WEB OF LIES BY CONLEY TANGLE POLICE

Claim Negro, Despite His Conflicting Stories, Is Strong Link in Case Against Frank.

A jumble of conflicting statements made by Jim Conley, negro sweeper at the National Pencil factory, confronted the detectives when they resumed work on the Phagan strangling mystery Thursday morning.

The detectives still held firmly to their theory that the negro was the most important witness against Leo M. Frank, in the face of the contradictory stories and lies in which he had been trapped.

They were strongly disposed to give full credence to Conley's second affidavit, although the negro's sudden anxiety to talk after three weeks of silence and the maze of falsehood in which he was at once involved served suddenly to shift the responsibility for Mary Phagan's death from Leo Frank to the sullen black man, in the judgment of many who have been following the evidence closely.

Chief Lanford and Detective Harry Scott, of the Pinkertons, announced Thursday morning, however, that they regarded the second affidavit of Conley as the final and conclusive piece of evidence needed in preparing a case against Frank.

Rejected First Affidavit.

Others who have weighed the evidence carefully declare there are many more significant indications that Conley was the slayer than there are reasons to believe that Frank is guilty.

The detectives rejected the first affidavit of Conley, in which he said Frank dictated Friday the notes that were found by the body of the slain girl Sunday morning on the ground that it was absurd and unbelievable to hold the theory that the murder was premeditated.

Yet they accept the second affidavit, which indicatesidentically the same thing, in that Frank met Conley at Nelson and Forsyth Streets before 11 o'clock Saturday morning, April 26, before the crime was committed, and told the negro to wait for him, later taking Conley to the factory with him, where Conley says that he wrote the notes at Frank's direction.

The negro in his second affidavit suggests no other motive that could have impelled Frank to ask him to come to the factory shortly before noon on Saturday. Conley says that Frank told him to wait secreted on the first floor until he heard a whistle. When he heard the whistle he says he went upstairs and Frank dictated the notes.

Why Many Suspect Conley.

All of this is inescapably suggestive of premeditation on the part of Frank, if Conley's story is to be believed, but the theory of premeditation has been scoffed at by everyone, including Chief Lanford and Harry Scott.

In fact, it never seriously was considered by anyone, say those who are inclined to believe the evidence against Conley greatly outweighs that against Frank. The assertion is freely made that it would be far easier to convict Conley, if the police were so disposed, than it will be to convict Frank. Here are a few reasons advanced:

When the factory superintendent was permitted to go before the Coroner's jury by his attorney, he answered all the questions in a straightforward, unwavering manner, never once being trapped in a lie or misstatement.

In marked contrast is the conduct of Conley ever since his arrest at the time of the inquest three weeks ago. When discovered at the factory, he was washing a shirt which he sought to hide from the person who had found him out.

He was taken into custody and gave his address as 92 Tattnall Street. Investigation disclosed that Conley was lying and that he had not lived on Tattnall Street for months, his actual residence being 172 Rhodes Street.

He was asked to write, and he told

Eight Girls Sold at Auction in Caucasia

LONDON, May 29.—Eight native girls between the ages of 15 and 18 were sold by public auction last week at Tereklimakteb, Caucasia, according to an Odessa dispatch to The Daily Mail.

There was lively bidding before the eight lots were disposed of. The highest price, $105, was paid for a handsome Tartar girl named Orsalia Ajalieff.

It is an immemorial custom of the Tartars and the Kalmucks to sell their superfluous daughters.

Says Husband Made Her Feign Happiness

NEW YORK, May 29.—A story of hardships to which she was subjected by her husband, including long horseback rides over the Mexican mountains and threats of death, was told to-day by 22-year-old Mrs. Dace Charlet, who is suing Alfonson Charlet for separation.

"Sometimes he would threaten to shoot me if I was not merry," said the wife.

Society Flocks to Bishop Divorce Trial

NEW YORK, May 29.—Persons prominent in society in this city and Newport scrambled for seats in Justice Goff's room in the Supreme Court to-day when the divorce trial of Mrs. Abigail Hancock Bishop against Cunningham Bishop, a millionaire banker, was resumed.

Mrs. Bishop claims that her husband and another woman registered as Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Baer, of Philadelphia, at the Hotel Astor.

Grounded German Battleship in Peril

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

DANZIG, GERMANY, May 29.—Danzig harbor was all but closed today by the German dreadnought Koenig Albert, which went aground Monday and which has swung across the mouth of the Vistula River, preventing all but the smallest vessels from entering or leaving.

The position of the warship is dangerous owing to the drifting silt which is threatening to sandlock the ship.

Militants Fire Hay And Farm Buildings

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 29.—Having terrorized most of the cities of England, the militant suffragettes now are paying their attentions to the rural districts.

Three fires were reported to-day from farms near Richmond. Haystacks and farm buildings were burned and about the ruins were scattered placards and copies of The Suffragette.

'Champagne Truest Financial Barometer'

LONDON, May 29.—Walter Mumm, who is to marry Miss Frances Scoville, of Kansas, June 2, arrived in London to-day. In discussing the champagne trade he said:

"The best barometer in the world of financial conditions is the champagne market. There is more champagne than ever being drunk in the United States."

Good Cooks Kill Drink Habit, Says Duchess

LONDON, May 29.—"I believe a dinner well cooked is a better antidote to drink than any possible legislation," declared the Duchess of Marlborough.

Her Grace, who was Consuelo Vanderbilt, made a brief address at the annual meeting of St. Pancras School for Mothers.

SEE PERIL TO LIFE IN CITY PLANT'S DEFEAT

The action of the Supreme Court in declaring the crematory contract illegal Thursday revived the old fight between Mayor Woodward and the Council in all its fury.

Mayor Woodward was jubilant over the decision and declared that he would take the stump in opposition to the approving the contract by the people. He said the court action justified all his opposition to Council's business methods and that he was going to break the moral obligation for the $106,000 fire alarm system, which system is now about half completed.

Predicts Epidemics.

"It is no longer a question of business methods," said Councilman Ashley. "It is a question of life and death. If that crematory is not put into operation so we can burn the garbage of this town the people will be dying like flies by fall.

"I am a poor man, but I will make one of 276 to put up the $276,000 to pay for the plant and bids our time for repayment. I had rather donate the money than to have Atlanta be without a crematory this summer.

"It is all very well to talk about fine distinctions in business methods at the right time. As regards a crematory that time is past. If Mayor Woodward would take my place for a few days and hear the complaints about garbage being dumped all around the city he would want a crematory as quick as possible at any cost.

Face New Conditions.

"I opposed this contract. I voted against tearing down the old crematory. But we are facing new conditions to-day. We used to dump all the gargabe in one place outside the city. We were enjoined from that. Since the old crematory was torn down we have been forced to dump it around inside the city. The town is festering with decaying matter. There are more flies right now than I ever saw before. We are threatened with hundreds of injunctions.

"That crematory will be ready to burn garbage in about 30 days. There is fire in two of the furnaces now, drying them out. It is one of the finest garbage destructor plants in this country. Can the question of its relation to the health of this city be compared to any difference over business methods?

"Let's follow the court order and submit the contract to the people. They will approve it five to one."

Work May Continue.

Work may not be stopped at all on the plant, which is being erected on the city's property back of the Terminal Station by teh Destructor Company, of New oYrk.

Though the contract is void, Council is determined to pay for the plant. P. D. Canham, in charge of the work, said he would continue unless stopped by a court order.

On account of the vital health question involved an effort will be made to effect a compromise that will allow the plant to be completed, independent of the controversy.

G. A. R. Makes Plans For Decoration Day

O. M. Mitchell, chairman of a committee appointed by G. A. R. Post, No 1, of Atlanta, to plan for the celebration of Decoration Day, has completed arrangements. Ceremonies will be held in the National Cemetery at Marietta.

Commander George P. Leavitt, of Post No. 1, will speak on "The Duty of the Day," while the tribute to the dead will be paid by F. A. Jones, of Tallapoosa. Two companies of troops from Fort McPherson will participate.

NEW YORK, May 29.—Mrs. Hilla D. Shonts, wife of Theodore P. Shonts, president of the Interborough, is in a serious condition as the result of the burning of her country home near Mobile, Ala., April 19 last, when she and her daughters were driven out by the flames.

A statement to this effect was made in the Supreme Court yesterday by Dr. E. B. Ligon, of Mobile, Mrs. Shonts' physician, on an application for the adjournment of a suit brought against Mrs. Shonts on a note.

Americans Victims In London Hotel Raid

LONDON, May 29.—American tourists were among the victims of a robbery at the fashionable Hotel Berkeley in Piccadilly early to-day. Armed burglars bound and gagged two porters, who were acting as watchmen, opened a safe and made off with a great sum of money and jewels.

Scotland Yard detectives were assigned to the case. It is believed the robbers fled to France. The Berkeley is one of the best-known hotels in London and much frequented by American tourists.

Senators Thirsty; No More Ice Water

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Economy, the fetich of the administration, hit the Senate ice water tanks today. There are no more.

If the Senators want ice they must pay for, as well as for something to keep it in.

When the Senators arrived at their offices to-day the various brands of spring water, with their cooling apparatus, had been removed.

Carnegie's Valor Does Not Impress Schwab

NEW YORK, May 29.—Charles M. Schwab, president of the Bethlehem Steel Company, does not take seriously Andrew Carnegie's declaration that he would carry a gun and die for America if Japan attacked this country.

"I don't think Mr. Carnegie would go to war any more than I would, even if he does feel younger," he said. "The best way to insure peace is always to be prepared for war. America should build more battleships."

STEVENS JOINS HUNT FOR SLAYER OF HIS WIFE AND DAUGHTER

Aged Veteran, Crushed by Tragedy, Hastens Home From Chattanooga Reunion---Half-breed, Said to Have Attempted Attack on Girl, Sought.

William Stevens, husband and father of the two women who were murdered and their bodies incinerated in their home on the McDonough Road Tuesday night, arrived in Atlanta Thursday morning from Chattanooga in answer to hasty summons sent him by police.

The aged Confederate veteran was met at the train by city detectives and driven immediately to the scene of his devastated home. The old man was led, trembling, from the car to the automobile and driven off to take part in the hunt for the slayer.

It is to Mr. Stevens that the police look for valuable information leading to the murderer. He is the only person alive, besides the missing son, Wade Stevens, who knows the conditions which existd in the home.

Efforts to locate Wade Stevens Wednesday night proved futile. Police authorities have notified those of Chattanooga and Cincinnati, to which cities the boy said he was going to "hobo," to be on the lookout for him. Minute descriptions of Stevens and his companion, "Red" Merchant, who was seen with him at the Terminal Station Tuesday night, have been sent out. Police of Atlanta are making a thorough search of this city for the two boys.

Tells of Attempted Attack.

An important clew, given Sheriff J. A. McCurdy, of DeKalb County, who is in charge of the investigation, was revealed in the statement of a neighbor to the effect that a Mexican halfbreed, formerly employed by Mrs. Stevens, had attempted to attack Nellie Stevens some time ago.

This declaration was made by Miss Josephine McCaulay, 790 Glennwood Avenue, an intimate friend of both the slain mother and daughter. Miss McCaulay said that only a few days ago Mrs. Stevens had told her of shooting at the discharged halfbreed when he appeared at the country home. Mrs. Stevens had said that she fired twice at the man, and that he escaped into the clump of woods adjoining the house. Sheriff McCurdy has ordered a country-wide search made for the halfbreed.

Discovery Wednesday morning that Mr. Stevens had purchased an axe some days ago offers a possible clew to the weapon used by the murderer in crushing the skulls of his victims. The axe is, so far, missing, though the ruins of the burned dwelling and surrounding vicinity have been carefully searched for it.

Axe Apparently Used.

The sharp, knifelike cut across the top of Nellie Stevens' skull seems to bear out the theory that the murderer used the axe to slay his victims.

Possibility that the weapon used by the murderer was thrown into the well near the house has lead Sheriff McCurdy to order the well dragged.

Atlanta police and detective officials have joined with the DeKalb force to solve the mystery. Detective Chief Lanford assigned Mounted Policeman Hamilton, who was a close friend of the Stevens family, and Detective Rosser to work on the case. Sheriff McCurdy obtained this reinforcement Thursday morning when he held a conference with Lanford.

An unique incident of the balze which burned the Stevens home to ashes was revealed in the finding of fifty-seven chickens dead in a coop fifty feet away. The coop was not even scorched by the heat.

That robbery was the motive of the murderer has been established by the disappearance of jewelry and a large quantity of money which Mrs. Stevens was known to have had in the house at the time.

Woman's Jewels Missing.

Neighbors stated that Mrs. Stevens possessed a diamond ring valued at $400 and two gold watches. These are missing.

EDITOR TO TELL WHY HE MADE T.R. CHARGE

MARQUETTE, MICH., May 29.—George W. Newett, editor of The Ishpeming Iron Ore, which contained an editorial that resulted in a $10,000 libel suit by Theodore Roosevelt, today was prepared to take the witness stand in his own defense.

The testimony of the editor will deal largely with the sources of the information on which he based his charges that the former President "got drunk, and that not infrequently," and that he used profane language.

A trip made by Newett to Florida, during which he met a number of prominent persons who are alleged to have spoken of Roosevelt's alleged over-indulgence in liquor, and similar statements made to him by persons in Michigan, will form the basis of his testimony.

Newett will also tell of various articles which he saw in newspapers and magazines which influenced him to write the editorial now in question.

The Ishpeming editor has not been well for some months, and as soon as the present case is ended he will go to a hospital for an operation.

SLAIN WOMAN'S SISTER THINKS SON INNOCENT

the murder is one which shows the work that of two negroes woh were said to have been seen driving away from the burning home at sunrise Wednesday morning. The men rode in a one-horse wagon, the body of which was filled with oats. Tracks of the horse were found on a spot near the ruins. In the immediate vicinity was discovered a small pile of fresh oats. Human footprints were found nearby.

Despite the assertion that the negroes drove away, Sheriff McCurdy's men made a careful search of the woods surrounding the home, believing it highly probable that the murderer might have hidden therein to watch the burning house, and will scour the woods again to-day. Another theory is that he might have been wounded by Mrs. Stevens before he killed her, and had been forced to drag himself to the woods for escape. That the man may be laying there now is a possibility expressed by the police. The shell found in the shotgun used by Mrs. Stevens was found to have been discharged.

Sister Believes Son Innocent.

In a darkened room in a little house at 33 Dalney Street, with a physician in almost constant attendance, lies a woman prostrated by grief. Absolute quiet has been ordered by the doctor and the anguish tears at her heart in a silence broken only by her own sobs and the hushed patter of childish footsteps as her children play quietly about the house.

She is Mrs. Pearl Hartley, sister of Mrs. Sarah C. Stevens, whose charred body was found lying beside that of her adopted daughter in the smoking ruins of their farm home seven miles from Atlanta. Prostrated by the shock of the tragedy, with her imagination made vivid by her suffering and grief, Mrs. Hartley is seeing in the darkness of her room the terrible happenings of that night of horror.

Mrs. Hartley's only surcease from suffering came for a few moments late Wednesday afternoon, when, under the influence of opiates administered by her physician, she recovered sufficiently to talk to a Georgian reporter. Mrs. Hartley sobbed audibly throughout the interview, and her eyes, red with weeping and reflecting the anguish that tore at her heart, emphasized her words as she cried for vengeance on the murderer.

"Why do they always murder women?" she cried. "It is terrible. Little girls are murdered when they go onto the street, and now a woman is not safe even in her own home."

Faints at News.

The notifying of Mrs. Hartley of the death of her sister and niece formed one of the most dramatic and pathetic incidents of the entire tragedy. She was downtown Wednesday morning shopping, when word came to her home on Dalney Street that her sister and niece had been murdered. Mrs. Lena Thompson, a neighbor, of 24 Dalney Street, volunteered to go downtown and find Mrs. Hartley and tell her the sad news.

After a search of an hour Mrs. Thompson found Mrs. Hartley in the Kress store on Whitehall Street. As she stood trying to locate the sister of the murdered woman in the crowd of shoppers Mrs. Hartley, warned by intuition that something was wrong, pushed through the crowd and hurried to Mrs. Thompson.

"What is it?" she cried. "What's the matter?"

Mrs. Thompson, seeking to break the news gently, told her that her sister's home had burned down and that she had been badly injured.

"It's worse than that," Mrs. Hartley cried. "I feel it! I know it is worse than that!"

She screamed and fainted in the arms of Mrs. Thompson. She was soon revived and taken to her home. Mrs. Thompson endeavored to calm her on the trip on the street car with the assurance that everything was all right.

As Mrs. Hartley entered her yard, one of her little daughters ran out of the house, tears streaming down her face.

"Oh, mamma," she cried, "Aunt Sarah and Cousin Nellie have been killed!"

With a scream, Mrs. Hartley fell to the ground in a swoon. She was picked up by Mrs. Thompson and members of her family and carried into the house. A physician was called and administered opiates. Under the influence of the medicine she was able to sit up in bed for a few moments late in the afternoon, but collapsed again when she learned that her nephew, the son of the murdered woman, was being sought by the police as the murderer of his mother.

Believes Boy Innocent.

Mrs. Hartley refused to believe the boy could be capable of so diabolical a crime.

"He may have been a bad boy," she said, "but I can not believe he would kill his mother and sister. There must be some mistake."

Mrs. Hartley advanced the theory that the murder may have been committed by some person with robbery as the motive. Mrs. Stevens was an energetic business woman, and up to the time she moved to her farm had been engaged extensively in building operations, mostly in East Atlanta. She had a number of men in her employ, and Mrs. Hartley said she often kept a considerable sum of money in her home. She said she had known her sister to have as much as $500 in her house at one time. Less than a week ago, she said, Mrs. Stevens wrote to her that she was coming to Atlanta to sell some of her property. It can not be learned that she banked the proceeds of this sale, and Mrs. Hartley's theory is that she took the money home with her; that this fact became known to some one, and that she was murdered and the house fired for purposes of robbery.

Up to about six months ago Mrs. Stevens lived in the 700 block, Boulevard, and moved to the country because of her failing health. Besides her husband and young son, Mrs. Stevens is survived by six sisters, Mrs. Pearl Hartley, Mrs. L. C. Smith, Mrs. M. A. Golden, Mrs. J. N. Patrick and Miss Lily Whattley, of Atlanta, and Mrs. W. C. Sims, of Meansville, Ga., and three brothers, Sergeant Whattley, of the Atlanta police force, and T. C. and H. T. Whattley, of Barnesville, Ga.

PARADE CLOSES REUNION OF VETERANS

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., May 29. The twenty-third annual reunion of the Confederate Veterans closed today with the veterans' parade, in which the old soldiers of the South marched under the tattered battle flags of half a century ago and under the Stars and Stripes of a reunited country.

Military bands furnished martial music to which the tottering old soldiers, hundreds of them in gray uniforms, tramped through the downtown streets. Grandstands along Market and Broad Streets, the principal thoroughfares traversed, were filled with visitors and Chattanoogans who lustily cheered the old veterans.

General Bennett H. Young, mounted on a Kentucky thoroughbred charger, headed the parade. General J. P. Hickman, of Nashville, commander of the Tennessee Division was chief marshal.

Exodus of Visitors Begins.

The exodus of visitors began immediately after the parade and throughout the afternoon and night special and regular trains will be leaving the depots every hour.

The reunion festivities will come to a formal close to-night when the Sons of Confederate Veterans give their annual ball to sponsors and maids of honor at Bennett H. Young pavilion.

Several hundred veterans will go to Dalton, Ga., to-morrow to attend a reunion of General Joseph E. Johnston's army that participated in the campaign from Chattanooga to Atlanta. At this time memorial services will be held by Dalton Daughters of the Confederacy, Professor Joseph T. Deery, of Atlanta, being the orator.

To Decorate Federal Graves.

Several hundred of the Confederate veterans will remain in Chattanooga to-morrow and participate in the Grand Army of the Republic Memorial Day exercises at the National Cemetery, where several thousand Federal soldiers are buried.

This afternoon "The Pied Piper of Hamelintown" will be presented as a pageant at Warner Park by several hundred Chattanooga children.

Young Again Commander.

General Bennett H. Young, of Kentucky, commander-in-chief; General Theodore S. Garnett, of Virginia, commander of the Army of Northern Virginia Department; General George P. Harrison, of Alabama, commander of the Army of Tennessee Department, and General K. M. VanZandt, of Texas, commander of the Trans-Mississippi Department, were re-elected, and Jacksonville, Fla., was chosen for the 1914 reunion by the veterans at the principal business session of the reunion late yesterday afternoon. Next year's gathering will be the first reunion held in Florida. Jacksonville defeated Nashville, its nearest competitor, which has had two reunions, by a vote of almost 4 to 1. Houston, Texas, and Tulsa, Okla., received scattering votes. The selection was then made unanimous.

"Turkey Trot" and "Virginia Reel."

A parade by the Sons of Veterans yesterday afternoon and a ball for the veterans at Bennett H. Young Pavilion last night were features that attracted the interest of the thousands of sponsors, maids of honor and other visitors. At the ball the Virginia reel and quadrille of forty years ago were danced between snatches of the present-day "turkey trot" and two-step.

PONY CONTEST DRAWS ENTRANTS, CERTAIN OF SUCCESS, FROM AFAR

Atlanta children were the first to catch the fire of enthusiasm in The Georgian and American pony contest. The children out in the State and outside Georgia were a little slow at first.

But how they are coming now!

Every mail brings a heap of letters from distant addresses, and the letters are full of "ginger." Every girl or boy seems sure of winning.

Dorothy Davis, of Dothan, Ala., writes: "I have my subscription book, and so I am going to work in earnest now."

"Please send me subscription blanks, etc., so I can win a pony," as O. S. Morton, Jr., writes, is a more frequently used wording.

The flood of mail is becoming a serious problem. Once this week two men in the contest department worked all night answering letters, and then did not catch up entirely with the work. It is hoped, therefore, that contestants who do not receive answers the following day will remember that it is not always possible to go through all the letters, check all the votes and keep up with the routine work of the contest in a day, and be patient.

MAZE OF LIES BY CONLEY CLOUD MYSTERY

the officers he could not write a word. He refused to be inveigled into making an attempt at handwriting of any sort. He would not put a pencil to paper that the detectives might get a specimen of his penmanship. For a long time they believed he was so ignorant he could not write his own name. Then they found some leases he had signed for watches and knew that he had been lying again.

Just as the Grand Jury was about to sit and it appeared likely that Frank would be indicted, the negro broke his silence for the first time. He told the detectives that it was he who had written the notes, but that he had written them at Frank's dictation on Friday, April 25. Frank had approached him in an aisle at the factory and had asked him to come into the office, he said. He remembered that it was four minutes before 1 o'clock.

That he had been at the factory Saturday he denied emphatically. Between 10 o'clock in the forenoon and 2 o'clock in the afternoon he had been on Peters Street, according to his story.

The detectives ridiculed his story and continued examining. Gradually he broke down under their questioning, and it was established that he had been lying again and that he actually had been in the factory Saturday, presumably at the very time the girl was murdered. This was the first time his presence in the factory on Saturday had been known.

Admitted Hiding in Plant.

He had kept it a most profound secret up to the time it was gouged out of him by the detectives. He weakened further and admitted that he had been hiding down on the first floor as persons went in and out.

He described practically every person that entered or left the factory between 12 and 1 o'clock. But he declared that he did not see Mary Phagan when she came in the building. Out of all who entered or left, the murdered girl and Lemmie Quinn appear to be the only ones he missed seeing, according to his story.

He explained this by saying that he must have fallen asleep for a little while. He saw Miss Corinthia Hall and Mrs. Freeman leave a few minutes before 1 o'clock, but did not see Mary Phagan enter about five minutes after the hour. Neither did he see Lemmie Quinn, who is said to have been at the factory about 12:15.

MAINE UNVEILING PARADE PLANS PERFECTED

NEW YORK, May 29.—Plans for the great naval and military parade, which will precede the unveiling and dedication of the National Maine Monument at the southwest entrance to Central Park, Fifty-ninth Street and Eighth Avenue, on Friday afternoon, are about completed.

The twelve dreadnoughts and battleships of the North Atlantic fleet, which will be represented by regiments of marines and seamen in the parade, are the Wyoming, Florida, North Dakota, Delaware, Virginia, New Hampshire, South Carolina, Kansas, Georgia, New Jersey and Rhode Island.

Lieutenant Commander G. L. Smith, U. S. N., the brigade commander, has issued the order for the mobilization of the marines and seamen. Police Commissioner Waldo is revising and completing the arrangements for holding the crowds in place along the line of march and at the scene of the dedication.

Many Bands in Line.

The marine regiment, which is to march directly behind the United States Army, will form in Forty-third Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues. This regiment will be headed by the combined bands of the Wyoming and Virginia. The First Seamen Fegiment Band will be headed by the combined bands of the Florida, North Dakota and Delaware; the Second Seaman Regiment, by the combined bands of the New Hampshire, South Carolina and Kansas, and the Third Seaman Regiment, by the combined bands of the Georgia, New Jersey and Rhode Island. Regimental colors will be carried.

The fleet officers in the parade will wear blue service uniforms, with white caps, leggins and gloves. The marines will march in blue, with white caps, leggins, canteens and rifle belts; shea seamen in blue, with white hats, leggins, canteens and rifle belts. All bands will wear full dress uniforms.

The seamen and marines from the Wyoming will land at two floats at the foot of West Eighty-first Street. They will march down Broadway to Foryt-fourth Street and then east, to form with the First Seaman Regiment, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues.

Will March Crosstown.

The detachements from the Florida, North Dakota and Delaware will be landed at Pier 86, at the foot of West Forty-sixth Street, and march crosstown to Forty-fourth Street and Fifth Avenue.

The men from the New Hampshire, South Carolina and Kansas will also disembark at the foto of West Forty-sixth Street and form as the Second Seaman Regiment in Forty-fifth Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues.

Detachments from the Virginia, Georgia, New Jersey and Rhode Island will be landed at the foot of West Forty-fifth Street and march to Forty-sixth Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues. They will form the Third Seamen Regiment.

The regimental commanders will be: Marine Regiment, Major A. W. Catlin; First Seamen Regiment, Captain H. B. Wilson; Second Seamen Regiment, Captain G. A. Hoogerwerff; Third Seamen Regiment, Captain J. D. McDonald.

POWERS TO HALT NEW WAR MOVE IN BALKANS

Servia Remobilizes Troops in Preparation for Clash With Bulgaria.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 29.—The powers of Europe have begun to bring pressure upon Bulgaria, Servia and Greece to prevent a fresh conflict in the Balkans.

The Ambassadors believe that if the Balkan states and Greece can be held in accord until the protocol of a peace treaty with Turkey is signed that the issues causing dissension among the states of the Balkan Confederation can be settled by arbitration to the satisfaction of all.

Sir Edward Grey, British Foreign Minister, said to-day that he expects all the Balkan peace envoys to sign the preliminary draft of a Turco-Balkan treaty to-morrow.

Servia Prepares To Fight Bulgaria.

VIENNA, May 29.—Servia has begun the remobilization of her reservists on account of the critical relations with Bulgaria.

A telegram from Sofia says that Bulgaria is on the point of breaking off all diplomatic relations with Servia because of the unsatisfactory character of a statement made yesterday by Premier Pastich of Servia setting forth Servia's attitude in the Balkan crisis.

Premier Venizelos of Greece is expected to arrive in Sofia either to-night or to-morrow and will at once enter into negotiations with Czar Ferdinand in an effort to effect a conciliatory settlement.

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

Philatelist Pleased With Find of Stamps.

"Well," said the gentleman who lives in Ormewood Park, "I certainly played in great luck this week. Went to visit some relatives down in Mobile and made the find of my life. You know, I'm a philatelist—that is to say, a collector of postage stamps. I've been collecting since 1884. In the period since that year I've had any number of collections. I have given them away, sold them and traded them. My present collection was started in 1896, when I was a student in New York. I just started it to kill time because I was a little lonesome in that big town.

"On this trip to Mobile I was told by an aunt that a gentleman living near her had a trunkful of old letters and I went over to see him. Every time I hear of an old letter I think of the rare stamp that might be attached to it. This old fellow was nice as pie and gladly showed me his correspondence. And he certainly did have a trunk chock full of letters. I made a hasty look through and saw any number of Confederate stamps that made my mouth water.

"Mentally I appraised the stock in the trunk and offered him $10 for the stamps. I told him I didn't want the letters—just the stamps. He seemed surprised. Said he thought I would want the letters, too. He sold the pile for the amount I offered and I spent the happiest six days of my life sorting those stamps. I secured some beauties for my collection and sold the balance to a friend in New York who is in the stamp business. Just got a letter from him last night offering me $75 for the consignment. Guess that isn't making a little money on a pleasure trip, huh?"

Plenty of Places To Eat in Atlanta.

"I'll bet," said an old inhabitant—not the oldest, of course—"that there are more places to eat in Atlanta than any other city of similar size in these United States. I got to thinking about the matter the other afternoon when I was off from work and I made a tour to see what I could discover. It seemed to me that there was some sort of eating place on every one of 300 blocks. Of course that is an exaggeration, but if you want to be astonished by the number of cafes and restaurants and eating counters, just start out on a trip of inspection. Your eyes will be opened to their fullest by what you'll find.

"There are places where you can get a feed in a minute and a half. Another place where you can dine in splendor and to the accompaniment of a full orchestra. There are Chinese restaurants where chop suey and all sorts of Oriental dishes are served and where you can also get food cooked and served in American style. There are French cooks, Italian cooks, Greek cooks, Chinese cooks, English cooks—in fact, cooks of all nationalities. And you can get almost any native dish that is served in the world.

"I was surprised at the great number of Atlantans who are regular patrons of chop-suey cafes. Talking with one of the Chinese proprietors, I learned that some of the most prominent persons in Atlanta's business and social like have to have their chop suey at least twice a week. And some of these same persons are experts with the chopsticks. I saw one young attorney who occupies a prominent position in society and who is more than ordinarily endowed with histrionic ability, plying his chopsticks like a veteran.

"If you are hungry and have the price you can please your appetite a hundred ways in Atlanta."

Hempel Says We Are Warm-Hearted

BERLIN, May 29.—Frieda Hempel, the Berlin prima donna, who has just returned after her first season at the New York Metropolitan Opera, declares that the Americans are really warm-hearted, contrary to the prevailing German conception of them as a race unsentimental as fish.

The love of Americans for their dogs and other animals convinces Fraulein Hempel that there are no more "spiritual" people in the world.

NEW YORK, May 29.—After three years of nearly continuous warfare, during which 25 persons were killed, a treaty of peace was signed to-day in the chambers of Judge Foster between the heads of the tongs in Chinatown.

LAMAR TO SPEAK TO GEORGIA BAR

Supreme Court Jurist Appears Thursday Night for First Time in State Since Elevation.

Justice J. R. Lamar will make his first public appearance in Georgia since his elevation to the Supreme Court of the United States before the Georgia Bar Association at Warm Springs Thursday night. His address originally had been scheduled for Friday morning, but was moved up to Thursday night to enable the jurist to be in Washington Friday.

Arriving in Atlanta Wednesday morning with Mrs. Lamar, Justice Lamar paid a visit to members of the Supreme Court of Georgia. After chatting for an hour he and Mrs. Lamar proceeded to Warm Springs.

An Atlanta delegation of lawyers will leave for Warm Springs at 5:10 o'clock this afternoon. Among the lawyers will be Hamilton Douglas, Lee Jordan, John Y. Smith, Henry C. Peeples, Arminius A. Wright, John C. Tye, Judge Broyles, Sam D. Hewlett, Luther Z. Rosser, Jr., D. K. Johnston, Lawton Nally, W. C. Latimer, Eugene R. Black, Sanders McDaniel, Burton Smith, Alex Smith, H. M. Patty, Daniel Rountree, Robert C. Alston and John M. Slaton.

Other Georgia attorneys, already at Warm Springs, who will hear Justice Lamar, are Judge W. A. Little, of Columbus; Orville A. Parks, Macon; Judge Andrew J. Cobb, Athens; Judge Joseph H. Lumpkin and Judge Beverly D. Evans, Atlanta.

Society will turn out en masse at the evenin performance of the Players' Club June 3. Oscar Wilde's sparkling comedy, "The Importance of Being in Earnest," will be interpreted by Atlanta artists, pronounced proficient by professional instructors.

Advance seat sales indicate a capacity audience. Tickets have been on sale only a few days, but few are left. Choice seats especially were in great demand.

The box seats will be filled by as brilliant a company as ever went in one evening to grand opera. Several theater parties already made up will be scattered among the audience. Supper parties will be given after the show at the Piedmont Driving Club.

Among the hosts and hostesses at box parties will be Governor-elect and Mrs. Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson, Mrs. William D. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Felder, Judge and Mrs. Arthur Powell, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Cooney and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Speer.

The following well-known society leaders will appear in the cast: Miss Hildreth Burton-Smith, Mrs. William Owens, Mrs. Slaton, Mrs. H. B. Scott, Lamar Hill, Marshall Adair, Hamilton Douglas, Jr., and Frank Taylor.

Taft Scores U. S. for "Lamb-Like" Policy

NEW HAVEN, May 29.—Former President Taft delivered his first lecture at Yale on the general topic, "Some Questions of Modern Government." He criticised the short sighted policy of the United States in not maintaining a sufficient army, and attacked the United States Senate for its attitude toward foreign nations.

"The policy of this country seems to be the Lord looks after the children and the drunken men and He ought to look after the United States," said Mr. Taft.

STAY ON YOUR FEET

If an attack of constipation or biliousness hits you, there's no need to take a dose of calomel and spend at least a day getting over the effects of it. All druggists sell the liver tonic, Dodson's Liver Tone, that takes the place of calomel and starts a lazy liver without any bad after-effects.

Dodson's Liver Tone does all the good that calomel ever did, yet it is absolutely harmless to young people and old. It is a pleasant-tasting vegetable liquid that will relieve constipation or sour stomach or other troubles that go along with a lazy liver, without restriction of habit or diet. You don't leave off any of the things you regularly do when you take Dodson's Liver Tone.

All druggists sell Dodson's Liver Tone and give it a strong personal guarantee. They say, "A large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone sells for 50 cents, and we will hand any person back his 50 cents if he tries a bottle and doesn't say that it does all that calomel ever does and does it pleasantly. Get the genuine Dodson's Liver Tone and if you are not pleased with it we will give your money back with a smile."

HEARST PAPERS FORCE NAVAL EFFICIENCY

Secretary Daniels to Win Recruits by Making Warships Training Schools.

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The Hearst papers, in advance of other American newspapers, exposed the fact that the American navy was not much more than half-manned.

The Hearst papers made the statement, later so emphatically confirmed, that not a battleship in the great Hudson River display of last October could have gone out to sea to fight without a shortage of from three to five officers and a shortage of from 150 to 300 men.

These newspapers developed the fact that few men were enlisting in the navy and gave the cause for this in the fact that our navy offered so few inducements and attractions for American youths to enlist in that branch of our country's service.

The Hearst papers are now able to give the first exclusive information that these unfavorable conditions are to be changed.

Information comes from the Navy Department that Secretary Daniels has caught the progressive movement urged so long in these newspapers and is going to make the American navy a more attractive and a more profitable place for the American youth who is willing to serve his country and does not desire altogether to forget himself.

Ships as Naval Schools.

The Secretary of the Navy plans that hereafter every battleship and war vessel shall be a naval school—an industrial school—a school of the sciences and incidentally of the arts. When the Secretary's plans are completed there will go out from Annapolis with every naval vessel a corps of trained instructors to teach the sailors and enlisted men. This corps of instructors will be reinforced by the educated officers of each ship.

A battleship will hereafter be no idle place even in peace, and the enlisted man who binds himself to three years in the service of his country's navy can emerge at the end of his service, if he has will and intelligence, with an educational equipment for a profession by which he can sustain himself in the world.

The three-year enlisted man of the navy who will avail himself of these new and admirable advantages can come out a skilled engineer, a navigator, a machinist or any one of a half-dozen skilled professions that point the way to success in life.

Lewis Nixon has said that Annapolis is the best engineering school in the country and its graduates as teachers ought to do great things for the American sailors in three diligent years.

More Frequent Cruises.

The Secretary plans more frequent cruises to foreign ports, so that the education of travel and observation may be added to a sailor's opportunities on shipboard.

And last, but not least, the new Secretary of the Navy expresses the intention with all his influence and authority to insist upon the recognition of the individuality and manhood of individual seamen. An American sailor is promised that hereafter he shall be regarded, not only as a fighting machine, but as a man and treated as one.

This last is in line with the recent movement so ably pressed in the navy by men like Captain Benson and Commander White and other vigorous and progressive officers of the service.

The result of this new and admirable policy will be to fill half-empty lists of the navy and to make it, not a place for young men to bury themselves for three years and come out unfit to make a living, but to be educated in mind, body and spirit by the finest of teachers, and come out in three years as all-round men, equipped in health and courage and manliness and with a practical profession in life.

School for Deserters.

Secretary Daniels further intends to reform the system of punishment for desertions by sending young deserters, first to prison and afterward to the place of reform, but to send each of them first to that notable school at Port Royal, S. C., where they will be built up in character and patriotism and an understanding of a citizen's and a soldier's duty, and if they are docile and receptive to reinstate them in the navy without a prison term.

These are wholesome reforms, and Secretary Daniels is to be congratulated upon the good sense he has manifested in adopting them.

WHY AMERICA IS SHIPPING GOLD TO EUROPE

B. B. C. FORBES.

In the last ten years the United States has piled up an export balance, in merchandise, of $4,700,000,000.

* * *

During the same period we have imported, on balance, less than $90,000,000 of gold.

* * *

Since January 1 last we have shipped abroad $195,000,000 more merchandise than we have bought from foreigners, yet France has taken from us more than $35,000,000 gold and we have exported for European account, some $25,000,000 to South America.

* * *

How can we be forced by Europe to part with $60,000,000 gold this year when we have a "favorable" trade balance of $589,000,000 for the current fiscal year?

* * *

I have been asked repeatedly during the last few weeks to explain, in simple language, the reasons underlying a movement so perplexing on its surface.

* * *

America has an enormous "invisible" balance against her every year. Experts estimate that American tourists now leave $500,000,000 in Europe every summer, while American residents abroad spend at least a million dollars a day, all drawn from this country. Then, thanks to our miserable merchant marine, we have to pay $300,000,000 annually for freights. So great is the mass of American securities owned by foreigners that the yearly payments in interest and dividends aggregate something like $500,000,000. Foreigners working here remit $1,000,000 every business day to their folks at home.

* * *

John E. Gardin, one of the ablest foreign exchange bankers in New York and vice president of the National City Bank, has made exhaustive investigations into this subject. I asked Mr. Gardin to give me estimates for the present day conditions. Here are his figures:

OUR ANNUAL PAYMENTS ABROAD.

Spent by tourists	$ 500,000,000
Spent by American residents abroad	400,000,000
Interest and dividends on securities held abroad	500,000,000
Freights to foreign steamship companies	300,000,000
Remittances by foreigners	300,000,000
Total	$2,000,000,000

* * *

These figures are the highest ever drawn up by any recognized authority, but it must be remembered that there has been an increase in every item during recent years.

* * *

Taking our merchandise export balance at $500,000,000 a year and the "invisible" account against us at $2,000,000,000, there is a net balance AGAINST us of $1,500,000,000. This has to be met chiefly by sales of American securities to foreigners, mostly Europeans.

* * *

Therefore, Europe by stopping her purchases of our investments or by returning a small part of her holdings, can get gold from us in payment whenever she wants it, broadly speaking. We are without such means to check gold shipments as European countries possess, for ours is a "free" gold market, whereas a premium can be imposed abroad.

* * *

It is high time we did more of our own carrying trade. The short-sighted, old fashioned theory is that America can employ her capital for more profitable purposes and that it is all right to let foreigners do our shipping. BUT, VIEWED FROM THE BROADEST STANDPOINT, STATESMANSHIP AND PATRIOTISM, IT IS ALL WRONG THAT WE SHOULD BE WITHOUT SHIPS. WE SHOULD NOT BE DEPENDENT UPON POSSIBLE ENEMIES FOR OUR MEANS OF OVERSEA TRANSPORTATION.

* * *

It may be interesting to give our merchandise export balance for the last ten years:

Year.	Export Balance.
1905	401,049,000
1906	517,302,000
1907	446,430,000
1908	666,432,000
1910	188,037,000
1911	522,094,000
1912	551,057,000
1913*	588,337,000
	$4,702,069,000

*For twelve months ending April.

* * *

I hope I have answered the question of how, despite these impressive figures, we have been obliged to export gold during the political upheaval in Europe.

EXHIBITS FEATURE HARDWARE MEET

"Georgia-Manufactured" Goods Shown at Convention of Dealers at Auditorium-Armory.

The Georgia Retail Hardware Merchants' Association got down to active business Thursday morning, when the third session of their convention opened at the Auditorium. Several important committee reports, comprising recommendations on the future policy of the association, are to be presented to the convention at Thursday's sessions.

Reports of the secretary, John L. Moore, of Madison, Ga., and several minor committees, already submitted, show the association to be in a prosperous condition and gaining steadily in membership and influence.

Wilmer L. Moore, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, welcomed the hardware men on behalf of commercial Atlanta at the opening session Wednesday, and Mayor James G. Woodward gave the official greetings of the city government. P. S. Twitty, of Dublin, one of the leading members of the association, responded to Mayor Woodward's address. Others who spoke were R. W. Hatcher, Milledgeville; G. W. Woodruff, Winder; C. B. Thomas, Griffin; J. R. Hall, Moultrie; W. G. Raines, Statesboro.

On Wednesday evening the visitors were the guests of Atlanta wholesale and retail hardware men at the Forsyth Theater.

RESINOL HEALS ITCHING SKINS

And Clears Unsightly Complexions.

The soothing, healing medication in Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap penetrates every tiny pore of the skin, clears it of all impurities, and stops itching instantly. Resinol positively speedily heals eczema, rashes, ringworm and other eruptions, and clears away disfiguring pimples and blackheads when other treatments prove worse than useless.

Resinol is not an experiment. It is a doctor's prescription which proved so wonderfully successful for skin troubles that it has been used by other doctors all over the country for eighteen years. No other treatment for the skin now before the public can show such a record of professional approval. Every druggist sells Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, but you can test them at our expense. Just write to Dept. 27-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md., and we will send you a generous trial by parcel post.

TWO NEWS ITEMS

INDIVIDUAL TRUSTEE DISSIPATES ESTATE

Georgia newspapers the other day gave an account of the dissipation of an estate which left a young lady penniless. The father, who had a comfortable business in a Georgia city, died several years ago, leaving his only child, a daughter, an estate of $35,000. A man, a friend of the family, who was then considered honest and capable, was appointed trustee for the daughter's property. On coming of age she called upon him for an accounting and delivery of her inheritance and HE IMMEDIATELY DISAPPEARED. He is still among the "missing," and THE YOUNG LADY'S INHERITANCE IS GONE.

TRUST COMPANY OF GA. DOUBLES THIS ESTATE

The other news item, not heretofore published, relates to an Atlanta lady who died, leaving an only child, a son of ten years. SHE HAD WISELY MADE A WILL IN WHICH THE TRUST COMPANY OF GEORGIA was appointed EXECUTOR and GUARDIAN of the property of her son. From his inheritance, which was officially appraised at $16,500, the boy was supported comfortably and given a college education. When he reached his majority, less than a month ago, the TRUST COMPANY OF GEORGIA, his Guardian, turned over to him property appraised at $31,345, thus, with his maintenance, more than doubling the estate.

Chapter I

THE way led along upon what had once been the embankment of a railroad. But no train had run upon it for many years. The forest on either side swelled up the slopes of the embankment and crested across it in a green wave of trees and bushes. The trail was as narrow as a man's body, and was no more than a wild-animal runway. Occasionally, a piece of rusty iron, showing through the forest mould, advertised that the rail and the ties still remained. In one place, a ten-inch tree, [illegible] ing through at a connection, had lifted the rail clearly into view. The tie had followed the rail, held to it by the spikes for its bed to be filled with [illegible] so that now the crumbling rail itself up at [illegible] likewise wore a single garment—a ragged-edged piece of bearskin, with a hole in the middle through which he had thrust his head. He could not be more than twelve years old. Tucked in one ear was the freshly severed tail of a rabbit. In one hand he carried a [illegible] On his back was a [illegible] sheath hanging [illegible] the battered handle of a [illegible] brown as a berry, and [illegible] catlike tread. His beard, which should have been snow white, but which showed the same weather-wear and camp-stain as his hair, fell nearly to his waist in a great tangled mass. About his chest and shoulders hung a single, mangy garment of goat-skin. His arms and legs, withered and skinny, betokened extreme age, as well as did their sunburn and scars and scratches betoken long years of exposure to the elements.

The boy, who led the way, checking the eagerness of his muscles to the slow progress of the elder, and the boy's gaze was fixed on the tops of the agitated bushes. Then a large bear, a grizzly, crashed into view, and likewise stopped abruptly, at sight of the humans. He did not like them, and growled querulously. Slowly the boy fitted the arrow to the bow, and slowly he pulled the bowstring taut. But he never removed his eyes from the bear. The old man peered from under his green leaf at the danger, and stood as quietly as the boy. For a few seconds this mutual scrutinizing went on; then, the bear betraying a growing irritability, the boy, with a movement of his head, indicated that the old man must step aside from the trail and go down the embankment. The boy followed, going backward, holding the bow taut and ready. They heard a crashing among the bushes from the bottom of the embankment told them the bear was coming. The boy grinned as he looked at the old man.

"A big un, Granser," he said.

LONGCHAMPS SEES VISIONS IN LACE

Expensive Fashions in Summer Gowns Are on Show at the Race Course.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, May 29.—The vogue of lace as the favorite material for summer dresses is receiving full confirmation at Longchamps. The first real summer conditions have induced fashionable women to don this year's most recent creations of the dressmaking art. Although later, no doubt, good imitations will be obtainable at reasonable prices, the smart delicate gowns, as first shown, appear to cost as much as any luxurious fur coat.

Alencon, Malines, Chantilly, Spanish point, Venise and cobweb laces—some even old and worthy to appear in the cases of art collectors—were profusely used either for the whole gown over some dark material or as flounces, fichus or trimming, when mousseline de soie, or some other equally thin and soft material, was employed.

Whatever may be said concerning the new silhouette, a decided return to the youthful, almost girlish, figure is characteristic of summer gowns. These, according to show, are generally of the one-piece bodice and fichu style, the points of the latter crossing about at the waist to leave the neck uncovered—the low front giving the appearance of a V-shaped decollete—falling back of the skirt and crossed again in soft folds near the hem of the skirt, where they end in graceful draperies.

This cross and recross model is carried out in ivory lace over a cream or dull gray silk underskirt, while a brilliantly colored sash simply drawn around the waist rather high on the bodice, relieves the monotony of the ensemble. Blue, pale or dark, is barred, and the most popular colors in sashes are now yellow, red and in some cases black.

Four Stockings for Two Legs.

Skirts are shorter in front than ever. The fashion of cothurni or low shoes laced with silk ribbons high on the ankle appears, indeed, likely to make short skirts more and more favored this summer. This is responsible for the new mode of stockings to match the dress. Many were seen in a real lace pattern which was conspicuous against the pale pink silk hose worn underneath after the fashion of the dandies of the eighteenth century.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"St. Elmo" at the Atlanta.

"St. Elmo" has made a hit through the excellence of its presentation at the Atlanta Theater this week. It will remain every night with another matinee on Saturday. The play has pleased as nothing else has in the past and is showing its popularity by attracting big crowds to the playhouse. Miss Long and Mr. Vail are very convincing in their parts and easily surpass their previous efforts in the play. "St. Elmo" was produced at the request of the majority of patrons and is proving its worth.

Excellent Bill at Forsyth.

Patrons of the cozy Forsyth Theater are pleased with the excellent bill of Keith vaudeville which the management is presenting this week. Maggie Cline, "the Irish Queen," is the headliner and has scored a pronounced hit. The Great Howard, the ventriloquist, is also a great favorite. Caesare Nesi, the singer, and Madden and Fitzpatrick, in a comedy sketch, have scored successfully. It is a bill of real variety.

Tabloid Bill Is Popular.

Tabloid musical comedy as presented at the Bijou this week has found great favor at the hands of patrons of that play house. The bill is Joseph E. Howard's "The District Leader," and the offering is given in splendid fashion. There are pretty girls, tuneful music and delightful dances. The bill next week will be "The College Girls."

The house of KIMBALL has had an experience of over fifty years in the music industry, and artists, amateurs, and thousands of satisfied customers give abundant proof of the merit of the Kimball.

We are showing a large variety of styles in 88-note Player Pianos and Uprights. We have your choice in woods, such as Rosewood, Walnut, Circassian Walnut, Oak, Mission, Satin Mahogany and Mahogany. Prices ranging from $195 to $1,250.

Our one, absolutely one, price insures you, whether an experienced buyer or not, of securing the best instrument for the amount you wish to pay. It is not safe to buy a piano, or any other article of merchandise, from a dealer who has a sliding scale of prices, because you will never know when he has given you his lowest price. Then, too, your neighbor may buy the same merchandise for from $50 to $75 less money. A piano has but one value, and that should fix its price—the right price. Each and every instrument on our wareroom floor is tagged at the cash figure, and no one pays more or less.

It is not only safe, but pleasant, to deal with the world's largest manufacturers of Pianos, Player Pianos, Residence and Church Pipe Organs, through this Branch Store.

Every Man Likes Pie

And every man can eat it without taking a moment's thought about digestion when the pie crust is light, flaky, tender as you can make it with

Swift's Silver-Leaf Lard

Mix ½ teaspoon salt into 1½ cups flour; work in ¾ cup Swift's Silver-Leaf Lard, moisten with water, roll out. Spread with tablespoonful Swift's Silver-Leaf Lard, dredge with flour, roll up like jelly roll, pat and roll out, roll up again and cut off enough for lower crust. Roll out remainder for upper crust and when ready for oven put few small dots Silver-Leaf Lard on top.

Shortening that makes good pie crust will make tasty pastry of all kinds. Swift's Silver-Leaf Lard is put up in tight covered, new tin pails. Every one bears the Government inspection stamp guaranteeing the purity and wholesomeness of the lard. Buy a pail.

A Duty to Look Well

By Virginia T. Van De Water.

A WOMAN was running a piece of pink ribbon into a dainty underwaist. Her small son, aged six, stood watching her. At last he spoke out his thought—

"Mama, why do you put ribbon in that thing?"

"To draw it up on the shoulders and fasten it with," was the smiling explanation.

"Wouldn't a piece of twine do as well?" queried the lad soberly.

The mother paused a moment, concealing the amusement she felt. Then she spoke gravely and frankly.

"No, dear," she said, "twine might fasten it, but it would not do as well, for it is not as pretty as ribbon."

A Real Duty.

A man might have considered that ready evidence of a feminine lack of logic. To the woman who thinks long it held a truth that it is well to consider. When, without sacrifice of principle or duty, one can make of a practical thing also a pretty thing, it is a mistake—almost a wrong—not to do it.

The small boy, as he grew older, learned to admire the dainty, delicate touches in his mother's apparel. "My mother always looks nice," he used to say when the matter of woman's appearance was discussed.

I know one woman who seems to think that she does God service in looking as plain as possible. She is scrupulously neat in appearance, but her mental attitude reminds one of the small boy's question: "Wouldn't a piece of twine do as well?" All the appointments of her home are plain and substantial, bought—like Mrs. Primrose's wedding dress—with a thought of durability rather than of beauty. She scorns fine china, and considers cut glass a useless folly of the rich. As to solid silver, why should one use it when plated ware carries the food to one's mouth just as effectually?

Of course, she has a scorn of all "modern notions," such as centerpieces, lollies and "place-plates." "Useless nuisances," she says sententiously. I often wonder how her children ar going to regard the home of their childhood when they go out into the world and see the dainty accessories of dress and furnishings which are unknown in their family and household. Fortunately this woman is the exception, not the rule, of her sex when she declares: "It is a mark of weakness to spend time on ornamentation and convention."

Don't Look Homely!

Were we all to adopt this principle through life how many hard and ugly corners there would be, corners that are now rounded or hidden!

To look as homely as one can is no more a virtue than to be as frankly disagreeable as one sometimes feels like being. Few of us can be handsome, but we need not elect to be positively ugly—if we can help it. In fact to mitigate the bad points in our personal appearance and to emphasize the good ones is an actual duty.

Perhaps some one asks to whom one owes this duty. The answer is plain. One owes it to the world at large, but, primarily, to one's own family. Surely it is the business of both man and woman to look as well as he and she can.

It is not always convenient to fuss over one's personal appearance when the mercury climbs up toward the hundred mark, but when one acquires the habit of invariably looking as well as is conformable with one's other duties, one will not be satisfied to wear a dark calico wrapper instead of a dainty and equally cool negligee—even for "home people" only.

"I was an invalid from nervous prostration, indigestion and female troubles.

"I think I suffered every pain a woman could before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I think it saved this baby's life, as I lost my first one.

"My health has been very good ever since, and I praise your medicine to all my friends."—MRS. VERNA WILKES, R. F. D. No. 1, Plattsburg, Miss.

The darkest days of husband and wife are when they come to look forward to a childless and lonely old age.

Many a wife has found herself incapable of motherhood owing to some derangement of the feminine system, often curable by the proper remedies.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal.

The Mistakes of Jennie .:. By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

Tom found Jennie a little crumpled heap on the sofa.

AS THE MAN held Jennie tight in his arms, kissing her—she at last realized his intentions and could THEN see clearly the meaning of the dinner in the swell restaurant and the auto ride into the country. Jennie fought and struck the man in the face as hard as she could—whereupon the former "so polite and fatherly" MAN turned into the beast he was at heart—held her tight against the wall choking her. When he realized there was nothing to be gained that way he tried to treat the whole thing as a joke. Jennie watched her chance and did more THINKING in the next few seconds than she has ever taken the TROUBLE to do before. THE MAN told her the proprietor of the place was a friend of his and it would be of no use for her to make a scene, for she couldn't leave the place until he got good and ready for her to leave. Then he offered her fine dresses, diamonds, anything she wanted—so why not be a "good fellow."

THE MAN was between Jennie and the door and she saw it was useless to try and get out that way—the window opened out onto a porch and before the man could get around the table to catch her, she was through it and running up the road for her life. She ran and ran, dodging off the road into some woods. The branches tore her face and dress but she kept on till she could run no more. She sat down on an old log and listened but could hear no one following. There she sat in her little torn dress shaking and crying until she realized it was getting dark. She wandered on through the woods and came to a farm house where she found an old lady who, after hearing her story, loaned her enough money for the railroad fare home.

Tom came over to her house that evening after wondering all day where she could have gone and found Jennie a little crumpled heap on the front room sofa.

"Oh! indeed! He is well off?" went on the stern inquisitor.

"He has some money, I suppose," said the girl dully. How long was this to continue?

"How much, do you suppose?" There was cutting sarcasm in the tone.

A little flicker of mischief lit Charlotte's eyes. Why, if this was a game after all, she would play it high—spiritedly—she would win. "As much as YOU have—I suppose!"

"You are sanguine, I think, Fraulein Charlotte. Is his family as much respected as OURS?" Solomon admired a WORTHY antagonist—even though that antagonist might be his daughter!

"All's Well."

"Just as much," said demure Charlotte. She dared now to raise her eyes—to look at Jacob—whose face was lit now by a smile of component parts of amusement and eagerness.

"A Jew?"

"Yes."

"Of course. Tell me; my child. Tell me. On this much I must insist." Charlotte hesitated in lovely confusion. "Tell me—my child, tell your father."

Blushing, trembling—radiant, and yet frightened now that her moment had come—Charlotte laid her little white hands on her father's strong shoulders, and turned him gently toward the window where Jacob stood. "There—he is there."

But now Jacob's hour had come—love must have its way. All in one pulsing moment, he had crossed the room, and Charlotte was caught in hungry arms. "Charlotte—my little Charlotte. Come." And Old Sol, beaming joyously through the rose arbor, was Love's only confidant, as the boy and girl fled to the great outdoors—mother Nature—with their precious joy.

Solomon laughed. "Magnificent! So I have worked and calculated and spent my money—for my nephew!"

Frau Gudula lived again in one brief moment her own love dream. "And those two have made their Lover's Lane out of their Grannie's old Jew's Alley! Yes, it is magnificent!"

From under the table the old Frau drew a battered little low stool. She smiled—but there was the pathos of the very old—whose race is nearly run in her gentle tone. "Come and sit here, Solomon, my son. Sit here as you used to in the dear long ago when you were a child—and your dear father was with me—instead of calling me from far away. What does it matter, my son, if they are happy? Not in your way, perhaps, but in hers your little Charlotte is happy—our little Jacob and Charlotte are happy. Happy, my son. All our money could not buy a better thing than that. Cannot YOU be content?"

Solomon looked out beyond the open door—out on the rose-hung terrace where young love had come at last into its own. Perhaps it was his mother's gentle tones, perhaps it was his daughter's glorified face, perhaps it was the memory of Charlotte's mother—the wife who had been his only love—three generations of loving women seeking the way to Solomon's heart, and Solomon's heart knew youth and love again.

"Yes, mother—dear, I am content."

And in the Garden of Cupid at Neustadt Castle, and in the rose arbor of Jew's Lane, there was peace—for in the hearts of the royal cousins of Taunus, and in the home of the Five Frankforters, love had come into his kingdom.

THE END.

Unexpected Result.

Here is an emigration story told at a meeting recently. In a village was a youth who had got himself into such a variety of scrapes that his people thought it would be better to dispatch him to Canada, so as to get him away from old and doubtful associations. He agreed to go, provided those interested in his departure secured him some testimonials. Half a dozen were got for him. They sang his praises in unrestrained terms, spoke of his geniality, of his good address and exceptional capability, and all the other virtues that few men have, but many get the credit for.

When the young man read the testimonials he turned to his father and exclaimed:

"Well, I'm hanged! I had no idea people thought so much of me. And now I know how much they like me I'm blowed if I'll go away at all."

"Love you?" said he, as he got a tighter grip; "love you? Why, precious one, madly as I hug you now, the fervor of my affection almost makes me long to be an octopus with eight arms."

Hamlet had just been hit by a cold storage egg. Whereupon he turned gravely to his audience.

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS.

Gordon Kelly, a young North Georgia mountaineer, comes to Atlanta to get a place with Billy Smith's Crackers. It is raining when he reaches Ponce DeLeon and he is nearly run over by an auto, in which are two persons—a man and a young girl. The driver of the car is an arrogant fellow. The girl makes him stop the machine. She gets out and inquires if Kelly is injured. She apologizes for her companion's brusque manner. Kelly sees Manager Smith and tells him he has never played a game of ball. Smith consents to give Kelly a trial. The girl in the auto is Mildred Deery, daughter of Galen Deery, a crafty and wealthy speculator in timber lands. Her companion is Forrest Cain, a rich young man about town. Kelly owns timber land that Deery would like to possess. Kelly is invited to the Deery home, where he is introduced to Mildred. Cain hears Mildred order an auto to take her guest to his hotel. He takes the driver's place and carries Kelly out into the woods. Kelly thrashes Cain. Manager Smith tells the newspapers about his new find and the reporters print all sorts of "joshing" stories about Kelly.

Now go on with the story.

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

From that time on Long Tom didn't give Kelly an easy fly to catch. He purposely batted the ball so that if the recruit got to it at all it would be at least a hard catch. The result was one of the most wonderful exhibitions of ground covering by an outfielder ever seen on a ball field. Finally Smith called a halt by declaring morning parctice at an end.

The players went at once to the clubhouse to take off their uniforms, stand under a shower bath and dress themselves for the street. The clubhouse became at once a very lively place. Each player was assigned a locker for uniforms, clothes and personal belongings. In front of these lockers were short benches, placed there for the use of the players while dressing or undressing.

It so happened that Long Tom Morrissey and Gordon Kelly had adjoining lockers and therefore sat side by side as they started to undress. The other players were busy with their own affairs and did not notice the other two until suddenly they heard Kelly cry:

"You can't call me that, Morrissey."

All hands turned in the direction of the voice just in time to see Long Tom draw back and slap Kelly in standing up. The two men were now staning up. Their shoes were off and they were stripped to the waist. The next instant there was a furious mixup. Benches were overturned as the tall, gaunt veteran swayed in the embrace of the tall, lithe youngster.

It was all over in half a minute. At the end of that time Morrisey lay, an inert mass, in a corner of the clubhouse, where he had fallen with a loud crash. Ball players do not interfere with clubhouse fights. Even a manager will not interfere. If there are grudges to be settled, it is best to have them settled and be done with them. That is the philosophy of the clubhouse. Players see to it that there is fair play. That is all.

"Call It Square."

No one knew what passed between the two men that led up to the encounter. After the brief battle, Kelly replaced his overturned bench as though nothing had happened, and quickly removing the rest of his clothing stepped under the shower in an adjoining room. The other players went to the assistance of Long Tom, who showed signs of life about this time. They raised the veteran to his feet. Morrissey blinked for awhile and then a grin bespread his features. His left cheek was cut and bleeding.

"The kid is all right," he exclaimed heartily. "My nerve was better than my judgment, that's all."

He, too quickly pulled off his clothes and stepping out of the room, turned on the shower next the one where Kelly was standing. With the water pouring down his body in streams he reached out his hand to the young man.

"My fault, kid. I apologize. Call it square?"

Gordon Kelly grasped the outstretched hand.

"Certainly I will," he said, with a rare smile.

Kelly dressed himself rapidly and was the first to leave the clubhouse. The others followed singly and in pairs. Long Tom Morrissey and Bill Smith were the last to go.

"Did that guy tell you he never played a game of ball?" demanded the veteran backstop of his manager, as he slipped the key of his locker in his pocket.

"That's what he said" replied Smith.

"And never played a game of ball?"

"That's what he said."

"Billy, he's kiddin' you. Why, he even fights like a ball player," declared Long Tom, with a grin. He started to leave the clubhouse when his manager called him back.

"Want to change your locker?" asked Smith.

"Me? What for?" demanded Morrissey in surprise.

"You're right next to the kid and I thought on account of—"

"That's where I want to be; right next to the kid," Long Tom broke in. "He's my pal, Billy."

CHAPTER XII.

AS Gordon Kelly hurried out of the clubhouse he asked himself this question: "Is the game worth the candle?" and on his way down town he had a chance to study the question and answer it to his own satisfaction.

Within the past few hours he had, first, been more or less ridiculed in the newspapers and, second, he had engaged in a clubhouse fight with another ball player. That, he figured, was a pretty strenuous way for a novice like himself to begin a baseball career. Would every day have its bad features as this day had? Would it not be best for him to quit the game right now? How about going to Manager Smith and thanking him for his kindness, but telling him at the same time he had decided to call it all off.

Greeted by Mildred.

Ruminating further on the subject he came to the conclusion that the newspapers were right. The reporters were perfectly justified in refusing to laud him to the skies before he had demonstrated his ability. There was nothing really objectionable in what they had said about him. He confessed to himself that what they had published was largely true and they had written their articles in a humorous vein which was well within their rights under the circumstances. No, he had no fault to find with the newspapers.

But how about that clubhouse fight? Well, that was a thing of the past. Long Tom had apologized, he had accepted the apology and he believed they would be friends from now on. Then why quit? Wouldn't that make him more ridiculous than ever? Besides he didn't like the sound of the word. No, he wouldn't quit. He would stick it out—do the best he could and trust to luck and Providence.

Glancing out of the car window at this stage of his meditations, Kelly beheld Miss Deery seated at the wheel of an automobile of which she was the sole occupant. There was a temporary blockade and Kelly seized the opportunity to jump off the street car and hurry around to where Miss Deery's machine was packed in with several others, waiting for the jam to clear itself. He raised his hat.

"How do you do?" smiled Mildred, pleasantly. "Jump in and I'll drive you home; or, better still, come to my house and have luncheon with me."

"Is that where you are headed for?" inquired Gordon, stepping into the car and seating himself beside the young woman.

"I don't seem to be headed for anywhere in this blockade. Ah, here we are," and the car moved slowly forward. "Well, what is your lordship's pleasure?"

"You are very kind, but before giving an answer I have a counter proposition to make."

The nature of which is,"

"Judge Barbee kindly sent me a card to his club and he wrote me there was a ladies' dining room there. The card is only good for two weeks and I would like to make use of it. Won't you take lunch with me there?"

"That would be simply fine. But we'll have to go home anyway, because I have to prink up a little bit," said Mildred, with an arch look.

"I think you are very charming as you are," remarked Gordon.

Mildrel laughed gaily.

"Mr. Kelly, you told me you lived all your life in the mountains and have only been in Atlanta a week. You are certainly learning fast. Who's your teacher?"

"You are the only girl I know in Atlanta, Miss Deery."

"As you know how to say nice things I'll take that as a compliment."

They were soon at the Deery residence, and leaving him in the big, comfortable living room to amuse himself Mildred ran upstairs. Contrary to the assertions of humorists, she was back again inside of ten minutes, with a complete change of costume, and if she was charming before, she was bewitching now. Gordon offered to drive the car, and with the smiling comment that he seemed to have many accomplishments for a mountaineer, Mildred arranged herself beside him. Ten minutes later they were at the club and seated at a table. When the waiter had taken their order, Gordon asked, seriously:

"Have you ever seen a game of baseball, Miss Deery.?"

"Of course I have. I've seen Georgia and Tech play half a dozen times. And I saw Harvard and Yale play on the Polo Grounds, New York, too."

"Which side won?"

"I've forgotten. I went with a party of friends, some of whom wanted Yale to win and the others wanted Harvard to win. I got all mixed up in the excitement."

"Did you ever see a professional game of baseball here in Atlanta, at Ponce DeLeon Park?

"No, I never did. Why this cross-examination, Mr. Kelly?"

"That's very nice of you. I rather like baseball: I'll say that."

The talk went on. Gordon Kelly was becoming very much interested in Mildred Deery; to such an extent that he was anxious to learn what her opinions were in regard to professional ball players. Yet he was afraid to ask the direct question. He beat around the bush for a while and then changed the subject, without getting the information he desired and without suspecting why he asked the questions.

YOU read the first nine installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read this tenth installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

FREE, NEXT SUNDAY.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

FOR HER SAKE, DO.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am twenty, and deeply in love with a girl of eighteen. She told me she loved me, and I love her, too, but some way I doubt her love. The other evening she attended a dance with a friend of mine after I asked her not to go. E. S. B.

Your attitude is one of fault-finding, and I not sure that the giving of your love to a woman means her happiness.

She says she loves you. Be grateful for that much and don't attempt to control her as if she were a child. If you can not be that generous, it will be a kindness to her to transfer your affections.

DON'T GO TO EXTREMES.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am a girl 20 years old. A few young men would like to keep steady company with me but I always refuse because I do not seem to care for them much. Do you think I should accept just the same? I am so lonesome because I am always home, while the other girls have a good time. LONESOME.

Unless these men are objectionable to you, you must accept an occasional invitation, for it may be the means of meeting the man you will some day love. Don't get into the habit of isolation and consequent lonesomeness. It will grow on you.

FORGET YOURSELF.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am a young man of twenty and have been keeping company with a young lady for the past six months. I love this young lady very much and would be thankful for your advice on how to win her. R. M.

Forget yourself in an effort to make her happy. Be considerate, agreeable, persistent; let her know you love her and are willing to devote your life to her.

Household Suggestions

Moths can be kept away from furs or clothes by putting a piece of linen damped in turpentine in drawers or wardrobes. This should be renewed once or twice during the year. Moths will never attack carpets and curtains which have been well sprinkled with salt.

A small box of brickdust with a cork in it kept at the side of the sink will be found most useful for taking stains from knives, cups and all kinds of china and enamel ware. If at hand at washing-up time it saves many an after cleaning.

A good cleaning paste for enameled baths, zinc pails, etc., is made of equal parts of shaved yellow soap, whiting and common soda, dissolved over the fire in the least possible amount of water required to keep it from burning.

To hang pictures on a plastered wall try dipping the nail into cold water before driving it into the wall. It will bite into the plaster if this is done, and will hold a heavy weight without loosening.

Silencing the Philosopher.

"Yes," remarked the philosopher; "deafness is indeed a terrible affliction. But in such cases nature, you know, always provides some compensation. At any rate, if a man is deficient in one sense, he usually has another abnormally developed. Now, I once knew a poor blind fellow whose sense of touch was positively uncanny. Really, it served him almost as well as eyes do a normal man."

"Sure," said the genial Irishman, who hitherto had taken no part in the discussion, "an' I've noticed that, too! There's a friend of mine, he's lame, poor chap, but he can get about almost as easily as you or I. True, one of his legs is short, but the other makes up for it by being three inches longer!"

A Popular Song

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

BY NELL BRINKLEY

Nell Brinkley Says

THEY call it "I LOVE YOU." The Kings of Babylon and the slaves by the river sang it with equal fervor. In faeryland they know it. Adam brought it home to Eve and sang it tirelessly. On the plaintive "ukulele" of soft-aired Hawaii they have played it since the isles were born. Steel and iron clad men of the rough days of chivalry caroled it to the maids they met from the broad backs of their dray horses. Cleopatra whined it in her honey-sweet voice to dull-witted Antony. In the backwoods of Tennessee they know it. In the gray, melancholy uplands of wild Thibet rough-haired youths whisper it to bead-strung slant eyed girls. In the hidden corner of the music room, screened in spikes of fruit blossoms, a smart young chap hums it to a girl who never twisted up her own hair in her life, and out in the country, in an orchard, on the top rail of a gray old worm fence, a boy in a blue "jumper" chants it to a girl in a pink sunbonnet shading her sun-browned cheeks. Oh, it's a popular song—everybody knows it and everybody always did know it

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"I guess we can find a way to have the marriage annulled, or whatever they do to marriages that don't take."

The brutal assurance of the man in thus referring to things that were sacred moved Dick to wrath.

"Don't you interfere," he said. His words were spoken softly but tensely.

Nevertheless, Burke held to the topic, but an indefinable change in his manner rendered it less offensive to the young man.

"Interfere! Huh!" he ejaculated, grinning broadly. "Why, that's what I'm paid to do. Listen to me, son. The minute you begin mixing up with crooks, you ain't in a position to give orders to any one. The crooks have got no rights in the eyes of the police. Just remember that."

He Was Not Listening.

The Inspector spoke the simple truth as he knew it from years of experience. The theory of the law is that a presumption of innocence exists until the accused is proven guilty. But the police are out of sympathy with such finical methods. With them, the crook is presumed guilty at the outset of whatever may be charged against him. If need be, there will be proof a-plenty against him—of the sort that the underworld knows to its sorrow.

But Dick was not listening. His thoughts were again wholly with the woman he loved, who, as the Inspector declared, had fled from him.

"Where's she gone in Chicago?"

Burke answered in his usual gruff fashion, but with a note of kindliness that was not without its effect on Dick.

"I'm no mind reader," he said. "But she's a swell little girl, all right. I've got to hand it to her for that. So, she'll probably stop at the Blackstone—that is, until the Chicago police are tipped off that she is in town."

Of a sudden, the face of the young man took on a totally different expression. Where before had been anger, now was a vivid eagerness. He went close to the Inspector, and spoke with intense seriousness.

"Burke," he said, pleadingly, "give me a chance. I'll leave for Chicago in the morning. Give me twenty-four hours' start before you begin hounding her."

The Inspector regarded the speaker searchingly. His heavy face was drawn in an expression of apparent doubt. Abruptly, then, he smiled acquiescence.

"Seems reasonable," he admitted.

But the father strode to his son.

"No, no, Dick," he cried. "You shall not go. You shall not go."

Burke, however, shook his head in remonstrance against Gilder's plea. His huge voice came booming, weightily impressive

"Why not?" he questioned. "It's a fair gamble. And, besides, I like the boy's nerve."

Dick seized on the admission eagerly.

"And you'll agree?" he cried.

"Yes, I'll agree," the Inspector answered.

"Thank you," Dick said quietly.

But the father was not content. On the contrary, he went toward the two hurriedly, with a gesture of reproval.

"You shall not go, Dick," he declared, impetuously.

The Inspector shot a word of warning to Gilder in an aside that Dick could not hear.

"Keep still," he replied. "It's all right."

Dick went on speaking with a seriousness suited to the magnitude of his interests.

"You give me your word, Inspector," he said, "that you won't notify the police in Chicago until I've been there twenty-four hours?"

"I Don't Like It."

"You're on," Burke replied genially. "They won't get a whisper out of me until the time is up." He swung about to face the father, and there was a complete change in his manner. "Now, then, Mr. Gilder," he said briskly, "I want to talk to you about another little matter——"

Dick caught the suggestion, and interrupted quickly.

"Then I'll go." He smiled rather wanly at his father. "You know, Dad, I'm sorry, but I've got to do what I think is the right thing."

Burke helped to save the situation from the growing tenseness.

"Sure," he cried heartily; "sure you have! That's the best any of us can do." He watched keenly as the young man went out of the room. It was not until the door closed after Dick that he spoke. Then he dropped to a seat on the couch, and proceeded to make his confidence to the magnate.

"He'll go to Chicago in the morning, you think, don't you?"

"Certainly," Gilder answered. "But I don't like it."

Burke slapped his leg with an enthusiasm that might have broken a weaker member.

"Best thing that could have happened!" he vociferated. And then, as Gilder regarded him in astonishment, he added, chuckling: "You see, he won't find her there."

"Why do you think that?" Gilder demanded, greatly puzzled.

Burke permitted himself the luxury of laughing appreciatively a moment more before making his explanation. Then he said quietly:

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THARE was two ladies up to the house last nite. Both of them has daughters wich is jest going to git married & that maiks them feel kind of love sick themselfs, I guess, beekaus that is all that thay did all the time thay was to the house, talk about love. Pa dident like it a bit, beekaus both of the ladies was oalder than he is, & I have offen herd Pa say that wimmen shud talk about other topicks than love wen thay git middel aged, topicks like church work or how much life insurance thare husbands is going to leave them when thay die.

One of the ladies was naimed Missus Raymond & the other was Missus Belcher. Missus Raymond sed to Pa:

"Don't Cry," Said Ma.

I was jest telling your wife beefoar you caim in the room how sweet & innocent & gurlish my littel daughter looked to-day wen she was looking oaver sum pritty material for her trousseo. The deer littel cherup seemed so charming and confused and bewil-deringly pretty that I almost envied the man that is going to taik her away from me, sed Missus Raymond. Then she beegan to cry.

I doant think I wud cry if I was you, deerest, Ma sed to her. Do calm yurself & taik cumfurt in thinking about the pritty hoam that her husband is going to maik for her. Maybe you will be thare a grate deel of the time. Won't that be nice & cumfurtable? Ma sed to her.

It will be pretty tuff corn beef for her husband, sed Pa, the yung lady's husband, I meen. Wife, sed Pa, I suppoas you reemember the time yure loving mother caim here all the way from Wisconsin & started rite in trying to be the managing editor of our littel hoam. Of course, you reemember it, sed Pa. Will you evver fergit, sed Pa, the look of pained surprise that caim into her eyes wen I explained to her, as gently as I cud, that she dident have anything in the world to say about the management of my domestick affairs? If my memory dosent fail me, Pa sed, & I do not think it does, she stayed only three days insted of all summer.

You acted like a perfect cave man all the time she was here, I remember that, sed Ma. No wonder my poor mother seldum menshuns you in her letters.

But as I was saying about my daughter and Missus Raymond, I cuddent help thinking as I sat there & saw her, a dainty bud with youth's fresh bloom on her cheeks, that no man in this wurld was good enuff to be the husband of so divine a creechur. Of course the man she is going to marry is a splendid yung man & is the vice president of a big bank. But eeven if he were the president of the united Staits, sed Missus Raymond, he wuddent be good enuff for my daughter. No man is good enuff for a woman.

Looks for Gray Hairs.

They are good enuff for a woman around pay day, sed Pa. I have always noticed that when it gits neer the first of the month my wife beegins looking in my head for gray hairs & calling me her deer old boy. & the morning of pay day, Pa sed, she always follows me to the door and kisses me aggenn and aggenn, with the luv lite shining in her eyes, & says Be sure & come rite hoam after you git yure pay to-day, won't you, darling.

I nevver do any such thing, sed Ma, & I agree with Missus Raymond that her daughter or ady sweet, good gurl is too good for a man.

Oh, my daughter, sed Missus Raymond, can't let her go, I jest can't. & my daughter, too, sed Missus Belcher, it seems as if sum monster of the sea was coming neerer & neerer to drag my daughter from her mother's arms. Then they both beegan to cry & Pa sneeked out of the room & went in the library ware the side board is.

The Bashful Boy

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"WHAT I would like to ask," writes Rebecca, "is why it is better for a girl to associate with a bashful boy. On several occasions I have noticed that you state that a girl should honor such a young man, but you have never stated why."

The qualities in a bashful boy which make him a welcome suitor are more of a negative nature than of a positive. It is not that which he does, so much as that which he does not do. His sins are of omission and they are small compared with the sins of commission of his bolder brother.

The bashful boy doesn't flirt. With a tongue that halts and stammers, and a tell-tale color that is quicker than the blush of a young girl to proclaim his dishonesty did he attempt to be dishonest, he is not an adept at hypocrisy or concealment.

He is not a dandy. Neither is he a lady's man, and, my dear Rebecca, the presidents of banks and railroads, the powers in commercial life, the most profound thinkers and the men of letters the world honors, were never ladies' men.

His Hands.

He does not know what to do with his hands when out in society, but his employer will tell you he knows good use for them when at work.

Afraid of girls he is forced to seek companionship in books and boys. The fear of girls gives him a respect for them which is wholesome; the companionship of boys gives him the outdoor exercise every young man needs.

He needs this tiring of every muscle, not alone for the results that are physical, but for moral returns. You are not too young, my dear, to know that the wolf that has been racing furiously up and down hill all day feels at night only the cry of tired limbs and aching muscles begging for rest. He is not the wolf that goes seeking an opening to break into the sheepfold!

If a bashful boy loves a girl it is with a sense of humility and his own unworthiness. He knows that he is the one who will be honored if his love is returned; his bolder brother has a faint suspicion, which the homage of silly girls confirms, that it is the girl who should be on her knees.

A Safe Way.

During his calf days he does all his signing for love's sake at a distance, which mothers will agree is the only safe and sane way for young girls to be loved.

He is always a good listener—no woman was ever bored to death by the talking of a bashful man.

Saving little, he says little for which he or others have cause for regret. He is a safe depository for secrets, a good man in whom to have confidence. If he is not a girl's lover the next best thing that could happen her would be to have him for a brother or a friend.

His compliments are not practiced, and are therefore sincere. When it takes effort and stupendous courage to hand a modest little flower to a girl, it follows that he will never throw bouquets at the head of every woman he meets.

Best of all, Rebecca, the bashful boy is a home boy. He is unafraid when with his mother and finds in her companionship the delight less bashful boys seek from home.

He is "a good boy" in the sweet old-fashioned sense, a boy who has escaped contamination a few years later than it comes to boys more bold.

Get The Syrup Habit—It's Good For You

Velva Syrup is more than a mere sweet. It's a fine, wholesome, healthful food. It's just what growing children need — and it's good for grown-ups, too. Earnest, careful scientists have long ago exploded the mossy idea that sweets are harmful — and they tell you that sweets are necessary. You'll find

VELVA NUT ICE CREAM

3-4 cupful Red Velva Syrup, 2 cupfuls scalded milk, 1 tablespoonful flour, 1-4 cupful sugar, 1 egg, pinch of salt, 2 quarts cream, 1 cupful chopped English walnut meats, 1 teaspoonful almond extract, 1 teaspoonful rose extract.

Beat up the egg with the flour and sugar, and gradually add the milk. Cook for 20 minutes in a double boiler, stirring constantly. Cool and add the syrup, salt, nuts, cream and the extracts, and freeze. Serve in dainty dishes with a preserved cherry on top of each.

COACH HEISMAN SPENDS 2 DAYS WITH THE PREPS

By J. W. Heisman.

UNTIL last week it had been long since I had seen a game of either football or baseball between any of the preparatory school teams of the State. But on the 19th and 20th last I slipped down to Milledgeville to see the Georgia Military College team of that place lock horns with the team from the Riverside Military Academy of Gainesville.

Well, I witnessed both games, and it won't take me long to say that they were good games, splendid, both of them. There was fast, clean fielding, excellent base running, fair batting, fine pitching and considerable inside baseball. Riverside won both games, each by a score of 2 to 0. The pitching of all four hurlers, Williamson and Haines for Riverside, and Camp and Gheesling for G. M. C., was impressively good, and it averaged in effectiveness but little below the average of what the college teams showed this year, if any. Riverside seemed stronger with the stick than G. M. C., which was, perhaps, the principal reason why they got away with the big end of the scoring.

* * *

NOW, I had heard more than one rumor to the effect that the Riverside team was made up of a bunch of "ringers." Among others the Wake Forest players had given me solemn assurance of this. Recalling that Wake Forest has since been blacklisted for having three professional players on its roster this now strikes me as a good place to giggle. (It will also be remembered that the Riverside team held Wake Forest to a 6-6 tie game).

Quite prepared was I, therefore, to see on the Riverside line-up a bunch of matured men, some of them giving every evidence of life among professionals, most of them omitting sulphurous language every time they opened their mouths, chewing tobacco like demons and putting up a brand of baseball few college teams in the country could hope to duplicate. Did I see these things? No, none of them, and nothing like it. In the first place they were clearly and indubitably all young boys with one possible exception, and he not over 21 years of age. They all dressed neatly and in excellent taste. They talked like your average well behaved and schooled Prep. They played surprisingly good ball for such youngsters, but nothing like what professionals, even in Class D, play. I tell you they were BOYS, nothing else.

What is a "ringer?" Any one of a lot of things makes a "ringer." True, they may still have been ringers in the sense that they were not bona fide students, were at Riverside only to play ball and never to study; but don't believe that for one minute; they didn't look the part. As for ever having played in professional leagues, or ANY of them ever having received any but the most trifling recompense for any past playing, that was even more unbelievable.

No, they have a very well balanced nine, they field, hit, and run bases fairly well, are strong in the box and are weak in no department of play; they are full of "pep," are in good physical condition, have nice team work, stick to their work and never lose confidence in their ability to win the game—and that's how they do win, and that's all. And that's how they won 19 straight games this spring without losing one.

This is really a very extraordinary achievement, and Coach Frank Anderson deserves an extraordinary amount of credit for the wonderful showing of the team. It was he who taught them their team play and inside ball; he who kept up their fighting spirit after he had generated it, and he who has made them very largely what they are. It is undeniably a jim-dandy young team. But I don't believe they are ringers.

* * *

THE G. M. C. boys were also a nice, clean-looking lot, and they played good steady ball. In two innings only out of 19 played did Riverside succeed in scoring on these hard working lads. Except in hitting they showed no inferiority worth mentioning to the Riverside team.

I desire to express my very warm admiration for the clean and sportsmanly conduct of the G. M. C. cadets and their friends and rooters. The very best of order prevailed at all times on the field, and their treatment of the Riverside team was, so far as I could observe, not only just and courteous but such as befits the honored guest. The work of Umpire Lamar Ham, an old Georgia player, was excellent, and no word of fault finding or bitterness was ever addressed within my hearing either to him or to the visitors by the G. M. C. players or any of their supporters: it was fine conduct and good sport all around.

G. M. C. has a very pretty campus, and the main building of the school is the old Georgia State Capitol: it is a handsome and very substantial edifice still.

* * *

I STOPPED off at Barnesville, hoping to see the rained-out game of the day before played off between Florida and Gordon Institute. In this I met with disappointment, as the Florida team had gone home; but I enjoyed a visit of a few hours there nevertheless.

Gordon also has a very fine athletic field, and several very handsome new buildings. Lieutenant Riley, the former star West Point guard, had all the boys looking spick-and-span, and their military drill was much more than worth watching. The athletes I was so fortunate as to meet were a remarkably fine looking set of fellows who seemed to measure right up to college standards in both stature and outlines. And, by the way, I have just read that their splendid catcher, Everett Bankston, whom I was hoping might come to Tech, has received an offer from the Pittsburg League team. This will give an idea of the class of the athletes they are developing in our Georgia preparatory schools.

GLENN WILL BE STAR AT BOARD TRACK RACING

—JACK PRINCE.

"HARRY GLENN, this local boy, will make one of the greatest board track riders in the world; you watch what I say." So says Jack Prince, inventor of the board track, who knows more about "racing on edge" than any other living man.

* * *

Glenn made his real exhibition debut Wednesday. He had been flirting with the track for several days. His first time out he wabbled about on it like a drunken sailor—and wabbling at 65 or 70 miles an hour is a dangerous pastime. Glenn's racing machine, ordered some weeks ago, has not come yet, so he has not been doing much at the track.

Wednesday afternoon five or six of the world's best board-track racers were tuning up their machines and getting ready for the big tournament next week. And a crowd of 6,000 or 8,000 board-track cranks were watching the free exhibition that goes on every afternoon. For nothing at all, the crowd was seeing fancy riding by the best in the business. But even then they were not satisfied.

"Harry Glenn; we want Harry Glenn," they shouted.

Glenn Forced to Ride.

There was not a chance to announce to all of them that Harry's racing machine had not come. And finally the cries became so insistent that "Smiling Harry" mounted a road machine and, grinning happily, set out for his first real attempt at speed on the treacherous banks.

No veteran rider could have handled the track with greater ease. He circled it at the pole and he took it high, he rode fast and slow; but never was there a slip or any show of inexperience. And round after round was greeted with thunderous cheering. That Glenn is a tremendous local favorite was never better demonstrated.

Glenn deserves it, too. Never has more intrepid dirt-track rider shown himself to the public than Harry, and he has won the crowds by his courage and cleverness.

Lad's Success Is Sure.

When Glenn was riding, the experts gathered at the paddock and discussed his work. And it was not long before all agreed that his future in the racing game was assured. He has many times shown his courage and cool-headedness in races, and now that he has shown that he can "ride the boards" as well, there is nothing to it but a big showing for "Smiling Harry" Glenn around the Southern circuit of tracks.

If Glenn's racing machine arrives in time, he will probably [illegible] his luck in the first race meet [illegible] or one week from to-morrow.

A PLEA.

(Inspired by C. Webb Murphy.)

"Knock, if you will—I have no dread—
But keep my name in type!" he said.

The only fault to be found with the Manly Art of Self-Defense is that it sometimes back fires.

One learns from the public prints that Mr. Zbyszko still insists that he can throw Mr. Gotch. Some of these foreigners never get any sense.

There is a move afoot to eliminate hammer throwing from track meets. Messrs. Evers, Tinker and Chance are in favor of a move to eliminate same from the pastime known as baseball.

Considering the athletic activities of those Cleveland persons, it behooves Mr. Birmingham to fracture a few more of his athletes' limbs.

REFERRING TO A SPANISH ATHLETE.

(By the Miller of Osgood.)

(Being a Contribution.)

"Ladies and gents!" the Barker cried,
"We'll win the flag with games to spare!"
Oh, please sir, tie your bull brute outside!
You can't win games with heated air.

If the Calgary affair will only put a crimp in the white hope market, it will not have been fought in vain.

One Johnny Evers, pugilist, makes his appearance in our midst. One W. Klem, umpire, will testify that anybody with that name is a fighter.

Tommy Leach is the only Cub outfielder who is hitting in the .300 class. All of which goes to show the value of young blood.

Reports come from Virginia, Minn., that Rube Waddell has disappeared again. Virginia, Minn., fears that he may come back.

George Stovall is back in the game. It is rumored that he now chews cotton instead of tobacco.

SHAME.

Full many a man is filled with bitter shame
And hears men make a bywcrd of his name,
But never one who hung his head so low
As one I witnessed in a baseball game.

With bases filled, they called him to the fore;
He whiffed when but a hit would tie the score,
And as he journeyed benchward from the plate
It must have seemed a hundred miles or more.

WOLGAST BACKS HOPPE.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 29.—Ad Wolgast, who is reported to have lost heavily in his last few bets on prize fights, to-day is said to have placed a large bet on Willie Hoppe to beat Frankie Burns when they meet next month.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 29.—One of the most important series of the season begins at the Polo Grounds to-day, when the Giants and Phillies, now leading the league, meet to play four games in three days. This will be a real test of the Quakers, who have been setting a terrific pace ever since the race began.

The games are going to be largely a question of pitchers, and the Giants' twiriers will be thrown against the finest staff in the league in this series. It is the pitching the Quakers have been getting that has kept them up in the race so far, and it will be pitching that must stop them. When McGraw traded three Giants to Cincinnati last week, he was looking ahead to these games, which he realized would be critical and might have a direct bearing on the final result of the season. He needed good, reliable twirlers to work in these battles. Now he has Tesreau, Fromme and Marquard. Doubtless, they will meet Seaton, Alexander, Chalmers and Rixey.

* * *

IT is not only the actual result of this series which will count, but the effect the outcome will have on the hearts and playing of the plunging Phillies. If the Giants can stop them with a jerk we will start them off on a long road tour without the idea that they are invincible, and we will send them away with Pittsburg as their next stop, except for one game at home with Brooklyn. They will encounter some more excellent pitching and a club that has been vastly strengthened within the last two weeks when they meet the Pirates. But should the Quakers take these games in New York or the majority of them, they would still retain the notion that they cannot be beaten, and doubtless would go stampeding through the West at a great rate, increasing their lead to dangerous proportions. It would also have the opposite effect on the New York club, which is about to leave for its swing through the West. Therefore, it is easy to see that the series is an important one.

The Quakers are going to put forth the best that they have against us for two reasons. One is that there never has been any too much good feeling between the two teams, and the other is that every club in the league is always eager to beat the Big Town boys, and especially the champions of the league.

That is the reason the Giants constantly meet the best pitching, whereas some second-rate club gets second-rate twirlers.

* * *

THE Philadelphia club is still playing at top speed, while the Giants are not themselves yet. Our hitting is not timely, and the fielding is uncertain. Demaree, who showed so well at first, has not entirely recovered from a strained back, another reason why the coming of Fromme was timely. The Phillies are likely to make a good bid for the pennant, provided Dooin can keep the team in condition and the regulars can steer clear of injuries. The lack of capable substitutes is what will probably drag the Quakers back. The pitching staff, however, should keep the club a factor in the race right up to September.

The Philadelphia sprint is not the same kind that Cincinnati sprang last year, to my mind. There is more backbone to the Philadelphia club, and the team is a good one as far as the first string men go. Give it a lead of a few games and it's going to be a long chase catching Dooin's crowd. They can then afford to slump and recover. What the team does on this long road trip will give some indication of how it is going to finish, because most of the games it has played to date have been at home. This will be a real test. They play twenty-three of their next twenty-four games on the road.

* * *

ASIDE from actually strengthening the pitching staff, McGraw's trade with Cincinnati displayed considerable wisdom on the part of the New York manager in another direction. The bad weather of the first part of the season has piled up a long string of double-headers for later along, and double-headers eat into pitchers faster than a high-priced automobile does into gasoline. The Giants now have eleven double-headers slated, and, in order to work a reliable pitcher every day, McGraw will need four or five twirlers in service all the time. By the addition of Fromme, he has enough talent to start a reliable performer in each game, in spite of the double-headers, when Demaree gets back in shape.

* * *

BROOKLYN has apparently begun to slip back through the league. I look to see the club finish no better than fourth, because two teams are bound to come and pass the Superbas. These are the Giants and Pittsburg, and I don't figure the Dodgers any way to beat out Philadelphia. The pitching staff appears to be slipping some now, and the infielders are not playing the game they were when the psychology of the winning streak was on the whole team and carrying it up through the league.

* * *

THE Cubs have faded, but should get a revival of form on their return to the home diamond. The improvement in pitching would mean an improvement of the team, because it is weak twirling that has been continuously holding the club back. The rest of the team is strong enough, with a wonderful catching staff.

* * *

WHEN the Eastern clubs invade the West next week, the first real test of the Easterners will occur in comparing them with the West. They waded through the Western teams in the late intersectional series, and the question now is whether or not they can repeat the performance away from home. The St. Louis club made the best showing of all the Westerners in the East, and, with Brooklyn and Philadelphia, has been the surprise of the league. Two good pitchers have been holding the club up in the race, and a team that was regarded before the season as a competitor with Brooklyn and Boston for last place has shot to the front and is crowding a lot of us for the first division.

FLYNN TO CLAIM HEAVY TITLE IF SAVAGE LOSES

JIM FLYNN, who meets Jim Savage at the Auditorium-Armory on June 13, is going to claim the white heavyweight championship of the world if he wins here. The following letter from Jack Curley, manager of the "Fighting Fireman," received to-day, explains itself:

"New York, May 27, 1913.

"Sporting Editor The Georgian:

"Atlanta, Ga.

"Dear Sir:—

"Dear Sir—Jim Flynn will claim the heavyweight championship of the world if he defeats Jim Savage in your city on June 13. He has beaten every white man in the world, barring Luther McCarty, and has issued challenges to Gunboat Smith and Jess Willard. Neither, however, wants to exchange wallops with my man. I will challenge Arthur Pelky for Flynn just as soon as the latter is ready to fight again.

"Very truly yours,

"JACK CURLEY,

"Manager of Jim Flynn."

M'LEOD THROWS AJAX.

LOS ANGELES, May 29.—Dan McLeod, a veteran wrestler, defeated Tony Ajax, of this city, winning in straight falls.

JACK JOHNSON ARRESTED FOR OPENING MUFFLER

CHICAGO, May 29.—Jack Johnson is in trouble again. The big negro fighter was arrested at Clark and Randolph Streets to-day for making a noise. His automobile was the cause. Johnson has already been arrested for the violation of nearly every sections of the automobile ordinance, but he found a new one to-day.

From Jackson Boulevard north to Randolph Street he left his automobile muffler wide open, and with a grin on his face he sped up the street. Policeman Kelly, of the bicycle squad, espied, or rather heard, him. The arrest followed and the noise ceased.

Johnson said he was forced to leave his muffler open because his horn was out of order. He will appear in the speeders' court to-morrow.

Yell Defiance at Blood Disorders

At Last You Can Get Rid of Blood Troubles—S. S. S.

The word medicine is one of the most abused in our language. There are certain medicinal properties just as necessary to health as the food we eat. Take, for example, the well-known tonic medicine, S. S. S. This famous blood purifier contains medicinal components just as vital and essential to healthy blood as the elements of wheat, roast beef, the fats and the sugars that make up our daily ration.

As a matter of fact, there is one ingredient in S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating each cellular part of the body to the healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment. That is why it regenerates the blood supply; why it has such a tremendous influence in overcoming eczema, rash, pimples, and all skin afflictions.

And in regenerating the tissues S. S. S. has a rapid and positive antidotal effect upon all those irritating influences that cause rheumatism, sore throat, weak eyes, falling hair, loss of weight, thin, pale cheeks, and that weariness of muscle and nerve that is generally experienced as spring fever. Get a bottle of S. S. S. at any drug store, and in a few days you will not only feel bright and energetic, but you will be the picture of new life. S. S. S. is prepared only in the laboratory of The Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., who maintain a very efficient Medical Department, where all who have any blood disorder of a stubborn nature may write freely for advice and a special book of instruction. S. S. S. is sold everywhere by drug stores, department and general stores.

USE OF BEAN BALL SHOULD BE FORBIDDEN

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE agitation in the major leagues against the "bean ball" has stirred a responsive chord in the Southern League. "Go to it," say players and fans alike.

It is a ball thrown by the pitcher at the head of the batter. Its purpose may be to intimidate a batter lacking in courage or to force away from the plate a man who is crowding in too close to suit the pitcher.

The play is barbarous and should be eliminated from the game.

* * *

AS contemptible an exhibition of bean ball throwing as Atlanta fans ever saw occurred yesterday. In the sixth inning, when Wally Smith was at bat, he ran in to the limit of the batter's box in an effort to smear one of Finis Wilson's curves. Wilson put up a complaint to the umpire, but there were no grounds for it, and Umpire Pfenninger disregarded it.

The next ball Wilson threw straight at Smith's head. Wally ducked and escaped, but by no wide margin. Again Wilson threw at Smith's head, and this time with such unerring aim and such tremendous speed that when Smith ducked the ball struck the bat that he threw in front of his head as he went down. But for this lucky chance Smith would have received a terrible wallop on the head, would unquestionably have been laid out and perhaps killed.

* * *

WILSON'S act was doubtless that of a fresh kid. He threw at Smith's head because he lacked any better sense.

But if Wilson had killed Smith—and the thing could easily have happened—it would have been cold-blooded, brutal, willful murder.

* * *

THE bean ball is no more a part of legitimate baseball than would be the use of an axe on the head of a base runner or the knifing of a fielder.

It would be difficult absolutely to stop it. However, in most cases a trained observer—such as an umpire is supposed to be and usually isn't—could tell a "bean ball" from a wild heave that went at the same mark. A pitcher who uses it ought to be fired out of baseball for one year and fined not less than a thousand dollars. That might help to break up the practice.

* * *

WEDNESDAY'S ball game was pie for the Crackers—4 to 1—with New Orleans the victim. Paul Musser came around and pitched a really first-class game. The "fatal gift" was with him to the extent of six passes, but he was never in danger, chiefly because he allowed only five hits. He kept the hits pretty well separated from the passes and the only time it seemed possible that anything unfortunate might happen Hendryx walloped into a double play and relieved the pressure.

* * *

CATCHER CHAPMAN made his Atlanta debut and pleased mightily. He is a husky brute, with lots of gab and considerable cleverness. The entire team showed a lot of added "pep," but how much was due to Chapman's example and how much to something Manager Smith might or might not have said in a club house talk, nobody knows.

If Chapman proves as good as he looks, the Crackers are a vastly different team. Graham has been an uncertainty all the season. And Dunn was signed only as a second catcher and could not be expected to carry the whole thing along by himself.

With Chapman to do the heavy backstopping and to lead in the chatter; with Dent promising to prove a winning pitcher; with Musser back in shape again, and with the rest of the club playing to form, the locals ought to begin forging toward the front again.

* * *

IT is marvelous how quickly a few bad games will show in the attendance. Wednesday's crowd was decidedly small. The rest of the week, thanks to the big win Wednesday, the attendance should be good.

Friday a double-header will be played because of the fact that it is Federal Decoration Day. Normally it would be ladies' day, too, but ladies' tickets will not be honored that day because of the holiday. Through the rest of the season ladies' tickets will be accepted every Tuesday and Friday.

AMERICANS MAY BE FACTORS IN ENGLISH DERBY

By E. G. B. Fitzhamon.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 29.—American owners, horses and jockeys seem likely to cut a pretty wide swath in the great English Derby this year. Harry Payne Whitney's colt, Meeting House, which ran third in the Guineas, has a nice chance of winning. So has Herman B. Duryea's Boyne, which won the Paris Biennial, at ten furlongs, quite comfortably from a smart field. August Belmont also has a colt in France which is going to take some stopping on Epsom Downs, barring accident.

Whitney's Meeting House is a fine big colt by Voter out of Noonday, and is one of the thirty yearlings he purchased from the late James Keene eighteen months ago.

Meeting House began slowly in the mile race at Newmarket for the Guineas and for a few strides he was the last of a field of 15, but he moved up to ninth in the first quarter, was seventh after going five furlongs, and ran over four well fancied candidates in the final quarter, being beaten only two lengths in the final quarter by Louvois and Craganour, which was almost dead-heated. Meeting House ran practically unbacked, with 15 to 1 against him to show, and Frank O'Neill riding.

Was Nipped at The Last.

Craganour divided favoritism with Fairy King and they showed the way for six furlongs, when Craganour drew clear, with Johnny Reiff on the 20 to 1 shot, Louvois, in hot pursuit. Craganour should have won, but his English jockey was overconfident and tossed it off and the American nipped him on the post with Louvois.

O'Neill would have ridden the winner if Jack Joyner had kept Meeting House in the barn. O'Neill was engaged last year to ride for Whitney in this race if he was wanted. Subsequently Mr. Raphael, the owner of Louvois, as well as of last year's Derby winner, engaged both O'Neill and Reiff to come over from Paris to ride Louvois in the Guineas, O'Neill's engagement being conditional that Joyner would not want him for Whitney.

When Joyner decided to take a chance with Meeting House, Raphael had Johnny Reiff to fall back upon, and it was Johnny who won the Derby for him on Tagalie last year.

But Mr. Raphael agrees with me that Frank O'Neill is the greatest jockey in Europe, and probably in the world just now, and he has contracted with Frank to ride Louvois in the Derby and other important races. So if American owners and horses fail in the Derby an American rider is quite likely to win it.

Louvois Shows.

Louvois is the colt of which I wrote last December: that if I had to make my selection for the Derby from last season's two-year-olds before they ran this season as three-year-olds, he would be my choice. Louvois not only showed speed last year but he impressed me as the most likely to carry it over the Derby route this year.

Judging from the manner in which he came from behind and wore down Craganour at one mile I expect Louvois to beat Ismay's colt easily at a mile and a half. To some extent this argument also applies to Whitney's Meeting House being likely to beat Craganour for the Derby. However, the talent makes Craganour favorite at present at 9 to 2.

Shogun is going to become a hot tip for Derby, but I can not stand for a colt with two splints coming down the hill at Epsom unless the going should be very soft, which it seldom is there.

Mr. Duryea's Boyne is by Irish Lad out of Running Water by Sir Dixon. He is being pointed for the Derby, so I hear from France.

Belmont's good Derby colt in France is Vulcain, by Rock Sand out of Lady of the Vale.

M'COY AND FERNS DRAW IN TWENTY FAST ROUNDS

Players' Fraternity Branching Out

Magnates Dodged Punishment

By W. J. McBeth.

NEW YORK, May 29.—A new power arises in organized baseball, clamoring for certain long neglected rights. This is the Baseball Players' Fraternity, organized less than a year ago under the wise direction of David Fultz, a prominent lawyer of New York and in his day one of the greatest outfielders in the big league. The Fraternity already embraces three hundred members; practically all of the players of the two major leagues.

It is but a matter of a very short time until the Baseball Players' Fraternity branches out to include the minor leagues as well. And as power lies in force of numbers it becomes evident that this Fraternity will very shortly be in a position to force the recognition it rightfully deserves. There is absolutely no idea of unionism in the fraternity. Rather the association stands for a strict interpretation of the laws governing organized baseball. But the organization proposes to see that laws and regulations shall be fairly applied; that the magnates shall not be favored one whit over the rank and file of players who have built up and made the great game the popular sport which it is.

ULTIMATELY, no doubt, players will have some sort of representation on the National Commission, the supreme court of the laws governing the game. This is no more than fair. At present the baseball commission is made up of a National League club owner and the two presidents of the major leagues. In their favor it must be said that on the whole the work of this National Commission has been above reproach. There have been instances of discrimination when discrimination was to the best interests of magnates in general.

* * *

Baseball is presumably the only honest professional sport, if such a broad name may be applied to such a gigantic amusement enterprise. Its honesty reflects the character of the professional player rather than of the professional promoter. It is a matter of record that in its thousands and thousands of cases involving thousands and thousands of dollars no player has ever lied who testified before the National Commission. Who can say as much for some of our highly respected club owners whose first creed seems to be subterfuge if not deceit?

* * *

WHILE the National Commission prides itself upon an iron hand in administering justice to ball players, high and low, it religiously evades shouldering equal responsibility in a case of the magnate. For the benefit of a trusting public it may bluster and bluff a whole lot; but that is as far as it goes. There are too many illustrious examples of the past few years to bear contradiction. It is true that the National League expelled from its ranks last winter Horace Fogel, president of the Philidelphia Nationals, because he had given utterances uncomplimentary to the honesty of the sport and its administration. But the National League fawned upon Charles W. Murphy, president of the Chicago Cubs, who was directly responsible for Horace Fogel's outburst. They had the "goods" on Murphy. Were they afraid of the backing of this little trouble-maker—the millions of Charles P. Taft?

* * *

IF Ban Johnson's word amounts to anything it was not the first time that Murphy stood upon the brink, ready for the kindly shove that in the best interests of the game should have been applied. Johnson declares that Murphy should have been driven out of baseball for speculating in world's series tickets in 1908 when his Cubs drubbed the Tigers. Ban was also very vehement in his outcry against certain New York officials during the series between the Giants and Athletics in 1911. He was also determined, he said, to expose the shady manipulations of the celebrated attempt to bribe the umpires at the post-season play-off of the well known Cub-Giant pennant tie at the Polo Grounds in 1908.

* * *

JOHNSON may have been sincere in both instances. If so then the powers of organized baseball as embodied in the magnates stayed his hand. The magnates were afraid of public exposure.

We have had in the past too many examples of lop-sided justice. Where inconsequential players have drawn maximum penalty for infraction of the laws stars have been exonerated. Hal Chase furnishes a very striking example. He quit New York and Griffith cold in 1908 when he was the only player left of the saddest tail end aggregation one could imagine. He committed the unpardonable sin of organized baseball. He not only "jumped" his contract with organized baseball but went to an "outlaw" league. This penalty at the time should have drawn a lifelong "black-list." But organized baseball could not afford to lose such a drawing card as Chase. The very next spring he was pardoned after a "mock" trail. They sought Chase. If he had been an average player all the influence in the world could never have tempted the National Commission to let down the bars.

* * *

TY COBB is another bright example. His indefinite suspension by Johnson last year, because Ty assaulted a spectator at the Hilltop, was the direct cause of a strike by the Detroit Tigers. This action was a very grave offense, but wholesale punishment would have been equivalent to annulment of Detroit's valuable chattels in players. Because of the strength of numbers Ban Johnson was compelled to leniency. Afterward he singled out Delehanty, a passing veteran, on whom to vent his disciplinary spleen. In compliance with the Detroit ultimatum Cobb was immediately reinstated. This spring Ty Cobb held out for a record salary. Organized baseball was obdurate until the newspaper publicity threatened a Congressional probe into organized baseball to determine whether or not it was a trust. Then organized baseball fairly broke its neck welcoming the Tiger hold-out. Though Ty had violated baseball law by playing with a baseball team in the South when he should have been with Jennings, he was reinstated by Ban Johnson before his application could be brought before the National Commission. Had it been some obscure "busher" instead of Cobb, he would now undoubtedly be on the suspended list. The National Commission might never discover his application for reinstatement.

* * *

THE Baseball Players' Fraternity is a most admirable organization and is very likely to result in great good to the game. Playing managers are excluded from membership. Its chief aim is mutual protection. It intends to work along harmonious lines with organized baseball government. It held aloof from the controversy between Cobb and the Detroit club, maintaining that its chief purpose was the observation and not negotiation of contracts. It has no objection to the so-called "yoke" of the reserve clause but it hopes to establish some sense of equitable justice in observation of contract and some limit at least to the reserve clause. Now the magnate has the power to hold a player for life or to release him on ten days' notice. The player has no redress and must accept the terms offered. The fraternity hopes to be able in time to adjust salaries on a far more sensible basis. Last year a player on the Pittsburg team was signed up for $800. He had no say in the matter. Wagner in the same club was drawing $10,000. Wagner may have been twelve times the more valuable asset. Yet a player who is worth no more than $800 should not be in the big league. He can get more in the "sticks" with a chance of development at the same time.

* * *

ORGANIZED baseball may need the kindly services of the fraternity before many months roll around. Perhaps the magnates have been killing the goose of the golden eggs. Public sympathy seems on the wane. Jack O'Connor in the civil courts in St. Louis quite recently was awarded a verdict for $5,000 against the St. Louis Americans. This was the amount of a year's salary as manager of the Browns on a contract that Ban Johnson canceled because he alleged that O'Connor had purposely countenanced a scheme to boost Napoleon Lajoie's batting record above that of Ty Cobb. Lajoie, it is said, was allowed to make a hit every time he came to bat in the final game of the season so that he might earn an automobile which went for the batting championship.

* * *

NOW, that little scandal was hushed up at the time by the wily Johnson. He straightened out the matter by getting an extra benzine buggy for Larry and awarding Cobb the honors. The skeleton in the closet, however, was rattled again in the O'Connor suit when Ban Johnson produced witnesses who testified that they had overheard O'Connor instructing his men to give Lajoie an unfavorable advantage over Cobb. Such testimony was not of a nature to reassure public confidence in professional baseball. And it did absolutely no good, as the jury disregarded it anyhow.

PELKY AND BURNS MAY BE TRIED ON JUNE 23

CALGARY, ALBERTA, May 29.—If Tommy Burns and Arthur Pelky ever come to trial on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of Luther McCarty it will be on June 23 at the Supreme Criminal Court session.

Burns will not give out his plans, but it is also said that he is being urged to abandon all connection with ring affairs.

Fargo dispatches giving McCarty's estate as worth $65,000 are grossly exaggerated. His property is worth about $12,000.

Floto Yearns for Days of Old

Scores All Typewriter Fighters

By Otto C. Floto.

IN slanting a glance over the lightweight situation as it presents itself to us at the present time we are forced to the conclusion that there is more talk than doin' and more challenges flying back and forth than there are acceptances of the same. Take the whole list of the boys that claim this division as their own, each and every one of them have a chip on their shoulder and are aiming their 14-inch guns at Willie Ritchie, the titleholder. Their ammunition, however, is mostly "buncombe," and the almighty dollar is receiving far more attention in these deliberations than is the glory of becoming champion.

All of which forces us to lean back and sigh, "Oh, you fortunate champions of to-day. How lucky you are not to have been compelled to battle in the time when real fighters graced the roped inclosure." Days when the end was never in sight; days when the finish came only with the referee's count and the acknowledgment from the "seconds" of one or the other principal that his charge could go no further.

* * *

SOME may shrug their shoulders and say, "Yes, but those were the brutal days of the London prize ring." Maybe they were, but they also represented the period when gladiators of real merit held sway, days when it required a stout heart, stamina, a knowledge of wrestling as well as fighting, and an adept so far as the science and punching ability of the game went.

Seldom if ever did a champion return to the ring once the stigma of defeat was placed against his name. He retired in those days unless for some exceptional reason he was allowed to come back. His future connection with the game was as second, bottle-holder or representative of some champion. Tom Sayers, after his defeat by Langham, came back and, in support of the move, we need but add that he was never defeated again. He was a middleweight, while Langham was a heavy one when they fought.

* * *

TAKE the average run of the Queensberry babies we have in our midst at the present time and when they stagger up against defeat or adverse verdicts they hurry to the nearest typewriter and frame fifty-seven different varieties of alibis in a made endeavor to explain away their rout.

Mind, we don't wish you to misunderstand us in that the Queensberry code failed to produce great champions. On the contrary, it did. Jimmy Barry, Jack McAuliffe, Jack Dempsey, Jim Corbett, Fitzsimmons and others won titles under their clauses. But remember, too, that they all fought "TO A FINISH" in order to succeed to the emblem. The present day limited affairs were foreign to them.

* * *

MANY will wonder why John L. Sullivan's name is among those missing from the above list. Simple enough, and equally surprising to as many to learn that Sullivan won his title according to the L. P. R. rules. The only time he met defeat was by the Queensberry route. So that technically speaking Sullivan was never defeated for the title. He at any rate never lost it in the same manner in which he won it. The last London prize ring fight in this country was between Sullivan and Kilrain, at Richburg, Miss. This will perhaps be news to many as well.

With the abolition of the L. P. R. rules came a flock of "box fighters," to whom the limited round journey with eight-ounce gloves and Queensberry methods appealed as the short route to easy money. Over 70 per cent of this same band would have found employment at some other way of making a living had the old-time fashion of battles on the turf "to a finish" still been in vogue.

RINGSIDE NOTES

Jack Dillon has finished hard training for his 10-round set-to with Frank Klaus Thursday night at Indianapolis. Dillon is down to the required weight and says he will be strong at 160 pounds, the figure both men have agreed to make.

* * *

Eddie Campi and Charles Ledoux will clash in the next bantamweight fight to be staged on the Coast. Tom McCarey signed the boys yesterday. They will meet on June 20 in a scheduled 20-round go.

* * *

Jack Britton will make his next fight against Jimmy Duffy, the tough Buffalo boy, on Thursday night. They will meet in Duffy's home town and Britton will have his hands full carrying away the verdict. The boys are billed to go ten rounds.

* * *

Matty McCue was handed a neat setback the other night. Matty attempted to land his haymaker on Patsy Brannigan's jaw, but the latter was far too clever for the Racine sensation and had a good shade at the end of the tenth round.

* * *

Tommy Walsh, manager of Joe Mandot, writes from the Coast that the New Orleans boy will do no more boxing this year. Walsh says that Mandot had nothing but bad luck in 1913. He also praises Referee Charley Eyton for stopping the fight when he did.

* * *

Harry Gilmore, who is to be Tom McCarey's rival in the promoting line in Los Angeles, says that Bull Young can defeat either Gunboat Smith or Jess Willard. Gilmore saw the recent scrap between Willard and Smith and is of the opinion that Fitzsimmons, in his prime, could have beaten both heavyweights in the same ring and on the same night.

* * *

Milburn Saylor and Battling Kelley will don the gloves for a scheduled 10-round battle at Indianapolis Friday night. The bout is to be staged one day after the Klaus-Dillon affair.

* * *

Meyer Pries is simply aching for a fight these days. Kid Superior happened to meet Pries near the Piedmont Hotel the other day when Meyer was in anything but a good mood and according to reports the little gentlemen took part in one of those real "rough and tumble affairs." Superior was seen later carrying a well colored optic.

* * *

Spider Britt is on the warpath. The little bantamweight read Meyer Pries' challenge in the Georgian the other day and says he will gladly meet Pries on a "winner-take-all" basis. Britt also states that he will give Meyer a side bet of $50. Let's hear from Pries!

* * *

Another New Orleans fighter has been defeated. Frankie Russell tried hard to put the Pelican City back on the fighting map Monday night, but Lore proved too tough a customer for Frankie. The Eastern boy was given the newspaper verdict by a good margin.

SMITH WINS BLUFFING MATCH WITH C. FRANK

After a grand little bluffing bee, Charley Frank has taken over the services of Pitcher Orlie Weaver for the season.

Smith offered to lend Weaver to Frank.

Frank wanted to get an outright ownership of Weaver's services. So he got Weaver to go to Smith and say that he would not take Weaver on any other basis than outright ownership.

Then Smith bluffed back. "All right," he said; "then I'll send Weaver to Beaumont."

This last threat brought Weaver around on the run and he fixed up the deal at once with Frank. The Pelicans get Weaver for the season and he will then be turned back to the Crackers.

ZBYSZKO COLLAPSES IN MAT BOUT; LURICH WINS

NEW YORK, May 29.—George Lurich was awarded the decision over Stanislaus Zbyszko in the wrestling bout at Madison Square Garden when the latter failed after 16 minutes and 27 seconds of strenuous struggling on the mat.

The Polish champion was said to be suffering from the effects of a recent injury received at Montreal and his weakened condition resulted in his collapse in the ring.

LEACH CROSS DECISIVELY WALLOPS TEDDY MALONEY

NEW YORK, May 29.—Leach Cross is one step nearer his ambition for a chance at Champion Willie Ritchie to-day. He disposed of Teddy Maloney, of Philadelphia, decisively in their bout at the St. Nicholas last night.

VOLUNTEERS GET CHICK SMITH FROM CINCINNATI

NASHVILLE, TENN., May 29.—Manager Tinker, of the Cincinnati Reds, has sent Pitcher Chick Smith to the Nashville club.

The addition of Smith will give the Vols two southpaws. Pitcher Dye, a right-hander bought from Canton, Ohio, has reported and will probably be used in the series with Mobile.

MAKES HAIR STRAIGHT AND SILKY

EXELENTO never fails to do what it claims. It stops falling HAIR, cleans DANDRUFF at once, and just feeds the SCALP and ROOTS of the HAIR and makes HAIR grow so fast that it is a wonder.

Every package is guaranteed.

Plain talk: Don't fool yourself by using some preparation which claims to straighten your HAIR. Kinky HAIR can not be made straight. YOU have to have HAIR before you can straighten it. When you use EXELENTO QUININE POMADE, it will promote the growth of the HAIR very fast, and you will soon have nice, long HAIR, which will be long, straight, soft and silky.

PRICE—25 CENTS, by all druggists, or by mail on receipt of stamps or coin.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

If Little Chicks Are Properly Fed Loss Will Be Less

Wholesome Advice by an Expert Who Has Tried It From Every Angle.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

Judge Marshall: I want to ask you a number of questions, if you will not think I am too greedy for information.

I live on a farm about two miles from town and am trying to raise chickens enough to make a living from.

I do very well with those I succeeded in raising, but I loose about half of my chicks before they are two weeks old.

As soon as the chicks are hatched I give them a good feed of mash, composed of equal parts of corn meal and wheat bran mixed with hot water, allowing it to cool a little before feeding. I feed this once a day and cracked corn three times a day; but I have much trouble with sparrows eating up the feed.

I also have much trouble with the red mites bothering my sitting hens, which I seem unable to control.

Then, again, I have trouble every summer by having great, big, fat hens drop dead without any warning. They will be apparently well one day and the next they will be dead. They are very fat and fine and I see no reason why they should die thus.

I always feed a little good condition powder of some kind three times a week.

If it is not asking too much of you I should appreciate an answer to these troubles. I am yours very truly, MRS. E. E. SPEER.
Tifton, Ga.

Cut Out Wet Mash.

ANSWER—We have texts enough for a number of good sermons but will have to do like the boy said he did in hunting for the cows: Go to the end of the lane and scatter.

First, in regard to the little chicks, I would say cut out the wet mash entirely, or, at least, until they are two months old and then if you want to use some of your feed in that way it will be all right, but not for the newly hatched ones. Feed rolled oats dry, and the cracked corn fine enough so they can eat it well, providing you can not get the ready mixed chick feed at your grocers in Tifton. But there is no question that the rolled oats is good, and so is the corn, but feed them absolutely dry.

Another place where you have erred seriously is in feeding as soon as hatched, if that is what you intended to say.

There is nothing that will so quickly get the digestive organs out of order, or, for that matter, prevent them from ever getting in order, as feeding newly hatched chicks at once. Give them a chance to season out a little, as one old poultryman used to say. When they first hatch they are a jelly, as it were, and it takes a day or two for them to toughen up, ready to digest what is given them. So, the way to do is to wait forty-eight hours before any feed is given. They will not starve, but be all the better for the little fast. They may have a good supply of sharp sand to peck at. Then feed the rolled oats or prepared dry chick feed. This can be continued until they can handle coarser cracked corn and wheat.

Green Feed Necessary.

All the while they must have good green stuff of some kind and a little dried beef scrap after they are three weeks old, and I think you will have no trouble if everything is kept clean and free from mites. The sparrows can be controlled by feeding under wire netting runs.

When you set your hens, move them out of the hen house into some clean shed, or, for that matter, out of doors, using barrels for the nest. But you should not have them in the houses. Take a pint of oil of tar, a pint of gasoline, three quarts of kerosene; mix thoroughly and spray or pour over the roosts and the sides of the house where the roost poles rest. If this is attended to an hour before roosting time, it will usually about finish the job, both on the poles and the hens. If any are left on the hens, dust them thoroughly with some good lice powder. After they have been really cleaned out, it will pay to grease the poles with hot lard and a brush.

As to your loosing your fat hens by sudden deaths, I would say that I think you have been using too much condition powders. In my estimation even a little is too much when hens are in health and laying. You have weakened their digestive organs by overstimulation, coupled with too much fat in hens that are, no doubt, over two years old. When hens get a little old and fat, heavy behind, it is the best policy to send them to the butchers.

Such hens have passed their useful time. They have slowed up on laying and with no drain upon their systems they fill up with fat inside, where it presses on the heart and is the cause of the sudden deaths you speak of. It is no trouble to detect such hens in the yard, and it is a good plan to use them while they are in good health, rather than wait for them to come to the sudden death referred to.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Residences Bring Total of $34,500

Deed Filed in Purchase of $19,750 Lots on Paces Ferry Road. Other Notes.

Papers in the sale of two residences on Ponce DeLeon Avenue and one on Gordon Street in West End have gone to record. Minnie M. Costner has sold to J. E. McRee 403 Gordon Street, 373 feet south of Holderness Street, for $9,000.

John B. Daniel has sold to J. T. Tuggle, 644 Ponce DeLeon Avenue, 50 by 180 feet, for $12,500.

Mrs. Mattie F. Huggins has sold to Mrs. Kate G. Pryor, 346 Ponce DeLeon Avenue, 343 feet east of North Boulevard, for $13,000. The lot is 38 by 321 feet.

Executors' Deed Filed.

An interesting executors' deed has also been filed. This conveys to Robert F. Maddox two tracts of land adjoining his country place, "Woodlawn," for an aggregate of $19,750. The grantors are Mrs. Gertrude J. Dickey and others, executors of the estate of the late James L. Dickey.

Favor Roswell Road Work.

E. T. Luckie, of the Holmes & Luckie Realty Company, reports good progress in the work of signing up property owners who favor widening the Roswell Road 20 feet from Buckhead to Piedmont Road. Among the signers are John W. Grant, F. M. Brownell and George B. Powell, who have an aggregate of about 3,000 feet of frontage; George M. Hope, J. H. and J. M. Karwisch, L. W. Rogers, C. S. Honour, J. L. Riley and A. C. Walters.

Building Owners Organize.

For the purpose of perfecting a permanent organization and for inviting the National Association of Building Owners and Managers to Atlanta in 1914, local office building and apartment house owners and managers met Tuesday. The new body is known as the Association of Building Owners and Managers of Atlanta, and it has decided to send a committee to Cincinnati next month to present its invitation to the national association.

Action of the "big building" men in combining is taken as an indication that the office building and apartment house business in Atlanta will take great strides forward in future. Among the members of the new association are Ivan E. Allen, Fred Houser, Charles E. Wilkinson, A. W. Martin, Fred Shaefer, J. B. Pendleton, J. M. Barclay, J. M. Shearer, W. B. Stovall and J. L. Fincher. One hundred members are expected to join.

Auction Sale Saturday.

John H. James, auctioneer, will sell at public outcry Saturday 40 lots on Ashby Street for J. T. Elliott, the owner. Mr. James has plats at his office.

Inquiries for Colonial Home.

Ralph O. Cochran, the well-known real estate man, reports many inquiries for the colonial home which he will auction off Thursday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at 101 West Tenth Street. This home is a two-story brick affair and the property of W. C. Harper.

More Peachtree Improvements.

Peachtree has been promised another substantial business building. C. J. Sheehan will erect at once a two-story structure on the east side of the thoroughfare between Pine and Merritts Avenue. There are already several automobile shops in this block.

Mr. Sheehan traded for this 21 by 186 foot lot through the Cheatham Brothers' real estate agency, giving to Dr. A. W. VanHoose, of Rome, 228 South Pryor Street and 135 Davis Street, for $11,500, and paying the balance in cash and notes. The Peachtree property brought $26,250, or $1,250 a front foot. Dr. VanHoose recently sold 21 feet at this point to Ben J. Massell, who has put a sign on his lot announcing that he will build for acceptable tenant.

The Stalwart Senate Should Stand by Our American Merchant Marine

The United States Senate fronts an opportunity and a duty in dealing with our merchant marine.

Public attention is rapidly focusing upon American maritime conditions, and it is high time that it did.

The favor with which the readoption of the early American discriminatory maritime policy is regarded by the thoughtful press and by influential Americans who are indifferent to foreign protests and threats is additionally reassuring.

Even more important, the people are realizing that an American deep sea shipping will form an urgently needed and entirely lacking secondary reserve for our navy.

Mr. Underwood's mere insertion of the thin edge of the wedge of discriminatory duties in his tariff bill has served to arouse both national and international interest.

Public indorsement of the policy is so strong that the stalwart Senate should promptly DRIVE IN THIS WEDGE. It will separate the United States from its trade agreements and conventions with other nations whose people know that the American navy will remain weak so long as it lacks the resource of a strong American shipping with officers and men.

The House tariff bill only provides a discount of 5 per cent of the duty on imports in vessels of American register. It applies to less than half our imports—only to those that are dutiable. It applies to only 10 per cent of our imports from South America, the other 90 per cent being duty free.

That discount will not suffice to attract American capital into oversea shipping with the new duties so low. The pending provision would give foreign yards the building of all the ships its enactment would bring under American register.

And finally there are conflicting opinions as to whether or not the withdrawal of the United States from trade conventions and agreements that now estop it from applying the policy is assuredly provided for.

THE SENATE MUST REMEDY EACH OF THESE DEFECTS AND OBSCURITIES. We must have a whole-hearted and not a half-hearted readoption and enforcement of the policy that gave American ships the carriage of 80 per cent of our imports and exports during all of the more than sixty years it was previously in force.

There is an overwhelming American demand for the repeal of all restraining conventions and suspensory laws that perpetuate our present maritime importance.

The need of the Nation, the need of our Navy, and the need of our foreign commerce alike demand it.

The Senate must infuse vigor and vim into this section of the House bill, so that its enforcement will fill every American shipyard with orders for oversea ships that will reassert American maritime independence and carry the American flag over all the seven seas to the business ports of the civilized world.

Big Business Men And Despotic Power

Judge Gary is the working head of the greatest industrial corporation in America—the United States Steel Corporation.

He is especially notable among the big business men of the country because he believes and has constantly declared during the last few years that the great interstate business concerns that now control most of the output of the necessaries of life MUST CEASE TO BE ARBITRARY AND DESPOTIC IN THE USE OF THIS POWER AND MUST SUBMIT THEMSELVES TO PUBLIC AUTHORITY.

Speaking to an organization of his business associates last week, Judge Gary remarked: "The President of the United States recently said that honest business need not be afraid. Well, let us be honest. Let us take him at his word; let us assume that he means exactly what he says."

The Georgian takes occasion to say that SOMETHING MORE THAN WHAT COMMONLY GOES BY THE NAME OF "HONESTY" IS NOW REQUIRED OF THE INDUSTRIAL LEADERS OF THE UNITED STATES.

What is required is that big business men shall have the high intelligence TO HATE THEIR OWN ARBITRARY POWER OVER THE INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATION OF THE COUNTRY.

It is time that these men should come to understand that it is absolutely impossible for the republic to submit to irresponsible power of any kind. IF THE REPUBLIC IS TO ENDURE, THE ECONOMIC DESPOTS CANNOT STAND.

The principle that all power over the essentials of life must be in the hands of men accountable to the people is the principle upon which the political and legal systems of the United States are founded. This is no fine-spun theory. It is a part of the everyday consciousness of the American man.

It follows from this principle that whenever any man in America is seen by the people to be exercising a selfish and unregulated power over the people's lives, IT IS IMPOSSIBLE FOR THE PEOPLE TO REGARD HIM OTHERWISE THAN AS A PUBLIC ENEMY.

The people are patient with private monopolies only so long as there is a reasonable doubt whether they really are private monopolies. But as soon as it becomes perfectly plain that certain men are levying private taxes upon the people, the people cannot and will not any longer have patience with such men.

Judge Gary has pointed out the right road for corporate managers who are suspected and who suspect themselves of being monopolists. Many months ago he told a committee of Congress that the industrial trusts must be controlled by the Government—even to the legal limitation of dividends and of commodity prices. In short, Judge Gary is the one corporation manager in the country whose intelligence has been absolutely clear on the point that no monopoly can endure in a republic—EXCEPT A PUBLIC MONOPOLY.

In quoting the words of President Wilson last week, Judge Gary spoke truly enough—but feebly. He has often spoken better from other texts.

It is not by mere scrupulosity, not by mere freedom from rascality, that big business men are to set themselves right before the country or to set the country right in the light of its democratic tradition.

THE COUNTRY EXPECTS TO SEE AN UPRISING OF BIG BUSINESS MEN, WHO ARE AMERICANS MORE THAN THEY ARE MONOPOLISTS—WHO HATE ARBITRARY AND DESPOTIC POWER AND ARE DETERMINED TO PUT IT DOWN.

Rev. John E. White Writes on The Biggest Politics

R R

Three Great Races---the Teuton, Slav and Mongolian---Are Lined Up on the Map of the World, and the American People Are at a Perilous Point About It.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN
By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE
Pastor Second Baptist Church

IT was stated that Dr. John Bassett Moore had been brought into President Wilson's administration with no reference whatever to politics.

That was a very great mistake.

Dr. John Bassett Moore is First Assistant Secretary of State precisely because he is such a politician — the broadest, biggest, world-wideliest politician at Washington.

The sort of politics that absorbs Professor Moore's attention is not as scrappy as the race for Constable in a small town, but for variety, strategy and ominousness it is the big game of the world.

It has been Professor Moore's life work to study the vaster forces of the human movement called civilization. He is the astronomer of the Democratic administration. With his telescope sweeping immense political areas, he locates the points of disturbance in the field of civilization and tells his superiors what to do about it.

He keeps a wise eye on the great mass formations in the scrimmage of nations and races. He has a man's job all right.

The Big Line-Up.

At this moment three great races—the Teuton, Slav and Mongolian—are lined up on the map of Europe and Asia.

They are looking each other in the eyes and each is confident of its ultimate ascendency. This is politics more than continental or international. It is the biggest, deepest, most titanic situation of human competition the mind of man ever contemplated.

The smaller questions occupying the foreground of public interest are bagatelles compared with the issue presented by racial ambition. Such immense energies are involved that to think of them as let loose upon each other appals the imagination.

Outside university cloisters, from which Dr. John Bassett Moore has emerged, few people have dared to entertain the problem of collision on so colossal a scale. Within each of these great race masses we are told that instinctive tendencies are not controlling the point of view of diplomacy, and these tendencies have become manifestly contripetal.

The family disputes within each of the race groups are to grow less and less frequent under the resistless pressures of race unities. Quarrels between England and Germany, for instance, or between Russia and the smaller Slav States, are decreasingly capable of serious consequences.

The get-together race movement is dominating the motive in world politics and the indications are that the Mongolian race will be the first to arrive at the goal of solidarity in a political game.

The Japanese Imbroglio.

Here is uncovered the background which renders American complications with Japan at the present time a subject of intense solicitude all over the world. The London Times is not given to groundless alarm and its Foreign Editor, Sir Valentine Chirol, has just sounded a solemn note on the subject:

"The ultimate point of dispute," he says, "does not affect the United States alone, still less California. It is a world question essentially. Fears of the inhabitants of the Pacific slope may be premature, but they are not entirely groundless. They spring from the instinct of self-preservation and if the present minor dispute is composed they will assuredly recur."

Commenting editorially on the situation, The Times says that: "However it may be settled now, the issue will have to receive the earnest attention of the white races in times to come."

The American people have heretofore occupied a superior attitude toward this "big politics" and has kept away from it, but fate seems now about to thrust upon us the necessity of putting out our hand toward it.

It is impossible to exaggerate the consequences which depend upon the hand we put out. If it is a fist we may as well get ready to tax ourselves, our children and children's children with the cost. There will be the price of trouble enough to last a hundred years.

Putting Our Fist In.

The expense of warships and army equipment is an insignificant item in the reckoning. The losses in markets affecting American labor and capital, and particularly the cotton trade through a long period would be staggering.

But the really great sacrifice that a gladiatorial attitude our part in the problem of big politics would exact of us would be the surrender of the moral supremacy in relation to these things which the founders of the American republic committed to us and which the historians have cheerfully accorded.

Is it not our better destiny to play the part of a big, fearless, chivalric brother with courage, firmness and wisdom, and with fairness and patience, than to seek the role of the "Big Fist," or the "Big Stick" with the commonplace distinction which history has committed to all its boastful and selfish peoples?

Letters From The Georgian's Readers

FREE SCHOOL BOOKS.

Editor The Georgian:

The Constitution of Georgia provides for free public schools and provides a school fund for the support of such schools. The Constitution further provides for local taxation for public schools.

I hope that the Legislature will pass a law authorizing the State School Commissioner or some other public authority to purchase for the use of the public schools of the State all school books necessary for the children attending the schools.

This law would result in the saving of thousands of dollars annually to the people of Georgia.

I do not think the State itself should embark in the publication of free school books, but I am sincerely of the opinion that the State and towns and cities should furnish free school books.

1. The child of the poor man has the same chance to obtain an education as the child of the rich or well-to-do man.

2. The "thorough system of common schools" provided for by the Constitution of Georgia is thus made in fact a "thorough system" because to the free school house and free tuition is added free school books.

3. The work of the school can be begun without delay when school books are furnished at public expense and thus become effective from the beginning of the school term.

4. Uniformity in the use of school books throughout the State is thus secured—although under the Georgia adoption law uniformity is already obtained in the County schools.

5. The common schools, established for the education of the common people, are made popular and attendance is encouraged and prolonged.

6. The school books are public property and through the use of them respect for public property may be taught.

The following States have laws providing for free school books for the public schools: Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Nebraska, Maryland, Wyoming and Utah.

WHY IS A FIRETRAP?

Editor The Georgian:

The Georgian quoted Professor Slaton, superintendent of Atlanta public schools, the other day as saying, "The Atlanta schools are firetraps."

The firetrap may be avoided by insisting that the architect observe the following simple rules: Every school house of more than one story should have at least two stairways, located at extreme opposite ends of the building, so that should fire break out at, say, the east end, and block that exit, the west end stairway would be the last part of the building to burn.

The stairs should not be located in the main corridors, where they would form a trap in case of panic, but in separate stairway halls, running out at right angles to the main corridors. They should land in immediate proximity to the exits, so the pupil will not have to run through the building looking for a way out. They should be 4½ feet wide, and have small round hand rails on both sides.

The main corridors leading to exits should be entirely free from obstruction of all kinds. The corridors should give free and unobstructed passage directly to exit doors that open outward at a slight push from inside.

Have all the steps that lead to the first floor on the outside of the building, so that if, in a rush to get out, a child falls or is thrown down he will be on the outside, where he can be rescued. Have no inside vestibule steps.

STEVENS BOY IS ARRESTED

Phagan Evidence Goes to Detective Burns for Inspection

SWEEPING REFORMS ORDERED IN STREET CAR SERVICE

STEVENS BOY NOT SLAYER, DECLARES FATHER

Son, Held by Chattanooga Police, Was in That City When the Bodies Were Found.

Wade Stevens, son of William Stevens, whose wife and daughter were murdered and whose bodies were found in the charred ruins of their home, seven miles southeast of Atlanta, was arrested in Chattanooga at noon to-day. The DeKalb County Coroner's jury had recommended that the young man be arrested and held for investigation.

At almost the precise minute when Wade Stevens was arrested in Chattanooga, William Stevens, his father, having just arrived in Atlanta, made a statement to The Georgian completely exonerating the boy. The elder Stevens said his landlady, who knew Wade, had seen him in Chattanooga early Wednesday morning. This was just about the time the crime was discovered and only a few hours after its commission.

Detective John R. Black, of Atlanta, who was in Chattanooga attending the reunion, arrested young Stevens in the reunion city. He wired Chief of Police Beavers and was told to hold the young man, pending arrival of requisition papers.

Father Brokenhearted.

The father of the boy, a 70-year-old Confederate veteran, was heartbroken when he arrived in Atlanta at 10:50 o'clock this morning and heard for the first time of the double tragedy.

Stevens left Chattanooga at 3 o'clock this morning, but the train was delayed en route. Several friends went to the Union Depot to meet him, but he came from a rear car and left the station without meeting them.

The only information given him in Chattanooga was that his house had burned. Leaving the depot here, he went direct to the office of Carson & Treadwell, who handled his wife's real estate, where he learned all the details.

One of the firm of Carson & Treadwell told him of the double murder, and that his son, Wade Stevens, was wanted for investigation. The old veteran was dumbfounded. He sank in a chair and remained silent for seevral minutes, then dramatically expressed belief in the innocence of his son and declared he would spend the remainder of his days hunting the slayer.

Declares Boy Is Innocent.

"All I have to live for now is to try to catch the murderer," he said. "I'll spend the rest of my days hunting him."

While in Chattanooga Stevens boarded at 166 Rossville Avenue. His son by a former marriage, Ed Stevens, also boarded there. The missing son, Wade Stevens, had stopped there previously and is well known to the landlady, who said she saw him in front of her home at 6 o'clock Wednesday morning.

"I believe my boy is innocent of this murder," said Mr. Stevens. "He was bad at times, but he never could have stooped so low as to murder his own mother and sister. He knows nothing about it yet.

"I know he had nothing to do with it, because he was in Chattanooga

Militants Fire Hay And Farm Buildings

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 29.—Having terrorized most of the cities of England, the militant suffragettes now are paying their attentions to the rural districts.

Three fires were reported to-day from farms near Richmond. Haystacks and farm buildings were burned and about the ruins were scattered placards and copies of The Suffragette.

NOTTINGHAM, ENGLAND, May 29.—Suffragettes set fire to the freight sheds in the railroad terminal here to-day. The fire was extinguished after $5,000 damage was done.

Boston Entertains Atlanta Old Guard

BOSTON, May 29.—Members of the Old Guard of Atlanta, in Boston to attend Memorial Day exercises, were guests Thursday of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company.

The Confederates were given an automobile ride to Lexington and Concord and a visit to the estate of Colonel Everett C. Benton, of Belmont. Friday the visitors from the South will go to the State House, place a floral tribute on the sailors' and soldiers' monument on Boston Common and in the afternoon take luncheon with E. W. Kinsley, a distinguished G. A. R. veteran.

Shot His Neighbor; Gets Year in Jail

MACON, GA., May 29.—Mallary Bedingfield, found guilty of shooting at another because of the shooting of his next-door neighbor, Ferd Guttenberger, whom he claims he mistook for a burglar, this morning was sentenced as for a misdemeanor, being given twelve months or a fine of $200. The jury was out five hours and returned its verdict last night at 10 o'clock.

Guttenberger recovered, although a bullet passed through his body.

Tariff Bill Delay Likely To Be Avoided

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Conferences between members of the Senate Finance Committee and members of the lower house who were in charge of various sections of the Underwood tariff bill will be the rule until the bill reaches the floor of the Senate.

The sub-committees were working on the bill to-day in secret session. If agreement can be reached between the tariff experts of the two houses the chances of long delay in conference will be avoided.

Gibson Jury Unable To Agree on Verdict

NEWBURGH, N. Y., May 29.—After having been out all night, the jury in the trial of Burton W. Gibson, the New York lawyer charged with strangling Countess Rosa Menschik Szabo on Greenwood Lake July 16, 1912, to secure her estate, was still deadlocked this morning.

It was rumored that the jurors stood 11 to 1 for conviction.

The jury in Gibson's first trial disagreed.

RAIL BOARD ORDERS CARS FOR RUSH CROWDS

Many Changes in Schedules Also Directed in the State Commission's Mandate.

General improvement in the street car service in Atlanta furnished the Georgia Railway and Power Company was ordered by the State Railroad Commission shortly aftern oon Thursday. Practically every line operated by the company is included in the list. The order specifies particularly the service rendered during rush hours.

The order, which will benefit thousands of persons who are compelled to use the street cars, was issued after several conferences between the Railroad Commission and President Arkwright, of the Georgia Railway and Power Company.

On May 5 Chairman Murphey Candler addressed a letter to Mr. Arkwright asking him to make suggestions for the betterment of the service during rush hours. This letter was replied to on May 23 by Mr. Arkwright, his letter going much into detail.

Suggestions made by Mr. Arkwright were considered at sessions of the commission Tuesday and Wednesday, during which time they were in conference with the street railway officials. It is understood that the order of the commission is agreeable to the company. The improvement of service will begin within the next few days.

Improvements Ordered.

Here are the improvements ordered:

ROUTE NO 2—Copenhill to Westview. Rearrangement of schedules so as to space the headway between cars now operated more nearly to four minutes and secure a more even distribution of the traffic loads. Counts of actual loads at peak points to be made during next five months and filed with the commission, so as to secure accurate information as to whether there is excessive congestion.

ROUTE NO. 4—Inman Park-Georgia Avenue. A three and one-third minute headway during morning and afternoon rush hours, on Inman Par end, with the Georgia Avenue end provided for by increased service on Route No. 5.

ROUTE NO. 5—West Peachtree and South Pryor. Additional cars between Sixth Street crossing on West Peachtree and Bass Street crossing on South Pryor, so as to give, during the morning and afternoon rush hours, a service with five minutes' headway.

ROUTE NO. 6—Forrest Avenue and Capitol Avenue. Actual counts to be made during morning and afternoon rush hours, at two peak points, during next five months, to accurately ascertain degree of congestion, if any, on this route.

ROUTE NO. 8—Fair and Marietta Streets. The afternoon rush hour service on this line has been recently extended from 6:30 to 7 p. m., and schedules now established more regularly sustained. Counts of traffic loads to be made on this route, as directed on No. 6.

ROUTE NO. 10—Whitehall and Peachtree: Increased service so as to provide for cars every three and one-third minutes, and extension of afternoon rush hour service to 9 p. m.

Suburban Service.

The Interrupted Joy Rider; or, Wifey Was Under the Seat

MACON, GA., May 29.—A master plumber, his pretty young wife and his equally pretty stenographer were the participants in a domestic drama, with a comedy vein, this week.

The man, well known and well to do, aroused his wife's suspicions by requesting a hurried supper Tuesday night. When he declined to tell her where he was going after supper her suspicion was intensified.

When he departed in his automobile his wife was in the back tonneau under a rug.

The auto went to the home of the stenographer, who took the seat beside her employer, and thus they sped out into the country. When five miles out their conversation became so interesting that the wife could not conceal herself longer. Rising, she began wielding a poker.

She severely beat her husband and the pretty stenographer before the machine was stopped and they jumped out.

On the return home the stenographer occupied the rear seat and the wife sat beside her crestfallen husband.

NEW HAVEN, May 29.—Former President Taft delivered his first lecture at Yale on the general topic, "Some Questions of Modern Government." He criticised the short sighted policy of the United States in not maintaining a sufficient army, and attacked the United States Senate for its attitude toward foreign nations.

"The policy of this country seems to be the Lord looks after the children and the drunken men and He ought to look after the United States," said Mr. Taft.

JACKSON TO MAKE ATLANTA HIS HOME

Retiring Collector of Revenue Announces He Will Represent Northern Banking Houses.

Henry S. Jackson, whose resignation as Collector of Internal Revenue takes effect July 1, will remain in Atlanta as Southern representative for Chicago, Pittsburg and New York banking houses. At first he will retain his present office in the Inman Building, but later will take a suite in one of Atlanta's new office buildings.

Already Mr. Jackson is transacting financial business. Thursday, he negotiated a loan of $150,000 in behalf of an Atlanta building enterprise.

"I shall retain my interest in political affairs," said Mr. Jackson, "and shall continue as Republican national committeeman from Georgia."

Mr. Jackson opposes a reduction of Southern representation in Republican national conventions.

Under Mr. Jackson revenues here increased 25 per cent, against a 3 per cent increase throughout the United States.

BURNS HIMSELF TO MAKE INVESTIGATION OF PHAGAN SLAYING

With the maze of contradictory statements sweeping an avalanche of suspicion upon the head of James Conley, the negro sweeper, the potent information was unearthed Thursday that Detective William J. Burns personally will take charge of the investigation into the Mary Phagan murder case which his operatives have been conducting.

Despite the published report that the Burns operatives had withdrawn from the case, and despite the procedure of the State in prosecuting its case against Leo M. Frank, the pencil factory superintendent, the Burns' investigation will continue and from now on under the famous detectives direction.

This information came from Detective C. W. Tobie, William J Burns' lieutenant, Thursday morning. It tends to show that Tobie, who has had charge of his agency's investigation here, does not consider the case as closed.

Mr. Tobie went so far as to deny emphatically the published interview with him, in which he was quoted as declaring Frank to be the guilty man.

Takes Evidence to Burns.

"From the evidence so far developed in the Phagan case, guilt is directed at Frank," the detective said with emphasis. "That was my statement. However, I was quoted as saying outright that Frank committed the murder. That was not true."

Mr. Tobie left Atlanta Thursday afternoon. He carried with him the evidence which he has gathered during his two weeks' probe of the case. He is going to New York. He will meet Burns there and place his material into the noted detective's hands. From then on Detective Burns will direct his operatives as to further investigations to be outlined by him.

This information but proves another link in the chain of circumstances which The Georgian has consistently pointed out in its elimination of Frank from possibility of the crime and the more serious incrimination of Conley.

Negro Deeper in Suspicion.

With each cross-examination of the negro by the police in their attempts to secure more evidence against Frank, Conley has only ensnared himself in guilt. His admitted falsehoods in former affidavits tending to throw the blame to Frank in connection with the "murder" notes have been accentuated as incriminating by the unqualified declarations of employees at the pencil factory that Conley is the guilty man.

Three responsible officials of the plant have outlined plausible theories as to how the negro could have committed the crime. These men, Herbert G. Schiff, who is assistant superintendent; E. F. Holloway, timekeeper, and N. V. Darley, general foreman, are acquainted with Conley. Upon their knowledge of him and the opportunity offered for accomplishing the murder they base their statements that he is guilty. They have proven beyond a doubt that Conley was in the factory for several hours on the day of the murder, and connecting with this the negro's contradictory statements as to his whereabouts they have compiled a most

Give Credence to Story.

The detectives still held firmly to their theory that the negro was the most important witness against Leo M. Frank, in the face of the contradictory stories and lies in which he had been trapped.

They were strongly disposed to give full credence to Conley's second affidavit, although the negro's sudden anxiety to talk after three weeks of silence and the maze of falsehood in which he was at once involved served suddenly to shift the responsibility for Mary Phagan's death from Leo Frank to the sullen black man, in the judgment of many who have been following the evidence closely.

Chief Lanford and Detective Harry Scott, of the Pinkertons, announced Thursday morning, however, that they regarded the second affidavit of Conley as the final and conclusive piece of evidence needed in preparing a case against Frank.

Rejected First Affidavit.

Others who have weighed the evidence carefully declare there are many more significant indications that Conley was the slayer than there are reasons to believe that Frank is guilty.

The detectives rejected the first affidavit of Conley, in which he said Frank dictated Friday the notes that were found by the body of the slain girl Sunday morning on the ground that it was absurd and unbelievable to hold the theory that the murder was premeditated.

Yet they accept the second affidavit, which indicatesidentically the same thing, in that Frank met Conley at Nelson and Forsyth Streets before 11 o'clock Saturday morning, April 26, before the crime was committed, and told the negro to wait for him, later taking Conley to the factory with him, where Conley says that he wrote the notes at Frank's direction.

The negro in his second affidavit suggests no other motive that could have impelled Frank to ask him to come to the factory shortly before noon on Saturday. Conley says that Frank told him to wait secreted on the first floor until he heard a whistle. When he heard the whistle he says he went upstairs and Frank dictated the notes.

Why Many Suspect Conley.

All of this is inescapably suggestive of premeditation on the part of Frank, if Conley's story is to be believed, but the theory of premeditation has been scoffed at by everyone, including Chief Lanford and Harry Scott.

In fact, it never seriously was considered by anyone, say those who are inclined to believe the evidence against Conley greatly outweighs that against Frank. The assertion is freely made that it would be far easier to convict Conley, if the police were so disposed, than it will be to convict Frank. Here are a few reasons advanced:

When the factory superintendent was permitted to go before the Coroner's jury by his attorney, he answered all the questions in a straightforward, unwavering manner, never once being trapped in a lie or misstatement.

In marked contrast is the conduct of Conley ever since his arrest at the time of the inquest three weeks ago. When discovered at the factory, he was washing a shirt which he sought to hide from the person who had found him out.

He was taken into custody and gave his address as 92 Tattnall Street. Investigation disclosed that Conley was lying and that he had not lived on Tattnall Street for months, his actual residence being 172 Rhodes Street.

He was asked to write, and he told the officers he could not write a word. He refused to be inveigled into making an attempt at handwriting of any sort. He would not put a pencil to paper that the detectives might get a specimen of his penmanship. For a long time they believed he was so ignorant he could not write his own name. Then they found some leases he had signed for watches and knew that he had been lying again.

Just as the Grand Jury was about to sit and it appeared likely that Frank would be indicted, the negro broke his silence for the first time. He told the detectives that it was he who had written the notes, but that he had written them at Frank's dictation on Friday, April 25. Frank had approached him in an aisle at the factory and had asked him to come into the office, he said. He remembered that it was four minutes before 1 o'clock.

That he had been at the factory Saturday he denied emphatically. Between 10 o'clock in the forenoon and 2 o'clock in the afternoon he had been on Peters Street, according to his story.

The detectives ridiculed his story and continued examining. Gradually he broke down under their questioning, and it was established that he had been lying again and that he actually had been in the factory Saturday, presumably at the very time the girl was murdered. This was the first time his presence in the factory on Saturday had been known.

Admitted Hiding in Plant.

He had kept it a most profound secret up to the time it was gouged out of him by the detectives. He weakened further and admitted that he had been hiding down on the first floor as persons went in and out.

He described practically every person that entered or left the factory between 12 and 1 o'clock. But he declared that he did not see Mary Phagan when she came in the building. Out of all who entered or left, the murdered girl and Lemmie Quinn appear to be the only ones he missed seeing, according to his story.

He explained this by saying that he must have fallen asleep for a little while. He saw Miss Corinthia Hall and Mrs. Freeman leave a few minutes before 1 o'clock, but did not see Mary Phagan enter about five minutes after the hour. Neither did he see Lemmie Quinn, who is said to have been at the factory about 12:15.

If the negro's final affidavit is taken as nearer the probable truth than his first, those who are acquainted with Frank are of the opinion that there are still most important questions to be answered convincingly. They are these, assuming that Frank is guilty:

"Why should a man of Frank's intelligence—a man who is highly educated and who has won a position of responsibility—virtually make a confidant of another man, especially an ignorant negro, easily broken down by the third degree of the police station?

"Why should a man of sense, if he wished to keep his crime undiscovered, proclaim it to the negro, in his office by the question: 'Why should I hang?'"

"Why should he approach this negro more than an hour before this crime was committed?

"Why Resort to Notes?"

"Finally, why should a man of intelligence have recourse to notes at all when he would know they ultimately would serve to fasten the crime on the guilty person rather than to divert suspicion?"

If the detectives follow out their intention of using Conley as a material witness, it is regarded as likely that they will have difficulty in obtaining the acceptance of his affidavit and testimony in view of the many lies in which he has been trapped. The repudiation of the first affidavit, even on the representation that he set the date originally on Friday because of the fear that he would be hanged if admitting he was in the factory Saturday, is thought to render the second affidavit practically worthless, so far as its legal weight is concerned.

The fact that the detectives have corroborated Conley's description in his second affidavit of the persons he saw while he said he was in hiding on the first floor only more firmly establishes in the judgment of many the fact that Conley was at the factory the afternoon of the murder and had as favorable an opportunity to attack and kill Mary Phagan as Leo Frank had.

The corroboration, in their opinion, does not add one jot to the possibility that Frank might have dictated the notes.

Street, so as to give service to that point with three and one-third minute headway, and from there to Decatur on five minutes headway during morning and afternoon rush hours, with extension of service on ten-minute headway from end of afternoon rush hour period to 9:30 p. m., in lieu of present twenty-minute headway. After 9:30 p. m. the twenty-minute headway will be operated as now.

ROUTE NO. 19—River Line: Extra cars on Sundays during summer months to accommodate extra traffice. Counts of traffic loads to be made on this route week days, as directed on other named routes, to accurately ascertain measure of regular traffic.

ROUTE NO. 20—College Park, East Point and Hapeville: Actual counts of week-day loads at peak points to be made during next five months, to ascertain accurately if there is overcongestion in regular traffic.

ROUTE NO. 23—Buckhead Line: Tripper service previously ordered by the commission to Sixth Street on West Peachtree has been recently extended by the company to Dead Man's Curve, the end of double track, which gives local service this far on a ten-minute headway during rush hours and to that extent relieves congestion on the Buckhead cars. In addition, doubleheaders in the morning and afternoon hours, for congestion during those hours arising out of construction work in the northern part of the city, are operated and will be continued as necessity demands. Counts, during morning and afternoon rush hours, for the next five months, of actual loads at the peak point of the Buckhead line, have been ordered, and will determine the necessity of further relief on this route.

SLAIN WOMAN'S SISTER THINKS SON INNOCENT

yesterday morning. When he drove me from home to the car line Sunday morning when I started to Chattanooga he told me he might be up there before the reunion was over.

"Yesterday afternoon the landlady told me the house had burned down. She knew Wade, and she told me she saw him in front of her house yesterday morning, wearing overalls just as when he is said to have left home. Two boys were with him, but they didn't go in the house. Wade was in Chattanooga when my wife and daughter were murdered, and he couldn't have done it."

Goes to See Ruins.

Leaving Carson & Treadwell's office, Mr. Stevens said he was going to the ruins of his home. He first visited the Patterson undertaking establishment and arranged for the funeral of his wife and daughter. Both bodies will be taken to Meansville, Ga., at 4 o'clock Friday morning, to be buried in the family lot, where Mrs. Stevens' father and mother both have been interred in the last two years.

Lonnie Blevins, 17 years old, who says he left San Francisco for Tampa and from there came to Atlanta, is held at police headquarters to-day. He said he arrived in Atlanta last Friday. He was detained because he could not give a connected story. The police attach little significance to his arrest or his presence in Atlanta.

Tells of Attempted Attack.

An important clew, given Sheriff J. A. McCurdy, of DeKalb County, who is in charge of the investigation, was revealed in the statement of a neighbor to the effect that a Mexican halfbreed, formerly employed by Mrs Stevens, had attempted to attack Nellie Stevens some time ago.

This declaration was made by Miss Josephine McCaulay, 790 Glennwood Avenue, an intimate friend of both the slain mother and daughter. Miss McCaulay said that only a few days ago Mrs. Stevens had told her of shooting at the discharged halfbreed when he appeared at the country home. Mrs. Stevens had said that she fired twice at the man, and that he escaped into the clump of woods adjoining the house. Sheriff McCurdy has ordered a country-wide search made for the halfbreed.

Discovery Wednesday morning that Mr. Stevens had purchased an axe some days ago offers a possible clew to the weapon used by the murderer in crushing the skulls of his victims. The axe is, so far, missing, though the ruins of the burned dwelling and surrounding vicinity have been carefully searched for it.

Ax Apparently Used.

The sharp, knifelike cut across the top of Nellie Stevens' skull seems to bear out the theory that the murderer used the ax to slay his victims.

Possibility that the weapon used by the murderer was thrown into the well near the house has lead Sheriff McCurdy to order the well dragged.

Atlanta police and detective officials have joined with the DeKalb force to solve the mystery. Detective Chief Lanford assigned Mounted Policeman Hamilton, who was a close friend of the Stevens family, and Detective Rosser to work on the case. Sheriff McCurdy obtained this reinforcement Thursday morning when he held a conference with Lanford.

A unique incident of the blaze which burned the Stevens home to ashes was revealed in the finding of fifty-seven chickens dead in a coop fifty feet away. The coop was not even scorched by the heat.

That robbery was the motive of the murderer has been established by the disappearance of jewelry and a large quantity of money which Mrs. Stevens was known to have had in the house at the time.

Woman's Jewels Missing.

Neighbors stated that Mrs. Stevens possessed a diamond ring valued at $400 and two gold watches. These are missing.

Coupled with other theories as to the murder is one which shows the work that of two negroes who were said to have been seen driving away from the burning home at sunrise Wednesday morning. The men rode in a one-horse wagon, the body of which was filled with oats. Tracks of the horse were found on a spot near the ruins. In the immediate vicinity was discovered a small pile of fresh oats. Human footprints were found nearby.

Despite the assertion that the negroes drove away, Sheriff McCurdy's men made a careful search of the woods surrounding the home, believing it highly probable that the murderer might have hidden therein to watch the burning house, and will scour the woods again to-day. Another theory is that he might have been wounded by Mrs. Stevens before he killed her, and had been forced to drag himself to the woods for escape. That the man may be lying there now is a possibility expressed by the police. The shell found in the shotgun used by Mrs. Stevens was found to have been discharged.

Sister Believes Son Innocent.

In a darkened room in a little house at 33 Dalney Street, with a physician in almost constant attendance, lies a woman prostrated by grief. Absolute quiet has been ordered by the doctor, and the anguish tears at her heart in a silence broken only by her own sobs and the hushed patter of childish footsteps as her children play quietly about the house.

She is Mrs. Pearl Hartley, sister of Mrs. Sarah C. Stevens, whose charred body was found lying beside that of her adopted daughter in the smoking ruins of their farm home seven miles from Atlanta. Prostrated by the shock of the tragedy, with her imagination made vivid by her suffering and grief, Mrs. Hartley is seeing in the darkness of her room the terrible happenings of that night of horror.

Mrs. Hartley's only surcease from suffering came for a few moments late Wednesday afternoon, when, under the influence of opiates administered by her physician, she recovered sufficiently to talk to a Georgian reporter. Mrs. Hartley sobbed audibly throughout the interview, and her eyes, red with weeping and reflecting the anguish that tore at her heart, emphasized her words as she cried for vengeance on the murderer.

"Why do they always murder women?" she cried. "It is terrible. Little girls are murdered when they go onto the street, and now a woman is not safe even in her own home."

Faints at News.

The notifying of Mrs. Hartley of the death of her sister and niece formed one of the most dramatic and pathetic incidents of the entire tragedy. She was downtown Wednesday morning shopping, when word came to her home on Dalney Street that her sister and niece had been murdered. Mrs. Lena Thompson, a neighbor, of 24 Dalney Street, volunteered to go downtown and find Mrs. Hartley and tell her the sad news.

After a search of an hour Mrs. Thompson found Mrs. Hartley in the Kress store on Whitehall Street. As she stood trying to locate the sister of the murdered woman in the crowd of shoppers Mrs. Hartley, warned by intuition that something was wrong, pushed through the crowd and hurried to Mrs. Thompson.

"What is it?" she cried. "What's the matter?"

Mrs. Thompson, seeking to break the news gently, told her that her sister's home had burned down and that she had been badly injured.

"It's worse than that," Mrs. Hartley cried. "I feel it! I know it is worse than that!"

She screamed and fainted in the arms of Mrs. Thompson. She was soon revived and taken to her home. Mrs. Thompson endeavored to calm her on the trip on the street car with the assurance that everything was all right.

As Mrs. Hartley entered her yard, one of her little daughters ran out of the house, tears streaming down her face.

"Oh, mamma," she cried, "Aunt Sarah and Cousin Nellie have been killed!"

With a scream, Mrs. Hartley fell to the ground in a swoon. She was picked up by Mrs. Thompson and members of her family and carried into the house. A physician was called and administered oplates. Under the influence of the medicine she was able to sit up in bed for a few moments late in the afternoon, but collapsed again when she learned that her nephew, the son of the murdered woman, was being sought by the police as the murderer of his mother.

Believes Boy Innocent.

Mrs. Hartley refused to believe the boy could be capable of so diabolical a crime.

"He may have been a bad boy," she said, "but I can not believe he would kill his mother and sister. There must be some mistake."

Mrs. Hartley advanced the theory that the murder may have been committed by some person with robbery as the motive. Mrs. Stevens was an energetic business woman, and up to the time she moved to her farm had been engaged extensively in building operations, mostly in East Atlanta. She had a number of men in her employ, and Mrs. Hartley said she often kept a considerable sum of money in her home. She said she had known her sister to have as much as $500 in her house at one time. Less than a week ago, she said, Mrs. Stevens wrote to her that she was coming to Atlanta to sell some of her property. It can not be learned that she banked the proceeds of this sale, and Mrs. Hartley's theory is that she took the money home with her; that this fact became known to some one, and that she was murdered and the house fired for purposes of robbery.

Up to about six months ago Mrs. Stevens lived in the 700 block, Boulevard, and moved to the country because of her failing health. Besides her husband and young son, Mrs. Stevens is survived by six sisters, Mrs. Pearl Hartley, Mrs. L. C. Smith, Mrs. M. A. Golden, Mrs. J. N. Patrick and Miss Lily Whattley, of Atlanta, and Mrs. W. C. Sims, of Meansville, Ga., and three brothers, Sergeant Whattley, of the Atlanta police force, and T. C. and H. T. Whattley, of Barnesville, Ga.

Suffragist 'General' in New Role To Drop Literature From Biplane

"General" Rosalie Jones.

NEW YORK, May 29.—"General" Rosalie Jones has added a new accomplishment to her abilities as a hiker, and on Decoration Day she will fly across Staten Island, distributing suffrage literature from an aeroplane. The general will ascend in a Wright biplane operated by Aeroplanist Brown.

If the wind is favorable her route will be marked by a trail of yellow suffrage flyers, announcing the speakers at the suffrage meeting to be held later at Oakwood Heights.

A group of Barnard girls will be present to welcome the general as she alights.

PARADE CLOSES REUNION OF VETERANS

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., May 29. The twenty-third annual reunion of the Confederate Veterans closed today with the veterans' parade, in which the old soldiers of the South marched under the tattered battle flags of half a century ago and under the Stars and Stripes of a reunited country.

Military bands furnished martial music to which the tottering old soldiers, hundreds of them in gray uniforms, tramped through the downtown streets. Grandstands along Market and Broad Streets, the principal thoroughfares traversed, were filled with visitors and Chattanoogans who lustily cheered the old veterans.

General Bennett H. Young, mounted on a Kentucky thoroughbred charger, headed the parade. General J. P. Hickman, of Nashville, commander of the Tennessee Division, was chief marshal.

Exodus of Visitors Begins.

The exodus of visitors began immediately after the parade and throughout the afternoon and night special and regular trains will be leaving the depots every hour.

The reunion festivities will come to a formal close to-night when the Sons of Confederate Veterans give their annual ball to sponsors and maids of honor at Bennett H. Young pavilion.

Several hundred veterans will go to Dalton, Ga., to-morrow to attend a reunion of General Joseph E. Johnston's army that participated in the campaign from Chattanooga to Atlanta. At this time memorial services will be held by Dalton Daughters of the Confederacy, Professor Joseph T. Derry, of Atlanta, being the orator.

To Decorate Federal Graves.

Several hundred of the Confederate veterans will remain in Chattanooga to-morrow and participate in the Grand Army of the Republic Memorial Day exercises at the National Cemetery, where several thousand Federal soldiers are buried.

This afternoon "The Pied Piper of Hamelintown" will be presented as a pageant at Warner Park by several hundred Chattanooga children.

Young Again Commander.

General Bennett H. Young, of Kentucky, commander-in-chief; General Theodore S. Garnett, of Virginia, commander of the Army of Northern Virginia Department; General George P. Harrison, of Alabama, commander of the Army of Tennessee Department, and General K. M. VanZandt, of Texas, commander of the Trans-Mississippi Department, were reelected, and Jacksonville, Fla., was chosen for the 1914 reunion by the veterans at the principal business session of the reunion late yesterday afternoon. Next year's gathering will be the first reunion held in Florida. Jacksonville defeated Nashville, its nearest competitor, which has had two reunions, by a vote of almost 4 to 1. Houston, Texas, and Tulsa, Okla., received scattering votes. The selection was then made unanimous.

"Turkey Trot" and "Virginia Reel."

A parade by the Sons of Veterans yesterday afternoon and a ball for the veterans at Bennett H. Young Pavilion last night were features that attracted the interest of the thousands of sponsors, maids of honor and other visitors. At the ball the Virginia reel and quadrille of 50 years ago were danced between snatches of the present-day "turkey trot" and two-step.

$3.50 Recipe Free, For Weak Men

Send Name and Address To-day—You Can Have It Free and Be Strong and Vigorous.

I have in my possession a prescription for nervous debility, lack of vigor, weakened manhood, failing memory and lame back, brought on by excesses, unnatural drains, or the follies of youth, that has cured so many worn and nervous men right in their own homes—without any additional help or medicine—that I think every man who wishes to regain his manly power and virility, quickly and quietly, should have a copy. So I have determined to send a copy of the prescription free of charge, in a plain, ordinary sealed envelope, to any man who will write me for it.

This prescription comes from a physician who has made a special study of men, and I am convinced it is the surest-acting combination for the cure of deficient manhood and vigor failure ever put together.

I think I owe it to my fellow-men to send them a copy in confidence so that any man anywhere who is weak and discouraged with repeated failures may stop drugging himself with harmful patent medicines, secure what I believe is the quickest acting restorative, up-building SPOT-TOUCHING remedy ever devised, and so cure himself at home quietly and quickly. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, 4276 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send you a copy of this splendid recipe in a plain, ordinary envelope free of charge. A great many doctors would charge $3.00 to $5.00 for merely writing out a prescription like this—but I send it entirely free.

MAINE UNVEILING PARADE PLANS PERFECTED

NEW YORK, May 29.—Plans for the great naval and military parade, which will precede the unveiling and dedication of the National Maine Monument at the southwest entrance to Central Park, Fifty-ninth Street and Eighth Avenue, on Friday afternoon, are about completed.

The twelve dreadnoughts and battleships of the North Atlantic fleet, which will be represented by regiments of marines and seamen in the parade, are the Wyoming, Florida, North Dakota, Delaware, Virginia, New Hampshire, South Carolina, Kansas, Georgia, New Jersey and Rhode Island.

Lieutenant Commander G. L. Smith, U. S. N., the brigade commander, has issued the order for the mobilization of the marines and seamen. Police Commissioner Waldo is revising and completing the arrangements for holding the crowds in place along the line of march and at the scene of the dedication.

Many Bands in Line.

The marine regiment, which is to march directly behind the United States Army, will form in Forty-third Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues. This regiment will be headed by the combined bands of the Wyoming and Virginia. The First Seaman Regiment Band will be headed by the combined bands of the Florida, North Dakota and Delaware; the Second Seaman Regiment, by the combined bands of the New Hampshire, South Carolina and Kansas, and the Third Seaman Regiment, by the combined bands of the Georgia, New Jersey and Rhode Island. Regimental colors will be carried.

The fleet officers in the parade will wear blue service uniforms, with white caps, leggins and gloves. The marines will march in blue, with white caps, leggins, canteens and rifle belts; the seamen in blue, with white hats, leggins, canteens and rifle belts. All bands will wear full dress uniforms.

The seamen and marines from the Wyoming will land at two floats at the foot of West Eighty-first Street. They will march down Broadway to Forty-fourth Street and then east, to form with the First Seaman Regiment, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues.

Will March Crosstown.

The detachments from the Florida, North Dakota and Delaware will be landed at Pier 86, at the foot of West Forty-sixth Street, and march crosstown to Forty-fourth Street and Fifth Avenue.

The men from the New Hampshire, South Carolina and Kansas will also disembark at the foot of West Forty-sixth Street and form as the Second Seaman Regiment in Forty-fifth Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues.

Detachments from the Virginia, Georgia, New Jersey and Rhode Island will be landed at the foot of West Forty-fifth Street and march to Forty-sixth Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues. They will form the Third Seaman Regiment.

The regimental commanders will be: Marine Regiment, Major A. W. Catlin; First Seaman Regiment, Captain H. B. Wilson; Second Seaman Regiment, Captain G. A. Hoogerwerff; Third Seaman Regiment, Captain J. D. McDonald.

Brigade staff: Lieutenant Commander G. L. Smith, brigade adjutant; Lieutenant Commander E. C. Kalbfuz, brigade quartermaster; Lieutenant P. R. McCrary, brigade ordnance officer; Pay Inspector S. McGowan, brigade commissary; Surgeon W. C. Braisted, brigade surgeon; Lieutenant S. C. Hooper, brigade signal officer; Lieutenant R. P. Craft, aide; Lieutenant R. P. Emerick, aide.

Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels arrived to-day from Washington to take part to-morrow in the unveiling. To-day was given over to official calls between Secretary Daniels, Rear Admiral Badger, members of the Maine Monument Commission, Mayor Gaynor and others.

LAMAR TO SPEAK TO GEORGIA BAR

Supreme Court Jurist Appears Thursday Night for First Time in State Since Elevation.

Justice J. R. Lamar will make his first public appearance in Georgia since his elevation to the Supreme Court of the United States before the Georgia Bar Association at Warm Springs Thursday night. His address originally had been scheduled for Friday morning, but was moved up to Thursday night to enable the jurist to be in Washington Friday.

Arriving in Atlanta Wednesday morning with Mrs. Lamar, Justice Lamar paid a visit to members of the Supreme Court of Georgia. After chatting for an hour he and Mrs. Lamar proceeded to Warm Springs.

An Atlanta delegation of lawyers will leave for Warm Springs at 5:10 o'clock this afternoon. Among the lawyers will be Hamilton Douglas, Lee Jordan, John Y. Smith, Henry C. Peeples, Arminius A. Wright, John C. Tye, Judge Broyles, Sam D. Hewlett, Luther Z. Rosser, Jr., D. K. Johnston, Lawton Nally, W. C. Latimer, Eugene R. Black, Sanders McDaniel, Burton Smith, Alex Smith, H. M. Patty, Daniel Rountree, Robert C. Alston and John M. Slaton.

Other Georgia attorneys, already at Warm Springs, who will hear Justice Lamar, are Judge W. A. Little, of Columbus; Orville A. Park, Macon; Judge Andrew J. Cobb, Athens; Judge Joseph H. Lumpkin and Judge Beverly D. Evans, Atlanta.

AID ASKED IN WAR ON TUBERCULOSIS

Association Appeals to Atlanta to Make Up $5,000 of $10,000 Needed Yearly.

Unless the Atlanta Anti-Tuberculosis Association can secure the $5,000 in subscriptions, for which it has asked the people of Atlanta, the officials state it will be seriously handicapped in its work this year. There has been collected less than 15 per cent of the fund the public was asked to give.

The association, nevertheless, is prosecuting its work more vigorously than ever, responding to every call and seeking to better conditions and lend assistance wherever possible.

Example is given of an Atlanta family of eight members, in which five of the children have tuberculosis. The bread winners of the family, all under 16 years, earn $9.30 a week in a mill. The association makes it a point to keep close supervision upon families of this sort, to win their affection and insist on carefulness in their habits, to prevent the spread of the disease.

Three children to give, another case, making $45 a month, earn the entire living for a family of eleven. When the elder of these children contracted tuberculosis the family income was reduced more than half. It took not only argument, but force, to get this girl into a sanitarium, where she has been committed until sufficiently improved to resume her occupation.

Contending with hundreds of cases of this sort every year, the association is in need of an income which will enable it to get definite results. It needs for this purpose $10,000 annually. Of this amount the public is asked to give $5,000.

ATLANTANS VIEW FACTORY EXHIBIT

Sixty-seven strong, and bubbling with Atlanta enthusiasm, a delegation of members of the Chamber of Commerce left for Chattanooga at 8 o'clock Thursday morning to inspect the Chattanooga manufacturers' exhibit.

President Wilmer L. Moore and Secretary Walter G. Cooper headed the delegation, which traveled in two special coaches. In Chattanooga they will be the guests of the Chattanooga Chamber of Commerce. They will be entertained at a luncheon by the Chattanooga business men, while an automobile trip to Chattanooga's historic points will also be given them. The party will return from Chattanooga to-night.

The following composed the party: Wilmer L. Moore, V. H. Kriegshaber, John S. Owens, John Morris, J. R. A. Hobson, Ivan E. Allen, Walter G. Cooper, Brooks Morgan, J. P. Stevens, M. M. Davies, H. B. MORSE TRYING TO RULE COAST SHIPS

NEW YORK, May 29.—Charles W. Morse, convicted of bank wrecking after the 1907 panic and pardoned by President Taft on the ground that he was dying, is not only attempting to secure a monopoly of Hudson River steamship traffic, but is reaching out along the Atlantic Coast.

This became known to-day when it was learned that Morse has bought four lake steamers for coastwise trade between New York and Southern ports and will attempt to become the dominant figure in steamship traffic on the Atlantic Coast he was planning to become when the financial earthquake of 1907 upset his schemes.

The ships are so big they can not be brought through the canal connecting Lakes Erie and Ontario, consequently they will have to be reduced in size. They will be enlarged after they reach this port.

Morse may extend his operations to the Pacific when the Panama Canal is completed.

RESINOL HEALS ITCHING SKINS

And Clears Unsightly Complexions.

The soothing, healing medication in Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap penetrates every tiny pore of the skin, clears it of all impurities, and stops itching instantly. Resinol positively speedily heals eczema, rashes, ringworm and other eruptions, and clears away disfiguring pimples and blackheads when other treatments prove worse than useless.

Resinol is not an experiment. It is a doctor's prescription which proved so wonderfully successful for skin troubles that it has been used by other doctors all over the country for eighteen years. No other treatment for the skin now before the public can show such a record of professional approval. Every druggist sells Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, but you can test them at our expense. Just write to Dept. 27-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md., and we will send you a generous trial by parcel post.

STANDARD ROUTE OF THE WEST

Pacific Northwest holds a charm for everyone. There is so much that is undisturbed. The rugged grandeur delights even seasoned travelers.

California, with its wonderful seaside and inland resorts, rivals the world for varied attractions. Del Monte, Santa Barbara, Pasadena, Lake Tahoe, Yosemite National Park and hundreds more.

Colorado, the state of wonderful mountains and a glorious climate. Colorado Springs, Estes Park, Pike's Peak, Long's Peak, Manitou and other numerous points of interest.

Yellowstone National Park, America's playground. Two weeks spent in touring this wonderland is an education in itself.

We suggest to those with the city as an objective—Denver, Salt Lake City, Portland, Tacoma, Seattle, San Francisco or Los Angeles, from which side trips are allowed.

Low Summer Tourist and Convention Fares

provide an opportunity to go at comparatively little expense. In effect June 1st to September 30th. Liberal return limits and stop-over privileges.

We have prepared illustrated booklets that explain in detail the advantages of the various resorts and cities; how much it will cost to make the trip; the probable expense at hotels or camps; and numerous side trips.

HEARST PAPERS FORCE NAVAL EFFICIENCY

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The Hearst papers, in advance of other American newspapers, exposed the fact that the American navy was not much more than half-manned.

The Hearst papers made the statement, later so emphatically confirmed, that not a battleship in the great Hudson River display of last October could have gone out to sea to fight without a shortage of from three to five officers and a shortage of from 150 to 300 men.

These newspapers developed the fact that few men were enlisting in the navy and gave the cause for this in the fact that our navy offered so few inducements and attractions for American youths to enlist in that branch of our country's service.

The Hearst papers are now able to give the first exclusive information that these unfavorable conditions are to be changed.

Information comes from the Navy Department that Secretary Daniels has caught the progressive movement urged so long in these newspapers and is going to make the American navy a more attractive and a more profitable place for the American youth who is willing to serve his country and does not desire altogether to forget himself.

Ships as Naval Schools.

The Secretary of the Navy plans that hereafter every battleship and war vessel shall be a naval school—an industrial school—a school of the sciences and incidentally of the arts. When the Secretary's plans are completed there will go out from Annapolis with every naval vessel a corps of trained instructors to teach the sailors and enlisted men. This corps of instructors will be reinforced by the educated officers of each ship.

A battleship will hereafter be no idle place even in peace, and the enlisted man who binds himself to three years in the service of his country's navy can emerge at the end of his service, if he has will and intelligence, with an educational equipment for a profession by which he can sustain himself in the world.

The three-year enlisted man of the navy who will avail himself of these new and admirable advantages can come out a skilled engineer, a navigator, a machinist or any one of a half-dozen skilled professions that point the way to success in life.

Lewis Nixon has said that Annapolis is the best engineering school in the country and its graduates as teachers ought to do great things for the American sailors in three diligent years.

More Frequent Cruises.

The Secretary plans more frequent cruises to foreign ports, so that the education of travel and observation may be added to a sailor's opportunities on shipboard.

And last, but not least, the new Secretary of the Navy expresses the intention with all his influence and authority to insist upon the recognition of the individuality and manhood of individual seamen. An American sailor is promised that hereafter he shall be regarded, not only as a fighting machine, but as a man and treated as one.

This last is in line with the recent movement so ably pressed in the navy by men like Captain Benson and Commander White and other vigorous and progressive officers of the service.

The result of this new and admirable policy will be to fill half-empty lists of the navy and to make it, not a place for young men to bury themselves for three years and come out unfit to make a living, but to be educated in mind, body and spirit by the finest of teachers, and come out in three years as all-round men, equipped in health and courage and manliness and with a practical profession in life.

School for Deserters.

Secretary Daniels further intends to reform the system of punishment for desertions by sending young deserters, first to prison and afterward to the place of reform, but to send each of them first to that notable school at Port Royal, S. C., where they will be built up in character and patriotism and an understanding of a citizen's and a soldier's duty, and if they are docile and receptive to reinstate them in the navy without a prison term.

These are wholesome reforms, and Secretary Daniels is to be congratulated upon the good sense he has manifested in adopting them.

FORTY-SIX MEMBERS ENROLL

First Day's Record in Big Player-Piano Club

THAT the interest in the gigantic Weatherholt Player-Piano Club is widespread was demonstrated yesterday when the membership books were opened. When the store closed for the night, 46 members had been enrolled. At this rate the 400 memberships will be taken before the time limit expires. I am not surprised at this record, for I knew the music-loving public would realize just how remarkable my club offer was. People are realizing that the day of the ordinary piano is rapidly drawing to a close, and that the day of the Player-Piano is at hand. And when I made it possible to secure a $650 Player-Piano for $488.50 on terms of $10.00 down and $2.50 per week, there was a rush to enroll in my great co-operative club.

The club membership is limited to 400 members. I will save each member $334.50. Because of the great purchasing power of the 400 club members, I can offer a magnificent $650 Player-Piano along with $173 worth of club features for $488.50, on terms of $10.00 down and $2.50 per week. In addition to this there is my Free Life Insurance Feature and the Music Exchange Privilege.

Here Are My Club Features:

1 Saving of $161.50
2 One year's trial (exchange privilege)
3 A ten-year guarantee with each piano
4 A Free Life Insurance Feature
5 Terms of payment $2.50 per week (monthly payments may be arranged)
6 A 25c rebate on all weekly payments made before due
7 No interest
8 A two-year conservatory course (regular price $80)
9 A free music exchange library
10 A selected bench to match player and 12 rolls of music

All accompany in writing the sale of every Club Player-Piano

Club Terms: $10 Down, $2.50 Per Week

MY Free Music Exchange Library alone makes the Weatherholt Player-Piano Club attractive. This means that every club member may secure $10.50 worth of Player Music every day if desired. Each member secures free with the player twelve rolls of selected music worth $10.50. I have installed a great library of 5,000 rolls, and members may exchange their music as often as desirable. Many have told me that the cost of Player Music has prevented them from buying Player-Pianos in the past. My free library removes that objection. Sheet music is being replaced to-day just as the Player-Piano is superseding the ordinary piano. That the Player-Piano may make those who do not understand music as proficient as those who do, all my vocal Player Music has the words printed on the roll. Anybody can play. And anybody with a voice may sing. A vocal instructor is constantly before the one operating the Player-Piano. Every direction is given. The result is that the novice can render a song as well as the professional. I have devoted weeks of study to this great co-operative plan. I wanted to offer something which had never before been offered to lovers of music in the South. I know that I have done so.

THIS picture shows one of my demonstrators adjusting a roll of music in a Club Player-Piano. There is nothing about these instruments difficult to understand. They have everything that one has which costs a thousand dollars. I think so much of these Club Player-Pianos that I GUARANTEE THEM FOR TEN YEARS. Every one of these players is equipped with a double accoustic sounding board which produces the quality of tone found in a grand piano.

Our Club Piano
Regular Price . . $375.00
Club Price $267.50
Terms: $5 Cash, $1.25 Per Week

CONDITIONS: No interest, one year's trial and exchange privilege. 15c rebate on payments made before due, free life insurance feature, ten-year guarantee.

All of which accompany in writing the sale of every Club Piano.

Notice to All Owners of Player-Pianos

During our Player Club Membership Campaign, we will extend—without charge—our exchange privilege to any one purchasing 12 rolls of Player Music from us. This gives the purchaser free access to our 5,000-roll library.

I WANT everybody interested in good music to visit our store. I want you to hear some good music—anything you like, from the classics to the latest ragtime. Examine these Club Player-Pianos closely and see how easily you can play anything you like, and play as well as an expert pianist. If you CAN play on the piano, you have two instruments in one—a Piano and a Player-Piano. You may use the piano and those members of your family who can not play can produce music on the Player equal to yours.

The Great End-of-the-Month Sale

This End-of-the-Month Sale Means That Merchandise Is Not Permitted to Grow Old Here. The Clearance Sale Current sweeps out all exhausted assortments each month. Nothing allowed to linger. Hence the stock is always new and fresh.

Sale starts Friday at the opening of the doors; ends Saturday at the tap of the closing bell. "Prizes" to early comers.

All charge purchases made during the sale will be transferred to the June statement. mailed July 1st.

All Our $2 Shower-Proof Foulards at 98c

Silk prices clipped to less than half. 'Tis a fair sample of how we slash prices in the End-of-the-Month Sale. The saving, moreover, is not on stale, worn-out silks, but on the staple, spick and span foulards. Every $2 foulard in stock included; not an inch reserved.

These foulards are all shower-proof. They are 42 inches wide—little is required for a dress. We have sold them freely at their price of $2 a yard. But color exhaustion and broken lines deplete the price—out they go to-morrow at 98c. Included are the staple black, browns, navy and Copenhagen blues and greens. Some in solid colors, some with the floral spaced patterns, some in stripes, some in dots—just a fair assortment of everything that has been "good" this season. Only 98c.

New Silks at Prices to Bid You Pause

Because these are the smart, new, fashionable silks that women will want throughout the summer, for traveling, for mountain and seashore and street wear we stress in big type the little prices at which they are to sell. Look here:

39c
For 59c to 85c Kimono Silks
10 pieces of fine kimono silk. Some solid colors, with borders; others in the floral, Jap or characteristic kimono patterns. About all colors. 22-inch.

$1 Foulards 55c
85c and $1 foulards in about 35 different patterns. All are proof against spottings. Full range of colors.
(Silks, Main Floor—Left Annex)

For $1.00 to $1.25 Silks
Here are soft, shimmery chiffon taffetas to make the smartest of street dresses and suits. Solid colors, and changeables in about every color on the card save black and white. 26-inch. Also handsome messalines in neat stripes and floral patterns—the identical styles that sell readily everywhere at $1 and $1.25. Only 49c.

For Smart $1.50 Silks
These are the handsome Tussah crepe de chines—soft crinkly crepes now so much in favor. We have just eight pieces left in solid color tan, mustard, brown, Nell rose, Copenhagen, rose and taupe. Yard wide. Also at 59c are 24-inch silk serge suitings in solid colors and fancies and fancy silks in rather wide variety of patterns and colors.

For $2.50 to $3.00 Silk Chiffons
Silk voiles and chiffons, loveliest fabrics of the foreign looms. Street and evening shades; some with deep border of charmeuse silk, some with silk stripes, some bestrewn with flowers. The silks such as these are fashionable the year around. 44 inches wide; very little is required for a dress. $2.50 and $3 qualities for 95c.

For $1.50 to $3.00 Silks
Charming Dolly Madison silks now on sale in the best stores at $1.50 a yard. Neat stripes bestrewn with dainty sprays or flowers. Blue, grey, Copenhagen, tan. Also $3 Cloth of Gold silk at 98c. Also $2.25 oyster white pongee. Motor cloth for suits and coats. Yard wide. Also $1.50 light blue silk poplin, 40-inch. Also $3 gold and blue silk changeable serge at 98c.

A "Once-in-a-While" Opportunity to Save Greatly On Your New Suit, Waist, Coat, Skirt or Dress

PERIL IS SEEN IN CITY PLANTS' DEFEAT

Councilmen Declare Atlanta Faces Grave Problem Without Incinerator—Mayor Is Jubilant.

The action of the Supreme Court in declaring the crematory contract illegal Thursday revived the old fight between Mayor Woodward and the Council in all its fury.

Mayor Woodward was jubilant over the decision and declared that he would take the stump in opposition to the approving the contract by the people. He said the court action justified all his opposition to Council's business methods and that he was going to break the moral obligation for the $106,000 fire alarm system, which system is now about half completed.

Predicts Epidemics.

"It is no longer a question of business methods," said Councilman Ashley. "It is a question of life and death. If that crematory is not put into operation so we can burn the garbage of this town the people will be dying like flies by fall.

"I am a poor man, but I will make one of 276 to put up the $276,000 to pay for the plant and bide our time for repayment. I had rather donate the money than to have Atlanta be without a crematory this summer.

"It is all very well to talk about fine distinctions in business methods at the right time. As regards a crematory that time is past. If Mayor Woodward would take my place for a few days and hear the complaints about garbage being dumped all around the city he would want a crematory as quick as possible at any cost.

Face New Conditions.

"I opposed this contract. I voted against tearing down the old crematory. But we are facing new conditions to-day. We used to dump all the garbage in one place outside the city. We were enjoined from that. Since the old crematory was torn down we have been forced to dump it around inside the city. The town is festering with decaying matter. There are more flies right now than I ever saw before. We are threatened with hundreds of injunctions.

"That crematory will be ready to burn garbage in about 30 days. There is fire in two of the furnaces now, drying them out. It is one of the finest garbage destructor plants in this country. Can the question of its relation to the health of this city be compared to any difference over business methods?

"Let's follow the court order and submit the contract to the people. They will approve it five to one."

Work May Continue.

Work may not be stopped at all on the plant, which is being erected on the city's property back of the Terminal Station by the Destructor Company, of New York.

Though the contract is void, Council is determined to pay for the plant. P. D. Canham, in charge of the work, said he would continue unless stopped by a court order.

On account of the vital health question involved an effort will be made to effect a compromise that will allow the plant to be completed, independent of the controversy.

June Budget Friday.

The Council finance committee will meet Friday to make up the June budget. There is $125,000 already in the budget for a payment on the plant. It has suggested that an emergency might be declared and the tax rate increased temporarily so as to pay the whole amount this year. At least the making up of the budget will be held up until the garbage disposition question is decided.

Council and the Board of Health are determined that some arrangement must be reached so the garbage can be burned this summer.

Samuel Evins, of Evins, Spence & Moore, attorneys for the Destructor Company, said he did not know what attitude his client would assume until he had thoroughly studied the decision of the Supreme Court. Also City Attorney James L. Mayson said he would not express any opinion until he had carefully read the ruling.

Victory for Mayor.

Regardless of its other significance, the decision of the court is a great victory for Mayor Woodward. Before he went into office he attacked the plant as costing too much and, after he had been overridden at every turn by Council, some of his staunch friends led by Attorney C. P. Goree, asked for an injunction against the contract. This injunction was refused by Judge George Bell, of the Superior Court. The decision of the Supreme Court was on the appeal of this case.

Estimates for payment of $120,000 worth of work have been approved by the city engineers, but Mayor Woodward has firmly refused to sign any checks to the Destructor Company.

When he heard the news of the court's action he hurried to the City Hall Wednesday afternoon and joked a number of members of Council who had been active in overriding him, whom he found attending a committee meeting.

"If I have the authority I intend to make the men who voted to tear down the old crematory pay for it," he said. "I warned you at the time that this contract was illegal, and if the old crematory was torn down there would be no way to burn garbage this summer."

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"St. Elmo" at the Atlanta.

"St. Elmo" has made a hit through the excellence of its presentation at the Atlanta Theater this week. It will remain every night with another matinee on Saturday. The play has pleased as nothing else has in the past and is showing its popularity by attracting big crowds to the playhouse. Miss Long and Mr. Vail are very convincing in their parts and easily surpass their previous efforts in the play. "St. Elmo" was produced at the request of the majority of patrons and is proving its worth.

Excellent Bill at Forsyth.

Patrons of the cozy Forsyth Theater are pleased with the excellent bill of Keith vaudeville which the management is presenting this week. Maggie Cline, "the Irish Queen," is the headliner and has scored a pronounced hit. The Great Howard, the ventriloquist, is also a great favorite. Caesare Nesi, the singer, and Madden and Fitzpatrick, in a comedy sketch, have scored successfully. It is a bill of real variety.

Tabloid Bill Is Popular.

Tabloid musical comedy as presented at the Bijou this week has found great favor at the hands of patrons of that play house. The bill is Joseph E. Howard's "The District Leader," and the offering is given in splendid fashion. There are pretty girls, tuneful music and delightful dances. The bill next week will be "The College Girls."

TALLULAH FALLS SUIT IS ARGUED BY COUNSEL

Verdict in Power Company Land Case Expected Thursday Afternoon at Clayton.

CLAYTON, GA., May 29.—The suit of the State of Georgia against the Georgia Railway and Power Company to determine ownership of the gorge at Tallulah Falls will reach the jury early this afternoon and a verdict is expected before night.

Argument, which began yesterday afternoon and continued for 3 1-2 hours until court adjourned for the day, was resumed when court reconvened this morning, with 4 1-2 hours of time allotted the lawyers to be consumed.

Edgar Watkins, of Atlanta, opened for the State, being followed by Alex King, of Atlanta, for the power company, who in turn was followed by W. S. Paris, of Clayton, for the State. He was the last speaker yesterday. This morning H. H. Dean, of Gainesville, was the first speaker, representing the power company. The others in turn were R. C. Ellis, of Tifton, for the State; Luther Z. Rosser, of Atlanta, for the power company, and Attorney General T. S. Felder, closing for the State.

Mr. King brought a trunk full of law books from Atlanta and he quoted at length from these in support of the power company's contentions that it has clear titles to the Tallulah Falls gorge lands. Lawyers for both sides referred frequently and in detail to the surveys and plats filed as exhibits to the testimony of Professor Strong and Koch, of the University of Georgia, who made surveys of the gorge for the State. The documentary evidence of deeds, land grants and other old papers bearing on the titles to these lands were stressed by the attorneys in support of their respective contentions.

Judge J. B. Jones, in his charge to the jury, will review much of this evidence and instruct the jurors on the law involved. It is thought the jury will remain out but a short time.

POWERS TO HALT NEW WAR MOVE IN BALKANS

Servia Remobilizes Troops in Preparation for Clash With Bulgaria.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SALONIKA, May 29.—The entire Turkish population in the village of Hadji was massacred by Bulgarian troops, according to a dispatch received here to-day.

LONDON, May 29.—The powers of Europe have begun to bring pressure upon Bulgaria, Servia and Greece to prevent a fresh conflict in the Balkans.

The Ambassadors believe that if the Balkan states and Greece can be held in accord until the protocol of a peace treaty with Turkey is signed that the issues causing dissension among the states of the Balkan Confederation can be settled by arbitration to the satisfaction of all.

Sir Edward Grey, British Foreign Minister, said to-day that he expects all the Balkan peace envoys to sign the preliminary draft of a Turco-Balkan treaty to-morrow.

Servia Prepares To Fight Bulgaria.

VIENNA, May 29.—Servia has begun the remobilization of her reservists on account of the critical relations with Bulgaria.

A telegram from Sofia says that Bulgaria is on the point of breaking off all diplomatic relations with Servia because of the unsatisfactory character of a statement made yesterday by Premier Pastich of Servia setting forth Servia's attitude in the Balkan crisis.

Premier Venizelos of Greece is expected to arrive in Sofia either to-night or to-morrow and will at once enter into negotiations with Czar Ferdinand in an effort to effect a conciliatory settlement.

France to Cut Duty On Horses for Food

PARIS, May 29.—With a view to reducing the cost of living the Chamber voted to-day to reduce the import duty on horses intended for slaughter from $30 to $10. A rebate will be granted on the production of a certificate that they have been killed for food.

There are in France 700 places where horses are slaughtered. Paris consumed 60,000 in 1911, valued at $40 to $50. Horse meat sells at 3 1-2 cents a pound.

Settle Quarrel With Duel by Avalanche

GENEVA, May 29.—A duel by avalanche was the method chosen by two rivals for the hand of an Italian girl.

To settle their claims the men, who live below Mont Blanc, decided to stand for several hours every day in the path usually followed by avalanches on the mountain side until one of them was swept to death.

Makes Will, Then Fights Fatal Duel

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., May 29.—Joseph Stoughton, a hotel proprietor of Lexington, Ill., is dying to-day following a revolver duel with Grant Preble, an automobile dealer, of the same town. Preble is severely wounded and physicians to-day said he might die.

The duel occurred on the streets a few minutes after Stoughton had made a will leaving his property to his wife.

Beggar, With $1,000 Jewels, Arrested

MACON, GA., May 29.—Although he was arrested for begging on the streets, J. W. Hill, alias J. W. Greer, who says Fort Worth, Texas, is his home, had diamonds worth $750, two watches, each valued at $50, other jewelry worth $100, and $80 in money on his person when searched at police headquarters.

He paid a nominal fine for violating a city ordinance in soliciting alms.

T. R. KEEPS 'REAL GENTLEMAN'S' WINE CELLAR

Son of Colonel's Cousin, Ex-President's "Pal," So Testifies at Libel Suit Hearing.

MARQUETTE, MICH., May 29.—Testimony of Phillip James Roosevelt, son of a cousin of the former President, that Colonel Roosevelt kept a "regular gentleman's wine cellar" at his home in Oyster Bay was the feature of this morning's session of the trial of Colonel Roosevelt's suit for $10,000 libel for charges made in an editorial by George W. Newett, editor of The Ishpeming Iro Ore, that Roosevelt "was drunk, not infrequently."

The younger Roosevelt followed Charles Thompson, a New York newspaper man; Andrew Abele, former locomotive engineer of Ashtabula, Ohio, and A. Z. Blair, an attorney of Portsmouth, Ohio, all of whom bore witness to the former President's sobriety during trips when they accompanied him.

Calls Colonel Abstemious.

After stating he lived near the former President's home at Oyster Bay, ond that he was the colonel's daily companion when the latter was at Oyster Bay, Phillip Roosevelt testified he never had seen the colonel drink other than at meals and then only white wine and occasionally a glass of champagne. He also declared that the limit of his indulgence on the last Presidential campaign was a spoonful of brandy in a glass of milk, and denied indignantly that he ever had seen the colonel drunk.

"Does Roosevelt keep wines and liquors in his home?" was the first question of Attorney Andrews for the defense.

"Yes," was the answer.

Q. A collection of liquors?—A. A regular gentleman's cellar.

Q. Scotch whisky?—A. I never saw it, but I supposed it was there.

Q. White wine?—A. Yes.

Q. Champagne?—A. Yes.

Q. Brandy?—A. I presume it was there.

Story Prepared in Advance.

Q. How long have you been a newspaper man?—A. Since March, 1913.

Q. Are you doing newspaper work here?—A. My pay is going on.

Q. Are you acting for your paper?—A. I am sending out stories.

Q. Did you write up and send out Colonel Roosevelt's testimony before it was given?—A. No.

Q. Was it written up before it was delivered?—A. Yes.

Q. And sent out by any person?—A. The Colonel prepared a statement embodying the substance of his testimony and I presume it was sent out.

Q. And it was printed in New York before the Colonel went on the stand?

On objection, the court refused to permit a reply. On redirect examination the witness said liquor was never pressed on guests at Roosevelt's home.

Court was adjourned until 2 o'clock after Andrews had testified he never saw Roosevelt drink spirituous liquors during the campaign in Cuba fifteen years ago.

Newett Ready to Testify.

George W. Newett, defendant in the suit, was prepared to take the stand to-day in his own defense to tell the sources of the information on which he based his charges of drunkenness and profanity.

A trip made by Newett to Florida, during which he met a number of prominent persons who are alleged to have spoken of Roosevelt's alleged over-indulgence in liquor, and similar statements made to him by persons in Michigan, will form the basis of his testimony.

Newett will also tell of various articles which he saw in newspapers and magazines which influenced him to write the editorial now in question.

The Ishpeming editor has not been well for some months, and as soon as the present case is ended he will go to a hospital for an operation.

The Colonel to-day declined an invitation to address the Marquette G. A. R. on Memorial Day.

Watterson Calls T. R. Suit "A Fool's Errand."

LOUISVILLE, KY., May 29.—In a long editorial "Upon Getting Drunk," Henry Watterson makes the following remarks on the Roosevelt trial in The Louisville Courier-Journal:

History and literature are so studded with the hobnails of vinous hilarity, all the way from Noah and onward, through eons of notable persons who are not commonly represented as examples of strict sobriety, that it would seem a much ado about nothing in Colonel Roosevelt to seek to fix by legal inquiry and affirmation the various kinds of intoxicants he has never used and which he actually detests and the precise number of drinks he has not had for breakfast.

With what purpose is his proceeding and to what end?

Whether he drinks wine, or beer, or cocktails, or mint juleps, or does not drink at all, may be said in a sense to be nobody's business but his own; assuredly no one is concerned but the immediate circle about him.

Surely a man who has lived in the world three and fifty years, in the limelight thirty of them, the head of a happy and prosperous household, a good husband and father, a prodigiously hard worker, could afford to let tongues wag as they will about his exits and his entrances, his food and his drink and his intimate personality.

It must be to most self-respecting Americans a humiliation to have the most world-famous of their living countrymen, an ex-President of the United States, engaged in what appears so trivial and needless a task as that which has taken him to the Michigan village. It seems a kind of fool's errand. It will change no man's opinion, certainly not the opinion of just and thoughful men.

NEW YORK, May 29.—After three years of nearly continuous warfare, during which 25 persons were killed, a treaty of peace was signed to-day in the chambers of Judge Foster between the heads of the tongs in Chinatown.

NEW YORK SOCIETY AT DIVORCE TRIAL

NEW YORK, May 29.—Seats were at a premium in Justice Goff's Court to-day when the divorce action of Mrs. Abigail Hancock Bishop against her millionaire husband, James C. Bishop, was continued.

Fashionably-gowned women who had driven up in luxurious limousines attended by servants took part in the scramble for seats. The court room was gay with the bright color of Parisian gowns. A battery of lorgnettes swept the room.

Gertrude Gerard, a maid at the Hotel Astor, was called to the stand to resume her story. Previously she had identified a photo of Mrs. J. Temple Gwathmey, wife of a former president of the New York Cotton Exchange, as the woman whom she saw with Mr. Bishop, or a man closely resembling him, in a suite there. The woman, the maid swore, wore a nightgown. The man was attired in a sky blue bath robe.

Hempel Says We Are Warm-Hearted

BERLIN, May 29.—Frieda Hempel, the Berlin prima donna, who has just returned after her first season at the New York Metropolitan Opera, declares that the Americans are really warm-hearted, contrary to the prevailing German conception of them as a race unsentimental as fish.

The love of Americans for their dogs and other animals convinces Fraulein Hempel that there are no more "spiritual" people in the world.

"Georgia-Manufactured" Goods Shown at Convention of Dealers at Auditorium-Armory.

The Georgia Retail Hardware Merchants' Association got down to active business Thursday morning, when the third session of their convention opened at the Auditorium. Several important committee reports, comprising recommendations on the future policy of the association, are to be presented to the convention at Thursday's sessions.

Reports of the secretary, John L. Moore, of Madison, Ga., and several minor committees, already submitted, show the association to be in a prosperous condition and gaining steadily in membership and influence.

Wilmer L. Moore, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, welcomed the hardware men on behalf of commercial Atlanta at the opening session Wednesday, and Mayor James G. Woodward gave the official greetings of the city government. P. S. Twitty, of Dublin, one of the leading members of the association, responded to Mayor Woodward's address. Others who spoke were R. W. Hatcher, Milledgeville; G. W. Woodruff, Winder; C. B. Thomas, Griffin; J. R. Hall, Moultrie; W. G. Raines, Statesboro.

On Wednesday evening the visitors were the guests of Atlanta wholesale and retail hardware men at the Forsyth Theater.

TWO NEWS ITEMS

INDIVIDUAL TRUSTEE DISSIPATES ESTATE

Georgia newspapers the other day gave an account of the dissipation of an estate which left a young lady penniless. The father, who had a comfortable business in a Georgia city, died several years ago, leaving his only child, a daughter, an estate of $35,000. A man, a friend of the family, who was then considered honest and capable, was appointed trustee for the daughter's property. On coming of age she called upon him for an accounting and delivery of her inheritance and HE IMMEDIATELY DISAPPEARED. He is still among the "missing," and THE YOUNG LADY'S INHERITANCE IS GONE.

TRUST COMPANY OF GA. DOUBLES THIS ESTATE

The other news item, not heretofore published, relates to an Atlanta lady who died, leaving an only child, a son of ten years. SHE HAD WISELY MADE A WILL IN WHICH THE TRUST COMPANY OF GEORGIA was appointed EXECUTOR and GUARDIAN of the property of her son. From his inheritance, which was officially appraised at $16,500, the boy was supported comfortably and given a college education. When he reached his majority, less than a month ago, the TRUST COMPANY OF GEORGIA, his Guardian, turned over to him property appraised at $31,345, thus, with his maintenance, more than doubling the estate.

TRUST COMPANY OF GEORGIA
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS $1,800,000

Stronger and more experienced than ever, offers its services to OTHER MOTHERS AND FATHERS, with the positive assurance that THEIR CHILDREN'S INHERITANCES, if left in its hands, will be FAITHFULLY AND CONSCIENTIOUSLY GUARDED, the expense being the same as allowed by law to individual executors and guardians.

A Duty to Look Well

By Virginia T. Van De Water.

A WOMAN was running a piece of pink ribbon into a dainty undervaist. Her small son, aged six, stood watching her. At last he spoke out his thought—

"Mama, why do you put ribbon in that thing?"

"To draw it up on the shoulders and fasten it with," was the smiling explanation.

"Wouldn't a piece of twine do as well?" queried the lad soberly.

The mother paused a moment, concealing the amusement she felt. Then she spoke gravely and frankly.

"No, dear," she said, "twine might fasten it, but it would not do as well, for it is not as pretty as ribbon."

A Real Duty.

A man might have considered that reply evidence of a feminine lack of logic. To the woman who thinks long it held a truth that it is well to consider. When, without sacrifice of principle or duty, one can make of a practical thing also a pretty thing, it is a mistake—almost a wrong—not to do it.

The small boy, as he grew older, learned to admire the dainty, delicate touches in his mother's apparel. "My mother always looks nice," he used to say when the matter of woman's appearance was discussed.

I know one woman who seems to think that she does God service in looking as plain as possible. She is scrupulously neat in appearance, but her mental attitude reminds one of the small boy's question: "Wouldn't a piece of twine do as well?" All the appointments of her home are plain and substantial, bought—like Mrs. Primrose's wedding dress—with a thought of durability rather than of beauty. She scorns fine china, and considers cut glass a useless folly of the rich. As to solid silver, why should one use it when plated ware carries the food to one's mouth just as effectually?

Of course, she has a scorn of all "modern notions," such as centerpieces, doilies and "place-plates." "Useless nuisances," she says sententiously. I often wonder how her children ar going to regard the home of their childhood when they go out into the world and see the dainty accessories of dress and furnishings which are unknown in their family and household. Fortunately this woman is the exception, not the rule, of her sex when she declares: "It is a mark of weakness to spend time on ornamentation and convention."

Don't Look Homely!

Were we all to adopt this principle through life how many hard and ugly corners there would be, corners that are now rounded or hidden!

To look as homely as one can is no more a virtue than to be as frankly disagreeable as one sometimes feels like being. Few of us can be handsome, but we need not elect to be positively ugly—if we can help it. In fact to mitigate the bad points in our personal appearance and to emphasize the good ones is an actual duty.

Perhaps some one asks to whom one owes this duty. The answer is plain. One owes it to the world at large, but, primarily, to one's own family. Surely it is the business of both man and woman to look as well as he and she can.

It is not always convenient to fuss over one's personal appearance when the mercury climbs up toward the hundred mark, but when one acquires the habit of invariably looking as well as is conformable with one's other duties, one will not be satisfied to wear a dark calico wrapper instead of a dainty and equally cool negligee—even for "home people" only.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

Tom found Jennie a little crumpled heap on the sofa.

AS THE MAN held Jennie tight in his arms, kissing her—she at last realized his intentions and could THEN see clearly the meaning of the dinner in the swell restaurant and the auto ride into the country. Jennie fought and struck the man in the face as hard as she could—whereupon the former "so polite and fatherly" MAN turned into the beast he was at heart—held her tight against the wall choking her. When he realized there was nothing to be gained that way he tried to treat the whole thing as a joke. Jennie watched her chance and did more THINKING in the next few seconds than she has ever taken the TROUBLE to do before. THE MAN told her the proprietor of the place was a friend of his and it would be of no use for her to make a scene, for she couldn't leave the place until he got good and ready for her to leave. Then he offered her fine dresses, diamonds, anything she wanted—so why not be a "good fellow."

THE MAN was between Jennie and the door and she saw it was useless to try and get out that way—the window opened out onto a porch and before the man could get around the table to catch her, she was through it and running up the road for her life. She ran and ran, dodging off the road into some woods. The branches tore her face and dress but she kept on till she could run no more. She sat down on an old log and listened but could hear no one following. There she sat in her little torn dress shaking and crying until she realized it was getting dark. She wandered on through the woods and came to a farm house where she found an old lady who, after hearing her story, loaned her enough money for the railroad fare home.

Tom came over to her house that evening after wondering all day where she could have gone and found Jennie a little crumpled heap on the front room sofa.

"Oh! indeed! He is well off?" went on the stern inquisitor.

"He has some money, I suppose," said the girl dully. How long was this to continue?

"How much, do you suppose?" There was cutting sarcasm in the tone.

A little flicker of mischief lit Charlotte's eyes. Why, if this was a game after all, she would play it high—spiritedly—she would win. "As much as YOU have—I suppose!"

"You are sanguine, I think, Fraulein Charlotte. Is his family as much respected as OURS?" Solomon admired a WORTHY antagonist—even though that antagonist might be his daughter!

"All's Well."

"Just as much," said demure Charlotte. She dared now to raise her eyes—to look at Jacob—whose face was lit now by a smile of component parts of amusement and eagerness.

"A Jew?"

"Yes."

"Of course. Tell me; my child. Tell me. On this much I must insist." Charlotte hesitated in lovely confusion. "Tell me—my child, tell your father."

Blushing, trembling—radiant, and yet frightened now that her moment had come—Charlotte laid her little white hands on her father's strong shoulders, and turned him gently toward the window where Jacob stood. "There—he is there."

But now Jacob's hour had come—love must have its way. All in one pulsing moment, he had crossed the room, and Charlotte was caught in hungry arms. "Charlotte—my little Charlotte. Come." And Old Sol, beaming joyously through the rose arbor, was Love's only confidant, as the boy and girl fled to the great outdoors—mother Nature—with their precious joy.

Solomon laughed. "Magnificent! So I have worked and calculated and spent my money—for my nephew!"

Frau Gudula lived again in one brief moment her own love dream. "And those two have made their Lover's Lane out of their Grannie's old Jew's Alley! Yes, it is magnificent!"

From under the table the old Frau drew a battered little low stool. She smiled—but there was the pathos of the very old—whose race is nearly run in her gentle tone, "Come and sit here, Solomon, my son. Sit here as you used to in the dear long ago when you were a child—and your dear father was with me—instead of calling me from far away. What does it matter, my son, if they are happy? Not in your way, perhaps, but in hers your little Charlotte is happy—our little Jacob and Charlotte are happy. Happy, my son. All our money could not buy a better thing than that. Cannot YOU be content?"

Solomon looked out beyond the open door—out on the rose-hung terrace where young love had come at last into its own. Perhaps it was his mother's gentle tones, perhaps it was his daughter's glorified face, perhaps it was the memory of Charlotte's mother—the wife who had been his only love—three generations of loving women seeking the way to Solomon's heart, and Solomon's heart knew youth and love again.

"Yes, mother—dear, I am content." And in the Garden of Cupid at Neustadt Castle, and in the rose arbor of Jew's Lane, there was peace—for in the hearts of the royal cousins of Taunus, and in the home of the Five Frankforters, love had come into his kingdom.

THE END.

Unexpected Result.

Here is an emigration story told at a meeting recently. In a village was a youth who had got himself into such a variety of scrapes that his people thought it would be better to dispatch him to Canada, so as to get him away from old and doubtful associations. He agreed to go, provided those interested in his departure secured him some testimonials. Half a dozen were got for him. They sang his praises in unrestrained terms, spoke of his geniality, of his good address and exceptional capability, and all the other virtues that few men have, but many get the credit for.

When the young man read the testimonials he turned to his father and exclaimed:

"Well, I'm hanged! I had no idea people thought so much of me. And now I know how much they like me I'm blowed if I'll go away at all."

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS.

Gordon Kelly, a young North Georgia mountaineer, comes to Atlanta to get a place with Billy Smith's Crackers. It is raining when he reaches Ponce DeLeon and he is nearly run over by an auto, in which are two persons—a man and a young girl. The driver of the car is an arrogant fellow. The girl makes him stop the machine. She gets out and inquires if Kelly is injured. She apologizes for her companion's brusque manner. Kelly sees Manager Smith and tells him he has never played a game of ball. Smith consents to give Kelly a trial. The girl in the auto is Mildred Deery, daughter of Galen Deery, a crafty and wealthy speculator in timber lands. Her companion is Forrest Cain, a rich young man about town. Kelly owns timber land that Deery would like to possess. Kelly is invited to the Deery home, where he is introduced to Mildred. Cain hears Mildred order an auto to take her guest to his hotel. He takes the driver's place and carries Kelly out into the woods. Kelly thrashes Cain. Manager Smith tells the newspapers about his new find and the reporters print all sorts of "joshing" stories about Kelly.

Now go on with the story.

From that time on Long Tom didn't give Kelly an easy fly to catch. He purposely batted the ball so that if the recruit got to it at all it would be at least a hard catch. The result was one of the most wonderful exhibitions of ground covering by an outfielder ever seen on a ball field. Finally Smith called a halt by declaring morning practice at an end.

The players went at once to the clubhouse to take off their uniforms, stand under a shower bath and dress themselves for the street. The clubhouse became at once a very lively place. Each player was assigned a locker for uniforms, clothes and personal belongings. In front of these lockers were short benches, placed there for the use of the players while dressing or undressing.

It so happened that Long Tom Morrissey and Gordon Kelly had adjoining lockers and therefore sat side by side as they started to undress. The other players were busy with their own affairs and did not notice the other two until suddenly they heard Kelly cry:

"You can't call me that, Morrissey."

All hands turned in the direction of the voice just in time to see Long Tom draw back and slap Kelly in standing up. The two men were now staning up. Their shoes were off and they were stripped to the waist. The next instant there was a furious mixup. Benches were overturned as the tall, gaunt veteran swayed in the embrace of the tall, lithe youngster.

It was all over in half a minute. At the end of that time Morrisey lay, an inert mass, in a corner of the clubhouse, where he had fallen with a loud crash. Ball players do not interfere with clubhouse fights. Even a manager will not interfere. If there are grudges to be settled it is best to have them settled and be done with them. That is the philosophy of the clubhouse. Players see to it that there is fair play. That is all.

"Call It Square."

No one knew what passed between the two men that led up to the encounter. After the brief battle, Kelly replaced his overturned bench as though nothing had happened, and quickly removing the rest of his clothing stepped under the shower in an adjoining room. The other players went to the assistance of Long Tom, who showed signs of life about this time. They raised the veteran to his feet. Morrissey blinked for awhile and then a grin bespread his features. His left cheek was cut and bleeding.

"The kid is all right," he exclaimed heartily. "My nerve was better than my judgment, that's all."

He, too quickly pulled off his clothes and stepping out of the room, turned on the shower next the one where Kelly was standing. With the water pouring down his body in streams he reached out his hand to the young man.

"My fault, kid. I apologize. Call it square?"

Gordon Kelly grasped the outstretched hand.

"Certainly I will," he said, with a rare smile.

Kelly dressed himself rapidly and was the first to leave the clubhouse. The others followed singly and in pairs. Long Tom Morrissey and Bill Smith were the last to go.

"Did that guy tell you he never played a game of ball?" demanded the veteran backstop of his manager, as he slipped the key of his locker in his pocket.

"That's what he said" replied Smith.

"And never played a game of ball?"

"That's what he said."

"Billy, he's kiddin' you. Why, he even fights like a ball player," declared Long Tom, with a grin. He started to leave the clubhouse when his manager called him back.

"Want to change your locker?" asked Smith.

"Me? What for?" demanded Morrissey in surprise.

"You're right next to the kid and I thought on account of—"

"That's where I want to be; right next to the kid," Long Tom broke in. "He's my pal, Billy."

CHAPTER XII.

AS Gordon Kelly hurried out of the clubhouse he asked himself this question: "Is the game worth the candle?" and on his way down town he had a chance to study the question and answer it to his own satisfaction.

Within the past few hours he had, first, been more or less ridiculed in the newspapers and, second, he had engaged in a clubhouse fight with another ball player. That, he figured, was a pretty strenuous way for a novice like himself to begin a baseball career. Would every day have its bad features as this day had? Would it not be best for him to quit the game right now? How about going to Manager Smith and thanking him for his kindness, but telling him at the same time he had decided to call it all off.

Greeted by Mildred.

Ruminating further on the subject he came to the conclusion that the newspapers were right. The reporters were perfectly justified in refusing to laud him to the skies before he had demonstrated his ability. There was nothing really objectionable in what they had said about him. He confessed to himself that what they had published was largely true and they had written their articles in a humorous vein which was well within their rights under the circumstances. No, he had no fault to find with the newspapers.

But how about that clubhouse fight? Well, that was a thing of the past. Long Tom had apologized, he had accepted the apology and he believed they would be friends from now on. Then why quit? Wouldn't that make him more ridiculous than ever? Besides he didn't like the sound of the word. No, he wouldn't quit. He would stick it out—do the best he could and trust to luck and Providence.

Glancing out of the car window at this stage of his meditations, Kelly beheld Miss Deery seated at the wheel of an automobile of which she was the sole occupant. There was a temporary blockade and Kelly seized the opportunity to jump off the street car and hurry around to where Miss Deery's machine was packed in with several others, waiting for the jam to clear itself. He raised his hat.

"How do you do?" smiled Mildred pleasantly. "Jump in and I'll drive you home; or, better still, come to my house and have luncheon with me."

"Is that where you are headed for?" inquired Gordon, stepping into the car and seating himself beside the young woman.

"I don't seem to be headed for anywhere in this blockade. Ah, here we are," and the car moved slowly forward. "Well, what is your lordship's pleasure?"

"You are very kind, but before giving an answer I have a counter proposition to make."

The nature of which is,"

"Judge Barbee kindly sent me a card to his club and he wrote me there was a ladies' dining room there. The card is only good for two weeks and I would like to make use of it. Won't you take lunch with me there?"

"That would be simply fine. But we'll have to go home anyway, because I have to prink up a little bit," said Mildred, with an arch look.

"I think you are very charming as you are," remarked Gordon.

Mildrel laughed gaily.

"Mr. Kelly, you told me you lived all your life in the mountains and have only been in Atlanta a week. You are certainly learning fast. Who's your teacher?"

"You are the only girl I know in Atlanta, Miss Deery."

"As you know how to say nice things I'll take that as a compliment."

They were soon at the Deery residence, and leaving him in the big comfortable living room to amuse himself Mildred ran upstairs. Contrary to the assertions of humorists, she was back again inside of ten minutes, with a complete change of costume, and if she was charming before, she was bewitching now. Gordon offered to drive the car, and with the smiling comment that he seemed to have many accomplishments for a mountaineer, Mildred arranged herself beside him. Ten minutes later they were at the club and seated at a table. When the waiter had taken their order, Gordon asked, seriously:

"Have you ever seen a game of baseball, Miss Deery?"

"Of course I have. I've seen Georgia and Tech play half a dozen times. And I saw Harvard and Yale play on the Polo Grounds, New York, too."

"Which side won?"

"I've forgotten. I went with a party of friends, some of whom wanted Yale to win and the others wanted Harvard to win. I got all mixed up in the excitement."

"Did you ever see a professional game of baseball here in Atlanta, at Ponce DeLeon Park?

"No, I never did. Why this cross-examination, Mr. Kelly?"

"That's very nice of you, I rather like baseball: I'll say that."

The talk went on. Gordon Kelly was becoming very much interested in Mildred Deery: to such an extent that he was anxious to learn what her opinions were in regard to professional ball players. Yet he was afraid to ask the direct question. He beat around the bush for a while and then changed the subject, without getting the information he desired and without suspecting why he asked the questions.

FREE, NEXT SUNDAY.

The American Sunday Monthly Magazine, containing the first chapters of Jack London's new story, is GIVEN FREE with every copy of the next Sunday American.

YOU read the first nine installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read this tenth installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

The recent patent issued on this NOISELESS PORCH SWING HOOK secures and protects a fortune for the person that puts this badly needed and universally used article on the market. The inventor (an Atlanta man) will sell all or part interest.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

FOR HER SAKE, DO.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am twenty, and deeply in love with a girl of eighteen. She told me she loved me, and I love her, too, but some way I doubt her love. The other evening she attended a dance with a friend of mine after I asked her not to go. E. S. B.

Your attitude is one of fault-finding, and I not sure that the giving of your love to a woman means her happiness.

She says she loves you. Be grateful for that much and don't attempt to control her as if she were a child. If you can not be that generous, it will be a kindness to her to transfer your affections.

DON'T GO TO EXTREMES.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am a girl 20 years old. A few young men would like to keep steady company with me but I always refuse because I do not seem to care for them much. Do you think I should accept just the same? I am so lonesome because I am always home, while the other girls have a good time.
LONESOME.

Unless these men are objectionable to you, you must accept an occasional invitation, for it may be the means of meeting the man you will some day love. Don't get into the habit of isolation and consequent lonesomeness. It will grow on you.

FORGET YOURSELF.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am a young man of twenty and have been keeping company with a young lady for the past six months. I love this young lady very much and would be thankful for your advice on how to win her. R. M.

Forget yourself in an effort to make her happy. Be considerate, agreeable, persistent; let her know you love her and are willing to devote your life to her.

Household Suggestions

Moths can be kept away from furs or clothes by putting a piece of linen damped in turpentine in drawers or wardrobes. This should be renewed once or twice during the year. Moths will never attack carpets and curtains which have been well sprinkled with salt.

A small box of brickdust with a cork in it kept at the side of the sink will be found most useful for taking stains from knives, cups and all kinds of china and enamel ware. If at hand at washing-up time it saves many an after cleaning.

A good cleaning paste for enameled baths, zinc pails, etc., is made of equal parts of shaved yellow soap, whiting and common soda, dissolved over the fire in the least possible amount of water required to keep it from burning.

To hang pictures on a plastered wall try dipping the nail into cold water before driving it into the wall. It will bite into the plaster if this is done, and will hold a heavy weight without loosening.

Silencing the Philosopher.

"Yes," remarked the philosopher; "deafness is indeed a terrible affliction. But in such cases nature, you know, always provides some compensation. At any rate, if a man is deficient in one sense, he usually has another abnormally developed. Now, I once knew a poor blind fellow whose sense of touch was positively uncanny. Really, it served him almost as well as eyes do a normal man."

"Sure," said the genial Irishman, who hitherto had taken no part in the discussion, "an' I've noticed that, too! There's a friend of mine, he's lame, poor chap, but he can get about almost as easily as you or I. True, one of his legs is short, but the other makes up for it by being three inches longer!"

SUMMER FARES.
Lake, Mountain and Seashore Resorts.

Daily on and after May 15 the Central of Georgia Railway will have on sale at its principal ticket offices round trip tickets at reduced fares to summer resorts in the North, South, East and West, and to New York, Boston, Baltimore and Philadelphia via Savannah and steamships. A Popular Song

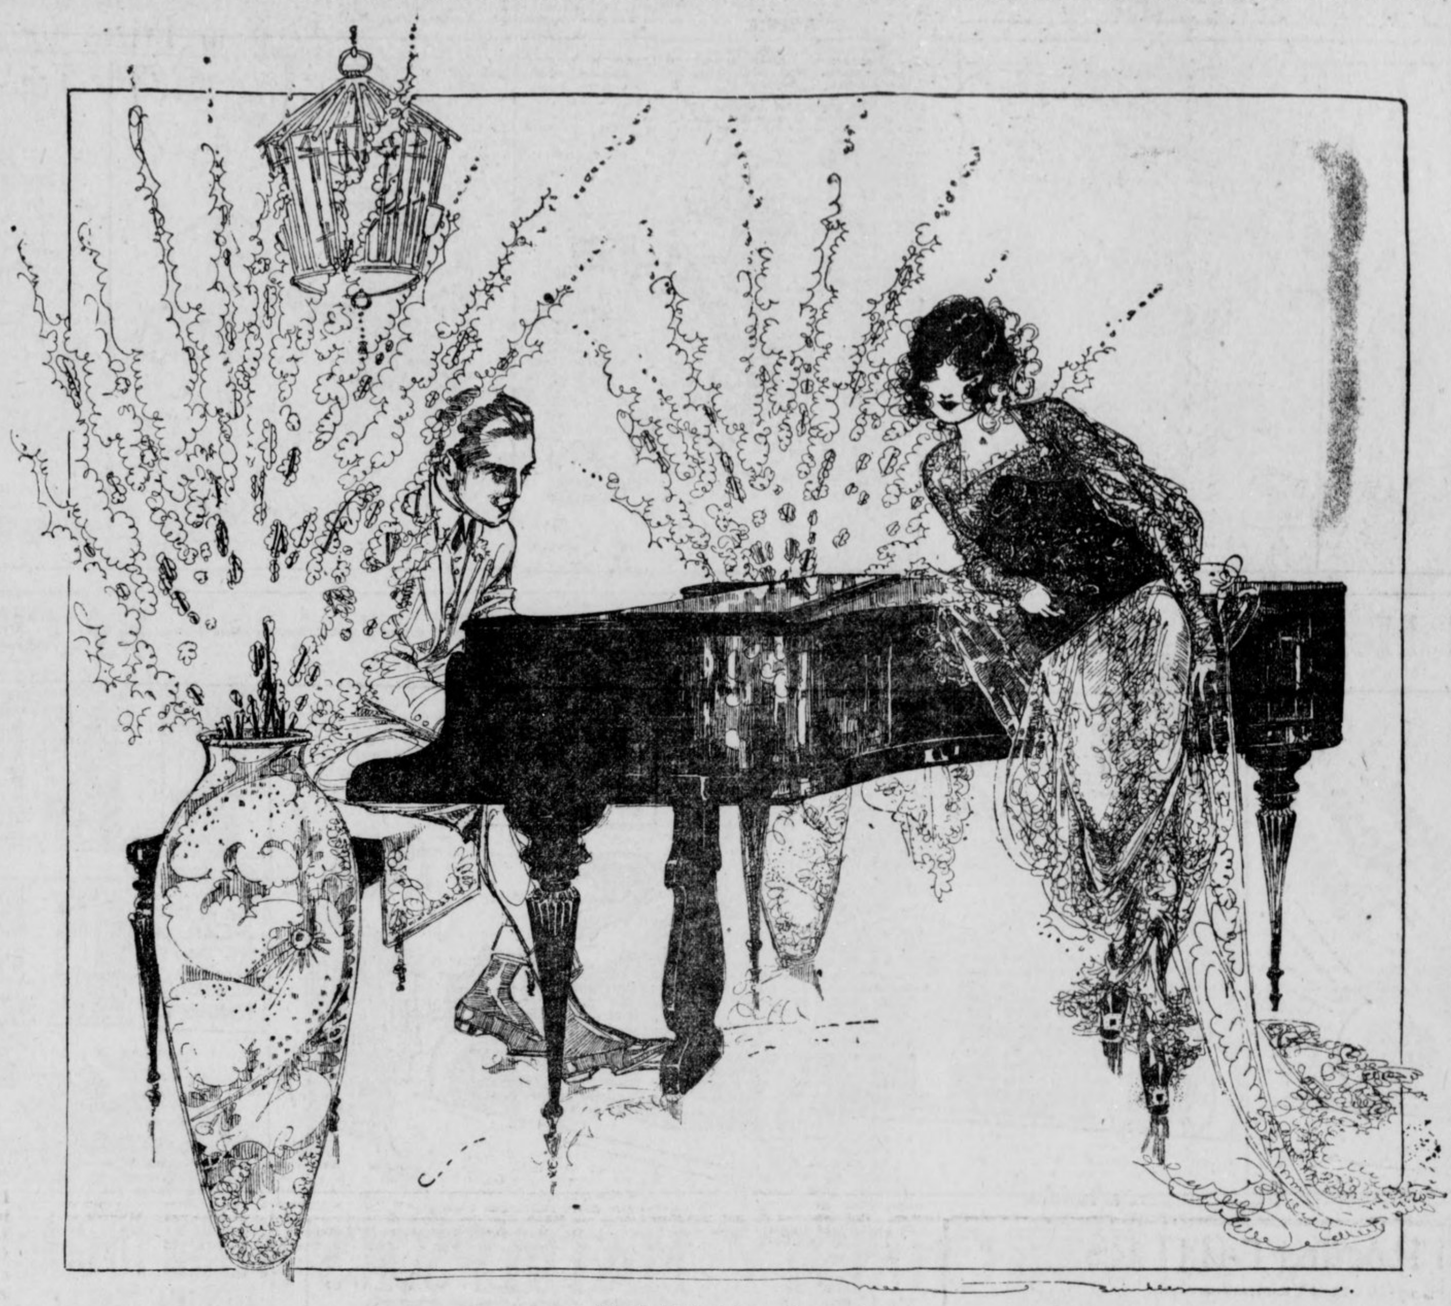
BY NELL BRINKLEY



Nell Brinkley Says

THEY call it "I LOVE YOU." The Kings of Babylon and the slaves by the river sang it with equal fervor. In faeryland they know it. Adam brought it home to Eve and sang it tirelessly. On the plaintive "ukulele" of soft-aired Hawaii they have played it since the isles were born. Steel and iron clad men of the rough days of chivalry caroled it to the maids they met from the broad backs of their dray horses. Cleopatra whined it in her honey-sweet voice to dull-witted Antony. In the backwoods of Tennessee they know it. In the gray, melancholy uplands of wild Thibet rough-haired youths whisper it to bead-strung slant eyed girls. In the hidden corner of the music room, screened in spikes of fruit blossoms, a smart young chap hums it to a girl who never twisted up her own hair in her life, and out in the country, in an orchard, on the top rail of a gray old worm fence, a boy in a blue "jumper" chants it to a girl in a pink sunbonnet shading her sun-browned cheeks. Oh, it's a popular song—everybody knows it and everybody always did know it.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THARE was two ladies up to the house last nite. Both of them has daughters wich is jest going to git married & that maiks them feel kind of love sick themselfs, I guess, beekaus that is all that thay did all the time thay was to the house, talk about love. Pa dident like it a bit, beekaus both of the ladies was oalder than he is, & I have offen herd Pa say that wimmen shud talk about other topicks than love wen thay git middel aged, topicks like church work or how much life insurance thare husbands is going to leave them when thay die.

One of the ladies was naimed Missus Raymond & the other was Missus Belcher. Missus Raymond sed to Pa:

"Don't Cry," Said Ma.

I was jest telling your wife beefoar you caim in the room how sweet & innocent & gurlish my littel daughter looked to-day wen she was looking oaver sum pritty material for her trousseo. The deer littel cherup seemed so charming and confused and bewil-deringly pretty that I almost envied the man that is going to taik her away from me, sed Missus Raymond. Then she beegan to cry.

I doant think I wud cry if I was you, deerest, Ma sed to her. Do caim yurself & taik cumfurt in thinking about the pritty hoam that her husband is going to maik for her. Maybe you will be thare a grate deel of the time. Won't that be nice & cumfurtable? Ma sed to her.

It will be pretty tuff corn beef for her husband, sed Pa, the yung lady's husband, I meen. Wife, sed Pa, I suppoas you reemember the time yure loving mother caim here all the way from Wisconsin & started rite in trying to be the managing editor of our littel hoam. Of course, you reemember it, sed Pa. Will you evver fergit, sed Pa, the look of pained surprise that caim into her eyes wen I explained to her, as gently as I cud, that she dident have anything in the world to say about the management of my domestick affairs? If my memory dosent fail me, Pa sed, & I do not think it does, she stayed only three days insted of all summer.

You acted like a perfect cave man all the time she was here, I remember that, sed Ma. No wonder my poor mother seldum menshuns you in her letters.

But as I was saying about my daughter and Missus Raymond, I cudent help thinking as I sat there & saw her, a dainty bud with youth's fresh bloom on her cheeks, that no man in this wurld was good enuff to be the husband of so divine a creechur. Of course the man she is going to marry is a splendid yung man & is the vice president of a big bank. But eeven if he were the president of the united Staits, sed Missus Raymond, he wuddent be good enuff for my daughter. No man is good enuff for a woman.

Looks for Gray Hairs.

They are good enuff for a woman around pay day, sed Pa. I have always noticed that when it gtts neer the first of the month my wife beegins looking in my head for gray hairs & calling me her deer old boy. & the morning of pay day, Pa sed, she always follows me to the door and kisses me aggenn and aggenn, with the luv lite shining in her eyes, & says Be sure & come rite hoam after you git yure pay to-day, won't you, darling.

I nevver do any such thing ,sed Ma, & I agree with Missus Raymond that her daughter or any sweet, good gurl is too good for a man.

Oh, my daughter, sed Missus Raymond, can't let her go, I jest can't. & my daughter, too, sed Missus Belcher, it seems as if sum monster of the sea was coming ncerer & neerer to drag my daughter from her mother's arms. Then they both beegan to cry & Pa sneeked out of the room & went in the library ware the side board is.

The Bashful Boy

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"WHAT I would like to ask," writes Rebecca, "is why it is better for a girl to associate with a bashful boy. On several occasions I have noticed that you state that a girl should honor such a young man, but you have never stated why."

The qualities in a bashful boy which make him a welcome suitor are more of a negative nature than of a positive. It is not that which he does, so much as that which he does not do. His sins are of omission and they are small compared with the sins of commission of his bolder brother.

The bashful boy doesn't flirt. With a tongue that halts and stammers, and a tell-tale color that is quicker than the blush of a young girl to proclaim his dishonesty did he attempt to be dishonest, he is not an adept at hypocrisy or concealment.

He is not a dandy. Neither is he a lady's man, and, my dear Rebecca, the presidents of banks and railroads, the powers in commercial life, the most profound thinkers and the men of letters the world honors, were never ladies' men.

His Hands.

He does not know what to do with his hands when out in society, but his employer will tell you he knows good use for them when at work.

Afraid of girls he is forced to seek companionship in books and boys. The fear of girls gives him a respect for them which is wholesome; the companionship of boys gives him the outdoor exercise every young man needs.

He needs this tiring of every muscle, not alone for the results that are physical, but for moral returns. You are not too young, my dear, to know that the wolf that has been racing furiously up and down hill all day feels at night only the cry of tired limbs and aching muscles begging for rest. He is not the wolf that goes seeking an opening to break into the sheepfold!

If a bashful boy loves a girl it is with a sense of humility and his own unworthiness. He knows that he is the one who will be honored if his love is returned; his bolder brother has a faint suspicion, which the homage of silly girls confirms, that it is the girl who should be on her knees.

A Safe Way.

During his calf days he does all his signing for love's sake at a distance, which mothers will agree is the only safe and sane way for young girls to be loved.

He is always a good listener—no woman was ever bored to death by the talking of a bashful man.

Saying little, he says little for which he or others have cause for regret. He is a safe depository for secrets, a good man in whom to have confidence. If he is not a girl's lover the next best thing that could happen her would be to have him for a brother or a friend.

His compliments are not practiced, and are therefore sincere. When it takes effort and stupendous courage to hand a modest little flower to a girl, it follows that he will never throw bouquets at the head of every woman he meets.

Best of all, Rebecca, the bashful boy is a home boy. He is unafraid when with his mother and finds in her companionship the delight less bashful boys seek from home.

He is "a good boy" in the sweet old-fashioned sense, a boy who has escaped contamination a few years later than it comes to boys more bold.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"I guess we can find a way to have the marriage annulled, or whatever they do to marriages that don't take."

The brutal assurance of the man in thus referring to things that were sacred moved Dick to wrath.

"Don't you interfere," he said. His words were spoken softly but tensely.

Nevertheless, Burke held to the topic, but an indefinable change in his manner rendered it less offensive to the young man.

"Interfere! Huh!" he ejaculated, grinning broadly. "Why, that's what I'm paid to do. Listen to me, son. The minute you begin mixing up with crooks, you ain't in a position to give orders to any one. The crooks have got no rights in the eyes of the police. Just remember that."

He Was Not Listening.

The Inspector spoke the simple truth as he knew it from years of experience. The theory of the law is that a presumption of innocence exists until the accused is proven guilty. But the police are out of sympathy with such finical methods. With them, the crook is presumed guilty at the outset of, whatever may be charged against him. If need be, there will be proof a-plenty against him—of the sort that the underworld knows to its sorrow.

But Dick was not listening. His thoughts were again wholly with the woman he loved, who, as the Inspector declared, had fled from him.

"Where's she gone in Chicago?"

Burke answered in his usual gruff fashion, but with a note of kindliness that was not without its effect on Dick.

"I'm no mind reader," he said. "But she's a swell little girl, all right. I've got to hand it to her for that. So, she'll probably stop at the Blackstone—that is, until the Chicago police are tipped off that she is in town."

Of a sudden, the face of the young man took on a totally different expression. Where before had been anger, now was a vivid eagerness. He went close to the Inspector, and spoke with intense seriousness.

"Burke," he said, pleadingly, "give me a chance. I'll leave for Chicago in the morning. Give me twenty-four hours' start before you begin hounding her."

The Inspector regarded the speaker searchingly. His heavy face was drawn in an expression of apparent doubt. Abruptly, then, he smiled acquiescence.

"Seems reasonable," he admitted.

But the father strode to his son.

"No, no, Dick," he cried. "You shall not go. You shall not go."

Burke, however, shook his head in remonstrance against Gilder's plea. His huge voice came booming, weightily impressive.

"Why not?" he questioned. "It's a fair gamble. And, besides, I like the boy's nerve."

Dick seized on the admission eagerly.

"And you'll agree?" he cried.

"Yes, I'll agree," the Inspector answered.

"Thank you," Dick said quietly.

But the father was not content. On the contrary, he went toward the two hurriedly, with a gesture of reproval.

"You shall not go, Dick," he declared, impetuously.

The Inspector shot a word of warning to Gilder in an aside that Dick could not hear.

"Keep still," he replied. "It's all right."

Dick went on speaking with a seriousness suited to the magnitude of his interests.

"You give me your word, Inspector," he said, "that you won't notify the police in Chicago until I've been there twenty-four hours?"

"I Don't Like It."

"You're on," Burke replied genially. "They won't get a whisper out of me until the time is up." He swung about to face the father, and there was a complete change in his manner. "Now, then, Mr. Gilder," he said briskly, "I want to talk to you about another little matter——"

Dick caught the suggestion, and interrupted quickly.

"Then I'll go." He smiled rather wanly at his father. "You know, Dad, I'm sorry, but I've got to do what I think is the right thing."

Burke helped to save the situation from the growing tenseness.

"Sure," he cried heartily; "sure you have! That's the best any of us can do." He watched keenly as the young man went out of the room. It was not until the door closed after Dick that he spoke. Then he dropped to a seat on the couch, and proceeded to make his confidence to the magnate.

"He'll go to Chicago in the morning, get busy, don't you?"

Burke slapped his leg with an enthusiasm that might have broken a weaker member.

"Best thing that could have happened!" he vociferated. And then, as Gilder regarded him in astonishment, he added, chuckling: "You see, he won't find her there."

"Why do you think that?" Gilder demanded, greatly puzzled.

Burke permitted himself the luxury of laughing appreciatively a moment more before making his explanation. Then he said quietly:

VELVA NUT ICE CREAM

3-4 cupful Red Velva Syrup, 2 cupfuls scalded milk, 1 tablespoonful flour, 1-4 cupful sugar, 1 egg, pinch of salt, 2 quarts cream, 1 cupful chopped English walnut meats, 1 teaspoonful almond extract, 1 teaspoonful rose extract.

Beat up the egg with the flour and sugar, and gradually add the milk. Cook for 20 minutes in a double boiler, stirring constantly. Cool and add the syrup, salt, nuts, cream and the extracts, and freeze. Serve in dainty dishes with a preserved cherry on top of each.

By J. W. Heisman.

UNTIL last week it had been long since I had seen a game of either football or baseball between any of the preparatory school teams of the State. But on the 19th and 20th last I slipped down to Milledgeville to see the Georgia Military College team of that place lock horns with the team from the Riverside Military Academy of Gainesville.

Well, I witnessed both games, and it won't take me long to say that they were good games, splendid, both of them. There was fast, clean fielding, excellent base running, fair batting, fine pitching and considerable inside baseball. Riverside won both games, each by a score of 2 to 0. The pitching of all four hurlers, Williamson and Haines for Riverside, and Camp and Gheesling for G. M. C., was impressively good, and it averaged in effectiveness but little below the average of what the college teams showed this year, if any. Riverside seemed stronger with the stick than G. M. C., which was, perhaps, the principal reason why they got away with the big end of the scoring.

* * *

NOW, I had heard more than one rumor to the effect that the Riverside team was made up of a bunch of "ringers." Among others the Wake Forest players had given me solemn assurance of this. Recalling that Wake Forest has since been blacklisted for having three professional players on its roster this now strikes me as a good place to giggle. (It will also be remembered that the Riverside team held Wake Forest to a 6-6 tie game).

Quite prepared was I, therefore, to see on the Riverside line-up a bunch of matured men, some of them giving every evidence of life among professionals, most of them omitting sulphurous language every time they opened their mouths, chewing tobacco like demons and putting up a brand of baseball few college teams in the country could hope to duplicate. Did I see these things? No, none of them, and nothing like it. In the first place they were clearly and indubitably all young boys with one possible exception, and he not over 21 years of age. They all dressed neatly and in excellent taste. They talked like your average well behaved and schooled Prep. They played surprisingly good ball for such youngsters, but nothing like what professionals, even in Class D, play. I tell you they were BOYS, nothing else.

What is a "ringer?" Any one of a lot of things makes a "ringer." True, they may still have been ringers in the sense that they were not bona fide students, were at Riverside only to play ball and never to study; but don't believe that for one minute; they didn't look the part. As for ever having played in professional leagues, or ANY of them ever having received any but the most trifling recompense for any past playing, that was even more unbelievable.

No, they have a very well balanced nine, they field, hit, and run bases fairly well, are strong in the box and are weak in no department of play; they are full of "pep," are in good physical condition, have nice team work, stick to their work and never lose confidence in their ability to win the game—and that's how they do win, and that's all. And that's how they won 19 straight games this spring without losing one.

This is really a very extraordinary achievement, and Coach Frank Anderson deserves an extraordinary amount of credit for the wonderful showing of the team. It was he who taught them their team play and inside ball; he who kept up their fighting spirit after he had generated it, and he who has made them very largely what they are. It is undeniably a jim-dandy young team. But I don't believe they are ringers.

* * *

THE G. M. C. boys were also a nice, clean-looking lot, and they played good steady ball. In two innings only out of 19 played did Riverside succeed in scoring on these hard working lads. Except in hitting they showed no inferiority worth mentioning to the Riverside team.

I desire to express my very warm admiration for the clean and sportsmanly conduct of the G. M. C. cadets and their friends and rooters. The very best of order prevailed at all times on the field, and their treatment of the Riverside team was, so far as I could observe, not only just and courteous but such as befits the honored guest. The work of Umpire Lamar Ham, an old Georgia player, was excellent, and no word of fault finding or bitterness was ever addressed within my hearing either to him or to the visitors by the G. M. C. players or any of their supporters; it was fine conduct and good sport all around.

G. M. C. has a very pretty campus, and the main building of the school is the old Georgia State Capitol; it is a handsome and very substantial edifice still.

* * *

I STOPPED off at Barnesville, hoping to see the rained-out game of the day before played off between Florida and Gordon Institute., In this I met with disappointment, as the Florida team had gone home; but I enjoyed a visit of a few hours there nevertheless.

Gordon also has a very fine athletic field, and several very handsome new buildings. Lieutenant Riley, the former star West Point guard, had all the boys looking spick-and-span, and their military drill was much more than worth watching. The athletes I was so fortunate as to meet were a remarkably fine looking set of fellows who seemed to measure right up to college standards in both stature and outlines. And, by the way, I have just read that their splendid catcher, Everett Bankston, whom I was hoping might come to Tech, has received an offer from the Pittsburg League team. This will give an idea of the class of the athletes they are developing in our Georgia preparatory schools.

GLENN WILL BE STAR AT BOARD TRACK RACING

—JACK PRINCE.

"HARRY GLENN, this local boy, will make one of the greatest board track riders in the world; you watch what I say." So says Jack Prince, inventor of the board track, who knows more about "racing on edge" than any other living man.

Glenn made his real exhibition debut Wednesday. He had been flirting with the track for several days. His first time out he wabbled about on it like a drunken sailor—and wabbling at 65 or 70 miles an hour is a dangerous pastime. Glenn's racing machine, ordered some weeks ago, has not come yet, so he has not been doing much at the track.

Wednesday afternoon five or six of the world's best board-track racers were tuning up their machines and getting ready for the big tournament next week. And a crowd of 6,000 or 8,000 board-track cranks were watching the free exhibition that goes on every afternoon. For nothing at all, the crowd was seeing fancy riding by the best in the business. But even then they were not satisfied.

"Harry Glenn; we want Harry Glenn," they shouted.

Glenn Forced to Ride.

There was not a chance to announce to all of them that Harry's racing machine had not come. And finally the cries became so insistent that "Smiling Harry" mounted a road machine and, grinni. happily, set out for his first real attempt at speed on the treacherous banks.

No veteran rider could have handled the track with greater ease. He circled it at the pole and he took it high, he rode fast and slow; but never was there a slip or any show of inexperience. And round after round was greeted with thunderous cheering. That Glenn is a tremendous local favorite was never better demonstrated.

Glenn deserves it, too. Never has more intrepid dirt-track rider shown himself to the public than Harry, and he has won the crowds by his courage and cleverness.

Lad's Success Is Sure.

When Glenn was riding, the experts gathered at the paddock and discussed his work. And it was not long before all agreed that his future in the racing game was assured. He has many times shown his courage and cool-headedness in races, and now that he has shown that he can "ride the boards" as well, there is nothing to it but a big showing for "Smiling Harry" Glenn around the Southern circuit of tracks.

If Glenn's racing machine arrives in time, he will probably try his luck in the first race meet, set for one week from to-morrow.

A PLEA.

(Inspired by C. Webb Murphy.)

"Knock, if you will—I have no dread—
But keep my name in type!" he said.

The only fault to be found with the Manly Art of Self-Defense is that it sometimes back fires.

One learns from the public prints that Mr. Zbyszko still insists that he can throw Mr. Gotch. Some of these foreigners never get any sense.

There is a move afoot to eliminate hammer throwing from track meets. Messrs. Evers, Tinker and Chance are in favor of a move to eliminate same from the pastime known as baseball.

Considering the athletic activities of those Cleveland persons, it behooves Mr. Birmingham to fracture a few more of his athletes' limbs.

REFERRING TO A SPANISH ATHLETE.

(By the Miller of Osgood.)
(Being a Contribution.)

"Ladies and gents!" the Barker cried,
"We'll win the flag with games to spare!"
Oh, please sir, tie your bull brute outside!
You can't win games with heated air.

If the Calgary affair will only put a crimp in the white hope market, it will not have been fought in vain.

One Johnny Evers pugilist, makes his appearance in our midst. One W. Klem, umpire, will testify that anybody with that name is a fighter.

Tommy Leach is the only Cub outfielder who is hitting in the .300 class. All of which goes to show the value of young blood.

Reports come from Virginia, Minn., that Rube Waddell has disappeared again. Virginia, Minn., fears that he may come back.

George Stovall is back in the game. It is rumored that he now chews cotton instead of tobacco.

SHAME.

Full many a man is filled with bitter shame
And hears men make a byword of his name,
But never one who hung his head so low
As one I witnessed in a baseball game.

With bases filled, they called him to the fore;
He whiffed when but a hit would tie the score,
And as he fourneyed benchward from the plate
It must have seemed a hundred miles or more.

WOLGAST BACKS HOPPE.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 29.—Ad Wolgast, who is reported to have lost heavily in his last few bets on prize fights, to-day is said to have placed a large bet on Willie Hoppe to beat Frankie Burns when they meet next month.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 29.—One of the most important series of the season begins at the Polo Grounds to-day, when the Giants and Phillies, now leading the league, meet to play four games in three days. This will be a real test of the Quakers, who have been setting a terrific pace ever since the race began.

The games are going to be largely a question of pitchers, and the Giants' twirlers will be thrown against the finest staff in the league in this series. It is the pitching the Quakers have been getting that has kept them up in the race so far, and it will be pitching that must stop them. When McGraw traded three Giants to Cincinnati last week, he was looking ahead to these games, which he realized would be critical and might have a direct bearing on the final result of the season. He needed good, reliable twirlers to work in these battles. Now he has Tesreau, Fromme and Marquard. Doubtless, they will meet Seaton, Alexander, Chalmers and Rixey.

* * *

IT is not only the actual result of this series which will count, but the effect the outcome will have on the hearts and playing of the plunging Phillies. If the Giants can stop them with a jerk we will start them off on a long road tour without the idea that they are invincible, and we will send them away with Pittsburg as their next stop, except for one game at home with Brooklyn. They will encounter some more excellent pitching and a club that has been vastly strengthened within the last two weeks when they meet the Pirates. But should the Quakers take these games in New York or the majority of them, they would still retain the notion that they cannot be beaten, and doubtless would go stampeding through the West at a great rate, increasing their lead to dangerous proportions. It would also have the opposite effect on the New York club, which is about to leave for its swing through the West. Therefore, it is easy to see that the series is an important one.

The Quakers are going to put forth the best that they have against us for two reasons. One is that there never has been any too much good feeling between the two teams, and the other is that every club in the league is always eager to beat the Big Town boys, and especially the champions of the league.

That is the reason the Giants constantly meet the best pitching, whereas some second-rate club gets second-rate twirlers.

* * *

THE Philadelphia club is still playing at top speed, while the Giants are not themselves yet. Our hitting is not timely, and the fielding is uncertain. Demaree, who showed so well at first, has not entirely recovered from a strained back, another reason why the coming of Fromme was timely. The Phillies are likely to make a good bid for the pennant, provided Doolin can keep the team in condition and the regulars can steer clear of injuries. The lack of capable substitutes is what will probably drag the Quakers back. The pitching staff, however, should keep the club a factor in the race right up to September.

The Philadelphia sprint is not the same kind that Cincinnati sprang last year, to my mind. There is more backbone to the Philadelphia club, and the team is a good one as far as the first string men go. Give it a lead of a few games and it's going to be a long chase catching Dooin's crowd. They can then afford to slump and recover. What the team does on this long road trip will give some indication of how it is going to finish, because most of the games it has played to date have been at home. This will be a real test. They play twenty-three of their next twenty-four games on the road.

* * *

ASIDE from actually strengthening the pitching staff, McGraw's trade with Cincinnati displayed considerable wisdom on the part of the New York manager in another direction. The bad weather of the first part of the season has piled up a long string of double-headers for later along, and double-headers eat into pitchers faster than a high-priced automobile does into gasoline. The Giants now have eleven double-headers slated, and, in order to work a reliable pitcher every day, McGraw will need four or five twirlers in service all the time. By the addition of Fromme, he has enough talent to start a reliable performer in each game, in spite of the double-headers, when Demaree gets back in shape.

* * *

BROOKLYN has apparently begun to slip back through the league. I look to see the club finish no better than fourth, because two teams are bound to come and pass the Superbas. These are the Giants and Pittsburg, and I don't figure the Dodgers any way to beat out Philadelphia. The pitching staff appears to be slipping some now, and the infielders are not playing the game they were when the psychology of the winning streak was on the whole team and carrying it up through the league.

* * *

THE Cubs have faded, but should get a revival of form on their return to the home diamond. The improvement in pitching would mean an improvement of the team, because it is weak twirling that has been continuously holding the club back. The rest of the team is strong enough, with a wonderful catching staff.

* * *

WHEN the Eastern clubs invade the West next week, the first real test of the Easterners will occur in comparing them with the West. They waded through the Western teams in the late intersectional series, and the question now is whether or not they can repeat the performance away from home. The St. Louis club made the best showing of all the Westerners in the East, and, with Brooklyn and Philadelphia, has been the surprise of the league. Two good pitchers have been holding the club up in the race, and a team that was regarded before the season as a competitor with Brooklyn and Boston for last place has shot to the front and is crowding a lot of us for the first division.

"PRICE HAS NOT QUIT LOCAL CLUB,"—CALLAWAY

President Callaway, of the Atlanta Baseball Association, denies the story printed to-day that Southpaw Gilbert Price has quit the local ball club.

According to Callaway, Price reported for practice this morning and will appear in uniform this afternoon, ready to twirl if called upon.

"I know nothing of the rumor that Price is to quit our club and enter business," said Callaway, "and if he was I certainly would know it by this time."

With Johann Hofmeister Beer Extract anyone can make the same high quality lager beer that has been made in Germany for ages—in the same honest, old-fashioned way. Beer that's so tasty, wholesome, satisfying, every member of the family will surely be delighted with it. Better beer than you can buy in saloons or in bottles anywhere. And it will cost less than 3 cents a quart—a little over a half cent a glass!

Real Malt and Hop Beer at 11 Cents a Gallon Remember, it's not near-beer—not imitation beer—but real German style lager beer, made of select Barley Malt and the best Hops. Beer of fine, natural color—topped with a rich, creamy foam. Beer with snap and sparkle—clear and pure as can be—with life and health in every drop. And the taste—oh, delicious!

Johann Hofmeister Lager Beer Extract is guaranteed under the U. S. Food and Drugs Act, Serial No. 39,317. No license needed anywhere to make your own beer with this pure extract. Get a can of it to-day, follow the simple instructions—then you'll know why brewery beer can never be sold where this beer has been introduced.

75c can makes 7 gallons of beer.

Yell Defiance at Blood Disorders

A Remedy That Has Shown a Most Remarkable Purifying Effect.

The word medicine is one of the most abused in our language. There are certain medicinal properties just as necessary to health as the food we eat. Take, for example, the well-known tonic medicine, S. S. S. This famous blood purifier contains medicinal components just as vital and essential to healthy blood as the elements of wheat, roast beef, the fats and the sugars that make up our daily ration.

As a matter of fact, there is one ingredient in S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating each cellular part of the body to the healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment. That is why it regenerates the blood supply; why it has such a tremendous influence in overcoming eczema, rash, pimples, and all skin afflictions.

And in regenerating the tissues S. S. S. has a rapid and positive antidotal effect upon all those irritating influences that cause rheumatism, sore throat, weak eyes, falling hair, loss of weight, thin, pale cheeks, and that weariness of muscle and nerve that is generally experienced as spring fever. Get a bottle of S. S. S. at any drug store, and in a few days you will not only feel bright and energetic, but you will be the picture of new life. S. S. S. is prepared only in the laboratory of The Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., who maintain a very efficient Medical Department, where all who have any blood disorder of a stubborn nature may write freely for advice and a special book of instruction. S. S. S. is sold everywhere by drug stores, department and general stores.

USE OF BEAN BALL SHOULD BE FORBIDDEN

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE agitation in the major leagues against the "bean ball" has stirred a responsive chord in the Southern League. "Go to it," say players and fans alike.

It is a ball thrown by the pitcher at the head of the batter. Its purpose may be to intimidate a batter lacking in courage or to force away from the plate a man who is crowding in too close to suit the pitcher.

The play is barbarous and should be eliminated from the game.

* * *

AS contemptible an exhibition of bean ball throwing as Atlanta fans ever saw occurred yesterday. In the sixth inning, when Wally Smith was at bat, he ran in to the limit of the batter's box in an effort to smear one of Finis Wilson's curves. Wilson put up a complaint to the umpire, but there were no grounds for it, and Umpire Pfenninger disregarded it.

The next ball Wilson threw straight at Smith's head. Wally ducked and escaped, but by no wide margin. Again Wilson threw at Smith's head, and this time with such unerring aim and such tremendous speed that when Smith ducked the ball struck the bat that he threw in front of his head as he went down. But for this lucky chance Smith would have received a terrible wallop on the head, would unquestionably have been laid out and perhaps killed.

* * *

WILSON'S act was doubtless that of a fresh kid. He threw at Smith's head because he lacked any better sense.

But if Wilson had killed Smith—and the thing could easily have happened—it would have been cold-blooded, brutal, willful murder.

* * *

THE bean ball is no more a part of legitimate baseball than would be the use of an axe on the head of a base runner or the knifing of a fielder.

It would be difficult absolutely to stop it. However, in most cases a trained observer—such as an umpire is supposed to be and usually isn't—could tell a "bean ball" from a wild heave that went at the same mark. A pitcher who uses it ought to be fined out of baseball for one year and fined not less than a thousand dollars. That might help to break up the practice.

* * *

WEDNESDAY'S ball game was pie for the Crackers—4 to 1—with New Orleans the victim. Paul Musser came around and pitched a really first-class game. The "fatal gift" was with him to the extent of six passes, but he was never in danger, chiefly because he allowed only five hits. He kept the hits pretty well separated from the passes and the only time it seemed possible that anything unfortunate might happen Hendryx walloped into a double play and relieved the pressure.

* * *

CATCHER CHAPMAN made his Atlanta debut and pleased mightily. He is a husky brute, with lots of gab and considerable cleverness. The entire team showed a lot of added "pep," but how much was due to Chapman's example and how much to something Manager Smith might or might not have said in a club house talk nobody knows.

If Chapman proves as good as he looks, the Crackers are a vastly different team. Graham has been an uncertainty all the season. And Dunn was signed only as a second catcher and could not be expected to carry the whole thing along by himself.

With Chapman to do the heavy backstopping and to lead in the chatter; with Dent promising to prove a winning pitcher; with Musser back in shape again, and with the rest of the club playing to form, the locals ought to begin forging toward the front again.

AMERICANS MAY BE FACTORS IN ENGLISH DERBY

By E. G. B. Fitzhamon.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 29.—American owners, horses and jockeys seem likely to cut a pretty wide swath in the great English Derby this year. Harry Payne Whitney's colt, Meeting House, which ran third in the Guineas, has a nice chance of winning. So has Herman B. Duryea's Boyne, which won the Paris Biennial, at ten furlongs, quite comfortably from a smart field. August Belmont also has a colt in France which is going to take some stopping on Epsom Downs, barring accident.

Whitney's Meeting House is a fine big colt by Voter out of Noonday, and is one of the thirty yearlings he purchased from the late James Keene eighteen months ago.

Meeting House began slowly in the mile race at Newmarket for the Guineas and for a few strides he was the last of a field of 15, but he moved up to ninth in the first quarter, was seventh after going five furlongs, and ran over four well fancied candidates in the final quarter, being beaten only two lengths in the final quarter by Louvois and Craganour, which was almost dead-heated. Meeting House ran practically unbacked, with 15 to 1 against him to show, and Frank O'Neill riding.

Was Nipped at The Last.

Craganour divided favoritism with Fairy King and they showed the way for six furlongs, when Craganour drew clear, with Johnny Reiff on the 20 to 1 shot, Louvois, in hot pursuit. Craganour should have won, but his English jockey was overconfident and tossed it off and the American nipped him on the post with Louvois.

O'Neill would have ridden the winner if Jack Joyner had kept Meeting House in the barn. O'Neill was engaged last year to ride for Whitney in this race if he was wanted. Subsequently Mr. Raphael, the owner of Louvois, as well as of last year's Derby winner, engaged both O'Neill and Reiff to come over from Paris to ride Louvois in the Guineas, O'Neill's engagament being conditional that Joyner would not want him for Whitney.

When Joyner decided to take a chance with Meeting House, Raphael had Johnny Reiff to fall back upon, and it was Johnny who won the Derby for him on Tagalle last year.

But Mr. Raphael agrees with me that Frank O'Neill is the greatest jockey in Europe, and probably in the world just now, and he has contracted with Frank to ride Louvois in the Derby and other important races. So if American owners and horses fail in the Derby an American rider is quite likely to win it.

Louvois Shows.

Louvois is the colt of which I wrote last December; that if I had to make my selection for the Derby from last season's two-year-olds before they ran this season as three-year-olds, he would be my choice. Louvois not only showed speed last year but he impressed me as the most likely to carry it over the Derby route this year.

Judging from the manner in which he came from behind and wore down Craganour at one mile I expect Louvois to beat Ismay's colt easily at a mile and a half. To some extent this argument also applies to Whitney's Meeting House being likely to beat Craganour for the Derby. However, the talent makes Craganour favorite at present at 9 to 2.

Shogun is going to become a hot tip for Derby, but I can not stand for a colt with two splints coming down the hill at Epsom unless the going should be very soft, which it seldom is there.

Mr. Duryea's Boyne is by Irish Lad out of Running Water by Sir Dixon. He is being pointed for the Derby, so I hear from France.

Belmont's good Derby colt in France is Vulcain, by Rock Sand out of Lady of the Vale.

M'COY AND FERNS DRAW IN TWENTY FAST ROUNDS

Players' Fraternity Branching Out Magnates Dodged Punishment

By W. J. McBeth.

NEW YORK, May 29.—A new power arises in organized baseball, clamoring for certain long neglected rights. This is the Baseball Players' Fraternity, organized less than a year ago under the wise direction of David Fultz, a prominent lawyer of New York and in his day one of the greatest outfielders in the big league. The Fraternity already embraces three hundred members; practically all of the players of the two major leagues.

It is but a matter of a very short time until the Baseball Players' Fraternity branches out to include the minor leagues as well. And as power lies in force of numbers it becomes evident that this Fraternity will very shortly be in a position to force the recognition it rightfully deserves. There is absolutely no idea of unionism in the fraternity. Rather the association stands for a strict interpretation of the laws governing organized baseball. But the organization proposes to see that laws and regulations shall be fairly applied; that the magnates shall not be favored one whit over the rank and file of players who have built up and made the great game the popular sport which it is.

ULTIMATELY, no doubt, players will have some sort of representation on the National Commission, the supreme court of the laws governing the game. This is no more than fair. At present the baseball commission is made up of a National League club owner and the two presidents of the major leagues. In their favor it must be said that on the whole the work of this National Commission has been above reproach. There have been instances of discrimination when discrimination was to the best interests of magnates in general.

* * *

Baseball is presumably the only honest professional sport, if such a broad name may be applied to such a gigantic amusement enterprise. Its honesty reflects the character of the professional player rather than of the professional promoter. It is a matter of record that in its thousands and thousands of cases involving thousands and thousands of dollars no player has ever lied who testified before the National Commission. Who can say as much for some of our highly respected club owners whose first creed seems to be subterfuge if not deceit?

* * *

WHILE the National Commission prides itself upon an iron hand in administering justice to ball players, high and low, it religiously evades shouldering equal responsibility in a case of the magnates. For the benefit of a trusting public it may bluster and bluff a whole lot; but that is as far as it goes. There are too many illustrious examples of the past few years to bear contradiction. It is true that the National League expelled from its ranks last winter Horace Fogel, president of the Philidelphia Nationals, because he had given utterances uncomplimentary to the honesty of the sport and its administration. But the National League fawned upon Charles W. Murphy, president of the Chicago Cubs, who was directly responsible for Horace Fogel's outburst. They had the "goods" on Murphy. Were they afraid of the backing of this little trouble-maker—the millions of Charles P. Taft?

* * *

IF Ban Johnson's word amounts to anything it was not the first time that Murphy stood upon the brink, ready for the kindly shove that in the best interests of the game should have been applied. Johnson declares that Murphy should have been driven out of baseball for speculating in world's series tickets in 1908 when his Cubs drubbed the Tigers. Ban was also very vehement in his outcry against certain New York officials during the series between the Giants and Athletics in 1911. He was also determined, he said, to expose the shady manipulations of the celebrated attempt to bribe the umpires at the post-season play-off of the well known Cub-Giant pennant tie at the Polo Grounds in 1908.

* * *

JOHNSON may have been sincere in both instances. If so then the powers of organized baseball as embodied in the magnates staved his hand. The magnates were afraid of public exposure.

We have had in the past too many examples of lop-sided justice. Where inconsequential players have drawn maximum penalty for infraction of the laws stars have been exonerated. Hal Chase furnishes a very striking example. He quit New York and Griffith cold in 1908 when he was the only player left of the saddest tail end aggregation one could imagine. He committed the unpardonable sin of organized baseball. He not only "jumped" his contract with organized baseball but went to an "outlaw" league. This penalty at the time should have drawn a lifelong "black-list." But organized baseball could not afford to lose such a drawing card as Chase. The very next spring he was pardoned after a "mock" trail. They sought Chase. If he had been an average player all the influence in the world could never have tempted the National Commission to let down the bars.

* * *

TY COBB is another bright example. His indefinite suspension by Johnson last year, because Ty assaulted a spectator at the Hilltop, was the direct cause of a strike by the Detroit Tigers. This action was a very grave offense, but wholesale punishment would have been equivalent to annulment of Detroit's valuable chattels in players. Because of the strength of numbers Ban Johnson was compelled to leniency. Afterward he singled out Delehanty, a passing veteran, on whom to vent his disciplinary spleen. In compliance with the Detroit ultimatum Cobb was immediately reinstated. This spring Ty Cobb held out for a record salary. Organized baseball was obdurate until the newspaper publicity threatened a Congressional probe into organized baseball to determine whether or not it was a trust. Then organized baseball fairly broke its neck welcoming the Tiger hold-out. Though Ty had violated baseball law by playing with a baseball team in the South when he should have been with Jennings, he was reinstated by Ban Johnson before his application could be brought before the National Commission. Had it been some obscure "busher" instead of Cobb, he would now undoubtedly be on the suspended list. The National Commission might never discover his application for reinstatement.

* * *

THE Baseball Players' Fraternity is a most admirable organization and is very likely to result in great good to the game. Playing managers are excluded from membership. Its chief aim is mutual protection. It intends to work along harmonious lines with organized baseball government. It held aloof from the controversy between Cobb and the Detroit club, maintaining that its chief purpose was the observation and not negotiation of contracts. It has no objection to the so-called "yoke" of the reserve clause but it hopes to establish some sense of equitable justice in observation of contract and some limit at least to the reserve clause. Now the magnate has the power to hold a player for life or to release him on ten days' notice. The player has no redress and must accept the terms offered. The fraternity hopes to be able in time to adjust salaries on a far more sensible basis. Last year a player on the Pittsburg team was signed up for $800. He had no say in the matter. Wagner in the same club was drawing $10,000. Wagner may have been twelve times the more valuable asset. Yet a player who is worth 10 more than $800 should not be in the big league. He can get more in the "sticks" with a chance of development at the same time.

* * *

ORGANIZED baseball may need the kindly services of the fraternity before many months roll around. Perhaps the magnates have been killing the goose of the golden eggs. Public sympathy seems on the wane. Jack O'Connor in the civil courts in St. Louis quite recently was awarded a verdict for $5,000 against the St. Louis Americans. This was the amount of a year's salary as manager of the Browns on a contract that Ban Johnson canceled because he alleged that O'Connor had purposely countenanced a scheme to boost Napoleon Lajoie's batting record above that of Ty Cobb. Lajoie, it is said, was allowed to make a hit every time he came to bat in the final game of the season so that he might earn an automobile which went for the batting championship.

* * *

NOW, that little scandal was hushed up at the time by the wily Johnson. He straightened out the matter by getting an extra benzine buggy for Larry and awarding Cobb the honors. The skeleton in the closet, however, was rattled again in the O'Connor suit when Ban Johnson produced witnesses who testified that they had overheard O'Connor instructing his men to give Lajoie an unfavorable advantage over Cobb. Such testimony was not of a nature to reassure public confidence in professional baseball. And it did absolutely no good, as the jury disregarded it anyhow.

PELKY AND BURNS MAY BE TRIED ON JUNE 23

CALGARY, ALBERTA, May 29.—If Tommy Burns and Arthur Pelky ever come to trial on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of Luther McCarty, it will be on June 23 at the Supreme Criminal Court session.

Burns will not give out his plans, but it is said that he is being urged to abandon all connection with ring affairs.

Fargo dispatches giving McCarty's estate as worth $65,000 are grossly exaggerated. His property is worth about $12,000.

Floto Yearns for Days of Old Scores All Typewriter Fighters

By Otto C. Floto.

IN slanting a glance over the lightweight situation as it presents itself to us at the present time we are forced to the conclusion that there is more talk than doin' and more challenges flying back and forth than there are acceptances of the same. Take the whole list of the boys that claim this division as their own, each and every one of them have a chip on their shoulder and are aiming their 14-inch guns at Willie Ritchie, the titleholder. Their ammunition, however, is mostly "buncombe," and the almighty dollar is receiving far more attention in these deliberations than is the glory of becoming champion.

All of which forces us to lean back and sigh, "Oh, you fortunate champions of to-day. How lucky you are not to have been compelled to battle in the time when real fighters graced the roped inclosure." Days when the end was never in sight; days when the finish came only with the referee's count and the acknowledgment from the "seconds" of one or the other principal that his charge could go no further.

* * *

SOME may shrug their shoulders and say, "Yes, but those were the brutal days of the London prize ring." Maybe they were, but they also represented the period when gladiators of real merit held sway, days when it required a stout heart, stamina, a knowledge of wrestling as well as fighting, and an adept so far as the science and punching ability of the game went.

Seldom if ever did a champion return to the ring once the stigma of defeat was placed against his name. He retired in those days unless for some exceptional reason he was allowed to come back. His future connection with the game was as second, bottle-holder or representative of some champion. Tom Sayers, after his defeat by Langham, came back and, in support of the move, we need but add that he was never defeated again. He was a middleweight, while Langham was a heavy one when they fought.

* * *

TAKE the average run of the Queensberry babies we have in our midst at the present time and when they stagger up against defeat or adverse verdicts they hurry to the nearest typewriter and frame fifty-seven different varieties of alibis in a made endeavor to explain away their rout.

Mind, we don't wish you to misunderstand us in that the Queensberry code failed to produce great champions. On the contrary, it did. Jimmy Barry, Jack McAuliffe, Jack Dempsey, Jim Corbett, Fitzsimmons and others won titles under their clauses. But remember, too, that they all fought "TO A FINISH" in order to succeed to the emblem. The present day limited affairs were foreign to them.

* * *

MANY will wonder why John L. Sullivan's name is among those missing from the above list. Simple enough, and equally surprising to as many to learn that Sullivan won his title according to the L. P. R. rules. The only time he met defeat was by the Queensberry route. So that technically speaking Sullivan was never defeated for the title. He at any rate never lost it in the same manner in which he won it. The last London prize ring fight in this country was between Sullivan and Kilrain, at Richburg, Miss. This will perhaps be news to many as well.

With the abolition of the L. P. R. rules came a flock of "box fighters," to whom the limited round journey with eight-ounce gloves and Queensberry methods appealed as the short route to easy money. Over 70 per cent of this same band would have found employment at some other way of making a living had the old-time fashion of battles on the turf "to a finish" still been in vogue.

ZBYSZKO COLLAPSES IN MAT BOUT; LURICH WINS

NEW YORK, May 29.—George Lurich was awarded the decision over Stanislaus Zbyszko in the wrestling bout at Madison Square Garden when the latter failed after 16 minutes and 27 seconds of strenuous struggling on the mat.

The Polish champion was said to be suffering from the effects of a recent injury received at Montreal and his weakened condition resulted in his collapse in the ring.

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

Spider Britt is on the warpath. The little bantamweight read Meyer Pries' challenge in the Georgian the other day and says he will gladly meet Pries on a "winner-take-all" basis. Britt also states that he will give Meyer a side bet of $50. Let's hear from Pries!

* * *

Jack Dillon has finished hard training for his 10-round set-to with Frank Klaus Thursday night at Indianapolis. Dillon is down to the required weight and says he will be strong at 160 pounds, the figure both men have agreed to make.

* * *

Eddie Campi and Charles Ledoux will clash in the next bantamweight fight to be staged on the Coast. Tom McCarey signed the boys yesterday. They will meet on June 20 in a scheduled 20-round go.

* * *

Jack Britton will make his next fight against Jimmy Duffy, the tough Buffalo boy, on Thursday night. They will meet in Duffy's home town and Britton will have his hands full carrying away the verdict. The boys are billed to go ten rounds.

* * *

Matty McCue was handed a neat setback the other night. Matty attempted to land his haymaker on Patsy Brannigan's jaw, but the latter was far too clever for the Racine sensation and had a good shade at the end of the tenth round.

* * *

Another New Orleans fighter has been defeated. Frankie Russell tried hard to put the Pelican City back on the fighting map Monday night, but Lore proved too tough a customer for Frankie. The Eastern boy was given the newspaper verdict by a good margin.

The Social World

An event of interest to a wide circle of friends was the marriage of Miss Katherine Rawling and Mr. Philip Wakeman Wilcox Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Rawling in Druid Hills.

The house was elaborately decorated. The couple stood before a bank of palms in the library, the altar of greenery being flanked on either side with clusters of white roses and valley lilies. Throughout the apartments smilax formed a mural decoration and the mantels were banked with small foliage plants, starred with tiny electric lights.

The only attendant was Mr. Sidney Wilcox, of New York, as best man. Bishop Lecte, of the Methodist Church, officiated, and a limited number of guests were present.

Mrs. Rawling, the bride's mother, wore gray charmeuse satin, with draperies of pale pink chiffon. Mrs. Sidney Wilcox, of New York, the bridegroom's mother, wore white Brussels lace, with touches of lavender. His aunt, Mrs. Fulford, of Canada, wore black chiffon cloth. Mrs. J. T. Wheeler, of New York, the bride's aunt, wore black lace.

A reception followed the ceremony and supper was served. The bride's table was decorated with pink roses, arranged in a tall basket, the handle twined with pink tulle and pink roses. Pink roses were banked on the buffet, serving table and mantel, and the sun parlor, where punch was served, was decorated with sweetpeas.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox left after the reception for the East, and on their return they will be at home at the Druid Hills residence of Mr. and Mrs. Rawling during the latter's absence in Europe. Later they will build on the adjoining lot, which was a wedding present.

The bride has many friends, both in Atlanta and in New York, her former home. Mr. Wilcox is a popular young man. He is secretary and treasurer of the Cleveland-Manning Piano Company.

Mother Goose Pageant.

And why? Mother Goose and all her little geese are coming to town Saturday afternoon and will be ready to greet you on the lawn of the Clyde Kings, which by all odds is one of the most charming spots in the city for her Goose-ship and all the busy little people of her family.

And right here, be it said, any one who wishes to meet Mother Goose or any especial favorite of the days of his childhood, has only to take the car to Druid Hills, and, presto! he is there.

Mother Goose is coming as the special guest of the Joseph Habersham Chapter, D. A. R., of which Mrs. John Perdue is regent. Her visit will aid in building the chapter house the Joseph Habersham people are planning.

So enthusiastic is Atlanta society over the coming of Mother Goose and her wonderful family that little else has been talked of by the pleasure-loving set.

The committee work is in charge of members of the Joseph Habersham Chapter, with Mrs. William Lawson Peel, vice regent general of the National Daughters of the American Revolution, as chairman general.

The Mother Goose pageant will include more than 100 children of prominent families. There will be tableaux, parade, maypole dances, solo dances, and all sorts of entertainment.

Verses written by one of the enthusiastic members of the chapter, who has embodied in the poem the most interesting features of the coming event, read:

Mother Goose pageant! A great lawn fete!
'Twill be out of doors, so you pay at the gate!
A great, big show, and plenty of frills—
On Mrs. King's lawn—1010 Druid Hills.

There'll be the old woman who lived in a shoe,
Little Jack Horner and Little Boy Blue,
A lot of little ponies, and, sure, a dapple gray,
For boys and girls to ride upon "to ride a mile away."

Blue Beard with his many wives and Merry Peter Pan,
Little Orphan Annie, and the funny Soldier Man;
Goblins, dwarfs and fairies, dancing in the air,
Curly Locks and Humpty Dump, and Little Golden Hair,

The Beggar Man from Hamelin with the magic of his pipe,
The old maid in the garden with the nose the Black Birds swipe;
Margery Daw, a good see-saw, and saucy old King Cole;
Robin Hood, his merry men, Warriors and Knights of Old.

The Flowers and the Maidens that belong to Mistress Mary,
All so sweet and winning and none of them contrary.
Many are the prizes for the splendid baby show.
Babies there will be so fine you can almost watch them grow.

There'll be grab-bags and candy and cake and good ice cream,
And all the wonders of the world of which you only dream.
Your friends right straight from Fairyland will all be turned a-loose
To join the gorgeous pageant of good old Mother Goose.

A Liza Lehmann Evening.

A musical entertainment will be given at the parish house of the Church of the Incarnation in West End on the evening of June 3. A quartet, composed of Mrs. John L. Meek, soprano; Mrs. Arthur Crevistion, contralto; Mr. Howard Davis, tenor, and Mr. John Mullin, basso, will sing the "Nonsense Rhymes from Alice in Wonderland," set to music by Liza Lehmann.

The Rev. John D. Wing has consented to give a reading of "The Happy Prince," by Oscar Wilde, with incidental music, also by Lehmann. Mr. Charles A. Sheldon, Jr., will be the accompanist for the evening. The musical is given under the auspices of Epiphany Guild of Inman Park and St. Mary's Guild of the Church of the Incarnation.

All cars run every ten minutes, and are marked "Ponce DeLeon to Druid Hills," and run directly in front of the lawns where the Mother Goose pageant will be held.

Miss Harrison Entertains.

Miss Lucy Harrison entertained at bridge Thursday afternoon for Miss Courtney Harrison, whose marriage to Mr. Loring Raoul will take place Monday. Pink sweetpeas formed the decorations in all apartments except the sun parlor, where daisies were used. The tea table was adorned with pink sweetpeas, arranged in a basket, the minor details being pink and white. Prizes were a hand-made piece of lingerie for the honor guest, a French gilt picture frame for top score, and silk hose for consolation.

Shower for Miss Andrews.

Mrs. Florence Harris entertained about seventy guests at a miscellaneous shower at her home in Inman Park Thursday afternoon for Miss Lina Andrews, a bride-elect. Packages were delivered to the bride-elect by parcel post, little Roy Martin acting as postman. Misses Allie Candler and Van DeVander served punch.

Mrs. Harris was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. William Candler, Mrs. D. W. Orr, Mrs. J. D. Ficklen, and the members of Miss Andrews' Sunday school class. The reception room was decorated in a profusion of daisies.

The Name
KIMBALL on a PIANO

means that scrupulous care has been given every detail of construction; that every part has been manufactured by the W. W. Kimball Company; that it has been made by skilled workmen, under the direction of experts in their respective lines. That ability, experience and responsibility are back of the piano. The ear and eye can judge of the the construction, case design and the finish, but you must look to the name for reliability of construction, and the assurance that the good qualities will endure. The house of KIMBALL has had an experience of over fifty years in the music industry, and artists, amateurs, and thousands of satisfied customers give abundant proof of the merit of the Kimball.

We are showing a large variety of styles in 88-note Player Pianos and Uprights. We have your choice in woods, such as Rosewood, Walnut, Circassian Walnut, Oak, Mission, Satin Mahogany and Mahogany. Prices ranging from $195 to $1,250.

Our one, absolutely one, price insures you, whether an experienced buyer or not, of securing the best instrument for the amount you wish to pay. It is not safe to buy a piano, or any other article of merchandise, from a dealer who has a sliding scale of prices, because you will never know when he has given you his lowest price. Then, too, your neighbor may buy the same merchandise for from $50 to $75 less money. A piano has but one value, and that should fix its price—the right price. Each and every instrument on our wareroom floor is tagged at the cash figure, and no one pays more or less.

It is not only safe, but pleasant, to deal with the world's largest manufacturers of Pianos, Player Pianos, Residence and Church Pipe Organs, through this Branch Store.

PONY CONTEST DRAWS ENTRANTS, CERTAIN OF SUCCESS, FROM AFAR

Atlanta children were the first to catch the fire of enthusiasm in The Georgian and American pony contest. The children out in the State and outside Georgia were a little slow at first.

But how they are coming now!

Every mail brings a heap of letters from distant addresses, and the letters are full of "ginger." Every girl or boy seems sure of winning.

Dorothy Davis, of Dothan, Ala., writes: "I have my subscription book, and so I am going to work in earnest now."

"Please send me subscription blanks, etc., so I can win a pony," as O. S. Morton, Jr., writes, is a more frequently used wording.

The flood of mail is becoming a serious problem. Once this week two men in the contest department worked all night answering letters, and then did not catch up entirely with the work. It is hoped, therefore, that contestants who do not receive answers the following day will remember that it is not always possible to go through all the letters, check all the votes and keep up with the routine work of the contest in a day, and be patient.

Names of contestants and their standing follow:

COTTON

NEW YORK, May 29.—A break of 18 points in May was the feature of the cotton market at the opening of the cotton market to-day. June followed with a decline of 16 points and July 9 points from last night's close. New crop positions were under pressure, but only lost 4 to 6 points. The decline was due to private cables reporting a lockout in the mills of northern Lancashire, coupled with a bearish crop condition and acreage estimate by Miss Giles. She gave the condition of the crop to May 25 as 86.4 and acreage an increase of 3.7 per cent, indicating the acreage of 1913 would be 35,709,400 acres.

The weather map and sentiment were bearish, which encouraged the bears. The ring and certain brokers who usually represent spot interests were the leading sellers. After the call the list increased its decline 1 to 3 points from the opening. Liverpool was a good seller of July. There were about 5,000 May and June notices issued, which were immediately stopped by good sources.

The bears were thunderstruck during the forenoon when shorts grasped the opportunity to cover and sent May back to 11.44, within 2 points of the previous close. July jumped to 11.40. Within fifteen minutes the entire list steadied within 2 to 6 points from Wednesday's final, or unchanged to 16 points above the opening range.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: May, 11.37; July, 11.45; August, 11.28; October, 11.05; January, 11.01.

Following are 10 a. m. bids in New Orleans: May, 12.10; July, 11.95; August, 11.56; October, 11.16; January, 11.17.

Estimated cotton receipts:

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, May 29.—Moderate improvement was shown at the opening of the stock market to-day, there being a noticeable absence of pressure. Reading and Union Pacific were strong features, the former gaining ⅝ on earnings reports and the latter advancing ½ after selling ex-dividend of 2½. Amalgamated Copper opened at 73½, against 73 at the close last night.

Among the other advances were American Can, ¼; American Smelting, ⅝; Erie, ¼; Northern Pacific, ¾; Pennsylvania, ⅛; Southern Pacific, ¼, and United States Steel common, ⅛.

Canadian Pacific was weak in consequence of selling in London and was 2⅜ lower. Western Union, Erie and Atchison shaded fractionally.

There was some covering by traders who feared to go short over the three-day holiday.

The curb was steady.

Americans in London were irregular

COTTON ACREAGE INCREASES 4.8 P. C.

NEW YORK, May 29.—The cotton acreage for the season of 1913, as determined by 1,907 special correspondents of The Journal of Commerce, shows an increase of 4.8 per cent over last year, based upon the revised estimate of the Government of 34,766,000 acres for 1912.

The area planted for 1913 would be 36,435,000 acres. Percentage condition of an average date of May 20 is 80.5, as compared with 76.9 a year ago and 79 for the ten-year acreage. In 1911 the percentage condition was 83.8. Figures for North and South Carolina are incomplete, owing to late planting and to the fact that a large proportion of the cotton is not yet up.

States—	Acreage Estimate 1913.	Condition to May 20, 1913.	Condition to May 20, 1913.

CHINCH BUGS DAMAGING GRAIN.

CHICAGO, May 29.—Great Bend, Kansas, says: "Rain is badly needed and grasshoppers are a menace."

Otis, Barton County, Kansas, says: "Our wheat crop is a total loss."

Omaha says: "Clear and hot over the State; temperature 72."

McPherson, Kansas, special reports high south winds absorbed moisture and made decided change in wheat outlook, besides millions of chinch bugs in wheat and corn.

Lawton, Okla., wires: "My information from unbiased sources indicates crop for State based as present condition about same as last year."

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, May 29.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: Wheat—The weather map shows mostly clear in the Northwest. We feel that purchases on breaks should be made.

Corn—Weather very favorable. We do not care to press the short side.

GRAIN

CHICAGO, May 29.—There was general buying of wheat to-day. Many of those who sold wheat yesterday were buyers to-day and there was improved buying orders from the outside. Liverpool was lower on the improved crop situation in England and France. Northwestern receipts 168 cars and Winnipeg 133 cars.

Corn was firmer and ⅛@¼c higher.

Oats were firm.

Provisions were in better demand.

COURSE OF WHEAT RELYING ON CHARACTER OF WEATHER

CHICAGO, May 29.—The Inter Ocean says: "It was the general belief of wheat traders last night that the market from now on will be governed largely by the character of the weather and crop reports. The bull interests contend that sufficient damage has been done to winter wheat to warrant higher prices.

"There were many bears on corn last night who expect lower prices with an increased movement, which is due from now on. Those who are buying on breaks advise the theory that the movement will not come up to expectations of the bears. Conservative people are advising caution in buying oats on bulges, although they believe that a continuation of the buying that has of late been seen will carry prices higher."

Chapter I

THE way led along upon what had once been the embankment of a railroad. But no train had run upon it for many years. The forest on either side swelled up the slopes of the embankment and crested across it in a green wave of trees and bushes. The trail was as narrow as a man's body, and was no more than a wild-animal runway. Occasionally, a piece of rusty iron, showing through the forest mould, advertised that the rail and the ties still remained. In one place, a ten-inch tree had grown through at a connection, had lifted the rail clearly into view. The tie had followed the rail, held to it by the spikes, for its bed to be filled with ... so that now the crumbling ... lifted up at ... likewise wore a single garment—a ragged-edged piece of bearskin, with a hole in the middle through which he had thrust his head. About his chest and shoulders hung a single, mangy garment of goat-skin. His arms and legs, withered and skinny, betokened extreme age, as well as did their sunburn and scars and scratches betoken long years of exposure to the elements.

The boy, who led the way, checking the eagerness of his muscles to the slow progress of the elder, and the boy's gaze was fixed on the tops of the agitated bushes. Then a large bear, a grizzly, crashed into view, and likewise stopped abruptly, at sight of the humans. He did not like them, and growled querulously. Slowly the boy fitted the arrow to the bow, and slowly he pulled the bowstring taut. But he never removed his eyes from the bear. The old man peered from under his green leaf at the danger, and stood as quietly as the boy. For a few seconds this mutual scrutinizing went on; then, the bear betraying a growing irritability, the boy, with a movement of his head, indicated that the old man must step aside from the trail and go down ... bankment. REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Papers in the sale of two residences on Ponce DeLeon Avenue and one on Gordon Street in West End have gone to record. Minnie M. Costner has sold to J. E. McRee 403 Gordon Street, 373 feet south of Holderness Street, for $9,000.

John B. Daniel has sold to J. T. Tuggle, 644 Ponce DeLeon Avenue, 50 by 180 feet, for $12,500.

Mrs. Mattie F. Huggins has sold to Mrs. Kate G. Pryor, 346 Ponce DeLeon Avenue, 342 feet east of North Boulevard, for $13,000. The lot is 38 by 321 feet.

Executors' Deed Filed.

An interesting executors' deed has also been filed. This conveys to Robert F. Maddox two tracts of land adjoining his country place, "Woodlawn," for an aggregate of $19,750. The grantors are Mrs. Gertrude J. Dickey and others, executors of the estate of the late James L. Dickey.

Favor Roswell Road Work.

E. T. Luckie, of the Holmes & Luckie Realty Company, reports good progress in the work of signing up property owners who favor widening the Roswell Road 20 feet from Buckhead to Piedmont Road. Among the signers are John W. Grant, F. M. Brownell and George B. Powell, who have an aggregate of about 3,000 feet of frontage; George M. Hope, J. H. and J. M. Karwisch, L. W. Rogers, C. S. Honour, J. L. Riley and A. C. Walters.

Building Owners Organize.

For the purpose of perfecting a permanent organization and for inviting the National Association of Building Owners and Managers to Atlanta in 1914, local office building and apartment house owners and managers met Tuesday. The new body is known as the Association of Building Owners and Managers of Atlanta, and it has decided to send a committee to Cincinnati next month to present its invitation to the national association.

Action of the "big building" men in combining is taken as an indication that the office building and apartment house business in Atlanta will take great strides forward in future. Among the members of the new association are Ivan E. Allen, Fred Houser, Charles E. Wilkinson, A. W. Martin, Fred Shaefer, J. B. Pendleton, J. M. Barclay, J. M. Shearer, W. B. Stovall and J. L. Fincher. One hundred members are expected to join.

Auction Sale Saturday.

John H. James, auctioneer, will sell at public outcry Saturday 40 lots on Ashby Street for J. T. Elliott, the owner. Mr. James has plats at his office.

Inquiries for Colonial Home.

Ralph O. Cochran, the well-known real estate man, reports many inquiries for the colonial home which he will auction off Thursday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at 101 West Tenth Street. This home is a two-story brick affair and the property of W. C. Harper.

More Peachtree Improvements.

Peachtree has been promised another substantial business building. C. J. Sheehan will erect at once a two-story structure on the east side of the thoroughfare between Pine and Merritts Avenue. There are already several automobile shops in this block.

Mr. Sheehan traded for this 21 by 186 foot lot through the Cheatham Brothers' real estate agency, giving to Dr. A. W. VanHoose, of Rome, 228 South Pryor Street and 135 Davis Street, for $11,500, and paying the balance in cash and notes. The Peachtree property brought $26,250, or $1,250 a front foot. Dr. VanHoose recently sold 21 feet at this point to Ben J. Massell, who has put a sign on his lot announcing that he will build for acceptable tenant.

SUBURBAN HOMES.

IN INMAN PARK, Edgewood, Kirkwood and Decatur, we have a number of pretty cottages, and a few very attractive larger homes. Most of these places carry all of the conveniences Kirkwood and Decatur as yet have not the gas, but electric lights and plumbing. This is the time when the country is most attractive, the car service fine, and to remain during the winter is no hardship. Large lots, good schools and churches, and reasonable rents. Let us tell you about these.

CLAIRMONT AVENUE, DECATUR, GA.

ON THE CORNER of Ponce DeLeon, in this pretty little town, within twenty-five minutes' ride of the city, we have this splendid modern eleven-room house, on large corner lot. Would be a choice location for a large private family or for summer boarders. We are offering at low rental to first-class parties.

BUSINESS HOUSES.

IF YOU ARE looking for a business location, either central or in some of the thickly populated suburbs, you should come in and consult our list. We will tell you about these, and we are then ready with comfortable conveyances to show you our properties.

Piedmont Avenue Frontage

We have recently had consigned with us some Piedmont Avenue frontage, ranging in price from $115 per foot to $135 per foot.

These lots are situated on the most desirable part of Piedmont Avenue, being between Twelfth, Thirteenth and Fourteenth Streets, facing Piedmont Park. The scarcity of building lots of this class of property on the north side is easily recognized by anyone who has been looking for a home site recently. The unusually good value offered here will be appreciated by anyone in the market for first-class residence property. Reasonable terms can be arranged.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

If Little Chicks Are Properly Fed Loss Will Be Less

Wholesome Advice by an Expert Who Has Tried It From Every Angle.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

Judge Marshall: I want to ask you a number of questions, if you will not think I am too greedy for information.

I live on a farm about two miles from town and am trying to raise chickens enough to make a living from.

I do very well with those I succeeded in raising, but I loose about half of my chicks before they are two weeks old.

As soon as the chicks are hatched I give them a good feed of mash, composed of equal parts of corn meal and wheat bran mixed with hot water, allowing it to cool a little before feeding. I feed this once a day and cracked corn three times a day; but I have much trouble with sparrows eating up the feed.

I also have much trouble with the red mites bothering my sitting hens, which I seem unable to control.

Then, again, I have trouble every summer by having great, big, fat hens drop dead without any warning. They will be apparently well one day and the next they will be dead. They are very fat and fine and I see no reason why they should die thus.

I always feed a little good condition powder of some kind three times a week.

If it is not asking too much of you I should appreciate an answer to these troubles. I am yours very truly, MRS. E. E. SPEER.

Tifton, Ga.

Cut Out Wet Mash.

ANSWER—We have texts enough for a number of good sermons but will have to do like the boy said he did in hunting for the cows: Go to the end of the lane and scatter.

First, in regard to the little chicks, I would say cut out the wet mash entirely, or, at least, until they are two months old and then if you want to use some of your feed in that way it will be all right, but not for the newly hatched ones. Feed rolled oats dry, and the cracked corn fine enough so they can eat it well, providing you can not get the ready mixed chick feed at your grocers in Tifton. But there is no question that the rolled oats is good, and so is the corn, but feed them absolutely dry.

Another place where you have erred seriously is in feeding as soon as hatched, if that is what you intended to say.

There is nothing that will so quickly get the digestive organs out of order, or, for that matter, prevent them from ever getting in order, as feeding newly hatched chicks at once. Give them a chance to season out a little, as one old poultryman used to say. When they first hatch they are a jelly, as it were, and it takes a day or two for them to toughen up, ready to digest what is given them. So, the way to do is to wait forty-eight hours before any feed is given. They will not starve, but be all the better for the little fast. They may have a good supply of sharp sand to peck at. Then feed the rolled oats or prepared dry chick feed. This can be continued until they can handle coarser cracked corn and wheat.

Green Feed Necessary.

All the while they must have good green stuff of some kind and a little dried beef scrap after they are three weeks old, and I think you will have no trouble if everything is kept clean and free from mites. The sparrows can be controlled by feeding under wire netting runs.

When you set your hens, move them out of the hen house into some clean shed, or, for that matter, out of doors, using barrels for the nest. But you should not have them in the houses. Take a pint of oil of tar, a pint of gasoline, three quarts of kerosene; mix thoroughly and spray or pour over the roosts and the sides of the house where the roost poles rest. If this is attended to an hour before roosting time, it will usually about finish the job, both on the poles and the hens. If any are left on the hens, dust them thoroughly with some good lice powder. After they have been really cleaned out, it will pay to grease the poles with hot lard and a brush.

As to your loosing your fat hens by sudden deaths, I would say that I think you have been using too much condition powders. In my estimation even a little is too much when hens are in health and laying. You have weakened their digestive organs by overstimulation, coupled with too much fat in hens that are, no doubt, over two years old. When hens get a little old and fat, heavy behind, it is the best policy to send them to the butchers.

Such hens have passed their useful time. They have slowed up on laying and with no drain upon their systems they fill up with fat inside, where it presses on the heart and is the cause of the sudden deaths you speak of. It is no trouble to detect such hens in the yard, and it is a good plan to use them while they are in good health, rather than wait for them to come to the sudden death referred to.

The Stalwart Senate Should Stand by Our American Merchant Marine

The United States Senate fronts an opportunity and a duty in dealing with our merchant marine.

Public attention is rapidly focusing upon American maritime conditions, and it is high time that it did.

The favor with which the readoption of the early American discriminatory maritime policy is regarded by the thoughtful press and by influential Americans who are indifferent to foreign protests and threats is additionally reassuring.

Even more important, the people are realizing that an American deep sea shipping will form an urgently needed and entirely lacking secondary reserve for our navy.

Mr. Underwood's mere insertion of the thin edge of the wedge of discriminatory duties in his tariff bill has served to arouse both national and international interest.

Public indorsement of the policy is so strong that the stalwart Senate should promptly DRIVE IN THIS WEDGE. It will separate the United States from its trade agreements and conventions with other nations whose people know that the American navy will remain weak so long as it lacks the resource of a strong American shipping with officers and men.

The House tariff bill only provides a discount of 5 per cent of the duty on imports in vessels of American register. It applies to less than half our imports—only to those that are dutiable. It applies to only 10 per cent of our imports from South America, the other 90 per cent being duty free.

That discount will not suffice to attract American capital into oversea shipping with the new duties so low. The pending provision would give foreign yards the building of all the ships its enactment would bring under American register.

And finally there are conflicting opinions as to whether or not the withdrawal of the United States from trade conventions and agreements that now estop it from applying the policy is assuredly provided for.

THE SENATE MUST REMEDY EACH OF THESE DEFECTS AND OBSCURITIES. We must have a whole-hearted and not a half-hearted readoption and enforcement of the policy that gave American ships the carriage of 80 per cent of our imports and exports during all of the more than sixty years it was previously in force.

There is an overwhelming American demand for the repeal of all restraining conventions and suspensory laws that perpetuate our present maritime importance.

The need of the Nation, the need of our Navy, and the need of our foreign commerce alike demand it.

The Senate must infuse vigor and vim into this section of the House bill, so that its enforcement will fill every American shipyard with orders for oversea ships that will reassert American maritime independence and carry the American flag over all the seven seas to the business ports of the civilized world.

Big Business Men And Despotic Power

Judge Gary is the working head of the greatest industrial corporation in America—the United States Steel Corporation.

He is especially notable among the big business men of the country because he believes and has constantly declared during the last few years that the great interstate business concerns that now control most of the output of the necessaries of life MUST CEASE TO BE ARBITRARY AND DESPOTIC IN THE USE OF THIS POWER AND MUST SUBMIT THEMSELVES TO PUBLIC AUTHORITY.

Speaking to an organization of his business associates last week, Judge Gary remarked: "The President of the United States recently said that honest business need not be afraid. Well, let us be honest. Let us take him at his word; let us assume that he means exactly what he says."

The Georgian takes occasion to say that SOMETHING MORE THAN WHAT COMMONLY GOES BY THE NAME OF "HONESTY" IS NOW REQUIRED OF THE INDUSTRIAL LEADERS OF THE UNITED STATES.

What is required is that big business men shall have the high intelligence TO HATE THEIR OWN ARBITRARY POWER OVER THE INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATION OF THE COUNTRY.

It is time that these men should come to understand that it is absolutely impossible for the republic to submit to irresponsible power of any kind. IF THE REPUBLIC IS TO ENDURE, THE ECONOMIC DESPOTS CANNOT STAND.

The principle that all power over the essentials of life must be in the hands of men accountable to the people is the principle upon which the political and legal systems of the United States are founded. This is no fine-spun theory. It is a part of the everyday consciousness of the American man.

It follows from this principle that whenever any man in America is seen by the people to be exercising a selfish and unregulated power over the people's lives, IT IS IMPOSSIBLE FOR THE PEOPLE TO REGARD HIM OTHERWISE THAN AS A PUBLIC ENEMY.

The people are patient with private monopolies only so long as there is a reasonable doubt whether they really are private monopolies. But as soon as it becomes perfectly plain that certain men are levying private taxes upon the people, the people cannot and will not any longer have patience with such men.

Judge Gary has pointed out the right road for corporate managers who are suspected and who suspect themselves of being monopolists. Many months ago he told a committee of Congress that the industrial trusts must be controlled by the Government—even to the legal limitation of dividends and of commodity prices. In short, Judge Gary is the one corporation manager in the country whose intelligence has been absolutely clear on the point that no monopoly can endure in a republic—EXCEPT A PUBLIC MONOPOLY.

In quoting the words of President Wilson last week, Judge Gary spoke truly enough—but feebly. He has often spoken better from other texts.

It is not by mere scrupulosity, not by mere freedom from rascality, that big business men are to set themselves right before the country or to set the country right in the light of its democratic tradition.

THE COUNTRY EXPECTS TO SEE AN UPRISING OF BIG BUSINESS MEN, WHO ARE AMERICANS MORE THAN THEY ARE MONOPOLISTS—WHO HATE ARBITRARY AND DESPOTIC POWER AND ARE DETERMINED TO PUT IT DOWN.

Rev. John E. White Writes on The Biggest Politics

R R

Three Great Races---the Teuton, Slav and Mongolian---Are Lined Up on the Map of the World, and the American People Are at a Perilous Point About It.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN
By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE
Pastor Second Baptist Church

IT was stated that Dr. John Bassett Moore had been brought into President Wilson's administration with no reference whatever to politics.

That was a very great mistake. Dr. John Bassett Moore is First Assistant Secretary of State precisely because he is such a politician — the broadest, biggest, world-wideliest politician at Washington.

The sort of politics that absorbs Professor Moore's attention is not as scrappy as the race for Constable in a small town, but for variety, strategy and ominousness it is the big game of the world.

It has been Professor Moore's life work to study the vaster forces of the human movement called civilization. He is the astronomer of the Democratic administration. With his telescope sweeping immense political areas, he locates the points of disturbance in the field of civilization and tells his superiors what to do about it.

He keeps a wise eye on the great mass formations in the scrimmage of nations and races. He has a man's job all right.

The Big Line-Up.

At this moment three great races—the Teuton, Slav and Mongolian—are lined up on the map of Europe and Asia.

They are looking each other in the eyes and each is confident of its ultimate ascendency. This is politics more than continental or international. It is the biggest, deepest, most titanic situation of human competition the mind of man ever contemplated.

The smaller questions occupying the foreground of public interest are bagatelles compared with the issue presented by racial ambition. Such immense energies are involved that to think of them as let loose upon each other appals the imagination.

Outside university cloisters, from which Dr. John Bassett Moore has emerged, few people have dared to entertain the problem of collision on so colossal a scale. Within each of these great race masses we are told that instinctive tendencies are not controlling the point of view of diplomacy, and these tendencies have become manifestly contripetal.

The family disputes within each of the race groups are to grow less and less frequent under the resistless pressures of race unities. Quarrels between England and Germany, for instance, or between Russia and the smaller Slav States, are decreasingly capable of serious consequences.

The get-together race movement is dominating the motive in world politics and the indications are that the Mongolian race will be the first to arrive at the goal of solidarity in a political game.

The Japanese Imbroglio.

Here is uncovered the background which renders American complications with Japan at the present time a subject of intense solicitude all over the world. The London Times is not given to groundless alarm and its Foreign Editor, Sir Valentine Chirot, has just sounded a solemn note on the subject:

"The ultimate point of dispute," he says, "does not affect the United States alone, still less California. It is a world question essentially. Fears of the inhabitants of the Pacific slope may be premature, but they are not entirely groundless. They spring from the instinct of self-preservation and if the present minor dispute is composed they will assuredly recur."

Commenting editorially on the situation, The Times says that: "However it may be settled now, the issue will have to receive the earnest attention of the white races in times to come."

The American people have heretofore occupied a superior attitude toward this "big politics" and has kept away from it, but fate seems now about to thrust upon us the necessity of putting out our hand toward it.

It is impossible to exaggerate the consequences which depend upon the hand we put out. If it is a fist we may as well get ready to tax ourselves, our children and children's children with the cost. There will be the price of trouble enough to last a hundred years.

Putting Our Fist In.

The expense of warships and army equipment, is an insignificant item in the reckoning. The losses in markets affecting American labor and capital, and particularly the cotton trade through a long period would be staggering.

But the really great sacrifice that a gladiatorial attitude our part in the problem of big politics would exact of us would be the surrender of the moral supremacy in relation to these things which the founders of the American republic committed to us and which the historians have cheerfully accorded.

Is it not our better destiny to play the part of a big, fearless, chivalric brother with courage, firmness and wisdom, and with fairness and patience, than to seek the role of the "Big Fist," or the "Big Stick" with the commonplace distinction which history has committed to all its boastful and selfish peoples?

Letters From The Georgian's Readers

FREE SCHOOL BOOKS.

Editor The Georgian:

The Constitution of Georgia provides for free public schools and provides a school fund for the support of such schools. The Constitution further provides for local taxation for public schools.

I hope that the Legislature will pass a law authorizing the State School Commissioner or some other public authority to purchase for the use of the public schools of the State all school books necessary for the children attending the schools.

This law would result in the saving of thousands of dollars annually to the people of Georgia.

I do not think the State itself should embark in the publication of free school books, but I am sincerely of the opinion that the State and towns and cities should furnish free school books.

A few of the reasons for my opinion are as follows:

1. The child of the poor man has the same chance to obtain an education as the child of the rich or well-to-do man.

2. The "thorough system of common schools" provided for by the Constitution of Georgia is thus made in fact a "thorough system" because to the free school house and free tuition is added free school books.

3. The work of the school can be begun without delay when school books are furnished at public expense and thus become effective from the beginning of the school term.

4. Uniformity in the use of school books throughout the State is thus secured—although under the Georgia adoption law uniformity is already obtained in the County schools.

5. The common schools, established for the education of the common people, are made popular and attendance is encouraged and prolonged.

6. The school books are public property and through the use of them respect for public property may be taught.

The following States have laws providing for free school books for the public schools: Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Nebraska, Maryland, Wyoming and Utah.

SHEPARD BRYAN.
Former Member Atlanta Board of Education.

WHY IS A FIRETRAP?

Editor The Georgian:

The Georgian quoted Professor Slaton, superintendent of Atlanta public schools, the other day as saying, "The Atlanta schools are firetraps."

The firetrap may be avoided by insisting that the architect observe the following simple rules: Every school house of more than one story should have at least two stairways, located at extreme opposite ends of the building, so that should fire break out at, say, the east end, and block that exit, the west end stairway would be the last part of the building to burn.

The stairs should not be located in the main corridors, where they would form a trap in case of panic, but in separate stairway halls, running out at right angles to the main corridors. They should land in immediate proximity to the exits, so the pupil will not have to run through the building looking for a way out. They should be 4½ feet wide, and have small round hand rails on both sides.

The main corridors leading to exits should be entirely free from obstruction of all kinds. The corridors should give free and unobstructed passage directly to exit doors that open outward at a slight push from inside.

Have all the steps that lead to the first floor on the outside of the building, so that if, in a rush to get out, a child falls or is thrown down he will be on the outside, where he can be rescued. Have no inside vestibule steps.

BURNS HIMSELF WILL TAKE UP INVESTIGATION OF PHAGAN SLAYING CASE

With the maze of contradictory statements sweeping an avalanche of suspicion upon the head of James Conley, the negro sweeper, the potent information was unearthed Thursday that Detective William J. Burns personally will take charge of the investigation into the Mary Phagan murder case which his operatives have been conducting.

Despite the published report that the Burns operatives had withdrawn from the case, and despite the procedure of the State in prosecuting its case against Leo M. Frank, the pencil factory superintendent, the Burns' investigation will continue and from now on be under the famous detective's direction.

This information came from Detective C. W. Tobie, William J. Burns' lieutenant, Thursday morning. It tends to show that Tobie, who has had charge of his agency's investigation here, does not consider the case as closed.

Mr. Tobie went so far as to deny emphatically the published interview with him, in which he was quoted as declaring Frank to be the guilty man.

Takes Evidence to Burns.

"From the evidence so far developed in the Phagan case, guilt is directed at Frank," the detective said with emphasis. "That was my statement. However, I was quoted as saying outright that Frank committed the murder. That was not true."

Mr. Tobie left Atlanta Thursday afternoon. He carried with him the evidence which he has gathered during his two weeks' probe of the case. He is going to New York. He will meet Burns there and place his material into the noted detective's hands. From then on Detective Burns will direct his operatives as to further investigations to be outlined by him.

This information but proves another link in the chain of circumstances which The Georgian has consistently pointed out in serious incrimination of Conley.

Negro Deeper in Suspicion.

With each cross-examination of the negro by the police in their attempts to secure more evidence against Frank, Conley has only insnared himself in guilt. His admitted falsehoods in former affidavits tending to throw the blame to Frank in connection with the "murder" notes have been accentuated as incriminating by the unqualified declarations of employees at the pencil factory that Conley is the guilty man.

Three responsible officials of the plant have outlined plausible theories as to how the negro could have committed the crime. These men, Herbert G. Schiff, who is assistant superintendent; E. F. Holloway, timekeeper, and N. V. Darley, general foreman, are acquainted with Conley. Upon their knowledge of him and the opportunity offered for accomplishing the murder they base their statements that he is guilty. They have proven beyond a doubt that Conley was in the factory for several hours on the day of the murder, and connecting with this the negro's contradictory statements as to his whereabouts they have compiled a most laudable explanation of how he killed the Phagan girl.

Give Credence to Story.

The detectives still held firmly to their theory that the negro was the most important witness against Leo M. Frank, in the face of the contradictory stories and lies in which he had been trapped.

They were strongly disposed to give full credence to Conley's second affidavit, although the negro's sudden anxiety to talk after three weeks of silence and the maze of falsehood in which he was at once involved served suddenly to shift the responsibility for Mary Phagan's death from Leo Frank to the sullen black man, in the judgment of many who have been following the evidence closely.

Chief Lanford and Detective Harry Scott, of the Pinkertons, announced Thursday morning, however, that they regarded the second affidavit of Conley as the final and conclusive piece of evidence needed in preparing a case against Frank.

Rejected First Affidavit.

Others who have weighed the evidence carefully declare there are many more significant indications that Conley was the slayer than there are

Mercer President Leads War on Frats

MACON, GA., May 29.—President S. Y. Jameson, of Mercer University, will himself, at the factulty meeting this afternoon, introduce a resolution to abolish the Greek letter fraternities at Mercer University. The preamble of his resolution reads:

"Whereas the Baptists, immemorially standing for a State without a king and a church without a bishop, have been apostles of liberty and equality, and whereas Greek letter fraternities are undemocratic in their very constitution as well as management, thereby creating class distinctions based on other grounds than merit and ability; therefore, be it resolved," etc.

Gambling in Food Under Senate's Ban

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The essential features of the Cummins bill to tax gambling in "all products of the soil, meats and provisions of all kinds" out of existence will be incorporated in the Underwood tariff bill by the Senate.

The amendment becomes germane to a tariff bill because it is designed, ostensibly, to raise revenue. The tax imposed is so high that no revenue would be collected and gambling operations would be prohibited through taxation.

Negro's Body Hangs In Court House Yard

AUGUSTA, GA., May 29.—What is left of the body of Richard Henry Austin, South Carolina negro desperado, to-day hangs to a tree in the court house square at Hampton, S. C. Before the body was suspended the head, one arm, the fingers and toes had been chopped off.

Austin died last night en route from Savannah to Hampton, having been fatally wounded by his captors near Newington, Ga., Tuesday night.

Austin assaulted a white woman and killed three white men near Hampton before he escaped several weeks ago.

Quarrel With Woman Results in Slaying

CLARKESVILLE, GA., May 29.—L. W. Crone, of near Clayton, Ga., is in jail here to-day charged with the murder of a steel worker from Pennsylvania, at Tallulah Lodge. Crone and a woman at whose house he was living engaged in a quarrel, when the slain man interfered, resulting in a fatal duel between the two men.

Crone claims self-defense. He is 35 years old. The dead man was 55.

The Interrupted Joy Ride; or, Wifey Was Under the Seat

MACON, GA., May 29.—A master plumber, his pretty young wife and his equally pretty stenographer were the participants in a domestic drama, with a comedy vein, this week.

The man, well known and well to do, aroused his wife's suspicions by requesting a hurried supper Tuesday night. When he declined to tell her where he was going after supper her suspicion was intensified.

When he departed in his automobile his wife was in the back tonneau under a rug.

The auto went to the home of the stenographer, who took the seat beside her employer, and thus they sped out into the country. When five miles out their conversation became so interesting that the wife could not conceal herself longer. Rising, she began wielding a poker.

She severely beat her husband and the pretty stenographer before the machine was stopped and they jumped out.

On the return home the stenographer occupied the rear seat and the wife sat beside her crestfallen husband.

A divorce suit is expected.

Boston Entertains Atlanta Old Guard

BOSTON, May 29.—Members of the Old Guard of Atlanta, in Boston to attend Memorial Day exercises, were guests Thursday of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company.

The Confederates were given an automobile ride to Lexington and Concord and a visit to the estate of Colonel Everett C. Benton, of Belmont. Friday the visitors from the South will go to the State House, place a floral tribute on the sailors' and soldiers' monument on Boston Common and in the afternoon take luncheon with E. W. Kinsley, a distinguished G. A. R. veteran.

Women Call Riding Astride Ban Silly

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Washington horsewomen consider General J. P. Hickman's order forbidding women to ride astride in the parade of the reunion of Confederate veterans at Chattanooga old-fashioned and out of date.

"I think the order foolish," said Mrs. Burleson, wife of Lieutenant Richard C. Burleson, of Fort Myer. "I am a Southern woman, but the new way of riding cross-saddle is much preferable."

3 in New York Face The Fate of Walker

NEW YORK, May 29.—Three cases of poisoning by the accidental swallowing of bichloride of mercury tablets under circumstances similar to the fatal case of B. Sanders Walker, of Macon, Ga., engaged the attention of New York doctors to-day.

The victims are Mrs. Rae Chesman, wife of a Bronx druggist; Mrs. Lawrance Simmons, of Rockaway Beach, L. I., a bride of three months, and Miss Emma Mammi, of the Bronx.

RAIL BOARD ORDERS CARS FOR RUSH CROWDS

Many Changes in Schedules Also Directed in the State Commission's Mandate.

SUBURBAN, AS WELL AS CITY LINES, TO BENEFIT

Improvements To Be Made Within Next Few Days—Frequent Conferences Held.

General improvement in the street car service in Atlanta furnished by the Georgia Railway and Power Company was ordered by the State Railroad Commission shortly after noon Thursday. Practically every line operated by the company is included in the list. The order specifies particularly the service rendered during rush hours.

The order, which will benefit thousands of persons who are compelled to use the street cars, was issued after several conferences between the Railroad Commission and President Arkwright, of the Georgia Railway and Power Company.

On May 5 Chairman Murphey Candler addressed a letter to Mr. Arkwright asking him to make suggestions for the betterment of the service during rush hours. This letter was replied to on May 23 by Mr. Arkwright, his letter going much into detail.

Suggestions made by Mr. Arkwright were considered at sessions of the commission Tuesday and Wednesday, during which time they were in conference with the street railway officials. It is understood that the order of the commission is agreeable to the company. The improvement of service will begin within the next few days.

Improvements Ordered.

Here are the improvements ordered:

ROUTE NO 2—Copenhill to Westview. Rearrangement of schedules so as to space the headway between cars now operated more nearly to four minutes and secure a more even distribution of the traffic loads. Counts of actual loads at peak points to be made during next five months and filed with the commission, so as to secure accurate information as to whether there is excessive congestion.

ROUTE NO. 4—Inman Park-Georgia Avenue. A three and one-third minute headway during morning and afternoon rush hours, on Inman Par end, with the Georgia Avenue end provided for by increased service on Route No. 5.

ROUTE NO. 5—West Peachtree and South Pryor. Additional cars between Sixth Street crossing on West Peachtree and Bass Street crossing on South Pryor, so as to give, during the morning and afternoon rush hours, a service with five minutes' headway.

ROUTE NO. 6—Forrest Avenue and Capitol Avenue. Actual counts to be made during morning and afternoon rush hours, at two peak points, during next five months, to accurately ascertain degree of congestion, if any, on this route.

ROUTE NO. 8—Fair and Marietta Streets. The afternoon rush hour service on this line has been recently extended from 6:30 to 7 p. m., and schedules now established more regularly sustained. Counts of traffic loads to be made on this route, as directed on No. 6.

ROUTE NO. 10—Whitehall and Peachtree: Increased service so as to provide for cars every three and one-third minutes, and extension of afternoon rush hour service to 9 p. m.

Suburban Service.

ROUTE NO. 17—Main Decatur: Additional tripper cars to Hayes Street, so as to give service to that point with three and one-third minute headway, and from there to Decatur on five minutes headway during morning and afternoon rush hours, with extension of service on ten-minute headway from end of afternoon rush hour period to 9:30 p. m., in lieu of present twenty-minute headway. After 9:30 p. m. the twenty-minute headway will be operated as now.

ROUTE NO. 19—River Line: Extra cars on Sundays during summer months to accommodate extra traffic. Counts of traffic loads to be

1,400 Taken From American Liner on Rocks Off England

LIVERPOOL, May 29.—The American liner Haverford, bound from Liverpool to Philadelphia with 1,400 passengers on board, crashed upon Daunts Rock, outside of Queenstown Harbor, to-day in a thick fog.

A big hole was rammed in the ship's hold and she began to settle. Wireless calls brought help, and all the passengers were taken off.

A wireless message said the ship was in a dangerous condition.

Taft Scores U. S. for "Lamb-Like" Policy

NEW HAVEN, May 29.—Former President Taft delivered his first lecture at Yale on the general topic, "Some Questions of Modern Government." He criticised the short sighted policy of the United States in not maintaining a sufficient army, and attacked the United States Senate for its attitude toward foreign nations.

"The policy of this country seems to be the Lord looks after the children and the drunken men and He ought to look after the United States," said Mr. Taft.

Militants Fire Hay And Farm Buildings

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 29.—Having terrorized most of the cities of England, the militant suffragettes now are paying their attentions to the rural districts.

Three fires were reported to-day from farms near Richmond. Haystacks and farm buildings were burned and about the ruins were scattered placards and copies of The Suffragette.

NOTTINGHAM, ENGLAND, May 29.—Suffragettes set fire to the freight sheds in the railroad terminal here to-day. The fire was extinguished after $5,000 damage was done.

Americans Victims In London Hotel Raid

LONDON, May 29.—American tourists were among the victims of a robbery at the fashionable Hotel Berkeley in Piccadilly early to-day. Armed burglars bound and gagged two porters, who were acting as watchmen, opened a safe and made off with a great sum of money and jewels.

Scotland Yard detectives were assigned to the case. It is believed the robbers fled to France. The Berkeley is one of the best-known hotels in London and much frequented by American tourists.

Self-Defense Plea Of Columbus Slayer

COLUMBUS, GA., May 29.—Walter Duke, a well-known Columbus young man, last night shot and killed Perry Argo, who came here recently from Cochran, Ga. Argo died en route to the city hospital. Duke was arrested and locked up to await a preliminary hearing. There were no eyewitnesses to the killing.

Duke claims self-defense. No statement was made by Argo before he died.

Wanamaker Faces Tariff Fraud Charge

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Attorney General McReynolds to-day announced that the charges of undervaluation of imports against John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, will be laid before the Federal Grand Jury.

The Attorney General conferred with President Wilson to-day after receiving a full report from his agent in Philadelphia, which he said, fully justified the proposed action of the department.

U. S. Armor Plant at $8,000,000 Urged

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The erection of an armor plate plant by the Government was urged again to-day by Senator Ashurst, of Arizona, despite the testimony of Rear Admiral Twining, chief of the United States Bureau of Ordnance, that an adequate factory would cost $8,000,000.

"The majority of the Democrats in the Senate and House are in favor of such a plant," said Senator Ashurst.

De Palma Qualifies For 500-Mile Race

MOTOR SPEEDWAY, INDIANAPOLIS, May 29.—In a shower that made running exceedingly dangerous, Ralph DePalma, in a Mercer car, qualified for the 500-mile race which starts at 10 o'clock to-morrow. His time for the 21-2 miles was 1:57:95, a rate of 76 1-2 miles an hour.

Knipper, in a Henderson car, made the lap in 1:52:87, at the rate of 80 miles an hour.

STEVENS BOY HELD

Innocent, Says Father

Wide Hunt for Slayer

WILLIAM STEVENS, husband and father of the woman and girl whose charred bodies were found in the fire ruins of their home on McDonough Road, and whose deaths are laid to a slayer. Mr. Stevess says his son is innocent.

Aged Veteran, Crushed by Tragedy, Joins in the Search. He Swears Vengeance.

Son in Chattanooga at Hour When Bodies of Mother and Sister Were Found.

Wade Stevens, son of William Stevens, whose wife and daughter were murdered and whose bodies were found in the charred ruins of their home, seven miles southeast of Atlanta, was arrested in Chattanooga at noon to-day. The DeKalb County Coroner's jury had recommended that the young man be arrested and held for investigation.

At almost the precise minute when Wade Stevens was arrested in Chattanooga, William Stevens, his father, having just arrived in Atlanta, made a statement to The Georgian completely exonerating the boy. The elder Stevens said his landlady, who knew Wade, had seen him in Chattanooga early Wednesday morning. This was just about the time the crime was discovered and only a few hours after its commission.

Detective John R. Black, of Atlanta, who was in Chattanooga attending the reunion, arrested young Stevens in the reunion city. He wired Chief of Police Beavers and was told to hold the young man, pending arrival of requisition papers.

Sheriff McCurdy later asked that Black bring the boy back, and Chief Beavers wired the detective to that effect. The police point out that if the boy took the 8 o'clock train Tuesday night to Chattanooga he, of course, is eliminated from the case.

Father Brokenhearted.

The father of the boy, a 70-year-old Confederate veteran, was heartbroken when he arrived in Atlanta at 10:50 o'clock this morning and heard for the first time of the double tragedy.

Stevens left Chattanooga at 3 o'clock this morning, but the train was delayed en route. Several friends went to the Union Depot to meet him, but he came from a rear car and left the station without meeting them.

The only information given him in Chattanooga was that his house had burned. Leaving the depot here, he went direct to the office of Carson & Treadwell, who handled his wife's real estate, where he learned all the details.

One of the firm of Carson & Treadwell told him of the double murder, and that his son, Wade Stevens, was wanted for investigation. The old veteran was dumfounded. He sank in a chair and remained silent for several minutes, then dramatically expressed belief in the innocence of his son and declared he would spend the remainder of his days hunting the slayer.

Declares Boy Is Innocent.

"All I have to live for now is to try to catch the murderer," he said. "I'll spend the rest of my days hunting him."

While in Chattanooga Stevens boarded at 166 Rossville Avenue. His son by a former marriage, Ed Stevens, also boarded there. The missing son, Wade Stevens, had stopped there previously and is well known to the landlady, who said she saw him in front of her home at 6 o'clock Wednesday morning.

"I believe my boy is innocent of this murder," said Mr. Stevens. "He was bad at times, but he never could have stooped so low as to murder his own mother and sister. He knows nothing about it yet.

"I know he had nothing to do with it, because he was in Chattanooga yesterday morning. When he drove me from home to the car line Sunday morning when I started to Chattanooga he told me he might be up there before the reunion was over.

"Yesterday afternoon the landlady told me the house had burned down.

REPRIMAND FOR CAPITAL POLICE

WASHINGTON, May 29.—A mild reprimand for the Washington police for permitting alleged rioting during the suffrage parade here on March 3 was contained in a report made public to-day by the special committee investigating the charges. The report, signed by Senators Jones, Dillingham and Pomerene, in part, reads:

"Some of the uniformed and more of the special police acted with apparent indifference, and in this way encouraged the crowd to press in upon the parade. There is not sufficient proof upon which to single out any particular individual for reproof or condemnation, however, and the many officers who proved faithful ought not to be discredited by those who prove faithless to their duties.

"No condition existed and none were threatened that warranted a request for United States troops, and the War Department went to the limit of its ability, if it did not exceed it, in detailing a troop of cavalry from Fort Myer."

The report recommended that legislation should be enacted by Congress giving the Commissioners of the District power to stop traffic on any street along which a permit has been given for a parade.

Mrs. Willet Stamps 'Turkey Trot' as O. K.

MACON, GA., May 29.—Mrs. Hugh M. Willett, of Atlanta, former president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, declared here to-day while in attendance upon the Sixth District Federated Clubs' convention that the "turkey trot" and other ultra-modern dances are perfectly proper if not carried to excess.

FELDER BRIBERY CHARGE EXPECTED

Believed Beavers Will Try to Have Grand Jury Consider Accusations Against Attorney.

That bribery charges against Colonel Thomas B. Felder and others will be placed before the Fulton County Grand Jury by police officials, was the indication when G. C. February, secretary of Chief of Detectives Lanford, and the person alleged to have been offered $1,000 in bribe money, secured a subpena Thursday afternoon for A. S. Colyar, Jr., to appear before Solicitor General Dorsey and give testimony Friday morning.

The subpena formally summoned Colyar, who was the author of the dictographing of Felder and Mayor Woodward, to appear before the Grand Jury. The preliminary hearing, however, will be in Solicitor Dorsey's office.

That February carried away with him a number of subpena blanks is taken to mean that others will be called upon to testify.

At the hearing of testimony Friday morning it is believed that Lanford and Police Chief Beavers will endeavor to show Solicitor Dorsey the plausibility of their bribery charges and ask that the matter be placed before the Grand Jury.

In line with this action, Chief Beavers called upon Carl Hutcheson, the attorney, again Thursday morning for the list of "protected disorderly houses" which Hutcheson declared he held, and which Hutcheson said he would reveal in an effort to prove that vice under police protection is rife in Atlanta.

Hutcheson three days ago, in answer to Beavers' defi, declared that he would give the police official the list on Thursday. On that day, however, Hutcheson stated the list was not yet prepared. He informed Beavers he would have it ready, though, within a short time.

MAZE OF LIES BY CONLEY CLOUD MYSTERY

reasons to believe that Frank is guilty.

The detectives rejected the first affidavit of Conley, in which he said Frank dictated Friday the notes that were found by the body of the slain girl Sunday morning on the ground that it was absurd and unbelievable to hold the theory that the murder was premeditated.

Yet they accept the second affidavit, which indicatesidentically the same thing, in that Frank met Conley at Nelson and Forsyth Streets before 11 o'clock Saturday morning, April 26, before the crime was committed, and told the negro to wait for him, later taking Conley to the factory with him, where Conley says that he wrote the notes at Frank's direction.

The negro, in his second affidavit suggests no other motive that could have impelled Frank to ask him to come to the factory shortly before noon on Saturday. Conley says that Frank told him to wait secreted on the first floor until he heard a whistle. When he heard the whistle he says he went upstairs and Frank dictated the notes.

Why Many Suspect Conley.

All of this is inescapably suggestive of premeditation on the part of Frank, if Conley's story is to be believed, but the theory of premeditation has been scoffed at by everyone, including Chief Lanford and Harry Scott.

In fact, it never seriously was considered by anyone, say those who are inclined to believe the evidence against Conley greatly outweighs that against Frank. The assertion is freely made that it would be far easier to convict Conley, if the police were so disposed, than it will be to convict Frank. Here are a few reasons advanced:

When the factory superintendent was permitted to go before the Coroner's jury by his attorney, he answered all the questions in a straightforward, unwavering manner, never once being trapped in a lie or misstatement.

In marked contrast is the conduct of Conley ever since his arrest at the time of the inquest three weeks ago. When discovered at the factory, he was washing a shirt which he sought to hide from the person who had found him out.

He was taken into custody and gave his address as 92 Tattnall Street. Investigation disclosed that Conley was lying and that he had not lived on Tattnall Street for months, his actual residence being 172 Rhodes Street.

He was asked to write, and he told the officers he could not write a word. He refused to be inveigled into making an attempt at handwriting of any sort. He would not put a pencil to paper that the detectives might get a specimen of his penmanship. For a long time they believed he was so ignorant he could not write his own name. Then they found some leases he had signed for watches and knew that he had been lying again.

Just as the Grand Jury was about to sit and it appeared likely that Frank would be indicted, the negro broke his silence for the first time. He told the detectives that it was he who had written the notes, but that he had written them at Frank's dictation on Friday, April 25. Frank had approached him in an aisle at the factory and had asked him to come into the office, he said. He remembered that it was four minutes before 1 o'clock.

That he had been at the factory Saturday he denied emphatically. Between 10 o'clock in the forenoon and 2 o'clock in the afternoon he had been on Peters Street, according to his story.

The detectives ridiculed his story and continued examining. Gradually he broke down under their questioning, and it was established that he had been lying again and that he actually had been in the factory Saturday, presumably at the very time the girl was murdered. This was the first time his presence in the factory on Saturday had been known.

He had kept it a most profound secret up to the time it was gouged out of him by the detectives. He weakened further and admitted that he had been hiding down on the first floor as persons went in and out.

He described practically every person that entered or left the factory between 12 and 1 o'clock. But he declared that he did not see Mary Phagan when she came in the building. Out of all who entered or left, the murdered girl and Lemmie Quinn appear to be the only ones he missed seeing, according to his story.

He explained this by saying that he must have fallen asleep for a little while. He saw Miss Corinthia Hall and Mrs. Freeman leave a few minutes before 1 o'clock, but did not see Mary Phagan enter about five minutes after the hour. Neither did he see Lemmie Quinn, who is said to have been at the factory about 12:15.

If the negro's final affidavit is taken as nearer the probable truth than his first, those who are acquainted with Frank are of the opinion that there are still most important questions to be answered convincingly. They are these, assuming that Frank is guilty:

"Why should a man of Frank's intelligence—a man who is highly educated and who has won a position of responsibility—virtually make a confidant of another man, especially an ignorant negro, easily broken down by the third degree of the police station?

"Why should a man of sense, if he wished to keep his crime undiscovered, proclaim it to the negro, in his office by the question: 'Why should I hang?'"

"Why should he approach this negro more than an hour before this crime was committed?

"Finally, why should a man of intelligence have recourse to notes at all when he would know they ultimately would serve to fasten the crime on the guilty person rather than to divert suspicion?"

If the detectives follow out their intention of using Conley as a material witness, it is regarded as likely that they will have difficulty in obtaining the acceptance of his affidavit and testimony in view of the many lies in which he has been trapped. The repudiation of the first affidavit, even on the representation that he set the date originally on Friday because of the fear that he would be hanged if admitting he was in the factory Saturday, is thought to render the second affidavit practically worthless, so far as its legal weight is concerned.

The fact that the detectives have corroborated Conley's description in his second affidavit of the persons he saw while he said he was in hiding on the first floor only more firmly establishes in the judgment of many the fact that Conley was at the factory the afternoon of the murder and had as favorable an opportunity to attack and kill Mary Phagan as Leo Frank had.

The corroboration, in their opinion, does not add one jot to the possibility that Frank might have dictated the notes.

MORSE TRYING TO RULE COAST SHIPS

NEW YORK, May 29.—Charles W. Morse, convicted of bank wrecking after the 1907 panic and pardoned by President Taft on the ground that he was dying, is not only attempting to secure a monopoly of Hudson River steamship traffic, but is reaching out along the Atlantic Coast.

This became known to-day when it was learned that Morse has bought four lake steamers for coastwise trade between New York and Southern ports and will attempt to become the dominant figure in steamship traffic on the Atlantic Coast he was planning to become when the financial earthquake of 1907 upset his schemes.

The ships are so big they can not be brought through the canal connecting Lakes Erie and Ontario, consequently they will have to be reduced in size. They will be enlarged after they reach this port.

Morse may extend his operations to the Pacific when the Panama Canal is completed.

ODD FELLOWS GO NEXT TO MACON

SAVANNAH, GA., May 29.—With the conclusion of business this afternoon the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows of Georgia adjourned to meet next year at Macon. A feature of to-day's session was the report of the committee on Odd Fellows' Home, headed by T. S. O'Neil. This report and the agitation to establish the home provoked the liveliest discussion of the meeting. Legislation affecting the conduct of lodges and complaints and grievances were also considered.

Two steamers took the visitors down the Savannah River this afternoon.

The election of Thomas M. Haynes, of Savannah, as grand master, the choice of other officers, including the retiring grand master, W. S. Coleman, of Cedartown, and Dr. L. B. Clarke, of Atlanta, as grand representative to the Sovereign Grand Lodge, and the competitive degree drill at the Savannah Theater last night, completed the session yesterday.

John W. Bennett, of Waycross, who went into the Grand Lodge with enough strength to elect him without difficulty, moved that Dr. Clarke be elected grand representative, and this was done by acclamation. The other officers are W. B. Sloan, Gainesville, deputy grand master; Frank Harrell, LaGrange, grand warden; T. R. Robertson, LaGrange, grand secretary, and C. A. Vonderluith, Athens, treasurer.

Mrs. Hester Millon, of Thomasville, was elected grand warden of the Rebekah Assembly, defeating Miss Nell Rodrigues, of Macon. The other officers are Mrs. J. W. Gholson, Milledgeville, president; Mrs. Ivy Henderson, Savannah, vice president; Mrs. A. L. Moore, Fitzgerald, secretary, and Mrs. Sarah Lutici, Augusta, treasurer.

Tariff Bill Delay Likely To Be Avoided

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Conferences between members of the Senate Finance Committee and members of the lower house who were in charge of various sections of the Underwood tariff bill will be the rule until the bill reaches the floor of the Senate.

The sub-committees were working on the bill to-day in secret session. If agreement can be reached between the tariff experts of the two houses the chances of long delay in conference will be avoided.

NEWBURGH, N. Y., May 29.—After having been out all night, the jury in the trial of Burton W. Gibson, the New York lawyer charged with strangling Countess Rosa Menschik Szabo on Greenwood Lake July 16, 1912, to secure her estate, was still deadlocked this morning.

It was rumored that the jurors stood 11 to 1 for conviction.

SLAIN WOMAN'S SISTER THINKS SON INNOCENT

She knew Wade, and she told me she saw him in front of her house yesterday morning, wearing overalls just as when he is said to have left home. Two boys were with him, but they didn't go in the house. Wade was in Chattanooga when my wife and daughter were murdered and he couldn't have done it."

Goes to See Ruins.

Leaving Carson & Treadwell's office, Mr. Stevens said he was going to the ruins of his home. He first visited the Patterson undertaking establishment and arranged for the funeral of his wife and daughter. Both bodies will be taken to Meansville, Ga., at 4 o'clock Friday morning, to be buried in the family lot, where Mrs. Stevens' father and mother both have been interred in the last two years.

Lonnie Blevins, 17 years old, who says he left San Francisco for Tampa and from there came to Atlanta, is held at police headquarters to-day. He said he arrived in Atlanta last Friday. He was detained because he could not give a connected story. The police attach little significance to his arrest or his presence in Atlanta.

Tells of Attempted Attack.

An important clew, given Sheriff J. A. McCurdy, of DeKalb County, who is in charge of the investigation, was revealed in the statement of a neighbor to the effect that a Mexican half-breed, formerly employed by Mrs Stevens, had attempted to attack Nellie Stevens some time ago.

This declaration was made by Miss Josephine McCaulay, 790 Glennwood Avenue, an intimate friend of both the slain mother and daughter. Miss McCaulay said that only a few days ago Mrs. Stevens had told her of shooting at the discharged halfbreed when he appeared at the country home. Mrs. Stevens had said that she fired twice at the man, and that he escaped into the clump of woods adjoining the house. Sheriff McCurdy has ordered a country-wide search made for the halfbreed.

Discovery Wednesday morning that Mr. Stevens had purchased an axe some days ago offers a possible clew to the weapon used by the murderer in crushing the skulls of his victims. The axe is, so far, missing, though the ruins of the burned dwelling and surrounding vicinity have been carefully searched for it.

Ax Apparently Used.

The sharp, knifelike cut across the top of Nellie Stevens' skull seems to bear out the theory that the murderer used the ax to slay his victims.

Possibility that the weapon used by the murderer was thrown into the well near the house has lead Sheriff McCurdy to order the well dragged.

Atlanta police and detective officials have joined with the DeKalb force to solve the mystery. Detective Chief Lanford assigned Mounted Policeman Hamilton, who was a close friend of the Stevens family, and Detective Rosser to work on the case. Sheriff McCurdy obtained this reinforcement Thursday morning when he held a conference with Lanford.

A unique incident of the blaze which burned the Stevens home to ashes was revealed in the finding of fifty-seven chickens dead in a coop fifty feet away. The coop was not even scorched by the heat.

That robbery was the motive of the murderer has been established by the disappearance of jewelry and a large quantity of money which Mrs. Stevens was known to have had in the house at the time.

Woman's Jewels Missing.

Neighbors stated that Mrs. Stevens possessed a diamond ring valued at $400 and two gold watches. These are missing.

Coupled with other theories as to the murder is one which shows the work that of two negroes who were said to have been seen driving away from the burning home at sunrise Wednesday morning. The men rode in a one-horse wagon, the body of which was filled with oats. Tracks of the horse were found on a spot near the ruins. In the immediate vicinity was discovered a small pile of fresh oats. Human footprints were found nearby.

Despite the assertion that the negroes drove away, Sheriff McCurdy's men made a careful search of the woods surrounding the home, believing it highly probable that the murderer might have hidden therein to watch the burning house, and will scour the woods again to-day. Another theory is that he might have been wounded by Mrs. Stevens before he killed her, and had been forced to drag himself to the woods for escape. That the man may be lying there now is a possibility expressed by the police. The shell found in the shotgun used by Mrs. Stevens was found to have been discharged.

Does Bible Give Clew?

A search Thursday morning of an old deserted cabin 100 yards from the destroyed Stevens' home, in which Mrs. S. C. Stevens and her adopted daughter, Nellie, were murdered and then cremated, disclosed a Bible containing numerous marked passages, tragically coincident with the reported conduct of her own son toward her. This cabin was occupied at different times by negro servants who worked on the Stevens place. It had been vacant for three weeks.

The Bible reposed on a dust-covered mantel in the dingy shack. On the flyleaf appeared this inscription:

"Mrs. S. C. Stevens' book."

In the list of the Ten Commandments, two of them were marked in pencil. They were:

"Thou shalt not kill."

"Honor thy father and thy mother."

Several passages in the book of Exodus were marked, all bearing on the relation of the son to the parents. One of these reads:

"And he that smiteth his father or his mother shall surely be put to death."

Verses of the same chapter were also marked, one reading:

"And he that curseth his father or his mother shall surely be put to death."

"And if any mischief follow, then thou shalt surely give life for life."

Negro Is Sought.

Walter Wilkes, a negro, who occupied the deserted cabin until three weeks ago, is being sought by officers Friday in the general plan of investigating every one on whom suspicion might possibly turn. Where he went after leaving the Stevens' home has not been learned.

The search of the cabin revealed discarded clothing, supposed to have been left by Wilkes. The clothing is said to have been damp. On an old table was also found a caseknife.

In the corner of the room was an old axe. It bore spots, but these are believed to be rust. This is not thought to be the missing Stevens' axe, which was practically new and bright. Sheriff McCurdy said Thursday he believed this axe was at the bottom of the well in the yard of the burned home.

Search is also being made for an unidentified negro who once worked for a Mrs. Nort, said to be a friend of Mrs. Stevens. This negro wrote Mrs. Nort a letter asking her for a recommendation, but she failed to grant his request. Last Saturday the negro is said to have called her up over the telephon and remarked that he didn't need a recommendation anyway, "that he was working for her friend, Mrs. Stevens." No one has been found who knows anything of this negro. He is described as being black and thick.

.... .. Gun Shell Is Found. .. ....

B. R. Peavy, a farmer who was on the scene of the crime all night, made an extended search of the ruins, and in the room where the charred bodies were found discovered a shotgun shell. The primer was dented, indicating that it had been fired. The single-barreled shotgun found beside the remains of Mrs. Stevens was empty. Peavy also found a discharged revolver cartridge, of .38 caliber. Mrs. Stevens' revolver is said to have been of 32 caliber.

Her revolver is still missing.

The finding of the discharged cartridges has only served to intensify the baffling mystery as to what took place in the murder room. It has given rise to several theories. It has been suggested that there may have been a gun battle between Mrs. Stevens and the assailant. There is still another theory that the murderer may have shot Mrs. Stevens with a revolver, and, as she fell, seized the shotgun, with which she was trying to defend the home, and with it shot the girl to death. Officers are satisfied that Mrs. Stevens had leaped from bed and seized the shotgun to protect herself and little Nellie, but it is a matter of pure speculation as to how the shell came to be discharged.

The time of the tragedy, or at least of the fire, was fixed Thursday in a statement by Farris Simmons, a brakeman of the Southern Railway, who said he passed on his train between 12 and 1 o'clock Wednesday morning and saw the house in flames. The railroad is but a short distance from the burned home. This would make it positive that the murder was committed about midnight or before that hour, and the Stevens boy will merely have to show that he left for Chattanooga before that time.

Suspect Trailed.

Telephone information from Red Oak, a short distance south of Atlanta, was received at the police station Thursday afternoon to the effect that a suspicious stranger, believed to be Dan Walker, the suspected halfbreed Indian who was shot at by Mrs. Stevens several weeks ago when he insulted her adopted daughter, had passed through that place yesterday.

Policeman Clarence Hamilton, who is detailed on the mystery with Detective Rosser, immediately notified Fairburn, Newnan, Palmetto and other towns along the route to be on the lookout for the half-breed and take him into custody, pending instructions from Atlanta.

Sister Believes Son Innocent.

In a darkened room in a little house at 33 Dalney Street, with a physician in almost constant attendance, lies a woman prostrated by grief. Absolute quiet has been ordered by the doctor and the anguish tears at her heart in a silence broken only by her own sobs and the hushed patter of childish footsteps as her children play quietly about the house.

She is Mrs. Pearl Hartley, sister of Mrs. Sarah C. Stevens, whose charred body was found lying beside that of her adopted daughter in the smoking ruins of their farm home seven miles from Atlanta. Prostrated by the shock of the tragedy, with her imagination made vivid by her suffering and grief, Mrs. Hartley is seeing in the darkness of her room the terrible happenings of that night of horror.

Mrs. Hartley's only surcease from suffering came for a few moments late Wednesday afternoon, when, under the influence of opiates administered by her physician, she recovered sufficiently to talk to a Georgian reporter. Mrs. Hartley sobbed audibly throughout the interview, and her eyes, red with weeping and reflecting the anguish that tore at her heart, emphasized her words as she cried for vengeance on the murderer.

"Why do they always murder women?" she cried. "It is terrible. Little girls are murdered when they go onto the street, and now a woman is not safe even in her own home."

Faints at News.

The notifying of Mrs. Hartley of the death of her sister and niece formed one of the most dramatic and pathetic incidents of the entire tragedy. She was downtown Wednesday morning shopping, when word came to her home on Dalney Street that her sister and niece had been murdered. Mrs. Lena Thompson, a neighbor, of 24 Dalney Street, volunteered to go downtown and find Mrs. Hartley and tell her the sad news.

After a search of an hour Mrs. Thompson found Mrs. Hartley in the Kress store on Whitehall Street. As she stood trying to locate the sister of the murdered woman in the crowd of shoppers Mrs. Hartley, warned by intuition that something was wrong, pushed through the crowd and hurried to Mrs. Thompson.

"What is it?" she cried. "What's the matter?"

Mrs. Thompson, seeking to break the news gently, told her that her sister's home had burned down and that she had been badly injured.

"It's worse than that," Mrs. Hartley cried. "I feel it! I know it is worse than that!"

She screamed and fainted in the arms of Mrs. Thompson. She was soon revived and taken to her home. Mrs. Thompson endeavored to calm her on the trip on the street car with the assurance that everything was all right.

As Mrs. Hartley entered her yard, one of her little daughters ran out of the house, tears streaming down her face.

"Oh, mamma," she cried, "Aunt Sarah and Cousin Nellie have been killed!"

With a scream, Mrs. Hartley fell to the ground in a swoon. She was picked up by Mrs. Thompson and members of her family and carried into the house. A physician was called and administered opiates. Under the influence of the medicine she was able to sit up in bed for a few moments late in the afternoon, but collapsed again when she learned that her nephew, the son of the murdered woman, was being sought by the police as the murderer of his mother.

MRS. WILLIAM STEVENS, in two photographs, and below, her daughter, Nellie, who were slain and their bodies incinerated in their lonely country home on McDonough Road. The two women were alone when they met death, their husband and father, a Confederate veteran, being in Chattanooga to attend the reunion. He has hurried home to join in the hunt for the slayer.

made on this route week days, as directed on other named routes, to accurately ascertain measure of regular traffic.

ROUTE NO. 20—College Park, East Point and Hapeville: Actual counts of week-day loads at peak points to be made during next five months, to ascertain accurately if there is over-congestion in regular traffic.

ROUTE NO. 23—Buckhead Line: Tripper service previously ordered by the commission to Sixth Street on West Peachtree has been recently extended by the company to Dead Man's Curve, the end of double track, which gives local service this far on a ten-minute headway during rush hours and to that extent relieves congestion on the Buckhead cars. In addition, double-headers in the morning and afternoon hours, for congestion during those hours arising out of construction work in the northern part of the city, are operated and will be continued as necessity demands. Counts, during morning and afternoon rush hours, for the next five months, of actual loads at the peak point of the Buckhead line, have been ordered, and will determine the necessity of further relief on this route.

Fear's Wives Were Near, Beer and Dear

CHICAGO, May 29.—That George Fear, who disappeared mysteriously in Chicago recently, and who was alleged to have wives under the names Near, Beer, Fear and Dear, was a Mormon was the explanation made in the County Court yesterday by an investigator who had discovered the case.

Fear is said to have come to Chicago with his various wives to work on an invention. The high cost of living sent him scurrying back to Utah, the investigator told the court.

Recall Clamor Laid To Corrupt Lawyers

WASHINGTON, May 29.—On the shoulders of corrupt lawyers, Senator Charles E. Townsend, of Michigan, speaking before the graduates of the Washington College of Law, placed the burden of blame for the agitation for the recall of judges.

The speaker took to task a class of "shrewd and highly educated lawyers," whom he termed "flaw finders," and declared they were "enemies of decent government."

COUNCIL TO PURCHASE CREMATORY THIS YEAR, ASSERT CITY OFFICIALS

Payment of the Entire Cost, Even if Other Work Is Sacrificed, Declared To Be Only Solution of Tangle Following Court Ruling.

Leading city officials declared Thursday that the one way to settle the crematory tangle was to pay the entire cost of the new plant this year under a new contract with the Destrucor Company, of New York; and they further asserted they believed council would pursue that course at a sacrifice of other special improvements.

Mayor Woodward declared he was willing to buy the Destructor Company's plant on a real business basis. Alderman Candler said the city must have an incinerator this summer if everything else had to be sacrificed. Councilman Claude L. Ashley favors buying the plant straight out. Councilman George H. Boynton agreed with them.

City Attorney James L. Mayson, after carefully studying the decision of the Supreme Court holding the old contract illegal, said it was the simplest plan.

Agree Plant Is Necessity.

All agreed that Atlanta must have a new garbage disposal plant this summer at all hazards. They argued that it was equally as obvious that the only possible plant was the Destructor plant. This plant will be completed within 30 days. The means of having it completed and put into use are as follows:

To buy it straightout.

To submit the old contract to a vote of the people, when it will have to be approved by two-thirds of the registered voters.

For citizens to lend the purchase price and, without any contract, take their chances on being repaid by Council.

For the Destructor Company to complete the plant without any contract and trust to the judgments of succeeding Council to complete the payments.

Attorney Mayson said the complications surrounding the latter propositions are so great that the first plan practically was the only sure way.

Has $125,000 Set Aside.

Council has $125,000 already set aside for this year's payment on the crematory. There is $71,000 available in the June sheet. Councilman Boynton said to-day that the tax books showed that $50,000 additional could be added to the increase of revenue. Money for various improvements is still unspent and Council has the right to recall these appropriations. Also, if a cash payment is to be made, it is said the Destructor Company will reduce its original price by some thousands of dollars.

The old contract provided for a $100,000 electric power plant in conjuction with the crematory. But the councilmen say this feature can be eliminated for the present, in view of the serious garbage situation.

Expect Mayor to Balk.

A special meeting of the Board of Health has been called for Thursday night to consider the whole matter. The Finance Committee will meet Friday morning to make up the June budget. It is expected that by the time Council meets Monday afternoon the whole matter will be decided. But the chances are small that the mayor will agree.

Samuel Evins, attorney for the Destructor Company, announced Thursday that the company would proceed with the erection of the plant. The Supreme Court order does not go into effect for ten days and by that time Council probably will have made a new contract, thus averting any interference in the progress of garbage disposal by the court's decision.

Councilman Ashley, chairman of the Sanitary Committee, declared that the garbage situation was a matter of life and death. He sserted tht unless the crematory was put into operation this summer, by fall the people would be dying like flies.

Two Ready to Give $1,000.

He and Councilman Boynton agreed to start a subscription of $1,000 each by which citizens would buy the plant and take their chances on Council repaying them.

In striking contrast to the attitude of alarm of the councilmen was the smile of Mayor Woodward. Council overrode his position on the crematory issue at every turn but he held out that he would never sign a check in payment on the contract unless ordered to do so by the Supreme Court. He holds that the city is being charged far too much for the plant.

"It justifies my numerous attacks on Council's business methods," he said to-day. "I warned them when they tore down that old crematory that they would be howling this summer that we had no crematory. I now inform them that I am going to break that $100,000 fire alarm contract and prevent any other moral obligation contracts going through.

Calls Ruling Far-Reaching.

"Of course, we must have a crematory. I am willing to buy the Destructor plant on a business basis. I am willing to pay them in proportion to what they received for the Milwaukee plant. They got $200,000 for a 300-ton plant there; ours is a 250-ton plant."

City Attorney Mayson said the Supreme Court's decision was far reaching.

"There was no question that one Council could not bind another," he said. "But this decision is that the appropriation of a sum of money which would tend to make succeeding Councils appropriate money for the same purpose tends toward coercion and is, therefore, illegal."

Players' Comedy to 'Draw Big'

Society Will Turn Out in Force

Brilliant House to Greet Artists

Society will turn out en masse at the evening with the Players' Club June 3. Oscar Wilde's sparkling comedy, "The Importance of Being in Earnest," will be interpreted by Atlanta artists, pronounced proficient by professional instructors.

Advance seat sales indicate a capacity audience. Tickets have been on sale only a few days, but few are left. Choice seats especially were in great demand.

The boxes will be filled by as brilliant a company as ever went in one evening to grand opera. Several theater parties already made up will be scattered among the audience. Supper parties will be given after the show at the Piedmont Driving Club.

Among the hosts and hostesses at box parties will be Governor-elect and Mrs. Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson, Mrs. William D. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Felder, Judge and Mrs. Arthur Powell, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Cooney and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Speer.

The following well-known society leaders will appear in the cast: Miss Hildreth Burton-Smith, Mrs. William Owens, Mrs. Slaton, Mrs. H. B. Scott, Lamar Hill, Marshall Adair, Hamilton Douglas, Jr., and Frank Taylor.

AID ASKED IN WAR ON TUBERCULOSIS

Association Appeals to Atlanta to Make Up $5,000 of $10,000 Needed Yearly.

Unless the Atlanta Anti-Tuberculosis Association can secure the $5,000 in subscriptions, for which it has asked the people of Atlanta, the officials state it will be seriously handicapped in its work this year. There has been collected less than 15 per cent of the fund the public was asked to give.

The association, nevertheless, is prosecuting its work more vigorously than ever, responding to every call and seeking to better conditions and lend assistance wherever possible.

Example is given of an Atlanta family of eight members, in which five of the children have tuberculosis. The bread winners of the family, all under 16 years earn $9.30 a week in a mill. The association makes it a point to keep close supervision upon families of this sort, to win their affection and insist on carefulness in their habits, to prevent the spread of the disease.

Three children to give another case, making $15 a month, earn the entire living for a family of eleven. When the elder of these children contracted tuberculosis the family income was reduced more than half. It took not only argument, but force, to get this girl into a sanitarium, where she has been committed until sufficiently improved to resume her occupation.

Contending with hundreds of cases of this sort every year, the association is in need of an income which will enable it to get definite results. It needs for this purpose $10,000 annually. Of this amount the public is asked to give $5,000.

JACKSON TO ENTER BANKING BUSINESS

Retiring Collector of Revenue Announces He Will Represent Northern Companies

Henry S. Jackson, whose resignation as Collector of Internal Revenue takes effect July 1, will remain in Atlanta as Southern representative for Chicago, Pittsburg and New York banking houses. At first he will retain his present office in the Inman Building, but later will take a suite in one of Atlanta's new office buildings.

Already Mr. Jackson is transacting financial business. Thursday he negotiated a loan of $150,000 in behalf of an Atlanta building enterprise.

"I shall retain my interest in political affairs," said Mr. Jackson, "and shall continue as Republican national committeeman from Georgia."

$3.50 Recipe Free, For Weak Men

Send Name and Address To-day—You Can Have it Free and Be Strong and Vigorous.

I have in my possession a prescription for nervous debility, lack of vigor, weakened manhood, failing memory and lame back, brought on by excesses, unnatural drains, or the follies of youth, that has cured so many worn and nervous men right in their own homes—without any additional help or medicine—that I think every man who wishes to regain his manly power and virility, quickly and quietly, should have a copy. So I have determined to send a copy of the prescription free of charge, in a plain, ordinary sealed envelope, to any man who will write me for it.

This prescription comes from a physician who has made a special study of men, and I am convinced it is the surest-acting combination for the cure of deficient manhood and vigor failure ever put together.

I think I owe it to my fellow-men to send them a copy in confidence so that any man anywhere who is weak and discouraged with repeated failures may stop drugging himself with harmful patent medicines, secure what I believe is the quickest acting restorative, up-building SPOT-TOUCHING remedy ever devised, and so cure himself at home quietly and quickly. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, 4276 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send you a copy of this splendid recipe in a plain, ordinary envelope free of charge. A great many doctors would charge $3.00 to $5.00 for merely writing out a prescription like this—but I send it entirely free.

TALLULAH FALLS SUIT IS ARGUED BY COUNSEL

Verdict in Power Company Land Case Expected Thursday Afternoon at Clayton.

CLAYTON, GA., May 29.—The suit of the State of Georgia against the Georgia Railway and Power Company to determine ownership of the gorge at Tallulah Falls will reach the jury early this afternoon and a verdict is expected before night.

Argument, which began yesterday afternoon and continued for 3 1-2 hours until court adjourned for the day, was resumed when court reconvened this morning, with 4 1-2 hours of time allotted the lawyers to be consumed.

Edgar Watkins, of Atlanta, opened for the State, being followed by Alex King, of Atlanta, for the power company, who in turn was followed by W. S. Paris, of Clayton, for the State. He was the last speaker yesterday. This morning H. H. Dean, of Gainesville, was the first speaker, representing the power company. The others in turn were R. C. Ellis, of Tifton, for the State; Luther Z. Rosser, of Atlanta, for the power company, and Attorney General T. S. Felder, closing for the State.

Mr. King brought a trunk full of law books from Atlanta and he quoted at length from these in support of the power company's contentions that it has clear titles to the Tallulah Falls gorge lands. Lawyers for both sides referred frequently and in detail to the surveys and plats filed as exhibits to the testimony of Professors Strong and Koch, of the University of Georgia, who made surveys of the gorge for the State. The documentary evidence of deeds, land grants and other old papers bearing on the titles to these lands were stressed by the attorneys in support of their respective contentions.

Judge J. B. Jones, in his charge to the jury, will review much of this evidence and instruct the jurors on the law involved. It is thought the jury will remain out but a short time.

Danger Signal Set For DeWolf Hopper

ALTOONA, PA., May 29.—"The Furrys for generations have revived the sacredness of the marriage vow, and the reports that my daughter Elda has been married to De Wolf Hopper pain me greatly," said David E. Furry, a butcher of this city, today.

"If Hopper loves my daughter and means well I will be satisfied, but if he married her like he took up with his other four wives, as he would a plaything, it will be an outrage that I will not stand for," the irate father announced.

Goodwin's Mother Favors 5th Wedding

BOSTON, May 29.—"I don't blame him for marrying for the fifth time," said Mrs. Caroline R. Goodwin today regarding the marriage of her son, Nat Goodwin, the actor, to Marjorie Moreland.

"He married for love this time. I think it's all right.

"Two of his wives are dead. As for the divorced two—well, sometimes there are some things a man simply can't stand for."

Penrose Says, 'Teach Boys Cooking, Too.'

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania, speaking at the graduating exercises of the National School of Domestic Arts and Sciences, deplored inventions which have done away with our puritanical ideals.

Cooking is becoming a lost art, he said. He also declared that boys should be taught cooking as well as girls.

POWERS TO HALT NEW WAR MOVE IN BALKANS

Servia Remobilizes Troops in Preparation for Clash With Bulgaria.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SALONIKA, May 29.—The entire Turkish population in the village of Hadji was massacred by Bulgarian troops, according to a dispatch received here to-day.

LONDON, May 29.—The powers of Europe have begun to bring pressure upon Bulgaria, Servia and Greece to prevent a fresh conflict in the Balkans.

The Ambassadors believe that if the Balkan states and Greece can be held in accord until the protocol of a peace treaty with Turkey is signed that the issues causing dissension among the states of the Balkan Confederation can be settled by arbitration to the satisfaction of all.

Sir Edward Grey, British Foreign Minister, said to-day that he expects all the Balkan peace envoys to sign the preliminary draft of a Turco-Balkan treaty to-morrow.

Servia Prepares To Fight Bulgaria.

VIENNA, May 29.—Servia has begun the remobilization of her reservists on account of the critical relations with Bulgaria.

A telegram from Sofia says that Bulgaria is on the point of breaking off all diplomatic relations with Servia because of the unsatisfactory character of a statement made yesterday by Premier Pastich of Servia setting forth Servia's attitude in the Balkan crisis.

Premier Venizelos of Greece is expected to arrive in Sofia either tonight or to-morrow and will at once enter into negotiations with Czar Ferdinand in an effort to effect a conciliatory settlement.

France to Cut Duty On Horses for Food

PARIS, May 29.—With a view to reducing the cost of living the Chamber voted to-day to reduce the import duty on horses intended for slaughter from $30 to $10. A rebate will be granted on the production of a certificate that they have been killed for food.

There are in France 700 places where horses are slaughtered. Paris consumed 60,000 in 1911, valued at $40 to $50. Horse meat sells at 3 1-2 cents a pound.

Settle Quarrel With Duel by Avalanche

GENEVA, May 29.—A duel by avalanche was the method chosen by two rivals for the hand of an Italian girl.

To settle their claims the men, who live below Mont Blanc, decided to stand for several hours every day in the path usually followed by avalanches on the mountain side until one of them was swept to death.

Makes Will, Then Fights Fatal Duel

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., May 29.—Joseph Stoughton, a hotel proprietor of Lexington, Ill., is dying to-day following a revolver duel with Grant Preble, an automobile dealer, of the same town. Preble is severely wounded and physicians to-day said he might die.

The duel occurred on the streets a few minutes after Stoughton had made a will leaving his property to his wife.

Beggar, With $1,000 Jewels, Arrested

MACON, GA., May 29.—Although he was arrested for begging on the streets, J. W. Hill, alias J. W. Greer, who says Fort Worth, Texas, is his home, had diamonds worth $750, two watches, each valued at $50, other jewelry worth $100, and $80 in money on his person when searched at police headquarters.

He paid a nominal fine for violating a city ordinance in soliciting alms.

BIG WORKS CHECKS SMOKE NUISANCE

The big smokestack on Joseph May & Sons' Dry Cleaning Works, 154 Orme Street, has ceased to belch great columns of smoke—not because the plant is shut down, but because a smoke preventer has been installed.

L. C. Commerford and Charley Heer, of Atlanta, yesterday gave a demonstration of the invention, which promises great things toward abating the smoke nuisance in this city. About two weeks ago Commerford put the smoke consumer to work. Since then there has been rejoicing in the immediate neighborhood.

Burns the Smoke.

The name of the preventer is the "Climax" and it works on the steam jet principle. Four jets, attached to the furnace just above the door, force in cold air from below and steam from above in the fire box. The steam forces the smoke from off the fire bed and slams it up against the back wall of the furnace.

When the smoke hits the back wall it turns a flip-flop and comes back over the flame. Here it is met with the air which is forced in from the under side of the jet. The air holds it for a fraction of a second and the smoke is actually burned. The oxygen and hydrogen with the furnace gases and flame consume the carbon or smoke, which is nothing more than vaporous coal.

Can Be Regulated.

The smoke ordinance in Atlanta allows a stack to smoke 12 minutes in an hour. With the "Climax" smoke consumer the objectionable smoke is eliminated entirely, or, if the operator wished to save steam so that he is just complying with the law, there is a device on the "Climax" which by means of a water pot gradually fills with water taken from the steam. When full, the little water pot trips a trigger and the smoke preventer is cut off. This device can be regulated to suit the operator.

A large number of "Climax" smoke preventers are now in use in Boston, where the smoke ordinance is rigidly enforced. The "Climax" has been tried out in other cities and has given satisfaction in every instance.

Mutes Would Move Cave Spring School

MACON, GA., May 29.—When the Georgia Association for the Deaf and Dumb meets in Macon in annual convention on June 5 and 6 a formal demand will be put on record for the location of the State School for the Deaf and Dumb at some place other than Cave Spring.

Ross Johnson, a celebrated cartoonist, will deliver a lecture, in the finger language, illustrated by drawings, on "Why We Want a New School, or Where Is Cave Spring?"

Governor Brown and Mayor Moore are to make the addresses of welcome. I. H. Marchman, of Atlanta, is president of the association.

The Great End-of-the-Month Sale

This End-of-the-Month Sale Means That Merchandise Is Not Permitted to Grow Old Here. The Clearance Sale Current sweeps out all exhausted assortments each month. Nothing allowed to linger. Hence the stock is always new and fresh.

Sale starts Friday at the opening of the doors; ends Saturday at the tap of the closing bell. "Prizes" to early comers.

All charge purchases made during this sale will be transferred to the June statement mailed July 1st.

All Our $2 Shower-Proof Foulards at 98c

Silk prices clipped to less than half. 'Tis a fair sample of how we slash prices in the End-of-the-Month Sale. The saving, moreover, is not on stale, worn-out silks, but on the staple, spick and span foulards. Every $2 foulard in stock included; not an inch reserved.

These foulards are all shower-proof. They are 42 inches wide—little is required for a dress. We have sold them freely at their price of $2 a yard. But color exhaustion and broken lines deplete the price—out they go to-morrow at 98c. Included are the staple black, browns, navy and Copenhagen blues and greens. Some in solid colors, some with the floral spaced patterns, some in stripes, some in dots—just a fair assortment of everything that has been "good" this season. Only 98c.

New Silks at Prices to Bid You Pause

Because these are the smart, new, fashionable silks that women will want throughout the summer, for traveling, for mountain and seashore and street wear we stress in big type the little prices at which they are to sell. Look here:

39c
For 59c to 85c Kimono Silks

10 pieces of fine kimono silk. Some solid colors, with borders; others in the floral, Jap or characteristic kimono patterns. About all colors. 22-inch.

$1 Foulards 55c

85c and $1 foulards in about 35 different patterns. All are proof against spottings. Full range of colors.

(Silks, Main Floor—Left Annex)

For $1.00 to $1.25 Silks

Here are soft, shimmery chiffon taffetas to make the smartest of street dresses and suits. Solid colors, and changeables in about every color on the card save black and white. 26-inch. Also handsome messalines in neat stripes and floral patterns—the identical styles that sell readily everywhere at $1 and $1.25. Only 49c.

For Smart $1.50 Silks

These are the handsome Tussah crepe de chines—soft crinkly crepes now so much in favor. We have just eight pieces left in solid color tan, mustard, brown, Nell rose, Copenhagen, rose and taupe. Yard wide. Also at 59c are 24-inch silk serge suitings in solid colors and fancies and fancy silks in rather wide variety of patterns and colors.

For $2.50 to $3.00 Silk Chiffons

Silk voiles and chiffons, loveliest fabrics of the foreign looms. Street and evening shades; some with deep border of charmeuse silk, some with silk stripes, some bestrewn with flowers. The silks such as these are fashionable the year around. 44 inches wide; very little is required for a dress. $2.50 and $3 qualities for 95c.

For $1.50 to $3.00 Silks

Charming Dolly Madison silks now on sale in the best stores at $1.50 a yard. Neat stripes bestrewn with dainty sprays or flowers. Blue, grey, Copenhagen, tan. Also $3 Cloth of Gold silk at 98c. Also $2.25 oyster white pongee Motor cloth for suits and coats. Yard wide. Also $1.50 light blue silk poplin, 40-inch. Also $3 gold and blue silk changeable serge at 98c.

A "Once-in-a-While" Opportunity to Save Greatly On Your New Suit, Waist, Coat, Skirt or Dress

Despite the low prices, nearly every garment is spick, span new. Don't forget that! The buyer is just back from New York—these new garments represent makers' surplus stocks and overplus lots. It's like getting back almost half your purchase price on each transaction:

HEARST PAPERS FORCE NAVAL EFFICIENCY

Secretary Daniels to Win Recruits by Making Warships Training Schools.

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The Hearst papers, in advance of other American newspapers, exposed the fact that the American navy was not much more than half-manned.

The Hearst papers made the statement, later so emphatically confirmed, that not a battleship in the great Hudson River display of last October could have gone out to sea to fight without a shortage of from three to five officers and a shortage of from 150 to 300 men.

These newspapers developed the fact that few men were enlisting in the navy and gave the cause for this in the fact that our navy offered so few inducements and attractions for American youths to enlist in that branch of our country's service.

The Hearst papers are now able to give the first exclusive information that these unfavorable conditions are to be changed.

Information comes from the Navy Department that Secretary Daniels has caught the progressive movement urged so long in these newspapers and is going to make the American navy a more attractive and a more profitable place for the American youth who is willing to serve his country and does not desire altogether to forget himself.

Ships as Naval Schools.

The Secretary of the Navy plans that hereafter every battleship and war vessel shall be a naval school—an industrial school—a school of the sciences and incidentally of the arts. When the Secretary's plans are completed there will go out from Annapolis with every naval vessel a corps of trained instructors to teach the sailors and enlisted men. This corps of instructors will be reinforced by the educated officers of each ship.

A battleship will hereafter be no idle place even in peace, and the enlisted man who binds himself to three years in the service of his country's navy can emerge at the end of his service, if he has will and intelligence, with an educational equipment for a profession by which he can sustain himself in the world.

The three-year enlisted man of the navy who will avail himself of these new and admirable advantages can come out a skilled engineer, a navigator, a machinist or any one of a half-dozen skilled professions that point the way to success in life.

Lewis Nixon has said that Annapolis is the best engineering school in the country and its graduates as teachers ought to do great things for the American sailors in three diligent years.

More Frequent Cruises.

The Secretary plans more frequent cruises to foreign ports, so that the education of travel and observation may be added to a sailor's opportunities on shipboard.

And last, but not least, the new Secretary of the Navy expresses the intention with all his influence and authority to insist upon the recognition of the individuality and manhood of individual seamen. An American sailor is promised that hereafter he shall be regarded not only as a fighting machine, but as a man and treated as one.

This last is in line with the recent movement so ably pressed in the navy by men like Captain Benson and Commander White and other vigorous and progressive officers of the service.

The result of this new and admirable policy will be to fill half-empty lists of the navy and to make it, not a place for young men to bury themselves for three years and come out unfit to make a living, but to be educated in mind, body and spirit by the finest of teachers, and come out in three years as all-round men, equipped in health and courage and manliness and with a practical profession in life.

School for Deserters.

Secretary Daniels further intends to reform the system of punishment for desertions by sending young deserters, first to prison and afterward to the place of reform, but to send each of them first to that notable school at Port Royal, S. C., where they will be built up in character and patriotism and an understanding of a citizen's and a soldier's duty, and if they are docile and receptive to reinstate them in the navy without a prison term.

These are wholesome reforms, and Secretary Daniels is to be congratulated upon the good sense he has manifested in adopting them.

FORTY-SIX MEMBERS ENROLL

First Day's Record in Big Player-Piano Club

THAT the interest in the gigantic Weatherholt Player-Piano Club is widespread was demonstrated yesterday when the membership books were opened. When the store closed for the night, 46 members had been enrolled. At this rate the 400 memberships will be taken before the time limit expires. I am not surprised at this record, for I knew the music-loving public would realize just how remarkable my club offer was. People are realizing that the day of the ordinary piano is rapidly drawing to a close, and that the day of the Player-Piano is at hand. And when I made it possible to secure a $650 Player-Piano for $488.50 on terms of $10.00 down and $2.50 per week, there was a rush to enroll in my great co-operative club.

The club membership is limited to 400 members. I will save each member $334.50. Because of the great purchasing power of the 400 club members, I can offer a magnificent $650 Player-Piano along with $173 worth of club features for $488.50, on terms of $10.00 down and $2.50 per week. In addition to this there is my Free Life Insurance Feature and the Music Exchange Privilege.

Here Are My Club Features:

1 Saving of $161.50

Club Terms: $10 Down, $2.50 Per Week

MY Free Music Exchange Library alone makes the Weatherholt Player-Piano Club attractive. This means that every club member may secure $10.50 worth of Player Music every day if desired. Each member secures free with the player twelve rolls of selected music worth $10.50. I have installed a great library of 5,000 rolls, and members may exchange their music as often as desirable. Many have told me that the cost of Player Music has prevented them from buying Player-Pianos in the past. My free library removes that objection. Sheet music is being replaced to-day just as the Player-Piano is superseding the ordinary piano. That the Player-Piano may make those who do not understand music as proficient as those who do, all my vocal Player Music has the words printed on the roll. Anybody can play. And anybody with a voice may sing. A vocal instructor is constantly before the one operating the Player-Piano. Every direction is given. The result is that the novice can render a song as well as the professional. I have devoted weeks of study to this great co-operative plan. I wanted to offer something which had never before been offered to lovers of music in the South. I know that I have done so.

MY CLUB PLAN SAVES $334.50

$650.00	Player-Piano
78.00	Interest Saved
80.00	2-year Conservatory Course
4.50	Selected Bench
10.50	12 Rolls of Selected Music

$334.50	SAVING

THIS picture shows one of my demonstrators adjusting a roll of music in a Club Player-Piano. There is nothing about these instruments difficult to understand. They have everything that one has which costs a thousand dollars. I think so much of these Club Player-Pianos that I GUARANTEE THEM FOR TEN YEARS. Every one of these players is equipped with a double accoustic sounding board which produces the quality of tone found in a grand piano.

Regular Price . . $375.00

Club Price $267.50

Terms: $5 Cash, $1.25 Per Week

CONDITIONS: No interest, one year's trial and exchange privilege. 15c rebate on payments made before due, free life insurance feature, ten-year guarantee.

All of which accompany in writing the sale of every Club Piano.

Notice to All Owners of Player-Pianos

During our Player Club Membership Campaign, we will extend—without charge—our exchange privilege to any one purchasing 12 rolls of Player Music from us. This gives the purchaser free access to our 5,000-roll library.

I WANT everybody interested in good music to visit our store. I want you to hear some good music—anything you like, from the classics to the latest ragtime. Examine these Club Player-Pianos closely and see how easily you can play anything you like, and play as well as an expert pianist. If you CAN play on the piano, you have two instruments in one—a Piano and a Player-Piano. You may use the piano and those members of your family who can not play can produce music on the Player equal to yours.

MAINE UNVEILING PARADE PLANS PERFECTED

NEW YORK, May 29.—Plans for the great naval and military parade, which will precede the unveiling and dedication of the National Maine Monument at the southwest entrance to Central Park, Fifty-ninth Street and Eighth Avenue, on Friday afternoon, are about completed.

The twelve dreadnoughts and battleships of the North Atlantic fleet, which will be represented by regiments of marines and seamen in the parade, are the Wyoming, Florida, North Dakota, Delaware, Virginia, New Hampshire, South Carolina, Kansas, Georgia, New Jersey and Rhode Island.

Lieutenant Commander G. L. Smith, U. S. N., the brigade commander, has issued the order for the mobilization of the marines and seamen. Police Commissioner Waldo is revising and completing the arrangements for holding the crowds in place along the line of march and at the scene of the dedication.

Many Bands in Line.

The marine regiment, which is to march directly behind the United States Army, will form in Forty-third Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues. This regiment will be headed by the combined bands of the Wyoming and Virginia. The First Seaman Regiment Band will be headed by the combined bands of the Florida, North Dakota and Delaware; the Second Seaman Regiment, by the combined bands of the New Hampshire, South Carolina and Kansas, and the Third Seaman Regiment, by the combined bands of the Georgia, New Jersey and Rhode Island. Regimental colors will be carried.

The fleet officers in the parade will wear blue service uniforms, with white caps, leggins and gloves. The marines will march in blue, with white caps, leggins, canteens and rifle belts; the seamen in blue, with white hats, leggins, canteens and rifle belts. All bands will wear full dress uniforms.

The seamen and marines from the Wyoming will land at two floats at the foot of West Eighty-first Street. They will march down Broadway to Forty-fourth Street and then east, to form with the First Seaman Regiment, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues.

Will March Crosstown.

The detachments from the Florida, North Dakota and Delaware will be landed at Pier 86, at the foot of West Forty-sixth Street, and march crosstown to Forty-fourth Street and Fifth Avenue.

The men from the New Hampshire, South Carolina and Kansas will also disembark at the foot of West Forty-sixth Street and form as the Second Seaman Regiment in Forty-fifth Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues.

Detachments from the Virginia, Georgia, New Jersey and Rhode Island will be landed at the foot of West Forty-fifth Street and march to Forty-sixth Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues. They will form the Third Seaman Regiment.

The regimental commanders will be: Marine Regiment, Major A. W. Catlin; First Seaman Regiment, Captain H. B. Wilson; Second Seaman Regiment, Captain G. A. Hoogerwerff; Third Seaman Regiment, Captain J. D. McDonald.

Brigade staff: Lieutenant Commander G. L. Smith, brigade adjutant; Lieutenant Commander E. C. Kalbfus, brigade quartermaster; Lieutenant P. R. McCrary, brigade ordnance officer; Pay Inspector S. McGowan, brigade commissary; Surgeon W. C. Braisted, brigade surgeon; Lieutenant S. C. Hooper, brigade signal officer; Lieutenant R. P. Craft, aide; Lieutenant R. P. Emerick, aide.

Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels arrived to-day from Washington to take part to-morrow in the unveiling. To-day was given over to official calls between Secretary Daniels, Rear Admiral Badger, members of the Maine Monument Commission, Mayor Gaynor and others.

Beavers Again Asks For "Protected List"

Chief of Police James L. Beavers again called on Carl Hutcheson Thursday morning for the list of disorderly houses which Mr. Hutcheson referred to in a recent open letter as protected by police. Mr. Hutcheson is said to have told the chief the list was not completed.

Chief Beavers reminded Mr. Hutcheson that it was the third day since the letter was published in which he promised to have the "protection list" ready in three days.

Knife Penetrates Brain as He Falls

LEXINGTON, KY., May 29.—Chester Lacefield, 23, a wealthy farmer of Tyrone, Ky., while intoxicated attacked his wife and her brother, Raymond Carrier, with a knife.

Carrier knocked Lacefield down and as he fell the knife penetrated Lacefield's brain, killing him. Carrier was arrested.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"St. Elmo" at the Atlanta.

"St. Elmo" has made a hit through the excellence of its presentation at the Atlanta Theater this week. It will remain every night with another matinee on Saturday. The play has pleased as nothing else has in the past and is showing its popularity by attracting big crowds to the playhouse. Miss Long and Mr. Vail are very convincing in their parts and easily surpass their previous efforts in the play. "St. Elmo" was produced at the request of the majority of patrons and is proving its worth.

Excellent Bill at Forsyth.

Patrons of the cozy Forsyth Theater are pleased with the excellent bill of Keith vaudeville which the management is presenting this week. Maggie Cline, "the Irish Queen," is the headliner and has scored a pronounced hit. The Great Howard, the ventriloquist, is also a great favorite. Caesare Nesi, the singer, and Madden and Fitzpatrick, in a comedy sketch, have scored successfully. It is a bill of real variety.

Tabloid Bill Is Popular.

Tabloid musical comedy as presented at the Bijou this week has found great favor at the hands of patrons of that play house. The bill is Joseph E. Howard's "The District Leader," and the offering is given in splendid fashion. There are pretty girls, tuneful music and delightful dances. The bill next week will be "The College Girls."

PIANO CLUB HAS PROPITIOUS START

That interest in the player piano club campaign, begun last Sunday by the Weatherholt Piano Company, is increasing was demonstrated when the membership books opened.

The first day's enrollment amounted to 46 members and there was every indication that this record would be broken Thursday. T. E. Weatherholt, president of the company, has received letters and inquiries from throughout the South, indicating that the club plan will prove a great success.

Mr. Weatherholt's plans provide for a co-operative club of 400 members, who, by reason of their enormous purchasing power, are enabled to get $650 player pianos for $488.50 each on terms of $10 down and $2.50 a week. In addition to this, Mr. Weatherholt has arranged for many other features, including free music exchange privilege in a library of 5,000 roles of music. Each member will receive twelve roles of music with a player piano and this music may be exchanged daily if desired.

Representative Stephens, on the Naval Affairs Committee, Now Favors Stronger Fleet.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Representative Stephens, Progressive, of California, who has been assigned to the House Naval Affairs Committee, declared to-day he would vote for the construction of two battleships at the next session of Congress.

"I am in favor of a big navy," said Stephens, "and I believe in maintaining the navy in its present efficient status. If the navy officials decide they need two battleships next year, or even more, I shall be in sympathy with whatever they recommend."

Malta Lodge Holds First Communication

Malta Lodge of Masons held its first official communication Wednesday night at the Masonic Temple. The meeting was attended by 250 members and visitors, among whom were some of Georgia's most prominent Masons.

Following the meeting the lodge extended an open invitation to all the past masters and officers of local lodges to attend a dinner at Durand's cafe. Several speeches commenting on the occasion were heard, among the speakers being James L. Mayson, city attorney; Thomas H. Jeffries, past grand master of the State of Georgia; Joseph C. Greenfield, secretary of the Scottish Rite bodies, and Dr. Wallace, of the Georgia Tech. W. R. Bush, worshipful master of Malta Lodge, was toastmaster.

Probably you have not enjoyed eating for some time. Get a bottle of STYPTRING-ANT and that disease of the gums and teeth will be cured, therefore, aiding digestion. 50c bottle at all druggists, or parcel post, 55c in stamps. DeLamater-Lawrence Drug Company, wholesale distributors.

Every Man Likes Pie

And every man can eat it without taking a moment's thought about digestion when the pie crust is light, flaky, tender as you can make it with

Swift's Silver-Leaf Lard

Mix ½ teaspoon salt into 1½ cups flour; work in ¼ cup Swift's Silver-Leaf Lard, moisten with water, roll out. Spread with tablespoonful Swift's Silver-Leaf Lard, dredge with flour, roll up like jelly roll, pat and roll out, roll up again and cut off enough for lower crust. Roll out remainder for upper crust and when ready for oven put few small dots Silver-Leaf Lard on top.

Shortening that makes good pie crust will make tasty pastry of all kinds. Swift's Silver-Leaf Lard is put up in tight covered, new tin pails. Every one bears the Government inspection stamp guaranteeing the purity and wholesomeness of the lard. Buy a pail.

Where Is the Woman Who Does Not "Love" a Hand-Embroidered Shirtwaist?

A Rare and Fine Opportunity to Own

Hand-Embroidered Shirtwaist Patterns

The Selling Begins at 9 o'Clock in the Embroidery Section

We wish every woman in Atlanta who does this sort of needlework herself could see these waist patterns! Could see the exquisite evenness and preciseness of every hand-made stitch, the intricate designs of florals and sprays, the wee little tucks and all. They would, every one, marvel that such work could be sold at these prices. They are all white and many of them are all but made, with embroidered cuffs and collars and backs, and with material for the whole waist. All one has to do is to cut the waist out, fit it and stitch it together.

$15.00 to $25.00 Waist Patterns $7.98
(Only a few of these)

$ 6.50 to $10.00 Waist Patterns $5.98
$ 2.29 Waist Patterns $1.50
(These in Madeira Hand-Embroidery)

Twenty-three Waist Fronts at 75c

T. R. KEEPS 'REAL GENTLEMAN'S' WINE CELLAR

Son of Colonel's Cousin, Ex-President's "Pal," So Testifies at Libel Suit Hearing.

MARQUETTE, MICH., May 29.—Testimony of Philip James Roosevelt, son of a cousin of the former President, that Colonel Roosevelt kept a "regular gentleman's wine cellar" at his home in Oyster Bay was the feature of this morning's session of the trial of Colonel Roosevelt's suit for $10,000 libel for charges made in an editorial by George W. Newett, editor of The Ishpeming Iron Ore, that Roosevelt "was drunk, nota infrequently."

The younger Roosevelt followed Charles Thompson, a New York newspaper man; Andrew Abele, former locomotive engineer of Ashtabula, Ohio, and A. Z. Blair, an attorney of Portsmouth, Ohio, all of whom bore witness to the former President's sobriety during trips when they accompanied him.

Calls Colonel Abstemious.

After stating he lived near the former President's home at Oyster Bay, ond that he was the colonel's daily companion when the latter was at Oyster Bay, Philip Roosevelt testified he never had seen the colonel drink other than at meals and then only white wine and occasionally a glass of champagne. He also declared that the limit of his indulgence on the last Presidential campaign was a spoonful of brandy in a glass of milk, and denied indignantly that he ever had seen the colonel drunk.

"Does Roosevelt keep wines and liquors in his home?" was the first question of Attorney Andrews for the defense.

"Yes," was the answer.

Q. A collection of liquors?—A. A regular gentleman's cellar.

Q. Scotch whisky?—A. I never saw it, but I supposed it was there.

Q. White wine?—A. Yes.

Q. Champagne?—A. Yes.

Q. Brandy?—A. I presume it was there.

Story Prepared in Advance.

Q. How long have you been a newspaper man?—A. Since March, 1913.

Q. Are you doing newspaper work here?—A. My pay is going on.

Q. Are you acting for your paper?—A. I am sending out stories.

Q. Did you write up and send out Colonel Roosevelt's testimony before it was given?—A. No.

Q. Was it written up before it was delivered?—A. Yes.

Q. And sent out by any person?—A. The Colonel prepared a statement embodying the substance of his testimony and I presume it was sent out.

Q. And it was printed in New York before the Colonel went on the stand?

On objection, the court refused to permit a reply. On redirect examination the witness said liquor was never pressed on guests at Roosevelt's home.

Court was adjourned until 2 o'clock after Andrews had testified he never saw Roosevelt drink spirituous liquors during the campaign in Cuba fifteen years ago.

Newett Ready to Testify.

George W. Newett, defendant in the suit, was prepared to take the stand to-day in his own defense to tell the sources of the information on which he based his charges of drunkenness and profanity.

A trip made by Newett to Florida, during which he met a number of prominent persons who are alleged to have spoken of Roosevelt's alleged over-indulgence in liquor, and similar statements made to him by persons in Michigan, will form the basis of his testimony.

Newett will also tell of various articles which he saw in newspapers and magazines which influenced him to write the editorial now in question.

The Ishpeming editor has not been well for some months, and as soon as the present case is ended he will go to a hospital for an operation.

The Colonel to-day declined an invitation to address the Marquette G. A. R. on Memorial Day.

PARADE CLOSES REUNION OF VETERANS

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., May 29. The twenty-third annual reunion of the Confederate Veterans closed today with the veterans' parade, in which the old soldiers of the South marched under the tattered battle flags of half a century ago and under the Stars and Stripes of a reunited country.

Military bands furnished martial music to which the tottering old soldiers, hundreds of them in gray uniforms, tramped through the downtown streets. Grandstands along Market and Broad Streets, the principal thoroughfares traversed, were filled with visitors and Chattanoogans who lustily cheered the old veterans.

General Bennett H. Young, mounted on a Kentucky thoroughbred charger, headed the parade. General J. P. Hickman, of Nashville, commander of the Tennessee Division, was chief marshal.

Exodus of Visitors Begins.

The exodus of visitors began immediately after the parade and throughout the afternoon and night special and regular trains will be leaving the depots every hour.

The reunion festivities will come to a formal close to-night when the Sons of Confederate Veterans give their annual ball to sponsors and maids of honor at Bennett H. Young pavilion.

Several hundred veterans will go to Dalton, Ga., to-morrow to attend commander of the Army of Northern Virginia Department; General George P. Harrison, of Alabama, commander of the Army of Tennessee Department, and General K. M. VanZandt, of Texas, commander of the Trans-Mississippi Department, were re-elected, and Jacksonville, Fla., was chosen for the 1914 reunion by the veterans at the principal business session of the reunion late yesterday afternoon. Next year's gathering will be the first reunion held in Florida. Jacksonville defeated Nashville, its nearest competitor, which has had two reunions, by a vote of almost 4 to 1. Houston, Texas, and Tulsa, Okla., received scattering votes. The selection was then made unanimous.

"Turkey Trot" and "Virginia Reel."

A parade by the Sons of Veterans yesterday afternoon and a ball for the veterans at Bennett H. Young Pavilion last night were features that attracted the interest of the thousands of sponsors, maids of honor and other visitors. At the ball the Virginia reel and quadrille of 50 years ago were danced between snatches of the present-day "turkey trot" and two-step.

EXHIBITS FEATURE HARDWARE MEET

"Georgia - Manufactured" Goods Shown at Convention of Dealers at Auditorium-Armory.

The Georgia Retail Hardware Merchants' Association got down to active business Thursday morning, when the third session of their convention opened at the Auditorium. Several important committee reports, comprising recommendations on the future policy of the association, are to be presented to the convention at Thursday's sessions.

Reports of the secretary, John L. Moore, of Madison, Ga., and several minor committees, already submitted, show the association to be in a prosperous condition and gaining steadily in membership and influence.

Wilmer L. Moore, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, welcomed the hardware men on behalf of commercial Atlanta at the opening session Wednesday, and Mayor James G. Woodward gave the official greetings of the city government. P. S. Twitty, of Dublin, one of the leading members of the association, responded to Mayor Woodward's address. Others who spoke were R. W. Hatcher, Milledgeville; G. W. Woodruff, Winder; C. B. Thomas, Griffin; J. R. Hall, Moultrie; W. G. Raines, Statesboro.

On Wednesday evening the visitors were the guests of Atlanta wholesale and retail hardware men at the Forsyth Theater.

TWO NEWS ITEMS

INDIVIDUAL TRUSTEE DISSIPATES ESTATE

Georgia newspapers the other day gave an account of the dissipation of an estate which left a young lady penniless. The father, who had a comfortable business in a Georgia city, died several years ago, leaving his only child, a daughter, an estate of $35,000. A man, a friend of the family, who was then considered honest and capable, was appointed trustee for the daughter's property. On coming of age she called upon him for an accounting and delivery of her inheritance and HE IMMEDIATELY DISAPPEARED. He is still among the "missing," and THE YOUNG LADY'S INHERITANCE IS GONE.

TRUST COMPANY OF GA. DOUBLES THIS ESTATE

The other news item, not heretofore published, relates to an Atlanta lady who died, leaving an only child, a son of ten years. SHE HAD WISELY MADE A WILL IN WHICH THE TRUST COMPANY OF GEORGIA was appointed EXECUTOR and GUARDIAN of the property of her son. From his inheritance, which was officially appraised at $16,500, the boy was supported comfortably and given a college education. When he reached his majority, less than a month ago, the TRUST COMPANY OF GEORGIA, his Guardian, turned over to him property appraised at $31,345, thus, with his maintenance, more than doubling the estate.

TRUST COMPANY OF GEORGIA
CAPITAL AND SURPLUS $1,800,000

The Social World

An event of interest to a wide circle of friends was the marriage of Miss Katherine Rawling and Mr. Philip Wakeman Wilcox Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Rawling, in Druid Hills.

The house was elaborately decorated. The couple stood before a bank of palms in the library, the altar of greenery being flanked on either side with clusters of white roses and valley lilies. Throughout the apartments smilax formed a mural decoration and the mantels were banked with small foliage plants, starred with tiny electric lights.

The only attendant was Mr. Sidney Wilcox, of New York, as best man. Bishop Leete, of the Methodist Church, officiated, and a limited number of guests were present.

Mrs. Rawling, the bride's mother, wore gray charmeuse satin, with draperies of pale pink chiffon. Mrs. Sidney Wilcox, of New York, the bridegroom's mother, wore white Brussels lace, with touches of lavender. His aunt, Mrs. Fulford, of Canada, wore black chiffon cloth. Mrs. J. T. Wheeler, of New York, the bride's aunt, wore black lace.

A reception followed the ceremony and supper was served. The bride's table was decorated with pink roses, arranged in a tall basket, the handle twined with pink tulle and pink roses. Pink roses were banked on the buffet, serving table and mantel, and the sun parlor, where punch was served, was decorated with sweetpeas.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox left after the reception for the East, and on their return they will be at home at the Druid Hills residence of Mr. and Mrs. Rawling during the latter's absence in Europe. Later they will build on the adjoining lot, which was a wedding present.

The bride has many friends both in Atlanta and in New York, her former home. Mr. Wilcox is a popular young man. He is secretary and treasurer of the Cleveland-Manning Piano Company.

Mother Goose Pageant.

And why? Mother Goose and all her little geese are coming to town Saturday afternoon and will be ready to greet you on the lawn of the Clyde Kings, which by all odds is one of the most charming spots in the city for her Goose-ship and all the busy little people of her family.

And right here, be it said, any one who wishes to meet Mother Goose or any especial favorite of the days of his childhood, has only to take the car to Druid Hills, and, presto! he is there.

Mother Goose is coming as the special guest of the Joseph Habersham Chapter, D. A. R., of which Mrs. John Perdue is regent. Her visit will aid in building the chapter house the Joseph Habersham people are planning.

So enthusiastic is Atlanta society over the coming of Mother Goose and her wonderful family that little else has been talked of by the pleasure-loving set.

The committee work is in charge of members of the Joseph Habersham Chapter, with Mrs. William Lawson Peel, vice regent general of the National Daughters of the American Revolution, as chairman general.

The Mother Goose pageant will include more than 100 children of prominent families. There will be tableaux, parade, maypole dances, solo dances, and all sorts of entertainment.

Verses written by one of the enthusiastic members of the chapter, who has embodied in the poem the most interesting features of the coming event, read:

Mother Goose pageant! A great lawn fete!
'Twill be out of doors, so you pay at the gate!
A great, big show, and plenty of frills—
On Mrs. King's lawn—1010 Druid Hills.

There'll be the old woman who lived in a shoe,
Little Jack Horner and Little Boy Blue,
A lot of little ponies, and, sure, a dapple gray,
For boys and girls to ride upon "to ride a mile away."

Blue Beard with his many wives and Merry Peter Pan,
Little Orphan Annie, and the funny Soldier Man;
Goblins, dwarfs and fairies, dancing in the air,
Curly Locks and Humpty Dump, and Little Golden Hair,

The Beggar Man from Hamelin with the magic of his pipe,
The old maid in the garden with the nose the Black Birds swipe;
Margery Daw, a good see-saw, and saucy old King Cole;
Robin Hood, his merry men, Warriors and Knights of Old.

The Flowers and the Maidens that belong to Mistress Mary,
All so sweet and winning and none of them contrary.
Many are the prizes for the splendid baby show,
Babies there will be so fine you can almost watch them grow.

There'll be grab-bags and candy and cake and good ice cream,
And all the wonders of the world of which you only dream.
Your friends right straight from Fairyland will all be turned a-loose

A Liza Lehmann Evening.

A musical entertainment will be given at the parish house of the Church of the Incarnation in West End on the evening of June 3. A quartet, composed of Mrs. John L. Meek, soprano; Mrs. Arthur Crevistion, contralto; Mr. Howard Davis, tenor, and Mr. John Mullin, basso, will sing the "Nonsense Rhymes from Alice in Wonderland," set to music by Liza Lehmann.

The Rev. John D. Wing has consented to give a reading of "The Happy Prince," by Oscar Wilde, with incidental music, also by Lehmann. Mr. Charles A. Sheldon, Jr., will be the accompanist for the evening. The musical is given under the auspices of Epiphany Guild of Inman Park and St. Mary's Guild of the Church of the Incarnation.

MRS. THOMAS B. PAINE, fair Atlanta golfer, who is a contender for the championship at the tournament of the Women's Southern Golf Association at Memphis.

For Miss McPheeters.

Mrs. Edward Inman entertained informally at luncheon Thursday for Mrs. Samuel Inman's guest, Miss Margaret McPheeters, of Raleigh, N. C.

For Miss Francis.

Mrs. Joseph Eby will entertain at bridge Friday morning for Miss Martha Francis, who will be married June 28.

Mrs. White to Entertain.

Mrs. Warren D. White will entertain Wednesday afternoon with a reception in honor of her guests, Mr. Dan Glasgow, of Tyrone, Pa.; Mr. Robert Hall, of Washington, and Miss Lina Andrews, a bride-elect. One hundred and fifty guests will be entertained.

Social Meeting at School.

Patrons and all interested in the Inman Park School are expected to attend a social meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association Friday afternoon, May 30.

Grand Prize Dance.

Parent-Teacher Association.

The regular monthly meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of the North Avenue School will be held Friday at 4 o'clock.

Parties for Mrs. Hopkins.

A series of parties for Mrs. Charles Hopkins, Jr., will include a dinner Saturday evening, June 7, given by Mr. and Mrs. Linton C. Hopkins; a bridge party, by Miss Sara Rawson, next week, at which Mrs. Charles Shelton, Jr., will share the honors, and a bridge party, by Mrs. Roy Collier.

Notice to Children.

All the children who will take part in "The Old Woman in a Shoe" tableau are requested to meet Mrs. H. L. DeGive Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock on the lawn of Mrs. S. C. Dobbs, in Druid Hills.

For Miss Owens.

Mrs. Wilmer L. Moore will entertain for Miss Charles Owens, a bride-elect.

For Miss Wright.

Miss Julia Stokes will entertain Thursday afternoon for Miss Marie Wright, a bride-elect.

Car Service to Mother Goose Pageant.

For the convenience of those who attend the Mother Goose pageant in Druid Hills Saturday afternoon, the following schedule of car service is announced:

College Park, West End, etc., parties will transfer at Park Street Church; Decatur parties will transfer at Peachtree and Edgewood Avenue; Marietta parties change at Walton and walk one block to Peachtree; North Atlanta parties transfer at Georgian Terrace. All cars run every ten minutes, and are marked "Ponce DeLeon to Druid Hills," and run directly in front of the lawns where the Mother Goose pageant will be held.

Miss Harrison Entertains.

Miss Lucy Harrison entertained at bridge Thursday afternoon for Miss Courtney Harrison, whose marriage to Mr. Loring Raoul will take place Monday. Pink sweetpeas formed the decorations in all apartments except the sun parlor, where daisies were used. The tea table was adorned with pink sweetpeas, arranged in a basket, the minor details being pink and white. Prizes were a hand-made piece of lingerie for the honor guest, a French gilt picture frame for top score, and silk hose for consolation.

Shower for Miss Andrews.

Mrs. Florence Harris entertained about seventy guests at a miscellaneous shower at her home in Inman Park Thursday afternoon for Miss Lina Andrews, a bride-elect. Packages were delivered to the bride-elect by parcel post, little Roy Martin acting as postman. Misses Allie Candler and Van DeVander served punch.

Mrs. Harris was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. William Candler, Mrs. D. W. Orr, Mrs. J. D. Ficklen, and the members of Miss Andrews' Sunday school class. The reception room was decorated in a profusion of daisies.

the construction, case design and the finish, but you must look to the name for reliability of construction, and the assurance that the good qualities will endure. The house of KIMBALL has had an experience of over fifty years in the music industry, and artists, amateurs, and thousands of satisfied customers give abundant proof of the merit of the Kimball.

We are showing a large variety of styles in 88-note Player Pianos and Uprights. We have your choice in woods, such as Rosewood, Walnut, Circassian Walnut, Oak, Mission, Satin Mahogany and Mahogany. Prices ranging from $195 to $1,250.

Our one, absolutely one, price insures you, whether an experienced buyer or not, of securing the best instrument for the amount you wish to pay. It is not safe to buy a piano, or any other article of merchandise, from a dealer who has a sliding scale of prices, because you will never know when he has given you his lowest price. Then, too, your neighbor may buy the same merchandise for from $50 to $75 less money. A piano has but one value, and that should fix its price—the right price. Each and every instrument on our wareroom floor is tagged at the cash figure, and no one pays more or less.

It is not only safe, but pleasant, to deal with the world's largest manufacturers of Pianos, Player Pianos, Residence and Church Pipe Organs, through this Branch Store.

A Duty to Look Well

By Virginia T. Van De Water.

A WOMAN was running a piece of pink ribbon into a dainty underwaist. Her small son, aged six, stood watching her. At last he spoke out his thought—

"Mama, why do you put ribbon in that thing?"

"To draw it up on the shoulders and fasten it with," was the smiling explanation.

"Wouldn't a piece of twine do as well?" queried the lad soberly.

The mother paused a moment, concealing the amusement she felt. Then she spoke gravely and frankly.

"No, dear," she said, "twine might fasten it, but it would not do as well, for it is not as pretty as ribbon."

A Real Duty.

A man might have considered that reply evidence of a feminine lack of logic. To the woman who thinks long it held a truth that it is well to consider. When, without sacrifice of principle or duty, one can make of a practical thing also a pretty thing, it is a mistake—almost a wrong—not to do it.

The small boy, as he grew older, learned to admire the dainty, delicate touches in his mother's apparel. "My mother always looks nice," he used to say when the matter of woman's appearance was discussed.

I know one woman who seems to think that she does God service in looking as plain as possible. She is scrupulously neat in appearance, but her mental attitude reminds one of the small boy's question: "Wouldn't a piece of twine do as well?" All the appointments of her home are plain and substantial, bought—like Mrs. Primrose's wedding dress—with a thought of durability rather than of beauty. She scorns fine china, and considers cut glass a useless folly of the rich. As to solid silver, why should one use it when plated ware carries the food to one's mouth just as effectually?

Of course, she has a scorn of all "modern notions," such as centerpieces, doilies and "place-plates." "Useless nuisances," she says sententiously. I often wonder how her children ar going to regard the home of their childhood when they go out into the world and see the dainty accessories of dress and furnishings which are unknown in their family and household. Fortunately this woman is the exception, not the rule, of her sex when she declares: "It is a mark of weakness to spend time on ornamentation and convention."

Don't Look Homely!

Were we all to adopt this principle through life how many hard and ugly corners there would be, corners that are now rounded or hidden!

To look as homely as one can is no more a virtue than to be as frankly disagreeable as one sometimes feels like being. Few of us can be handsome, but we need not elect to be positively ugly—if we can help it. In fact to mitigate the bad points in our personal appearance and to emphasize the good ones is an actual duty.

Perhaps some one asks to whom one owes this duty. The answer is plain. One owes it to the world at large, but, primarily, to one's own family. Surely it is the business of both man and woman to look as well as he and she can.

It is not always convenient to fuss over one's personal appearance when the mercury climbs up toward the hundred mark, but when one acquires the habit of invariably looking as well as is conformable with one's other duties, one will not be satisfied to wear a dark calico wrapper instead of a dainty and equally cool negligee—even for "home people" only.

The Mistakes of Jennie .:. By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

Tom found Jennie a little crumpled heap on the sofa.

AS THE MAN held Jennie tight in his arms, kissing her—she at last realized his intentions and could THEN see clearly the meaning of the dinner in the swell restaurant and the auto ride into the country. Jennie fought and struck the man in the face as hard as she could—whereupon the former "so polite and fatherly" MAN turned into the beast he was at heart—held her tight against the wall choking her. When he realized there was nothing to be gained that way he tried to treat the whole thing as a joke. Jennie watched her chance and did more THINKING in the next few seconds than she has ever taken the TROUBLE to do before. THE MAN told her the proprietor of the place was a friend of his and it would be of no use for her to make a scene, for she couldn't leave the place until he got good and ready for her to leave. Then he offered her fine dresses, diamonds, anything she wanted—so why not be a "good fellow."

THE MAN was between Jennie and the door and she saw it was useless to try and get out that way—the window opened out onto a porch and before the man could get around the table to catch her, she was through it and running up the road for her life. She ran and ran, dodging off the road into some woods. The branches tore her face and dress but she kept on till she could run no more. She sat down on an old log and listened but could hear no one following. There she sat in her little torn dress shaking and crying until she realized it was getting dark. She wandered on through the woods and came to a farm house where she found an old lady who, after hearing her story, loaned her enough money for the railroad fare home.

Tom came over to her house that evening after wondering all day where she could have gone and found Jennie a little crumpled heap on the front room sofa.

A Romance of Great Wealth as Played by Money Kings

"Oh! indeed! He is well off?" went on the stern inquisitor.

"He has some money, I suppose," said the girl dully. How long was this to continue?

"How much, do you suppose?" There was cutting sarcasm in the tone.

A little flicker of mischief lit Charlotte's eyes. Why, if this was a game after all, she would play it high—spiritedly—she would win. "As much as YOU have—I suppose!"

"You are sanguine, I think, Fraulein Charlotte. Is his family as much respected as OURS?" Solomon admired a WORTHY antagonist—even though that antagonist might be his daughter!

"All's Well."

"Just as much," said demure Charlotte. She dared now to raise her eyes—to look at Jacob—whose face was lit now by a smile of component parts of amusement and eagerness.

"A Jew?"

"Yes."

"Of course. Tell me; my child. Tell me. On this much I must insist." Charlotte hesitated in lovely confusion. "Tell me—my child, tell your father."

Blushing, trembling—radiant, and yet frightened now that her moment had come—Charlotte laid her little white hands on her father's strong shoulders, and turned him gently toward the window where Jacob stood. "There—he is there."

But now Jacob's hour had come—love must have its way. All in one pulsing moment, he had crossed the room, and Charlotte was caught in hungry arms. "Charlotte—my little Charlotte. Come." And Old Sol, beaming joyously through the rose arbor, was Love's only confidant, as the boy and girl fled to the great outdoors—mother Nature—with their precious joy.

Solomon laughed. "Magnificent! So I have worked and calculated and spent my money—for my nephew!"

Frau Gudula lived again in one brief moment her own love dream. "And those two have made their Lover's Lane out of their Grannie's old Jew's Alley! Yes, it is magnificent!"

From under the table the old Frau drew a battered little low stool. She smiled—but there was the pathos of the very old—whose race is nearly run in her gentle tone. "Come and sit here, Solomon, my son. Sit here as you used to in the dear long ago when you were a child—and your dear father was with me—instead of calling me from far away. What does it matter, my son, if they are happy? Not in your way, perhaps, but in hers your little Charlotte is happy—our little Jacob and Charlotte are happy. Happy, my son. All our money could not buy a better thing than that. Cannot YOU be content?"

Solomon looked out beyond the open door—out on the rose-hung terrace where young love had come at last into its own. Perhaps it was his mother's gentle tones, perhaps it was his daughter's glorified face, perhaps it was the memory of Charlotte's mother—the wife who had been his only love—three generations of loving women seeking the way to Solomon's heart, and Solomon's heart knew youth and love again.

"Yes, mother—dear, I am content." And in the Garden of Cupid at Neustadt Castle, and in the rose arbor of Jew's Lane, there was peace—for in the hearts of the royal cousins of Taunus, and in the home of the Five Frankforters, love had come into his kingdom.

THE END.

Unexpected Result.

Here is an emigration story told at a meeting recently. In a village was a youth who had got himself into such a variety of scrapes that his people thought it would be better to dispatch him to Canada, so as to get him away from old and doubtful associations. He agreed to go, provided those interested in his departure secured him some testimonials. Half a dozen were got for him. They sang his praises in unrestrained terms, spoke of his geniality, of his good address and exceptional capability, and all the other virtues that few men have, but many get the credit for.

When the young man read the testimonials he turned to his father and exclaimed:

"Well, I'm hanged! I had no idea people thought so much of me. And now I know how much they like me I'm blowed if I'll go away at all."

"D-darling, d-do you l-love me?" she gasped.

"Love you?" said he, as he got a tighter grip; "love you? Why, precious one, madly as I hug you now, the fervor of my affection almost makes me long to be an octopus with eight arms."

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS.

Gordon Kelly, a young North Georgia mountaineer, comes to Atlanta to get a place with Billy Smith's Crackers. It is raining when he reaches Ponce DeLeon and he is nearly run over by an auto, in which are two persons—a man and a young girl. The driver of the car is an arrogant fellow. The girl makes him stop the machine. She gets out and inquires if Kelly is injured. She apologizes for her companion's brusque manner. Kelly sees Manager Smith and tells him he has never played a game of ball. Smith consents to give Kelly a trial. The girl in the auto is Mildred Deery, daughter of Galen Deery, a crafty and wealthy speculator in timber lands. Her companion is Forrest Cain, a rich young man about town. Kelly owns timber land that Deery would like to possess. Kelly is invited to the Deery home, where he is introduced to Mildred. Cain hears Mildred order an auto to take her guest to his hotel. He takes the driver's place and carries Kelly out into the woods. Kelly thrashes Cain. Manager Smith tells the newspapers about his new find and the reporters print all sorts of "joshing" stories about Kelly.

Now go on with the story.

From that time on Long Tom didn't give Kelly an easy fly to catch. He purposely batted the ball so that if the recruit got to it at all it would be at least a hard catch. The result was one of the most wonderful exhibitions of ground covering by an outfielder ever seen on a ball field. Finally Smith called a halt by declaring morning parctice at an end.

The players went at once to the clubhouse to take off their uniforms, stand under a shower bath and dress themselves for the street. The clubhouse became at once a very lively place. Each player was assigned a locker for uniforms, clothes and personal belongings. In front of these lockers were short benches, placed there for the use of the players while dressing or undressing.

It so happened that Long Tom Morrissey and Gordon Kelly had adjoining lockers and therefore sat side by side as they started to undress. The other players were busy with their own affairs and did not notice the other two until suddenly they heard Kelly cry:

"You can't call me that, Morrissey."

All hands turned in the direction of the voice just in time to see Long Tom draw back and slap Kelly in standing up. The two men were now staning up. Their shoes were off and they were stripped to the waist. The next instant there was a furious mixup. Benches were overturned as the tall, gaunt veteran swayed in the embrace of the tall, lithe youngster.

It was all over in half a minute. At the end of that time Morrisey lay, an inert mass, in a corner of the clubhouse, where he had fallen with a loud crash. Ball players do not interfere with clubhouse fights. Even a manager will not interfere. If there are grudges to be settled, it is best to have them settled and be done with them. That is the philosophy of the clubhouse. Players see to it that there is fair play. That is all.

"Call It Square."

No one knew what passed between the two men that led up to the encounter. After the brief battle, Kelly replaced his overturned bench as though nothing had happened, and quickly removing the rest of his clothing stepped under the shower in an adjoining room. The other players went to the assistance of Long Tom, who showed signs of life about this time. They raised the veteran to his feet. Morrissey blinked for awhile and then a grin bespread his features. His left cheek was cut and bleeding.

"The kid is all right," he exclaimed heartily. "My nerve was better than my judgment, that's all."

He, too quickly pulled off his clothes and stepping out of the room, turned on the shower next the one where Kelly was standing. With the water pouring down his body in streams he reached out his hand to the young man.

"My fault, kid. I apologize. Call it square?"

Gordon Kelly grasped the outstretched hand.

"Certainly I will," he said, with a rare smile.

Kelly dressed himself rapidly and was the first to leave the clubhouse. The others followed singly and in pairs. Long Tom Morrissey and Bill Smith were the last to go.

"Did that guy tell you he never played a game of ball?" demanded the veteran backstop of his manager, as he slipped the key of his locker in his pocket.

"That's what he said" replied Smith.

"And never played a game of ball?"

"That's what he said."

"Billy, he's kiddin' you. Why, he even fights like a ball player," declared Long Tom, with a grin. He started to leave the clubhouse when his manager called him back.

"Want to change your locker?" asked Smith.

"Me? What for?" demanded Morrissey in surprise.

"You're right next to the kid and I thought on account of—"

"That's where I want to be; right next to the kid," Long Tom broke in. "He's my pal, Billy."

CHAPTER XII.

AS Gordon Kelly hurried out of the clubhouse he asked himself this question: "Is the game worth the candle?" and on his way down town he had a chance to study the question and answer it to his own satisfaction.

Within the past few hours he had, first, been more or less ridiculed in the newspapers and, second, he had engaged in a clubhouse fight with another ball player. That, he figured, was a pretty strenuous way for a novice like himself to begin a baseball career. Would every day have its bad features as this day had? Would it not be best for him to quit the game right now? How about going to Manager Smith and thanking him for his kindness, but telling him at the same time he had decided to call it all off.

Greeted by Mildred.

Ruminating further on the subject he came to the conclusion that the newspapers were right. The reporters were perfectly justified in refusing to laud him to the skies before he had demonstrated his ability. There was nothing really objectionable in what they had said about him. He confessed to himself that what they had published was largely true and they had written their articles in a humorous vein which was well within their rights under the circumstances. No, he had no fault to find with the newspapers.

But how about that clubhouse fight? Well, that was a thing of the past. Long Tom had apologized, he had accepted the apology and he believed they would be friends from now on. Then why quit? Wouldn't that make him more ridiculous than ever? Besides he didn't like the sound of the word. No, he wouldn't quit. He would stick it out—do the best he could and trust to luck and Providence.

Glancing out of the car window at this stage of his meditations, Kelly beheld Miss Deery seated at the wheel of an automobile of which she was the sole occupant. There was a temporary blockade and Kelly seized the opportunity to jump off the street car and hurry around to where Miss Deery's machine was packed in with several others, waiting for the jam to clear itself. He raised his hat.

"How do you do?" smiled Mildred pleasantly. "Jump in and I'll drive you home; or, better still, come to my house and have luncheon with me."

"Is that where you are headed for?" inquired Gordon, stepping into the car and seating himself beside the young woman.

"I don't seem to be headed for anywhere in this blockade. Ah, here we are," and the car moved slowly forward. "Well, what is your lordship's pleasure?"

"You are very kind, but before giving an answer I have a counter proposition to make."

The nature of which is."

"Judge Barbee kindly sent me a card to his club and he wrote me there was a ladies' dining room there. The card is only good for two weeks and I would like to make use of it. Won't you take lunch with me there?"

"That would be simply fine. But we'll have to go home anyway, because I have to prink up a little bit," said Mildred, with an arch look.

"I think you are very charming as you are," remarked Gordon.

Mildred laughed gaily.

"Mr. Kelly, you told me you lived all your life in the mountains and have only been in Atlanta a week. You are certainly learning fast. Who's your teacher?"

"You are the only girl I know in Atlanta, Miss Deery."

"As you know how to say nice things I'll take that as a compliment."

They were soon at the Deery residence, and leaving him in the big, comfortable living room to amuse himself Mildred ran upstairs. Contrary to the assertions of humorists, she was back again inside of ten minutes, with a complete change of costume, and if she was charming before, she was bewitching now. Gordon offered to drive the car, and with the smiling comment that he seemed to have many accomplishments for a mountaineer, Mildred arranged herself beside him. Ten minutes later they were at the club and seated at a table. When the waiter had taken their order, Gordon asked, seriously:

"Have you ever seen a game of baseball, Miss Deery.?"

"Of course I have. I've seen Georgia and Tech play half a dozen times. And I saw Harvard and Yale play on the Polo Grounds, New York, too."

"Which side won?"

"I've forgotten. I went with a party of friends, some of whom wanted Yale to win and the others wanted Harvard to win. I got all mixed up in the excitement."

"Did you ever see a professional game of baseball here in Atlanta, at Ponce DeLeon Park?

"No, I never did. Why this cross-examination, Mr. Kelly?"

"That's very nice of you, I rather like baseball: I'll say that."

The talk went on. Gordon Kelly was becoming very much interested in Mildred Deery; to such an extent that he was anxious to learn what her opinions were in regard to professional ball players. Yet he was afraid to ask the direct question. He beat around the bush for a while and then changed the subject, without getting the information he desired and without suspecting why he asked the questions.

YOU read the first nine installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer. The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read this tenth installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

FOR HER SAKE, DO.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am twenty, and deeply in love with a girl of eighteen. She told me she loved me, and I love her, too, but some way I doubt her love. The other evening she attended a dance with a friend of mine after I asked her not to go. E. S. B.

Your attitude is one of fault-finding, and I not sure that the giving of your love to a woman means her happiness.

She says she loves you. Be grateful for that much and don't attempt to control her as if she were a child. If you can not be that generous, it will be a kindness to her to transfer your affections.

DON'T GO TO EXTREMES.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am a girl 20 years old. A few young men would like to keep steady company with me but I always refuse because I do not seem to care for them much. Do you think I should accept just the same? I am so lonesome because I am always home, while the other girls have a good time. LONESOME.

Unless these men are objectionable to you, you must accept an occasional invitation, for it may be the means of meeting the man you will some day love. Don't get into the habit of isolation and consequent lonesomeness. It will grow on you.

FORGET YOURSELF.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am a young man of twenty and have been keeping company with a young lady for the past six months. I love this young lady very much and would be thankful for your advice on how to win her. R. M.

Forget yourself in an effort to make her happy. Be considerate, agreeable, persistent; let her know you love her and are willing to devote your life to her.

Household Suggestions

Moths can be kept away from furs or clothes by putting a piece of linen damped in turpentine in drawers or wardrobes. This should be renewed once or twice during the year. Moths will never attack carpets and curtains which have been well sprinkled with salt.

A small box of brickdust with a cork in it kept at the side of the sink will be found most useful for taking stains from knives, cups and all kinds of china and enamel ware. If at hand at washing-up time it saves many an after cleaning.

A good cleaning paste for enameled baths, zinc pails, etc., is made of equal parts of shaved yellow soap, whiting and common soda, dissolved over the fire in the least possible amount of water required to keep it from burning.

To hang pictures on a plastered wall try dipping the nail into cold water before driving it into the wall. It will bite into the plaster if this is done, and will hold a heavy weight without loosening.

Silencing the Philosopher.

"Yes," remarked the philosopher; "deafness is indeed a terrible affliction. But in such cases nature, you know, always provides some compensation. At any rate, if a man is deficient in one sense, he usually has another abnormally developed. Now, I once knew a poor blind fellow whose sense of touch was positively uncanny. Really, it served him almost as well as eyes do a normal man."

"Sure," said the genial Irishman, who hitherto had taken no part in the discussion, "an' I've noticed that, too! There's a friend of mine, he's lame, poor chap, but he can get about almost as easily as you or I. True, one of his legs is short, but the other makes up for it by being three inches longer!"

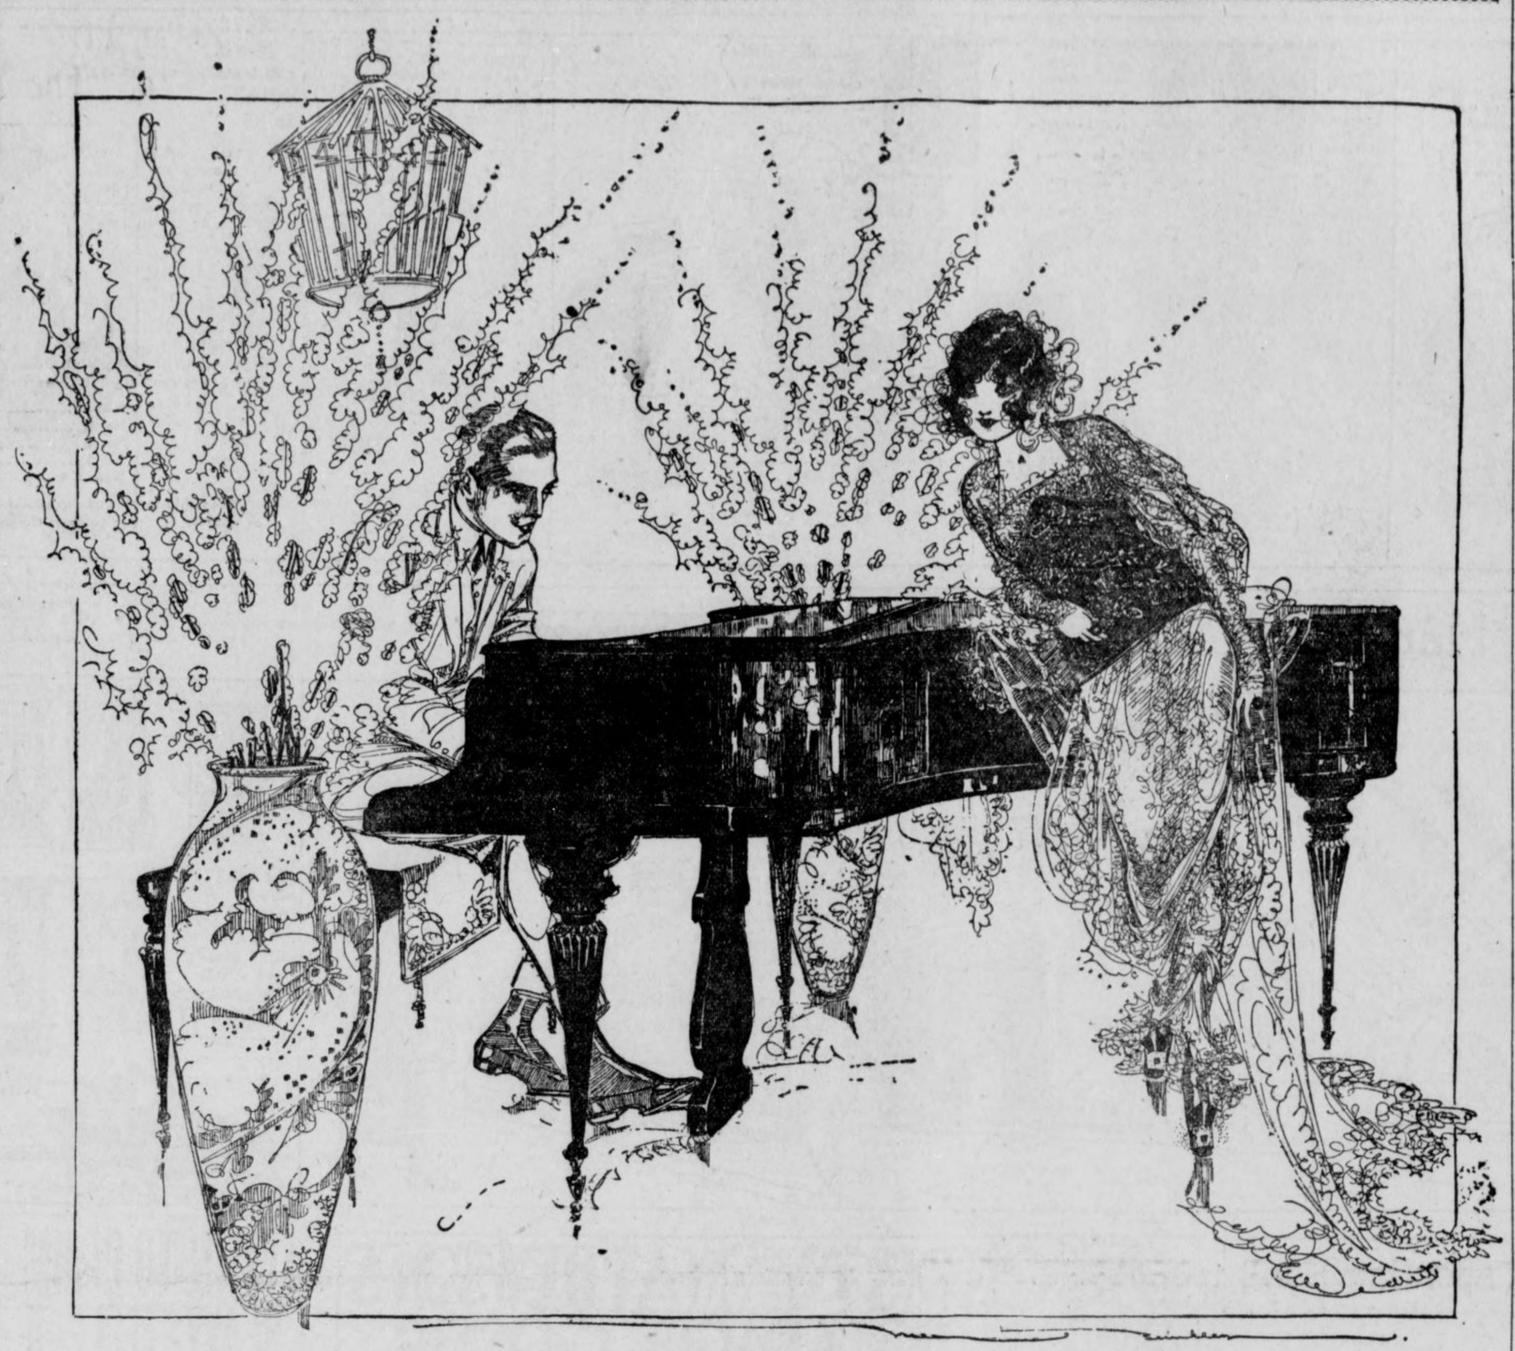
A Popular Song

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

BY NELL BRINKLEY



Nell Brinkley Says

THEY call it "I LOVE YOU." The Kings of Babylon and the slaves by the river sang it with equal fervor. In faeryland they know it. Adam brought it home to Eve and sang it tirelessly. On the plaintive "ukulele" of soft-aired Hawaii they have played it since the isles were born. Steel and iron clad men of the rough days of chivalry caroled it to the maids they met from the broad backs of their dray horses. Cleopatra whined it in her honey-sweet voice to dull-witted Antony. In the backwoods of Tennessee they know it. In the gray, melancholy uplands of wild Thibet rough-haired youths whisper it to bead-strung slant eyed girls. In the hidden corner of the music room, screened in spikes of fruit blossoms, a smart young chap hums it to a girl who never twisted up her own hair in her life, and out in the country, in an orchard, on the top rail of a gray old worm fence, a boy in a blue "jumper" chants it to a girl in a pink sunbonnet shading her sun-browned cheeks. Oh, it's a popular song—everybody knows it and everybody always did know it.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THARE was two ladies up to the house last nite. Both of them has daughters wich is jest going to git married & that maiks them feel kind of love sick themselfs, I guess, beekaus that is all that thay did all the time thay was to the house, talk about love. Pa dident like it a bit, beekaus both of the ladies was oalder than he is, & I have offen herd Pa say that wimmen shud talk about other topicks than love wen thay git middel aged, topicks like church work or how much life insurance thare husbands is going to leave them when thay die.

One of the ladies was naimed Missus Raymond & the other was Missus Belcher. Missus Raymond sed to Pa:

"Don't Cry," Said Ma.

I was jest telling your wife beefoar you caim in the room how sweet & innocent & gurlish my littel daughter looked to-day wen she was looking oaver sum pritty material for her trousseo. The deer littel cherup seemed so charming and confused and bewil-deringly pretty that I almost envied the man that is going to taik her away from me, sed Missus Raymond. Then she beegan to cry.

I doant think I wud cry if I was you, deerest, Ma sed to her. Do caim yurself & taik cumfurt in thinking about the pritty hoam that her husband is going to maik for her. Maybe you will be thare a grate deel of the time. Won't that be nice & cumfurtable? Ma sed to her.

It will be pretty tuff corn beef for her husband, sed Pa, the yung lady's husband, I meen. Wife, sed Pa, I suppoas you reemember the time yure loving mother caim here all the way from Wisconsin & started rite in trying to be the managing editor of our littel hoam. Of course, you reemember it, sed Pa. Will you ever fergit, sed Pa, the look of pained surprise that caim into her eyes wen I explained to her, as gently as I cud, that she dident have anything in the world to say about the management of my domestick affairs? If my memory dosent fail me, Pa sed, & I do not think it does, she stayed only three days insted of all summer.

You acted like a perfect cave man all the time she was here, I remember that, sed Ma. No wonder my poor mother seldum menshuns you in her letters.

But as I was saying about my daughter and Missus Raymond, I cuddent help thinking as I sat there & saw her, a dainty bud with youth's fresh bloom on her cheeks, that no man in this wurld was good enuff to be the husband of so divine a creechur. Of course the man she is going to marry is a splendid yung man & is the vice president of a big bank. But eeven if he were the president of the united Staits, sed Missus Raymond, he wuddent be good enuff for my daughter. No man is good enuff for a woman.

Looks for Gray Hairs.

They are good enuff for a woman around pay day, sed Pa. I have always notised that when it gtts neer the first of the month my wife beegins looking in my head for gray hairs & calling me her deer o.d boy. & tho morning of pay day, Pa sed, she always follows me to the door and kisses me aggenn and aggenn, with the luv lite shining in her eyes, & says Be sure & come rite hoam after you git yure pay to-day, won't you, darling.

I nevver do any such thing ,sed Ma, & I agree with Missus Raymond that her daughter or any sweet, good gurl is too good for a man.

Oh, my daughter, sed Missus Raymond, can't let her go, I jest can't. & my daughter, too, sed Missus Belcher, it seems as if sum monster of the sea was coming ncerer & nearer to drag my daughter from her mother's arms. Then they both beegan to cry & Pa sneeked out of the room & went in the library ware the side board is.

.:. The Bashful Boy .:.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"WHAT I would like to ask," writes Rebecca, "is why it is better for a girl to associate with a bashful boy. On several occasions I have noticed that you state that a girl should honor such a young man, but you have never stated why."

The qualities in a bashful boy which make him a welcome suitor are more of a negative nature than of a positive. It is not that which he does, so much as that which he does not do. His sins are of omission and they are small compared with the sins of commission of his bolder brother.

The bashful boy doesn't flirt. With a tongue that halts and stammers, and a tell-tale color that is quicker than the blush of a young girl to proclaim his dishonesty did he attempt to be dishonest, he is not an adept at hypocrisy or concealment.

He is not a dandy. Neither is he a lady's man, and, my dear Rebecca, the presidents of banks and railroads, the powers in commercial life, the most profound thinkers and the men of letters the world honors, were never ladies' men.

His Hands.

He does not know what to do with his hands when out in society, but his employer will tell you he knows good use for them when at work.

Afraid of girls, he is forced to seek companionship in books and boys. The fear of girls gives him a respect for them which is wholesome; the companionship of boys gives him the outdoor exercise every young man needs.

He needs this tiring of every muscle, not alone for the results that are physical, but for moral returns. You are not too young, my dear, to know that the wolf that has been racing furiously up and down hill all day feels at night only the cry of tired limbs and aching muscles begging for rest. He is not the wolf that goes seeking an opening to break into the sheepfold!

If a bashful boy loves a girl it is with a sense of humility and his own unworthiness. He knows that he is the one who will be honored if his love is returned; his bolder brother has a faint suspicion, which the homage of silly girls confirms, that it is the girl who should be on her knees.

A Safe Way.

During his calf days he does all his signing for love's sake at a distance, which mothers will agree is the only safe and sane way for young girls to be loved.

He is always a good listener—no woman was ever bored to death by the talking of a bashful man.

Saying little, he says little for which he or others have cause for regret. He is a safe depository for secrets, a good man in whom to have confidence. If he is not a girl's lover the next best thing that could happen her would be to have him for a brother or a friend.

His compliments are not practiced, and are therefore sincere. When it takes effort and stupendous courage to hand a modest little flower to a girl, it follows that he will never throw bouquets at the head of every woman he meets.

Best of all, Rebecca, the bashful boy is a home boy. He is unafraid when with his mother and finds in her companionship the delight less bashful boys seek from home.

He is "a good boy" in the sweet old-fashioned sense, a boy who has escaped contamination a few years later than it comes to boys more bold.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"I guess we can find a way to have the marriage annulled, or whatever they do to marriages that don't take."

The brutal assurance of the man in thus referring to things that were sacred moved Dick to wrath.

"Don't you interfere," he said. His words were spoken softly but tensely.

Nevertheless, Burke held to the topic, but an indefinable change in his manner rendered it less offensive to the young man.

"Interfere! Huh!" he ejaculated, grinning broadly. "Why, that's what I'm paid to do. Listen to me, son. The minute you begin mixing up with crooks, you ain't in a position to give orders to any one. The crooks have got no rights in the eyes of the police. Just remember that."

He Was Not Listening.

The Inspector spoke the simple truth as he knew it from years of experience. The theory of the law is that a presumption of innocence exists until the accused is proven guilty. But the police are out of sympathy with such finical methods. With them, the crook is presumed guilty at the outset of whatever may be charged against him. If need be, there will be proof a-plenty against him—of the sort that the underworld knows to its sorrow.

But Dick was not listening. His thoughts were again wholly with the woman he loved, who, as the Inspector declared, had fled from him.

"Where's she gone in Chicago?"

Burke answered in his usual gruff fashion, but with a note of kindliness that was not without its effect on Dick.

"I'm no mind reader," he said. "But she's a swell little girl, all right. I've got to hand it to her for that. So, she'll probably stop at the Blackstone—that is, until the Chicago police are tipped off that she is in town."

Of a sudden, the face of the young man took on a totally different expression. Where before had been anger, now was a vivid eagerness. He went close to the Inspector, and spoke with intense seriousness.

"Burke," he said, pleadingly, "give me a chance. I'll leave for Chicago in the morning. Give me twenty-four hours' start before you begin hounding her."

The Inspector regarded the speaker searchingly. His heavy face was drawn in an expression of apparent doubt. Abruptly, then, he smiled acquiescence.

"Seems reasonable," he admitted.

But the father strode to his son.

"No, no, Dick," he cried. "You shall not go. You shall not go."

Burke, however, shook his head in remonstrance against Gilder's plea. His huge voice came booming, weightily impressive.

"Why not?" he questioned. "It's a fair gamble. And, besides, I like the boy's nerve."

Dick seized on the admission eagerly.

"And you'll agree?" he cried.

"Yes, I'll agree," the Inspector answered.

"Thank you," Dick said quietly.

But the father was not content. On the contrary, he went toward the two hurriedly, with a gesture of reproval.

"You shall not go, Dick," he declared, impetuously.

The Inspector shot a word of warning to Gilder in an aside that Dick could not hear.

"Keep still," he replied. "It's all right."

Dick went on speaking with a seriousness suited to the magnitude of his interests.

"You give me your word, Inspector," he said, "that you won't notify the police in Chicago until I've been there twenty-four hours?"

"I Don't Like It."

"You're on," Burke replied genially. "They won't get a whisper out of me until the time is up." He swung about to face the father, and there was a complete change in his manner. "Now, then, Mr. Gilder," he said briskly, "I want to talk to you about another little matter——"

Dick caught the suggestion, and interrupted quickly.

"Then I'll go." He smiled rather wanly at his father. "You know, Dad, I'm sorry, but I've got to do what I think is the right thing."

Burke helped to save the situation from the growing tenseness.

"Sure," he cried heartily; "sure you have! That's the best any of us can do." He watched keenly as the young man went out of the room. It was not until the door closed after Dick that he spoke. Then he dropped to a seat on the couch, and proceeded to make his confidence to the magnate.

"He'll go to Chicago in the morning, you think, don't you?"

"Certainly," Gilder answered. "But I don't like it."

Burke slapped his leg with an enthusiasm that might have broken a weaker member.

"Best thing that could have happened!" he vociferated. And then, as Gilder regarded him in astonishment, he added, chuckling: "You see, he won't find her there."

"Why do you think that?" Gilder demanded, greatly puzzled.

Burke permitted himself the luxury of laughing appreciatively a moment more before making his explanation. Then he said quietly:

Beat up the egg with the flour and sugar, and gradually add the milk. Cook for 20 minutes in a double boiler, stirring constantly. Cool and add the syrup, salt, nuts, cream and the extracts, and freeze. Serve in dainty dishes with a preserved cherry on top of each.

By J. W. Heisman.

UNTIL last week it had been long since I had seen a game of either football or baseball between any of the preparatory school teams of the State. But on the 19th and 20th last I slipped down to Milledgeville to see the Georgia Military College team of that place lock horns with the team from the Riverside Military Academy of Gainesville.

Well, I witnessed both games, and it won't take me long to say that they were good games, splendid, both of them. There was fast, clean fielding, excellent base running, fair batting, fine pitching and considerable inside baseball. Riverside won both games, each by a score of 2 to 0. The pitching of all four hurlers, Williamson and Haines for Riverside, and Camp and Gheesling for G. M. C., was impressively good, and it averaged in effectiveness but little below the average of what the college teams showed this year, if any. Riverside seemed stronger with the stick than G. M. C., which was, perhaps, the principal reason why they got away with the big end of the scoring.

* * *

NOW, I had heard more than one rumor to the effect that the Riverside team was made up of a bunch of "ringers." Among others the Wake Forest players had given me solemn assurance of this. Recalling that Wake Forest has since been blacklisted for having three professional players on its roster this now strikes me as a good place to giggle. (It will also be remembered that the Riverside team held Wake Forest to a 6-6 tie game).

Quite prepared was I, therefore, to see on the Riverside line-up a bunch of matured men, some of them giving every evidence of life among professionals, most of them omitting sulphurous language every time they opened their mouths, chewing tobacco like demons and putting up a brand of baseball few college teams in the country could hope to duplicate. Did I see these things? No, none of them, and nothing like it. In the first place they were clearly and indubitably all young boys with one possible exception, and he not over 21 years of age. They all dressed neatly and in excellent taste. They talked like your average well behaved and schooled Prep. They played surprisingly good ball for such youngsters, but nothing like what professionals, even in Class D, play. I tell you they were BOYS, nothing else.

What is a "ringer?" Any one of a lot of things makes a "ringer." True, they may still have been ringers in the sense that they were not bona fide students, were at Riverside only to play ball and never to study; but don't believe that for one minute; they didn't look the part. As for ever having played in professional leagues, or ANY of them ever having received any but the most trifling recompense for any past playing, that was even more unbelievable.

No, they have a very well balanced nine, they field, hit, and run bases fairly well, are strong in the box and are weak in no department of play; they are full of "pep," are in good physical condition, have nice team work, stick to their work and never lose confidence in their ability to win the game—and that's how they do win, and that's all. And that's how they won 19 straight games this spring without losing one.

This is really a very extraordinary achievement, and Coach Frank Anderson deserves an extraordinary amount of credit for the wonderful showing of the team. It was he who taught them their team play and inside ball; he who kept up their fighting spirit after he had generated it, and he who has made them very largely what they are. It is undeniably a jim-dandy young team. But I don't believe they are ringers.

* * *

THE G. M. C. boys were also a nice, clean-looking lot, and they played good steady ball. In two innings only out of 19 played did Riverside succeed in scoring on these hard working lads. Except in hitting they showed no inferiority worth mentioning to the Riverside team.

I desire to express my very warm admiration for the clean and sportsmanly conduct of the G. M. C. cadets and their friends and rooters. The very best of order prevailed at all times on the field, and their treatment of the Riverside team was, so far as I could observe, not only just and courteous but such as befits the honored guest. The work of Umpire Lamar Ham, an old Georgia player, was excellent, and no word of fault finding or bitterness was ever addressed within my hearing either to him or to the visitors by the G. M. C. players or any of their supporters: it was fine conduct and good sport all around.

G. M. C. has a very pretty campus, and the main building of the school is the old Georgia State Capitol: it is a handsome and very substantial edifice still.

* * *

I STOPPED off at Barnesville, hoping to see the rained-out game of the day before played off between Florida and Gordon Institute. In this I met with disappointment, as the Florida team had gone home; but I enjoyed a visit of a few hours there nevertheless.

Gordon also has a very fine athletic field, and several very handsome new buildings. Lieutenant Riley, the former star West Point guard, had all the boys looking spick-and-span, and their military drill was much more than worth watching. The athletes I was so fortunate as to meet were a remarkably fine looking set of fellows who seemed to measure right up to college standards in both stature and outlines. And, by the way, I have just read that their splendid catcher, Everett Bankston, whom I was hoping might come to Tech, has received an offer from the Pittsburg League team. This will give an idea of the class of the athletes they are developing in our Georgia preparatory schools.

GLENN WILL BE STAR AT BOARD TRACK RACING

—JACK PRINCE.

"HARRY GLENN, this local boy, will make one of the greatest board track riders in the world; you watch what I say." So says Jack Prince, inventor of the board track, who knows more about "racing on edge" than any other living man.

Glenn made his real exhibition debut Wednesday. He had been flirting with the track for several days. His first time out he wabbled about on it like a drunken sailor—and wabbling at 65 or 70 miles an hour is a dangerous pastime. Glenn's racing machine, ordered some weeks ago, has not come yet, so he has not been doing much at the track.

Wednesday afternoon five or six of the world's best board-track racers were tuning up their machines and getting ready for the big tournament next week. And a crowd of 6,000 or 8,000 board-track cranks were watching the free exhibition that goes on every afternoon. For nothing at all, the crowd was seeing fancy riding by the best in the business. But even then they were not satisfied.

"Harry Glenn; we want Harry Glenn," they shouted.

Glenn Forced to Ride.

There was not a chance to announce to all of them that Harry's racing machine had not come. And finally the cries became so insistent that "Smiling Harry" mounted a road machine and, grinning happily, set out for his first real attempt at speed on the treacherous banks.

No veteran rider could have handled the track with greater ease. He circled it at the pole and he took it high, he rode fast and slow; but never was there a slip or any show of inexperience. And round after round was greeted with thunderous cheering. That Glenn is a tremendous local favorite was never better demonstrated.

Glenn deserves it, too. Never has more intrepid dirt-track rider shown himself to the public than Harry, and he has won the crowds by his courage and cleverness.

Lad's Success Is Sure.

When Glenn was riding, the experts gathered at the paddock and discussed his work. And it was not long before all agreed that his future in the racing game was assured. He has many times shown his courage and cool-headedness in races, and now that he has shown that he can "ride the boards" as well, there is nothing to it but a big showing for "Smiling Harry" Glenn around the Southern circuit of tracks.

If Glenn's racing machine arrives in time, he will probably try his luck in the first race meet, set for one week from to-morrow.

A PLEA.

(Inspired by C. Webb Murphy.)

"Knock, if you will—I have no dread—
But keep my name in type!" he said.

The only fault to be found with the Manly Art of Self-Defense is that it sometimes back fires.

One learns from the public prints that Mr. Zbyszko still insists that he can throw Mr. Gotch. Some of these foreigners never get any sense.

There is a move afoot to eliminate hammer throwing from track meets. Messrs. Evers, Tinker and Chance are in favor of a move to eliminate same from the pastime known as baseball.

Considering the athletic activities of those Cleveland persons, it behooves Mr. Birmingham to fracture a few more of his athletes' limbs.

REFERRING TO A SPANISH ATHLETE.

(By the Miller of Osgood.)
(Being a Contribution.)

"Ladies and gents!" the Barker cried,
"We'll win the flag with games to spare!"
Oh, please sir, tie your bull brute outside!
You can't win games with heated air.

If the Calgary affair will only put a crimp in the white hope market, it will not have been fought in vain.

One Johnny Evers pugilist, makes his appearance in our midst. One W. Klem, umpire, will testify that anybody with that name is a fighter.

Tommy Leach is the only Cub outfielder who is hitting in the .300 class. All of which goes to show the value of young blood.

Reports come from Virginia, Minn., that Rube Waddell has disappeared again. Virginia, Minn., fears that he may come back.

George Stovall is back in the game. It is rumored that he now chews cotton instead of tobacco.

SHAME.

Full many a man is filled with bitter shame
And hears men make a byword of his name,
But never one who hung his head so low
As one I witnessed in a baseball game.

With bases filled, they called him to the fore;
He whiffed when but a hit would tie the score,
And as he journeyed benchward from the plate
It must have seemed a hundred miles or more.

WOLGAST BACKS HOPPE.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 29.—Ad Wolgast, who is reported to have lost heavily in his last few bets on prize fights, to-day is said to have placed a large bet on Willie Hoppe to beat Frankie Burns when they meet next month.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 29.—One of the most important series of the season begins at the Polo Grounds to-day, when the Giants and Phillies, now leading the league, meet to play four games in three days. This will be a real test of the Quakers, who have been setting a terrific pace ever since the race began.

The games are going to be largely a question of pitchers, and the Giants' twirlers will be thrown against the finest staff in the league in this series. It is the pitching the Quakers have been getting that has kept them up in the race so far, and it will be pitching that must stop them. When McGraw traded three Giants to Cincinnati last week, he was looking ahead to these games, which he realized would be critical and might have a direct bearing on the final result of the season. He needed good, reliable twirlers to work in these battles. Now he has Tesreau, Fromme and Marquard. Doubtless, they will meet Seaton, Alexander, Chalmers and Rixey.

* * *

IT is not only the actual result of this series which will count, but the effect the outcome will have on the hearts and playing of the plunging Phillies. If the Giants can stop them with a jerk we will start them off on a long road tour without the idea that they are invincible, and we will send them away with Pittsburg as their next stop, except for one game at home with Brooklyn. They will encounter some more excellent pitching and a club that has been vastly strengthened within the last two weeks when they meet the Pirates. But should the Quakers take these games in New York or the majority of them, they would still retain the notion that they cannot be beaten, and doubtless would go stampeding through the West at a great rate, increasing their lead to dangerous proportions. It would also have the opposite effect on the New York club, which is about to leave for its swing through the West. Therefore, it is easy to see that the series is an important one.

The Quakers are going to put forth the best that they have against us for two reasons. One is that there never has been any too much good feeling between the two teams, and the other is that every club in the league is always eager to beat the Big Town boys, and especially the champions of the league.

That is the reason the Giants constantly meet the best pitching, whereas some second-rate club gets second-rate twirlers.

* * *

THE Philadelphia club is still playing at top speed, while the Giants are not themselves yet. Our hitting is not timely, and the fielding is uncertain. Demaree, who showed so well at first, has not entirely recovered from a strained back, another reason why the coming of Fromme was timely. The Phillies are likely to make a good bid for the pennant, provided Dooin can keep the team in condition and the regulars can steer clear of injuries. The lack of capable substitutes is what will probably drag the Quakers back. The pitching staff, however, should keep the club a factor in the race right up to September.

The Philadelphia sprint is not the same kind that Cincinnati sprang last year, to my mind. There is more backbone to the Philadelphia club, and the team is a good one as far as the first string men go. Give it a lead of a few games and it's going to be a long chase catching Dooin's crowd. They can then afford to slump and recover. What the team does on this long road trip will give some indication of how it is going to finish, because most of the games it has played to date have been at home. This will be a real test. They play twenty-three of their next twenty-four games on the road.

* * *

ASIDE from actually strengthening the pitching staff, McGraw's trade with Cincinnati displayed considerable wisdom on the part of the New York manager in another direction. The bad weather of the first part of the season has piled up a long string of double-headers for later along, and double-headers eat into pitchers faster than a high-priced automobile does into gasoline. The Giants now have eleven double-headers slated, and, in order to work a reliable pitcher every day, McGraw will need four or five twirlers in service all the time. By the addition of Fromme, he has enough talent to start a reliable performer in each game, in spite of the double-headers, when Demaree gets back in shape.

* * *

BROOKLYN has apparently begun to slip back through the league. I look to see the club finish no better than fourth, because two teams are bound to come and pass the Superbas. These are the Giants and Pittsburg, and I don't figure the Dodgers any way to beat out Philadelphia. The pitching staff appears to be slipping some now, and the infielders are not playing the game they were when the psychology of the winning streak was on the whole team and carrying it up through the league.

* * *

THE Cubs have faded, but should get a revival of form on their return to the home diamond. The improvement in pitching would mean an improvement of the team, because it is weak twirling that has been continuously holding the club back. The rest of the team is strong enough, with a wonderful catching staff.

* * *

WHEN the Eastern clubs invade the West next week, the first real test of the Easterners will occur in comparing them with the West. They waded through the Western teams in the late intersectional series, and the question now is whether or not they can repeat the performance away from home. The St. Louis club made the best showing of all the Westerners in the East, and, with Brooklyn and Philadelphia, has been the surprise of the league. Two good pitchers have been holding the club up in the race, and a team that was regarded before the season as a competitor with Brooklyn and Boston for last place has shot to the front and is crowding a lot of us for the first division.

FLYNN TO CLAIM HEAVY TITLE IF SAVAGE LOSES

JIM FLYNN, who meets Jim Savage at the Auditorium-Armory on June 13, is going to claim the white heavyweight championship of the world if he wins here. The following letter from Jack Curley, manager of the "Fighting Fireman," received to-day, explains itself:

"New York, May 27, 1913.

"Sporting Editor The Georgian:
"Atlanta, Ga.

"Dear Sir:—

"Dear Sir—Jim Flynn will claim the heavyweight championship of the world if he defeats Jim Savage in your city on June 13. He has beaten every white man in the world, barring Luther McCarty, and has issued challenges to Gunboat Smith and Jess Willard. Neither, however, wants to exchange wallops with my man. I will challenge Arthur Pelky for Flynn just as soon as the latter is ready to fight again.

"Very truly yours,
"JACK CURLEY,

"PRICE HAS NOT QUIT LOCAL CLUB,"—CALLAWAY

President Callaway, of the Atlanta Baseball Association, denies the story printed to-day that Southpaw Gilbert Price has quit the local ball club.

According to Callaway, Price reported for practice this morning and will appear in uniform this afternoon, ready to twirl if called upon.

"I know nothing of the rumor that Price is to quit our club and enter business," said Callaway, "and if he was I certainly would know it by this time."

Yell Defiance at Blood Disorders

A Remedy That Has Shown a Most Remarkable Purifying Effect.

At Last You Can Get Rid of Blood Troubles—S. S. S.

The word medicine is one of the most abused in our language. There are certain medicinal properties just as necessary to health as the food we eat. Take, for example, the well-known tonic medicine, S. S. S. This famous blood purifier contains medicinal components just as vital and essential to healthy blood as the elements of wheat, roast beef, the fats and the sugars that make up our daily ration.

As a matter of fact, there is one ingredient in S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating each cellular part of the body to the healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment. That is why it regenerates the blood supply; why it has such a tremendous influence in overcoming eczema, rash, pimples, and all skin afflictions.

And in regenerating the tissues S. S. S. has a rapid and positive antidotal effect upon all those irritating influences that cause rheumatism, sore throat, weak eyes, falling hair, loss of weight, thin, pale cheeks, and that weariness of muscle and nerve that is generally experienced as spring fever. Get a bottle of S. S. S. at any drug store, and in a few days you will not only feel bright and energetic, but you will be the picture of new life. S. S. S. is prepared only in the laboratory of The Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., who maintain a very efficient Medical Department, where all who have any blood disorder of a stubborn nature may write freely for advice and a special book of instruction. S. S. S. is sold everywhere by drug stores, department and general stores.

USE OF BEAN BALL SHOULD BE FORBIDDEN

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE agitation in the major leagues against the "bean ball" has stirred a responsive chord in the Southern League. "Go to it," say players and fans alike.

You know what the "bean ball" is, of course.

It is a ball thrown by the pitcher at the head of the batter. Its purpose may be to intimidate a batter lacking in courage or to force away from the plate a man who is crowding in too close to suit the pitcher.

The play is barbarous and should be eliminated from the game.

* * *

AS contemptible an exhibition of bean ball throwing as Atlanta fans ever saw occurred yesterday. In the sixth inning, when Wally Smith was at bat, he ran in to the limit of the batter's box in an effort to smear one of Finis Wilson's curves. Wilson put up a complaint to the umpire, but there were no grounds for it, and Umpire Pfenninger disregarded it.

The next ball Wilson threw straight at Smith's head. Wally ducked and escaped, but by no wide margin. Again Wilson threw at Smith's head, and this time with such unerring aim and such tremendous speed that when Smith ducked the ball struck the bat that he threw in front of his head as he went down. But for this lucky chance Smith would have received a terrible wallop on the head, would unquestionably have been laid out and perhaps killed.

* * *

WILSON'S act was doubtless that of a fresh kid. He threw at Smith's head because he lacked any better sense.

But if Wilson had killed Smith—and the thing could easily have happened—it would have been cold-blooded, brutal, willful murder.

* * *

THE bean ball is no more a part of legitimate baseball than would be the use of an axe on the head of a base runner or the knifing of a fielder.

It would be difficult absolutely to stop it. However, in most cases a trained observer—such as an umpire is supposed to be and usually isn't—could tell a "bean ball" from a wild heave that went at the same mark. A pitcher who uses it ought to be fined out of baseball for one year and fined not less than a thousand dollars. That might help to break up the practice.

* * *

WEDNESDAY'S ball game was pie for the Crackers—4 to 1—with New Orleans the victim. Paul Musser came around and pitched a really first-class game. The "fatal gift" was with him to the extent of six passes, but he was never in danger, chiefly because he allowed only five hits. He kept the hits pretty well separated from the passes and the only time it seemed possible that anything unfortunate might happen Hendryx waloped into a double play and relieved the pressure.

* * *

CATCHER CHAPMAN made his Atlanta debut and pleased mightily. He is a husky brute, with lots of gab and considerable cleverness. The entire team showed a lot of added "pep," but how much was due to Chapman's example and how much to something Manager Smith might or might not have said in a club house talk nobody knows.

If Chapman proves as good as he looks, the Crackers are a vastly different team. Graham has been an uncertainty all the season. And Dunn was signed only as a second catcher and could not be expected to carry the whole thing along by himself.

With Chapman to do the heavy backstopping and to lead in the chatter; with Dent promising to prove a winning pitcher; with Musser back in shape again, and with the rest of the club playing to form, the locals ought to begin forging toward the front again.

AMERICANS MAY BE FACTORS IN ENGLISH DERBY

By E. G. B. Fitzhamon.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 29.—American owners, horses and jockeys seem likely to cut a pretty wide swath in the great English Derby this year. Harry Payne Whitney's colt, Meeting House, which ran third in the Guineas, has a nice chance of winning. So has Herman B. Duryea's Boyne, which won the Paris Biennial, at ten furlongs, quite comfortably from a smart field. August Belmont also has a colt in France which is going to take some stopping on Epsom Downs, barring accident.

Whitney's Meeting House is a fine big colt by Voter out of Noonday, and is one of the thirty yearlings he purchased from the late James Keene eighteen months ago.

Meeting House began slowly in the mile race at Newmarket for the Guineas and for a few strides he was the last of a field of 15, but he moved up to ninth in the first quarter, was seventh after going five furlongs, and ran over four well fancied candidates in the final quarter, being beaten only two lengths in the final quarter by Louvois and Craganour, which was almost dead-heated. Meeting House ran practically unbacked, with 15 to 1 against him to show, and Frank O'Neill riding.

Was Nipped at The Last.

Craganour divided favoritism with Fairy King and they showed the way for six furlongs, when Craganour drew clear, with Johnny Reiff on the 20 to 1 shot, Louvois, in hot pursuit. Craganour should have won, but his English jockey was overconfident and tossed it off and the American nipped him on the post with Louvois.

O'Neill would have ridden the winner if Jack Joyner had kept Meeting House in the barn. O'Neill was engaged last year to ride for Whitney in this race if he was wanted. Subsequently Mr. Raphael, the owner of Louvois, as well as of last year's Derby winner, engaged both O'Neill and Reiff to come over from Paris to ride Louvois in the Guineas, O'Neill's engagament being conditional that Joyner would not want him for Whitney.

When Joyner decided to take a chance with Meeting House, Raphael had Johnny Reiff to fall back upon, and it was Johnny who won the Derby for him on Tagalie last year.

But Mr. Raphael agrees with me that Frank O'Neill is the greatest jockey in Europe, and probably in the world just now, and he has contracted with Frank to ride Louvois in the Derby and other important races. So if American owners and horses fail in the Derby an American rider is quite likely to win it.

Louvois Shows.

Louvois is the colt of which I wrote last December: that if I had to make my selection for the Derby from last season's two-year-olds before they ran this season as three-year-olds, he would be my choice. Louvois not only showed speed last year but he impressed me as the most likely to carry it over the Derby route this year.

Judging from the manner in which he came from behind and wore down Craganour at one mile I expect Louvois to beat Ismay's colt easily at a mile and a half. To some extent this argument also applies to Whitney's Meeting House being likely to beat Craganour for the Derby. However, the talent makes Craganour favorite at present at 9 to 2.

Shogun is going to become a hot tip for Derby, but I can not stand for a colt with two splints coming down the hill at Epsom unless the going should be very soft, which it seldom is there.

Mr. Duryea's Boyne is by Irish Lad out of Running Water by Sir Dixon. He is being pointed for the Derby, so I hear from France.

Belmont's good Derby colt in France is Vulcain, by Rock Sand out of Lady of the Vale.

Mercer President Leads War on Frats

MACON, GA., May 29.—President S. Y. Jameson, of Mercer University, will himself, at the factulty meeting this afternoon, introduce a resolution to abolish the Greek letter fraternitels at Mercer University. The preamble of his resolution reads:

"Whereas the Baptists, immemorially standing for a State without a king and a church without a bishop, have been apostles of liberty and equality, and whereas Greek letter fraternities are undemocratic in their very constitution as well as management, thereby creating class dictinctions based on other grounds than merit and ability; therefore, be it resolved," etc.

Women Call Riding Astride Ban Silly

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Washington horsewomen consider General J. P. Hickman's order forbidding women to ride astride in the parade of the reunion of Confederate veterans at Chattanooga old-fashioned and out of date.

"I think the order foolish," said Mrs. Burleson, wife of Lieutenant Richard C. Burleson, of Fort Myer. "I am a Southern woman, but the new way of riding cross-saddle is much preferable."

Eight Girls Sold at Auction in Caucasia

LONDON, May 29.—Eight native girls between the ages of 15 and 18 were sold by public auction last week at Tereklimakteb, Caucasia, according to an Odessa dispatch to The Daily Mail.

There was lively bidding before the eight lots were disposed of. The highest price, $105, was paid for a handsome Tartar girl named Orsalia Ajalieff.

It is an immemorial custom of the Tartars and the Kalmucks to sell their superfluous daughters.

PELKY AND BURNS MAY BE TRIED ON JUNE 23

CALGARY, ALBERTA, May 29.—If Tommy Burns and Arthur Pelky ever come to trial on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of Luther McCarty, it will be on June 23 at the Supreme Criminal Court session.

Burns will not give out his plans, but it is said that he is being urged to abandon all connection with ring affairs.

Fargo dispatches giving McCarty's estate as worth $65,000 are grossly exaggerated. His property is worth about $12,000.

Floto Yearns for Days of Old Scores All Typewriter Fighters

By Otto C. Floto.

IN slanting a glance over the lightweight situation as it presents itself to us at the present time we are forced to the conclusion that there is more talk than doin' and more challenges flying back and forth than there are acceptances of the same. Take the whole list of the boys that claim this division as their own, each and every one of them have a chip on their shoulder and are aiming their 14-inch guns at Willie Ritchie, the titleholder. Their ammunition, however, is mostly "buncombe," and the almighty dollar is receiving far more attention in these deliberations than is the glory of becoming champion.

All of which forces us to lean back and sigh, "Oh, you fortunate champions of to-day. How lucky you are not to have been compelled to battle in the time when real fighters graced the roped inclosure." Days when the end was never in sight; days when the finish came only with the referee's count and the acknowledgment from the "seconds" of one or the other principal that his charge could go no further.

* * *

SOME may shrug their shoulders and say, "Yes, but those were the brutal days of the London prize ring." Maybe they were, but they also represented the period when gladiators of real merit held sway, days when it required a stout heart, stamina, a knowledge of wrestling as well as fighting, and an adept so far as the science and punching ability of the game went.

Seldom if ever did a champion return to the ring once the stigma of defeat was placed against his name. He retired in those days unless for some exceptional reason he was allowed to come back. His future connection with the game was as second, bottle-holder or representative of some champion. Tom Sayers, after his defeat by Langham, came back and, in support of the move, we need but add that he was never defeated again. He was a middleweight, while Langham was a heavy one when they fought.

* * *

TAKE the average run of the Queensberry babies we have in our midst at the present time and when they stagger up against defeat or adverse verdicts they hurry to the nearest typewriter and frame fifty-seven different varieties of alibis in a made endeavor to explain away their rout.

Mind, we don't wish you to misunderstand us in that the Queensberry code failed to produce great champions. On the contrary, it did. Jimmy Barry, Jack McAuliffe, Jack Dempsey, Jim Corbett, Fitzsimmons and others won titles under their clauses. But remember, too, that they all fought "TO A FINISH" in order to succeed to the emblem. The present day limited affairs were foreign to them.

* * *

MANY will wonder why John L. Sullivan's name is among those missing from the above list. Simple enough, and equally surprising to as many to learn that Sullivan won his title according to the L. P. R. rules. The only time he met defeat was by the Queensberry route. So that technically speaking Sullivan was never defeated for the title. He at any rate never lost it in the same manner in which he won it. The last London prize ring fight in this country was between Sullivan and Kilrain, at Richburg, Miss. This will perhaps be news to many as well.

With the abolition of the L. P. R. rules came a flock of "box fighters," to whom the limited round journey with eight-ounce gloves and Queensberry methods appealed as the short route to easy money. Over 70 per cent of this same band would have found employment at some other way of making a living had the old-time fashion of battles on the turf "to a finish" still been in vogue.

ZBYSZKO COLLAPSES IN MAT BOUT; LURICH WINS

NEW YORK, May 29.—George Lurich was awarded the decision over Stanislaus Zbyszko in the wrestling bout at Madison Square Garden when the latter failed after 16 minutes and 27 seconds of strenuous struggling on the mat.

The Polish champion was said to be suffering from the effects of a recent injury received at Montreal and his weakened condition resulted in his collapse in the ring.

MAKES HAIR STRAIGHT SOFT AND SILKY

EXELENTO never fails to do what it claims. It stops falling HAIR, cleans DANDRUFF at once, and just feeds the SCALP and ROOTS of the HAIR and makes HAIR grow so fast that it is a wonder.

Every package is guaranteed.

Plain talk: Don't fool yourself by using some preparation which claims to straighten your HAIR. Kinky HAIR can not be made straight. YOU have to have HAIR before you can straighten it. When you use EXELENTO QUININE POMADE, it will promote the growth of the HAIR very fast, and you will soon have nice, long HAIR, which will be long, straight, soft and silky.

News of the Ring Game

Spider Britt is on the warpath. The little bantamweight read Meyer Pries' challenge in the Georgian the other day and says he will gladly meet Pries on a "winner-take-all" basis. Britt also states that he will give Meyer a side bet of $50. Let's hear from Pries!

Jack Dillon has finished hard training for his 10-round set-to with Frank Klaus Thursday night at Indianapolis. Dillon is down to the required weight and says he will be strong at 160 pounds, the figure both men have agreed to make.

* * *

Eddie Campi and Charles Ledoux will clash in the next bantamweight fight to be staged on the Coast. Tom McCarey signed the boys yesterday. They will meet on June 20 in a scheduled 20-round go.

* * *

Jack Britton will make his next fight against Jimmy Duffy, the tough Buffalo boy, on Thursday night. They will meet in Duffy's home town and Britton will have his hands full carrying away the verdict. The boys are billed to go ten rounds.

* * *

Matty McCue was handed a neat setback the other night. Matty attempted to land his haymaker on Patsy Brannigan's jaw, but the latter was far too clever for the Racine sensation and had a good shade at the end of the tenth round.

* * *

Another New Orleans fighter has been defeated. Frankie Russell tried hard to put the Pelican City back on the fighting map Monday night, but Lore proved too tough a customer for Frankie. The Eastern boy was given the newspaper verdict by a good margin.

COTTON WEAK ON EVE OF HOLIDAY

NEW YORK, May 29.—A break of 18 points in May was the feature of the cotton market at the opening of the cotton market to-day. June followed with a decline of 16 points and July 9 points from last night's close. New crop positions were under pressure, but only lost 4 to 6 points. The decline was due to private cables reporting a lockout in the mills of northern Lancashire, coupled with a bearish crop condition and acreage estimate by Miss Giles. She gave the condition of the crop to May 24 as 86.4 and acreage an increase of 3.7 per cent, indicating the acreage of 1913 would be 35,709,400 acres.

The weather map and sentiment were bearish, which encouraged the bears. The ring and certain brokers who usually represent spot interests were the leading sellers. After the call the list increased its decline 1 to 3 points from the opening. Liverpool was a good seller of July. There were about 5,000 May and June notices issued, which were immediately stopped by good sources.

The bears were thunderstruck during the forenoon when shorts grasped the opportunity to cover and sent May back to 11.44, within 2 points of the previous close. July jumped to 11.40. Within fifteen minutes the entire list steadied within 2 to 6 points from Wednesday's final, or unchanged to 16 points above the opening range.

About the only condition issued to-day encouraging to the bulls was The Journal of Commerce, which was 80.5. However, there was a pressure to sell the market from all quarters, but the market took the selling remarkably well in the face of the bearish situation.

May went out at 11.36, a net loss of 8 points from the early high point.

The strength of the market was due to covering over the holidays. In addition to this the trade expects a bullish visible supply statement to-morrow. It is said that clearances from the Pacific coast of 13,630 goes in to-day's receipts and to-morrow's mill takings, which are expected to be bullish.

During the afternoon session the market was quiet. Price movement was practically unchanged from the opening level. It is believed that the market is on an even keel to go over the holidays. Should the government report Monday show the condition above 83 the market will be sold.

At the close the market was steady with prices net unchanged to 14 points lower than the final quotations of Wednesday.

HAYWOOD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, May 29.—With May drawig to a close near positions and spots are weakening, showing plainly that professional support and operations have alone held up prices. Liverpool this morning is 6@8 points down on old crops against one point lower due and 2 points downon new against 1 point to 2 points lower due. Political news is bad. It is feared that a general war will break out in the Balkans. A Liverpool cable again made strong reference to the probability of labor troubles in Lancashire.

Weather conditions continue very good; fair and warmer over entire belt; no rains except in the Carolina coast districts and fair and continued warm weather is indicated for the entire belt.

Our market opened 20 points down on May, 7 points down on July and 5 points on new crops. Support to new crops in New York checked selling pressure, but feeling is against the market. New York says that the strong support to new crops yesterday came from a Cincinnati operator. Between 6,000 and 8,000 tenders on May were made here this morning.

The into-sight for the week looks around 60,000 bales against 65,064 last year. We compare with mill takings of 159,000 bales for this week last year. They were small then owing to holidays, and, therefore, favorable comparisons are probable. After this week, however, to the end of the season consumption statistics have every prospect of comparing very unfavorably with those of last year; the contract market settled around 11.17 for October with trading very quiet. Some further covering in New York before the holidays caused steadiness.

MILLER-CARTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, TENN., May 29.—Several condition reports, all of bearish import, were issued to-day and the market was plainly of bearish temper. But Liverpool bought new crops on this side, undoing straddles and our markets have given appearance of steadiness, while Liverpool was weak, which is just the reverse of recent relations.

The weather is very favorable now and for the next few days.

With the holidays beginning to-night business is restricted, but we anticipate lower prices after the bureau.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 29.—The principal trading at the outset to-day was in July, which was very weak. Mitchell and Schill were the leading sellers of July. After the call Riordan, Rothschild, Schley and Hartcorn were principal buyers. The market was sold on bearish cables telling of a lockout in Lancashire and also on Miss Giles' report.

* * *

Weather news and sentiment were against the market, which helped the decline along.

* * *

Schill, Mitchell and Hubbard sold July freely. The ring sold new crop months, Wilson, Munds and Riordan were the principal buyers of July.

* * *

The market sure bit the "toboggan" at the outset, but quickly recovered its course and rode the "airship."

* * *

The cotton seed oil market will be closed Friday, but will be open Saturday.

* * *

New Orleans wires: "About 7,000 notices out. Bullish visible expected to-morrow."

* * *

Miss Giles' condition figures were 2 per cent above the Government report last year, and if she had reported the same this year it would have been a bullish report.

* * *

Of the particular features of the market yesterday during the late trading was the weakness in the old crop positions, which was due partly to liquidation by foreign straddlers and partly against purchase of new crop and outside liquidation. May option was weak, promoted by big tenders, which was said to be for foreign accounts.

* * *

The market was flooded with private condition and acreage reports to-day, and the particular thing about them was that they were all bearish to the core. The acreage was given about 1,000,000 acres increase over the previous year.

* * *

* * *

* * *

It was learned yesterday that the heavy buying of new crop by Riordan on Tuesday was long buying for an operator connected with a large Cincinnati soap manufacturing concern.

* * *

* * *

* * *

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Excellent rains in the Atlantic States put an end to dry weather talk about that section. A promise now of rather heavy tenders in New Orleans to-day and a report to the effect that some of the cotton taken up on New York May contracts three weeks ago was retendered there yesterday helped foster bearish sentiment.

"Favorable weather has convinced the talent that improving crop advices will be received during the next week or two. Under the circumstances sellers outnumber buyers and the cotton market eased off. However, the talent is convinced that the market is a live corpse, with a kick, and nobody is now treating it as a dead one. Meanwhile New Orleans May closed at 12.35, a premium of 34 points over July, while New York May closed at 11.46, a discount of 9 points under July. New Orleans May stands at a premium of 89 points over New York May. If there be any scientific reason for such a remarkable difference between the two markets, the student of cotton has been unable to find it."

COTTON SEED OIL.

NEW YORK, May 29.—The cotton seed oil market was active and higher to-day on covering of shorts, new speculative buying, firmness in lard and buying of July, thought to be for refiners. Bulls took advantage of the light offerings to help along the advance.

Outside speculative longs were moderate sellers on the advance.

HARRIMAN ISSUES FEATURE STOCKS

Dissolution Plan Submitted by Judge Lovett Not Approved, Causing Weakness.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, May 29.—Moderate improvement was shown at the opening of the stock market to-day, there being a noticeable absence of pressure. Reading and Union Pacific were strong features, the former gaining ⅝ on earnings reports and the latter advancing ½ after selling ex-dividend of 2½. Amalgamated Copper opened at 73½, against 73 at the close last night.

Among the other advances were American Can, ¼; American Smelting, ⅝; Erie, ¼; Northern Pacific, ¾; Pennsylvania, ⅜; Southern Pacific, ¼, and United States Steel common, ⅛.

Canadian Pacific was weak in consequence of selling in London and was 2¾ lower. Western Union, Erie and Atchison shaded fractionally.

There was some covering by traders who feared to go short over the three-day holiday.

The curb was steady.

Americans in London were irregular.

Southern Pacific sold to 95½, a decline of 1¾ from the opening and 1 point from the noon level. Union Pacific dropped to 148¾, for a loss of nearly a point from midday. Union Pacific seesawed throughout the last few minutes. Steel gained fractionally, but Amalgamated Copper, Pennsylvania, Frisco common and preferred and other stocks practically stood still.

The market closed steady. Government bonds unchanged; other bonds firm.

AMERICAN EXCHANGES TO CLOSE FRIDAY

Tomorrow being Decoration Day all American exchanges will be closed to business, with the exception of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange. All exchanges will be closed Saturday, with the exception of the Chicago Board of Trade.

All exchanges will reopen Monday for usual business.

The Liverpool Cotton Exchange will remain open throughout the holidays.

CHICAGO, May 29.—Contradictory reports were received on the weather in Kansas to-day and on this the prices hinged late. Wichita reported 97 degrees and Hutchinson and Dodge City each 100 degrees. As a partial offset to this were reports of showers in one or two sections and denials of the additional moisture later on. The May future was down 1¾ from the best price reached at one time and July was off 1c and September was ⅝c lower, but there were some reactions and advances as the day wore away and final figures showed May ⅛c better, July ⅜c higher and September up ½c.

Corn closed unchanged to ⅛c lower and oats were unchanged to ⅛@¼c higher.

Provisions closed fractionally better.

COURSE OF WHEAT RELYING ON CHARACTER OF WEATHER

CHICAGO, May 29.—The Inter Ocean says: "It was the general belief of wheat traders last night that the market from now on will be governed largely by the character of the weather and crop reports. The bull interests contend that sufficient damage has been done to winter wheat to warrant higher prices.

"There were many bears on corn last night who expect lower prices with an increased movement, which is due from now on. Those who are buying on breaks advise the theory that the movement will not come up to expectations of the bears. Conservative people are advising caution in buying oats on bulges, although they believe that a continuation of the buying that has of late been seen will carry prices higher."

CHINCH BUGS DAMAGING GRAIN.

CHICAGO, May 29.—Great Bend, Kansas, says: "Rain is badly needed and grasshoppers are a menace."

Otis, Barton County, Kansas, says: "Our wheat crop is a total loss."

Omaha says: "Clear and hot over the State; temperature 72."

McPherson, Kansas, special reports high south winds absorbed moisture and made decided change in wheat outlook, besides millions of chinch bugs in wheat and corn.

Lawton, Okla., wires: "My information from unbiased sources indicates crop four State based as present condition about same as last year."

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, May 29.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: Wheat—The weather map shows mostly clear in the Northwest. We feel that purchases on breaks should be made.

Corn—Weather very favorable. We do not care to press the short side.

PONY CONTEST DRAWS ENTRANTS, CERTAIN OF SUCCESS, FROM AFAR

Atlanta children were the first to catch the fire of enthusiasm in The Georgian and American pony contest. The children out in the State and outside Georgia were a little slow at first.

But how they are coming now!

Every mail brings a heap of letters from distant addresses, and the letters are full of "ginger." Every girl or boy seems sure of winning.

Dorothy Davis, of Dothan, Ala., writes: "I have my subscription book, and so I am going to work in earnest now."

"Please send me subscription blanks, etc., so I can win a pony," as O. S. Morton, Jr., writes, is a more frequently used wording.

The flood of mail is becoming a serious problem. Once this week two men in the contest department worked all night answering letters, and then did not catch up entirely with the work. It is hoped, therefore, that contestants who do not receive answers the following day will remember that it is not always possible to go through all the letters, check all the votes and keep up with the routine work of the contest in a day, and be patient.

Names of contestants and their standing follow:

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Caponizing May Be Made Profitable Poultry Sideline

Can Be Made an Additional Source of Income—Questions and Answers.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

Caponizing may be made a profitable side line upon every well regulated poultry plant of any size.

If well managed, it may be made an additional source of income, particularly where there is not a very remunerative market for broilers.

Upon many poultry plants the surplus cockerels are marketed as broilers that they may be gotten out of the way before they have eaten their heads off, as the saying goes. There are locations, however, where it is not at all convenient to get them into a market that will pay good prices. Where such conditions prevail, then it is that the business of caponizing comes in play and can often be made to turn the young male into capons that will grow into money-makers. Of course, one must have the proper kind of stock or the operation will not be a paying one. Take, for example, the smaller laying breeds like the Leghorns. It does not pay at all to try to make a paying capon of them. The increased weight will not be enough to justify it. And the quality of the flesh will not be enough improved to pay for the work. Where one breeds any of the Rock or Wyandotte family, the Reds or Orpingtons, it will be all right, for they will all make good ones, not only as to size, but in quality as well. A good heavy-boned Plymouth Rock cockerel can often be made to weigh from eight to ten pounds at ten to twelve months of age, and bring the top of the market for capons, which is usually about double that of the ordinary fowl upon the market. This, of course, pays well for the little extra trouble that is incurred for the operation and the chances of loss. Of course, when it comes to a real business for the best there is in it the Light Brahma and the Buff Cochin make the finest and best capons. They are so tender in fiber and the skin so loosely put on that they will allow for almost any kind of growth without becoming hidebound, as will many of the smaller breeds.

The proper time for doing the work of caponizing is between the ages of two and three months, at the time when they will weigh about two pounds. It should not be done when they weigh less than this, and if one waits much longer they get older and the chances of loss are much greater. It will not take any one of average intelligence to get accustomed to the mode of operation so that there will not average a loss of more than one or two in a hundred, which does not amount to anything when compared to the great gain in growth to be obtained after it is performed.

A good set of instruments and the dexterity that comes from a little experience is all that is essential to success. Although it may be done at any time of the year, the most propitious time is during the spring and summer when everything is at its best for good growth. There are no special things required, or extra housing; just good feed and plenty of it.

It is not possible as a rule to market them in the country towns, but at the finest hotels and resort places, where the price is not so important as the quality of the meat. We have known a very good trade to be worked up for them at the holiday season by visiting private families in the towns, telling them what you have and the splendid quality they will get from you. Then they make mighty good eating for home consumption, so much better than attempting to eat the great overgrown, strong-flavored cockerels late in the fall and winter.

Questions and Answers.

Judge F. J. Marshall.—Is it advisable to feed oats to hens as it comes from the field; that is, without being clipped or ground? I have been feeding it about twice a week for some time, and my hens do not seem to thrive very well upon it. I would like to have your valued opinion about it. I shall thank you for the advice.
R. R. C., Locust Grove, Ga.

Answer.—It has been our experience to feed a good deal of oats to chickens of all ages from three months on up to grown fowls. When we did feed it, it was fed regularly once a day in moderate quantities and in connection with other grains. I believe your trouble is caused by your being afraid to feed it every day. Feeding as you have done but once a week the hens would fill up on it and get more than they really needed. When they get it every day they will only eat a small amount of it, then it is easily digested. We should advise you to feed it every day, at first in very small amounts, gradually increasing the amount. Always with some other grain, preferably cracked corn. Fed in this way, we see no real reason why you should have any trouble whatever, and it is a splendid food to induce laying along with corn. In fact, if one will take the trouble to parch it as coffee is browned in the oven until the points are almost burned, it will be the best laying food you can contrive. Do not, however, feed it to chicks under three months of age.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

New Hotel Ansley Will Open June 16

Monday, June 16, has been fixed as the date for the formal opening to the public of the Hotel Ansley, at the southwest corner of North Forsyth and James Streets. The hotel will be run on the European plan, and J. F. Letton will be the manager.

The structure was started in the spring of 1912, and is to cost $500,000. It is eleven stories high and contains 300 rooms. The Ansley Hotel Company is the builder. All but 40 of the rooms have private baths.

Interesting Deeds Recorded.

Deeds have gone to record in several interesting realty transfers. For $20,000 Mrs. Fannie B. Eady has sold to Mrs. Mabel H. Moody and Dayton Hale 41 and 43 West Harris Street, 50 by 192 feet and 100 feet west of Spring Street. The terms were $3,900 cash and four notes of $4,250 each, with interest at 6 per cent.

For $12,000 Mrs. Ellen McGowan Phelan Goldsmith has sold to William and J. A. Cook and G. R. Maddox 390 Whitehall Street, 50 by 196 feet, 100 feet southwest of Hood Street. The terms were $3,000 cash and the assumption of a $4,000 loan, with notes at 6 per cent.

For $5,000 E. A. Holbrook has sold to Sidney Hagerton a large building lot on Paces Ferry Road, 1,398 feet west of Tuxedo Drive. One thousand dollars was cash.

Healey Building Active.

The hole for the Healey Building foundations was fairly alive with steel girders Thursday morning. The steel gang has pushed this work fast since the arrival of the two monster derricks, and in another week there will be considerable framework in evidence. Thousands of people have stopped by to view the scene.

Peachtree Owners Hopeful.

Prominent members of the Peachtree Street property owners' committee, who appeared before the Finance Committee of Council this week to ask for $5,000 for widening Peachtree between Forsyth and Harris Streets, will go before that body again Friday morning. Considerable hope of success in this project has been expressed on account of the nominal amount asked for.

Whitehall's Chance Friday.

People conversant with city hall matters declare that Whitehall Street property owners have a better chance of an appropriation for regrading Whitehall than any of the various claimants who want improvements in different sections of the city. They base this assertion on the fact that council and the streets committee have already gone on record almost unanimously as favoring the Whitehall project, and the further fact that owners of property have raised $17,000 and are asking the city for only $30,000 for the improvement.

A citizen whose business is in the city hall declared that should Mayor Woodward see fit for any reason to veto the appropriation, council would doubtless pass the measure over his veto, since the project is one of city-wide concern.

The proposition which Whitehall interests have put up to council is to cut down greatly at Trinity Avenue and fill correspondingly at Brotherton, in order to perfect the grade and provide an improvement of lasting benefit. This agitation was started months ago by leading representatives of the populous South Side, the argument being that the city needed an extension of its retail district, and that southward on Whitehall was the logical course for this to take. Incidentally, real estate dealers who are interested along Whitehall contend that prices have been proportionately too low, and they anticipate a quick rise and much activity as soon as the prayed-for improvements are assured.

Decatur's Home-Coming Day.

Realty prospects desiring to acquaint themselves with the advantages of Decatur will find a good opportunity, say DeKalb county citizens, in the annual Home-coming Day, June 3. Not only will DeKalb's chosen leaders regale the assembled throngs with oratory, but a systematic effort will be made to show visitors just as much of Decatur as possible. This suburban town has made rapid strides in the last few years, and its citizens are expected to welcome the opportunity to exhibit some of the things that have been accomplished. Land values have climbed to an unbelievable degree, and what is more, people are buying it.

To Build $8,000 House.

A permit has been asked of Building Inspector Hays for a two-story frame dwelling for Frederick Fayram, at 41 Oakdale Road, Oruid Hills. Day labor will be used.

PROPERTY TRANSFERS.

Warranty Deeds.

The Stalwart Senate Should Stand by Our American Merchant Marine

The United States Senate fronts an opportunity and a duty in dealing with our merchant marine.

Public attention is rapidly focusing upon American maritime conditions, and it is high time that it did.

The favor with which the readoption of the early American discriminatory maritime policy is regarded by the thoughtful press and by influential Americans who are indifferent to foreign protests and threats is additionally reassuring.

Even more important, the people are realizing that an American deep sea shipping will form an urgently needed and entirely lacking secondary reserve for our navy.

Mr. Underwood's mere insertion of the thin edge of the wedge of discriminatory duties in his tariff bill has served to arouse both national and international interest.

Public indorsement of the policy is so strong that the stalwart Senate should promptly DRIVE IN THIS WEDGE. It will separate the United States from its trade agreements and conventions with other nations whose people know that the American navy will remain weak so long as it lacks the resource of a strong American shipping with officers and men.

The House tariff bill only provides a discount of 5 per cent of the duty on imports in vessels of American register. It applies to less than half our imports—only to those that are dutiable. It applies to only 10 per cent of our imports from South America, the other 90 per cent being duty free.

That discount will not suffice to attract American capital into oversea shipping with the new duties so low. The pending provision would give foreign yards the building of all the ships its enactment would bring under American register.

And finally there are conflicting opinions as to whether or not the withdrawal of the United States from trade conventions and agreements that now estop it from applying the policy is assuredly provided for.

THE SENATE MUST REMEDY EACH OF THESE DEFECTS AND OBSCURITIES. We must have a whole-hearted and not a half-hearted readoption and enforcement of the policy that gave American ships the carriage of 80 per cent of our imports and exports during all of the more than sixty years it was previously in force.

There is an overwhelming American demand for the repeal of all restraining conventions and suspensory laws that perpetuate our present maritime importance.

The need of the Nation, the need of our Navy, and the need of our foreign commerce alike demand it.

The Senate must infuse vigor and vim into this section of the House bill, so that its enforcement will fill every American shipyard with orders for oversea ships that will reassert American maritime independence and carry the American flag over all the seven seas to the business ports of the civilized world.

Big Business Men And Despotic Power

Judge Gary is the working head of the greatest industrial corporation in America—the United States Steel Corporation.

He is especially notable among the big business men of the country because he believes and has constantly declared during the last few years that the great interstate business concerns that now control most of the output of the necessaries of life MUST CEASE TO BE ARBITRARY AND DESPOTIC IN THE USE OF THIS POWER AND MUST SUBMIT THEMSELVES TO PUBLIC AUTHORITY.

Speaking to an organization of his business associates last week, Judge Gary remarked: "The President of the United States recently said that honest business need not be afraid. Well, let us be honest. Let us take him at his word; let us assume that he means exactly what he says."

The Georgian takes occasion to say that SOMETHING MORE THAN WHAT COMMONLY GOES BY THE NAME OF "HONESTY" IS NOW REQUIRED OF THE INDUSTRIAL LEADERS OF THE UNITED STATES.

What is required is that big business men shall have the high intelligence TO HATE THEIR OWN ARBITRARY POWER OVER THE INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATION OF THE COUNTRY.

It is time that these men should come to understand that it is absolutely impossible for the republic to submit to irresponsible power of any kind. IF THE REPUBLIC IS TO ENDURE, THE ECONOMIC DESPOTS CANNOT STAND.

The principle that all power over the essentials of life must be in the hands of men accountable to the people is the principle upon which the political and legal systems of the United States are founded. This is no fine-spun theory. It is a part of the everyday consciousness of the American man.

It follows from this principle that whenever any man in America is seen by the people to be exercising a selfish and unregulated power over the people's lives, IT IS IMPOSSIBLE FOR THE PEOPLE TO REGARD HIM OTHERWISE THAN AS A PUBLIC ENEMY.

The people are patient with private monopolies only so long as there is a reasonable doubt whether they really are private monopolies. But as soon as it becomes perfectly plain that certain men are levying private taxes upon the people, the people cannot and will not any longer have patience with such men.

Judge Gary has pointed out the right road for corporate managers who are suspected and who suspect themselves of being monopolists. Many months ago he told a committee of Congress that the industrial trusts must be controlled by the Government—even to the legal limitation of dividends and of commodity prices. In short, Judge Gary is the one corporation manager in the country whose intelligence has been absolutely clear on the point that no monopoly can endure in a republic—EXCEPT A PUBLIC MONOPOLY.

In quoting the words of President Wilson last week, Judge Gary spoke truly enough—but feebly. He has often spoken better from other texts.

It is not by mere scrupulosity, not by mere freedom from rascality, that big business men are to set themselves right before the country or to set the country right in the light of its democratic tradition.

THE COUNTRY EXPECTS TO SEE AN UPRISING OF BIG BUSINESS MEN, WHO ARE AMERICANS MORE THAN THEY ARE MONOPOLISTS—WHO HATE ARBITRARY AND DESPOTIC POWER AND ARE DETERMINED TO PUT IT DOWN.

Rev. John E. White Writes on The Biggest Politics

Three Great Races---the Teuton, Slav and Mongolian---Are Lined Up on the Map of the World, and the American People Are at a Perilous Point About It.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN
By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE
Pastor Second Baptist Church

IT was stated that Dr. John Bassett Moore had been brought into President Wilson's administration with no reference whatever to politics.

That was a very great mistake.

Dr. John Bassett Moore is First Assistant Secretary of State precisely because he is such a politician—the broadest, biggest, world-wideliest politician at Washington.

The sort of politics that absorbs Professor Moore's attention is not as scrappy as the race for Constable in a small town, but for variety, strategy and ominousness it is the big game of the world.

It has been Professor Moore's life work to study the vaster forces of the human movement called civilization. He is the astronomer of the Democratic administration. With his telescope sweeping immense political areas, he locates the points of disturbance in the field of civilization and tells his superiors what to do about it.

He keeps a wise eye on the great mass formations in the scrimmage of nations and races. He has a man's job all right.

The Big Line-Up.

At this moment three great races—the Teuton, Slav and Mongolian—are lined up on the map of Europe and Asia.

They are looking each other in the eyes and each is confident of its ultimate ascendency. This is politics more than continental or international. It is the biggest, deepest, most titanic situation of human competition the mind of man ever contemplated.

The smaller questions occupying the foreground of public interest are bagatelles compared with the issue presented by racial ambition. Such immense energies are involved that to think of them as let loose upon each other appals the imagination.

Outside university cloisters, from which Dr. John Bassett Moore has emerged, few people have dared to entertain the problem of collision on so colossal a scale. Within each of these great race masses we are told that instinctive tendencies are not controlling the point of view of diplomacy, and these tendencies have become manifestly contripetal.

The family disputes within each of the race groups are to grow less and less frequent under the resistless pressures of race unities. Quarrels between England and Germany, for instance, or between Russia and the smaller Slav States, are decreasingly capable of serious consequences.

The get-together race movement is dominating the motive in world politics and the indications are that the Mongolian race will be the first to arrive at the goal of solidarity in a political game.

The Japanese Imbroglio.

Here is uncovered the background which renders American complications with Japan at the present time a subject of intense solicitude all over the world. The London Times is not given to groundless alarm and its Foreign Editor, Sir Valentine Chirot, has just sounded a solemn note on the subject:

"The ultimate point of dispute," he says, "does not affect the United States alone, still less California. It is a world question essentially. Fears of the inhabitants of the Pacific slope may be premature, but they are not entirely groundless. They spring from the instinct of self-preservation and if the present minor dispute is composed they will assuredly recur."

Commenting editorially on the situation, The Times says that: "However it may be settled now, the issue will have to receive the earnest attention of the white races in times to come."

The American people have heretofore occupied a superior attitude toward this "big politics" and has kept away from it, but fate seems now about to thrust upon us the necessity of putting out our hand toward it.

It is impossible to exaggerate the consequences which depend upon the hand we put out. If it is a fist we may as well get ready to tax ourselves, our children and children's children with the cost. There will be the price of trouble enough to last a hundred years.

Putting Our Fist In.

The expense of warships and army equipment is an insignificant item in the reckoning. The losses in markets affecting American labor and capital, and particularly the cotton trade through a long period would be staggering.

But the really great sacrifice that a gladiatorial attitude our part in the problem of big politics would exact of us would be the surrender of the moral supremacy in relation to these things which the founders of the American republic committed to us and which the historians have cheerfully accorded.

Is it not our better destiny to play the part of a big, fearless, chivalric brother with courage, firmness and wisdom, and with fairness and patience, than to seek the role of the "Big Fist," or the "Big Stick" with the commonplace distinction which history has committed to all its boastful and selfish peoples?

Letters From The Georgian's Readers

FREE SCHOOL BOOKS.

Editor The Georgian:

The Constitution of Georgia provides for free public schools and provides a school fund for the support of such schools. The Constitution further provides for local taxation for public schools.

I hope that the Legislature will pass a law authorizing the State School Commissioner or some other public authority to purchase for the use of the public schools of the State all school books necessary for the children attending the schools.

This law would result in the saving of thousands of dollars annually to the people of Georgia.

I do not think the State itself should embark in the publication of free school books, but I am sincerely of the opinion that the State and towns and cities should furnish free school books.

A few of the reasons for my opinion are as follows:

1. The child of the poor man has the same chance to obtain an education as the child of the rich or well-to-do man.

2. The "thorough system of common schools" provided for by the Constitution of Georgia is thus made in fact a "thorough system" because to the free school house and free tuition is added free school books.

3. The work of the school can be begun without delay when school books are furnished at public expense and thus become effective from the beginning of the school term.

4. Uniformity in the use of school books throughout the State is thus secured—although under the Georgia adoption law uniformity is already obtained in the County schools.

5. The common schools, established for the education of the common people, are made popular and attendance is encouraged and prolonged.

6. The school books are public property and through the use of them respect for public property may be taught.

The following States have laws providing for free school books for the public schools: Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Nebraska, Maryland, Wyoming and Utah.

SHEPARD BRYAN,
Former Member Atlanta Board of Education.

WHY IS A FIRETRAP?

Editor The Georgian:

The Georgian quoted Professor Slaton, superintendent of Atlanta public schools, the other day as saying, "The Atlanta schools are firetraps."

The firetrap may be avoided by insisting that the architect observe the following simple rules: Every school house of more than one story should have at least two stairways, located at extreme opposite ends of the building, so that should fire break out at, say, the east end, and block that exit, the west end stairway would be the last part of the building to burn.

The stairs should not be located in the main corridors, where they would form a trap in case of panic, but in separate stairway halls, running out at right angles to the main corridors. They should land in immediate proximity to the exits, so the pupil will not have to run through the building looking for a way out. They should be 4½ feet wide, and have small round hand rails on both sides.

The main corridors leading to exits should be entirely free from obstruction of all kinds. The corridors should give free and unobstructed passage directly to exit doors that open outward at a slight push from inside.

Have all the steps that lead to the first floor on the outside of the building, so that if, in a rush to get out, a child falls or is thrown down he will be on the outside, where he can be rescued. Have no inside vestibule steps.

Locate heating plant near the center of the building, in an absolutely fireproof room, with entrance from outside the building only.

STEVENS BOY NOT SLAYER, DECLARES FATHER

Son, Held by Chattanooga Police, Was in That City When the Bodies Were Found.

"Red" Merchant, companion of Wade Stevens, was arrested at Chattanooga by Detective John Black shortly after he took the Stevens boy into custody. Black will leave Chattanooga with the two prisoners at 8 o'clock this evening over the Southern Railway, according to a message to Chief Beavers. Other dispatches received say Black and the two boys have already left.

Wade Stevens, son of William Stevens, whose wife and daughter were murdered and whose bodies were found in the charred ruins of their home, seven miles southeast of Atlanta, was arrested in Chattanooga at noon to-day. The DeKalb County Coroner's jury had recommended that the young man be arrested and held for investigation.

At almost the precise minute when Wade Stevens was arrested in Chattanooga, William Stevens, his father, having just arrived in Atlanta, made a statement to The Georgian completely exonerating the boy. The elder Stevens said his landlady, who knew Wade, had seen him in Chattanooga early Wednesday morning. This was just about the time the crime was discovered and only a few hours after its commission.

Detective John R. Black, of Atlanta, who was in Chattanooga attending the reunion, arrested young Stevens in the reunion city. He wired Chief of Police Beavers and was told to hold the young man, pending arrival of requisition papers.

Chief of Police Beavers then announced he would confer with Sheriff McCurdy, of DeKalb County, before taking further steps.

Sheriff McCurdy later asked that Black bring the boy back, and Chief Beavers wired the detective to that effect. The police point out that if the boy took the 8 o'clock train Tuesday night to Chattanooga he, of course, is eliminated from the case.

Father Brokenhearted.

The father of the boy, a 70-year-old Confederate veteran, was heart-broken when he arrived in Atlanta at 10:50 o'clock this morning and heard for the first time of the double tragedy.

Stevens left Chattanooga at 3 o'clock this morning, but the train was delayed en route. Several friends went to the Union Depot to meet him, but he came from a rear car and left the station without meeting them.

The only information given him in Chattanooga was that his house had burned. Leaving the depot here, he went direct to the office of Carson & Treadwell, who handled his wife's real estate, where he learned all the details.

One of the firm of Carson & Treadwell told him of the double murder, and that his son, Wade Stevens, was wanted for investigation. The old veteran was dumfounded. He sank in a chair and remained silent for several minutes, then dramatically expressed belief in the innocence of his son and declared he would spend the remainder of his days hunting the slayer.

Declares Boy Is Innocent.

"All I have to live for now is to try to catch the murderer," he said. "I'll spend the rest of my days hunting him."

While in Chattanooga Stevens boarded at 166 Rossville Avenue. His son by a former marriage, Ed Stevens, also boarded there. The missing son, Wade Stevens, had stopped there previously and is well known to the landlady, who said she saw him in front of her home at 6 o'clock Wednesday morning.

"I believe my boy is innocent of this murder," said Mr. Stevens. "He was bad at times, but he never could have stooped so low as to murder his own mother and sister. He knows nothing about it yet.

"I know he had nothing to do with

The Interrupted Joy Ride; or, Wifey Was Under the Seat

MACON, GA., May 29.—A master plumber, his pretty young wife and his equally pretty stenographer were the participants in a domestic drama, with a comedy vein, this week.

The man, well known and well to do, aroused his wife's suspicions by requesting a hurried supper Tuesday night. When he declined to tell her where he was going after supper her suspicion was intensified.

When he departed in his automobile his wife was in the back tonneau under a rug.

The auto went to the home of the stenographer, who took the seat beside her employer, and thus they sped out into the country. When five miles out their conversation became so interesting that the wife could not conceal herself longer. Rising, she began wielding a poker.

She severely beat her husband and the pretty stenographer before the machine was stopped and they jumped out.

On the return home the stenographer occupied the rear seat and the wife sat beside her crestfallen husband.

A divorce suit is expected.

Boston Entertains Atlanta Old Guard

BOSTON, May 29.—Members of the Old Guard of Atlanta, in Boston to attend Memorial Day exercises, were guests Thursday of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company.

The Confederates were given an automobile ride to Lexington and Concord and a visit to the estate of Colonel Everett C. Benton, of Belmont. Friday the visitors from the South will go to the State House, place a floral tribute on the sailors' and soldiers' monument on Boston Common and in the afternoon take luncheon with E. W. Kinsley, a distinguished G. A. R. veteran.

Slayer Released on Self-Defense Plea

COLUMBUS, GA., May 29.—Walter Duke, a well-known Columbus young man, last night shot and killed Perry Argo, who came here recently from Cochran, Ga. Argo died en route to the city hospital. Duke was arrested but this afternoon was released when a Coroner's jury returned a verdict of justifiable homicide. He claimed self-defense.

RAIL BOARD ORDERS CARS FOR RUSH CROWDS

Many Changes in Schedules Also Directed in the State Commission's Mandate.

General improvement in the street car service in Atlanta furnished by the Georgia Railway and Power Company was ordered by the State Railroad Commission shortly after noon Thursday. Practically every line operated by the comrany is included in the list. The order specifies particularly the service rendered during rush hours.

The order, which will benefit thousands of persons who are compelled to use the street cars, was issued after several conferences between the Railroad Commission and President Arkwright, of the Georgia Railway and Power Company.

On May 5 Chairman Murphey Candler addressed a letter to Mr. Arkwright asking him to make suggestions for the betterment of the service during rush hours. This letter was replied to on May 23 by Mr. Arkwright, his letter going much into detail.

Suggestions made by Mr. Arkwright were considered at sessions of the commission Tuesday and Wednesday, during which time they were in conference with the street railway officials. It is understood that the order of the commission is agreeable to the company. The improvement of service will begin within the next few days.

Improvements Ordered.

Here are the improvements ordered:

ROUTE NO 2—Copenhill to Westview. Rearrangement of schedules so as to space the headway between cars now operated more nearly to four minutes and secure a more even distribution of the traffic loads. Counts of actual loads at peak points to be made during next five months and filed with the commission, so as to secure accurate information as to whether there is excessive congestion.

ROUTE NO. 4—Inman Park-Georgia Avenue. A three and one-third minute headway during morning and afternoon rush hours, on Inman Par end, with the Georgia Avenue end provided for by increased service on Route No. 5.

ROUTE NO. 5—West Peachtree and South Pryor. Additional cars between Sixth Street crossing on West Peachtree and Bass Street crossing on South Pryor, so as to give, during the morning and afternoon rush hours, a service with five minutes' headway.

ROUTE NO. 6—Forrest Avenue and Capitol Avenue. Actual counts to be made during morning and afternoon rush hours, at two peak points, during next five months, to accurately ascertain degree of congestion, if any, on this route.

ROUTE NO. 8—Fair and Marietta Streets. The afternoon rush hour service on this line has been recently extended from 6:30 to 7 p. m., and schedules now established more regularly sustained. Counts of traffic loads to be made on this route, as directed on No. 6.

ROUTE NO. 10—Whitehall and Peachtree: Increased service so as to provide for cars every three and one-third minutes, and extension of afternoon rush hour service to 9 p. m.

Suburban Service.

ROUTE NO. 17—Main Decatur: Additional tripper cars to Hayes Street, so as to give service to that point with three and one-third minute headway, and from there to Decatur on five minutes headway during morning and afternoon rush hours, with extension of service on ten-minute headway from end of afternoon rush hour period to 9:30 p. m., in lieu of present twenty-minute headway. After 9:30 p. m. the twenty-minute headway will be operated as now.

ROUTE NO. 19—River Line: Extra cars on Sundays during summer months to accommodate extra traffic. Counts of traffic loads to be

BURNS JOINS IN HUNT FOR PHAGAN SLAYER

All Evidence Gathered by His Operatives Sent to the Noted Detective.

James Conley, the negro sweeper at the National Pencil Factory who has turned suspicion on himself with a maze of contradictory statements, was put through a gruelling third degree examination at police headquarters this afternoon. Pinkerton Detective Harry Scott said as the grilling began before Chief Beavers and Chief Lanford that he expected to glean important information. Scott had interviewed factory employees and was convinced that there were many things to be cleared up before the negro's second affidavit, on which the police rely so much, could be accepted.

With the maze of contradictory statements sweeping an avalanche of suspicion upon the head of James Conley, the negro sweeper, the potent information was unearthed Thursday that Detective William J. Burns personally will take charge of the investigation into the Mary Phagan murder case which his operatives have been conducting.

Despite the published report that the Burns operatives had withdrawn from the case, and despite the procedure of the State in prosecuting its case against Leo M. Frank, the pencil factory superintendent, the Burns investigation will continue and from now on be under the famous detective's direction.

This information came from Detective C. W. Tobie, William J. Burns' lieutenant, Thursday morning. It tends to show that Tobie, who has had charge of his agency's investigation here, does not consider the case as closed.

Mr. Tobie went so far as to deny emphatically the published interview with him, in which he was quoted as declaring Frank to be the guilty man.

Takes Evidence to Burns.

"From the evidence so far developed in the Phagan case, guilt is directed at Frank," the detective said with emphasis. "That was my statement. However, I was quoted as saying outright that Frank committed the murder. That was not true."

Mr. Tobie left Atlanta Thursday afternoon. He carried with him the evidence which he has gathered during his two weeks' probe of the case. He is going to New York. He will meet Burns there and place his material into the noted detective's hands. From then on Detective Burns will direct his operatives as to further investigations to be outlined by him.

This information but proves another link in the chain of circumstances which The Georgian has consistently pointed out in serious incrimination of Conley.

Negro Deeper in Suspicion.

With each cross-examination of the negro by the police in their attempts to secure more evidence against Frank, Conley has only insnared himself in guilt. His admitted falsehoods in former affidavits tending to throw the blame to Frank in connection with the "murder" notes have been accentuated as incriminating by the unqualified declarations of employees at the pencil factory that Conley is the guilty man.

Three responsible officials of the plant have outlined plausible theories as to how the negro could have committed the crime. These men, Herbert G. Schiff, who is assistant superintendent; E. F. Holloway, timekeeper, and N. V. Darley, general foreman, are acquainted with Conley. Upon their knowledge of him and the opportunity offered for accomplishing the murder they base their statements that he is guilty. They have proven beyond a doubt that Conley was in the factory for several hours on the day of the murder, and connecting with this the negro's contradictory statements as to his whereabouts they have compiled a most laudable explanation of how he killed the Phagan girl.

The detectives still held firmly to

Negro's Body Hangs In Court House Yard

AUGUSTA, GA., May 29.—What is left of the body of Richard Henry Austin, South Carolina negro desperado, to-day hangs to a tree in the court house square at Hampton, S. C. Before the body was suspended the head, one arm, the fingers and toes had been chopped off.

Austin died last night en route from Savannah to Hampton, having been fatally wounded by his captors near Newington, Ga., Tuesday night.

Austin assaulted a white woman and killed three white men near Hampton before he escaped several weeks ago.

Gambling in Food Under Senate's Ban

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The essential features of the Cummins bill to tax gambling in "all products of the soil, meats and provisions of all kinds" out of existance will be incorporated in the Underwood tariff bill by the Senate.

The amendment becomes germane to a tariff bill because it is designed, ostensibly, to raise revenue. The tax imposed is so high that no revenue would be collected and gambling operations would be prohibited through taxation.

BOTH TEAMS SCORE ONE IN FIRST INNING

Brady Faces Case on Mound in Opening Battle of Series at Poncy Park.

Score by innings:

Montgomery	1 0 0
Atlanta	1 1 0

PONCE DE LEON BALL PARK, May 29.—The Crackers and the Billikens met here this afternoon in the first of their four-game series.

Both Montgomery and Atlanta scored one run each in the first inning.

Bill Smith sent in Brady and Chapman to do the battery work for Atlanta and Johnny Dobbs selected Case and Gribbens to represent Montgomery.

THE GAME.

FIRST INNING.

Walker walked. Wares sacrificed, Brady to Agler. Manning singled to right and Walker scored. Sloan fouled to Smith. Kutina grounded to Bisland and Manning was forced at second. ONE RUN, ONE HIT.

Long singled through Manning. Welchonce grounded to Knaupp and Long was forced at second to Wares. Alperman out, Manning to Kutina, and Welchonce went to second. Bailey singled through Wares and Welchonce took third. Welchonce and Bailey worked a double steal, Welchonce scoring and Bailey going to second. The latter took third on Wares' wild return to the plate. Smith filed to Jantzen in deep left. ONE RUN, TWO HITS.

SECOND INNING.

Jantzen went out, Alperman to Agler. Knaupp filed to Smith. Gribbens filed to Bailey. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

Bisland filed to Jantzen. Agler singled over Case's head. Chapman filed to Sloan. Brady singled to right and Agler went to third. Long was there in the pinch with a timely single to center and Agler tallied. Welchonce out, Kutina to Case. ONE RUN, THREE HITS.

THIRD INNING.

Case went out, Alperman to Agler. Walker grounded out, Bisland to Agler. Bisland took Wares' grounder and threw him out to Agler. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

Alperman filed to Sloan. Bailey popped to Knaupp. Smith fanned. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

Taft Scores U. S. for "Lamb-Like" Policy

NEW HAVEN, May 29.—Former President Taft delivered his first lecture at Yale on the general topic, "Some Questions of Modern Government." He criticised the short sighted policy of the United States in not maintaining a sufficient army, and attacked the United States Senate for its attitude toward foreign nations.

"The policy of this country seems to be the Lord looks after the children and the drunken men and He ought to look after the United States," said Mr. Taft.

Wanamaker Faces Tariff Fraud Charge

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Attorney General McReynolds to-day announced that the charges of undervaluation of imports against John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, will be laid before the Federal Grand Jury.

The Attorney General conferred with President Wilson to-day after receiving a full report from his agent in Philadelphia, which he said, fully justified the proposed action of the department.

U. S. Armor Plant at $8,000,000 Urged

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The erection of an armor plate plant by the Government was urged again to-day by Senator Ashurst, of Arizona, despite the testimony of Rear Admiral Twining, chief of the United States Bureau of Ordnance, that an adequate factory would cost $8,000,000.

"The majority of the Democrats in the Senate and House are in favor of such a plant," said Senator Ashurst.

MAZE OF LIES BY CONLEY CLOUD MYSTERY

their theory that the negro was the most important witness against Leo M. Frank, in the face of the contradictory stories and lies in which he had been trapped.

They were strongly disposed to give full credence to Conley's second affidavit, although the negro's sudden anxiety to talk after three weeks of silence and the maze of falsehood in which he was at once involved served suddenly to shift the responsibility for Mary Phagan's death from Leo Frank to the sullen black man, in the judgment of many who have been following the evidence closely.

Chief Lanford and Detective Harry Scott, of the Pinkertons, announced Thursday morning, however, that they regarded the second affidavit of Conley as the final and conclusive piece of evidence needed in preparing a case against Frank.

Rejected First Affidavit.

Others who have weighed the evidence carefully declare there are many more significant indications that Conley was the slayer than there are reasons to believe that Frank is guilty.

The detectives rejected the first affidavit of Conley, in which he said Frank dictated Friday the notes that were found by the body of the slain girl Sunday morning on the ground that it was absurd and unbelievable to hold the theory that the murder was premeditated.

Yet they accept the second affidavit, which indicatesidentically the same thing, in that Frank met Conley at Nelson and Forsyth Streets before 11 o'clock Saturday morning, April 26, before the crime was committed, and told the negro to wait for him, later taking Conley to the factory with him, where Conley says that he wrote the notes at Frank's direction.

The negro in his second affidavit suggests no other motive that could have impelled Frank to ask him to come to the factory shortly before noon on Saturday. Conley says that Frank told him to wait secreted on the first floor until he heard a whistle. When he heard the whistle he says he went upstairs and Frank dictated the notes.

Why Many Suspect Conley.

All of this is inescapably suggestive of premeditation on the part of Frank, if Conley's story is to be believed, but the theory of premeditation has been scoffed at by everyone, including Chief Lanford and Harry Scott.

In fact, it never seriously was considered by anyone, say those who are inclined to believe the evidence against Conley greatly outweighs that against Frank. The assertion is freely made that it would be far easier to convict Conley, if the police were so disposed, than it will be to convict Frank. Here are a few reasons advanced:

When the factory superintendent was permitted to go before the Coroner's jury by his attorney, he answered all the questions in a straightforward, unwavering manner, never once being trapped in a lie or misstatement.

In marked contrast is the conduct of Conley ever since his arrest at the time of the inquest three weeks ago. When discovered at the factory, he was washing a shirt which he sought to hide from the person who had found him out.

He was taken into custody and gave his address as 92 Tattnall Street. Investigation disclosed that Conley was lying and that he had not lived on Tattnall Street for months, his actual residence being 172 Rhodes Street.

He was asked to write, and he told the officers he could not write a word. He refused to be inveigled into making an attempt at handwriting of any sort. He would not put a pencil to paper that the detectives might get a specimen of his penmanship. For a long time they believed he was so ignorant he could not write his own name. Then they found some leases he had signed for watches and knew that he had been lying again.

Just as the Grand Jury was about to sit and it appeared likely that Frank would be indicted, the negro broke his silence for the first time. He told the detectives that it was he who had written the notes, but that he had written them at Frank's dictation on Friday, April 25. Frank had approached him in an aisle at the factory and had asked him to come into the office, he said. He remembered that it was four minutes before 1 o'clock.

That he had been at the factory Saturday he denied emphatically. Between 10 o'clock in the forenoon and 2 o'clock in the afternoon he had been on Peters Street, according to his story.

The detectives ridiculed his story and continued examining. Gradually he broke down under their questioning, and it was established that he had been lying again and that he actually had been in the factory Saturday, presumably at the very time the girl was murdered. This was the first time his presence in the factory on Saturday had been known.

He had kept it a most profound secret up to the time it was gouged out of him by the detectives. He weakened further and admitted that he had been hiding down on the first floor as persons went in and out.

He described practically every person that entered or left the factory between 12 and 1 o'clock. But he declared that he did not see Mary Phagan when she came in the building. Out of all who entered or left, the murdered girl and Lemmie Quinn appear to be the only ones he missed seeing, according to his story.

He explained this by saying that he must have fallen asleep for a little while. He saw Miss Corinthia Hall and Mrs. Freeman leave a few minutes before 1 o'clock, but did not see Mary Phagan enter about five minutes after the hour. Neither did he see Lemmie Quinn, who is said to have been at the factory about 12:15.

If the negro's final affidavit is taken as nearer the probable truth than his first, those who are acquainted with Frank are of the opinion that there are still most important questions to be answered convincingly. They are these, assuming that Frank is guilty:

"Why should a man of Frank's intelligence—a man who is highly educated and who has won a position of responsibility—virtually make a confidant of another man, especially an ignorant negro, easily broken down by the third degree of the police station?

"Why should a man of sense, if he wished to keep his crime undiscovered, proclaim it to the negro, in his office by the question: 'Why should I hang?'"

"Why should he approach this negro more than an hour before this crime was committed?

MORSE TRYING TO RULE COAST SHIPS

NEW YORK, May 29.—Charles W. Morse, convicted of bank wrecking after the 1907 panic and pardoned by President Taft on the ground that he was dying, is not only attempting to secure a monopoly of Hudson River steamship traffic, but is reaching out along the Atlantic Coast.

This became known to-day when it was learned that Morse has bought four lake steamers for coastwise trade between New York and Southern ports and will attempt to become the dominant figure in steamship traffic on the Atlantic Coast he was planning to become when the financial earthquake of 1907 upset his schemes.

The ships are so big they can not be brought through the canal connecting Lakes Erie and Ontario, consequently they will have to be reduced in size. They will be enlarged after they reach this port.

Morse may extend his operations to the Pacific when the Panama Canal is completed.

FELDER BRIBERY CHARGE EXPECTED

Believed Beavers Will Try to Have Grand Jury Consider Accusations Against Attorney.

That bribery charges against Colonel Thomas B. Felder and others will be placed before the Fulton County Grand Jury by police officials, was the indication when G. C. February, secretary of Chief of Detectives Lanford, and the person alleged to have been offered $1,000 in bribe money, secured a subpena Thursday afternoon for A. S. Colyar, Jr., to appear before Solicitor General Dorsey and give testimony Friday morning.

The subpena formally summoned Colyar, who was the author of the dictographing of Felder and Mayor Woodward, to appear before the Grand Jury. The preliminary hearing, however, will be in Solicitor Dorsey's office.

That February carried away with him a number of subpena blanks is taken to mean that others will be called upon to testify.

At the hearing of testimony Friday morning it is believed that Lanford and Police Chief Beavers will endeavor to show Solicitor Dorsey the plausibility of their bribery charges and ask that the matter be placed before the Grand Jury.

In line with this action, Chief Beavers called upon Carl Hutcheson, the attorney, again Thursday morning for the list of "protected disorderly houses" which Hutcheson declared he held, and which Hutcheson said he would reveal in an effort to prove that vice under police protection is rife in Atlanta.

Hutcheson three days ago, in answer to Beavers' den, declared that he would give the police official the list on Thursday. On that day, however, Hutcheson stated the list was not yet prepared. He informed Beavers he would have it ready, though, within a short time.

Colyar was formally released Thursday of the $1,000 bonds under which he was given his liberty following forgery charges made against him by a Knoxville, Tenn., woman.

Colyar's release followed the failure of the Knoxville police authorities to send a man to Atlanta to take him back at the time specified by Police Chief Beavers.

ft, because he was in Chattanooga yesterday morning. When he drove me from home to the car line Sunday morning when I started to Chattanooga he told me he might be up there before the reunion was over.

"Yesterday afternoon the landlady told me the house had burned down. She knew Wade, and she told me she saw him in front of her house yesterday morning, wearing overalls just as when he is said to have left home. Two boys were with him, but they didn't go in the house. Wade was in Chattanooga when my wife and daughter were murdered, and he couldn't have done it."

Goes to See Ruins.

Leaving Carson & Treadwell's office, Mr. Stevens said he was going to the ruins of his home. He first visited the Patterson undertaking establishment and arranged for the funeral of his wife and daughter. Both bodies will be taken to Meansville, Ga., at 4 o'clock Friday morning, to be buried in the family lot, where Mrs. Stevens' father and mother both have been interred in the last two years.

Lonnie Blevins, 17 years old, who says he left San Francisco for Tampa and from there came to Atlanta, is held at police headquarters to-day. He said he arrived in Atlanta last Friday. He was detained because he could not give a connected story. The police attach little significance to his arrest or his presence in Atlanta.

Tells of Attempted Attack.

An important clew, given Sheriff J. A. McCurdy, of DeKalb County, who is in charge of the investigation, was revealed in the statement of a neighbor to the effect that a Mexican halfbreed, formerly employed by Mrs. Stevens, had attempted to attack Nellie Stevens some time ago.

This declaration was made by Miss Josephine McCaulay, 790 Glennwood Avenue, an intimate friend of both the slain mother and daughter. Miss McCaulay said that only a few days ago Mrs. Stevens had told her of shooting at the discharged halfbreed when he appeared at the country home. Mrs. Stevens had said that she fired twice at the man, and that he escaped into the clump of woods adjoining the house. Sheriff McCurdy has ordered a country-wide search made for the halfbreed.

Discovery Wednesday morning that Mr. Stevens had purchased an axe some days ago offers a possible clew to the weapon used by the murderer in crushing the skulls of his victims. The axe is, so far, missing, though the ruins of the burned dwelling and surrounding vicinity have been carefully searched for it.

Ax Apparently Used.

The sharp, knifelike cut across the top of Nellie Stevens' skull seems to bear out the theory that the murderer used the ax to slay his victims.

Possibility that the weapon used by the murderer was thrown into the well near the house has lead Sheriff McCurdy to order the well dragged.

Atlanta police and detective officials have joined with the DeKalb force to solve the mystery. Detective Chief Lanford assigned Mounted Policeman Hamilton, who was a close friend of the Stevens family, and Detective Rosser to work on the case. Sheriff McCurdy obtained this reinforcement Thursday morning when he held a conference with Lanford.

A unique incident of the blaze which burned the Stevens home to ashes was revealed in the finding of fifty-seven chickens dead in a coop fifty feet away. The coop was not even scorched by the heat.

That robbery was the motive of the murderer has been established by the disappearance of jewelry and a large quantity of money which Mrs. Stevens was known to have had in the house at the time.

Woman's Jewels Missing.

Neighbors stated that Mrs. Stevens possessed a diamond ring valued at $400 and two gold watches. These are missing.

Coupled with other theories as to the murder is one which shows the work that of two negroes who were said to have been seen driving away from the burning home at sunrise Wednesday morning. The men rode in a one-horse wagon, the body of which was filled with oats. Tracks of the horse were found on a spot near the ruins. In the immediate vicinity was discovered a small pile of fresh oats. Human footprints were found nearby.

Despite the assertion that the negroes drove away, Sheriff McCurdy's men made a careful search of the woods surrounding the home, believing it highly probable that the murderer might have hidden therein to watch the burning house, and will scour the woods again to-day. Another theory is that he might have been wounded by Mrs. Stevens before he killed her, and had been forced to drag himself to the woods for escape. That the man may be lying there now is a possibility expressed by the police. The shell found in the shotgun used by Mrs. Stevens was found to have been discharged.

Does Bible Give Clew?

A search Thursday morning of an old deserted cabin 100 yards from the destroyed Stevens' home, in which Mrs. S. C. Stevens and her adopted daughter, Nellie, were murdered and then cremated, disclosed a Bible containing numerous marked passages, tragically coincident with the reported conduct of her own son toward her. This cabin was occupied at different times by negro servants who worked on the Stevens place. It had been vacant for three weeks.

The Bible reposed on a dust-covered mantel in the dingy shack. On the flyleaf appeared this inscription:

"Mrs. S. C. Stevens' book."

In the list of the Ten Commandments, two of them were marked in pencil. They were:

"Thou shalt not kill."

"Honor thy father and thy mother."

Several passages in the book of Exodus were marked, all bearing on the relation of the son to the parents. One of these reads:

"And he that smiteth his father or his mother shall surely be put to death."

Verses of the same chapter were also marked, one reading:

"And he that curseth his father or his mother shall surely be put to death."

"And if any mischief follow, then thou shalt surely give life for life."

Negro Is Sought.

Walter Wilkes, a negro, who occupied the deserted cabin until three weeks ago, is being sought by officers Thursday in the general plan of investigating every one on whom suspicion might possibly turn. Where he went after leaving the Stevens home has not been learned.

The search of the cabin revealed discarded clothing, supposed to have been left by Wilkes. The clothing is said to have been damp. On an old table was also found a caseknife.

In the corner of the room was an old ax. It bore spots, but these are believed to be rust. This is not thought to be the missing Stevens' ax, which was practically new and bright. Sheriff McCurdy said Thursday he believed this ax was at the bottom of the well in the yard of the burned home.

Search is also being made for an unidentified negro who once worked for a Mrs. Nort, said to be a friend of Mrs. Stevens. This negro wrote Mrs. Nort a letter asking her for a recommendation, but she failed to grant his request. Last Saturday the negro is said to have called her up over the telephone and remarked that he didn't need a recommendation anyway, "that he was working for her friend, Mrs. Stevens." No one has been found who knows anything of this negro. He is described as being black and thick.

Gun Shell Is Found.

B. R. Peavy, a farmer who was on the scene of the crime all night, made an extended search of the ruins, and in the room where the charred bodies were found discovered a shotgun shell. The primer was dented, indicating that it had been fired. The single-barreled shotgun found beside the remains of Mrs. Stevens was empty. Peavy also found a discharged revolver cartridge, of .38 caliber. Mrs. Stevens' revolver is said to have been of 32 caliber.

Her revolver is still missing.

The finding of the discharged cartridges has only served to intensify the baffling mystery as to what took place in the murder room. It has given rise to several theories. It has been suggested that there may have been a gun battle between Mrs. Stevens and the assailant. There is still another theory that the murderer may have shot Mrs. Stevens with a revolver, and, as she fell, seized the shotgun, with which she was trying to defend the home, and with it shot the girl to death. Officers are satisfied that Mrs. Stevens had leaped from bed and seized the shotgun to protect herself and little Nellie, but it is a matter of pure speculation as to how the shell came to be discharged.

The time of the tragedy, or at least of the fire, was fixed Thursday in a statement by Farris Simmons, a brakeman of the Southern Railway, who said he passed on his train between 12 and 1 o'clock Wednesday morning and saw the house in flames. The railroad is but a short distance from the burned home. This would make it positive that the murder was committed about midnight or before that hour, and the Stevens boy will merely have to show that he left for Chattanooga before that time.

Suspect Trailed.

Telephone information from Red Oak, a short distance south of Atlanta, was received at the police station Thursday afternoon to the effect that a suspicious stranger, believed to be Dan Walker, the suspected halfbreed Indian who was shot at by Mrs. Stevens several weeks ago when he insulted her adopted daughter, had passed through that place yesterday.

Policeman Clarence Hamilton, who is detailed on the mystery with Detective Rosser, immediately notified Fairburn, Newnan, Palmetto and other towns along the route to be on the lookout for the half-breed and take him into custody, pending instructions from Atlanta.

WILLIAM STEVENS, husband and father of the woman and girl whose charred bodies were found in the fire ruins of their home on McDonough Road, and whose deaths are laid to a slayer. Mr. Stevess says his son is innocent.

Sister Believes Son Innocent.

In a darkened room in a little house at 33 Dalney Street, with a physician in almost constant attendance, lies a woman prostrated by grief. Absolute quiet has been ordered by the doctor, and the anguish tears at her heart in a silence broken only by her own sobs and the hushed patter of childish footsteps as her children play quietly about the house.

She is Mrs. Pearl Hartley, sister of Mrs. Sarah C. Stevens, whose charred body was found lying beside that of her adopted daughter in the smoking ruins of their farm home seven miles from Atlanta. Prostrated by the shock of the tragedy, with her imagination made vivid by her suffering and grief, Mrs. Hartley is seeing in the darkness of her room the terrible happenings of that night of horror.

Mrs. Hartley's only surcease from suffering came for a few moments late Wednesday afternoon, when, under the influence of opiates administered by her physician, she recovered sufficiently to talk to a Georgian reporter. Mrs. Hartley sobbed audibly throughout the interview, and her eyes, red with weeping and reflecting the anguish that tore at her heart, emphasized her words as she cried for vengeance on the murderer.

"Why do they always murder women?" she cried. "It is terrible. Little girls are murdered when they go onto the street, and now a woman is not safe even in her own home."

Faints at News.

The notifying of Mrs. Hartley of the death of her sister and niece formed one of the most dramatic and pathetic incidents of the entire tragedy. She was downtown Wednesday morning shopping, when word came to her home on Dalney Street that her sister and niece had been murdered. Mrs. Lena Thompson, a neighbor, of 24 Dalney Street, volunteered to go downtown and find Mrs. Hartley and tell her the sad news.

After a search of an hour Mrs. Thompson found Mrs. Hartley in the Kress store on Whitehall Street. As she stood trying to locate the sister of the murdered woman in the crowd of shoppers Mrs. Hartley, warned by intuition that something was wrong, pushed through the crowd and hurried to Mrs. Thompson.

"What is it?" she cried. "What's the matter?"

Mrs. Thompson, seeking to break the news gently, told her that her sister's home had burned down and that she had been badly injured.

"It's worse than that," Mrs. Hartley cried. "I feel it! I know it is worse than that!"

She screamed and fainted in the arms of Mrs. Thompson. She was soon revived and taken to her home. Mrs. Thompson endeavored to calm her on the trip on the street car with the assurance that everything was all right.

As Mrs. Hartley entered her yard, one of her little daughters ran out of the house, tears streaming down her face.

"Oh, mamma," she cried, "Aunt Sarah and Cousin Nellie have been killed!"

With a scream, Mrs. Hartley fell to the ground in a swoon. She was picked up by Mrs. Thompson and members of her family and carried into the house. A physician was called and administered opiates. Under the influence of the medicine she was able to sit up in bed for a few moments late in the afternoon, but collapsed again when she learned that her nephew, the son of the murdered woman, was being sought by the police as the murderer of his mother.

Militants Fire Hay And Farm Buildings

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 29.—Having terrorized most of the cities of England, the militant suffragettes now are paying their attentions to the rural districts.

Three fires were reported to-day from farms near Richmond. Haystacks and farm buildings were burned and about the ruins were scattered placards and copies of The Suffragette.

NOTTINGHAM, ENGLAND, May 29.—Suffragettes set fire to the freight sheds in the railroad terminal here to-day. The fire was extinguished after $5,000 damage was done.

made on this route week days, as directed on other named routes, to accurately ascertain measure of regular traffic.

ROUTE NO. 20—College Park, East Point and Hapeville: Actual counts of week-day loads at peak points to be made during next five months, to ascertain accurately if there is overcongestion in regular traffic.

ROUTE NO. 23—Buckhead Line: Tripper service previously ordered by the commission to Sixth Street on West Peachtree has been recently extended by the company to Dead Man's Curve, the end of double track, which gives local service this far on a ten-minute headway during rush hours and to that extent relieves congestion on the Buckhead cars. In addition, double-headers in the morning and afternoon hours, for congestion during those hours arising out of construction work in the northern part of the city, are operated and will be continued as necessity demands. Counts, during morning and afternoon rush hours, for the next five months, of actual loads at the peak point of the Buckhead line, have been ordered, and will determine the necessity of further relief on this route.

Grounded German Battleship in Peril

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

DANZIG, GERMANY, May 29.—Danzig harbor was all but closed today by the German dreadnought Koenig Albert, which went aground Monday and which has swung across the mouth of the Vistula River, preventing all but the smallest vessels from entering or leaving.

The position of the warship is dangerous owing to the drifting silt which is threatening to sandlock the ship.

Fear's Wives Were Near, Beer and Dear

CHICAGO, May 29.—That George Fear, who disappeared mysteriously in Chicago recently, and who was alleged to have wives under the names Near, Beer, Fear and Dear, was a Mormon was the explanation made in the County Court yesterday by an investigator who had discovered the case.

Fear is said to have come to Chicago with his various wives to work on an invention. The high cost of living sent him scurrying back to Utah, the investigator told the court.

Recall Clamor Laid To Corrupt Lawyers

WASHINGTON, May 29.—On the shoulders of corrupt lawyers, Senator Charles E. Townsend, of Michigan, speaking before the graduates of the Washington College of Law, placed the burden of blame for the agitation for the recall of judges.

The speaker took to task a class of "shrewd and highly educated lawyers," whom he termed "flaw finders," and declared they were "enemies of decent government."

Grand Lodge Ses... Ends—Atlantan... Grand Representa...

SAVANNAH, GA., May 29.—... the conclusion of business this afternoon the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows of Georgia adjourned to meet next year at Macon. A feature of today's session was the report of the committee on Odd Fellows' Home, headed by T. S. O'Neil. This report and the agitation to establish the home provoked the liveliest discussion of the meeting. Legislation affecting the conduct of lodges and complaints and grievances were also considered.

Two steamers took the visitors down the Savannah River this afternoon.

The election of Thomas M. Haynes, of Savannah, as grand master, the choice of other officers, including the retiring grand master, W. S. Coleman, of Cedartown, and Dr. L. B. Clarke, of Atlanta, as grand representative to the Sovereign Grand Lodge, and the competitive degree drill at the Savannah Theater last night, completed the session yesterday.

John W. Bennett, of Waycross, who went into the Grand Lodge with enough strength to elect him without difficulty, moved that Dr. Clarke be elected grand representative, and this was done by acclamation. The other officers are W. B. Sloan, Gainesville, deputy grand master; Frank Harrell, LaGrange, grand warden; T. R. Robertson, LaGrange, grand secretary, and C. A. Vonderluith, Athens, treasurer.

Mrs. Hester Millon, of Thomasville, was elected grand warden of the Rebekah Assembly, defeating Miss Nell Rodrigues, of Macon. The other officers are Mrs. J. W. Gholson, Milledgeville, president; Mrs. Ivy Henderson, Savannah, vice president; Mrs. A. L. Moore, Fitzgerald, secretary, and Mrs. Sarah Lutici, Augusta, treasurer.

1,400 Taken From American Liner on Rocks Off England

LIVERPOOL, May 29.—The American liner Haverford, bound from Liverpool to Philadelphia with 1,400 passengers on board, crashed upon Daunts Rock, outside of Queenstown Harbor, to-day in a thick fog.

A big hole was rammed in the ship's hold and she began to settle. Wireless calls brought help, and all the passengers were taken off.

A wireless message said the ship was in a dangerous condition.

Americans Victims In London Hotel Raid

LONDON, May 29.—American tourists were among the victims of a robbery at the fashionable Hotel Berkeley in Piccadilly early to-day. Armed burglars bound and gagged two porters, who were acting as watchmen, opened a safe and made off with a great sum of money and jewels.

Scotland Yard detectives were assigned to the case. It is believed the robbers fled to France. The Berkeley is one of the best-known hotels in London and much frequented by American tourists.

COUNCIL TO PURCHASE CREMATORY THIS YEAR, ASSERT CITY OFFICIALS

Payment of the Entire Cost, Even if Other Work Is Sacrificed, Declared To Be Only Solution of Tangle Following Court Ruling.

Leading city officials declared Thursday that the one way to settle the crematory tangle was to pay the entire cost of the new plant this year under a new contract with the Destrucor Company, of New York; and they further asserted they believed council would pursue that course at a sacrifice of other special improvements.

Mayor Woodward declared he was willing to buy the Destructor Company's plant on a real business basis. Alderman Candler said the city must have an incinerator this summer if everything else had to be sacrificed. Councilman Claude L. Ashley favors buying the plant straight out. Councilman George H. Boynton agreed with them.

City Attorney James L. Mayson, after carefully studying the decision of the Supreme Court holding the old contract illegal, said it was the simplest plan.

Agree Plant Is Necessity.

All agreed that Atlanta must have a new garbage disposal plant this summer at all hazards. They argued that it was equally as obvious that the only possible plant was the Destructor plant. This plant will be completed within 30 days. The means of having it completed and put into use are as follows:

To buy it straightout.

To submit the old contract to a vote of the people, when it will have to be approved by two-thirds of the registered voters.

For citizens to lend the purchase price and, without any contract, take their chances on being repaid by Council.

For the Destructor Company to complete the plant without any contract and trust to the judgments of succeeding Council to complete the payments.

Attorney Mayson said the complications srurounding the latter propositions are so great that the first plan practically was the only sure way.

Has $125,000 Set Aside.

Council has $125,000 already set aside for this year's payment on the crematory. There is $71,000 available in the June sheet. Councilman Boynton said to-day that the tax books showed that $50,000 additional could be added to the increase of revenue. Money for various improvements is still unspent and Council has the right to recall these appropriations. Also, if a cash payment is to be made, it is said the Destructor Company will reduce its original price by some thousands of dollars.

The old contract provided for a $100,000 electric power plant in conjuction with the crematory. But the councilmen say this feature can be eliminated for the present, in view of the serious garbage situation.

Expect Mayor to Balk.

A special meeting of the Board of Health has been called for Thursday night to consider the whole matter. The Finance Committee will meet Friday morning to make up the June budget. It is expected that by the time Council meets Monday afternoon the whole matter will be decided. But the chances are small that the mayor will agree.

Samuel Evins, attorney for the Destructor Company, announced Thursday that the company would proceed with the erection of the plant. The Supreme Court order does not go into effect for ten days and by that time Council probably will have made a new contract, thus averting any interference in the progress of garbage disposal by the court's decision.

Councilman Ashley, chairman of the Sanitary Committee, declared that the garbage situation was a matter of life and death. He sserted tht unless the crematory was put into operation this summer, by fall the people would be dying like flies.

Two Ready to Give $1,000.

He and Councilman Boynton agreed to start a subscription of $1,000 each by which citizens would buy the plant and take their chances on Council repaying them.

In striking contrast to the attitude of alarm of the councilmen was the smile of Mayor Woodward. Council overrode his position on the crematory issue at every turn but he held out that he would never sign a check in payment on the contract unless ordered to do so by the Supreme Court. He holds that the city is being charged far too much for the plant.

"It justifies my numerous attacks on Council's business methods," he said to-day. "I warned them when they tore down that old crematory that they would be howling this summer that we had no crematory. I now inform them that I am going to break that $100,000 fire alarm contract and prevent any other moral obligation contracts going through.

Calls Ruling Far-Reaching.

"Of course, we must have a crematory. I am willing to buy the Destructor plant on a business basis. I am willing to pay them in proportion to what they received for the Milwaukee plant. They got $200,000 for a 300-ton plant there; ours is a 250-ton plant."

City Attorney Mayson said the Supreme Court's decision was far reaching.

"There was no question that one Council could not bind another," he said. "But this decision is that the appropriation of a sum of money which would tend to make succeeding Councils appropriate money for the same purpose tends toward coercion and is, therefore, illegal."

AID ASKED IN WAR ON TUBERCULOSIS

Association Appeals to Atlanta to Make Up $5,000 of $10,000 Needed Yearly.

Unless the Atlanta Anti-Tuberculosis Association can secure the $5,000 in subscriptions, for which it has asked the people of Atlanta, the officials state it will be seriously handicapped in its work this year. There has been collected less than 15 per cent of the fund the public was asked to give.

The association, nevertheless, is prosecuting its work more vigorously than ever, responding to every call and seeking to better conditions and lend assistance wherever possible.

Example is given of an Atlanta family of eight members, in which five of the children have tuberculosis. The bread winners of the family, all under 16 years earn $9.30 a week in a mill. The association makes it a point to keep close supervision upon families of this sort, to win their affection and insist on carefulness in their habits, to prevent the spread of the disease.

Three children to give, another case, making $45 a month, earn the entire living for a family of eleven. When the elder of these children contracted tuberculosis the family income was reduced more than half. It took not only argument, but force, to get this girl into a sanitarium, where she has been committed until sufficiently improved to resume her occupation.

Contending with hundreds of cases of this sort every year, the association is in need of an income which will enable it to get definite results. It needs for this purpose $10,000 annually. Of this amount the public is asked to give $5,000.

JACKSON TO ENTER BANKING BUSINESS

Retiring Collector of Revenue Announces He Will Represent Northern Companies

Henry S. Jackson, whose resignation as Collector of Internal Revenue takes effect July 1, will remain in Atlanta as Southern representative for Chicago, Pittsburg and New York banking houses. At first he will retain his present office in the Inman Building, but later will take a suite in one of Atlanta's new office buildings.

Already Mr. Jackson is transacting financial business. Thursday he negotiated a loan of $150,000 in behalf of an Atlanta building enterprise.

"I shall retain my interest in political affairs," said Mr. Jackson, "and shall continue as Republican national committeeman from Georgia."

$3.50 Recipe Free, For Weak Men

Send Name and Address To-day—You Can Have It Free and Be Strong and Vigorous.

I have in my possession a prescription for nervous debility, lack of vigor, weakened manhood, failing memory and lame back, brought on by excesses, unnatural drains, or the follies of youth, that has cured so many worn and nervous men right in their own homes—without any additional help or medicine—that I think every man who wishes to regain his manly power and virility, quickly and quietly, should have a copy. So I have determined to send a copy of the prescription free of charge, in a plain, ordinary sealed envelope, to any man who will write me for it.

This prescription comes from a physician who has made a special study of men, and I am convinced it is the surest-acting combination for the cure of deficient manhood and vigor failure ever put together.

I think I owe it to my fellow-men to send them a copy in confidence so that any man anywhere who is weak and discouraged with repeated failures may stop drugging himself with harmful patent medicines, secure what I believe is the quickest acting restorative, up-building SPOT-TOUCHING remedy ever devised, and so cure himself at home quietly and quickly. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, 4276 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send you a copy of this splendid recipe in a plain, ordinary envelope free of charge. A great many doctors would charge $3.00 to $5.00 for merely writing out a prescription like this—but I send it entirely free.

Carnegie's Valor Does Not Impress Schwab

NEW YORK, May 29.—Charles M. Schwab, president of the Bethlehem Steel Company, does not take seriously Andrew Carnegie's declaration that he would carry a gun and die for America if Japan attacked this country.

"I don't think Mr. Carnegie would go to war any more than I would, even if he does feel younger," he said. "The best way to insure peace is always to be prepared for war. America should build more battleships."

Society will turn out en masse at the evening with the Players' Club June 3. Oscar Wilde's sparkling comedy, "The Importance of Being in Earnest," will be interpreted by Atlanta artists, pronounced proficient by professional instructors.

Advance seat sales indicate a capacity audience. Tickets have been on sale only a few days, but few are left. Choice seats especially were in great demand.

The boxes will be filled by as brilliant a company as ever went in one evening to grand opera. Several theater parties already made up will be scattered among the audience. Supper parties will be given after the show at the Piedmont Driving Club.

Among the hosts and hostesses at box parties will be Governor-elect and Mrs. Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson, Mrs. William D. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Felder, Judge and Mrs. Arthur Powell, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Cooney and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Speer.

The following well-known society leaders will appear in the cast: Miss Hildreth Burton-Smith, Mrs. William Owens, Mrs. Slaton, Mrs. H. B. Scott Lamar Hill, Marshall Adair, Hamilton Douglas, Jr., and Frank Taylor.

TALLULAH FALLS SUIT IS ARGUED BY COUNSEL

Verdict in Power Company Land Case Expected Thursday Afternoon at Clayton.

CLAYTON, GA., May 29.—The suit of the State of Georgia against the Georgia Railway and Power Company to determine ownership of the gorge at Tallulah Falls will reach the jury early this afternoon and a verdict is expected before night.

Argument, which began yesterday afternoon and continued for 3 1-2 hours until court adjourned for the day, was resumed when court reconvened this morning, with 4 1-2 hours of time allotted the lawyers to be consumed.

Edgar Watkins, of Atlanta, opened for the State, being followed by Alex King, of Atlanta, for the power company, who in turn was followed by W. S. Paris, of Clayton, for the State. He was the last speaker yesterday. This morning H. H. Dean, of Gainesville, was the first speaker, representing the power company. The others in turn were R. C. Ellis, of Tifton, for the State; Luther Z. Rosser, of Atlanta, for the power company, and Attorney General T. S. Felder, closing for the State.

Mr. King brought a trunk full of law books from Atlanta and he quoted at length from these in support of the power company's contentions that it has clear titles to the Tallulah Falls gorge lands. Lawyers for both sides referred frequently and in detail to the surveys and plats filed as exhibits to the testimony of Professors Strong and Koch, of the University of Georgia, who made surveys of the gorge for the State. The documentary evidence of deeds, land grants and other old papers bearing on the titles to these lands were stressed by the attorneys in support of their respective contentions.

Judge J. B. Jones, in his charge to the jury, will review much of this evidence and instruct the jurors on the law involved. It is thought the jury will remain out but a short time.

Danger Signal Set For DeWolf Hopper

ALTOONA, PA., May 29.—"The Furrys for generations have revived the sacredness of the marriage vow, and the reports that my daughter Elda has been married to De Wolf Hopper pain me greatly," said David E. Furry, a butcher of this city, today.

"If Hopper loves my daughter and means well I will be satisfied, but if he married her like he took up with his other four wives, as he would a plaything, it will be an outrage that I will not stand for," the irate father announced.

Goodwin's Mother Favors 5th Wedding

BOSTON, May 29.—"I don't blame him for marrying for the fifth time," said Mrs. Caroline R. Goodwin today regarding the marriage of her son, Nat Goodwin, the actor, to Marjorie Moreland.

"He married for love this time. I think it's all right.

"Two of his wives are dead. As for the divorced two—well, sometimes there are some things a man simply can't stand for."

Penrose Says, 'Teach Boys Cooking, Too.'

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania, speaking at the graduating exercises of the National School of Domestic Arts and Sciences, deplored inventions which have done away with our puritanical ideals.

Cooking is becoming a lost art, he said. He also declared that boys should be taught cooking as well as girls.

POWERS TO HALT NEW WAR MOVE IN BALKANS

Servia Remobilizes Troops in Preparation for Clash With Bulgaria.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SALONIKA, May 29.—The entire Turkish population in the village of Hadji was massacred by Bulgarian troops, according to a dispatch received here to-day.

LONDON, May 29.—The powers of Europe have begun to bring pressure upon Bulgaria, Servia and Greece to prevent a fresh conflict in the Balkans.

The Ambassadors believe that if the Balkan states and Greece can be held in accord until the protocol of a peace treaty with Turkey is signed that the issues causing dissension among the states of the Balkan Confederation can be settled by arbitration to the satisfaction of all.

Sir Edward Grey, British Foreign Minister, said to-day that he expects all the Balkan peace envoys to sign the preliminary draft of a Turco-Balkan treaty to-morrow.

Servia Prepares To Fight Bulgaria.

VIENNA, May 29.—Servia has begun the remobilization of her reservists on account of the critical relations with Bulgaria.

A telegram from Sofia says that Bulgaria is on the point of breaking off all diplomatic relations with Servia because of the unsatisfactory character of a statement made yesterday by Premier Pastich of Servia setting forth Servia's attitude in the Balkan crisis.

Premier Venizelos of Greece is expected to arrive in Sofia either to-night or to-morrow and will at once enter into negotiations with Czar Ferdinand in an effort to effect a conciliatory settlement.

France to Cut Duty On Horses for Food

PARIS, May 29.—With a view to reducing the cost of living the Chamber voted to-day to reduce the import duty on horses intended for slaughter from $30 to $10. A rebate will be granted on the production of a certificate that they have been killed for food.

There are in France 700 places where horses are slaughtered. Paris consumed 60,000 in 1911, valued at $40 to $50. Horse meat sells at 3 1-2 cents a pound.

Settle Quarrel With Duel by Avalanche

GENEVA, May 29.—A duel by avalanche was the method chosen by two rivals for the hand of an Italian girl.

To settle their claims the men, who live below Mont Blanc, decided to stand for several hours every day in the path usually followed by avalanches on the mountain side until one of them was swept to death.

One of the men was struck but received only slight injuries.

Makes Will, Then Fights Fatal Duel

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., May 29.—Joseph Stoughton, a hotel proprietor of Lexington, Ill., is dying to-day following a revolver duel with Grant Preble, an automobile dealer, of the same town. Preble is severely wounded and physicians to-day said he might die.

The duel occurred on the streets a few minutes after Stoughton had made a will leaving his property to his wife.

Beggar, With $1,000 Jewels, Arrested

MACON, GA., May 29.—Although he was arrested for begging on the streets, J. W. Hill, alias J. W. Greer, who says Fort Worth, Texas, is his home, had diamonds worth $750, two watches, each valued at $50, other jewelry worth $100, and $80 in money on his person when searched at police headquarters.

He paid a nominal fine for violating a city ordinance in soliciting alms.

BIG WORKS CHECKS SMOKE NUISANCE

The big smokestack on Joseph May & Sons' Dry Cleaning Works, 154 Orme Street, has ceased to belch great columns of smoke—not because the plant is shut down, but because a smoke preventer has been installed.

L. C. Commerford and Charles Heer, of Atlanta, yesterday gave a demonstration of the invention, which promises great things toward abating the smoke nuisance in this city. About two weeks ago Commerford put the smoke consumer to work. Since then there has been rejoicing in the immediate neighborhood.

Burns the Smoke.

The name of the preventer is the "Climax" and it works on the steam jet principle. Four jets, attached to the furnace just above the door, force in cold air from below and steam from above in the fire box. The steam forces the smoke from off the fire bed and slams it up against the back wall of the furnace.

When the smoke hits the back wall it turns a flip-flop and comes back over the flame. Here it is met with the air which is forced in from the under side of the jet. The air holds it for a fraction of a second and the smoke is actually burned. The oxygen and hydrogen with the furnace gases and flame consume the carbon or smoke, which is nothing more than vaporous coal.

Can Be Regulated.

The smoke ordinance in Atlanta allows a stack to smoke 12 minutes in an hour. With the "Climax" smoke consumer the objectionable smoke is eliminated entirely, or, if the operator wished to save steam so that he is just complying with the law, there is a device on the "Climax" which by means of a water pot gradually fills with water taken from the steam. When full, the little water pot trips a trigger and the smoke preventer is cut off. This device can be regulated to suit the operator.

A large number of "Climax" smoke preventers are now in use in Boston, where the smoke ordinance is rigidly enforced. The "Climax" has been tried out in other cities and has given satisfaction in every instance.

Mutes Would Move Cave Spring School

MACON, GA., May 29.—When the Georgia Association for the Deaf and Dumb meets in Macon in annual convention on June 5 and 6 a formal demand will be put on record for the location of the State School for the Deaf and Dumb at some place other than Cave Spring.

Ross Johnson, a celebrated cartoonist, will deliver a lecture, in the finger language, illustrated by drawings, on "Why We Want a New School, or Where is Cave Spring?"

Governor Brown and Mayor Moore are to make the addresses of welcome. I. H. Marchman, of Atlanta, is president of the association.

Bryan Goes to Market; Carries a Basket, Too

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Any farmer who has a good supply of white radishes would do well to communicate with the Secretary of State. Every day Mr. Bryan forgets all pressing questions of state and searches Central Market for his favorite vegetable.

Mr. Bryan does his own marketing. He carries a market basket, too.

'Champagne Truest Financial Barometer'

LONDON, May 29.—Walter Mumm, who is to marry Miss Frances Scoville, of Kansas, June 2, arrived in London to-day. In discussing the champagne trade he said:

"The best barometer in the world of financial conditions is the champagne market. There is more champagne than ever being drunk in the United States."

Minister Defends Foreign Marriages

ANNISTON, ALA., May 29.—A defense of international marriages and a preachment against the suffrage propaganda were the features of the address delivered by Dr. Gardiner C. Tucker, of Mobile, in his baccalaureate address before the young women of the graduating class of Noble Institute, the diocesan school of the Episcopal Church in Alabama.

Sues When Delayed Telegram Hits Cupid

NEW YORK, May 29.—Because his telegram had gone astray and it took him eight days to convince his fiancee, Miss Helen Burns, of New York, that he had asked her to meet him at the railway station here, Joseph Connolly, of Utica, N. Y., has sued the telegraph company.

He asks $1,500 damages.

Good Cooks Kill Drink Habit, Says Duchess

LONDON, May 29.—"I believe a dinner well cooked is a better antidote to drink than any possible legislation," declared the Duchess of Marlborough.

The Great End-of-the-Month Sale

This End-of-the-Month Sale Means That Merchandise Is Not Permitted to Grow Old Here. The Clearance Sale Current sweeps out all exhausted assortments each month. Nothing allowed to linger. Hence the stock is always new and fresh.

Sale starts Friday at the opening of the doors; ends Saturday at the tap of the closing bell. "Prizes" to early comers.

All charge purchases made during this sale will be transferred to the June statement mailed July 1st.

All Our $2 Shower-Proof Foulards at 98c

Silk prices clipped to less than half. 'Tis a fair sample of how we slash prices in the End-of-the-Month Sale. The saving, moreover, is not on stale, worn-out silks, but on the staple, spick and span foulards. Every $2 foulard in stock included; not an inch reserved.

These foulards are all shower-proof. They are 42 inches wide—little is required for a dress. We have sold them freely at their price of $2 a yard. But color exhaustion and broken lines deplete the price—out they go to-morrow at 98c. Included are the staple black, browns, navy and Copenhagen blues and greens. Some in solid colors, some with the floral spaced patterns, some in stripes, some in dots—just a fair assortment of everything that has been "good" this season. Only 98c.

New Silks at Prices to Bid You Pause

Because these are the smart, new, fashionable silks that women will want throughout the summer, for traveling, for mountain and seashore and street wear we stress in big type the little prices at which they are to sell. Look here:

HEARST PAPERS FORCE NAVAL EFFICIENCY

Secretary Daniels to Win Recruits by Making Warships Training Schools.

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The Hearst papers, in advance of other American newspapers, exposed the fact that the American navy was not much more than half-manned.

The Hearst papers made the statement, later so emphatically confirmed, that not a battleship in the great Hudson River display of last October could have gone out to sea to fight without a shortage of from three to five officers and a shortage of from 150 to 300 men.

These newspapers developed the fact that few men were enlisting in the navy and gave the cause for this in the fact that our navy offered so few inducements and attractions for American youths to enlist in that branch of our country's service.

The Hearst papers are now able to give the first exclusive information that these unfavorable conditions are to be changed.

Information comes from the Navy Department that Secretary Daniels has caught the progressive movement urged so long in these newspapers and is going to make the American navy a more attractive and a more profitable place for the American youth who is willing to serve his country and does not desire altogether to forget himself.

Ships as Naval Schools.

The Secretary of the Navy plans that hereafter every battleship and war vessel shall be a naval school—an industrial school—a school of the sciences and incidentally of the arts. When the Secretary's plans are completed there will go out from Annapolis with every naval vessel a corps of trained instructors to teach the sailors and enlisted men. This corps of instructors will be reinforced by the educated officers of each ship.

A battleship will hereafter be no idle place even in peace, and the enlisted man who binds himself to three years in the service of his country's navy can emerge at the end of his service, if he has will and intelligence, with an educational equipment for a profession by which he can sustain himself in the world.

The three-year enlisted man of the navy who will avail himself of these new and admirable advantages can come out a skilled engineer, a navigator, a machinist or any one of a half-dozen skilled professions that point the way to success in life.

Lewis Nixon has said that Annapolis is the best engineering school in the country and its graduates as teachers ought to do great things for the American sailors in three diligent years.

More Frequent Cruises.

The Secretary plans more frequent cruises to foreign ports, so that the education of travel and observation may be added to a sailor's opportunities on shipboard.

And last, but not least, the new Secretary of the Navy expresses the intention with all his influence and authority to insist upon the recognition of the individuality and manhood of individual seamen. An American sailor is promised that hereafter he shall be regarded, not only as a fighting machine, but as a man and treated as one.

This last is in line with the recent movement so ably pressed in the navy by men like Captain Benson and Commander White and other vigorous and progressive officers of the service.

The result of this new and admirable policy will be to fill half-empty lists of the navy and to make it, not a place for young men to bury themselves for three years and come out unfit to make a living, but to be educated in mind, body and spirit by the finest of teachers, and come out in three years as all-round men, equipped in health and courage and manliness and with a practical profession in life.

School for Deserters.

Secretary Daniels further intends to reform the system of punishment for desertions by sending young deserters, first to prison and afterward to the place of reform, but to send each of them first to that notable school at Port Royal, S. C., where they will be built up in character and patriotism and an understanding of a citizen's and a soldier's duty, and if they are docile and receptive to reinstate them in the navy without a prison term.

These are wholesome reforms, and Secretary Daniels is to be congratulated upon the good sense he has manifested in adopting them.

First Day's Record in Big Player-Piano Club

THAT the interest in the gigantic Weatherholt Player-Piano Club is widespread was demonstrated yesterday when the membership books were opened. When the store closed for the night, 46 members had been enrolled. At this rate the 400 memberships will be taken before the time limit expires. I am not surprised at this record, for I knew the music-loving public would realize just how remarkable my club offer was. People are realizing that the day of the ordinary piano is rapidly drawing to a close, and that the day of the Player-Piano is at hand. And when I made it possible to secure a $650 Player-Piano for $488.50 on terms of $10.00 down and $2.50 per week, there was a rush to enroll in my great co-operative club.

The club membership is limited to 400 members. I will save each member $334.50. Because of the great purchasing power of the 400 club members, I can offer a magnificent $650 Player-Piano along with $173 worth of club features for $488.50, on terms of $10.00 down and $2.50 per week. In addition to this there is my Free Life Insurance Feature and the Music Exchange Privilege.

Here Are My Club Features:

1. Saving of $161.50
2. One year's trial (exchange privilege)
3. A ten-year guarantee with each piano
4. A Free Life Insurance Feature
5. Terms of payment $2.50 per week (monthly payments may be arranged)
6. A 25c rebate on all weekly payments made before due
7. No interest
8. A two-year conservatory course (regular price $80)
9. A free music exchange library
10. A selected bench to match player and 12 rolls of music

All accompany in writing the sale of every Club Player-Piano

Club Terms: $10 Down, $2.50 Per Week

MY Free Music Exchange Library alone makes the Weatherholt Player-Piano Club attractive. This means that every club member may secure $10.50 worth of Player Music every day if desired. Each member secures free with the player twelve rolls of selected music worth $10.50. I have installed a great library of 5,000 rolls, and members may exchange their music as often as desirable. Many have told me that the cost of Player Music has prevented them from buying Player-Pianos in the past. My free library removes that objection. Sheet music is being replaced to-day just as the Player-Piano is superseding the ordinary piano. That the Player-Piano may make those who do not understand music as proficient as those who do, all my vocal Player Music has the words printed on the roll. Anybody can play. And anybody with a voice may sing. A vocal instructor is constantly before the one operating the Player-Piano. Every direction is given. The result is that the novice can render a song as well as the professional. I have devoted weeks of study to this great co-operative plan. I wanted to offer something which had never before been offered to lovers of music in the South. I know that I have done so.

Notice to All Owners of Player-Pianos

During our Player Club Membership Campaign, we will extend—without charge—our exchange privilege to any one purchasing 12 rolls of Player Music from us. This gives the purchaser free access to our 5,000-roll library.

I WANT everybody interested in good music to visit our store. I want you to hear some good music—anything you like, from the classics to the latest ragtime. Examine these Club Player-Pianos closely and see how easily you can play anything you like, and play as well as an expert pianist. If you CAN play on the piano, you have two instruments in one—a Piano and a Player-Piano. You may use the piano and those members of your family who can not play can produce music on the Player equal to yours.

MAINE UNVEILING PARADE PLANS PERFECTED

NEW YORK, May 29.—Plans for the great naval and military parade, which will precede the unveiling and dedication of the National Maine Monument at the southwest entrance to Central Park, Fifty-ninth Street and Eighth Avenue, on Friday afternoon, are about completed.

The twelve dreadnoughts and battleships of the North Atlantic fleet, which will be represented by regiments of marines and seamen in the parade, are the Wyoming, Florida, North Dakota, Delaware, Virginia, New Hampshire, South Carolina, Kansas, Georgia, New Jersey and Rhode Island.

Lieutenant Commander G. L. Smith, U. S. N., the brigade commander, has issued the order for the mobilization of the marines and seamen. Police Commissioner Waldo is revising and completing the arrangements for holding the crowds in place along the line of march and at the scene of the dedication.

Many Bands in Line.

The marine regiment, which is to march directly behind the United States Army, will form in Forty-third Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues. This regiment will be headed by the combined bands of the Wyoming and Virginia. The First Seaman Regiment Band will be headed by the combined bands of the Florida, North Dakota and Delaware; the Second Seaman Regiment, by the combined bands of the New Hampshire, South Carolina and Kansas, and the Third Seaman Regiment, by the combined bands of the Georgia, New Jersey and Rhode Island. Regimental colors will be carried.

The fleet officers in the parade will wear blue service uniforms, with white caps, leggins and gloves. The marines will march in blue, with white caps, leggins, canteens and rifle belts; the seamen in blue, with white hats, leggins, canteens and rifle belts. All bands will wear full dress uniforms.

The seamen and marines from the Wyoming will land at two floats at the foot of West Eighty-first Street. They will march down Broadway to Forty-fourth Street and then east, to form with the First Seaman Regiment, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues.

Will March Crosstown.

The detachments from the Florida, North Dakota and Delaware will be landed at Pier 86, at the foot of West Forty-sixth Street, and march crosstown to Forty-fourth Street and Fifth Avenue.

The men from the New Hampshire, South Carolina and Kansas will also disembark at the foot of West Forty-sixth Street and form as the Second Seaman Regiment in Forty-fifth Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues.

Detachments from the Virginia, Georgia, New Jersey and Rhode Island will be landed at the foot of West Forty-fifth Street and march to Forty-sixth Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues. They will form the Third Seaman Regiment.

The regimental commanders will be: Marine Regiment, Major A. W. Catlin; First Seaman Regiment, Captain H. B. Wilson; Second Seaman Regiment, Captain G. A. Hoogerwerff; Third Seaman Regiment, Captain J. D. McDonald.

Brigade staff: Lieutenant Commander G. L. Smith, brigade adjutant; Lieutenant Commander E. C. Kalbfus, brigade quartermaster; Lieutenant P. R. McCrary, brigade ordnance officer; Pay Inspector S. McGowan, brigade commissary; Surgeon W. C. Braisted, brigade surgeon; Lieutenant S. C. Hooper, brigade signal officer; Lieutenant R. P. Craft, aide; Lieutenant R. P. Emerick, aide.

Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels arrived to-day from Washington to take part to-morrow in the unveiling. To-day was given over to official calls between Secretary Daniels, Rear Admiral Badger, members of the Maine Monument Commission, Mayor Gaynor and others.

Beavers Again Asks For "Protected List"

Chief of Police James L. Beavers again called on Carl Hutcheson Thursday morning for the list of disorderly houses which Mr. Hutcheson referred to in a recent open letter as protected by police. Mr. Hutcheson is said to have told the chief the list was not completed.

Chief Beavers reminded Mr. Hutcheson that it was the third day since the letter was published in which he promised to have the "protection list" ready in three days.

Knife Penetrates Brain as He Falls

LEXINGTON, KY., May 29.—Chester Lacefield, 23, a wealthy farmer of Tyrone, Ky., while intoxicated attacked his wife and her brother, Raymond Carrier, with a knife.

Carrier knocked Lacefield down and as he fell the knife penetrated Lacefield's brain, killing him. Carrier was arrested.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"St. Elmo" at the Atlanta.

"St. Elmo" has made a hit through the excellence of its presentation at the Atlanta Theater this week. It will remain every night with another matinee on Saturday. The play has pleased as nothing else has in the past and is showing its popularity by attracting big crowds to the playhouse. Miss Long and Mr. Vail are very convincing in their parts and easily surpass their previous efforts in the play. "St. Elmo" was produced at the request of the majority of patrons and is proving its worth.

Excellent Bill at Forsyth.

Patrons of the cozy Forsyth Theater are pleased with the excellent bill of Keith vaudeville which the management is presenting this week. Maggie Cline, "the Irish Queen," is the headliner and has scored a pronounced hit. The Great Howard, the ventriloquist, is also a great favorite. Caesare Nesi, the singer, and Madden and Fitzpatrick, in a comedy sketch, have scored successfully. It is a bill of real variety.

Tabloid Bill Is Popular.

Tabloid musical comedy as presented at the Bijou this week has found great favor at the hands of patrons of that play house. The bill is Joseph E. Howard's "The District Leader," and the offering is given in splendid fashion. There are pretty girls, tuneful music and delightful dances. The bill next week will be "The College Girls."

PIANO CLUB HAS PROPITIOUS START

That interest in the player piano club campaign, begun last Sunday by the Weatherholt Piano Company, is increasing was demonstrated when the membership books opened.

The first day's enrollment amounted to 46 members and there was every indication that this record would be broken Thursday. T. E. Weatherholt, president of the company, has received letters and inquiries from throughout the South, indicating that the club plan will prove a great success.

Mr. Weatherholt's plans provide for a co-operative club of 400 members, who, by reason of their enormous purchasing power, are enabled to get $650 player pianos for $488.50 each on terms of $10 down and $2.50 a week. In addition to this, Mr. Weatherholt has arranged for many other features, including free music exchange privilege in a library of 5,000 roles of music. Each member will receive twelve roles of music with a player piano and this music may be exchanged daily if desired.

PROGRESSIVE AIDS 2-WARSHIP PLAN

Representative Stephens, on the Naval Affairs Committee, Now Favors Stronger Fleet.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Representative Stephens, Progressive, of California, who has been assigned to the House Naval Affairs Committee, declared to-day he would vote for the construction of two battleships at the next session of Congress.

"I am in favor of a big navy," said Stephens, "and I believe in maintaining the navy in its present efficient status. If the navy officials decide they need two battleships next year, or even more, I shall be in sympathy with whatever they recommend."

Malta Lodge Holds First Communication

Malta Lodge of Masons held its first official communication Wednesday night at the Masonic Temple. The meeting was attended by 250 members and visitors, among whom were some of Georgia's most prominent Masons.

Following the meeting the lodge extended an open invitation to all the past masters and officers of local lodges to attend a dinner at Durand's cafe. Several speeches commenting on the occasion were heard, among the speakers being James L. Mayson, city attorney; Thomas H. Jeffries, past grand master of the State of Georgia; Joseph C. Greenfield, secretary of the Scottish Rite bodies, and Dr. Wallace, of the Georgia Tech. W. R. Bush, worshipful master of Malta Lodge, was toastmaster.

Where Is the Woman Who Does Not "Love" a Hand-Embroidered Shirtwaist?

A Rare and Fine Opportunity to Own

Hand-Embroidered Shirtwaist Patterns

The Selling Begins at 9 o'Clock in the Embroidery Section

We wish every woman in Atlanta who does this sort of needlework herself could see these waist patterns! Could see the exquisite evenness and preciseness of every hand-made stitch, the intricate designs of florals and sprays, the wee little tucks and all. They would, every one, marvel that such work could be sold at these prices. They are all white and many of them are all but made, with embroidered cuffs and collars and backs, and with materjal for the whole waist. All one has to do is to cut the waist out, fit it and stitch it together.

Here are the reductions:

$15.00 to $25.00 Waist Patterns $7.98
(Only a few of these)

$ 6.50 to $10.00 Waist Patterns $5.98
$ 2.29 Waist Patterns $1.50
(These in Madeira Hand-Embroidery)

Twenty-three Waist Fronts at 75c

Shadow Laces Half-Price

White, cream and ecru bands and edges, four to ten inches wide, dainty patterns for summer dresses.

They Were 35c to $3.50 a Yd.
They Are 17½c to $1.75 a Yd.

Valenciennes Flouncings 39c a Yd.

Those fine Valenciennes flouncings that are in great favor right now for dresses and for underwear. They are ten to eighteen inches wide. Patterns show fine floral sprays across surfaces. They were never intended for selling at 39c a yard; but we own them at a fortunate price!

T. R. KEEPS 'REAL GENTLEMAN'S' WINE CELLAR

Son of Colonel's Cousin, Ex-President's "Pal," So Testifies at Libel Suit Hearing.

MARQUETTE, MICH., May 29.—Testimony of Philip James Roosevelt, son of a cousin of the former President, that Colonel Roosevelt kept a "regular gentleman's wine cellar" at his home in Oyster Bay was the feature of this morning's session of the trial of Colonel Roosevelt's suit for $10,000 libel for charges made in an editorial by George W. Newett, editor of The Ishpeming Iron Ore, that Roosevelt "was drunk, nota infrequently."

The younger Roosevelt followed Charles Thompson, a New York newspaper man; Andrew Abele, former locomotive engineer of Ashtabula, Ohio, and A. Z. Blair, an attorney of Portsmouth, Ohio, all of whom bore witness to the former President's sobriety during trips when they accompanied him.

Calls Colonel Abstemious.

After stating he lived near the former President's home at Oyster Bay, ond that he was the colonel's daily companion when the latter was at Oyster Bay, Philip Roosevelt testified he never had seen the colonel drink other than at meals and then only white wine and occasionally a glass of champagne. He also declared that the limit of his indulgence on the last Presidential campaign was a spoonful of brandy in a glass of milk, and denied indignantly that he ever had seen the colonel drunk.

"Does Roosevelt keep wines and liquors in his home?" was the first question of Attorney Andrews for the defense.

"Yes," was the answer.

Q. A collection of liquors?—A. A regular gentleman's cellar.

Q. Scotch whisky?—A. I never saw it, but I supposed it was there.

Q. White wine?—A. Yes.

Q. Champagne?—A. Yes.

Q. Brandy?—A. I presume it was there.

Story Prepared in Advance.

Q. How long have you been a newspaper man?—A. Since March, 1913.

Q. Are you doing newspaper work here?—A. My pay is going on.

Q. Are you acting for your paper?—A. I am sending out stories.

Q. Did you write up and send out Colonel Roosevelt's testimony before it was given?—A. No.

Q. Was it written up before it was delivered?—A. Yes.

Q. And sent out by any person?—A. The Colonel prepared a statement embodying the substance of his testimony and I presume it was sent out.

Q. And it was printed in New York before the Colonel went on the stand?

On objection, the court refused to permit a reply. On redirect examination the witness said liquor was never pressed on guests at Roosevelt's home.

Court was adjourned until 2 o'clock after Andrews had testified he never saw Roosevelt drink spirituous liquors during the campaign in Cuba fifteen years ago.

Newett Ready to Testify.

George W. Newett, defendant in the suit, was prepared to take the stand to-day in his own defense to tell the sources of the information on which he based his charges of drunkenness and profanity.

A trip made by Newett to Florida, during which he met a number of prominent persons who are alleged to have spoken of Roosevelt's alleged over-indulgence in liquor, and similar statements made to him by persons in Michigan, will form the basis of his testimony.

Newett will also tell of various articles which he saw in newspapers and magazines which influenced him to write the editorial now in question.

The Ishpeming editor has not been well for some months, and as soon as the present case is ended he will go to a hospital for an operation.

The Colonel to-day declined an invitation to address the Marquette G. A. R. on Memorial Day.

TWO NEWS ITEMS

INDIVIDUAL TRUSTEE DISSIPATES ESTATE

Georgia newspapers the other day gave an account of the dissipation of an estate which left a young lady penniless. The father, who had a comfortable business in a Georgia city, died several years ago, leaving his only child, a daughter, an estate of $85,000. A man, a friend of the family, who was then considered honest and capable, was appointed trustee for the daughter's property. On coming of age she called upon him for an accounting and delivery of her inheritance and HE IMMEDIATELY DISAPPEARED. He is still among the "missing," and THE YOUNG LADY'S INHERITANCE IS GONE.

TRUST COMPANY OF GA. DOUBLES THIS ESTATE

The other news item, not heretofore published, relates to an Atlanta lady who died, leaving an only child, a son of ten years. SHE HAD WISELY MADE A WILL IN WHICH THE TRUST COMPANY OF GEORGIA was appointed EXECUTOR and GUARDIAN of the property of her son. From his inheritance, which was officially appraised at $16,500, the boy was supported comfortably and given a college education. When he reached his majority, less than a month ago, the TRUST COMPANY OF GEORGIA, his Guardian, turned over to him property appraised at $31,345, thus, with his maintenance, more than doubling the estate.

PARADE CLOSES REUNION OF VETERANS

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., May 29. The twenty-third annual reunion of the Confederate Veterans closed today with the veterans' parade, in which the old soldiers of the South marched under the tattered battle flags of half a century ago and under the Stars and Stripes of a reunited country.

Military bands furnished martial music to which the tottering old soldiers, hundreds of them in gray uniforms, tramped through the downtown streets. Grandstands along Market and Broad Streets, the principal thoroughfares traversed, were filled with visitors and Chattanoogans who lustily cheered the old veterans.

General Bennett H. Young, mounted on a Kentucky thoroughbred charger, headed the parade. General J. P. Hickman, of Nashville, commander of the Tennessee Division, was chief marshal.

Exodus of Visitors Begins.

The exodus of visitors began immediately after the parade and throughout the afternoon and night special and regular trains will be leaving the depots every hour.

The reunion festivities will come to a formal close to-night when the Sons of Confederate Veterans give their annual ball to sponsors and maids of honor at Bennett H. Young pavilion.

Several hundred veterans will go to Dalton, Ga., to-morrow to attend commander of the Army of Northern Virginia Department; General George P. Harrison, of Alabama, commander of the Army of Tennessee Department, and General K. M. VanZandt, of Texas, commander of the Trans-Mississippi Department, were re-elected, and Jacksonville, Fla., was chosen for the 1914 reunion by the veterans at the principal business session of the reunion late yesterday afternoon. Next year's gathering will be the first reunion held in Florida. Jacksonville defeated Nashville, its nearest competitor, which has had two reunions, by a vote of almost 4 to 1. Houston, Texas, and Tulsa, Okla., received scattering votes. The selection was then made unanimous.

"Turkey Trot" and "Virginia Reel."

A parade by the Sons of Veterans yesterday afternoon and a ball for the veterans at Bennett H. Young Pavilion last night were features that attracted the interest of the thousands of sponsors, maids of honor and other visitors. At the ball the Virginia reel and quadrille of 50 years ago were danced between snatches of the present-day "turkey trot" and two-step.

EXHIBITS FEATURE HARDWARE MEET

"Georgia - Manufactured" Goods Shown at Convention of Dealers at Auditorium-Armory.

The Georgia Retail Hardware Merchants' Association got down to active business Thursday morning, when the third session of their convention opened at the Auditorium. Several important committee reports, comprising recommendations on the future policy of the association, are to be presented to the convention at Thursday's sessions.

Reports of the secretary, John L. Moore, of Madison, Ga., and several minor committees, already submitted, show the association to be in a prosperous condition and gaining steadily in membership and influence.

One of the attractive features of the convention is the hardware exhibits in the lobby of the Auditorium. The space where they are shown was crowded with sight-seers all day. Much of the hardware exhibited was manufactured in Georgia.

Wilmer L. Moore, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, welcomed the hardware men on behalf of commercial Atlanta at the opening session Wednesday, and Mayor James G. Woodward gave the official greetings of the city government. P. S. Twitty, of Dublin, one of the leading members of the association, responded to Mayor Woodward's address. Others who spoke were R. W. Hatcher, Milledgeville; G. W. Woodruff, Winder; C. B. Thomas, Griffin; J. R. Hall, Moultrie; W. G. Raines, Statesboro.

On Wednesday evening the visitors were the guests of Atlanta wholesale and retail hardware men at the Forsyth Theater.

The Social World

An event of interest to a wide circle of friends was the marriage of Miss Katherine Rawling and Mr. Philip Wakeman Wilcox Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Rawling, in Druid Hills.

The house was elaborately decorated. The couple stood before a bank of palms in the library, the altar of greenery being flanked on either side with clusters of white roses and valley lilies. Throughout the apartments smilax formed a mural decoration and the mantels were banked with small foliage plants, starred with tiny electric lights.

The only attendant was Mr. Sidney Wilcox, of New York, as best man. Bishop Leete, of the Methodist Church, officiated, and a limited number of guests were present.

The bride wore white brocade satin, with draperies of point lace, and bridal veil of point lace. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and valley lilies.

Mrs. Rawling, the bride's mother, wore gray charmeuse satin, with draperies of pale pink chiffon. Mrs. Sidney Wilcox, of New York, the bridegroom's mother, wore white Brussels lace, with touches of lavender. His aunt, Mrs. Fulford, of Canada, wore black chiffon cloth. Mrs. J. T. Wheeler, of New York, the bride's aunt, wore black lace.

A reception followed the ceremony and supper was served. The bride's table was decorated with pink roses, arranged in a tall basket, the handle twined with pink tulle and pink roses. Pink roses were banked on the buffet, serving table and mantel, and the sun parlor, where punch was served, was decorated with sweetpeas.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox left after the reception for the East, and on their return they will be at home at the Druid Hills residence of Mr. and Mrs. Rawling during the latter's absence in Europe. Later they will build on the adjoining lot, which was a wedding present.

The bride has many friends, both in Atlanta and in New York, her former home. Mr. Wilcox is a popular young man. He is secretary and treasurer of the Cleveland-Manning Piano Company.

Mother Goose Pageant.

And why? Mother Goose and all her little geese are coming to town Saturday afternoon and will be ready to greet you on the lawn of the Clyde Kings, which by all odds is one of the most charming spots in the city for her Goose-ship and all the busy little people of her family.

And right here, be it said, any one who wishes to meet Mother Goose or any especial favorite of the days of his childhood, has only to take the car to Druid Hills, and, presto! he is there.

Mother Goose is coming as the special guest of the Joseph Habersham Chapter, D. A. R., of which Mrs. John Perdue is regent. Her visit will aid in building the chapter house the Joseph Habersham people are planning.

So enthusiastic is Atlanta society over the coming of Mother Goose and her wonderful family that little else has been talked of by the pleasure-loving set.

The committee work is in charge of members of the Joseph Habersham Chapter, with Mrs. William Lawson Peel, vice regent general of the National Daughters of the American Revolution, as chairman general.

The Mother Goose pageant will include more than 100 children of prominent families. There will be tableaux, parade, maypole dances, solo dances, and all sorts of entertainment.

Verses written by one of the enthusiastic members of the chapter, who has embodied in the poem the most interesting features of the coming event, read:

Mother Goose pageant! A great lawn fete!
'Twill be out of doors, so you pay at the gate!
A great, big show, and plenty of frills—
On Mrs. King's lawn—1010 Druid Hills.

There'll be the old woman who lived in a shoe,
Little Jack Horner and Little Boy Blue,
A lot of little ponies, and, sure, a dapple gray,
For boys and girls to ride upon "to ride a mile away."

Blue Beard with his many wives and Merry Peter Pan,
Little Orphan Annie, and the funny Soldier Man;
Goblins, dwarfs and fairies, dancing in the air,
Curly Locks and Humpty Dump, and Little Golden Hair,

The Beggar Man from Hamelin with the magic of his pipe,
The old maid in the garden with the nose the Black Birds swipe;
Margery Daw, a good see-saw, and saucy old King Cole;
Robin Hood, his merry men, Warriors and Knights of Old.

The Flowers and the Maidens that belong to Mistress Mary,
All so sweet and winning and none of them contrary,
Many are the prizes for the splendid baby show.
Babies there will be so fine you can almost watch them grow.

There'll be grab-bags and candy and cake and good ice cream,
And all the wonders of the world of which you only dream.
Your friends right straight from Fairyland will all be turned a-loose
To join the gorgeous pageant of good old Mother Goose.

A Liza Lehmann Evening.

A musical entertainment will be given at the parish house of the Church of the Incarnation in West End on the evening of June 3. A quartet, composed of Mrs. John L. Meek, soprano; Mrs. Arthur Crevistón, contralto; Mr. Howard Davis, tenor, and Mr. John Mullin, basso, will sing the "Nonsense Rhymes from Alice in Wonderland," set to music by Liza Lehmann.

The Rev. John D. Wing has consented to give a reading of "The Happy Prince," by Oscar Wilde, with incidental music, also by Lehmann. Mr. Charles A. Sheldon, Jr., will be the accompanist for the evening. The musical is given under the auspices of Epiphany Guild of Inman Park and St. Mary's Guild of the Church of the Incarnation.

Organ Recital at St. Mark Church.

Miss Edna Bartholomew, the organist of St. Mark Church, assisted by Mr. Edward A. Werner, baritone, and Mr. Oscar Pappenheimer, 'cellist, will give a recital at St. Mark, corner of Peachtree and Fifth Streets, Friday evening at 8 o'clock. The public is cordially invited. A free-will offering will be taken for the social service work of the church.

Miss Hopkins Entertains.

Miss Nancy Hill Hopkins entertained informally at luncheon Thursday for her sister, Mrs. Charles T. Hopkins, Jr., a bride of the season.

White sweetpeas and Shasta daisies, arranged in a low silver bowl, adorned the luncheon table, a color scheme of white and green being carried out in detail. The place cards were hand painted.

Miss Hopkins wore white lingerie. Other guests were Mrs. Albert Thornton, Mrs. Alex Smith, Jr., Mrs. Clarence Haverty, Mrs. Roy Collier and Mrs. John Charles Wheatley.

Dinner for Players' Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Cooney will entertain at dinner at the Driving Club Friday evening.

Members of the cast of "The Importance of Being Earnest" and officers and directors of the Players' Club will be guests. Covers will be laid for twenty.

For Mrs. Hopkins.

Miss Annie Lee McKenzie will entertain at a luncheon Tuesday for Mrs. Charles T. Hopkins, Jr., who recently returned from her wedding journey.

Matrons' Club to Meet.

The Matrons' Social Club will meet Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock with Mrs. Daniel Boone in Highland avenue.

Apron Sale.

For Miss McPheeters.

Mrs. Edward Inman entertained informally at luncheon Thursday for Mrs. Samuel Inman's guest, Miss Margaret McPheeters, of Raleigh, N. C.

For Miss Francis.

Mrs. Joseph Eby will entertain at bridge Friday morning for Miss Martha Francis, who will be married June 28.

Mrs. White to Entertain.

Mrs. Warren D. White will entertain Wednesday afternoon with a reception in honor of her guests, Mr. Dan Glasgow, of Tyrone, Pa.; Mr. Robert Hall, of Washington, and Miss Lina Andrews, a bride-elect. One hundred and fifty guests will be entertained.

Social Meeting at School.

Patrons and all interested in the Inman Park School are expected to attend a social meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association Friday afternoon, May 30.

Grand Prize Dance.

Parent-Teacher Association.

The regular monthly meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association of the North Avenue School will be held Friday at 4 o'clock.

Parties for Mrs. Hopkins.

A series of parties for Mrs. Charles Hopkins, Jr., will include a dinner Saturday evening, June 7, given by Mr. and Mrs. Linton C. Hopkins; a bridge party, by Miss Sara Rawson, next week, at which Mrs. Charles Shelton, Jr., will share the honors, and a bridge party, by Mrs. Roy Collier.

Notice to Children.

All the children who will take part in "The Old Woman in a Shoe" tableau are requested to meet Mrs. H. L. DeGive Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock on the lawn of Mrs. S. C. Dobbs, in Druid Hills.

For Miss Owens.

Mrs. Wilmer L. Moore will entertain for Miss Charles Owens, a bride-elect.

For Miss Wright.

Miss Julia Stokes will entertain Thursday afternoon for Miss Marie Wright, a bride-elect.

Car Service to Mother Goose Pageant.

For the convenience of those who attend the Mother Goose pageant in Druid Hills Saturday afternoon, the following schedule of car service is announced:

College Park, West End, etc., parties will transfer at Park Street Church; Decatur parties will transfer at Peachtree and Edgewood Avenue; Marietta parties change at Walton and walk one block to Peachtree; North Atlanta parties transfer at Georgian Terrace. All cars run every ten minutes, and are marked "Ponce DeLeon to Druid Hills," and run directly in front of the lawns where the Mother Goose pageant will be held.

Miss Harrison Entertains.

Miss Lucy Harrison entertained at bridge Thursday afternoon for Miss Courtney Harrison, whose marriage to Mr. Loring Raoul will take place Monday. Pink sweetpeas formed the decorations in all apartments except the sun parlor, where daisies were used. The tea table was adorned with pink sweetpeas, arranged in a basket, the minor details being pink and white. Prizes were a hand-made piece of lingerie for the honor guest, a French gilt picture frame for top score, and silk hose for consolation.

Shower for Miss Andrews.

Mrs. Florence Harris entertained about seventy guests at a miscellaneous shower at her home in Inman Park Thursday afternoon for Miss Lina Andrews, a bride-elect. Packages were delivered to the bride-elect by parcel post, little Roy Martin acting as postman. Misses Allie Candler and Van DeVander served punch.

Mrs. Harris was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. William Candler, Mrs. D. W. Orr, Mrs. J. D. Ficklen, and the members of Miss Andrews' Sunday school class. The reception room was decorated in a profusion of daisies.

MRS. THOMAS B. PAINE, fair Atlanta golfer, who is a contender for the championship at the tournament of the Women's Southern Golf Association at Memphis.

the construction, case design and the finish, but you must look to the name for reliability of construction, and the assurance that the good qualities will endure. The house of KIMBALL has had an experience of over fifty years in the music industry, and artists, amateurs, and thousands of satisfied customers give abundant proof of the merit of the Kimball.

We are showing a large variety of styles in 88-note Player Pianos and Uprights. We have your choice in woods, such as Rosewood, Walnut, Circassian Walnut, Oak, Mission, Satin Mahogany and Mahogany. Prices ranging from $195 to $1,250.

Our one, absolutely one, price insures you, whether an experienced buyer or not, of securing the best instrument for the amount you wish to pay. It is not safe to buy a piano, or any other article of merchandise, from a dealer who has a sliding scale of prices, because you will never know when he has given you his lowest price. Then, too, your neighbor may buy the same merchandise for from $50 to $75 less money. A piano has but one value, and that should fix its price—the right price. Each and every instrument on our wareroom floor is tagged at the cash figure, and no one pays more or less.

It is not only safe, but pleasant, to deal with the world's largest manufacturers of Pianos, Player Pianos, Residence and Church Pipe Organs, through this Branch Store.

A Duty to Look Well

By Virginia T. Van De Water.

A WOMAN was running a piece of pink ribbon into a dainty underwaist. Her small son, aged six, stood watching her. At last he spoke out his thought—

"Mama, why do you put ribbon in that thing?"

"To draw it up on the shoulders and fasten it with," was the smiling explanation.

"Wouldn't a piece of twine do as well?" queried the lad soberly.

The mother paused a moment, concealing the amusement she felt. Then she spoke gravely and frankly.

"No, dear," she said, "twine might fasten it, but it would not do as well, for it is not as pretty as ribbon."

A Real Duty.

A man might have considered that reply evidence of a feminine lack of logic. To the woman who thinks long it held a truth that it is well to consider. When, without sacrifice of principle or duty, one can make of a practical thing also a pretty thing, it is a mistake—almost a wrong—not to do it.

The small boy, as he grew older, learned to admire the dainty, delicate touches in his mother's apparel. "My mother always looks nice," he used to say when the matter of woman's appearance was discussed.

I know one woman who seems to think that she does God-service in looking as plain as possible. She is scrupulously neat in appearance, but her mental attitude reminds one of the small boy's question: "Wouldn't a piece of twine do as well?" All the appointments of her home are plain and substantial, bought—like Mrs. Primrose's wedding dress—with a thought of durability rather than of beauty. She scorns fine china, and considers cut glass a useless folly of the rich. As to solid silver, why should one use it when plated ware carries the food to one's mouth just as effectually?

Of course, she has a scorn of all "modern notions," such as centerpieces, doilies and "place-plates." "Useless nuisances," she says sententiously. I often wonder how her children ar going to regard the home of their childhood when they go out into the world and see the dainty accessories of dress and furnishings which are unknown in their family and household. Fortunately this woman is the exception, not the rule, of her sex when she declares: "It is a mark of weakness to spend time on ornamentation and convention."

Don't Look Homely!

Were we all to adopt this principle through life how many hard and ugly corners there would be, corners that are now rounded or hidden!

To look as homely as one can is no more a virtue than to be as frankly disagreeable as one sometimes feels like being. Few of us can be handsome, but we need not elect to be positively ugly—if we can help it. In fact to mitigate the bad points in our personal appearance and to emphasize the good ones is an actual duty.

Perhaps some one asks to whom one owes this duty. The answer is plain. One owes it to the world at large, but, primarily, to one's own family. Surely it is the business of both man and woman to look as well as he and she can.

It is not always convenient to fuss over one's personal appearance when the mercury climbs up toward the hundred mark, but when one acquires the habit of invariably looking as well as is conformable with one's other duties, one will not be satisfied to wear a dark calico wrapper instead of a dainty and equally cool negligee—even for "home people" only.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

Tom found Jennie a little crumpled heap on the sofa.

Chapter 6.

AS THE MAN held Jennie tight in his arms, kissing her—she at last realized his intentions and could THEN see clearly the meaning of the dinner in the swell restaurant and the auto ride into the country. Jennie fought and struck the man in the face as hard as she could—whereupon the former "so polite and fatherly" MAN turned into the beast he was at heart—held her tight against the wall choking her. When he realized there was nothing to be gained that way he tried to treat the whole thing as a joke. Jennie watched her chance and did more THINKING in the next few seconds than she has ever taken the TROUBLE to do before. THE MAN told her the proprietor of the place was a friend of his and it would be of no use for her to make a scene, for she couldn't leave the place until he got good and ready for her to leave. Then he offered her fine dresses, diamonds, anything she wanted—so why not be a "good fellow."

THE MAN was between Jennie and the door and she saw it was useless to try and get out that way—the window opened out onto a porch and before the man could get around the table to catch her, she was through it and running up the road for her life. She ran and ran, dodging off the road into some woods. The branches tore her face and dress but she kept on till she could run no more. She sat down on an old log and listened but could hear no one following. There she sat in her little torn dress shaking and crying until she realized it was getting dark. She wandered on through the woods and came to a farm house where she found an old lady who, after hearing her story, loaned her enough money for the railroad fare home.

Tom came over to her house that evening after wondering all day where she could have gone and found Jennie a little crumpled heap on the front room sofa.

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS.

Gordon Kelly, a young North Georgia mountaineer, comes to Atlanta to get a place with Billy Smith's Crackers. It is raining when he reaches Ponce DeLeon and he is nearly run over by an auto, in which are two persons—a man and a young girl. The driver of the car is an arrogant fellow. The girl makes him stop the machine. She gets out and inquires if Kelly is injured. She apologizes for her companion's brusque manner. Kelly sees Manager Smith and tells him he has never played a game of ball. Smith consents to give Kelly a trial. The girl in the auto is Mildred Deery, daughter of Galen Deery, a crafty and wealthy speculator in timber lands. Her companion is Forrest Cain, a rich young man about town. Kelly owns timber land that Deery would like to possess. Kelly is invited to the Deery home, where he is introduced to Mildred. Cain hears Mildred order an auto to take her guest to his hotel. He takes the driver's place and carries Kelly out into the woods. Kelly thrashes Cain. Manager Smith tells the newspapers about his new find and the reporters print all sorts of "joshing" stories about Kelly.

Now go on with the story.

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Looks like the real thing," acknowledged the veteran backstop.

From that time on Long Tom didn't give Kelly an easy fly to catch. He purposely batted the ball so that if the recruit got to it at all it would be at least a hard catch. The result was one of the most wonderful exhibitions of ground covering by an outfielder ever seen on a ball field. Finally Smith called a halt by declaring morning practice at an end.

The players went at once to the clubhouse to take off their uniforms, stand under a shower bath and dress themselves for the street. The clubhouse became at once a very lively place. Each player was assigned a locker for uniforms, clothes and personal belongings. In front of these lockers were short benches, placed there for the use of the players while dressing or undressing.

It so happened that Long Tom Morrissey and Gordon Kelly had adjoining lockers and therefore sat side by side as they started to undress. The other players were busy with their own affairs and did not notice the other two until suddenly they heard Kelly cry:

"You can't call me that, Morrissey."

All hands turned in the direction of the voice just in time to see Long Tom draw back and slap Kelly in standing up. The two men were now staning up. Their shoes were off and they were stripped to the waist. The next instant there was a furious mixup. Benches were overturned as the tall, gaunt veteran swayed in the embrace of the tall, lithe youngster.

It was all over in half a minute. At the end of that time Morrisey lay, an inert mass, in a corner of the clubhouse, where he had fallen with a loud crash. Ball players do not interfere with clubhouse fights. Even a manager will not interfere. If there are grudges to be settled, it is best to have them settled and be done with them. That is the philosophy of the clubhouse. Players see to it that there is fair play. That is all.

"Call It Square."

No one knew what passed between the two men that led up to the encounter. After the brief battle, Kelly replaced his overturned bench as though nothing had happened, and quickly removing the rest of his clothing stepped under the shower in an adjoining room. The other players went to the assistance of Long Tom, who showed signs of life about this time. They raised the veteran to his feet. Morrissey blinked for awhile and then a grin bespread his features. His left cheek was cut and bleeding.

"The kid is all right," he exclaimed heartily. "My nerve was better than my judgment, that's all."

He, too quickly pulled off his clothes and stepping out of the room, turned on the shower next the one where Kelly was standing. With the water pouring down his body in streams he reached out his hand to the young man.

"My fault, kid. I apologize. Call it square?"

Gordon Kelly grasped the outstretched hand.

"Certainly I will," he said, with a rare smile.

Kelly dressed himself rapidly and was the first to leave the clubhouse. The others followed singly and in pairs. Long Tom Morrissey and Bill Smith were the last to go.

"Did that guy tell you he never played a game of ball?" demanded the veteran backstop of his manager, as he slipped the key of his locker in his pocket.

"That's what he said" replied Smith.

"And never played a game of ball?"

"That's what he said."

"Billy, he's kiddin' you. Why, he even fights like a ball player," declared Long Tom, with a grin. He started to leave the clubhouse when his manager called him back.

"Want to change your locker?" asked Smith.

"Me? What for?" demanded Morrissey in surprise.

"You're right next to the kid and I thought on account of—"

"That's where I want to be; right next to the kid," Long Tom broke in. "He's my pal, Billy."

CHAPTER XII.

AS Gordon Kelly hurried out of the clubhouse he asked himself this question: "Is the game worth the candle?" and on his way down town he had a chance to study the question and answer it to his own satisfaction.

Within the past few hours he had, first, been more or less ridiculed in the newspapers and, second, he had engaged in a clubhouse fight with another ball player. That, he figured, was a pretty strenuous way for a novice like himself to begin a baseball career. Would every day have its bad features as this day had? Would it not be best for him to quit the game right now? How about going to Manager Smith and thanking him for his kindness, but telling him at the same time he had decided to call it all off.

Greeted by Mildred.

Ruminating further on the subject he came to the conclusion that the newspapers were right. The reporters were perfectly justified in refusing to laud him to the skies before he had demonstrated his ability. There was nothing really objectionable in what they had said about him. He confessed to himself that what they had published was largely true and they had written their articles in a humorous vein which was well within their rights under the circumstances. No, he had no fault to find with the newspapers.

But how about that clubhouse fight? Well, that was a thing of the past. Long Tom had apologized, he had accepted the apology and he believed they would be friends from now on. Then why quit? Wouldn't that make him more ridiculous than ever? Besides he didn't like the sound of the word. No, he wouldn't quit. He would stick it out—do the best he could and trust to luck and Providence.

Glancing out of the car window at this stage of his meditations, Kelly beheld Miss Deery seated at the wheel of an automobile of which she was the sole occupant. There was a temporary blockade and Kelly seized the opportunity to jump off the street car and hurry around to where Miss Deery's machine was packed in with several others, waiting for the jam to clear itself. He raised his hat.

"How do you do?" smiled Mildred pleasantly. "Jump in and I'll drive you home; or, better still, come to my house and have luncheon with me."

"Is that where you are headed for?" inquired Gordon, stepping into the car and seating himself beside the young woman.

"I don't seem to be headed for anywhere in this blockade. Ah, here we are," and the car moved slowly forward. "Well, what is your lordship's pleasure?"

"You are very kind, but before giving an answer I have a counter proposition to make."

The nature of which is."

"Judge Barbee kindly sent me a card to his club and he wrote me there was a ladies' dining room there. The card is only good for two weeks and I would like to make use of it. Won't you take lunch with me there?"

"That would be simply fine. But we'll have to go home anyway, because I have to prink up a little bit," said Mildred, with an arch look.

"I think you are very charming as you are," remarked Gordon.

Mildrel laughed gaily.

"Mr. Kelly, you told me you lived all your life in the mountains and have only been in Atlanta a week. You are certainly learning fast. Who's your teacher?"

"You are the only girl I know in Atlanta, Miss Deery."

"As you know how to say nice things I'll take that as a compliment."

They were soon at the Deery residence, and leaving him in the big, comfortable living room to amuse himself Mildred ran upstairs. Contrary to the assertions of humorists, she was back again inside of ten minutes, with a complete change of costume, and if she was charming before, she was bewitching now. Gordon offered to drive the car, and with the smiling comment that he seemed to have many accomplishments for a mountaineer, Mildred arranged herself beside him. Ten minutes later they were at the club and seated at a table. When the waiter had taken their order, Gordon asked, seriously:

"Have you ever seen a game of baseball, Miss Deery.?"

"Of course I have. I've seen Georgia and Tech play half a dozen times. And I saw Harvard and Yale play on the Polo Grounds, New York, too."

"Which side won?"

"I've forgotten. I went with a party of friends, some of whom wanted Yale to win and the others wanted Harvard to win. I got all mixed up in the excitement."

"Did you ever see a professional game of baseball here in Atlanta, at Ponce DeLeon Park?

"No, I never did. Why this cross-examination, Mr. Kelly?"

"I'm trying to find out your likes and dislikes, in order to avoid the dislikes."

"That's very nice of you, I rather like baseball: I'll say that."

The talk went on. Gordon Kelly was becoming very much interested in Mildred Deery; to such an extent that he was anxious to learn what her opinions were in regard to professional ball players. Yet he was afraid to ask the direct question. He beat around the bush for a while and then changed the subject, without getting the information he desired and without suspecting why he asked the questions.

FREE, NEXT SUNDAY.

The American Sunday Monthly Magazine, containing the first chapters of Jack London's new story, is GIVEN FREE with every copy of the next Sunday American.

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the first nine installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read this tenth installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

THE FIVE FRANKFORTERS

A Romance of Great Wealth as Played by Money Kings

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Oh! indeed! He is well off?" went on the stern inquisitor.

"He has some money, I suppose," said the girl dully. How long was this to continue?

"How much, do you suppose?" There was cutting sarcasm in the tone.

A little flicker of mischief lit Charlotte's eyes. Why, if this was a game after all, she would play it high—spiritedly—she would win. "As much as YOU have—I suppose!"

"You are sanguine, I think, Fraulein Charlotte. Is his family as much respected as OURS?" Solomon admired a WORTHY antagonist—even though that antagonist might be his daughter!

"All's Well."

"Just as much," said demure Charlotte. She dared now to raise her eyes—to look at Jacob—whose face was lit now by a smile of component parts of amusement and eagerness.

"A Jew?"

"Yes."

"Of course. Tell me; my child. Tell me. On this much I must insist." Charlotte hesitated in lovely confusion. "Tell me—my child, tell your father."

Blushing, trembling—radiant, and yet frightened now that her moment had come—Charlotte laid her little white hands on her father's strong shoulders, and turned him gently toward the window where Jacob stood. "There—he is there."

But now Jacob's hour had come—love must have its way. All in one pulsing moment, he had crossed the room, and Charlotte was caught in hungry arms. "Charlotte—my little Charlotte. Come." And Old Sol, beaming joyously through the rose arbor, was Love's only confidant, as the boy and girl fled to the great outdoors—mother Nature—with their precious joy.

Solomon laughed. "Magnificent! So I have worked and calculated and spent my money—for my nephew!"

Frau Gudula lived again in one brief moment her own love dream. "And those two have made their Lover's Lane out of their Grannie's old Jew's Alley! Yes, it is magnificent!"

From under the table the old Frau drew a battered little low stool. She smiled—but there was the pathos of the very old—whose race is nearly run in her gentle tone. "Come and sit here, Solomon, my son. Sit here as you used to in the dear long ago when you were a child—and your dear father was with me—instead of calling me from far away. What does it matter, my son, if they are happy? Not in your way, perhaps, but in hers your little Charlotte is happy—our little Jacob and Charlotte are happy. Happy, my son. All our money could not buy a better thing than that. Cannot YOU be content?"

Solomon looked out beyond the open door—out on the rose-hung terrace where young love had come at last into its own. Perhaps it was his mother's gentle tones, perhaps it was his daughter's glorified face, perhaps it was the memory of Charlotte's mother—the wife who had been his only love—three generations of loving women seeking the way to Solomon's heart, and Solomon's heart knew youth and love again.

"Yes, mother—dear, I am content." And in the Garden of Cupid at Neustadt Castle, and in the rose arbor of Jew's Lane, there was peace—for in the hearts of the royal cousins of Taunus, and in the home of the Five Frankforters, love had come into his kingdom.

THE END.

Unexpected Result.

Here is an emigration story told at a meeting recently. In a village was a youth who had got himself into such a variety of scrapes that his people thought it would be better to dispatch him to Canada, so as to get him away from old and doubtful associations. He agreed to go, provided those interested in his departure secured him some testimonials. Half a dozen were got for him. They sang his praises in unrestrained terms, spoke of his geniality, of his good address and exceptional capability, and all the other virtues that few men have, but many get the credit for.

When the young man read the testimonials he turned to his father and exclaimed:

"Well, I'm hanged! I had no idea people thought so much of me. And now I know how much they like me I'm blowed if I'll go away at all."

Up-to-Date Jokes

Six men worked two days in kneading and baking a loaf of bread weighing 398 pounds and measuring 4 feet high by 13 feet long at Kansas City. The loaf, which was made from 90 samples of Oklahoma and Kansas flour, is to be exhibited in England.

"D-darling, d-do you l-love me?" she gasped.

"Love you?" said he, as he got a tighter grip; "love you? Why, precious one, madly as I hug you now, the fervor of my affection almost makes me long to be an octopus with eight arms."

Hamlet had just been hit by a cold storage egg. Whereupon he turned gravely to his audience.

"How truly spoke the good Marcellus," quoth he. "Something is rotten in the State of Denmark!"

The darkest days of husband and wife are when they come to look forward to a childless and lonely old age.

Many a wife has found herself incapable of motherhood owing to some derangement of the feminine system, often curable by the proper remedies.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

FOR HER SAKE, DO.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am twenty, and deeply in love with a girl of eighteen. She told me she loved me, and I love her, too, but some way I doubt her love. The other evening she attended a dance with a friend of mine after I asked her not to go. E. S. B.

Your attitude is one of fault-finding, and I not sure that the giving of your love to a woman means her happiness.

She says she loves you. Be grateful for that much and don't attempt to control her as if she were a child. If you can not be that generous, it will be a kindness to her to transfer your affections.

DON'T GO TO EXTREMES.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am a girl 20 years old. A few young men would like to keep steady company with me but I always refuse because I do not seem to care for them much. Do you think I should accept just the same? I am so lonesome because I am always home, while the other girls have a good time. LONESOME.

Unless these men are objectionable to you, you must accept an occasional invitation, for it may be the means of meeting the man you will some day love. Don't get into the habit of isolation and consequent lonesomeness. It will grow on you.

FORGET YOURSELF.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am a young man of twenty and have been keeping company with a young lady for the past six months. I love this young lady very much and would be thankful for your advice on how to win her. R. M.

Forget yourself in an effort to make her happy. Be considerate, agreeable, persistent; let her know you love her and are willing to devote your life to her.

Household Suggestions

Moths can be kept away from furs or clothes by putting a piece of linen damped in turpentine in drawers or wardrobes. This should be renewed once or twice during the year. Moths will never attack carpets and curtains which have been well sprinkled with salt.

A small box of brickdust with a cork in it kept at the side of the sink will be found most useful for taking stains from knives, cups and all kinds of china and enamel ware. If at hand at washing-up time it saves many an after cleaning.

A good cleaning paste for enameled baths, zinc pails, etc., is made of equal parts of shaved yellow soap, whiting and common soda, dissolved over the fire in the least possible amount of water required to keep it from burning.

To hang pictures on a plastered wall try dipping the nail into cold water before driving it into the wall. It will bite into the plaster if this is done, and will hold a heavy weight without loosening.

Silencing the Philosopher.

"Yes," remarked the philosopher; "deafness is indeed a terrible affliction. But in such cases nature, you know, always provides some compensation. At any rate, if a man is deficient in one sense, he usually has another abnormally developed. Now, I once knew a poor blind fellow whose sense of touch was positively uncanny. Really, it served him almost as well as eyes do a normal man."

"Sure," said the genial Irishman, who hitherto had taken no part in the discussion, "an' I've noticed that, too! There's a friend of mine, he's lame, poor chap, but he can get about almost as easily as you or I. True, one of his legs is short, but the other makes up for it by being three inches longer!"

A Popular Song

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

BY NELL BRINKLEY

Nell Brinkley Says

THEY call it "I LOVE YOU." The Kings of Babylon and the slaves by the river sang it with equal fervor. In faeryland they know it. Adam brought it home to Eve and sang it tirelessly. On the plaintive "ukulele" of soft-aired Hawaii they have played it since the isles were born. Steel and iron clad men of the rough days of chivalry caroled it to the maids they met from the broad backs of their dray horses. Cleopatra whined it in her honey-sweet voice to dull-witted Antony. In the backwoods of Tennessee they know it. In the gray, melancholy uplands of wild Thibet rough-haired youths whisper it to bead-strung slant eyed girls. In the hidden corner of the music room, screened in spikes of fruit blossoms, a smart young chap hums it to a girl who never twisted up her own hair in her life, and out in the country, in an orchard, on the top rail of a gray old worm fence, a boy in a blue "jumper" chants it to a girl in a pink sunbonnet shading her sun-browned cheeks. Oh, it's a popular song—everybody knows it and everybody always did know it.

"I guess we can find a way to have the marriage annulled, or whatever they do to marriages that don't take."

The brutal assurance of the man in thus referring to things that were sacred moved Dick to wrath.

"Don't you interfere," he said. His words were spoken softly but tensely.

Nevertheless, Burke held to the topic, but an indefinable change in his manner rendered it less offensive to the young man.

"Interfere! Huh!" he ejaculated, grinning broadly. "Why, that's what I'm paid to do. Listen to me, son. The minute you begin mixing up with crooks, you ain't in a position to give orders to any one. The crooks have got no rights in the eyes of the police. Just remember that."

He Was Not Listening.

The Inspector spoke the simple truth as he knew it from years of experience. The theory of the law is that a presumption of innocence exists until the accused is proven guilty. But the police are out of sympathy with such finical methods. With them, the crook is presumed guilty at the outset of whatever may be charged against him. If need be, there will be proof a-plenty against him—of the sort that the underworld knows to its sorrow.

But Dick was not listening. His thoughts were again wholly with the woman he loved, who, as the Inspector declared, had fled from him.

"Where's she gone in Chicago?"

Burke answered in his usual gruff fashion, but with a note of kindliness that was not without its effect on Dick.

"I'm no mind reader," he said. "But she's a swell little girl, all right. I've got to hand it to her for that. So, she'll probably stop at the Blackstone—that is, until the Chicago police are tipped off that she is in town."

Of a sudden, the face of the young man took on a totally different expression. Where before had been anger, now was a vivid eagerness. He went close to the Inspector, and spoke with intense seriousness.

"Burke," he said, pleadingly, "give me a chance. I'll leave for Chicago in the morning. Give me twenty-four hours' start before you begin hounding her."

The Inspector regarded the speaker searchingly. His heavy face was drawn in an expression of apparent doubt. Abruptly, then, he smiled acquiescence.

"Seems reasonable," he admitted.

But the father strode to his son.

"No, no, Dick," he cried. "You shall not go. You shall not go."

Burke, however, shook his head in remonstrance against Gilder's plea. His huge voice came booming, weightily impressive.

"Why not?" he questioned. "It's a fair gamble. And, besides, I like the boy's nerve."

Dick seized on the admission eagerly.

"And you'll agree?" he cried.

"Yes, I'll agree," the Inspector answered.

"Thank you," Dick said quietly.

But the father was not content. On the contrary, he went toward the two hurriedly, with a gesture of reproval.

"You shall not go, Dick," he declared, impetuously.

The Inspector shot a word of warning to Gilder in an aside that Dick could not hear.

"Keep still," he replied. "It's all right."

Dick went on speaking with a seriousness suited to the magnitude of his interests.

"You give me your word, Inspector," he said, "that you won't notify the police in Chicago until I've been there twenty-four hours?"

"I Don't Like It."

"You're on," Burke replied genially. "They won't get a whisper out of me until the time is up." He swung about to face the father, and there was a complete change in his manner. "Now, then, Mr. Gilder," he said briskly, "I want to talk to you about another little matter——"

Dick caught the suggestion, and interrupted quickly.

"Then I'll go." He smiled rather wanly at his father. "You know, Dad, I'm sorry, but I've got to do what I think is the right thing."

Burke helped to save the situation from the growing tenseness.

"Sure," he cried heartily; "sure you have! That's the best any of us can do." He watched keenly as the young man went out of the room. It was not until the door closed after Dick that he spoke. Then he dropped to a seat on the couch, and proceeded to make his confidence to the magnate.

"He'll go to Chicago in the morning, you think, don't you?"

"Certainly," Gilder answered. "But I don't like it."

Burke slapped his leg with an enthusiasm that might have broken a weaker member.

"Best thing that could have happened!" he vociferated. And then, as Gilder regarded him in astonishment, he added, chuckling: "You see, he won't find her there."

"Why do you think that?" Gilder demanded, greatly puzzled.

Burke permitted himself the luxury of laughing appreciatively a moment more before making his explanation. Then he said quietly:

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THARE was two ladies up to the house last nite. Both of them has daughters wich is jest going to git married & that maiks them feel kind of love sick themselfs, I guess, beekaus that is all that thay did all the time thay was to the house, talk about love. Pa dident like it a bit, beekaus both of the ladies was oalder than he is, & I have often herd Pa say that wimmen shud talk about other topicks than love wen thay git middel aged, topicks like church work or how much life insurance thare husbands is going to leave them when thay die.

One of the ladies was naimed Missus Raymond & the other was Missus Belcher. Missus Raymond sed to Pa:

"Don't Cry," Said Ma.

I was jest telling your wife beefoar you calm in the room how sweet & innocent & gurlish my littel daughter looked to-day wen she was looking oaver sum pritty material for her trousseo. The deer littel cherup seemed so charming and confused and bewil-deringly pretty that I almost envied the man that is going to talk her away from me, sed Missus Raymond. Then she beegan to cry.

I doant think I wud cry if I was you, deerest, Ma sed to her. Do calm yourself & talk cumfurt in thinking about the pritty hoam that her husband is going to maik for her. Maybe you will be thare a grate deel of the time. Won't that be nice & cumfurtable? Ma sed to her.

It will be pretty tuff corn beef for her husband, sed Pa, the yung lady's husband, I meen. Wife, sed Pa, I suppoas you reemember the time yure loving mother calm here all the way from Wisconsin & started rite in trying to be the managing editor of our littel hoam. Of course, you reemember it, sed Pa. Will you ever fergit, sed Pa, the look of pained surprise that calm into her eyes wen I explained to her, as gently as I cud, that she dident have anything in the world to say about the management of my domestick affairs? If my memory dosent fail me, Pa sed, & I do not think it does, she stayed only three days insted of all summer.

You acted like a perfect cave man all the time she was here, I remember that, sed Ma. No wonder my poor mother seldum menshuns you in her letters.

But as I was saying about my daughter and Missus Raymond, I oudent help thinking as I sat there & saw her, a dainty bud with youth's fresh bloom on her cheeks, that no man in this wurld was good enuff to be the husband of so divine a creechur. Of course the man she is going to marry is a splendid yung man & is the vice president of a big bank. But eeven if he were the president of the united Staits, sed Missus Raymond, he wuddent be good enuff for my daughter. No man is good enuff for a woman.

Looks for Gray Hairs.

They are good enuff for a woman around pay day, sed Pa. I have always notised that when it gits neer the first of the month my wife beegins looking in my head for gray hairs & calling me her deer old boy. & the morning of pay day, Pa sed, she always follows me to the door and kisses me aggenn and aggenn, with the luv lite shining in her eyes, & says Be sure & come rite hoam after you git yure pay to-day, won't you, darling.

I nevver do any such thing ,sed Ma, & I agree with Missus Raymond that her daughter or any sweet, good gurl is too good for a man.

Oh, my daughter, sed Missus Raymond, can't let her go, I jest can't. & my daughter, too, sed Missus Belcher, it seems as if sum monster of the sea was coming neerer & neerer to drag my daughter from her mother's arms. Then they both beegan to cry & Pa sneeked out of the room & went in the library ware the side board is.

The Bashful Boy

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"WHAT I would like to ask," writes Rebecca, "is why it is better for a girl to associate with a bashful boy. On several occasions I have noticed that you state that a girl should honor such a young man, but you have never stated why."

The qualities in a bashful boy which make him a welcome suitor are more of a negative nature than of a positive. It is not that which he does, so much as that which he does not do. His sins are of omission and they are small compared with the sins of commission of his bolder brother.

The bashful boy doesn't flirt. With a tongue that halts and stammers, and a tell-tale color that is quicker than the blush of a young girl to proclaim his dishonesty did he attempt to be dishonest, he is not an adept at hypocrisy or concealment.

He is not a dandy. Neither is he a lady's man, and, my dear Rebecca, the presidents of banks and railroads, the powers in commercial life, the most profound thinkers and the men of letters the world honors, were never ladies' men.

His Hands.

He does not know what to do with his hands when out in society, but his employer will tell you he knows good use for them when at work.

Afraid of girls, he is forced to seek companionship in books and boys. The fear of girls gives him a respect for them which is wholesome; the companionship of boys gives him the outdoor exercise every young man needs.

He needs this tiring of every muscle, not alone for the results that are physical, but for moral returns. You are not too young, my dear, to know that the wolf that has been racing furiously up and down hill all day feels at night only the cry of tired limbs and aching muscles begging for rest. He is not the wolf that goes seeking an opening to break into the sheepfold!

If a bashful boy loves a girl it is with a sense of humility and his own unworthiness. He knows that he is the one who will be honored if his love is returned; his bolder brother has a faint suspicion, which the homage of silly girls confirms, that it is the girl who should be on her knees.

A Safe Way.

During his calf days he does all his signing for love's sake at a distance, which mothers will agree is the only safe and sane way for young girls to be loved.

He is always a good listener—no woman was ever bored to death by the talking of a bashful man.

Saying little, he says little for which he or others have cause for regret. He is a safe depository for secrets, a good man in whom to have confidence. If he is not a girl's lover the next best thing that could happen her would be to have him for a brother or a friend.

His compliments are not practiced, and are therefore sincere. When it takes effort and stupendous courage to hand a modest little flower to a girl, it follows that he will never throw bouquets at the head of every woman he meets.

Best of all, Rebecca, the bashful boy is a home boy. He is unafraid when with his mother and finds in her companionship the delight less bashful boys seek from home.

He is "a good boy" in the sweet old-fashioned sense, a boy who has escaped contamination a few years later than it comes to boys more bold.

Get The Syrup Habit— It's Good For You

Velva Syrup is more than a mere sweet. It's a fine, wholesome, healthful food. It's just what growing children need—and it's good for grown-ups, too. Earnest, careful scientists have long ago exploded the mossy idea that sweets are harmful—and they tell you that sweets are necessary. You'll find the syrup with the RED LABEL, fine. It has the smoothest of sugary flavor and rich color. It makes candies, fudge, cakes and cookies that just melt in one's mouth. It goes great with griddle cakes and it will make your good muffins, waffles and biscuits better. Try it and see if this isn't so. Ten cents and up, according to size. Velva in the green can, too, at your grocer's. Send for the book of Velva recipes. No charge.

VELVA

PENICK & FORD, Ltd.
New Orleans, La.

VELVA NUT ICE CREAM

3-4 cupful Red Velva Syrup, 2 cupfuls scalded milk, 1 tablespoonful flour, 1-4 cupful sugar, 1 egg, pinch of salt, 2 quarts cream, 1 cupful chopped English walnut meats, 1 teaspoonful almond extract, 1 teaspoonful rose extract.

Beat up the egg with the flour and sugar, and gradually add the milk. Cook for 20 minutes in a double boiler, stirring constantly. Cool and add the syrup, salt, nuts, cream and the extracts, and freeze. Serve in dainty dishes with a preserved cherry on top of each.

COACH HEISMAN SPENDS 2 DAYS WITH THE PREPS

By J. W. Heisman.

UNTIL last week it had been long since I had seen a game of either football or baseball between any of the preparatory school teams of the State. But on the 19th and 20th last I slipped down to Milledgeville to see the Georgia Military College team of that place lock horns with the team from the Riverside Military Academy of Gainesville.

Well, I witnessed both games, and it won't take me long to say that they were good games, splendid, both of them. There was fast, clean fielding, excellent base running, fair batting, fine pitching and considerable inside baseball. Riverside won both games, each by a score of 2 to 0. The pitching of all four hurlers, Williamson and Haines for Riverside, and Camp and Gheesling for G. M. C., was impressively good, and it averaged in effectiveness but little below the average of what the college teams showed this year, if any. Riverside seemed stronger with the stick than G. M. C., which was, perhaps, the principal reason why they got away with the big end of the scoring.

• • •

NOW, I had heard more than one rumor to the effect that the Riverside team was made up of a bunch of "ringers." Among others the Wake Forest players had given me solemn assurance of this. Recalling that Wake Forest has since been blacklisted for having three professional players on its roster this now strikes me as a good place to giggle. (It will also be remembered that the Riverside team held Wake Forest to a 6-6 tie game).

Quite prepared was I, therefore, to see on the Riverside line-up a bunch of matured men, some of them giving every evidence of life among professionals, most of them omitting sulphurous language every time they opened their mouths, chewing tobacco like demons and putting up a brand of baseball few college teams in the country could hope to duplicate. Did I see these things? No, none of them, and nothing like it. In the first place they were clearly and indubitably all young boys with one possible exception, and he not over 21 years of age. They all dressed neatly and in excellent taste. They talked like your average well behaved and schooled Prep. They played surprisingly good ball for such youngsters, but nothing like what professionals, even in Class D, play. I tell you they were BOYS, nothing else.

What is a "ringer?". Any one of a lot of things makes a "ringer." True, they may still have been ringers in the sense that they were not bona fide students, were at Riverside only to play ball and never to study; but don't believe that for one minute: they didn't look the part. As for ever having played in professional leagues, or ANY of them ever having received any but the most trifling recompense for any past playing, that was even more unbelievable.

No, they have a very well balanced nine, they field, hit, and run bases fairly well, are strong in the box and are weak in no department of play; they are full of "pep," are in good physical condition, have nice team work, stick to their work and never lose confidence in their ability to win the game—and that's how they do win, and that's all. And that's how they won 19 straight games this spring without losing one.

This is really a very extraordinary achievement, and Coach Frank Anderson deserves an extraordinary amount of credit for the wonderful showing of the team. It was he who taught them their team play and inside ball; he who kept up their fighting spirit after he had generated it, and he who has made them very largely what they are. It is undeniably a jim-dandy young team. But I don't believe they are ringers.

• • •

THE G. M. C. boys were also a nice, clean-looking lot, and they played good steady ball. In two innings only out of 19 played did Riverside succeed in scoring on these hard working lads. Except in hitting they showed no inferiority worth mentioning to the Riverside team.

I desire to express my very warm admiration for the clean and sportsmanly conduct of the G. M. C. cadets and their friends and rooters. The very best of order prevailed at all times on the field, and their treatment of the Riverside team was, so far as I could observe, not only just and courteous but such as befits the honored guest. The work of Umpires Lamar Ham, an old Georgia player, was excellent, and no word of fault finding or bitterness was ever addressed within my hearing either to him or to the visitors by the G. M. C. players or any of their supporters: it was fine conduct and good sport all around.

G. M. C. has a very pretty campus, and the main building of the school is the old Georgia State Capitol: it is a handsome and very substantial edifice still.

• • •

I STOPPED off at Barnesville, hoping to see the rained-out game of the day before played off between Florida and Gordon Institute. In this I met with disappointment, as the Florida team had gone home; but I enjoyed a visit of a few hours there nevertheless.

Gordon also has a very fine athletic field, and several very handsome new buildings. Lieutenant Riley, the former star West Point guard, had all the boys looking spick-and-span, and their military drill was much more than worth watching. The athletes I was so fortunate as to meet were a remarkably fine looking set of fellows who seemed to measure right up to college standards in both stature and outlines. And, by the way, I have just read that their splendid catcher, Everett Bankston, whom I was hoping might come to Tech, has received an offer from the Pittsburg League team. This will give an idea of the class of the athletes they are developing in our Georgia preparatory schools.

GLENN WILL BE STAR AT BOARD TRACK RACING

—JACK PRINCE.

"HARRY GLENN, this local boy, will make one of the greatest board track riders in the world; you watch what I say." So says Jack Prince, inventor of the board track, who knows more about "racing on edge" than any other living man.

Glenn made his real exhibition debut Wednesday. He had been flirting with the track for several days. His first time out he wabbled about on it like a drunken sailor—and wabbling at 65 or 70 miles an hour is a dangerous pastime. Glenn's racing machine, ordered some weeks ago, has not come yet, so he has not been doing much at the track.

Wednesday afternoon five or six of the world's best board-track racers were tuning up their machines and getting ready for the big tournament next week. And a crowd of 6,000 or 8,000 board-track cranks were watching the free exhibition that goes on every afternoon. For nothing at all, the crowd was seeing fancy riding by the best in the business. But even then they were not satisfied.

"Harry Glenn; we want Harry Glenn," they shouted.

Glenn Forced to Ride.

There was not a chance to announce to all of them that Harry's racing machine had not come. And finally the cries became so insistent that "Smiling Harry" mounted a road machine and, grinning happily, set out for his first real attempt at speed on the treacherous banks.

No veteran rider could have handled the track with greater ease. He circled it at the pole and he took it high, he rode fast and slow; but never was there a slip or any show of inexperience. And round after round was greeted with thunderous cheering. That Glenn is a tremendous local favorite was never better demonstrated.

Glenn deserves it, too. Never has more intrepid dirt-track rider shown himself to the public than Harry, and he has won the crowds by his courage and cleverness.

Lad's Success Is Sure.

When Glenn was riding, the experts gathered at the paddock and discussed his work. And it was not long before all agreed that his future in the racing game was assured. He has many times shown his courage and cool-headedness in races, and now that he has shown that he can "ride the boards" as well, there is nothing to it but a big showing for "Smiling Harry" Glenn around the Southern circuit of tracks.

If Glenn's racing machine arrives in time, he will probably try his luck in the first race meet, set for one week from to-morrow.

A PLEA.

(Inspired by C. Webb Murphy.)

"Knock, if you will—I have no dread—
But keep my name in type!" he said.

The only fault to be found with the Manly Art of Self-Defense is that it sometimes bask fires.

One learns from the public prints that Mr. Zbyszko still insists that he can throw Mr. Gotch. Some of these foreigners never get any sense.

The fracture of a wrestler's dome indicates that even a billiard ball is not immune.

There is a move afoot to eliminate hammer throwing from track meets. Messrs. Evers, Tinker and Chance are in favor of a move to eliminate same from the pastime known as baseball.

Considering the athletic activities of those Cleveland persons, it behooves Mr. Birmingham to fracture a few more of his athletes' limbs.

REFERRING TO A SPANISH ATHLETE.

(By the Miller of Osgood.)
(Being a Contribution.)

"Ladies and gents!" the Barker cried,
"We'll win the flag with games to spare!"
Oh, please sir, tie your bull brute outside!
You can't win games with heated air.

If the Calgary affair will only put a crimp in the white hope market, it will not have been fought in vain.

One Johnny Evers, pugilist, makes his appearance in our midst. One W. Klem, umpire, will testify that anybody with that name is a fighter.

Tommy Leach is the only Cub outfielder who is hitting in the .300 class. All of which goes to show the value of young blood.

Reports come from Virginia, Minn., that Rube Waddell has disappeared again. Virginia, Minn., fears that he may come back.

George Stovall is back in the game. It is rumored that he now chews cotton instead of tobacco.

SHAME.

Full many a man is filled with bitter shame
And hears men make a bywcrd of his name,
But never one who hung his head so low
As one I witnessed in a baseball game.

With bases filled, they called him to the fore;
He whiffed when but a hit would tie the score,
And as he journeyed benchward from the plate
It must have seemed a hundred miles or more.

WOLGAST BACKS HOPPE.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 29.—Ad Wolgast, who is reported to have lost heavily in his last few bets on prize fights, to-day is said to have placed a large bet on Willie Hoppe to beat Frankie Burns when they meet next month.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 29.—One of the most important series of the season begins at the Polo Grounds to-day, when the Giants and Phillies, now leading the league, meet to play four games in three days. This will be a real test of the Quakers, who have been setting a terrific pace ever since the race began.

The games are going to be largely a question of pitchers, and the Giants' twirlers will be thrown against the finest staff in the league in this series. It is the pitching the Quakers have been getting that has kept them up in the race so far, and it will be pitching that must stop them. When McGraw traded three Giants to Cincinnati last week, he was looking ahead to these games, which he realized would be critical and might have a direct bearing on the final result of the season. He needed good, reliable twirlers to work in these battles. Now he has Tesreau, Fromme and Marquard. Doubtless, they will meet Seaton, Alexander, Chalmers and Rixey.

• • •

IT is not only the actual result of this series which will count, but the effect the outcome will have on the hearts and playing of the plunging Phillies. If the Giants can stop them with a jerk we will start them off on a long road tour without the idea that they are invincible, and we will send them away with Pittsburg as their next stop, except for one game at home with Brooklyn. They will encounter some more excellent pitching and a club that has been vastly strengthened within the last two weeks when they meet the Pirates. But should the Quakers take these games in New York or the majority of them, they would still retain the notion that they cannot be beaten, and doubtless would go stampeding through the West at a great rate, increasing their lead to dangerous proportions. It would also have the opposite effect on the New York club, which is about to leave for its swing through the West. Therefore, it is easy to see that the series is an important one.

The Quakers are going to put forth the best that they have against us for two reasons. One is that there never has been any too much good feeling between the two teams, and the other is that every club in the league is always eager to beat the Big Town boys, and especially the champions of the league.

That is the reason the Giants constantly meet the best pitching, whereas some second-rate club gets second-rate twirlers.

• • •

THE Philadelphia club is still playing at top speed, while the Giants are not themselves yet. Our hitting is not timely, and the fielding is uncertain. Demaree, who showed so well at first, has not entirely recovered from a strained back, another reason why the coming of Fromme was timely. The Phillies are likely to make a good bid for the pennant, provided Dooin can keep the team in condition and the regulars can steer clear of injuries. The lack of capable substitutes is what will probably drag the Quakers back. The pitching staff, however, should keep the club a factor in the race right up to September.

The Philadelphia sprint is not the same kind that Cincinnati sprang last year, to my mind. There is more backbone to the Philadelphia club, and the team is a good one as far as the first string men go. Give it a lead of a few games and it's going to be a long chase catching Dooin's crowd. They can then afford to slump and recover. What the team does on this long road trip will give some indication of how it is going to finish, because most of the games it has played to date have been at home. This will be a real test. They play twenty-three of their next twenty-four games on the road.

• • •

ASIDE from actually strengthening the pitching staff, McGraw's trade with Cincinnati displayed considerable wisdom on the part of the New York manager in another direction. The bad weather of the first part of the season has piled up a long string of double-headers for later along, and double-headers eat into pitchers faster than a high-priced automobile does into gasoline. The Giants now have eleven double-headers slated, and, in order to work a reliable pitcher every day, McGraw will need four or five twirlers in service all the time. By the addition of Fromme, he has enough talent to start a reliable performer in each game, in spite of the double-headers, when Demaree gets back in shape.

• • •

BROOKLYN has apparently begun to slip back through the league. I look to see the club finish no better than fourth, because two teams are bound to come and pass the Superbas. These are the Giants and Pittsburg, and I don't figure the Dodgers any way to beat out Philadelphia. The pitching staff appears to be slipping some now, and the infielders are not playing the game they were when the psychology of the winning streak was on the whole team and carrying it up through the league.

• • •

THE Cubs have faded, but should get a revival of form on their return to the home diamond. The improvement in pitching would mean an improvement of the team, because it is weak twirling that has been continuously holding the club back. The rest of the team is strong enough, with a wonderful catching staff.

• • •

WHEN the Eastern clubs invade the West next week, the first real test of the Easterners will occur in comparing them with the West. They waded through the Western teams in the late intersectional series, and the question now is whether or not they can repeat the performance away from home. The St. Louis club made the best showing of all the Westerners in the East, and, with Brooklyn and Philadelphia, has been the surprise of the league. Two good pitchers have been holding the club up in the race, and a team that was regarded before the season as a competitor with Brooklyn and Boston for last place has shot to the front and is crowding a lot of us for the first division.

FLYNN TO CLAIM HEAVY TITLE IF SAVAGE LOSES

JIM FLYNN, who meets Jim Savage at the Auditorium-Armory on June 13, is going to claim the white heavyweight championship of the world if he wins here. The following letter from Jack Curley, manager of the "Fighting Fireman," received to-day, explains itself:

"New York, May 27, 1913.

"Sporting Editor The Georgian:
"Atlanta, Ga.

"Dear Sir:—

"Dear Sir—Jim Flynn will claim the heavyweight championship of the world if he defeats Jim Savage in your city on June 13. He has beaten every white man in the world, barring Luther McCarty, and has issued challenges to Gunboat Smith and Jess Willard. Neither, however, wants to exchange wallops with my man. I will challenge Arthur Pelky for Flynn just as soon as the latter is ready to fight again.

"PRICE HAS NOT QUIT LOCAL CLUB,"—CALLAWAY

President Callaway, of the Atlanta Baseball Association, denies the story printed to-day that Southpaw Gilbert Price has quit the local ball club.

According to Callaway, Price reported for practice this morning and will appear in uniform this afternoon, ready to twirl if called upon.

"I know nothing of the rumor that Price is to quit our club and enter business," said Callaway, "and if he was I certainly would know it by this time."

Yell Defiance at Blood Disorders

A Remedy That Has Shown a Most Remarkable Purifying Effect.

At Last You Can Get Rid of Blood Troubles—S. S. S.

The word medicine is one of the most abused in our language. There are certain medicinal properties just as necessary to health as the food we eat. Take, for example, the well-known tonic medicine, S. S. S. This famous blood purifier contains medicinal components just as vital and essential to healthy blood as the elements of wheat, roast beef, the fats and the sugars that make up our daily ration.

As a matter of fact, there is one ingredient in S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating each cellular part of the body to the healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment. That is why it regenerates the blood supply, why it has such a tremendous influence in overcoming eczema, rash, pimples, and all skin afflictions.

And in regenerating the tissues S. S. S. has a rapid and positive antidotal effect upon all those irritating influences that cause rheumatism, sore throat, weak eyes, falling hair, loss of weight, thin, pale cheeks, and that weariness of muscle and nerve that is generally experienced as spring fever. Get a bottle of S. S. S. at any drug store, and in a few days you will not only feel bright and energetic, but you will be the picture of new life. S. S. S. is prepared only in the laboratory of The Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., who maintain a very efficient Medical Department, where all who have any blood disorder of a stubborn nature may write freely for advice and a special book of instruction. S. S. S. is sold everywhere by drug stores, department and general stores.

USE OF BEAN BALL SHOULD BE FORBIDDEN

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE agitation in the major leagues against the "bean ball" has stirred a responsive chord in the Southern League. "Go to it," say players and fans alike.

You know what the "bean ball" is, of course.

It is a ball thrown by the pitcher at the head of the batter. Its purpose may be to intimidate a batter lacking in courage or to force away from the plate a man who is crowding in too close to suit the pitcher.

The play is barbarous and should be eliminated from the game.

* * *

AS contemptible an exhibition of bean ball throwing as Atlanta fans ever saw occured yesterday. In the sixth inning, when Wally Smith was at bat, he ran in to the limit of the batter's box in an effort to spear one of Finis Wilson's curves. Wilson put up a complaint to the umpire, but there were no grounds for it, and Umpire Pfenninger disregarded it.

The next ball Wilson threw straight at Smith's head. Wally ducked and escaped, but by no wide margin. Again Wilson threw at Smith's head, and this time with such unerring aim and such tremendous speed that when Smith ducked the ball struck the bat that he threw in front of his head as he went down. But for this lucky chance Smith would have received a terrible wallop on the head, would unquestionably have been laid out and perhaps killed.

* * *

WILSON'S act was doubtless that of a fresh kid. He threw at Smith's head because he lacked any better sense.

But if Wilson had killed Smith—and the thing could easily have happened—it would have been cold-blooded, brutal, willful murder.

* * *

THE bean ball is no more a part of legitimate baseball than would be the use of an axe on the head of a base runner or the knifing of a fielder.

It would be difficult absolutely to stop it. However, in most cases a trained observer—such as an umpire is supposed to be—and usually isn't—could tell a "bean ball" from a wild heave that went at the same mark. A pitcher who uses it ought to be fined out of baseball for one year and fined not less than a thousand dollars. That might help to break up the practice.

* * *

WEDNESDAY'S ball game was pie for the Crackers—4 to 1—with New Orleans the victim. Paul Musser came around and pitched a really first-class game. The "fatal gift" was with him to the extent of six passes, but he was never in danger, chiefly because he allowed only five hits. He kept the hits pretty well separated from the passes and the only time it seemed possible that anything unfortunate might happen Hendryx walloped into a double play and relieved the pressure.

* * *

CATCHER CHAPMAN made his Atlanta debut and pleased mightily. He is a husky brute, with lots of gab and considerable cleverness. The entire team showed a lot of added "pep," but how much was due to Chapman's example and how much to something Manager Smith might or might not have said in a club house talk nobody knows.

If Chapman proves as good as he looks, the Crackers are a vastly different team. Graham has been an uncertainty all the season. And Dunn was signed only as a second catcher and could not be expected to carry the whole thing along by himself.

With Chapman to do the heavy backstopping and to lead in the chatter; with Dent promising to prove a winning pitcher; with Musser back in shape again, and with the rest of the club playing to form, the locals ought to begin forging toward the front again.

AMERICANS MAY BE FACTORS IN ENGLISH DERBY

By E. G. B. Fitzhamon.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 29.—American owners, horses and jockeys seem likely to cut a pretty wide swath in the great English Derby this year. Harry Payne Whitney's colt, Meeting House, which ran third in the Guineas, has a nice chance of winning. So has Herman B. Duryea's Boyne, which won the Paris Biennial, at ten furlongs, quite comfortably from a smart field. August Belmont also has a colt in France which is going to take some stopping on Epsom Downs, barring accident.

Whitney's Meeting House is a fine big colt by Voter out of Noonday, and is one of the thirty yearlings he purchased from the late James Keene eighteen months ago.

Meeting House began slowly in the mile race at Newmarket for the Guineas and for a few strides he was the last of a field of 15, but he moved up to ninth in the first quarter, was seventh after going five furlongs, and ran over four well fancied candidates in the final quarter, being beaten only two lengths in the final quarter by Louvois and Craganour, which was almost dead-heated. Meeting House ran practically unbacked, with 15 to 1 against him to show, and Frank O'Neill riding.

Was Nipped at The Last.

Craganour divided favoritism with Fairy King and they showed the way for six furlongs, when Craganour drew clear, with Johnny Reiff on the 20 to 1 shot, Louvois, in hot pursuit. Craganour should have won, but his English jockey was overconfident and tossed it off and the American nipped him on the post with Louvois.

O'Neill would have ridden the winner if Jack Joyner had kept Meeting House in the barn. O'Neill was engaged last year to ride for Whitney in this race if he was wanted. Subsequently Mr. Raphael, the owner of Louvois, as well as of last year's Derby winner, engaged both O'Neill and Reiff to come over from Paris to ride Louvois in the Guineas, O'Neill's engagament being conditional that Joyner would not want him for Whitney.

When Joyner decided to take a chance with Meeting House, Raphael had Johnny Reiff to fall back upon, and it was Johnny who won the Derby for him on Tagalie last year.

But Mr. Raphael agrees with me that Frank O'Neill is the greatest jockey in Europe, and probably in the world just now, and he has contracted with Frank to ride Louvois in the Derby and other important races. So if American owners and horses fail in the Derby an American rider is quite likely to win it.

Louvois Shows.

Louvois is the colt of which I wrote last December: that if I had to make my selection for the Derby from last season's two-year-olds before they ran this season as three-year-olds, he would be my choice. Louvois not only showed speed last year but he impressed me as the most likely to carry it over the Derby route this year.

Judging from the manner in which he came from behind and wore down Craganour at one mile I expect Louvois to beat Ismay's colt easily at a mile and a half. To some extent this argument also applies to Whitney's Meeting House being likely to beat Craganour for the Derby. However, the talent makes Craganour favorite at present at 9 to 2.

Shogun is going to become a hot tip for Derby, but I can not stand for a colt with two splints coming down the hill at Epsom unless the going should be very soft, which it seldom is there.

Mr. Duryea's Boyne is by Irish Lad out of Running Water by Sir Dixon. He is being pointed for the Derby, so I hear from France.

Belmont's good Derby colt in France is Vulcain, by Rock Sand out of Lady of the Vale.

Mercer President Leads War on Frats

MACON, GA., May 29.—President S. Y. Jameson, of Mercer University, will himself, at the factulty meeting this afternoon, introduce a resolution to abolish the Greek letter fraternitels at Mercer University. The preamble of his resolution reads:

"Whereas the Baptists, immemorially standing for a State without a king and a church, without a bishop, have been apostles of liberty and equality, and whereas Greek letter fraternities are undemocratic in their very constitution as well as management, thereby creating class distinctions based on other grounds than merit and ability; therefore, be it resolved," etc.

Women Call Riding Astride Ban Silly

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Washington horsewomen consider General J. P. Hickman's order forbidding women to ride astride in the parade of the reunion of Confederate veterans at Chattanooga old-fashioned and out of date.

"I think the order foolish," said Mrs. Burleson, wife of Lieutenant Richard C. Burleson, of Fort Myer. "I am a Southern woman, but the new way of riding cross-saddle is much preferable."

Eight Girls Sold at Auction in Caucasia

LONDON, May 29.—Eight native girls between the ages of 15 and 18 were sold by public auction last week at Tereklimakteb, Caucasia, according to an Odessa dispatch to The Daily Mail.

There was lively bidding before the eight lots were disposed of. The highest price, $105, was paid for a handsome Tartar girl named Orsalia Ajalieff.

It is an immemorial custom of the Tartars and the Kalmucks to sell their superfluous daughters.

PELKY AND BURNS MAY BE TRIED ON JUNE 23

CALGARY, ALBERTA, May 29.—If Tommy Burns and Arthur Pelky ever come to trial on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of Luther McCarty, it will be on June 23 at the Supreme Criminal Court session.

Burns will not give out his plans, but it is said that he is being urged to abandon all connection with ring affairs.

Fargo dispatches giving McCarty's estate as worth $65,000 are grossly exaggerated. His property is worth about $12,000.

Floto Yearns for Days of Old Scores All Typewriter Fighters

By Otto C. Floto.

IN slanting a glance over the lightweight situation as it presents itself to us at the present time we are forced to the conclusion that there is more talk than doin' and more challenges flying back and forth than there are acceptances of the same. Take the whole list of the boys that claim this division as their own, each and every one of them have a chip on their shoulder and are aiming their 14-inch guns at Willie Ritchie, the titleholder. Their ammunition, however, is mostly "buncombe," and the almighty dollar is receiving far more attention in these deliberations than is the glory of becoming champion.

All of which forces us to lean back and sigh, "Oh, you fortunate champions of to-day. How lucky you are not to have been compelled to battle in the time when real fighters graced the roped inclosure." Days when the end was never in sight; days when the finish came only with the referee's count and the acknowledgment from the "seconds" of one or the other principal that his charge could go no further.

* * *

SOME may shrug their shoulders and say, "Yes, but those were the brutal days of the London prize ring." Maybe they were, but they also represented the period when gladiators of real merit held sway, days when it required a stout heart, stamina, a knowledge of wrestling as well as fighting, and an adept so far as the science and punching ability of the game went.

Seldom if ever did a champion return to the ring once the stigma of defeat was placed against his name. He retired in those days unless for some exceptional reason he was allowed to come back. His future connection with the game was as second, bottle-holder or representative of some champion. Tom Sayers, after his defeat by Langham, came back and, in support of the move, we need but add that he was never defeated again. He was a middleweight, while Langham was a heavy one when they fought.

* * *

TAKE the average run of the Queensberry babies we have in our midst at the present time and when they stagger up against defeat or adverse verdicts they hurry to the nearest typewriter and frame fifty-seven different varieties of alibis in a made endeavor to explain away their rout.

Mind, we don't wish you to misunderstand us in that the Queensberry code failed to produce great champions. On the contrary, it did. Jimmy Barry, Jack McAuliffe, Jack Dempsey, Jim Corbett, Fitzsimmons and others won titles under their clauses. But remember, too, that they all fought "TO A FINISH" in order to succeed to the emblem. The present day limited affairs were foreign to them.

* * *

MANY will wonder why John L. Sullivan's name is among those missing from the above list. Simple enough, and equally surprising to as many to learn that Sullivan won his title according to the L. P. R. rules. The only time he met defeat was by the Queensberry route. So that technically speaking Sullivan was never defeated for the title. He at any rate never lost it in the same manner in which he won it. The last London prize ring fight in this country was between Sullivan and Kilrain, at Richburg, Miss. This will perhaps be news to many as well.

With the abolition of the L. P. R. rules came a flock of "box fighters," to whom the limited round journey with eight-ounce gloves and Queensberry methods appealed as the short route to easy money. Over 70 per cent of this same band would have found employment at some other way of making a living had the old-time fashion of battles on the turf "to a finish" still been in vogue.

ZBYSZKO COLLAPSES IN MAT BOUT; LURICH WINS

NEW YORK, May 29.—George Lurich was awarded the decision over Stanislaus Zbyszko in the wrestling bout at Madison Square Garden when the latter failed after 16 minutes and 27 seconds of strenuous struggling on the mat.

The Polish champion was said to be suffering from the effects of a recent injury received at Montreal and his weakened condition resulted in his collapse in the ring.

BOXING

News of the Ring Game

Spider Britt is on the warpath. The little bantamweight read Meyer Pries' challenge in the Georgian the other day and says he will gladly meet Pries on a "winner-take-all" basis. Britt also states that he will give Meyer a side bet of $50. Let's hear from Pries!

* * *

Jack Dillon has finished hard training for his 10-round set-to with Frank Klaus Thursday night at Indianapolis. Dillon is down to the required weight and says he will be strong at 160 pounds, the figure both men have agreed to make.

* * *

Eddie Campi and Charles Ledoux will clash in the next bantamweight fight to be staged on the Coast. Tom McCarey signed the boys yesterday. They will meet on June 20 in a scheduled 20-round go.

* * *

Jack Britton will make his next fight against Jimmy Duffy, the tough Buffalo boy, on Thursday night. They will meet in Duffy's home town and Britton will have his hands full carrying away the verdict. The boys are billed to go ten rounds.

* * *

Matty McCue was handed a neat setback the other night. Matty attempted to land his haymaker on Patsy Brannigan's jaw, but the latter was far too clever for the Racine sensation and had a good shade at the end of the tenth round.

* * *

Another New Orleans fighter has been defeated. Frankie Russell tried hard to put the Pelican City back on the fighting map Monday night, but Lore proved too tough a customer for Frankie. The Eastern boy was given the newspaper verdict by a good margin.

COTTON WEAK ON EVE OF HOLIDAY

NEW YORK, May 29.—A break of 18 points in May was the feature of the cotton market at the opening of the cotton market to-day. June followed with a decline of 16 points and July 9 points from last night's close. New crop positions were under pressure, but only lost 4 to 6 points. The decline was due to private cables reporting a lockout in the mills of northern Lancashire, coupled with a bearish crop condition and acreage estimate by Miss Giles. She gave the condition of the crop to May 24 as 86.4 and acreage an increase of 3.7 per cent, indicating the acreage of 1913 would be 35,709,400 acres.

The weather map and sentiment were bearish, which encouraged the bears. The ring and certain brokers who usually represent spot interests were the leading sellers. After the call the list increased its decline 1 to 3 points from the opening. Liverpool was a good seller of July. There were about 5,000 bales and June notices issued, which were immediately stopped by good sources.

The bears were thunderstruck during the forenoon when shorts grasped the opportunity to cover and sent May back to 11.44, within 2 points of the previous close. July jumped to 11.40. Within fifteen minutes the entire list steadied within 2 to 6 points from Wednesday's final, or unchanged to 16 points above the opening range.

About the only condition issued to-day encouraging to the bulls was The Journal of Commerce, which was 80.5. However, there was a pressure to sell the market from all quarters, but the market took the selling remarkably well in the face of the bearish situation.

May went out at 11.36, a net loss of 8 points from the early high point.

The strength of the market was due to covering over the holidays. In addition to this the trade expects a bullish visible supply statement to-morrow. It is said that clearances from the Pacific coast of 18,630 goes in to-day's receipts and to-morrow's mill takings, which are expected to be bullish.

During the afternoon session the market was quiet. Price movement was practically unchanged from the opening level. It is believed that the market is on an even keel to go over the holidays. Should the government report Monday show the condition above 83 the market will be sold.

At the close the market was steady with prices net unchanged to 14 points lower than the final quotations of Wednesday.

HAYWOOD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, May 29.—With May drawig to a close near positions and spots are weakening, showing plainly that professional support and operations have alone held up prices. Liverpool this morning is 6@8 points down on old crops against one point lower due and 3 points downon new against 1 point to 2 points lower due. Political news is bad. It is feared that a general war will break out in the Balkans. A Liverpool cable again made strong reference to the probability of labor troubles in Lancashire.

Weather conditions continue very good; fair and warmer over entire belt; no rains except in the Carolina coast districts and fair and continued warm weather is indicated for the entire belt.

Our market opened 30 points down on May, 7 points down on July and 5 points on new crops. Support to new crops in New York checked selling pressure, but feeling is against the market. New York says that the strong support to new crops yesterday came from a Cincinnati operator. Between 6,000 and 8,000 tenders on May were made here this morning.

The into-sight for the week looks around 60,000 bales against 65,064 last year. We compare with mill takings of 159,000 bales for this week last year. They were small then owing to holidays, and, therefore, favorable comparisons are probable. After this week, however, to the end of the season consumption statistics have every prospect of comparing very unfavorably with those of last year; the contract market settled around 11.17 for October with trading very quiet. Some further covering in New York before the holidays caused steadiness.

MILLER-CARTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, TENN., May 29.—Several condition reports, all of bearish import, were issued to-day and the market was plainly of bearish temper. But Liverpool bought new crops on this side, undoing straddles and our markets have given appearance of steadiness, while Liverpool was weak, which is just the reverse of recent relations.

The weather is very favorable now and for the next few days.

With the holidays beginning to-night business is restricted, but we anticipate lower prices after the bureau.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 29.—The principal trading at the outset to-day was in July, which was very weak. Mitchell and Schill were the leading sellers of July. After the call Riordan, Rothschild, Schley and Hartcorn were principal buyers. The market was sold on bearish cables telling of a lockout in Lancashire and also on Miss Giles' report.

* * *

Weather news and sentiment were against the market, which helped the decline along.

* * *

Schill Mitchell and Hubbard sold July freely. The ring sold new crop months. Wilson, Munds and Riordan were the principal buyers of July.

* * *

The market sure hit the "toboggan" at the outset, but quickly recovered its course and rode the "airship."

* * *

The cotton seed oil market will be closed Friday, but will be open Saturday.

* * *

New Orleans wires: "About 7,000 notices out. Bullish visible expected to-morrow."

* * *

Miss Giles' condition figures were 2 per cent above the Government report last year, and if she had reported the same this year it would have been a bullish report.

* * *

Of the particular features of the market yesterday during the late trading was the weakness in the old crop positions, which was due partly to liquidation by foreign straddlers and partly against purchase of new crop and outside liquidation. May option was weak, promoted by big tenders, which was said to be for foreign accounts.

* * *

The market was flooded with private condition and acreage reports to-day, and the particular thing about them was that they were all bearish to the core. The acreage was given about 1,000,000 acres increase over the previous year.

* * *

* * *

* * *

It was learned yesterday that the heavy buying of new crop by Riordan on Tuesday was long buying for an operator connected with a large Cincinnati soap manufacturing concern.

* * *

* * *

* * *

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Excellent rains in the Atlantic States put an end to dry weather talk about that section. A promise now of rather heavy tenders in New Orleans to-day and a report to the effect that some of the cotton taken up on New York May contracts three weeks ago was retendered there yesterday helped foster bearish sentiment.

"Favorable weather has convinced the talent that improving crop advices will be received during the next week or two. Under the circumstances sellers outnumber buyers and the cotton market eased off. However, the talent is convinced that the market is a live corpse, with a kick, and nobody is now treating it as a dead one. Meanwhile New Orleans May closed at 12.35, a premium of 34 points over July, while New York May closed at 11.46, a discount of 9 points under July. New Orleans May stands at a premium of 89 points over New York May. If there be any scientific reason for such a remarkable difference between the two markets, the student of cotton has been unable to find it."

COTTON SEED OIL.

NEW YORK, May 29.—The cotton seed oil market was active and higher to-day on covering of shorts, new speculative buying, firmness in lard and buying of July, thought to be for refiners. Bulls took advantage of the light offerings to help along the advance.

Outside speculative longs were moderate sellers on the advance.

HARRIMAN ISSUES FEATURE STOCKS

Dissolution Plan Submitted by Judge Lovett Not Approved, Causing Weakness.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, May 29.—Moderate improvement was shown at the opening of the stock market to-day there being a noticeable absence of pressure. Reading and Union Pacific were strong features, the former gaining ¼ on earnings reports and the latter advancing ½ after selling ex-dividend of 2½. Amalgamated Copper opened at 73½, against 73 at the close last night.

Among the other advances were American Can, ¼; American Smelting, ⅝; Erie, ¼; Northern Pacific, ¾; Pennsylvania, ¼; Southern Pacific, ¼, and United States Steel common, ⅛.

Canadian Pacific was weak in consequence of selling in London and was 2¾ lower. Western Union, Erie and Atchison shaded fractionally.

There was some covering by traders who feared to go short over the three-day holiday.

The curb was steady.

Americans in London were irregular.

Southern Pacific sold to 95½, a decline of 1¼ from the opening and 1 point from the noon level. Union Pacific dropped to 148¾, for a loss of nearly a point from midday. Union Pacific seesawed throughout the last few minutes. Steel gained fractionally.

Of Amalgamated Copper, Pennsylvania, Frisco common and preferred and other stocks practically stood still.

The market closed steady. Government bonds unchanged; other bonds firm.

AMERICAN EXCHANGES TO CLOSE FRIDAY

Tomorrow being Decoration Day all American exchanges will be closed to business, with the exception of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange. All exchanges will be closed Saturday, with the exception of the Chicago Board of Trade.

All exchanges will reopen Monday for usual business.

The Liverpool Cotton Exchange will remain open throughout the holidays.

CHICAGO, May 29.—Contradictory reports were received on the weather in Kansas to-day and on this the prices jinged late. Wichita reported 97 degrees and Hutchinson and Dodge City each 100 degrees. As a partial offset to this were reports of showers in one or two sections and denials of the additional moisture later on. The May future was down 1¼ from the best price reached at one time and July was off 1c and September was ⅝c lower, but there were some reactions and advances as the day wore away and final figures showed May ¼c better, July ⅜c higher and September up ½c.

Corn closed unchanged to ⅛c lower and oats were unchanged to ⅛@¼c higher.

Provisions closed fractionally better.

COURSE OF WHEAT RELYING ON CHARACTER OF WEATHER

CHICAGO, May 29.—The Inter Ocean says: "It was the general belief of wheat traders last night that the market from now on will be governed largely by the character of the weather and crop reports. The bull interests contend that sufficient damage has been done to winter wheat to warrant higher prices.

"There were many bears on corn last night who expect lower prices with an increased movement, which is due from now on. Those who are buying on breaks advise the theory that the movement will not come up to expectations of the bears. Conservative people are advising caution in buying oats on bulges, although they believe that a continuation of the buying that has of late been seen will carry prices higher."

CHINCH BUGS DAMAGING GRAIN.

CHICAGO, May 29.—Great Bend, Kansas, says: "Rain is badly needed and grasshoppers are a menace."

Otis, Barton County, Kansas, says: "Our wheat crop is a total loss."

Omaha says: "Clear and hot over the State; temperature 72."

McPherson, Kansas, special reports high south winds absorbed moisture and made decided change in wheat outlook, besides millions of chinch bugs in wheat and corn.

Lawton, Okla., wires: "My information from unbiased sources indicates crop for State based as present condition about same as last year."

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, May 29.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: Wheat—The weather map shows mostly clear in the Northwest. We feel that purchases on breaks should be made.

Corn—Weather very favorable. We do not care to press the short side.

Oats—On any fair decline prefer the long side.

Provisions—The market seems to meet with good buying on all setbacks.

PONY CONTEST DRAWS ENTRANTS, CERTAIN OF SUCCESS, FROM AFAR

Atlanta children were the first to catch the fire of enthusiasm in The Georgian and American pony contest. The children out in the State and outside Georgia were a little slow at first.

But how they are coming now!

Every mail brings a heap of letters from distant addresses, and the letters are full of "ginger." Every girl or boy seems sure of winning.

Dorothy Davis, of Dothan, Ala., writes: "I have my subscription book, and so I am going to work in earnest now."

"Please send me subscription blanks, etc., so I can win a pony," as O. S. Morton, Jr., writes, is a more frequently used wording.

The flood of mail is becoming a serious problem. Once this week two men in the contest department worked all night answering letters, and then did not catch up entirely with the work. It is hoped, therefore, that contestants who do not receive answers the following day will remember that it is not always possible to go through all the letters, check all the votes and keep up with the routine work of the contest in a day, and be patient.

Names of contestants and their standing follow:

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Caponizing May Be Made Profitable Poultry Sideline

Can Be Made an Additional Source of Income—Questions and Answers.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

Caponizing may be made a profitable side line upon every well regulated poultry plant of any size.

If well managed, it may be made an additional source of income, particularly where there is not a very remunerative market for broilers.

Upon many poultry plants the surplus cockerels are marketed as broilers that they may be gotten out of the way before they have eaten their heads off, as the saying goes. There are locations, however, where it is not at all convenient to get them into a market that will pay good prices. Where such conditions prevail, then it is that the business of caponizing comes in play and can often be made to turn the young male into capons that will grow into money-makers. Of course, one must have the proper kind of stock or the operation will not be a paying one. Take, for example, the smaller laying breeds like the Leghorns. It does not pay at all to try to make a paying capon of them. The increased weight will not be enough to justify it. And the quality of the flesh will not be enough improved to pay for the work. Where one breeds any of the Rock or Wyandotte family, the Reds or Orpingtons, it will be all right, for they will all make good ones, not only as to size, but in quality as well. A good heavy-boned Plymouth Rock cockerel can often be made to weigh from eight to ten pounds at ten to twelve months of age, and bring the top of the market for capons, which is usually about double that of the ordinary fowl upon the market. This, of course, pays well for the little extra trouble that is incurred for the operation and the chances of loss. Of course, when it comes to a real business for the best there is in it the Light Brahma and the Buff Cochin make the finest and best capons. They are so tender in fiber and the skin so loosely put on that they will allow for almost any kind of growth without becoming hidebound, as will many of the smaller breeds.

The proper time for doing the work of caponizing is between the ages of two and three months, at the time when they will weigh about two pounds. It should not be done when they weigh less than this, and if one waits much longer they get older and the chances of loss are much greater. It will not take any one of average intelligence to get accustomed to the mode of operation so that there will not average a loss of more than one or two in a hundred, which does not amount to anything when compared to the great gain in growth to be obtained after it is performed.

A good set of instruments and the dexterity that comes from a little experience is all that is essential to success. Although it may be done at any time of the year, the most propitious time is during the spring and summer when everything is at its best for good growth. There are no special things required, or extra housing; just good feed and plenty of it.

It is not possible as a rule to market them in the country towns, but at the finest hotels and resort places, where the price is not so important as the quality of the meat. We have known a very good trade to be worked up for them at the holiday season by visiting private families in the towns, telling them what you have and the splendid quality they will get from you. Then they make mighty good eating for home consumption, so much better than attempting to eat the great overgrown, strong-flavored cockerels late in the fall and winter.

Questions and Answers.

Judge F. J. Marshall.—Is it advisable to feed oats to hens as it comes from the field; that is, without being clipped or ground? I have been feeding it about twice a week for some time, and my hens do not seem to thrive very well upon it. I would like to have your valued opinion about it. I shall thank you for the advice.
R. R. C., Locust Grove, Ga.

Answer.—It has been our experience to feed a good deal of oats to chickens of all ages from three months on up to grown fowls. When we did feed it, it was fed regularly once a day in moderate quantities and in connection with other grains. I believe your trouble is caused by your being afraid to feed it every day. Feeding as you have done but once a week the hens would fill up on it and get more than they really needed. When they get it every day they will only eat a small amount of it, then it is easily digested. We should advise you to feed it every day, at first in very small amounts, gradually increasing the amount. Always with some other grain, preferably cracked corn. Fed in this way, we see no real reason why you should have any trouble whatever, and it is a splendid food to induce laying along with corn. In fact, if one will take the trouble to parch it as coffee is browned in the oven until the points are almost burned, it will be the best laying food you can contrive. Do not, however, feed it to chicks under three months of age.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

New Hotel Ansley Will Open June 16

Building Completed at Cost of $500,000—West Harris Sale $20,000. Committee Meetings.

Monday, June 16, has been fixed as the date for the formal opening to the public of the Hotel Ansley, at the southwest corner of North Forsyth and James Streets. The hotel will be run on the European plan, and J. F. Letton will be the manager.

The structure was started in the spring of 1912, and is to cost $500,000. It is eleven stories high and contains 300 rooms. The Ansley Hotel Company is the builder. All but 40 of the rooms have private baths.

Interesting Deeds Recorded.

Deeds have gone to record in several interesting realty transfers. For $20,000 Mrs. Fannie B. Eady has sold to Mrs. Mabel H. Moody and Dayton Hale 41 and 43 West Harris Street, 50 by 192 feet and 100 feet west of Spring Street. The terms were $3,000 cash and four notes of $4,250 each, with interest at 6 per cent.

For $12,000 Mrs. Ellen McGowan Phelan Goldsmith has sold to William and J. A. Cook and G. R. Maddox 390 Whitehall Street, 50 by 196 feet, 100 feet southwest of Hood Street. The terms were $3,000 cash and the assumption of a $4,000 loan, with notes at 6 per cent.

For $5,000 E. A. Holbrook has sold to Sidney Hagerton a large building lot on Paces Ferry Road, 1,398 feet west of Tuxedo Drive. One thousand dollars was cash.

Healey Building Active.

The hole for the Healey Building foundations was fairly alive with steel girders Thursday morning. The steel gang has pushed this work fast since the arrival of the two monster derricks, and in another week there will be considerable framework in evidence. Thousands of people have stopped by to view the scene.

Peachtree Owners Hopeful.

Prominent members of the Peachtree Street property owners' committee, who appeared before the Finance Committee of Council this week to ask for $5,000 for widening Peachtree between Forsyth and Harris Streets, will go before that body again Friday morning. Considerable hope of success in this project has been expressed on account of the nominal amount asked for.

Whitehall's Chance Friday.

People conversant with city hall matters declare that Whitehall Street property owners have a better chance of an appropriation for regrading Whitehall than any of the various claimants who want improvements in different sections of the city. They base this assertion on the fact that council and the streets committee have already gone on record almost unanimously as favoring the Whitehall project, and the further fact that owners of property have raised $17,000 and are asking the city for only $30,000 for the improvement.

A citizen whose business is in the city hall declared that should Mayor Woodward see fit for any reason to veto the appropriation, council would doubtless pass the measure over his veto, since the project is one of city-wide concern.

The proposition which Whitehall interests have put up to council is to cut down greatly at Trinity Avenue and fill correspondingly at Brotherton, in order to perfect the grade and provide an improvement of lasting benefit. This agitation was started months ago by leading representatives of the populous South Side, the argument being that the city needed an extension of its retail district, and that southward on Whitehall was the logical course for this to take. Incidentally, real estate dealers who are interested along Whitehall contend that prices have been proportionately too low, and they anticipate a quick rise and much activity as soon as the prayed-for improvements are assured.

Decatur's Home-Coming Day.

Realty prospects desiring to acquaint themselves with the advantages of Decatur will find a good opportunity, say DeKalb county citizens, in the annual Home-coming Day, June 3. Not only will DeKalb's chosen leaders regale the assembled throngs with oratory, but a systematic effort will be made to show visitors just as much of Decatur as possible. This suburban town has made rapid strides in the last few years, and its citizens are expected to welcome the opportunity to exhibit some of the things that have been accomplished. Land values have climbed to an unbelievable degree, and what is more, people are buying it.

To Build $8,000 House.

A permit has been asked of Building Inspector Hays for a two-story frame dwelling for Frederick Fayram, at 41 Oakdale Road, Oruid Hills. Day labor will be used.

PROPERTY TRANSFERS.

The Stalwart Senate Should Stand by Our American Merchant Marine

The United States Senate fronts an opportunity and a duty in dealing with our merchant marine.

Public attention is rapidly focusing upon American maritime conditions, and it is high time that it did.

The favor with which the readoption of the early American discriminatory maritime policy is regarded by the thoughtful press and by influential Americans who are indifferent to foreign protests and threats is additionally reassuring.

Even more important, the people are realizing that an American deep sea shipping will form an urgently needed and entirely lacking secondary reserve for our navy.

Mr. Underwood's mere insertion of the thin edge of the wedge of discriminatory duties in his tariff bill has served to arouse both national and international interest.

Public indorsement of the policy is so strong that the stalwart Senate should promptly DRIVE IN THIS WEDGE. It will separate the United States from its trade agreements and conventions with other nations whose people know that the American navy will remain weak so long as it lacks the resource of a strong American shipping with officers and men.

The House tariff bill only provides a discount of 5 per cent of the duty on imports in vessels of American register. It applies to less than half our imports—only to those that are dutiable. It applies to only 10 per cent of our imports from South America, the other 90 per cent being duty free.

That discount will not suffice to attract American capital into oversea shipping with the new duties so low. The pending provision would give foreign yards the building of all the ships its enactment would bring under American register.

And finally there are conflicting opinions as to whether or not the withdrawal of the United States from trade conventions and agreements that now estop it from applying the policy is assuredly provided for.

THE SENATE MUST REMEDY EACH OF THESE DEFECTS AND OBSCURITIES. We must have a whole-hearted and not a half-hearted readoption and enforcement of the policy that gave American ships the carriage of 80 per cent of our imports and exports during all of the more than sixty years it was previously in force.

There is an overwhelming American demand for the repeal of all restraining conventions and suspensory laws that perpetuate our present maritime importance.

The need of the Nation, the need of our Navy, and the need of our foreign commerce alike demand it.

The Senate must infuse vigor and vim into this section of the House bill, so that its enforcement will fill every American shipyard with orders for oversea ships that will reassert American maritime independence and carry the American flag over all the seven seas to the business ports of the civilized world.

Big Business Men And Despotic Power

Judge Gary is the working head of the greatest industrial corporation in America—the United States Steel Corporation.

He is especially notable among the big business men of the country because he believes and has constantly declared during the last few years that the great interstate business concerns that now control most of the output of the necessaries of life MUST CEASE TO BE ARBITRARY AND DESPOTIC IN THE USE OF THIS POWER AND MUST SUBMIT THEMSELVES TO PUBLIC AUTHORITY.

Speaking to an organization of his business associates last week, Judge Gary remarked: "The President of the United States recently said that honest business need not be afraid. Well, let us be honest. Let us take him at his word; let us assume that he means exactly what he says."

The Georgian takes occasion to say that SOMETHING MORE THAN WHAT COMMONLY GOES BY THE NAME OF "HONESTY" IS NOW REQUIRED OF THE INDUSTRIAL LEADERS OF THE UNITED STATES.

What is required is that big business men shall have the high intelligence TO HATE THEIR OWN ARBITRARY POWER OVER THE INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATION OF THE COUNTRY.

It is time that these men should come to understand that it is absolutely impossible for the republic to submit to irresponsible power of any kind. IF THE REPUBLIC IS TO ENDURE, THE ECONOMIC DESPOTS CANNOT STAND.

The principle that all power over the essentials of life must be in the hands of men accountable to the people is the principle upon which the political and legal systems of the United States are founded. This is no fine-spun theory. It is a part of the everyday consciousness of the American man.

It follows from this principle that whenever any man in America is seen by the people to be exercising a selfish and unregulated power over the people's lives, IT IS IMPOSSIBLE FOR THE PEOPLE TO REGARD HIM OTHERWISE THAN AS A PUBLIC ENEMY.

The people are patient with private monopolies only so long as there is a reasonable doubt whether they really are private monopolies. But as soon as it becomes perfectly plain that certain men are levying private taxes upon the people, the people cannot and will not any longer have patience with such men.

Judge Gary has pointed out the right road for corporate managers who are suspected and who suspect themselves of being monopolists. Many months ago he told a committee of Congress that the industrial trusts must be controlled by the Government—even to the legal limitation of dividends and of commodity prices. In short, Judge Gary is the one corporation manager in the country whose intelligence has been absolutely clear on the point that no monopoly can endure in a republic—EXCEPT A PUBLIC MONOPOLY.

In quoting the words of President Wilson last week, Judge Gary spoke truly enough—but feebly. He has often spoken better from other texts.

It is not by mere scrupulosity, not by mere freedom from rascality, that big business men are to set themselves right before the country or to set the country right in the light of its democratic tradition.

THE COUNTRY EXPECTS TO SEE AN UPRISING OF BIG BUSINESS MEN, WHO ARE AMERICANS MORE THAN THEY ARE MONOPOLISTS—WHO HATE ARBITRARY AND DESPOTIC POWER AND ARE DETERMINED TO PUT IT DOWN.

Rev. John E. White Writes on The Biggest Politics

R R

Three Great Races---the Teuton, Slav and Mongolian---Are Lined Up on the Map of the World, and the American People Are at a Perilous Point About It.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN
By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE
Pastor Second Baptist Church

IT was stated that Dr. John Bassett Moore had been brought into President Wilson's administration with no reference whatever to politics.

That was a very great mistake. Dr. John Bassett Moore is First Assistant Secretary of State precisely because he is such a politician — the broadest, biggest, world-wideliest politician at Washington.

The sort of politics that absorbs Professor Moore's attention is not as scrappy as the race for Constable in a small town, but for variety, strategy and ominousness it is the big game of the world.

It has been Professor Moore's life work to study the vaster forces of the human movement called civilization. He is the astronomer of the Democratic administration. With his telescope sweeping immense political areas, he locates the points of disturbance in the field of civilization and tells his superiors what to do about it.

He keeps a wise eye on the great mass formations in the scrimmage of nations and races. He has a man's job all right.

The Big Line-Up.

At this moment three great races—the Teuton, Slav and Mongolian—are lined up on the map of Europe and Asia.

They are looking each other in the eyes and each is confident of its ultimate ascendency. This is politics more than continental or international. It is the biggest, deepest, most titanic situation of human competition the mind of man ever contemplated.

The smaller questions occupying the foreground of public interest are bagatelles compared with the issue presented by racial ambition. Such immense energies are involved that to think of them as let loose upon each other appals the imagination.

Outside university cloisters, from which Dr. John Bassett Moore has emerged, few people have dared to entertain the problem of collision on so colossal a scale. Within each of these great race masses we are told that instinctive tendencies are not controlling the point of view of diplomacy, and these tendencies have become manifestly contripetal.

The family disputes within each of the race groups are to grow less and less frequent under the resistless pressures of race unities. Quarrels between England and Germany, for instance, or between Russia and the smaller Slav States, are decreasingly capable of serious consequences.

The get-together race movement is dominating the motive in world politics and the indications are that the Mongolian race will be the first to arrive at the goal of solidarity in a political game.

The Japanese Imbroglio.

Here is uncovered the background which renders American complications with Japan at the present time a subject of intense solicitude all over the world. The London Times is not given to groundless alarm and its Foreign Editor, Sir Valentine Chirot, has just sounded a solemn note on the subject:

"The ultimate point of dispute," he says, "does not affect the United States alone, still less California. It is a world question essentially. Fears of the inhabitants of the Pacific slope may be premature, but they are not entirely groundless. They spring from the instinct of self-preservation and if the present minor dispute is composed they will assuredly recur."

Commenting editorially on the situation, The Times says that: "However it may be settled now, the issue will have to receive the earnest attention of the white races in times to come."

The American people have heretofore occupied a superior attitude toward this "big politics" and has kept away from it, but fate seems now about to thrust upon us the necessity of putting out our hand toward it.

It is impossible to exaggerate the consequences which depend upon the hand we put out. If it is a fist we may as well get ready to tax ourselves, our children and children's children with the cost. There will be the price of trouble enough to last a hundred years.

Putting Our Fist In.

The expense of warships and army equipment is an insignificant item in the reckoning. The losses in markets affecting American labor and capital, and particularly the cotton trade through a long period would be staggering.

But the really great sacrifice that a gladiatorial attitude our part in the problem of big politics would exact of us would be the surrender of the moral supremacy in relation to these things which the founders of the American republic committed to us and which the historians have cheerfully accorded.

Is it not our better destiny to play the part of a big, fearless, chivalric brother with courage, firmness and wisdom, and with fairness and patience, than to seek the role of the "Big Fist," or the "Big Stick" with the commonplace distinction which history has committed to all its boastful and selfish peoples?

Letters From The Georgian's Readers

FREE SCHOOL BOOKS.

Editor The Georgian:

The Constitution of Georgia provides for free public schools and provides a school fund for the support of such schools. The Constitution further provides for local taxation for public schools.

I hope that the Legislature will pass a law authorizing the State School Commissioner or some other public authority to purchase for the use of the public schools of the State all school books necessary for the children attending the schools.

This law would result in the saving of thousands of dollars annually to the people of Georgia.

I do not think the State itself should embark in the publication of free school books, but I am sincerely of the opinion that the State and towns and cities should furnish free school books.

A few of the reasons for my opinion are as follows:

1. The child of the poor man has the same chance to obtain an education as the child of the rich or well-to-do man.

2. The "thorough system of common schools" provided for by the Constitution of Georgia is thus made in fact a "thorough system" because to the free school house and free tuition is added free school books.

3. The work of the school can be begun without delay when school books are furnished at public expense and thus become effective from the beginning of the school term.

4. Uniformity in the use of school books throughout the State is thus secured—although under the Georgia adoption law uniformity is already obtained in the County schools.

5. The common schools, established for the education of the common people, are made popular and attendance is encouraged and prolonged.

6. The school books are public property and through the use of them respect for public property may be taught.

The following States have laws providing for free school books for the public schools: Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Nebraska, Maryland, Wyoming and Utah.

WHY IS A FIRETRAP?

Editor The Georgian:

The Georgian quoted Professor Slaton, superintendent of Atlanta public schools, the other day as saying, "The Atlanta schools are firetraps."

The firetrap may be avoided by insisting that the architect observe the following simple rules: Every school house of more than one story should have at least two stairways, located at extreme opposite ends of the building, so that should fire break out at, say, the east end, and block that exit, the west end stairway would be the last part of the building to burn.

The stairs should not be located in the main corridors, where they would form a trap in case of panic, but in separate stairway halls, running out at right angles to the main corridors. They should land in immediate proximity to the exits, so the pupil will not have to run through the building looking for a way out. They should be 4½ feet wide, and have small round hand rails on both sides.

The main corridors leading to exits should be entirely free from obstruction of all kinds. The corridors should give free and unobstructed passage directly to exit doors that open outward at a slight push from inside.

Have all the steps that lead to the first floor on the outside of the building, so that if, in a rush to get out, a child falls or is thrown down he will be on the outside, where he can be rescued. Have no inside vestibule steps.

Locate heating plant near the center of the building, in an absolutely fireproof room, with entrance from outside the building only.

STEVENS BOY NOT SLAYER, DECLARES FATHER

"Red" Merchant, companion of Wade Stevens, was arrested at Chattanooga by Detective John Black shortly after he took the Stevens boy into custody. Black will leave Chattanooga with the two prisoners at 8 o'clock this evening over the Southern Railway, according to a message to Chief Beavers. Other dispatches received say Black and the two boys have already left.

Wade Stevens, son of William Stevens, whose wife and daughter were murdered and whose bodies were found in the charred ruins of their home, seven miles southeast of Atlanta, was arrested in Chattanooga at noon to-day. The DeKalb County Coroner's jury had recommended that the young man be arrested and held for investigation.

The Governor to-day offered a reward of $200 for the arrest of the slayer.

At almost the precise minute when Wade Stevens was arrested in Chattanooga, William Stevens, his father, having just arrived in Atlanta, made a statement to The Georgian completely exonerating the boy. The elder Stevens said his landlady, who knew Wade, had seen him in Chattanooga early Wednesday morning. This was just about the time the crime was discovered and only a few hours after its commission.

Detective John R. Black, of Atlanta, who was in Chattanooga attending the reunion, arrested young Stevens in the reunion city. He wired Chief of Police Beavers and was told to hold the young man, pending arrival of requisition papers.

Chief of Police Beavers then announced he would confer with Sheriff McCurdy, of DeKalb County, before taking further steps.

Sheriff McCurdy later asked that Black bring the boy back, and Chief Beavers wired the detective to that effect. The police point out that if the boy took the 8 o'clock train Tuesday night to Chattanooga he, of course, is eliminated from the case.

Father Brokenhearted.

The father of the boy, a 70-year-old Confederate veteran, was heartbroken when he arrived in Atlanta at 10:50 o'clock this morning and heard for the first time of the double tragedy.

Stevens left Chattanooga at 3 o'clock this morning, but the train was delayed en route. Several friends went to the Union Depot to meet him, but he came from a rear car and left the station without meeting them.

The only information given him in Chattanooga was that his house had burned. Leaving the depot here, he went direct to the office of Carson & Treadwell, who handled his wife's real estate, where he learned all the details.

One of the firm of Carson & Treadwell told him of the double murder, and that his son, Wade Stevens, was wanted for investigation. The old veteran was dumfounded. He sank in a chair and remained silent for several minutes, then dramatically expressed belief in the innocence of his son and declared he would spend the remainder of his days hunting the slayer.

Declares Boy Is Innocent.

"All I have to live for now is to try to catch the murderer," he said. "I'll spend the rest of my days hunting him."

While in Chattanooga Stevens boarded at 166 Rosaville Avenue. His son by a former marriage, Ed Stevens, also boarded there. The missing son, Wade Stevens, had stopped there previously and is well known to the landlady, who said she saw him in front of her home at 6 o'clock Wednesday morning.

"I believe my boy is innocent of this murder," said Mr. Stevens. "He was bad at times, but he never could have stooped so low as to murder his own mother and sister. He knows nothing about it yet.

"I know he had nothing to do with

STATE LOSES FALLS FIGHT

CLAYTON, GA., May 29.—The jury hearing the case of the State against the Georgia Railway and Power Company in the great fight over Tallulah Falls late this afternoon returned a verdict for the defendant.

The verdict decides against the State in its claim that the Georgia Railway and Power Company illegally held the gorge of the falls. The fight involved millions of dollars.

Infant Scalded By Fall In Boiling Tub

Stumbling into a tub of boiling water late Thuasday afternoon, little R. C. Hull, infant son of C. C. Hull, of 50 Berne Street, was so badly scalded that physicians at the Grady Hospital say he has little chance of life.

The child, three and a half years old was playing in the room where his mother had been washing, when he tripped and fell headforemost. His mother heard his screams of agony and pulled him out of the tub. Neighbors summoned an ambulance from Grady and record time was made on the run to the hospital but there is little hope held out for the child's life. The child was scalded from his knees to his head.

One Dead, 2 Dying Defending $10,000 From Holdup Gang

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., May 29.—Word reached the sheriff's office here this afternoon that one man was killed and three wounded in a pitched battle between holdups and company employees at the Illinois zinc works at Peru, Ill., LaSalle County.

The attempt was made to hold up the company paymaster who had the monthly pay roll in his possession. The amount is said to have been $10,000. It is not known here whether the robbers got the money or not.

The sheriff of LaSalle County sent here for the local bloodhounds to trail the bandits. Deputy Sheriff Walters, with two dogs, left for Peru at 4 o'clock. There were five robbers in the gang and all escaped.

The dead man is a company employee as are also the three wounded, two of whom are dying.

BURNS JOINS IN HUNT FOR PHAGAN SLAYER

James Conley, the negro sweeper at the National Pencil Factory who has turned suspicion on himself with a maze of contradictory statements, was put through a gruelling third degree examination at police headquarters this afternoon. Pinkerton Detective Harry Scott said as the grilling began before Chief Beavers and Chief Lanford that he expected to glean important information. Scott had interviewed factory employees and was convinced that there were many things to be cleared up before the negro's second affidavit, on which the police rely so much, could be accepted.

With the maze of contradictory statements sweeping an avalanche of suspicion upon the head of James Conley, the negro sweeper, the potent information was unearthed Thursday that Detective William J. Burns personally will take charge of the investigation into the Mary Phagan murder case which his operatives have been conducting.

Despite the published report that the Burns operatives had withdrawn from the case, and despite the procedure of the State in prosecuting its case against Leo M. Frank, the pencil factory superintendent, the Burns investigation will continue and from now on be under the famous detective's direction.

This information came from Detective C. W. Tobie, William J. Burns' lieutenant, Thursday morning. It tends to show that Tobie, who has had charge of his agency's investigation here, does not consider the case as closed.

Mr. Tobie went so far as to deny emphatically the published interview with him, in which he was quoted as declaring Frank to be the guilty man.

Takes Evidence to Burns.

"From the evidence so far developed in the Phagan case, guilt is directed at Frank," the detective said with emphasis. "That was my statement. However, I was quoted as saying outright that Frank committed the murder. That was not true."

Mr. Tobie left Atlanta Thursday afternoon. He carried with him the evidence which he has gathered during his two weeks' probe of the case. He is going to New York. He will meet Burns there and place his material into the noted detective's hands. From then on Detective Burns will direct his operatives as to further investigations to be outlined by him.

This information but proves another link in the chain of circumstances which The Georgian has consistently pointed out in serious incrimination of Conley.

Negro Deeper in Suspicion.

With each cross-examination of the negro by the police in their attempts to secure more evidence against Frank, Conley has only insnared himself in guilt. His admitted falsehoods in former affidavits tending to throw the blame to Frank in connection with the "murder" notes have been accentuated as incriminating by the unqualified declarations of employees at the pencil factory that Conley is the guilty man.

Three responsible officials of the plant have outlined plausible theories as to how the negro could have committed the crime. These men, Herbert G. Schiff, who is assistant superintendent; E. F. Holloway, timekeeper, and N. V. Darley, general foreman, are acquainted with Conley. Upon their knowledge of him and the opportunity offered for accomplishing the murder they base their statements that he is guilty. They have proven beyond a doubt that Conley was in the factory for several hours on the day of the murder, and connecting with this the negro's contradictory statements as to his whereabouts they have compiled a most laudable explanation of how he killed the Phagan girl.

The detectives still held firmly to

BRADY IS HIT HARD BY DOBBS' BOYS

PONCE DE LEON BALL PARK, May 29.—Johnny Dobbs' Billikens took the opening game of their series with the Crackers, 7 to 4 this afternoon.

Bill Smith's men secured an early lead, but the Billikens managed to pile up runs near the finish. Brady was hit hard and was given wretched support.

Case twirled for the visitors and pitched air-tight ball in the final innings.

THE GAME.

FIRST INNING.

Walker walked. Wares sacrificed, Brady to Agler. Manning singled to right and Walker scored. Sloan fouled to Smith. Kutina grounded to Bisland and Manning was forced at second. ONE RUN, ONE HIT.

Long singled through Manning. Welchonce grounded to Knaupp and Long was forced at second to Wares. Alperman out, Manning to Kutina, and Welchonce went to second. Bailey singled through Wares and Welchonce took third. Welchonce and Bailey worked a double steal, Welchonce scoring and Bailey going to second. The latter took third on Wares' wild return to the plate. Smith flied to Jantzen in deep left. ONE RUN, TWO HITS.

SECOND INNING.

Jantzen went out, Alperman to Agler. Knaupp flied to Smith. Gribbens flied to Bailey. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

Bisland flied to Jantzen. Agler singled over Case's head. Chapman flied to Sloan. Brady singled to right and Agler went to third. Long was there in the pinch with a timely single to center and Agler tallied. Welchonce out, Kutina to Case. ONE RUN, THREE HITS.

THIRD INNING.

Case went out, Alperman to Agler. Walker grounded out, Bisland to Agler. Bisland took Wares' grounder and threw him out to Agler. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

Alperman flied to Sloan. Bailey popped to Knaupp. Smith fanned. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

FOURTH INNING.

Manning fouled to Chapman. Sloan grounded out, Bisland to Agler. Kutina walked. Jantzen singled to left. Knaupp grounded to Smith, who touched third, forcing Kutina. NO RUNS, ONE HIT.

Bisland singled to left. Agler struck out. Chapman hit a Texas leaguer back of second and Bisland went to third. On the throw to catch Bisland at third Chapman pedaled down to second. Brady slipped a single past Kutina and Bisland and Chapman scored. Long grounded to Knaupp and Brady was forced at second to Wares. Long stole second. Welchonce went out, Manning to Kutina. TWO RUNS, THREE HITS.

FIFTH INNING.

Gribbens singled over Brady's head. Case went out, Smith to Agler and Gribbens raced to third. Walker grounded out to Agler. Wares singled to left and Gribbens scored. Long handled the ball badly and Wares took second. Tommy then threw wild to Alperman and Wares raced to third. Manning singled and Wares registered. Sloan singled to right and Manning took third. Kutina grounded to Smith and Sloan was out at second to Alperman. TWO RUNS, FOUR HITS.

Alperman flied to Sloan, who dropped the ball for an error. Bailey bunted to Case and was out to Kutina. Smith fanned. Bisland fouled out to Gribbens. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

SIXTH INNING.

Jantzen singled to right. Knaupp flied to Long. Jantzen stole second. Gribbens grounded to Brady, who threw wild to second in an attempt to get Jantzen and on the error Jantzen scored the tying run. Case hit into a double play to Bisland, forcing Gribbens to Alperman, who relayed the ball to Agler, catching Case. ONE RUN, ONE HIT.

Agler popped to Knaupp. Chapman also popped to Knaupp. Brady beat out a grounder to Wares and on the latter's wild throw to Kutina, Brady took second. Long out, Knaupp to Kutina. NO RUNS, ONE HIT.

SEVENTH INNING.

Walker hit in front of the plate and was safe when Agler dropped Chapman's throw. Wares lined out to Alperman. Manning flied to Long. Walker tried to steal second and was safe when Alperman dropped Chapman's throw. Sloan hit over third, but Walker was hit by the ball, retiring the side. NO RUNS, ONE HIT.

Welchonce grounded out to Kutina, Alperman popped to Kutina. Bailey singled through Kutina. Smith beat out a hit down the third base line. Bisland fouled out to Manning. NO RUNS, TWO HITS.

EIGHTH INNING.

Kutina walked. Jantzen beat out a bunt in front of the plate. Knaupp sacrificed, Brady to Alperman. Gribbens was walked intentionally. Case fanned. Walker grounded to Bisland and beat it out for a hit, Kutina scoring. Wares singled in front of the box and Jantzen scored. Manning popped to Alperman. TWO RUNS, THREE HITS.

Agler out, Wares to Kutina. Chapman out, Knaupp to Kutina. Brady singled to right. Long out, Wares to Kutina. NO RUNS, ONE HIT.

NINTH INNING.

Sloan out, Alperman to Agler. Kutina out, Smith to Agler. Jantzen singled through Bisland. Jantzen stole second. Knaupp hit a three-bagger to left and Jantzen scored. Gribbens out, Alperman to Agler. ONE RUN, TWO HITS. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

MAZE OF LIES BY CONLEY CLOUD MYSTERY

their theory that the negro was the most important witness against Leo M. Frank, in the face of the contradictory stories and lies in which he had been trapped.

They were strongly disposed to give full credence to Conley's second affidavit, although the negro's sudden anxiety to talk after three weeks of silence and the maze of falsehood in which he was at once involved served suddenly to shift the responsibility for Mary Phagan's death from Leo Frank to the sullen black man, in the judgment of many who have been following the evidence closely.

Chief Lanford and Detective Harry Scott, of the Pinkertons, announced Thursday morning, however, that they regarded the second affidavit of Conley as the final and conclusive piece of evidence needed in preparing a case against Frank.

Rejected First Affidavit.

Others who have weighed the evidence carefully declare there are many more significant indications that Conley was the slayer than there are reasons to believe that Frank is guilty.

The detectives rejected the first affidavit of Conley, in which he said Frank dictated Friday the notes that were found by the body of the slain girl Sunday morning on the ground that it was absurd and unbelievable to hold the theory that the murder was premeditated.

Yet they accept the second affidavit, which indicatesidentically the same thing, in that Frank met Conley at Nelson and Forsyth Streets before 11 o'clock Saturday morning, April 26, before the crime was committed, and told the negro to wait for him, later taking Conley to the factory with him, where Conley says that he wrote the notes at Frank's direction.

The negro in his second affidavit suggests no other motive that could have impelled Frank to ask him to come to the factory shortly before noon on Saturday. Conley says that Frank told him to wait secreted on the first floor until he heard a whistle. When he heard the whistle he says he went upstairs and Frank dictated the notes.

Why Many Suspect Conley.

All of this is inescapably suggestive of premeditation on the part of Frank, if Conley's story is to be believed, but the theory of premeditation has been scoffed at by everyone, including Chief Lanford and Harry Scott.

In fact, it never seriously was considered by anyone, say those who are inclined to believe the evidence against Conley greatly outweighs that against Frank. The assertion is freely made that it would be far easier to convict Conley, if the police were so disposed, than it will be to convict Frank. Here are a few reasons advanced:

When the factory superintendent was permitted to go before the Coroner's jury by his attorney, he answered all the questions in a straightforward, unwavering manner, never once being trapped in a lie or misstatement.

In marked contrast is the conduct of Conley ever since his arrest at the time of the inquest three weeks ago. When discovered at the factory, he was washing a shirt which he sought to hide from the person who had found him out.

He was taken into custody and gave his address as 92 Tattnall Street. Investigation disclosed that Conley was lying and that he had not lived on Tattnall Street for months, his actual residence being 172 Rhodes Street.

He was asked to write, and he told the officers he could not write a word. He refused to be inveigled into making an attempt at handwriting of any sort. He would not put a pencil to paper that the detectives might get a specimen of his penmanship. For a long time they believed he was so ignorant he could not write his own name. Then they found some leases he had signed for watches and knew that he had been lying again.

Just as the Grand Jury was about to sit and it appeared likely that Frank would be indicted, the negro broke his silence for the first time. He told the detectives that it was he who had written the notes, but that he had written them at Frank's dictation on Friday, April 25. Frank had approached him in an aisle at the factory and had asked him to come into the office, he said. He remembered that it was four minutes before 1 o'clock.

That he had been at the factory Saturday he denied emphatically. Between 10 o'clock in the forenoon and 2 o'clock in the afternoon he had been on Peters Street, according to his story.

The detectives ridiculed his story and continued examining. Gradually he broke down under their questioning, and it was established that he had been lying again and that he actually had been in the factory Saturday, presumably at the very time the girl was murdered. This was the first time his presence in the factory on Saturday had been known.

He had kept it a most profound secret up to the time it was gouged out of him by the detectives. He weakened further and admitted that he had been hiding down on the first floor as persons went in and out.

He described practically every person that entered or left the factory between 12 and 1 o'clock. But he declared that he did not see Mary Phagan when she came in the building. Out of all who entered or left, the murdered girl and Lemmie Quinn appear to be the only ones he missed seeing, according to his story.

He explained this by saying that he must have fallen asleep for a little while. He saw Miss Corinthia Hall and Mrs. Freeman leave a few minutes before 1 o'clock, but did not see Mary Phagan enter about five minutes after the hour. Neither did he see Lemmie Quinn, who is said to have been at the factory about 12:15.

If the negro's final affidavit is taken as nearer the probable truth than his first, those who are acquainted with Frank are of the opinion that there are still most important questions to be answered convincingly. They are these, assuming that Frank is guilty:

"Why should a man of Frank's intelligence—a man who is highly educated and who has won a position of responsibility—virtually make a confidant of another man, especially an ignorant negro, easily broken down by the third degree of the police station?

"Why should a man of sense, if he wished to keep his crime undiscovered, proclaim it to the negro, in his office by the question: 'Why should I hang?'"

"Why should he approach this negro more than an hour before this crime was committed?

MORSE TRYING TO RULE COAST SHIPS

Banker, Pardoned When "Dying," Purchases Steamers for New York-to-South Trade.

NEW YORK, May 29.—Charles W. Morse, convicted of bank wrecking after the 1907 panic and pardoned by President Taft on the ground that he was dying, is not only attempting to secure a monopoly of Hudson River steamship traffic, but is reaching out along the Atlantic Coast.

This became known to-day when it was learned that Morse has bought four lake steamers for coastwise trade between New York and Southern ports and will attempt to become the dominant figure in steamship traffic on the Atlantic Coast he was planning to become when the financial earthquake of 1907 upset his schemes.

The ships are so big they can not be brought through the canal connecting Lakes Erie and Ontario, consequently they will have to be reduced in size. They will be enlarged after they reach this port.

Morse may extend his operations to the Pacific when the Panama Canal is completed.

FELDER BRIBERY CHARGE EXPECTED

Believed Beavers Will Try to Have Grand Jury Consider Accusations Against Attorney.

That bribery charges against Colonel Thomas B. Felder and others will be placed before the Fulton County Grand Jury by police officials, was the indication when G. C. February, secretary of Chief of Detectives Lanford, and the person alleged to have been offered $1,000 in bribe money, secured a subpena Thursday afternoon for A. S. Colyar, Jr., to appear before Solicitor General Dorsey and give testimony Friday morning.

The subpena formally summoned Colyar, who was the author of the dictographing of Felder and Mayor Woodward, to appear before the Grand Jury. The preliminary hearing, however, will be in Solicitor Dorsey's office.

That February carried away with him a number of subpena blanks is taken to mean that others will be called upon to testify.

At the hearing of testimony Friday morning it is believed that Lanford and Police Chief Beavers will endeavor to show Solicitor Dorsey the plausibility of their bribery charges and ask that the matter be placed before the Grand Jury.

In line with this action, Chief Beavers called upon Carl Hutcheson, the attorney, again Thursday morning for the list of "protected disorderly houses" which Hutcheson declared he held, and which Hutcheson said he would reveal in an effort to prove that vice under police protection is rife in Atlanta.

Hutcheson three days ago, in answer to Beavers' defi, declared that he would give the police official the list on Thursday. On that day, however, Hutcheson stated the list was not yet prepared. He informed Beavers he would have it ready, though, within a short time.

Colyar was formally released Thursday of the $1,000 bonds under which he was given his liberty following forgery charges made against him by a Knoxville, Tenn., woman.

Colyar's release followed the failure of the Knoxville police authorities to send a man to Atlanta to take him back at the time specified by Police Chief Beavers.

"Yesterday afternoon the landlady told me the house had burned down. She knew Wade, and she told me she saw him in front of her house yesterday morning, wearing overalls just as when he is said to have left home. Two boys were with him, but they didn't go in the house. Wade was in Chattanooga when my wife and daughter were murdered, and he couldn't have done it."

Goes to See Ruins.

Leaving Carson & Treadwell's office, Mr. Stevens said he was going to the ruins of his home. He first visited the Patterson undertaking establishment and arranged for the funeral of his wife and daughter. Both bodies will be taken to Meansville, Ga., at 4 o'clock Friday morning, to be buried in the family lot, where Mrs. Stevens' father and mother both have been interred in the last two years.

Lonnie Blevins, 17 years old, who says he left San Francisco for Tampa and from there came to Atlanta, is held at police headquarters to-day. He said he arrived in Atlanta last Friday. He was detained because he could not give a connected story. The police attach little significance to his arrest or his presence in Atlanta.

Tells of Attempted Attack.

An important clew, given Sheriff J. A. McCurdy, of DeKalb County, who is in charge of the investigation, was revealed in the statement of a neighbor to the effect that a Mexican halfbreed, formerly employed by Mrs. Stevens, had attempted to attack Nellie Stevens some time ago.

This declaration was made by Miss Josephine McCaulay, 790 Glennwood Avenue, an intimate friend of both the slain mother and daughter. Miss McCaulay said that only a few days ago Mrs. Stevens had told her of shooting at the discharged halfbreed when he appeared at the country home. Mrs. Stevens had said that she fired twice at the man, and that he escaped into the clump of woods adjoining the house. Sheriff McCurdy has ordered a country-wide search made for the halfbreed.

Discovery Wednesday morning that Mr. Stevens had purchased an axe some days ago offers a possible clew to the weapon used by the murderer in crushing the skulls of his victims. The axe is, so far, missing, though the ruins of the burned dwelling and surrounding vicinity have been carefully searched for it.

Ax Apparently Used.

The sharp, knifelike cut across the top of Nellie Stevens' skull seems to bear out the theory that the murderer used the ax to slay his victims.

Possibility that the weapon used by the murderer was thrown into the well near the house has lead Sheriff McCurdy to order the well dragged.

Atlanta police and detective officials have joined with the DeKalb force to solve the mystery. Detective Chief Lanford assigned Mounted Policeman Hamilton, who was a close friend of the Stevens family, and Detective Rosser to work on the case. Sheriff McCurdy obtained this reinforcement Thursday morning when he held a conference with Lanford.

A unique incident of the blaze which burned the Stevens home to ashes was revealed in the finding of fifty-seven chickens dead in a coop fifty feet away. The coop was not even scorched by the heat.

That robbery was the motive of the murderer has been established by the disappearance of jewelry and a large quantity of money which Mrs. Stevens was known to have had in the house at the time.

Woman's Jewels Missing.

Neighbors stated that Mrs. Stevens possessed a diamond ring valued at $400 and two gold watches. These are missing.

Coupled with other theories as to the murder is one which shows the work that of two negroes who were said to have been seen driving away from the burning home at sunrise Wednesday morning. The men rode in a one-horse wagon, the body of which was filled with oats. Tracks of the horse were found on a spot near the ruins. In the immediate vicinity was discovered a small pile of fresh oats. Human footprints were found nearby.

Despite the assertion that the negroes drove away, Sheriff McCurdy's men made a careful search of the woods surrounding the home, believing it highly probable that the murderer might have hidden therein to watch the burning house, and will scour the woods again to-day. Another theory is that he might have been wounded by Mrs. Stevens before he killed her, and had been forced to drag himself to the woods for escape. That the man may be lying there now is a possibility expressed by the police. The shell found in the shotgun used by Mrs. Stevens was found to have been discharged.

Does Bible Give Clew?

A search Thursday morning of an old deserted cabin 100 yards from the destroyed Stevens' home, in which Mrs. S. C. Stevens and her adopted daughter, Nellie, were murdered and then cremated, disclosed a Bible containing numerous marked passages, tragically coincident with the reported conduct of her own son toward her. This cabin was occupied at different times by negro servants who worked on the Stevens place. It had been vacant for three weeks.

In the list of the Ten Commandments, two of them were marked in pencil. They were:

"Thou shalt not kill."

"Honor thy father and thy mother."

Several passages in the book of Exodus were marked, all bearing on the relation of the son to the parents. One of these reads:

"And he that smiteth his father or his mother shall surely be put to death."

Verses of the same chapter were also marked, one reading:

"And he that curseth his father or his mother shall surely be put to death."

"And if any mischief follow, then thou shalt surely give life for life."

Negro Is Sought.

Walter Wilkes, a negro, who occupied the deserted cabin until three weeks ago, is being sought by officers Thursday in the general plan of investigating every one on whom suspicion might possibly turn. Where he went after leaving the Stevens home has not been learned.

The search of the cabin revealed discarded clothing, supposed to have been left by Wilkes. The clothing is said to have been damp. On an old table was also found a caseknife.

In the corner of the room was an old ax. It bore spots, but these are believed to be rust. This is not thought to be the missing Stevens' ax, which was practically new and bright. Sheriff McCurdy said Thursday he believed this ax was at the bottom of the well in the yard of the burned home.

Search is also being made for an unidentified negro who once worked for a Mrs. Nort, said to be a friend of Mrs. Stevens. This negro wrote Mrs. Nort a letter asking her for a recommendation, but she failed to grant his request. Last Saturday the negro is said to have called her up over the telephone and remarked that he didn't need a recommendation anyway, "that he was working for her friend, Mrs. Stevens." No one has been found who knows anything of this negro. He is described as being black and thick.

Gun Shell Is Found.

B. R. Peavy, a farmer who was on the scene of the crime all night, made an extended search of the ruins, and in the room where the charred bodies were found discovered a shotgun shell. The primer was dented, indicating that it had been fired. The single-barreled shotgun found beside the remains of Mrs. Stevens was empty. Peavy also found a discharged revolver cartridge, of .38 caliber. Mrs. Stevens' revolver is said to have been of .32 caliber.

Her revolver is still missing.

The finding of the discharged cartridges has only served to intensify the baffling mystery as to what took place in the murder room. It has given rise to several theories. It has been suggested that there may have been a gun battle between Mrs. Stevens and the assailant. There is still another theory that the murderer may have shot Mrs. Stevens with a revolver, and, as she fell, seized the shotgun, with which she was trying to defend the home, and with it shot the girl to death. Officers are satisfied that Mrs. Stevens had leaped from bed and seized the shotgun to protect herself and little Nellie, but it is a matter of pure speculation as to how the shell came to be discharged.

The time of the tragedy, or at least of the fire, was fixed Thursday in a statement by Farris Simmons, a brakeman of the Southern Railway, who said he passed on his train between 12 and 1 o'clock Wednesday morning and saw the house in flames. The railroad is but a short distance from the burned home. This would make it positive that the murder was committed about midnight or before that hour, and the Stevens boy will merely have to show that he left for Chattanooga before that time.

Suspect Trailed.

Telephone information from Red Oak, a short distance south of Atlanta, was received at the police station Thursday afternoon to the effect that a suspicious stranger, believed to be Dan Walker, the suspected halfbreed Indian who was shot at by Mrs. Stevens several weeks ago when he insulted her adopted daughter, had passed through that place yesterday.

Policeman Clarence Hamilton, who is detailed on the mystery with Detective Rosser, immediately notified Fairburn, Newnan, Palmetto and other towns along the route to be on the lookout for the half-breed and take him into custody, pending instructions from Atlanta.

Sister Believes Son Innocent.

In a darkened room in a little house at 33 Dalney Street, with a physician in almost constant attendance, lies a woman prostrated by grief. Absolute quiet has been ordered by the doctor, and the anguish tears at her heart in a silence broken only by her own sobs and the hushed patter of childish footsteps as her children play quietly about the house.

She is Mrs. Pearl Hartley, sister of Mrs. Sarah C. Stevens, whose charred body was found lying beside that of her adopted daughter in the smoking ruins of their farm home seven miles from Atlanta. Prostrated by the shock of the tragedy, with her imagination made vivid by her suffering and grief, Mrs. Hartley is seeing in the darkness of her room the terrible happenings of that night of horror.

Mrs. Hartley's only surcease from suffering came for a few moments late Wednesday afternoon, when, under the influence of opiates administered by her physician, she recovered sufficiently to talk to a Georgian reporter. Mrs. Hartley sobbed audibly throughout the interview, and her eyes, red with weeping and reflecting the anguish that tore at her heart, emphasized her words as she cried for vengeance on the murderer.

"Why do they always murder women?" she cried. "It is terrible. Little girls are murdered when they go onto the street, and now a woman is not safe even in her own home."

Faints at News.

The notifying of Mrs. Hartley of the death of her sister and niece formed one of the most dramatic and pathetic incidents of the entire tragedy. She was downtown Wednesday morning shopping, when word came to her home on Dalney Street that her sister and niece had been murdered. Mrs. Lena Thompson, a neighbor, of 24 Dalney Street, volunteered to go downtown and find Mrs. Hartley and tell her the sad news.

After a search of an hour Mrs. Thompson found Mrs. Hartley in the Kress store on Whitehall Street. As she stood trying to locate the sister of the murdered woman in the crowd of shoppers Mrs. Hartley, warned by intuition that something was wrong, pushed through the crowd and hurried to Mrs. Thompson.

"What is it?" she cried. "What's the matter?"

Mrs. Thompson, seeking to break the news gently, told her that her sister's home had burned down and that she had been badly injured.

"It's worse than that," Mrs. Hartley cried. "I feel it! I know it is worse than that!"

She screamed and fainted in the arms of Mrs. Thompson. She was soon revived and taken to her home. Mrs. Thompson endeavored to calm her on the trip on the street car with the assurance that everything was all right.

As Mrs. Hartley entered her yard, one of her little daughters ran out of the house, tears streaming down her face.

"Oh, mamma," she cried, "Aunt Sarah and Cousin Nellie have been killed!"

With a scream, Mrs. Hartley fell to the ground in a swoon. She was picked up by Mrs. Thompson and members of her family and carried into the house. A physician was called and administered opiates. Under the influence of the medicine she was able to sit up in bed for a few moments late in the afternoon, but collapsed again when she learned that her nephew, the son of the murdered woman, was being sought by the police as the murderer of his mother.

Militants Fire Hay And Farm Buildings

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 29.—Having terrorized most of the cities of England, the militant suffragettes now are paying their attentions to the rural districts.

Three fires were reported to-day from farms near Richmond. Haystacks and farm buildings were burned and about the ruins were scattered placards and copies of The Suffragette.

NOTTINGHAM, ENGLAND, May 29.—Suffragettes set fire to the freight sheds in the railroad terminal here to-day. The fire was extinguished after $5,000 damage was done.

WILLIAM STEVENS, husband and father of the woman and girl whose charred bodies were found in the fire ruins of their home on McDonough Road, and whose deaths are laid to a slayer. Mr. Stevess says his son is innocent.

BETTER SERVICE ON CAR LINES ORDERED

Railroad Commission Directs the Company to Provide for the Rush-Hour Crowds.

General improvement in the street car service in Atlanta furnished by the Georgia Railway and Power Company was ordered by the State Railroad Commission shortly after noon Thursday. Practically every line operated by the company is included in the list. The order specifies particularly the service rendered during rush hours.

The order, which will benefit thousands of persons who are compelled to use the street cars, was issued after several conferences between the Railroad Commission and President Arkwright, of the Georgia Railway and Power Company.

On May 5 Chairman Murphey Candler addressed a letter to Mr. Arkwright asking him to make suggestions for the betterment of the service during rush hours. This letter was replied to on May 23 by Mr. Arkwright, his letter going much into detail.

Suggestions made by Mr. Arkwright were considered at sessions of the commission Tuesday and Wednesday, during which time they were in conference with the street railway officials. It is understood that the order of the commission is agreeable to the company. The improvement of service will begin within the next few days.

Improvements Ordered.

Here are the improvements ordered:

ROUTE NO 2—Copenhill to Westview. Rearrangement of schedules so as to space the headway between cars now operated more nearly to four minutes and secure a more even distribution of the traffic loads. Counts of actual loads at peak points to be made during next five months and filed with the commission, so as to secure accurate information as to whether there is excessive congestion.

ROUTE NO. 4—Inman Park-Georgia Avenue. A three and one-third minute headway during morning and afternoon rush hours, on Inman Par end, with the Georgia Avenue end provided for by increased service on Route No. 5.

ROUTE NO. 5—West Peachtree and South Pryor. Additional cars between Sixth Street crossing on West Peachtree and Bass Street crossing on South Pryor, so as to give, during the morning and afternoon rush hours, a service with five minutes' headway.

ROUTE NO. 6—Forrest Avenue and Capitol Avenue. Actual counts to be made during morning and afternoon rush hours, at two peak points, during next five months, to accurately ascertain degree of congestion, if any, on this route.

ROUTE NO. 8—Fair and Marietta Streets. The afternoon rush hour service on this line has been recently extended from 6:30 to 7 p. m., and schedules now established more regularly sustained. Counts of traffic loads to be made on this route, as directed on No. 6.

ROUTE NO. 10—Whitehall and Peachtree: Increased service so as to provide for cars every three and one-third minutes, and extension of afternoon rush hour service to 9 p. m.

Suburban Service.

ROUTE NO. 17—Main Decatur: Additional tripper cars to Hayes Street, so as to give service to that point with three and one-third minute headway, and from there to Decatur on five minutes headway during morning and afternoon rush hours, with extension of service on ten-minute headway from end of afternoon rush hour period to 9:30 p. m., in lieu of present twenty-minute headway. After 9:30 p. m. the twenty-minute headway will be operated as now.

ROUTE NO. 19—River Line: Extra cars on Sundays during summer months to accommodate extra traffic. Counts of traffic loads to be made on this route week days, as directed on other named routes, to accurately ascertain measure of regular traffic.

ROUTE NO. 20—College Park, East Point and Hapeville: Actual counts of week-day loads at peak points to be made during next five months, to ascertain accurately if there is overcongestion in regular traffic.

ROUTE NO. 23—Buckhead Line: Tripper service previously ordered by the commission to Sixth Street on West Peachtree has been recently extended by the company to Dead Man's Curve, the end of double track, which gives local service this far on a ten-minute headway during rush hours and to that extent relieves congestion on the Buckhead cars. In addition, doubleheaders in the morning and afternoon hours, for congestion during those hours arising out of construction work in the northern part of the city, are operated and will be continued as necessity demands. Counts, during morning and afternoon rush hours, for the next five months, of actual loads at the peak point of the Buckhead line, have been ordered, and will determine the necessity of further relief on this route.

1,400 Taken From American Liner on Rocks Off England

LIVERPOOL, May 29.—The American liner Haverford, bound from Liverpool to Philadelphia with 1,400 passengers on board, crashed upon Daunts Rock, outside of Queenstown Harbor, to-day in a thick fog.

A big hole was rammed in the ship's hold and she began to settle. Wireless calls brought help, and all the passengers were taken off.

A wireless message said the ship was in a dangerous condition.

Americans Victims In London Hotel Raid

LONDON, May 29.—American tourists were among the victims of a robbery at the fashionable Hotel Berkeley in Piccadilly early to-day. Armed burglars bound and gagged two porters, who were acting as watchmen, opened a safe and made off with a great sum of money and jewels.

Scotland Yard detectives were assigned to the case. It is believed the robbers fled to France. The Berkeley is one of the best-known hotels in London and much frequented by American tourists.

COUNCIL TO PURCHASE CREMATORY THIS YEAR, ASSERT CITY OFFICIALS

Payment of the Entire Cost, Even if Other Work Is Sacrificed, Declared To Be Only Solution of Tangle Following Court Ruling.

Leading city officials declared Thursday that the one way to settle the crematory tangle was to pay the entire cost of the new plant this year under a new contract with the Destrucor Company, of New York; and they further asserted they believed council would pursue that course at a sacrifice of other special improvements.

Mayor Woodward declared he was willing to buy the Destructor Company's plant on a real business basis. Alderman Candler said the city must have an incinerator this summer if everything else had to be sacrificed. Councilman Claude L. Ashley favors buying the plant straight out. Councilman George H. Boynton agreed with them.

City Attorney James L. Mayson, after carefully studying the decision of the Supreme Court holding the old contract illegal, said it was the simplest plan.

Agree Plant Is Necessity.

All agreed that Atlanta must have a new garbage disposal plant this summer at all hazards. They argued that it was equally as obvious that the only possible plant was the Destructor plant. This plant will be completed within 30 days. The means of having it completed and put into use are as follows:

To buy it straightout.

To submit the old contract to a vote of the people, when it will have to be approved by two-thirds of the registered voters.

For citizens to lend the purchase price and, without any contract, take their chances on being repaid by Council.

For the Destructor Company to complete the plant without any contract and trust to the judgments of succeeding Council to complete the payments.

Attorney Mayson said the complications srurounding the latter propositions are so great that the first plan practically was the only sure way.

Has $125,000 Set Aside.

Council has $125,000 already set aside for this year's payment on the crematory. There is $71,000 available in the June sheet. Councilman Boynton said to-day that the tax books showed that $60,000 additional could be added to the increase of revenue. Money for various improvements is still unspent and Council has the right to recall these appropriations. Also, if a cash payment is to be made, it is said the Destructor Company will reduce its original price by some thousands of dollars.

The old contract provided for a $100,000 electric power plant in conjuction with the crematory. But the councilmen say this feature can be eliminated for the present, in view of the serious garbage situation.

Expect Mayor to Balk.

A special meeting of the Board of Health has been called for Thursday night to consider the whole matter. The Finance Committee will meet Friday morning to make up the June budget. It is expected that by the time Council meets Monday afternoon the whole matter will be decided. But the chances are small that the mayor will agree.

Samuel Evins, attorney for the Destructor Company, announced Thursday that the company would proceed with the erection of the plant. The Supreme Court order does not go into effect for ten days and by that time Council probably will have made a new contract, thus averting any interference in the progress of garbage disposal by the court's decision.

Councilman Ashley, chairman of the Sanitary Committee, declared that the garbage situation was a matter of life and death. He sserted tht unless the crematory was put into operation this summer, by fall the people would be dying like flies.

Two Ready to Give $1,000.

He and Councilman Boynton agreed to start a subscription of $1,000 each by which citizens would buy the plant and take their chances on Council repaying them.

In striking contrast to the attitude of alarm of the councilmen was the smile of Mayor Woodward. Council overrode his position on the crematory issue at every turn but he held out that he would never sign a check in payment on the contract unless ordered to do so by the Supreme Court. He holds that the city is being charged far too much for the plant.

"It justifies my numerous attacks on Council's business methods," he said to-day. "I warned them when they tore down that old crematory that they would be howling this summer that we had no crematory. I now inform them that I am going to break that $100,000 fire alarm contract and prevent any other moral obligation contracts going through.

Calls Ruling Far-Reaching.

"Of course, we must have a crematory. I am willing to buy the Destructor plant on a business basis. I am willing to pay them in proportion to what they received for the Milwaukee plant. They got $200,000 for a 300-ton plant there; ours is a 250-ton plant."

City Attorney Mayson said the Supreme Court's decision was far reaching.

"There was no question that one Council could not bind another," he said. "But this decision is that the appropriation of a sum of money which would tend to make succeeding Councils appropriate money for the same purpose tends toward coercion and is, therefore, illegal."

Players' Comedy to 'Draw Big'

Society Will Turn Out in Force

Brilliant House to Greet Artists

Society folk who are taking leading parts in Players' Club production June 3.

Society will turn out en masse at the evening with the Players' Club June 3. Oscar Wilde's sparkling comedy, "The Importance of Being in Earnest," will be interpreted by Atlanta artists, pronounced proficient by professional instructors.

Advance seat sales indicate a capacity audience. Tickets have been on sale only a few days, but few are left. Choice seats especially were in great demand.

The boxes will be filled by as brilliant a company as ever went in one evening to grand opera. Several theater parties already made up will be scattered among the audience. Supper parties will be given after the show at the Piedmont Driving Club.

Among the hosts and hostesses at box parties will be Governor-elect and Mrs. Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson, Mrs. William D. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Felder, Judge and Mrs. Arthur Powell, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Cooney and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Speer.

The following well-known society leaders will appear in the cast: Miss Hildreth Burton-Smith, Mrs. William Owens, Mrs. Slaton, Mrs. H. B. Scott, Lamar Hill, Marshall Adair, Hamilton Douglas, Jr., and Frank Taylor

AID ASKED IN WAR ON TUBERCULOSIS

Association Appeals to Atlanta to Make Up $5,000 of $10,000 Needed Yearly.

Unless the Atlanta Anti-Tuberculosis Association can secure the $5,000 in subscriptions, for which it has asked the people of Atlanta, the officials state it will be seriously handicapped in its work this year. There has been collected less than 15 per cent of the fund the public was asked to give.

The association, nevertheless, is prosecuting its work more vigorously than ever, responding to every call and seeking to better conditions and lend assistance wherever possible.

Example is given of an Atlanta family of eight members, in which five of the children have tuberculosis. The bread winners of the family, all under 16 years, earn $9.30 a week in a mill. The association makes it a point to keep close supervision upon families of this sort, to win their affection and insist on carefulness in their habits, to prevent the spread of the disease.

Three children to give, another case, making $45 a month, earn the entire living for a family of eleven. When the elder of these children contracted tuberculosis the family income was reduced more than half. It took not only argument, but force, to get this girl into a sanitarium, where she has been committed until sufficiently improved to resume her occupation.

Contending with hundreds of cases of this sort every year, the association is in need of an income which will enable it to get definite results. It needs for this purpose $10,000 annually. Of this amount the public is asked to give $5,000.

JACKSON TO ENTER BANKING BUSINESS

Retiring Collector of Revenue Announces He Will Represent Northern Companies

Henry S. Jackson, whose resignation as Collector of Internal Revenue takes effect July 1, will remain in Atlanta as Southern representative for Chicago, Pittsburg and New York banking houses. At first he will retain his present office in the Inman Building, but later will take a suite in one of Atlanta's new office buildings.

Already Mr. Jackson is transacting financial business. Thursday he negotiated a loan of $150,000 in behalf of an Atlanta building enterprise.

"I shall retain my interest in political affairs," said Mr. Jackson, "and shall continue as Republican national committeeman from Georgia."

$3.50 Recipe Free, For Weak Men

Send Name and Address To-day—You Can Have it Free and Be Strong and Vigorous.

I have in my possession a prescription for nervous debility, lack of vigor, weakened manhood, failing memory and lame back, brought on by excesses, unnatural drains, or the follies of youth, that has cured so many worn and nervous men right in their own homes—without any additional help or medicine—that I think every man who wishes to regain his manly power and virility, quickly and quietly, should have a copy. So I have determined to send a copy of the prescription free of charge, in a plain, ordinary sealed envelope, to any man who will write me for it.

This prescription comes from a physician who has made a special study of men, and I am convinced it is the surest-acting combination for the cure of deficient manhood and vigor failure ever put together.

I think I owe it to my fellow-men to send them a copy in confidence so that any man anywhere who is weak and discouraged with repeated failures may stop drugging himself with harmful patent medicines, secure what I believe is the quickest acting restorative, up-building SPOT-TOUCHING remedy ever devised, and so cure himself at home quietly and quickly. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, 4276 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send you a copy of this splendid recipe in a plain, ordinary envelope free of charge. A great many doctors would charge $3.00 to $5.00 for merely writing out a prescription like this—but I send it entirely free.

Carnegie's Valor Does Not Impress Schwab

NEW YORK, May 29.—Charles M. Schwab, president of the Bethlehem Steel Company, does not take seriously Andrew Carnegie's declaration that he would carry a gun and die for America if Japan attacked this country.

"I don't think Mr. Carnegie would go to war any more than I would, even if he does feel younger," he said. "The best way to insure peace is always to be prepared for war. America should build more battleships."

Millionaire's Home Wrecked by Spirits

CHICAGO, May 29.—Though followers of the occult believe in signs, the occult is bad for the sign business.

That is the burden of the complaint of Mrs. Zero Marx, wife of a millionaire sign painter who is suing for separate maintenance. Marx's business and his disposition have been wrecked by his devotion to the occult sciences, the complaint charges.

LAMAR TO SPEAK TO GEORGIA BAR

Supreme Court Jurist Appears Thursday Night for First Time in State Since Elevation.

Justice J. R. Lamar will make his first public appearance in Georgia since his elevation to the Supreme Court of the United States before the Georgia Bar Association at Warm Springs Thursday night. His address originally had been scheduled for Friday morning, but was moved up to Thursday night to enable the jurist to be in Washington Friday.

Arriving in Atlanta Wednesday morning with Mrs. Lamar, Justice Lamar paid a visit to members of the Supreme Court of Georgia. After chatting for an hour he and Mrs. Lamar proceeded to Warm Springs.

An Atlanta delegation of lawyers will leave for Warm Springs at 5:10 o'clock this afternoon. Among the lawyers will be Hamilton Douglas, Lee Jordan, John Y. Smith, Henry C. Peeples, Arminius A. Wright, John C. Tye, Judge Broyles, Sam D. Hewlett, Luther Z. Rosser, Jr., D. K. Johnston, Lawton Nally, W. C. Latimer, Eugene R. Black, Sanders McDaniel, Burton Smith, Alex Smith, H. M. Patty, Daniel Rountree, Robert C. Alston and John M. Slaton.

Other Georgia attorneys, already at Warm Springs, who will hear Justice Lamar, are Judge W. A. Little, of Columbus; Orville A. Park, Macon; Judge Andrew J. Cobb, Athens; Judge Joseph H. Lumpkin and Judge Beverly D. Evans, Atlanta.

$1,500 Gamecocks Sentenced to Death

BOSTON, May 29.—Twenty-five gamecocks, valued at $1,500, were sentenced to death by Judge Byram here. They will be put to death by the State.

The birds were taken in a raid on a cocking main.

RESINOL HEALS ITCHING SKINS

And Clears Unsightly Complexions.

The soothing, healing medication in Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap penetrates every tiny pore of the skin, clears it of all impurities, and stops itching instantly. Resinol positively speedily heals eczema, rashes, ringworm and other eruptions, and clears away disfiguring pimples and blackheads when other treatments prove worse than useless.

Resinol is not an experiment. It is a doctor's prescription which proved so wonderfully successful for skin troubles that it has been used by other doctors all over the country for eighteen years. No other treatment for the skin now before the public can show such a record of professional approval. Every druggist sells Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, but you can test them at our expense. Just write to Dept. 27-S, Resinol, Baltimore, Md., and we will send you a generous trial by parcel post.

TALLULAH FALLS SUIT IS ARGUED BY COUNSEL

Verdict in Power Company Land Case Expected Thursday Afternoon at Clayton.

CLAYTON, GA., May 29.—The suit of the State of Georgia against the Georgia Railway and Power Company to determine ownership of the gorge at Tallulah Falls will reach the jury early this afternoon and a verdict is expected before night.

Argument, which began yesterday afternoon and continued for 3 1-2 hours until court adjourned for the day, was resumed when court reconvened this morning, with 4 1-2 hours of time allotted the lawyers to be consumed.

Edgar Watkins, of Atlanta, opened for the State, being followed by Alex King, of Atlanta, for the power company, who in turn was followed by W. S. Paris, of Clayton, for the State. He was the last speaker yesterday. This morning H. H. Dean, of Gainesville, was the first speaker, representing the power company. The others in turn were R. C. Ellis, of Tifton, for the State; Luther Z. Rosser, of Atlanta, for the power company, and Attorney General T. S. Felder, closing for the State.

Mr. King brought a trunk full of law books from Atlanta and he quoted at length from these in support of the power company's contentions that it has clear titles to the Tallulah Falls gorge lands. Lawyers for both sides referred frequently and in detail to the surveys and plats filed as exhibits to the testimony of Professors Strong and Koch, of the University of Georgia, who made surveys of the gorge for the State. The documentary evidence of deeds, land grants and other old papers bearing on the titles to these lands were stressed by the attorneys in support of their respective contentions.

Judge J. B. Jones, in his charge to the jury, will review much of this evidence and instruct the jurors on the law involved. It is thought the jury will remain out but a short time.

Bryan Goes to Market; Carries a Basket, Too

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Any farmer who has a good supply of white radishes would do well to communicate with the Secretary of State. Every day Mr. Bryan forgets all pressing questions of state and searches Central Market for his favorite vegetable.

Mr. Bryan does his own marketing. He carries a market basket, too.

'Champagne Truest Financial Barometer'

LONDON, May 29.—Walter Mumm, who is to marry Miss Frances Scoville, of Kansas, June 2, arrived in London to-day. In discussing the champagne trade he said:

"The best barometer in the world of financial conditions is the champagne market. There is more champagne than ever being drunk in the United States."

Minister Defends Foreign Marriages

ANNISTON, ALA., May 29.—A defense of international marriages and a preachment against the suffrage propaganda were the features of the address delivered by Dr. Gardiner C. Tucker, of Mobile, in his baccalaureate address before the young women of the graduating class of Noble Institute, the diocesan school of the Episcopal Church in Alabama.

Sues When Delayed Telegram Hits Cupid

NEW YORK, May 29.—Because his telegram had gone astray and it took him eight days to convince his fiancee, Miss Helen Burns, of New York, that he had asked her to meet him at the railway station here, Joseph Connolly, of Utica, N. Y., has sued the telegraph company.

He asks $1,500 damages.

Good Cooks Kill Drink Habit, Says Duchess

LONDON, May 29.—"I believe a dinner well cooked is a better antidote to drink than any possible legislation," declared the Duchess of Marlborough.

Her Grace, who was Consuelo Vanderbilt, made a brief address at the annual meeting of St. Pancras School for Mothers.

Danger Signal Set For DeWolf Hopper

ALTOONA, PA., May 29.—"The Furrys for generations have revived the sacredness of the marriage vow, and the reports that my daughter Elda has been married to De Wolf Hopper pain me greatly," said David E. Furry, a butcher of this city, today.

"If Hopper loves my daughter and means well I will be satisfied, but if he married her like he took up with his other four wives, as he would a plaything, it will be an outrage that I will not stand for," the irate father announced.

Goodwin's Mother Favors 5th Wedding

BOSTON, May 29.—"I don't blame him for marrying for the fifth time," said Mrs. Caroline R. Goodwin today regarding the marriage of her son, Nat Goodwin, the actor, to Marjorie Moreland.

"He married for love this time. I think it's all right.

"Two of his wives are dead. As for the divorced two—well, sometimes there are some things a man simply can't stand for."

Penrose Says, 'Teach Boys Cooking, Too.'

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania, speaking at the graduating exercises of the National School of Domestic Arts and Sciences, deplored inventions which have done away with our puritanical ideals.

Cooking is becoming a lost art, he said. He also declared that boys should be taught cooking as well as girls.

POWERS TO HALT NEW WAR MOVE IN BALKANS

Servia Remobilizes Troops in Preparation for Clash With Bulgaria.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SALONIKA, May 29.—The entire Turkish population in the village of Hadji was massacred by Bulgarian troops, according to a dispatch received here to-day.

LONDON, May 29.—The powers of Europe have begun to bring pressure upon Bulgaria, Servia and Greece to prevent a fresh conflict in the Balkans.

The Ambassadors believe that if the Balkan states and Greece can be held in accord until the protocol of a peace treaty with Turkey is signed that the issues causing dissension among the states of the Balkan Confederation can be settled by arbitration to the satisfaction of all.

Sir Edward Grey, British Foreign Minister, said to-day that he expects all the Balkan peace envoys to sign the preliminary draft of a Turco-Balkan treaty to-morrow.

Servia Prepares To Fight Bulgaria.

VIENNA, May 29.—Servia has begun the remobilization of her reservists on account of the critical relations with Bulgaria.

A telegram from Sofia says that Bulgaria is on the point of breaking off all diplomatic relations with Servia because of the unsatisfactory character of a statement made yesterday by Premier Pastich of Servia setting forth Servia's attitude in the Balkan crisis.

Premier Venizelos of Greece is expected to arrive in Sofia either to-night or to-morrow and will at once enter into negotiations with Czar Ferdinand in an effort to effect a conciliatory settlement.

France to Cut Duty On Horses for Food

PARIS, May 29.—With a view to reducing the cost of living the Chamber voted to-day to reduce the import duty on horses intended for slaughter from $30 to $10. A rebate will be granted on the production of a certificate that they have been killed for food.

There are in France 700 places where horses are slaughtered. Paris consumed 60,000 in 1911, valued at $40 to $50. Horse meat sells at 3 1-2 cents a pound.

Settle Quarrel With Duel by Avalanche

GENEVA, May 29.—A duel by avalanche was the method chosen by two rivals for the hand of an Italian girl.

To settle their claims the men, who live below Mont Blanc, decided to stand for several hours every day in the path usually followed by avalanches on the mountain side until one of them was swept to death.

One of the men was struck but received only slight injuries.

Makes Will, Then Fights Fatal Duel

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., May 29.—Joseph Stoughton, a hotel proprietor of Lexington, Ill., is dying to-day following a revolver duel with Grant Preble, an automobile dealer, of the same town. Preble is severely wounded and physicians to-day said he might die.

The duel occurred on the streets a few minutes after Stoughton had made a will leaving his property to his wife.

Beggar, With $1,000 Jewels, Arrested

MACON, GA., May 29.—Although he was arrested for begging on the streets, J. W. Hill, alias J. W. Greer, who says Fort Worth, Texas, is his home, had diamonds worth $750, two watches, each valued at $50, other jewelry worth $100, and $80 in money on his person when searched at police headquarters.

He paid a nominal fine for violating a city ordinance in soliciting alms.

BIG WORKS CHECKS SMOKE NUISANCE

Joseph May & Sons Install "Climax" Preventer at Their Orme Street Plant.

The big smokestack on Joseph May & Sons' Dry Cleaning Works, 154 Orme Street, has ceased to belch great columns of smoke—not because the plant is shut down, but because a smoke preventer has been installed.

L. C. Commerford and Charles Heer, of Atlanta, yesterday gave a demonstration of the invention, which promises great things toward abating the smoke nuisance in this city. About two weeks ago Commerford put the smoke consumer to work. Since then there has been rejoicing in the immediate neighborhood.

Burns the Smoke.

The name of the preventer is the "Climax" and it works on the steam jet principle. Four jets, attached to the furnace just above the door, force in cold air from below and steam from above in the fire box. The steam forces the smoke from off the fire bed and slams it up against the back wall of the furnace.

When the smoke hits the back wall it turns a flip-flop and comes back over the flame. Here it is met with the air which is forced in from the under side of the jet. The air holds it for a fraction of a second and the smoke is actually burned. The oxygen and hydrogen with the furnace gases and flame consume the carbon or smoke, which is nothing more than vaporous coal.

Can Be Regulated.

The smoke ordinance in Atlanta allows a stack to smoke 12 minutes in an hour. With the "Climax" smoke consumer the objectionable smoke is eliminated entirely, or, if the operator wished to save steam so that he is just complying with the law, there is a device on the "Climax" which by means of a water pot gradually fills with water taken from the steam. When full, the little water pot trips a trigger and the smoke preventer is cut off. This device can be regulated to suit the operator.

A large number of "Climax" smoke preventers are now in use in Boston, where the smoke ordinance is rigidly enforced. The "Climax" has been tried out in other cities and has given satisfaction in every instance.

Mutes Would Move Cave Spring School

MACON, GA., May 29.—When the Georgia Association for the Deaf and Dumb meets in Macon in annual convention on June 5 and 6 a formal demand will be put on record for the location of the State School for the Deaf and Dumb at some place other than Cave Spring.

Ross Johnson, a celebrated cartoonist, will deliver a lecture, in the finger language, illustrated by drawings, on "Why We Want a New School, or Where Is Cave Spring?"

Governor Brown and Mayor Moore are to make the addresses of welcome. I. H. Marchman, of Atlanta, is president of the association.

The Great End-of-the-Month Sale

This End-of-the-Month Sale Means That Merchandise Is Not Permitted to Grow Old Here. The Clearance Sale Current sweeps out all exhausted assortments each month. Nothing allowed to linger. Hence the stock is always new and fresh.

Sale starts Friday at the opening of the doors; ends Saturday at the tap of the closing bell. "Prizes" to early comers.

All charge purchases made during this sale will be transferred to the June statement mailed July 1st.

All Our $2 Shower-Proof Foulards at 98c

Silk prices clipped to less than half. 'Tis a fair sample of how we slash prices in the End-of-the-Month Sale. The saving, moreover, is not on stale, worn-out silks, but on the staple, spick and span foulards. Every $2 foulard in stock included; not an inch reserved.

These foulards are all shower-proof. They are 42 inches wide—little is required for a dress. We have sold them freely at their price of $2 a yard. But color exhaustion and broken lines deplete the price—out they go to-morrow at 98c. Included are the staple black, browns, navy and Copenhagen blues and greens. Some in solid colors, some with the floral spaced patterns, some in stripes, some in dots—just a fair assortment of everything that has been "good" this season. Only 98c.

New Silks at Prices to Bid You Pause

Because these are the smart, new, fashionable silks that women will want throughout the summer, for traveling, for mountain and seashore and street wear we stress in big type the little prices at which they are to sell. Look here:

Here are soft, shimmery chiffon taffetas to make the smartest of street dresses and suits. Solid colors, and changeables in about every color on the card save black and white. 26-inch. Also handsome messalines in neat stripes and floral patterns—the identical styles that sell readily everywhere at $1 and $1.25. Only 49c.

For Smart $1.50 Silks

These are the handsome Tussah crepe de chines—soft crinkly crepes now so much in favor. We have just eight pieces left in solid color tan, mustard, brown, Nell rose, Copenhagen, rose and taupe. Yard wide. Also at 59c are 24-inch silk serge suitings in solid colors and fancies and fancy silks in rather wide variety of patterns and colors.

95c
For $2.50 to $3.00 Silk Chiffons

Silk voiles and chiffons, loveliest fabrics of the foreign looms. Street and evening shades; some with deep border of charmeuse silk, some with silk stripes, some bestrewn with flowers. The silks such as these are fashionable the year around. 44 inches wide; very little is required for a dress. $2.50 and $3 qualities for 95c.

98c
For $1.50 to $3.00 Silks

Charming Dolly Madison silks now on sale in the best stores at $1.50 a yard. Neat stripes bestrewn with dainty sprays or flowers. Blue, grey, Copenhagen, tan. Also $3 Cloth of Gold silk at 98c. HEARST PAPERS FORCE NAVAL EFFICIENCY

Secretary Daniels to Win Recruits by Making Warships Training Schools.

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The Hearst papers, in advance of other American newspapers, exposed the fact that the American navy was not much more than half-manned.

The Hearst papers made the statement, later so emphatically confirmed, that not a battleship in the great Hudson River display of last October could have gone out to sea to fight without a shortage of from three to five officers and a shortage of from 150 to 200 men.

These newspapers developed the fact that few men were enlisting in the navy and gave the cause for this in the fact that our navy offered so few inducements and attractions for American youths to enlist in that branch of our country's service.

The Hearst papers are now able to give the first exclusive information that these unfavorable conditions are to be changed.

Information comes from the Navy Department that Secretary Daniels has caught the progressive movement urged so long in these newspapers and is going to make the American navy a more attractive and a more profitable place for the American youth who is willing to serve his country and does not desire altogether to forget himself.

Ships as Naval Schools.

The Secretary of the Navy plans that hereafter every battleship and war vessel shall be a naval school—an industrial school—a school of the sciences and incidentally of the arts. When the Secretary's plans are completed there will go out from Annapolis with every naval vessel a corps of trained instructors to teach the sailors and enlisted men. This corps of instructors will be reinforced by the educated officers of each ship.

A battleship will hereafter be no idle place even in peace, and the enlisted man who binds himself to three years in the service of his country's navy can emerge at the end of his service, if he has will and intelligence, with an educational equipment for a profession by which he can sustain himself in the world.

The three-year enlisted man of the navy who will avail himself of these new and admirable advantages can come out a skilled engineer, a navigator, a machinist or any one of a half-dozen skilled professions that point the way to success in life.

Lewis Nixon has said that Annapolis is the best engineering school in the country and its graduates as teachers ought to do great things for the American sailors in three diligent years.

More Frequent Cruises.

The Secretary plans more frequent cruises to foreign ports, so that the education of travel and observation may be added to a sailor's opportunities on shipboard.

And last, but not least, the new Secretary of the Navy expresses the intention with all his influence and authority to insist upon the recognition of the individuality and manhood of individual seamen. An American sailor is promised that hereafter he shall be regarded, not only as a fighting machine, but as a man and treated as one.

This last is in line with the recent movement so ably pressed in the navy by men like Captain Benson and Commander White and other vigorous and progressive officers of the service.

The result of this new and admirable policy will be to fill half-empty lists of the navy and to make it, not a place for young men to bury themselves for three years and come out unfit to make a living, but to be educated in mind, body and spirit by the finest of teachers, and come out in three years as all-round men, equipped in health and courage and manliness and with a practical profession in life.

School for Deserters.

Secretary Daniels further intends to reform the system of punishment for desertions by sending young deserters, first to prison and afterward to the place of reform, but to send each of them first to that notable school at Port Royal, S. C., where they will be built up in character and patriotism and an understanding of a citizen's and a soldier's duty, and if they are docile and receptive to reinstate them in the navy without a prison term.

These are wholesome reforms, and Secretary Daniels is to be congratulated upon the good sense he has manifested in adopting them.

FORTY-SIX MEMBERS ENROLL

First Day's Record in Big Player-Piano Club

THAT the interest in the gigantic Weatherholt Player-Piano Club is widespread was demonstrated yesterday when the membership books were opened. When the store closed for the night, 46 members had been enrolled. At this rate the 400 memberships will be taken before the time limit expires. I am not surprised at this record, for I knew the music-loving public would realize just how remarkable my club offer was. People are realizing that the day of the ordinary piano is rapidly drawing to a close, and that the day of the Player-Piano is at hand. And when I made it possible to secure a $650 Player-Piano for $488.50 on terms of $10.00 down and $2.50 per week, there was a rush to enroll in my great co-operative club.

The club membership is limited to 400 members. I will save each member $334.50. Because of the great purchasing power of the 400 club members, I can offer a magnificent $650 Player-Piano along with $173 worth of club features for $488.50, on terms of $10.00 down and $2.50 per week. In addition to this there is my Free Life Insurance Feature and the Music Exchange Privilege.

Here Are My Club Features:

1. Saving of $161.50
2. One year's trial (exchange privilege)
3. A ten-year guarantee with each piano
4. A Free Life Insurance Feature
5. Terms of payment $2.50 per week (monthly payments may be arranged)
6. A 25c rebate on all weekly payments made before due
7. No interest
8. A two-year conservatory course (regular price $80)
9. A free music exchange library
10. A selected bench to match player and 12 rolls of music

All accompany in writing the sale of every Club Player-Piano

Regular Price $650.00; Club Price $488.50

Club Terms: $10 Down, $2.50 Per Week

MY Free Music Exchange Library alone makes the Weatherholt Player-Piano Club attractive. This means that every club member may secure $10.50 worth of Player Music every day if desired. Each member secures free with the player twelve rolls of selected music worth $10.50. I have installed a great library of 5,000 rolls, and members may exchange their music as often as desirable. Many have told me that the cost of Player Music has prevented them from buying Player-Pianos in the past. My free library removes that objection. Sheet music is being replaced to-day just as the Player-Piano is superseding the ordinary piano. That the Player-Piano may make those who do not understand music as proficient as those who do, all my vocal Player Music has the words printed on the roll. Anybody can play. And anybody with a voice may sing. A vocal instructor is constantly before the one operating the Player-Piano. Every direction is given. The result is that the novice can render a song as well as the professional. I have devoted weeks of study to this great co-operative plan. I wanted to offer something which had never before been offered to lovers of music in the South. I know that I have done so.

MY CLUB PLAN SAVES $334.50

$650.00	Player-Piano
78.00	Interest Saved
80.00	2-year Conservatory Course
4.50	Selected Bench
10.50	12 Rolls of Selected Music

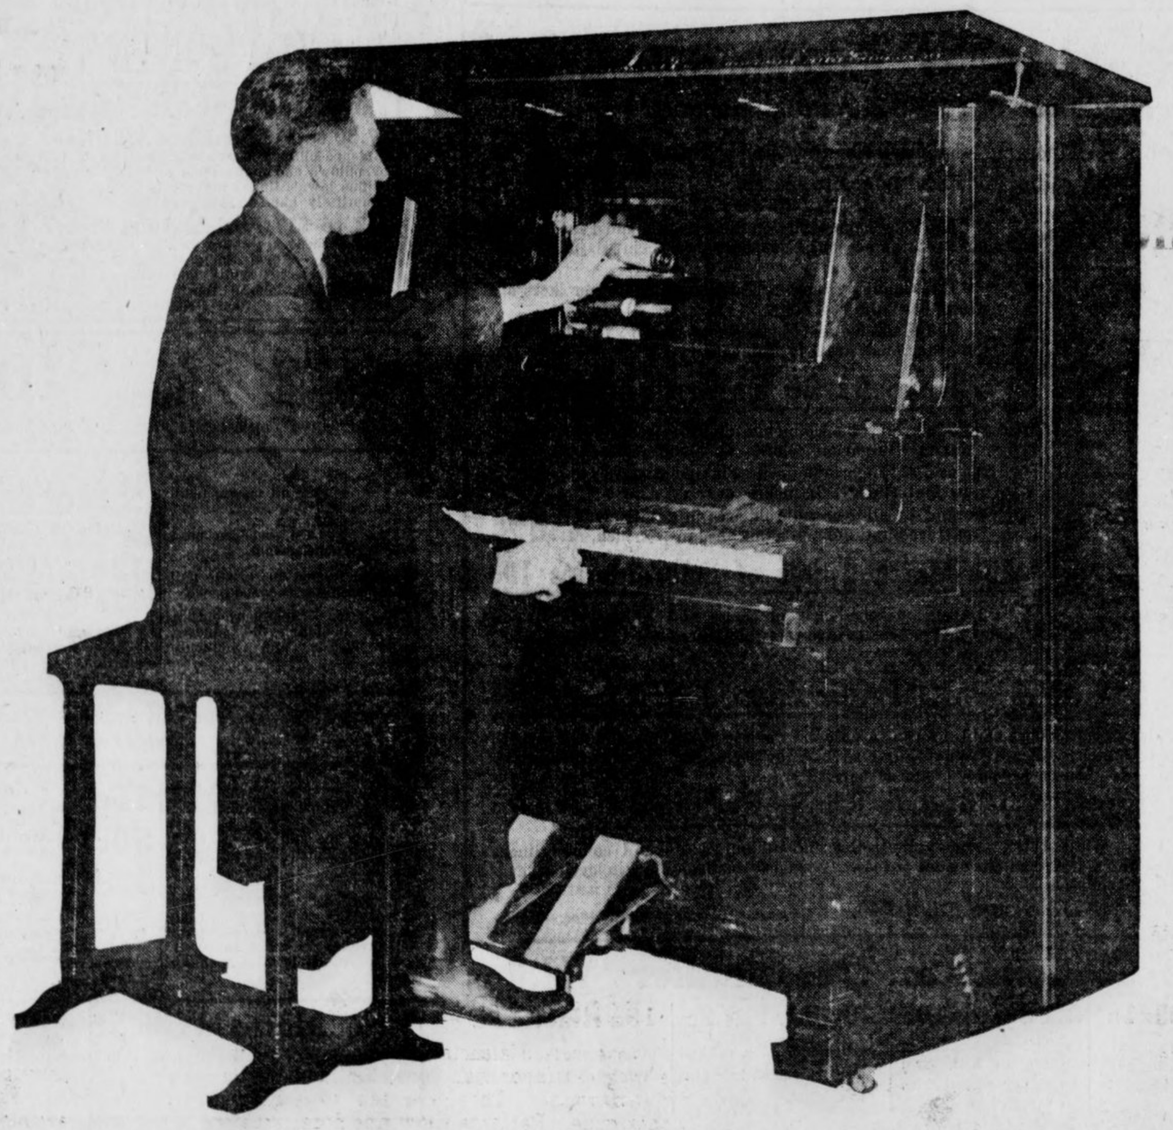
488.50	CLUB PRICE
$334.50	SAVING



THIS picture shows one of my demonstrators adjusting a roll of music in a Club Player-Piano. There is nothing about these instruments difficult to understand. They have everything that one has which costs a thousand dollars. I think so much of these Club Player-Pianos that I GUARANTEE THEM FOR TEN YEARS. Every one of these players is equipped with a double accoustic sounding board which produces the quality of tone found in a grand piano.

CONDITIONS: No interest, one year's trial and exchange privilege 15c rebate on payments made before due, free life insurance feature, ten-year guarantee.

All of which accompany in writing the sale of every Club Piano.

Notice to All Owners of Player-Pianos

During our Player Club Membership Campaign, we will extend—without charge—our exchange privilege to any one purchasing 12 rolls of Player Music from us. This gives the purchaser free access to our 5,000-roll library.

I WANT everybody interested in good music to visit our store. I want you to hear some good music—anything you like, from the classics to the latest ragtime. Examine these Club Player-Pianos closely and see how easily you can play anything you like, and play as well as an expert pianist. If you CAN play on the piano, you have two instruments in one—a Piano and a Player-Piano. You may use the piano and those members of your family who can not play can produce music on the Player equal to yours.

MAINE UNVEILING PARADE PLANS PERFECTED

Four Regiments, With Sailors and Marines From Twelve Battleships, to March Friday.

NEW YORK, May 29.—Plans for the great naval and military parade, which will precede the unveiling and dedication of the National Maine Monument at the southwest entrance to Central Park, Fifty-ninth Street and Eighth Avenue, on Friday afternoon, are about completed.

The twelve dreadnoughts and battleships of the North Atlantic fleet, which will be represented by regiments of marines and seamen in the parade, are the Wyoming, Florida, North Dakota, Delaware, Virginia, New Hampshire, South Carolina, Kansas, Georgia, New Jersey and Rhode Island.

Lieutenant Commander G. L. Smith, U. S. N., the brigade commander, has issued the order for the mobilization of the marines and seamen. Police Commissioner Waldo is revising and completing the arrangements for holding the crowds in place along the line of march and at the scene of the dedication.

Many Bands in Line.

The marine regiment, which is to march directly behind the United States Army, will form in Forty-third Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues. This regiment will be headed by the combined bands of the Wyoming and Virginia. The First Seaman Regiment Band will be headed by the combined bands of the Florida, North Dakota and Delaware; the Second Seaman Regiment, by the combined bands of the New Hampshire, South Carolina and Kansas, and the Third Seaman Regiment, by the combined bands of the Georgia, New Jersey and Rhode Island. Regimental colors will be carried.

The fleet officers in the parade will wear blue service uniforms, with white caps, leggins and gloves. The marines will march in blue, with white caps, leggins, canteens and rifle belts; the seamen in blue, with white hats, leggins, canteens and rifle belts. All bands will wear full dress uniforms.

The seamen and marines from the Wyoming will land at two floats at the foot of West Eighty-first Street. They will march down Broadway to Forty-fourth Street and then east, to form with the First Seaman Regiment, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues.

Will March Crosstown.

The detachments from the Florida, North Dakota and Delaware will be landed at Pier 86, at the foot of West Forty-sixth Street, and march crosstown to Forty-fourth Street and Fifth Avenue.

The men from the New Hampshire, South Carolina and Kansas will also disembark at the foot of West Forty-sixth Street and form as the Second Seaman Regiment in Forty-fifth Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues.

Detachments from the Virginia, Georgia, New Jersey and Rhode Island will be landed at the foot of West Forty-fifth Street and march to Forty-sixth Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues. They will form the Third Seaman Regiment.

The regimental commanders will be: Marine Regiment, Major A. W. Catlin; First Seaman Regiment, Captain H. B. Wilson; Second Seaman Regiment, Captain G. A. Hoogewerff; Third Seaman Regiment, Captain J. D. McDonald.

Brigade staff: Lieutenant Commander G. L. Smith, brigade adjutant; Lieutenant Commander E. C. Kalbfus, brigade quartermaster; Lieutenant P. R. McCrary, brigade ordnance officer; Pay Inspector S. McGowan, brigade commissary; Surgeon W. Braisted, brigade surgeon; Lieutenant S. C. Hooper, brigade signal officer; Lieutenant R. P. Emerick, aide; Lieutenant R. P. Emerick, aide.

Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels arrived to-day from Washington to take part to-morrow in the unveiling. To-day was given over to official calls between Secretary Daniels, Rear Admiral Badger, members of the Maine Monument Commission, Mayor Gaynor and others.

Beavers Again Asks For "Protected List"

Chief of Police James L. Beavers again called on Carl Hutcheson Thursday morning for the list of disorderly houses which Mr. Hutcheson referred to in a recent open letter as protected by police. Mr. Hutcheson is said to have told the chief the list was not completed.

Chief Beavers reminded Mr. Hutcheson that it was the third day since the letter was published in which he promised to have the "protection list" ready in three days.

Knife Penetrates Brain as He Falls

LEXINGTON, KY., May 29.—Chester Lacefield, 23, a wealthy farmer of Tyrone, Ky., while intoxicated attacked his wife and her brother, Raymond Carrier, with a knife.

Carrier knocked Lacefield down and as he fell the knife penetrated Lacefield's brain, killing him. Carrier was arrested.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"St. Elmo" at the Atlanta.

"St. Elmo" has made a hit through the excellence of its presentation at the Atlanta Theater this week. It will remain every night with another matinee on Saturday. The play has pleased as nothing else has in the past and is showing its popularity by attracting big crowds to the playhouse. Miss Long and Mr. Vail are very convincing in their parts and easily surpass their previous efforts in the play. "St. Elmo" was produced at the request of the majority of patrons and is proving its worth.

Excellent Bill at Forsyth.

Patrons of the cozy Forsyth Theater are pleased with the excellent bill of Keith vaudeville which the management is presenting this week. Maggie Cline, "the Irish Queen," is the headliner and has scored a pronounced hit. The Great Howard, the ventriloquist, is also a great favorite. Caesare Nesi, the singer, and Madden and Fitzpatrick, in a comedy sketch, have scored successfully. It is a bill of real variety.

Tabloid Bill Is Popular.

Tabloid musical comedy as presented at the Bijou this week has found great favor at the hands of patrons of that play house. The bill is Joseph E. Howard's "The District Leader," and the offering is given in splendid fashion. There are pretty girls, tuneful music and delightful dances. The bill next week will be "The College Girls."

PIANO CLUB HAS PROPITIOUS START

Forty-six Members Enroll First Day, With Indications That Record Would Be Broken.

That interest in the player piano club campaign, begun last Sunday by the Weatherholt Piano Company, is increasing was demonstrated when the membership books opened.

The first day's enrollment amounted to 46 members and there was every indication that this record would be broken Thursday. T. E. Weatherholt, president of the company, has received letters and inquiries from throughout the South, indicating that the club plan will prove a great success.

Mr. Weatherholt's plans provide for a co-operative club of 400 members, who, by reason of their enormous purchasing power, are enabled to get $650 player pianos for $488.50 each on terms of $10 down and $2.50 a week. In addition to this, Mr. Weatherholt has arranged for many other features, including free music exchange privilege in a library of 5,000 roles of music. Each member will receive twelve roles of music with a player piano and this music may be exchanged daily if desired.

PROGRESSIVE AIDS 2-WARSHIP PLAN

Representative Stephens, on the Naval Affairs Committee, Now Favors Stronger Fleet.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Representative Stephens, Progressive, of California, who has been assigned to the House Naval Affairs Committee, declared to-day he would vote for the construction of two battleships at the next session of Congress.

"I am in favor of a big navy," said Stephens, "and I believe in maintaining the navy in its present efficient status. If the navy officials decide they need two battleships next year, or even more, I shall be in sympathy with whatever they recommend."

Stephens favors the stationing of a battleship force on the Pacific Coast large enough for all emergencies.

Malta Lodge Holds First Communication

Malta Lodge of Masons held its first official communication Wednesday night at the Masonic Temple. The meeting was attended by 250 members and visitors, among whom were some of Georgia's most prominent Masons.

Following the meeting the lodge extended an open invitation to all the past masters and officers of local lodges to attend a dinner at Durand's cafe. Several speeches commenting on the occasion were heard, among the speakers being James L. Mayson, city attorney; Thomas H. Jeffries, past grand master of the State of Georgia; Joseph C. Greenfield, secretary of the Scottish Rite bodies, and Dr. Wallace, of the Georgia Tech. W. R. Bush, worshipful master of Malta Lodge, was toastmaster.

And every man can eat it without taking a moment's thought about digestion when the pie crust is light, flaky, tender as you can make it with

Swift's Silver-Leaf Lard

This recipe makes perfect pie crust. Try it:

Mix ½ teaspoon salt into 1½ cups flour; work in ¾ cup Swift's Silver-Leaf Lard, moisten with water, roll out. Spread with tablespoonful Swift's Silver-Leaf Lard, dredge with flour, roll up like jelly roll, pat and roll out, roll up again and cut off enough for lower crust. Roll out remainder for upper crust and when ready for oven put few small dots Silver-Leaf Lard on top.

Shortening that makes good pie crust will make tasty pastry of all kinds. Swift's Silver-Leaf Lard is put up in tight covered, new tin pails. Every one bears the Government inspection stamp guaranteeing the purity and wholesomeness of the lard. Buy a pail.

Where Is the Woman Who Does Not "Love" a Hand-Embroidered Shirtwaist?

A Rare and Fine Opportunity to Own

Hand-Embroidered Shirtwaist Patterns

At a Very Small Part of Their Actual Worth

The Selling Begins at 9 o'Clock in the Embroidery Section

We wish every woman in Atlanta who does this sort of needlework herself could see these waist patterns! Could see the exquisite evenness and preciseness of every hand-made stitch, the intricate designs of florals and sprays, the wee little tucks and all. They would, every one, marvel that such work could be sold at these prices. They are all white and many of them are all but made, with embroidered cuffs and collars and backs, and with material for the whole waist. All one has to do is to cut the waist out, fit it and stitch it together.

Here are the reductions:

$15.00 to $25.00 Waist Patterns $7.98
(Only a few of these)

$ 6.50 to $10.00 Waist Patterns $5.98
$ 2.29 Waist Patterns $1.50

T. R. KEEPS 'REAL GENTLEMAN'S' WINE CELLAR

Son of Colonel's Cousin, Ex-President's "Pal," So Testifies at Libel Suit Hearing.

MARQUETTE, MICH., May 29.—Testimony of Philip James Roosevelt, son of a cousin of the former President, that Colonel Roosevelt kept a "regular gentleman's wine cellar" at his home in Oyster Bay was the feature of this morning's session of the trial of Colonel Roosevelt's suit for $10,000 libel for charges made in an editorial by George W. Newett, editor of The Ishpeming Iron Ore, that Roosevelt "was drunk, nota infrequently."

The younger Roosevelt followed Charles Thompson, a New York newspaper man; Andrew Abele, former locomotive engineer of Ashtabula, Ohio, and A. Z. Blair, an attorney of Portsmouth, Ohio, all of whom bore witness to the former President's sobriety during trips when they accompanied him.

Calls Colonel Abstemious.

After stating he lived near the former President's home at Oyster Bay, ond that he was the colonel's daily companion when the latter was at Oyster Bay, Philip Roosevelt testified he never had seen the colonel drink other than at meals and then only white wine and occasionally a glass of champagne. He also declared that the limit of his indulgence on the last Presidential campaign was a spoonful of brandy in a glass of milk, and denied indignantly that he ever had seen the colonel drunk.

"Does Roosevelt keep wines and liquors in his home?" was the first question of Attorney Andrews for the defense.

"Yes," was the answer.

Q. A collection of liquors?—A. A regular gentleman's cellar.

Q. Scotch whisky?—A. I never saw it, but I supposed it was there.

Q. White wine?—A. Yes.

Q. Champagne?—A. Yes.

Q. Brandy?—A. I presume it was there.

Story Prepared in Advance.

Q. How long have you been a newspaper man?—A. Since March, 1913.

Q. Are you doing newspaper work here?—A. My pay is going on.

Q. Are you acting for your paper?—A. I am sending out stories.

Q. Did you write up and send out Colonel Roosevelt's testimony before it was given?—A. No.

Q. Was it written up before it was delivered?—A. Yes.

Q. And sent out by any person?—A. The Colonel prepared a statement embodying the substance of his testimony and I presume it was sent out.

Q. And it was printed in New York before the Colonel went on the stand?

On objection, the court refused to permit a reply. On redirect examination the witness said liquor was never pressed on guests at Roosevelt's home.

Court was adjourned until 2 o'clock after Andrews had testified he never saw Roosevelt drink spirituous liquors during the campaign in Cuba fifteen years ago.

Newett Ready to Testify.

George W. Newett, defendant in the suit, was prepared to take the stand to-day in his own defense to tell the sources of the information on which he based his charges of drunkenness and profanity.

A trip made by Newett to Florida, during which he met a number of prominent persons who are alleged to have spoken of Roosevelt's alleged over-indulgence in liquor, and similar statements made to him by persons in Michigan, will form the basis of his testimony.

Newett will also tell of various articles which he saw in newspapers and magazines which influenced him to write the editorial now in question.

The Ishpeming editor has not been well for some months, and as soon as the present case is ended he will go to a hospital for an operation.

The Colonel to-day declined an invitation to address the Marquette G. A. R. on Memorial Day.

TWO NEWS ITEMS

INDIVIDUAL TRUSTEE DISSIPATES ESTATE

Georgia newspapers the other day gave an account of the dissipation of an estate which left a young lady penniless. The father, who had a comfortable business in a Georgia city, died several years ago, leaving his only child, a daughter, an estate of $35,000. A man, a friend of the family, who was then considered honest and capable, was appointed trustee for the daughter's property. On coming of age she called upon him for an accounting and delivery of her inheritance and HE IMMEDIATELY DISAPPEARED. He is still among the "missing," and THE YOUNG LADY'S INHERITANCE IS GONE.

TRUST COMPANY OF GA. DOUBLES THIS ESTATE

The other news item, not heretofore published, relates to an Atlanta lady who died, leaving an only child, a son of ten years. SHE HAD WISELY MADE A WILL IN WHICH THE TRUST COMPANY OF GEORGIA was appointed EXECUTOR and GUARDIAN of the property of her son. From his inheritance, which was officially appraised at $16,500, the boy was supported comfortably and given a college education. When he reached his majority, less than a month ago, the TRUST COMPANY OF GEORGIA, his Guardian, turned over to him property appraised at $31,345, thus, with his maintenance, more than doubling the estate.

TRUST COMPANY OF GEORGIA

PARADE CLOSES REUNION OF VETERANS

Old Soldiers of the South March Along Chattanooga Streets Under Tattered Battle Flags.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., May 29. The twenty-third annual reunion of the Confederate Veterans closed today with the veterans' parade, in which the old soldiers of the South marched under the tattered battle flags of half a century ago and under the Stars and Stripes of a reunited country.

Military bands furnished martial music to which the tottering old soldiers, hundreds of them in gray uniforms, tramped through the downtown streets. Grandstands along Market and Broad Streets, the principal thoroughfares traversed, were filled with visitors and Chattanoogans who lustily cheered the old veterans.

General Bennett H. Young, mounted on a Kentucky thoroughbred charger, headed the parade. General J. P. Hickman, of Nashville, commander of the Tennessee Division, was chief marshal.

Exodus of Visitors Begins.

The exodus of visitors began immediately after the parade and throughout the afternoon and night special and regular trains will be leaving the depots every hour.

The reunion festivities will come to a formal close to-night when the Sons of Confederate Veterans give their annual ball to sponsors and maids of honor at Bennett H. Young pavilion.

Several hundred veterans will go to Dalton, Ga., to-morrow to attend commander of the Army of Northern Virginia Department; General George P. Harrison, of Alabama, commander of the Army of Tennessee Department, and General K. M. VanZandt, of Texas, commander of the Trans-Mississippi Department, were re-elected, and Jacksonville, Fla., was chosen for the 1914 reunion by the veterans at the principal business session of the reunion late yesterday afternoon. Next year's gathering will be the first reunion held in Florida. Jacksonville defeated Nashville, its nearest competitor, which has had two reunions, by a vote of almost 4 to 1. Houston, Texas, and Tulsa, Okla., received scattering votes. The selection was then made unanimous.

"Turkey Trot" and "Virginia Reel."

A parade by the Sons of Veterans yesterday afternoon and a ball for the veterans at Bennett H. Young Pavilion last night were features that attracted the interest of the thousands of sponsors, maids of honor and other visitors. At the ball the Virginia reel and quadrille of 50 years ago were danced between snatches of the present-day "turkey trot" and two-step.

EXHIBITS FEATURE HARDWARE MEET

"Georgia - Manufactured" Goods Shown at Convention of Dealers at Auditorium-Armory.

The Georgia Retail Hardware Merchants' Association got down to active business Thursday morning, when the third session of their convention opened at the Auditorium. Several important committee reports, comprising recommendations on the future policy of the association, are to be presented to the convention at Thursday's sessions.

Reports of the secretary, John L. Moore, of Madison, Ga., and several minor committees, already submitted, show the association to be in a prosperous condition and gaining steadily in membership and influence.

One of the attractive features of the convention is the hardware exhibits in the lobby of the Auditorium. The space where they are shown was crowded with sight-seers all day. Much of the hardware exhibited was manufactured in Georgia.

Wilmer L. Moore, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, welcomed the hardware men on behalf of commercial Atlanta at the opening session Wednesday, and Mayor James G. Woodward gave the official greetings of the city government. P. S. Twitty, of Dublin, one of the leading members of the association, responded to Mayor Woodward's address. Others who spoke were R. W. Hatcher, Milledgeville; G. W. Woodruff, Winder; C. B. Thomas, Griffin; J. R. Hall, Moultrie; W. G. Raines, Statesboro.

On Wednesday evening the visitors were the guests of Atlanta wholesale and retail hardware men at the Forsyth Theater.

The Social World

An event of interest to a wide circle of friends was the marriage of Miss Katherine Rawling and Mr. Philip Wakeman Wilcox Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Rawling, in Druid Hills.

The house was elaborately decorated. The couple stood before a bank of palms in the library, the altar of greenery being flanked on either side with clusters of white roses and valley lilies. Throughout the apartments smilax formed a mural decoration and the mantels were banked with small foliage plants, starred with tiny electric lights.

The only attendant was Mr. Sidney Wilcox, of New York, as best man. Bishop Leete, of the Methodist Church, officiated, and a limited number of guests were present.

The bride wore white brocade satin, with draperies of point lace, and bridal veil of point lace. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and valley lilies.

Mrs. Rawling, the bride's mother, wore gray charmeuse satin, with draperies of pale pink chiffon. Mrs. Sidney Wilcox, of New York, the bridegroom's mother, wore white Brussels lace, with touches of lavender. His aunt, Mrs. Fulford, of Canada, wore black chiffon cloth. Mrs. J. T. Wheeler, of New York, the bride's aunt, wore black lace.

A reception followed the ceremony and supper was served. The bride's table was decorated with pink roses, arranged in a tall basket, the handle twined with pink tulle and pink roses. Pink roses were banked on the buffet, serving table and mantel, and the sun parlor, where punch was served, was decorated with sweetpeas.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox left after the reception for the East, and on their return they will be at home at the Druid Hills residence of Mr. and Mrs. Rawling during the latter's absence in Europe. Later they will build on the adjoining lot, which was a wedding present.

The bride has many friends, both in Atlanta and in New York, her former home. Mr. Wilcox is a popular young man. He is secretary and treasurer of the Cleveland-Manning Piano Company.

Mother Goose Pageant.

Atlanta society is on the tiptoe of happy anticipation.

And why? Mother Goose and all her little geese are coming to town Saturday afternoon and will be ready to greet you on the lawn of the Clyde Kings, which by all odds is one of the most charming spots in the city for her Goose-ship and all the busy little people of her family.

And right here, be it said, any one who wishes to meet Mother Goose or any especial favorite of the days of his childhood, has only to take the car to Druid Hills, and, presto! he is there.

Mother Goose is coming as the special guest of the Joseph Habersham Chapter, D. A. R., of which Mrs. John Perdue is regent. Her visit will aid in building the chapter house the Joseph Habersham people are planning.

So enthusiastic is Atlanta society over the coming of Mother Goose and her wonderful family that little else has been talked of by the pleasure-loving set.

The committee work is in charge of members of the Joseph Habersham Chapter, with Mrs. William Lawson Peel, vice regent general of the National Daughters of the American Revolution, as chairman general.

The Mother Goose pageant will include more than 100 children of prominent families. There will be tableaux, parade, maypole dances, solo dances, and all sorts of entertainment.

Verses written by one of the enthusiastic members of the chapter, who has embodied in the poem the most interesting features of the coming event, read:

Mother Goose pageant! A great lawn fete!
'Twill be out of doors, so you pay at the gate!
A great, big show, and plenty of frills—
On Mrs. King's lawn—1010 Druid Hills.

There'll be the old woman who lived in a shoe,
Little Jack Horner and Little Boy Blue,
A lot of little ponies, and, sure, a dapple gray,
For boys and girls to ride upon "to ride a mile away."

Blue Beard with his many wives and Merry Peter Pan,
Little Orphan Annie, and the funny Soldier Man;
Goblins, dwarfs and fairies, dancing in the air,
Curly Locks and Humpty Dump, and Little Golden Hair,

The Beggar Man from Hamelin with the magic of his pipe,
The old maid in the garden with the nose the Black Birds swipe;
Margery Daw, a good see-saw, and saucy old King Cole;
Robin Hood, his merry men, Warriors and Knights of Old.

The Flowers and the Maidens that belong to Mistress Mary,
All so sweet and winning and none of them contrary.
Many are the prizes for the splendid baby show.
Babies there will be so fine you can almost watch them grow.

There'll be grab-bags and candy and cake and good ice cream,
And all the wonders of the world of which you only dream.
Your friends right straight from Fairyland will all be turned a-loose
To join the gorgeous pageant of good old Mother Goose.

A Liza Lehmann Evening.

A musical entertainment will be given at the parish house of the Church of the Incarnation in West End on the evening of June 3. A quartet, composed of Mrs. John L. Meek, soprano; Mrs. Arthur Crevision, contralto; Mr. Howard Davis, tenor, and Mr. John Mullin, basso, will sing the "Nonsense Rhymes from Alice in Wonderland," set to music by Liza Lehmann.

The Rev. John D. Wing has consented to give a reading of "The Happy Prince," by Oscar Wilde, with incidental music, also by Lehmann. Mr. Charles A. Sheldon, Jr., will be the accompanist for the evening. The musical is given under the auspices of Epiphany Guild of Inman Park and St. Mary's Guild of the Church of the Incarnation.

All cars run every ten minutes, and are marked "Ponce DeLeon to Druid Hills," and run directly in front of the lawns where the Mother Goose pageant will be held.

Miss Harrison Entertains.

Miss Lucy Harrison entertained at bridge Thursday afternoon for Miss Courtney Harrison, whose marriage to Mr. Loring Raoul will take place Monday. Pink sweetpeas formed the decorations in all apartments except the sun parlor, where daisies were used. The tea table was adorned with pink sweetpeas, arranged in a basket, the minor details being pink and white. Prizes were a hand-made piece of lingerie for the honor guest, a French glit picture frame for top score, and silk hose for consolation.

Shower for Miss Andrews.

Mrs. Florence Harris entertained about seventy guests at a miscellaneous shower at her home in Inman Park Thursday afternoon for Miss Lina Andrews, a bride-elect. Packages were delivered to the bride-elect by parcel post, little Roy Martin acting as postman. Misses Allie Candler and Van DeVander served punch.

Mrs. Harris was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. William Candler, Mrs. D. W. Orr, Mrs. J. D. Ficklen, and the members of Miss Andrews' Sunday school class. The reception room was decorated in a profusion of daisies.

the construction, case design and the finish, but you must look to the name for reliability of construction, and the assurance that the good qualities will endure. The house of KIMBALL has had an experience of over fifty years in the music industry, and artists, amateurs, and thousands of satisfied customers give abundant proof of the merit of the Kimball.

We are showing a large variety of styles in 88-note Player Pianos and Uprights. We have your choice in woods, such as Rosewood, Walnut, Circassian Walnut, Oak, Mission, Satin Mahogany and Mahogany. Prices ranging from $195 to $1,250.

Our one, absolutely one, price insures you, whether an experienced buyer or not, of securing the best instrument for the amount you wish to pay. It is not safe to buy a piano, or any other article of merchandise, from a dealer who has a sliding scale of prices, because you will never know when he has given you his lowest price. Then, too, your neighbor may buy the same merchandise for from $50 to $75 less money. A piano has but one value, and that should fix its price—the right price. Each and every instrument on our wareroom floor is tagged at the cash figure, and no one pays more or less.

It is not only safe, but pleasant, to deal with the world's largest manufacturers of Pianos, Player Pianos, Residence and Church Pipe Organs, through this Branch Store.

A Duty to Look Well

By Virginia T. Van De Water.

A WOMAN was running a piece of pink ribbon into a dainty underwaist. Her small son, aged six, stood watching her. At last he spoke out his thought—

"Mama, why do you put ribbon in that thing?"

"To draw it up on the shoulders and fasten it with," was the smiling explanation.

"Wouldn't a piece of twine do as well?" queried the lad soberly.

The mother paused a moment, concealing the amusement she felt. Then she spoke gravely and frankly.

"No, dear," she said, "twine might fasten it, but it would not do as well, for it is not as pretty as ribbon."

A Real Duty.

A man might have considered that reply evidence of a feminine lack of logic. To the woman who thinks long it held a truth that it is well to consider. When, without sacrifice of principle or duty, one can make of a practical thing also a pretty thing, it is a mistake—almost a wrong—not to do it.

The small boy, as he grew older, learned to admire the dainty, delicate touches in his mother's apparel. "My mother always looks nice," he used to say when the matter of woman's appearance was discussed.

I know one woman who seems to think that she does God service in looking as plain as possible. She is scrupulously neat in appearance, but her mental attitude reminds one of the small boy's question: "Wouldn't a piece of twine do as well?" All the appointments of her home are plain and substantial, bought—like Mrs. Primrose's wedding dress—with a thought of durability rather than of beauty. She scorns fine china, and considers cut glass a useless folly of the rich. As to solid silver, why should one use it when plated ware carries the food to one's mouth just as effectually?

Of course, she has a scorn of all "modern notions," such as centerpieces, doilies and "place-plates." "Useless nuisances," she says sententiously. I often wonder how her children ar going to regard the home of their childhood when they go out into the world and see the dainty accessories of dress and furnishings which are unknown in their family and household. Fortunately this woman is the exception, not the rule, of her sex when she declares: "It is a mark of weakness to spend time on ornamentation and convention."

Don't Look Homely!

Were we all to adopt this principle through life how many hard and ugly corners there would be, corners that are now rounded or hidden!

To look as homely as one can is no more a virtue than to be as frankly disagreeable as one sometimes feels like being. Few of us can be handsome, but we need not elect to be positively ugly—if we can help it. In fact to mitigate the bad points in our personal appearance and to emphasize the good ones is an actual duty.

Perhaps some one asks to whom one owes this duty. The answer is plain. One owes it to the world at large, but, primarily, to one's own family. Surely it is the business of both man and woman to look as well as he and she can.

It is not always convenient to fuss over one's personal appearance when the mercury climbs up toward the hundred mark, but when one acquires the habit of invariably looking as well as is conformable with one's other duties, one will not be satisfied to wear a dark calico wrapper instead of a dainty and equally cool negligee—even for "home people" only.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

Tom found Jennie a little crumpled heap on the sofa.

Chapter 6.

AS THE MAN held Jennie tight in his arms, kissing her—she at last realized his intentions and could THEN see clearly the meaning of the dinner in the swell restaurant and the auto ride into the country. Jennie fought and struck the man in the face as hard as she could—whereupon the former "so polite and fatherly" MAN turned into the beast he was at heart—held her tight against the wall choking her. When he realized there was nothing to be gained that way he tried to treat the whole thing as a joke. Jennie watched her chance and did more THINKING in the next few seconds than she has ever taken the TROUBLE to do before. THE MAN told her the proprietor of the place was a friend of his and it would be of no use for her to make a scene, for she couldn't leave the place until he got good and ready for her to leave. Then he offered her fine dresses, diamonds, anything she wanted—so why not be a "good fellow."

THE MAN was between Jennie and the door and she saw it was useless to try and get out that way—the window opened out onto a porch and before the man could get around the table to catch her, she was through it and running up the road for her life. She ran and ran, dodging off the road into some woods. The branches tore her face and dress but she kept on till she could run no more. She sat down on an old log and listened but could hear no one following. There she sat in her little torn dress shaking and crying until she realized it was getting dark. She wandered on through the woods and came to a farm house where she found an old lady who, after hearing her story, loaned her enough money for the railroad fare home.

Tom came over to her house that evening after wondering all day where she could have gone and found Jennie a little crumpled heap on the front room sofa.

"Oh! indeed! He is well off?" went on the stern inquisitor.

"He has some money, I suppose," said the girl dully. How long was this to continue?

"How much, do you suppose?" There was cutting sarcasm in the tone.

A little flicker of mischief lit Charlotte's eyes. Why, if this was a game after all, she would play it high—spiritedly—she would win. "As much as YOU have—I suppose!"

"You are sanguine, I think, Fraulein Charlotte. Is his family as much respected as OURS?" Solomon admired a WORTHY antagonist—even though that antagonist might be his daughter!

"All's Well."

"Just as much," said demure Charlotte. She dared now to raise her eyes—to look at Jacob—whose face was lit now by a smile of component parts of amusement and eagerness.

"A Jew?"

"Yes."

"Of course. Tell me; my child. Tell me. On this much I must insist." Charlotte hesitated in lovely confusion. "Tell me—my child, tell your father."

Blushing, trembling—radiant, and yet frightened now that her moment had come—Charlotte laid her little white hands on her father's strong shoulders, and turned him gently toward the window where Jacob stood. "There—he is there."

But now Jacob's hour had come—love must have its way. All in one pulsing moment, he had crossed the room, and Charlotte was caught in hungry arms. "Charlotte—my little Charlotte. Come." And Old Sol, beaming joyously through the rose arbor, was Love's only confidant, as the boy and girl fled to the great outdoors—mother Nature—with their precious joy.

Solomon laughed. "Magnificent! So I have worked and calculated and spent my money—for my nephew!"

Frau Gudula lived again in one brief moment her own love dream. "And those two have made their Lover's Lane out of their Grannie's old Jew's Alley! Yes, it is magnificent!"

From under the table the old Frau drew a battered little low stool. She smiled—but there was the pathos of the very old—whose race is nearly run in her gentle tone. "Come and sit here, Solomon, my son. Sit here as you used to in the dear long ago when you were a child—and your dear father was with me—instead of calling me from far away. What does it matter, my son, if they are happy? Not in your way, perhaps, but in hers your little Charlotte is happy—our little Jacob and Charlotte are happy. Happy, my son. All our money could not buy a better thing than that. Cannot YOU be content?"

Solomon looked out beyond the open door—out on the rose-hung terrace where young love had come at last into its own. Perhaps it was his mother's gentle tones, perhaps it was his daughter's glorified face, perhaps it was the memory of Charlotte's mother—the wife who had been his only love—three generations of loving women seeking the way to Solomon's heart, and Solomon's heart knew youth and love again.

"Yes, mother—dear, I am content." And in the Garden of Cupid at Neustadt Castle, and in the rose arbor of Jew's Lane, there was peace—for in the hearts of the royal cousins of Taunus, and in the home of the Five Frankforters, love had come into his kingdom.

THE END.

Unexpected Result.

Here is an emigration story told at a meeting recently. In a village was a youth who had got himself into such a variety of scrapes that his people thought it would be better to dispatch him to Canada, so as to get him away from old and doubtful associations. He agreed to go, provided those interested in his departure secured him some testimonials. Half a dozen were got for him. They sang his praises in unrestrained terms, spoke of his geniality, of his good address and exceptional capability, and all the other virtues that few men have, but many get the credit for.

When the young man read the testimonials he turned to his father and exclaimed:

"Well, I'm hanged! I had no idea people thought so much of me. And now I know how much they like me I'm blowed if I'll go away at all."

"D-darling, d-do you l-love me?" she gasped.

"Love you?" said he, as he got a tighter grip; "love you? Why, precious one, madly as I hug you now, the fervor of my affection almost makes me long to be an octopus with eight arms."

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS.

Gordon Kelly, a young North Georgia mountaineer, comes to Atlanta to get a place with Billy Smith's Crackers. It is raining when he reaches Ponce DeLeon and he is nearly run over by an auto, in which are two persons—a man and a young girl. The driver of the car is an arrogant fellow. The girl makes him stop the machine. She gets out and inquires if Kelly is injured. She apologizes for her companion's brusque manner. Kelly sees Manager Smith and tells him he has never played a game of ball. Smith consents to give Kelly a trial. The girl in the auto is Mildred Deery, daughter of Galen Deery, a crafty and wealthy speculator in timber lands. Her companion is Forrest Cain, a rich young man about town. Kelly owns timber land that Deery would like to possess. Kelly is invited to the Deery home, where he is introduced to Mildred. Cain hears Mildred order an auto to take her guest to his hotel. He takes the driver's place and carries Kelly out into the woods. Kelly thrashes Cain. Manager Smith tells the newspapers about his new find and the reporters print all sorts of "joshing" stories about Kelly.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Looks like the real thing," acknowledged the veteran backstop.

From that time on Long Tom didn't give Kelly an easy fly to catch. He purposely batted the ball so that if the recruit got to it at all it would be at least a hard catch. The result was one of the most wonderful exhibitions of ground covering by an outfielder ever seen on a ball field. Finally Smith called a halt by declaring morning practice at an end.

The players went at once to the clubhouse to take off their uniforms, stand under a shower bath and dress themselves for the street. The clubhouse became at once a very lively place. Each player was assigned a locker for uniforms, clothes and personal belongings. In front of these lockers were short benches, placed there for the use of the players while dressing or undressing.

It so happened that Long Tom Morrissey and Gordon Kelly had adjoining lockers and therefore sat side by side as they started to undress. The other players were busy with their own affairs and did not notice the other two until suddenly they heard Kelly cry:

"You can't call me that, Morrissey."

All hands turned in the direction of the voice just in time to see Long Tom draw back and slap Kelly in standing up. The two men were now staning up. Their shoes were off and they were stripped to the waist. The next instant there was a furious mixup. Benches were overturned as the tall, gaunt veteran swayed in the embrace of the tall, lithe youngster.

It was all over in half a minute. At the end of that time Morrisey lay, an inert mass, in a corner of the clubhouse, where he had fallen with a loud crash. Ball players do not interfere with clubhouse fights. Even a manager will not interfere. If there are grudges to be settled, it is best to have them settled and be done with them. That is the philosophy of the clubhouse. Players see to it that there is fair play. That is all.

"Call It Square."

No one knew what passed between the two men that led up to the encounter. After the brief battle, Kelly replaced his overturned bench as though nothing had happened, and quickly removing the rest of his clothing stepped under the shower in an adjoining room. The other players went to the assistance of Long Tom, who showed signs of life about this time. They raised the veteran to his feet. Morrissey blinked for awhile and then a grin bespread his features. His left cheek was cut and bleeding.

"The kid is all right," he exclaimed heartily. "My nerve was better than my judgment, that's all."

He, too quickly pulled off his clothes and stepping out of the room, turned on the shower next the one where Kelly was standing. With the water pouring down his body in streams he reached out his hand to the young man.

"My fault, kid. I apologize. Call it square?"

Gordon Kelly grasped the outstretched hand.

"Certainly I will," he said, with a rare smile.

Kelly dressed himself rapidly and was the first to leave the clubhouse. The others followed singly and in pairs. Long Tom Morrissey and Bill Smith were the last to go.

"Did that guy tell you he never played a game of ball?" demanded the veteran backstop of his manager, as he slipped the key of his locker in his pocket.

"That's what he said" replied Smith.

"And never played a game of ball?"

"That's what he said."

"Billy, he's kiddin' you. Why, he even fights like a ball player," declared Long Tom, with a grin. He started to leave the clubhouse when his manager called him back.

"Want to change your locker?" asked Smith.

"Me? What for?" demanded Morrissey in surprise.

"You're right next to the kid and I thought on account of—"

"That's where I want to be; right next to the kid," Long Tom broke in. "He's my pal, Billy."

CHAPTER XII.

AS Gordon Kelly hurried out of the clubhouse he asked himself this question: "Is the game worth the candle?" and on his way down town he had a chance to study the question and answer it to his own satisfaction.

Within the past few hours he had, first, been more or less ridiculed in the newspapers and, second, he had engaged in a clubhouse fight with another ball player. That, he figured, was a pretty strenuous way for a novice like himself to begin a baseball career. Would every day have its bad features as this day had? Would it not be best for him to quit the game right now? How about going to Manager Smith and thanking him for his kindness, but telling him at the same time he had decided to call it all off.

Greeted by Mildred.

Ruminating further on the subject he came to the conclusion that the newspapers were right. The reporters were perfectly justified in refusing to laud him to the skies before he had demonstrated his ability. There was nothing really objectionable in what they had said about him. He confessed to himself that what they had published was largely true and they had written their articles in a humorous vein which was well within their rights under the circumstances. No, he had no fault to find with the newspapers.

But how about that clubhouse fight? Well, that was a thing of the past. Long Tom had apologized, he had accepted the apology and he believed they would be friends from now on. Then why quit? Wouldn't that make him more ridiculous than ever? Besides he didn't like the sound of the word. No, he wouldn't quit. He would stick it out—do the best he could and trust to luck and Providence.

Glancing out of the car window at this stage of his meditations, Kelly beheld Miss Deery seated at the wheel of an automobile of which she was the sole occupant. There was a temporary blockade and Kelly seized the opportunity to jump off the street car and hurry around to where Miss Deery's machine was packed in with several others, waiting for the jam to clear itself. He raised his hat.

"How do you do?" smiled Mildred pleasantly. "Jump in and I'll drive you home; or, better still, come to my house and have luncheon with me."

"Is that where you are headed for?" inquired Gordon, stepping into the car and seating himself beside the young woman.

"I don't seem to be headed for anywhere in this blockade. Ah, here we are," and the car moved slowly forward. "Well, what is your lordship's pleasure?"

"You are very kind, but before giving an answer I have a counter proposition to make."

The nature of which is."

"Judge Barbee kindly sent me a card to his club and he wrote me there was a ladies' dining room there. The card is only good for two weeks and I would like to make use of it. Won't you take lunch with me there?"

"That would be simply fine. But we'll have to go home anyway, because I have to prink up a little bit," said Mildred, with an arch look.

"I think you are very charming as you are," remarked Gordon.

Mildred laughed gaily.

"Mr. Kelly, you told me you lived all your life in the mountains and have only been in Atlanta a week. You are certainly learning fast. Who's your teacher?"

"You are the only girl I know in Atlanta, Miss Deery."

"As you know how to say nice things I'll take that as a compliment."

They were soon at the Deery residence, and leaving him in the big, comfortable living room to amuse himself Mildred ran upstairs. Contrary to the assertions of humorists, she was back again inside of ten minutes, with a complete change of costume, and if she was charming before, she was bewitching now. Gordon offered to drive the car, and with the smiling comment that he seemed to have many accomplishments for a mountaineer, Mildred arranged herself beside him. Ten minutes later they were at the club and seated at a table. When the waiter had taken their order, Gordon asked, seriously:

"Have you ever seen a game of baseball, Miss Deery.?"

"Of course I have. I've seen Georgia and Tech play half a dozen times. And I saw Harvard and Yale play on the Polo Grounds, New York, too."

"Which side won?"

"I've forgotten. I went with a party of friends, some of whom wanted Yale to win and the others wanted Harvard to win. I got all mixed up in the excitement."

"Did you ever see a professional game of baseball here in Atlanta, at Ponce DeLeon Park?

"No, I never did. Why this cross-examination, Mr. Kelly?"

"I'm trying to find out your likes and dislikes, in order to avoid the dislikes."

"That's very nice of you, I rather like baseball: I'll say that."

The talk went on. Gordon Kelly was becoming very much interested in Mildred Deery; to such an extent that he was anxious to learn what her opinions were in regard to professional ball players. Yet he was afraid to ask the direct question. He beat around the bush for a while and then changed the subject, without getting the information he desired and without suspecting why he asked the questions.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the first nine installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read this tenth installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

FREE, NEXT SUNDAY.

The American Sunday Monthly Magazine, containing the first chapters of Jack London's new story, is GIVEN FREE with every copy of the next Sunday American.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

FOR HER SAKE, DO.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am twenty, and deeply in love with a girl of eighteen. She told me she loved me, and I love her, too, but some way I doubt her love. The other evening she attended a dance with a friend of mine after I asked her not to go. E. S. B.

Your attitude is one of fault-finding, and I not sure that the giving of your love to a woman means her happiness.

She says she loves you. Be grateful for that much and don't attempt to control her as if she were a child. If you can not be that generous, it will be a kindness to her to transfer your affections.

DON'T GO TO EXTREMES.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am a girl 20 years old. A few young men would like to keep steady company with me but I always refuse because I do not seem to care for them much. Do you think I should accept just the same? I am so lonesome because I am always home, while the other girls have a good time.
LONESOME.

Unless these men are objectionable to you, you must accept an occasional invitation, for it may be the means of meeting the man you will some day love. Don't get into the habit of isolation and consequent lonesomeness. It will grow on you.

FORGET YOURSELF.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am a young man of twenty and have been keeping company with a young lady for the past six months. I love this young lady very much and would be thankful for your advice on how to win her. R. M.

Forget yourself in an effort to make her happy. Be considerate, agreeable, persistent; let her know you love her and are willing to devote your life to her.

Household Suggestions

Moths can be kept away from furs or clothes by putting a piece of linen damped in turpentine in drawers or wardrobes. This should be renewed once or twice during the year. Moths will never attack carpets and curtains which have been well sprinkled with salt.

A small box of brickdust with a cork in it kept at the side of the sink will be found most useful for taking stains from knives, cups and all kinds of china and enamel ware. If at hand at washing-up time it saves many an after cleaning.

A good cleaning paste for enameled baths, zinc pails, etc., is made of equal parts of shaved yellow soap, whiting and common soda, dissolved over the fire in the least possible amount of water required to keep it from burning.

To hang pictures on a plastered wall try dipping the nail into cold water before driving it into the wall. It will bite into the plaster if this is done, and will hold a heavy weight without loosening.

Silencing the Philosopher.

"Yes," remarked the philosopher; "deafness is indeed a terrible affliction. But in such cases nature, you know, always provides some compensation. At any rate, if a man is deficient in one sense, he usually has another abnormally developed. Now, I once knew a poor blind fellow whose sense of touch was positively uncanny. Really, it served him almost as well as eyes do a normal man."

"Sure," said the genial Irishman, who hitherto had taken no part in the discussion, "an' I've noticed that, too! There's a friend of mine, he's lame, poor chap, but he can get about almost as easily as you or I. True, one of his legs is short, but the other makes up for it by being three inches longer!"

SUMMER FARES.

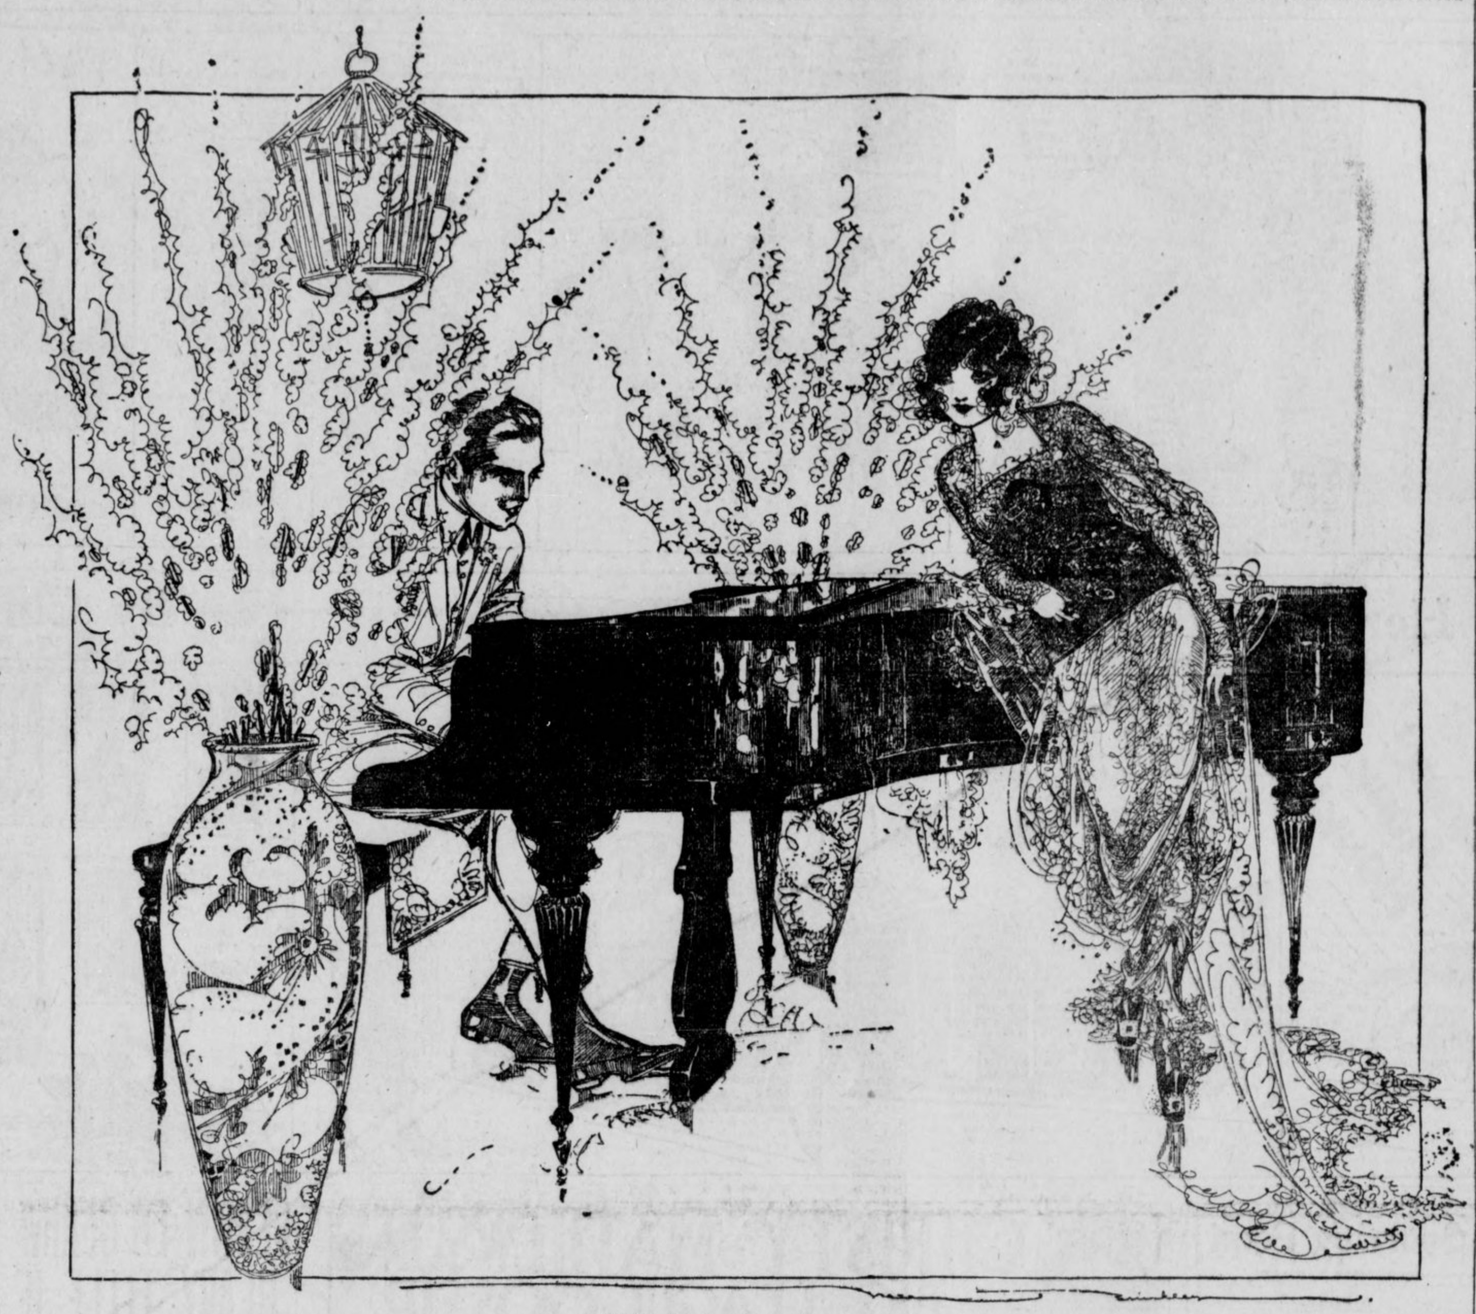
A Popular Song

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

BY NELL BRINKLEY



Nell Brinkley Says

THEY call it "I LOVE YOU." The Kings of Babylon and the slaves by the river sang it with equal fervor. In faeryland they know it. Adam brought it home to Eve and sang it tirelessly. On the plaintive "ukulele" of soft-aired Hawaii they have played it since the isles were born. Steel and iron clad men of the rough days of chivalry caroled it to the maids they met from the broad backs of their dray horses. Cleopatra whined it in her honey-sweet voice to dull-witted Antony. In the backwoods of Tennessee they know it. In the gray, melancholy uplands of wild Thibet rough-haired youths whisper it to bead-strung slant eyed girls. In the hidden corner of the music room, screened in spikes of fruit blossoms, a smart young chap hums it to a girl who never twisted up her own hair in her life, and out in the country, in an orchard, on the top rail of a gray old worm fence, a boy in a blue "jumper" chants it to a girl in a pink sunbonnet shading her sun-browned cheeks. Oh, it's a popular song—everybody knows it and everybody always did know it.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THARE was two ladies up to the house last nite. Both of them has daughters wich is jest going to git married & that maiks them feel kind of love sick themselfs, I guess, beekaus that is all that thay did all the time thay was to the house, talk about love. Pa dident like it a bit, beekaus both of the ladies was oalder than he is, & I have offen herd Pa say that wimmen shud talk about other topicks than love wen thay git middel aged, topicks like church work or how much life insurance thare husbands is going to leave them when thay die.

One of the ladies was naimed Missus Raymond & the other was Missus Belcher. Missus Raymond sed to Pa:

"Don't Cry," Said Ma.

I was jest telling your wife beefoar you caim in the room how sweet & innocent & gurlish my littel daughter looked to-day wen she was looking oaver sum pritty material for her trousseo. The deer littel cherup seemed so charming and confused and bewil-deringly pretty that I almost envied the man that is going to taik her away from me, sed Missus Raymond. Then she beegan to cry.

I doant think I wud cry if I was you, deerest, Ma sed to her. Do calm yurself & taik cumfurt in thinking about the pritty hoam that her husband is going to maik for her. Maybe you will be thare a grate deel of the time. Won't that be nice & cumfurtable? Ma sed to her.

It will be pretty tuff corn beef for her husband, sed Pa, the yung lady's husband, I meen. Wife, sed Pa, I suppoas you reemember the time yure loving mother caim here all the way from Wisconsin & started rite in trying to be the managing editor of our littel hoam. Of course, you reemember it, sed Pa. Will you evver fergit, sed Pa, the look of pained surprise that caim into her eyes wen I explained to her, as gently as I cud, that she dident have anything in the world to say about the management of my domestick affairs? If my memory dosent fail me, Pa sed, & I do not think it does, she stayed only three days insted of all summer.

You acted like a perfect cave man all the time she was here, I remember that, sed Ma. No wonder my poor mother seldum menshuns you in her letters.

But as I was saying about my daughter and Missus Raymond, I cuddent help thinking as I sat there & saw her, a dainty bud with youth's fresh bloom on her cheeks, that no man in this wurld was good enuff to be the husband of so divine a creechur. Of course the man she is going to marry is a splendid yung man & is the vice president of a big bank. But eeven if he were the president of the united Staits, sed Missus Raymond, he wuddent be good enuff for my daughter. No man is good enuff for a woman.

Looks for Gray Hairs.

They are good enuff for a woman around pay day, sed Pa. I have always noticed that when it gits neer the first of the month my wife beegins looking in my head for gray hairs & calling me her deer old boy. & the morning of pay day, Pa sed, she always follows me to the door and kisses me aggenn and aggenn, with the luv lite shining in her eyes, & says Be sure & come rite hoam after you git yure pay to-day, won't you, darling.

I nevver do any such thing ,sed Ma, & I agree with Missus Raymond that her daughter or any sweet, good gurl is too good for a man.

Oh, my daughter, sed Missus Raymond, can't let her go, I jest can't. & my daughter, too, sed Missus Belcher, it seems as if sum monster of the sea was coming ncerer & neerer to drag my daughter from her mother's arms. Then they both beegan to cry & Pa sneeked out of the room & went in the library ware the side board is.

.:. The Bashful Boy .:.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"WHAT I would like to ask," writes Rebecca, "is why it is better for a girl to associate with a bashful boy. On several occasions I have noticed that you state that a girl should honor such a young man, but you have never stated why."

The qualities in a bashful boy which make him a welcome suitor are more of a negative nature than of a positive. It is not that which he does, so much as that which he does not do. His sins are of omission and they are small compared with the sins of commission of his bolder brother.

The bashful boy doesn't flirt. With a tongue that halts and stammers, and a tell-tale color that is quicker than the blush of a young girl to proclaim his dishonesty did he attempt to be dishonest, he is not an adept at hypocrisy or concealment.

He is not a dandy. Neither is he a lady's man, and, my dear Rebecca, the presidents of banks and railroads, the powers in commercial life, the most profound thinkers and the men of letters the world honors, were never ladies' men.

His Hands.

He does not know what to do with his hands when out in society, but his employer will tell you he knows good use for them when at work.

Afraid of girls, he is forced to seek companionship in books and boys. The fear of girls gives him a respect for them which is wholesome; the companionship of boys gives him the outdoor exercise every young man needs.

He needs this tiring of every muscle, not alone for the results that are physical, but for moral returns. You are not too young, my dear, to know that the wolf that has been racing furiously up and down hill all day feels at night only the cry of tired limbs and aching muscles begging for rest. He is not the wolf that goes seeking an opening to break into the sheepfold!

If a bashful boy loves a girl it is with a sense of humility and his own unworthiness. He knows that he is the one who will be honored if his love is returned; his bolder brother has a faint suspicion, which the homage of silly girls confirms, that it is the girl who should be on her knees.

A Safe Way.

During his calf days he does all his signing for love's sake at a distance, which mothers will agree is the only safe and sane way for young girls to be loved.

He is always a good listener—no woman was ever bored to death by the talking of a bashful man.

Saying little, he says little for which he or others have cause for regret. He is a safe depository for secrets, a good man in whom to have confidence. If he is not a girl's lover the next best thing that could happen her would be to have him for a brother or a friend.

His compliments are not practiced, and are therefore sincere. When it takes effort and stupendous courage to hand a modest little flower to a girl, it follows that he will never throw bouquets at the head of every woman he meets.

Best of all, Rebecca, the bashful boy is a home boy. He is unafraid when with his mother and finds in her companionship the delight less bashful boys seek from home.

He is "a good boy" in the sweet old-fashioned sense, a boy who has escaped contamination a few years later than it comes to boys more bold.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"I guess we can find a way to have the marriage annulled, or whatever they do to marriages that don't take."

The brutal assurance of the man in thus referring to things that were sacred moved Dick to wrath.

"Don't you interfere," he said. His words were spoken softly but tensely.

Nevertheless, Burke held to the topic, but an indefinable change in his manner rendered it less offensive to the young man.

"Interfere! Huh!" he ejaculated, grinning broadly. "Why, that's what I'm paid to do. Listen to me, son. The minute you begin mixing up with crooks, you ain't in a position to give orders to any one. The crooks have got no rights in the eyes of the police. Just remember that."

He Was Not Listening.

The Inspector spoke the simple truth as he knew it from years of experience. The theory of the law is that a presumption of innocence exists until the accused is proven guilty. But the police are out of sympathy with such finical methods. With them, the crook is presumed guilty at the outset of whatever may be charged against him. If need be, there will be proof a-plenty against him—of the sort that the underworld knows to its sorrow.

But Dick was not listening. His thoughts were again wholly with the woman he loved, who, as the Inspector declared, had fled from him.

"Where's she gone in Chicago?"

Burke answered in his usual gruff fashion, but with a note of kindliness that was not without its effect on Dick.

"I'm no mind reader," he said. "But she's a swell little girl, all right. I've got to hand it to her for that. So, she'll probably stop at the Blackstone—that is, until the Chicago police are tipped off that she is in town."

Of a sudden, the face of the young man took on a totally different expression. Where before had been anger, now was a vivid eagerness. He went close to the Inspector, and spoke with intense seriousness.

"Burke," he said, pleadingly, "give me a chance. I'll leave for Chicago in the morning. Give me twenty-four hours' start before you begin hounding her."

The Inspector regarded the speaker searchingly. His heavy face was drawn in an expression of apparent doubt. Abruptly, then, he smiled acquiescence.

"Seems reasonable," he admitted.

But the father strode to his son.

"No, no, Dick," he cried. "You shall not go. You shall not go."

Burke, however, shook his head in remonstrance against Gilder's plea. His huge voice came booming, weightily impressive.

"Why not?" he questioned. "It's a fair gamble. And, besides, I like the boy's nerve."

Dick seized on the admission eagerly.

"And you'll agree?" he cried.

"Yes, I'll agree," the Inspector answered.

"Thank you," Dick said quietly.

But the father was not content. On the contrary, he went toward the two hurriedly, with a gesture of reproval.

"You shall not go, Dick," he declared, impetuously.

The Inspector shot a word of warning to Gilder in an aside that Dick could not hear.

"Keep still," he replied. "It's all right."

Dick went on speaking with a seriousness suited to the magnitude of his interests.

"You give me your word, Inspector," he said, "that you won't notify the police in Chicago until I've been there twenty-four hours?"

"I Don't Like It."

"You're on," Burke replied genially. "They won't get a whisper out of me until the time is up." He swung about to face the father, and there was a complete change in his manner. "Now, then, Mr. Gilder," he said briskly, "I want to talk to you about another little matter——"

Dick caught the suggestion, and interrupted quickly.

"Then I'll go." He smiled rather wanly at his father. "You know now, Dad, I'm sorry, but I've got to do what I think is the right thing."

Burke helped to save the situation from the growing tenseness.

"Sure," he cried heartily; "sure you have! That's the best any of us can do." He watched keenly as the young man went out of the room. It was not until the door closed after Dick that he spoke. Then he dropped to a seat on the couch, and proceeded to make his confidence to the magnate.

"He'll go to Chicago in the morning, you think, don't you?"

"Certainly," Gilder answered. "But I don't like it."

Burke slapped his leg with an enthusiasm that might have broken a weaker member.

"Best thing that could have happened!" he vociferated. And then, as Gilder regarded him in astonishment, he added, chuckling: "You see, he won't find her there."

"Why do you think that?" Gilder demanded, greatly puzzled.

Burke permitted himself the luxury of laughing appreciatively a moment more before making his explanation. Then he said quietly:

Get The Syrup Habit—
It's Good For You

Velva Syrup is more than a mere sweet. It's a fine, wholesome, healthful food. It's just what growing children need—and it's good for grown-ups, too. Earnest, careful scientists have long ago exploded the mossy idea that sweets are harmful—and they tell you that sweets are necessary. You'll find the syrup with the RED LABEL, fine. It has the smoothest of sugary flavor and rich color. It makes candies, fudge, cakes and cookies that just melt in one's mouth. It goes great with griddle cakes and it will make your good muffins, waffles and biscuits better. Try it and see if this isn't so. Ten cents and up, according to size. Velva in the green can, too, at your grocer's. Send for the book of Velva recipes. No charge.

VELVA

PENICK & FORD, Ltd.
New Orleans, La.

VELVA NUT ICE CREAM

3-4 cupful Red Velva Syrup, 2 cupfuls scalded milk, 1 tablespoonful flour, 1-4 cupful sugar, 1 egg, pinch of salt, 2 quarts cream, 1 cupful chopped English walnut meats, 1 teaspoonful almond extract, 1 teaspoonful rose extract.

Beat up the egg with the flour and sugar, and gradually add the milk. Cook for 20 minutes in a double boiler, stirring constantly. Cool and add the syrup, salt, nuts, cream and the extracts, and freeze. Serve in dainty dishes with a preserved cherry on top of each.

COACH HEISMAN SPENDS 2 DAYS WITH THE PREPS

By J. W. Heisman.

UNTIL last week it had been long since I had seen a game of either football or baseball between any of the preparatory school teams of the State. But on the 19th and 20th last I slipped down to Milledgeville to see the Georgia Military College team of that place lock horns with the team from the Riverside Military Academy of Gainesville.

Well, I witnessed both games, and it won't take me long to say that they were good games, splendid, both of them. There was fast, clean fielding, excellent base running, fair batting, fine pitching and considerable inside baseball. Riverside won both games, each by a score of 2 to 0. The pitching of all four hurlers, Williamson and Haines for Riverside, and Camp and Gheesling for G. M. C., was impressively good, and it averaged in effectiveness but little below the average of what the college teams showed this year, if any. Riverside seemed stronger with the stick than G. M. C., which was, perhaps, the principal reason why they got away with the big end of the scoring.

• • •

NOW, I had heard more than one rumor to the effect that the Riverside team was made up of a bunch of "ringers." Among others the Wake Forest players had given me solemn assurance of this. Recalling that Wake Forest has since been blacklisted for having three professional players on its roster this now strikes me as a good place to giggle. (It will also be remembered that the Riverside team held Wake Forest to a 6-6 tie game).

Quite prepared was I, therefore, to see on the Riverside line-up a bunch of matured men, some of them giving every evidence of life among professionals, most of them omitting sulphurous language every time they opened their mouths, chewing tobacco like demons and putting up a brand of baseball few college teams in the country could hope to duplicate. Did I see these things? No, none of them, and nothing like it. In the first place they were clearly and indubitably all young boys with one possible exception, and he not over 21 years of age. They all dressed neatly and in excellent taste. They talked like your average well behaved and schooled Prep. They played surprisingly good ball for such youngsters, but nothing like what professionals, even in Class D, play. I tell you they were BOYS, nothing else.

What is a "ringer?" Any one of a lot of things makes a "ringer." True, they may still have been ringers in the sense that they were not bona fide students, were at Riverside only to play ball and never to study; but don't believe that for one minute; they didn't look the part. As for ever having played in professional leagues, or ANY of them ever having received any but the most trifling recompense for any past playing, that was even more unbelievable.

No, they have a very well balanced nine, they field, hit, and run bases fairly well, are strong in the box and are weak in no department of play; they are full of "pep," are in good physical condition, have nice team work, stick to their work and never lose confidence in their ability to win the game—and that's how they do win, and that's all. And that's how they won 19 straight games this spring without losing one.

This is really a very extraordinary achievement, and Coach Frank Anderson deserves an extraordinary amount of credit for the wonderful showing of the team. It was he who taught them their team play and inside ball; he who kept up their fighting spirit after he had generated it, and he who has made them very largely what they are. It is undeniably a jim-dandy young team. But I don't believe they are ringers.

• • •

THE G. M. C. boys were also a nice, clean-looking lot, and they played good steady ball. In two innings only out of 19 played did Riverside succeed in scoring on these hard working lads. Except in hitting they showed no inferiority worth mentioning to the Riverside team.

I desire to express my very warm admiration for the clean and sportsmanly conduct of the G. M. C. cadets and their friends and rooters. The very best of order prevailed at all times on the field, and their treatment of the Riverside team was, so far as I could observe, not only just and courteous but such as befits the honored guest. The work of Umpire Lamar Ham, an old Georgia player, was excellent, and no word of fault finding or bitterness was ever addressed within my hearing either to him or to the visitors by the G. M. C. players or any of their supporters: it was fine conduct and good sport all around.

G. M. C. has a very pretty campus, and the main building of the school is the old Georgia State Capitol: it is a handsome and very substantial edifice still.

• • •

I STOPPED off at Barnesville, hoping to see the rained-out game of the day before played off between Florida and Gordon Institute. In this I met with disappointment, as the Florida team had gone home; but I enjoyed a visit of a few hours there nevertheless.

Gordon also has a very fine athletic field, and several very handsome new buildings. Lieutenant Riley, the former star West Point guard, had all the boys looking spick-and-span, and their military drill was much more than worth watching. The athletes I was so fortunate as to meet were a remarkably fine looking set of fellows who seemed to measure right up to college standards in both stature and outlines. And, by the way, I have just read that their splendid catcher, Everett Bankston, whom I was hoping might come to Tech, has received an offer from the Pittsburg League team. This will give an idea of the class of the athletes they are developing in our Georgia preparatory schools.

GLENN WILL BE STAR AT BOARD TRACK RACING

—JACK PRINCE.

"HARRY GLENN, this local boy, will make one of the greatest board track riders in the world; you watch what I say." So says Jack Prince, inventor of the board track, who knows more about "racing on edge" than any other living man.

Glenn made his real exhibition debut Wednesday. He had been flirting with the track for several days. His first time out he wabbled about on it like a drunken sailor—and wabbling at 65 or 70 miles an hour is a dangerous pastime. Glenn's racing machine, ordered some weeks ago, has not come yet, so he has not been doing much at the track.

Wednesday afternoon five or six of the world's best board-track racers were tuning up their machines and getting ready for the big tournament next week. And a crowd of 6,000 or 8,000 board-track cranks were watching the free exhibition that goes on every afternoon. For nothing at all, the crowd was seeing fancy riding by the best in the business. But even then they were not satisfied.

"Harry Glenn; we want Harry Glenn," they shouted.

Glenn Forced to Ride.

There was not a chance to announce to all of them that Harry's racing machine had not come. And finally the cries became so insistent that "Smiling Harry" mounted a road machine and, grinning happily, set out for his first real attempt at speed on the treacherous banks.

No veteran rider could have handled the track with greater ease. He circled it at the pole and he took it high, he rode fast and slow; but never was there a slip or any show of inexperience. And round after round was greeted with thunderous cheering. That Glenn is a tremendous local favorite was never better demonstrated.

Glenn deserves it, too. Never has more intrepid dirt-track rider shown himself to the public than Harry, and he has won the crowds by his courage and cleverness.

Lad's Success Is Sure.

When Glenn was riding, the experts gathered at the paddock and discussed his work. And it was not long before all agreed that his future in the racing game was assured. He has many times shown his courage and cool-headedness in races, and now that he has shown that he can "ride the boards" as well, there is nothing to it but a big showing for "Smiling Harry" Glenn around the Southern circuit of tracks.

If Glenn's racing machine arrives in time, he will probably try his luck in the first race meet, set for one week from to-morrow.

A PLEA.

(Inspired by C. Webb Murphy.)

"Knock, if you will—I have no dread—
But keep my name in type!" he said.

The only fault to be found with the Manly Art of Self-Defense is that it sometimes back fires.

One learns from the public prints that Mr. Zbyszko still insists that he can throw Mr. Gotch. Some of these foreigners never get any sense.

The fracture of a wrestler's dome indicates that even a billiard ball is not immune.

There is a move afoot to eliminate hammer throwing from track meets. Messrs. Evers, Tinker and Chance are in favor of a move to eliminate same from the pastime known as baseball.

Considering the athletic activities of those Cleveland persons, it behooves Mr. Birmingham to fracture a few more of his athletes' limbs.

REFERRING TO A SPANISH ATHLETE.

(By the Miller of Osgood.)
(Being a Contribution.)

"Ladies and gents!" the Barker cried,
"We'll win the flag with games to spare!"
Oh, please sir, tie your bull brute outside!
You can't win games with heated air.

If the Calgary affair will only put a crimp in the white hope market, it will not have been fought in vain.

One Johnny Evers, pugilist, makes his appearance in our midst. One W. Klem, umpire, will testify that anybody with that name is a fighter.

Tommy Leach is the only Cub outfielder who is hitting in the .300 class. All of which goes to show the value of young blood.

Reports come from Virginia, Minn., that Rube Waddell has disappeared again. Virginia, Minn., fears that he may come back.

George Stovall is back in the game. It is rumored that he now chews cotton instead of tobacco.

SHAME.

Full many a man is filled with bitter shame
And hears men make a bywcrd of his name,
But never one who hung his head so low
As one I witnessed in a baseball game.

With bases filled, they called him to the fore;
He whiffed when but a hit would tie the score,
And as he fourneyed benchward from the plate
It must have seemed a hundred miles or more.

WOLGAST BACKS HOPPE.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 29.—One of the most important series of the season begins at the Polo Grounds to-day, when the Giants and Phillies, now leading the league, meet to play four games in three days. This will be a real test of the Quakers, who have been setting a terrific pace ever since the race began.

The games are going to be largely a question of pitchers, and the Giants' twirlers will be thrown against the finest staff in the league in this series. It is the pitching the Quakers have been getting that has kept them up in the race so far, and it will be pitching that must stop them. When McGraw traded three Giants to Cincinnati last week, he was looking ahead to these games, which he realized would be critical and might have a direct bearing on the final result of the season. He needed good, reliable twirlers to work in these battles. Now he has Tesreau, Fromme and Marquard. Doubtless, they will meet Seaton, Alexander, Chalmers and Rixey.

• • •

IT is not only the actual result of this series which will count, but the effect the outcome will have on the hearts and playing of the plunging Phillies. If the Giants can stop them with a jerk we will start them off on a long road tour without the idea that they are invincible, and we will send them away with Pittsburg as their next stop, except for one game at home with Brooklyn. They will encounter some more excellent pitching and a club that has been vastly strengthened within the last two weeks when they meet the Pirates. But should the Quakers take these games in New York or the majority of them, they would still retain the notion that they cannot be beaten, and doubtless would go stampeding through the West at a great rate, increasing their lead to dangerous proportions. It would also have the opposite effect on the New York club, which is about to leave for its swing through the West. Therefore, it is easy to see that the series is an important one.

The Quakers are going to put forth the best that they have against us for two reasons. One is that there never has been any too much good feeling between the two teams, and the other is that every club in the league is always eager to beat the Big Town boys, and especially the champions of the league.

That is the reason the Giants constantly meet the best pitching, whereas some second-rate club gets second-rate twirlers.

• • •

THE Philadelphia club is still playing at top speed, while the Giants are not themselves yet. Our hitting is not timely, and the fielding is uncertain. Demaree, who showed so well at first, has not entirely recovered from a strained back, another reason why the coming of Fromme was timely. The Phillies are likely to make a good bid for the pennant, provided Dooin can keep the team in condition and the regulars can steer clear of injuries. The lack of capable substitutes is what will probably drag the Quakers back. The pitching staff, however, should keep the club a factor in the race right up to September.

The Philadelphia sprint is not the same kind that Cincinnati sprang last year, to my mind. There is more backbone to the Philadelphia club, and the team is a good one as far as the first string men go. Give it a lead of a few games and it's going to be a long chase catching Dooin's crowd. They can then afford to slump and recover. What the team does on this long road trip will give some indication of how it is going to finish, because most of the games it has played to date have been at home. This will be a real test. They play twenty-three of their next twenty-four games on the road.

• • •

ASIDE from actually strengthening the pitching staff, McGraw's trade with Cincinnati displayed considerable wisdom on the part of the New York manager in another direction. The bad weather of the first part of the season has piled up a long string of double-headers for later along, and double-headers eat into pitchers faster than a high-priced automobile does into gasoline. The Giants now have eleven double-headers slated, and, in order to work a reliable pitcher every day, McGraw will need four or five twirlers in service all the time. By the addition of Fromme, he has enough talent to start a reliable performer in each game, in spite of the double-headers, when Demaree gets back in shape.

• • •

BROOKLYN has apparently begun to slip back through the league. I look to see the club finish no better than fourth, because two teams are bound to come and pass the Superbas. These are the Giants and Pittsburg, and I don't figure the Dodgers any way to beat out Philadelphia. The pitching staff appears to be slipping some now, and the infielders are not playing the game they were when the psychology of the winning streak was on the whole team and carrying it up through the league.

• • •

THE Cubs have faded, but should get a revival of form on their return to the home diamond. The improvement in pitching would mean an improvement of the team, because it is weak twirling that has been continuously holding the club back. The rest of the team is strong enough, with a wonderful catching staff.

• • •

WHEN the Eastern clubs invade the West next week, the first real test of the Easterners will occur in comparing them with the West. They waded through the Western teams in the late intersectional series, and the question now is whether or not they can repeat the performance away from home. The St. Louis club made the best showing of all the Westerners in the East, and, with Brooklyn and Philadelphia, has been the surprise of the league. Two good pitchers have been holding the club up in the race, and a team that was regarded before the season as a competitor with Brooklyn and Boston for last place has shot to the front and is crowding a lot of us for the first division.

"PRICE HAS NOT QUIT LOCAL CLUB,"—CALLAWAY

President Callaway, of the Atlanta Baseball Association, denies the story printed to-day that Southpaw Gilbert Price has quit the local ball club.

According to Callaway, Price reported for practice this morning and will appear in uniform this afternoon, ready to twirl if called upon.

"I know nothing of the rumor that Price is to quit our club and enter business," said Callaway, "and if he was I certainly would know it by this time."

Yell Defiance at Blood Disorders

A Remedy That Has Shown a Most Remarkable Purifying Effect.

At Last You Can Get Rid of Blood Troubles—S. S. S.

The word medicine is one of the most abused in our language. There are certain medicinal properties just as necessary to health as the food we eat. Take, for example, the well-known tonic medicine, S. S. S. This famous blood purifier contains medicinal components just as vital and essential to healthy blood as the elements of wheat, roast beef, the fats and the sugars that make up our daily ration.

As a matter of fact, there is one ingredient in S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating each cellular part of the body to the healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment. That is why it regenerates the blood supply; why it has such a tremendous influence in overcoming eczema, rash, pimples, and all skin afflictions.

And in regenerating the tissues S. S. S. has a rapid and positive antidotal effect upon all those irritating influences that cause rheumatism, sore throat, weak eyes, failing hair, loss of weight, thin, pale cheeks, and that weariness of muscle and nerve that is generally experienced as spring fever. Get a bottle of S. S. S. at any drug store, and in a few days you will not only feel bright and energetic, but you will be the picture of new life. S. S. S. is prepared only in the laboratory of The Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., who maintain a very efficient Medical Department, where all who have any blood disorder of a stubborn nature may write freely for advice and a special book of instruction. S. S. S. is sold everywhere by drug stores, department and general stores.

USE OF BEAN BALL SHOULD BE FORBIDDEN

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE agitation in the major leagues against the "bean ball" has stirred a responsive chord in the Southern League. "Go to it," say players and fans alike.

You know what the "bean ball" is, of course.

It is a ball thrown by the pitcher at the head of the batter. Its purpose may be to intimidate a batter lacking in courage or to force away from the plate a man who is crowding in too close to suit the pitcher.

The play is barbarous and should be eliminated from the game.

* * *

AS contemptible an exhibition of bean ball throwing as Atlanta fans ever saw occurred yesterday. In the sixth inning, when Wally Smith was at bat, he ran in to the limit of the batter's box in an effort to smear one of Finis Wilson's curves. Wilson put up a complaint to the umpire, but there were no grounds for it, and Umpire Pfenninger disregarded it.

The next ball Wilson threw straight at Smith's head. Wally ducked and escaped, but by no wide margin. Again Wilson threw at Smith's head, and this time with such unerring aim and such tremendous speed that when Smith ducked the ball struck the bat that he threw in front of his head as he went down. But for this lucky chance Smith would have received a terrible wallop on the head, would unquestionably have been laid out and perhaps killed.

* * *

WILSON'S act was doubtless that of a fresh kid. He threw at Smith's head because he lacked any better sense.

But if Wilson had killed Smith—and the thing could easily have happened—it would have been cold-blooded, brutal, willful murder.

* * *

THE bean ball is no more a part of legitimate baseball than would be the use of an axe on the head of a base runner or the knifing of a fielder.

It would be difficult absolutely to stop it. However, in most cases a trained observer—such as an umpire is supposed to be and usually isn't—could tell a "bean ball" from a wild heave that went at the same mark. A pitcher who uses it ought to be fired out of baseball for one year and fined not less than a thousand dollars. That might help to break up the practice.

* * *

WEDNESDAY'S ball game was pie for the Crackers—4 to 1—with New Orleans the victim. Paul Musser came around and pitched a really first-class game. The "fatal gift" was with him to the extent of six passes, but he was never in danger, chiefly because he allowed only five hits. He kept the hits pretty well separated from the passes and the only time it seemed possible that anything unfortunate might happen Hendryx walloped into a double play and relieved the pressure.

CATCHER CHAPMAN made his Atlanta debut and pleased mightily. He is a husky brute, with lots of gab and considerable cleverness. The entire team showed a lot of added "pep," but how much was due to Chapman's example and how much to something Manager Smith might or might not have said in a club house talk nobody knows.

If Chapman proves as good as he looks, the Crackers are a vastly different team. Graham has been an uncertainty all the season. And Dunn was signed only as a second catcher and could not be expected to carry the whole thing along by himself.

With Chapman to do the heavy backstopping and to lead in the chatter; with Dent promising to prove a winning pitcher; with Musser back in shape again, and with the rest of the club playing to form, the locals ought to begin forging toward the front again.

AMERICANS MAY BE FACTORS IN ENGLISH DERBY

By E. G. B. Fitzhamon.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 29.—American owners, horses and jockeys seem likely to cut a pretty wide swath in the great English Derby this year. Harry Payne Whitney's colt, Meeting House, which ran third in the Guineas, has a nice chance of winning. So has Herman B. Duryea's Boyne, which won the Paris Biennial, at ten furlongs, quite comfortably from a smart field. August Belmont also has a colt in France which is going to take some stopping on Epsom Downs, barring accident.

Whitney's Meeting House is a fine big colt by Voter out of Noonday, and is one of the thirty yearlings he purchased from the late James Keene eighteen months ago.

Meeting House began slowly in the mile race at Newmarket for the Guineas and for a few strides he was the last of a field of 15, but he moved up to ninth in the first quarter, was seventh after going five furlongs, and ran over four well fancied candidates in the final quarter, being beaten only two lengths in the final quarter by Louvois and Craganour, which was almost dead-heated. Meeting House ran practically unbacked, with 15 to 1 against him to show, and Frank O'Neill riding.

Was Nipped at The Last.

Craganour divided favoritism with Fairy King and they showed the way for six furlongs, when Craganour drew clear, with Johnny Reiff on the 20 to 1 shot, Louvois, in hot pursuit. Craganour should have won, but his English jockey was overconfident and tossed it off and the American nipped him on the post with Louvois.

O'Neill would have ridden the winner if Jack Joyner had kept Meeting House in the barn. O'Neill was engaged last year to ride for Whitney in this race if he was wanted. Subsequently Mr. Raphael, the owner of Louvois, as well as of last year's Derby winner, engaged both O'Neill and Reiff to come over from Paris to ride Louvois in the Guineas, O'Neill's engagement being conditional that Joyner would not want him for Whitney.

When Joyner decided to take a chance with Meeting House, Raphael had Johnny Reiff to fall back upon, and it was Johnny who won the Derby for him on Tagalie last year.

But Mr. Raphael agrees with me that Frank O'Neill is the greatest jockey in Europe, and probably in the world just now, and he has contracted with Frank to ride Louvois in the Derby and other important races. So if American owners and horses fail in the Derby an American rider is quite likely to win it.

Louvois Shows.

Louvois is the colt of which I wrote last December: that if I had to make my selection for the Derby from last season's two-year-olds before they ran this season as three-year-olds, he would be my choice. Louvois not only showed speed last year but he impressed me as the most likely to carry it over the Derby route this year.

Judging from the manner in which he came from behind and wore down Craganour at one mile I expect Louvois to beat Ismay's colt easily at a mile and a half. To some extent this argument also applies to Whitney's Meeting House being likely to beat Craganour for the Derby. However, the talent makes Craganour favorite at present at 9 to 2.

Shogun is going to become a hot tip for Derby, but I can not stand for a colt with two splints coming down the hill at Epsom unless the going should be very soft, which it seldom is there.

Mr. Duryea's Boyne is by Irish Lad out of Running Water by Sir Dixon. He is being pointed for the Derby, so I hear from France.

Belmont's good Derby colt in France is Vulcain, by Rock Sand out of Lady of the Vale.

M'COY AND FERNS DRAW IN TWENTY FAST ROUNDS

Mercer President Leads War on Frats

MACON, GA., May 29.—President S. Y. Jameson, of Mercer University, will himself, at the factulty meeting this afternoon, introduce a resolution to abolish the Greek letter fraternities at Mercer University. The preamble of his resolution reads:

"Whereas the Baptists, immemorially standing for a State without a king and a church without a bishop, have been apostles of liberty and equality, and whereas Greek letter fraternities are undemocratic in their very constitution as well as management, thereby creating class distinctions based on other grounds than merit and ability; therefore, be it resolved," etc.

It is believed that this sounds the deathknell of fraternities at Mercer.

Women Call Riding Astride Ban Silly

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Washington horsewomen consider General J. P. Hickman's order forbidding women to ride astride in the parade of the reunion of Confederate veterans at Chattanooga old-fashioned and out of date.

"I think the order foolish," said Mrs. Burleson, wife of Lieutenant Richard C. Burleson, of Fort Myer. "I am a Southern woman, but the new way of riding cross-saddle is much preferable."

Eight Girls Sold at Auction in Caucasia

LONDON, May 29.—Eight native girls between the ages of 15 and 18 were sold by public auction last week at Tereklimakteb, Caucasia, according to an Odessa dispatch to The Daily Mail.

There was lively bidding before the eight lots were disposed of. The highest price, $105, was paid for a handsome Tartar girl named Orsalia Ajalieff.

It is an immemorial custom of the Tartars and the Kalmucks to sell their superfluous daughters.

PELKY AND BURNS MAY BE TRIED ON JUNE 23

CALGARY, ALBERTA, May 29.—If Tommy Burns and Arthur Pelky ever come to trial on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of Luther McCarty, it will be on June 23 at the Supreme Criminal Court session.

Burns will not give out his plans, but it is said that he is being urged to abandon all connection with ring affairs.

Fargo dispatches giving McCarty's estate as worth $65,000 are grossly exaggerated. His property is worth about $12,000.

Floto Yearns for Days of Old Scores All Typewriter Fighters

By Otto C. Floto.

IN slanting a glance over the lightweight situation as it presents itself to us at the present time we are forced to the conclusion that there is more talk than doin' and more challenges flying back and forth than there are acceptances of the same. Take the whole list of the boys that claim this division as their own, each and every one of them have a chip on their shoulder and are aiming their 14-inch guns at Willie Ritchie, the titleholder. Their ammunition, however, is mostly "buncombe," and the almighty dollar is receiving far more attention in these deliberations than is the glory of becoming champion.

All of which forces us to lean back and sigh, "Oh, you fortunate champions of to-day. How lucky you are not to have been compelled to battle in the time when real fighters graced the roped inclosure." Days when the end was never in sight; days when the finish came only with the referee's count and the acknowledgment from the "seconds" of one or the other principal that his charge could go no further.

* * *

SOME may shrug their shoulders and say, "Yes, but those were the brutal days of the London prize ring." Maybe they were, but they also represented the period when gladiators of real merit held sway, days when it required a stout heart, stamina, a knowledge of wrestling as well as fighting, and an adept so far as the science and punching ability of the game went.

Seldom if ever did a champion return to the ring once the stigma of defeat was placed against his name. He retired in those days unless for some exceptional reason he was allowed to come back. His future connection with the game was as second, bottle-holder or representative of some champion. Tom Sayers, after his defeat by Langham, came back and, in support of the move, we need but add that he was never defeated again. He was a middleweight, while Langham was a heavy one when they fought.

* * *

TAKE the average run of the Queensberry babies we have in our midst at the present time and when they stagger up against defeat or adverse verdicts they hurry to the nearest typewriter and frame fifty-seven different varieties of alibis in a made endeavor to explain away their rout.

Mind, we don't wish you to misunderstand us in that the Queensberry code failed to produce great champions. On the contrary, it did. Jimmy Barry, Jack McAuliffe, Jack Dempsey, Jim Corbett, Fitzsimmons and others won titles under their clauses. But remember, too, that they all fought "TO A FINISH" in order to succeed to the emblem. The present day limited affairs were foreign to them.

* * *

MANY will wonder why John L. Sullivan's name is among those missing from the above list. Simple enough, and equally surprising to as many to learn that Sullivan won his title according to the L. P. R. rules. The only time he met defeat was by the Queensberry route. So that technically speaking Sullivan was never defeated for the title. He at any rate never lost it in the same manner in which he won it. The last London prize ring fight in this country was between Sullivan and Kilrain, at Richburg, Miss. This will perhaps be news to many as well.

With the abolition of the L. P. R. rules came a flock of "box fighters," to whom the limited round journey with eight-ounce gloves and Queensberry methods appealed as the short route to easy money. Over 70 per cent of this same band would have found employment at some other way of making a living had the old-time fashion of battles on the turf "to a finish" still been in vogue.

ZBYSZKO COLLAPSES IN MAT BOUT; LURICH WINS

NEW YORK, May 29.—George Lurich was awarded the decision over Stanislaus Zbyszko in the wrestling bout at Madison Square Garden when the latter failed after 16 minutes and 27 seconds of strenuous struggling on the mat.

The Polish champion was said to be suffering from the effects of a recent injury received at Montreal and his weakened condition resulted in his collapse in the ring.

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

Spider Britt is on the warpath. The little bantamweight read Meyer Pries' challenge in the Georgian the other day and says he will gladly meet Pries on a "winner-take-all" basis. Britt also states that he will give Meyer a side bet of $50. Let's hear from Pries!

* * *

Jack Dillon has finished hard training for his 10-round set-to with Frank Klaus Thursday night at Indianapolis. Dillon is down to the required weight and says he will be strong at 160 pounds, the figure both men have agreed to make.

* * *

Eddie Campi and Charles Ledoux will clash in the next bantamweight fight to be staged on the Coast. Tom McCarey signed the boys yesterday. They will meet on June 20 in a scheduled 20-round go.

* * *

Jack Britton will make his next fight against Jimmy Duffy, the tough Buffalo boy, on Thursday night. They will meet in Duffy's home town and Britton will have his hands full carrying away the verdict. The boys are billed to go ten rounds.

* * *

Matty McCue was handed a neat setback the other night. Matty attempted to land his haymaker on Patsy Brannigan's jaw, but the latter was far too clever for the Racine sensation and had a good shade at the end of the tenth round.

* * *

Another New Orleans fighter has been defeated. Frankie Russell tried hard to put the Pelican City back on the fighting map Monday night, but Lore proved too tough a customer for Frankie. The Eastern boy was given the newspaper verdict by a good margin.

COTTON WEAK ON EVE OF HOLIDAY

NEW YORK, May 29.—A break of 18 points in May was the feature of the cotton market at the opening of the cotton market to-day. June followed with a decline of 16 points and July 9 points from last night's close. New crop positions were under pressure, but only lost 4 to 6 points. The decline was due to private cables reporting a lockout in the mills of northern Lancashire, coupled with a bearish crop condition and acreage estimate by Miss Giles. She gave the condition of the crop to May 24 as 86.4 and acreage an increase of 3.7 per cent, indicating the acreage of 1913 would be 35,709,400 acres.

The weather map and sentiment were bearish, which encouraged the bears. The ring and certain brokers who usually represent spot interests were the leading sellers. After the call the list increased its decline 1 to 2 points from the opening. Liverpool was a good seller of July. There were about 5,000 May and June notices issued, which were immediately stopped by good sources.

The bears were thunderstruck during the forenoon when shorts grasped the opportunity to cover and sent May back to 11.44, within 2 points of the previous close. July jumped to 11.40. Within fifteen minutes the entire list steadied within 2 to 6 points from Wednesday's final, or unchanged to 16 points above the opening range.

About the only condition issued to-day encouraging to the bulls was The Journal of Commerce, which was 80.5. However, there was a pressure to sell the market from all quarters, but the market took the selling remarkably well in the face of the bearish situation.

May went out at 11.36, a net loss of 8 points from the early high point.

The strength of the market was due to covering over the holidays. In addition to this the trade expects a bullish visible supply statement to-morrow. It is said that clearances from the Pacific coast of 13,630 goes in to-day's receipts and to-morrow's mill takings, which are expected to be bullish.

During the afternoon session the market was quiet. Price movement was practically unchanged from the opening level. It is believed that the market is on an even keel to go over the holidays. Should the government report Monday show the condition above 83 the market will be sold.

At the close the market was steady with prices net unchanged to 14 points lower than the final quotations of Wednesday.

HAYWOOD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, May 29.—With May drawig to a close near positions and spots are weakening, showing plainly that professional support and operations have alone held up prices. Liverpool this morning is 6@8 points down on old crops against one point lower due and 3 points downon new against 1 point to 2 points lower due. Political news is bad. It is feared that a general war will break out in the Balkans. A Liverpool cable again made strong reference to the probability of labor troubles in Lancashire.

Weather conditions continue very good; fair and warmer over entire belt; no rains except in the Carolina coast districts and fair and continued warm weather is indicated for the entire belt.

Our market opened 20 points down on May, 7 points down on July and 5 points on new crops. Support to new crops in New York checked selling pressure, but feeling is against the market. New York says that the strong support to new crops yesterday came from a Cincinnati operator. Between 6,000 and 8,000 tenders on May were made here this morning.

The into-sight for the week looks around 60,000 bales against 65,064 last year. We compare with mill takings of 159,000 bales for this week last year. They were small then owing to holidays, and, therefore, favorable comparisons are probable. After this week, however, to the end of the season consumption statistics have every prospect of comparing very unfavorably with those of last year; the contract market settled around 11.17 for October with trading very quiet. Some further covering in New York before the holidays caused steadiness.

MILLER-CARTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, TENN., May 29.—Several condition reports, all of bearish import, were issued to-day and the market was plainly of bearish temper. But Liverpool bought new crops on this side, undoing straddles and our markets have given appearance of steadiness, while Liverpool was weak, which is just the reverse of recent relations.

The weather is very favorable now and for the next few days.

With the holidays beginning to-night business is restricted, but we anticipate lower prices after the bureau.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 29.—The principal trading at the outset to-day was in July which was very weak. Mitchell and Schill were the leading sellers of July. After the call Riordan, Rothschild, Schley and Hartcorn were principal buyers. The market was sold on bearish cables telling of a lockout in Lancashire and also on Miss Giles' report.

* * *

Weather news and sentiment were against the market, which helped the decline along.

* * *

Schill Mitchell and Hubbard sold July freely. The ring sold new crop months, Wilson, Munds and Riordan were the principal buyers of July.

* * *

The market sure hit the "toboggan" at the outset, but quickly recovered its course and rode the "airship."

* * *

The cotton seed oil market will be closed Friday, but will be open Saturday.

* * *

New Orleans wires: "About 7,000 notices out. Bullish visible expected to-morrow."

* * *

Miss Giles' condition figures were 2 per cent above the Government report last year, and if she had reported the same this year it would have been a bullish report.

* * *

Of the particular features of the market yesterday during the late trading was the weakness in the old crop positions, which was due partly to liquidation by foreign straddlers and partly against purchase of new crop and outside liquidation. May option was weak, promoted by big tenders, which was said to be for foreign accounts.

* * *

The market was flooded with private condition and acreage reports to-day, and the particular thing about them was that they were all bearish to the core. The acreage was given about 1,000,000 acres increase over the previous year.

* * *

* * *

Dallas, Tex., wires: "Texas: San Antonio threatening; balance State clear, pleasant. Oklahoma: Generally clear; cool."

* * *

It was learned yesterday that the heavy buying of new crop by Riordan on Tuesday was long buying for an operator connected with a large Cincinnati soap manufacturing concern.

NEW ORLEANS, May 29.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows fair in entire belt; fine, warm weather with night temperatures rather above normal. No rain except in Carolina coast districts. Indications are for continued fair and warmer weather except little cloudy in Northwest Texas, very favorable.

* * *

* * *

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Excellent rains in the Atlantic States put an end to dry weather talk about that section. A promise now of rather heavy tenders in New Orleans to-day and a report to the effect that some of the cotton taken up on New York May contracts three weeks ago was retendered there yesterday helped foster bearish sentiment.

"Favorable weather has convinced the talent that improving crop advices will be received during the next week or two. Under the circumstances sellers outnumber buyers and the cotton market eased off. However, the talent is convinced that the market is a live corpse, with a kick, and nobody is now treating it as a dead one. Meanwhile, New Orleans May closed at 12.35, a premium of 34 points over July, while New York May closed at 11.46, a discount of 9 points under July. New Orleans May stands at a premium of 89 points over New York May. If there be any scientific reason for such a remarkable difference between the two markets, the student of cotton has been unable to find it."

COTTON SEED OIL.

NEW YORK, May 29.—The cotton seed oil market was active and higher to-day on covering of shorts, new speculative buying, firmness in lard and buying of July, thought to be for refiners. Bulls took advantage of the light offerings to help along the advance.

Outside speculative longs were moderate sellers on the advance.

HARRIMAN ISSUES FEATURE STOCKS

Dissolution Plan Submitted by Judge Lovett Not Approved, Causing Weakness.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, May 29.—Moderate improvement was shown at the opening of the stock market to-day, there being a noticeable absence of pressure. Reading and Union Pacific were strong features, the former gaining ⅝ on earnings reports and the latter advancing ½ after selling ex-dividend of 2½. Amalgamated Copper opened at 73½, against 73 at the close last night.

Among the other advances were American Can, ⅛; American Smelting, ⅝; Erie, ¼; Northern Pacific, ⅝; Pennsylvania, ⅛; Southern Pacific, ¼, and United States Steel common, ⅛.

Canadian Pacific was weak in consequence of selling in London and was 2⅜ lower. Western Union, Erie and Atchison shaded fractionally.

There was some covering by traders who feared to go short over the three-day holiday.

The curb was steady.

Americans in London were irregular.

Southern Pacific sold to 95½, a decline of 1¼ from the opening and 1 point from the noon level. Union Pacific dropped to 148¾, for a loss of nearly a point from midday. Union Pacific seesawed throughout the last few minutes. Steel gained fractionally, but Amalgamated Copper, Pennsylvania, Frisco common and preferred and other stocks practically stood still.

The market closed steady. Government bonds unchanged; other bonds firm.

AMERICAN EXCHANGES TO CLOSE FRIDAY

Tomorrow being Decoration Day all American exchanges will be closed to business, with the exception of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange. All exchanges will be closed Saturday, with the exception of the Chicago Board of Trade.

All exchanges will reopen Monday for usual business.

The Liverpool Cotton Exchange will remain open throughout the holidays.

Wheat—No. 2 red	96 @103
Corn—No. 2	59 @ 59½
Oats—No. 2	38 @ 39

CHICAGO, May 29.—Contradictory reports were received on the weather in Kansas to-day and on this the prices hinged late. Wichita reported 97 degrees and Hutchinson and Dodge City each 100 degrees. As a partial offset to this were reports of showers in one or two sections and denials of the additional moisture later on. The May future was down 1¼ from the best price reached at one time and July was off 1c and September was ⅝c lower, but there were some reactions and advances as the day wore away and final figures showed May ⅛c better, July ⅜c higher and September up ¼c.

Corn closed unchanged to ⅛c lower and oats were unchanged to ⅛@¼c higher.

Provisions closed fairly better.

COURSE OF WHEAT RELYING ON CHARACTER OF WEATHER

CHICAGO, May 29.—The Inter Ocean says: "It was the general belief of wheat traders last night that the market from now on will be governed largely by the character of the weather and crop reports. The bull interests contend that sufficient damage has been done to winter wheat to warrant higher prices.

"There were many bears on corn last night who expect lower prices with an increased movement, which is due from now on. Those who are buying on breaks advise the theory that the movement will not come up to expectations of the bears. Conservative people are advising caution in buying oats on bulges, although they believe that a continuation of the buying that has of late been seen will carry prices higher."

CHINCH BUGS DAMAGING GRAIN.

CHICAGO, May 29.—Great Bend, Kansas, says: "Rain is badly needed and grasshoppers are a menace."

Otis, Barton County, Kansas, says: "Our wheat crop is a total loss."

Omaha says: "Clear and hot over the State; temperature 72."

McPherson, Kansas, special reports high south winds absorbed moisture and made decided change in wheat outlook, besides millions of chinch bugs in wheat and corn.

Lawton, Okla., wires: "My information from unbiased sources indicates crop for State based as present condition about same as last year."

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, May 29.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: Wheat—The weather map shows mostly clear in the Northwest. We feel that purchases on breaks should be made.

Corn—Weather very favorable. We do not care to press the short side.

Oats—On any fair decline prefer the long side.

Provisions—The market seems to meet with good buying on all setbacks.

PONY CONTEST DRAWS ENTRANTS, CERTAIN OF SUCCESS, FROM AFAR

Atlanta children were the first to catch the fire of enthusiasm in The Georgian and American pony contest. The children out in the State and outside Georgia were a little slow at first.

But how they are coming now!

Every mail brings a heap of letters from distant addresses, and the letters are full of "ginger." Every girl or boy seems sure of winning.

Dorothy Davis, of Dothan, Ala., writes: "I have my subscription book, and so I am going to work in earnest now."

"Please send me subscription blanks, etc., so I can win a pony," as O. S. Morton, Jr., writes, is a more frequently used wording.

The flood of mail is becoming a serious problem. Once this week two men in the contest department worked all night answering letters, and then did not catch up entirely with the work. It is hoped, therefore, that contestants who do not receive answers the following day will remember that it is not always possible to go through all the letters, check all the votes and keep up with the routine work of the contest in a day, and be patient.

Names of contestants and their standing follow:

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

Caponizing May Be Made Profitable Poultry Sideline

Can Be Made an Additional Source of Income—Questions and Answers.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

Caponizing may be made a profitable side line upon every well regulated poultry plant of any size.

If well managed, it may be made an additional source of income, particularly where there is not a very remunerative market for broilers.

Upon many poultry plants the surplus cockerels are marketed as broilers that they may be gotten out of the way before they have eaten their heads off, as the saying goes. There are locations, however, where it is not at all convenient to get them into a market that will pay good prices. Where such conditions prevail, then it is that the business of caponizing comes in play and can often be made to turn the young male into capons that will grow into money-makers. Of course, one must have the proper kind of stock or the operation will not be a paying one. Take, for example, the smaller laying breeds like the Leghorns. It does not pay at all to try to make a paying capon of them. The increased weight will not be enough to justify it. And the quality of the flesh will not be enough improved to pay for the work. Where one breeds any of the Rock or Wyandotte family, the Reds or Orpingtons, it will be all right, for they will all make good ones, not only as to size, but in quality as well. A good heavy-boned Plymouth Rock cockerel can often be made to weigh from eight to ten pounds at ten to twelve months of age, and bring the top of the market for capons, which is usually about double that of the ordinary fowl upon the market. This, of course, pays well for the little extra trouble that is incurred for the operation and the chances of loss. Of course, when it comes to a real business for the best there is in it the Light Brahma and the Buff Cochin make the finest and best capons. They are so tender in fiber and the skin so loosely put on that they will allow for almost any kind of growth without becoming lidebound, as will many of the smaller breeds.

The proper time for doing the work of caponizing is, between the ages of two and three months, at the time when they will weigh about two pounds. It should not be done when they weigh less than this, and if one waits much longer they get older and the chances of loss are much greater. It will not take any one of average intelligence to get accustomed to the mode of operation so that there will not average a loss of more than one or two in a hundred, which does not amount to anything when compared to the great gain in growth to be obtained after it is performed.

A good set of instruments and the dexterity that comes from a little experience is all that is essential to success. Although it may be done at any time of the year, the most propitious time is during the spring and summer when everything is at its best for good growth. There are no special things required, or extra housing; just good feed and plenty of it.

It is not possible as a rule to market them in the country towns, but at the finest hotels and resort places, where the price is not so important as the quality of the meat. We have known a very good trade to be worked up for them at the holiday season by visiting private families in the towns, telling them what you have and the splendid quality they will get from you. Then they make mighty good eating for home consumption, so much better than attempting to eat the great overgrown, strong-flavored cockerels late in the fall and winter.

Questions and Answers.

Judge F. J. Marshall.—Is it advisable to feed oats to hens as it comes from the field; that is, without being clipped or ground? I have been feeding it about twice a week for some time, and my hens do not seem to thrive very well upon it. I would like to have your valued opinion about it. I shall thank you for the advice.

R. R. C., Locust Grove, Ga.

Answer.—It has been our experience to feed a good deal of oats to chickens of all ages from three months on up to grown fowls. When we did feed it, it was fed regularly once a day in moderate quantities and in connection with other grains. I believe your trouble is caused by your being afraid to feed it every day. Feeding as you have done but once a week the hens would fill up on it and get more than they really needed. When they get it every day they will only eat a small amount of it, then it is easily digested. We should advise you to feed it every day, at first in very small amounts, gradually increasing the amount. Always with some other grain, preferably cracked corn. Fed in this way, we see no real reason why you should have any trouble whatever, and it is a splendid food to induce laying along with corn. In fact, if one will take the trouble to parch it as coffee is browned in the oven until the points are almost burned, it will be the best laying food you can contrive. Do not, however, feed it to chicks under three months of age.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

New Hotel Ansley Will Open June 16

Building Completed at Cost of $500,000—West Harris Sale $20,000. Committee Meetings.

Monday, June 16, has been fixed as the date for the formal opening to the public of the Hotel Ansley, at the southwest corner of North Forsyth and James Streets. The hotel will be run on the European plan, and J. F. Letton will be the manager.

The structure was started in the spring of 1912, and is to cost $500,000. It is eleven stories high and contains 300 rooms. The Ansley Hotel Company is the builder. All but 40 of the rooms have private baths.

Interesting Deeds Recorded.

Deeds have gone to record in several interesting realty transfers. For $20,000 Mrs. Fannie B. Eady has sold to Mrs. Mabel H. Moody and Dayton Hale 41 and 43 West Harris Street, 50 by 192 feet and 100 feet west of Spring Street. The terms were $3,000 cash and four notes of $4,250 each, with interest at 6 per cent.

For $12,000 Mrs. Ellen McGowan Phelan Goldsmith has sold to William and J. A. Cook and G. R. Maddox 390 Whitehall Street, 50 by 196 feet, 100 feet southwest of Hood Street. The terms were $3,000 cash and the assumption of a $4,000 loan, with notes at 6 per cent.

For $5,000 E. A. Holbrook has sold to Sidney Hagerton a large building lot on Paces Ferry Road, 1,398 feet west of Tuxedo Drive. One thousand dollars was cash.

Healey Building Active.

The hole for the Healey Building foundations was fairly alive with steel girders Thursday morning. The steel gang has pushed this work fast since the arrival of the two monster derricks, and in another week there will be considerable framework in evidence. Thousands of people have stopped by to view the scene.

Peachtree Owners Hopeful.

Prominent members of the Peachtree Street property owners' committee, who appeared before the Finance Committee of Council this week to ask for $5,000 for widening Peachtree between Forsyth and Harris Streets, will go before that body again Friday morning. Considerable hope of success in this project has been expressed on account of the nominal amount asked for.

Whitehall's Chance Friday.

People conversant with city hall matters declare that Whitehall Street property owners have a better chance of an appropriation for regrading Whitehall than any of the various claimants who want improvements in different sections of the city. They base this assertion on the fact that council and the streets committee have already gone on record almost unanimously as favoring the Whitehall project, and the further fact that owners of property have raised $17,000 and are asking the city for only $30,000 for the improvement.

A citizen whose business is in the city hall declared that should Mayor Woodward see fit for any reason to veto the appropriation, council would doubtless pass the measure over his veto, since the project is one of city-wide concern.

The proposition which Whitehall interests have put up to council is to cut down greatly at Trinity Avenue and fill correspondingly at Brotherton, in order to perfect the grade and provide an improvement of lasting benefit. This agitation was started months ago by leading representatives of the populous South Side, the argument being that the city needed an extension of its retail district, and that southward on Whitehall was the logical course for this to take. Incidentally, real estate dealers who are interested along Whitehall contend that prices have been proportionately too low, and they anticipate a quick rise and much activity as soon as the prayed-for improvements are assured.

Decatur's Home-Coming Day.

Realty prospects desiring to acquaint themselves with the advantages of Decatur will find a good opportunity, say DeKalb county citizens, in the annual Home-coming Day, June 3. Not only will DeKalb's chosen leaders regale the assembled throngs with oratory, but a systematic effort will be made to show visitors just as much of Decatur as possible. This suburban town has made rapid strides in the last few years, and its citizens are expected to welcome the opportunity to exhibit some of the things that have been accomplished. Land values have climbed to an unbelievable degree, and what is more, people are buying it.

To Build $8,000 House.

A permit has been asked of Building Inspector Hays for a two-story frame dwelling for Frederick Fayram, at 41 Oakdale Road, Oruid Hills. Day labor will be used.

The Stalwart Senate Should Stand by Our American Merchant Marine

The United States Senate fronts an opportunity and a duty in dealing with our merchant marine.

Public attention is rapidly focusing upon American maritime conditions, and it is high time that it did.

The favor with which the readoption of the early American discriminatory maritime policy is regarded by the thoughtful press and by influential Americans who are indifferent to foreign protests and threats is additionally reassuring.

Even more important, the people are realizing that an American deep sea shipping will form an urgently needed and entirely lacking secondary reserve for our navy.

Mr. Underwood's mere insertion of the thin edge of the wedge of discriminatory duties in his tariff bill has served to arouse both national and international interest.

Public indorsement of the policy is so strong that the stalwart Senate should promptly DRIVE IN THIS WEDGE. It will separate the United States from its trade agreements and conventions with other nations whose people know that the American navy will remain weak so long as it lacks the resource of a strong American shipping with officers and men.

The House tariff bill only provides a discount of 5 per cent of the duty on imports in vessels of American register. It applies to less than half our imports—only to those that are dutiable. It applies to only 10 per cent of our imports from South America, the othef 90 per cent being duty free.

That discount will not suffice to attract American capital into oversea shipping with the new duties so low. The pending provision would give foreign yards the building of all the ships its enactment would bring under American register.

And finally there are conflicting opinions as to whether or not the withdrawal of the United States from trade conventions and agreements that now estop it from applying the policy is assuredly provided for.

THE SENATE MUST REMEDY EACH OF THESE DEFECTS AND OBSCURITIES. We must have a whole-hearted and not a half-hearted readoption and enforcement of the policy that gave American ships the carriage of 80 per cent of our imports and exports during all of the more than sixty years it was previously in force.

There is an overwhelming American demand for the repeal of all restraining conventions and suspensory laws that perpetuate our present maritime importance.

The need of the Nation, the need of our Navy, and the need of our foreign commerce alike demand it.

The Senate must infuse vigor and vim into this section of the House bill, so that its enforcement will fill every American shipyard with orders for oversea ships that will reassert American maritime independence and carry the American flag over all the seven seas to the business ports of the civilized world.

Big Business Men And Despotic Power

Judge Gary is the working head of the greatest industrial corporation in America—the United States Steel Corporation.

He is especially notable among the big business men of the country because he believes and has constantly declared during the last few years that the great interstate business concerns that now control most of the output of the necessaries of life MUST CEASE TO BE ARBITRARY AND DESPOTIC IN THE USE OF THIS POWER AND MUST SUBMIT THEMSELVES TO PUBLIC AUTHORITY.

Speaking to an organization of his business associates last week, Judge Gary remarked: "The President of the United States recently said that honest business need not be afraid. Well, let us be honest. Let us take him at his word; let us assume that he means exactly what he says."

The Georgian takes occasion to say that SOMETHING MORE THAN WHAT COMMONLY GOES BY THE NAME OF "HONESTY" IS NOW REQUIRED OF THE INDUSTRIAL LEADERS OF THE UNITED STATES.

What is required is that big business men shall have the high intelligence TO HATE THEIR OWN ARBITRARY POWER OVER THE INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATION OF THE COUNTRY.

It is time that these men should come to understand that it is absolutely impossible for the republic to submit to irresponsible power of any kind. IF THE REPUBLIC IS TO ENDURE, THE ECONOMIC DESPOTS CANNOT STAND.

The principle that all power over the essentials of life must be in the hands of men accountable to the people is the principle upon which the political and legal systems of the United States are founded. This is no fine-spun theory. It is a part of the everyday consciousness of the American man.

It follows from this principle that whenever any man in America is seen by the people to be exercising a selfish and unregulated power over the people's lives, IT IS IMPOSSIBLE FOR THE PEOPLE TO REGARD HIM OTHERWISE THAN AS A PUBLIC ENEMY.

The people are patient with private monopolies only so long as there is a reasonable doubt whether they really are private monopolies. But as soon as it becomes perfectly plain that certain men are levying private taxes upon the people, the people cannot and will not any longer have patience with such men.

Judge Gary has pointed out the right road for corporate managers who are suspected and who suspect themselves of being monopolists. Many months ago he told a committee of Congress that the industrial trusts must be controlled by the Government—even to the legal limitation of dividends and of commodity prices. In short, Judge Gary is the one corporation manager in the country whose intelligence has been absolutely clear on the point that no monopoly can endure in a republic—EXCEPT A PUBLIC MONOPOLY.

In quoting the words of President Wilson last week, Judge Gary spoke truly enough—but feebly. He has often spoken better from other texts.

It is not by mere scrupulosity, not by mere freedom from rascality, that big business men are to set themselves right before the country or to set the country right in the light of its democratic tradition.

THE COUNTRY EXPECTS TO SEE AN UPRISING OF BIG BUSINESS MEN, WHO ARE AMERICANS MORE THAN THEY ARE MONOPOLISTS—WHO HATE ARBITRARY AND DESPOTIC POWER AND ARE DETERMINED TO PUT IT DOWN.

Rev. John E. White Writes on The Biggest Politics

R R

Three Great Races---the Teuton, Slav and Mongolian---Are Lined Up on the Map of the World, and the American People Are at a Perilous Point About It.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN

By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE

Pastor Second Baptist Church

IT was stated that Dr. John Bassett Moore had been brought into President Wilson's administration with no reference whatever to politics.

That was a very great mistake.

Dr. John Bassett Moore is First Assistant Secretary of State precisely because he is such a politician — the broadest, biggest, world-wideliest politician at Washington.

The sort of politics that absorbs Professor Moore's attention is not as scrappy as the race for Constable in a small town, but for variety, strategy and ominousness it is the big game of the world.

It has been Professor Moore's life work to study the vaster forces of the human movement called civilization. He is the astronomer of the Democratic administration. With his telescope sweeping immense political areas, he locates the points of disturbance in the field of civilization and tells his superiors what to do about it.

He keeps a wise eye on the great mass formations in the scrimmage of nations and races. He has a man's job all right.

The Big Line-Up.

At this moment three great races—the Teuton, Slav and Mongolian—are lined up on the map of Europe and Asia.

They are looking each other in the eyes and each is confident of its ultimate ascendency. This is politics more than continental or international. It is the biggest, deepest, most titanic situation of human competition the mind of man ever contemplated.

The smaller questions occupying the foreground of public interest are bagatelles compared with the issue presented by racial ambition. Such immense energies are involved that to think of them as let loose upon each other appals the imagination.

Outside university cloisters, from which Dr. John Bassett Moore has emerged, few people have dared to entertain the problem of collision on so colossal a scale. Within each of these great race masses we are told that instinctive tendencies are not controlling the point of view of diplomacy, and these tendencies have become manifestly contripetal.

The family disputes within each of the race groups are to grow less and less frequent under the resistless pressures of race unities. Quarrels between England and Germany, for instance, or between Russia and the smaller Slav States, are decreasingly capable of serious consequences.

The get-together race movement is dominating the motive in world politics and the indications are that the Mongolian race will be the first to arrive at the goal of solidarity in a political game.

The Japanese Imbroglio.

Here is uncovered the background which renders American complications with Japan at the present time a subject of intense solicitude all over the world. The London Times is not given to groundless alarm and its Foreign Editor, Sir Valentine Chirot, has just sounded a solemn note on the subject:

"The ultimate point of dispute," he says, "does not affect the United States alone, still less California. It is a world question essentially. Fears of the inhabitants of the Pacific slope may be premature, but they are not entirely groundless. They spring from the instinct of self-preservation and if the present minor dispute is composed they will assuredly recur."

Commenting editorially on the situation, The Times says that: "However it may be settled now, the issue will have to receive the earnest attention of the white races in times to come."

The American people have heretofore occupied a superior attitude toward this "big politics" and has kept away from it, but fate seems now about to thrust upon us the necessity of putting out our hand toward it.

It is impossible to exaggerate the consequences which depend upon the hand we put out. If it is a fist we may as well get ready to tax ourselves, our children and children's children with the cost. There will be the price of trouble enough to last a hundred years.

Putting Our Fist In.

The expense of warships and army equipment is an insignificant item in the reckoning. The losses in markets affecting American labor and capital, and particularly the cotton trade through a long period would be staggering.

But the really great sacrifice that a gladiatorial attitude our part in the problem of big politics would exact of us would be the surrender of the moral supremacy in relation to these things which the founders of the American republic committed to us and which the historians have cheerfully accorded.

Is it not our better destiny to play the part of a big, fearless, chivalric brother with courage, firmness and wisdom, and with fairness and patience, than to seek the role of the "Big Fist," or the "Big Stick" with the commonplace distinction which history has committed to all its boastful and selfish peoples?

Letters From The Georgian's Readers

FREE SCHOOL BOOKS.

Editor The Georgian:

The Constitution of Georgia provides for free public schools and provides a school fund for the support of such schools. The Constitution further provides for local taxation for public schools.

I hope that the Legislature will pass a law authorizing the State School Commissioner or some other public authority to purchase for the use of the public schools of the State all school books necessary for the children attending the schools.

This law would result in the saving of thousands of dollars annually to the people of Georgia.

I do not think the State itself should embark in the publication of free school books, but I am sincerely of the opinion that the State and towns and cities should furnish free school books.

A few of the reasons for my opinion are as follows:

1. The child of the poor man has the same chance to obtain an education as the child of the rich or well-to-do man.

2. The "thorough system of common schools" provided for by the Constitution of Georgia is thus made in fact a "thorough system" because to the free school house and free tuition is added free school books.

3. The work of the school can be begun without delay when school books are furnished at public expense and thus become effective from the beginning of the school term.

4. Uniformity in the use of school books throughout the State is thus secured—although under the Georgia adoption law uniformity is already obtained in the County schools.

5. The common schools, established for the education of the common people, are made popular and attendance is encouraged and prolonged.

6. The school books are public property and through the use of them respect for public property may be taught.

The following States have laws providing for free school books for the public schools: Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Nebraska, Maryland, Wyoming and Utah.

SHEPARD BRYAN.
Former Member Atlanta Board of Education.

WHY IS A FIRETRAP?

Editor The Georgian:

The Georgian quoted Professor Slaton, superintendent of Atlanta public schools, the other day as saying, "The Atlanta schools are firetraps."

The firetrap may be avoided by insisting that the architect observe the following simple rules: Every school house of more than one story should have at least two stairways, located at extreme opposite ends of the building, so that should fire break out at, say, the east end, and block that exit, the west end stairway would be the last part of the building to burn.

The stairs should not be located in the main corridors, where they would form a trap in case of panic, but in separate stairway halls, running out at right angles to the main corridors. They should land in immediate proximity to the exits, so the pupil will not have to run through the building looking for a way out. They should be 4½ feet wide, and have small round hand rails on both sides.

The main corridors leading to exits should be entirely free from obstruction of all kinds. The corridors should give free and unobstructed passage directly to exit doors that open outward at a slight push from inside.

Have all the steps that lead to the first floor on the outside of the building, so that if, in a rush to get out, a child falls or is thrown down he will be on the outside, where he can be rescued. Have no inside vestibule steps.

Locate heating plant near the center of the building, in an absolutely fireproof room, with entrance from outside the building only.

STEVENS BOY NOT SLAYER, DECLARES FATHER

"Red" Merchant, companion of Wade Stevens, was arrested at Chattanooga by Detective John Black shortly after he took the Stevens boy into custody. Black will leave Chattanooga with the two prisoners at 8 o'clock this evening over the Southern Railway, according to a message to Chief Beavers. Other dispatches received say Black and the two boys have already left.

Wade Stevens, son of William Stevens, whose wife and daughter were murdered and whose bodies were found in the charred ruins of their home, seven miles southeast of Atlanta, was arrested in Chattanooga at noon to-day. The DeKalb County Coroner's jury had recommended that the young man be arrested and held for investigation.

The Governor to-day offered a reward of $200 for the arrest of the slayer.

At almost the precise minute when Wade Stevens was arrested in Chattanooga, William Stevens, his father, having just arrived in Atlanta, made a statement to The Georgian completely exonerating the boy. The elder Stevens said his landlady, who knew Wade, had seen him in Chattanooga early Wednesday morning. This was just about the time the crime was discovered and only a few hours after its commission.

Detective John R. Black, of Atlanta, who was in Chattanooga attending the reunion, arrested young Stevens in the reunion city. He wired Chief of Police Beavers and was told to hold the young man, pending arrival of requisition papers.

Chief of Police Beavers then announced he would confer with Sheriff McCurdy, of DeKalb County, before taking further steps.

Sheriff McCurdy later asked that Black bring the boy back, and Chief Beavers wired the detective to that effect. The police point out that if the boy took the 8 o'clock train Tuesday night to Chattanooga he, of course, is eliminated from the case.

Father Brokenhearted.

The father of the boy, a 70-year-old Confederate veteran, was heartbroken when he arrived in Atlanta at 10:50 o'clock this morning and heard for the first time of the double tragedy.

Stevens left Chattanooga at 3 o'clock this morning, but the train was delayed en route. Several friends went to the Union Depot to meet him, but he came from a rear car and left the station without meeting them.

The only information given him in Chattanooga was that his house had burned. Leaving the depot here, he went direct to the office of Carson & Treadwell, who handled his wife's real estate, where he learned all the details.

One of the firm of Carson & Treadwell told him of the double murder, and that his son, Wade Stevens, was wanted for investigation. The old veteran was dumfounded. He sank in a chair and remained silent for several minutes, then dramatically expressed belief in the innocence of his son and declared he would spend the remainder of his days hunting the slayer.

Declares Boy Is Innocent.

"All I have to live for now is to try to catch the murderer," he said. "I'll spend the rest of my days hunting him."

While in Chattanooga Stevens boarded at 166 Rossville Avenue. His son by a former marriage, Ed Stevens, also boarded there. The missing son, Wade Stevens, had stopped there previously and is well known to the landlady, who said she saw him in front of her home at 6 o'clock Wednesday morning.

"I believe my boy is innocent of this murder," said Mr. Stevens. "He was bad at times, but he never could have stooped so low as to murder his own mother and sister. He knows nothing about it yet.

"I know he had nothing to do with

STATE LOSES FALLS FIGHT

CLAYTON, GA., May 29.—The jury hearing the case of the State against the Georgia Railway and Power Company in the great fight over Tallulah Falls late this afternoon returned a verdict for the defendant.

The verdict decides against the State in its claim that the Georgia Railway and Power Company illegally held the gorge of the falls. The fight involved millions of dollars.

Infant Scalded By Fall In Boiling Tub

Stumbling into a tub of boiling water late Thuasday afternoon, little R. C. Hull, infant son of C. C. Hull, of 50 Berne Street, was so badly scalded that physicians at the Grady Hospital say he has little chance of life.

The child, three and a half years old was playing in the room where his mother had been washing, when he tripped and fell headforemost. His mother heard his screams of agony and pulled him out of the tub. Neighbors summoned an ambulance from Grady and record time was made on the run to the hospital but there is little hope held out for the child's life. The child was scalded from his knees to his head.

BURNS JOINS IN HUNT FOR PHAGAN SLAYER

James Conley, the negro sweeper at the National Pencil Factory who has turned suspicion on himself with a maze of contradictory statements, was put through a gruelling third degree examination at police headquarters this afternoon. Pinkerton Detective Harry Scott said as the grilling began before Chief Beavers and Chief Lanford that he expected to glean important information. Scott had interviewed factory employees and was convinced that there were many things to be cleared up before the negro's second affidavit, on which the police rely so much, could be accepted.

With the maze of contradictory statements sweeping an avalanche of suspicion upon the head of James Conley, the negro sweeper, the potent information was unearthed Thursday that Detective William J. Burns personally will take charge of the investigation into the Mary Phagan murder case which his operatives have been conducting.

Despite the published report that the Burns operatives had withdrawn from the case, and despite the procedure of the State in prosecuting its case against Leo M. Frank, the pencil factory superintendent, the Burns investigation will continue and from now on be under the famous detective's direction.

This information came from Detective C. W. Tobie, William J. Burns' lieutenant, Thursday morning. It tends to show that Tobie, who has had charge of his agency's investigation here, does not consider the case as closed.

Mr. Tobie went so far as to deny emphatically the published interview with him, in which he was quoted as declaring Frank to be the guilty man.

Takes Evidence to Burns.

"From the evidence so far developed in the Phagan case, guilt is directed at Frank," the detective said with emphasis. "That was my statement. However, I was quoted as saying outright that Frank committed the murder. That was not true."

Mr. Tobie left Atlanta Thursday afternoon. He carried with him the evidence which he has gathered during his two weeks' probe of the case. He is going to New York. He will meet Burns there and place his material into the noted detective's hands. From then on Detective Burns will direct his operatives as to further investigations to be outlined by him.

This information but proves another link in the chain of circumstances which The Georgian has consistently pointed out in serious incrimination of Conley.

Negro Deeper in Suspicion.

With each cross-examination of the negro by the police in their attempts to secure more evidence against Frank, Conley has only insnared himself in guilt. His admitted falsehoods in former affidavits tending to throw the blame to Frank in connection with the "murder" notes have been accentuated as incriminating by the unqualified declarations of employees at the pencil factory that Conley is the guilty man.

Three responsible officials of the plant have outlined plausible theories as to how the negro could have committed the crime. These men, Herbert G. Schiff, who is assistant superintendent; E. F. Holloway, timekeeper, and N. V. Darley, general foreman, are acquainted with Conley. Upon their knowledge of him and the opportunity offered for accomplishing the murder they base their statements that he is guilty. They have proven beyond a doubt that Conley was in the factory for several hours on the day of the murder, and connecting with this the negro's contradictory statements as to his whereabouts they have compiled a most laudable explanation of how he killed the Phagan girl.

The detectives still held firmly to

One Dead, 2 Dying Defending $10,000 From Holdup Gang

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., May 29.—Word reached the sheriff's office here this afternoon that one man was killed and three wounded in a pitched battle between holdups and company employees at the Illinois zinc works at Peru, Ill., LaSalle County.

The attempt was made to hold up the company paymaster who had the monthly pay roll in his possession. The amount is said to have been $10,000. It is not known here whether the robbers got the money or not.

The sheriff of LaSalle County sent here for the local bloodhounds to trail the bandits. Deputy Sheriff Walters, with two dogs, left for Peru at 4 o'clock. There were five robbers in the gang and all escaped.

The dead man is a company employee as are also the three wounded, two of whom are dying.

MAZE OF LIES BY CONLEY CLOUD MYSTERY

Police, Despite Conflicting Affidavits, Call Him Strong Witness Against Frank.

their theory that the negro was the most important witness against Leo M. Frank, in the face of the contradictory stories and lies in which he had been trapped.

They were strongly disposed to give full credence to Conley's second affidavit, although the negro's sudden anxiety to talk after three weeks of silence and the maze of falsehood in which he was at once involved served suddenly to shift the responsibility for Mary Phagan's death from Leo Frank to the sullen black man, in the judgment of many who have been following the evidence closely.

Chief Lanford and Detective Harry Scott, of the Pinkertons, announced Thursday morning, however, that they regarded the second affidavit of Conley as the final and conclusive piece of evidence needed in preparing a case against Frank.

Rejected First Affidavit.

Others who have weighed the evidence carefully declare there are many more significant indications that Conley was the slayer than there are reasons to believe that Frank is guilty.

The detectives rejected the first affidavit of Conley, in which he said Frank dictated Friday the notes that were found by the body of the slain girl Sunday morning on the ground that it was absurd and unbelievable to hold the theory that the murder was premeditated.

Yet they accept the second affidavit, which indicatesidentically the same thing, in that Frank met Conley at Nelson and Forsyth Streets before 11 o'clock Saturday morning, April 26, before the crime was committed, and told the negro to wait for him, later taking Conley to the factory with him, where Conley says that he wrote the notes at Frank's direction.

The negro in his second affidavit suggests no other motive that could have impelled Frank to ask him to come to the factory shortly before noon on Saturday. Conley says that Frank told him to wait secreted on the first floor until he heard a whistle. When he heard the whistle he says he went upstairs and Frank dictated the notes.

Why Many Suspect Conley.

All of this is inescapably suggestive of premeditation on the part of Frank, if Conley's story is to be believed, but the theory of premeditation has been scoffed at by everyone, including Chief Lanford and Harry Scott.

In fact, it never seriously was considered by anyone, say those who are inclined to believe the evidence against Conley greatly outweighs that against Frank. The assertion is freely made that it would be far easier to convict Conley, if the police were so disposed, than it will be to convict Frank. Here are a few reasons advanced:

When the factory superintendent was permitted to go before the Coroner's jury by his attorney, he answered all the questions in a straightforward, unwavering manner, never once being trapped in a lie or misstatement.

In marked contrast is the conduct of Conley ever since his arrest at the time of the inquest three weeks ago. When discovered at the factory, he was washing a shirt which he sought to hide from the person who had found him out.

He was taken into custody and gave his address as 92 Tattnall Street. Investigation disclosed that Conley was lying and that he had not lived on Tattnall Street for months, his actual residence being 172 Rhodes Street.

He was asked to write, and he told the officers he could not write a word. He refused to be inveigled into making an attempt at handwriting of any sort. He would not put a pencil to paper that the detectives might get a specimen of his penmanship. For a long time they believed he was so ignorant he could not write his own name. Then they found some leases he had signed for watches and knew that he had been lying again.

Just as the Grand Jury was about to sit and it appeared likely that Frank would be indicted, the negro broke his silence for the first time. He told the detectives that it was he who had written the notes, but that he had written them at Frank's dictation on Friday, April 25. Frank had approached him in an aisle at the factory and had asked him to come into the office, he said. He remembered that it was four minutes before 1 o'clock.

That he had been at the factory Saturday he denied emphatically. Between 10 o'clock in the forenoon and 2 o'clock in the afternoon he had been on Peters Street, according to his story.

The detectives ridiculed his story and continued examining. Gradually he broke down under their questioning, and it was established that he had been lying again and that he actually had been in the factory Saturday, presumably at the very time the girl was murdered. This was the first time his presence in the factory on Saturday had been known.

He had kept it a most profound secret up to the time it was gouged out of him by the detectives. He weakened further and admitted that he had been hiding down on the first floor as persons went in and out.

He described practically every person that entered or left the factory between 12 and 1 o'clock. But he declared that he did not see Mary Phagan when she came in the building. Out of all who entered or left, the murdered girl and Lemmie Quinn appear to be the only ones he missed seeing, according to his story.

He explained this by saying that he must have fallen asleep for a little while. He saw Miss Corinthia Hall and Mrs. Freeman leave a few minutes before 1 o'clock, but did not see Mary Phagan enter about five minutes after the hour. Neither did he see Lemmie Quinn, who is said to have been at the factory about 12:15.

If the negro's final affidavit is taken as nearer the probable truth than his first, those who are acquainted with Frank are of the opinion that there are still most important questions to be answered convincingly. They are these, assuming that Frank is guilty:

"Why should a man of Frank's intelligence—a man who is highly educated and who has won a position of responsibility—virtually make a confidant of another man, especially an ignorant negro, easily broken down by the third degree of the police station?

"Why should a man of sense, if he wished to keep his crime undiscovered, proclaim it to the negro, in his office by the question: 'Why should I hang?'"

"Why should he approach this negro more than an hour before this crime was committed?

MORSE TRYING TO RULE COAST SHIPS

Banker, Pardoned When "Dying," Purchases Steamers for New York-to-South Trade.

NEW YORK, May 29.—Charles W. Morse, convicted of bank wrecking after the 1907 panic and pardoned by President Taft on the ground that he was dying, is not only attempting to secure a monopoly of Hudson River steamship traffic, but is reaching out along the Atlantic Coast.

This became known to-day when it was learned that Morse has bought four lake steamers for coastwise trade between New York and Southern ports and will attempt to become the dominant figure in steamship traffic on the Atlantic Coast he was planning to become when the financial earthquake of 1907 upset his schemes.

The ships are so big they can not be brought through the canal connecting Lakes Erie and Ontario, consequently they will have to be reduced in size. They will be enlarged after they reach this port.

Morse may extend his operations to the Pacific when the Panama Canal is completed.

FELDER BRIBERY CHARGE EXPECTED

Believed Beavers Will Try to Have Grand Jury Consider Accusasations Against Attorney.

That bribery charges against Colonel Thomas B. Felder and others will be placed before the Fulton County Grand Jury by police officials, was the indication when G. C. February, secretary of Chief of Detectives Lanford, and the person alleged to have been offered $1,000 in bribe money, secured a subpena Thursday afternoon for A. S. Colyar, Jr., to appear before Solicitor General Dorsey and give testimony Friday morning.

The subpena formally summoned Colyar, who was the author of the dictographing of Felder and Mayor Woodward, to appear before the Grand Jury. The preliminary hearing, however, will be in Solicitor Dorsey's office.

That February carried away with him a number of subpena blanks is taken to mean that others will be called upon to testify.

At the hearing of testimony Friday morning it is believed that Lanford and Police Chief Beavers will endeavor to show Solicitor Dorsey the plausibility of their bribery charges and ask that the matter be placed before the Grand Jury.

In line with this action, Chief Beavers called upon Carl Hutcheson, the attorney, again Thursday morning for the list of "protected disorderly houses" which Hutcheson declared he held, and which Hutcheson said he would reveal in an effort to prove that vice under police protection is rife in Atlanta.

Hutcheson three days ago, in answer to Beavers' den, declared that he would give the police official the list on Thursday. On that day, however, Hutcheson stated the list was not yet prepared. He informed Beavers he would have it ready, though, within a short time.

Colyar was formally released Thursday of the $1,000 bonds under which he was given his liberty following forgery charges made against him by a Knoxville, Tenn., woman.

Colyar's release followed the failure of the Knoxville police authorities to send a man to Atlanta to take him back at the time specified by Police Chief Beavers.

Shot His Neighbor; Gets Year in Jail

MACON, GA., May 29.—Mallary Bedingfield, found guilty of shooting at another because of the shooting of his next-door neighbor, Ferd Guttenberger, whom he claims he mistook for a burglar, this morning was sentenced as for a misdemeanor, being given twelve months in jail.

Guttenberger recovered, although a bullet passed through his body.

Gibson Jury Unable To Agree on Verdict

NEWBURGH, N. Y., May 29.—After having been out all night, the jury in the trial of Burton W. Gibson, the New York lawyer charged with strangling Countess Rosa Menschik Szabo on Greenwood Lake July 16, 1912, to secure her estate, was still deadlocked this morning.

It was rumored that the jurors stood 11 to 1 for conviction.

The jury in Gibson's first trial disagreed.

it, because he was in Chattanooga yesterday morning. When he drove me from home to the car line Sunday morning when I started to Chattanooga he told me he might be up there before the reunion was over.

"Yesterday afternoon the landlady told me the house had burned down. She knew Wade, and she told me she saw him in front of her house yesterday morning, wearing overalls just as when he is said to have left home. Two boys were with him, but they didn't go in the house. Wade was in Chattanooga when my wife and daughter were murdered, and he couldn't have done it."

Goes to See Ruins.

Leaving Carson & Treadwell's office, Mr. Stevens said he was going to the ruins of his home. He first visited the Patterson undertaking establishment and arranged for the funeral of his wife and daughter. Both bodies will be taken to Meansville, Ga., at 4 o'clock Friday morning, to be buried in the family lot, where Mrs. Stevens' father and mother both have been interred in the last two years.

Lonnie Blevins, 17 years old, who says he left San Francisco for Tampa and from there came to Atlanta, is held at police headquarters to-day. He said he arrived in Atlanta last Friday. He was detained because he could not give a connected story. The police attach little significance to his arrest or his presence in Atlanta.

Tells of Attempted Attack.

An important clew, given Sheriff J. A. McCurdy, of DeKalb County, who is in charge of the investigation, was revealed in the statement of a neighbor to the effect that a Mexican halfbreed, formerly employed by Mrs. Stevens, had attempted to attack Nellie Stevens some time ago.

This declaration was made by Miss Josephine McCaulay, 790 Glenwood Avenue, an intimate friend of both the slain mother and daughter. Miss McCaulay said that only a few days ago Mrs. Stevens had told her of shooting at the discharged halfbreed when he appeared at the country home. Mrs. Stevens had said that she fired twice at the man, and that he escaped into the clump of woods adjoining the house. Sheriff McCurdy has ordered a country-wide search made for the halfbreed.

Discovery Wednesday morning that Mr. Stevens had purchased an axe some days ago offers a possible clew to the weapon used by the murderer in crushing the skulls of his victims. The axe is, so far, missing, though the ruins of the burned dwelling and surrounding vicinity have been carefully searched for it.

Ax Apparently Used.

The sharp, knifelike cut across the top of Nellie Stevens' skull seems to bear out the theory that the murderer used the ax to slay his victims.

Possibility that the weapon used by the murderer was thrown into the well near the house has lead Sheriff McCurdy to order the well dragged.

Atlanta police and detective officials have joined with the DeKalb force to solve the mystery. Detective Chief Lanford assigned Mounted Policeman Hamilton, who was a close friend of the Stevens family, and Detective Rosser to work on the case. Sheriff McCurdy obtained this reinforcement Thursday morning when he held a conference with Lanford.

A unique incident of the blaze which burned the Stevens home to ashes was revealed in the finding of fifty-seven chickens dead in a coop fifty feet away. The coop was not even scorched by the heat.

That robbery was the motive of the murderer has been established by the disappearance of jewelry and a large quantity of money which Mrs. Stevens was known to have had in the house at the time.

Woman's Jewels Missing.

Neighbors stated that Mrs. Stevens possessed a diamond ring valued at $400 and two gold watches. These are missing.

Coupled with other theories as to the murder is one which shows the work that of two negroes who were said to have been seen driving away from the burning home at sunrise Wednesday morning. The men rode in a one-horse wagon, the body of which was filled with oats. Tracks of the horse were found on a spot near the ruins. In the immediate vicinity was discovered a small pile of fresh oats. Human footprints were found nearby.

Despite the assertion that the negroes drove away, Sheriff McCurdy's men made a careful search of the woods surrounding the home, believing it highly probable that the murderer might have hidden therein to watch the burning house, and will scour the woods again to-day. Another theory is that he might have been wounded by Mrs. Stevens before he killed her, and had been forced to drag himself to the woods for escape. That the man may be lying there now is a possibility expressed by the police. The shell found in the shotgun used by Mrs. Stevens was found to have been discharged.

Does Bible Give Clew?

A search Thursday morning of an old deserted cabin 100 yards from the destroyed Stevens' home, in which Mrs. S. C. Stevens and her adopted daughter, Nellie, were murdered and then cremated, disclosed a Bible containing numerous marked passages, tragically coincident with the reported conduct of her own son toward her. This cabin was occupied at different times by negro servants who worked on the Stevens place. It had been vacant for three weeks.

The Bible reposed on a dust-covered mantel in the dingy shack. On the flyleaf appeared this inscription:

"Mrs. S. C. Stevens' book."

In the list of the Ten Commandments, two of them were marked in pencil. They were:

"Thou shalt not kill."

"Honor thy father and thy mother."

Several passages in the book of Exodus were marked, all bearing on the relation of the son to the parents. One of these reads:

"And he that smiteth his father or his mother shall surely be put to death."

Verses of the same chapter were also marked, one reading:

"And he that curseth his father or his mother shall surely be put to death."

"And if any mischief follow, then thou shalt surely give life for life."

Negro Is Sought.

Walter Wilkes, a negro, who occupied the deserted cabin until three weeks ago, is being sought by officers Thursday in the general plan of investigating every one on whom suspicion might possibly turn. Where he went after leaving the Stevens home has not been learned.

The search of the cabin revealed discarded clothing, supposed to have been left by Wilkes. The clothing is said to have been damp. On an old table was also found a caseknife.

In the corner of the room was an old ax. It bore spots, but these are believed to be rust. This is not thought to be the missing Stevens' ax, which was practically new and bright. Sheriff McCurdy said Thursday he believed this ax was at the bottom of the well in the yard of the burned home.

Search is also being made for an unidentified negro who once worked for a Mrs. Nort, said to be a friend of Mrs. Stevens. This negro wrote Mrs. Nort a letter asking her for a recommendation, but she failed to grant his request. Last Saturday the negro is said to have called her up over the telephone and remarked that he didn't need a recommendation anyway, "that he was working for her friend, Mrs. Stevens." No one has been found who knows anything of this negro. He is described as being black and thick.

Gun Shell Is Found.

B. R. Peavy, a farmer who was on the scene of the crime all night, made an extended search of the ruins, and in the room where the charred bodies were found discovered a shotgun shell. The primer was dented, indicating that it had been fired. The single-barreled shotgun found beside the remains of Mrs. Stevens was empty. Peavy also found a discharged revolver cartridge, of .38 caliber. Mrs. Stevens' revolver is said to have been of 32 caliber.

Her revolver is still missing.

The finding of the discharged cartridges has only served to intensify the baffling mystery as to what took place in the murder room. It has given rise to several theories. It has been suggested that there may have been a gun battle between Mrs. Stevens and the assailant. There is still another theory that the murderer may have shot Mrs. Stevens with a revolver, and, as she fell, seized the shotgun, with which she was trying to defend the home, and with it shot the girl to death. Officers are satisfied that Mrs. Stevens had leaped from bed and seized the shotgun to protect herself and little Nellie, but it is a matter of pure speculation as to how the shell came to be discharged.

The time of the tragedy, or at least of the fire, was fixed Thursday in a statement by Farris Simmons, a brakeman of the Southern Railway, who said he passed on his train between 12 and 1 o'clock Wednesday morning and saw the house in flames. The railroad is but a short distance from the burned home. This would make it positive that the murder was committed about midnight or before that hour, and the Stevens boy will merely have to show that he left for Chattanooga before that time.

Suspect Trailed.

Telephone information from Red Oak, a short distance south of Atlanta, was received at the police station Thursday afternoon to the effect that a suspicious stranger, believed to be Dan Walker, the suspected halfbreed Indian who was shot at by Mrs. Stevens several weeks ago when he insulted her adopted daughter, had passed through that place yesterday.

Policeman Clarence Hamilton, who is detailed on the mystery with Detective Rosser, immediately notified Fairburn, Newnan, Palmetto and other towns along the route to be on the lookout for the half-breed and take him into custody, pending instructions from Atlanta.

Sister Believes Son Innocent.

In a darkened room in a little house at 33 Dalney Street, with a physician in almost constant attendance, lies a woman prostrated by grief. Absolute quiet has been ordered by the doctor, and the anguish tears at her heart in a silence broken only by her own sobs and the hushed patter of childish footsteps as her children play quietly about the house.

She is Mrs. Pearl Hartley, sister of Mrs. Sarah C. Stevens, whose charred body was found lying beside that of her adopted daughter in the smoking ruins of their farm home seven miles from Atlanta. Prostrated by the shock of the tragedy, with her imagination made vivid by her suffering and grief, Mrs. Hartley is seeing in the darkness of her room the terrible happenings of that night of horror.

Mrs. Hartley's only surcease from suffering came for a few moments late Wednesday afternoon, when, under the influence of opiates administered by her physician, she recovered sufficiently to talk to a Georgian reporter. Mrs. Hartley sobbed audibly throughout the interview, and her eyes, red with weeping and reflecting the anguish that tore at her heart, emphasized her words as she cried for vengeance on the murderer.

"Why do they always murder women?" she cried. "It is terrible. Little girls are murdered when they go onto the street, and now a woman is not safe even in her own home."

Faints at News.

The notifying of Mrs. Hartley of the death of her sister and niece formed one of the most dramatic and pathetic incidents of the entire tragedy. She was downtown Wednesday morning shopping, when word came to her home on Dalney Street that her sister and niece had been murdered. Mrs. Lena Thompson, a neighbor, of 24 Dalney Street, volunteered to go downtown and find Mrs. Hartley and tell her the sad news.

After a search of an hour Mrs. Thompson found Mrs. Hartley in the Kress store on Whitehall Street. As she stood trying to locate the sister of the murdered woman in the crowd of shoppers Mrs. Hartley, warned by intuition that something was wrong, pushed through the crowd and hurried to Mrs. Thompson.

"What is it?" she cried. "What's the matter?"

Mrs. Thompson, seeking to break the news gently, told her that her sister's home had burned down and that she had been badly injured.

"It's worse than that," Mrs. Hartley cried. "I feel it! I know it is worse than that!"

She screamed and fainted in the arms of Mrs. Thompson. She was soon revived and taken to her home. Mrs. Thompson endeavored to calm her on the trip on the street car with the assurance that everything was all right.

As Mrs. Hartley entered her yard, one of her little daughters ran out of the house, tears streaming down her face.

"Oh, mamma," she cried, "Aunt Sarah and Cousin Nellie have been killed!"

With a scream, Mrs. Hartley fell to the ground in a swoon. She was picked up by Mrs. Thompson and members of her family and carried into the house. A physician was called and administered opiates. Under the influence of the medicine she was able to sit up in bed for a few moments late in the afternoon, but collapsed again when she learned that her nephew, the son of the murdered woman, was being sought by the police as the murderer of his mother.

BETTER SERVICE ON CAR LINES ORDERED

Railroad Commission Directs the Company to Provide for the Rush-Hour Crowds.

General improvement in the street car service in Atlanta furnished by the Georgia Railway and Power Company was ordered by the State Railroad Commission shortly after noon Thursday. Practically every line operated by the company is included in the list. The order specifies particularly the service rendered during rush hours.

The order, which will benefit thousands of persons who are compelled to use the street cars, was issued after several conferences between the Railroad Commission and President Arkwright, of the Georgia Railway and Power Company.

On May 5 Chairman Murphey Candler addressed a letter to Mr. Arkwright asking him to make suggestions for the betterment of the service during rush hours. This letter was replied to on May 23 by Mr. Arkwright, his letter going much into detail.

Suggestions made by Mr. Arkwright were considered at sessions of the commission Tuesday and Wednesday, during which time they were in conference with the street railway officials. It is understood that the order of the commission is agreeable to the company. The improvement of service will begin within the next few days.

Improvements Ordered.

Here are the improvements ordered:

ROUTE NO 2—Copenhill to Westview. Rearrangement of schedules so as to space the headway between cars now operated more nearly to four minutes and secure a more even distribution of the traffic loads. Counts of actual loads at peak points to be made during next five months and filed with the commission, so as to secure accurate information as to whether there is excessive congestion.

ROUTE NO. 4—Inman Park-Georgia Avenue. A three and one-third minute headway during morning and afternoon rush hours, on Inman Par end, with the Georgia Avenue end provided for by increased service on Route No. 5.

ROUTE NO. 5—West Peachtree and South Pryor. Additional cars between Sixth Street crossing on West Peachtree and Bass Street crossing on South Pryor, so as to give, during the morning and afternoon rush hours, a service with five minutes' headway.

ROUTE NO. 6—Forrest Avenue and Capitol Avenue. Actual counts to be made during morning and afternoon rush hours, at two peak points, during next five months, to accurately ascertain degree of congestion, if any, on this route.

ROUTE NO. 8—Fair and Marietta Streets. The afternoon rush hour service on this line has been recently extended from 6:30 to 7 p. m., and schedules now established more regularly sustained. Counts of traffic loads to be made on this route, as directed on No. 6.

ROUTE NO. 10—Whitehall and Peachtree: Increased service so as to provide for cars every three and one-third minutes, and extension of afternoon rush hour service to 9 p. m.

Suburban Service.

ROUTE NO. 17—Main Decatur: Additional tripper cars to Hayes Street, so as to give service to that point with three and one-third minute headway, and from there to Decatur on five minutes headway during morning and afternoon rush hours, with extension of service on ten-minute headway from end of afternoon rush hour period to 9:30 p. m., in lieu of present twenty-minute headway. After 9:30 p. m. the twenty-minute headway will be operated as now.

ROUTE NO. 19—River Line: Extra cars on Sundays during summer months to accommodate extra traffic. Counts of traffic loads to be made on this route week days, as directed on other named routes, to accurately ascertain measure of regular traffic.

ROUTE NO. 20—College Park, East Point and Hapeville: Actual counts of week-day loads at peak points to be made during next five months, to ascertain accurately if there is overcongestion in regular traffic.

ROUTE NO. 23—Buckhead Line: Tripper service previously ordered by the commission to Sixth Street on West Peachtree has been recently extended by the company to Dead Man's Curve, the end of double track, which gives local service this far on a ten-minute headway during rush hours and to that extent relieves congestion on the Buckhead cars. In addition, double-headers in the morning and afternoon hours, for congestion during those hours arising out of construction work in the northern part of the city, are operated and will be continued as necessity demands. Counts, during morning and afternoon rush hours, for the next five months, of actual loads at the peak point of the Buckhead line, have been ordered, and will determine the necessity of further relief on this route.

COUNCIL TO PURCHASE CREMATORY THIS YEAR, ASSERT CITY OFFICIALS

Payment of the Entire Cost, Even if Other Work Is Sacrificed, Declared To Be Only Solution of Tangle Following Court Ruling.

Leading city officials declared Thursday that the one way to settle the crematory tangle was to pay the entire cost of the new plant this year under a new contract with the Destrucor Company, of New York; and they further asserted they believed council would pursue that course at a sacrifice of other special improvements.

Mayor Woodward declared he was willing to buy the Destructor Company's plant on a real business basis. Alderman Candler said the city must have an incinerator this summer if everything else had to be sacrificed. Councilman Claude L. Ashley favors buying the plant straight out. Councilman George H. Boynton agreed with them.

City Attorney James L. Mayson, after carefully studying the decision of the Supreme Court holding the old contract illegal, said it was the simplest plan.

Agree Plant Is Necessity.

All agreed that Atlanta must have a new garbage disposal plant this summer at all hazards. They argued that it was equally as obvious that the only possible plant was the Destructor plant. This plant will be completed within 30 days. The means of having it completed and put into use are as follows:

To buy it straightout.

To submit the old contract to a vote of the people, when it will have to be approved by two-thirds of the registered voters.

For citizens to lend the purchase price and, without any contract, take their chances on being repaid by Council.

For the Destructor Company to complete the plant without any contract and trust to the judgments of succeeding Council to complete the payments.

Attorney Mayson said the complications srurounding the latter propositions are so great that the first plan practically was the only sure way.

Has $125,000 Set Aside.

Council has $125,000 already set aside for this year's payment on the crematory. There is $71,000 available in the June sheet. Councilman Boynton said to-day that the tax books showed that $50,000 additional could be added to the increase of revenue. Money for various improvements is still unspent and Council has the right to recall these appropriations. Also, if a cash payment is to be made, it is said the Destructor Company will reduce its original price by some thousands of dollars.

The old contract provided for a $100,000 electric power plant in conjuction with the crematory. But the councilmen say this feature can be eliminated for the present, in view of the serious garbage situation.

Expect Mayor to Balk.

A special meeting of the Board of Health has been called for Thursday night to consider the whole matter. The Finance Committee will meet Friday morning to make up the June budget. It is expected that by the time Council meets Monday afternoon the whole matter will be decided. But the chances are small that the mayor will agree.

Samuel Evins, attorney for the Destructor Company, announced Thursday that the company would proceed with the erection of the plant. The Supreme Court order does not go into effect for ten days and by that time Council probably will have made a new contract, thus averting any interference in the progress of garbage disposal by the court's decision.

Councilman Ashley, chairman of the Sanitary Committee, declared that the garbage situation was a matter of life and death. He sserted tht unless the crematory was put into operation this summer, by fall the people would be dying like flies.

Two Ready to Give $1,000.

He and Councilman Boynton agreed to start a subscription of $1,000 each by which citizens would buy the plant and take their chances on Council repaying them.

In striking contrast to the attitude of alarm of the councilmen was the smile of Mayor Woodward. Council overrode his position on the crematory issue at every turn but he held out that he would never sign a check in payment on the contract unless ordered to do so by the Supreme Court. He holds that the city is being charged far too much for the plant.

"It justifies my numerous attacks on Council's business methods," he said to-day. "I warned them when they tore down that old crematory that they would be howling this summer that we had no crematory. I now inform them that I am going to break that $100,000 fire alarm contract and prevent any other moral obligation contracts going through.

Calls Ruling Far-Reaching.

"Of course, we must have a crematory. I am willing to buy the Destructor plant on a business basis. I am willing to pay them in proportion to what they received for the Milwaukee plant. They got $200,000 for a 300-ton plant there; ours is a 250-ton plant."

City Attorney Mayson said the Supreme Court's decision was far reaching.

"There was no question that one Council could not bind another," he said. "But this decision is that the appropriation of a sum of money which would tend to make succeeding Councils appropriate money for the same purpose tends toward coercion and is, therefore, illegal."

AID ASKED IN WAR ON TUBERCULOSIS

Association Appeals to Atlanta to Make Up $5,000 of $10,000 Needed Yearly.

Unless the Atlanta Anti-Tuberculosis Association can secure the $5,000 in subscriptions, for which it has asked the people of Atlanta, the officials state it will be seriously handicapped in its work this year. There has been collected less than 15 per cent of the fund the public was asked to give.

The association, nevertheless, is prosecuting its work more vigorously than ever, responding to every call and seeking to better conditions and lend assistance wherever possible.

Example is given of an Atlanta family of eight members, in which five of the children have tuberculosis. The bread winners of the family, all under 16 years, earn $9.30 a week in a mill. The association makes it a point to keep close supervision upon families of this sort, to win their affection and insist on carefulness in their habits, to prevent the spread of the disease.

Three children to give another case, making $45 a month, earn the entire living for a family of eleven. When the elder of these children contracted tuberculosis the family income was reduced more than half. It took not only argument, but force, to get this girl into a sanitarium, where she has been committed until sufficiently improved to resume her occupation.

Contending with hundreds of cases of this sort every year, the association is in need of an income which will enable it to get definite results. It needs for this purpose $10,000 annually. Of this amount the public is asked to give $5,000.

JACKSON TO ENTER BANKING BUSINESS

Retiring Collector of Revenue Announces He Will Represent Northern Companies

Henry S. Jackson, whose resignation as Collector of Internal Revenue takes effect July 1, will remain in Atlanta as Southern representative for Chicago, Pittsburg and New York banking houses. At first he will retain his present office in the Inman Building, but later will take a suite in one of Atlanta's new office buildings.

Already Mr. Jackson is transacting financial business. Thursday he negotiated a loan of $150,000 in behalf of an Atlanta building enterprise.

"I shall retain my interest in political affairs," said Mr. Jackson, "and shall continue as Republican national committeeman from Georgia."

$3.50 Recipe Free, For Weak Men

Send Name and Address To-day—You Can Have It Free and Be Strong and Vigorous.

I have in my possession a prescription for nervous debility, lack of vigor, weakened manhood, failing memory and lame back, brought on by excesses, unnatural drains, or the follies of youth, that has cured so many worn and nervous men right in their own homes—without any additional help or medicine—that I think every man who wishes to regain his manly power and virility, quickly and quietly, should have a copy. So I have determined to send a copy of the prescription free of charge, in a plain, ordinary sealed envelope, to any man who will write me for it.

This prescription comes from a physician who has made a special study of men, and I am convinced it is the surest-acting combination for the cure of deficient manhood and vigor failure ever put together.

I think I owe it to my fellow-men to send them a copy in confidence so that any man anywhere who is weak and discouraged with repeated failures may stop drugging himself with harmful patent medicines, secure what I believe is the quickest acting restorative, up-building SPOT-TOUCHING remedy ever devised, and so cure himself at home quietly and quickly. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, 4276 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send you a copy of this splendid recipe in a plain, ordinary envelope free of charge. A great many doctors would charge $3.00 to $5.00 for merely writing out a prescription like this—but I send it entirely free.

Carnegie's Valor Does Not Impress Schwab

NEW YORK, May 29.—Charles M. Schwab, president of the Bethlehem Steel Company, does not take seriously Andrew Carnegie's declaration that he would carry a gun and die for America if Japan attacked this country.

"I don't think Mr. Carnegie would go to war any more than I would, even if he does feel younger," he said. "The best way to insure peace is always to be prepared for war. America should build more battleships."

Millionaire's Home Wrecked by Spirits

CHICAGO, May 29.—Though followers of the occult believe in signs, the occult is bad for the sign business.

That is the burden of the complaint of Mrs. Zero Marx, wife of a millionaire sign painter who is suing for separate maintenance. Marx's business and his disposition have been wrecked by his devotion to the occult sciences, the complaint charges.

Many Box and Theater Parties Will Give Appearance of Return of Grand Opera.

Society will turn out en masse at the evening with the Players' Club June 3. Oscar Wilde's sparkling comedy, "The Importance of Being in Earnest," will be interpreted by Atlanta artists, pronounced proficient by professional instructors.

Advance seat sales indicate a capacity audience. Tickets have been on sale only a few days, but few are left. Choice seats especially were in great demand.

The boxes will be filled by as brilliant a company as ever went in one evening to grand opera. Several theater parties already made up will be scattered among the audience. Supper parties will be given after the show at the Piedmont Driving Club.

Among the hosts and hostesses at box parties will be Governor-elect and Mrs. Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson, Mrs. William B. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Felder, Judge and Mrs. Arthur Powell, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Cooney and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Speer.

The following well-known society leaders will appear in the cast: Miss Hildreth Burton-Smith, Mrs. William Owens, Mrs. Slaton, Mrs. H. B. Scott Lamar Hill, Marshall Adair, Hamilton Douglas, Jr., and Frank Taylor

LAMAR TO SPEAK TO GEORGIA BAR

Supreme Court Jurist Appears Thursday Night for First Time in State Since Elevation.

Justice J. R. Lamar will make his first public appearance in Georgia since his elevation to the Supreme Court of the United States before the Georgia Bar Association at Warm Springs Thursday night. His address originally had been scheduled for Friday morning, but was moved up to Thursday night to enable the jurist to be in Washington Friday.

Arriving in Atlanta Wednesday morning with Mrs. Lamar, Justice Lamar paid a visit to members of the Supreme Court of Georgia. After chatting for an hour he and Mrs. Lamar proceeded to Warm Springs.

An Atlanta delegation of lawyers will leave for Warm Springs at 5:10 o'clock this afternoon. Among the lawyers will be Hamilton Douglas, Lee Jordan, John Y. Smith, Henry C. Peeples, Arminius A. Wright, John C. Tye, Judge Broyles, Sam D. Hewlett, Luther Z. Rosser, Jr., D. K. Johnston, Lawton Nally, W. C. Latimer, Eugene R. Black, Sanders McDaniel, Burton Smith, Alex Smith, H. M. Patty, Daniel Rountree, Robert C. Alston and John M. Slaton.

Other Georgia attorneys, already at Warm Springs, who will hear Justice Lamar, are Judge W. A. Little, of Columbus; Orville A. Park, Macon; Judge Andrew J. Cobb, Athens; Judge Joseph H. Lumpkin and Judge Beverly D. Evans, Atlanta.

TALLULAH FALLS SUIT IS ARGUED BY COUNSEL

Verdict in Power Company Land Case Expected Thursday Afternoon at Clayton.

CLAYTON, GA., May 29.—The suit of the State of Georgia against the Georgia Railway and Power Company to determine ownership of the gorge at Tallulah Falls will reach the jury early this afternoon and a verdict is expected before night.

Argument, which began yesterday afternoon and continued for 3 1-2 hours until court adjourned for the day, was resumed when court reconvened this morning, with 4 1-2 hours of time allotted the lawyers to be consumed.

Edgar Watkins, of Atlanta, opened for the State, being followed by Alex King, of Atlanta, for the power company, who in turn was followed by W. S. Paris, of Clayton, for the State. He was the last speaker yesterday. This morning H. H. Dean, of Gainesville, was the first speaker, representing the power company. The others in turn were R. C. Ellis, of Tifton, for the State; Luther Z. Rosser, of Atlanta, for the power company, and Attorney General T. S. Felder, closing for the State.

Mr. King brought a trunk full of law books from Atlanta and he quoted at length from these in support of the power company's contentions that it has clear titles to the Tallulah Falls gorge lands. Lawyers for both sides referred frequently and in detail to the surveys and plats filed as exhibits to the testimony of Professors Strong and Koch, of the University of Georgia, who made surveys of the gorge for the State. The documentary evidence of deeds, land grants and other old papers bearing on the titles to these lands were stressed by the attorneys in support of their respective contentions.

Judge J. B. Jones, in his charge to the jury, will review much of this evidence and instruct the jurors on the law involved. It is thought the jury will remain out but a short time.

Danger Signal Set For DeWolf Hopper

ALTOONA, PA., May 29.—"The Furrys for generations have revived the sacredness of the marriage vow, and the reports that my daughter Elda has been married to De Wolf Hopper pain me greatly," said David E. Furry, a butcher of this city, today.

"If Hopper loves my daughter and means well I will be satisfied, but if he married her like he took up with his other four wives, as he would a plaything, it will be an outrage that I will not stand for," the irate father announced.

Goodwin's Mother Favors 5th Wedding

BOSTON, May 29.—"I don't blame him for marrying for the fifth time," said Mrs. Caroline R. Goodwin today regarding the marriage of her son, Nat Goodwin, the actor, to Marjorie Moreland.

"He married for love this time. I think it's all right.

"Two of his wives are dead. As for the divorced two—well, sometimes there are some things a man simply can't stand for."

Penrose Says, 'Teach Boys Cooking, Too.'

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania, speaking at the graduating exercises of the National School of Domestic Arts and Sciences, deplored inventions which have done away with our puritanical ideals.

Cooking is becoming a lost art, he said. He also declared that boys should be taught cooking as well as girls.

POWERS TO HALT NEW WAR MOVE IN BALKANS

Servia Remobilizes Troops in Preparation for Clash With Bulgaria.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SALONIKA, May 29.—The entire Turkish population in the village of Hadji was massacred by Bulgarian troops, according to a dispatch received here to-day.

LONDON, May 29.—The powers of Europe have begun to bring pressure upon Bulgaria, Servia and Greece to prevent a fresh conflict in the Balkans.

The Ambassadors believe that if the Balkan states and Greece can be held in accord until the protocol of a peace treaty with Turkey is signed that the issues causing dissension among the states of the Balkan Confederation can be settled by arbitration to the satisfaction of all.

Sir Edward Grey, British Foreign Minister, said to-day that he expects all the Balkan peace envoys to sign the preliminary draft of a Turco-Balkan treaty to-morrow.

Servia Prepares To Fight Bulgaria.

VIENNA, May 29.—Servia has begun the remobilization of her reservists on account of the critical relations with Bulgaria.

A telegram from Sofia says that Bulgaria is on the point of breaking off all diplomatic relations with Servia because of the unsatisfactory character of a statement made yesterday by Premier Pastich of Servia setting forth Servia's attitude in the Balkan crisis.

Premier Venizelos of Greece is expected to arrive in Sofia either to-night or to-morrow and will at once enter into negotiations with Czar Ferdinand in an effort to effect a conciliatory settlement.

France to Cut Duty On Horses for Food

PARIS, May 29.—With a view to reducing the cost of living the Chamber voted to-day to reduce the import duty on horses intended for slaughter from $30 to $10. A rebate will be granted on the production of a certificate that they have been killed for food.

There are in France 700 places where horses are slaughtered. Paris consumed 60,000 in 1911, valued at $40 to $50. Horse meat sells at 3 1-2 cents a pound.

Settle Quarrel With Duel by Avalanche

GENEVA, May 29.—A duel by avalanche was the method chosen by two rivals for the hand of an Italian girl.

To settle their claims the men, who live below Mont Blanc, decided to stand for several hours every day in the path usually followed by avalanches on the mountain side until one of them was swept to death.

One of the men was struck but received only slight injuries.

Makes Will, Then Fights Fatal Duel

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., May 29.—Joseph Stoughton, a hotel proprietor of Lexington, Ill., is dying to-day following a revolver duel with Grant Preble, an automobile dealer, of the same town. Preble is severely wounded and physicians to-day said he might die.

The duel occurred on the streets a few minutes after Stoughton had made a will leaving his property to his wife.

Beggar, With $1,000 Jewels, Arrested

MACON, GA., May 29.—Although he was arrested for begging on the streets, J. W. Hill, alias J. W. Greer, who says Fort Worth, Texas, is his home, had diamonds worth $750, two watches, each valued at $50, other jewelry worth $100, and $80 in money on his person when searched at police headquarters.

He paid a nominal fine for violating a city ordinance in soliciting alms.

BIG WORKS CHECKS SMOKE NUISANCE

Joseph May & Sons Install "Climax" Preventer at Their Orme Street Plant.

The big smokestack on Joseph May & Sons' Dry Cleaning Works, 154 Orme Street, has ceased to belch great columns of smoke—not because the plant is shut down, but because a smoke preventer has been installed.

L. C. Commerford and Charles Heer, of Atlanta, yesterday gave a demonstration of the invention, which promises great things toward abating the smoke nuisance in this city. About two weeks ago Commerford put the smoke consumer to work. Since then there has been rejoicing in the immediate neighborhood.

Burns the Smoke.

The name of the preventer is the "Climax" and it works on the steam jet principle. Four jets, attached to the furnace just above the door, force in cold air from below and steam from above in the fire box. The steam forces the smoke from off the fire bed and slams it up against the back wall of the furnace.

When the smoke hits the back wall it turns a flip-flop and comes back over the flame. Here it is met with the air which is forced in from the under side of the jet. The air holds it for a fraction of a second and the smoke is actually burned. The oxygen and hydrogen with the furnace gases and flame consume the carbon or smoke, which is nothing more than vaporous coal.

Can Be Regulated.

The smoke ordinance in Atlanta allows a stack to smoke 12 minutes in an hour. With the "Climax" smoke consumer the objectionable smoke is eliminated entirely, or, if the operator wished to save steam so that he is just complying with the law, there is a device on the "Climax" which by means of a water pot gradually fills with water taken from the steam. When full, the little water pot trips a trigger and the smoke preventer is cut off. This device can be regulated to suit the operator.

A large number of "Climax" smoke preventers are now in use in Boston, where the smoke ordinance is rigidly enforced. The "Climax" has been tried out in other cities and has given satisfaction in every instance.

All Our $2 Shower-Proof Foulards at 98c

Silk prices clipped to less than half. 'Tis a fair sample of how we slash prices in the End-of-the-Month Sale. The saving, moreover, is not on stale, worn-out silks, but on the staple, spick and span foulards. Every $2 foulard in stock included; not an inch reserved.

These foulards are all shower-proof. They are 42 inches wide—little is required for a dress. We have sold them freely at their price of $2 a yard. But color exhaustion and broken lines deplete the price—out they go to-morrow at 98c. Included are the staple black, browns, navy and Copenhagen blues and greens. Some in solid colors, some with the floral spaced patterns, some in stripes, some in dots—just a fair assortment of everything that has been "good" this season. Only 98c.

New Silks at Prices to Bid You Pause

Because these are the smart, new, fashionable silks that women will want throughout the summer, for traveling, for mountain and seashore and street wear we stress in big type the little prices at which they are to sell. Look here:

39c
For 59c to 85c Kimono Silks

10 pieces of fine kimono silk. Some solid colors, with borders; others in the floral, Jap or characteristic kimono patterns. About all colors. 22-inch.

$1 Foulards 55c
85c and $1 foulards in about 35 different patterns. All are proof against spottings. Full range of colors.

(Silks, Main Floor—Left Annex)

For $1.00 to $1.25 Silks

Here are soft, shimmery chiffon taffetas to make the smartest of street dresses and suits. Solid colors, and changeables in about every color on the card save black and white. 26-inch. Also handsome messalines in neat stripes and floral patterns—the identical styles that sell readily everywhere at $1 and $1.25. Only 49c.

59c
For Smart $1.50 Silks

These are the handsome Tussah crepe de chines—soft crinkly crepes now so much in favor. We have just eight pieces left in solid color tan, mustard, brown, Nell rose, Copenhagen, rose and taupe. Yard wide. Also at 59c are 24-inch silk serge suitings in solid colors and fancies and fancy silks in rather wide variety of patterns and colors.

95c
For $2.50 to $3.00 Silk Chiffons

Silk voiles and chiffons, loveliest fabrics of the foreign looms. Street and evening shades; some with deep border of charmeuse silk, some with silk stripes, some bestrewn with flowers. The silks such as these are fashionable the year around. 44 inches wide; very little is required for a dress. $2.50 and $3 qualities for 95c.

98c
For $1.50 to $3.00 Silks

Charming Dolly Madison silks now on sale in the best stores at $1.50 a yard. Neat stripes bestrewn with dainty sprays or flowers. Blue, grey, Copenhagen, tan. Also $3 Cloth of Gold silk at 98c. HEARST PAPERS FORCE NAVAL EFFICIENCY

Secretary Daniels to Win Recruits by Making Warships Training Schools.

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The Hearst papers, in advance of other American newspapers, exposed the fact that the American navy was not much more than half-manned.

The Hearst papers made the statement, later so emphatically confirmed, that not a battleship in the great Hudson River display of last October could have gone out to sea to fight without a shortage of from three to five officers and a shortage of from 150 to 300 men.

These newspapers developed the fact that few men were enlisting in the navy and gave the cause for this in the fact that our navy offered so few inducements and attractions for American youths to enlist in that branch of our country's service.

The Hearst papers are now able to give the first exclusive information that these unfavorable conditions are to be changed.

Information comes from the Navy Department that Secretary Daniels has caught the progressive movement urged so long in these newspapers and is going to make the American navy a more attractive and a more profitable place for the American youth who is willing to serve his country and does not desire altogether to forget himself.

Ships as Naval Schools.

The Secretary of the Navy plans that hereafter every battleship and war vessel shall be a naval school—an industrial school—a school of the sciences and incidentally of the arts. When the Secretary's plans are completed there will go out from Annapolis with every naval vessel a corps of trained instructors to teach the sailors and enlisted men. This corps of instructors will be reinforced by the educated officers of each ship.

A battleship will hereafter be no idle place even in peace, and the enlisted man who binds himself to three years in the service of his country's navy can emerge at the end of his service, if he has will and intelligence, with an educational equipment for a profession by which he can sustain himself in the world.

The three-year enlisted man of the navy who will avail himself of these new and admirable advantages can come out a skilled engineer, a navigator, a machinist or any one of a half-dozen skilled professions that point the way to success in life.

Lewis Nixon has said that Annapolis is the best engineering school in the country and its graduates as teachers ought to do great things for the American sailors in three diligent years.

More Frequent Cruises.

The Secretary plans more frequent cruises to foreign ports, so that the education of travel and observation may be added to a sailor's opportunities on shipboard.

And last, but not least, the new Secretary of the Navy expresses the intention with all his influence and authority to insist upon the recognition of the individuality and manhood of individual seamen. An American sailor is promised that hereafter he shall be regarded, not only as a fighting machine, but as a man and treated as one.

This last is in line with the recent movement so ably pressed in the navy by men like Captain Benson and Commander White and other vigorous and progressive officers of the service.

The result of this new and admirable policy will be to fill half-empty lists of the navy and to make it, not a place for young men to bury themselves for three years and come out unfit to make a living, but to be educated in mind, body and spirit by the finest of teachers, and come out in three years as all-round men, equipped in health and courage and manliness and with a practical profession in life.

School for Deserters.

Secretary Daniels further intends to reform the system of punishment for desertions by sending young deserters, first to prison and afterward to the place of reform, but to send each of them first to that notable school at Port Royal, S. C., where they will be built up in character and patriotism and an understanding of a citizen's and a soldier's duty, and if they are docile and receptive to reinstate them in the navy without a prison term.

These are wholesome reforms, and Secretary Daniels is to be congratulated upon the good sense he has manifested in adopting them.

FORTY-SIX MEMBERS ENROLL

First Day's Record in Big Player-Piano Club

THAT the interest in the gigantic Weatherholt Player-Piano Club is widespread was demonstrated yesterday when the membership books were opened. When the store closed for the night, 46 members had been enrolled. At this rate the 400 memberships will be taken before the time limit expires. I am not surprised at this record, for I knew the music-loving public would realize just how remarkable my club offer was. People are realizing that the day of the ordinary piano is rapidly drawing to a close, and that the day of the Player-Piano is at hand. And when I made it possible to secure a $650 Player-Piano for $488.50 on terms of $10.00 down and $2.50 per week, there was a rush to enroll in my great co-operative club.

The club membership is limited to 400 members. I will save each member $334.50. Because of the great purchasing power of the 400 club members, I can offer a magnificent $650 Player-Piano along with $173 worth of club features for $488.50, on terms of $10.00 down and $2.50 per week. In addition to this there is my Free Life Insurance Feature and the Music Exchange Privilege.

Here Are My Club Features:

1. Saving of $161.50
2. One year's trial (exchange privilege)
3. A ten-year guarantee with each piano
4. A Free Life Insurance Feature
5. Terms of payment $2.50 per week (monthly payments may be arranged)
6. A 25c rebate on all weekly payments made before due
7. No interest
8. A two-year conservatory course (regular price $80)
9. A free music exchange library
10. A selected bench to match player and 12 rolls of music

All accompany in writing the sale of every Club Player-Piano

Regular Price $650.00; Club Price $488.50

Club Terms: $10 Down, $2.50 Per Week

MY Free Music Exchange Library alone makes the Weatherholt Player-Piano Club attractive. This means that every club member may secure $10.50 worth of Player Music every day if desired. Each member secures free with the player twelve rolls of selected music worth $10.50. I have installed a great library of 5,000 rolls, and members may exchange their music as often as desirable. Many have told me that the cost of Player Music has prevented them from buying Player-Pianos in the past. My free library removes that objection. Sheet music is being replaced to-day just as the Player-Piano is superseding the ordinary piano. That the Player-Piano may make those who do not understand music as proficient as those who do, all my vocal Player Music has the words printed on the roll. Anybody can play. And anybody with a voice may sing. A vocal instructor is constantly before the one operating the Player-Piano. Every direction is given. The result is that the novice can render a song as well as the professional. I have devoted weeks of study to this great co-operative plan. I wanted to offer something which had never before been offered to lovers of music in the South. I know that I have done so.

Notice to All Owners of Player-Pianos

During our Player Club Membership Campaign, we will extend—without charge—our exchange privilege to any one purchasing 12 rolls of Player Music from us. This gives the purchaser free access to our 5,000-roll library.

I WANT everybody interested in good music to visit our store. I want you to hear some good music—anything you like, from the classics to the latest ragtime. Examine these Club Player-Pianos closely and see how easily you can play anything you like, and play as well as an expert pianist. If you CAN play on the piano, you have two instruments in one—a Piano and a Player-Piano. You may use the piano and those members of your family who can not play can produce music on the Player equal to yours.

MAINE UNVEILING PARADE PLANS PERFECTED

Four Regiments, With Sailors and Marines From Twelve Battleships, to March Friday.

NEW YORK, May 29.—Plans for the great naval and military parade, which will precede the unveiling and dedication of the National Maine Monument at the southwest entrance to Central Park, Fifty-ninth Street and Eighth Avenue, on Friday afternoon, are about completed.

The twelve dreadnoughts and battleships of the North Atlantic fleet, which will be represented by regiments of marines and seamen in the parade, are the Wyoming, Florida, North Dakota, Delaware, Virginia, New Hampshire, South Carolina, Kansas, Georgia, New Jersey and Rhode Island.

Lieutenant Commander G. L. Smith, U. S. N., the brigade commander, has issued the order for the mobilization of the marines and seamen. Police Commissioner Waldo is revising and completing the arrangements for holding the crowds in place along the line of march and at the scene of the dedication.

Many Bands in Line.

The marine regiment, which is to march directly behind the United States Army, will form in Forty-third Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues. This regiment will be headed by the combined bands of the Wyoming and Virginia. The First Seaman Regiment Band will be headed by the combined bands of the Florida, North Dakota and Delaware; the Second Seaman Regiment, by the combined bands of the New Hampshire, South Carolina and Kansas, and the Third Seaman Regiment, by the combined bands of the Georgia, New Jersey and Rhode Island. Regimental colors will be carried.

The fleet officers in the parade will wear blue service uniforms, with white caps, leggins and gloves. The marines will march in blue, with white caps, leggins, canteens and rifle belts; the seamen in blue, with white hats, leggins, canteens and rifle belts. All bands will wear full dress uniforms.

The seamen and marines from the Wyoming will land at two floats at the foot of West Eighty-first Street. They will march down Broadway to Forty-fourth Street and then east, to form with the First Seaman Regiment, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues.

Will March Crosstown.

The detachments from the Florida, North Dakota and Delaware will be landed at Pier 86, at the foot of West Forty-sixth Street, and march crosstown to Forty-fourth Street and Fifth Avenue.

The men from the New Hampshire, South Carolina and Kansas will also disembark at the foot of West Forty-sixth Street and form as the Second Seaman Regiment in Forty-fifth Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues.

Detachments from the Virginia, Georgia, New Jersey and Rhode Island will be landed at the foot of West Forty-fifth Street and march to Forty-sixth Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues. They will form the Third Seaman Regiment.

The regimental commanders will be: Marine Regiment, Major A. W. Catlin; First Seaman Regiment, Captain H. B. Wilson; Second Seaman Regiment, Captain G. A. Hoogerwerff; Third Seaman Regiment, Captain J. D. McDonald.

Brigade staff: Lieutenant Commander G. L. Smith, brigade adjutant; Lieutenant Commander E. C. Kalbfuz, brigade quartermaster; Lieutenant P. R. McCrary, brigade ordnance officer; Pay Inspector S. McGowan, brigade commissary; Surgeon W. C. Braisted, brigade surgeon; Lieutenant S. C. Hooper, brigade signal officer; Lieutenant R. P. Craft, aide; Lieutenant R. P. Emerick, aide.

Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels arrived to-day from Washington to take part to-morrow in the unveiling. To-day was given over to official calls between Secretary Daniels, Rear Admiral Badger, members of the Maine Monument Commission, Mayor Gaynor and others.

Beavers Again Asks For "Protected List"

Chief of Police James L. Beavers again called on Carl Hutcheson Thursday morning for the list of disorderly houses which Mr. Hutcheson referred to in a recent open letter as protected by police. Mr. Hutcheson is said to have told the chief the list was not completed.

Chief Beavers reminded Mr. Hutcheson that it was the third day since the letter was published in which he promised to have the "protection list" ready in three days.

Knife Penetrates Brain as He Falls

LEXINGTON, KY., May 29.—Chester Lacefield, 23, a wealthy farmer of Tyrone, Ky., while intoxicated attacked his wife and her brother, Raymond Carrier, with a knife.

Carrier knocked Lacefield down and as he fell the knife penetrated Lacefield's brain, killing him. Carrier was arrested.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"St. Elmo" at the Atlanta.

"St. Elmo" has made a hit through the excellence of its presentation at the Atlanta Theater this week. It will remain every night with another matinee on Saturday. The play has pleased as nothing else has in the past and is showing its popularity by attracting big crowds to the playhouse. Miss Long and Mr. Vall are very convincing in their parts and easily surpass their previous efforts in the play. "St. Elmo" was produced at the request of the majority of patrons and is proving its worth.

Excellent Bill at Forsyth.

Patrons of the cozy Forsyth Theater are pleased with the excellent bill of Keith vaudeville which the management is presenting this week. Maggie Cline, "the Irish Queen," is the headliner and has scored a pronounced hit. The Great Howard, the ventriloquist, is also a great favorite. Caesare Nesi, the singer, and Madden and Fitzpatrick, in a comedy sketch, have scored successfully. It is a bill of real variety.

Tabloid Bill Is Popular.

Tabloid musical comedy as presented at the Bijou this week has found great favor at the hands of patrons of that play house. The bill is Joseph E. Howard's "The District Leader," and the offering is given in splendid fashion. There are pretty girls, tuneful music and delightful dances. The bill next week will be "The College Girls."

PIANO CLUB HAS PROPITIOUS START

Forty-six Members Enroll First Day, With Indications That Record Would Be Broken.

That interest in the player piano club campaign, begun last Sunday by the Weatherholt Piano Company, is increasing was demonstrated when the membership books opened.

The first day's enrollment amounted to 46 members and there was every indication that this record would be broken Thursday. T. E. Weatherholt, president of the company, has received letters and inquiries from throughout the South, indicating that the club plan will prove a great success.

Mr. Weatherholt's plans provide for a co-operative club of 400 members, who, by reason of their enormous purchasing power, are enabled to get $650 player pianos for $488.50 each on terms of $10 down and $2.50 a week. In addition to this, Mr. Weatherholt has arranged for many other features, including free music exchange privilege in a library of 5,000 roles of music. Each member will receive twelve roles of music with a player piano and this music may be exchanged daily if desired.

PROGRESSIVE AIDS 2-WARSHIP PLAN

Representative Stephens, on the Naval Affairs Committee, Now Favors Stronger Fleet.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Representative Stephens, Progressive, of California, who has been assigned to the House Naval Affairs Committee, declared to-day he would vote for the construction of two battleships at the next session of Congress.

"I am in favor of a big navy," said Stephens, "and I believe in maintaining the navy in its present efficient status. If the navy officials decide they need two battleships next year, or even more, I shall be in sympathy with whatever they recommend."

Stephens favors the stationing of a battleship force on the Pacific Coast large enough for all emergencies.

Where Is the Woman Who Does Not "Love" a Hand-Embroidered Shirtwaist?

A Rare and Fine Opportunity to Own

Hand-Embroidered Shirtwaist Patterns

At a Very Small Part of Their Actual Worth

The Selling Begins at 9 o'Clock in the Embroidery Section

We wish every woman in Atlanta who does this sort of needlework herself could see these waist patterns! Could see the exquisite evenness and preciseness of every hand-made stitch, the intricate designs of florals and sprays, the wee little tucks and all. They would, every one, marvel that such work could be sold at these prices. They are all white and many of them are all but made, with embroidered cuffs and collars and backs, and with material for the whole waist. All one has to do is to cut the waist out, fit it and stitch it together.

Here are the reductions:

$15.00 to $25.00 Waist Patterns $7.98
(Only a few of these)

$ 6.50 to $10.00 Waist Patterns $5.98
$ 2.29 Waist Patterns $1.50
(These in Madeira Hand-Embroidery)

Twenty-three Waist Fronts at 75c

(These are slightly damaged—little imperfections in the stitching of tucks or the like, quickly remedied.)

Shadow Laces Half-Price

White, cream and ecru bands and edges, four to ten inches wide, dainty patterns for summer dresses.

They Were 35c to $3.50 a Yd.
They Are 17½c to $1.75 a Yd.

Valenciennes Flouncings 39c a Yd.

Those fine Valenciennes flouncings that are in great favor right now for dresses and for underwear. They are ten to eighteen inches wide. Patterns show fine floral sprays across surfaces. They were never intended for selling at 39c a yard; but we own them at a fortunate price!

Remnant Day in the Wash Goods

At Nine o'Clock Friday

These Remnant Sales of ours work splendid economies.

That is because the materials they bring are always seasonable and wanted kinds, and because we, having in mind only the cleaning up of stocks, mark each remnant at a price that will move it.

The remnant may be just the length and all that you want—we do not allow that, your viewpoint, to change ours. To us it is still a remnant and therefore must be out.

So read the list of materials that are in remnant lengths here to-morrow and you who have dresses, skirts, underwear and waists to make for yourself or children save—

T. R. KEEPS 'REAL GENTLEMAN'S' WINE CELLAR

Son of Colonel's Cousin, Ex-President's "Pal," So Testifies at Libel Suit Hearing.

MARQUETTE, MICH., May 29.—Testimony of Philip James Roosevelt, son of a cousin of the former President, that Colonel Roosevelt kept a "regular gentleman's wine cellar" at his home in Oyster Bay was the feature of this morning's session of the trial of Colonel Roosevelt's suit for $10,000 libel for charges made in an editorial by George W. Newett, editor of The Ishpeming Iron Ore, that Roosevelt "was drunk, nota infrequently."

The younger Roosevelt followed Charles Thompson, a New York newspaper man; Andrew Abele, former locomotive engineer of Ashtabula, Ohio, and A. Z. Blair, an attorney of Portsmouth, Ohio, all of whom bore witness to the former President's sobriety during trips when they accompanied him.

Calls Colonel Abstemious.

After stating he lived near the former President's home at Oyster Bay, ond that he was the colonel's daily companion when the latter was at Oyster Bay, Philip Roosevelt testified he never had seen the colonel drink other than at meals and then only white wine and occasionally a glass of champagne. He also declared that the limit of his indulgence on the last Presidential campaign was a spoonful of brandy in a glass of milk, and denied indignantly that he ever had seen the colonel drunk.

"Does Roosevelt keep wines and liquors in his home?" was the first question of Attorney Andrews for the defense.

"Yes," was the answer.

Q. A collection of liquors?—A. A regular gentleman's cellar.

Q. Scotch whisky?—A. I never saw it, but I supposed it was there.

Q. White wine?—A. Yes.

Q. Champagne?—A. Yes.

Q. Brandy?—A. I presume it was there.

Story Prepared in Advance.

Q. How long have you been a newspaper man?—A. Since March, 1913.

Q. Are you doing newspaper work here?—A. My pay is going on.

Q. Are you acting for your paper?—A. I am sending out stories.

Q. Did you write up and send out Colonel Roosevelt's testimony before it was given?—A. No.

Q. Was it written up before it was delivered?—A. Yes.

Q. And sent out by any person?—A. The Colonel prepared a statement embodying the substance of his testimony and I presume it was sent out.

Q. And it was printed in New York before the Colonel went on the stand?

On objection, the court refused to permit a reply. On redirect examination the witness said liquor was never pressed on guests at Roosevelt's home.

Court was adjourned until 2 o'clock after Andrews had testified he never saw Roosevelt drink spirituous liquors during the campaign in Cuba fifteen years ago.

Newett Ready to Testify.

George W. Newett, defendant in the suit, was prepared to take the stand to-day in his own defense to tell the sources of the information on which he based his charges of drunkenness and profanity.

A trip made by Newett to Florida, during which he met a number of prominent persons who are alleged to have spoken of Roosevelt's alleged over-indulgence in liquor, and similar statements made to him by persons in Michigan, will form the basis of his testimony.

Newett will also tell of various articles which he saw in newspapers and magazines which influenced him to write the editorial now in question.

The Ishpeming editor has not been well for some months, and as soon as the present case is ended he will go to a hospital for an operation.

The Colonel to-day declined an invitation to address the Marquette G. A. R. on Memorial Day.

TWO NEWS ITEMS

INDIVIDUAL TRUSTEE DISSIPATES ESTATE

Georgia newspapers the other day gave an account of the dissipation of an estate which left a young lady penniless. The father, who had a comfortable business in a Georgia city, died several years ago, leaving his only child, a daughter, an estate of $35,000. A man, a friend of the family, who was then considered honest and capable, was appointed trustee for the daughter's property. On coming of age she called upon him for an accounting and delivery of her inheritance and HE IMMEDIATELY DISAPPEARED. He is still among the "missing," and THE YOUNG LADY'S INHERITANCE IS GONE.

TRUST COMPANY OF GA. DOUBLES THIS ESTATE

The other news item, not heretofore published, relates to an Atlanta lady who died, leaving an only child, a son of ten years. SHE HAD WISELY MADE A WILL IN WHICH THE TRUST COMPANY OF GEORGIA was appointed EXECUTOR and GUARDIAN of the property of her son. From his inheritance, which was officially appraised at $16,500, the boy was supported comfortably and given a college education. When he reached his majority, less than a month ago, the TRUST COMPANY OF GEORGIA, his Guardian, turned over to him property appraised at $31,345, thus, with his maintenance, more than doubling the estate.

PARADE CLOSES REUNION OF VETERANS

Old Soldiers of the South March Along Chattanooga Streets Under Tattered Battle Flags.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., May 29. The twenty-third annual reunion of the Confederate Veterans closed today with the veterans' parade, in which the old soldiers of the South marched under the tattered battle flags of half a century ago and under the Stars and Stripes of a reunited country.

Military bands furnished martial music to which the tottering old soldiers, hundreds of them in gray uniforms, tramped through the downtown streets. Grandstands along Market and Broad Streets, the principal thoroughfares traversed, were filled with visitors and Chattanoogans who lustily cheered the old veterans.

General Bennett H. Young, mounted on a Kentucky thoroughbred charger, headed the parade. General J. P. Hickman, of Nashville, commander of the Tennessee Division, was chief marshal.

Exodus of Visitors Begins.

The exodus of visitors began immediately after the parade and throughout the afternoon and night special and regular trains will be leaving the depots every hour.

The reunion festivities will come to a formal close to-night when the Sons of Confederate Veterans give their annual ball to sponsors and maids of honor at Bennett H. Young pavilion.

Several hundred veterans will go to Dalton, Ga., to-morrow to attend commander of the Army of Northern Virginia Department; General George P. Harrison, of Alabama, commander of the Army of Tennessee Department, and General K. M. VanZandt, of Texas, commander of the Trans-Mississippi Department, were re-elected, and Jacksonville, Fla., was chosen for the 1914 reunion by the veterans at the principal business session of the reunion late yesterday afternoon. Next year's gathering will be the first reunion held in Florida. Jacksonville defeated Nashville, its nearest competitor, which has had two reunions, by a vote of almost 4 to 1. Houston, Texas, and Tulsa, Okla., received scattering votes. The selection was then made unanimous.

"Turkey Trot" and "Virginia Reel."

A parade by the Sons of Veterans yesterday afternoon and a ball for the veterans at Bennett H. Young Pavilion last night were features that attracted the interest of the thousands of sponsors, maids of honor and other visitors. At the ball the Virginia reel and quadrille of 50 years ago were danced between snatches of the present-day "turkey trot" and two-step.

EXHIBITS FEATURE HARDWARE MEET

"Georgia-Manufactured" Goods Shown at Convention of Dealers at Auditorium-Armory.

The Georgia Retail Hardware Merchants' Association got down to active business Thursday morning, when the third session of their convention opened at the Auditorium. Several important committee reports, comprising recommendations on the future policy of the association, are to be presented to the convention at Thursday's sessions.

Reports of the secretary, John L. Moore, of Madison, Ga., and several minor committees, already submitted, show the association to be in a prosperous condition and gaining steadily in membership and influence.

One of the attractive features of the convention is the hardware exhibits in the lobby of the Auditorium. The space where they are shown was crowded with sight-seers all day. Much of the hardware exhibited was manufactured in Georgia.

Wilmer L. Moore, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, welcomed the hardware men on behalf of commercial Atlanta at the opening session Wednesday, and Mayor James G. Woodward gave the official greetings of the city government. P. S. Twitty, of Dublin, one of the leading members of the association, responded to Mayor Woodward's address. Others who spoke were R. W. Hatcher, Milledgeville; G. W. Woodruff, Winder; C. B. Thomas, Griffin; J. R. Hall, Moultrie; W. G. Raines, Statesboro.

On Wednesday evening the visitors were the guests of Atlanta wholesale and retail hardware men at the Forsyth Theater.

The Social World

An event of interest to a wide circle of friends was the marriage of Miss Katherine Rawling and Mr. Philip Wakeman Wilcox Wednesday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Rawling, in Druid Hills.

The house was elaborately decorated. The couple stood before a bank of palms in the library, the altar of greenery being flanked on either side with clusters of white roses and valley lilies. Throughout the apartments smilax formed a mural decoration and the mantels were banked with small foliage plants, starred with tiny electric lights.

The only attendant was Mr. Sidney Wilcox, of New York, as best man. Bishop Leete, of the Methodist Church, officiated, and a limited number of guests were present.

The bride wore white brocade satin, with draperies of point lace, and bridal veil of point lace. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and valley lilies.

Mrs. Rawling, the bride's mother, wore gray charmeuse satin, with draperies of pale pink chiffon. Mrs. Sidney Wilcox, of New York, the bridegroom's mother, wore white Brussels lace, with touches of lavender. His aunt, Mrs. Fulford, of Canada, wore black chiffon cloth. Mrs. J. T. Wheeler, of New York, the bride's aunt, wore black lace.

A reception followed the ceremony and supper was served. The bride's table was decorated with pink roses, arranged in a tall basket, the handle twined with pink tulle and pink roses. Pink roses were banked on the buffet, serving table and mantel, and the sun parlor, where punch was served, was decorated with sweetpeas.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox left after the reception for the East, and on their return they will be at home at the Druid Hills residence of Mr. and Mrs. Rawling during the latter's absence in Europe. Later they will build on the adjoining lot, which was a wedding present.

The bride has many friends, both in Atlanta and in New York, her former home. Mr. Wilcox is a popular young man. He is secretary and treasurer of the Cleveland-Manning Piano Company.

Mother Goose Pageant.

Atlanta society is on the tiptoe of happy anticipation.

And why? Mother Goose and all her little geese are coming to town Saturday afternoon and will be ready to greet you on the lawn of the Clyde Kings, which by all odds is one of the most charming spots in the city for her Goose-ship and all the busy little people of her family.

And right here, be it said, any one who wishes to meet Mother Goose or any especial favorite of the days of his childhood, has only to take the car to Druid Hills, and, presto! he is there.

Mother Goose is coming as the special guest of the Joseph Habersham Chapter, D. A. R., of which Mrs. John Perdue is regent. Her visit will aid in building the chapter house the Joseph Habersham people are planning.

So enthusiastic is Atlanta society over the coming of Mother Goose and her wonderful family that little else has been talked of by the pleasure-loving set.

The committee work is in charge of members of the Joseph Habersham Chapter, with Mrs. William Lawson Peel, vice regent general of the National Daughters of the American Revolution, as chairman general.

The Mother Goose pageant will include more than 100 children of prominent families. There will be tableaux, parade, maypole dances, solo dances, and all sorts of entertainment.

Verses written by one of the enthusiastic members of the chapter, who has embodied in the poem the most interesting features of the coming event, read:

Mother Goose pageant! A great lawn fete!
'Twill be out of doors, so you pay at the gate!
A great, big show, and plenty of frills—
On Mrs. King's lawn—1010 Druid Hills.

There'll be the old woman who lived in a shoe,
Little Jack Horner and Little Boy Blue,
A lot of little ponies, and, sure, a dapple gray,
For boys and girls to ride upon "to ride a mile away."

Blue Beard with his many wives and Merry Peter Pan,
Little Orphan Annie, and the funny Soldier Man;
Goblins, dwarfs and fairies, dancing in the air,
Curly Locks and Humpty Dump, and Little Golden Hair,

The Beggar Man from Hamelin with the magic of his pipe,
The old maid in the garden with the nose the Black Birds swipe;
Margery Daw, a good see-saw, and saucy old King Cole;
Robin Hood, his merry men, Warriors and Knights of Old.

The Flowers and the Maidens that belong to Mistress Mary,
All so sweet and winning and none of them contrary.
Many are the prizes for the splendid baby show.
Babies there will be so fine you can almost watch them grow.

There'll be grab-bags and candy and cake and good ice cream,
And all the wonders of the world of which you only dream.
Your friends right straight from Fairyland will all be turned a-loose
To join the gorgeous pageant of good old Mother Goose.

Car Service to Mother Goose Pageant.

For the convenience of those who attend the Mother Goose pageant in Druid Hills Saturday afternoon, the following schedule of car service is announced:

College Park, West End, etc., parties will transfer at Park Street Church; Decatur parties will transfer at Peachtree and Edgewood Avenue; Marietta parties change at Walton and walk one block to Peachtree; North Atlanta parties transfer at Georgian Terrace. All cars run every ten minutes, and are marked "Ponce DeLeon to Druid Hills," and run directly in front of the lawns where the Mother Goose pageant will be held.

Miss Harrison Entertains.

Miss Lucy Harrison entertained at bridge Thursday afternoon for Miss Courtney Harrison, whose marriage to Mr. Loring Raoul will take place Monday. Pink sweetpeas formed the decorations in all apartments except the sun parlor, where daisies were used. The tea table was adorned with pink sweetpeas, arranged in a basket, the minor details being pink and white. Prizes were a hand-made piece of lingerie for the honor guest, a French gilt picture frame for top score, and silk hose for consolation.

Shower for Miss Andrews.

Mrs. Florence Harris entertained about seventy guests at a miscellaneous shower at her home in Inman Park Thursday afternoon for Miss Lina Andrews, a bride-elect. Packages were delivered to the bride-elect by parcel post, little Roy Martin acting as postman. Misses Allie Candler and Van DeVander served punch.

Mrs. Harris was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. William Candler, Mrs. D. W. Orr, Mrs. J. D. Ficklen, and the members of Miss Andrews' Sunday school class. The reception room was decorated in a profusion of daisies.

The house of KIMBALL has had an experience of over fifty years in the music industry, and artists, amateurs, and thousands of satisfied customers give abundant proof of the merit of the Kimball.

We are showing a large variety of styles in 88-note Player Pianos and Uprights. We have your choice in woods, such as Rosewood, Walnut, Circassian Walnut, Oak, Mission, Satin Mahogany and Mahogany. Prices ranging from $195 to $1,250.

Our one, absolutely one, price insures you, whether an experienced buyer or not, of securing the best instrument for the amount you wish to pay. It is not safe to buy a piano, or any other article of merchandise, from a dealer who has a sliding scale of prices, because you will never know when he has given you his lowest price. Then, too, your neighbor may buy the same merchandise for from $50 to $75 less money. A piano has but one value, and that should fix its price—the right price. Each and every instrument on our wareroom floor is tagged at the cash figure, and no one pays more or less.

It is not only safe, but pleasant, to deal with the world's largest manufacturers of Pianos, Player Pianos, Residence and Church Pipe Organs, through this Branch Store.

Cash, or convenient terms arranged.

A Duty to Look Well

By Virginia T. Van De Water.

A WOMAN was running a piece of pink ribbon into a dainty underwaist. Her small son, aged six, stood watching her. At last he spoke out his thought—

"Mama, why do you put ribbon in that thing?"

"To draw it up on the shoulders and fasten it with," was the smiling explanation.

"Wouldn't a piece of twine do as well?" queried the lad soberly.

The mother paused a moment, concealing the amusement she felt. Then she spoke gravely and frankly.

"No, dear," she said, "twine might fasten it, but it would not do as well, for it is not as pretty as ribbon."

A Real Duty.

A man might have considered that reply evidence of a feminine lack of logic. To the woman who thinks long it held a truth that it is well to consider. When, without sacrifice of principle or duty, one can make of a practical thing also a pretty thing, it is a mistake—almost a wrong—not to do it.

The small boy, as he grew older, learned to admire the dainty, delicate touches in his mother's apparel. "My mother always looks nice," he used to say when the matter of woman's appearance was discussed.

I know one woman who seems to think that she does God service in looking as plain as possible. She is scrupulously neat in appearance, but her mental attitude reminds one of the small boy's question: "Wouldn't a piece of twine do as well?" All the appointments of her home are plain and substantial, bought—like Mrs. Primrose's wedding dress—with a thought of durability rather than of beauty. She scorns fine china, and considers cut glass a useless folly of the rich. As to solid silver, why should one use it when plated ware carries the food to one's mouth just as effectually?

Of course, she has a scorn of all "modern notions," such as centerpieces, doilies and "place-plates." "Useless nuisances," she says sententiously. I often wonder how her children ar going to regard the home of their childhood when they go out into the world and see the dainty accessories of dress and furnishings which are unknown in their family and household. Fortunately this woman is the exception, not the rule, of her sex when she declares: "It is a mark of weakness to spend time on ornamentation and convention."

Don't Look Homely!

Were we all to adopt this principle through life how many hard and ugly corners there would be, corners that are now rounded or hidden!

To look as homely as one can is no more a virtue than to be as frankly disagreeable as one sometimes feels like being. Few of us can be handsome, but we need not elect to be positively ugly—if we can help it. In fact to mitigate the bad points in our personal appearance and to emphasize the good ones is an actual duty.

Perhaps some one asks to whom one owes this duty. The answer is plain. One owes it to the world at large, but, primarily, to one's own family. Surely it is the business of both man and woman to look as well as he and she can.

It is not always convenient to fuss over one's personal appearance when the mercury climbs up toward the hundred mark, but when one acquires the habit of invariably looking as well as is conformable with one's other duties, one will not be satisfied to wear a dark calico wrapper instead of a dainty and equally cool negligee—even for "home people" only.

The Mistakes of Jennie .:. By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

Tom found Jennie a little crumpled heap on the sofa.

Chapter 6.

AS THE MAN held Jennie tight in his arms, kissing her—she at last realized his intentions and could THEN see clearly the meaning of the dinner in the swell restaurant and the auto ride into the country. Jennie fought and struck the man in the face as hard as she could—whereupon the former "so polite and fatherly" MAN turned into the beast he was at heart—held her tight against the wall choking her. When he realized there was nothing to be gained that way he tried to treat the whole thing as a joke. Jennie watched her chance and did more THINKING in the next few seconds than she has ever taken the TROUBLE to do before. THE MAN told her the proprietor of the place was a friend of his and it would be of no use for her to make a scene, for she couldn't leave the place until he got good and ready for her to leave. Then he offered her fine dresses, diamonds, anything she wanted—so why not be a "good fellow."

THE MAN was between Jennie and the door and she saw it was useless to try and get out that way—the window opened out onto a porch and before the man could get around the table to catch her, she was through it and running up the road for her life. She ran and ran, dodging off the road into some woods. The branches tore her face and dress but she kept on till she could run no more. She sat down on an old log and listened but could hear no one following. There she sat in her little torn dress shaking and crying until she realized it was getting dark. She wandered on through the woods and came to a farm house where she found an old lady who, after hearing her story, loaned her enough money for the railroad fare home.

Tom came over to her house that evening after wondering all day where she could have gone and found Jennie a little crumpled heap on the front room sofa.

A Romance of Great Wealth as Played by Money Kings

"Oh! indeed! He is well off?" went on the stern inquisitor.

"He has some money, I suppose," said the girl dully. How long was this to continue?

"How much, do you suppose?" There was cutting sarcasm in the tone.

A little flicker of mischief lit Charlotte's eyes. Why, if this was a game after all, she would play it high—spiritedly—she would win. "As much as YOU have—I suppose!"

"You are sanguine, I think, Fraulein Charlotte. Is his family as much respected as OURS?" Solomon admired a WORTHY antagonist—even though that antagonist might be his daughter!

"All's Well."

"Just as much," said demure Charlotte. She dared now to raise her eyes—to look at Jacob—whose face was lit now by a smile of component parts of amusement and eagerness.

"A Jew?"

"Yes."

"Of course. Tell me; my child. Tell me. On this much I must insist." Charlotte hesitated in lovely confusion. "Tell me—my child, tell your father."

Blushing, trembling—radiant, and yet frightened now that her moment had come—Charlotte laid her little white hands on her father's strong shoulders, and turned him gently toward the window where Jacob stood. "There—he is there."

But now Jacob's hour had come—love must have its way. All in one pulsing moment, he had crossed the room, and Charlotte was caught in hungry arms. "Charlotte—my little Charlotte. Come." And Old Sol, beaming joyously through the rose arbor, was Love's only confidant, as the boy and girl fled to the great outdoors—mother Nature—with their precious joy.

Solomon laughed, "Magnificent! So I have worked and calculated and spent my money—for my nephew!"

Frau Gudula lived again in one brief moment her own love dream. "And those two have made their Lover's Lane out of their Grannie's old Jew's Alley! Yes, it is magnificent!"

From under the table the old Frau drew a battered little low stool. She smiled—but there was the pathos of the very old—whose race is nearly run in her gentle tone. "Come and sit here, Solomon, my son. Sit here as you used to in the dear long ago when you were a child—and your dear father was with me—instead of calling me from far away. What does it matter, my son, if they are happy? Not in your way, perhaps, but in hers your little Charlotte is happy—our little Jacob and Charlotte are happy. Happy, my son. All our money could not buy a better thing than that. Cannot YOU be content?"

Solomon looked out beyond the open door—out on the rose-hung terrace where young love had come at last into its own. Perhaps it was his mother's gentle tones, perhaps it was his daughter's glorified face, perhaps it was the memory of Charlotte's mother—the wife who had been his only love—three generations of loving women seeking the way to Solomon's heart, and Solomon's heart knew youth and love again.

"Yes, mother—dear, I am content." And in the Garden of Cupid at Neustadt Castle, and in the rose arbor of Jew's Lane, there was peace—for in the hearts of the royal cousins of Taunus, and in the home of the Five Frankforters, love had come into his kingdom.

THE END.

Unexpected Result.

Here is an emigration story told at a meeting recently. In a village was a youth who had got himself into such a variety of scrapes that his people thought it would be better to dispatch him to Canada, so as to get him away from old and doubtful associations. He agreed to go, provided those interested in his departure secured him some testimonials. Half a dozen were got for him. They sang his praises in unrestrained terms, spoke of his geniality, of his good address and exceptional capability, and all the other virtues that few men have, but many get the credit for.

When the young man read the testimonials he turned to his father and exclaimed:

"Well, I'm hanged! I had no idea people thought so much of me. And now I know how much they like me I'm blowed if I'll go away at all."

"D-darling, d-do you l-love me?" she gasped.

"Love you?" said he, as he got a tighter grip; "love you? Why, precious one, madly as I hug you now, the fervor of my affection almost makes me long to be an octopus with eight arms."

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS.

Gordon Kelly, a young North Georgia mountaineer, comes to Atlanta to get a place with Billy Smith's Crackers. It is raining when he reaches Ponce DeLeon and he is nearly run over by an auto, in which are two persons—a man and a young girl. The driver of the car is an arrogant fellow. The girl makes him stop the machine. She gets out and inquires if Kelly is injured. She apologizes for her companion's brusque manner. Kelly sees Manager Smith and tells him he has never played a game of ball. Smith consents to give Kelly a trial. The girl in the auto is Mildred Deery, daughter of Galen Deery, a crafty and wealthy speculator in timber lands. Her companion is Forrest Cain, a rich young man about town. Kelly owns timber land that Deery would like to possess. Kelly is invited to the Deery home, where he is introduced to Mildred. Cain hears Mildred order an auto to take her guest to his hotel. He takes the driver's place and carries Kelly out into the woods. Kelly thrashes Cain. Manager Smith tells the newspapers about his new find and the reporters print all sorts of "joshing" stories about Kelly.

Now go on with the story.

"Looks like the real thing," acknowledged the veteran backstop.

From that time on Long Tom didn't give Kelly an easy fly to catch. He purposely batted the ball so that if the recruit got to it at all it would be at least a hard catch. The result was one of the most wonderful exhibitions of ground covering by an outfielder ever seen on a ball field. Finally Smith called a halt by declaring morning parctice at an end.

The players went at once to the clubhouse to take off their uniforms, stand under a shower bath and dress themselves for the street. The clubhouse became at once a very lively place. Each player was assigned a locker for uniforms, clothes and personal belongings. In front of these lockers were short benches, placed there for the use of the players while dressing or undressing.

It so happened that Long Tom Morrissey and Gordon Kelly had adjoining lockers and therefore sat side by side as they started to undress. The other players were busy with their own affairs and did not notice the other two until suddenly they heard Kelly cry:

"You can't call me that, Morrissey."

All hands turned in the direction of the voice just in time to see Long Tom draw back and slap Kelly in standing up. The two men were now staning up. Their shoes were off and they were stripped to the waist. The next instant there was a furious mixup. Benches were overturned as the tall, gaunt veteran swayed in the embrace of the tall, lithe youngster.

It was all over in half a minute. At the end of that time Morrisey lay, an inert mass, in a corner of the clubhouse, where he had fallen with a loud crash. Ball players do not interfere with clubhouse fights. Even a manager will not interfere. If there are grudges to be settled, it is best to have them settled and be done with them. That is the philosophy of the clubhouse. Players see to it that there is fair play. That is all.

"Call It Square."

No one knew what passed between the two men that led up to the encounter. After the brief battle, Kelly replaced his overturned bench as though nothing had happened, and quickly removing the rest of his clothing stepped under the shower in an adjoining room. The other players went to the assistance of Long Tom, who showed signs of life about this time. They raised the veteran to his feet. Morrissey blinked for awhile and then a grin bespread his features. His left cheek was cut and bleeding.

"The kid is all right," he exclaimed heartily. "My nerve was better than my judgment, that's all."

He, too quickly pulled off his clothes and stepping out of the room, turned on the shower next the one where Kelly was standing. With the water pouring down his body in streams he reached out his hand to the young man.

"My fault, kid. I apologize. Call it square?"

Gordon Kelly grasped the outstretched hand.

"Certainly I will," he said, with a rare smile.

Kelly dressed himself rapidly and was the first to leave the clubhouse. The others followed singly and in pairs. Long Tom Morrissey and Bill Smith were the last to go.

"Did that guy tell you he never played a game of ball?" demanded the veteran backstop of his manager, as he slipped the key of his locker in his pocket.

"That's what he said" replied Smith.

"And never played a game of ball?"

"That's what he said."

"Billy, he's kiddin' you. Why, he even fights like a ball player," declared Long Tom, with a grin. He started to leave the clubhouse when his manager called him back.

"Want to change your locker?" asked Smith.

"Me? What for?" demanded Morrissey in surprise.

"You're right next to the kid and I thought on account of—"

"That's where I want to be; right next to the kid," Long Tom broke in. "He's my pal, Billy."

CHAPTER XII.

AS Gordon Kelly hurried out of the clubhouse he asked himself this question: "Is the game worth the candle?" and on his way down town he had a chance to study the question and answer it to his own satisfaction.

Within the past few hours he had, first, been more or less ridiculed in the newspapers and, second, he had engaged in a clubhouse fight with another ball player. That, he figured, was a pretty strenuous way for a novice like himself to begin a baseball career. Would every day have its bad features as this day had? Would it not be best for him to quit the game right now? How about going to Manager Smith and thanking him for his kindness, but telling him at the same time he had decided to call it all off.

Greeted by Mildred.

Ruminating further on the subject he came to the conclusion that the newspapers were right. The reporters were perfectly justified in refusing to laud him to the skies before he had demonstrated his ability. There was nothing really objectionable in what they had said about him. He confessed to himself that what they had published was largely true and they had written their articles in a humorous vein which was well within their rights under the circumstances. No, he had no fault to find with the newspapers.

But how about that clubhouse fight? Well, that was a thing of the past. Long Tom had apologized, he had accepted the apology and he believed they would be friends from now on. Then why quit? Wouldn't that make him more ridiculous than ever? Besides he didn't like the sound of the word. No, he wouldn't quit. He would stick it out—do the best he could and trust to luck and Providence.

Glancing out of the car window at this stage of his meditations, Kelly beheld Miss Deery seated at the wheel of an automobile of which she was the sole occupant. There was a temporary blockade and Kelly seized the opportunity to jump off the street car and hurry around to where Miss Deery's machine was packed in with several others, waiting for the jam to clear itself. He raised his hat.

"How do you do?" smiled Mildred pleasantly. "Jump in and I'll drive you home; or, better still, come to my house and have luncheon with me."

"Is that where you are headed for?" inquired Gordon, stepping into the car and seating himself beside the young woman.

"I don't seem to be headed for anywhere in this blockade. Ah, here we are," and the car moved slowly forward. "Well, what is your lordship's pleasure?"

"You are very kind, but before giving an answer I have a counter proposition to make."

The nature of which is."

"Judge Barbee kindly sent me a card to his club and he wrote me there was a ladies' dining room there. The card is only good for two weeks and I would like to make use of it. Won't you take lunch with me there?"

"That would be simply fine. But we'll have to go home anyway, because I have to prink up a little bit," said Mildred, with an arch look.

"I think you are very charming as you are," remarked Gordon.

Mildrel laughed gaily.

"Mr. Kelly, you told me you lived all your life in the mountains and have only been in Atlanta a week. You are certainly learning fast. Who's your teacher?"

"You are the only girl I know in Atlanta, Miss Deery."

"As you know how to say nice things I'll take that as a compliment."

They were soon at the Deery residence, and leaving him in the big, comfortable living room to amuse himself Mildred ran upstairs. Contrary to the assertions of humorists, she was back again inside of ten minutes, with a complete change of costume, and if she was charming before, she was bewitching now. Gordon offered to drive the car, and with the smiling comment that he seemed to have many accomplishments for a mountaineer, Mildred arranged herself beside him. Ten minutes later they were at the club and seated at a table. When the waiter had taken their order, Gordon asked, seriously:

"Have you ever seen a game of baseball, Miss Deery.?"

"Of course I have. I've seen Georgia and Tech play half a dozen times. And I saw Harvard and Yale play on the Polo Grounds, New York, too."

"Which side won?"

"I've forgotten. I went with a party of friends, some of whom wanted Yale to win and the others wanted Harvard to win. I got all mixed up in the excitement."

"Did you ever see a professional game of baseball here in Atlanta, at Ponce DeLeon Park?

"No, I never did. Why this cross-examination, Mr. Kelly?"

"I'm trying to find out your likes and dislikes, in order to avoid the dislikes."

"That's very nice of you, I rather like baseball: I'll say that."

The talk went on. Gordon Kelly was becoming very much interested in Mildred Deery; to such an extent that he was anxious to learn what her opinions were in regard to professional ball players. Yet he was afraid to ask the direct question. He beat around the bush for a while and then changed the subject, without getting the information he desired and without suspecting why he asked the questions.

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the first nine installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read this tenth installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

FREE, NEXT SUNDAY.

The American Sunday Monthly Magazine, containing the first chapters of Jack London's new story, is GIVEN FREE with every copy of the next Sunday American.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

FOR HER SAKE, DO.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am twenty, and deeply in love with a girl of eighteen. She told me she loved me, and I love her, too, but some way I doubt her love. The other evening she attended a dance with a friend of mine after I asked her not to go. E. S. B.

Your attitude is one of fault-finding, and I not sure that the giving of your love to a woman means her happiness.

She says she loves you. Be grateful for that much and don't attempt to control her as if she were a child. If you can not be that generous, it will be a kindness to her to transfer your affections.

DON'T GO TO EXTREMES.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am a girl 20 years old. A few young men would like to keep steady company with me but I always refuse because I do not seem to care for them much. Do you think I should accept just the same? I am so lonesome because I am always home, while the other girls have a good time.
LONESOME.

Unless these men are objectionable to you, you must accept an occasional invitation, for it may be the means of meeting the man you will some day love. Don't get into the habit of isolation and consequent lonesomeness. It will grow on you.

FORGET YOURSELF.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am a young man of twenty and have been keeping company with a young lady for the past six months. I love this young lady very much and would be thankful for your advice on how to win her. R. M.

Forget yourself in an effort to make her happy. Be considerate, agreeable, persistent; let her know you love her and are willing to devote your life to her.

Household Suggestions

Moths can be kept away from furs or clothes by putting a piece of linen damped in turpentine in drawers or wardrobes. This should be renewed once or twice during the year. Moths will never attack carpets and curtains which have been well sprinkled with salt.

A small box of brickdust with a cork in it kept at the side of the sink will be found most useful for taking stains from knives, cups and all kinds of china and enamel ware. If at hand at washing-up time it saves many an after cleaning.

A good cleaning paste for enameled baths, zinc pails, etc., is made of equal parts of shaved yellow soap, whiting and common soda, dissolved over the fire in the least possible amount of water required to keep it from burning.

To hang pictures on a plastered wall try dipping the nail into cold water before driving it into the wall. It will bite into the plaster if this is done, and will hold a heavy weight without loosening.

Silencing the Philosopher.

"Yes," remarked the philosopher, "deafness is indeed a terrible affliction. But in such cases nature, you know, always provides some compensation. At any rate, if a man is deficient in one sense, he usually has another abnormally developed. Now, I once knew a poor blind fellow whose sense of touch was positively uncanny. Really, it served him almost as well as eyes do a normal man."

"Sure," said the genial Irishman, who hitherto had taken no part in the discussion, "an' I've noticed that, too! There's a friend of mine, he's lame, poor chap, but he can get about almost as easily as you or I. True, one of his legs is short, but the other makes up for it by being three inches longer!"

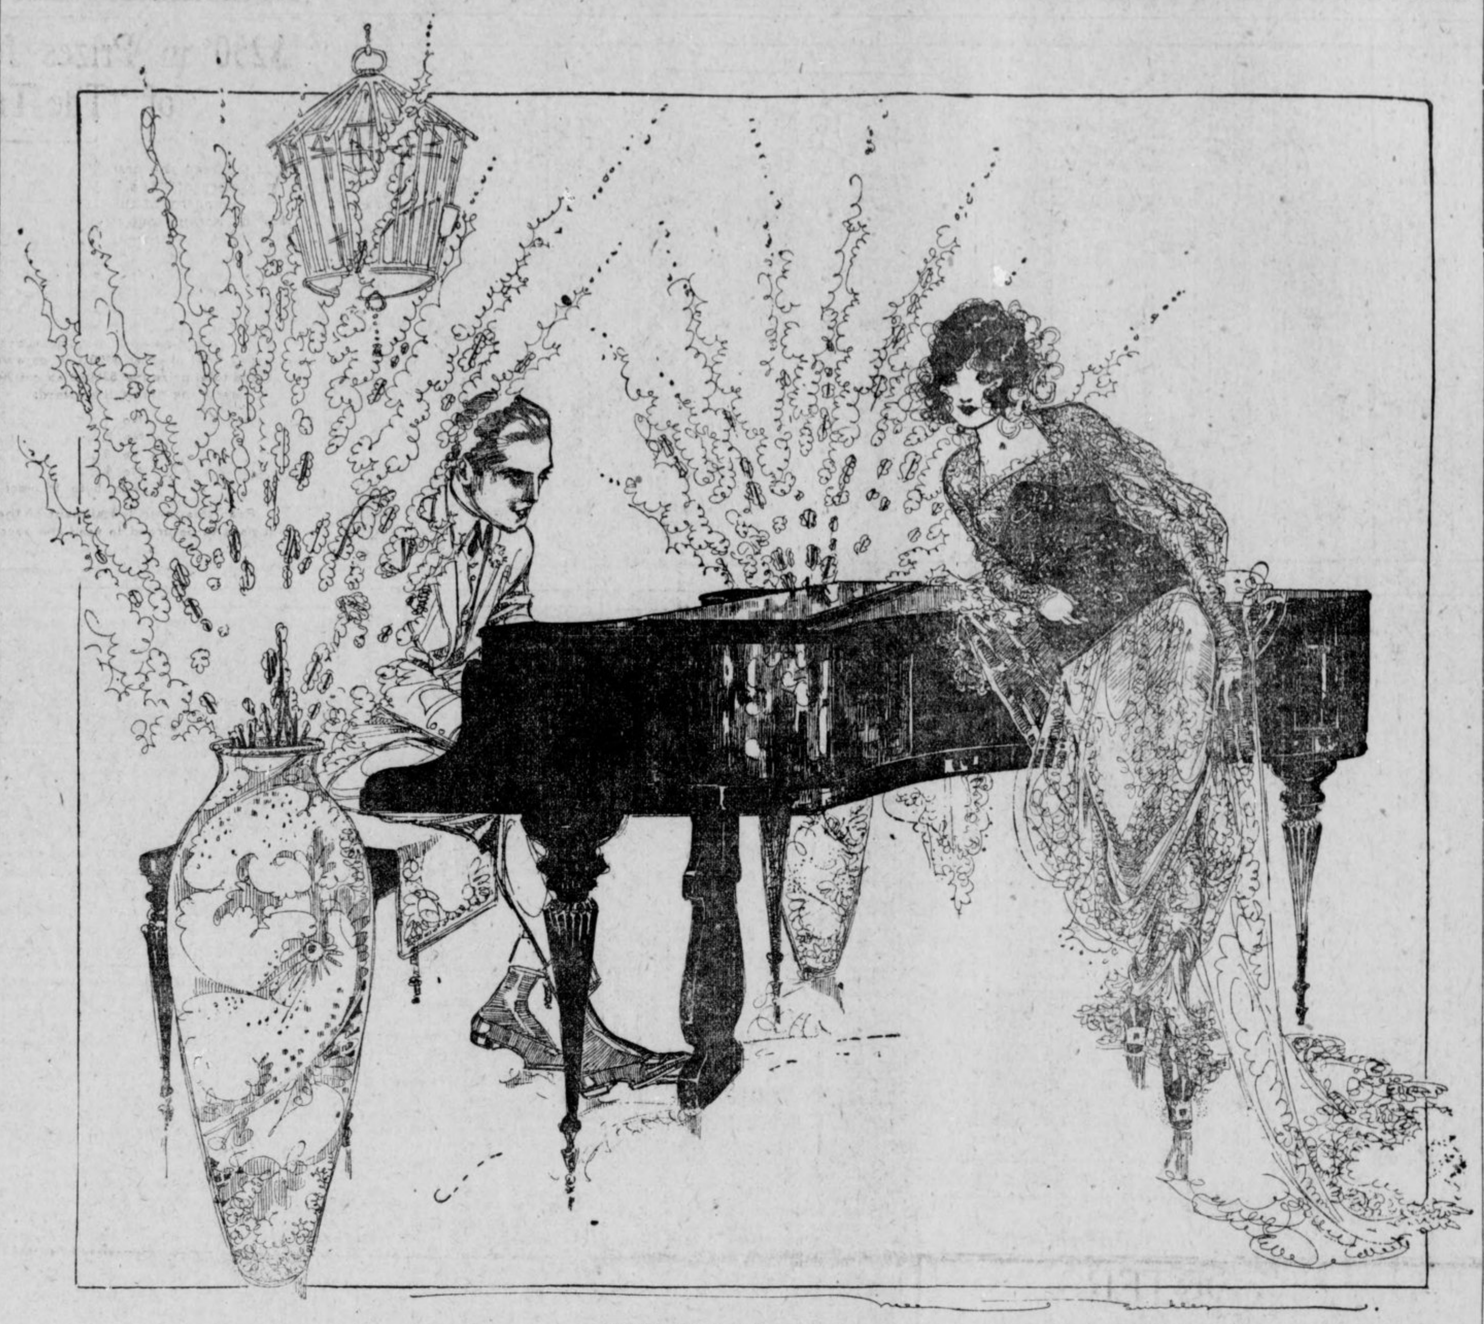
A Popular Song

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

BY NELL BRINKLEY



Nell Brinkley Says

THEY call it "I LOVE YOU." The Kings of Babylon and the slaves by the river sang it with equal fervor. In faeryland they know it. Adam brought it home to Eve and sang it tirelessly. On the plaintive "ukulele" of soft-aired Hawaii they have played it since the isles were born. Steel and iron clad men of the rough days of chivalry caroled it to the maids they met from the broad backs of their dray horses. Cleopatra whined it in her honey-sweet voice to dull-witted Antony. In the backwoods of Tennessee they know it. In the gray, melancholy uplands of wild Thibet rough-haired youths whisper it to bead-strung slant eyed girls. In the hidden corner of the music room, screened in spikes of fruit blossoms, a smart young chap hums it to a girl who never twisted up her own hair in her life, and out in the country, in an orchard, on the top rail of a gray old worm fence, a boy in a blue "jumper" chants it to a girl in a pink sunbonnet shading her sun-browned cheeks. Oh, it's a popular song—everybody knows it and everybody always did know it.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"I guess we can find a way to have the marriage annulled, or whatever they do to marriages that don't take."

The brutal assurance of the man in thus referring to things that were sacred moved Dick to wrath.

"Don't you interfere," he said. His words were spoken softly but tensely.

Nevertheless, Burke held to the topic, but an indefinable change in his manner rendered it less offensive to the young man.

"Interfere! Huh!" he ejaculated, grinning broadly. "Why, that's what I'm paid to do. Listen to me, son. The minute you begin mixing up with crooks, you ain't in a position to give orders to any one. The crooks have got no rights in the eyes of the police. Just remember that."

He Was Not Listening.

The Inspector spoke the simple truth as he knew it from years of experience. The theory of the law is that a presumption of innocence exists until the accused is proven guilty. But the police are out of sympathy with such finical methods. With them, the crook is presumed guilty at the outset of whatever may be charged against him. If need be, there will be proof a-plenty against him—of the sort that the underworld knows to its sorrow.

But Dick was not listening. His thoughts were again wholly with the woman he loved, who, as the Inspector declared, had fled from him.

"Where's she gone in Chicago?"

Burke answered in his usual gruff fashion, but with a note of kindliness that was not without its effect on Dick.

"I'm no mind reader," he said. "But she's a swell little girl, all right. I've got to hand it to her for that. So, she'll probably stop at the Blackstone—that is, until the Chicago police are tipped off that she is in town."

Of a sudden, the face of the young man took on a totally different expression. Where before had been anger, now was a vivid eagerness. He went close to the Inspector, and spoke with intense seriousness.

"Burke," he said, pleadingly, "give me a chance. I'll leave for Chicago in the morning. Give me twenty-four hours' start before you begin hounding her."

The Inspector regarded the speaker searchingly. His heavy face was drawn in an expression of apparent doubt. Abruptly, then, he smiled acquiescence.

"Seems reasonable," he admitted.

But the father strode to his son.

"No, no, Dick," he cried. "You shall not go. You shall not go."

Burke, however, shook his head in remonstrance against Gilder's plea. His huge voice came booming, weightily impressive.

"Why not?" he questioned. "It's a fair gamble. And, besides, I like the boy's nerve."

Dick seized on the admission eagerly. "And you'll agree?" he cried.

"Yes, I'll agree," the Inspector answered.

"Thank you," Dick said quietly.

But the father was not content. On the contrary, he went toward the two hurriedly, with a gesture of reproval.

"You shall not go, Dick," he declared, impetuously.

The Inspector shot a word of warning to Gilder in an aside that Dick could not hear.

"Keep still," he replied. "It's all right."

Dick went on speaking with a seriousness suited to the magnitude of his interests.

"You give me your word, Inspector," he said, "that you won't notify the police in Chicago until I've been there twenty-four hours?"

"I Don't Like It."

"You're on," Burke replied genially. "They won't get a whisper out of me until the time is up." He swung about to face the father, and there was a complete change in his manner. "Now, then, Mr. Gilder," he said briskly, "I want to talk to you about another little matter——"

Dick caught the suggestion, and interrupted quickly.

"Then I'll go." He smiled rather wanly at his father. "You know, Dad, I'm sorry, but I've got to do what I think is the right thing."

Burke helped to save the situation from the growing tenseness.

"Sure," he cried heartily; "sure you have! That's the best any of us can do." He watched keenly as the young man went out of the room. It was not until the door closed after Dick that he spoke. Then he dropped to a seat on the couch, and proceeded to make his confidence to the magnate.

"He'll go to Chicago in the morning, you think, don't you?"

"Certainly," Gilder answered. "But I don't like it."

Burke slapped his leg with an enthusiasm that might have broken a weaker member.

"Best thing that could have happened!" he vociferated. And then, as Gilder regarded him in astonishment, he added, chuckling: "You see, he won't find her there."

"Why do you think that?" Gilder demanded, greatly puzzled.

Burke permitted himself the luxury of laughing appreciatively a moment more before making his explanation. Then he said quietly:

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THARE was two ladies up to the house last nite. Both of them has daughters wich is jest going to git married & that maiks them feel kind of love sick themselfs, I guess, beekaus that is all that thay did all the time thay was to the house, talk about love. Pa dident like it a bit, beekaus both of the ladies was oalder than he is, & I have offen herd Pa say that wimmen shud talk about other topicks than love wen thay git middel aged, topicks like church work or how much life insurance thare husbands is going to leave them when thay die.

One of the ladies was naimed Missus Raymond & the other was Missus Belcher. Missus Raymond sed to Pa:

"Don't Cry," Said Ma.

I was jest telling your wife beefoar you caim in the room how sweet & innocent & gurlish my littel daughter looked to-day wen she was looking oaver sum pritty material for her trousseo. The deer littel cherup seemed so charming and confused and bewil-deringly pretty that I almost envied the man that is going to taik her away from me, sed Missus Raymond. Then she beegan to cry.

I doant think I wud cry if I was you, deerest, Ma sed to her. Do calm yurself & talk cumfurt in thinking about the pritty hoam that her husband is going to maik for her. Maybe you will be thare a grate deel of the time. Won't that be nice & cumfurtable? Ma sed to her.

It will be pretty tuff corn beef for her husband, sed Pa, the yung lady's husband, I meen. Wife, sed Pa, I suppoas you reemember the time yure loving mother caim here all the way from Wisconsin & started rite in trying to be the managing editor of our littel hoam. Of course, you reemember it, sed Pa. Will you evver fergit, sed Pa, she look of pained surprise that caim into her eyes wen I explained to her, as gently as I cud, that she dident have anything in the world to say about the management of my domestick affairs? If my memory dosent fail me, Pa sed, & I do not think it does, she stayed only three days insted of all summer.

You acted like a perfect cave man all the time she was here, I remember that, sed Ma. No wonder my poor mother seldum menshuns you in her letters.

But as I was saying about my daughter and Missus Raymond, I cud-dent help thinking as I sat there & saw her, a dainty bud with youth's fresh bloom on her cheeks, that no man in this wurld was good enuff to be the husband of so divine a creechur. Of course the man she is going to marry is a splendid yung man & is the vice president of a big bank. But eeven if he were the president of the united Staits, sed Missus Raymond, he wuddent be good enuff for my daughter. No man is good enuff for a woman.

Looks for Gray Hairs.

They are good enuff for a woman around pay day, sed Pa. I have always noticed that when it gits neer the first of the month my wife beegins looking in my head for gray hairs & calling me her deer old boy. & the morning of pay day, Pa sed, she always follows me to the door and kisses me aggenn and aggenn, with the luv life shining in her eyes, & says Be sure & come rite hoam after you git yure pay to-day, won't you, darling.

I never do any such thing sed Ma, & I agree with Missus Raymond that her daughter or any sweet, good gurl is too good for a man.

Oh, my daughter, sed Missus Raymond, can't let her go, I jest can't, & my daughter, too, sed Missus Belcher, it seems as if sum monster of the sea was coming neerer & neerer to drag my daughter from her mother's arms. Then they both beegan to cry & Pa sneeked out of the room & went in the library ware the side board is.

The Bashful Boy

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"WHAT I would like to ask," writes Rebecca, "is why it is better for a girl to associate with a bashful boy. On several occasions I have noticed that you state that a girl should honor such a young man, but you have never stated why."

The qualities in a bashful boy which make him a welcome suitor are more of a negative nature than of a positive. It is not that which he does, so much as that which he does not do. His sins are of omission and they are small compared with the sins of commission of his bolder brother.

The bashful boy doesn't flirt. With a tongue that halts and stammers, and a tell-tale color that is quicker than the blush of a young girl to proclaim his dishonesty did he attempt to be dishonest, he is not an adept at hypocrisy or concealment.

He is not a dandy. Neither is he a lady's man, and my dear Rebecca, the presidents of banks and railroads, the powers in commercial life, the most profound thinkers and the men of letters the world honors, were never ladies' men.

His Hands.

He does not know what to do with his hands when out in society, but his employer will tell you he knows good use for them when at work.

Afraid of girls, he is forced to seek companionship in books and boys. The fear of girls gives him a respect for them which is wholesome; the companionship of boys gives him the outdoor exercise every young man needs.

He needs this tiring of every muscle, not alone for the results that are physical, but for moral returns. You are not too young, my dear, to know that the wolf that has been racing furiously up and down hill all day feels at night only the cry of tired limbs and aching muscles begging for rest. He is not the wolf that goes seeking an opening to break into the sheepfold.

If a bashful boy loves a girl it is with a sense of humility and his own unworthiness. He knows that he is the one who will be honored if his love is returned; his bolder brother has a faint suspicion, which the homage of silly girls confirms, that it is the girl who should be on her knees.

A Safe Way.

During his calf days he does all his signing for love's sake at a distance, which mothers will agree is the only safe and sane way for young girls to be loved.

He is always a good listener—no woman was ever bored to death by the talking of a bashful man.

Saying little, he says little for which he or others have cause for regret. He is a safe depository for secrets, a good man in whom to have confidence. If he is not a girl's lover the next best thing that could happen her would be to have him for a brother or a friend.

His compliments are not practiced, and are therefore sincere. When it takes effort and stupendous courage to hand a modest little flower to a girl, it follows that he will never throw bouquets at the head of every woman he meets.

Best of all, Rebecca, the bashful boy is a home boy. He is unafraid when with his mother and finds in her companionship the delight less bashful boys seek from home.

He is "a good boy" in the sweet old-fashioned sense, a boy who has escaped contamination a few years later than it comes to boys more bold.

Get The Syrup Habit—
It's Good For You

Velva Syrup is more than a mere sweet. It's a fine, wholesome, healthful food. It's just what growing children need—and it's good for grown-ups, too. Earnest, careful scientists have long ago exploded the mossy idea that sweets are harmful—and they tell you that sweets are necessary. You'll find the syrup with the RED LABEL, fine. It has the smoothest of sugary flavor and rich color. It makes candies, fudge, cakes and cookies that just melt in one's mouth. It goes great with griddle cakes and it will make your good muffins, waffles and biscuits better. Try it and see if this isn't so. Ten cents and up, according to size. Velva in the green can, too, at your grocer's. Send for the book of Velva recipes. No charge.

VELVA

PENICK & FORD, Ltd.
New Orleans, La.

VELVA NUT ICE CREAM

3-4 cupful Red Velva Syrup, 2 cupfuls scalded milk, 1 tablespoonful flour, 1-4 cupful sugar, 1 egg, pinch of salt, 2 quarts cream, 1 cupful chopped English walnut meats, 1 teaspoonful almond extract, 1 teaspoonful rose extract.

Beat up the egg with the flour and sugar, and gradually add the milk. Cook for 20 minutes in a double boiler, stirring constantly. Cool and add the syrup, salt, nuts, cream and the extracts, and freeze. Serve in dainty dishes with a preserved cherry on top of each.

CRACKERS BEAT PELICANS BY SCORE 4-0

PONCE DE LEON BALL PARK, May 28.—The Crackers took the final game from the Pelicans here this afternoon, 4 to 0. The victory gives Bill Smith's crew two out of the three games played.

Paul Musser, on the slab for the Crackers, twirled a good game. He kept the few hits secured off his delivery well scattered.

Wilson was not much of a puzzle to the Crackers. They managed to bunch their hits and would have scored more runs had they been able to bunt on a couple of occasions.

THE GAME.

FIRST INNING.

Hendryx singled to center. Atz fanned. Hendryx pilfered second. Clancy fanned. On a passed ball Hendryx strolled to third. Breen popped to Smith. NO RUNS, ONE HIT.

Long out, Wilson to Snedecor. Welchonce flied to Hendryx. Alperman went out, Clancy to Snedecor. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

SECOND INNING.

Spencer fanned. Williams out, Smith to Agler. Snedecor walked. On a wild pitch Snedecor went to second. Adams fouled to Chapman. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

Bailey doubled past Snedecor. Wallie Smith made a regular Atlanta bunt—a pop out to Adams. Bisland struck out. Agler also fanned. NO RUNS, ONE HIT.

THIRD INNING.

Wilson walked. Hendryx grounded to Smith and Wilson was forced at second to Alperman. Hendryx was doubled at first on Whitey's relay to Agler. Atz singled to left. Clancy flied to Welchonce. NO RUNS, ONE HIT.

Chapman flied to Breen in deep right field. Musser was called out on strikes. Long out, Atz to Snedecor. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

FOURTH INNING.

Breen flied to Bailey. Spencer struck out. Williams walked. On a wild pitch Williams took third. Williams tried to steal home, but was an easy out, Musser to Chapman. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

Welchonce slipped one past Williams for two bases. Alperman bunted to Williams and was out to Snedecor and Welchonce went to third on the play. Bailey singled to left and Welchonce scored. Bailey stole second. Smith flied to Hendryx and Bailey took third. Bisland lined to Hendryx. ONE RUN, TWO HITS.

FIFTH INNING.

Snedecor out, Bisland to Agler. Adams flied to Welchonce. Wilson singled to left. Hendryx struck out. NO RUNS, ONE HIT.

Agler popped to Snedecor, who dropped it for an error. Chapman walked. Musser sacrificed, Williams to Snedecor. Long doubled to right and Agler and Chapman scored. Long was out trying to stretch the hit into a triple. Breen to Clancy to Williams. Welchonce doubled to left. Alperman flied to Breen. TWO RUNS, TWO HITS.

SIXTH INNING.

Atz walked. Clancy fanned. Breen flied to Welchonce. Spencer singled to right and Atz went to third. Williams flied to Smith. NO RUNS, ONE HIT.

Bailey fanned. Smith out, Clancy to Snedecor. Bisland singled to left. Agler bunted out, Williams to Snedecor. NO RUNS, ONE HIT.

SEVENTH INNING.

Snedecor grounded out to Agler. Adams also grounded out to Agler. Wilson singled to left. Hendryx grounded out to Agler. NO RUNS, ONE HIT.

Chapman fouled to Adams. Musser fanned. Long walked and stole second. Welchonce out, Atz to Snedecor. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

EIGHTH INNING.

Atz out, Alperman to Agler. Clancy walked. Breen hit into a double play, Musser to Bisland to Agler. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

Alperman popped to Atz. Bailey out, Clancy to Snedecor. Smith walked and stole second. Bisland singled to center and Smith tallied. Bisland went out trying to steal second, Adams to Atz. ONE RUN, ONE HIT.

NINTH INNING.

Spencer fanned. Williams walked. Snedecor struck out. Adams flied to Long. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

CITY LOSES IN CREMATORY SUIT

In a unanimous decision by the Supreme Court of Georgia, the city loses in its fight to uphold the legality of the $276,000 crematory contract and Atlanta faces a serious health problem.

The ruling declares the contract illegal on the ground that the moral obligation involved in the pledge of payment to the Destructor Company of New York is a debt. The constitution of the State expressly forbids the Council of one year binding the Council of another in a financial obligation.

The decision acts as an injunction, the city and the contractors being restrained from continuing operations on the crematory which is now under construction until two-thirds of the voters shall have approved of the project at a special election.

Mayor Woodward, who fought the contract from the beginning, scores a big victory, but Atlanta is confronted with a menacing problem in the disposal of its garbage during the summer months. The decision was written by Chief Justice Fish.

Hammerstein Quits London Opera Field

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 28.—Oscar Hammerstein's operatic connection with London was severed to-day with the sale of his interest in the London Opera House to E. A. V. Stanley, chairman of the syndicate which had leased the building.

The sale was made in the name of Arthur Hammerstein, a son of Oscar, and was consummated with 48 hours after the Hammersteins had paid a $240,000 mortgage on the opera house.

Trustees to Learn Of Mercer Friction

MACON, GA., May 28.—The trustees of Mercer University on Monday afternoon will receive a special committee's report of an investigation of alleged friction among President S. Y. President Jameson has declined the presidency of Ouachita College, at Arkadelphia, Ark.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 28.—A few days ago I discussed the different teams in the National League race in general. To-day I will return to the same subject, sizing up the Giants and Pirates. Both teams were off all over in the early part of the race.

The New York players displayed some of the worst fielding seen on any diamond since the late world's series. Nothing was sure to the Giants. The pitchers were also out of sorts, Tesreau failing to get moving and Marquard being out of condition from sickness. The Giants hopped into their fielding stride last week with a single bound, and the infield is moving like a string of firecrackers now. Instead of turning outs into base hits, as we were doing, the infielders are now cutting down base hits and converting them into outs, as several of the Pittsburg players will tell you if you get a chance to consult them. That helps.

Following this encouraging sign, both Tesreau and Marquard stepped out and pitched good baseball last week, Rube showing a very fine game against the Pirates when he got tangled up in a pitching battle with Camnitz, the one that went fourteen innings. His fast ball had the hop on it for the first time this season, and when he is getting the jump on his fast one he is one of the best southpaws in the business anywhere. Tesreau also stepped forth in the latter part of this same game and displayed his old speed and the break on his spitter which made him really the leading pitcher of the National League last season.

With these two men going at their best, the Giants are sure to get pitching. The only man on the staff not up to the top of his stride now is Al Demaree, the recruit who has shown such grand form so far this season. He strained his side recently, and will not be ready to work regularly again for about a week. But Tesreau can go to the box every other day if necessary, but it won't be necessary with Marquard and myself in shape to take our regular turns.

* * *

THE Giants have not hit up to anything like the pace they showed last season so far, but they should bat harder. Shafer, who has replaced Snodgrass in center field, is one of the most natural hitters I have ever seen, and it is impossible to get him to go after a bad ball. He has a wonderful eye and is a splendid judge of balls and strikes. His batting average does not show his true strength, because he reaches first base so often on passes. He is also lightning fast on the bases once he arrives, and will worry any pitcher badly.

Burns is capable of batting better than he is doing at present. He is still a little strange in the big league berth, but he is a good ball player.

Fletcher is batting hard, and Merkle and Murray have picked up within the last week. Meyers so far has not acquired his last season's punch.

The club will get batting, and then we should climb through the league like the gossip of a kiss through a boarding house.

* * *

PITTSBURG afrittered away ball games until it came to New York, when it took one of those sudden braces and battled us to a practical standstill. After leaving the Polo Grounds, the Pirates went over to Brooklyn and choked down the fond hopes of the Dodgers, when Dahlen had been led to expect something soft after the fine manner in which the Boston club cleaned up four straight on Clarke's crew. The Pirates have the pitching and the hitting, and will be in the contention for the championship.

* * *

BROOKLYN has started to fade, and I expect to see the team drop. Of course the club will not go down to the depths to which other Brooklyn teams have descended in years past, but it will be fighting to remain out of the second division before the last word is in.

* * *

THE St. Louis club is a big surprise, especially to the Giants, but it is going ahead of its normal speed now. It has not the staunchness to last. The team has two excellent pitchers, Harmon and Sallee, and Konetchy is a great ball player. So is Huggins. The rest of the team is nothing out of the ordinary, and a club must be out of the ordinary to win a pennant. Huggins' peppery personality has done a lot for the team. Sallee will do a lot more if he sticks in shape all season.

FODDER FOR FANS

Overall, of the Cubs, and Sallee, of the Cardinals, engaged in a pitchers' battle yesterday, which resulted in favor of the former.

* * *

The Athletics took a double-header in easy fashion from the Senators yesterday, winning the first 8 to 0 and the second 7 to 1. Eddie Plank, the veteran southpaw, pitched in the first and allowed the Senators only two hits.

* * *

Peckinpaugh, the former Nap utility infielder, secured in trade by the Yankees, will be given a regular position at shortstop. Peckinpaugh is regarded as a fast and brilliant fielder, but somewhat shy with the war club.

* * *

Johnny Evers, manager of the Cubs, openly accuses Pitcher Cannitz, of the Pirates, with deliberately hitting Cheney and Archer with pitched balls and attempting to hit Zimmerman. Evers intends taking his complaint to President Lynch.

* * *

Harry Lumley, once manager and star player with the Dodgers, has been released by Troy, N. Y., team. An injury to his throwing wrist perhaps will necessitate his retirement from baseball.

* * *

* * *

The Braves' second victory of the day was a clean-cut, deserved affair, but the first game was won on a fluke. In the ninth Sweeney hit to the outfield, and Connelly, rounding third, started for the plate. Burns would have thrown him out by nearly ten feet, but the ball, instead of bounding into Catcher Meyers' hand, struck Sweeney's discarded bat and bounded away, while Connelly scored the only run of the game.

* * *

Manager Stovall's triple in the seventh which scored a run, followed by Austin's single, scoring Stovall, were enough to gain a victory yesterday for the Browns over the Tigers.

* * *

C. Webb Murphy, owner of the Cubs, who recently forbade his players to converse with reporters, has another grievance against the newspapers. A short time back Murphy set out on the trail of "Rube" Scheur, a promising pitcher of the Superior, Wis., team, in the Northern League. The newspapers printed the fact and the Superior club owners at once boosted the price of Scheur so high that Murphy balked. Murphy now states the newspapers "queered my deal."

* * *

Dick Rudolph, the recruit from the Toronto team, in the International League, who pitched for the Braves Monday, holding the Giants at his mercy, acted as a relief pitcher again yesterday and once again the New Yorkers were unable to score on him.

CARDINALS WILL HOLD ON TO JIMMY SHECKARD

ST. LOUIS, May 28.—A yarn emanating from Cincinnati to the effect that Jimmy Sheckard would be released by the Cardinal club because his salary was too bulky was spiked yesterday by Manager Huggins. "I have no intention of releasing Sheckard," declared the Cardinal commander, "and I want to state that emphatically. Sheckard is a great ball player, and he was paid accordingly by the Chicago club. We took over his contract, but we're not kicking. Whether he will play regularly is a question. Our club really hasn't shaped itself as yet."

BURNS STOPS HOPPE.

OAKLAND, CAL., May 28.—Frankie Burns, the Oakland lightweight, knocked out Willie Hoppe, Ad Wolgast's protege, in the ninth round of their scheduled ten-round bout last night.

COIN GRABBERS CAUSE OF LUTE M'CARTY'S END

By Left Hook.

LUTHER M'CARTY, one of the most valuable instruments of the getting of money under false pretenses in the hands of men who don't like to work, was finally killed in the prize-ring, a place he should never have been allowed to enter. He is the fifty-eighth victim of prize-fighting since the brutality has been eliminated, and it has been used solely to inculcate these principles of manliness and fair play that is invaluable to the youth of our city.

According to the doctors who examined the fighter's body, he had organic heart trouble. According to Jim Corbett and other experts who saw him shortly before he went into the fight with Pelky at Calgary, he was not in good condition. You will be interested to know how it was possible that a man with a bad heart could reach a position in pugilism where even a few gulls and greedy men could call him a champion of anything and draw crowds of a size that would justify their offering him $5,000 to fight for them. This is how it was done and how he was killed:

Up until recent years prize-fighting, the actual fighting, has been possible only to pure brutes, strong-thewed, iron-hearted animals. All fights were either to a finish or for twenty-five or forty-five rounds. This condition made McCarty impossible. It was a survival of the most uncivilized. With the growth of the influence of the public schools this type of man began to disappear. Young men with intelligence boxed or exercised and went into a decent business for a living.

Finally only two of the old breed were left, in two negroes—Johnson and Langford. It is white men who pay to see fights and make pugilism possible, and they would not pay much to see the two negroes. Johnson and Langford had practically abolished heavyweight prize-fighting because there were no fighters fit to meet them.

This condition was bad for a number of men who had made a life work of capitalizing the degradation and blood lust of pugilism. They were threatened with the necessity of doing something useful or starving to death. They dug up the poor old ruin, Jeffries, and pitted him against Johnson, and followed with one or two valiant and unskillful youngsters, but the public wearied quickly of this sort of sport, and heavyweight fighting died.

It was up to these gentlemen to do something in a hurry. The Frawley bill was passed in New York, where the most money is, and this permitted ten-round fights. The ten-round limit is useful because with a little luck an invalid might go through with it and not die the same night. The boxing commission was created. Its business was, among other things, to see that it got enough revenue out of the prize-fighting game to pay its own salaries and expenses.

If Johnson and Langford were allowed to fight that would be practically impossible, so the only two real fighting men in the heavyweight division were barred. This let down the barriers with no real fighters to fear and everybody had a chance to make easy money. Inside of a year a horde of white hopes descended on New York.

They were big, unskilled, inept, clumsy, low-browed somnambulists who, for the most part, to do them justice, knew that they were not fighting men, but were willing to pose along, as there was money in it. The pace was slow; the fights were short, and one was as bad as another, so there was nothing to fear.

Shaky mitral valves and fat paunch didn't make any difference. In this atmosphere and out of this sort of material Luther McCarty was grown by hothouse methods into a white champion, so that he would draw just so many dollars to the box office. It is doubtful if he knew that his heart was weak. None of the men who were fattening on him would have told him. They could take a chance against the kind of men he was called upon to meet.

Had it been a day of real fighters he would never have gotten out of the preliminary class, and would soon have gone back to some decent work. And now the other incompetent (Pelky) is held for killing him, whereas the real authors of his death are the shrewd money getters who lied to him day after day and told him he could fight.

SOUTH ATLANTIC LEAGUE REVISES BALL SCHEDULE

SAVANNAH, GA., May 28.—A special meeting of the South Atlantic League magnates was held in Savannah yesterday for the purpose of making a number of revisions of the present playing schedule. These revisions are necessary because of the late entrance of Charleston into the circuit. Charleston is said to be suffering considerable inconvenience by reason of the present schedule.

Those in attendance on the meeting were President J. K. Pray, of the Albany club; President W. H. Walsh, of the Charleston club; Secretary Charles E. Walton, of the Columbus association; President A. W. Barrs, of the Jacksonville club; President M. J. Etherage, of the Macon club, and President George W. Armstrong, of the Savannah club.

GALLANT DEFEATS HOGAN.

BOSTON, May 28.—"One Round" Hogan, of California, who was substituted for K. O. Sweeney in the main bout at the Atlas A. A., was defeated in a ten-round bout with Johnny Gallant, of Boston, last night.

CHAPMAN HAS SIGNED.

Catcher Chapman, Bill Smith's new backstopper, will work for the local team to-day. He was signed last night and replaces Graham, who was released outright.

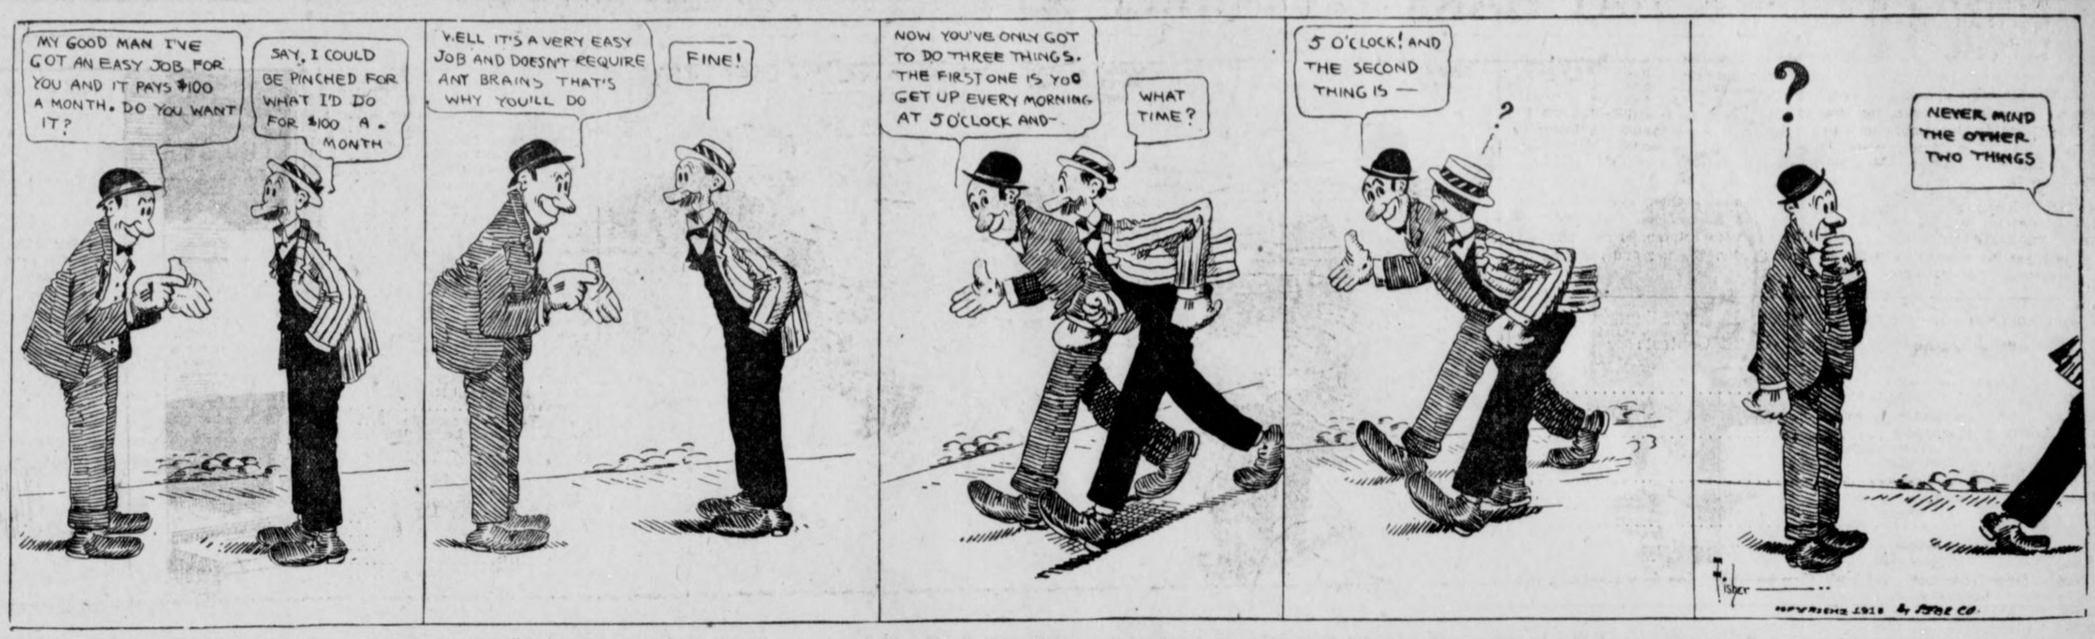
GEORGIAN SPORTS COVERED by EXPERTS

Get Up When I'm Going to Bed? No, Sir! — By "Bud" Fisher



100 MILES HOUR POSSIBLE AT MOTORDROME

That speeds of 100 miles an hour for short flashes will inevitably be reached on the new motordome, going up now at the old show grounds, is the belief of the motorcycle experts who are gathered here to follow the season of racing which is soon to start over Jack Prince's Southern circuit.

Already, with the top of the track completed, and with serious danger lurking in any speed over 75 miles an hour, the riders are hitting up a speed of 90 an hour. That gives a hint of what they will do later. Before they can really "let out" the track must be completed—and this will soon be done. To finish it two feet six inches of heavy planks will be placed at the top of the real racing surface. This surface now in place is at an angle of 58 degrees. The new planking will be placed at 90 degrees—or "straight up." On top of this, also at 90 degrees, will be extremely heavy wire netting, four feet six inches high. On top of this will be the guard rail.

Men Will "Ride the Wire."

When the wire netting and the planks are in place the real speeding will begin. And when this happens the riders will not only ride on the 58-degree surface, but they will actually mount the perpendicular wall and will even ride on the wire netting.

With everything in place the riders can begin to find out what speed the track really has. It is their opinion that it is extremely fast. It has been particularly well constructed and seems right in every particular.

Not Motorcycles Here.

To add to the speed possibilities two new consignments of racing motorcycles have been shipped to the track from different factories, and they are the latest and most improved machines, made strictly for speed, and faster than anything of their size ever built before. Every morning and afternoon now the riders are tuning up their machines and getting them ready for the big doings.

On a good board track the speed limits are usually the nerve and the strength of the driver. The track, when once a man is fairly started, is nothing but a flat road of boards. There is nothing in the way and no turns to take—for the track is a perfect circle.

No Limit But the Sky.

It takes tremendous nerve and coolness to hold a machine steady at high speed, and it takes great power to hold its nose down and to keep it from going straight up and over the top. Aside from this, there is no limit to the speed except the power of the engines, and they are built fast enough to go at a rate faster than man ever rode before.

LIEBHARDT WILL HOOK UP WITH TURTLE TEAM

MEMPHIS, TENN., May 28.—"Sugar Glen" Liebhardt, renowned in song and story as the "Iron Man of the Minors," will return to the Southern League as a member of the Memphis pitching staff as soon as satisfactory arrangements can be made by Manager Bernhard. While no announcement has been made to the effect, it is understood that Floyd Kroh, the erratic left-hander, will be released.

BEAUMONT CLUB WILL GET PITCHER WEAVER

Orlie Weaver will probably go to Beaumont, Texas, instead of to New Orleans. Charley Frank has refused to take Weaver unless he can get a clear title to his services, and Smith is not willing to give him up on that basis. Waivers have been secured on him and he will be sent to the Texas League.

White City Park Now Open

Sporting Food

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

CALGARY.

A human life snuffed out, and all for what?
A youth who played the game and reckoned not;
A crowd of human creatures known as men,
And every manlike instinct all forgot.

A crowd of creatures, all in human shape,
Who sit beside the shambles, all agape,
And cry for crimson blood, and still more blood—
And yet men frown upon the lowly ape!

Were we a politician with a desire to commit political suicide, our first move would be to support a bill legalizing the alleged manly art of self-defense.

We have various reasons to be thankful, one of which is that we are not Arthur Pelky.

Clark Griffith informs us that Walter Johnson has not attained his best form, but the form that he has attained is good enough to suit at least seven teams in the American League.

Not that we are prone to find fault with Charley Murphy, but if baseball players were to hold more conversations with baseball scribes and less with barkeeps there would be more regular baseball played.

There is no truth in the report that Mr. Murphy does not allow his athletes to talk to him. Among the athletes this is considered hard luck.

Traveling eighty-seven miles an hour in a motor car is a great little pastime for a man who intends to die with his boots on.

Garry Herrmann puts forth the information that the purpose of the national baseball agreement is to protect baseball players. This will be news to baseball players.

Somehow we have a hunch that even if those English polo ists do happen to win there will not be any general mourning.

Some day some wise guy will tell us why it is that, when a baseball league opens its schedule the first ball must be heaved by a mayor or a sheriff or a constable or a justice of the peace or an alley inspector or something.

MERELY A PLEASANT DREAM.

It happened in a cosy spot across the River Styx.
A portly gent who lingered there was in an awful fix.
A crowd of wild and howling imps were walking on his toes
And shoving trays of glowing coals beneath his ruby nose.
I said to Satan: "Why abuse yon poor old helpless guy?"
"That person owned a baseball park on earth," he made reply.
"Not only that," he ambled on, with visage grim and dark.
"He is the guy who introduced the peddlers in the park."

MEMPHIS HEARS THAT ATLANTA WANTS KROH

MEMPHIS, TENN., May 28.—Memphis to-day made a cash offer for Third Baseman Frank Manush, of New Orleans, and was turned down by Manager Frank, who insisted that Manush would not be sold unless it were to some major league club. At present the infielder is out of the game, nursing a wrenched leg.

It was also announced that Manager Bernhard would confer with Third Baseman Bales when the Memphis club reached Chattanooga Thursday. Whether the collegian will be taken on depends upon the showing of Abstein. Ward has given perfect satisfaction at third, and if any further change is made it will have to do with first base.

Waivers have been asked on Pitcher Floyd Kroh, and sea-deep information is to the effect that Bill Smith, of Atlanta, may take the erratic southpaw on for a try-out.

BRONCHO RIDING IS BLAMED FOR M'CARTY'S DEATH

By Ed W. Smith

(Referee Pelky-McCarty Fight and Sporting Editor Chicago American.)

CALGARY, ALBERTA, May 28—Despite the exonerating verdict of the Coroner's jury Monday night, both Arthur Pelky, or Peltier, as his right name is, and Tommy Burns were held in $10,000 each at a court hearing to answer to the charge of manslaughter preferred by the Dominion Government for the death of Luther McCarty in the ring of Tommy Burns' arena.

Pelky was held directly; Burns as promoter of the contest. The other two concerned—William McCarney, manager of McCarty, and Referee Ed Smith—were detained for a short time only as witnesses and later were permitted to leave the city of Calgary and the country upon furnishing a bond of $500 each and their promise to appear here at some later date to testify during the trial.

Bonds were furnished in all cases without trouble, townspeople flocking out plentifully to sign the court documents.

The preliminary hearing was before Inspector Duffus at the mounted police barracks, and practically the same testimony was gone over as that at the Coroner's jury hearing. Both McCarney and Smith testified at length with Pelky in the prisoner's cage. Burns was not heard, as he was held to be equally guilty with Pelky.

McCarney Off for East.

A strong effort was made by the crown to show that McCarney was an equal promoter in the show with Burns, but this failed and the Philadelphia man was permitted to leave on the midnight train with the body of McCarty.

Dr. H. H. Moshier, the man who declared that the death of McCarty was due to a fractured spine at the base of the brain resulting in a hemorrhage, again was called and repeated what he had said the day before. As a result nothing new was brought out and the case remained as mysterious as it was ten minutes after McCarty had been declared dead.

Billy McCarney, manager of McCarty, gave me his first statement of what he thought was the matter with McCarty in the ring. After hearing McCarney and the testimony of the doctors I am strongly of the opinion that McCarty received a slight fracture of the neck during some practice work he did with bucking bronchos a short time before the contest.

McCarney said to me before boarding his train with the body of McCarty:

"These doctors say that a fracture of the kind might have been received within four days of autopsy and that there then would be no fibrous growth around the injury.

Luther delighted to ride fractious horses and get them to buck. He often got some nasty twists in this way and I was forever begging him to cease the sport that he thought was so good. But he would not, and I have an idea that he might have been injured in this way and not known it."

McCarney is out of the boxing game for good, he said. He will make no attempt to find anybody to take McCarty's place in his estimation, and will go into the theatrical profession, in which he has made many friends.

Wife Will Accompany Remains.

On the way East McCarney expected Mrs. Luther McCarty to board the train and accompany the remains into Chicago and beyond into Ohio, where the burial will take place at Piqua.

The settlement of Luther's estate will be made at that time. It is known that Luther's ambition was to provide for the future of the child now two years old. McCarney will endeavor to arrange to carry out the "big boy's" wishes in this matter. Luther's father will be waiting the arrival of the remains at Piqua.

HOPPE BEATS JAP CUE EXPERT EASILY, 500 TO 33

NEW YORK, May 28.—Willie Hoppe successfully defended his world's billiard championship title at 18-inch balk line, two shots in, against the challenger, Kodji Yamada, of Japan, here, the score being 500 to 33.

Since the rules of the game were so changed that the "anchor" was barred, no other such one-sided championship game has been seen. Hoppe won the bank, but failed to score when he led off. Yamada ran 15 and this was his best attempt, as in the next ten innings he added only 18.

Study the Dealer as Intently as You Do the Car

Do not purchase an automobile of a dealer in whom you cannot have complete confidence. Personality is a large factor in business dealings. The dealer whose personality engenders your confidence in him, whose business principles are sound, who is prosperous and for whom owners of cars he has sold say good words is the logical man from whose firm you can safely purchase an automobile.

If you would know the value of dealers' service in the operation of an automobile, you have but to consult men who have owned several different makes of cars and, if you will talk with any HUDSON owner, you will appreciate the value of the type of service we furnish to the owner of an automobile.

All business is done solely on confidence.

Confidence of one man in another. If you cannot have confidence in a dealer who sells the car you have selected, then yours is an unsafe purchase.

The Service You Buy When Your Choice is a HUDSON

There is scarcely any limit to which we will not go to insure HUDSON owners the fullest satisfaction from their cars. We are more interested in you and your motoring interests after we have sold you the car than before you have bought. Yet, we realize that this is contrary to the attitude of the average automobile concern.

This service that we give you is but keeping faith with the Hudson Motor Car Company. There is a clause in our contract with the factory, which insures every purchaser of the highest standard of motor car service to be had, and this we cheerfully and rigidly adhere to in our deals with owners.

The New HUDSON "Six" rose to a higher point as a sales success than any 6-cylinder car has ever seen in the same length of time it has been on the market. Its exceptional performance has been unusual among 6-cylinder cars.

Its smooth, sweet-running mechanism gives a sensation of flying that is lacking in a 4-cylinder car. You can throttle it down to 3 miles an hour on high speed and pick up to 60 miles an hour with smoothness and ease that will be a revelation to you, if you have owned 4-cylinder cars.

You can go through city traffic at 3 miles an hour on high, with every cylinder hitting as smoothly as if you were going ten times as fast.

Avoid Disappointment in Getting Delivery

Ninety per cent of HUDSON orders are for spring delivery—hence, within a few days, it will be impossible to secure a delivery date for a car.

Hence, we cannot impress too strongly upon prospective purchasers the necessity of securing a fixed delivery date for their cars.

It would be well to come see the New HUDSON "Six" at your earliest convenience, or write or phone for new catalog.

The "54" Phaeton sells at $2450. The "37"—the "Four-cylinder masterpiece"—is $1875, prices f. o. b. Detroit.

BIG VOTE GAINS MAKE PONY CONTEST MORE EXCITING EVERY DAY

Saturday night the lists close in The Georgian and American's pony contest, and the entrants will "run it out" without further competition.

The list has gone well beyond 300 and includes boys and girls from all parts of Atlanta and the State and widely scattered areas outside the State.

One advantage the contestants are overlooking to a large extent is the fact that payments of overdue accounts bring votes just the same as the identical amount paid on new subscriptions. Boys and girls whose parents, relatives or acquaintances owe anything for subscriptions to The Georgian and American can collect the money themselves, bring it in and be credited with votes.

The same interview will open an opportunity for them to seek renewals, so even if they know that acquaintances have been taking The Georgian and American they may profit by seeing them and canvassing for votes.

Big gains continue to be shown in the vote column. From now on the races promise to grow more exciting daily. Names and standing of contestants follow:

SYMPATHY AND GUNBOATS

News Note: Two battle cruisers, the Kongo and the Kirishima, are being built in England for Japan. They are of 25,000 tons dsplacement and 27 knots speed. They are armed with 13 1-2 inch guns. The Kongo is about completed. Former Secretary Meyer expressed belief that these battle cruisers are as powerful as any battleships afloat and of five knots greater speed. Within the past week Japan has purchased at least four ships suitable for transports in England. They are the Narrung, Benacre, Bentola and Vadala. All are of more than 3,000 tons displacement.

MEN WELCOME MOTHER'S FRIEND

A Duty That Every Man Owes to Those Who Perpetuate the Race.

It is just as important that men should know of progressive methods in advance of motherhood. The suffering, pain and distress incident to child-bearing can be easily avoided by having at hand a bottle of Mother's Friend.

This is a wonderful penetrating, external application that relieves all tension upon the muscles and enables them to expand without the painful strain upon the ligaments. Thus there is avoided all those nervous spells, the tendency to nausea or morning sickness is counteracted, and a bright, sunny, happy disposition is preserved that reflects wonderfully upon the character and temperament of the little one soon to open its eyes in bewilderment at the joy of his arrival. You can obtain a bottle of "Mother's Friend" at any drug store at $1.00, and it will be the best dollar's worth you ever obtained. It preserves the mother's health, enables her to make a quick and complete recovery, and thus renewed strength she will eagerly devote herself to the care and attention which mean so much to the welfare of the child. Write to the Bradfield Regulator Co., 129 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their valuable and instructive book of guidance for expectant mothers. Get a bottle of Mother's Friend today.

Long Beach Adopts Holocaust Orphans

LONG BEACH, CAL., May 28.—If any children were made orphans by the Empire Day catastrophe, the people of Long Beach will provide them with new homes and new parents.

This assertion was made to-day by R. L. Bisby, secretary and chairman of the Chamber of Commerce.

Mrs. Etta Lovett Dies at Augusta

AUGUSTA, GA., May 28.—Mrs. Etta Lovett, widow of the late Dr. W. C. Lovett, died at the residence of Mrs. H. M. Lovett, in Augusta to-day. She was the step-mother of Dr. W. C. Lovett, editor of The Wesleyan Christian Advocate, and Judge R. O. Lovett, of Atlanta; Rev. J. M. Lovett, of Louisville, and W. B. Lovett, of Mobley. Her brother, R. W. Smith, is president of the LaGrange Female College.

The body of the deceased will be interred at Mobley.

Blanche Walsh Here Monday in 'Movies'

An innovation in Atlanta's motion picture world will be the appearance all next week of Blanche Walsh, celebrated emotional actress, in a picture presentation of "The Resurrection," Tolstoi's drama, at the Grand Theater Thursday morning at 10 o'clock.

Not a point that made the drama a success has been missed. Miss Walsh hesitated before risking her reputation to the "movies," but when she had seen the film, she declared it a wonderful success.

Council of Griffin Still Defies Mayor

GRIFFIN, GA., May 28.—Another chapter to the long fight between the Mayor and Council of Griffin was written last night when the Finance Committee recommended and Council voted to accept the auto fire truck just delivered by the American-LaFrance Fire Engine Company. Excepting the protest of Mayor Smith, no opposition was raised.

No method of payment is prescribed, although a warrant for payment is directed. This is the mooted question.

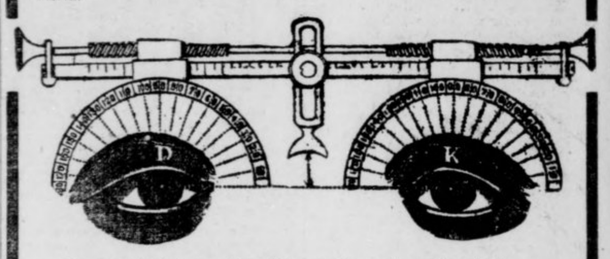
Don't Neglect Your Eyes

Your Most Valuable Possession--They Bring All the Beauties of Nature to You

Do not wait until the defect grows worse, for delays are dangerous. Now is the time to prevent the hot weather and the glaring sun from affecting your eyes. Call and have your Eyes examined, and we will advise you to their care, as we make a specialty exclusively of eye examination and fitting glasses, and through many years of experience we have built up a reputation by making a study of the Human Eye and remedying its defects in giving the Correct Glasses to restore the lost Power of Vision.



You are invited to call and have a thorough examination by

E. O. SILVIEUS, M. D., Oculist

The specialist who is in charge of all examinations. Bear in mind the fact that we make the examinations and render expert service without extra charge to you.

Special Attention Given to Children's Eyes

We make the Kryptok Glasses, one glass for far and near, invisible, ground of one piece, Toric Glasses, Cylinder Glasses, Prism and Compound Glasses of any description. We carry all kinds of eyeglass and spectacle frames, including the genuine Shur-On with safety guard, guaranteed to fit any nose, and a full line of Colored Glasses.

We neutralize broken lenses and replace them without any prescription.

COTTON SAGS ON BEARISH ADVICES

Offerings Are Absorbed by Strong Traders—Market Is Narrow Pending Census Report.

NEW YORK, May 28.—Influenced by easier cables and further bearish weather news, the cotton market opened easy to-day, first prices being 1 to 3 points lower than Tuesday's final. Old crop deliveries came in for considerable pressure, but was also some liberal selling of new positions. Later the cable prices rallied.

Liverpool was said to be a seller of July after the call, but the large spot interest purchased July in rather large volume, causing the market to steady, with the result that prices rallied about 1 to 4 points higher than the initial level. The selling was scattered.

During the forenoon the ring crowd was inclined to sell on the favorable map and the selling became freer. The buying of July was scattered and those buying seemed to be selling the new crop. Schill and Mitchell sold July as well as late positions.

The market developed a reactionary tendency, May dropping 8 points to 11.46, while July receded 3 points from the opening. New crop months, however, held steady around the opening level.

A certain broker issued notices today for 10,000 May, which was said to be for Liverpool account. This, however, had no effect, and fell flat on the market.

Theo Price, in this week's issue of his market report, is decidedly bearish. The report, in part, follows: "American short interest about covered and obtained its cotton from visible and invisible supply. Says if July prices are forced to extreme there is enough tenderable low grade cotton to liquidate that position. He refers to present large excess of interior stocks, and says crop has improved since rains fell. Think people expect Bureau of 83.5. Believe acreage will be increased about 5 per cent."

The market gave up to the bearish influences during the last hour of trading when the ring and brokers representing spot houses dumped considerable cotton upon the market. July was heavily sold, but ruled extraordinarily steady. October and December were also under pressure. The market held remarkably steady and the offerings were absorbed by prominent operators. May notices tendered during the early trading were stopped by spot houses and was quickly redelivered, as it was not of a desirable grade for shipment.

It seems as if every one is awaiting the Government figures to be made pubile Monday, June 2, and we may expect a very narrow market until this report is out of the way.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net decline of 4 to 10 points from Tuesday's close.

LIVERPOOL COTTON MARKET.

LIVERPOOL, May 27.—This market was due to open 1 point higher on near positions and 3 to 3½ points higher on late, but opened quiet, at a net gain of 2 to 2½ points higher. At 12:15 p. m., the market was quiet, net unchanged to ¼ point lower on near positions and 1 to 1½ points higher on distant months. Later the market declined 1 point from 12:15 p. m.

Spot cotton dull at unchanged quotations; middling 6.70d; sales 10,000 bales, including 9,700 American; imports, 20,000 bales.

At the close the market was quiet with prices showing irregularity, being unchanged to 2½ points lower on near months and ½ to 1 point higher on late positions from Tuesday's final.

Futures opened dull.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, May 28.—Liverpool shows decided weakness this morning with futures 2 to 4 points lower than due. Spots unchanged; sales, 10,000 bales. Political news is not good. London says that the powers practically extended an ultimatum to the allies to force the signing of the peace pact with Turkey. Forced peace of this character is hardly satisfactory.

The Journal of Commerce on Texas attracted much attention, as it is entirely out of line with information received from the best private sources. It appears strange, indeed, that Texas should be three weeks late on account of cold weather and the Oklahoma crop early, when, as a master of fact, Government records show that Oklahoma temperatures have all along been on an average of 6 to 13 degrees colder than in Texas.

The market opened about 5 points lower, but sellers were scarce owing to anticipation of further professional support in New York, which, in fact, made its appearance soon after the opening and caused a rally of 5 points. According to New York advices this support is furnished with the intention of benefiting from short covering before the holidays. New York will be closed Friday and Saturday. The bureau report to May 28 will be issued Monday, June 2, at 11 a. m., our time. We compare with a belt average of 78.9 last year, 87.8 in 1911, 82 in 1910, and ten-year average of 79.9. The trade looks for a report between 81 and 84.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 28.—Liverpool sold July on and after the call, but after the call McFadden, Wilson, Riordan and Hubbard were buyers of July. The selling was scattered. Later the ring sold on favorable weather map and easier feeling abroad. Mitchell and Schill were the leading sellers.

* * *

Hentz issued 10,000 notices on May, which was said to be for Liverpool. These notices were stopped by Hopkins, Dwight & Co., Robert More & Co. and Rich.

* * *

Mitchell and Schill were fair sellers of July; also new crop positions.

* * *

* * *

Warehouse stocks in New York today are 72,970; certificated 60,222 bales.

* * *

Norden & Co. makes the condition of the crop 85 per cent and acreage increase 4.7 per cent.

* * *

* * *

About 800 replies received by the Georgia State Department of Agriculture are the basis of a report by that office that 23 per cent of the crop has been replanted and the average planting time is seventeen days late. Acreage has decreased about 6 per cent, compared with last year, but the condition is 82 per cent.

* * *

Last week Turner, of Memphis, made the condition of Georgia 74 per cent, and Monday The Commercial-Appeal made it 72 per cent.

* * *

George W. Neville, of the New York Cotton Exchange, in his annual report on the New York Cotton Exchange, said: "During the past five years when the New York Cotton Exchange was subjected to so much unjust criticism, there was never any complaint made of members resorting to undignified methods of soliciting business, but recently some of our members have expressed opinions in their market letters in such a way as to cause the complaint and supervisory committees to go thoroughly into this matter and reprimands have been administered."

The New York Cotton Exchange is to be congratulated on being so careful to maintain a high standard of business conduct among its members.

* * *

The Journal of Commerce has the following on the condition of the cotton crop in Texas and Oklahoma:

Texas—"Estimates of acreage do not vary greatly from a month ago, when an increase of 3.5 per cent was indicated. The percentage of condition will be approximately the same as last year, when it was 81.8 per cent. The season is very late, being nearly three weeks backward, due chiefly to cold weather. Considerable cotton is not yet up, and a number of farmers have not finished planting. Some replanting has been necessary. Rain has generally been plentiful and the ground is in a good state of preparation. Stands are rather spotted, but prospects are generally favorable."

Oklahoma—"A very substantial increase in acreage is indicated for Oklahoma over last year. Percentage condition will probably show a considerably higher figure than a year ago, when it was 78.7 per cent. Stands are very generally good and the crop has an excellent start. Rains have been somewhat excessive in some localities and grass is making headway. Some correspondents consider prospects the best in years. The season early in many sections, but in the majority of cases ten to fifteen days late."

Dallas wires: "Texas generally clear. Oklahoma, light showers in Oklahoma City; north portion part cloudy; rest clear."

* * *

T. H. Price presents a bearish view of the cotton market in this week's issue of Cotton and Finance.

* * *

The Federal Grand Jury has postponed the inquiry into the cotton pool case indefinitely.

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, May 28.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map is very favorable; shows cloudy in the Atlantics; fair elsewhere. General rains in North Georgia and Carolinas. Some good rains in Carolinas, where they will be of great benefit. Indications are for fair and warmer over the entire belt, except possibly some showers on the Atlantic coast.

Memphis wires: "Generally fair and warmer weather is indicated for all cotton States. Heavy rains fell yesterday in North Carolina. Little or none elsewhere. Very favorable conditions."

MILLER-CARTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, May 28.—In the absence of general business, fluctuations are narrow. Sentiment is bearish, and market would decline were not sellers afraid of fresh commitments over week-end holidays and the Government condition report on Monday. Weather very favorable and later acreage and condition figures larger than early ones.

COTTON SEED OIL.

NEW YORK, May 28.—The cotton seed oil market was easy under scattered liquidation. On decline in lard local professionals attempted to support the market, but offerings were liberal and served to check any advancing tendency. Cotton houses sold August.

BEAR PRESSURE PUTS STOCKS OFF

Receivership for St. L. and S. F. Railway Has Bad Effect on Foreign Capital.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, May 28.—Pressure was exerted on the list at the opening of the stock market to-day, and declines ranging from fractions to 2 points were sustained. St. Louis and San Francisco shares were the weakest in consequence of the appointment of a receiver for the road in St. Louis. Frisco common was 1⅝ lower, selling around 3½, while the second preferred lost 2 points. Union Pacific and Southern Pacific bore up well. The former gained ½, while the latter, after sharing fractionally, recovered.

American Smelting was sold for a loss of 1½. Other issues which were off were Amalgamated Copper, ⅛; American Can, ¼; Canadian Pacific, ⅛; General Electric, ⅜; Missouri Pacific, ½; Pennsylvania, ⅝, and United States Steel common, ⅛.

Steel soon recovered its loss. St. Paul also recovered its fractional decline in twenty minutes of trading. Chesapeake and Ohio opened ¼ up, but lost its gain. Reading gained fractionally after opening unchanged.

The curb market was irregular. Despite the suit brought in London charging that an illegal pool was formed for speculation in shares of American Marconi stock after the Titanic disaster, this issue was only ⅝ lower on the curb.

Americans in London drooped.

The market continued irregular and dull during the forenoon and recessions were in evidence. Smelting declined 1⅝ to 66⅛. Copper was off ⅝ at 73¼. Canadian Pacific was off ⅛ at 232. Southern Pacific was up ⅛. Steel, St. Paul and Reading were off ⅛. Chesapeake and Ohio was up 6¼ at 64⅝.

Call money loaning at 2¾c.

Most active issues shaded in the last hour. Canadian Pacific sold down to 229½, for a loss of 2½, but later recovered. Reading fell to 159⅝, for the loss of a point, but it rallied in the final half-hour. Other stocks which were under the noon range were St. Paul, Erie, Steel, Union Pacific and Pennsylvania.

Amalgamated Copper held firm.

PRICE CURRENT CROP REPORT.

CINCINNATI, May 28.—Corn planting in Iowa, Minnesota, the Dakotas and Nebraska has been seriously delayed by wet weather. In the southern territory of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma an extremely spotted condition has developed. Rain is needed in portions of this territory, particularly to relieve the hard surface conditions. Growth of winter wheat continues favorable. No critical conditions are in sight.

The crop thus far has not been molested to any extent by pests. We estimate the yield 335,320,000 bushels on present conditions for Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas.

The growth and condition of oats in the northern territory are above the ten-year average, while the condition in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois is below the ten-year average. Farm reserves of wheat in the twelve leading States are 11.6 per cent, oats 17.6, corn 19 per cent.

THE WEATHER.
Conditions.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—With the exception of showers to-night in New York and New England, the weather will be generally fair to-night and Thursday east of the Mississippi River with higher temperature Thursday in the interior districts.

Forecast.

Following is the forecast until 7 p. m. Thursday:

Georgia: Fair to-night; Thursday fair; warmer.

North Carolina: Fair to-night and Thursday; warmer Thursday.

South Carolina: Fair to-night; Thursday fair; warmer.

Florida: Fair to-night and Thursday.

Alabama: Fair to-night and Thursday; warmer in the interior.

Mississippi: Warmer to-night and Thursday.

Tennessee: Fair to-night, warmer in west portion. Thursday fair.

WHEAT IS EASIER; SELLING GENERAL

Early Gain Due to Bad News. Corn and Oats Are Steady on Light Offerings.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red	.98 @105
Corn—No. 2	69
Oats—No. 2	38¾@ 39

CHICAGO, May 28.—Many of the early buyers of wheat changed their positions late in the day and sold wheat quite freely and some of this grain showed severe losses. There were declines of ¼ for September, ⅜ for July and ⅝ for May. The last prices were ⅞ to 1c below the highest levels of the morning. There were unconfirmed rumors late in the day of rains in scattered localities over Kansas.

Corn closed ⅛ to ¼c lower, while oats were ¼ to 3⅛c higher. The most strength in coarse grains was to be seen in the May future, as shorts were covering in that month.

Provisions were a shade lower for the day for all save July ribs and September pork.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

If Little Chicks Are Properly Fed Loss Will Be Less

Wholesome Advice by an Expert Who Has Tried It From Every Angle.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

Judge Marshall: I want to ask you a number of questions, if you will not think I am too greedy for information.

I live on a farm about two miles from town and am trying to raise chickens enough to make a living from.

I do very well with those I succeeded in raising, but I loose about half of my chicks before they are two weeks old.

As soon as the chicks are hatched I give them a good feed of mash, composed of equal parts of corn meal and wheat bran mixed with hot water, allowing it to cool a little before feeding. I feed this once a day and cracked corn three times a day; but I have much trouble with sparrows eating up the feed.

I also have much trouble with the red mites bothering my sitting hens, which I seem unable to control.

Then, again, I have trouble every summer by having great, big, fat hens drop dead without any warning. They will be apparently well one day and the next they will be dead. They are very fat and fine and I see no reason why they should die thus.

I always feed a little good condition powder of some kind three times a week.

If it is not asking too much of you I should appreciate an answer to these troubles. I am yours very truly, MRS. E. E. SPEER.

Tifton, Ga.

Cut Out Wet Mash.

ANSWER—We have texts enough for a number of good sermons but will have to do like the boy said he did in hunting for the cows: Go to the end of the lane and scatter.

First, in regard to the little chicks, I would say cut out the wet mash entirely, or, at least, until they are two months old and then if you want to use some of your feed in that way it will be all right, but not for the newly hatched ones. Feed rolled oats dry, and the cracked corn fine enough so they can eat it well, providing you can not get the ready mixed chick feed at your grocers in Tifton. But there is no question that the rolled oats is good, and so is the corn, but feed them absolutely dry.

Another place where you have erred seriously is in feeding as soon as hatched, if that is what you intended to say.

There is nothing that will so quickly get the digestive organs out of order, or, for that matter, prevent them from ever getting in order, as feeding newly hatched chicks at once. Give them a chance to season out a little, as one old poultryman used to say. When they first hatch they are a jelly, as it were, and it takes a day or two for them to toughen up, ready to digest what is given them. So, the way to do is to wait forty-eight hours before any feed is given. They will not starve, but be all the better for the little fast. They may have a good supply of sharp sand to peck at. Then feed the rolled oats or prepared dry chick feed. This can be continued until they can handle coarser cracked corn and wheat.

Green Feed Necessary.

All the while they must have good green stuff of some kind and a little dried beef scrap after they are three weeks old, and I think you will have no trouble if everything is kept clean and free from mites. The sparrows can be controlled by feeding under wire netting runs.

When you set your hens, move them out of the hen house into some clean shed, or, for that matter, out of doors, using barrels for the nest. But you should not have them in the houses. Take a pint of oil of tar, a pint of gasoline, three quarts of kerosene; mix thoroughly, and spray or pour over the roosts and the sides of the house where the roost poles rest. If this is attended to an hour before roosting time, it will usually about finish the job, both on the poles and the hens. If any are left on the hens, dust them thoroughly with some good lice powder. After they have been really cleaned out, it will pay to grease the poles with hot lard and a brush.

As to your loosing your fat hens by sudden deaths, I would say that I think you have been using too much condition powders. In my estimation even a little is too much when hens are in health and laying. You have weakened their digestive organs by overstimulation, coupled with too much fat in hens that are, no doubt, over two years old. When hens get a little old and fat, heavy behind, it is the best policy to send them to the butchers.

Such hens have passed their useful time. They have slowed up on laying and with no drain upon their systems they fill up with fat inside, where it presses on the heart and is the cause of the sudden deaths you speak of. It is no trouble to detect such hens in the yard, and it is a good plan to use them while they are in good health, rather than wait for them to come to the sudden death referred to.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Residences Bring Total of $34,500

Deed Filed in Purchase of $19,750 Lots on Paces Ferry Road. Other Notes.

Papers in the sale of two residences on Ponce DeLeon Avenue and one on Gordon Street in West End have gone to record. Minnie M. Costner has sold to J. E. McRee 403 Gordon Street, 373 feet south of Holderness Street, for $9,000.

John B. Daniel has sold to J. T. Tuggle, 644 Ponce DeLeon Avenue, 50 by 180 feet, for $12,500.

Mrs. Mattie F. Huggins has sold to Mrs. Kate G. Pryor, 346 Ponce DeLeon Avenue, 343 feet east of North Boulevard, for $13,000. The lot is 38 by 321 feet.

Executors' Deed Filed.

An interesting executors' deed has also been filed. This conveys to Robert F. Maddox two tracts of land adjoining his country place, "Woodlawn," for an aggregate of $19,750. The grantors are Mrs. Gertrude J. Dickey and others, executors of the estate of the late James L. Dickey.

Favor Roswell Road Work.

E. T. Luckie, of the Holmes & Luckie Realty Company, reports good progress in the work of signing up property owners who favor widening the Roswell Road 20 feet from Buckhead to Piedmont Road. Among the signers are John W. Grant, F. M. Brownell and George B. Powell, who have an aggregate of about 3,000 feet of frontage; George M. Hope, J. H. and J. M. Karwisch, L. W. Rogers, C. S. Honour, J. L. Riley and A. C. Walters.

Building Owners Organize.

For the purpose of perfecting a permanent organization and for inviting the National Association of Building Owners and Managers to Atlanta in 1914, local office building and apartment house owners and managers met Tuesday. The new body is known as the Association of Building Owners and Managers of Atlanta, and it has decided to send a committee to Cincinnati next month to present its invitation to the national association.

Action of the "big building" men in combining is taken as an indication that the office building and apartment house business in Atlanta will take great strides forward in future. Among the members of the new association are Ivan E. Allen, Fred Houser, Charles E. Wilkinson, A. W. Martin, Fred Shaefer, J. B. Pendleton, J. M. Barclay, J. M. Shearer, W. B. Stovall and J. L. Fincher. One hundred members are expected to join.

Auction Sale Saturday.

John H. James, auctioneer, will sell at public outcry Saturday 40 lots on Ashby Street for J. T. Elliott, the owner. Mr. James has plats at his office.

Inquiries for Colonial Home.

Ralph O. Cochran, the well-known real estate man, reports many inquiries for the colonial home which he will auction off Thursday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at 101 West Tenth Street. This home is a two-story brick affair and the property of W. C. Harper.

More Peachtree Improvements.

Peachtree has been promised another substantial business building. C. J. Sheehan will erect at once a two-story structure on the east side of the thoroughfare between Pine and Merritts Avenue. There are already several automobile shops in this block.

Mr. Sheehan traded for this 21 by 186 foot lot through the Cheatham Brothers' real estate agency, giving to Dr. A. W. VanHoose, of Rome, 228 South Pryor Street and 135 Davis Street, for $11,500, and paying the balance in cash and notes. The Peachtree property brought $26,250, or $1,250 a front foot. Dr. VanHoose recently sold 21 feet at this point to Ben J. Massell, who has put a sign on his lot announcing that he will build for acceptable tenant.

SUBURBAN HOMES.

IN INMAN PARK, Edgewood, Kirkwood and Decatur, we have a number of pretty cottages, and a few very attractive larger homes. Most of these places carry all of the conveniences Kirkwood and Decatur as yet have not the gas, but electric lights and plumbing. This is the time when the country is most attractive, the car service fine, and to remain during the winter is no hardship. Large lots, good schools and churches, and reasonable rents. Let us tell you about these.

CLAIRMONT AVENUE, DECATUR, GA.

ON THE CORNER of Ponce DeLeon, in this pretty little town, within twenty-five minutes' ride of the city, we have this splendid modern eleven-room house, on large corner lot. Would be a choice location for a large private family or for summer boarders. We are offering at low rental to first-class parties.

BUSINESS HOUSES.

Piedmont Avenue Frontage

We have recently had consigned with us some Piedmont Avenue frontage, ranging in price from $115 per foot to $135 per foot.

These lots are situated on the most desirable part of Piedmont Avenue, being between Twelfth, Thirteenth and Fourteenth Streets, facing Piedmont Park. The scarcity of building lots of this class of property on the north side is easily recognized by anyone who has been looking for a home site recently. The unusually good value offered here will be appreciated by anyone in the market for first-class residence property. Reasonable terms can be arranged.

The Stalwart Senate Should Stand by Our American Merchant Marine

The United States Senate fronts an opportunity and a duty in dealing with our merchant marine.

Public attention is rapidly focusing upon American maritime conditions, and it is high time that it did.

The favor with which the readoption of the early American discriminatory maritime policy is regarded by the thoughtful press and by influential Americans who are indifferent to foreign protests and threats is additionally reassuring.

Even more important, the people are realizing that an American deep sea shipping will form an urgently needed and entirely lacking secondary reserve for our navy.

Mr. Underwood's mere insertion of the thin edge of the wedge of discriminatory duties in his tariff bill has served to arouse both national and international interest.

Public indorsement of the policy is so strong that the stalwart Senate should promptly DRIVE IN THIS WEDGE. It will separate the United States from its trade agreements and conventions with other nations whose people know that the American navy will remain weak so long as it lacks the resource of a strong American shipping with officers and men.

The House tariff bill only provides a discount of 5 per cent of the duty on imports in vessels of American register. It applies to less than half our imports—only to those that are dutiable. It applies to only 10 per cent of our imports from South America, the other 90 per cent being duty free.

That discount will not suffice to attract American capital into oversea shipping with the new duties so low. The pending provision would give foreign yards the building of all the ships its enactment would bring under American register.

And finally there are conflicting opinions as to whether or not the withdrawal of the United States from trade conventions and agreements that now estop it from applying the policy is assuredly provided for.

THE SENATE MUST REMEDY EACH OF THESE DEFECTS AND OBSCURITIES. We must have a whole-hearted and not a half-hearted readoption and enforcement of the policy that gave American ships the carriage of 80 per cent of our imports and exports during all of the more than sixty years it was previously in force.

There is an overwhelming American demand for the repeal of all restraining conventions and suspensory laws that perpetuate our present maritime importance.

The need of the Nation, the need of our Navy, and the need of our foreign commerce alike demand it.

The Senate must infuse vigor and vim into this section of the House bill, so that its enforcement will fill every American shipyard with orders for oversea ships that will reassert American maritime independence and carry the American flag over all the seven seas to the business ports of the civilized world.

Big Business Men And Despotic Power

Judge Gary is the working head of the greatest industrial corporation in America—the United States Steel Corporation.

He is especially notable among the big business men of the country because he believes and has constantly declared during the last few years that the great interstate business concerns that now control most of the output of the necessaries of life MUST CEASE TO BE ARBITRARY AND DESPOTIC IN THE USE OF THIS POWER AND MUST SUBMIT THEMSELVES TO PUBLIC AUTHORITY.

Speaking to an organization of his business associates last week, Judge Gary remarked: "The President of the United States recently said that honest business need not be afraid. Well, let us be honest. Let us take him at his word; let us assume that he means exactly what he says."

The Georgian takes occasion to say that SOMETHING MORE THAN WHAT COMMONLY GOES BY THE NAME OF "HONESTY" IS NOW REQUIRED OF THE INDUSTRIAL LEADERS OF THE UNITED STATES.

What is required is that big business men shall have the high intelligence TO HATE THEIR OWN ARBITRARY POWER OVER THE INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATION OF THE COUNTRY.

It is time that these men should come to understand that it is absolutely impossible for the republic to submit to irresponsible power of any kind. IF THE REPUBLIC IS TO ENDURE, THE ECONOMIC DESPOTS CANNOT STAND.

The principle that all power over the essentials of life must be in the hands of men accountable to the people is the principle upon which the political and legal systems of the United States are founded. This is no fine-spun theory. It is a part of the everyday consciousness of the American man.

It follows from this principle that whenever any man in America is seen by the people to be exercising a selfish and unregulated power over the people's lives, IT IS IMPOSSIBLE FOR THE PEOPLE TO REGARD HIM OTHERWISE THAN AS A PUBLIC ENEMY.

The people are patient with private monopolies only so long as there is a reasonable doubt whether they really are private monopolies. But as soon as it becomes perfectly plain that certain men are levying private taxes upon the people, the people cannot and will not any longer have patience with such men.

Judge Gary has pointed out the right road for corporate managers who are suspected and who suspect themselves of being monopolists. Many months ago he told a committee of Congress that the industrial trusts must be controlled by the Government—even to the legal limitation of dividends and of commodity prices. In short, Judge Gary is the one corporation manager in the country whose intelligence has been absolutely clear on the point that no monopoly can endure in a republic—EXCEPT A PUBLIC MONOPOLY.

In quoting the words of President Wilson last week, Judge Gary spoke truly enough—but feebly. He has often spoken better from other texts.

It is not by mere scrupulosity, not by mere freedom from rascality, that big business men are to set themselves right before the country or to set the country right in the light of its democratic tradition.

THE COUNTRY EXPECTS TO SEE AN UPRISING OF BIG BUSINESS MEN, WHO ARE AMERICANS MORE THAN THEY ARE MONOPOLISTS—WHO HATE ARBITRARY AND DESPOTIC POWER AND ARE DETERMINED TO PUT IT DOWN.

Rev. John E. White Writes on The Biggest Politics

R R

Three Great Races---the Teuton, Slav and Mongolian---Are Lined Up on the Map of the World, and the American People Are at a Perilous Point About It.

WRITTEN FOR THE GEORGIAN

By REV. DR. JOHN E. WHITE

Pastor Second Baptist Church

It was stated that Dr. John Bassett Moore had been brought into President Wilson's administration with no reference whatever to politics.

That was a very great mistake. Dr. John Bassett Moore is First Assistant Secretary of State precisely because he is such a politician—the broadest, biggest, world-wideliest politician at Washington.

The sort of politics that absorbs Professor Moore's attention is not as scrappy as the race for Constable in a small town, but for variety, strategy and ominousness it is the big game of the world.

It has been Professor Moore's life work to study the vaster forces of the human movement called civilization. He is the astronomer of the Democratic administration. With his telescope sweeping immense political areas, he locates the points of disturbance in the field of civilization and tells his superiors what to do about it.

He keeps a wise eye on the great mass formations in the scrimmage of nations and races. He has a man's job all right.

The Big Line-Up.

At this moment three great races—the Teuton, Slav and Mongolian—are lined up on the map of Europe and Asia.

They are looking each other in the eyes and each is confident of its ultimate ascendency. This is politics more than continental or international. It is the biggest, deepest, most titanic situation of human competition the mind of man ever contemplated.

The smaller questions occupying the foreground of public interest are bagatelles compared with the issue presented by racial ambition. Such immense energies are involved that to think of them as let loose upon each other appals the imagination.

Outside university cloisters, from which Dr. John Bassett Moore has emerged, few people have dared to entertain the problem of collision on so colossal a scale. Within each of these great race masses we are told that instinctive tendencies are not controlling the point of view of diplomacy, and these tendencies have become manifestly contripetal.

The family disputes within each of the race groups are to grow less and less frequent under the resistless pressures of race unities. Quarrels between England and Germany, for instance, or between Russia and the smaller Slav States are decreasingly capable of serious consequences.

The get-together race movement is dominating the motive in world politics and the indications are that the Mongolian race will be the first to arrive at the goal of solidarity in a political game.

The Japanese Imbroglio.

Here is uncovered the background which renders American complications with Japan at the present time a subject of intense solicitude all over the world. The London Times is not given to groundless alarm and its Foreign Editor, Sir Valentine Chirol, has just sounded a solemn note on the subject:

"The ultimate point of dispute," he says, "does not affect the United States alone, still less California. It is a world question essentially. Fears of the inhabitants of the Pacific slope may be premature, but they are not entirely groundless. They spring from the instinct of self-preservation and if the present minor dispute is composed they will assuredly recur."

Commenting editorially on the situation, The Times says that: "However it may be settled now, the issue will have to receive the earnest attention of the white races in times to come."

The American people have heretofore occupied a superior attitude toward this "big politics" and has kept away from it, but fate seems now about to thrust upon us the necessity of putting out our hand toward it.

It is impossible to exaggerate the consequences which depend upon the hand we put out. If it is a fist we may as well get ready to tax ourselves, our children and children's children with the cost. There will be the price of trouble enough to last a hundred years.

Putting Our Fist In.

The expense of warships and army equipment is an insignificant item in the reckoning. The losses in markets affecting American labor and capital, and particularly the cotton trade through a long period would be staggering.

But the really great sacrifice that a gladiatorial attitude our part in the problem of big politics would exact of us would be the surrender of the moral supremacy in relation to these things which the founders of the American republic committed to us and which the historians have cheerfully accorded.

Is it not our better destiny to play the part of a big, fearless, chivalric brother with courage, firmness and wisdom, and with fairness and patience, than to seek the role of the "Big Fist" or the "Big Stick" with the commonplace distinction which history has committed to all its boastful and selfish peoples?

Letters From The Georgian's Readers

FREE SCHOOL BOOKS.

Editor The Georgian:

The Constitution of Georgia provides for free public schools and provides a school fund for the support of such schools. The Constitution further provides for local taxation for public schools.

I hope that the Legislature will pass a law authorizing the State School Commissioner or some other public authority to purchase for the use of the public schools of the State all school books necessary for the children attending the schools.

This law would result in the saving of thousands of dollars annually to the people of Georgia.

I do not think the State itself should embark in the publication of free school books, but I am sincerely of the opinion that the State and towns and cities should furnish free school books.

A few of the reasons for my opinion are as follows:

1. The child of the poor man has the same chance to obtain an education as the child of the rich or well-to-do man.

2. The "thorough system of common schools" provided for by the Constitution of Georgia is thus made in fact a "thorough system" because to the free school house and free tuition is added free school books.

3. The work of the school can be begun without delay when school books are furnished at public expense and thus become effective from the beginning of the school term.

4. Uniformity in the use of school books throughout the State is thus secured—although under the Georgia adoption law uniformity is already obtained in the County schools.

5. The common schools, established for the education of the common people, are made popular and attendance is encouraged and prolonged.

6. The school books are public property and through the use of them respect for public property may be taught.

The following States have laws providing for free school books for the public schools: Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Nebraska, Maryland, Wyoming and Utah.

WHY IS A FIRETRAP?

Editor The Georgian:

The Georgian quoted Professor Slaton, superintendent of Atlanta public schools, the other day as saying, "The Atlanta schools are firetraps."

The firetrap may be avoided by insisting that the architect observe the following simple rules: Every school house of more than one story should have at least two stairways, located at extreme opposite ends of the building, so that should fire break out at, say, the east end, and block that exit, the west end stairway would be the last part of the building to burn.

The stairs should not be located in the main corridors, where they would form a trap in case of panic, but in separate stairway halls, running out at right angles to the main corridors. They should land in immediate proximity to the exits, so the pupil will not have to run through the building looking for a way out. They should be 4½ feet wide, and have small round hand rails on both sides.

The main corridors leading to exits should be entirely free from obstruction of all kinds. The corridors should give free and unobstructed passage directly to exit doors that open outward at a slight push from inside.

Have all the steps that lead to the first floor on the outside of the building, so that if, in a rush to get out, a child falls or is thrown down he will be on the outside, where he can be rescued. Have no inside vestibule steps.

Locate heating plant near the center of the building, in an absolutely fireproof room, with entrance from outside the building only.

CONLEY WAS IN FACTORY ON DAY OF SLAYING

Police Secure Admission From Negro Sweeper During Examination for Phagan Clews.

James Conley, negro sweeper, in an affidavit made Wednesday, said that he was lying when he said he went to the National Pencil Factory on Friday. He said that he made the statement that it was Friday when Frank (as he says) told him to write the death notes, because he was afraid he would be accused of the murder of Mary Phagan if he told the truth.

He said he felt that if he said he was there Saturday the police would connect him with the murder. Conley said he got up between 9 and 9:30 o'clock Saturday morning, he knew the time because he looked at the clock on the Atlanta University from his front door. He returned indoors and had breakfast.

He got three silver dollars from his wife to exchange for paper money so that she would not lose it. He continued:

"I told my wife I was going to Peters Street. I went toPeters Street and stopped at a beer saloon at Peters and Haynes Streets. I bought two beers in there, drank one myself and gave another to a man named Bob. I stayed in the barroom three or four minutes and then walked back to the pool table and shot dice with four men. One of them was named Joe Bobs and one Bob Williams. I won 90 cents.

Drank Some Whisky.

"I don't know how long we had been shooting, but I think it was about fifteen minutes. I left there then and went to Erler saloon on Peters Street. I bought a glass of beer there. I walked back to the rear of the place, rolled a cigarette, came back and bought a half pint of whisky. I drank part of the whisky. I started from there to the Capital City Laundry to see my mother.

"I met Mr. Frank at the corner of Forsyth and Nelson Streets. He stopped me and asked me where I was going. I told him I was going to the Capital City Laundry to see my mother. He said, 'Wait 'til I come back.'

"He said he was going to see Mr. Montague. He was gone about 20 minutes. He came back and told me to come to the factory, that he wanted to see me. I went with him, walking behind him. He stopped at the Curtis drug store at Mitchell and Forsyth and got a drink. I waited for him outside. Frank had a bundle in his hand.

"After we got to the factory he put the bundle in the trash barrel right near the steps. He put a box there for me to sit on and other boxes back further in the factory. He told me to sit there until he whistled. He told me not to let Darley see me.

Tells of Seeing Darley.

"Along came a woman down stairs, Miss Mattie, I think her name was. She had on a dark suit and a raincoat. She carried a parasol. (This was Miss Mattie Smith). Then Darley came down stairs. He wore a grey suit and had no hat. He stopped Miss Mattie at the front door. She was wiping her eyes like she was crying. I heard him say, 'Don't worry, I will see that you get that next week.'

"She went out and he went back up the steps. In a few minutes he came back down and left. Then came Holloway down stairs about five minutes after Darley left. Holloway stood on the sidewalk five or six minutes and then came back.

"Then a negro drove up to the factory in a wagon. He went upstairs. He had some bills in his hand. Holloway came back with the negro, who was pegleg. The negro drove away and Holloway went back upstairs.

Try Macon Man for Shooting Neighbor

MACON, GA., May 28.—Mallary Bedingfield, a prominent Macon business man, is on trial in Superior Court to-day, charged with assault with intent to murder, because of the shooting last November of his next-door neighbor, Fred Guttenberger, an orchestra leader, whom he mistook for a burglar.

Mr. and Mrs. Guttenberger were the principal witnesses for the State. Mr. Bedingfield told the jury that he fired toward the ground and one of the bullets deflected, striking Mr. Guttenberger.

Georgia Millionaire Weds Sister-in-Law

NEW YORK, May 28.—Thomas McMillan, Savannah millionaire, member of the firm of McMillan Brothers, manufacturers of copper turpentine stills, was married to-day to Miss Mamie Bliss, of Savannah, sister of his first wife and for the last seven years, since her sister's death, in charge of the McMillan household.

The bride was visiting her sister, Mrs. Edmund Usina, in this city, when Mr. McMillan met her here. The wedding came as a surprise.

Gen. Lomax, Dixie War Veteran, Dead

WASHINGTON, May 28.—General Lindsay Lundsford Lomax, Confederate officer in the war between the States, died at Providence Hospital to-day. He was 78 years old. Funeral services will be held to-morrow at his old home in Warrenton, Va.

General Lomax was taken to the hospital about two weeks ago with a fractured hip, the result of a fall while visiting his daughter in Warrenton.

Wilson Would End Party Conventions

WASHINGTON, May 28.—The abolition of political conventions for nominating purposes and the elimination of the electoral college were advocated by President Wilson to-day in a talk with Representative Britten, of Illinois.

The President told the Congressman that he long has favored the shortening of the ballot and he believes the abolition of the electoral college would accomplish this purpose.

Athletic Preacher Saves Child's Life

TAMPA, FLA., May 31.—The Rev. J. E. Skinner, athletic pastor of the Palm Avenue Baptist Church, saved the life of 9-year-old Alberta Robinson at a church picnic at Sulphur Springs, when the child, with 30 or 40 others, was in bathing. She slipped from the shallow part of the pool into water more than twenty feet deep and had gone down twice when Rev. Mr. Skinner reached her. She was resuscitated.

Bride Given $2 in 2 Months Asks Divorce

Asserting that since she was married two months ago her husband, L. P. Ellison, had contributed only $2 to her support, Mrs. Flora Ellison has filed suit for divorce and alimony.

She obtained a ne exeat bond of $200, requiring Ellison to remain in the State until the hearing, set for June 7. She alleged that he had threatened to leave the State if she sued.

Alabama Monument Dedicated At Confederate Reunion.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., May 28. General Bennett Young was re-elected commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans here late this afternoon.

The only aspirant to the office held by General Young was General K. M. VanZant, of San Antonio, Texas, who had a fairly formidable following.

General Irvine Walker, chairman of the committee appointed at the Macon reunion to co-operate with a committee of the Grand Army of the Republic in regard to a joint peace jubilee of the two organizations, submitted a report recommending that at least 10,000 Confederate veterans attend.

The dedicatory exercises of the Alabama and Florida monuments this morning drew thousands of veterans and the attendance at the morning session was unusually light.

Action by the veterans on a resolution asking the Federal Government to purchase Johnson's Island in Lake Erie, near Sandusky, Ohio, will be taken Thursday morning, according to a committee report submitted today. Thousands of Confederate veterans who died in Northern prisons are buried there and a monument has been erected to them on the island by the women of the South, at a cost of $30,000. It is stated that the island will be obliterated as a historic point unless immediate action is taken to preserve it.

Major W. P. Gorman, a Birmingham veteran, who fell yesterday and sustained a fractured skull, lies at the point of death at a local hospital today.

Oil Flows to Blacksmith Forge; Town In Ruins; 3 Dead

TULSA, OKLA., May 28.—Four hundred gallons of gasoline from an overturned tank trickled down the main street of Kiefer late yesterday.

Forty feet away a tiny stream ran into the village blacksmith shop and the gasoline touched the red hot coals of the smith's forge.

There was a series of low rumbling explosions, a blinding flash of flame and on the ground lay eight persons, badly burned.

An hour later the building and yards of a lumber company and six homes were in ruins.

Three of the injured men died in Tulsa last night.

Kidnaps Sixth Child; Has 'Parental Mania'

NEW YORK, May 28.—The entire police force of Greater New York is searching to-day for Anna Boyarsky, aged 18, who is suffering from "parental mania," and who is at large somewhere with a kidnaped child in her possession—the sixth she has stolen in two years.

The victim is Frieda Lieberwitz, aged 4, whose parents live next door to Anna's mother in Brooklyn.

Clyde Ship Calls Help by Wireless

CHARLESTON, S. C., May 28.—The Clyde line freight steamer, Katahdin, is lying disabled off the North Carolina coast, according to an interrupted wireless message received here.

An electrical storm put the wireless station out of commission as the message was being received, and the nature and extent of the Katahdin's injuries could not be ascertained.

To Legalize Hotel Register Marriages

BODIES OF MOTHER AND GIRL IN RUINS OF HOME; SON HUNTED

Coroner's Jury Decides Pair Were Murdered, and Recommended That Missing Son Be Apprehended and Held for Investigation; Jewels Gone

T. H. P. Fincher, a justice of the peace in DeKalb County, held an inquest over the charred bodies of Mrs. S. C. Stevens and her adopted daughter, Nellie Stevens, Wednesday afternoon. The jury decided the two women had been murdered and recommended that Wade Stevens, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Stevens, who is missing, be apprehended and held for investigation.

The inquest was held at the ruins of the Stevens home.

The jury made a search of the ruins and found that a $400 diamond ring worn by Mrs. Stevens, the two gold watches worn by Mrs. Stevens and the girl, and two revolvers were missing.

Miss Josephine McCauley, of 791 Glenwood Avenue, said Mrs. Stevens told her, a short while ago, that she had had a half-breed Indian working around the house, but had discharged him because he made insulting remarks to Miss Nellie Stevens. He had returned two nights later and prowled about the house, when Mrs. Stevens shot at him.

Two Found in Burned Home.

That the mother and girl whose charred remains were found in the ruins of their home seven miles southeast of Atlanta early Wednesday morning were murdered and the house set afire by the murderer in an effort to obliterate all evidence of the deed was the astounding declaration made by Sheriff J. A. McCurdy after an investigation of the tragedy.

Positive identifications of the two women as Mrs. S. C. Stevens, 40 years old, wife of William Stevens, a 70-year-old Confederate veteran now in Chattanooga at the reunion, and their adopted daughter, Nellie Stevens, 13 years old, were made by neighbors.

Conditions leading up to the theory that the deaths were the result of murder are these:

The charred bodies of the women were found lying in the center of a bed room in the rear of the cottage. Near at hand were the remains of a shotgun.

Mrs. Stevens' skull had been crushed in. A hoe found in what had been the hallway leading from the room is believed to have been the instrument used to strike the woman as she arose from her bed, with the shotgun, to meet the intruder.

That the door of the room was open at the time of the encounter is believed to add another link to prove the affair a murder.

The method in which the daughter met her death could not be ascertained, owing to the charred condition of her body.

Son Quarreled With Mother.

Inquiry among the neighbors developed the fact that Wade Stevens, the 16-year-old son, who disappeared from his home Tuesday afternoon, had quarreled with his mother and sister.

Mrs. L. G. Self, who lives a short distance from the Stevens home, told Sheriff McCurdy that the boy had a tilt with his parent because she would not permit him to come to Atlanta during the absence of his father.

Mrs. Self stated that Nellis Stevens had appeared at her home with a package of Wade's clothing, which she asked Mrs. Self to keep that night to prevent the boy from disobeying his mother and leaving the house.

This statement, coupled with others to the effect that Wade Stevens had on numerous occasions acted in an infractious manner—at one time snatching $65 from his mother's hand and running away—have led Sheriff McCurdy to start a hunt for him in order that he may be questioned in connection with the murder.

The house was burned during the night. Its ruins were first discovered at 8 o'clock Wednesday morning by J. A. Nelms, who was passing the scene in a milk wagon. Nelms, after viewing the smoking embers of the building, summoned J. L. Cowan, a neighbor, and notified the county police.

When Sheriff McCurdy arrived on the scene the remains of the two women already had been found by Nelms and Cowan. Mrs. Stevens was identified by her false teeth.

When the bodies had been taken out of the ruins they were examined. Mrs. Stevens' skull was seen to have been crushed in.

It was this fact that first led the authorities to suspect foul play. Careful examination of the surrounding embers in the place where the bodies were found brough to light a shotgun barrel, the stock and woodwork of which had been burned off.

The weapon was seen to have been close to the positions where the bodies were discovered.

That the women had left their beds before they met their deaths was another conclusion drawn by Sheriff McCurdy. The bodies lay in the center of the floor while the iron frames of the beds were over in a corner of the room.

The door to the room was open. Its half demolished frame still stands in the ruins. Just outside the door the hoe was found.

Sheriff McCurdy's theory is that the murderer fled through the door, casting the hoe with which he had slain the women in the hall. That the plan to set fire to the house and burn the bodies to hide the crime came as a second thought.

The house was about 50 yards from the road in a clump of trees. It is in a lonely spot and the nearest neighbor is beyond earshot. That the screams of the women would not have been heard is safe to conclude.

Girl's Skull Crushed.

Another development that tends to show murder, came with the discovery that the skull of Nellie Stevens had been fractured, also. A sharp crack across the top of the head showed possibility that a knifelike weapon had been used, striking with such force as to cleave the bone.

The positions of the bodies in the ruins tend to bear this theory out—that the murderer had struck the girl with his hoe after crushing Mrs. Stevens' skull.

Mrs. Stevens' skull, it was shown, was crushed in by a blow directed at her from in front. Her body was found just three feet from the doorway. Directly behind this lay the body of Nellie Stevens.

It is thought that Mrs. Stevens, when she took up the shotgun and started toward the door at the sound of the intruder, was followed by her daughter. When the older woman opened the door, Nellie was directly behind her. The murderer, then, if he stood just without the doorway, with hoe in hand, struck Mrs. Stevens first. With a second blow he felled the girl behind her.

Open Knife Under Girl's Body.

The gun barrel was found close to the bodies of the women and the hoe was found out in the hallway.

POLICE EXPECT NEGRO CONLEY TO CONFESS

Sweeper, Under Fire of Questions, Admits Being in Factory on Day of Slaying.

"In a few minutes he came down and left the building for good. Then came another lady. She works on the fourth floor for Arthur White. She was upstairs six or seven minutes. Then she came back down with her money. She stood by me and tore open the envelope and counted the money. Then she left the building and for about fifteen minutes there was no one passing me.

Heard Frank Whistle.

"I sat down on the box and put my head against the trash barrel and stretched my feet out with my hat in my lap. I don't know whether I went to sleep or not." The next thing I knew I heard Frank's whistle twice, just like this (imitating whistle). I went upstairs. The double doors were closed. Frank was standing at the top of the steps. He said, 'I see you heard me, all right,' and I said 'Yes.'

"Frank grabbed me by the arm very tight and his hand was trembling. It was just like he was walking down the street with a lady. He carried me through the first office into his private office, came back and shut the door into the outer office. Then he came back to where I was. He didn't say anything but grabbed up a box of sulphur matches and went into the outer office. When he came back he pulled out a round chair.

"He brought the chair for me to sit in. Then he closed the door and asked me to address a letter 'Dear Brother.' Then he asked me to write some things for him. I don't remember all of it, but I remember one of them was this: 'That long tall black negro did it by hisself.' I wrote these things at his dictation. Then Mr. Frank patted me on the back and said that I was a good boy. Then he handed me a box of cigarettes and I took them."

Vital Evidence Kept Secret.

From this point the negro's statement was similar to the affidavit published a few days ago. The negro said that he left the factory between five and ten minutes after 1 o'clock, went back to Peters Street and then went home.

Chief Lanford read the above which he said was about half of the affidavit. The chief said that he had only given out the unimportant details, leaving it to be inferred that Conley had given vital evidence.

Harry Scott intimated that the negro's affidavit Wednesday morning had practically cleared the mystery and was the most important bit of evidence in the hands of the State.

At 2:45 o'clock the negro was taken into the chief's office for another sweating.

Admission that he was in the National Pencil factory on the day of the murder of Mary Phagan was gained from Conley, after cross-examination by detectives at police headquarters.

The negro, who became the center of attention with his amazing story that Leo Frank had told him to write the death notes, changed his narrative again to-day. Confronted by E. F. Holloway, a foreman in the plant, he admitted having been in the factory after having steadily maintained that he was on Peters Street between 10 and 2 o'clock that fatal Saturday and at home all other hours of the day.

Says Confession Is Near.

Holloway, after leaving the secret grilling at which the admission was obtained, declared he was sure it was only a matter of hours before Conley would confess. He asserted that if he had been allowed to put questions to Conley he could have gotten important information.

The police questions were, of course, all put with the idea of gaining information against Frank.

Chief Lanford had announced that he would go before Judge Roan with a request for an order allowing him to confront Frank with the negro, so that Conley's statement would be admissible in court. Lanford, however, failed to carry out his plans, although he would not admit they had been abandoned.

Later Chief Beavers said that the plan to confront Frank with Conley would not be carried out to-day and that its wisdom was doubtful, as, of course, Frank could not be compelled to answer any questions.

Refuse to Admit Suspicion.

The police refused to admit that suspicion was turning or should be turned to Conley, who has told one falsehood after another since his arrest. They tried resolutely to construe every one of his statements as against Frank and would not admit that the continued contradictions of the negro made his value as a witness next to nothing.

The police declared that Conley had been asked to write the contents of the death notes and had spelled night watch" as it was in the note, "night witch," and "self" with the "l" and "e" transposed as in the notes. What all this shows, in view of the fact that the same officials had announced that they had conclusive evidence by "experts" and that Frank wrote the notes, is not plain.

Conley was also confronted by General Foreman N. V. Darley in the presence of Detectives Black, Scott and Lanford and the negro made important admissions that will no doubt force him to admit his guilt.

Conley admitted that he sat at the elevator shaft on the first floor at 12:30 on the afternoon of the murder and saw Darley in company with Miss Smith descend the stairs. Conley described Miss Smith as wearing a raincoat and Darley with his coat on with no hat. Darley stated that both descriptions were absolutely correct in every particular. Strange to say, neither Darley nor Miss Smith saw the negro, for he was seated in the shadow of the steps and never made a sound.

Conley said that after Darley came down stairs with Miss Smith he walked to the door with her and then returned and ascended the stairs. This Darley says is true.

Shortly after this Mrs. Albert White went into the factory to see her husband and get some money to buy a dress. Her husband, Albert White, was at work on the fourth floor with the assistant foreman and machinist, Harry Denham. Mrs. White says that she saw the negro who sat immovable at the foot of the elevator shaft as she entered the factory. She could not identify him because of the indistinct light. But as Conley admitted he was there five minutes before it is reasonable to believe that it was Conley that Mrs. White passed.

According to the statement of E. F. Holloway Conley had no business in the factory on the day of the murder, which was a holiday. Holloway says that the negro denied being there when questioned by him. Now Conley admits that he was there.

Holloway believes that had not Darley escorted Miss Mattie Smith down stairs that she and not Mary Phagan would have been the victim.

WILSON OPPOSES CURRENCY FRILLS

President Reported to Have Told House Leaders to Use Common Sense.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—President Wilson has confided to House leaders, according to information obtained to-day, that he wants currency reform legislation next month conducted along common sense lines. He believes too much expert opinion will tend to becloud fundamental questions.

Prominent New York City bankers are said to have approved the essentials of a draft of the bill, although not being willing to accept all the details.

The President, it is stated, will be satisfied if they agree on the main features.

Only two members of the Cabinet, Bryan and McAdoo, have been consulted, according to reliable information. The former is said to have contributed several valuable ideas to the bill on the issuance of notes by reserve associations.

Conner Begs for Additional Funds

J. J. Conner, State Commissioner of Agriculture, in his annual report to Governor Brown, declares better facilities in his department are imperative. He said the annual appropriation to the department was fixed by the Legislature of 1874 at $10,000, and that the growth of the department demands that this amount be supplemented by $5,000.

"In operating the law with respect to the inspection of gasoline, benzine, naphtha and other products of petroleum I find that some hardships are worked on certain classes of industries in the State," he said. "I recommend that merely nominal fees be collected for the inspection of these products where they are used only for manufacturing purposes.

"During my service I have felt very much cramped in getting out department bulletins and publications."

He commends the work of the State food inspector and suggests that the office of an assistant be created.

He recommends that the salary of the State oil inspector be increased from $1,200 to $2,000 a year.

He urges that the next Legislature add at least $30,000 to the veterinary department to combat cholera among hogs and tuberculosis among cattle.

Woman Badly Hurt By Fighting Cats

GADSDEN, ALA., May 28.—When Mrs. J. A. Bacon, 50 years old, attempted to separate two house cats that were fighting on the back porch of her home, both attacked her, inflicting more than 100 wounds on her throat, chest and arms. Her husband and daughter fought ten minutes before they subdued the cats.

Some of the wounds on Mrs. Bacon's throat are half an inch deep. A physician spent four hours sewing up the gashes.

Only Italy Leads U. S. In Aviators' Deaths

WASHINGTON, May 28.—The United States has more accidental deaths among Government aviators than any other nation, save Italy, official figures show.

England is third and France fourth. It is pointed out, however, that American aviators average nearly twice the number of hours and miles covered.

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., May 28.—The condition of Mrs. Robert Edeson, wife of the actor, who is confined in a hospital here, to-day was reported improved.

ODD FELLOWS OF STATE IN SESSION

Establishment of Fraternity Home Question Before Savannah Grand Lodge Meeting.

SAVANNAH, GA., May 28.—The Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows of Georgia met in annual convention in Savannah to-day, when Mayor Richard J. Davant delivered the address of welcome for the city, and Thomas Hoynes, deputy grand master, for the Savannah lodges. Response was made by Grand Master W. S. Coleman, of Cedartown. Following the public exercises the Grand Lodge went into executive session.

Simultaneously the Daughters of Rebekah, the woman's auxiliary of the Odd Fellows, met in grand assembly at Odd Fellows' Hall. A good deal of politics is to come up during the sessions of the assembly. It is rumored that there is to be a fight for grand warden, for which Mrs. R. J. Winters, of Atlanta, is a candidate.

Whether or not Georgia is to have an Odd Fellows' home is one of the questions to be decided by the Grand Lodge. At the Gainesville meeting last year a committee was appointed to investigate and report at this meeting. Under the present arrangement the Odd Fellows have a pension plan, but it is said that this is not satisfactory.

There are 2,500 Odd Fellows and 300 Rebekahs present.

34 Get Diplomas From Bessie Tift

FORSYTH, GA., May 28.—With the delivery of the prizes and the conferring of the degrees upon the 34 graduates, commencement exercises at Bessie Tift College came to a close and each departing train has been filled with girls returning to their homes.

At the morning exercises the medals were awarded by Dr. A. Chamblee, of Forsyth. The medal for general excellence in the junior class was won by Miss Annie Re Gamble, of Forsyth; for excellence in voice, by Miss Gladys Askew, of Arlington; for general excellence in piano, by Miss Kathleen Morris; for the best production in a current number of the Bessie Tift Journal, by Miss Florrie Hollis, of Forsyth; for domestic arts, by Miss Ethel Hall, of Forsyth, and for excellence in domestic science, by Miss Louise Marshall, of Tennille.

The baccaulaureate address was delivered by Rev. Alex W. Bealer, of Eastman. The diplomas were delivered by Dr. C. H. S. Jackson, president of the college.

ST. ANDREWS, SCOTLAND, May 28.—W. Heinrich Schmidt, of Worcester, Mass., once again demonstrated his golfing prowess when he to-day defeated Captain A. V. Hambro, of the Royal St. George's Club, one up.

Harold Weber, of Toledo, Ohio, the other American who survived the first three days, was eliminated to-day.

Senate Can Quiz McAdoo on Tariff

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Perry Belmont has called the attention of the leaders of the Senate to an act of 1789 which he says gives Congress the right to summon Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo before it and ask for a statement as to his opinion of the effect of the tariff law on the revenues of the country.

Mr. Belmont will urge the Senate leaders to call Mr. McAdoo and ask for the benefit of his opinion.

BODIES OF TWO WOMEN FOUND IN FIRE RUINS

Sheriff Suspects Victims in Tragedy in Lonely Country Home Were Slain.

An open knife was found under the girl's body.

That the door was open at the time the women met their deaths was established by the fact that the doorknob was discovered in the ashes inside the room. The door opened on the inside and, therefore, the knob would have fallen in the room if the door had been opened.

The testimony of Nelms, the milk wagon driver, who was first on the scene, is considered of great importance in describing the positions of the bodies and the weapons found. Nelms Wednesday morning, in telling of the tragedy, said:

"When I saw the smoking embers of the building, as I was driving by, I hastened up. At first I did not suspect that anybody was dead.

Finds Two Bodies.

"I looked about in the ruins, however, and soon discovered through the smoke what looked to be a body. I walked through the ashes to the spot, and sure enough there was a human form. I looked about and soon found another form. Both were charred and beyond recognition.

"I didn't wait to look further, but ran over to the next house, about 200 yards away, and got Mr. Cowan and telephoned the police. Cowan and I came back and together we hunted over the ruins until the police came. We found the shotgun, the iron part of the hoe just outside the room, the knife under the girl's body and the doorknob. We didn't touch a thing, though."

With the arrival of Sheriff McCurdy came also Police Chief Beavers and Police Sergeant Whatley, of Atlanta. Mr. Whatley is a brother of Mrs. Stevens.

Excitement ran high as crowds of persons from the surrounding country arrived at the scene.

Boy Had Quarreled.

Mrs. L. G. Self's statement to the police authorities regarding the visit of Nellie Stevens to her home with Wade Stevens' clothing, directed suspicion to the boy.

"Nellie came to my house in the late afternoon," said Mrs. Self. "She carried a bundle of men's clothing with her and asked me to keep the clothes that night. She said that her brother and her mother had had an altercation.

"It seems that Wade wanted to leave home and his mother had objected. From what Nellie said, I understood that hot words had been passed. Nellie said that she had slipped out of the room quietly and bundled Wade's clothes and taken them away in order that the boy could not leave."

Saw Boy in Atlanta.

Charles B. McWilliams, 483 Leggett Avenue, East Atlanta, declared Wednesday afternoon that he had met Wade Stevens and another boy named "Red" Merchant at Five Points at 8 o'clock Tuesday night.

McWilliams said the boys expressed their intention of leaving the city that night—that they were going to catch a W. & A. train and go to Chattanooga and Cincinnati. McWilliams said the boys were dressed in overalls and had no money.

He declared that he accompanied them to the Terminal Station and waited there with them until fifteen minutes before their train was due to leave. Then he left them.

Prowler Routed Two Weeks Ago.

That an attempt was made to burglarize the Stevens home two weeks ago was the statement made by a neighbor to Sheriff McCurdy.

The person said that Mrs. Stevens had told of hearing a noise in the rear of the house one night and that upon going out to investigate it, saw a man jump from the back porch to the ground and run off into the woods.

Mrs. Stevens shot at the retreating form with the same gun which was found near her body in the ruins. Police authorities place much importance in this information as a possible clew to the murderer.

Evidences that a horse had stood for some time Tuesday night about 50 yards from the house were discovered. Hoof prints were found where the animal had kicked up the turf. Also traces of a person's footsteps were discovered nearby, which, from the great distance they were apart, proved that the person was running. These footprints lead from the house towards the woods nearby and are so plain as to be easily followed.

Chief of Police Beavers sent the following telegram to Fred W. Hill, Chief of Police at Chattanooga, carrying word of the tragedy to William Stevens, the husband and father of the murdered women:

"Please locate William Stevens, care U. C. V. Advise him that his house has been destroyed by fire and that his wife and daughter were burned to death. Tell him to return immediately."

Trustees to Learn Of Mercer Friction

MACON, GA., May 28.—The trustees of Mercer University on Monday afternoon will receive a special committee's report of an investigation of alleged friction among President S. Y. Jameson, the faculty, the student body and the prudential committee. This committee had an exhaustive hearing several months ago, but its report was formulated and reserved until the trustees met.

President Jameson has declined the presidency of Ouachita College, at Arkadelphia, Ark.

'T. R. Averted War With Japan'

Witness Says Fleet Turned Trick

Defense's Mainstay Faces Jail

Colonel Roosevelt and, at top, George Newett, who is being sued for libel; at the bottom Judge Flannagan, who is presiding

Deposition, Said to Accuse Roosevelt of Being Drunk, Will Be Read to Jury.

MARQUETTE, MICH., May 28.—That there was very serious danger of war with Japan during the administration of Theodore Roosevelt and that the Chief Executive met the danger and averted war by sending a fleet around the world was the statement of John Callan O'Laughlin, a Washington correspondent of a Chicago newspaper and a commissioner to the Tokio Exposition, appointed by President Roosevelt.

O'Laughlin was a witness for the Colonel in Roosevelt's $10,000 libel suit against George Newett, editor of The Ishpeming Iron Ore.

"Did you seriously mean that there was danger of war with Japan during Roosevelt's administration?" asked Attorney Belden, who was cross-examining O'Laughlin.

"There was very serious danger," replied the witness.

Settled Question "Right."

"Colonel Roosevelt met that danger. "Obviously Japan would not start with a fleet in the Pacific waters. We settled the immigration question right then."

The witness emphasized the word "right."

O'Laughlin was asked by Attorney Belden if he had been an emissary to arrange for the reception of Roosevelt by the Pope and the King of Italy when the Colonel was in Rome. O'Laughlin said he had not.

The jury was sent from the room while the attorneys argued on the admitting of testimony concerning published reports about Colonel Roosevelt's drinking. Attorney Belden said that the defense wished to show that reports that Roosevelt drank were general in 1912.

"Did Not Deny Reports."

"We shall show," he said, "that this defendant heard those reports and that this plaintiff did not deny them. Roosevelt has been the most talked of man in this country, and if reports of his drinking have been so common as we shall show, he could not be damaged in any sum by the publication of such a report in a little country paper.

"The question of Roosevelt's reputation is vital in this case—his reputation in Marquette County, in this country and in the civilized world. In the plaintiff's bill, he asserts that his reputation for sobriety is well known throughout the 48 States of this country, and that his reputation for sobriety was good before the publication of this article by the defendant.

Disclaims Any Malice.

"Mr. Pound is an able lawyer. No lawyer in Michigan has tried more libel suits than he has. He knew that damages could be increased by reason of malice behind the publication. We will show there was no malice.

"In our answer we set up that there was no malice and that publication was made in good faith and that the defendant had been told and believed reports of Roosevelt's drunkenness were true.

"Dr. Abbott recognized the existence of such reports and deemed it worth while to answer them in The Outlook. Therefore, we have a right to show the existence of these reports as showing good faith and absence of malice on the part of this defendant."

"We shall not claim," said Attorney Pound, "any vindictive or punitory damages. We ask only actual damages such as would accrue in the absence of express malice. This is by direction of the plaintiff."

Claim Actual Damages.

"That means," said the court, "only actual damages, which my be 6 cents or $60,000."

"That is correct," said Mr. Pound.

"Then," said Attorney Belden, "in the absence of the demand for a retraction, no damages may be asked by way of punishment. But counsel has already charged malice to this jury and we can not eliminate these impressions from their minds. Therefore, we have a right to show there was no malice and we purpose to offer testimony of men of standing to show this general reputation.

"Precedents are few, for men of Roosevelt's standing and prominence have seldom brought such suits, but we have a somewhat parallel case in that of Dailey vs. Kalamazoo Publishing Company in the Supreme Court."

Cites Parallel Case.

He then cited the case.

Colonel Roosevelt held a whispered conference with Attorney Van Benschoten.

"Mr. Belden and ourselves are not very far apart," said Van Benschoten, addressing the court. "Newspapers, however, do not always tell the truth and reports can not be admitted unless it is first shown that Mr. Newett had read the newspaper or heard the report in question. If Mr. Newett takes the stand and swears he had heard or read such reports and believed them to be true, they would become pertinent."

Scores Defense's Stand.

"The result of the contention of Mr. Belden," said Attorney Pound, "would be that a reputation as pure as that of St. Paul could be blasted by a lot of irresponsible gossip mongers. Counsel is not entitled to this testimony, anyhow. He can not mitigate and justify at the same time. The two things are incompatible.

"The presumption of law, as your honor has said, is that the character of every man is all right. No affirmative proof of character is required. The Supreme Court has also held that unless the truth of the published charges is proved the good faith or lack of malice of the published can by no means mitigate actual damages."

Judge Flannagan interrupted to say:

"Counsel will please confine himself to the two questions here at issue, which are:

State's Points at Issue.

"'May defense introduce evidence of reports and reputation to demonstrate his good faith.'

"'May defendant introduce evidence of reports and reputation by way of mitigating damages.'"

"I shall so confine myself," said Mr. Pound.

"I shall show your honor the King of England sued a newspaper for libel for claiming that the King was a bigamist because, while prince, he married a daughter of an admiral of the fleet before he married Queen Mary.

"Would it have been a defense to say that defendant knew nothing of the facts, but had heard rumors to that effect? The court held it would not."

At this point Judge Flannagan adjourned court until 2 p. m.

T. R. Coins New Expression.

"Bully, plus," was the new expression coined by Colonel Roosevelt this morning to describe his state of physical well-being, following a long walk along the shores of Lake Superior and a hearty breakfast. He arose early and appeared in excellent spirits when court opened.

John Callan O'Laughlin, Washington correspondent for a Chicago newspaper, the first witness called, devoted the early part of his testimony to answering questions relative to the intimacy of his friendship with the former President.

Prior to the examination of O'Laughlin the counsel for the defense spent three hours going over 200 depositions they expect to present, and discussing the points they hope to bring out in support of the editorial in which Newett stated that Roosevelt "was drunk, not infrequently." Judge Flannagan also announced there will be no session of the court on Memorial Day, but that a full day's work would be done Saturday.

Known Him Many Years.

O'Laughlin testified that he came to know Colonel Roosevelt when the latter was Assistant Secretary of the Navy in 1897; that Roosevelt dissuaded him from enlisting at the time of the Spanish-American War because he (O'Laughlin) "was married and had no money to keep his wife," and that during the seven years Roosevelt was President he saw him morning, noon and night and at the shaving hour. It was Roosevelt's custom, he explained, to receive callers while he was being shaved each morning.

Following the expiration of the Colonel's term as President, the correspondent continued, he met him at Khartoum upon his return to civilization from Africa; accompanied him on the greater part of his Continental tour, and upon his return to the United States met him frequently until the New York campaign in 1910 and the swing around the country in 1912, when he was with the Colonel's campaign party. His testimony regarding Roosevelt's drinking follows:

Denies Seeing Him Drunk.

Q. From that acquaintance what can you say as to whether or not you ever saw him under the influence of liquor?—A. Not only have I never seen him under the influence of liquor, but such a suggestion seems to me silly.

Q. Ever see him drink?—A. I have seen him drink a small stem glass of champagne at dinners. He never drank more than one glass.

Q. What is the Gridiron Club?—A. An organization of newspaper men in Washington, organized to receive distinguished men. It gives two dinners a year.

Q. Are there official dinners in Washington?—A. Four dinners and five receptions given by the president are official.

Q. Is liquor served at these?—A. At the dinners—seldom at the receptions during Mr. Roosevelt's term.

A wordy skirmish between counsel on the two sides in the case, in which Judge Flannagan entered, was caused by an objection to one of Attorney Pound's questions. Judge Flannagan ordered Attorney Pound to beg Attorney Andrews' pardon. The cross-examination of O'Laughlin was by Attorney Belden, chief counsel for Newett.

Main Witness Faces Arrest.

James Martin Miller, depended upon as the chief witness for the defense, will not appear on the stand, it was learned to-day. Instead a deposition by him will be read to the jury.

When it was announced that Miller would testify at the trial that Colonel Roosevelt was intoxicated at a dinner given for former Speaker Cannon, a telegram came to Marquette requesting that Miller be arrested and detained until an officer could arrive from New York, where a charge of grand larceny had been made against him.

It was then announced that Miller's deposition would be read in court, and that Miller would remain at his home in Minot, N. Dak.

MISSIONARIES IN JAPAN DECRY ALIEN LAW

Strong Protest Against Oriental Exclusion Is Sent Protestant Churches in America.

NEW YORK, May 28.—The attitude of the American missionaries in Japan toward the California alien bill is contained in the following resolution received here to-day by the Rev. Charles H. McFarland, secretary of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, the strongest Protestant organization in the United States.

As American missionaries resident in Tokio, Yokohama and vicinity, we have viewed with deep solicitude the news concerning the proposed land legislation in California and deprecate any discrimination against the Japanese lest it mar the friendship between Japan and America and work injury to both countries. Therefore,

Resolved, That we appeal to our missionary constituency in the name of our home land, to the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, to the Federation of Churches in California, and to Christian public sentiment of the nation in favor of just legislation.

That we express our sincere appreciation of the earnest efforts of the President of the United States and the leading men of both countries and record our firm belief that the true public sentiment of both lands will support them in securing an equitable and mutually satisfactory settlement.

Hammerstein Quits London Opera Field

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 28.—Oscar Hammerstein's operatic connection with London was severed to-day with the sale of his interest in the London Opera House to E. A. V. Stanley, chairman of the syndicate which had leased the building.

The sale was made in the name of Arthur Hammerstein, a son of Oscar, and was consummated with 48 hours after the Hammersteins had paid a $240,000 mortgage on the opera house.

Family Has Heard Nothing of Martin

MEMPHIS, May 28.—Despite rumors that Joseph W. Martin, president of the Martin-Phillips Company, whose mysterious disappearance in London was followed by the failure of the company, had communicated with his family, his relatives still deny that they have any information as to his whereabouts.

The family about two weeks ago settled debts of the firm of Martin-Phillips Company amounting to about $180,000. Following this action it was rumored that Martin would return.

Gibson Slaying Case Near Jury's Hands

NEWBURGH, N. Y., May 28.—Summing up began here to-day in the trial of Attorney Burton W. Gibson, charged with strangling Countess Rosa Menschik Szabo on Greenwood Lake on July 16 last to secure her estate.

Justice Tompkins announced to counsel that he was very anxious to have the case in the jury's hands before night.

Sulzer Ends Waste Of Seized Liquors

ALBANY, N. Y., May 28.—That many a gallon of liquor has failed in its mission as the result of raids conducted by the State Department of Excise, which for years has destroyed liquors seized, has been pointed out by the excise department.

Under a new law recently signed by Governor Sulzer confiscated liquors will be sold at auction.

WOMAN WRITES IN DEFENSE OF LEO M. FRANK

Mrs. Rebecca Brannon Declares Her Belief in Innocence of Factory Superintendent.

Mrs. Rebecca C. Brannon, 356 Forrest Avenue, a well known Atlanta woman, has written a letter to The Georgian in defense of Leo M. Frank. Mrs. Brannon, in her communication, avows a strong belief in the pencil factory superintendent's innocence, and denounces the hardships which the law has thrust upon him.

In line with its policy to present all sides of the Phagan case, The Georgian herewith prints Mrs. Brannon's letter:

In the name of God, humanity, and justice, I beg the public to suspend judgment in the case of Mr. Leo M. Frank, indicted for the murder of Mary Phagan, until he has had a fair trial before a jury of his peers.

I consider Mr. Frank an innocent man. Is it because he is a Jew that the negro's word is taken as gospel truth, and reflection cast on his testimony? From the first, pap seemed to be put in Newt Lee's mouth, as well as that of Conley, to make them say or hint that Mr. Frank was suspected by them of committing the crime.

Calls It Persecution.

What negro, with dread of lynching or summary justice being meted out to him, would not swear to a lie, and put the crime on another if he could thereby escape the consequences of his crime? And even so late as Saturday the negro Conley admitted he wrote the notes found beside the murdered girl, as he said, at the suggestion of Mr. Frank.

Is it not inconceivable to think that an astute man, planning with finesse, to kill a little girl who might possibly call for her pay envelope the following day, would take into his confidence the sweeper Conley and have him write what he contemplated putting in a note he intended to lay before her mutilated body, when he shall have murdered her the next day, and exclaiming, "There is no reason why I should hang for it!"

Oh, no! Gentlemen, this is entirely too unlikely a thing for a man of his astuteness and caliber to have done or said. There has been some colossal blunder on the part of the city detectives in rounding up the quarry.

It looks very like persecuting this man simply because he is a Jew. I like to see fair play and justice. This is the first time a Jew has ever been in any serious trouble in Atlanta, and see how ready is every one to believe the worst of him.

In the first place, Mr. Frank, in his deposition, told the hour he reached his home for dinner and supper, was seen by a number of reputable people assembled at his home that evening. He had on the same business suit he had on at his office that day and which he wore at the Coroner's inquest. If he had murdered the girl he must have had some scratches or blood marks on his person, as it was said at the time Mary Phagan had struggled with her assailant.

Cites Weak Link.

One very weak link in the State's chain of evidence is the fact that Newt Lee testified that he made a complete round of the building every half hour, yet he failed to notice the bloodstains on the floor of the metal room in making all those rounds, and then strangely went down the trap door to the basement at 3:30 on a flimsy excuse—flimsy, I say, because no one being there to prevent it, if he really wanted to go to the toilet he surely would have used the one on the upper floor in preference to going down the trap door at 3:30 to the basement closet, and in a dimly lighted place, in which he could scarcely see his hand before his face, and at an angle that the detectives at first said they could not see how he made the discovery of the body. He claimed to have made the find.

Another thing the detectives said was, that blood was still flowing from the body when they first discovered it—rigor mortis had not taken place, two facts that in my mind are irrefutable proofs that that girl was not murdered at 12 m., at 4 or at 6 o'clock in the evening, which would have been the case if Mr. Frank had murdered the little girl any time between 12 m. and 6 p. m.

I do not know Mr. Frank, but that he is a Jew he holds my especial interest and esteem, for the Jews are good, law-abiding people.

Calls Frank Innocent.

He must be a leader among his people, as he is the president of the B'nai Brith Association of Atlanta. This society is the highest Jewish organization in the world, and you can not persuade me to believe that such a splendid lot of level headed men as the Jews of Atlanta would select a moral degenerate to head their organization.

I believe Mr. Frank innocent and confidently look for his complete vindication when tried by an impartial jury of his countrymen, when the mesh of lies shall have been swept away, that at present shroud the case. Meanwhile, all my sympathies are with him.

Class of 19 Girls Graduated by Miss Hanna's School

Classic Dances Will Feature Commencement Play

Top, Miss Tommie Bryan, one of the girls who will dance in the Hanna School commencement exercises. Below, Miss Theodora Warfield.

70 to Graduate at Mercer University

MACON, GA., May 28.—Seventy young men, mostly Georgians, will graduate from Mercer University next week.

The degree of bachelor of arts will be given to 45, two will receive diplomas in pharmacy, and 23 in law.

The commencement exercises will start Sunday morning. Rev. W. W. Arnold, of Buena Vista, will preach the annual sermon. On Tuesday Dr. John E. White, of Atlanta, will deliver the literary address.

Call Custom Broken By Cabinet Women

WASHINGTON, May 28.—The Cabinet women have gone on strike against the old system of calling prevalent in Washington. They will return calls only in Senatorial, diplomatic and Supreme Court circles.

Mrs. Daniels, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, one of the women in rebellion, faced the necessity of making 900 calls in acknowledgment of the visits of Washington women.

'Endymion,' Adapted From Keats' Poem, To Be Staged at the Grand.

A class of nineteen girls will be graduated from Miss Hanna's School at 8:30 Wednesday night. The members of the class are:

Misses Eva Caroline Doyle, Frances Robena Shaw, Margaret Lucille Callahan, Marie Louise Cox, and Mary Frances Harper, who receive full course diplomas; Misses Marie Bruce Cobb, Louise Lois Donaldson, Sara Martha Liddell, Mattie Evelyn Nesbitt, Julia Margaret Callahan, Helen Jeff Atkissen, Winnie Davis, Couch, Mary Bradley, Lyra Jane Seymour, Sara Louise Thrash, Ruby Allen Anchors, Mattie Lou Morris, Frances Marion Wardlaw, and Frances Louise Kilpatrick, who have taken special courses. All are Atlanta girls.

The class officers are: Miss Mary Harper, President; Miss Mary Bradley, Vice President; Miss Marie Cox, Secretary, and Miss Frances Wardlaw, Treasurer.

The graduating exercises will be held at the Grand Theater. Immediately after the presentation of diplomas, and adaptation by Miss Hanna from Keat's poem, "Endymion" will be presented by the pupils of the school. There are over one hundred girls in the cast, the leading roles being taken by seniors. A number of graceful dances will be given during the action of the play, the scenes of which are laid in ancient Greece.

Miss Thelma Harrell, one of last year's graduates, will appear in several Grecian dances, while Miss Mamie Clyburn will sing three solos.

A feature of the performance will be an original ballet dance by Miss Theodora Warfield, who made such a hit in the Kirmess last year.

Thursday night at 8:30 the alumnae and the senior class of Miss Hanna's School will have a banquet at the Piedmont Hotel. About 200 guests are expected at the banquet, which will be followed by a dance.

This nas been one of the most successful years of the school. It is one of the oldest in Atlanta, and some of the most prominent women in Georgia are among its alumnae.

MINISTER'S WIFE ACCUSED AS SIREN

Woman in Alienation Suit Charges She Enticed Wealthy Grain Dealer From His Home.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, May 28.—Mrs. Mae Free Patterson, wife of the Rev. Gerard F. Patterson, pastor of the Church of the Incarnation, in the fashionable East End district, has been made defendant in a $10,000 alienation suit.

The action was brought by Mrs. Margaret Lloyd because of the alleged loss of the affections of her husband, Martin Van Voorhees Lloyd, a wealthy grain dealer. Mrs. Patterson is a cousin of Charles Free, vice president of the Southern Pacific Railway.

The suit charges that Mrs. Patterson enticed Lloyd from his home, that she wined and dined with Lloyd in public places, entertained him at her home and went with him to cafes, grill rooms, ball games, horse races and other places of amusement and "with her artifices, blandishments and coquetry and with malicious purpose deprived the plaintiff of her husband's society and affection."

The Lloyds have been separated since November 6, 1912.

Mystery in Death Of Woman in Lake

MINNEAPOLIS, May 28.—The body of the woman supposed to have been Mrs. George F. Gebhart, of Chicago, who committed suicide by leaping from a rowboat in Lake Como yesterday, was taken from the lake today.

Raymond Burnham, a salesman, whose address was scribbled on a note by the woman before she rowed out into the lake, has left the Andrews Hotel, Minneapolis, where he had been living.

CHIEF BEAVERS TO RENEW HIS VICE WAR

Declares That He Will "Clean Out" Disorderly Places When Hutcheson Furnishes List.

Renewed crusades to clean out vice in Atlanta have been precipitated by the publication Tuesday of an open letter to Chief of Police Beavers by Carl Hutcheson, an Atlanta attorney.

Chief Beavers called on Hutcheson with a demand for his information, asking names, addresses and character of occupants, and declared Wednesday that he would proceed to clean up if the requested information was furnished.

Hutcheson is now preparing a list of the places which he declared are immoral and told the chief he would place the list in Beavers' hands three days hence. Hutcheson was asked by the chief to swear to the character of the inmates of each house he names and to sign his name to his affidavit, and will be called as a witness in prosecuting the landlords.

"We will have some clean-up sure," said Chief Beavers Wednesday. "When I get Hutcheson's information I will prove that I am giving no protection to anybody. I would be glad to have every one report to me any resort that they might know of. It will help in the crusade. I will take speedy action against them all."

Dorsey to Confer With Felder.

Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey declared Wednesday that he would confer with Colonel T. B. Felder relative to the proposed Grand Jury probe of his corruption charges against police officials and the counter charges of bribery made against him by the police.

Colonel Felder would not comment on the affair at all, other than to say he was not yet ready to issue his statement substantiating his sensational charges.

Detective Chief Lanford issued a signed statement proposing to send Colyar handcuffed to Knoxville and Colonel Felder in charge of a detective to Columbia, S. C.

Lanford's Contribution.

"I will make this proposition to Colonel Felder," he said. "I will handcuff A. S. Colyar and send him back to Knoxville, Tenn., without requisition papers, if he (Colonel Felder) will accompany one of my men to Columbia, S. C., waiving requisition papers. Thereby I will get rid of two nuisances."

Colonel Felder issued the following statement relative to the proposed Grand Jury investigation:

"No investigation would be too exhaustive. I would be pleased to go before any committee, organization or tribunal. I have done nothing wrong. There is nothing in my whole professional career of which I am ashamed. I wish an investigation would be started."

Are You Growing As Atlanta Grows?

There are 2,000 new homes built in and around Atlanta every year.

This is the statement of the lumber mill men of Atlanta. Ask them.

1,200 of these new homes are built each year within the city limits.

This is the statement of the city tax assessors. Ask them.

With Atlanta growing at the rate of 15,000 new population every year, these figures are conservative.

Do you know what this means?

By just the percentage that Atlanta increases in population each year, by just that percentage grows the DEMAND FOR PEACHTREE HOMES.

In a year or two every available choice building lot will have been snapped up, and when you try to get one of them, you will find you will have to pay two or three times the present price.

COUNTY SEEKS CREATION TO GET ROADS

Candler Argues Its Existence Is Necessary to Benefit Prosperous Town of Metter.

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

The proposed County of Candler is to petition the incoming Legislature for creation along new lines, and with an argument not only novel, but perhaps winning.

Candler County is to ask for existence as a powerful argument in favor of good roads.

It will seek to prove its right to creation as an absolute good roads necessity—that, of course, along with other reasons likely to appeal to intelligent legislative consideration.

It is a fact that there are several parts of Georgia in which are to be found highly prosperous towns, from a business point of view, that yet are hampered mightily by reason of their remoteness from their County seats and the consequent improbability of very active good roads work in their vicinities.

In some of these places, it is claimed, road taxes in remote neighborhoods are applied exclusively to good roads work near the county seat, and that brings about not only much dissatisfaction, but positive discontent.

Metter, a prosperous and hustling town of South Georgia, is an example of this, and it is about Metter that the proposed new county of Candler is to be framed.

If Candler County is created, it is contended that, with Metter as the County seat, good roads construction will radiate from Metter throughout the neighboring territory, and that there will not be a farm in the new county not soon connected with the County seat by ample and sufficient roads.

There is great enthusiasm among the people about Metter in favor of the new county, and very little opposition from the people of the counties from which it is to be taken. Candler generally is regarded as a good new county proposition, too, and it should surprise no one, therefore, to see the new Legislature put the seal of its approval upon it.

It would be located in one of the richest and most promising sections of the entire State.

Disquieting news comes from the bedside of Representative-elect Samuel E. Berry, of Whitfield.

He recently was stricken with an acute valvular heart trouble, and has been in critical condition since, with the chances of recovery hardly even. For a time, he seemed to get better, but of late has not improved.

Mr. Berry has represented Whitfield several times in the Legislature, and is looked upon as a particularly valuable member.

The Young Men's Democratic Club of Savannah proposes taking a hand in the election of a representative to succeed Mr. Stovall, resigned.

There are certain measures which this organization desires passed, and it is probable that the club will either put out a candidate of its own or undertake to pledge some other candidate to support its bills. Indications are that there may be several aspirants for the place.

The club wants a white primary law to govern city elections. Notice of the fact that such a bill will be introduced at the coming session has been advertised in the newspapers as well as posted on the bulletin board at the Court House.

The need of such a law was impressed upon the leaders of the club at the January city election, when hundreds of negroes were bought. It was charged that both factions cooped up the colored voters in halls, and held them overnight, voting them in batches of four or five, practically under guard.

Under a white primary election law this would be eliminated, it is claimed, as in the campaign for County and State officers. The contest would be settled in the preliminary skirmish, in which the negro voter would have no part.

A well meaning member-elect of the Legislature soon to assemble in Georgia has announced his intention of introducing early in the session a resolution providing for night sessions.

His motive is worthy enough, as he says it is to prevent congestion at the end of the session—and congestion always is there, right on the job!

Notwithstanding the eminent respectability of his intent, though, the impression generally will be that he is destined to disappointment. The Legislature has had that proposition submitted to it by people who earnestly desired to get the work hurried along, but it never got anywhere. The Legislature simply will not sit more than two or three hours a day in its earlier proceedings, and the incoming Legislature is not likely to be very different from its predecessors.

The better way to conserve legislative time, perhaps, is to find some method whereby local legislation may be disposed of more readily than now.

"Whitfield County stands far above the average in the manner in which it handles its convicts," said Chairman Davidson, of the Prison Commission, who returned from a tour of inspection of that County Tuesday.

In discussing the work as a whole, Mr. Davidson said some of the counties are wasting their efforts and money under the mistaken idea that "the best warden is the one who can be secured for the least salary."

The majority of counties, the chairman added, are working their convicts at a profit.

A bill will be introduced in the Legislature seeking to abolish the City Court of Floyd County.

It will be provided in the bill, though, that the court shall not be abolished until the expiration of the term of the present judge, John C. Reece.

A further effort will be made, so it has been stated, to make Floyd County a separate judicial circuit within itself, and provide for four sittings of the court each year, instead of two, as is the law now.

The movement generally is favored in Floyd, and will not be opposed in Walker and Chattooga, the other two counties composing the Rome Superior Court circuit.

WAR IN BALKANS NEAR; POWERS ONLY CHECK

Greece and Servia Allied Against Bulgarians, Who Claim Treaty Violations.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, May 28.—Actual war between Bulgaria and the allied armies of Greece and Servia is very near, according to a statement made here to-day by M. Teodoroff, Bulgarian Minister of Finance, who is here on a political mission.

"Only tremendous pressure by the European powers can prevent a fresh conflict in the Balkans," said M. Teodoroff. "Unknown to the outside world, affairs have been getting more and more serious for months. An army of 280,000 Servians and Greeks is massed on the western and southern frontiers of Bulgaria, ready for a general outbreak.

"The contention of the Bulgarian Government is that Servia and Greece are exceeding the terms of the agreement drawn up by the Balkan league before the outbreak of the war with Turkey."

Austrian Reservists Ordered Remobilized.

VIENNA, May 28.—Remobilization of the Austrian reservists, recently dismissed when peace in the Balkans seemed near, was ordered to-day by the Government.

A telegram from Athens states that another fight between the Bulgarians and Greeks north of Salonika is imminent. The Bulgars are massing vast quantities of heavy artillery at Elevthera, about 100 miles east of Salonika.

A Sofia dispatch to The Reichspost to-day states that the Bulgarian Government has decided to submit the future status of Salonika to the powers. Tension between Bulgaria and Servia, however, is tightening.

Greeks to Fight To Hold Salonika.

SALONIKA, May 28.—Premier Vinezilos, of Greece, arrived here to-day en route to Sofia, where he will try to patch up the differences between the Greek and Bulgarian Governments.

The Greeks maintain that Salonika must remain a Hellenic possession.

King Constantine is reported to have given the impression to his staff that Greece will fight Bulgaria before she will consent to give up Salonika.

Asks Restoration of Her Conjugal Rights—Action Goes Undefended.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, May 28.—Gabrielle Ray, the famous Gaiety beauty, has brought action against her husband, Eric Loder, asking for a restoration of her conjugal rights. The action will be heard at the coming session of the divorce court and is preliminary to a suit for divorce.

Loder has made no defense. The basis of the actress' petition has not been disclosed.

Gabrielle Ray and Eric Loder, son of the late Alfred Loder and grandson of the late Sir Robert Loder, were married here March 1, 1912. Miss Ray was one of the most popular and beautiful musical comedy actresses in England. She had been showered with attentions from many notable gallants, including ex-King Manuel of Portugal, Lord Dalmeny and the Marquis of Anglesey, but she declared her heart had been touched only by the dashing young Loder, who is tall, good-looking and wealthy.

Miss Ray and Loder were to have been married at Windsor, February 29, the day that made 1912 a leap year. At the last moment the charming, bride-elect changed her mind, and literally left Loder "waiting at the church."

The next day Miss Ray relented and the marriage took place.

The Loders amassed a fortune in the tallow trade in Russia, and the baronetcy was one of the jubilee honors conferred by Queen Victoria in 1887.

Radio-Telegrams By Morse Signals

PARIS, May 28.—Professor Albert Turpain, after a series of researches extending over three years, has succeeded in solving the problem of registering radio-telegrams by Morse signals.

By using highly sensitive relays he succeeded in inscribing currents of one-millionth of a microampere. Such exactness is unnecessary, but with wires of a diameter of one-tenth of a millimeter he has constructed a relay cable to close currents of ten to twenty microamperes.

Atlantans to Build St. Joseph's School

AUGUSTA, GA., May 28.—The contract for the construction of the new St. Joseph's Academy for girls in Augusta has been awarded to the Mackie-Crawford Construction Company of Atlanta. The new buildings will be located on Monte Sano and will cost about $200,000.

The school at Washington, Ga., was burned last spring. It was then moved to Augusta, when $100,000 was raised with which ten acres of land was purchased as a site.

LITTLE ROCK, May 28.—Leading cotton men, representing buyers and sellers from all sections of the State, have formed the Arkansas Cotton Association, modeled after the Oklahoma organization.

The purpose is to promote the cotton industry and protect both buyers and sellers; to arbitrate differences and establish rules governing the cotton trade. It will meet annually in Little Rock, but the main operations are to be controlled by a board of nine directors. It adopted rules as to standard-sized bales and wrapper weight.

NO CHANGE MADE IN COTTON AND SUGAR TARIFF

Only Revision Senate Plans of Income Tax Lessens Burden on Married Men.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—The Underwood tariff bill as reported to the Democratic caucus after the revision of its various schedules by the subcommittee of the Senate Finance Committee is forecast as follows:

There will be no change in the cotton, sugar and wool schedules as written into the measure by the House with the exception of a slight increase in duty on wool manufactures.

The only change in the income tax amendment will be the aleration of sub-section D, so that a man of family will not be compelled to pay as great a tax as a single man with the same income.

In the cotton and wool schedules a period of from 60 to 90 days of grace will be extended to manufacturers before the provisions of the new bill go into effect. The rest of the bill takes effect the day after its passage.

The amendments to the Underwood bill permitting the arbitrary valuation of imports by the Secretary of the Treasury will be adopted. In the metal schedule duties on structural steel will be revised downward, while ferro-maganese and pig iron will be free listed.

Wheat, cattle and other staples whose manufactures are all on the free list also will be free listed.

Duties on pottery will be raised.

President Wilson, it was stated, has been notified of the proposed changes in the bill and has consented to the revisions.

BRYAN WILL GET "GRAPE JUICE" WELCOME

Atlanta Decorates for Secretary's Coming Monday in His Favorite Beverage.

With the coming of Colonel William Jennings Bryan on Monday all Atlanta is rallying to the support of her reputation as a grape juice center.

Grape juice in every form—in bottles big and little, square and round, and some of it as old as the vintage of last August—is making its appearance in every show window to greet the eyes of the world-renowned connoisseur, "Grape Juice Bill."

At the Capital City Club Colonel Bryan will be the guest of honor at a dinner to be given by Colonel Walter P. Andrews. No wine or other liquors will be served, but in their stead will be an abundance of grape juice cocktails, grape juice highballs, and grape juice punch. This fact was revealed in a letter of instructions to the steward of the club in which Mr. Andrews made implicit his desire that the precedent of "wineless" dinners established by the distinguished Secretary of State in Washington be followed here.

The dinner will be served at the club at 6 o'clock. It will be attended by a number of prominent Atlanta citizens.

Mr. Bryan will arrive in the city at 5 o'clock. At 8 o'clock he will deliver an address before the students of the Georgia School of Technology at the Grand Opera House.

MAKES RHEUMATISM PROMPTLY DISAPPEAR

Crippled-up Sufferers Find Relief After Few Doses of Croxone are Taken.

It is needless to suffer any longer with rheumatism, and be all crippled up, and bent out of shape with its heart-wrenching pains, when you can surely avoid it.

Rheumatism comes from weak, inactive kidneys, that fail to filter from the blod the poisonous waste matter and uric acid; and it is useless to rub on liniments or take ordinary remedies to relieve the pain. This only prolongs the misery.

The only way to cure rheumatism is to remove the cause. The new discovery, Croxone, does this because it neutralizes and dissolves all the poisonous substances and uric acid that lodge in the joints and muscles, to scratch and irritate and cause rheumatism, and cleans out and strengthens the stopped up, inactive kidneys, so they can filter all the poison from the blod, and drive it on and out of the system.

Croxone is the most wonderful medicine ever made for chronic rheumatism, kidney troubles, and bladder disorders. You will find it different from all other remedies. There is nothing else on earth like it. It matters not how old you are, or how long you have suffered, it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results. You will find relief from the first few doses, and you will be surprised how quickly all misery and suffering will end.

An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle at any first-class drug store. All druggists are authorized to sell it on a positive money-back guarantee. Three doses a day for a few days is often all that is ever needed to overcome the worst backache or urinary disorders.

FRISCO SYSTEM IN RECEIVERS' HANDS

C. & E. I. Also Is in Bankruptcy Because of Tightness in the Money Market.

ST. LOUIS, May 28.—The expected receivership for the St. Louis and San Francisco (the Frisco System) and the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroads was recorded here to-day. Thomas H. West, chairman of the board of directors of the St. Louis Trust Company, and B. L. Winchell, president of the Frisco lines, were appointed receivers of the Frisco properties by Judge Sanborn here.

In Chicago at the same time Federal Judge Carpenter appointed W. J. Jackson, vice president and general manager of the C. & E. I., and Edwin W. Winter, of New York, as receivers for the C. & E. I.

The direct cause of the receivership was given as the tightness of the money market. The liabilities of the C. & E. I. were placed at $80,000,000 and those of the Frisco at $200,000,000.

CLARK HOWELL AND THE WORK OF BEAVERS

No Attack Was Made by the Chief of Police—Editor Makes His Position Clear.

The following letter from Chief Beavers and the interview with Mr. Clark Howell explain themselves:

Atlanta, Ga., May 27.

My attention has been called to an article in the Sunday papers in which an interview with me makes it appear that I was attacking Mr. Clark Howell personally and his policy with The Constitution.

I only repeated the conversation I had with him on the next day after he returned from Panama on about March 1, this year.

I meant no reflection on Mr. Howell, but only had reference to certain local reports in his paper, and he now assures me that there was no intention on his part to discredit the work which I have been trying to do in this city, and that the article that appeared in the reportorial columns of The Constitution was without his knowledge and consent, and that it was not his intention nor does he approve of anything that would in the least hinder or discredit the work that the police department has been trying to carry out.

I would regret very much indeed to have any utterance of mine construed into an attack upon Mr. Howell, whom I have always regarded, and now esteem, as an exemplary citizen and journalist who holds the merited confidence of the public, as he does of my department and of myself.

J. L. BEAVERS,
Chief of Police.

In reference to Chief Beavers' statement Mr. Howell said:

"During my absence in Panama in January a police raid was made on a certain downtown rooming hotel. The Constitution next morning locally reported the affair and the fact that a man and his wife were subjected to undue treatment, with comment from the inadvertent victims and the manager of the hotel.

"When I returned from Panama the Chief complained of the local report referred to. I explained to him that nothing was further from our intention than to discredit his work, and that following The Constitution's oft-repeated commendation of his high sense of duty in endeavoring to enforce the law, he would have our cordial support to that end.

"He thanked me, recalling the fact that two days after the houses were closed I had sent for him to tell him that his attitude would have The Constitution's support.

"Next morning—September 26—The Constitution's leading editorial, 'A Wholesome Example,' unqualifiedly approved the Chief as 'an official with the nerve and the courage to enforce the law,' stating that 'he has set a singularly wholesome example of a blunt interpretation of duty.'

"I am still of the opinion that no good citizen would invite the return of the segregated district, nor the spread of its attendant evil in other directions. In my talk with the Chief I expressed my doubt as to his ability to absolutely eliminate the evil, and while the segregated district has been closed we are still wrestling with other phases of the problem.

"I think the Chief is doing the best he can, and he should have the support of all good citizens in his efforts."

CATTLE TICK IS COSTING STATE $6,000,000

Veterinarian's Report Discloses Astounding Facts—Tuberculosis Menace to Health.

The State of Georgia is losing $6,000,000 annually from tick infestation.

The losses from the ravages of hog cholera reached $1,000,000 in 1912.

Tuberculosis in cattle is spreading through the State with alarming rapidity and threatens to infect every herd.

Slaughter house conditions are in a deplorable state in most parts of Georgia.

These are the startling facts revealed in the annual report of State Veterinarian Peter F. Bahnsen, issued Wednesday.

For the amelioration of these conditions Dr. Bahnsen recommends an appropriation of $30,000. He cites the conservation of human health as the absolute and pressing necessity for the expenditure of this amount.

Losses Are Enormous.

"Our losses from tick infestation," reads the report, "are under present conditions in excess of $6,000,000 annually.' All of this enormous waste could be stopped in a few years with a sufficient fund to employ cattle inspectors, and by appealing to the counties and the Federal Government for increased aid.

"Hog cholera cost the State not less than $1,000,000 in 1912, or approximately 20 per cent of the total value of the hogs owned in this State.

"Tuberculosis is prevalent to a considerable extent among the dairy cattle of the State. The milk of tuberculous cattle is dangerous to man and the health of our people is in the balance. We have taken this matter in hand with the limited means available and the public is anxious that our services along this line be extended into a State-wide movement. Our greatest need in this matter is more funds for extending the work.

Slaughter Houses Menace.

"Slaughter house conditions are extremely bad in most sections of the State and the public is frequently fed on meat not fit for human consumption. Animals with communicable diseases are often slaughtered and sold without restriction and the sanitary conditions of fully 70 per cent of our slaughter houses is a crying shame. It demands rigid State supervision.

"We should have an appropriation of not less than $30,000 for this work. It is essential in conserving the health of the people that their food products be obtained from healthy animals and handled and distributed under conditions that will prevent subsequent contamination or putrefaction."

Wife Kidnaped Him And Kept Him Drunk

CHICAGO, May 28.—That he was kidnaped by his wife, whom he is suing for divorce, taken to New York and kept under the influence of champagne and cocktails, was the statement of Louis Frank, a saloon keeper, in an affidavit filed to-day.

About two weeks ago a stipulation dismissing Frank's divorce suit was filed by Mrs. Frank's attorneys, who said Frank and his wife were reconciled and living in New York. This Frank denies.

The Rev. Philip Sidersky, of Baltimore, will give a stereopticon lecture at the Central Presbyterian Church Wednesday night. His lecture will be on "The Hebrews' Relationship to Christianity."

Mr. Sidersky is a Presbyterian minister and is superintendent of the Emmanuel Mission to the Jews in Baltimore.

Dr. Dunbar Ogden will have charge of the services.

Bath Cost Her $108; Finds Shoe Poor Bank

BOSTON, May 28.—Mrs. Mary Garabedian says her bath at the Cambridge Field Public Bathhouse cost her $108. Said Mrs. Garabedian:

"I paid 2 cents for a piece of soap and a towel. Instead of giving my valuables to the clerk I hid them in one of my shoes. When I came back the articles were gone, although the shoe remained."

Mrs. Garabedian is out exactly the price of 5,401 baths.

'Greek Letter' Men Seek to Save Frats

MACON, GA., May 28.—More than 200 Phi Delta Thetas have petitioned the faculty and trustees of Mercer University not to take any definite action on the proposal to abolish Greek letter fraternities at Mercer until they are given an opportunity to be heard.

The faculty will hold a special meeting this afternoon to pass on an abolition petition signed by 200 non-frats. The faculty's recommendation will be made to the trustees next week.

Fight of Children Causes Fatal Duel

NASHVILLE, TENN., May 28.—In a street duel, growing out of a rock battle between two children in North Nashville, Thomas Farrel, a deputy sheriff, was shot to death and Matt and Wallie S. Smith, father and son, were seriously wounded.

COL. NASH TO TRAIN RIVERSIDE CADETS

New Commandant Takes Charge at Military and Naval Academy on June 1.

GAINESVILLE, GA., May 28.—Colonel J. Q. Nash has been appointed commandant of the cadet corps at Riverside Military and Naval Academy. He will take charge June 1.

Few cadet commandants in Southern preparatory schools are better known than Colonel Nash. He has been instructor of more Georgia youths in military tactics than any man in the State. His selection is a distinct accusition to Riverside's faculty.

Colonel Nash was graduated with first honor from Gordon College in 1896. He was superintendent of the public schools of Henry County; vice president and commandant of Reinhardt College, and commandant of Gordon Institute for several years. His more recent position has been commanding officer and instructor in the Georgia Military Academy.

The adjutant general of the National Guard of Georgia has detailed Colonel Nash as instructor and inspector in camp and target practice. He was detailed by the Governor to serve on the staff of the grand marshal at the inauguration of President Roosevelt and again at the inauguration of President Taft. He holds commissions with the National Guard from second lieutenant to lieutenant colonel and as assistant inspector general of Georgia.

'Astral Scarf' Is the Capital's Latest Fad

WASHINGTON, May 28.—The "astral scarf," which in its delicate colors reproduces the spiritual atmosphere, or aura, surrounding the wearer, has made its appearance here. Society women are busy consulting students of the occult to ascertain exactly what their astral colors are.

Mrs. George Hagner, of the famous Hagner family, one member of which is Miss Isabella Hagner, Mrs. Wilson's confidential secretary, is responsible for this fad.

HUNT FOR YOUNG CONDUCTOR VAIN

Wife of W. S. Culpepper, Who Disappeared in Atlanta Monday, Fears Foul Play.

Culpepper, who is 24 years old, a freight conductor on the Georgia Railroad, disappeared in Atlanta Monday afternoon. He was due to take out No. 210 Monday night, but failed to appear at the scheduled time.

Fearing he had been injured, his friends visited every hospital and infirmary in Atlanta Tuesday morning and also inquired at the police station, but in vain.

Culpepper lived a temperate life, has a good character, was devoted to his family and was popular among officials and workingmen of the Georgia Railroad. He had just been promoted to conductor. The theory of a voluntary flight is scouted by his family and friends. The young wife fears her husband has met with foul play.

Translator Invents Universal Language

WASHINGTON, May 28.—"Veltlang" is the name that has been given to a new language which Professor Frederick J. Braendle, official translator of the United States Pension Office, has invented.

Professor Braendle describes his language, as the name indicates, as a "world language." In point of fact it is a universalized English, but with a new alphabet and new numerical additions.

2,000 TO MARCH IN BIG HOLIDAY PARADE

Pageant by Retailers June 4 Will Eclipse Anything of Its Kind Ever Seen in Atlanta.

With practically all plans completed for the pageant, local retail grocers and clerks Wednesday are predicting that the parade of June 4, with which they will celebrate the opening of the "Wednesday closing" season, will be one of the greatest ever seen in Atlanta.

F. E. Kamper, chairman of the arrangements committee, in charge of active preparations for the parade, declares nothing that has ever been held in Atlanta in the past will even approach it in interest. "It is a sure thing," declared Mr. Kamper, "that when we get through the people of Atlanta will know that clerks and retailers appreciate the opportunity of getting a half-holiday every week. The parade we are going to pull off will make the circus parades look sick."

And a glance at the arrangements induces the belief that Mr. Kamper knows what he is talking about. Probably 2,000 men will march in the parade, and Atlantans will see some weird costumes. Three miles of wagons and automobiles, decorated and emblazoned with banners, will follow the marchers. Five mounted policemen, the handsomest and bravest of Chief Beavers' force, will ride at the head of the column.

Three Brass Bands.

Three brass bands will tread proudly in the ranks.

Following the mounted policemen and a brass band will come aides and their marshals as follows: F. E. Kamper, H. Winberg, C. J. McCoy, R. H. Comer, W. J. Burton, J. H Merritt, J. F. McNair and W. A. Byers. Each of these men will appoint five assistants to ride with him, and all will be clothed in uniforms that represent the last word in splendor.

The parade will form near the Capitol, on Washington, Hunter, Mitchell, Whitehall and other nearby streets. The exact route of the parade has not been determined, but it probably will be down to Whitehall and up Peachtree, until everybody gets tired. The rivalry among the merchants for the best decorated wagon and automobile already has begun, and some unique schemes in decoration are promised.

The celebration will not be confined to retailers. Wholesalers have expressed a desire to send their automobile trucks to the parade, and ice manufacturers, bakers, packers and the commission merchants also will work to make the parade a success.

Many lines of business were represented at the Taft Hall meeting Tuesday night, and every representative of every line pledged the assistance of himself and his fellows to making the parade a success. E. L. Adams was there to ladle out encouragement in behalf of the jobbers of the city, and J. D. Simmons told how far the City Salesmen's Association would go to make the affair a success. Then there were wholesalers, retail grocers, bakers, commission men, clerks and employees galore.

All Boost Atlanta.

Several stirring addresses were made, all emphasizing the necessity of working together and boosting for Atlanta. Among the speakers were Harry L. Schlesinger, father of the closing movement; Hon. John Y. Smith, Representative-elect from Fulton County; O. T. Camp, a consistent booster for the parade; E. L. Adams, of the jobbers; John McCullough, of the commission merchants; Olin Stamps, who boosts anything and everything pertaining to the good of the city; L. E. Rogers, one of the live wires among the clerks, and John Bratton, of the Georgia Retail Grocers' Association.

Before adjourning the clerks extended a vote of thanks to their employers for the half-holiday. It was announced by Mr. Schlesinger that more than 800 grocers had signed an agreement to close at noon every Wednesday through the months of June, July and August. Merchants in East Point also have joined in the movement and will take part in the parade.

DECATUR PLANS BIG HOME-COMING

Reception Committee Arranging New Festivities to Make June 3 a Memorable Day.

Extra festivities are being planned every day for Decatur's home-coming day and smoker on June 3. The reception committee of the Board of Trade will meet to-night at organization headquarters in the Weekes Building. Mayor John A. Montgomery is chairman of this committee.

The day and the night of June 3 will be, in effect, one continuous good time. The morning will be given over to oratory. Dr. Soule, of the State Agricultural College, will speak on DeKalb County's opportunities for truck farming, dairying and poultry raising; E. F. Smith on ways and means of locating the Fifth District Agricultural School in DeKalb County; C. Murphy Candler on the life and accomplishments of Jefferson Davis.

The afternoon will be made memorable by the laying of the cornerstone of Decatur's new $25,000 school, under the auspices of the Masons. George M. Napier is the orator of the day, while five-minute addresses will be made by Mayor Montgomery, J. Howell Green and Hooper Alexander.

Some time during the day a shield will be presented to the Decatur troop of Boy Scouts. The shield is a trophy of a recent field day contest. All Atlanta Boy Scout troops, with their drum corps, will participate in the presentation.

The second smoker of the Board of Trade will be held at 6:30 o'clock, as the concluding event of home-coming day. "GOOD EATS" will be served, followed by things to smoke, with music throughout. Good speakers will entertain the crowd, which is expected to be large.

Instant Postum

Is in thousands of homes where health is valued.

Former coffee users who have felt the pinch of indigestion, headache, heart disturbance, nervous irritation, etc., have written by the score, telling of remarkable benefits following the change from coffee to Instant Postum.

A level teaspoonful in an ordinary cup of hot water dissolves instantly and makes it right for most persons.

A big cup requires more and some people who like strong things put in a heaping spoonful and temper it with a large supply of cream.

Experiment until you know the amount that pleases your palate and have it served that way in the future.

"Thanks for the sample of Instant Postum sent me. I had been drinking coffee for a long time and thought it would be difficult to give it up, but I was mistaken.

"While I was drinking coffee I always felt exhausted and I weighed but 112 pounds. After using Instant Postum I soon recovered and now am as healthy as any person can be. I now weigh 120 pounds and am steadily gaining in weight. Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Postum comes in two forms.

Regular (must be boiled).

Instant Postum doesn't require boiling, but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water.

Both kinds are sold by grocers everywhere.

TALLULAH FALLS LAND SUIT WILL GO TO JURY THURSDAY

State Ends Its Introduction of Testimony—Defense Finishes Tuesday Afternoon.

CLAYTON, GA., May 28.—All testimony, it is expected, will have been heard and arguments begun in the suits of the State of Georgia against the Georgia Railway and Power Company to determine the ownership of the Tallulah Falls gorge by the time the afternoon session of Rabun Superior Court adjourns to-day.

All of the State's evidence was concluded at this morning's session. That of the defense is expected to be concluded in the afternoon in time for attorneys to begin their speeches to the jury. The case will probably go to the jury Thursday morning and a verdict is expected by the afternoon.

The State began the introduction of testimony when court reconvened Tuesday afternoon. Old residents of Tallulah Falls, ranging from 60 to 70 years of age, who had lived there practically their entire lives, were offered as State's witnesses. They testified that of their own knowledge, hearsay and tradition former holders of the land along the Tallulah Gorge, now in dispute, and those who transferred the property to the power company did not lay claim to the land in the gorge, but only to the gorge's brink.

Professor Strong, of the University of Georgia, who, with Professor Koch, also of the university, made surveys of the disputed property and reported on it to the Governor and Attorney General, testified as to this survey and report, on which at the time the State officials declined to bring suit. Numerous maps and plats of the falls property were filed as exhibits to Professor Strong's testimony.

Further documentary evidence was introduced by the State this morning.

It was generally expected before the noon adjournment that the defense would offer a motion for a non-suit, which would be overruled by Judge J. B. Jones, president, and then the defense would offer its testimony, principally in documentary form.

LATEST DECREE IN RIDING HABITS IS FLAT-BRIMMED TILE

MISS ELIZABETH BIGELOW.

The new dress and flat brimmed "tile" worn by Miss Bigelow at the Brookline Country Club's annual Horse Show caused widespread comment in the Hub's Social circles.

Equestriennes of Atlanta, this is the last word in women's riding habits:

Also it was the most talked of costume worn at the revival of the Horse Show of the Brookline Country Club, and to-day tailors all through Boston and the surrounding countryside are beset by equestrian enthusiasts for duplicates. The costume was worn by Miss Elizabeth Bigelow, one of the most noted of the Boston women who have in recent years taken to the saddle as a means of recreation.

The usual pique stock is discarded by Miss Bigelow in favor of a straight standing collar of white linen with a broad tie of black. This closely resembles the style of 60 years ago and gives a decidedly natty appearance to the wearer. In place of the conservative black derby Miss Bigelow wears the bell-shaped silk tile, with a flat rim, fitting snugly over the head and which, it is said, "sticks" much more closely to the head of the rider than the small crowned derby.

Miss Bigelow's coat is of a dark material and hangs closely to the figure and displays to an excellent degree her trim, clean-cut figure. The young woman, who is one of the most popular society leaders in the "Hub's smart set," rode to a decided advantage in the various rings in which she competed, and her general appearance added to the enthusiasm with which she was greeted by the spectators and gallery.

4 PINNED BENEATH OVERTURNED AUTO

Fifth Passenger in Wrecked Car Summons Help to Extricate Others and Chauffeur.

MARIETTA, GA., May 28.—Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Flemister, Miss Charlotte Flemister, Miss Charlotte Fite and a negro chauffeur, all of Cartersville, were injured when Mr. Flemister's automobile to-day turned turtle two miles from Marietta, near Fair Oaks. None suffered broken bones.

Mrs. Flemister's condition is serious from the shock. She had been in a highly nervous state for two weeks following the death of her baby.

The accident occurred when a front wheel came off. It was said a garage attendant at Cartersville had warned Mr. Flemister of danger from this wheel.

The chauffeur was pinioned to the ground by the steering wheel and Mrs. Flemister was caught under the back of a seat, while Mr. Flemister and his daughter were held down by the body of the car. Miss Fite alone was able to extricate herself. She summoned nearby cotton field hands, who lifted the car from the victims. They were brought to Marietta by a passing auto for medical attention.

Mr. Flemister is a wholesale grocer of Cartersville.

Carolina Desperado Not Slain; Captured

SAVANNAH, GA., May 28.—Richard Henry Austin, South Carolina assailant and murderer, reported killed near Sylvania yesterday, is still alive. He was desperately wounded and captured in the swamps near Newington last night, was brought to Savannah to-day, being safely lodged in the Chatham County jail. He admits his identity, but maintains that he did not commit the assault charged to him.

It is hardly expected that the negre will live to be tried. There has been some talk of an attempt to lynch Austin, but no such trouble is anticipated by the police or Sheriff.

STRENGTH IN WHEAT BASED ON HOT WINDS

CHICAGO, May 28.—The Inter Ocean says: "Hot winds were reported in the Southwest last night and the Kansas City curb on wheat was up ⅝ of a cent. Chicago was the weakest market yesterday, which bulls attributed to the break in corn. With unfavorable crop reports and a few days of dry, hot weather bulls are looking for higher prices and said wheat should be bought on breaks.

"It was the theory of the bears that the crop scare has been worked for all it was worth for the time being and wheat should be sold on all bulges. Corn traders believe that there will be little in it for the bulls in May corn the balance of the month. The trade has been largely evened up as indicated by the bulge Monday and the break of yesterday.

"It would not be surprising to see fireworks in May oats in the two and a half trading days remaining of the month, including to-day. Those who have watched the market say that the open interest is larger than it is possible for the shorts to deliver and they will have to go into the pit and cover."

MRS. SLATON ASKS FREE PARK MUSIC

Goes Before Finance Committee, Urging Appropriation—Traction Company Offers Aid.

The Fifth Regiment band will give another musical concert in Grant Park Sunday afternoon, the Georgia Railway and Power Company having donated a sum for it.

Unless Council makes an appropriation for park music there will be no more concerts this season, though W. H. Glenn, manager of the railway department of the company, said his company was willing to supplement any appropriation Council might make, but that it would not pay the full cost.

Mrs. John M. Slaton, wife of the Governor-elect, went before the Finance Committee of Council and pleaded for a fund for free music. She said it was recognized by the whole country that Atlanta was a music-loving city and it was the duty of Council to stimulate this feeling.

Councilman Claude L. Ashley, author of a resolution to appropriate $5,000 for music in both Grant and Piedmont Parks, said he felt sure a good sum would be given when the Finance Committee met Friday and made up the June budget.

Eloper Glenn Out Of Jail on $250 Bond

L. J. Glenn, who has been confined in the Tower since the first part of April, when he was brought back to Atlanta to answer a charge of abandoning his two little children to elope with Mrs. Ione Pidcock, wife of a railroad president, was released under a $250 bond Wednesday morning.

Glenn said he would remain in Atlanto until the divorce proceedings brought by his wife were heard.

Glenn's father, G. F. Glenn, secured his bond. His attorney is L. F. McClelland.

George Mau Officer Of German Societies

CHARLESTON, S. C., May 31.—Savannah will be the next meeting place of the South Atlantic German Societies.

President Moellring, Savannah; first vice president, George Mau, Atlanta, are among the officers re-elected. William Neisi, Brunswick, and Louis Scheibe, Macon, fifth and sixth vice presidents; H. E. Dreeson, Savannah, treasurer, and Paul Wierse, Charleston, secretary, are new officers.

Works 18 Years as Clerk Without Pay

MONTPELIER, IND., May 28.—J. Stewart, who died here to-day, had worked eighteen years as a cigar clerk without pay.

Although offered money by his employer, he would accept only 15 cents three times a day to buy meals.

ROUND-ABOUT-TOWN STORIES

Why Do Folks Pull Flowers in Parks?

"It sure gets my nanny," said the park policeman, "why some folks will come out here and pull flowers. The park commission spends a lot of money getting plants and a lot more to keep them in good condition and then along comes somebody and crabs the whole act by tearing off a bunch of the flowers.

"Last Sunday a young fellow came out here and nothing would do but he must have a magnolia. He thought they were pretty. So they were; but that gave him no license to pull a blossom. But he did just the same. I happened to see him after he had secured the flower and I called him.

"'Here,' said I, 'is a copy of charges. Suppose you straighten out this little affair with the Recorder.'

"'Why, I didn't know there was any harm in taking these flowers,' said he.

"'Well, what do you suppose we got 'em out here for?' I told him. 'These flowers belong to the city and they are put here to be looked at, that's all. If you want to give your best girl a bouquet why don't you go to the florist's? That's what they are in business for.'

"'I don't see any sign out here saying not to pull flowers,' says he, nettled I guess about that best girl remark of mine.

"'Sure, you don't, I says. 'An' what's more, you don't see no sign tellin' you to fall in the lake or commit suicide, yet I haven't seen you tryin' to do either.'

"He didn't have any answer for that one and I guess he was some wiser when he went home. And next day he paid his little fine like a man. Bet HE don't pull any more magnolias in Grant Park."

Motion Picture Show Takes Place of Nurse.

Out in West End women with small children have solved a problem. They have learned how to get along without nurses. Of course those with babies are not so fortunate, but the ones whose youngsters can run about are reaping the reward of ingeniousness.

Now when a mother wants to go to the matinee or shopping in town she doesn't have to call in mother-in-law or a neighbor to look after the children until she gets back. The plan is much more simple and gives general satisfaction. She takes them to a motion picture show.

It should be known, of course, that West End boasts a full-fledged "movie" show. The children go in droves every day and the proprietor must be an all-fired generous soul because the kiddies just stay and stay and stay. He never asks them to go out. And that is the real secret of the scheme taken advantage of by the mothers.

Mrs. West End decides that she wants to go shopping. She washes and dresses Bobbie and Harry and Gertrude and escorts them to the picture show. She pays 15 cents and the three young ones hike in to see the show. And there they stay. Mrs. West End goes to town, travels from one store to another until exhausted and returns homeward. She stops at the picture show and there is Bobbie and Harry and Gertrude still gazing in speechless ecstasy at the pictures on the screen.

What matters it if they have seen the same films half a dozen times that afternoon? They get just as much fun out of it as if they observed them for the first time. Mrs. West End calls her darlings and they all return home. Mamma is satisfied, the youngsters are decidedly so and Mr. Picture Man evidently is, because next time he is just as smiling as ever.

means that scrupulous care has been given every detail of construction; that every part has been manufactured by the W. W. Kimball Company; that it has been made by skilled workmen, under the direction of experts in their respective lines. That ability, experience and responsibility are back of the piano. The ear and eye can judge of the the construction, case design and the finish, but you must look to the name for reliability of construction, and the assurance that the good qualities will endure. The house of KIMBALL has had an experience of over fifty years in the music industry, and artists, amateurs, and thousands of satisfied customers give abundant proof of the merit of the Kimball.

We are showing a large variety of styles in 88-note Player Pianos and Uprights. We have your choice in woods, such as Rosewood, Walnut, Circassian Walnut, Oak, Mission, Satin Mahogany and Mahogany. Prices ranging from $195 to $1,250.

Our one, absolutely one, price insures you, whether an experienced buyer or not, of securing the best instrument for the amount you wish to pay. It is not safe to buy a piano, or any other article of merchandise, from a dealer who has a sliding scale of prices, because you will never know when he has given you his lowest price. Then, too, your neighbor may buy the same merchandise for from $50 to $75 less money. A piano has but one value, and that should fix its price—the right price. Each and every instrument on our wareroom floor is tagged at the cash figure, and no one pays more or less.

It is not only safe, but pleasant, to deal with the world's largest manufacturers of Pianos, Player Pianos, Residence and Church Pipe Organs, through this Branch Store.

WOODMEN HOSTS TO LODGE HEAD

John T. Yates, Visiting Atlanta Camps, Praises Georgia Bonds as Investment.

John T. Yates, of Omaha, Nebr., sovereign secretary of the Woodmen of the World, was the guest of honor at a reception given by the local camp of the order Tuesday night at Cable Hall.

Mr. Yates, accompanied by his wife, arrived in Atlanta Tuesday morning and leaves at noon Thursday for Macon, Columbus and other Georgia cities. He is en route to the biennial convention of the Woodmen at Jacksonville, which meets early in June.

Dr. F. L. Rosenthal, of Columbus, Ga., head consul of Georgia for the order, welcomed Mr. Yates to Atlanta, and Judge W. A. Roan made a short talk on the good of the order.

Mr. Yates said this was his first visit to Atlanta in fifteen years, and that there was a wonderful change.

"Especially noticeable is the cosmopolitan and metropolitan air of your city," he said.

Mr. Yates intends to purchase more Georgia bonds for the Woodmen.

"Georgia has the best bond laws of any State," he said, "and for that reason Georgia bonds will sell higher than those of other States. The Woodmen of the World already has purchased nearly $100,000 worth of bonds in this State."

Mr. and Mrs. Yates were taken on an automobile tour of the city Wednesday. They are stopping at the Piedmont Hotel.

Sunday, June 8, a special train, bringing Woodmen from Iowa, Illinois, Indiana and other Middle Western States, will stop for a few hours in Atlanta. The visiting members will be tendered a luncheon by the local camps at the Piedmont Hotel.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"District Leader" Pleases.

The splendid impression created by "The District Leader" at the Monday performances is doubtless responsible for the crowds that are flocking to the Bijou this week. With an interesting plot, tuneful musical numbers, pretty girls and dances, "The District Leader" is most pleasing.

There will be a matinee every afternoon at 3 o'clock, except on Saturday, when matinees will be at 2:30 and 4.

The SOCIAL WORLD

No social date of the near future promises more pleasure than an evening with the Players' Club, which appears at the Grand Opera House on Tuesday in a brilliant farce comedy by Oscar Wilde, "The Importance of Being in Earnest." The circle of boxes will be filled with handsomely gowned women and men in evening dress, and many theater parties will be scattered through the audience. There will be supper parties after the show at the Piedmont Driving Club.

Among those who will entertain box parties are Governor-elect and Mrs. Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Speer, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson, Judge and Mrs. Arthur Powell, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Cooney, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. B. Felder, Mrs. William D. Grant and others.

There is brisk demand for tickets. The play will be given by a talented cast, which includes Mrs. Slaton, Miss Hildreth Burton-Smith, Mrs. William Owens, Mrs. H. B. Scott; Messrs. Lamar Hill, Marshall Adair, Hamilton Douglas, Jr., and Frank Taylor.

Miss Dean Hostess.

Miss Marian Dean entertained at a hearts dice party Wednesday morning at her home in Peachtree Circle for her guest, Miss Louise Bloodworth, of Forsyth. Sweetpeas in various shades decorated the house. A fan, white silk hose and a basket of sweetpeas were given to winners of the highest scores.

Miss Dean wore a white embroidered mull. Her guest also was in white, a lacey frock with ribbons of blue satin.

Guests were Misses Martha Hall, Mary Burr Lake, Hallie Crawford, Emily West, Marie Stoddard, Lucile Young, Lucile Thomas, Helen Tucker, Ludie Speer, Phoebe Harman, Lorine Connally, Nedra and Katherine Turner, Carrilou Born and Nancy Coleman.

Miss Hanson to Judge Babies.

Beautiful Druid Hills will be visited Saturday by thousands who never have been there before. Ample arrangements will be made for street cars to handle the crowds.

A baby show will be held on the lawn of Dr. Charles Campbell's home from 3 to 4 o'clock. Handsome prizes will be awarded to children from three months to four years old. Twins will receive special attention.

Prizes will be presented by Miss Gladys Hanson.

At 4 o'clock, the pageant, having formed on the lawn of Mrs. S. C. Dobbs, will begin the grand march, preceded by the band and led by Mother Goose. Three hundred chairs will be placed on Mrs. Clyde King's lawn.

After the parade tableaux will be formed with Mother Goose and her family in the more important events. Then fancy dances will be given by pupils of Miss Moseley's school. This will be followed by the dance of the fairies and the crowning of the queen. After this there will be general dancing, which will continue into the early evening.

Ice cream cones, candy and other things dear to the heart of childhood will be on hand as well as a fat and mysterious grab bag.

A cake sale will be one of the features. Many elegant home-made cakes have been donated.

W. C. T. U. Meeting.

A Shower of

Remnants

Of White and Colored
Cotton and Mixed Fabrics

At Half-Price

Quite impossible to tell you on paper all it means to women to be able to select from such an assortment of desirable fabrics as these—the season's most popular materials, reduced by active selling, to short lengths—at half-price.

Wonderful assemblage—larger in its scope, more varied in its kinds than any previous sale of Remnants. You can hardly think of a practical or desirable fabric that is not among them—from the least expensive gingham to silk-and-cotton mixed novelties, and each piece means the saving of exactly half.

The collection is made up about equally of white and colored goods, including such as ratines, voiles, Swisses, poplins, seco silks, chiffon lisse, silk-and-cotton mixed goods, crepes, piques, luna lawns, Persian lawns, dimities, nainsooks, madras, ginghams, percales, and various others.

Lengths varying from two yards to dress patterns, of which there is a goodly supply.

A Duty to Look Well

By Virginia T. Van De Water.

A WOMAN was running a piece of pink ribbon into a dainty underwaist. Her small son, aged six, stood watching her. At last he spoke out his thought—

"Mama, why do you put ribbon in that thing?"

"To draw it up on the shoulders and fasten it with," was the smiling explanation.

"Wouldn't a piece of twine do as well?" queried the lad soberly.

The mother paused a moment, concealing the amusement she felt. Then she spoke gravely and frankly.

"No, dear," she said, "twine might fasten it, but it would not do as well, for it is not as pretty as ribbon."

A Real Duty.

A man might have considered that reply evidence of a feminine lack of logic. To the woman who thinks long it held a truth that it is well to consider. When, without sacrifice of principle or duty, one can make of a practical thing also a pretty thing, it is a mistake—almost a wrong—not to do it.

The small boy, as he grew older, learned to admire the dainty, delicate touches in his mother's apparel. "My mother always looks nice," he used to say when the matter of woman's appearance was discussed.

I know one woman who seems to think that she does God service in looking as plain as possible. She is scrupulously neat in appearance, but her mental attitude reminds one of the small boy's question: "Wouldn't a piece of twine do as well?" All the appointments of her home are plain and substantial, bought—like Mrs. Primrose's wedding dress—with a thought of durability rather than of beauty. She scorns fine china, and considers cut glass a useless folly of the rich. As to solid silver, why should one use it when plated ware carries the food to one's mouth just as effectually?

Of course, she has a scorn of all "modern notions," such as centerpieces, doilies and "place-plates." "Useless nuisances," she says sententiously. I often wonder how her children ar'going to regard the home of their childhood when they go out into the world and see the dainty accessories of dress and furnishings which are unknown in their family and household. Fortunately this woman is the exception, not the rule, of her sex when she declares: "It is a mark of weakness to spend time on ornamentation and convention."

Don't Look Homely!

Were we all to adopt this principle through life how many hard and ugly corners there would be, corners that are now rounded or hidden!

To look as homely as one can is no more a virtue than to be as frankly disagreeable as one sometimes feels like being. Few of us can be handsome, but we need not elect to be positively ugly—if we can help it. In fact to mitigate the bad points in our personal appearance and to emphasize the good ones is an actual duty.

Perhaps some one asks to whom one owes this duty. The answer is plain. One owes it to the world at large, but, primarily, to one's own family. Surely it is the business of both man and woman to look as well as he and she can.

It is not always convenient to fuss over one's personal appearance when the mercury climbs up toward the hundred mark, but when one acquires the habit of invariably looking as well as is conformable with one's other duties, one will not be satisfied to wear a dark calico wrapper instead of a dainty and equally cool negligee—even for "home people" only.

The Mistakes of Jennie

By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City.

Tom found Jennie a little crumpled heap on the sofa.

Chapter 6.

AS THE MAN held Jennie tight in his arms, kissing her—she at last realized his intentions and could THEN see clearly the meaning of the dinner in the swell restaurant and the auto ride into the country. Jennie fought and struck the man in the face as hard as she could—whereupon the former "so polite and fatherly" MAN turned into the beast he was at heart—held her tight against the wall choking her. When he realized there was nothing to be gained that way he tried to treat the whole thing as a joke. Jennie watched her chance and did more THINKING in the next few seconds than she has ever taken the TROUBLE to do before. THE MAN told her the proprietor of the place was a friend of his and it would be of no use for her to make a scene, for she couldn't leave the place until he got good and ready for her to leave. Then he offered her fine dresses, diamonds, anything she wanted—so why not be a "good fellow."

THE MAN was between Jennie and the door and she saw it was useless to try and get out that way—the window opened out onto a porch and before the man could get around the table to catch her, she was through it and running up the road for her life. She ran and ran, dodging off the road into some woods. The branches tore her face and dress but she kept on till she could run no more. She sat down on an old log and listened but could hear no one following. There she sat in her little torn dress shaking and crying until she realized it was getting dark. She wandered on through the woods and came to a farm house where she found an old lady who, after hearing her story, loaned her enough money for the railroad fare home.

Tom came over to her house that evening after wondering all day where she could have gone and found Jennie a little crumpled heap on the front room sofa.

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS.

Gordon Kelly, a young North Georgia mountaineer, comes to Atlanta to get a place with Billy Smith's Crackers. It is raining when he reaches Ponce DeLeon and he is nearly run over by an auto, in which are two persons—a man and a young girl. The driver of the car is an arrogant fellow. The girl makes him stop the machine. She gets out and inquires if Kelly is injured. She apologizes for her companion's brusque manner. Kelly sees Manager Smith and tells him he has never played a game of ball. Smith consents to give Kelly a trial. The girl in the auto is Mildred Deery, daughter of Galen Deery, a crafty and wealthy speculator in timber lands. Her companion is Forrest Cain, a rich young man about town. Kelly owns timber land that Deery would like to possess. Kelly is invited to the Deery home, where he is introduced to Mildred. Cain hears Mildred order an auto to take her guest to his hotel. He takes the driver's place and carries Kelly out into the woods. Kelly thrashes Cain. Manager Smith tells the newspapers about his new find and the reporters print all sorts of "joshing" stories about Kelly.

Now go on with the story.

"Looks like the real thing," acknowledged the veteran backstop.

From that time on Long Tom didn't give Kelly an easy fly to catch. He purposely batted the ball so that if the recruit got to it at all it would be at least a hard catch. The result was one of the most wonderful exhibitions of ground covering by an outfielder ever seen on a ball field. Finally Smith called a halt by declaring morning parctice at an end.

The players went at once to the clubhouse to take off their uniforms, stand under a shower bath and dress themselves for the street. The clubhouse became at once a very lively place. Each player was assigned a locker for uniforms, clothes and personal belongings. In front of these lockers were short benches, placed there for the use of the players while dressing or undressing.

It so happened that Long Tom Morrissey and Gordon Kelly had adjoining lockers and therefore sat side by side as they started to undress. The other players were busy with their own affairs and did not notice the other two until suddenly they heard Kelly cry:

"You can't call me that, Morrissey."

All hands turned in the direction of the voice just in time to see Long Tom draw back and slap Kelly in standing up. The two men were now staning up. Their shoes were off and they were stripped to the waist. The next instant there was a furious mixup. Benches were overturned as the tall, gaunt veteran swayed in the embrace of the tall, lithe youngster.

It was all over in half a minute. At the end of that time Morrissey lay, an inert mass, in a corner of the clubhouse, where he had fallen with a loud crash. Ball players do not interfere with clubhouse fights. Even a manager will not interfere. If there are grudges to be settled, it is best to have them settled and be done with them. That is the philosophy of the clubhouse. Players see to it that there is fair play. That is all.

"Call It Square."

No one knew what passed between the two men that led up to the encounter. After the brief battle, Kelly replaced his overturned bench as though nothing had happened, and quickly removing the rest of his clothing stepped under the shower in an adjoining room. The other players went to the assistance of Long Tom, who showed signs of life about this time. They raised the veteran to his feet. Morrissey blinked for awhile and then a grin bespread his features. His left cheek was cut and bleeding.

"The kid is all right," he exclaimed heartily. "My nerve was better than my judgment, that's all."

He, too quickly pulled off his clothes and stepping out of the room, turned on the shower next the one where Kelly was standing. With the water pouring down his body in streams he reached out his hand to the young man.

"My fault, kid. I apologize. Call it square?"

Gordon Kelly grasped the outstretched hand.

"Certainly I will," he said, with a rare smile.

Kelly dressed himself rapidly and was the first to leave the clubhouse. The others followed singly and in pairs. Long Tom Morrissey and Bill Smith were the last to go.

"Did that guy tell you he never played a game of ball?" demanded the veteran backstop of his manager, as he slipped the key of his locker in his pocket.

"That's what he said" replied Smith.

"And never played a game of ball?"

"That's what he said."

"Billy, he's kiddin' you. Why, he even fights like a ball player," declared Long Tom, with a grin. He started to leave the clubhouse when his manager called him back.

"Want to change your locker?" asked Smith.

"Me? What for?" demanded Morrissey in surprise.

"You're right next to the kid and I thought on account of—"

"That's where I want to be; right next to the kid," Long Tom broke in. "He's my pal, Billy."

CHAPTER XII.

AS Gordon Kelly hurried out of the clubhouse he asked himself this question: "Is the game worth the candle?" and on his way down town he had a chance to study the question and answer it to his own satisfaction.

Within the past few hours he had, first, been more or less ridiculed in the newspapers and, second, he had engaged in a clubhouse fight with another ball player. That, he figured, was a pretty strenuous way for a novice like himself to begin a baseball career. Would every day have its bad features as this day had? Would it not be best for him to quit the game right now? How about going to Manager Smith and thanking him for his kindness, but telling him at the same time he had decided to call it all off.

Greeted by Mildred.

Ruminating further on the subject he came to the conclusion that the newspapers were right. The reporters were perfectly justified in refusing to laud him to the skies before he had demonstrated his ability. There was nothing really objectionable in what they had said about him. He confessed to himself that what they had published was largely true and they had written their articles in a humorous vein which was well within their rights under the circumstances. No, he had no fault to find with the newspapers.

But how about that clubhouse fight? Well, that was a thing of the past. Long Tom had apologized, he had accepted the apology and he believed they would be friends from now on. Then why quit? Wouldn't that make him more ridiculous than ever? Besides he didn't like the sound of the word. No, he wouldn't quit. He would stick it out—do the best he could and trust to luck and Providence.

Glancing out of the car window at this stage of his meditations, Kelly beheld Miss Deery seated at the wheel of an automobile of which she was the sole occupant. There was a temporary blockade and Kelly seized the opportunity to jump off the street car and hurry around to where Miss Deery's machine was packed in with several others, waiting for the jam to clear itself. He raised his hat.

"How do you do?" smiled Mildred pleasantly. "Jump in and I'll drive you home; or, better still, come to my house and have luncheon with me."

"Is that where you are headed for?" inquired Gordon, stepping into the car and seating himself beside the young woman.

"I don't seem to be headed for anywhere in this blockade. Ah, here we are," and the car moved slowly forward. "Well, what is your lordship's pleasure?"

"You are very kind, but before giving an answer I have a counter proposition to make."

The nature of which is."

"Judge Barbee kindly sent me a card to his club and he wrote me there was a ladies' dining room there. The card is only good for two weeks and I would like to make use of it. Won't you take lunch with me there?"

"That would be simply fine. But we'll have to go home anyway, because I have to prink up a little bit," said Mildred, with an arch look.

"I think you are very charming as you are," remarked Gordon.

Mildred laughed gaily.

"Mr. Kelly, you told me you lived all your life in the mountains and have only been in Atlanta a week. You are certainly learning fast. Who's your teacher?"

"You are the only girl I know in Atlanta, Miss Deery."

"As you know how to say nice things I'll take that as a compliment."

They were soon at the Deery residence, and leaving him in the big, comfortable living room to amuse himself Mildred ran upstairs. Contrary to the assertions of humorists, she was back again inside of ten minutes, with a complete change of costume, and if she was charming before, she was bewitching now. Gordon offered to drive the car, and with the smiling comment that he seemed to have many accomplishments for a mountaineer, Mildred arranged herself beside him. Ten minutes later they were at the club and seated at a table. When the waiter had taken their order, Gordon asked, seriously:

"Have you ever seen a game of baseball, Miss Deery.?"

"Of course I have. I've seen Georgia and Tech play half a dozen times. And I saw Harvard and Yale play on the Polo Grounds, New York, too."

"Which side won?"

"I've forgotten. I went with a party of friends, some of whom wanted Yale to win and the others wanted Harvard to win. I got all mixed up in the excitement."

"Did you ever see a professional game of baseball here in Atlanta, at Ponce DeLeon Park?

"No, I never did. Why this cross-examination, Mr. Kelly?"

"I'm trying to find out your likes and dislikes, in order to avoid the dislikes."

"That's very nice of you. I rather like baseball: I'll say that."

The talk went on. Gordon Kelly was becoming very much interested in Mildred Deery; to such an extent that he was anxious to learn what her opinions were in regard to professional ball players. Yet he was afraid to ask the direct question. He beat around the bush for a while and then changed the subject, without getting the information he desired and without suspecting why he asked the questions.

FREE, NEXT SUNDAY.

The American Sunday Monthly Magazine, containing the first chapters of Jack London's new story, is GIVEN FREE with every copy of the next Sunday American.

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the first nine installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read this tenth installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

"Oh! indeed! He is well off?" went on the stern inquisitor.

"He has some money, I suppose," said the girl dully. How long was this to continue?

"How much, do you suppose?" There was cutting sarcasm in the tone.

A little flicker of mischief lit Charlotte's eyes. Why, if this was a game after all, she would play it high—spiritedly—she would win. "As much as YOU have—I suppose!"

"You are sanguine, I think, Fraulein Charlotte. Is his family as much respected as OURS?" Solomon admired a WORTHY antagonist—even though that antagonist might be his daughter!

"All's Well."

"Just as much," said demure Charlotte. She dared now to raise her eyes—to look at Jacob—whose face was lit now by a smile of component parts of amusement and eagerness.

"A Jew?"

"Yes."

"Of course. Tell me; my child. Tell me. On this much I must insist," Charlotte hesitated in lovely confusion. "Tell me—my child, tell your father."

Blushing, trembling—radiant, and yet frightened now that her moment had come—Charlotte laid her little white hands on her father's strong shoulders, and turned him gently toward the window where Jacob stood. "There—he is there."

But now Jacob's hour had come—love must have its way. All in one pulsing moment, he had crossed the room, and Charlotte was caught in hungry arms. "Charlotte—my little Charlotte. Come." And Old Sol, beaming joyously through the rose arbor, was Love's only confidant, as the boy and girl fled to the great outdoors—mother Nature—with their precious joy.

Solomon laughed. "Magnificent! So I have worked and calculated and spent my money—for my nephew!"

Frau Gudula lived again in one brief moment her own love dream. "And those two have made their Lover's Lane out of their Grannie's old Jew's Alley! Yes, it is magnificent!"

From under the table the old Frau drew a battered little low stool. She smiled—but there was the pathos of the very old—whose race is nearly run in her gentle tone. "Come and sit here, Solomon, my son. Sit here as you used to in the dear long ago when you were a child—and your dear father was with me—instead of calling me from far away. What does it matter, my son, if they are happy? Not in your way, perhaps, but in hers your little Charlotte is happy—our little Jacob and Charlotte are happy. Happy, my son. All our money could not buy a better thing than that. Cannot YOU be content?"

Solomon looked out beyond the open door—out on the rose-hung terrace where young love had come at last into its own. Perhaps it was his mother's gentle tones, perhaps it was his daughter's glorified face, perhaps it was the memory of Charlotte's mother—the wife who had been his only love—three generations of loving women seeking the way to Solomon's heart, and Solomon's heart knew youth and love again.

"Yes, mother—dear, I am content." And in the Garden of Cupid at Neustadt Castle, and in the rose arbor of Jew's Lane, there was peace—for in the hearts of the royal cousins of Taunus, and in the home of the Five Frankforters, love had come into his kingdom.

THE END.

Unexpected Result.

Here is an emigration story told at a meeting recently. In a village was a youth who had got himself into such a variety of scrapes that his people thought it would be better to dispatch him to Canada, so as to get him away from old and doubtful associations. He agreed to go, provided those interested in his departure secured him some testimonials. Half a dozen were got for him. They sang his praises in unrestrained terms, spoke of his geniality, of his good address and exceptional capability, and all the other virtues that few men have, but many get the credit for.

When the young man read the testimonials he turned to his father and exclaimed:

"Well, I'm hanged! I had no idea people thought so much of me. And now I know how much they like me I'm blowed if I'll go away at all."

The darkest days of husband and wife are when they come to look forward to a childless and lonely old age.

Many a wife has found herself incapable of motherhood owing to some derangement of the feminine system, often curable by the proper remedies.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal.

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

When One Is Very Young

"Love is a sickness full of woes,
All remedies refusing."
—Samuel Daniel.

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

G. K. writes: "I am seventeen years of age and in love with a girl one year my junior. I am in love with her very much, but I don't know if she loves me. I feel as if I am getting sick, knowing not what to do."

The letter bears a date of ten days ago. If it were of yesterday, or the day previous, there might be reason for some uneasiness regarding the condition of G. K., but ten days is a long, long time, and without doubt he has gone through all the chills, the fever, the pangs, and made a complete recovery ere this.

This boy and girl love—calf love, some say—may develop into something larger, truer, finer, but the chances are all against it. A boy of seventeen thinks he has found the one love for life, and he also thinks he will never become too old to prefer pie to potatoes. He is sure that his heart will never waver from the choice of his youth, and just as sure that when he has grown old and gray, and has earned the right to spend money as he chooses, that he will at last gratify his youthful longing for nut sundaes.

Seldom Serious.

The love of his extreme youth is seldom serious, and does not even become a pleasant memory, for the reason that there were so many of them. The one picture he thinks he will always carry in his heart becomes the composite picture of many, and he forgets in a few years if Ethel had blue eyes or brown, and if it were Mary who gave him a lock of her hair, or Susan.

His emotions are so short-lived that calf love would be something to laugh about were it not for the waste of time every such love represents.

In the growing, developing, eventful and impressionable period of life, when a boy and girl should be studying their school books and laying the foundation for helpful manhood or womanhood, they moon around to the neglect of everything in life that is worth while, devoting every hope, every energy, every thought, to what they call love, but which bears no nearer resemblance to love than a worthless pebble bears to a precious jewel.

It is most regrettable that so much time is wasted in seeking for the counterfeit, instead of preparing one's self by study and training and self-control to appreciate the genuine that will come later.

Needless Waste.

G. K. has recovered from the sickness that prompted his letter long ere this. It is as if he called a physician to minister to an ailment so short-lived that it had vanished when the physician arrived. But the physician would warn him against another such attack, and explain the folly of needless pain, the waste of health and energy that could be avoided.

I can do no more. The remedy lies in his own hands. He must put such devotion into the effort to make a man of himself that there isn't time, room or inclination left for indulgence in the emotions that are not his due till he reaches man's estate.

The Five Frankforters

A Romance of Great Wealth as Played by Money Kings

By KATHRYN KEY.

Copyright, 1913, by the New York Evening Journal Publishing Company.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Solomon, you may come in. Our tete-a-tete is quite over. We have not much in common—his Highness and I," said the old woman sadly.

The five Frankforters came quickly at their mother's summons. Charlotte came too, and stood in the doorway where for one fleeting moment she had touched the garments of the God of Love as he sped by.

"Madame! Shall I speak now?" asked Duke Gustavus with firm decision. Then he turned from the old mother to Solomon. "Sir—you know already why I am here to-day. I have the honor to beg for your daughter's hand in marriage."

With due solemnity Solomon answered: "We thank you, Duke Gustavus, for the high honor you confer on our family. We accept that honor—gratefully and gladly. I give my daughter to you."

Who shall fathom the heart of a maid? Who shall tell to what Knowledge of her woman's heritage Charlotte had grown in one full hour? The girl came gently to her father and put her hand on his shoulder and looked deep into his eyes—into his soul, perhaps. "Father, you CANNOT without a word from me!"

"What do you mean?" asked her father sternly.

"I am ashamed! I know now that you arranged this yesterday—and I am ashamed."

The Crisis.

In growing anger the man asked his daughter, "How ashamed? Are you ashamed to have been offered an [illegible] accepted in this way."

"It is the custom of our people to arrange marriages in this way." Solomon's growing anger would not brook long delay—or argument.

"A hateful custom! A shameful custom!" cried Charlotte.

"Shameful?" Solomon's wrath was threatening to overwhelm his dignified manners.

"Yes. Yes—shameful. Your Highness, I will not be a party to a bargain so shameful to both of us. I thank you—and refuse."

"Do you know what you are saying?" thundered the baffled father.

"Do you know what I am FEELING? Father, do you believe that I could ever be happy without a home? For I could never find a home in that castle, with the very servants laughing at me behind my back. And the portraits on the walls staring at me and seeming to say: "If you please you have come here too soon; wait another century or so!" No, no! If I marry, I—Grannie——" And poor little Charlotte, having fought her first battle—life's great battle for the right to happiness—fell sobbing at her grandmother's feet.

"Grannie!" Poor little banker's daughter, who has never known a mother, will you plead in vain to the dear old woman who has been the saint of your girlish dreams?

Solomon spoke. He was very angry, but it was that cold, implacable anger that brooks no interference with his desires. "Your Highness will forgive this exhibition? My daughter will soon see reason?"

But Gustavus was to struggle slowly to-day to his full heritage of manhood. "I beg you—I insist—that you shall not persuade her against her will."

"Her will?" said Solomon. "In this family the children obey their parents."

A Boomerang.

Frau Gudula rose with quiet dignity from her great arm chair. "Then YOU obey ME—and let the child have her way in this. Duke Gustavus, I think you at last are wise enough to understand it must be so. Love is greater than any of us. No! little Charlotte, get up! Grannie won't let anyone hurt you."

Gustavus smiled. "Madame, I have looked into the souls of three women to-day—and I think I understand. But now, Baron, if I do not fulfil my part——"

Solomon spoke bitterly: "Count Fehrenberg has the money! He is half way to the castle by now."

"It will be returned to you, of course," began Gustavus, quietly, and then his old merry, devil-may-care spirit finished the sentence—"if there is any left."

Frau Gudula spoke with stately authority: "No, Duke Gustavus, be thankful you have it. Perhaps it will make a great difference in all of your life. If I know my sons, they will not be losers."

"My mother is right," said Amschel. "We have never yet taken back a signature."

"If your Highness is not too anxious to return to Neustadt Castle at once," said Nathan, "we can discuss the situation over the rest of the Burgundy. Will you come, Carl, Amschel? I think we still feel that Your Highness's personal security is what we want."

And as they discussed the salt mines and great forests that might yet make the Duchy of Taunus a wealthy province, the brothers little dreamed of the hidden wealth Gustavus was finding in his dream of a pair of eyes that had not lied. For suddenly the Duke of Taunus knew that the old home was his and he must not leave it—that a man must not abdicate for the woman he loves—but that when he is worthy to rule, then he is worthy to win even her love. And the money? Oh, Gustavus of Taunus could always find plenty of use for that! Love may work miracles, but because his sweetheart's hair is spun gold, a spendthrift does not learn to scorn all other gold!

The Real Reason.

And Solomon was thinking of the plans that had gone so sadly amiss—and of his twelve millions of florins! They might have been better invested!

"Who could have believed it!" said he. "A young fellow like that to have the best of us! Providence has helped him."

"Perhaps he is sharper than you thought," said his mother.

"Then I am all the more sorry to lose him as a son-in-law. Now—Fraudlein Charlotte—you will be so good as to give me your reasons for what you have done."

The girl moved slowly, almost as one in a dream, across to the father she had so sorely displeased. Her little scene was set and she must play out her part before her audience. Grannie was sitting again in her great arm-chair by the little breakfast table. Old Sol still shone across the rose arbor and traced a pattern of flowers and leaves on the soft green carpet. Across the room, stood her Cousin Jacob—intent, waiting—one would scarcely dare guess for what. But Charlotte and her father standing close—close in the little heart of that sunny room, were talking to each other across grim, gray seas of misunderstanding.

"Your reasons, Charlotte," said the man. This was not father talking to daughter—it was the man of business talking to the woman who had dared to balk his dearest plans.

"You know them, father. If I marry, it will not be for a castle, and a grand title, and position—the Duke would have given those to me—but I want more—far more—than he could ever give me."

"Go on."

"And I must be able to give more—infinitely more than I could ever give to him. Then I would be content to live anywhere—as dear Grannie was."

The Truth Comes Out.

Solomon sank into a great chair across the room from his mother. On Frau Gudula's face was a sweet smile of memory—and hope for this younger generation whom she loved. And Jacob? Jacob was waiting—waiting with throbbing pulses and yearning eyes for that supreme thing for which he would have given the world had the world been his!

"Is there anyone to whom you could give—and who could give to you—all you mean?" asked Solomon with slow insistence. He would sift this matter of his daughter's daring disobedience to the bottom.

"I—I—believe so, father."

"Will you tell me who he is?"

The girl did not answer. Pulsing, telltale blood stained her cheeks with love's own royal crimson—but she could not lift her starry eyes.

"So! It is all arranged between you, I suppose. What is his position in life?"

Charlotte answered so low that one might scarcely hear her timid tones: "He is—a business man, I think you would call it."

"Every tailor calls himself that. What kind of a business is his?"

"Banking"—still lower.

"A banker?"

"Yes; like you." The girl wondered if this torture would ever cease—would she ever be at peace—and happy?

Extremes of Fashion From Paris

The ultra extreme of evening dress.

THE picture on the left shows a rich and effective model for theater or semi-evening wear. The original gown was of sulphur-colored brocaded satin over a foundation of sulphur chiffon.

The under part of the bodice is formed by a very high draped belt which rises in two points from the under arm to the chest. Shadow lace edged with beads starts from a beaded ornament at the center front and comes over the shoulder, falling in the back in long angel sleeves, which end in a beaded tassel.

The skirt is made in two pieces, draped one over the other, and is held at the right by a buckle of beads, from which starts a small round train.

For the Extremist.

The model on the right cannot be recommended to the woman who wishes to be modest. The consideration of what not to wear is almost as important as what clothes to select, and together with the extremes of the overworked Balkan blouse fashion, the wise woman will avoid the sleeveless corsage and the skirt slit to the knees. It will be easily seen how the modifications that good taste suggests to every woman will change these dresses from extremes of freakishness into really graceful dresses.

This model shows an evening gown of Persian blue and gold over a foundation of black chiffon, the bodice is plain in corselet style, and the [illegible] consists of a fichu of black chiffon which drapes over the shoulder to form small sleeves. The waist is girdled by a belt of Persian blue satin, with a huge flower of the same material in front. The plain skirt is split at the knees to show the foundation of pleated chiffon. On one side of this cut it curves up about three inches from the floor, and on the left it lengthens into a train with rounding corners.

Do You Know That—

One of the longest concrete viaducts in the world is being erected over the Cuyaroga River in Cleveland. It has a length of 2,880 feet and is a double-decker, the upper deck carrying a driveway 42 feet wide for automobiles and other vehicles, with 12 feet of "sidewalk" on each side. The lower deck will carry four street railway tracks. The clearance over the channel will be 93 feet. Some 1,500 concrete spiles are being driven to carry the nine piers nearest the water.

Experiments have been made in Germany in the use of pigeons for scouting purposes. The pigeons are provided with miniature cameras furnished with shutters that are released automatically. The birds are set free from selected points so that they fly over the enemy's fortifications. When they return home the photographs they have taken are developed, and sometimes important disclosures appear on the film.

At Loerrach, in the Black Forest, there is a lake, the bed of which remains dry from 10 to 13 years at a time, and then suddenly refills with water from subterranean springs to a depth of 12 to 15 feet. After ten years the Eichener Sea, as it is called, has again commenced to fill, and has destroyed all the crops which farmers had planted on the bed.

Value of Bluff.

In a close encounter during the American Civil war, two soldiers, one from each army, came face to face within short range.

Each put up his gun and fired, as it subsequently appeared, his last cartridge. Both missed. The bullet of one man buried itself in a tree, and the shot of the other passed through the coat of his enemy. Each man, knowing his ammunition was gone, supposed himself to be at a disadvantage.

One of them made a great show of reloading his gun, and, stepping forward, demanded a surrender. The other threw down his arms with a groan.

"If I had another cartridge I would never surrender," he exclaimed.

"That's all right," calmly remarked the captor, marching off his prisoner. "If I had another, you may be sure I shouldn't have asked you to surrender."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DON'T WORRY.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen and for some time past have been keeping company with two young men, R. and G. Now, as they are having numerous disputes over me, I decided to meet just one of them and stop their quarrels. I prefer the society of G., and I told this to R., thinking it best to be honest with him. He became very angry and said I had done him a great wrong in not telling him before. He als accused me of encouraging him. He has vowed he will cause trouble between G. and me. I am only a little girl and such a thing as love never occurred to me. GLADYS.

I think R. is blustering in the hope of frightening you. If you prefer G. you have the right to show your preference. It will be much better for you to go with neither than to try to meet both.

THEY ARE RIGHT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am seventeen and deeply in love with a girl one year my junior, whom I have known three years. Now, as my parents think I am too young to have anything to do with girls, I would like to have your advice on the matter. JACK.

Your constancy for three years is in your favor. Be constant a few years longer and this will prove your love more than any protestations.

In the meantime remember your parents know best.

KNEW A LITTLE

A gentleman traveling some time ago asked a one-armed mendicant by whom he was accosted how he lost his arm.

"It was like this, sir. The last time I went to sea we was caught in a typhoon off Cape 'Orn. The ship went over on her beam ends, so the cap'n 'e orders me an' Tom to go out on the yardarm to keelhaul the bo'sprit and ter splice the jib-boom to the mainmast. I was a-hangin' on to the top-gallant ratlin's when Tom suddenly let go his end, an' I was pitched 40 feet in the 'old."

The gentleman smiled.

"That's a capital yarn," he said. "You ought to have been a sailor," and, without giving him anything, went on his way.

Crestfallen, the beggar watched his interrogator, and saw a crossing-sweeper touch his hat most deferentially to him.

"I say, Jim, who's 'e w'en 'e's at 'ome?" he called.

"Him?" replied the sweeper. "Don't you know who that is? Why, that's Admiral Beresford."

Always Merry and Bright.

False to all the traditions of Scotland and of farming, Sandy McTavish was a supreme optimist.

Nothing ever seemed to worry him.

One day—so the story goes—during the great floods, he was found by a neighbor lucky enough to possess a boat sitting peacefully on the roof of his house, smoking his pipe while the waters rose.

"Hello, Sandy!" cried the neighbor.

"Hello, Sam!" cried the cheerful one. "All your fowls washed away, I suppose?"

Sandy nodded.

"Ay," he said; "but the ducks can swim!"

"Apple trees gone, too, eh?"

"Well, the crop would have failed anyhow."

"So will you," said Sam, "if you sit up there much longer. Why, the waters have covered your ground floor windows already."

"I know," replied Sandy, as he smoked on; "and a good thing, too. Them windows did want washin'!"

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Why, Dad," he said, "she is young. She's just a little child in a hundred ways. She loves the trees and the grass and the flowers—and everything that's simple and real! And as for her heart—" His voice was low and very tender. "Why, her heart is the biggest I've ever known. It's just overflowing with sweetness and kindness. I've seen her pick up a baby that had fallen in the street and mother it in a way that—well, no one could do it as she did it, unless her soul was clean."

Gilder in Despair.

The father was silent, a little awed. He made an effort to shake off the feeling, and spoke with a sneer.

"You heard what she said yesterday, and you still are such a fool as to think that."

The answer of the son came with an immutable finality, the sublime faith of love.

"I don't think—I know!"

Gilder was in despair. What argument could avail him? He cried out sharply in desperation.

"Do you realize what you're doing? Don't go to smash, Dick, just at the beginning of your life. Oh, I beg you, boy, stop! Put this girl out of your thoughts and start fresh."

The reply was of the simplest, and it was the end of the argument.

"Father," Dick said, very gently, "I can't."

There followed a little period of quiet between the two. The father, from his desk, stood facing his son, who thus denied him in all honesty because the heart so commanded. The son rested motionless and looked with unflinching eyes into his father's face. In the gaze of each was a great affection.

"You're all I have, my boy," the older man said at last. And now the big voice was a mildest whisper of love.

"Yes, Dad," came the answer—another whisper, since it is hard to voice the truth of feeling such as this. "If I could avoid it, I wouldn't hurt you for anything in the world. I'm sorry, Dad, awfully sorry—" He hesitated; then his voice rang out clearly. There was in his tone, when he spoke again, a recognition of that loneliness which is the curse and the crown of being:

"But," he ended, "I must fight this out by myself—fight it out in my own way. . . . And I'm going to do it!"

CHAPTER XVI.

Burke Plots.

THE butler entered. "A man to see you, sir," he said. Gilder made a gesture of irritation, as he sank into the chair at his desk.

"I can't see any one to-night, Thomas," he exclaimed, sharply.

"But he said it was important, sir," the servant went on. He held out the tray insistently.

The master took the card grudgingly. As his eyes caught the name, his expression changed slightly.

"Very well," he said, "show him up." His glance met the wondering gaze of his son.

"It's Burke," he explained.

"What on earth can he want—at this time of night?" Dick exclaimed.

The father smiled grimly.

"You may as well get used to visits from the police."

There was something ghastly in his effort toward playfulness.

A moment later Inspector Burke entered the room.

"Oh, you're here, too," he said, as his eyes fell on Dick. "That's good! I wanted to see you, too."

Inspector Burke was, in fact, much concerned over the situation that had developed. He was a man of undoubted ability, and he took a keen professional pride in his work.

He possessed the faults of his class, was not too scrupulous where he saw a safe opportunity to make a snug sum of money through the employment of his official authority, was ready to truckle to those whose influence could help or hinder his ambition. But, in spite of these ordinary defects, he was fond of his work and wishful to excel in it.

Thus, Mary Turner had come to be a thorn in his side. She flouted his authority and sustained her incredible effrontery by a restraining order from the court. The thing was outrageous to him, and he set himself to match her cunning. The fact that she had involved Dick Gilder within her toils made him the more anxious to overcome her in the strife of resources between them.

After much studying, he had at last planned something that, while it would not directly touch Mary herself, would at least serve to intimidate her, and as well make further action easier against her.

It was in pursuit of this scheme that he now came to Gilder's house, and the presence of the young man abruptly gave him another idea that might benefit him well. So he disregarded Gilder's greeting, and went on speaking to the son.

Dick's Eyes Flashed.

"She's skipped!" he said triumphantly.

Dick made a step forward. His eyes flashed, and there was anger in his voice as he replied:

"I don't believe it."

The inspector smiled, unperturbed.

"She left this morning for Chicago," he said, lying with a manner that long habit rendered altogether convincing. "I told you she'd go." He turned to the father, and spoke with an air of boastful good nature. "Now, all you have to do is to get this boy out of the scrape and you'll be all right."

"If we only could!"

The cry came with deepest earnestness from the lips of Gilder, but there was little hope in his voice.

The inspector, however, was confident of success, and his tones rang cheerfully as he answered:

A LITTLE SIX-YEAR-OLD DARLING IS RESCUED FROM ITS MISERIES

Little Willie Shumate, the little six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Shumate, of 168 Kirkwood Avenue, this city, suffered like thousands of other little children are suffering. He was pale and puny; in his sleep he would roll and toss; in the morning his breath was bad, and during the day he was very nervous and constantly biting his finger nails or picking his nose. He was too young to take severe medicines and the parents were simply told not to worry, because the child would get over its troubles as he grew older. But the parents did worry. They could not help it, seeing their child in such constant misery. They called at Coursey & Munn's Drug Store and obtained a treatment of Quaker Extract. The child was given this remedy regularly according to directions, and the results came to light. He took one bottle and a half of the Extract, and expelled not one but a handful of small worms, some alive and some dead. These were the cause of the child's sufferings, and Quaker Extract, by removing the cause, cured the child. These worms were two inches long each. To-day the little fellow is happy as a lark and his happiness is shared by his loving parents, his cheeks are red and rosy.

The case again proves the powers of the wonderful Quaker Extract. If you suffer from rheumatism, catarrh or stomach worms, call at Coursey & Munn's Drug Store, 29 Marietta Street, for Quaker Extract, 6 for $5.00, 3 for $2.50 or $1.00 a bottle. Oil of Balm, 25c, or 5 for $1.00. Do not fail to call to-day and obtain good health. We prepay express charges on all orders of $3.00 or over.

'WHITEY' HURT, CRACKERS PLAY WRETCHED GAME

By Percy H. Whiting.

WHEN Whitey Alperman went over after a terrific grounder hit by Spencer in the sixth and caught the ball with the side of his head there was a gasp from the crowd. It was a terrific blow—enough to floor an ox. It didn't floor Whitey, quite, but it put him out of the game.

And through the rest of a gloomy afternoon the fans had a chance to think what a difference it would make to the Crackers if anything happened to Alperman.

The odd thing about Alperman is that he's playing better ball now than he ever played in his life.

It will be recalled that spite work put him out of the big leagues. He and Charley Ebbets had words and the Brooklyn mogul said he would spend $10,000 to keep "Whitey" out of the big leagues. So he sent him to Rochester. But when John Ganzel gave him up there was no question of spite work. Jawn thought he was "all through."

Last year Alperman played sensational ball. This year, with a better club, he is going even stronger.

Said King Brady, the other day, "I've known Alperman off and on through his whole career. He is playing better ball now than he ever did in his life—vastly better than when he was with Brooklyn. And he was a grand infielder then."

* * *

ALPERMAN has been a great man for Atlanta. His batting has been timely and his fielding phenomenal. Any man who could plug the gap that Otto Jordan left has some size to him. And Alperman has more than done it. If anything happened to old Whitey the Cracker team would be messed up proper.

* * *

IT was a freaky game the Crackers lost yesterday. Up to the seventh the Pelicans had made five hits and four runs. The Crackers had made eight hits and two runs. Then everybody "blew" at once on the Cracker side and the visitors romped, 8 to 2.

It was another wretched game for the Crackers. Good old Joe Dunn had a hideous time of it, Agler pulled a miscue that cost two runs, a couple of pops fell safe for lack of a little determination in getting under them, Tommy Long slumbered at the switch and failed to score from third on a slow double play at first and second and the Crackers wasted enough hits to win three ordinary games.

* * *

SEVERAL odd propositions developed. Seventy-seven per cent of the Pelicans' hits came after the fifth inning. Seventy-five per cent of the Crackers' hits were made by the first two men on the batting order. One hundred per cent were made by Long, Welchonce and Smith. Seventy-seven per cent of Atlanta's put-outs were made by the last three men in the batting order.

Everything went by spots. And it was a spotty, sloppy, chilly game.

* * *

THE Pels had all the luck. Spencer's home run over the signs was an easy loft. The same hit to center or left would undoubtedly have been an out to a fielder. A little pebble gave the ball that hit Alperman a bad bound, knocked out a steady infielder and cost another run. The Crackers batted terrifically but never at the right time. For instance, note this coincidence: Three times in succession Long hit a single and Welchonce followed him with a single. Twice none was out. Once one was out. Not once in three times could either Alperman or Bailey, two of the league's greatest pinch-hitters, deliver a safe swat.

* * *

PAT WRIGHT, most bitterly execrated of President's Kavanaugh's staff of umpires, served his first sentence behind the bat Tuesday.

Once or twice Pat was palpably off. In a close game it would have been exasperating. With everything shot to blazes anyhow it did not matter.

"But," as one of the ball players remarked, anent the fact that the veteran is generally wrong. "It's lucky Pat's name is Wright."

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 28.—A few days ago I discussed the different teams in the National League race in general. To-day I will return to the same subject, sizing up the Giants and Pirates. Both teams were off all over in the early part of the race.

The New York players displayed some of the worst fielding seen on any diamond since the late world's series. Nothing was sure to the Giants. The pitchers were also out of sorts, Tesreau failing to get moving and Marquard being out of condition from sickness. The Giants hopped into their fielding stride last week with a single bound, and the infield is moving like a string of firecrackers now. Instead of turning outs into base hits, as we were doing, the infielders are now cutting down base hits and converting them into outs, as several of the Pittsburg players will tell you if you get a chance to consult them. That helps.

Following this encouraging sign, both Tesreau and Marquard stepped out and pitched good baseball last week, Rube showing a very fine game against the Pirates when he got tangled up in a pitching battle with Camnitz, the one that went fourteen innings. His fast ball had the hop on it for the first time this season, and when he is getting the jump on his fast one he is one of the best southpaws in the business anywhere. Tesreau also stepped forth in the latter part of this same game and displayed his old speed and the break on his spitter which made him really the leading pitcher of the National League last season.

With these two men going at their best, the Giants are sure to get pitching. The only man on the staff not up to the top of his stride now is Al Demaree, the recruit who has shown such grand form so far this season. He strained his side recently, and will not be ready to work regularly again for about a week. But Tesreau can go to the box every other day if necessary, but it won't be necessary with Marquard and myself in shape to take our regular turns.

* * *

THE Giants have not hit up to anything like the pace they showed last season so far, but they should bat harder. Shafer, who has replaced Snodgrass in center field, is one of the most natural hitters I have ever seen, and it is impossible to get him to go after a bad ball. He has a wonderful eye and is a splendid judge of balls and strikes. His batting average does not show his true strength, because he reaches first base so often on passes. He is also lightning fast on the bases once he arrives, and will worry any pitcher badly.

Burns is capable of batting better than he is doing at present. He is still a little strange in the big league berth, but he is a good ball player.

Fletcher is batting hard, and Merkle and Murray have picked up within the last week. Meyers so far has not acquired his last season's punch. The club will get batting, and then we should climb through the league like the gossip of a kiss through a boarding house.

* * *

PITTSBURG afrittered away ball games until it came to New York, when it took one of those sudden braces and battled us to a practical standstill. After leaving the Polo Grounds, the Pirates went over to Brooklyn and choked down the fond hopes of the Dodgers, when Dahlen had been led to expect something soft after the fine manner in which the Boston club cleaned up four straight on Clarke's crew. The Pirates have the pitching and the hitting, and will be in the contention for the championship.

* * *

BROOKLYN has started to fade, and I expect to see the team drop. Of course the club will not go down to the depths to which other Brooklyn teams have descended in years past, but it will be fighting to remain out of the second division before the last word is in.

* * *

THE St. Louis club is a big surprise, especially to the Giants, but it is going ahead of its normal speed now. It has not the staunchness to last. The team has two excellent pitchers, Harmon and Sallee, and Konetchy is a great ball player. So is Huggins. The rest of the team is nothing out of the ordinary, and a club must be out of the ordinary to win a pennant. Huggins' peppery personality has done a lot for the team. Sallee will do a lot more if he sticks in shape all season.

CARDINALS WILL HOLD ON TO JIMMY SHECKARD

ST. Louis, May 28.—A yarn emanating from Cincinnati to the effect that Jimmy Sheckard would be released by the Cardinal club because his salary was too bulky was spiked yesterday by Manager Huggins. "I have no intention of releasing Sheckard," declared the Cardinal commander, "and I want to state that emphatically. Sheckard is a great ball player, and he was paid accordingly by the Chicago club. We took over his contract, but we're not kicking. Whether he will play regularly is a question. Our club really hasn't shaped itself as yet."

WILLIAMS BREAKS YALE'S LONG WINNING STREAK

NEW HAVEN, CONN., May 28.—Williams broke Yale's record of seventeen consecutive victories by shutting out the Blue on Yale field yesterday, 2 to 0. The game was played on a water-soaked diamond, with the drizzling rain falling at intervals. Each team fielded brilliantly.

Overall, of the Cubs, and Sallee, of the Cardinals, engaged in a pitchers' battle yesterday, which resulted in favor of the former.

* * *

The Athletics took a double-header in easy fashion from the Senators yesterday, winning the first 8 to 0 and the second 7 to 1. Eddie Plank, the veteran southpaw, pitched in the first and allowed the Senators only two hits.

* * *

Peckinpaugh, the former Nap utility infielder, secured in trade by the Yankees, will be given a regular position at shortstop. "Peck" is regarded as a fast and brilliant fielder, but somewhat shy with the war club.

* * *

* * *

Harry Lumley, once manager and star player with the Dodgers, has been released by the Troy, N. Y., team. An injury to his throwing wrist perhaps will necessitate his retirement from baseball.

* * *

* * *

The Braves' second victory of the day was a clean-cut, deserved affair, but the first game was won on a fluke. In the ninth Sweeney hit to the outfield, and Connelly, rounding third, started for the plate. Burns would have thrown him out by nearly ten feet, but the ball, instead of bounding into Catcher Meyers' hand, struck Sweeney's discarded bat and bounded away, while Connelly scored the only run of the game.

* * *

Manager Stovall's triple in the seventh which scored a run, followed by Austin's single, scoring Stovall, were enough to gain a victory yesterday for the Browns over the Tigers.

* * *

C. Webb Murphy, owner of the Cubs, who recently forbade his players to converse with reporters, has another grievance against the newspapers. A short time back Murphy set out on the trail of "Rube" Scheur, a promising pitcher of the Superior, Wis., team, in the Northern League. The newspapers printed the fact and the Superior club owners at once boosted the price of Scheur so high that Murphy balked. Murphy now states the newspapers "queered my deal."

* * *

Dick Rudolph, the recruit from the Toronto team, in the International League, who pitched for the Braves Monday, holding the Giants at his mercy, acted as a relief pitcher again yesterday and once again the New Yorkers were unable to score on him.

COIN GRABBERS CAUSE OF LUTE M'CARTY'S END

By Left Hook.

LUTHER M'CARTY, one of the most valuable instruments of the getting of money under false pretenses in the hands of men who don't like to work, was finally killed in the prize-ring, a place he should never have been allowed to enter. He is the fifty-eighth victim of prize-fighting since the brutality has been eliminated, and it has been used solely to inculcate these principles of manliness and fair play that is invaluable to the youth of our city.

According to the doctors who examined the fighter's body, he had organic heart trouble. According to Jim Corbett and other experts who saw him shortly before he went into the fight with Pelky at Calgary, he was not in good condition. You will be interested to know how it was possible that a man with a bad heart could reach a position in pugilism where even a few gulls and greedy men could call him a champion of anything and draw crowds of a size that would justify their offering him $5,000 to fight for them. This is how it was done and how he was killed:

Up until recent years prize-fighting, the actual fighting, has been possible only to pure brutes, strong-thewed, iron-hearted animals. All fights were either to a finish or for twenty-five or forty-five rounds. This condition made McCarty impossible. It was a survival of the most uncivilized. With the growth of the influence of the public schools this type of man began to disappear. Young men with intelligence boxed or exercised and went into a decent business for a living.

Finally only two of the old breed were left, in two negroes—Johnson and Langford. It is white men who pay to see fights and make pugilism possible, and they would not pay much to see the two negroes. Johnson and Langford had practically abolished heavyweight prize-fighting because there were no fighters fit to meet them.

This condition was bad for a number of men who had made a life work of capitalizing the degradation and blood lust of pugilism. They were threatened with the necessity of doing something useful or starving to death. They dug up the poor old ruin, Jeffries, and pitted him against Johnson, and followed with one or two valiant and unskillful youngsters, but the public wearied quickly of this sort of sport, and heavyweight fighting died.

It was up to these gentlemen to do something in a hurry. The Frawley bill was passed in New York, where the most money is, and this permitted ten-round fights. The ten-round limit is useful because with a little luck an invalid might go through with it and not die the same night. The boxing commission was created. Its business was, among other things, to see that it got enough revenue out of the prize-fighting game to pay its own salaries and expenses.

If Johnson and Langford were allowed to fight that would be practically impossible, so the only two real fighting men in the heavyweight division were barred. This let down the barriers with no real fighters to fear and everybody had a chance to make easy money. Inside of a year a horde of white hopes descended on New York.

They were big, unskilled, inept, clumsy, low-browed somnambulists who, for the most part, to do them justice, knew that they were not fighting men, but were willing to pose along, as there was money in it. The pace was slow; the fights were short, and one was as bad as another, so there was nothing to fear.

Shaky mitral valves and fat paunch didn't make any difference. In this atmosphere and out of this sort of material Luther McCarty was grown by hothouse methods into a white champion, so that he would draw just so many dollars to the box office. It is doubtful if he knew that his heart was weak. None of the men who were fattening on him would have told him. They could take a chance against the kind of men he was called upon to meet.

Had it been a day of real fighters he would never have gotten out of the preliminary class, and would soon have gone back to some decent work. And now the other incompetent (Pelky) is held for killing him, whereas the real authors of his death are the shrewd money getters who lied to him day after day and told him he could fight.

SOUTH ATLANTIC LEAGUE REVISES BALL SCHEDULE

SAVANNAH, GA., May 28.—A special meeting of the South Atlantic League magnates was held in Savannah yesterday for the purpose of making a number of revisions of the present playing schedule. These revisions are necessary because of the late entrance of Charleston into the circuit. Charleston is said to be suffering considerable inconvenience by reason of the present schedule.

Those in attendance on the meeting were President J. K. Pray, of the Albany club; President W. H. Walsh, of the Charleston club; Secretary Charles E. Walton, of the Columbus association; President A. W. Barrs, of the Jacksonville club; President M. J. Etherage, of the Macon club, and President George W. Armstrong, of the Savannah club.

GALLANT DEFEATS HOGAN.

BOSTON, May 28.—"One Round" Hogan, of California, who was substituted for K. O. Sweeney in the main bout at the Atlas A. A., was defeated in a ten-round bout with Johnny Gallant, of Boston, last night.

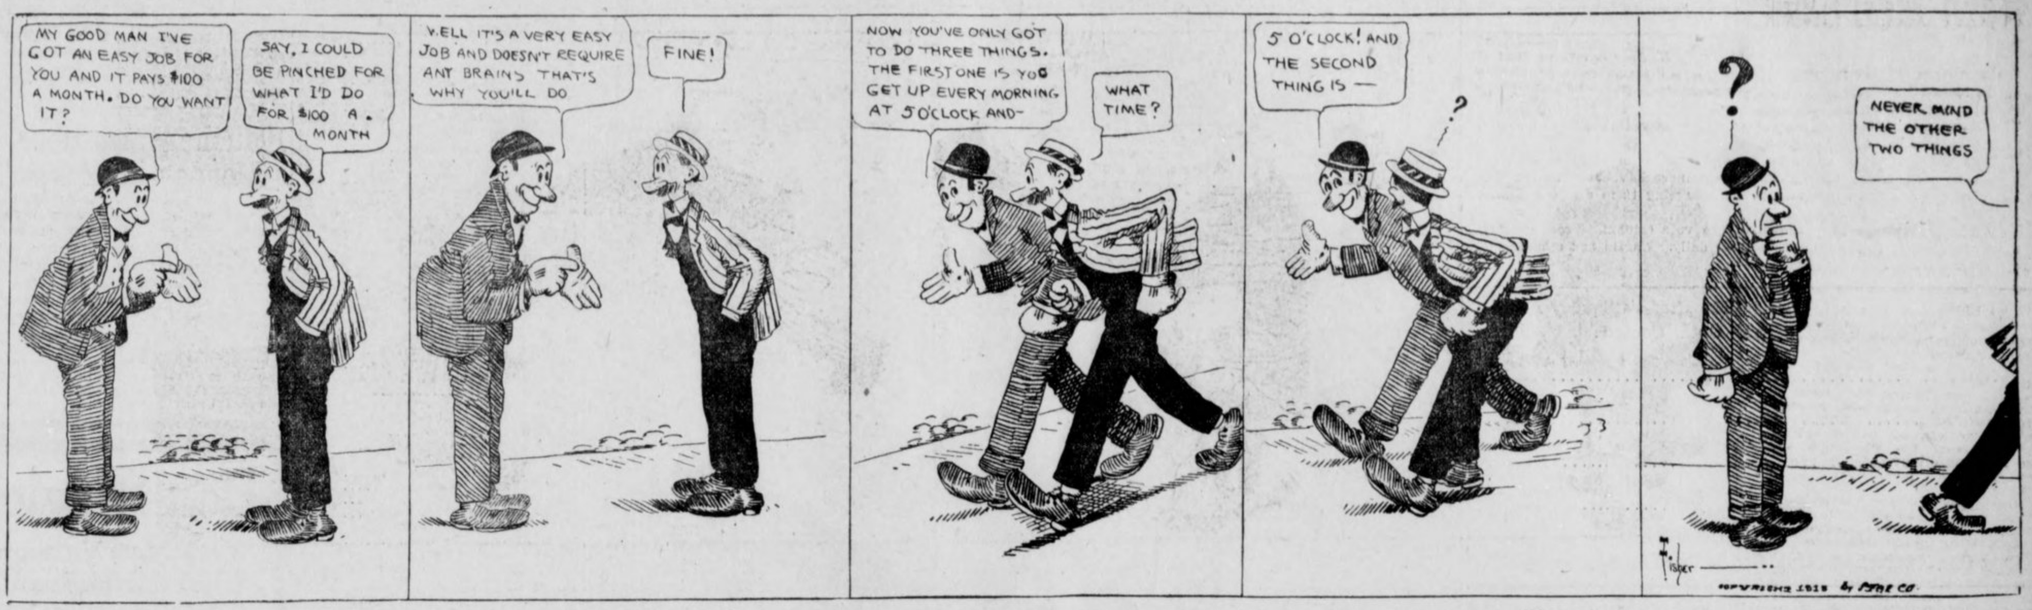
Get Up When I'm Going to Bed? No, Sir! — By "Bud" Fisher



100 MILES HOUR POSSIBLE AT MOTORDROME

That speeds of 100 miles an hour for short flashes will inevitably be reached on the new motordome, going up now at the old show grounds, is the belief of the motorcycle experts who are gathered here to follow the season of racing which is soon to start over Jack Prince's Southern circuit.

Already, with the top of the track completed, and with serious danger lurking in any speed over 75 miles an hour, the riders are hitting up a speed of 90 an hour. That gives a hint of what they will do later. Before they can really "let out" the track must be completed—and this will soon be done. To finish it two feet six inches of heavy planks will be placed at the top of the real racing surface. This surface now in place is at an angle of 58 degrees. The new planking will be placed at 90 degrees—or "straight up." On top of this, also at 90 degrees, will be extremely heavy wire netting, four feet six inches high. On top of this will be the guard rail.

Men Will "Ride the Wire."

When the wire netting and the planks are in place the real speeding will begin. And when this happens the riders will not only ride on the 58-degree surface, but they will actually mount the perpendicular wall and will even ride on the wire netting.

With everything in place the riders can begin to find out what speed the track really has. It is their opinion that it is extremely fast. It has been particularly well constructed and seems right in every particular.

Not Motorcycles Here.

To add to the speed possibilities two new consignments of racing motorcycles have been shipped to the track from different factories, and they are the latest and most improved machines, made strictly for speed, and faster than anything of their size ever built before. Every morning and afternoon now the riders are tuning up their machines and getting them ready for the big doings.

On a good board track the speed limits are usually the nerve and the strength of the driver. The track, when once a man is fairly started, is nothing but a flat road of boards. There is nothing in the way and no turns to take—for the track is a perfect circle.

No Limit But the Sky.

It takes tremendous nerve and coolness to hold a machine steady at high speed, and it takes great power to hold its nose down and to keep it from going straight up and over the top. Aside from this, there is no limit to the speed except the power of the engines, and they are built fast enough to go at a rate faster than man ever rode before.

LIEBHARDT WILL HOOK UP WITH TURTLE TEAM

MEMPHIS, TENN., May 28.—"Sugar Glen" Liebhardt, renowned in song and story as the "Iron Man of the Minors," will return to the Southern League as a member of the Memphis pitching staff as soon as satisfactory arrangements can be made by Manager Bernhard. While no announcement has been made to the effect, it is understood that Floyd Krob, the erratic left-hander, will be released.

BEAUMONT CLUB WILL GET PITCHER WEAVER

Orlie Weaver will probably go to Beaumont, Texas, instead of to New Orleans. Charley Frank has refused to take Weaver unless he can get a clear title to his services, and Smith is not willing to give him up on that basis. Waivers have been secured on him and he will be sent to the Texas League.

White City Park Now Open

Sporting Food

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

CALGARY.

A human life snuffed out, and all for what?
A youth who played the game and reckoned not;
A crowd of human creatures known as men,
And every manlike instinct all forgot.

A crowd of creatures, all in human shape,
Who sit beside the shambles, all agape,
And cry for crimson blood, and still more blood—
An' yet men frown upon the lowly ape!

Were we a politician with a desire to commit political suicide, our first move would be to support a bill legalizing the alleged manly art of self-defense.

We have various reasons to be thankful, one of which is that we are not Arthur Pelky.

Clark Griffith informs us that Walter Johnsog has not attained his best form, but the form that he has attained is good enough to suit at least seven teams in the American League.

Not that we are prone to find fault with Charley Murphy, but if baseball players were to hold more conversations with baseball scribes and less with barkeeps there would be more regular baseball played.

There is no truth in the report that Mr. Murphy does not allow his athletes to talk to him. Among the athletes this is considered hard luck.

Garry Herrmann puts forth the information that the purpose of the national baseball agreement is to protect baseball players. This will be news to baseball players.

Somehow we have a hunch that even if those English poloists do happen to win there will not be any general mourning.

Some day some wise guy will tell us why it is that, when a baseball league opens its schedule the first ball must be heaved by a mayor or a sheriff or a constable or a justice of the peace or an alley inspector or something.

MERELY A PLEASANT DREAM.

A portly gent who lingered there was in an awful fix.
A crowd of wild and howling imps were walking on his toes
I said to Satan: "Why abuse you poor old helpless guy?"
"That person owned a baseball park on earth," he made reply.
"Not only that," he ambled on, with visage grim and dark.
"He is the guy who introduced the peddlers in the park."

MEMPHIS HEARS THAT ATLANTA WANTS KROH

MEMPHIS, TENN., May 28.—Memphis to-day made a cash offer for Third Baseman Frank Manush, of New Orleans, and was turned down by Manager Frank, who insisted that Manush would not be sold unless it were to some major league club. At present the infielder is out of the game, nursing a wrenched leg.

It was also announced that Manager Bernhard would confer with Third Baseman Bales when the Memphis club reached Chattanooga Thursday. Whether the collegian will be taken on depends upon the showing of Abstein. Ward has given perfect satisfaction at third, and if any further change is made it will have to do with first base.

Waivers have been asked on Pitcher Floyd Krob, and sea-deep information is to the effect that Bill Smith, of Atlanta, may take the erratic southpaw on for a try-out.

BRONCHO RIDING IS BLAMED FOR M'CARTY'S DEATH

By Ed W. Smith

CALGARY, ALBERTA, May 28—Despite the exonerating verdict of the Coroner's jury Monday night, both Arthur Pelky, or Peltier, as his right name is, and Tommy Burns were held in $10,000 each at a court hearing to answer to the charge of manslaughter preferred by the Dominion Government for the death of Luther McCarty in the ring of Tommy Burns' arena.

Pelky was held directly; Burns as promoter of the contest. The other two concerned—William McCarney, manager of McCarty, and Referee Ed Smith—were detained for a short time only as witnesses and later were permitted to leave the city of Calgary and the country upon furnishing a bond of $500 each and their promise to appear here at some later date to testify during the trial.

Bonds were furnished in all cases without trouble, townspeople flocking out plentifully to sign the court documents.

The preliminary hearing was before Inspector Duffus at the mounted police barracks, and practically the same testimony was gone over as that at the Coroner's jury hearing. Both McCarney and Smith testified at length with Pelky in the prisoner's cage. Burns was not heard, as he was held to be equally guilty with Pelky.

McCarney Off for East.

A strong effort was made by the crown to show that McCarney was an equal promoter in the show with Burns, but this failed and the Philadelphia man was permitted to leave on the midnight train with the body of McCarty.

Dr. H. H. Moshier, the man who declared that the death of McCarty was due to a fractured spine at the base of the brain resulting in a hemorrhage, again was called and repeated what he had said the day before. As a result nothing new was brought out and the case remained as mysterious as it was ten minutes after McCarty had been declared dead.

Billy McCarney, manager of McCarty, gave me his first statement of what he thought was the matter with McCarty in the ring. After hearing McCarney and the testimony of the doctors I am strongly of the opinion that McCarty received a slight fracture of the neck during some practice work he did with bucking bronchos a short time before the contest.

McCarney said to me before boarding his train with the body of McCarty:

"These doctors say that a fracture of the kind might have been received within four days of autopsy and that there then would be no fibrous growth around the injury.

Luther delighted to ride fractious horses and get them to buck. He often got some nasty twists in this way and I was forever begging him to cease the sport that he thought was so good. But he would not, and I have an idea that he might have been injured in this way and not known it."

McCarney is out of the boxing game for good, he said. He will make no attempt to find anybody to take McCarty's place in his estimation, and will go into the theatrical profession, in which he has made many friends.

Wife Will Accompany Remains.

On the way East McCarney expected Mrs. Luther McCarty to board the train and accompany the remains into Chicago and beyond into Ohio, where the burial will take place at Piqua.

The settlement of Luther's estate will be made at that time. It is known that Luther's ambition was to provide for the future of the child now two years old. McCarney will endeavor to arrange to carry out the "big boy's" wishes in this matter. Luther's father will be waiting the arrival of the remains at Piqua.

HOPPE BEATS JAP CUE EXPERT EASILY, 500 TO 33

NEW YORK, May 28.—Willie Hoppe successfully defended his world's billiard championship title at 18-inch balk line, two shots in, against the challenger, Kodji Yamada, of Japan, here, the score being 500 to 33.

Since the rules of the game were so changed that the "anchor" was barred, no other such one-sided championship game has been seen. Hoppe won the bank, but failed to score when he led off. Yamada ran 15 and this was his best attempt, as in the next ten innings he added only 18.

GIBBONS STOPS SHAW.

NEW YORK, May 28.—Tom Gibbons, of St. Paul, scored an easy victory last night over Johnny Shaw, of Fort Hamilton, Ontario. The bout was stopped in the third round.

KEEFE BESTS DRISCOLL.

NEW YORK, May 28.—Eddie Keefe, of Philadelphia, last night outpointed Young Driscoll, of New York, in a fast ten-round bout.

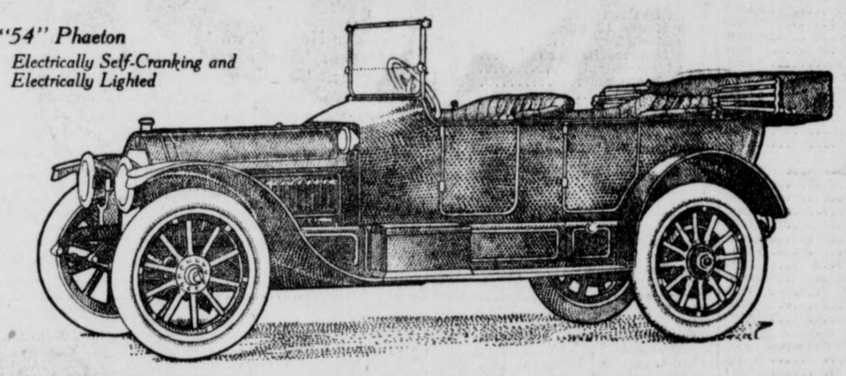
The World's Largest Builders of Six-Cylinder Automobiles

"54" Phaeton
Electrically Self-Cranking and Electrically Lighted



Study the Dealer as Intently as You Do the Car

Do not purchase an automobile of a dealer in whom you cannot have complete confidence. Personality is a large factor in business dealings. The dealer whose personality engenders your confidence in him, whose business principles are sound, who is prosperous and for whom owners of cars he has sold say good words is the logical man from whose firm you can safely purchase an automobile.

If you would know the value of dealers' service in the operation of an automobile, you have but to consult men who have owned several different makes of cars and, if you will talk with any HUDSON owner, you will appreciate the value of the type of service we furnish to the owner of an automobile.

All business is done solely on confidence.

Confidence of one man in another. If you cannot have confidence in a dealer who sells the car you have selected, then yours is an unsafe purchase.

The Service You Buy When Your Choice is a HUDSON

There is scarcely any limit to which we will not go to insure HUDSON owners the fullest satisfaction from their cars. We are more interested in you and your motoring interests after we have sold you the car than before you have bought. Yet, we realize that this is contrary to the attitude of the average automobile concern.

This service that we give you is but keeping faith with the Hudson Motor Car Company. There is a clause in our contract with the factory, which insures every purchaser of the highest standard of motor car service to be had, and this we cheerfully and rigidly adhere to in our deals with owners.

The New HUDSON "Six" rose to a higher point as a sales success than any 6-cylinder car has ever seen in the same length of time it has been on the market. Its exceptional performance has been unusual among 6-cylinder cars.

Its smooth, sweet-running mechanism gives a sensation of flying that is lacking in a 4-cylinder car. You can throttle it down to 3 miles an hour on high speed and pick up to 60 miles an hour with smoothness and ease that will be a revelation to you, if you have owned 4-cylinder cars.

You can go through city traffic at 3 miles an hour on high, with every cylinder hitting as smoothly as if you were going ten times as fast.

Avoid Disappointment in Getting Delivery

Ninety per cent of HUDSON orders are for spring delivery—hence, within a few days, it will be impossible to secure a delivery date for a car.

Hence, we cannot impress too strongly upon prospective purchasers the necessity of securing a fixed delivery date for their cars.

It would be well to come see the New HUDSON "Six" at your earliest convenience, or write or phone for new catalog.

The "54" Phaeton sells at $2450. The "37"—the "Four-cylinder masterpiece"—is $1875, prices f. o. b. Detroit.

BIG VOTE GAINS MAKE PONY CONTEST MORE EXCITING EVERY DAY

Saturday night the lists close in The Georgian and American's pony contest, and the entrants will "run it out" without further competition.

The list has gone well beyond 300 and includes boys and girls from all parts of Atlanta and the State and widely scattered areas outside the State.

One advantage the contestants are overlooking to a large extent is the fact that payments of overdue accounts bring votes just the same as the identical amount paid on new subscriptions. Boys and girls whose parents, relatives or acquaintances owe anything for subscriptions to The Georgian and American can collect the money themselves, bring it in and be credited with votes.

The same interview will open an opportunity for them to seek renewals, so even if they know that acquaintances have been taking The Georgian and American they may profit by seeing them and canvassing for votes.

Big gains continue to be shown in the vote column. From now on the races promise to grow more exciting daily. Names and standing of contestants follow:

SYMPATHY AND GUNBOATS

News Note: Two battle cruisers, the Kongo and the Kirishima, are being built in England for Japan. They are of 25,000 tons dsplacement and 27 knots speed. They are armed with 13 1-2 inch guns. The Kongo is about completed. Former Secretary Meyer expressed belief that these battle cruisers are as powerful as any battleships afloat and of five knots greater speed. Within the past week Japan has purchased at least four ships suitable for transports in England. They are the Narrung, Benacre, Bentola and Vadala. All are of more than 3,000 tons displacement.

MEN WELCOME MOTHER'S FRIEND

A Duty That Every Man Owes to Those Who Perpetuate the Race.

It is just as important that men should know of progressive methods in advance of motherhood. The suffering, pain and distress incident to child-bearing can be easily avoided by having at hand a bottle of Mother's Friend.

This is a wonderful penetrating, external application that relieves all tension upon the muscles and enables them to expand without the painful strain upon the ligaments. Thus there is avoided all those nervous spells; the tendency to nausea or morning sickness is counteracted, and a bright, sunny, happy disposition is preserved that reflects wonderfully upon the character and temperament of the little one soon to open its eyes in bewilderment at the joy of his arrival. You can obtain a bottle of "Mother's Friend" at any drug store at $1.00, and it will be the best dollar's worth you ever obtained. It preserves the mother's health, enables her to make a quick and complete recovery, and thus renewed strength she will eagerly devote herself to the care and attention which mean so much to the welfare of the child. Write to the Bradfield Regulator Co., 129 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their valuable and instructive book of guidance for expectant mothers. Get a bottle of Mother's Friend today.

Mrs. Etta Lovett Dies at Augusta

AUGUSTA, GA., May 28.—Mrs. Etta Lovett, widow of the late Dr. W. C. Lovett, died at the residence of Mrs. H. M. Lovett, in Augusta to-day. She was the step-mother of Dr. W. C. Lovett, editor of The Wesleyan Christian Advocate, and Judge R. O. Lovett, of Atlanta; Rev. J. M. Lovett, of Louisville, and W. B. Loett, of Mobley. Her brother, R. W. Smith, is president of the LaGrange Female College.

The body of the deceased will be interred at Mobley.

Blanche Walsh Here Monday in 'Movies'

An innovation in Atlanta's motion picture world will be the appearance all next week of Blanche Walsh, celebrated emotional actress, in a picture presentation of "The Resurrection," Tolstoi's drama, at the Grand Theater Thursday morning at 10 o'clock.

Not a point that made the drama a success has been missed. Miss Walsh hesitated before risking her reputation to the "movies," but when she had seen the film, she declared it a wonderful success.

Long Beach Adopts Holocaust Orphans

LONG BEACH, CAL., May 28.—If any children were made orphans by the Empire Day catastrophe, the people of Long Beach will provide them with new homes and new parents.

This assertion was made to-day by R. L. Bisby, secretary and chairman of the Chamber of Commerce.

Council of Griffin Still Defies Mayor

GRIFFIN, GA., May 28.—Another chapter to the long fight between the Mayor and Council of Griffin was written last night when the Finance Committee recommended and Council voted to accept the auto nre truck just delivered by the American-LaFrance Fire Engine Company. Excepting the protest of Mayor Smith, no opposition was raised.

No method of payment is prescribed, although a warrant for payment is directed. This is the mooted question.

COTTON SAGS ON BEARISH ADVICES

NEW YORK, May 28.—Influenced by easier cables and further bearish weather news, the cotton market opened easy to-day, first prices being 1 to 3 points lower than Tuesday's final. Old crop deliveries came in for considerable pressure, but was also some liberal selling of new positions. Later the cable prices rallied.

Liverpool was said to be a seller of July after the call, but the large spot interest purchased July in rather large volume, causing the market to steady, with the result that prices rallied about 1 to 4 points higher than the initial level. The selling was scattered.

During the forenoon the ring crowd was inclined to sell on the favorable map and the selling became freer. The buying of July was scattered and those buying seemed to be selling the new crop. Schill and Mitchell sold July as well as late positions.

The market developed a reactionary tendency, May dropping 8 points to 11.45, while July receded 3 points from the opening. New crop months, however, held steady around the opening level.

A certain broker issued notices to-day for 10,000 May, which was said to be for Liverpool account. This, however, had no effect, and fell flat on the market.

Theo Price, in this week's issue of his market report, is decidedly bearish. The report, in part, follows: "American short interest about covered and obtained its cotton from visible and invisible supply. Says if July prices are forced to extreme there is enough tenderable low grade cotton to liquidate that position. He refers to present large excess of interior stocks, and says crop has improved since rains fell. Think people expect bureau of 83.5. Believe acreage will be increased about 5 per cent."

The market gave up to the bearish influences during the last hour of trading when the ring and brokers representing spot houses dumped considerable cotton upon the market. July was heavily sold, but ruled extraordinarily steady. October and December were also under pressure. The market held remarkably steady and the offerings were absorbed by prominent operators. May notices tendered during the early trading were stopped by spot houses and was quickly redelivered, as it was not of a desirable grade for shipment.

It seems as if every one is awaiting the Government figures to be made public Monday, June 2, and we may expect a very narrow market until this report is out of the way.

At the close the market was steady with prices at a net decline of 4 to 10 points from Tuesday's close.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, May 28.—Liverpool shows decided weakness this morning with futures 2 to 4 points lower than due. Spots unchanged; sales, 10,000 bales. Political news is not good. London says that the powers practically extended an ultimatum to the allies to force the signing of the peace pact with Turkey. Forced peace of this character is hardly satisfactory.

The Journal of Commerce on Texas attracted much attention, as it is entirely out of line with information received from the best private sources. It appears strange, indeed, that Texas should be three weeks late on account of cold weather and that Oklahoma crop early, when, as a matter of fact, Government records show that Oklahoma temperatures have all along been on an average of 6 to 13 degrees colder than in Texas.

The market opened about 5 points lower, but sellers were scarce owing to anticipation of further professional support in New York, which, in fact, made its appearance soon after the opening and caused a rally of 5 points. According to New York advices this support is furnished with the intention of benefiting from short covering before the holidays. New York will be closed Friday and Saturday. The bureau report to May 28 will be issued Monday, June 2, at 11 a. m., our time. We compare with a belt average of 78.9 last year, 87.8 in 1911, 82 in 1910, and ten-year average of 79.9. The trade looks for a report between 81 and 84.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, May 28.—Liverpool sold July on and after the call, but after the call McFadden, Wilson, Riordan and Hubbard were buyers of July. The selling was scattered. Later the ring sold on favorable weather map and easier feeling abroad. Mitchell and Schill were the leading sellers.

* * *

Hentz issued 10,000 notices on May, which was said to be for Liverpool. These notices were stopped by Hopkins, Dwight & Co., Robert More & Co. and Rich.

* * *

Mitchell and Schill were fair sellers of July; also new crop positions.

* * *

* * *

Warehouse stocks in New York today are 72,970; certificated 60,222 bales.

* * *

Norden & Co. makes the condition of the crop 85 per cent and acreage increase 4.7 per cent.

* * *

* * *

About 800 replies received by the Georgia State Department of Agriculture are the basis of a report by that office that 23 per cent of the crop has been replanted and the average planting time is seventeen days late. Acreage has decreased about 6 per cent, compared with last year, but the condition is 82 per cent.

* * *

Last week Turner, of Memphis, made the condition of Georgia 74 per cent, and Monday The Commercial-Appeal made it 72 per cent.

* * *

George W. Neville, of the New York Cotton Exchange, in his annual report on the New York Cotton Exchange, said: "During the past five years when the New York Cotton Exchange was subjected to so much unjust criticism, there was never any complaint made of members resorting to undignified methods of soliciting business, but recently some of our members have expressed opinions to their market letters in such a way as to cause the complaint and supervisory committees to go thoroughly into this matter and reprimands have been administered."

The New York Cotton Exchange is to be congratulated on being so careful to maintain a high standard of business conduct among its members.

* * *

The Journal of Commerce has the following on the condition of the cotton crop in Texas and Oklahoma:

Texas—"Estimates of acreage do not vary greatly from a month ago, when an increase of 3.5 per cent was indicated. The percentage of condition will be approximately the same as last year, when it was 81.8 per cent. The season is very late, being nearly three weeks backward, due chiefly to cold weather. Considerable cotton is not yet up, and a number of farmers have not finished planting. Some replanting has been necessary. Rain has generally been plentiful and the ground is in a good state of preparation. Stands are rather spotted, but prospects are generally favorable."

Oklahoma—"A very substantial increase in acreage is indicated for Oklahoma over last year. Percentage condition will probably show a considerably higher figure than a year ago, when it was 78.7 per cent. Stands are very generally good and the crop has an excellent start. Rains have been somewhat excessive in some localities and grass is making headway. Some correspondents consider prospects the best in years. The season is early in many sections, but in the majority of cases ten to fifteen days late."

Dallas wires: "Texas generally clear. Oklahoma, light showers in Oklahoma City; north portion part cloudy; rest clear."

* * *

T. H. Price presents a bearish view of the cotton market in this week's issue of Cotton and Finance.

* * *

The Federal Grand Jury has postponed the inquiry into the cotton pool case indefinitely.

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, May 28.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map is very favorable; shows cloudy in the Atlantics; fair elsewhere. General rains in North Georgia and Carolinas. Some good rains in Carolinas, where they will be of great benefit. Indications are for fair and warmer over the entire belt, except possibly some showers on the Atlantic coast.

Memphis wires: "Generally fair and warmer weather is indicated for all cotton States. Heavy rains fell yesterday in North Carolina. Little or none elsewhere. Very favorable conditions."

MILLER-CARTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, May 28.—In the absence of general business, fluctuations are narrow. BEAR PRESSURE PUTS STOCKS OFF

Receivership for St. L. and S. F. Railway Has Bad Effect on Foreign Capital.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, May 28.—Pressure was exerted on the list at the opening of the stock market to-day, and declines ranging from fractions to 2 points were sustained. St. Louis and San Francisco shares were the weakest in consequence of the appointment of a receiver for the road in St. Louis. Frisco common was 1⅝ lower, selling around 31½, while the second preferred lost 2 points. Union Pacific and Southern Pacific bore up well. The former gained ½, while the latter, after sharing fractionally, recovered.

American Smelting was sold for a loss of 1½. Other issues which were off were Amalgamated Copper, ⅛; American Can, ¼; Canadian Pacific, ⅛; General Electric, ⅜; Missouri Pacific, ½; Pennsylvania, ⅜, and United States Steel common, ⅛.

Steel soon recovered its loss. St. Paul also recovered its fractional decline in twenty minutes of trading. Chesapeake and Ohio opened ¼ up, but lost its gain. Reading gained fractionally after opening unchanged.

The curb market was irregular. Despite the suit brought in London charging that an illegal pool was formed for speculation in shares of American Marconi stock after the Titanic disaster, this issue was only ⅝ lower on the curb.

Americans in London drooped.

The market continued irregular and dull during the forenoon and recessions were in evidence. Smelting declined 1⅝ to 66⅛. Copper was off ⅝ at 73¼. Canadian Pacific was off ⅛ at 232. Southern Pacific was up ⅛. Steel, St. Paul and Reading were off ¼. Chesapeake and Ohio was up 6¼ at 64⅜.

Call money loaning at 2¾c.

Most active issues shaded in the last hour. Canadian Pacific sold down to 229⅞, for a loss of 2⅛, but later recovered. Reading fell to 159⅞, for the loss of a point, but it rallied in the final half-hour. Other stocks which were under the noon range were St. Paul, Erie, Steel, Union Pacific and Pennsylvania.

Amalgamated Copper held firm.

PRICE CURRENT CROP REPORT.

CINCINNATI, May 28.—Corn planting in Iowa, Minnesota, the Dakotas and Nebraska has been seriously delayed by wet weather. In the southern territory of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma an extremely spotted condition has developed. Rain is needed in portions of this territory, particularly to relieve the hard surface conditions. Growth of winter wheat continues favorable. No critical conditions are in sight.

The crop thus far has not been molested to any extent by pests. We estimate the yield 335,320,000 bushels on present conditions for Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas.

The growth and condition of oats in the northern territory are above the ten-year average, while the condition in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois is below the ten-year average. Farm reserves of wheat in the twelve leading States are 11.6 per cent, oats 17.6, corn 19 per cent.

THE WEATHER.
Conditions.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—With the exception of showers to-night in New York and New England, the weather will be generally fair to-night and Thursday east of the Mississippi River with higher temperature Thursday in the interior districts.

Forecast.

Following is the forecast until 7 p. m. Thursday:

Georgia: Fair to-night; Thursday fair; warmer.

North Carolina: Fair to-night and Thursday; warmer Thursday.

South Carolina: Fair to-night; Thursday fair; warmer.

Florida: Fair to-night and Thursday.

Alabama: Fair to-night and Thursday; warmer in the interior.

Mississippi: Warmer to-night and Thursday.

Tennessee: Fair to-night, warmer in west portion. Thursday fair.

WHEAT IS EASIER; SELLING GENERAL

Early Gain Due to Bad News. Corn and Oats Are Steady on Light Offerings.

ST. LOUIS CASH QUOTATIONS.

Wheat—No. 2 red	98	@105
Corn—No. 2	59
Oats—No. 2	38¾@ 39

CHICAGO, May 28.—Many of the early buyers of wheat changed their positions late in the day and sold wheat quite freely and some of this grain showed severe losses. There were declines of ¼ for September, ⅜ for July and ⅝ for May. The last prices were ⅞ to 1c below the highest levels of the morning. There were unconfirmed rumors late in the day of rains in scattered localities over Kansas.

Corn closed ⅛ to ¼c lower, while oats were ¼ to 3⅛c higher. The most strength in coarse grains was to be seen in the May future, as shorts were covering in that month.

Provisions were a shade lower for the day for all save July ribs and September pork.

POULTRY, PET AND LIVE STOCK

If Little Chicks Are Properly Fed Loss Will Be Less

Wholesome Advice by an Expert Who Has Tried It From Every Angle.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

Judge Marshall: I want to ask you a number of questions, if you will not think I am too greedy for information.

I live on a farm about two miles from town and am trying to raise chickens enough to make a living from.

I do very well with those I succeeded in raising, but I loose about half of my chicks before they are two weeks old.

As soon as the chicks are hatched I give them a good feed of mash, composed of equal parts of corn meal and wheat bran mixed with hot water, allowing it to cool a little before feeding. I feed this once a day and cracked corn three times a day; but I have much trouble with sparrows eating up the feed.

I also have much trouble with the red mites bothering my sitting hens, which I seem unable to control.

Then, again, I have trouble every summer by having great, big, fat hens drop dead without any warning. They will be apparently well one day and the next they will be dead. They are very fat and fine and I see no reason why they should die thus.

I always feed a little good condition powder of some kind three times a week.

If it is not asking too much of you I should appreciate an answer to these troubles. I am yours very truly, MRS. E. E. SPEER.

Tifton, Ga.

Cut Out Wet Mash.

ANSWER—We have texts enough for a number of good sermons but will have to do like the boy said he did in hunting for the cows: Go to the end of the lane and scatter.

First, in regard to the little chicks, I would say cut out the wet mash entirely, or, at least, until they are two months old and then if you want to use some of your feed in that way it will be all right, but not for the newly hatched ones. Feed rolled oats dry, and the cracked corn fine enough so they can eat it well, providing you can not get the ready mixed chick feed at your grocers in Tifton. But there is no question that the rolled oats is good, and so is the corn, but feed them absolutely dry.

Another place where you have erred seriously is in feeding as soon as hatched, if that is what you intended to say.

There is nothing that will so quickly get the digestive organs out of order, or, for that matter, prevent them from ever getting in order, as feeding newly hatched chicks at once. Give them a chance to season out a little, as one old poultryman used to say. When they first hatch they are a jelly, as it were, and it takes a day or two for them to toughen up, ready to digest what is given them. So, the way to do is to wait forty-eight hours before any feed is given. They will not starve, but be all the better for the little fast. They may have a good supply of sharp sand to peck at. Then feed the rolled oats or prepared dry chick feed. This can be continued until they can handle coarser cracked corn and wheat.

Green Feed Necessary.

All the while they must have good green stuff of some kind and a little dried beef scrap after they are three weeks old, and I think you will have no trouble if everything is kept clean and free from mites. The sparrows can be controlled by feeding under wire netting runs.

When you set your hens, move them out of the hen house into some clean shed, or, for that matter, out of doors, using barrels for the nest. But you should not have them in the houses. Take a pint of oil of tar, a pint of gasoline, three quarts of kerosene; mix thoroughly and spray or pour over the roosts and the sides of the house where the roost poles rest. If this is attended to an hour before roosting time, it will usually about finish the job, both on the poles and the hens. If any are left on the hens, dust them thoroughly with some good lice powder. After they have been really cleaned out, it will pay to grease the poles with hot lard and a brush.

As to your loosing your fat hens by sudden deaths, I would say that I think you have been using too much condition powders. In my estimation even a little is too much when hens are in health and laying. You have weakened their digestive organs by overstimulation, coupled with too much fat in hens that are, no doubt, over two years old. When hens get a little old and fat, heavy behind, it is the best policy to send them to the butchers.

Such hens have passed their useful time. They have slowed up on laying and with no drain upon their systems they fill up with fat inside, where it presses on the heart and is the cause of the sudden deaths you speak of. It is no trouble to detect such hens in the yard, and it is a good plan to use them while they are in good health, rather than wait for them to come to the sudden death referred to.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Residences Bring Total of $34,500

Deed Filed in Purchase of $19,750 Lots on Paces Ferry Road. Other Notes.

Papers in the sale of two residences on Ponce DeLeon Avenue and one on Gordon Street in West End have gone to record. Minnie M. Costner has sold to J. E. McRee 403 Gordon Street, 373 feet south of Holderness Street, for $9,000.

John B. Daniel has sold to J. T. Tuggle, 644 Ponce DeLeon Avenue, 50 by 180 feet, for $12,500.

Mrs. Mattie F. Huggins has sold to Mrs. Kate G. Pryor, 346 Ponce DeLeon Avenue, 343 feet east of North Boulevard, for $13,000. The lot is 38 by 321 feet.

Executors' Deed Filed.

An interesting executors' deed has also been filed. This conveys to Robert F. Maddox two tracts of land adjoining his country place, "Woodlawn," for an aggregate of $19,750. The grantors are Mrs. Gertrude J. Dickey and others, executors of the estate of the late James L. Dickey.

Favor Roswell Road Work.

E. T. Luckie, of the Holmes & Luckie Realty Company, reports good progress in the work of signing up property owners who favor widening the Roswell Road 20 feet from Buckhead to Piedmont Road. Among the signers are John W. Grant, F. M. Brownell and George B. Powell, who have an aggregate of about 3,000 feet of frontage; George M. Hope, J. H. and J. M. Karwisch, L. W. Rogers, C. S. Honour, J. L. Riley and A. C. Walters.

Building Owners Organize.

For the purpose of perfecting a permanent organization and for inviting the National Association of Building Owners and Managers to Atlanta in 1914, local office building and apartment house owners and managers met Tuesday. The new body is known as the Association of Building Owners and Managers of Atlanta, and it has decided to send a committee to Cincinnati next month to present its invitation to the national association.

Action of the "big building" men in combining is taken as an indication that the office building and apartment house business in Atlanta will take great strides forward in future. Among the members of the new association are Ivan E. Allen, Fred Houser, Charles E. Wilkinson, A. W. Martin, Fred Shaefer, J. B. Pendleton, J. M. Barclay, J. M. Shearer, W. B. Stovall and J. L. Fincher. One hundred members are expected to join.

Auction Sale Saturday.

John H. James, auctioneer, will sell at public outcry Saturday 40 lots on Ashby Street for J. T. Elliott, the owner. Mr. James has plats at his office.

Inquiries for Colonial Home.

Ralph O. Cochran, the well-known real estate man, reports many inquiries for the colonial home which he will auction off Thursday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at 101 West Tenth Street. This home is a two-story brick affair and the property of W. C. Harper.

More Peachtree Improvements.

Peachtree has been promised another substantial business building. C. J. Sheehan will erect at once a two-story structure on the east side of the thoroughfare between Pine and Merritts Avenue. There are already several automobile shops in this block.

Mr. Sheehan traded for this 21 by 186 foot lot through the Cheatham Brothers' real estate agency, giving to Dr. A. W. VanHoose, of Rome, 228 South Pryor Street and 135 Davis Street, for $11,500, and paying the balance in cash and notes. The Peachtree property brought $26,250, or $1,250 a front foot. Dr. VanHoose recently sold 21 feet at this point to Ben J. Massell, who has put a sign on his lot announcing that he will build for acceptable tenant.

SUBURBAN HOMES.

IN INMAN PARK, Edgewood, Kirkwood and Decatur, we have a number of pretty cottages, and a few very attractive larger homes. Most of these places carry all of the conveniences. Kirkwood and Decatur as yet have not the gas, but electric lights and plumbing. This is the time when the country is most attractive, bus car service fine, and to remain during the winter is no hardship. Large lots, good schools and churches, and reasonable rents. Let us tell you about these.

CLAIRMONT AVENUE, DECATUR, GA.

ON THE CORNER of Ponce DeLeon, in this pretty little town, within twenty-five minutes' ride of the city, we have this splendid modern eleven-room house, on large corner lot. Would be a choice location for a large private family or for summer boarders. We are offering at low rental to first-class parties.

BUSINESS HOUSES.

IF YOU ARE looking for a business location, either central or in some of the thickly populated suburbs, you should come in and consult our list. We will tell you about these, and we are then ready with comfortable conveyances to show you our properties.

Speech and Thought Make Our Lives

Everything That We Do Is Accomplished in Time BY THOUGHT. Thinking Is Your Only Real Power; Time Is Your Real Property—and There Is Little of It.

Copyright, 1913.

We human beings ceased to be animals and became MEN when we first used thought in place of brute strength.

At some distant day in our development the animal that preceded us here made up its feeble mind that there was something better than strength, teeth and claws, and began to use its little brain.

This animal, our ancestor, the so-called pithecanthropos, or monkey-man, observed the saber-toothed tiger ripping open the stomach of a monster three times its size, watched the mammoth ploughing through swamps, crushing down trees, observed the great reptiles and all other proofs of brute force, and, without realizing it, this ancestor said vaguely to himself:

"I can't compete when it comes to teeth and claws, weight and bulk. I am a feeble thing in this jumble of power and battle. I must THINK the way out."

And so our real human life began.

Our ancestor with a forehead one-quarter of an inch high, a jaw that stuck out as far as the jaw of a gorilla, with teeth bigger than any of those of any bulldog, and with long arms dropping below the knees, that could crush a man of to-day with ease—this old ancestor of ours decided that he would get out of the battle for supremacy of muscle and teeth and see what could be done with the brain AND WITH THINKING.

You can imagine how the thinking process started.

It was hardly real thought at first, just a kind of intelligent impulse. Our ancestor sat up in a tree rubbing his nose and looking at the saber-toothed tiger that couldn't climb.

He saw the shining teeth, six inches long perhaps, and he didn't like the looks of them.

Later, when the tiger was gone, he climbed down and picked up a sharp flint, ten inches long, heavier, sharper and harder than the tiger's tooth.

He held this in his hand, struck his brother with it, killed the brother, and felt highly satisfied with his intellectual accomplishment.

He had discovered that a tooth made of stone, held at the end of an arm four feet long, could do as much damage as the tooth of a tiger.

So he fastened his sharp flint to the end of a piece of wood, sat in the tree, stabbed the tiger in the back as he passed, broke his backbone, ate his flesh, took the teeth to make implements and ornaments for himself—and so began the thinking human race.

Later man used explosive dynamite shells in place of sharp flints, he dwelt in skyscrapers in place of holes in the rocks, he used flying machines in place of canoes dug out of a log.

BUT ALL THE TIME HE WAS A THINKING ANIMAL INSTEAD OF AN ANIMAL RELYING ON STRENGTH, TEETH, MUSCLE, THICK HIDE, CLAWS.

And every step that he gained in his upward climb toward control of the earth and dominion over the animals was gained by the THOUGHT that was started when he made up his mind to use the sharp flint and conquer the long white tooth.

He is a descendant of all the thinkers of three hundred thousand years past.

He comes in an unbroken line from the old half monkey, half thinking creature that discovered the possibility of conquering animals stronger than himself.

And this thinker on the ash barrel in poverty, in anxiety, in remorse, is unfortunately the type of many of those—more than half, probably—who represent the so-called "civilization and marvels of achievement."

This picture is a copy, simply made, of Rodin's great statue, "Le Penseur."

In the picture that we print on this page the artist shows the man of sorrow and of weakness, pitifully trying to use for his betterment and for his defense the power which has been man's only weapon.

Readers, whether you be old or young, realize NOW that your salvation, your hope, your chances in life, are all in the thinking power hidden away in your head.

How much will you use that power of thought?

How long are you going to wait to use it efficiently?

To what extent can you make thought, recently acquired by men, control the animal forces and passions that date back millions of years to our earliest ancestors of the days when this earth was young?

Are you going to use your power, your health, your clear mind, and your will NOW to solve your problems and protect yourself, and be a benefit to the human race, or are you to wait, and waste, and wonder, and delay, until it is too late, as with this man?

The Thinker

He Thinks Hard, Bitterly—But Too Late. Thought Conquers and Solves Life's Problems, but Only When the Thought Controls the Power of the Body and the Mind. When the Power is Gone, THOUGHT COMES TOO LATE. (SEE EDITORIAL.)

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Ill Temper

If Allowed to Progress in Children, Its Effect Is Felt in Later Generations to Destroy Often the Happiness of Many Homes.

Written For The Atlanta Georgian

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

SOMETHING like one hundred and twenty-five years ago, a little girl was born in New England. She was pretty and bright, and her parents made much of her; and she soon became a spoiled child in the way of disposition.

She was irritable and fault-finding; and these tendencies were not corrected, but excused on the ground that "Abbie was high-strung," and "smart," and "not like other ordinary children."

She married, young, a man of rare sweetness of character, and with an inexhaustible patience. He was devoted to his handsome wife, and she made him a very good consort, so far as her industry and economy and loyalty went.

But she worried him with her fault-finding and irritability.

He made the great mistake of establishing his wife with his relatives, and all her quarrelsome and irritable tendencies were, of course, aggravated.

She bore him six children, and as she had never been taught anything of the laws of prenatal influence, she fretted and complained about the increasing numbers of her children, before their birth.

Erred in Telling Them.

And after they came into life and she grew to love them she made the great error of telling them how unwelcome they had been. This was especially true of the second child, who was scarcely a year younger than her older sister.

This second child inherited all her mother's irritable characteristics and prided herself upon being extremely high-spirited and capable of "answering back" with some sharp retort.

She, too, was excused, and even lauded for her peculiarities.

She was regarded as "out of the common" and "just like Abbie."

When she married her husband did not possess the amiable qualities of her father, and, of course, discord soon prevailed.

Children came into this home, and so a second generation was reared in this unfortunate atmosphere.

The grandmother lived until she reached the age of ninety-four, and with each year her disposition grew more unpleasant.

When the daughter visited at her old home there was always bickering and scolding and quarrelling.

And into these family fusses three generations were drawn.

Then came a fourth generation, after the grandmother died, and this fourth generation was brought up under the same conditions, and to-day this generation is cursed with the original uncurbed temper and unhappy tendency to find fault of the first great-grandmother, which came down through the second grandmother and the father, and was, like a river, fed from streams running into it from other branches, which all became corrupted when the original stream was approached.

Have Wrecked Homes.

Sisters have become enemies, brothers quarrel; jealousy, ill temper, gossip, back-biting and all manner of bad habits, resulting from uncontrolled temper, have destroyed homes, and in some of these homes a fifth generation of little children is becoming infected.

And all this might have been averted, and heaven, instead of hell, been established in the homes of four generations had the first child been taught self-control, good-will, amiability, gentle manners, the religion of kindness and courtesy.

All of these women had kind hearts toward the poor, sick and needy. They were always "good neighbors" when there was trouble in other homes.

But they never learned the strength and power which lies in silence, and they never learned the beauty of the soft answer which turneth away wrath.

The two original sinners (for such uncontrolled tempers are sinful) were women of great strength of intellect and of dominating personalities, therefore, their influence was far-reaching and powerful. In many of their descendants the unpleasant qualities have taken the form of petty meanness and ignoble nagging toward all those with whom they are thrown in close association.

Teach Them Kindness.

If your child, madam or sir, shows wonderful "spirit" and is very "high strung" and brilliant with repartee in the way of the quick retort, do not laugh and applaud and think you have something to be proud of, something out of the ordinary.

Teach your children the religion of kindness, the religion of gentle voices, amiable manners, generous judgments and self-control.

Make them understand early how vulgar is uncontrolled temper and how ill-bred the sharp rejoinder.

Do this for their own sakes and the sakes of unborn generations.

.:. Housewives and the Art of Housekeeping .:.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

THE reign of the good housekeeper is only just beginning. Every month sees some new invention that helps to diminish the slavery of housework. Housekeeping has for ages been an art, and, as with all arts, its practitioners range in their abilities from mediocrity through fair talent up to positive genius.

Now housekeeping is becoming a science, and science has this advantage over art—that it tends to equalize abilities by bringing results through mechanical and automatic methods which anybody can employ.

The French Kitchen.

For a plain male citizen, who knows little about the secrets of the kitchen, it is a wonderful revelation to read the articles in GOOD HOUSEKEEPING MAGAZINE and to look at the devices there shown which relate to this fast-growing science. Almost everything about a house can now be done with half the expenditure of labor and time formerly required. To be without this knowledge and these inventions is not merely to be behind the times, but it is to live harder, less well and more expensively than there is any necessity for.

The kitchen is the stomach of the house, and upon the way in which it performs its functions, the welfare of the whole establishment depends. My attention has just been called to a model French kitchen. All the world has long looked up to France as the ideal home of culinary art, and it is evident that she does not intend to be left behind in the modern transformation of this art into a science.

The kitchen has also been called "the theater of the French housewife," and this theater is becoming really a fascinating place with its display of electrical ranges, scientific lamps, automatic grinders, mills and churns, Pasteur filters, coffee makers, ice cream freezers, devices for easily getting rid of waste substances, porcelain sinks as white and clean as Alpine snow, scouring machines, filters, convenient cupboards, and all the glittering array of nickel, silver, copper, aluminum, bronze and graniteware utensils that fill the room with bright reflections.

Not to Visit, But to Help.

One of the great charms of a French kitchen is that the mistress is frequently to be seen there, not merely as a visitor, but as a helper and director. She inspires her servants by her presence, and by her advice. She does not pretend to live in another world than theirs. They know that she understands their business as well as they do themselves, and even better. She can take their place if necessary. This is as true of the rich as of the relatively poor.

The economy of the French people has long been world-famous, and nowhere is it more brilliantly displayed than in the kitchen. A French family, as has often been said, could live, and live well, upon the waste of many American families. And the exercise of this economy—this art of getting all the good out of things—fascinates those who practise it. It has the charm of all applied knowledge. They not only get all that is good—they make the good better. I know many a little country inn in France where, for three or four francs, wine included (a franc is worth 20 cents), one can have a really better meal than can be had in Atlanta for two or three dollars.

And yet meats, and similar things, cost about as much in France as they do here. The secret lies in economical management and good cooking. It is no wonder that a first-rate French cook can command in New York a salary of $5,000, or even more. And if he, or she, retains on this side of the Atlantic the economical skill learned at home, more than half the salary is saved to the employer.

To Learn Economy.

One thing to be noticed in the French kitchen is that there is usually no false economy in the choice of apparatus. Everything is of the best, or at least good and substantial. The kitchen, in its way, is as well furnished as the parlor. You may be sure that this spells economy in the end, for if it did not it would not be found in France.

I have often been surprised on entering a house in France, which, in America, might be taken as the abode of people in very humble circumstances, to find a far larger and better-stocked kitchen than many rather pretentious houses possess here, accompanied by a culinary skill in its mistress which would earn her a large salary on this side of the ocean.

No doubt we shall learn this economical wisdom in good time—and the sooner the better.

I SHOULD WORRY

By WEX JONES.

IT used to be jolly to chatter with Polly
On fashion and frivel and froth of the day;
But now it's sheer folly talking to Polly,
For she puts "I should worry" to all that she'll say.

"I should worry like an onion"
(Here she laughs, she feels so tickled),
"I should worry like an onion
And discover that I'm pickled.
I should worry like a saw"
(How that "worry" gets me riled!),
"I should worry like a saw
Till my teeth have all been filed."

You hear all the flappers, tongues going like clappers
Bandy about this ridiculous phrase;
Prue, Polly and Lizzie will jabber you dizzy,
Twisting it round in its different ways:

"I should worry seven days
And become a little weak."
"I should worry," "I should worry,"
Every time they speak.
"I should worry like a fish
And get the hook."
"I should worry like a gumdrop
And go North with old Doc Cook."
"I should worry," "I should worry"—
Phrase that sets me in a flurry,
Phrase that sets my goat a-scurry—

Oh, well, I should worry.
