indulged in by the bulky wrestlers (shumo men) who compose a part of the troupe. Joaetsone's Icelanders, making their first appearance in America, will demonstrate a system of defense as practiced by the Icelander's since the eleventh century. The array of equestrian numbers will introduce the aristocracy of the riding world, led by Ella Bradna and Rose Meyers whose performances comprise the very essence of elegance and daring. Lupeta Perea, who in her very childhood shocked the natives of Mexico City with her love for the topmost branches of the tallest trees, will thrill by her exploits upon the single flying trapeze, shooting like a comet through space at the very top of the big tent. There will be the turkey-trot horses who give a cabaret show all their own, and dance the tango all up and down the hippodrome track.

Queen of the Air.

Birg Millman, "the queen of the high wire," will run across a spangling, jumping thread of steel like a child at play with the street and offer an amazing series of "stunts" upon the high wire. The artist model horses which pose with all the rigidity of marble will be another entirely new feature, as will the Nanki Poo trio of Chinese acrobats. Other numbers on the long program include the Seretti-Silbon troupe, Emily Fauchet, Maximo, Mlle. Bernay, Fred Lasere, Denver Darling, the Ducanders, the Weiss troupe, Charles Stagrie, Victoria and Georgetti, Fred Derrick, the Davenports, the Fortuni trio, the DeKoes, the Berne brothers and half a hundred others. The menagerie remains an integral part of this circus and provides a rich display of wild animal life. An entire family of giraffes, five love-mates of hippopotamus and rhinoceros and a large nursery department of baby animals are among the notable displays.

Of Course Not.

(From The Washington Herald.)

"You were singing a lullaby, weren't you?"

"Yes."

"Then I couldn't pay your art any higher compliment."

The Regaliste Corset
Its Seasonable Advantage

"Style cannot atone for an ill-fitting corset, nor can comfort atone for any lack of style"

The above is quoted from one writing of corset advantages, and the reverse of them. We agree with him. He goes on to say:

"And the problem becomes all the more perplexing, since it is no easy matter to get both"

To this we do not agree—but it is quite probable the writer is not acquainted with the REGALISTE corset and the advantage it holds over (to be considerate) almost every other corset made.

Very emphatically, it is easy to get both style and comfort into a corset—if you know how and have the materials. Not "knowing how" is difficult. After the necessary education doing things right is the easiest way.

The REGALISTE corset conforms exquisitely to the present style of loose-fitting clothing. The flexibility of its scant boning—its slightly curved lines assures the comfort no woman wants ever to give up.

It has all the points that make for corset excellence—slenderness, grace of line, fashionable cut, elasticity, ease, and it has more than this.

It has a certain something about it—the way it is cut and put together—that gives support to the figure, holding it gently where it needs it, and yielding easily with every movement of the body—and keeping always its fashionable silhouette.

Made in many styles of durable materials and dainty trimmings—the REGALISTE corset is a source of unalloyed satisfaction to many women who are fortunate enough to own one.

EPISCOPAL CONCLAVE CLOSES IN DEADLOCK

Deputies and Bishops Couldn't Agree in Regard to Negroes and Good Friday Collect.

New York, October 25.—The 1913 convention of the Protestant Episcopal church passed into history this afternoon in deadlock on two important resolutions while the most far-reaching topic of legislation unconsidered by one house because of an error in the other and with a positive refusal to consider a request of the Woman's Christian Temperance union that unfermented grape-juice be substituted for communion wine.

On the proposal to establish a separate bishopric for negroes in the south and on the proposed elimination of the words "Jews, Turks, Infidels and Heretics" from the Good Friday collect, the house of bishops and the house of deputies were deadlocked. On the proposal to require a two-thirds vote to change the canons of the church, adopted by the deputies, the bishops refused to act because the resolution was sent to them only yesterday, while it was adopted by the lower house days ago.

For two weeks the draft of this radical measure lay beneath a pile of paper on the secretary's desk. Its presence there was not detected until yesterday. In the entire membership of the house of deputies not one man dreamed that the resolution was not before the bishops.

Although the house of deputies in the closing moments of its session tried to force definite action at this convention on the resolution requiring a two-thirds vote to make a change in the prayer book, the effort failed. The committee appointed to confer with the bishops reported that the latter declined to take any action in the matter at the late hour.

The deputies then hurried through a resolution for a joint commission to consider the proposition and report at the next convention and in this the house of bishops concurred at the last moment. The commission is to consist of five bishops, five presbyters and five laymen. The closing service of the convention in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine was marked by a meeting of the solemnity and impressiveness of the opening ceremonial three weeks ago. Bishop Daniel Sylvester Tuttle, of Missouri, presiding bishop of the church, said the opening prayer, and Bishop Thomas Frank Gailor, of Tennessee, read the pastoral letter addressed from each triennial convention to the church at large. The benediction was then pronounced by the presiding bishop and the convention of 1913 closed.

The house of bishops adjourned without filling the vacancy in the missionary district of Spokane caused by the declination of Rev. Dr. W. T. Capers, of Philadelphia, who was elected that post last Monday. The bishops deemed it inadvisable to take up this matter at the closing days of the convention. The election of this bishop now will rest with the various dioceses.

CONGRESSIONAL RACE IN SECOND DISTRICT DRAWING TO CLOSE

Thomasville, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—Most of the "scrapping" in the congressional race in the second district is being done by friends of the candidates rather than by the candidates themselves. The contest is altogether an exceedingly quiet one, and the indications are that a light vote will be polled in the election of November 5.

There has been little speaking. Judge Park made one speech at Camilla, but since then has not been on the stump. There was to have been a joint debate at Albany this week, but it was called off.

Notwithstanding the campaign is an unusually quiet one, the candidates and their friends are busily canvassing every county in the district. At the headquarters here Judge Luke they are claiming for him Decatur, Mitchell, Thomas, Grady, Early, Dougherty and Tift, seven of the twelve counties in the district, and are supporting the assertion by the statement that nine out of ten traveling men who come in here bring this assurance of Luke's standing.

Some of Mr. Luke's enemies have charged him with lack of loyalty to Congressman Hoddenbery, but his friends are answering this by simply pointing to the fact that the late congressman's three brothers, W. B. and Charles Hoddenbery, of Cairo, and R. S. Hoddenbery, of Moultrie, are his warm supporters. This, they declare, is sufficient evidence of the fact that the charge is unfounded.

EXPRESS COMPANIES TO OBEY COMMISSION

Washington, October 25.—Official announcement from the express companies of their intention to comply after December 1 with the order of the interstate commerce commission for a revision of their system of rates and methods came today from Walker D. Hines, general counsel for the five largest express companies, and was concurred in by the others. The commission issued this statement:

"This decision of the express companies means that the block system of rates and the reasonable rules and practices determined by the interstate commerce commission will be put into effect at the earliest possible time and that all the far reaching reforms in the express business determined by the commission to be necessary will be instituted throughout the country."

DRINK MORE WATER IF KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat Less Meat and Take Salts for Backache or Bladder Trouble.

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys; they become overworked; get sluggish, ache and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, so you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush out the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region; you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour; tongue coated, and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat; drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful, effervescent lithia water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

ADMITS SHE WAS BRIBED TO NAME FUNK AS LOVER

Pretty Mrs. Henning Says Donahoe Hired Her to Accuse Harvester Man.

Chicago, October 25.—On the witness stand today Mrs. John C. Henning, an attractive young woman, completely exonerated Governor Funk of two years ago was charged by the woman's husband with alienating her affections.

"Are you acquainted with Clarence S. Funk?" asked Attorney Barnhart for the state.

The witness answered "No."

Mr. Funk, former general manager of the International Harvester company and present head of the McCormick company, of LaPorte, Ind., was asked to stand up.

"Did you ever see this gentleman?" the lawyer pursued.

"I never did," came the faint reply.

During the forenoon session of court there was no mention of the thousand "higher ups" in the case, who are said by Funk to have inspired the alienation suit in revenge for his testimony in the case of Senator Lorimer, whereupon Senator Edward Lee Vidmer, Lorimerman, as stating that it "cost $100,000" to get Lorimer over.

Mrs. Henning kept her eyes on Attorney Daniel Donahoe, who, with Detective Isaac Stiefel is on trial charged with conspiracy in the blackmail alienation suit.

Donahoe listened with a very red face to Mrs. Henning's story that Donahoe had bribed her to appear as a false witness against Funk.

SILVER ANNIVERSARY JUBILEE IS PLANNED BY CITY OF CORDELE

Cordele, Ga., October 25.—(Special.) The twenty-fifth birthday of the city of Cordele will occur during November, and citizens are making preparations to celebrate the occasion in a most elaborate way. At a meeting held yesterday afternoon at the quarters of the chamber of commerce plans were laid for a "silver anniversary jubilee," at which Governor Slaton will be invited to deliver the address of the occasion. Other addresses by prominent speakers will be made.

Two flights in his aeroplane by A. C. Beech, the noted aviator, a lengthy list of athletic events, a banquet, and a magnificent display of fireworks will be among other features on the program. Adequate grounds at the ball park have been secured for the aeroplane flights and the fireworks display.

Invitations will be sent out to the mayors and councils and officials of commercial organizations of all Georgia cities. Preparations will be made to entertain crowds numbering five thousand people coming from a radius of many miles around. It is expected, in order to make the event thoroughly successful, the city officials and the chamber of commerce are cooperating in the plans and otherwise supporting the movement.

The definite date for the celebration has not yet been named, but this will be decided upon at once and will probably be during the week beginning November 10.

MISS CRESWELL WINS A SPLENDID POSITION IN WASHINGTON CITY

Athens, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—Miss Mary E. Creswell, state agent of the Girls' club work, has resigned her position to accept on January 1 a promotion to a position of agent in general charge of the Girls' club work in the south, her headquarters to be in Washington. Miss Elizabeth G. Hole, of Augusta, Ga., has been chosen to succeed Miss Creswell with headquarters at the State College of Agriculture, Athens, her work to begin January 1.

Miss Creswell will continue to have an interest in and a general direction over the work in Georgia, supplementing the work of Miss Holt, and, therefore, giving to state service no less than heretofore. The new position to which Miss Creswell goes has not just created, and she was selected after considering available workers from all over the United States, a recognition of Miss Creswell's ability and a well deserved and substantial tribute.

Miss Holt has been supervisor of domestic science training in Richmond county for the past ten years. She, like Miss Creswell, has had special training for her work at the University of Chicago.

The new district agents have been named to have charge of the girls' canning club work in the state—Miss Louise Dowdel, of Rome, and Miss Lillie Forset, of Moultrie, for north and south Georgia, respectively. The girls' canning clubs, the boys' corn clubs, the pig clubs and the farm demonstration work which is promoted by the state College of Agriculture in co-operation with the farm demonstration work of the United States department of agriculture, was never so promising in Georgia as now.

There will be a mass meeting of men Sunday afternoon at which Dr. Poteat will speak. RIFLE RANGE SITE INSPECTED BY NASH

Brunswick, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—Adjutant General John Holt Nash, of the Georgia state troops, spent yesterday in Brunswick in the interest of establishing a state rifle range for the use of the Brunswick riflemen.

Accompanied by officers of the local command, the adjutant general selected a site some five or six miles from the city, and while he did not definitely whether or not this site would be purchased, it is understood that it has practically been decided upon, and the state will at once build the range.

The site is considered an unusually good one for the purpose for which it is to be used, and meets with the approval of the local company as well as the state official.

GREENSBORO MAN FINED IN DAWSON AS "TIGER"

Dawson, Ga., October 25.—(Special.) In the mayor's court today, R. L. Bobbett, from Greensboro, N. C., was convicted of keeping on hand intoxicating liquors for illegal sale and fined $50 or sixty days at the streets. He was also bound over under $200 bond to the state courts. When arrested on the street he had a suitcase and grip filled with flasks of liquor.

Georgia Institute for Blind Must Get Funds or Close Up

Unless immediate response is made to the appeal being sent out by the Georgia Institute for the Blind, 323 Simpson street, for funds with which to carry on the work of the institution, the management stated Saturday that it would be necessary to close the school at once, and abandon the manual training now given the blind men of Atlanta.

Several years ago the institution was founded for the purpose of training sightless men to be self-supporting, and up to this time the school has been highly successful, having trained more than 50 blind men to support themselves and, in many cases, to be aids to the support of a family.

Still One For Cottage.

One year ago, the cottage, with a large adjoining barn for broom factory purposes, was purchased by the institution for $2,300. Up to date only $153 has been paid on the purchase price.

The only training given in the factory is the trade of broom-making, but there was no mention of the institutions of every state in the union show, this is the most easily learned and the most lucrative work in which sightless men can be trained.

The campaign just launched is for the purpose of raising $3,000, which sum would not only pay all outstanding indebtedness of the institution, but would, according to officials of the school, place the broom factory in an independent position for all time.

To cite the importance of the institution, is only necessary to relate several instances of men, who have been entirely dependent upon others before their entrance to the broom factory, having been made not only independent, but who have managed to work their trade up to the point where they are able to provide for large families.

Able to Support Self.

One of these is a man who three years ago was the possessor of a large stone contracting company, and lost his sight through a premature explosion of dynamite, while blasting. He was absolutely helpless for two years until taken into the factory, and this man has, since that time, been averaging in wages between $45 and $50 per month.

There can be no doubt but that the institution is a most worthy one, and it is hoped by the officials that the public will immediately and generously respond to their appeal in order that the work may be carried on, and thus make the unfortunates who are blind independent of outside aid.

Crittendon Board Withdraws From Men and Religion

The lady board of managers of the Florence Crittenton home, at a recent meeting, decided to withdraw from the Men and Religion Forward Movement and to retain their present financial secretary, Mrs. Josephine LeVey.

This action was taken because of the very small financial assistance given the Florence Crittenton home by the Men and Religion Forward Movement from the funds collected by the latter organization for rescue work in 1912 and 1913.

The urgent necessity now for outside financial aid to carry on the work of the Florence Crittenton home forces the action of the board in withdrawing from the Men and Religion Forward Movement.

DEMOCRATS TO BANQUET ROBERT M. LA FOLLETTE

Senator Robert M. La Follette, will be entertained at a banquet by the Young Men's Democratic league of Fulton county, on the occasion of his lecture engagement in Atlanta. Arrangements have just been completed to this effect by Walter P. Andrews, chairman of the entertainment committee of the league, and S. A. Martin, secretary of the league. The banquet will be held at either the Capital City club or the Ansley hotel, and will be attended by fifty or more of the members of the league and prominent citizens of Atlanta. The hours will be from 6 to 8 o'clock, and the only program at the banquet will be a short address by Senator La Follette. Colonel E. D. Thomas, president of the league, will preside.

Senator La Follette comes to Atlanta as the first number of the Alkahest Lyceum course and he will deliver his great lecture on "Representative Government," at the Baptist Tabernacle on the evening of November 5.

While Senator La Follette's lecture will be the opening number on the lyceum course of this season, there will be nine other big attractions, including: Detective William J. Burns, Benjamin Chapin, the Kneisel Quartette and Frieda Siemens, Chicago Glee club, Shungopavi, the Great Indian Chief Mankican, Hettie Jane Donaway, presenting "The Lady of the Decoration," and Sidney W. Landon. There are still five or six hundred desirable season tickets which may be had by calling at the Alkahest office, 415 Kimball building, the season ticket rate of $1 to $2, for the entire ten attractions.

ALEXANDER CITY FAIR TO RUN THRO' TUESDAY

Alexander City, Ala., October 25.—(Special.)—Owing to the heavy rains this week, which prevented thousands of people from attending the big fair at Alexander City, the managers of the fair, at the solicitations of hundreds of people, have consented to run the fair over to Monday and Tuesday.

The big races which were scheduled for Friday and Saturday will be run off on Monday and Tuesday, and the exhibits will stay in position and all the big shows have been retained by the management.

In the face of rains and slush many thousands of people have attended, however, and are desirous to return in pretty weather with their friends to enjoy the fair as deserved. The farm, live stock and poultry exhibits are about twice as large as ever before and are pronounced by all as superb in every respect.

PISTOL-HUNTING WARDEN WANTED BY THIS JUDGE

Thomasville, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—In the superior court in session here this week, Cap Thomson, a negro on trial for killing Bill Daniels, another negro, was found guilty of murder, but recommended to mercy, which will give him a life sentence in the state penitentiary.

Judge Thomas stated at the rendering of the verdict that if there could be a pistol-hunting warden for the county that three-fourths of the trouble would be prevented as pistols were responsible for most of the crimes committed.

Sanders Sauls, a white man, on trial for killing a negro in the Boston neighborhood some months ago was found not guilty. The killing was done some time ago, but Sauls left soon afterwards and had not been arrested. He came in and gave himself up to the officers a few days ago and the case was put on trial, but the jury found it a case of justifiable homicide.

Manufactures the Original and Only Genuine

MONCRIEF FURNACE

MR. S. P. MONCRIEF,
The Originator of the MONCRIEF FURNACE.

THE MONCRIEF FURNACE
Made in ATLANTA!

For sixteen years the original MONCRIEF FURNACE has been manufactured in the city of Atlanta, sold in the city of Atlanta, as elsewhere, and for an equal number of years every ORIGINAL MONCRIEF has been giving satisfactory service.

For sixteen years Atlanta workmen have been making the original MONCRIEF FURNACES, and for just that long have been spending their hard-earned dollars regularly every week—spending them in the city of Atlanta.

The people of Atlanta have shown their appreciation of the strictly high-grade furnace which we manufacture, and of the part we have played and are playing in the building of this great city. They have shown their appreciation in a substantial way—during the sixteen years that we have been in business here Atlantans have bought

One Thousand Nine Hundred and Sixty Original Moncrief Furnaces

AND THEY HAVE BOUGHT THEM FROM US.

We have no monopoly of the furnace business in Atlanta; we welcome honest competition, realizing that THAT KIND of competition helps to stimulate business generally. When another furnace manufacturer comes into Atlanta, though, and deliberately tries to monopolize our good name and reputation, appropriate them to its own use and profit by the constructive work we have done throughout all these sixteen years, we have a right to expose that manufacturer's methods, and we propose to do it.

Mr. S. P. Moncrief is the ORIGINATOR, the head of the company that MANUFACTURES, and the sole selling agent in Atlanta of the ORIGINAL and GENUINE MONCRIEF FURNACE. Our office is located at 139 South Pryor, and when you want the long tried, ORIGINAL MONCRIEF FURNACE, either come to see or telephone US about the matter and your order or request for information will receive our prompt attention.

We have contracts on hand from Mississippi to North Carolina.

Several features which are the great essentials of The Moncrief Furnace are as follows:

The Duplex Grate, which reduces the labor of cleaning the fire pot, rendering unnecessary the use of the poker or slicing bars; the Fire Pot, which is constructed of heavy weight and nearly straight, making it impossible for ashes or coal to lodge on the side; the Feed Section, sufficiently large enough for free admission of a coal shovel; the Casing Rings, made of heavy wrought iron, and the Radiator, consisting of a large combustion chamber, insuring all available heat.

THE BATTLE FOR BUSINESS.

The greatest war in the history of the world is impending.

It will not be fought with bullets or cannon, in the air or at the ballot box.

It is going to be the war fought for the world's business, and not favoritism but ability and preparedness will win.

Every nation that turns a factory wheel or floats a ship will be a contender.

The south, and especially Georgia, has a chance to win some of the best spoils.

Apropos, read in another column the card from L. A. Redwine, vice president of the Dougherty-Little-Redwine company of Atlanta.

Mr. Redwine wants to know why Georgia and the south are neglecting their huge opportunities in the line of cotton exports.

We have, he says, the crude material. We have the power. We have the material from which machinery is made. We are carving out the ports. Soon we will have an open gateway to the Orient, through Panama, as we now have to the old world.

He wants to know why we're not "proving up" on our claims.

The answer is "organization," or, in the present case, lack of it.

All the advantages he outlines are substantial. We have a good many more in addition. Cotton isn't all. We have iron. We have in the native state in Georgia and the south most of the resources the world needs for its livelihood and its luxuries.

Georgia has the supreme advantages of climate and location. Before we get through this state, this section, ought to be a factory for all civilization. We will fall short of destiny if that image isn't finally transmuted into fact.

We cannot win this battle without an army. We cannot have an army without organization and organized effort. It takes capital to build cotton and other factories. It takes capital to found exporting houses, capital to "carry" great stocks, capital to hire ships, capital to maintain mighty sailing forces abroad, capital to meet and circumvent the other fellow in this great world battle.

The tasks of perfecting this organization and of securing this capital cannot be delayed. Soon the Panama canal will be the opening gun in the battle. Soon the fur will fly in international competition. The countries and the parts of countries that are equipped will win the skirmishes, be awarded strategic position and stand the best chance for ultimate and sweeping victory, which, in its turn, means tremendous wealth.

The Georgia state chamber of commerce is one solution to the problem, so far as this state is concerned.

That organization ought to have the eager support of every business man, every citizen of Georgia. It can lay the foundation for more cotton mills, more iron foundries, steel works, furniture factories, what-not. It can enlist capital. It can bring in developers and skilled workers.

The Southern Commercial Congress, to meet tomorrow at Mobile, can help. After its adjournment a body of southern business men will sail on a several weeks' scouting expedition through Central and South America.

Individual business houses can do much. They can study foreign markets. They can gradually adapt their output and their methods to meet these markets.

In the special competition soon to open it is skill and preparation that will turn the scale. Georgia's destiny is great. It can best be materialized by Georgia's business men addressing themselves to the task of operation.

The time to begin is now!

ALABAMA AND UNDERWOOD.

Press reports of his reception upon his arrival in Birmingham told a remarkable story. Every element in the city turned out to do him honor. Political friend and foe made common cause in extending him a ringing welcome. A more gracious, spontaneous or unaffected welcome could not have been accorded any man.

The reason is found in the personality and the achievements of the man. The Constitution is unable to conceive that the same reason will not brush away, like chaff before a whirlwind, all vestiges of serious opposition to his candidacy for the United States senate.

Since the civil war the south has not given the nation a statesman with more rounded mental and moral equipment, more tenacious courage or greater breadth of vision and practical patriotism than are possessed by Oscar Underwood. It is superfluous to cite specifically his achievements. He summed them when he declared on the floor of the house he has so ably led, "My record is the record of the democratic party."

What he has wrought for the democratic party and for the nation makes him stand out pre-eminently as a political bond between north and south. Other northerners and southerners have reconciled sectional sentiment. The constructiveness of Underwood have given to the industrial and commercial interests of the sections a common cause.

His public service has not been of the windy or rhetorical nature. It is written into conservative legislation. The state of Alabama is singularly fortunate in having contributed him to the nation. He is Alabama's greatest personal asset. Big and deep of mind, temperate and poised of personality, there is about him none of that mental shoddy that rants from the stump or forum or that fumbles great questions with hair-trigger logic. He does not depend upon cheap jingoism to rally popular support. He does not play to the grand stand. He does not worship at the shrine of opportunism. He does not rely upon unsafe and demagogic appeals to fanatical emotions. He does not capitalize human weaknesses nor strive to mount to office upon every fad that freshly strikes the minds of the susceptible.

What a man is is best known to those daily touching his elbow. Several days ago in the house his opponent went out of his way to bring the charge against him that he was a "tool of Wall street," the timeworn ipse dixit resort of every "one-gallus" politician desperately put to it to discredit his opponent. The gag didn't go in congress. When Underwood asked, "Is there one man in this chamber who believes I am a tool of Wall street?" the deafening chorus of "noes" came alike from democrats, republicans and progressives. These men knew that every action of Underwood had made farcical the charge of Wall street affiliation. They knew that the first tariff schedule he cut was steel, in which his personal fortune is invested. They knew that at every turn Underwood went calmly about his course without regard to the threats and misrepresentations that rained from the protected interests. They knew the accusation was preposterous, childish and unjust. They howled it down!

Viewing these facts clearly and without bias, The Constitution has little fear that Alabama will reject Underwood. Such an action would not injure Underwood. It would placard Alabama to the world with a confession that intelligence is dead, fanaticism is in the saddle and that gratitude is forgotten. And there is not in Alabama enough folly to commit the state to such a tragic blunder.

JUDGE NEWMAN'S BIRTHDAY.

Behind the honor extended the man who has for so many years presided over the federal court for the northern district of Georgia there are facts of life, and facts of record challenging more than passing attention.

Judge Newman's anniversary-proper occurred several weeks ago. It happened then that many of his friends were absent from the city. They besought the committee on arrangements that the event be set on a day when they could all be present. And when it is said that last night there were in attendance one of the largest and most representative companies ever assembled at a private dinner in Atlanta the sentiment toward the honor guest and the reason for the postponement need no elaboration.

Man after man conspicuous for leadership and success in Atlanta and Georgia testified to the splendid record of Judge Newman, the universal esteem in which he is held. Many affairs of this nature and the things said at them are perfunctory. Not so at this one. A note of warmth and spontaneity ran through every tribute. Each man felt, when he sat down, that he had fallen short in saying what he would have said, each auditor knew the recipient abundantly deserved each compliment tendered.

Judge Newman's long years of residence in this city and the respect and affection in which he is held bear witness to him in his civic capacity. His official record carries its own imprimatur. He is essentially of the judicial temperament. He knows law. He knows essential justice, shorn of technicalities. He has a great heart and knows mercy. What, he owns a modesty and kindliness of spirit that temper and sweeten his every official and unofficial act.

Reaching the seventieth milestone, Judge Newman was entitled to retire on full pay. He was urged to waive his prerogative and remain on the bench. The Constitution felicitates him upon his decision to do so, as upon his anniversary. Unimpaired in strength, vigorous in mind, ripened in judgment, it is to be hoped that he will for many years continue in the services in which he has so long honored himself, his state and his country.

FOLK LORE IN GEORGIA.

Georgia is the state that gave to the world Joel Chandler Harris, the prince for all time of folk lore writers. The state is now to have the opportunity to prove its interest in this most enchanting form of literature by forming a branch of the American Folk Lore Society.

Details are related elsewhere in a communication from John A. Lomax, president of the American organization, which has just designated Dr. Wightman F. Melton, who holds the chair of English at Emory university, as president of the Georgia branch. The objects and plans of the society are succinctly set forth by President Lomax.

The Constitution has little doubt that Dr. Melton will find his task a comparatively easy one. No man more thoroughly in sympathy with the work or better equipped by energy or temperament could have been chosen. He is a loving and profound student of letters, himself a writer of ability and possesses the faculty of communicating his enthusiasm to other people.

THE PALING TROUBADOURS.

Melancholy attaches to the passing of Polk Miller at Richmond last week. The death of the man, the individual, would have been great enough in sadness, for the census of his friends was a wide one. Of even larger pathos, if so strong a word may be used, is the disappearance of the fun-lit and romantic era he dramatized—the cunning and the humor and the picturesque gulle of the negro, his quaint dialect, his bizarre folk lore.

Miller said shortly before his death that he confined his migrations to the south for the reason that negro dialect and the negro character was genuinely understood only in this section. Had he seen more keenly with his dimming eye he would have said that the negro that furnished the inspiration for his songs and poems was passing, and that few enough of the younger southern generation knew his kind in the first person.

"Piddling Bob" Taylor recognized this fact many times before his death. He referred to it often in conversation, with that inevitable wistfulness that attaches to the decay of any influence that may play deftly on the lighter sentiments of the mind and the heart.

Time was when these two troubadours drew great audiences wherever they went, men and women and children drawn by the same magic that made famous the tales of Joel Chandler Harris. They wanted to hear the crooning lullabies that were transplanted from somewhere way back in the dark continent, the grotesque stories with the same origin, and the naivette and curious slyness that mixture with civilization had engrafted on the old negro.

A new type of negro has arisen and a swift-going civilization has ground off from the old negro much of the romance that made him alluring. The new type is not so appealing as the old one. It lacks the courtesy, the tenderness, the rich and quaint imagination of its predecessor. Its deeds have not reached that dignity or pretension where they can be embodied in a twentieth century Odyssey, even that of the ragtime or music hall composer. Even the more prominent minstrel troupes of the country are dropping the old-time negro, giving us in his place a dilute and chromatic musical comedy like nothing on sea or land.

With the fading of this ancient type fades also those troubadours that gave him prominence. Civilization seems to have found room for neither. And one sometimes wonders if we have discovered a worth while compensation for the loss.

The fact that Poor Lo is getting in the millionaire farmer class is evidence that he has made the best of the Indian summer the government left him.

The scientists say it's perfectly reasonable for people in love to rave about the moon, but if the home folks caught Father talking love to it they'd say he "had 'em again." while Mother telephoned for the doctor.

The crow as the farmer's friend is the latest scientific discovery; but we will have our suspicions until defeated candidates for office cease to make wry faces over it.

If short on cheer-up medicine, think of the many who will not be "ground to the earth" by the heartless income tax.

Perhaps there should be a commission in lunacy for Huerta, but where would they find a man to take chances on it?

Of course, after every "Father's Day" the family will be willing for him to take a week off to "recover."

We'll have the safety coal mine about the time Count Zeppelin invents a non-explosive airship.

Just From Georgia

By FRANK L. STANTON

The World-Song.

Not a place for quiet now—the Progress bells are ringing;
In every old-time wilderness the lightning's song they're singing;
The stars look peaceful up on high, a-shining there so dizzy,
But an excursion 'round the sky would find the last one busy.

It's "Forward! March!" forever—
Life in its every clod;
Ceaseless, wild endeavor;
The world scarce waits for God!

Would seek some hidden haven—some blissful breathless place—
But the rush and crush of peoples roar 'round him evermore,
As the billows of wild ocean break on the helpless shore.

"On—and on—forever!"
Bells in stormy chime,
With echoes from the Future
Where God is marking time.

For the strife of Life is in us and we stay not here for rest
Till earth herself, grown weary, calls her children to her breast;
And there, like children sleeping, where never discord mars,
To reach the record of His earth God may light newer stars.

"On—and on—forever!"
So the world-song runs:
And the worlds that watch our progress
Will sing it to the suns.

A philosopher is a man who, when he has to put ice on his head in the morning, congratulates himself upon becoming a director of the Ice Trust on six drinks.

Until recently we were without a pair of scissors. Lynching is too good for the miscreant who would steal a man's brains when he happens to hang them on a nail by his desk.

No matter how corn sells the moonshine distilleries will have a bushel, and you'll wink your eye and smack your mouth, and say they "got the best in the country."

We are thankful that we are not bothered by any income tax, but when we travel where folks don't know us we look as if we had just paid it.

We've never held an office and don't want to hold one. We know a man who has been a postmaster fifteen years, and the only pleasure he ever had was going on a fishing trip and cussin' out the government privately.

"When Satan Goes to Meeting."

When Sunday-meetin' time comes 'roun' an' in de Gospel place
'Pears lak de saints is lookin' right into heaven's face.
De reason dey looks skeery-like, ole Satan—he dar, too!

He dress up in his Sunday bes' 'fo' sarmont time begin;
It's hard ter tell him f'um de saints—he look so spick an' span;
Even de preachers rickernise him ez a Sunday-meetin' man.

He drags his money in de hat an' don't make no complaints,
Wid one eye on de preacher an' de yuther on de saints.
W'en de preacher thinks he's "hittin' home," an' shouts de loudes', then
He sho' takes note an' all de saints dat hollers out "Amen!"

Satan follers 'em f'um meetin', an' dey thinks dey hear him say:
"I'll ketch de f'ust one in my net dat wobbles on de way?"
An' den dey walks de chalk line! Dey sho' has got ter mind.

An' dat's what keeps me thinkin': Ef it warn't for Satan's ways
But he seen 'em in de meetin' house a-singin' ter de sky;
It's Satan takin' note er 'em dat keeps 'em steppin' high.

Little Wayside Sermons.

You gotter take de worl' all 'round, an' de good Lawd hes so fixed it dat you needn't git dizzy gwine round it.

You needn't git in de pulpit ter preach. Every step you take in life is a sermon, what you is, an' what you is a-gwine.

Trouble with folks dat won't keep up de fire in dis worl' is dat you can't console 'em wid de thought dat Satan will keep it up fer 'em in de next.

Half de time de trouble dat keeps you wide awake w'en you orter be sleepin' is de very one dat would break its neck runnin' f'um you time it seen you comin'.

De longer you lives, de longer you wants ter live—sometimes bekaze you enjoys life, but lots mo' times bekaze you wants ter be dar w'en yo' enemies is hollerin' for help.

The World's Mysteries

WAS GAMAIN POISONED?

A glass of wine figures prominently in connection with the secret cupboard at the Tuileries the discovery of which sealed the fate of Louis XVI and led to his ignominious expulsion of Mirabeau's remains from the Pantheon. Louis, as is well-known, was fond of making locks, and when a young man had taken lessons from Francis Gamain, who was a son of the court locksmith, in the art. Francis succeeded his father in this post.

On November 10, 1792, when the king had been more than three months a prisoner, Gamain went to Roland, the minister of the interior, and informed him that he had made for Louis a secret iron cupboard at the Tuileries. He accompanied Roland to the royal palace, pointing out The secret opening in the wall, the iron door was forced open, and startling documents were discovered which the poor King on August 10 had had no time to destroy.

A bunch of keys, handed over that day by Louis to his evil genius, Thiery, a victim of the September massacres, afterwards came into the possession of the revolutionary government, and it was suggested that one of these keys might fit the lock of the iron cupboard.

Accordingly on December 23, Gamain went again with Roland to the Tuileries and found which one key fitted. Nothing more is heard of him till April, 1794, when he petitioned the convention for aid, and told a pitiable tale. He alleged that in May 22, 1792, he fixed the iron door, which the king had himself prepared. It was a warm night, and when he had finished the task Louis brought him a glass of wine. Some hours afterwards he was seized with a violent pain which did not abate till he took an emetic.

Gamain was paralyzed for nine months, and had no hope of being able to work again. In 1824 Paul Delacroix published a different version communicated to him by inhabitants of Versailles, to whom Gamain had frequently related it. The queen, it was said this time, entered by a secret door with a cake and a glass of wine. He drank the wine and pocketed the cake. On reaching the Champs Elysees he was seized with intense pain. A rich Englishman, who was driving by, took him in his carriage and drove him home to Versailles, calling on the way at a shop in the Rue du Bac for an emetic, a rather roundabout route from the Champs Elysees to Versailles.

The Englishman handed him over, apparently dying, to his wife, and two doctors were sent for. The cake being found some days afterward in his pocket, was given to a dog, which immediately dropped dead. Gamain was paralysed and bedridden for fourteen months.

The convention accepted Gamain's story, ordered that it should be published and circulated as a proof of Louis Capet's infamy, and conferred a pension of 1,200 francs on the victim. Had it taken the trouble to refer back to Roland's report, it would have seen that, so far from being paralyzed for nine months, Gamain went to Roland within six months of the pretended poisoning, and a few weeks later, on neither occasion alleging illness, and, indeed, distinctly declaring himself ready to give way further attendance.

Not until after the execution of the king and queen, and the suicide of Roland, had Gamain told his story. Delacroix, however, believed that he had really been poisoned, but by a servant, not by Marie Louis Blanc held that the evidence was insufficient either to acquit or condemn the king.

"It is urged as a suspicious circumstance that some of the documents of the affair are not to be found among those been abstracted from the archives at the Restoration, but the most probable explanation is that the order of the convention for printing them was never carried out. The reports, moreover, of the two committees on the case were drawn up by obscure deputies, whose spelling was defective. Gamain died in 1795, and it is admitted that his health had been broken down, and that though only 44, he was prematurely old. Was he really a victim, or the exponent of treachery and calumny?

PROMINENT MERCHANT URGES FOREIGN TRADE

Editor Constitution: I read with much interest in The Constitution your editorial comment on extracts of Rome Tribune and Herald.

There must be some defect in our consular service or trade relations with other countries, else our business with the Orient in cotton goods would not be on the decrease. We have many advantages of manufacturing cotton, the greatest product in the world for making raiment for the human family. It has no equal when its merits and diversified uses are realized, and we who are in the field and see it every day do not appreciate its real value.

In competition with foreign spinners, we have cheap labor cheaper labor to contend with. Our help is intelligent; climatic conditions are better. We are enterprising and aggressive people, and I cannot understand why we do not get most of the cotton goods trade of the world.

England, Germany and France buy two-thirds of our raw cotton and sell the manufactured product to the people we should supply, especially to the South American countries, who are natural and logical customers of ours.

A simple calculation will show that if we transform even one-half of our raw cotton into the cheapest grade of goods we enhance its value many times and many millions each year would be added to the wealth of the country. Two-thirds of our last year's crop was exported in the raw state. Georgia mills used only one-fourth of the cotton raised in our state, and if we manufactured two-thirds or even one-half of our crop we would then begin to realize the real value of King Cotton.

I hope that you will continue to agitate this question, as it means much to the prosperity and wealth of the south.

The White Flag.

I sent my love two roses—one
As white as driven snow,
And one a blushing royal red,
A flaming Jacqueminot.

I meant to touch and test my fate;
That night I should divine
The moment I should see my love,
If her true heart were mine.

For if she holds me dear, I said,
She'll wear my blushing rose;
If not, she'll wear my cold Lamarque,
As white as winter's snows.

My heart sank when I met her; sure
I have been overbold.
For on her breast my pale rose lay
In virgin whiteness cold.

Yet with low words she greeted me,
With smiles divinely tender;
Upon her cheek the red rose dawned—
The white rose meant surrender.

—John Hay.

The Secret.

If we but find the secret
Of the gentle heart,
And of its simple sweetness
Imbibe a minor part,
Then from our own heart-fountain
Good-will and cheer will start.

To these whose narrow pathways
Are all bestrewn with tares,
Whose hearts are bowed in sorrow,
With untold grief and cares—
Before whose faltering footsteps
Ede dark and hidden snares

The love that gets its out of self
And seeks the love of all,
Unheeding of the censure
That chiding lips let fall—
Obeying, and not doubting
The spirit's potent call—

Oh, 'tis such will overcome!
And if we will we can
So conquer self with good
And prove the better plan—
Like one of old, discover
"God's image in each man."

The Farmer Who Gets Rich.

(From The Sandersville Georgian.)

Everything produced on the farm is twice as high in price as compared with twenty years ago, and some things are about three times as high. This looks like it should be good times to the farmer, but there are only a few who are glad of it, and these are the ones who produce their own supplies and make cotton a surplus crop. They are the only ones who are making money.

Dr. Melton to Head Georgia Folk Lore Band

Editor Constitution: The American Folk Lore Society, through its proper officials, has selected Dr. W. F. Melton, professor of English at Emory college, Oxford, Ga., to be state president of the Georgia branch of the American Folk Lore society. Professor Melton will shortly send out invitations to many citizens of Georgia requesting them to become members of the society. These invitations should meet with a hearty response. Persons interested in folk lore should not wait to receive a special invitation to join the society, for its membership will be open to all who may be interested in the songs, legends, stories, plays, folk sayings, superstitions and other folk material so common in the whole south, and yet current in isolated communities and among uneducated people.

Since its organization, more than twenty-five years ago, the American Folk Lore society has been chiefly supported and maintained by students of New England and contiguous states. The time has come when the people of the south have some leisure in which to preserve from extinction this portion of its literature. I have no doubt at all but that the contributions to folk lore, to be made in the next decade or so from American sources, will come principally from the southern states, where, with our large negro population and the distinct social organizations under which we lived before the civil conditions have particularly favored the transmission and sometimes the creation of folk material.

I earnestly hope that Professor Melton will be supported in his efforts to build up a Georgia folk lore society, and that Georgia will quickly follow the examples of Kentucky, Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina in effectively organizing a large and earnest band of searchers for this vanishing and humble though fascinating literature.—JOHN A. LOMAX,

President of the American Folk Lore Society.

University of Texas, Austin, Texas.

OBLIGATIONS

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

Everyone of us has his Obligations. We have our Obligations to the world. We have within us that may be of benefit to the world at large. Then we have Obligations of Citizenship, of Friendship, of Service, of Honor—of Responsibility for having been made a Human Being.

To be true to your highest Obligations is to make every man your Debtor.

You may think that to "let up" on some one of your high Obligations at times is not going to make much difference. But the keen eye of opportune Perfection, that ever watches over the progress of every individual, is sure to detect and record it against you, and your biggest and greatest is going to fall short of that best just that much—how much, no man may know.

For any Obligation that is slighted or abandoned, there appears an added Obligation that must be paid for at its own price.

Honor your Obligations and keep them. Be glad that you have Obligations—of which you may Grow. For no one is worth his Salt or his Dust that has not at some time or other placed worthily, some other person as highly Obligated to him. Every time you render a good Service, you fulfill an Obligation. Every time you do what you feel you ought to do, you wipe an Obligation from your list of happy Tasks.

Grow rich off of your Obligations by compelling them to increase your Usefulness and Happiness instead of adding to your life unhappy Burdens and nerve-wrenching Worries.

Crossing the Tigris.

(From The Christian Herald.)

At one ferry on the Tigris for the toll is as follows: For a poor Arab, 2 cents; for a prosperous Arab, 4 cents; for a soldier, 16 cents; for a pilgrim, 20 cents; for a European, 80 cents. The scale of prices for nearly everything along the way is similar. But many of the Arabs are so poor that they prefer to swim across in the ancient manner. They bind several old gourds together, and, sitting upon them, paddle their way along.

Negro Kills Wild Cat.

(From The Loganville Record.)

Foster Nunnally, colored, living near Piney Grove, killed a large wildcat at his home one morning last week. Foster's chickens have been disappearing at the rate of twenty-five per night for three nights, and he was puzzled as to what sort of varmint was getting away with so much of his poultry. One night last week he cooped twenty-five nice frys to bring to town next day, but they were missing next morning. Foster went on a determined hunt and found a wild cat lodged under his house enjoying a chicken feast. It was finally dislodged and shot.

This is thought to be the same cat that has furnished the hunters in that community several exciting chases during the last two years.

A Business Man's Recreation

Upon the way a man spends his time outside of business very largely depends his efficiency in business. A great many men of large affairs to-day are making music their hobby. This has become possible only through the invention of the Kimball 88-Note Player-Piano. Through this medium you can become familiar with the classics, the latest popular hits, dance and religious music, without any previous musical training.

In other words, the Kimball Player-Piano bridges years of technical training, because anyone can play with but a few minutes' instruction. With but one stroke of the lever, the Player is transformed into a piano for hand or manual playing.

Our record of sales shows that the Kimball Player is bought by the leaders in the business world, such as bank presidents, lawyers, doctors and captains of industry in every line.

We cordially invite you to a demonstration of our several styles; then you will understand and realize fully that we don't overstate the immense amount of satisfaction they afford.

If you have an old instrument or an instrument in your home that remains silent because there is no skilled musician to play it, we will make you a reasonable allowance for it to apply on the purchase of a new Kimball Player. Remember that the value of such instruments taken in trade is greater to-day, intrinsically, than it will be later on.

We will be pleased to have a salesman call upon request.

To-morrow we are offering a strong array of values in used Pianos and Player-Pianos.

Cash, or convenient terms arranged.

CAPTURING A LOVER

By Walter Gregory.

"Don't move, or I shall shoot!"

The clear girlish voice rang out with unmistakable emphasis.

"If you careless that would be," replied the man in a tone of gentle reproof.

He paused in his efforts to get himself and a pair of saddlebags over the rude fence, and turned calmly in the direction of the voice.

A black-haired, black-eyed girl of about 20 stood at the edge of the clearing, not two rods away. She had on a serviceable brown suit and leggings, her cloth cap was slightly askew—and she was pointing straight at him a light but businesslike rifle.

"Excuse me for referring to it," said quietly, standing motionless by the fence, "but if you keep up that careless, unsociable way of pointing guns at people, some day there'll be an accident."

"If you resist or try to draw your gun, I'll shoot you as fast as you can," exclaimed the girl, "and I can shoot straight, too. Put up your hands!"

"Before you get utterly foolish, and do anything you will be sorry for," said the man, disregarding the order, and still leaning easily against the fence, "stop and think whether you hadn't better tell me what is on your mind, and why you threaten to murder an unarmed stranger."

"As if you didn't know, and you standing there with the saddlebags themselves—my own saddlebags, and the money probably still in them!"

"O, as for these saddlebags, well, perhaps there is more mistake than madness than there seemed to be at first. Do these belong to you?"

"Of course they do; and you are the robber who stole one from the stable last night; and there is my silver mounting on them, and what have you done with my horse? And, O, you robber and murderer, I ought to shoot you right away. But if you will keep your hands up and walk ahead of me, I will take you back to Clinton and give you up. I don't know but that will hang you as soon as you get there. They ought to."

"My dear young lady," said the man, with unruffled calm, to the panting girl, whose eyes blazed anew at this address, "I can see that there is some reason back of your mistake. But you are making a complete mistake. I am no robber. And these saddlebags I found—"

"No doubt!" said the girl, with ragging sarcasm; "found them growing on a huckleberry bush probably. And you didn't shoot at the cashier of the Clinton bank, and you didn't steal my horse and saddle last night to escape with; and there aren't 100 men with guns looking for you this minute. Now, I tell you what, I mean business! Will you surrender, or shall I shoot? Well, then, reflection, I think I'll surrender."

Put up your hands then. I shall make you walk ahead of me and carry those bags."

"How can I carry them with my hands above my head?"

"Well, you know what I mean. You must, aren't you a horrid villain! You smile as if it was all a joke. Take up those bags at once and go ahead, and remember, my rifle will be pointed at you all the time, and I shall be close behind you!"

She started toward him. But she had not fully counted on the difficulty of keeping a steady aim and at the same time walking over the rough ground. Her foot caught in a root, and the feet flew, the rifle going off as it struck.

In three leaps the man was at her side, one hand grasping her weapon, and one hold out to assist her as she sprang to her feet; and per haps to avoid her face more than it would have, my mistaken young friend. I have your rifle. You gotten now, and just listen reasonably to what I have to say. I wouldn't harm you for the world. And I am no more a bank robber than you are."

"I am a lumber surveyor, a stranger in this part of Michigan. I walked over from Port Coleman this morning. More than an hour ago, down the road, I met a riderless horse, a white horse, with dark stocking. I tried to catch him, but he was shy.

"These bags I found while I was prospecting though the woods; they lay near the body of a man in that clump of bushes over there. You can go over and look at the body, if you don't believe me. I guess he is your robber, right enough, and I guess he did get away without carrying some lead in him.

"I looked in the bags and found they were stuffed with bank bills, and I guessed pretty near what had happened. I was trying to find a way to the nearest town when you suddenly hailed me."

The reaction was too much for the girl, who was, after all, little more than a child. She swayed unsteadily. The man caught her by the arms, supported her to a big log and set her down.

"I guess I probably made a mistake," came at length, in rather a faint voice. "You don't talk much like a robber. And you don't look much like one, glancing up into the clear, manly face.

"I ask you to excuse me. I was dreadfully excited. Father taught me to shoot, and I love to go around in the woods. But I had no idea of meeting the robber. They all thought he would strike toward the old Indian line. When I saw those saddle-bags, I was dead sure you must be the robber.

"You couldn't very well think any thing else. But my name is John Carling, and I am in the employ of the Western & Northern. When you are sufficiently rested we will go to Clinton together, and I will introduce myself properly to your father. I am expecting to spend most of this season in the vicinity of Clinton."

Three months later, in the dusk of a beautiful, balmy evening, John Carlton and Vivien Laroche were talking together. He had seen much of her during these happy summer weeks, and was an honored guest at her father's house whenever he called.

"Miss Laroche, I often think of our first meeting, and what a brave, piquant little figure it was that ordered me to put up my hands."

"Let's leave that to rest in the past." The girl's flush was partly concealed by the gathering twilight. "At any rate, my horse, and the bank's money both came back, and nobody was the poorer but the poor robber. You must have thought me a bloodthirsty child."

"No so horribly bloodthirsty. I noticed how you trembled, and remembered later how you shrank from the sight of the blood on the saddle bags. Not very bloodthirsty, but just pucky and bewitching."

"I suppose that part of it why, I am only 8 years older than you. Do you know, dear child, at my great, tedious woman, my thoughts have been very often to the past few weeks."

"I did not know then that it was Fate that called me to go ahead, but it was not long afterward that it dawned on me. And I shall be close behind you!"

Without a single word the girl nestled closer, and when the train had filed close up to him in the eventide, he felt the hand found her head rested on his shoulder.

"Darling," he whispered at last, "on that blessed day you did not, indeed, capture a bank robber, but you captured a willing servant and lover for the rest of your life."

(Ed A. Gorwey, in Leslie's)

One of the most surprising things about the national pastime is the ability of Manager Mack, of the Athletics, to find baseball players in the most unusual places. At any time he can pick out a crowd of juveniles on the field whose names are unknown to fame, and from this crowd he picks an even stranger, from these develop a lot of men who, as a result, materially in winning pennants for Philadelphia. It is said that toward the close of each season, when Mack knows that the important race is virtually over, he employs a lot of unknowns into the game and prepares them for the work that they are expected to do with the club two years later. Most of these budding phenoms are sent back to the bushes for further seasoning, but a few are kept on the bench with the regulars for more home training and to be used in cases of emergency. Soon after the Athletics clinched the pennant in September, the usual crop of youngsters was trotted out by Mack, and the fans were given several opportunities to see the boys who will help him get for the pennants in 1913 and 1914. Connie's repeated successes go to prove that having an ace in the hole is a good system in baseball as well as when playing cards.

African Women.

Although woman in Africa is regarded as property, she sometimes exercises what are seldom infringed upon, and of these the most important is her right to marry whom she pleases, or rather to refuse to marry one who does not please her. The Southern Workman says, "There are two grim reasons for declining to force women against their wills have been known to commit suicide. Second, girls married against their wills have murdered their unloved husbands, generally during their first when asleep. And to these reasons may be added the fear of mental unhappiness. So, in forcing oneself upon one of these women there is the risk of losing for ever the possible opportunity of a happy married life. The young girls are well trained for purity than for anything else, and draw many suitors. Every girl will tell you that she wishes to have the right to have a good husband and children. Every man is anxious to have the right girl to marry well. To secure a wife one must pay a price, which is called by the English the father to be dead, to the nearest male relative. If a girl is more than 12 years old, she rather naturally asks a large dowry for herself, and the less past a girl is the lower the father may give. Sometimes the father will not permit the couple to live together until the dowry has been paid in full, but the remainder of the dowry his wife dies. Among the women of Africa divorce is common, and can be set aside by either party. Polygamy is allowed by law, and there is mutual helpfulness and the perpetuation of the race.

Sir Walter Raleigh's People.

(From The Chicago News.)

Direct descendants of Sir Walter Raleigh's colonists are certain to be found in the district they have inhabited for centuries, smoking the ancient clay pipes referred to by Raleigh in Blackwood's Magazine. One of Raleigh's expeditions, sent out in 1587, under John White, left eighty-nine men, seventeen women and two children in Virginia—the first English settlement of North America, which was then called. A second expedition, sent in 1590 could find nothing of the colonists and the latest "discovery" adds, "nor was any National Geographic Society expedition to trace of them." In the magazine named tells how White, on a walking tour through southern regions of Robeson county, North Carolina, he found descendants of the Elizabethan venturers, who retain the color and speech of over 300 years ago. The author knocked at seventeen the door of a log house. The door was opened by a tall dark squillino featured man with Indian black hair and deep blue eyes and instead of the usual American accent and phrase he used the words "Good morrow." Over the fire in the house and warming. Over the doorway hung a perfect old flint lock musket, and on the quaint old mantelpiece, an old pewter pot and an old English crane, on which to hang the pot. All were among the furniture.

Mr. Terry comments, "Not a day from roaring, fuming New York, but I dropped back, like Rip Van Winkle, into a past century, or had I ventured, dabbled into a haunted house." Then his host, John Catemain, in strange but perfect speech, told of "the pure brid Indian and English ancestors from whom he claimed descent, as did some 4,000 others in Robeson county. He spoke of the great hall of his race, which his 'fathers' (for fathers) had traveled westward from the land granted by Sir Roanoke in the days of Good Queen Bess, and of the utter isolation in which he and his people lived there in their little corner of North Carolina, inhabited by white men (negroes they will not admit), the world forgetting, by the world forgot."

The next morning Mr. Terry gave his guest a note that would insure him a welcome from any other of his folk. They shook hands, "and that was the last I saw of John Catemain, Croisan Indian, direct descendant of that identical John Catemain who came over with Raleigh's 'lost' expedition of the year 1587. Following the road from the place where he met Catemain to Manteo on Roanoke island—where Raleigh's colonists were landed—Mr. Terry came across many Croatans who boasted of their descent from the Elizabethan ventures.

Ex-Slave Comes to Atlanta to See Great-Grandson of First Owner

William Paxton, 85 years old—or 85 years young, to be more accurate—black as the ace of spades, with a thatch of white wool covering his head, is a splendid example of the rapidly vanishing "befo' de wah" negro made famous in story and song.

He lives in Walton county and has lived there since the day of his birth. He comes to Atlanta every once in awhile to see Paul Wesley, the well-known builder, who is the great-grandson of his first owner, Ben Paxton.

William—no one would think of calling him Bill—has been married but once, and his wife is still living. She is said to be toward the close of which season, when Mack knows that the important race is virtually over, he employs a lot of unknowns into the game and prepares them for the work that they are expected to do with the club two years later. Most of these budding phenoms are sent back to the bushes for further seasoning, but a few are kept on the bench with the regulars for more home training and to be used in cases of emergency. THAT HAT

By Elsie Endicott.

Eunice always dreaded the coming of spring, because there was always the distressing thought that just when all the living world was putting on its Easter finery she must go forth as usual, wearing the old black leghorn hat.

Eunice's mother had thought the hat which was the best of its kind to be had, because it was always her rule to get the best of anything in a hat and it was dreadfully disappointed.

Eunice's mother had thought the hat which was the best of its kind to be had, because it was always her rule to get the best of anything in a hat and it was dreadfully disappointed. Eunice begged for cheaper things and the privilege of having them changed occasionally.

Mrs. Lyx was obdurate. As she had been dressed up she dressed her own daughter. The leghorn hat had been turned and twisted and loaned into some semblance to prevailing modes until Eunice was ashamed to take it to Miss Adams, who was the connecting link between the "best people" and the plain people of Mrs. Lyx looked at her daughter in millinery parlors, and how long ago had Eunice's leghorn had come, to admire and covet. Eunice had suffered the striking sense of futility which hurts to the very soul.

She knew exactly the kind of hat she wanted—white. With a froth of willow plume about the crown. Miss Adams had just such a hat and it was marked $20.

Eunice's mother did not seem the price, but Edith Berns had. In fact, Edith had spoken of the wonderful hat.

And, oh, it's the loveliest thing, really," Edith said. "And I look well—well, of course, it's out of the question for me. My mother can't afford $20 for hats, but your mother can. You ought to have it since you want it so badly. And, anyway, it's time you had a new hat. You must be deathly sick of that old leghorn."

Eunice admitted. Eunice, faintly, swallowing at a sob. "But mother thinks it will do very well for a while yet. And, of course, it will," Eunice was loyal to her mother. "Only—only I do so want a new hat this spring."

"Well, said Edith comfortingly, "all I can say is, if you don't have one you needn't expect Ward Royce to pay you much attention."

Eunice knew that. Her throat ached so suddenly that she could not answer.

"I saw him with Belle White yesterday," Edith went on with the frank cruelty of youth and personal inexperience. "She was dressed to kill—everything new. You know that big black hat we both liked so much—one of the first Miss Adams showed? And she looked stunning."

Still Eunice did not answer. She went home helplessly unhappy, to find her mother sitting in the cheerful company of an overflowing work basket.

"I'm making over the sleeves of your shirtwaists, dear," she said. "I've found that by using a smaller pattern I can cut out all the worn places. The waists will wear for a good while yet. And I find went on Mrs. Lyx brightly, as it she were imparting the most pleasing information, "that I can turn your child skirt. It isn't faced a particle on the under side. They consist of buying the best material. Always remember that, dear. The old child skirt will wear surprisingly to wear with your shirt waists all summer."

Eunice's lips quivered. Men thought so much of a "new hat to go with"

"I suppose," she said, making desperately one last appeal, "that if any one would find old skirt and those old waists can have a new hat to go with them, can't I, mother?"

Mrs. Lyx looked at her daughter in some amazement. "Why, child!" she said. "Why, I expect that hat to do for two seasons yet. It is a very good hat, indeed—much better than any I had when I was your age. I am surprised that you should be dissatisfied with it, Eunice."

Eunice was silent. But that night after she had gone to bed she sat for a long time by the window, thinking and crying.

Eunice was very young and very deeply, hopelessly, she believed, in love. Suddenly there came the twang of a banjo and a sonorous voice singing:

"Weep no more, my lady,
Weep no more today—
I won't," said Eunice to herself, softly, for her mother slept on the other side of the wall, "but before I do I'll have a session with that hat. I'll never again take it to Miss Adams to have her kitty trimmed with it."

Eunice had never trimmed a hat in her life. She felt a fierce pleasure now in stripping the faded pink roses from the black leghorn, and she wheedled from her mother some wash silk. Then she applied some ribbon and her best hat chokrie after a manner which she had observed in Miss Adams' window.

She was amazed at her own achievement. Incongruously, she believed, it was the best hat she had ever had. She tried it on before the glass. It was not unbecoming. Then she crept into bed, quite happy.

She showed the hat to her mother next morning.

"It looks well," was Mrs. Lyx' only comment.

"I'm sure," Eunice said, speaking of that new resolution which had come to her with her success, "I could learn to trim hats for other people. I should like to know how to earn money."

Mrs. Lyx looked pained. "Why, my dear child, why should you wish to earn money?" she asked. "There is no need. You have enough of everything now."

Eunice was disappointed. She knew how her mother felt, but if only her mother had known how she felt!

That afternoon Edith Berns came running in. "Oh, Eunice, come with us!" she said. "We're going on the river—Hal and Kitty and I, and we want you. Do hurry. They're waiting now, down on the bank."

"Put on a hat, dear," said Mrs. Lyx, Eunice's mother, in the kindest way. She felt a shy pride in the fact that she had trimmed it herself, and she wondered what Edith would say. What Edith said was characteristic of her charming, sarcastic self.

"If long association is endearing you must be awfully attached to that hat," she remarked.

As for Hal Kinch, Edith's irresponsible cousin, he had an appropriate quotation from Omar Khayyam, the vegetable kingdom does Eunice's hat presently, or the course of courtes the "live-forever." He also warbled a song of "Auld Lang Syne" to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne."

It was all very distressing. It did seem a pity that the delightful May afternoon must be spoiled for her because of an old hat.

"Look, Eunice!" cried Kitty. "Look, Edie! Ward Royce and Elmer Brent out there in that canoe."

It was indeed, Ward and Elmer. And when they saw the quartet in the larger boat should greeting they paddled toward them.

At that moment Eunice thought she was never sure—that she felt something under her hat as if a bird were preparing stealthily withdrawn. But before she had time to lift her hand to her head a smart little breeze came rushing over the water and whisked the hat from her head. She gave a little cry and a dive, digging and skimming on the current in the direction of the canoe.

It was Ward Royce who rescued that hat finally at the risk of a good wetting. He handed it to Eunice dripping, a hopelessly sodden thing.

Hal was speaking facetiously, with one eye on Eunice, whose face was scarlet. She felt joy and sorrow and relief all at once. The hat was a wreck, really. She could never wear it again.

Ward Royce detached Eunice from the others of the group and walked home with her that afternoon. He carried the hat and posed out Eunice's explanations of the catastrophe to her slightly surprised mother.

"You ought to have worn it securely," Mrs. Lyx said. "Well, you may get another hat, dear. I think you shall choose for yourself this time. You are quite old enough. Only get something handsome and wearable, and remember, I do not wish to say more than $15."

Eunice bought the white horsehair hat with the frothy willow plume. And then, because it was such a handsome hat that it put all Eunice's other belongings quite to shame, Mrs. Lyx decided that she must have a dainty lingerie frock to go with it.

And so it came about that Eunice was as charmingly clad from summer as even she could wish to be.

And because she looked so sweet and was so sweet Ward Royce paid her that kind of extraordinary attention which only ends in the one perfect way, though be maintained with the absolute conviction of the man in love that he had learned to adore her not under the willow plume, but under the old black leghorn.

Our Cats and Dogs.

(Kate Upson Clark, in Leslie's.)

We have all known families in which the dog—or sometimes it is the cat, which is just a trifle surer—is considered before all the rest, and everybody except the spellbound mother and daughters or her ridiculous husband knows that the dog is there for the comfort of dogs and cats before that of any human beings concerned, but we are generally the ones who sin the worst in that way. Let us love our dogs and cats, and weep over the touching tales which the novelists weave for us about them, but let us be reasonable about it. A certain teacher used to say, when the little girls in her classes showed symptoms of undue emotionalism, "Be manly, girls, be manly." It is not a bad thing to say to the girls and women who make fools of themselves over their pet dogs and cats.

The Land of Opportunity.

(Jasper, in Leslie's.)

They used to duck people who were suspected of being in the old New England, but those who really deserves the ducking stool are the authors of the nauseous peace who stands at street corners and solemnly declare against the policies of their own government. Against the rights of a man to do as he pleases with what he has earned, who defy the majesty of the law and denounce the Creator of the universe as if he were a species of evil rather than of good. Many of them imagine that this is the land of opportunity. We have plenty of room for agitators, and the people will look at this matter as calmly as Germany, would contain the entire population of the German empire and have room to spare.

We have terrible sores waiting to be cauterized, mines waiting to be opened, factories that ought to be built and railroads that should be constructed to meet the wants of a growing people. But who should do all this work? It cannot be done without the use of capital. Why deride the capitalist? Why not welcome him with open arms and invite him to come?

Any man of sense will look at this question in the proper light and then things will begin to hum. Think of the millions of dollars that the railroads alone would spend if they could raise the capital. Isn't this a matter of consequence to the working masses and to the small shopkeeper?

A Relic of Summer.

"I felt like Robinson Crusoe just now," said the man who was spending a belated vacation at a deserted summer resort.

"Make a discovery?" asked the hotel clerk.

When the man depends on luck nobody depends on the man.

Going home to dinner is the one thing at which some men are really successful.

What So Precious As a Healthy Baby?

Every Youngster Can Have Fine Digestion if Given a Good Baby Laxative.

HOWARD ROUSE.

In spite of the greatest personal care and the most intelligent attention to diet, babies and children will become constipated, and it is a fact that constipation and indigestion have wrecked many a young life. To start with a good digestive apparatus is to start life without handicap.

But, as we know, all have perfect working bowels, we must do the next best thing and acquire them, or gain them in time greatly. This can be done by the use of a laxative-tonic that has been recommended by a great many mothers. The remedy is called Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and has been on the market for two generations. It can be bought conveniently at any drug store for fifty cents or one dollar. Many and those who are already convinced of its merits buy the dollar size.

Its mildness makes it the ideal medicine for children, and it is also very pleasant to the taste. It is sure in its effect, and genuinely harmless. Very little of it is required and its frequent use does not cause it to lose its effect, as is the case with so many other remedies.

Thousands can testify to its merits in constipation, indigestion, biliousness, sick headaches, among them reliable people like Mrs. James H. House, of Marinette, Wis. Her little son, Howard, was fifteen months old last April, but he was sick with bowel trouble from birth and suffered intensely. Since Mrs. Rouse has been giving him Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin all trouble has disappeared and the boy is becoming robust.

Thousands use Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin constantly in the house, for every member of the family can use it from infancy to old age. The users of Syrup Pepsin have learned to cold cathartics, salts, mineral waters, pills and other harsh remedies for they do but temporary good and are a shock to any delicate system.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it postpaid by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 419 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. A postal card with your name and address on it will do.

$3——$4——$5——$6

Manhattans!

Occupy the pinnacle of SHIRT POPULARITY. We've a ROYAL LINE of them: also a splendid line of the "EXCELLO"—a SHIRT OF RARE EXCELLENCE and CORRECT STYLE.

Manhattans and Excellos—$1.50 to $3.50.

Winter Negligees!

Oxfords of English Madras of sheer weave and loyal quality, in the newest of the new colors and loom effects.

$2——$2.50——$3.00

Russian Cords!

The aristocrats of shirt weaves. Autocrats of style. Pink—blue—green. Superbly fashioned garments from makers of high repute.

Neckwear!

Neckwear designers have given us newer and more novel effects this fall than has probably ever been produced a any previous season.

An attempt to describe these silken and velvet garnitures would be vain indeed. Weaves have caught the reflection of sanguinary wars, and woven a carnage of colors in their silken meshes. These brilliant and bizarre combinations, highly favored as they are, have alluring competitors for your choosing in the demure pastel colors and shades, which we are showing in newest of neckwear features. Imported scarfs a bound. Mackelfield contributes a glory of new effects. New Jacquard Persian designs and scroll figures. New English crocheted Scarfs, extremely wide lustrous folds. English Squares and "Double-overs" in great variety. $1.50 to $3.50.

Columbia Cuf-Turn Shirt!

A new idea in shirt making that provides an extra pair of cuffs that are brought into immediate use by simply folding back the soiled pair. The method of instantly supplying yourself with clean cuffs, in an emergency, is simplicity itself—no detaching or attaching. The double service cuff is a part of the Shirt. We have these novel and splendidly fashioned garments in a great variety of stripes and figured effects. Plain or plaited—$1.50 and $2.00.

Book Reviews in Tabloid

A sweet and lovely story that will appeal to all lovers of a love story novel is "The Broken Halo" stands, to use the tender words of the Little White Lady of the story, for "an outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual loss." Dr. Dick had suffered just such a loss in boyhood, which had left him in an unhappy state, but through the tenderness and sympathy of one who understood the depth of this doctor's sufferings, who had probed the wounds and healed through her forgiving love, is only rivaled by the reciprocal devotion of the doctor for Dr. Dick, in fighting the disease that threatens her health, and the darkness of unbelief endangers his welfare. The Little White Lady, the Lame Lady of the Manor and Little Dick, the Halo smasher, are very interesting characters in Mrs. Barclay's last book.

Mrs. Florence Barclay, who is best known as the author of "The Rosary," comes from a family trained in the traditions of the best literature and many of its members have attained distinction through their pen. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. Charles Smith whose "Ministering Children" received a warm welcome some half a century ago. She is a niece of the famous Arabic scholar, Professor Cowell, who rendered such valuable assistance in connection with the translation of "Omar Khayyam." Her sister is Maud Ballington Booth, who is the author of several delightful books for young people—all published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York and London.

INTERESTING NOVELS.

The Garden Without Walls. By Comingsby Dawson. The announcement of this novel was as "a mature volume by a new writer," but he has passed on hundreds of books of important publishing house and reviewed the output of fiction for several years as literary editor of one of the most popular magazines, and he has not had unusual opportunities for observation and story at his fingers' ends like novels should be written, and the style that is the most pleasurable to the world of readers. The season spent some time abroad this summer motoring in company with Lawrence Norsth, Cosmo Hamilton, and occasionally he was met with the author by his publisher, Mr. William Heinemann.

Cosmo Hamilton, the English dramatist, whose recent success has been enthusiastically supported by the drama leagues, in a recent interview deplored the style of the modern novel, but made an exception of Mr. Dawson's which he said "puts back the clock to the days of Thackeray, Dickens and George Eliot, but he adds that in this book Mr. Dawson has let himself go more than he has allowed himself to go before in his novels." (Henry Holt & Co., New York.)

BOOKS FROM HARPER BROS.

The Main Road. By Maude Radford Warren. Author of "Peter, Peter," etc. Janet, the little heroine, is a very interesting character as she journeys from childhood to youth as womanhood—it is the usual novel sweetly written, and ends with the old story happily ended with the golden sunshine of a bright future together. The story of Janet's itinerary from sentiment to love and the many and experiences as she followed the main road to the end of confidence, but which ended in the journey that is the best thing in life—the journey which is made up of joys and fears, pains and compensations, hopes and disappointments, hopes and gains; a voyage which is merely the ordinary daily living of a united two; a voyage which, only two landlords will know well every rod of its way to the voyage of that other harbor whither we take our passage alone."

The Work of the Rural School. By J. D. Eggleston, Commissioner of Agriculture Virginia Polytechnic institute, and Robert W. Brown. A well-written book that deals with all essential subjects and also impresses the fact of the importance of the new rural school as an expression of a new movement in rural life.

Partners. Margaret DeLand. A very sweet and fragrant story.

"The Certain Family." By Mrs. Humphrey Ward. Mrs. Ward's heroines are always so sweet and charming that it is really a delight to have to introduce the readers to Marcia Corystan and her interesting family, which ends in a dramatic presentation of the struggle between the liberal and conservative elements in the English life of today.

BOOKS RECEIVED FROM L. C. PAGE & CO., OF BOSTON.

John o'Partlette. By Jean Edgerton. A story full of interesting characters, and so full of courage and life that the readers will enjoy every page of it.

Of course there is the usual hero, the portrayal of all true love in Miss Edgerton has the author's mastery of her art.

Longbeard. The story of the first fire. By C. H. Robinson. A human documentary of prehistoric times. Unusual story that will interest you. Illustrated by Charles Livingston Bull.

Poland of Today and Yesterday. A review of its history, past and present, and of the causes which resulted in its partition, together with the story of its social, political and economic conditions today. By Nevin O. Winter. Forty-eight illustrations. This is not only a beautiful volume, beautifully printed and illustrated, but a true story of the brave and unfortunate Poles, who are seeking our land today, and a study of seeking our land today, and a study of Poland and its people will make one realize as told by Mr. Winter, who not there as told by Mr. Winter, who not only gives us the story of Poland's glories, but a lesson that it is necessary for the Anglo-Saxons of today to familiarize.

The Golden Road. By L. M. Montgomery. Frontispiece in full color from a painting by George Gibbs. "We are upon a time we all walked on the golden road." (From the story.) Miss Montgomery has introduced a happy, fun-loving group in the "golden road" to the parting of the ways in this new story, and the author's stories are becoming very popular, for they have the power to "uplift the spirit and drive the pessimist into bankruptcy."

BOOKS FOR GIRLS.

Dorothy Brooks Across the Sea. By Frances Campbell Sparhawk. Another beautiful volume of the Dorothy Brooks books. Dorothy goes abroad with some of her college friends, and, of course, they have some lively experiences. Besides these there are many interesting foreign scenes. (Thomas Y. Crowell Company.)

Betty Tuckets Ambition. Second volume of "Mother Tucker Books." By F. Angelina W. Wray. Illustrated by Percy Young. Mother Tucker's success has really had the flavor of the "Pepper Boxes." Betty, the eldest of the five seven, was a very ambitious little girl and wanted to write for the papers. (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard.)

The Camp Fire Girls Amid the Snows, and The Camp Fire Girls Down the River. By Margaret Vandercook. Publishers, (John C. Winston Company, Philadelphia.)

BOOKS FOR BOYS.

The Rainy Day Railroad War. By Frederick Orin Bartlett. A story laid in the Maine woods. It is an exciting contest between the lumbermen and the builders of a little 6-mile railroad. Mr. Bartlett has a young people's story long out of college, but full of pluck and grit, and he has given the right understanding that he is to do his work in the world as employers. (Harper & Brother, New York.)

The Deering at Princeton. A story of college life. By Latta Griswold. Illustrated. From a boy Anthony Deering has looked forward to going to Princeton as the father had done before him, but it had only been a dream until the time came when he left the train at the junction and realized that he was actually entering Princeton. (The MacMillan Company, New York.)

Football—For Public and Player. By Walter Camp and Lorin F. Deland. A story of this book. Mr. Reed has had some twenty years of experience as player, college coach and expert spectator, and has made a high reputation as a writer on football for The New York Evening Post and Evening Mail. Publishers, Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York.)

MUSIC NOTES.

Street & Smith, music publishers, New York, have recently published some very popular numbers, among the number "Dance With Me," "Somebody's Calling for Me," "Kickapoo Medicine Man," "Big Chief," Indian characteristic March; "I Could Die Happy With All," "I'll Soon be Back Among the Old Folks," ballad; "Don't Did You Make Me Love You," "I Wish That You Were Born to Me," novelty; "You Were Just Made for Me," "In Memory's Garden," "Love You." This is by no means a full list of the new compositions by Diamond Square.

MAGAZINE CLIPPINGS.

Scribner's serials come to an end in the November number. Mrs. Wharton ends "The Custom of the Country," and John Galsworthy's "The Dark Flower." "The Love Life of Man." Both stories can now be had in book form. An interesting article by "The Anonymous Millionaire" (Mr. McKinley), by the Archdeacon of the Yukon, Ex-President Taft tells "The Life History of the African Rhinoceros and Hippopotamus," the story is illustrated from photographs and drawings by Philip R. Goodwyn.

Women's Stories. — Twice-a-Month, is proving to be a very popular magazine. "The Masks of Love," is a serial story by Gertrude Hall Brownell Gentry. Marjorie Spofford was going to be married and she wanted to go on the stage for awhile. Those months changed her life and made a story. "Where Did Lottie Go?" another interesting article by Mary Heaton Vorse. The conclusion of "The Turning Point."

The Southern Woman's Magazine in its October issue has published "Is a Girl Work if She Does Not Need Money?" Between the lines of the affirmative position on the affirmative side. "Those who can read will understand." Dr. Jacobs says: "Know this is woman's era. She must not be shut out from all votes and politics but must create her own useful life." Miss Dix says: "I believe it is and for the race for women to make a home unless it is absolutely necessary," and then he gives his reasons.

The Nautilus Magazine's cover is very attractive this month, as is the editorials by the editors. William E. and Jessie Towner Towson have written a beautiful story, "The Quest of the Joy of Self-Mastery," by Orison Swett Marden, as well as two articles by "Me and Woman Jointly Govern Home." Why not in — Reprinted from Pictorial Review—current for 1913.

The November Green Book has several interesting articles: "The Man Who Stroke Ahead," "Mrs. Peter Who Wonderly," "Barriers Overcome," by a Blind Girl," "The Ghost Dancer," by Paul Dickey and Charles W. Goddard. A novelization of a recent metropolitan success.

205 COPPER MINERS ARRESTED BY TROOPS

Calumet, Mich., October 24.—Two hundred and five copper strikers who were arrested in the Calumet and Hecla mines by deputies and troops on charges of conspiracy and violation of the injunction and interference with workmen, were arraigned this afternoon before Circuit Judge O'Brien A. Boughton.

One hundred and forty of them from Allouez will be tried under a blanket charge October 30 and the remainder from Mohawk on a similar charge on October 31. All the prisoners were released on their own recognizance.

Two arrests were made this afternoon and four more tonight in connection with the stoning in Hancock yesterday of a Negro strikebreaker on the train bringing in strikebreakers to the Calumet and Hecla mines.

The Duluth South Shore and Atlantic evening passenger train, carrying strikebreakers for the Calumet and Hecla Mining company, was fired into tonight about a mile from Hancock. Soldiers and deputies returned the fire. No one on the train was hurt.

EX-CHAMBERLAIN HYDE WANTS REINSTATEMENT

New York, October 24.—Charles H. Hyde, former city chamberlain, who was disbarred in October, 1912, on his conviction of a charge of bribery growing out of his relations with the Equitable Trust company and the Northern bank, applied through his attorney, John R. Stanchfield, to the appellate division today for reinstatement.

Since Hyde's disbarment the appellate division itself has decided he was wrongly convicted, the lawyer said, and although the state had taken the case to the court of appeals, he pleaded that Hyde be allowed to resume his law practice to support himself and family.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

The Sin of Moses and Aaron.

Lesson. Numbers xx. 1-13. Golden Text. Psalm cvi. 16.

Let the words of my mouth and meditation of my heart be acceptable in Thy sight, O Lord, my Rock, and my Redeemer."

(1) And the children of Israel, even the whole congregation, came into the desert of Zin in the first month: and the people abode in Kadesh; and Miriam died there, and was buried there. (2) And there was no water for the congregation: and they assembled themselves together against Moses and against Aaron. (3) And the people strove with Moses, and spake, saying, Would God that we had died when our brethren died before the Lord! (4) And why have ye brought the assembly of the Lord into this wilderness, that we should die there, we and our cattle? (5) And wherefore have ye made us to come up out of Egypt, to bring us in unto this evil place? it is no place of seed, or of figs, or of vines, or of pomegranates; neither is there any water to drink. (6) And Moses and Aaron went from the presence of the assembly unto the door of the tent of the congregation, and fell upon their faces: and the glory of the Lord appeared unto them. (7) And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, (8) Take the rod, and gather thou the congregation, thou, and Aaron thy brother, and speak ye unto the rock before their eyes, that it give forth its water: so thou shalt bring forth to them water out of the rock: thus shalt give the congregation and their cattle drink. (9) And Moses took the rod from before the Lord, as he commanded him. (10) And Moses and Aaron gathered the assembly together before the rock, and he said unto them, Hear now, ye rebels; shall we bring you forth water out of this rock? (11) And Moses lifted up his hand, and smote the rock with his rod twice: and there came forth abundantly, and the congregation drank, and their cattle also. (12) And the Lord said unto Moses and Aaron, Because ye believed me not, to sanctify me in the eyes of the children of Israel, therefore ye shall not bring this assembly into the land which I have given them. (13) This is the water of Meribah; because the children of Israel strove with the Lord, and he was sanctified in them.

THE STORY.

For the second time we find the children of Israel in a position where they were without water. Probably this is to be looked upon as a merciful dispensation of testing. It was certainly a test opportunity for the increase of their faith in God; and it would seem as though that faith ought to have operated immediately. In view of the fact that this is the third occasion He had met their need in this respect, instead of this having been so, however, they were filled with fear and with anger toward Moses and Aaron, considering against Moses and Aaron, complaining that they had brought them into the wilderness to die.

In the hour of difficulty Moses and Aaron went apart before the face of God; and he again provided water, commanding Moses to take the rod with him in order that it might yield them water.

It was at this point that Moses failed, in company with his brother, in such a way that his punishment consisted in his being ordained from that hour to die in the wilderness.

It was at this point that Moses failed, in company with his brother, in such a way that his punishment consisted in his being ordained from that hour to die in the wilderness.

The event needs careful consideration, for it is the only occasion understand wherein his failure is recorded. Instead of his speaking, however, they were filled with fear and with anger toward Moses and Aaron, considering against Moses and Aaron, complaining that they had brought them into the wilderness to die.

That was his failure. Not that the things he said concerning them were untrue, but that the saying of them, the manner of saying them, were wrong. It was the sin of angry retaliation, manifesting itself in a tone of temper unbecoming to one who knew Jehovah. Who had uttered no word of complaint when God had immediately and in grace supplied their need.

The psalmist, in the psalm, "It went ill with Moses for their sakes," explains the reason of the displeasure of God in this matter that they provoked his spirit, so that he spake unadvisably with His lips."

Because they were rebellious against His spirit:

And He spake unadvisably with His lips."

The Quickest, Simplest Cough Remedy

Easily and Cheaply Made at Home. Saves You $2.

This plan makes a pint of cough syrup—enough to last a family a long time. You couldn't buy as much or as good cough syrup for $2.50.

Simple as it is, it gives almost instant relief and usually conquers an ordinary cough in 24 hours. This is partly due to the fact that it is slightly laxative, stimulates the appetite and has an excellent tonic effect. It is pleasant to take—children like it. An excellent remedy, too, for whooping cough, spasmodic croup and bronchial asthma.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

Pinex is one of the oldest and best known remedial agents for the throat membranes. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other natural healing elements. Other preparations will not work in this combination.

The prompt results from this mixture have endeared it to thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

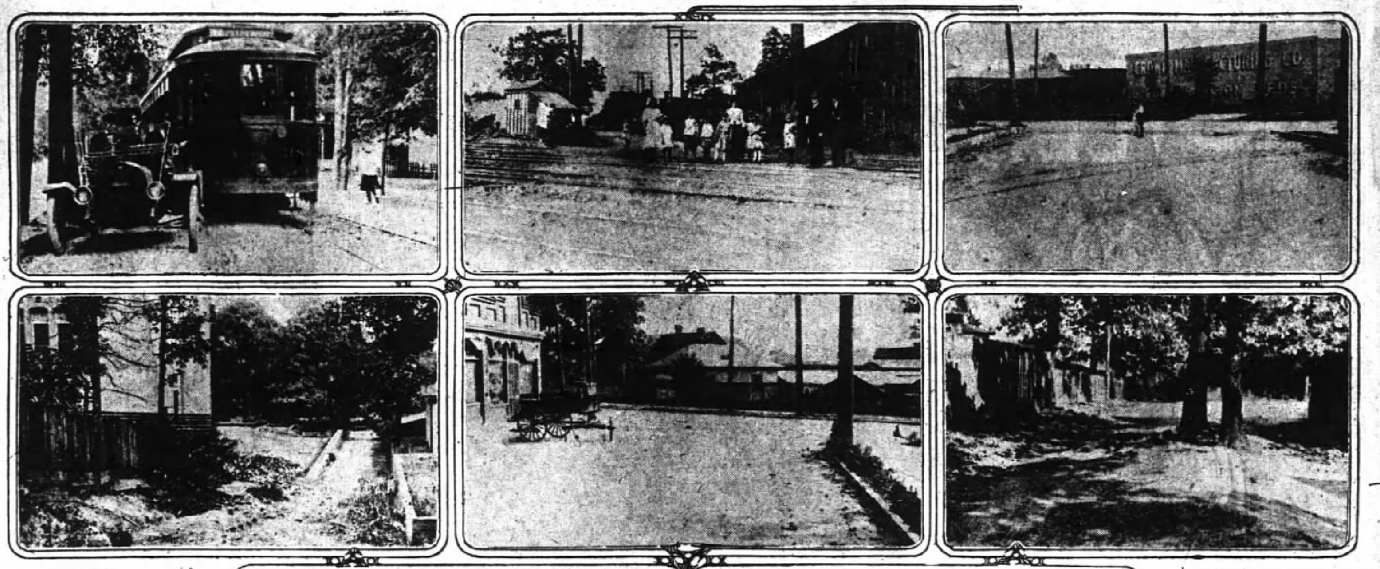
SOME NEEDS OF THE SOUTH SIDE



SOME STREET SCENES ON THE SOUTH SIDE.

Top row, left to right, view on Pryor street at Pry or Street school, showing narrowness of street; grade crossing, which endangers lives of hundreds of children attending the Pryor Street school; abrupt termination of Pulliam street at Ridge avenue; center row, a part of Tudor street—that is, where Tudor street should be; the abrupt termination of Washington street at Ridge avenue; Tudor street, showing bottled up condition—no outlet to Pryor street except an alley; bottom row: Why they call Ormond street, at this point, "Cockleburr alley;" Crew street from Haygood avenue to Weyman avenue.

By Ned McIntosh.

During the last quarter of a century Atlanta has made strides of progress like no other city in these United states, perhaps.

From a line of brick stores a thriving business section has spread itself over almost enough territory to cover what was formerly the area of the town. Skyscraper after skyscraper has been built, each rivaling in loftiness and magnificent the last. From a winding country road Peachtree street and Peachtree road have become the strongholds of big business and the sites of mansions. Viaducts have spanned the railroads, streets have been widened and smoothly paved, hills have been cut away and ravines filled.

"I hardly recognize the old town!" is a common exclamation from former residents who return for a visit.

But, upon a little reflection, is that a true statement? When an old Atlantan comes to town and makes that remark, is it true?

Is it really not a fact that he has seen an entirely new town and has not been anywhere near the "old town?"

And if he really took the trouble to see "the old town"—that part of the present city known as "the south side" which is in reality "the old town"—would he after all find it so changed?

On Whitehall street he probably would find his statement true and maybe for a few adjacent blocks, but after that?

This is to be construed as no criticism of the south side, nor the depletion of any comparison between that section and any other section of the city for the detriment of one or the profit of the other.

SOME NEEDS OF THE SOUTHSIDE.

On the contrary, it is the object of this story to point out some of the things that the south side needs, and it is being published at the special request of a large number of south side citizens and property owners.

The south side represents the homes of many of the oldest and best known families of the city—people who have known that section as "home" ever since Atlanta was Marthasville, and to whom this section with its old landmarks and picturesque spots represents old memories and beloved traditions. For these reasons the south side has remained to a much larger degree unchanged than has been the case with some other sections of the city where there has been nothing to break down but the forests.

And because the people of the south side have been more or less satisfied with the old order of things—and, indeed, there are still those who are satisfied just so—they find themselves lacking in many improvements which the section really needs.

The south side is awakening to its needs now as it has never done before. Real estate men are taking an interest in the possibilities of that section and are taking new buildings and street improvements in that direction. Clubs have been organized—notably the South Side Improvement club—for the purpose of improving the southern section of the city.

Already the efforts of these people are reaping rewards, but there are many needs which they find as yet unsupplied.

These they are now working for and not without assurance of success. It is to the citizens who are behind this movement for an improved south side that the facts for this story have been collected.

NEEDS REGRADED. REPAVED STREETS.

To begin at the business section, the south side needs regraded, repaved and reconstructed streets in and near the business section of the city.

To a degree in regrading question is being taken care of in the regrading of Whitehall street, which will establish a uniform grade for Pryor, Forsyth and cross streets.

The pavements of many of the south side's show-in streets, however, are a crying shame. It is a fact that, while this is the oldest part of the city, one can scarcely go into the newest residence section without finding better and smoother pavements and sidewalks than in the thickly populated sections of the south side.

There is street after street in the edge of the city, many without more than three or four houses on them with fine tile sidewalks, while within a stone's throw of the heart of the city are other streets whose pavement and sidewalks are all but impassable. This reference is to such streets as Pulliam, Hawson, Fair, Central avenue and others, whose pavement consists of cobble stones in the street and badly worn brick on the sidewalks.

Central avenue has recently been improved in this respect, however, a smooth brick pavement having been laid over that section immediately adjacent to the main business district of the city. This is one of the steps in the right direction that other streets in that section need. The above-named streets are not recommended above others on account of their dilapidated condition, but are merely pointed out as examples.

REMOVE OBSTRUCTIONS ON SIDEWALKS.

Another great need on south side streets near the business section is the removal of all obstructions on the sidewalks, especially old trees and broken-down fences. In many instances it will be found that such obstructions as these are not necessarily obstructions to traffic, but are eyesores which obstruct the view and which leave the impression of a dirty and dilapidated section.

An idea of the great improvement that may be obtained from the removal of these obstructions may be gained by a glance at Central avenue between Alabama street and Garnett, where this improvement has been made. A month ago the sidewalks of this street were lined with old, rotting trees, whose ragged foliage rendered no shade or ornamentation, but simply obstructed the view of the entire street and gave one the idea of stagnation and retrogradation. These old trees have now been removed and Central avenue is one of the smartest looking and most inviting business streets in any part of the city. Five and six-story wholesale buildings which have recently been erected at a cost of hundreds of thousands of dollars were practically hidden before this improvement was made, but are now visible and serve as a splendid advertisement for the street.

Similar improvements are needed on other streets in that vicinity.

"Further south conditions may be found even worse, especially in the neighborhood of South Pryor street, below Georgia avenue, at the end of Crew, Washington and Pulliam streets.

No more typical example of the need of attention in this section could be found, perhaps, than Ormond street where Pryor street intersects.

Street car conductors on the South Pryor line are in the habit of calling this stop "Cockleburr alley."

And the conductor is more than half right. The picture of Ormond street herewith presented bears him out. And the cockleburs are there waist-high.

SHOULD BE THING OF THE PAST.

"Cockleburr alley" should soon be a thing of the past. It should be remedied just as many other needs throughout the south side section.

These same things are going to be secured, too, if the efforts of the Southside Improvement club are to be of any avail.

For the past six months or more a number of south side citizens have been holding weekly meetings with decided regularity. The number of attendance has grown until the membership of the club has reached the hundred mark—and it's still growing.

"We are out for improvements," says Claude C. Smeister, the president of the club, "and we intend to get 'em."

The widening, regrading and repaving of South Pryor street, from Georgia avenue to Ridge avenue, was one of the first matters taken up by the club. This proposed improvement is well in hand, and the club proposes to keep right behind the many other needed things and not let up until they are secured.

"We are not going about with a long face because we have been neglected so long," said one of the active members of the club. "We are not blaming anyone in particular about the neglect which has been showered upon us, and we don't want to make it appear that we are growling and fuming about the things we haven't got in the past. As a matter of fact, we have got some things, but as the governor of a neighboring state remarked once upon a time, 'It's a mighty long time between drinks.'

GOING AFTER RESULTS.

"Now we've decided to organize, stand together, and go after the things that are ours in a determined, businesslikemanner, and if we don't get them we'll know the reason why.

"And why shouldn't we get them? Take the second ward, for example. Here we are, one of the largest wards in the city—if not in area, certainly in population. We're one of the oldest sections in the city—been paying taxes the longest, and yet, right here in the heart of this section, can be found narrow, rough, hilly streets, some of them washed out till well-night impassable; streets which start nowhere and end about the same, leaving the residents bottled up and having to pass over private property to get to and from their homes; streets without sidewalks or pavements; sewer and sanitary conditions bad in some places; main streets leading out from the center of the city which end abruptly at railroad fronts, leaving no outlets into the country.

"These are plain, common, well-known facts, and while the south side has many things to commend it, has some beautiful streets and homes in it, has many advantages over other sections of the city, and is altogether a delightful place to live because of the good folks in it—still it could be improved. And the securing of some of the things we are striving for, as shown in these pictures, will improve it."

As outlined above the work on South Pryor street is expected to be put through next year. The property owners, practically all of them, have signed petitions or cards granting two feet of ground on either side for widening purposes. There will be no objection on this point.

The necessity for widening is shown by the picture herewith, which shows that autos and other vehicles have to cross and recross the street in places to let the street cars pass. The widening of this section from Georgia avenue to Ridge avenue will be a great improvement, and it is believed that the street car company will lend its aid to this work in order to relieve its car system of the dangerous congestion there.

It is supposed to put a new grade on the street. This has been consented to, and practically every property owner has signed waivers for damages on this account. With the widening and regrading is to come a new and smooth pavement.

NECESSITY FOR WORK IS APPARENT.

The necessity for this work is apparent when it is considered that nearly all the leading streets through this section end abruptly at Ridge avenue. A perfect wall of manufacturing plants and railroad bluffs cut off Pulliam street and Washington street, as shown in the pictures, and travelers going out Capitol avenue are compelled to make a circuitous route to get into the country, dodging around the negro college property.

With South Pryor street improved, its extension will lead directly south into the Brown Mill road or Stewart avenue, paralleling the present old Lakewood park property for a half mile, and will furnish the only direct outlet for this section. The county commissioners have already pledged their help in making a fine driveway out of this extension.

Coupled with this Pryor street improvement, though handled as a separate matter, the club is working to have an underpass at the Southern tracks near Ridge avenue on this Pryor street extension. The picture here presented shows the urgent need of this underpass. Dozens of children cross and recross this network of a half dozen tracks daily going to the Pryor Street school. In some cases now the mothers go to the school after the small children in order that no foolish little loved ones safely over this dangerous crossing. There is to be no let up, say southsiders, until this underpass is built, and a fine and continuous driveway made for the Lakewood property, in addition to giving security to the hundreds of school children and other pedestrians going that way.

Take a look at Tudor street. The picture is the strongest proof of what is needed. Here is an old street running east from McDonough road. Half a dozen or more cottages have been built on it. The owners pay their taxes, yet there is no sidewalk or pavement. Trees are growing in the middle of the street. Just back of Pryor Street school it ends abruptly, and the only outlet is over private property. It should be extended through to Pryor street, taking the place of the alley by the school, as shown in the picture.

One of the worst bottled-up streets on the south side is the lower end of Crew street. This street runs along until you strike the little unpaved, almost impassable Haygood avenue. The car line continues on out to Weyman avenue, but there's no street to an outlet. Yet for years it has been standing there in this condition, with property owners all around begging for relief. A little property may have to be condemned and some work of grading necessary for this improvement.

The improvements noted and the views shown will serve to give some idea of the things needed for this section.

Athens Centre of Drama League Has "Better Plays" for Slogan

Athens, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—The Athens Centre of the Drama League of America will push forward the work of that organization there in a lively manner this season if plans in hand discussed at the recent first fall meeting are successfully carried through.

These are, emphatically, more and better plays by better players and companies than in any previous season; lectures and readings of a high grade and in goodly number by the best local and outside talent, reading and study circles under several well-qualified leaders, private performances of several good plays well presented by the Athens Centre's strong dramatic club, active collaboration with the schools on the part of the educational committee to bring forward among other things a pageant next spring, prizes to bring out latent talent in playwriting in the state, and collaboration with the art and musical organizations of Athens to develop the higher social life of the city.

Annie Russell Helping.

The "better plays by better companies" slogan will receive early encouragement in the auspicious appearance next Saturday in Athens of Annie Russell, a thorough believer in the drama league movement, in Goldsmith's sprightly and amusing comedy, "She Stoops to Conquer." Miss Russell has talked before both the Boston and Philadelphia Centres of the league, and is by no means alone among players representing the best American dramatic traditions in seeing in it one of the strongest hopes for a true dramatic renascence.

It is to further the more frequent appearance in Georgia of such players and companies in such plays for good grade, both new and old, that the Athens Play-Going Committee of the League is working, under the able leadership of Miss Cobb, the state organizer, to see centers established in all the larger cities of the state and thus to bring about through them a practical working six-city circuit for the best plays and companies on the road. The possibilities of this plan are almost limitless.

As to lectures and readings thus far secured, Dr. J. P. Campbell, of the University of Georgia, will give his very well-known series on eugenics, twice repeated in Atlanta, before the league, and the national committee is wearing to send to Athens as a climax to these lectures the New York company playing Brieux's "Damaged Goods," dealing with the much-discussed subject. Mr. Smith's work, which read before the league last July, will, in all likelihood, read again before it in November.

Lectures and Readings.

Passing to reading and study circles, a most interesting announcement is a course of lectures and readings on the drama in France, delivered in French by Professor Jacques Lustrat, of the state university.

Dramatic talent, in the city as well as dramatic talent, in thecity as well as the university, and most of this is already to be found in the local center of the Dramatic league. Its Dramatic club will appear in its first private performances early in November, presenting Pinero's "Dandy Dick," pure comedy of a very taking sort. This will be followed by at least two long plays and one or more one-act pieces, if possible, at later in this season.

The most interesting plan of this club is one for the presentation of "Midsummer Night's Dream" in an open-air performance. The club, which is under the leadership of Miss Cobb, is a strong one. More than one of its present members were in the memorable cast of "She Stoops to Conquer," given in Athens a number of years ago, and the club's present plan is to make next spring's production an equally memorable one.

State President Coming Again.

The work of the state organizer, Miss Cobb, has been receiving the active and unqualified backing of the league's national president, Mrs. Best, and of the national committee. The work of organization in this state is a matter of so much interest to them that the president of the league has stated that if she gets nowhere else in its interest, she is coming to Georgia again this coming winter. A project of Miss Cobb's has been a matter of so much interest to the national committee that a preliminary announcement may be made here.

The Athens Centre of the Drama League will offer two prizes for plays dealing with southern life or history. One to be open to college men and women; the other open to all Georgians. These will be judged by the play giving committee of the Athens Centre. The best one will be produced by the Dramatic club.

The prize winning plays will be forwarded to the national committee, who will likely publish the one judged the best in the project series of Drama league plays.

Harmless American Phrase Jars Literary Censors of London

London, October 25.—Vere Smith, who owns and edits that popular England magazine, "The Lady's Realm," is, he tells me, the latest victim of the so-called "Literary Censorship," which already has resulted in the "banning" of books by Compton Mackenzie and W. B. Maxwell—not to mention Hall Caine—and which gets more tyrannical day by day.

Smith, by the way, is much more like an American than a Briton, having spent three years on a ranch in Washington and earned his daily bread both in New York and Chicago. He has been arranging for some time to bring out a new monthly—mostly devoted to humor, and had chosen for it the exceedingly American title of "Tickle Me"—or, in full, "They Just Tickle Me," the reference being, of course, to the stories in the magazine. On the eve of getting out his first number, however, Vere Smith has been informed by W. H. Smith & Co., who control all the railway bookstalls throughout the country and run a big circulating library besides, that they decline to handle "Tickle Me," because of the title, which is "too suggestive" for their ultra-puritanical taste. As Vere Smith already has put over $2,500 into his new venture, he is not disposed to abandon it tamely, nor is he disposed to change its title which displeases everybody else, (save Messrs. Smith), to whom it has been confided, in extremely neat. When last I saw him he was still engaged in efforts to overcome the obduracy of these narrow-minded monopolists whose attitude is the more ridiculous in that they unblushingly supply their customers, every week, with journals like "The Pink 'Un" and "The Winning Post," which specialize in risky anecdotes and jokes.

Smith, it may be mentioned, was "reader" to the well-known London publishing firm of Hutchinson & Co., before taking over "The Lady's Realm," and in this capacity "discovered," among others, Cynthia Stockley, of "Poppies" fame. He also published H. G. Wells' marriage as a serial in "The Lady's Realm."

Morality, Old and New.

(From The Christian Herald.)

Morality is always a generation or two ahead of legality.

The number of offenses against the moral and legal codes is increasing constantly.

Moral principle never cut so large a figure in the affairs of this American people as it does today.

We have twenty moral qualms where our pooly ancestors had one.

It never occurred to them that a lottery was wrong, or that it was wicked to drink whisky, or to whip a child or a colt, or to enslave the black man and cheat the red man.

Nine out of ten of the little conscientious victories of life are discoveries of the last fifty years.

More societies to do all sorts of good and work all kinds of reforms have been created in the last two generations than had been formed or thought of before from the beginning of the world.

We are getting better. No doubt about it.

But there is still plenty of room for improvement.

NO GRAPE JUICE CHURCH FOR THE EPISCOPALIANS

Request of W. C. T. U. That Unfermented Wine Be Used at Communion Not Considered.

New York, October 25.—The convention of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union adopted a resolution today requesting the house of bishops of the Protestant Episcopal church to "consider the propriety" of using unfermented wine at the communion in place of fermented wine, "which contains the narcotic poison alcohol."

The resolution was a substitute for one originally offered setting forth that fermented wine "could not truly represent the blood of Christ." This phrase was objected to by English delegates, who argued that it would antagonize the Church of England. The English delegates also objected to an amendment declaring that "Jesus commanded unfermented wine in the Holy Communion."

The objections were voiced by Miss Agnes E. Slack, honorary secretary of the organization, who said that the bishop of Lincoln told her the Church of England could not offer the Sacrament in unfermented wine and that the archbishop of Canterbury told her:

"If you pass such a resolution I shall use my influence to see that no member of the Anglican church joins your organization."

The request of the Woman's Christian Temperance union reached the Episcopal convention informally two hours before the time set for adjournment. The Rev. Dr. Alexander Mann, chairman of the house of deputies, threw up his hands in a gesture of dismay when he was told of the request.

"The good ladies might just as well not have wasted their efforts," he exclaimed. "What have they left us to think things alone? Of course, we shall not act on it. It is too late now. In the first place, it would require a two-thirds vote to consider any new business; in the second place, we would have to change the prayer book and that, too, requires a two-thirds vote."

The Rev. Dr. Henry Anstice, of this city, secretary of the house of deputies, would only comment that "this is not a grape juice church."

A Good Appetite Is a Glorious Thing

And Any Person Can Have a Rip Roaring One If Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Are Used After Meals.

The secret of appetite lies in a healthy and normal desire for food on the part of the stomach and other digestive organs.

Your digestive apparatus always wants more food when it is normal, and it wants all kinds of food, too, heavy and light, sweet and sour. These qualities are needed by man's body, and so the system craves them. This craving is appetite.

"Ever Since I Used Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets I Simply Delight in Food."

The real value in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets consists of their instant acting digestive alkaline. They digest the food in the stomach very quickly, stop irritation, and the tablets, and with the nourishment of the food is taken into the system they go with it into the intestines and thus neutralize the digestive acids.

Thousands of men and women in this country have proved, to their complete satisfaction, the great digestive and curative values of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

One ingredient of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is so powerful that one grain of it will digest 3,000 grains of food, and it will even do this in a glass tube without the aid of man's stomach. Just think what this means, when your stomach is raw and filled with hurtful acids and alkalis. The rest it will receive will be priceless.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold by all druggists everywhere. Obtain a box, 48 cents, today, and take a tablet after your next meal just to prove how easily you can digest that meal.

The office, which is opened each week day, has on file all of the information covering the boarding and rooming houses in the city and the matter of finding a suitable abode for the many transient persons in this city has been greatly simplified.

VINCENT ASKED TO RUN FOR MAYOR OF ATHENS

Athens, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—Petitions are being circulated asking T. H. Vincent, one of the most prominent manufacturers and bank men in property owners and others, to run for mayor against Hon. W. F. Dorsey, who recently announced his candidacy. C. H. Pinnisy declined to offer for the place when urged previously to do so. Mr. Vincent has not signified what he will do when the petition reaches him. In case there is opposition to Mr. Dorsey there will be one of the most exciting elections ever waged in a city famous for hot fights, as already the lines are sharply drawn and the issues bitterly fought out in the recent commission form of government campaign.

MIGHTY WARSHIPS HEAD FOR EUROPE

Hampton Roads, Va., October 25.—Bearing the greetings of the new world to the old, the great sea fighters of the Atlantic fleet were today started on their way to the ports of the sunny Mediterranean. Nine somber-garbed war machines, carrying thousands of American fighting men and sailormen, received the final nod of farewell from the trim yacht Dolphin, bearing Assistant Secretary of the Navy Franklin D. Roosevelt, and slid slowly out between the protecting capes into the open sea—the course our east.

As the creeping gray forms melted into the shadows of the horizon the crackling wireless flashed the last word from the assistant secretary of the navy, acting as representative of the president, commander-in-chief of the navy.

"In sending you as representatives of the United States navy of today we hope to show to the old world that the achievements and traditions of the past are being sustained and carried forward to a still more splendid future. Good luck, and Godspeed."

Thus read the final benediction of the assistant secretary, and scarcely had it crashed from the aerials when back came the prompt reply, signed by Rear Admiral Charles J. Badger, in command of the fleet.

"The fleet thanks you for your parting words, and will do its utmost to reflect honor upon the country and the service."

In Battle Formation.

In battle formation the ponderous gray ships slid by the trim little yacht, lying to just inside the capes. Straight down the channel gray bulk after gray bulk crept by, the crew lining the rail at quarters, marines at the stands on parade. First came the big Wyoming, America's latest word in war craft, her bows sliding through the water uprearing a sheaf of foam. At her masthead fluttered the blue double-starred flag of the commanding rear admiral. But two ships length behind, and directly in her wake, the Arkansas, flagship of the first division, under direct Admiral Cameron McR. Winslow, stole along. Then at equal intervals followed the Utah, the Florida, the Delaware, Kansas, Vermont and Ohio. In their wake signalling "engine trouble," limped the Connecticut. Rear Admiral Frank E. Beattie's flagship, flags out announcing "out of position." At last the little tug Seneca scurried by, and the fleet was on its way. After a mile and the supply ships and colliers with the hospital ship Solace, which had steamed out to the roads ahead of the formal review, awaited the receiving.

The fleet headed to open sea after a day of leave-taking and ceremonial. Assistant Secretary Roosevelt, in the Dolphin, steered the roads in the early morning. A swarm of launches and whaleboats scurried all over the quiet waters, hurrying the laggards of the "wives" fleet, ship carrying wives, and sweethearts out to the big ships soon to take their loved ones down to the sea, getting the last shore mail aboard, and generally getting the fleet shipshape for the cruise.

From dawn until noon the little boats darted here and there among the great steel war vessels that swung in double column across the fairway.

Admirals Are Received.

Shortly after the Dolphin arrived and was given its salute by the flagships, Assistant Secretary Roosevelt received the admirals commanding the divisions of the fleet in his cabin with the full ceremonial of naval visits at sea, sharing treasury, booming cannon and band playing. Rear Admiral Badger came aboard then, Rear Admirals Winslow and Beatlie. After they had paid their respects, Rear Admiral Clifford J. Boueh, commanding the third division of the Atlantic fleet, came aboard from the Rhode Island. The Rhode Island and the other ships of the third division of the Atlantic fleet are under orders to leave for the coast of Mexico next week.

Just as the admirals left for their ships a driving rain, which had drenched the fleet all night and morning, ceased, and the sun broke through the heavy clouds to grace the farewell ceremonies. As Admiral Badger's flagship, the Wyoming, the division flagship, and the Rhode Island, Secretary Roosevelt and his official party paid a return visit with all its formalities. With the secretary were Assistant Secretary of War Henry S. Breckenridge, Assistant Secretary of State John E. Osborne, Assistant Attorney General Harry S. Graham, John Burke, treasurer of the United States; Commissioner of Corporations Joseph E. Davies and Senator Brandegee, of Connecticut.

On board the Wyoming the party went over the fighting gear of the ship, peeped into turrets and gun rooms, and even visited the storerooms and bakeries. The officials crowded about a bulletin board whereon was announced a debate by members of the Wyoming Literary Society on the question of extending suffrage to women, and made remarks about how up-to-date sailors were.

Called for Articles Left Behind.

All of the pomp and ceremony of the secretary's departure from the flagship was disrupted, just as the six-pounders began to sound their salutes, from the launch at the foot of the fleet, under Senator Brandegee, tying up to Admiral Badger. "I left my overcoat aboard," called on Senator Brandegee, "and that umbrella," shouted Admiral Badger, and the launch, which had already cast off, was maneuvered back to the lander for the senator's wearing apparel.

After all the ceremonial had been complied with, the Dolphin dropped down the roads to a position just in the fleet's rear at the head of the mainmast. From that point of vantage they watched the fleet start down the channel. Then the assistant secretary, who had started on the rope ladder. Assistant Secretary Roosevelt swung himself out on the railings and scurried down to the rail leading his competitor by covering the deck first. After the party on the Dolphin had watched the fleet out to sea they returned to Fortress Monroe, and Assistant Secretary of War Breckenridge led a trip of inspection through the coast artillery post. The Dolphin will leave the roads tomorrow morning and will stop on the way up the Potomac to visit the new battleship San Marcos, used as a target for guns.

"Having sent the fleet," said Secretary Roosevelt tonight, "we are going to see what the fleet can do."

AMBASSADOR GERARD FINALLY FINDS HOME

Berlin, October 25.—The new American ambassador to Germany, James W. Gerard, today rented for the embassy premises now occupied by William Boyce Thompson, known as the Von Schwabach palace, and formerly owned by a banker of that name. The ambassador is to pay a yearly rental of $15,000 instead of the $22,500 at first demanded.

The new embassy is situated within a short distance of the imperial chancellor's palace and the German foreign office. It is well adapted for entertaining, but lacks modern conveniences. Extensive alterations will be made before the ambassador goes into the residence at Christmas.

4 BLOCKS FROM CANDL

Royal Prince Is Being "Fagged" and Taught His "Manners"

Third Son of King George Is Compelled to Bow to the Old Traditions of Eton, Much to the Disgust of His Father—No Favors Shown Prince Henry.

PREPARING for future BATTLES of WATERLOO.

PRINCE HENRY

"UPPER REMOVE" ETON BOYS.

(Copyright, 1913, by Curtis Brown.)

London, October 25.—King George and his consort, Queen Mary, are learning more thoroughly every day that being a king and a queen is not much more than an empty honor. It will obtain for them the deferential treatment of those about them, but it does not entitle them to set at naught the hide-bound customs of the country even in the slightest degree.

This fact has been brought home to them forcefully during the past few weeks. Much to their astonishment they have learned that the unique and picturesque customs of famous Eton College are more powerful even than the wishes of a king and a queen, and are not to be ignored or suspended, even to oblige a king's son. Much to the chagrin of the royal pair, it has been decided that Prince Henry, third son of George and Mary, and only twice removed from the succession to the British throne, must take his dose of Eton "medicine" along with the sons of proud dukes and marquises and earls and in the company of the sons of mere commoners.

Queen Objected to "Fagging."

When proud King George and fond Queen Mary decided to send their third son to Eton, the question of whether or not this prince of the royal house should be "fagged" like any ordinary student was raised, and they were horrified at the very suggestion. She vehemently protested that under no circumstances should her son be made toast, boil eggs, clean the boots, draw the bath and tidy the rooms for boys of not only lesser rank, but of those of no rank at all! And King George, though less horrified by the notion, was equally determined that such a thing should not be, and that his advisers straightway set about to overcome the hoary customs of Eton.

It was arranged, therefore, that Prince Henry should not take the regular entrance examinations, which ordinary boys, not of royal rank, are submitted. Instead he should be examined privately by the "head," the Honorable Edward Lyttelton, their masters assuming that the famous headmaster would pass the royal scion into the "upper reaches" and beyond the necessity of being "fagged." Unfortunately for their well-laid plans, the Hon. Edward Lyttelton took his duties as private examiner seriously and discovered that Prince Henry is far behind his years in Latin and Greek. He informed the king that he would, therefore, place him, for at least a term, in the "lower remove," all the boys of which must be "fagged."

Tempest in Teapot.

This treatment on his merits of a royal prince caused a tempest in a teapot at Buckingham palace, and the Hon. Edward was called into conference. He urged in the strongest terms that no exception be made in Prince Henry's case and that he be "fagged" the same as the other boys. After a struggle the king and queen surrendered and agreed that their son should make tea and fry black toasts and tidy rooms and run errands for John Jones and Sammy Smith, who could be depended upon to take full advantage of their unique opportunity.

However, having gained his point and exercised the old customs of Eton to victory over the wishes of the king and queen, the headmaster has been generous. Prince Henry has not been made a common ordinary "fag" attached to a boy as Prince Arthur of Connaught was attached to the son of William Waldorf Astor, the erstwhile American. Instead he has been made one of the "general facts," of which there are ten, and as such he is liable to be called upon to "fag" for any boy in the sixth form, but not in the fifth, whose own fag may be knocked up or unable for any reason to perform his duties.

Prince Henry's first experience as a "fag" consisted in his having to get tea ready in the study of a sixth form boy, Castes by name, a grandson of the famous cotton thread manufacturers. The prince had to boil the water, toast half a dozen slices of bread and brew the tea, and he acquitted himself well.

Prince Henry performs his duties as a fag cheerfully, more cheerfully than he takes to his studies. The only subject he excels in is French, which he speaks fluently, for he has been taught French since he was five and his assistance is continually being secretly invoked by the boys in his form, but the prince will have to make considerable strides in his knowledge of Latin and Greek if he is to get out of the "lower remove" next term.

Duties of a "Fag."

In return for Prince Henry's assistance to them at French prep the boys of his form are making him acquainted with the limitations in the duties of a fag. A general fag cannot be sent to any shop to make purchases nor be sent on messages from one master's house to another and as has been stated already he cannot be fagged by any but a sixth form boy.

The prince's rank would not save him, however, from attempts being made to maze him perform such services until he became wise enough to refuse to perform them and but for the promptings he has received Prince Henry, like many other "freshers" at Eton, would probably be a whole term at the college before he became so.

But being fagged is not the only "indignity" that the royal youth will have to submit to at Eton. Prince Henry, so up to time he entered the famous school, had every wish and whim gratified, who had a score of servants at his beck and call, who has been constantly spoiled by dozens of fawning men and women, hopeful of future favors, is rapidly learning what it is to be an ordinary mortal unpossessed of the privileges and prerogatives of royal blood.

To begin with, he is merely "Henry" to his more intimate friends, while, by the general run of students, he is addressed, as a member of the "lower remove," as "Scug." Then, he is under the necessity of running up the bottoms of his trousers, whether he approves of the style or not and of leaving unbuttoned the bottom button of his vest. He must wear no bowler on his Etons, his Eton coat must be cut square at the back, the band on his topper must be of cloth, not ribbon, and he must never whistle, a choice privilege strictly reserved for the more advanced boys.

But the list of "don'ts" which the poor prince must learn by heart, is by no means complete. He cannot walk arm-in-arm with another boy nor can he set foot on the west side of High street, unless he is calling at one of the shops. And when the colder months come and the wind whistles down his throat, he will not dare to turn up the collar of his overcoat, a practice reserved to the members of a select society known as "Pop."

This very practice of turning up the collar of the coat led to an incident which demonstrated the power of custom at Eton. Believing it was injurious to the throat, Dr. Warre, a former headmaster, prohibited it. His order was absolutely ignored, and the headmaster wisely did not insist upon its observance.

Brown Boots Barred.

Also Prince Henry will learn that brown boots must form no part of his wardrobe, and that, however much he may like the trim appearance of a rolled umbrella, until he has been tried and found a good fellow and admitted to membership in "Pop," he must carry it loose. As he has been entered as a "fresh" he will go in for cricket and football, instead of rowing. His compulsory garb as a footballer will consist of a pair of gray knickers, a flannel shirt, a sweater, a scarf, a cap and black boots.

One of the biggest days in Prince Henry's life as an Eton boy will be February 27, commonly known as "Threepenny day." On that occasion he, along with every other colleger, will be solemnly presented with a threepenny bit. It is hardly necessary to say that every boy spends many times threepence in celebrating the receipt of the gift. But, though a threepenny bit is an inconsiderable item now, there was a time in the Eton past, out of which this curious custom comes, when it was a welcome "life saver" in the absence of the lavish pocket money that is now the rule among the Eton boys.

In those old days the boys were said to have been allowed their choice between a threepenny bit and half a sheep. He then valued it. And it is related that at least one smart boy in recent years insisted upon the half a sheep, when offered the coin.

Glorious Fourth of June.

But, of course, the greatest of all days in the year for the Eton boys is the glorious Fourth of June, the birthday of George III. It is kept as a whole holiday, and the boys' entire kinsfolk come for visits. It is the great reunion day for all old Etonians. There is a cricket match in the afternoon and in the evening a picturesque procession of the boats. The boys are garbed in blue monkey jackets, with gilt buttons, white duck trousers, pink silk socks and black patent leather pumps with gold buckles. The coxswains are dressed in most elaborate uniforms, generally those of the dress of an admiral of the British navy. The day is rounded off by a grand "feed," and a display of fireworks reminiscent of the American "Fourth" before the invention of the "ers and ans" celebrations of recent years.

FOR "TANGO TEAS" IDLE THEATERS USED

Europe Vainly Battles Against Stock Speculation

Originator of Scheme Figures "Tea" a Necessity for English, and "Tango" an Obsession.

All Over the Continent Politicians and the Public Rage Against Gambling, But Everywhere It Seems to Increase—Germany Tries to Deal With the Evil.

London, October 25.—Sidney Blow, a playwright chiefly known for his adaptations, has discovered a new use for a theater and is busily engaged trying to wring glittering gold from the idea. Having taken the Queen's theater for a production known as "This Way, Madam" and which, by the way, has not been a success, he was struck, as no doubt has been every other manager who leased or owned a theater, by the fact that it stood dark and useless the greater part of the twenty-four hours, which the majority of theatres are earning notices for their owners or lessees. He neured that tea was an English necessity and that the "tango" was an obsession and that by combining the two he would have in "tango teas" an ideal afternoon's entertainment.

The result can be seen any afternoon by any one with enough of the gambling spirit to risk the English equivalent of 50 cents. Tiny tea tables are placed between the rows of the orchestra seats and a more or less satisfactory tea is served by girls who match the general decorations of the theater, while on the stage, which has been arranged to look like the back corner of a New York cabaret restaurant, with an orchestra and the inevitable high colored, over-dressed, fearfully bored American ragtime pianist in the corner, varied couples go through the "tango" and its latest variations, the turkey trot and one or two of the newest Paris dances.

LORD CURZON'S GIRLS ALWAYS IN HIS SIGHT

Devotion of the Former Viceroy of India to Motherless Children Is Very Marked.

London, October 25.—How Lord Curzon cares for his girls! They are practically never out of his sight. The younger did manage to have a trip in an aeroplane a few weeks ago. She is very pretty, all fun and frolic, and she loves to do the sort of things her aunt, Daisy Leiter that was, who is now Lady Suffolk, would have done when she was a girl. I met Lord Curzon and the two girls recently at a famous gallery where works of art and furniture are sold. He is a great authority on works of art and was laying down the law in that well known way of his to the girls and had much to say on the characteristic of Rubens and Murillo.

"Rubens," said the Hon. Mary, "I cannot stick at any price. That awful fat women of his make me positively ill."

Father said "sh," but the wilful lassie did nothing of the sort, and went on to have her say about that "horrible" Rubens.

"Do you think, father, because he's an old master that I'm going to say I admire his work when I don't"—and so on. It was very funny, and it made one feel the girl had individuality and a mind of her own.

The girls are beginning to have a grown-up look about them, their eyes are lovely, as were their mother's, and they wear their hair parted down the middle just as she did. I don't think Lord Curzon has the least idea of remarrying, not at present, at any rate. A number of women have been throwing their caps at him, but it is in vain. First and foremost he knows his sisters-in-law would not like it and he is tremendously under their influence, especially under Lady Suffolk's. They would consider it an awful affront to the memory of "Mary" for him to do so—and there you are. There were never known such clever over-powering personalities as all the women of the Leiter family and they manage to keep even their clever brother-in-law of their mind.

Berlin, October 25.—Europe is making brave attempts to fight speculation and speculators; to stop stock exchange abuses and generally to cure the ills which spring from the human passion for getting rich—and poor—in a hurry. As a result of the recent stock exchange gambling orgie a new anti-speculation law is being prepared in Austria which will make it practically impossible to trade on margins; in Norway the very right to speculate is denied by a large group of politicians; and Germany has chronic warfare against the bourse reflected in several laws which experts say effect just the contrary of that which they claim to effect. Everywhere people are declaiming against the abuses of speculation, and everywhere speculation is raging more than it did before.

From the present proposed anti-speculation law the experts to such matters expect little result. They agree that all past anti-speculation laws have failed, and that some of them have produced evils which did not previously exist. The main difference is that gambling in stocks and shares goes on in less open and less honest forms than before. Also it is complained that the countries with anti-speculation laws suffer, as compared with countries which have no such laws, by the flight of capital and business; by the degenerate effect which a chronically inactive bourse has upon state securities; and by the extreme inability of inactive bourses to panics on small or no cause.

Object to Government Control.

In France, Germany and Austria business men never cease clamoring for the Anglo-American system under which stock exchanges are private corporations regulated only by the law. They complain of government control, which is chiefly exercised by bureaucrats who know nothing of commercial finance. In France under a law of Napoleon the Bourse is treated as a state institution; and elsewhere on the continent it is nothing but an appendage to the state. In Austria no stock exchange may be constituted without the approval of both the minister of finance and the minister of commerce. Once the bourse is constituted it is put under the control of the state commissaries. In Germany since 1896 a similar system prevails. Before then the separate states had their own bourse laws, but there is now a homogeneous bourse organization for the whole empire; and under this both the imperial bundesrath and the state governments have the power to control, to found a stock exchange needs state consent, and a bourse founded without consent may be closed summarily by the police. As in Austria, state commissaries, with the rank of officials, represent the authority of the government.

The power which is most resented is the power given to the bundesrath to say what classes of securities shall and shall not be dealt in. Additional rules are the usual penal law against rigging. But the main interference of the state is in checking speculation. Scores of paragraphs are directed against this. It is a criminal offence to seduce anyone into speculation with intent to gain, and in Germany persons who go bankrupt through speculating in "differences" are criminally punished. Bourses and exchanges are entirely under the control of the ministry of finance. Holland and Belgium allow freedom to start stock exchanges, but even they have some laws which tend to make speculation difficult.

More Anti-Bourse Laws Demanded.

Stock exchange regulation of this kind is not enough for a very large class which wants speculation altogether suppressed. Conservative and agrarian politicians are everywhere unfriendly to the bourse, and they demand more and more anti-bourse laws. Germany has always been led. The stone was set rolling twenty years ago by Herr von Gamp who is still a prominent reichstag member, by the former speaker, Count von Ballestrem, and by a deputy named Cluny. The Prussian conservatives were then under the impression that exchange speculation went down the price which they got for their grain. In particular they disliked speculating in grain for future delivery. In this there was nothing new. Holland at the beginning of the seventeenth century attempted in vain to suppress grain speculation. The German anti-speculation campaign succeeded, and the result is seen today in rigid restriction of speculation in both grain and stocks. Only a limited class can lawfully indulge in it; and then under burdensome conditions as laid down in the two great bourse laws of 1884 and 1896.

The campaign against future or "term trading" arises from the fact that the American system of immediate delivery of stocks is here not the rule. On the continent as in England stocks are bought and sold either for a settlement between the parties or for a settlement day, which may be even after the transaction. Settlement days are usually in the middle of and at the end of the month—the rule of the stock "medio" and "ultimo" settlements. Marginal speculation is all done in this way. Where the wall street broker has stocks transferred on the day after purchase, he gets a loan on them, thus enabling him to carry them for his client on margin, the European broker waits till settlement day. On settlement day the deal may be completed by the transfer of the stock, or it may be refixed over to the next settlement, and so on until the trader realizes his profit or takes his loan. This is "term business" or "future business," and in principle it is identical with the American system of selling and buying grain for future delivery.

Against Future Business.

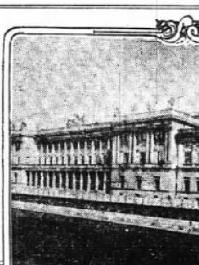
Germany's anti-speculation party wants to prevent all such term and future business in grain and also in stocks and shares. In 1896 the conservative agrarians got through a bourse law which practically forbade such dealing. The law made it illegal to deal in grain futures, in transactions for future delivery of stocks in corporations with a smaller capital than $5,000,000, and in stocks of mining and manufacturing corporations. All trading in futures was made illegal except where the parties were entered up in advance as traders of this class in a special stock exchange registry. For this the trader had to pay a registry fee of $17.50 and a further annual fee. Speculators thereby ceased to be private individuals, and became members of the profession of speculator. This it was calculated, would entirely exclude the general public from speculation. But a loophole was provided by a provision that a deal in futures between parties of which even one was not registered was null and void, and could not be enforced in court.

This anti-speculation law proved a complete fiasco. It did not prevent the general public speculating, but it drove them to indirect and sometimes to more risky ways of speculating; it encouraged all sorts of dishonest outside brokers, and it led to many persons sending their speculative money abroad. The register failed. Banks and professional speculators boycotted it. Private individuals who speculated avoided it because, they said, they did not want all the world to know what they were doing. So few names were entered in the register that the legitimate trading in futures was checked, and business fell off. The produce exchanges were worst of all hit; many, including the great Berlin produce exchange, closed entirely, and there sprang up free trading associations" which the law could not prevent. In these trading associations speculation went on as before. And the agrarians had the mortification of finding that grain prices did not rise.

Radical Changes Made.

This attempt to check speculation lasted until 1908. Then it was radically changed. The 1908 law adhered to the principle that people generally have no right to speculate; it specially forbade some traders to speculate, but it abolished the abortive register of speculators, and it made legal within certain limits trading in produce and stocks for future delivery. Speculators in grain must be persons who are in some way interested in the grain trade and their names must be found in the register of merchants. A private individual who is not connected with the grain business is still forbidden to speculate. Trading in differences between prices without any actual sale or purchase is made illegal. Speculating in stocks and shares of mines and factories is made legal within certain limits. The bundesrath declares what stocks may be speculated in. When the law was passed the bundesrath issued a list of sixteen great corporations, the stocks of which might be made the subject of trading for future delivery. A new limitation was placed on speculation by the provision that before an exchange permits trading for future delivery in a stock of a particular corporation the consent of the corporation must first be asked, and that at any moment the corporation may withdraw its consent. This anti-speculation law is considered by traders an improvement on the old, but they complain that it still unduly checks speculative deals, and that it literally paralyzes the German exchanges to far more violent fluctuations than are experienced elsewhere in Europe.

COUNT VON BALLESTREN.



BOURSE, BERLIN.

Difference. Speculation.

The 1896 law dealt a great blow at speculation in that it forbade trading in differences; and this prohibition remains in force today. Difference speculation which, in America, is confined to bucket shops, is in Europe the general rule. The stocks are not really bought or sold, and no transfer of certificates takes place. One speculator merely pays or receives the difference between the quoted prices at the time of nominal purchase and at the time of nominal sale. Speculating in differences is popular, needs small capital, and it is sometimes done without brokers and without loss in commissions, for all the speculators need is the list of official stock exchange quotations. It forms the greatest part of business on the bourses; and is a complicated business. The fictitious sales and purchases often far exceed in extent the real business of each corporation, and the exchanges have to make a special "liquidation bureaus" in order to act as clearing houses between the difference speculators.

Speculation Laws Aim at Prevention.

The anti-speculation laws aim at preventing this by declaring that all such fictitious sales and purchases are prohibited, and therefore, cannot be enforced at law. If the loser chooses to pay the difference, he cannot, unless there be in grain quotations, demand it back, but if he refuses to pay he cannot be forced to by the winner. The courts interpret this provision stringently. They declare that the intention to gamble is proven if one of the parties has been in the habit of engaging in such fictitious sales; and—in the case of a limitation in a corporation—declare the transaction a gamble in difference if the purchaser has not provided storage for the grain, or has not otherwise shown that it is a genuine transaction.

Driven to Bucket Shops.

All authorities, except the interested agrarians, agree that since this law gambling in differences has gone on more than ever, but it is partly driven from the bourses into the hands of "winkelmakler," that is, bucket shop men; and instead of being done honestly, it is done dishonestly. In this and in many other respects the anti-speculation laws have failed. The national-liberal reichstag deputy, Prince chonlach-Carolath, said that the anti-speculation laws are the reason why Germans and Prussian state securities, though unimpeachably safe, are quoted lower than risky state securities of other countries. This view is also taken by the ex-colonial secretary, Dernburg, who is a practical banker and a high authority on finance. Dernburg also strongly condemns the clause which allows the state to forbid the quotation of certain securities, and he took up an anti-government attitude four years ago when the Prussian government forbade the quotation of Milwaukees on the Berlin exchange. General bourse inactivity is one result of the laws. Since there are no bears to cover when prices fall and bulls to sell when they rise, fluctuations are very violent. During the Morocco crisis of 1911, in which France and Germany were equally interested, German securities dropped on the panic days 200 or 300 per cent more than French. The over-regulated and overworked bourse fails to fulfil its functions as moderator of too violent bull and bear movements.

Anti-Speculation Law Condemned.

Nearly all the leading authorities on finance condemn the anti-speculation laws. One of the latest to condemn them is Professor Richard Ehrenberg, of Bostock university, who says that there are even worse features in these laws than their complete failure to act. "Much worse is the constant injury that certain kinds of trading in stocks cannot be enforced in court is taken advantage of by dishonest speculators when their speculations fail. But even that is not the worst. Worse is the serious injury which is done to the authority of the state, when it repeals legislation which centuries of experience shows is bound to be ignored and to fail."

DISCARDED DRESSES SOLD BY QUEEN MARY

She Gives a Few to Hard-Up Relations — English Queen Has Her Gloves Cleaned.

London, October 25.—People are often very curious to know what becomes of Queen Mary's discarded dresses. Her majesty has a few relations on her father's side who are decidedly hard up and with her own hands she will pack up certain of her gowns that may be useful to them and have them dispatched by a servant. Every evening, Lady Eva Dugdale, Lord Warwick's daughter, comes to the queen confidential matters for the queen. But elaborate court gowns that are no use to poor relations are sent to a noted dress agency and sold.

The queen of Spain, who has really gorgeous gowns—I being Alfonso's fad to see her magnificently arrayed—passes on quantities of things from her wardrobe to gentlewomen here, like the wives of officers who have to keep apace with fashion and have not unlimited incomes. Some time ago people were wondering where a certain society woman known to be perfectly hard up got her fine clothes, and there was a good deal of lifting of eyebrows. All the time the gentlewoman in question had been bestowed out of charity from Madrid. It is simply a duty on the part of the queen of Spain to be attractively dressed, Alfonso, but it will open the eyes of the smart American woman to be told that queen Mary has her gloves cleaned and that she has various wreaths of flowers or feathers to place on the one hat to correspond with different dresses.

There is one thing in American clothing of which Queen Mary approves and always wears—American boots and shoes. For many years before they achieved the popularity they now possess on this side the queen wore them, their charm having been introduced to her by Lady (Arthur) Paget, who invariably patronizes them herself.

NO THOUGHTFUL PLAYS WANTED BY BRITONS

Arthur Bourchier Says That's Why So Many American Plays Fail in England.

London, October 25.—There has been for some time past a disposition on the part of a few of the London theater managers to quarrel with the critical abilities of the play-tasters who are in the employ of the various newspapers. One has even gone so far as to refuse to attend the usual first-night courtesies to the poor critics, who, when last heard from, were bracing up bravely under deprivation.

This same manager, Arthur Bourchier, has now turned upon the audiences, whom he gives an even worse drubbing than he administered some short time ago to the critics. The strangest part of the whole thing is that Bourchier has not been served badly by the very English audiences whom he now berates. For instance, he made a pretty penny out of "Kismet," in which he had a large interest, and he made more than cigarette money out of his holdings in "The Glad Eye," while he has produced and played in various successes of more or less large proportions. But despite these circumstances, Bourchier seems to think he has a grievance, and this is the way he has chosen to ventilate it. Incidentally, it will be noted that he gives English audiences are the most critical in detail in the world, but they are not intellectual. They subsist entirely on convention. Present them with a pleasant vapid play conventional lines with a happy ending and no deep significance, and they will love you, pay their money gladly and the box office and call you a great actor.

"But try to do anything subtle, try to make them think in the theater, try to show them some psychological process at work in a man or woman, and they will stay away in their thousands.

"The man in the stalls will not be bothered to analyze out subtleties of temperament. If a person does something, he says himself 'why?' If the answer is obvious he is pleased and calls it a good play. If the answer is not obvious he is displeased.

"The intellectual people who go to the theater sit in the seats of the scornful.

"More and more as time goes on I am convinced of the necessity for the installation of the municipal theater. I have been recently in Germany, and there I have seen the wonderful good a long play by Schiller, thoroughly understanding it, thoroughly enjoying it, has done the people. I am convinced, of arguing about it over the washtub next day.

"Perhaps it is battles against the confirmed conventionality of the minds of the theater audiences that especially, though not, probably, artistically you cannot make a living by giving English audiences plays.

"Take, as an instance, some of the American plays that fail to appeal over here. It is not because they are too local in their setting, it is because they are too quiet, too thoughtful, too thought-provoking.

"Some little provincial towns have done splendid work in the past few years, and are, I hope, becoming local centers of culture. We are very hard hit the minute some star actor or actress appears at a local music hall for a quarter of an hour a night in some conventional miniature drama or comedette, and repertory audience melts away, to reappear in person at a neighboring lectual lump at the music hall, but it is useful to indulge its drowsy propensity to be really unintelligent in a place of amusement."

The Ancient Paper Fastener.

The little metal fastener that is used together a number of loose sheets is more than two thousand years old. Such a one was used by the Roman soldiers of that era as an accessory of their footwear or some form. The belt of this copper worn by the ancient legions was fastened to a strip of cloth, serving as a lining, with a series of little bronze pins precisely like, in principle, the paper fastener of today.

Women Should Use Influence To Promote Home-Made Goods

LET US NOT BE INDUSTRIAL SNOBS

BY ISMA DOOLY.

Although their ability is questioned in many ways, and no woman is paid the salary commensurate in this section of the country with the work she does, there is scarcely any public movement started that she is not called upon to help in it, and great stress laid upon what she can do.

Whether it is the school question, the development of the Associated Charities, the building of a church, a hospital, or a civic spirit, they are called upon and reminded that they are "organized," that they have "clubs," and that for the fact that they have that privilege they must be up and ready when asked or commanded to work, or help work.

No matter how women, in their hearts, feel about all this, they are never failing; they go ahead and work. Sometimes the value of their work is recognized; sometimes it is not. Ofttimes they are only asked to use their influence, and that they do.

PATRONIZE HOME INDUSTRIES.

Now, one movement I would like the women of this city, of this state, and of this section to take up, as it is understood they amiably take up all the things they are asked to help in, is the patronage of home industries!

From the stories I hear about the wholesale shipping of southern-made wares to northern markets, only that they be shipped back with foreign marks on them, to warrant local purchase, it would seem we are being branded as a race of royal snobs along commercial lines, and that the whole south in its manufacturing life is being hampered by an influence which should be met with and wiped out forever.

"Why did not Atlanta establish that excellent movement of a permanent exhibit of her industries?" I asked a man the other day, who told me that Atlanta had over 500 industrial institutions.

"I know the schools of the section are not meeting the demand and educating boys and girls to meet the requirements of our constructive and industrial life," I observed, "but why is nothing done to promote interest through showing what we are doing?" I further questioned.

IT WOULD INJURE THEIR BUSINESS.

"One reason that the local manufacturers would not show their wares in a permanent exhibition is that it would injure their local business," was the startling reply.

"If you recall when we had our manufacturers' exhibit here, though we had lost institutions that might have contributed exhibits, only sixty-odd responded, the excuse being that they could not sell to home people, these wares, because purchasers here preferred foreign-made wares, believing they were better; therefore they have to be deceived."

One ware, he especially mentioned, had been manufactured here for twenty-three years, the original American maker being here. It has been sold all these years through agents in Philadelphia. Another incident illustrating the same commercial snobbery, was in the purchase of a large amount of furniture for a local building. An Atlanta firm contracting for the furnishing, selected the stuff from an Atlanta manufacturing company. It was then shipped to a certain city in the northwest well advertised for manufacturing furniture, and finally shipped back here with a foreign mark on it, paid for, and placed in the Atlanta building.

The other day while visiting the Southern Manufacturers' building at the National Conservation exposition in Knoxville, I was deeply interested in the quality and merit of the exhibits. "Why are there not more?" I asked knowing the hundreds of textile mills the south boasts.

The same excuse was given. "Southern manufacturers believe it injures local patronage."

To illustrate the incident, I was told of a wealthy Tennessean, who built a handsome new home. He was approached by a local mantel firm, and urged to look into these wares at home. "No, he replied." I am going to New York, where I can get the best."

HE LEARNED HIS LESSON.

He went, bought his mantels in New York, paid a high price and had them shipped home. He went out the day they were received to have them installed. They were unpacked and as one of them was placed against the wall, back out he beheld in big black letters, "Manufactured in Knoxville, Tennessee."

He did not get mad, but just told the story, and became a stanch supporter of home-made goods.

The south has not the wealth other sections has, yet surely all artistic sense of construction has not left the section. Certainly we are not impoverished in the matter of talent or good taste. Our old curiously shops in New Orleans, Charleston, Knoxville, Savannah and Mobile are still furnishing to northern collectors mahogany furniture the like of which no people in the world have possessed.

If there was knowledge in the past about these things, certainly the taste has not died out, and in this, our constructive, period surely there are the men who can turn their talents to reproducing some of the things which are so rare and beautiful, the world still reaches out to get them, old and moth eaten as the furnitures may be, and cracked and broken the curios.

We boast the beauty and variety of our native woods; we are awakening to the meaning of conserving these woods, and why is there not enough of the genius of creation among us to be able to develop these woods we have of our own?

WOMEN SHOULD DECRY SNOBBERY.

I would like to see the women of the section come forward and ask: "Let us see what is being done in our own institutions. If they measure up, there is nothing snobish about us and we will buy them."

Now, I know there is more than one who, reading critically these lines, will cry out, "Why, women are worse than others about buying foreign-made things and patronizing French modistes and milliners and those in New York."

That is true, but let us reckon without those comparatively few women in the matter of the south's patronage of her own.

Considering the female part of Atlanta's 200,000 inhabitants, probably a hundred of them go to Paris or New York and buy a few things. That would not be a drop in the bucket of our general commercial prosperity. Just let the few who can go continue to go and buy their gowns and bonnets away from here, and not feel badly about it; let those of us who stay at home get together and see what can be bought of home-made goods.

I hope some of the many good women I read of, who are going down to talk at the Southern Commercial congress in Mobile, will take up some practical subject of this kind and push it. We have advertised to all the world what we have in the way of all the resources of the earth, of the kind of splendid men and women we have. Let us show what these men and women are doing with what they have and look around right here at home for what we need and, buying it, proudly exhibit it as our own. That is what the women of the south can do for the commercial life of the south.

Gossip of Georgians in the Metropolis

By R. S. Carraway—The Constitution's New York Bureau.

New York, October 25.—(Special.)—The retirement of three bishops of the Protestant Episcopal church, two because of advancing years, the third to take up work at the University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn., was announced one day this week by the house of bishops at the triennial general convention of the Episcopalians, who have been in session in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in this city for several weeks. The resignations will take place at the close of the convention.

One of the retiring bishops is the Right Rev. Albion Williamson Knight, of Cuba, who is withdrawing from the mission field to become capital vice chancellor of the University of the South, the leading Episcopal theological institute of the country. Bishop Knight was born in Florida in 1859 and educated at the university of whose faculty he now becomes a member. He was made a deacon in 1891 and a minister two years later. He served several pastorates, among them Savannah, and from 1902 to 1904 he was dean of the cathedral at Atlanta. He was elected bishop of Cuba in 1904.

The entertainment committee of the Philipse Manor club very successfully inaugurated the season by presenting Miss Harrie Fumade, of Atlanta, on Saturday evening to the members and friends of the club. Miss Fumade was assisted by Miss Charlotte Sanderson, harpist, and Miss Beatrice Oliver, violinist. A large gathering of prominent New Yorkers enjoyed the recital.

Stonewall Jackson chapter, Children of the Confederacy, held its first meeting of the season this afternoon at the home of Mrs. E. G. Robinson, on West One Hundred and Fifty-first street. There were reports of the philanthropic, social, educational and historical work done by the chapter, including the three scholarships supported in the south to aid the poor children in the mountains. A musical program was also rendered, as follows: Miss Giles B. Cooke spoke on the lives of Stonewall Jackson and Robert E. Lee.

Miss Lillian Cohley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Cohley, of this city, was married Thursday evening to Prof. A. Mazney in the church of St. Paul of the Cross. Her cousin, Miss Margaret Cohley, was her only attendant. After a two months' stay in Savannah with the bridegroom's relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Mahoney will be at home at No. 409 Sherman avenue, Jersey City Heights.

Mr. G. M. Fortesque, of Atlanta, who was in New York for the world's championship series of baseball games, had a few things to say regarding the games and the sport in general before leaving for his home.

"This year's series was the most interesting event that I have ever attended," said Mr. Fortesque. "It seems incredible to me that there should be talk of probable abandonment of the games, and yet I can see where there are arguments in favor of such a move. For in all my life I have never seen so many disgusted persons as there were in this city, where thousands of would-be spectators were barred from approaching within two blocks of the Polo Grounds, police lines having been established as soon as the seats offered for general sale had been disposed of. But the immense attendance and the great amount of money resultant from the series will, in my opinion, force the perpetuation of the fall fixture. I have talked baseball with most prominently connected with the game, and all hold that the world's series would continue indefinitely. It is a pity that in our large cities we have not structures like the Crystal Palace in London, where I have seen well in excess of 100,000 persons watching a championship football game. Our own national sport should be as well provided for. I know that my own city would send at least 500 fans to the world's series if they could secure reservations."

However, we are moving slowly in sport. That is shown in the fact that the Army and Navy football game is practically a homeless affair. I cannot for the life of me understand why the government does not build a stadium in Washington for this contest. It could be easily made self-sustaining, or, if leased for other school and college contests, would pay for itself in the course of a relatively short number of years."

Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt Brown Evans, who were married last week at the home of the bride's grandmother in Louisville, Ky., have arrived in New York and will make their home here. Mrs. Evans was Miss Juliette Berry Doughty, of Savannah, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert S. Doughty. Their wedding was one of the social events of the season in Louisville. Several hundred guests from New York, Savannah and other points attended. Miss Alberta Doughty, of Savannah, was her sister's maid of honor and only attendant, and Edward Brown, of Atlanta, was Mr. Evans' best man. The bride was given away by her father. She wore a gown of heavy ivory satin, combined with duchess and round point lace, made with a long train, which was adjusted at the shoulders with a butterfly bow of lace with pearl tassels. Her veil of illusion was adjusted by a band of pearls.

The negro was up for public discussion Sunday night by the Episcopalians as a feature of the meeting held here during the general convention. There was a special service under the auspices of the American Church Institute for Negroes at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, with Bishop Greer presiding. The chief speakers were Bishop Thomas F. Gailor, of Tennessee, and Bishop Cleland Kinloch Nelson, of Atlanta.

Bishop Nelson declared that too much sorority and the exploitation of their woes had been an much a hindrance to the negro uplift as anything else. Undue gravitation, he thought, had the same effect on a race as on the individual—"increases self-importance." "A nation's blunder and a nation's neglect," said Bishop Nelson, "have been the occasion for the church of God to redeem the time misspent in relation to these fellow-citizens and fellow-children of God. The steps are easy from pampering to abhorrence and from paternalism to indifference. An immeasurable wrong was done when the ballot was given to this people, untrained for citizenship. As a policy it was foolish and dangerous. It would have been for Moses to have organized the Hebrew rabble into a democratic republic immediately after crossing the Red sea.

"If any of you are very urgent about the ballot, I would impress upon you that there are many things which the negro needs much more than a vote. He still needs to be fitted for citizenship. He needs a vitalizing religion. He needs an appreciation of character even above intelligence. He needs education, but not so much of the sort that some have been trying to give him—the arts and the sciences, music, theology, romance and the languages. He needs instruction in home, righteousness, truth, purity, more than he needs the ballot. Above all, he needs a quickened and enlightened conscience."

Haynes Ably Represents Atlanta in the World's Diamond Markets

Buyers of diamonds, like users of money must have some means of being certain of soundness.

The government certifies that your money is worth its face value. Upon the government's word you accept a ten dollar gold piece for what the government says it is. Very few people know how to test the fineness of the gold, the trueness of the coin. We must trust the government.

Few people know how to test the fineness of the diamond. To the average person a diamond's value must be certified. Only an expert dares buy a diamond on his own responsibility. So the people trust the jeweler.

Atlanta buyers of jewelry have accorded rare success to the Eugene V. Haynes Company. We feel that this success is based upon our scrupulous care in the selection of the jewelry we previously have sold in this city. In the history of this business our principal care has been to most carefully protect the interests of our customers as we bought in the world's treasure houses, jewels for use in Atlanta.

As Easy To Keep The Hair From Turning Gray As To Keep The Scalp Clean

AND there is no reason in the world why you should hesitate to restore to your hair its lost color and vitality, if it is fading and turning gray, any more than that you should foolishly refuse to use a remedy for dandruff or any other scalp trouble.

Sickness, nervousness, impoverished blood or deficient scalp nutrition may cause premature grayness; sometimes it is hereditary. Whatever the cause, gray hair adds from 10 to 20 years to the age, and a young woman, even 28 or 30, with very gray hair is passed as old.

Rahnazire Hair Dye is a pure tonic restorative to bring back to faded or gray hair its own original color and lost beauty. It is not to bleach or change the original color, and should not be confused with such. It is prepared in our own laboratory from a formula we know to be beneficial, and we guarantee it to be non-injurious. It keeps the hair soft, lustrous and in its beautiful natural color, and does not stain the scalp cannot be detected. Prepared for light, medium and dark brown and black hair and for sale at druggists and toilet goods departments. The $1.00 size.

WHY ARE Nemo Corsets TRIPLE-STRIP A BOON TO WOMANKIND?

THEY GUARD YOUR FIGURE, HEALTH & PURSE

Extreme Figure Reduction With Firm Abdominal Support

NEMO No. 506 is the greatest figure-reducing corset ever made for women who require substantial abdominal support.

For figures of the type for which it is designed, no other corset in existence is to be compared with it, nor can be made, at any price, to equal it.

The skirt-gores of semi-elastic Lastikeps Cloth (two in each side-front), and the Nemo "In-Curve Back," of semi-elastic Lastikops Webbing, produce extreme reduction all around, below the waist. The corset clings like an eelskin—you look much smaller. When you walk, bend or sit down the elastics give you plenty of ease. The corset can't "ride up;" corset-edge can't show through. Comfortable low bust. Very fine white coutil; sizes 20 to 36 (No. 508 is same, but with medium bust)..... $5.00

REMEMBER! The elastics in this corset are the genuine LASTIKOPS semi-elastic fabrics, guaranteed to outwear the corset. BEWARE of the many IMITATIONS, in all of which the elastics are nothing but the same old ordinary webbings, that stretch out of shape in no time.

Select the Nemo That Suits Your Figure and Be Happy Ever Afterward

Nemo $5.00 No 506

If you want reduction with perfect abdominal support from underneath, try Nemo No. 523, at $5.00. If you want permanent flesh-reduction, try Nemo Auto-Massage Corset, No. 356, at $3.50. To reduce large upper limbs, Nemo 409, at $4.00; or that wonderful new very long corset, No. 512, at $5.00. And don't forget those two big favorites, Nos. 322 (long skirt) and 326 (extra-long skirt) at $3.00—both with modish low bust.

NEMO HYGIENIC FASHION INSTITUTE

Bulletin No. 36

There are some women who still think of the Nemo as a heavy corset, strong but clumsy, intended only for fat women.

Fact is that the Nemo, while never a frank corset, is the world's leading STYLE corset.

In the best store in London, you'll find that Nemo Corsets have supplanted French corsets, and now form a large percentage of the trade.

In Paris, the most exclusive and exacting store in all Europe sells Nemo Corsets in quantities as great as the largest American stores.

A Style Corset?

Why, the Nemo is the ONLY American corset that has received the slightest recognition in the greatest foreign fashion-centre.

The Nemo Building is now the capital of the corset-world.

HALLOW'EEN NOVELTIES

TO make a witch like the fully equipped one on the upper part of the page, first get a clothespin. For the head get some tissue paper, cotton wadding or anything that will make a good padding and cover it with crepe paper. Paint the features with water color. Get four strands of flower wire and twist it to form the arms, leaving them spread at the end to suggest fingers. Cover the wires with paper and fasten firmly to the clothespin. Make an underskirt of orange crepe paper, and an overskirt of black crepe paper and a cape of the orange paper. The hat is made of black cardboard with a band of the orange paper. The wig is of white cotton. Orange paper in slits is fastened to the broom stick.

The cabbage head underneath the witch is made of three shades of green tissue paper. Crumple a sheet of paper into a ball and encircle it with a covered wire. Cut out large petals and curl the edges with a wooden pencil. Group two or three petal around the ball. Make petals of a darker shade, curl them and group about the first petals. Add two rows of petals made of the darkest green paper and fasten the whole securely. The stem should be covered with white paper. The pumpkin bon-bon box at the bottom of the page is made by padding the top of a round box with cotton. A strip of orange crepe paper is pasted inside of the lid and drawn up over it. Fasten it at the top with a piece of wire. The end of this wire is left uncovered and wrapped with green tissue paper. Paint a grotesque face on one side of the pumpkin. The leaf is fashioned from dark green tissue paper and glued to the bottom of the box.

The Mephisto head makes an attractive center piece. The head is made entirely of orange crepe paper, the face being put on in water color. The flower petals are crepe with wired centers and the stem is wound with green tissue paper.

The flower bordered with cards is a receptacle for nuts. A cup is lined with crepe paper with a frill over the brim. The petals are cut in the same manner as those of the cabbage; but their edges, instead being curled on a pencil are crinkled with the bands. The stem and the calyx are of green crepe paper. Tiny playing cards are glued to the cup.

The Brownie beneath is made of tissue paper. The face is sketched in with water colors. If the petals around the head are used they should have a wire glued through the center of each petal. Each petal fastened around the head securely.

Fashions Distinctly More Feminine

Enhanced by Gorgeous Brocades and Furs, Woman's Dress Was Never So Rich as Now.

New York, October 25.—Undoubtedly fashions are becoming more feminine. Notwithstanding all reports to the contrary, the figure is more extensively draped this fall than ever before in the past. One more womanking may be clothed in mystery and romance—a relief from the all-revealing modes which left nothing to the imagination.

Yards and yards of swathing draperies, held in place by sashes, girdles and pendant cordelieres, is the impression conveyed not alone by gowns, but by many of the suits as well. Separate coats seem to grow more and more voluminous, especially when intended for dressy wear. The waistcoat idea shows no evidence of waning popularity. We have waistcoats in evening wraps, in afternoon and even negligee show them in the most generous fullness and coloring. In a loosely-draped evening wrap of heather-colored velvet there was one of the day a waistcoat of duvetyne of the same shade, outlined with a band of orange-colored fur. At the neck hung pendent a heavy ornament of orange, black and gold beads. Heavy beaded ornaments have become a very pronounced style feature. Their dogmats, everything from delicate chiffon waists to fur wraps, and the new sash-like ribbons contribute a needed note of color to many of the simple garments.

FIGURE ONE.

Heavy necklaces of beads, graduating in diameter from about a fourth to five-eighths of an inch are worn by fashionable women with moulded affairs of chiffon. These beads are opaque, and show the deep purple, blue, orange and green tones of the latest dress fabrics and silks. To very dashing these necklaces are not unbecoming, but the pale blonde is more delicately attractive if she had best shun them.

An extreme novelty in neck ruffs was introduced by one of the exclusive shops last week. The ruffs had an upstanding frill of black tulle about three and a half inches high. Below, a frill of vivid green tulle or purple tulle, ranging from about six to eight inches in depth, fell over shoulders and chest. Drawn close about the neck was a band of fur, and a bow of ribbon, ending under the chin in a long beaded cord and heavy beaded tassel which hung below the waistline. Square-meshed maline was used for the frills, and the colors were in tinsel finish. Odd and bizarre though they were, they served to emphasize the vogue of the cuff, which in more conservative form finishes many of the toilettes of the day.

The most becoming method of dressing the neck—and one which, we believe, is destined for popularity, was seen at a recent fashion exhibition. Afternoon gowns had a round neck brocaded, showed posed at the center back an irregular butterfly effect in lace or tulle. This dainty ruff of diminishes was attached to the neckbands in several places. It never extended farther than the shoulder line, but served to fill in the gap just below the coiffure, which has always a tendency to give a more or less incomplete appearance to the round-necked gown.

Upstanding frills of some sort finish the majority of gowns. In our first figure we show the frill used with an extremely fetching vest-waist of black and white velvet brocade. It is built above a gracefully draped skirt of black chiffon velvet, and completes an effective costume for the afternoon visit or matinee. The hat is a large inverted, bowl-shaped affair of black velvet, trimmed with velvet-and-lace flowers and edged with a frill of accordion pleated silk. A veil of white tarlatan is drawn under the chin.

One sees many of these clever little vest-waists of brocaded satin or velvet, and there is about them an air of "chic" which makes a quick and lasting appeal.

Another very extensive use of the gorgeous brocades is found in the lining of coats and mantles. The gaiety seems to be too bold or bizarre for this purpose and no color too vivid. Black and white, however, is a favored and very effective lining, and usually takes the form of striking black figures on a white ground. The richness, and incidentally the costliness, of four garments is expeditously enhanced by this extravagance of lining.

Furs continue to be appropriate for every possible and impossible purpose. An interesting use of furs is indicated in our second illustration, which shows a waistcoat and collar of gray squirrel ornamenting a suit of diagonal worsted in gray, black and lavender. A fetching little hat, brimless in front and coming back from rolled up, repeats the gray fur, and displays over one side a large silk rose of lovely orange-yellow tone. The long velvet scarf is also edged with fur.

The suit jacket is built upon cutaway tunic lines, to which fashion remains faithful despite the bewildering array of new models brought out this fall. A little tab buttoning across the waistcoat is a smart detail.

Though fancy fabrics are now and then used, the majority of suits are in plain colored material. Of dark blue one sees a great deal, and of Russian green also. Yellowish-red shades, ranging through all the copper and nasturtium tonalities, are conspicuous in every assemblage of well-dressed women. Black is introduced into practically all smart toilettes. Usually it appears in the hat, which, in the preponderance of cases, is of black velvet. The velvet bridle has been very quickly accepted. Young girls have taken it up enthusiastically, and we noted at a smart restaurant recently a little miss, but unmistakably elderly lady wearing a hat which exhibited the novel feature. Vastly becoming it was, attached to small black velvet hat with turned-down brim. The costume which went with it was of lustrous black satin draped with Venetian lace, and she wore the daintiest of black satin slippers, revealing the lace and rosettes.

GEORGIA WOMAN DEAN OF AMERICA'S MILLINERS

MRS. M. T. ELAMS,

Of Americus, Ga., 85 years of age, dean of the millinery fraternity in the United States, and probably the oldest active milliner in the world, and the only cup presented to her on the occasion of her one hundredth opening by five of the largest wholesalers in the country.

Americus, Ga., October 24.—(Special.)—Mrs. M. T. Elam, of Americus, now 85 years old, is the dean of the millinery craft in the United States and possibly the oldest active milliner in the world. Her name is a household word in the millinery trade, both north and south. She has been in business longer than most people have lived.

On the occasion of her one hundredth millinery opening last year Mrs. Elam was presented with a handsome silver loving cup by five of the largest millinery houses in the United States: James O. Johnson & Co., of New York; Adam Miles company, of New York; Armstrong Cator company, of Baltimore; Dowd, Herr company, of Baltimore, and Ernest L. Rhodes company, of Atlanta.

It is a common saying among millinery people that Mrs. Elam is a magnet. She brings good luck to every firm which she patronizes. She has never been a millinery house that enjoyed her trade that did not become successful and prosperous. She has made hundreds of trips to the wholesale markets of the country and is always an event. She receives the homage of the best salesladies of the land and her long and useful career.

The thousands of buyers who visited the markets this fall none were accorded a more royal reception than Mrs. Elam. A queen could have received no more homage. Salesladies from this old lady received from the merchants to whom they had sold bought generously of the season's offerings for the afternoon of the persons of the fair women of the south, who come from far and wide to make their purchases at Mrs. Elam's establishment. Her reputation is far-reaching in Georgia neighboring states.

Mrs. Elam is now thinking of retiring. She is still a vigorous woman, but she says she is now getting too old to meet the keen competition of the times, and above all things, she desires a few years of retrospection and rest before she dies. She will probably go out of business on the first of the year.

She holds the loving cup presented to her in Georgia's neighboring state.

TAKING OUT PAPERS

By Will Seat.

They said of Myrna Charlton, son of the banker at Maysville, that he was a pompous cold-blooded young man. He finished at an college and been given a place in the bank.

It was said of him that when a sewer blew up as he was walking along the street one day that he was lifted 10 feet high and he decided with proper dignity, and did not even lose his grip on his cane.

"What a tyrant of a husband he'd be!" said one young lady.

"No wife would ever call him by his first name!" said another.

"He'd demand that she address him as Mr. Bruce Charlton, Esq." was the criticism of the latter.

They said of Miss Inez Barton, the daughter of a broker in the city, that she was too flighty; that she was too impetuous; that her quick temper would drive away all her lovers, and that she would die single and be an old maid.

None of the critics hit the nail on the head in either case. Mr. Charlton had fallen into an attitude of dignity and had been complimented on being a smart young man by the directors. It was, therefore, natural that his head was swelled a bit, and that his good opinion of himself should be shown in his attitude toward others. In only one he was right. He was.

After a month's stay in London he came home to say: "Never mind rides, dear knaw, and jolly well" and other terms of Kodak by which the Britisher is known.

To criticise his case he brought back with him an English bulldog as home. It was a fine dog, young and lively, and when Mr. Charlton mounted his steed and had a calling. It was not a thoroughbred, but the rider affected the English pose in the saddle, and the bull-dog followed at his heels and maintained the proper attitude of dignified demeanor.

When Miss Inez Barton came down to "Meadow Green" to pass a month with a charming sister she brought with a charming sister she brought with a charming sister she brought

THE SUNDAY CONSTITUTION'S

BASKETBALL WORK STARTED AT PEACOCK

Ending of Football Practice Turns Attention to Other Sports.

The cold weather has brought out the basketball candidates at Peacock. Football practice has been abandoned on account of the withdrawal of some men who were unable to give the time to practice, and now basketball is the sole center of attraction. The material is good and the prospects are bright for a good, fairly heady team. Only one regular of last year's team will be with us this year, but we have two of last year's subs, and the new material is the best that has been seen in a good while.

The squad will soon be cut down, and then the real work will commence in earnest. We are sorry to hear that Jones, last year's star guard, is unable to continue his work at Tech on account of illness. We hope that he will soon recover his health, and we wish we had him with us to help us cop the pennant.

H. A. ETHERIDGE, JR.

Luckie Street School

Second grade A is ahead now in the race for the attendance prize which is to be given at the end of the school term.

In the race in arithmetic in third grade B the boys are ahead of the girls.

Last week the fifth grade had a geography match on the work of the year and fifteen remained standing.

The eighth grade regrets the illness of Miss Hartell, but we are fortunate in having a very good supervisor.

We are very sorry that Blanche Quillian has to be absent on account of sickness in the family. We hope she will soon be able to come back to school.

Every day in fourth grade A the sections race in arithmetic. The fifth and sixth sections are ahead so far.

The girls are still ahead of the boys in the spelling race in second grade B. Agnes Sorrough, Wesley Saxton and Mabel Dickey have not missed a word in oral or written spelling since school began.

MARGARET BEAUCHAMP.

Tenth Street School.

Only two out of the sixty desks of the first grade were vacant last week. And a third on account of religious holidays.

The third grade A is glad to welcome back Caleb Richmond, who has been absent three weeks with diphtheria.

The seventh grade has had the spelling banner for the last two weeks.

The Tenth Street school football team won last week from Frazier Street school with the score of 76 to 0.

The third grade B has had the spelling banner for the last three weeks and the best line banner for the last two weeks.

The eighth grade made a hundred in attendance last week and also made a fine record in spelling.

COMER HOWELL.

Peeples Street School.

"How many children had rather study grammar than to eat?"

This was the question Professor Lanrum asked the eighth grade when he visited our school last week. Not a child in the room raised his hand; and Mr. Landrum laughed when he said he liked eating better than studying, so he could not blame us.

The eighth grade has received 100 in attendance nearly every week since school opened. It is our intention to make the highest record of any eighth grade that has ever left this school.

The second meeting of the Junior Civic club will be held Friday. The principal feature of the meeting will be a debate on the very interesting subject "Resolved, that it is sometimes wise for workmen to strike." Warren Armistead, Annibeth Smith and Robert Bell are the debaters on the affirmative side. Lucian Harris, Frances Stokes and Harry Cweaner will form the negative side. Margret Ford, William Hartman and Mary Pressly are the judges. Tom Long and Lucy Swann will entertain the class with recitations.

Miss Graves came to see us Monday. Her report of the fourth grade was an exceedingly good one. She said their work would compare favorably with any other grade in the city.

The sixth grade was glad to see Prescott Price at his desk Tuesday morning when the 8:30 o'clock bell rang.

Our club room is very attractive this year. The rugs, sofa pillows and pot plants, which the children have brought, make it very comfortable for us.

Edwin Hollingsworth, of the third grade, was given a picture for staying head in spelling last week.

Our school is certainly proud of their work done in music. Miss Harralson came to see us last week and the eighth received "excellent." In the seventh Miss Harralson asked that the pupils be rewarded for their fine singing, and this gave the grade great pleasure. She was also pleased with the fifth and their new American flag and National songs which they sing well.

The girls are much elated over the fact that they have won in stars over the boys in all grades, except one, which was the third. The first and second not participating. The points for stars, so in the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh, and eighth, the girls won. The eighth received their reward Monday and so did the seventh. The boys will have to look to their colors, for the girls are in the lead.

We have a beautiful spelling banner, of which we are very proud. Each grade wishes to have it in theirs indefinitely.

The fourth boys and the eighth girls won in line stars last week. The grades are learning how to fall to the front if they win stars.

Our flowers have been brought in since last week, but they add beauty indoors.

The third grade is busy learning a song for the society, which will be Friday. Other numbers are being prepared in the various grades, so we expect an interesting program.

We have a very fine corps of teachers. All of whom are in their places except Miss Mary Griffin. We hope to have her with us soon.

LOUISE DEAN.

Hill Street School.

Our society held its meeting October 22. The subject of the debate was, "Resolved, That inventions have done more to advance civilization than discoveries. The affirmative side was led by John Peacock, who was assisted by Harry Allen and Ralph Treadwell. They were opposed by the negative side, composed of J. C. Sisler, leader; with Isseral Lefroff and Frank Reed, as speakers. The affirmative side won handily. The declamation medal for boys was won by Edwin Williams, against Ray Welborne. The girls' medal was won by Thelma Dickens, who was closely pressed by Ethel Lefroff. We congratulate both the debaters and declaimers on their success.

We welcome Marion Ansley and Estelle Ansley into our school. We hope they will like this school as well as the one from which they came.

The faculty of this school gave a reception to the parents of the children on Thursday, October 16. Refreshments were served by girls elected from each of the grammar grades.

More privet shrubs have been obtained from friends of the school. We expect to plant them all around the edge of the yard. Some of the boys are now at work making room for more flowers.

Miss Harralson visited the grades Tuesday. The reports she gave were very good. Miss Milledge gave the lower grades good reports. We would be glad to have a visit from Mr. Slaton and Mr. Landrum. It is also about time for Dr. Terrell.

The boys are looking forward to the basketball court which is to be erected in their playground territory. The girls are learning the game rapidly, and we expect to see some match games or a league arranged. They have a ring court on their playground.

The spelling banner was won by the seventh grade last week. Other grades are not far behind them.

The attendance banner was won last week by the seventh grade, with an average of 95.5, with no tardies. The school attendance was 92.2, with few tardies. This school expects to capture the attendance honor, and thus far have made a very creditable record.

That artist who went into the Maine woods naked, and proved that modern man was the equal of primitive man, by living there for two months, must at least have saved money.

If he wanted to save money, he should have sent his family into the woods.

WRITES SCHOOL NEWS

MISS LOIS SCHENCK.
Constitution Correspondent from English Commercial High school.

Lee Street School.

We are glad to welcome Frederica Patterson back to our school again. It also gives us pleasure to have little Lamar Lowe back after her illness, which kept her absent so long.

We all miss Maude Baker from the seventh grade and hope she will soon be out of the hospital and back with us. She has had a bad attack of appendicitis, but, we are glad to say, is recovering rapidly from the operation.

The eighth grade has kept the attendance banner two weeks, much to the dismay of the seventh grade, who are trying hard to take it away from us. First grade B won the attendance banner for the downstairs grades last week.

We have had visits from Misses Harralson, Milledge, Smith, Graves, Dye, Cooper and Dr. Terrell. Our principal feels very proud of the compliments paid the different classes.

We are delighted with our new electric fixtures, especially those in the auditorium.

Those in the eighth grade who received the highest marks and led the class last month were: Elizabeth Wheeler, Blanche Ryan, Edward Lovell, Angelyn Bassett, Evelyn Meighan, Harold Brown and Dr. Terrell. Our principal feels very proud of the compliments paid the different classes.

Those in the fourth grade who led their class are Mary Moore Pentress Toon, Madeline Callahan, Irene McDaniel, Bera Sentell, Annie Stephens Bryant.

EVELYN McGAHEE.

Ashby Street School.

The fourth grade got the highest in attendance. Our school won the basketball at field day last year. The children are enjoying playing with it very much. The boys get it one day and the girls the next.

As this is the last week of the month, we are having a series of examinations. Most of the grades have beautiful flowers in their rooms. They have gems and flowers. Thanks to the children brought to school.

Willie Howard, of the deaf boys, is having to be absent from school on account of having fractured his collar bone.

HENNIE THOMASON.

Faith School.

Miss Harralson visited our school Thursday and gave the fifth and sixth grades excellent reports.

We have bought our new banner and everybody admires it.

We have also bought some school pennants and a graphophone records.

The class that makes the highest attendance for a whole week will be rewarded by going to a concert to be held in the first grade room. Miss Ruth Smith will tell them a story and they will hear two or three graphophone records. We hope our class will be the first to attend this concert.

HARRY GOLDBERG.

Fraser Street School

"Three cheers for Mr. Green!"

We certainly want to thank him for his kindness in securing money for our schoolyard. At last the grading of the yard has been completed.

We have organized a baseball team for our class, from the eighth grade to the fourth. The sixth grade played a match game with the fifth grade A Wednesday, which came to an end with the score very close, 6 to 5, in favor of the fifth grade A.

Miss Harrison visited us Wednesday and appeared to be pleased with the work. The seventh grade made "excellent."

The attendance of the school has been good all week. The highest percent in attendance was made by 8th grade A.

The C. C. Knight literary and debating society met and rendered a short program. The contestants for the medal were: Mary Wheeler, Jean Wiseberg, Mallon Sheffield and P. B. Coleman. The judges decided in favor of Janet Wiseberg and P. B. Coleman.

The seventh grade also rendered a program. The contestants for the medal were: Annie Scarborough and Margaret Glover, Ralph Lippman and Hugh Goldsmith. The judges decided in favor of Margaret Glover and Ralph Lippman. We highly congratulate the winners of the medals for having the honor of wearing them first.

Fraser street school is going to have a candy pulling October 29, and we extend a most cordial invitation to all. The admission is 10 cents.

HELEN PELZMAN.

Edgewood School.

Miss Postell and twenty-one young ladies from the normal school visited us on Friday. They visited the different class rooms to see the work of the pupils. Mr. Slaton and Colonel Daly also visited us. We were glad to have them and hope they will come to see us again.

We have changed our window boxes from the outside of the windows to the inside. The flowers and swinking baskets of the different rooms are looking attractive.

We think Edgewood school has the most beautiful and artistic school rooms in the city.

CHRISTEEN JARWAN.

W. F. Slaton School.

The seventh grade medals were awarded to Harry Johnson and Mary Launius for speaking. The medals are made of gold, and are to be given by those who won them until someone takes them away by speaking better than the one who had them.

The eighth grade also has medals to be given at the end of this week.

The children of the eighth grade gave their teachers a surprise on Monday night, which was her birthday, they presented her with a large inkstand.

The children of the second grade miss their schoolmate, Robert Hale, who is sick.

GAMILACAD EDITORS ELECTED AT G. M. A.

L. C. Parker Is Editor-in-Chief With A. B. Smith as Business Editor.

The election of Gamilacad officers was held in chapel last Friday night, and the following were elected: L. C. Parker, editor in chief; A. H. Kendall, exchange editor; L. D. Sifford, athletic editor; C. C. Cohern, social editor; ——— Bell, joke editor; A. B. Smith, business editor.

The October issue is expected to be out in a few days, as it has already gone to press. The Gamilacad this year will be a high-class paper, even better than it has been in the past. The corps of editors under the direction of Captain Rosser are all capable of putting out a good paper, as most of them have had experience along this line before.

The Y. M. C. A. enjoyed a treat Sunday afternoon in being able to hear the lecture given by Captain Sheffer. His speech was very interesting and was enjoyed by all who were present. We all hope that we will be able to have him speak to us again soon.

On Wednesday evening the scrubs football team enjoyed the pleasure of taking dinner as the guest of Colonel Woodward, all of them present reported that they spent a most delightful evening.

The full dress uniforms have arrived and all the cadets will be looking fine in them when worn.

First Public Debate.

The first public debate will be held by the seniors on Saturday evening in the Y. M. C. A. chapel. This will be followed in turn by the juniors, sophomores and freshmen. Those that will take part in the program Saturday night are: T. Parker Cobern, A. B. Smith, B. Rodnick, Greer and Johnson.

G. M. A. sprang quite a surprise when the football team lined up against Tech early for a game. The score ended 36 to 1 in favor of Tech. After the first quarter Tech realized that they were playing a better team than they expected. This being the first time we ever played Tech in three years, our touchdown came in the first quarter after they had scored. G. M. A. received the kickoff and on a successful forward pass to Kendall and a long end run by Smith carried the ball close to the goal line. Davis then carried the ball across on a line-buck for a touchdown. Smith kicked goal.

Davis Star of Game.

The running and tackling of Davis was easily the feature of the game, both on the offense and defense. Smith, Walker, Porter, Medlin and Kendall also starred. Smith was hurt in the last quarter and had to be taken out. Allen also made good gains through the line, and the playing throughout was very exciting, both teams playing good football.

Our next game was with Mercer scrubs here Friday. On Saturday the G. M. A. scrubs went to Carrolton for a game with them. The varsity plays a return game with Mercer scrubs in Macon on Thanksgiving.

Those on the varsity are Clark, (F. D.), captain; Medlin and Allen, halves; Cummings and Porter, tackles; Walker and Kendall, ends; Smith, quarter; Davis, fullback; Medlin and Allen, halves; Rodrigues (B.), Taylor, Hall (M.) and Parker (L. C.), subs.

Less Cheap Labor.

(From The Boston Globe).

In a time of high altitude, prices of food, clothing and fuel usually outstrip wages, but in Japan, where the industrial advance has been astonishing for the decade, the rule has been reversed.

Taking market quotations in 1900 as the standard, the following figures show the relative costs, of 10 every-day necessities, in 1910: Rice, 154; bean curd, 112; salt, 218; bean sauce, 132; pickled radish, 174; bleached cotton cloth, 140; bleached shirting, 146; average increase of 26 per cent.

Also the same period shows in the building trades rose to 154.4; furniture making, 144.6; dress making, 141.6; dressmaking, 146.6; food and beverage manufacturing, 141.8; miscellaneous, 154.5. An average increase of nearly 48 per cent.

With the gradual disappearance of cheap labor in Japan, the merchants and manufacturers of that island kingdom evidently will be compelled to meet Americans and Europeans on more terms and in much keener competition for trade, both at home and throughout the Far East.

GIRARDEAU VISITS BOYS' NIGHT SCHOOL

Prominent Atlanta Man Gratified at Work Being Done.

Judge Girardeau honored the young men's business class with a visit recently. He was very much interested in the night school and expressed himself as being highly pleased with our work.

The return of Mr George Yackler, who has been absent from school two weeks on a business trip to New Orleans, brings gladness to the bookkeeping class. Mr. Yackler is a senior and has charge of the school bank, which accounts for the aforesaid gladness, for during his absence the bank was closed.

Our attendance is bidding up remarkably for night school. An average of 170 for a week of disagreeable weather isn't so bad after all.

The eighth organized a society on Friday night, the Eighth Grade Algerian society, and elected the following officers: President, Sanford Rushk; vice president, Willie Morgan; secretary, Harry Pearson; assistant secretary, David Morris; treasurer, Fred Lyons. This grade had a spelling match on Friday. Perry Glass, Glen Chapman, Joe MacMillian and Mell Markam were the winners.

The seventh grade has recently organized a debating society. Mr. Nolan Shippey was elected president and Mr. Joe Dye secretary. The subject that debated was: "Resolved, That the United States Should Prohibit Imagination." The affirmative speakers were Lucius Mayo and Robert Maddox. The negative Fred Abrams and Alla Miller.

Mr. Willie Glober is still out of school on account of a broken arm. John Dokos, Nolan Shippy and Glen Bostwick are leaving to work at night.

The boys of the sixth grade are enjoying their work especially especially in spelling and arithmetic. A majority of the boys have made 100 in spelling every evening.

The fifth grade had a spelling match Tuesday and Herbert Rice side stood up.

In the fourth grade the following boys stood up in the spelling match last Friday night: Herman Allen, Ben Chastain, J. C. Welsh and J. H. Cobb.

HARRY PEARSON.

Uncle Sam's Ten-Cent Meals.

(Robert D. Heinl, in Leslie's)

A striking illustration of how the army copes with the ever-increasing price of commodities was shown in the economical feeding of the civil war soldiers at the Gettysburg reunion. Many experts expected 5,000 guests the first night and 15,000 pour-in. He prepared for 20,000 the next night, and nearly double that number of hungry veterans appeared. Contrary to the feeding, including his own camp force, an army of nearly 40,000 persons on the fourth of July an elaborate repast of meat, bread, potatoes and assorted vegetables was served. Some idea of the quantities of food purchased for the Gettysburg reunion may be gained when it is told that 20,000 eggs, included 12,000 dozen. The army ration had been paid, always stipulate the best and let not the fact that the provisions for those meals cost Uncle Sam only a little more than 10 cents per man give an impression that the food was not excellent.

The Typical American Girl.

(From The New York Times.)

Meredith Nicholson, the novelist, who was appointed consul-minister to Portugal by President Wilson and declined the post, is one of those American authors who have given up writing about wholly imaginary girls and has taken to depicting the American girl as she is today.

"If I were an artist," he said Nicholson, "and wanted to paint a typical American girl, I would make pretty poor decoration—I should attempt to depict a girl who is not afraid to do the world fearlessly, but a little quizzically, the least bit wonderingly. She might be a shop girl, who only got her home environment in a week's summer vacation, or a girl with a million dollars, who had played at golf and tennis on the Maine coast, but that same look would be in her eyes. She is the girl of the present and the woman of the future. And girl or woman, she is the hope of the world of civilization anywhere in the world."

JUST A JUNGLE ROMANCE

Barnum & Bailey's Pets.

Eugene is the prize leopard of the Barnum & Bailey zoo. He is Jungle-bred and has won his laurels as the lord and master of the leopards in the circus by numerous battles in which he has been victorious. Ever since the circus has owned Eugene for eight years and until a few months ago he lived as "merry as a marriage bell," with Hilda his gentle mate. The stork paid them a visit in March, and the gentle Hilda wore by the trial of nursing the fussy little cubs died at the winter quarters.

For days Eugene's grief could not be assuaged; he roared constantly and shook at the bars of his cage, while the little one had to be removed for the keepers were afraid that in his grief he might do them injury. Their raising became quite a problem to John Patterson, boss, of the zoo, who fed them warm milk from a large nursing bottle upon which they thrived and perhaps scarcely knew that their mother was dead.

In an adjoining cage was confined Amelia, a large lioness, young and fair to look upon. Amelia is now a trifle over 5 years old and was raised by the circus. Never having known the trials and tribulations of Jungle life Amelia is of quiet and ideal temper. Amelia heard the wails of the little cubs, and the roars of Eugene, and her heart when out to them and she sighed for the cubs and watched them closely from her iron barred home.

One day one of the keepers noticing her affection for the motherless cubs, took one of them in his hand and brought it close to her cage. Amelia stuck her nose between the bars, and with her warm tongue laved the little rascal's head. The other was brought and she fondled them, too. Patterson was notified, and the cubs were placed in the care of Amelia.

Then Eugene noticed that his little ones were cared for, commenced to forget his worldly cares over the loss of little 'uns and noticing the beauty of Amelia and grateful as for the interest she had taken in his motherless cubs, began making eyes at the gentle Amelia. The cages were side by side, but the iron bars were too close together and Eugene and Amelia made love under great disadvantages. Patterson recognized the attachment, directed that all should occupy the same cage, which was accomplished to the great joy of all concerned. Patterson avers that it is a real Eugene-ic match.

The marriage of Miss Mildred Brinson and Mr. Otis H. Inskeep at the capital tabernacle on Wednesday afternoon was one of the most beautiful church weddings of the year. The bride entered with her brother, Mr. Malcomb Brinson, who gave her away. The groom was accompanied by his brother, Mr. Cleveland Duke, who was his best man. The wedding march was rendered by Miss Hallie Varnedoe on the violin and Miss Lornette Willis on the piano, immediately after the wedding the bride and groom left on a trip to Florida, to be gone several weeks.

Charming Mother and Daughter

To be the inspiration when she is only 2 years old of a lullaby which has received the favorable criticism of Philip Hale, of The Boston Herald, dean of American music critics, is the proud boast of little Miss Anne Blake Morrison. Or to speak more accurately, doubtless it will be a proud boast after a few years. Just now Miss Anne Blake looks upon the lullaby as a very good piece to soothe her baby doll to sleep when her mother plays it.

The composer is a young Hungarian, Sebastian Ungiada, a violinist in New York, whose fame is yet to come, but, according to reliable authority, will come.

He gave a concert with Mrs. Morrison, the 28th of August, at Osterville, Mass., where Mr. and Mrs. Morrison had a cottage for the summer, and newspaper reports of it indicate that the very representative audience of summer colonists, many of them from Boston's inner art circles, accorded the pianist, the kind of approval they reserve for artist concerts in their "home town."

The young Hungarian's art is described as typical, but also more than that. Both in the character of his playing and of his compositions (two of the latter were included as encores) were discerned the unfailing sense of rhythm and accent, by which the true artist the instinctive musician, comes with peculiar alacrity into an understanding of his fellow spirits, the composers. And while this sense must be developed on a basis of material acquirements—that is, good technique and musicianship—it is in the end what distinguishes the extraordinary player and composer from the plodder.

Ungiada's melodies are of the racial, in their suggestion, just as his rhythm, is, and he shows an inventiveness, a variety which are yet held in check by artistic reserve, centering around a theme, a thought, only what belongs to it instead of all he knows, the latter a pitfall for the young composer as frequent as paucity of inposer as Ungiada is a pupil of Alexander Ielander, of Berlin.

Mrs. Morrison is a pupil of Mrs. Huff, of New York, who is a pupil of Leschetisky, the incomparable creator at Vienna of virtuosi. Her musical education was secured at the Visitation convent at Georgetown. Mrs. Huff residing then in Washington, and she has during the past year resumed with energy the steady practice which found brilliant suggestion in the Massachusetts concert. At Osterville her daily rehearsal in the concert hall drew the attention of no less a personage than Philip Hale himself, who criticised, praised and made suggestions. But as another Osterville colonist remarked, who evidently has an intimate knowledge of the customs of critics, nothing else indicated his real interest and good opinion like the fact that he actually purchased tickets for the concert (it was a library benefit) an unheard of performance on the part of a critic.

Mrs. Morrison has not played in public in Atlanta, and so the substantial character of her ability is known only to her friends and to intimate gatherings of musicians and music lovers who enjoy in the home of one of them Monday evening salons.

But she has the crispness of touch, the clarity of tone, the clean workmanship which give her playing conviction, and the fervor which holds interest in it.

It was an interesting incident, by the way, of a luncheon given last week to a visitor distinguished in music, that there were three Sebastian Bach pupils at the table—Miss Nan Stephens, Miss Edwina Behre, and Mrs. Morrison, the latter, to be more accurate, a "pupil of a pupil" of the great master.

Living near Osterville also during the summer was a prominent southern musician, who is winning artistic favor—Mrs. Turman Aldrich, Jr., of Birmingham. She has played in Atlanta with the Philharmonic orchestra. It is significant of her ability that she will play this fall with the Boston Symphony orchestra in Boston.

STIMULATING

The stimulating effect of being becomingly gowned you have experienced if you think about clothes—and is there a woman who doesn't? She may even be a "new" woman of the radical type, but she gives her clothes consideration nevertheless.

There are just two things about a corset that are absolutely essential to your well-being. You cannot feel well—you cannot appear light and buoyant unless your corset is comfortable. Your type of figure doesn't matter—that is a problem for the designer of the corset to meet. Your problem is a much easier one. All you need to do is to put yourself in the care of our corset counsel—it is her problem to select for your figure the corset that is properly designed to model your form to the lines of fashion that the corset has; that is, your figure takes on comfortably the corset shape, however extreme the fashion of corset may be for this season.

This same corset, no matter how perfectly it may shape your figure, is of no value to you unless it fits you comfortably. Since elasticity results from comfort as well as shaping, you must step off buoyantly, breathe easily and be able to bend with freedom—in other words, you must have the appearance of the easy, natural figure, and still be most carefully corsetted.

Now there is one corset in our stock that we are putting special stress on—and it is the REDFERN—the reason is that the styles are so ample and each model is peculiarly designed to fit a certain type of form.

Unless you are abnormally large, or have extraordinary figure defects, we can find in this make a model that will correct defects—not cover, but correct them.

Redfern Corsets are not peculiar in any way. They are perfectly designed—the patterns are accurately graded, and they are made of fabrics so pliant and accurately boned that the form with the first fitting takes on the corset contour. Since we mould flesh we can change your form, but we cannot press or crowd bones or displaced muscles. This is injurious to health. We can prevent a curve at the waist when it ought to be a straight line, and these corsets will give a straight line without discomfort.

Prices $3.50 Up to $12.50

SEVEN PRISON GUARDS SUSPENDED BY WARDEN

Moyer Starts Cleaning Out by Getting Rid of Men Charged With Insubordination.

Seven guards at the federal prison, near Atlanta, have been removed indefinitely from their jobs without pay by Warden Moyer since he came home Thursday after an absence of ten days.

Immediately after reaching his office upon his return Warden Moyer began a search of employees of the federal prison who might have given out information touching his government of that penal institution. This action was the result of the Hawthorne-Morton charges made during his absence.

As the prison was being closed Friday evening the seven guards were directed one after another to visit the warden's office. As the men summoned appeared one after the other they were handed a letter by the warden's clerk. There was no exchange of words, because the guards knew the clerk had no authority to speak for the warden. The seven letters spoke alike. These letters advised the recipients that they had been suspended from duty indefinitely without pay, and advised them to take up the matter with the department of justice in Washington.

Warden Moyer asserted in the letters that the guards had been guilty of insubordination by attempting to incite a mutinous condition among the prisoners, advising them they were being imposed upon by the prison administration withholding from them rights the prison rules of the country authorized.

The seven men suspended by the warden have been guards at the federal prison a long time, some of them since the prison was inaugurated. They are in the order of service:

Oliver Grimes, of Kentucky, fifteen years in the government service; J. R. Cobb, Ben Dunn, J. A. Baugh, C. N. McClure, G. M. Rasson, of Georgia, and Charles Evans, of South Carolina.

Howard Urges Silence.

Congressman William Schley Howard, who has declared that he will call the attention of the government authorities to the charges brought against Warden Moyer, of the Federal penitentiary here, stated Saturday that from now on the less said about the affairs at the big institution on the outskirts of the city, the better.

"In my judgment," said Congressman Howard, "nothing can be more disastrous to the discipline of that institution than to have the officials there criticised. There is a sort of wireless telegraphy among the prisoners apprising each of these criticisms and to re-establish discipline under these circumstances is no easy task.

"The peremptory suspension of guards on the ground that these men had been instrumental in getting the prisoners to the house of representatives. In the meantime I hope for the sake of the institution that the press of Atlanta will refrain from publishing fugitive statements from disgruntled parties or biased friends. I believe firmly anything but an official investigation will tend only to intensify the situation.

"The public must realize that these men in this great institution are charges of society and that they are segregated from it for the purpose of reformation. They are entitled to no luxuries and few comforts and should expect nothing but stern disciplinary treatment, always being humanely but firmly governed. One of the most dangerous elements in the conduct of the prison is the attempt on the part of the public to make heroes out of the prisoners."

The Rose Unfading.

(From The New York Post.)

All was deserted and so very still,
I knew that autumn must have entered there.
The song of birds, the hum of bees,
The low wind moving masingly,
The whispering leaves, the roses fair,
Had fled with summer from the garden chill.

And where heart spoke to heart with tender word,
And vows were made that mocked the might of years,
Lay fitful clouds, however, of the summer clouds. They are white, but they have caught the light of the gold of the fallen leaves and the pink of the faded roses, and close to the horizon they meet the mist and the gray of winter.

Indian summer scatters the leaves, and shows that the grass is still green. She pretends that the goldenrod belongs to spring. Here and there she persuades the violets to bloom again, and she coaxes the birds to stay and sing with her. The sun loves summer and appreciates her brave little farewell holiday. There is sunshine all the day and the stars are the kind discovered by the spenders of the day are reflected in their light.

MERCER AND CITADEL BATTLE TO A 7-7 TIE

For a Long Time It Looked as If the Baptists Had the Victory Won.

Macon, Ga., October 25.—(Special)—A combination of almost everything that goes to demoralize a football eleven, and cause its defeat, after victory for near an hour was in her hand, was the way it went with Mercer today, when Citadel tied up the game, the final score being 7 to 7.

The Mercer men appeared to be overconfident after surveying the Citadel crew off their feet in the first three minutes of the play, when Reams rushed over the line for a touchdown. Parrell kicking goal.

Citadel played hard in the last quarter, and after getting the ball to within ten yards of their goal went around left-end for a touchdown, and Weeks kicked goal.

Some Big Figures.

(From The Buffalo Courier.)

The assessed valuation of the great buildings in New York city for taxable purposes for 1914 illustrates in a certain way the almost incomprehensible magnitude if the wealth of the metropolis.

Heading the list for the next year will be the assessment of the Grand Central Station, at a valuation of $17,697,000. Then follows the Pennsylvania station, with a valuation of $14,350,000, and the office building with an assessed valuation of $12,000,000, followed by the Hudson Terminal office building, with $12,250,000, and the Mutual Life, with $10,000,000, and fourteen other office buildings, between $10,000,000 and $5,000,000.

At the head of the hotels still stands the Waldorf-Astoria, with an assessment of $12,170,000; next, the Knickerbocker, with $10,250,000; third, the Plaza, with $7,600,000; fourth, the Belmont, with $6,000,000; then the Ritz-Carlton, with $5,170,000, and there are fourteen hotels with assessments between $5,000,000 and $2,000,000.

Of the buildings the Hankey Trust Co. leads with an assessment of $3,000,000, followed by the National City bank, with $2,000,000, and ten bank buildings between $2,000,000 and $2,000,000.

At the head of the theaters and amusement houses stands the Metropolitan opera house, with an assessment of $1,125,000; next, Madison Square Garden, with $2,000,000; the Hippodrome, with $1,250,000; the New York theater, with $2,250,000, and five theaters between $2,000,000 and $1,000,000.

Of the clubhouses the University club heads with $2,100,000. The Lambs is at the head of the apartment houses, with $2,250,000, and there are ten between $2,000,000 and $1,000,000. Of residences, sixteen are assessed between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000, and twelve residences between $2,000,000 and $1,000,000.

The Wisdom of Betting.

(From The Detroit Free Press.)

Being firmly convinced that a certain contest would terminate in confirming his opinion, the gentleman in New York state wagered his new automobile against a new piano, and on the result of the contest in question—and long subsequent to the proceedings—gloomily trudged 7 miles to his home. Probably his family called that he had a grouch, too. Considered in the calm, clear, cold light of pure reason the gentleman succeeded in proving himself a near relative to a California peanut—otherwise the man with a donkey. Had he won th ehot the result would have been pretty much the same. For betting is not argument, evidence or proof of anything. It adds no force, power or dignity to any opinion or set of opinions. It is merely the outcropping of the gambling spirit, and that is a spirit that has led many a man to utter beggary who might have garnered a home and ornamented a community.

Indian Summer.

(From The Indianapolis News.)

Indian summer wakens the trees with her wind song in the trees, the trees are trying to outdo her in the richness in scarlet and gold. She deepens the color of the sky to the deep blue of midsummer and then softens her morning song to a lullaby and a dream that the earth and clouds dream that she has come back to stay. Those clouds, however, are not those of summer clouds. They are white, but they have caught the light of the gold of the fallen leaves and the pink of the faded roses, and close to the horizon they meet the mist and the gray of winter.

Indian summer scatters the leaves, and shows that the grass is still green. She pretends that the goldenrod belongs to spring. Here and there she persuades the violets to bloom again, and she coaxes the birds to stay and sing with her. The sun loves summer and appreciates her brave little farewell holiday. Silver Service Presented to Judge Newman

A beautiful dinner was given last night at the Capital City club. The guest of honor was Judge William T. Newman, for over thirty years judge of the United States district court for the northern district of Georgia, and the hosts were his friends in Atlanta and over the state. The dinner was to celebrate his seventieth birthday, and this silver service was presented by his friends as an evidence of their esteem.

Judge Newman's 70th Birthday Is Celebrated by His Friends

A most felicitous occasion was the dinner tendered to Judge William T. Newman, of the United States district court by 21 of his fellow-members of the bar and friends at the Capital City club Saturday night, at which time a handsome silver service was presented to him in honor of his 70th birthday.

While Judge Newman's birthday occurred several weeks ago the dinner was arranged at this time in order to allow his numerous friends from other parts of the state to be present and express their esteem of the judge.

Signal Honor Paid Judge.

Signal honor was paid Judge Newman in that the dinner was also a celebration of his decision not to retire from the bench. By virtue of his age and long service Judge Newman was entitled to retire upon his 70th birthday, but his friends urged so strongly that he should not do so that he decided to comply with their wishes.

The warmest expressions of love and admiration were given them, when Albert Howell, jr., presided as toastmaster of the occasion. Among the speakers were Governor John M. Slaton, Judge J. H. Lumpkin, of the supreme court of Georgia, W. A. Charters, of Gainesville, Colonel R. J. Lowry and Captain Hall English.

The silver service was presented to Judge Newman in behalf of his friends by Eugene R. Black, who commented impressively upon the high esteem in which the citizens of Georgia hold Judge Newman and the long and faithful service which he has rendered his country.

Hosts of Dinner.

The hosts were as follows: Forrest Adair, P. H. Adams, Paul F. Aiken, Cartersville, Hooper Alexander, R. C. Alston, P. H. Alston, M. F. Amoross, Clifford Anderson, James Newman Anderson, P. S. Arkwright, Reuben Arnold, Lown Arnold, R. Goldsmith, J. R. Atkinson, S. C. Baker, W. H. Baker, R. A. Bancker, Madison Bell, H. A. Blalock, Dr. J. Bates Block, R. Bidwell, E. R. Black, R. B. Says Farming Has No Pay-Day

Herbert Quick, editor of Farm and Fireside, the national farm paper published at Springfield, Ohio, Publishes in the current issue of his paper a letter from a woman living in Chicago, who is yearning to get onto the farm. Her husband is an engineer on the Michigan Central railway, and they have five children. The wife is 33 years old and the husband a few years older. The writer of the letter adds that she was born and raised on a Virginia farm, and that, as she looks back, those were the happiest days of her life.

In replying to this letter Mr. Quick says, among other things:

"How can I, how can anyone, plan out a way for these people to get a farm? They are used to the income of a railway engineer, which is a pretty good income for working people. Could they ever save enough to buy a farm by going into the country and working for wages? I wish I could say they could, but I dare not.

"In the first place, it takes more than desire to make a farmer. The desire is the most important thing perhaps, but other things are also essential. I wonder if this woman knows how much different her life would be from that on the old Virginia farm as she remembers it from the days of years?

"Three things are required for successful farming. First, the human factor, the farmer and his family. The city man's work is independent of weather, bugs, worms, flies and plant and animal diseases. He can plan exactly, and carry out his plans. But when he finds himself on the farm he is confronted with a host of the influences over which he has no control.

"Then there is the matter of capital. Tools are needed. Live stock, seed, fencing and building material are needed. And farming has no pay day. Nobody pays the farmer an envelope containing his wages at the end of the day, the week or the month. Thousands of people in the city would not be able to wait for the land to yield them a living, even if they had the land.

Irish and Sweet Potatoes Planted Together.

In the current issue of Farm and Fireside James B. Morman, a Maryland gardener and poultry expert, says that a practical feature of intensive gardening is the growing of companion crops; that is, crops which do not interfere with each other's growth. He says that this is the case with Irish and sweet potatoes. Following Mr. Morman experimented with Irish and sweet potatoes grown together in a small garden in Maryland in 1912. As to the results of his experiment he says:

"Under this method of intensive potato growing there was no crop interference. While the Irish potatoes were maturing, the sweet potatoes were getting a good start. As the Irish potatoes matured and the tops died down, the sweet potato vines began to run and soon covered the ground. This keeps down the weeds.

"Before the sweet potatoes began to draw their nourishment from the soil in the upper portions of the ridges, the Irish potatoes had practically ceased drawing nourishment altogether, in reality, the sweet potatoes absorbed the plant food elements not taken up by the Irish potatoes. When the two kinds of seeds were dropped in the late fall, both crops were normal. The practicability of growing Irish and sweet potatoes together, therefore, cannot be doubted and is especially adopted to small gardens. To get the best results, it is only necessary to provide sufficient plant food elements by the application of complete fertilizers containing nitrogen, phosphorus and potash. On my garden I have for years used nothing but chicken manure which is produced on the premises. When sufficient organic matter and fertilizer are applied to the land companion cropping is not injurious to soil fertility."

The Professional Lobbyist a Braggart and "Four-Flusher."

In the current issue of Farm and Fireside Judson C. Welliver, the Washington correspondent of the publication, writes a very illuminating article entitled "Why Congress Is a Dollarsign Persuades Congressmen to Do Strange Things." Following is an extract, giving an interesting picture of the "professional lobbyist":

"Your professional lobbyist, who is paid to be successful, is a braggart in action, is apt to be a professional four-flusher and four-flusher is the size up the situation with regard to legislation early in a session, then goes back to his employers and presents a list, in a mysterious note-book, with literal, glyphic marks opposite the names, showing how the committee stands. Now, the newest correspondent in the press gallery could have made up that list for just as accurately.

"With due ceremony and solemnity the lobbyist goes through this performance of flipping off the list employers or principals, next-to-the-skin facts about what's going to be done. He employs an effective stage whisper, turns the light low and uses all the other dramatic effects, never forgetting duly to brag about his personal influence with public men. When he is done he explains that, of course, to do these things it takes a lot of money and smooth work.

"The organization buys about 999 parts brick and one part gilded outside; but it bites. The bunco-steerer makes them believe that the part is the thing can't be done, don't you know, without him. Sometimes and before they know it, men whose better judgment and instincts rebel at it, are let into the notion that vital interests of their really demand that they play the game as it's played by the big fellows.

"When the session is over the lobbyist mounts his mercurial horse and goes back to report. Astute persons have a way of thinking that his forecast made at the beginning of the session, was almost exactly accurate. Felt sure all along that he couldn't be mistaken, for he doesn't mind exhibiting that the cards were all laid on the table on the little session he had with the president, the speaker, the chairman of the national committee and other floor leaders of both parties and everything that he promised to 'get' everything that he promised to 'get' everything that he promised to 'get'

TO LARGER QUARTERS.

Atlanta Coffee Mills Company to Increase Accommodations.

The Atlanta Coffee Mills company, of 418 Edgewood avenue, have recently had to undergo a very pleasant change. On account of the rapid increase of their business they have found their old quarters too small for the business. As a consequence they have moved into a splendid new home at 402 Edgewood avenue. This is a two-story building, and will allow them room for expansion which present business indicates will soon come.

This company is only a comparative young concern, but already their brands of coffee are known on the market as leaders in value and selling qualities. Among the special brands which they handle are particularly well known are the "State Seal," "Eureka," "Deal" brands.

The officers of the company are George S. Morgan, president and treasurer; A. D. Reeves, vice president, and W. D. Reeves, secretary.

He is looking much better, and it is to be hoped will shortly be in perfectly good condition once again.

NORTH GA. FARMERS PLANTING BIG OAT CROP

Commerce, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—The indications are that a large quantity of oats will be sown here this fall. It is not believed that the price being received for cotton will induce the practical, sensible farmer to abandon his grain crop. In fact, many farmers are already sowing, and the indications are that the large crop of oats grown this year will be duplicated.

Just Thoughts

Two inhabitants of the planet Mars paid a visit to earth. They traveled all over the country which we live in and then returned to their own people. A great meeting of the Martians was called at the two who had made the trip told their experiences. They told of the strange customs which the various types of earth-folk had and described the peculiarities o feach race. Said the first one:

"I went to a country which was teeming with hundreds of millions of people. They have a system of 'classes' and the man of one class finds it impossible to rise into a higher class, except in the rarest cases. They have a religion which is full of the highest and most beautiful ideals, but they live up to this religion, but many of them do not. There is much ignorance amongst the poorer classes and owing to the population per square mile there is much poverty. But nevertheless it is a rare thing to find complete starvation. They live on rice, meats, fish and cereals. They are honest in business and industrious. But amongst them I found numbers of people of another race from the other side or earth, who were trying to teach them a different religion and who said that they accepted that religion they would lead happy, contented lives and that every man would love his neighbor as himself. I was so impressed with the statements of these people that I wished I could see this other country from which they came, but it so happened that my fellow-traveler was increasing that country and so I had to ask him about it. The name of my country was Mars. He will now tell you about his."

The second Martian arose and spoke this way:

"The country to which I went is also strange. They seem to have many religions, but I was not

Society Makes Elaborate Plans for Harvest Ball

"When Reuben Comes to Town" will be the popular air at the Driving club Friday night when, in celebration of the harvest-end, society will go attired in field costumes and enjoy a hay-rack time ball. The old-time tune, it is said, is good for the "one-step," and everybody can sing the song and dance the one-step. But that will not be the only feature of the evening. There will be hay-loading tests, barn-dancing, and a great deal of question over the prize which is offered the debutante who will wear the most unique costume and the couple who will dance most gracefully the barn-dance.

Prizes, too, will go to the man and woman wearing the best working costume. The men will wear the overalls of "Si Hopkins" wears when he is duty, and the girls will fashion from home-spun and similar materials, the costumes and aprons they will wear. Sunbonnets, flower-trimmed hats and "poke and tucker" of quaint kind will be worn, and the ball will be one at which everybody who participates will be assured a jolly time.

The guests throughout the clubhouse will combine the symbols of harvest time with that of "Hallowe'en," and there will be fortune telling and singing and dancing which will be conducive to a general spirit of good cheer and happiness.

The repast to be served at 8 o'clock will include the old-fashioned dishes of the country time at the harvest season. Guests are urged to reserve their tables at the club as soon as possible.

SAVANNAH SOCIAL NEWS

Savannah, Ga., October 25.—(Special Correspondence.)—The wedding of Miss Anne Habersham Colquitt and Mr. George Lewis Cope Hunter in Christ church Wednesday morning was the central social event of the week here, and as the first of a number of fashionable autumn weddings was specially interesting. Miss Colquitt was attended by Miss Margaret Middleton, of Charleston, as maid of honor, she entered with her father, Mr. Wellborn W. Colquitt, of Mulberry, Fla., and was met at the chancel steps by Mr. Hunter with his best man, Mr. Ambrose Gordon. The bridesmaids were Miss Helen Ellis, Miss Cuddo Krenson and Miss Lillie Crisfield, of Chestnut Hill, Pa., and the groomsmen, Charles Maclean, Raymond M. Demere, W. G. Merrell, Jr., Heyward Lyman and J. C. H. Colquitt, of Atlanta. After the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. D. Watson Winn, of St. Simon's, acting rector, Mr. Colquitt entertained the members of the family and the bridal party at breakfast at the De Soto before Mr. and Mrs. Hunter left for the north, on their wedding trip.

The wedding was a very beautiful one and none this winter will have greater interest. The bride is a charming and lovely girl with a winning grace of manner which, in her short season out, has made her very cordially admired. She made her debut only last fall. Mr. Hunter belongs to the same young set and like the bride has numbers of warm friends. All this and the fact that their wedding came so early in the season gave it special distinction.

White roses filled the altar vases and in the chancel palms were arranged. Except for the rose-pink gowns of the bridesmaids and their bouquets, no other color was used, and this gave a charming dignity to the entrance of the bridal party. The young bride herself was very lovely in her trailing wedding gown and veil of lace that fell over its soft folds. All the bridesmaids were girls of her own age.

The bride's own gown of soft white satin was very gracefully and becomingly made, the corsage and sleeves veiled with tulle that gave an exquisite delicacy. A broad band of rose point lace was used and the tulle was folded across the bodice in surplice fashion, falling loose from shoulder to elbow in flowing sleeves. The drapery of the skirt was charmingly arranged, the court train hung from the shoulders, giving it dignity. Her veil of Brussels lace was worn over the face until after the ceremony, and arranged with orange wreath and soft fall of lace about the face, with clusters of orange blossoms at each side. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaids' gowns were of rose-colored crepe meteor, with delicate veiling of chiffon in three shades of roses that gave a charming play of color. The bodice was formed entirely of chiffon with floating angel sleeves and chiffon girdle and sash in the deepest shade. The close-fitting draped skirts had the new flat-fall train, falling in very artistic lines.

Mrs. H. D. Stevens has returned from the north. Mrs. G. A. Gregory, who spent the summer in Los Angeles, and has recently been with Mr. Arthur Gregory in Denver, to return home in a few days. Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Lang have returned from New York.

Atlanta People Entertained At Knoxville Exposition

By Isma Sheely.

It was another expression of the loyal interest of Colonel Robert J. Lowry, in his native state, Tennessee, when last week he took to the National Conservation exposition in Knoxville, a party of twelve friends. They left Sunday evening, arriving in Knoxville the same evening, and returned Wednesday evening. Governor and Mrs. Slaton were in the party, Judge and Mrs. Newman, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell, Colonel and Mrs. James D. Robinson, Mr. Thomas R. Payne and Mr. E. E. Lamb.

Colonel and Mrs. Lowry had a suite of rooms at the Hotel Atkins and kept open house the three days they were in the live Tennessee city. When they were not dispensing that royal hospitality for which they are famous, they were the guests of honor at a series of social gatherings. The president of the exposition, Mr. J. A. Wright, and members of the board of directors were among the first callers and the Atlanta party which visited the exposition Monday.

The Exposition.

The National Conservation exposition well illustrates the meaning of the name, and the buildings, beautifully located in the woods which show the genius of the landscape artist, are filled with warm, inviting and good products proclaiming the riches of the central south.

The splendid cattle exhibit, which probably interests people from every part of the country was one of the finest ever held in the United States, and there still remain of the exhibit specimens which would make a day of inspection there too short a time. The horse show was held at the same time, and marked the ascendency still of "King Horse," with types of the best from Kentucky, the northwest, Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia and Tennessee.

The Southern States building, a new one of distinct architectural expression, contained many meritorious exhibits, there being machinery of International note shown, the products of Tennessee craft, textile exhibits from the leading mills of the south, furniture proving the ability of the south to manufacture the woods of which she has rich stores, and many interesting exhibits of the smaller industries which are making so directly for our general prosperity.

In The Land Building.

In the Land building some railroads have illuminating exhibits showing the richness of the lands through which their lines are the transportation mediums. The subject of good road building is dealt with in a series of exhibits demonstrating the methods and implements of this all-important phase of our upbuilding. The native woods in all their variety and beauty were exploited here, and the marble and granite riches which are ours.

An exhibit of minerals was equally interesting, and the government, besides demonstrations of forestration in the small exhibits, has contributed to the exposition a highly instructive health exhibit, and one showing the various phases of educational progress.

The Liberal Arts building is complete with interesting departments, and there is a creditable exhibit of fine art.

The building containing the work of the negroes of the south eloquently proclaimed their progress, beyond the knowledge of the many who do not know the real kindliness of their progress. Conferences of significant import have been held in this building.

Child Welfare Exhibit.

No department of the exposition has attracted more universal attention than the child welfare exhibit brought together through the efforts of the board of the Mothers' association, of Knoxville of which Mrs. Perry Lockett is one of the leading spirits. Mrs. Lockett was president of the women's board of the second Appalachian exposition.

The welfare exhibit is one collected through the efforts of the Russell Sage foundation, the national child welfare committee of New York and Miss Julia Lathrop, of the national child bureau, of Washington, D. C.

Miss Lathrop was present at the installment of the exhibit, and spent several days in Knoxville. The Russell Sage foundation had an enthusiastic representative in the building, and Doctor Francis Sage Bradley, of Atlanta, was the demonstrating physician in charge.

Charts, photographs, original illustrations, cartoons and illuminated pictures tell the story of the child and what should be done for its conservation from the time it comes into the world until it reaches the age when it can take care of itself. The dangers which beset the child, the protections that should be given in the home and in the school were forcefully impressed upon the mind by the various displays in this exhibit.

The Atlanta Anti-Tuberculosis society contributes a creditable display to the exhibit; also the Atlanta Surgical institute in the matter of the treatment given deformed children.

Bachelor Tax Exhibit.

An interesting part of the welfare exhibit is that sent by the city of Memphis. It shows a complete little hospital and equipment for children, according to the fresh air idea. Dr. Lillian Wood, who has charge of the children's open air hospital of Memphis maintained through a special tax levied on bachelors. A wealthy bachelor of that city contributed the model of the little exhibit sent the Knoxville Exposition.

The School Exhibit.

In the department of common school education a most creditable showing is made by the school children of Knoxville, those of the grammar grades and those of the high schools. The Knoxville school system is demonstrating the success of industrial education being combined with the academic in the general curriculum.

The school problem, it learned, was almost as complex in Knoxville as it is in Atlanta, in the lack of large modern school buildings and adequate facilities. The recent enactment of a splendid compulsory school attendance has brought suddenly to Knoxville a large ele. ent of children who might without the law have never had a chance.

The Work of Women.

Beside the splendid aid in making the social side of the exposition a success, the woman's board, of which Mrs. Van Deventer is the efficient president, has a beautiful exhibit of woman's genius and handicrafts in the woman's building. Every department commands interest and reflects the genius and talent of women in this simple work of the rural and mountain women with their spinning wheels and looms, some of the loan exhibit is a forerunner of the woman's building, and the whole reflects the continued effort of the women of Knoxville commenced in the regime of Mrs. Herbert Nall, the president of the first woman's board, continuing under the leadership of Mrs. Percy Locke, and ably carried to the present status of interest by Mrs. Horace Van Deventer.

The Social Side.

Many beautiful expositions have marked the social side of the exposition, a number given in private residences, but those of official holding in the unique building called the "house-boat" by Mrs. Annie Booth McKinney are also built on the lake, and is the social side of an English houseboat. It originated with the chairman of the committee, Mrs. Percy Locke Johnston, one of the leading spirits among the women of Tennessee, both in their constructive and social life. Mrs. Johnston has been assisted in making the houseboat the rendezvous of notable society during the exposition by Mrs. Annie Booth McKinney and many other prominent women.

The Atlanta Party.

The Atlanta party were entertained Monday at luncheon at the palatial home of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Rose at Rosstrevor, one of the handsomest suburban homes in the south, and commanding from the summit of the hill upon which it is located a view of the hills and valleys through which the Tennessee river runs, making a landscape of marked beauty.

The table decorations were in the rich color notes of the crimson dahlias, the season's flower of the moment. Mrs. Rose, who was Miss Lida McClung, of Knoxville, was assisted in receiving by her guest, Mrs. Clark Howell, and the bright company numbered about 50.

At 5 o'clock the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Nall was opened to Colonel and Mrs. Lowry and their party. Mrs. Hall, as always, the queenly hostess, and gathering about her a group of the most prominent people in Tennessee. Her daughter, Mrs. Jesse Thomas, and Misses Miss Mamie Condon, of Memphis, assisted her receiving.

In the evening Mr. and Mrs. David Chapman entertained for the Atlanta party. Forty guests assembled in the spacious dining room of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Y. Y. Johnston. Mrs. Chapman, who was the beautiful "Sue" Johnston, was assisted in doing the honors of the occasion by her sister, Mrs. Stephens Sanders. On this occasion Mrs. Lowry wore the toilet which she wore on the occasion of her golden wedding. With her in the receiving line were Mrs. Slaton, Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. Howell and other members of the Atlanta party.

Tuesday, Governor and Mrs. George Baxter entertained Colonel and Mrs. Lowry and the Atlanta party at luncheon at the houseboat, among the distinguished guests being Mr. W. W. Pinley, who was in Knoxville that day presiding at the railroad conference. Flowers in the favored shade of "Lowry red" decorated the table and the occasion was marked by a series of bright toasts and kindred responses.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Sanford and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richard were hosts at a most enjoyable dinner-dance at the Country club, the company including fifty guests. These were seated at two long tables decorated in radiant tinted flowers, and every appointment was in keeping with artistic. Mrs. Alfred Sanford was Miss Eleanor Spence, and one of the most popular young women in Tennessee. Mrs. Hugh Sanford was Miss Bennet Woodruff, is the youngest sister of that group of beautiful sisters, now Mrs. Edward Sonford, Mrs. Samuel Shields and Mrs. Merk.

It was a source of general regret that Governor and Mrs. Slaton had to return home in time to be before the party of Colonel and Mrs. Lowry, whom they had accompanied. The party returned as the guests of Mr. R. H. Munson on the special car of the Georgia Southern and Florida railroad.

.:. TWO SCENES OF VIRGINIA'S VICTORY OVER GEORGIA .:.

Georgia Eleven Springs Big Surprise By Holding Virginia to 13-6 Score; Bob McWhorter the Individual Star

By Dick Jemison.

The University of Georgia football team upset the talent and the dopesters at Ponce de Leon Park yesterday afternoon when they held the University of Virginia eleven to a 13 to 7 count, in one of the best football games ever waged on the local gridiron.

In defeat, the Georgia eleven are heroes. They played wonderful football from beginning to last, surprising not only the dopesters, but their own supporters as well.

The looked-for walk-over of the Virginia eleven did not materialize. In fact, they secured a victory by the narrowest of margins, grasping a tie from Georgia's grasp in the last four minutes of play, by a daring maneuver that turned out successfully.

Georgia's Game Fight.

Georgia's fight, was one of the gamest exhibitions of football that it has ever been our pleasure to witness. Outweighed 16 pounds to the man, and in the line 20 pounds to the man, they played a wonderful game against odds and only the forward pass pulled Virginia out of the hole.

Repeatedly during the game the lighter Georgia forwards outcharged their heavier opponents, especially when Virginia, after one of her marches down the field, was threatening to score. When a score was imminent, Virginia lacked the final punch to slip across the tally.

The Virginia team's showing was disappointing to everyone present. There were few, if any, in the vast crowd at the game that suspected that Georgia would put up such a wonderful game and morally the result is considered a victory for the Red and Blue.

Virginia has the latent strength apparently, but it failed to show to any advantage in Saturday's fray. The difference in the weight of the two teams was apparent the minute that the two elevens stepped on the field. To the casual observer, it looked like Virginia ought to have romped home.

Georgia fairly outdid themselves. Maybe it is possible that Georgia is stronger than any one had given them credit of being. Maybe it was not a weakness on Virginia's part, but a strength on Georgia's. We're inclined to be a trifle charitable here.

But the fact remains that Virginia could gain consistently at times, but when the occasion demanded, they lacked the final punch to send over the necessary tally.

The Great Bob.

Bob McWhorter played the greatest football game of his illustrious career. He was better Saturday than we have ever seen him, and he was better in every department. It has been our habit to judge Bob as an offensive feature and simple. Saturday his defense was the greatest that a halfback has ever shown at Poncey.

Bob was entrusted with the pigskin time after time throughout the battle. It looked like he can keep the ball at least two out of every three times that Georgia had the ball and assumed the offensive. And the times that he failed to gain were so few that it caused comment on every side.

Bob showed more versatility than he has ever shown. Usually he uses his wide sweeping runs. He used these effectively. Saturday, he also showed that he can smash a line and cut in shoot through a hole off tackle as well as any halfback in the country.

Bob was given as good interference as the Georgia team has ever had, but this was not strong enough to check the onslaughts of two determined Virginians.

This failed to deter McWhorter one iota. He slammed into opposing tacklers unabated and unafraid, no matter if they had weighed 20 pounds less than he instead of from 20 to 40 pounds more. He ran fiercely, charging harder when Bob has ever charged in his life.

Bob backed the line in sensational shape. Whenever a Virginia man started with the ball and one looked to see what Bob had that made him so stout, Bob McWhorter was the man that had hold of it.

Passes Turn Trick.

The daring maneuver referred to above was the calling of the forward pass signal by Quarterback Gooch, of the Virginia team, four minutes before the game was to end.

The score was 6 to 6. Virginia had the ball in their possession in the center of the field. Georgia had spilled three plays. Turner, Georgia fullback, sifting through the line and nailing the runner.

On the fourth down, Gooch put on his signal. The Virginia team spread. Gooch hurled the ball long and straight and 40 yards away it settled into the arms of the speedy White, the left end of the Virginia team.

He had the touchdown certain, but Bob McWhorter was again on the job and brought him down 2 yards away from his destination. But the psychological stunt had been pulled and the Virginia team hurled off of its added weight into the tired fighter eleven in front of them and, with Ray carrying the ball, was sure of the winning touchdown.

It was a hard-fought and well-earned victory. It was deserved in a measure, because Coach Gloth's daring and strategy, but to have a tie game, these Virginia men, Powell hammered Georgia victory, snatched from their grasps in the last few minutes was a crime. Georgia deserved better at the hands of fate.

Other Stars.

Hugh Conklin and Joe Logan were the other Georgia players whose work stood out more prominently than the rest, with all the remainder of the team, principally Paddock and Powell, showing class all over.

Conklin entered the game with a "charley horse" in his left knee, could hardly stand on. He dragged one foot after the other from the beginning to the end of the battle. Yet he spilled play after play for Virginia gained very little when starting around his end. Joe Logan played the game of his career for a green man. He caught two forward passes pulled his own side and intercepted two that were hurled by Virginia.

Gooch, Landes, Ray, Mayer, Gillette and White did the best work for Virginia, with the honors about evenly divided between them, though Gooch, by reason of his directing the team's attack, hurling the forward passes and running the team, stood out most prominently.

For the remainder of the Virginia line, from Castle to Landes, there was very little hope for, unless they buck up. That permitted their opponents to outplay them repeatedly.

Virginia Scored First.

Virginia was the first to score, registering a touchdown at the end of the first quarter after marching the ball down to within 15 yards of Georgia's goal line. A forward pass from Gooch to Gillette, over the goal line, netting the touchdown.

Georgia's lone score was the result of practically the same kind of tactics and rams in the second quarter. McWhorter, after hurling the ball to Logan, who tackled as he fell over the line.

One of the largest crowds that has ever attended a football game in Atlanta witnessed the play, and they were rewaid for their efforts by witnessing not what advance dope predicted it would be, a walkover, but one of the best all-around football games of the year.

Besides, the Georgia tackle, hurt during the game, and had to be escorted from the field, first was thought that he was hurt badly, but after reaching the hotel it was found he had lost more wind than any thing else.

The Game In Detail.

Virginia won the toss and elected to kick off. Georgia choosing to defend the goal at the western end of the field, with a slight wind to their backs. Time, 4:15 o'clock. Halfback Mayer stuck his foot into the pigskin and the game was on. Ray received the kick-off and returned it to the 25 yard line, being downed by Logan.

Georgia failed to gain and was forced to punt. Virginia failed to gain and was forced to punt 5 yards. The Virginia eleven then started a march that netted the red and white sweeping runs. He used these effectively. Saturday, he also showed that he can smash a line and cut in shoot through a hole off tackle as well as any halfback in the country.

Bob was given as good interference as the Georgia team has ever had, but this was not strong enough to check the onslaughts of two determined Virginians.

This failed to deter McWhorter one iota. He slammed into opposing tacklers unabated and unafraid, no matter if they had weighed 20 pounds less than he instead of from 20 to 40 pounds more. He ran fiercely, charging harder when Bob has ever charged in his life.

Bob backed the line in sensational shape. Whenever a Virginia man started with the ball and one looked to see what had hit that made him so stout, Bob McWhorter was the man that had hold of it.

Hugh Conklin and Joe Logan were the other Georgia players whose work stood out more prominently than the rest, with all the remainder of the team, principally Paddock and Powell, showing class all over.

Conklin entered the game with a "charley horse" in his left knee, could hardly stand on. He dragged one foot after the other from the beginning to the end of the battle. Yet he spilled play after play for Virginia gained very little when starting around his end. Joe Logan played the game of his career for a green man. He caught two forward passes pulled his own side and intercepted two that were hurled by Virginia.

Gooch, Landes, Ray, Mayer, Gillette and White did the best work for Virginia, with the honors about evenly divided between them, though Gooch, by reason of his directing the team's attack, hurling the forward passes and running the team, stood out most prominently.

For the remainder of the Virginia line, from Castle to Landes, there was very little hope for, unless they buck up. That permitted their opponents to outplay them repeatedly.

Virginia Scored First.

Virginia was the first to score, registering a touchdown at the end of the first quarter after marching the ball down to within 15 yards of Georgia's goal line. A forward pass from Gooch to Gillette, over the goal line, netting the touchdown.

Georgia's lone score was the result of practically the same kind of tactics and rams in the second quarter. McWhorter, after hurling the ball to Logan, who tackled as he fell over the line.

One of the largest crowds that has ever attended a football game in Atlanta witnessed the play, and they were rewaid for their efforts by witnessing not what advance dope predicted it would be, a walkover, but one of the best all-around football games of the year.

Besides, the Georgia tackle, hurt during the game, and had to be escorted from the field, first was thought that he was hurt badly, but after reaching the hotel it was found he had lost more wind than any thing else.

The Game In Detail.

Virginia won the toss and elected to kick off,

BACK IN HARNESS.

Manager Lynn Fort, of Lamar & Rankin, Back After Illness.

Visitors at the Lamar & Rankin Drug Co.'s house were pleased last week to see the genial face of Manager Lynn Fort once more smiling a welcome as they entered the office.

Mr. Fort has been away from business for the past seven weeks on account of illness and his many friends are congratulating him on his restoration to good health and wishing him a long life of activity before the doctor again gets him in his charge.

George Stockely Smith, who has been in the paint furnishing stock department of John Silvey & Co. for several years past, is now going out on the road for them. He will travel in South Carolina, and starts the first of November.

J. M. Fritz, in north Georgia for the Lamar & Rankin Drug company, tells of good times in that territory, and backs up his assertions by plenty of big orders.

THE "PROFIT" OF KENNESAW MOUNTAIN

A Joy Ride on No. 11

—Southern

The local train on the Southern road, known as No. 11, is due at Toccoa, Ga., about 7 p. m. Not long ago, while a crowd of people were waiting for this train, a stout old lady leading a fice dog by a piece of rope came up and bought a ticket for Atlanta, and asked if she could carry her dog on the train. The agent told her she would have to check it in the baggage car.

While waiting for the train some bad boys began to pull the dog's tail, which made the old lady very angry and she tried to catch the boys. Finally she said she could not do so, she proceeded to tell them about how that dog was "a good raisin', and that she knew some dogs that had more sense than folks and more politeness than some boys' parents."

Finally the train came in. Now, No. 11 is a local train that stops every few miles along the line. People going from church to church, and "protracted" meeting to "protracted" meeting, and from "candy pullin'" or a "sociable" take No. 11, hence there is a very large crowd and always on board. Every one knows the other, and as each station is left, a few "Hellos" and "How's the folks" are exchanged. After leaving Toccoa the old lady sat all alone for awhile and then got up and looked around in the car seat and remarked that "this shore is a lonesome car without any company," and a woman spoke to me yet," and with that several said "Howdy" and "How's the folks" and so on. She looked over the crowded coach keenly and said: "My gracious, I never knew a fine lady that never seen so many big, fine looking fellows before in all my life. At the place she cast her eyes over the portly forms of Jack and Sid Wilkins, of the firm of Dougherty-Little-Redwine company, and the tall form of Jack, and the short Uncle Frank Davie, who is one of the best farmers and citizens of Habersham county. And after gazing about a bit she espied the Hon. Julian Hartridge Hart county, ex-speaker of the house, who, along with the rest, would just tip the scales at 250 pounds. As it happened all of these fine looking, portly men were bunched in the middle of the car and when she made the remark of next remark caused the hair of each one to stand on end. "Well, I declare, there I am a widow and now is my chance to pay my debts and take my pick. Those that are married please hold up your hands." Sid and Jack Wilkins' hands, and Mr. Davie and the Hon. Julian's also went up. She said she was trying to get under the seat, so she told him she was just "joking." About that time the porter came and announced "Smithville," and as a young woman got up to leave the train she rose to the old lady and said, "Hello, Miss Simon, how are you?" "I'm well, thank you. Well, if that ain't Annie Turner; hello, Annie, are you married yet?" "Oh, yes, I've been married for years." "Any babies yet?" "No," said Mrs. Turner as she stepped into the train.

Now a country boy in a hickory shirt and a banjo across his shoulder, he sat down behind the old lady, and as the train moved off he began to put the bango and a few "grace" chords on the old lady's head. Finally the banjo, playing a break-down. With that the old lady clapped her hands and went out in the aisle and shouted, "Hurrah, boys, hurrah!" Looking around she called for a partner for a Virginia reel down the aisle. In a few minutes the aisle was crowded with dancers, non-dancers from the their cars were standing on the seats. Sid was swinging corners with a country lass from Sandy Valley and Colonel Davie was calling out the figures, and while Julian McCurry and Ab Wilkins were promenading up the aisle and "Hello, Green and Jeresha Jones, from Peachtree site. As the Wm. was nearing the height the conductor came in and called: "Get ready for Atlanta." The music stopped off and each one looked inquiringly at the other. The country boy had been carried 30 miles beyond his station and the train had failed to stop at the last three stations because the conductor and flagman had gone in the grand march and overlooked to stop the engineer.

Then the old lady set up a wail. "Howdy! I got my dog." To get it from the baggage car and I don't know how to get it. She also said that she would go on and get her dog for a nickel. He declined, saying, "Under the stress of circumstances over has developed all that is noble in the heart of mankind, and while every one was turning about getting on their hats and not thinking of this poor, lone old lady in her sorrow and grief over her dog except right here is where true nobility of character was shown, where true greatness was demonstrated, where kind-hearted gentlemen forgot, like a giant ray of light in a world of selfishness, the Hon. Julian McCurry stepped up and said, "Madam, I'll get your dog." "I once had a dog, a 'house dog,' that I loved to love for his meek and gentle nature, for his faithfulness and bravery, and I know how you must love that fice of yours."

He went to the baggage car and got the dog under his arm and came back to the coach and as he handed it to the lady she paused and said, "I can see written on your face greatness of character, nobility of nature; you have a kind heart, and I appreciate it so gratefully; now will you only help me a little more?"

"Yes," said the Hon. Julian, his face beaming. "Well, then help me up the steps and to my home; I live at 1148 Piedmont, and I'll be glad to take a walk." The last seen of them was going up the long flight of station steps, the Hon. Julian with a large-sized fice dog under his arm in a hat box and in his hand, while the lady had her bird cage and haversack and umbrella.

When interviewed recently by a Firing Line reporter she said, "Yes, it is true I have lovely traits of character. I have them, but, confidentially, I am keeping them to myself. Please don't quote me."

ATLANTA PARTY TO VISIT PANAMA AND COSTA RICA

Following the instinct of the birds, who turn their flight toward the tropics when the "cauld blast" of the northern continents, a party of about 25 Atlanta people will leave December on a trip to Panama and Central America, taking in the canal not only as a pleasure trip, but as an educational tour to view the gigantic construction work on the Panama canal now nearing completion. Leaving Atlanta on the afternoon of December 2, the party will sail on a special steamer from New Orleans the following day, and they will be away from Atlanta on the entire trip eighteen days.

On arrival at Panama the party will leave the steamer and traverse the length of the canal, visiting all points of the canal construction, and spending one night in Panama on the Pacific side of the isthmus. The trip will also include a day's stay over in Costa Rica, spending a night in San Jose, one of the most remarkable cities in Central America. Bocas del Toro and Port Limon will also be visited.

A number of well-known Atlantans took a similar trip last winter and brought back glowing tales of the sights as well as the pleasures of a winter trip to Panama. The trip will be under the charge of John T. North, 121 Peachtree street, who has made several tours to the isthmus, and was in charge of the Presbyterian assemblies' Panama trip last May.

STEREOPTICON LECTURE ON MISSIONS IN MEXICO

"Missions in Mexico" will be the subject of a special stereopticon lecture to be given by Rev. Jere A. Moore this evening at 7:45 o'clock at the Harris Street Presbyterian church. The lecture is one of a series prepared by the board of foreign missions of the Presbyterian church, U. S. A., and is to be illustrated with seventy stereopticon views.

The Political Rights of Women

MRS. MARY L. McLENDON, Editor

President Georgia Woman's Suffrage Association

Mrs. Pankhurst and the United States Government.

Well! The agony is over, and Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst is free to come and go in America where prison ships have been dumping convicts and other miserable creatures, and women are not. I can recollect. The know nothings protested and prophesied all the evils that has befallen us since Uncle Sam cordially said to the down-trodden and oppressed, "Come along! Come along! don't be afraid, for Uncle Sam is rich enough, to give you all a farm." And on this last day, a poor, lone widow woman must be frightened out of her wits and threatened with being sent back home to serve out a sentence in Holloway Jail because she is the acknowledged leader of a band of women in England who are weary of oppression, and who refuse to cook, wash and iron and have babies for men who politely insist upon their doing so. The pleasure in life would be taken from man if he could not make women stand around and be afraid of him. The cat with its mouse has no showing with a man who has got hold of a woman. The scene is turning, and man is getting scared. Before the Lusitania left Liverpool Mrs. Pankhurst's coming. They said she would "foment a rebellion among the women, that they will refuse to cook, wash and iron and have babies until the woman gains in their heads to go on the warpath." Perhaps they had rumored her many beautiful accounts of Mrs. Pankhurst's mild manners, and her assertion that American women do not need to become "militant." Our women are so different from Englishmen, you know. Let us hope that sex discrimination will be a thing of the past when women are soon to be equal with men in the eyes of the law. Already there is a beginning to move in this direction, for every day citizens are rising quickly and asserting their belief that women should have equal political and religious rights, and industrial opportunities with man. The Rev. Dinsdale Rhetts England, says that the church is now ready to give a position to the past will back up the woman's movement if conducted without any militancy.

Mrs. Pankhurst, with all her militancy, seems to have the "knack of making warm friends who stand by her in her trying hour. Dr. J. F. Simpson and her large following, Mrs. Catt, president of the International suffrage alliance, and Mrs. Rhetta Childe Dorr and others too numerous to mention do not condemn Mrs. Pankhurst and her daughters, and earnestly plead in their behalf. Even she wrote plain to the American people why she tired of jealous of her. And her fame tion is to get control of the personal property of any member who does and administer it. Budindus has its own court for considering cases brought before it and some of its decisions have assumed importance in the high politics of Central Africa.

Oregon Woman to Represent State.

Miss Lenore Hobbs, private secretary to Governor West, or Oregon, is in Washington to assist to the state delegation there several important land matters. This is the first time a woman has represented Oregon in such a capacity. Oregon enfranchised women in 1912. By the 1913 session, the legislature eighteen measures of the greatest importance to the welfare of women and children were passed. These bills include the widows' pension law, the eight hour law, anti-injunction and abatement bill, the medical examination bill, requiring a health certificate before a marriage license is granted, the trade school for dependent girls, the law providing for a jury, and a bill calling for an industrial school for delinquent girls, and a bill making it a penal offense for a man to live on the wages of a prostitute.

Woman Suffrage in Denmark.

It is now said to be certain that the women of Denmark will soon have parliamentary franchise; for the Danish constitutional amendment bill—which was wrecked last year owing to a clause providing for abolition of the house of lords—passed the third reading in the lower house recently by a vote of 101 to 4. The Danish people have shown themselves in favor of this measure, it is considered unlikely that the upper house will wreck the bill a second time.

The suffrage bill recently passed in Iceland now awaits the signature of the king of Denmark in order to become law.

How Women Vote in Peoria, Ill.

It is stated on good authority that more women than men voted in Peoria when the last election was held a few days ago. There were 928 men who voted and 975 women. In all men voted for it three to one, and the women eighteen to one.

That doesn't seem to be "doubling the men's vote," does it?

You know that is one of the strong reasons why some folks think it will never do to give the women of Georgia the ballot.

The election managers do not think the women of Peoria should have schools for women voters, for out of eighteen defective ballots, only three were marked by women. Women are surprising "creeters" anyhow, and "mere man" will never solve the problem of what the election franchise will do for us until we demonstrate beyond peradventure that we mean to have a single standard of morals for both sexes. The ballot will help us to do it.

SAID TRAIN HIT HIM., BUT HAD NO BRUISES

Cordele, Ga., October 25.—(Special.) A negro giving his name as B. R. Lyons and his home as Atlanta was found yesterday lying beside the tracks of the Georgia Southern and Florida railway in an apparently serious condition. He stated that he had been struck by the yard engine on this road and knocked down between the tracks, the engine passing over his body. He was examined by several physicians, who found no bruises whatever on his body.

Lyons late last night the negro appeared at a local hospital, stating that he had been run over by the engine, and that he must have medical treatment. Nurses at the institution notified the police, and he was removed to the city barracks. Later he was released and ordered out of town.

BUILDING SILO AT STATE FAIR GROUNDS

Athens, Ga., October 25.—(Special.) A unique feature of the state fair at Macon this year is the construction of a silo by the State College of Agriculture. The silo is to be a permanent structure, and is to be filled with crops grown on the fair grounds. Feed is to be sold from the silo each year to live stock on exhibition. Thus there is being demonstrated at the fair how to construct a modern silo, how to fill it, what crops to use, and how the feeding value of it as evidenced by the way the live stock thrive upon it. Records will be kept of the cost of the ensilage to demonstrate to the farmers that it is the most economical feed that can be produced.

In this way it is expected that a large number of farmers and stock men who are not acquainted with the silo idea its advantages will receive instruction.

Rev. Frank R. Shipman to Speak at Congregational In Dr. Hanscom's Absence

Rev. Frank R. Shipman, of Atlanta Theological seminary, will fill the pulpit at Central Congregational church at both services Sunday on account of the absence of the pastor, Dr. Geo. L. Hanscom, who is attending the triennial council of Congregational churches at Kansas City, Mo. Dr. Shipman is an interesting speaker, and for a number of years served churches in several New England cities. Since coming to Atlanta last year as professor of church history in the theological seminary, he has made many friends.

Special music is provided for both morning and evening services under the direction of Miss Ethel Hyer. Miss Mamie Adel Hays will give solos at both morning and evening services.

County Schools Open.

Milledgeville, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—All the public schools of Baldwin county will begin the fall term Monday, October 27, and arrangements have been completed for the session. The outlook is good for a full attendance.

RHEUMATISM

A Home Cure Given By One Who Had It

In the spring of 1909 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism, suffered as only those who have had can, for over three years. I tried remedy after remedy and paid dearly after doctor, but got relief as I received was only temporary. Finally I got hold of a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number of my friends suffering and even heretofore with Rheumatism, and it effected a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer to try this form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simple write your name and address and I will send it free to you. After you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long-looked-for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but, remember, I do not want your money unless you are perfectly satisfied to send it. Isn't that fair? Why suffer another day when positive relief is thus offered you free. Don't delay. Write today.

Dr. J. H. Grant,

Dear Doctor—

You are correct; I am quite familiar with the Baughn Pellagra Cure. You can prescribe it with perfect impunity and safety. It has cured a merchant here, a man of means, and a lady and a child 4 years of age. All were bad cases, all are sound and well now.

Doctor there is one way to be bubbling with that serum treatment, nor any other doubtful remedy. The Baughn Pellagra Cure is the only established and successful treatment I know of. No one here doubts the efficacy of the cure at all.

We all know that pellagra is on the increase and that its invasion or prevalence should be stamped out before we have a wide-spread epidemic of it in this country as once prevailed with all its deathly horrors in Italy, Austria, Gascony, Roumania and Corfu.

As to my opinion of the Baughn's remedy will say that I have the most implicit confidence in it and when not once try it you will prescribe no other.

Very respectfully,

Your friend,

Girlish Complexion Now Easily Acquired

"A skin of blended snow, cream and rose" is the way one fastidious writer describes her newly acquired complexion. She is one who has adopted mercolized wax in place of cosmetics, mercolized wax in place of cosmetics, massage, steaming and other methods. Many who have tried this marvelous wax report that its effects are quite different from those of any other treatment. It produces a complexion of exquisite girlish naturalness, rather than one bearing evidence of having been artificially "made over." One that is indeed "Nature's own," the result of gradually absorbing dead particles of surface skin, permitting the younger, healthier skin beneath to show itself and giving its pores a chance to breathe. Mercolized wax, procurable at any drug store in original one ounce package, is rubbed on at night like cold cream and washed off in the morning.

I have also had many favorable letters from those who have tried the wrinkle-removing lotion which I recommended recently. If any have mislaid the formula, here it is: 1 oz. powdered saxolite, dissolved in 1-2 pt. witch hazel.—"Natalie" in The Woman Militant.

Overworked Women

If you were offered sure aid in time of trouble, would you put it aside and accept something of doubtful efficiency?

If you saw before you a strong and safe bridge leading to your goal, would you ignore it and try some insecure and tottering structure? You would, of course, choose without hesitation that which all evidence showed to be the safest and best for you. Why then, do some women risk their most precious possession—their health—because of some unwarranted prejudice against an advertised medicine?

You know, or should know, that for nearly forty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for woman's special ills. No medicine without great merit could have stood the test all these years and attained the largest sale and greatest success of any medicine in the world for this particular purpose.

Therefore, is it fair for you or anyone to say, without giving this great medicine a trial, "I don't believe it will help me."

Read the following genuine and truthful letters—only two of many thousands from grateful women:—

Letter from Miss Grace Dodds, Bethlehem, N.H.—"By working very hard, sweeping carpets, washing, ironing, lifting heavy baskets of clothes, etc., I got all run down. I was sick in bed every month. This last Spring my mother got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me, and already I feel like another girl. I am regular and do not have the pains that I did, and do not have to go to bed. I will tell all my friends what the Compound is doing for me."—Miss GRACIE B. DODDS, Box 133, Bethlehem, N.H.

Letter from Mrs. Etta Donovan, Willimantic, Conn.—"For five years I suffered untold agony, backache, irregularities, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It was impossible for me to walk up stairs without stopping on the way. I was all run down in every way. I tried three doctors and each told me something different. I received no benefit from any of them but seemed to suffer more. The last doctor said it was no use for me to take anything as nothing would restore me to health again. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to see what it would do, and by taking seven bottles of the Compound and other treatment you advised, I am restored to my natural health."—Mrs. ETTA DONOVAN, 765 Main Street, Willimantic, Conn.

A HANDSOME REWARD WILL BE GIVEN to any person who will prove that any of our testimonial letters constantly being published in the daily newspapers are not genuine and truthful, or that any of these women were paid in any way to give their testimonials or that the letters were published without their permission or that all the original letters did not come to us entirely unsolicited.

RITCHIE-CROSS BOUT THE GOODS

Holds Center of Pugilistic Stage the Coming Week. Corbett Gossips on Murphy and McFarland Also.

BY JAMES J. CORBETT,
(Former Heavyweight Champion of the World. Written for The Constitution.)

New York, October 25.—(Special.)—Local lovers of boxing will be given their first opportunity to see Willie Ritchie in action next Wednesday evening. For strange as it may seem, Willie has yet to make his metropolitan debut. Not that I think it will make the champion nervous or anything like that, but it really did take him a long time to bust into the local game.

It is through no fault of Ritchie's, however, that he has been so long about exhibiting his skill in New York. Not so very long ago, when Willie was a mere sparring partner in the camp of the great Packey McFarland, he tried hard to get a match here, but without success.

And Willie was not looking for easy marks, either. Leach Cross was as good as anything we had locally at the time—as he is now—and it was at the Hebrew that Ritchie aimed his challenge in particular. But, as Cross has frankly confessed since then, he had heard a thing or two about the young Californian and could see no good reason why he should take on what promised to develop into a hard job unless well paid for it, and by no stretch of the imagination could Ritchie be figured as a drawing card at that time.

Cross Dodged Ritchie.

I believe Leach ducked out of it by telling Ritchie to "go get a rep" before asking a match with such a famous fighter as himself. And Ritchie took his advice. Or at least he got the "rep" all right. And now things are a bit different. It is Cross who is asked for the match this time.

And to Ritchie's credit be it said that he was generous enough to forgive the local man the slurs on his reputation. Willie doesn't care who he meets in the ring, as long as his weight conditions prevail, and his terms are met by the promoters. The champion don't give a hang who his opponent may be.

"And that goes for Packey McFarland, too," Willie told me after watching the Chicagoan make Murphy look like a boy who had never put on boxing gloves on before. "But Packey will have to make 138 ringside for me to go fight."

Ritchie doesn not underrate Cross. In fact, he has considerable respect for the wallop the latter can land. Willie saw Leach put a tough customer away a few weeks ago—Young Brown it was—and therefore admitted that Leach can surely hit some.

"But," added the boy, "I can hit and punch some, too. And I think I will show the crowd before the ten rounds are over that Leach Cross is not the only lightweight with a kick."

And, remembering what Willie did to Joe Rivers, we agree that he ought to make an interesting bout. Cross is such a mix-up fighter at best, but his methods are usually effective. The only way to handle him is his disinclination to fight if he thinks the other fellow has it "on" him. Then he comes up and stalls the best he can until the ten rounds are up.

He did that with McFarland and Britton, both times the champion had him a mile when it came to boxing. Leach found he could not stand the punch and fought entirely on the defensive, satisfying himself with going up whenever real danger threatened.

An Early Starter.

If Ritchie stings Cross early in the fight it won't be much of a battle. Unless the local man starts fighting differently than in the past encounters in local rings, he will be content to start off well and happen to land one that will make the champion take a bit then Cross will show to better advantage. Leach usually fights his best battle when he gets off on the defensive, satisfying himself with going up whenever real danger threatened.

Rivers shaded Cross here on two occasions. Ritchie had little trouble beating the Mexican. And the winning from Rivers the champion showed that his punching powers are second to none. He may be a bit cautious at the outset, it being his first appearance in New York, and the fact that he is champion and has a title at stake may make him feel his way carefully for a few rounds. But in the end he will outclasses the local man and I look for him to win the decision easily and walk out an undisputed champion. termination to the battle I am willing to wager that if anyone takes the time to count it will be Cross and not the champion.

Packey McFarland couldn't have been feeling very well that afternoon in San Francisco when Tommy Murphy stayed twenty rounds with him, according to the stories of the contest, was having the best of the milling the last few innings. Last week Packey and Tommy boxed ten rounds in the Garden. But it could not be called a match. Packey simply entertained the local boy, but as is his custom did not deem it necessary to knock out his opponent to satisfy the crowd of his superiority.

Murphy's Mistake.

Speaking of Murphy, it appears to me that Jim Buckley is not handling his affairs any too well. If Murphy had avoided McFarland he could have had a match with Champion Ritchie as one of the California clubs on Thanksgiving day or a little later in December. Tommy was a card on the coast and both Corbett and Graney, the leading promoters, were hot after Ritchie to consent to such a match. But now, since that disastrous (to him) McFarland affair, Graham fears Tommy will not be in so great demand.

Buckley's fault is a supreme confidence in the men he handles. Such an aggressive "tarrier" himself and would just as soon fight as eat, he wanted to lick big Carl Morris the night of that painful "Goodnight"-Morris fiasco. And he thinks his two fighters, Smith and Murphy, can take anything in their divisions. It seemed a foolish piece of business to stake the flax of losing a match with the champion by sending Murphy after what looked a sure beating by McFarland. But then Jim knows his own business best, I suppose.

I wonder whom Packey will tackle next. I don't see how he can hope to get any matches worth while in the lightweight division, unless he decides to accept Ritchie's proposition to box at 135 ringside. There is Mike Gibbons, champion of the Garden, who has already refused that offer, but Willie replied that 14 at 2 in the afternoon is the best he will do for McFarland. Unless the latter will let Mike have his way there is small chance of the clever boys clashing—at least in the near future.

It is a matter of regret that Mike and Packey can't be brought together. I am a warm admirer of both lads and consider them the cleverest boxers in the game today, with the exception of Freddy Welsh, and the English champion can always be depended upon to show something fancy every time he starts. And I can see no reason why Mike and Packey will be very evenly matched if Gibbons is allowed to work in at 150 pounds—that is, for a ten-round bout.

A longer distance might prove a severy handicap to Mike's body lads would probably not weigh over 142 at the most, but for the ten rounds I doubt if any 150-pound man could do much damage to him. Say that Packey would be giving eight pounds away—that would not be so great a handicap for a man of his marvelous speed and skill.

Who Will Box Packey?

I sincerely hope that Billy Gibson succeeds in finding an opponent for McFarland worthy of his skill. However, I doubt if he can do it owing to weight differences. Either Freddy Welsh or Willie Ritchie might be able to make matters interesting for the stock yards boxer, but it is doubtful if either will allow him to weigh in at 2 in the afternoon. Outside of that I can't think of a single member of the lightweight fraternity who would stand the ghost of a chance with the nimble McFarland. If Gibson can persuade Packey to box Gibbons at catch weights it will be a great favor to all followers as a match between the skillful couple would be an ideal one, and the Garden would be furnishing local fans with an entertainment in which science and skill par excellence would predominate.

Lightweight Champion Ritchie's first battle—after the Cross match—was to have been with Ad Wolgast in Milwaukee early next month. But the unfortunate injury to the former champion upsets Willie's plans. It is probable that he will now remain in New York until the holidays. Ritchie informed me the other day that he would take on several bouts in addition to the Cross affair, but did not mention the names of his prospective opponents. It is thought, however, that Jack Britton and Young Saugrue are favored by local promoters, with McFarland, of course, having first call if he can come to an agreement with the champion on the weight question.

TECH HIGH ELEVEN CONTINUES TO WIN

Locust Grove, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—In the hardest fought game of the season Tech High School defeated the Locust Grove Institute by the score of 12 to 7.

The visitors' lone score came in the first quarter on a fake kick by Moore for a 40-yard run. Edmiston played a great game for Tech High.

Harkins, Witcher, Dupree, Sims and Lee were some of the mainstays for Locust Grove. Amis was especially strong on defensive. Length of quarters 12 and 10 minutes.

Webb Wins Tennessee Title.

Nashville, Tenn., October 25.—By defeating J. W. S. Rhea, of Memphis, 4 up and 2 to play in a 36-hole match at the local golf and country clubs today, T. I. Webb, jr., of this city, won the state golfing championship. Representatives of Knoxville, Chattanooga, Memphis and Nashville took part in the tournament.

The Old Time Fan Throws BASEBALL SPECIALIZED NOW The Hooks Into "Cap" Anson

By Charles A. Lamar.

The public always sits up and takes notice when Mr. Adrian "Cap" Anson, the grand swataman of the long ago and brilliant but caustic commentator on baseball, limbers up and lets over a few lines from the typewriter. It's "bleedgeed" to do it, as Chicago Heinie would say.

Old man "Anse" delights in stirring up pleasurable thrills in his own manly breast and deep sympathy in the bosoms of others by his dramatic, not to say bitter, outbursts of oratory on the impossibility of Mack's Athletics or any other team on earth having even a long chance of defeating his White Wonders of several years ago in a world's series or any other sort of a baseball event, there you are.

Old man "Anse" said that he knew his White Stockings, with Corcoran and Goldsmith on the mound and Mike Kelly with the wind pad, could whiff Mack's youngsters off the map like a fly going down the throat of a frog. And there you are again.

Anson's Trouble.

The trouble with Anson is, he is prone to live too much in the past, and that is perhaps very natural. The critics of baseball are nowadays doubting if modern baseball is not a better game than it was in the days of Anson, and if it is not played more scientifically and more brilliantly at times.

But the machine-like precision and marvelous accuracy of the Philadelphia infield was entirely lacking before it was unknown at that time and for reasons too obvious to write about. The pitchers in every league and all the famous team played brilliant ball and were invincible in their day. In many ways it was far more interesting than the game of today because their individuality stood out more boldly, and also, and that's the answer, because they were young.

The Answer to Mack.

Connie Mack's phenomenal success in baseball is in no sense the product of luck. It is the result of critical genius in harping on.

Mack's team takes the greatest possible advantage with the least possible effort and strain. Constant, Machine in my opinion, is the greatest baseball general that the game has ever known.

Game Specialized.

The game of baseball is now very highly specialized, and hence the individuality of a player, no matter how brilliant, is largely neutralized. Baseball games are won now by the collective and not the individual playing strength of a team. The baseball idol is rapidly passing.

No ball player is great enough now to win games with his own efforts in the old days, with every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost, he had a better chance. That is the reason the idols were more numerous then than now.

For example: A "Constant" Anson piled the pill 300 games better 10 consecutive years. And that was considerable pitching. What?

But, aside from his brilliant batting, Anson was also on his feet as a crippled sea turtle a mile from water. Yet he was a fine fielder. The truth of his prime than are Cobb and Collins.

Mack Ignored Cobb.

Some of the critics seem to be surprised that Connie Mack ignored Cobb in picking his world-licking team. He selected Oldring instead. Yet everybody knows that Mack does not think Oldring the equal to Cobb. He imbibed a prejudice against Cobb, and largely personal, and hence the pique which Oldring copped off a prejudicial strike. That's now important and de-

Mr. Garry Herrmann, owner of the Cincinnati Reds, says the American league has the National backed in the wings in speed and playing strength. Mr. Herrmann has been asleep at the switch.

He ought to smoke up. If he hopes to aid the National league, he should hire a new ball club and fire a bunch of his self-constituted managers, who have done more to keep the Reds in the pit than all other causes combined.

And who were on the hammer job day and night during Hank O'Day's regime, and the treatment he received in Chicago was so ungodly and outrageous from start to finish.

Inside Ball—What?

A deal of nonsense was written about "inside" ball during the world's series. Some of the critics and a lot of the player-dopesters harped on how much more or how much less, as the case may be, this manager knew or didn't know about "inside" ball, as nauseum.

Now, what is this so-called "inside" ball? Well, aside from the possession of brains sufficient to conceive the double steal and the athletic skill to execute it against an opponent, it is a figment of the imagination of others' words, poppycock, pure and simple, and it can't be taught. DO BANK DEPOSITS DENOTE BUSINESS PROSPERITY?

Deposits Clearing House Banks, Oct. 25, 1912.. 29,426,000

Gain during past year .....$ 5,470,000

Including the deposits in the smaller Savings Banks and Trust Companies, the Bank Deposits of Atlanta are now approximately:

$40,000,000

or over Five Million Dollars more than at any other time in the City's history, and still growing.

STICK A PIN HERE

A TIME of depression is a time of education, and to the careful and discriminating investor equally a time of opportunity. The general trend of realty values in Atlanta is upward. While the change in the administration of our national affairs, and a consequent change in great public policies, together with the short crops of 1912, depressed prices for a while, AT NO TIME HAS A SINGLE PIECE OF ATLANTA PROPERTY BEEN SACRIFICED; nor have the owners of Atlanta real estate experienced a direct loss during the past year, as have those who invested in even the safest bonds and stocks.

YOUR OPPORTUNITY IS NOW

WITH SUCH GREAT and necessary civic improvements contemplated as the opening up of Spring and Cone Streets, the bridging of the railroads and a viaduct to the western part of the city, central property values are bound to reach higher levels. We have a few central and semi-central lots which we can turn at last spring prices. Let's do business before they are withdrawn from the market.

CENTRAL LOT

IN THE HEART of the city, within a stone's throw of the new Healey Building, and in 100 feet of the Million Dollar Postoffice, adjoining a ten-story office building, we offer 40x100 feet at $1,550 per foot. In our opinion it is worth $2,000 per foot today, and will sell for $2,500 per foot within two years.

SEMI-CENTRAL CORNER

ONE BLOCK of Peachtree Street and Capital City Club, 100x100 feet, located on Spring Street, where it will get the full benefits of the new street work. We believe that there is $10,000 to $15,000 profit in this corner within twelve months. The large corners up in town are getting scarce and this one will make you independent. Price $70,000; $5,000 cash, balance can run ten years at 6 per cent.

PEACHTREE, THE WONDERFUL

WISE INVESTORS who have placed money in Peachtree Street property have reaped a harvest of one, two and in some cases three dollars for every dollar invested. We believe that opportunities are as great on the street today as they were one to two years ago.

$40,000—STORE LOT—$40,000

PEACHTREE STREET, this side of Baker Street. It will work for you day and night. The wise ones predict that there is $1,000 per foot profit here within twelve months.

PEACHTREE CORNER

ONE OF the very few corners to be had on the street at any price; 50 feet front. Price $1,800 per foot. Attractive terms.

PEACHTREE, BETWEEN BAKER AND IVY

20x100 FEET to a 10-foot alley, adjoining a new brick building. If you do not buy you can figure that you have lost from $8,000 to $10,000 this next year. Price $1,350 per foot and priced $250 per foot under the market.

ALABAMA STREET BARGAIN

ON ALABAMA STREET we offer 50x85 feet, running back to railroad side track. With all of the commission houses moving into this section, that is now a wholesale center, we cannot but believe that values will climb steadily upward, especially with the Plaza almost a certainty. Price $50,000, $5,000 cash, balance $5,000 per annum, 6 per cent.

LEASE WITH OPTION TO BUY

IF YOU ARE a manipulator you can make money out of this: We have on Peters Street, a few feet from South Forsyth, 73x100 feet, with alley side and rear; improvements of one two-story and one three-story building. We can make an attractive lease for five years on the entire frontage, arranging option to purchase. Big money has been made out of this kind of proposition, why not by you?

INVEST IN CENTRAL CORNERS

NO BETTER INVESTMENT can be made than to buy a centrally located corner in Atlanta. You not only get substantial rentals from such properties, but you can always absolutely count on a rapid increase in values. Go out in the market, if you please and see how many central corners you will find for sale in Atlanta, and after you have completed your search, the answer will be the same as all others who have looked for such properties—"I found one or two, but the prices were prohibitive."

WITH US THIS IS NOT THE CASE. We can sell a corner in the very heart of Atlanta, right at the junction of three of the main business arteries, that rents for $7,000 per year, that we can sell for $110,000 on terms of $25,000 cash and $10,000 per year, with 6 per cent. This corner has a frontage of 60 feet, and the ground value alone should not be less than $2,000 per front foot, considering its central and advantageous location.

It has reception hall, drawing room, library, dining room and kitchen on the first floor, with four bedrooms and bath on the second floor. The lot is a corner one, 185x300 feet, facing two cherted streets. Five lots can be sold off this place, leaving the house it stands on coating very little. Plenty of fruit, shrubbery, etc. Talk with us personally about this.

By Way of Comparison.

(From The Daily Iron Age.)

In the ten decades, between 1830 and 1910 the population of the United States increased from 12,000,00 to 92,000,000.

During the same period the ton-mileage of the railways increased from 64,000,00 to 225,000,000.

Therefore, while the population was increasing 50 per cent, the railroad tonnage mileage was increasing 409 per cent.

To satisfy the demands of traffic in 1830 the railroads of the United States moved the equivalent of one ton of freight a distance of 1,032 miles for each individual; to satisfy the same demands in 1910, it was necessary to move the equivalent of one ton 2,742 miles.

Now, let us take a further illustration to show that traffic and production are increasing much more rapidly than population.

Between 1830 and 1912 the production of pig iron grew from 5,500,000 tons annually to nearly 30,000,000 tons, an increase of 250 per cent.

In the same period the coal production grew from 140,000,000 to 450,000,000 tons, an increase of 420 per cent.

Between 1889 and 1912 the freight tonnage of the Suez canal grew from 7,400,000 to 71,000,000 tons, an increase of 940 per cent in only twenty-three years.

If we plot the curve of population for several decades we shal obtain a fairly straight line showing an annual increase of 1.3 per cent.

The curves of production and traffic for the same period will be found to lie above the curve of population, with a strong tendency to escape at the top of the diagram.

The universal application of machinery to the arts and industries has multiplied products, and has placed within reach of the humblest and poorest comforts and conveniences undreamed of a century ago.

The luxuries of yesterday are the necessities of today.

Mankind requires more than food, shelter and clothing, and we may, therefore, expect that consumption, production and traffic will continue to increase.

The World is confronting a situation which is sufficient to give one pause, for it would seem that if population, production and traffic maintain the same ratio that they have for three decades past the curve of production will anoot into infinity.

At any rate the figures show that the future is fraught with problems of the greatest weight to the human race.

The Soil Told Its Secrets.

(From The Breeder's Gazette.)

There was a farm that did not pay its owner well. Perhaps the chief reason was that the soil did not generously respond to tillage. The corn was not heavily eared, the alfalfa was promised but no convincing. So that farm lay a debt.

Despite the debt the farmer sent his son to an agricultural college, where he became deeply interested in the soil. When the son came home for his vacation he proposed that they ask certain questions of their land. They went afield, armed with stakes, a tape line, a basket and fertilizing materials. As the soils of the farm varied much little plots in the alfalfa were staked off here and there, embracing the different types. On one plot of an eighth of an acre lime was applied, another phosphorus, on a third potash, then they made combinations of these elements. The father had never bought fertilizing elements, yet he patiently awaited results.

Not immediately were the effects of the fertilizers shown. Yet gradually the squares of alfalfa that had been limed took on a richer green, those that had phosphorus lifted higher and rejoiced in wealth of bloom. Then was revealed just the combination needed for that farm to make it come up to maximum production. It was revealed that the application of little potash would double the yield, while the exclusive use of superphosphate on the farm would be increased hardly at all.

Different soils are soils that are fed. Only by experiment can one learn what plant food is most needed. It is, however, for the soil of the corn belt a fairly safe guess that phosphorus is lacking, and it may be potash or limestone as well.

Financing a Dutch City.

(From The Daily Consular Reports.

The city of Amsterdam owns the gas, water and electricity works, the street railroads, the telephone system, many of the docks, and a large amount of ground in the central business section, which is leased for building purposes. Considering all this valuable property, the municipal debt, which stood at $20,925,146 on January 1, 1913, is not high for a city of 581,000 population. The net debt was reduced last year by $1,200,000. The annual interest ranges from 2½ to 3 per cent.

The receipts and expenditures of the city for 1914 are likely to be estimated at $15,643,811, an increase of nearly $900,000 over the estimate for 1913. Receipts and expenditures are always estimated at the same amount.

More than a third of the receipts come from taxes; more than fifth from the municipal undertakings gas, electricity, street cars, water, etc.), and from rent of ground owned by the city and let on long leases to owners of buildings thereon, these two sources contributing more than half the receipts.

The largest expense item, $2,500,000, is for interest and payments on principal of debt; the next largest is $2,000,000 for educational purposes; poor relief and the support of charitable institutions take $1,200,000, while police, street lighting and fire department together take about the same.

Tragedy in Women's Hats.

(From Leslie's Weekly.)

There is a tragedy in every woman's hat. It seems almost as cruel to pay girls who make the dainty flowers in France a pittance as to kill the birds of brilliant plumage. They earn thirty cents a day, 20 and 15, with an occasional 75 for rare skill in making roses, deducting for loss of time and black wreath, tale of weary wretchedness and woe. Summed up the average is not far from $60 a year on which to support existence. American lovers of French millinery will be amazed at the wages paid young women in France gifted with deft fingers and rare taste, especially when they take the prices charged for Parisian hats into consideration.

Blissful Ignorance.

(From The Berliner Illustrite Zeitung.)

A man went in a judge and asked whether he could bring suit for slander against a man who had called him a rhinoceros.

"Why, certainly," said the judge. "When did he call you that?"

"About three years ago."

"Three years ago! And you only start suit today?"

"But, your honor, yesterday I saw a rhinoceros for the first time."

The Poet of the Slums.

(Frank E. Hill, in The Forum.)

The thousands billow past him as he stands
In rags not even purple; eyes alight
On some far patch of heaven, his idle hands
Fumbling before him Greek and Pole and Jew
Are mildly merry at the curious sight
Of one that will not hurry, hurry on
When the first day leaps upward from the dawn
And there is much to do.

And yet no less than they he has a task.
For in the east where lenuous globes of steam
And daybreak blend, he sees the hateful mask
That hides the inner beauty of the world,
Fell, and the lights and shadows of a dream
Move thro' the sky! The scoffers cannot see
For him the essence of eternity
And wonder lies unfurled.

BIDS ARE RECEIVED FROM 38 PUBLISHERS

Subcommission Will Not See Book Men After Nov. 7—To Meet Again Nov. 25.

Bids were received yesterday morning by the state school book commission from thirty-eight textbook publishers representing concerns from all parts of the country. The school book commission, ordinarily known as the state board of education, met in the office of State Superintendent of Education M. L. Brittain at 10 o'clock.

The time for making bids and putting up the necessary collateral with the state expired at 12 o'clock. From an early hour in the morning Mr. Brittain's office was thronged with representatives of the publishing houses and the competition among them appeared to be of the keenest sort. Several concerns just did get in with their bids and deposits with the state treasurer in the nick of time, and two, Funk & Wagnalls and the National Publishing company, both of New York, came in too late to be considered.

All of the members of both of the school book commission and of the subcommission appointed several weeks ago, were present at the meeting yesterday morning. The commission met from 10 to 12 o'clock and was in conference with members of the subcommission from 12 until nearly 1 o'clock.

Members of the latter wished to be post on their duties and also to interchange ideas with the main board on the matter of the selection of textbooks. They must have their reports in by the next meeting of the textbook commission, which will be Wednesday, November 26.

In order that they may have sufficient time to get up their reports unhampered the subcommission decided that they would not see agents of the publishing companies after Friday, November 7. This action met with the approval of the main commission, as it will greatly expedite the selection of books.

At its next meeting on November 26 the commission will be ready to decide on the books to be adopted for the next five years and will enter into a contract with each of the state within the publishers of the books selected. Under the act passed last summer, however, the state reserves the right to abrogate the contract on giving the company or companies one year's notice.

WORK STARTS SOON ON COLUMBUS WATERWORKS

Columbus, Ga., October 25.—(Special.) The city of Columbus has already received communications from various engineering firms regarding the municipal waterworks system which it is proposed to construct with the $450,000 of bonds recently voted. It seems to be an open question whether the city will construct a system of its own or negotiate with the Columbus Water Supply company for the purchase of its system, with the idea of improving and extending it.

Municipal waterworks ownership has been a live issue in Columbus for twenty years. In 1895 the city voted on waterworks bonds and the issue was defeated. In 1902 the system of the old Columbus Waterworks company failed, as the culmination of a long drouth, and an issue of $250,000 of waterworks bonds was authorized at the polls. Then followed ten years of litigation, instituted by the bondholders of the Columbus Waterworks company, finally resulting in a complete victory for the city in the supreme court of the United States. Last year the city voted again on issuing waterworks bonds and the proposition was turned down by the citizens. And last Saturday the same citizens went to the polls and voted bonds by a large majority.

WEST GEORGIA FARMERS FEEL PROSPERITY WAVE

Columbus, Ga., October 25.—(Special.) Trade, hardly up to normal, has been better trade today, cotton money helping in full circulation and all classes of trade being benefited. The city has already had several "big" Saturdays this fall. The cotton crop in this section, while deadly up to normal, has been better than was anticipated early in the fall, and farmers and merchants have both been paying their debts.

"How are country collections?" was asked W. C. Bradley, head of the W. C. Bradley company, wholesale merchants and cotton factors, and who is also vice president of the Third National bank.

YEAR OF BIG PROGRESS PASSED BY COLUMBUS

Columbus, Ga., October 25.—(Special.) This has been a year of municipal progress and improvement in Columbus, and one especially fitting the rounding out of the term of Hon. L. H. Chappell, who has rendered this city singularly useful service as mayor.

During the year three bond issues for municipal improvements have been voted. One was to provide funds for completing the new Dillingham street bridge, another was for the erection of a new hospital and the last, voted a few days ago, was for the construction of a $450,000 municipal waterworks system.

Considerable street paving has been done during the year and there has been much city improvement of a routine character.

NEW COTTON RECEIPTS RECORD AT COMMERCE

Commerce, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—The cotton receipts of this place are piling up a big day. The receipts from wagons to date are 3,269 bales, against 1,378 last year. The total receipts here last year were 12,869 bales. It is estimated that 20,000 bales will be received from the present crop.

Farmers are selling cotton as fast as they can get it ready for the market. The banks are adding because of unusual deposits. It's a debt-paying era in all this section. Debts that have been carried for years are being liquidated.

Paving Commerce Street.

Commerce, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—Work began this week on the paving of five miles of sidewalks in this place. Several months ago a bond issue of $15,000 was authorized, $7,000 for streets and $8,000 for school improvement.

The contract for the paving was let several weeks ago, and a crew of hands began work this week. A number of the principal sidewalks have already been paved, and when the five miles have been added a long-felt want in this city will have been gratified.

CASE IS DISMISSED AGAINST ATLANTAN

Cordele, Ga., October 25.—(Special.) On a technical point, the substance of which was that he was practicing medicine without license in violation of the new medical law of Georgia, Kenmon Mott, an Atlanta eye specialist, was arraigned on a misdemeanor charge in a justice's court here yesterday.

The case against him was brought by local physicians through a man who states that he was treated by the specialist. Failure to disprove the specialist's statement that his was a non-medical practice caused the case to be dismissed.

GEORGIA DAIRYMEN AT CHICAGO SHOW

Large Delegation Georgia Dairymen to Attend Dairy Show. To Buy High-Grade Cattle.

A large party of Georgia dairymen, headed by J. D. Price, commissioner of agriculture; Dr. Peter F. Bahnsen, state veterinarian, and Dr. C. M. Morgan, dairy expert of the Southern railway, and his assistant, Professor M. F. Arkell, will leave Atlanta Sunday morning over the Southern railway in a special Pullman for Chicago to attend the great national dairy show which convenes in that city next week.

This will be the first time that the state of Georgia has ever been represented at this show, which is an annual event, attracting thousands of dairymen from all parts of the United States and Canada, and the decision of the Georgia party to take the trip was largely brought about as a result of the activities of the dairy department of the Southern railway, which has a corps of experts in the field to encourage greater attention to dairying. This show is of immense educational value and will give the Georgia dairymen the opportunity to inform themselves of the latest methods of dairying. The party expects to purchase three or four carloads of high-class dairy cattle which will be brought back to Georgia to improve Georgia stock. This stock will be inspected by Dr. Bahnsen to insure freedom from disease, and it is expected that the addition of these high-grade animals will greatly increase the output of the Georgia dairy industry.

The following dairymen from Atlanta and vicinity will be in the party: J. E. McNish, secretary Atlanta Dairymen's association; A. H. Steinberger, Atlanta; H. H. Miller, Duluth; J. D. Fontaine, Austell; O. H. Batchler, Atlanta; H. Maddox, Atlanta; H. R. Upchurch and F. C. Phillips, Fairburn; T. E. Harper, Atlanta, and George Johnson, Lithonia. A number of representative dairymen from Greensboro will also be included in the party.

En route the party will be joined by another large delegation of dairymen at Harriman Junction, Tenn., from various parts of Alabama and Tennessee.

All Saints' Vested Choir To Give Musical Service Sunday at Four O'Clock

Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock the vested choir of All Saints' Episcopal church will render a musical service of the kind that is heard only in the cathedral churches of the largest cities.

Those who have heard the famous choirs in England at evensong can anticipate the beauty of the service at All Saints'. Vested choirs containing women are, however, quite unknown in England, boys being used to sing the soprano and alto parts. All Saints' was the first church in the south to substitute women's voices for those of boys.

This splendid choir is composed of a solo quartette and a chorus of forty-five men and women. The reputation of this choir is better known, perhaps, elsewhere than in Atlanta, as visitors from other cities have marveled at the perfection of its singing.

IRELAND MAY LOSE ULSTER PROVINCE

Premier Asquith Indicates a Compromise Is Likely on Home Rule--Ulster May Be Kept Under Parliament.

Ladybark, Scotland, October 25.—Premier Asquith, straight from the recent meetings of the British cabinet, gave to the country tonight the eagerly awaited decision of the government on the Irish problem, which recently has become befogged by various proposals for conferences of the political parties, and by divergent utterances of the members of the cabinet.

Mr. Asquith came out emphatically against the suggested formal round table conference, but betrayed a leaning toward a compromise on the lines suggested by the first lord of the admiralty, Winston Spencer Churchill, namely, leaving the northeast corner of Ulster under the imperial parliament for a limited period.

The premier intimated that there must not be an insuperable barrier erected which might permanently sever the unity of Ireland or might prevent the Protestant minority from ultimately throwing in their lot with the rest of their fellow countrymen. The speech is taken to indicate that if the exclusion of Ulster was the only means of a settlement by consent he would be prepared to agree to that temporary arrangement.

Anxious for Friendly Settlement.

Anxious for a friendly settlement, Premier Asquith unhesitatingly announced his decision to establish a parliament in Ireland in accordance with his promise, and also, if the opposition declined his suggested adjustment of the Ulster problem, to use the armed forces of the nation in carrying the law into effect.

Premier Asquith said the government could not be false to its trust and would not be intimidated, but was prepared to consider proposals with an open mind.

If the statutes passed by parliament are not properly organized and armed resistance it would clearly be the duty of the executive, according to the premier, to assert the authority of the law by every appropriate and adequate measure.

Premier Asquith admitted it was the duty of the government to deal respectfully with the deep seated and genuine sentiment of the minority in Ireland, even though it believed that apprehension was groundless.

There are two reasons, the premier said, for a settlement by consent. The first of these is that it is of supreme importance for the new system of government not to start with the apparent triumph of one section and the humiliation of another. The second is that the settlement should be regarded by all parties as resting on a solid foundation without the risk of further parliamentary and electoral vicissitudes.

Ireland Cockpit Too Long.

"Ireland has for too long been the cockpit of British politics," said the premier. "The proposal for a conference of party leaders is not helpful, as without an agreed basis of discussion and defined limits, it would be certainly abortive. Moreover, there is no need for all the machinery of such a conference. If there was a general disposition to exchange views and suggestions, subject to certain simple governing considerations, namely, that nothing must interfere with the establishment in Dublin of a subordinate Irish legislature with an executive responsible to it. That is the root principle of the bill from which the cabinet can not depart. In the second place, nothing must be done to erect a permanent and inseparable barrier in the way of Irish unity.

"One thing is certain—the government is not going to be false to the trust the majority of the Irish has reposed in it. It is not going to betray their cause, which carries with it the best and only enduring prospects of a happy and prosperous future for Ireland."

STATION FEATURING ANIMAL HUSBANDRY

Other Changes Are Being Made at Experiment by Prof. DeLoach.

Griffin, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—The Georgia experiment station, located here, is attracting much attention during recent months. Under the management of Professor R. J. H. DeLoach several features of the former administration are being discarded, making the station now a real experiment station.

Professor DeLoach states that one of the main efforts of the station now is the attention given to animal husbandry, with the thought in view that certain methods may be introduced in Georgia that will encourage the farmers of the state to engage more largely in stock raising. In this department of the station work, which is under the supervision of Professor Perry Frazier, special attention is being given to hogs. At present the Duroc Jersey hog is receiving attention, as being the hog most adapted to Georgia, and one that will respond most readily to feeding, and will reach the weight of a hundred pounds with least cost and feed. The plans now for this breed of hogs are now being fed with different feeds and cared for in different ways, to learn just the best feed and best method of treatment.

Also Professor Van Ewing is giving attention to pure bred Jersey cows. Although the number of cows at the station is limited at present, improvements are being carried on with these, and in the near future a number of other high-grade Jerseys will be purchased.

Two Negroes Poke Revolver in Ribs of R. D. Hampton Near Waycross.

Waycross, Ga., October 25.—(Special) City and county officers are today making a careful search for two negroes, who, at the point of a pistol robbed and killed Julius Joiner Tuesday night in Waycross, the general opinion among officers is that the same men worked in both instances. Hampton stated that when he refused to present a pistol was poked into his ribs and he was told that one more meant his death. He said he decided to keep still.

This week they picked 2,400 pounds in four and one-half days. The children of Mrs. Taylor picked 349; Miss Sallie, age 11, 142; Mattie, age 9, 118. So far no other cotton pickers have been heard from this year.

He was complaining of feeling ill when he retired at 10 o'clock at the usual hour, and this morning the medical man who made the examination decided his death was due to double pneumonia, induced by an attack of typhoid fever which developed several days ago.

Georgia Chamber Indorsed By Newspapers of State

The Georgia Chamber of Commerce has opened permanent headquarters at 1901-3-5 Hurt building, Atlanta's newest skyscraper. Expert organizers, under A. W. McKeand, of Detroit, Mich., are now cooperating with the executive committee of the chamber in putting the organization on its feet.

A thorough educational campaign is being conducted throughout Georgia preparatory to the whirlwind subscription campaign which will take place simultaneously in every city and town in the state on November 15. The Georgia Chamber of Commerce idea is meeting with a most encouraging reception in every section of the Empire State of the South.

The state press has been most kind in its comments on the following of things will show:

The recent organization of a state chamber of commerce in Georgia has favorably impressed the entire south, and in other sections of the country has enlisted considerable interest. The fact that the representative men of the cities of Georgia have united in a systematic effort for their common progress and for the upbuilding of the commonwealth, is a feature which is regarded everywhere as the evidence of a new and productive spirit of real patriotism and as the omen of greater practical achievements for the state.—Press, Norman Park, Ga.

The Washington Chamber of Commerce enthusiastically indorsed the state chamber of commerce organization, recently launched in Macon, and has organized its membership card and dues for the first year. President W. T. Johnson and the board of directors of the local trade body, at their last meeting, decided to co-operate with the state organization. In this way it is possible to promote the general interests of Georgia, believing that the best results can be accomplished by co-operation and support of the various county organizations.—Washington County Reporter.

The biggest and best thing the new Georgia Chamber of Commerce could do would be to show Georgians how to get the very highest attainments in agriculture can only be reached by combining stock raising with farming. Only by raising and feeding live stock can our soil be permanently enriched. We can continue to buy commercial fertilizers and remain in about the same condition, except that we will slip a cog about every other year.—Gazette, Darien, Ga.

President E. W. Stetson, of the Macon chamber, in first vice president of the Georgia chamber. It is probable that the members of the executive committee of the state body will be invited to meet with the local chamber and discuss with them the plans being outlined by the state organization. The Macon chamber is co-operating in every way possible with the state body and will continue to aid in carrying out the plans of the newly organized chamber.—Macon Telegraph.

The secrtary of the Athens Chamber of Commerce was prominently recognized by the state organization in Macon. Secretary Callaway yesterday received his appointment to be the vice president from Clarke county for the state body.—Banner, Athens, Georgia.

The Georgia Chamber of Commerce expects to have 1,000 members by November 15, 1913, and it probably will have twice that many. There is a good chance for this organization to succeed if the people will give it proper support, we will see wonderful improvement in Georgia.—Democrat, Crawfordville, Ga.

Mr. W. O. Holden attended the meeting of the state chamber of commerce at Macon, and he found an enthusiastic bunch of Georgians ready to advertise the state. They made up $1700 and started right out for business. That's the way to do it. What is your county going to do about it?—Democrat, Crawfordville, Ga.

The state chamber of commerce for Georgia, recently organized at Macon, is going to do a wonderful work for the state, if it receives the proper amount of support, and the support is sure to come from a great many localities. The state chamber must not do take part in the work are going to be the losers by not so doing.—Macon, Ga. News.

COURT WILL SETTLE VALID LABOR CLAIMS

Judge Newman Issues Order in Case Against Beach Manufacturing Company.

In the United States court Saturday, Judge Newman, in the case of the Union Trust company, of Detroit, against the Beach Manufacturing company, of New Lacey, in Appling county, made an order directing the receivers of the Beach company to issue receiver's certificates to pay off all valid labor claims against this concern.

This action was taken before Judge Max Isaac, of Brunswick, representing the laborers, and other creditors had insisted that unless the laborers were protected by an order of the court he would vigorously oppose the issuance of any receivers' certificates whatever. Judge Isaac also took the position that the mortgage of the Union Trust company would be invalid and unenforceable in any court of Georgia because the bonds on which the mortgage was given were never registered in the office of the secretary of state here, as required by the Georgia code. The question was not decided by Judge Newman, but he intimated that he would refer that matter to George W. Owens, of Savannah, standing master for the southern division, when the case is pending. The judge allowed all laborers thirty days in which to file their claims, and then the master, Mr. Owens, is to hear each claim, and as soon as allowed, the receivers are to issue receivers' certificates to the claimant.

Judge Newman also directed the receivers to borrow $5,000 to operate the business of the Beach company during the receivership. The hearing of the petition for permanent receivers is set signed for the first Monday in October.

The outcome of the question raised as to the validity of the Beach bonds is being awaited with much interest, as this is the first time the question has been raised in Georgia.

DAILY PAPER TO BE STARTED AT DUBLIN

Dublin, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—Announcement was made today in The Courier-Herald that this paper will begin the publication of a daily in Dublin on November 3 next. It will be an afternoon paper, issued in time to catch all mails leaving during the afternoon, and will get full news service by telegraph. There will be no Sunday paper issued.

The new paper, The Courier-Herald, is the result of the consolidation of The Courier-Dispatch and The Laurens County Herald, which took place several months ago, and which was brought about especially for the purpose of beginning a daily here, but final arrangements for the paper have delayed matters until the date mentioned above.

Cotton at Griffin.

Griffin, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—For the week ending last night Griffin has received 1,662 bales of cotton, according to the official cotton report of J. D. Williams. The shipments for the week were 1,739 bales. For the entire season to date 8,791 bales have been marked here. Although yesterday was rainy and disagreeable the farmers rushed their cotton to market, there being some 300 bales received during the day. The prevailing price paid was 11 cents.

GRANITE SHIPPERS WIN FREIGHT RATE VICTORY

Atlanta shippers of granite and building stone are jubilant over a decision in their favor which has just been rendered by the state railroad commission. The rate on the articles mentioned was changed from carload to twenty-five cents per ton. The maximum shipment under the railroad would accept at that rate has been twenty tons.

Recently the railroad, without asking the authority from the railroad commission, it is said, raised this minimum to the marked capacity of the cars, so as to be less than thirty tons. Shippers who had made contracts on the basis of the twenty-ton minimum shipment, found themselves confronted with the possibility of being charged two and three times the freight rate. This was the case when shipments were made on cars of forty and sixty thousand tons capacity. They were naturally very much "up in the air" over the change.

Appeal was made by the Pine Mountain Granite company and other Atlanta shippers to the railroad commission to ascertain by what authority the Georgia railroad had ordered the change. The commission took the matter up and, through Hale Kaiser and Prince Webster, ordered that the railroad restore at once the old minimum of twenty tons.

This was done, Mr. Webster receiving a prompt reply frmo the general freight agent of the road to the effect that all of the subordinates had been given notice that the old basis of shipment had been restored.

BRUNSWICK PLANNING BIG DOLLAR DINNER

Brunswick, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—Brunswick is planning for a big ocasion on November 18, the date announced for the annual dollar dinner to be given under the auspices of the Brunswick board of trade, which will be attended by a number of prominent people.

It was announced today by the special committee which has the question of a white way for the city in charge that plans were now being completed to have the lights turned on, if feasible, on the night of the dollar dinner. Contracts for the white way have already been awarded and work will be begun immediately.

CROWD THROWN IN PANIC AS CIRCUS TENT BURNS

Columbus Audience Makes Rush for Exits and Many Receive Minor Injuries.

Columbus, Ga., October 25.—Several thousand persons assembled to witness a circus performance here this afternoon were thrown into a panic when the tent was suddenly burst into flames, the blaze running quickly to the top of the canvas structure.

At the first call of fire the big audience made a wild rush for the exits, and many received injuries of a minor nature. Prompt action on the part of the circus employees in lifting the tent walls and guiding the excited people to safety probably averted a serious stampede. The fire was extinguished before much damage had been done. None of the audience was dangerously hurt.

Local representative salesman of standing wanted, one acquainted with drug and dept. store trade preferred, by importing house of high-grade toilet and pharm. preparations. Decidedly an independent future for one who can prove ability and is desirous to secure permanent connection. State in application age, etc.; best reference and reference. Dr. Blair Pharm. Co., 114 Columbus Ave., Boston, Mass.

NO EASTERN-WESTERN FOOTBALL POSSIBLE

Madison, Wis., October 25.—Dr. George W. Ehler, director of athletics at the University of Wisconsin, today put to sleep, as he expressed it, in a speech before the athletic council, the much talked of idea of a post season game between the east and the west to decide the national football championship. Dr. Ehler said there was nothing for a western school to gain and everything to lose in such an engagement and he thought the matter was definitely settled last year.

"Well, everybody specialises nowadays. I'll bet you can't name all the players in the American league."

We could get that price on the size and looks of the car, on its power and comfort, on its construction and equipment. And we would have nothing but satisfied owners. But the price is $1275, plus the freight, and you buyers win.

There are reasons a-plenty for the excellence of the Paige product and the unusualness of the Paige under-price. Absolute financial independence, freedom from debt, freedom from bonds, freedom from preferred stock, economy of management, advantageous buying of parts, material and equipment due to quantity purchases and financial standing; these and more are obvious reasons.

Don't you want the advantage of the under-price? Come see the Paige now, whether you desire early or future delivery. We couldn't tell you all the good things about the Paige—all the things that make it better at a lower price—if we ran an advertisement in the papers every day. But you can come here and see and know these things for yourself. If you aren't an automobile expert, bring one with you. We will leave the question of purchase to your judgment and his.

SEWANEE TIGERS LOSE TO TEXANS

Taken by Surprise, Mountain Eleven Is Defeated by a 13 to 7 Count Before Monster Crowd.

Dallas, Texas, October 25.—(Special.) Sewanee's eleven went down in defeat before the stiff attack of the University of Texas today by the score of 13 to 7, in one of the hardest games seen in Texas for many years. It estimated that 15,000 witnessed the game in the state fair park.

Texas took the visitors by surprise, both by their speed and the stiffness of their line, which resented a stone wall defense. Although Sewanee proved speedier and superior on end runs, their line was unable to hold.

For Texas, Jordan, at right guard, played a star game, chasing with his opponent, Captain McCallum, last season's all-southern guard. It took every bit of McCallum's pazing to meet Jordan half way.

Halfback Simmons, for Texas, was the sensation of the game. It was impossible to stop him once he got the ball. For Sewanee, Telley, at quarter, played a brilliant game. He ran his team smoothly, taking advantage of weakness, and easily outpointed Harrell, of Texas, in every department of the game. Parker and Palmer played star games.

Sewanee's only touchdown occurred after Texas had been penalized four times in succession for off-side play and once for holding, which brought the ball within a few lines of the Texas goal.

Texas scored in the first three minutes, a 15-yard run and a line plunge, followed by a buck from Daniels for a touchdown. Goal missed. The teams lined up as follows:

SEWANEE.	POSITIONS.	TEXAS.
Myers, Ward	L. E.	E. Simmons
Moore	L. T.	Bass
McCallum (Capt.)	L. G.	G. Birge, Goodma
Harrell	C.	Murray, Dillman

CHANCE GETS WALSH FROM CONNIE MACK

New York, October 25.—According to semi-official announcement from Philadelphia today, James C. Walsh, at present a member of Connie Mack's world champion Athletics, will wear the New York American league club uniform next season. However no official statement from either club is expected until after the annual meeting of the American league.

Walsh will come to New York as a result of the deal, whereby Chance sent Claude Derrick to Baltimore instead of to Rochester at the request of Mack who desired to have Derrick under his control for future use. Walsh is a hard hitting, fast fielding player.

President Farrell, of the New York Americans, said tonight that while some Philadelphia outfielder was to join the Yankees, the man ultimately picked might not be Walsh.

"Some time ago," said Mr. Farrell, "I entered into negotiations with the Athletics for an outfielder. Among others Walsh was mentioned, but up to the present I have not closed a deal for Walsh or any other player of that team. The Walsh story is a little premature. I may get him, or I may decide to take some other player."

SENIORS ARE SURPRISE OF EMORY CLASS GAMES

Emory College, Oxford, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—The Seniors are the surprise of Emory's interclass football season, in the first game they held the muchly overrated Juniors to a 7 and 6 defeat, and won over the Sophomores this week by a 19 and 0 score.

Their favorite style of attack is straight line bucks, augmented by a style of tackle back plays which pulls the guards and the linemen who are on side just a second before the center snaps the ball. Saxon continues the hero of the Senior eleven.

The Juniors are slow in getting under way, which may be partly attributed to Captain Mathews' and Porter being out of the game. But with these handicaps pre-season dope gave them a walk away.

The Sophomores are going well, being the only one of the four teams not to suffer injuries. Coach Peebles has built an entirely new machine from the remains of last season.

With a little more experience it is thought the Freshmen will prove a formidable factor in the football race at Emory. The stage fright is fast wearing off, which is proven by their tightening up and holding the Juniors to two touchdowns.

GOLF TOURNAMENT FOR NEWSPAPER MEN

Although the golfing season proper is over at East Lake, another tournament will be indulged in, wherein the penitentiarists will be only newspaper men.

The newspaper fraternity of Atlanta comprises enough men to fill at least three flights, and as some of those who will enter have just taken up the game, a handicap committee will be appointed to make all things equal. So the poorest player will be on a par with the best at the first tee.

Although a qualifying round is played in most golf tournaments, there will not be one in this one. Instead, the names will be put in a hat and the pairings be drawn from this. The winners of the first flight will meet the winners of the second, and so on down, until all are eliminated.

To the winner of the tournament, Mr. George Adair has offered a handsome trophy, which shall become his property for good. A large number of other prizes will be awarded, and to take care of this, an entrance fee of $1 will be charged the participants.

Any one connected with one of Atlanta's daily papers will be invited to enter, and if you have any connection with the paper you are eligible to play. The dates for holding this meet have not been announced yet, as it is not known just when it will be convenient for the majority of the newspaper men to play. But some time during the next two weeks the tournament will begin.

A. A. U. HEADS SPLIT

Over Professionals and Amateurs Contesting Together.

New York, October 25.—A split among officers of the Amateur Athletic union over the proposition to sanction contests between amateurs and professionals under certain conditions is indicated tonight by a statement issued by James K. Sullivan, secretary of the American Athletic union, strongly objecting to any such practices as proposed. The idea was advanced by Gustavus T. Kirby, president of the American Athletic union, in an address, reports of which were made public yesterday.

"I do not quite follow Mr. Kirby in his statement that in his opinion the present line is drawn too fine and, under certain circumstances, competition should be permitted between amateurs and professionals," says Secretary Sullivan. "It is a matter of record that he did not feel as he does now at the congress in Berlin last August, when he favored making the amateur definition more binding.

"There is no demand for the good of athletics for such a proposition as Kirby advances, and I doubt if it ever will even be discussed or considered seriously by any governing body in America. I will not only personally oppose any such proposition as presented to allow John Paul Jones to run against a professional in a foot race, but I am going to recommend that we strengthen our amateur definition at the annual meeting of the governing body on November 1."

Ray Breaks Record.

San Francisco, October 25.—Playing with good judgment and control, and missing nothing on the green, Edward Ray broke all records for the course today at the San Francisco Golf and Country club's links, making the 36 holes in 139 strokes. Harry Vardon was second, with a score of 142.

White Sox 4, Giants 3.

St. Joseph, Mo., October 25.—The Chicago American league baseball team defeated the New York National league club here this afternoon, 4 to 3, in the eighth inning Hal Chase, first baseman of the Chicago team, suffered an injury to his ankle, and was replaced by Wolfe.

Score by innings:

Chicago	100 102 000—4	11	2
New York	011 000 010—3	5	2

Batteries—Lavenrens and Schalk; Mathewson and Myers.

SIX PLAYERS HURT IN EMORY GAMES

Emory College, Oxford, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—Injuries of almost every nature have been visited upon each of the four class teams at Emory except the sophomore eleven. These mishaps have placed the teams at a disadvantage for the opening tape, and even now the injured players are still out of the game.

The toll for the season, including the practices in which most all of the injuries have occurred, is:

Battle, senior, center, broken ankle.

Penick, senior, fullback, sprained ankle.

Captain Mathews, junior, quarter, sprained knee.

Porter, junior, fullback, injured knee.

Bass, junior, center, broken collarbone.

Captain Stephens, freshman, fullback, broken jaw.

It looks now as if Battle and Bass will be out for the remainder of the season, while Mathews, Porter and Penick will very likely show up in next Monday's games.

Although Emory has only an interclass system of athletics, this style has not made her immune from injuries that have occurred to the varsity teams of the colleges that have intercollegiate athletics.

With Business People During the Past Week

Topics Discussed in Wall Street—The Money Situation—Strength of the Cotton Market—Railroad Reports, Etc.

New York, October 25.—(Special to The Constitution.)—The stock market during the week just closing has not given any decided idea as to how sentiment among traders really is, for there were spells of weakness and spells of strength for one session, and then easing off again. As far as the general public was concerned, there has been a few stems recently which indicate that they are taking more interest in speculation, although not as much as traders who are still supplying the bulk of the transactions would like to see. It is hoped, however, that there will be a moderate increase in outside interest now as a result of the improved money situation, with funds more plentiful here than they have been at this time in the fall for many years. There has been great outside interest in cotton and cotton speculation for several months, and considerable profits, while it has been reported that other than professionals have made big profits on long holdings in all three of these commodities. As it is usual after a bull movement in cotton to much of the profits from it later put into stocks, the traders see no reason why this should be an exception this year. The average price of the leading stocks on the present time is about $5 a share above the low for the year, and about $10 above the low of this year, prices are lower on the average now than they have been in over four years, and they are not materially above the 1907 panic levels. As compared with the high point for 1913, however, averages are over $10 a share down. At the present time there are many good securities which can be bought at figures yielding from 6 to 8 per cent on the purchase price. In the year since the change in the national administration the market value of shares listed on the New York stock exchange has shrunk $2,000,000,000, with $650,000,000 decline just in fifteen of the leading railroads. The raids on Pennsylvania railroad and New Haven road stock were the chief factors of the last week. Both eased sharply, the latter to a new low record.

The money situation continues to improve, principally as a result of light demand for loans on stocks. There has been a decrease of close to $50,000,000 in loans on stocks during the last month, while there are funds being offered for which there are no borrowers at 2½ per cent and less for long. Although money is tight in England, and, in fact, in all Europe, with the prospects considered strong that the Bank of England will advance no to 6 per cent in the near future, English bankers are not borrowers. They are doing this to avert any chance that this country will draw gold from London, and yet students of banking and exchange do not look for even though there is a small need for funds here now, that gold will be sent to come here from Europe sooner or later. This is because the enormous of bills drawn on foreigners is becoming so heavy that it appears certain rates will have to fall to a point where gold will of necessity be the only means of settling exchange transactions. Then gold will come here, and if the crop moving demands are met by then, with no one wanting to borrow, there may be considerable easy funds here. Canadian money is below bankers' rates, owing to the slight demand in that country.

The Illinois Central management do not expect to complete the plans for the new $120,000,000 bond issue for some time to come, but they may ask for at least six months, but they may not. The question will arise as to where an offering of securities can be made soon after the first of the year, if financing conditions are quite favorable then. The new mortgage will provide funds to refund a mortgage of $61,000,000 and issue $42,000,000 additional bonds on account of the division of the road, and to have $27,000,000 reserved for future needs.

Exports in an Increase.

Exports of cotton during September showed a big increase over the month in 1912, with 616,596,700 bales for the month this year and $88,869,000 for September, 1912. For the nine months of 1913 the country's exports had a value of $1,000,000 more than the same period in 1912.

While it has been denied that the United Cigar stores intend to acquire a chain of retail drug stores now in operation in many parts of the country, it is reported in this city that some kind of a deal is to result whereby a new $10,000,000 company will be the outcome. In the same regard rumors have been current for any long time of pending plans to combine retail stores in a number of cities of different lines in one huge enterprise.

The continued weakness of Rock Island railroad and Railway Securities has started a movement for the reorganization of the properties. As the railway has barely earned its fixed charges, on which depends the sale income of the railroad for the past several years, even though it has paid dividends regularly for many years, it is thought some other plan will sooner or later be necessary to provide for the income of the railroad bonds.

At the present prices prevailing for standard securities there are many which can be bought at levels to give higher returns than since the days of 1907. Many issues are selling at half dozen leading railroad securities which yield seven per cent on the present price and dividend rates, while one leading corporation has not only retained its dividend for many years is now selling at a price to yield over 9 per cent per annum to the buyer. When even government bonds sell on such low prices that a fair return on the investment is given, it can be seen that securities have really dropped to about public levels.

The annual report of the Federal Mining and Smelting company for the fiscal year to date of June 30 showed earnings equal to 8.8 per cent on the $12,000,000 preferred stock, as against 7.46 per cent last year. The assets of the company total $31,473,599, with a surplus of $1,434,599.

The annual report of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe showed earnings of $4.61 per cent on the $100,826,100 stock of the road, as compared with 8.1 per cent the fiscal year previously. earned on $29,797,000 less stock. The increase in stock was due to the conversion of bonds for stock during the year. The gross earnings of the system were $114,896,252, an increase of $9,144,000 over the previous year. The $16,445,944 balance exhibit for the fall dends was an increase of $2,520,000 over the year before. There $6,046,264 surplus after dividends, of which practically all was written off for additions, betterments and fuel reserve, as has been the custom for a number of years. The assets total $712,203,137, with a profit and loss surplus of $20,589,801 and appropriated income of $4,196,598.

Profit $6,314,467.

The annual report of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railway showed assets of $43,459,932 and a profit and loss surplus of $6,314,467.

Copper metal prices are firmer at close to 17 cents than they were a week ago, as a result of renewed buying of copper by foreigners in heavy volume and a steady demand here. The London speculative market has advanced also. The present surplus stocks of copper in the entire world are about 90,000,000 pounds, which is enough larger than would be considered normal supplies under the present conditions of consumption. The tuber report of the American surplus stocks in this country of 70,000,000 pounds of copper on hand in this country on October 1. The surplus in the large mines of this country have been settled in all but one or two of the strikes, probable that it will be at least six months before the mines are running at the metal at their old normal rates, when the surplus stocks will be reduced is expected to be smaller than normal by that time, while there is a general belief that only uncertainties as to international conditions and business unrest have held copper metal prices from going to much lower levels. The larger producers have fought against the recent decline in prices, believing that it invites curtailed consumption and just as sharp declines later, but it is said to be the opinion that they cannot hold prices low for much longer.

The steel market is slightly improved over what it was at this time last month, owing to large orders for steel rails and for cars for railroads, but price shading has continued. The total tonnage now in for structural work is unfilled tonnages than were shown in the previous month, when the October figures are published. The market is looking forward to the publication of the third quarters earnings of the United States Steel Corporation, which are expected to be out on Thursday. It is expected that the next figures the unfilled tonnage will be about $40,000,000 and possibly as high as $42,000,000 or more. If this total is shown, it will make $115,000,000 for the first three quarters of the year, which is about $10,000,000 more than the corporation ever had on its books and depreciation of a full year. Hence they will be entering the first of the year at least $10,000,000 in addition to the $115,000,000 mentioned, and which should be about $10,000,000 more than the year before. The orders, lower prices, the sale of much material and the shortening of the Sherman act, and the prospects of a revision of the present tariff, the present earnings of the steel corporation, which are a source of great satisfaction, but there are things ahead looking soon dark.

Cotton has been very strong again during the last week, with evidence of short covering and heavy long buying, which has carried the market to the close parts of the belt. Futures touched the highest point for the last months, while spot cotton went to 14.50 for middling upland. Cotton goods manufacturers all over the world have been heavy buyers, for they are badly in need of raw material to take care of their sales of goods. While the ginning figures of 13,000,000 bales, indicated for this crop, are still considered low, there are few who think the total will be over 14,000,000 bales, while there are many that think that the world needs for manufacturing will be about 2,000,000 bales from this country. World's takings of cotton from this crop are in excess of last year so far since September 1. Exports have been heavy, and it is said even though prices are much higher, there are many more buyers. Among other unfavorable features in the cotton situation at present are reports of boll rot and of the spread of the boll weevil. This is said to be rapidly invading new parts of the belt. Dr. W. E. Hinds, entomologist in charge of the state experiment station, predicts that the weevil will cause more loss into Georgia.

Wheat prices have been higher during the last week as a result of good export demand and the small movement of the grain to market. There has been a fair crop of the latter, but low on corn, also largely because of favorable weather. Wheat prices at the moment, however, are not materially above the low point of the year, reached a week or so ago. Needless to say, this indicates that there should be another big crop with favorable conditions. A damage to wheat in India has caused a bull market to once here.

The Vulcan detinning company is to pay back dividends on the cumulative preferred stock equal to 6 per cent on that issue. This is the result of the decision of the United States court in $600,000 won from the American Can company for infringements.

The directors of the New Haven road are to meet within a week or two to take action on the dividend question, it is generally understood that the rate will be cut from 8 per cent in the last few months, while a further reduction to 4 per cent is expected. As a matter of precaution, the stock has gone to a low point for the year the last week. At the annual meeting of the road, held in New Haven the last week, the stockholders were present who filed vigorous protests against the policies of the management and directors during the last year.

The annual report of the Mobile and Ohio railroad for the fiscal year to June 30 showed earnings of 16.66 per cent on the capital stock, as compared with 15.31 per cent the year before. The gross of $12,377,630 was $1,197,000 larger than the year before, while the net of the road was $45,894,923, while there was a profit and loss surplus of $5,429,717, equal to over 70 per cent on the capital stock.

Accidents in Golf.

(From The Journal American Medical Association.)

The ancient and honorable game of golf is not without its misfortunes to the eyes of its devotees. Many people have lost eyes because, like Lot's wife, they looked back. The familiar cry of "Fore" has been the signal for ocular destruction on many times. When this imperative vocal signal reverberates over the golf field the first impulse of the average player is to look behind, and this is a fatal mistake, for every once in a while a ball strikes the eye, and it usually comes with so much force as to destroy the eye or seriously damage it. Vision, at least, is almost always lost and the removal of the eyeball itself is frequently necessary to prevent a sympathetic and fatal disease of the other eye. The lesson to be learned is not to look back on the golf field. When "Fore" is called, look the other way, and lean forward, as it is better to be hit on any other part of the body that on the head. Even when "Fore" is not called, it is better not to look back, except when necessary, as balls are always liable to be flying, especially on small and crowded fields, and an eye injury is always among the possibilities.

Another, but less frequent, source of eye accidents on the golf field is the reckless and inconsiderate swinging of clubs in making practice shots when near other players. This is a common practice, and should be sharply discouraged, as some fatal accidents have occurred by a careless blow on the head by a golf stick. Eyes have been seriously and fatally injured by the same custom. If players wish to make practice shots they should do so in remote places where they will not injure other people.

Eyese are also frequently injured by being struck with foreign bodies, such as sand, gravel, etc., flying off from the end of a club, as when a player endeavors to drive a hall from a sand pit with a niblick. This unexpectedly performance will frequently be followed by a shower of sand, gravel, etc., flying into the player's head, and eyes are often injured in this way. The injury is usually slight, but sometimes more serious consequences ensue, and eyes have been lost from consequences of such accidents. Within the last two or three years quite a number of serious accidents have occurred from the opening of golf balls to ascertain their contents. Most balls contain no fluid, but there are balls wherein will be found acids, held there under high pressure, so that when opened by a knife, hatchet or what not the acid squirts out. Not infrequently the eyes and face have been severely burned. The acid is supposed to give the ball greater resiliency and carrying power, but its use is dangerous. Do not cut open golf balls to see what they are made of, or for any other reason.

THE HUNNICUTT-ASHFORD PROPERTY IN SOUTH KIRKWOOD

WE TAKE pleasure in announcing to the public that beginning this week we will place on sale twenty-four lots in south Kirkwood, known as the Hunnicutt-Ashford property.

Mr. Ashford has handled successfully more subdivisions in the last two years than any other man in the city. Almost every one in Atlanta knows that the Hunnicutt-Ashford property is the last that before offering investments to the public he first assures himself that the investor will make a sure profit. So, when he places upon the market the Hunnicutt-Ashford property and recommends it to either investor or homeseeker, whichever you may be, you may know that if you put your money in one or more of these lots you will make a good profit in the next twelve months.

These lots are bounded by Bixby, South Howard, Fair and Elenoir streets, none of them less than 50 feet front, with an elevation of from one to three feet. They have city water and sewerage, and are convenient to schools and churches, the South Decatur and Stone Mountain car line.

There is also a car line projected to go out Bixby street and under the new bond issue of the city of Kirkwood South Howard street is to be cherted.

All these improvements combine to make these lots one of the safest and best small investments that we know of anywhere, either in or around Atlanta. The prices range from $100 to $900, with a small cash payment, and the balance easy terms, three months, six months, nine months or yearly. We don't want any longer to invest that money you have been saving, until a good opportunity should present itself, but realize now that a better opportunity to make a little money work for you will never come.

Call at our office tomorrow and let us show you these lots—there are only twenty-four and they won't last long.

REVIEWS OF THE WEEK IN AMERICAN MARKETS

Cotton.

New Orleans, October 25.—The cotton market stood at an advance during the entire week. The net result was an advance of 41 to 52 points. The market was closed on Wednesday and Saturday, and the prices on Tuesday, the only day of the ruling months were 54 to 60 points over the week's close, at the lowest they were over 12 points over. The range of prices is 51 to 61 points.

The market opened at the advance on the damage done by the storm wave that was sweeping the cotton region. In the early part of the week, killing and heavy rains were reported over a large and important part of the belt, and this was generally acknowledged that extensive crop injury had been done.

This claimed the cold weather made it certain this year's crop could not be over a small one, shortly covered freely throughout the week and fresh long buying made its appearance on all breaks. At times the demand was that of the trade and of the operations from the long side. On all bulges, offerings from the source became heavy.

The census bureau report on ginning was taken as of much evening up. The figures were 13,931 bales ginned prior to October 18 were in line with average expectations and did not affect the market any extent.

Sale advices received claim that the crop on October 18 was 50 per cent, or more, ginned and that, therefore, the returns pointed to a crop of under 14,000,000 bales, excluding linters. This claim undoubtedly brought in considerable buying. A year ago the crop was 34 per cent ginned on October 18, but the bears pointed out that it was only 46 per cent ginned three years ago.

In the spot department, prices advanced 9-16 of a cent, middling closing at 13.90, against 13.31 last week and 13.45 the week before. Sales were 75,000 bales, against 74,000 last week and 5,872 this week last year. Receipts amounted to 8,937 bales, against 8,876 last week and 21,153 this week last year.

Financial.

New York, October 25.—The stock market of the week opened in a dull manner between the opposing speculators than for some time past. Arrangements for new government acts or policies were given most force as the date of reconvening drew near, while financial and trade considerations still constituted a drag on the advance.

Much capital was made of the advance in freight rates granted by the interstate commerce commission to the railroads in the Missouri river territory, which was announced at a time when an over extended short interest in stocks had already begun to show uneasiness over the resisting power of the railroads in the aggregate to meet the ever increasing demands for revenue, for the railroads in the aggregate have been unable to show any increase in earnings, were drawn from the spot consumption of the country and from the general activity in the export trade, as indicated by the eastern railroads. For all this thing, it was the first general advance allowed by the commission since its new grant of powers three years ago. Importance was attached also to the stress laid by the commission in its decision on the necessity for justifying opposition to increased rates. On this account a more hopeful view was taken of the prospects for success of the eastern roads, since shippers are not offering active resistance to the petition for an increase.

Reports from the steel trade also brought into prominence the supposed necessities of the railroads for increased compensation in order to stimulate their demands for material. Chairman Gary, of the United States Steel Corporation, dwelt upon this point in his address before the American Iron and Steel institute. Steel prices, and even pig-iron prices, showed a soft tone. Current commitments, however, continues large. The same is true of general trade, in spite of the fact that the crop movement has not ushered in to many lines.

There was less anxiety over the subject of banking and currency legislation. This was followed by the belief that nothing would be done at the present session of congress, and left by bankers toward the pending measures. The United States 2 per cents were relieved from depression from which they had suffered by the smart increase in the market price.

Domestic money conditions continue toward greater ease with the approach of the end of the quarter. Relaxation of pressure on the reserve centers. Rapid marketing of crops, as well as the return of deposits of treasury funds, conduced to this result. Increased supplies of funds at the disposal of the general market for capital has occurred.

Frost damage to cotton and the Mexican series are additional factors.

Iron and Steel.

New York, October 25.—The reaction in the steel trade was more evident last week. Heavy competition, chiefly in prices, has brought out lower prices for nearly all of the leading rolled products. Steel bars were made at $1.80 base and less for domestic shipment and at $1.25 base f. o. b. mills in the central west for the manufacture of implements and other products. Steel plates and shapes sold at $1.30 to $1.35 base mill at Pittsburg. Sheets also met the competition. Sheets were also weaker and irregular. No. 10 sheet selling in some instances below 2 cents base for early delivery. Manufacturers, it is believed, however, to look orders at this price for any large amount.

The plain wire price has been cut $2 per ton to 1.85 cents base, and large contracts have been taken recently at $1.80 base. Wire nails in the last ten days there has been scarcely a change in what would be considered normal supplies under the present conditions of consumption. The new business has held copper metal prices from going to much lower levels. The larger producers have fought against the recent decline in prices, believing that it invites curtailed consumption and just as sharp declines later, but it is said to be the opinion that they cannot hold prices low for much longer.

The steel market is slightly improved over what it was at this time last month, owing to large orders for steel rails and for cars for railroads, but price shading has continued. The total tonnage now in for structural work is unfilled tonnages than were shown in the previous month, when the October figures are published. The market is looking forward to the publication of the third quarters earnings of the United States Steel Corporation, which are expected to be out on Thursday. It is expected that the next figures the unfilled tonnage will be about $40,000,000 and possibly as high as $42,000,000 or more. If this total is shown, it will make $115,000,000 for the first three quarters of the year, which is about $10,000,000 more than the corporation ever had on its books and depreciation of a full year. Hence they will be entering the first of the year at least $10,000,000 in addition to the $115,000,000 mentioned, and which should be about $10,000,000 more than the year before. The orders, lower prices, the sale of much material and the shortening of the Sherman act, and the prospects of a revision of the present tariff, the present earnings of the steel corporation, which are a source of great satisfaction, but there are things ahead looking soon dark.

Dry Goods.

New York, October 25.—Pioneer cotton markets have been firm, with advances in both prices and the rise that was interrupted last week. The fact has begun to appear that there are doing a very steady business for this period of the year. Reports from the principal is concerning delayed deliveries from the mills. The latter are limiting production by labor scarcity and the pressure for orders. Sheets are strong. Prints, ginghams and finishers are very busy and will continue so for some months. Woolens and worsteds are strong. Buyers are manifesting more attention is diverted from the immediate situation to the future, however are they will go cautiously while cotton remains high. All 200,000 of staples are short.

A better business is coming forward this week on the fabrics, which were those of the radical advances, charged the consumer the season. Duck, tickings, denims and checkings are very strong. Prints are firming and ginghams are to be advanced next month by some manufacturers. Blanketed cottons have been advanced by some sellers, but others are holding further changes. Buyers are until goods show some sign of accumulation. Offerings are scarce.

Reason.

(John A. Sleicher in Leslie's.)

There is reason in all things. The unreasonable man is a disturber, the unreasonable woman is a scold, and the unreasonable child a sorrow. We should be reasonable with each other. Let us stop quarreling and reason about it.

In the competition for business and in the struggle to secure the highest efficiency great organizations were organized by combining smaller units. An outcry was raised against these combinations. They were stigmatized as trusts that were crushing trade. The government interfered and the supreme court of the United States was finally called to pass upon the question of law involved.

That court decided that the corporations should be dissolved, but that the resolution should be left to the people that the work should be done in the form of large profits. The highest court in the United States insisted that the voice of reason should be listened to. Reason is always right. Some are finding fault with the work of the small men, failing to undo it all again. Is this reasonable?

The reduction in the tariff will undoubtedly stimulate a variety of industries. It has always done so and will do so again. But manufacturers are warned by their own interests that if they reduce working hours or wages to meet foreign competition, or by combination, they must stand an investigation. It is absurd to say that a manufacturer would close his shop to avoid the government's visit. There is reason in this.

Business is preaching efficiency in business methods. Efficiency means larger profits, lower prices and greater incomes. Now we are having a revival of efficiency which replaces the heaviest burden on the lowest enterprise and the largest income. Is this reasonable?

The regulation of the railroads by the state and by the United States government is accepted as long as it is reasonable. Now it is proposed by some to regulate but to run the railroads by governmental authority. They belong to the stockholders. If government operation is adopted the loss of dividends must be borne by the shareholders. The profit and loss must go to bear it. Is this reason?

The national banks are owned by their shareholders. It is now proposed that the government shall go into the capital to a scheme for government control of the banking system. This is the force bill purse of the people. But the next scheme should prove to be a failure. Then, under the blessings of a benign Providence they were enjoying more comforts than are vouchsafed the working man in any other land. The people, misled by the preaching of a doctrine of unrest, disquiet and discontent, placed the hand following. Coercion and dictation are the work of unreason. Experience must teach its lesson. The people, in the end, cannot be be stilled and reason forever be deferred.

Let reason rule!

A $500 Drink.

(Ed A. Goewey, in Leslie's.)

The most expensive drink imbibed by a member of the human race was taken during the 1913 playing season cost exactly $490.05. The player who drank the costly beverage is one of the best men in the business, but he has long shown a tendency to topple from the water wagon at times when his services were most needed. Before signing up with his club for last spring, he promised not to take a drink during the season. If he kept his word he was to receive a bonus of $600 from the owner of the club, who believed that he could stand a good chance of being in the pennant fight, and, consequently, of getting a big share of the world's series money. The player kept his word for the first month, and then he began to drink. He drank all the time he was not playing baseball. He drank on the train, in the hotels, in the ball park, and in the clubhouse. He drank before the game, during the game and after the game. He drank when he was winning and when he was losing. He drank when he was hitting and when he was not hitting. He drank when he was batting and when he was fielding. He drank when he was on the bench and when he was on the coaching lines. He drank when he was on the field and when he was off the field. He drank when he was in the game and when he was out of the game. He drank when he was in the box and when he was out of the box. He drank when he was in the box and when he was out of the box. He drank when he was in the box and when he was out of the box

RECEIVER PLEASES CREDITORS OF ROAD

H. I. Miller, Returning East, Corrects Impression That Shake-Up in the A., B. & A. Probable.

After making a trip of inspection over the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad in the interest of the eastern bondholders of that company, H. I. Miller, a prominent capitalist and railroad official, returned to New York yesterday morning. Mr. Miller was accompanied on the trip by E. T. Lamb, receiver. Mr. Warner, vice president, general passenger agent, and other officials of the road.

Mr. Miller expressed himself as highly pleased with the progress that is being made in the reorganization of the road under the present receivership. He expects to see the road placed on its feet and become a paying property under the direction of the present receiver, Mr. Lamb.

Before leaving, he took occasion to correct an impression that had gone out in the public prints to the effect that there was some dissatisfaction by the bondholders with the receivership and that his trip south might result in a shake-up in the management of the road. In this connection he gave out the following statement:

Mr. Miller's Statement.

"While reading one of the Savannah papers of Thursday, I came across an article telegraphed from Atlanta saying that the trip which I have been making over the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad was because of dissatisfaction among the bondholders with Mr. Lamb, which I believe, was a similar article in one of the Atlanta papers of Wednesday.

"As my trip is being made on behalf of the largest owners of the bonds of the bondholders' committee, I feel qualified to say that, if it will be much pleasure, that the bondholders have every confidence in Mr. Lamb. His record before coming to this property, as well as what is the common report, here is a good guarantee of pleased here in the future of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad under his management.

"My trip at this time has been to verify a report which I made sometime over two years ago, and I am pleased to say that Mr. Lamb's good work has justified the figures I made at that time.

Mr. Miller declined to make public just what the figures were declaring that they were final. He emphatically he said that everything had worked out as he had expected and that the bondholders were fully satisfied with present conditions.

Sole Received After November 1.

Mr. Miller is president of the New Orleans and Great Northern railroad, receiver of the Buffalo and Susquehanna, and vice president of the Mexico and Northwestern. He is one of the most experienced and best known railroad men in the east.

Mr. Lamb will enter upon his task as sole receiver of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad on the first of next month. He has been co-receiver of the road since January 1, of this year.

Cleveland has a city hall complaint bureau. More than two thousand complaints were registered there in the last twelve months.

Are Rheumatic Sufferers Negligent?

Many Suffer Excruciating Agony for Years Without Investigating the Cause of Their Pain or Its Cure.

Rheumatism frequently comes from uric acid poisoning. Uric acid accumulates from undigested food remaining in stomach and bowels. It then ferments and putrefies and generates this poisonous acid. It is absorbed, promptly it gets into the blood, and finally forms crystaline deposits which settle in joints and muscles and stiffen them.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT has been remarkably successful in the treatment of rheumatism resulting from uric acid poisoning. It is a true uric acid solvent which will break up the deposits already formed, dissolve the uric acid out of the tissues and hold it in solution until expelled in the urine. It will not cure your rheumatism overnight, neither did your rheumatism come overnight. But JACOBS' LIVER SALT will relieve you more promptly and surely than anything else, because it thoroughly purges the system of fermenting waste, eliminates the poisonous uric acid and purifies the blood.

Almost without exception the sufferer from rheumatism is subject to constipation, biliousness or dyspepsia, and a sluggish liver is at the bottom of the whole trouble. JACOBS' LIVER SALT stimulates both liver and kidneys, and makes them keep your system clean. No other liver medicine has the same solvent action upon uric acid, therefore insist that your druggist give you the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT. MAYOR'S RACE TO BE 3-CORNERED

Woodward, Hall and B. Lee Smith Appear to Be Candidates at Present—Commission Government Issue.

Atlanta's mayoralty campaign of 1915 will be a three-cornered affair.

The city political "eliminations" rise now to speak—which has had since immediately after the aldermanic campaign in September is still in progress, and along in about March, 1914, the field will be filled with mayoralty hopefuls who will seek the favor of the ward leaders in the hope of securing the loan of Mayor James G. Woodward.

Already three bright and alluring prospects have faded from the political horizon.

Forrest Adair, millionaire real estate dealer, clubman and potentate of Yaarab temple, has side-stepped the issue of the mayoralty which was so temptingly held out to him. Captain James W. English, banker, and ex-postmaster of Atlanta, refused to even consider running at the head of a commission government ticket, and Carter H. Mason, chairman of the police commission, has declined to run at the head of a ticket.

J. K. Orr Is the Prospect.

Now, J. K. Orr is the "prospect." Report has it that Mr. Orr has been approached by some of the leaders, and from a more conservative source it is asserted that a "feeler" has been put out in the hope of getting some definite line on Mr. Orr's attitude.

Although he has made no definite statement, Mayor Woodward, it is believed, will seek another term. His friends say that he has strongly intimated a desire to serve two years more, and the fact that he has not himself has evaded making a positive declaration one way or the other is taken as an indication that he will run again.

The mayor will be candidate No. 1.

Councilman Orville H. Hall, of the third ward, is being urged to make the race against Mayor Woodward.

Both hail from the same ward—the third.

In the election in September, Councilman Hall ran against B. Lee Smith. He made the race to satisfy his friends. His opponent, Jackson, had the support of Mayor Woodward, but was nevertheless decisively defeated. Mayor Woodward's opponents say that the defeat of Jackson left it clear-ly that the mayor has lost some of his political pull in the third.

Councilman Hall is considered as candidate No. 2.

The third candidate will probably date will get the indirement of the administration, known as "conservatives."

Men and Religion Candidate.

Whoever is put forth as a candidate will probably get the indorsement of the Men and Religion Forward Movement.

It has been clearly indicated that the "open town" issue will be one of the big factors in the 1915 campaign.

B. Lee Smith, a member of the police commission, and a supporter of the policies of Chief of Police James L. Beavers, has been mentioned.

One of Chief Beavers' warmest friends is the present city council. By authority for the statement that Commissioner Smith is likely to become a candidate.

If Smith enters the race he will get the support of the Men and Religion Forward Movement. It will be in the nature of a reward for his valiant support of the police chief.

Therefore, politicians regard Commissioner Smith as candidate No. 3.

The anti-Woodward faction in council will pick between Hall and Smith to show their support, in which event lining slightly in favor of the third ward councilman.

Commission Government.

Of the campaign issues commission government will be the big issue.

Mayor Woodward favors a change on the present charter. He will support a commission charter. In fact the mayor has been urged to run at the head of a straight out-and-out commission government ticket. The mayor has the choice of the liberal policy contingent. They figure that with the mayor at the head of a commission government administration the city will get a broader interpretation of police powers.

Just now the attention of politicians is centered on the contest between Alderman J. N. Ragsdale, James M. Nutting and J. H. Harwell for mayor pro tem.

Mayor Woodward has taken no hand in the campaign of either of the candidates.

The contest is so close that the winning candidate will be elected by not more than three votes.

The announcement of Carlos Mason that he will retire from the police commission after January 15 has created interest. Very nearly every member of the commission has announced for the chairmanship of the board. Several candidates from the first ward are campaigning to secure the election to Chairman Mason's place on the board.

City politics will be lukewarm until next March. Then the canoons will belch forth announcements from the various candidates.

Prospects are that Atlanta will have a warm little mayoralty campaign on its hands.

PRIZE MEAN MAN FOUND IN MACON; HE ROBS FUNERAL

Savannah, Ga., October 25.—(Special.) The prize mean man of the world is evidently located at Macon at the present time. He was not satisfied with lifting a wallet from the average person at the fair, but on the occasion of a funeral party passed through when a funeral party made en route to Satilla, this unscrupulous personage, Savannah, this unscrupulous personage robbed D. J. Nagel, who was accompanying his daughter's body from Columbus to Savannah, of his wallet containing $135, and also carried off the railway ticket covering the transportation of the corpse.

Macon, Ga., October 25.—(Special.) The wallet was the property of the corpse of his daughter. Miss Emma Florence Nagle, D. J. Nagle, of whom his pocket picked last night at the Central depot here, and which was $125 in cash and railroad tickets for himself and the corpse.

He will arrive here and look up friends to secure funds in order to complete his sad mission.

REGAINING LOST CROWN, DR. OGDEN'S SUBJECT

Dr. Dunbar Ogden returned to Atlanta Saturday night after a week's visit to Davidson college, North Carolina, during which he delivered a series of meetings among the college students. He will occupy his pulpit Sunday at the Central Presbyterian church, speaking at the morning services on "Reconciled and Saved," and in the evening on "Man Regaining His Lost Crown."

While at Davidson, Dr. Ogden delivered his series of addresses on "Social Messages of the Bible," which attracted wide attention when he gave them in Atlanta last spring. Delivering these lectures in the mornings, Dr. Ogden also held evangelistic services nightly at the college during the week.

Musical Festival Chorus Rehearses Monday Afternoon

The Atlanta music festival chorus, consisting of about 400 of the best voices in the city, will meet tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock, at the Cable hall, to reorganize for the fall and winter work. The plans for this season are the most pretentious that have yet been outlined.

Wm. E. Zeuch, of Chicago, who has been chosen as Atlanta's new city organist and choral director, will arrive here during the latter part of the week, and will take charge of the chorus. Mr. George W. Wilkins, of the Music Festival association, who has been directly interested in the organization of the chorus from the first, urges upon all members the importance of being present at this organization meeting. All the directors of the association will be present, and, in addition to the organization work, an unusual musical program will be rendered, with Mrs. W. M. Hartley, soprano, and Professor Von Skilnisky, violinist. The meeting tomorrow night, therefore, will be somewhat in the nature of a musical and social occasion.

The work of the music festival chorus last year will be remembered with pleasure by all Atlanta music lovers. The Christmas concert was said by competent musical critics to be the most remarkable choral work ever done in the south, and the audience which heard them sing on that occasion filled the auditorium to overflowing. It was almost as large as that which gathered to hear Caruso on the opening night of grand opera.

NO AUTUMN SEASON FOR THE MOUNTAINS OF NORTH GEORGIA

Cornelia, Ga., October 25.—(Special.) The autumn season is well advanced. There is that "feeler" in the air, melancholy days" which was so temptingly held out to him. Captain The foliage on the trees still has the appearance of late summer, although a slight frost has fallen it has left but slight traces on vegetation. It may be that the golden touch of fall weather will be brought with Indian Summer, which is due to arrive within the next few weeks. This very marked peculiarity in the weather forms an interesting topic for many conversations among those who remember how such things happened years ago.

DR. WALKER TO SPEAK TO NEGROES TODAY

Another big meeting for colored men will be held at the Central Avenue M. E. church today at 3 p. m. Dr. Hugh K. Walker, whose subject will be "The Plain Gospel Truth." The leaders of the Y. M. C. A. have been very fortunate in securing the services of a number of the leading ministers of the city to address these meetings. This makes the fifth meeting that has been held during the past month, and upon every occasion the men have turned out in large numbers. A special feature of the meeting today will be the singing of D. L. Haynes, a bass soloist of wide range in voice. The object of these meetings is to arouse a deeper interest on the part of the subscribers to pay up all or one the balance due on the pledges made some time ago for a new building for men and boys. W. Woods White will preside.

ATLANTA SHRINERS GOING TO MONTGOMERY

A "Shrine special" will leave Atlanta on the morning of October 28, at 8 o'clock, headed for Montgomery, where the knights and nobles will attend the installation exercises of Alcazar temple, the newly dedicated temple of Montgomery. The special will leave over the West Point route, and will have coaches and Pullman sleeping cars for Shriners and their friends for the round trip.

It is expected that the crowd will be the largest that has ever left Atlanta on a similar mission. Shriners from Griffin, Macon, Columbus and Savannah will be joined by Yaarab.

TEMPERANCE RALLY AT TRINITY CHURCH

A temperance rally will be held at Trinity church this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Mrs. Lelia A. Dillard, vice president of the Georgia Women's Christian Temperance union, will speak. Mrs. Julian Webster will officiate at the organ, playing a beautiful voluntary, and accompanying Mrs. T. W. Henderson, Mrs. Thompson and Miss Clemmie Wootten in solos. Master Julian Coalpeice will recite temperance selections.

The public is cordially invited.

BANDIT SHOT CASHIER AND ROBBED THE BANK

Addison, Ill., October 25.—Assistant Cashier Edward Rotermund of the Addison State bank, probably was fatally wounded here today by a bandit, who escaped toward Chicago in an automobile after compelling Cashier E. Fischer to give him the contents of the cash drawer, about $100.

Rotermund entered the bank while Fischer was in the vault at the robber's orders. Rotermund grappled with the bandit, who shot him in the left side. Rotermund is in a critical condition.

Fischer was alone in the cashier's cage when he was confronted by a masked man pointing a revolver.

"Give me the money in that drawer," ordered the robber. Fischer surrendered about $100 in bills. Then at the bandit's orders Fischer entered the vault for more money and was out of sight of the room as the bandit entered and seized the bandit, who fired his revolver and fled.

Rev. D. Webster Davis Dead.

CAPT. CORCORAN, U. S. A., TAKES HIS OWN LIFE

Washington, October 25.—Captain Thomas M. Corcoran, of the Thirteenth cavalry, committed suicide at Columbus, New Mexico, today by shooting. He was appointed to the military academy from Massachusetts.

Weak Lungs Often Lead to Serious Illness

If you have a weak lung, you are greatly subject to colds or throat trouble and easily succumb to the serious Lung Trouble. Too many cases Pneumonia or bronchial troubles leave the lungs in a much weakened condition. Eckman's Alterative is a medicine for the lungs and lungs that has been found to be very beneficial, even when a change of climate and other treatments failed to bring relief. Read of it below:

231 S. Atlantic Ave., Haddonfield, N. J. Gentlemen: In the fall of 1909 I contracted a very severe cold, which settled on my lungs. I had been to two doctors and my physician then told me I must go to California immediately. At this time I was advised to take Eckman's Alterative. I started at once and commenced taking it and the last week I was confined to bed I gained 15 pounds. I continued taking it for the first case in January, 1910, and gained 15 pounds, fully restored to health. It is now seven years since my cure has been effected, and I cannot praise Eckman's Alterative too highly."

(Signed) W. M. TATEM.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious for severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial asthma, stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Contains no narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. Sold by all Jacobs' Drug Stores and leading druggists. Write Dr. Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

Brunswick Politics Quiet.

Brunswick, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—Brunswick is not going to witness any spirited city campaign for aldermanic honors this year. That seems to be a certainty, and the fact that the city registration books have been open for three weeks and just 100 voters have qualified is good evidence that the people of the city are not giving politics a serious thought. It is expected that the total registration will be the smallest in the history of the city.

Cornelia Store Sold.

Cornelia, Ga., October 25.—(Special.) Important changes was made in the business circles of this place recently when Rose Hill purchased the stock and fixtures of the Cornelia 5 and 10 cent store, which was formally owned by George L. Kinsey and Will Lewis. The stock will be enlarged and other improvements will be made in order to meet the demands of this popular store.

GRAY HAIR BECOMES DARK, THICK, GLOSSY

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Receipts of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and beauty to the hair, when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. You also know the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Now-a-days we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time, by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

In 1911 there were ninety cotton mills in Japan, with an investment of approximately $31,500,000.

There are in Britain 117,900 miles of telephone lines. Receipts last year aggregated $48,435,812.

IN ONE MINUTE! CLOGGED NOSTRILS OPEN—COLDS AND CATARRH VANISH

Stops Nasty Discharge, Clears Stuffed Head, Heals Inflamed Air Passages and You Breathe Freely.

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway. Just to try it. Instantly apply a little in the nostrils and at once your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils, penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages, stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't suffer a wake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat, and rawness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.

KISSINGER WILL WIN FOR ATLANTA

X-League In Commercial Appeal, Touts the Rube As a Winner For the Southern League Chaps.

By X-LEAGUE.
(In Memphis Commercial Appeal)

The Memphis club at the present time has more players on its roster than any club in the Southern league. Besides the new men secured by draft and the players turned over to Finn by major teams, the entire 1913 team has been reserved. Finn is not acting hastily in disposing of the players who wore Memphis uniforms the past season. The release of Rube Kissinger to the Atlanta club occasioned some surprise in local baseball circles.

Kissinger has about as much stuff as any pitcher that performed in the Southern league the past season. He has a good, fast ball and about the biggest breaking spitter possessed by any Southern league pitcher. Kissinger has never been a consistent hesver from the time he left the University of Michigan and joined the Toronto club. At times he pitched the most brilliant kind of ball, and at other times he could give about as weird exhibition in the box as was ever seen.

When Kissinger was right he was almost unhittable, but he was prone to go in the air easily, which accounted for his in-and-out performances. However, there has never been any question as to his capability, and he may make a sterling twirler for Billy Smith's team. Kissinger has always been a hard pitcher to beat if he was given a lead of a run or so.

Strictly a Front Runner.

The Atlanta team is a club that is capable of making runs, and, with any kind of luck, the Rube has a mighty tough proposition for opposing teams to beat. It is within the bounds of possibility for Rube to duplicate the record of Al Demaree and show superior form for a club after having shown mediocre form the club from which he was secured.

While Kissinger has never shown a consistent winner, his pitching warranted better results from the teams behind him. His first season in the international league he allowed opposing batters on an average of about two hits to a game, which fact demonstrates that Rube's pitching was not altogether the cause for the club's losing game. Kissinger, while pitching in the International league, won over two-thirds of his games during four different seasons. He had his best year in 1910, when he finished second in the pitching averages of the international league with an average of .794.

His work with Billy Smith's Atlanta club will be watched with a great deal of interest by Memphis fans. Rube has not been troubled with a sore arm, and possessed as much speed at the present time as he ever had, and with the hitting club Atlanta will be back of him next season, he is liable to be a very tough nut for Southern league clubs to crack.

1914 CADILLAC BOUGHT BY WAR DEPARTMENT

The United States government, through the war department, has recently purchased a 1914 Cadillac for the use of the Chickamauga-Chattanooga National Park commission. This action may be regarded not only as a compliment to the Cadillac, which was selected from several cars under consideration, but it also indicates the changing attitude of the government which has been somewhat reluctant to abandon the horse, or to open the federal parks and preserves to the motor car. It was only recently that Yellowstone park was opened to automobile tourists.

The purchase of the Cadillac was the outgrowth of a recent visit of the secretary of war to Chattanooga. It is officially stated that not only is Chickamauga park the best preserved and marked of all battle fields in existence, either in Europe or America, but also the largest. More troops were slain there than in any two-day battle in the world's history, nearly 50,000 falling in the Chattanooga campaign. The inspection of those vast properties by the commission necessitates the covering of a great deal of ground, and heretofore it has been by horse drawn carriages. The secretary of war desires to put an end to this antiquated method by the purchase of the new car.

To Revolutionize Turkey.

(From The New York Post.)

The Turkish weekly review, Ishihad, has been promptly suspended for venturing to print an interview with the heir apparent, containing some highly revolutionary sentiments, it is said. Among other things Prince Yussuf said: During my voyages I studied the organization of the British state, and I think it is impossible to apply it to other races. The British created the parliamentary system, the French went further and established a republic, but they enjoy less liberty than we Britain; the Germans resemble the British much more closely, have adopted the system of public instruction to publish a national encyclopedia. The Turkish language must be reformed. If Europe does not know us it is on account of our language. I am of opinion that the members of the Imperial family should be educated with the children of the people. The princes ought to come into direct contact with the people. Princes are for the people, not the people for the princes. The country should not be the domain of the princes. The Ottoman religion is based on democracy, and does not accept aristocratic exclusiveness. The special position of the princes should be recognized, but they must at all times have contact with the people. The parliamentary system can never insure the prestige of the sovereign, and the strengthening of democracy cannot result in the weakening of the aristocracy.

Traditional Lines Broken; South Atlantic Elevens to Play Again in This Section

The Virginia-Georgia game Saturday accomplished a purpose that football men have been trying to get through for several years—the breaking down of the traditional barriers that the teams of the south Atlantic states, of which Virginia is a member, and the teams in this section, with Georgia, Auburn, Vanderbilt, Tech and others, could not play on account of the long distances to be traveled.

But the broader scope of games in the south this year is an encouragement for the future, and the schedules of the southern football teams in the future will cover a greater territory than ever before.

Decide Championship.

The real champions of the south will be decided. And a comparison of the strength of teams in this section with those in the south Atlantic states, the west, the southwest and the east will be more easily accomplished.

Take the scope of this year's games as a sample. Virginia is playing Georgia and Vanderbilt in this section and some of the eastern elevens. One comparison.

Swarthmore and U. S. C. invade Texas, the latter also going into Arkansas. Florida plays Tech, Mercer and Auburn. North Carolina plays Georgia.

And numerous other incidents of the far-reaching schedule of games are evidenced.

Bigger Games Here.

Yesterday's game at Ponce de Leon broke the ice. Atlanta football fans will demand and will get a greater variety of football games than they have ever had before.

Virginia may come back again. Vanderbilt is likely to play here at any time. North Carolina or even Texas are not remote possibilities for games on local grounds.

Atlanta is the best football town in the south, just like she leads in everything that she undertakes. Why shouldn't the bigger games be played here?

Of course, football courtesy demands that Georgia Tech, the home team, be given the preference of dates, but Tech can be persuaded to play two out-of-town games every year, just as she did this year, and have an off Saturday just previous to the Turkey day game with Clemson.

This will give the movers of bigger games locally three Saturday dates to work on, and surely the largest guarantee of the season could be brought here to Atlanta on one of them.

Atlanta football fans demand it. Atlanta football fans are citizens, and what Atlanta citizens demand and want they usually get.

Our prediction is that in the future Atlanta will be the Mecca of the football world of the south.

Lively Basketball Sure In Regimental League

The season of the National Guard Basketball league of Atlanta is now well under way. It has developed that new players are turning out in many of the league, with another flashing the first trio already. Three teams seem to be of about the same strength, but the remainder, undoubtedly, are the dangerous ones.

The Governor's Horse Guard Regulars, the Marist Rifles and the Fulton Fusiliers are the strongest teams in the league, and it is to one of these that the pennant will go.

The Governor's Horse Guard Regulars is composed of six splendid players. Ed Floyd and "Dusty" Rhodes are the forwards, and both are extremely fast and accurate shooters. They have much experience, and know inside basketball. The team has a strong center in Jake Govan, who has always developed into one of the most aggressive players in the city. J. Graves and A. Jones are the guards, and their ability is well known. Both these stars are both defensive and an offensive work.

The Marist Rifles' team is a strong one, indeed. With the acquisition of Sarah Mack and Ed Grace, that team should make a great record. J. Marlow and Fahey are also members of that company, but they have not yet played this season. Taylor, Pearson, Williams and Griffin round out the team.

The Fulton Fusiliers proved by their wonderful showing on Friday night that their team is a strong one. Manager Green has organized the team well, and it is fast and the men are experienced. The team should hit its stride within a week or two, and will, no doubt, exhibit some clever basketball throughout the season.

Cadets Off.

In Friday's game the showing of the Grady Cadets was somewhat a disappointment. The shooting was woefully poor, dozens of easy ones going astray. With practice, however, this fault may be easily overcome. The passe work and guarding of the team was excellent. It would not surprise many should this team defeat one of the "big three" within a few weeks.

Second Division.

The Governor's Horse Guard Specials played a good defensive game Friday, but team work was not in evidence, and the passing of the players was ineffective. When it is understood that the entire team is composed of new players, however, criticism might be withheld.

Reynolds, Elrod, Baker and Brogdon played the guard positions in the first game. Reynolds proved a very effective guard, but could not advance the ball.

O. Geise and H. Graves as forward seemed unable to secure the ball consistently enough to demonstrate whether or not they could shoot. Both these men as well as K. Geise at center, are entirely new.

Company A has not yet played a game, and nothing is known of Manager Shinn's team. Company C has not played this season, and the line-up of that team is not known.

League Organization.

R. V. Anderson is president of the league, G. Freeman is secretary, and Major Hendrix is treasurer and L. O. Geise is secretary. The managers of the teams in the league constitute the board of directors.

A constitution very similar to the one adopted last season was adopted for this playing season. It also provides that all games shall be of halves shall be 20 minutes each, and increased the fare from $5 to $10.

Owing to the several teams in the league having to practice and play on the same court, it was found necessary to assign each team a certain practice night. They are as follows:

Monday night—H and C.
Tuesday night—B and G.
Thursday night—A and K.
Saturday night—L and Z.

Games are played each Wednesday and Friday night, so every night each week is provided for.

The schedule for the remainder of the season, as adopted by the league, is as follows:

October 29—K v. G, C v. H.
October 31—L v. Z, A v. B.
November 1—K v. E, A v. G.
November 5—L v. H, B v. C.
November 12—K v. G, E v. H.
November 14—L v. C, F v. A.
November 19—K v. H, G v. C.
November 21—F v. A, L v. Z.
November 26—K v. C, H v. C.
November 28—L v. A, Z v. E.
December 3—K v. H, C v. E.
December 5—L v. G, Z v. K.

CHANGES ANNOUNCED FOR STUDEBAKER CAR

Left Drive and Center Control Are Prominent Changes in Both "Four" and "Six."

Detroit, October 25.—(Special.)—Formal announcement of a number of important changes in the Studebaker line was made from the local headquarters of the corporation today. While the alterations are not of a sweeping nature, they embody a number of extremely interesting features.

The line for next year will be comprised of two chassis types—a "four" at $1,050 and a "six" at $1,575. Both cars are fitted with left-hand steer and center control. Each model carries a two-unit electric starting and lighting device as standard equipment. The same type of full-floating axle employed on the "six" is supplied with the "four."

In both cars the gasoline supply has been placed in the dash, permitting an ideal feed to the motor without air pressure by means of gravitation.

Increased efficiency has been throughout the keynote of the chassis design.

The motors are of the small bore, long stroke type, of dimensions similar to those of the remarkably successful "six" of the past year. Considerable attention has been given to improved carburetion. The position of the gasoline tank permits the Studebaker-Schebler carburetor to be placed well up on the side of the motor, allowing the use of a very short intake manifold and assuring plenty of warm air for the mixture. There is a dash adjustment, by means of which the operator of the car can secure perfect carburetion conditions at all times without leaving his seat.

No less than thirteen Timken roller bearings are used in each of the driving and axles of the car, reducing friction and permitting adjustment so accurate as to make gear operations almost noiseless.

The electric motor for cranking is connected to the front end of the drive shaft by a roller chain which moves only while the starting operation is in progress. The generator is on the opposite side of the motor and drives silently by a shaft connected with the camshaft gear. Storage is in a six-volt battery under the front seat. The battery also furnishes current for ignition, timed through a Remy distributor and raised in tension by a coil at the front of the motor.

In both cars brakes are fitted with large, silent equalizers, snugly fitted into slots in the frame. Running boards are clean and carry no moving parts.

The four-cylinder car in touring car form has a generous five passenger capacity and a wheel base of 108 inches. This model also has underslung full elliptic rear springs and 32 by 3 1-2-inch tires all round.

The other change in body design in the six-cylinder model is in the position of the auxiliary seats in the tonneau, which, when not in use, fold compactly out of the way into a recess built into the back of the front seat. The new "six" in touring form seats seven adults.

Long Auto Trip Completed; Tourists Reach New Orleans

Word has just been received by L. cage to Detroit, Detroit through Canada back to New York city, thence south to Washington and from that city to Atlanta.

The roads, reports Mr. Carrau, were fairly good as far as Atlanta and Eleanor, Ala., but the party experienced a great deal of difficulty from Atlanta to New Orleans. Here the roads were in frightful condition, almost impassable, but Mr. Carrau said nothing daunted him, with his powerful Pope. Finally after much fatigue and heavy work, they reached New Orleans in good shape, and with exception of a broken stave in the Pope top the car finished in first-class shape. Mr. Carrau and his party passed also rapidly disappearing.

through Atlanta some ten days ago, and Mr. Carrau himself made the trip in order to boost good roads for Alabama and Louisiana.

The Butternut Disappearing.

Now that "nutting" time is here it is observed probably for the first time that the white walnut, better known as the "butternut" is about extinct, at least in this part of the country. About all the older trees have died off, and there seem to be very few younger trees of this species. To be passing of the day when butternut was a common sight is very much regretted, especially by the boys, as no boys his father tell of days when, in the woods he strolled and gathered them, by the bushel. Many of the older folk are also sorry to see the nut disappear, as the kernel of this nut is considered rather delicious as well as very nutritious. This tree is a native of America, and grows to a hight of from 50 to 80 feet, having gray bark and compounded pubescent leaves, oblong rimbed, green nuts which ripen in September and October. The wood of this tree is more exempt from insects than other nut trees, thus making it valuable for adjustable gymnasium stocks cabinet work and interior finish of houses but it is still more popular than the black walnut which is

GOODRICH FACTORY RECEIVE THOUSAND KNIGHTS AS GUESTS

Nearly one thousand sir knights attending the seventy-first annual conclave of the grand commandery Knights Templars of Ohio, visited the factories of the B. F. Goodrich company, at Akron, viewing the interesting sights in connection with the manufacture of Goodrich tires and the the many thousands of other rubber articles produced in the Goodrich plant, the largest rubber factory in the world.

The visitors were conveyed to the factory in specially chartered street cars bearing huge streamers "This Car to the B. F. Goodrich Company. Largest Rubber Plant in the World," where guides took them from one department to another pointing out the various stages of manufacture.

The trip mapped out covered about 4 miles of walking. At the conclusion one sir knight thanked his guides, and said: "It's mighty fine of you people to show us through the whole plant. You must have a lot of people working here. A couple of thousand maybe." The guide's answer was that the trip had embraced but a comparatively small portion of the plant, and that to cover every department via the shortest route would necessitate a 50-mile walk. He added that the employees numbered fifteen thousand.

After the trip groups of the sir knights were photographed upon the steps of the general offices, and then escorted inside to forget the fatigue of their extended trip with appropriate refreshments and cigars, and to find their wives had in the meantime been entertained by the young ladies of the Goodrich organization.

"Well, sir," said a Cleveland sir knight in reviewing his experiences, "this was the most wonderful sight of my life! I had more or less of a vague idea that you took a wad of rubber and some fabric, stepped them into a mold, pressed 'em together and there was a tire. But to see how intricate the actual manufacture is, what skill and care is required, how the rubber and fabric are laid one upon the other and built up to be finally unit-molded in great steam vats, is a revelation. I was especially impressed with that testing machine where the tires are run through against a surface that is like an ordinary road, and to see like surface go back and forth, to affect the tires in the same manner as a quick turn would. It's wonderful!"

And that Goodrich safety tread anti-skid device is remarkable. So was the making of those Goodrich cord tires. I was really astounded at the thousands of other products being manufactured in the Goodrich huge factory. It was the most instructive day I ever enjoyed."

DECEMBER COTTON LED IN ADVANCE

That Option Sold 29 Points Over Low Level of Previous Day—Predictions of Cold Wave Factor in Advance.

New York, October 25.—There was a renewal of bullish excitement in today's cotton market and near months made new high records for the season, with December contracts selling at 14.07 or 29 points above the low level of yesterday. Apprehensions that another cold wave would follow unsettled conditions in the western belt between now and Monday morning, seemed to bring out fresh buying from the south, as well as from local circles, and the market closed steady at practically the best point of the day, last prices showing a net gain of from 20 to 25 points.

The opening was steady at unchanged prices to an advance of 2 points, in sympathy with steady cables and rather a better view of the general situation.

The census report showing 6,956,583 bales ginned to October 18 against 6,576,136 last year and 6,758,621 bales two years ago, was considered by some of the local bears as rather large than could be readily harmonized with recent small estimates of the crop, but the figures were about on line with expectations and were met by local bulls with scant concern. They represented an unusually large percentage of the total crop, at this rate, the market quickly became very strong, and the conservative, bullish character of sentiment in some circles was emphasized by the statement of a prominent southern operator who claimed that May cotton would touch 15 cents before it was 10 points away from the closing figures of last night.

Private predictions of a renewed freeze in the southwest, based upon the appearance of a very strong high barometer in the Pacific northwest, added to the confidence of the bears and there was evidently active covering by yesterday's local shorts. The official western belt forecast contained no mention of frost, but was for fair and unsettled weather with probable snow in parts of Oklahoma or west Texas, followed by colder temperatures.

New Orleans Cotton.

New Orleans, October 25.—The cotton market had a firm undertone today on covering on the part of shorts, advance on good buying on the part of mills and weather and crop and crop estimates following the census bureau report of 6,956,583 bales ginned prior to October 18. Shorts bought covers in large volume on the failure of the census figures to come up to their estimates of 7,000,000 bales or better and buying by commission men was much heavier than it usually is at the week-end. Buyers of the early months of the week took profits freely but their offerings were well absorbed.

At the opening the tone was steady and prices were unchanged to 2 points lower. Cables were about as due and the census figures, while disappointing to extremists on the short side, just about met the average of expectations. Also the rains in a few spots on the first call prices on the most active months were 11 points above the close of yesterday. This was followed by a steady and the inquiry steadily increased and the market steadily advanced. Prices in the early months on the most active months were 21 to 23 points over last night's closing figures and there was at a net rise of 15 points.

The weather map showed a pronounced cool wave moving down on the northwest and the general opinion among cotton men who watch the map was that the low temperatures would be felt in the cotton region during the next 24 or 36 hours. This caused buying, especially among nervous shorts, although many bears pointed out that it was generally considered that cold could do little more damage to the crop, and that the figures themselves caused comparatively little buying, but crop estimates based on them round. The bulls contened that the crop was 80 per cent or more ginned on October 18 and that, therefore, the ginning returns pointed to a total crop of less than 14,000,000 bales, exclusive of linters. Liverpool cotton steady, unchanged to 1 point lower. The spot sales were 12,000 bales, including 7,000 for speculation and export. Receipts, 12,000, including 11,000 American. Futures closed steady, unchanged to 1 point lower. The

CONGRESS HALL IS REDEDICATED

President Wilson Chief Speaker at Restoration of Building Where the Fathers of the Republic Met.

Philadelphia, October 25.—Congress hall, in historic Independence square, where the senate and house of representatives sat from 1790 to 1800, was rededicated today with patriotic exercises, the occasion marking the completion of the restoration of the hall to almost its original appearance. President Wilson was the central figure in the ceremonies and delivered a twenty-minute address, in which he harked back to the early days of the republic and contrasted men and things of those time with the present.

"There has come over me since I sat down here a sense of deep solemnity," said the president, "because it has seemed to me that I saw ghosts crowding in, a great assemblage of spirits, no longer visible to us, but whose influence we still feel as we feel the molding power of history itself.

"I feel today a compulsion of men, a commission of examples which were set us in this place. And these examples remind us not only of public service, but of public service shot through with the principle and honor.

"I can feed my own mind as happily upon the circumstances of the revolutionary and constitutional period as you can," the president continued, "but I cannot feed my thoughts with them in Washington now because every day problems arise which wear some new aspect. I must fall back if I would serve my conscience upon those things which are fundamental, rather than those things which are superficial. I ask myself this question: How are you going to assist in some small part to give the American people, and by example, the people of the world, more advantage, more liberty, more happiness, more substantial prosperity, and how are you going to make that prosperity a common heritage, instead of self possession?

Life Simple Then.

"The men of the day which we now celebrate had a very great advantage over us, in this one particular: life was simple in America then. Our task is very, many times more difficult. We count it a fortunate circumstance that almost all the windows of the White house and its offices open on unoccupied spaces that stretch to the banks of the Potomac, and then out into Virginia and onto the heavens themselves. As I sit there I can constantly forget Washington and remember the United States. Not that I would intimate that all the rest of the states lies south of Washington, but there is a serious thing back of my thought. You think too much about being re-elected if it is very difficult to be worth re-electing.

Concluding the president said:

"My theme now today, my only thought, is a very simple one. Do not let us go back to the annals of those sessions of congress to find out what to do, because we live in another age, and circumstances are absolutely different. Let us be men of that kind. Let us feel at every turn the compulsions of principle and of honor which they felt."

Speaker Clark, who preceded the president made a patriotic speech, in which he said that if the fourth of July should be known as Saint Jefferson day.

Soon Congress hall the president went by train to Swarthmore college, near Philadelphia, where he spoke briefly at the unveiling of a bronze bas relief of the institution.

The president returned to Philadelphia a few minutes before 5 o'clock tonight and left immediately for Mobile, Ala., where he addresses the Southern Commercial congress Monday.

Congress Hall Described.

Congress hall is a two-story, rubble-roofed building. It stands on the southeast corner of sixth and Chestnut streets, or in other words, on the southwest corner of Independence square. To the east of it is Independence hall.

The building was constructed for county purposes. Two different times were raised to cover the expense. In colonial days it was the custom for the mayor of Philadelphia when going out of office to give a banquet. Instead of doing this one of the mayors contributed the cost of the feat, $750, to the building fund for the new county hall. The other money used in its construction came from the sale of an old jail and workhouse. Gangs of convicts known then as "wheelbarrow men" began its construction in 1787 and it was completed in 1789.

On March 4, 1789, the assembly of Pennsylvania, acting for the county of Philadelphia, tendered the use of the building as the temporary home of congress. Congress, which was meeting then in New York, after much debate, fixed the permanent seat of the national government on the banks of the Potomac, and Philadelphia, mainly through the efforts of Robert Morris and by the direction of the first congress met in the hall, the first speaker of the house of representatives being Frederick Augustus Muhlenberg. George Washington was inaugurated in the hall on March 4, 1793, and Jefferson was there sworn in as vice president.

When Congress Sat in Hall.

While congress sat in the hall the United States mint and the United States bank were established, Vermont, Kentucky and Tennessee were admitted to the union, the army and navy were reorganized on a permanent basis, Jay's historic treaty with England was considered and ratified; the whisky insurrection was suppressed; the wars with the Indians were successively conducted by Harmar, St. Clair and Wayne, the treaties with France and Spain negotiated and within its walls was officially announced the death of George Washington in 1799.

Congress (the first session of the sixth) sat in the hall for the last time on May 14, 1800. The last act of the congress was to request the attorney general to instruct the attorney general to prosecute William Duane, editor of The Aurora, for a defamatory libel.

The congress of congress recommended an appropriation of $100,000 to Philadelphia as compensation for the loss of congress' use of the building, but the appropriation was never authorized. After congress vacated it, the hall was used by the courts and the votes of all of the famous Philadelphia lawyers ranged through its rooms. The building was abandoned by the courts in 1895, since which time several colonial societies have used it as headquarters. The structure was twice threatened by fire, in 1821 and in 1855, but little damage was done.

$800,000 ESTATE GOES TO KALLAHER'S BROTHER

Memphis, Tenn., October 25.—The will of Patrick Kallaher, of Memphis, leaving his bulk of his estate, valued at about $800,000 to his brother, Michael Kallaher, was admitted to probate by a jury in the circuit court here today. A contest to the will was filed recently by Mrs. Mary Ellis and James Kallaher, sister and brother of the deceased, while Michael Kallaher was not mentally capable of making his will at the time of his death. Miss Mollie Clark, of Milwaukee, a trained nurse, was one of the principal witnesses in the case. She alleged Kallaher had been engaged to marry her, and had promised her a large portion of his estate.

CLARK AND THE OREGON TO LEAD CANAL FLEET

Washington, October 25.—Rear Admiral Charles E. Clark, retired, commander of the battleship Oregon when she made her famous trip around Cape Horn at the opening of the Spanish war, today accepted the invitation of Secretary Daniels to be on the bridge of his old ship to lead the international fleet through the Panama canal early in 1915. The admiral, at Secretary Daniels' request, called at the navy department today.

When the Oregon made her voyage around the horn in 1898 she covered 17,000 miles, and joined the fleet in time to take part in the destruction of Cervera's fleet. The canal being in operation at the time she will have reached her destination by steaming only 4,000 miles.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS CONFER ESQUIRE RANK

Georgia lodge, No. 132, Knights of Pythias, conferred the rank of esquire, the second degree, on a class of 48 at its meeting. The class was unusually large and nearly 100 knights were present to take part in the initiatory work. Lee Terrell, the initiatory district deputy grand chancellor for the fifth district, made up of Fulton, Cobb, DeKalb and Campbell counties, presided during the session. Van Hiram Smith, chancellor of No. 132, was present as were W. T. Collins, vice chancellor; J. D. Little, prelate; Newman Laser, master of finance, and other officers of the lodge.

CAPTAIN RAYSOR LOSES POSITION IN THE ARMY

Washington, October 25.—President Wilson today approved the sentence of dismissal by court-martial of Captain Marion C. Rayser, Second cavalry, recently tried at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, and convicted of drunkenness on duty and making false certificates of troop funds. Captain Rayser entered the military service as 1st lieutenant, First Texas volunteer infantry, at the opening of the Spanish-American war in 1898.

FINE COTTON GROWN BY FORMER ATLANTAN

"Back to the farm, young man!" is the advice of R. A. Costley, a former Atlanta merchant, who is now farming in DeKalb county, near Constitution.

He came to town Saturday backing up his advice with ten bales of 1-cent cotton grown on five acres.

Mr. Costley also brought with him several stalks of this cotton. It is of the improved Shanghai variety, stands 10½ feet high and bears 35 bolls on the stalk.

He wants to know:

"Is this the record?"

Killed by Moros.

Manila, October 25.—Captain Harry McHilderry, of the Thirteenth company, Philippine scouts, died today from wounds received during a fight between the scouts and the Moros at Talipao, October 23. A force of mounted constabulary sent out in search of the body of a dead scout attacked the Moros today near Talipao and defeated them.

Sellers Gets Damages.

Cornelia, Ga., October 25.—(Special.) Judge Robertson, ordinary of Habersham county, effected a settlement with H. T. Sellers, of this place, a few days ago for injuries received on one of the county bridges some time ago. The accident came very near being fatal to Sellers, one of the mules he was driving was killed in the fall and another injured. The bridge at that point has since been replaced by a steel and concrete structure.

WARDEN DEFENDED BY FORMER DEPUTY

M. L. Petty, Prominent Real Estate Dealer, Says W. H. Moyer Has No Superior in His Line of Work.

That the charges against the management of the Federal prison, made recently by Julian Hawthorne and Dr. W. G. Morton are utterly unfounded and without any element of truth is the opinion of M. L. Petty, a prominent real estate dealer, who was connected with the prison in the capacity of assistant deputy warden for a year and a half when the prison was first built.

In a statement to The Constitution, Mr. Petty declared that he has kept closely in touch with the affairs of the prison since he left, and that the administration of Warden Moyer has been above just criticism, and that there are few prison men in the United States who are his equal, and none his superior, in the administration of prison affairs.

"Warden Moyer was appointed on account of the fact that he is a competent prison man, and through no political influence," said Mr. Petty, "and I do not think it is manifestly unfair for him to be removed, or even criticised, because of politics.

Mr. Petty's Statement.

Mr. Petty's statement follows:

"Editor Constitution: I have been asked by several of my friends for an opinion of the present trouble at the U. S. prison, who know of my real and a half experience at that place, so I have decided to give it through your paper.

"Some prisoners of high standing (socially) do not look on a prison sentence in the way it is given. It is the intention of the law to punish offenders by hard work and confinement. They seem to think they should not be treated as men of the class not popular and not having the social standing of themselves. This class of men will give the department a great deal of trouble. The man in prison for a railway robbery thinks he is just as good as the man in for robbing a bank or for counterfeiting. The intention of the law is to punish these violators of the law just the same! If they are good prisoners they will have no trouble with any of the officers.

"It is just as necessary to enforce the laws and rules of the prison as it is to enforce the laws of the states.

"Now, in regard to the management of the prison, which I have watched closely since my dismissal from the same, I think it is the best of any prison in the country. The warden and the deputy warden are both practical prison men. I don't mean to say there is none as good as Warden Moyer, but I do say there is none better, and I think it would be bad policy to put him out or ask for his resignation from on the complaint of a few displeased convicts, or discharged guards, who to my certain knowledge were no good even when they were there.

Would Leave Politics Out.

"I don't think politics ought to come into the management of a prison. Politics was the cause of the trouble when I left the prison. Hawk was appointed for some dirty political part he took in West Virginia, not that he was a good prison man, but as a pure some political debt. Dawson, of Ohio, was appointed by Governor Harmon as a particular friend to Dawson, for services he had rendered him in that state. Forarce having a great deal of influence with his party, and being Dawson's friend, Hawk became jealous of him and made it very unpleasant for him by giving me a great deal of Dawson's work to do.

"I was assistant deputy warden, and on my retirement that office was done away with. This place was only made so that Dawson could get in. Deputy Warden Anderson, who was appointed by Colonel Livingston, was not satisfactory to the party or Mr. Hawk, and the office of assistant deputy warden was created to give Dawson a place. It was understood before Hawk took charge of the Federal prison that Dawson was to have Anderson's place. Hawk made it so unpleasant for Anderson that he resigned. Dawson was appointed in his place, and I was appointed in Dawson's place.

"Then the fight between Dawson and Hawk began. They made it so unpleasant for me that I reported the business to the department of justice, which department conferred a compliment on me by relieving the while business without an investigation. Hence, my removal with Hawk and Dawson followed.

"The appointment of Warden Moyer was entirely different. He was appointed from the department of justice for his ability and not for his political influence, and I hope to see him retained by the department.

"Respectfully,

"M. L. PETTY."

SEABOARD INTERESTED IN A., B. & A. PROPERTY

May Seek to Get Possession With View of Extension to the Florida Main Line.

Waycross, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—Confirmation from an origin claimed to be official was received here today to the effect that the Seaboard Air Line, having in view an extension of the Atlanta-Waycross line of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic to their Florida main line, was seeking to get possession of the property, soon to be sold under mortgage foreclosure.

It is reported that an investigation of the country between Waycross and Kingsland, where it is proposed to join the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic at the seaboard in the event the present connection at Chatham is not satisfactory for through traffic from Atlanta to Jacksonville, has been made and a favorable report submitted.

The proposed new route would be in competition to the Southern and Central of Georgia with their connections, and it is for this purpose the seaboard is said to desire the Atlanta, Birmingham & Atlantic.

CORNELIA PRODUCE MEN DELIGHTED WITH SEASON

Cornelia, Ga., October 25.—(Special.) The local produce and vegetable dealers have closed the shipping season and all are well pleased with their year's business.

There has been something over 5,000 cars of beans, tomatoes and cucumbers shipped from here this summer, to say nothing of peaches and apples. The apple season is just on, still there has been several cars shipped already and this crop will possibly amount to 12,000 or 15,000 bushels.

This place is rapidly developing into one of the best fruit and truck markets in northeast Georgia, sending its products to all parts of the United States, Canada, Cuba and Mexico.

HEARINGS ARE CLOSED ON CURRENCY MEASURE

Senate Committee Will Begin Revising Bill Monday—Experts to Be Consulted.

Washington, October 25.—Restrictions upon the rights of national banks to engage in the underwriting of commercial or industrial syndicates or re-organization were recommended to the senate banking and currency committee today by Charles Starek, national bank examiner for New York city. Mr. Starke's suggestions were made in response to questions by members of the committee who examined him for more than an hour behind closed doors in relation to certain features of national bank operation.

Underwriting by Banks.

Mr. Starek went with some detail into the extent to which the great New York banks engage in the underwriting of large projects and recommended several modifications of the banking laws that would restrict such activity. The relation of the National City bank to the underwriting of the $4,000,000 loan obtained by the Chicago Consolidated Railways company some time ago was touched on during the hearing, but the committee did not go into the subject because of the investigation of the matter being conducted under direction of Assistant Secretary of Treasury Williams.

Mr. Starek told the committee that from his examination of the case he was satisfied the National City bank had acted solely as the underwriting agents and that it had not exceeded its legal limit of loans to the enterprise. The New York examiner appeared before the committee at his own request because of testimony by Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City bank, which indicated that the examiner's income from fees amounted to more than $30,000 a year. Mr. Starek said his gross receipts from fees was about $45,000 a year and that he paid out over half of this sum for salaries of assistants who helped him in the work.

Hearings Are Closed.

The hearing of the senate banking and currency committee on the Glass-Owen currency bill came to an end today and the committee revision of the bill will begin behind closed doors at 11 o'clock Monday.

Members of the committee would not predict tonight what length of time would be required to complete the measure and prepare a report for the senate. A number of experts on various phases of banking operations, particularly the handling of domestic and foreign exchange, will be consulted by the committee during the progress of its work on the bill.

Before Mr. Starek was heard by the senate committee, Edward E. Shields, of West Chester, Pa., secretary of the Pennsylvania Bankers' association, presented objections to the bill.

H. Parker Willis, who helped frame the measure for the house committee, opposed the central bank plan, on the ground that a number of regional banks would present a stronger system in time of a crisis.

Telegrams from business houses of Omaha, assailing the bill, were read by Senator Hitchcock.

Thousands Pack Ponce DeLeon Decked With College Ribbons To Cheer for Their Favorites

Combining the grand stand spectacle from the noted drama, "The While," the football scene from "Strongheart," the tense mob action of "The Christian" and the last act of Manhattan's Hippodrome production of "Sporting Life" and the picture presented at Ponce de Leon Park yesterday during the Georgia-Virginia football game is yet but feebly drawn.

Thousands of enthusiastic, full blooded, cohorts of the Georgia team, scarcely over-loading the wild cheering of some 700 supporters of the University of Virginia crowded the grand stand, side lines and the "auto row." Colors clashed with colors. Chrysanthemums, great white and yellow fellows, worn on milady's coat, added lighter tones to the pastels of Georgia's "black and red" and Virginia's "maize and blue."

Over the roar of the thousands of voices, could be heard the piercing bugles of the Georgia student band, hurling defiance in one strain and urging on their team in the next measure.

Clamor of the Game.

Staid men of affairs, pretty girls, admiring swains, youthful kiddies—all added to the deafening roar—hour long and uninterrupted as the game progressed.

In the Eager Throng.

Among those recognized in the excited throng were Dr. Beverly Pollard, of Richmond, Va., former Virginia foot and baseball star; Baxter Moore, whose record on the gridiron at Virginia is still a gloried one; Dr. Ernest Derr, Gordon Boswell, T. Carter, of Marion, Ala.; Dr. P. Merritt, John Gibson, remembered by his college mates as "Old Jack"; Keets Speed, Atlanta newspaper man; Earnest Dallas, Dr. W. A. Lambeth, physical director of Virginia University, from whom the students at the institution have named their athletic field; Dr. Albert LaFevre, professor of novel philosophy at Virginia, who has never missed a football game since he became connected with the institution of learning, and Henry Tutwiler, famous tackle of a Virginia team of some years since, scattered to and about the Virginia section were the members of the Atlanta Alumni association of Virginia University, headed by J. R. S. Hobson and Frank Inman, who marshalled the old "grads"—some of whom were present at the only other Virginia-Georgia football game ever played here sixteen years ago.

Barred by a heavy rope stretched across the aisles of the grand stand, the Georgia rooters, for the greater part composed of undergraduates, who traveled from classic Athens to the Gate City saturday in a special train to be present at the game, kept up continuous cries to their favorites—aided and abetted by the Georgia student-band.

Direct the Cheerers.

Cheer leaders Harrison and Russell, alternately directing their followers, kept the great crowd on its feet most of the afternoon.

Seated with the Georgia contingent, Dr. A. M. Soule, of the University of Georgia, Professor S. V. Sanford, physical director of the institution; Professor John Morris, E. H. Dorsey, secretary of the Georgia Athletic association; B. E. Forster; Professor H. Preston Brooke, John S. Talmadge, Walter Jones, Harry Hodson, trustees of the university; Mrs. Barrett Phinizy and others were found cheering lustily when Georgia endangered the Virginia goal lines. The party arrived in Atlanta Saturday in special cars and will return to Athens late tonight.

When Georgia scored, one of the stands of the game was the lively one pressed by Representative L. E. Wisdom, of Forsyth county, a member of the state legislature and who, during its recent session, created for himself the title of the "boy-solon." Wisdom unable to contain himself walked up to J. R. S. Hobson, leader of the Virginia "grads," and slapping him on the shoulder remarked, speaking of intellectual preeminence. That was all. It seemed that Hobson had argued with Wisdom some time recently that Virginia men were more intellectual than the Georgia products.

Forgets Atlanta for Once.

Frank Taylor, assistant manager of the Piedmont hotel, with the Virginia streamers decorating its east wagon, a "side line" enhancement during the afternoon, forgot for once his loyalty to Atlanta and the state.

Over in the extreme left section of the grand stand, packed tightly together, sat over fifty soldiers from Fort McPherson. Experts, everyone of them, in the art of football, these overcoated men, silent for the most part, critically called each fumble and misplay in tones that were easily heard all over the field. Their comments were as enjoyable as the most earnest efforts of the college rooters.

Harvard-Cornell Battle Is Coming Classic in East; Penn Is Strong This Season

By Edward R. Bushnell.

Philadelphia, October 25.—(Special.) With the Dartmouth-Princeton game already decided that Round Robin tournament or elimination contest which is looked upon to finally determine the intercollegiate gridiron championship of the east is well under way and next Saturday two other members of the big Six will meet.

They are Harvard and Cornell and the resumption of track and gridiron relations will be celebrated in the Harvard stadium. All the other members of this combination play minor college or high schools. Colgate, a team which held Cornell to a 0-0 score and was just barely beaten by West Point. Princeton plays Holy Cross. Dartmouth meets Amherst and Pennsylvania takes on the Pennsylvania State college eleven.

Of all these games that between Harvard and Cornell will attract the most attention. Cornell has had a pretty tough time of it during all of October, while Harvard has been skimming along without a serious opposition. The Ithacans have played a much harder October schedule than Harvard which may or may not have been good for them. The Crimson has been singularly free from injuries, while Cornell has had more than its share of them.

The chances are, therefore, that Cornell will not enter this game in as good physical condition as Harvard. This fact coupled with the great scoring strength which Harvard has shown all season has made the Crimson a top heavy favorite for the game. Harvard has a team of veterans, and high-class ones at that, while Cornell must depend upon a team made up for the most part of green players trying to learn the new system, handicapped by many injuries. Therefore Harvard ought to win handily.

Harvard and Cornell have met nine times and there has never been a really close game between the two. In only four games of this series has Cornell been able to score. In 1892 the Ithacans held the Crimson to a score of 20-14 and in 1896 to a score of 12-6. Cornell scored a touchdown against Harvard in 1897 when the score was 24-6. The Ithacans also tallied with a touchdown in the last game of the series in 1910 when the score was 27-8. The complete record of the Harvard-Cornell series follows:

1892—Harvard 20, Cornell 14.
1893—Harvard 24, Cornell 0.
1894—Harvard 24, Cornell 0.
1895—Harvard 28, Cornell 0.
1896—Harvard 12, Cornell 6.
1897—Harvard 24, Cornell 5.
1909—Harvard 18, Cornell 0.
1910—Harvard 27, Cornell 8.

Upsets Coming Early.

There were a good many surprises in last Saturday's results. Four big teams, two in the east and two in the middle west, thought more of being returned victors, were defeated. The Carlisle Indians, supposed to be past masters in the open game, were beaten by the University of Pittsburg, who played a high class. The Pennsylvania State college which had been through the season of 1912 without the loss of a single game, and without being scored upon, was beaten by Washington and Jefferson college 17-0.

In the middle west the University of Michigan was beaten by the Michigan Agricultural college by two touchdowns to one, while the University of Nebraska outplayed and defeated the University of Minnesota 7-0. On the same day Wisconsin, the conference champion of 1912, was played a 7-7 standstill by Purdue.

The defeat of Michigan was probably the biggest surprise of the day because the Wolverines have been in the habit of making a plaything of the agricultural school eleven in the past. It was a severe blow to Michigan, whose team is now preparing to meet Cornell, Pennsylvania and Syracuse in the east.

The improved play shown by Yale against Lafayette and Lehigh, coming on top of the Elis 8-0 game with Maine, has surprised and perplexed the eastern critics. Those who have seen the Yale team in action have not been greatly impressed with its strength, but the scores of 23-0 and 27-0 made against Lafayette and Lehigh on successive Saturdays, speak for themselves.

There is no doubt that Yale has made tremendous progress since that scoreless tie with Maine after which the team abandoned the shift formations brought by Tom Shevlin. At the same time Yale is playing the most careful defensive game of any big team in the east. While other teams were being scored upon by touchdowns, either earned or made possible by fumbles, the Elis were holding all their opponents scoreless. At the same time there is no doubt that they played in rare good luck against Lafayette and Lehigh.

Two of the four touchdowns they made against Lafayette were indirectly due to fumbles, while the Lehigh team also fumbled into the hands of Yale and played loosely when they had a chance to score. As far as the defense goes Head Coach Howard Jones is developing this years team very much like he did that of 1909. His object has been first of all to develop a strong defensive eleven and after that to build up the offense. It seems that the team has been slow developing its attack but by November 15, the date on which the Elis meet Princeton, the Yale coaches promise an efficient attack.

There is much joy over the reappearance of Pumpelly, Meikle and Cordell. These three men have been on the injured list for the greater part of the season and have not been able to practice. Whether they will be able to get into condition to hold their own with such star backs as they must meet in Harvard and Princeton remains to be seen.

Penn Team Looks Strong.

The victory of the University of Pennsylvania over Brown by the score of 28-0 stamps this Quaker team as one of unusual strength. The Red Cardinals have had one of the hardest October schedules ever known for it has included on successive Saturdays such teams as Lafayette, Swarthmore, Brown and the Indians.

The success of the new head coach, George H. Brooke, has been most gratifying to the Quaker authorities. Brooke owes his success not so much to the possession of unusually high-class material as to the variety of attack which he has taught his men. The versatility of the offense has not only made the Quakers a good ground-gaining team, but it has served to break up every defense opposed to them. The Pennsylvania team has not had any particular line of attack. There have been forward passes, end runs, line plunges and a variety of straight plays. Brooke has been trying to teach his men to strike at different points and thus to keep the opposing defense bewildered.

The success with which Pennsylvania has been operating the forward pass has led to the question as to whether or not Brooke has evolved a method by which to make this play successful. It has succeeded against the small colleges but it has yet to prove what it can do against such elevens as Dartmouth, Michigan and Cornell. The writer has always maintained that the forward pass as it was used previous to this year was a complete failure and that it lost the team more ground than it gained except in so far as it served to weaken the opposing defense. The Quakers seem to think that the forward pass can be made a consistent ground gaining play, but we shall have to wait for the November games before deciding this point. Harvard and Yale have done nothing as yet with this play. In fact neither of these teams ever have worn their shirts out, but they may have something novel to spring in the November championship games.

Will Harvard and Penn Meet Again?

Some industrious person has begun the circulation of its report that Harvard and Pennsylvania will soon meet on the gridiron once more. They have not met since the fall of 1906 when the Quakers beat Harvard by the score of 12-6, their second successive victory. There was no particular reason for the break that year except in so far as the friction between the two was of long standing and Harvard took the initiative to break off football relations. The break in baseball followed the next year.

The history of their relations in two sports, baseball and rowing, gives reason for the belief that the two will shortly resume relations in football. There has always been the friendliest of feeling between the rowing authorities of the two universities and in spite of the friction in football and baseball the crews have been meeting each year.

The climax came last spring when Harvard invited Pennsylvania to participate in a triangular regatta with Princeton at Cambridge. As a special mark of friendship the Harvard oarsmen vacated their rooms on the Harvard side and the Pennsylvania and Princeton oarsmen moved in.

Two years ago the baseball committees of the two universities got up in this sport and now the Crimson and the Red and Blue are playing the national game on the old basis. The feeling between the two baseball managements is unusually pleasant in spite of the fact that the new competitions have taken place for a game in 1914. However, it need not be surprising if Pennsylvania is back on the Harvard schedule within a few years.

Harvard Scores Seven With Drop Kicks.

In the rare to see which team can score the greatest number of field goal place kicks in a single year Harvard and Pennsylvania are even with five field goals each to their credit. Mahan who can score by either method from almost any point or angle within the 35-yard line. They can place kick from an even greater distance. Brickley prefers the drop kick and when he is close up always uses it. In spite of his great proficiency in this Mahan has kicked one more field goal than he. Mahan, however, is a second string kicker and was used only when Brickley was out of the game. Mahan scored two field goals against Holy Cross which brought his record for the season up to three.

Marshall, of Pennsylvania leads with the greatest number of individual goals. The Quaker quarterback has scored with four drop kicks from about eight trials. He had a bad day in the Brown game when he missed the only two attempts he had, but both kicks were against a strong side wind. Carter, of Pennsylvania, has scored one goal from placement, the only one he has tried.

Among the individual goal kickers Barrett, of Cornell, has distinguished himself with two and Benedict, of the Army, has likewise made two, both in a single game. Yale has tallied twice by the field goal route, Quernsey making one such goal against Holy Cross and Knowles repeating this trick against Lehigh.

This constitutes an unusual record in field goals for the first three weeks of the football season and are evidences of the writer's contention that the season of 1913 will see a greater premium placed upon accurate field goal kicking than ever before in the history of the game. Coaches are now beginning to make a science of drop and place kicking. This season no first-class team is considered all-around proficient unless it has at least one such man who can be counted upon to score inside the 30-yard line.

Harvard Betters Yale Scores.

Harvard and Yale have played two common opponents this year, Holy Cross and Maine. In both cases the Harvard team has so far out-scored that of Yale that it makes the Crimson look very much superior to Yale. Yale had trouble to beat Holy Cross by the score of 10-0, yet Harvard ran up the total of more than 40 points against this same college. It was true that Harvard was scored upon, but the score was due directly to a fumble. Harvard swamped Maine by the score of 34-0, yet this minor college held Yale to a 6-0 score.

Of course, too much importance must not be attached to comparative scores made at any time and particularly those made in the preliminary season when conditions are apt to vary greatly. Yale men do not care a snap about any credit Harvard may extract from walking more touchdowns against minor colleges. What Yale is interested in is the score of her own game with Harvard. Harvard has too frequently had the advantage of making a better showing against common opponents and yet losing the annual game to the Elis to worry the Blue about the result of the Maine and Holy Cross games.

The Economy of "One Man" Direction

IT IS obvious that a motor car manufacturer can build 50,000 cars at much less than he can build 1,000.

But the difference in quantity buying and in quantity manufacturing are not the only elements of saving which can be effected.

Each factory has its own system, its own machinery, its own personnel. Some are still making cars by the old routine with the conventional methods and machinery. Some have advanced more or less and a few, a very few, are producing on the up-to-the-minute efficiency basis by special machinery and special methods particularly adapted to the size and type of the car being made.

We say without hesitation, and it is a fact well-known in the trade, that the great Overland plants are unquestionably the most thoroughly, efficiently and economically equipped and managed.

This great business has the advantage of the personal direction of one single man—the man who founded the business, the man who has grown up with it from the beginning, the man who developed it —John N. Willys.

Mr. Willys has clung steadfastly to the watchword "The most car for the least money." And each year he has more than made good this principle.

To produce a car of the Overland size, power, strength and high quality, and to sell that car for such a remarkably low price, has taxed, to the utmost, all the resourcefulness, foresight, ingenuity, untiring energy and wide experience of, not only Mr. Willys, but a veritable army of the industry's most able men.

Mr. Willys knows men, and it is well known that no manufacturing institution, perhaps in the world, can boast of a larger or more efficient and well-trained, well-paid, well-satisfied organization.

In the newest Overland increased value at a decreased price is more prominent and apparent than ever.

You will make a grave mistake if you fail to thoroughly examine our latest model.

175 CORPSES REMAIN IN THE WRECKED MINE

Rescue Work Is Being Badly Hampered by the Menace of Fire.

Dawson, N. M., October 25.—Menace of fire in mine No. 2, of the Stag Canon Fuel company, coal producing mine, caused officials tonight. Two fires today hampered the rescue work, but they finally were smothered. Smolders due to the explosion in which 262 men lost their lives are believed to exist in many of the chambers. These smolders, it is feard, will burn into flame as soon as enough oxygen has been forced into the workings to permit combustion.

Investigation has developed the opinion that two distinct explosions occurred Wednesday. From indications within the mine it appears that the major and first explosion centered in chamber 18 or 18. At that point the fall of rock and timbers was heaviest, and the bodies in those chambers were found to b the most mutilated.

In the chambers north of the high line and adjacent to the east facing, dead men were found, but their death, according to mine officials, was caused by suffocation. In chambers 21 and 22 the bodies were bruised slightly by the concussion of an explosion. It is here that the second and minor shock is believed to have occurred.

Rescuers have failed to penetrate chamber 19 east, the one in which it is expected many bodies will be found.

Twenty-seven bodies were brought to the surface today, bringing the total of recovered bodies to eighty-eight. One hundred and seventy-five bodies remain in the mine.

So many unidentified corpses have been brought to the surface that mine officials believe it possible that General Superintendent McDermott's body may have been among them.

MISS LEISHMAN BRIDE OF THE DUKE OF CROY

New York, October 25.—Miss Nancy Leishman, daughter of the former American ambassador to Germany, was married to the duke of Croy on Friday in the Catholic church at Geneva, Switzerland, according to The Times this morning, which says the fact became known here last night through friends of the family. Only a few intimate friends in New York, it is stated, were aware of the date of the ceremony, which had been publicly announced for Tuesday, October 28.

The change had been made, it was said, on account of the German emperor's opposition to the marriage, and had been arranged during the last few weeks of Mr. Leishman's stay at the embassy in Berlin, but had been kept quiet. It is stated that the Duke of Croy's relatives also were opposed to his match with a woman not of aristocratic birth.

To Make Itself Center of Garden Spot Of South, City of LaGrange Lays Plans

Panama Highway Association Will Be Formed at Meeting to Be Held on November 6.

LaGrange, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—The biggest undertaking for the development of sections of the territory of Georgia and Alabama, will be launched at a banquet to be held in the Elm Room hotel Thursday night November 6, at which time one hundred of the most prominent business men within a radius of fifty or sixty miles of LaGrange, in Georgia and Alabama, will gather to organize what is known as the Panama Highway Development association.

For the past six months Secretary Clarke, in consultation with the officials of the LaGrange Chamber of Commerce, has been working out plans for the perfection of an organization intended to unify on a common ground, the people of the territory within a radius of sixty miles of LaGrange. Within this territory, which lies partly in Alabama and partly in Georgia, are some of the finest bermal towns in the south—little cities in aggressive communities, developing conditions that is a territory the most fertile and the most healthful to be found anywhere in the south.

The people in the territory are the purest blooded Anglo-Saxon, and are some of the highest type business men and farmers to be found anywhere in the south.

The territory to be advertised and developed lies midway between New York city and Florida and will be the main highway of travel, from the east to the southern states, and right through the center of the territory.

Already Wealthy.

Vastly in contrast to most territories taken over for systematic development, this territory has commenced with a wealth already located within its borders. Lagrange is one of the wealthiest towns in the south for its size, and though it is not generally known, some of the other towns according to size are entitled to the same distinction.

The blaze of industrial progress and prosperity which has burned brightly in LaGrange for the past eighteen months, has been gradually spreading in the factors that lie within the territory which embraces a circle one hundred miles in diameter with LaGrange as the center.

Two Governors to Be Present.

At the banquet to be held on the 6th of November, amongst the invited guests who will be present will be the governor of Alabama, the governor of Georgia, the governor of the Georgia State Chamber of Commerce, and the industrial agents of all railroads entering the territory. Also there will be present the secretary of agriculture of both Alabama and Georgia, as the invited guests of the occasion.

The banquet is being given jointly by the board of directors of the LaGrange Chamber of Commerce and the executive committee of the Troup County Fair association, in compliment to the movement. Similar banquets will be held during the next six weeks in other towns of the territory, which will in all probability eclipse in splendor and size the one held in LaGrange.

In discussing the matter, W. S. Dale, president of the board of directors of the Troup County Fair association, said:

"We had not planned to launch the matter before December, but friends in whom we have absolute confidence in Atlanta and other towns of the state, who have not studied the possibilities of the territory within a radius of the circle, embraced by the map published in connection with this story, can have no idea of the absolutely wonderful opportunity which is presented to every town and hamlet within the circle through a concert of action on the part of all interested.

"Within six months' time we expect to have this territory a blaze of progress and activity. There are some who seem to fear that LaGrange may not keep pace with the other towns in the territory, when the movement is under full headway, but my faith in LaGrange is such that I believe fully that the town and people will be certainly keep pace with the development of the other towns.

The Garden Spot of South.

E. B. Clark, chairman of the board of directors of the LaGrange Chamber of Commerce, is one of the heartiest indorsers of the movement. In discussing the matter, he said:

"The development work is to be divided into sections, and naturally I am most interested in the development of the territory interest of the section. The red clay lands, both hillside and bottom, that are found within the radius of this territory have possibilities of agriculture unequaled in the south. The territory just around LaGrange is by the means the garden of the territory at the extreme border. Within the radius of the circle we intend to have the finest and most modern farming in the south."

Dr. Hamilton Holmes, of the Public Hotty committee of the chamber of commerce, in discussing the matter, said:

"The main thing this territory needs is to let the world know what we have and there will be a scramble to get within the borders of the circle. We intend to have a campaign of publicity that will be unlimited in the movement propose that as soon as the organization is perfected a prize be offered for the best name for the territory. When it is made public I will tell the world about it, where it is located, and what the territory has to offer."

ATLANTA'S HOPES HIGH FOR GOOD ROADS MEET

Atlanta's chances for getting the 1914 convention of the American Roads congress, which has just adjourned its annual convention in Detroit, are substantially increased by the visit of Charles P. Light, assistant to the president of that organization, who is in Atlanta and on Saturday made a tour of inspection of the hotels and the automobile space of Atlanta and of the roads of Fulton county.

Mr. Light was highly pleased with Atlanta as a convention city. He said to a Constitution reporter on Saturday:

"While I cannot say as to whether or not Atlanta will get the convention, inasmuch as it is to be settled by a committee other than myself, I can say that there is not a single requirement of the roads congress that Atlanta does not supply. Her railroad facilities are all that could be desired. Her hotel accommodations are entirely ample and satisfactory. Her space for exhibits at the auditorium armory is unsurpassed and there will also be room in the building for the congress meetings. This is an important feature since it is next to impossible to get exhibits to send their exhibits to a building apart from where the congress is meeting. I think that Atlanta's claims for the convention are good."

Through an agreement with the mayor the Atlanta Convention bureau, which is trying to bring the roads congress to Atlanta, will be allowed to close Pryor street during the five days of the congress by building a temporary roof over the street at the auditorium for the purpose of sheltering the heavy road building machinery.

With the use of this additional space Atlanta can offer the roads congress 52,000 square feet of space for exhibiting purposes, exclusive of the hall which will be used for the deliberations of the convention. This is more than 10,000 square feet in excess of the space available at Detroit.

Mr. Light predicted a gathering of between 5,000 and 10,000 people in Atlanta on every day of the five days of the convention. He said that there will be not less than 2,000 delegates from Canada alone.

Mr. Light was greatly pleased with the condition of Fulton county's roads and highly praised the convict system of working the roads used by Georgia. He is former state road commissioner of West Virginia, and stated that within a few months, as soon as the West Virginia legislature, that state will be following Georgia's lead in using the convicts for the construction and upkeep of the public roads.

"Hubby" Gets the Breakfast.

(From Answers, London.)

It was Saturday morning and Mr. Newlywed, as a tribute to his new-found state of life, had risen early and prepared breakfast for wife and preparing breakfast.

Then, having given him full and explicit instructions, she sent her lord and master to perform he self-appointed task.

Mr. Newlywed entered the kitchen with a smile of confidence and there found the breakfast, but also a saucepan covered with a knife severed the shell of an egg which had been carefully placed in it. Newlywed paused, and—

"My dear John," she gasped, "what have you done to those eggs?"

"Done to them, of course!" retorted John somewhat nettled.

"Yes, but for how long?"

"My dear girl, I carried out your instructions to the letter."

"Nonsense! The eggs are as hard as bricks!"

Well, I only boiled them for twelve minutes."

"Twelve minutes!" exclaimed Mrs. Newlywed. "But I told you distinctly three minutes was long enough for an egg."

"I'm quite aware of that," retorted her husband, proudly. "Accordingly I allowed exactly twelve minutes for four eggs."

There Must Be Something in It

(From the Chicago Record-Herald.)

"Do you believe there is really any such thing as love at first sight?"

"Certainly. If there was no such thing how many of the married men whom you know would ever have been able to enchant their wives?"

Hotel Winecoff Will Open Doors on Tuesday Evening

With a splendid dinner, which is being prepared by a group of chefs and stewards imported from New Orleans, New York city and other "good food" centers, the Winecoff, the latest addition to Atlanta's magnificent ring of hotels, will open its doors to the public Tuesday night at 8 o'clock.

Great preparations are being made by the management for the opening night, which will it is said, make hotel history for Atlanta. Special decorations have been arranged for the occasion, and will transform the beautiful lobby, mezzanine floor and cafe into a veritable fairyland. Frank Harrell, the lessee and manager of the hotel, has secured the services of the well-known Love's orchestra, the strains of which are now busily engaged in working up a suitable musical program in honor of the opening.

Many Features Presented.

To enumerate the many modern features of the hotel's equipment would necessitate the use of an unlimited amount of space, but the following list of the things which should give one an idea of the splendid facilities which will, without doubt, make the Hotel Winecoff a leading place in the hotel directory of the southland and of the entire country.

The hotel, outside of the lobby, mezzanine floor cafe, grill room and other modern features, consists of 200 bedrooms, every one of which is an outside room, with from three to five windows each.

A pleasing color scheme is carried throughout the hotel, one floor being finished in blue, the next in yellow, and the next in green; switching back in this manner from floor to floor, the entire fifteen stories of the building.

The hotel has been furnished throughout in solid mahogany and every piece of furniture in the building, but with "Dutch" lighting fixtures, and the whole effect carries out the idea of the typical "Dutch" inn of floor to floor.

There are many other attractive features connected with the hotel, and it is safe to state that under the efficient management of Frank Harrell the Hotel Winecoff, with its many luxurious adjuncts and splendid sanitary equipment facilities, is destined to give Atlanta the final touch which will make the city the mecca for conventions and hotel city of the south.

Bath in Every Room.

Every room of the house is equipped with an individual bath, the appointments of which are of the very latest pattern.

The carpets of the rooms are of one solid color, to harmonize with the various color schemes carried out, and are of a deep, rich simplicity. They give an added handsome touch to the rooms and make absolutely noiseless any moving about on the part of guests.

There is a full-length mirror in each room and the transoms over the doors have been so constructed that they can be raised or lowered at will without the usual stretching of the arms in reaching up to the operating bar.

The lights of the hotel are probably the leading feature from a standpoint of luxury and comfort. Each and every light in the entire building, with the exception of those placed before the shaving mirrors in the bathroom tables, is protected by a colored globe hanging from the ceiling and the soft effects produced by this method add untold charm to the beautiful surroundings of the rooms.

The mezzanine floor of the hotel has been furnished with imported handmade rattan chairs, settees and tea tables, the first of the kind ever brought to Atlanta. In securing these articles it was necessary to delay the order with an importing firm six months in advance.

Only Accommodates Sixty-five.

The cafe, the most beautiful apartment of the hotel, is on the mezzanine. Although, with a seating capacity limited to 65 persons, the cafe is to be fully appointed and equipped, not only in the south and west, but in the entire world. Finished in medium light oak colors, with hand-painted decorations on the walls and ceiling, with handsome mahogany tables, chairs of the same finish and with leather trimmings, and with the added touch of the finest of linens, silver and large genuine cut glass chandeliers in rooms and booths through which is hung that it cannot be put into words.

The mezzanine floor, besides the grill room, is furnished in Circassian walnut, with "Dutch" lighting fixtures, and the whole effect carries out the same idea of the typical "Dutch" inn of floor to floor and stage.

There are many other attractive features connected with the hotel, and it is safe to state that under the efficient management of Frank Harrell the Hotel Winecoff, with its many luxurious adjuncts and splendid sanitary equipment facilities, is destined to give Atlanta the final touch which will make the city the mecca for conventions and hotel city of the south.

SNATCH THIEF FOILED BY PLUCK OF WOMAN

Attacked on Washington Street Mrs. S. Iscoff Fights to Save Her Purse.

While her young daughter stood helplessly by screaming for help, Mrs. S. Iscoff, of 55 Clark street, fought a desperate battle with a vicious negro who attempted to snatch a purse from her while she and her daughter were walking down Washington street near the intersection of Rawson. Saturday night about 8:30 o'clock.

According to the story told the police by Mrs. Iscoff, she and Miss Iscoff were walking slowly when the negro stepped from behind a tree and grasping the leather thong attached to her purse, and tugged in an effort to loosen her hold, at the same time catching her by the arm with his other hand. Mrs. Iscoff states that although badly frightened, she was determined that the negro should not accomplish his purpose, and she succeeded in holding to her handbag until passers-by attracted by her daughter's screams, rushed to her assistance. Seeing that he would be surrounded and captured, the negro fled down Rawson street, making good his escape.

From the description given of the man, he is said to be identified as he is the "pal" of Bean Dent, the desperate young purse-snatcher and bandit, wanted here for a series of crimes, that was captured in Spartanburg, S. C., Thursday, and is being held for the Atlanta authorities. Detective John Black left Friday night for Spartanburg to bring Dent to Atlanta. Upon arriving there he will be required to give an account of his actions and those of his pal, Kinney, in order to establish the identity of the negro who attempted robbery on Mrs. Iscoff Saturday night.

CHARLES A. SNIDER,
Engineer, of Columbus, Ga., who claims to be originator of the plans for the construction of the Panama canal, has received a check for $1,000 from him by the government without compensation and without any credit.

Grim Reaper's Best Ally.

(Journal American Medical Association.)

Dr. Jacques Bertillon, formerly chief of the Paris department of statistics, has published a study of mortality in the different vocations, dividing them into five groups, according to their particular causes of death. Employment exposing the workman to (1) alcohol, (2) lead poisoning, (3) dust, (4) confined positions, and (5) irregularity are subdivided into a hundred distinct trades. The principal causes of mortality prove to be tuberculosis, those of the lung, heart, liver and nervous system, diseases of old age, and accidents.

Most healthful are those vocations that permit movement; those restricting freedom of movement, but exercised on in the open air, are harmful. Trades exposing to lead poisoning also are subdivided into a hundred distinct groups. The principal causes of mortality prove to be alcohol and to lead poisoning are the most dangerous.

Mortality is lowest among railway employees, sailors, soldiers, priests, attorneys and clergymen. It is nearly as low among physicians, pharmacists, architects, artists, navy officers and telegraph employees, commercial travelers, jewelers, policemen, booksellers, hardware men, watchmakers, bankers, tanners, miners, road laborers and servants.

Mortality is higher than the general average among public officers, office clerks, street railway employees, shoe workers, sellers of fish and poultry, hawkers, dealers in merchandise, bakers, millers, butchers, carriers, rope makers, basket makers, carters, roustabouts and sailors.

Mortality is highest among day laborers, firemen, the department of charities, tradespeople, coachmen, grooms, footboys, [illegible] waiters, cooks, gardeners, blacksmiths, tillers, glassmakers, stonecutters, stokers, engineers, barbers and musicians.

Suicide is exceptional among all vocations, but is rare among clergymen, monks, nuns, sailors, soldiers, photographic employees, shipbuilders, lawyers, employees in commerce, booksellers. It is quite rare among cooks, musicians, farmers, woodsmen, boatmen, fishermen and road laborers.

Suicide is most commonly often among grocers, coopers, boxers, blacksmiths, glassmakers, tanners, tobacconists, notaries and lawyers' clerks, butchers, bakers, sailors and gamekeepers.

Suicide is frequent among brewers, tillers, dealers in notions, cutlers, hatters, tinners, bookbinders, upholsterers, jewelers, domestics, dairymen, sellers of fish and poultry, hawkers, commercial travelers, attorneys, physicians and chemists.

All these vocations show a frequency of suicide above the average, but the highest suicide rate is found among those who keep the servants of retail storekeepers, chimney sweeps, hatters, fruiterers and musicians.

When Poets Disagree.

(From The New York Post.)

Tennyson has been severely criticised by his fellow writers. Bulwer-Lytton killed three birds with one stone when he spoke of Tennyson's

"The sapless medley of purblexed conceits.
Out-babbling Wordsworth and outdroning Keats."

George Meredith said of the "Holy Grail" that "the lines are satin lengths, the figures are fine, but the whole is a mere satin measure—its masonry. The man has got hold of the master's tools and has begun to wing jewelry. The 'Idylls of the King' are 'Lydia of lines' for the delight of ladies."

Then, Tennyson once said of Meredith that reading him was like wading through sand in the desert, which called Matthew Arnold a dandy lailah." George Moore says of Meredith that "in his prose he is sometimes lucid but crankjaw sentences, empty and meaningless, are frequent, and he has not a particularly happy bit of style in itself."

Swinburne, the classic, says of Wallace said, "The style is so abominable I could not get on with it." And of Hallam Tennyson History, Carlyle remarked, "Ha! The poor miserable skeleton of a book."

Sensible Idea.

(From The Pittsburg Post.)

"Why do you insist on a long engagement?"

"Well, to tell you the truth," answered the young man, "I don't like to get married until I get rid of the installments on the engagement ring."

Atlanta Invites Motor World To Biggest Automobile Show Ever Held in the Southland

Atlanta is inviting the motor world to the biggest auto show ever held in the south.

Automobiles and equipment—all 1914 models—to be exhibited under the auspices of the Atlanta Automobile and accessory association, at the auditorium, November 8 to 11, will represent more than $1,000,000.

Every available 15,000 square feet of space has been taken up by the representatives of practically every automobile manufactured in America. The models will be those which will be shipped from the factories to fill the demands of motorists next year.

In anticipation of entertaining the largest crowd that has ever traveled from all parts of the United States to attend an automobile show, the show committee, of which A. N. Reed is chairman, has engaged John Philip Sousa and his world famous band to give daily concerts every day during the week of the show.

Exhibit of New Models.

But the feature which will attract to the United States, John Perry Nevin's show has not been able to compete with Atlanta in this respect, and for that reason alone, Atlanta's show has received the finest of exhibits from all parts of the world. Last year scores of foreign manufacturers were brought to this city. They came to see just how far advanced were the new models. As result of the show Atlanta has been advertised to the world as a great automobile center.

"This show has been a great boost for Atlanta," Chairman Reed said Saturday. "The Atlanta merchants and boosters should do all they can to aid the Atlanta Auto and Accessory association to make these shows great industrial and commercial events."

Chairman Reed stated Saturday that C. P. Stearns company, one of the largest manufacturers in the United States, had wired for 500 feet of show space, and that the Indian Motorcycle company will utilize 200 feet of space.

Will Take All Space.

The space demand is increasing every day, according to Chairman Reed, and the indications are that every available inch will be taken up when the doors of the motorist will be the showing of the 1914 models. Every one of Atlanta's auto show has been favored by being able to show the new models many months in advance of any other city are thrown open to the public on the morning of November 11.

President George Hanson, of the A. A. A., who is one of the biggest boosters of the Atlanta show, and who has been at the helm for several years, has been informed that a number of touring parties are coming to Atlanta from points throughout the south. A number of dealers in New Orleans are planning a tour. Joseph Schwartz, one of the leading dealers in the Crescent city, has wired that he is trying to arrange a tour to Birmingham to send a tourist party of about 500 to the show. Willie West, chairman of the show committee last year, says that he has been informed that a number of dealers in Atlanta to attend the show this year than ever before.

"I have been asked to supply real estate to a number of out-of-town dealers in Atlanta to attend the show this year than ever before.

"I have been asked to supply real estate to a number of out-of-town dealers in Atlanta to attend the show this year than ever before.

In addition to the new models in pleasure cars, the display of motor trucks, limousines and trucks, delivery cars will be shown the very last word in auto equipment.

First Atlanta Airship.

The first airship ever built in Atlanta is to be shown. It was built by H. Thaden, an old German, past 76, who worked for six or seven years on it in a barn in rear of his home, out Alaby street.

The airship is of peculiar model, different from anything ever operated. It has a system of propelling all the way down both sides of the car, and aluminum planes above. It is shaped like the side and shape of a street car, and is thirty feet long. It will be required to lift it.

The ship has never made a flight, but a test made with a small motor made it lift itself off the ground. Mr. Thaden believes it to be perfectly practical.

He has hidden it jealously from curious visitors for years and will exhibit it for the first time at the show. Chairman Reed, of the show committee, has been in charge of the secret, and Thaden will explain its operation.

Said Dice Were Crooked, And Then Loser Stabbed Negro, Who Was Winner

In an argument, said to have arisen over the outcome of the dice game, Turner, a negro, stabbed and killed Will Weans, another negro, at the corner of Elliott and Mangum streets early Saturday night. Weans died almost instantly.

According to the police, witnesses of the murder stated that the attack was made without preliminary trouble of any kind. It is said that Turner drew all the money in a "crap" game several blacks ago, in which Turner lost a large sum. Turner charged Weans with using crooked dice, upon which the latter's denial, is said to have drawn a long knife and stabbed Weans to the heart. Although a diligent search was instigated by the police department, up to an early hour this morning Turner was still at large.

I., October 25.—Fifteen persons were injured, one woman seriously, when the Gilt Edge express, from New York for Boston, over the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, went off the track on a curve a mile and a half east of Westerly tonight. Bishop Perry, of Rhode Island diocese, returning from the Episcopal church convention in New York to Providence, helped take care of the injured.

A City Line for Minneapolis.

The city of Minneapolis, Minn., has decided to build a municipal street railway of short length to its filtration plant in order to haul building supplies for the construction of new improvements at the plant, supplies for road construction and other equipment and to carry passengers. The road will cost about $16,000. Power for operation of the line will be furnished by the Twin City Rapid Transit company.

HATTERAS IS SWEPT BY ELECTRIC STORM

Norfolk, Va., October 25.—The most severe electrical storm ever recorded on the Hatteras coast prevailed there for two hours, beginning at last midnight. William Styron, a surfman, while patrolling the beach, was struck by lightning and instantly killed. The bolt struck Styron in the head and left a burn at his heels where it passed to the body to pieces. The body was subsequently found and was today prepared for burial.

From the Hatteras life saving station today it was learned that in all the history of man at that point two severe storms such as ever thunder and lightning as prevailed between midnight and 2 o'clock today. The storm between midnight and 9 o'clock today has been the heaviest ever recorded there and a half inches of rain—a literal cloudburst.

But for the sparsely settled country, much havoc and loss of human life would have resulted from the storm. The lightning struck in many places. Trees were torn to pieces and the sand in places torn up.

The storm was felt at points along the entire North Carolina coast. Heavy rains for twenty-four hours have been given out by parts of eastern North Carolina, with washouts reported in many sections. In the past twenty-four hours has brought a total precipitation at Wilmington, N. C., of 3.50 inches, another heavy month of October. Lumberton, Nags Head, Roanoke, Washington, Elizabeth City and other points throughout eastern North Carolina report heavy rain.

A WOMAN, also signing herself "Inquirer," advertised a Morris chair for sale. The boy was on hand early and got all the mail addressed to "Inquirer," the duplicate addresses having slipped in during a rush of business. The first letter the boy received recited the willingness of the writer to investigate the merits of one Morris chair.

"I don't want to sell any chair," exclaimed the lad. "I want a job."

This matter was adjusted, but you see how easily mistakes might occur.

Mrs. C. M. Frederick at the wheel of her new car. This is among the very first cars of the new 1914 models to arrive in Atlanta.

News Wise and Otherwise Of Boys Who Put 'Em Over

M. A. Pollock, until recently advertising manager of the Taylor Investment company, at Hoschester, N. Y., has been made assistant advertising manager of the Locomobile Company of America. Mr. Pollock will take his new position October 1.

The demand for headlights on the front mud guards is growing daily. Not only does this position give increased efficiency, but drivers who use another recently left the city in the Ohio company's sales rooms on Peachtree street. The little car is attracting a great deal of attention on the "Row."

Mr. Minor, of the Atlanta Auto sales company, which distributes the Henderson in the south, says business for 1914 is booming, several orders for new Hendersons having been received in the past few days.

New shipments of new 1914 K-R-I-T cars are expected within the next few weeks. Mr. Love says the new car is going to create a sensation in the south, where he and Mr. Smith, formerly with the Studebaker corporation, will have charge of its distribution.

C. S. DuPuy, manager of the Standard Auto company, distributors for the Paige-Detroit in Georgia and North and South Carolina, reports big sales for the popular car. He also announces the first arrival of the new 1914 "25," which has caused so much talk in this country.

A new Cadillac limousine, the first of the 1914 models to arrive in Atlanta, is attracting a great deal of attention at the company's sales rooms on Peachtree street. The car is typically a Cadillac products, all the newest refinements, the little brica-a-brac, etc. necessary to please the owner on a winter day's drive, are found in this newest 1914 closed auto vehicle.

R. N. Reed, of the Reed Oil company, is certainly busy with the big auto show. He is urging everybody to get busy for the big event, which will be held early next month.

OBVIATE RADIATOR DIFFICULTIES WITH ALCOHOL AND WATER

"The advent of November means the beginning of radiator difficulties," says George W. Hanson, of the Oakland Motor Sales company, "unless the motorist has already prepared for the chills of the late fall weather.

"The only really effective method of safeguarding the motor is by the use of some liquid or solution with a lower freezing point than water. At the first glance this would appear to be an easy matter, but there are many things to be taken into consideration.

"The majority of the non-freezing liquids react chemically with metals and if harmless solutions are used, loss of water through evaporation raises the density of the solution above the point of precipitation, thereby clogging the radiator air cells.

"The most reliable solution is alcohol and water, as alcohol does not act upon the metals of the radiator nor upon rubber.

"A 25 per cent solution of alcohol will not freeze at zero Fahrenheit. Thirty per cent should be used for negative 5 degrees, 35 per cent for negative 15 degrees and 40 per cent for negative 25 degrees. Forty-one per cent solution gets this cold in Georgia, so the first solution is all that is necessary.

"There is one objection to alcohol, and that is that it evaporates very readily. There are two methods of overcoming this fault. One is by the addition of glycerine, a solution of 12 per cent alcohol and 15 per cent glycerine will stand a temperature of negative 10 degrees Fahrenheit. The only function of the glycerine is to prevent the evaporation of the alcohol.

"The second method is to cover the overflow outlet with a safety valve. A piece of rubber tubing drawn over the pipe and tied at the free end acts admirably, as too great pressure will blow the tube off instead of damaging the cooling system by excess pressure.

"Grain alcohol is better than wood alcohol for even wood alcohol has a corrosive effect on copper and brass, as it forms formic acid in the presence of super-heated air.

"Another good mixture is a saturated solution of calcium chloride—eight pounds of the crystals to one gallon of water. This should be used diluted one-half with the addition of a cupful of milk of lime (calcium carbonate), as this neutralizes the acidity of the calcium chloride solution. Salt solutions may also be used, but great care should be exercised to keep these latter solutions at the proper density.

"It should be remembered that about half the normal radiation area is sufficient at freezing temperatura."

Queer World-Items.

Mohammed never shaved and his beard was considered sacred. His namesake, the emperor of Constantinople, is described as having had "Mussulchites like cords over his cheeks and every hair of his beard was as thread of gold." It was he who in reply to a question as to his plans for the campaign said: "If a hair of my beard knew them I should pluck it out." Great was the scandal when one of his successors, Selim the Grim, took to shaving, but he got off my beard in order that my color may have nothing to lend me by he replied. Selim's viziers knew better than to bandy jokes with him.

Campbell & Loetzner, 1113 Dime Bank building, are not to be included with the cycle car makers, as the two are working upon is a small automobile.

The Princess Cyclecar company has removed its offices and work rooms from 1211 Dime Bank building to 720 Woodward avenue.

ON THE SPOT

By Fred Spencer.

Fred J. Wagner, Jr., son of Fred J. Wagner, the official starter of automobile contests, has joined the sales forces of the Ford Motor company and is connected with the New York branch house.

A. R. Welch, of Pontiac, has brought forward a signalling device so radical that it has startled the automobile makers. This is a combination of the fan and the horn, two leaves of the fan being hollow and the operation of the signal being from a hollow drum with holes in it which is in the center of the fan. It is reported that Mr. Welch has already been offered $10,000 for the manufacturing rights with stock in the company.

The largest deal in motor trucks concluded in Detroit was closed Wednesday by the Universal Motor Truck company through H. E. Winter, sales manager, with Joseph D. Wilkinson, of the Smyrthfield Export company, of Philadelphia. The deal involves a contract for 250 trucks of the one and one-half worm drive model, and Mr. Wilkinson will take with him on a trip around the world, covering two years, a sample truck. He will visit every city of the world outside the United States and Canada, and on his journey will make one trip from Singapore to Upper Lampur through the rubber district by road.

It is understood by friends of W. S. Pettitt, advertising manager of the Studebaker corporation for the past several years, that Mr. Pettitt has resigned his position and that he is about to announce his connection with another Detroit automobile manufacturing company.

L. C. Axton, of Los Angeles, while in Detroit, closed with the Paige-Detroit Co. for fifty cars for southern California. The factory which this company has recently entered on Mount Elliott street has been very busy of late and twenty-five cars, the first lot to go out, are nearing completion.

The four large factory buildings and office building of the R-C-H corporation are being carefully looked over by a number of companies desiring plants. The sale of the factories is scheduled for November 11 and it is reported that a dual force company has been organized in the interest of this possible. The buildings will be offered collectively and separately, according to Mr. Gray, of the Security Trust company.

Edward A. Nelson, former consulting engineer of the Hupp Motor Car company; C. H. Brennan, former purchasing agent, and John Peterson, also a Hupp employee, are at present occupying the office building of the Grabowsky factory and will later occupy a portion of the factory in the manufacture of a small enclosed car with 116-inch wheel base, and low enough so that no steps are necessary to enter, the floor being on a level with the curb. The car has many and distinct and interesting features, will be electrically lighted and started and will sell at about $1,100. It is reported.

W. Lininger, former purchasing agent of the Keeton Motor company, has taken charge of the sales for the company in Michigan, and has the management also of the branch salesroom of the company in Detroit. Mr. Lininger will have other territory closed in his charge. During the last week he booked several orders for the 1914 model of the Keeton.

K. L. Hermann, engineer of the American Cyclecar company, will remain in Detroit and conduct his engineering business as in former days, the Cyclecar company having removed to Bridgeport.

W. E. Engler, former chief engineer of the General Motor Truck company, is designing a cyclecar to work on the lines of the famous Medalia, of Europe, which is used as a model by so many designers and makers in America.

The Fegton Cyclecar company, of Fenton, Mich., state that the cycle car to be constructed by the company will be made in the Fenton and not the Signed, as had been reported, and that the car will be of the roadster type, seating two people side by side. The motor will be two-cylinder, four-cycle air-cooled and the transmission will be planetary drive. Inch and one-eighth rubber belts will be used for the drive. The wheel base will be 84 inches, tread 56 inches, wheels of wire and suspension springs.

E. L. Vail, who for many years was associated with Charle F. Soldiford, and of recent years has been sales manager of the Hoffecker Speedometer company, has become a member of the staff of the Waltham Watch company, having charge of the newly established automobile timepiece department of the company.

There has been incorporated in Detroit the Standard Fender company with $250,000 capital, to manufacture automobile fenders and other metal articles.

The new Ford plant at Denver opened Wednesday, October 15, and cars will be assembled there for Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico, Utah, Montana and portions of Nebraska and Texas. The factory has been erected at a cost of $500,000 and will employ 100 men.

Two Cadillac cars have been entered for the Los Angeles-Phoenix race, to be run in November, and the dealers of Los Angeles have already raised $6,000 of the expected $10,000 purse for the contest. William Soules, who went over the course in a Cadillac, will drive one of the entries.

Ernie Moross, who is engineering a benefit race meet for the widow and children of Henry Endicott, who was killed at Jackson, will receive no support from the Hoosier Motor club, of Indianapolis, which states that it does not care to establish such a precedent, believing that in future it would be called upon for other benefits for drivers injured in races at the speedway.

C. H. Dunlap, export manager of the Hupp Motor Car company, left Detroit Tuesday, October 14, and will sail from New York Wednesday for France and England. Mr. Dunlap will attend the Paris and London automobile shows while abroad.

Claude M. Logan has been made eastern manager of the sales department of the Lozier Motor company, with headquarters in Cleveland.

A representative of the National Shipping company, of New York, who came to Detroit to place an order with deposits for 5,000 cycle cars for shipment to Europe, did not succeed in placing his order with any of the Detroit companies, as none were ready to undertake any such deliveries for 1914.

Cadillac Motor Car company, according to Cleveland advices, will expend several hundred thousands of dollars in an assembly plant in that city, and the Ford Motor company has announced a $100,000 plant and is temporarily using the former factory of the Royal Tourist Motor Car company.

Imports of motor cars in Australia show that England imports one-third of the total and America one-quarter, the total business of England amounting to $1,712,782, according to reports. America's business coming to slightly over $1,000,000 and all other countries $1,428,826.

C. T. Meyers, who was with the General Motors company at the New York branch, and with the Rapid Motor Vehicle company, at Pontiac, previous to going east, will open Detroit offices and act as adviser of prospective purchasers of motor trucks.

S. M. Udale, former research engineer of the Studebaker corporation, is now connected with Joseph Tracy, consulting engineer of New York, and has taken charge of the Tracy laboratory and motor-testing plant at Rutherford, New Jersey.

American manufacturers exported 2,004 automobiles in August of value of $1,983,749, and of the number 68 were commercial cars. In the same month last year 1,264 pleasure cars and 27 commercial cars were exported and the value was $1,248,354. Only 31 cars were imported into this country in August and 68 in the same month last year. In the eight months, including August, 18,464 cars were exported of a value of $18,464,396, and of the number 730 were pleasure cars. In the first eight months of 1912, the number of cars exported was 16,516 cars, valued at $16,-813,771.

Southern California automobile dealers allow no new car to enter the field for very long without securing the sale of it, as more lines of cars are entered in the southern California city than any other city in the country. The S. & M. Motor Car company, which started only recently, has closed with L. C. Axton, of Los Angeles, who ordered 50 cars.

Prompt Deliveries Stamp Your Business As Progressive.

Grocers and Merchants selling direct to householders will appreciate the significance of the following incident:

An Atlanta grocer's advertisement in The Constitution contained the line—"Deliveries Prompt." Several new customers said that statement brought them to the store and one householder wrote to the grocer advising him to display more prominently the fact of prompt deliveries.

In retail deliveries a Van Winkle Truck, properly routed and operated, will do more work in less time than three men with three wagons.

Seven-Passenger

$1575

No Other "Six" in the World Near this Price

The new Studebaker "SIX" stands absolutely alone and apart in the entire field of six-cylinder cars.

At its price $1575—less by hundreds than the price of any other "SIX"—it brings you vastly more than the operative advantages of "SIX."

It brings you these advantages, emphasized and enhanced because this "SIX" is not only a manufactured "SIX," but a Studebaker-manufactured "SIX."

Carries Seven in Comfort

It brings you passenger capacity for seven.

It brings you the manifest advantages of electric lighting and starting through a two-unit system that has proved itself on thousands of Studebaker cars.

You have never before been able to buy such a car at $1575.

Today you cannot find such another car, at this price, in the entire world.

Six Thousand Manufacturing Operations

How completely the Studebaker "SIX" is the product of the great Studebaker plants you will realize when you know that its construction involves more than 6,000 manufacturing operations.

We build its motor, from the raw iron and steel, through the numerous processes of casting, machining, grinding and assembling to the finished product.

We build its full-floating rear axle; stamp the light front axle; drop forge the housing from the sheet steel; we forge, cut and machine the axle and transmission gears.

Throughout the rear axle and transmission, and in the front wheels we use 13 Timken roller bearings for quiet, easy running.

Economical of Fuel and Tires

In fuel consumption we believe the "SIX" will match, if not surpass, the economy of any car of equal horsepower. Its motor size is 3½x5 inches.

It is economical because, in spite of its 121-inch wheelbase it is light, and easy on its 34x4-inch tires; yet it is wonderfully strong.

It is generously roomy and richly upholstered, and carries its seven passengers in utmost comfort.

Separate Electrical Units

The starting and lighting system is the Wagner two-unit, starting motor and generator separate.

In short, the "SIX" lacks nothing in style, beauty or comfort.

$1050

This "FOUR" the Final Word Among Four-Cylinder Cars

This Studebaker "FOUR" has been developed from our experience in building 110,000 "FOURS."

Its price, $1050, represents the outside limit you should pay for a "FOUR," because no "Four" can give you more, in actual value or performance, than this one does.

So its price is right. Its capacity is right. Its power is right. It is the right type—the last word among four-cylinder cars.

A Powerful Long-Stroke Motor

Nothing that we can say here will give you an adequate idea of the power possibilities of this car—or of the things of which it is actually capable.

The motor presents the latest approved engineering practice—cylinders cast en bloc, valves enclosed, exhaust and intake manifolds integral.

The intake is very short and direct, placing the carburetor in a most advantageous position.

In fuel, both oil and gasoline, it will give long mileage.

A Car Pleasing to the Eye

Running boards are clean and free, with foot plates of aluminum.

The gasoline supply is under the cowl, giving a short, direct gravity feed to the carburetor.

Its rear axle is of the full-floating type, and completely accessible.

The rear springs are full-elliptic, very long and easy, and with the lower member suspended beneath the axle.

Electric Lighting and Starting

It has left-hand steering and center control.

The electrical starting and lighting equipment is the Wagner two-unit system—two units for greater efficiency and greater dependability.

The windshield is of new design, ventilating, clear vision and rain vision.

Most Modern and Complete Equipment

Electric horn, robe rail, tools and tool box are also furnished with the four.

The car can now be seen at the Studebaker store, and a demonstration arranged.

"Buy it Because it's a Studebaker"

Not because of the price mark; but because of the trade mark.

Not because of the good looks; but because of the good name.

Not because of the outside, but because of the inside.

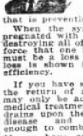
Men Who Lack Ambition Energy



are common. We meet them every day. And the men who are naturally full of pep, get-up-and-get, clever men, heavily handicapped who could "do things" if it were not for this insidious disease that is preventing them.

When the system becomes impregnated with what is commonly called destroying all of the nerve and vital force that one is capable of, there must be a loss somewhere and the loss is shown in the reduction of efficiency.

If you have some special disease the return of ability and activity may only be accomplished through medical treatment that will stop the drains upon the system, check the disease and make you strong enough to combat it successfully.

If you have some special disease that you cannot get cured, you can profit by a prompt visit.

R. B. Johnston Returns to Head Advertising Firm

R. B. JOHNSTON.

J. C. MCMICHAEL.

A large number of Atlantans will be glad to learn of the return to this city of R. B. Johnston, a former Atlanta newspaper man, who has been in the advertising business in Chicago, connected with the Sunday magazine of one of the largest newspapers in that city.

Mr. Johnston has purchased stock in the advertising agency of J. C. McMichael, Inc., and will become president of the company. He will make Atlanta his headquarters and will travel over the entire territory covered by this agency, which is from Virginia to Texas.

Mr. Johnston began as an office boy on The Constitution and advanced himself to a responsible position with this paper. He later went to Chicago for the Sunday magazine published here, and of Atlanta. While in Chicago he formed the connection with Mr. McMichael.

Mr. McMichael is secretary and treasurer of the agency. He organized the agency with W. M. Armistead in 1906 and subsequently bought out Mr. Armistead's share of the business. Since that time he has been the sole proprietor until he sold an interest to Mr. Johnston.

Mr. McMichael is a man of unusual business ability and is recognized as one of the very best advertising men in the southern states.

Georgia Baptist Orphans' Home Needs Funds for Maintenance

By R. D. Hawkins.

How much have you thought about it?

How often have you spoken about it?

What are you going to do about it?

Remember, that it is only the earnings of one day that we are asking for. Isn't that a very reasonable request, a very small matter for you?

But. O how much it means for us! Just do a little thinking and figuring with me. How many in your household? One, two or more? What would be fair wages for each one? Even down to baby, who could interest some one and secure a penny or nickel for an orphan. You and yours would be none the poorer for having given the whole day's work to the needy, but, according to our Heavenly Father's arithmetic, you would be the richer, as you would have laid up treasures in heaven that faileth not.

Money Easily Raised.

Now, what is the amount for your household? Write down, please. Now, how many Baptist families in your community? And others that would gladly do your share in a pool work? What is the aggregate amount for these? Add it to yours. See how little is the amount, and yet how easily it was done.

Now, remember, the number of Baptists in Georgia, 280,000, each, would be $280,000; 50 cents each would be $140,000; 25 cents each would be $70,000. Can we do it? Yes!

Would anybody be hurt? No!

Ought we do it? Yes!

Why? Because if we don't, somebody will be hurt.

Who? Your Baptist Orphans' home. The great machine, Georgia Baptists, ought to arise at once and relieve this institution of its embarrassment.

Will you not do it at once?

Work Day When You Please.

Have your work day when you please. Some have done so already, and are sending in the money, for which we are grateful.

Let December 14 be the final day for sending in all contributions. It will not hurt to send it earlier. It will but be well later. Let everybody get busy and forward their offerings. Send to Rev. Dudley M. Ramsaur, 1009 Candler building, Atlanta, Ga., who has agreed to designate it "work-day" offerings.

SPEER GETTING BETTER, ASSERT HIS DOCTORS

"Every Reason to Feel Encouraged," Says Statement Issued From Jurist's Bedside.

Mount Airy, Ga., October 25.—(Special.)—Encouraging reports were issued tonight from the bedside of Judge Emory Speer of the United States court, for the southern district of Georgia, who has been critically ill at his summer home here for several days.

The following statement was given out by Dr. Eugene Parris, an attending physician:

"Judge Speer has been delirious for the past few days, having had a sinking spell Thursday afternoon at which time his condition was most critical. He was unconscious until Friday afternoon. However, he took a turn for the better, which accounts for delirium and the condition continuously improving. Tonight there is every reason to feel encouraged."

That Judge Speer is a very sick man, was the announcement made tonight by Cecil Morgan, his brother-in-law.

"Thursday and Friday Judge Speer was very ill," said Mr. Morgan, "but he began to improve Friday evening and took some nourishment and spent a comfortable night. Saturday morning he suffered a delirious spell, but rest though he is still in bed and a very sick man."

Diagnosis Changed.

The attending physicians have changed their diagnosis of the case. They declare at first that it was paralysis of the throat, but have now decided that Judge Speer's trouble is a much more serious phase.

Judge Speer suffered an attack of gastritis several weeks ago, which prostrated him, and his condition has become complicated by reason of gall stones. An operation had been planned as soon as he gained sufficient strength to bear the shock.

Only last Sunday Judge Speer declared that he would attend the investigation of his judicial conduct by a house committee in Macon next month, even if he had to go there on a cot.

Illness Traced to Probe.

The illness of Judge Speer can be traced, at least indirectly, to the attack made on his administration of his office as judge of the United States court for the southern district of Georgia, resulting in a congressional investigation being ordered by the house. The investigating committee, consisting of Congressmen Webb, Floyd and Whitaker, has been called to convene in Washington on next Saturday, November 1, to begin its inquiry, and will immediately take up hearings in Georgia at Macon, Savannah and Augusta, and also in other cities where the court sits.

Twenty counts are contained in the charges against Judge Speer, filed with the house by Congressman Clayton, chairman of the house judiciary committee. He is accused of appointing his son-in-law, J. Hoyt Ward, to lucrative court assignments, thereby favoring him; awarding fees, mishandling of properties in bankruptcy, giving contracts for private service, abuse of authority of his office, violation of the civil laws and other unlawful and improper acts.

Hoff Case Figures.

The charges against Judge Speer are largely the result of the attack made on him by Colonel William H. Hoff, whose estate has been in the receivership court and under the jurisdiction for more than a decade. Colonel Hoff, in his complaints to the members of congress and the department of justice, charged that the receivership fees were shamefully padded and the estate, which was worth $1,000,000 in 1909 Candler building, Atlanta, Ga., was allowed to designate it "work-day" offerings.

SHE WOULD NOT MARRY PROVERBIAL ARCHANGEL

Lady Dorothy Walpole Announces That She's Resolved to Be An Old Maid.

London, October 25.—Lady Dorothy Walpole really means it when she says she wants to be an old maid. "I am in love with my writing and I want to give up my life to it," she said recently, "I would not marry the proverbial archangel. If I were to marry I should have to devote myself to a man and my heart would be all the time in my books."

She is Lord Orford's only comfort since the death of her mother two was, of course, the daughter of D. C. Sin, of New York, and who, it will be remembered, died in 1909 suddenly—ness as she was starting for a drive.

Of late Lady Dorothy has grown to herself look years and years older than she is by putting on some clothes and adopting an elderly manner. As a matter of fact, she is in her early twenties. Her object in doing this, she says, is to keep the gypsies off. They pursued her and do still, but now that they know she is not a marrying girl she lives in hope that they will eventually leave her alone. Her father is fiercely wrapped up in her and he may often be seen on the Pantile Walk going over some clerical reading the proofs of one of her stories with infinite zest. He gives the impression of being proudor of the fact that his daughter is a writer than he is a relative of the great Walpole and of Lady Dorothy Neville.

Why Peach Trees Are Short Lived.

(From The Electric Railway Journal.)

Many wonder why the peach trees are not longer lived than is often the case in the orchard, and yet those most observing have not recently learned the reason. Few farmers, however, are ignorant of the cause why they may die young. One of the most common and destructive insect enemies is the peach tree borer, the life history of which may be readily detected, if we but know what to look for.

Gum may exude from the bark of the tree because of injury and ask for any bruises upon the trunk or the branches. This is the nature of the tree to supply this gum around any scar. But if there is a trace of something like sawdust in this gum you may be fairly certain that the borer is at work. The eggs are laid on the bark of the tree near the ground, and the larvae bore down in the bark just below the surface. Their burrows are soon filled with a gummy secretion from the tree and thus the presence of the pest is readily detected. The borer remains in full grown larvae come to the surface and make a cocoon of borings fastened together with silk. The perfect insect may appear any time from May to October, but the greatest numbers appear in June and early July.

But not all of the borers are confined to the roots. Examine the trunk and branches. If there is fresh gum and sawdust, dig in with a knife and the chances are that you will not go far into the cavity without unearthing a white larva nearly an inch long, if it is full grown. There is rarely more than one in a place, though there may be numerous burrows on the same branch.

One preventive is to make a mound a foot high around the roots of the tree in early summer and remove it in September. This exposes the tender larvae to the weather and they are killed. Some paint around the tree with a paint containing paris green. But the safest way is to watch for the toll-tale gum, and having found the nest, dig it out.

... COUNTERFEITS ...

By Elsie Endicott.

Gracie Hollands was 22 years old. Miss Gracie was stenographer and typist for the firm of K. & K., and by no means a bad one, either, for she earned $14 per week.

She was receiving $10 when it was discovered that she was systematically carrying goods out of the store. The detectives from headquarters spent a week and did not get a clue.

"Then I'll have to get a raise to $12," said Miss Gracie to herself, and she shoved back from her machine and wandered about for half an hour, then said to K. & K.:

"Your assistant bookkeeper has just gone out to lunch."

"He goes every day at this hour," was the calm reply.

"And the missing goods go with him."

"What! You can't mean it!"

"Come with me. I know where he feeds at this hour."

She led K. & K. to a quick-lunch room three miles away, and they walked in upon the assistant just as he had ordered a meal of fried spring chicken.

"Has the firm failed?" he asked as he looked from one to the other.

"No, but you have passed the smart girl with a little giggle of triumph. "Hand over quietly and you may not get over 25 years in the jug."

The young man, who was the sole support of a widowed mother and six fatherless sisters, and who fondly believed that the moving picture shows were filling the bills to overflowing, smiled a gladsome smile and began to count out bills of big yards and dozens of real pearl buttons until he had deposited enough on the table to fill a decent stock of goods in a Bronx.

"Gracie, what tempted you?" asked the senior member of K. & K.

"Hand over the stuff and buy Bibles for the heathen."

When the thief had been tucked away in a nice little cell in prison Miss Gracie was told by K. & K.:

"For your smartness you now get $12 per week."

"Thanks."

The next day Gracie brought the porter, the janitor and two elevator men to justice. They were in a conspiracy to rob the store of 20 shirtwaists per week. Gracie's salary was raised then to $18 per week, and the senior partner said to her:

"Such smartness I never saw before, and K. & K. are sure proud of you." Gracie was told to put her head on your brain, but you might crack the shell. Use your brain first, or vice versa."

Then Gracie Hollands stuck to her real duties, but she imbibed the idea that all men were in a conspiracy, and began to look at all men and women as suspicious characters. Even when a young man tried to flirt with her in the street she decisive instinct was so strong that she almost laid a hand on his shoulder as she hissed at him:

"You are a safe blower and I know it, and you make your hike or I'll call a cop."

He was a minister's son and a salesman in a large jewelry house, and had just graduated from the divinity college his "hike" was just the same.

When Miss Gracie left the professional career she went to board with Mamma Jones. It was a small house and a starvation table, but as the salary was small and Gracie detective

Women Assembling Winter Wardrobes Will Be Charmed With This Glorious Showing of New Mid-Season Styles in Suits, Dresses, Furs, Blouses and Coats

A merchant may have more than a thousand suits, many of them alike. A suit specialist will have half that many suits with scarcely any two alike. We are suit specialists. Not quantity, but style-variety is our ideal. We don't buy a thousand suits at a time; we do buy scores of fresh new suits every week. It is nothing to have a stock of a thousand suits. It IS ACHIEVEMENT to have a stock that a woman looks over and exclaims, "Ah, that is the very suit I want." Within the past ten days we have received upward of three hundred new suits, among which is the very suit you want. Though the assertion is broad and sweeping, it is based upon your knowledge of present styles and desire for the beautiful. Among the most popular suits are those at $25 —a fashionable boucle cutaway with broad belt to emphasize the Russian tendency. Black velvet cuffs and collar and velvet button trimmings. Lined with high-grade all silk-satin.

$29.50 —a satin finished broadcloth developed in a dressy 10-button cutaway. Velvet cuffs and collar; button epaulettes on shoulder. Artistically draped skirt, button trimmed.

$35 —a plum-colored rattine in the newest short cutaway finished with black silk girdle and sash. Iridescent buttons; gold brocade collar. Silk lined in lighter shade of plum.

$39.50 —a fashionable wool corudroy in the new blue. Just two big buttons of the short cutaway coat; one button at collar, the other at the broad belt. Black, plush collar. A simple suit, but very striking.

$45 —a "composee" suit with black broaded plush frocktail coat and broadcloth skirt, with wide hem of plush to match coat. Coat is lined with white brocaded silk. A copy of a Parisian model.

$50 —a wistaria satin finished broadcloth, has fancy cutaway coat with broad belt and collar and cuffs of skunk fur. A new three-tier skirt completes this stunning costume.

The Lovely New Waists include every style that Fashion has stamped with her approval. Copies of fashionable lace and net blouses from Paris; crepe de chines in plain and fancy styles; chiffons and messalines and nets in colors; tub silks for tailored skirts; crinkled cotton crepes in a score of styles; madras and soisettes; linens and linenes; we can't imagine any kind of waist need that can't be met here at the price you had expected to pay. $1 to $25.

If Milady Wishes a Fashionable Silk Petticoat, She Can

Messalines, $2.98 to $4.95.
Jersey tops, $4.95 to $6.50.
Crepe de chines, $6.50 to $10.

A new idea is a messaline petticoat with a plaid inserted in the accordion pleated flounce, $4.95. The "Klosfit" silk petticoats that you see advertised in the carts are here in wonderful variety.

FURS AND FINERY IN EVENING GOWNS.

THE gown on the seated figure is of delicate blue chiffon, edged with silver fox fur and is worn over charmeuse. Velvet in brilliant red trims the bodice and forms the girdle which is finished with a long end, to which is fastened a tassel.

The middle gown is of white silk crepe, bordered in shades of blue. The dainty frills are of the finest tulle, and the wide Japanese sash is of blue crepe. A twist of the blue trims the sleeves.

Of pale yellow charmeuse with drapery of self-tone chiffon is the gown on the right. The lower half of the bodice and the belt are of pearl-beaded embroidery. A sash of marine blue chiffon is slipped through the pearl clasp in front, passing beneath the embroidered belt and bursting forth in a huge loop bow in the back. The over-skirt of chiffon is caught up in the pannier effect by a soft fold of chiffon.

TIME TURNS BACKWARD FOR HALF A CENTURY WHEN TABLET TO A. H. STEPHENS IS UNVEILED

SCENES AT CRAWFORDVILLE LAST SUNDAY AT UNVEILING OF TABLET TO ALEXANDER H. STEPHENS.

At the top, left, General A. J. West and J. R. Smith being served coffee by Miss Thelma Thompson at the luncheon tendered the Old Guard; right, a group of the Gate City Guard, the active Old Guard, with two of the young ladies who went as guests, Misses Bessie Brady and Penelope Clarke; at the bottom, monument to Alexander H. Stephens, at Crawfordville; next, Frank Meador, Jr., Marist college boy, who went as guest of the Gate City Guard, and who blew taps, after the unveiling of the stone tablet; at the right, the Old Guard unveiling the tablet, the center of the photo showing Colonel J. F. Burke bending over to lift the veil.

By Ned McIntosh.

Time turned backwards for half a century last Sunday in the minds of many of the older citizens of the state when the Old Guard of the Gate City Guards of Atlanta went by special train to the picturesque town of Crawfordville and unveiled a stone tablet to the memory of Alexander Hamilton Stephens, where he sleeps beneath the greenward of his old home, "Liberty Hall."

There were a number of men who were the personal and intimate friends of the statesman and patriot during his lifetime in the company of the Old Guard, who formally unveiled the tablet. There were others there who knew him, but did not belong to the Old Guard, and there were hundreds of others over the state who knew of this event and could not help but picture in their minds the days of Alexander Stephens in Georgia.

But it was not the great deeds that will be engraven in the halls of fame that the friends of Alexander Stephens fondled in their memories last Sunday. When one really cherishes a memory it is not the high sounding things that the world thinks matter that really count, somehow. Those are things from which one instinctively stands at a respectful distance and gazes upon with awe and admiration. But those are not the things which really touch the heart strings, and those are not the things that the friends of Alexander Stephens remembered so tenderly last Sunday.

Little Things Interested.

These achievements, to be sure, were noised from the platform and applauded from the audience, but were not that of which this former boon companion and old cronie talked heart to heart.

The things that they remembered and held dear were the little things that Alexander Stephens did, and forgot the moment after—the tramp he had helped, a negro he had been kind to, an encouraging word spoken and forgotten. These were his deeds that keep his memory green.

Old Aunt Liza Stephens, "Marse Aleck's" negro mammy, who nursed him and cared for him like a child through the latter years of his life, was the recipient of attentions that would have flattered President Wilson. Aunt Liza is "gwine onter 90 year ol' now and she can't git about like she useter—gits tired and breftess 'fo' she's done walk' nowhars hardly.' But the kindly spirit of her old master still rests in her smiling old black face. No man or woman was at "Liberty hall" Sunday who knew or admired Alexander Stephens but was her "chile." Leading men of the state considered it an honor to shake her withered old hand, and beautiful women kissed her with tears in their eyes.

Dressed in a blue calico frock that stands primly forth from her figure in quaint contrast to the tight-fitting garments of today, folding her hands over an immaculately white apron, a black shawl thrown about her shoulders, she is one of the few surviving genuine types of the old-time negro mammy of the old south.

Aunt Liza bustles about "Liberty Hall" just as she used to when "Marse Aleck" was there, straightening here a picture which has not been out of plumb in twenty-five years, flicking away an imaginary speck of dust from a chair or table that has not known dust in a decade, and steps back to view her accomplishment with all the pride that she would have if she knew that "Marse Aleck" would come walking in the next moment. Again one finds her wandering down the long walk in front of the big white house to the lonesome little grave down in the front yard, where she stops and gazes, and sadly shakes her head.

She "lows she ain't gwine to be here much longer, but she sho' 'specks ter see 'Marse Aleck' when she goes!"

Tell of Stephens' Hospitality.

Many tales were told of how when the big dinner bell was rung on the front porch in the old days tramps and hungry vagabonds, who knew of Mr. Stephens' hospitality, would be lined up for a seat at his table. It was an unbroken tradition of "Liberty Hall" that no man ever came there hungry or without shelter and did not get help. Any man, no matter how humble, was welcome to sit at the table of Alexander Stephens if he happened to be within sound of the dinner bell.

One story was told of a tramp who asked Mr. Stephens to help him to get to his relatives in Atlanta. It happened that on the next day Mr. Stephens was to be escorted to Atlanta in a special car by a committee of the state's most prominent citizens to accept the governor's chair, and the tramp went along as his special guest!

While these little human traits of Alexander Stephens were the things that endeared him more than anything else in the hearts of his fellowmen, his great genius and his monumental accomplishments cannot be overlooked.

There never lived, perhaps, a man who asked so little from a commonwealth and gave so much, who attained success against such great odds or whose principal activities were in a period where enemies were more easily made and who died with more friends and kindlier memories than Alexander H. Stephens.

Since his death in 1883 his friends have in many ways shown in what great esteem they held him. The old home place was bought and preserved as a memorial, and his body was removed to a resting place there. The Daughters of the Confederacy have erected a splendid marble shaft at his grave. His name has been emblazoned in innumerable histories. But no tribute was ever more sincere or more beautiful in its simplicity than the unveiling of this plain stone tablet over his grave last Sunday by the Old Guard.

Volley Fired Over Grave.

A few of his friends and admirers told what manner of man he was and of the place of distinction he holds. A squad of young militiamen fired a volley over his grave. A slip of a lad, hardly in his 'teens, blew "taps" upon his bugle. And the ceremony was over.

Could a man whose life was simplicity itself ask for a more fitting tribute?

The genius and character of Alexander Hamilton Stephens was strikingly portrayed in the address of Lucien Knight, compiler of the colonial records of Georgia, at the unveiling of the tablet. In this speech, Mr. Knight emphasized the quiet, almost fatally sure methods of Stephens with the spectacular career of his distinguished compatriot, Robert Toombs. Mr. Knight's address was, in part, as follows:

"The illustrious Georgian who sleeps beneath this splendid stone was the incarnate miracle of his times. In the frailest tabernacle of flesh he housed the keenest intellect which the public life of America has known. For nearly half a century, this fragile invalid, racked with pain and tortured by disease, was the most dramatic figure in the nation's political arena. From his roller chair in congress he spoke with an eloquence which charmed the ears of a continent, while the voice of Webster was still thundering in the senate; yet such was the pallor which suffused his face and such the picture of suffering which his emaciated form presented when he spoke that, to the imagination of his startled hearers, he suggested the deathbed scene of the Earl of Chatham in the house of peers.

"Strange- than anything in fiction was the power of mind condensed in this odd and curious compound of matter. Rivaled only by his gift of speech was his prescient knowledge of things to come. He read the future like an open book. When the steam locomotive was still an untried factor in the world's commerce, he saw a trail of smoke moving slowly and grandly westward and a band of steel girding two oceans together. It was no Trojan horse which he discovered in this iron monster, but a welcome boon of the gods to men, a new Messiah of industrial progress come to proclaim the dawn of a new era. With the vision of an ancient seer, he caught the pathetic picture of a house divided and foretold the tragic consequences of disunion. There was not a detail of the picture which he failed to grasp; and, in the light of subsequent events, his great speech before the legislature in 1860 was a marvel of predictive wisdom. Though opposed to secession as a remedy for constitutional aggressions, his conservative statesmanship gave him the second highest office in the Confederate government. On the issues of reconstruction his power to forecast events was again confirmed; and, taking a broad survey of his life from the promontory of this tranquil hour, he was one of the major prophets of his generation and one of the sovereign thinkers of his day.

Stephens Stranger To Sense of Fear.

"Often in men of frail strength we find an attribute of character which we commonly associate with rugged molds, but which we sometimes fail to find in giants. To the sense of fear Mr. Stephens was an utter stranger. Witness a scene in 1844 on the steps of the old Atlanta hotel. Above him is an outstretched knife, from which drips the warm blood. Already it has twice penetrated his bosom, but the keen blade is about to descend again. Over him bends a gigantic figure, and he hears a powerful voice demand, "Retract!" Weak from exhaustion, the prostrate man can barely lift his arm; but, with a look of defiance in his eye, he answers with a gasp, "Never!" Did he lack moral courage? Read the inscription lettered upon yonder monument: 'I am afraid of nothing on earth, or above the earth, or under the earth, except to do wrong. The path of duty I shall ever endeavor to travel, fearing no evil and dreading no consequences.'

"It is a law of physics that opposites attract. Who of us today can think of Mr. Stephens without recalling the leonine figure of a kindly Georgian, to whom he stood in polar contrast, but for whom he entertained a lifelong friendship—Robert Toombs. With apparently little in common between them, these men were bound together by hoops of steel. Damon was not more truly bound to Pythias, nor was David more closely knit to Jonathan. In the mythology of Georgia politics, they may not inaptly be called our Castor and Pollux; and my contribution to this hour's program is a contrast between these two marvelously endowed but wholly different personalities.

"The most observable difference between the two men lay in the outward contrasts of physical attributes. Toombs was muscular, full-statured, deep-chested and imperious. He was a tower of strength. His veins were swiftly pulsed by vigorous and warm blood of the richest quality of red. His sinews were wrought of steel. His muscles were spun of oak. His head was leonine. His dark brow, over which clustering waves of hair fell with cloud-like effects, seemed to be the abode of lightning and the home of thunder. Stephens was fragile, sickly, wan and emaciated. He wore the typical look of an invalid. His eyes were bright, but they beamed like lanterns in the windows of the charnel house. His cheeks were sunken. His features, contracted by suffering, were overlaid with a deep enamel of sepulchral whiteness. He seemed to be hovering upon the borders of another world and to be taking his last view of earth. Nevertheless, his voice possessed a melodious ring and a most wonderful power of penetration; but whereshouts in his slender body the force lay hidden which expelled these musical harmonies is one of the inscrutable mysteries of finite existence.

"Both men in the early glows of political campaigning in Georgia labored under peculiar difficulties begotten of physical handicaps. The difficulty with Toombs was in lifting his hearers to the highwater levels of enthusiasm, which his picturesque personality inspired. The difficulty with Stephens was in overcoming the depreciated estimate of his powers created by his slight figure. It was the boast of Mr. Toombs that he did not taste the wares of the apothecary's shop until he was 24 years of age. It was the misfortune of Mr. Stephens to be literally dieted on drugs. Mr. Toombs gathered the commonwealth with bated breath about his sick bedside only once. But Mr. Stephens was at least three times the center of such melancholy scenes. Thrice the newspapers of the state were striped with black columns. Thrice the flag above the capitol drooped and sighed at half-mast.

Toombs Often Represented Stephens.

"Frequently when Mr. Stephens was ill, it was Mr. Toombs who represented him in court. But the last tribute which the kingly Georgian ever paid his cherished friend was when he bent like the shade of an old forest giant over the mortal ashes of the great commoner. The trembling figure of the old man, as he sobbed his simple eulogy in the plaintive accents of the dying swan, was one never to be forgotten. It was the last appearance in public of the veteran Mirabeau. Two lonesome years followed, and then two glorious Georgians were again united. Mr. Stephens felt for Mr. Toombs the same rapt and tender admiration which Mr. Toombs felt for him, and his eloquent estimate of the great Touchstone's genius has long been famous. Said he of Toombs: 'His was the greatest mind I ever came in contact with; and its operations, even in its errors, reminded me of some mighty waste of waters.'

"Both died in the faith of an 'undiscovered country from whose bourn no traveler returns.' There let us think of them today, with the dews of the morning-time upon them. Under the boughs of these overhanging oaks of 'Liberty Hall' they often held sweet converse in the old days; and now 'Life's fitful fever o'er,' may they not have met again in a green country, where boundless horizons stretch before them in an infinite expanse of beauty, and where, no longer fettered by the limitations of time and flesh, these master minds can commune in an unbroken fellowship at the eternal Fount of Truth."
