HUFF FOUND GUILTY IN CONTEMPT CASE

Judge Grubb Rules Against the Former Macon Mayor in the Speer Controversy.

Colonel W. A. Huff, former mayor of Macon, has been found guilty of contempt of court for writing certain pointed letters to Judge Emory Speer in the famous Macon controversy. In the letters Colonel Huff expressed unfavorable opinion of the way Judge Speer had conducted a bankruptcy case in which Colonel Huff was interested.

Following receipt of the letters, Judge Speer filed charges, and Judge W. I. Grubb announced a decision today, holding Colonel Huff in contempt. Colonel Huff will take the case to a higher court.

Colonel Huff was formerly mayor of Macon. He is 83 years old. At his home in Macon this morning, after receiving notice fro mhis lawyer, Attorney General T. S. Felder, that he had been held guilty of contempt, Colonel Huff made the following statement:

"It is what I expected, at the time I wrote Judge Speer those letters last summer. I had a vague notion that perhaps I was committing contempt of court. However, I was not as familiar then with the law on contempt as I am now. I wrote the letters simply and solely to let Judge Speer know what I thought about him and about the way he had handled my bankruptcy case. He knows and the public knows, and on that score I am satisfied. There was never any intention on my part to attack the judiciary. I was aiming exclusively at Judge Speer. But if another court, which I consider an absolutely fair and impartial tribunal, holds that I am guilty, then that settles it, and I have no protest to make. I shall take whatever punishment is meted out to me without a murmur."

Judge Grubb will be in Atlanta tomorrow for the purpose of conferring with Mr. Felder in regard to passing the order of sentence.

Germany Wins Big Order From America

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 2.—Newspapers announce that the Siemens-Schuckert Electric Works of Berlin have beaten their powerful American competitors and obtained contracts for gigantic power plants in Chile.

The first order represents $3,000,000, and others of equal magnitude are to follow. They come from the Chile Exploration Company, which plans extensive expoitations of Chilean copper ore after the opening of the Panama Canal. The exploration company is said to consist of North American capitalists.

Weston, Now 75, Off On 1,500-Mile Hike

NEW YORK, June 2.—Cheered by a large crowd of enthusiastic admirers, Edward Payson Weston, the veteran pedestrian, to-day started on his 1,500-mile walk to Minneapolis from New York.

Weston wishes to demonstrate that, although 75 years old, he still is in fit condition. He will make about $6 1-2 miles a day.

Pigs Won War for The Balkan Allies

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Pigs and preparedness were the main factors in the success of the Balkan allies according to official reports received here.

The armies went through regions where pigs were abundant and the soldiers subsisted largely on pork.

Building Collapse Kills Score.

SARGOSSA, SPAIN, June 2.—A score or more workmen were buried here to-day in the collapse of a building that had been struck by lightning. A number of bodies were recovered.

Alfred Austin, the Poet, Dies in England

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 2.—Alfred Austin, poet laureate of England, died here to-day.

Mr. Austin, who was born in 1835, became poet laureate in 1896, at a time when every one thought that this honor was about to go to Rudyard Kipling.

In this connection the death of Mr. Austin caused recurrence of reports that Mr. Kipling will become the official national bard of the empire. If he refuses, the office will probably never again be filled.

Charge Husbands and Their Seats

FLORENCE, ITALY, June 2.—While Mrs. Huger Pratt of New York, is changing from Protestantism to the Greek Orthodox Church in order to become the wife of Prince Alexis Karageorgewitch, her daughter, is leaving the Greek Orthodox Church to become a Protestant.

The latter was a Protestant, but joined the Greek Church when an Athenian named Mercauto married her. She now seeks a divorce from Mercauto, so she has to go back to her original religious faith to establish her suit.

Her plan, is to accept in marriage an Austrian. That alliance will necessitate her becoming a Catholic.

Former Anna Gould Fights Court Decree

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, June 2.—The Duchess De-Talleyrand-Perigord, who was Miss Anna Gould, has appealed against the decision of the Rota Tribunal, declaring invalid her religious marriage with Count Boni DeCastellane.

The Tribunal which, in December, 1912, declared against DeCastellane, reheard the case last March and decided in his favor. The annulment of the marriage would allow him to marry again with the consent of the church.

Tillman Is Still After the Smokers

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Senator Tillman, who wants to abolish smoking in the Senate to protect his health, has sent a letter to members of the cabinet, asking them to prohibit smoking in their respective departments to protect women employees.

One of the letter wrote: "Whenever protest is made by any of the women we are told to get out, or learn to smoke yourself and then smoking will not trouble you."

Plans Resting Place For Migratory Birds

EUREKA SPRINGS, ARK., June 2.—Ernest V. Visart, secretary of the Arkansas Game and Fish Protective Association, is in the city with a view of establishing in this vicinity a resting place for birds on their migratory trips.

E. A. McIlhenny, of Avery Island, La., is willing to donate $200,000 to this cause if the Arkansas Legislature can be induced to aid. McIlhenny is associated with Mrs. Russell Sage in this work.

Princeton Degree Costs $1,000 a Year

PRINCETON, N. J., June 2.—According to statistics of the Princeton senior class, the average cost of the four years in college has been $4,216, the maximum being $10,000 and the minimum $800. Twelve of the 200 have supported themselves entirely throughout the four years and 58 more have partly supported themselves.

The number of smokers is 184, 76 of whom began in college.

Dozen Nurse Girls Escort Newlyweds

PITTSBURG, June 2.—When Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hogan returned from honeymoon trip, they were met at the depot by a dozen pretty young nurse girls, each pushing a baby carriage. The nurse girls with their baby carriages insisted on acting as an escort for the newly-weds, much to their discomfort. An immense crowd also accompanied the young couple and "their nursing outfit" to their home.

NEGRO PAIR IN STEVENS SLAYING GRILLED

Wilkes and Maynard Taken to Scene of the Crime for 'Third-Degree' Ordeal.

Walter Wilkes and Ernest Maynard, the suspects in the Stevens murder, were taken to the office of Chief Lanford Monday to be questioned in regards to their whereabouts the night the Stevens home was burned to the ground and Mrs. Stevens and her foster daughter were slain and left in the building.

Sheriff McCurdy came from DeKalb County and prepared to take the two negroes back to the scene of the crime, to put them through the third degree.

Both of the suspects, who were picked up Saturday afternoon on the identification of Wade Stevens, son of the murdered woman, have denied any knowledge of the crime.

If there is any hope of breaking them down, the officers believe it will come when the two men are taken to the burned building in which the charred bodies of the two women were found.

Wilkes and Maynard were kept in solitary confinement over Sunday. No one went near them to question them. It was thought that a day of almost absolute isolation would put them in a frame of mind where they would be the more easily worked upon Monday.

After they have been taken to the scene of the murder, it is probable that they will be removed to the DeKalb County jail in Decatur.

Caught in Lies, Says Sheriff.

"The prisoners have said that they didn't have anything to do with the killing of Mrs. Stevens and the girl," said Sheriff McCurdy, "but they already have been trapped in several misstatements or lies.

"It looks suspicious that they were together when captured. They were in a hurry to say that they had just happened to meet a few minutes before. Wilkes, when he was first taken, denied for a time that he was seen by young Stevens Tuesday night, as Stevens had claimed, but afterward admitted that this was true.

"Young Stevens said that Wilkes asked whether anyone was with Mrs. Stevens and, finding that Mr. Stevens was in Chattanooga at the Confederates reunion, said that he guessed he would go and see if he could get his old job back. This is a circumstance that strengthens our belief in Wilkes guilt, although we expect to get much more positive evidence."

Eats 10 Pounds of Eels in Hour on Bet

NEW YORK, June 2.—Simon Steingut, "Mayor of Second Avenue," bet a friend $25 that he could eat ten pounds of eels in one hour.

At the end of an hour the "Mayor" had eaten ten pounds of eels, two pounds of bread and a quantity of beer.

Gloveless, Shoeless, Beltless Love Cult

BOSTON, June 2.—To wear no kid gloves, no leather shoes or slippers or belts—nothing, in fact, that is produced by torture or death of a living thing—these are the fundamental principles of the Modesum Cult, a new organization here devoted to spreading the principles of "universal love."

Book Tells How to See Europe From Sky

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 2.—The first aerial Baedeker, giving a birdseye view of the district around Frankfort, has been published in that city.

Other volumes are in course of preparation. They will give similar descriptions of the territory around Berlin, Leipsic, Baden-Baden, Hamburg and Dusseldorf for the benefit of aeroplanists and balloonists.

Lawyers See No Need For New Constitution

The Georgia Bar Association, at its annual meeting, declined to ask that a constitutional convention be called.

It was decided if changes are needed amendments alone are necessary.

Officers named for the ensuing year were Robert C. Alston, Atlanta, president; G. E. Maddox, Rome; J. R. Phillips, Louisville; Frank U. Garnard, Columbus, and E. T. Moon, La-Grange, vice presidents.

Alex W. Smith, of Atlanta, succeede the late Judge John L. Hopkins as a member of the permanent commission, which is headed by Judge Andrew J. Cobb, former Supreme Court Justice.

Two Widows Killed As They Go to Mourn

CHICAGO, June 2.—For several hours yesterday two aged widows wept at the graves of departed loved ones in a Chicago cemetery. As they left the cemetery Mrs. Marie Shaurock, aged 68 years, whispered to Mrs. Johanna Shalk, aged 76: "It can't be much longer."

To-day the bodies of the two women were removed to their homes. The automobile in which they were riding home was hit by a street car.

Peace in Balkans Assured by Pact

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, June 2.—Definite ground now exists for belief that war between the States of the Balkan League has been avoided.

Premier Guschoff to-day announced that a common agreement had been reached whereby the preyiers of all the Balkan League States soon will meet and review the agreement by which the confederation is held together.

Declares U. S. Can Rule World's Trade

PITTSFIELD, MASS., June 2.—"With proper systematic management, America may attain the highest commercial position in the world," said Secretary Redfield, of the Department of Commerce and Labor, in a speech here.

Secretary Redfield denied the assertion that American manufacturers could not compete successfully abroad, and declared that they were doing so with increasing success.

Grapejuice Shower For Secretary Bryan

WASHINGTON, June 2.—For more than an hour this morning messengers were busy storing cases of substantial appearance in the "wine cellar" of the State Department.

Following Mr. Bryan's declaration in favor of grapejuice as a beverage practically every manufacturer of grapejuice in the country sent a case of his product to the Secretary.

Vice Board Inquires Into Wages of Men

CHICAGO, June 2.—The Illinois white slave commission this week will concern itself with the wages of men and the cost of living in Chicago.

Heretofore the committee has investigated women's and girls' wages. Now the committee will determine whether the average workman's pay is sufficient to permit him to marry and support a family properly.

Explorers Stranded Off Georgia Coast

PHILADELPHIA, June 2.—The University of Pennsylvania expedition to South America, which left here two months ago on a trip which was to last two years, has become stranded off the coast of Georgia and the yacht Pennsylvania, which was outfitted at a cost $110,000, has been abandoned.

It is tied up at Brunswick.

Negroes Refuse to Kill Boll Weevil

WAYNESBORO, MISS., June 2.—Negroes hereabouts are superstitious as regards the boll weevil, refusing to destroy the insect when they find it on the cotton stalks.

One old black who died here some time ago said in a sort of ante-mortem statement that "the only thing between him and his God was that he killed too many boll weevils."

Carnegie Builds a Ballroom

Daughter's Debut in Fall

Society's Grandest Affair

MISS MARGARET CARNEGIE, elaborate preparations for whose debut next season are already under way.

Elaborate Improvements Begun in Steel Man's Mansion as Miss Margaret and Parents Sail.

NEW YORK, June 2.—Immediately following the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie and their daughter, Miss Margaret Carnegie, on the Olympia, preparations were made at the Carnegie mansion, No. 2 East Ninety-first Street, for transformation of the music room and art gallery into a large ballroom.

The alterations, it was learned, are necessary for the proper setting to one of the grandest balls ever given in New York. It will be a ball in honor of the coming out of Miss Carnegie, who will be the leading debutante next season. Born on March 30, 1897, Miss Carnegie this year will be at the ideal age for young women to enter upon their social careers—sweet sixteen.

Henry D. Whitfield, an uncle of Miss Margaret Carnegie, is architect in charge of the improvements. It was his sister, Miss Louise Whitfield, who in 1887 became Andrew Carnegie's wife.

Miss Carnegie will remain abroad with her parents until October. Upon their return the announcement of the details of the debutante ball will be given.

BISMARCK STATUE STIRS UP ROW

Chicago Germans Declare Chancellor Was Not Bowlegged nor Cross-eyed.

CHICAGO, June 2.—Was Bismarck, the Iron Chancellor of Germany, bowlegged?

Was he pigeon-toed, and did his mouth try to effect a function with his ears?

Those momentous questions are agitating hundreds of thousands of German residents of Chicago, and have brought woe and consternation to the managers of the biggest amusement park in the West.

Some time ago they conceived the idea of erecting a statue to Bismarck. The statue was erected, and unveiled with great ceremony, but the awakening came when the park managers received a peremptory demand from Alderman Schaeffer that the statue must be immediately torn down and another one erected.

He accompanied his demand with the threat that every German in Chicago would boycott the park unless the present likeness of Bismarck was removed. He declared that the Iron Chancellor was not bowlegged. That he was not cross-eyed. That he stood erect on legs straight and muscular. The alderman declared the statue of Bismarck as put up was a joke.

The press agent of the park placed before the board of directors what he says is indisputable proof that Bismarck had all of the characteristics as shown in the statue. On cross-examination he admitted, however, that the great work of art was erected by a concrete company.

BEGGAR WORTH $50,000.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 2.—E. L. Jones, a beggar arrested here, told the police that he estimates his wealth at $50,000.

CONLEY BEGS CHIEF TO LET HIM REPEAT STORY BEFORE FRANK

Negro Declares He Could Make Accused Slayer of Mary Phagan Tell All---Meeting Between Two Depends Upon Advice of Attorney.

James Conley, accuser of Leo Frank in the murder of Mary Phagan, made a personal request of Chief of Detectives Lanford Monday morning to be taken to confront the factory superintendent.

"I think I could make him tell everything if I could just get there to his cell and tell my story again," said the negro. Conley repeatedly urged upon Chief Lanford that he be allowed to face Frank. He declared he thought his presence would break Frank down.

The chief regarded Conley as sincere in his request, but said that he would make no further effort to bring the negro and the factory superintendent together. All rested in the hands of Luther Z. Rosser, Frank's attorney, Lanford announced.

"I have made several attempts to take Conley to Frank's cell since the negro began making his disclosures," explained Chief Lanford. "All efforts have been unavailing. Frank steadfastly has refused to talk with the detectives or with anyone whom the detectives may bring to see him. Attorney Rosser may arrange for a meeting of this sort, but the detective department has given it up.

Conley Not To Be Indicted Now.

"If Rosser is confident that Frank is innocent, he may think it will help his client's case to give him a chance to see the negro and deny his tale."

Chief Lanford said that there would be no bill on Conley's testimony at the trial of Frank. Conley, he said, would not be indicted as an accessory after the fact at th present time, but more likely would be indicted after Frank's fate was determined in one way or another. In the meantime he will be held as a material witness like Newt Lee, the negro night watchman at the factory.

Prisoner Can Shield Himself.

Sheriff Mangum, in replying to Lanford's attack of his attitude in preventing detectives from confronting Frank with his accuser, declared Monday morning the power to do this is not discretionary.

"If Lanford knew anything about the law," said the Sheriff, "he would know that the law allows the prisoner in the county jail to say whom he will see and whom he will not see. If Frank does not want to see the negro, he does not have to. If a prisoner asks the jailer to keep everyone out except his friends, his request is granted. That was the case when Mrs. Appelbaum was in jail, and all others as well.

"I don't see why Lanford doesn't try the Phagan case in court. He says he has the evidence to convict Frank. Why doesn't he take it into court instead of trying to bring the matter into the jail?"

Beavers to Talk Over the Felder Row With Dorsey

Dictograph conversations and alleged bribery charges will be discussed by Chief of Police Beavers and Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey at a conference to be held to-day.

Chief Beavers is ready to have every one who had anything to do with the graft charges called before the Grand Jury, and if conspiracy can be proven it is very probable there will be indictments.

However, it is all up to Solicitor General Dorsey just what will be done. It is thought that, owing to the present state of the Phagan case, the dictographers will not be subpenaed for some time.

Want Fine Home for U. S. Vice Presidents

WASHINGTON, June 2.—If an effort now being made by Mrs. John A. Logan and a number of other prominent Washingtonians succeeds, "Belmont," the historic home of Mrs. A. L. Barber, will be the future home of Vice Presidents of the United States. "Belmont" was built by the late Alonzo L. Barber, the asphalt king, and is designed after an old English castle.

Grounded Warship's Heavy Guns Removed

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

KIEL, GERMANY, June 2.—The German cruiser Bleucher, which went ashore in Great Belt Friday, was floated to-day after her ammunition and heavy guns had been removed to lighten the ship.

A hole was torn in the ship's hull and she will have to be taken out of commission for repairs.

Vanderbilt Thief Held in Chattanooga

CINCINNATI, June 2.—Nick Moran, of Cincinnati, a notorious hotel thief, said to have been the man who robbed Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt in a New York hotel of $65,000 some time ago is under arrest in Chattanooga, Tenn.

After his arrest he said he had robbed guests at four hotels in Chattanooga.

T. R. Told Ryan to Drink Buttermilk

NEW YORK, June 2.—Before Thomas F. Ryan sailed for Europe, a reporter discovered thirty-five cans of buttermilk in his stateroom. When Mr. Ryan was asked for an explanation, he said: "Colonel Roosevelt prescribed the buttermilk diet for me. I expect to drink all of it during the trip."

France to "Put Turkey on Feet."

PARIS, June 2.—France has been commissioned by the powers to reorganize the domestic affairs of Turkey and "put the Government on its feet" so that it will be able to pay the enormous debts contracted during the Balkan war.

Every Shot Fired In Duel Effective

DALTON, GA., June 2.—Dr. L. G. Furr, fatally wounded in a pistol duel with "Whack" Riorden at Crandall, Murray County, Saturday, died Sunday.

Riorden continues to improve, though he has five wounds. Both arms were broken, one of the shoulder blades was smashed and eight wounds were received in the head and stomach.

Every shot fired by the two men found its mark. Riorden's pistol failed to work after he fired one shot.

300-Pound Man Fast In Telephone Booth

NEW YORK, June 2.—Dr. Isidor Zippert, who weighs 300 pounds, squeezed into a telephone booth and received a hurry call from a patient. "Be right over," he called.

But he was unable to get out. His friends were compelled to take down the booth in order to release him.

Stop the Hold-Up Shipowners

If the Titanic Had Been Provided With Boats and Men to Handle Them There Would Have Been No Loss of Life

The last Congress, taking counsel of the shipowners' fears, spoiled the Democratic seamen's bill passed by the House. As it came from the sub-committee of the Senate it was calculated to strip from the traveler and shipper the last remaining liability yet resting upon the owners of vessels. The bill reported by Senator Burton would, if passed, have legalized the kind of crew condemned by the court in the case of the City of Rio de Janeiro and by the Senate Investigation and the court in the case of the Titanic. The Commerce Committee and the Senate amended and struck out until the bill, as it finally passed, was an improvement; but by no means the kind of legislation that ought to be passed in this Congress after mature consideration.

Congress should meet the issue fairly by enacting the bill which passed the House. The one fact clearly established in the loss of the City of Rio de Janeiro, General Slocum, Titanic and several others was that the vessels were undermanned both as to numbers and skill. If the Titanic had been provided with boats and men to handle them there would have been no loss of life. This was the opinion of the survivors and the final judgment of the Senate Committee, and the report was adopted by the Senate.

The bill which passed the House was a carefully drawn, conservative measure; it was fully debated and passed without division.

The shipowners' lobby persuaded some of the Senators that, if it became law, the seamen would be able to compel the shipowners to grant such improvements as would be a serious hardship upon the shipping, because the bill provided that a few of the men should have such experience as would give some guarantee that they would be able to do their duty in an emergency.

President Taft refused to sign the bill finally passed, and so far no really effective legislation has been enacted to meet the condition uncovered by the Titanic disaster.

Congress should remember that the sea is as dangerous this year as it was last; that we may at any time be compelled to contemplate another Titanic disaster, and that we are no more prepared and therefore more guilty than last year.

Let the obstruction cease. Let the bill pass. We owe it to the dead who bravely went to their end; we owe it to the living who go down to the sea, be it as passengers or as seamen. There can be no safety at sea unless the vessels are properly manned, and shipowners will not furnish efficient men unless compelled by law. Of this we surely need no further evidence.

A Breath of Clean Air From Alaska

It is interesting to learn that in Alaska at least the "turkey trot" and the "bunny hug" and the "tango" are not permitted. Time was, in the infancy of these perverted terpsichorean revels, that they flourished in San Francisco on what was known as "The Barbary Coast." But they became too vulgar even for the "Barbary coasters," and long before the great fire had swept that portion of the city out of existence they had perished from the dance halls.

Their revival in debased form in New York and other great cities is not creditable either to the taste of young people who abandon themselves in their contortions, or to the discipline of parents who permit such things. But sometimes real moral progress comes from places that are nearest to the clean, unvarnished bosom of the earth. All people who like to see the youth of both sexes clean and wholesome in thought and conduct will rejoice that Alaska has set a high example, and will hope for the day when it will be followed across the continent to the East.

No "Vindications" for Lorimer

When Senator Lorimer goes before the people to seek a "vindication," as he now proposes to do, he will learn something about the progress of public opinion. Incidentally some of the gentlemen who are now in the Senate will discover that it is no longer popular to be a Lorimer. Mr. Penrose, for example, who still fancies that he has a chance for re-election, will discover that he hasn't. Mr. Warren will learn that he has outlived his usefulness, and the Hon. Elihu Root will awaken to the fact that he can never again be elected to office.

For hereafter people will elect United States Senators by popular vote, and they will not choose Lorimers or Warrens or Roots or Penroses. Thanks to the exposures of the relations between Senators, past and present, to the Standard Oil Company, made by Hearst's Magazine and by William Randolph Hearst on the stump, and to the revelations concerning Lorimer made by the Hearst newspapers, the people know more about Senatorial material than they used to, and the men they send to the Senate must have clean records and keep them clean if they are to remain Senators.

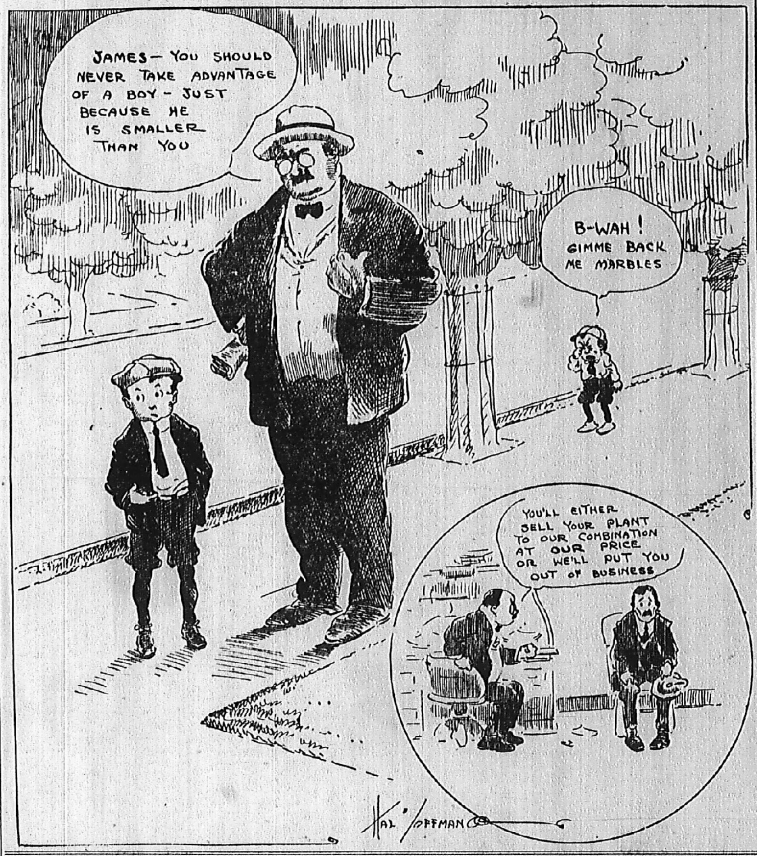
The Proper Season---Bah!!



Husband Who Forgets Wife for Baseball

By WINIFRED BLACK.

SO he's a baseball fan, is he, that husband of yours? Goes crazy when the ball season opens and stays crazy till it closes—talks baseball, eats baseball, thinks baseball, dreams baseball—knows every player in the league by name; has every record by heart and would be sick in bed if he had to stay at home from a single game that is played in his home town. He neglects his work, you think—he neglects you—he doesn't care for a thing on earth but "the game"—you think something must be wrong with his brain, and what shall you do about it?

You've argued, you've begged, you've cried, you've stormed, you've raged, you've even prayed over it—and nothing makes the least impression on husband. What are you going to think? How shall you fight this obsession?

How Can You Care?

How can you care for a man with such a strange madness? You feel as if you were in love with a lunatic—or something. Well, well, child, so you are, so you are in love with a lunatic; most of us have been, some time or other, and will be again as long as we live. That's what we get for being human—and failing in love with human beings.

Now, if we could only find a little Godling somewhere—off a violin—and fall in love with him—but we can't, we simply can't; we wouldn't like the Godling so awfully well after all, I'm afraid.

I heard three men talking about the tobacco habit last night: one was a young man of 30, one was a middle-aged man of 40, and one was a boy of 20.

The boy of 20 was smoking a pipe. He did it, he said, to keep away from cigarettes.

"You'll never do it that way," said the man of 40. "You'll have to take up chewing, that will help you out."

"Yes," said the man of 30, "as they say—well, I've never had the courage to begin the fight at all; and three women in the room gazed dumbly at each other, and one raised her delicate brows over a pellucid and said sweetly:

"Why, I don't use tobacco at all, and I don't seem to mind it a bit."

"Ah," said the other woman, "but you don't belong to the stronger sex"—and then I laughed—I really had to, for not one of the women there had a single

WINIFRED BLACK.

"habit" that she couldn't break or that there was the least reason for her trying to break, and yet every single one of us loved each of us our own particular man just because he was a man—and had all the masculine—dare I call them weaknesses of the sex? I'm afraid I'll have to.

Your husband isn't any worse than any one else's husband, honey, he's a man, that's all—and I never saw a man in my life who was quite what a woman would call really "well-balanced"—honestly, now, did you?

If it isn't tobacco, it's whisky, and if it isn't whisky it's horses, and if it isn't horses it's dogs or it's baseball or golf or some thing else faddy, more or less queer." But observe the male of the species, sisters, he's younger than you, he's more generous than you, and he's happier than you—a whole lot, taken bye and larger; so if that's what his "habits" and "fads" do for him, why, I for one am glad he has them.

You aren't responsible for husband's follies—you are responsible for your own. No one is going to call you to account if husband loses his job because he's adding scores when he ought to be keeping books. You'll have to stand the misery of poverty with him, though. Of course, that's what you said when you married him, "for better or worse," don't you remember, "for richer or poorer." How beautiful it all sounded to you then. You didn't stop the preacher to cry out.

If It Isn't His Fault.

"I mean, if it isn't his own fault when he's poor." You'd have died to even think of such a thing. Why do you think of it now?

Stop worrying, take a leaf out of his book; I'll warrant he looks ten years younger than you do right now—just for that—get up a fad of your own—something harmless and healthful.

You want him to be a man—well, then, you be a woman—that may attract his attention for a minute—and that sometimes helps—a little.

Washington's Inauguration

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

THE United States Government is 124 years old. On April 30, 1789, at Federal Hall, George Washington was duly inaugurated first President of the United States, and the great experiment of self-government on these Western shores was fairly begun.

The beginning was most auspicious. Than Washington no finer man ever stood at the forefront of a nation's life. Of Washington America is eminently proud, and of Washington America has the right to be proud, for the "Father of His Country" was, in every sense of the word, a whole man. Time has somewhat disturbed the halo that for a long while held the place about the great man's head. It has been proven that Washington was human, and all the more thanks for that. But after the closest scrutiny, from every part of the world, for a century and a quarter, it is still to be proven that anything mean, or mercenary, or dishonorable or unpatriotic ever came near the head or heart of our first President.

Washington loved his country with a whole heart. He was a patriot to the core. His first, last and only ambition was to do what he could to promote the high ends to which the Republic was dedicated. Politics, as defined by Aristotle, is the "science of government." Washington was not a learned man, and probably knew very little of Aristotle, but his head was clear and his heart was pure, and he, too, felt that politics was the science of government, and that the result of the government should be the "greatest good to the greatest number" of his fellow citizens.

From that high and sacred conviction Washington never once swerved, and when he quit his exalted office he did so with clean hands and unsmirched fame, leaving behind him a name which is probably the most illustrious in the annals of the race.

Rapid and phenomenal has been the progress of Washington's country! It seems like a dream rather than the soundest of historical facts. The Romans, after fighting "tooth and nail" for 400 years, found themselves with a territory no larger than that comprised within the limits of Greater New York. In 134 years the Americans are the owners of a territory in comparison with which the Roman Empire, when at the height of its glory, was but a small affair—a territory wherein are operant the greatest industrial, economic, moral and political forces that this old planet ever witnessed.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Daughter's Social Pleasures

Investigate, She Says, as It Is Unwise to Take Too Much for Granted

Written For The Atlanta Georgian
By Ella Wheeler Wilcox
Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

DO you know all about your daughter's friends? About their social pleasures?

Your daughter may be attending school; she may be employed in an office, or in a factory, and she may tell you some morning that she will stay all night with one of her girl friends.

Do you investigate the matter and know just who this girl friend may be?

Do you take sufficient interest to find out what the entertainment was which these girls attended, and just where they went after the moving picture or the vaudeville show was over?

How About Her Friends?

You say you trust your daughter.

But can you also trust every friend the daughter makes?

The very innocence of your child may lead her to place her confidence in those who are seeking her downfall.

She believes "Mollie" is as good as herself.

And she goes to stay all night with Mollie.

But Mollie has lost her standards of right living; she has become obsessed with the demons of extravagance and excitement, and she has decided that it is an old fogy idea to work day in and out, and earn only a small wage and spend her evenings in a dull flat or cheap boarding house.

Mollie has already sold herself to the people who give her more than she can earn by hard work. And she tells your daughter what liberal people they are, and what a good time they can have, if your daughter will stay with her and go over there for the evenings. And when your unsuspecting child returns to you, she, too, has entered the path which is so long in turning.

This is not an imaginary tale. It is happening continually in every large city and many smaller cities of America.

It occurs more frequently in America than elsewhere, because of the stupid and senseless confidence parents have in the discretion of their daughters, and of the utter lack of careful guardianship they exert over them.

If your daughters tell you they are asked to stay overnight anywhere, my dear sir or madam, make sure that you know all about it—the people with whom they are to stay, and all about the places of amusement where they are going.

The working girls are particularly in danger, but schoolgirls in good homes are not exempt from these dangers.

In one of our lesser American cities a certain high school was obliged to close its doors last year because of the well-founded scandals which were circulated concerning the pupils.

A large percentage of these young girls had become corrupted by associating with one immoral young woman who had led them into vicious paths, unknown to the parents.

Didn't Ask Afterward.

When the unsuspecting fathers and mothers were told by their offspring that they were going to attend a party at the home of one of the pupils, the former made no attempt to learn the nature of the party, or to know more of the hostess than that she was a friend of their daughters.

Nor did they ask afterward for particulars of the entertainment until it was too late.

The most important duty life holds for you is to keep in touch with your children and to know all about their pleasures and all about their friends and to guide them over the dangerous paths of youth by the light of love and knowledge.

The Oration of an Alien

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE.

HONORABLE pardners, I come not here to make you remember the story of our thralldom. We are aliens. How long are we for to stand for this? I ask. Look what happens!

Honorable Kimono is valet of Honorable Bill Jones, Wall Street man. Fine job? Not noticing it. One morning birds singing, everything lovely; street piano making music sung by Hon. Caruso, phonograph going all around; spring suffusing atmosphere. Hon. Kimono need new shirt. How can get it. No money. Pay day one week in far future.

Must Have Shirt.

Must have shirt. Honorable laundry make ribbons of only one got. Ribbons lovely on hat. Not much good for shirt.

Honorable Wall Street man leave accidentally one-dollar bill on dresser. Honorable Kimono see bill. Bill mean shirt and change for fine celluloid collar that can be made immaculate with slightly moistened handkerchief. All within reach. American proverb say cleanliness adjacent to godliness. Hon. Kimono godly man. Very well.

In inadvertent absence of Hon. Bill Jones, Hon. Kimono take one-dollar bill for to borrow, like is Wall Street practice. But shirt. Alas and alack!

Do Honorable Wall Street man say the forgiving thing when he miss dollar—miserable dross price of not more than three cigars? He say not the forgiving thing. In deep bass he call Honorable Kimono, "Where one-dollar bill?" is question he rise to ask.

"How can know?" reply Hon. Kimono, not intending to incriminate and degrade himself. "How can nothing?" is harsh reply of Hon. Wall Street man, which after deepicable Yankee custom answer one question with another.

"Maybe you take him for the cleans to purchase," suggest Hon. Kimono with cunning craft.

"Maybe you take him for to blow at the show of the moving picture," is dastardly counter suggestion of Hon. Bill Jones.

"Maybe you get too fresh," say Hon. Kimono, with the repartee quickly for to come back.

Does Hon. Bill Jones admire Hon. Kimono that he rapid with the apt reply. Not so it would be observable to the eye that is not wrapped in the arms of Hon. Morpheus. No.

With extra heavy shoe of six-footer vulgarian he kick Hon. Kimono down seven steps, hurting him on Hon. shin when he collide with stone balustrade at bottom. And why?

For that we are aliens is the reason.

How long is to continue this of condition? I ask.

Maybe we get in England not the property rights we go after. Maybe not. That is not the worry of the Japanese-American. We have kick that we are aliens. What can alien do. Can he go to ballot box and drop in the honorable vote?

Fellow countryman. What for are we aliens? Echo answers, "Rise and be something else beside aliens." Do not stand for it. Write to Hon. Bryan, who is Duke of Peace, and Hon. Wilson, who is King of Peace, and make row. Get people in Tokio on Hon. Job.

Green Things

By MINNA IRVING

IT'S full of green things growing,
This garden patch of mine,
Where golden sunbeams glisten
And early dewdrops shine.
I've hoed it every morning,
And watered it each night,
And watched the tiny leaflets
Come peeping into sight.

It's full of green things growing,
My little garden patch,
But I am far the greenest
Of all the verdant batch.
With fond anticipations
I sowed a pack of seeds,
But pulled them as they sprouted,
And raised a crop of weeds.

NEAR DEATH, CONFESSES TO SLAYING GOVERNOR

MISSOULA, MONT., June 1.—That he assassinated General Thomas Francis Meagher, former Governor of Montana Territory, soldier, author, orator and statesman, whose death has always remained one of the mysteries of Montana' early history, was the astounding confession of Pat Hiller, alias Frank Diamond, made on what he believed was his deathbed at Plains, Mont., 60 miles west of here.

The self-styled assassain declared that he got $5,000 for the murder and that the Vigilantes, Montana's famous volunteer law-enforcing organization, were anxious "to get rid of Meagher."

Diamond, as he has been known for a number of years, was brought to Missoula by Sheriff W. L. Kelley, who feared violence for his prisoner in the Plains jail. Two other murders, for one of which another man was hanged, Diamond lays at his own door.

For nearly 50 years the body of General Meagher has lain in the Missoula River, and despite the general belief that he stepped off a boat near Fort Benton in the darkness of the night, there have ever since his death been frequent rumors of foul play.

Confesses Three Murders.

Diamond's confession was made in the presence of three citizens of Plains, Jack Thompson, Dr. Colts and Frank Hamnium and was kept secret because it was expected the man would die within a few hours. Later he showed signs of improvement and the witnesses to the confession, fearing that he would not hesitate to kill them, had him brought here. The confession is as follows:

I killed Francis Meagher near Cow Island on the Missouri River. Meagher was Governor of Montana and the Vigilantes had to get rid of him and Alex Potter gave me $5,000 for the job. I killed him on a steamboat, threw him in the river and swam ashore.

I also killed George Mitchell in 1884 and threw him in the Willamette River.

I also killed Bill Clarke near The Dalles, Oregon, in about '74; shot him.

Big Nose George was hanged in '82. I should have been hanged instead for the crime, but George was a murdering ——— and deserved to be hanged.

Thomas Irwin is the only man that knows me, and he is a rancher and lives near Perma.

FRANK DIAMOND.

Diamond is 67 years of age, is well-known throughout Western Montana and has worked intermittently in the woods and at odd jobs around Missoula.

Told Some of the Details.

Talking to some friends after he signed the confession, he said he shot the former Governor first and then threw the body in the river. Supplementing his formal confession he made a detailed statement of his alleged crime, and judging from the minuteness of the detail and his vivid recollection of dates, places and incidents, his auditors are convinced that he is telling the truth.

His unexpected recovery has terrified the men to whom Diamond made his confession. They frankly stated they did not rest easy until he was behind the bars.

He told them that nothing but the presence of death would have wrenched the story from his lips, which have for almost half a century been silent, and that he would have no hesitancy in taking any man's life to save his own. The money, Diamond received for murder of Meagher, he says, was given him by Alex Potter, a member of the Vigilantes.

KNOXVILLE, TENN., June 1.—Professor W. P. Fleming, of Stone Mountain, Ga., was to-day elected principal of the Knoxville High School.

Girl Shot in Her Own Home Accuses Wealthy Clubman

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 1.—Accused of shooting a young woman under mysterious circumstances, Fred B. Kolb, a wealthy young clubman, is under arrest here to-day. The girl is Miss Irene Nobel, 22 years old.

The girl was found by her brother lying on the floor in her home. Kolb was at the telephone summoning a physician.

At a hospital Miss Nobel said Kolb shot her. She probably will die. A letter threatening suicide was found in her clothing.

Kolb is son of a millionaire who died recently.

Girl of 15 Ends Her Life With Shotgun

ROYSTON, GA., June 1.—Miss Ora Crider, 15-year-old daughter of J. A. Crider, a farmer near here, committed suicide by shooting herself with a shotgun while alone at the house.

The gun was not loaded when her parents left home. The girl put a shell in the gun, shut herself in a room, placed the gun barrel against her stomach and with a small stick pulled the trigger. Relatives heard the shot and rushed to the house, finding the girl's dead body against the door.

No cause for the suicide is known.

Divorcee Demands Alimony of $50,000

NEW YORK, June 1.—Counsel representing Mrs. Abigail Hancock Bishop, who secured a divorce from her millionaire banker husband, James Cooledge Bishop, yesterday held a conference to-day to settle the terms of agreement. Mrs. Bishop demands $50,000 alimony annually and the custody of her five children.

The suit was halted when Justice Goff became convinced that the charges against Mr. Bishop were true. He was accused of stopping at the Hotel Astor with Mrs. J. Tempe Gwathmey, beautiful wife of a former president of the New York Cotton Exchange.

Balkans Battle as Envoys Talk Peace

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ATHENS, GREECE, June 1.—While Balkan peace envoys of the states in the Balkan league were fraternizing in London and affixing their signatures to a treaty with Turkey, a three-hour artillery duel between Bulgarians and Greeks was being fought at Elevtheron.

Bulgarians are said to have opened the conflict by firing on the Greek cruiser Spetsai. Other clashes are reported.

Millionaire Seeks Thrill Killing Whale

SAN FRANCISCO, June 1.—John Borden, young New York millionaire, left San Francisco to-day on a private whaling expedition on his $56,000 new whaler de luxe, the Adventuress, built especially for this cruise.

Borden was accompanied by Roy C. Andrews, a member of the National History Museum, an American expert on whales. The main quest of Borden's expedition is to secure a specimen of the rare bowhead whale.

Five Hurt in Wreck Of Veterans' Train

FLORENCE, ALA., June 1.—Carrying several extra cars of Confederate Veterans returning from the Chattanooga reunion, a Southern Railway passenger train crashed into a Northern Alabama train two miles east of Sheffield Friday afternoon. The injured are: Baggageman H. Y. Darnell, perhaps fatally, and Conductor N. W. Wallace, Engineer Henry Gauf, Fireman Pendleton Gaines and News Agent Henry Hall, slightly hurt. All are Northern Alabama trainmen. Conductor Wallace of the Southern train is blamed for the wreck, as the Northern had the right of way.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., June 1.—The graduating exercises of the Thomasville High School were held last night in the Young Women's College auditorium. The address to the class was delivered by Superintendent A. C. Miller, of the Waycross public schools.

SILENCE OF CONLEY PUT TO END BY GEORGIAN

That The Georgian played a conspicuous part in obtaining the latest and most important confession from Jim Conley, the negro sweeper, in which he admitted his complicity in the crime, was the declaration of Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford.

Chief Lanford, in telling of the cross-examination of Conley on Thursday afternoon which resulted in his confession, said that Conley for a long time persisted in maintaining that he knew no more of the crime than that which he had related previously.

After several hours of futile questioning the chief showed him a copy of The Georgian quoting officials of the pencil factory to the effect that they believed Conley the guilty man. It was then that Conley made his startling affidavit fixing the deed upon Frank.

All Questions Failed.

"All lines of questions had been tried without avail," said the detective chief, in relating the incident. "We had put Conley through a third degree, and still he declared that he knew nothing more of the crime. It seemed that all the theories the detectives force had so carefully and painstakingly built up were about to be shattered.

"I was racking my brain for something else that might be of aid in getting Conley to tell what we suspected he was withholding," the chief continued. "I happened to remember that in last Wednesday's Georgian I had seen interviews with various factory people who declared they thought Conley guilty of the murder, and that he was attempting to place the crime on an innocent man.

Georgian's Story Broke Him.

"Stepping into an adjoining room, I secured a copy of The Georgian containing the interviews. Carrying it back into my office, where the small group of detectives had been for several hours interrogating the man without result, I handed the paper to Conley, remarking: 'You can read this, Jim,' and see what the people over at the factory think of you.'

"He took the paper and in silence the detectives watched him slowly and painfully decipher the statements of Holloway and others at the factory declaring that he, Conley, and not Frank, was the guilty man.

"Finally he laid the paper aside and looked up with the most worried expression on his face he has displayed since his arrest. 'Boss,' he said, 'dose people are short bound to hang me if I don't tell the truf, and I ain't goin' to lie to you no longer.' And the confession as contained in his latest affidavit followed.

Bryan Gloating Over Election Law Victory

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Smiling in his satisfaction over realizing a reform for which he had fought for nearly a quarter of a century, Secretary of State Bryan to-day signed the proclamation of the seventeenth amendment providing for the direct election of United States Senators.

Three earnest champions of the amendment were at his side—Harry St. George Tucker, of Virginia, who made the first fight for it in the House 12 years ago; Representative Rucker, of Missouri, who piloted the clause to its final passage in the House about a year ago; Senator Borah, of Idaho, who fathered the amendment in the Senate.

Rides Her Pony 30 Miles to Be Married

MILWAUKEE, June 1.—Elizabeth Waukechon, a Menominee Indian maiden, 17 years old, has proved to officials of the Menominee reservation that although the Government's laws may dominate the red man the gentler sex is still able to defeat "justice."

When the Government attempted to take her away from her parents' fireside to the Indian school, she rode thirty miles on a pony to find and wed her lover, John Waupekaunee.

McReynolds Blocks U. P. Dissolution Plan

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Attorney General McReynolds to-day expressed his disapproval of the latest plan for the dissolution of the Southern Pacific merger.

He declared that in the near future he will file a suit to compel the Southern Pacific Railroad to give up the control of the Central Pacific Railroad.

This ownership, he holds, is in direct violation of the law.

Hat, Hose, Kerchiefs Cause Bruin's Death

Dan Carey, General Manager of Parks to-day told of an autopsy on the big Russian brown bear, thought to have come to its death from eating two feet of rubber hose and a straw hat.

The rubber hose had been removed from bruin's stomach before he ate the hat, so most of the blame for his death was placed on the hat. The autopsy proved the hat had been digested, but in the stomach were found two handkerchiefs and a solid rubber ball about twice the size of an egg.

3 Suspects Held for Hall County Slaying

GAINESVILLE, GA., June 1.—James and Barlow Cantrell, brothers, and S. A. Miller have been arrested as suspects in the murder of Arthur Hawkins near Lula, in the northeastern part of Hall County. They are in jail here. All have families.

Hawkins was shot from his mule while returning home. It is said that there is a woman in the case.

Mrs. Charles Kugler Wins Vindication in Charges Against Inspector Maddox.

Pretty Mrs. Charles Kugler was a smiling and satisfied victor to-day in her court fight which she had declared she would continue until she had cleared her name and won back her husband.

Inspector Henry H. Maddox, of the city sanitary department, the tale of whose insulting remarks to Mrs Kugler caused her husband to leave her in a rage, was fined $25.75 by Recorder Broyles and was in addition given a sound rating by the Recorder.

"If you would look after the physical cleanliness of the city only and would leave the moral cleanliness in the hands of Chief Beavers, I fancy you and the city both would get along better," said Recorder Broyles. "In the future I suggest that you do not make derogatory remarks about women, particularly when you are speaking on hearsay and with such a misty idea of the woman's identity as you were in this case."

Husband Also Scored.

The husband also came in for a grilling through the indignant offices of Detective "Bob" Waggoner, who asked for permission to address the court and then asserted emphatically that a case ought to be made against Kugler for his strange and cruel treatment of his wife.

Waggoner said that Mrs. Kugler had told him that her husband flew into a fury and beat her when she told him of the remarks that Maddox had made to her and declared that he was going to quit her until she was able to clear her name.

"There is no reason why you should have suspected this woman of any wrongdoing," said Recorder Broyles.

Mrs. Kugler was forgiving, and would not consent to any prosecution of her husband. She went from the court room on his arm and was smiling delightedly as she entered the office of Chief Beavers, who proceeded to give the husband a lecture on his conduct. Kugler was told that there

Wall Holding Fill On Ivy Gives Way

About 100 feet of the big stone wall that holds the fill on the east side of Ivy Street at the corner of Baker Street is caving, and a number of men are busy taking out the dirt of the fill that the wall may be rebuilt. The cost of repairing this fault will be considerable, the fill being about seven feet at this point.

The city engineers explain the crumbling of the wall by a broken water main. The wall was built on a fill and when the water main broke the foundation was washed away. However, they assert, the completion of the regrading of this street will be little delayed.

Participants in Gun Duel Badly Wounded

DALTON, GA., June 1.—In a duel with pistols Dr. L. C. Furr, of Crandall, and "Whack" Riorden were both badly injured to-day near Crandall, Murray County.

Dr. Furr is reported seriously wounded in the abdomen, and Riordon, shot four times, is said to be dangerously hurt in the head and back. It is alleged that the trouble arose over Riordon's sister.

Physicians from Dalton have gone to the wounded men.

Senate Probers to Visit Coal Fields

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Consideration of plans for the Senate probe of conditions in the strike zone of the West Virginia coal fields was begun to-day by the Senate Committee on Education and Labor.

It is expected that the investigation will be begun by a sub-committee, which will visit the strike district and take the testimony of mine owners, strikers and officers of the militia.

SPENDS DAY WITH DORSEY STUDYING HUGE DIAGRAM OF SCENE OF THE CRIME

Important Developments Looked For, but Nothing Sensational Made Public---Insists He Has Told All, but Further Confession Is Expected.

For hours to-day James Conley, negro sweeper, whose sensational confession accuses Superintendent Leo M. Frank of the murder of Mary Phagan, explained in detail to Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey the dread mysteries of the National Pencil Factory on April 26, explaining many things that had not been clear to the officials, but sticking tenaciously to the story he told the city detectives.

Conley was taken to the Solicitor's office at that official's request and put through a severe cross-examination. With an elaborate diagram, drawn for the Solicitor by Bert Green, a Georgian staff artist, to guide him, the negro traced the various scenes in the factory after the slaying of the girl.

He told just where he first claims to have found her and how he and the superintendent he accuses attempted to dispose of the body. The drama he enacted in the factory Friday for the detectives he re-enacted for the Solicitor in the little room at the court house with the artist's chart as the stage and his finger as the tracer of tragedy.

Dorsey Well Satisfied.

The Solicitor was well satisfied with the results obtained in the secret conference behind closed doors and certain points that had been vague to him before were made clear.

At Conley's own request, through William Smith, his counsel, the negro was later transferred to the police station. The negro had been so besieged by questioners at the county jail that he asked to be put within the shelter of police headquarters, where he had been closely guarded and where none but policemen had been allowed to interrogate him.

Conley intimated that he had been threatened at the jail, but little credence was put in his ramblings. It was plain that he wanted rest. He had told his story so often—each time, it may be noted, in almost the same words—that he was tired. The police agreed that he had answered enough questions from outsiders and he was moved.

Police Urge New Test.

A determined effort is being made by the police department to bring Frank face to face with his accuser.

The detectives wish to learn how Conley will go through the ordeal of confronting the man he accuses of directing the disposal of the body of Mary Phagan, and dictating the notes that were found by her body.

They desire also to give Frank an opportunity to deny the negro's story as Conley is repeating it. Frank has been the man of silence in the Tower. He has had nothing to say in regard to the crime to anyone who had sought to talk with him on the subject, unless it was to his most intimate friends, who have visited him in his cell.

He still refuses to have anything to say or to have Conley brought to his cell, except by the permission of his attorney, Luther Z. Rosser, and in Mr. Rosser's presence.

Plan to Ask Rosser.

The detectives propose to take the matter up with Attorney Rosser. They will represent that the case has reached a stage where it is necessary to give Conley's statements their final test. Conley went over the scene of the crime step by step on Friday and never wavered in his tale involving Frank deeply.

Now it is desired to have him appear before the very man he so strongly accuses and have him repeat the terrible charges. Some believe that if Conley is alone guilty of the crime, this ordeal will be the final straw that will bring about his full confession.

If Attorney Rosser agrees to the plan, the negro will be taken at once to the cell of Frank. Conley is still in an unsettled state from his long three-day grilling by the detectives, and is thought to be just in the frame of mind to break down and make a full confession, if he knows any more about the crime than he already has told.

Silent Regarding the Case.

In the event that the meeting is arranged, it will be the first time that Frank has broken his silence in regard to the case. He may have talked of it to members of his own family, but his most intimate friends say that he has played cards with them and conversed freely on the topics of the day as he has read of them in the daily papers, but that he never has discussed the Phagan mystery directly and at length. Some of his friends have been with him every hour of every day since he has been in the cell at the Tower. They have been most loyal to the imprisoned man.

They declare that he never has mentioned the subject to any of the attaches of the jail, except occasionally to the Sheriff himself, when it was in an almost impersonal manner.

"I do not know who is guilty," he said, "but whoever he is, he should hang."

Conley Is Ready to Pay Penalty as Accomplice.

"Yes, sir, I guess maybe it's all over with me. I suppose they're going to hang me or send me to the penitentiary for life, but I done told the truth.

"When the Sheriff puts the rope around my neck, I'm going to say:

"'Stop; wait a minute. I know I did wrong. I tried to hide that dead girl's body and I ought to be punished, but before God I didn't kill her.'"

Jim Conley, negro sweeper, whose confession that he helped Leo M. Frank dispose of the body of Mary Phagan after the superintendent had murdered her, with a profound sensation, peered through the bars of his cell in the Fulton Tower and pronounced his readiness to die for his crime, as an accomplice, and in the same breath protested his innocence of the actual murder.

Ready to Face Frank.

"I am ready right now," he said, "to face Mr. Frank. I'll look him right in the eye and I'll say, 'You know I didn't kill that girl, Mr. Frank, and you know I'm telling the truth to these white folks.'"

Conley declared again that Frank wrote the note himself. He said he wrote it on the "long, black negro message" on "single-ruled, white paper from a tablet." He asserted that Frank wrote something on paper not white, but a shade of green or gray—paper that he thought had the letterhead of the National Pencil Company factory on it.

It is always best to be taken for granted that the two notes are the work of one man. The paper of neither corresponds to that described by Conley as the kind Frank used. What does Conley's assertion signify?

Harassed by questioners, bombarded with hostile queries, importuned and threatened in an effort to get at the truth in the terrible pencil factory mystery—in the minds of many a mystery no longer—this negro who stood every attempt to shake the remarkable story he unfolded to the detectives in the startling confession embraced and reenacted at the scene of the crime itself.

CONFRONT FRANK AND NEGRO IS POLICE PLAN

Anxious to See if Conley Will Stick to Latest Confession Under Dramatic Test.

Sticks Close to Story.

Like an unwinding panorama, he had held to his questioners in the eloquent, if often almost incoherent, jargon of Decatur Street the shifting scenes in the grim tragedy which reached its great climax Friday, but in which the greatest battle is yet to be fought in the courts of Fulton County.

One thing is certain: Those who have thought that it will be easy for a skillful lawyer to tear the negro's story into tatters must revise their judgment. From careful rehearsal, studied drilling or the indelible impression of ghastly tragedy, the prisoner has learned his lesson well. From whatever angle he is attacked he tells the same narrative. Under cajolery or abuse he is unchanged.

"I waited and waited, boss," he said, "I thought Mr. Frank would sure see me. I thought maybe we could have a talk and maybe everything would be all right, but he never would see me. I tried once and I tried twice and I tried again, but Mr. Frank never would see me. So, I guessed it was just about time for me to tell the truth. It looked like Mr. Frank couldn't get out of it after all, and it was all up, so I told the truth."

Looks Little Like Novelist.

A shiny-skinned, close-cropped, thick-cheeked, low-browed negro is Jim Conley—with eyes smiling or sinister as his mood changes—like a thousand and one other negroes that make faithful servants or troublesome prisoners as their footsteps happen to fall, and if the story he tells is the product of his imagination he believes appearances.

It may be he has learned his tale as a child learns a fairy story until it sees the goblins as it plays in the twilight. It may be that constant turning over of Gem in his mind as he lay in police cell for three weeks that constant repetition has made the details come readily to his lips. The reason is learned. There is no doubt of that.

"Jim, why did you write the notes?" he was asked. "Didn't it strike you that 'long tall black negro,' would be taken to mean you?"

"Yes, sir," said Conley, readily, "I did and I told Mr. Frank so. I said, 'Look here, Mr. Frank, they're going to think that means me.' But Mr. Frank said he just wanted it to send to his mother, so his mother wouldn't think he done it, and he told me he had powerful wealthy folks in Brooklyn—that was the first time I ever heard he had rich folks up North at all. I thought they all lived here, so I wrote what he told me."

Frank Always Good to Him.

Now this reply, if it is given, sounds incoherent and preposterous, but it is given just as Conley gave it and no amount of questioning could change it.

"How long did you know Mr. Frank?" was another question.

"I guess I must a known Mr. Frank (Conley kept scrupulously to the "mister" throughout) for about six years. Yes, sir, he was always a good boss to me. There was never no trouble about my getting money if I needed it. Yes, sir, Mr. Frank was always pretty good to me."

"And now you're telling a story, Jim, that may cost a good boss his life?"

"Well, I had to do it. That's all there was to it. I had to tell the truth. I waited and waited for Mr. Frank to do something and when he didn't I just reckoned he couldn't and it was about all up."

Three distinct times during the questioning Conley let drop remarks that might fruitfully be interpreted as jubilation that another man was in as bad a plight as he.

Shows Little Sorrow.

Each time when the remark was called to his attention he protested that he had no feeling of malice against Frank and that he was not glad to see him suffer in spite of his protests it was very plain that he cheished a feeling of pride and pre-eminence of the man he accused.

The stumbling block of impossibility Hon Conley removed entirely. He explained away the one great objection that Frank had left him Friday that he should report yesterday to move some boxes of goods that had been reposing on one shelf for about two years.

He was absolutely certain that the building was empty.

"Mr. Frank," said Conley, "never would let me work on that floor when there was anybody in the building. He never would let me come running in there and sing, and I never would whistle when a girl was in the building. He told me to get a switch and whip her back to the first floor and put her head down and—"

"Why, Mr. Frank—"

UNDERWOOD GAG RULE WILL BE PUT TO TEST

Democrats Resent Effort to Bind Them Not to Enact Laws Leader Opposes.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Majority Leader Underwood's control of the House will be put to a test Monday, in the Democratic caucus, if those Democrats to-day declared that, while Underwood was able to apply the "gag" when the tariff bill was being put through, it was not at all certain he would be able to do so this time.

Underwood proposes, it was learned, to have the caucus pass a resolution binding all Democratic members to refrain from enacting any legislation during the present session except a brief presentation which Underwood will specify.

The resolution will set forth that there be no legislation except the final enactment of the tariff bill into law, passage of a banking and currency bill, the passage of a deficiency appropriation bill.

If the Underwood resolution is adopted all kinds of private bills in which many new members are interested will be barred from consideration.

It was said the resolution probably will be adopted.

Hunt Relatives of Drowned Dam Man

The police department is endeavoring to locate relatives of D. Powell, a cotton-mill man who was drowned near Augusta. He is said to have relatives in the most business in Atlanta, but so far they have not been located.

A telegram received by Chief Beavers from the J. G. White Engineering Company, at Augusta, told of Powell's death, and requested that his people be notified. They stated that the man was in their employ in the capacity of cofferdam man. Details of the drowning were not given.

McGovern Fails to Oust State Officer

MADISON, WIS., June 1.—That Governor Francis E. McGovern had no right to remove Herman Ekern as State insurance commissioner was the ruling to-day of the State Supreme Court.

McGovern ousted Ekern for political activity in the legislature that he had been active in endeavoring to defeat Lafollette measures. Ekern appealed to the courts and Circuit Judge Stull, Monroe county, issued a writ of mandamus in his favor. Governor Carey following, a writ of McGovern to remove him.

Ekern's reinstatement by the court to-day has been told and retold since the Georgian presented the story of the attempt of Governor McGovern to oust Ekern exclusively in the columns as he gave them to the detectives.

He added that he had heard of the report that accounted for that by the fact that he was from Kansas of the Lafollette persuasion.

Then followed during the very hour in which Mary Phagan is believed to have been murdered in the basement of the pencil factory, the visit of Jim Conley, negro sweeper, and Frank's office boy, to the second floor. Conley, elevator operator, says that Frank came down in the elevator and sent him to the basement for a broom. Conley says he found the broom and started back to the elevator, when he heard a woman scream. He says he dropped the broom and ran to the second floor, where he saw Frank struggling with a girl. He says he ran back to the basement and hid behind a pile of boxes, where he remained for an hour and a half.

Conley says he then went to the second floor and found Frank washing blood from his hands in a sink in the toilet room. Frank told him to help him carry the girl's body to the basement, Conley says. He refused, he says, but Frank threatened to kill him if he did not help. Conley says he then helped Frank carry the body to the basement, where Frank left him.

Conley says he then went to the first floor and sat down at his desk. Frank came to him there, he says, and told him to write some notes. Conley says he refused, but Frank threatened to kill him if he did not write the notes. Conley says he then wrote the notes, which were found near the body of Mary Phagan.

Conley says he then went to the basement and remained there until Frank came down and told him to go to the first floor and get a bucket of water. Conley says he did so and found Frank washing blood from his hands in the sink in the toilet room. Does Not Drip Down

CONLEY STAR IN THIRD DEGREE DRAMA

In all the grim annals of Atlanta's criminal history an illiterate negro, Jim Conley, stands out to-day the principal figure in one of the most remarkable and dramatically impressive "third degrees" ever administered by the city police.

The chief of police, ordinarily stolid and unmoved, and chief of detectives and members of his force, a Pinkerton operative—all men in daily touch with every sort of crime and evil-doing with keenest interest on each word as it came from the lips of the negro, and watched, as wide-eyed as any tyro in man-hunting, the negro's every move as he recounted Friday afternoon what he steadfastly asserted was his part in the ghastly Mary Phagan tragedy.

Factory Men Look On.

Dumb under the spell of the drama in which Conley played a triple role—first in his own personality, then as Leo M. Frank, and, finally, as the young girl victim—two employees of the factory lingered to the dimming accusations that unconcernedly, almost glibly, were made against their superintendent. They were Herbert Schiff, chief clerk, and R. P. Holladay, the timekeeper.

Both had reckoned Frank innocent. They had said many times that he could not have committed the shocking deed. More likely they had declared, it was the negro himself. Yet here they were the spectators of a gruesome performance in which Frank was represented as nervous and shaking and half in a panic as he directed the carrying of Mary Phagan's limp and lifeless body to the elevator on the second floor of the factory and down into the dark and dirt-strewn basement.

Theatre in Its Appeal.

Every incident and every circumstance added to the theatric, and powerful appeal as Conley duplicated detail by detail the movements he said were made the first afternoon of April 26. No staggery could have been more impressive with weeks of planning by the detectives. The simister, gray-black factory, itself, threw its spell of gloomy upon the little group of detectives and police as they centered the forbidding doorways.

A score of girls, a number of them of just about the age of Mary Phagan, were just inside the door, when the automobile of Chief Beavers, its curtains tightly drawn, dashed up to the front door. Jim Conley, hurling the mesh home. Their chatter and laughter instantly was stilled. It had been more than a month since their young companion had been taken from them by a mysterious crime, and they had been able to forget some of its tragic details, but now the spectacle of a stern blue-coated officer, a squad of bronzed detectives and a shackled black man brought back the tragedy in all its first horror.

Young Girls Shudder.

Some of the girls, difficult, young and helpless looking, pressed back against the wall and stood there with distended eyes and affrighted demeanor as the negro bridged past and pointed out the second floor as the scene of the crime. Two older girls gave hysterical little laughs which died in their throats when they saw the terrible scowl that darkened the passage of the officers and their prisoner.

Then followed during the very hour in which Mary Phagan is believed to have been murdered in the basement of the pencil factory, the visit of Jim Conley, negro sweeper, and Frank's office boy, to the second floor. Conley, elevator operator, says that Frank came down in the elevator and sent him to the basement for a broom. FORCED TRAITOR TO COMMIT SUICIDE

Austrian Officers Gave Disgraced Colonel a Loaded Pistol and a Book of Instructions.

VIENNA, June 1.—Extraordinary revelations of treachery carried on for years by a colonel of the Austrian General staff, who sold secrets of vital importance to Russia, are made in The Military Gazette.

Colonel Redl, one of the chiefs of the military secret service department, was summoned to Vienna from Prague at the end of last week. During his absence his flat was searched and a number of incriminating documents were found. Some of them showed that he had given to the Russian Government draft plans of the Austrian and German armies against Russia in case of war.

The War Office here, on receiving full confirmation of the report, sent to Redl two of his fellow-officers. During the night they informed him of the charges against him. As he was unable to clear himself, they warned him that they would return at daybreak and arrest him.

On leaving the room one of the officers took a fully loaded pistol from his pocket, with a book of instructions as to how to use the weapon. He opened the book and placed it in front of Redl with a meaning glance.

The officers then mounted guard outside the room until the noise of a shot told them that Redl, who was only 41 years old, had chosen the only way open to him. The officers left in disgrace. They hastened into the room, ascertained that Redl was dead, and returned to the War Office to make their report.

The War Office determined to keep the matter a profound secret. It was announced that Redl had committed suicide as a result of anxiety caused by overwork in his important position. The fact of his betrayal was not announced and he was interred in the simplest manner, without the military honors due his rank.

The facts were, however, revealed when members of Parliament demanded that the War Ministry contradict reports concerning the death of Redl in order to clear his memory. The authorities were thereupon compelled to reveal the facts of the case. In military circles it is declared that other military men are involved in the scandal.

Sulzer Clambers on Grape Juice Wagon

NEW YORK, June 1.—Certain wallops handed the demon rum in Washington and Marquette, Mich., were reinforced here to-day when it became known that Governor Sulzer has joined the grape juice brigade. The announcement was made at the Waldorf by Mrs. Sulzer, who is accompanying her husband on a swing over the State in the interest of a direct primary bill.

"My husband would rather drink buttermilk than wine, and he, like Bryan, is a believer in the great doctrine of unfermented grape juice."

Huff to Know Fate Next Tuesday

Grubb to Decide Contempt Case

Bankruptcy Suit Caused Charge

Colonel William Arnold Huff, aged defendant in contempt of court case in Macon.

MACON, GA., June 1.—Colonel William Arnold Huff, the 81-year-old ex-Mayor of Macon, will next Tuesday know whether or not he will have to serve a jail sentence, pay a fine or go free on the contempt of court charge filed against him by Judge Emory Speer, of the United States Court for the Southern district of Georgia. At that time the decision of Judge W. L. Grubb of Birmingham, who heard the evidence, will be announced in open court here.

The contempt charge grew out of a caustic letter written by Colonel Huff to Judge Speer last year, in which the jurist was severely criticised for his course in bankruptcy proceedings in his court against Colonel Huff, instituted fourteen years ago and still pending.

The court now holds $96,000 assets of the Huff estate. Recently Judge Speer ordered a distribution of about two-thirds of this amount. However Colonel Huff and five creditors, including the City of Macon, which has tax and paving claims, are contesting this order. Consequently the litigation will likely continue for a year or three years longer. This case holds the record in Federal courts in Georgia.

Two of Colonel Huff's sons, Edison and Travers Huff, reside in Atlanta.

The accompanying picture of Colonel Huff is the first taken of him in 28 years. It was posed especially for The Georgian.

MRS. PANKHURST IS NEAR DEATH AGAIN

Friends Are Convinced She Will Not Live Long Enough to Serve All of Jail Term.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 1.—Militant suffragettes "posted" a bomb in the post-office at Lewisham, a suburb, early to-day, causing an explosion which destroyed a number of letters and packages. There was no one in the mail sorting room at the time, the women having chosen an occasion when human life would not be jeopardized.

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, who was released from Holloway jail yesterday because of acute dyspepsia and heart exhaustion, is reported to be near death. This is the second time Mrs. Pankhurst has been released by Home Secretary McKenna since she was sentenced to three years' imprisonment.

Mrs. Pankhurst has vowed to "hunger strike" as long as she is in prison and her friends are convinced she will not live long enough to serve her sentence.

Many eyes were placed in peril by the burning of a railroad signal box at Beckbarn, near Buckingham. The police who investigated attributed the outrage to militant women.

Kaiser 'Peace Lord,' Declares Carnegie

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LANNOX, June 1.—"The peace lord of Europe" is the new title given Kaiser Wilhelm by Andrew Carnegie, who is in London to-day, enroute for Berlin to take part in the peace centennial celebration of the Kaiser's accession to the throne.

Mr. Carnegie, who is dedicating the remaining years of his life to international peace, said:

"Emperor William is the one man in Europe who can be most to abolish war. Instead of being the war lord he is the peace lord of Europe."

RURALIST ENTERS PRINTING FIELD

Will Increase Equipment Following Purchase of Sunny South Publishing Co.'s Plant.

Following the purchase of the entire plant of the Sunny South Publishing Company, the Southern Ruralist Company to-day began to occupy the whole of the two-story concrete building at the corner of Piedmont Avenue and East Hunter Street.

The mechanical equipment is to be increased at once and it is the purpose of the stockholders of The Ruralist to enter the general printing field, although it is announced they have no intention of conflicting with the work of any of the existing printing concerns.

There is a great deal of printing sent out of Atlanta, and it in this class of work which The Ruralist plans to seek. The Sunny South Publishing Company, which owned and published Uncle Remus' Magazine, had the largest plant of its kind in the South.

E. J. Merriam began the publication of The Southern Ruralist in Atlanta a good many years ago. He is president of the existing company. Dr. H. E. Stockbridge is editor; L. D. Hicks, advertising manager, and C. H. Pritchard mechanical superintendent. He has entire charge of the plant.

"Joe" Wilson Gets Good Job at Last

BALTIMORE, June 1.—Joseph R. Wilson, brother of the President, has accepted a position with a leading banking company, whose headquarters are here. It was announced today. His title, it was said, would be assistant manager of the New York office and manager of the promotion and development department at Baltimore.

Mr. Wilson is a Nashville newspaper man. Before the organization of the present Congress he was prominently mentioned as a candidate for Secretary of the Senate.

Hansen, Out of Row, Will Leave England

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 1.—J. Salter Hansen, Chicago theatrical man who became embroiled in the courts with Arthur Bouscicaut, a London showproducer, over Dr. Henri Deutschbild's new play, "Croesus," appeared in Bow Street Court to-day and informed the magistrate he could not furnish $10,000 to keep the peace, as ordered.

"I will leave England to-day if you will reduce the bond to $5,000," Hansen informed the court. The magistrate agreed.

Horse Sets Record As Parcel Post Aide

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Postoffice investigators have found that the cost of delivering parcel post packages ranges from less than 2 to more than 14 cents a package. The automobile is proving a very dear luxury in some large cities and the old horse is making a record for economy.

It is the purpose of the department to help the expensive offices by calling attention to the methods of the cheaper delivery places.

Sheriff to Evict A Carnegie Hero

SHARON, PA., June 1.—Unable to pay the interest on money loaned to apply on his house, after receiving $10,000 from the Carnegie Hero Commission, Henry Herwig will be evicted by Sheriff Cruth.

Herwig saved two men from drowning and the Carnegie Hero Commission sent him a medal and $1,000, but stipulated he must invest in a home He was unable to meet the payments and the house was seized.

Mrs. Wilson's Brother To Quit Princeton Job

PRINCETON, June 1.—Professor Stockton Axson, for fourteen years connected with the English department of Princeton University, announce that he will tender his resignation to the board of trustees next week.

was no excuse for his unreasonable conduct in leaving his wife Friday night and swearing that he would not return to her until she had cleared her name.

Pair Kiss and Make Up.

A complete reconciliation was effected and the reunited couple left the station talking gayly. Mrs. Kugler charged before the court that Maddox had insulted her last Wednesday by coming to her house in her husband's absence and remarking that he had seen her on the street with another man the day before and had seen her go into 73 Fairlie Street with him. She said he addressed other remarks to her of an important and insulting nature and that she ordered him from the house.

She put on her hat and went immediately to tell her husband of the incident. Instead of taking steps to punish Maddox, she told the court that he turned on her and accused her of receiving attentions from Maddox. She said then she determined never to stop fighting until she had cleared her name and won back the love of her husband.

Admits Making Remarks.

Maddox, who was discharged from the sanitary department, as soon as the charges were filed against him, admitted to Recorder Broyles that he had made the remarks complained of. He said that he made them because he had been told by R. E. Rice, another inspector, of a flashily gowned woman who lived on West Alexander Street and whom Rice had seen the day before in company with a man. Maddox said that when he visited Mr. Kugler residence at 18 West Alexander Street he supposed Mrs. Kugler was the woman referred to and made the remarks to her.

Rice was in court and testified that he mentioned no address in his conversation with Maddox. Rice was given an admonition similar to that received by Maddox.

DETECTIVES FIND STEVENS SUSPECTS HANGING IN THE AIR

Chief Newport Lanford Arrives at Scene of Tragedy Just in Time to Cut Negroes Down From Rafters of Barn.

A lynching horror, in which Walter Wilkes and Ernest Maynard, the two negro suspects in the Stevens murders near Constitution, were to be the victims, was averted by the narrowest of margins Monday afternoon.

Ropes had been noosed about the necks of the terror-stricken blacks and a score of enraged farmers were in the act of pulling them into the air, when Chief of Detectives Lanford, of Atlanta, dashed upon the scene in a Georgian automobile and at the point of the gun cowed the would-be lynchers.

The negroes, their faces already distorted by the brief period that their bodies had been swinging in the air, were taken in charge for the moment by Deputy Sheriff Livsey, of DeKalb county.

An instant later Sheriff McCurdy, of DeKalb county and Detective Rosser, of Atlanta, rushed up with drawn weapons and while Lanford and Livsey held the mob at bay, they whisked the two suspects away.

The near-lynching was the result of a plan to confront the two suspects with the scenes about the Stevens homestead which was burned down last Tuesday night after the skulls of Mrs. Stevens and her young foster daughter had been crushed in with an axe.

Sheriff McCurdy and Detective Rosser started from Atlanta in an automobile at 2:46 Monday afternoon with the two negroes. In the Georgian automobile 15 minutes later Chief of Detectives Lanford, Deputy Sheriff Livsey and a Georgian reporter started for the scene.

The automobile with the negroes arrived at the Stevens home first. Rosser and McCurdy tied the two negroes to a tree while they scoured the burned ruins of the house for clews.

Mob Quickly Forms.

It was only a moment before the news spread about the community. Before Rosser and McCurdy hardly were out of sight an excited group of 18 or 20 farmers had formed. As the two officers disappeared back of the ruins, the farmers rushed for the terrorized negroes.

They quickly slashed the ropes that bound the negroes to the trees and rushed them toward the large barn in the rear of the farm house. It was this scene that caught the eye of the occupants of Chief Lanford's automobile as it sped toward the scene of the tragedy.

As soon as the intention of the mob was divined, the chief's car shot ahead at full speed. The farmers threw ropes over the rafters of the old building and were pulling with might and main when the automobile dashed up.

Chief Lanford leaped out and ran to the rescue of the negroes. With one hand he grasped the rope that was slowly strangling Maynard to death and with the other leveled his revolver at the angry faces before him.

"Release these niggers or, by God, there'll be some funerals here to-morrow!" he shouted to the mob.

Farmers Fall Back.

The farmers sullenly and reluctantly fell back. Just at this moment, Livsey rushed up and an instant later was reinforced by Rosser and McCurdy, all with drawn weapons.

This display of force subdued the angry farmers and they loosened their holds on the ropes. Maynard, shrieking and in a paroxysm of fright, was borne bodily to the automobile. Wilkes, slightly more composed, was able to walk.

The farmers cursed at the manner in which they had been robbed of the negroes and swore that if they only had possessed a few weapons the story would have been different.

"They would have been compelled to take these men over our dead bodies," said Chief Lanford. "I did not propose to bring these niggers over here to have them taken away from us and lynched."

Son Wrought Up.

Wade Stevens, son of the murdered woman, was in one of the automobiles and was greatly wrought up by the affair.

"You murdered my mother," he shouted to Maynard.

"I ain't guilty; I ain't guilty," repeated Maynard over and over again, as he shook with fright.

It was the original intention to take the two suspects to the DeKalb County jail after they had been confronted with the scenes of the crime, but after the narrow escape from a lynching, the automobile returned directly to Atlanta and Maynard and Wilkes were returned to their cells in the police station.

Both of the suspects, who were picked up Saturday afternoon on the identification of Wade Stevens, son of the murdered woman, have denied any knowledge of the crime.

Revolver Taken by Son.

The detectives' hunt for Mrs. Stevens' missing diamond ring, gold watch and revolver, which were supposed to have been taken by the murderer came to a sudden halt Monday morning when young Wade Stevens explained their disappearance.

Stevens said that he sold the diamond ring and the watch in Chattanooga two years ago, letting the ring go for $10. He said he took the revolver away with him when he went to Chattanooga last Tuesday night, the date of the murder, and sold it there for $9 cents.

Despite the clearing of this phase of the mystery, however, the officers still are of the opinion that the motive for the crime may have been robbery, as the murderer may have had an idea that Mrs. Stevens kept a large sum of money in her home.

Wilkes and Maynard were kept in solitary confinement over Sunday. No one went near them to question them. It was thought that a day of almost absolute isolation would put them in a frame of mind where they would be the more easily worked upon Monday.

After they have been taken to the scene of the murder, it is probable that they will be removed to the DeKalb County jail at Decatur.

Caught in Lies, Says Sheriff.

"The prisoners have said that they didn't have anything to do with the killing of Mrs. Stevens and the girl," said Sheriff McCurdy, "but they already have been trapped in several misstatements or lies.

"It looks suspicious that they were together when captured. They were in a hurry to say that they had just happened to meet a few minutes before. Wilkes, when he was first taken, denied for a time that he was seen by young Stevens Tuesday night, as Stevens had claimed, but afterward admitted that this was true.

"Young Stevens said that Wilkes asked whether anyone was with Mrs. Stevens, and, finding that Mr. Stevens was in Chattanooga at the conference rounds, said that he guessed he would go and see if he could get his old job back. This is a circumstance that strengthens our belief in Wilkes' guilt, although we expect to get much more positive evidence."

COUNCIL TO BUY CITY PLANT NOW

Votes to Give $260,000 For Crematory and Pay For It This Year.

City Council Monday afternoon agreed to the proposal of the finance committee to buy the crematory for $260,000 and pay for it this year. The resolutions submitted by the committee were adopted with only one dissenting vote, that of Councilman O. H. Hall.

The resolutions provided that such appropriations as may be necessary to pay for the crematory in 1913 be made by the authorization of Council. The proposition, as ratified by the finance committee and the Destructor Company, of New York, is that the city buy the plant for $260,000, paying $125,000 of the amount at once and holding back $135,000 until the plant has demonstrated that it will burn garbage for 25 cents a ton and fulfill its other guarantees.

Provision is made also that if any of these payments be delayed the Destructor Company is to be paid 7 per cent from the time the payment should have been made.

Councilman W. G. Humphrey, who submitted the resolutions to council, said that the city would be saved several thousand dollars by the new contract. A saving of $16,800 will be made on the face value of the contract, he said, the old one calling for a price of $276,800, and the new one for a price of $260,000.

He said that interest on deferred payments, amounting to $11,680, would be saved by the new arrangement, together with about $6,500 in extras. The total saving, he said, would be in the neighborhood of $33,000.

The Destructor Company was authorized to retain possession of the present site of the crematory and to proceed with the work, pending the drafting of the formal contract. The Chief of Construction was directed to permit the work. In addition to the savings, it was represented that the city is getting a much better plant than the specifications provided.

NEGRO COOK AT HOME WHERE FRANK LIVED HELD BY THE POLICE

Woman Questioned by Dorsey, Becomes Hysterical; Solicitor Refuses to Tell Whether She Gave Important Information; Alibi for Defense.

Minola McKnight, the negro cook in the household of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Selig, 68 Georgia Avenue, with whom Leo M. Frank lived, was put through the severest sort of grilling in the office of Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey Monday in an effort to break down Frank's alibi which tends to show that he was at home about the time James Conley swore the notes found by Mary Phagan's body were written.

The negro woman grew hysterical and her shrieks and protestations could be hear distinctly through the closed door. She maintained to the end of the two hours of rapid-fire questioning, however, that Frank had arrived had arrived home by 1:30 o'clock the Saturday afternoon of the crime.

She was taken into custody on information said to have been furnished by her husband. She later was taken to the police station to be held under suspicion. The details of her statements to the solicitor and the full import of the information said to have been disclosed by her husband have been shrouded with the utmost secrecy by Solicitor Dorsey. It is said, however, that she declared to the last that Frank had arrived home by 1:30 o'clock to her positive knowledge.

Her sobs and hysterical cries were heard soon after she entered the office of the solicitor. Mr. Dorsey was able to quiet her for a few minutes at a time, when it is supposed he obtained her statement of Frank's whereabouts on Saturday, April 26, so far as she knew. A detective head quarters, the officers were non-committal as to the nature or value of the testimony that the negro woman had given.

It was on the negro cook that the defense had relied to assist in proving an alibi for Frank when his case comes to trial this month.

The woman was in hysterics at police headquarters and kept shouting, "I am going to hang because I didn't do it. I don't know a thing about it."

Four Others to Testify.

Four other persons will be prepared to testify at the trial of Leo M. Frank that he arrived at home for luncheon at 1:20 o'clock the Saturday afternoon that Mary Phagan was killed, which would have been an impossibility, the defense will assert, if Frank had directed the disposal of the body and dictated the notes at the time the negro alleges.

Information leading to the woman's arrest is said to have come from statements made by her husband, Albert McKnight.

According to report, Albert is said to have informed detectives of a statement made by his wife to the effect that Frank did not return to his home until midnight on the night of the murder. This information is contrary to Frank's statement before the coroner's jury.

The negro woman is also declared to have said that Mrs. Frank complained the following morning that Frank kept her awake that night by his extreme nervousness.

Minola declares that her husband is lying. She refused to swear to the statements attributed to her by her husband when taken before Solicitor Dorsey. She declarer that Albert's stories were prompted by a quarrel she had with him some time ago.

Differences in Stories.

Testimony before the Coroner's jury by Frank and others indicated strongly that he was at home by 1:20 the afternoon of the crime. Conley in his affidavits declared that he went into Frank's office at four minutes before 1 o'clock. He said that after a conversation of a few minutes Frank heard voices and shoved Conley into a closet. Miss Corinthia Hall and Mrs. Emma Clark entered. Conley was kept a prisoner in the closet, he said, for eight or ten minutes.

It was after this, he said, that Frank asked him if he could write. Conley swore in his affidavit that he answered in the affirmative and that he was directed to write several notes, most of which read: "Dear mama: I got a long tall black negro did this by himself."

After this, followed the giving of $2.50 to the negro, according to his statement as well as the giving of the $200 which later was taken back by Frank.

All of the incidents that the negro has detailed, in the minds of many interested in the case, would have kept Frank at the factory considerably after the time that five witnesses will swear he arrived home.

Wife and Her Parents to Aid.

Three witnesses are Mr. and Mrs. Emil Selig, Mrs. Frank, the cook in the Selig household and an acquaintance of Frank's who it said to have seen him riding home in the street car.

Adding doubt to the negro's declarations is the testimony of Miss Corinthia

FRANK DEFENSE TO ATTEMPT AN ALIBI

Five Persons to Swear Defendant Was Home at Hour Conley Says He Aided Him.

Hall before the Coroner's jury. Miss Hall testified that she left the building about 11:45 Saturday forenoon. Conley described her as coming to Frank's office more than an hour later.

Sheriff Mangum made indignant and emphatic denial Monday of the reports that Conley had been approached, threatened or intimidated while he was in a cell at the Tower.

Conley, he said, was not threatened in any way. He was not approached by friends of Leo Frank and no one was permitted to see Conley whom the negro did not wish to see.

"There is not a bit of truth in the statements that have been made to the effect that Frank's friends were allowed to get to Conley and make attempts to frighten him into a confession," said the Sheriff. "It was reported that a group of Frank's friends with a bottle of liquor, went to Conley's cell. This is absolutely a fabrication.

Treats All Prisoners Alike.

"Frank is no more to me than Conley, so far as the law is concerned. The law tells me to protect all my prisoners without fear or favor. This I have done, and this I shall continue to do. Conley was treated exactly as Frank has been, or as anyone else awaiting trial or the action of the Grand Jury.

"If anyone came to see him, he was asked first if he wished to see that person or persons. If he said he did not, his wishes were regarded to the letter.

"The report that I am seeking the Jewish support and the Jewish vote or any other class or race or nationality, as against another, is most absurd upon the face of it.

"I have nothing to say against Chief Lanford. I would only suggest that he try his case in the court and not attempt to settle the whole case and hang one man or another before the twelve men the law prescribes have had a chance to pass on the prisoner's guilt or innocence.

Conley made a personal request of Chief of Detectives Lanford Monday morning to be taken to confront the factory superintendent.

"I think I could make him tell everything if I could just go there to his cell and tell my story again," said the negro. Conley repeatedly urged upon Chief Lanford that he be allowed to face Frank. He declared he thought his presence would break Frank down.

The Chief regarded Conley as sincere in his request, but said that he would make no further effort to bring the negro and the factory superintendent together. All rested in the hands of Luther Z. Rosser, Frank's attorney, Lanford announced.

"I have made several attempts to take Conley to Frank's cell since the negro began making his disclosures," explained Chief Lanford. "All efforts have been unavailing. Frank steadfastly has refused to talk with the detectives or with anyone whom the detectives may bring to see him. Attorney Rosser may arrange for a meeting of this sort, but the detective department has given it up.

Conley Not To Be Indicted Now.

"If Rosser is confident that Frank is innocent, he may think it will help his client's case to give him a chance to use the negro and deny his tale."

Chief Lanford said that there would be no bar to Conley's testimony at the trial of Frank. Conley, he said, would not be indicted as an accessory after the fact at present time, but more likely would be indicted after Frank's fate was determined in one way or another. In the meantime he will be held as a material witness like Newt Lee, the negro night watchman at the factory.

AUSTIN, ENGLISH POET LAUREATE, DEAD AT 78

Succeeded Tennyson as Official National Bard—He Penned Much Worthy Verse.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 2.—Alfred Austin, poet laureate of England, died at his home, Swinford Old Manor, in Ashford, Kent, to-day.

Mr. Austin, who succeeded Lord Alfred Tennyson as poet laureate of England, was 78 years of age on May 30, just two days before his death.

He was named poet laureate in 1896 by Mr. Gladstone, in preference to many admittedly abler poets, whose claims to this honorable position were, for one reason or another, set aside.

Mr. Austin became poet laureate at University of London in 1854, and soon thereafter entered upon the practice of law. He abandoned that profession early in life, however, for the more congenial one of literature.

Edited National Review.

After writing much for the periodicals he became editor of The National Review in 1883 and continued in that position until he was named poet laureate of the realm.

Among Mr. Austin's better known productions in verse are "The Season," a satire (1861); "Savonarola," a tragedy (1881); English Lyrics (1890), "The Conversion of Winckiemann" (1897), Songs of England (1900) and "A Tale of True Love" (1892). The latter work was dedicated to President Roosevelt.

Although severely lambasted by the critics of the period in which he worked, particularly after he became poet laureate, Mr. Austin produced much work well worth while. As a critic he was original and interesting, if not spectacular. While he was not possessed apparently of a very active imagination, he wrote, nevertheless, some very graceful and acceptable verse.

Attacked Lord Tennyson.

Much of the always evident hostility of Austin in England unquestionably arose from a production of his pen in 1870, wherein, under the title of "The Poetry of the Period," he severely attacked Tennyson, whom later he was to succeed as poet laureate, and Browning, both then immensely popular.

Mr. Austin appeared to fall short of his greatest opportunities as poet laureate, and his best work was produced upon relatively unimportant occasions and topics. His poem on the accession of Edward VII generally is rated most creditable, as was his poem upon the death of Queen Victoria.

Among his better known works of prose are "The Garden That I Love" and "In Veronica's Garden." Both of these are interspersed with short poems, however.

Mr. Austin became poet laureate at a time when every one thought that this honor was about to go to Rudyard Kipling.

HOUSE PLUMS TO SOUTH; 3 FOR GEORGIANS

Few Chairmanships Given North and East—Hardwick, Adamson and Hughes Win.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The Democratic leaders of the House made their long-awaited distribution of committee "plums" and "pamsas" today. The great bulk of the chairmanships went to Southern Congressmen, the Northerners and Westerners only getting an occasional chairmanship. The full list was made public when the Democratic caucus met to-day to ratify the selections made by the Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee.

The personnel of the Ways and Means Committee, Accounts, Mileage and Enrolled Bills Committees already had been selected and approved. The following members received these chairmanships:

England Threatened By National Strike

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 2.—Unrest throughout England is becoming acute. Leaders of various trades unions are denouncing the Government for not passing a minimum wage bill affecting all industries and a national walk-out may be the outcome.

Between 30,000 and 40,000 workmen are idle. On Wednesday representatives of shipyard workers will meet and a strike may be ordered.

W. J. Nolan, of Paris, Tenn., is the guest of his daughter, Mrs. H. T. Brooks, 274 Whitehall Street. Mr. Nolan is a stone and marble dealer and has been inspecting the Georgia quarries.

COLONEL HUFF IS FOUND GUILTY OF CONTEMPT

Former Macon Mayor Not to Appeal Decision in Controversy With Speer.

Colonel W. A. Huff, former mayor of Macon, has been found guilty of contempt of court for writing certain pointed letters to Judge Emory Speer in the famous Macon controversy. In the letters Colonel Huff expressed unfavorable opinion of the way Judge Speer had conducted a bankruptcy case in which Colonel Huff was interested.

Following receipt of the letters, Judge Speer filed charges, and Judge W. I. Grubb announced a decision today, holding Colonel Huff in contempt.

Colonel Huff was formerly mayor of Macon. He is 82 years old. At his home in Macon this morning, after received notice from his lawyer, Attorney General T. S. Felder, that he had been held guilty of contempt, Colonel Huff made the following statement:

"It is what I expected. At the time I wrote Judge Speer those letters last summer I had a vague notion that perhaps I was committing contempt of court. However, I was not as familiar then with the law on contempt as I am now. I wrote the letters simply and solely to let Judge Speer know what I thought about him and about the way he had handled my bankruptcy case. He knows and the public knows, and on that score I am satisfied. There was never any intention on my part to attack the judiciary, I was aiming exclusively at Judge Speer. But if another court, which I consider an absolutely fair and impartial tribunal, holds that I am guilty, then that settles it, and I have no protest to make. I shall take whatever punishment is meted out to me without a murmur."

Judge Grubb will be in Atlanta to-morrow for the purpose of conferring with Mr. Felder in regard to passing the order of sentence.

Beavers to Talk Over the Felder Row With Dorsey

Dictograph conversations and alleged bribery charges will be discussed by Chief of Police Beavers and Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey at a conference to be held to-day.

Chief Beavers is ready to have every one who had anything to do with the graft charges called before the Grand Jury, and if conspiracy can be proven it is very probable there will be indictments.

However, it is all up to Solicitor General Dorsey just what will be done. It is thought that, owing to the present state of the Phagan case, the dictographers will not be subpenaed for some time.

Governor Pays Visit To Franklin County

Governor Brown will leave for Carnesville, Franklin County, Monday afternoon to pay a social visit which he promised his supporters there to make before, the first year of his term. The Governor will spend Tuesday in Carnesville and the Franklin County folk are planning a general rally day in his honor.

When Governor Brown's father ran for Governor Franklin County was his banner one, giving him more than 1,000 majority. When the present Governor made his first race the county favored Hoke Smith's banner one, but in the last race it swung into the Joe Brown column by a heavy vote, giving a majority over both Russell and Pope Brown, and, according to the returns, practically the same vote it had given his father 21 years before.

Americans Study Egypt's Progress

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, June 2.—One group of the American commission on Agricultural Co-operation which has been in this city investigating systems of agricultural credit and co-operative production, held a meeting, headed by Col. J. Shelby Williams and Clarence Cowley, of Ft. Worth, Texas, has gone to Egypt to study methods of financing and marketing the Egyptian cotton crop.

The Egyptian bale of cotton has been accepted as the world's standard, and it is a well-known fact that American cotton growers are losing large sums of money as a result of their failure to bale and grade their cotton properly. It is even claimed that the United States loses one-third of the real value of the cotton crop is due to the farmers' improper packing methods, and lack of financial

Two Widows Killed As They Go to Mourn

CHICAGO, June 2.—For several hours yesterday two aged widows wept at the graves of departed loved ones in a Chicago cemetery. As they left the cemetery Mrs. Marie Blaurock, aged 68 years, whispered to Mrs. Johanna Shalk, aged 76: "I can't be much longer."

To-day the bodies of the two women were removed to their homes. The automobile in which they were riding home was hit by a street car.

To-day Grace's Last Chance to File Reply

PHILADELPHIA, June 2.—This was the last day upon which Eugene H. Grace, of Atlanta, Ga., could answer to the suit for divorce filed here by his wife, Daisy Ulrich Ogle Grace, who alleges cruel and barbarous treatment. Mrs. Grace was acquitted in Atlanta last summer on a charge of having shot her husband.

Whether Grace does or does not make an answer to the suit to-day, a master will be appointed to take testimony. Grace, supposed to be at his mother's home, in Newnan, Ga., has filed a counter suit for divorce in the Georgia courts.

Dying from Poison In Drink of Whisky

ABBEVILLE, Ga., June 2.—Postmaster L. P. Wimberly, of this place, has been at the point of death since yesterday afternoon from the effects of a drink of supposedly poisoned whisky, intentionally placed in the postoffice Saturday night. He is not expected to recover.

Wimberly McLeod was also poisoned by the whisky, but has recovered. No explanation of the mystery has been found.

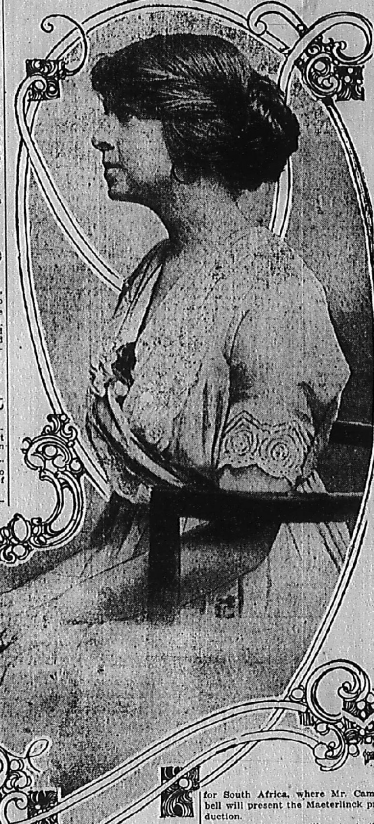
Miss Alice Ormond Weds in Paris

Bride of Theatrical Producer

Atlanta Girl Won Fame as Writer



Mrs. James Campbell, formerly Miss Alice Ormond, of Atlanta.

Miss Alice Ormond, society favorite of Atlanta and a writer of note, to James Campbell, of Paris, France, on May 22 has come as a great surprise to Atlanta friends of the young bride.

Equally as interesting are the plans of the couple for a honeymoon in South Africa and other remote travels.

The marriage has been made known by the bride's mother, Mrs. Florence Root Ormond, who, with her daughter, has been spending the last three months in Paris.

Mr. Campbell is an American who has lived the past two years in Paris. He is connected there with Archie Selwyn, who owns the production rights to "The Blue Bird" and "Within the Law."

While at present the young couple are in London, they will leave shortly for South Africa, where Mr. Campbell will present the Masterlinck production.

A cordial interest will center in this marriage, the bride having lived in Atlanta until a few years ago, when with her mother, she went to New York to devote her time to literary work, in which, through her magazine writings, she has made a name for herself.

She is a sister of Mrs. Hinton Hopkins and of Sidney Ormond, of Atlanta.

DE MUMM AND KANSAS GIRL WED

Wine Merchant's Romance Began When He Was in America as Racing Aeronaut.

LONDON, June 2.—Dressed in one of the most gorgeous bridal costumes that ever came out of the Rue de la Paix, Miss Frances Scoville, of Seneca, Kan., was married here to-day to Walter deMumm. The ceremony took place at St. George's, Hanover Square.

The bride is the daughter of Courtney Kennedy Scoville, one of the richest bankers of Kansas. In addition to the magnificent wedding gown, Mrs. DeMumm has a trousseau said to have cost $25,000. Her bridal outfit consists of 100 gowns.

The marriage to-day is the culmination of a romance which began in 1910 when DeMumm visited America and took part in the international balloon race at St. Louis, which ended for DeMumm in the Canadian wilderness.

The bridegroom is a member of the famous wine family. In December of last year he was shot twice and severely wounded in a room in Paris by Mrs. Marie VanRensselaer Barnes, a divorced American woman. The shooting was the outcome of Mrs. Barnes's announcement that he was going to terminate his relations with her.

$115,000,000 Sugar Trust Profit Denied

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Asserting that the American people have been fooled respecting the sugar tariff, and that the Democratic party will be playing into the hands of the Sugar Trust if it passes free sugar, Senator Ransdell, of Louisiana, made a set speech which was regarded as a direct defense of the sugar lobby which President Wilson attacked last week.

He asserted that the people really care nothing about the duty on sugar, as it is now the cheapest of foodstuffs. Senator Ransdell asserted that the Sugar Trust can not pocket more than $15,000 a year through the present duty, although the advocates of free sugar declare that the trust robs the people of $115,000,000 annually.

ASK FRANCHISE TO DOUBLE TRACK IVY

Traction Officials Would Relieve Congestion by Extending the Service to Edgewood Ave.

Application to the City Council for a franchise to double-track Ivy Street from Auburn Avenue to Edgewood Avenue will be read in Council Monday afternoon.

The Georgia Railway and Power Company intends to extend the present Ivy Street trolley service to Edgewood Avenue and thence into Marietta and Broad, as at present.

Officials of the company said Monday morning this change was proposed in order to meet the many new improvements in progress to Edgewood Avenue and also to relieve the congestion of traffic on Peachtree Street where the Ivy Street lines now traverse it.

The company has been studying plans to improve trolley service from the north side of Atlanta to the Auditorium-Armory Grand Opera Week and at other times. The extension of the Ivy Street lines to Edgewood Avenue will enable it to run cars direct from the North Side to the Auditorium-Armory without transferring passengers.

Tracks will be extended as soon as Council will permit.

$5,000 JEWEL ROBBERY.

NEW YORK, June 2.—Four men entered a jeweler's shop on the lower East Side to-day, bound and gagged the proprietor, collected $5,000 worth of diamonds, watches and bracelets and escaped.

Mother Stanislaus Tells of Recovery

Any person who may doubt the merits of Eckman's Alterative, a remedy for the throat and lungs, which has brought about many cures, is requested to write immediately the case of Mother Stanislaus of St. Anne's Convent, Sanford, Fla. She writes:

Convent of St. Anne, 200 Oak Ave., Sanford, Fla.

"Gentlemen: In February, 1911, four doctors examined my throat and pronounced the malady a fatal operation. Having heard of Peruvitil, N. Y., Motherhouse of the Sisters of St. Francis, where I was visiting, of Eckman's Alterative, I determined as a last resort to try it. After taking four or five bottles large pieces of diseased tissue came away. I continued the Alterative, my physical condition improved, in ten months I was restored to perfect health. I would be glad to write or talk to any person who may have a doubt about it. I would like them to see and hear from my own lips, if they so desire, all I would say of it."

(Signed) MOTHER M. STANISLAUS.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in resolving the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit forming drugs. Sold by all druggists. Write for booklet telling of recoveries and real testimonials.

TRY TO LYNCH SUSPECTS

NEGROES ARE SAVED BY DETECTIVES' PISTOLS

With the ropes around their necks, Ernest Maynard and Walter Wilkes, the negroes suspected of the murder of Mrs. William Stevens and her daughter, Nellie, who were found in the ruins of their home near Constitution, were saved from lynching late this afternoon at the point of detective's guns.

The negroes had been taken to the scene of the crime by Sheriff McCurdy and Detective Rosar and were tied to a tree while the officers scoured the neighborhood for clews.

A party of about twenty framers, determined on vengeance cut the suspects from the tree while the detectives were away and rushed them to a nearby barn. The two ropes were slung over a tree and the ends slipped about the negro's necks.

Chief of Detectives Lanford, heading another party arrived in an automobile just as the proposed lynching was about to be consumated. At the point of a revolver he held the would-be lynchers at bay and aided by Deputy Sheriff P. H. Livsey, Sheriff McCurdy and Detective Rosser saved the two men, rushing them back to Atlanta in an automobile.

The men will be sheltered at police headquarters where they have been since their arrest Monday.

Wilkes and Maynard Taken to Scene of the Crime for 'Third-Degree' Ordeal.

Walter Wilkes and Ernest Maynard, the suspects in the Stevens murder, were taken to the office of Chief Lanford Monday to be questioned in regard to their whereabouts the night the Stevens home was burned to the ground and Mrs. Stevens and her foster daughter were slain and left in the building.

Sheriff McCurdy came from DeKalb County and prepared to take the two negroes back to the scene of the crime, to put them through the third degree.

Both of the suspects, who were picked up Saturday afternoon on the identification of Wade Stevens, son of the murdered woman, have denied any knowledge of the crime.

If there is any hope of breaking them down, the officers believe it will come when the two men are taken to the burned building in which the charred bodies of the two women were found.

Revolver Taken by Son.

The detectives' hunt for Mrs. Stevens' missing diamond ring, gold watch and revolver, which were supposed to have been taken by the murderer, came to a sudden halt Monday morning when young Wade Stevens explained their disappearance.

Stevens said that he sold the diamond ring and the watch in Chattanooga two years ago, letting the ring go for $10. He said he took the revolver away with him when he went to Chattanooga last Tuesday night, the date of the murder, and sold it there for 50 cents.

Despite the clearing of this phase of the mystery, however, the officers still are of the opinion that the motive for the crime may have been robbery, as the murderer may have had an idea that Mrs. Stevens kept a large sum of money in her home.

Wilkes and Maynard were kept in solitary confinement over Sunday. No one went near them to question them. It was thought that a day of almost absolute isolation would put them in a frame of mind where they would be the more easily worked upon Monday.

After they have been taken to the scene of the murder, it is probable that they will be removed to the DeKalb County jail in Decatur.

Caught in Lies, Says Sheriff.

"The prisoners have said that they didn't have anything to do with the killing of Mrs. Stevens and the girl," said Sheriff McCurdy, "but they already have been trapped in several misstatements or lies.

"It looks suspicious that they were together when captured. They were in a hurry to say that they had just happened to meet a few minutes before. Wilkes, when he was first taken, denied for a time that he was seen by young Stevens Tuesday night, as Stevens had claimed, but afterward admitted that this was true.

"Young Stevens said that Wilkes asked whether anyone was with Mrs. Stevens, and, finding that Mr. Stevens was in Chattanooga at the Confederate reunion, said that he guessed he would go and see if he could get his old job back. This is a circumstance that strengthens our belief in Wilkes' guilt, although we expect to get much more positive evidence."

COUNCIL TO BUY CITY PLANT NOW

City Council Monday afternoon agreed to the proposal of the finance committee to buy the crematory for $269,000 and pay for it this year. The resolutions submitted by the committee were adopted with only one dissenting vote, that of Councilman O. H. Hall.

The resolutions provided that such appropriations as may be necessary to pay for the crematory in 1913 be made by the authorization of Council. The proposition, as ratified by the finance committee and the Destructor Company, of New York, is that the city buy the plant for $260,000, paying $125,000 of the amount at once and holding back $135,000 until the plant has demonstrated that it will burn garbage for 25 cents a ton and fulfill its other guarantees.

Provision is made also that if any of these payments be delayed the Destructor Company is to be paid 7 per cent from the time the payment should have been made.

Councilman W. G. Humphrey, who submitted the resolutions to council, said that the city would be saved several thousand dollars by the new contract. A saving of $16,800 will be made on the face value of the contract, he said, the old one calling for a price of $276,800, and the new one for a price of $260,000.

Miss Alice Ormond Weds in Paris

Bride of Theatrical Producer

Atlanta Girl Won Fame as Writer

Mrs. James Campbell, formerly Miss Alice Ormond, of Atlanta.

Will Spend Her Honeymoon in South Africa, the Wife of James Campbell.

Announcement of the marriage of Miss Alice Ormond, society favorite of Atlanta and a writer of note, to James Campbell, of Paris, France, on May 22 has come as a great surprise to Atlanta friends of the young bride.

Equally as interesting are the plans of the couple for a honeymoon in South Africa and other remote travels.

The marriage has been made known by the bride's mother, Mrs. Florence Root Ormond, who, with her daughter, has been spending the last three months in Paris.

NEGRO COOK AT HOME WHERE FRANK LIVED HELD BY THE POLICE

Woman Questioned by Dorsey, Becomes Hysterical; Solicitor Refuses to Tell Whether She Gave Important Information; Alibi for Defense.

Minola McKnight, the negro cook in the household of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Selig, 68 Georgia Avenue, with whom Leo M. Frank lived, was put through the severest sort of grilling in the office of Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey Monday in an effort to break down Frank's alibi which tends to show that he was at home about the time James Conley swore the notes found by Mary Phagan's body were written.

The negro woman grew hysterical and her shrieks and protestations could be hear dithrough the closed door. She maintained to the end of the two hours of rapid-fire questioning, however, that Frank had arrived had arrived home by 1:30 o'clock the Saturday afternoon of the crime.

She was taken into custody on information said to have been furnished by her husband. She later was taken to the police station to be held under suspicion. The details of her statements to the solicitor and the full import of the information said to have been disclosed by her husband have been shrouded with the utmost secrecy by Solicitor Dorsey. It is said, however, that she declared to the last that Frank had arrived home by 1:30 o'clock to her positive knowledge.

Her sobs and hysterical cries were heard soon after she entered the office of the solicitor. Mr. Dorsey was able to quiet her for a few minutes at a time, when it is supposed he obtained her statement of Frank's whereabouts on Saturday, April 26, so far as she knew. At detective head quarters, the officers were non-committal as to the nature or value of the testimony that the negro woman had given.

It was on the negro cook that the defense had relied to assist in proving an alibi for Frank when his case comes to trial this month.

The woman was in hysterics at police headquarters and kept shouting, "I am going to hang but I didn't do it. I don't know a thing about it."

Four other persons will be prepared to testify at the trial of Leo M. Frank that he arrived at home for luncheon at 1:20 o'clock the Saturday afternoon that Mary Phagan was killed, which would have been an impossibility, the defense will assert, if Frank had directed the disposal of the body and dictated the notes at the time the negro alleges.

Testimony before the Coroner's jury by Frank and others indicated strongly that he was at home by 1:20 the afternoon of the crime. Conley in his affidavits declared that he went into Frank's office at four minutes before 1 o'clock. He said that after a conversation of a few minutes Frank heard voices and shoved Conley into a closet. Miss Corinthia Hall and Mrs. Emma Clark entered. Conley was kept a prisoner in the closet, he said, for eight or ten minutes.

It was after this, he said, that Frank asked him if he could write. Conley swore in his affidavit that he answered in the affirmative, and that he was directed to write several notes, most of which began "Dear mother, a long tall black negro did this by himself."

After this, followed the giving of $2.50 to the negro, according to his story, as well as the giving of the $200 which later was taken back by Frank.

All of the incidents that the negro has detailed, in the minds of many interested in the case, would have kept Frank at the factory considerably after the time that five witnessed will swear he arrived home.

Wife and Her Parents to Aid.

These witnesses are Mr. and Mrs. Emil Selig, Mrs. Frank, the cook in the Selig household and an acquaintance of Frank who is said to have seen him riding home in the street car.

Adding doubt to the negro's affidavit is the testimony of Miss Corinthia

WASHINGTON, June 2—For more than an hour this morning messengers were busy storing cases of substantial appearance in the "wine cellar" of the State Department.

Following Mr. Bryan's declaration in favor of grapejuice as a beverage practically every manufacturer of grapejuice in the country sent a case of his product to the Secretary.

Vice Board Inquires Into Wages of Men

CHICAGO, June 2.—The Illinois white slave commission this week will concern itself with the wages of men and the cost of living in Chicago.

Heretofore the committee has investigated women's and girls' wages. Now the committee will determine whether the average workman's pay is sufficient to permit him to marry and support a family properly.

Kentucky Swept by Destructive Storm

LOUISVILLE, KY., June 2.—Heavy property damage was reported to-day from over Kentucky, which was swept by a storm, yesterday. The $50,000 home of Lawrence Jones, distiller and horseman, near Louisville was destroyed by lightning.

Lightning struck the city power house in Louisville and put the city street car service out of commission for several hours.

BUILDING FALLS KILLS SCORE.

SARGOSSA, SPAIN, June 2.—A score or more workmen were buried here to-day in the collapse of a building that had been struck by lightning. A number of bodies were recovered.

FRANK DEFENSE TO ATTEMPT AN ALIBI

Five Persons to Swear Defendant Was Home at Hour Conley Says He Aided Him.

Hall before the Coroner's jury. Miss Hall testified that she left the building about 11:45 Saturday forenoon. Conley described her as coming to Frank's office more than an hour later.

Sheriff Mangum made indignant and emphatic denial Monday of the reports that Conley had been approached, threatened or intimidated while he was in a cell at the Tower.

Conley, he said, was not threatened in any way. He was not approached by friends of Leo Frank and, no one was permitted to see Conley whom the negro did not wish to see.

"There is not a bit of truth in the statements that have been made to the effect that Frank's friends were allowed to get to Conley and make attempts to frighten him into a confession," said the Sheriff. "It was reported that a group of Frank's friends, with a bottle of liquor, went to Conley's cell. This is absolutely a fabrication.

Treats All Prisoners Alike.

"Frank is no more to me than Conley, so far as the law is concerned. The law tells me to protect all my prisoners without fear or favor. This I have done, and this I shall continue to do. Conley was treated exactly as Frank has been, or as anyone else awaiting trial or the action of the Grand Jury.

"If anyone came to see him, he was asked first if he wished to see that person or persons. If he said he did not, his wishes were regarded to the letter.

"The report that I am seeking the Jewish support and the Jewish vote or any other class or race or nationality, as against another, is most absurd upon the face of it.

"I have nothing to say against Chief Lanford. I would only suggest that he try his case in the court and not attempt to settle the whole case and hang one man or another before the twelve men the law prescribes have had a chance to pass on the prisoner's guilt or innocence.

Conley made a personal request of Chief of Detectives Lanford Monday morning to be taken to confront the factory superintendent.

"I think I could make him tell everything if I could just go there to his cell and tell my story again," said the negro. Conley repeatedly urged upon Chief Lanford that he be allowed to face Frank. He declared he thought his presence would break Frank down.

The Chief regarded Conley as sincere in this request, but said that he would make no further effort to bring the negro and the factory superintendent together. All rested in the hands of Luther Z. Rosser, Frank's attorney, Lanford announced.

"I have made several attempts to take Conley to Frank's cell since the negro began making his disclosures," explained Chief Lanford. "All efforts have been unavailing. Frank steadfastly has refused to talk with the detectives or with anyone whom the detectives may bring to see him. Attorney Rosser may arrange for a meeting of this sort, but the detective department has given it up.

Conley Not To Be Indicted Now.

"If Rosser is confident that Frank is innocent, he may think it will help his client's case to give him a chance to see the negro and deny his tale."

Chief Lanford said that there would be no bar to Conley's testimony at the trial of Frank. Conley, he said, would not be indicted as an accessory after the fact at the present time, but mere likely would be indicted after Frank's fate was determined in one way or another. In the meantime he will be held as a material witness in the Newt Lee, the negro night watchman at the factory.

AUSTIN, ENGLISH POET LAUREATE, DEAD AT 78

Succeeded Tennyson as Official National Bard—He Penned Much Worthy Verse.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 2.—Alfred Austin, poet laureate of England, died at his home, Swinford Old Manor, in Ashford, Kent, to-day.

Mr. Austin, who succeeded Lord Alfred Tennyson as poet laureate of England, was 78 years of age on May 30, just two days before his death.

He was named poet laureate in 1896 by Mr. Gladstone, in preference to many admittedly abler poets, whose claims to this honorable position were, for one reason or another, set aside. Mr. Austin became poet laureate at University of London in 1853, and soon thereafter began to write the practice of law. He abandoned that profession early in life however, for the more congenial one of literature.

Edited National Review.

After writing much for the periodicals he became editor of The National Review in 1883 and continued in that position until he was named poet laureate of the realm.

Among Mr. Austin's better known productions in verse are: "The Season," a satire (1861); "Savonarola," a tragedy (1881); English Lyrics (1890); "The Conversion of Winckelmann" (1892); Songs of England (1900) and "A Tale of True Love" (1902). The latter work was dedicated to President Roosevelt.

Although severely lambasted by the critics of the period in which he worked, particularly after he became poet laureate, Mr. Austin produced much work well worth while. As a critic he was original and interesting, if not spectacular. While he was not possessed apparently of a very active imagination, he wrote, nevertheless, some very graceful and acceptable verse.

Attacked Lord Tennyson.

Much of the always evident hostility of Austin in England unquestionably arose from a production, of his pen in 1870, wherein, under the title of "The Poetry of the Period," he severely attacked Tennyson, whom later he was to succeed as poet laureate, and Browning, both then immensely popular.

Mr. Austin appeared to fall short of his greatest opportunities as poet laureate, and his best work was produced more relatively unimportant occasions and topics. His poem on the birth of Prince Edward VII was generated most commonplace, as was his poem upon the death of Queen Victoria.

Among his better known works of prose are "The Garden That I Love" and "In Veronica's Garden." Both of these are interspersed with short poems, however.

Mr. Austin became poet laureate at a time when every one thought that this honor was about to go to Rudyard Kipling.

HOUSE PLUMS TO SOUTH; 3 FOR GEORGIANS

Few Chairmanships Given North and East—Hardwick, Adamson and Hughes Win.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The Democratic leaders of the House made their long-awaited distribution of committee "plums" and "lemons" today. The great bulk of the chairmanships went to Southern Congressmen, the Northerners and Westerners only getting an occasional chairmanship. The full list was made public when the Democratic caucus met to-day to ratify the selections made by the Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee.

The personnel of the Ways and Means Committee, Accounts, Mileage and Enrolled Bills Committees already had been selected and approved. The following members received these chairmanships:

Three Georgians Land.

Appropriations, Fitzgerald, New York; Judiciary, Clayton, Alabama; Banking and Currency, Glass, Virginia; Coinage, Hardwick, Georgia; Interstate Commerce, Adamson, Georgia; Rivers and Harbors, Sparkman, Florida; Merchant Marine, Alexander, Missouri; Agriculture, Lever, South Carolina; Public Lands, Ferris, Flood, Virginia; Military, Hay, Virginia; Naval, Padgett, Tennessee; Postoffice, Moon, Tennessee; Public Lands, Ferris, Oklahoma.

Glass, Virginia, Heads Committee on Currency.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The Democratic personnel of the House Banking and Currency Committee, which will draft a currency reform bill for submission to Congress at an early day, was announced at the Democratic caucus this afternoon. Only five of the fourteen old members remained on it, and of the nine new members all but one are from the West and South. The Democratic members now are as follows:

Glass, Virginia, chairman; Korbly of Indiana, Brown of West Virginia, Bulkley of Ohio, Neeley of Kansas, Patten of New York, Stone of Illinois, Fiedler of Massachusetts, Eagle of Texas, Wingo of Arkansas, Seldomridge of Colorado, Wilson of Florida, Weaver of Oklahoma and Ragsdale of South Carolina.

England Threatened By National Strike.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 2.—Labor unrest throughout England is becoming acute. Leaders of various trades unions are announcing the government has not pleased them in the minimum wage bill affecting all industries, and a general strike may be the outcome.

More than 50,000 and 10,000 workmen are likely on Wednesday representatives of railroad workers will meet and a strike may be ordered.

COLONEL HUFF IS FOUND GUILTY OF CONTEMPT

Former Macon Mayor Not to Appeal Decision in Controversy With Speer.

Colonel W. A. Huff, former mayor of Macon, has been found guilty of contempt of court for writing certain pointed letters to Judge Emory Speer in the famous Macon controversy. In the letters Colonel Huff expressed unfavorable opinion of the way Judge Speer had conducted a bankruptcy case in which Colonel Huff was interested.

Following receipt of the letters, Judge Speer fined Huff $500, and Judge W. L. Grubb announced a decision today, holding Colonel Huff in contempt.

Colonel Huff was formerly mayor of Macon. He is 82 years old. At his home in Macon this morning, after received notice from his lawyer, Attorney General T. S. Felder, that he had been held guilty of contempt, Colonel Huff made the following statement:

"It is what I expected. At the time I wrote Judge Speer those letters last summer I was very much afraid that perhaps I was committing contempt of court. However, I was not as familiar then with the law on contempt as I am now. I wrote the letters simply and solely to let Judge Speer know what I thought about him and about the way he had handled my bankruptcy case. He knows and the public knows, and on that score I am satisfied. There was never any intention on my part to attack the judiciary. I was aiming exclusively at Judge Speer. But if a higher court which I consider an absolutely fair and impartial tribunal, holds that I am guilty, then I shall abide by it. I have no protest to make. I shall take whatever punishment is meted out to me without a murmur."

Judge Grubb will be in Atlanta tomorrow for the purpose of conferring with Mr. Felder in regard to passing the order of sentence.

DE MUMM AND KANSAS GIRL WED

Wine Merchant's Romance Began When He Was in America as Racing Aeronaut.

LONDON, June 2.—Dressed in one of the most gorgeous bridal costumes that ever came out of the Rue de la Paix, Miss Florence Scoville, of Seneca, Kan., was married here (today to Walter C. DeMumm. The ceremony took place at St. George's, Hanover Square.

The bride is the daughter of Courtney Kennedy Scoville, one of the richest bankers of Kansas. In addition to the magnificent wedding gown, Mrs. DeMumm has a trousseau said to have cost $75,000. Her bridal outfit consists of 100 gowns.

The marriage to-day is the culmination of a romance which began in 1910, when DeMumm visited America and took part in the international balloon race at St. Louis, which ended for DeMumm in the Canadian wilds.

The bridegroom is a member of the famous wine family. In December of last year he was shot twice and severely wounded in a room in Paris by Mrs. Marie VanRensselaer Birney, a divorced American woman. The shooting was the outcome of DeMumm's announcement that he was going to terminate his relations with

Traction Officials Would Relieve Congestion by Extending the Service to Edgewood Ave.

Application to the City Council for a franchise to double-track Ivy Street from Auburn Avenue to Edgewood Avenue will be read in Council Monday afternoon.

The Georgia Railway and Power Company intends to extend the present Ivy Street trolley service to Edgewood Avenue and thence into Marietta and Broad, as at present.

Officials of the company said Monday morning this change was proposed in order to meet the many new improvements in progress in Edgewood Avenue and also to relieve the congestion of traffic on Peachtree Street where the Ivy Street lines now traverse it.

The company has been studying plans to improve trolley service from the north side of Atlanta to the Auditorium-Armory, Grand Opera Week and at other times. The extension of the Ivy Street lines to Edgewood Avenue will enable trolley cars direct from the North Side to the Auditorium-Armory without transferring passengers.

Tracks will be extended as soon as Council will permit.

$5,000 JEWEL ROBBERY.

NEW YORK, June 2.—Four men entered a jeweler's shop on the lower East Side to-day, bound and gagged the proprietor, collected $5,000 worth of jewels, watches and bracelets and escaped.

ROME, June 2.—A group of American Commission on Agricultural Co-operation which has been in this city investigating systems of agricultural credit and co-operative production and marketing, headed by Col. J. Shelby Williams and Clarence Hasley, of Ft. Worth, Texas, has gone to Egypt to study methods of financing and marketing the Egyptian cotton crop.

The Egyptian bale of cotton has been selected as the world's standard, and it is a well-known fact that American cotton growers are losing thousands of money as a result of their failure to have any grade fixed previously. It is even claimed that in the United States one-half of the real value of the cotton crop is lost to the farmer, through poor ginning methods, and lack of financial

Chief Newport Lanford Arrives at Scene of Tragedy Just in Time to Cut Negroes Down From Rafters of Barn.

A lynching horror, in which Walter Wilkes and Ernest Maynard, the two negro suspects in the Stevens murders near Constitution, were to be the victims, was averted by the narrowest of margins Monday afternoon.

Ropes had been noosed about the necks of the terror-stricken blacks and a dozen enraged farmers were in the act of pulling them into the air, when Chief of Detectives Lanford, of Atlanta, dashed upon the scene in a Georgian automobile and at the point of the gun cowed the would-be lynchers.

The negroes, their faces already distorted by the brief period that their bodies had been swinging in the air, were taken in charge for the moment by Deputy Sheriff Livsey, of DeKalb county.

An instant later Sheriff McCurdy, of DeKalb county and Detective Rosser of Atlanta, rushed up with drawn weapons and while Lanford and Livsey held the mob at bay, they whisked the two suspects away.

The near-lynching was the result of a plan to confront the two suspects with the scenes about the Stevens homestead which was burned down last Tuesday night after the skulls of Mrs. Stevens and her young foster daughter had been crushed in with an axe.

Sheriff McCurdy and Detective Rosser started from Atlanta in an automobile at 2:45 Monday afternoon with the two negroes. In the Georgian automobile 18 minutes later Chief of Detectives Lanford, Deputy Sheriff Livsey and a Georgian reporter started for the scene.

The automobile with the negroes arrived at the Stevens home first. Rosser and McCurdy tied the two negroes to a tree while they scoured the burned ruins of the house for clews.

Both of the suspects, who were picked up Saturday afternoon on the identification of Wade Stevens, son of the murdered woman, have denied any knowledge of the crime.

Revolver Taken by Son.

The detectives' hunt for Mrs. Stevens' missing diamond ring, gold watch and revolver, which were supposed to have been taken by the murderer, came to a sudden halt Monday morning when young Wade Stevens explained their disappearance.

Stevens said that he sold the diamond ring and the watch in Chattanooga two years ago, letting the ring go for $10. He said he took the revolver away with him when he went to Chattanooga last Tuesday night, the date of the murder, and sold it there for 50 cents.

Despite the clearing of this phase of the mystery, however, the officers still are of the opinion that the motive for the crime may have been robbery, as the murderer may have had an idea that Mrs. Stevens kept a large sum of money in her home.

Wilkes and Maynard were kept in solitary confinement over Sunday. No one went near them to question them. It was thought that a day or almost absolute isolation would put them in a frame of mind where they would be the more easily worked upon Monday.

After they have been taken to the scene of the murder, it is probable that they will be removed to the DeKalb county jail in Decatur.

Caught in Lies, Says Sheriff.

"The prisoners have said that they didn't have anything to do with the killing of Mrs. Stevens and the girl," said Sheriff McCurdy, "but they already have been trapped in several misstatements or lies.

"It looks suspicious that they were together when captured. They were in a hurry to say that they had just happened to meet a few minutes before. Wilkes, when he was first taken, denied for a time that he was seen by young Stevens Tuesday night, as Stevens had claimed, but afterward admitted that this was true.

"Young Stevens said that Wilkes asked whether anyone was with Mrs. Stevens, and, finding that Mr. Stevens was in Chattanooga at the Confederate reunion, said that he guessed he would go and see if he could get his old job back. This is a circumstance that strengthens our belief in Wilkes' guilt, although we expect to get much more positive evidence."

Germany Wins Big Order From America

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 2.—Newspapers announce that the Siemens-Schuckert Electric Works of Berlin have beaten their powerful American competitors and obtained contracts for gigantic power plants in Chile.

The first order represents $3,000,000, and others of equal magnitude are to follow. These come from the Chile Exploration Company, which plans extensive exploitation of Chilean copper ore after the opening of the Panama Canal. The exploration company is said to consist of North American capitalists.

Dam Owners Tried For Austin Flood

WELLSBORO, PA., June 2.—After numerous delays George C. Bayless, president of the Bayless Pulp and Paper Company, and Frederick M. Hamlin, superintendent of the company, were placed on trial here today for alleged criminal responsibility for the breaking of the dam at Austin September 30, 1911, when 80 lives were lost.

The company owned the dam and it is charged the disaster was due to criminal negligence.

The little town of Austin, with a population of 3,000, was wiped out by the flood.

Peace in Balkans Assured by Pact

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

SOFIA, June 2.—Definite ground now exists for belief that war between the States of the Balkan League has been avoided.

Premier Guechoff to-day announced that a common agreement had been reached whereby the members of all the Balkan League States soon will meet and renew the agreement by which the confederation is held together.

Boy Shoots to Death Sister's Sweetheart

NEW ORLEANS, June 2.—Florville LaCoste, 14, shot and killed William Easton, 19, his sister's sweetheart, here Sunday, as the sequel to a violent quarrel between the girl and Easton.

The shooting occurred just outside the LaCoste home, from which the boy had driven Easton at the point of a shotgun.

LaCoste declared Easton was abusing his sister.

COUNCIL TO BUY CITY PLANT NOW

Votes to Give $260,000 For Crematory and Pay For It This Year.

City Council Monday afternoon agreed to the proposal of the finance committee to buy the crematory for $260,000 and pay for it this year. The resolutions submitted by the committee were adopted with only one dissenting vote, that of Councilman O. H. Hall.

The resolutions provided that such appropriations as may be necessary to pay for the crematory in 1913 be made by the authorization of Council. The proposition, as ratified by the finance committee and the Destructor Company, of New York, is that the city buy the plant for $260,000, paying $125,000 of the amount at once and holding back $135,000 until the plant has demonstrated that it will burn garbage for 25 cents a ton and fulfill its other guarantees.

Provision is made also that if any of these payments be delayed the Destructor Company is to be paid 7 per cent from the time the payment should have been made.

Councilman W. G. Humphrey, who submitted the resolutions to council, said that the city would be saved several thousand dollars by the new contract. A saving of $16,000 will be made on the face value of the contract, he said, the old one calling for a price of $276,800, and the new one for a price of $260,000.

He said that interest on deferred payments, amounting to $11,000, would be saved by the new arrangement, together with about $4,500 in extras. The total saving, he said, would be in the neighborhood of $21,000.

The Destructor Company was authorized to retain possession of the present site of the crematory and to proceed with the work, pending the drafting of the formal contract. The Chief of Construction was directed to permit the work. In addition to the savings, it was represented that the city is getting a much better plant than the specifications provided.

Smith Plans County Farm for Fulton

Shelby Smith, chairman of the Fulton County Commission, soon will take up the plan of a county farm for Fulton, modeled after the one in Chatham County.

In Chatham the County feeds prisoners with supplies from the farm. Mr. Smith was so favorably impressed with the system that he at once announced he would try to have such an institution established here.

NEGRO COOK AT HOME WHERE FRANK LIVED HELD BY THE POLICE

Woman Questioned by Dorsey, Becomes Hysterical; Solicitor Refuses to Tell Whether She Gave Important Information; Alibi for Defense.

Minola McKnight, the negro cook in the household of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Selig, 68 Georgia Avenue, with whom Leo M. Frank lived, was put through the severest sort of grilling in the office of Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey Monday in an effort to break down Frank's alibi which tends to show that he was at home about the time James Conley swore the notes found by Mary Phagan's body were written.

The negro woman grew hysterical and her shrieks and protestations could be hear dthrough the closed door. She maintained to the end of the two hours of rapid-fire questioning, however, that Frank had arrived had arrived home by 1:30 o'clock the Saturday afternoon of the crime.

She was taken into custody on information said to have been furnished by her husband. She later was taken to the police station to be held under suspicion. The details of her statements to the solicitor and the full import of the information said to have been disclosed by her husband have been shrouded with the utmost secrecy by Solicitor Dorsey. It is said, however, that she declared to the last that Frank had arrived home by 1:30 o'clock to her positive knowledge.

Her sobs and hysterical cries were heard soon after she entered the office of the solicitor. Mr. Dorsey was able to get her for a few minutes at a time, when it is supposed he obtained her statement of Frank's whereabouts on Saturday, April 26, so far as she knew. At detective head quarters, the officers were non-committal as to the nature or value of the testimony that the negro woman had given.

It was on the negro cook that the defense had relied to assist in proving an alibi for Frank when his case comes to trial this month.

The woman was in hysterics at police headquarters and kept shouting, "I am going to hang but I didn't do it. I don't know a thing about it."

Four other persons will be prepared to testify at the trial of Leo M. Frank that he arrived at home for luncheon at 1:20 o'clock the Saturday afternoon that Mary Phagan was killed, which would have been an impossibility, the defense will assert, if Frank had directed the disposal of the body and dictated the notes at the time the negro alleges.

Information leading to the woman's arrest is said to have come from statements made by her husband, Albert McKnight.

According to report, Albert is said to have informed detectives of a statement made by his wife to the effect that Frank did not return to his home until midnight on the night of the murder. This allegation is contrary to Frank's statement before the coroner's jury.

The negro woman is also declared to have said that Mrs. Frank complained the following morning that Frank kept her awake that night by his extreme nervousness.

Minola declares that her husband is lying. She refused to swear to the statements attributed to her by her husband when taken before Solicitor Dorsey. She declared that Albert's stories were prompted by a quarrel she had with him some time ago.

Testimony before the Coroner's jury by Frank and others indicated strongly that he was at home by 1:20 the afternoon of the crime. Conley in his affidavits declared that he went into Frank's office at four minutes before 1 o'clock. He said that after a conversation of a few minutes Frank heard voices and shoved Conley into a closet. Miss Corinthia Hall and Mrs. Emma Clark entered. Conley was kept a prisoner in the closet, he said, for eight or ten minutes.

It was after this, he said, that Frank asked him if he could write. Conley swore in his affidavit that he answered in the affirmative, and that he was directed to write several notes, which Frank then began to dictate. Near noon, a long tall black negro did this by himself."

After this, followed the giving of $2.50 to the negro, according to the story, as well as the giving of the $900 which later was taken back by Frank.

All of the incidents that the negro has detailed, in the minds of many interested in the case, would have kept Frank at the factory considerably after the time that five witnesses will swear he arrived home.

Wife and Her Parents to Aid.

These witnesses are Mr. and Mrs. Emil Selig, Mrs. Frank, the cook in the Selig household and an acquaintance of Frank who is said to have seen him riding home in the street car.

Adding doubt to the negro's alibi is the testimony of Miss Corinthia

FRANK DEFENSE TO ATTEMPT AN ALIBI

Five Persons to Swear Defendant Was Home at Hour Conley Says He Aided Him.

Hall before the Coroner's jury. Miss Hall testified that she left the building about 11:45 Saturday forenoon. Conley described her as coming to Frank's office more than an hour later.

Sheriff Mangum made indignant and emphatic denial Monday of the reports that Conley had been approached, threatened or intimidated while he was in a cell at the Tower.

Conley, he said, was not threatened in any way. He was not approached by friends of Leo Frank and no one was permitted to see Conley whom the negro did not wish to see.

"There is not a bit of truth in the statements that have been made to the effect that Frank's friends were allowed to get to Conley and make attempts to frighten him into a confession," said the Sheriff. "It was reported that a group of Frank's friends, with a bottle of liquor, went to Conley's cell. This is absolutely a fabrication.

Treats All Prisoners Alike.

"Frank is no more to me than Conley, so far as the law is concerned. The law tells me to protect all my prisoners without fear or favor. This I have done, and this I shall continue to do. Conley was treated exactly as Frank has been, or as anyone else awaiting trial or the action of the Grand Jury.

"If anyone came to see him, he was asked first if he wished to see that person or persons. If he said he did not, his wishes were regarded to the letter.

"The report that I am seeking the Jewish support and the Jewish vote or any other class or race or nationality, as against another, is most absurd upon the face of it.

"I have nothing to say against Chief Lanford. I would only suggest that he try his case in the court and not attempt to settle the whole case and hang one man or another before the twelve men the law prescribes have had a chance to pass on the prisoner's guilt or innocence.

Conley made a personal request of Chief of Detectives Lanford Monday morning to be taken to confront the factory superintendent.

"I think I could make him tell everything if I could just go there to his cell and tell my story again," said the negro. Conley repeatedly urged upon Chief Lanford that he be allowed to face Frank. He declared he thought his presence would break Frank down.

The Chief regarded Conley as sincere in his request, but said that he would make no further effort to bring the negro and the factory superintendent together. All rested in the hands of Luther Z. Rosser, Frank's attorney, Lanford announced.

"I have made several attempts to take Conley to Frank's cell since the negro began making his disclosures," explained Chief Lanford. "All efforts have been unavailing. Frank steadfastly has refused to talk with the detectives or with anyone whom the detectives may bring to see him. Attorney Rosser may arrange for a meeting of this sort, but the detective department has given it up.

Conley Not To Be Indicted Now.

"If Rosser is confident that Frank is innocent, he may think it will help his client's case to give him a chance to see the negro and deny his tale."

Chief Lanford said that there would be no bar to Conley's testimony at the trial of Frank. Conley, he said, would not be indicted as an accessory after the fact at the present time, but more likely would be indicted after Frank's fate was determined in one way or another. In the meantime he will be held as a material witness like Newt Lee, the negro night watchman at the factory.

AUSTIN, ENGLISH POET LAUREATE, DEAD AT 78

Succeeded Tennyson as Official National Bard—He Penned Much Worthy Verse.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 2.—Alfred Austin, poet laureate of England, died at his home, Swinford Old Manor, in Ashford, Kent, to-day.

Mr. Austin, who succeeded Lord Alfred Tennyson as poet laureate of England, was 78 years of age on May 30, just two days before his death.

He was named poet laureate in 1896 by Mr. Gladstone, in preference to many admittedly abler poets, whose claims to this honorable position were, for one reason or another, set aside.

Mr. Austin became poet laureate at University of London in 1853, and soon thereafter entered upon the practice of law. He abandoned that profession early in life, however, for the more congenial one of literature.

Edited National Review.

After writing much for the periodicals he became editor of The National Review in 1883 and continued in that position until he was named poet laureate of the realm.

Among Mr. Austin's better known productions in verse are "The Season," a satire (1861); "Savonarola," a tragedy (1881); English Lyrics (1890), "The Conversion of Winckleman" (1897), Songs of England (1900) and "A Tale of True Love" (1863). The latter work was dedicated to President Roosevelt.

Although severely lambasted by the critics of the period in which he worked, particularly after he became poet laureate, Mr. Austin produced much work well worth while. As a critic he was original and interesting, if not spectacular. While he was not possessed apparently of a very active imagination, he wrote, nevertheless, some very graceful and acceptable verse.

Attacked Lord Tennyson.

Much of the always evident hostility of Austin in England unquestionably arose from a production of his pen in 1870, wherein, under the title of "The Poetry of the Period," he severely attacked Tennyson, whom later he was to succeed as poet laureate, and Browning, both then immensely popular.

Mr. Austin appeared to fall short of his grandiose conception as poet laureate, and his best work was produced upon relatively unimportant occasions and topics. His poem on the accession of Edward VII generally is rated most commonplace, as was his poem upon the death of Queen Victoria.

Among his better known works of prose are "The Garden That I Love" and "Haunts of Wordsworth." Both of these are interspersed with short poems, however.

Mr. Austin became poet laureate at a time when every one thought that this honor was about to go to Rudyard Kipling.

HOUSE PLUMS TO SOUTH; 3 FOR GEORGIANS

Few Chairmanships Given North and East—Hardwick, Adamson and Hughes Win.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The Democratic leaders of the House made their long-awaited distribution of committee "plums" and "lemons" today. The great bulk of the chairmanships went to Southern Congressmen, the Northerners and Westerners only getting an occasional chairmanship. The full list was made public when the Democratic caucus met to-day to ratify the selections made by the Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee.

The personnel of the Ways and Means Committee, Accounts, Mileage and Enrolled Bills Committees already had been selected and approved. The following members received these chairmanships:

England Threatened By National Strike

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 2.—Labor unrest throughout England is becoming acute. Leaders of various trade unions are denouncing the Government for not passing a minimum wage bill affecting all Indefinite and a national walk-out may be the outcome.

Between 30,000 and 40,000 workmen are idle. On Wednesday the Pemantas lives of shipyard workers will meet and a strike may be ordered.

W. J. Nolan, of Paris, Tenn., is the guest of his daughter, Mrs. H. T. Brooks, 274 Whitehall Street. Mr. Nolan is a stone and marble dealer and has been inspecting the Georgia quarries.

COLONEL HUFF IS FOUND GUILTY OF CONTEMPT

Former Macon Mayor Not to Appeal Decision in Controversy With Speer.

Colonel W. A. Huff, former mayor of Macon, has been found guilty of contempt of court for writing certain printed letters to Judge Emory Speer in the famous Macon controversy. In the letters Colonel Huff expressed unfavorable opinion of the way Judge Speer had conducted a bankruptcy case in which Colonel Huff was interested.

Following receipt of the letters, Judge Speer filed charges, and Judge W. L. Grubb announced a decision to-day, holding Colonel Huff in contempt.

Colonel Huff was formerly mayor of Macon. He is 82 years old. At his home in Macon this morning after received notice from his lawyer, Attorney General T. S. Felder, that he had been held guilty of contempt, Colonel Huff made the following statement:

"It is what I expected. At the time I wrote Judge Speer those letters last summer I had a vague notion that perhaps I was committing contempt of court. However, I was not as familiar then with the law on contempt as I am now. I wrote the letters simply and solely to let Judge Speer know what I thought about him and about the way he had handled my bankruptcy case. He knows and the public knows, and on that score I am satisfied. There was never any intention on my part to attack the judiciary. I was aiming exclusively at Judge Speer. But if another court, which I consider an absolutely fair and impartial tribunal, holds that I am guilty, then that settles it, and I have no protest to make. I shall take whatever punishment is meted out to me without a murmur."

Judge Grubb will be in Atlanta tomorrow for the purpose of conferring with Mr. Felder in regard to passing the order of sentence.

Beavers to Talk Over the Felder Row With Dorsey

Dictograph conversations and alleged bribery charges will be discussed by Chief of Police Beavers and Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey at a conference to be held to-day.

Chief Beavers is ready to have every one who had anything to do with the graft charges called before the grand jury, and if conspiracy can be proven it is very probable there will be indictments.

However, it is all up to Solicitor General Dorsey just what will be done. It is thought, owing to the present state of the Phagan case, the dictographers will not be subpenaed for some time.

Governor Pays Visit To Franklin County

Governor Brown will leave for Carnesville, Franklin County, Monday afternoon to pay a social visit which he promised his supporters there to make before the expiration of his term. The Governor will spend Tuesday in Carnesville and the Franklin County folk are planning a general rally day in his honor.

When Governor Brown's father ran for Governor Franklin County was his banner one, giving him more than 1,000 majority. When the present Governor made his first race the county proved Hon. Smith's friend one, but in the last race it swung into the Joe Brown column by a big vote, giving a majority over both Russell and Pow-Brown, and, according Joe Brown practically the same vote it had given his father 34 years before.

Americans Study Egypt's Progress

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

ROME, June 2.—One group of the American Commission on Agricultural Co-operation which has been in this city investigating systems of agricultural co-operation and co-operative production and marketing, headed by Col. J. Shelby Williams and Clarence Owens of Ft. Worth, Texas, has gone to Egypt to study methods of financing and marketing the Egyptian cotton crop.

The Egyptian bale of cotton has been accepted as the world's standard, and it is a well-known fact that American cotton growers are losing large sums of money as a result of their failure to bale and grade their cotton properly. It is also claimed that in the United States one-half of the value of the cotton crop is lost to the farmers through poor selling methods and lack of financial

Two Widows Killed As They Go to Mourn

CHICAGO, June 2.—For several hours yesterday two widows wept at the graves of deserted loved ones in a Chicago cemetery. As they left the cemetery Mrs. Marie Blaurock, aged 34 years, a stepmother to Mrs. Johanna Shalk, aged 76: "It can't be much longer."

To-day the bodies of the two women were removed to their homes. The automobile in which they were riding home was hit by a street car.

To-day Grace's Last Chance to File Reply

PHILADELPHIA, June 2.—This was the last day upon which Eugene H. Grace, of Atlanta, Ga., could answer to the suit for divorce filed here by his wife, Daisy Ulrich Opie Grace, who alleges cruel and inhuman treatment. Mrs. Grace was acquitted in Atlanta last summer on a charge of having shot her husband.

Whether Grace does or does not make answer to the suit to-day, a master will be appointed to take testimony. Grace, supposed to be at his mother's home, in Newnan, Ga., has filed a counter suit for divorce in the Georgia courts.

Dying from Poison In Drink of Whisky

ABBEVILLE, GA., June 2.—Postmaster L. P. Wimberly, of this place, has been at the point of death since yesterday afternoon from the effects of a drink of supposedly poisoned whisky, mysteriously placed in the postoffice Saturday night. He is not expected to recover.

Wimberly McLeod was also poisoned by the whisky, but has recovered.

No explanation of the mystery has been found.

DE MUMM AND KANSAS GIRL WED

Wine Merchant's Romance Began When He Was in America as Racing Aeronaut.

LONDON, June 2.—Dressed in one of the most gorgeous bridal costumes that ever came out of the Rue de la Paix, Miss Frances Scoville, of Seneca, Kan., was married here to-day to Walter deMumm. The ceremony took place at St. George's, Hanover Square.

The bride is the daughter of Courtland Kennedy Scoville, one of the richest bankers of Kansas. In addition to the magnificent wedding gown, Mrs. DeMumm has a trousseau said to have cost $25,000. Her bridal outfit consists of 100 gowns.

The marriage to-day is the culmination of a romance which began in 1910 when DeMumm visited America and took part in the international balloon race at St. Louis, which ended for DeMumm in the Canadian wilderness.

The bridegroom is a member of the famous wine family. In December of last year he was shot twice and severely wounded in a room in Paris by Mrs. Marie VanTienhiner Barnes, a divorced American woman. The shooting was the outcome of DeMumm's announcement that he was going to terminate his relations with her.

$115,000,000 Sugar Trust Profit Denied

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Asserting that the American people have been fooled respecting the sugar tariff, and that the Democratic party will be playing into the hands of the Sugar Trust if it passes free sugar, Senator Bansdell, of Louisiana, made a speech which was regarded as an indirect defense of the sugar lobby which President Wilson attacked last week.

He asserted that the people really care nothing about the duty on sugar, as it is now the cheapest of foodstuffs. Senator Bansdell asserted that the Sugar Trust can not pocket more than $15,000 a year through the present duty, although the advocates of free sugar declare that the trust robs the people of $115,000,000 annually.

Will Spend Her Honeymoon in South Africa, the Wife of James Campbell.

Announcement of the marriage of Miss Alice Ormond, society favorite of Atlanta and a writer of note, to James Campbell, of Paris, France, on May 22 has come as a great surprise to Atlanta friends of the young bride.

Equally as interesting are the plans of the couple for a honeymoon in South Africa and other remote travels.

The marriage has been made known by the bride's mother, Mrs. Florence Root Ormond, who, with her daughter, has been spending the last three months in Paris.

Mr. Campbell is an American who has lived the past two years in Paris. He is connected there with Lebkuchen Selvyn, who owns the production rights to "The Blue Bird" and "With the Law."

While at present the young couple are in London, they will leave shortly for South Africa, where Mr. Campbell will present the Maeterlinck production.

A cordial interest will center in this marriage, the bride having lived in Atlanta until a few years ago, when, with her mother, she went to New York to devote her time to literary work, in which, through her magazine writings, she has made a name for herself.

She is a sister of Mrs. Hinton Hopkins and of Sidney Ormond, of Atlanta.

ASK FRANCHISE TO DOUBLE TRACK IVY

Traction Officials Would Relieve Congestion by Extending the Service to Edgewood Ave.

Application to the City Council for a franchise to double-track Ivy Street from Auburn Avenue to Edgewood Avenue will be read in Council Monday afternoon.

The Georgia Railway and Power Company intends to extend the present Ivy Street trolley service to Edgewood Avenue and thence into Marietta and Broad, as at present.

Officials of the company said Monday morning the change was proposed in order to meet the many new improvements in progress in Edgewood Avenue and also to relieve the congestion of traffic on Peachtree Street where the Ivy Street lines now traverse it.

The company has been studying plans to improve trolley service from the north side of Atlanta to the Auditorium-Armory. Grand Opera Week and at other times. The extension of the Ivy Street lines to Edgewood Avenue will enable it to run cars direct from the North Side to the Auditorium-Armory without transferring passengers.

Tracks will be extended as soon as Council will permit.

$5,000 JEWEL ROBBERY.

NEW YORK, June 2.—Four men entered a jeweler's shop on the lower East Side to-day, bound and gagged the proprietor, collected $5,000 worth of diamonds, watches and bracelets and escaped.

WOMAN HELD IN PHAGAN CASE

Defense Plans to Discredit Conley's Story

HUFF FOUND GUILTY IN CONTEMPT CASE

Judge Grubb Rules Against the Former Macon Mayor in the Speer Controversy.

Colonel W. A. Huff, former mayor of Macon, has been found guilty of contempt of court for writing certain pointed letters to Judge Emory Speer in the famous Macon controversy. In the letters Colonel Huff expressed unfavorable opinion of the way Judge Speer had conducted a bankruptcy case in which Colonel Huff was interested.

NEGRO PAIR IN STEVENS SLAYING GRILLED

Wilkes and Maynard Taken to Scene of the Crime for 'Third-Degree' Ordeal.

Walter Wilkes and Ernest Maynard, the suspects in the Stevens murder, were taken to the office of Chief Lanford Monday to be questioned in regard to their whereabouts the night the Stevens home was burned to the ground and Mrs. Stevens and her foster daughter were slain and left in the building.

Sheriff McCurdy came from DeKalb County and prepared to take the two negroes back to the scene of the crime, to put them through the third degree.

Both of the suspects, who were picked up Saturday afternoon on the identification of Wade Stevens, son of the murdered woman, have denied any knowledge of the crime.

If there is any hope of breaking them down, the officers believe it will come when the two men are taken to the burned building in which the charred bodies of the two women were found.

Revolver Taken by Son.

The detectives' hunt for Mrs. Stevens' missing diamond ring, gold watch and revolver, which were supposed to have been taken by the murderer, came to a sudden halt Monday morning when young Wade Stevens explained their disappearance.

Stevens said that he sold the diamond ring and the watch in Chattanooga two years ago, letting the ring go for $16. He said he took the revolver away with him when he went to Chattanooga last Tuesday night, the date of the murder, and sold it there for 50 cents.

Despite the clearing of this phase of the mystery, however, the officers still are of the opinion that the motive for the crime may have been robbery, as the murderer may have had an idea that Mrs. Stevens kept a large sum of money in her home.

Wilkes and Maynard were kept in solitary confinement over Sunday. No one went near them to question them. It was thought that a day of almost absolute isolation would put them in a frame of mind where they would be the more easily worked upon Monday.

After they have been taken to the scene of the murder, it is probable that they will be removed to the DeKalb County jail in Decatur.

Caught in Lies, Says Sheriff.

"The prisoners have said that they didn't have anything to do with the killing of Mrs. Stevens and the girl," said Sheriff McCurdy, "but they already have been trapped in several misstatements or lies.

"It looks suspicious that they were together when captured. They were in a hurry to say that they had just happened to meet a few minutes before. Wilkes, when he was first taken, denied for a time that he was seen by young Stevens Tuesday night, as Stevens had claimed, but afterward admitted that this was true.

"Young Stevens said that Wilkes asked whether anyone was with Mrs. Stevens, and, finding that Mr. Stevens was in Chattanooga at the Confederate reunion, said that he guessed he would go and see if he could get his old job back. This is a circumstance that strengthens our belief in Wilkes' guilt, although we expect to get much more positive evidence."

Beavers to Talk Over the Felder Row With Dorsey

Dictagraph conversations and alleged bribery charges will be discussed by Chief of Police Beavers and Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey at a conference to be held to-day.

Chief Beavers is ready to have every one who had anything to do with the graft charges called before the Grand Jury, and if conspiracy can be proven it is very probable there will be indictments.

However, it is all up to Solicitor General Dorsey just what will be done. It is thought that, owing to the present state of the Phagan case, the dictographers will not be subpenaed for some time.

Inquiry Into Forest Service Demanded

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Declaring that a mighty empire, consisting of millions of acres of land, has been given to the railroads for practically no consideration by the Forest Service, in the name of "conservation," Representative Humphrey of Washington in the House to-day demanded a special Congressional investigation of the service.

Humphrey declared that the railroads had acquired great tracts of the public lands through the "iieu land system."

Smith Plans County Farm for Fulton

Shelby Smith, chairman of the Fulton County Commission, soon will take up the plan of a county farm for Fulton, modeled after the one in Chatham County.

In Chatham the County feeds prisoners with supplies from the farm. Mr. Smith was so favorably impressed with the system that he at once announced he would try to have such an institution established here.

While at present the young couple are in London, they will leave shortly for South Africa, where Mr. Campbell will present the Masterlinck production.

A social interest will center in this marriage, the bride having lived in Atlanta until a few years ago, when, with her mother, she went to New York to devote her time to literary work, in which, through her many fine writings, she has made a name for herself.

She is a sister of Mrs. Hinton Hopkins and of Sidney Ormond, of Atlanta.

T. R., TRIUMPHANT, BACK 'IN HARNESS'

NEW YORK, June 2.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, happy and contented after spending his time in Marquette, Mich., Saturday, proving he is a lumberjack in his habits, returned here to-day to resume his duties as contributing editor.

William Loeb, Jr., formerly private secretary to Roosevelt, and Lawrence Abbott, of The Outlook, accompanied the Colonel, but when the station was reached Roosevelt broke away from them and shook hands with the crowd of friends who met him there to congratulate him on his victory.

"I am not saying anything now, and I am not going to say anything," he said.

MEXICO OBTAINS $76,000,000 LOAN

NEW YORK, June 2.—Despite reports of increasing revolt in Mexico, the Mexican Government to-day succeeded in borrowing $76,750,000 in New York, London, Paris and Berlin.

Of this $38,750,000 was borrowed for the Mexican National Railways Company, which had to begin paying off to-day $10,000,000 to holders of 4 1-2 per cent two-year notes. Payment here was made by the Union Trust Company. The remaining $30,000,000 is for the use of the Government.

American banking houses figuring in the loan were Speyer & Co., Kuhn Loeb & Co., Ladenburg, Thalman & Co. and J. Henry Schroder & Co.

The Mexican Government informed the financial group that with the funds in succession revolution could soon be put down throughout the republic.

5 TO TESTIFY FRANK WAS AT HOME AT HOUR NEGRO SAYS HE AIDED

Defense to Cite Discrepancies in Time to Disprove Conley's Affidavit---Sheriff Denies Friends of Superintendent Approached Sweeper in Cell.

After a two-hour grilling by Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey Minola McKnight, a negro woman about 21 years old, was taken to police headquarters and is held under suspicion in connection with the murder of Mary Phagan.

She is believed to have made sensational disclosures to the solicitor.

At the police station she was in hysteria, shouting: "I am going to hang, but I didn't do it."

Five persons will be prepared to testify at the trial of Leo M. Frank that he arrived at home for luncheon at 1:20 o'clock the Saturday afternoon that Mary Phagan was killed, which would have been an impossibility, the defense will assert, if Frank had directed the disposal of the body and dictated the notes at the time the negro alleges.

Testimony before the Coroner's jury by Frank and others indicated strongly that he was at home by 1:20 the afternoon of the crime. Conley in his affidavits declared that he went into Frank's office at four minutes before 1 o'clock. He said that after a conversation of a few minutes Frank heard voices and shoved Conley into a closet. Miss Corinthia Hall and Mrs. Emma Clark entered. Conley was kept a prisoner in the closet, he said, for eight or ten minutes.

It was after this, he said, that Frank asked him if he could write. Conley swore in his affidavit that he answered in the affirmative, and that he was directed to write several notes, most of which began: "Dear mother, a long tall black negro did this by himself."

After this, followed the giving of $2.50 to the negro, according to his story, as well as the giving of the $200 which later was taken back by Frank.

All of the incidents that the negro has detailed, in the minds of many interested in the case, would have kept Frank at the factory considerably after the time that five witnesses will swear he arrived home.

Wife and Her Parents to Aid.

These witnesses are Mr. and Mrs. Emil Selig, Mrs. Frank, the cook in the Selig household and an acquaintance of Frank who is said to have seen him riding home in the street car.

Adding doubt to the negro's affidavit is the testimony of Miss Corinthia Hall before the Coroner's jury. Miss Hall testified that she left the building about 11:45 Saturday forenoon. Conley described her as coming to Frank's office more than an hour later.

Sheriff Mangum made indignant and emphatic denial Monday of the reports that Conley had been approached, threatened or intimidated while he was in a cell at the Tower.

Conley, he said, was not threatened in any way. He was not approached by friends of Leo Frank and no one was permitted to see Conley whom the negro did not wish to see.

"There is not a bit of truth in the statements that have been made to the effect that Frank's friends were allowed to get to Conley and make attempts to frighten him into a confession," said the Sheriff. "It was reported that a group of Frank's friends, with a bottle of liquor, went to Conley's cell. This is absolutely a fabrication.

Treats All Prisoners Alike.

"Frank is no more to me than Conley, so far as the law is concerned. The law tells me to protect all my prisoners without fear or favor. This I have done, and this I shall continue to do. Conley was treated exactly as Frank has been, or as anyone else awaiting trial or the action of the Grand Jury.

"If anyone came to see him, he was asked first if he wished to see that person or persons. If he said he did not, his wishes were regarded to the letter.

"The report that I am seeking the Jewish support and the Jewish vote or any other class or race or nationality, as against another, is most absurd upon the face of it.

"I have nothing to say against Chief Lanford. I would only suggest that let try his case in the court and not attempt to settle the whole case and hang one man or another before the twelve men the law prescribes have had a chance to pass on the prisoner's guilt or innocence.

Conley made a personal request of Chief of Detectives Lanford Monday morning to be taken to confront the factory superintendent.

"I think I could make him tell everything if I could just go there to his cell and tell my story again," said the negro. Conley repeatedly urged upon Chief Lanford that he be allowed to face Frank. He declared he thought his presence would break Frank down.

The Chief regarded Conley as sincere in his request, but said that he would make no further effort to bring the negro and the factory superintendent together. All reated in the hands of Luther Z. Rosser, Frank's attorney, Lanford announced.

"I have made several attempts to face Conley to Frank's cell since the negro began making his disclosures," explained Chief Lanford. "All efforts have been unavailing. Frank steadfastly has refused to talk with the detectives or with anyone whom the detectives may bring to see him. Attorney Rosser may arrange for a meeting of this sort, but the detective department has given it up.

Conley Not To Be Indicted Now.

"If Rosser is confident that Frank is innocent, he may think it will help his client's case to give him a chance to see the negro and deny his tale."

Chief Lanford said that there would be no bar to Conley's testimony at the trial of Frank. Conley, he said, would not be indicted as an accessory after the fact at the present time, but more likely would be indicted after Frank's case was determined in one way or another. In the meantime he will be held as a material witness like Newt Lee, the negro night watchman at the factory.
