CLAIMS HE FLED TO PROTECT WIFE FROM BETRAYER

By Amazing Tale of Flight From Wife's Childhood Seducer, J. W. Lindsey Secures Freedom in Athens.

HAD BEEN EXTRADITED FROM ALBERTA, CANADA

Mrs. Lindsey Feared Power a Wronged Her When a Girl. Declares Husband in Address to Jury.

Athens, Ga., October 26.—(Special.)—Claiming that his wife, ruined while a mere child by her brother-in-law, still feared the power of her alleged seducer, and that he, as her husband, had more than once been forced to give up a good position and flee upon receiving news that her Nemesis was again on her trail, J. W. Lindsey, alias J. C. Moore, arrested in Canada and brought back here under requisition on a charge of larceny after trust, convinced a jury of his innocence and was declared not guilty shortly after midnight this morning.

The trial just completed, involving international questions or law, prosecuted by one of the largest life insurance companies in the world and featured by the defendant's amazing tale of mystery and persecution, makes one of the most remarkable chapters in the court annals of Clarke county.

As the verdict was given there was a murmur of approval, and spectators and jurors grasped Lindsey's hand and assured him of their high esteem.

Suddenly Left Athens.

In explanation of why he had suddenly deserted from Athens with his wife last April, giving up a very profitable insurance position here and leaving behind various business obligations, furniture and a new automobile, Lindsay depended on his bare statement.

He said that when in Denver more than two years ago he met the young woman, who, after a brief courtship, became his wife. He said that after a happy life of some months his wife, anxious without apparent cause and distraught over some hidden matter, confessed to him that when she was 12 years old, living with a married sister, the sister's husband, a man named Beasley, had wronged her; that he had had her under his control through fear for several years, and that repeatedly he had forced her to submit to him; that she finally, to escape him, ran away and became a nurse, employed by a doctor in Denver, but in his employ she was treated shamefully by her employer, being once chloroformed, that she could not keep the haunting secret longer.

Moore, or Linsey, as he was then known, declared that the shock dazed and numbed him, and he at first decided to leave the wife who had confessed to him the horrible secret life of terror she had led. He first demanded to meet the two men face to face and have her charge them with the wrongs. He called Beasley, he declares, to his office, and when Beasley rather boldly admitted her statement, Moore threw a pistol in his face and was about to execute the fierce threat to take his life in vengeance, when the second thought came of the inutility, the trial, the trouble—and he determined upon another course. He called the doctor and faced him with the charge—and then declined for the same reason to end the physician's life. It was said that the two men gave him $1,000 with which to build a house for his wife on a tract of land she owned near Denver. He built the house, he claims, and had secured furniture for it—purposing to provide for the wife and leave her.

But his love and her patent sincerity, fidelity and absolutely irreproachable conduct turned at him—and he decided to flee with her to a new section of the country, and there to change his name and here and outgrow the past. He went to Gulfport, Miss., according to his statement, and organized a coffee importing company, which in a short time prospered phenomenally. Letters the past week from his associate in that enterprise testify to the place he won in the confidence of the people there.

He Leaves Gulfport.

Suddenly he left Gulfport—leaving a few debts unpaid, and providing for their payment with more than ample amounts in available shape. He says that a letter from Beasley, who had after months' search located him even under the new name of J. C. Moore, caused his flight. Efforts to trace the letter are not made public, but there was enough to drive him from a good business and away from that state.

He came to Athens and went to work as special agent for the life company which he had represented in Denver as Lindsey. He wrote business, the total premiums of which are variously estimated from $40,000 to $70,000. One day he received another letter from Beasley—a letter, he declares, which threatened all ill; a letter accusing Moore of grievous wrong to Beasley—Mrs. Beasley, it was said, having left her husband after the Denver affair. All that the second letter contained will never be known. But Moore immediately began to make preparations for flight. He left notes and property to cover whatever might come up; wrote directions to his partner while on the way was; carried his wife and babe to her parents at Denver, and planned to return to Athens to wind up his business here personally. But, it is said, there she begged him to remain and he decided to begin all over again in Canada, where opportunities beckoned, and where retaking his old name his baby boy might grow up with the new country and never know of the restlessness which was the part of the parents for the first years of their union.

He went to Alberta, and near Calgary bought a 160-acre farm. Feeling that his partner in Georgia would arrange whatever settlements might be necessary—confident, as he said, that

WOODROW WILSON HERE 20 MINUTES ON WAY TO MOBILE

His Strict Observance of Sunday Prevents the President From Making Speeches in Georgia Cities.

WARM WELCOME GIVEN TO SECRETARY DANIELS

Big Party From Mobile Comes to Atlanta to Escort President to Alabama City for Commercial Congress.

All the intoxicating glory of the highest honor a nation can pay a man and all the responsibilities of deciding the most momentous problems of international relationships, have not caused President Woodrow Wilson to forget for one fleeting moment his old-fashioned southern "raisin'" and strict Presbyterian observance of the Sabbath day!

This trait of the schoolmaster-president was demonstrated in most impressive manner by the ordeal to which he was put on his Sunday trip through Georgia, en route to the Southern Commercial congress at Mobile, for it could hardly be called less than an ordeal.

With Mexican affairs involving the policy of the United States in the most critical condition since the beginning of his administration, and with the world clamoring at the door of his private car for some inkling of what course he will pursue, the president quietly declined to talk business.

Declines to Make Speech.

Passing for the first time since his election to the presidency through his native southland, where at every town and hamlet he was greeted by a sea of faces calling for ever so short a speech, the president on all occasions smilingly declined to talk.

At Charlotte, at Spartanburg and Atlanta always his one act was to raise a gently reproving hand to his friends and say:

"Any day but this I will speak to you!"

The president spent most of his day on the train in reading and resting, turning to Dr. Grayson, his private physician, occasionally to relate some incident of his stays in the south through which they were passing, or going to the rear platform of his car to shake hands with a few of the people who gathered to meet his train at towns along the way.

The president left Washington Saturday night, and Sunday morning woke up in Dixie. And he woke up with the thorough realization that he was in Dixie. It must have been at that moment that he was most sorely tempted to strain his conscience to just the tiniest point of breaking over, for he was awakened at Salisbury, N. C., at 8:30 o'clock, with a lusty "rebel yell" outside his window.

Greeted by Big Crowds.

At villages and hamlets, where the president's train ran slowly, at cities where stops were made to change engines, there were huge crowds, enthusiastic and happy at their first glimpse of Woodrow Wilson, the first native of the south elevated to the presidency since the civil war.

"We walked 15 miles to see you," said a group of tall North Carolinians, as the president appeared on the car platform at Charlotte. They told Mr. Wilson they were from Davidson college, where he had prepared for Princeton. The president greeted them warmly.

"It's like coming home again," he said, and hundreds of hands were stretched toward him amid cheers. Mr. Wilson shook hands with many, but refrained from making any speeches.

"Speech! speech!" cried the crowd at Spartanburg, S. C.

"It's Sunday," smiled the president.

Wanted Political Sermon.

"Well, we've just come from church," they insisted. "You could preach, you know."

"I can't preach," remarked the president modestly.

"A political sermon!" suggested a voice, and the president joined in the laugh that followed.

Big boxes of flowers were presented to the president over the rail of his observation car at many points en route. The biggest demonstrations occurred at Salisbury and Charlotte, N. C., Spartanburg and Greenville, S. C., and Gainesville and Atlanta, Ga.

The cities brought familiar memories to mind, as Mr. Wilson spent his early life in this region. He prac-

"COKE" DEN RAIDED AND ARRESTS MADE

Negro "Tiger Queen" Startles Police Station With Costly Diamond Rings and Big Roll of Money.

With drawn revolvers, City Detectives Webb, Harper and Bullard, working under Chief Newport Ashford, late last night, raided one of the most vicious blind tiger and cocaine dens in detective annals. More than $300 worth of cocaine and $100 worth of whisky were confiscated.

Six negroes and one negress, the latter being the proprietress, were captured. Emma Johnson, colored, 25 years old, who appeared in police court a number of times, and who has earned the sobriquet of "Darktown's Tiger Queen," was carried to police headquarters with the illicit goods in the patrol. The detectives then returned to the dive and recovered almost a truckload of whisky.

With large diamonds on her fingers, and both hands loaded with money, the negress stood before the station sergeant. She declared that she did not have to go to jail, and at once secured an attorney, Guy Lindsey, well-known police court lawyer, who happened to be at headquarters, represented her. Sergeant Holcombe fixed her bond at $500. This sum was promptly forthcoming as the "tiger queen" proceeded to peel the greenbacks from her roll.

The detectives, after the capture, declared last night that they had been watching the dope fiends' rendezvous at No. 10 Butler street for almost a year. Several times they had entered the place, but were baffled by finding it devoid of occupants.

Since Saturday night the detectives kept a close watch on the den. All night and day staggering forms passed in and out the threshhold. At 9 o'clock last night the detectives decided to rush the joint. The doors were burst in, and the detectives, revolvers in hand, covered their prey. The negress will be arraigned in police court before Recorder Broyles some time this week.

THAW IS DECLARED RESPONSIBLE FOR ACTS

Albany, N. Y., October 26.—Attorney General Carmody tonight issued a statement declaring that the outcome of the present proceedings to bring about the return of Harry K. Thaw to this state will demonstrate "whether the law will be vindicated or whether by the lavish and ingenious use of his great wealth Thaw can break down barriers of justice and defeat the law."

"It never was claimed that Thaw at all times is insane or that he was incapable of committing crime," the attorney general said, and added that "although under the law an insane man is not held responsible for his acts committed while insane, if a man is sufficiently lucid to successfully plan his escape from confinement, it is apparent that he knows what he is doing and is legally responsible for his acts."

JEKYL AND HYDE LIFE EXPOSED BY BULL PUP

William Bastain, Business Man by Day and Robber by Night, Victim of a Bulldog.

San Francisco, October 26.—For five years William Bastain has been accepted by local business men as a responsible citizen with a profitable wholesale jewelry business. His property investments have been numerous and large; thousands of dollars have been sent by him to support his mother in Germany, and his young sister has had the best educational and social advantages.

Today he lies in the prison a confessed robber with a record covering many years, captured by a pet bull pup who pinned him in a corner as he was through a backyard in the darkness.

"My work has been so easy it has been laughable," Bastain told the detectives when he finally broke down. "I have never been disturbed while at work. The people I did business with believed me to be absolutely what I represented myself. Jewelers bought my diamonds and the mint took my melted gold without question.

"I always have been a natural thief, and I have found it easy to steal things, but I am averse to killing or injuring. I never had been in a position where I had to shoot until Friday night. My reluctance to use my revolver caused my capture."

Bastain was making his way across the yard of the home of Ulrich Debrunner Friday night when Miss Jennie Debrunner's bull dog discovered him. The uproar brought the girl to the scene, and while the dog held the man she summoned the police.

Evidence to substantiate Bastain's alleged confession is said by the police to have been found in his handsomely fitted apartment, where he lived with his young sister. The girl was unaware of his source of revenue, he said, and the police are inclined to believe him.

SULZER IS LYING, ACCORDING TO RYAN

New York, October 26.—In a statement issued tonight Allan A. Ryan reaffirmed his testimony before the high court of impeachment at Albany concerning his contribution of $10,000 to the Sulzer campaign fund, which the deposed governor took exceptions last night in a speech in the sixth assembly district.

Regarding Sulzer's story of the telephone conversation preceding the contribution, Ryan declares that Sulzer "is not telling the truth." Ryan makes the same comment regarding Sulzer's denial of Ryan's testimony that the former governor asked him to intercede with Senator Root, William Barnes, Jr., and others in an effort to have the impeachment stopped.

The statement is a repetition of Ryan's testimony before the impeachment court, to which he adds much detail the witness was not permitted to give before the court.

$30,000 Fire at Chattanooga.

Chattanooga, Tenn., October 26.—Early today fire completely destroyed the home of Attorney Frank Spurlock, in Riverview, a fashionable suburb, entailing a loss of $30,000, with insurance of $14,000. Mrs. Spurlock suffered painful burns. An electric iron in a linen closet is supposed to have been the cause of the fire.

BITTER STRUGGLE COMES THIS WEEK ON MONEY REFORM

Issue Is Clearly Drawn Between Bill as Passed by the House and the Vanderlip Central Bank Plan.

VANDERLIP'S SCHEME ATTACKED BY GLASS

Chairman Glass Says Vanderlip Plan Is Proposed for the Sole Purpose of Defeating Currency Reform.

Washington, October 26.—Reconstruction of the administration currency bill begins tomorrow behind closed doors in the senate banking committee. The issue is clearly drawn between the bill as passed by the house and the central bank plan proposed by President Frank A. Vanderlip, of the National City bank, of New York.

Whether the administration bill, backed by President Wilson's expressed uncompromising opposition to the Vanderlip plan, and renewed support from administration supporters, will emerge triumphant from the senate committee or whether a middle ground will be found between the two measures is the next question in the situation. The senate committee begins work with a majority of its members admittedly favoring the Vanderlip idea.

Administration supporters, viewing that fact, declare that such a measure could not be passed in the house, and that the committee, therefore, must work with the administration bill as a basis, reserving its fundamentals, if currency legislation is not to be definitely delayed.

Glass Attacks Vanderlip Plan.

Chairman Glass, of the house committee, one of the framers of the administration bill, issued a statement tonight on the Vanderlip plan. It was practically as follows:

"I have somewhere read that in England—or maybe it was in Scotland—they used to have an annual fox hunt, at one stage of which, with Reynard hard pressed, a red herring was drawn across the trail to divert the pursuit and give the fox another chance. Of course, what is popularly styled the money power in this country is not foxy, nor would anybody dream of suspecting Mr. Vanderlip of being in the red herring business.

"Yet it happens to be a fact that the

Mexic Election a Farce; Not Enough Votes Cast To Choose a President

PUBLIC IS WARNED TO KEEP ON WATCH FOR CLEVER "DIPS"

Chief Lanford Is Confident That in Two Suspects He Has Men Who Were Busy at Football Game.

LOSSES ARE REPORTED BY FIVE NEW VICTIMS

J. W. Tucker, William Ruehle George Stewart, Julian Daniels and Thomas Hopkins Are Robbed.

Following the activities of pickpockets Saturday during the Georgia-Virginia football game, five more well-known citizens were victimized Sunday.

The victims are: J. W. Tucker, of 367 Whitehall street; Julian Daniels, of 58 King street; William Ruehle, of Peachtree inn; George E. Stewart, of Egan, Ga., and Thomas Hopkins, of 238 Washington street.

J. W. Tucker reported to the police that he had been robbed shortly after 5 o'clock last night at the corner of Bread and Marietta streets. He said that he had a wallet containing about $60 in a back pocket of his trousers. Just as he was boarding an English avenue car he felt a tug at his pocket.

He turned about to face a man of about 45 years of age, who wore a light suit and about 5 feet 10 inches tall. He was smooth shaven and wore glasses. The man pushed him and stepped aside. Two men then faced him, and he was unable to pursue the first.

Police Look for Trio.

Turner describes one of the pair to the police as being of small stature and apparently about thirty years of age. This man wore dark clothes and tan shoes. The other man Turner described as being about 40 years of age, smooth shaven and distinguished looking. This man, according to Turner, wore dark clothes, a derby hat and black patent leather shoes. The police are on the lookout for the trio.

Julian Daniels, of 58 King street, reported the loss of a gold watch and gold pendant fob. Daniels declared he did not know where he was when touched.

William Ruehle, a guest at the Peachtree inn, reported the loss of a gold, hunting case, Waltham watch, valued at $50, and heavy log watch chain. Ruehle was not sure whether the watch had been taken from his person, or from his room while asleep.

George E. Stewart, a well-known resident of Egan, Ga., reported that his pocket had been picked of a wallet containing $26 and a number of valuable papers. Stewart declared he was standing near the Elkin drug store, on Peachtree street, when he became cognizant of his loss.

Watched But Has No Clue.

Thomas Hopkins, of 238 Washington street, appeared at police headquarters last night bemoaning the loss of a pocketbook containing $9 and a number of valuable coins. Hopkins had not been on which the detectives could work. He declared that he first missed his purse when seated at supper.

Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford declared last night that he was confident that in the personages of Ray Baumberger and W. T. Farley, of 25 West Baker street, stenographers for the Fairbanks-Morse company, who were captured at Ponce de Leon park Saturday afternoon during the Georgia-Virginia football game, that he has two "dips." They were captured by the aid of ex-Councilman Dan Walraven, who charged them with robbing him, of $75 at Moreland avenue, of a gold watch and stickpin.

Wootten was closested with Chief Lanford at headquarters Sunday afternoon, and was shown the watch which was recovered by Detectives Vickery and Hamby from the person of Farley. Wootten positively identified the timepiece as his property, leaving no doubt in the minds of the chief that Baumberger originally dipped the watch and passed it to his pal, Farley, who made a getaway at the ball ground.

Both Farley and Baumberger strenuously deny their guilt. E. W. West, southern manager of the Fairbanks-Morse company, for whom both young men work, last night to a reporter for The Constitution vouched for the honesty of the detectives that Farley and Baumberger were pickpockets.

Public Is Warned.

As yet no clue has been secured to the dips who, Saturday afternoon, picked the pockets of Dr. William C. Warfen, of No. 370 West Peachtree street, who escaped in motor car.

Assistant Chief of Police E. L. Jett and Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford last night issued a warning to all citizens of Atlanta to beware of pickpockets today. It is declared that each train from the north brings men of this character into the city. A large number of pickpockets are reported to be following the circus, and Barnum & Bailey detectives join with Atlanta authorities in scanning the crowds.

U. S. SOLDIERS OWE MILLION FOR JEWELS

Washington, October 26.—Bills aggregating $1,000,000 for jewelry charged against enlisted men of the army have been forwarded to the war department by a large installment jewelry concern on the Pacific coast, with an appeal for Uncle Sam's aid in collecting the indebtedness. The department has declined to act as collector, and the creditors' only recourse is to proceed against the individual soldiers.

In Mexico City Not 10,000 of the 80,000 Eligible Voters Troubled Themselves to Go to the Polls.

DOUBLING OF THE ARMY IS DECREED BY HUERTA

Dictator Proposes to Increase Military Strength to 150,000 Men—Manuel Calero Says the Election Was Farcical.

Mexico City, October 26.—At the close of the elections today the indications were that not sufficient votes had been cast in Mexico to constitute a legal election for the presidency to succeed General Victoriano Huerta.

No official announcement was made tonight, but it was unofficially estimated, judging from the results in the capital, where it was expected the vote would be up to the average, that less than 10,000 of the 80,000 eligible voters in the federal district went to the polls. There are said to be more than 3,000,000 eligible voters in the republic.

It would be no surprise if congress, the members of which also were voted for today, declared the elections void when that body is organized and revises the returns.

The leaders of the Catholic party claimed a long lead, although they were unable to estimate the number of votes polled for their candidates, Frederico Gamboa and General Rasgon.

If this claim is correct, it is generally thought General Felix Diaz and Senor Requena ran second. The liberal candidates, Manuel Calero and Flores Magon, had not printed tickets at the polling places, their constituents being obliged to write their names on blank ballots.

President Huerta did not vote. He spent the day at his Poptla suburban home.

Huerta to Increase Army.

A decree will be issued by General Huerta tomorrow increasing the army from 85,000 men, its alleged present number, to 150,000. General Huerta proposed such an increase some time ago, but the congress, which he dissolved, limited him to 80,000.

Since the deputies and senators are not subject to the election provisions governing the presidential elections, it is said tonight that the choice for congress is assured. It is assumed, on the showing so far as known, that the Catholic party will have a majority in both chamber and senate.

There was no semblance of disorder in any quarter of the city. A few patrols were sent out, otherwise the regular police nor troops had any but their usual duties to perform.

The polling places opened at 9 o'clock in the morning and remained open until noon, when the attendants closed the booths until 3 o'clock in the afternoon, for the midday meal. They were reopened at 2 and closed again at 6 o'clock.

From 2 to 5 o'clock, officials, one of whom was designated as "president," were in attendance at each polling place. These officials represented the various parties and assisted in the preparation of the ballot when necessary, but offered no coercion or suggestion as to how the applicant should vote.

The Election Officials.

The election officials appeared to be a representative body of citizens—clerks, small business men, railroad employees and shopkeepers of average intelligence. So far as could be ascertained no government employees served in this capacity.

The polling places, of which there were said to be 562, averaging one to a city block, were located in the entrances of buildings generally, but in some instances were set up on the sidewalks or the corners of public squares. Each had a table on which were spread tickets of the various candidates. From these the voter made his selection, sealed, folded and delivered it to the president, who deposited in the presence of the voter in the ballot box.

Ballot boxes consisted of all sorts of receptacles from a pine box to a plush-covered jewel casket, or a glass jar borrowed from a neighboring drug store. There was no secrecy about the voting. All the world could look on and observe which ticket was selected.

As the vote was deposited the name was checked on the registration list, previously prepared from personal visits of a designated official to the house in his jurisdiction. It was not left to the voter to see slightest urgen to register his name on the list if his were entitled by residence, age and other requirements to cast a vote.

Election a Farce, Says Calero.

Manuel Calero, liberal candidate, who was once ambassador at Washington, did not vote. Instead, he took his family early in the day into the country. After he returned tonight he said: "I understand the voting was exceedingly dull. Nobody appears to believe in the seriousness of the election. On account of the political conditions many refused to vote. I myself did not. Had we had indirect balloting I would have done so, but since it was otherwise, I did not care to cast a vote either for myself or any other candidate.

Frederico Gamboa, candidate of the Catholic party, on the other hand, cast a ballot for Senor Calero. Neither of these candidates cared to express an opinion as to whether a sufficient number of ballots had been deposited to make the election effective.

Few of those who went to the polls took the trouble to vote for either senators or deputies.

Hardly Anybody Voted.

Examples of lack of activity in voting made at random after the closing of the polls at three places in thickly populated districts are:

Eleven votes cast out of an eligible 89; 13 cast out of an eligible 75, and 27 cast out of an eligible 360. One suburban polling place reported 21 voters out of 80 eligible exercising the franchise. Those figures are regarded as fairly representative of the voting in the capital.

The scarcity approach of any district in bringing out its full voting strength occurred in one block where fourteen men were eligible. Thirteen of these men cast their ballots. The fourteenth man was in jail.

GEN. HUERTA THE CHOICE OF THE MEXICAN TROOPS

Eagle Pass, Texas, October 26.—Victoriano Huerta was the overwhelming choice for president of Mexico as expressed in the votes cast in today's election at Piedras Negras.

Felix Diaz was the only rival of the provisional president and he received less than 100 votes. Of 2,500 votes cast, General Huerta is known, in unofficial figures, to have received more than 99 per cent, or approximately 2,200.

The day passed without material disorder. There were two rows between soldiers, who formed the hub of yesterday's, but these were quickly quelled, and the participants arrested.

No public notice that the election would be held was given in Piedras Negras, and many citizens were not aware that the polls had been opened. Early this morning it was announced that an election would be illegal as the country is not in a state of peace. Orders from Mexico City, it is said, caused the federal authorities to change their view and hurried preparations were made to comply with the election proclamation.

No ballots had been received and each voter was required to give his name and choice to a teller. This fact caused protest from constitutionalist adherents, who asserted that the citizens would be afraid to express a free choice.

Soldiers were voted first. Their officers cast their votes for them, asking each man his choice, after the garrison had been told they might vote as they pleased. Without exception, so far as known, the men replied "Huerta."

News that the soldiers were voting created mild excitement and after that a small number of citizens appeared at the polls when they preferred at the head of the government. Some appeared after the closing hour of 6 o'clock, were allowed to vote when they complained that they had been told that no election would be held.

It is probable that not enough precincts were opened and votes cast in Piedras Negras to comply with the constitutional requirements to make the election legal.

Many voters appeared to regard the election as a joke in which the Americans were the butt.

A joker was posted near army headquarters in Piedras Negras this forenoon bulletin announcing the candidates today as:

"Victoriano Huerta.
"Willie Grape Juice.
"Woodrow Bluff."

No apparent attention was given to this sign by the federal authorities.

POLLS IN VERA CRUZ UNFREQUENTED SPOTS

Vera Cruz, October 26.—The elections in Vera Cruz did not disturb the city's usual Sunday calm, the only noticeable difference being the absence of the weekly bull fight, which was prohibited by the state authorities in a decree announcing that there must be no demonstrations.

The official report of just how many votes were cast will not be made public for several days, but all Vera Cruz knows that the twenty-two polling places in the city were almost unfrequented spots.

President Wilson's personal representative, John Lind, strolled about during the day and refused to vote at the polls, but was unable to find any voters.

General Felix Diaz, the candidate of the national democratic party, who regards himself as virtually a prisoner, abstained from attempting to exercise the franchise. His partisans, however, early in the day, distributed big handbills urging the public to vote for him and Requena. A fresh lot of small hand-bills, advocating the candidacy of Huerta and Blanquet, were distributed and posted prominently throughout the city were larger bills of the same character.

Followers of Manuel Calero and Jesus Flores Megon, liberal candidates, posted a few bills telling of the virtues of their leaders, but not many appeared to favor Frederico Gamboa, and General Eugenie Rascon, representatives of the Catholic party.

Extra police patrols were not necessary, no demonstration of any kind were attempted. Chief Interest centered in the disposition of General Diaz, who declined to refuse the election entreated to him by the provisional president to return to the capitol.

In the quarter of the city where General Diaz had taken up his residence scores of plain clothes men and police were on evidence. Their presence, it was explained by the authorities, was to afford General Diaz full protection. Anticipating reports that might be circulated that he was under arrest, the American consulate and therefore was not. Mexican will on election day. General Felix Diaz signed before a notary this evening a statement that he had not left the hotel where he is residing during the day.

WOMEN AND CHILDREN DEPORTED FROM MEXICO

Laredo, Texas, October 26.—Rivera Garcia, a Mexican washerwoman, a woman with three small children, deported to the United States late tonight by federals because she said she was a Carranza sympathizer. American immigration authorities waived legal technicalities to admit her, as she might have been barred for having no visible means of support.

NO SIGN OF ELECTION IN NORTH TAMAULIPAS

Brownsville, Texas, October 26.—If an election was held in northeastern Tamaulipas today, diligent inquiry from this point failed to develop its existence. Matamoros, opposite here, is under control of constitutionalists. When the commanding general there, Blanco, was asked about elections today, he smiled and said:

"It is useless even to speak of it."

ITALIAN MINISTER ORDERED TO MEXICO

Rome, October 26.—Owing to the complications in Mexico, Signor Cambiago, the newly appointed minister to that country, has been ordered to proceed to Washington, D. C., via London. Osservatore Romano, the Vatican organ, commenting on the Mexican situation, says it is becoming graver daily, because in addition to a possible conflict between Mexico and the United States, there is also a threat of British intervention. The paper hints at trouble arising through rivalries between British and American financial groups for possession of Mexican mines.

FELIX DIAZ BREAKS WITH DICTATOR HUERTA

Nephew of Porfirio Diaz Refuses to Go to Capital and Resigns Army Position.

Vera Cruz, October 26.—The last shred binding General Felix Diaz and General Victoriano Huerta was severed today when General Diaz telegraphed to the department of war his resignation as general of the army.

The negotiations regarding Diaz's return to the capital, which constitutes the provisional president ended by his refusal to accompany Colonel Vidaurrazaga, secretary to General Blanquet, war minister, giving as his reason the illness of his wife.

Colonel Vidaurrazaga made further efforts to induce General Diaz to change his decision, but finally left for the capital on a special train tonight. Diaz and his family remained here.

The few partisans General Diaz has stood guard in his rooms at the hotel the last four days also left for their homes in Mexico City, but a handful of soldiers are still here, subject to the orders of their political chief.

The lines of the city patrolled by plain clothes men and police from points of vantage in the streets and on roofs.

General Diaz expresses belief that the war department will grant his appeal for a court of inquiry. The fact of his friends pessimistically point to the possibility that the request may come in the form of an order of arrest. General Diaz said tonight a few days he had had no chance for election to the presidency. His plan for future are not yet made, but he expects to establish a temporary residence in Vera Cruz.

Senora Diaz is not seriously ill, but sufficiently so to serve as an excuse early in the day for delay in the proposed return of General Diaz to the capital. Colonel Vidaurrazaga's opportunities eventually resulted in the frank declaration from Diaz that he did not intend to go.

Only casual interest in the election was given by Diaz, who accepted his defeat as a matter of course. The only incident personally touching him was the arrest of his brother-in-law, Senor Alcolea, for alleged interference at one of the polls. Senor Alcolea protested against what he considered irregularities, and a policeman joined him in the discussion. An hour later the policeman had been made a soldier and Alcolea was in jail.

EUROPEAN POWERS WILL NOT MEDDLE

Believed They Will Give U. S. Assurance of Friendly Co-Operation in Dealing With the Mexican Situation.

Washington, October 26.—According to unofficial advices received here today, the exchanges of views between the European powers at Paris was preparatory to showing the United States that action by the powers by the various foreign governments was not intended as an evidence of unfriendly feeling.

It is believed the movement toward showing this country sentiments friendliness was instituted by the French government. Upon the outcome of these diplomatic parleys at Paris the ocean depends, it is understood, whether or not the Washington government will issue the already prepared note defining its views that interference by foreign governments with the American policy toward Mexico was not desired.

Hampton Roads to Co-operate.

Many people conversant with the situation predicted that the United States already had reason to feel that Europe was preparing to manifest an spirit of co-operation, and that the issuance of the proclamation might offend the sensibilities of those nations, which, up to the present, had refrained from embarrassing the United States in any way.

President Wilson, though absent from Washington, was kept constantly advised of the situation. Just what the next step in the American policy will be has not yet been determined by the officials themselves. It is believed a course of action will be framed on the outcome of the Mexican election and the incidents of election day.

Should the election fail to result in choice, and indications point toward Huerta being continued in power for a long period, some move on the part of Europe in support of the American demand for the elimination of Huerta from the situation is looked for.

The capture of Monterey by the constitutionalists and the progress being made by them toward establishing a provisional government is being closely watched here. Efforts to obtain the support of the United States for the constitutionalist cause also are increasing.

Wilson Kept Advised.

Officials in Washington today kept in constant touch with the state department for news from the Mexican elections, and President Wilson, though absent, en route to the Southern Commercial congress in Mobile, was kept advised of the situation as it was reflected from Mexico City.

Secretary Bryan was in communication with his office until late tonight. He received a long cipher cablegram from the special American envoy, John Lind, in Vera Cruz. This message, the contents of which were not made public, was reported to contain a summary of instructions sent out to the American governors from the Huerta government for the conduct of the election. Tonight messages were received from Nelson O'Shaughnessy, the American charge at Mexico City, stating that the elections, in so far as reported to the Mexican capital, had been conducted quietly, but little excitement had been apparent anywhere, and that the voting was extremely light. Mr. Tumulty, secretary to the president, conferred with Mr. Bryan tonight on the situation, and later announced that nothing of importance had been reported.

U. S. Warships and Huerta.

The six months' limit, under which American battleships have been in Mexican waters by permission of the Huerta government, expired today. Huerta has given notice it would not be renewed, and a Mexican statute forbids the presence of a foreign ship without permission, more than a month at a time. Ships of the Atlantic fleet will sail this week from Hampton Roads to replace those at Vera Cruz, and the expectation is that the ships will be changed monthly and thus come within the designation of visitors.

MONTEREY STILL HELD BY THE HUERTA FORCES

Reported That Besiegers Have Met With Heavy Losses in Attack on the City.

Brownsville, Texas, October 26.—Monterey had not been captured at a late hour last night, and desperate street fighting was still in progress, according to official constitutionalists' advices received at their headquarters in Matamoros today. Private advices said that the constitutionalists had sustained heavy losses and that the besiegers were being reinforced by 5,000 federals.

The constitutionalists claim to have taken the La Caloada avenenue, the Mexican National railway station, a brewery and the Hotel Iris, the latter from which section their troops were forcing the federals back toward the center of the city.

The information was transmitted to Matamoros, according to officials, by a private telegram received from Monterey to Herreras, 90 miles, thence by telegraph to Matamoros.

Private telegrams received in Matamoros today dated Monterey, said the constitutionalists had been badly defeated in two days of fighting and were in flight with their main body, pursued by 3,000 federals.

President Wilson Enjoys Trip Through the South; Journey Ideal, He Says

For a few seconds President Wilson leaned over the rail of the observation platform of his private car at the Terminal station last night and chatted with a reporter for The Constitution. The crowds surged about him, impatient to clasp his hand.

"Are you going to stop off in Atlanta on your return trip?" asked the reporter. "Atlanta's one of your home towns, you know."

"No." he answered with a broad smile. "I wish I could. I'd like to stay for at least two hours—or more."

"What's the trouble—can't you arrange it?"

"No, my itinerary has been made up, and it will be impossible to make changes."

"What kind of a trip have you had?"

Grand Trip, Says President.

"Grand! This southern greenery is magnificent. And we've had no mishaps whatever. The entire journey has been ideal. I could have expected nothing better."

By this time the crowd had pressed forward, dislodging the reporter from his precarious footing on a platform rail. The president extended a glad hand, and it was grasped equally as gladly by 500 more glad hands.

Headed by Detective Sloan, of the national secret service, who has guarded Roosevelt and Taft, the secret service men, six in all, moved about through the crowd. Two stood beside Wilson as he leaned over the platform railing, watching each hand as it arose from the crowd, ready to act the moment a suspicious instrument showed.

Two more stood behind him. The remaining two moved about the crowd, searching for suspicious characters, watching every act of the men and women gathered about the car. A Constitution photographer, whose flashlight machine stood within only a few feet of the president, set off a flash.

The report was sharp and loud. President Wilson glanced up quickly, his hand poised in the act of reaching to another hand that arose above the heads of the crowd. Without a sign of fear or nervousness, he eyed the photographer squarely in the eye and said:

Jumps at Machine.

"Not again, please."

Detective Sloan jumped from the platform to the camera, shoving it almost off its tripod. The machine would have fared badly had it not been for the interference of a reporter

The train remained under the shed for only a few minutes. As it rolled out of the Atlanta and West Point tracks the president stayed upon the rear platform, waving a farewell to the shouting crowd. A number of men and boys ran along the tracks seeking a final handshake, and were beaten only by the rapidly increasing speed of the train.

Although the crowd was great, it was not the fault of the Terminal authorities. Fully 5,000 people gathered in the waiting room of the station and about the plaza, expecting a glimpse of the president. C. P. Pace, superintendent of terminals, issued orders admitting no one to the tracks.

Reporters and photographers were denied entrance, the first times in the history of the Terminal station. Pace gave as an explanation a request from a committee of men traveling with the president, who said they wanted no one at the train, not even representatives of the press.

The 500 men, women and boys, however, outwitted the authorities. Reporters bought tickets to nearby stations so that they might get to the train. Some of the crowd walked a great distance to the opening of the shed.

WOODROW WILSON REACHES ATLANTA

tioned law in Atlanta. The Misses Margaret and Jessie Wilson were born at Gainesville, and the president pointed out the house to Dr. Grayson as the train rolled by.

Secretary Daniels, of the navy department, who came in also in the Wilson bile, was given a warm welcome en route, particularly in his home state—North Carolina.

On the president's train were about 200 people, all bound for the Southern Commercial congress. Senator Fletcher, of Florida, president of the organization, took a part of the delgation back into the president's car during the afternoon to shake hands, and Mr. Wilson later came forward into the Pullmans to greet some of the ladies in the party.

Diplomats Meet President.

John Barrett, director general of the Pan-American union, and the Latin-American diplomats aboard, paid their respects to the president. Among them were Minister Calvo, of Costa Rica; Minister Calderon, of Bolivia; Minister Pezet, of Peru; Minister Morales, of Panama; Count General Cunha, of Brazil, and Consul General Pardo, of Argentina.

The president told the diplomats that his main reason for going to Mobile was that the meeting was suggestive of closer relations with their countries. He remarked that they probably were aware from what he had said and done of his sincere sympathy for Central and South America. He spoke informally of the great benefits that would accrue from the Panama canal, declaring that although the waterways physically severed the two continents it would make for a closer union in every other respect.

Luncheon With Daniels.

The president had lunch with Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniel. Although the secretary of the navy is now outlining suggestions as to the number of battleships the nation should build next year, it was said that neither this matter nor the Mexican situation was touched upon in his conversation with the president except in the most informal way.

The train was furnished with every possible means of establishing instant communication with the president from Washington and other official sources. All telegraph companies had special representatives on the train to see personally after any message to or from the president.

In the president's party in his private car were only himself, Dr. Grayson, his private physician, and Secretary Tumulty, who kept a vigilant watch.

The president wore a light gray business suit and a golf cap. He was the picture of pink health.

Besides the president's car there were four other coaches carrying prominent delegates to the Mobile convention.

Barred From Station.

With a great throng of people waiting in the streets and in the plaza eager to get a glimpse of the president, there were only a few hundred who were fortunate enough to get by the gates to greet him when his special train from Washington over the Southern railway pulled under the Atlanta Terminal station at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon, remaining in the city until 5:30.

Never was the rule of the railroad commission regarding the admission of people to the tracks more rigidly enforced than it was by Superintendent Pace, of the Terminal station, Sunday. Newspaper men at first found themselves barred out with numbers of prominent Atlantans, some of whom had known the president when he practiced law in this city thirty years ago.

By various means, some of them going some distance below and approaching the shed from the railroad yards, thereby eluding the guards, others buying tickets to nearby stations and getting in that way, about a dozen newspaper men with two photographers, finally managed to group themselves about the president's car.

There were others, too, railroad men and ordinary citizens, who also succeeded in getting in so that there were about a hundred formed themselves in line, under the vigilant care of United States secret service men and members of the local police force, to shake the president's hand.

Four coaches were attached to the special which brought the president to this city on his way to Mobile, where he will deliver an adress to the Southern Commercial congress today.

Occupants of Car.

In the rear coach was the president himself, his physician, Dr. Grayson, and a number of secret service men. Another car was occupied by Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, of Florida, who is president of the Southern Commercial congress. John S. Barrett, of Washington, president of the Pan-American union, and a large quota of South and Central American diplomats. Another car was occupied by newspaper men from the Associated Press and the metropolitan papers. The fourth was a diner.

Soon after the train came under the shed the president appeared on the rear platform of his car, where he was greeted with as much enthusiasm by the crowd as the fewness of their numbers would permit.

At 2:20 a special train arrived from Mobile bearing a party of prominent citizens from the Alabama city, who came to meet the president and escort him to his destination: In this party were H. T. Hartwell, chairman of the presidential reception committee; Fred I. Thomson, secretary of the reception committee and publisher of The Mobile Register; A. Leo Stanton, president of the Mobile chamber of commerce; W. J. Hemmont, president of the Bank of Mobile; John T. Cochran, of the A. T. & N. railroad; Robert Ewing, publisher of The New Orleans States, and others.

Met by Atlantans.

These gentlemen were greeted on their arrival here by a committee of Atlanta citizens, consisting of J. R. Smith, J. H. Hall, Hamilton McWhorter, Boling Jones and E. P. Childress, and were taken to luncheon, after which an automobile trip about the city. The private car, which was under the supervision of General Passenger Agent Ruston, of the A. T. & N. railroad, was attached to the presidential special when it left for Mobile.

The president is scheduled to arrive in Mobile shortly after 7 o'clock Monday morning. A brisk program of entertainment, occupying every moment of his five hours' stay in that city, will begin with a breakfast at the home of the house, to which, in addition to the presidential party, a number of officials of the Southern Commercial congress and prominent Alabamians have been invited. This will be at 8 o'clock. This will be followed by a review of Mobile harbor at 9 o'clock and an automobile tour of the city, during which the president and members of the Southern Commercial congress will be shown the principal points of interest by the local committee on entertainment.

At 10 o'clock the president is scheduled to deliver his address to the congress at the Lyric theater. The entertainment will close with a monster parade in the president's honor, which will be participated in by the press, civic and labor organizations and by the children of the public schools.

At 12:29 p. m. Monday the president's train will leave Mobile on its return trip to Washington, passing through Atlanta about midnight or a little after, and reaching Washington Tuesday evening.

The president's car was detached from the rest of the train in the Terminal station Sunday while engines were changed, and the special car from Mobile was put on. This occupied about twenty-five minutes, most of which time the president spent in the privacy of his car, to which he withdrew after about five minutes spent in shaking hands.

Responding to the call of the crowd, he again appeared on the rear platform as the train pulled out, waving a farewell to the cheering crowd, who followed him along the platform.

Among the newspaper men who came with the train from Washington was John Temple Graves, who shook hands with a number of his acquaintances while in the city. The newspaper men took occasion while the train stopped to rush their copy off to their various papers in New York, Washington and Philadelphia.

PRESIDENT IS GUARDED BY MANY DETECTIVES

What was undoubtedly the most vigilant secret guard ever thrown about any single figure was afforded President Wilson by the Atlanta police department upon the president's arrival in Atlanta yesterday afternoon.

Headed by Chief Jett, who was in plain clothes for the occasion, a squad of fifteen detectives was thrown about the car from which Mr. Wilson shook hands with the crowd of people who greeted him. The chief stationed himself beside the car's platform directly beneath the president, remaining there throughout the president's festival of handshaking.

The fifteen other sleuths were scattered through the crowd near the private car. A cordon of policemen was formed to handle the crowds systematically as they pressed forward to shake locally as they pressed forward to shake Wilson's hand. By this means the president was able to individually greet each member of the throng in the few seconds of five. Far up the tracks came the shifting gleam of a headlight and a locomotive's scream.

A puff and a roar with the groan of brakes and cry of steam at precisely 5 o'clock. The crowds swarmed about the rear car of Engineer Busha's train. It had arrived exactly as he had predicted, "on the dot." Climbing down from his cab, oil cup in hand, he called to a train dispatcher:

"Wire Bob at Charlotte that I'll take bacon, crisp and eggs scrambled next week."

With which he turned his engine over to the Atlanta and West Point engineer, who was to take the president over the remainder of the route to Mobile.

Busha is one of the Southern's most reliable engineers. He has been with the road for twenty-two years. His home is in Columbia avenue, College Park, where he has resided for years. He was given one of the road's best engines to pull the president's train, and was selected for the job because of his record. Not a mishap was encountered on the whole trip.

U. S. READY ON SEA, DECLARES DANIELS

Refuses to Discuss Mexican Situation, But Says Government Has Ships at All Strategic Points.

Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels, the only member of President Wilson's cabinet on the president's special train which passed through Atlanta Sunday afternoon, en route to the Southern Commercial congress at Mobile, seemed well pleased over the policy which the United States has pursued in respect to Mexico, when seen by a Constitution representative.

As to just how seriously it has affected the relationship of the United States and Mexico might become, however, he would not hazard an opinion.

"The Mexican situation, I believe, can be worked out amicably," he said, "but in any event, we are well prepared on the sea. We have war vessels stationed now at all strategic points. However the Mexican situation is a matter for the consideration of the state department and not for me to discuss. Secretary Bryan, who had intended speaking at Mobile, has remained in Washington in order to keep in touch with the Mexican election."

As the train rushed through the cotton fields of Georgia, Secretary Daniels commented on the excellence of the staple, and said that he was pleased with the prosperous condition of the south as he found it.

Secretary Daniels will address the Mobile congress Tuesday night, and will leave that night for Washington. The secretary said that he felt greatly honored at the ovation given him in Charlotte, N. C., his native state.

Agrees With Churchill.

Secretary Daniels expressed his own approval of the suggestion of Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty of Great Britain, that the powers should agree to cease naval construction for a short period.

"I feel sure," said Mr. Daniels, "that if all the other navy building countries agreed to such an arrangement the United States would also gladly do so. I think this suggestion follows as a direct sequence to Secretary Bryan's 'peace policy.'"

The secretary said he did not believe, however, that the Churchill suggestion would affect the immediate program of his government.

Mr. Daniels talked naval affairs with the president, but did not discuss the Churchill proposal.

Brings President's Train Into Atlanta on the Second And Wins Bacon and Eggs

It was in the smoky lunch counter at the railway station in Charlotte, N. C., that L. P. Busha received orders from the dispatcher to drive President Wilson special into Atlanta. Between bites of a ham and egg sandwich, washed down by gulps of Carolina coffee, Busha turned to the dispatcher and said:

"The eats are on me next week if I don't take 'er there at exactly 5 p. m. and a second less, a second more."

The dispatcher made the bet. Next week he buys Engineer Busha the eats. For Engineer Busha, who is an Atlanta man—or, rather, he lives in College Park, which is just the same—pulled the president's train into Atlanta Sunday night at exactly 5 o'clock, schedule time to the dot.

Twilight was shrouding the big Terminal shed. Trains pulled and roared over the tracks. Travelers swarmed about everywhere. The big dial clock over the runway pointed to twenty seconds of five. Far up the tracks came the shifting gleam of a headlight and a locomotive's scream.

A puff and a roar with the groan of brakes and cry of steam at precisely 5 o'clock. The crowds swarmed about the rear car of Engineer Busha's train. It had arrived exactly as he had predicted, "on the dot." Climbing down from his cab, oil cup in hand, he called to a train dispatcher:

"Wire Bob at Charlotte that I'll take bacon, crisp and eggs scrambled next week."

With which he turned his engine over to the Atlanta and West Point engineer, who was to take the president over the remainder of the route to Mobile.

Busha is one of the Southern's most reliable engineers. He has been with the road for twenty-two years. His home is in Columbia avenue, College Park, where he has resided for years. He was given one of the road's best engines to pull the president's train, and was selected for the job because of his record. Not a mishap was encountered on the whole trip.

One Opportunity Now Is Worth Two in the Future

Which, being translated, means that we cannot count upon a better day than today to share the advantages this store offers.

For this we know —That months of splendid and scrupulous preparations are back of our offerings of today.

—That the merchandise you are invited to choose from is representative of what trained and true men and women, who give their whole heart to doing things a bit better, have judged worthy of the ideals of this store.

—That things are right, to the extent that shopping here today means shopping where every point (sometimes small, sometimes very large) that could be worked out to your advantage, has been.

In some instances these mean only quality, in some only style, in some only price, in some quality and style and price.

And Now That It Is Blanket Buying Time

We want you to know how things are done in this Blanket Store.

In the first place, you know what you are buying. We look upon this as a matter of common honesty, also of good business.

If a blanket is not all wool, it would not be right of us to say it is. Furthermore, it would be rather a poor recommendation for the future, since you would discover the fact sooner or later.

Again, we have selected these Blankets after passing on many that we did not select. The process of elimination was effective until it resulted in the survival of the fittest. These are the fittest Blankets we know of at every given price.

There is no need of subterfuge in connection with their merits.

Their merits are intrinsic and lasting. One may buy Blankets here with the confidence that every effort of trained experts has been put forward to raise quality and lower price—the efforts have resulted in these Blankets.

Be guided accordingly.

The Fact That "Madame Irene" Corsets Are Favored By So Many Smart Women Has Its Significance.

We might tell and retell the merits of "Madame Irene" Corsets, with more or less success in convincing the individual, but the fact that so many women who are "up" on such matters favor the "Madame Irene" tells the whole story at once.

Asked why, these women would probably say that the lines of a "Madame Irene" Corset are those of the present-day fashion, and comfortable; the materials are beautiful; the trimmings neat and dainty; the whole effect one of grace and elegance.

But to go a bit farther into the why—"Madame Irene" Corsets are of Parisian descent. Madame Irene herself (the designer) spends a good portion—at different times—of her year in Paris. She learns what the Parisian style wizards are doing and what the Parisian corsetiere is doing, and brings this knowledge and the materials to America to make "Madame Irene" Corsets for American women. The result is that which usually follows the most painstaking effort, sometimes called genius.

Madame Irene Corsets Are Priced From $5.00 to $37.50

There are Brocades, Silk Batistes, Imported Coutils, Tricots, Silk Suedes and Elastic Corsets (these last have come in for unusual praise by many eminent surgeons), in styles that belong distinctively to Madame Irene and the fall of 1913.

"The Successo" is the Madame Irene understudy. It is priced at $2.75 to $6.00.

Made by the same people, who, believing in their styles, would not make corsets along other lines. The difference is a matter of material and finishing, and still there are "Successos" in French Coutil, Silk Batiste, Suedine, Brocade and a new Linen Poplin.

Comfort O'er Night--Fleecy Night Gowns

New ones, which means that the patterns and colorings of the flannelettes are not what one is accustomed to finding.

A bit neater and more attractive, with outlined checks and stripes, in dainty blues and pinks; others all white. Also it is not necessary to choose the high neck style; here are those with round neck and yoke. Regular and extra sizes.

THE CONSTITUTION is on sale in New York city by 2 p. m. the day after issue. It can be had at Hotaling's Newsstands, Broadway and Forty-second street (Times building corner), Thirty-eighth street and Broadway and Twenty-ninth street and Broadway.

AN EXCELLENT PLAN.

A unique and practical plan is that of the chamber of commerce of LaGrange to intensively develop territory within a radius of sixty miles of that city as being, strategically, the halfway point of traffic between the east and the isthmus of Panama. As detailed in yesterday's Constitution, a banquet will be given at LaGrange on the evening of November 6 to promote the idea. It is expected that the governors of Georgia and Alabama, many officials of the Georgia state chamber of commerce and other prominent commercial and industrial representatives will be present.

The project is given pertinence by the fact that the area in question, partly in Georgia and partly in Alabama, is one of the richest in the south. With the impetus to traffic following the opening of the canal, the location of this tract right in the line of travel should give it advantages not only from the agricultural, but also from the business standpoint.

EDUCATING FOR LIFE.

A note significant in American life was that recently struck by the vocational guidance conference held in Grand Rapids, Mich. Delegates from many parts of the country and from most of the associations devoted to education were present. From first to last discussion related to the sort of education that would fit pupils for life pursuits, as well as train them in the academic sense. Delegates differed as to methods, but as to the ends to be gained they were in accord.

The latter part of the nineteenth and the first part of the twentieth centuries will be notable in history for the revolution they brought in our educational ideals. The new force first was manifested in the democratization of educational opportunity. Government recognized that one of its first duties lay in equipping its citizens, and the process extended from the highest to the humblest. Under these conditions were born the common schools and the conquering progress they are yet making is of universal knowledge.

Next in order has come the realization that academic and classical education must be training for professions, or for life, in effect. Technological schools have sprung up over the land. Even the common schools of most of the cities have industrial and vocational adjuncts. The boy who will today leaves school with a much more definite knowledge of the calling he is to pursue through life than did his counterpart fifty or even ten years ago.

The change is fundamental and it has come to stay, and to broaden its influence. This is not to say that academic and classical education will be at a discount. It will not, and never will be. But all component parts of our educational system will be rounded off and polished into their proper proportions. No system, for instance, could be complete without full academic facilities. And not the most faultless academic equipment could compensate any system for the lack of vocational facilities. The education of the future must develop with these facts in mind.

In former years, the academic went far ahead at the expense of the vocational. Now matters are to be evened up. When the process is concluded we should possess, as Germany does today, an educational system inviting and practical and criticism-proof at virtually every angle.

HE'S OUR COLONEL.

One forgets that Theodore Roosevelt is a national and an international institution until he goes abroad. Then comes surging the realization that the colonel is the property of the nation, and the feeling isn't changed by the mere fact that it finds a lodgment in democratic and republican as well as bull moose bosom.

Take his South American trip. The cables say that immediately he stepped on the quay at Rio de Janeiro he was welcomed by a brilliant native assemblage, Cabinet officers, army and naval officers and representatives of the president were on hand to give the colonel the glad hand.

Of course it will be said that the honor thus paid him is drawn forth by his former high office. That is true, measurably, but it does not account for the furore he creates wherever he goes. His personality is the real reason. A man of tame ideas and methods could not have taken Africa and Europe by storm as he did. His very vigor caught the kaiser and stunned England, while he lectured this ancient nation on the right way to run its colonies.

Now the process is to be repeated in South America. He has lecture engagements in all the capitals. On top of that he is going into the vast and mysterious interior, there to spend almost a year in floral and faunal research, imperilling his life in search of that elusive adventure love for which seems bred in his fiber.

No wonder a man of this variegated appeal captivates the popular imagination and was able to dismantle the republican party. When he can find a community of interest with an African savage and an English monarch, with a French savant and a South American savage, surely it is not strange that he should loom challengingly in his own country.

Incidentally, it will be interesting to observe the colonel's course upon emerging from the jungle. When he returned from Africa, he put the politics of this nation into the melting pot. What will be his reaction on conditions in this country when he returns from South America? A good many politicians of both parties would pay a generous sum for the proper answer to that riddle.

THE WISDOM OF TAFT.

It is doubtful if any new administration, even in the post-revolutionary days, ever traveled a league on its course without certain concressmen of its party accusing it of attempts to dictate to or control congress. The Wilson administration has been no exception.

For those likely to be influenced by such criticisms, the following extract from a recent speech by former President Taft will come as a sound corrective:

> We are republicans and we are democrats. We are possibilities and we are impossibilities, but I trust there is no one who doesn't wish the success of the present administration of the United States for the benefit of all the people. When the people declare in favor of a platform, I want to see it carried out and tried. I don't mind seeing congress brought under a rule that carries through what that platform said. I believe in responsible leadership. If a party in power makes mistakes or the people don't approve of it, my experience has been that the remedy is easy. Until we have an opportunity to discuss the issues I am for the administration.

The comments of Mr. Taft show his characteristic breadth and a very considerable acumen. And if any man in public life is equipped to pass judgment on the penalties of a balky congress it is the big Ohioan.

Mr. Wilson is the titular leader of his party. He is charged with the performance of its promises. If the program fails, he will be held to account with much greater severity than members of congress.

Recognizing these facts he has gone about his task with diplomacy, but with a will. It is perfectly possible that he has made a few enemies within his own party. You can't make an omelette without breaking eggs, and you can't execute a program without antagonizing a few people, especially when the varying elements within the party are taken into consideration.

Incidentally, Mr. Taft exemplifies a non-partisan patriotism we are glad to believe is on the increase in this country. Parties we must have. But it is a good thing to find prominent men who put country before party, in peace as in war, in the tariff as well as in dreadnaughts.

OF COURSE HE'LL ACT.

Washington correspondents of all political complexions are perturbed over the apparent impassivity of the president toward the Mexican situation. They are beginning to agree upon the premise that Mr. Wilson cannot long defer decisive action after the elections of today.

That fact is obvious to a schoolboy. Anyone who has followed events with reasonable accuracy does not expect that the president will hold his hand after the elections add their clarifying influence to the status.

It is evident that Mr. Wilson has heretofore played a waiting game for three reasons: 1. His unwillingness to keep good faith with the world and the people of Mexico. 2. His very patriotic desire to avoid embroiling this country in a war of pacification, seeing that we are not yet through with the unprofitable Philippine adventure, and that the Mexican nut would be even harder to crack. 3. His natural impulse not to interfere with such vastly important and constructive legislation as the currency issue, which would be almost surely overshadowed and delayed if we had to adopt harsh measures toward Mexico.

Any one of these motives is a sufficient one. Combined they are unbeatable. Now that conditions in Mexico are rapidly resolving themselves into a vicious and endless cycle of bloodshed, misrule and irresponsibility, with the European powers clamoring for an understanding of some sort, the administration will in all probability take decisive action by doing that which could not as well have been done before.

The story goes that Mr. Sulzer has an offer to deliver 100 lectures at $1,000 each. Nothing like getting paid for explaining your explanation.

His Winter Thankfulness.

Thank the Lord for weather: When the winds the cold flakes blow
We'll take the wagon off the wheels an' slide across the snow;
Thankful for the blessings sometimes an' fall,
A world that's trimmed with icicles looks purty, after all!

Outside's a tingle in the air along the frosty ways;
Within, the great logs crackle where the chimney's on the blaze;
Grandfather leans an' listens as the rough winds raise a row,
An' stirs his toddy—shakes his head: "We'll have some weather now!"

An' purty soon Brer Rabbit will be layin' mighty low;
By them unlucky feet o' his we'll track him through the snow;
For all that's good Life reaches; there's joy an' purty pitch,
We've seen the peach's rosy side, an' now comes 'possum pie.

Take us any time o' day, the word is: "Feelin' prime!"
For the hallelujia season—it's just with us All, the time!
An' in the winter gardens, an' on the snowy banks
I'll kneel down where the violets was an' give the Lord my thanks.

A Man's Little Day.

This little song, "A Man's Little Day," by William Wallace Whitelock, in The New York Times, rings true to the situation:

"First thing a fellow knows at morn
He's born;
Then, sly at ten o'clock, the next
He's vexed
By readin', 'rith', 'rithmetic,
Till sick.
At noon he has to go to work,
Or shirk.
Then, 'bout two, he takes 'for life'
A wife.
From two till time to bring in lights
He fights
And struggles with his fellow men,
And then
He sits around a while and thinks,
And blinks,
And when at last it's time for bed,
He's dead."

"To see a man a-settin' on a weather-beaten pine box in front o' the town grocery a-cussin' out the government under which he was raised an' born don't speak half-well for the man," says our Billville philosopher, "He always turns out to be the feller who was chasin' a little 2 by 4 government job, and the other chap beat him to it; or he was fired from a postmastership which was worth $12 a year and feed yerself. Stand up for yer country, so that if the country falls down yowll be right there to put it on its feet a'gin. "We cordially invite the directors of the Meat Trust to an all-day Dinner at our Rabbit and 'Possum Farm," writes the editor of The Whitsett Courier, "the said all-day dinner to be given on Thanksgiving Day next. Seeing is believing, and it's the only way we can convince the Meat Trust that we've got it a-coming and a-going. We want it to inspect our cold storage 'possum plant, and when it does it 'll think twice before it passes the dollar-a-pound limit. All this time Brer 'Possum has been 'playin' dead,' but he's as spry as a spring grasshopper down in the meadow-bird—when it comes to beating a soulless Meat Trust to a pick-the-long finish."

Only use some folks are in life is to stand at the forks of the road and tell travelers which road to take, but they get mighty little thanks and money for their pains.

"When Joy sings at the gate," says the Highway Philosopher, "get all the folks you can to join the chorus, and if you can't sing yourself, the rest of 'em will make such a noise the world will never know the difference."

The Colonel is absent and comparatively silent. But we believe he settled the Mexican question in a magazine article the day before he left?

With regard to England and Mexico, the country won't breathe easy until Secretary Bryan is filling his lecture dates again.

A Story of the Moment

By WALT MASON, The Famous Prose Poet.

ESCAPING ENNUI

"I don't know what others think about it," said the melancholy boarder, "but I find life a tiresome and oppressive business. It doubtless was interesting a few centuries ago, but under modern conditions it is flat, stale and unprofitable—the same yesterday, today and forever."

"You talk in this wise," observed the star boarder, "because you don't know how to make your life interesting. There is just as much of romance and adventure in the world as there ever was, if you know how to look for it. You find life flat and stale because you conform to all the conventions of the time, and defiance to those conventions and note how quickly your life takes on a new aspect.

"As you well know, my dear Mrs. Jiggers, I have a weakness for being in debt up to my ears all the time. As a matter of principle, I never pay a bill so long as that painful duty can be avoided. My platform is quite simple and not original. I hold that the men who sell us things charge too much. They would get rich too quick if we all paid our bills promptly. It would do to keep them in the frame of mind, and prevent that false pride which comes from great wealth, some of us must follow the path I have marked out for myself.

"When I first adopted that course, Mrs. Jiggers, I anticipated much annoyance. My natural impulse was to pay for things when I bought them, but I felt that there was a great principle at stake, so I decided to become a martyr. To my surprise I found that being in debt and having creditors everywhere makes life a new and delightful thing. I too used to be bored in the days when I paid my bills and there were times when the burden of life weighed upon me so heavily that I wished that the ebbing tide would bear me out on its bosom to the ocean wild and wide.

"Now my life is one round of pleasure. It is an interesting and absorbing game, Mrs. Jiggers. It is a game calling for the exercise of all my intellectual resources, for one who would baffle his creditors at every turn must be upon the alert at all hours. Eternal vigilance is the price of successful indebtedness.

"Crawdad, the clothing man, has been sending me bills and statements for a year or two, and the other day he notified me that he had placed his account in the hands of Gripsaw, the lawyer. Now, this Gripsaw has a wide reputation as a fiend in human form. He is tireless, relentless in his pursuit of a debtor, and he has harried many a poor man into the asylum. Yet there is a strain of sporting blood in him. He came to me on the street and said: 'Podunster, I have a bill against you for $25, due Crawdad, the clothier. I give you fair warning that I am going to get this money, so if you are wise you'll shell out at once, and save yourself a lot of trouble.'

"Mr. Gripsaw," said I, "trouble is my favorite condiment. I fatten on it. Others may prefer tomato ketchup or Worcestershire sauce, but give me trouble every time, when it comes to a seasoning to make this life palatable. Turn loose your vials of trouble, my dear sir, and welcome.'

"Gripsaw promptly took an account into court until everything else fails. He prefers to hound and bullyrag a man into submission. He's built that way. But two days at that game. I began to shadow the shadower. Gripsaw met a beautiful young lady on the street, and he began talking to her, all becks and wreathed smiles, and I rushed up with a bill in my hand, and cried so the whole street could hear me: 'Mr. Gripsaw, if you don't pay your entire rent at once I'll have you evicted from the sunset.' The expression on that man's face was worth going miles to see, Mrs. Jiggers.

"I am waiting to see what his next plan of attack will be. I have no doubt it will be masterly, but my own tactics are Napoleonic, and the encounter is sure to be thrilling. You don't know what the true meaning of life is, Mrs. Jiggers, until you have such an antagonist as Gripsaw."

He Wanted It Clear.

(From The Cleveland Plain Dealer.)

"There," said the stern parent, "I've done something I intended to do long ago. I've given you a fixed income and you'll have to live on it. Remember what I say. You'll have to live on it."

The young man looked at the slip of paper which his father handed him. Then he looked at his father.

"Dad," he said, "this isn't quite fair."

"Eh! What isn't fair?"

"Why, you mean that I'm to have $5,000 a year, don't you?"

"Yes."

"Clear?"

"Of course."

"Then, if I'm to have $5,000 clear, what do you mean by giving me a taxable income with no money to pay the tax?"

With a wild howl the infuriated father kicked over the wastebasket and tore up his check book.

Popped on the Stalk.

(From The Chatsworth Times.)

There are all kinds and manners of places for the purpose of "popping the corn," remains for a Murray county farmer to furnish the newest place for that to take place. Popping has been done under all circumstances imaginable and in all conceivable places, but who in the world ever heard of popping on the stalk? Yet that is just what has happened as the tale brought to Chatsworth Saturday by Mont Roberts, of Holly, and in evidence he brought with him two ears already popped. In The Times office are to be seen two ears of popcorn that, owing to the hot season, took occasion to do the popping on the stalk before the owner was ready for the corn to do so.

The Rose Unfading.

All was deserted and so very still,
I knew that autumn must have entered there;
The song of bird, the hum of bee,
The low wind moving musingly,
The whispering leaves, the roses fair,
Had fled with summer from the garden chill.

And where heart spoke to heart with tender word,
And vows were made that mocked the might of years,
The vines, frail ghosts of glories fled,
As if by phanton fingers led,
Cling to the lattice in their fears
Of ruthless winds from northern slumber stirred.

Their whirling forms down garden aisles go by
Where walked the Orient summer in her pride:
The last dance of the leaves is o'er,
The footsteps's song is heard no more;
Here earthly roses all have died,
But in the heart love's rose shall never die.

The World's Mysteries

THE EMPEROR'S WITHERED ARM

Most readers are acquainted with the fact that Emperor William of Germany is afflicted with a withered or deformed left arm, but very few know the cause of it, and in fact there have been several different stories published which have cast a mystery about it so that there are probably only a very few persons within the immediate family circle who are aware of the actual conditions.

This left arm of Emperor William is said to be practically paralyzed. He has trained himself to hold the rein with it when he rides, but that is the sum of its usefulness. In all of his pictures he is very careful to hide its form or to place it in such a position that the deformity is not noticeable.

The defect, according to one story, dates from the occasion of his birth, and is ascribed to the ignorance or ineptitude of a physician. Another story has it that it was an idiosyncrasy of birth. Very few know which story is correct. Possibly the left arm exerted itself beyond its strength with its first gestures. Socialists, however, who in all countries have their own version of such a condition, deny the accident tale and attribute it to family weakness.

This deformed left arm is four inches shorter than its fellow, and has a malformed hand with only rudimentary fingers. The arm is so wholly limp that William has to lift its hand to even place it on the hilt of his sword with his right hand. It is in this posture, or else in the breast of his coat, that he constantly carries it when out of the saddle. All his photographs show it thus disposed of. At the table he has a combined knife and fork, which slides into each other. He uses this with much dexterity, first to cut up his meat and then to eat it, all, of course, with one hand.

But he has not allowed this hand to use the rein, but it is said that he uses both hands equally well when he plays the piano, which is quite frequent, no one suspecting any difference in force or flexibility between them.

To have become a skilled marksman under such a weighty disadvantage indicates great patience and determination. William uses a very light English gun, having abandoned the attempt to get any made to his liking in Germany, and carries it on his shoulder with the stock behind him. At the proper moment he brings the weapon forward by a movement of his right arm, with incredible swiftness and deadly accuracy of aim.

Emperor William is a proud monarch and his deformity has no doubt cast a great shadow on his life, and may be the cause for considerable of the irritability that he is said not infrequently to display. And not only is this his only annoyance, but of much greater importance is his frequent acute earaches, which have afflicted him for a number of years.

Just what Emperor William's ear affliction is no one has yet been able to determine. It grows worse in cold and wet weather, and that is about all that is known of it. The physicians disagree as to its character. William himself, though occasionally suffering grievously from it, has never been alarmed about it, and really believes it is merely a local ailment. Its existence naturally enough suffices to create a certain uneasiness in the minds of his friends, and of Germans generally, and serves as the fruitful source of alarming rumors by which, from time to time, the bureaus of Continental bourses is systematically assailed.

But this affliction, combined with a withered arm, or deformity that deal to do with the Emperor's disposition towards nervous excitability and restlessness. A man with the earache cannot be expected to hold calm mastery over all his moods. It is a reasonable assumption that to this affliction is to some measure due his phenomenal and unseasonable physical activity. Sometimes it happens that he is unable to sleep at all, and he is said to habitually keep pencils and notebooks within reach of his bedside upon which to work until the demon of insomnia is exorcised.

TRAPPINGS

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

Trappings include the unnecessary little doodads and fancy here-and-theres that add weight and worry to Worth While business. Most of us carry Trappings at that. They fall heir to us—we scarcely know how or from whom. But we know we wake to the daily knowledge that we have them with us.

Trappings are Valueless—drop them.

The greatest accumulators of Trappings are Idleness and Dontcareness. They overburden and load to back breaking, brilliant Brains and big Bodies. The Producer wants no excess Trappings about him—he demands his work clean and strained of the same time, he is a perfect gentleman. When he only expresses it he is a good imitation. Sometimes the Imitation fills his purpose more than the real things in the marriage market.

With the aid of politeness a man may make his way pleasantly over a cross and perspiring world, getting what he wants and having his own way. Politeness is a greater asset than financial ability. The financier has to work for his money, but the truly polite man can allow others to work for him and can make a lifelong friend of a creditor by the thoughtful way in which he apologises for not being able to pay him.

Some people wear their politeness all the time, while others take it off like an overcoat when they become heated and use the plain unvarnished cussword. After using politeness constantly and to excess for a few years a man's feelings and his conversation become total strangers and have to be introduced when they meet on rare occasions.

Politeness has made the world twice as pleasant and about half as fruitful as it was before such powerful people should not attempt to live on politeness alone. It is like living on cake. Some of our politest citizens have come to sad ends by being shot by bourish persons to whom they were apologizing for being compelled to ask them to elevate their hands and stand perfectly quiet.

America is not noted as a nation for politeness. France is. Frenchmen are marvels of politeness and pleasant elastic manners. A Frenchman can run an automobile over a pedestrian with such perfect manners that the bourishness of the American who picks up the victim is painfully evident by contrast.

We should all strive to be polite, but not too blankety-blithering polite.

Dedication.

For you I am a poet. Yes, I sing
As never any poet sang before;
Across my heart there blows a wind of roses,
And in my blood the crimson trumpets blare.

For you I am a poet. In the night
I scatter music mid a crowd of stars,
I build great pasetonae cities with my singing
And paint with song the colors of the dawn.

But I am not like other men who sing;
Their words are artful and their lips are lobes,
They are the singers of the world, but I—
I am a singer only in my heart.

For you I am poet. You alone,
Who lie within the temple of my arms,
Can see the banners swaying in my heart
And hear the crimson trumpets in my blood.

At your white feet I drink the ages' wine,
And heap the ancient gold of other lives;
For you I am a poet blind with rime—
For you I am a singer of red songs.
—Willard Huntington Wright in Smart Set.

Satisfactory.

If I could control the weather,
An' could move the sun an' moon,
And the wind and clouds, you're thinkin'
That I'd have it always June;
Always June with the sun shinin',
An' the birds' hearts filled with song—
I should hate to disappoint you,
But I'm thinkin' you are wrong.

I don't think that always Junetime,
Would appeal so much to me,
With new roses just unfoldin',
And new blossoms on the tree,
And with soft winds gently blowin'
From the prairies of the south,
Bringing perfumed summer showers,
Like moist kisses on the mouth.

Not that I don't like June weather;
I admit I like it fine;
From the crops just startin' growin',
To the climbin' glory vine;
From the glad birds all a-buildin',
And the skies a rain-washed blue;
I like June, an' I admit it,
But I like fall, too.

July, August an' September,
I like somethin' in them all;
Maybe it is just the sunsets,
Maybe it's somethin' else I call,
October, and through November;
Them two months seem mighty good,
Settin' by the fireplace at times,
Listenin' to the cracklin' wood.

An' then who would miss December,
An' the lighted Christmas tree,
An' the children dancin' 'round it
Eyes a-glintin'in their glee?
An' then I like January,
An' like February, too;
Each month holds something I'm likin',
Somethin' that I like to do.

An' I'm fond of March an' April,
An' I'm plum in love with May!
If I could control the weather,
An' could bid one month to stay
With us an' be our's forever,
I'd just simply let things be!
God knowed what He was a-doin',
An' the whole year pleases me.

POLITENESS

By GEORGE FITCH, Author of "At Good Old Siwash"

(Copyright, 1913, for The Constitution.)

Politeness is the lubricant which enables human beings to mingle without knocking the sparks out of each other.

It is the piano finish of conversation. Politeness isn't a state of mind, but of words. Many a man can be perfectly polite and agreeable to another while he is longing to leap upon him with a hoarse growl and bite off his ear.

Politeness is the art of expressing what you ought to feel. When a man feels politeness and expresses it at the same time, he is a perfect gentleman. When he only expresses it he is a good imitation. Sometimes the imitation fills his purpose more than the real things in the marriage market.

With the aid of politeness a man may make his way pleasantly over a cross and perspiring world, getting what he wants and having his own way. Politeness is a greater asset than financial ability. The financier has to work for his money, but the truly polite man can allow others to work for him and can make a lifelong friend of a creditor by the thoughtful way in which he apologises for not being able to pay him.

Some people wear their politeness all the time, while others take it off like an overcoat when they become heated and use the plain unvarnished cussword. After using politeness constantly and to excess for a few years a man's feelings and his conversation become total strangers and have to be introduced when they meet on rare occasions.

Politeness has made the world twice as pleasant and about half as fruitful as it was before such powerful people should not attempt to live on politeness alone. It is like living on cake. Some of our politest citizens have come to sad ends by being shot by bourish persons to whom they were apologizing for being compelled to ask them to elevate their hands and stand perfectly quiet.

America is not noted as a nation for politeness. France is. Frenchmen are marvels of politeness and pleasant elastic manners. A Frenchman can run an automobile over a pedestrian with such perfect manners that the bourishness of the American who picks up the victim is painfully evident by contrast.

We should all strive to be polite, but not too blankety-blithering polite.

Help for Poor Families.

(From a Consular Report.)

The French parliament has passed a law which grants official assistance to large families in poor circumstances. Every head of a family of French nationality, having under his care more than three children, and whose resources are insufficient to rear them, shall be entitled hereafter to receive an annual allowance for each child of less than 13 years old after the third child of less than 13 years.

If the children remain under the care of the mother by reason of the death of the father, his disappearance, abandonment of his family or any other cause, assistance is given for each child of less than 13 years after the second child less than 13 years.

If the children remain under the care of the father by reason of the death of the mother, her disappearance, anandonment of her family or any other cause, assistance is given for each child of less than 13 years after the second child of less than 12 years.

The amount of the allowance is to be fixed for each commune by the municipal council, subject to the approval of the general council and the ministry of the interior. It shall not be less than $11.58 a year for each child under the age of 13 years. The allowance is paid monthly in advance; it is nontransferable and not subject to distraint.

New Way to Handle a Fire.

(From The Fitzgerald Leader.)

The fire department was called out just after noon to distinguish a young prairie fire that was raging in the patch of woods just across the south drive. No damage was done to surrounding property.

ARNOLD TO RESUME HIS SPEECH TODAY

Hearing for New Trial for Leo M. Frank Will Probably Be Concluded on Wednesday Morning.

Attorney Reuben Arnold, asociate counsel for the defense of Leo Frank, who is making a masterful argument for a new trial for his client, was asked shortly after the adjournment of his speech Saturday, if he had any idea of the time he would finish:

"Not the slightest," he answered smilingly. "I've just started good."

From which is drawn the conclusion that he will occupy a large part of today in his speech. At the conclusion, Attorney Frank Hooper, who assisted Solicitor Dorsey in Frank's prosecution, will make the first speech for the state. Hooper's address, it is predicted, will take at least a day.

Following him will be Dorsey. The final argument will be submitted by Attorney Rosser, who, it is said, will occupy probably as much time as his colleague, Colonel Arnold. Only four speeches will be delivered.

It is predicted that the hearing will not close until either Tuesday night or Wednesday morning.

TABLET IS UNVEILED TO CHARLES GOODMAN

W. S. Kelly, Senior Warden at Church of the Incarnation, Makes Presentation.

Impresive services marked the unveiling yesterday morning of a tablet to the memory of the late Charles M. Goodman, at the Episcopal Church of the Incarnation in West End. The exercises preceded the regular church service. A large congregation attended.

The tablet was unveiled by Charles Goodman, a son of the man in whose honor it was dedicated, and W. S. Kelly, senior warden, made the speech of presentation.

Mr. Kelly said:

"Reverend Sir: I have the honor and great privilege of presenting this tablet to the Church of the Incarnation in memory of our dear friend, the late Charles Mason Goodman, who was our first senior warden and first Sunday school superintendent, and who was largely instrumental in erecting this beautiful edifice in which we are assembled this morning.

"The men associated with Mr. Goodman in the first vestry were: Colonel John L. Clem, United States army, now of Chicago; George S. Obear, now of Birmingham, Ala.; Thomas R. Ferris, now of San Diego, Cal., and W. S. Kelly, of Atlanta. This tablet was placed here by the members of the first vestry and by teachers and pupils in the first Sunday school and by a few others closely associated with Mr. Goodman in church work."

The tablet was received on behalf of the church by the Rev. John D. Wing, the rector.

Mr. Goodman died several years ago. He was one of the founders of the Episcopal church in West End and was an active member of the congregation up until the time of his death.

Following the dedication of the memorial, Mr. Wing conducted the regular church service and then preached his farewell sermon. He leaves this week to take charge of Grace Episcopal church in Anniston, Ala.

A number of the members of the W. D. Luckie lodge of Masons in West End attended the service to hear Mr. Wing's sermon. He is a member of this lodge.

He has been rector of the Church of the Incarnation for the past fourteen months, and spoke feelingly of his congenial church work in the parish.

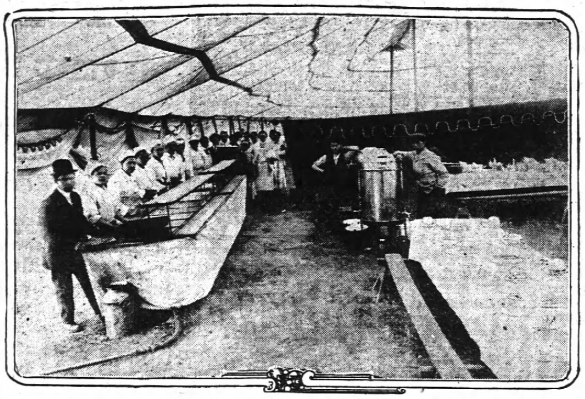
Charge of Light Brigade Was No More Spirited Than Onslaught on the Dinner Table at Circus



Section of the dining room of Barnum and Bailey circus, showing coffee urns and some of the cooks.

The Barnum & Bailey circus attractions will leave the circus grounds at 10 o'clock this morning for the parade through the city. The performances today will begin at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and at 8 o'clock at night.

By Sidney Ormond.

Since the days of my childhood I have longed to eat a meal with circus performers. I am at a loss to know why my youthful ambition took this turn, but never has a circus come to town that the desire of my youth has not returned. Perhaps it was that I had a natural curiosity to see the bearded lady eating soup, or to learn whether the glass-eater preferred such expensive delicacies as memorial windows or was a frugal-minded soul who contented himself with such ordinary provender as lamp chimneys or beer bottles.

Suffice it, the desire was still there when my friend, Dexter Fellows, press representative of the Barnum & Bailey show, came to town the other day and extended me an invitation to take dinner out at the circus grounds—to share put luck with the various freaks and artists and workmen of several grades who make up the 1,200 persons on the Barnum & Bailey payroll. At last the dream of a lifetime was to come true! I accepted with an enthusiasm which left no loophole for escape or chance for the invitation to be withdrawn.

Sounded Like a Battle.

Have you ever witnessed a sham battle or heard the rapid fire gun doing duty in one of Charles Blaney's lurid melodramas? If you have not, I am at a loss to describe the noise which encounters your ears as you enter the big cook tent where 1,200 persons eat three meals a day. The charge of the Light Brigade was never more spirited than the onslaught which these 1,200 make on mountains of victuals—not more spirited, but decidedly more successful, for the victory is all on the side of the invading army of men and women who come armed with appetites born of hard work and perfect digestions. Tons of beef disappear as if some feat of legerdemain had been performed, gallons of coffee vanish as if in steam, knives and forks beat on unbreakable plates in staccato measure. No one talks, no one has time to talk. It is a case of fire and fall back to make way for the other fellow who will come in in a moment with the hunger of a Siberian bear.

A Splendid Meal.

Our party were given seats in a corner of the huge tent where we could see the various high-priced performers as they came in. Circus performers are very human, very business-like folk outside the sawdust ring. There is nothing about the man to distinguish them from ordinary mortals, while a majority of the women might be taken for actresses in some musical comedy, only they dress more plainly and have less desire to attract attention. There is nothing, for example, to tell you that that rather lugubrious looking young man who is so scrupulously dressed is one of the highest-priced clowns in the world, nor would you suspect that he is an Oxford graduate, but such is the case. Nor is there aught about the high-est priced trapeze performer to distinguish her from the humblest member of the ballet. There is nothing of ostentation about her; she dresses plainly and seems of all things to avoid the gaze of the thousands who crowd around the tent just as she seeks to rivet the attention of those same thousands when she dons tights and spangles when the performance begins at night.

The dining tent is a huge affair, some 200 feet in length. One side is used to feed the tentmen, animal-keepers and laborers, while the other side caters to the appetites of the higher priced employees, including the performers and the show freaks. The same excellent meals are served to both classes.

Getting ready to water the pachyderms at the Barnum and Bailey circus.

Cooking for 1,200 people is no small job. In the first place it requires twenty cooks, who are working constantly from morning until night. The meals are served by eighty waiters—thoroughly competent, intelligent men, who are far more courteous than the average Atlanta waiter. Two thousand five hundred pounds of the best meat obtainable is consumed during the day's meals. Four hundred gallons of coffee disappears, while at least 1,000 loaves of bread are purchased each day. Potatoes, rice, eggs appear and disappear in proportion.

The meal served Sunday evening was as good as the most fastidious would want. Each person was served a porterhouse steak that would have cost at least 75 cents in any Atlanta restaurant; there was a plentiful supply of delmon fried potatoes, a jelly omelette, excellent butter, great stacks of bread and delicious coffee.

It was served with a neatness and dispatch incredible when the crowd and all things are considered.

No More "Muslin Girl" Parts Declares Miss Annie Russell

Miss Annie Russell, who appears at the Atlanta theater tonight has forsaken forever, she says, her "muslin girl" parts. This slight little woman, who is known by theatergoers the world over as an exponent of "the girl of today"—the blushing "standing on the threshold" sort of a girl—prefers to wear those histrionic ladies of dignity and finish. In short, she wants to "emote."

Miss Russell, in her own words, affirms this. Hear what the dainty little woman says:

"I've got away from 'Annie Russell' parts. And you know what 'Annie Russell' parts are! I got so sick of playing blanc-mangey girls and simpering ingenues—I call them Annie-genues—that it is lovely to appear one night in a strong role like that in 'The Nigger,' and the next night perhaps as Lady Teazle. I love 'Lady Teazle,' and I feel that I have been able to do something with it.

"You think my success has come easily. I have had awful times when nobody wanted me, and I had to appear in curtain-raisers and such things. Once I was put on ahead of Cissy Fitzgerald, and Oh, Susannah! After the long illness I had, they seemed to have forgotten me. I went to manager after manager—nothing doing. I was absolutely desperate, and—you will scarcely believe it—I was not regarded seriously in New York until I had made my success in London.

"I have played 'Annie Russell' parts since I was 8 years old," she said, "and I did so long to draw a deep breath, and to express life as I knew it. I have played these little ingenue parts, and I suppose I should feel very rejoiced at the knowledge that men who can't be induced to see problem plays came to my performances and got rested and refreshed. They told me so! But you know my real life has been something of a tragedy. I have had great troubles. The best and most artistic thing I did, years ago, was 'Elaine.' It appealed to people with artistic temperaments. And don't you think that the soul of the artist needs expression sometimes—that apart from mere material success there are certain things worth expressing to the cultured few? Oh, surely. The chance to fall—gloriously—is alluring, don't you think?

It gives a scope to the higher sentiments.

"It wasn't always so easy to play girls," she said. "People think that it is second nature but it isn't. It is difficult to put oneself invariably in the position of 17-year-old girls. I was not credited with creative power. I played my parts—Annie Russell parts—prettily. It was enough. I suppose I was happy. Perhaps I was. I could still play them—but I prefer to let them rest. I am attaining better things now and I know now I am happy."

Vienna, October 26.—Emperor William of Germany arrived here today on a visit to Emperor Francis Joseph, who warmly welcomed him at the station. NEAR PANIC CAUSED BY CRASH OF AUTOS

Street Car Passengers Thought for a Moment Their Car Had Been Hit.

Street car passengers aboard a Pryor street car and pedestrians were thrown into a panic at 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon when two high-power touring cars crashed together at the corner of South Pryor and Garnett streets.

An automobile belonging to L. O. Turner, a well-known real estate agent, with offices in the Atlanta National Bank building, driven by John Ware, negro chauffeur, was running south at the rate of 15 miles per hour on Pryor street. Turner and the driver were the only occupants.

Another car, rented by H. E. Latham, an attache of the solicitor general's office, driven by Raymond Nealy, negro chauffeur, was going east at about 8 miles an hour on Garnett street. Latham had three prisoners in custody, seated in the tonneau.

The two cars came together at the intersection of Garnett street, on Pryor, with a terrific crash, which caused passengers aboard a Pryor street car to think that the street car had been rammed. Men jumped and women screamed. There was a shower of splintered glass. Latham and two prisoners were thrown to the pavement just in front of the moving street car. Turner and the negro driver were shaken up, but retained their seats. No one was hurt. Latham's prisoners made no attempt to escape.

The entire front end of Latham's car was demolished. The right side of Turner's car was staved in. Motorcycle Patrolman J. W. West arrived on the scene several minutes after the accident. He at once arrested both chauffeurs on charge of violating the road ordinance with an automobile.

A huge crowd gathered, and there was much excitement. Traffic of street cars was delayed until the wreckage had been cleared from the track.

MRS. KING'S TRIAL WILL BEGIN TODAY

Defense to Fight Introduction of Alleged Confession in Which She Admits Plotting Husband's Death.

By Vernon Stiles, Special Staff Correspondent.

Gray, Ga., October 26.—(Special.)—With her attorneys claiming that the state has nothing upon which to convict her except the confession alleged to her, Mrs Kate King, aged 35, is due to go to trial Monday in Jones superior court as an accessory before the fact in the murder of her husband. James A. King, aged 60, was shot to death last December, and last Saturday Nick Wilburn, aged 22, alleged paramour of Mrs. King, was convicted and sentenced to hang for the murder.

Mrs. King did not testify against Wilburn, and Wilburn will not be used against her. Attorney W. D. McNeil, of Macon, leading counsel for the defendant, stated today that he would not use Wilburn. The state could not well use him, as he could claim the right of refusing to testify on the ground that he would incriminate himself. He is fighting for a new trial and would take advantage of this right.

Her Alleged Confession.

In a confession alleged to have been made last Christmas, the woman admits that she had plotted her husband's death in order to secure his $2,000 life insurance and marry Wilburn, for whom she was infatuated.

During the Wilburn trial Mrs. King gave an interview which was printed exclusively in The Constitution, in which she stated that she had been guilty of improper relations with Wilburn, but she declared that it was only after t.e lad overpowered her. She said the relations continued, and she feared to tell her husband on account of Wilburn's threat. This will be the defense she will use in the trial, and her attorneys will fight the introduction of the alleged confession of last year.

As Mrs. King's fate hung on Wilburn's trial, so his fate depends to great extent on the result of her trial. The woman could not have been tried as an accessory unless the young farmer had been convicted. He is now seeking a new trial, and Attorney John R. Cooper, representing him, declared today that if Mrs. King was not hanged the boy would never be allowed to hang by any governor or pardon board in Georgia.

Attorney Cooper will attend Mrs. King's trial and watch the interests of his client. He will also seek affidavits from John A. and W. L. Middlebrooks, jurors on the Wilburn case. He claimed a new trial, alleging these jurors to be related to Gus Middlebrooks, a brother-in-law to the dead man.

Attorney Cooper was unable to prove this during the trial, and was not allowed to swear the two jurors and have them testify. The motion for a new trial for Wilburn is set for November 6, at Milledgeville. On account that the evidence was not sufficient, that Judge J. R. Parker erred in allowing Wilburn's alleged confession to go to the jury, that the jury was prejudiced and the alleged relationship, the condemned man will ask another trial.

Mrs. King spent a quiet Sunday in her cell in the Jones county jail. She has read the Bible often since her incarceration, and frequently denounces herself as not fit to live. She puts all the blame on Wilburn, but in her statement to The Constitution, declared that she did wrong in not braving Wilburn's threats and telling her husband of what she claims Wilburn had forced upon her.

JEWEL EMBLEM GIVEN TO EDWARD M. HAFER

Edward M. Hafer, who last week was made a thirty-third degree Mason, was honored again last night by a number of his Atlanta friends, who went to his residence on Peachtree street and presented him with a handsome jeweled emblem.

Mr. Hafer was agreeably surprised by the presentation, and made an appropriate response to his friends who presented the emblem.

ITALIAN ELECTIONS WON BY GOVERNMENT

Rome, October 26.—General elections were held throughout Italy today. The disorders were not as grave as expected, although one person was killed and many were wounded. Numerous arrests were made in various quarters. The balloting was light because the spring-like weather caused the people to go on excursions rather than to the polls. Results of the elections will not be known definitely until late Monday, but already the government is assured of a large majority. Giovanni Giolitti, the premier, has been re-elected almost unanimously with the other members of his cabinet.

Others elected include ex-Premiers Baron Sidney Sonnino and Luigi Luzzatti; Ferdinando Martini, socialist leader; Leonida Bysolati-Bergamaschi, republican leader; Signor Barzilai and the former minister of public instruction, Nunzio Nasi, who served a term in prison for embezzlement and later was sent several times to the chamber of deputies, only to have his election annulled.

In a hundred constituencies a fierce struggle was waged, especially between socialists and Catholics, and in these a second ballot will be taken next Sunday.

In some constituencies, particularly in the Venetian provinces, ecclesiastics voted openly. At Cesena the bishop was the first to go to the polls.

So far as returns have been received, out of 508 constituencies, 197 liberals or ministerialists have been elected, as well as 24 moderators, 17 socialists 11 republicans and 6 clericals.

Prince Scipione Borghes and Prince Teano, both radicals, failed of re-election in their Rome constituencies. Signor Bissati, the socialist leader, was re-elected.

RESTFUL DAY FOR SPEER; HIS FAMILY ENCOURAGED

Mount Airy, Ga., October 27.—(Special.)—Federal Judge Emory Speer, of the southern district of Georgia, who has been very critically ill at his summer home here, passed a quiet and restful day and seems to be improving. His family is very much encouraged with his present condition.

Macon, Ga., October 26.—(Special.)—A. N. Heyward wired tonight from Mount Airy that his father-in-law, Judge Emory Speer, was much improved and that his family now has hopes of his ultimate recovery. Mr. Heyward stated that Judge Speer had passed a restful night and apparently was in better condition than at any time since his condition became critical. Advices received from Mount Airy here today were similar to the statement by Mr. Heyward.

STRIKERS AND GUARDS IN PITCHED BATTLE

Two Persons Reported Killed. Situation in Colorado Mining District Extremely Critical.

Ludlow, Colo., October 26.—A general battle between strikers, mine guards and deputy sheriffs was waged for twelve hours today in Berwin canyon at Hastings and in the vicinity of the Colorado and Southern station at Ludlow.

Firing started at 3 o'clock this morning and continued intermittently until nearly 4 o'clock this afternoon. One mine guard was killed and, according to union men, one striker is missing.

The situation is extremely critical tonight. More than 700 armed strikers are reported to be in the field against the mine guards. Armed strikers patrol the entire district in the vicinity of Ludlow, and communication with the camps of Cedar Hill, Tollerburg, Berwin, Hastings, Del Agua and Tabasco practically has been cut off.

The firing started this morning in the vicinity of the Colorado and Southeastern bridge, the zone of yesterday's battle. The guards, it is said, retreated in the direction of Cedar Hill and Tabasco.

At daylight the strikers from the Ludlow tent colony made their way along the hills past Cedar Hill to Tabasco and opened a heavy fire on that camp. The guard who was killed was struck while returning the fire of the strikers near the triple tipple at Tabasco.

The attack on Hastings began at about 11 o'clock. Shots rained on the camp from two quarters for nearly two hours, but, according to officials of the Victor American Fuel company, no serious damage was done.

The final skirmish of the day was an attack by strikers along the Colorado and Southeastern tracks near Barnes station, on a passing Denver and Rio Grande train, which the strikers declared was carrying mine guards.

BEATS WAY ON TRAIN.

Alleged Circus Acrobat Must Explain to the Recorder.

When fast train No. 14, of the Southern railway, steamed into the Terminal station, a wiry young chap, quite dapper in spite of the fact that he had just ended a long dirty trip, jumped nimbly down from the blind forward end of the first baggage coach of the train and started briskly for the exit.

Special Officer Ray, of the Southern, however, was on the job, and promptly placed the man under arrest, charged with suspicion. When taken to police headquarters he gave his name as C. Copeland, stating that he is employed as an acrobat by the Barnum & Bailey circus, and claimed New York as his home. He will be given an opportunity this morning of explaining to Recorder Rose just why he was "beating it" here instead of coming in with the circus outfit.

ALL THE BODIES BURIED UNDER TONS OF DEBRIS

Dawson, N. M., October 26.—The bodies of Mine Superintendent William M. McDermott and Henry P. McShane, the young miner from New York, were recovered tonight in the fourth chamber north of mine No. 2 of the Stag Canyon Fuel company. Both bodies with 6 others were buried under tons of debris.

It is known tonight that not one of the 284 men caught in the explosion remains in the mine alive. Late today the entire workings had been explored by helmet men and it was learned definitely that the bodies not located are buried beneath tons of debris.

The mine today remained relatively clear of the "death gas" which heretofore impeded the rescue work.

TEMPERANCE TARS CHEERED BY W. C. T. U.

Mrs. Mary Harris Armor Tells Convention How Georgia Was Made "Dry."

New York, October 26.—Enthusiasm was aroused this afternoon when eight sailors from the United States steamship Washington, receiving ship at the Brooklyn navy yard, appeared at the convention of the world's Women's Christian Temperance union at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. Many in the audience rose and cheered.

Mrs. Anderson Hughes Drew, delegate from New Zealand, won the woman suffrage element in the audience by her speech.

"I never knew what an 'anti' was," she said, "until I came to America. It was very surprising to me that any person should ally herself against suffrage for her sex."

Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, of Georgia, in a ringing speech, declared that many persons when they started to run for congress suddenly discovered just how strong their temperance sympathies were. She told in a general way how the states of Georgia and West Virginia went dry. "The idea of saying that any good man is in the saloon business is bosh," she concluded.

Congressman Richmond Pearson Hobson, who was to have addressed the meeting, was unable to be present, as he is making a prohibition fight in his state of Alabama.

WIDER WEST HUNTER PROMISED FOR CITY

Work Will Be Started When the Whitehall Regrading Is Completed.

The widening and regrading of West Hunter street will be started just as soon as Whitehall is completed between Mitchell and Trinity avenue.

It has been planned to widen the street thirty feet from Ashby to the city line, and give it a smooth grade. The project has been in abeyance for several months.

Great progress was made on Whitehall street last week. The Georgia Railway and Power company removed all its tracks, and during the early part of the coming week work will be started on lowering the water mains. It is expected that in two weeks the stretch will be cut down to the proper grade, and along about the early part of December the street will be ready for traffic.

Despite protests, the steam shovel belonging to the county will be moved from Brady street to Ponce de Leon park, where the city and county will begin work on a sewer. The shovel will be moved next week.

Work on the sewer in the Ponce de Leon section was requested by the Shriners. The old amusement grounds will be used as a camp and parade ground by thousand of visitors.

Raid Lula Bell's House.

Plain clothes police officers working under Sergeant J. W. Barfield, last night raided the house of Lula Bell, at No. 169½ Peters street. The Bell woman was placed under arrest, charged with operating a rooming house without a license. Four women inmates were not molested. Lula Bell will face Recorder Broyles in police court this morning.

Not in the Wilderness, But on Life's Highway, Is Place for Holiness

In a sermon on "Reconciled and Saved," delivered yesterday morning at the Central Presbyterian church, Dr. Dunbar Ogden said that the place for right living and for the setting of a holy life is not in the wilderness, away from sin and temptation, but on the throbbing highway of life, where the example will stand out before men and exert a constructive influence for good.

"Christ realized this pre-eminent truth and chose to live His life and exert His example not by a life of perfection in the wilderness, but by a life of service among men," said Dr. Ogden. "It is true now, as it was 2,000 years ago, and there is a crying need in the world today for men in the ranks of the great employed who will follow conscientiously and earnestly the example of Christ in a life of righteousness on the world's highway."

Dr. Ogden told of his visit during the past week to Davidson college, North Carolina, where he looked into the faces of 300 young men who are learning, he said, the fundamental principles of right living, in having their moral and spiritual natures trained at the same time they are pursuing the higher branches of learning in the university.

FOUR HIGH SCHOOLS CALLED INADEQUATE

Professor W. F. Dykes Sends Communication to Constitution on Situation in the Atlanta Schools.

Professor W. F. Dykes, principal of the Boys' high school, in a signed statement declares that the four high school buildings are inadequate and unsuitable.

He calls attention to the fact that the high school enrollment is approximately 1,500—900 girls and 600 boys, and says that the attendance is not as large as it should be in a city of the size of Atlanta.

Professor Dykes does not explain the cause of the small enrollment, but he makes the following terse comment:

"The high school enrollment is not as large as it should be. For a city of the size of Atlanta there should be 2,500 pupils in the high schools. To what extent the inadequacy or equipment has caused this small enrollment I am not prepared to state."

Hundreds Are Lost.

Professor Dykes has been connected with the public school system of Atlanta for more than twenty years.

He says that every year he is forced to realize the loss to the young men and women of the high schools on account of the lack of modern equipment.

"Their very surroundings are not conducive to their inspirational betterment," he says. "A noble discontent is evident in their faces. They deserve better quarters and should have them."

Professor Dykes asks that the city build two new high schools at a cost of not less than $250,000 each. He declares that Atlanta cannot afford to mark time educationally when other cities are making progress.

Professor Dykes' Communication.

Professor Dykes' communication follows:

"Editor Constitution—Without any desire to air my opinion or to usurp the authority of others I desire to submit to the public the following observations in regard to the high school situation in Atlanta:

"There are four high schools in the public school system, two for girls and two for boys. The enrollment is approximately 1,500—900 girls and 600 boys.

"These boys and girls are all housed in buildings that are inadequate and unsuitable. It is not my mission to state which one of the four is in greatest need of a new and more modern building. The city of Atlanta should display enough civic pride to provide magnificently for all four of them.

"The high school enrollment is not as large as it should be. For a city the size of Atlanta there should be 2,500 pupils in the high schools. To what extent the inadequacy of equipment has caused this small enrollment I am not prepared to state.

Serve City Faithfully.

"The members of the board of education are serving the city faithfully without compensation. Much of their valuable time is being devoted to the schools. They are fully informed in regard to the high school situation, and are doing what they can to relieve it.

"The high schools did not get one dollar of the recent bond money. The grammar schools needed all of it and more. Can not the city of Atlanta plan to build during the coming year two new high schools to cost not less than $250,000 each? Can we afford to mark time educationally while other cities are progressing?

"The high schools are the people's colleges. They are preparing our boys and girls for citizenship. Good high schools help to make good grammar schools.

"My devotion to the Boys' high school due to nearly twenty years' service prompts me to write this letter.

"There is no finer set of boys in the world than the 367 boys now enrolled in the Boys' high school. Every year I am forced to realize the loss to these manly boys on account of their lack of modern equipment. Their very surroundings are not conducive to their inspirational betterment. A noble discontent is evident in their faces. They desire better quarters and should have them.

"It is true they have a roof over head and every boy is seated at a desk of his own, but is this enough? We have built splendid churches for religious worship. Our magnificent new courthouse is nearing completion, an elegant place for trying criminals. We are provided with a handsome postoffice for the delivery of mail. We have a costly public library which is doing a valuable service to the city. A new Y. M. C. A. building is being planned. But our boys in the Boys' high school are using the same old whittled desks at which their fathers probably sat twenty-five years ago. Each year they are becoming more and more overrun by the various school enterprises that are of necessity housed in this building.

Forced to Divide School.

"Five years ago the board was forced to divide the school by removing the technological department from this building in order to accommodate the increased enrollment.

"Notwithstanding these discouragements the Boys' high school is graduating every year a large number of young men who are prepared to enter any college in the United States. Recent graduates from the new four-year course are now sustaining themselves creditably at Harvard, Princeton, Vanderbilt, Cornell, the University of Virginia and many southern institutions.

"Our commercial department, with only a two-year course, is sending out every year about thirty young men fully equipped as stenographers and bookkeepers, in addition to being trained in English and mathematics.

"Very respectfully,

"W. F. DYKES,
"Principal."

Gentlemen:-

We think the advertising carried in your medium merits an unsolicited testimonial from us. Our classified advertisement in the "CONSTITUTION", which we have been using for several weeks, has produced most satisfactory results.

Two things stand out paramount:- First, our classified advertisement in the "Constitution" has brought us inquiries and orders not only from every part of Georgia but from the entire South.

Second, the replies received have come from a better class of people than from any other classified advertisements we have used. We have received orders from bankers, merchants, professional men, men of character and business experience.

The results obtained from the use of your classified columns are highly satisfactory and are not a mere "happenstance."

The expense associated with advertising of this kind is of secondary importance in comparison with the good results obtained, as we regard it. This is given for your information and disposition.

Very truly yours,

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

"The Standard Southern Newspaper"

The football practice game season is over. Starting Saturday the real elimination contests are in order. Good games seem certain.

REAL FOOTBALL BATTLES APPROACHING

WHIFFS

East v. West.

THE FOOTBALL championship of the country will never be decided except by the matter of opinion. It was hoped by some that there would be a game at the end of the season between the admitted champions of the east and west to decide this honor, but the western officials have thrown cold water on the proposition by saying that they would have everything to lose and nothing to gain, and they are not far wrong at that.

In This Section.

IN THE SOUTH, however, there seems to be a broadening of contesting. The appearance of Virginia in Atlanta, the trip of Sewanee and L. S. U. to Texas, of Alabama to New Orleans to play Tulane, Tech to Florida, Vanderbilt to Charlottesville to play Virginia and North Carolina to Athens to play Georgia is widening the scope of football games throughout the entire south, and gives the southern football public an idea of just which is the best section.

The Comparison.

THESE games will furnish a good comparison, as Virginia plays eastern teams and all the leading elevens of the South Atlantic states, while Texas plays all the leading teams in that section. Football is certainly growing in the south, and this year's breadth and scope of play is on a wider basis then ever before. Next year's proposes to be even more so.

Coming Games.

THE GAMES that will be played this week and the weeks to follow are the football classics of the year. One can get a very good idea of which teams are pointed for the championships in the east, west and south after the games of November 1. Every city of any size in the country has a good game on tap for that date.

He Should Worry.

THE LEDGER, at Birmingham, commenting on the Press case, states that the S. I. A. A. acted in its usual clear-headedness on the case and with consummate speed. They close their article with this comment: "Press was found not guilty, and Heisman has scored again. Catch Heisman and you have got to get up early, or to be more exact, stay up all the time."

Hope Its True.

IN THESE days of football and the winter league of baseball, the reports from St. Louis that Wallie Smith and Harry Holland are to be returned to the Crackers by Clark Griffith, and that Catcher Bingo Williams is to be sent here also by Griffith, is joyous. Williams and Smith, both heavy hitters, would bolster the Cracker offense immensely, to say nothing of the defense, which, with Williams and Chapman catching, Dent, Price, Thompson and Kissinger as a pitching nucleus, Alpermann at second, Walton at third, and Long, Welchance and Nixon in the outfield, looks good for another rag.

Nothing to It.

LARRY M'LEAN, the Giants' big receiver, regarding whom there was a story printed a few days ago that he received only $1000 for his share in the world's series spoils, as he was not with the Giants all season, has come out with a denial. Larry says that he got his full share, and how the report started that he did not is beyond him. Think of the world's series Larry and the suds are going to have with $2,100.

Is Doomed.

THE CINCINNATI base hit is doomed. After a season of trial, and we admit that it has been a failure, the scorers' committee is going to meet this fall and abolish it, returning to the old rule of giving these plays fielder's choices, as they had been scored previous to the season. The Cincinnati hit was a good scoring rule about once in one hundred cases.

Shows Wisdom.

CLARK GRIFFITH is dickering for Mike Mitchell, of the Pittsburg Pirates, to play outfield for the Washington Americans next season. In dickering for this player Griffith makes the statement that he is through experimenting with young unseasoned outfielders. Mitchell will help the Senators, and Moeller, Milan and Mitchell will make a very formidable trio for the men of Griff.

Moguls to Meet.

SALLY league moguls will meet at Savannah this week to discuss the situation in that circuit for the 1914 season. It is said that some changes in the league's personnel will be proposed.

NEGRO MOTORCYCLISTS WILL RACE TUESDAY

The negro motorcycle race meet, which was postponed from last Sunday, will be run Tuesday afternoon at the local Motordrome, according to information. The start will be at 2:30 o'clock.

Bill Jones and Lucky Lee will defend the honors of the local colored contingent against the invasion of Birmingham and Wilson brothers, of New Orleans.

Bill Jones is out to break the record he was at the local Speedway some time ago. Bill believes that he has broken his hard-luck streak and that this afternoon he is going to show them some speed. Bill has been known to ride the white boards "if any of them other nigguers try to keep me from winning."

Several Good Football Games On Menu for This Saturday; Elimination Begins Then

There is a more than usually good set of football games scheduled for the coming Saturday, games that will mean the elimination of this or that team from chances for the college title in their respective sections.

Local interest will naturally settle on the Sewanee-Tech game at Grant field, and from all the dope obtainable on the two teams it is going to be a battle worth going to see. To pick the winner this far away is out of the question.

Georgia's wonderful showing against Virginia Saturday should make her safe favorite in the game with the University of North Carolina at Athens, though judging from the Virginia Polytechnic Institute-North Carolina score of Saturday, Georgia is not going to have any easy time of it. Virginia Polytechnic institute was able to win by only one touchdown margin.

At Mobile, Auburn will get her first real test of the season, and just how strong the Donahue Bunch really is can be gained by a glance at the score they make against the Louisiana State University team, which, according to reports, is a strong one this season.

In view of the game that was last Saturday, the Virginia-Vanderbilt game is going to attract more interest and bid create more interest than any game scheduled for the week.

Unless Virginia shows more strength than she did against Georgia, or unless Vanderbilt is considerably weaker than usual, Virginia is likely to be given a drubbing, something that she did not miss by a great margin Saturday.

A game of importance to the Carolinas is the annual battle between Clemson and South Carolina, at Columbia, on Thursday. This game is to South Carolina what the Georgia-Tech game is to Georgia. And the dope seems to be pretty even.

One game would attract a lot of attention in the east were it not for the disappointing showing thus far of the Cornell team. This is the Cornell-Harvard game, but a comparison of the merits of the two elevens and their showing to date will show that Harvard has all the edge.

There is an intersection scrap of interest in a game that has become a yearly attraction in recent years, the Syracuse-Michigan game. The dope is at variance on this game and there is little that one can judge by to form an estimate of this game in advance.

Two games of vital importance in the settling of the championship of the west are the Illinois-Chicago and the Minnesota-Wisconsin game. The first named looks like a toss up, but Minnesota ought to win her game. The victor of the Illinois-Chicago game with Minnesota and the Michigan Aggies will then have the best look-in for the western title.

Bill Is Ready to Die, So His Manager Says; Will Race on Tuesday

The colored motorcycle races, scheduled for last Saturday, have been postponed until tomorrow afternoon. A wet track, which was too dangerous even for "Hard Luck" Bill Jones to race on, decided Assistant Manager Dupree to issue rain checks, although a large number of Lower Auburn avenue race enthusiasts and belles of Darktown had gathered to see the events run.

Jones, who deserted auto racing some time since, when he couldn't find a mechanician who would stay in his auto when he speeded up, to take up motorcycle racing, gave the crowd a try-out race Saturday. He rode the white strip at the top of the saucer-shaped track and his colored friends in the grand stand let out yells of approval that sounded like the death call of a tribe of wild men.

Bill left his home early Sunday to go to the track. His mother pointed to the "Grady hospital as he passed out of the gate and said: "Wembah, son, what I tole you." Bill gazed at the hospital, then turning toward the Motordrome, said: "Tso jew' got one certain time to die—might's well be now." He went to the Motordrome and sat reading his Bible, his manager said, all of Sunday morning. In the afternoon he took out his racer and speeded upon the track, tuning his machine for his encounter Tuesday afternoon with the best motorcycle racers of his color in the south.

The same prices that were in force Saturday will be charged Tuesday afternoon. The Dixie colored band will also play.

Tickets for the events are on sale at Tumlin's cigar stores and at Shepard's, on Edgewood avenue.

Sewanee Forwards Touted As Good As Any in South

Chattanooga, Tenn., October 26.—(Special.)—Although Sewanee's five forwards, from tackle to tackle, average but a little more than 175 pounds in weight this year, followers of the Tigers claim and underestimate if to they form the best rush line in the south. The Tigers have had all sorts of worries about backfield and ends, but the forwards have had no up any opposing quintet in the south.

Four of the five were members of last year's eleven; the other, Barnwell, succeeds Stoney, the star at center, and it is claimed that he is an even better man than his stocky, aggressive predecessor.

Captain McCallum, at guard, is the heaviest man of the five, and the way he plays through the center of Tennessee's line leads Tiger rooters to believe that he has a great year before him and will spill many an opposing play before making that capital abysses for Sewanee's pet play—Quarterback Tolley's sneak through the center of the line.

Tolley made from five to fifteen yards every time he tried that against Tennessee, principally through "Heavy's" ability to make the gaps. The other guard is played by Haggood, an aggressive, consistent man.

The tackles are being boosted pointly and separately for all-southern honors. Dobbins, who backs up the line on defense, is claimed by the Tiger fans to be the king bee defensive man of them all, getting fully half of Sewanee's tackles. Big Moore, at the other tackle, breaks through consistently and is rated a valuable man. Following are the weights of this formidable quintet: Barnwell, 195; McCallum, 190; Haggood, 180; Dobbins, 168, and Moore, 180.

The strength of the line in front of him causes Sewanee to place much faith in "Big" Parker, the fullback, who is heralded as "some" line plunger.

Thirty Bales on Wagon.

Dublin, Ga., October 26.—(Special.)—Thirty bales of cotton were brought to this city on one wagon at one time Saturday afternoon last, by George Chilton, a large planter living about 16 miles from the city. The load was hauled from his farm with nine mules on a steel frame, roller-bearing wagon, and the prime cause of his bringing so much at one time was a wager with the man who sold the wagon as to its ability to carry the load.

WATSON, PUT OFF TRAIN, SUSTAINS FATAL FALL

Lies All Night Suffering From Injuries After Tumble From 32-Foot Trestle.

Dublin, Ga., October 26.—(Special.) Dave Watson died here this morning from injuries sustained when he fell from the railroad trestle over the Oconee river at this place last night.

Mr. Watson stated that he got on the wrong train, and was carried about 2 miles across the river before the conductor discovered it, and put him off. He started back to town walking, and just before he reached the Dublin end of the trestle fell to the ground, about 32 feet, and was unable to get up, being policed to lay on the ground all night. He was not found until early this morning, when a negro passing heard him call and notified the county sheriff, who brought him to the city. He had several ribs broken, and was injured internally, and this, with the exposure all night on the river bank, brought death a short time after he was found.

He is a well-known citizen of the county, and is survived by a wife and two sons, one of whom is ferryman of Blackshear's ferry, in this county.

GAIN OF 110 SHOWN BY SUNDAY SCHOOLS OVER 1912 AVERAGE

Twenty Sunday schools of Atlanta, including in yesterday's compilation reports of 1913 and 1912, showed an average gain of 110 per school within the past year. The total attendance of the twenty schools was 8,027 an average of 401, as compared with a total of 5,813 in the same schools last year, which was an average of only 291.

MACON COUNCIL MAY STRIP MAYOR OF POWER

Aldermen Can Repeal Ordinance Giving Him Authority to Name Police and Firemen.

Macon, Ga., October 26.—(Special.)—Friends of Mayor-elect Bridges Smith are considerably concerned over the discovery today that the mayor of the city of Macon has authority to name the members of the police and fire departments under a city ordinance only and not by charter amendment as was generally supposed.

According to a man who opposed the administration faction in the recent municipal campaign, in which ten of the Miller aldermen were elected, the new council can repeal this ordinance, which has been on the books for several years, and take the power of the policemen and firemen into their own hands, giving the jobs to their own political favorites.

Whether they will do it remains to be seen. It is contended by this man that the only city officials the mayor has the authority by charter amendment to name are the members of the board of health.

DUBLIN FAIR SECURES TWO FINE EXHIBITS

Dublin, Ga., October 26.—(Special.)—Two counties that have prize winning exhibits at the state fair in Macon—Houston and Twiggs—will ship their exhibits to the Twelfth District fair to be held in Dublin the week following the close of the state fair. Both of these exhibits are very fine, and have been admired greatly by the thousands that attended the fair in Macon, so that the management of the Dublin show feels much gratified that they were able to get these two counties to ship their exhibits here the following week. Besides these exhibits, a large number of concessions, midway, shows, etc., from the state fair will come to Dublin to show at the Twelfth District fair, giving this fair some of the very best features to be had.

GRAND JURY WOULD SIT ON THOMASVILLE LID

Thomasville, Ga., October 26.—(Special.)—The grand jury which was in session in Thomasville here during the past week decided that the Sunday lid was off Sunday and Sunday only in Thomasville, and recommended that the authorities look into the matter. They stated that they had found drug stores, some of the groceries, automobile supply stores, etc., doing business on Sunday, which was against the law and should be stopped.

The grand jury also went into the investigation of the illicit liquor stills, and "sich," but seem to have found the usual trouble in securing witnesses who were willing to tell much in these matters.

BIG RED FOX KILLED AFTER 9-HOUR CHASE

Dublin, Ga., October 26.—(Special.)—R. A. Palmer, a rural route carrier in this county, killed a very large red fox here this morning early after a nine-hour chase. The fox was the largest seen in this county in many years, being about 25 pounds in weight. The fox was chased with an pack of hounds, and was caught about 7 a. m. in the lower edge of the county.

Fox-hunting is not rare by any means in this county, and many parties follow the hounds in Laurens. There are some splendid foxhounds owned here, and there is always a large number ready to go for a hunt.

Mr. Adair is going to give a handsome trophy for the winner of the tournament. There will be thirty-two entrants. No qualifying round will be played. The thirty-two players will be paired and in the first round of match play, the defeated sixteen will form a second flight.

There will also be a trophy for the runner-up in the first flight and one for the winner of the defeated sixteen.

The first round of match play must be played by Saturday. The committee will meet Wednesday and make the drawings and then the players can start to work. Three weeks have been allowed for the consummation of the tournament, though the players are sure to complete it in less time than that.

The tournament will be a handicap event. The committee will fix the handicaps of the entrants. An entrance fee of $1 will be charged.

New York, October 26.—The ten-round bout between Leach Cross and Willie Ritchie, which was to have taken place here next Wednesday night, has been postponed to November 10, because of an injury sustained by Cross to a muscle over his ribs. WILSON TO OPEN MOBILE CONGRESS

Meeting Expected to Be Most Important Ever Held by Southern Commercial Congress—To Honor Morgan.

Mobile, Ala., October 26.—Featured by a speech of President Wilson, the seventh annual convention of the Southern Commercial congress will be opened here tomorrow for a three-day session. In conjunction will be a celebration of the opening of the Panama canal and a memorial to Senator John T. Morgan, of Alabama, who for more than thirty years was a strong advocate of a water route across the isthmus.

President Wilson will arrive here early tomorrow morning and, at 8 o'clock the ceremonies will be opened with a breakfast for the president. Later in the morning he will address the convention and will leave for Washington shortly after noon. Until late Saturday night it was not assured that the president would come here, because of the delicate Mexican situation, and when he left it was to hurry back to Washington because of the conditions in Mexico.

As the Panama canal soon is to be opened, this is expected to be the most important convention the Southern Commercial congress ever has had. No definite plan of action has been mapped out, but the list of speakers is more impressive heretofore, and actions taken at this convention are expected to have weight in future commerce of the south.

Tuesday at noon thirteen of the speakers will deliver addresses in as many churches and auditoriums in the city in honor of the memory of Senator Morgan.

Besides President Wilson, Secretary of the Navy Daniels will address the congress, and other members of the cabinet of the south who have had active interest in development of Dixie's commerce.

"HOME-COMING DAY" AT THE TABERNACLE

All Members of Church Are Warmly Welcomed on Their Arrival Sunday.

"Home-coming day" at the Baptist Tabernacle on Sunday morning and evening was a distinct success. Regardless of the fact that the services were of a religious nature, it seemed, at times, that the spirit of a family reunion pervaded the big auditorium, and more closely bound together the members of the large audience that attended the services, both during the day and at night.

The morning service was marked by the appearance of the church architect who met the incoming churchgoers in the lobby of the Tabernacle, and warmly welcomed each member or visitor as they appeared at the unseen door-way.

Rev. Lincoln McConnell, the pastor of the church, assisted by Rev. Dibbs, made it a point to welcome each one of each person entering the auditorium, so far as they were personally able to do so.

Auditorium Decorated.

The auditorium was beautifully decorated for the occasion, bunting being tastily hung from the balconies, while fall blooms and goldenrod were placed in vases in windows and on the rostrum.

The morning sermon by Rev. McConnell was taken from the Bible story of Christ and Peter.

"Dost thou love Me, Peter?" was the text and from there on Rev. McConnell drew a picture of the love of man for man that was extremely effective.

"Would that this real interest, brotherly love—the love that binds men closer together—the love that makes for great deeds—were more of a factor in our present day life," said Rev. Mr. McConnell.

"I believe the day is surely coming when the love of our brother will govern the dealings of mankind as Christ so meant in His question asked of Peter."

Special Collection.

Following the sermon a special collection was taken up for the work of the Tabernacle for the next week, while the collection this year passed all expectations," said Mr. Stenbridge, one of the officials of the church, at the conclusion of the services.

Of special interest during the morning service was the music, several solos and choir numbers being well rendered by the Tabernacle choir.

Among the audience on Sunday morning were the scope of the members of the Tabernacle congregation, who, it was said, had not attended services there for the past year.

NEW ORGANIST WILL MAKE HIS PLAY NEXT SUNDAY

Colonel W. L. Peel announced Sunday afternoon at the Auditorium organ recital that William Zeuch, the Chicago concert organist, selected by the Musical Festival association as successor to Dr. Starnes, will take up his duties next Sunday.

"Mr. Zeuch comes to us as a finished musician," said Colonel Peel, addressing the large audience at Sunday's concert. "We have faith that his efforts here will be more than crowned with success.

"The members of the Music Festival association also want to take this opportunity to thank Mr. Charles A. Sheldon, Jr., who has so liberally given his services to the music festival directors for the past month. We have been delighted with his sincere and musicianly attitude and we take this opportunity of publicly thanking him."

Sheldon, assisted by Miss Sylvia Spritz, a tiny little woman with an immense voice, rendered his last concert before an appreciative audience Sunday afternoon.

Prominent place on the program was given to Theodore De Reise's "Caribene Nuptiale," which was played in honor of the musician, who died during the past week. The rendition of this number by Sheldon was extremely effective, and the deep tones evoked a storm of applause which in turn, occasioned an encore.

Gilette's "Chant D'Amour," a light but beautiful bit, which the organ accessories play a large part, such as the use of the chimes, the flute notes, and the deeper tones, was brilliantly executed and as warmly received.

Miss Sprite's rendition of her several numbers deserves more than limited space permits. Miss Spritz, with her far-reaching, yet extremely flexible mezzo voice, captured the hearts of her audience completely. Her first number, Salter's well-known, all-but-recitative "The Cry of Rachel," was a dramatic bit of voice technique which, in its delivery, was all but thrilling.

In her second effort, Brewer's "The Fairy Pipers," a dainty little conception, Miss Sprite showed her voice to vast advantage in the lighter passages. During the occasion, one might have all but imagined Miss Spritz among light opera, her numbers were so pleasing and her inflections so cleverly turned. The "E" number of her second effort, Owen's "Love is a Bubble," the well known and always pleasing little song bit, was also warmly pleasing. The audience, unsatisfied, asked for an encore, which was gracefully given.

The audience present Sunday afternoon was one of the largest seen in several months.

During the auto show, which lapses over one Sunday, the organ recitals will be held just as usual, in the Main floor and first balcony of the Auditorium will be in use by the auto concerns, but the audience will be seated in the third balcony, where it is pointed out the music will be much more appreciated than if one were seated too close to the organ.

"Josie Purett, aged 18 years, height 5 feet 3 inches, weight about 140 pounds, good teeth, fair complexion and light hair, slightly tinged with red, beautiful dresser, and makes fashionable appearance," was the description received by the Atlanta police Sunday from the Birmingham police department. Who are anxious to locate a young woman of a prominent Birmingham family, who disappeared from her home in Birmingham October 15.

The letter stated that the girl is headstrong and wayward, according to her father, and that she left her parents following a family quarrel. She is said to be visiting friends in Atlanta, and the police have been asked to place her under arrest and notify her father, who will come for her.

TODAY AT MOVIES

The Vaudette.

With Rosemary Thebein the leading role, a beautiful two-reel Reliance film entitled "Hearts," will be shown at the Vaudette today. The virtues and vices and actions of one woman toward another lay the corner-stone for a deeply absorbing plot. The woman who hates in "Hearts" is a wealthy society-in-law. The one who suffers is the object of this hatred—a sweet, simple, country maiden, whose only sin has been her beautiful love and honorable marriage to this woman's worthy son.

Circumstances being about a fatal misunderstanding between the girl and her devoted husband, which leads to her leaving a way to suffer alone. Together they finally come together in a foreign land and are happily reunited—a befitting climax for this excellently named heart-interest drama.

A humorous Keystone film, entitled "The Janitor," will also be shown. The Belmont Comedy Four is continuing a popular engagement.

The Alcazar.

The principal photo play at the Alcazar today is entitled, "A Puritan Episode." It is a powerful drama in two reels, dealing with the Puritans of New England days, when the stern Puritans of Salem believed in witchcraft. A beautiful love story is woven around the central plot. The scenes are interesting, both from a scenic and historical viewpoint. A light comedy, entitled "Chelsea 1750," from the Kalem, and described as "lamb full of juvenile mischief," will complete the bill which is daily at this theater, in the midst of a successful return engagement, which will continue until further notice. The high-class singing of this quartet has made it one of the most popular features ever introduced in a local motion picture house.

The Savoy.

One of the big motion picture features of the season in Atlanta will be the presentation at the Savoy Wednesday and Thursday of "Chelsea 7750," an original drama of the underworld, produced under the direction of Daniel Frohman, with the eminent actor, Edward Connelly, in the leading part. "Chelsea 1749," is a detective drama in three reels, starting in its conception. It sounds every depth of the underworld, discloses its secrets, methods and emotions. In a relentless pursuit of a trained and resourceful gang of counterfeiters, which later develops into intense mental and physical struggle, Mr. Dixey is provided with one of the strongest parts he has ever portrayed. "Chelsea 1750" consequently noted star of the "legitimate" stage with a new success.

The program today at the Savoy will include "The Thumb Print," a two-reel mystery drama staged in picturesque western setting, and a comedy entitled "Miss Fairweather Out West."

The Alamo.

Don Ferrandou, the operatic baritone, whose magnificent solo work has been a feature at the Alamo during the past week, will sing the famous Toreador song from "Carmen," this afternoon from 3 o'clock on throughout the afternoon and evening performances. Mr. Ferrandou's voice is of the finest Atlantans have had the opportunity of hearing in concert or opera this season. His singing is a treat for music lovers.

The motion picture program for today will include a particularly laughable biograph comedy entitled, "An Interrupted Honeymoon," featuring Mr. A. Kalem film, entitled, "High-Born Child and Reggie," is a dramatic tragedy of childhood. A wealthy little cripple is cheered by the friendship of a beggar child; caste intervenes, love is separated, and death comes to both. "At the Sign of the Lion," a Lubin comedy biograph drama, will also be shown today.

The Lanier.

A little girl's saved from death in the quicksands, while the man who gave his life to save her sinks from sight is one of the thrilling incidents in a Lubin drama, "The Man of Him," which will be the feature picture at the Lanier today. It is one of the most beautifully thrilling of the western pictures. The central figure is a horse thief who seeks employment on a western ranch and rescues the rancher's little daughter from quicksands. Later, while waiting an opportunity to steal the horses, is stunned later in a desperate fight with cowboys, he crawls away, and by accident hears the cries of the same little girl caught in the quicksands. He expiates his past life by giving up for her. The closing scene shows the girl, grown to young womanhood, throwing flowers out upon the quicksand and she kneels in prayer.

In addition there will be shown a Selig melodrama, "Only Five Cents Old," and a Melies film of scenes in Saigon, Cochin China, and Singapore. This character singers, will open their engagement at the Lanier today.

Roosevelt Leaves Rio.

Rio de Janeiro, October 26.—Theodore Roosevelt left Rio de Janeiro at 5 o'clock this evening by a special train for Santos. The party was accompanied to the train by a representative of President Fonseca, the ministers, the diplomatic corps, members of parliament and high officials. The crowds cheered the departing visitors.

"Up Fool Hill and Beyond," Subject of Dr. C. A. Ridley

Dr. Caleb A. Ridley, of the Central Baptist church, spoke Sunday night on "Up Fool Hill and Beyond," this being the second in a series to the young people of the city. In his introduction he said:

"Fool hill is an elevation which lies across life's road between the plains of childhood and the undulating peaks of manhood. No man has ever faced the seriousness of living and been gripped by it, without first having climbed Fool hill.

"Fool hill is the playground of the big boy. On its slopes are enacted many of life's tragedies. Every mile of its uneven way is marked by a thousand skulls and cross-bones, and yet, it's a thrilling journey to those who stagger over them.

Weeks Without Warning.

"Human wrecks seem to be without warning. If men see storm-signals hung out they will hug the shore with their little barks, but a million grinning skeletons along the wrack of mankind seem to have no influence upon the traveler.

"I am addressing men tonight who are supposed to be up Fool hill and looking back upon its follies and forward to the issues of real life. And since we cannot change the past by meditation, and the future by condemnation, I am going to ask you to face toward the future with me tonight."

Outlines His Subject.

Following the introduction, Dr. Ridley outlined his subject under the following heads: (1) Things to Avoid; (2) Things to Remember. (3) Things to Do. In discussing the things to avoid, the doctor mentioned bad company, scoffers at religion and the professional idler. He then exhorted all to remember that no life could attain to success without God as a partner, and that even civilizations leaving Him out of their life had perished.

Under the final division of "Things to Do," Dr. Ridley discussed (1) Duties to One's Self, (2) Duties to One's Fellows, (3) Duties to God.

At the 11 o'clock service, Dr. Ridley spoke on "Jesus as Light," to a packed house. There were several public professions and two to unite with the church at this service.

Thoughout the offering Robert Corthell has been seen in a sketch entitled "Mr. Russell and Mr. Smith," the Cohan and Harris shows. Others on the bill will be Homer Miles and company in a new playlet, "Lumberg and Haines," featuring a musical comedy idea; Al Rayno's buildogs; the Three Lyres and the Misses Sister in songs and dances, and Loiottes, the roller skating bear, will complete the bill.

(At the Bijou.)

With this afternoon's performance the Bijou theater company will inaugurate its tenth week of stock at the Bijou, presenting for the week "Chelsea 7750," successful drama. "An Orphan's Prayer." While difficult to select the leading premiere from plays given of late, "An Orphan's Prayer" has chosen a most interesting theme, a good plot and some clever comedy, and the company will warrant the assertion that it will present one of the most popular plays that will be offered in stock this season. Great care has been taken and expended in the selection of the scenes, and the stage settings that will delight the eye, one of the scenic features being a mechanical comedy idea; Al Rayno's bulldogs; the Three Lyres and the Misses Sister in songs and dances, and Loiottes, the roller skating bear, will complete the bill.

"The Third Degree."

(At the Lyric.)

"The Third Degree," with Miss Grayce Scott playing the star part, is the offering at the Lyric theater all this week, is truly a thriller. The play begin with the story deals with crime, which, by reason of the play's construction, features from the underheads, results in fastening the guilt on an innocent man, sending him to prison, and finally the unraveling of every effort to the end—that of fastening the guilt where it belongs. The third degree is the police department, together with the powerful influence of the press, are vividly shown. The audience is treated to a series of photographic illustrations showing the actual workings of the detective department of a large city. As clearly and distinctly as were the workings of the powerful newspaper and political forces known as "The Lion and the Mouse," so are the methods of the police department shown in "The Third Degree" in even a better world and more dramatic way.

Annie Russell's Company.

(At the Atlanta.)

Tonight Annie Russell and her comedy company will begin an engagement at the Atlanta theater. The company includes Augustus Oliver Goldsmith's famous laugh-provoking comedy, "The Clever Set," which will be offered on Wednesday night. One of the most unique and unexpected, artistically and socially, of the New York season was Miss Russell's recent interesting experience in the Thirty-ninth Street theater, where, last season, she offered metropolitan playgoers (and many who once had the play-going habit) a series of performances of the best English classical comedies. Miss Annie Russell, the charming actress who was selected for the individual training the players have had in this particular field, has chosen a company which reflects Miss Russell's tastes and aims. The simplicity and quiet charm and art and artistic genius of the personality of Miss Mehlinger, the company includes Ethel Wilkes, who has been leading lady; Fermain, Pollett, Paget, Littledale Power, Henrietta Goodwin and twenty others.

Primrose and Dockstader.

Many stars of the theatrical world have received their recognition in the minstrel parades of Primrose and Dockstader, the famous organization who come to the Atlanta Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

To enumerate all the names that have been the most prominent comedians and vocalists of the present day. Messrs. Primrose and Dockstader possess the happy faculty of discovering talent, and then the ability to develop it. The splendid organization gathered together for these stars for their revival of twentieth century minstrelsy includes many artists who have been identified with it since it has been instituted at the head of their own companies. There is a number of "finds" with this attraction this season, who will, no doubt, have their names displayed in front lights in the near future. Seats go on sale today at 9 a. m. for the week.

"The New Office Girl."

(At the Columbia.)

A roaring burlesque comedy, "The New Office Girl," will be the attraction at the Columbia Burlesque theater for the week, which begins with a matinee today. Fred Kennedy and Lucretia Vincent, who come from New York after a long engagement with Weber & Rush's Broadway Burlesque theater, are the principals. Kennedy is said to be a comedian of unusual ability, and Miss Vincent possesses the happy faculty of discovering talent, and then the ability to develop it. The splendid organization gathered together for these stars for their revival of twentieth century minstrelsy includes many artists who have been identified with it since it has been instituted at the head of their own companies. There is a number of "finds" with this attraction this season, who will, no doubt, have their names displayed in front lights in the near future. Seats go on sale today at 9 a. m. for the week.

WILSON NOT THINKING ABOUT SECOND TERM

President Too Busy With Work in Hand to Bother About the Political Future.

Washington, October 26.—Political Washington today gossiped about President Wilson's speech at Congress hall, Philadelphia, when he declared "if you think of me as being up for re-elected, it is very difficult to be worth re-election."

It was the first utterance that has given any intimation of what the president's thoughts were about a second term. Those who have been close and familiar with the president's point of view, declared that he was not giving the slightest consideration to anything but the four years ahead; that he was intent on doing what he thought best and leaving the judgment of his administration to the time when his work was ended.

"I don't care a continental about a second term," the president is quoted by some of his friends as having said not long ago. "I have been elected to one job, and I must first do that well."

The Philadelphia speech, in many quarters, was interpreted as meaning that many people who had come to Washington "to ask for things" had better return home, for the president had declared it was his intention to attend to his work before him and its accomplishment, and not of the political future.

Carrie Earl Kitchens.

Carrie Earl Kitchens, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Kitchens, died at the home of her parents, 22 Athens avenue, in Capitol View, Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The funeral will be conducted from the residence this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Interment at Greenwood cemetery.

HE CLAIMS HE FLED TO PROTECT HIS WIFE

with more notes and property than all his possible obligations, everything could be liberally adjusted, he was content to remain in the new lands—in the hope that the Nemesis, Beasley, would not locate him.

The two Pinkertons set upon his trail, found him, and he was brought back to Georgia to be forced into making a clean breast of the story of unusual misfortune and fate.

Charges Against Moore.

The case went to the jury in a double-barreled form—the trial on the criminal indictment and the equity matter of abatement. Case after case was cited in which it was sought to show that Moore collected either cash, checks or notes for policies which were never delivered, some of which applications for them were turned down; it was sought to be shown that in business as Dewey several years ago under the name of J. W. Lindsey, he had been short several hundred dollars in his accounts with this same company, who did not know until last week that J. Moore and J. W. Lindsey were one and the same. It was attempted to be shown that Moore sold to a barber of Atlanta a half interest in stock in a coffee importing company at Gulfport, Miss., and that, after investigation Dewey found that the stock was not that in the past few weeks he had drawn from the bank on a check over the door of the prison here $200 of the amount claimed and given his note for $200 additional, which note Dewey should not press the matter in the criminal court for sixty days. Other charges were brought into the mass of evidence which took up days of the trial.

He attacked the company he once represented and denounced it in scathing terms, he alluded to the company of officials before him as "that galaxy of insurance stars from the skies of Tammany." He held his own with the shrewd attorneys in all their grilling and frequently during the hearing of the civil part of the trial when he was on the stand as a witness—not a denial—not even a statement—to the colloquy was more like a finished word duel than the examination of a witness. He was eloquent in his statement, and tears flowed copiously. Backed against the wall by the circumstances—a stranger in a strange land, with no one to go his bond, with sentiment against him, with the knowledge back of him that his story did not, could not, explain fully to the jurors, he fought.

He fought his way to a clean vindication.

The scene when the verdict was rendered was unusual. There was a murmur—then almost a roar of approval. His attorneys did not grasp his hand before spectators who never saw the inside back of him that his story was the other hand; jurors gave him their honest pressure—and one of them to be the guest, declaring that they would have rendered a verdict for nominal damages for malicious prosecution if it had been possible.

Moore leaves tomorrow for far-away Calgary—and he declares that he will return at once to Georgia and make that the scene of his home.

Added to the mystery of the Nemesis on his trail is the fact that he was all his life back of his marriage in Dewey—he refuses to tell of his antecedents, his birth, his home. He is still a man of mystery.

J. E. Owens.

The funeral services of J. E. Owens, who died Saturday, will be held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at Greenberg & Bond's chapel, under the auspices of the Order of Benevs. Rev. Dr. Brickhouse will officiate. Interment will be at West View.

INVEST IN CENTRAL CORNERS
NO BETTER INVESTMENT can be made than to buy a centrally located corner in Atlanta. You not only get substantial rentals from such properties, but you have the satisfaction of owning such a piece of property as will always be in the market if you please and see how many central corners you will find for sale in Atlanta, and after you have completed your search the answer will be the same as all others who have looked for such properties—"I found one or two, but the prices were prohibitive."
WITH US THIS IS NOT THE CASE. We can sell a corner in the very heart of Atlanta, right at the junction of three of the main business arteries, that rents for $7,000 per year, that we can sell for $110,000, on terms of $25,000 cash and $10,000 per year, with 6 per cent. The corner has a frontage of 60 feet, and the ground value alone should not be less than $2,000 per front foot, considering its central and advantageous location.

$750 SUBSCRIBED FOR NEGRO SCHOOL

Work of Atlanta Normal and Industrial Institute Highly Praised at the Educational Mass Meeting.

A number of prominent Atlantans from all walks of life gathered at the St. Paul Methodist Episcopal church, colored, Sunday afternoon to take part in a negro mass meeting called for the purpose of arousing interest in the practical welfare of the negro working classes, and in the hope of raising by popular subscription the sum of $900, to be used in liquidating the indebtedness of the Atlanta Normal and Industrial institute.

The meeting was a great success from every point of view, $750 of the necessary amount being pledged Sunday, leaving only $150 yet to be subscribed.

A. Montgomery, manager of the Coca-Cola Bottling company, presided at the meeting, and delivered an interesting address in which he made an eloquent plea for the citizens of Atlanta to come to the aid of the negro school.

Isdorses Stinson's Work.

"I am grateful for the opportunity of being here," said Mr. Montgomery, "and to be able to publicly give my unqualified indorsement to this splendid school, which has for its object the preparation of the negro boys and girls of Atlanta for useful occupations.

"I believe that the negro race is greatly in need of schools which teach the masses to use their hands. I rejoice to know that the very best people of our city have encouraged and aided Dr. D. Stinson, the principal of the school, in his work. They have assuredly made no mistake in doing so, and I trust that your race will appreciate it."

Rev. E. H. Oliver, pastor of the Warren chapel M. E. church, colored, was the next speaker introduced, and spoke convincingly of the good wrought by the Christian influence of the negro churches.

Possibly the most interesting feature of a most interesting program was the address delivered by Judge W. R. Hammond, entitled "Suggestions Which May Help Race Conditions."

"One of the greatest problems in the history of civilization is that which confronts the south today in the question of the right relationship of the two races dwelling together within her borders, and which, being the essential constituents of her social organism," he said.

"We are told that the country is tired of the discussion of the race issue, and that the best course to pursue is to let it alone. But thoughtful, God-fearing men can not do this. They must seek until they understand the problem in the over-ruling providence of God, in the grafting of ten million Anglo-Saxon and foreign race from the opposite side of the globe upon, and into the very vitals of what is possibly the richest civilization the world has ever produced. They must then apply to this unique and unprecedented problem the teachings of an enlightened conscience until they shall be able to read its full meaning and thus come to a full realization of the obligations and duties it imposes. Our work must be for a day, for a generation, or even for a century, but for all time.

Owes Duty to Negro.

"The white man owes a duty to the negro which can not be comprehended by the iterations and reiterations of meaningless phrases, because such expressions, unfortunately, often come from those who do not mean them. They must come from the heart and be must come from the apprehension of the grounded upon the apprehension of a fundamental truth that the negro is a member of the human brotherhood.

"The negro not only has the right to work in his chosen field, but he has the right to be prepared for his work. Nature's method of training is the surrounding of the child life with home influences that live always in the atmosphere of the material mind or soul.

"Many agencies are at work today for the giving expression to the noble ideal of training the negro race for useful living. Among these is the Atlanta Normal and Industrial institute. Its purpose is to give industrial training along practical lines to the boys and girls of the race. Within its walls and under its influences, they will be fitted for skilled and useful work. Its purposes are religious, and the aims exalted.

Dr. Richard Orme Flinn, pastor of the North Avenue Presbyterian church, delivered a powerful address on "The Negro." Origin of the race, he stressed the importance of the white and colored races coming to feel full duty toward one another. He urged the negroes to study the conditions surrounding themselves accordingly. He pleaded for purity of life and economy. He denounced in scathing terms improper relations between negro women and white men. He told the negroes to be themselves, to work together for the welfare of the race, and paid a fine compliment to the Atlanta Normal and Industrial institute and the great work it is doing.

Farm Life for Negroes.

H. G. Hastings, president of the seed firm of H. G. Hastings & Co., delivered an address in which he stated his opinion that farm life is the best life for the negro, taken from any standpoint.

"I do not believe it is an exaggeration to state that from the health and moral standpoint, three-fourths of the negroes in Atlanta today, who were reared in the country, would be better off if they were back on the farm or small villages from which they came," said Mr. Hastings.

"We want to shape the educational system of the country so that every individual, whether black or white, can have the full benefit of opportunity in accord with the time he can spend in school. We also desire to and eventually will, so shape the courses of study that one can learn things that will be of value to him in bringing in cash returns for his daily work, rather than the simply literary education, if I may so term it, of the present time."

Principal Hope Bryant Stinson spoke on the mission of the school and out lined its policies.

"The mission of the Atlanta Normal and Industrial institute is to take hold of, and shape, the purposes, lives and characters of the negro boys and girls who must do hard work with their hands in order to earn a livelihood," he said.

"The negro needs not only a general education, but he needs special training in fitting for some useful work. Proper education will solve every problem of the negro race, from daily life, attitude toward the white man, honesty and general efficiency, and he will be vastly improved when he is properly educated."

BITTER STRUGGLE COMES THIS WEEK

under which concentrated wealth has ruled the nation; and, likewise, it happens to be a fact that Mr. Vanderlip's scheme is projected at the eleventh hour of congressional consideration with the hope of indefinite postponement, if not absolute rejection, should the scheme be given serious attention. The plan, Mr. Vanderlip admits, would actually designed to delay and frustrate current legislation, will, if given consideration, have that inevitable effect.

Vanderlip in July and Now.

"On July 24 Mr. Vanderlip wrote me a letter soliciting my views of the new and other bankers against certain provisions of the house bill, and I wondered why he should have forgotten his what vehemence he assailed that feature of the measure which subjected government control. He declared the principle to be fundamentally wrong and fundamentally wrong.

"The basic objection, Mr. Vanderlip, 'is not to the powers granted to the federal reserve board, but to the hands in which they are placed.' Asserting that both financial and political history furnishes ample illustration of the danger, the ineffectiveness, the inadequacy of politically appointed boards,' Mr. Vanderlip went on to say in letters by saying: 'If such a board as is proposed were formed by appointing the seven ablest bankers of the United States—whoever they may be—and these bankers were dissociated from the daily conduct of actual affairs and sat in Washington with unlimited arms' length the operation of the several reserve banks, they would very rapidly lose the power to direct wisely. It seems to me that any practical method of control must be through a board composed of practical bankers, in direct touch with the current business, who are selected for short terms by the member banks.'

Lack of Consistency charged.

"In direct contravention of this position, Mr. Vanderlip and his Wall street associates come here at the last hour, flinging consistency to the winds, proposing a politically appointed board, not one member of which is to be selected by the member banks, but all by the president of the United States. Mr. Vanderlip is also injected to the long term of seven years provided by the house bill, while in October he would stretch out the term to fourteen.

"Mr. Vanderlip, in his testimony before the senate committee, differentiates his bill from the house bill in several important features, among them: 'Uniform native-wide discount rate instead of regional discount rate.' Three months ago Mr. Vanderlip, in his letter, highly commended the house bill for its superiority to the Aldrich scheme in the very particular for which he now condemns the house bill in contrast with his own plan. I again quote from his letter of July 24:

"'In one way the system of regional reserve banks has a distinct advantage in the national reserve association proposed by the national monetary commission. The plan for a national reserve association provided that there should be a uniform rate of discount throughout the United States. The present plan for regional reserve banks contemplates that the discount rate will vary in different sections of the country at the same time. Such variation of rate is sound banking.'

"If variation of rate, as provided in the house bill, was 'sound banking' in July, how does it happen that 'uniformity of rate' in the Vanderlip scheme is sound banking in October?

"In his letter to me last July, Mr. Vanderlip accentuated the utter undesirability, in his view, of any radical departure from the existing national bank act, and warned the house committee that unless legislation should be made attractive to the national banks they would abandon the system. He was against 'doing violence to long-established methods,' he repeated substantially the outcry of the bankers against the 'force bill,' and against the 'confiscatory' clause of the income tax amendment, stating that the owners of banking capital should manage their 'own property,' and predicting total failure if 'the house scheme should not be made more advantageous to the banks.'

"Now Mr. Vanderlip comes with a central bank scheme embodying every one of these objectionable features. If national banks will leave the system under the house bill, how can they be expected to remain in under Mr. Vanderlip's plan of 'compulsion' and 'confiscation' and 'political control?' Has Mr. Vanderlip forgotten the tremendous protest of the bankers at Chicago recently, and at Boston later and in public addresses throughout the country, against the power lodged by the house bill with the president and with the federal reserve board over the banking business of the country? The house bill maintains the identity of our independent banking system, coordinating it and using all of its strength in time of stress, while Mr. Vanderlip's proposition simply destroys it?

What Becomes of Protest of Bankers?

"Moreover, what becomes of the frantic protest of the American Bankers' association against the provision of the house bill which requires the reserve funds of the country to be kept in the vaults of the individual reserve banks and in the regional reserve banks? Mr. Vanderlip's plan provides practically the same thing.

"What becomes of the protest of the bankers against the power of the federal reserve board, under the house bill, to suspend reserve requirements? Mr. Vanderlip proposes precisely the same thing.

"So I might continue indefinitely to point out the inconsistencies between Mr. Vanderlip's letter to me last July and his proposals before the senate banking committee in October. The conclusion that I reach from this whole performance is that this newest currency scheme, prepared as I am told by Mr. Vanderlip in conjunction with Mr. Davison, of J. P. Morgan & Co., and Mr. Strong, with Standard Oil connection, is intended to confuse the question of banking and currency reforms, or else it is hoped that, by the adoption of some such scheme of absolute centralization, it will be far easier hereafter for certain gentlemen to get control of it for certain purposes than would be possible under the proposed regional bank system.

The Democratic Platform.

"The platform upon which the democratic administration and the sixty-third congress were elected declares as follows:

"'We oppose the so-called Aldrich bill, or the establishment of a central bank.'

"To undertake to deliberately repudiate this explicit declaration of the Baltimore platform would involve the democratic party in serious consequences, and would render exceedingly remote the probability of currency legislation at any time soon. In my judgment it would be simply futile to attempt anything of the kind."

It is expected that a critical point will be reached in the senate committee's work this week or the end of this week. Senators Hitchcock, Reed and O'Gorman, the democrats on the committee who are inclined to indorse a single bank instead of the proposed system of several regional banks, will enter the sessions without having committed themselves definitely in support of the president's bill.

While President Wilson is confident of early action on the currency bill by the senate committee it is the belief of many committee members that several weeks will be consumed in the discussion and revision of the measure. In the meantime it is expected that both branches of congress will do little other business.

CITY BEAUTIFUL URGED BY PASTOR

Dr. John E. White Preaches to Members of Council and Heads of Departments of City Government.

The Second Baptist church was filled last night for services devoted to the consideration of Atlanta's future growth and character as a city.

Members of the city council and the representatives of several departments of the city government filled the middle area of the auditorium as visitors on invitation. Dr. John E. White preached on "He looked for the city that hath foundations whose builder and maker is God." Dr. White said in part:

"Ever since Abraham's day men have been looking for a city founded on solid and enduring foundations which would resist the forces of decay and ruin.

"It has been a dream and a hope that some time somewhere such a city would be built and would become at once the clue to the solution of the world's greatest problem, and the consummation of the divine possibilities of human society. This desire was that of his 'Utopia,' Augustin proclaimed it in his 'City of God.' In the Bible it is the last vision and the prophecy of the new Jerusalem, the city realizing its final glory and the redemption of civilization from Satan's power.

"To the student of history it would seem to be a vain expectation that any city of mankind would fulfil this cherished dream.

Invariably Brought to Ruin.

"Cities have risen and flourished, but a rottenness in their life has invariably brought them to ruin at last. But we still cherish the dream. We who are gathered here would not confess a doubt about the city we are building. We are to make Atlanta's future. But we must confront the facts of history. We must reckon with the forces of decay which, permitted unhindered access to the life of Atlanta, will but repeat the history of the cities which have succumbed to the paralysis of growth. Their moral development was not attended to with zeal equal to the zeal of material prosperity. Their social civilization did not keep pace with the accumulation of wealth and power. The strength to restrain and direct material energies to higher ends. The will was their glory became their destruction, and worm was at the heart.

"This is the verdict of historians on the cities of Babylon and Athens and Rome. This is the peril now hanging like a black cloud over the cities of the world. This is the real problem of Atlanta, to secure such a co-operation of forces in the building of the city as to create and conserve in adequate power the moral resistance against enervation and corruption, so as to continue to overcome the little tendencies of selfishness and material prosperity. Let it be cheerfully recognized that Atlanta needs something besides religion and good morals. She needs enterprise and thrift and industry and education and prosperity; but without religion and a powerful morality these can but become profligate and ruinous without the foundations and doomed to be a curse and not a blessin' to the people.

Plans for Atlanta.

"A city let alone to grow without architectural planning will grow ugly. The architects of Atlanta should get together and lay out plans for every possible change that a patriotic people could make to improve the streets, the buildings and the beauty of the city. The doctors should get together and lay down the plans for sanitation and the cleansing of disease sources. The citizens should get together and submit to the civic conscience efficient methods of public business, not as partisans, but as patriots. The fathers and mothers should get together and study improvements in our educational system, and be intelligently engaged in promoting our schools.

"The preachers and deacons and elders and stewards should get together to contribute leadership for religion in co-operation with other civic agents to guard the moral environment of the people and watch against the evils that corrupt character and destroy homes.

A Tale of Three Cities.

"Three cities in the world have been built on a program carefully conceived and pursued.

"Edinburgh in Edinburgh, Scotland, saw the future of their city, as a city of learning, and gathered the public conscience to support their ideal. Edinburgh is today a city of foundations as no other city in Scotland is. The names of Thomas Chalmers and Thomas Guthrie are cherished in that city as benefactors.

"Birmingham, Chancellor D. B. W. Dale, of Birmingham, England, struck the keynote in the program of his great. One was a politician, the other was a minister, but both citizens of Birmingham. In 1882 a small company of young men planned a city of culture, that was to be and enlisted the citizens in the acceptance of a city of morality which has made the Canadian metropolis one of the most ideally commercially secure city civilization on the American continent.

"I believe we can do the same thing for Atlanta.

"Our city is new and unshaped for time to come. What its future shall be must not be left to chance and neglect. The number of corrupting influences that past has felt the need of organized movement to counteract. Why should not the church become the center of organization for all the forces of co-operation.

The Challenge of the Preachers.

"In this great work the religious leaders desire to be counted in and counted on. We are not organized to force alien to noble city building. We are the natural leaders of every constructive work and the work of patriots who are dedicated to the Kingdom of God on earth. In paying tribute to the character of Mrs. Fairbanks, he said:

"An American girl missionary in India told me it was easier to teach the Indian children the way to Christ, since they had seen and heard Mrs. Fairbanks. A native Christ woman said it was easier for him to follow the teaching of Christ since he had heard this godly woman."

Many friends of Mrs. Fairbanks from out of town, who had been associated with her during her terms as president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, attended the funeral.

Cotton formed almost $11,000,000 of Egypt's exports to Germany last year.

7 FIREMEN DEAD AND 24 INJURED

As the Result of Burning of Goodyear Rubber Store at Milwaukee—May Be Other Bodies in the Ruins.

Milwaukee, Wis., October 26.—Seven dead firemen and twenty-four injured were taken from the ruins of the store of the Goodyear Rubber company here tonight in a fire which caused a loss of $500,000. It is believed there are several more bodies in the ruins.

The flames broke out on the second floor, and while the firemen were fighting the blaze from the front and rear, an explosion sent the walls crashing down on fifty firemen. Windows for blocks around were smashed and the flames spread to adjoining buildings. Rescue companies were sent into the blazing mass, and the bodies, of the dead and injured were taken out.

Practically the entire fighting apparatus of the city was called to the scene, which is in the heart of the business section. Several other firms besides the Goodyear company suffered losses.
