DORSEY AIDE SAYS FRANK IS FAST IN NET

Attorney Hooper Declares State Is Prepared for Any Move the Defense May Make.

Frank A. Hooper, the well-known criminal lawyer who has been engaged to assist Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey in the trial of Leo M. Frank for the alleged murder of Mary Phagan, said Monday that the case was complete and was ready for presentation in court at any time.

Mr. Hooper asserted that the attorneys interested in the prosecution had investigated every angle of the mystery so thoroughly and fortified themselves against any defense that Frank will present, that practically nothing remained to be done until the case was called for trial. The departure of Solicitor Dorsey for a week's vacation, he said, was an indication of the preparedness of the prosecution.

No new developments are expected by the prosecution, according to Mr. Hooper. All of the stories and rumors have been run down to their original source. The defense, in his opinion, will be able to spring no surprise that has not been anticipated by the prosecution.

Mrs. Frank Gives Interview.

The American printed Sunday an exclusive interview with Mrs. Frank, whose husband, Leo M. Frank, is under indictment charged with the murder of 14-year-old Mary Phagan. It was the first time that Mrs. Frank had permitted herself to be interviewed since the Coroner's jury a month ago recommended that the Grand Jury hold her husband for trial.

She broke her silence to tell the thousands who have been gripped by the remarkable murder mystery just why she is absolutely confident and positive that Frank could not have been the author of the terrible deed. She made no plea for sympathy, but expressed herself as fully reconciled to the processes of the law, even though they temporarily caused her the greatest sorrow and kept her husband behind the cars as a man suspected of one of the most brutal crimes thinkable. The loyal wife said that she was able to bear the present belief because of the assurance of Frank's ultimate and complete vindication.

Why She Believes Husband.

On the fact that she believes from her life with the suspected slayer that any gross or immoral act is utterly apart from his nature, she bases much of her belief in his entire innocence.

She said, in part:

"In all the year and a half of our engagement, in the happy knowledge and consent of both our parents, I was Leo's 'best girl' and he was my one and only beau. If I went to a party, it was conceded that I should go with Leo, and if Leo went, he invariably went with me. You know, the people of my faith do those things in that way—with us, betrothal is all but as sacred as marriage itself.

"Leo Frank and myself have been man and wife for two years and a half. I state it as a circumstance showing how sweet and mutually happy our home life has been, and not as a thing I should mention ordinarily, that during all the two and a half years of our wedded life not once has Leo been away from me at night, save when once a month he attended the meetings of the Jewish Order of B'nai Brith, of which he was the president in Atlanta until he was arrested.

He Preferred Staying Home.

"He might have gone out in the evenings, perhaps without my knowledge, to places he should not have gone, so far as my free consent may have figured as a factor in his going. I merely cite it as a truthful circumstance that he has not elected to go. He seemed rather to prefer staying home with me. Naturally, that made

Beavers Seeks to Add Four Women To His Vice Squad

Women will be added to the vice squad of the Atlanta Police Department if the recommendations of Chief Beavers, as made in his report to the police board on his meeting with the police chiefs in Washington, are adopted.

From the paper read by the Chief of Police of Los Angeles in regard to women detectives and the effect in that city, Chief Beavers is firmly convinced they would be of help here.

The women—four in number—would be used to ferret out and report to the Chief the names of women and men who are engaged in the vice traffic in Atlanta, and in this way, the Chief believes, the department would be able to completely break up the business in this city.

Leading Citizens Urge Tracks on Ivy

Leading citizens called at the office of Mayor Woodward Monday to protest against the proposed plan not to replace the trolley car tracks on Ivy Street. V. H. Kriegshaber filed a formal protest as a property owner in which he urged that the tracks be put down on the regraded street. Others in the party were Judge Spencer Atkinson, Logan Bleckley, E. C. Peters and B. M. Willingham.

They declared the change of route would inconvenience persons using North Side cars.

Painter Analysis Mailed to Coroner

JACKSONVILLE, June 16.—Coroner C. D. Abbott has received word from Baltimore that the report of the analysis of E. O. Painter's stomach has been mailed. He expects to get it to-day.

Upon receipt of the report the Coroner will reassemble his jury and continue the inquest into the death of the wealthy fertilizer manufacturer, who drowned in the St. Johns River on May 22.

PRESIDENT IN PERSON TO SPUR HOUSE

Wilson Will Read Message Urging His 'Hobbleless' Currency Reform Bill.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—President Wilson will read his currency message to Congress in person, it was announced at the White House prior to the newspaper conference at which the President discussed the bill at length with the Washington correspondents.

The President believes that his plan of personally placing before the national Legislature the views on important topics, such as currency and the tariff, insures greater attention and more marked interest from the country at large than did the former custom of sending messages to Congress and having them read by a clerk.

General Principles Are His.

Therefore, as soon as the currency bill is completed and ready for presentation (probably about Friday of this week), the President will go to the Capitol and present his views on the necessary financial reform to the assembled members of the House.

In the conference to-day the President said that the complete currency measure will be "no one-man bill;" that the general principles of the measures will be his, but that the details and working out of the principles have been left in the hands of Senator Owen, of Oklahoma; Representative Glass, of Virginia, and Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo; that there will be but one bill presented to Congress, and that the stamp of Presidential approval will be on that one.

No Hobble Skirt Bill.

The President concluded his discussion of the proposed legislation by saying that "the principle must be judged by the clothes it wears—and they certainly will not be of the hobble skirt variety."

The President declined to discuss any of the details of the bill, saying they had not all been decided on finally.

Man Running for Train Is Hit by an Engine; Dies in Hour

Carl Brown, 23 years old, of Stone Mountain, was struck by a switch engine of the Georgia Railroad early Monday morning and received injuries from which he died an hour later. He attempted to board a moving passenger train in the Atlanta yards.

C. B. Bishop, of Scottdale, Brown's companion, had boarded the train and turned on the coach steps to call to his friend.

Brown, running across the yards in the darkness, failed to see the approaching switch engine. He was struck by the engine's cowcatcher and hurled fifteen feet. He was picked up unconscious and hurried to the Elkin-Goldsmith Sanitarium.

Brown and Bishop had been in Atlanta visiting young ladies. They overstayed their time and had tried to make a short cut to the train.

Risque Books Most Sought by Readers

CHICAGO, June 14.—Books that twenty years ago were considered unfit for public circulation now are most eagerly sought, according to employees in the Chicago Public Library.

"The reading public has become broadened in its attitude toward discussions of problems of sex life until now these discussions are eagerly sought," one said.

Atlanta Girls Dazzle Dr. Cook On Tour to Establish 'Rights'

Dr. Frederick A. Cook, who stopped to stare at Peachtree belles.

"Southern women have a little way all their own," explorer says.

Explorer Pauses on Lecture Tour to See Atlanta.

Dr. Frederick A. Cook, of polar fame, was in Atlanta Monday, and—listen, girls—he's head over heels in love with you already, for he says so himself.

"They've simply got me," was the way the Doctor put it when seen in his room at the Hotel Aragon Monday morning.

In fact, Dr. Cook says he's fallen in love with all the Southern girls because they're so charming—and the Doctor is by no means a bad authority, for he is making a considerable tour of the Southland in the interest of what he terms a "fair play campaign" to show he discovered as much North Pole as Admiral Peary ever did.

"Southern women," said Dr. Cook, "have a little way all their own—I can't explain it, nor can I express it adequately—but it's true just the same. In other words, they form a type of woman that you don't find anywhere else on the earth.

"Atlanta is certainly no exception to his rule—in fact, I think they look even better here than elsewhere. They simply get a fellow—that's all."

The Doc Likes Atlanta.

The Doctor, who was all smiles Monday morning, did not confine his compliments to Atlanta women, however. He took occasion also to say a good word for the Capital City, which he made headquarters Monday en route to Madison, Ga., where he will deliver a lecture Monday night.

Atlanta, he says, looks good to him—looks better than any Southern city he has seen thus far, for there is a "snap here that makes things go."

Of course, being so infatuated with Atlanta, he wanted to know all about the big city. When informed that legal prohibition existed here he expressed surprise. Prohibition he believes to be a good thing, he says, although he is not a teetotaler himself, as a glass of beer "once-in-while" goes pretty well.

"Buttermilk is my favorite drink, however," said the Doctor, smiling, "for it is both nourishing and refreshing."

"But how about Mr. Bryan's grape juice program?" interrupted the reporter.

"Oh, that's going too far," replied the Doctor. "I suppose—" and this with a sly wink—"the grape juice people like it pretty well—so well that they probably will contribute a neat little sum to the next Democratic campaign fund."

Of course, Dr. Cook was still most seriously concerned with his campaign for "fair play" in the North Polar controversy, which, the Doctor says, is by no means a dead issue.

As a matter of fact, the issue is so live, according to Dr. Cook, that it is keeping him just about as busy as he ever hopes to be. In less than three years, he says, he has appeared before 3,000,000 people in America and Europe. His present tour will include Alabama, Georgia, Florida, the Carolinas, Tennessee and Oklahoma. After winding up the Southern tour, he will go to the big cities of the West and North.

"All I want is fair play," Dr. Cook repeated, "and I will get this at the hands of the middle classes of the United States, which have always been friendly to me."

Zoo Keeper to Raise Lion Cubs on Bottle

The birth of three lion cubs at the Gress Zoo has started a nursery at the park that might be a model to humans. The cubs were born Sunday night and the old lioness was extremely jealous of them, but the hot weather made her so restless she tossed against one and killed it.

"Blackie" Boyd, the zoo keeper, took the two remaining to his home, and announced he would raise them on a bottle.

4 Hurt in Wreck of Auto Near Midland

COLUMBUS, GA., June 16.—According to a long distance telephone message received here to-day, four persons were painfully hurt late Sunday afternoon when the automobile of Dr. F. E. Young, of Midland, turned turtle down an eight-foot embankment.

Miss Helen Coleman, of Columbus, who was driving the car, was caught under the steering wheel. Dr. Young's two children were pinned underneath the car. Dr. Young was thrown clear of the car. It is thought all will recover.

Ah, at Last, Women Are to Have 'Em

CHICAGO, June 16.—"Trouserines" will be offered by Chicago dressmakers to take the place of the popular, but abused, slashed skirt. Woman must pull 'em on over her feet, too, just like the men do it. Thus the dream of many decades is coming true.

The Chicago Dressmakers' Association has so decreed. The new style is to be a great flaring ankle-length pair o' something, draped so that on the street one will never stare.

THE WEATHER.

Forecast for Atlanta and Georgia—Fair Monday and probably Tuesday; light, variable winds.

DESPERADO, AT BAY UNDER HOUSE, FIRES UNTIL NEARLY DEAD

Patrolman Paul West Braves Death in Darkness to Club Slayer Insensible and Drag Him From Refuge---Crowd Becomes Menacing.

Court Deputy David Yancey was hacked and stabbed to death Monday forenoon in a desperate battle with Eugene Watson, a crazed negro who had run amuck and terrorized the residents in the vicinity of Rawson and Windsor Streets.

Brought to bay under a vacant house at 33 Windsor Street, the black man evaded for more than half and hour the wagonload of policemen who had been hurried to the scene of the killing on a riot call.

The negro surrendered only after he had been badly wounded and saw that he could not hold out longer against the posse of bluecoats who had surrounded him in his stronghold.

A lynching was averted only by the large force of officers who rushed to the house and hurried the unconscious negro to the police station in an automobile.

Cries of "Lynch him!" were heard on every hand. The crowd was wildly excited and thronged about the negro as he was being taken from the basement. The policemen quickly formed a circle about Watson and pushed the angry men away.

Until he was hurried into the automobile, the danger of violence was not passed, the crowd at one time threatening to take him from the officers.

Yancey's body was terribly mutilated by the frenzied negro. Rather than be taken, Watson rushed like a wild beast toward Yancey, stabbed him repeatedly in the breast and back and slashed one of his arms almost to ribbons. Yancey probably was dead long before Watson had completed his fiendish attack.

The trouble which resulted in the tragedy started when Watson snatched $4 from Jesse Winn, an aged negro, on Whitehall Street. Watson ran after getting the money and threatened with a drawn knife everyone who stood in his path.

Deputy Gives Chase.

As he was running up Rawson Street, Deputy Yancey, who happened to be in that vicinity to serve some papers, took up the chase. Watson ran into the yard at the rear of 303 Rawson Street, the home of Mrs. J. W. Wilson, with Yancey in close pursuit.

Robert Starnes, aged 16, of 11 Fitzgerald Street, joined in the chase, along with a score of other persons. Yancey fired upon the negro as he cornered him in the yard.

"Damn you, you've got to kill me before you can take me," Watson shouted as he rushed upon the deputy and snatched the still smoking revolver out of his hand.

With this he drew the knife and plunged it time and again into the body of Yancey. The deputy sank to the ground mortally wounded, but the blood-maddened negro kept hacking and stabbing the limp body.

Boy Rushes to Aid.

Young Starnes, who had hastened to the officer's assistance, picked up one brick after another and hurled them at the negro, but the latter paid no attention to the blows.

When Watson had sated his prostrate body of Yancey and ran up bloody passion, he leaped from the the street, taking refuge, when hotly pressed, in the cellar of the vacant house at 33 Windsor Street.

He was quickly surrounded by the posse of officers. Thrusting their weapons in under the house they commenced a fusillade upon the negro which failed to subdue him until he was almost riddeld with bullets.

Several bullets took effect in his left leg and shattered the bones both above and below the knee. Another bullet found lodgment in his right

FUND IS STARTED FOR YANCEY'S FAMILY

Court Deputy David Yancey is dead. He met a horrible fate. He was stabbed and hacked to death while endeavoring to serve his employer, the public of Atlanta and Fulton County. He died "with his boots on."

The whole city and the entire county will applaud this brave man's deed and mourn his death. Then they will turn again to their own homes and happy families and the humdrum of business. Court Deputy David Yancey will pass from their minds.

It remains for the dead man's unhappy family to bear the real burdens of consequences which its head met in serving the public. There is the widow, who idolized her big, strong husband. There are also eight children, bright-eyed boys and girls, not one of them over 16 years of age, who will romp no more about their father's knee.

Family in Need.

He has been snatched away from them. And now—what do they face?

With the overwhelming tragedy not yet fully realized by them, the family of Deputy Yancey has not thought of this. Their sorrow for their loved one drowns out all else.

But life has its toll which must be paid. There are eight children who have to live, as well as a widow. Their sole support has been taken from them. And now—they face life's problem.

Yancey's family was in straitened circumstances at the time of his death. Sickness had invaded the house and two of the children are now in a hospital.

Already friends of the dead man are thinking of this. The Georgian also has thought of this.

The Georgian has started a fund to care for the family whose head was cut off while serving the people of Atlanta and Fulton County.

Your Aid Needed.

This newspaper has headed the list with $25. The amount is small—not commensurate in any manner with the price paid by Yancey. But its smallness invites contributions from other sources—from the public whom Yancey served. The Georgian will gladly receive these contributions and see that they are put in the hands of the bereaved family as a poor substitute for what it has lost.

Friends of the deputy have already rallied to the fund. The following are the first to answer:

The Georgian	$25
Frank L. Harralson	5
Harry Latham	5
Newt Garner	5
John W. Moore	5

High praise was given the deputy by Sheriff Mangum, his superior officer.

"Yancey was a fine man," said the Sheriff. "He had always done his duty to the public faithfully."

groin and still others in his right side.

In spite of his many wounds, it was thought that he might live. None of them alone would have been fatal. Watson has been wanted for some time at Fayetteville for escaping from the chaingang, and Warden Harris has been in Atlanta several times trying to locate the negro. Failing, he detailed a negro to stay in the city in an effort to find him. It was known that Watson lived in the rear of 60 Orange Street, but he was shrewd enough not to go near his home.

An especial act of bravery during the siege of Watson, who was in the darkness under the house, was that of Policeman Paul West. Watson, crippled but still defiant, was in an obscure corner. The officers called upon him to surrender. He shouted his defiance at them. After the fire was resumed the negro saw there was no further use in resisting and yelled that he was ready to give up.

West Dares Death in Dark.

The officers waited, but the negro did not come out of the darkness. Policeman West, against the warnings of his fellow-officers, dropped to the ground and crawled under the house toward the negro. His comrades were expecting every instant to hear the crack of a shot which would tell that West, too, had fallen a victim to the crazed black man.

West, however, crept up on the negro and hit him over the head with the butt of his revolver. Then he took him by the feet and dragged him, senseless, out into the light.

At the sight of the negro the anger of the mob which had collected was redoubled. Inflamed beyond measure by the atrocious killing, they surged forward and would have borne Watson off had not the policemen hastily surrounded him and carried him to the waiting automobile.

His eyes glazed and staring, the negro appeared utterly unconscious as he lay in the car. Questions as to his identity were hurled at him as he was borne to the station house and later to the hospital, but he seemed not to hear them.

Woman Stands Guard.

Mrs. Hattie Barnett, Atlanta's woman detective, lives at 15 Woodward Avenue, just back of the yard on Windsor Street, where the bloody battle between Watson and Yancey took place. She heard the shots that Yancey fired at the negro and ran out to see the deputy lying on the grass, horribly gashed and mutilated, and the negro running up the street.

Snatching her revolver she ran out of doors and after the negro. When Watson took refuge under the house on Windsor Street, Mrs. Barnett stood guard until the wagon load of policemen and detectives under command of Assistant Chief Jett and Captain Poole dashed up in front of the house.

Irby Terry, of 294 Whitehall Street, a boy of 11 years, had a narrow escape at the hands of the negro. Terry was standing on the street corner when the negro dashed by after snatching the purse of Winn. Watson brandished his knife and as he came upon the boy he made a lunge which Terry narrowly dodged.

Family Left in Want.

One of the many pathetic features of the tragedy is the poverty of the family that Yancey leaves. They have had a hard struggle for existence in their little home at Lakewood Heights on the Jonesboro Road. Eight children are in the family, none of them above 16 or 17 years of age. One of the two older daughters recently was taken to the hospital, making an additional burden upon Yancey.

Only recently Yancey was made a bailiff in Judge Calhoun's court. The salary was $100 a month. Yancey was overjoyed when apprised of his appointment.

"Now everything will be fine sailing," he said. "That fixes me just right. I am tickled to death. One of my children is in the hospital and another is very sick. I can take care of them now."

Jesse Winn, the old negro from whom Watson stole the $4, lives in DeWald alley. Watson is said to have stayed at the Winn home on several occasions. Winn is an employee in the coal yards of the Southern Railway.

Auto Has Red Flag; Chased by Angry Bull

SACRAMENTO, June 16.—A red Sacramento pennant attached to the rear of the automobile of H. A. McClellan, of this city, almost brought disaster upon himself and family when a bull attacked the machine from the flank on the road between Nicolas and Lincoln. By dodging and speeding the chauffeur managed to escape with a punctured tire which the bull gored with his horns.

FRANK TIGHT IN NET, SAYS AIDE TO DORSEY

me very happy—for I am, after all, a woman, like other women, and a woman never gets to the point where she does not dearly love for her husband to show her that he is still her sweetheart.

"We have lived here in this house, with my father and mother. To them, Leo has been devoted and always most considerate. They love him as a son; they took him close to their hearts before the wedding bells had ceased to ring—for that is the way our people do in those matters.

"I will tell you another reason why I think Leo Frank could not have committed the diabolical crime charged to him. He is devoted to children—little children especially.

"We have no children of our own, unfortunately, but there are several nieces and nephews in the family, and to every one of them Mr. Frank is affectionately attached. I have seen him play with a two-year-old child for hours, not once, but many times.

Helps Little Orphan Children.

"He has been with Mr. Milton Klein, for many years one of the moving spirits in providing innocent and healthful outdoor recreation and pleasure for the children of the Hebrews' Orphan Home.

"Is a man who loves children as Leo Frank loves them likely to have a hand in the slaying of an innocent child, not yet budded into youthful womanhood, as Mary Phagan is said to have been?

"If there is one person in all the world he has been more devoted to than to me, it is his aged and blind uncle, M. Frank. Is a man who is kind and considerate to the lame, the halt and the blind such a man as would take a hand in the killing of a child?

"Ah, surely, surely, there are few people who will—who can—believe that!

Always Kind and Generous.

"In the home where Leo Frank has spent his time away from his business, he always has been the most kind, the most generous, the most thoughtful, the most considerate and the most affectionate of men.

"I think my knowledge of Leo Frank and the kind of man he is is worth more than the word of a shiftless negro who has lied persistently and vigorously ever since he was arrested as a suspect—but while my voice will be hushed in the court room, his will be heard by both the judge and the jury trying my husband for his life.

"There is, of course, much in this case that has seemed to me cruel—and now and then I have been moved to some measure of bitterness in my thoughts. But I believe that truth is mighty, and all I want is fair play.

She Wants Fair Play.

"If we can get fair play, my husband will be restored soon to me and to his family and his friends—and when he is, we shall take up calmly, and in such degree of forgetfulness as we can summon to our aid, the disrupted thread of our life, bind up our wounds, and try to hold against no man aught of ill will or resentment.

"That's the way I feel about it, and that's the way Leo feels about it. That's the way mother and father feel about it, too.

"We await the trial of Leo Frank in confidence. We have come to think that, after all, we shall get fair treatment—and as that is all we have asked for, we are more and more optimistic every day as to the conclusion."

I'LL KEEP PEACE, KAISER TELLS CARNEGIE

BERLIN, June 16.—Andrew Carnegie, leading worker for word-wide peace, to-day paid his respects to Emperor William, the "war lord of Europe." Mr. Carnegie was accompanied by other American peace commissioners who came here to extend felicitations to the Kaiser as part of the quarter centennial celebration of the ascension of the Emperor to the throne of Germany.

Mr. Carnegie and his fellow commissioners presented the Kaiser with an address in the name of 44 American peace and conciliation societies. The address pointed out that William's reign of 25 years has been notable because of the maintenance of a quarter of a century of peace. In reply the Kaiser said, in part:

Hopes for Peaceful Reign.

"I hope to reign 25 years more in peace, and shall certainly do all I can in that direction."

Germans expressed great curiosity to see the American iron master and great crowds lined the streets when he departed from the Adlon Hotel, where he is stopping with his wife and daughter, Margaret. He was heartily cheered. This cordial demonstration pleased Mr. Carnegie, who waved his hand to the crowds.

Among those who were received with Mr. Carnegie by the Emperor were Robert S. Brookings, of St. Louis, and Jacob G. Schmidlapp, of Cincinnati.

Although yesterday was the real anniversary, William having ascended the throne June 15, 1888, because it was Sunday the secular ceremonies were postponed until to-day.

Bands Play Martial Tunes.

Shortly after dawn the massed military bands from all the garrisons in the environs of Berlin assembled in Unter Den Linden and a crash of martial music, which echoed and re-echoed through the neighboring streets, followed.

Seven thousand school children joined in singing "The Watch on the Rhine" and other tunes the bands played. The streets were crowded with visitors from all sections of the empire. Among these were many American, English and other foreign tourists.

A mighty crowd gathered about the marble palace in Potsdam and sang the national hymn time and again. The wetaher was ideal for the occasion.

Catholics May Take New Bible Version

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Rev. D. J. Kennedy, theologian of the Dominican Order, announced here to-day that a revised translation of the Bible had been prepared by the late Rev. F. A. Spencer, of the Dominicans. Dr. Kennedy delivered an oration at Father Spencer's funeral exercises, and disclosed that Father Spencer devoted the last twenty years of his life to the translation.

He predicted the Roman Catholic clergy soon would call a special canonical council to consider the new version in place of the Douay's, which has been accepted for more than 300 years.

Marshall Sees Rules For Life in Baseball

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The rising generation was directed to form its rules of life upon the rules of baseball by Vice President Marshall in a children's day address before the Bethany Chapel Prebyterian Sunday school.

"No boy is so mean as the boy who will not play the game square," said the Vice President. "The sense of justice is ever present in the heart and mind of every boy and girl. I never have seen a thoroughly bad girl, but I believe I have seen one or two boys who were really bad."

1 Dead, 3 Hurt, When Train Strikes Auto

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., June 16. Improvement was noted to-day in the condition of Miss Willie Newton, Mrs. Finis Plumlee and Leo Chamberlain, who were injured yesterday when a Southern Railway passenger train struck an automobile in which they were riding near Ooltewah, killing Finis Plumlee.

The party was returning from an outing at Ocoee. Chamberlain, the chauffeur, was hurled 100 feet.

COOPER HAS WAY TO MEET FOOD SHORTAGE

Chamber of Commerce Secretary Urges Enlistment of 100,000 Boys in Corn Club.

Secretary Walter G. Cooper, of the Chamber of Commerce, Monday proposed a way to meet the $37,000,000 deficit in the food supply of Georgia. He urged organization of 100,000 boys in the corn clubs and thereby increasing tenfold the work which already has added 25,000,000 bushels of corn to the annual crop.

Mr. Cooper urges an immediate and active State-wide interest in the 1912 Georgia Corn Show as the most important step.

He says:

"Leading authorities on the food supply of Georgia agree in the estimate that the people sent out of this State last year $172,496,000 for corn, oats, hay, meat, dairy products and other food that should be raised here.

"The cotton and cotton-seed crops lack $37,496,000 of paying for the food we bought; this in spite of the fact that the corn crop of Georgia has increased 25,000,000 bushels in five years.

Average Yield Increasing.

"We have heard of a revolution in agriculture. Statistics show the average yield of corn went up from 10 to 15 bushels in five years. Georgia, though, still lacks a great deal of raising her food.

"In the face of wonderful improvements wrought by corn clubs in five years, it is hard to believe the statement that the cotton crop lacks $37,000,000 of paying for food supplies brought into the State; but these estimates are vouched for by such men as P. A. Methvin, State pure food inspector, and H. G. Hastings, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Committee on Agriculture.

"Of course, farmers raise some corn, oats and hay, but they must have consumed what they raised; otherwise they would not have to buy.

"Georgia farmers, according to the State Department of Agriculture, produce something more than $232,000,000, possibly $250,000,000, but when it is remembered that farmers have to buy mules, fertilizers, hardware, clothes, school books and a great many other things besides food, it is clear that they have little left to pay the enormous food bills indicated by the foregoing figures.

Confronted by Problem.

"What are we going to do about it? Of course, we must make the farms more productive and produce the things that we import.

"States like Iowa are producing 36 bushels of corn to the acre. There is no reason why this should not be done in Georgia.

"In addition to this, the State of Iowa sells $200,000,000 a year of animal products.

"We can not have much in the way of animal products until we have enough corn, oats, hay and forage to feed the animals as well as the people.

"If we are short $58,000,000 in corn with no animals to feed, how much more corn will we have to raise in order to supply the present demand and furnish food for $200,000,000 worth of animals as Iowa does?

"Iowa is about the same size as Georgia and the climate is certainly no better. There is no more congenial soil and not as much moisture."

The convention is made up of representatives from four Southern States—Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina and Florida—and is known as the Southeastern section of the organization.

Vandals Chop Down His Whole Orchard

CAMDEN, N. J., June 16.—Aroused by the barking of his dogs, Martin Kahout, of Atco, rushed out of his house and was dumfounded when he discovered that not a tree in his peach orchard was left standing, each being chopped down close to the ground. He could advance no reason for the destruction.

Kahout expected to get $1,500 from the crop.

Lady Richardson's Pay $10,000
Wears Draperies In Arabian Act

Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, in her Oriental costume.

Says She Needs Money For Boys' Home and Praises Light, Flowing Costume For Women.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, who has earned the sobriquet of "the most unconventional woman in all England," will dance in New York swathed in picturesque Arabian costume, consisting of brown and white draperies, in a drama based on the biblical character Judith.

For her two weeks' work she will receive $10,000.

The love for Oriental dress was gained by Lady Constance while in India.

"The day will come when all women will dress like those of Egypt and India," she said. "The cost is nominal, and I am relieved of all worry about the changing styles. Then, too, this costume is comfortable, and that is something that can not be said for the modern attire favored by women. And, also, I think that I am safe in saying it is about as becoming as most modern outfits."

Lady Constance has been implored many times by her relatives, the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, not to dance in public. But Lady Constance said she needed the money for a boys' home in Scotland which she is trying to help.

CITY TO SWELTER AS BREEZES FAIL

Weather Man Declares Mercury Will Hit High Places—Hot Monday Morning.

Soft-collar and linen-suit weather is forecast for the current week by Government Weatherman VonHerrmann. Monday the maximum temperature will approximate Sunday's, when the mercury registered 92 degrees as the maximum. At 6 o'clock Monday morning the thermometer registered 71, which is exceptionally high for Atlanta during the month of June for that hour.

"What makes it so hot?" the weather man was asked.

"The beautiful sunshine," answered Mr. VonHerrmann. "But while this is actually the case, the real reason for the hot wave is that at present there is high pressure over the State of Georgia and no movement of wind. If there were a brisk wind movement the sun's rays would be cooled. Consequently, this week we will get hot weather that is not due us."

Deaths were reported.

In Chicago the mercury reached 94. The same maximum was reported at St. Louis, Montgomery, Jacksonville, Kansas City and North Platte. That was 10 degrees hotter than the Heat Is Fatal in North Middle West.

CHICAGO, June 16.—Several more days of intense heat are in prospect to-day, following a sizzling 24 hours. The entire north central part of the country was hot yesterday. Eight maximum for the day at New Orleans, and 2 degrees cooler than at Omaha, Des Moines and St. Paul.

The temperature at 9 o'clock this morning, 86, indicated that a new record for the season would be reached this afternoon.

Fear for Babies as Heat Makes Cleveland Record.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 16.—At 10 o'clock this morning the thermometer had risen to 86, and indications pointed to the hottest June day in the history of the local weather bureau. Several were overcome by the heat and an epidemic of illness among babies caused fears of a new mark in infant mortality.

New York Heat Wave Will Continue Two Days.

NEW YORK, June 16.—New York City sweltered to-day under the first real heat wave of the season. At noon the temperature was 87, but the weather forecaster predicted that the same torrid weather would prevail two days longer.

DIES FROM STAB WOUND.

MOBILE, ALA., June 16.—Raymond Sheppard, a well-known resident of St. Andrews, Fla., died here at an infirmary from a stab wound. E. L. Matthews, a prominent citizen of Panama City, is locked up at St. Andrews, charged with inflicting the wound.

COLYAR RETURNS PROMISING SENSATION

A. S. Colyar is in Atlanta again, promising to spring some more sensations.

The investigator who engineered the dictographing of Thomas B. Felder and Mayor Woodward has been in Washington. He sent a letter to Atlanta before him, saying he objected to being made a goat.

It is believed Colyar saw George M. Gentry while in Washington and got from him an affidavit. This is said to be much the same as the one printed admitting that the dictograph records had been padded, as charged in Gentry's recent affidavit, but that the general charges were upheld.

Promises Story in Letter.

Colyar's letter, mailed before he left Washington, follows:

"He laughs best who laughs last. When you get tired publishing all of the lies the gang of political crooks are publishing on Lanford and myself I may be able to give you a story that will cause some people to sit up and take notice.

"It's indeed comforting to think one purchased affidavit can cause a certain man in Atlanta to consider himself vindicated completely. Whitewash is cheap, as we all know.

"Then there is Mayor Woodward. He says 'Colyar went to Mrs. Gentry's house and worried her.' Indeed, where did he learn this? It's news to me. But we all know the Mayor. He is the same Mayor Hon. R. F. Maddox defeated after he (Woodward) was nominated by his party, and all Atlanta knows why. Let them make a goat out of me and see what I publish in my own defense.

"The crooks got caught. And they sent Miles away to see if he could not fool the people. A. S. COLYAR."

Felder's Trip Causes Comment.

Speculation was rife Monday as to the nature of the trip of Colonel Thomas B. Felder, who left Atlanta Sunday afternoon with the statement that he was bound for Cincinnati.

Rumors had it that Colonel Felder in reality is on his way to Washington, for the purpose probably of conferring with George Gentry, the missing stenographer in the recent dictagraph sensation. If this is Colonel Felder's intention, he kept it to himself.

It has been suggested that Colonel Felder would feel much safer in going to Washington by way of Cincinnati than through the State of South Carolina.

NO VICE HOUSES IN FIVE YEARS, SAYS CHIEF

"In less than five years every recognized house of vice in the United States will be closed."

This was the statement made today by James L. Beavers, chief of police of Atlanta, who returned last night from Washington and the convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs.

More time was allotted to discussion of the social evil than in any previous convention of the police chiefs, Beavers said. Last Wednesday the whole afternoon session was devoted to the topic. Chief Beavers made an address, and it was this address and the chief's record in Atlanta which stimulated the discussion.

"There has been a wonderful increase of sentiment among chiefs of police in favor of closing these houses," Chief Beavers said to-day. "This feeling was demonstrated at the convention last week.

"Last Wednesday the convention used the whole afternoon for discussion of the social evil. That was the first time so much attention ever had been given to this subject. The police chiefs are giving more attention now to talking and thinking about this question than ever before, and the sentiment is rapidly growing in favor of absolute suppression.

"Some of the chiefs in attendance at the convention favored segregation, but all of them admitted the law favored suppression, and that suppression was right. The only question seemed to be whether the laws could be enforced, and the majority sentiment was they could.

"The chiefs know suppression is right, and after listening to the discussions and studying the sentiment manifested there, I believe in less than five years every recognized house of vice in the United States will be closed."

Quality and Service Without Discrimination!
Because we have a large plant, and second to none in America for absolute completeness and modernism, is not an argument that we are looking only for the BIG things in PRINTING. The same element of price, quality and service is just as much an inseparable part of every small job we turn out as the most elaborate that leaves our shop. The same niceties in every small detail enter into every piece of work we do, no matter how small the size or quantity. SERVICE here is the monitor that governs our every movement. DUEL IN DARK BY BURGLAR AND DETECTIVE

Negro, Caught Robbing Safe, Flees After Volleys Are Exchanged—Arrested Later.

The details of a pistol duel between a Pinkerton detective and a burglar in the Troy Laundry, 210 Houston Street, were made known Sunday after the arrest of Herman Butler, a negro, living at 99 Rondeau Street.

A volley of shots, which startled the neighborhood, was exchanged between Fred Farris, the detective, and Butler when Farris discovered the latter rifling the safe in the laundry Saturday night after all of the other employees had departed.

The laundry proprietors had missed money and other articles from the building several times, but were unable to find the thief. Finally they notified the Pinkertons.

Farris hid in the building Saturday night. Soon after the lights were out the detective saw a man approach one of the house telephones. The intruder, using the instrument, ascertained that no one was on the other floors of the building. Then he proceeded to unlock an old-fashioned safe with a key he had.

The burglar was interrupted by Farris' command to throw up his hands. Instead of complying, Butler drew a revolver and began firing in the direction from which the voice came. Farris returned the fire, but Butler, backing away, managed to get to the rear door and escape without being hit.

Not suspecting that his identity had been learned, Butler remained at home Sunday. He was arrested there by Detectives Coker and Gillespie.

Defends Wife's Name In Newspaper Notice

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—Because he heard things that gossips were saying about him and his wife, Robert C. Walsh, a druggist, inserted the following advertisement in the St. Louis newspapers:

"Please Take Notice—Notice is hereby given that I know my wife, Susie T. Walsh, to be a respectable, well-meaning woman in everything.

"R. C. WALSH."

200-Mile Walk Marks Silver Wedding Day

PHILADELPHIA, June 16.—Dr. N. R. Hubbard and wife celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding by walking from their home in Williamsport, Pa., to this city, a distance of 200 miles.

The couple declare it was the best vacation outing they ever had.

All This Took Place On Friday, 13th, '13

DALTON, June 16.—Friday, the thirteenth, brought an unusual string of luck to Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Albertson, tenants on the farm of D. B. Barrett, south of here.

On that day their thirteenth child was born, a fine Jersey cow gave birth to a calf, a prize sow produced a fine litter of pigs and the family cat brought in five woolly kittens.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., June 16.—William S. Coffield, 84 years old, veteran of the Mexican War, as well as two Indian wars and the Civil War, is the father of a girl baby, born last night. Coffield draws a pension of $55 a month from the Government.

Bud Fisher and Bride to Buy Chateau

They're Here in Vaudeville to Get Funds

Bud Fisher, creator of Mutt and Jeff, at work.

Artist Reveals Dream of Happiness—Hopes Mutt and Jeff Will Survive Long Time.

Bud Fisher, creator of our old friends Mutt and Jeff, and his bride, formerly Pauline Welch, are spending a week in Atlanta while on their way to the southern part of France.

Neither Bud nor Mrs. Fisher knows when they will reach France and take up their abode in the chateau they have in mind, but both are looking forward to it. Bud says it will be "swell" and "easy," while Mrs. Fisher declares it will be "great." The fact that they are going was kept a jealously guarded secret until they reached Atlanta and told it to a Georgian reporter to-day.

Bud Fisher and Pauline Welch arrived in Atlanta at 6 o'clock Sunday afternoon and registered at the Piedmont. They are booked for a week's engagement at the Forsyth Theater, beginning with the matinee to-day. Bud will draw cartoons, while Mrs. Fisher, or Pauline Welch, has an act of her own.

Just Draws Mutt and Jeff.

"Just pictures of Mutt and Jeff and caricatures of people in the audience, all pantomime—that's all I do," said Bud in describing his act to the reporter. But "just pictures of Mutt and Jeff" is enough to elicit several thousand laughs a night from any audience; also to deposit several thousand simoleons per annum in the Fisher and Welch exchequer.

"Mutt and Jeff are six years old now," said Fisher. "But I hope they will become a great deal older, as old as I do, I trust."

"I never told anybody before, but Atlanta is about as good a place to let it out as I can find," he replied. "When I get enough money, I'm going to the south of France and buy me a chateau and live easy in the summer time; then come to America for four or five months every winter and appear in vaudeville.

"The southern part of France beats California, for $1 there goes as far as $20 in California. I can have a man making champagne for me, get a chauffeur for $8 a month, a butler for the same and a whole army of attendants for $100 a month. The next best thing to having a bunch of money is to live where it goes a long way. Me for the southern part of France when Mutt and Jeff grow stale. But I hope that will be many years yet."

Slaton's Client Is Fined for Ignoring Court's Injunction

"While it would be a difficult matter to insult me personally, you can get into trouble pretty easily by insulting this court," said Superior Judge John T. Pendleton Monday morning when he fined Edward Floding $50 for contempt of court, and threatened him with a jail sentence of 24 hours. Floding's attorney was Governor-elect John M. Slaton.

Floding is proprietor of the Floding Relagia Company. After he purchased it, the former owners obtained an injunction restraining him from using that firm name.

According to the court, he disregarded the injunction.

Star in 'Eight Bells' Is Ordained a Priest

ALTOONA, PA., June 16.—Michael J. Byrne, one of the famous Byrne brothers who starred for years in the old comedy, "Eight Bells," was ordained into the priesthood at St. John's Cathedral this morning by Bishop A. E. Garvey. Father Byrne is 54 years of age.

Five years ago his wife died and he gave up the stage and entered St. Francis College, Loretto, where he prepared for holy orders.

Girl's Auto Death Dream Comes True

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—Miss Kitty Howe, a pretty young chorus girl, dreamed that she would be killed in an automobile accident. Yesterday she leaped from a speeding car when it struck a rock. She landed in a pile of stones, fracturing her skull. Ten hours later she died in a hospital.

Lands in Jail While On a Vacation Spree

MACON, GA., June 16.—C. J. Williamson, of Panama City, Fla., came to Macon on a vacation. Saturday night he drank too much, and when he regained his senses he was in the parlor of the home of R. H. Plant, Jr., two miles from the city limits, with his shoes, hat and coat missing, and the owner of the house holding him at bay with a pistol.

Mr. Plant shot twice at the intruder, and narrowly missed him. He was jailed by Sheriff Hicks.

Black Handers Hurt By Their Own Bomb

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 16.—An attempt to destroy the home and kill the family of J. D. Trapani, a wealthy fruit dealer, to-day resulted in the serious injury of two young Italians who threw the bomb.

Trapani came here from New Orleans two years ago. He declared the Black Hand harassed him for nine years in New Orleans. The last demand received from the Black Hand, he said, was a demand for $300,000.

Strike Big Gas Flow In Abandoned Field

COFFEYVILLE, KANS., June 16.—A 27,000,000-foot gas well, the greatest in years, has been brought in south of Wann, Okla., by the Kasigan Gas Company.

The well has a rock pressure of 550 pounds. The field is an old one, long ago drilled up, but all wells had stopped.

Has Counted Nation's Wealth for 50 Years

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Rounding out her fifty years of service in the Treasury Department, Miss Emma R. Graves, 84 years old, is the sunshine of the place.

For half a century Miss Graves has been steadily counting the nation's wealth. Billions of dollars have passed under her nimble fingers, and she has the record of never having made a mistake in the count.

She still occupies the position of an expert, counting notes which have been turned in to be destroyed.

Dynamite in Rescue Work Causes Strife

NEW YORK, June 16.—A hot controversy over the use of explosives in the search for the last two bodies of the ten men killed by a cave-in of granite in the new Lexington Avenue subway Saturday night has caused bitter feeling between Coroner W. H. Holtzhauser and Chairman E. E. McCall, of the Public Service Commission. The bodies were recovered.

The Coroner forbade the use of dynamite, and McCall opposed. McCall's authority won. Three separate inquiries are under way.

Artist to Live Like Stone Age Forbears

BOSTON, June 16.—To prove that twentieth century convention is needless, John Knowles, a local artist, will plunge into the wilderness of Northern Maine without clothing, food, matches, firearms or ammunition.

He declared he will live like the men of the Stone Age for three months.

MOROS ROUTED IN MIDNIGHT BATTLE

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MANILA, P. I., June 16.—In a night attack on the remaining defenses of the rebellious Moros on the Island of Jolo the American troops and their native allies, under Brigadier General John J. Pershing, U. S. A., routed the rebel Filipinos with the loss of six men killed and seven wounded.

All the American soldiers killed were scouts.

News of the engagement was received by the military authorities today in a wireless message from Jolo. The radio said the rebellious natives, after deserting their trenches, fled into the mountains, pursued by Americans and the constabulary.

Desultory fighting between the rival forces has been going on for several days. The entire casualties on the American side were 30 killed and wounded. The native loss is believed to be much heavier.

General Pershing is warm in his praise of the gallantry of the Americans.

Railroad Strike Is Result of Discharges

POTTSVILLE, PA., June 16.—Two hundred repairmen at the shops of the Reading Railway at Schuylkill Haven and a number at the repair shops at Palo Alto and St. Clair went on strike this morning on orders from officials of the International Car Workers' Association.

The strike was brought on by the discharging of several repairmen, because, as the union officials claim, they were too active in forming unions.

Darrow May Never Face a Third Trial

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—The remaining charge against Clarence Darrow, noted labor attorney, which grew out of the McNamara trial here, likely never will be heard. The case has not been entered on the court calendar.

The District Attorney's office has refused to indicate whether Darrow will be tried a third time on a charge of being party to the bribery of prospective jurors.

In THE AMERICAN, Yesterday:

SOUTH IN MAGNIFICENT SHAPE

"The South, when we come to consider our immediate prospects, is in absolutely magnificent shape. I know much of conditions in Georgia of my own knowledge."

Far from believing the country on the verge of hard times or anything like serious financial depression, Mr. Candler believes the horizon to be abundantly rainbowed and promising nothing but good things.

He said that if he did not feel this way about it he would not leave the U. S. for Europe to be gone two months.

And, too, we know Mr. Candler to be a man who is fearless in speech; he says exactly what he thinks; and more---he has a good think every now and then.

BEAVERS THINKS AFFIDAVIT GENUINE

Chief Searched for Gentry in Washington and Found Where Paper Was Signed.

Chief of Police James L. Beavers, just returned from Washington, said Monday that evidence was practically conclusive that George M. Gentry, the stenographer in the recent dictograph episode, did sign an affidavit that the records were padded.

The chief had attended the convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs, but had searched for Gentry, whose affidavit was attested by a Washington notary. The best detective in Washington, he said, was detailed to the hunt, but could not locate Gentry. He did, however, secure evidence that Gentry was in Washington and that the affidavit was genuine.

The signing of the affidavit, Chief Beavers said, took place in room 802 of the Westoria Building. This is the L. & N. Railroad office building, and room 802 is the private office of J. A. Ridgely, formerly of Atlanta, and a personal friend of E. O. Miles, the private detective who brought Gentry's affidavit from Washington.

W. M. J. Davis, the only man in Ridgely's office when the affidavit was signed, said that two men and a woman came in. One introduced himself as Mr. Miles, from Atlanta, Mr. Ridgely's friend. He did not state the identity of the others. Miles and his companions sent downstairs for Miss Jeannette Henning, a notary public, who came up to room 802 and attested an acknowledgment by the man who accompanied Miles to the room.

Davis afterward gave a description of the man who signed the affidavit. Miss Henning also described the man. Both descriptions, Chief Beavers said, tallied with the description of George M. Gentry.

Chief Beavers left Washington without giving instructions to continue the search for Gentry.

Deaf-Mute's Note Better Than Speech

Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor Woodward, said Monday that a Chinese puzzle was simple compared with his duty of finding out the business of people who call at the Mayor's office. The constant reply he receives is:

"I want to see the Mayor on personal business."

After explaining to a deaf-mute today that it was impossible to let anyone see the Mayor on account of the large number of callers unless he knew the nature of their business, the deaf-mute wrote:

"Wife at home. Nothing to eat."

Mr. Hammond said the mute beat all callers in telling what he wanted.

FOOD EXPERTS TO MEET.

MOBILE, ALA., June 16.—The seventeenth annual convention of the Association of American Dairy Food and Drug Officials will convene here to-night at 8 o'clock at the Battle House. No Grape Juice for Sec. Daniels: He's On the Water Wagon

BOSTON, June 16.—Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels has enrolled himself with Secretary of State Bryan, Colonel Roosevelt, Mayor Fitzgerald and others, by declaring that a so-called "soft drink" is his favorite tipple.

Bryan says grape juice, Colonel Roosevelt prefers milk, Mayor Fitzgerald dilutes his grape juice with ginger ale to add a little "tang." "But give me bottled mineral water," declared Secretary Daniels, "I wouldn't spoil my stomach with grape juice and milk makes one fat. Mineral water is refreshing, harmless and won't offend the most abstemious."

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Keith Vaudeville at Forsyth.

That the bill at the Forsyth this week will be one of the most magnetic of the season is the confidential prediction of the management, and, further, it is believed that the supply of seats for the daily matinee and night performances will never hold out against the interest that has been in evidence since the announcement that "Bud" Fisher and six sterling Keith acts would make up the program of entertainment.

The appearance of the creator of "Mutt" and "Jeff," whose daily appearance on the sport pages of The Georgian add to the interest in the paper, is a real event of the season. Fisher will offer a novelty idea completely original.

Pauline Welch (Mrs. Fisher) is on the same bill, and will be seen in her specialty. She scored one of the great hits of last season, introducing some of the song hits of the moment. The Lawn Party, as produced by ten clever young people, is a feature of the bill. The Three Leightons, in their original sketch of minstrel life; Adonis and his dog in "The Act Beautiful;" Karl Emmy's Pets, a wonderful trained animal act, and Whitefield and Ireland, in a comedy offering, make up the complete program.

"Quo Vadis" at the Grand.

A sensation so great that one of the largest theaters in New York has been unable to accommodate the crowds that are demanding seats is "Quo Vadis," the attraction at the Grand this week—matinee daily at 2:30 and night at 8:30.

"Quo Vadis" is presented by George Kleine, in connection with Cohan and Harris, and a small fortune was paid to the Societa Italiana, of Rome, Italy, for the American rights. The Cines people used eighteen months of hard work to make the production of 10,000 feet of film and the three acts and eight scenes in the sensation make up the greatest and the most wonderful photo-play the world has ever seen. Europe is alive with interest in these pictures. New York, Chicago and Philadelphia have all shown wonderful returns, and that Atlanta will quickly take its place in the line is evidenced by the advance sale that has been growing steadily since last Thursday when the box office was opened.

"The Duke of Durham" at Bijou.

Following the several musical tabloids of the last few weeks in which patrons of the Bijou have shown that this class of entertainment meets with popular approval, the announcement is made that "The Duke of Durham," probably the most expensive organization of its kind, will furnish amusement for patrons of the Bijou this week.

Lou L. Shean, the German singing comedian, heads the list of funmakers.

RAG PLAYERS WILL PROVE WHO'S WHO

Best Performers in Atlanta Will Enter Contest Against Weatherholt Player-Piano.

Who is the ragtime champion piano player of Atlanta?

That is the question that T. E. Weatherholt, president of the Weatherholt Piano Company, 72 North Broad Street, will try to solve Wednesday afternoon.

As a result of his extensive advertising recently in the interest of his player-piano club, Mr. Weatherholt has received hundreds of letters asking if his player-pianos can turn out ragtime in regulation style.

These letters have convinced Mr. Weatherholt the country is ragtime-mad. Everybody wants ragtime.

Hugh Cardoza, local theatrical wizard, said this long ago, and Mr. Weatherholt now thinks he is right. Mr. Cardoza says all that is necessary to prove this is to listen to the applause in the Forsyth after a ragtime act goes on.

Mr. Weatherholt has answered all his correspondents to the effect that a Weatherholt player-piano can turn out ragtime better than a professional, and to show folks this is true he has arranged the ragtime contest for Wednesday afternoon.

Some of the best performers on the piano have been secured, and they promise to play the best ragtime they know how to play.

The player-piano will do the same.

Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor Woodward and an expert judge of ragtime, will be the judge.

Mr. Hammond has made a study of ragtime. He is one lover of classical music who likes ragtime, and he has a large assortment at his home. He is a syncopatic sharp and has a trained ear for the music which sets feet to moving and shoulders to going up and down.

USE OF CALOMEL PRACTICALLY STOPPED

For Bilious Attacks, Constipation and All Liver Troubles—Dangerous Calomel Gives Way to Dodson's Liver Tone.

Every druggist in the State has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason—Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is often dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," say druggists.

Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by all druggists who sell it. A large bottle costs 50 cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of sluggishness, you have only to ask for your money back. It will be promptly returned.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant tasting, purely vegetable remedy—harmless to both children and adults. A bottle in the house may save you a day's work or keep your children from missing school. Keep your liver working and your liver will not keep you from working.

Slays Man for $6 And Share in Still

GAINESVILLE, June 16.—Bartow Cantrell, in jail, has confessed to the murder of Arthur Hawkins, near Bellton, Hall County, two weeks ago. He claimed that his brother, James Cantrell, offered him $6 and a half interest in his still to slay Hawkins.

Mrs. Silvey Hawkins, wife of the murdered man, is in jail with her 18-month-old baby.

Roasted Town Will Sue Stage Jesters

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—The quiet and unassuming little village of Watts, near here, is so wrought up over gibes of comedians in Los Angeles theaters that it plans suit for $25,000 damages against a local theatrical company.

"Watts has been the goat long enough," said a prominent citizen. "When actors exhaust their repertoire of stereotyped jokes they single out Watts for further comedy, and we intend to be paid for it."

TENNESSEE FACES CRISIS OVER DEBT

Factional Politics Prevents Legislation to Provide for $11,458,000 Obligations Due July 1.

NASHVILLE, June 16.—Tennessee faces the possibility of defaulting on its State debt of $11,458,000 due July 1, because of partisan politics.

To-morrow brings the most important financial event of Tennessee since the settlement of the State debt that accrued from carpetbag rule, when bids on loans to refund the debt will be opened.

That the refunding act needs amending is agreed by both Democrats and Fuslonists. Legislative authority is needed for the execution of short-term loans so that the big bond issue may be deferred until times get better. The opening of bids to-morrow will be the second attempt of the State to sell its securities. The first, three weeks ago, brought an offer of only $862.50 per $1,000.

TURFMAN SUFFERS FIRE LOSS.

LEXINGTON, KY., June 16.—Two new automobiles, several other vehicles and the poultry houses burned at the Idle Hour Stock Farm of E. R. Bradley, millionaire New York-Chicago turfman, here to-day. The fire started by the explosion of a gasoline tank.

Crepe de Chine Underwear at Half Price

And not just a few odd pieces, but practically every crepe de chine garment of this wonderfully fine stock!

Half price!

Indeed, such splendid news hardly gets into the papers once in a twelvemonth.

And there is no denying that right now crepe de chine underwear is in the height of Fashion's favor.

Makers have been straining every point to make deliveries---the scarcity of crepe de chine that you have heard so much of this season is in a great measure due to the unprecedented use of this fabric for underwear.

And, in face of all these facts, we come forward now with a half-price sale!

It is hard to imagine a woman who will not be interested, who will not want to share the opportunities---and what a fine time this month's brides will have!

The sale begins with the opening of the store, and although the half price extends to every crepe de chine garment in this big, well-selected stock, excepting a few white petticoats and several sets, we do not believe quantities will last long as soon as women come to see just what this opportunity is.

The price range---

$5.00 Garments are	$2.50	$10.00 Garments are	$5.00
$6.00 Garments are	$3.00	$12.00 Garments are	$6.00
$7.50 Garments are	$3.75	$15.00 Garments are	$7.50
$8.00 Garments are	$4.00	$18.00 Garments are	$9.00
$8.50 Garments are	$4.25	A $36.00 Set is	$18.00
$9.00 Garments are	$4.50	A $40.00 Set is	$20.00

Drawers, including knickerbockers, gowns, petticoats, combinations, princess slips and a few negligees. Choose from pink, light blue, yellow and white—except the petticoats—no white petticoats.

The crepe de chine is always pure silk, heavy quality. As the prices mount the trimmings become more elaborate and beautiful—dainty rosettes and bows, sheer shadow laces, rich cream cluny laces, Irish crochet laces and round thread Valenciennes. A woman would search long and far for more exquisite garments—remember they are our own fine stock!

7 PLAYGROUNDS NOW OPEN TO CHILDREN

Great Crowds Flock to Places of Recreation—Piedmont Bathing Hours Changed.

Seven of the best equipped playgrounds Atlanta has ever had were opened Monday morning for the season of 1913. This is a fewer number than heretofore, but Dan Carey, General Manager of Parks, and Joe Bean, director of playgrounds, announce that they are better equipped than playgrounds of former years.

The opening Monday was auspicious. Crowds of children gathered at the five white playgrounds, Grant Park, Mims Park, Joyner Park, English Avenue and Pine Hill playgrounds. Two negro playgrounds are maintained, one at Stoor's School yard and another at Gray's School yard.

The playgrounds will be open every day in the week from 8:30 to 11:30 o'clock in the morning and from 3:30 to 6:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

In connection with the playground work Mr. Carey announced that the bathing hours at Piedmont Park lake had been changed. Hereafter no one will be admitted into the lake from 11 o'clock in the morning until 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

Mr. Carey said that between these hours it was too hot to go into the lake.

Wife Asks Alimony of Count deGratresse

NEW YORK, June 16.—Countess Marie DeGratresse, wife of Count Joseph Gratresse, a civil engineer, has applied to Supreme Court Justice Giegerich to reopen her divorce case and grant her alimony.

The attorney for the Countess informed Justice Giegerich that the litigants may have been in collusion in agreeing upon $15 a week payments to the Countess. The Count's lawyer denied any collusion.

The Count has an alienation suit against Leon J. Garcey, 261 Fifth Avenue, whom he charges with supplying money for the Countess' divorce proceedings. Garcey denies.

Rothschilds Push Oil War on Standard

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—Another battle was on between the Rothschilds of England and the Standard Oil Company to-day in California, following the arrival of the Dutch tank steamer Kessler from Sumatra, carrying 3,000,000 gallons of gasoline. The Rothschilds sent to the United States the best grade of gasoline obtainable in the Orient.

This shipment, it was announced, is the first of many to be used in breaking the hold of the Standard Oil Company on the Pacific Coast.

"Petticoat Cops" Will Watch Newport Swim

NEWPORT, R. I., June 16.—Two policewomen have been placed on duty at the beach here by the Civic League. Their uniform consists of a blue blouse with brass buttons, a blue skirt and a sailor straw hat.

They will patrol the beach all summer and give especial attention to women in need of aid.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS OUT FOR RECORD

Twenty Working to Make Next Sunday's Attendance Biggest. Picnics This Week.

Twenty Sunday schools began Monday a campaign to smash all attendance records next Sunday and make the average increase for the year more than 100 members for each school.

The total attendance Sunday in the schools in the exchange agreement was 6,690, or an average of 334 for each school. The figure for the same schools last year was 5,057, an average of 252.

Two large picnics are planned for this week, the joint outing of the Second Baptist and First Christian Sunday schools, Tuesday afternoon and evening at Grant Park.

Following are the attendance figures Sunday:

Turks Fear Plot to Replace Abdul Hamid

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 16.—Commanders of the international fleet of warships in the Golden Horn have given notice to the Government they will protect the city if there is an uprising. Many more arrests were made to-day in connection with the assassination of Grand Vizier Mahmud Shevket Pasha.

Young Turk advisers profess to scent a plot on the part of the reactionaries to put Abdul Hamid back on the throne. A guard is maintained over the son of Kaimil Pasha, former Grand Vizier, who was arrested Sunday.

Tight Money Hits Egg And Butter Traders

NEW YORK, June 16.—Money stringency is having its effect upon the stores of butter and eggs. Holdings of eggs in New York City now are short 350,000 cases, of 30 dozen to the case, of what they were a year ago. Last year the limit advanced on eggs was $5.50 per case, and this year it is $4.50. Receivers have trouble in getting this.

The scarcity of money is being felt more in butter than in egg channels. Last year $15 was advanced per tub, while this year the banks are trying to hold down to $12.

Mrs. Hearst Gives Idols to Museum

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—An excellent collection of Hopi Indian idols was presented to the University of California anthropological museum at the Affiliated Colleges by Mrs. Phoebe A. Hearst.

Assistant Curator Gifford delivered a lecture on the Indian tepee, illuminating his topic by lantern slides, before a large audience.

DAY AT UNIVERSITY FOR 'UNDERGRADS'

Branch Colleges Represented at Athens on Monday—Alumni Reunions on Tuesday.

ATHENS, GA., June 16.—Following the largely attended baccalaureate exercises yesterday, when the commencement sermon was delivered by Dr. W. N. Ainsworth, of Macon, the undergraduate exercises of the University of Georgia were held in the chapel this morning. Speakers from the university departments in Athens, Atlanta, Augusta, Dahlonega and Milledgeville participated.

The trustees to-day advanced Instructor R. C. Wilson to assistant professor of pharmacy. Professors W. O. Payne and S. M. Sallyer were each granted a year's leave of absence. A petition from students to permit a dance in the alumni hall was not granted. The branch colleges were requested to mail copies of all publications as soon as published to the general board of trustees. The Law School was given additional space, taking the rooms formerly occupied by Professor John E. Morris, who will use the class rooms vacated by Professor T. J. Woofter, removed to the new Peabody Hall. Professor Woofter was granted a leave of absence in 1914-15. A recommendation that the sophomore declamation be discontinued was disapproved.

This afternoon the military department's prize drill takes place on Sanford Field and the appointment of cadet officers for next year. Two new flags will be presented to the university and received by Misses Helen Baxter, of Omaha, and Florence Hooper, of Athens, who will be attended by Misses Mary Arthur and Laura Cobb Hutchens.

To-night the annual champion debate between Demosthenian and Phi Kappa societies will take place, when four forensic juniors will argue whether or not the Philippines should be given their independence.

British Polo Players To Challenge Again

NEW YORK, June 16.—It was expected the Duke of Westminster, foremost exponent of polo in England, soon will send a challenge to the victorious Americans for another international polo match, to be played either next year or in 1915. The vanquished British console themselves because of the close score. Last Tuesday it was 5 1-2 goals to 3 and Saturday, 4 1-2 to 4 1-4.

A farewell dinner will be given to the Englishmen to-night. They expect to sail for England this week.

English Denounce Umpire.

LONDON, June 16.—English sportsmen are denouncing the umpire who decided a foul against the British polo players in their game Saturday against the American team. They claim the action of the referee was "unjustifiable" and "a miserable misfortune" and that the umpire had no right to halt the game.

Queen of Belgians Is in Sanitarium

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MONTRAUX, SWITZERLAND, June 16.—The Queen of the Belgians has been severely ill at Dr. Widmer's Sanitarium here two weeks. It is expected to be some time before she will be able to leave and she has canceled her engagements for the fetes at Ghent and other places which begin June 22.

American Colony in Palestine Prospers

BOSTON, June 16.—Jesse A. Yantis, representative of the American colony in Palestine, is here studying several classes of machinery which he hopes to introduce in Jerusalem.

This colony of Americans removed to Jerusalem in order that they might live as they believe the Saviour would if He were on earth to-day.

"Blue Tag" Furniture Sale

True to the Best Traditions of Any That Have Gone Before

A Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. "Blue Tag" Furniture Sale!

To Atlantans who recall the fine economies of "The Blue Tag" sales the mere announcement that here now is another would doubtless be sufficient to hurry them to the store-filled with the confidence that this is their opportunity to buy furniture to greatest advantage.

But this "Blue Tag" sale is planned to outdo all others!

Yes, to outdo ALL others. It has not been an easy task to prepare such a sale; the records and traditions of the others mark them as trade triumphs---as classics in the furniture business; but the guiding spirit of progress whispers that this one shall begin where the others left off and become a monumental merchandise movement only after it eclipses its predecessors.

And so have the preparations gone forward!

Judge for yourself the possibilities it offers you.

Here is the South's greatest furniture stock.

Every piece of it was chosen after careful, very careful examination, as the best of its kind for regular selling.

It is worthy furniture, right furniture, built to last year on year.

And Right Now

Every piece of furniture, excepting summer furniture, and several makes the prices of which we have contracted to maintain, in this, the South's greatest stock, is offered at a substantial reduction from its regular price; in fact, substantial reduction hardly expresses the vigorous price reductions you will find here.

And this in face of the fact that right now furniture prices are climbing to higher levels.

So whether it be---

Bedroom==Including Brass Beds==Dining Room or Living Room Furniture

Or all of these that you need---and in this month of brides and of new home-making there are many who will want furnishings for entire homes---now is the big opportunity. The tremendous varieties here mean that you may select to a nicety just the furniture you would have in your home. The tremendous reductions mean that you may save as you had never expected.

So come to-morrow. You will find the Blue Tags on everything; they tell their own story and it is an interesting story of fine savings.

Period Furniture

It is worthy of particular note in this noteworthy event that, although every little separate chair, rocker, desk, table, chiffonier, and the like in stock (with those exceptions already noted) is included, some of the healthiest reductions have been made on the rich and true sets of Period Furniture and reproductions of antique pieces---Sheraton, Jacobean, William and Mary, Chippendale and others. Sets for bedroom, dining room and living room.

Mother and Sons

By Virginia T. Van De Water.

"OH, it is pitiful, pitiful," exclaims Thackeray, "the bootless love of mothers for their children in Vanity Fair!"

The words recurred to my mind as I looked into the tragic eyes of a widow the mother of two sons. Her husband had died when her oldest child was but five years old. She was what has been called "a born mother," with whom maternity was an absorbing passion. She had married at eighteen and was a widow at twenty-six. For years she had worked uncomplainingly to educate her sons.

There had been not only work but the sacrifice of many of the things in which women delight. She had not had time to go into society during working-hours, and in the evening she "did not like to leave the boys." She put them both through college, living close to them, spending her strength and youth in the effort. When one of them finished his university course he went into business on the Pacific slope. Then the mother's face developed lines of anxiety, still she smiled bravely.

"I educated him that he might make the best of his chances," she said firmly, "and it would be selfish for me to mention to him my dread of parting from him. And I have my other boy, you know."

Two years later her second son was graduated and went to South America as a mining engineer. It was soon after this that I called on the lonely mother. She had grown old in a few weeks. She began talking of her boys—calmly at first, then her voice quivered and broke.

Need Her No More.

"What is there for me to do now?" she asked. "I am no good to anybody. I have dropped utterly out of the old set and world to which I once belonged. I am too old to learn new ways. My one aim has been to fit my boys for the battle of life, but I hoped that battle would be fought near me. Now I am left alone. I would be a selfish creature in the eyes of the world if I were to try to keep my sons with me—for they have their own lives to live, and mine is done. They will never be mine again. They will sometimes come to see me, but they will never come as they used to come. They need me no more."

She is not yet fifty and feels that her life is done! She is one of the "Mothers of Men" of whom George Cabot Lodge wrote:

"Weep, mothers of men!
The hands of the world are strong to take
The lives ye bear for the world's sole sake,
To try their souls till they bend or break;
Your children vanish from out your ken—
Weep, mothers of men!"

It is all true, viewed from one standpoint, and yet when women dare make a moan like this the world calls them selfish. If so, then it is too late for the mischief to be repaired.

"The greatest kindness we can do our children is to teach them to be independent of us," remarked one woman sententiously.

The mother to whom she spoke flung her hands out with a gesture that was almost despairing.

"Ah, yes!" she exclaimed bitterly, "but good Lord! who is going to teach US to be independent of THEM!"

There is the cry of the mother. Who, indeed?

Never Lose Daughters.

Mothers of daughters claim that they never lose these, and their contention is true. Even after a girl marries she turns to her mother for advice and counsel, often loving her better than she did before she appreciated what women must suffer for their children.

Yet, for the mother of sons there is always the possibility of which our poet writes. How can she fortify herself against this misery? It can not be prevented—God help her!—but it may be made lighter. For she can be less unreasoningly unselfish.

Does this sound cruel? Such selfishness as I have in mind is kindness to the mother and true kindness to the child. No boy is better for knowing that he fills his mother's entire mental and spiritual horizon, that she counts all sacrifice for him as gain. The time arrives—unless he be unusually noble—when, in spite of himself, the sacrifice is taken for granted by him; he thinks of it as his due and makes a common thing of it.

Would I have a boy sacrifice his future to his mother? No, but I would have him consult her a little in planning that future, and he will not do this if she has not taught him to consider her wishes as well as his own. If two equally good opportunities present themselves, I would have him choose the one which will keep him near his mother rather than that at the other side of the continent—always supposing the one at home means as big a future for him as does the one abroad.

Wider Views of Life.

But we are dealing now with the mother, rather than with the boy. I claim that even when her children are more babies she should force herself to take an interest in things outside of the nursery. She need not neglect her children to do this. Indeed, she will give them better care and bring them up in a finer, broader atmosphere if she has wide views of life and knows what is going on in the world. And, as her children grow to need less of her personal care, she ought to go about and meet people and think of other things as of the needs and wishes of her offspring.

Blessed—thrice blessed—is the mother of men when those men remain near her. If they must leave her she can not escape keen suffering, but if she has filled her "world" very "full of a number of things" she may escape adding to the pain of parting and missing the agony of a desolate, objectless life, an empty heart and idle hands.

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is fishing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

CHAPTER XXIX.

THREE days passed before Gordon Kelly heard directly from Mildred Deery. Her nerves shattered and on the verge of hysteria, she had been taken home by Gordon after the near-tragedy in which Cain was involved. She would not allow Mrs. Shephard to summon either of her parents from Atlanta nor would she permit her to call the nearest doctor. She was her own physician in the days that followed and she began by prescribing complete rest and quietness. That, she told herself, was what the most celebrated physician in the land would have told her.

Gordon talked over the telephone with Elmer twice a day, night and morning, in the intervals before he saw Mildred again. With Steve as the messenger, he sent her all sorts of little delicacies and rare flowers. Where they came from she could not imagine. Certainly he had not had time to order them from Atlanta or Chattanooga, the nearest large cities; in fact, she doubted if they could be procured anywhere in those cities. His thoughtfulness had not a little to do with her convalescence, following the shock of the encounter with Cain.

Mildred Telephones.

On the morning of the third day she awoke calm and even cheerful. At breakfast she remarked to Elmer that she would be ready to resume the lesson in French, whereat the lad exclaimed, "Oh, shucks." Soon after she went to the telephone, rang three times and listened.

"Is Mr. Kelly at home?" she asked, when the ring had been answered. Elmer, who was within earshot, though not eavesdropping, grinned.

"There is no Mr. Kelly here," came the reply.

"Wait just a minute, please," said the voice, interrupting. There was some confusion on the other end of the line and then she heard Gordon Kelly's voice.

"Good morning," he said. "Is this you, Mildred?"

"Yes, Mr. Kelly."

"Mr. Kelly, eh? You call me Mr. Kelly one minute and Gordon the next. However, I won't quarrel with you, because you have been ill. How are you this morning? I have been very anxious about you."

"I am feeling quite myself again and thank you ever so much for all those nice things you sent me and for those lovely flowers. Tell me, where in the world did you get them?"

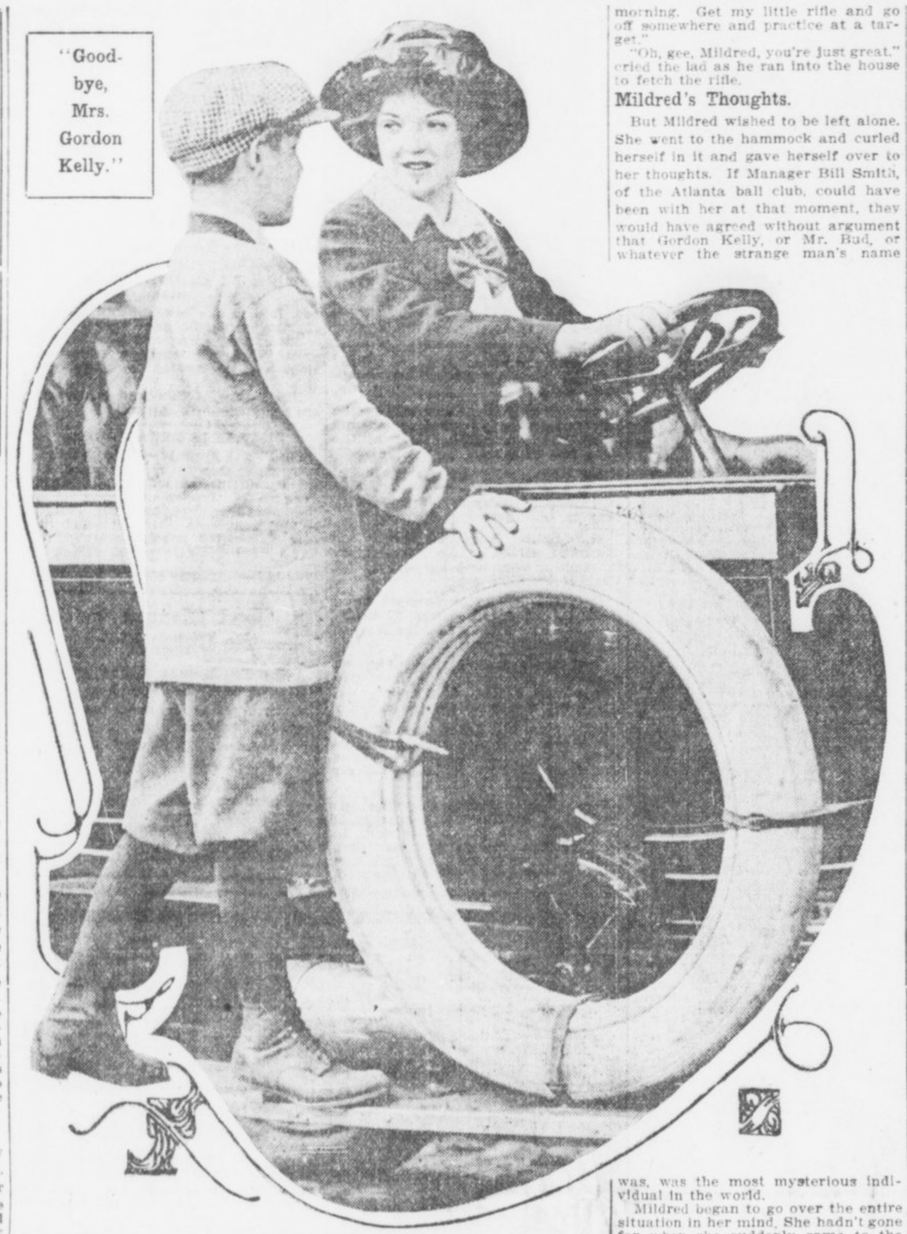
"The flowers? Oh, the gardener produced them when I made a requisition. The housekeeper produced the other things. I'm glad you enjoyed them."

An Engagement.

There was a brief silence, then Gordon said:

"Are you still there?"

"Yes," replied Mildred. "I was just thinking what a strange man you are with your automobiles and your gardeners and your colored genie and your housekeepers and your network of telephones away up here in the mountains, and your ball playing."



"Good-bye, Mrs. Gordon Kelly."

She heard Gordon laugh over the telephone. Then he said:

"Well, you know, the first time I saw you at your house your mother asked me about my life in the mountains; you wouldn't let me tell her and afterward, when I asked you why you did it, you said it was a secret. Do you remember?"

"Yes, I do, and it turns out a good deal more of a mystery than I had bargained for."

When Gordon spoke again his voice was lowered.

"Tell me, please; when will you feel well enough to let me see you?"

Mildred unconsciously lowered her voice, too.

"Why—I feel all right now. I'm not ill any more."

"May I call this afternoon?" he said, eagerly.

"Certainly; delighted to have you. But suppose I meet you?"

"Fine! Great! Where?"

"At—at—say at the bridge at 3. Now, good-bye; I must give Elmer his lesson in French."

If Mildred could have seen through the telephone, she would have seen Gordon slam up the receiver and turn three backward somersaults without stopping.

After all the threats, Elmer didn't take his lesson. It is true the books were produced and Mildred sat down at a table, opposite Elmer on the porch and assumed the dignified air of a schoolmarm, but that was as far as they got with the foreign language that morning. It was all off when Elmer said with a grin:

"They didn't know any Mr. Kelly up there, did they?"

No Gordon Kelly.

"What do you know about it, you little rascal?" demanded Mildred.

"I know all about it. There's no such man as Gordon Kelly."

"What do you mean, child?"

"I mean just what I say. There's no such person as Gordon Kelly."

"That's simply nonsense, Elmer; what in the world ails you to-day?"

"Oh, I got you buffaloed all right, Mildred. Ha, ha!" and he laughed gleefully.

"Elmer, you can be the most tantalizing boy I ever knew when you want to be. Now, look me straight in the eye and tell me what you mean."

"I'm telling you the truth, Mildred," said the lad, seriously. "His name isn't Gordon Kelly at all; it's Mr. Bud."

"Mr. Bud! Elmer, you're simply crazy. I won't listen to you any more. Take your books and go away."

"Now, Mildred, listen. I'm not fooling at all." Thereupon he told her of finding the telephone beside the brook and calling up Gordon Kelly and of his conversation with Steve, the colored boy. When he had finished Mildred tossed her head in the air and said, with decision:

"I'll find out what his name is mighty quick."

"When?"

"This afternoon. Now, I'll excuse you from taking your lesson this morning. Get my little rifle and go off somewhere and practice at a target."

"Oh, gee, Mildred, you're just great," cried the lad as he ran into the house to fetch the rifle.

Mildred's Thoughts.

But Mildred wished to be left alone. She went to the hammock and curled herself in it and gave herself over to her thoughts. If Manager Bill Smith, of the Atlanta ball club, could have been with her at that moment, they would have agreed without argument that Gordon Kelly, or Mr. Bud, or whatever the strange man's name was, was the most mysterious individual in the world.

Mildred began to go over the entire situation in her mind. She hadn't gone far when she suddenly came to the realization that she hardly knew anything at all about Gordon Kelly. She knew nothing about his family, his life nor his habits. He had been introduced into her family as Gordon Kelly, yet here, up in his mountain home, no one knew of a Gordon Kelly. They called him Mr. Bud. Who was Mr. Bud? Her father certainly didn't know him by that name. He had told her that he had met Gordon Kelly through Judge Barbee. Certainly the Judge wouldn't be a party to any deception. Was Gordon Kelly an assumed name? Was it an alias? Her father had told her nothing about Gordon Kelly's family—because he didn't know anything about it himself, probably.

Was his family "respectable?" Did he really own the property, or was he an employee or representative of the people that did own it? He might be a foreman or a superintendent. No harm in that, thought Mildred, but she would like to know about it.

Then she reviewed her brief acquaintance with Gordon Kelly. She recalled the conversations she had had with him in the few times they had met. The talk, she remembered, was mostly about books and music and kindred topics and the small talk that two young people would indulge in. It came back to her that he talked with great intelligence on music and art and literature. Surely he was refined and cultured. His family must be "respectable."

And then Mildred thought of Gordon Kelly the MAN—the tall, fine-featured, broad-shouldered, strong and powerful MAN. And her mind dwelt on his simplicity of manner, his kindness and gentleness and his prowess on the ball field and his bravery so lately displayed. And she was satisfied. She smiled contentedly to herself as she lay curled in the hammock. No, she would not break the engagement she had for 3 o'clock that afternoon, but she would find out all about the Gordon Kelly-Mr. Bud mystery.

"Make me look pretty, Mandy," said Mildred to her maid, who assisted her to dress when the time came. "I'se got a 'portant 'gagement fo' dis' afternoon."

She seldom allowed herself to unbend in dignity to her maid, but today she was feeling very cheerful and happy.

"Will you wear your tan dress, Miss Mildred?" asked the maid.

"No, Mandy, I'll wear the light blue; it's more becoming, don't you think so?"

Thus arrayed, she went out on the porch and asked Elmer to bring the runabout around. When it came she stepped in it and took her place behind the wheel.

"Good-bye, Elmer, see you later," she said to the lad.

"Gee, ain't I going, too?" said Elmer in a tone of disappointment.

"Not this time, honey; good-bye."

Before the car was fairly in motion the boy jumped on the side of it and, leaning over, whispered mischievously in Mildred's ear:

"Good-bye, Mrs. Gordon Kelly."

"You little wretch!" exclaimed Mildred, blushing furiously.

But she turned her head a moment later and waved her hand and smiled at him.

CHAPTER XXX.

WHEN Forrest Cain, lying unconscious in the road beside his automobile, regained his senses he saw Gordon Kelly standing over him. His mind was befuddled and he did not recall what had happened to him. Kelly prodded him with the toe of his shoe as though he was a dead snake and said, sharply, "Get up."

Cain rose slowly to his feet. The fight was all out of him.

"Walk around," ordered Kelly. Cain took a few steps. Kelly left him and joined Mildred and Elmer. "He is all right. Get in the car, please, and we will get out of this."

Without even another glance at Cain, the three entered Kelly's automobile and a minute later they were whirling down the road, leaving Cain, with singular indifference, to his own meditations.

Cain was sober by this time—sober, sullen and resentful. His right hand pained him. He looked at the back of it where the stone thrown by Elmer had struck him. It was crushed and bleeding. The fingers hung down as though without life. He felt of the bruise and winced. There was no doubt but that bones were broken. He cranked the motor with his left hand, entered the car and attempted to set the control into low speed, but found he had lost the use of his right handl. Reaching over with his left hand, however, he was able to manipulate the lever and then, easing in the clutch, the car moved slowly ahead. It was necessary to turn around. This was accomplished with infinite labor and finally the car was straightened out for the journey to Cain's shack. This had to be taken at low speed, however, because once the car started ahead he could not change the speed, as he only had the use of his left hand and could not take that from the steering wheel in order to change gears.

In gloomy silence he crawled back the six miles to his mountain habitation. He summoned his man George and commanded him to pack up. His campaign had utterly failed. He would go back to Atlanta to nurse his injury, nurse his lacerated feelings and plan some revenge that would settle scores with Gordon Kelly once and for all. While his man was busy packing he bathed his hand in cold water and, after pouring whisky on the wound as an antiseptic (and pouring a considerable quantity of it down his throat as an antisplenetic) he bandaged the injured member, swore at George on general principles and went outside to smoke and think some more.

In his three personal encounters with Gordon Kelly Cain had been badly worsted, verbally or physically, every time. Yet Gordon Kelly was in no way to blame in any case. He was attending strictly to his own business and had sought no quarrel with the man who declared himself his foe. This phase of the matter never once entered the mind of Cain. He only knew that it was through Gordon Kelly that all his troubles came.

At this point his sullen reveries were interrupted by the appearance of a tall, raw-boned, black-bearded man, dressed in the uncouth habiliments of the backwoods. Without a nod or any salutation, he made known the nature of his business.

"We done run out of matches," he said. "Got any?"

Cain was accustomed to deference from those he considered beneath him.

"What do you want with them?" he asked with a scowl.

"Eat 'em, mebbe; what's that to you?" drawled the stranger.

"Where do you come from?"

"None o' your damned business. Ef yer ain't got no matches, say so."

"You're on my property; you're trespassing," declared Cain.

"What do you all reckon you're goin' to do about?" observed the stranger in the same even tone.

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the twenty-four installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 25th installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

Man Who Loves Like a Pirate

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

C. C. W. writes:

"I am 27 years of age, and am desperately in love with a girl three years my junior. She is beautiful, accomplished and a leader in our social set. Although I have proposed to her three or four times, she still refuses to marry me. I feel certain that there is no other occupying her time, for if I had a rival I would unquestionably put him out of the way.

"How am I to persuade this cold-hearted woman to become my bride?"

Persuade her by storming her father's castle some dark night, and carrying her off strapped behind you on the back of your noble charger. That is the time-honored method of all swashbucklers, and it is the method that would most appeal to one who says if he had a rival he would "unquestionably put him out of the way."

It is not the modern way. It is not the sane way, but you are not modern, and I could almost suggest that one who talks of putting a rival "out of the way" is not sane.

It is a further mark that you are not wise that you call your sweetheart coldhearted. Because a woman will not yield to one lover doesn't prove she has a cold heart. In your case, my dear Sir Reginald, or Sir Launcelot, or whoever was the hero of your latest fiction, the cold heart of your lady love proves a cool head.

She will not marry you though you propose twenty times. There is something to you of which she does not approve. Instead of making over yourself, you keep on proposing, imagining that the opposition to be overcome lies not in your matchless person, but in her cold heart.

A Gory Love.

Yours is a love that reeks of gore and gunpowder. You emit fire from your nostrils when you speak of your passion, and would impress this woman with your daredevil disposition, your dauntless courage, and your untamed strength. I have known men who loved like pirates, just as you love. They became the kind of husbands who were afraid to go to the door when there was a ring late at night, and sent their wives instead.

You talk like a cheap hero in a book. It is the sort of talk that sometimes has telling effect on girls of 16, but, thank Heaven, the lady love of your piratical schemes and bloodthirsty dreams is 24 and has such a clear vision that she sees you as you are.

My dear, bold buccaneer, drop your paper sword, wipe the ink-red stains from your hands, cut off that fierce mustache and become a MAN. If you really love this woman, make of yourself such a worthy man that she will no longer spurn you, but will seek you instead.

Don't get on your knees when you propose, as did the heroes in your favorite fiction. Don't color your conversation with threats to carry her off bodily, slaying all who intervene. Stand on your feet, like a manly man, and tell her you love her in language that befits these most sane and prosaic times.

Your paper sword has failed to win. Try the better way of showing her a good, strong right arm that is ready to serve her through life.

Recognize the existence of a rival and know that he lies in this masquerade you have put on. "Put him out of the way" by all means by conducting yourself in a saner fashion.

Be a man and love as a man of 27 should love, leaving to those ten years your junior dreams and schemes that smell of gunpowder and gore.

By LADY DOROTHY NEVILL.

A GRANDE DAME and leader of the social world during the greater part of the past century, Lady Dorothy Nevill, who died recently, was famous for her charm of manner, incisive wit, and brilliant repartee. She was the confidante of royal personages, statesmen, field marshals and diplomatists. At her receptions one met all the most attractive people of the day. Her intimate friends included such noted men as Beaconsfield, Gladstone, Wilberforce, Cobden, Bright and Matthew Arnold. Her greatest friend, perhaps, was Beaconsfield. He was always "Dear Dizzy" to Lady Dorothy, while he always addressed her as "My Dearest Dorothy," and their correspondence provides many interesting glimpses of this great Tory statesman.

Perhaps one of the best stories which Lady Dorothy has told about Disraeli is that concerning the occasion when a photographer asked him to pose for a photograph leaning on a chair. This at once aroused the indignation of Mrs. Disraeli. "I soon settled that," she said, afterwards, to Lady Dorothy, when relating the incident, "for I said, 'Dizzy has always stood alone, and he shall continue to do so.'"

"The Gorgeous Lily."

On one occasion Lady Dorothy, who was sitting next to Mr. Gladstone, was asked by the latter if she had ever heard Lord Beaconsfield express any particular fondness for the primrose. She admitted he had not, adding, "The gorgeous lily, I think, was more to his taste."

Referring to Gladstone, Lady Dorothy uses to tell a story which is illustrative of the "Grand Old Man's" character. He was discoursing to her of the perfect immunity of English public men from all dangers of assault or assassination in his day, and all the time two detectives, dressed as footmen, were in the very room guarding him, while another was upstairs in the drawing-room ready to mingle with the guests.

It was Mr. Joseph Chamberlain who, talking to Lady Dorothy of female suffrage, once said, "Thank goodness, there are no female members. Of the two evils I prefer Parnellites to petticoats."

Lady Dorothy herself was equally severe in regard to suffragettes, for in one of her books she writes: "Heaven did not make women insinuating and persuasive that they might be peevish. It did not make them feeble that they might be imperious; it did not give them softer voices than man in order that they might rail at him; not delicate features to be destroyed by rage. Angry women forget themselves and the dignity of their sex, which has never gained much by scolding."

Lady Dorothy Nevill had a good deal to say about the change that has taken place in the character and the manners of women since her own earlier days. She considered the modern woman is spoilt, has too much time on her hands, takes up too many fads, and completely dominates her husband. This struck the old Shah of Persia very much. He said: "It seems to me that the English and American husband is nothing better than a sort of butler."

Lady Dorothy was particularly severe on the "smart set" of to-day. "The elite," she said, "are fast, flippant and smart. People are less interesting to talk to, less sociable, less brilliant in conversation, less interested in things." And as an illustration of the change in the life of a society woman, who to-day thinks nothing of spending $5,000 a year on her dress, she mentions how she and her sister were given a dress allowance of $250 and $200, respectively, by their adoring father.

She was also wont to refer to the fact that in her younger days parents were very particular about the matrimonial alliances made in their families, and she told an amusing story of one old peer who was greatly surprised to be told by his sister that she had developed a great affection for a well-known scientist of humble birth.

The peer sent for him and said, brusquely, "Now, sir, I should like to know something about your family."

"I think it will be sufficient," replied the scientist, who aws of Semitic extraction, "to say that I descended from the illustrious blood of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob."

The peer was taken aback. "Oh," he said, "of course, my family has nothing to compare with that; therefore, if my sister really likes you, you'd better take her."

Leap Year Proposals.

This reminds one of another story which Lady Dorothy relates in one of her books concerning an East Anglican clergyman who was visited by a lady parishioner and asked whether he thought a woman might, in any circumstances, propose to a man. Much taken aback, the poor rector replied that he certainly thought there might be circumstances which would make such a proposal justifiable. Upon which, without the slightest hesitation, the lady exclaimed, "As Nathan said unto David, 'Thou art the man.'" And, seeing no possibility of escape, he was.

Speaking of the amusements of girls in her time, Lady Dorothy said that in the sixties, when old-fashioned croquet occupied most of her attention, it was supposed to be responsible for many marriages. "Are you going to make a flower-bed here, Thomas?" asked a young lady of the gardener. "Yes, mum, them's the horders." "Why, it will quite spoil our croquet ground." "Can't help it, mum. Them's yer pa's horders. He ses as 'ow to have it laid out for 'ortliculture, not 'usbandry."

Lady Dorothy also numbered the late King Edward among her personal friends. Once, sitting next to him at dinner, he noticed she ate oysters with a knife. He made a humorous comment, and the next morning presented her with a beautiful case of oyster knives, and in the note which accompanied them said: "In remembrance of your criminal tendency."

A "Regular" Babe.

It was a timber law case, in which Tim Healy was counsel for the defense. In the course of the case a youthful witness was put up as an expert on the plaintiff's side. Tim got up to cross-examine.

"What age are you?"

"Twenty-one years."

"How long have you been in the timber trade?"

"Two years."

Tim sat down, saying, "A regular babe in the wood, my lord," which discounted the evidence of the youthful expert.

Their Married Life

Helen Is Made to Feel That She Is Too Exacting and Expects Too Much of Maggie.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"WHY, Maggie, this isn't a clean cloth. Look at this!" Helen pointed to a distinct grease spot on the damask tablecloth. "And here's another. Why, this is the cloth we had on for breakfast."

"'Twas clean last night, ma'am," grumbled Maggie. "That makes three we've had on this week. We can't have no clean cloth every night."

"Well, we certainly will when we have guests. Now, you'll simply have to change this, Maggie. You ought to have known that cloth wouldn't do for dinner to-night."

"I won't have no time to unset that table now, ma'am," obstinately. "It's after 6 already.'

Helen flushed and bit her lips. Maggie was growing more and more impertinent, but just before a company dinner was not the time to reprove her. So with an effort Helen kept back the sharp words and began deliberately to unset the table herself.

It was late and she was not yet dressed, but having taken the stand that there must be a clean cloth, she had no choice now but to put one on.

The first cloth she unfolded was an old one that had been darned; the next had a claret stain. Both of these had to be refolded and put back. The third was badly ironed and was hard to get on straight, but she finally got it adjusted and began to reset the table.

As she replaced the silver she found that there had been only three forks by each plate.

Fork Missing.

'Maggie, you forgot to put down an extra fork for the relish," as Maggie came in to get a dish from the sideboard.

"We aint got no relish, ma'am."

"Why, I told you to open a can of those anchovies."

"We used the last can of them, ma'am, last Sunday."

"But surely there's another can." Helen went out in the pantry to convince herself. "Well, we MUST have some kind of a relish. Oh, here's that jar of anchovy paste! Make some little squares of toast and spread it with this. You've got a hard-boiled egg," glancing in the refrigerator; "you can grate that over it."

Maggie, who was whipping the cream for the berries, turned around with an angry flush.

"You're wanting too much, ma'am. That's fancy cooking. Cooks who makes them fussy dishes gets $50 a month! And you expect me at the last minute to drop everything and——"

"That'll do, Maggie. As soon as I can get dressed I'll make this myself. And if you think you can get a place as a $50 cook I'd advise you to take it."

Helen flounced into her dressing room. For her dinner was already spoiled. She could never enjoy anything after any kind of a scene. Her whole nature shrank from contention, and just to keep peace she had let Maggie have her own way for so long that now she resented everything she was told.

The fact that the girl was honest, economical and an excellent cook had made Helen put up with everything else. But now she felt that she would rather have someone more agreeable and amenable, even though less capable.

A Man's Job.

Warren came in whistling, which with him was an evidence of rare good humor. Helen ran into his room with a hurried greeting.

"Oh, I'm so glad you've come, dear. Can you hook me up before you dress? I don't want to ask Maggie—she's been perfectly horrid!"

"Humph! Turn around here to the light, then. What's this thing?"

"Oh, wait—that's the inside belt! I'll hook that. There! Oh, dear, Maggie's getting to be IMPOSSIBLE!"

"What's the matter now?" as he clumsily hooked the dress.

"She put a soiled tablecloth on tonight—and I had to change it myself. And when I asked her to make some anchovy toast for a relish she said cooks get $50 a month for making those fancy dishes. Hurry, dear; never mind the bottom ones—I can hook those."

"Here—you hold still! You wanted me to fasten this—didn't you?"

She drew away from his still fumbling fingers and darted out into the kitchen. Maggie was fixing the salad. Helen maintained a cold, disapproving silence as she sliced the bread, cut the crust off to make small squares and put them on the broiler in the already heated oven.

The heat flushed her face and she burnt her finger, which increased her resentment. Hurriedly she mixed a spoonful of butter, spread it thickly on the toast and garnished each piece with the grated hard-boiled egg.

Fortunately the Thurstons were a few moments late, and Helen had the dainty squares of anchovy toast at each plate before the bell rang. But now she was flustered and nervous and felt in no mood for guests. However, as Warren was in an especially genial humor, her silence and abstraction were not noticed.

"What is this?" asked Mrs. Thurston. "Anchovy toast, isn't it? I wish Jane would make things like this. A relish adds so much to the dinner."

"S-s-sh," whispered Helen, with a glance toward the pantry. "I had to make it myself. Oh, I've had a TIME with her this evening! I feel I'm just about through."

"Why, I thought Maggie was such a good girl?" questioned Mrs. Thurston in surprise.

Her Own Story.

"She is—if you let her do everything her own way. But there ARE times when you want things done your own way. Just to keep peace I've let her dominate me more and more. I'll never begin that with another girl. It's always a mistake—they always take advantage of it."

"Well, I should advise you to hold on to Maggie," was Mr. Thurston's comment. "We've had a devil of a time for the last few weeks."

"Oh, didn't you like that Swedish woman?" asked Helen.

Mrs. Thurston shrugged her shoulders. "We've had three since then."

"But I thought she was going to be so good? She was a working housekeeper, wasn't she?"

"That's what she SAID she was," grinned Mrs. Thurston. "But she wouldn't work, and she didn't know anything about housekeeping! Then we had a German girl. She was RICH! Tell about her, Minnie."

Mrs. Thurston laughed. "Well, we forgot to lock the wine up one night, and she drank half a bottle of cherry brandy. The next morning I had to get breakfast."

"That's one fine thing about Maggie," announced Warren. "We never have to lock up the wine or anything else. And our grocery and butcher bills have been less since we've had her than they've ever been before."

"Well, that's just what we're looking for," said Mr. Thurston emphatically. "In case you let her go, turn her over to us, will you? By Jove, the one we've got now is extravagant, all right."

"Yes, she's very wasteful," agreed Mrs. Thurston. "We've used five pounds of butter this week—just for us two."

"Five!" exclaimed Helen. "Why, Maggie rarely uses more than three."

"Three? We've never used as little as that since we've been housekeeping. We've never had a girl that didn't either take stuff home or feed a lot of company in the kitchen. This one has a beau that comes two nights a week, and she gets him a regular supper. But what can we say? We just have to put up with it."

"Well, I'D say a good deal." Warren's tone was emphatic.

"Not if you'd been through what we've been in the last two months," declared Mr. Thurston, grimly. "You don't know what a cinch you've got in Maggie."

Helen Uncomfortable.

Helen had the uncomfortable feeling that all this was tending to make her seem in the wrong. The inference was that if she could not get along with such a paragon of virtues as Maggie, she must be over-particular and very hard to please. The injustice of this rankled keenly. They only saw the best of Maggie; they did not know how trying, sullen and impertinent she could be.

The Thurstons stayed late, and as they were starting home Mrs. Thurston happened to glance in the bedroom. As usual, Maggie had fixed the bed for the night, taken off the counterpane and neatly turned down the covers. On the table was a fresh pitcher of ice water, covered with a napkin.

"Well, I call that luxury," Mrs. Thurston declared. "Look, Henry," calling to her husband, who was getting on his overcoat in the hall. "That's the way Maggie fixes their bed every night. Do you suppose we'll ever have the luck to get a girl like that?"

Helen flushed. It was only an added evidence of Maggie's perfection and of her own lack of appreciation.

Later, when Warren wound his watch for the night, he frowned over it thoughtfully.

"See here, we HAVE got a cinch in Maggie, but you don't seem to know it. You expect too blamed much of a girl. Great Scott, if you can't get along with her, who CAN you get along with? We've got a good thing and we're going to take Thurston's advice and hold on to it. Now you can just make up your mind to that."

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

"Cultivate Harmonious Surroundings," Says Doris Keane

Miss Keane's stage-room bower, and her favorite picture.

By LILLIAN LAUFERTY.

WITCHERY, charm incarnate, the lure of "the eternal woman," are to become living and tangible qualities through Doris Keane's portrayal of Margarita Cavallini in "Romance"—made real at Maxine Elliott's theater in New York.

Of course you have often read a book or seen a play in which earnest author and striving characters tell you again and again how charming is the fair heroine. All their insistence never makes it true! For the witchery of moonlight and the appeal of lovely woman are subtle things you must feel in stirring heart the while you see with rapt eyes.

But the Italian prima donna of "Romance" fascinates and bewitches even when you disapprove of the saucy jade—and at last she wins you heart and soul as with brimming eyes you sit rapt and thrilled the while she rises to the sacred realization of her woman's soul and pleads with her adorer, "Let me be good."

The curtain fell on an old man's dream of youth—or romance—and I was whisked back to the realm of glaring lights, of rouge pots and cold cream jars, of wigs and artifice, to visit our new star in her non-twinkling daylight environment—the dressing room.

All around me were flowered curtains and draperies of quaint old chintz—and everywhere, on stray shelves, on the dressing table, in free corners were glowing, fragrant flowers. And in the midst of this beauty and light sat Doris Keane still pulsing with the emotion she had felt the while she portrayed it.

Her Passion.

"You love beauty?" I ventured.

"I love beautiful surroundings and the personality they must develop," said Miss Keane. "You see, I have a sister—ever since our childhood I had known and felt and admired her radiant beauty. I knew I could never be like that—and one accepts the impossible serenely after a time. I accepted beauty and did not analyze it. I began to think more about personality and the power that brings.

"Ah, is not personality a wonderful thing! That almost all women can develop—the force, the magnetism that a rare and evenly developed personality bring are to me more lovely than beauty. Though, of course, the daughters of Eve do try to look as well as possible, to make that quick little appeal that gives personality a hearing.

"The most charming women have varying personalities. Do you know when I am most popular with myself? It is when I have a sudden realization that I looked like a girl of 15 in the morning, and that now in sophisticated evening clothes I look suddenly 'grande dame'—elderly even."

Of course Miss Keane would have some difficulty in looking "elderly," for, in spite of her well-bred poise, in spite of the keen power to analyze and appraise life that glows in the deep fires of her great brown eyes, Miss Keane is a girlish and appealing little figure.

In her Junoesque costume in "The Affairs of Anatol," early this winter, she managed to look tall and stately, in her present play she is an exotic Italian, but in propria persona Miss Keane is a brown-haired American girl whose earnestness of purpose and ambitious willingness to work add to the fervor of artistic inspiration and make her beautiful with a charm that surmounts mere prettiness of feature in a way that affords a little sermon all its own.

"Surroundings are so important," went on Miss Keane. "One evening recently a party of friends took me to a restaurant all done in heavy plush hangings and oppressive gilt. My personality was smothered, and I became a quiet, depressed creature quite different from the animated person I had been just before.

A Sure Sign.

"That made me finally sure of my theory. Surround yourself with fresh, clean, airy, wholesome surroundings. For purposes of stimulating mind and spirit a day in the country far surpasses a glass of champagne. The outdoors—trees, green growing things and a chance in nature and solitude to know your own soul are the most wonderful tonics I know.

"Isolation, solitude—a chance to 'ventilate my soul'—are the things I like best in the world.

"Since I was six years old I have known what I wanted to do in the world. That is young, perhaps—but ever since I can remember I have been working toward a chance to act—to interpret character. Women must find themselves and the outlet for their powers if they want to be happy—and whatever charm tragic beauty has, the loveliness of a happy soul working toward a goal is more appealing to the world—and men.

"But while I like men—the man is not come—I think for the actress who is afire with her art all else must be secondary."

I looked at those glowing brown eyes—alight with ambition, with earnest purpose, with desire to see deep into the great mystery of life—for Miss Keane glories in the vastness of life, and thinks to absolutely understand even one phase of it would be a splendid thing—as I looked at those fine eyes I felt that Doris Keane had told me the great secrets of spiritual beauty that can illuminate the face of any woman who desires it.

To rise above the tawdry plush and gilt facts of life, to "ventilate your soul," and open it to the loveliness of Nature, to find yourself and the outlet for your powers—to keep happily, healthily busy, to know ambition's spur, and to strive to grow—these are the beauty secrets of Doris Keane, who has not thought much about beauty—and yet has cultivated a spirit and charm that make her natural loveliness ever a greater delight.

WITHIN THE LAW

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intrigue and Love

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Turner, an orphan, employed in Edward Gilder's department store, is unjustly accused of theft and sent to prison. She is hounded by the police on her release, and finally goes to live with Joe Garson, a forger, and Aggie Lynch, a blackmailer, both of whom treat her with respect. Mary resolves to keep "within the law." She becomes the leader of a band of swindlers. Gilder's son, Dick, falls in love with her, and she marries him to be revenged on his father—and then finds that she is in love with him. Dick refuses to give her up, a demand made by his father, Mary disappears. Police Inspector Burke in an effort to aid the elder Gilder schemes to secure the arrest of Mary through "English Eddie" Griggs, a police informer. Garson plans to rob the Gilder home on a tip from Griggs. Mary hears of it and tries to prevent it, going to the Gilder home. Mary pleads with Garson to drop the robbery, and Dick enters. Garson kills Griggs when Mary corners the latter and he admits he is working for the police. Burke enters the house, a searchlight throwing its rays on the dead man's body. Mary and Dick are arrested, because Mary tells Burke that Dick shot Griggs in defense of his home. The District Attorney tries to quash the case against young Gilder. Inspector Burke obtains from Miss Helen Travers West, daughter of a prominent railroad official, a promise that she will tell something about Mary.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"I shall do nothing of the sort. Sit down, indeed!—here! Why, I have been arrested——" There came a break in the music of her tones throbbing resentment. A little sob crept in, and broke the sequence of words. The dainty face was vivid with shame. "I——" she faltered, "I've been arrested—by a common policeman!"

The Inspector seized on the one flaw left him for defense against her indictment.

"No, no, miss," he argued, earnestly. "Excuse me. It wasn't any common policeman—it was a detective sergeant."

But this effort to placate was quite in vain. The ingenuous little beauty with the child's face and the blue eyes so widely opened fairly panted in her revolt against the ignominy of her position, and was not to be so easily appeased. Her voice came vibrant with disdain. Her level gaze on the Inspector was of a sort to suggest to him anxieties over possible complications here.

"You wait!" she cried violently. "You just wait, I tell you, until my papa hears of this!"

Burke regarded the furious girl doubtfully.

"Who is your papa?" he asked, with a bit of alarm stirring in his breast, for he had no mind to offend anyone of importance where there was no need.

"I sha'nt tell you," came the petulant retort from the girl. Her ivory forehead was wrinkled charmingly in a little frown of obstinacy. "Why," she went on, displaying new symptoms of distress over another appalling idea that flashed on her in this moment, "you would probably give my name to the reporters." Once again the rosebud mouth drooped into curves of sorrow, of a great self-pity. "If it ever got into the newspapers, my family would die of shame!"

The pathos of her fear pierced through the hardened crust of the police official. He spoke apologetically.

"Now, the easiest way out for both of us," he suggested, "is for you tell me just who you are. You see, young lady, you were found in the house of a notorious crook."

The haughtiness of the girl waxed. It seemed as if she grew an inch taller in her scorn of the Inspector's saying.

"How perfectly absurd!" she exclaimed, scathingly. "I was calling on Miss Mary Turner!"

"How Did You Meet Her?"

"How did you come to meet her, anyhow?" Burke inquired. He still held his big voice to a softer modulation than to which it was habituated.

Yet, the disdain of the girl seemed only to increase momently. She showed plainly that she regarded this brass-buttoned official as one unbearably insolent in his demeanor toward her. Nevertheless, she condescended to reply, with an exaggeration of the aristocratic drawl to indicate her displeasure.

"I was introduced to Miss Turner," she explained, "by Mr. Richard Gilder. Perhaps you have heard of his father, the owner of the Emporium."

"Oh, yes. I've heard of his father and of him, too," Burke admitted, placatingly.

But the girl relaxed not a whit in her attitude of offense.

"Then," she went on severely, "you must see at once that you are entirely mistaken in this matter." Her blue eyes widened further as she stared accusingly at the Inspector, who betrayed evidences of perplexity, and hesitated for an answer. Then, the doll-like, charming face took on a softer look, which had in it a suggestion of appeal.

"Don't you see it?" she demanded. "Well, no," Burke rejoined uneasily; "not exactly, I don't!" In the presence of this delicate and graceful femininity he experienced a sudden novel distaste for his usual sledge-hammer methods of attack in interrogation. Yet his duty required that he should continue his questioning. He found himself, in fact, between the devil and the deep sea—though this particular devil appeared rather as an angel of light.

Now, at his somewhat feeble remark in reply to her query, the childish face grew as hard as its curving contours would permit.

"Sir!" she cried indignantly. Her little head was thrown back in scornful reproof, and she turned a shoulder toward the official contemptuously.

"Now, now!" Burke exclaimed in remonstrance. After all, he could not be brutal with this guileless maiden. He must, however, make the situation clear to her, lest she think him a beast—which would never do!

"You see, young lady," he went on with a gentleness of voice and manner that would have been inconceivable to Dacey and Chicago Red; "you see, the fact is that, even if you were introduced to this Mary Turner by young Mr. Gilder, this same Mary Turner herself is an ex-convict, and she's just been arrested for murder."

At the dread word a startling change was wrought in the girl. She wheeled to face the Inspector, her slender body swaying a little toward him. The rather heavy brows were lifted slightly in a disbelieving stare. The red lips were parted, rounded in a tremulous horror.

"Murder!" she gasped, and then was silent.

"Yes." Burke went on, wholly at ease now, since he had broken the ice thus effectually. "You see, if there's a mistake about you, you don't want it to go any further—not a mite further, that's sure. So, you see, now, that's one of the reasons why I must know just who you are." Then, in his turn, Burke put the query that the girl had put to him a little while before, "You see that, don't you?"

"Oh, yes, yes!" was the instant agreement. "You should have told me all about this horrid thing in the first place." Now the girl's manner was transformed. She smiled wistfully on the Inspector, and the glance of the blue eyes was very kind, subtly alluring. Yet in this unbending, there appeared even more decisively than hitherto the fine qualities in bearing of one delicately nurtured. She sank down in a chair by the desk and forthwith spoke with a simplicity that in itself was somehow peculiarly potent in its effect on the official who gave attentive ear.

"My name is Helen Travers West," she announced.

Burke started a little in his seat, and regarded the speaker with a new deference as he heard that name uttered.

"Not the daughter of the railway president?" he inquired.

She Displayed Agitation.

"Yes," the girl admitted. Then, anew, she displayed a serious agitation over the thought of any possible publicity in this affair.

"Oh, please, don't tell anyone," she begged prettily. The blue eyes were very imploring, beguiling, too. The timid smile that wreathed the tiny mouth was marvelously winning. The neatly gloved little hands were held outstretched, clasped in supplication. "Surely, sir, you see now quite plainly why it must never be known by any one in all the wide, wide world that I have ever been brought to this perfectly dreadful place—though you have been quite nice!" Her voice dropped to a note of musical prayerfulness. The words were spoken very softly and very slowly, with intonations difficult for a man to deny. "Please let me go home." She plucked a minute handkerchief from her handbag, put it to her eyes, and began to sob quietly.

The burly Inspector of Police was moved to quick sympathy. Really, when all was said and done, it was a shame that one like her should by some freak of fate have become involved in the sordid, vicious things that his profession made it obligatory on him to investigate. There was a considerable hint of the paternal in his air as he made an attempt to offer consolation to the afflicted damsel.

"That's all right, little lady," he exclaimed, cheerfully. "Now, don't you be worried—not a little bit. Take it from me, Miss West. * * * Just go ahead and tell me all you know about this Turner woman. Did you see her yesterday?"

The girl's sobs ceased. After a final dab with the minute handkerchief, she leaned forward a little toward the Inspector, and proceeded to put a question to him with great eagerness.

"Will you let me go home as soon as I've told you the teenty little I know?"

"Yes," Burke agreed promptly, with an encouraging smile. And for a good measure of reassurance he added as one might to an alarmed child: "No one is going to hurt you, young lady."

"Well, then, you see, it was this way," began the brisk explanation. "Mr. Gilder was calling on me one afternoon, and he said to me then that he knew a very charming young woman, who——"

Here the speech ended abruptly, and once again the handkerchief was brought into play as the sobbing broke to a moan.

Burke felt himself vaguely guilty as the cause of such suffering on the part of one so young, so fair, so innocent. As a culprit, he sought his best to afford a measure of soothing for this grief that had had its source in his performance of duty.

Her Voice Sank.

"That's all right, little lady," he urged in a voice as nearly mellifluous as he could contrive with its mighty volume. "That's all right. I have to keep on telling you. Nobody's going to hurt you—not a little bit. Believe me! Why, nobody ever would want to hurt you!"

But this well-meant attempt to assuage the stricken creature's woe was futile. The sobbing continued. With it came a plaintive cry, many times repeated, softly, but very miserably.

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear!"

"Isn't there something else you can tell about this woman?" Burke inquired in desperation before the plaintive outburst. He hoped to distract her from such grief over her predicament.

The girl gave no least heed to the question.

"Oh, I'm so frightened!" she gasped.

"Tut, tut!" the Inspector chided. "Now, I tell you there's nothing at all for you to be afraid of."

"I'm afraid!" the girl asserted dismally. "I'm afraid you will—put me—in a cell!" Her voice sank to a murmur hardly audible as she spoke the words so fraught with dread import to one of her refined sensibilities.

"Pooh!" Burke returned, gallantly. "Why, my dear young lady, nobody in the world would think of you and a cell at the same time—no, indeed!"

Instantly, the girl responded to this bald flattery. She fairly radiated appreciation of the compliment, as she turned her eyes, dewy with tears, on the somewhat flustered Inspector.

"Oh, thank you!" she exclaimed, with naive enjoyment.

Forthwith, Burke set out to make the most of this favorable opportunity.

"Are you sure you've told me all you know about this woman?" he questioned.

Burke Was Moved.

"Oh, yes! I've only seen her two or three times," came the ready response. The voice changed to supplication, and again the clasped hands were extended beseechingly.

"O please, Commissioner! Won't you let me go home?"

The use of a title higher than his own flattered the Inspector, and he was moved to graciousness. Besides, it was obvious that his police net in this instance had enmeshed only the most harmless of doves. He smiled encouragingly.

"Well, now, little lady," he said, almost tenderly, "if I let you go now, will you promise to let me know if you are able to think of anything else about this Turner woman?"

"I will—indeed, I will!" came the fervent assurance. There was something almost—quite provocative in the flash of gratitude that shone forth from the blue eyes of the girl in that moment of her superlative relief. It moved Burke to a desire for rehabilitation in her estimation.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

CONVINCE HER THEY ARE FALSE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen and deeply in love with a girl of seventeen. Some jealous person told her false stories about me that she believes. This caused a quarrel. Please tell me a way to regain her affections.

B. H.

You must never rest idle under false accusations. Convince her of your innocence and let the matter end there. Let it end for the reason that you are too young to know what love is.

YOU WERE RIGHT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been acquainted with a young man for several months, and he has taken me out quite a number of times. The last time he called he wanted to take me to a dance, but I refused, as he did not notify me in time so that I could get ready. Was I right in doing so? Since then he has not called to see me.

F. C.

You had the right of refusal, of course. If he is pouting because of it, believe me, my dear, he will prove a very uncomfortable friend, and you must waste no time or emotions on him.

.:. Lost Books That Caused Tragedies .:.

WHEN Thomas Carlyle had finished the first volume of his "French Revolution," a work which had cost him months of incessant toil and the verification of thousands of facts and references, he lent the manuscript to John Stuart Mill. Surely, that philosopher had one of the worst tasks ever allotted to a mortal man when he had to tell the "Sage of Chelsea" that the priceless manuscript had been thrown into the fire by a careless servant, and only a few charred leaves—still to be seen in Cheyne Row, Chelsea—remained to tell the tale.

Sir Isaac Newton was the victim of a similar catastrophe, but the "friend" responsible was not human, but canine—his favorite little dog. He left him in his study alone, and when he came back found that he had "chewed" the mathematical calculations of many strenuous months. Many accounts say that Newton took it very calmly, but the truth is that it preyed upon his mind to such an extent as to cause much temporary mental aberration.

One of the great losses to literature was the burning of six books of Spenser's "Faery Queen" which the poet is said to have left in his house in County Tyrone, Ireland. A rebellion broke out, and the place was burned; and not only did the poet's youngest child perish in the flames, but, it is said, also about as much of the great poem as we possess at present.

All lovers of Byron are aware that this erratic genius found time in his short, adventurous life to write his memoirs, and that on his death these passed into the hands of his friend, Thomas Moore, who, exercising a discretion committed to him, promptly consigned the manuscript to the flames.

No doubt the writer of "Irish Melodies" had very good and highly proper reasons for taking this decisive step, and it is quite likely that the publication of the memoirs would not, for obvious reasons, have been possible for many years after the poet's death; yet as succeeding generations have been brought face to face with the peculiarly complex genius of Byron, with its lofty moods and its many dark places, they have felt need of the light which only the records written by a vanished hand could have supplied.

Since the death of Auguste Strindberg, the famous Swedish novelist and dramatist—who, by the way, had much in common with Byron—many of his works have been translated into the English language and are already the center of heated controversy in literary circles. It is possible, therefore, that the powerful, if somewhat misanthropical, writings of this Swedish recluse may be read and treasured by generations to come. But all his works will not go down to posterity, for it is said that in a sudden fit of despondency Strindberg himself destroyed a number of his manuscripts, which, through lack of time or inclination, he never wrote again.

BUD ANDERSON PUZZLES COAST FIGHT CRITICS

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 16.—That the coast fight critics are not yet quite sure whether Bud Anderson, of Medford, Oreg., is a real fighter or only a flash in the pan is indicated quite clearly by the remarks of all the men who have been out there and have watched him battle. Some say that he is one of the wonders of the world and others are waiting to see whether he defeats Leach Cross before expressing a definite opinion. He is to battle Cross on July 4 in a twenty-round battle, and his standing largely will be determined by the outcome of that affair.

* * *

BOB LAGA, the old-time Chicagoan, who has been a follower of the boxing game for years and has handled some of the best of them, was in the city last night and had something to say of Anderson. "Whitey Bob," as he was known around when boxing flourished here, has been in the East scouting, but is on his way back to Los Angeles. He thinks Anderson is one of the very greatest of the lightweights, and if he doesn't get bigger nothing on earth but a serious accident can keep him out of the lightweight title. Laga bases his opinion on Bud's punching ability alone and nothing else.

* * *

"BUD doesn't look to have such a terrific wallop, but what he has is a short, stunning wallop that seems to have his opponents dazed right from the start," is the way Bob puts it. "He hits from a very short distance, but there must be a terrible lot of sting to his either hand. He surely will beat Cross in the coming bout, but it will be a poor contest unless Cross will go in and take a chance. Anderson likes to wait for his man to come in close before he hits. Cross is much the same sort of a workman, and there may be a lot of standing around and stalling in this match."

* * *

BOB further expressed the opinion that Ad Wolgast is all in and that it will be next to impossible for him to come back in the old style and do any good with some of the newcomers of the division. "He seems to have lost all of the old stamina and pep," Laga said. "He seems as anxious as ever to do battle and looks fine, but there's something wrong."

* * *

WHEN Leach Cross was on a visit here this week he was continually boosting his younger brother, Phil, claiming that the lad could trim any and all of them at 142 to 145 pounds. Leach was very frank to admit that Phil is a better man than he is, and said that when Phil was put in in a semi wind-up to one of his battles it always took the edge off Leach's contest. "Phil has the crowd crazy when he fights, and then when I come on it makes me look bad." Leach said. "I'd like to see him get a chance with some of the welterweights around here, for I think he is a champion sure."

RITCHIE OWES HIGH STANDING TO AD. WOLGAST

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—A good deal was said about the inadvisability of matching Wolgast and Ritchie, but the expressions of opinion have simply been of an individual character and not always the fruit of sober reflection and a desire to be fair.

If Ritchie ever accomplishes one-half of what Wolgast did in the ring Willie's name will echo down the corridors with more of a reverberation than it is producing at present. Wolgast gave Ritchie a chance at the title when Ritchie had little or no standing as a fighter, and if pugilism were not such a cut-throat proposition gratitude should impel Ritchie to be as generous as Wolgast was.

If Ritchie had knocked out Wolgast there would have been some pith in the argument that the public would not care to see the two lads sent together again. But Willie did nothing of the sort. It was Wolgast's foul blow that made Ritchie champion, and that is why some of the sneering critics of the Far East tack the letters O. F. P. on to Ritchie's title. And for fear you don't know it should be stated that O. F. P. stands for Other Fellow's Punch.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Ad Wolgast is certainly one popular fighter with the coast fans. Although Joe Rivers is a native son many of the fans out West were clamoring for the ex-champion to get the first chance at Ritchie. Ad's style of boxing, combined with his willingness to meet all comers when he was champion, has built up a large following for the "fighting Dutchman."

* * *

Mike Saul, who made his first fight last Friday in over a year, says he is after a return match with Terry Nelson. Mike seemed to be a big favorite with the fans and should be heard from in the future if he gets into good condition.

* * *

Kid Williams found Jem Kendrick easy picking at Baltimore the other night. The former handed the Englishman a terrific lacing and forced his second to throw up the sponge in the sixth round.

* * *

Tom Gibbons threatens to follow the footsteps of his brother, Mike, in the pugilistic world. Tom's latest achievement was a ten-round victory over Jack Denning last week and the latter is far from a slouch. Mike's brother is now after bouts with Frank Klaus and Jack Dillon.

* * *

In speaking of star middleweights why not mention the name of Jimmy Clabby, the veteran Hammond middleweight. Jimmy traveled to Butte, Mont., last Friday and handed Eddie McGoorty a fine trimming in ten rounds. Clabby was given a great ovation when the referee gave him the decision. The defeat just about eliminates McGoorty as a contender for the title.

* * *

Patsy Brannigan, the Pittsburg featherweight will get into action to-night. Patsy is scheduled to meet Young Mahoney in a ten-round engagement at Milwaukee, Wis. This will be Patsy's first battle since he defeated Matty McCue in the Brewer City about five weeks ago.

* * *

Abe Attell may get another chance at the featherweight title. A San Francisco promoter has offered the ex-champion a match with Kilbane on June 30 and Abe is expected to accept. The promoter has already received Kilbane's consent to the match.

* * *

Danny Morgan is just $350 short to-day. The talkative manager wagered that amount on Young Ahearn to stop Mike Gibbons and his protege took a bad lacing from the St. Paul sensation. He was stopped in the fourth round.

* * *

Chicago fans are betting on Jack White to defeat Johnny Dundee when the two clash in a 20-round scrap on Tuesday night. The Windy City fans think Jack is too tough for the Eastern featherweight.

* * *

Charlie White is tackling about the toughest boy in the lightweight division on July 4 when he hooks up with Jack Britton at New Orleans. Willie Ritchie, Joe Rivers and Bud Anderson have all dodged bouts with Britton. The latter is also credited with a clean-cut victory over Leach Cross.

Sports and Such

ABOUT THE ONLY REAL tragedy in connection with the recent polo match was the spectacle of the profound experts of polo—than whom there are none profounder—trying to explain the defeat of the English.

* * *

THE ONE BRIGHT BIT OF polo comedy was contributed by Harry Payne Whitney, captain of the American team, who said that he objected to the "commercialization of polo" as manifest in the plan to have the players wear numbers on their saddle cloths so that the spectators might identify them.

It might be pointed out to Mr. Whitney that the commercialization of polo began with himself and the other members of the Polo Association in charging from $2.50 to $250 for the privilege of watching the game.

* * *

MOST OF THE EXPECTED nervous prostration in connection with the managerial performance of J. Evers seems to be on the side of his opponents.

* * *

IT MAY BE CONFIDENTLY predicted that Johnny Kilbane will soon lose the featherweight title. He insists on fighting somebody now and then, contrary to the basic law of modern ring champions.

FEATHERS TO BATTLE IN NEW YORK ON WEDNESDAY

NEW YORK, June 16.—The St. Nicholas Athletic Club will stage a featherweight elimination tournament between six of the leading featherweights in the country next Wednesday night.

Matt Brock, of Cleveland, who is to meet Tommy Houck, arrived to-day. Kid Julian will arrive to-morrow. Joe Coster, who is to be Julian's opponent, is training at Brooklyn. Patsy Kline is getting in shape for his battle with Eddie O'Keefe, of Philadelphia.

TRENDALL AND MURPHY TO CLASH IN ST. LOUIS RING

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—Harry Trendall and Eddie Murphy will clash here in the star bout at the National Athletic Club Coliseum Wednesday, June 18. Trendall and Murphy will weigh 135 at 3 o'clock.

Murphy comes from Cleveland. He boxed a ten-round draw with Jack Britton at Kenosha, Wis., two weeks ago.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

CINCINNATI, June 16.—The Athletics look like the class of the American League now, and indications are the race on that circuit will be over by August. No club in the league, with the possible exception of Cleveland, seems to be able to stop Mack's team or even interrupt it. The supposed weakness in the pitching box has not developed yet, nor does it threaten to. Clever "Connie" is working his twirling talent with the foresight of a genius.

There is a psychological angle to the Athletics' great showing this year which should interest the fan to whom the spectacular appeals. Throughout both big leagues, but particularly in the American, a mania for sign stealing has developed, and the Athletics are the past masters in this art, according to the members of the other clubs in their circuit.

Personally, I believe the Athletics get credit for lots more stuff than they get away with. But they developed a new system of getting signs this spring which has baffled most of the clubs so far.

As soon as the batters begin being tipped to the catcher's signals, the opposing club generally catches on. Their sureness of hitting is an indication. Such a discovery starts a search of the source of the information. Many backstops, when working against the Athletics this year, have attempted to be so careful to conceal their signs from the men on the coaching lines that they crowd their knees right up almost tight together in the front when in the stooping position before the pitch, so only the twirlers can see their fingers. The result is that the sign shows out behind. The Athletics have been walking a little bit out of the line of march from the bench to the home plate when waiting to go to the bat and watching the catcher from the back. As soon as the man "on deck" awaiting his turn to hit sees a sign for a curve ball, he says:

"Take one, old boy!"

This may not mean "take one" at all, but it does inform the batter in the code that the pitcher is going to deliver a curve ball. If it is to be a fast one he says:

"Walk into one!"

* * *

A CERTAIN official in the American League was telling me a story the other day about a shrewd catcher who became aware that the Athletics were stealing his signals, but was worried because he could not locate the source. The official, himself, had discovered the means by which they were being tipped off, but it was none of his affairs to interfere, unless the other club complained about the waiting batters walking out of the line to the plate.

"They've got a fellow outside the park in that apartment house flashing my signs by pulling a curtain up and down," complained the catcher to the umpire.

Whenever a catcher cannot discover a source, he always looks for the tipping bureau outside the park, but that style of wigwagging is very much out of date now and strictly against the rules.

"Eddie" Collins was on first base when the catcher began to "beef" to the umpire.

"Now I'm going to ask for a pitchout, and you watch Collins," said the catcher. "He won't move off first base."

Sure enough. The twirler delivered a pitchout, and Collins stuck to the bag like a countryman in a big city to his bank roll.

"Watch that curtain out there now," continued the catcher. "I am going to order another pitchout."

Collins again stuck to the bag, and the curtain, by a strange coincidence, moved or appeared to move.

"What did I tell you?" exclaimed the catcher.

"They ain't getting them there," answered the umpire.

This discovering of the signs has helped the Athletics immensely, because they wait until they have the pitcher in a hole and he has to lay the ball over. Then comes the hit-and-run play, and away they go. Do not think for a minute that I am criticising the method. It shows that they are a lot of smart ball players, and it is regarded as being perfectly fair to take signs through quickness of eye.

Only artificial aids to detection are against the rules. And the fact that the opposing clubs always think the Athletics are getting the signs gives Mack's team an edge, whether it is true or not.

* * *

THERE is only one pitcher in the American League against whom the Athletics have no desire to be tipped off beforehand as to the probable pitch. He is Walter Johnson, of Washington. He has too much speed, and the most finished methods of sign stealing are not infallible. It ceases to come under the head of pleasure against him.

"I don't want anybody telling me what to expect when that bird is working," said "Stuffy" McInnis recently, referring to Johnson. "His fast one moves too quick to get out of the way if you are up there set for a curve ball. If it once hits you, it is generally too late for an ambulance. It is time to order a hearse."

* * *

WHILE we are on the subject of sign stealing, they tell a good story about the acumen of the Cubans when the Athletics went to Havana to play in 1910. The Cuban club had heard all the talk of the Philadelphia team stealing signs, so they decided to fool them by giving the signals in Spanish. "Connie" Mack immediately signed an interpreter to sit on the bench, but he was discovered after a few innings and chased to cover, even though he did have on a Philadelphia uniform.

PHILLIES' PRESIDENT IS NEAR DEATH AT HIS HOME

PHILADELPHIA, June 16.—William H. Locke, president and part owner of the Phillies and pacemaker of the Lynch League, is dangerously ill at his home here, and his players fear he will not live to see them win a pennant. Locke, it is said, is suffering from cancer and neuritis.

Before taking the executive chair in Philadelphia Locke was secretary of the Pittsburg club. He is regarded as one of the best posted men in baseball, having been selected to handle the business end of three world's series.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

OLD-FASHIONED BLEACHERS.

How dear to my heart were the old-fashioned bleachers,
The place where I sat in the ages gone by,
Where I could distinguish a ball player's features
Without a big telescope glued to my eye.
The bleacherite now, with a strong pair of glasses,
May sometimes distinguish a ball player's face.
He wonders who hits and who whiffs and who passes,
And yearns for the bleachers that stood by third base.

The old-fashioned bleachers,
The dust-covered bleachers,
The sun-beaten bleachers
That stood by third base.

We sat in our seats with the sun streaming o'er us,
And we knew every athlete who played in the game.
We cheered them or jeered them in deafening chorus,
And knew every man by his intimate name.
To-day we are scorned by the magnate's assistants,
Who order us hence with a frown on their face.
We sit in the bleachers a mile in the distance,
And yearn for the bleachers that stood by third base.

The old-fashioned bleachers,
The dust-covered bleachers,
The sun-beaten bleachers,
That stood by third base.

Christy Mathewson finally has awakened to the fact that the Phillies have a chance to win. This leads one to suspect that Chris has been reading the newspapers.

When Joe Dunn can negotiate a two-bagger without knocking the ball out of the park, it is a sign that he is developing speed.

Speaking of fables, there is the story of the ball player who kicks because he is not worked hard enough.

The press agent arises to remark that Jack Dillon is in the same class as Stanley Ketchel. Being as Stanley is dead, we believe said press agent.

A motorcycle race these days generally results in a broken record or a broken motorcycle.

Mr. Ritchie is willing to weigh a ton for Mr. Rivers, but when it comes to Mr. McFarland—that's something else again.

RUCKER MAY BE TRADED TO CUBS FOR BRESNAHAN

By Davenport.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 16.—There is a chance that Nap Rucker will be wearing a Cub uniform within the next few days, and your old friend, Rajah Bresnahan, may be seen cavorting about as a Dodger.

Can't tell, for stranger things than that have happened and there are persistent rumors afloat that a deal is on between President Murphy and Charles Ebbetts whereby Murphy's ten-thousand-dollar beauty will go to Brooklyn in exchange for the star twirler of the Brooklyn Club.

Putting Mr. Murphy right, right off the reel, he makes a vigorous denial that any such trade is even contemplated, but the tip came from Brooklyn Saturday to the effect there was strong talk of a trade.

Incidentally, Charles Ebbets is the man who is backing fire. Charles can't see Bresnahan for Rucker and would give instead Ragan, but Murphy is holding out for the big southpaw.

Murphy After Pitchers.

However, there are many reasons for such a trade. Mr. Murphy has said right along that he was in search of a star twirler. "Not a youngster," said Mr. Murphy several weeks ago, "but a veteran who has been tried and found not wanting."

There can be no denying Nap Rucker answers the call. He has been tried several times and found "not guilty" every time. He is a veteran, knows every batter in the National League and has the enviable reputation of being one of the coolest, brainiest pitchers on the National League list.

Bresnahan has been decorating the Chicago bench ever since the season opened. He has caught very few full games, but Mr. Murphy says he values him because something might happen to Jimmy Archer and Rajah would be a valuable man under such contingencies.

Archer Best in National.

Archer has been working faithfully all through the season thus far. It is admitted all around the circuit that Jimmy is the star backstop of President Lynch's organization.

NEW ZEALANDER WINS FRENCH TENNIS MEET

PARIS, June 16.—The finals in the lawn tennis championship were played Sunday at Saint Cloud. In the men's singles, A. F. Wilding, of New Zealand, beat the French representative, Andre H. Cobert.

In the women's single, Fraulein Reike, Germany, beat Mlle. Broquedis, France.

The Germans, VonBissing and Kleinschroth, won the men's doubles from Froitzheim, Germany, and Wilding, New Zealand.

Miss Ryan, of California, and Max DeCugis, France, had a walk-over in the mixed doubles against Mme. Golding, France, and Wilding, the latter being too tired to play again.

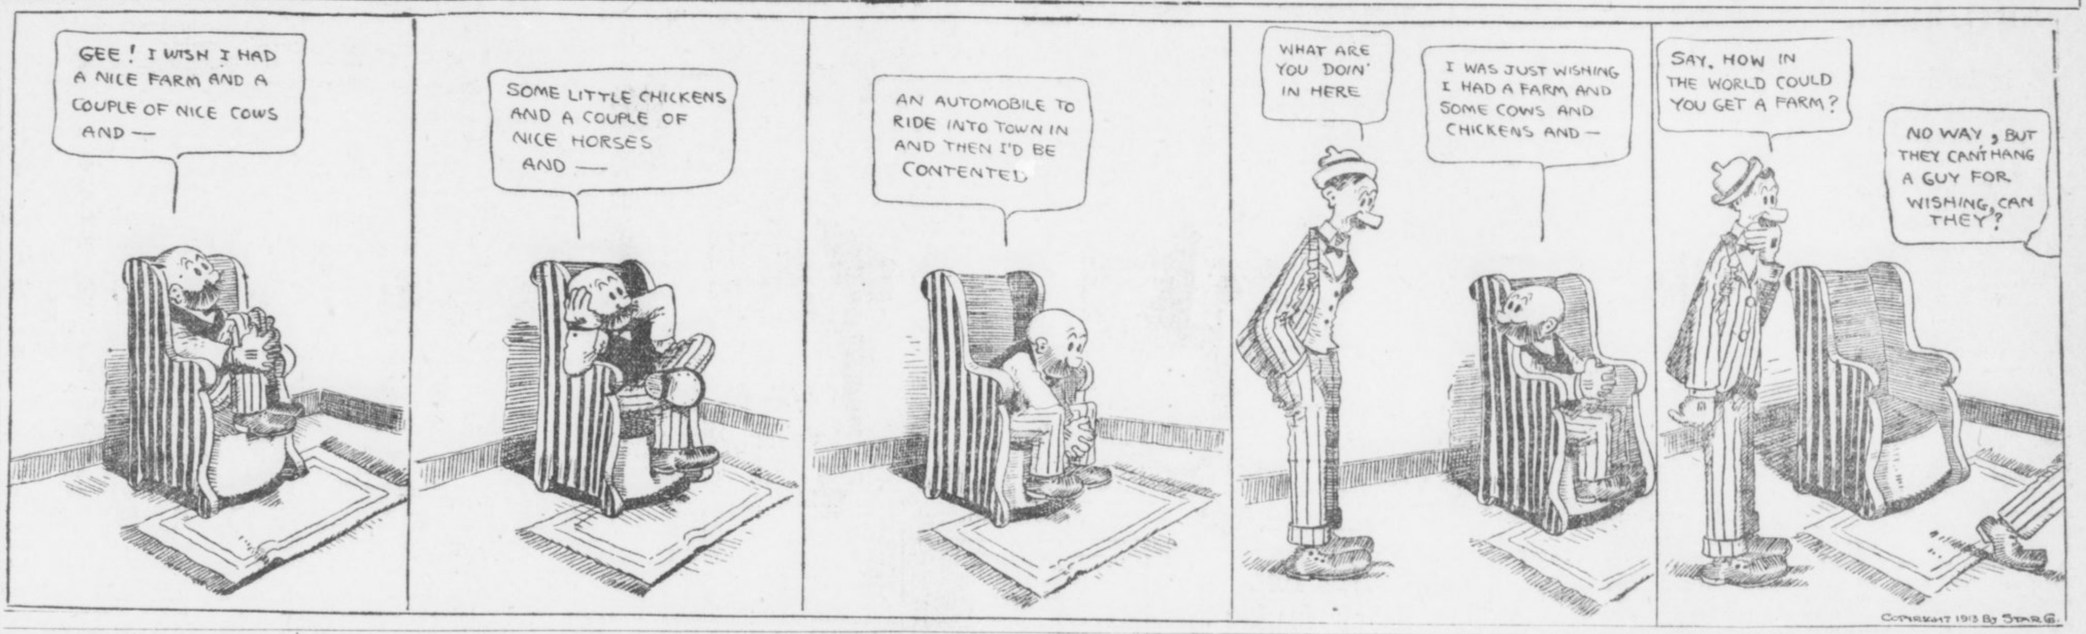
Jeff Is One of Our Best Little Wishers :: :: :: :: :: By "Bud" Fisher



NIGHT RACING AT 'DROME TO START TUESDAY

THE question whether Jock McNeil, the Scotch rider, or Wilmer Richards, the Texan, has the fatest motorcycle in Dixie will be settled Tuesday night on the shelving sides of the new Prince Motordrome, which will be thrown open for night racing at that time.

McNeil rides a J. A. P. motor. The engine was made in England and imported by the little Scotchman. He built up the rest of the motorcycle himself from parts picked up in this country. Richards has the famous "23" Indian, a racing machine of known speed, long record and bloody career, a machine that has been killing its man and breaking its record for several years past.

In Saturday's sport at the Motordrome McNeil and Richards met but once. That was in a five-mile final of the Speedway Sweepstakes. And McNeil won. But it was not conclusive. Richards, one of the wisest riders on the globe, was laying right behind the pack up to the finish. When he let out, he was showing more speed than any of them. But he did not let out in time. McNeil did a little letting out himself and held his advantage across the tape.

They should have fought it out in the Motordrome Purse, but the gasoline tank on the Scot's machine sprang a seam and could not be repaired in time for any further racing. Richards won the next race handily.

Oh, You Race Question!

Both men will meet in every regular event Tuesday night, and the question of supremacy of Texan or Scot, of Jap or Indian (and that's some race question for you!), will be settled.

It might happen, of course, that neither man would win a race, even if they settled their argument. There are several riders yet to be heard from.

For instance, Harry Swartz is due to show something Tuesday night. Swartz was handicapped Saturday by the fact that he had to fit new wheels on his machine at the last minute. His Excelsior has been used for road racing and was fitted with road rims and road tires. These were changed at the last minute, but Swartz had no chance to get his machine right. He will have it tuned up right by Tuesday night and as his machine is fast and as there is no better rider in America than Harry, he is likely to be heard from, LOUD.

Glenn and Renel to Meet.

One of the feature events Tuesday will be a match race between Harry Glenn, of Atlanta, and Georges Renel of Paris. On Saturday, in the match race, they finished so close together that the judges declared it a dead heat, though, of course, each man claimed that he won. Considerable feeling was stirred up over the thing and they will ride it over for a purse on Tuesday.

The meet Tuesday night will start at 8:30. Tickets are already on sale at Tumlin's and Shepherd's stands.

M'FARLAND PLANS TRIP TO EUROPE FOR FOLKS

CHICAGO, ILL., June 16.—Another big treat is in store for Packey McFarland's folks, and all at the fighter's expense. On Wednesday they sail from New York on the steamer Carpathia for Ireland, their native land, to be gone three months. All of this time, however, will not be spent in Ireland. London, Paris and Scotland will be some of the stops before they return to this country.

This is not the only treat Packey has given his folks. He purchased a home for them on Garfield Boulevard not so long ago and is allowing them the rent from one of his six-flat buildings. Packey plans to return to the ring shortly and has instructed his manager to get in touch with the various clubs.

HOFMAN AND FERRY DRAW RELEASE FROM PIRATES

PITTSBURG, June 16.—Artie Hofman, outfielder of the Pirates and former star of the Chicago Cubs, and Pitcher Jack Ferry have been released by Manager Fred Clarke. Hofman is slated to go to Kansas City, but refuses, and asks to be sent to the Pacific Coast League. Ferry is to go to the Columbus team, of the American Association.

Vols Are Here For Three Games

Schwartzies Always Worry Locals

By Percy H. Whiting.

BILL SCHWARTZ, the well-known boy manager, and the Volunteer ball club of Nashville (Tenn., not Ga.) have arrived safely in Atlanta, and this afternoon will tangle with the Crackers in the first game of a three-game spasm.

Gilbert Price will probably get the assignment to hurl for the Crackers. Joseph Dunn will catch, as usual.

* * *

CURIOSITY as to the work of the pitchers of late prompts a comparison of the batting averages that Southern League teams have piled up in the last six series, with the batting averages of the same teams for the whole season. This is calculated to show whether the teams the Crackers have faced recently are hitting harder or lighter against other teams than they are against the Crackers. Here is the answer:

In the last series against the Lookouts Elberfeld's men batted .292 against Cracker pitchers. Their average for the season is .251. Score one against Cracker hurlers.

In the series before that, against Birmingham, the Barons could bat but .194 against Cracker pitchers. For the season the Barons are batting .209. Score one for the local hurlers.

Against Chattanooga in the last series here the Lookouts were held to an average of .219. This was another verdict for the pitchers.

In the one-game series with Montgomery the Billiken batters were held down to a mark of .217, which was still another victory for the hurlers.

In the series before the pitchers held the Vols to a batting average of .200, compared with .232 for the entire season.

Of course such comparisons are not conclusive. A pitcher may allow only one hit in a game but may walk so many that he loses. Three bases on balls followed by a home run will lose a lot of ball games for a pitcher, even if the rest of his string is shut-out stuff.

* * *

THE batting figures show the Crackers a great scoring machine. They have a higher batting average and have not only made more hits in each game but also an average of more runs to the game than any other club in the league. The Crackers have averaged 4 1357-1596 runs to a game, the Gulls have averaged 4 1215-1594, giving them the worst of it by a trifling matter of 142-1596ths of a run.

One thing that is enabling the Gulls to run away with the league is their advantage in base stealing. They have 127 stolen bases thus far, to the Crackers' 58. Five Southern League clubs lead the Crackers in base stealing, despite the fact that no team in the league puts so many men on first.

Here are the batting figures for the league:

Club Batting.

Birmingham	53	1893	203	396	51	28	11	534	85	61	188	208	.209

In team fielding the Crackers show creditably enough. They are fourth, but only .009 behind Nashville, the leader. Here are the figures:

Nashville	1434	703	80	.965	Memphis	1501	729	110	.953

Frank Fails to Get Two Billiken Players

MEMPHIS, TENN., June 16.—Manager Frank, of New Orleans, will not get players Bagby and Kutina, now the property of the Montgomery club. The controversy between these two clubs came to an end yesterday, when President Kavanaugh of the league ruled that while President Jones, of Montgomery, was guilty of a moral obligation, the evidence at hand did not warrant awarding Frank the players.

Frank did not propose the deal, as was generally supposed. On the other hand, Jones took the initiative. Here are the telegrams on which the league's executive based his decision:

Jones wired Frank:

Will you give Snedecor and $750 for Bagby and Kutina?

Frank came back:

We accept your proposition.

To which Jones returned:

I made an inquiry, not a proposition.

CUTLER AND ROLLER AGREE TO MEET IN RETURN BOUT

DALLAS, TEXAS, June 16.—Dr. Roller, one of the cleverest heavyweight wrestlers in the business, has won a return match with Charlie Cutler, this time a $200 side bet going with the victory. Roller was thrown by Charlie Cutler here Thursday night after he had gained the first fall. He claims he was tricked into the last fall and protested so strongly that Cutler agreed to meet him again, provided a side bet accompanied the match. This Roller immediately consented to, and now the pair are looking for a club to stage the contest. The physician-wrestler believes he can down Charlie in two straight falls and wants another opportunity to demonstrate it.

Seven Batters Are Bunched in Race

The race for batting leadership in the Southern League this year is better than the Southland has known for years. Seven players are bunched, neck and neck, and they swap positions almost daily.

Including Sunday's games in the figuring Long still holds the lead, with D. Robertson a great second and Elberfeld third by an eyelash. In the second division Welchonce, Knisely, Sloan and Wally Smith are right in a heap.

Here are the averages to date:

Player—	A.B.	H.	Pct.
Long	223	80	.358
Robertson	205	72	.351
Elberfeld	195	68	.349
Welchonce	234	77	.329
Knisely	127	41	.323
Sloan	232	75	.323
W. Smith	209	66	.316

NAPS AFTER M'QUILLIAN; OTHER CLUBS PUT IN BID

CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 16.—The Naps are bidding for the services of George McQuillan, the star pitcher of the Columbus Senators, American Association leaders. McQuillan was formerly with the Phillies and, like Cy Falkenberg of the Naps, is a real come-back. The Boston Americans and Cincinnati and Pittsburg Nationals have a bid in for McQuillan.

Stomach Catch is Latest Fad

Maranville Does Not Use Hands

By Charles Dryden.

CHICAGO, June 16.—Among the other special attractions now with the Braves may be mentioned Mr. Maranville, the lilliputian shortstop who catches pop flies in the pit of his stomach with little or no assistance from his hands. Mr. Maranville wears no cuffs or false mustache with which to deceive the eyeball, and he makes these catches while facing the spectators. Should he attempt to make a similar catch while running with the ball it might lead to a crack on the coco unless Mr. M. arrived in time to get the range or angle of the descending pill and back up a step or two. For many years athletes have employed the stomach while traveling from bag to bag, but until the advent of Mr. Maranville we do not remember one who used his bread basket in the manner described.

* * *

JIM LAVENDER is able to explain, out of one side of his mouth, how he happened to stop a line drive with his chin in the battle against the Muscatangs. It was a new pill, white and clean, and the smash traveled in line with a large lady sitting in the grandstand and wearing a white shirtwaist. Lavender did not see the ball until it cracked him on the point of the jaw and dropped at his feet. After throwing the batter out Jim clawed around in the grass and picked up a small white object which he carried to the bench under the impression that it was a tooth. The object was Mr. Lavender's wad of chewing gum, which was jarred from his gills by the impact of the blow on the chin. Sooner or later the world's greatest spitballers meet with disaster. Either they lose their arms, their stuff or their chewing wax. Life is one dodgasted thing after another.

* * *

THROUGH the kindness of Charles Cooper Fraser, formerly of this city, and the courtesy of C. Williams, who carried the clipping from Muscatine, we are able to present in this issue a few epigrams from the Cedar Rapids, Iowa, score card:

Colt Hofer was 19 Saturday. As Colt has the smoke and all other pitching stuff, Pa Hill is excused for robbing the cradle.

All the Rabbits need is a little more pep in yelling. The noise helps with the fighting spirit.

Hyzer was released yesterday because he was minus the guts while at bat.

UMPIRE SWATS MERKLE OVER BEAN WITH MASK

ZANESVILLE, OHIO, June 16.—In an exciting exhibition game here Sunday afternoon between the New York Nationals and the local Interstate League team, the Giants won by the score of 5 to 4, although Umpire Frank Newhouse, of the International League, declared the game forfeited to Zanesville 9 to 0, following his fight with Merkle, of the Giants.

Merkle in the eighth objected to Newhouse's decision on a close play at first and finally made a pass at the umpire. Newhouse hit the New York first baseman over the head with his mask and brought blood from the gash, then ordered him from the game. Merkle refused to go and the umpire then forfeited the game to Zanesville, 9 to 0. Manager Marty Hogan, of the locals, however, ordered the game continued and he himself acted as umpire.

TENNIS TOURNEY DRAWS EXPERTS TO CLUB COURTS

GEORGIA tennis cracks gathered at the Piedmont Driving Club Monday for the first rounds of the ninth annual State tournament, which will continue all the week.

Drawings for the matches were made early in the day and the players settled down to work. Perhaps the best tennis seen in years is expected on the club courts in this tournament.

A three-year trophy is offered for the winner in men's singles. Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, has won it twice and now defends it. A third victory will give him permanent possession. Dr. Karl F. Little also has won it twice, while those who have once held it include G. V. Angier, Jr., Frank T. Payne, Eden T. Taylor and E. V. Carter, Jr.

E. V. Carter, Jr., and E. S. Mansfield, champions in doubles last year, will defend their championship this season.

Frank Reynolds is refereeing the play.

NEW YORK, June 16.—The registration committee of the Metropolitan Association, a branch of the A. A. U., have reinstated Hannes Kolehmainen, who was suspended Thursday for failing to send in a report of his expenses at a meet. The Finnish runner is now in Duluth, Minn.

Colorado Is Bigger than Imagination

The brush of fancy can't paint upon the canvas of the mind as wonderfully as nature's titanic hands have built here in the birth-spot of the mighty Rockies.

But Colorado is a condition as well as a picture. You'll not only see a country different from any under the stars, but you'll be a different human the moment you stand in the shadows of her majestic ranges and bathe your worn and sluggish city-dulled being in the vital, sparkling, clean, clear, sweet air of the great American Highlands.

Rock Island Lines

through sleeping car to Colorado

offers the best service to the Rockies. Electric lighted, fan cooled sleeper through to Colorado Springs, Denver and Pueblo, via Memphis and Kansas City. Dining car service all the way.

The Colorado Flyer from St. Louis and the Rocky Mountain Limited from Chicago, one night on the road trains—offer splendid service for those desiring to go by St. Louis or Chicago.

If you can afford to go anywhere, you can afford a Colorado vacation

Board and room $7 per week up.

Hundreds of good hotels and boarding houses offer good board for as low as $7 per week, and rooms at $3 per week.

DANGER SEEN IN $500,000,000 NOTE ISSUE

Forbes Says McAdoo's Readiness to Give Out Paper Is Invitation to Credit Jamboree

By B. C. FORBES.

To flood the country with half a billion emergency bank notes at this time would drive gold to Europe, would gravely aggravate credit inflation here and render our last state worse than our first. We have already in circulation the largest volume of bank notes ever put out.

* * *

We don't need more, but less credit, less borrowing.

* * *

Secretary McAdoo's unexpected announcement that he stands ready to issue $500,000,000 Aldrich notes is a direct invitation to go on a jamboree. New York bankers—who, after all, do know something about banking—have been striving with might and main for months to curtail the credit expansion that has gone to perilous lengths throughout the country. They have, moreover, practiced what they have been preaching: loans here have been rigidly discouraged, speculators have been obliged to stop their antics and liquid resources have been zealously accumulated in preparation for autumnal needs.

* * *

But country banks have gone on their way merrily, lending to all and sundry. The expansion in national bank loans alone has been at the rate of $1,000,000 every business day for the last twelve months—without one cent addition to cash on hand to justify this inflation.

* * *

Bank notes are not capital.

* * *

The scarcity is a scarcity of capital, not currency. Newly blossomed "experts" on national finance would do well to insert that fact into their noodles and keep it there in a prominent place. More nonsense is being written and spoken about financial subjects by men in prominent positions than at any time since William Jennings Bryan championed his famous "sixteen-to-one."

* * *

Washington can not create capital by opening currency flood-gates. Capital can come into being only through the people spending less than they earn—that is, by saving. The urgent need to-day is for less borrowing, not for more borrowing, a la Secretary McAdoo's latest proposal.

* * *

Let the Wilson administration be assured that the more bank notes they pump into circulation at this time, the easier will it be for Europe to take gold from us. We have exported $60,000,000 gold within the last five months and the chances are that more will go within the next fortnight. Europe is hungry for gold, the medium that speaks all languages and can do duty in any land. She will leave us our emergency currency and take our yellow metal.

* * *

To the novitiate the prospect of releasing $500,000,000 additional currency is most inspiring. It intoxicates. But those who can see below the surface, those who can diagnose the difference between bank notes and actual wealth, shrink from contemplating the outcome of any wholesale issuance of emergency notes at this juncture. Borrowers should pull in sail between now and the crop-moving season. They should not rush deeper into debt.

* * *

The Treasury Department should not dissipate resources at this time. It should fortify itself against the abnormal demands that the marketing of bumper crops can not fail to entail. In non-panic, but ominous times, all banking institutions should curtail credits. It is only when a crisis is imminent that a policy of granting generous and prompt assistance should be adopted and courageously followed.

* * *

It is a pity that the Treasury Department has elected to hold itself aloof from the best banking minds in the country and go blindly ahead.

Shuptine Leads for Seat From Chatham

SAVANNAH, June 16.—Early indications are that Herman C. Shuptine will go to the Legislature as the Representative from Chatham County to succeed Pleasant A. Stovall, resigned. The morning vote was fairly heavy. J. J. Bauhan, the other candidate, is running a close second.

Shuptine is the administration candidate.

Count Goes to Work In New York Bank

NEW YORK, June 16.—Count Adolf VonBernstorff, son of the German Ambassador in Washington, is working in the banking firm of Speyer & Co. in Pine Street. He is studying finance in preparation for a diplomatic career.

ALLIANCE, OHIO, June 16.—Ten men were injured, four fatally, in a mine blast explosion near Piney Fork this morning, caused by the short circuiting of an electric wire which ignited a keg of powder.

COTTON

NEW YORK, June 16.—Firm cables and a good demand from spot people caused the cotton market to open steady to-day, first prices being 1 to 8 points higher than Saturday's final. After the call the list continued steady. The ring crowd, however, inclined to sell on favorable weather developments over Sunday, and Washington promises fair and warm weather during the coming week. Beneficial rains fell in South Texas Sunday, resulting in most active positions, except August, dropping 1 to 5 points from the initial levels.

During the forenoon a wave of heavy short covering dominated the market, which encouraged a good speculative demand. This class of buying was based on The New Orleans Times-Democrat report on the condition of the crop, the report being construed as bullish, which had a stimulating effect on the market. Offerings were eliminated considerably and prices made a rapid advance of 11 to 16 points over the previous close. July and August were in active demand, but the new crop positions were in the best demand and showed the greatest gain.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New Orleans: July 12.10, August 12.01, October 11.47, January 11.41.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, June 16.—Weather conditions and changes over Sunday were distinctly favorable. Dry weather prevailed over most of the belt. The only precipitation of consequence occurred in South Texas, where it was needed. Minimum temperatures are 10 to 20 degrees higher than on Friday and are now entirely normal. Indications are for continuation for generally fair and warm weather, except in the coast districts of Louisiana and Texas, where it will be cloudy and possibly showery.

The Memphis Commercial-Appeal summary for the week is very favorable. Other crop reports are mostly favorable.

The Liverpool market was about as due in covering, spot sales continue large, 16,000 bales to-day, at 2 points higher. Our market showed strength this morning and advanced to 12.06 for August and 11.58 for October, principally owing to the renewed strength and activity of July in New York. The weekly weather report to-morrow is expected to be bullish, as it covers the spell of last week. New York says that the strained conditions in July dominate the market and a decline in new crops does not seem probable until the summer positions are liquidated.

New York continued strong on bullish reports on both crops. Our market likewise held the advance well on small buying as selling is intimidated.

LIVERPOOL COTTON MARKET.

LIVERPOOL, June 16.—This market was due to open 1½ points higher on August and ½ point higher on other positions, but opened quiet, at a net advance of 1 to 1½ points. At 12:15 p. m., the market was quiet but steady, at a net advance of 1½ to 2 points.

Spot cotton steady and in good demand at 2 points advance; middling 6.75d; sales, 10,000 bales, including 9,500 American; imports 15,000 bales, of which all were American.

At the close the market was firm with prices showing a net gain of 4½@7½ points from the final quotations of Saturday.

Futures opened quiet.

MILLER-COTTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, June 16.—New York seems inclined to work more to the bull side to-day, and, selling being scarce, no great volume of demand has been necessary to bring an advance. Weather over Sunday was ideal and crop accounts are good, but strength in summer months and fair demand in spot markets influences sentiment strongly. It is impossible to tell how far this swing will go, but short interest has been greatly reduced.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS.

Logan & Bryan: "We still incline to the buying side on recessions from this level."

Miller & Co.: "We look for higher prices."

Browning & Co.: "We look for comparatively narrow fluctuations and advise purchases on setbacks for moderate profits."

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 16.—The market opened steady. The ring crowd was inclined to sell. The market, however, held steady after a sharp decline from the opening. The Times-Democrat crop report was construed as bullish, causing heavy buying.

* * *

Heavy short covering dominated the market after the call; also speculative buying. Spot people purchased July, causing the advance.

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, June 16.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map is very good; shows fair and warm over the entire belt, except partly cloudy in southwestern quarter; no rain except few sprinkles in Central Texas and some good rains in South Texas where needed; night temperatures 10 to 20 degrees warmer than Friday and some entirely normal.

Washington forecast for week: "Warm and generally fair weather greater part of coming week in Southern States, though local thundershowers probable along immediate Gulf and South Atlantic coast."

The map continues to indicate generally fair and warm weather, except possibly few showers in South Texas.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat herewith presents its correspondents' first report on the cotton crop of 1912. The consensus of opinion points to the following results:

1. The increase of acreage is slight—probably about 3 per cent at the most.

2. The general condition is fairly favorable, but many sections complain of poor stands caused by unseasonably low temperatures.

3. Labor is said to be scarce in some districts in consequence of migration to towns and public works.

4. Taking the belt as a whole, the crop is an exceedingly spotted one, and the weather of the next month will be extremely important.

5. There is a good deal of talk of boll weevil, but it is too soon to form an idea of the probable damage.

STOCKS

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Instead of following the lead of Americans in London, the stock market turned weak at the opening here to-day and declines were general throughout the list. Some stocks which started with advances were caught in the movement and lost part or all of their gain.

Canadian Pacific dropped 1⅝. United States Steel common began at 54¼ for a gain of ⅛, but soon lost its advance and sustained a net decline of ⅝. Pressure was directed against Union Pacific, this issue losing a full point. New York, New Haven and Hartford again broke to par, selling at 199 for the loss of 1 point. Amalgamated Copper lost its fractional advance and shaded.

American Smelting was up ⅜ at the outset, but within half an hour was selling ⅛ under Saturday's final.

Among the other losses were Reading ⅝, Pennsylvania ¼, Northern Pacific ½, Missouri Pacific ⅝, Lehigh Valley ⅝, Great Northern preferred ½ and Atchison ⅛.

Gains were made by Utah Copper, New York Central, American Car and Foundry and American Can.

Goldfield Consolidated, which closed Saturday at 1⅝, was stricken from the list of stock exchange securities to-day.

The curb was steady.

Americans in London were strong. Canadian Pacific in London was irregular.

After a few minutes of active trading the market began to waver and fractional losses were recovered in several of the leading issues. Union Pacific suffered the most, falling 1¼ to 145¼. Steel was off ⅝ from the opening. Copper and Pennsylvania were off ¼. Canadian Pacific continued its downward movement, reaching 218, a fall of 1¾.

Southern Pacific was off 1¼. Other issues suffered slight losses.

Call money loaned at 1¾.

GRAIN

CHICAGO, June 16.—Wheat averaged higher during the morning, July being ⅛c above the resting spots of Saturday. September ⅝c higher and December ⅞ better. Sentiment was still bullish, although heavy rains have visited many sections of the Northwest since the close of Saturday. Receipts at Duluth and Minneapolis were double those of a year ago. The Liverpool market was unsettled with the situation bearish, however, on the favorable conditions in Russia.

Corn was up ⅞c and strong, July selling at 61⅞@62½; September at 62½@63½ and December at 60⅝@61c.

Unfavorable crop reports were in the influences not only in corn, but in oats as well.

Hog products were unsettled, pork higher while lard and ribs were lower. Hogs at the yards 5c lower.

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 16.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.:

Wheat—Since Saturday weather has been fairly good in many portions of North Dakota and it is raining at several points in that State this morning. Look for a nervous market and the fact that some precipitation has occurred in the spring wheat country is apt to give it a little tendency.

Corn—Bullish sentiment is rampant, chiefly on dry conditions, but we doubt very much if any severe damage to growing crop has taken place up to the present time owing to lack of moisture.

Oats—The lack of rain, in our opinion, has a much more important bearing on the condition of this crop than on corn, especially as temperatures are so high. Reports continue to show lack of color and short growth

Wilson Girls to Keep House for President

WASHINGTON, June 16.—During the summer Miss Margaret Wilson, eldest daughter of the President, and her sisters will take turns in keeping house for their father, marooned at the White House by the tariff and currency bills.

Miss Margaret has left for a series of visits in the Middle West. She will be first the guest of Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, in Madison, Wis., and will spend several weeks with other friends before joining her mother at their summer home in Cornish, N. H., and sending the second sister to "take care of papa."

'Antis' Say Suffrage Reduces Birth Rate

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Prize-winning anti-suffragist essays received at haedquarters here claim the birth rate in America is falling off because of suffrage activities.

One wrote:

"A suffragist approaches motherhood a bankrupt. Too often her marriage is barren or her offspring is defective in mind or body."

Good Progress Made By the Cotton Crop

MEMPHIS, June 16.—Reports from the Cotton Exchange to-day shows the cotton crop throughout the South to be generally good. Recent heavy rains have produced new strength in the plant, and the fields are clean of weeds. Labor is plentiful, and, as the planters are forced to meet fewer claims than usual, they will make more money than they have in many years.

The acreage in corn throughout Tennessee, Mississippi and Arkansas has greatly increased, and while more cotton is planted, the report says farmers have utilized thousands of acres of waste lands.

DRY GOODS REVIEW.

Marshall Field & Company, in their weekly review of the dry goods trade, say:

"Total sales in dry goods show a gain for the first two weeks in June in comparison with those of the corresponding period of a year ago. This is true both of our wholesale and retail. Current business through the mails and from the men on the road has kept up remarkably well following the preinventory sale and in view of the low temperature during the early part of the week. Collections continue better than normal.

"Orders manifest much interest in lines that are being shown for fall delivery, especially silks and women's ready-to-wear garments.

"Our representatives traveling through the Southeastern States report very favorable crop prospects and good business is coming from that section.

"Much enthusiasm is apparent among merchants of the Pacific Coast and Rocky Mountain States in consequence of good immediate retail business and the excellent outlook for abundant crops."

CREMATORY PUT UP TO COUNCIL BY MAYOR

Neither Approves Nor Disapproves Resolution Calling for Option on Electric Feature.

In notifying Council of his approval of the June budget and the purchase of the $260,000 crematory, Mayor Woodward Monday "washed his hands" of that part of the old crematory contract providing a $100,000 electric power plant in connection with the incinerator.

The Mayor notified Council he would take no action whatever on the resolution of Alderman Nutting and Councilman Mason calling for an option from the Destructor Company on the electric feature. Because he took no action the resolution automatically goes into effect.

May[illegible] Woodward's special message r[illegible]

"I[illegible] the accompanying three resolu[illegible]assed at your session of June 2, [illegible]without my signature of approval[illegible]approval.

"The whole subject matter contained in all three of the resolutions can be carried out by the framing of a contract with the Destructor Company incorporating the different matters contained in the resolutions.

"By careful reading of the different resolutions it will be noted that your honorable body has repeatedly mentioned the contract entered into in 1912, which the Supreme Court of this State has decided illegal and void and ordered an injunction against the further carrying on of the Destructor plant under the provisions of that contract. Under that condition of things, I feel that I am enjoined against any measure that may be looking to the fulfillment of that contract. All of the provisions specified in the different resolutions can be placed in a new contract to be entered into by your general body.

"In returning these papers to the General Council in this manner, I hope that my position is fully understood. While I do not believe that the city has received full benefit from this transaction, yet I do not feel disposed to interfere further if the new contract is so constructed as to give the city the benefit of all of the concessions enumerated."

Robs Partner; Gives Up to Pay Penalty

RICHMOND, June 16.—Conscious-stricken because he had stolen $100 from Dan Bennett, his partner in the fruit business in Waycross, Ga., A. L. Christian, aged 35, gave himself up to the police here. In police court to-day his case was continued until June 21, pending receipt of information from the Georgia authorities.

Christian says he wants to go back to Waycross and serve his time, so that he can continue to make that place his home. He left Waycross a month ago.

SIMPLE RITES AT FUNERAL OF MRS. BRYAN

Many Mourn Death of Woman Writer—Was One of Highest Paid in United States.

Simplicity will mark the funeral of Mrs. Mary E. Bryan, one of the South's leading women writers who died Sunday night at her home in Clarkston, Ga. Many prominent persons, however, will be present to pay their last respects to the pioneer authoress.

Mrs. Bryan's prolific pen has touched the hearts of Southern people for the past half century. Besides contributing to many magazines, she also published 47 books.

Financially her work met with great success. Shortly before her death, Mrs. Bryan's held the position of editor of The Fireside Companion, in which position she is said to have received a salary of $25,000 a year, probably one of the highest ever paid to a woman in the United States.

Mrs. Bryan first gained recognition in the literary world when her work appeared in Scott's Magazine, which was published shortly after the Civil War. Later she went with The Sunny South for which periodicals she wrote for twelve years. When this magazine was taken over by Uncle Remus' Magazine, Mrs. Bryan became editor of a department in the latter. It was during her connection with the Uncle Remus periodical that Mrs. Bryan's most appealing work was accomplished.

Through her magazine articles and poetry she won the hearts of the legions of her readers. Rapidly she arose to national prominence. Her novels and books of the Southland have found themselves into the libraries of every city of the world.

The Georgian publishes herewith Mrs. Bryan's latest poem, entitled "Paestum," which appeared in the October, 1912, issue of Uncle Remus's Magazine:

"If you could come to-night
Across the snowy fields about your home,
Across the ocean white with wintry foam—
Here where the grass is sweet,
Where warm sea-pulses beat,
And classic marbles melt in soft moonlight,
It might not seem so strange, dear love, that I
Should wait on this far shore for Fate's reply
To the scarce-hoping question—"Live or die?"

"Here all is dead—long dead—
Deep under earth-waves frothed with foam of flowers,
Here lines of massive tombs, broken and reft
Of treasures rare—the imperial ashes left
To blow on sands and in each rocky cleft.
Here girdling walls, protective once of harms,
Long lying, vast, like some dead Titan's arms.

"But beauty lingers—Beauty has been spared;
Beauty so rare the centuries have not dared
To mar it. Marvelous as a dream.
Wrought of the ivory of the moon's soft beam
The Temples rise; Earth has naught else so fair.
Majestic and yet light as clouds on air.
When built? By whom? What matters, they are here
And seem eternal as yon star's clear sphere.

"But cold and still and dead!
And back with you are throbbing life and love,
And clinging arms and lips that fond words move,
And wild, fierce hold on life when hope has fled.
It would be harder there to lay my head
On the low pillow Mother Earth has spread.
'Tis best, then, that this land of mystery,
And calm and silence shall my refuge be.
We shall not be apart; Death will unite
To the freed soul 'twere but an instant's flight
From this old land of mystery and blight to you and light."

Mrs. Bryan is survived by her three children, Mrs. Pearl Byrd, of Clarkston; Mrs. C. A. Wilson, of St. Louis, and Fred Bryan, of Clarkston.

OBITUARY.

J. J. Kaesser, 46 years old, died at his home, 32 West Peachtree Place, at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. He was a lieutenant of Fire Company No. 3, and had been a member of the department 16 years. Surviving him are Mrs. Kaesser and a son, W. G. Kaesser. Funeral at 3:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at Barclay & Brandon's funeral chapel, corner of Ivy and Baker Streets.

Mrs. S. T. Watkins, aged forty-four, died at a private sanitarium Sunday night. She was the wife of S. T. Watkins, of 24 Norcross Street, a Southern Railway engineer. Besides her husband, Mrs. Watkins is survived by four sons, K. E., E. O., H. H. and S. T. Watkins, Jr., and one daughter, Mrs. W. E. Wadden, of Selma, Ala. The body was removed to the chapel of Barclay & Brandon and prepared for shipment to Keysville, Va., for funeral and interment.

The funeral of Lieutenant J. J. Kaesser, who died at a private sanitarium Sunday afternoon, will be held from the chapel of Barclay & Brandon Tuesday afternoon. Lieutenant Kaesser was one of the best-liked men in the Fire Department, and had been with the department for over 18 years. He was promoted to the lieutenancy of Engine House No. 3 some time ago. He is survived by his wife and one son, W. G. Kaesser.

Robert Hobbs, 57 years old, died at his residence in Adamsville at 8 o'clock Sunday morning. He is survived by a wife and four children. The funeral will be from the chapel of Harry G. Poole's funeral home at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon, and the interment at the family burying ground at Adamsville.

Mrs. S. T. Watkins, 44 years old, of 84 Norcross Street, died at a private sanitarium at 9:30 o'clock Sunday night. The body was taken to-day to Keysville, Va. Mrs. Watkins is survived by her husband, Sam T. Watkins; four sons, Kirby J., Elmer O., Sam T., Jr., and Howard H. Watkins, and one daughter, Mrs. W. E. Madden, of Selma, Ala.

M. D. Campbell, sixty-four years old, died at the residence, 9 Jennings Street, at 3 o'clock Sunday morning. He is survived by two sons, T. M. and J. F. Campbell, and four daughters, Mrs. H. K. Gordon, Mrs. G. H. Perry, Mrs. John Dixon and Miss Jessie Campbell. Funeral from the chapel of P. J. Bloomfield at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon. Interment at Greenwood.

Mrs. Sarah A. Martin, 44 years old, died at her home in Buckhead at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon. She is survived by her husband, H. T. Martin. Funeral at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon from Barclay & Brandon's undertaking parlors. Interment at Atlanta Heights.

John H. Carr, the 8-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Carr, of 315 West Third Street, died at the residence at 6 o'clock Sunday evening. Funeral services were held from the chapel of Harry G. Poole at 9:30 Monday morning. Interment at Sandy Springs.

Mrs. Annie McWilliams, 50 years old, died at the residence, 59 Robbins Street, at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Besides her husband, W. M. McWilliams, she is survived by two children, Mrs. Lela Sanders and W. O. McWilliams. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Suicide's Last Wish Is That Flowers Be Put Upon His Grave

"Take good care of the baby and put a few flowers on my grave."

M. Roy Fowler, 125 Hunnicutt Street, fell unconscious at his wife's feet Sunday afternoon with these words on his lips. Fowler had just swallowed a bottle of carbolic acid. He died a few minutes later in an ambulance going to Grady Hospital.

Fowler ran a butcher shop on East Hunter Street. Financial troubles, it is believed, caused him to end his life. He was an Odd Fellow and a Red Man and a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. He was 46 years old. Surviving are Mrs. Fowler and the baby, three brothers, J. L. Fowler, W. A. Fowler and T. A. Fowler, and two sisters, Miss Nan Fowler and Mrs. L. A. Hudson.

The body will be taken at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday morning to Indian Creek Cemetery for burial.

Steers Car Into Pole To Avert Collision

Paul H. Norcross, wife and child narrowly escaped serious injury Sunday afternoon, when, to avoid collision, Mr. Norcross was forced to swerve his automobile into a telephone pole at the corner of Highland and Ponce DeLeon Avenues. None of the party was injured. The car was badly damaged, and the pole was cut in half.

Mr. Norcross was driving down Ponce DeLeon Avenue early in the afternoon. At the junction of Highland Avenue he saw an automobile going in the same direction as a street car. The automobile was obscured until Mr. Norcross' machine was almost even with the trolley.

Cardinal Not Insane; Ill of Neurasthenia

ROME, June 16.—Cardinal Vives y Tuto, prefect of the congregation for religious effairs, who, according to certain reports, had become insane, is suffering only from neurasthenia, and by the advice of physicians has retired to a monastery at Frascati, near Rome.

Cardinal Vive y Tuto acquired a very prominent position at the Vatican after the election of Pope Pius X, and has even been considered as a probable candidate for the succession.

Angered Woman Sues Pastor for $25,000

PORTLAND, June 16.—Because she objected to being called "an obstreperous person, a mischief-maker and a nuisance," Mrs. A. E. Clark, wife of a prominent attorney, filed a suit for $25,000 against Rev. A. A. Morrison, pastor of Trinity Episcopal Church of this city.

Her attorney says the trouble grew out of Mrs. Clark's insistence on having women members of the fashionable church on the governing board of that congregation.

Uncle Sam Conducts 'Movies' for Toilers

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Through the award of contracts for several thousand feet of motion picture films it has just become known that the United States Government is engaged in the moving picture business on a big scale.

The enterprise is carried on by the reclamation service camps in the West to keep the workmen and their families, isolated from the world, contented and happy.

Militants Must Pay For Broken Windows

LONDON, June 16.—A judgment for $7,000 damages for window smashing was awarded to-day in the King's bench division against a number of leaders of militant suffragettes in favor of 93 westend merchants whose property suffered in suffrage raids.

Among the defendants in the case were Mr. and Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst and Mrs. Flora Drummond.

SOCIAL SURVEY WILL FOLLOW DIAGNOSIS

Russell Sage Workers Here Describe Preliminary Study of Conditions Found.

Shelby M. Harrison, director in the department of surveys and exhibits of the Russell Sage Foundation, in an interview with The Georgian Monday outlined the work he and his two associates are doing in Atlanta by invitation of a Chamber of Commerce committee.

"We are making a preliminary diagnosis and pathfinder's survey," he said, "and in our report to the committee we will make certain specific recommendations which probably will lead to a social survey. We are not making the social survey now."

Mr. Harrison and his two associates, Franz Schneider, Jr., and Zenas L. Potter, are doctors of the body politic. They emphasize the fact they are not fault-finders. They go to a city, study sociological conditions from an entirely disinterested and unbiased angle and make a report. If the report makes the city or members of the city's sociological organizations see themselves as others see them, then they have accomplished their purpose. It is up to the city, then, to improve condtions and make the place a little better to live in.

"All Cities Have Problems."

"The last 25 years have brought many changes in social and personal relationships," Mr. Harrison said, outlining the basic principles behind the Sage foundation. "As cities grow, and factories come in, conditions change. The factories bring immigrants, and that brings new conditions. The entrance of women into industry and new methods of production all change conditions. I am just citing these as examples. Every advance and progress brings on changed conditions.

"Every change means a new problem. These problems are sociological. It is our business to diagnose these problems and make specific recommendations. In Atlanta we shall make detailed recommendations which may involve a social survey. The survey will point out the exact problems the city has to solve, and offer further suggestions and such help as may be desirable or desired. Then the credit for solving them will go to your local civic organizations, for it is they who must lead in the actual work."

For a week, now, Messrs. Harrison, Schneider and Potter have studied housing and living conditions in Atlanta; recreation, problems of education and of poverty, and the sanitary and penal systems. Mr. Harrison will go to New York to-morrow. Messrs. Schneider and Potter will continue the investigations through the week. They will leave the city with their data, and after a few weeks submit their findings, together with recommendations.

Will Suggest Improvement.

"Of course, I can't reveal the nature of this report in advance," Mr. Harrison said. "But I will say this much. We will be specific in recommending things to be taken in the survey. On a few subjects we will be able to outline suggestions for immediate improvement."

The spirit in which the Sage investigators enter upon their work was described by Mr. Harrison as follows: "Our attitude is thoroughly sympathetic with local agencies. We are not coming in Atlanta as iconoclasts trying to break down what you are doing. As distinterested parties, we naturally are capable of making detached observations. Then the social survey, as it always does, will bring together the instrumentalities for solving such problems as you may have. The social survey applies scientific methods to the solution of modern community problems.

"Such diagnoses as we are making and such social surveys as will probably follow in Atlanta are designed to stimulate a healthy public opinion. The object is to solve the city's social problems rather than to palliate them."

During the last year the Sage Foundation has received requests for diagnoses and surveys from 100 cities, most of them in the East and Middle West. Atlanta is the first Southern city to call for the preliminary pathfinder's survey.

"We felt the survey was a very progressive move on the part of your Chamber of Commerce," Mr. Harrison said. "Your Chamber of Commerce members are up on their toes, doing everything possible to make the city even more desirable to live in and a better commercial center. There are not a lot of chambers of commerce in the country, you know, that have seen it is a good thing to improve the place they live in, although this is the fundamental thing in making the city a good commercial center."

New Trial Granted Man Sentenced to Life Imprisonment

A new trial was granted by the Supreme Court Monday morning to Warren Clements, given a life sentence for killing E. J. Griffin in Lowndes County. The Supreme Court held that the trial judge erred in making his charge.

Clements and several other men were on an automobile trip with Griffin when the killing took place. Clements fired a pistol and Griffin charged him with shooting at the automobile. This was denied and a quarrel resulted. Evidence in the case showed that the two men had stood at opposite ends of the automobile and shot at each other. Griffin received a wound from which he died later.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Concerns Formed For Development

Two Corporations With $350,000 Capital Seek Charters—Mrs. Akin and Others File Petitions.

Two large private companies have been formed for the development of local real estate. Mrs. John W. Akin, Winter Alfriend and V. A. Batchelor have petitioned the Superior Court for a charter to do business under the name of the Capital City Investments Company, and E. W. Alfriend, Mrs. Akin and Mr. Batchelor are seeking the name of the Georgia Investment Corporation. The former will start with $100,000 capital and carry the right to increase to $300,000, and the latter will be capitalized at $250,000, with the privilege of increasing to $500,000. Batchelor & Cheatham filed the petitions as attorneys. The Alfriends and Mrs. Akin are already in several big development enterprises.

Permit for $6,000 Home.

Building Inspector Ed R. Hays has issued a building permit to Mrs. W. B. Crouch to erect a $6,000 home at 479 St. Charles Avenue. This will be two stories and brick veneer.

Interest in Tax Question.

The proposal of Alderman John S. Candler that the tax assessments on Atlanta real estate should be lowered and the rate raised, to provide for an equalization that has long been needed, is in direct line with the contention of local real estate men. Some time ago, when Alderman John E. McClelland suggested that assessments be raised, the real estate men passed a resolution protesting against the move. They contended that the rate and, not the assessment, should be raised, and that this would incidentally establish a better proportion between what Fulton County paid the State and the total amount paid by all the counties. It has been estimated that Fulton pays, from all sources except corporation and special taxes, one-seventh of the State's tax revenue, which is held to be entirely too much. The real estate men consider the tax question a serious one, and they are greatly interested in Alderman Candler's plan.

Effect of Boulevard.

People owning property along the Marietta Road have learned with more than ordinary interest of the plan to build an automobile boulevard from Atlanta to Murphy, N. C., since this improvement would be a great help to the property in the section affected. Farmers got out pads and pencils Monday and tried to figure exactly how the road ought to run. There is a great deal of undeveloped territory in the northern section of the State, and the advocates of the plan for the highway claim that a good road will send property values much higher.

Income Tax Opposition.

Concerted opposition to the Federal income tax measure as it relates to real estate and rents has sprung up from another source. The National Association of Real Estate Exchanges has gone on record as opposing certain features of the bill. In its present form the bill has passed Congress and is now to be voted by the Senate. It appears that the real estate interests were slow in detecting objectionable features, since the bill had got fairly on its way before much definite action was taken. Members of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, it will be recalled, met recently and voted to protest the clause relating to the payment of taxes out of tenant fees, instead of from the landlords.

DORSEY AIDE SAYS FRANK IS FAST IN NET

Attorney Hooper Declares State Is Prepared for Any Move the Defense May Make.

Frank A. Hooper, the well-known criminal lawyer who has been engaged to assist Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey in the trial of Leo M. Frank for the alleged murder of Mary Phagan, said Monday that the case was complete and was ready for presentation in court at any time.

Mr. Hooper asserted that the attorneys interested in the prosecution had investigated every angle of the mystery so thoroughly and fortified themselves against any defense that Frank will present, that practically nothing remained to be done until the case was called for trial. The departure of Solicitor Dorsey for a week's vacation, he said, was an indication of the preparedness of the prosecution.

No new developments are expected by the prosecution, according to Mr. Hooper. All of the stories and rumors have been run down to their original source. The defense, in his opinion, will be able to spring no surprise that has not been anticipated by the prosecution.

Mrs. Frank Gives Interview.

The American printed Sunday an exclusive interview with Mrs. Frank, whose husband, Leo M. Frank, is under indictment charged with the murder of 14-year-old Mary Phagan. It was the first time that Mrs. Frank had permitted herself to be interviewed since the Coroner's jury a month ago recommended that the Grand Jury hold her husband for trial.

She broke her silence to tell the thousands who have been gripped by the remarkable murder mystery just why she is absolutely confident and positive that Frank could not have been the author of the terrible deed. She made no plea for sympathy, but expressed herself as fully reconciled to the processes of the law, even though they temporarily caused her the greatest sorrow and kept her husband behind the cars as a man suspected of one of the most brutal crimes thinkable. The loyal wife said that she was able to bear the present belief because of the assurance of Frank's ultimate and complete vindication.

Why She Believes Husband.

On the fact that she believes from her life with the suspected slayer that any gross or immoral act is utterly apart from his nature, she bases much of her belief in his entire innocence.

She said, in part:

"In all the year and a half of our engagement, in the happy knowledge and consent of both our parents, I was Leo's 'best girl' and he was my one and only beau. If I went to a party, it was conceded that I should go with Leo, and if Leo went, he invariably went with me. You know, the people of my faith do those things in that way—with us, betrothal is all but as sacred as marriage itself.

"Leo Frank and myself have been man and wife for two years and a half. I state it as a circumstance showing how sweet and mutually happy our home life has been, and not as a thing I should mention ordinarily, that during all the two and a half years of our wedded life not once has Leo been away from me at night, save when once a month he attended the meetings of the Jewish Order of B'nai Brith, of which he was the president in Atlanta until he was arrested.

He Preferred Staying Home.

"He might have gone out in the evenings, perhaps without my knowledge, to places he should not have gone, so far as my free consent may have figured as a factor in his going. I merely cite it as a truthful circumstance that he has not elected to go. He seemed rather to prefer staying home with me. Naturally, that made me very happy—for I am, after all, a woman, like other women, and a woman never gets to the point where

Suicide's Last Wish Is That Flowers Be Put Upon His Grave

"Take good care of the baby and put a few flowers on my grave."

M. Roy Fowler, 125 Hunnicutt Street, fell unconscious at his wife's feet Sunday afternoon with these words on his lips. Fowler had just swallowed a bottle of carbolic acid. He died a few minutes later in an ambulance going to Grady Hospital.

Fowler ran a butcher shop on East Hunter Street. Financial troubles, it is believed, caused him to end his life. He was an Odd Fellow and a Red Man and a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. He was 46 years old. Surviving are Mrs. Fowler and the baby, three brothers, J. L. Fowler, W. A. Fowler and T. A. Fowler, and two sisters, Miss Nan Fowler and Mrs. L. A. Hudson.

The body will be taken at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday morning to Indian Creek Cemetery for burial.

Marshall Sees Rules For Life in Baseball

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The rising generation was directed to form its rules of life upon the rules of baseball by Vice President Marshall in a children's day address before the Bethany Chapel Prebyterian Sunday school.

"No boy is so mean as the boy who will not play the game square," said the Vice President. "The sense of justice is ever present in the heart and mind of every boy and girl. I never have seen a thoroughly bad girl, but I believe I have seen one or two boys who were really bad."

Slays Man for $6 And Share in Still

GAINESVILLE, June 16.—Bartow Cantrell, in jail, has confessed to the murder of Arthur Hawkins, near Bellton, Hall County, two weeks ago. He claimed that his brother, James Cantrell, offered him $6 and a half interest in his still to slay Hawkins.

Mrs. Silvey Hawkins, wife of the murdered man, is in jail with her 18-month-old baby.

PRESIDENT IN PERSON TO SPUR HOUSE

Wilson Will Read Message Urging His 'Hobbleless' Currency Reform Bill.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—President Wilson will read his currency message to Congress in person, it was announced at the White House prior to the newspaper conference at which the President discussed the bill at length with the Washington correspondents.

The President believes that his plan of personally placing before the national Legislature the views on important topics, such as currency and the tariff, insures greater attention and more marked interest from the country at large than did the former custom of sending messages to Congress and having them read by a clerk.

General Principles Are His.

Therefore, as soon as the currency bill is completed and ready for presentation (probably about Friday of this week), the President will go to the Capitol and present his views on the necessary financial reform to the assembled members of the House.

In the conference to-day the President said that the complete currency measure will be "no one-man bill;" that the general principles of the measures will be his, but that the details and working out of the principles have been left in the hands of Senator Owen, of Oklahoma; Representative Glass, of Virginia, and Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo; that there will be but one bill presented to Congress, and that the stamp of Presidential approval will be on that one.

No Hobble Skirt Bill.

The President concluded his discussion of the proposed legislation by saying that "the principle must be judged by the clothes it wears—and they certainly will not be of the hobble skirt variety."

The President declined to discuss any of the details of the bill, saying they had not all been decided on finally.

Man Running for Train Is Hit by an Engine; Dies in Hour

Carl Brown, 23 years old, of Stone Mountain, was struck by a switch engine of the Georgia Railroad early Monday morning and received injuries from which he died an hour later. He attempted to board a moving passenger train in the Atlanta yards.

C. B. Bishop, of Scottdale, Brown's companion, had boarded the train and turned on the coach steps to call to his friend.

Brown, running across the yards in the darkness, failed to see the approaching switch engine. He was struck by the engine's cowcatcher and hurled fifteen feet. He was picked up unconscious and hurried to the Elkin-Goldsmith Sanitarium.

Brown and Bishop had been in Atlanta visiting young ladies. They overstayed their time and had tried to make a short cut to the train.

Slim Figure, Birds In Cages, Paris Fads

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, June 16.—The slim figure for women was in its ascendency at Chantilly race course yesterday and among the other things noted in the great fashionable parade were diaphanous waists, small hats, canes for women, golden shoe buckles, anklets with watches set thereon, embroidered skirts and coiffures more appropriate for grand opera than outdoor gatherings.

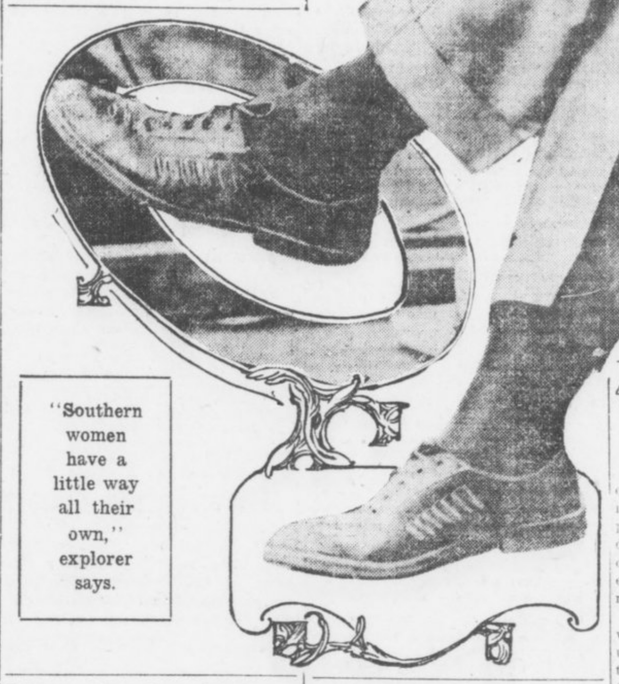
Two women carried canaries in gold cages. There will be another fashionable race meet at Auteuil next week, when further decrees of fashion are expected.

Atlanta Girls Dazzle Dr. Cook

Prettiest Maids He Ever Saw

On Tour to Establish 'Rights'

Dr. Frederick A. Cook, who stopped to stare at Peachtree belles.



"Southern women have a little way all their own," explorer says.

Explorer Pauses on Lecture Tour to See Atlanta.

Dr. Frederick A. Cook, of polar fame, was in Atlanta Monday, and—listen, girls—he's head over heels in love with you already, for he says so himself.

"They've simply got me," was the way the Doctor put it when seen in his room at the Hotel Aragon Monday morning.

In fact, Dr. Cook says he's fallen in love with all the Southern girls because they're so charming—and the Doctor is by no means a bad authority, for he is making a considerable tour of the Southland in the interest of what he terms a "fair play campaign" to show he discovered as much North Pole as Admiral Peary ever did.

"Southern women," said Dr. Cook, "have a little way all their own—I can't explain it, nor can I express it adequately—but it's true just the same. In other words, they form a type of woman that you don't find anywhere else on the earth.

"Atlanta is certainly no exception to his rule—in fact, I think they look even better here than elsewhere. They simply get a fellow—that's all."

The Doc Likes Atlanta.

The Doctor, who was all smiles Monday morning, did not confine his compliments to Atlanta women, however. He took occasion also to say a good word for the Capital City, which he made headquarters Monday en route to Madison, Ga., where he will deliver a lecture Monday night.

Atlanta, he says, looks good to him—looks better than any Southern city he has seen thus far, for there is a "snap here that makes things go."

Of course, being so infatuated with Atlanta, he wanted to know all about the big city. When informed that legal prohibition existed here he expressed surprise. Prohibition he believes to be a good thing, he says, although he is not a teetotaler himself, as a glass of beer "once-in-while" goes pretty well.

"Buttermilk is my favorite drink, however," said the Doctor, smiling, "for it is both nourishing and refreshing."

"But how about Mr. Bryan's grape juice program?" interrupted the reporter.

"Oh, that's going too far," replied the Doctor. "I suppose—" and this with a sly wink—"the grape juice people like it pretty well—so well that they probably will contribute a neat little sum to the next Democratic campaign fund."

Of course, Dr. Cook was still most seriously concerned with his campaign for "fair play" in the North Polar controversy, which, the Doctor says, is by no means a dead issue.

As a matter of fact, the issue is so live, according to Dr. Cook, that it is keeping him just about as busy as he ever hopes to be. In less than three years, he says, he has appeared before 3,000,000 people in America and Europe. His present tour will include Alabama, Georgia, Florida, the Carolinas, Tennessee and Oklahoma. After winding up the Southern tour, he will go to the big cities of the West and North.

"All I want is fair play," Dr. Cook repeated, "and I will get this at the hands of the middle classes of the United States, which have always been friendly to me."

4 Hurt in Wreck of Auto Near Midland

COLUMBUS, GA., June 16.—According to a long distance telephone message received here to-day, four persons were painfully hurt late Sunday afternoon when the automobile of Dr. F. E. Young, of Midland, turned turtle down an eight-foot embankment.

Miss Helen Coleman, of Columbus, who was driving the car, was caught under the steering wheel. Dr. Young's two children were pinned underneath the car. Dr. Young was thrown clear of the car. It is thought all will recover.

CHICAGO, June 16.—"Trouserines" will be offered by Chicago dressmakers to take the place of the popular, but abused, slashed skirt. Woman must pull 'em on over her feet, too, just like the men do it. Thus the dream of many decades is coming true.

The Chicago Dressmakers' Association has so decreed. The new style is to be a great flaring ankle-length pair o' something, draped so that on the street one will never stare.

Mary Garden Tells Of Her Breakdown

PARIS, June 16.—A letter has been received from Mary Garden, frankly confirming the news of her temporary breakdown. She says:

"I never sing before the public unless I am absolutely well and in good form. I came from America after my long and tiresome season very tired, and thought perhaps a month's rest would be enough to permit me to create 'The Jewels' here.

"I find it is not. I have put off my creation until September. I am leaving to-morrow for Switzerland."

COURT DEPUTY CUT TO DEATH IN FIERCE BATTLE WITH NEGRO

David Yancey Slain by Crazed Black Who Defied Arrest After Terrizing Rawson Street Neighborhood---Wounded by Police Before Capture

Court Deputy David Yancey was hacked and stabbed to death Monday forenoon in a desperate battle with a crazed negro who had run amuck and trrorized the residents in the vicinity of Rawson and Windsor Strets.

Brought to bay in the cellar of a vacant house at 33 Windsor Street, the black man stood off for more than half an hour the wagon load of policemen who had been hurried to the scene of the killing on a riot call.

The negro surrendered only after he had been badly wounded and saw that he could not hold out longer against the posse of bluecoats who had surrounded him in his stronghold.

A lynching was averted only by the large force of officers who rushed to the house and hurried the unconscious negro to the police station in an automobile.

Chies of "Lynch him" were heard on every hand. The crowd was wildly excited and thronged about the negro as he was being taken from the basement. The policemen quickly formed a circle about Watson and pushed the angry men away.

Until he was hurried into the automobile, the danger of violence was not passed, the crowd at one time threatening to take him from the officers.

Yancey's body was terribly mutilated by the frenzied negro. Rather than be taken, Watson rushed like a wild beast toward Yancey, stabbed him repeatedly in the breast and back and slashed one of his arms almost to ribbons. Yancey probably was dead long before Watson had completed his fiendish attack.

The trouble which resulted in the tragedy started when Watson snatched $4 from Jesse Winn, a 17-year-old white youth, on Whitehall Street. Watson ran after getting the money and threatened with a drawn knife everyone who stood in his path.

Deputy Gives Chase.

As he was running up Rawson Street, Deputy Yancey, who happened to be in that vicinity to serve some papers, took up the chase. Watson ran into the yard at the rear of 303 Rawson Street, the home of Mrs. J. W. Wilson, with Yancey in close pursuit.

Robert Starnes, aged 16, of 11 Fitzgerald Street, joined in the chase, along with a score of other persons. Yancey fired upon the negro as he cornered him in the yard.

"Damn you, you've got to kill me before you can take me," Watson shouted as he rushed upon the deputy and snatched the still smoking revolver out of his hand.

With this he drew the knife and plunged it time and again into the body of Yancey. The deputy sank to the ground mortally wounded, but the blood-maddened negro kept hacking and stabbing the limp body.

Boy Rushes to Aid.

Young Starnes, who had hastened to the officer's assistance, picked up one brick after another and hurled them at the negro, but the latter paid no attention to the blows.

When Watson had started his bloody passion, he leaped from the prostrate body of Yancey and ran up the street, taking refuge, when hotly pressed, in the cellar of the vacant house at 33 Windsor Street.

He was quickly surrounded by the posse of officers, but defied them to take him. Thrusting their weapons in at the windows they commenced a fusillade upon the negro which failed to subdue him until he had collapsed on the floor almost riddled with bullets.

Several bullets took effect in his left leg and shattered the bone above and below the knee. One bullet found lodgment in his groin and still other

Weather Man Declares Mercury Will Hit High Places—Hot Monday Morning.

Soft-collar and linen-suit weather is forecast for the current week by Government Weatherman VonHerrmann. Monday the maximum temperature will approximate Sunday's, when the mercury registered 92 degrees as the maximum. At 6 o'clock Monday morning the thermometer registered 71, which is exceptionally high for Atlanta during the month of June for that hour.

"What makes it so hot?" the weather man was asked.

"The beautiful sunshine," answered Mr. VonHerrmann. "But while this is actually the case, the real reason for the hot wave is that at present there is high pressure over the State of Georgia and no movement of wind. If there were a brisk wind movement the sun's rays would be cooled. Consequently, this week we will get hot weather that is not due us."

Heat Is Fatal in North Middle West.

CHICAGO, June 16.—Several more days of intense heat are in prospect to-day, following a sizzling 24 hours. The entire north central part of the country was hot yesterday. Eight deaths were reported.

In Chicago the mercury reached 94. The same maximum was reported at St. Louis, Montgomery, Jacksonville, Kansas City and North Platte. That was 10 degrees hotter than the maximum for the day at New Orleans, and 2 degrees cooler than at Omaha, Des Moines and St. Paul.

The temperature at 9 o'clock this morning, 86, indicated that a new record for the season would be reached this afternoon.

Fear for Babies as Heat Makes Cleveland Record.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 16.—At 10 o'clock this morning the thermometer had risen to 86, and indications pointed to the hottest June day in the history of the local weather bureau. Several were overcome by the heat and an epidemic of illness among babies caused fears of a new mark in infant mortality.

SIMPLE RITES AT FUNERAL OF MRS. BRYAN

Many Mourn Death of Woman Writer—Was One of Highest Paid in United States.

Simplicity will mark the funeral of Mrs. Mary E. Bryan, one of the South's leading women writers who died Sunday night at her home in Clarkston, Ga. Many prominent persons, however, will be present to pay their last respects to the pioneer authoress.

Mrs. Bryan's prolific pen has touched the hearts of Southern people for the past half century. Besides contributing to many magazines, she also published 47 books.

Financially her work met with great success. Shortly before her death, Mrs. Bryan's held the position of editor of The Fireside Companion, in which position she is said to have received a salary of $25,000 a year, probably one of the highest ever paid to a woman in the United States.

Mrs. Bryan first gained recognition in the literary world when her work appeared in Scott's Magazine, which was published shortly after the Civil war. Later she went with The Sunny South for which periodicals she wrote for twelve years. When this magazine was taken over by Uncle Remus' Magazine, Mrs. Bryan became editor of a department in the latter. It was during her connection with the Uncle Remus periodical that Mrs. Bryan's most appealing work was accomplished.

Through her magazine articles and poetry she won the hearts of the legions of her readers. Rapidly she arose to national prominence. Her novels and books of the Southland have found themselves into the libraries of every city of the world.

The Georgian publishes herewith Mrs. Bryan's latest poem, entitled "Paestum," which appeared in the October, 1912, issue of Uncle Remus's Magazine:

"If you could come to-night
Across the snowy fields about your home,
Across the ocean white with wintry foam—
Here where the grass is sweet,
Where warm sea-pulses beat,
And classic marbles melt in soft moonlight,
It might not seem so strange, dear love, that I
Should wait on this far shore for Fate's reply
To the scarce-hoping question—'Live or die?'

"Here all is dead—long dead—
Deep under earth-waves frothed with foam of flowers,
Here lines of massive tombs, broken and reft
Of treasures rare—the imperial ashes left
To blow on sands and in each rocky cleft,
Here girdling walls, protective once of harms,
Long lying, vast, like some dead Titan's arms.

"But beauty lingers—Beauty has been spared;
Beauty so rare the centuries have not dared
To mar it. Marvelous as a dream.
Wrought of the ivory of the moon's soft beam
The Temples rise; Earth has naught else so fair,
Majestic and yet light as clouds on air.
When built? By whom? What matters, they are here
And seem eternal as yon star's clear sphere.

"But cold and still and dead!
And back with you are throbbing life and love,
And clinging arms and lips that fond words move,
And wild, fierce hold on life when hope has fled.
It would be harder there to lay my head
On the low pillow Mother Earth has spread.
'Tis best, then, that this land of mystery,
And calm and silence shall my refuge be,
We shall not be apart; Death will unite
To the freed soul 'twere but an instant's flight
From this old land of mystery and blight to you and light."

Mrs. Bryan is survived by her three children, Mrs. Pearl Byrd, of Clarkston; Mrs. C. A. Wilson, of St. Louis and Fred Bryan, of Clarkston.

Kansas Would Catch Up With Her Laws

TOPEKA, KANS., June 16.—Governor George Hodges would have the Kansas Legislature cease meeting for eight or ten years so that the State could catch up with the laws now on its statute books. For six years now Kansas Legislatures have been passing the most progressive enactments in the country. Here are some of the "first things" Kansas did and which other States are copying:

Kansas blue sky law, copied by 17 States.

Abolished common drinking cup, copied by 28 States and Government.

Abolished common roller towel.

Created first small debtors' courts where lawyers and fees are unknown.

Provided efficiency test for all bank employees.

Provided first rating bureau for fire insurance.

"Let the Legislature disband for a number of years until the State catches up," said the Governor. "We have a greater number of progressive laws upon our statute books than any other Commonwealth."

NO VICE HOUSES IN FIVE YEARS, SAYS CHIEF

Beavers, Back From Convention, Says Majority of Police Heads Favor Suppression.

"In less than five years every recognized house of vice in the United States will be closed."

This was the statement made today by James L. Beavers, chief of police of Atlanta, who returned last night from Washington and the convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs.

More time was allotted to discussion of the social evil than in any previous convention of the police chiefs, Beavers said. Last Wednesday the whole afternoon session was devoted to the topic. Chief Beavers made an address and it was this address and the chief's record in Atlanta which stimulated the discussion.

Suppression Gains Ground.

"There has been a wonderful increase of sentiment among chiefs of police in favor of closing these houses," Chief Beavers said to-day. "This feeling was demonstrated at the convention last week.

"Last Wednesday the convention used the whole afternoon for discussion of the social evil. That was the first time so much attention ever had been given to this subject. The police chiefs are giving more attention now to talking and thinking about this question than ever before, and the sentiment is rapidly growing in favor of absolute suppression.

"Some of the chiefs in attendance at the convention favored segregation, but all of them admitted the law favored suppression, and that suppression was right. The only question seemed to be whether the laws could be enforced, and the majority sentiment was they could.

Make Clean-up Prophe

"The chiefs know suppression is right, and after listening to the discussions and studyin gthe sentiment manifested there, I believe in less than five years every recognized house of vice in the United States will be closed."

Chief Beavers said several papers were read and addresses made on the question of segregation versus suppression, and that absolute suppression was very generally favored. The chief said he had a fine time and was looking forward to next year, when the chiefs will gather in Grand Rapids.

One-Man Filibuster To End Lobby Probe

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Owing to the effective one-man filibuster conducted in the Senate by Senator Jones, the investigation of the alleged "insidious" lobby will be terminated as soon as the tariff bill is introduced in the Senate. The presence of the three Democrats on the committee—Senators Overman, Walsh and Reed—may be required to maintain a quorum.

In the meantime the committee will have an opportunity to conclude the probe of the sugar and wool lobbies.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Miss Jean Morrell, "boxing girl of the movies," is back in New York after a brief visit in Europe.

Miss Morrell, on board ship, challenged every suitor to a three-round bout in the gymnasium. Only one managed to get a draw.

One ardent suitor assured Miss Morrell he would not hurt her. One blow sent him down for the count.

HEAD OF FARMER UNION PRAISES W. R. HEARST

Charles S. Barrett Declares Papers Helped in Awakening Dixie Farmers to Call of Progress.

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—"The Hearst newspapers have been steadfast friends of the Farmers' Union, and have given us invaluable assistance. The personal interest of Mr. Hearst and the splendid editorial and other help of John Temple Graves have done much to enable us to accomplish what we have done."

This was the assertion of Charles S. Barrett, of Union City, Ga., president of the great and rapidly growing Farmers' Union, who in ten years has become one of the most potent personalities in American life. Mr. Barrett was in Los Angeles Sunday. He will leave this evening for San Francisco, on his way to Basin, Wyo., and Bismarck, N. Dak., to attend farmers' conventions.

Mr. Barrett is the guiding genius of the Farmers' Educational and Cooperative Union, which has 38,000 local lodges and 3,000,000 members.

Union Awakened Dixie.

"Our organization is built on the principle of education and co-operation among farmers," said Mr. Barrett yesterday. "The South was backward in agricultural development, but there has been a great awakening and the Farmers' Union, in many ways, has been the greatest financier in the change. The union was first mainly a Southern organization, but our greatest growth now is in the Middle West.

"The South has depended almost wholly on cotton. The union taught the farmers the necessity of growing other things; raising their own hay, grain and meat, and this diversity of production is one of the foundation stones of our new prosperity.

"My own State of Georgia was far down in the list of States, but so remarkable has been the progress made that the Government reports place it fourth in agricultural products now.

Educate the Farmers.

"We try to educate the farmers and then to bring them into co-operation in any direction feasible. We have not started many stores. In the South the lodges built and operate warehouses; in the West, packing plants and elevators.

"We do not run for office or nominate candidates. We have not a thing to do with partisan politics, but we retire a man now and then to private life just by way of example."

Mr. Barrett smiled reminiscently as he drew this disdinction between politics and politics.

"One of our bills aims at the prohibition of gambling in farm products. It has been passed twice by the House, but blocked by the Senate, and Murphy J. Foster, of Louisiana, one of our strongest opponents, is now living quietly at his home near New Orleans in consequence. We had to retire him.

Tells of Retiring Foes.

"'Uncle John' Lamb, of Virginia, chairman of the General Agricultural Committee, fought us. We had to excuse him from further public service at the primary last August.

"The Farmers' Union is a staunch advocate of scientific farming. Many agricultural colleges have been established in the South through its influence, and more liberal support given those already founded in consequence of its demands.

"The union was directly responsible for the Bureau of Markets recently established by Congress, the purpose of which is to lend any possible assistance by way of information that will help the farmers in marketing their products."

1 Dead, 3 Hurt, When Train Strikes Auto

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., June 16. Improvement was noted to-day in the condition of Miss Willie Newton, Mrs. Finis Plumlee and Leo Chamberlain, who were injured yesterday when a Southern Railway passenger train struck an automobile in which they were riding near Ooltewah, killing Finis Plumlee.

The party was returning from an outing at Ocoee. Chamberlain, the chauffeur, was hurled 100 feet.

FAMILY JARS CAUSE TRAGEDY.

LEXINGTON, KY., June 16.—Earl Scott, 18, fatally wounded his father-in-law, David Black, during a quarrel at Eddyville and then committed suicide. Family troubles caused the tragedy. Scott and his wife had separated.

COOPER HAS WAY TO MEET FOOD SHORTAGE

Chamber of Commerce Secretary Urges Enlistment of 100,000 Boys in Corn Club.

Secretary Walter G. Cooper, of the Chamber of Commerce, Monday proposed a way to meet the $37,000,000 deficit in the food supply of Georgia. He urged organization of 100,000 boys in the corn clubs and thereby increasing tenfold the work which already has added 25,000,000 bushels of corn to the annual crop.

Mr. Cooper urges an immediate and active State-wide interest in the 1913 Georgia Corn Show as the most important step.

He says:

"Leading authorities on the food supply of Georgia agree in the estimate that the people sent out of this State last year $172,496,000 for corn, oats, hay, meat, dairy products and other food that should be raised here.

"The cotton and cotton-seed crops lack $37,496,000 of paying for the food we bought; this in spite of the fact that the corn crop of Georgia has increased 25,000,000 bushels in five years.

Average Yield Increasing.

"We have heard of a revolution in agriculture. Statistics show the average yield of corn went up from 10 to 15 bushels in five years. Georgia, though, still lacks a great deal of raising her food.

"In the face of wonderful improvements wrought by corn clubs in five years, it is hard to believe the statement that the cotton crop lacks $37,000,000 of paying for food supplies brought into the State; but these estimates are vouched for by such men as P. A. Methvin, State pure food inspector, and H. G. Hastings, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Committee on Agriculture.

"Of course, farmers raise some corn, oats and hay, but they must have consumed what they raised; otherwise they would not have to buy.

"Georgia farmers, according to the State Department of Agriculture, produce something more than $232,000,000, possibly $250,000,000, but when it is remembered that farmers have to buy mules, fertilizers, hardware, clothes, school books and a great many other things besides food, it is clear that they have little left to pay the enormous food bills indicated by the foregoing figures.

Confronted by Problem.

"What are we going to do about it?

"Of course, we must make the farms more productive and produce the things that we import.

"States like Iowa are producing 36 bushels of corn to the acre. There is no reason why this should not be done in Georgia.

"In addition to this, the State of Iowa sells $200,000,000 a year of animal products.

"We can not have much in the way of animal products until we have enough corn, oats, hay and forage to feed the animals as well as the people.

"If we are short $58,000,000 in corn with no animals to feed, how much more corn will we have to raise in order to supply the present demand and furnish food for $200,000,000 worth of animals as Iowa does?

"Iowa is about the same size as Georgia and the climate is certainly no better. There is no more congenial soil and not as much moisture."

Atlanta Eagle Aerie Goes to Convention

Leaving the Terminal Station at 9:20 o'clock to-night the Atlanta Aerie, No. 714, of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, 150 strong, accompanied by its drum corps of 30, will start in special coaches for Jacksonville, where the annual convention of the organization begins to-morrow for a three-day session.

The convention is made up of representatives from four Southern States—Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina and Florida—and is known as the Southeastern section of the organization.

Vandals Chop Down His Whole Orchard

CAMDEN, N. J., June 16.—Aroused by the barking of his dogs, Martin Kahout, of Atco, rushed out of his house and was dumfounded when he discovered that not a tree in his peach orchard was left standing, each being chopped down close to the ground. He could advance no reason for the destruction.

Kahout expected to get $1,500 from the crop.

Americans to See Peeress Dance

Lady Richardson's Pay $10,000

Wears Draperies In Arabian Act

Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, in her Oriental costume.

Says She Needs Money For Boys' Home and Praises Light, Flowing Costume For Women.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, who has earned the sobriquet of "the most unconventional woman in all England," will dance in New York swathed in picturesque Arabian costume, consisting of brown and white draperies, in a drama based on the biblical character Judith.

For her two weeks' work she will receive $10,000.

The love for Oriental dress was gained by Lady Constance while in India.

"The day will come when all women will dress like those of Egypt and India," she said. "The cost is nominal, and I am relieved of all worry about the changing styles. Then, too, this costume is comfortable, and that is something that can not be said for the modern attire favored by women. And, also, I think that I am safe in saying it is about as becoming as most modern outfits."

Lady Constance has been implored many times by her relatives, the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, not to dance in public. But Lady Constance said she needed the money for a boys' home in Scotland which she is trying to help.

Auto Has Red Flag; Chased by Angry Bull

SACRAMENTO, June 16.—A red Sacramento pennant attached to the rear of the automobile of H. A. McClellan, of this city, almost brought disaster upon himself and family when a bull attacked the machine from the flank on the road between Nicolas and Lincoln. By dodging and speeding the chauffeur managed to escape with a punctured tire which the bull gored with his horns.

China was enrolled in the congress to-day, bringing the representation up to five continents and 25 nations.

TENNESSEE FACES CRISIS OVER DEBT

Factional Politics Prevents Legislation to Provide for $11,458,000 Obligations Due July 1.

NASHVILLE, June 16.—Tennessee faces the possibility of defaulting on its State debt of $11,458,000 due July 1, because of partisan politics.

To-morrow brings the most important financial event of Tennessee since the settlement of the State debt that accrued from carpetbag rule, when bids on loans to refund the debt will be opened.

That the refunding act needs amending is agreed by both Democrats and Fusionists. Legislative authority is needed for the execution of short-term loans so that the big bond issue may be deferred until times get better. The opening of bids to-morrow will be the second attempt of the State to sell its securities. The first, three weeks ago, brought an offer of only $862.50 per $1,000.

Governor Hooper is facing the hardest ordeal that he has had to encounter since he was first inducted into this office more than two years ago. The Republican members of the Legislature and their allies, the Independent Democrats, have refused to join the regular Democrats, who have been holding over the January term of the General Assembly, for fear that the regulars will put over some legislation that is repugnant to the Fusionists. The latter want this session ended so the Governor may call an extra one.

The regulars declare that they are acting within the law and that they will hold against all hazards to put a stop to legislators running away in Tennessee every time a law is introduced that does not suit some faction. The Fusionists this year decamped on account of the election law.

The Democrats have the best of it in holding their ground, but there is the gravest doubt that the State will default on its interest and the refunding of the State debt unless the Governor and the funding board should decide to sacrifice the State securities to-morrow at any price that the bond buyers may offer.

Robs Partner; Gives Up to Pay Penalty

RICHMOND, June 16.—Conscious-stricken because he had stolen $100 from Dan Bennett, his partner in the fruit business, at Waycross, Ga., A. L. Christian, aged 35, gave himself up to the police here. In police court to-day his case was continued until June 21, pending receipt of information from the Georgia authorities.

Christian says he wants to go back to Waycross and serve his time, so that he can continue to make that place his home. He left Waycross a month ago.

Separate Trials for Wilburn and Woman

MACON, GA., June 16.—Separate trials will be demanded for Nick Wilburn, who killed James King, and for Mrs. Kate King, who is charged with being an accessory in the death of her husband.

Judge J. B. Park has announced that he will convene the Jones County Superior Court on either July 7 or August 11. Attorney J. R. Cooper, who represents Wilburn, states that he will choose the latter date. W. D. McNeil, who represents Mrs. King, is a member of the State Senate, and for that reason her case will be continued at least until the fall term.

Catholics May Take New Bible Version

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Rev. D. J. Kennedy, theologian of the Dominican Order, announced here today that a revised translation of the Bible had been prepared by the late Rev. F. A. Spencer, of the Dominicans. Dr. Kennedy delivered an oration at Father Spencer's funeral exercises, and disclosed that Father Spencer devoted the last twenty years of his life to the translation.

He predicted the Roman Catholic clergy soon would call a special canonical council to consider the new version in place of the Douay's, which has been accepted for more than 300 years.

40 Stone Burglar as He Tries to Escape

A passerby saw a negro moving about in the Harrison Dry Goods Store, 418-22 Marietta Street, at noon Sunday. Becoming suspicious, the passerby notified the police. Then he collected all the men in the neighborhood, 40 in all, and they surrounded the store.

The negro, all unconscious of the reception committee waiting to receive him, came out. He was met by a shower of bricks and stones and beat a hasty retreat. Finally the police arrived and the negro was taken into custody. He gave his name as Joe Marion.

Girl's Death Ousts Uruguay Minister

MONTEVIDEO, June 16.—The scandal involved in the tragic death of the beautiful Senorita Irma Avengo had a sensational turn in the Chamber of Deputies, when Senor Frugoni introduced a motion asking the resignation of Dr. Romeu, Minister of Foreign Affairs.

The motion was rejected, but Dr. Romeu immediately resigned. Several big failures are announced of men connected with the affair.

Senorita Avengo's body was found in a field after she had disappeared, owing, it is reported, about $1,500,000. Romeu, it was reported, was her debtor to the extent of $500,000.

Roasted Town Will Sue Stage Jesters

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—The quiet and unassuming little village of Watts, near here, is so wrought up over gibes of comedians in Los Angeles theaters that it plans suit for $25,000 damages against a local theatrical company.

"Watts has been the goat long enough," said a prominent citizen. "When actors exhaust their repertoire of stereotyped jokes they single out Watts for further comedy, and we intend to be paid for it."

Nun Killed in Auto; Joy Riders Blamed

FRESNO, CAL., June 16.—Police to-day were investigating the report that joy riders caused an auto accident in which Sister Alsoque, mother superior of St. Augustine's Academy, was killed. Sister Agnolia was seriously injured and two other Sisters and a Japanese chauffeur were slightly hurt.

It was reported that the joy-riding party forced the machine occupied by the Sisters into a ditch.

Twelfth of Family Gives Life to Lepers

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—Rev. Gottfried Hahn, recently ordained a minister of the German Evangelical Church, has departed for Purulia, India, where a colony of lepers is located.

Eleven others of his family, including his aged mother, ministered to the lepers of the same colony, serving many years in constant danger of contracting the disease.

FRANK TIGHT IN NET, SAYS AIDE TO DORSEY

she does not dearly love for her husband to show her that he is still her sweetheart.

"We have lived here in this house, with my father and mother. To them, Leo has been devoted and always most considerate. They love him as a son; they took him close to their hearts before the wedding bells had ceased to ring—for that is the way our people do in those matters.

"I will tell you another reason why I think Leo Frank could not have committed the diabolical crime charged to him. He is devoted to children—little children especially.

"We have no children of our own, unfortunately, but there are several nieces and nephews in the family, and to every one of them Mr. Frank is affectionately attached. I have seen him play with a two-year-old child for hours, not once, but many times.

Helps Little Orphan Children.

"He has been with Mr. Milton Klein, for many years one of the moving spirits in providing innocent and healthful outdoor recreation and pleasure for the children of the Hebrews' Orphan Home.

"Is a man who loves children as Leo Frank loves them likely to have a hand in the slaying of an innocent child, not yet budded into youthful womanhood, as Mary Phagan is said to have been?

"If there is one person in all the world he has been more devoted to than to me, it is his aged and blind uncle, M. Frank. Is a man who is kind and considerate to the lame, the halt and the blind such a man as would take a hand in the killing of a child?

"Ah, surely, surely, there are few people who will—who can—believe that!

Always Kind and Generous.

"In the home where Leo Frank has spent his time away from his business, he always has been the most kind, the most generous, the most thoughtful, the most considerate and the most affectionate of men.

"I think my knowledge of Leo Frank and the kind of man he is is worth more than the word of a shiftless negro who has lied persistently and vigorously ever since he was arrested as a suspect—but while my voice will be hushed in the court room, his will be heard by both the judge and the jury trying my husband for his life.

"There is, of course, much in this case that has seemed to me cruel—and now and then I have been moved to some measure of bitterness in my thoughts. But I believe that truth is mighty, and all I want is fair play.

She Wants Fair Play.

"If we can get fair play, my husband will be restored soon to me and to his family and his friends—and when he is, we shall take up calmly, and in such degree of forgetfulness as we can summon to our aid, the disrupted thread of our life, bind up our wounds, and try to hold against no man aught of ill will or resentment.

"That's the way I feel about it, and that's the way Leo feels about it. That's the way mother and father feel about it, too.

"We await the trial of Leo Frank in confidence. We have come to think that, after all, we shall get fair treatment—and as that is all we have asked for, we are more and more optimistic every day as to the conclusion."

USE OF CALOMEL PRACTICALLY STOPPED

For Bilious Attacks, Constipation and All Liver Troubles—Dangerous Calomel Gives Way to Dodson's Liver Tone.

Every druggist in the State has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason—Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is often dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," say druggists.

Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by all druggists who sell it. A large bottle costs 50 cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of sluggishness, you have only to ask for your money back. It will be promptly returned.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant tasting, purely vegetable remedy—harmless to both children and adults. A bottle in the house may save you a day's work or keep your children from missing school. Keep your liver working and your liver will not keep you from working.

DUEL IN DARK BY BURGLAR AND DETECTIVE

Negro, Caught Robbing Safe, Flees After Volleys Are Exchanged—Arrested Later.

The details of a pistol duel between a Pinkerton detective and a burglar in the Troy Laundry, 210 Houston Street, were made known Sunday after the arrest of Herman Butler, a negro, living at 99 Rondeau Street.

A volley of shots, which startled the neighborhood, was exchanged between Fred Farris, the detective, and Butler when Farris discovered the latter rifling the safe in the laundry Saturday night after all of the other employees had departed.

The laundry proprietors had missed money and other articles from the building several times, but were unable to find the thief. Finally they notified the Pinkertons.

Farris hid in the building Saturday night. Soon after the lights were out the detective saw a man approach one of the house telephones. The intruder, using the instrument, ascertained that no one was on the other floors of the building. Then he proceeded to unlock an old-fashioned safe with a key he had.

The burglar was interrupted by Farris' command to throw up his hands. Instead of complying, Butler drew a revolver and began firing in the direction from which the voice came. Farris returned the fire, but Butler, backing away, managed to get to the rear door and escape without being hit.

Not suspecting that his identity had been learned, Butler remained at home Sunday. He was arrested there by Detectives Coker and Gillespie.

Bud Fisher and Bride to Buy Chateau

They're Here in Vaudeville to Get Funds

Bud Fisher, creator of Mutt and Jeff, at work.

Artist Reveals Dream of Happiness—Hopes Mutt and Jeff Will Survive Long Time.

Bud Fisher, creator of our old friends Mutt and Jeff, and his bride, formerly Pauline Welch, are spending a week in Atlanta while on their way to the southern part of France.

Neither Bud nor Mrs. Fisher knows when they will reach France and take up their abode in the chateau they have in mind, but both are looking forward to it. Bud says it will be "swell" and "easy," while Mrs. Fisher declares it will be "great." The fact that they are going was kept a jealously guarded secret until they reached Atlanta and told it to a Georgian reporter to-day.

Bud Fisher and Pauline Welch arrived in Atlanta at 6 o'clock Sunday afternoon and registered at the Piedmont. They are booked for a week's engagement at the Forsyth Theater, beginning with the matinee to-day. Bud will draw cartoons, while Mrs. Fisher, or Pauline Welch, has an act of her own.

Just Draws Mutt and Jeff.

"Just pictures of Mutt and Jeff and caricatures of people in the audience, all pantomime—that's all I do," said Bud in describing his act to the reporter. But "just pictures of Mutt and Jeff" is enough to elicit several thousand laughs a night from any audience; also to deposit several thousand simoleons per annum in the Fisher and Welch exchequer.

"Mutt and Jeff are six years old now," said Fisher. "But I hope they will become a great deal older, as old as I do, I trust."

Everybody knows Bud Fisher shovels in something like a bushel or a scoop or an oddle of cash every week as a result of his artistic creations and histrionic exhibitions. So, while Fisher was eating his grapefruit and medium boiled this morning the reporter thought it a good time to ask him what he intended to do when he got to be a plutocrat.

Lets Out the Secret.

"I never told anybody before, but Atlanta is about as good a place to let it out as I can find," he replied. "When I get enough money, I'm going to the south of France and buy me a chateau and live easy in the summer time; then come to America for four or five months every winter and appear in vaudeville.

"The southern part of France beats California, for $1 there goes as far as $20 in California. I can have a man making champagne for me, get a chauffeur for $8 a month, a butler for the same and a whole army of attendants for $100 a month. The next best thing to having a bunch of money is to live where it goes a long way. Me for the southern part of France when Mutt and Jeff grow stale. But I hope that will be many years yet."

After reflection, Fisher continued: "Of course, I could go there now, but I've got hoggish. I won't set a time except to say we'll hike for the continent when they chase me away from this country."

Mrs. Fisher sat down at the breakfast table just in time to hear her husband's concluding remarks. "I think it will be great, but I didn't know he was going to tell it yet," was her only comment.

Cranks After His Money.

Fisher said several thousand cranks were doing their best to relieve him of the money he has laid away for that French chateau: "Every day I get not less than a couple of thousand letters," he said. "Most of them want to make a touch. People write to me for money to go to school, and any number of them say they are artists in embryo and beg for money to develop their talents. Of course, I don't read them all—just 25 or 30—and all the rest of them with unfamiliar postmarks go to the waste basket."

Mr. and Mrs. Fisher were glad to be back in Atlanta, for it was here their romance began. They expect to tour the city and are looking for as much pleasure as the thousands who will go to the Forsyth Theater this week to see the creator of Mutt and Jeff.

He declared he will live like the men of the Stone Age for three months.

MOROS ROUTED IN MIDNIGHT BATTLE

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MANILA, P. I., June 16.—In a night attack on the remaining defenses of the rebellious Moros on the Island of Jolo the American troops and their native allies, under Brigadier General John J. Pershing, U. S. A., routed the rebel Filipinos with the loss of six men killed and seven wounded.

All the American soldiers killed were scouts.

News of the engagement was received by the military authorities today in a wireless message from Jolo. The radio said the rebellious natives, after deserting their trenches, fled into the mountains, pursued by Americans and the constabulary.

Desultory fighting between the rival forces has been going on for several days. The entire casualties on the American side were 30 killed and wounded. The native loss is believed to be much heavier.

General Pershing is warm in his praise of the gallantry of the Americans.

Railroad Strike Is Result of Discharges

POTTSVILLE, PA., June 16.—Two hundred repairmen at the shops of the Reading Railway at Schuylkill Haven and a number at the repair shops at Palo Alto and St. Clair went on strike this morning on orders from officials of the International Car Workers' Association.

The strike was brought on by the discharging of several repairmen, because, as the union officials claim, they were too active in forming unions.

Darrow May Never Face a Third Trial

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—The remaining charge against Clarence Darrow, noted labor attorney, which grew out of the McNamara trial here, likely never will be heard. The case has not been entered on the court calendar.

The District Attorney's office has refused to indicate whether Darrow will be tried a third time on a charge of being party to the bribery of prospective jurors.

ASA G. CANDLER SAID

In THE AMERICAN, Yesterday:

SOUTH IN MAGNIFICENT SHAPE

"The South, when we come to consider our immediate prospects, is in absolutely magnificent shape. I know much of conditions in Georgia of my own knowledge."

Far from believing the country on the verge of hard times or anything like serious financial depression, Mr. Candler believes the horizon to be abundantly rainbowed and promising nothing but good things.

He said that if he did not feel this way about it he would not leave the U. S. for Europe to be gone two months.

And, too, we know Mr. Candler to be a man who is fearless in speech; he says exactly what he thinks; and more---he has a good think every now and then.

In the face of such judgment and such prospects, we say go to the

STATE POLITICAL POT BOILS AT KIMBALL

Candidates for House Speaker and Senate President Open Headquarters.

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

The Kimball House lobby, where for years and years Georgia politicians most have congregated, and which still seems to be the undisputed Mecca of Cracker statesmen, real and near, already has assumed that busy and more or less agitated appearance so unmistakably prophetic of the annual getting together of the Legislature.

Headquarters have been opened for two speakership candidates, two presidency of the Senate candidates, and at least one new county, Candler.

Within the next day or so other headquarters will be opened, and other fights inaugurated. The clans unmistakably are gathering for the fray, and the forthcoming session bids fair to be one of great interest and far-reaching consequence.

The first new county proposition to get busy on the job is, as aforesaid, Candler. The boosters of this proposition say they have their contest well in hand, and they unquestionably expect to win.

This new county is to be made up of slices of Bulloch, Tattnall and Emanuel, all three large counties, and there is little, if any, opposition in the territory affected.

Metter, a hustling town of around 4,000, is to be the county seat of Candler. It is located in the western part of Bulloch, but is so near the line of the other counties that it is practically situated at the "corners" of the three, as is Winder, in the proposed new county of Barrow.

Every newspaper but one in the section concerned in the new county of Candler is favorable to the proposition, and the boomers of the game claim that they already have pledged more than sufficient votes to put their proposition over.

Outside the contests for the speakership and the presidency of the Senate, one hears more of these two new county proposals than anything else nowadays, and both of them—Barrow and Candler—look good to go through.

The contests between Senators John T. Allen, of the Twentieth, and Randolph Anderson, of the First, as to which shall be chosen President of the Senate, unquestionably is very much "up in the air."

Both men express themselves as being entirely confident, and both show figures to prove their respective claims. Moreover, both seem to be in dead earnest in stating their positions.

The average member of the new Legislature, however, seems to be very much "from Missouri" with respect to that race. The impression is that it yet is any man's race. Both Allen and Anderson are working hard and leaving no stone unturned to win out.

The Allen men are saying that Anderson will retire before the "showdown," but as the Anderson men are saying the same thing concerning Allen, how can one tell?

It looks as if a "showdown" of strength on the floor of the Senate, after Secretary Northen calls it to order, will be the only thing that will tell the tale accurately and to stay put.

One hears much in the hotel lobbies nowadays of tax reform.

There seems little doubt that it will be the paramount consideration of the new General Assembly.

It generally is agreed that the State can not travel much farther without more revenue, and to raise the tax rate is out of the question. Politically, the Legislature feels that it would be committing suicide to attempt to get the tax rate up, after any sort of fashion.

The only way to get additional revenue, therefore, is to raise the assessments and returns in such wise that the total amount against which the tax rate operates may be as nearly as possible 50 per cent higher than now.

This is a large problem, and will require the very best and most statesmanlike minds of the Legislature to work out. Whatever bill is framed along this line will arise in the House, of course, and it will be carefully designed to work as equitably as it may to all parties concerned.

The problem of taxation is one of the most delicate, as well as important, that the Legislature has to handle, and it is more acute this year than it has been in a quarter of a century.

Parties interested in heron production in Glynn County, particularly growers of the egret variety, are greatly interested in the news from Washington to the effect that the Department of Agriculture will undertake to develop a rooster of plumage suitable for substitution for that of the egret, now used so extensively in the aigrette millinery trade.

The largest colony of egrets in the world is located in Glynn County, and a great many people are extensively interested in the trade.

For many years, the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and the Audubon Society have protested against the taking of the nuptial plumage from the egrets for millinery purposes. The taking of the plumage almost invariably means the death of the mother bird, and the consequent starvation of her young in the nest. The aigrette plumage is to be had of the egret herons only while the mother's brood is very young.

"This proposition looks more or less like a suffragette movement," said a well-known legislator, discussing the matter of the rooster's plumage to-day, "but it looks fair and square, nevertheless. That's the reason I am for it. We should protect the egrets, or pretty soon there will be none left in Georgia.

"If the national department would not object to egrets from roosters' tails—if the folks like them as well, far be it from me to put in a word for the

No Grape Juice for Sec. Daniels; He's On the Water Wagon

BOSTON, June 16.—Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels has enrolled himself with Secretary of State Bryan, Colonel Roosevelt, Mayor Fitzgerald and others, by declaring that a so-called "soft drink" is his favorite tipple.

Bryan says grape juice, Colonel Roosevelt prefers milk, Mayor Fitzgerald dilutes his grape juice with ginger ale to add a little "tang." "But give me bottled mineral water," declared Secretary Daniels, "I wouldn't spoil my stomach with grape juice and milk makes one fat. Mineral water is refreshing, harmless and won't offend the most abstemious."

Astor Buys London Paper For $1,250,000

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 16.—William Waldorf Astor, expatriated American, has purchased The Morning Post, long regarded as the society organ and sought after by several prominent newspaper publishers. The price paid is said to have been $1,250,000.

Mr. Astor is already the owner of The Pall Mall Gazette, an afternoon paper, and The Observer, a Sunday publication.

Mr. Astor has been trying for a considerable time to secure a morning newspaper to aid him in reaching the peerage.

Newspaper men here say Astor now controls the three most influential political journals in the United Kingdom.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Keith Vaudeville at Forsyth.

That the bill at the Forsyth this week will be one of the most magnetic of the season is the confidential prediction of the management, and, further, it is believed that the supply of seats for the daily matinee and night performances will never hold out against the interest that has been in evidence since the announcement that "Bud" Fisher and six sterling Keith acts would make up the program of entertainment.

The appearance of the creator of "Mutt" and "Jeff," whose daily appearance on the sport pages of The Georgian add to the interest in the paper, is a real event of the season. Fisher will offer a novelty idea completely original.

Pauline Welch (Mrs. Fisher) is on the same bill, and will be seen in her specialty. She scored one of the great hits of last season, introducing some of the song hits of the moment. The Lawn Party, as produced by ten clever young people, is a feature of the bill. The Three Leightons, in their original sketch of minstrel life; Adonis and his dog in "The Act Beautiful;" Karl Emmy's Pets, a wonderful trained animal act, and Whitefield and Ireland, in a comedy offering, make up the complete program.

The bill is said to be one of the strongest that has ever been brought to Atlanta.

"Quo Vadis" at the Grand.

A sensation so great that one of the largest theaters in New York has been unable to accommodate the crowds that are demanding seats is "Quo Vadis," the attraction at the Grand this week—matinee daily at 2:30 and night at 8:30.

"Quo Vadis" is presented by George Kleine, in connection with Cohan and Harris, and a small fortune was paid to the Societa Italiana, of Rome, Italy, for the American rights. The Cines people used eighteen months of hard work to make the production of 10,000 feet of film and the three acts and eight scenes in the sensation make up the greatest and the most wonderful photo-play the world has ever seen. Europe is alive with interest in these pictures. New York, Chicago and Philadelphia have all shown wonderful returns, and that Atlanta will quickly take its place in the line is evidenced by the advance sale that has been growing steadily since last Thursday when the box office was opened.

The Georgian has invited Atlanta ministers to see the pictures at either the matinee or night performance today. Many have made their reservations.

"The Duke of Durham" at Bijou.

Following the several musical tabloids of the last few weeks in which patrons of the Bijou have shown that this class of entertainment meets with popular approval, the announcement is made that "The Duke of Durham," probably the most expensive organization of its kind, will furnish amusement for patrons of the Bijou this week.

Lou L. Shean, the German singing comedian, heads the list of funmakers. The American Comedy Four, a splendid quartet; Callahan and Klein, in songs, dances and chatter, and Smith and Pollock, in tango dances, will furnish a splendid line of vaudeville, in addition to the musical comedy features. The usual daily matinees will be given at 2 o'clock, and night shows at 7:30 and 9.

NEW PRIZES WIN FAVOR IN CONTEST

Georgian Gives Tips to Hustlers in Race for Extra Ponies and Watches.

TIPS TO CONTESTANTS.

The hustler always finds favor with his friends.

Someone will tell you that you can't win. Get the laugh on him.

Wanting to win and hustling to win are two different things.

Rumors about what others are doing will not get you votes.

Lack of hustle is "the pace that kills."

Two ponies for every district and two watches for every race—these are the prizes now in The Georgian and American contest.

The first prizes remain the same—pony outfits, "ready to drive away." Second prizes are ponies with saddles. Third and fourth prizes are the watches.

From now on there is no excuse for dallying.

If you can not win a first prize, there is a second prize almost as valuable, and if you fail for a pony, try for a watch as consolation.

No offer like this ever has been made before by an Atlanta paper. The rewards are enough to stimulate the enthusiasm of the most lethargic boy or girl.

There should be an immediate speeding up, particularly as there is a special offer which may expire any day—50,000 extra votes for the first $30 turned in for subscriptions. Another special offer of extra votes in telling quantities for every club of five expires July 5.

It is time to "get busy." Let your competitors see every Wednesday and Sunday that you are in the race in earnest.

World Move to Stop Frauds in Medicine

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., June 16.—That the "patent medicine" business and quackery has become so serious and widespread that a world-wide effort is being made to curtail it was the report of a committee at the sixty-fourth annual session of the American Medical Association, which opened to-day.

The membership of the association last year increased from 34,283 to 37,913, while the membership of the fifty-two constituent State associations during the year grew from 70,021 to 70,538.

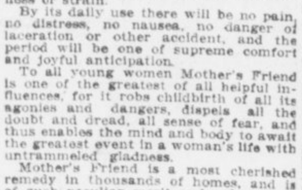
The Joy of Coming Motherhood

A Wonderful Remedy That is a Natural Aid and Relieves the Tension.

Mother's Friend, a famous external remedy, is the only one known that is able to reach all the different parts involved. It is a penetrating application after the formula of a noted family doctor, and lubricates every muscle, nerve, tissue or tendon affected. It goes directly to the strained portions and gently but surely relieves all tendency to soreness or strain.



By its daily use there will be no pain, no distress, no nausea, no danger of laceration or other accident, and the period will be one of supreme comfort and joyful anticipation.

To all young women Mother's Friend is one of the greatest of all helpful influences, for it robs childbirth of all its agonies and dangers, dispels all the dread, all sense of fear, and thus enables the mind and body to await the greatest event in a woman's life with untrammeled gladness.

Mother's Friend is a most cherished remedy in thousands of homes, and is of such peculiar merit and value as to make it essentially one to be recommended by all women.

You will find it on sale at all drug stores at $1 a bottle, or the druggist will gladly get it for you if you insist upon it. Mother's Friend is prepared only by the Bradfield Regulator Company, 137 Lamar Building, Atlanta, Ga., who will send you by mail, sealed, a very instructive book to expectant mothers. Write for it to-day.

"September Morn" Bathing Suits Are Barred in Denver

DENVER, COL., June 16.—A skirt, bloomers and a waist that comes close to the neck is the official bathing suit of Denver, under the commission form of government, as tentatively designed by Otto F. Thum, commissioner of property and therefore in charge of the park department, incidentally all the city beaches.

"I certainly believe it is not right for a woman to appear at a public bathing place clad only in tights," he said. "She hasn't on sufficient clothing then to be decent in her own bed room."

Men, Hatless, to Bear Parasols in Berlin

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 16.—Dress reform leagues in Berlin, Dresden, Bonn and other German towns have decreed that for the summer men shall go hatless and protect their heads with parasols. They have also decided men must not wear coats, substituting blouses cut after the fashion of a schoolboy's garment.

LABOR PARADE TO ECLIPSE ALL PAST

Ex-presidents and ex-delegates to the American Federation of Labor, executive officers of the Atlanta Federation and State Federation and Rev. Schaeffer, of the Evangelical Association, were added to the committee.

G. A. R. Is Ordered To Chattanooga

BRIDGEPORT, CONN., June 16.—General orders for the forty-seventh national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic at Chattanooga, Tenn., September 15 to 20, were issued by Commander-in-Chief Alfred B. Beers.

The fact is emphasized that a national encampment has never before been held so far south, and all veterans are urged to take this opportunity to visit the historic battlefields of Missionary Ridge, Lookout Mountain, Chickamauga and from Chattanooga to Atlanta.

Attention is directed to the Gettysburg reunion, the first day of which, July 1, will be veterans' day, under the direction of the commander-in-chief of the G. A. R.

Millionaire at 86 Weds for 4th Time

NEW BEDFORD, MASS., June 16. David A. Snell, millionaire cracker manufacturer, who is 86 years old, has just been married for the fourth time.

The present Mrs. Snell was Mrs. Janet Hamilton, of Boston, who for some time has acted as Mr. Snell's housekeeper. She is 33 years his junior.

CARNEGIE HELPS KAISER CELEBRATE

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 16.—Andrew Carnegie, leading worker for word-wide peace, to-day paid his respects to Emperor William, the "war lord of Europe." Mr. Carnegie was accompanied by other American peace commissioners who came here to extend felicitations to the Kaiser as part of the quarter centennial celebration of the ascension of the Emperor to the throne of Germany.

Although yesterday was the real anniversary, William having ascended the throne June 15, 1888, because it was Sunday the secular ceremonies were postponed until to-day.

Shortly after dawn the massed military bands from all the garrisons in the environs of Berlin assembled in Unter Den Linden and a crash of martial music, which echoed and re-echoed through the neighboring streets, followed.

Seven thousand school children joined in singing "The Watch on the Rhine" and other tunes the bands played. The streets were crowded with visitors from all sections of the empire. Among these were many American, English and other foreign tourists.

A mighty crowd gathered about the marble palace in Potsdam and sang the national hymn time and again. The wetaher was ideal for the occasion.

Recovered From Severe Lung Trouble

Plenty of fresh air and good food are necessary to persons suffering from lung trouble, but something more is needed to bring about full health. Eckman's Alterative is a medicine for throat and lung troubles, and so many reports have been received showing that it brought about good results in a number of cases which were declared hopeless, that all sufferers who are not benefiting otherwise should at least investigate what it has done for others. Investigate this case:

Madison Lake, Minn.

"Gentlemen: In December, 1908, March, 1909, and September, 1909, I was taken with hemorrhages of the lungs which confined me several weeks, each time to my bed. My doctor advised me to go West.

"In November I started for Denver, Colo. After my arrival I met Michael Brody, who upon learning of my condition, urged me to take Eckman's Alterative. In about two months I began to feel better. I kept on taking the medicine and improved fast. In March, 1910, I returned home. I think I am entirely well, have a good appetite and sleep well. When I left Denver my weight was 130 pounds. I now weight 165, my normal weight. I thank God and your Alterative for my health."

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain harmful drugs, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Jacobs' drug stores and other leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

COUNCIL TO PASS BUDGET EVEN IF VETOED

Mayor Repeats Statement That He Will Not Violate Supreme Court Crematory Decision.

Mayor James G. Woodward will affix his conditional approval to the June apportionment sheet Monday, the proviso being that nothing therein shall be construed in violation of the Supreme Court's crematory decision. Council, though, will construe this action as a disapproval and proceed in the afternoon to pass the budget as if the Mayor had vetoed it.

Following the budget's final passage Council will approve the $260,000 contract for the purchase of the crematory. The contract then will go to the Mayor, and if he vetoes it it will be passed over his objections.

Mayor Woodward Monday morning repeated his previous statement that he had nothing against the budget, but affixed certain conditions to his approval solely to be on the safe side.

Alderman Harwell is reported to be investigating the advisability of an additional 25 cent tax levy for public improvements. It is not known if his ordinance to this effect will be introduced to-day.

The Ivy Street boulevard proposition, involving franchise for double-track street car service on Piedmont Avenue, may and may not be presented to the General Council.

Councilman C. L. Ashley's segregation ordinance will be returned with the favorable recommendation of the police committee. Ashley said he expected the measure to pass unanimously.

A member of the park board to succeed Frank Wilby, who resigned, will be elected. A close contest is anticipated between Oscar Weinmeister and A. N. Thom.

Wife Asks Alimony of Count deGratresse

NEW YORK, June 16.—Countess Marie DeGratresse, wife of Count Joseph Gratresse, a civil engineer, has applied to Supreme Court Justice Giegerich to reopen her divorce case and grant her alimony.

The attorney for the Countess informed Justice Giegerich that the litigants may have been in collusion in agreeing upon $15 a week payments to the Countess. The Count's lawyer denied any collusion.

The Count has an alienation suit against Leon J. Garcey, 261 Fifth Avenue, whom he charges with supplying money for the Countess' divorce proceedings. Garcey denies.

Rothschilds Push Oil War on Standard

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—Another battle was on between the Rothschilds of England and the Standard Oil Company to-day in California, following the arrival of the Dutch tank steamer Kessler from Sumatra, carrying 3,000,000 gallons of gasoline. The Rothschilds sent to the United States the best grade of gasoline obtainable in the Orient.

This shipment, it was announced, is the first of many to be used in breaking the hold of the Standard Oil Company on the Pacific Coast.

"Petticoat Cops" Will Watch Newport Swim

NEWPORT, R. I., June 16.—Two policewomen have been placed on duty at the beach here by the Civic League. Their uniform consists of a blue blouse with brass buttons, a blue skirt and a sailor straw hat.

They will patrol the beach all summer and give especial attention to women in need of aid.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS OUT FOR RECORD

Twenty Working to Make Next Sunday's Attendance Biggest. Picnics This Week.

Twenty Sunday schools began Monday a campaign to smash all attendance records next Sunday and make the average increase for the year more than 100 members for each school.

The total attendance Sunday in the schools in the exchange agreement was 6,690, or an average of 334 for each school. The figure for the same schools last year was 5,057, an average of 252.

Two large picnics are planned for this week, the joint outing of the Second Baptist and First Christian Sunday schools, Tuesday afternoon and evening at Grant Park.

Following are the attendance figures Sunday:

A piano recital by the pupils of Miss Mabel D. McIver was given at the residence, 405 South Pryor Street. Violin selections were rendered by Miss McIver, Marie Carlton and C. P. Agricola. Gold medals were presented to the six pupils showing the most improvement during the past term.

Turks Fear Plot to Replace Abdul Hamid

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 16.—Commanders of the international fleet of warships in the Golden Horn have given notice to the Government they will protect the city if there is an uprising. Many more arrests were made to-day in connection with the assassination of Grand Vizier Mahmud Shevket Pasha.

Young Turk advisers profess to scent a plot on the part of the reactionaries to put Abdul Hamid back on the throne. A guard is maintained over the son of Kaimil Pasha, former Grand Vizier, who was arrested Sunday.

Tight Money Hits Egg And Butter Traders

NEW YORK, June 16.—Money stringency is having its effect upon the stores of butter and eggs. Holdings of eggs in New York City now are short 350,000 cases, of 30 dozen to the case, of what they were a year ago. Last year the limit advanced on eggs was $5.50 per case, and this year it is $4.50. Receivers have trouble in getting this.

The scarcity of money is being felt more in butter than in egg channels. Last year $15 was advanced per tub, while this year the banks are trying to hold down to $12.

Mrs. Hearst Gives Idols to Museum

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—An excellent collection of Hopi Indian idols was presented to the University of California anthropological museum at the Affiliated Colleges by Mrs. Phoebe A. Hearst.

Assistant Curator Gifford delivered a lecture on the Indian tepee, illuminating his topic by lantern slides, before a large audience.

DAY AT UNIVERSITY FOR 'UNDERGRADS'

Branch Colleges Represented at Athens on Monday—Alumni Reunions on Tuesday.

ATHENS, GA., June 16.—Following the largely attended baccalaureate exercises yesterday, when the commencement sermon was delivered by Dr. W. N. Ainsworth, of Macon, the undergraduate exercises of the University of Georgia were held in the chapel this morning. Speakers from the university departments in Athens, Atlanta, Augusta, Dahlonega and Milledgeville participated.

The trustees are holding another busy session to-day, and will act on some of the resolutions that have been introduced looking toward a greater university. This afternoon will be the prize military drill on Sanford Field and the appointment of cadet officers for next year. Two new flags will be presented to the university and received by Misses Helen Baxter, of Omaha, and Florence Hooper, of Athens, who will be attended by Misses Mary Arthur and Laura Cobb Hutchens.

To-night the annual champion debate between Demosthenian and Phi Kappa societies will take place, when four forensic juniors will argue whether or not the Philippines should be given their independence. The speakers are C. C. Adams, of Marietta, and V. E. Davis, of Covington, representing Demosthenian, and Charles McDaniel, of Atlanta, and R. H. Patterson, of Athens, representing Phi Kappa.

The "Sphinx" banquet at the Georgian Hotel and the law hop will be the social features to-night.

To-morrow will be alumni day. The address will be made by Eugene Black, of Atlanta. The classes of five, ten, fifteen and twenty years ago will gather here to-morrow in reunions. Class banners and streamers are already in evidence.

British Polo Players To Challenge Again

NEW YORK, June 16.—It was expected the Duke of Westminster, foremost exponent of polo in England, soon will send a challenge to the victorious Americans for another international polo match, to be played either next year or in 1915. The vanquished British console themselves because of the close score. Last Tuesday it was 5 1-2 goals to 3 and Saturday, 4 1-2 to 4 1-4.

A farewell dinner will be given to the Englishmen to-night. They expect to sail for England this week.

English Denounce Umpire.

LONDON, June 16.—English sportsmen are denouncing the umpire who decided a foul against the British polo players in their game Saturday against the American team. They claim the action of the referee was "unjustifiable" and "a miserable misfortune" and that the umpire had no right to halt the game.

Queen of Belgians Is in Sanitarium

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MONTRAUX, SWITZERLAND, June 16.—The Queen of the Belgians has been severely ill at Dr. Widmer's Sanitarium here two weeks. It is expected to be some time before she will be able to leave and she has canceled her engagements for the fetes at Ghent and other places which begin June 23.

American Colony in Palestine Prospers

BOSTON, June 16.—Jesse A. Yantis, representative of the American colony in Palestine, is here studying several classes of machinery which he hopes to introduce in Jerusalem.

This colony of Americans removed to Jerusalem in order that they might live as they believe the Saviour would if He were on earth to-day.

Woman Made Forest Rider in California

SACRAMENTO, CAL., June 16.—Miss Hallie Daggett, appointed forest guard in the Siskiyou reserve, is probably the first woman to hold that position in this country.

She was assigned to the Lookout post at Eddy's Gulch to watch for forest fires.

Pastor Lauds Movies As Agent for Good

CHICAGO, June 16.—One of the greatest influences for good is the moving pictures, according to Rev. Johnston Meyers, pastor of Immanuel Baptist Church.

Dr. Meyers said in a sermon that he was a regular patron of the movies.

"Blue Tag" Furniture Sale

True to the Best Traditions of Any That Have Gone Before

A Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. "Blue Tag" Furniture Sale!

To Atlantans who recall the fine economies of "The Blue Tag" sales the mere announcement that here now is another would doubtless be sufficient to hurry them to the store filled with the confidence that this is their opportunity to buy furniture to greatest advantage.

But this "Blue Tag" sale is planned to outdo all others!

Yes, to outdo ALL others. It has not been an easy task to prepare such a sale; the records and traditions of the others mark them as trade triumphs---as classics in the furniture business; but the guiding spirit of progress whispers that this one shall begin where the others left off and become a monumental merchandise movement only after it eclipses its predecessors.

And so have the preparations gone forward!

Judge for yourself the possibilities it offers you.

Here is the South's greatest furniture stock.

Every piece of it was chosen after careful, very careful examination, as the best of its kind for regular selling.

It is worthy furniture, right furniture, built to last year on year.

And Right Now

Every piece of furniture, excepting summer furniture, and several makes the prices of which we have contracted to maintain, in this, the South's greatest stock, is offered at a substantial reduction from its regular price; in fact, substantial reduction hardly expresses the vigorous price reductions you will find here.

And this in face of the fact that right now furniture prices are climbing to higher levels.

So whether it be---

Bedroom==Including Brass Beds==Dining Room or Living Room Furniture

Or all of these that you need---and in this month of brides and of new home-making there are many who will want furnishings for entire homes---now is the big opportunity. The tremendous varieties here mean that you may select to a nicety just the furniture you would have in your home. The tremendous reductions mean that you may save as you had never expected.

So come this morning. You will find the Blue Tags on everything; they tell their own story and it is an interesting story of fine savings.

Period Furniture

It is worthy of particular note in this noteworthy event that, although every little separate chair, rocker, desk, table, chiffonier, and the like in stock (with those exceptions already noted) is included, some of the healthiest reductions have been made on the rich and true sets of Period Furniture and reproductions of antique pieces---Sheraton, Jacobean, William and Mary, Chippendale and others. Sets for bedroom, dining room and living room.

Mother and Sons

By Virginia T. Van De Water.

"OH, it is pitiful, pitiful," exclaims Thackeray, "the bootless love of mothers for their children in Vanity Fair!"

The words recurred to my mind as I looked into the tragic eyes of a widow the mother of two sons. Her husband had died when her oldest child was but five years old. She was what has been called "a born mother," with whom maternity was an absorbing passion. She had married at eighteen and was a widow at twenty-six. For years she had worked uncomplainingly to educate her sons.

There had been not only work but the sacrifice of many of the things in which women delight. She had not had time to go into society during working-hours, and in the evening she "did not like to leave the boys." She put them both through college, living close to them, spending her strength and youth in the effort. When one of them finished his university course he went into business on the Pacific slope. Then the mother's face developed lines of anxiety, still she smiled bravely.

"I educated him that he might make the best of his chances," she said firmly, "and it would be selfish for me to mention to him my dread of parting from him. And I have my other boy, you know."

Two years later her second son was graduated and went to South America as a mining engineer. It was soon after this that I called on the lonely mother. She had grown old in a few weeks. She began talking of her boys—calmly at first, then her voice quivered and broke.

Need Her No More.

"What is there for me to do now?" she asked. "I am no good to anybody. I have dropped utterly out of the old set and world to which I once belonged. I am too old to learn new ways. My one aim has been to fit my boys for the battle of life, but I hoped that battle would be fought near me. Now I am left alone. I would be a selfish creature in the eyes of the world if I were to try to keep my sons with me—for they have their own lives to live, and mine is done. They will never be mine again. They will sometimes come to see me, but they will never come as they used to come. They need me no more."

She is not yet fifty and feels that her life is done! She is one of the "Mothers of Men" of whom George Cabot Lodge wrote:

"Weep, mothers of men!
The hands of the world are strong to take
The lives ye bear for the world's sole sake,
To try their souls till they bend or break;
Your children vanish from out your ken—
Weep, mothers of men!"

It is all true, viewed from one standpoint, and yet when women dare make a moan like this the world calls them selfish. If so, then it is too late for the mischief to be repaired.

"The greatest kindness we can do our children is to teach them to be independent of us," remarked one woman sententiously.

The mother to whom she spoke flung her hands out with a gesture that was almost despairing.

"Ah, yes!" she exclaimed bitterly, "but good Lord! who is going to teach US to be independent of THEM!"

There is the cry of the mother. Who, indeed?

Never Lose Daughters.

Mothers of daughters claim that they never lose these, and their contention is true. Even after a girl marries she turns to her mother for advice and counsel, often loving her better than she did before she appreciated what women must suffer for their children.

Yet, for the mother of sons there is always the possibility of which our poet writes. How can she fortify herself against this misery? It can not be prevented—God help her!—but it may be made lighter. For she can be less unreasoningly unselfish.

Does this sound cruel? Such selfishness as I have in mind is kindness to the mother and true kindness to the child. No boy is better for knowing that he fills his mother's entire mental and spiritual horizon, that she counts all sacrifice for him as gain. The time arrives—unless he be unusually noble—when, in spite of himself, the sacrifice is taken for granted by him; he thinks of it as his due and makes a common thing of it.

Would I have a boy sacrifice his future to his mother? No, but I would have him consult her a little in planning that future, and he will not do this if she has not taught him to consider her wishes as well as his own. If two equally good opportunities present themselves, I would have him choose the one which will keep him near his mother rather than that at the other side of the continent—always supposing the one at home means as big a future for him as does the one abroad.

Wider Views of Life.

But we are dealing now with the mother, rather than with the boy. I claim that even when her children are more babies she should force herself to take an interest in things outside of the nursery. She need not neglect her children to do this. Indeed, she will give them better care and bring them up in a finer, broader atmosphere if she has wide views of life and knows what is going on in the world. And, as her children grow to need less of her personal care, she ought to go about and meet people and think of other things as of the needs and wishes of her offspring.

Blessed—thrice blessed—is the mother of men when those men remain near her. If they must leave her she can not escape keen suffering, but if she has filled her "world" very "full of a number of things" she may escape adding to the pain of parting and missing the days of a desolate, objectless life, an empty heart and idle hands.

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is fishing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER XXIX.

THREE days passed before Gordon Kelly heard directly from Mildred Deery. Her nerves shattered and on the verge of hysteria, she had been taken home by Gordon after the near-tragedy in which Cain was involved. She would not allow Mrs. Shephard to summon either of her parents from Atlanta nor would she permit her to call the nearest doctor. She was her own physician in the days that followed and she began by prescribing complete rest and quietness. That, she told herself, was what the most celebrated physician in the land would have told her.

Gordon talked over the telephone with Elmer twice a day, night and morning, in the intervals before he saw Mildred again. With Steve as the messenger, he sent her all sorts of little delicacies and rare flowers. Where they came from she could not imagine. Certainly he had not had time to order them from Atlanta or Chattanooga, the nearest large cities; in fact, she doubted if they could be procured anywhere in those cities. His thoughtfulness had not a little to do with her convalescence, following the shock of the encounter with Cain.

Mildred Telephones.

On the morning of the third day she awoke calm and even cheerful. At breakfast she remarked to Elmer that she would be ready to resume the lesson in French, whereat the lad exclaimed, "Oh, shucks." Soon after she went to the telephone, rang three times and listened.

"Is Mr. Kelly at home?" she asked, when the ring had been answered. Elmer, who was within earshot, though not eavesdropping, grinned.

"There is no Mr. Kelly here," came the reply.

"Wait just a minute, please," said the voice, interrupting. There was some confusion on the other end of the line and then she heard Gordon Kelly's voice.

"Good morning," he said. "Is this you, Mildred?"

"Yes, Mr. Kelly."

"Mr. Kelly, eh? You call me Mr. Kelly one minute and Gordon the next. However, I won't quarrel with you, because you have been ill. How are you this morning? I have been very anxious about you."

"I am feeling quite myself again and thank you ever so much for all those nice things you sent me and for those lovely flowers. Tell me, where in the world did you get them?"

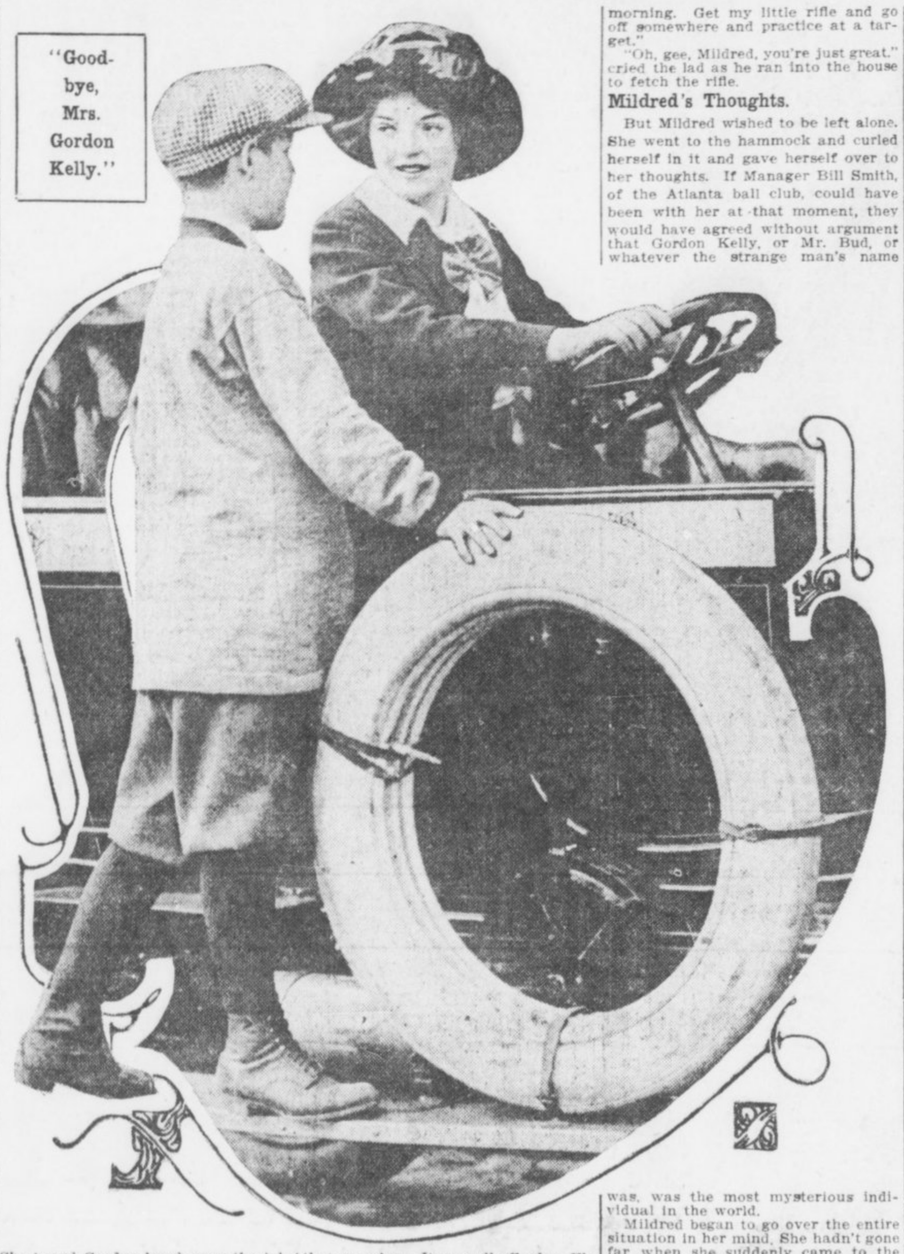
"The flowers? Oh, the gardener produced them when I made a requisition. The housekeeper produced the other things. I'm glad you enjoyed them."

An Engagement.

There was a brief silence, then Gordon said:

"Are you still there?"

"Yes," replied Mildred. "I was just thinking what a strange man you are with your automobiles and your gardeners and your colored genie and your housekeepers and your network of telephones away up here in the mountains, and your ball playing."



"Good-bye, Mrs. Gordon Kelly."

She heard Gordon laugh over the telephone. Then he said:

"Well, you know, the first time I saw you at your house your mother asked me about my life in the mountains; you wouldn't let me tell her and afterward, when I asked you why you did it, you said it was a secret. Do you remember?"

"Yes, I do, and it turns out a good deal more of a mystery than I had bargained for."

When Gordon spoke again his voice was lowered.

"Tell me, please; when will you feel well enough to let me see you?"

Mildred unconsciously lowered her voice, too.

"Why—I feel all right now. I'm not ill any more."

"May I call this afternoon?" he said, eagerly.

"Certainly; delighted to have you. But suppose I meet you?"

"Fine! Great! Where?"

"At—at—say at the bridge at 3. Now, good-bye; I must give Elmer his lesson in French."

If Mildred could have seen through the telephone, she would have seen Gordon slam up the receiver and turn three backward somersaults without stopping.

After all the threats, Elmer didn't take his lesson. It is true the books were produced and Mildred sat down at a table, opposite Elmer on the porch and assumed the dignified air of a schoolmarm, but that was as far as they got with the foreign language that morning. It was all off when Elmer said with a grin:

"They didn't know any Mr. Kelly up there, did they?"

No Gordon Kelly.

"What do you know about it, you little rascal?" demanded Mildred.

"I know all about it. There's no such man as Gordon Kelly."

"What do you mean, child?"

"I mean just what I say. There's no such person as Gordon Kelly."

"That's simply nonsense, Elmer; what in the world ails you to-day?"

"Oh, I got you buffaloed all right, Mildred. Ha, ha!" and he laughed gleefully.

"Elmer, you can be the most tantalizing boy I ever knew when you want to be. Now, look me straight in the eye and tell me what you mean."

"I'm telling you the truth, Mildred," said the lad, seriously. "His name isn't Gordon Kelly at all; it's Mr. Bud."

"Mr. Bud! Elmer, you're simply crazy. I won't listen to you any more. Take your books and go away."

"Now, Mildred, listen. I'm not fooling at all." Thereupon he told her of finding the telephone beside the brook and calling up Gordon Kelly and of his conversation with Steve, the colored boy. When he had finished Mildred tossed her head in the air and said, with decision:

"I'll find out what his name is mighty quick."

"When?"

"This afternoon. Now, I'll excuse you from taking your lesson this morning. Get my little rifle and go off somewhere and practice at a target."

"Oh, gee, Mildred, you're just great," cried the lad as he ran into the house to fetch the rifle.

Mildred's Thoughts.

But Mildred wished to be left alone. She went to the hammock and curled herself in it and gave herself over to her thoughts. If Manager Bill Smith, of the Atlanta ball club, could have been with her at that moment, they would have agreed without argument that Gordon Kelly, or Mr. Bud, or whatever the strange man's name was, was the most mysterious individual in the world.

Mildred began to go over the entire situation in her mind. She hadn't gone far when she suddenly came to the realization that she hardly knew anything at all about Gordon Kelly. She knew nothing about his family, his life nor his habits. He had been introduced into her family as Gordon Kelly, yet here, up in his mountain home, no one knew of a Gordon Kelly. They called him Mr. Bud. Who was Mr. Bud? Her father certainly didn't know him by that name. He had told her that he had met Gordon Kelly through Judge Barbee. Certainly the Judge wouldn't be a party to any deception. Was Gordon Kelly an assumed name? Was it an alias? Her father had told her nothing about Gordon Kelly's family—because he didn't know anything about it himself, probably.

Was his family "respectable?" Did he really own the property, or was he an employee or representative of the people that did own it? He might be a foreman or a superintendent. No harm in that, thought Mildred, but she would like to know about it.

Then she reviewed her brief acquaintance with Gordon Kelly. She recalled the conversations she had had with him in the few times they had met. The talk, she remembered, was mostly about books and music and kindred topics and the small talk that two young people would indulge in. It came back to her that he talked with great intelligence on music and art and literature. Surely he was refined and cultured. His family must be "respectable."

And then Mildred thought of Gordon Kelly the MAN—the tall, fine-featured, broad-shouldered, strong and powerful MAN. And her mind dwelt on his simplicity of manner, his kindness and gentleness and his prowess on the ball field and his bravery so lately displayed. And she was satisfied. She smiled contentedly to herself as she lay curled in the hammock. No, she would not break the engagement she had for 3 o'clock that afternoon, but she would find out all about the Gordon Kelly-Mr. Bud mystery.

"Make me look pretty, Mandy," said Mildred to her maid, who assisted her to dress when the time came. "I'se got a 'portant 'gagement fo' dis' afternoon."

She seldom allowed herself to unbend in dignity to her maid, but today she was feeling very cheerful and happy.

"Will you wear your tan dress, Miss Mildred?" asked the maid.

"No, Mandy, I'll wear the light blue; it's more becoming, don't you think so?"

Thus arrayed, she went out on the porch and asked Elmer to bring the runabout around. When it came she stepped in it and took her place behind the wheel.

"Good-bye, Elmer, see you later," she said to the lad.

"Gee, ain't I going, too?" said Elmer in a tone of disappointment.

"Not this time, honey; good-bye."

Before the car was fairly in motion the boy jumped on the side of it and, leaning over, whispered mischievously in Mildred's ear:

"Good-bye, Mrs. Gordon Kelly."

"You little wretch!" exclaimed Mildred, blushing furiously.

But she turned her head a moment later and waved her hand and smiled at him.

CHAPTER XXX.

WHEN Forrest Cain, lying unconscious in the road beside his automobile, regained his senses he saw Gordon Kelly standing over him. His mind was befuddled and he did not recall what had happened to him. Kelly prodded him with the toe of his shoe as though he was a dead snake and said, sharply, "Get up."

Cain rose slowly to his feet. The fight was all out of him.

"Walk around," ordered Kelly. Cain took a few steps. Kelly left him and joined Mildred and Elmer. "He is all right. Get in the car, please, and we will get out of this."

Without even another glance at Cain, the three entered Kelly's automobile and a minute later they were whirling down the road, leaving Cain, with singular indifference, to his own meditations.

Cain was sober by this time—sober, sullen and resentful. His right hand pained him. He looked at the back of it where the stone thrown by Elmer had struck him. It was crushed and bleeding. The fingers hung down as though without life. He felt of the bruise and winced. There was no doubt but that bones were broken. He cranked the motor with his left hand, entered the car and attempted to set the control into low speed, but found he had lost the use of his right handl. Reaching over with his left hand, however, he was able to manipulate the lever and then, easing in the clutch, the car moved slowly ahead. It was necessary to turn around. This was accomplished with infinite labor and finally the car was straightened out for the journey to Cain's shack. This had to be taken at low speed, however, because once the car started ahead he could not change the speed, as he only had the use of his left hand and could not take that from the steering wheel in order to change gears.

In gloomy silence he crawled back the six miles to his mountain habitation. He summoned his man George and commanded him to pack up. His campaign had utterly failed. He would go back to Atlanta to nurse his injury, nurse his lacerated feelings and plan some revenge that would settle scores with Gordon Kelly once and for all. While his man was busy packing he bathed his hand in cold water and, after pouring whisky on the wound as an antiseptic (and pouring a considerable quantity of it down his throat as an antisplenetic) he bandaged the injured member, swore at George on general principles and went outside to smoke and think some more.

In his three personal encounters with Gordon Kelly Cain had been badly worsted, verbally or physically, every time. Yet Gordon Kelly was in no way to blame in any case. He was attending strictly to his own business and had sought no quarrel with the man who declared himself his foe. This phase of the matter never once entered the mind of Cain. He only knew that it was through Gordon Kelly that all his troubles came.

At this point his sullen reveries were interrupted by the appearance of a tall, raw-boned, black-bearded man, dressed in the uncouth habiliments of the backwoods. Without a nod or any salutation, he made known the nature of his business.

"We done run out of matches," he said. "Got any?"

Cain was accustomed to deference from those he considered beneath him.

"What do you want with them?" he asked with a scowl.

"Eat 'em, mebbe; what's that to you?" drawled the stranger.

"Where do you come from?"

"None o' your damned business. Ef yer ain't got no matches, say so."

"You're on my property; you're trespassing," declared Cain.

"What do you all reckon you're gon' to do about?" observed the stranger in the same even tone.

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the twenty-four installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 25th installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

Man Who Loves Like a Pirate

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

C. C. W. writes:

"I am 27 years of age, and am desperately in love with a girl three years my junior. She is beautiful, accomplished and a leader in our social set. Although I have proposed to her three or four times she still refuses to marry me. I feel certain that there is no other occupying her time, for if I had a rival I would unquestionably put him out of the way.

"How am I to persuade this cold-hearted woman to become my bride?"

Persuade her by storming her father's castle some dark night, and carrying her off strapped behind you on the back of your noble charger. That is the time-honored method of all swashbucklers, and it is the method that would most appeal to one who says if he had a rival he would "unquestionably put him out of the way."

It is not the modern way. It, is not the sane way, but you are not modern, and I could almost suggest that one who talks of putting a rival "out of the way" is not sane.

It is a further mark that you are not wise that you call your sweetheart coldhearted. Because a woman will not yield to one lover doesn't prove she has a cold heart. In your case, my dear Sir Reginald, or Sir Launcelot, or whoever was the hero of your latest fiction, the cold heart of your lady love proves a cool head.

She will not marry you though you propose twenty times. There is something to you of which she does not approve. Instead of making over yourself, you keep on proposing, imagining that the opposition to be overcome lies not in your matchless person, but in her cold heart.

A Gory Love.

Yours is a love that reeks of gore and gunpowder. You emit fire from your nostrils when you speak of your passion, and would impress this woman with your daredevil disposition, your dauntless courage, and your untamed strength. I have known men who loved like pirates, just as you love. They became the kind of husbands who were afraid to go to the door when there was a ring late at night, and sent their wives instead.

You talk like a cheap hero in a book. It is the sort of talk that sometimes has telling effect on girls of 16, but, thank Heaven, the lady love of your piratical schemes and bloodthirsty dreams is 24 and has such a clear vision that she sees you as you are.

My dear, bold buccaneer, drop your paper sword, wipe the ink-red stains from your hands, cut off that fierce mustache and become a MAN. If you really love this woman, make of yourself such a worthy man that she will no longer spurn you, but will seek you instead.

Don't get on your knees when you propose, as did the heroes in your favorite fiction. Don't color your conversation with threats to carry her off bodily, slaying all who intervene. Stand on your feet, like a manly man, and tell her you love her in language that befits these most sane and prosaic times.

Your paper sword has failed to win. Try the better way of showing her a good, strong right arm that is ready to serve her through life.

Recognize the existence of a rival and know that he lies in this masquerade you have put on. "Put him out of the way" by all means by conducting yourself in a saner fashion.

Be a man and love as a man of 27 should love, leaving to those ten years your junior dreams and schemes that smell of gunpowder and gore.

.:. Revelations of High English Society .:.

By LADY DOROTHY NEVILL. .:.

A GRANDE DAME and leader of the social world during the greater part of the past century, Lady Dorothy Nevill, who died recently, was famous for her charm of manner, incisive wit, and brilliant repartee. She was the confidante of royal personages, statesmen, field marshals and diplomatists. At her receptions one met all the most attractive people of the day. Her intimate friends included such noted men as Beaconsfield, Gladstone, Wilberforce, Cobden, Bright and Matthew Arnold. Her greatest friend, perhaps, was Beaconsfield. He was always "Dear Dizzy" to Lady Dorothy, while he always addressed her as "My Dearest Dorothy," and their correspondence provides many interesting glimpses of this great Tory statesman.

Perhaps one of the best stories which Lady Dorothy has told about Disraeli is that concerning the occasion when a photographer asked him to pose for a photograph leaning on a chair. This at once aroused the indignation of Mrs. Disraeli. "I soon settled that," she said, afterwards, to Lady Dorothy, when relating the incident, "for I said, 'Dizzy has always stood alone, and he shall continue to do so.'"

"The Gorgeous Lily."

On one occasion Lady Dorothy, who was sitting next to Mr. Gladstone, was asked by the latter if she had ever heard Lord Beaconsfield express any particular fondness for the primrose. She admitted he had not, adding, "The gorgeous lily, I think, was more to his taste."

Referring to Gladstone, Lady Dorothy used to tell a story which is illustrative of the "Grand Old Man's" character. He was discoursing to her of the perfect immunity of English public men from all dangers of assault or assassination in his day, and all the time two detectives, dressed as footmen, were in the very room guarding him, while another was upstairs in the drawing-room ready to mingle with the guests.

It was Mr. Joseph Chamberlain who, talking to Lady Dorothy of female suffrage, once said, "Thank goodness, there are no female members. Of the two evils I prefer Parnellites to petticoats."

Lady Dorothy herself was equally severe in regard to suffragettes, for in one of her books she writes: "Heaven did not make women insinuating and persuasive that they might be peevish. It did not make them feeble that they might be imperious; it did not give them softer voices than man in order that they might rail at him; not delicate features to be destroyed by rage. Angry women forget themselves and the dignity of their sex, which has never gained much by scolding."

Lady Dorothy Nevill had a good deal to say about the change that has taken place in the character and the manners of women since her own earlier days. She considered the modern woman is spoilt, has too much time on her hands, takes up too many fads, and completely dominates her husband. This struck the old Shah of Persia very much. He said: "It seems to me that the English and American husband is nothing better than a sort of butler."

Lady Dorothy was particularly severe on the "smart set" of to-day. "The elite," she said, "are fast, flippant and smart. People are less interesting to talk to, less sociable, less brilliant in conversation, less interested in things." And as an illustration of the change in the life of a society woman, who to-day thinks nothing of spending $5,000 a year on her dress, she mentions how she and her sister were given a dress allowance of $250 and $200, respectively, by their adoring father.

She was also wont to refer to the fact that in her younger days parents were very particular about the matrimonial alliances made in their families, and she told an amusing story of one old peer who was greatly surprised to be told by his sister that she had developed a great affection for a well-known scientist of humble birth.

The peer sent for him and said, brusquely, "Now, sir, I should like to know something about your family."

"I think it will be sufficient," replied the scientist, who aws of Semitic extraction, "to say that I descended from the illustrious blood of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob."

The peer was taken aback. "Oh," he said, "of course, my family has nothing to compare with that; therefore, if my sister really likes you, you'd better take her."

Leap Year Proposals.

This reminds one of another story which Lady Dorothy relates in one of her books concerning an East Anglican clergyman who was visited by a lady parishioner and asked whether he thought a woman might, in any circumstances, propose to a man. Much taken aback, the poor rector replied that he certainly thought there might be circumstances which would make such a proposal justifiable. Upon which, without the slightest hesitation, the lady exclaimed, "As Nathan said unto David, 'Thou art the man.'" And, seeing no possibility of escape, he was.

Speaking of the amusements of girls in her time, Lady Dorothy said that in the sixties, when old-fashioned croquet occupied most of her attention, it was supposed to be responsible for many marriages. "Are you going to make a flower-bed here, Thomas?" asked a young lady of the gardener. "Yes, mum, them's the horders." "Why, it will quite spoil our croquet ground." "Can't help it, mum. Them's yer pa's horders. He ses as 'ow to have it laid out for 'orticulture, not 'usbandry."

Lady Dorothy also numbered the late King Edward among her personal friends. Once, sitting next to him at dinner, he noticed she ate oysters with a knife. He made a humorous comment, and the next morning presented her with a beautiful case of oyster knives, and in the note which accompanied them said: "In remembrance of your criminal tendency."

A "Regular" Babe.

It was a timber law case, in which Tim Healy was counsel for the defense. In the course of the case a youthful witness was put up as an expert on the plaintiff's side. Tim got up to cross-examine.

"What age are you?"

"Twenty-one years."

"How long have you been in the timber trade?"

"Two years."

Tim sat down, saying, "A regular babe in the wood, my lord," which discounted the evidence of the youthful expert.

Their Married Life

Helen Is Made to Feel That She Is Too Exacting and Expects Too Much of Maggie.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"WHY, Maggie, this isn't a clean cloth. Look at this!" Helen pointed to a distinct grease spot on the damask tablecloth. "And here's another. Why, this is the cloth we had on for breakfast."

"'Twas clean last night, ma'am," grumbled Maggie. "That makes three we've had on this week. We can't have no clean cloth every night."

"Well, we certainly will when we have guests. Now, you'll simply have to change this, Maggie. You ought to have known that cloth wouldn't do for dinner to-night."

"I won't have no time to unset that table now, ma'am," obstinately. "It's after 6 already.'

Helen flushed and bit her lips. Maggie was growing more and more impertinent, but just before a company dinner was not the time to reprove her. So with an effort Helen kept back the sharp words and began deliberately to unset the table herself.

It was late and she was not yet dressed, but having taken the stand that there must be a clean cloth, she had no choice now but to put one on.

The first cloth she unfolded was an old one that had been darned; the next had a claret stain. Both of these had to be refolded and put back. The third was badly ironed and was hard to get on straight, but she finally got it adjusted and began to reset the table.

As she replaced the silver she found that there had been only three forks by each plate.

Fork Missing.

'Maggie, you forgot to put down an extra fork for the relish," as Maggie came in to get a dish from the sideboard.

"We aint got no relish, ma'am."

"Why, I told you to open a can of those anchovies."

"We used the last can of them, ma'am, last Sunday."

"But surely there's another can." Helen went out in the pantry to convince herself. "Well, we MUST have some kind of a relish. Oh, here's that jar of anchovy paste! Make some little squares of toast and spread it with this. You've got a hard-boiled egg," glancing in the refrigerator; "you can grate that over it."

Maggie, who was whipping the cream for the berries, turned around with an angry flush.

"You're wanting too much, ma'am. That's fancy cooking. Cooks who makes them fussy dishes gets $50 a month! And you expect me at the last minute to drop everything and——"

"That'll do, Maggie. As soon as I can get dressed I'll make this myself. And if you think you can get a place as a $50 cook I'd advise you to take it."

Helen flounced into her dressing room. For her dinner was already spoiled. She could never enjoy anything after any kind of a scene. Her whole nature shrank from contention, and just to keep peace she had let Maggie have her own way for so long that now she resented everything she was told.

The fact that the girl was honest, economical and an excellent cook had made Helen put up with everything else. But now she felt that she would rather have someone more agreeable and amenable, even though less capable.

A Man's Job.

Warren came in whistling, which with him was an evidence of rare good humor. Helen ran into his room with a hurried greeting.

"Oh, I'm so glad you've come, dear. Can you hook me up before you dress? I don't want to ask Maggie—she's been perfectly horrid!"

"Humph! Turn around here to the light, then. What's this thing?"

"Oh, wait—that's the inside belt! I'll hook that. There! Oh, dear, Maggie's getting to be IMPOSSIBLE!"

"What's the matter now?" as he clumsily hooked the dress.

"She put a soiled tablecloth on to-night—and I had to change it myself. And when I asked her to make some anchovy toast for a relish she said cooks get $50 a month for making those fancy dishes. Hurry, dear; never mind the bottom ones—I can hook those."

"Here—you hold still! You wanted me to fasten this—didn't you?"

She drew away from his still fumbling fingers and darted out into the kitchen. Maggie was fixing the salad. Helen maintained a cold, disapproving silence as she sliced the bread, cut the crust off to make small squares and put them on the broiler in the already heated oven.

The heat flushed her face and she burnt her finger, which increased her resentment. Hurriedly she mixed a spoonful of butter, spread it thickly on the toast and garnished each piece with the grated hard-boiled egg.

Fortunately the Thurstons were a few moments late, and Helen had the dainty squares of anchovy toast at each plate before the bell rang. But now she was flustered and nervous and felt in no mood for guests. However, as Warren was in an especially genial humor, her silence and abstraction were not noticed.

"What is this?" asked Mrs. Thurston. "Anchovy toast, isn't it? I wish Jane would make things like this. A relish adds so much to the dinner."

"S-s-sh," whispered Helen, with a glance toward the pantry. "I had to make it myself. Oh, I've had a TIME with her this evening! I feel I'm just about through."

"Why, I thought Maggie was such a good girl?" questioned Mrs. Thurston in surprise.

Her Own Story.

"She is—if you let her do everything her own way. But there ARE times when you want things done your own way. Just to keep peace I've let her dominate me more and more. I'll never begin that with another girl. It's always a mistake—they always take advantage of it."

"Well, I should advise you to hold on to Maggie," was Mr. Thurston's comment. "We've had a devil of a time for the last few weeks."

"Oh, didn't you like that Swedish woman?" asked Helen.

Mrs. Thurston shrugged her shoulders. "We've had three since then."

"But I thought she was going to be so good? She was a working housekeeper, wasn't she?"

"That's what she SAID she was," grinned Mrs. Thurston. "But she wouldn't work, and she didn't know anything about housekeeping! Then we had a German girl. She was RICH! Tell about her, Minnie."

Mrs. Thurston laughed. "Well, we forgot to lock the wine up one night, and she drank half a bottle of cherry brandy. The next morning I had to get breakfast."

"That's one fine thing about Maggie," announced Warren. "We never have to lock up the wine or anything else. And our grocery and butcher bills have been less since we've had her than they've ever been before."

"Well, that's just what we're looking for," said Mr. Thurston emphatically. "In case you let her go, turn her over to us, will you? By Jove, the one we've got now is extravagant, all right."

"Yes, she's very wasteful," agreed Mrs. Thurston. "We've used five pounds of butter this week—just for us two."

"Five!" exclaimed Helen. "Why, Maggie rarely uses more than three."

"Three? We've never used as little as that since we've been housekeeping. We've never had a girl that didn't either take stuff home or feed a lot of company in the kitchen. This one has a beau that comes two nights a week, and she gets him a regular supper. But what can we say? We just have to put up with it."

"Well, I'D say a good deal." Warren's tone was emphatic.

"Not if you'd been through what we've been in the last two months," declared Mr. Thurston, grimly. "You don't know what a cinch you've got in Maggie."

Helen Uncomfortable.

Helen had the uncomfortable feeling that all this was tending to make her seem in the wrong. The inference was that if she could not get along with such a paragon of virtues as Maggie, she must be over-particular and very hard to please. The injustice of this rankled keenly. They only saw the best of Maggie; they did not know how trying, sullen and impertinent she could be.

The Thurstons stayed late, and as they were starting home Mrs. Thurston happened to glance in the bedroom. As usual, Maggie had fixed the bed for the night, taken off the counterpane and neatly turned down the covers. On the table was a fresh pitcher of ice water, covered with a napkin.

"Well, I call that luxury," Mrs. Thurston declared. "Look, Henry," calling to her husband, who was getting on his overcoat in the hall. "That's the way Maggie fixes their bed every night. Do you suppose we'll ever have the luck to get a girl like that?"

Helen flushed. It was only an added evidence of Maggie's perfection and of her own lack of appreciation.

Later, when Warren wound his watch for the night, he frowned over it thoughtfully.

"See here, we HAVE got a cinch in Maggie, but you don't seem to know it. You expect too blamed much of a girl. Great Scott, if you can't get along with her, who CAN you get along with? We've got a good thing and we're going to take Thurston's advice and hold on to it. Now you can just make up your mind to that."

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

"Cultivate Harmonious Surroundings," Says Doris Keane

Miss Keane's stage-room bower, and her favorite picture.

By LILLIAN LAUFERTY.

WITCHERY, charm incarnate, the lure of "the eternal woman," are to become living and tangible qualities through Doris Keane's portrayal of Margarita Cavallini in "Romance"—made real at Maxine Elliott's theater in New York.

Of course you have often read a book or seen a play in which earnest author and striving characters tell you again and again how charming is the fair heroine. All their insistence never makes it true! For the witchery of moonlight and the appeal of lovely woman are subtle things you must feel in stirring heart the while you see with rapt eyes.

But the Italian prima donna of "Romance" fascinates and bewitches even when you disapprove of the saucy jade—and at last she wins you heart and soul as with brimming eyes you sit rapt and thrilled the while she rises to the sacred realization of her woman's soul and pleads with her adorer, "Let me be good."

The curtain fell on an old man's dream of youth—or romance—and I was whisked back to the realm of glaring lights, of rouge pots and cold cream jars, of wigs and artifice, to visit our new star in her non-twinkling daylight environment—the dressing room.

All around me were flowered curtains and draperies of quaint old chintz—and everywhere, on stray shelves, on the dressing table, in free corners were glowing, fragrant flowers. And in the midst of this beauty and light sat Doris Keane still pulsing with the emotion she had felt the while she portrayed it.

Her Passion.

"You love beauty?" I ventured.

"I love beautiful surroundings and the personality they must develop," said Miss Keane. "You see, I have a sister—ever since our childhood I had known and felt and admired her radiant beauty. I knew I could never be like that—and one accepts the impossible serenely after a time. I accepted beauty and did not analyze it. I began to think more about personality and the power that brings.

"Ah, is not personality a wonderful thing! That almost all women can develop—the force, the magnetism that a rare and evenly developed personality bring are to me more lovely than beauty. Though, of course, the daughters of Eve do try to look as well as possible, to make that quick little appeal that gives personality a hearing.

"The most charming women have varying personalities. Do you know when I am most popular with myself? It is when I have a sudden realization that I looked like a girl of 15 in the morning, and that now in sophisticated evening clothes I look suddenly 'grande dame'—elderly even."

Of course Miss Keane would have some difficulty in looking "elderly," for, in spite of her well-bred poise, in spite of the keen power to analyze and appraise life that glows in the deep fires of her great brown eyes, Miss Keane is a girlish and appealing little figure.

In her Junoesque costume in "The Affairs of Anatol," early this winter, she managed to look tall and stately, in her present play she is an exotic Italian, but in propria persona Miss Keane is a brown-haired American girl whose earnestness of purpose and ambitious willingness to work add to the fervor of artistic inspiration and make her beautiful with a charm that surmounts mere prettiness of feature in a way that affords a little sermon all its own.

"Surroundings are so important," went on Miss Keane. "One evening recently a party of friends took me to a restaurant all done in Heavy plush hangings and oppressive gilt. My personality was smothered, and I became a quiet, depressed creature quite different from the animated person I had been just before.

A Sure Sign.

"That made me finally sure of my theory. Surround yourself with fresh, clean, airy, wholesome surroundings. For purposes of stimulating mind and spirit a day in the country far surpasses a glass of champagne. The outdoors—trees, green growing things and a chance in nature and solitude to know your own soul are the most wonderful tonics I know.

"Isolation, solitude—a chance to 'ventilate my soul'—are the things I like best in the world.

"Since I was six years old I have known what I wanted to do in the world. That is young, perhaps—but ever since I can remember I have been working toward a chance to act—to interpret character. Women must find themselves and the outlet for their powers if they want to be happy—and whatever charm tragic beauty has, the loveliness of a happy soul working toward a goal is more appealing to the world—and men.

"But while I like men—the man is not come—I think for the actress who is afire with her art all else must be secondary."

I looked at those glowing brown eyes—alight with ambition, with earnest purpose, with desire to see deep into the great mystery of life—for Miss Keane glories in the vastness of life, and thinks to absolutely understand even one phase of it would be a splendid thing—as I looked at those fine eyes I felt that Doris Keane had told me the great secrets of spiritual beauty that can illuminate the face of any woman who desires it.

To rise above the tawdry plush and gilt facts of life, to "ventilate your soul," and open it to the loveliness of Nature, to find yourself and the outlet for your powers—to keep happily, healthily busy, to know ambition's spur, and to strive to grow—these are the beauty secrets of Doris Keane, who has not thought much about beauty—and yet has cultivated a spirit and charm that make her natural loveliness ever a greater delight.

WITHIN THE LAW

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intrigue and Love

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Turner, an orphan, employed in Edward Gilder's department store, is unjustly accused of theft and sent to prison. She is hounded by the police on her release, and finally goes to live with Joe Garson, a forger, and Aggie Lynch, a blackmailer, both of whom treat her with respect. Mary resolves to keep "within the law." She becomes the leader of a band of swindlers. Gilder's son, Dick, falls in love with her, and she marries him to be revenged on his father—and then finds that she is in love with him. Dick refuses to give her up, a demand made by his father, Mary disappears. Police Inspector Burke in an effort to aid the elder Gilder schemes to secure the arrest of Mary through "English Eddie" Griggs, a police informer. Garson plans to rob the Gilder home on a tip from Griggs. Mary hears of it and tries to prevent it, going to the Gilder home. Mary pleads with Garson to drop the robbery, and Dick enters. Garson kills Griggs when Mary corners the latter and he admits he is working for the police. Burke enters the house, a searchlight throwing its rays on the dead man's body. Mary and Dick are arrested, because Mary tells Burke that Dick shot Griggs in defense of his home. The District Attorney tries to quash the case against young Gilder. Inspector Burke obtains from Miss Helen Travers West, daughter of a prominent railroad official, a promise that she will tell something about Mary.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"I shall do nothing of the sort. Sit down, indeed!—here! Why, I have been arrested——" There came a break in the music of her tones throbbing resentment. A little sob crept in, and broke the sequence of words. The dainty face was vivid with shame. "I——" she faltered, "I've been arrested—by a common policeman!"

The Inspector seized on the one flaw left him for defense against her indictment.

"No, no, miss," he argued, earnestly. "Excuse me. It wasn't any common policeman—it was a detective sergeant."

But this effort to placate was quite in vain. The ingenuous little beauty with the child's face and the blue eyes so widely opened fairly panted in her revolt against the ignominy of her position, and was not to be so easily appeased. Her voice came vibrant with disdain. Her level gaze on the Inspector was of a sort to suggest to him anxieties over possible complications here.

"You wait!" she cried violently. "You just wait, I tell you, until my papa hears of this!"

Burke regarded the furious girl doubtfully.

"Who is your papa?" he asked, with a bit of alarm stirring in his breast, for he had no mind to offend anyone of importance where there was no need.

"I sha'nt tell you," came the petulant retort from the girl. Her ivory forehead was wrinkled charmingly in a little frown of obstinacy. "Why," she went on, displaying new symptoms of distress over another appalling idea that flashed on her in this moment, "you would probably give my name to the reporters." Once again the rosebud mouth drooped into curves of sorrow, of a great self-pity. "If it ever got into the newspapers, my family would die of shame!"

The pathos of her fear pierced through the hardened crust of the police official. He spoke apologetically.

"Now, the easiest way out for both of us," he suggested, "is for you tell me just who you are. You see, young lady, you were found in the house of a notorious crook."

The haughtiness of the girl waxed. It seemed as if she grew an inch taller in her scorn of the Inspector's saying.

"How perfectly absurd!" she exclaimed, scathingly. "I was calling on Miss Mary Turner!"

"How Did You Meet Her?"

"How did you come to meet her, anyhow?" Burke inquired. He still held his big voice to a softer modulation than to which it was habituated.

Yet, the disdain of the girl seemed only to increase momently. She showed plainly that she regarded this brass-buttoned official as one unbearably insolent in his demeanor toward her. Nevertheless, she condescended to reply, with an exaggeration of the aristocratic drawl to indicate her displeasure.

"I was introduced to Miss Turner," she explained, "by Mr. Richard Gilder. Perhaps you have heard of his father, the owner of the Emporium."

"Oh, yes. I've heard of his father and of him, too," Burke admitted, placatingly.

But the girl relaxed not a whit in her attitude of offense.

"Then," she went on severely, "you must see at once that you are entirely mistaken in this matter." Her blue eyes widened further as she stared accusingly at the Inspector, who betrayed evidences of perplexity, and hesitated for an answer. Then, the doll-like, charming face took on a softer look, which had in it a suggestion of appeal.

"Don't you see it?" she demanded.

"Well, no," Burke rejoined uneasily; "not exactly, I don't!" In the presence of this delicate and graceful femininity he experienced a sudden, novel distaste for his usual sledge-hammer methods of attack in interrogation. Yet his duty required that he should continue his questioning. He found himself, in fact, between the devil and the deep sea—though this particular devil appeared rather as an angel of light.

Now, at his somewhat feeble remark in reply to her query, the childish face grew as hard as its curving contours would permit.

"Sir!" she cried indignantly. Her little head was thrown back in scornful reproof, and she turned a shoulder toward the official contemptuously.

"Now, now!" Burke exclaimed in remonstrance. After all, he could not be brutal with this guileless maiden. He must, however, make the situation clear to her, lest she think him a beast—which would never do!

"You see, young lady," he went on with a gentleness of voice and manner that would have been inconceivable to Dacey and Chicago Red; "you see, the fact is that, even if you were introduced to this Mary Turner by young Mr. Gilder, this same Mary Turner herself is an ex-convict, and she's just been arrested for murder."

At the dread word a startling change was wrought in the girl. She wheeled to face the Inspector, her slender body swaying a little toward him. The rather heavy brows were lifted slightly in a disbelieving stare. The red lips were parted, rounded in a tremulous horror.

"Murder!" she gasped, and then was silent.

"Yes," Burke went on, wholly at ease now, since he had broken the ice thus effectually. "You see, if there's a mistake about you, you don't want it to go any further—not a mite further, that's sure. So, you see, now, that's one of the reasons why I must know just who you are." Then, in his turn, Burke put the query that the girl had put to him a little while before. "You see that, don't you?"

"Oh, yes, yes!" was the instant agreement. "You should have told me all about this horrid thing in the first place." Now the girl's manner was transformed. She smiled wistfully on the Inspector, and the glance of the blue eyes was very kind, subtly alluring. Yet in this unbending, there appeared even more decisively than hitherto the fine qualities in bearing of one delicately nurtured. She sank down in a chair by the desk and forthwith spoke with a simplicity that in itself was somehow peculiarly potent in its effect on the official who gave attentive ear.

"My name is Helen Travers West," she announced.

Burke started a little in his seat, and regarded the speaker with a new deference as he heard that name uttered.

"Not the daughter of the railway president?" he inquired.

She Displayed Agitation.

"Yes," the girl admitted. Then, anew, she displayed a serious agitation over the thought of any possible publicity in this affair.

"Oh, please, don't tell anyone," she begged prettily. The blue eyes were very imploring, beguiling, too. The timid smile that wreathed the tiny mouth was marvelously winning. The neatly gloved little hands were held outstretched, clasped in supplication. "Surely, sir, you see now quite plainly why it must never be known by any one in all the wide, wide world that I have ever been brought to this perfectly dreadful place—though you have been quite nice!" Her voice dropped to a note of musical prayerfulness. The words were spoken very softly and very slowly, with intonations difficult for a man to deny. "Please let me go home." She plucked a minute handkerchief from her handbag, put it to her eyes, and began to sob quietly.

The burly Inspector of Police was moved to quick sympathy. Really, when all was said and done, it was a shame that one like her should by some freak of fate have become involved in the sordid, vicious things that his profession made it obligatory on him to investigate. There was a considerable hint of the paternal in his air as he made an attempt to offer consolation to the afflicted damsel.

"That's all right, little lady," he exclaimed, cheerfully. "Now, don't you be worried—not a little bit. Take it from me, Miss West. * * * Just go ahead and tell me all you know about this Turner woman. Did you see her yesterday?"

The girl's sobs ceased. After a final dab with the minute handkerchief, she leaned forward a little toward the Inspector, and proceeded to put a question to him with great eagerness.

"Will you let me go home as soon as I've told you the teenty little I know?"

"Yes," Burke agreed promptly, with an encouraging smile. And for a good measure of reassurance he added as one might to an alarmed child: "No one is going to hurt you, young lady."

"Well, then, you see, it was this way," began the brisk explanation. "Mr. Gilder was calling on me one afternoon, and he said to me then that he knew a very charming young woman, who——"

Here the speech ended abruptly, and once again the handkerchief was brought into play as the sobbing broke to a moan.

Burke felt himself vaguely guilty as the cause of such suffering on the part of one so young, so fair, so innocent. As a culprit, he sought his best to afford a measure of soothing for this grief that had had its source in his performance of duty.

Her Voice Sank.

"That's all right, little lady," he urged in a voice as nearly mellifluous as he could contrive with its mighty volume. "That's all right. I have to keep on telling you. Nobody's going to hurt you—not a little bit. Believe me! Why, nobody ever would want to hurt you!"

But this well-meant attempt to assuage the stricken creature's woe was futile. The sobbing continued. With it came a plaintive cry, many times repeated, softly, but very miserably.

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear!"

"Isn't there something else you can tell about this woman?" Burke inquired in desperation before the plaintive outburst. He hoped to distract her from such grief over her predicament.

The girl gave no least heed to the question.

"Oh, I'm so frightened!" she gasped.

"Tut, tut!" the Inspector chided. "Now, I tell you there's nothing at all for you to be afraid of."

"I'm afraid!" the girl asserted dismally. "I'm afraid you will—put me—in a cell!" Her voice sank to a murmur hardly audible as she spoke the words so fraught with dread import to one of her refined sensibilities.

"Pooh!" Burke returned, gallantly. "Why, my dear young lady, nobody in the world would think of you and a cell at the same time—no, indeed!"

Instantly, the girl responded to this bald flattery. She fairly radiated appreciation of the compliment, as she turned her eyes, dewy with tears, on the somewhat flustered Inspector.

"Oh, thank you!" she exclaimed, with naïve enjoyment.

Forthwith, Burke set out to make the most of this favorable opportunity.

"Are you sure you've told me all you know about this woman?" he questioned.

Burke Was Moved.

"Oh, yes! I've only seen her two or three times," came the ready response. The voice changed to supplication, and again the clasped hands were extended beseechingly.

"O please, Commissioner! Won't you let me go home?"

The use of a title higher than his own flattered the Inspector, and he was moved to graciousness. Besides, it was obvious that his police net in this instance had enmeshed only the most harmless of doves. He smiled encouragingly.

"Well, now, little lady," he said, almost tenderly, "if I let you go now, will you promise to let me know if you are able to think of anything else about this Turner woman?"

"I will—indeed, I will!" came the fervent assurance. There was something almost—quite provocative in the flash of gratitude that shone forth from the blue eyes of the girl in that moment of her superlative relief. It moved Burke to a desire for rehabilitation in her estimation.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

CONVINCE HER THEY ARE FALSE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen and deeply in love with a girl of seventeen. Some jealous person told her false stories about me that she believes. This caused a quarrel. Please tell me a way to regain her affections.

B. H.

You must never rest idle under false accusations. Convince her of your innocence and let the matter end there. Let it end for the reason that you are too young to know what love is.

YOU WERE RIGHT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been acquainted with a young man for several months, and he has taken me out quite a number of times. The last time he called he wanted to take me to a dance, but I refused, as he did not notify me in time so that I could get ready. Was I right in doing so? Since then he has not called to see me.

F. C.

You had the right of refusal, of course. If he is pouting because of it, believe me, my dear, he will prove a very uncomfortable friend, and you must waste no time or emotions on him.

The doors of a certain new house had shrunk horribly, as is the way of the modern door made of unseasoned wood. The builder would not send the joiner to replace them, so the householder tried the ironical method and wrote:

"Dear Sir: The mice can run under most of our doors, but our cat can not follow them. Will you please send a man at once to make room under the doors for the cat, and much oblige?"

Next day the joiners came.

Lost Books That Caused Tragedies

WHEN Thomas Carlyle had finished the first volume of his "French Revolution," a work which had cost him months of incessant toil and the verification of thousands of facts and references, he lent the manuscript to John Stuart Mill. Surely, that philosopher had one of the worst tasks ever allotted to a mortal man when he had to tell the "Sage of Chelsea" that the priceless manuscript had been thrown into the fire by a careless servant, and only a few charred leaves—still to be seen in Cheyne Row, Chelsea—remained to tell the tale.

Sir Isaac Newton was the victim of a similar catastrophe, but the "friend" responsible was not human, but canine—his favorite little dog. He left him in his study alone, and when he came back found that he had "chewed" the mathematical calculations of many strenuous months. Many accounts say that Newton took it very calmly, but the truth is that it preyed upon his mind to such an extent as to cause much temporary mental aberration.

One of the great losses to literature was the burning of six books of Spenser's "Faery Queen" which the poet is said to have left in his house in County Tyrone, Ireland. A rebellion broke out, and the place was burned; and not only did the poet's youngest child perish in the flames, but, it is said, also about as much of the great poem as we possess at present.

All lovers of Byron are aware that this erratic genius found time in his short, adventurous life to write his memoirs, and that on his death these passed into the hands of his friend, Thomas Moore, who, exercising a discretion committed to him, promptly consigned the manuscript to the flames.

No doubt the writer of "Irish Melodies" had very good and highly proper reasons for taking this decisive step, and it is quite likely that the publication of the memoirs would not, for obvious reasons, have been possible for many years after the poet's death; yet as succeeding generations have been brought face to face with the peculiarly complex genius of Byron, with its lofty moods and its many dark places, they have felt need of the light which only the records written by a vanished hand could have supplied.

Since the death of Auguste Strindberg, the famous Swedish novelist and dramatist—who, by the way, had much in common with Byron—many of his works have been translated into the English language and are already the center of heated controversy in literary circles. It is possible, therefore, that the powerful, if somewhat misanthropical, writings of this Swedish recluse may be read and treasured by generations to come. But all his works will not go down to posterity, for it is said that in a sudden fit of despondency Strindberg himself destroyed a number of his manuscripts, which, through lack of time or inclination, he never wrote again.

BUD ANDERSON PUZZLES COAST FIGHT CRITICS

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 16.—That the coast fight critics are not yet quite sure whether Bud Anderson, of Medford, Oreg., is a real fighter or only a flash in the pan is indicated quite clearly by the remarks of all the men who have been out there and have watched him battle. Some say that he is one of the wonders of the world and others are waiting to see whether he defeats Leach Cross before expressing a definite opinion. He is to battle Cross on July 4 in a twenty-round battle, and his standing largely will be determined by the outcome of that affair.

* * *

BOB LAGA, the old-time Chicagoan, who has been a follower of the boxing game for years and has handled some of the best of them, was in the city last night and had something to say of Anderson. "Whitey Bob," as he was known around when boxing flourished here, has been in the East scouting, but is on his way back to Los Angeles. He thinks Anderson is one of the very greatest of the lightweights, and if he doesn't get bigger nothing on earth but a serious accident can keep him out of the lightweight title. Laga bases his opinion on Bud's punching ability alone and nothing else.

* * *

"BUD doesn't look to have such a terrific wallop, but what he has is a short, stunning wallop that seems to have his opponents dazed right from the start," is the way Bob puts it. "He hits from a very short distance, but there must be a terrible lot of sting to his either hand. He surely will beat Cross in the coming bout, but it will be a poor contest unless Cross will go in and take a chance. Anderson likes to wait for his man to come in close before he hits. Cross is much the same sort of a workman, and there may be a lot of standing around and stalling in this match."

* * *

BOB further expressed the opinion that Ad Wolgast is all in and that it will be next to impossible for him to come back in the old style and do any good with some of the newcomers of the division. "He seems to have lost all of the old stamina and pep," Laga said. "He seems as anxious as ever to do battle and looks fine, but there's something wrong."

* * *

WHEN Leach Cross was on a visit here this week he was continually boosting his younger brother, Phil, claiming that the lad could trim any and all of them at 142 to 145 pounds. Leach was very frank to admit that Phil is a better man than he is, and said that when Phil was put in in a semi wind-up to one of his battles it always took the edge off Leach's contest. "Phil has the crowd crazy when he fights, and then when I come on it makes me look bad," Leach said. "I'd like to see him get a chance with some of the welterweights around here, for I think he is a champion sure."

RITCHIE OWES HIGH STANDING TO AD. WOLGAST

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—A good deal was said about the invisability of matching Wolgast and Ritchie, but the expressions of opinion have simply been of an individual character and not always the fruit of sober reflection and a desire to be fair.

If Ritchie ever accomplishes one-half of what Wolgast did in the ring Willie's name will echo down the corridors with more of a reverberation than it is producing at present. Wolgast gave Ritchie a chance at the title when Ritchie had little or no standing as a fighter, and if pugilism were not such a cut-throat proposition gratitude should impel Ritchie to be as generous as Wolgast was.

If Ritchie had knocked out Wolgast there would have been some pith in the argument that the public would not care to see the two lads scut together again. But Willie did nothing of the sort. It was Wolgast's foul blow that made Ritchie champion, and that is why some of the sneering critics of the Far East tack the letters O. F. P. on to Ritchie's title. And for fear you don't know it should be stated that O. F. P. stands for Other Fellow's Punch.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Ad Wolgast is certainly one popular fighter with the coast fans. Although Joe Rivers is a native son many of the fans out West were clamoring for the ex-champion to get the first chance at Ritchie. Ad's style of boxing, combined with his willingness to meet all comers when he was champion, has built up a large following for the "fighting Dutchman."

* * *

Mike Saul, who made his first fight last Friday in over a year, says he is after a return match with Terry Nelson. Mike seemed to be a big favorite with the fans and should be heard from in the future if he gets into good condition.

* * *

Kid Williams found Jem Kendrick easy picking at Baltimore the other night. The former handed the Englishman a terrific lacing and forced his second to throw up the sponge in the sixth round.

* * *

Tom Gibbons threatens to follow the footsteps of his brother, Mike, in the pugilistic world. Tom's latest achievement was a ten-round victory over Jack Denning last week and the latter is far from a slouch. Mike's brother is now after bouts with Frank Klaus and Jack Dillon.

* * *

In speaking of star middleweights why not mention the name of Jimmy Clabby, the veteran Hammond middleweight. Jimmy traveled to Butte, Mont., last Friday and handed Eddie McGoorty a fine trimming in ten rounds. Clabby was given a great ovation when the referee gave him the decision. The defeat just about eliminates McGoorty as a contender for the title.

* * *

Patsy Brannigan, the Pittsburg featherweight will get into action to-night. Patsy is scheduled to meet Young Mahoney in a ten-round engagement at Milwaukee, Wis. This will be Patsy's first battle since he defeated Matty McCue in the Brewer City about five weeks ago.

* * *

Abe Attell may get another chance at the featherweight title. A San Francisco promoter has offered the ex-champion a match with Kilbane on June 30 and Abe is expected to accept. The promoter has already received Kilbane's consent to the match.

* * *

Danny Morgan is just $350 short to-day. The talkative manager wagered that amount on Young Ahearn to stop Mike Gibbons and his protege took a bad lacing from the St. Paul sensation. He was stopped in the fourth round.

* * *

Chicago fans are betting on Jack White to defeat Johnny Dundee when the two clash in a 20-round scrap on Tuesday night. The Windy City fans think Jack is too tough for the Eastern featherweight.

* * *

Charlie White is tackling about the toughest boy in the lightweight division on July 4 when he hooks up with Jack Britton at New Orleans. Willie Ritchie, Joe Rivers and Bud Anderson have all dodged bouts with Britton. The latter is also credited with a clean-cut victory over Leach Cross.

Sports and Such

ABOUT THE ONLY REAL tragedy in connection with the recent polo match was the spectacle of the profound experts of polo—than whom there are none profounder—trying to explain the defeat of the English.

* * *

THE ONE BRIGHT BIT OF polo comedy was contributed by Harry Payne Whitney, captain of the American team, who said that he objected to the "commercialization of polo" as manifest in the plan to have the players wear numbers on their saddle cloths so that the spectators might identify them.

It might be pointed out to Mr. Whitney that the commercialization of polo began with himself and the other members of the Polo Association in charging from $2.50 to $250 for the privilege of watching the game.

* * *

MOST OF THE EXPECTED nervous prostration in connection with the managerial performance of J. Evers seems to be on the side of his opponents.

* * *

IT MAY BE CONFIDENTLY predicted that Johnny Kilbane will soon lose the featherweight title. He insists on fighting somebody now and then, contrary to the basic law of modern ring champions.

FEATHERS TO BATTLE IN NEW YORK ON WEDNESDAY

NEW YORK, June 16.—The St. Nicholas Athletic Club will stage a featherweight elimination tournament between six of the leading featherweights in the country next Wednesday night.

Matt Brock, of Cleveland, who is to meet Tommy Houck, arrived to-day. Kid Julian will arrive to-morrow. Joe Coster, who is to be Julian's opponent, is training at Brooklyn. Patsy Kline is getting in shape for his battle with Eddie O'Keefe, of Philadelphia.

TRENDALL AND MURPHY TO CLASH IN ST. LOUIS RING

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—Harry Trendall and Eddie Murphy will clash here in the star bout at the National Athletic Club Coliseum Wednesday, June 18. Trendall and Murphy will weigh 135 at 3 o'clock.

Murphy comes from Cleveland. He boxed a ten-round draw with Jack Britton at Kenosha, Wis., two weeks ago.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

CINCINNATI, June 16.—The Athletics look like the class of the American League now, and indications are the race on that circuit will be over by August. No club in the league, with the possible exception of Cleveland, seems to be able to stop Mack's team or even interrupt it. The supposed weakness in the pitching box has not developed yet, nor does it threaten to. Clever "Connie" is working his twirling talent with the foresight of a genius.

There is a psychological angle to the Athletics' great showing this year which should interest the fan to whom the spectacular appeals. Throughout both big leagues, but particularly in the American, a mania for sign stealing has developed, and the Athletics are the past masters in this art, according to the members of the other clubs in their circuit.

Personally, I believe the Athletics get credit for lots more stuff than they get away with. But they developed a new system of getting signs this spring which has baffled most of the clubs so far.

As soon as the batters begin being tipped to the catcher's signals, the opposing club generally catches on. Their sureness of hitting is an indication. Such a discovery starts a search of the source of the information. Many backstops, when working against the Athletics this year, have attempted to be so careful to conceal their signs from the men on the coaching lines that they crowd their knees right up almost tight together in the front when in the stooping position before the pitch, so only the twirlers can see their fingers. The result is that the sign shows out behind. The Athletics have been walking a little bit out of the line of march from the bench to the home plate when waiting to go to the bat and watching the catcher from the back. As soon as the man "on deck" awaiting his turn to hit sees a sign for a curve ball, he says:

"Take one, old boy!"

This may not mean "take one" at all, but it does inform the batter in the code that the pitcher is going to deliver a curve ball. If it is to be a fast one he says:

"Walk into one!"

* * *

A CERTAIN official in the American League was telling me a story the other day about a shrewd catcher who became aware that the Athletics were stealing his signals, but was worried because he could not locate the source. The official, himself, had discovered the means by which they were being tipped off, but it was none of his affairs to interfere, unless the other club complained about the waiting batters walking out of the line to the plate.

"They've got a fellow outside the park in that apartment house flashing my signs by pulling a curtain up and down," complained the catcher to the umpire.

Whenever a catcher cannot discover a source, he always looks for the tipping bureau outside the park, but that style of wigwagging is very much out of date now and strictly against the rules.

"Eddie" Collins was on first base when the catcher began to "beef" to the umpire.

"Now I'm going to ask for a pitchout, and you watch Collins," said the catcher. "He won't move off first base."

Sure enough. The twirler delivered a pitchout, and Collins stuck to the bag like a countryman in a big city to his bank roll.

"Watch that curtain out there now," continued the catcher. "I am going to order another pitchout."

Collins again stuck to the bag, and the curtain, by a strange coincidence, moved or appeared to move.

"What did I tell you?" exclaimed the catcher.

"They ain't getting them there," answered the umpire.

This discovering of the signs has helped the Athletics immensely, because they wait until they have the pitcher in a hole and he has to lay the ball over. Then comes the hit-and-run play, and away they go. Do not think for a minute that I am criticising the method. It shows that they are a lot of smart ball players, and it is regarded as being perfectly fair to take signs through quickness of eye.

Only artificial aids to detection are against the rules. And the fact that the opposing clubs always think the Athletics are getting the signs gives Mack's team an edge, whether it is true or not.

* * *

THERE is only one pitcher in the American League against whom the Athletics have no desire to be tipped off beforehand as to the probable pitch. He is Walter Johnson, of Washington. He has too much speed, and the most finished methods of sign stealing are not infallible. It ceases to come under the head of pleasure against him.

"I don't want anybody telling me what to expect when that bird is working," said "Stuffy" McInnis recently, referring to Johnson. "His fast one moves too quick to get out of the way if you are up there set for a curve ball. If it once hits you, it is generally too late for an ambulance. It is time to order a hearse."

* * *

WHILE we are on the subject of sign stealing, they tell a good story about the acumen of the Cubans when the Athletics went to Havana to play in 1910. The Cuban club had heard all the talk of the Philadelphia team stealing signs, so they decided to fool them by giving the signals in Spanish. "Connie" Mack immediately signed an interpreter to sit on the bench, but he was discovered after a few innings and chased to cover, even though he did have on a Philadelphia uniform.

PHILLIES' PRESIDENT IS NEAR DEATH AT HIS HOME

PHILADELPHIA, June 16.—William H. Locke, president and part owner of the Phillies and pacemaker of the Lynch League, is dangerously ill at his home here, and his players fear he will not live to see them win a pennant. Locke, it is said, is suffering from cancer and neuritis.

Before taking the executive chair in Philadelphia Locke was secretary of the Pittsburg club. He is regarded as one of the best posted men in baseball, having been selected to handle the business end of three world's series.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

OLD-FASHIONED BLEACHERS.

How dear to my heart were the old-fashioned bleachers,
The place where I sat in the ages gone by,
Where I could distinguish a ball player's features
Without a big telescope glued to my eye.
The bleacherite now, with a strong pair of glasses,
May sometimes distinguish a ball player's face,
He wonders who hits and who whiffs and who passes,
And yearns for the bleachers that stood by third base.

The old-fashioned bleachers,
The dust-covered bleachers,
The sun-beaten bleachers
That stood by third base.

We sat in our seats with the sun streaming o'er us,
And we knew every athlete who played in the game,
We cheered them or jeered them in deafening chorus,
And knew every man by his intimate name.
To-day we are scorned by the magnate's assistants,
Who order us hence with a frown on their face,
We sit in the bleachers a mile in the distance,
And yearn for the bleachers that stood by third base.

The old-fashioned bleachers,
The dust-covered bleachers,
The sun-beaten bleachers,
That stood by third base.

Christy Mathewson finally has awakened to the fact that the Phillies have a chance to win. This leads one to suspect that Chris has been reading the newspapers.

When Joe Dunn can negotiate a two-bagger without knocking the ball out of the park, it is a sign that he is developing speed.

Speaking of fables, there is the story of the ball player who kicks because he is not worked hard enough.

The press agent arises to remark that Jack Dillon is in the same class as Stanley Ketchel. Being as Stanley is dead, we believe said press agent.

A motorcycle race these days generally results in a broken record or a broken motorcycle.

Mr. Ritchie is willing to weigh a ton for Mr. Rivers, but when it comes to Mr. McFarland—that's something else again.

RUCKER MAY BE TRADED TO CUBS FOR BRESNAHAN

By Davenport.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 16.—There is a chance that Nap Rucker will be wearing a Cub uniform within the next few days, and your old friend, Rajah Bresnahan, may be seen cavorting about as a Dodger.

Can't tell, for stranger things than that have happened and there are persistent rumors afloat that a deal is on between President Murphy and Charles Ebbetts whereby Murphy's ten-thousand-dollar beauty will go to Brooklyn in exchange for the star twirler of the Brooklyn Club.

Putting Mr. Murphy right, right off the reel, he makes a vigorous denial that any such trade is even contemplated, but the tip came from Brooklyn Saturday to the effect there was strong talk of a trade.

Incidentally, Charles Ebbets is the man who is backing fire. Charles can't see Bresnahan for Rucker and would give instead Ragan, but Murphy is holding out for the big southpaw.

Murphy After Pitchers.

However, there are many reasons for such a trade. Mr. Murphy has said right along that he was in search of a star twirler. "Not a youngster," said Mr. Murphy several weeks ago, "but a veteran who has been tried and found not wanting."

There can be no denying Nap Rucker answers the call. He has been tried several times and found "not guilty" every time. He is a veteran, knows every batter in the National League and has the enviable reputation of being one of the coolest, brainiest pitchers on the National League list.

* * *

Bresnahan has been decorating the Chicago bench ever since the season opened. He has caught very few full games, but Mr. Murphy says he values him because something might happen to Jimmy Archer and Rajah would be a valuable man under such contingencies.

Archer Best in National.

Archer has been working faithfully all through the season thus far. It is admitted all around the circuit that Jimmy is the star backstop of President Lynch's organization.

NEW ZEALANDER WINS FRENCH TENNIS MEET

PARIS, June 16.—The finals in the lawn tennis championship were played Sunday at Saint Cloud. In the men's singles, A. F. Wilding, of New Zealand, beat the French representative, Andre H. Cobert.

In the women's single, Fraulein Reike, Germany, beat Mlle. Broquedis, France.

The Germans, VonBissing and Kleinschroth, won the men's doubles from Froitzheim, Germany, and Wilding, New Zealand.

GEORGIAN SPORTS COVERED by EXPERTS

NIGHT RACING AT 'DROME TO START TUESDAY

THE question whether Jock McNeil, the Scotch rider, or Wilmer Richards, the Texan, has the fatest motorcycle in Dixie will be settled Tuesday night on the shelving sides of the new Prince Motordrome, which will be thrown open for night racing at that time.

McNeil rides a J. A. P. motor. The engine was made in England and imported by the little Scotchman. He built up the rest of the motorcycle himself from parts picked up in this country. Richards has the famous "23" Indian, a racing machine of known speed, long record and bloody career, a machine that has been killing its man and breaking its record for several years past.

In Saturday's sport at the Motordrome McNeil and Richards met but once. That was in a five-mile final of the Speedway Sweepstakes. And McNeil won. But it was not conclusive. Richards, one of the wisest riders on the globe, was laying right behind the pack up to the finish. When he let out, he was showing more speed than any of them. But he did not let out in time. McNeil did a little letting out himself and held his advantage across the tape.

They should have fought it out in the Motordrome Purse, but the gasoline tank on the Scot's machine sprang a seam and could not be repaired in time for any further racing. Richards won the next race handily.

Oh, You Race Question!

Both men will meet in every regular event Tuesday night, and the question of supremacy of Texan or Scot, of Jap or Indian (and that's some race question for you!), will be settled.

It might happen, of course, that neither man would win a race, even if they settled their argument. There are several riders yet to be heard from.

For instance, Harry Swartz is due to show something Tuesday night. Swartz was handicapped Saturday by the fact that he had to fit new wheels on his machine at the last minute. His Excelsior has been used for road racing and was fitted with road rims and road tires. These were changed at the last minute, but Swartz had no chance to get his machine right. He will have it tuned up right by Tuesday night and as his machine is fast and as there is no better rider in America than Harry, he is likely to be heard from, LOUD.

Glenn and Renel to Meet.

One of the feature events Tuesday will be a match race between Harry Glenn, of Atlanta, and Georges Renel, of Paris. On Saturday, in the match race, they finished so close together that the judges declared it a dead heat, though, of course, each man claimed that he won. Considerable feeling was stirred up over the thing and they will ride it over for a purse on Tuesday.

The meet Tuesday night will start at 8:30. Tickets are already on sale at Tumlin's and Shepherd's stands.

M'FARLAND PLANS TRIP TO EUROPE FOR FOLKS

CHICAGO, ILL., June 16.—Another big treat is in store for Packey McFarland's folks, and all at the fighter's expense. On Wednesday they sail from New York on the steamer Carpathia for Ireland, their native land, to be gone three months. All of this time, however, will not be spent in Ireland. London, Paris and Scotland will be some of the stops before they return to this country.

This is not the only treat Packey has given his folks. He purchased a home for them on Garfield Boulevard not so long ago and is allowing them the rent from one of his six-flat buildings. Packey plans to return to the ring shortly and has instructed his manager to get in touch with the various clubs.

HOFMAN AND FERRY DRAW RELEASE FROM PIRATES

PITTSBURG, June 16.—Artie Hofman, outfielder of the Pirates and former star of the Chicago Cubs, and Pitcher Jack Ferry have been released by Maanger Fred Clarke. Hofman is slated to go to Kansas City, but refuses, and asks to be sent to the Pacific Coast league. Ferry is to go to the Columbus team, of the American Association.

Vols Are Here For Three Games

Schwartzies Always Worry Locals

By Percy H. Whiting.

BILL SCHWARTZ, the well-known boy manager, and the Volunteer ball club of Nashville (Tenn., not Ga.) have arrived safely in Atlanta, and this afternoon will tangle with the Crackers in the first game of a three-game spasm.

Gilbert Price will probably get the assignment to hurl for the Crackers. Joseph Dunn will catch, as usual.

* * *

CURIOSITY as to the work of the pitchers of late prompts a comparison of the batting averages that Southern League teams have piled up in the last six series, with the batting averages of the same teams for the whole season. This is calculated to show whether the teams the Crackers have faced recently are hitting harder or lighter against other teams than they are against the Crackers. Here is the answer:

In the last series against the Lookouts Elberfeld's men batted .292 against Cracker pitchers. Their average for the season is .251. Score one against Cracker hurlers.

In the series before that, against Birmingham, the Barons could bat but .194 against Cracker pitchers. For the season the Barons are batting .209. Score one for the local hurlers.

Against Chattanooga in the last series here the Lookouts were held to an average of .219. This was another verdict for the pitchers.

In the one-game series with Montgomery the Billiken batters were held down to a mark of .217, which was still another victory for the hurlers.

In the series before the pitchers held the Vols to a batting average of .200, compared with .232 for the entire season.

Of course such comparisons are not conclusive. A pitcher may allow only one hit in a game but may walk so many that he loses. Three bases on balls followed by a home run will lose a lot of ball games for a pitcher, even if the rest of his string is shut-out stuff.

* * *

THE batting figures show the Crackers a great scoring machine. They have a higher batting average and have not only made more hits in each game but also an average of more runs to the game than any other club in the league. The Crackers have averaged 4 1215-1594, giving them the worst of it by a trifling matter of 142-1596ths of a run.

One thing that is enabling the Gulls to run away with the league is their advantage in base stealing. They have 127 stolen bases thus far, to the Crackers' 58. Five Southern League clubs lead the Crackers in base stealing, despite the fact that no team in the league puts so many men on first.

Here are the batting figures for the league:

Frank Fails to Get Two Billiken Players

MEMPHIS, TENN., June 16.—Manager Frank, of New Orleans, will not get players Bagby and Kutina, now the property of the Montgomery club. The controversy between these two clubs came to an end yesterday, when President Kavanaugh of the league ruled that while President Jones, of Montgomery, was guilty of a moral obligation, the evidence at hand did not warrant awarding Frank the players.

Frank did not propose the deal, as was generally supposed. On the other hand, Jones took the initiative. Here are the telegrams on which the league's executive based his decision:

Jones wired Frank:

Will you give Snedecor and $750 for Bagby and Kutina?

Frank came back:

We accept your proposition.

To which Jones returned:

I made an inquiry, not a proposition.

CUTLER AND ROLLER AGREE TO MEET IN RETURN BOUT

DALLAS, TEXAS, June 16.—Dr. Roller, one of the cleverest heavyweight wrestlers in the business, has won a return match with Charlie Cutler, this time a $200 side bet going with the victory. Roller was thrown by Charlie Cutler here Thursday night after he had gained the first fall. He claims he was tricked into the last fall and protested so strongly that Cutler agreed to meet him again, provided a side bet accompanied the match. This Roller immediately consented to, and now the pair are looking for a club to stage the contest. The physician-wrestler believes he can down Charlie in two straight falls and wants another opportunity to demonstrate it.

Seven Batters Are Bunched in Race

The race for batting leadership in the Southern League this year is better than the Southland has known for years. Seven players are bunched, neck and neck, and they swap positions almost daily.

Including Sunday's games in the figuring Long still holds the lead, with D. Robertson a great second and Elberfeld third by an eyelash. In the second division Welchonce, Knisely, Sloan and Wally Smith are right in a heap.

Here are the averages to date:

Player—	A.B.	H.	Pct.
Long	223	80	.358
Robertson	205	72	.351
Elberfeld	195	68	.349
Welchonce	234	77	.329
Knisely	127	41	.323
Sloan	232	75	.323

NAPS AFTER M'QUILLIAN; OTHER CLUBS PUT IN BID

CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 16.—The Naps are bidding for the services of George McQuillan, the star pitcher of the Columbus Senators, American Association leaders. McQuillan was formerly with the Phillies and, like Cy Falkenberg of the Naps, is a real come-back. The Boston Americans and Cincinnati and Pittsburg Nationals have a bid in for McQuillan.

Stomach Catch is Latest Fad

Maranville Does Not Use Hands

By Charles Dryden.

CHICAGO, June 16.—Among the other special attractions now with the Braves may be mentioned Mr. Maranville, the liliputian shortstop who catches pop flies in the pit of his stomach with little or no assistance from his hands. Mr. Maranville wears no cuffs or false mustache with which to deceive the eyeball, and he makes these catches while facing the spectators. Should he attempt to make a similar catch while running with the ball it might lead to a crack on the coco unless Mr. M. arrived in time to get the range or angle of the descending pill and back up a step or two. For many years athletes have employed the stomach while traveling from bag to bag, but until the advent of Mr. Maranville we do not remember one who used his bread basket in the manner described.

* * *

JIM LAVENDER is able to explain, out of one side of his mouth, how he happened to stop a line drive with his chin in the battle against the Muscatangs. It was a new pill, white and clean, and the smash traveled in line with a large lady sitting in the grandstand and wearing a white shirtwaist. Lavender did not see the ball until it cracked him on the point of the jaw and dropped at his feet. After throwing the batter out Jim clawed around in the grass and picked up a small white object which he carried to the bench under the impression that it was a tooth. The object was Mr. Lavender's wad of chewing gum, which was jarred from his gills by the impact of the blow on the chin. Sooner or later the world's greatest spitballers meet with disaster. Either they lose their arms, their stuff or their chewing wax. Life is one dodgasted thing after another.

* * *

THROUGH the kindness of Charles Cooper Fraser, formerly of this city, and the courtesy of C. Williams, who carried the clipping from Muscatine, we are able to present in this issue a few epigrams from the Cedar Rapids, Iowa, score card:

Colt Hofer was 19 Saturday. As Colt has the smoke and all other pitching stuff, Pa Hill is excused for robbing the cradle.

All the Rabbits need is a little more pep in yelling. The noise helps with the fighting spirit.

Hyzer was released yesterday because he was minus the guts while at bat.

Ladies, no goo-goo eyes on Brown and Ker—they are married.

UMPIRE SWATS MERKLE OVER BEAN WITH MASK

ZANESVILLE, OHIO, June 16.—In an exciting exhibition game here Sunday afternoon between the New York Nationals and the local Interstate League team, the Giants won by the score of 5 to 4, although Umpire Frank Newhouse, of the International League, declared the game forfeited to Zanesville 9 to 0, following his fight with Merkle, of the Giants.

Merkle in the eighth objected to Newhouse's decision on a close play at first and finally made a pass at the umpire. Newhouse hit the New York first baseman over the head with his mask and brought blood from the gash, then ordered him from the game. Merkle refused to go and the umpire then forfeited the game to Zanesville, 9 to 0. Manager Marty Hogan, of the locals, however, ordered the game continued and he himself acted as umpire.

LEDOUX ARRIVES ON COAST; WILL MEET EDDIE CAMPI

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—Charley Ledoux, bantamweight champion of France, accompanied by his manager, Frank Galvin, and Trainer Joe Smith, arrived in Los Angeles last night.

Ledoux is matched to box Eddie Campi 20 rounds before the Pacific Athletic Club, at Vernon, a week from to-morrow night.

Johnny Dundee and Jack White, matched to box 20 rounds at Vernon to-morrow night, finished their training yesterday. Over 1,000 visitors saw Dundee finish his work with a whirlwind of boxing.

TENNIS TOURNEY DRAWS EXPERTS TO CLUB COURTS

GEORGIA tennis cracks gathered at the Piedmont Driving Club Monday for the first rounds of the ninth annual State tournament, which will continue all the week.

Drawings for the matches were made early in the day and the players settled down to work. Perhaps the best tennis seen in years is expected on the club courts in this tournament.

A three-year trophy is offered for the winner in men's singles. Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, has won it twice and now defends it. A third victory will give him permanent possession. Dr. Karl F. Little also has won it twice, while those who have once held it include G. V. Angier, Jr., Frank T. Payne, Eden T. Taylor and E. V. Carter, Jr.

E. V. Carter, Jr., and E. S. Mansfield, champions in doubles last year, will defend their championship this season.

Frank Reynolds is refereeing the play.

HANNES KOLEHMAINEN IS REINSTATED BY A. A. U.

NEW YORK, June 16.—The registration committee of the Metropolitan Association, a branch of the A. A. U., have reinstated Hannes Kolehmainen, who was suspended Thursday for failing to send in a report of his expenses at a meet. The Finnish runner is now in Duluth, Minn.

Colorado Is Bigger than Imagination

The brush of fancy can't paint upon the canvas of the mind as wonderfully as nature's titanic hands have built here in the birth-spot of the mighty Rockies.

But Colorado is a condition as well as a picture. You'll not only see a country different from any under the stars, but you'll be a different human the moment you stand in the shadows of her majestic ranges and bathe your worn and sluggish city-dulled being in the vital, sparkling, clean, clear, sweet air of the great American Highlands.

Rock Island Lines

through sleeping car to Colorado

offers the best service to the Rockies. Electric lighted, fan cooled sleeper through to Colorado Springs, Denver and Pueblo, via Memphis and Kansas City. Dining car service all the way.

The Colorado Flyer from St. Louis and the Rocky Mountain Limited from Chicago, one night on the road trains—offer splendid service for those desiring to go by St. Louis or Chicago.

If you can afford to go anywhere, you can afford a Colorado vacation

The SOCIAL WORLD

The tennis tourney for the State championship, which is on at the Driving Club this week, will attract large crowds, to witness the games, and, of course, the inevitable dancing will follow. The popular club will be the scene of much informal entertaining during the week.

Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, has won the championship twice, and defends it in the present tournament. E. V. Carter, Jr., and E. S. Mansfield hold the championship in doubles. A number of expert women players are to take part in the mixed doubles.

The Sunday assemblage at the Capital City Country Club was a large and representative one. Swimming was a favorite mode of recreation for the men, although only a few women braved the waters, for some reason or other. An informal air hovers over the charming Country Club, which will be fostered.

The large attendance at the week-end dinner dance of the Driving Club and the informal dance at East Lake shows that the summer exodus for Atlanta society has hardly begun.

For Mrs. Ingersoll.

Mrs. Mell Wilkinson entertained informally at luncheon at the Piedmont Driving Club Monday, in honor of Mrs. Royal Ingersoll, other guests including Mrs. J. M. VanHarlingen, Mrs. W. D. Smith, Mrs. VanWinkle Wilkerson and Mrs. Edward VanElnkle.

For Miss Francis.

Mrs. Bertram Norris entertained at a box party at the Forsyth Monday afternoon for Miss Martha Francis, a bride-elect.

Copeland-Miller.

A wedding of interest throughout Georgia and Alabama was that on June 11 of Miss Mamie Miller, of Fort Valley, Ga., to Dr. Henry Moss Copeland, of Atlanta, at the Methodist Episcopal Church of Fort Valley.

Bridesmaids were Misses Bessie Smith, Atlanta; Carol Dean, Gainesville; Telete Scott, Canton; Janie Culpepper, Fort Valley. They were gowned in white meteor crepe with pointed trains and carried white sweetpeas. Groomsmen were Dr. Richard R. Daly and Mr. F. L. Wilson, of Atlanta, and Mr. William Wright, of Fort Valley.

Mesdames W. F. Miller and H. C. Neil were matrons of honor, the first in white crepe de chine and duchess lace. Mrs. Neil wore her wedding gown of charmeuse satin and duchess lace. Both carried white sweetpeas. Flower girls were Marjorie Brown and Margaret McMillan. Mr. Seth Copeland was best man.

The bride wore a gown of crepe sylvia, draped with princess and rose point lace, made with a court train. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and valley lilies. Her veil was of lace, arranged from a Dutch cap and caught with orange blossoms.

A reception was given at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Osborne Miller.

Dr. and Mrs. Copeland will spend their honeymoon in the mountains of North Carolina.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Greenfield, Mrs. M. C. Hardin, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Lanier, Judge and Mrs. John R. Wilkinson, of Atlanta.

Morris-Huie.

Mrs. Robert S. Huie announces the engagement of her daughter, Alice Mae, to Mr. Robert Ernest Morris, of Atlanta. The wedding will take place at the home of the bride, near Philadelphia Church, Clayton County, Thursday evening, June 19, at 8:30 o'clock.

For Miss Graves.

Mrs. Rix Stafford will entertain a few members of the schoolgirl set informally at bridge Thursday in honor of Miss LaGrange Katherine Graves, of Rome, a guest of Miss Louise Couper.

Memorial Association to Meet.

The Uncle Remus Memorial Association will hold a meeting Tuesday at 10:30 o'clock in the assembly room of Carnegie Library.

For Miss Hughes.

In honor of Miss Mary Hughes, whose wedding to Mr. Ernest Osborne will take place Wednesday evening, there has been a series of parties.

Tuesday afternoon Miss Ollie May Osborne gave a reception. Thursday, Miss Mae Richardson was hostess at luncheon and the same afternoon Miss Florence Dugger entertained the wedding party at the matinee. Mrs. Joseph Paulson invited twelve girls to meet Miss Hughes at bridge Friday afternoon and Saturday afternoon Misses Wilt entertained at tea for her.

The Wilt home was decorated with pink sweetpeas, a mound of these flowers adorning the tea table.

Assisting in entertaining were Misses Ollie May Osborne, Lucy Windsor, Sarah Randall, Alma Downing, Kathleen Simpson, Jan Robinson, Emma and Rusha Wesley and Mrs. R. W. Wilt.

Miss Mamie Wilt wore pink chiffon with wreaths of pink rosebuds. Miss Etter Wilt was in white silk marquisette. Miss Hughes wore pink crepe embroidered in pink. Mrs. Wilt wore black lace with a corsage of sweetpeas and lilies of the valley.

About 150 guests were present.

For Miss Arnold.

A heart dice party, at which Mrs. Charles A. Forrest entertained Friday afternoon at her home on Gordon Street, was for her young niece, Mary Ella Arnold. A profusion of daisies and gladioli formed the decoration of the attractive reception rooms, where the six tables were placed.

Trophies for top score and consolation were a dainty white fan, won by Virginia Collier, and a silver vanity box, cut by Elizabeth Wheeler, guest of honor was presented with silk stockings. Punch was served by Martha Irwin and Elizabeth Merrideth. Guests were: Fay Spink, Marjorie Kurfees, Eva Stewart, Mary Nichols, Marie Colcord, Sara Colcord, Frances Stokes, Mary Brittain, Maude Foster, Lucile Price, Caroline Vickers, Kathryn Vickers, Catherine Hackett, Lois Verner, Annabeth Smith, Margaret White, Grace Cook, Marie Lester, Elizabeth Wheeler, Lucile Trimble, Cecil Trimble, Mary Tiller, Elizabeth Cofield, Helene Stewart and Virginia Collier.

For Miss Pearl Mobley.

Mrs. Edward L. Humphreys was hostess at a linen shower Thursday afternoon for Miss Pearl Mobley, a bride-elect.

In a game of heart-dice Miss Bernice Scott won a fan for top score, Miss Lillian Brooks received a picture as consolation, and Miss Mobley was presented with a hand-embroidered collar.

The apartment was decorated with daisies and ferns.

Those invited to meet Miss Mobley were Misses Lillian Brooks, Bernice Scott, Bernice Denton, Frances Lazear, Celia Hiers, Curd, Dora Hiers, Mrs. E. M. Redwine, Mrs. Max Epstein, Mrs. M. H. Chandler, Mrs. A. T. Vandiver and Mrs. William L. Scott.

Mrs. Max Epstein gave a box party at the Forsyth Saturday afternoon for Miss Mobley. Guests were Misses Lillian Brooks, Dora Hiers, Frances Lazear, Mrs. Edward L. Humphreys, Mrs. E. M. Redwine, Mrs. Joseph Lazear and Mrs. Sara Lazear.

Child's Birthday Party.

A birthday party was given for Frederick Lindley Beers, Jr. Pink sweetpeas were used as decorations. The pink birthday cake with its one candle, surrounded by pink sweetpeas, formed the centerpiece of the table. Pink ices and cakes were served, and at each place a tiny baby basket of pink mints decorated with sweetpeas was given as a favor.

Those invited were Misses Margaret Hood Bobbin Dennis, Elizabeth Carlton, Mary Ruth Wight, Mary Stillman, Sarah Stillman, Georgia Drysdale, Linda Cox, Masters Robert Carlton, Allison Adams, William Palmour, Colquitt Carter, Jr.

Piano Recital.

Pupils of Mrs. Lillian Woodberry Johnson gave a piano recital at the music studio. Program numbers showed a wide range of style and selection. Mrs. Johnson received hearty congratulations.

Those taking part in the recital were Misses Margaret Snow, Sarah Snow, Leone Spinks, Louise Granade, Sarah Smith, Lillian Connor, Cecil Garrett, Jessie Lea Davenport, Josephine Smith, Maud Goodwin, Edith London, Annie Rose Kenimer, Mary Kenimer, Ruth Walker, Montine Jones, Mattie Lou Crenshaw, Florence Green, Lucile Little, Bessie Sorrow, Grace Davis, Lucy Swann, Minnie Pickler, Carrie Lee Featherstone.

Wedding Plans Changed.

Mr. and Mrs. David Patman Daniell announce a change in the plans of the marriage of their daughter, Vera Belle, to Mr. Homer Leon Wilson. The wedding will take place at Collins' Memorial Church, Bolton, Ga., at 6 p. m., June 19. It was previously planned at the home of the bride's parents in Bolton.

For Miss Daniell.

Misses Claudia and Bertha Hudson entertained with a shower for Miss Vera Daniell, a June bride-elect. Sweetpeas decorated the living and reception rooms. The prize was won by Miss Emmee Branham. The bride was presented with silk hose.

Those present were Miss Vera Daniell, Miss Grace Bell, Miss Ruth Gable, Miss Margaret Berge, Miss Montine Byrd, Misses Lucy and Susie Johnson, Misses Mary and Bertha Heins, Miss Ethel Rutherford, Misses Elizabeth and Frances Walker, Mrs. Lamar Ray, Misses Clara and Milly Loughry, Mrs. Gordon Stowers, Miss Nettie Summerlin, Miss Reggie Sue Daniell, Miss Lilly Mac Adams, Misses Cassie and Annie Lou Hunter, Miss Emmee Branham, Miss Fae Bancroft and Miss Pearl Gary.

Miss Richardson's Recital.

A piano recital was given by Miss Kate Richardson Friday evening. Miss Richardson is a graduate of Miss Evelyn Jackson's school of music. She will receive her diploma at the closing recital Tuesday evening. Her program follows:

Sonata in C sharp minor, Beethoven.

(a) Nocturne, Op. 27, No. 2, Chopin; (b) Prelude in D, Chopin; (c) "On the Mountains," Grieg.

Polonaise, Moszkowski.

(a) Gondolerie, Liszt; (b) Nachstucke, Schumann; (c) Silver Spring, Mason.

Rhapsodie, No. 2, Liszt.

Rondo, Chopin.

Owens-Hall.

The initial social event of the week and one in which is centered the interest of a host of friends will be the marriage of Miss Charles Owens and Mr. Edward Buckinham Hall, of Morristown, N. J., Monday evening at 8:30 o'clock.

On account of illness in the bride's family the invitations to the church ceremony have been recalled and the ceremony will take place instead at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Owens, on Eleventh Street, in the presence of relatives and a few close friends.

A number of out-of-town guests will attend the wedding, among them the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Hall, of Morristown, N. J., and New York.

For Miss Buckner.

Miss Helen Jones will give a reception Tuesday afternoon, June 24, for her guest, Miss Margaret Buckner, of Roanoke, Va.

Miss Margaret Northen will entertain several young people at Highland Farm, the country place of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Northen, one afternoon this week for Miss Buckner.

Society to See Tribble Wedding

Atlantans to Go in Special Car

Miss Ruth Tribble, of Athens.

Prominent People From Throughout State to Witness Ceremony at Bride's Home June 19.

Atlanta society people are preparing to attend the wedding of Miss Ruth Tribble to Samuel Dick, of Atlanta, at the bride's home in Athens June 19. A large party will travel in a private car to Athens. A great throng of persons prominent in society from over the State will attend the wedding.

Miss Tribble is the daughter of Congressman Tribble. The wedding will be one of the most notable June marriages in Georgia. Both Miss Tribble and Mr. Dick are unusually prominent in society.

The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. E. L. Hill, assisted by Dr. J. W. Lynch, of the First Baptist Church.

Mrs. S. J. Tribble, the mother of the bride, will be the matron of honor. Miss Callie Hoke Smith, of Washington, D. C., will be maid of honor.

The bridesmaids will be Miss Jane Thrall, of Williamsport, Pa.; Miss Ruth Barren, of Philadelphia, Pa., and Miss Martha Phinizy, of Athens.

Mr. Dick will be attended by his brother, Mr. Jackson Dick, as best man.

JUAREZ IS REINFORCED.

EL PASO, June 16.—Three hundred men under General Salazar and Colonel Porelli to-day joined the Federal garrison at Juarez. The arrival of the troops to reinforce the Huerta troops quartered there relieved the fear that 1,200 rebels encamped 30 miles from the city would attack it.

A Good Clean Show at the Dutch Mill.

The Dutch Mill is one of the cleanest and best playhouses in Atlanta, with the most beautiful movies, projected on a radium gold screen, producing a soft, pleasing effect that does not injure the eye.

Farmer's Wife Ends Life With a Pistol

VALDOSTA, June 16.—Mrs. Sallie Newsome, wife of a farmer living in the southern part of Lowndes County, committed suicide by shooting herself through the head with a pistol. There were no eyewitnesses. Coroner Solomon has gone to the scene to make an investigation.

The woman's husband and young children heard the shot and, rushing into the room, found her lying dead across the bed. It is rumored that Mrs. Newsome's married life was not happy.

Ship Limps on, Side Patched With Canvas

DULUTH, MINN., June 16.—The steamer Jesse Spaulding was afloat to-day and laboring toward Duluth, a section of canvas covering a large hole in her side. The Spaulding collided with the William M. Snyder, Jr., in Lake Superior yesterday, and, after flying distress signals, disappeared in a fog.

It was feared that she had gone down with her crew of sixteen.

"September Morn"

HAND-PAINTED water color photogravures of Paul Chabas' nude painting, "September Morn," fill one window of the Cole Book Company, and instead of harsh criticism excited only pity, which was due to the fact that the manager of the store took occasion to select about the coldest June day in the history of the city's weather for this art exhibition.

The original painting excited no end of comment when brought to this country for exhibition purposes. It was first placed in one of the windows of a Fifth Avenue art gallery, and was promptly spied by one of Anthony Comstock's agents, who demanded that it be taken out or he would go to the courts. Afterward Comstock himself decided the picture was nothing to shock anyone, according to newspaper accounts at the time, and agreed with the manager of the art gallery that it was artistic.

The picture was sent from one large city in the East to the other and caused more comment than any painting in years. It is now in one of the big European art galleries.

The figure is that of a young blonde-haired girl, who is about to take her bath, and is said to be the same model as the figure in "Twilight" by the same artist. "September Morn" was exhibited in the last Paris salon, and received high praise from the artists in the Parisian capital.

The cut represents only the figure, which occupies a small part of the picture. Just bare outlines of mountains are seen in the distance, which rise from the water through a misty haze. The coloring is most delicate. The reproductions in the Whitehall Street store are two different sizes.

DANGER SEEN IN $500,000,000 NOTE ISSUE

Forbes Says McAdoo's Readiness to Give Out Paper Is Invitation to Credit Jamboree

By B. C. FORBES.

To flood the country with half a billion emergency bank notes at this time would drive gold to Europe, would gravely aggravate credit inflation here and render our last state worse than our first. We have already in circulation the largest volume of bank notes ever put out.

* * *

We don't need more, but less credit, less borrowing.

* * *

Secretary McAdoo's unexpected announcement that he stands ready to issue $500,000,000 Aldrich notes is a direct invitation to go on a jamboree. New York bankers—who, after all, do know something about banking—have been striving with might and main for months to curtail the credit expansion that has gone to perilous lengths throughout the country. They have, moreover, practiced what they have been preaching: loans here have been rigidly discouraged, speculators have been obliged to stop their antics and liquid resources have been zealously accumulated in preparation for autumnal needs.

* * *

But country banks have gone on their way merrily, lending to all and sundry. The expansion in national bank loans alone has been at the rate of $1,000,000 every business day for the last twelve months—without one cent addition to cash in hand to justify this inflation.

* * *

Bank notes are not capital.

* * *

The scarcity is a scarcity of capital, not currency. Newly blossomed "experts" on national finance would do well to insert that fact into their noodles and keep it there in a prominent place. More nonsense is being written and spoken about financial subjects by men in prominent positions than at any time since William Jennings Bryan championed his famous "sixteen-to-one."

* * *

Washington can not create capital by opening currency flood-gates. Capital can come into being only through the people spending less than they earn—that is, by saving. The urgent need to-day is for less borrowing, not for more borrowing, a la Secretary McAdoo's latest proposal.

* * *

Let the Wilson administration be assured that the more bank notes they pump into circulation at this time, the easier will it be for Europe to take gold from us. We have exported $60,000,000 gold within the last five months and the chances are that more will go within the next fortnight. Europe is hungry for gold, the medium that speaks all languages and can do duty in any land. She will leave us our emergency currency and take our yellow metal.

* * *

To the novitiate the prospect of releasing $500,000,000 additional currency is most inspiring. It intoxicates. But those who can see below the surface, those who can diagnose the difference between bank notes and actual wealth, shrink from contemplating the outcome of any wholesale issuance of emergency notes at this juncture. Borrowers should pull in sail between now and the crop-moving season. They should not rush deeper into debt.

* * *

The Treasury Department should not dissipate resources at this time. It should fortify itself against the abnormal demands that the marketing of bumper crops can not fail to entail. In non-panic, but ominous times, all banking institutions should curtail credits. It is only when a crisis is imminent that a policy of granting generous and prompt assistance should be adopted and courageously followed.

* * *

It is a pity that the Treasury Department has elected to hold itself aloof from the best banking minds in the country and go blindly ahead.

Receivership for Guarantee Trust Is Opposed by 600

Four hundred bondholders, representing $193,815, and 200 stockholders, representing 1,715 shares of the Guarantee Bank and Trust Company, petitioned the Superior Court Monday morning not to appoint a receivership for the company.

The case was reopened before Judge John T. Pendleton and will take three or four days before a decision is reached.

The petitioners asked that they be allowed to intervene as defendants in the litigation. Their attorneys are Rosser & Brandon, Napier, Wright & Wood and Tye, Peeples & Jordan.

FOUR DYING IN MINE BLAST.

ALLIANCE, OHIO, June 16.—Ten men were injured, four fatally, in a mine blast explosion near Piney Fork this morning, caused by the short circuiting of an electric wire which ignited a keg of powder.

COTTON

NEW YORK, June 16.—Firm cables and a good demand from spot people caused the cotton market to open steady to-day, first prices being 1 to 8 points higher than Saturday's final. After the call the list continued steady. The ring crowd, however, inclined to sell on favorable weather developments over Sunday, and Washington promises fair and warm weather during the coming week. Beneficial rains fell in South Texas Sunday, resulting in most active positions, except August, dropping 1 to 5 points from the initial levels.

During the forenoon a wave of heavy short covering dominated the market, which encouraged a good speculative demand. This class of buying was based on The New Orleans Times-Democrat report on the condition of the crop, the report being construed as bullish, which had a stimulating effect on the market. Offerings were eliminated considerably and prices made a rapid advance of 11 to 16 points over the previous close. July and August were in active demand, but the new crop positions were in the best demand and showed the greatest gain.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 16.—The market opened steady. The ring crowd was inclined to sell. The market, however, held steady after a sharp decline from the opening. The Times-Democrat crop report was construed as bullish, causing heavy buying.

* * *

Heavy short covering dominated the market after the call; also speculative buying. Spot people purchased July, causing the advance.

* * *

Memphis wires under date of June 14: "Reports received at the Cotton Exchange to-day say farmers in and around Kilmichael, Miss., are plowing up acres of cotton because the boll weevil has appeared in swarms."

* * *

Liverpool cables: "American middling fair, 7.33d; good middling, 6.93d; middling, 6.75d; low middling, 6.59d; good ordinary, 6.23d; ordinary, 5.89d."

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas and Oklahoma, generally clear and warmer."

* * *

So far as weather news is concerned, there is very little incentive to support the new crops.

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, June 16.—Hayward & Clark: "The weather map is very good; shows fair and warm over the entire belt, except partly cloudy in southwestern quarter; no rain except few sprinkles in Central Texas and some good rains in South Texas where needed; night temperatures 10 to 20 degrees warmer than Friday and some entirely normal.

Washington forecast for week: "Warm and generally fair weather greater part of coming week in Southern States, although local thundershowers probable along immediate Gulf and South Atlantic coast."

The map continues to indicate generally fair and warm weather, except possibly few showers in South Texas.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat herewith presents its correspondents' first report on the cotton crop of 1913. The consensus of opinion points to the following results:

1. The increase of acreage is slight—probably about 3 per cent at the most.

2. The general condition is fairly favorable, but many sections complain of poor stands, caused by unseasonably low temperatures.

3. Labor is said to be scarce in some districts in consequence of migration to towns and public works.

4. Taking the belt as a whole, the crop is an exceedingly spotted one, and the weather of the next month will be extremely important.

5. There is a good deal of talk of boll weevil, but it is too soon to form an idea of the probable damage.

STOCKS

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Instead of following the lead of Americans in London, the stock market turned weak at the opening here to-day and declines were general throughout the list. Some stocks which started with advances were caught in the movement and lost part or all of their gain.

Canadian Pacific dropped 1⅝. United States Steel common began at 54¼ for a gain of ⅛, but soon lost its advance and sustained a net decline of ⅝. Pressure was directed against Union Pacific, this issue losing a full point. New York, New Haven and Hartford again broke to par, selling at 100 for the loss of 1 point. Amalgamated Copper lost its fractional advance and shaded.

American Smelting was up ⅝ at the outset, but within half an hour was selling ⅛ under Saturday's final.

Among the other losses were Reading ⅞, Pennsylvania ¼, Northern Pacific ½, Missouri Pacific ¾, Lehigh Valley ⅝, preferred Northern preferred ½ and Atchison ⅛.

Gains were made by Utah Copper, New York Central, American Car and Foundry and American Can.

Goldfield Consolidated, which closed Saturday at 1⅞, was stricken from the list of stock exchange securities to-day.

The curb was steady.

Americans in London were strong. Canadian Pacific in London was irregular.

Wilson Girls to Keep House for President

WASHINGTON, June 16.—During the summer Miss Margaret Wilson, eldest daughter of the President, and her sisters will take turns in keeping house for their father, ingrooned at the White House by the tariff and currency bills.

Miss Margaret has left for a series of visits in the Middle West. She will be first the guest of Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, in Madison, Wis., and will spend several weeks with other friends before joining her mother at their summer home in Cornish, N. H., and sending the second sister to "take care of papa."

GRAIN

CHICAGO, June 16.—Wheat averaged higher during the morning, July being ¼c above the resting spots of Saturday, September ⅜c higher and December ⅝ better. Sentiment was still bullish, although heavy rains have visited many sections of the Northwest since the close of Saturday. Receipts at Duluth and Minneapolis were double those of a year ago. The Liverpool market was unsettled with the situation bearish, however, on the favorable conditions in Russia.

Corn was up ⅜c and strong, July selling at 61⅜@62½c; September at 62½@63⅝ and December at 60⅝@61c.

Unfavorable crop reports were in the influences not only in corn, but in oats as well.

Hog products were unsettled, pork higher while lard and ribs were lower. Hogs at the yards 5c lower.

LIVERPOOL GRAIN MARKET.

LIVERPOOL, June 16.—Wheat opened ⅝d higher; at 1:30 p. m. the market was ¼d higher; closed ½@¾d higher.

Corn opened ⅛d higher; at 1:30 p. m. the market was ⅛d higher; closed ¼d higher.

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 16.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.:

Wheat—Since Saturday weather has been fairly good in many portions of North Dakota and it is raining at several points in that State this morning. Look for a nervous market and the fact that some precipitation has occurred in the spring wheat country is apt to give us a little more easier tendency.

Corn—Bullish sentiment is rampant, chiefly on dry conditions, but we doubt very much if any severe damage to growing crop has taken place up to the present time owing to lack of moisture.

Oats—The lack of rain, in our opinion, has a much more important bearing on the condition of this crop than on corn, especially as temperatures are so high. Reports continue to show lack of color and short growth.

Grocer Sprints When Attacked by Robbers

Joseph Franklin, a prominent wholesale grocer, was attacked by three footpads Sunday night.

Three negroes stepped in front of him, near his home at 151 Washington Street, and, pointing a pistol at his head, ordered him to hold up his hands. One reached for a diamond which Franklin wore in his shirt. Franklin caught him by the throat and bore him to the ground. Another negro pounced upon the grocer's back. He shook loose from this one and broke into a sprint, followed by three shots from the highwaymen.

'Antis' Say Suffrage Reduces Birth Rate

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Prize-winning anti-suffragist essays received at haedquarters here claim the birth rate in America is falling off because of suffrage activities.

One wrote:

"A suffragist approaches motherhood a bankrupt. Too often her marriage is barren or her offspring is defective in mind or body."

OBITUARY.

M. D. Campbell, sixty-four years old, died at the residence, 9 Jennings Street, at 3 o'clock Sunday morning. He is survived by two sons, T. M. and J. F. Campbell, and four daughters, Mrs. H. K. Gordon, Mrs. G. H. Perry, Mrs. John Dixon and Miss Jessie Campbell. Funeral from the chapel of P. J. Bloomfield at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon. Interment at Greenwood.

Mrs. S. T. Watkins, aged forty-four, died at a private sanitarium Sunday night. She was the wife of S. T. Watkins, of 24 Norcross Street, a Southern Railway engineer. Besides her husband, Mrs. Watkins is survived by four sons, K. E., E. O., H. H. and S. T. Watkins, Jr., and one daughter, Mrs. W. E. Wadden, of Selma, Ala. The body was removed to the chapel of Barclay & Brandon and prepared for shipment to Keysville, Va., for funeral and interment.

The funeral of Lieutenant J. J. Kaesser, who died at a private sanitarium Sunday afternoon, will be held from the chapel of Barclay & Brandon Tuesday afternoon. Lieutenant Kaesser was one of the best-liked men in the Fire Department, and had been with the department for over 18 years. He was promoted to the lieutenancy of Engine House No. 3 some time ago. He is survived by his wife and one son, W. G. Kaesser.

Robert Hobbs, 57 years old, died at his residence in Adamsville at 8 o'clock Sunday morning. He is survived by a wife and four children. The funeral will be from the chapel of Harry G. Poole's funeral home at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon, and the interment at the family burying ground at Adamsville.

John H. Carr, the 8-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Carr, of 315 West Third Street, died at the residence at 6 o'clock Sunday evening. Funeral services were held from the chapel of Harry G. Poole at 9:30 Monday morning. Interment at Sandy Springs.

Mrs. Annie McWilliams, 50 years old, died at the residence, 59 Robbins Street, at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Besides her husband, W. M. McWilliams, she is survived by two children, Mrs. Lela Sanders and W. O. McWilliams. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Good Progress Made By the Cotton Crop

MEMPHIS, June 16.—Reports from the Cotton Exchange to-day shows the cotton crop throughout the South to be generally good. Recent heavy rains have produced new strength in the plant, and the fields are clean of weeds. Labor is plentiful, and, as the planters are forced to meet fewer claims than usual, they will make more money than they have in many years.

The acreage in corn throughout Tennessee, Mississippi and Arkansas has greatly increased, and while more cotton is planted, the report says farmers have utilized thousands of acres of waste lands.

DRY GOODS REVIEW.

Marshall Field & Company, in their weekly review of the dry goods trade, say:

"Total sales in dry goods show a gain for the first two weeks in June in comparison with those of the corresponding period of a year ago. This is true both of our wholesale and retail. Current business through the mails and from the men on the road has kept up remarkably well following the preinventory sale and in view of the low temperature during the early part of the week. Collections continue better than normal.

"Orders manifest much interest in lines that are being shown for fall delivery, especially silks and women's ready-to-wear garments.

"Our representatives traveling through the Southeastern States report very favorable crop prospects and good business is coming from that section.

"Much enthusiasm is apparent among merchants of the Pacific Coast and Rocky Mountain States in consequence of good immediate retail business and the excellent outlook for abundant crops."

Poultry, Pet and Live Stock

Adjoining States Ship Millions Poultry and Eggs to Ga. Annually

Current News of the Poultry World. Northern Pacific Ry. Has Poultry Farm for Dining Car Use.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

Recent reports go to show that Georgia is having shipped in principally from Tennessee about $4,000,000 worth of poultry and eggs annually. While her adjoining State, Tennessee, from whom she buys, is producing and shipping annually over $20,000,000 worth. It seems that no other State in the Union has made such rapid strides in the development of the poultry business commercially as has Tennessee. There seems to be a lot of wide-awake farmers and stock raisers up there who have gotten the work to going, and it is spreading like wildfire. A hint to the wise should be sufficient to get things going like that down here—keep the money at home at least, if no more.

One of Swift & Co.'s superintendents reports that within a radius of 60 miles of Ottumwa, Iowa, that eight to twelve cars of poultry are shipped weekly, and quite frequently 100 to 200 fowls are received from one farmer at a time. And it must be remembered that land in that section is worth from $125 to $175 per acre, and its value depends upon its producing capacity. It looks a good deal like poultry was a pretty good asset.

The railroads usually get into the good things as well as common folks do. They not only own tracts of land, but they are going to make something out of it, too. For three years the Northern Pacific has maintained a poultry farm at Kent, Wash., not far from Seattle, where they maintain over 10,000 White Leghorn hens, producing on an average 150 dozen eggs a day for use on their dining cars. The railway is also securing the milk for these cars from 300 fine thoroughbred cows kept in the same locality, but upon a different farm.

They maintain a large bakery in Seattle and one in St. Paul to furnish their cars with bread, cakes and pies of the finest kind. They evidently intend that the people shall be supplied from first hands with the best of supplies.

The managers of The Poultry Item, one of the leading poultry journals of this country, are getting ready to put on another of their annual midsummer continuous poultry exhibitions at Atlantic City.

It will last throughout the great tourist season at this popular resort. This will be the second one of the series, they having had one there last summer during July and August. It is put on for the purpose of advertising, both the promoters and the different varieties of exhibition stock will be there. It will be open to every one, and in addition to the displays of poultry there will be incubators and brooders in operation; various kinds of coops, houses and appliances of various kinds that are of value and interest to the average poultry keeper, either large or small.

There is no question that it will be the means of getting these goods before more and a greater variety of humanity than almost any way a person could conceive. Let the good work go on, for the masses certainly need the information.

The disease known as "gapes," and from which thousands of young chicks suffer and die annually, particularly in localities where the land is a heavy clay soil and the water does not get away quickly.

This kind of soil becomes infested with the larvae which produces the little red worms that get into the wind-pipe of the little fellows and choke them to death. Professor H. Garman, of the Kentucky Station, has been experimenting along this line by putting a bunch of chickens on a tight board floor for some three weeks when first hatched. Another lot of the same hatching was allowed to run on the ground, and in the wet grass. The ones kept on the floor had no traces of the trouble, while among those allowed the run of the land suffered greatly, and while some died, others had to be treated with the horsehair loop to remove the clot of worms. This should be a tip to poultry raisers who live in localities where they are so troubled—and upon which poultry has been kept for generations and not been plowed or turned over.

ROOMS WANTED.

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

APARTMENTS WANTED.

If you have decided to spend a few months away from home this summer and would like to have some one take care of your home during that time, we know of no better and quicker way to find reliable parties to care for it than to place a small "Want Ad" in Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian. Try it and see.

HOUSES WANTED.

WANTED—Nice seven or eight-room two-story house; furnace; all conveniences; good locality, Inman Park, North Side or West End; must be good condition; possession by July 1; not over $42.50. Address H., Box 757, care Georgian. 6-14-7

WANTED—To lease a six or seven-room modern house; reasonable rent; from owner. W. Corey, 619 West Peachtree Street. 41-13-6

If you have decided to spend a few months away from home this summer and would like to have some one take care of your home during that time, we know of no better and quicker way to find reliable parties to care for it than to place a small "Want Ad" in Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian. A Mother's Work and Her Hopes

An Editorial Written Especially for Men and Boys

(Copyright, 1913)

This editorial is not written for women. It is written for MEN, and for boys; for the millions who fail to appreciate the work that mothers do, for the millions that ignore the self-sacrifice and devotion upon which society is based.

On a hot night, in the dusty streets of a dirty city, you see hundreds of women sitting on porches, TAKING CARE OF BABIES.

In lonesome farm houses, far out on monotonous plains, with the late sun setting on a long day of hard work, you find women, cheerful and persevering, TAKING CARE OF BABIES.

In the middle of the night, in earliest morning, when MEN sleep, all over the world, in ice huts North, in Southern tents, in big houses and in dingy tenements, you find women awake, cheerfully and gladly TAKING CARE OF BABIES.

We respect and praise the man selfishly working for himself.

If he builds up a great industry and a great personal fortune, we praise him.

If he risks his life for personal glory and for praise, we praise him.

If he shows courage even in saving his own carcass from destruction, we praise him.

There was never a man whose courage, or devotion, could be compared with that of a woman caring for her baby.

The mother's love is unselfish, and it has no limit this side of the grave.

You will find ONE man in a thousand who will risk his life for a cause.

You will find a THOUSAND women in a thousand who will risk their lives for their babies.

Everything that a man has and is he owes to his mother. From her he gets health, brain, encouragement, moral character, and ALL his chances of success.

How poorly the mother's service is repaid by men individually, and by society as a whole!

The individual man feels that he has done much if he gives sufficient money and a LITTLE attention to her who brought him from nothingness into life and sacrificed her sleep and youth and strength for his sake.

Society, the aggregate of human beings, feels that its duty is done when a few hospitals are opened for poor mothers, and a little medicine doled out in cold-hearted fashion to the sick child.

Fortunately, it may truly be said that the great man is almost always appreciative of his greater mother.

Napoleon was cold, jealous of other men, monumentally egotistical when comparing himself with other sons of women. But he reverenced and appreciated the noble woman who bore him, lived for him, and watched over him to the end. He said:

"It is to my mother, to her good principles, that I owe my success and all I have that is worth while. I do not hesitate to say that the future of the child depends on the mother."

The future of the individual child depends on the individual mother, and the future of the race depends on the mothers of the race.

Think what has been done for mankind by thousands of millions of perfectly devoted mothers.

Every mother is entirely DEVOTED, entirely HOPEFUL, entirely CONFIDENT that no future is too great for her baby's deserts.

The little head—often hopelessly ill-shaped—rolls about feebly on the thin neck devoid of muscles. The toothless gums chew whatever comes along. The wondering eyes look feebly, aimlessly about, without focus or concentration. The future human being, to the cold-blooded onlooker, is a useless little atom added to the human sea of nonentity.

But to the mother that baby is the marvel of all time. There is endless meaning in the first mumblings, endless soul in the senile, baby smile, unlimited possibilities in the knobby forehead and round, hairless head. She sees in the future of the baby responsibilities of government, and feels that one so perfectly lovely must eventually be acclaimed ruler by mankind.

As a result of perfect confidence in its future, the mother gives to every baby perfect devotion, perfect and affectionate moral education. Each child begins life inspired by the most beautiful example of altruism and self-sacrifice.

Kindness has gradually taken the place of brutality among human beings, because every baby at its birth has found itself surrounded by absolute kindness.

The mother's kindness forms moral character.

The mother's confidence and encouragement stimulate ambition and inspire courage.

The mother's patient watchfulness gives good health, and fights disease when it comes.

The mother's wrathful protection shields the child from the stern and dwarfing severity of fathers.

Truly, a man may and should be judged by his feeling toward his own mother, and toward the mothers of other men—of ALL MEN.

In the character of Christ, whose last earthly thought on Golgotha was for His Mother, as in the character of the hard-working, ignorant man whose earnings go to make his mother comfortable, the most beautiful trait is devotion to the mother who suffers and works for her children, from the hours that precede their birth through all the years that they spend on earth together.

Honor thy father and THY MOTHER.

And honor the mothers of other men. Make their task easier through fair payment of the men who support the children, through good public schools for their children, through respectful treatment of ALL women.

The mother is happy. For she knows "the deep joy of loving some one else more than herself."

You honor yourself, and prove yourself worthy of a good mother and of final success, when you do something for the mothers of the world.

There IS a Conspiracy Against This Man

Many a time you hear a young man say there's a conspiracy in his office to keep him from advancing. Usually he's right. There IS a conspiracy, and the conspirators are his baser selves. When the young man in the picture loafs at his work; when he drinks; when he stays up all night gambling—he's heading the conspiracy against his own success. And that's the only sort of conspiracy that can ever keep a man from his goal.

Mr. Suburbs Merely Forgot the Gasoline

The Progress and Prosperity of Los Angeles a Triumph of Intelligence and Independence

NEWS articles have been circulated in the East concerning the late election in Los Angeles, containing statements which are not justified by the facts.

These misstatements have emanated from the newspapers of a certain political leader or boss of Los Angeles, who was defeated in the late election and who has attempted to excuse himself and explain his own defeat by an attack upon the electorate of Los Angeles.

As a matter of fact, Los Angeles has voted in this election with its usual good sense and good judgment, with its customary progressive spirit and high morality.

Mr. Rose, the newly elected Mayor, has had an excellent career as a judge, is a man of experience in politics and of sterling character as a citizen. He will give Los Angeles the efficient, honest, progressive administration that the intelligent and public-spirited citizens of that city demand, and Los Angeles in its choice for Mayor is a subject for congratulation.

The high character of the politics of Los Angeles and the tremendous advantage of such clean and conscientious politics, in contributing to the wonderful growth and attractiveness of that city, are things which the citizens of New York should study and imitate.

In this late election, and in previous elections, party prejudices and national political partisanship played no part whatever. There was no candidate of the Democratic party and no candidate of the Republican party in the local field. The Socialist party, to be sure, was in evidence and ran third in the race, but the two leading parties in numerical strength were two absolutely independent parties, with independent citizens as candidates on each of their tickets.

The whole election was fought out upon the mere matter of the availability and the capability of the candidates.

The decision in favor of Mr. Rose was reached mainly because of the belief of the people in his special fitness and his unexceptionable qualities as a man and a citizen.

One other influence of importance, however, entered into the campaign, and that was a declaration in favor of Mr. Shenk, the independent candidate opposing Mr. Rose, by Mr. Edwin T. Earl, a political leader, or rather boss, in Los Angeles politics.

Even though Mr. Earl is a boss, he is not a squalid one of the kind that dominate so many of our Eastern cities. He is a man of ability and of wealth, but he is considered a boss and he had been accused of using his political power to the advantage of his private interests.

The independent citizens of Los Angeles refused to tolerate a boss or the candidate of a boss. Mr. Shenk had been the leading candidate, and the betting stood at 2 to 1 in his favor. But when Mr. Shenk refused to repudiate satisfactorily the boss and the attempted association of the boss, the public-spirited citizens of Los Angeles turned from Mr. Shenk to Mr. Rose, and elected Mr. Rose by a handsome plurality.

What an inspiration action like this is to the cause of independence, clean politics and good government everywhere! What could not New York accomplish if the citizens of New York had the independence and the courage and the public spirit of the citizens of Los Angeles! How long would the people of New York be betrayed by their parties and their public officials if the citizens of New York would support no party in municipal matters except an independent party, and no candidate except a candidate that was wholly free from boss dictation and domination?

The citizens of Los Angeles regard the conduct of their municipal government as a great business enterprise, and they approach the question from a sound business point of view, free from personal selfishness or party prejudice.

They have put into operation direct primaries, the initiative, the referendum and the recall. They select candidates with the one consideration of the fitness of the candidates. They elect them without bias or prejudice. They instruct them through the initiative. They review their acts through the referendum, and they retire them, if unfaithful or incompetent, through the recall.

Los Angeles is far ahead of New York in progressive principles, in public spirit and in the efficient conduct of its government. The result is a public administration which is as clean and wholesome as a private household.

Los Angeles has the beauty of its site, a matchless climate, an intellectual and enterprising people, attractive and distinctive architecture, delightful homes surrounded with parks and gardens. It is the center of a great petroleum trade and an extensive citrus fruit industry, an entrepot for the maritime trade of the world and the metropolis of the expanding empire of the great Southwest.

But who shall say that the wonderful growth in population and prosperity of Los Angeles, which is one of the marvels of this marvelous land, is not due as much to its wholesome political condition as to the wonderful climate of this favored section and the varied resources of its farms and orchards, its oil wells, its manufactures and its mines?

Would not New York confer upon itself an immeasurable material as well as a moral benefit if it would learn, like Los Angeles, to conduct its government cleanly and competently in the control of the whole people and in the best interests of the whole people?

COURT DEPUTY CUT TO DEATH IN FIERCE BATTLE WITH NEGRO

David Yancey Slain by Crazed Black Who Defied Arrest After Terrorizing Rawson Street Neighborhood. Is Wounded by Police Before Capture

Court Deputy David Yancey was hacked and stabbed to death Monday forenoon in a desperate battle with Eugene Watson, a crazed negro who had run amuck and terrorized the residents in the vicinity of Rawson and Windsor Streets.

Brought to bay under a vacant house at 33 Windsor Street, the black man evaded for more than half and hour the wagonload of policemen who had been hurried to the scene of the killing on a riot call.

The negro surrendered only after he had been badly wounded and saw that he could not hold out longer against the posse of bluecoats who had surrounded him in his stronghold.

A lynching was averted only by the large force of officers who rushed to the house and hurried the unconscious negro to the police station in an automobile.

Cries of "Lynch him!" were heard on every hand. The crowd was wildly excited and thronged about the negro as he was being taken from the basement. The policemen quickly formed a circle about Watson and pushed the angry men away.

Until he was hurried into the automobile, the danger of violence was not passed, the crowd at one time threatening to take him from the officers.

Yancey's body was terribly mutilated by the frenzied negro. Rather than be taken, Watson rushed like a wild beast toward Yancey, stabbed him repeatedly in the breast and back and slashed one of his arms almost to ribbons. Yancey probably was dead long before Watson had completed his fiendish attack.

The trouble which resulted in the tragedy started when Watson snatched $4 from Jesse Winn, an aged negro, on Whitehall Street. Watson ran after getting the money and threatened with a drawn knife everyone who stood in his path.

Deputy Gives Chase.

As he was running up Rawson Street, Deputy Yancey, who happened to be in that vicinity to serve some papers, took up the chase. Watson ran into the yard at the rear of 303 Rawson Street, the home of Mrs. J. W. Wilson, with Yancey in close pursuit.

Robert Starnes, aged 16, of 11 Fitzgerald Street, joined in the chase, along with a score of other persons. Yancey fired upon the negro as he cornered him in the yard.

"Damn you, you've got to kill me before you can take me," Watson shouted as he rushed upon the deputy and snatched the still smoking revolver out of his hand.

With this he drew the knife and plunged it time and again into the body of Yancey. The deputy sank to the ground mortally wounded, but the blood-maddened negro kept hacking and stabbing the limp body.

Boy Rushes to Aid.

Young Starnes, who had hastened to the officer's assistance, picked up one brick after another and hurled them at the negro, but the latter paid no attention to the blows.

When Watson had sated his bloody passion, he leaped from the prostrate body of Yancey and ran up the street, taking refuge, when hotly pressed, in the cellar of the vacant house at 33 Windsor Street.

He was quickly surrounded by the posse of officers. Thrusting their weapons in under the house they commenced a fusillade upon the negro which failed to subdue him until he was almost riddeld with bullets.

Several bullets took effect in his left leg and shattered the bones both above and below the knee. Another bullet found lodgment in his righ.

FUND IS STARTED FOR YANCEY'S FAMILY

First subscriptions to The Georgian's fund for Deputy Yancey's family:

Atlanta Georgian	$25.00
Sheriff's Office	50.00
Red Cross Hospital	10.00
Frank L. Harralson	5.00
Harry Latham	5.00
Newt Garner	5.00
John W. Moore	5.00

Court Deputy David Yancey is dead. He met a horrible fate. He was stabbed and hacked to death while endeavoring to serve his employer, the public of Atlanta and Fulton County. He died "with his boots on."

The whole city and the entire county will applaud this brave man's deed and mourn his death. Then they will turn again to their own homes and happy families and the humdrum of business. Court Deputy David Yancey will pass from their minds.

It remains for the dead man's unhappy family to bear the real burdens of consequences which its head met in serving the public. There is the widow, who idolized her big, strong husband. There are also eigh: children, bright-eyed boys and girls, not one of them over 16 years of age, who will romp no more about their father's knee.

Family in Need.

He has been snatched away from them. And now—what do they face?

With the overwhelming tragedy not yet fully realized by them, the family of Deputy Yancey has not thought of this. Their sorrow for their loved one drowns out all else.

But life has its toll which must be paid. There are eight children who have to live, as well as a widow. Their sole support has been taken from them. And now—they face life's problem.

Yancey's family was in straitened circumstances at the time of his death. Sickness had invaded the house and two of the children are now in a hospital.

Already friends of the dead man are thinking of this. The Georgian also has thought of this.

The Georgian has started a fund to care for the family whose head was cut off while serving the people of Atlanta and Fulton County.

Your Aid Needed.

This newspaper has headed the list with $25. The amount is small—not commensurate in any manner with the price paid by Yancey. But its smallness invites contributions from other sources—from the public whom Yancey served. The Georgian will gladly receive these contributions and see that they are put in the hands of the bereaved family as a poor substitute for what it has lost.

High praise was given the deputy by Sheriff Mangum, his superior officer.

"Yancey was a fine man," said the Sheriff. "He had always done his duty to the public faithfully."

"September Morn" May Shiver On; Chief "Has Seen Worse"

Police Chief Beavers, just back from Washington, D. C., has granted a new lease on life to dainty "September Morn, "following an "unofficial" call at a local book store Monday morning.

The chief took a leisurely stroll along Whitehall, stopped for several minutes before the big window which protects some 48 of the maidens, scanned each of them most carefully, and then nodded his head in a semi-approval sort of manner, as much as to say that "he's seen much worse pictures than Cole's present leader."

In fact, the chief actually said as much in substance. However, he hasn't delivered any opinion as yet—he is going to think it over—and in the meantime, so far as the chief is concerned, "September Morn" may shiver on.

Man Running for Train Is Hit by an Engine; Dies in Hour

Carl Brown, 23 years old, of Stone Mountain, was struck by a switch engine of the Georgia Railroad early Monday morning and received injuries from which he died an hour later. He attempted to board a moving passenger train in the Atlanta yards.

C. B. Bishop, of Scottdale, Brown's companion, had boarded the train and turned on the coach steps to call to his friend.

Brown, running across the yards in the darkness, failed to see the approaching switch engine. He was struck by the engine's cowcatcher and hurled fifteen feet. He was picked up unconscious and hurried to the Elkin-Goldsmith Sanitarium.

Brown and Bishop had been in Atlanta visiting young ladies. They overstayed their time and had tried to make a short cut to the train.

Leading Citizens Urge Tracks on Ivy

Leading citizens called at the office of Mayor Woodward Monday to protest against the proposed plan not to replace the trolley car tracks on Ivy Street. V. H. Kriegshaber filed a formal protest as a property owner in which he urged that the tracks be put down on the regraded street. Others in the party were Judge Spencer Atkinson, Logan Bleckley, E. C. Peters and B. M. Willingham.

They declared the change of route would inconvenience persons using North Side cars.

Mary Garden Tells Of Her Breakdown

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, June 16.—A letter has been received from Mary Garden, frankly confirming the news of her temporary breakdown. She says:

"I never sing before the public unless I am absolutely well and in good form. I came from America after my long and tiresome season very tired, and thought perhaps a month's rest would be enough to permit me to create 'The Jewels' here.

"I find it is not. I have put off my creation until September. I am leaving to-morrow for Switzerland."

Zoo Keeper to Raise Lion Cubs on Bottle

The birth of three lion cubs at the Gress Zoo has started a nursery at the park that might be a model to humans. The cubs were born Sunday night and the old lioness was extremely jealous of them, but the hot weather made her so restless she tossed against one and killed it.

"Blackie" Boyd, the zoo keeper, took the two remaining to his home, and announced he would raise them on a bottle.

Painter Analysis Mailed to Coroner

JACKSONVILLE, June 16.—Coroner C. D. Abbott has received word from Baltimore that the report of the analysis of E. O. Painter's stomach has been mailed. He expects to get it to-day.

Upon receipt of the report the Coroner will reassemble his jury and continue the inquest into the death of the wealthy fertilizer manufacturer, who drowned in the St. Johns River on May 22.

DORSEY AIDE SAYS FRANK IS FAST IN NET

Attorney Hooper Declares State Is Prepared for Any Move the Defense May Make.

Frank A. Hooper, the well-known criminal lawyer who has been engaged to assist Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey in the trial of Leo M. Frank for the alleged murder of Mary Phagan, said Monday that the case was complete and was ready for presentation in court at any time.

Mr. Hooper asserted that the attorneys interested in the prosecution had investigated every angle of the mystery so thoroughly and fortified themselves against any defense that Frank will present, that practically nothing remained to be done until the case was called for trial. The departure of Solicitor Dorsey for a week's vacation, he said, was an indication of the preparedness of the prosecution.

No new developments are expected by the prosecution, according to Mr. Hooper. All of the stories and rumors have been run down to their original source. The defense, in his opinion, will be able to spring no surprise that has not been anticipated by the prosecution.

Mrs. Frank Gives Interview.

The American printed Sunday an exclusive interview with Mrs. Frank, whose husband, Leo M. Frank, is under indictment charged with the murder of 14-year-old Mary Phagan. It was the first time that Mrs. Frank had permitted herself to be interviewed since the Coroner's jury a month ago recommended that the Grand Jury hold her husband for trial.

She broke her silence to tell the thousands who have been gripped by the remarkable murder mystery just why she is absolutely confident and positive that Frank could not have been the author of the terrible deed. She made no plea for sympathy, but expressed herself as fully reconciled to the processes of the law, even though they temporarily caused her the greatest sorrow and kept her husband behind the cars as a man suspected of one of the most brutal crimes thinkable. The loyal wife said that she was able to bear the present belief because of the assurance of Frank's ultimate and complete vindication.

Why She Believes Husband.

On the fact that she believes from her life with the suspected slayer that any gross or immoral act is utterly apart from his nature, she bases much of her belief in his entire innocence.

She said, in part:

"In all the year and a half of our engagement, in the happy knowledge and consent of both our parents, I was Leo's 'best girl' and he was my one and only beau. If I went to a party, it was conceded that I should go with Leo, and if Leo went, he invariably went with me. You know, the people of my faith do those things in that way—with us, betrothal is all but as sacred as marriage itself.

"Leo Frank and myself have been man and wife for two years and a half. I state it as a circumstance showing how sweet and mutually happy our home life has been, and not as a thing I should mention ordinarily, that during all the two and a half years of our wedded life not once has Leo been away from me at night, save when once a month he attended the meetings of the Jewish Order of B'nai Brith, of which he was the president in Atlanta until he was arrested.

He Preferred Staying Home.

"He might have gone out in the evenings, perhaps without my knowledge, to places he should not have gone, so far as my free consent may have figured as a factor in his going. I merely cite it as a truthful circumstance that he has not elected to go. He seemed rather to prefer staying home with me. Naturally, that made

Beavers Seeks to Add Four Women To His Vice Squad

Women will be added to the vice squad of the Atlanta Police Department if the recommendations of Chief Beavers, as made in his report to the police board on his meeting with the police chiefs in Washington, are adopted.

From the paper read by the Chief of Police of Los Angeles in regard to women detectives and the effect in that city, Chief Beavers is firmly convinced they would be of help here.

The women—four in number—would be used to ferret out and report to the Chief the names of women and men who are engaged in the vice traffic in Atlanta, and in this way, the Chief believes, the department would be able to completely break up the business in this city.

Della Fox, Musical Comedy Star, Dies

NEW YORK, June 16.—Mrs. Jack Levy, better known as Della Fox, the well-known musical comedy actress, is dead at the Bellevue Hospital, where she had been undergoing treatment following a severe operation which was performed some days ago.

Arrangements have been made to send her remains to her old home in St. Louis for burial.

Slim Figure, Birds In Cages, Paris Fads

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, June 16.—The slim figure for women was in its ascendency at Chantilly race course yesterday and among the other things noted in the great fashionable parade were diaphanous waists, small hats, canes for women, golden shoe buckles, anklets with watches set thereon, embroidered skirts and coiffures more appropriate for grand opera than outdoor gatherings.

Two women carried canaries in gold cages. There will be another fashionable race meet at Auteuil next week, when further decrees of fashion are expected.

4 Hurt in Wreck of Auto Near Midland

COLUMBUS, GA., June 16.—According to a long distance telephone message received here to-day, four persons were painfully hurt late Sunday afternoon when the automobile of Dr. F. E. Young, of Midland, turned turtle down an eight-foot embankment.

Miss Helen Coleman, of Columbus, who was driving the car, was caught under the steering wheel. Dr. Young's two children were pinned underneath the car. Dr. Young was thrown clear of the car. It is thought all will recover.

Risque Books Most Sought by Readers

CHICAGO, June 14.—Books that twenty years ago were considered unfit for public circulation now are most eagerly sought, according to employees in the Chicago Public Library.

"The reading public has become broadened in its attitude toward discussions of problems of sex life until now these discussions are eagerly sought," one said.

200-Mile Walk Marks Silver Wedding Day

PHILADELPHIA, June 16.—Dr. N. R. Hubbard and wife celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding by walking from their home in Williamsport, Pa., to this city, a distance of 200 miles.

The couple declare it was the best vacation outing they ever had.

LOCALS OPEN SERIES HERE AGAINST VOLS

Neither Team Scores in First Inning; Price and Fleharty on the Mound.

Score by innings:

CRACKERS	0	1	0

PONCE DE LEON BALL PARK, June 16.—The Crackers and Volunteers journeyed out to Ponce this afternoon to pull off the first game of their series. Fleharty, for Nashville, and Price, for Atlanta, were on the firing line.

THE GAME.

FIRST INNING.

Callahan grounded to Alperman, who made a great stop and threw the ex-Cracker out to Price. The latter covered first base. Lindsey flied to Long. Daley hit a scratch single through Smith and went out trying to steal second, Dunn to Alperman. NO RUNS, ONE HIT.

Long grounded out, Lindsey to Schwartz. Welchonce out, Perry to Schwartz. Alperman flied to Daley. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

SECOND INNING.

Perry was safe on Bisland's error of his grounder. Young grounded down the first base line and was tagged out by Price. Schwartz tripled to right and Perry tallied. Goalby bunted to Smith, who fielded the ball poorly, allowing Schwartz to score and Goalby to reach first. Gibson hit into a double play, Alperman to Agler. TWO RUNS, ONE HIT.

Bailey singled to center. Smith walked. Bisland sacrificed, Perry to Goalby. Agler singled to left, scoring Bailey. Dunn grounded to Fleharty and Smith was out in a chase, Fleharty to Perry to Gibson to Perry. Agler went to third and Dunn to second on the out. Price walked, filling the bases. Long hit a weak pop to Goalby. ONE RUN, TWO HITS.

THIRD INNING.

Fleharty hit a Texas leaguer over short. Callahan singled to left and Fleharty went to second. Lindsey sacrificed, Dunn to Alperman. Daley grounded to Agler and Fleharty was caught at the plate to Dunn. Perry grounded to Bisland and was out to Agler. NO RUNS, TWO HITS.

Welchonce out, Goalby to Schwartz. Alperman flied to Callahan. Bailey popped to Perry. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

Girl's Death Ousts Uruguay Minister

MONTEVIDEO, June 16.—The scandal involved in the tragic death of the beautiful Senorita Irma Avengo had a sensational turn in the Chamber of Deputies, when Senor Frugoni introduced a motion asking the resignation of Dr. Romeu, Minister of Foreign Affairs.

The motion was rejected, but Dr. Romeu immediately resigned. Several big failures are announced of men connected with the affair.

Senorita Avengo's body was found in a field after she had disappeared, owing, it is reported, about $1,500,000. Romeu, it was reported, was her debtor to the extent of $500,000.

Ah, at Last, Women Are to Have 'Em

CHICAGO, June 16.—"Trouserines" will be offered by Chicago dressmakers to take the place of the popular, but abused, slashed skirt. Woman must pull 'em on over her feet, too, just like the men do it. Thus the dream of many decades is coming true.

The Chicago Dressmakers' Association has so decreed. The new style is to be a great flaring ankle-length pair o' something, draped so that on the street one will never stare.

'Antis' Say Suffrage Reduces Birth Rate

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Prize-winning anti-suffragist essays received at haedquarters here claim the birth rate in America is falling off because of suffrage activities.

DEPUTY SLAIN BY CRAZED NEGRO DESPERADO

Black Wounded and Captured After Fierce Battle With Police. Expected to Die.

groin and still others in his right side.

In spite of his many wounds, it was thought that he might live. None of them alone would have been fatal. Watson has been wanted for some time at Fayetteville for escaping from the chaingang, and Warden Harris has been in Atlanta several times trying to locate the negro. Failing, he detailed a negro to stay in the city in an effort to find him. It was known that Watson lived in the rear of 60 Orange Street, but he was shrewd enough not to go near his home.

An especial act of bravery during the siege of Watson, who was in the darkness under the house, was that of Policeman Paul West. Watson, crippled but still defiant, was in an obscure corner. The officers called upon him to surrender. He shouted his defiance at them. After the fire was resumed the negro saw there was no further use in resisting and yelled that he was ready to give up.

West Dares Death in Dark.

The officers waited, but the negro did not come out of the darkness. Policeman West, against the warnings of his fellow-officers, dropped to the ground and crawled under the house toward the negro. His comrades were expecting every instant to hear the crack of a shot which would tell that West, too, had fallen a victim to the crazed black man.

West, however, crept up on the negro and hit him over the head with the butt of his revolver. Then he took him by the feet and dragged him, senseless, out into the light.

At the sight of the negro the anger of the mob which had collected was redoubled. Inflamed beyond measure by the atrocious killing, they surged forward and would have borne Watson off had not the policemen hastily surrounded him and carried him to the waiting automobile.

His eyes glazed and staring, the negro appeared utterly unconscious as he lay in the car. Questions as to his identity were hurled at him as he was borne to the station house and later to the hospital, but he seemed not to hear them.

Woman Stands Guard.

Mrs. Hattie Barnett, Atlanta's woman detective, lives at 15 Woodward Avenue, just back of the yard on Windsor Street, where the bloody battle between Watson and Yancey took place. She heard the shots that Yancey fired at the negro and ran out to see the deputy lying on the grass, horribly gashed and mutilated, and the negro running up the street.

Snatching her revolver she ran out of doors and after the negro. When Watson took refuge under the house on Windsor Street, Mrs. Barnett stood guard until the wagon load of policemen and detectives under command of Assistant Chief Jett and Captain Poole dashed up in front of the house.

Irby Terry, of 294 Whitehall Street, a boy of 11 years, had a narrow escape at the hands of the negro. Terry was standing on the street corner when the negro dashed by after snatching the purse of Winn. Watson brandished his knife and as he came upon the boy he made a lunge which Terry narrowly dodged.

Family Left in Want.

One of the many pathetic features of the tragedy is the poverty of the family that Yancey leaves. They have had a hard struggle for existence in their little home at Lakewood Heights on the Jonesboro Road. Eight children are in the family, none of them above 16 or 17 years of age. One of the two older daughters recently was taken to the hospital, making an additional burden upon Yancey.

Only recently Yancey was made a bailiff in Judge Calhoun's court. The salary was $100 a month. Yancey was overjoyed when apprised of his appointment.

"Now everything will be fine sailing," he said. "That fixes me just right. I am tickled to death. One of my children is in the hospital and another is very sick. I can take care of them now."

Jesse Winn, the old negro from whom Watson stole the $4, lives in DeWald alley. Watson is said to have stayed at the Winn home on several occasions. Winn is an employee in the coal yards of the Southern Railway.

Auto Has Red Flag; Chased by Angry Bull

SACRAMENTO, June 16.—A red Sacramento pennant attached to the rear of the automobile of H. A. McClellan, of this city, almost brought disaster upon himself and family when a bull attacked the machine from the flank on the road between Nicolas and Lincoln. By dodging and speeding the chauffeur managed to escape with a punctured tire which the bull gored with his horns.

FRANK TIGHT IN NET, SAYS AIDE TO DORSEY

me very happy—for I am, after all, a woman, like other women, and a woman never gets to the point where she does not dearly love for her husband to show her that he is still her sweetheart.

"We have lived here in this house, with my father and mother. To them, Leo has been devoted and always most considerate. They love him as a son; they took him close to their hearts before the wedding bells had ceased to ring—for that is the way our people do in those matters.

"I will tell you another reason why I think Leo Frank could not have committed the diabolical crime charged to him. He is devoted to children—little children especially.

"We have no children of our own, unfortunately, but there are several nieces and nephews in the family, and to every one of them Mr. Frank is affectionately attached. I have seen him play with a two-year-old child for hours, not once, but many times.

Helps Little Orphan Children.

"He has been with Mr. Milton Klein, for many years one of the moving spirits in providing innocent and healthful outdoor recreation and pleasure for the children of the Hebrews' Orphan Home.

"Is a man who loves children as Leo Frank loves them likely to have a hand in the slaying of an innocent child, not yet budded into youthful womanhood, as Mary Phagan is said to have been?

"If there is one person in all the world he has been more devoted to than to me, it is his aged and blind uncle, M. Frank. Is a man who is kind and considerate to the lame, the halt and the blind such a man as would take a hand in the killing of a child?

"Ah, surely, surely, there are few people who will—who can—believe that!

Always Kind and Generous.

"In the home where Leo Frank has spent his time away from his business, he always has been the most kind, the most generous, the most thoughtful, the most considerate and the most affectionate of men.

"I think my knowledge of Leo Frank and the kind of man he is is worth more than the word of a shiftless negro who has lied persistently and vigorously ever since he was arrested as a suspect—but while my voice will be hushed in the court room, his will be heard by both the judge and the jury trying my husband for his life.

"There is, of course, much in this case that has seemed to me cruel—and now and then I have been moved to some measure of bitterness in my thoughts. But I believe that truth is mighty, and all I want is fair play.

She Wants Fair Play.

"If we can get fair play, my husband will be restored soon to me and to his family and his friends—and when he is, we shall take up calmly, and in such degree of forgetfulness as we can summon to our aid, the disrupted thread of our life, bind up our wounds, and try to hold against no man aught of ill will or resentment.

"That's the way I feel about it, and that's the way Leo feels about it. That's the way mother and father feel about it, too.

"We await the trial of Leo Frank in confidence. We have come to think that, after all, we shall get fair treatment—and as that is all we have asked for, we are more and more optimistic every day as to the conclusion."

I'LL KEEP PEACE, KAISER TELLS CARNEGIE

BERLIN, June 16.—Andrew Carnegie, leading worker for word-wide peace, to-day paid his respects to Emperor William, the "war lord of Europe." Mr. Carnegie was accompanied by other American peace commissioners who came here to extend felicitations to the Kaiser as part of the quarter centennial celebration of the ascension of the Emperor to the throne of Germany.

Mr. Carnegie and his fellow commissioners presented the Kaiser with an address in the name of 44 American peace and conciliation societies. The address pointed out that William's reign of 25 years has been notable because of the maintenance of a quarter of a century of peace. In reply the Kaiser said, in part:

Hopes for Peaceful Reign.

"I hope to reign 25 years more in peace, and shall certainly do all I can in that direction."

Germans expressed great curiosity to see the American iron master and great crowds lined the streets when he departed from the Adlon Hotel, where he is stopping with his wife and daughter, Margaret. He was heartily cheered. This cordial demonstration pleased Mr. Carnegie, who waved his hand to the crowds.

Among those who were received with Mr. Carnegie by the Emperor were Robert S. Brookings, of St. Louis, and Jacob G. Schmidlapp, of Cincinnati.

Although yesterday was the real anniversary, William having ascended the throne June 15, 1888, because it was Sunday the secular ceremonies were postponed until to-day.

Bands Play Martial Tunes.

Shortly after dawn the massed military bands from all the garrisons in the environs of Berlin assembled in Unter Den Linden and a crash of martial music, which echoed and re-echoed through the neighboring streets, followed.

Seven thousand school children joined in singing "The Watch on the Rhine" and other tunes the bands played. The streets were crowded with visitors from all sections of the empire. Among these were many American, English and other foreign tourists.

A mighty crowd gathered about the marble palace in Potsdam and sang the national hymn time and again. The wetaher was ideal for the occasion.

Catholics May Take New Bible Version

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Rev. D. J. Kennedy, theologian of the Dominican Order, announced here to-day that a revised translation of the Bible had been prepared by the late Rev. F. A. Spencer, of the Dominicans. Dr. Kennedy delivered an oration at Father Spencer's funeral exercises, and disclosed that Father Spencer devoted the last twenty years of his life to the translation.

He predicted the Roman Catholic clergy soon would call a special canonical council to consider the new version in place of the Douay's, which has been accepted for more than 300 years.

Marshall Sees Rules For Life in Baseball

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The rising generation was directed to form its rules of life upon the rules of baseball by Vice President Marshall in a children's day address before the Bethany Chapel Prebyterian Sunday school.

"No boy is so mean as the boy who will not play the game square," said the Vice President. "The sense of justice is ever present in the heart and mind of every boy and girl. I never have seen a thoroughly bad girl, but I believe I have seen one or two boys who were really bad."

1 Dead, 3 Hurt, When Train Strikes Auto

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., June 16. Improvement was noted to-day in the condition of Miss Willie Newton, Mrs. Finis Plumlee and Leo Chamberlain, who were injured yesterday when a Southern Railway passenger train struck an automobile in which they were riding near Ooltewah, killing Finis Plumlee.

The party was returning from an outing at Ocoee. Chamberlain, the chauffeur, was hurled 100 feet.

COOPER HAS WAY TO MEET FOOD SHORTAGE

Chamber of Commerce Secretary Urges Enlistment of 100,000 Boys in Corn Club.

Secretary Walter G. Cooper, of the Chamber of Commerce, Monday proposed a way to meet the $37,000,000 deficit in the food supply of Georgia. He urged organization of 100,000 boys in the corn clubs and thereby increasing tenfold the work which already has added 25,000,000 bushels of corn to the annual crop.

Mr. Cooper urges an immediate and active State-wide interest in the 1913 Georgia Corn Show as the most important step.

He says:

"Leading authorities on the food supply of Georgia agree in the estimate that the people sent out of this State last year $172,496,000 for corn, oats, hay, meat, dairy products and other food that should be raised here.

"The cotton and cotton-seed crops lack $37,496,000 of paying for the food we bought; this in spite of the fact that the corn crop of Georgia has increased 25,000,000 bushels in five years.

Average Yield Increasing.

"We have heard of a revolution in agriculture. Statistics show the average yield of corn went up from 10 to 15 bushels in five years. Georgia, though, still lacks a great deal of raising her food.

"In the face of wonderful improvements wrought by corn clubs in five years, it is hard to believe the statement that the cotton crop lacks $37,000,000 of paying for food supplies brought into the State; but these estimates are vouched for by such men as P. A. Methvin, State pure food inspector, and H. G. Hastings, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Committee on Agriculture.

"Of course, farmers raise some corn, oats and hay, but they must have consumed what they raised; otherwise they would not have to buy.

"Georgia farmers, according to the State Department of Agriculture, produce something more than $232,000,000, possibly $250,000,000, but when it is remembered that farmers have to buy mules, fertilizers, hardware, clothes, school books and a great many other things besides food, it is clear that they have little left to pay the enormous food bills indicated by the foregoing figures.

Confronted by Problem.

"What are we going to do about it?

"Of course, we must make the farms more productive and produce the things that we import.

"States like Iowa are producing 36 bushels of corn to the acre. There is no reason why this should not be done in Georgia.

"In addition to this, the State of Iowa sells $200,000,000 a year of animal products.

"We can not have much in the way of animal products until we have enough corn, oats, hay and forage to feed the animals as well as the people.

"If we are short $58,000,000 in corn with no animals to feed, how much more corn will we have to raise in order to supply the present demand and furnish food for $200,000,000 worth of animals as Iowa does?

"Iowa is about the same size as Georgia and the climate is certainly no better. There is no more congenial soil and not as much moisture."

Atlanta Eagle Aerie Goes to Convention

Leaving the Terminal Station at 9:20 o'clock to-night the Atlanta Aerie, No. 714, of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, 150 strong, accompanied by its drum corps of 30, will start in special coaches for Jacksonville, where the annual convention of the organization begins to-morrow for a three-day session.

The convention is made up of representatives from four Southern States—Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina and Florida—and is known as the Southeastern section of the organization.

CAMDEN, N. J., June 16.—Aroused by the barking of his dogs, Martin Kahout, of Atco, rushed out of his house and was dumfounded when he discovered that not a tree in his peach orchard was left standing, each being chopped down close to the ground. He could advance no reason for the destruction.

Kahout expected to get $1,500 from the crop.

Wears Draperies In Arabian Act

Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, in her Oriental costume.

Says She Needs Money For Boys' Home and Praises Light, Flowing Costume For Women.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, who has earned the sobriquet of "the most unconventional woman in all England," will dance in New York swathed in picturesque Arabian costume, consisting of brown and white draperies, in a drama based on the biblical character Judith.

For her two weeks' work she will receive $10,000.

The love for Oriental dress was gained by Lady Constance while in India.

"The day will come when all women will dress like those of Egypt and India," she said. "The cost is nominal, and I am relieved of all worry about the changing styles. Then, too, this costume is comfortable, and that is something that can not be said for the modern attire favored by women. And, also, I think that I am safe in saying it is about as becoming as most modern outfits."

Lady Constance has been implored many times by her relatives, the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, not to dance in public. But Lady Constance said she needed the money for a boys' home in Scotland which she is trying to help.

CITY TO SWELTER AS BREEZES FAIL

Weather Man Declares Mercury Will Hit High Places—Hot Monday Morning.

Soft-collar and linen-suit weather is forecast for the current week by Government Weatherman VonHerrmann. Monday the maximum temperature will approximate Sunday's, when the mercury registered 92 degrees as the maximum. At 6 o'clock Monday morning the thermometer registered 71, which is exceptionally high for Atlanta during the month of June for that hour.

"What makes it so hot?" the weather man was asked.

"The beautiful sunshine," answered Mr. VonHerrmann. "But while this is actually the case, the real reason for the hot wave is that at present there is high pressure over the State of Georgia and no movement of wind. If there were a brisk wind movement the sun's rays would be cooled. Consequently, this week we will get hot weather that is not due us."

deaths were reported.

In Chicago the mercury reached 94. The same maximum was reported at St. Louis, Monigomery, Jacksonville, Kansas City and North Platte. That was 10 degrees hotter than the Heat Is Fatal in North Middle West.

CHICAGO, June 16.—Several more days of intense heat are in prospect to-day, following a sizzling 24 hours. The entire north central part of the country was hot yesterday. Eight maximum for the day at New Orleans, and 2 degrees cooler than at Omaha, Des Moines and St. Paul.

The temperature at 9 o'clock this morning, 86, indicated that a new record for the season would be reached this afternoon.

Fear for Babies as Heat Makes Cleveland Record.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 16.—At 10 o'clock this morning the thermometer had risen to 86, and indications pointed to the hottest June day in the history of the local weather bureau. Several were overcome by the heat and an epidemic of illness among babies caused fears of a new mark in infant mortality.

New York Heat Wave Will Continue Two Days.

NEW YORK, June 16.—New York City sweltered to-day under the first real heat wave of the season. At noon the temperature was 87, but the weather forecaster predicted that the same torrid weather would prevail two days longer.

DIES FROM STAB WOUND.

MOBILE, ALA., June 16.—Raymond Sheppard, a well-known resident of St. Andrews, Fla., died here at an infirmary from a stab wound. E. L. Matthews, a prominent citizen of Panama City, is locked up at St. Andrews, charged with inflicting the wound.

COLYAR RETURNS PROMISING SENSATION

A. S. Colyar is in Atlanta again, promising to spring some more sensations.

The investigator who engineered the dictographing of Thomas B. Felder and Mayor Woodward has been in Washington. He sent a letter to Atlanta before him, saying he objected to being made a goat.

It is believed Colyar saw George M. Gentry while in Washington and got from him an affidavit. This is said to be much the same as the one printed admitting that the dictograph records had been padded, as charged in Gentry's recent affidavit, but that the general charges were upheld.

Promises Story in Letter.

Colyar's letter, mailed before he left Washington, follows:

"He laughs best who laughs last. When you get tired publishing all of the lies the gang of political crooks are publishing on Lanford and myself I may be able to give you a story that will cause some people to sit up and take notice.

"It's indeed comforting to think one purchased affidavit can cause a certain man in Atlanta to consider himself vindicated completely. Whitewash is cheap, as we all know.

"Then there is Mayor Woodward. He says 'Colyar went to Mrs. Gentry's house and worried her.' Indeed, where did he learn this? It's news to me. But we all know the Mayor. He is the same Mayor Hon. R. F. Maddox defeated after he (Woodward) was nominated by his party, and all Atlanta knows why. Let them make a goat out of me and see what I publish in my own defense.

"The crooks got caught. And they sent Miles away to see if he could not fool the people. A. S. COLYAR."

Felder's Trip Causes Comment.

Speculation was rife Monday as to the nature of the trip of Colonel Thomas B. Felder, who left Atlanta Sunday afternoon with the statement that he was bound for Cincinnati.

Rumors had it that Colonel Felder in reality is on his way to Washington, for the purpose probably of conferring with George Gentry, the missing stenographer in the recent dictagraph sensation. If this is Colonel Felder's intention, he kept it to himself.

It has been suggested that Colonel Felder would feel much safer in going to Washington by way of Cincinnati than through the State of South Carolina.

NO VICE HOUSES IN FIVE YEARS, SAYS CHIEF

"In less than five years every recognized house of vice in the United States will be closed."

This was the statement made today by James L. Beavers, chief of police of Atlanta, who returned last night from Washington and the convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs.

More time was allotted to discussion of the social evil than in any previous convention of the police chiefs, Beavers said. Last Wednesday the whole afternoon session was devoted to the topic. Chief Beavers made an address, and it was this address and the chief's record in Atlanta which stimulated the discussion.

"There has been a wonderful increase of sentiment among chiefs of police in favor of closing these houses," Chief Beavers said to-day. "This feeling was demonstrated at the convention last week.

"Last Wednesday the convention used the whole afternoon for discussion of the social evil. That was the first time so much attention ever had been given to this subject. The police chiefs are giving more attention now to talking and thinking about this question than ever before, and the sentiment is rapidly growing in favor of absolute suppression.

"Some of the chiefs in attendance at the convention favored segregation, but all of them admitted the law favored suppression, and that suppression was right. The only question seemed to be whether the laws could be enforced, and the majority sentiment was they could.

"The chiefs know suppression is right, and after listening to the discussions and studying the sentiment manifested there, I believe in less than five years every recognized house of vice in the United States will be closed."

Because we have a large plant, and second to none in America for absolute completeness and modernism, is not an argument that we are looking only for the BIG things in PRINTING. The same element of price, quality and service is just as much an inseparable part of every small job we turn out as the most elaborate that leaves our shop. The same niceties in every small detail enter into every piece of work we do, no matter how small the size or quantity. SERVICE here is the monitor that governs our every movement. QUALITY the standard that measures every effort.

DUEL IN DARK BY BURGLAR AND DETECTIVE

Negro, Caught Robbing Safe, Flees After Volleys Are Exchanged—Arrested Later.

The details of a pistol duel between a Pinkerton detective and a burglar in the Troy Laundry, 210 Houston Street, were made known Sunday after the arrest of Herman Butler, a negro, living at 99 Rondeau Street.

A volley of shots, which startled the neighborhood, was exchanged between Fred Farris, the detective, and Butler when Farris discovered the latter rifling the safe in the laundry Saturday night after all of the other employees had departed.

The laundry proprietors had missed money and other articles from the building several times, but were unable to find the thief. Finally they notified the Pinkertons.

Farris hid in the building Saturday night. Soon after the lights were out the detective saw a man approach one of the house telephones. The intruder, using the instrument, ascertained that no one was on the other floors of the building. Then he proceeded to unlock an old-fashioned safe with a key he had.

The burglar was interrupted by Farris' command to throw up his hands. Instead of complying, Butler drew a revolver and began firing in the direction from which the voice came. Farris returned the fire, but Butler, backing away, managed to get to the rear door and escape without being hit.

Not suspecting that his identity had been learned, Butler remained at home Sunday. He was arrested there by Detectives Coker and Gillespie.

Slaton's Client Is Fined for Ignoring Court's Injunction

"While it would be a difficult matter to insult me personally, you can get into trouble pretty easily by insulting this court," said Superior Judge John T. Pendleton Monday morning when he fined Edward Floding $50 for contempt of court, and threatened him with a jail sentence of 24 hours. Floding's attorney was Governor-elect John M. Slaton.

Floding is proprietor of the Floding Relagia Company. After he purchased it, the former owners obtained an injunction restraining him from using that firm name.

According to the court, he disregarded the injunction.

40 Stone Burglar as He Tries to Escape

A passerby saw a negro moving about in the Harrison Dry Goods Store, 418-22 Marietta Street, at noon Sunday. Becoming suspicious, the passerby notified the police. Then he collected all the men in the neighborhood, 40 in all, and they surrounded the store.

The negro, all unconscious of the reception committee waiting to receive him, came out. He was met by a shower of bricks and stones and beat a hasty retreat. Finally the police arrived and the negro was taken into custody. He gave his name as Joe Marion.

PRESIDENT WILL SPUR HOUSE IN PERSON

Wilson Will Read Message Urging His 'Hobbleless' Currency Reform Bill.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—President Wilson will read his currency message to Congress in person, it was announced at the White House prior to the newspaper conference at which the President discussed the bill at length with the Washington correspondents.

The President believes that his plan of personally placing before the national Legislature the views on important topics, such as currency and the tariff, insures greater attention and more marked interest from the country at large than did the former custom of sending messages to Congress and having them read by a clerk.

Therefore, as soon as the currency bill is completed and ready for presentation (probably about Friday of this week), the President will go to the Capitol and present his views on the necessary financial reform to the assembled members of the House.

Atlanta Girls Dazzle Dr. Cook

On Tour to Establish 'Rights'

Dr. Frederick A. Cook, who stopped to stare at Peachtree belles.

"Southern women have a little way all their own," explorer says.

Explorer Pauses on Lecture Tour of the South to See Atlanta.

Dr. Frederick A. Cook, of polar fame, was in Atlanta Monday, and—listen, girls—he's head over heels in love with you already, for he says so himself.

"They've simply got me," was the way the Doctor put it when seen in his room at the Hotel Aragon Monday morning.

In fact, Dr. Cook says he's fallen in love with all the Southern girls because they're so charming—and the Doctor is by no means a bad authority, for he is making a considerable tour of the Southland in the interest of what he terms a "fair play campaign" to show he discovered as much North Pole as Admiral Peary ever did.

"Southern women," said Dr. Cook, "have a little way all their own—I can't explain it, nor can I express it adequately—but it's true just the same. In other words, they form a type of woman that you don't find anywhere else on the earth.

"Atlanta is certainly no exception to his rule—in fact, I think they look even better here than elsewhere. They simply get a fellow—that's all."

The Doc Likes Atlanta.

The Doctor, who was all smiles Monday morning, did not confine his compliments to Atlanta women, however. He took occasion also to say a good word for the Capital City, which he made headquarters Monday en route to Madison, Ga., where he will deliver a lecture Monday night.

Atlanta, he says, looks good to him—looks better than any Southern city he has seen thus far, for there is a "snap here that makes things go."

Of course, being so infatuated with Atlanta, he wanted to know all about the big city. When informed that legal prohibition existed here he expressed surprise. Prohibition he believes to be a good thing, he says, although he is not a teetotaler himself, as a glass of beer "once-in-while" goes pretty well.

"Buttermilk is my favorite drink, however," said the Doctor, smiling, "for it is both nourishing and refreshing."

"But how about Mr. Bryan's grape juice program?" interrupted the reporter.

"Oh, that's going too far," replied the Doctor. "I suppose—" and this with a sly wink—"the grape juice people like it pretty well—so well that they probably will contribute a neat little sum to the next Democratic campaign fund."

Of course, Dr. Cook was still most seriously concerned with his campaign for "fair play" in the North Polar controversy, which, the Doctor says, is by no means a dead issue.

As a matter of fact, the issue is so live, according to Dr. Cook, that it is keeping him just about as busy as he ever hopes to be. In less than three years, he says, he has appeared before 3,000,000 people in America and Europe. His present tour will include Alabama, Georgia, Florida, the Carolinas, Tennessee and Oklahoma. After winding up the Southern tour, he will go to the big cities of the West and North.

"All I want is fair play," Dr. Cook repeated, "and I will get this at the hands of the middle classes of the United States, which have always been friendly to me.

"I find these good average sort of folks are either agin' you or they are for you strong; and when they are for you it means something, for the middle class is the molder of public opinion. The 'highbrows' are not in with these people, for they never take sides; they are too wrapped up in themselves and their own interests to take interest in other things."

Dynamite in Rescue Work Causes Strife

NEW YORK, June 16.—A hot controversy over the use of explosives in the search for the last two bodies of the ten men killed by a cave-in of granite in the new Lexington Avenue subway Saturday night has caused bitter feeling between Coroner W. H. Holtzhauser and Chairman E. E. McCall, of the Public Service Commission. The bodies were recovered.

The Coroner forbade the use of dynamite, and McCall opposed. McCall's authority won. Three separate inquiries are under way.

Artist to Live Like Stone Age Forbears

BOSTON, June 16.—To prove that twentieth century convention is needless, John Knowles, a local artist, will plunge into the wilderness of Northern Maine without clothing, food, matches, firearms or ammunition.

He declared he will live like the men of the Stone Age for three months.

MOROS ROUTED IN MIDNIGHT BATTLE

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MANILA, P. I., June 16.—In a night attack on the remaining defenses of the rebellious Moros on the Island of Jolo the American troops and their native allies, under Brigadier General John J. Pershing, U. S. A., routed the rebel Filipinos with the loss of six men killed and seven wounded.

All the American soldiers killed were scouts.

News of the engagement was received by the military authorities today in a wireless message from Jolo. The radio said the rebellious natives, after deserting their trenches, fled into the mountains, pursued by Americans and the constabulary.

Desultory fighting between the rival forces has been going on for several days. The entire casualties on the American side were 30 killed and wounded. The native loss is believed to be much heavier.

General Pershing is warm in his praise of the gallantry of the Americans.

Railroad Strike Is Result of Discharges

POTTSVILLE, PA., June 16.—Two hundred repairmen at the shops of the Reading Railway at Schuylkill Haven and a number at the repair shops at Palo Alto and St. Clair went on strike this morning on orders from officials of the International Car Workers' Association.

The strike was brought on by the discharging of several repairmen, because, as the union officials claim, they were too active in forming unions.

Darrow May Never Face a Third Trial

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—The remaining charge against Clarence Darrow, noted labor attorney, which grew out of the McNamara trial here, likely never will be heard. The case has not been entered on the court calendar.

The District Attorney's office has refused to indicate whether Darrow will be tried a third time on a charge of being party to the bribery of prospective jurors.

Girl's Auto Death Dream Comes True

In THE AMERICAN, Yesterday:

SOUTH IN MAGNIFICENT SHAPE

"The South, when we come to consider our immediate prospects, is in absolutely magnificent shape. I know much of conditions in Georgia of my own knowledge."

Far from believing the country on the verge of hard times or anything like serious financial depression, Mr. Candler believes the horizon to be abundantly rainbowed and promising nothing but good things.

He said that if he did not feel this way about it he would not leave the U. S. for Europe to be gone two months.

And, too, we know Mr. Candler to be a man who is fearless in speech; he says exactly what he thinks; and more---he has a good think every now and then.

BEAVERS THINKS AFFIDAVIT GENUINE

Chief Searched for Gentry in Washington and Found Where Paper Was Signed.

Chief of Police James L. Beavers, just returned from Washington, said Monday that evidence was practically conclusive that George M. Gentry, the stenographer in the recent dictograph episode, did sign an affidavit that the records were padded.

The chief had attended the convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs, but had searched for Gentry, whose affidavit was attested by a Washington notary. The best detective in Washington, he said, was detailed to the hunt, but could not locate Gentry. He did, however, secure evidence that Gentry was in Washington and that the affidavit was genuine.

The signing of the affidavit, Chief Beavers said, took place in room 802 of the Westoria Building. This is the L. & N. Railroad office building, and room 802 is the private office of J. A. Ridgely, formerly of Atlanta, and a personal friend of E. O. Miles, the private detective who brought Gentry's affidavit from Washington.

W. M. J. Davis, the only man in Ridgely's office when the affidavit was signed, said that two men and a woman came in. One introduced himself as Mr. Miles, from Atlanta, Mr. Ridgely's friend. He did not state the identity of the others. Miles and his companions sent downstairs for Miss Jeannette Henning, a notary public, who came up to room 802 and attested an acknowledgment by the man who accompanied Miles to the room.

Davis afterward gave a description of the man who signed the affidavit. Miss Henning also described the man. Both descriptions, Chief Beavers said, tallied with the description of George M. Gentry.

Chief Beavers left Washington without giving instructions to continue the search for Gentry.

Deaf-Mute's Note Better Than Speech

Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor Woodward, said Monday that a Chinese puzzle was simple compared with his duty of finding out the business of people who call at the Mayor's office. The constant reply he receives is:

"I want to see the Mayor on personal business."

After explaining to a deaf-mute today that it was impossible to let anyone see the Mayor on account of the large number of callers unless he knew the nature of their business, the deaf-mute wrote:

"Wife at home. Nothing to eat."

Mr. Hammond said the mute beat all callers in telling what he wanted.

FOOD EXPERTS TO MEET.

MOBILE, ALA., June 16.—The seventeenth annual convention of the Association of American Dairy Food and Drug Officials will convene here to-night at 8 o'clock at the Battle House. Governor Emmet O'Neal, W. H. Armbrecht and Laz Schwarz will deliver welcome addresses. George L. Flanders, of New York, will respond.

No Grape Juice for Sec. Daniels; He's On the Water Wagon

BOSTON, June 16.—Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels has enrolled himself with Secretary of State Bryan, Colonel Roosevelt, Mayor Fitzgerald and others, by declaring that a so-called "soft drink" is his favorite tipple.

Bryan says grape juice, Colonel Roosevelt prefers milk, Mayor Fitzgerald dilutes his grape juice with ginger ale to add a little "tang." "But give me bottled mineral water," declared Secretary Daniels, "I wouldn't spoil my stomach with grape juice and milk makes one fat. Mineral water is refreshing, harmless and won't offend the most abstemious."

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Keith Vaudeville at Forsyth.

That the bill at the Forsyth this week will be one of the most magnetic of the season is the confidential prediction of the management, and, further, it is believed that the supply of seats for the daily matinee and night performances will never hold out against the interest that has been in evidence since the announcement that "Bud" Fisher and six sterling Keith acts would make up the program of entertainment.

The appearance of the creator of "Mutt" and "Jeff," whose daily appearance on the sport pages of The Georgian add to the interest in the paper, is a real event of the season. Fisher will offer a novelty idea completely original.

Pauline Welch (Mrs. Fisher) is on the same bill, and will be seen in her specialty. She scored one of the great hits of last season, introducing some of the song hits of the moment. The Lawn Party, as produced by ten clever young people, is a feature of the bill. The Three Leightons, in their original sketch of minstrel life; Adonis and his dog in "The Act Beautiful;" Karl Emmy's Pets, a wonderful trained animal act, and Whitefield and Ireland, in a comedy offering, make up the complete program.

"Quo Vadis" at the Grand.

A sensation so great that one of the largest theaters in New York has been unable to accommodate the crowds that are demanding seats is "Quo Vadis," the attraction at the Grand this week—matinee daily at 2:30 and night at 8:30.

"Quo Vadis" is presented by George Kleine, in connection with Cohan and Harris, and a small fortune was paid to the Societa Italiana, of Rome, Italy, for the American rights. The Cines people used eighteen months of hard work to make the production of 10,000 feet of film and the three acts and eight scenes in the sensation make up the greatest and the most wonderful photo-play the world has ever seen. Europe is alive with interest in these pictures. New York, Chicago and Philadelphia have all shown wonderful returns, and that Atlanta will quickly take its place in the line is evidenced by the advance sale that has been growing steadily since last Thursday when the box office was opened.

"The Duke of Durham" at Bijou.

Following the several musical tabloids of the last few weeks in which patrons of the Bijou have shown that this class of entertainment meets with popular approval, the announcement is made that "The Duke of Durham," probably the most expensive organization of its kind, will furnish amusement for patrons of the Bijou this week.

Lou L. Shean, the German singing comedian, heads the list of funmakers.

RAG PLAYERS WILL PROVE WHO'S WHO

Best Performers in Atlanta Will Enter Contest Against Weatherholt Player-Piano.

Who is the ragtime champion piano player of Atlanta?

That is the question that T. E. Weatherholt, president of the Weatherholt Piano Company, 72 North Broad Street, will try to solve Wednesday afternoon.

As a result of his extensive advertising recently in the interest of his player-piano club, Mr. Weatherholt has received hundreds of letters asking if his player-pianos can turn out ragtime in regulation style.

These letters have convinced Mr. Weatherholt the country is ragtime-mad. Everybody wants ragtime.

Hugh Cardoza, local theatrical wizard, said this long ago, and Mr. Weatherholt now thinks he is right. Mr. Cardoza says all that is necessary to prove this is to listen to the applause in the Forsyth after a ragtime act goes on.

Mr. Weatherholt has answered all his correspondents to the effect that a Weatherholt player-piano can turn out ragtime better than a professional, and to show folks this is true he has arranged the ragtime contest for Wednesday afternoon.

Some of the best performers on the piano have been secured, and they promise to play the best ragtime they know how to play.

The player-piano will do the same.

Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor Woodward and an expert judge of ragtime, will be the judge.

Mr. Hammond has made a study of ragtime. He is one lover of classical music who likes ragtime, and he has a large assortment at his home. He is a syncopatic sharp and has a trained ear for the music which sets feet to moving and shoulders to going up and down.

USE OF CALOMEL PRACTICALLY STOPPED

For Bilious Attacks, Constipation and All Liver Troubles—Dangerous Calomel Gives Way to Dodson's Liver Tone.

Every druggist in the State has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason—Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is often dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," say druggists.

Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by all druggists who sell it. A large bottle costs 50 cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of sluggishness, you have only to ask for your money back. It will be promptly returned.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant tasting, purely vegetable remedy—harmless to both children and adults. A bottle in the house may save you a day's work or keep your children from missing school. Keep your liver working and your liver will not keep you from working.

Slays Man for $6 And Share in Still

GAINESVILLE, June 16.—Bartow Cantrell, in jail, has confessed to the murder of Arthur Hawkins, near Belton, Hall County, two weeks ago. He claimed that his brother, James Cantrell, offered him $6 and a half interest in his still to slay Hawkins.

Mrs. Silvey Hawkins, wife of the murdered man, is in jail with her 18-month-old baby.

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—The quiet and unassuming little village of Watts, near here, is so wrought up over gibes of comedians in Los Angeles theaters that it plans suit for $25,000 damages against a local theatrical company.

"Watts has been the goat long enough," said a prominent citizen. "When actors exhaust their repertoire of stereotyped jokes they single out Watts for further comedy, and we intend to be paid for it."

TENNESSEE FACES CRISIS OVER DEBT

Factional Politics Prevents Legislation to Provide for $11,458,000 Obligations Due July 1.

NASHVILLE, June 16.—Tennessee faces the possibility of defaulting on its State debt of $11,458,000 due July 1, because of partisan politics.

To-morrow brings the most important financial event of Tennessee since the settlement of the State debt that accrued from carpetbag rule, when bids on loans to refund the debt will be opened.

That the refunding act needs amending is agreed by both Democrats and Fusionists. Legislative authority is needed for the execution of short-term loans so that the big bond issue may be deferred until times get better. The opening of bids to-morrow will be the second attempt of the State to sell its securities. The first, three weeks ago, brought an offer of only $862.50 per $1,000.

TURFMAN SUFFERS FIRE LOSS.

LEXINGTON, KY., June 16.—Two new automobiles, several other vehicles and the poultry houses burned at the Idle Hour Stock Farm of E. R. Bradley, millionaire New York-Chicago turfman, here to-day. The fire started by the explosion of a gasoline tank.

Crepe de Chine Underwear at Half Price

And not just a few odd pieces, but practically every crepe de chine garment of this wonderfully fine stock!

Half price!

Indeed, such splendid news hardly gets into the papers once in a twelvemonth.

And there is no denying that right now crepe de chine underwear is in the height of Fashion's favor.

Makers have been straining every point to make deliveries---the scarcity of crepe de chine that you have heard so much of this season is in a great measure due to the unprecedented use of this fabric for underwear.

And, in face of all these facts, we come forward now with a half-price sale!

It is hard to imagine a woman who will not be interested, who will not want to share the opportunities---and what a fine time this month's brides will have!

The sale begins with the opening of the store, and although the half price extends to every crepe de chine garment in this big, well-selected stock, excepting a few white petticoats and several sets, we do not believe quantities will last long as soon as women come to see just what this opportunity is.

The price range---

$5.00 Garments are	$2.50	$10.00 Garments are	$5.00
$6.00 Garments are	$3.00	$12.00 Garments are	$6.00
$7.50 Garments are	$3.75	$15.00 Garments are	$7.50
$8.00 Garments are	$4.00	$18.00 Garments are	$9.00
$8.50 Garments are	$4.25	A $36.00 Set is	$18.00
$9.00 Garments are	$4.50	A $40.00 Set is	$20.00

Drawers, including knickerbockers, gowns, petticoats, combinations, princess slips and a few negligees. Choose from pink, light blue, yellow and white—except the petticoats—no white petticoats.

The crepe de chine is always pure silk, heavy quality. As the prices mount the trimmings become more elaborate and beautiful—dainty rosettes and bows, sheer shadow laces, rich cream cluny laces, Irish crochet laces and round thread Valenciennes. A woman would search long and far for more exquisite garments—remember they are our own fine stock!

7 PLAYGROUNDS NOW OPEN TO CHILDREN

Great Crowds Flock to Places of Recreation—Piedmont Bathing Hours Changed.

Seven of the best equipped playgrounds Atlanta has ever had were opened Monday morning for the season of 1913. This is a fewer number than heretofore, but Dan Carey, General Manager of Parks, and Joe Bean, director of playgrounds, announce that they are better equipped than playgrounds of former years.

The opening Monday was auspicious. Crowds of children gathered at the fivt white playgrounds, Grant Park, Mims Park, Joyner Park, English Avenue and Pine Hill playgrounds. Two negro playgrounds are maintained, one at Stoor's School yard and another at Gray's School yard.

The playgrounds will be open every day in the week from 8:30 to 11:30 o'clock in the morning and from 3:30 to 6:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

In connection with the playground work Mr. Carey announced that the bathing hours at Piedmont Park lake had been changed. Hereafter no one will be admitted into the lake from 11 o'clock in the morning until 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

Mr. Carey said that between these hours it was too hot to go into the lake.

Wife Asks Alimony of Count deGratresse

NEW YORK, June 16.—Countess Marie DeGratresse, wife of Count Joseph Gratresse, a civil engineer, has applied to Supreme Court Justice Giegerich to reopen her divorce case and grant her alimony.

The attorney for the Countess informed Justice Giegerich that the litigants may have been in collusion in agreeing upon $15 a week payments to the Countess. The Count's lawyer denied any collusion.

The Count has an alienation suit against Leon J. Garcey, 261 Fifth Avenue, whom he charges with supplying money for the Countess' divorce proceedings. Garcey denies.

Rothschilds Push Oil War on Standard

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—Another battle was on between the Rothschilds of England and the Standard Oil Company to-day in California, following the arrival of the Dutch tank steamer Kessler from Sumatra, carrying 3,000,000 gallons of gasoline. The Rothschilds sent to the United States the best grade of gasoline obtainable in the Orient.

This shipment, it was announced, is the first of many to be used in breaking the hold of the Standard Oil Company on the Pacific Coast.

"Petticoat Cops" Will Watch Newport Swim

NEWPORT, R. I., June 16.—Two policewomen have been placed on duty at the beach here by the Civic League. Their uniform consists of a blue blouse with brass buttons, a blue skirt and a sailor straw hat.

They will patrol the beach all summer and give especial attention to women in need of aid.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS OUT FOR RECORD

Twenty Working to Make Next Sunday's Attendance Biggest. Picnics This Week.

Twenty Sunday schools began Monday a campaign to smash all attendance records next Sunday and make the average increase for the year more than 100 members for each school.

The total attendance Sunday in the schools in the exchange agreement was 6,690, or an average of 334 for each school. The figure for the same schools last year was 5,057, an average of 252.

Two large picnics are planned for this week, the joint outing of the Second Baptist and First Christian Sunday schools, Tuesday afternoon and evening at Grant Park.

Following are the attendance figures Sunday:

PIANO RECITAL IS HELD.

A piano recital by the pupils of Miss Mabel D. McIver was given at the residence, 405 South Pryor Street. Violin selections were rendered by Miss McIver, Marie Carlton and C. P. Agricola. Gold medals were presented to the six pupils showing the most improvement during the past term.

Turks Fear Plot to Replace Abdul Hamid

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 16.—Commanders of the international fleet of warships in the Golden Horn have given notice to the Government they will protect the city if there is an uprising. Many more arrests were made to-day in connection with the assassination of Grand Vizier Mahmud Shevket Pasha.

Young Turk advisers profess to scent a plot on the part of the reactionaries to put Abdul Hamid back on the throne. A guard is maintained over the son of Kaimil Pasha, former Grand Vizier, who was arrested Sunday.

Tight Money Hits Egg And Butter Traders

NEW YORK, June 16.—Money stringency is having its effect upon the stores of butter and eggs. Holdings of eggs in New York City now are short 350,000 cases, of 30 dozen to the case, of what they were a year ago. Last year the limit advanced on eggs was $5.50 per case, and this year it is $4.50. Receivers have trouble in getting this.

The scarcity of money is being felt more in butter than in egg channels. Last year $15 was advanced per tub, while this year the banks are trying to hold down to $12.

Mrs. Hearst Gives Idols to Museum

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—An excellent collection of Hopi Indian idols was presented to the University of California anthropological museum at the Affiliated Colleges by Mrs. Phoebe A. Hearst.

Assistant Curator Gifford delivered a lecture on the Indian tepee, illuminating his topic by lantern slides, before a large audience.

DAY AT UNIVERSITY FOR 'UNDERGRADS'

Branch Colleges Represented at Athens on Monday—Alumni Reunions on Tuesday.

ATHENS, GA., June 16.—Following the largely attended baccalaureate exercises yesterday, when the commencement sermon was delivered by Dr. W. N. Ainsworth, of Macon, the undergraduate exercises of the University of Georgia were held in the chapel this morning. Speakers from the university departments in Athens, Atlanta, Augusta, Dahlonega and Milledgeville participated.

The trustees to-day advanced Instructor R. C. Wilson to assistant professor of pharmacy. Professors W. O. Payne and S. M. Sallyer were each granted a year's leave of absence. A petition from students to permit a dance in the alumni hall was not granted. The branch colleges were requested to mail copies of all publications as soon as published to the general board of trustees. The Law School was given additional space, taking the rooms formerly occupied by Professor John E. Morris, who will use the class rooms vacated by Professor T. J. Woofter, removed to the new Peabody Hall. Professor Woofter was granted a leave of absence in 1914-15. A recommendation that the sophomore declamation be discontinued was disapproved.

This afternoon the military department's prize drill takes place on Sanford Field and the appointment of cadet officers for next year. Two new flags will be presented to the university and received by Misses Helen Baxter, of Omaha, and Florence Hooper, of Athens, who will be attended by Misses Mary Arthur and Laura Cobb Hutchens.

To-night the annual champion debate between Demosthenian and Phi Kappa societies will take place, when four forensic juniors will argue whether or not the Philippines should be given their independence.

British Polo Players To Challenge Again

NEW YORK, June 16.—It was expected the Duke of Westminster, foremost exponent of polo in England, soon will send a challenge to the victorious Americans for another international polo match, to be played either next year or in 1915. The vanquished British console themselves because of the close score. Last Tuesday it was 5 1-2 goals to 3 and Saturday, 4 1-2 to 4 1-4.

A farewell dinner will be given to the Englishmen to-night. They expect to sail for England this week.

English Denounce Umpire.

LONDON, June 16.—English sportsmen are denouncing the umpire who decided a foul against the British polo players in their game Saturday against the American team. They claim the action of the referee was "unjustifiable" and "a miserable misfortune" and that the umpire had no right to halt the game.

Queen of Belgians Is in Sanitarium

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MONTRAUX, SWITZERLAND, June 16.—The Queen of the Belgians has been severely ill at Dr. Widmer's Sanitarium here two weeks. It is expected to be some time before she will be able to leave and she has canceled her engagements for the fetes at Ghent and other places which begin June 22.

American Colony in Palestine Prospers

BOSTON, June 16.—Jesse A. Yantis, representative of the American colony in Palestine, is here studying several classes of machinery which he hopes to introduce in Jerusalem.

This colony of Americans removed to Jerusalem in order that they might live as they believe the Saviour would if He were on earth to-day.

Woman Made Forest Rider in California

SACRAMENTO, CAL., June 16.—Miss Hallie Daggett, appointed forest guard in the Siskiyou reserve, is probably the first woman to hold that position in this country.

She was assigned to the Lookout post at Eddy's Gulch to watch for forest fires

Pastor Lauds Movies As Agent for Good

CHICAGO, June 16.—One of the greatest influences for good is the moving pictures, according to Rev. Johnston Meyers, pastor of Immanuel Baptist Church.

Dr. Meyers said in a sermon that he was a regular patron of the movies.

"Blue Tag" Furniture Sale

True to the Best Traditions of Any That Have Gone Before

A Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. "Blue Tag" Furniture Sale!

To Atlantans who recall the fine economies of "The Blue Tag" sales the mere announcement that here now is another would doubtless be sufficient to hurry them to the store-filled with the confidence that this is their opportunity to buy furniture to greatest advantage.

But this "Blue Tag" sale is planned to outdo all others!

Yes, to outdo ALL others. It has not been an easy task to prepare such a sale; the records and traditions of the others mark them as trade triumphs---as classics in the furniture business; but the guiding spirit of progress whispers that this one shall begin where the others left off and become a monumental merchandise movement only after it eclipses its predecessors.

And so have the preparations gone forward!

Judge for yourself the possibilities it offers you.

Here is the South's greatest furniture stock.

Every piece of it was chosen after careful, very careful examination, as the best of its kind for regular selling.

It is worthy furniture, right furniture, built to last year on year.

And Right Now

Every piece of furniture, excepting summer furniture, and several makes the prices of which we have contracted to maintain, in this, the South's greatest stock, is offered at a substantial reduction from its regular price; in fact, substantial reduction hardly expresses the vigorous price reductions you will find here.

And this in face of the fact that right now furniture prices are climbing to higher levels.

So whether it be---

Bedroom==Including Brass Beds==Dining Room or Living Room Furniture

Or all of these that you need---and in this month of brides and of new home-making there are many who will want furnishings for entire homes---now is the big opportunity. The tremendous varieties here mean that you may select to a nicety just the furniture you would have in your home. The tremendous reductions mean that you may save as you had never expected.

So come to-morrow. You will find the Blue Tags on everything; they tell their own story and it is an interesting story of fine savings.

Period Furniture

It is worthy of particular note in this noteworthy event that, although every little separate chair, rocker, desk, table, chiffonier, and the like in stock (with those exceptions already noted) is included, some of the healthiest reductions have been made on the rich and true sets of Period Furniture and reproductions of antique pieces---Sheraton, Jacobean, William and Mary, Chippendale and others. Sets for bedroom, dining room and living room.

STATE POLITICAL POT BOILS AT KIMBALL

Candidates for House Speaker and Senate President Open Headquarters.

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

The Kimball House lobby, where for years and years Georgia politicians most have congregated, and which still seems to be the undisputed Mecca of Cracker statesmen, real and near, already has assumed that busy and more or less agitated appearance so unmistakably prophetic of the annual getting together of the Legislature.

Headquarters have been opened for two speakership candidates, two presidency of the Senate candidates and at least one new county, Candler.

Within the next day or so other headquarters will be opened, and other fights inaugurated. The clans unmistakably are gathering for the fray, and the forthcoming session bids fair to be one of great interest and far-reaching consequence.

The first new county proposition to get busy on the job is, as aforesaid, Candler. The boosters of this proposition say they have their contest well in hand, and they unquestionably expect to win.

This new county is to be made up of slices of Bulloch, Tattnall and Emanuel, all three large counties, and there is little, if any, opposition in the territory affected.

Metter, a hustling town of around 4,000, is to be the county seat of Candler. It is located in the western part of Bulloch, but is so near the line of the other counties that it is practically situated at the "corners" of the three, as is Winder, in the proposed new county of Barrow.

Every newspaper but one in the section concerned in the new county of Candler is favorable to the proposition, and the boomers of the game claim that they already have pledged more than sufficient votes to put their proposition over.

Outside the contests for the speakership and the presidency of the Senate, one hears more of these two new county proposals than anything else nowadays, and both of them—Barrow and Candler—look good to go through.

The contests between Senators John T. Allen, of the Twentieth, and Randolph Anderson, of the First, as to which shall be chosen President of the Senate, unquestionably is very much "up in the air."

Both men express themselves as being entirely confident, and both show figures to prove their respective claims. Moreover, both seem to be in dead earnest in stating their positions.

The average member of the new Legislature, however, seems to be very much "from Missouri" with respect to that race. The impression is that it yet is any man's race. Both Allen and Anderson are working hard and leaving no stone unturned to win out.

The Allen men are saying that Anderson will retire before the "showdown," but as the Anderson men are saying the same thing concerning Allen, how can one tell?

It looks as if a "showdown" of strength on the floor of the Senate, after Secretary Northen calls it to order, will be the only thing that will tell the tale accurately and to stay put.

One hears much in the hotel lobbies nowadays of tax reform.

There seems little doubt that it will be the paramount consideration of the new General Assembly.

It generally is agreed that the State can not travel much farther without more revenue, and to raise the tax rate is out of the question. Politically, the Legislature feels that it would be committing suicide to attempt to get the tax rate up, after any sort of fashion.

The only way to get additional revenue, therefore, is to raise the assessments and returns in such wise that the total amount against which the tax rate operates may be as nearly as possible 50 per cent higher than now.

This is a large problem, and will require the very best and most statesmanlike minds of the Legislature to work out. Whatever bill is framed along this line will arise in the House, of course, and it will be carefully designed to work as equitably as it may to all parties concerned.

The problem of taxation is one of the most delicate, as well as important, that the Legislature has to handle, and it is more acute this year than it has been in a quarter of a century.

Parties interested in heron production in Glynn County, particularly growers of the egret variety, are greatly interested in the news from Washington to the effect that the Department of Agriculture will undertake to develop a rooster of plumage suitable for substitution for that of the egret, now used so extensively in the aigrette millinery trade.

The largest colony of egrets in the world is located in Glynn County, and a great many people are extensively interested in the trade.

For many years, the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and the Audubon Society have protested against the taking of the nuptial plumage from the egrets for millinery purposes. The taking of the plumage almost invariably means the death of the mother bird, and the consequent starvation of her young in the nest. The aigrette plumage is to be had of the egret herons only while the mother's brood is very young.

"This proposition looks more or less like a suffragette movement," said a well-known legislator, discussing the matter of the rooster's plumage to-day, "but it looks fair and square, nevertheless. That's the reason I am for it. We should protect the egrets, or pretty soon there will be none left in Georgia.

"Let the national department proceed. I would not object to egrets fashioned from roosters' tails—if the women folks like them as well, far be it from me to put in a word for the roosters."

The World of Society

Pupils' Recital.

The pupils of Mrs. Josephine Shideler gave a recital at Cleveland-Manning Concert Hall.

Piano pupils taking part in the program were Miss Priscilla Roberts, Miss Beatrice Turner, Miss Louise Bradley, Miss Bertha Clark, Miss Sarah Guthrie, Miss Addie Jones, Mr. Roy O'Quinn, Miss Willie May Coleman, Miss Lester Camp, Miss Fay Arnold, Miss Mamie Norton, Miss Marguerite Counts, Miss Ethel Hale, Miss Thelma Callaway, Miss Estelle Bradley and Miss Letitia Grant.

Miss Nina Mitchell, accompanied by Miss Adams, piano, and Mr. Terrell, violin, gave two vocal numbers.

In addition to the pupils, Miss Nellie Landrum gave two vocal numbers. She was accompanied by Miss Miriam Landrum, piano, and Mr. Ralph Landrum, violin. Mr. William Terrell gave two selection on violin, accompanied on piano by Miss Victoria Ray.

Galloway-Brown.

Mrs. Walter G. Brown announces the marriage of her daughter, Mabel Claire, to Mr. Charles Galloway Thursday, June 19.

The marriage will be quietly observed at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. R. O. Walker, 717 Edgewood Avenue, Inman Park.

For Miss Abernathy.

Miss Grace Abernathy, a bride-elect, was honor guest at a domino luncheon Friday morning at Mrs. Charles A. Forrest's home in Gordon Street. The reception rooms were decorated with daisies and gladiolli.

At the luncheon which followed the game a color scheme of yellow and white was carried out in detail. The guest of honor was given a silver-mounted hat brush. The guests were: Misses Maude Daniels, Julia Purser, Allie Purser, Lucile Quinn, Mrs. N. T. Pool, Mrs. R. H. Dobbs, Mrs. Rush Irwin, Miss Lucile Daniels, Mrs. Marion Hardwick, Mrs. James Markley and her guest, Miss Greer; Mrs. R. M. Hopkins, Miss Mildred Hardy, Miss Nora Goodman, Miss Daisy Smith, Mrs. W. A. Hartman, Mrs. R. H. Caldwell, Mrs. Benjamin J. Burton, of Lavonia, Ga., and Mrs. L. A. Tiller.

For Miss Baker.

Miss Laurian Johnson will entertain 25 young girls at tea Tuesday afternoon in honor of her guest, Miss Elizabeth Baker, of Macon.

Atlanta Girls in Athens.

A large number of Atlanta's younger set is in attendance on the University commencement in Athens this week. Misses Jane and Kate Cooper are guests of Miss Eugenia Ivey. Misses Virginia Lipscomb and Bertha Moore, accompanied by Mrs. Rutherford Lipscomb, motored to Athens Sunday. Miss Lipscomb will be with Mrs. M. A. Lipscomb, and Miss Moore with Mrs. W. D. Hooper.

Miss Mary Rice is the guest of Mrs. John W. Morton. Miss Helen McCarty is with Miss Florence Hooper. Miss Wyckliffe Wurm is at the Georgian. Miss Van McKinnon is at the Georgian, chaperoned by Mrs. William McCarty. Miss Josephine Mobley, chaperoned by her mother, Mrs. J. R. Mobley, is at the Georgian.

Misses Adgate Ellis, Cora McCord Brown, Ruth Reid and Mary Murphy are other Atlanta girls who are to be guests at the many commencement festivities in Athens this week.

Misses Elizabeth Dunson and Eloise Gay are also there. Mrs. Edwin P. Ansley is chaperoning Miss Mamie Ansley at the Georgian, and Mrs. Arnold Broyles accompanied her daughter, Miss Louise Broyles, to attend the commencement gayeties and to witness the graduation of Mr. Edwin Broyles.

NEW PRIZES WIN FAVOR IN CONTEST

Georgian Gives Tips to Hustlers in Race for Extra Ponies and Watches.

TIPS TO CONTESTANTS.

The hustler always finds favor with his friends.

Someone will tell you that you can't win. Get the laugh on him.

Wanting to win and hustling to win are two different things.

Rumors about what others are doing will not get you votes.

Lack of hustle is "the pace that kills."

Two ponies for every district and two watches for every race—these are the prizes now in The Georgian and American contest.

The first prizes remain the same—pony outfits, "ready to drive away." Second prizes are ponies with saddles. Third and fourth prizes are the watches.

From now on there is no excuse for dallying.

If you can not win a first prize, there is a second prize almost as valuable, and if you fail for a pony, try for a watch as consolation.

No offer like this ever has been made before by an Atlanta paper. The rewards are enough to stimulate the enthusiasm of the most lethargic boy or girl.

There should be an immediate speeding up, particularly as there is a special offer which may expire any day—50,000 extra votes for the first $36 turned in for subscriptions. Another special offer of extra votes in telling quantities for every club of five expires July 5.

It is time to "get busy." Let your competitors see every Wednesday and Sunday that you are in the race in earnest.

Astor Buys London Paper For $1,250,000

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 16.—William Waldorf Astor, expatriated American, has purchased The Morning Post, long regarded as the society organ and sought after by several prominent newspaper publishers. The price paid is said to have been $1,250,000.

Mr. Astor is already the owner of The Pall Mall Gazette, an afternoon paper, and The Observer, a Sunday publication.

Mr. Astor has been trying for a considerable time to secure a morning newspaper to aid him in reaching the peerage.

Newspaper men here say Astor now controls the three most influential political journals in the United Kingdom.

"September Morn" Bathing Suits Are Barred in Denver

DENVER, COL., June 16.—A skirt, bloomers and a waist that comes close to the neck is the official bathing suit of Denver, under the commission form of government, as tentatively designed by Otto F. Thum, commissioner of property and therefore in charge of the park department, incidentally all the city beaches.

"I certainly believe it is not right for a woman to appear at a public bathing place clad only in tights," he said. "She hasn't on sufficient clothing then to be decent in her own bed room."

Men, Hatless, to Bear Parasols in Berlin

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 16.—Dress reform leagues in Berlin, Dresden, Bonn and other German towns have decreed that for the summer men shall go hatless and protect their heads with parasols. They have also decided men must not wear coats, substituting blouses cut after the fashion of a schoolboy's garment.

World Move to Stop Frauds in Medicine

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., June 16.—That the "patent medicine" business and quackery has become so serious and widespread that a world-wide effort is being made to curtail it was the report of a committee at the sixty-fourth annual session of the American Medical Association, which opened to-day.

The membership of the association last year increased from 34,283 to 37,913, while the membership of the fifty-two constituent State associations during the year grew from 70,021 to 70,538.

COLLEGE MEN WASH DISHES.

The Joy of Coming Motherhood

A Wonderful Remedy That is a Natural Aid and Relieves the Tension.

Mother's Friend, a famous external remedy, is the only one known that is able to reach all the different parts involved. It is a penetrating application after the formula of a noted family doctor, and lubricates every muscle, nerve, tissue or tendon affected. It goes directly to the strained portions and gently but surely relieves all tendency to soreness or strain.

By its daily use there will be no pain, no distress, no nausea, no danger of laceration or other accident, and the period will be one of supreme comfort and joyful anticipation.

To all young women Mother's Friend is one of the greatest of all helpful influences, for it robs childbirth of all its agonies and dangers, dispels all the doubt and dread, all sense of fear, and thus enables the mind and body to await the greatest event in a woman's life with untrammeled gladness.

Mother's Friend is a most cherished remedy in thousands of homes, and is of such peculiar merit and value as to make it essentially one to be recommended by all women.

You will find it on sale at all drug stores at $1 a bottle, or the druggist will gladly get it for you if you insist upon it. Mother's Friend is prepared only by the Bradfield Regulator Company, 127 Lamar Building, Atlanta, Ga., who will send you by mail, sealed, a very instructive book to expectant mothers. Write for it to-day.

LABOR PARADE TO ECLIPSE ALL PAST

The Atlanta Federation of Labor is planning the greatest Labor Day parade Atlanta has ever known. At a meeting Sunday afternoon, attended by representatives from every union in the city, it was decided to make this year's showing the greatest ever.

Ex-presidents and ex-delegates to the American Federation of Labor, executive officers of the Atlanta Federation and State Federation and Rev. Schaeffer, of the Evangelical Association, were added to the committee.

G. A. R. Is Ordered To Chattanooga

BRIDGEPORT, CONN., June 16.—General orders for the forty-seventh national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic at Chattanooga, Tenn., September 15 to 20, were issued by Commander-in-Chief Alfred B. Beers.

The fact is emphasized that a national encampment has never before been held so far south, and all veterans are urged to take this opportunity to visit the historic battlefields of Missionary Ridge, Lookout Mountain, Chickamauga and from Chattanooga to Atlanta.

Attention is directed to the Gettysburg reunion, the first day of which, July 1, will be veterans' day, under the direction of the commander-in-chief of the G. A. R.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS., June 16. David A. Snell, millionaire cracker manufacturer, who is 86 years old, has just been married for the fourth time.

The present Mrs. Snell was Mrs. Janet Hamilton, of Boston, who for some time has acted as Mr. Snell's housekeeper. She is 33 years his junior.

ATLANTA BEATS EAST FOR TRADE

"Atlanta is the most cheerful spot on the map," says W. S. Lounsbury, vice president of the Travelers' Bank and Trust Company, just returned from a trip which included visits to Baltimore, Washington, Philadelphia, New York, Boston, New Haven and small towns in the States of New York and New Jersey.

"I made it my business to call on the bankers in all the Eastern cities. It is a relief to get out of the atmosphere of the North and East back into the realm of confidence," he says.

"Atlanta is to be congratulated on being in the best shape of any city east of Chicago. Business is splendid here, compared to the East. Part of it, indeed, is at the expense of the East.

"One of the loudest wails I heard was from Baltimore. Atlanta jobbers are cutting deeply into Baltimore's trade, particularly in the Carolinas, and, to make it a little more painful to the Maryland dealers, the trade which is coming to Atlanta is the 'cream.'

"The trouble in the North is that the loans are based largely on Wall Street securities, instead of on the crops, as here. Consequently, Atlanta, looking to the fields for news, gets cheerful tidings, while the East, looking at Wall Street, is depressed."

Recovered From Severe Lung Trouble

Plenty of fresh air and good food are necessary to persons suffering from lung trouble, but something more is needed to bring about full health. Eckman's Alterative is a medicine for throat and lung troubles, and so many reports have been received showing that it brought about good results in a number of cases which were declared hopeless, that all sufferers who are not benefiting otherwise should at least investigate what it has done for others. Investigate this case:

Madison Lake, Minn.

"Gentlemen: In December, 1908, March, 1909, and September, 1909, I was taken with hemorrhages of the lungs which confined me several weeks, each time to my bed. My doctor advised me to go West.

"In November I started for Denver, Colo. After my arrival I met Michael Brody, who upon learning of my condition, urged me to take Eckman's Alterative. In about two months I began to feel better. I kept on taking the medicine and improved fast. In March, 1910, I returned home. I think I am entirely well, have a good appetite and sleep well. When I left Denver my weight was 130 pounds. I now weight 165, my normal weight. I thank God and your Alterative for my health."

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Jacobs' drug stores and other leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

Nearly everybody in Atlanta reads The Sunday American. YOUR advertisement in the next issue will sell goods. Try it!

The Social World

The tennis tourney for the State championship, which is on at the Driving Club this week, will attract large crowds to witness the games, and, of course, the inevitable dancing will follow. The popular club will be the scene of much informal entertaining during the week.

Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, has won the championship twice, and defends it in the present tournament. E. V. Carter, Jr., and E. S. Mansfield hold the championship in doubles. A number of expert women players are to take part in the mixed doubles.

The Sunday assemblage at the Capital City Country Club was a large and representative one. Swimming was a favorite mode of recreation for the men, although only a few women braved the waters, for some reason or other. An informal air hovers over the charming Country Club, which will be fostered.

The large attendance at the week-end dinner dance of the Driving Club and the informal dance at East Lake shows that the summer exodus for Atlanta society has hardly begun.

For Mrs. Ingersoll.

Mrs. Mell Wilkinson entertained informally at luncheon at the Piedmont Driving Club Monday, in honor of Mrs. Royal Ingersoll, other guests including Mrs. J. M. VanHarlingen, Mrs. W. D. Smith, Mrs. VanWinkle Wilkerson and Mrs. Edward VanEinkle.

For Miss Francis.

Mrs. Bertram Norris entertained at a box party at the Forsyth Monday afternoon for Miss Martha Francis, a bride-elect.

Copeland-Miller.

A wedding of interest throughout Georgia and Alabama was that on June 11 of Miss Mamie Miller, of Fort Valley, Ga., to Dr. Henry Moss Copeland, of Atlanta, at the Methodist Episcopal Church of Fort Valley.

Bridesmaids were Misses Bessie Smith, Atlanta; Carol Dean, Gainesville; Telete Scott, Canton; Janie Culpepper, Fort Valley. They were gowned in white meteor crepe with pointed trains and carried white sweetpeas. Groomsmen were Dr. Richard R. Daly and Mr. F. L. Wilson, of Atlanta, and Mr. William Wright, of Fort Valley.

Mesdames W. F. Miller and H. C. Neil were matrons of honor, the first in white crepe de chine and duchess lace. Mrs. Neil wore her wedding gown of charmeuse satin and duchess lace. Both carried white sweetpeas. Flower girls were Marjorie Brown and Margaret McMillan. Mr. Seth Copeland was best man.

The bride wore a gown of crepe sylvia, draped with princess and rose point lace, made with a court train. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and valley lilies. Her veil was of lace, arranged from a Dutch cap and caught with orange blossoms.

A reception was given at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Osborne Miller.

Dr. and Mrs. Copeland will spend their honeymoon in the mountains of North Carolina.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Greenfield, Mrs. M. C. Hardin, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Lanier, Judge and Mrs. John R. Wilkinson, of Atlanta.

Morris-Huie.

Mrs. Robert S. Huie announces the engagement of her daughter, Alice Mae, to Mr. Robert Ernest Morris, of Atlanta. The wedding will take place at the home of the bride, near Philadelphia Church, Clayton County, Thursday evening, June 19, at 8:30 o'clock.

For Miss Graves.

Mrs. Rix Stafford will entertain a few members of the schoolgirl set informally at bridge Thursday in honor of Miss LaGrange Katherine Graves, of Rome, a guest of Miss Louise Couper.

Memorial Asosciation to Meet.

The Uncle Remus Memorial Association will hold a meeting Tuesday at 10:30 o'clock in the assembly room of Carnegie Library.

For Miss Hughes.

In honor of Miss Mary Hughes, whose wedding to Mr. Ernest Osborne will take place Wednesday evening, there has been a series of parties.

Tuesday afternoon Miss Ollie May Osborne gave a reception. Thursday Miss Mae Richardson was hostess at luncheon and the same afternoon Miss Florence Dugger entertained the wedding party at the matinee. Mrs. Joseph Paulson invited twelve girls to meet Miss Hughes at bridge Friday afternoon and Saturday afternoon Misses Wilt entertained at tea for her.

The Wilt home was decorated with pink sweetpeas, a mound of these flowers adorning the tea table.

Assisting in entertaining were Misses Ollie May Osborne, Lucy Windsor, Sarah Randall, Alma Downing, Kathleen Simpson, Jan Robinson, Emma and Rusha Wesley and Mrs. R. W. Wilt.

Miss Mamie Wilt wore pink chiffon with wreaths of pink rosebuds. Miss Etter Wilt was in white silk marquisette. Miss Hughes wore pink crepe embroidered in pink. Mrs. Wilt wore black lace with a corsage of sweetpeas and lilies of the valley.

About 150 guests were present.

For Miss Arnold.

A heart dice party, at which Mrs. Charles A. Forrest entertained Friday afternoon at her home on Gordon Street, was for her young niece, Mary Ella Arnold. A profusion of daisies and gladioli formed the decoration of the attractive reception rooms, where the six tables were placed.

Trophies for top score and consolation were a dainty white fan, won by Virginia Collier, and a silver vanity box, cut by Elizabeth Wheeler. Guest of honor was presented with silk stockings. Punch was served by Martha Irwin and Elizabeth Merrideth. Guests were: Fay Spink, Marjorie Kurfees, Eva Stewart, Mary Nichols, Marie Colcord, Sara Colcord, Frances Stokes, Mary Brittain, Maude Foster, Lucile Price, Caroline Vickers, Kathryn Vickers, Catherine Hackett, Lois Verner, Annabeth Smith, Margaret White, Grace Cook, Marie Lester, Elizabeth Wheeler, Lucile Trimble, Cecil Trimble, Mary Tiller, Elizabeth Cofield, Helene Stewart and Virginia Collier.

For Miss Pearl Mobley.

Mrs. Edward L. Humphreys was hostess at a linen shower Thursday afternoon for Miss Pearl Mobley, a bride-elect.

In a game of heart-dice Miss Bernice Scott won a fan for top score, Miss Lillian Brooks received a picture as consolation, and Miss Mobley was presented with a hand-embroidered collar.

The apartment was decorated with daisies and ferns.

Those invited to meet Miss Mobley were Misses Lillian Brooks, Bernice Scott, Bernice Denton, Frances Lazear, Celia Hiers, Curd, Dora Hiers, Mrs. E. M. Redwine, Mrs. Max Epstein, Mrs. M. H. Chandler, Mrs. A. T. Vandiver and Mrs. William L. Scott.

Mrs. Max Epstein gave a box party at the Forsyth Saturday afternoon for Miss Mobley. Guests were Misses Lillian Brooks, Dora Hiers, Frances Lazear, Mrs. Edward L. Humphreys, Mrs. E. M. Redwine, Mrs. Joseph Lazear and Mrs. Sara Lazear.

Child's Birthday Party.

A birthday party was given for Frederick Lindley Beers, Jr. Pink sweetpeas were used as decorations. The pink birthday cake with its one candle, surrounded by pink sweetpeas, formed the centerpiece of the table. Pink ices and cakes were served, and at each place a tiny baby basket of pink mints decorated with sweetpeas was given as a favor.

Those invited were Misses Margaret Hood Bobbin Dennis, Elizabeth Carlton, Mary Ruth Wight, Mary Stillman, Sarah Stillman, Georgia Drysdale, Linda Cox, Masters Robert Carlton, Allison Adams, William Palmour, Colquitt Carter, Jr.

Piano Recital.

Pupils of Mrs. Lillian Woodberry Johnson gave a piano recital at the music studio. Program numbers showed a wide range of style and selection. Mrs. Johnson received hearty congratulations.

Those taking part in the recital were Misses Margaret Snow, Sarah Snow, Leone Spinks, Louise Granade, Sarah Smith, Lillian Connor, Cecil Garrett, Jessie Lea Davenport, Josephine Smith, Maud Goodwin, Edith London, Annie Rose Kenimer, Mary Kenimer, Ruth Walker, Montine Jones, Mattie Lou Crenshaw, Florence Green, Lucile Little, Bessie Sorrow, Grace Davis, Lucy Swann, Minnie Pickler, Carrie Lee Featherstone.

Wedding Plans Changed.

Mr. and Mrs. David Patman Daniell announce a change in the plans of the marriage of their daughter, Vera Belle, to Mr. Homer Leon Wilson. The wedding will take place at Collins' Memorial Church, Bolton, Ga., at 6 p. m., June 19. It was previously planned at the home of the bride's parents in Bolton.

For Miss Daniell.

Misses Claudia and Bertha Hudson entertained with a shower for Miss Vera Daniell, a June bride-elect. Sweetpeas decorated the living and reception rooms. The prize was won by Miss Emmee Branham. The bride was presented with silk hose.

Those present were Miss Vera Daniell, Miss Grace Bell, Miss Ruth Gable, Miss Margaret Berge, Miss Montine Byrd, Misses Lucy and Susie Johnson, Misses Mary and Bertha Heins, Miss Ethel Rutherford, Misses Elizabeth and Frances Walker, Mrs. Lamar Ray, Misses Clara and Milly Loughry, Mrs. Gordon Stowers, Miss Nettie Summerlin, Miss Reggie Sue Daniell, Miss Lilly Mae Adams, Misses Cassie and Annie Lou Hunter, Miss Emmee Branham, Miss Fae Bancroft and Miss Pearl Gary.

Miss Richardson's Recital.

A piano recital was given by Miss Kate Richardson Friday evening. Miss Richardson is a graduate of Miss Evelyn Jackson's school of music. She will receive her diploma at the closing recital Tuesday evening. Her program follows:

Sonata in C sharp minor, Beethoven.

(a) Nocturne, Op. 27, No. 2, Chopin; (b) Prelude in D, Chopin; (c) "On the Mountains," Grieg.

Polonaise, Moszkowski.

(a) Gondolerie, Liszt; (b) Nachstucke, Schumann; (c) Silver Spring, Mason.

Rhapsodie, No. 2, Liszt.

Rondo, Chopin.

Owens-Hall.

The initial social event of the week and one in which is centered the interest of a host of friends will be the marriage of Miss Charles Owens and Mr. Edward Buckinham Hall, of Morristown, N. J., Monday evening at 8:30 o'clock.

On account of illness in the bride's family the invitations to the church ceremony have been recalled and the ceremony will take place instead at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Owens, on Eleventh Street, in the presence of relatives and a few close friends.

A number of out-of-town guests will attend the wedding, among them the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Hall, of Morristown, N. J., and New York.

For Miss Buckner.

Miss Helen Jones will give a reception Tuesday afternoon, June 24, for her guest, Miss Margaret Buckner, of Roanoke, Va.

Miss Margaret Northen will entertain several young people at Highland Farm, the country place of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Northen, one afternoon this week for Miss Buckner.

U. S. Officials Inspect Pensacola Navy Yard

PENSACOLA, FLA., June 16.—Admiral John R. Edwards, U. S. N.; Captain George Evans, naval constructor; W. G. DuBose, civil engineer, and A. L. Parsons, of the Survey Board, are here to-day inspecting the Pensacola navy yard.

After inspecting other Southern yards, they will make recommendations to Secretary of the Navy Daniels.

The future of this yard is dependent upon to-day's inspection.

JUAREZ IS REINFORCED.

EL PASO, June 16.—Three hundred men under General Salazar and Colonel Porelli to-day joined the Federal garrison at Juarez. The arrival of the troops to reinforce the Huerta troops quartered there relieved the fear that 1,200 rebels encamped 30 miles from the city would attack it.

A Good Clean Show at the Dutch Mill.

The Dutch Mill is one of the cleanest and best playhouses in Atlanta, with the most beautiful movies, projected on a radium gold screen, producing a soft, pleasing effect that does not injure the eye.

And there is Mae Reilly and the Dutch Mill Stock Company—real beauties, real entertainers and really clean comedy. Enjoy yourself at the Dutch Mill.

Farmer's Wife Ends Life With a Pistol

VALDOSTA, June 16.—Mrs. Sallie Newsome, wife of a farmer living in the southern part of Lowndes County, committed suicide by shooting herself through the head with a pistol. There were no eyewitnesses. Coroner Solomon has gone to the scene to make an investigation.

The woman's husband and young children heard the shot and, rushing into the room, found her lying dead across the bed. It is rumored that Mrs. Newsome's married life was not happy.

Ship Limps on, Side Patched With Canvas

DULUTH, MINN., June 16.—The steamer Jesse Spaulding was afloat to-day and laboring toward Duluth, a section of canvas covering a large hole in her side. The Spaulding collided with the William M. Snyder, Jr., in Lake Superior yesterday, and, after flying distress signals, disappeared in a fog.

It was feared that she had gone down with her crew of sixteen.

"September Morn"

HAND-PAINTED water color photogravures of Paul Chabas' nude painting, "September Morn," fill one window of the Cole Book Company, and instead of harsh criticism excited only pity, which was due to the fact that the manager of the store took occasion to select about the coldest June day in the history of the city's weather for this art exhibition.

The original painting excited no end of comment when brought to this country for exhibition purposes. It was first placed in one of the windows of a Fifth Avenue art gallery, and was promptly spied by one of Anthony Comstock's agents, who demanded that it be taken out or he would go to the courts. Afterward Comstock himself decided the picture was nothing to shock anyone, according to newspaper accounts at the time, and agreed with the manager of the art gallery that it was artistic.

The picture was sent from one large city in the East to the other and caused more comment than any painting in years. It is now in one of the big European art galleries.

The figure is that of a young blonde-haired girl, who is about to take her bath, and is said to be the same model as the figure in "Twilight" by the same artist. "September Morn" was exhibited in the last Paris salon, and received high praise from the artists in the Parisian capital.

The cut represents only the figure, which occupies a small part of the picture. Just bare outlines of mountains are seen in the distance, which rise from the water through a misty haze. The coloring is most delicate. The reproductions in the Whitehall Street store are two different sizes.

Mother and Sons

By Virginia T. Van De Water.

"OH, it is pitiful, pitiful," exclaims Thackeray, "the bootless love of mothers for their children in Vanity Fair!"

The words recurred to my mind as I looked into the tragic eyes of a widow the mother of two sons. Her husband had died when her oldest child was but five years old. She was what has been called "a born mother," with whom maternity was an absorbing passion. She had married at eighteen and was a widow at twenty-six. For years she had worked uncomplainingly to educate her sons.

There had been not only work but the sacrifice of many of the things in which women delight. She had not had time to go into society during working-hours, and in the evening she "did not like to leave the boys." She put them both through college, living close to them, spending her strength and youth in the effort. When one of them finished his university course he went into business on the Pacific slope. Then the mother's face developed lines of anxiety, still she smiled bravely.

"I educated him that he might make the best of his chances," she said firmly, "and it would be selfish for me to mention to him my dread of parting from him. And I have my other boy, you know."

Two years later her second son was graduated and went to South America as a mining engineer. It was soon after this that I called on the lonely mother. She had grown old in a few weeks. She began talking of her boys—calmly at first, then her voice quivered and broke.

Need Her No More.

"What is there for me to do now?" she asked. "I am no good to anybody. I have dropped utterly out of the old set and world to which I once belonged. I am too old to learn new ways. My one aim has been to fit my boys for the battle of life, but I hoped that battle would be fought near me. Now I am left alone. I would be a selfish creature in the eyes of the world if I were to try to keep my sons with me—for they have their own lives to live, and mine is done. They will never be mine again. They will sometimes come to see me, but they will never come as they used to come. They need me no more."

She is not yet fifty and feels that her life is done! She is one of the "Mothers of Men" of whom George Cabot Lodge wrote:

"Weep, mothers of men!
The hands of the world are strong to take
The lives ye bear for the world's sole sake,
To try their souls till they bend or break;
Your children vanish from out your ken—
Weep, mothers of men!"

It is all true, viewed from one standpoint, and yet when women dare make a moan like this the world calls them selfish. If so, then it is too late for the mischief to be repaired.

"The greatest kindness we can do our children is to teach them to be independent of us," remarked one woman sententiously.

The mother to whom she spoke flung her hands out with a gesture that was almost despairing.

"Ah, yes!" she exclaimed bitterly, "but good Lord! who is going to teach US to be independent of THEM!"

There is the cry of the mother. Who, indeed?

Never Lose Daughters.

Mothers of daughters claim that they never lose these, and their contention is true. Even after a girl marries she turns to her mother for advice and counsel, often loving her better than she did before she appreciated what women must suffer for their children.

Yet, for the mother of sons there is always the possibility of which our poet writes. How can she fortify herself against this misery? It can not be prevented—God help her!—but it may be made lighter. For she can be less unreasoningly unselfish.

Does this sound cruel? Such selfishness as I have in mind is kindness to the mother and true kindness to the child. No boy is better for knowing that he fills his mother's entire mental and spiritual horizon, that she counts all sacrifice for him as gain. The time arrives—unless he be unusually noble—when, in spite of himself, the sacrifice is taken for granted by him; he thinks of it as his due and makes a common thing of it.

Would I have a boy sacrifice his future to his mother? No, but I would have him consult her a little in planning that future, and he will not do this if she has not taught him to consider her wishes as well as his own. If two equally good opportunities present themselves, I would have him choose the one which will keep him near his mother rather than that at the other side of the continent—always supposing the one at home means as big a future for him as does the one abroad.

Wider Views of Life.

But we are dealing now with the mother, rather than with the boy. I claim that even when her children are more babies she should force herself to take an interest in things outside of the nursery. She need not neglect her children to do this. Indeed, she will give them better care and bring them up in a finer, broader atmosphere if she has wide views of life and knows what is going on in the world. And, as her children grow to need less of her personal care, she ought to go about and meet people and think of other things as of the needs and wishes of her offspring.

Blessed—thrice blessed—is the mother of men when those men remain near her. If they must leave her she can not escape keen suffering, but if she has filled her "world" very "full of a number of things" she may escape adding to the pain of parting and missing the agony of a desolate, objectless life, an empty heart and idle hands.

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is fishing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER XXIX.

THREE days passed before Gordon Kelly heard directly from Mildred Deery. Her nerves shattered and on the verge of hysteria, she had been taken home by Gordon after the near-tragedy in which Cain was involved. She would not allow Mrs. Shephard to summon either of her parents from Atlanta nor would she permit her to call the nearest doctor. She was her own physician in the days that followed and she began by prescribing complete rest and quietness. That, she told herself, was what the most celebrated physician in the land would have told her.

Gordon talked over the telephone with Elmer twice a day, night and morning, in the intervals before he saw Mildred again. With Steve as the messenger, he sent her all sorts of little delicacies and rare flowers. Where they came from she could not imagine. Certainly he had not had time to order them from Atlanta or Chattanooga, the nearest large cities; in fact, she doubted if they could be procured anywhere in those cities. His thoughtfulness had not a little to do with her convalescence, following the shock of the encounter with Cain.

Mildred Telephones.

On the morning of the third day she awoke calm and even cheerful. At breakfast she remarked to Elmer that she would be ready to resume the lesson in French, whereat the lad exclaimed, "Oh, shucks." Soon after she went to the telephone, rang three times and listened.

"Is Mr. Kelly at home?" she asked, when the ring had been answered. Elmer, who was within earshot, though not eavesdropping, grinned.

"There is no Mr. Kelly here," came the reply.

"Wait just a minute, please," said the voice, interrupting. There was some confusion on the other end of the line and then she heard Gordon Kelly's voice.

"Good morning," he said. "Is this you, Mildred?"

"Yes, Mr. Kelly."

"Mr. Kelly, eh? You call me Mr. Kelly one minute and Gordon the next. However, I won't quarrel with you, because you have been ill. How are you this morning? I have been very anxious about you."

"I am feeling quite myself again and thank you ever so much for all those nice things you sent me and for those lovely flowers. Tell me, where in the world did you get them?"

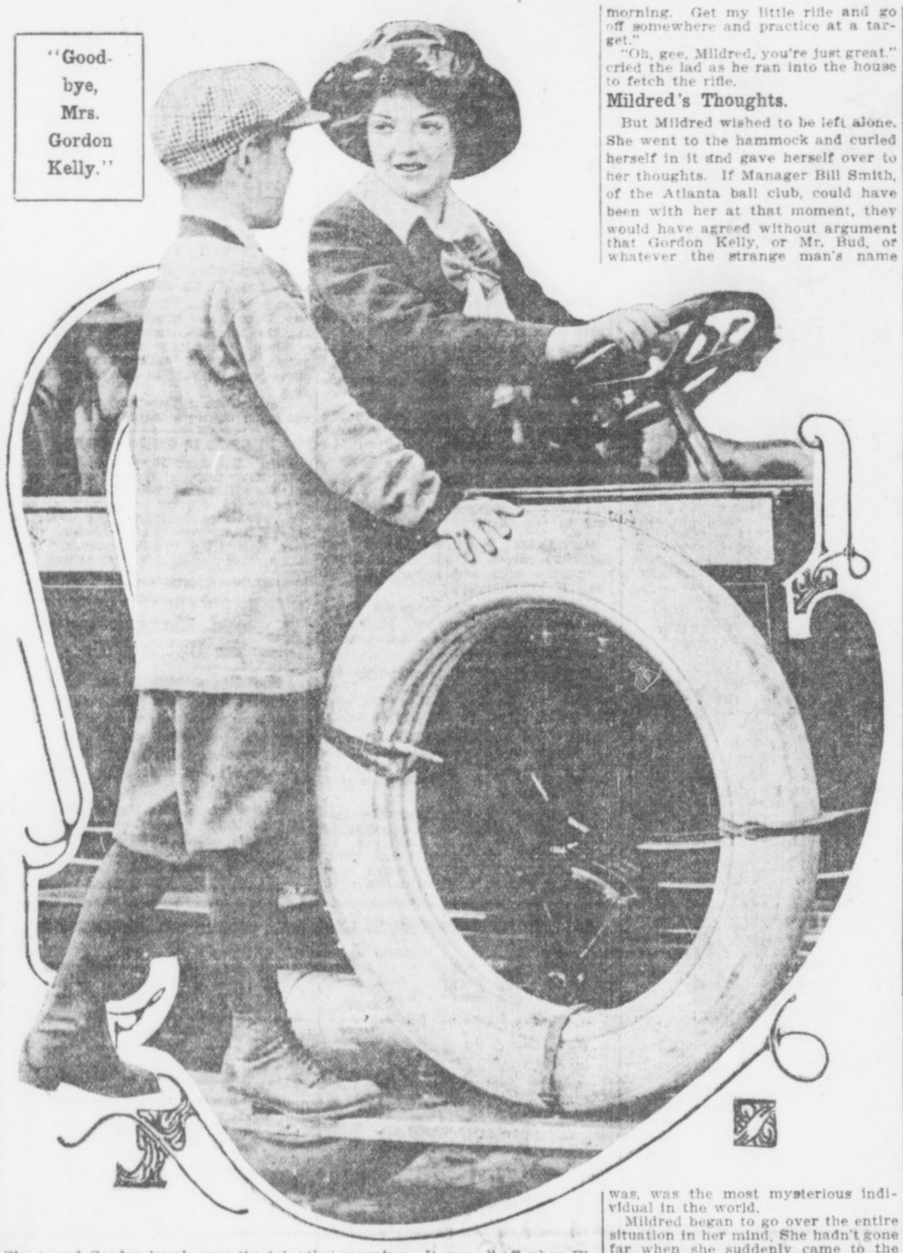
"The flowers? Oh, the gardener produced them when I made a requisition. The housekeeper produced the other things. I'm glad you enjoyed them."

An Engagement.

There was a brief silence, then Gordon said:

"Are you still there?"

"Yes," replied Mildred. "I was just thinking what a strange man you are with your automobiles and your gardeners and your colored genie and your housekeepers and your network of telephones away up here in the mountains, and your ball playing."



"Good-bye, Mrs. Gordon Kelly."

She heard Gordon laugh over the telephone. Then he said:

"Well, you know, the first time I saw you at your house your mother asked me about my life in the mountains; you wouldn't let me tell her and afterward, when I asked you why you did it, you said it was a secret. Do you remember?"

"Yes, I do, and it turns out a good deal more of a mystery than I had bargained for."

When Gordon spoke again his voice was lowered.

"Tell me, please; when will you feel well enough to let me see you?"

Mildred unconsciously lowered her voice, too.

"Why—I feel all right now. I'm not ill any more."

"May I call this afternoon?" he said, eagerly.

"Certainly; delighted to have you. But suppose I meet you?"

"Fine! Great! Where?"

"At—at—say at the bridge at 3. Now, good-bye; I must give Elmer his lesson in French."

If Mildred could have seen through the telephone, she would have seen Gordon slam up the receiver and turn three backward somersaults without stopping.

After all the threats, Elmer didn't take his lesson. It is true the books were produced and Mildred sat down at a table, opposite Elmer on the porch and assumed the dignified air of a schoolmarm, but that was as far as they got with the foreign language that morning. It was all off when Elmer said with a grin:

"They didn't know any Mr. Kelly up there, did they?"

No Gordon Kelly.

"What do you know about it, you little rascal?" demanded Mildred.

"I know all about it. There's no such man as Gordon Kelly."

"What do you mean, child?"

"I mean just what I say. There's no such person as Gordon Kelly."

"That's simply nonsense, Elmer; what in the world ails you to-day?"

"Oh, I got you buffaloed all right, Mildred. Ha, ha!" and he laughed gleefully.

"Elmer, you can be the most tantalizing boy I ever knew when you want to be. Now, look me straight in the eye and tell me what you mean."

"I'm telling you the truth, Mildred," said the lad, seriously. "His name isn't Gordon Kelly at all; it's Mr. Bud."

"Mr. Bud! Elmer, you're simply crazy. I won't listen to you any more. Take your books and go away."

"Now, Mildred, listen. I'm not fooling at all." Thereupon he told her of finding the telephone beside the brook and calling up Gordon Kelly and of his conversation with Steve, the colored boy. When he had finished Mildred tossed her head in the air and said, with decision:

"I'll find out what his name is mighty quick."

"When?"

"This afternoon. Now, I'll excuse you from taking your lesson this morning. Get my little rifle and go off somewhere and practice at a target."

"Oh, gee, Mildred, you're just great," cried the lad as he ran into the house to fetch the rifle.

Mildred's Thoughts.

But Mildred wished to be left alone. She went to the hammock and curled herself in it and gave herself over to her thoughts. If Manager Bill Smith, of the Atlanta ball club, could have been with her at that moment, they would have agreed without argument that Gordon Kelly, or Mr. Bud, or whatever the strange man's name was, was the most mysterious individual in the world.

Mildred began to go over the entire situation in her mind. She hadn't gone far when she suddenly came to the realization that she hardly knew anything at all about Gordon Kelly. She knew nothing about his family, his life nor his habits. He had been introduced into her family as Gordon Kelly, yet here, up in his mountain home, no one knew of a Gordon Kelly. They called him Mr. Bud. Who was Mr. Bud? Her father certainly didn't know him by that name. He had told her that he had met Gordon Kelly through Judge Barbee. Certainly the Judge wouldn't be a party to any deception. Was Gordon Kelly an assumed name? Was it an alias? Her father had told her nothing about Gordon Kelly's family—because he didn't know anything about it himself, probably.

Was his family "respectable?" Did he really own the property, or was he an employee or representative of the people that did own it? He might be a foreman or a superintendent. No harm in that, thought Mildred, but she would like to know about it.

Then she reviewed her brief acquaintance with Gordon Kelly. She recalled the conversations she had had with him in the few times they had met. The talk, she remembered, was mostly about books and music and kindred topics and the small talk that two young people would indulge in. It came back to her that he talked with great intelligence on music and art and literature. Surely he was refined and cultured. His family must be "respectable."

And then Mildred thought of Gordon Kelly the MAN—the tall, fine-featured, broad-shouldered, strong and powerful MAN. And her mind dwelt on his simplicity of manner, his kindness and gentleness and his prowess on the ball field and his bravery so lately displayed. And she was satisfied. She smiled contentedly to herself as she lay curled in the hammock. No, she would not break the engagement she had for 3 o'clock that afternoon, but she would find out all about the Gordon Kelly-Mr. Bud mystery.

"Make me look pretty, Mandy," said Mildred to her maid, who assisted her to dress when the time came. "I'se got a 'portant 'gagement fo' dis' afternoon."

She seldom allowed herself to unbend in dignity to her maid, but to-day she was feeling very cheerful and happy.

"Will you wear your tan dress, Miss Mildred?" asked the maid.

"No, Mandy, I'll wear the light blue; it's more becoming, don't you think so?"

Thus arrayed, she went out on the porch and asked Elmer to bring the runabout around. When it came she stepped in it and took her place behind the wheel.

"Good-bye, Elmer, see you later," she said to the lad.

"Gee, ain't I going, too?" said Elmer in a tone of disappointment.

"Not this time, honey; good-bye."

Before the car was fairly in motion the boy jumped on the side of it and, leaning over, whispered mischievously in Mildred's ear:

"Good-bye, Mrs. Gordon Kelly."

"You little wretch!" exclaimed Mildred, blushing furiously.

But she turned her head a moment later and waved her hand and smiled at him.

CHAPTER XXX.

WHEN Forrest Cain, lying unconscious in the road beside his automobile, regained his senses he saw Gordon Kelly standing over him. His mind was befuddled and he did not recall what had happened to him. Kelly prodded him with the toe of his shoe as though he was a dead snake and said, sharply, "Get up."

Cain rose slowly to his feet. The fight was all out of him.

"Walk around," ordered Kelly. Cain took a few steps. Kelly left him and joined Mildred and Elmer. "He is all right. Get in the car, please, and we will get out of this."

Without even another glance at Cain, the three entered Kelly's automobile and a minute later they were whirling down the road, leaving Cain, with singular indifference, to his own meditations.

Cain was sober by this time—sober, sullen and resentful. His right hand pained him. He looked at the back of it where the stone thrown by Elmer had struck him. It was crushed and bleeding. The fingers hung down as though without life. He felt of the bruise and winced. There was no doubt but that bones were broken. He cranked the motor with his left hand, entered the car and attempted to set the control into low speed, but found he had lost the use of his right hand. Reaching over with his left hand, however, he was able to manipulate the lever and then, easing in the clutch, the car moved slowly ahead. It was necessary to turn around. This was accomplished with infinite labor and finally the car was straightened out for the journey to Cain's shack. This had to be taken at low speed, however, because once the car started ahead he could not change the speed, as he only had the use of his left hand and could not take that from the steering wheel in order to change gears.

In gloomy silence he crawled back the six miles to his mountain habitation. He summoned his man George and commanded him to pack up. His campaign had utterly failed. He would go back to Atlanta to nurse his injury, nurse his lacerated feelings and plan some revenge that would settle scores with Gordon Kelly once and for all. While his man was busy packing he bathed his hand in cold water and, after pouring whisky on the wound as an antiseptic (and pouring a considerable quantity of it down his throat as an antisplenetic) he bandaged the injured member, swore at George on general principles and went outside to smoke and think some more.

In his three personal encounters with Gordon Kelly Cain had been badly worsted, verbally or physically, every time. Yet Gordon Kelly was in no way to blame in any case. He was attending strictly to his own business and had sought no quarrel with the man who declared himself his foe. This phase of the matter never once entered the mind of Cain. He only knew that it was through Gordon Kelly that all his troubles came.

At this point his sullen reveries were interrupted by the appearance of a tall, raw-boned, black-bearded man, dressed in the uncouth habiliments of the backwoods. Without a nod or any salutation, he made known the nature of his business.

"We done run out of matches," he said. "Got any?"

Cain was accustomed to deference from those he considered beneath him.

"What do you want with them?" he asked with a scowl.

"Eat 'em, mebbe; what's that to you?" drawled the stranger.

"Where do you come from?"

"None o' your damned business. Ef yer ain't got no matches, say so."

"You're on my property; you're trespassing," declared Cain.

"What do you all reckon you're goin' to do about?" observed the stranger in the same even tone.

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the twenty-four installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 25th installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

Man Who Loves Like a Pirate

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

C. C. W. writes:

"I am 27 years of age, and am desperately in love with a girl three years my junior. She is beautiful, accomplished and a leader in our social set. Although I have proposed to her three or four times, she still refuses to marry me. I feel certain that there is no other occupying her time, for if I had a rival I would unquestionably put him out of the way.

"How am I to persuade this cold-hearted woman to become my bride?"

Persuade her by storming her father's castle some dark night, and carrying her off strapped behind you on the back of your noble charger. That is the time-honored method of all swashbucklers, and it is the method that would most appeal to one who says if he had a rival he would "unquestionably put him out of the way."

It is not the modern way. It is not the sane way, but you are not modern, and I could almost suggest that one who talks of putting a rival "out of the way" is not sane.

It is a further mark that you are not wise that you call your sweetheart coldhearted. Because a woman will not yield to one lover doesn't prove she has a cold heart. In your case, my dear Sir Reginald, or Sir Launcelot, or whoever was the hero of your latest fiction, the cold heart of your lady love proves a cool head.

She will not marry you though you propose twenty times. There is something to you of which she does not approve. Instead of making over yourself, you keep on proposing, imagining that the opposition to be overcome lies not in your matchless person, but in her cold heart.

A Gory Love.

Yours is a love that reeks of gore and gunpowder. You emit fire from your nostrils when you speak of your passion, and would impress this woman with your daredevil disposition, your dauntless courage, and your untamed strength. I have known men who loved like pirates, just as you love. They became the kind of husbands who were afraid to go to the door when there was a ring late at night, and sent their wives instead.

You talk like a cheap hero in a book. It is the sort of talk that sometimes has telling effect on girls of 16, but, thank Heaven, the lady love of your piratical schemes and bloodthirsty dreams is 24 and has such a clear vision that she sees you as you are.

My dear, bold buccaneer, drop your paper sword, wipe the ink-red stains from your hands, cut off that fierce mustache and become a MAN. If you really love this woman, make of yourself such a worthy man that she will no longer spurn you, but will seek you instead.

Don't get on your knees when you propose, as did the heroes in your favorite fiction. Don't color your conversation with threats to carry her off bodily, slaying all who intervene. Stand on your feet, like a manly man, and tell her you love her in language that befits these most sane and prosaic times.

Your paper sword has failed to win. Try the better way of showing her a good, strong right arm that is ready to serve her through life.

Recognize the existence of a rival and know that he lies in this masquerade you have put on. "Put him out of the way" by all means by conducting yourself in a saner fashion.

Be a man and love as a man of 27 should love, leaving to those ten years your junior dreams and schemes that smell of gunpowder and gore.

By LADY DOROTHY NEVILL.

A GRANDE DAME and leader of the social world during the greater part of the past century, Lady Dorothy Nevill, who died recently, was famous for her charm of manner, incisive wit, and brilliant repartee. She was the confidante of royal personages, statesmen, field marshals and diplomatists. At her receptions one met all the most attractive people of the day. Her intimate friends included such noted men as Beaconsfield, Gladstone, Wilberforce, Cobden, Bright and Matthew Arnold. Her greatest friend, perhaps, was Beaconsfield. He was always "Dear Dizzy" to Lady Dorothy, while he always addressed her as "My Dearest Dorothy," and their correspondence provides many interesting glimpses of this great Tory statesman.

Perhaps one of the best stories which Lady Dorothy has told about Disraeli is that concerning the occasion when a photographer asked him to pose for a photograph leaning on a chair. This at once aroused the indignation of Mrs. Disraeli. "I soon settled that," she said, afterwards, to Lady Dorothy, when relating the incident, "for I said, 'Dizzy has always stood alone, and he shall continue to do so.'"

"The Gorgeous Lily."

On one occasion Lady Dorothy, who was sitting next to Mr. Gladstone, was asked by the latter if she had ever heard Lord Beaconsfield express any particular fondness for the primrose. She admitted he had not, adding, "The gorgeous lily, I think, was more to his taste."

Referring to Gladstone, Lady Dorothy used to tell a story which is illustrative of the "Grand Old Man's" character. He was discoursing to her of the perfect immunity of English public men from all dangers of assault or assassination in his day, and all the time two detectives, dressed as footmen, were in the very room guarding him, while another was upstairs in the drawing-room ready to mingle with the guests.

It was Mr. Joseph Chamberlain who, talking to Lady Dorothy of female suffrage, once said, "Thank goodness, there are no female members. Of the two evils I prefer Parnellites to petticoats."

Lady Dorothy herself was equally severe in regard to suffragettes, for in one of her books she writes: "Heaven did not make women insinuating and persuasive that they might be peevish. It did not make them feeble that they might be imperious; it did not give them softer voices than man in order that they might rail at him; not delicate features to be destroyed by rage. Angry women forget themselves and the dignity of their sex, which has never gained much by scolding."

Lady Dorothy Nevill had a good deal to say about the change that has taken place in the character and the manners of women since her own earlier days. She considered the modern woman is spoilt, has too much time on her hands, takes up too many fads, and completely dominates her husband. This struck the old Shah of Persia very much. He said: "It seems to me that the English and American husband is nothing better than a sort of butler."

Lady Dorothy was particularly severe on the "smart set" of to-day. "The elite," she said, "are fast, flippant and smart. People are less interesting to talk to, less sociable, less brilliant in conversation, less interested in things." And as an illustration of the change in the life of a society woman, who to-day thinks nothing of spending $5,000 a year on her dress, she mentions how she and her sister were given a dress allowance of $250 and $200, respectively, by their adoring father.

She was also wont to refer to the fact that in her younger days parents were very particular about the matrimonial alliances made in their families, and she told an amusing story of one old peer who was greatly surprised to be told by his sister that she had developed a great affection for a well-known scientist of humble birth.

The peer sent for him and said, brusquely, "Now, sir, I should like to know something about your family."

"I think it will be sufficient," replied the scientist, who awe of Semitic extraction, "to say that I descended from the illustrious blood of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob."

The peer was taken aback. "Oh," he said, "of course, my family has nothing to compare with that; therefore, if my sister really likes you, you'd better take her."

Leap Year Proposals.

This reminds one of another story which Lady Dorothy relates in one of her books concerning an East Anglican clergyman who was visited by a lady parishioner and asked whether he thought a woman might, in any circumstances, propose to a man. Much taken aback, the poor rector replied that he certainly thought there might be circumstances which would make such a proposal justifiable. Upon which, without the slightest hesitation, the lady exclaimed, "As Nathan said unto David, 'Thou art the man.'" And, seeing no possibility of escape, he was.

Speaking of the amusements of girls in her time, Lady Dorothy said that in the sixties, when old-fashioned croquet occupied most of her attention, it was supposed to be responsible for many marriages. "Are you going to make a flower-bed here, Thomas?" asked a young lady of the gardener. "Yes, mum, them's the horders." "Why, it will quite spoil our croquet ground." "Can't help it, mum. Them's yer pa's horders. He ses as 'ow to have it laid out for 'orticulture, not 'usbandry."

Lady Dorothy also numbered the late King Edward among her personal friends. Once, sitting next to him at dinner, he noticed she ate oysters with a knife. He made a humorous comment, and the next morning presented her with a beautiful case of oyster knives, and in the note which accompanied them said: "In remembrance of your criminal tendency."

A "Regular" Babe.

It was a timber law case, in which Tim Healy was counsel for the defense. In the course of the case a youthful witness was put up as an expert on the plaintiff's side. Tim got up to cross-examine.

"What age are you?"

"Twenty-one years."

"How long have you been in the timber trade?"

"Two years."

Tim sat down, saying, "A regular babe in the wood, my lord," which discounted the evidence of the youthful expert.

Their Married Life

Helen Is Made to Feel That She Is Too Exacting and Expects Too Much of Maggie.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"WHY, Maggie, this isn't a clean cloth. Look at this!" Helen pointed to a distinct grease spot on the damask tablecloth. "And here's another. Why, this is the cloth we had on for breakfast."

"'Twas clean last night, ma'am," grumbled Maggie. "That makes three we've had on this week. We can't have no clean cloth every night."

"Well, we certainly will when we have guests. Now, you'll simply have to change this, Maggie. You ought to have known that cloth wouldn't do for dinner to-night."

"I won't have no time to unset that table now, ma'am," obstinately. "It's after 6 already.'

Helen flushed and bit her lips. Maggie was growing more and more impertinent, but just before a company dinner was not the time to reprove her. So with an effort Helen kept back the sharp words and began deliberately to unset the table herself.

It was late and she was not yet dressed, but having taken the stand that there must be a clean cloth, she had no choice now but to put one on.

The first cloth she unfolded was an old one that had been darned; the next had a claret stain. Both of these had to be refolded and put back. The third was badly ironed and was hard to get on straight, but she finally got it adjusted and began to reset the table.

As she replaced the silver she found that there had been only three forks by each plate.

Fork Missing.

'Maggie, you forgot to put down an extra fork for the relish," as Maggie came in to get a dish from the sideboard.

"We aint got no relish, ma'am."

"Why, I told you to open a can of those anchovies."

"We used the last can of them, ma'am, last Sunday."

"But surely there's another can." Helen went out in the pantry to convince herself. "Well, we MUST have some kind of a relish. Oh, here's that jar of anchovy paste! Make some little squares of toast and spread it with this. You've got a hard-boiled egg," glancing in the refrigerator; "you can grate that over it."

Maggie, who was whipping the cream for the berries, turned around with an angry flush.

"You're wanting too much, ma'am. That's fancy cooking. Cooks who makes them fussy dishes gets $50 a month! And you expect me at the last minute to drop everything and——"

"That'll do, Maggie. As soon as I can get dressed I'll make this myself. And if you think you can get a place as a $50 cook I'd advise you to take it."

Helen flounced into her dressing room. For her dinner was already spoiled. She could never enjoy anything after any kind of a scene. Her whole nature shrank from contention, and just to keep peace she had let Maggie have her own way for so long that now she resented everything she was told.

The fact that the girl was honest, economical and an excellent cook had made Helen put up with everything else. But now she felt that she would rather have someone more agreeable and amenable, even though less capable.

A Man's Job.

Warren came in whistling, which with him was an evidence of rare good humor. Helen ran into his room with a hurried greeting.

"Oh, I'm so glad you've come, dear. Can you hook me up before you dress? I don't want to ask Maggie—she's been perfectly horrid!"

"Humph! Turn around here to the light, then. What's this thing?"

"Oh, wait—that's the inside belt! I'll hook that. There! Oh, dear, Maggie's getting to be IMPOSSIBLE!"

"What's the matter now?" as he clumsily hooked the dress.

"She put a soiled tablecloth on tonight—and I had to change it myself. And when I asked her to make some anchovy toast for a relish she said cooks get $50 a month for making those fancy dishes. Hurry, dear; never mind the bottom ones—I can hook those."

"Here—you hold still! You wanted me to fasten this—didn't you?"

She drew away from his still fumbling fingers and darted out into the kitchen. Maggie was fixing the salad. Helen maintained a cold, disapproving silence as she sliced the bread, cut the crust off to make small squares and put them on the broiler in the already heated oven.

The heat flushed her face and she burnt her finger, which increased her resentment. Hurriedly she mixed a spoonful of butter, spread it thickly on the toast and garnished each piece with the grated hard-boiled egg.

Fortunately the Thurstons were a few moments late, and Helen had the dainty squares of anchovy toast at each plate before the bell rang. But now she was flustered and nervous and felt in no mood for guests. However, as Warren was in an especially genial humor, her silence and abstraction were not noticed.

"What is this?" asked Mrs. Thurston. "Anchovy toast, isn't it? I wish Jane would make things like this. A relish adds so much to the dinner."

"S-s-sh," whispered Helen, with a glance toward the pantry. "I had to make it myself. Oh, I've had a TIME with her this evening! I feel I'm just about through."

"Why, I thought Maggie was such a good girl?" questioned Mrs. Thurston in surprise.

Her Own Story.

"She is—if you let her do everything her own way. But there ARE times when you want things done your own way. Just to keep peace I've let her dominate me more and more. I'll never begin that with another girl. It's always a mistake—they always take advantage of it."

"Well, I should advise you to hold on to Maggie," was Mr. Thurston's comment. "We've had a devil of a time for the last few weeks."

"Oh, didn't you like that Swedish woman?" asked Helen.

Mrs. Thurston shrugged her shoulders. "We've had three since then."

"But I thought she was going to be so good? She was a working housekeeper, wasn't she?"

"That's what she SAID she was," grinned Mrs. Thurston. "But she wouldn't work, and she didn't know anything about housekeeping! Then we had a German girl. She was RICH! Tell about her, Minnie."

Mrs. Thurston laughed. "Well, we forgot to lock the wine up one night, and she drank half a bottle of cherry brandy. The next morning I had to get breakfast."

"That's one fine thing about Maggie," announced Warren. "We never have to lock up the wine or anything else. And our grocery and butcher bills have been less since we've had her than they've ever been before."

"Well, that's just what we're looking for," said Mr. Thurston emphatically. "In case you let her go, turn her over to us, will you? By Jove, the one we've got now is extravagant, all right."

"Yes, she's very wasteful," agreed Mrs. Thurston. "We've used five pounds of butter this week—just for us two."

"Five!" exclaimed Helen. "Why, Maggie rarely uses more than three."

"Three? We've never used as little as that since we've been housekeeping. We've never had a girl that didn't either take stuff home or feed a lot of company in the kitchen. This one has a beau that comes two nights a week, and she gets him a regular supper. But what can we say? We just have to put up with it."

"Well, I'D say a good deal." Warren's tone was emphatic.

"Not if you'd been through what we've been in the last two months," declared Mr. Thurston, grimly. "You don't know what a cinch you've got in Maggie."

Helen Uncomfortable.

Helen had the uncomfortable feeling that all this was tending to make her seem in the wrong. The inference was that if she could not get along with such a paragon of virtues as Maggie, she must be over-particular and very hard to please. The injustice of this rankled keenly. They only saw the best of Maggie; they did not know how trying, sullen and impertinent she could be.

The Thurstons stayed late, and as they were starting home Mrs. Thurston happened to glance in the bedroom. As usual, Maggie had fixed the bed for the night, taken off the counterpane and neatly turned down the covers. On the table was a fresh pitcher of ice water, covered with a napkin.

"Well, I call that luxury," Mrs. Thurston declared. "Look, Henry," calling to her husband, who was getting on his overcoat in the hall. "That's the way Maggie fixes their bed every night. Do you suppose we'll ever have the luck to get a girl like that?"

Helen flushed. It was only an added evidence of Maggie's perfection and of her own lack of appreciation.

Later, when Warren wound his watch for the night, he frowned over it thoughtfully.

"See here, we HAVE got a cinch in Maggie, but you don't seem to know it. You expect too blamed much of a girl. Great Scott, if you can't get along with her, who CAN you get along with? We've got a good thing and we're going to take Thurston's advice and hold on to it. Now you can just make up your mind to that."

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

"Cultivate Harmonious Surroundings," Says Doris Keane

Miss Keane's stage-room bower, and her favorite picture.

By LILLIAN LAUFERTY.

WITCHERY, charm incarnate, the lure of "the eternal woman," are to become living and tangible qualities through Doris Keane's portrayal of Margarita Cavallini in "Romance"—made real at Maxine Elliott's theater in New York.

Of course you have often read a book or seen a play in which earnest author and striving characters tell you again and again how charming is the fair heroine. All their insistence never makes it true! For the witchery of moonlight and the appeal of lovely woman are subtle things you must feel in stirring heart the while you see with rapt eyes.

But the Italian prima donna of "Romance" fascinates and bewitches even when you disapprove of the saucy jade—and at last she wins you heart and soul as with brimming eyes you sit rapt and thrilled the while she rises to the sacred realization of her woman's soul and pleads with her adorer, "Let me be good."

The curtain fell on an old man's dream of youth—or romance—and I was whisked back to the realm of glaring lights, of rouge pots and cold cream jars, of wigs and artifice, to visit our new star in her non-twinkling daylight environment—the dressing room.

All around me were flowered curtains and draperies of quaint old chintz—and everywhere, on stray shelves, on the dressing table, in free corners were glowing, fragrant flowers. And in the midst of this beauty and light sat Doris Keane still pulsing with the emotion she had felt the while she portrayed it.

Her Passion.

"You love beauty?" I ventured.

"I love beautiful surroundings and the personality they must develop," said Miss Keane. "You see, I have a sister—ever since our childhood I had known and felt and admired her radiant beauty. I knew I could never be like that—and one accepts the impossible serenely after a time. I accepted beauty and did not analyze it. I began to think more about personality and the power that brings.

"Ah, is not personality a wonderful thing! That almost all women can develop—the force, the magnetism that a rare and evenly developed personality bring are to me more lovely than beauty. Though, of course, the daughters of Eve do try to look as well as possible, to make that quick little appeal that gives personality a hearing.

"The most charming women have varying personalities. Do you know when I am most popular with myself? It is when I have a sudden realization that I looked like a girl of 15 in the morning, and that now in sophisticated evening clothes I look suddenly 'grande dame'—elderly even."

Of course Miss Keane would have some difficulty in looking "elderly," for, in spite of her well-bred poise, in spite of the keen power to analyze and appraise life that glows in the deep fires of her great brown eyes, Miss Keane is a girlish and appealing little figure.

In her Junoesque costume in "The Affairs of Anatol," early this winter, she managed to look tall and stately, in her present play she is an exotic Italian, but in propria persona Miss Keane is a brown-haired American girl whose earnestness of purpose and ambitious willingness to work add to the fervor of artistic inspiration and make her beautiful with a charm that surmounts mere prettiness of feature in a way that affords a little sermon all its own.

"Surroundings are so important," went on Miss Keane. "One evening recently a party of friends took me to a restaurant all done in heavy plush hangings and oppressive gilt. My personality was smothered, and I became a quiet, depressed creature quite different from the animated person I had been just before.

A Sure Sign.

"That made me finally sure of my theory. Surround yourself with fresh, clean, airy, wholesome surroundings. For purposes of stimulating mind and spirit a day in the country far surpasses a glass of champagne. The outdoors—trees, green growing things and a chance in nature and solitude to know your own soul are the most wonderful tonics I know.

"Isolation, solitude—a chance to 'ventilate my soul'—are the things I like best in the world.

"Since I was six years old I have known what I wanted to do in the world. That is young, perhaps—but ever since I can remember I have been working toward a chance to act—to interpret character. Women must find themselves and the outlet for their powers if they want to be happy—and whatever charm tragic beauty has, the loveliness of a happy soul working toward a goal is more appealing to the world—and men.

"But while I like men—the man is not come—I think for the actress who is afire with her art all else must be secondary."

I looked at those glowing brown eyes—alight with ambition, with earnest purpose, with desire to see deep into the great mystery of life—for Miss Keane glories in the vastness of life, and thinks to absolutely understand even one phase of it would be a splendid thing—as I looked at those fine eyes I felt that Doris Keane had told me the great secrets of spiritual beauty that can illuminate the face of any woman who desires it.

To rise above the tawdry plush and gilt facts of life, to "ventilate your soul," and open it to the loveliness of Nature, to find yourself and the outlet for your powers—to keep happily, healthily busy, to know ambition's spur, and to strive to grow—these are the beauty secrets of Doris Keane, who has not thought much about beauty—and yet has cultivated a spirit and charm that make her natural loveliness ever a greater delight.

WITHIN THE LAW

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intrigue and Love

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Turner, an orphan, employed in Edward Gilder's department store, is unjustly accused of theft and sent to prison. She is hounded by the police on her release, and finally goes to live with Joe Garson, a forger, and Aggie Lynch, a blackmailer, both of whom treat her with respect. Mary resolves to keep "within the law." She becomes the leader of a band of swindlers. Gilder's son, Dick, falls in love with her, and she marries him to be revenged on his father—and then finds that she is in love with him. Dick refuses to give her up, a demand made by his father, Mary disappears. Police Inspector Burke in an effort to aid the elder Gilder schemes to secure the arrest of Mary through "English Eddie" Griggs, a police informer. Garson plans to rob the Gilder home on a tip from Griggs. Mary hears of it and tries to prevent it, going to the Gilder home. Mary pleads with Garson to drop the robbery, and Dick enters. Garson kills Griggs when Mary corners the latter and he admits he is working for the police. Burke enters the house, a searchlight throwing its rays on the dead man's body. Mary and Dick are arrested, because Mary tells Burke that Dick shot Griggs in defense of his home. The District Attorney tries to quash the case against young Gilder. Inspector Burke obtains from Miss Helen Travers West, daughter of a prominent railroad official, a promise that she will tell something about Mary.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"I shall do nothing of the sort. Sit down, indeed!—here! Why, I have been arrested——" There came a break in the music of her tones throbbing resentment. A little sob crept in, and broke the sequence of words. The dainty face was vivid with shame. "I——" she faltered, "I've been arrested—by a common policeman!"

The Inspector seized on the one flaw left him for defense against her indictment.

"No, no, miss," he argued, earnestly. "Excuse me. It wasn't any common policeman—it was a detective sergeant."

But this effort to placate was quite in vain. The ingenuous little beauty with the child's face and the blue eyes so widely opened fairly panted in her revolt against the ignominy of her position, and was not to be so easily appeased. Her voice came vibrant with disdain. Her level gaze on the Inspector was of a sort to suggest to him anxieties over possible complications here.

"You wait!" she cried violently. "You just wait, I tell you, until my papa hears of this!"

Burke regarded the furious girl doubtfully.

"Who is your papa?" he asked, with a bit of alarm stirring in his breast, for he had no mind to offend anyone of importance where there was no need.

"I sha'nt tell you," came the petulant retort from the girl. Her ivory forehead was wrinkled charmingly in a little frown of obstinacy. "Why," she went on, displaying new symptoms of distress over another appalling idea that flashed on her in this moment, "you would probably give my name to the reporters." Once again the rosebud mouth drooped into curves of sorrow, of a great self-pity. "If it ever got into the newspapers, my family would die of shame!"

The pathos of her fear pierced through the hardened crust of the police official. He spoke apologetically.

"Now, the easiest way out for both of us," he suggested, "is for you tell me just who you are. You see, young lady, you were found in the house of a notorious crook."

The haughtiness of the girl waxed. It seemed as if she grew an inch taller in her scorn of the Inspector's saying.

"How perfectly absurd!" she exclaimed, scathingly. "I was calling on Miss Mary Turner!"

"How Did You Meet Her?"

"How did you come to meet her, anyhow?" Burke inquired. He still held his big voice to a softer modulation than to which it was habituated.

Yet the disdain of the girl seemed only to increase momently. She showed plainly that she regarded this brass-buttoned official as one unbearably insolent in his demeanor toward her. Nevertheless, she condescended to reply, with an exaggeration of the aristocratic drawl to indicate her displeasure.

"I was introduced to Miss Turner," she explained, "by Mr. Richard Gilder. Perhaps you have heard of his father, the owner of the Emporium."

"Oh, yes, I've heard of his father and of him, too," Burke admitted, placatingly.

But the girl relaxed not a whit in her attitude of offense.

"Then," she went on severely, "you must see at once that you are entirely mistaken in this matter." Her blue eyes widened further as she stared accusingly at the Inspector, who betrayed evidences of perplexity, and hesitated for an answer. Then, the doll-like, charming face took on a softer look, which had in it a suggestion of appeal.

"Don't you see it?" she demanded. "Well, no," Burke rejoined uneasily; "not exactly, I don't!" In the presence of this delicate and graceful femininity he experienced a sudden, novel distaste for his usual sledge-hammer methods of attack in interrogation. Yet his duty required that he should continue his questioning. He found himself, in fact, between the devil and the deep sea—though this particular devil appeared rather as an angel of light.

Now, at his somewhat feeble remark in reply to her query, the childish face grew as hard as its curving contours would permit.

"Sir!" she cried indignantly. Her little head was thrown back in scornful reproof, and she turned a shoulder toward the official contemptuously.

"Now, now!" Burke exclaimed in remonstrance. After all, he could not be brutal with this guileless maiden. He must, however, make the situation clear to her, lest she think him a beast—which would never do!

"You see, young lady," he went on with a gentleness of voice and manner that would have been inconceivable to Dacey and Chicago Red; "you see, the fact is that, even if you were introduced to this Mary Turner by young Mr. Gilder, this same Mary Turner herself is an ex-convict, and she's just been arrested for murder."

At the dread word a startling change was wrought in the girl. She wheeled to face the Inspector, her slender body swaying a little toward him. The rather heavy brows were lifted slightly in a disbelieving stare. The red lips were parted, rounded in a tremulous horror.

"Murder!" she gasped, and then was silent.

"Yes," Burke went on, wholly at ease now, since he had broken the ice thus effectually. "You see, if there's a mistake about you, you don't want it to go any further—not a mite further, that's sure. So, you see, now, that's one of the reasons why I must know just who you are." Then, in his turn, Burke put the query that the girl had put to him a little while before. "You see that, don't you?"

"Oh, yes, yes!" was the instant agreement. "You should have told me all about this horrid thing in the first place." Now the girl's manner was transformed. She smiled wistfully on the Inspector, and the glance of the blue eyes was very kind, subtly alluring. Yet in this unbending, there appeared even more decisively than hitherto the fine qualities in bearing of one delicately nurtured. She sank down in a chair by the desk and forthwith spoke with a simplicity that in itself was somehow peculiarly potent in its effect on the official who gave attentive ear.

"My name is Helen Travers West," she announced.

Burke started a little in his seat, and regarded the speaker with a new deference as he heard that name uttered.

"Not the daughter of the railway president?" he inquired.

She Displayed Agitation.

"Yes," the girl admitted. Then, anew, she displayed a serious agitation over the thought of any possible publicity in this affair.

"Oh, please, don't tell anyone," she begged prettily. The blue eyes were very imploring, beguiling, too. The timid smile that wreathed the tiny mouth was marvelously winning. The neatly gloved little hands were held outstretched, clasped in supplication. "Surely, sir, you see now quite plainly why it must never be known by any one in all the wide, wide world that I have ever been brought to this perfectly dreadful place—though you have been quite nice!" Her voice dropped to a note of musical prayerfulness. The words were spoken very softly and very slowly, with intonations difficult for a man to deny. "Please let me go home." She plucked a minute handkerchief from her handbag, put it to her eyes, and began to sob quietly.

The burly Inspector of Police was moved to quick sympathy. Really, when all was said and done, it was a shame that one like her should by some freak of fate have become involved in the sordid, vicious things that his profession made it obligatory on him to investigate. There was a considerable hint of the paternal in his air as he made an attempt to offer consolation to the afflicted damsel.

"That's all right, little lady," he exclaimed, cheerfully. "Now, don't you be worried—not a little bit. Take it from me, Miss West, * * * Just go ahead and tell me all you know about this Turner woman. Did you see her yesterday?"

The girl's sobs ceased. After a final dab with the minute handkerchief, she leaned forward, a little toward the Inspector, and proceeded to put a question to him with great eagerness.

"Will you let me go home as soon as I've told you the teenty little I know?"

"Yes," Burke agreed promptly, with an encouraging smile. And for a good measure of reassurance he added as one might to an alarmed child: "No one is going to hurt you, young lady."

"Well, then, you see, it was this way," began the brisk explanation. "Mr. Gilder was calling on me one afternoon, and he said to me then that he knew a very charming young woman, who——"

Here the speech ended abruptly, and once again the handkerchief was brought into play as the sobbing broke to a moan.

Burke felt himself vaguely guilty as the cause of such suffering on the part of one so young, so fair, so innocent. As a culprit, he sought his best to afford a measure of soothing for this grief that had had its source in his performance of duty.

Her Voice Sank.

"That's all right, little lady," he urged in a voice as nearly mellifluous as he could contrive with its mighty volume. "That's all right. I have to keep on telling you. Nobody's going to hurt you—not a little bit. Believe me! Why, nobody ever would want to hurt you!"

But this well-meant attempt to assuage the stricken creature's woe was futile. The sobbing continued. With it came a plaintive cry, many times repeated, softly, but very miserably.

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear!"

"Isn't there something else you can tell about this woman?" Burke inquired in desperation before the plaintive outburst. He hoped to distract her from such grief over her predicament.

The girl gave no least heed to the question.

"Oh, I'm so frightened!" she gasped.

"Tut, tut!" the Inspector chided. "Now, I tell you there's nothing at all for you to be afraid of."

"I'm afraid!" the girl asserted dismally. "I'm afraid you will—put me—in a cell!" Her voice sank to a murmur hardly audible as she spoke the words so fraught with dread import to one of her refined sensibilities.

"Pooh!" Burke returned, gallantly. "Why, my dear young lady, nobody in the world would think of you and a cell at the same time—no, indeed!"

Instantly, the girl responded to this bald flattery. She fairly radiated appreciation of the compliment, as she turned her eyes, dewy with tears, on the somewhat flustered Inspector.

"Oh, thank you!" she exclaimed, with naive enjoyment.

Forthwith, Burke set out to make the most of this favorable opportunity.

"Are you sure you've told me all you know about this woman?" he questioned.

Burke Was Moved.

"Oh, yes! I've only seen her two or three times," came the ready response. The voice changed to supplication, and again the clasped hands were extended beseechingly.

"O please, Commissioner! Won't you let me go home?"

The use of a title higher than his own flattered the Inspector, and he was moved to graciousness. Besides, it was obvious that his police net in this instance had enmeshed only the most harmless of doves. He smiled encouragingly.

"Well, now, little lady," he said, almost tenderly, "if I let you go now, will you promise to let me know if you are able to think of anything else about this Turner woman?"

"I will—indeed, I will!" came the fervent assurance. There was something almost—quite provocative in the flash of gratitude that shone forth from the blue eyes of the girl in that moment of her superlative relief. It moved Burke to a desire for rehabilitation in her estimation.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

CONVINCE HER THEY ARE FALSE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen and deeply in love with a girl of seventeen. Some jealous person told her false stories about me that she believes. This caused a quarrel. Please tell me a way to regain her affections.

B. H.

You must never rest idle under false accusations. Convince her of your innocence and let the matter end there. Let it end for the reason that you are too young to know what love is.

YOU WERE RIGHT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been acquainted with a young man for several months, and he has taken me out quite a number of times. The last time he called he wanted to take me to a dance, but I refused, as he did not notify me in time so that I could get ready. Was I right in doing so? Since then he has not called to see me.

F. C.

You had the right of refusal, of course. If he is pouting because of it, believe me, my dear, he will prove a very uncomfortable friend, and you must waste no time or emotions on him.

Up-to-Date Jokes

The doors of a certain new house had shrunk horribly, as is the way of the modern door made of unseasoned wood. The builder would not send the joiner to replace them, so the householder tried the ironical method and wrote:

"Dear Sir: The mice can run under most of our doors, but our cat can not follow them. Will you please send a man at once to make room under the doors for the cat, and much oblige?"

Next day the joiners came.

Lost Books That Caused Tragedies

WHEN Thomas Carlyle had finished the first volume of his "French Revolution," a work which had cost him months of incessant toil and the verification of thousands of facts and references, he lent the manuscript to John Stuart Mill. Surely, that philosopher had one of the worst tasks ever allotted to a mortal man when he had to tell the "Sage of Chelsea" that the priceless manuscript had been thrown into the fire by a careless servant, and only a few charred leaves—still to be seen in Cheyne Row, Chelsea—remained to tell the tale.

Sir Isaac Newton was the victim of a similar catastrophe, but the "friend" responsible was not human, but canine—his favorite little dog. He left him in his study alone, and when he came back found that he had "chewed" the mathematical calculations of many strenuous months. Many accounts say that Newton took it very calmly, but the truth is that it preyed upon his mind to such an extent as to cause much temporary mental aberration.

One of the great losses to literature was the burning of six books of Spenser's "Faery Queen" which the poet is said to have left in his house in County Tyrone, Ireland. A rebellion broke out, and the place was burned; and not only did the poet's youngest child perish in the flames, but, it is said, also about as much of the great poem as we possess at present.

All lovers of Byron are aware that this erratic genius found time in his short, adventurous life to write his memoirs, and that on his death these passed into the hands of his friend, Thomas Moore, who, exercising a discretion committed to him, promptly consigned the manuscript to the flames.

No doubt the writer of "Irish Melodies" had very good and highly proper reasons for taking this decisive step, and it is quite likely that the publication of the memoirs would not, for obvious reasons, have been possible for many years after the poet's death; yet as succeeding generations have been brought face to face with the peculiarly complex genius of Byron, with its lofty moods and its many dark places, they have felt need of the light which only the records written by a vanished hand could have supplied.

Since the death of Auguste Strindberg, the famous Swedish novelist and dramatist—who, by the way, had much in common with Byron—many of his works have been translated into the English language and are already the center of heated controversy in literary circles. It is possible, therefore, that the powerful, if somewhat misanthropical, writings of this Swedish recluse may be read and treasured by generations to come. But all his works will not go down to posterity, for it is said that in a sudden fit of despondency Strindberg himself destroyed a number of his manuscripts, which, through lack of time or inclination, he never wrote again.

BUD ANDERSON PUZZLES COAST FIGHT CRITICS

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 16.—That the coast fight critics are not yet quite sure whether Bud Anderson, of Medford, Oreg., is a real fighter or only a flash in the pan is indicated quite clearly by the remarks of all the men who have been out there and have watched him battle. Some say that he is one of the wonders of the world and others are waiting to see whether he defeats Leach Cross before expressing a definite opinion. He is to battle Cross on July 4 in a twenty-round battle, and his standing largely will be determined by the outcome of that affair.

* * *

BOB LAGA, the old-time Chicagoan, who has been a follower of the boxing game for years and has handled some of the best of them, was in the city last night and had something to say of Anderson. "Whitey Bob," as he was known around when boxing flourished here, has been in the East scouting, but is on his way back to Los Angeles. He thinks Anderson is one of the very greatest of the lightweights, and if he doesn't get bigger nothing on earth but a serious accident can keep him out of the lightweight title. Laga bases his opinion on Bud's punching ability alone and nothing else.

* * *

"BUD doesn't look to have such a terrific wallop, but what he has is a short, stunning wallop that seems to have his opponents dazed right from the start," is the way Bob puts it. "He hits from a very short distance, but there must be a terrible lot of sting to his either hand. He surely will beat Cross in the coming bout, but it will be a poor contest unless Cross will go in and take a chance. Anderson likes to wait for his man to come in close before he hits. Cross is much the same sort of a workman, and there may be a lot of standing around and stalling in this match."

* * *

BOB further expressed the opinion that Ad Wolgast is all in and that it will be next to impossible for him to come back in the old style and do any good with some of the newcomers of the division. "He seems to have lost all of the old stamina and pep," Laga said. "He seems as anxious as ever to do battle and looks fine, but there's something wrong."

* * *

WHEN Leach Cross was on a visit here this week he was continually boosting his younger brother, Phil, claiming that the lad could trim any and all of them at 142 to 145 pounds. Leach was very frank to admit that Phil is a better man than he is, and said that when Phil was put in in a semi wind-up to one of his battles it always took the edge off Leach's contest. "Phil has the crowd crazy when he fights, and then when I come on it makes me look bad." Leach said. "I'd like to see him get a chance with some of the welterweights around here, for I think he is a champion sure."

RITCHIE OWES HIGH STANDING TO AD. WOLGAST

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—A good deal was said about the inadvisability of matching Wolgast and Ritchie, but the expressions of opinion have simply been of an individual character and not always the fruit of sober reflection and a desire to be fair.

If Ritchie ever accomplishes one-half of what Wolgast did in the ring Willie's name will echo down the corridors with more of a reverberation than it is producing at present. Wolgast gave Ritchie a chance at the title when Ritchie had little or no standing as a fighter, and if pugilism were not such a cut-throat proposition gratitude should impel Ritchie to be as generous as Wolgast was.

If Ritchie had knocked out Wolgast there would have been some pith in the argument that the public would not care to see the two lads sent together again. But Willie did nothing of the sort. It was Wolgast's foul blow that made Ritchie champion, and that is why some of the sneering critics of the Far East tack the letters O. F. P. on to Ritchie's title. And for fear you don't know it should be stated that O. F. P. stands for Other Fellow's Punch.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Ad Wolgast is certainly one popular fighter with the coast fans. Although Joe Rivers is a native son many of the fans out West were clamoring for the ex-champion to get the first chance at Ritchie. Ad's style of boxing, combined with his willingness to meet all comers when he was champion, has built up a large following for the "fighting Dutchman."

* * *

Mike Saul, who made his first fight last Friday in over a year, says he is after a return match with Terry Nelson. Mike seemed to be a big favorite with the fans and should be heard from in the future if he gets into good condition.

* * *

Kid Williams found Jem Kendrick easy picking at Baltimore the other night. The former handed the Englishman a terrific lacing and forced his second to throw up the sponge in the sixth round.

* * *

Tom Gibbons threatens to follow the footsteps of his brother, Mike, in the pugilistic world. Tom's latest achievement was a ten-round victory over Jack Denning last week and the latter is far from a slouch. Mike's brother is now after bouts with Frank Klaus and Jack Dillon.

* * *

In speaking of star middleweights why not mention the name of Jimmy Clabby, the veteran Hammond middleweight. Jimmy traveled to Butte, Mont., last Friday and handed Eddie McGoorty a fine trimming in ten rounds. Clabby was given a great ovation when the referee gave him the decision. The defeat just about eliminates McGoorty as a contender for the title.

* * *

Patsy Brannigan, the Pittsburg featherweight will get into action to-night. Patsy is scheduled to meet Young Mahoney in a ten-round engagement at Milwaukee, Wis. This will be Patsy's first battle since he defeated Matty McCue in the Brewer City about five weeks ago.

* * *

Abe Attell may get another chance at the featherweight title. A San Francisco promoter has offered the ex-champion a match with Kilbane on June 30 and Abe is expected to accept. The promoter has already received Kilbane's consent to the match.

* * *

Danny Morgan is just $850 short to-day. The talkative manager wagered that amount on Young Ahearn to stop Mike Gibbons and his protege took a bad lacing from the St. Paul sensation. He was stopped in the fourth round.

* * *

Chicago fans are betting on Jack White to defeat Johnny Dundee when the two clash in a 20-round scrap on Tuesday night. The Windy City fans think Jack is too tough for the Eastern featherweight.

* * *

Charlie White is tackling about the toughest boy in the lightweight division on July 4 when he hooks up with Jack Britton at New Orleans. Willie Ritchie, Joe Rivers and Bud Anderson have all dodged bouts with Britton. The latter is also credited with a clean-cut victory over Leach Cross.

Sports and Such

ABOUT THE ONLY REAL tragedy in connection with the recent polo match was the spectacle of the profound experts of polo—than whom there are none profounder—trying to explain the defeat of the English.

* * *

THE ONE BRIGHT BIT OF polo comedy was contributed by Harry Payne Whitney, captain of the American team, who said that he objected to the "commercialization of polo" as manifest in the plan to have the players wear numbers on their saddle cloths so that the spectators might identify them.

It might be pointed out to Mr. Whitney that the commercialization of polo began with himself and the other members of the Polo Association in charging from $2.50 to $250 for the privilege of watching the game.

* * *

MOST OF THE EXPECTED nervous prostration in connection with the managerial performance of J. Evers seems to be on the side of his opponents.

* * *

IT MAY BE CONFIDENTLY predicted that Johnny Kilbane will soon lose the featherweight title. He insists on fighting somebody now and then, contrary to the basic law of modern ring champions.

FEATHERS TO BATTLE IN NEW YORK ON WEDNESDAY

NEW YORK, June 16.—The St. Nicholas Athletic Club will stage a featherweight elimination tournament between six of the leading featherweights in the country next Wednesday night.

Matt Brock, of Cleveland, who is to meet Tommy Houck, arrived to-day. Kid Julian will arrive to-morrow. Joe Coster, who is to be Julian's opponent, is training at Brooklyn. Patsy Kline is getting in shape for his battle with Eddie O'Keefe, of Philadelphia.

TRENDALL AND MURPHY TO CLASH IN ST. LOUIS RING

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—Harry Trendall and Eddie Murphy will clash here in the star bout at the National Athletic Club Coliseum Wednesday, June 18. Trendall and Murphy will weigh 135 at 3 o'clock.

Murphy comes from Cleveland. He boxed a ten-round draw with Jack Britton at Kenosha, Wis., two weeks ago.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

CINCINNATI, June 16.—The Athletics look like the class of the American League now, and indications are the race on that circuit will be over by August. No club in the league, with the possible exception of Cleveland, seems to be able to stop Mack's team or even interrupt it. The supposed weakness in the pitching box has not developed yet, nor does it threaten to. Clever "Connie" is working his twirling talent with the foresight of a genius.

There is a psychological angle to the Athletics' great showing this year which should interest the fan to whom the spectacular appeals. Throughout both big leagues, but particularly in the American, a mania for sign stealing has developed, and the Athletics are the past masters in this art, according to the members of the other clubs in their circuit.

Personally, I believe the Athletics get credit for lots more stuff than they get away with. But they developed a new system of getting signs this spring which has baffled most of the clubs so far.

As soon as the batters begin being tipped to the catcher's signals, the opposing club generally catches on. Their sureness of hitting is an indication. Such a discovery starts a search of the source of the information. Many backstops, when working against the Athletics this year, have attempted to be so careful to conceal their signs from the men on the coaching lines that they crowd their knees right up almost tight together in the front when in the stooping position before the pitch, so only the twirlers can see their fingers. The result is that the sign shows out behind. The Athletics have been walking a little bit out of the line of march from the bench to the home plate when waiting to go to the bat and watching the catcher from the back. As soon as the man "on deck" awaiting his turn to hit sees a sign for a curve ball, he says:

"Take one, old boy!"

This may not mean "take one" at all, but it does inform the batter in the code that the pitcher is going to deliver a curve ball. If it is to be a fast one he says:

"Walk into one!"

* * *

A CERTAIN official in the American League was telling me a story the other day about a shrewd catcher who became aware that the Athletics were stealing his signals, but was worried because he could not locate the source. The official, himself, had discovered the means by which they were being tipped off, but it was none of his affairs to interfere, unless the other club complained about the waiting batters walking out of the line to the plate.

"They've got a fellow outside the park in that apartment house flashing my signs by pulling a curtain up and down," complained the catcher to the umpire.

Whenever a catcher cannot discover a source, he always looks for the tipping bureau outside the park, but that style of wigwagging is very much out of date now and strictly against the rules.

"Eddie" Collins was on first base when the catcher began to "beef" to the umpire.

"Now I'm going to ask for a pitchout, and you watch Collins," said the catcher. "He won't move off first base."

Sure enough. The twirler delivered a pitchout, and Collins stuck to the bag like a countryman in a big city to his bank roll.

"Watch that curtain out there now," continued the catcher. "I am going to order another pitchout."

Collins again stuck to the bag, and the curtain, by a strange coincidence, moved or appeared to move.

"What did I tell you?" exclaimed the catcher.

"They ain't getting them there," answered the umpire.

This discovering of the signs has helped the Athletics immensely, because they wait until they have the pitcher in a hole and he has to lay the ball over. Then comes the hit-and-run play, and away they go. Do not think for a minute that I am criticising the method. It shows that they are a lot of smart ball players, and it is regarded as being perfectly fair to take signs through quickness of eye.

Only artificial aids to detection are against the rules. And the fact that the opposing clubs always think the Athletics are getting the signs gives Mack's team an edge, whether it is true or not.

* * *

THERE is only one pitcher in the American League against whom the Athletics have no desire to be tipped off beforehand as to the probable pitch. He is Walter Johnson, of Washington. He has too much speed, and the most finished methods of sign stealing are not infallible. It ceases to come under the head of pleasure against him.

"I don't want anybody telling me what to expect when that bird is working," said "Stuffy" McInnis recently, referring to Johnson. "His fast one moves too quick to get out of the way if you are up there set for a curve ball. If it once hits you, it is generally too late for an ambulance. It is time to order a hearse."

* * *

WHILE we are on the subject of sign stealing, they tell a good story about the acumen of the Cubans when the Athletics went to Havana to play in 1910. The Cuban club had heard all the talk of the Philadelphia team stealing signs, so they decided to fool them by giving the signals in Spanish. "Connie" Mack immediately signed an interpreter to sit on the bench, but he was discovered after a few innings and chased to cover, even though he did have on a Philadelphia uniform.

PHILLIES' PRESIDENT IS NEAR DEATH AT HIS HOME

PHILADELPHIA, June 16.—William H. Locke, president and part owner of the Phillies and pacemaker of the Lynch League, is dangerously ill at his home here, and his players fear he will not live to see them win a pennant. Locke, it is said, is suffering from cancer and neuritis.

Before taking the executive chair in Philadelphia Locke was secretary of the Pittsburg club. He is regarded as one of the best posted men in baseball, having been selected to handle the business end of three world's series.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

OLD-FASHIONED BLEACHERS.

How dear to my heart were the old-fashioned bleachers,
The place where I sat in the ages gone by,
Where I could distinguish a ball player's features
Without a big telescope glued to my eye.
The bleacherite now, with a strong pair of glasses,
May sometimes distinguish a ball player's face,
He wonders who hits and who whiffs and who passes,
And yearns for the bleachers that stood by third base.

The old-fashioned bleachers,
The dust-covered bleachers,
The sun-beaten bleachers
That stood by third base.

We sat in our seats with the sun streaming o'er us,
And we knew every athlete who played in the game.
We cheered them or jeered them in deafening chorus,
And knew every man by his intimate name.
To-day we are scorned by the magnate's assistants,
Who order us hence with a frown on their face.
We sit in the bleachers a mile in the distance,
And yearn for the bleachers that stood by third base.

The old-fashioned bleachers,
The dust-covered bleachers,
The sun-beaten bleachers,
That stood by third base.

Christy Mathewson finally has awakened to the fact that the Phillies have a chance to win. This leads one to suspect that Chris has been reading the newspapers.

When Joe Dunn can negotiate a two-bagger without knocking the ball out of the park, it is a sign that he is developing speed.

Speaking of fables, there is the story of the ball player who kicks because he is not worked hard enough.

The press agent arises to remark that Jack Dillon is in the same class as Stanley Ketchel. Being as Stanley is dead, we believe said press agent.

RUCKER MAY BE TRADED TO CUBS FOR BRESNAHAN

By Davenport.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 16.—There is a chance that Nap Rucker will be wearing a Cub uniform within the next few days, and your old friend, Rajah Bresnahan, may be seen cavorting about as a Dodger.

Can't tell, for stranger things than that have happened and there are persistent rumors afloat that a deal is on between President Murphy and Charles Ebbetts whereby Murphy's ten-thousand-dollar beauty will go to Brooklyn in exchange for the star twirler of the Brooklyn Club.

Putting Mr. Murphy right, right off the reel, he makes a vigorous denial that any such trade is even contemplated, but the tip came from Brooklyn Saturday to the effect there was strong talk of a trade.

Incidentally, Charles Ebbets is the man who is backing fire. Charles can't see Bresnahan for Rucker and would give instead Ragan, but Murphy is holding out for the big southpaw.

Murphy After Pitchers.

However, there are many reasons for such a trade. Mr. Murphy has said right along that he was in search of a star twirler. "Not a youngster," said Mr. Murphy several weeks ago, "but a veteran who has been tried and found not wanting."

There can be no denying Nap Rucker answers the call. He has been tried several times and found "not guilty" every time. He is a veteran, knows every batter in the National League and has the enviable reputation of being one of the coolest, brainiest pitchers on the National League list.

Bresnahan has been decorating the Chicago bench ever since the season opened. He has caught very few full games, but Mr. Murphy says he values him because something might happen to Jimmy Archer and Rajah would be a valuable man under such contingencies.

Archer Best in National.

Archer has been working faithfully all through the season thus far. It is admitted all around the circuit that Jimmy is the star backstop of President Lynch's organization.

NEW ZEALANDER WINS FRENCH TENNIS MEET

PARIS, June 16.—The finals in the lawn tennis championship were played Sunday at Saint Cloud. In the men's singles, A. F. Wilding, of New Zealand, beat the French representative, Andre H. Cobert.

In the women's single, Fraulein Reike, Germany, beat Mlle. Broquedis, France.

The Germans, VonBissing and Kleinschroth, won the men's doubles from Froitzheim, Germany, and Wilding, New Zealand.

Miss Ryan, of California, and Max DeCugis, France, had a walk-over in the mixed doubles against Mme. Golding, France, and Wilding, the latter being too tired to play again.

NIGHT RACING AT 'DROME TO START TUESDAY

THE question whether Jock McNeil, the Scotch rider, or Wilmer Richards, the Texan, has the fatest motorcycle in Dixie will be settled Tuesday night on the shelving sides of the new Prince Motordrome, which will be thrown open for night racing at that time.

McNeil rides a J. A. P. motor. The engine was made in England and imported by the little Scotchman. He built up the rest of the motorcycle himself from parts picked up in this country. Richards has the famous "23" Indian, a racing machine of known speed, long record and bloody career, a machine that has been killing its man and breaking its record for several years past.

In Saturday's sport at the Motordrome McNeil and Richards met but once. That was in a five-mile final of the Speedway Sweepstakes. And McNeil won. But it was not conclusive. Richards, one of the wisest riders on the globe, was laying right behind the pack up to the finish. When he let out, he was showing more speed than any of them. But he did not let out in time. McNeil did a little letting out himself and held his advantage across the tape.

They should have fought it out in the Motordrome Purse, but the gasoline tank on the Scot's machine sprang a seam and could not be repaired in time for any further racing. Richards won the next race handily.

Oh, You Race Question!

Both men will meet in every regular event Tuesday night, and the question of supremacy of Texan or Scot, of Jap or Indian (and that's some race question for you!), will be settled.

It might happen, of course, that neither man would win a race, even if they settled their argument. There are several riders yet to be heard from.

For instance, Harry Swartz is due to show something Tuesday night. Swartz was handicapped Saturday by the fact that he had to fit new wheels on his machine at the last minute. His Excelsior has been used for road racing and was fitted with road rims and road tires. These were changed at the last minute, but Swartz had no chance to get his machine right. He will have it tuned up right by Tuesday night and as his machine is fast and as there is no better rider in America than Harry, he is likely to be heard from, LOUD.

Glenn and Renel to Meet.

One of the feature events Tuesday will be a match race between Harry Glenn, of Atlanta, and Georges Renel, of Paris. On Saturday, in the match race, they finished so close together that the judges declared it a dead heat, though, of course, each man claimed that he won. Considerable feeling was stirred up over the thing and they will ride it over for a purse on Tuesday.

The meet Tuesday night will start at 8:30. Tickets are already on sale at Tumlin's and Shepherd's stands.

M'FARLAND PLANS TRIP TO EUROPE FOR FOLKS

CHICAGO, ILL., June 16.—Another big treat is in store for Packey McFarland's folks, and all at the fighter's expense. On Wednesday they sail from New York on the steamer Carpathia for Ireland, their native land, to be gone three months. All of this time, however, will not be spent in Ireland. London, Paris and Scotland will be some of the stops before they return to this country.

This is not the only treat Packey has given his folks. He purchased a home for them on Garfield Boulevard not so long ago and is allowing them the rent from one of his six-flat buildings. Packey plans to return to the ring shortly and has instructed his manager to get in touch with the various clubs.

HOFMAN AND FERRY DRAW RELEASE FROM PIRATES

PITTSBURG, June 16.—Artie Hofman, outfielder of the Pirates and former star of the Chicago Cubs, and Pitcher Jack Ferry have been released by Manager Fred Clarke. Hofman is slated to go to Kansas City, but refuses, and asks to be sent to the Pacific Coast League. Ferry is to go to the Columbus team, of the American Association.

Vols Are Here For Three Games

Schwartzies Always Worry Locals

By Percy H. Whiting.

BILL SCHWARTZ, the well-known boy manager, and the Volunteer ball club of Nashville (Tenn., not Ga.) have arrived safely in Atlanta, and this afternoon will tangle with the Crackers in the first game of a three-game spasm.

Gilbert Price will probably get the assignment to hurl for the Crackers. Joseph Dunn will catch, as usual.

* * *

CURIOSITY as to the work of the pitchers of late prompts a comparison of the batting averages that Southern League teams have piled up in the last six series, with the batting averages of the same teams for the whole season. This is calculated to show whether the teams the Crackers have faced recently are hitting harder or lighter against other teams than they are against the Crackers. Here is the answer:

In the last series against the Lookouts Elberfeld's men batted .292 against Cracker pitchers. Their average for the season is .251. Score one against Cracker hurlers.

In the series before that, against Birmingham, the Barons could bat but .194 against Cracker pitchers. For the season the Barons are batting .209. Score one for the local hurlers.

Against Chattanooga in the last series here the Lookouts were held to an average of .219. This was another verdict for the pitchers.

In the one-game series with Montgomery the Billiken batters were held down to a mark of .217, which was still another victory for the hurlers.

In the series before the pitchers held the Vols to a batting average of .200, compared with .232 for the entire season.

Of course such comparisons are not conclusive. A pitcher may allow only one hit in a game but may walk so many that he loses. Three bases on balls followed by a home run will lose a lot of ball games for a pitcher, even if the rest of his string is shut-out stuff.

* * *

THE batting figures show the Crackers a great scoring machine. They have a higher batting average and have not only made more hits in each game but also an average of more runs to the game than any other club in the league. The Crackers have averaged 4 1357-1596 runs to a game, the Gulls have averaged 4 1215-1594, giving them the worst of it by a trifling matter of 142-1596ths of a run.

One thing that is enabling the Gulls to run away with the league is their advantage in base stealing. They have 127 stolen bases thus far, to the Crackers' 58. Five Southern League clubs lead the Crackers in base stealing, despite the fact that no team in the league puts so many men on first.

Here are the batting figures for the league:

Frank Fails to Get Two Billiken Players

MEMPHIS, TENN., June 16.—Manager Frank, of New Orleans, will not get players Bagby and Kutina, now the property of the Montgomery club. The controversy between these two clubs came to an end yesterday, when President Kavanaugh of the league ruled that while President Jones, of Montgomery, was guilty of a moral obligation, the evidence at hand did not warrant awarding Frank the players.

Frank did not propose the deal, as was generally supposed. On the other hand, Jones took the initiative. Here are the telegrams on which the league's executive based his decision:

Jones wired Frank:

Will you give Snedecor and $750 for Bagby and Kutina?

Frank came back:

We accept your proposition.

To which Jones returned:

I made an inquiry, not a proposition.

CUTLER AND ROLLER AGREE TO MEET IN RETURN BOUT

DALLAS, TEXAS, June 16.—Dr. Roller, one of the cleverest heavyweight wrestlers in the business, has won a return match with Charlie Cutler, this time a $200 side bet going with the victory. Roller was thrown by Charlie Cutler here Thursday night after he had gained the first fall. He claims he was tricked into the last fall and protested so strongly that Cutler agreed to meet him again, provided a side bet accompanied the match. This Roller immediately consented to, and now the pair are looking for a club to stage the contest. The physician-wrestler believes he can down Charlie in two straight falls and wants another opportunity to demonstrate it.

Seven Batters Are Bunched in Race

The race for batting leadership in the Southern League this year is better than the Southland has known for years. Seven players are bunched, neck and neck, and they swap positions almost daily.

Including Sunday's games in the figuring Long still holds the lead, with D. Robertson a great second and Elberfeld third by an eyelash. In the second division Welchonce, Knisely, Sloan and Wally Smith are right in a heap.

Here are the averages to date:

Player—	A.B.	H.	Pct.
Long	223	80	.358
Robertson	205	72	.351
Elberfeld	195	68	.349
Welchonce	234	77	.329
Knisely	127	41	.323
Sloan	232	75	.323
W. Smith	209	66	.316

Stomach Catch is Latest Fad

Maranville Does Not Use Hands

By Charles Dryden.

CHICAGO, June 16.—Among the other special attractions now with the Braves may be mentioned Mr. Maranville, the liliputian shortstop who catches pop flies in the pit of his stomach with little or no assistance from his hands. Mr. Maranville wears no cuffs or false mustache with which to deceive the eyeball, and he makes these catches while facing the spectators. Should he attempt to make a similar catch while running with the ball it might lead to a crack on the coco unless Mr. M. arrived in time to get the range or angle of the descending pill and back up a step or two. For many years athletes have employed the stomach while traveling from bag to bag, but until the advent of Mr. Maranville we do not remember one who used his bread basket in the manner described.

* * *

JIM LAVENDER is able to explain, out of one side of his mouth, how he happened to stop a line drive with his chin in the battle against the Muscatangs. It was a new pill, white and clean, and the smash traveled in line with a large lady sitting in the grandstand and wearing a white shirtwaist. Lavender did not see the ball until it cracked him on the point of the jaw and dropped at his feet. After throwing the batter out Jim clawed around in the grass and picked up a small white object which he carried to the bench under the impression that it was a tooth. The object was Mr. Lavender's wad of chewing gum, which was jarred from his gills by the impact of the blow on the chin. Sooner or later the world's greatest spitballers meet with disaster. Either they lose their arms, their stuff or their chewing wax. Life is one dodgasted thing after another.

* * *

THROUGH the kindness of Charles Cooper Fraser, formerly of this city, and the courtesy of C. Williams, who carried the clipping from Muscatine, we are able to present in this issue a few epigrams from the Cedar Rapids, Iowa, score card:

Colt Hofer was 19 Saturday. As Colt has the smoke and all other pitching stuff, Pa Hill is excused for robbing the cradle.

All the Rabbits need is a little more pep in yelling. The noise helps with the fighting spirit.

Hyzer was released yesterday because he was minus the guts while at bat.

UMPIRE SWATS MERKLE OVER BEAN WITH MASK

ZANESVILLE, OHIO, June 16.—In an exciting exhibition game here Sunday afternoon between the New York Nationals and the local Interstate League team, the Giants won by the score of 5 to 4, although Umpire Frank Newhouse, of the International League, declared the game forfeited to Zanesville 9 to 0, following his fight with Merkle, of the Giants.

Merkle in the eighth objected to Newhouse's decision on a close play at first and finally made a pass at the umpire. Newhouse hit the New York first baseman over the head with his mask and brought blood from the gash, then ordered him from the game. Merkle refused to go and the umpire then forfeited the game to Zanesville, 9 to 0. Manager Marty Hogan, of the locals, however, ordered the game continued and he himself acted as umpire.

TENNIS TOURNEY DRAWS EXPERTS TO CLUB COURTS

GEORGIA tennis cracks gathered at the Piedmont Driving Club Monday for the first rounds of the ninth annual State tournament, which will continue all the week.

Drawings for the matches were made early in the day and the players settled down to work. Perhaps the best tennis seen in years is expected on the club courts in this tournament.

A three-year trophy is offered for the winner in men's singles. Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, has won it twice and now defends it. A third victory will give him permanent possession. Dr. Karl F. Little also has won it twice, while those who have once held it include G. V. Angier, Jr., Frank T. Payne, Eden T. Taylor and E. V. Carter, Jr.

E. V. Carter, Jr., and E. S. Mansfield, champions in doubles last year, will defend their championship this season.

Frank Reynolds is refereeing the play.

HANNES KOLEHMAINEN IS REINSTATED BY A. A. U.

NEW YORK, June 16.—The registration committee of the Metropolitan Association, a branch of the A. A. U., have reinstated Hannes Kolehmainen, who was suspended Thursday for failing to send in a report of his expenses at a meet. The Finnish runner is now in Duluth, Minn.

Colorado Is Bigger than Imagination

The brush of fancy can't paint upon the canvas of the mind as wonderfully as nature's titanic hands have built here in the birth-spot of the mighty Rockies.

But Colorado is a condition as well as a picture. You'll not only see a country different from any under the stars, but you'll be a different human the moment you stand in the shadows of her majestic ranges and bathe your worn and sluggish city-dulled being in the vital, sparkling, clean, clear, sweet air of the great American Highlands.

Rock Island Lines

through sleeping car to Colorado

offers the best service to the Rockies. Electric lighted, fan cooled sleeper through to Colorado Springs, Denver and Pueblo, via Memphis and Kansas City. Dining car service all the way.

The Colorado Flyer from St. Louis and the Rocky Mountain Limited from Chicago, one night on the road trains—offer splendid service for those desiring to go by St. Louis or Chicago.

If you can afford to go anywhere, you can afford a Colorado vacation

DANGER SEEN IN $500,000,000 NOTE ISSUE

Forbes Says McAdoo's Readiness to Give Out Paper Is Invitation to Credit Jamboree

By B. C. FORBES.

To flood the country with half a billion emergency bank notes at this time would drive gold to Europe, would gravely aggravate credit inflation here and render our last state worse than our first. We have already in circulation the largest volume of bank notes ever put out.

* * *

We don't need more, but less credit, less borrowing.

* * *

Secretary McAdoo's unexpected announcement that he stands ready to issue $500,000,000 Aldrich notes is a direct invitation to go on a jamboree. New York bankers—who, after all, do know something about banking—have been striving with might and main for months to curtail the credit expansion that has gone to perilous lengths throughout the country. They have, moreover, practiced what they have been preaching: loans here have been rigidly discouraged, speculators have been obliged to stop their antics and liquid resources have been zealously accumulated in preparation for autumnal needs.

* * *

But country banks have gone on their way merrily, lending to all and sundry. The expansion in national bank loans alone has been at the rate of $1,000,000 every business day for the last twelve months—without one cent addition to cash on hand to justify this inflation.

* * *

Bank notes are not capital.

* * *

The scarcity is a scarcity of capital, not currency. Newly blossomed "experts" on national finance would do well to insert that fact into their noodles and keep it there in a prominent place. More nonsense is being written and spoken about financial subjects by men in prominent positions than at any time since William Jennings Bryan championed his famous "sixteen-to-one."

* * *

Washington can not create capital by opening currency flood-gates. Capital can come into being only through the people spending less than they earn—that is, by saving. The urgent need to-day is for less borrowing, not for more borrowing, a la Secretary McAdoo's latest proposal.

* * *

Let the Wilson administration be assured that the more bank notes they pump into circulation at this time, the easier will it be for Europe to take gold from us. We have exported $60,000,000 gold within the last five months and the chances are that more will go within the next fortnight. Europe is hungry for gold, the medium that speaks all languages and can do duty in any land. She will leave us our emergency currency and take our yellow metal.

* * *

To the novitiate the prospect of releasing $500,000,000 additional currency is most inspiring. It intoxicates. But those who can see below the surface, those who can diagnose the difference between bank notes and actual wealth, shrink from contemplating the outcome of any wholesale issuance of emergency notes at this juncture. Borrowers should pull in sail between now and the crop-moving season. They should not rush deeper into debt.

* * *

The Treasury Department should not dissipate resources at this time. It should fortify itself against the abnormal demands that the marketing of bumper crops can not fail to entail. In non-panic, but ominous times, all banking institutions should curtail credits. It is only when a crisis is imminent that a policy of granting generous and prompt assistance should be adopted and courageously followed.

* * *

It is a pity that the Treasury Department has elected to hold itself aloof from the best banking minds in the country and go blindly ahead.

Shuptine Leads for Seat From Chatham

SAVANNAH, June 16.—Early indications are that Herman C. Shuptine will go to the Legislature as the Representative from Chatham County to succeed Pleasant A. Stovall, resigned. The morning vote was fairly heavy. J. J. Bauhan, the other candidate, is running a close second.

Shuptine is the administration candidate.

Count Goes to Work In New York Bank

NEW YORK, June 16.—Count Adolf VonBernstorff, son of the German Ambassador in Washington, is working in the banking firm of Speyer & Co. in Pine Street. He is studying finance in preparation for a diplomatic career.

FOUR DYING IN MINE BLAST.

ALLIANCE, OHIO, June 16.—Ten men were injured, four fatally, in a mine blast explosion near Piney Fork this morning, caused by the short circuiting of an electric wire which ignited ⅔ keg of powder.

GENERAL BUYING BOOSTS COTTON

Old and New Crops Purchased Heavily on Bullish Report of Times-Democrat.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Firm cables and a good demand from spot people caused the cotton market to open steady to-day, first prices being 1 to 8 points higher than Saturday's final. After the call the list continued steady. The ring crowd, however, inclined to sell on favorable weather developments over Sunday, and Washington promises fair and warm weather during the coming week. Beneficial rains fell in South Texas Sunday, resulting in most active positions, except August, dropping 1 to 5 points from the final levels.

During the forenoon a wave of heavy short covering dominated the market, which encouraged a good speculative demand. This class of buying was based on The New Orleans Times-Democrat report that the condition of the crop, the report being construed as bullish, which had a stimulating effect on the market. Offerings were eliminated considerably and prices made a rapid advance of 11 to 16 points over the previous close. July and August were in active demand, but the new crop positions were in the best demand and showed the greatest gain.

Memphis and some Wall Street houses were reported good buyers of the new crops. Spot people were noticeable buyers of the old crop. New Orleans was a good buyer, based on The Times-Democrat report.

Weather and crop advices were most favorable. The Memphis Commercial summary of the crop was bearish, but offering continued light and scattered.

Interests now seems to be centered on the consumption rather than crop news.

During the afternoon session the market was inflexible; prices recorded further gains, being 10 to 13 points over the opening quotations.

At the close the market was steady, with prices showing a net gain of 14 to 24 points from the final quotations of Saturday.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New Orleans: July 12.10, August 12.01, October 11.47, January 11.41.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, June 16.—Weather conditions and changes over Sunday were distinctly favorable. Dry weather prevailed over most of the belt. The only precipitation of consequence occurred in South Texas, where it was needed. Minimum temperatures are 10 to 20 degrees higher than on Friday and are now entirely normal. Indications are for continuation of generally fair and warm weather, except in the coast districts of Louisiana and Texas, where it will be cloudy and possibly showery.

The Memphis Commercial-Appeal summary for the week is very favorable. Other crop reports are mostly favorable.

The Liverpool market was about as due on the opening; spot sales continue large, 10,000 bales to-day, at 2 points higher. Our market showed strength this morning and advanced to 12.06 for August and 11.58 for October, principally owing to the renewed strength and activity of July in New York. The weekly weather report to-morrow is expected to be bullish, as it covers the spell of last week. New York says that the strained conditions in July dominate the market and a decline in new crops does not seem probable until the summer positions are liquidated.

New York continued strong on bullish reports on both crops. Our market likewise held the advance well on small buying as selling is intimidated.

MILLER-COTTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, June 16.—New York seems inclined to work more to the bull side to-day, and, selling being scarce, no great volume of demand has been necessary to bring an advance. Weather over Sunday was ideal and crop accounts are good, but strength in summer months and fair demand in spot markets influences sentiment strongly. It is impossible to tell how far this swing will go, but short interest has been greatly reduced.

RENEWED SELLING PUTS STOCKS OFF

Transactions Attributed Mainly to Professionals — Reactionary Tendency Expected.

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Instead of following the lead of Americans in London, the stock market turned weak at the opening here to-day and declines were general throughout the list. Some stocks which started with advances were caught in the movement and lost part or all of their gain.

Canadian Pacific dropped 1⅝. United States Steel common began at 54¼ for a gain of ⅛, but soon lost its advance and sustained a net decline of ⅝. Pressure was directed against Southern Pacific, this issue losing a full point. New York, New Haven and Hartford again broke to par, selling at 100 for the loss of 1 point. Amalgamated Copper lost its fractional advance and shaded.

American Smelting was up ⅜ at the outset, but within half an hour was selling ¼ under Saturday's final.

Among the other losses were Reading ⅜, Pennsylvania ¼, Northern Pacific ½, Missouri Pacific ¾, Lehigh Valley ⅝, Great Northern preferred ½ and Atchison ⅛.

Gains were made by Utah Copper, New York Central, American Car and Foundry and American Can.

Goldfield Consolidated, which closed Saturday at 1⅞, was stricken from the list of stock exchange securities to-day.

The curb was steady.

American cables in London were strong. Canadian Pacific in London was irregular.

After a few minutes of active trading the market began to waver and fractional losses were recovered in several of the leading issues. Union Pacific suffered the most, falling 1¼ to 145¼. Steel was off ⅜ from the opening. Copper and Pennsylvania were off ¼. Canadian Pacific continued its downward movement, reaching 219, a fall of 1⅜.

Southern Pacific was off 1⅛. Other issues suffered slight losses.

Call money loaned at 1¾.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 16.—J. M. Anderson: "Some of the ring crowd were aggressive sellers on and after the opening and their sales found ready purchasers. It was evident that a lot of cotton was wanted. Memphis reported a good buyer of new crop; also some of the Wall Street houses. This started a wave of short covering and a rapid advance followed. After the first hour there seemed to be very little cotton for sale. The new crop option was much stronger than the old in the beginning, but spot people were noticeable buyers of old crops. Selling was scattered. The Times-Democrat was out with a bullish report, which brought some buying from New Orleans. However, Turner's report was bearish. Weather was favorable and private wires reported good conditions in some sections. The bears are very limited. Interests now seem to be entered on consumption, which, of course, must be recognized as the rise or fall, until there are further developments."

* * *

NEW YORK, June 16.—The market opened steady. The ring crowd was inclined to sell. The market, however, held steady after a sharp decline from the opening. The Times-Democrat crop report was construed as bullish, causing heavy buying.

* * *

Heavy short covering dominated the market after the call; also speculative buying. Spot people purchased July, causing the advance.

* * *

Memphis wires under date of June 14: "Reports received at the Cotton Exchange to-day say farmers in and around Kilmichael, Miss., are plowing up acres of cotton because the boll weevil has appeared in swarms."

* * *

Liverpool cables: "American middling fair, 7.32d; good middling, 6.99d; middling, 6.75d; low middling, 6.50d; good ordinary, 6.23d; ordinary, 5.89d."

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas and Oklahoma, generally clear and warmer."

* * *

So far as weather news is concerned, there is very little incentive to support the new crops.

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, June 16.—Hayward & Clark: "The weather map is very good; shows fair and warm over the entire belt, except partly cloudy in southwestern quarter; no rain except few sprinkles in Central Texas and some good rains in South Texas where needed; night temperatures 10 to 20 degrees warmer than Friday and some entirely normal.

Washington forecast for week: "Warm and generally fair weather greater part of coming week in Southern States, although local thundershowers probable along immediate Gulf and South Atlantic coast."

The map continues to indicate generally fair and warm weather, except possibly few showers in South Texas.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat herewith presents its correspondents' first report on the cotton crop of 1913. The consensus of opinion points to the following results:

1. The increase of acreage is slight—probably about 3 per cent at the most.

2. The general condition is fairly favorable, but many sections complain of poor stands, caused by unseasonably low temperatures.

3. Labor is said to be scarce in some districts in consequence of migration to towns and public works.

4. Taking the belt as a whole, the crop is an exceedingly spotted one, and the weather of the next month will be extremely important.

5. There is a good deal of talk of boll weevil, but it is too soon to form an idea of the probable damage.

Wheat—No. 2 red	97 @98
Corn—No. 2	62½
Oats—No. 2	41½@42

CHICAGO, June 16.—Wheat closed strong around the best prices reached and at advances of 1¾@1½. The bull fever seemed to be more in evidence to-day than was the case during several of the strong sessions of last week. While there were rains in the spring wheat country, they were reported as inadequate, and where additional moisture is wanted and the weather was cloudy, it was reported late that it was clearing up. This was the case, especially at Grand Forks, N. D. Export clearances were 774,000 bushels and for the month of May were 11,151,000 bushels compared with 4,285,000 for a like period last year.

Corn closed with gains of 1⅛@1⅜, and oats were up 2⅛@2¾.

Provisions were higher all around.

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 16.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.:

Wheat—Since Saturday weather has been fairly good in many portions of North Dakota and it is raining at several points in that State this morning. Look for a nervous market and the fact that some precipitation has occurred in the spring wheat country is apt to give us a little more easier tendency.

Corn—Bullish sentiment is rampant, chiefly on dry conditions, but we doubt very much if any severe damage to growing crop has taken place up to the present time owing to lack of moisture.

Oats—The lack of rain, in our opinion, has a much more important bearing on the condition of this crop than on corn, especially as temperatures are so high. Reports continue to show lack of color and short growth.

Good Progress Made By the Cotton Crop

MEMPHIS, June 16.—Reports from the Cotton Exchange to-day shows the cotton crop throughout the South to be generally good. Recent heavy rains have produced new strength in the plant, and the fields are clean of weeds. Labor is plentiful, and, as the planters are forced to meet fewer claims than usual, they will make more money than they have in many years.

The acreage in corn throughout Tennessee, Mississippi and Arkansas has greatly increased, and while more cotton is planted, the report says farmers have utilized thousands of acres of waste lands.

CREMATORY PUT UP TO COUNCIL BY MAYOR

Neither Approves Nor Disapproves Resolution Calling for Option on Electric Feature.

In notifying Council of his approval of the June budget and the purchase of the $260,000 crematory, Mayor Woodward Monday "washed his hands" of that part of the old crematory contract providing a $100,000 electric power plant in connection with the incinerator.

The Mayor notified Council he would take no action whatever on the resolution of Alderman Nutting and Councilman Mason calling for an option from the Destructor Company on the electric feature. Because he took no action the resolution automatically goes into effect.

Mayor Woodward's special message reads:

"I return the accompanying three resolutions passed at your session of June 2, 1913, without my signature of approval or disapproval.

"The whole subject matter contained in all three of the resolutions can be carried out by the framing of a contract with the Destructor Company incorporating the different matters contained in the resolutions.

"By careful reading of the different resolutions, it will be noted that your honorable body has repeatedly mentioned the contract entered into in 1912, which the Supreme Court of this State has decided illegal and void and ordered an injunction against the further carrying on of the Destructor plant under the provisions of that contract. Under that condition of things, I feel that I am enjoined against any measure that may be looking to the fulfillment of that contract. All of the provisions specified in the different resolutions can be placed in a new contract to be entered into by your general body.

"In returning these papers to the General Council in this manner, I hope that my position is fully understood. While I do not believe that the city has received full benefit from this transaction, yet I do not feel disposed to interfere further if the new contract is so constructed as to give the city the benefit of all of the concessions enumerated."

Rites To Be Simple at Mrs. Bryan's Burial

Simplicity will mark the funeral of Mrs. Mary E. Bryan, one of the South's leading women writers who died Sunday night at her home in Clarkston, Ga. Many prominent persons, however, will be present to pay their last respects to the pioneer authoress.

Mrs. Bryan's prolific pen has touched the hearts of Southern people for the past half century. Besides contributing to many magazines, she also published 47 books.

Financially her work met with great success. Shortly before her death, Mrs. Bryan's held the position of editor of The Fireside Companion, in which position she is said to have received a salary of $25,000 a year, probably one of the highest ever paid to a woman in the United States.

Mrs. Bryan first gained recognition in the literary world when her work appeared in Scott's Magazine, which was published shortly after the Civil War. Later she went with The Sunny South for which periodicals she wrote for twelve years. When this magazine was taken over by Uncle Remus' Magazine, Mrs. Bryan became editor of a department in the latter. It was during her connection with the Uncle Remus periodical that Mrs. Bryan's most appealing work was accomplished.

Through her magazine articles and poetry she won the hearts of the legions of her readers. Rapidly she arose to national prominence. Her novels and books of the Southland have found themselves into the libraries of every city of the world.

Mrs. Bryan is survived by her three children, Mrs. Pearl Byrd, of Clarkston; Mrs. C. A. Wilson, of St. Louis, and Fred Bryan, of Clarkston.

OBITUARY.

J. J. Kaesser, 46 years old, died at his home, 32 West Peachtree Place, at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. He was a lieutenant of Fire Company No. 3, and had been a member of the department 16 years. Surviving him are Mrs. Kaesser and a son, W. G. Kaesser. Funeral at 3:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at Barclay & Brandon's funeral chapel, corner of Ivy and Baker Streets.

Mrs. S. T. Watkins, aged forty-four, died at a private sanitarium Sunday night. She was the wife of S. T. Watkins, of 24 Norcross Street, a Southern Railway engineer. Besides her husband, Mrs. Watkins is survived by four sons, K. E., E. O., H. H. and S. T. Watkins, Jr., and one daughter, Mrs. W. E. Wadden, of Selma, Ala. The body was removed to the chapel of Barclay & Brandon and prepared for shipment to Keysville, Va., for funeral and interment.

The funeral of Lieutenant J. J. Kaesser, who died at a private sanitarium Sunday afternoon, will be held from the chapel of Barclay & Brandon Tuesday afternoon, Lieutenant Kaesser was one of the best-liked men in the Fire Department, and had been with the department for over 18 years. He was promoted to the lieutenancy of Engine House No. 3 some time ago. He is survived by his wife and one son, W. G. Kaesser.

Robert Hobbs, 57 years old, died at his residence in Adamsville at 8 o'clock Sunday morning. He is survived by a wife and four children. The funeral will be from the chapel of Harry G. Poole's funeral home at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon, and the interment at the family burying ground at Adamsville.

Mrs. Annie McWilliams, 50 years old, died at the residence, 59 Robbins Street, at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Besides her husband, W. M. McWilliams, she is survived by two children, Mrs. Lela Sanders and W. O. McWilliams. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Suicide's Last Wish Is That Flowers Be Put Upon His Grave

"Take good care of the baby and put a few flowers on my grave."

M. Roy Fowler, 125 Hunnicutt Street, fell unconscious at his wife's feet Sunday afternoon with these words on his lips. Fowler had just swallowed a bottle of carbolic acid. He died a few minutes later in an ambulance going to Grady Hospital.

Fowler ran a butcher shop on East Hunter Street. Financial troubles, it is believed, caused him to end his life. He was an Odd Fellow and a Red Man and a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. He was 46 years old. Surviving are Mrs. Fowler and the baby, three brothers, J. L. Fowler, W. A. Fowler and T. A. Fowler, and two sisters, Miss Nan Fowler and Mrs. L. A. Hudson.

The body will be taken at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday morning to Indian Creek Cemetery for burial.

Steers Car Into Pole To Avert Collision

Paul H. Norcross, wife and child narrowly escaped serious injury Sunday afternoon, when, to avoid collision, Mr. Norcross was forced to swerve his automobile into a telephone pole at the corner of Highland and Ponce DeLeon Avenues. None of the party was injured. The car was badly damaged, and the pole was cut in half.

Mr. Norcross was driving down Ponce DeLeon Avenue early in the afternoon. At the junction of Highland Avenue he saw an automobile going in the same direction as a street car. The automobile was obscured until Mr. Norcross' machine was almost even with the trolley.

Cardinal Not Insane; Ill of Neurasthenia

ROME, June 16.—Cardinal Vives y Tuto, prefect of the congregation for religious effairs, who, according to certain reports, had become insane, is suffering only from neurasthenia, and by the advice of physicians has retired to a monastery at Frascati, near Rome.

Cardinal Vive y Tuto acquired a very prominent position at the Vatican after the election of Pope Pius X, and has even been considered as a probable candidate for the succession.

Angered Woman Sues Pastor for $25,000

PORTLAND, June 16.—Because she objected to being called "an obstreperous person, a mischief-maker and a nuisance," Mrs. A. E. Clark, wife of a prominent attorney, filed a suit for $25,000 against Rev. A. A. Morrison, pastor of Trinity Episcopal Church of this city.

Her attorney says the trouble grew out of Mrs. Clark's insistence on having women members of the fashionable church on the governing board of that congregation.

Uncle Sam Conducts 'Movies' for Toilers

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Through the award of contracts for several thousand feet of motion picture films, it has just become known that the United States Government is engaged in the moving picture business on a big scale.

The enterprise is carried on by the reclamation service camps in the West to keep the workmen and their families, isolated from the world, contented and happy.

Militants Must Pay For Broken Windows

LONDON, June 16.—A judgment for $7,000 damages for window smashing was awarded to-day in the King's bench division against a number of leaders of militant suffragettes in favor of 93 westend merchants whose property suffered in suffrage raids.

Among the defendants in the case were Mr. and Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst and Mrs. Flora Drummond.

SOCIAL SURVEY WILL FOLLOW DIAGNOSIS

Russell Sage Workers Here Describe Preliminary Study of Conditions Found.

Shelby M. Harrison, director in the department of surveys and exhibits of the Russell Sage Foundation, in an interview with The Georgian Monday outlined the work he and his two associates are doing in Atlanta by invitation of a Chamber of Commerce committee.

"We are making a preliminary diagnosis and pathfinder's survey," he said, "and in our report to the committee we will make certain specific recommendations which probably will lead to a social survey. We are not making the social survey now."

Mr. Harrison and his two associates, Franz Schneider, Jr., and Zenas L. Potter, are doctors of the body politic. They emphasize the fact they are not fault-finders. They go to a city, study sociological conditions from an entirely disinterested and unbiased angle and make a report. If the report makes the city or members of the city's sociological organizations see themselves as others see them, then they have accomplished their purpose. It is up to the city, then, to improve condtions and make the place a little better to live in.

"All Cities Have Problems."

"The last 25 years have brought many changes in social and personal relationships," Mr. Harrison said, outlining the basic principles behind the Sage foundation. "As cities grow, and factories come in, conditions change. The factories bring immigrants, and that brings new conditions. The entrance of women into industry and new methods of production all change conditions. I am just citing these as examples. Every advance and progress brings on changed conditions.

"Every change means a new problem. These problems are sociological. It is our business to diagnose these problems and make specific recommendations. In Atlanta we shall make detailed recommendations which may involve a social survey. The survey will point out the exact problems the city has to solve, and offer further suggestions and such help as may be desirable or desired. Then the credit for solving them will go to your local civic organizations, for it is they who must lead in the actual work."

For a week, now, Messrs. Harrison, Schneider and Potter have studied housing and living conditions in Atlanta; recreation, problems of education and of poverty, and the sanitary and penal systems. Mr. Harrison will go to New York to-morrow. Messrs. Schneider and Potter will continue the investigations through the week. They will leave the city with their data, and after a few weeks submit their findings, together with recommendations.

Will Suggest Improvement.

"Of course, I can't reveal the nature of this report in advance," Mr. Harrison said. "But I will say this much. We will be specific in recommending things to be taken in the survey. On a few subjects we will be able to outline suggestions for immediate improvement."

The spirit in which the Sage investigators enter upon their work was described by Mr. Harrison as follows: "Our attitude is thoroughly sympathetic with local agencies. We are not coming in Atlanta as iconoclasts trying to break down what you are doing. As distinterested parties, we naturally are capable of making detached observations. Then the social survey, as it always does, will bring together the instrumentalities for solving such problems as you may have. The social survey applies scientific methods to the solution of modern community problems.

"Such diagnoses as we are making and such social surveys as will probably follow in Atlanta are designed to stimulate a healthy public opinion. The object is to solve the city's social problems rather than to palliate them."

During the last year the Sage Foundation has received requests for diagnoses and surveys from 100 cities, most of them in the East and Middle West. Atlanta is the first Southern city to call for the preliminary pathfinder's survey.

"We felt the survey was a very progressive move on the part of your Chamber of Commerce," Mr. Harrison said. "Your Chamber of Commerce members are up on their toes, doing everything possible to make the city even more desirable to live in and a better commercial center. There are not a lot of chambers of commerce in the country, you know, that have seen it is a good thing to improve the place they live in, although this is the fundamental thing in making the city a good commercial center."

4 STATES WIN IN RATE FIGHTS; ONE LOSES

Supreme Court Decisions Against Railroads Over Whole West. Missouri Victory Partial.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Four States won victories and one lost to-day in railroad rate decisions rendered by the United States Supreme Court.

In the Missouri cases the State won a partial victory. Six of nine decisions were against the railroads.

There was no decision in the Nashville grain case.

The 2-cent passenger rate law of 1907 of the State of West Virginia was declared valid. The Chesapeake and Ohio sought an injunction on the same grounds as those relied on by railroads in other States that have unsuccessfully fought the law.

Oregon Rates Upheld.

The Oregon rate cases, brought by the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company, were decided in favor of the State.

The Arkansas State rate was declared constitutional.

The Kansas law fixing a minimum rate for the transportation of oil and fixing severe penalties for excess charges was held unconstitutional.

The six roads which will have to abide by maximum rates fixed by Missouri are the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy; the Sante Fe; Kansas City Southern; Missouri, Kansas and Texas; Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, including the St. Louis, Kansas City and Colorado and the St. Louis and San Francisco.

Three Cases Lost.

In three Missouri cases the rates were held to be confiscatory, the St. Louis and Hannibal, the Kansas City, Clinton and Springfield and the Chicago and Great Western.

The decision in the Missouri cases follows the principles laid down by the Minnesota cases. The right of the State to regulate intrastate commerce is upheld. The rates so fixed were held not to be confiscatory, except in the cases of the smaller roads.

U. S. Has No Special Jurisdiction on Sea.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The civil rights act of 1875, giving the United States jurisdiction in the District of Columbia, in Territories and over vessels on the sea, to-day was declared invalid by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Individual Can Prevent Pollution of Streams.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The rights of a private individual to bring suit to prevent the pollution of streams was upheld to-day by the Supreme Court in the caseo f the Arizona Copper Company against W. A. Gillespie.

New Trial Granted Man Sentenced to Life Imprisonment

A new trial was granted by the Supreme Court Monday morning to Warren Clements, given a life sentence for killing E. J. Griffin in Lowndes County. The Supreme Court held that the trial judge erred in making his charge.

Clements and several other men were on an automobile trip with Griffin when the killing took place. Clements fired a pistol and Griffin charged him with shooting at the automobile. This was denied and a quarrel resulted. Evidence in the case showed that the two men had stood at opposite ends of the automobile and shot at each other. Griffin received a wound from which he died later.

Wilson Girls to Keep House for President

WASHINGTON, June 16.—During the summer Miss Margaret Wilson, eldest daughter of the President, and her sisters will take turns in keeping house for their father, marooned at the White House by the tariff and currency bills.

Miss Margaret has left for a series of visits in the Middle West. She will be first the guest of Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, in Madison, Wis., and will spend several weeks with other friends before joining her mother at their summer home in Cornish, N. H., and sending the second sister to "take care of papa."

Robs Partner; Gives Up to Pay Penalty

RICHMOND, June 16.—Conscience-stricken because he had stolen $100 from Dan Bennett, his partner in the fruit business, at Waycross, Ga., A. L. Christian, aged 35, gave himself up to the police here. In police court to-day his case was continued until June 21, pending receipt of information from the Georgia authorities.

Christian says he wants to go back to Waycross and serve his time, so that he can continue to make that place his home. He left Waycross a month ago.

Twelfth of Family Gives Life to Lepers

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—Rev. Gottfried Hahn, recently ordained a minister of the German Evangelical Church, has departed for Purulia, India, where a colony of lepers is located.

Eleven others of his family, including his aged mother, ministered to the lepers of the same colony, serving many years in constant danger of contracting the disease.

Some Interesting Facts Concerning The Turkey Tribe

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

The Turkey the Only Fowl Extensively Bred in a Domestic State That Was Previously Wild.

The turkey is the only fowl that is extensively bred in a domestic state that was previously wild. With this in view, it is really essential that we should know something of its habits while in the wild state. In the first place, it very naturally secured a great deal of exercise while doing its foraging for its daily rations. All this foraging served a twofold purpose; it not only gave them the much-needed food for maintenance, but the exercise they got made them very hardy and thrifty. It enabled them to make the flight that was absolutely necessary that they might keep out of the reach of the Indians' bow and arrow or the white man's gun. This great vigor has, to a great extent, been carried down through generations to the present time, but in a very much modified form. In fact, every turkey that is raised in close quarters and used as a breeder is helping just that much to sound the death roll of the turkey. It weakens its constitution, and this weakness is transmitted to the next generation. Many people who attempt to raise turkeys in that way are really ignorant of the real harm they are doing the race of turkeys by such a course. But, thank fortune, not very many ever reach maturity over this route. Then there are so many persons working with turkeys who do not recognize one of the turkey's natural food lines. They fail to remember, if they ever knew, that the turkey's food in its wild state consisted chiefly of insects, interspersed with wild seeds, beech nuts, berries, etc., but little or no corn. The average poultry keeper who has not really studied the conditions as he should, feeds too much corn and cornmeal. Corn fed exclusively, or nearly so, is too rich a food and tends to pack the crop and the result is liver trouble. You will notice one going a little slow with a sort of measured tread. This will be about the only symptom noticed, but is enough to lay out many a promising half-grown turkey. Wheat, where it can be had, is one of the safest foods one can use. Used in the whole grain and its various millings, such as good bran, middlings and low-grade flour.

Middlings moistened with skim milk makes an ideal feed for the morning and then the evening feed may be of cracked corn and wheat, about half and half. Into the mash should be cut onion tops of about one-third inch lengths and mixed through. This is relished and at the same time is a great health promoter. Where low-grade flour is to be procured and not the shorts or middlings, it should be mixed half and half with good bran by measure. This is to be used as the shorts with milk. Turkeys should be induced to stay on the range as much as possible. To encourage this, one can scatter a little cracked corn out from the buildings in a trail to the woods and fields for a few times. This will get them to hunting in good shape if they are not fully inclined otherwise. Do not feed at noon time before they get to be of some size. When they find that they must stay out on the range to secure their living they will be but little trouble. If they seem to get a good supply of food in the fields, being satisfied, it is a good practice to give them but a very small feed at night, simply to encourage them to come home to roost. After they have gone to roost it is a good plan to put out their morning feed so they can get it at daybreak and go.

As a general thing, everything and everybody eats too much, so if they are doing fairly well on the range, let them alone until you notice that they are really hungry when they come home. It will then be evidence that foodstuff is getting scarce out there and it must be forthcoming from another source.

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

This is the time of year when the mind turns to the green fields beyond the city and when one begins to look about for comfortable, easy-to-reach suburban homes and boarding places. If you have a room or two you would like to rent for the summer, or if you conduct a boarding house and want to obtain a desirable class of guests, the "Suburban Board" Columns of Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian will fill your house. Try it and see.

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column of the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, you ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Concerns Formed For Development

Two Corporations With $350,000 Capital Seek Charters—Mrs. Akin and Others File Petitions.

Two large private companies have been formed for the development of local real estate. Mrs. John W. Akin, Winter Alfriend and V. A. Batchelor have petitioned the Superior Court for a charter to do business under the name of the Capital City Investments Company, and E. W. Alfriend, Mrs. Akin and Mr. Batchelor are seeking the name of the Georgia Investment Corporation. The former will start with $100,000 capital and carry the right to increase to $300,000, and the latter will be capitalized at $250,000, with the privilege of increasing to $500,000. Batchelor & Cheatham filed the petitions as atorneys. The Alfriends and Mrs. Akin are already in several big development enterprises.

Permit for $6,000 Home.

Building Inspector Ed R. Hays has issued a building permit to Mrs. W. B. Crouch to erect a $6,000 home at 479 St. Charles Avenue. This will be two stories and brick veneer.

Interest in Tax Question.

The proposal of Alderman John S. Candler that the tax assessments on Atlanta real estate should be lowered and the rate raised, to provide for an equalization that has long been needed, is in direct line with the contention of local real estate men. Some time ago, when Alderman John E. McClelland suggested that assessments be raised, the real estate men passed a resolution protesting against the move. They contended that the rate and, not the assessment, should be raised, and that this would incidentally establish a better proportion between what Fulton County paid the State and the total amount paid by all the counties. It has been estimated that Fulton pays, from all sources except corporation and special taxes, one-seventh of the State's tax revenue, which is held to be entirely too much. The real estate men consider the tax question a serious one, and they are greatly interested in Alderman Candler's plan.

Effect of Boulevard.

People owning property along the Marietta Road have learned with more than ordinary interest of the plan to build an automobile boulevard from Atlanta to Murphy, N. C., since this improvement would be a great help to the property in the section affected. Farmers got out pads and pencils Monday and tried to figure exactly how the road ought to run. There is a great deal of undeveloped territory in the northern section of the State, and the advocates of the plan for the highway claim that a good road will send property values much higher.

Income Tax Opposition.

Concerted opposition to the Federal income tax measure as it relates to real estate and rents has sprung up from another source. The National Association of Real Estate Exchanges has gone on record as opposing certain features of the bill. In its present form the bill has passed Congress and is now to be voted by the Senate. It appears that the real estate interests were slow in detecting objectionable features, since the bill had got fairly on its way before much definite action was taken. Members of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, it will be recalled, met recently and voted to protest the clause relating to the payment of taxes out of tenant fees, instead of from the landlords.

Many New Houses Rented.

The Smith, Ewing & Ranking Renting Agency has announced the following houses rented in the past few days:

A Mother's Work and Her Hopes

An Editorial Written Especially for Men and Boys

(Copyright, 1913)

This editorial is not written for women. It is written for MEN, and for boys; for the millions who fail to appreciate the work that mothers do, for the millions that ignore the self-sacrifice and devotion upon which society is based.

On a hot night, in the dusty streets of a dirty city, you see hundreds of women sitting on porches, TAKING CARE OF BABIES.

In lonesome farm houses, far out on monotonous plains, with the late sun setting on a long day of hard work, you find women, cheerful and persevering, TAKING CARE OF BABIES.

In the middle of the night, in earliest morning, when MEN sleep, all over the world, in ice huts North, in Southern tents, in big houses and in dingy tenements, you find women awake, cheerfully and gladly TAKING CARE OF BABIES.

We respect and praise the man selfishly working for himself.

If he builds up a great industry and a great personal fortune, we praise him.

If he risks his life for personal glory and for praise, we praise him.

If he shows courage even in saving his own carcass from destruction, we praise him.

There was never a man whose courage, or devotion, could be compared with that of a woman caring for her baby.

The mother's love is unselfish, and it has no limit this side of the grave.

You will find ONE man in a thousand who will risk his life for a cause.

You will find a THOUSAND women in a thousand who will risk their lives for their babies.

Everything that a man has and is he owes to his mother. From her he gets health, brain, encouragement, moral character, and ALL his chances of success.

How poorly the mother's service is repaid by men individually, and by society as a whole!

The individual man feels that he has done much if he gives sufficient money and a LITTLE attention to her who brought him from nothingness into life and sacrificed her sleep and youth and strength for his sake.

Society, the aggregate of human beings, feels that its duty is done when a few hospitals are opened for poor mothers, and a little medicine doled out in cold-hearted fashion to the sick child.

Fortunately, it may truly be said that the great man is almost always appreciative of his greater mother.

Napoleon was cold, jealous of other men, monumentally egotistical when comparing himself with other sons of women. But he reverenced and appreciated the noble woman who bore him, lived for him, and watched over him to the end. He said:

"It is to my mother, to her good principles, that I owe my success and all I have that is worth while. I do not hesitate to say that the future of the child depends on the mother."

The future of the individual child depends on the individual mother, and the future of the race depends on the mothers of the race.

Think what has been done for mankind by thousands of millions of perfectly devoted mothers.

Every mother is entirely DEVOTED, entirely HOPEFUL, entirely CONFIDENT that no future is too great for her baby's deserts.

The little head—often hopelessly ill-shaped—rolls about feebly on the thin neck devoid of muscles. The toothless gums chew whatever comes along. The wondering eyes look feebly, aimlessly about, without focus or concentration. The future human being, to the cold-blooded onlooker, is a useless little atom added to the human sea of nonentity.

But to the mother that baby is the marvel of all time. There is endless meaning in the first mumblings, endless soul in the senile, baby smile, unlimited possibilities in the knobby forehead and round, hairless head. She sees in the future of the baby responsibilities of government, and feels that one so perfectly lovely must eventually be acclaimed ruler by mankind.

As a result of perfect confidence in its future, the mother gives to every baby perfect devotion, perfect and affectionate moral education. Each child begins life inspired by the most beautiful example of altruism and self-sacrifice.

Kindness has gradually taken the place of brutality among human beings, because every baby at its birth has found itself surrounded by absolute kindness.

The mother's kindness forms moral character.

The mother's confidence and encouragement stimulate ambition and inspire courage.

The mother's patient watchfulness gives good health, and fights disease when it comes.

The mother's wrathful protection shields the child from the stern and dwarfing severity of fathers.

Truly, a man may and should be judged by his feeling toward his own mother, and toward the mothers of other men—of ALL MEN.

In the character of Christ, whose last earthly thought on Golgotha was for His Mother, as in the character of the hard-working, ignorant man whose earnings go to make his mother comfortable, the most beautiful trait is devotion to the mother who suffers and works for her children, from the hours that precede their birth through all the years that they spend on earth together.

Honor thy father and THY MOTHER.

And honor the mothers of other men. Make their task easier through fair payment of the men who support the children, through good public schools for their children, through respectful treatment of ALL women.

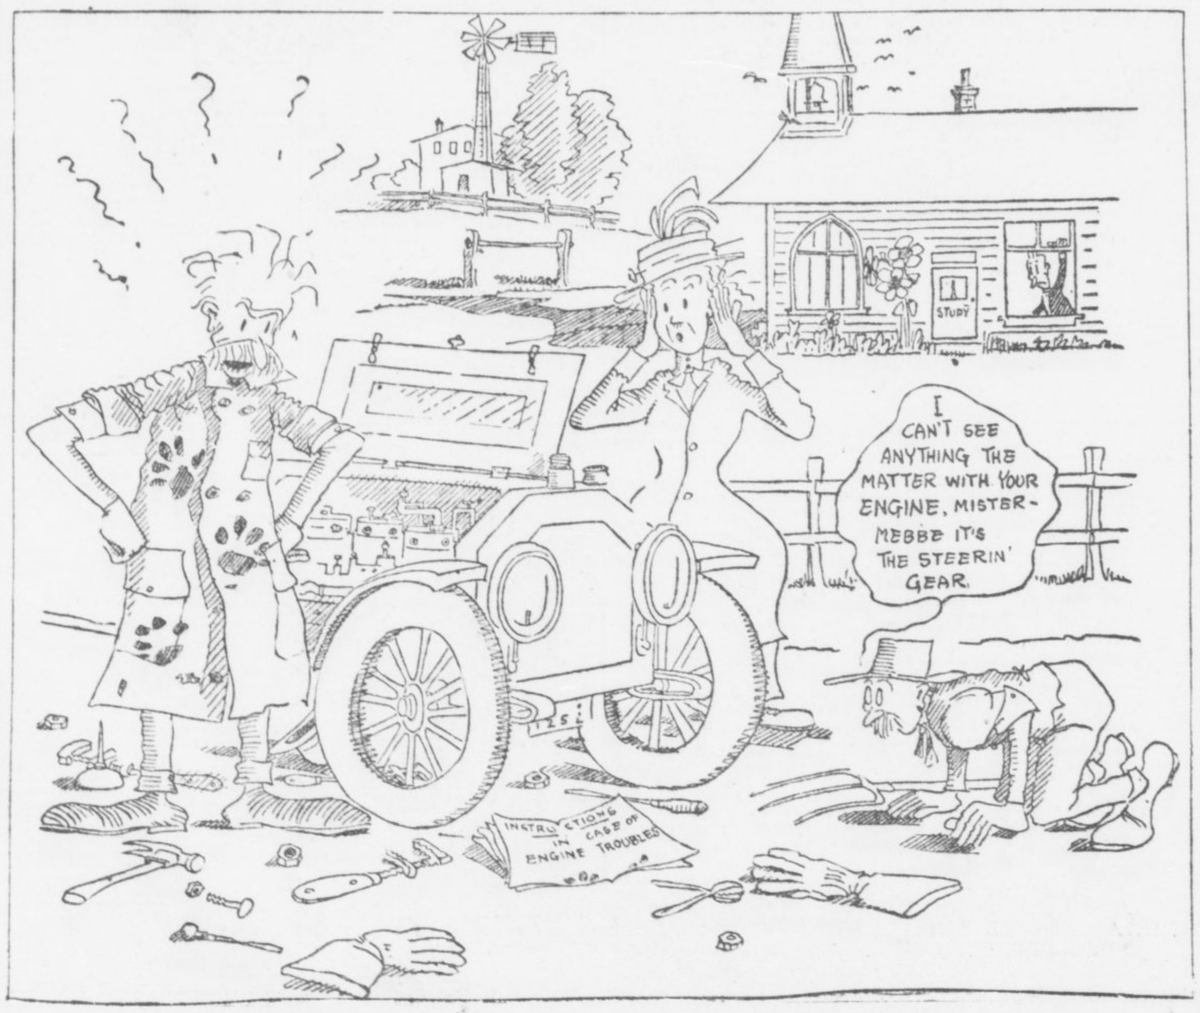
The mother is happy. For she knows "the deep joy of loving some one else more than herself."

You honor yourself, and prove yourself worthy of a good mother and of final success, when you do something for the mothers of the world.

There IS a Conspiracy Against This Man

Many a time you hear a young man say there's a conspiracy in his office to keep him from advancing. Usually he's right. There IS a conspiracy, and the conspirators are his baser selves. When the young man in the picture loafs at his work; when he drinks; when he stays up all night gambling—he's heading the conspiracy against his own success. And that's the only sort of conspiracy that can ever keep a man from his goal.

Mr. Suburbs Merely Forgot the Gasoline



Reprinted From the New York Evening Journal.

The Progress and Prosperity of Los Angeles a Triumph of Intelligence and Independence

NEWS articles have been circulated in the East concerning the late election in Los Angeles, containing statements which are not justified by the facts.

These misstatements have emanated from the newspapers of a certain political leader or boss of Los Angeles, who was defeated in the late election and who has attempted to excuse himself and explain his own defeat by an attack upon the electorate of Los Angeles.

As a matter of fact, Los Angeles has voted in this election with its usual good sense and good judgment, with its customary progressive spirit and high morality.

Mr. Rose, the newly elected Mayor, has had an excellent career as a judge, is a man of experience in politics and of sterling character as a citizen. He will give Los Angeles the efficient, honest, progressive administration that the intelligent and public-spirited citizens of that city demand, and Los Angeles in its choice for Mayor is a subject for congratulation.

The high character of the politics of Los Angeles and the tremendous advantage of such clean and conscientious politics, in contributing to the wonderful growth and attractiveness of that city, are things which the citizens of New York should study and imitate.

In this late election, and in previous elections, party prejudices and national political partisanship played no part whatever. There was no candidate of the Democratic party and no candidate of the Republican party in the local field. The Socialist party, to be sure, was in evidence and ran third in the race, but the two leading parties in numerical strength were two absolutely independent parties, with independent citizens as candidates on each of their tickets.

The whole election was fought out upon the mere matter of the availability and the capability of the candidates.

The decision in favor of Mr. Rose was reached mainly because of the belief of the people in his special fitness and his unexceptionable qualities as a man and a citizen.

One other influence of importance, however, entered the campaign, and that was a declaration in favor of Mr. Shenk, the independent candidate opposing Mr. Rose, by Mr. Edwin T. Earl, a political leader, or rather boss, in Los Angeles politics.

Even though Mr. Earl is a boss, he is not a squalid one of the kind that dominate so many of our Eastern cities. He is a man of ability and of wealth, but he is considered a boss and he had been accused of using his political power to the advantage of his private interests.

The independent citizens of Los Angeles refused to tolerate a boss or the candidate of a boss. Mr. Shenk had been the leading candidate, and the betting stood at 2 to 1 in his favor. But when Mr. Shenk refused to repudiate satisfactorily the boss and the attempted association of the boss, the public-spirited citizens of Los Angeles turned from Mr. Shenk to Mr. Rose, and elected Mr. Rose by a handsome plurality.

What an inspiration action like this is to the cause of independence, clean politics and good government everywhere! What could not New York accomplish if the citizens of New York had the independence and the courage and the public spirit of the citizens of Los Angeles! How long would the people of New York be betrayed by their parties and their public officials if the citizens of New York would support no party in municipal matters except an independent party, and no candidate except a candidate that was wholly free from boss dictation and domination?

The citizens of Los Angeles regard the conduct of their municipal government as a great business enterprise, and they approach the question from a sound business point of view, free from personal selfishness or party prejudice.

They have put into operation direct primaries, the initiative, the referendum and the recall. They select candidates with the one consideration of the fitness of the candidates. They elect them without bias or prejudice. They instruct them through the initiative. They review their acts through the referendum, and they retire them, if unfaithful or incompetent, through the recall.

Los Angeles is far ahead of New York in progressive principles, in public spirit and in the efficient conduct of its government. The result is a public administration which is as clean and wholesome as a private household.

Los Angeles has the beauty of its site, a matchless climate, an intellectual and enterprising people, attractive and distinctive architecture, delightful homes surrounded with parks and gardens. It is the center of a great petroleum trade and an extensive citrus fruit industry, an entrepot for the maritime trade of the world and the metropolis of the expanding empire of the great Southwest.

But who shall say that the wonderful growth in population and prosperity of Los Angeles, which is one of the marvels of this marvelous land, is not due as much to its wholesome political condition as to the wonderful climate of this favored section and the varied resources of its farms and orchards, its oil wells, its manufactures and its mines?

Would not New York confer upon itself an immeasurable material as well as a moral benefit if it would learn, like Los Angeles, to conduct its government cleanly and competently in the control of the whole people and in the best interests of the whole people?

COURT DEPUTY CUT TO DEATH IN FIERCE BATTLE WITH NEGRO

David Yancey Slain by Crazed Black Who Defied Arrest After Terrorizing Rawson Street Neighborhood. Is Wounded by Police Before Capture

Court Deputy David Yancey was hacked and stabbed to death Monday forenoon in a desperate battle with Eugene Watson, a crazed negro who had run amuck and terrorized the residents in the vicinity of Rawson and Windsor Streets.

Brought to bay under a vacant house at 33 Windsor Street, the black man evaded for more than half and hour the wagonload of policemen who had been hurried to the scene of the killing on a riot call.

The negro surrendered only after he had been badly wounded and saw that he could not hold out longer against the posse of bluecoats who had surrounded him in his stronghold.

A lynching was averted only by the large force of officers who rushed to the house and hurried the unconscious negro to the police station in an automobile.

Cries of "Lynch him!" were heard on every hand. The crowd was wildly excited and thronged about the negro as he was being taken from the basement. The policemen quickly formed a circle about Watson and pushed the angry men away.

Until he was hurried into the automobile, the danger of violence was not passed, the crowd at one time threatening to take him from the officers.

Yancey's body was terribly mutilated by the frenzied negro. Rather than be taken, Watson rushed like a wild beast toward Yancey, stabbed him repeatedly in the breast and back and slashed one of his arms almost to ribbons. Yancey probably was dead long before Watson had completed his fiendish attack.

The trouble which resulted in the tragedy started when Watson snatched $4 from Jesse Winn, an aged negro, on Whitehall Street. Watson ran after getting the money and threatened with a drawn knife everyone who stood in his path.

Deputy Gives Chase.

As he was running up Rawson Street, Deputy Yancey, who happened to be in that vicinity to serve some papers, took up the chase. Watson ran into the yard at the rear of 303 Rawson Street, the home of Mrs. J. W. Wilson, with Yancey in close pursuit.

Robert Starnes, aged 16, of 11 Fitzgerald Street, joined in the chase, along with a score of other persons. Yancey fired upon the negro as he cornered him in the yard.

"Damn you, you've got to kill me before you can take me," Watson shouted as he rushed upon the deputy and snatched the still smoking revolver out of his hand.

With this he drew the knife and plunged it time and again into the body of Yancey. The deputy sank to the ground mortally wounded, but the blood-maddened negro kept hacking and stabbing the limp body.

Boy Rushes to Aid.

Young Starnes, who had hastened to the officer's assistance, picked up one brick after another and hurled them at the negro, but the latter paid no attention to the blows.

When Watson had sated his bloody passion, he leaped from the prostrate body of Yancey and ran up the street, taking refuge, when hotly pressed, in the cellar of the vacant house at 33 Windsor Street.

He was quickly surrounded by the posse of officers. Thrusting their weapons in under the house they commenced a fusillade upon the negro which failed to subdue him until he was almost riddeld with bullets.

Several bullets took effect in his left leg and shattered the bones both above and below the knee. Another bullet found lodgment in his right

FUND IS STARTED FOR YANCEY'S FAMILY

First subscriptions to The Georgian's fund for Deputy Yancey's family:

Atlanta Georgian	$25.00
Sheriff's Office	50.00
Red Cross Hospital	10.00
Frank L. Harralson	5.00
Harry Latham	5.00
Newt Garner	5.00
John W. Moore	5.00

Court Deputy David Yancey is dead. He met a horrible fate. He was stabbed and hacked to death while endeavoring to serve his employer, the public of Atlanta and Fulton County. He died "with his boots on."

The whole city and the entire county will applaud this brave man's deed and mourn his death. Then they will turn again to their own homes and happy families and the humdrum of business. Court Deputy David Yancey will pass from their minds.

It remains for the dead man's unhappy family to bear the real burdens of consequences which its head met in serving the public. There is the widow, who idolized her big, strong husband. There are also eigh: children, bright-eyed boys and girls not one of them over 16 years of age, who will romp no more about their father's knee.

Family in Need.

He has been snatched away from them. And now—what do they face?

With the overwhelming tragedy not yet fully realized by them, the family of Deputy Yancey has not thought of this. Their sorrow for their loved one drowns out all else.

But life has its toll which must be paid. There are eight children who have to live, as well as a widow. Their sole support has been taken from them. And now—they face life's problem.

Yancey's family was in straitened circumstances at the time of his death. Sickness had invaded the house and two of the children are now in a hospital.

Already friends of the dead man are thinking of this. The Georgian also has thought of this.

The Georgian has started a fund to care for the family whose head was cut off while serving the people of Atlanta and Fulton County.

Your Aid Needed.

This newspaper has headed the list with $25. The amount is small—not commensurate in any manner with the price paid by Yancey. But its smallness invites contributions from other sources—from the public whom Yancey served. The Georgian will gladly receive these contributions and see that they are put in the hands of the bereaved family as a poor substitute for what it has lost.

High praise was given the deputy by Sheriff Mangum, his superior officer.

"September Morn" May Shiver On; Chief "Has Seen Worse"

Police Chief Beavers, just back from Washington, D. C., has granted a new lease on life to dainty "September Morn, "following an "unofficial" call at a local book store Monday morning.

The chief took a leisurely stroll along Whitehall, stopped for several minutes before the big window which protects some 48 of the maidens, scanned each of them most carefully, and then nodded his head in a semi-approval sort of manner, as much as to say that "he's seen much worse pictures than Cole's present leader."

In fact, the chief actually said as much in substance. However, he hasn't delivered any opinion as yet—he is going to think it over—and in the meantime, so far as the chief is concerned, "September Morn" may shiver on.

Man Running for Train Is Hit by an Engine; Dies in Hour

Carl Brown, 23 years old, of Stone Mountain, was struck by a switch engine of the Georgia Railroad early Monday morning and received injuries from which he died an hour later. He attempted to board a moving passenger train in the Atlanta yards.

C. B. Bishop, of Scottdale, Brown's companion, had boarded the train and turned on the coach steps to call to his friend.

Brown, running across the yards in the darkness, failed to see the approaching switch engine. He was struck by the engine's cowcatcher and hurled fifteen feet. He was picked up unconscious and hurried to the Elkin-Goldsmith Sanitarium.

Brown and Bishop had been in Atlanta visiting young ladies. They overstayed their time and had tried to make a short cut to the train.

DORSEY AIDE SAYS FRANK IS FAST IN NET

Attorney Hooper Declares State Is Prepared for Any Move the Defense May Make.

Frank A. Hooper, the well-known criminal lawyer who has been engaged to assist Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey in the trial of Leo M. Frank for the alleged murder of Mary Phagan, said Monday that the case was complete and was ready for presentation in court at any time.

Mr. Hooper asserted that the attorneys interested in the prosecution had investigated every angle of the mystery so thoroughly and fortified themselves against any defense that Frank will present, that practically nothing remained to be done until the case was called for trial. The departure of Solicitor Dorsey for a week's vacation, he said, was an indication of the preparedness of the prosecution.

No new developments are expected by the prosecution, according to Mr. Hooper. All of the stories and rumors have been run down to their original source. The defense, in his opinion, will be able to spring no surprise that has not been anticipated by the prosecution.

Mrs. Frank Gives Interview.

The American printed Sunday an exclusive interview with Mrs. Frank, whose husband, Leo M. Frank, is under indictment charged with the murder of 14-year-old Mary Phagan. It was the first time that Mrs. Frank had permitted herself to be interviewed since the Coroner's jury a month ago recommended that the Grand Jury hold her husband for trial.

She broke her silence to tell the thousands who have been gripped by the remarkable murder mystery just why she is absolutely confident and positive that Frank could not have been the author of the terrible deed. She made no plea for sympathy, but expressed herself as fully reconciled to the processes of the law, even though they temporarily caused her the greatest sorrow and kept her husband behind the cars as a man suspected of one of the most brutal crimes thinkable. The loyal wife said that she was able to bear the present belief because of the assurance of Frank's ultimate and complete vindication.

Why She Believes Husband.

On the fact that she believes from her life with the suspected slayer that any gross or immoral act is utterly apart from his nature, she bases much of her belief in his entire innocence.

She said, in part:

"In all the year and a half of our engagement, in the happy knowledge and consent of both our parents, I was Leo's 'best girl' and he was my one and only beau. If I went to a party, it was conceded that I should go with Leo, and if Leo went, he invariably went with me. You know, the people of my faith do those things in that way—with us, betrothal is all but as sacred as marriage itself.

"Leo Frank and myself have been man and wife for two years and a half. I state it as a circumstance showing how sweet and mutually happy our home life has been, and not as a thing I should mention ordinarily, that during all the two and a half years of our wedded life not once has Leo been away from me at night, save when once a month he attended the meetings of the Jewish Order of B'nai Brith, of which he was the president in Atlanta until he was arrested.

He Preferred Staying Home.

"He might have gone out in the evenings, perhaps without my knowledge, to places he should not have gone, so far as my free consent may have figured as a factor in his going. I merely cite it as a truthful circumstance that he has not elected to go. He seemed rather to prefer staying home with me. Naturally, that made

LOCALS ROUT FLEHARTY EARLY IN GAME

Tommy Long's Triple Clears Bases in Fourth Inning; Gilbert Price on Mound.

PONCE DE LEON BALL PARK, June 16.—The Crackers and Volunteers journeyed out to Poncy this afternoon to pull off the first game of their series. Fleharty, for Nashville, and Price, for Atlanta, were on the firing line.

THE GAME.

FIRST INNING.

Callahan grounded to Alperman, who made a great stop and threw the ex-Cracker out to Price. The latter covered first base. Lindsey flied to Long. Daley hit a scratch single through Smith and went out trying to steal second, Dunn to Alperman. NO RUNS, ONE HIT.

Long grounded out, Lindsey to Schwartz. Welchonce out, Perry to Schwartz. Alperman flied to Daley. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

SECOND INNING.

Perry was safe on Bisland's error of his grounder. Young grounded down the first base line and was tagged out by Price. Schwartz tripled to right and Perry tallied. Goalby bunted to Smith, who fielded the ball poorly, allowing Schwartz to score and Goalby to reach first. Gibson hit into a double play, Alperman to Agler. TWO RUNS, ONE HIT.

Bailey singled to center. Smith walked. Bisland sacrificed, Perry to Goalby. Agler singled to left, scoring Bailey. Dunn grounded to Fleharty and Smith was out in a chase, Fleharty to Perry to Gibson to Perry. Agler went to third and Dunn to second on the out. Price walked, filling the bases. Long hit a weak pop to Goalby. ONE RUN, TWO HITS.

THIRD INNING.

Fleharty hit a Texas leaguer over short. Callahan singled to left and Fleharty went to second. Lindsey sacrificed, Dunn to Alperman. Daley grounded to Agler and Fleharty was caught at the plate to Dunn. Perry grounded to Bisland and was out to Agler. NO RUNS, TWO HITS.

Welchonce out, Goalby to Schwartz. Alperman flied to Callahan. Bailey popped to Perry. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

FOURTH INNING.

Young walked. Schwartz sacrificed to Agler. Goalby was hit by a pitched ball. Gibson grounded to Bisland and Goalby was out at second to Alperman. Fleharty flied to Welchonce. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

Smith filed out to deep left field. Bisland singled past Schwartz. Agler singled to center and Bisland breezed down to second. Dunn grounded out, Perry to Schwartz, and Bisland went to third and Agler to second on the out. Price received a free pass, filling the bases. Long smashed out a triple to left, scoring Bisland, Agler and Price. Daley got his fingers on the ball after a great run, but was unable to hold it. Welchonce hammered a single past Goalby and Long registered. Alperman hit a single to right and Welchonce took second. When Young fumbled the ball Welchonce raced to third. At this juncture Fleharty was taken out and Dye went to the slab for Nashville. Bailey was out, Goalby to Schwartz. FOUR RUNS, FIVE HITS.

FIFTH INNING.

Callahan out, Price to Agler. Lindsey flied to Long. Daley walked and Perry popped to Bisland. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

Smith was beaned. Bisland grounded to Schwartz, who made a fine stop, and retired the batter at first. Smith took second on the out, Agler fanned and Smith stole third. Dunn out, Lindsey to Schwartz. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

SIXTH INNING.

Young flied to Bailey. Schwartz out, Smith to Agler. Goalby walked. Gibson flied to Welchonce. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

Price fanned. Long beat out a grounder to Goalby. Welchonce flied to Callahan and Long swiped second. Alperman hit a Texas leaguer past Perry and Long raced home. Bailey fouled to Young, who made a sensational running catch. ONE RUN, TWO HITS.

SEVENTH INNING.

Dye fanned. Callahan fanned, but Dunn dropped the third strike and Callahan took second on the error. Lindsey fanned. Daley out, Alperman to Agler. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

Smith out, Lindsey to Schwartz. Bisland was beaned. Agler fouled to Gibson. Dunn popped out to Perry. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

DEPUTY SLAIN BY CRAZED NEGRO DESPERADO

Black Wounded and Captured After Fierce Battle With Police. Expected to Die.

groin and still others in his right side.

In spite of his many wounds, it was thought that he might live. None of them alone would have been fatal. Watson has been wanted for some time at Fayetteville for escaping from the chaingang, and Warden Harris has been in Atlanta several times trying to locate the negro. Failing, he detailed a negro to stay in the city in an effort to find him. It was known that Watson lived in the rear of 60 Orange Street, but he was shrewd enough not to go near his home.

An especial act of bravery during the siege of Watson, who was in the darkness under the house, was that of Policeman Paul West. Watson, crippled but still defiant, was in an obscure corner. The officers called upon him to surrender. He shouted his defiance at them. After the fire was resumed the negro saw there was no further use in resisting and yelled that he was ready to give up.

West Dares Death in Dark.

The officers waited, but the negro did not come out of the darkness. Policeman West, against the warnings of his fellow-officers, dropped to the ground and crawled under the house toward the negro. His comrades were expecting every instant to hear the crack of a shot which would tell that West, too, had fallen a victim to the crazed black man.

West, however, crept up on the negro and hit him over the head with the butt of his revolver. Then he took him by the feet and dragged him, senseless, out into the light.

At the sight of the negro the anger of the mob which had collected was redoubled. Inflamed beyond measure by the atrocious killing, they surged forward and would have borne Watson off had not the policemen hastily surrounded him and carried him to the waiting automobile.

His eyes glazed and staring, the negro appeared utterly unconscious as he lay in the car. Questions as to his identity were hurled at him as he was borne to the station house and later to the hospital, but he seemed not to hear them.

Woman Stands Guard.

Mrs. Hattie Barnett, Atlanta's woman detective, lives at 15 Woodward Avenue, just back of the yard on Windsor Street, where the bloody battle between Watson and Yancey took place. She heard the shots that Yancey fired at the negro and ran out to see the deputy lying on the grass, horribly gashed and mutilated, and the negro running up the street.

Snatching her revolver she ran out of doors and after the negro. When Watson took refuge under the house on Windsor Street, Mrs. Barnett stood guard until the wagon load of policemen and detectives under command of Assistant Chief Jett and Captain Poole dashed up in front of the house.

Irby Terry, of 294 Whitehall Street, a boy of 11 years, had a narrow escape at the hands of the negro. Terry was standing on the street corner when the negro dashed by after snatching the purse of Winn. Watson brandished his knife and as he came upon the boy he made a lunge which Terry narrowly dodged.

Family Left in Want.

One of the many pathetic features of the tragedy is the poverty of the family that Yancey leaves. They have had a hard struggle for existence in their little home at Lakewood Heights on the Jonesboro Road. Eight children are in the family, none of them above 16 or 17 years of age. One of the two older daughters recently was taken to the hospital, making an additional burden upon Yancey.

Only recently Yancey was made a bailiff in Judge Calhoun's court. The salary was $100 a month. Yancey was overjoyed when apprised of his appointment.

"Now everything will be fine sailing," he said. "That fixes me just right. I am tickled to death. One of my children is in the hospital and another is very sick. I can take care of them now."

Jesse Winn, the old negro from whom Watson stole the $4, lives in DeWald alley. Watson is said to have stayed at the Winn home on several occasions. Winn is an employee in the coal yards of the Southern Railway.

Auto Has Red Flag; Chased by Angry Bull

SACRAMENTO, June 16.—A red Sacramento pennant attached to the rear of the automobile of H. A. McClellan, of this city, almost brought disaster upon himself and family when a bull attacked the machine from the flank on the road between Nicolas and Lincoln. By dodging and speeding the chauffeur managed to escape with a punctured tire which the bull gored with his horns.

FRANK TIGHT IN NET, SAYS AIDE TO DORSEY

me very happy—for I am, after all, a woman, like other women, and a woman never gets to the point where she does not dearly love for her husband to show her that he is still her sweetheart.

"We have lived here in this house, with my father and mother. To them, Leo has been devoted and always most considerate. They love him as a son; they took him close to their hearts before the wedding bells had ceased to ring—for that is the way our people do in those matters.

"I will tell you another reason why I think Leo Frank could not have committed the diabolical crime charged to him. He is devoted to children—little children especially.

"We have no children of our own, unfortunately, but there are several nieces and nephews in the family, and to every one of them Mr. Frank is affectionately attached. I have seen him play with a two-year-old child for hours, not once, but many times.

Helps Little Orphan Children.

"He has been with Mr. Milton Klein, for many years one of the moving spirits in providing innocent and healthful outdoor recreation and pleasure for the children of the Hebrews' Orphan Home.

"Is a man who loves children as Leo Frank loves them likely to have a hand in the slaying of an innocent child, not yet budded into youthful womanhood, as Mary Phagan is said to have been?

"If there is one person in all the world he has been more devoted to than to me, it is his aged and blind uncle, M. Frank. Is a man who is kind and considerate to the lame, the halt and the blind such a man as would take a hand in the killing of a child?

"Ah, surely, surely, there are few people who will—who can—believe that!

Always Kind and Generous.

"In the home, where Leo Frank has spent his time away from his business, he always has been the most kind, the most generous, the most thoughtful, the most considerate and the most affectionate of men.

"I think my knowledge of Leo Frank and the kind of man he is is worth more than the word of a shiftless negro who has lied persistently and vigorously ever since he was arrested as a suspect—but while my voice will be hushed in the court room, his will be heard by both the judge and the jury trying my husband for his life.

"There is, of course, much in this case that has seemed to me cruel—and now and then I have been moved to some measure of bitterness in my thoughts. But I believe that truth is mighty, and all I want is fair play.

She Wants Fair Play.

"If we can get fair play, my husband will be restored soon to me and to his family and his friends—and when he is, we shall take up calmly, and in such degree of forgetfulness as we can summon to our aid, the disrupted thread of our life, bind up our wounds, and try to hold against no man aught of ill will or resentment.

"That's the way I feel about it, and that's the way Leo feels about it. That's the way mother and father feel about it, too.

"We await the trial of Leo Frank in confidence. We have come to think that, after all, we shall get fair treatment—and as that is all we have asked for, we are more and more optimistic every day as to the conclusion."

I'LL KEEP PEACE, KAISER TELLS CARNEGIE

BERLIN, June 16.—Andrew Carnegie, leading worker for word-wide peace, to-day paid his respects to Emperor William, the "war lord of Europe." Mr. Carnegie was accompanied by other American peace commissioners who came here to extend felicitations to the Kaiser as part of the quarter centennial celebration of the ascension of the Emperor to the throne of Germany.

Mr. Carnegie and his fellow commissioners presented the Kaiser with an address in the name of 44 American peace and conciliation societies. The address pointed out that William's reign of 25 years has been notable because of the maintenance of a quarter of a century of peace. In reply the Kaiser said, in part:

Hopes for Peaceful Reign.

"I hope to reign 25 years more in peace, and shall certainly do all I can in that direction."

Germans expressed great curiosity to see the American iron master and great crowds lined the streets when he departed from the Adlon Hotel, where he is stopping with his wife and daughter, Margaret. He was heartily cheered. This cordial demonstration pleased Mr. Carnegie, who waved his hand to the crowds.

Among those who were received with Mr. Carnegie by the Emperor were Robert S. Brookings, of St. Louis, and Jacob G. Schmidlapp, of Cincinnati.

Although yesterday was the real anniversary, William having ascended the throne June 15, 1888, because it was Sunday the secular ceremonies were postponed until to-day.

Bands Play Martial Tunes.

Shortly after dawn the massed military bands from all the garrisons in the environs of Berlin assembled in Unter Den Linden and a crash of martial music, which echoed and re-echoed through the neighboring streets, followed.

Seven thousand school children joined in singing "The Watch on the Rhine" and other tunes the bands played. The streets were crowded with visitors from all sections of the empire. Among these were many American, English and other foreign tourists.

A mighty crowd gathered about the marble palace in Potsdam and sang the national hymn time and again. The wetaher was ideal for the occasion.

Catholics May Take New Bible Version

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Rev. D. J. Kennedy, theologian of the Dominican Order, announced here to-day that a revised translation of the Bible had been prepared by the late Rev. F. A. Spencer, of the Dominicans. Dr. Kennedy delivered an oration at Father Spencer's funeral exercises, and disclosed that Father Spencer devoted the last twenty years of his life to the translation.

He predicted the Roman Catholic clergy soon would call a special canonical council to consider the new version in place of the Douay's, which has been accepted for more than 300 years.

Marshall Sees Rules For Life in Baseball

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The rising generation was directed to form its rules of life upon the rules of baseball by Vice President Marshall in a children's day address before the Bethany Chapel Prebyterian Sunday school.

"No boy is so mean as the boy who will not play the game square," said the Vice President. "The sense of justice is ever present in the heart and mind of every boy and girl. I never have seen a thoroughly bad girl, but I believe I have seen one or two boys who were really bad."

1 Dead, 3 Hurt, When Train Strikes Auto

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., June 16. Improvement was noted to-day in the condition of Miss Willie Newton, Mrs. Finis Plumlee and Leo Chamberlain, who were injured yesterday when a Southern Railway passenger train struck an automobile in which they were riding near Ooltewah, killing Finis Plumlee.

The party was returning from an outing at Ocoee. Chamberlain, the chauffeur, was hurled 100 feet.

COOPER HAS WAY TO MEET FOOD SHORTAGE

Chamber of Commerce Secretary Urges Enlistment of 100,000 Boys in Corn Club.

Secretary Walter G. Cooper, of the Chamber of Commerce, Monday proposed a way to meet the $37,000,000 deficit in the food supply of Georgia. He urged organization of 100,000 boys in the corn clubs and thereby increasing tenfold the work which already has added 25,000,000 bushels of corn to the annual crop.

Mr. Cooper urges an immediate and active State-wide interest in the 1912 Georgia Corn Show as the most important step.

He says:

"Leading authorities on the food supply of Georgia agree in the estimate that the people sent out of this State last year $172,496,000 for corn, oats, hay, meat, dairy products and other food that should be raised here.

"The cotton and cotton-seed crops lack $37,496,000 of paying for the food we bought; this in spite of the fact that the corn crop of Georgia has increased 25,000,000 bushels in five years.

Average Yield Increasing.

"We have heard of a revolution in agriculture. Statistics show the average yield of corn went up from 10 to 15 bushels in five years. Georgia, though, still lacks a great deal of raising her food.

"In the face of wonderful improvements wrought by corn clubs in five years, it is hard to believe the statement that the cotton crop lacks $37,000,000 of paying for food supplies brought into the State; but these estimates are vouched for by such men as P. A. Methvin, State pure food inspector, and H. G. Hastings, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Committee on Agriculture.

"Of course, farmers raise some corn, oats and hay, but they must have consumed what they raised; otherwise they would not have to buy.

"Georgia farmers, according to the State Department of Agriculture, produce something more than $232,000,000, possibly $250,000,000, but when it is remembered that farmers have to buy mules, fertilizers, hardware, clothes, school books and a great many other things besides food, it is clear that they have little left to pay the enormous food bills indicated by the foregoing figures.

Confronted by Problem.

"What are we going to do about it? Of course, we must make the farms more productive and produce the things that we import.

"States like Iowa are producing 36 bushels of corn to the acre. There is no reason why this should not be done in Georgia.

"In addition to this, the State of Iowa sells $200,000,000 a year of animal products.

"We can not have much in the way of animal products until we have enough corn, oats, hay and forage to feed the animals as well as the people.

"If we are short $58,000,000 in corn with no animals to feed, how much more corn will we have to raise in order to supply the present demand and furnish food for $200,000,000 worth of animals as Iowa does?

"Iowa is about the same size as Georgia and the climate is certainly no better. There is no more congenial soil and not as much moisture."

Atlanta Eagle Aerie Goes to Convention

Leaving the Terminal Station at 9:20 o'clock to-night the Atlanta Aerie, No. 714, of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, 150 strong, accompanied by its drum corps of 30, will start in special coaches for Jacksonville, where the annual convention of the organization begins to-morrow for a three-day session.

The convention is made up of representatives from four Southern States—Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina and Florida—and is known as the Southeastern section of the organization.

Wears Draperies In Arabian Act

Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, in her Oriental costume.

Says She Needs Money For Boys' Home and Praises Light, Flowing Costume For Women.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, who has earned the sobriquet of "the most unconventional woman in all England," will dance in New York swathed in picturesque Arabian costume, consisting of brown and white draperies, in a drama based on the biblical character Judith.

For her two weeks' work she will receive $10,000.

The love for Oriental dress was gained by Lady Constance while in India.

"The day will come when all women will dress like those of Egypt and India," she said. "The cost is nominal, and I am relieved of all worry about the changing styles. Then, too, this costume is comfortable, and that is something that can not be said for the modern attire favored by women. And, also, I think that I am safe in saying it is about as becoming as most modern outfits."

Lady Constance has been implored many times by her relatives, the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, not to dance in public. But Lady Constance said she needed the money for a boys' home in Scotland which she is trying to help.

CITY TO SWELTER AS BREEZES FAIL

Weather Man Declares Mercury Will Hit High Places—Hot Monday Morning.

Soft-collar and linen-suit weather is forecast for the current week by Government Weatherman VonHerrmann. Monday the maximum temperature will approximate Sunday's, when the mercury registered 92 degrees as the maximum. At 6 o'clock Monday morning the thermometer registered 71, which is exceptionally high for Atlanta during the month of June for that hour.

"What makes it so hot?" the weather man was asked.

"The beautiful sunshine," answered Mr. VonHerrmann. "But while this is actually the case, the real reason for the hot wave is that at present there is high pressure over the State of Georgia and no movement of wind. If there were a brisk wind movement the sun's rays would be cooled. Consequently, this week we will get hot weather that is not due us."

Deaths were reported.

In Chicago the mercury reached 94. The same maximum was reported at St. Louis, Montgomery, Jacksonville, Kansas City and North Platte. That was 10 degrees hotter than the Heat Is Fatal in North Middle West.

CHICAGO, June 16.—Several more days of intense heat are in prospect to-day, following a sizzling 24 hours. The entire north central part of the country was hot yesterday. Eight maximum for the day at New Orleans, and 2 degrees cooler than at Omaha, Des Moines and St. Paul.

The temperature at 9 o'clock this morning, 86, indicated that a new record for the season would be reached this afternoon.

Fear for Babies as Heat Makes Cleveland Record.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 16.—At 10 o'clock this morning the thermometer had risen to 86, and indications pointed to the hottest June day in the history of the local weather bureau. Several were overcome by the heat and an epidemic of illness among babies caused fears of a new mark in infant mortality.

New York Heat Wave Will Continue Two Days.

NEW YORK, June 16.—New York City sweltered to-day under the first real heat wave of the season. At noon the temperature was 87, but the weather forecaster predicted that the same torrid weather would prevail two days longer.

COLYAR RETURNS PROMISING SENSATION

A. S. Colyar is in Atlanta again, promising to spring some more sensations.

The investigator who engineered the dictographing of Thomas B. Felder and Mayor Woodward has been in Washington. He sent a letter to Atlanta before him, saying he objected to being made a goat.

It is believed Colyar saw George M. Gentry while in Washington and got from him an affidavit. This is said to be much the same as the one printed admitting that the dictograph records had been padded, as charged in Gentry's recent affidavit, but that the general charges were upheld.

Promises Story in Letter.

Colyar's letter, mailed before he left Washington, follows:

"He laughs best who laughs last When you get tired publishing all of the lies the gang of political crooks are publishing on Lanford and myself I may be able to give you a story that will cause some people to sit up and take notice.

"It's indeed comforting to think one purchased affidavit can cause a certain man in Atlanta to consider himself vindicated completely. Whitewash is cheap, as we all know.

"Then there is Mayor Woodward. He says 'Colyar went to Mrs. Gentry's house and worried her.' Indeed, where did he learn this? It's news to me. But we all know the Mayor. He is the same Mayor Hon. R. F. Maddox defeated after he (Woodward) was nominated by his party, and all Atlanta knows why. Let them make a goat out of me and see what I publish in my own defense.

"The crooks got caught. And they sent Miles away to see if he could not fool the people. A. S. COLYAR."

Felder's Trip Causes Comment.

Speculation was rife Monday as to the nature of the trip of Colonel Thomas B. Felder, who left Atlanta Sunday afternoon with the statement that he was bound for Cincinnati.

Rumors had it that Colonel Felder in reality is on his way to Washington, for the purpose probably of conferring with George Gentry, the missing stenographer in the recent dictagraph sensation. If this is Colonel Felder's intention, he kept it to himself.

It has been suggested that Colonel Felder would feel much safer in going to Washington by way of Cincinnati than through the State of South Carolina.

NO VICE HOUSES IN FIVE YEARS, SAYS CHIEF

"In less than five years every recognized house of vice in the United States will be closed."

This was the statement made today by James L. Beavers, chief of police of Atlanta, who returned last night from Washington and the convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs.

More time was allotted to discussion of the social evil than in any previous convention of the police chiefs, Beavers said. Last Wednesday the whole afternoon session was devoted to the topic. Chief Beavers made an address, and it was this address and the chief's record in Atlanta which stimulated the discussion.

"There has been a wonderful increase of sentiment among chiefs of police in favor of closing these houses," Chief Beavers said to-day. "This feeling was demonstrated at the convention last week.

"Last Wednesday the convention used the whole afternoon for discussion of the social evil. That was the first time so much attention ever had been given to this subject. The police chiefs are giving more attention now to talking and thinking about this question than ever before, and the sentiment is rapidly growing in favor of absolute suppression.

"Some of the chiefs in attendance at the convention favored segregation, but all of them admitted the law favored suppression, and that suppression was right. The only question seemed to be whether the laws could be enforced, and the majority sentiment was they could.

"The chiefs know suppression is right, and after listening to the discussions and studying the sentiment manifested there, I believe in less than five years every recognized house of vice in the United States will be closed."

DUEL IN DARK BY BURGLAR AND DETECTIVE

Negro, Caught Robbing Safe, Flees After Volleys Are Exchanged—Arrested Later.

The details of a pistol duel between a Pinkerton detective and a burglar in the Troy Laundry, 210 Houston Street, were made known Sunday after the arrest of Herman Butler, a negro, living at 99 Rondeau Street.

A volley of shots, which startled the neighborhood, was exchanged between Fred Farris, the detective, and Butler when Farris discovered the latter rifling the safe in the laundry Saturday night after all of the other employees had departed.

The laundry proprietors had missed money and other articles from the building several times, but were unable to find the thief. Finally they notified the Pinkertons.

Farris hid in the building Saturday night. Soon after the lights were out the detective saw a man approach one of the house telephones. The intruder, using the instrument, ascertained that no one was on the other floors of the building. Then he proceeded to unlock an old-fashioned safe with a key he had.

The burglar was interrupted by Farris' command to throw up his hands. Instead of complying, Butler drew a revolver and began firing in the direction from which the voice came. Farris returned the fire, but Butler, backing away, managed to get to the rear door and escape without being hit.

Not suspecting that his identity had been learned, Butler remained at home Sunday. He was arrested there by Detectives Coker and Gillespie.

Slaton's Client Is Fined for Ignoring Court's Injunction

"While it would be a difficult matter to insult me personally, you can get into trouble pretty easily by insulting this court," said Superior Judge John T. Pendleton Monday morning when he fined Edward Floding $50 for contempt of court, and threatened him with a jail sentence of 24 hours. Floding's attorney was Governor-elect John M. Slaton.

Floding is proprietor of the Floding Relagia Company. After he purchased it, the former owners obtained an injunction restraining him from using that firm name.

Accordng to the court, he disregarded the injunction.

40 Stone Burglar as He Tries to Escape

A passerby saw a negro moving about in the Harrison Dry Goods Store, 418-22 Marietta Street, at noon Sunday. Becoming suspicious, the passerby notified the police. Then he collected all the men in the neighborhood, 40 in all, and they surrounded the store.

The negro, all unconscious of the reception committee waiting to receive him, came out. He was met by a shower of bricks and stones and beat a hasty retreat. Finally the police arrived and the negro was taken into custody. He gave his name as Joe Marion.

PRESIDENT WILL SPUR HOUSE IN PERSON

Wilson Will Read Message Urging His 'Hobbleless' Currency Reform Bill.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—President Wilson will read his currency message to Congress in person, it was announced at the White House prior to the newspaper conference at which the President discussed the bill at length with the Washington correspondents.

The President believes that his plan of personally placing before the national Legislature the views on important topics, such as currency and the tariff, insures greater attention and more marked interest from the country at large than did the former custom of sending messages to Congress and having them read by a clerk.

Therefore, as soon as the currency bill is completed and ready for presentation (probably about Friday of this week), the President will go to the Capitol and present his views on the necessary financial reform to the assembled members of the House.

Atlanta Girls Dazzle Dr. Cook

On Tour to Establish 'Rights'

Dr. Frederick A. Cook, who stopped to stare at Peachtree belles.

"Southern women have a little way all their own," explorer says.

Explorer Pauses on Lecture Tour of the South to See Atlanta.

Dr. Frederick A. Cook, of polar fame, was in Atlanta Monday, and—listen, girls—he's head over heels in love with you already, for he says so himself.

"They've simply got me," was the way the Doctor put it when seen in his room at the Hotel Aragon Monday morning.

In fact, Dr. Cook says he's fallen in love with all the Southern girls because they're so charming—and the Doctor is by no means a bad authority, for he is making a considerable tour of the Southland in the interest of what he terms a "fair play campaign" to show he discovered as much North Pole as Admiral Peary ever did.

"Southern women," said Dr. Cook, "have a little way all their own—I can't explain it, nor can I express it adequately—but it's true just the same. In other words, they form a type of woman that you don't find anywhere else on the earth.

"Atlanta is certainly no exception to his rule—in fact, I think they look even better here than elsewhere. They simply get a fellow—that's all."

The Doc Likes Atlanta.

The Doctor, who was all smiles Monday morning, did not confine his compliments to Atlanta women, however. He took occasion also to say a good word for the Capital City, which he made headquarters Monday en route to Madison, Ga., where he will deliver a lecture Monday night.

Atlanta, he says, looks good to him—looks better than any Southern city he has seen thus far, for there is a "snap here that makes things go."

Of course, being so infatuated with Atlanta, he wanted to know all about the big city. When informed that legal prohibition existed here he expressed surprise. Prohibition he believes to be a good thing, he says, although he is not a teetotaler himself, as a glass of beer "once-in-while" goes pretty well.

"Buttermilk is my favorite drink, however," said the Doctor, smiling, "for it is both nourishing and refreshing."

"But how about Mr. Bryan's grape juice program?" interrupted the reporter.

"Oh, that's going too far," replied the Doctor. "I suppose—" and this with a sly wink—"the grape juice people like it pretty well—so well that they probably will contribute a neat little sum to the next Democratic campaign fund."

Of course, Dr. Cook was still most seriously concerned with his campaign for "fair play" in the North Polar controversy, which, the Doctor says, is by no means a dead issue.

As a matter of fact, the issue is so live, according to Dr. Cook, that it is keeping him just about as busy as he ever hopes to be. In less than three years, he says, he has appeared before 3,000,000 people in America and Europe. His present tour will include Alabama, Georgia, Florida, the Carolinas, Tennessee and Oklahoma. After winding up the Southern tour, he will go to the big cities of the West and North.

"All I want is fair play," Dr. Cook repeated, "and I will get this at the hands of the middle classes of the United States, which have always been friendly to me.

"I find these good average sort of folks are either agin' you or they are for you strong; and when they are for you it means something, for the middle class is the molder of public opinion. The 'highbrows' are not in with these people, for they never take sides; they are too wrapped up in themselves and their own interests to take interest in other things."

MANILA, P. I., June 16.—In a night attack on the remaining defenses of the rebellious Moros on the Island of Jolo the American troops and their native allies, under Brigadier General John J. Pershing, U. S. A., routed the rebel Filipinos with the loss of six men killed and seven wounded.

All the American soldiers killed were scouts.

News of the engagement was received by the military authorities today in a wireless message from Jolo. The radio said the rebellious natives, after deserting their trenches, fled into the mountains, pursued by Americans and the constabulary.

Desultory fighting between the rival forces has been going on for several days. The entire casualties on the American side were 30 killed and wounded. The native loss is believed to be much heavier.

General Pershing is warm in his praise of the gallantry of the Americans.

Railroad Strike Is Result of Discharges

POTTSVILLE, PA., June 16.—Two hundred repairmen at the shops of the Reading Railway at Schuylkill Haven and a number at the repair shops at Palo Alto and St. Clair went on strike this morning on orders from officials of the International Car Workers' Association.

The strike was brought on by the discharging of several repairmen, because, as the union officials claim, they were too active in forming unions.

Darrow May Never Face a Third Trial

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—The remaining charge against Clarence Darrow, noted labor attorney, which grew out of the McNamara trial here, likely never will be heard. The case has not been entered on the court calendar.

The District Attorney's office has refused to indicate whether Darrow will be tried a third time on a charge of being party to the bribery of prospective jurors.

ASA G. CANDLER SAID

In THE AMERICAN, Yesterday:

SOUTH IN MAGNIFICENT SHAPE

"The South, when we come to consider our immediate prospects, is in absolutely magnificent shape. I know much of conditions in Georgia of my own knowledge."

Far from believing the country on the verge of hard times or anything like serious financial depression, Mr. Candler believes the horizon to be abundantly rainbowed and promising nothing but good things.

He said that if he did not feel this way about it he would not leave the U. S. for Europe to be gone two months.

And, too, we know Mr. Candler to be a man who is fearless in speech; he says exactly what he thinks; and more---he has a good think every now and then.

BEAVERS THINKS AFFIDAVIT GENUINE

Chief Searched for Gentry in Washington and Found Where Paper Was Signed.

Chief of Police James L. Beavers, just returned from Washington, said Monday that evidence was practically conclusive that George M. Gentry, the stenographer in the recent dictograph episode, did sign an affidavit that the records were padded.

The chief had attended the convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs, but had searched for Gentry, whose affidavit was attested by a Washington notary. The best detective in Washington, he said, was detailed to the hunt, but could not locate Gentry. He did, however, secure evidence that Gentry was in Washington and that the affidavit was genuine.

The signing of the affidavit, Chief Beavers said, took place in room 802 of the Westoria Building. This is the L. & N. Railroad office building, and room 802 is the private office of J. A. Ridgely, formerly of Atlanta, and a personal friend of E. O. Miles, the private detective who brought Gentry's affidavit from Washington.

W. M. J. Davis, the only man in Ridgely's office when the affidavit was signed, said that two men and a woman came in. One introduced himself as Mr. Miles, from Atlanta, Mr. Ridgely's friend. He did not state the identity of the others. Miles and his companions sent downstairs for Miss Jeannette Henning, a notary public, who came up to room 802 and attested an acknowledgment by the man who accompanied Miles to the room.

Davis afterward gave a description of the man who signed the affidavit. Miss Henning also described the man. Both descriptions, Chief Beavers said, tallied with the description of George M. Gentry.

Chief Beavers left Washington without giving instructions to continue the search for Gentry.

Deaf-Mute's Note Better Than Speech

Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor Woodward, said Monday that a Chinese puzzle was simple compared with his duty of finding out the business of people who call at the Mayor's office. The constant reply he receives is:

"I want to see the Mayor on personal business."

After explaining to a deaf-mute today that it was impossible to let anyone see the Mayor on account of the large number of callers unless he knew the nature of their business, the deaf-mute wrote:

"Wife at home. Nothing to eat."

Mr. Hammond said the mute beat all callers in telling what he wanted.

FOOD EXPERTS TO MEET.

MOBILE, ALA., June 16.—The seventeenth annual convention of the Association of American Dairy Food and Drug Officials will convene here to-night at 8 o'clock at the Battle House. Governor Emmet O'Neal, W. H. Armbrecht and Laz Schwarz will deliver welcome addresses. George L. Flanders, of New York, will respond.

No Grape Juice for Sec. Daniels: He's On the Water Wagon

BOSTON, June 16.—Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels has enrolled himself with Secretary of State Bryan, Colonel Roosevelt, Mayor Fitzgerald and others, by declaring that a so-called "soft drink" is his favorite tipple.

Bryan says grape juice, Colonel Roosevelt prefers milk, Mayor Fitzgerald dilutes his grape juice with ginger ale to add a little "tang." "But give me bottled mineral water," declared Secretary Daniels. "I wouldn't spoil my stomach with grape juice and milk makes one fat. Mineral water is refreshing, harmless and won't offend the most abstemious."

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Keith Vaudeville at Forsyth.

That the bill at the Forsyth this week will be one of the most magnetic of the season is the confidential prediction of the management, and, further, it is believed that the supply of seats for the daily matinee and night performances will never hold out against the interest that has been in evidence since the announcement that "Bud" Fisher and six sterling Keith acts would make up the program of entertainment.

The appearance of the creator of "Mutt" and "Jeff," whose daily appearance on the sport pages of The Georgian add to the interest in the paper, is a real event of the season. Fisher will offer a novelty idea completely original.

Pauline Welch (Mrs. Fisher) is on the same bill, and will be seen in her specialty. She scored one of the great hits of last season, introducing some of the song hits of the moment. The Lawn Party, as produced by ten clever young people, is a feature of the bill. The Three Leightons, in their original sketch of minstrel life; Adonis and his dog in "The Act Beautiful;" Karl Emmy's Pets, a wonderful trained animal act, and Whitefield and Ireland, in a comedy offering, make up the complete program.

"Quo Vadis" at the Grand.

A sensation so great that one of the largest theaters in New York has been unable to accommodate the crowds that are demanding seats is "Quo Vadis," the attraction at the Grand this week—matinee daily at 2:30 and night at 8:30.

"Quo Vadis" is presented by George Kleine, in connection with Cohan and Harris, and a small fortune was paid to the Societa Italiana, of Rome, Italy, for the American rights. The Cines people used eighteen months of hard work to make the production of 10,000 feet of film and the three acts and eight scenes in the sensation make up the greatest and the most wonderful photo-play the world has ever seen. Europe is alive with interest in these pictures. New York, Chicago and Philadelphia have all shown wonderful returns, and that Atlanta will quickly take its place in the line is evidenced by the advance sale that has been growing steadily since last Thursday when the box office was opened.

"The Duke of Durham" at Bijou.

Following the several musical tabloids of the last few weeks in which patrons of the Bijou have shown that this class of entertainment meets with popular approval, the announcement is made that "The Duke of Durham," probably the most expensive organization of its kind, will furnish amusement for patrons of the Bijou this week.

Lou L. Shean, the German singing comedian, heads the list of funmakers.

RAG PLAYERS WILL PROVE WHO'S WHO

Best Performers in Atlanta Will Enter Contest Against Weatherholt Player-Piano.

Who is the ragtime champion piano player of Atlanta?

That is the question that T. E. Weatherholt, president of the Weatherholt Piano Company, 72 North Broad Street, will try to solve Wednesday afternoon.

As a result of his extensive advertising recently in the interest of his player-piano club, Mr. Weatherholt has received hundreds of letters asking if his player-pianos can turn out ragtime in regulation style.

These letters have convinced Mr. Weatherholt the country is ragtime-mad. Everybody wants ragtime.

Hugh Cardoza, local theatrical wizard, said this long ago, and Mr. Weatherholt now thinks he is right. Mr. Cardoza says all that is necessary to prove this is to listen to the applause in the Forsyth after a ragtime act goes on.

Mr. Weatherholt has answered all his correspondents to the effect that a Weatherholt player-piano can turn out ragtime better than a professional, and to show folks this is true he has arranged the ragtime contest for Wednesday afternoon.

Some of the best performers on the piano have been secured, and they promise to play the best ragtime they know how to play.

The player-piano will do the same. Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor Woodward and an expert judge of ragtime, will be the judge.

Mr. Hammond has made a study of ragtime. He is one lover of classical music who likes ragtime, and he has a large assortment at his home. He is a syncopatic sharp and has a trained ear for the music which sets feet to moving and shoulders to going up and down.

USE OF CALOMEL PRACTICALLY STOPPED

For Bilious Attacks, Constipation and All Liver Troubles—Dangerous Calomel Gives Way to Dodson's Liver Tone.

Every druggist in the State has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason—Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is often dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," say druggists.

Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by all druggists who sell it. A large bottle costs 50 cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of sluggishness, you have only to ask for your money back. It will be promptly returned.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant tasting, purely vegetable remedy—harmless to both children and adults. A bottle in the house may save you a day's work or keep your children from missing school. Keep your liver working and your liver will not keep you from working.

Slays Man for $6 And Share in Still

GAINESVILLE, June 16.—Bartow Cantrell, in jail, has confessed to the murder of Arthur Hawkins, near Bellton, Hall County, two weeks ago. He claimed that his brother, James Cantrell, offered him $6 and a half interest in his still to slay Hawkins.

Mrs. Silvey Hawkins, wife of the murdered man, is in jail with her 18-month-old baby.

Roasted Town Will Sue Stage Jesters

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—The quiet and unassuming little village of Watts, near here, is so wrought up over gibes of comedians in Los Angeles theaters that it plans suit for $25,000 damages against a local theatrical company.

"Watts has been the goat long enough," said a prominent citizen. "When actors exhaust their repertoire of stereotyped jokes they single out Watts for further comedy, and we intend to be paid for it."

TENNESSEE FACES CRISIS OVER DEBT

Factional Politics Prevents Legislation to Provide for $11,458,000 Obligations Due July 1.

NASHVILLE, June 16.—Tennessee faces the possibility of defaulting on its State debt of $11,458,000 due July 1, because of partisan politics.

To-morrow brings the most important financial event of Tennessee since the settlement of the State debt that accrued from carpetbag rule, when bids on loans to refund the debt will be opened.

That the refunding act needs amending is agreed by both Democrats and Fusionists. Legislative authority is needed for the execution of short-term loans so that the big bond issue may be deferred until times get better. The opening of bids to-morrow will be the second attempt of the State to sell its securities. The first, three weeks ago, brought an offer of only $862.50 per $1,000.

TURFMAN SUFFERS FIRE LOSS.

LEXINGTON, KY., June 16.—Two new automobiles, several other vehicles and the poultry houses burned at the Idle Hour Stock Farm of E. R. Bradley, millionaire New York-Chicago turfman, here to-day. The fire started by the explosion of a gasoline tank.

Crepe de Chine Underwear at Half Price

And not just a few odd pieces, but practically every crepe de chine garment of this wonderfully fine stock!

Half price!

Indeed, such splendid news hardly gets into the papers once in a twelvemonth.

And there is no denying that right now crepe de chine underwear is in the height of Fashion's favor.

Makers have been straining every point to make deliveries---the scarcity of crepe de chine that you have heard so much of this season is in a great measure due to the unprecedented use of this fabric for underwear.

And, in face of all these facts, we come forward now with a half-price sale!

It is hard to imagine a woman who will not be interested, who will not want to share the opportunities---and what a fine time this month's brides will have!

The sale begins with the opening of the store, and although the half price extends to every crepe de chine garment in this big, well-selected stock, excepting a few white petticoats and several sets, we do not believe quantities will last long as soon as women come to see just what this opportunity is.

The price range---

$5.00 Garments are	$2.50	$10.00 Garments are	$5.00
$6.00 Garments are	$3.00	$12.00 Garments are	$6.00
$7.50 Garments are	$3.75	$15.00 Garments are	$7.50
$8.00 Garments are	$4.00	$18.00 Garments are	$9.00
$8.50 Garments are	$4.25	A $36.00 Set is	$18.00
$9.00 Garments are	$4.50	A $40.00 Set is	$20.00

Drawers, including knickerbockers, gowns, petticoats, combinations, princess slips and a few negligees. Choose from pink, light blue, yellow and white—except the petticoats—no white petticoats.

The crepe de chine is always pure silk, heavy quality. As the prices mount the trimmings become more elaborate and beautiful—dainty rosettes and bows, sheer shadow laces, rich cream eluny laces, Irish crochet laces and round thread Valenciennes. A woman would search long and far for more exquisite garments—remember they are our own fine stock!

7 PLAYGROUNDS NOW OPEN TO CHILDREN

Great Crowds Flock to Places of Recreation—Piedmont Bathing Hours Changed.

Seven of the best equipped playgrounds Atlanta has ever had were opened Monday morning for the season of 1913. This is a fewer number than heretofore, but Dan Carey, General Manager of Parks, and Joe Bean, director of playgrounds, announce that they are better equipped than playgrounds of former years.

The opening Monday was auspicious. Crowds of children gathered at the five white playgrounds, Grant Park, Mims Park, Joyner Park, English Avenue and Pine Hill playgrounds. Two negro playgrounds are maintained, one at Stoor's School yard and another at Gray's School yard.

The playgrounds will be open every day in the week from 8:30 to 11:30 o'clock in the morning and from 3:30 to 6:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

In connection with the playground work Mr. Carey announced that the bathing hours at Piedmont Park lake had been changed. Hereafter no one will be admitted into the lake from 11 o'clock in the morning until 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

Mr. Carey said that between these hours it was too hot to go into the lake.

Wife Asks Alimony of Count deGratresse

NEW YORK, June 16.—Countess Marie DeGratresse, wife of Count Joseph Gratresse, a civil engineer, has applied to Supreme Court Justice Giegerich to reopen her divorce case and grant her alimony.

The attorney for the Countess informed Justice Giegerich that the litigants may have been in collusion in agreeing upon $15 a week payments to the Countess. The Count's lawyer denied any collusion.

The Count has an alienation suit against Leon J. Garcey, 261 Fifth Avenue, whom he charges with supplying money for the Countess' divorce proceedings. Garcey denies.

Rothschilds Push Oil War on Standard

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—Another battle was on between the Rothschilds of England and the Standard Oil Company to-day in California, following the arrival of the Dutch tank steamer Kessler from Sumatra, carrying 3,000,000 gallons of gasoline. The Rothschilds sent to the United States the best grade of gasoline obtainable in the Orient.

This shipment, it was announced, is the first of many to be used in breaking the hold of the Standard Oil Company on the Pacific Coast.

"Petticoat Cops" Will Watch Newport Swim

NEWPORT, R. I., June 16.—Two policewomen have been placed on duty at the beach here by the Civic League. Their uniform consists of a blue blouse with brass buttons, a blue skirt and a sailor straw hat.

They will patrol the beach all summer and give especial attention to women in need of aid.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS OUT FOR RECORD

Twenty Working to Make Next Sunday's Attendance Biggest. Picnics This Week.

Twenty Sunday schools began Monday a campaign to smash all attendance records next Sunday and make the average increase for the year more than 100 members for each school.

The total attendance Sunday in the schools in the exchange agreement was 6,680, or an average of 334 for each school. The figure for the same schools last year was 5,057, an average of 252.

Two large picnics are planned for this week, the joint outing of the Second Baptist and First Christian Sunday schools, Tuesday afternoon and evening at Grant Park.

Following are the attendance figures Sunday:

Turks Fear Plot to Replace Abdul Hamid

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 16.—Commanders of the international fleet of warships in the Golden Horn have given notice to the Government they will protect the city if there is an uprising. Many more arrests were made to-day in connection with the assassination of Grand Vizier Mahmud Shevket Pasha.

Young Turk advisers profess to scent a plot on the part of the reactionaries to put Abdul Hamid back on the throne. A guard is maintained over the son of Kaimil Pasha, former Grand Vizier, who was arrested Sunday.

Tight Money Hits Egg And Butter Traders

NEW YORK, June 16.—Money stringency is having its effect upon the stores of butter and eggs. Holdings of eggs in New York City now are short 350,000 cases, of 30 dozen to the case, of what they were a year ago. Last year the limit advanced on eggs was $5.50 per case, and this year it is $4.50. Receivers have trouble in getting this.

The scarcity of money is being felt more in butter than in egg channels. Last year $15 was advanced per tub, while this year the banks are trying to hold down to $12.

Mrs. Hearst Gives Idols to Museum

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—An excellent collection of Hopi Indian idols was presented to the University of California anthropological museum at the Affiliated Colleges by Mrs. Phoebe A. Hearst.

Assistant Curator Gifford delivered a lecture on the Indian tepee, illuminating his topic by lantern slides, before a large audience.

DAY AT UNIVERSITY FOR 'UNDERGRADS'

Branch Colleges Represented at Athens on Monday—Alumni Reunions on Tuesday.

ATHENS, GA., June 16.—Following the largely attended baccalaureate exercises yesterday, when the commencement sermon was delivered by Dr. W. N. Ainsworth, of Macon, the undergraduate exercises of the University of Georgia were held in the chapel this morning. Speakers from the university departments in Athens, Atlanta, Augusta, Dahlonega and Milledgeville participated.

The trustees to-day advanced Instructor R. C. Wilson to assistant professor of pharmacy. Professors W. O. Payne and S. M. Sallyer were each granted a year's leave of absence. A petition from students to permit a dance in the alumni hall was not granted. The branch colleges were requested to mail copies of all publications as soon as published to the general board of trustees. The Law School was given additional space, taking the rooms formerly occupied by Professor John E. Morris, who will use the class rooms vacated by Professor T. J. Woofter, removed to the new Peabody Hall. Professor Woofter was granted a leave of absence in 1914-15. A recommendation that the sophomore declamation be discontinued was disapproved.

This afternoon the military department's prize drill takes place on Sanford Field and the appointment of cadet officers for next year. Two new flags will be presented to the university and received by Misses Helen Baxter, of Omaha, and Florence Hooper, of Athens, who will be attended by Misses Mary Arthur and Laura Cobb Hutchens.

To-night the annual champion debate between Demosthenian and Phi Kappa societies will take place, when four forensic juniors will argue whether or not the Philippines should be given their independence.

British Polo Players To Challenge Again

NEW YORK, June 16.—It was expected the Duke of Westminster, foremost exponent of polo in England, soon will send a challenge to the victorious Americans for another international polo match, to be played either next year or in 1915. The vanquished British console themselves because of the close score. Last Tuesday it was 5 1-2 goals to 3 and Saturday, 4 1-2 to 4 1-4.

A farewell dinner will be given to the Englishmen to-night. They expect to sail for England this week.

English Denounce Umpire.

LONDON, June 16.—English sportsmen are denouncing the umpire who decided a foul against the British polo players in their game Saturday against the American team. They claim the action of the referee was "unjustifiable" and "a miserable misfortune" and that the umpire had no right to halt the game.

Queen of Belgians Is in Sanitarium

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MONTRAUX, SWITZERLAND, June 16.—The Queen of the Belgians has been severely ill at Dr. Widmer's Sanitarium here two weeks. It is expected to be some time before she will be able to leave and she has canceled her engagements for the fetes at Ghent and other places which begin June 22.

American Colony in Palestine Prospers

BOSTON, June 16.—Jesse A. Yantis, representative of the American colony in Palestine, is here studying several classes of machinery which he hopes to introduce in Jerusalem.

This colony of Americans removed to Jerusalem in order that they might live as they believe the Saviour would if He were on earth to-day.

Woman Made Forest Rider in California

"Blue Tag" Furniture Sale

True to the Best Traditions of Any That Have Gone Before

A Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. "Blue Tag" Furniture Sale!

To Atlantans who recall the fine economies of "The Blue Tag" sales the mere announcement that here now is another would doubtless be sufficient to hurry them to the store-filled with the confidence that this is their opportunity to buy furniture to greatest advantage.

But this "Blue Tag" sale is planned to outdo all others!

Yes, to outdo ALL others. It has not been an easy task to prepare such a sale; the records and traditions of the others mark them as trade triumphs---as classics in the furniture business; but the guiding spirit of progress whispers that this one shall begin where the others left off and become a monumental merchandise movement only after it eclipses its predecessors.

And so have the preparations gone forward!

Judge for yourself the possibilities it offers you.

Here is the South's greatest furniture stock.

Every piece of it was chosen after careful, very careful examination, as the best of its kind for regular selling.

It is worthy furniture, right furniture, built to last year on year.

And Right Now

Every piece of furniture, excepting summer furniture, and several makes the prices of which we have contracted to maintain, in this, the South's greatest stock, is offered at a substantial reduction from its regular price; in fact, substantial reduction hardly expresses the vigorous price reductions you will find here.

And this in face of the fact that right now furniture prices are climbing to higher levels.

So whether it be---

Bedroom==Including Brass Beds==Dining Room or Living Room Furniture

Or all of these that you need---and in this month of brides and of new home-making there are many who will want furnishings for entire homes---now is the big opportunity. The tremendous varieties here mean that you may select to a nicety just the furniture you would have in your home. The tremendous reductions mean that you may save as you had never expected.

So come to-morrow. You will find the Blue Tags on everything; they tell their own story and it is an interesting story of fine savings.

Period Furniture

It is worthy of particular note in this noteworthy event that, although every little separate chair, rocker, desk, table, chiffonier, and the like in stock (with those exceptions already noted) is included, some of the healthiest reductions have been made on the rich and true sets of Period Furniture and reproductions of antique pieces--Sheraton, Jacobean, William and Mary, Chippendale and others. Sets for bedroom, dining room and living room.

STATE POLITICAL POT BOILS AT KIMBALL

Candidates for House Speaker and Senate President Open Headquarters.

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

The Kimball House lobby, where for years and years Georgia politicians most have congregated, and which still seems to be the undisputed Mecca of Cracker statesmen, real and near, already has assumed that busy and more or less agitated appearance so unmistakably prophetic of the annual getting together of the Legislature.

Headquarters have been opened for two speakership candidates, two presidency of the Senate candidates, and at least one new county, Candler.

Within the next day or so other headquarters will be opened, and other fights inaugurated. The clans unmistakably are gathering for the fray, and the forthcoming session bids fair to be one of great interest and far-reaching consequence.

The first new county proposition to get busy on the job is, as aforesaid, Candler. The boosters of this proposition say they have their contest well in hand, and they unquestionably expect to win.

This new county is to be made up of slices of Bulloch, Tattnall and Emanuel, all three large counties, and there is little, if any, opposition in the territory affected.

Metter, a hustling town of around 4,000, is to be the county seat of Candler. It is located in the western part of Bulloch, but is so near the line of the other counties that it is practically situated at the "corners" of the three, as is Winder, in the proposed new county of Barrow.

Every newspaper but one in the section concerned in the new county of Candler is favorable to the proposition, and the boomers of the game claim that they already have pledged more than sufficient votes to put their proposition over.

Outside the contests for the speakership and the presidency of the Senate, one hears more of these two new county proposals than anything else nowadays, and both of them—Barrow and Candler—look good to go through.

The contests between Senators John T. Allen, of the Twentieth, and Randolph Anderson, of the First, as to which shall be chosen President of the Senate, unquestionably is very much "up in the air."

Both men express themselves as being entirely confident, and both show figures to prove their respective claims. Moreover, both seem to be in dead earnest in stating their positions.

The average member of the new Legislature, however, seems to be very much "from Missouri" with respect to that race. The impression is that it yet is any man's race. Both Allen and Anderson are working hard and leaving no stone unturned to win out.

The Allen men are saying that Anderson will retire before the "showdown," but as the Anderson men are saying the same thing concerning Allen, how can one tell?

It looks as if a "showdown" of strength on the floor of the Senate, after Secretary Northen calls it to order, will be the only thing that will tell the tale accurately and to stay put.

One hears much in the hotel lobbies nowadays of tax reform.

There seems little doubt that it will be the paramount consideration of the new General Assembly.

It generally is agreed that the State can not travel much farther without more revenue, and to raise the tax rate is out of the question. Politically, the Legislature feels that it would be committing suicide to attempt to get the tax rate up, after any sort of fashion.

The only way to get additional revenue, therefore, is to raise the assessments and returns in such wise that the total amount against which the tax rate operates may be as nearly as possible 50 per cent higher than now.

This is a large problem, and will require the very best and most statesmanlike minds of the Legislature to work out. Whatever bill is framed along this line will arise in the House, of course, and it will be carefully designed to work as equitably as it may to all parties concerned.

The problem of taxation is one of the most delicate, as well as important, that the Legislature has to handle, and it is more acute this year than it has been in a quarter of a century.

Parties interested in heron production in Glynn County, particularly growers of the egret variety, are greatly interested in the news from Washington to the effect that the Department of Agriculture will undertake to develop a rooster of plumage suitable for substitution for that of the egret, now used so extensively in the aigrette millinery trade.

The largest colony of egrets in the world is located in Glynn County, and a great many people are extensively interested in the trade.

For many years, the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and the Audubon Society have protested against the taking of the nuptial plumage from the egrets for millinery purposes. The taking of the plumage almost invariably means the death of the mother bird, and the consequent starvation of her young in the nest. The aigrette plumage is to be had of the egret herons only while the mother's brood is very young.

"This proposition looks more or less like a suffragette movement," said a well-known legislator, discussing the matter of the rooster's plumage to-day, "but it looks fair and square, nevertheless. That's the reason I am for it. We should protect the egrets, or pretty soon there will be none left in Georgia.

"Let the national department proceed. I would not object to egrets fashioned from roosters' tails—if the women folks like them as well, far be it from me to put in a word for the roosters."

In addition to the pupils, Miss Nellie Landrum gave two vocal numbers. She was accompanied by Miss Miriam Landrum, piano, and Mr. Ralph Landrum, violin. Mr. William Terrell gave two selection on violin, accompanied on piano by Miss Victoria Ray.

Galloway-Brown.

Mrs. Walter G. Brown announces the marriage of her daughter, Mabel Claire, to Mr. Charles Galloway Thursday, June 19.

The marriage will be quietly observed at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. R. O. Walker, 717 Edgewood Avenue, Inman Park.

For Miss Abernathy.

Miss Grace Abernathy, a bride-elect, was honor guest at a domino luncheon Friday morning at Mrs. Charles A. Forrest's home in Gordon Street. The reception rooms were decorated with daisies and gladiolli.

At the luncheon which followed the game a color scheme of yellow and white was carried out in detail. The guest of honor was given a silver-mounted hat brush. The guests were:

Misses Maude Daniels, Julia Purser, Allie Purser, Lucile Quinn, Mrs. N. T. Pool, Mrs. R. H. Dobbs, Mrs. Rush Irwin, Miss Lucile Daniels, Mrs. Marion Hardwick, Mrs. James Markley and her guest, Miss Greer; Mrs. R. M. Hopkins, Miss Mildred Hardy, Miss Nora Goodman, Miss Daisy Smith, Mrs. W. A. Hartman, Mrs. R. H. Caldwell, Mrs. Benjamin J. Burton, of Lavonia, Ga., and Mrs. L. A. Tiller.

For Miss Baker.

Miss Laurian Johnson will entertain 25 young girls at tea Tuesday afternoon in honor of her guest, Miss Elizabeth Baker, of Macon.

Atlanta Girls in Athens.

A large number of Atlanta's younger set is in attendance on the University commencement in Athens this week. Misses Jane and Kate Cooper are guests of Miss Eugenia Ivey. Misses Virginia Lipscomb and Bertha Moore, accompanied by Mrs. Rutherford Lipscomb, motored to Athens Sunday. Miss Lipscomb will be with Mrs. M. A. Lipscomb, and Miss Moore with Mrs. W. D. Hooper.

Miss Mary Rice is the guest of Mrs. John W. Morton. Miss Helen McCarty is with Miss Florence Hooper. Miss Wyckliffe Wurm is at the Georgian. Miss Van McKinnon is at the Georgian, chaperoned by Mrs. William McCarty. Miss Josephine Mobley, chaperoned by her mother, Mrs. J. R. Mobley, is at the Georgian.

Misses Adgate Ellis, Cora McCord Brown, Ruth Reid and Mary Murphy are other Atlanta girls who are to be guests at the many commencement festivities in Athens this week.

Misses Elizabeth Dunson and Eloise Gay are also there. Mrs. Edwin P. Ansley is chaperoning Miss Mamie Ansley at the Georgian, and Mrs. Arnold Broyles accompanied her daughter, Miss Louise Broyles, to attend the commencement gayeties and to witness the graduation of Mr. Edwin Broyles.

Astor Buys London Paper For $1,250,000

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 16.—William Waldorf Astor, expatriated American, has purchased The Morning Post, long regarded as the society organ and sought after by several prominent newspaper publishers. The price paid is said to have been $1,250,000.

Mr. Astor is already the owner of The Pall Mall Gazette, an afternoon paper, and The Observer, a Sunday publication.

Mr. Astor has been trying for a considerable time to secure a morning newspaper to aid him in reaching the peerage.

Newspaper men here say Astor now controls the three most influential political journals in the United Kingdom.

NEW PRIZES WIN FAVOR IN CONTEST

Georgian Gives Tips to Hustlers in Race for Extra Ponies and Watches.

TIPS TO CONTESTANTS.

The hustler always finds favor with his friends.

Someone will tell you that you can't win. Get the laugh on him.

Wanting to win and hustling to win are two different things.

Rumors about what others are doing will not get you votes.

Lack of hustle is "the pace that kills."

Two ponies for every district and two watches for every race—these are the prizes now in The Georgian and American contest.

The first prizes remain the same—pony outfits, "ready to drive away." Second prizes are ponies with saddles. Third and fourth prizes are the watches.

From now on there is no excuse for dallying.

If you can not win a first prize, there is a second prize almost as valuable, and if you fail for a pony, try for a watch as consolation.

No offer like this ever has been made before by an Atlanta paper. The rewards are enough to stimulate the enthusiasm of the most lethargic boy or girl.

There should be an immediate speeding up, particularly as there is a special offer which may expire any day—50,000 extra votes for the first $30 turned in for subscriptions. Another special offer of extra votes in telling quantities for every club of five expires July 5.

It is time to "get busy." Let your competitors see every Wednesday and Sunday that you are in the race in earnest.

World Move to Stop Frauds in Medicine

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., June 16.—That the "patent medicine" business and quackery has become so serious and widespread that a world-wide effort is being made to curtail it was the report of a committee at the sixty-fourth annual session of the American Medical Association, which opened to-day.

The membership of the association last year increased from 34,283 to 37,913, while the membership of the fifty-two constituent State associations during the year grew from 70,021 to 70,538.

COLLEGE MEN WASH DISHES.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—Of the 700 members of the San Francisco Dish Washers' Union, 100 are college graduates. This is a greater proportion of college men than can be found in any other labor organization.

The Joy of Coming Motherhood

A Wonderful Remedy That is a Natural Aid and Relieves the Tension.

Mother's Friend, a famous external remedy, is the only one known that is able to reach all the different parts involved. It is a penetrating application after the formula of a noted family doctor, and lubricates every muscle, nerve, tissue or tendon affected. It goes directly to the strained portions and gently but surely relieves all tendency to soreness or strain.

By its daily use there will be no pain, no distress, no nausea, no danger of laceration or other accident, and the period will be one of supreme comfort and joyful anticipation.

To all young women Mother's Friend is one of the greatest of all helpful influences, for it robs childbirth of all its agonies and dangers, dispels all the doubt and dread, all sense of fear, and thus enables the mind and body to await the greatest event in a woman's life with untrammeled gladness.

Mother's Friend is a most cherished remedy in thousands of homes, and is of such peculiar merit and value as to make it essentially one to be recommended by all women.

You will find it on sale at all drug stores at $1 a bottle, or the druggist will gladly get it for you if you insist upon it. Mother's Friend is prepared only by the Bradfield Regulator Company, 137 Lamar Building, Atlanta, Ga., who will send you by mail, sealed, a very instructive book to expectant mothers. Write for it to-day.

"September Morn" Bathing Suits Are Barred in Denver

DENVER, COL., June 16.—A skirt, bloomers and a waist that comes close to the neck is the official bathing suit of Denver, under the commission form of government, as tentatively designed by Otto F. Thum, commissioner of property and therefore in charge of the park department, incidentally all the city beaches.

"I certainly believe it is not right for a woman to appear at a public bathing place clad only in tights," he said. "She hasn't on sufficient clothing then to be decent in her own bed room."

Men, Hatless, to Bear Parasols in Berlin

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 16.—Dress reform leagues in Berlin, Dresden, Bonn and other German towns have decreed that for the summer men shall go hatless and protect their heads with parasols. They have also decided men must not wear coats, substituting blouses cut after the fashion of a schoolboy's garment.

LABOR PARADE TO ECLIPSE ALL PAST

The Atlanta Federation of Labor is planning the greatest Labor Day parade Atlanta has ever known. At a meeting Sunday afternoon, attended by representatives from every union in the city, it was decided to make this year's showing the greatest ever.

Ex-presidents and ex-delegates to the American Federation of Labor, executive officers of the Atlanta Federation and State Federation and Rev. Schaeffer, of the Evangelical Association, were added to the committee.

G. A. R. Is Ordered To Chattanooga

BRIDGEPORT, CONN., June 16.—General orders for the forty-seventh national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic at Chattanooga, Tenn., September 15 to 20, were issued by Commander-in-Chief Alfred B. Beers.

The fact is emphasized that a national encampment has never before been held so far south, and all veterans are urged to take this opportunity to visit the historic battlefields of Missionary Ridge, Lookout Mountain, Chickamauga and from Chattanooga to Atlanta.

Attention is directed to the Gettysburg reunion, the first day of which, July 1, will be veterans' day, under the direction of the commander-in-chief of the G. A. R.

Millionaire at 86 Weds for 4th Time

NEW BEDFORD, MASS., June 16. David A. Snell, millionaire cracker manufacturer, who is 86 years old, has just been married for the fourth time.

The present Mrs. Snell was Mrs. Janet Hamilton, of Boston, who for some time has acted as Mr. Snell's housekeeper. She is 33 years his junior.

ATLANTA BEATS EAST FOR TRADE

"Atlanta is the most cheerful spot on the map," says W. S. Lounsbury, vice president of the Travelers' Bank and Trust Company, just returned from a trip which included visits to Baltimore, Washington, Philadelphia, New York, Boston, New Haven and small towns in the States of New York and New Jersey.

"I made it my business to call on the bankers in all the Eastern cities. It is a relief to get out of the atmosphere of the North and East back into the realm of confidence," he says.

"Atlanta is to be congratulated on being in the best shape of any city east of Chicago. Business is splendid here, compared to the East. Part of it, indeed, is at the expense of the East.

"One of the loudest wails I heard was from Baltimore. Atlanta jobbers are cutting deeply into Baltimore's trade, particularly in the Carolinas, and, to make it a little more painful to the Maryland dealers, the trade which is coming to Atlanta is the 'cream.'

"The trouble in the North is that the loans are based largely on Wall Street securities, instead of on the crops, as here. Consequently, Atlanta, looking to the fields for news, gets cheerful tidings, while the East, looking at Wall Street, is depressed."

Recovered From Severe Lung Trouble

Plenty of fresh air and good food are necessary to persons suffering from lung trouble, but something more is needed to bring about full health. Eckman's Alterative is a medicine for throat and lung troubles, and so many reports have been received showing that it brought about good results in a number of cases which were declared hopeless, that all sufferers who are not benefiting otherwise should at least investigate what it has done for others. Investigate this case:

Madison Lake, Minn.

"Gentlemen: In December, 1908, March, 1909, and September, 1909, I was taken with hemorrhages of the lungs which confined me several weeks, each time to my bed. My doctor advised me to go West.

"In November I started for Denver, Colo. After my arrival I met Michael Brody, who upon learning of my condition, urged me to take Eckman's Alterative. In about two months I began to feel better. I kept on taking the medicine and improved fast. In March, 1910, I returned home. I think I am entirely well, have a good appetite and sleep well. When I left Denver my weight was 130 pounds. I now weight 165, my normal weight. I thank God and your Alterative for my health."

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most effectious in cases of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all Jacobs' drug stores and other leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

Nearly everybody in Atlanta reads The Sunday American. YOUR advertisement in the next issue will sell goods. Try it!

The Social World

The tennis tourney for the State championship, which is on at the Driving Club this week, will attract large crowds to witness the games, and, of course, the inevitable dancing will follow. The popular club will be the scene of much informal entertaining during the week.

Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, has won the championship twice, and defends it in the present tournament. E. V. Carter, Jr., and E. S. Mansfield hold the championship in doubles. A number of expert women players are to take part in the mixed doubles.

The Sunday assemblage at the Capital City Country Club was a large and representative one. Swimming was a favorite mode of recreation for the men, although only a few women braved the waters, for some reason or other. An informal air hovers over the charming Country Club, which will be fostered.

The large attendance at the week-end dinner dance of the Driving Club and the informal dance at East Lake shows that the summer exodus for Atlanta society has hardly begun.

For Mrs. Ingersoll.

Mrs. Mell Wilkinson entertained informally at luncheon at the Piedmont Driving Club Monday, in honor of Mrs. Royal Ingersoll, other guests including Mrs. J. M. VanHarlingen, Mrs. W. D. Smith, Mrs. VanWinkle Wilkerson and Mrs. Edward VanElnkle.

For Miss Francis.

Mrs. Bertram Norris entertained at a box party at the Forsyth Monday afternoon for Miss Martha Francis, a bride-elect.

Copeland-Miller.

A wedding of interest throughout Georgia and Alabama was that on June 11 of Miss Mamie Miller, of Fort Valley, Ga., to Dr. Henry Moss Copeland, of Atlanta, at the Methodist Episcopal Church of Fort Valley.

Bridesmaids were Misses Bessie Smith, Atlanta; Carol Dean, Gainesville; Telete Scott, Canton; Janie Culpepper, Fort Valley. They were gowned in white meteor crepe with pointed trains and carried white sweetpeas. Groomsmen were Dr. Richard R. Daly and Mr. F. L. Wilson, of Atlanta, and Mr. William Wright, of Fort Valley.

Mesdames W. F. Miller and H. C. Neil were matrons of honor, the first in white crepe de chine and duchess lace. Mrs. Neil wore her wedding gown of charmeuse satin and duchess lace. Both carried white sweetpeas. Flower girls were Marjorie Brown and Margaret McMillan. Mr. Seth Copeland was best man.

The bride wore a gown of crepe sylvia, draped with princess and rose point lace, made with a court train. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and valley lilies. Her veil was of lace, arranged from a Dutch cap and caught with orange blossoms.

A reception was given at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Osborne Miller.

Dr. and Mrs. Copeland will spend their honeymoon in the mountains of North Carolina.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Greenfield, Mrs. M. C. Hardin, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Lanier, Judge and Mrs. John R. Wilkinson, of Atlanta.

Morris-Huie.

Mrs. Robert S. Huie announces the engagement of her daughter, Alice Mae, to Mr. Robert Ernest Morris, of Atlanta. The wedding will take place at the home of the bride, near Philadelphia Church, Clayton County, Thursday evening, June 19, at 8:30 o'clock.

For Miss Graves.

Mrs. Rix Stafford will entertain a few members of the schoolgirl set informally at bridge Thursday in honor of Miss LaGrange Katherine Graves, of Rome, a guest of Miss Louise Couper.

Memorial Association to Meet.

The Uncle Remus Memorial Association will hold a meeting Tuesday at 10:30 o'clock in the assembly room of Carnegie Library.

For Miss Hughes.

In honor of Miss Mary Hughes, whose wedding to Mr. Ernest Osborne will take place Wednesday evening, there has been a series of parties.

Tuesday afternoon Miss Ollie May Osborne gave a reception. Thursday Miss Mae Richardson was hostess at luncheon and the same afternoon Miss Florence Dugger entertained the wedding party at the matinee. Mrs. Joseph Paulson invited twelve girls to meet Miss Hughes at bridge Friday afternoon and Saturday afternoon Misses Wilt entertained at tea for her.

The Wilt home was decorated with pink sweetpeas, a mound of these flowers adorning the tea table.

Assisting in entertaining were Misses Ollie May Osborne, Lucy Windsor, Sarah Randall, Alma Downing, Kathleen Simpson, Jan Robinson, Emma and Rusha Wesley and Mrs. R. W. Wilt.

Miss Mamie Wilt wore pink chiffon with wreaths of pink rosebuds. Miss Etter Wilt was in white silk marquisette. Miss Hughes wore pink crepe embroidered in pink. Mrs. Wilt wore black lace with a corsage of sweetpeas and lilies of the valley.

About 150 guests were present.

For Miss Arnold.

A heart dice party, at which Mrs. Charles A. Forrest entertained Friday afternoon at her home on Gordon Street, was for her young niece, Mary Ella Arnold. A profusion of daisies and gladioli formed the decoration of the attractive reception rooms, where the six tables were placed.

Trophies for top score and consolation were a dainty white fan, won by Virginia Collier, and a silver vanity box, cut by Elizabeth Wheeler. Guest of honor was presented with silk stockings. Punch was served by Martha Irwin and Elizabeth Merrideth. Guests were: Fay Spink, Marjorie Kurfees, Eva Stewart, Mary Nichols, Marie Colcord, Sara Colcord, Frances Stokes, Mary Brittain, Maude Foster, Lucile Price, Caroline Vickers, Kathryn Vickers, Catherine Hackett, Lois Verner, Annabeth Smith, Margaret White, Grace Cook, Marie Lester, Elizabeth Wheeler, Lucile Trimble, Cecil Trimble, Mary Tiller, Elizabeth Cofield, Helene Stewart and Virginia Collier.

For Miss Pearl Mobley.

Mrs. Edward L. Humphreys was hostess at a linen shower Thursday afternoon for Miss Pearl Mobley, a bride-elect.

In a game of heart-dice Miss Bernice Scott won a fan for top score, Miss Lillian Brooks received a picture as consolation, and Miss Mobley was presented with a hand-embroidered collar.

The apartment was decorated with daisies and ferns.

Those invited to meet Miss Mobley were Misses Lillian Brooks, Bernice Scott, Bernice Denton, Frances Lazear, Celia Hiers, Curd. Dora Hiers, Mrs. E. M. Redwine, Mrs. Max Epstein, Mrs. M. H. Chandler, Mrs. A. T. Vandiver and Mrs. William L. Scott.

Mrs. Max Epstein gave a box party at the Forsyth Saturday afternoon for Miss Mobley. Guests were Misses Lillian Brooks, Dora Hiers, Frances Lazear, Mrs. Edward L. Humphreys, Mrs. E. M. Redwine, Mrs. Joseph Lazear and Mrs. Sara Lazear.

Child's Birthday Party.

A birthday party was given for Frederick Lindley Beers, Jr. Pink sweetpeas were used as decorations. The pink birthday cake with its one candle, surrounded by pink sweetpeas, formed the centerpiece of the table. Pink ices and cakes were served, and at each place a tiny baby basket of pink mints decorated with sweetpeas was given as a favor.

Those invited were Misses Margaret Hood Bobbin Dennis, Elizabeth Carlton, Mary Ruth Wight, Mary Stillman, Sarah Stillman, Georgia Drysdale, Linda Cox, Masters Robert Carlton, Allison Adams, William Palmour, Colquitt Carter, Jr.

Piano Recital.

Pupils of Mrs. Lillian Woodberry Johnson gave a piano recital at the music studio. Program numbers showed a wide range of style and selection. Mrs. Johnson received hearty congratulations.

Those taking part in the recital were Misses Margaret Snow, Sarah Snow, Leone Spinks, Louise Granade, Sarah Smith, Lillian Connor, Cecil Garrett, Jessie Lea Davenport, Josephine Smith, Maud Goodwin, Edith London, Annie Rose Kenimer, Mary Kenimer, Ruth Walker, Montine Jones, Mattie Lou Crenshaw, Florence Green, Lucile Little, Bessie Sorrow, Grace Davis, Lucy Swann, Minnie Pickler, Carrie Lee Featherstone.

Wedding Plans Changed.

Mr. and Mrs. David Patman Daniell announce a change in the plans of the marriage of their daughter, Vera Belle, to Mr. Homer Leon Wilson. The wedding will take place at Collins' Memorial Church, Bolton, Ga., at 6 p. m., June 19. It was previously planned at the home of the bride's parents in Bolton.

For Miss Daniell.

Misses Claudia and Bertha Hudson entertained with a shower for Miss Vera Daniell, a June bride-elect. Sweetpeas decorated the living and reception rooms. The prize was won by Miss Emmee Branham. The bride was presented with silk hose.

Those present were Miss Vera Daniell, Miss Grace Bell, Miss Ruth Gable, Miss Margaret Berge, Miss Montine Byrd, Misses Lucy and Susie Johnson, Misses Mary and Bertha Heins, Miss Ethel Rutherford, Misses Elizabeth and Frances Walker, Mrs. Lamar Ray, Misses Clara and Milly Loughry, Mrs. Gordon Stowers, Miss Nettie Summerlin, Miss Reggie Sue Daniell, Miss Lilly Mae Adams, Misses Cassie and Annie Lou Hunter, Miss Emmee Branham, Miss Fae Bancroft and Miss Pearl Gary.

Miss Richardson's Recital.

A piano recital was given by Miss Kate Richardson Friday evening. Miss Richardson is a graduate of Miss Evelyn Jackson's school of music. She will receive her diploma at the closing recital Tuesday evening. Her program follows:

Sonata in C sharp minor, Beethoven.

(a) Nocturne, Op. 27, No. 2, Chopin; (b) Prelude in D, Chopin; (c) "On the Mountains," Grieg.

Polonaise, Moszkowski.

(a) Gondolerie, Liszt; (b) Nachstucke, Schumann; (c) Silver Spring, Mason.

Rhapsodie, No. 2, Liszt.

Rondo, Chopin.

Owens-Hall.

The initial social event of the week and one in which is centered the interest of a host of friends will be the marriage of Miss Charles Owens and Mr. Edward Buckinham Hall, of Morristown, N. J., Monday evening at 8:30 o'clock.

On account of illness in the bride's family the invitations to the church ceremony have been recalled and the ceremony will take place instead at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Owens, on Eleventh Street, in the presence of relatives and a few close friends.

A number of out-of-town guests will attend the wedding, among them the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Hall, of Morristown, N. J., and New York.

For Miss Buckner.

Miss Helen Jones will give a reception Tuesday afternoon, June 24, for her guest, Miss Margaret Buckner, of Roanoke, Va.

Miss Margaret Northen will entertain several young people at Highland Farm, the country place of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Northen, one afternoon this week for Miss Buckner.

Society to See Tribble Wedding

Atlantans to Go in Special Car

Miss Ruth Tribble, of Athens.

Prominent People From Throughout State to Witness Ceremony at Bride's Home June 19.

Atlanta society people are preparing to attend the wedding of Miss Ruth Tribble to Samuel Dick, of Atlanta, at the bride's home in Athens June 19. A large party will travel in a private car to Athens. A great throng of persons prominent in society from over the State will attend the wedding.

Miss Tribble is the daughter of Congressman Tribble. The wedding will be one of the most notable June marriages in Georgia. Both Miss Tribble and Mr. Dick are unusually prominent in society.

The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. E. L. Hill, assisted by Dr. J. W. Lynch, of the First Baptist Church.

Mrs. S. J. Tribble, the mother of the bride, will be the matron of honor. Miss Callie Hoke Smith, of Washington, D. C., will be maid of honor.

The bridesmaids will be Miss Jane Thrall, of Williamsport, Pa.; Miss Ruth Barren, of Philadelphia, Pa., and Miss Martha Phinizy, of Athens.

Mr. Dick will be attended by his brother, Mr. Jackson Dick, as best man.

U. S. Officials Inspect Pensacola Navy Yard

PENSACOLA, FLA., June 16.—Admiral John R. Edwards, U. S. N.; Captain George Evans, naval constructor; W. G. DuBose, civil engineer, and A. L. Parsons, of the Survey Board, are here to-day inspecting the Pensacola navy yard.

After inspecting other Southern yards, they will make recommendations to Secretary of the Navy Daniels.

The future of this yard is dependent upon to-day's inspection.

JUAREZ IS REINFORCED.

EL PASO, June 16.—Three hundred men under General Salazar and Colonel Porelli to-day joined the Federal garrison at Juarez. The arrival of the troops to reinforce the Huerta troops quartered there relieved the fear that 1,200 rebels encamped 30 miles from the city would attack it.

A Good Clean Show at the Dutch Mill.

The Dutch Mill is one of the cleanest and best playhouses in Atlanta, with the most beautiful movies, projected on a radium gold screen, producing a soft, pleasing effect that does not injure the eye.

And there is Mae Reilly and the Dutch Mill Stock Company—real beauties, real entertainers and really clean comedy. Enjoy yourself at the Dutch Mill.

Farmer's Wife Ends Life With a Pistol

VALDOSTA, June 16.—Mrs. Sallie Newsome, wife of a farmer living in the southern part of Lowndes County, committed suicide by shooting herself through the head with a pistol. There were no eyewitnesses. Coroner Solomon has gone to the scene to make an investigation.

The woman's husband and young children heard the shot and, rushing into the room, found her lying dead across the bed. It is rumored that Mrs. Newsome's married life was not happy.

Ship Limps on, Side Patched With Canvas

DULUTH, MINN., June 16.—T steamer Jesse Spaulding was afloat to-day and laboring toward Duluth a section of canvas covering a large hole in her side. The Spaulding collided with the William M. Snyder, Jr., in Lake Superior yesterday, and, after flying distress signals, disappeared in a fog.

It was feared that she had gone down with her crew of sixteen.

"September Morn"

HAND-PAINTED water color photogravures of Paul Chabas' nude painting, "September Morn," fill one window of the Cole Book Company, and instead of harsh criticism excited only pity, which was due to the fact that the manager of the store took occasion to select about the coldest June day in the history of the city's weather for this art exhibition.

The original painting excited no end of comment when brought to this country for exhibition purposes. It was first placed in one of the windows of a Fifth Avenue art gallery, and was promptly spied by one of Anthony Comstock's agents, who demanded that it be taken out or he would go to the courts. Afterward Comstock himself decided the picture was nothing to shock anyone, according to newspaper accounts at the time, and agreed with the manager of the art gallery that it was artistic.

The picture was sent from one large city in the East to the other and caused more comment than any painting in years. It is now in one of the big European art galleries.

The figure is that of a young blonde-haired girl, who is about to take her bath, and is said to be the same model as the figure in "Twilight" by the same artist. "September Morn" was exhibited in the last Paris salon, and received high praise from the artists in the Parisian capital.

The cut represents only the figure, which occupies a small part of the picture. Just bare outlines of mountains are seen in the distance, which rise from the water through a misty haze. The coloring is most delicate. The reproductions in the Whitehall Street store are two different sizes.

Mother and Sons

By Virginia T. Van De Water.

"OH, it is pitiful, pitiful," exclaims Thackeray, "the bootless love of mothers for their children in Vanity Fair!"

The words recurred to my mind as I looked into the tragic eyes of a widow the mother of two sons. Her husband had died when her oldest child was but five years old. She was what has been called "a born mother," with whom maternity was an absorbing passion. She had married at eighteen and was a widow at twenty-six. For years she had worked uncomplainingly to educate her sons.

There had been not only work but the sacrifice of many of the things in which women delight. She had not had time to go into society during working-hours, and in the evening she "did not like to leave the boys." She put them both through college, living close to them, spending her strength and youth in the effort. When one of them finished his university course he went into business on the Pacific slope. Then the mother's face developed lines of anxiety, still she smiled bravely.

"I educated him that he might make the best of his chances," she said firmly, "and it would be selfish for me to mention to him my dread of parting from him. And I have my other boy, you know."

Two years later her second son was graduated and went to South America as a mining engineer. It was soon after this that I called on the lonely mother. She had grown old in a few weeks. She began talking of her boys—calmly at first, then her voice quivered and broke.

Need Her No More.

"What is there for me to do now?" she asked. "I am no good to anybody. I have dropped utterly out of the old set and world to which I once belonged. I am too old to learn new ways. My one aim has been to fit my boys for the battle of life, but I hoped that battle would be fought near me. Now I am left alone. I would be a selfish creature in the eyes of the world if I were to try to keep my sons with me—for they have their own lives to live, and mine is done. They will never be mine again. They will sometimes come to see me, but they will never come as they used to come. They need me no more."

She is not yet fifty and feels that her life is done! She is one of the "Mothers of Men" of whom George Cabot Lodge wrote:

"Weep, mothers of men!
The hands of the world are strong to take
The lives ye bear for the world's sole sake,
To try their souls till they bend or break;
Your children vanish from out your ken—
Weep, mothers of men!"

It is all true, viewed from one standpoint, and yet when women dare make plan like this the world calls them fiends. If so, then it is too late for the mischief to be repaired.

"The greatest kindness we can do our children is to teach them to be independent of us," remarked one woman contentiously.

The mother to whom she spoke flung her hands out with a gesture that was almost despairing.

"Oh, yes!" she exclaimed bitterly, "but good Lord! who is going to teach US to be independent of THEM!"

There is the cry of the mother. Who, indeed?

Her Lose Daughters.

Mothers of daughters claim that they lose these, and their contention is

Even after a girl marries she to her mother for advice and counoften loving her better than she did re she appreciated what women suffer for their children.

t, for the mother of sons there is ys the possibility of which our poet es. How can she fortify herself inst this misery? It can not be pre- ted—God help her!—but it may be lighter. For she can be less unreasonably unselfish.

Does this sound cruel? Such selfishness as I have in mind is kindness to the mother and true kindness to the child. No boy is better for knowing that fills his mother's entire mental and ritual horizon, that she counts all ice for him as gain. The time arrives—unless he be unusually noble—when in spite of himself, the sacrifice taken for granted by him; he thinks it as his due and makes a common ng of it.

Would I have a boy sacrifice his future to his mother? No, but I would e him consult her a little in planning that future, and he will not do if she has not taught him to consider her wishes as well as his own. two equally good opportunities present themselves, I would have him choose the one which will keep him near his mother rather than that at the other side of the continent—always supposing the one at home means as big a future for him as does the one abroad.

Wider Views of Life.

But we are dealing now with the mother, rather than with the boy. I claim that even when her children are mere babies she should force herself to take an interest in things outside of the nursery. She need not neglect her children to do this. Indeed, she will give them better care and bring them up in a finer, broader atmosphere if she has wider views of life and knows what is going on in the world. And, as her children grow to need less of her personal care, she ought to go about and meet people and think of other things than the needs and wishes of her off-

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is fishing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life.

Now go on with the story.

"Good-bye, Mrs. Gordon Kelly."

CHAPTER XXIX.

THREE days passed before Gordon Kelly heard directly from Mildred Deery. Her nerves shattered and on the verge of hysteria, she had been taken home by Gordon after the near-tragedy in which Cain was involved. She would not allow Mrs. Shephard to summon either of her parents from Atlanta nor would she permit her to call the nearest doctor. She was her own physician in the days that followed and she began by prescribing complete rest and quietness. That, she told herself, was what the most celebrated physician in the land would have told her.

Gordon talked over the telephone with Elmer twice a day, night and morning, in the intervals before he saw Mildred again. With Steve as the messenger, he sent her all sorts of little delicacies and rare flowers. Where they came from she could not imagine. Certainly he had not had time to order them from Atlanta or Chattanooga, the nearest large cities; in fact, she doubted if they could be procured anywhere in those cities. His thoughtfulness had not a little to do with her convalescence, following the shock of the encounter with Cain.

Mildred Telephones.

On the morning of the third day she awoke calm and even cheerful. At breakfast she remarked to Elmer that she would be ready to resume the lesson in French, whereat the lad exclaimed, "Oh, shucks." Soon after she went to the telephone, rang three times and listened.

"Is Mr. Kelly at home?" she asked, when the ring had been answered. Elmer, who was within earshot, though not eavesdropping, grinned.

"There is no Mr. Kelly here," came the reply.

"Wait just a minute, please," said the voice, interrupting. There was some confusion on the other end of the line and then she heard Gordon Kelly's voice.

"Good morning," he said. "Is this you, Mildred?"

"Yes, Mr. Kelly."

"Mr. Kelly, eh? You call me Mr. Kelly one minute and Gordon the next. However, I won't quarrel with you, because you have been ill. How are you this morning? I have been very anxious about you."

"I am feeling quite myself again and thank you ever so much for all those nice things you sent me and for those lovely flowers. Tell me, where in the world did you get them?"

"The flowers? Oh, the gardener produced them when I made a requisition. The housekeeper produced the other things. I'm glad you enjoyed them."

An Engagement.

There was a brief silence, then Gordon said:

"Are you still there?"

"Yes," replied Mildred. "I was just thinking what a strange man you are with your automobiles and your gardeners and your colored genie and your housekeepers and your network of telephones away up here in the mountains, and your ball playing."

She heard Gordon laugh over the telephone. Then he said:

"Well, you know, the first time I saw you at your house your mother asked me about my life in the mountains; you wouldn't let me tell her and afterward, when I asked you why you did it, you said it was a secret. Do you remember?"

"Yes, I do, and it turns out a good deal more of a mystery than I had bargained for."

When Gordon spoke again his voice was lowered.

"Tell me, please; when will you feel well enough to let me see you?"

Mildred unconsciously lowered her voice, too.

"Why—I feel all right now. I'm not ill any more."

"May I call this afternoon?" he said, eagerly.

"Certainly; delighted to have you. But suppose I meet you?"

"Fine! Great! Where?"

"At—at—say at the bridge at 3. Now, good-bye; I must give Elmer his lesson in French."

If Mildred could have seen through the telephone, she would have seen Gordon slam up the receiver and turn three backward somersaults without stopping.

After all the threats, Elmer didn't take his lesson. It is true the books were produced and Mildred sat down at a table, opposite Elmer on the porch and assumed the dignified air of a schoolmarm, but that was as far as they got with the foreign language that morning. It was all off when Elmer said with a grin:

"They didn't know any Mr. Kelly up there, did they?"

No Gordon Kelly.

"What do you know about it, you little rascal?" demanded Mildred.

"I know all about it. There's no such man as Gordon Kelly."

"What do you mean, child?"

"I mean just what I say. There's no such person as Gordon Kelly."

"That's simply nonsense, Elmer; what in the world ails you to-day?"

"Oh, I got you buffaloed all right, Mildred. Ha, ha!" and he laughed gleefully.

"Elmer, you can be the most tantalizing boy I ever knew when you want to be. Now, look me straight in the eye and tell me what you mean."

"I'm telling you the truth, Mildred," said the lad, seriously. "His name isn't Gordon Kelly at all; it's Mr. Bud."

"Mr. Bud! Elmer, you're simply crazy. I won't listen to you any more. Take your books and go away."

"Now, Mildred, listen. I'm not fooling at all." Thereupon he told her of finding the telephone beside the brook and calling up Gordon Kelly and of his conversation with Steve, the colored boy. When he had finished Mildred tossed her head in the air and said, with decision:

"I'll find out what his name is mighty quick."

"When?"

"This afternoon. Now, I'll excuse you from taking your lesson this morning. Get my little rifle and go off somewhere and practice at a target."

"Oh, gee, Mildred, you're just great," cried the lad as he ran into the house to fetch the rifle.

Mildred's Thoughts.

But Mildred wished to be left alone. She went to the hammock and curled herself in it and gave herself over to her thoughts. If Manager Bill Smith, of the Atlanta ball club, could have been with her at that moment, they would have agreed without argument that Gordon Kelly, or Mr. Bud, or whatever the strange man's name was, was the most mysterious individual in the world.

Mildred began to go over the entire situation in her mind. She hadn't gone far when she suddenly came to the realization that she hardly knew anything at all about Gordon Kelly. She knew nothing about his family, his life nor his habits. He had been introduced into her family as Gordon Kelly, yet here, up in his mountain home, no one knew of a Gordon Kelly. They called him Mr. Bud. Who was Mr. Bud? Her father certainly didn't know him by that name. He had told her that he had met Gordon Kelly through Judge Barbee. Certainly the Judge wouldn't be a party to any deception. Was Gordon Kelly an assumed name? Was it an alias? Her father had told her nothing about Gordon Kelly's family—because he didn't know anything about it himself, probably.

Was his family "respectable?" Did he really own the property, or was he an employee or representative of the people that did own it? He might be a foreman or a superintendent. No harm in that, thought Mildred, but she would like to know about it.

Then she reviewed her brief acquaintance with Gordon Kelly. She recalled the conversations she had had with him in the few times they had met. The talk, she remembered, was mostly about books and music and kindred topics and the small talk that two young people would indulge in. It came back to her that he talked with great intelligence on music and art and literature. Surely he was refined and cultured. His family must be "respectable."

And then Mildred thought of Gordon Kelly the MAN—the tall, fine-featured, broad-shouldered, strong and powerful MAN. And her mind dwelt on his simplicity of manner, his kindness and gentleness and his prowess on the ball field and his bravery so lately displayed. And she was satisfied. She smiled contentedly to herself as she lay curled in the hammock. No, she would not break the engagement she had for 3 o'clock that afternoon, but she would find out all about the Gordon Kelly-Mr. Bud mystery.

"Make me look pretty, Mandy," said Mildred to her maid, who assisted her to dress when the time came. "I'se got a 'portant 'gagement fo' dis' afternoon."

She seldom allowed herself to unbend in dignity to her maid, but today she was feeling very cheerful and happy.

"Will you wear your tan dress, Miss Mildred?" asked the maid.

"No, Mandy, I'll wear the light blue; it's more becoming, don't you think so?"

Thus arrayed, she went out on the porch and asked Elmer to bring the runabout around. When it came she stepped in it and took her place behind the wheel.

"Good-bye, Elmer, see you later," she said to the lad.

"Gee, ain't I going, too?" said Elmer in a tone of disappointment.

"Not this time, honey; good-bye."

Before the car was fairly in motion the boy jumped on the side of it and, leaning over, whispered mischievously in Mildred's ear:

"Good-bye, Mrs. Gordon Kelly."

"You little wretch!" exclaimed Mildred, blushing furiously.

But she turned her head a moment later and waved her hand and smiled at him.

CHAPTER XXX.

WHEN Forrest Cain, lying unconscious in the road beside his automobile, regained his senses he saw Gordon Kelly standing over him. His mind was befuddled and he did not recall what had happened to him. Kelly prodded him with the toe of his shoe as though he was a dead snake and said, sharply, "Get up."

Cain rose slowly to his feet. The fight was all out of him.

"Walk around," ordered Kelly. Cain took a few steps. Kelly left him and joined Mildred and Elmer. "He is all right. Get in the car, please, and we will get out of this."

Without even another glance at Cain, the three entered Kelly's automobile and a minute later they were whirling down the road, leaving Cain, with singular indifference, to his own meditations.

Cain was sober by this time—sober, sullen and resentful. His right hand pained him. He looked at the back of it where the stone thrown by Elmer had struck him. It was crushed and bleeding. The fingers hung down as though without life. He felt of the bruise and winced. There was no doubt but that bones were broken. He cranked the motor with his left hand, entered the car and attempted to set the control into low speed, but found he had lost the use of his right hand. Reaching over with his left hand, however, he was able to manipulate the lever and then, easing in the clutch, the car moved slowly ahead. It was necessary to turn around. This was accomplished with infinite labor and finally the car was straightened out for the journey to Cain's shack. This had to be taken at low speed, however, because once the car started ahead he could not change the speed, as he only had the use of his left hand and could not take that from the steering wheel in order to change gears.

In gloomy silence he crawled back the six miles to his mountain habitation. He summoned his man George and commanded him to pack up. His campaign had utterly failed. He would go back to Atlanta to nurse his injury, nurse his lacerated feelings and plan some revenge that would settle scores with Gordon Kelly once and for all. While his man was busy packing he bathed his hand in cold water and, after pouring whisky on the wound as an antiseptic (and pouring a considerable quantity of it down his throat as an antisplenetic) he bandaged the injured member, swore at George on general principles and went outside to smoke and think some more.

In his three personal encounters with Gordon Kelly Cain had been badly worsted, verbally or physically, every time. Yet Gordon Kelly was in no way to blame in any case. He was attending strictly to his own business and had sought no quarrel with the man who declared himself his foe. This phase of the matter never once entered the mind of Cain. He only knew that it was through Gordon Kelly that all his troubles came.

At this point his sullen reveries were interrupted by the appearance of a tall, raw-boned, black-bearded man, dressed in the uncouth habiliments of the backwoods. Without a nod or any salutation, he made known the nature of his business.

"We done run out of matches," he said. "Got any?"

Cain was accustomed to deference from those he considered beneath him.

"What do you want with them?" he asked with a scowl.

"Eat 'em, mebbe; what's that to you?" drawled the stranger.

"Where do you come from?"

"None o' your damned business. Ef yer ain't got no matches, say so."

"You're on my property; you're trespassing," declared Cain.

"What do you all reckon you're goin' to do about?" observed the stranger in the same even tone.

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the twenty-four installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 25th installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

Man Who Loves Like a Pirate

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

C. C. W. writes:

"I am 27 years of age, and am desperately in love with a girl three years my junior. She is beautiful, accomplished and a leader in our social set. Although I have proposed to her three or four times, she still refuses to marry me. I feel certain that there is no other occupying her time, for if I had a rival I would unquestionably put him out of the way.

"How am I to persuade this cold-hearted woman to become my bride?"

Persuade her by storming her father's castle some dark night, and carrying her off strapped behind you on the back of your noble charger. That is the time-honored method of all swashbucklers, and it is the method that would most appeal to one who says if he had a rival he would "unquestionably put him out of the way."

It is not the modern way. It is not the sane way, but you are not modern, and I could almost suggest that one who talks of putting a rival "out of the way" is not sane.

It is a further mark that you are not wise that you call your sweetheart coldhearted. Because a woman will not yield to one lover doesn't prove she has a cold heart. In your case, my dear Sir Reginald, or Sir Launcelot, or whoever was the hero of your latest fiction, the cold heart of your lady love proves a cool head.

She will not marry you though you propose twenty times. There is something to you of which she does not approve. Instead of making over yourself, you keep on proposing, imagining that the opposition to be overcome lies not in your matchless person, but in her cold heart.

A Gory Love.

Yours is a love that reeks of gore and gunpowder. You emit fire from your nostrils when you speak of your passion, and would impress this woman with your daredevil disposition, your dauntless courage, and your untamed strength. I have known men who loved like pirates, just as you love. They became the kind of husbands who were afraid to go to the door when there was a ring late at night, and sent their wives instead.

You talk like a cheap hero in a book. It is the sort of talk that sometimes has telling effect on girls of 16, but, thank Heaven, the lady love of your piratical schemes and bloodthirsty dreams is 24 and has such a clear vision that she sees you as you are.

My dear, bold buccaneer, drop your paper sword, wipe the ink-red stains from your hands, cut off that fierce mustache and become a MAN. If you really love this woman, make of yourself such a worthy man that she will no longer spurn you, but will seek you instead.

Don't get on your knees when you propose, as did the heroes in your favorite fiction. Don't color your conversation with threats to carry her off bodily, slaying all who intervene. Stand on your feet, like a manly man, and tell her you love her in language that befits these most sane and prosaic times.

Your paper sword has failed to win. Try the better way of showing her a good, strong right arm that is ready to serve her through life.

Recognize the existence of a rival and know that he lies in this masquerade you have put on. "Put him out of the way" by all means by conducting yourself in a saner fashion.

Be a man and love as a man of 27 should love, leaving to those ten years your junior dreams and schemes that smell of gunpowder and gore.

By LADY DOROTHY NEVILL.

A GRANDE DAME and leader of the social world during the greater part of the past century, Lady Dorothy Nevill, who died recently, was famous for her charm of manner, incisive wit, and brilliant repartee. She was the confidante of royal personages, statesmen, field marshals and diplomatists. At her receptions one met all the most attractive people of the day. Her intimate friends included such noted men as Beaconsfield, Gladstone, Wilberforce, Cobden, Bright and Matthew Arnold. Her greatest friend, perhaps, was Beaconsfield. He was always "Dear Dizzy" to Lady Dorothy, while he always addressed her as "My Dearest Dorothy," and their correspondence provides many interesting glimpses of this great Tory statesman.

Perhaps one of the best stories which Lady Dorothy has told about Disraeli is that concerning the occasion when a photographer asked him to pose for a photograph leaning on a chair. This at once aroused the indignation of Mrs. Disraeli. "I soon settled that," she said, afterwards, to Lady Dorothy, when relating the incident, "for I said, 'Dizzy has always stood alone, and he shall continue to do so.'"

"The Gorgeous Lily."

On one occasion Lady Dorothy, who was sitting next to Mr. Gladstone, was asked by the latter if she had ever heard Lord Beaconsfield express any particular fondness for the primrose. She admitted he had not, adding, "The gorgeous lily, I think, was more to his taste."

Referring to Gladstone, Lady Dorothy used to tell a story which is illustrative of the "Grand Old Man's" character. He was discoursing to her of the perfect immunity of English public men from all dangers of assault or assassination in his day, and all the time two detectives, dressed as footmen, were in the very room guarding him, while another was upstairs in the drawing-room ready to mingle with the guests.

It was Mr. Joseph Chamberlain who, talking to Lady Dorothy of female suffrage, once said, "Thank goodness, there are no female members. Of the two evils I prefer Parnellites to petticoats."

Lady Dorothy herself was equally severe in regard to suffragettes, for in one of her books she writes: "Heaven did not make women insinuating and persuasive that they might be peevish. It did not make them feeble that they might be imperious; it did not give them softer voices than man in order that they might rail at him; not delicate features to be destroyed by rage. Angry women forget themselves and the dignity of their sex, which has never gained much by scolding."

Lady Dorothy Nevill had a good deal to say about the change that has taken place in the character and the manners of women since her own earlier days. She considered the modern woman is spoilt, has too much time on her hands, takes up too many fads, and completely dominates her husband. This struck the old Shah of Persia very much. He said: "It seems to me that the English and American husband is nothing better than a sort of butler."

Lady Dorothy was particularly severe on the "smart set" of to-day. "The elite," she said, "are fast, flippant and smart. People are less interesting to talk to, less sociable, less brilliant in conversation, less interested in things." And as an illustration of the change in the life of a society woman, who to-day thinks nothing of spending $5,000 a year on her dress, she mentions how she and her sister were given a dress allowance of $250 and $200, respectively, by their adoring father.

She was also wont to refer to the fact that in her younger days parents were very particular about the matrimonial alliances made in their families, and she told an amusing story of one old peer who was greatly surprised to be told by his sister that she had developed a great affection for a well-known scientist of humble birth.

The peer sent for him and said, brusquely, "Now, sir, I should like to know something about your family."

"I think it will be sufficient," replied the scientist, who aws of Semitic extraction, "to say that I descended from the illustrious blood of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob."

The peer was taken aback. "Oh," he said, "of course, my family has nothing to compare with that; therefore, if my sister really likes you, you'd better take her."

Leap Year Proposals.

This reminds one of another story which Lady Dorothy relates in one of her books concerning an East Anglican clergyman who was visited by a lady parishioner and asked whether he thought a woman might, in any circumstances, propose to a man. Much taken aback, the poor rector replied that he certainly thought there might be circumstances which would make such a proposal justifiable. Upon which, without the slightest hesitation, the lady exclaimed, "As Nathan said unto David, 'Thou art the man.'" And, seeing no possibility of escape, he was.

Speaking of the amusements of girls in her time, Lady Dorothy said that in the sixties, when old-fashioned croquet occupied most of her attention, it was supposed to be responsible for many marriages. "Are you going to make a flower-bed here, Thomas?" asked a young lady of the gardener. "Yes, mum, them's the horders." "Why, it will quite spoil our croquet ground." "Can't help it, mum. Them's yer pa's horders. He ses as 'ow to have it laid out for 'orticulture, not 'usbandry."

Lady Dorothy also numbered the late King Edward among her personal friends. Once, sitting next to him at dinner, he noticed she ate oysters with a knife. He made a humorous comment, and the next morning presented her with a beautiful case of oyster knives, and in the note which accompanied them said: "In remembrance of your criminal tendency."

A "Regular" Babe.

It was a timber law case, in which Tim Healy was counsel for the defense. In the course of the case a youthful witness was put up as an expert on the plaintiff's side. Tim got up to cross-examine.

"What age are you?"

"Twenty-one years."

"How long have you been in the timber trade?"

"Two years."

Tim sat down, saying, "A regular babe in the wood, my lord," which discounted the evidence of the youthful expert.

Their Married Life

Helen Is Made to Feel That She Is Too Exacting and Expects Too Much of Maggie.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"WHY, Maggie, this isn't a clean cloth. Look at this!" Helen pointed to a distinct grease spot on the damask tablecloth. "And here's another. Why, this is the cloth we had on for breakfast."

"'Twas clean last night, ma'am," grumbled Maggie. "That makes three we've had on this week. We can't have no clean cloth every night."

"Well, we certainly will when we have guests. Now, you'll simply have to change this, Maggie. You ought to have known that cloth wouldn't do for dinner to-night."

"I won't have no time to unset that table now, ma'am," obstinately. "It's after 6 already."

Helen flushed and bit her lips. Maggie was growing more and more impertinent, but just before a company dinner was not the time to reprove her. So with an effort Helen kept back the sharp words and began deliberately to unset the table herself.

It was late and she was not yet dressed, but having taken the stand that there must be a clean cloth, she had no choice now but to put one on.

The first cloth she unfolded was an old one that had been darned; the next had a claret stain. Both of these had to be refolded and put back. The third was badly ironed and was hard to get on straight, but she finally got it adjusted and began to reset the table.

As she replaced the silver she found that there had been only three forks by each plate.

Fork Missing.

"Maggie, you forgot to put down an extra fork for the relish," as Maggie came in to get a dish from the sideboard.

"We aint got no relish, ma'am."

"Why, I told you to open a can of those anchovies."

"We used the last can of them, ma'am, last Sunday."

"But surely there's another can." Helen went out in the pantry to convince herself. "Well, we MUST have some kind of a relish. Oh, here's that jar of anchovy paste! Make some little squares of toast and spread it with this. You've got a hard-boiled egg," glancing in the refrigerator; "you can grate that over it."

Maggie, who was whipping the cream for the berries, turned around with an angry flush.

"You're wanting too much, ma'am. That's fancy cooking. Cooks who makes them fussy dishes gets $50 a month! And you expect me at the last minute to drop everything and——"

"That'll do, Maggie. As soon as I can get dressed I'll make this myself. And if you think you can get a place as a $50 cook I'd advise you to take it."

Helen flounced into her dressing room. For her dinner was already spoiled. She could never enjoy anything after any kind of a scene. Her whole nature shrank from contention, and just to keep peace she had let Maggie have her own way for so long that now she resented everything she was told.

The fact that the girl was honest, economical and an excellent cook had made Helen put up with everything else. But now she felt that she would rather have someone more agreeable and amenable, even though less capable.

A Man's Job.

Warren came in whistling, which with him was an evidence of rare good humor. Helen ran into his room with a hurried greeting.

"Oh, I'm so glad you've come, dear. Can you hook me up before you dress? I don't want to ask Maggie—she's been perfectly horrid!"

"Humph! Turn around here to the light, then. What's this thing?"

"Oh, wait—that's the inside belt! I'll hook that. There! Oh, dear, Maggie's getting to be IMPOSSIBLE!"

"What's the matter now?" as he clumsily hooked the dress.

"She put a soiled tablecloth on to-night—and I had to change it myself. And when I asked her to make some anchovy toast for a relish she said cooks get $50 a month for making those fancy dishes. Hurry, dear; never mind the bottom ones—I can hook those."

"Here—you hold still! You wanted me to fasten this—didn't you?"

She drew away from his still fumbling fingers and darted out into the kitchen. Maggie was fixing the salad. Helen maintained a cold, disapproving silence as she sliced the bread, cut the crust off to make small squares and put them on the broiler in the already heated oven.

The heat flushed her face and she burnt her finger, which increased her resentment. Hurriedly she mixed a spoonful of butter, spread it thickly on the toast and garnished each piece with the grated hard-boiled egg.

Fortunately the Thurstons were a few moments late, and Helen had the dainty squares of anchovy toast at each plate before the bell rang. But now she was flustered and nervous and felt in no mood for guests. However, as Warren was in an especially genial humor, her silence and abstraction were not noticed.

"What is this?" asked Mrs. Thurston. "Anchovy toast, isn't it? I wish Jane would make things like this. A relish adds so much to the dinner."

"S-s-sh," whispered Helen, with a glance toward the pantry. "I had to make it myself. Oh, I've had a TIME with her this evening! I feel I'm just about through."

"Why, I thought Maggie was such a good girl?" questioned Mrs. Thurston in surprise.

Her Own Story.

"She is—if you let her do everything her own way. But there ARE times when you want things done your own way. Just to keep peace I've let her dominate me more and more. I'll never begin that with another girl. It's always a mistake—they always take advantage of it."

"Well, I should advise you to hold on to Maggie," was Mr. Thurston's comment. "We've had a devil of a time for the last few weeks."

"Oh, didn't you like that Swedish woman?" asked Helen.

Mrs. Thurston shrugged her shoulders. "We've had three since then."

"But I thought she was going to be so good? She was a working housekeeper, wasn't she?"

"That's what she SAID she was," grinned Mrs. Thurston. "But she wouldn't work, and she didn't know anything about housekeeping! Then we had a German girl. She was RICH! Tell about her, Minnie."

Mrs. Thurston laughed. "Well, we forgot to lock the wine up one night, and she drank half a bottle of cherry brandy. The next morning I had to get breakfast."

"That's one fine thing about Maggie," announced Warren. "We never have to lock up the wine or anything else. And our grocery and butcher bills have been less since we've had her than they've ever been before."

"Well, that's just what we're looking for," said Mr. Thurston emphatically. "In case you let her go, turn her over to us, will you? By Jove, the one we've got now is extravagant, all right."

"Yes, she's very wasteful," agreed Mrs. Thurston. "We've used five pounds of butter this week—just for us two."

"Five!" exclaimed Helen. "Why, Maggie rarely uses more than three."

"Three? We've never used as little as that since we've been housekeeping. We've never had a girl that didn't either take stuff home or feed a lot of company in the kitchen. This one has a beau that comes two nights a week, and she gets him a regular supper. But what can we say? We just have to put up with it."

"Well, I'D say a good deal." Warren's tone was emphatic.

"Not if you'd been through what we've been in the last two months," declared Mr. Thurston, grimly. "You don't know what a cinch you've got in Maggie."

Helen Uncomfortable.

Helen had the uncomfortable feeling that all this was tending to make her seem in the wrong. The inference was that if she could not get along with such a paragon of virtues as Maggie, she must be over-particular and very hard to please. The injustice of this rankled keenly. They only saw the best of Maggie; they did not know how trying, sullen and impertinent she could be.

The Thurstons stayed late, and as they were starting home Mrs. Thurston happened to glance in the bedroom. As usual, Maggie had fixed the bed for the night, taken off the counterpane and neatly turned down the covers. On the table was a fresh pitcher of ice water, covered with a napkin.

"Well, I call that luxury," Mrs. Thurston declared. "Look, Henry," calling to her husband, who was getting on his overcoat in the hall. "That's the way Maggie fixes their bed every night. Do you suppose we'll ever have the luck to get a girl like that?"

Helen flushed. It was only an added evidence of Maggie's perfection and of her own lack of appreciation.

Later, when Warren wound his watch for the night, he frowned over it thoughtfully.

"See here, we HAVE got a cinch in Maggie, but you don't seem to know it. You expect too blamed much of a girl. Great Scott, if you can't get along with her, who CAN you get along with? We've got a good thing and we're going to take Thurston's advice and hold on to it. Now you can just make up your mind to that."

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

"Cultivate Harmonious Surroundings," Says Doris Keane

Miss Keane's stage-room bower, and her favorite picture.

By LILLIAN LAUFERTY.

WITCHERY, charm incarnate, the lure of "the eternal woman," are to become living and tangible qualities through Doris Keane's portrayal of Margarita Cavallini in "Romance"—made real at Maxine Elliott's theater in New York.

Of course you have often read a book or seen a play in which earnest author and striving characters tell you again and again how charming is the fair heroine. All their insistence never makes it true! For the witchery of moonlight and the appeal of lovely woman are subtle things you must feel in stirring heart the while you see with rapt eyes.

But the Italian prima donna of "Romance" fascinates and bewitches even when you disapprove of the saucy jade—and at last she wins you heart and soul as with brimming eyes you sit rapt and thrilled the while she rises to the sacred realization of her woman's soul and pleads with her adorer, "Let me be good."

The curtain fell on an old man's dream of youth—or romance—and I was whisked back to the realm of glaring lights, of rouge pots and cold cream jars, of wigs and artifice, to visit our new star in her non-twinkling daylight environment—the dressing room.

All around me were flowered curtains and draperies of quaint old chintz—and everywhere, on stray shelves, on the dressing table, in free corners were glowing, fragrant flowers. And in the midst of this beauty and light sat Doris Keane still pulsing with the emotion she had felt the while she portrayed it.

Her Passion.

"You love beauty?" I ventured.

"I love beautiful surroundings and the personality they must develop," said Miss Keane. "You see, I have a sister—ever since our childhood I had known and felt and admired her radiant beauty. I knew I could never be like that—and one accepts the impossible serenely after a time. I accepted beauty and did not analyze it. I began to think more about personality and the power that brings.

"Ah, is not personality a wonderful thing! That almost all women can develop—the force, the magnetism that a rare and evenly developed personality bring are to me more lovely than beauty. Though, of course, the daughters of Eve do try to look as well as possible, to make that quick little appeal that gives personality a hearing.

"The most charming women have varying personalities. Do you know when I am most popular with myself? It is when I have a sudden realization that I looked like a girl of 15 in the morning, and that now in sophisticated evening clothes I look suddenly 'grande dame'—elderly even."

Of course Miss Keane would have some difficulty in looking "elderly," for, in spite of her well-bred poise, in spite of the keen power to analyze and appraise life that glows in the deep fires of her great brown eyes, Miss Keane is a girlish and appealing little figure.

In her Junoesque costume in "The Affairs of Anatol," early this winter, she managed to look tall and stately, in her present play she is an exotic Italian, but in propria persona Miss Keane is a brown-haired American girl whose earnestness of purpose and ambitious willingness to work add to the fervor of artistic inspiration and make her beautiful with a charm that surmounts mere prettiness of feature in a way that affords a little sermon all its own.

"Surroundings are so important," went on Miss Keane. "One evening recently a party of friends took me to a restaurant all done in heavy plush hangings and oppressive gilt. My personality was smothered, and I became a quiet, depressed creature quite different from the animated person I had been just before.

A Sure Sign.

"That made me finally sure of my theory. Surround yourself with fresh, clean, airy, wholesome surroundings. For purposes of stimulating mind and spirit a day in the country far surpasses a glass of champagne. The outdoors—trees, green growing things and a chance in nature and solitude to know your own soul are the most wonderful tonics I know.

"Isolation, solitude—a chance to 'ventilate my soul'—are the things I like best in the world.

"Since I was six years old I have known what I wanted to do in the world. That is young, perhaps—but ever since I can remember I have been working toward a chance to act—to interpret character. Women must find themselves and the outlet for their powers if they want to be happy—and whatever charm tragic beauty has, the loveliness of a happy soul working toward a goal is more appealing to the world—and men.

"But while I like men—the man is not come—I think for the actress who is afire with her art all else must be secondary."

I looked at those glowing brown eyes—alight with ambition, with earnest purpose, with desire to see deep into the great mystery of life—for Miss Keane glories in the vastness of life, and thinks to absolutely understand even one phase of it would be a splendid thing—as I looked at those fine eyes I felt that Doris Keane had told me the great secrets of spiritual beauty that can illuminate the face of any woman who desires it.

To rise above the tawdry plush and gilt facts of life, to "ventilate your soul," and open it to the loveliness of Nature, to find yourself and the outlet for your powers—to keep happily, healthily busy, to know ambition's spur, and to strive to grow—these are the beauty secrets of Doris Keane, who has not thought much about beauty—and yet has cultivated a spirit and charm that make her natural loveliness ever a greater delight.

.:. Lost Books That Caused Tragedies .:.

WHEN Thomas Carlyle had finished the first volume of his "French Revolution," a work which had cost him months of incessant toil and the verification of thousands of facts and references, he lent the manuscript to John Stuart Mill. Surely, that philosopher had one of the worst tasks ever allotted to a mortal man when he had to tell the "Sage of Chelsea" that the priceless manuscript had been thrown into the fire by a careless servant, and only a few charred leaves—still to be seen in Cheyne Row, Chelsea—remained to tell the tale.

Sir Isaac Newton was the victim of a similar catastrophe, but the "friend" responsible was not human, but canine—his favorite little dog. He left him in his study alone, and when he came back found that he had "chewed" the mathematical calculations of many strenuous months. Many accounts say that Newton took it very calmly, but the truth is that it preyed upon his mind to such an extent as to cause much temporary mental aberration.

One of the great losses to literature was the burning of six books of Spenser's "Faery Queen" which the poet is said to have left in his house in County Tyrone, Ireland. A rebellion broke out, and the place was burned; and not only did the poet's youngest child perish in the flames, but, it is said, also about as much of the great poem as we possess at present.

All lovers of Byron are aware that this erratic genius found time in his short, adventurous life to write his memoirs, and that on his death these passed into the hands of his friend, Thomas Moore, who, exercising a discretion committed to him, promptly consigned the manuscript to the flames.

No doubt the writer of "Irish Melodies" had very good and highly proper reasons for taking this decisive step, and it is quite likely that the publication of the memoirs would not, for obvious reasons, have been possible for many years after the poet's death; yet as succeeding generations have been brought face to face with the peculiarly complex genius of Byron, with its lofty moods and its many dark places, they have felt need of the light which only the records written by a vanished hand could have supplied.

Since the death of Auguste Strindberg, the famous Swedish novelist and dramatist—who, by the way, had much in common with Byron—many of his works have been translated into the English language and are already the center of heated controversy in literary circles. It is possible, therefore, that the powerful, if somewhat misanthropical, writings of this Swedish recluse may be read and treasured by generations to come. But all his works will not go down to posterity, for it is said that in a sudden fit of despondency Strindberg himself destroyed a number of his manuscripts, which, through lack of time or inclination, he never wrote again.

WITHIN THE LAW

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intrigue and Love

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Turner, an orphan, employed in Edward Gilder's department store, is unjustly accused of theft and sent to prison. She is hounded by the police on her release, and finally goes to live with Joe Garson, a forger, and Aggie Lynch, a blackmailer, both of whom treat her with respect. Mary resolves to keep "within the law." She becomes the leader of a band of swindlers. Gilder's son, Dick, falls in love with her, and she marries him to be revenged on his father—and then finds that she is in love with him. Dick refuses to give her up, a demand made by his father, Mary disappears. Police Inspector Burke in an effort to aid the elder Gilder schemes to secure the arrest of Mary through "English Eddie" Griggs, a police informer. Garson plans to rob the Gilder home on a tip from Griggs. Mary hears of it and tries to prevent it, going to the Gilder home. Mary pleads with Garson to drop the robbery, and Dick enters. Garson kills Griggs when Mary corners the latter and he admits he is working for the police. Burke enters the house, a searchlight throwing its rays on the dead man's body. Mary and Dick are arrested, because Mary tells Burke that Dick shot Griggs in defense of his home. The District Attorney tries to quash the case against young Gilder. Inspector Burke obtains from Miss Helen Travers West, daughter of a prominent railroad official, a promise that she will tell something about Mary.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"I shall do nothing of the sort. Sit down, indeed!—here! Why, I have been arrested——" There came a break in the music of her tones throbbing resentment. A little sob crept in, and broke the sequence of words. The dainty face was vivid with shame. "I——" she faltered, "I've been arrested—by a common policeman!"

The Inspector seized on the one flaw left him for defense against her indictment.

"No, no, miss," he argued, earnestly. "Excuse me. It wasn't any common policeman—it was a detective sergeant."

But this effort to placate was quite in vain. The ingenuous little beauty with the child's face and the blue eyes so widely opened fairly panted in her revolt against the ignominy of her position, and was not to be so easily appeased. Her voice came vibrant with disdain. Her level gaze on the Inspector was of a sort to suggest to him anxieties over possible complications here.

"You wait!" she cried violently. "You just wait, I tell you, until my papa hears of this!"

Burke regarded the furious girl doubtfully.

"Who is your papa?" he asked, with a bit of alarm stirring in his breast, for he had no mind to offend anyone of importance where there was no need.

"I sha'nt tell you," came the petulant retort from the girl. Her ivory forehead was wrinkled charmingly in a little frown of obstinacy. "Why," she went on, displaying new symptoms of distress over another appalling idea that flashed on her in this moment, "you would probably give my name to the reporters." Once again the rosebud mouth drooped into curves of sorrow, of a great self-pity. "If it ever got into the newspapers, my family would die of shame!"

The pathos of her fear pierced through the hardened crust of the police official. He spoke apologetically.

"Now, the easiest way out for both of us," he suggested, "is for you tell me just who you are. You see, young lady, you were found in the house of a notorious crook."

The haughtiness of the girl waxed. It seemed as if she grew an inch taller in her scorn of the Inspector's saying.

"How perfectly absurd!" she exclaimed, scathingly. "I was calling on Miss Mary Turner!"

"How Did You Meet Her?"

"How did you come to meet her, anyhow?" Burke inquired. He still held his big voice to a softer modulation than to which it was habituated.

Yet, the disdain of the girl seemed only to increase momently. She showed plainly that she regarded this brass-buttoned official as one unbearably insolent in his demeanor toward her. Nevertheless, she condescended to reply, with an exaggeration of the aristocratic drawl to indicate her displeasure.

"I was introduced to Miss Turner," she explained, "by Mr. Richard Gilder. Perhaps you have heard of his father, the owner of the Emporium."

"Oh, yes, I've heard of his father and of him, too," Burke admitted, placatingly.

But the girl relaxed not a whit in her attitude of offense.

"Then," she went on severely, "you must see at once that you are entirely mistaken in this matter." Her blue eyes widened further as she stared accusingly at the Inspector, who betrayed evidences of perplexity, and hesitated for an answer. Then, the doll-like, charming face took on a softer look, which had in it a suggestion of appeal.

"Don't you see it?" she demanded. "Well, no," Burke rejoined uneasily; "not exactly, I don't!" In the presence of this delicate and graceful femininity he experienced a sudden, novel distaste for his usual sledge-hammer methods of attack in interrogation. Yet his duty required that he should continue his questioning. He found himself, in fact, between the devil and the deep sea—though this particular devil appeared rather as an angel of light.

Now, at his somewhat feeble remark in reply to her query, the childish face grew as hard as its curving contours would permit.

"Sir!" she cried indignantly. Her little head was thrown back in scornful reproof, and she turned a shoulder toward the official contemptuously.

"Now, now!" Burke exclaimed in remonstrance. After all, he could not be brutal with this guileless maiden. He must, however, make the situation clear to her, lest she think him a beast—which would never do!

"You see, young lady," he went on with a gentleness of voice and manner that would have been inconceivable to Dacey and Chicago Red; "you see, the fact is that, even if you were introduced to this Mary Turner by young Mr. Gilder, this same Mary Turner herself is an ex-convict, and she's just been arrested for murder."

At the dread word a startling change was wrought in the girl. She wheeled to face the Inspector, her slender body swaying a little toward him. The rather heavy brows were lifted slightly in a disbelieving stare. The red lips were parted, rounded in a tremulous horror.

"Murder!" she gasped, and then was silent.

"Yes," Burke went on, wholly at ease now, since he had broken the ice thus effectually. "You see, if there's a mistake about you, you don't want it to go any further—not a mite further, that's sure. So, you see, now, that's one of the reasons why I must know just who you are." Then, in his turn, Burke put the query that the girl had put to him a little while before. "You see that, don't you?"

"Oh, yes, yes!" was the instant agreement. "You should have told me all about this horrid thing in the first place." Now the girl's manner was transformed. She smiled wistfully on the Inspector, and the glance of the blue eyes was very kind, subtly alluring. Yet in this unbending, there appeared even more decisively than hitherto the fine qualities in bearing of one delicately nurtured. She sank down in a chair by the desk and forthwith spoke with a simplicity that in itself was somehow peculiarly potent in its effect on the official who gave attentive ear.

"My name is Helen Travers West," she announced.

Burke started a little in his seat, and regarded the speaker with a new deference as he heard that name uttered.

"Not the daughter of the railway president?" he inquired.

She Displayed Agitation.

"Yes," the girl admitted. Then, anew, she displayed a serious agitation over the thought of any possible publicity in this affair.

"Oh, please, don't tell anyone," she begged prettily. The blue eyes were very imploring, beguiling, too. The timid smile that wreathed the tiny mouth was marvelously winning. The neatly gloved little hands were held outstretched, clasped in supplication. "Surely, sir, you see now quite plainly why it must never be known by any one in all the wide, wide world that I have ever been brought to this perfectly dreadful place—though you have been quite nice!" Her voice dropped to a note of musical prayerfulness. The words were spoken very softly and very slowly, with intonations difficult for a man to deny. "Please let me go home." She plucked a minute handkerchief from her handbag, put it to her eyes, and began to sob quietly.

The burly Inspector of Police was moved to quick sympathy. Really, when all was said and done, it was a shame that one like her should by some freak of fate have become involved in the sordid, vicious things that his profession made it obligatory on him to investigate. There was a considerable hint of the paternal in his air as he made an attempt to offer consolation to the afflicted damsel.

"That's all right, little lady," he exclaimed, cheerfully. "Now, don't you be worried—not a little bit. Take it from me, Miss West. * * * Just go ahead and tell me all you know about this Turner woman. Did you see her yesterday?"

The girl's sobs ceased. After a final dab with the minute handkerchief, she leaned forward a little toward the Inspector, and proceeded to put a question to him with great eagerness.

"Will you let me go home as soon as I've told you the teenty little I know?"

"Yes," Burke agreed promptly, with an encouraging smile. And for a good measure of reassurance he added as one might to an alarmed child: "No one is going to hurt you, young lady."

"Well, then, you see, it was this way," began the brisk explanation. "Mr. Gilder was calling on me one afternoon, and he said to me then that he knew a very charming young woman, who——"

Here the speech ended abruptly, and once again the handkerchief was brought into play as the sobbing broke to a moan.

Burke felt himself vaguely guilty as the cause of such suffering on the part of one so young, so fair, so innocent. As a culprit, he sought his best to afford a measure of soothing for this grief that had had its source in his performance of duty.

Her Voice Sank.

"That's all right, little lady," he urged in a voice as nearly mellifluous as he could contrive with its mighty volume. "That's all right. I have to keep on telling you. Nobody's going to hurt you—not a little bit. Believe me! Why, nobody ever would want to hurt you!"

But this well-meant attempt to assuage the stricken creature's woe was futile. The sobbing continued. With it came a plaintive cry, many times repeated, softly, but very miserably.

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear!"

"Isn't there something else you can tell about this woman?" Burke inquired in desperation before the plaintive outburst. He hoped to distract her from such grief over her predicament.

The girl gave no least heed to the question.

"Oh, I'm so frightened!" she gasped.

"Tut, tut!" the Inspector chided. "Now, I tell you there's nothing at all for you to be afraid of."

"I'm afraid!" the girl asserted dismally. "I'm afraid you will—put me—in a cell!" Her voice sank to a murmur hardly audible as she spoke the words so fraught with dread import to one of her refined sensibilities.

"Pooh!" Burke returned, gallantly. "Why, my dear young lady, nobody in the world would think of you and a cell at the same time—no, indeed!"

Instantly, the girl responded to this bald flattery. She fairly radiated appreciation of the compliment, as she turned her eyes, dewy with tears, on the somewhat flustered Inspector.

"Oh, thank you!" she exclaimed, with naive enjoyment.

Forthwith, Burke set out to make the most of this favorable opportunity.

"Are you sure you've told me all you know about this woman?" he questioned.

Burke Was Moved.

"Oh, yes! I've only seen her two or three times," came the ready response. The voice changed to supplication, and again the clasped hands were extended beseechingly.

"O please, Commissioner! Won't you let me go home?"

The use of a title higher than his own flattered the Inspector, and he was moved to graciousness. Besides, it was obvious that his police net in this instance had enmeshed only the most harmless of doves. He smiled encouragingly.

"Well, now, little lady," he said, almost tenderly, "if I let you go now, will you promise to let me know if you are able to think of anything else about this Turner woman?"

"I will—indeed, I will!" came the fervent assurance. There was something almost—quite provocative in the flash of gratitude that shone forth from the blue eyes of the girl in that moment of her superlative relief. It moved Burke to a desire for rehabilitation in her estimation.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

CONVINCE HER THEY ARE FALSE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen and deeply in love with a girl of seventeen. Some jealous person told her false stories about me that she believes. This caused a quarrel. Please tell me a way to regain her affections.

B. H.

You must never rest idle under false accusations. Convince her of your innocence and let the matter end there. Let it end for the reason that you are too young to know what love is.

YOU WERE RIGHT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been acquainted with a young man for several months, and he has taken me out quite a number of times. The last time he called he wanted to take me to a dance, but I refused, as he did not notify me in time so that I could get ready. Was I right in doing so? Since then he has not called to see me. F. C.

You had the right of refusal, of course. If he is pouting because of it, believe me, my dear, he will prove a very uncomfortable friend, and you must waste no time or emotions on him.

$15.95 Round Trip From Chicago

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY SYSTEM

Canada's Playground

Leave Chicago, on the Grand Trunk, in the afternoon, arrive Muskoka Wharf the following noon. Transfer to steamer which connecting with other steamers, at junctions at the head of the various lakes, reach forty-five distinct resort communities in which there are one hundred and five hotels and resorts.

For camping and cottage life there are numberless public and private islands, each served, twice daily, by launches, with passenger service, mails and provisions.

Besides the Muskoka Lake District the "Highlands of Ontario" comprise Algonquin Park, French River, Georgian Bay, Thousand and Lake of Bays, while farther east the Grand Trunk double tracks reach Montreal (St. Lawrence River en route), Quebec, Portland, Boston, Old Orchard Beach, New London, Conn., and either on an inexpensive circle tour, or direct New York, Atlantic City, Niagara Falls and the Atlantic seashore.

DANGER SEEN IN $500,000,000 NOTE ISSUE

Forbes Says McAdoo's Readiness to Give Out Paper Is Invitation to Credit Jamboree

By B. C. FORBES.

To flood the country with half a billion emergency bank notes at this time would drive gold to Europe, would gravely aggravate credit inflation here and render our last state worse than our first. We have already in circulation the largest volume of bank notes ever put out.

* * *

We don't need more, but less credit, less borrowing.

* * *

Secretary McAdoo's unexpected announcement that he stands ready to issue $500,000,000 Aldrich notes is a direct invitation to go on a jamboree. New York bankers—who, after all, do know something about banking—have been striving with might and main for months to curtail the credit expansion that has gone to perilous lengths throughout the country. They have, moreover, practiced what they have been preaching: loans here have been rigidly discouraged, speculators have been obliged to stop their antics and liquid resources have been zealously accumulated in preparation for autumnal needs.

* * *

But country banks have gone on their way merrily, lending to all and sundry. The expansion in national bank loans alone has been at the rate of $1,000,000 every business day for the last twelve months—without one cent addition to cash on hand to justify this inflation.

* * *

Bank notes are not capital.

* * *

The scarcity is a scarcity of capital, not currency. Newly blossomed "experts" on national finance would do well to insert that fact into their noodles and keep it there in a prominent place. More nonsense is being written and spoken about financial subjects by men in prominent positions than at any time since William Jennings Bryan championed his famous "sixteen-to-one."

* * *

Washington can not create capital by opening currency flood-gates. Capital can come into being only through the people spending less than they earn—that is, by saving. The urgent need to-day is for less borrowing, not for more borrowing, a la Secretary McAdoo's latest proposal.

* * *

Let the Wilson administration be assured that the more bank notes they pump into circulation at this time, the easier will it be for Europe to take gold from us. We have exported $60,000,000 gold within the last five months and the chances are that more will go within the next fortnight. Europe is hungry for gold, the medium that speaks all languages and can do duty in any land. She will leave us our emergency currency and take our yellow metal.

* * *

To the novitiate the prospect of releasing $500,000,000 additional currency is most inspiring. It intoxicates. But those who can see below the surface, those who can diagnose the difference between bank notes and actual wealth, shrink from contemplating the outcome of any wholesale issuance of emergency notes at this juncture. Borrowers should pull in sail between now and the crop-moving season. They should not rush deeper into debt.

* * *

The Treasury Department should not dissipate resources at this time. It should fortify itself against the abnormal demands that the marketing of bumper crops can not fail to entail. In non-panic, but ominous times, all banking institutions should curtail credits. It is only when a crisis is imminent that a policy of granting generous and prompt assistance should be adopted and courageously followed.

* * *

It is a pity that the Treasury Department has elected to hold itself aloof from the best banking minds in the country and go blindly ahead.

Shuptine Leads for Seat From Chatham

SAVANNAH, June 16.—Early indications are that Herman C. Shuptine will go to the Legislature as the Representative from Chatham County to succeed Pleasant A. Stovall, resigned. The morning vote was fairly heavy, J. J. Bauhan, the other candidate, is running a close second.

Shuptine is the administration candidate.

ALLIANCE, OHIO, June 16.—Ten men were injured, four fatally, in a mine blast explosion near Piney Fork this morning, caused by the short circuiting of an electric wire which ignited a keg of powder.

GENERAL BUYING BOOSTS COTTON

Old and New Crops Purchased Heavily on Bullish Report of Times-Democrat.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Firm cables and a good demand from spot people caused the cotton market to open steady to-day, first prices being 1 to 8 points higher than Saturday's final. After the call the list continued steady. The ring crowd, however, inclined to sell on favorable weather developments over Sunday, and Washington promises fair and warm weather during the coming week. Beneficial rains fell in South Texas Sunday, resulting in most active positions, except August, dropping 1 to 5 points from the initial levels.

During the forenoon a wave of heavy short covering dominated the market, which encouraged a good speculative demand. This class of buying was based on The New Orleans Times-Democrat report on the condition of the crop, the report being construed as bullish, which had a stimulating effect on the market. Offerings were eliminated considerably and prices made a rapid advance of 11 to 16 points over the previous close. July and August were in active demand, but the new crop positions were in the best demand and showed the greatest gain.

Memphis and some Wall Street houses were reported good buyers of the new crops. Spot people were noticeable buyers of the old crop. New Orleans was a good buyer, based on The Times-Democrat report.

Weather and crop advices were most favorable. The Memphis Commercial summary of the crop was bearish, but offering continued light and scattered.

Interests now seems to be centered on the ginning rather than crop news.

During the afternoon session the market was inflexible; prices recorded further gains, being 10 to 13 points over the opening quotations.

At the close the market was steady, with prices showing a net gain of 14 to 24 points from the final quotations of Saturday.

LIVERPOOL COTTON MARKET.

LIVERPOOL, June 16.—This market was due to open 1½ points higher on August and ½ point higher on other positions, but opened quiet, at a net advance of 1 to 1½ points. At 12:15 p. m., the market was quiet but steady, at a net advance of 1¼ to 2 points.

Cotton steady; good demand at 2 points advance; middling 6.75d; sales, 10,000 bales, including 9,500 American; imports 15,000 bales, of which all were American.

At the close the market was firm with prices, showing a net gain of 4½@7½ points from the final quotations of Saturday.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, June 16.—Weather conditions and changes over Sunday were distinctly favorable. Dry weather prevailed over most of the belt. The only precipitation of consequence occurred in South Texas, where it was needed. Minimum temperatures are 10 to 20 degrees higher than on Friday and are now entirely normal. Indications are for continuation of generally fair and warm weather, except in the coast districts of Louisiana and Texas, where it will be cloudy and possibly showery.

The Memphis Commercial-Appeal summary for the week is very favorable. Other crop reports are mostly favorable.

The Liverpool market was about as due on the opening; spot sales continue large, 10,000 bales to-day, at 2 points higher. Our market showed strength this morning and advanced to 12.06 for August and 11.58 for October, principally owing to the renewed strength and activity of July in New York. The weekly weather report to-morrow is expected to be bullish, as it covers the spell of last week. New York says that the strained conditions in July dominate the market and a decline in new crops does not seem probable until the summer positions are liquidated.

New York continued strong on bullish reports on both crops. Our market likewise held the advance well on small buying as selling is intimidated.

MILLER-COTTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, June 16.—New York seems inclined to work more to the bull side to-day, and, selling being scarce, no great volume of demand has been necessary to bring an advance. Weather over Sunday was ideal and crop accounts are good, but strength in summer months and fair demand in spot markets influences sentiment strongly. It is impossible to tell how far this swing will go, but short interest has been greatly reduced.

RENEWED SELLING PUTS STOCKS OFF

Transactions Attributed Mainly to Professionals — Reactionary Tendency Expected.

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Instead of following the lead of Americans in London, the stock market turned weak at the opening here to-day and declines were general throughout the list. Some stocks which started with advances were caught in the movement and lost part or all of their gain.

Canadian Pacific dropped 1⅝. United States Steel common began at 54¼ for a gain of ¼, but soon lost its advance and sustained a net decline of ⅝. Pressure was directed against Union Pacific, this issue losing a full point. New York, New Haven and Hartford again broke to par, selling at 100 for the loss of 1 point. Amalgamated Copper lost its fractional advance and shaded.

American Smelting was up ⅝ at the outset, but within half an hour was selling ⅛ under Saturday's final.

Among the other losses were Reading ⅝, Pennsylvania ¾, Northern Pacific ½, Missouri Pacific ¾, Lehigh Valley ⅝, Great Northern preferred ⅛ and Atchison ¼.

Gains were made by Utah Copper, New York Central, American Car and Foundry and American Can.

Goldfield Consolidated, which closed Saturday at 1⅛, was stricken from the list of stock exchange securities to-day.

The curb was steady.

Americans in London were strong. Canadian Pacific in London was irregular.

After a few minutes of active trading the market began to waver and fractional losses were recovered in several of the leading issues. Union Pacific suffered the most, falling 1¼ to 145¼. Steel was off ¾ from the opening. Copper and Pennsylvania were off ¼. Canadian Pacific continued its downward movement, reaching 219, a fall of 1¾.

Southern Pacific was off 1¼. Other issues suffered slight losses.

Call money loaned at 1¾.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 16.—J. M. Anderson: "Some of the ring crowd were aggressive sellers on and after the opening and their sales found ready chasers. It was evident that a lot of cotton was wanted. Memphis reported a good buyer of new crop; also some of the Wall Street houses. This started a wave of short covering and a rapid advance followed. After the first hour there seemed to be very little cotton for sale. The new crop option was much stronger than the old in the beginning, but spot people were noticeable buyers of old crops. Selling was scattered. The Times-Democrat was out with a bullish report, which brought some buying from New Orleans. However, Turner's report was bearish. Weather was favorable and private wires reported good conditions in some sections. The bears are very limited. Interests now seem to be entered on consumption, which, of course, must be recognized as the rise or fall, until there are further developments."

* * *

NEW YORK, June 16.—The market opened steady. The ring crowd was inclined to sell. The market, however, held steady after a sharp decline from the opening. The Times-Democrat crop report was construed as bullish, causing heavy buying.

* * *

Heavy short covering dominated the market after the call; also speculative buying. Spot people purchased July, causing the advance.

* * *

Memphis wires under date of June 14: "Reports received at the Cotton Exchange to-day say farmers in and around Kilmichael, Miss., are plowing up acres of cotton because the boll weevil has appeared in swarms."

* * *

Liverpool cables: "American middling fair, 7.33d; good middling, 6.99d; middling, 6.75d; low middling, 6.59d; good ordinary, 6.23d; ordinary, 5.89d."

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas and Oklahoma generally clear and warmer."

* * *

So far as weather news is concerned, there is very little incentive to support the new crops.

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, June 16.—Hayward & Clark: "The weather map is very good; shows fair and warm over the entire belt, except partly cloudy in southwestern quarter; no rain except few sprinkles in Central Texas and some good rains in South Texas where needed; night temperatures 10 to 20 degrees warmer than Friday and some entirely normal.

Washington forecast for week: "Warm and generally fair weather greater part of coming week in Southern States, although local thundershowers probable along immediate Gulf and South Atlantic coast."

The map continues to indicate generally fair and warm weather, except possibly few showers in South Texas.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat herewith presents its correspondents' first report on the cotton crop of 1913. The consensus of opinion points to the following results:

1. The increase of acreage is slight—probably about 3 per cent at the most.

2. The general condition is fairly favorable, but many sections complain of poor stands, caused by unseasonably low temperatures.

3. Labor is said to be scarce in some districts in consequence of migration to towns and public works.

4. Taking the belt as a whole, the crop is an exceedingly spotted one, and the weather of the next month will be extremely important.

5. There is a good deal of talk of boll weevil, but it is too soon to form an idea of the probable damage.

Wheat—No. 2 red	97 @98
Corn—No. 2	62½
Oats—No. 2	41½@42

CHICAGO, June 16.—Wheat closed strong around the best prices reached and at advances of 1⅜@1½. The bull fever seemed to be more in evidence to-day than was the case during several of the strong sessions of last week. While there were rains in the spring wheat country, they were reported as inadequate, and where additional moisture is wanted and the weather was cloudy, it was reported late that it was clearing up. This was the case, especially at Grand Forks, N. D. Export clearances were 774,000 bushels and for the month of May were 11,151,000 bushels compared with 4,585,000 for a like period last year. Corn closed with gains of 1½@1⅝ and oats were up 2¼@2⅝.

Provisions were higher all around.

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 16.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.:

Wheat—Since Saturday weather has been fairly good in many portions of North Dakota and it is raining at several points in that State this morning. Look for a nervous market and the fact that some precipitation has occurred in the spring wheat country is apt to give us a little more easier tendency.

Corn—Bullish sentiment is rampant, chiefly on dry conditions, but we doubt very much if any severe damage to growing crop has taken place up to the present time owing to lack of moisture.

Oats—The lack of rain, in our opinion, has a much more important bearing on the condition of this crop than on corn, especially as temperatures are so high. Reports continue to show lack of color and short growth

Good Progress Made By the Cotton Crop

MEMPHIS, June 16.—Reports from the Cotton Exchange to-day shows the cotton crop throughout the South to be generally good. Recent heavy rains have produced new strength in the plant, and the fields are clean of weeds. Labor is plentiful, and, as the planters are forced to meet fewer claims than usual, they will make more money than they have in many years.

The acreage in corn throughout Tennessee, Mississippi and Arkansas has greatly increased, and while more cotton is planted, the report says farmers have utilized thousands of acres of waste lands.

CREMATORY PUT UP TO COUNCIL BY MAYOR

Neither Approves Nor Disapproves Resolution Calling for Option on Electric Feature.

In notifying Council of his approval of the June budget and the purchase of the $260,000 crematory, Mayor Woodward Monday "washed his hands" of that part of the old crematory contract providing a $100,000 electric power plant in connection with the incinerator.

The Mayor notified Council he would take no action whatever on the resolution of Alderman Nutting and Councilman Mason calling for an option from the Destructor Company on the electric feature. Because he took no action the resolution automatically goes into effect.

Mayor Woodward's special message reads:

"I return the accompanying three resolutions passed at your session of June 2, 1913, without my signature of approval or disapproval.

"The whole subject matter contained in all three of the resolutions can be carried out by the framing of a contract with the Destructor Company incorporating the different matters contained in the resolutions.

"By careful reading of the different resolutions it will be noted that your honorable body has repeatedly mentioned the contract entered into in 1912, which the Supreme Court of this State has decided illegal and void and ordered an injunction against the further carrying on of the Destructor plant under the provisions of that contract. Under that condition of things, I feel that I am enjoined against any measure that may be looking to the fulfillment of that contract. All of the provisions specified in the different resolutions can be placed in a new contract to be entered into by your general body.

"In returning these papers to the General Council in this manner, I hope that my position is fully understood. While I do not believe that the city has received full benefit from this transaction, yet I do not feel disposed to interfere further if the new contract is so constructed as to give the city the benefit of all of the concessions enumerated."

Rites To Be Simple at Mrs. Bryan's Burial

Simplicity will mark the funeral of Mrs. Mary E. Bryan, one of the South's leading women writers who died Sunday night at her home in Clarkston, Ga. Many prominent persons, however, will be present to pay their last respects to the pioneer authoress.

Mrs. Bryan's prolific pen has touched the hearts of Southern people for the past half century. Besides contributing to many magazines, she also published 47 books.

Financially her work met with great success. Shortly before her death, Mrs. Bryan's held the position of editor of The Fireside Companion, in which position she is said to have received a salary of $25,000 a year, probably one of the highest ever paid to a woman in the United States.

Mrs. Bryan first gained recognition in the literary world when her work appeared in Scott's Magazine, which was published shortly after the Civil War. Later she went with The Sunny South for which periodicals she wrote for twelve years. When this magazine was taken over by Uncle Remus' Magazine, Mrs. Bryan became editor of a department in the latter. It was during her connection with the Uncle Remus periodical that Mrs. Bryan's most appealing work was accomplished.

Through her magazine articles and poetry she won the hearts of the legions of her readers. Rapidly she arose to national prominence. Her novels and books of the Southland have found themselves into the libraries of every city of the world.

Mrs. Bryan is survived by her three children, Mrs. Pearl Byrd, of Clarkston; Mrs. C. A. Wilson, of St. Louis, and Fred Bryan, of Clarkston.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Annie McWilliams, 50 years old, died at the residence, 59 Robbins Street, at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Besides her husband, W. M. McWilliams, she is survived by two children, Mrs. Lela Sanders and W. O. McWilliams. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Suicide's Last Wish Is That Flowers Be Put Upon His Grave

"Take good care of the baby and put a few flowers on my grave."

M. Roy Fowler, 125 Hunnicutt Street, fell unconscious at his wife's feet Sunday afternoon with these words on his lips. Fowler had just swallowed a bottle of carbolic acid. He died a few minutes later in an ambulance going to Grady Hospital.

Fowler ran a butcher shop on East Hunter Street. Financial troubles, it is believed, caused him to end his life He was an Odd Fellow and a Red Man and a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. He was 46 years old. Surviving are Mrs. Fowler and the baby, three brothers, J. L. Fowler, W. A. Fowler and T. A. Fowler, and two sisters, Miss Nan Fowler and Mrs. L. A. Hudson.

The body will be taken at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday morning to Indian Creek Cemetery for burial.

Steers Car Into Pole To Avert Collision

Paul H. Norcross, wife and child narrowly escaped serious injury Sunday afternoon, when, to avoid collision, Mr. Norcross was forced to swerve his automobile into a telephone pole at the corner of Highland and Ponce DeLeon Avenues. None of the party was injured. The car was badly damaged, and the pole was cut in half.

Mr. Norcross was driving down Ponce DeLeon Avenue early in the afternoon. At the junction of Highland Avenue he saw an automobile going in the same direction as a street car. The automobile was obscured until Mr. Norcross' machine was almost even with the trolley.

Cardinal Not Insane; Ill of Neurasthenia

ROME, June 16.—Cardinal Vives y Tuto, prefect of the congregation for religious affairs, who, according to certain reports, had become insane, is suffering only from neurasthenia, and by the advice of physicians has retired to a monastery at Frascati, near Rome.

Cardinal Vive y Tuto acquired a very prominent position at the Vatican after the election of Pope Pius X, and has even been considered as a probable candidate for the succession.

Angered Woman Sues Pastor for $25,000

PORTLAND, June 16.—Because she objected to being called "an obstreperous person, a mischief-maker and a nuisance," Mrs. A. E. Clark, wife of a prominent attorney, filed a suit for $25,000 against Rev. A. A. Morrison, pastor of Trinity Episcopal Church of this city.

Her attorney says the trouble grew out of Mrs. Clark's insistence on having women members of the fashionable church on the governing board of that congregation.

Uncle Sam Conducts 'Movies' for Toilers

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Through the award of contracts for several thousand feet of motion picture films, it has just become known that the United States Government is engaged in the moving picture business on a big scale.

The enterprise is carried on by the reclamation service camps in the West to keep the workmen and their families, isolated from the world, contented and happy.

Militants Must Pay For Broken Windows

LONDON, June 16.—A judgment for $7,000 damages for window smashing was awarded to-day in the King's bench division against a number of leaders of militant suffragettes in favor of 93 westend merchants whose property suffered in suffrage raids.

Among the defendants in the case were Mr. and Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst and Mrs. Flora Drummond.

SOCIAL SURVEY WILL FOLLOW DIAGNOSIS

Russell Sage Workers Here Describe Preliminary Study of Conditions Found.

Shelby M. Harrison, director in the department of surveys and exhibits of the Russell Sage Foundation, in an interview with The Georgian Monday outlined the work he and his two associates are doing in Atlanta by invitation of a Chamber of Commerce committee.

"We are making a preliminary diagnosis and pathfinder's survey," he said, "and in our report to the committee we will make certain specific recommendations which probably will lead to a social survey. We are not making the social survey now."

Mr. Harrison and his two associates, Franz Schneider, Jr., and Zenas L. Potter, are doctors of the body politic. They emphasize the fact they are not fault-finders. They go to a city, study sociological conditions from an entirely disinterested and unbiased angle and make a report. If the report makes the city or members of the city's sociological organizations see themselves as others see them, then they have accomplished their purpose. It is up to the city, then, to improve condtions and make the place a little better to live in.

"All Cities Have Problems."

"The last 25 years have brought many changes in social and personal relationships," Mr. Harrison said, outlining the basic principles behind the Sage foundation. "As cities grow, and factories come in, conditions change. The factories bring immigrants, and that brings new conditions. The entrance of women into industry and new methods of production all change conditions. I am just citing these as examples. Every advance and progress brings on changed conditions.

"Every change means a new problem. These problems are sociological. It is our business to diagnose these problems and make specific recommendations. In Atlanta we shall make detailed recommendations which may involve a social survey. The survey will point out the exact problems the city has to solve, and offer further suggestions and such help as may be desirable or desired. Then the credit for solving them will go to your local civic organizations, for it is they who must lead in the actual work."

For a week, now, Messrs. Harrison, Schneider and Potter have studied housing and living conditions in Atlanta; recreation, problems of education and of poverty, and the sanitary and penal systems. Mr. Harrison will go to New York to-morrow. Messrs. Schneider and Potter will continue the investigations through the week. They will leave the city with their data, and after a few weeks submit their findings, together with recommendations.

Will Suggest Improvement.

"Of course, I can't reveal the nature of this report in advance," Mr. Harrison said. "But I will say this much. We will be specific in recommending things to be taken in the survey. On a few subjects we will be able to outline suggestions for immediate improvement."

The spirit in which the Sage investigators enter upon their work was described by Mr. Harrison as follows: "Our attitude is thoroughly sympathetic with local agencies. We are not coming in Atlanta as iconoclasts trying to break down what you are doing. As distinterested parties, we naturally are capable of making detached observations. Then the social survey, as it always does, will bring together the instrumentalities for solving such problems as you may have. The social survey applies scientific methods to the solution of modern community problems.

"Such diagnoses as we are making and such social surveys as will probably follow in Atlanta are designed to stimulate a healthy public opinion. The object is to solve the city's social problems rather than to palliate them."

During the last year the Sage Foundation has received requests for diagnoses and surveys from 100 cities, most of them in the East and Middle West. Atlanta is the first Southern city to call for the preliminary pathfinder's survey.

"We felt the survey was a very progressive move on the part of your Chamber of Commerce," Mr. Harrison said. "Your Chamber of Commerce members are up on their toes, doing everything possible to make the city even more desirable to live in and a better commercial center. There are not a lot of chambers of commerce in the country, you know, that have seen it is a good thing to improve the place they live in, although this is the fundamental thing in making the city a good commercial center."

CABLE NEWS

Important Events From All Over the Old World Told in a Few Short Lines.

English Marquis Dies.

LONDON, June 16.—William G. S. Compton, fifth marquis of Northampton, died to-day in Italy, where he had gone for his health. He served in Parliament from 1889 to 1897.

London Brokers Suspend.

LONDON, June 16.—Announcement of the suspension of the Malcolm Cooke Company, brokers, dealing largely in American stocks, was made on the Stock Exchange to-day. This was the fourth failure in less than a week.

China Also Seeks Suffrage.

BUDAPEST, June 16.—Prediction was made to-day in the convention of the International Woman's Suffrage Congress that, in the 1916 election in the United States, every woman in the 48 States will have equal voting rights with men. China was enrolled in the congress to-day, bringing the representation up to five continents and 25 nations.

4 STATES WIN IN RATE FIGHTS; ONE LOSES

Supreme Court Decisions Against Railroads Over Whole West. Missouri Victory Partial.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Four States won victories and one lost to-day in railroad rate decisions rendered by the United States Supreme Court.

In the Missouri cases the State won a partial victory. Six of nine decisions were against the railroads.

There was no decision in the Nashville grain case.

The 2-cent passenger rate law of 1907 of the State of West Virginia was declared valid. The Chesapeake and Ohio sought an injunction on the same grounds as those relied on by railroads in other States that have unsuccessfully fought the law.

Oregon Rates Upheld.

The Oregon rate cases, brought by the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company, were decided in favor of the State.

The Arkansas State rate was declared constitutional.

The Kansas law fixing a minimum rate for the transportation of oil and fixing severe penalties for excess charges was held unconstitutional.

The six roads which will have to abide by maximum rates fixed by Missouri are the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy; the Sante Fe; Kansas City Southern; Missouri, Kansas and Texas; Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, including the St. Louis, Kansas City and Colorado and the St. Louis and San Francisco.

Three Cases Lost.

In three Missouri cases the rates were held to be confiscatory, the St. Louis and Hannibal, the Kansas City, Clinton and Springfield and the Chicago and Great Western.

The decision in the Missouri cases follows the principles laid down by the Minnesota cases. The right of the State to regulate intrastate commerce is upheld. The rates so fixed were held not to be confiscatory, except in the cases of the smaller roads.

U. S. Has No Special Jurisdiction on Sea.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The civil rights act of 1875, giving the United States jurisdiction in the District of Columbia, in Territories and over vessels on the sea, to-day was declared invalid by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Individual Can Prevent Pollution of Streams.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The rights of a private individual to bring suit to prevent the pollution of streams was upheld to-day by the Supreme Court in the caseo f the Arizona Copper Company against W. A. Gillespie.

New Trial Granted Man Sentenced to Life Imprisonment

A new trial was granted by the Supreme Court Monday morning to Warren Clements, given a life sentence for killing E. J. Griffin in Lowndes County. The Supreme Court held that the trial judge erred in making his charge.

Clements and several other men were on an automobile trip with Griffin when the killing took place. Clements fired a pistol and Griffin charged him with shooting at the automobile. This was denied and a quarrel resulted. Evidence in the case showed that the two men had stood at opposite ends of the automobile and shot at each other. Griffin received a wound from which he died later.

Wilson Girls to Keep House for President

WASHINGTON, June 16.—During the summer Miss Margaret Wilson, eldest daughter of the President, and her sisters will take turns in keeping house for their father, marooned at the White House by the tariff and currency bills.

Miss Margaret has left for a series of visits in the Middle West. She will be first the guest of Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, in Madison, Wis., and will spend several weeks with other friends before joining her mother at their summer home in Cornish, N. H., and sending the second sister to "take care of papa."

Robs Partner; Gives Up to Pay Penalty

RICHMOND, June 16.—Conscience-stricken because he had stolen $100 from Dan Bennett, his partner in the fruit business, at Waycross, Ga., A. L. Christian, aged 35, gave himself up to the police here. In police court to-day his case was continued until June 21, pending receipt of information from the Georgia authorities.

Christian says he wants to go back to Waycross and serve his time, so that he can continue to make that place his home. He left Waycross a month ago.

Twelfth of Family Gives Life to Lepers

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—Rev. Gottfried Hahn, recently ordained a minister of the German Evangelical Church, has departed for Purulia, India, where a colony of lepers is located.

Eleven others of his family, including his aged mother, ministered to the lepers of the same colony, serving many years in constant danger of contracting the disease.

Some Interesting Facts Concerning The Turkey Tribe

The Turkey the Only Fowl Extensively Bred in a Domestic State That Was Previously Wild.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

The turkey is the only fowl that is extensively bred in a domestic state that was previously wild. With this in view, it is really essential that we should know something of its habits while in the wild state. In the first place, it very naturally secured a great deal of exercise while doing its foraging for its daily rations. All this foraging served a two-fold purpose; it not only gave them the much-needed food for maintenance, but the exercise they got made them very hardy and thrifty. It enabled them to make the flight that was absolutely necessary that they might keep out of the reach of the Indians' bow and arrow or the white man's gun. This great vigor has, to a great extent, been carried down through generations to the present time, but in a very much modified form. In fact, every turkey that is raised in close quarters and used as a breeder is helping just that much to sound the death roll of the turkey. It weakens its constitution, and this weakness is transmitted to the next generation. Many people who attempt to raise turkeys in that way are really ignorant of the real harm they are doing the race of turkeys by such a course. But, thank fortune, not very many ever reach maturity over this route. Then there are so many persons working with turkeys who do not recognize one of the turkey's natural food lines. They fail to remember, if they ever knew, that the turkey's food in its wild state consisted chiefly of insects, interspersed with wild seeds, beech nuts, berries, etc., but little or no corn. The average poultry keeper who has not really studied the conditions as he should, feeds too much corn and cornmeal. Corn fed exclusively, or nearly so, is too rich a food and tends to pack the crop and the result is liver trouble. You will notice one going a little slow with a sort of measured tread. This will be about the only symptom noticed, but is enough to lay out many a promising half-grown turkey. Wheat, where it can be had, is one of the safest foods one can use. Used in the whole grain and its various millings, such as good bran, middlings and low-grade flour.

Middlings moistened with skim milk makes an ideal feed for the morning and then the evening feed may be of cracked corn and wheat, about half and half. Into the mash should be cut onion tops of about one-third inch lengths and mixed through. This is relished and at the same time is a great health promoter. Where low-grade flour is to be procured and not the shorts or middlings, it should be mixed half and half with good bran by measure. This is to be used as the shorts with milk. Turkeys should be induced to stay on the range as much as possible. To encourage this, one can scatter a little cracked corn out from the buildings in a trail to the woods and fields for a few times. This will get them to hunting in good shape if they are not fully inclined otherwise. Do not feed at noon time before they get to be of some size. When they find that they must stay out on the range to secure their living they will be but little trouble. If they seem to get a good supply of food in the fields, being satisfied, it is a good practice to give them but a very small feed at night, simply to encourage them to come home to roost. After they have gone to roost it is a good plan to put out their morning feed so they can get it at daybreak and go.

As a general thing, everything and everybody eats too much, so if they are doing fairly well on the range, let them alone until you notice that they are really hungry when they come home. It will then be evidence that foodstuff is getting scarce out there and it must be forthcoming from another source.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Concerns Formed For Development

Two Corporations With $350,000 Capital Seek Charters—Mrs. Akin and Others File Petitions.

Two large private companies have been formed for the development of local real estate. Mrs. John W. Akin, Winter Alfriend and V. A. Batchelor have petitioned the Superior Court for a charter to do business under the name of the Capital City Investments Company, and E. W. Alfriend, Mrs. Akin and Mr. Batchelor are seeking the name of the Georgia Investment Corporation. The former will start with $100,000 capital and carry the right to increase to $300,000, and the latter will be capitalized at $250,000, with the privilege of increasing to $500,000. Batchelor & Cheatham filed the petitions as attorneys. The Alfriends and Mrs. Akin are already in several big development enterprises.

Permit for $6,000 Home.

Building Inspector Ed R. Hays has issued a building permit to Mrs. W. B. Crouch to erect a $6,000 home at 479 St. Charles Avenue. This will be two stories and brick veneer.

Interest in Tax Question.

The proposal of Alderman John S. Candler that the tax assessments on Atlanta real estate should be lowered and the rate raised, to provide for an equalization that has long been needed, is in direct line with the contention of local real estate men. Some time ago, when Alderman John E. McClelland suggested that assessments be raised, the real estate men passed a resolution protesting against the move. They contended that the rate and, not the assessment, should be raised, and that this would incidentally establish a better proportion between what Fulton County paid the State and the total amount paid by all the counties. It has been estimated that Fulton pays, from all sources except corporation and special taxes, one-seventh of the State's tax revenue, which is held to be entirely too much. The real estate men consider the tax question a serious one, and they are greatly interested in Alderman Candler's plan.

Effect of Boulevard.

People owning property along the Marietta Road have learned with more than ordinary interest of the plan to build an automobile boulevard from Atlanta to Murphy, N. C., since this improvement would be a great help to the property in the section affected. Farmers got out pads and pencils Monday and tried to figure exactly how the road ought to run. There is a great deal of undeveloped territory in the northern section of the State, and the advocates of the plan for the highway claim that a good road will send property values much higher.

Income Tax Opposition.

Concerted opposition to the Federal income tax measure as it relates to real estate and rents has sprung up from another source. The National Association of Real Estate Exchanges has gone on record as opposing certain features of the bill. In its present form the bill has passed Congress and is now to be voted by the Senate. It appears that the real estate interests were slow in detecting objectionable features, since the bill had got fairly on its way before much definite action was taken. Members of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, it will be recalled, met recently and voted to protest the clause relating to the payment of taxes out of tenant fees, instead of from the landlords.

Many New Houses Rented.

The Smith, Ewing & Ranking Renting Agency has announced the following houses rented in the past few days:

No. 28 Joe Johnston Avenue, B. Phillips, $12.50; No. 46 Rogers Street, O. L. Graham, $15; No. 41 Mills Street, R. L. A Mother's Work and Her Hopes

An Editorial Written Especially for Men and Boys

(Copyright, 1913)

This editorial is not written for women. It is written for MEN, and for boys; for the millions who fail to appreciate the work that mothers do, for the millions that ignore the self-sacrifice and devotion upon which society is based.

On a hot night, in the dusty streets of a dirty city, you see hundreds of women sitting on porches, TAKING CARE OF BABIES.

In lonesome farm houses, far out on monotonous plains, with the late sun setting on a long day of hard work, you find women, cheerful and persevering, TAKING CARE OF BABIES.

In the middle of the night, in earliest morning, when MEN sleep, all over the world, in ice huts North, in Southern tents, in big houses and in dingy tenements, you find women awake, cheerfully and gladly TAKING CARE OF BABIES.

We respect and praise the man selfishly working for himself.

If he builds up a great industry and a great personal fortune, we praise him.

If he risks his life for personal glory and for praise, we praise him.

If he shows courage even in saving his own carcass from destruction, we praise him.

There was never a man whose courage, or devotion, could be compared with that of a woman caring for her baby.

The mother's love is unselfish, and it has no limit this side of the grave.

You will find ONE man in a thousand who will risk his life for a cause.

You will find a THOUSAND women in a thousand who will risk their lives for their babies.

Everything that a man has and is he owes to his mother. From her he gets health, brain, encouragement, moral character, and ALL his chances of success.

How poorly the mother's service is repaid by men individually, and by society as a whole!

The individual man feels that he has done much if he gives sufficient money and a LITTLE attention to her who brought him from nothingness into life and sacrificed her sleep and youth and strength for his sake.

Society, the aggregate of human beings, feels that its duty is done when a few hospitals are opened for poor mothers, and a little medicine doled out in cold-hearted fashion to the sick child.

Fortunately, it may truly be said that the great man is almost always appreciative of his greater mother.

Napoleon was cold, jealous of other men, monumentally egotistical when comparing himself with other sons of women. But he reverenced and appreciated the noble woman who bore him, lived for him, and watched over him to the end. He said:

"It is to my mother, to her good principles, that I owe my success and all I have that is worth while. I do not hesitate to say that the future of the child depends on the mother."

The future of the individual child depends on the individual mother, and the future of the race depends on the mothers of the race.

Think what has been done for mankind by thousands of millions of perfectly devoted mothers.

Every mother is entirely DEVOTED, entirely HOPEFUL, entirely CONFIDENT that no future is too great for her baby's deserts.

The little head—often hopelessly ill-shaped—rolls about feebly on the thin neck devoid of muscles. The toothless gums chew whatever comes along. The wondering eyes look feebly, aimlessly about, without focus or concentration. The future human being, to the cold-blooded onlooker, is a useless little atom added to the human sea of nonentity.

But to the mother that baby is the marvel of all time. There is endless meaning in the first mumblings, endless soul in the senile, baby smile, unlimited possibilities in the knobby forehead and round, hairless head. She sees in the future of the baby responsibilities of government, and feels that one so perfectly lovely must eventually be acclaimed ruler by mankind.

As a result of perfect confidence in its future, the mother gives to every baby perfect devotion, perfect and affectionate moral education. Each child begins life inspired by the most beautiful example of altruism and self-sacrifice.

Kindness has gradually taken the place of brutality among human beings, because every baby at its birth has found itself surrounded by absolute kindness.

The mother's kindness forms moral character.

The mother's confidence and encouragement stimulate ambition and inspire courage.

The mother's patient watchfulness gives good health, and fights disease when it comes.

The mother's wrathful protection shields the child from the stern and dwarfing severity of fathers.

Truly, a man may and should be judged by his feeling toward his own mother, and toward the mothers of other men—of ALL MEN.

In the character of Christ, whose last earthly thought on Golgotha was for His Mother, as in the character of the hard-working, ignorant man whose earnings go to make his mother comfortable, the most beautiful trait is devotion to the mother who suffers and works for her children, from the hours that precede their birth through all the years that they spend on earth together.

Honor thy father and THY MOTHER.

And honor the mothers of other men. Make their task easier through fair payment of the men who support the children, through good public schools for their children, through respectful treatment of ALL women.

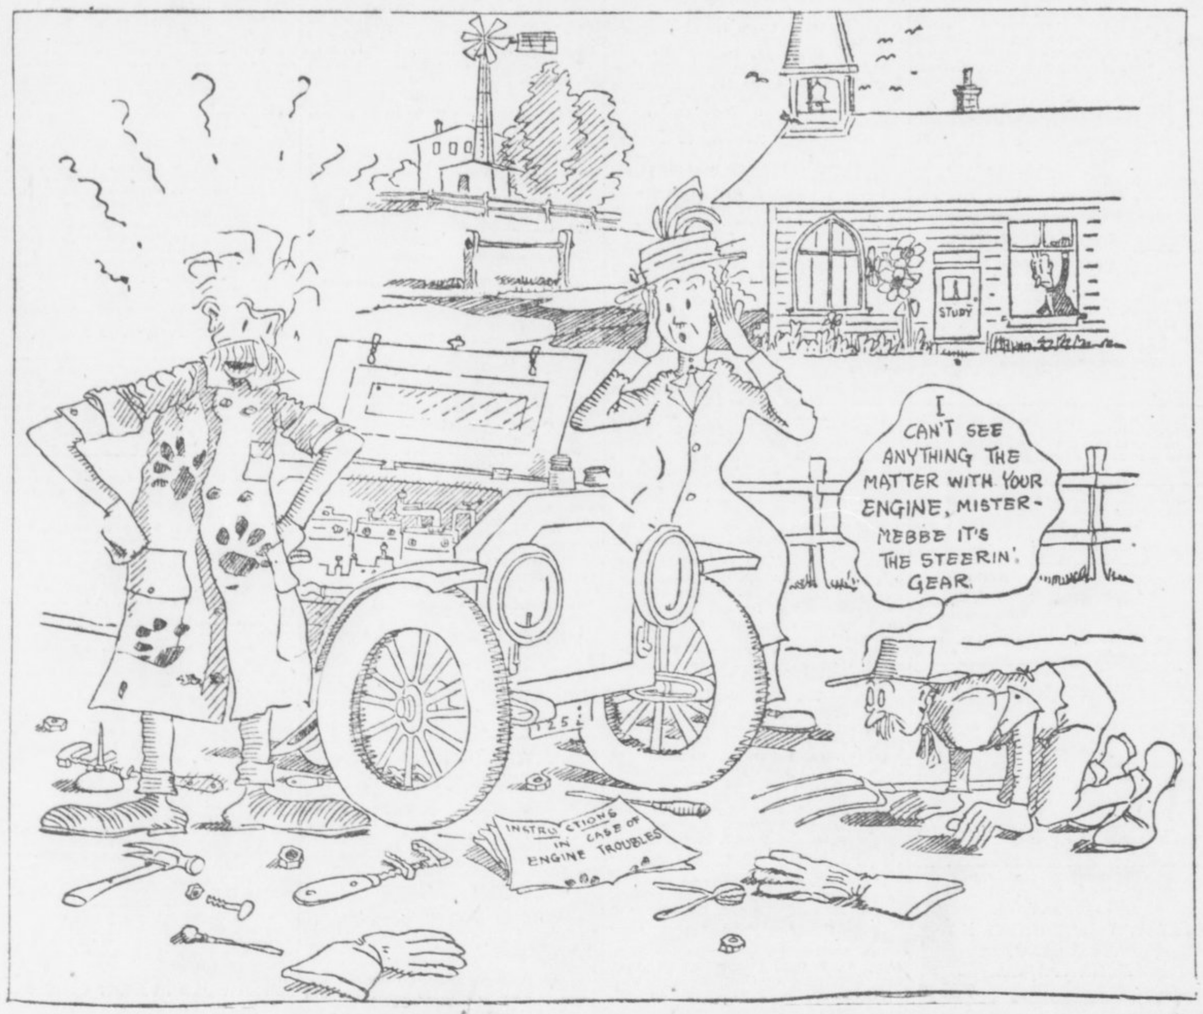
The mother is happy. For she knows "the deep joy of loving some one else more than herself."

You honor yourself, and prove yourself worthy of a good mother and of final success, when you do something for the mothers of the world.

There IS a Conspiracy Against This Man

Many a time you hear a young man say there's a conspiracy in his office to keep him from advancing. Usually he's right. There IS a conspiracy, and the conspirators are his baser selves. When the young man in the picture loafs at his work; when he drinks; when he stays up all night gambling—he's heading the conspiracy against his own success. And that's the only sort of conspiracy that can ever keep a man from his goal.

Mr. Suburbs Merely Forgot the Gasoline



Reprinted From the New York Evening Journal.

The Progress and Prosperity of Los Angeles a Triumph of Intelligence and Independence

NEWS articles have been circulated in the East concerning the late election in Los Angeles, containing statements which are not justified by the facts.

These misstatements have emanated from the newspapers of a certain political leader or boss of Los Angeles, who was defeated in the late election and who has attempted to excuse himself and explain his own defeat by an attack upon the electorate of Los Angeles.

As a matter of fact, Los Angeles has voted in this election with its usual good sense and good judgment, with its customary progressive spirit and high morality.

Mr. Rose, the newly elected Mayor, has had an excellent career as a judge, is a man of experience in politics and of sterling character as a citizen. He will give Los Angeles the efficient, honest, progressive administration that the intelligent and public-spirited citizens of that city demand, and Los Angeles in its choice for Mayor is a subject for congratulation.

The high character of the politics of Los Angeles and the tremendous advantage of such clean and conscientious politics, in contributing to the wonderful growth and attractiveness of that city, are things which the citizens of New York should study and imitate.

In this late election, and in previous elections, party prejudices and national political partisanship played no part whatever. There was no candidate of the Democratic party and no candidate of the Republican party in the local field. The Socialist party, to be sure, was in evidence and ran third in the race, but the two leading parties in numerical strength were two absolutely independent parties, with independent citizens as candidates on each of their tickets.

The whole election was fought out upon the mere matter of the availability and the capability of the candidates.

The decision in favor of Mr. Rose was reached mainly because of the belief of the people in his special fitness and his unexceptionable qualities as a man and a citizen.

One other influence of importance, however, entered into the campaign, and that was a declaration in favor of Mr. Shenk, the independent candidate opposing Mr. Rose, by Mr. Edwin T. Earl, a political leader, or rather boss, in Los Angeles politics.

Even though Mr. Earl is a boss, he is not a squalid one of the kind that dominate so many of our Eastern cities. He is a man of ability and of wealth, but he is considered a boss and he had been accused of using his political power to the advantage of his private interests.

The independent citizens of Los Angeles refused to tolerate a boss or the candidate of a boss. Mr. Shenk had been the leading candidate, and the betting stood at 2 to 1 in his favor. But when Mr. Shenk refused to repudiate satisfactorily the boss and the attempted association of the boss, the public-spirited citizens of Los Angeles turned from Mr. Shenk to Mr. Rose, and elected Mr. Rose by a handsome plurality.

What an inspiration action like this is to the cause of independence, clean politics and good government everywhere! What could not New York accomplish if the citizens of New York had the independence and the courage and the public spirit of the citizens of Los Angeles! How long would the people of New York be betrayed by their parties and their public officials if the citizens of New York would support no party in municipal matters except an independent party, and no candidate except a candidate that was wholly free from boss dictation and domination?

The citizens of Los Angeles regard the conduct of their municipal government as a great business enterprise, and they approach the question from a sound business point of view, free from personal selfishness or party prejudice.

They have put into operation direct primaries, the initiative, the referendum and the recall. They select candidates with the one consideration of the fitness of the candidates. They elect them without bias or prejudice. They instruct them through the initiative. They review their acts through the referendum, and they retire them, if unfaithful or incompetent, through the recall.

Los Angeles is far ahead of New York in progressive principles, in public spirit and in the efficient conduct of its government. The result is a public administration which is as clean and wholesome as a private household.

Los Angeles has the beauty of its site, a matchless climate, an intellectual and enterprising people, attractive and distinctive architecture, delightful homes surrounded with parks and gardens. It is the center of a great petroleum trade and an extensive citrus fruit industry, an entrepot for the maritime trade of the world and the metropolis of the expanding empire of the great Southwest.

But who shall say that the wonderful growth in population and prosperity of Los Angeles, which is one of the marvels of this marvelous land, is not due as much to its wholesome political condition as to the wonderful climate of this favored section and the varied resources of its farms and orchards, its oil wells, its manufactures and its mines?

Would not New York confer upon itself an immeasurable material as well as a moral benefit if it would learn, like Los Angeles, to conduct its government cleanly and competently in the control of the whole people and in the best interests of the whole people?

COURT DEPUTY CUT TO DEATH IN FIERCE BATTLE WITH NEGRO

David Yancey Slain by Crazed Black Who Defied Arrest After Terrorizing Rawson Street Neighborhood. Is Wounded by Police Before Capture

Court Deputy David Yancey was hacked and stabbed to death Monday forenoon in a desperate battle with Eugene Watson, a crazed negro who had run amuck and terrorized the residents in the vicinity of Rawson and Windsor Streets.

Brought to bay under a vacant house at 33 Windsor Street, the black man evaded for more than half and hour the wagonload of policemen who had been hurried to the scenc of the killing on a riot call.

The negro surrendered only after he had been badly wounded and saw that he could not hold out longer against the posse of bluecoats who had surrounded him in his stronghold.

A lynching was averted only by the large force of officers who rushed to the house and hurried the unconscious negro to the police station in an automobile.

Cries of "Lynch him!" were heard on every hand. The crowd was wildly excited and thronged about the negro as he was being taken from the basement. The policemen quickly formed a circle about Watson and pushed the angry men away.

Until he was hurried into the automobile, the danger of violence was not passed, the crowd at one time threatening to take him from the officers.

Yancey's body was terribly mutilated by the frenzied negro. Rather than be taken, Watson rushed like a wild beast toward Yancey, stabbed him repeatedly in the breast and back and slashed one of his arms almost to ribbons. Yancey probably was dead long before Watson had completed his fiendish attack.

The trouble which resulted in the tragedy started when Watson snatched $4 from Jesse Winn, an aged negro, on Whitehall Street. Watson ran after getting the money and threatened with a drawn knife everyone who stood in his path.

Deputy Gives Chase.

As he was running up Rawson Street, Deputy Yancey, who happened to be in that vicinity to serve some papers, took up the chase. Watson ran into the yard at the rear of 303 Rawson Street, the home of Mrs. J. W. Wilson, with Yancey in close pursuit.

Robert Starnes, aged 16, of 11 Fitzgerald Street, joined in the chase, along with a score of other persons. Yancey fired upon the negro as he cornered him in the yard.

"Damn you, you've got to kill me before you can take me," Watson shouted as he rushed upon the deputy and snatched the still smoking revolver out of his hand.

With this he drew the knife and plunged it time and again into the body of Yancey. The deputy sank to the ground mortally wounded, but the blood-maddened negro kept hacking and stabbing the limp body.

Boy Rushes to Aid.

Young Starnes, who had hastened to the officer's assistance, picked up one brick after another and hurled them at the negro, but the latter paid no attention to the blows.

When Watson had sated his bloody passion, he leaped from the prostrate body of Yancey and ran up the street, taking refuge, when hotly pressed, in the cellar of the vacant house at 33 Windsor Street.

He was quickly surrounded by the posse of officers. Thrusting their weapons in under the house they commenced a fusillade upon the negro which failed to subdue him until he was almost riddeld with bullets.

Several bullets took effect in his left leg and shattered the bones both above and below the knee. Another bullet found lodgment in his right.

FUND IS STARTED FOR YANCEY'S FAMILY

First subscriptions to The Georgian's fund for Deputy Yancey's family:

Atlanta Georgian	$25.00
Sheriff's Office	50.00
Red Cross Hospital	10.00
Frank L. Harralson	5.00
Harry Latham	5.00
Newt Garner	5.00
John W. Moore	5.00

Court Deputy David Yancey is dead. He met a horrible fate. He was stabbed and hacked to death while endeavoring to serve his employer, the public of Atlanta and Fulton County. He died "with his boots on."

The whole city and the entire county will applaud this brave man's deed and mourn his death. Then they will turn again to their own homes and happy families and the humdrum of business. Court Deputy David Yancey will pass from their minds.

It remains for the dead man's unhappy family to bear the real burdens of consequences which its head met in serving the public. There is the widow, who idolized her big, strong husband. There are also eigh: children, bright-eyed boys and girls, not one of them over 16 years of age, who will romp no more about their father's knee.

Yancey's family was in straitened circumstances at the time of his death. Sickness had invaded the house and two of the children are now in a hospital.

Already friends of the dead man are thinking of this. The Georgian also has thought of this.

The Georgian has started a fund to care for the family whose head was cut off while serving the people of Atlanta and Fulton County.

This newspaper has headed the list with $25. The amount is small—not commensurate in any manner with the price paid by Yancey. But its smallness invites contributions from other sources—from the public whom Yancey served. The Georgian will gladly receive these contributions and see that they are put in the hands of the bereaved family as a poor substitute for what it has lost.

High praise was given the deputy by Sheriff Mangum, his superior officer.

Drinks Poison in Suicide Attempt

Denson D Glymph, 61 years old, of 829 Seaboard Avenue, attempted suicide late Monday by drinking four glasses of diluted "rough on rats." He was taken to Grady hospital where it is reported he will recover.

Glymph was in the act of drinking the fifth glass when his wife, heppening in the room knocked the glass from his hands.

The police say Glymph was despondent over domestic troubles.

DORSEY AIDE SAYS FRANK IS FAST IN NET

Attorney Hooper Declares State Is Prepared for Any Move the Defense May Make.

Frank A. Hooper, the well-known criminal lawyer who has been engaged to assist Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey in the trial of Leo M. Frank for the alleged murder of Mary Phagan, said Monday that the case was complete and was ready for presentation in court at any time.

Mr. Hooper asserted that the attorneys interested in the prosecution had investigated every angle of the mystery so thoroughly and fortified themselves against any defense that Frank will present, that practically nothing remained to be done until the case was called for trial. The departure of Solicitor Dorsey for a week's vacation, he said, was an indication of the preparedness of the prosecution.

No new developments are expected by the prosecution, according to Mr. Hooper. All of the stories and rumors have been run down to their original source. The defense, in his opinion, will be able to spring no surprise that has not been anticipated by the prosecution.

Mrs. Frank Gives Interview.

The American printed Sunday an exclusive interview with Mrs. Frank, whose husband, Leo M. Frank, is under indictment charged with the murder of 14-year-old Mary Phagan. It was the first time that Mrs. Frank had permitted herself to be interviewed since the Coroner's jury a month ago recommended that the Grand Jury hold her husband for trial.

She broke her silence to tell the thousands who have been gripped by the remarkable murder mystery just why she is absolutely confident and positive that Frank could not have been the author of the terrible deed. She made no plea for sympathy, but expressed herself as fully reconciled to the processes of the law, even though they temporarily caused her the greatest sorrow and kept her husband behind the cars as a man suspected of one of the most brutal crimes thinkable. The loyal wife said that she was able to bear the present belief because of the assurance of Frank's ultimate and complete vindication.

Why She Believes Husband.

On the fact that she believes from her life with the suspected slayer that any gross or immoral act is utterly apart from his nature, she bases much of her belief in his entire innocence.

She said, in part:

"In all the year and a half of our engagement, in the happy knowledge and consent of both our parents, I was Leo's 'best girl' and he was my one and only beau. If I went to a party, it was conceded that I should go with Leo, and if Leo went, he invariably went with me. You know, the people of my faith do those things in that way—with us, betrothal is all but as sacred as marriage itself.

"Leo Frank and myself have been man and wife for two years and a half. I state it as a circumstance showing how sweet and mutually happy our home life has been, and not as a thing I should mention ordinarily, that during all the two and a half years of our wedded life not once has Leo been away from me at night, save when once a month he attended the meetings of the Jewish Order of B'nai Brith, of which he was the president in Atlanta until he was arrested.

He Preferred Staying Home.

"He might have gone out in the evenings, perhaps without my knowledge, to places he should not have gone, so far as my free consent may have figured as a factor in his going. I merely cite it as a truthful circumstance that he has not elected to go. He seemed rather to prefer staying home with me. Naturally, that made

LOCALS ROUT FLEHARTY EARLY IN GAME

Tommy Long's Triple Clears Bases in Fourth Inning; Gilbert Price on Mound.

PONCE DE LEON BALL PARK, June 16.—The Crackers triumphed over the Vols, 7 to 3 here this afternoon.

Tommy Long was the hero of the combat. His triple in the fourth cleared the bases and forced Fleharty to cover. Tommy also secured two other hits and stole two bases.

Gilbert Price twirled good ball for the locals.

THE GAME.

FIRST INNING.

Callahan grounded to Alperman, who made a great stop and threw the ex-Cracker out to Price. The latter covered first base. Lindsey flied to Long. Daley hit a scratch single through Smith and went out trying to steal second, Dunn to Alperman. NO RUNS, ONE HIT.

Long grounded out, Lindsey to Schwartz. Welchonce out, Perry to Schwartz. Alperman flied to Daley. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

SECOND INNING.

Perry was safe on Bisland's error of his grounder. Young grounded down the first base line and was tagged out by Price. Schwartz tripled to right and Perry tallied. Goalby bunted to Smith, who fielded the ball poorly, allowing Schwartz to score and Goalby to reach first. Gibson hit into a double play, Alperman to Agler. TWO RUNS, ONE HIT.

Bailey singled to center. Smith walked. Bisland sacrificed, Perry to Goalby. Agler singled to left, scoring Bailey. Dunn grounded to Fleharty and Smith was out in a chase, Fleharty to Perry to Gibson to Perry. Agler went to third and Dunn to second on the out. Price walked, filling the bases. Long hit a weak pop to Goalby. ONE RUN, TWO HITS.

THIRD INNING.

Fleharty hit a Texas leaguer over short. Callahan singled to left and Fleharty went to second. Lindsey sacrificed, Dunn to Alperman. Daley grounded to Agler and Fleharty was caught at the plate to Dunn. Perry grounded to Bisland and was out to Agler. NO RUNS, TWO HITS.

Welchonce out, Goalby to Schwartz. Alperman out, Callahan, Bailey popped to Perry. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

FOURTH INNING.

Young walked. Schwartz sacrificed to Agler. Goalby was hit by a pitched ball. Gibson grounded to Bisland and Goalby was out at second to Alperman. Fleharty flied to Welchonce. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

Smith flied out to deep left field. Bisland singled past Schwartz. Agler singled to center and Bisland breezed down to second. Dunn grounded out, Perry to Schwartz, and Bisland went to third and Agler to second on the out. Price received a free pass, filling the bases. Long smashed out a triple to left, scoring Bisland, Agler and Price. Daley got his fingers on the ball after a great run, but was unable to hold it. Welchonce hammered a single past Goalby and Long registered. Alperman hit a single to right and Welchonce took second. When Young fumbled the ball Welchonce raced to third. At this juncture Fleharty was taken out and Dye went to the slab for Nashville. Bailey was out, Goalby to Schwartz. FOUR RUNS, FIVE HITS.

FIFTH INNING.

Callahan out, Price to Agler. Lindsey flied to Long. Daley walked and Perry popped to Bisland. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

Smith was beaned. Bisland grounded to Schwartz, who made a fine stop, and retired the batter at first. Smith took second on the out. Agler fanned and Smith stole third. Dunn out, Lindsey to Schwartz. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

SIXTH INNING.

Young flied to Bailey. Schwartz out, Smith to Agler. Goalby walked. Gibson flied to Welchonce. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

Price fanned. Long beat out a grounder to Goalby. Welchonce flied to Callahan and Long swiped second. Alperman hit a Texas leaguer past Perry and Long raced home. Bailey fouled to Young, who made a sensational running catch. ONE RUN, TWO HITS.

SEVENTH INNING.

Dye fanned. Callahan fanned, but Dunn dropped the third strike and Callahan took second on the error. Lindsey fanned. Daley out, Alperman to Agler. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

Smith out, Lindsey to Schwartz. Bisland was beaned. Agler fouled to Gibson. Dunn popped out to Perry. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

EIGHTH INNING.

Perry fouled out to Agler. Young out, Alperman to Agler. Schwartz out, Smith to Agler. NO RUNS, NO HITS.

Price bunted and was out, Perry to Schwartz. Long doubled to left and stole third. Welchonce fouled to Perry. Alperman doubled to left, scoring Long. Bailey walked. Smith grounded to Lindsey and Smith was forced at second to Goalby. ONE RUN, TWO HITS.

NINTH INNING.

Goalby popped to Long. Gibson doubled to left. Noyes, batting for Dye, singled to center, scoring Gibson. Callahan grounded to Bisland and Noyes was forced at second to Alperman. Lindsey walked. Daley out, Price to Agler. ONE RUN, TWO HITS.

DEPUTY SLAIN BY CRAZED NEGRO DESPERADO

Black Wounded and Captured After Fierce Battle With Police. Expected to Die.

groin and still others in his right side.

In spite of his many wounds, it was thought that he might live. None of them alone would have been fatal. Watson has been wanted for some time at Fayetteville for escaping from the chaingang, and Warden Harris has been in Atlanta several times trying to locate the negro. Failing, he detailed a negro to stay in the city in an effort to find him. It was known that Watson lived in the rear of 60 Orange Street, but he was shrewd enough not to go near his home.

An especial act of bravery during the siege of Watson, who was in the darkness under the house, was that of Policeman Paul West. Watson, crippled but still defiant, was in an obscure corner. The officers called upon him to surrender. He shouted his defiance at them. After the fire was resumed the negro saw there was no further use in resisting and yelled that he was ready to give up.

West Dares Death in Dark.

The officers waited, but the negro did not come out of the darkness. Policeman West, against the warnings of his fellow-officers, dropped to the ground and crawled under the house toward the negro. His comrades were expecting every instant to hear the crack of a shot which would tell that West, too, had fallen a victim to the crazed black man.

West, however, crept up on the negro and hit him over the head with the butt of his revolver. Then he took him by the feet and dragged him, senseless, out into the light.

At the sight of the negro the anger of the mob which had collected was redoubled. Inflamed beyond measure by the atrocious killing, they surged forward and would have borne Watson off had not the policemen hastily surrounded him and carried him to the waiting automobile.

His eyes glazed and staring, the negro appeared utterly unconscious as he lay in the car. Questions as to his identity were hurled at him as he was borne to the station house and later to the hospital, but he seemed not to hear them.

Woman Stands Guard.

Mrs. Hattie Barnett, Atlanta's woman detective, lives at 15 Woodward Avenue, just back of the yard on Windsor Street, where the bloody battle between Watson and Yancey took place. She heard the shots that Yancey fired at the negro and ran out to see the deputy lying on the grass, horribly gashed and mutilated, and the negro running up the street.

Snatching her revolver she ran out of doors and after the negro. When Watson took refuge under the house on Windsor Street, Mrs. Barnett stood guard until the wagon load of policemen and detectives under command of Assistant Chief Jett and Captain Poole dashed up in front of the house.

Irby Terry, of 294 Whitehall Street, a boy of 11 years, had a narrow escape at the hands of the negro. Terry was standing on the street corner when the negro dashed by after snatching the purse of Winn. Watson brandished his knife and as he came upon the boy he made a lunge which Terry narrowly dodged.

Family Left in Want.

One of the many pathetic features of the tragedy is the poverty of the family that Yancey leaves. They have had a hard struggle for existence in their little home at Lakewood Heights on the Jonesboro Road. Eight children are in the family, none of them above 16 or 17 years of age. One of the two older daughters recently was taken to the hospital, making an additional burden upon Yancey.

Only recently Yancey was made a bailiff in Judge Calhoun's court. The salary was $100 a month. Yancey was overjoyed when apprised of his appointment.

"Now everything will be fine sailing," he said. "That fixes me just right. I am tickled to death. One of my children is in the hospital and another is very sick. I can take care of them now."

Jesse Winn, the old negro from whom Watson stole the $4, lives in DeWald alley. Watson is said to have stayed at the Winn home on several occasions. Winn is an employee in the coal yards of the Southern Railway.

Auto Has Red Flag; Chased by Angry Bull

SACRAMENTO, June 16.—A red Sacramento pennant attached to the rear of the automobile of H. A. McClellan, of this city, almost brought disaster upon himself and family when a bull attacked the machine from the flank on the road between Nicolas and Lincoln. By dodging and speeding the chauffeur managed to escape with a punctured tire which the bull gored with his horns.

FRANK TIGHT IN NET, SAYS AIDE TO DORSEY

me very happy—for I am, after all, a woman, like other women, and a woman never gets to the point where she does not dearly love for her husband to show her that he is still her sweetheart.

"We have lived here in this house, with my father and mother. To them, Leo has been devoted and always most considerate. They love him as a son; they took him close to their hearts before the wedding bells had ceased to ring—for that is the way our people do in those matters.

"I will tell you another reason why I think Leo Frank could not have committed the diabolical crime charged to him. He is devoted to children—little children especially.

"We have no children of our own, unfortunately, but there are several nieces and nephews in the family, and to every one of them Mr. Frank is affectionately attached. I have seen him play with a two-year-old child for hours, not once, but many times.

Helps Little Orphan Children.

"He has been with Mr. Milton Klein, for many years one of the moving spirits in providing innocent and healthful outdoor recreation and pleasure for the children of the Hebrews' Orphan Home.

"Is a man who loves children as Leo Frank loves them likely to have a hand in the slaying of an innocent child, not yet budded into youthful womanhood, as Mary Phagan is said to have been?

"If there is one person in all the world he has been more devoted to than to me, it is his aged and blind uncle, M. Frank. Is a man who is kind and considerate to the lame, the halt and the blind such a man as would take a hand in the killing of a child?

"Ah, surely, surely, there are few people who will—who can—believe that!

Always Kind and Generous.

"In the home where Leo Frank has spent his time away from his business, he always has been the most kind, the most generous, the most thoughtful, the most considerate and the most affectionate of men.

"I think my knowledge of Leo Frank and the kind of man he is is worth more than the word of a shiftless negro who has lied persistently and vigorously ever since he was arrested as a suspect—but while my voice will be hushed in the court room, his will be heard by both the judge and the jury trying my husband for his life.

"There is, of course, much in this case that has seemed to me cruel—and now and then I have been moved to some measure of bitterness in my thoughts. But I believe that truth is mighty, and all I want is fair play.

She Wants Fair Play.

"If we can get fair play, my husband will be restored soon to me and to his family and his friends—and when he is, we shall take up calmly, and in such degree of forgetfulness as we can summon to our aid, the disrupted thread of our life, bind up our wounds, and try to hold against no man aught of ill will or resentment.

"That's the way I feel about it, and that's the way Leo feels about it. That's the way mother and father feel about it, too.

"We await the trial of Leo Frank in confidence. We have come to think that, after all, we shall get fair treatment—and as that is all we have asked for, we are more and more optimistic every day as to the conclusion."

I'LL KEEP PEACE, KAISER TELLS CARNEGIE

BERLIN, June 16.—Andrew Carnegie, leading worker for word-wide peace, to-day paid his respects to Emperor William, the "war lord of Europe." Mr. Carnegie was accompanied by other American peace commissioners who came here to extend felicitations to the Kaiser as part of the quarter centennial celebration of the ascension of the Emperor to the throne of Germany.

Mr. Carnegie and his fellow commissioners presented the Kaiser with an address in the name of 44 American peace and conciliation societies. The address pointed out that William's reign of 25 years has been notable because of the maintenance of a quarter of a century of peace. In reply the Kaiser said, in part:

Hopes for Peaceful Reign.

"I hope to reign 25 years more in peace, and shall certainly do all I can in that direction."

Germans expressed great curiosity to see the American iron master and great crowds lined the streets when he departed from the Adlon Hotel, where he is stopping with his wife and daughter, Margaret. He was heartily cheered. This cordial demonstration pleased Mr. Carnegie, who waved his hand to the crowds.

Among those who were received with Mr. Carnegie by the Emperor were Robert S. Brookings, of St. Louis, and Jacob G. Schmidlapp, of Cincinnati.

Although yesterday was the real anniversary, William having ascended the throne June 15, 1888, because it was Sunday the secular ceremonies were postponed until to-day.

Bands Play Martial Tunes.

Shortly after dawn the massed military bands from all the garrisons in the environs of Berlin assembled in Unter Den Linden and a crash of martial music, which echoed and re-echoed through the neighboring streets, followed.

Seven thousand school children joined in singing "The Watch on the Rhine" and other tunes the bands played. The streets were crowded with visitors from all sections of the empire. Among these were many American, English and other foreign tourists.

A mighty crowd gathered about the marble palace in Potsdam and sang the national hymn time and again. The wetaher was ideal for the occasion.

Catholics May Take New Bible Version

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Rev. D. J. Kennedy, theologian of the Dominican Order, announced here to-day that a revised translation of the Bible had been prepared by the late Rev. F. A. Spencer, of the Dominicans. Dr. Kennedy delivered an oration at Father Spencer's funeral exercises, and disclosed that Father Spencer devoted the last twenty years of his life to the translation.

He predicted the Roman Catholic clergy soon would call a special canonical council to consider the new version in place of the Douay's, which has been accepted for more than 300 years.

Marshall Sees Rules For Life in Baseball

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The rising generation was directed to form its rules of life upon the rules of baseball by Vice President Marshall in a children's day address before the Bethany Chapel Prebyterian Sunday school.

"No boy is so mean as the boy who will not play the game square," said the Vice President. "The sense of justice is ever present in the heart and mind of every boy and girl. I never have seen a thoroughly bad girl, but I believe I have seen one or two boys who were really bad."

1 Dead, 3 Hurt, When Train Strikes Auto

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., June 16. Improvement was noted to-day in the condition of Miss Willie Newton, Mrs. Finis Plumlee and Leo Chamberlain, who were injured yesterday when a Southern Railway passenger train struck an automobile in which they were riding near Ooltewah, killing Finis Plumlee.

The party was returning from an outing at Ocoee. Chamberlain, the chauffeur, was hurled 100 feet.

COOPER HAS WAY TO MEET FOOD SHORTAGE

Chamber of Commerce Secretary Urges Enlistment of 100,000 Boys in Corn Club.

Secretary Walter G. Cooper, of the Chamber of Commerce, Monday proposed a way to meet the $37,000,000 deficit in the food supply of Georgia. He urged organization of 100,000 boys in the corn clubs and thereby increasing tenfold the work which already has added 25,000,000 bushels of corn to the annual crop.

Mr. Cooper urges an immediate and active State-wide interest in the 1913 Georgia Corn Show as the most important step.

He says:

"Leading authorities on the food supply of Georgia agree in the estimate that the people sent out of this State last year $172,496,000 for corn, oats, hay, meat, dairy products and other food that should be raised here.

"The cotton and cotton-seed crops lack $37,496,000 of paying for the food we bought; this in spite of the fact that the corn crop of Georgia has increased 25,000,000 bushels in five years.

Average Yield Increasing.

"We have heard of a revolution in agriculture. Statistics show the average yield of corn went up from 10 to 15 bushels in five years. Georgia, though, still lacks a great deal of raising her food.

"In the face of wonderful improvements wrought by corn clubs in five years, it is hard to believe the statement that the cotton crop lacks $37,000,000 of paying for food supplies brought into the State; but these estimates are vouched for by such men as P. A. Methvin, State pure food inspector, and H. G. Hastings, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Committee on Agriculture.

"Of course, farmers raise some corn, oats and hay, but they must have consumed what they raised; otherwise they would not have to buy.

"Georgia farmers, according to the State Department of Agriculture, produce something more than $232,000,000, possibly $250,000,000, but when it is remembered that farmers have to buy mules, fertilizers, hardware, clothes, school books and a great many other things besides food, it is clear that they have little left to pay the enormous food bills indicated by the foregoing figures.

Confronted by Problem.

"What are we going to do about it? "Of course, we must make the farms more productive and produce the things that we import.

"States like Iowa are producing 36 bushels of corn to the acre. There is no reason why this should not be done in Georgia.

"In addition to this, the State of Iowa sells $200,000,000 a year of animal products.

"We can not have much in the way of animal products until we have enough corn, oats, hay and forage to feed the animals as well as the people.

"If we are short $58,000,000 in corn with no animals to feed, how much more corn will we have to raise in order to supply the present demand and furnish food for $200,000,000 worth of animals as Iowa does?

"Iowa is about the same size as Georgia and the climate is certainly no better. There is no more congenial soil and not as much moisture."

Atlanta Eagle Aerie Goes to Convention

Leaving the Terminal Station at 9:20 o'clock to-night the Atlanta Aerie, No. 714, of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, 150 strong, accompanied by its drum corps of 30, will start in special coaches for Jacksonville, where the annual convention of the organization begins to-morrow for a three-day session.

The convention is made up of representatives from four Southern States—Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina and Florida—and is known as the Southeastern section of the organization.

Wears Draperies In Arabian Act

Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, in her Oriental costume.

Says She Needs Money For Boys' Home and Praises Light, Flowing Costume For Women.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, who has earned the sobriquet of "the most unconventional woman in all England," will dance in New York swathed in picturesque Arabian costume, consisting of brown and white draperies, in a drama based on the biblical character Judith.

For her two weeks' work she will receive $10,000.

The love for Oriental dress was gained by Lady Constance while in India.

"The day will come when all women will dress like those of Egypt and India," she said. "The cost is nominal, and I am relieved of all worry about the changing styles. Then, too, this costume is comfortable, and that is something that can not be said for the modern attire favored by women. And, also, I think that I am safe in saying it is about as becoming as most modern outfits."

Lady Constance has been implored many times by her relatives, the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, not to dance in public. But Lady Constance said she needed the money for a boys' home in Scotland which she is trying to help.

CITY TO SWELTER AS BREEZES FAIL

Weather Man Declares Mercury Will Hit High Places—Hot Monday Morning.

Soft-collar and linen-suit weather is forecast for the current week by Government Weatherman VonHerrmann. Monday the maximum temperature will approximate Sunday's, when the mercury registered 92 degrees as the maximum. At 6 o'clock Monday morning the thermometer registered 71, which is exceptionally high for Atlanta during the month of June for that hour.

"What makes it so hot?" the weather man was asked.

"The beautiful sunshine," answered Mr. VonHerrmann. "But while this is actually the case, the real reason for the hot wave is that at present there is high pressure over the State of Georgia and no movement of wind. If there were a brisk wind movement the sun's rays would be cooled. Consequently, this week we will get hot weather that is not due us."

deaths were reported.

In Chicago the mercury reached 94. The same maximum was reported at St. Louis, Montgomery, Jacksonville, Kansas City and North Platte. That was 10 degrees hotter than the Heat Is Fatal in North Middle West.

CHICAGO, June 16.—Several more days of intense heat are in prospect to-day, following a sizzling 24 hours. The entire north central part of the country was hot yesterday. Eight maximum for the day at New Orleans, and 2 degrees cooler than at Omaha, Des Moines and St. Paul.

The temperature at 9 o'clock this morning, 86, indicated that a new record for the season would be reached this afternoon.

Fear for Babies as Heat Makes Cleveland Record.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 16.—At 10 o'clock this morning the thermometer had risen to 86, and indications pointed to the hottest June day in the history of the local weather bureau. Several were overcome by the heat and an epidemic of illness among babies caused fears of a new mark in infant mortality.

New York Heat Wave Will Continue Two Days.

NEW YORK, June 16.—New York City sweltered to-day under the first real heat wave of the season. At noon the temperature was 87, but the weather forecaster predicted that the same torrid weather would prevail two days longer.

COLYAR RETURNS PROMISING SENSATION

A. S. Colyar is in Atlanta again, promising to spring some more sensations.

The investigator who engineered the dictographing of Thomas B. Felder and Mayor Woodward has been in Washington. He sent a letter to Atlanta before him, saying he objected to being made a goat.

It is believed Colyar saw George M. Gentry while in Washington and got from him an affidavit. This is said to be much the same as the one printed admitting that the dictograph records had been padded, as charged in Gentry's recent affidavit, but that the general charges were upheld.

Promises Story in Letter.

Colyar's letter, mailed before he left Washington, follows:

"He laughs best who laughs last. When you get tired publishing all of the lies the gang of political crooks are publishing on Lanford and myself I may be able to give you a story that will cause some people to sit up and take notice.

"It's indeed comforting to think one purchased affidavit can cause a certain man in Atlanta to consider himself vindicated completely. Whitewash is cheap, as we all know.

"Then there is Mayor Woodward. He says 'Colyar went to Mrs. Gentry's house and worried her.' Indeed, where did he learn this? It's news to me. But we all know the Mayor. He is the same Mayor Hon. R. F. Maddox defeated after he (Woodward) was nominated by his party, and all Atlanta knows why. Let them make a goat out of me and see what I publish in my own defense.

"The crooks got caught. And they sent Miles away to see if he could not fool the people. A. S. COLYAR."

Felder's Trip Causes Comment.

Speculation was rife Monday as to the nature of the trip of Colonel Thomas B. Felder, who left Atlanta Sunday afternoon with the statement that he was bound for Cincinnati.

Rumors had it that Colonel Felder in reality is on his way to Washington, for the purpose probably of conferring with George Gentry, the missing stenographer in the recent dictagraph sensation. If this is Colonel Felder's intention, he kept it to himself.

It has been suggested that Colonel Felder would feel much safer in going to Washington by way of Cincinnati than through the State of South Carolina.

NO VICE HOUSES IN FIVE YEARS, SAYS CHIEF

"In less than five years every recognized house of vice in the United States will be closed."

This was the statement made today by James L. Beavers, chief of police of Atlanta, who returned last night from Washington and the convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs.

More time was allotted to discussion of the social evil than in any previous convention of the police chiefs, Beavers said. Last Wednesday the whole afternoon session was devoted to the topic. Chief Beavers made an address, and it was this address and the chief's record in Atlanta which stimulated the discussion.

"There has been a wonderful increase of sentiment among chiefs of police in favor of closing these houses," Chief Beavers said to-day. "This feeling was demonstrated at the convention last week.

"Last Wednesday the convention used the whole afternoon for discussion of the social evil. That was the first time so much attention ever had been given to this subject. The police chiefs are giving more attention now to talking and thinking about this question than ever before, and the sentiment is rapidly growing in favor of absolute suppression.

"Some of the chiefs in attendance at the convention favored segregation, but all of them admitted the law favored suppression, and that suppression was right. The only question seemed to be whether the laws could be enforced, and the majority sentiment was they could.

"The chiefs know suppression is right, and after listening to the discussions and studying the sentiment manifested there, I believe in less than five years every recognized house of vice in the United States will be closed."

DUEL IN DARK BY BURGLAR AND DETECTIVE

Negro, Caught Robbing Safe, Flees After Volleys Are Exchanged—Arrested Later.

The details of a pistol duel between a Pinkerton detective and a burglar in the Troy Laundry, 210 Houston Street, were made known Sunday after the arrest of Herman Butler, a negro, living at 99 Rondeau Street.

A volley of shots, which startled the neighborhood, was exchanged between Fred Farris, the detective, and Butler when Farris discovered the latter rifling the safe in the laundry Saturday night after all of the other employees had departed.

The laundry proprietors had missed money and other articles from the building several times, but were unable to find the thief. Finally they notified the Pinkertons.

Farris hid in the building Saturday night. Soon after the lights were out the detective saw a man approach one of the house telephones. The intruder, using the instrument, ascertained that no one was on the other floors of the building. Then he proceeded to unlock an old-fashioned safe with a key he had.

The burglar was interrupted by Farris' command to throw up his hands. Instead of complying, Butler drew a revolver and began firing in the direction from which the voice came. Farris returned the fire, but Butler, backing away, managed to get to the rear door and escape without being hit.

Not suspecting that his identity had been learned, Butler remained at home Sunday. He was arrested there by Detectives Coker and Gillespie.

Slaton's Client Is Fined for Ignoring Court's Injunction

"While it would be a difficult matter to insult me personally, you can get into trouble pretty easily by insulting this court," said Superior Judge John T. Pendleton Monday morning when he fined Edward Floding $50 for contempt of court, and threatened him with a jail sentence of 24 hours. Floding's attorney was Governor-elect John M. Slaton.

Floding is proprietor of the Floding Relagia Company. After he purchased it, the former owners obtained an injunction restraining him from using that firm name.

Acocrding to the court, he disregarded the injunction.

40 Stone Burglar as He Tries to Escape

A passerby saw a negro moving about in the Harrison Dry Goods Store, 418-22 Marietta Street, at noon Sunday. Becoming suspicious, the passerby notified the police. Then he collected all the men in the neighborhood, 40 in all, and they surrounded the store.

The negro, all unconscious of the reception committee waiting to receive him, came out. He was met by a shower of bricks and stones and beat a hasty retreat. Finally the police arrived and the negro was taken into custody. He gave his name as Joe Marion.

PRESIDENT WILL SPUR HOUSE IN PERSON

Wilson Will Read Message Urging His 'Hobbleless' Currency Reform Bill.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—President Wilson will read his currency message to Congress in person, it was announced at the White House prior to the newspaper conference at which the President discussed the bill at length with the Washington correspondents.

The President believes that his plan of personally placing before the national Legislature the views on important topics, such as currency and the tariff, insures greater attention and more marked interest from the country at large than did the former custom of sending messages to Congress and having them read by a clerk.

Therefore, as soon as the currency bill is completed and ready for presentation (probably about Friday of this week), the President will go to the Capitol and present his views on the necessary financial reform to the assembled members of the House.

Atlanta Girls Dazzle Dr. Cook On Tour to Establish 'Rights'

Dr. Frederick A. Cook, who stopped to stare at Peachtree belles.

"Southern women have a little way all their own," explorer says.

Explorer Pauses on Lecture Tour of the South to See Atlanta.

Dr. Frederick A. Cook, of polar fame, was in Atlanta Monday, and—listen, girls—he's head over heels in love with you already, for he says so himself.

"They've simply got me," was the way the Doctor put it when seen in his room at the Hotel Aragon Monday morning.

In fact, Dr. Cook says he's fallen in love with all the Southern girls because they're so charming—and the Doctor is by no means a bad authority, for he is making a considerable tour of the Southland in the interest of what he terms a "fair play campaign" to show he discovered as much North Pole as Admiral Peary ever did.

"Southern women," said Dr. Cook, "have a little way all their own—I can't explain it, nor can I express it adequately—but it's true just the same. In other words, they form a type of woman that you don't find anywhere else on the earth.

"Atlanta is certainly no exception to his rule—in fact, I think they look even better here than elsewhere. They simply get a fellow—that's all."

The Doc Likes Atlanta.

The Doctor, who was all smiles Monday morning, did not confine his compliments to Atlanta women, however. He took occasion also to say a good word for the Capital City, which he made headquarters Monday en route to Madison, Ga., where he will deliver a lecture Monday night.

Atlanta, he says, looks good to him—looks better than any Southern city he has seen thus far, for there is a "snap here that makes things go."

Of course, being so infatuated with Atlanta, he wanted to know all about the big city. When informed that legal prohibition existed here he expressed surprise. Prohibition he believes to be a good thing, he says, although he is not a teetotaler himself, as a glass of beer "once-in-while" goes pretty well.

"Buttermilk is my favorite drink, however," said the Doctor, smiling, "for it is both nourishing and refreshing."

"But how about Mr. Bryan's grape juice program?" interrupted the reporter.

"Oh, that's going too far," replied the Doctor. "I suppose—" and this with a sly wink—"the grape juice people like it pretty well—so well that they probably will contribute a neat little sum to the next Democratic campaign fund."

Of course, Dr. Cook was still most seriously concerned with his campaign for "fair play" in the North Polar controversy, which, the Doctor says, is by no means a dead issue.

As a matter of fact, the issue is so live, according to Dr. Cook, that it is keeping him just about as busy as he ever hopes to be. In less than three years, he says, he has appeared before 3,000,000 people in America and Europe. His present tour will include Alabama, Georgia, Florida, the Carolinas, Tennessee and Oklahoma. After winding up the Southern tour, he will go to the big cities of the West and North.

"All I want is fair play," Dr. Cook repeated, "and I will get this at the hands of the middle classes of the United States, which have always been friendly to me.

"I find these good average sort of folks are either agin' you or they are for you strong; and when they are for you it means something, for the middle class is the molder of public opinion. The 'highbrows' are not in with these people, for they never take sides; they are too wrapped up in themselves and their own interests to take interest in other things."

Girl's Auto Death Dream Comes True

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—Miss Kitty Howe, a pretty young chorus girl, dreamed that she would be killed in an automobile accident. Yesterday she leaped from a speeding car when it struck a rock. She landed in a pile of stones, fracturing her skull. Ten hours later she died in a hospital.

FAMILY JARS CAUSE TRAGEDY.

LEXINGTON, KY., June 16.—Earl Scott, 18, fatally wounded his father-in-law, David Black, during a quarrel at Eddyville and then committed suicide. Family troubles caused the tragedy. Scott and his wife had separated.

Dynamite in Rescue Work Causes Strife

NEW YORK, June 16.—A hot controversy over the use of explosives in the search for the last two bodies of the ten men killed by a cave-in of granite in the new Lexington Avenue subway Saturday night has caused bitter feeling between Coroner W. H. Holtzhauser and Chairman E. E. McCall, of the Public Service Commission. The bodies were recovered.

The Coroner forbade the use of dynamite, and McCall opposed. McCall's authority won. Three separate inquiries are under way.

Artist to Live Like Stone Age Forbears

BOSTON, June 16.—To prove that twentieth century convention is needless, John Knowles, a local artist, will plunge into the wilderness of Northern Maine without clothing, food, matches, firearms or ammunition.

He declared he will live like the men of the Stone Age for three months.

MOROS ROUTED IN MIDNIGHT BATTLE

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MANILA, P. I., June 16.—In a night attack on the remaining defenses of the rebellious Moros on the Island of Jolo the American troops and their native allies, under Brigadier General John J. Pershing, U. S. A., routed the rebel Filipinos with the loss of six men killed and seven wounded.

All the American soldiers killed were scouts.

News of the engagement was received by the military authorities today in a wireless message from Jolo. The radio said the rebellious natives, after deserting their trenches, fled into the mountains, pursued by Americans and the constabulary.

Desultory fighting between the rival forces has been going on for several days. The entire casualties on the American side were 30 killed and wounded. The native loss is believed to be much heavier.

General Pershing is warm in his praise of the gallantry of the Americans.

Railroad Strike Is Result of Discharges

POTTSVILLE, PA., June 16.—Two hundred repairmen at the shops of the Reading Railway at Schuylkill Haven and a number at the repair shops at Palo Alto and St. Clair went on strike this morning on orders from officials of the International Car Workers' Association.

The strike was brought on by the discharging of several repairmen, because, as the union officials claim, they were too active in forming unions.

Darrow May Never Face a Third Trial

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—The remaining charge against Clarence Darrow, noted labor attorney, which grew out of the McNamara trial here, likely never will be heard. The case has not been entered on the court calendar.

The District Attorney's office has refused to indicate whether Darrow will be tried a third time on a charge of being party to the bribery of prospective jurors.

SOUTH IN MAGNIFICENT SHAPE

"The South, when we come to consider our immediate prospects, is in absolutely magnificent shape. I know much of conditions in Georgia of my own knowledge."

Far from believing the country on the verge of hard times or anything like serious financial depression, Mr. Candler believes the horizon to be abundantly rainbowed and promising nothing but good things.

He said that if he did not feel this way about it he would not leave the U. S. for Europe to be gone two months.

And, too, we know Mr. Candler to be a man who is fearless in speech; he says exactly what he thinks; and more---he has a good think every now and then.

BEAVERS THINKS AFFIDAVIT GENUINE

Chief Searched for Gentry in Washington and Found Where Paper Was Signed.

Chief of Police James L. Beavers, just returned from Washington, said Monday that evidence was practically conclusive that George M. Gentry, the stenographer in the recent dictograph episode, did sign an affidavit that the records were padded.

The chief had attended the convention of the International Association of Police Chiefs, but had searched for Gentry, whose affidavit was attested by a Washington notary. The best detective in Washington, he said, was detailed to the hunt, but could not locate Gentry. He did, however, secure evidence that Gentry was in Washington and that the affidavit was genuine.

The signing of the affidavit, Chief Beavers said, took place in room 802 of the Westoria Building. This is the L. & N. Railroad office building, and room 802 is the private office of J. A. Ridgely, formerly of Atlanta, and a personal friend of E. O. Miles, the private detective who brought Gentry's affidavit from Washington.

W. M. J. Davis, the only man in Ridgely's office when the affidavit was signed, said that two men and a woman came in. One introduced himself as Mr. Miles, from Atlanta. Mr. Ridgely's friend. He did not state the identity of the others. Miles and his companions sent downstairs for Miss Jeannette Henning, a notary public, who came up to room 802 and attested an acknowledgment by the man who accompanied Miles to the room.

Davis afterward gave a description of the man who signed the affidavit. Miss Henning also described the man. Both descriptions, Chief Beavers said, tallied with the description of George M. Gentry.

Chief Beavers left Washington without giving instructions to continue the search for Gentry.

Deaf-Mute's Note Better Than Speech

Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor Woodward, said Monday that a Chinese puzzle was simple compared with his duty of finding out the business of people who call at the Mayor's office. The constant reply he receives is:

"I want to see the Mayor on personal business."

After explaining to a deaf-mute today that it was impossible to let anyone see the Mayor on account of the large number of callers unless he knew the nature of their business, the deaf-mute wrote:

"Wife at home. Nothing to eat."

Mr. Hammond said the mute beat all callers in telling what he wanted.

FOOD EXPERTS TO MEET.

MOBILE, ALA., June 16.—The seventeenth annual convention of the Association of American Dairy Food and Drug Officials will convene here to-night at 8 o'clock at the Battle House. Governor Emmet O'Neal, W. H. Armbrecht and Laz Schwarz will deliver welcome addresses. George L. Flanders, of New York, will respond.

No Grape Juice for Sec. Daniels; He's On the Water Wagon

BOSTON, June 16.—Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels has enrolled himself with Secretary of State Bryan, Colonel Roosevelt, Mayor Fitzgerald and others, by declaring that a so-called "soft drink" is his favorite tipple.

Bryan says grape juice, Colonel Roosevelt prefers milk, Mayor Fitzgerald dilutes his grape juice with ginger ale to add a little "tang." "But give me bottled mineral water," declared Secretary Daniels, "I wouldn't spoil my stomach with grape juice and milk makes one fat. Mineral water is refreshing, harmless and won't offend the most abstemious."

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Keith Vaudeville at Forsyth.

That the bill at the Forsyth this week will be one of the most magnetic of the season is the confidential prediction of the management, and, further, it is believed that the supply of seats for the daily matinee and night performances will never hold out against the interest that has been in evidence since the announcement that "Bud" Fisher and six sterling Keith acts would make up the program of entertainment.

The appearance of the creator of "Mutt" and "Jeff," whose daily appearance on the sport pages of The Georgian add to the interest in the paper, is a real event of the season. Fisher will offer a novelty idea completely original.

Pauline Welch (Mrs. Fisher) is on the same bill, and will be seen in her specialty. She scored one of the great hits of last season, introducing some of the song hits of the moment. The Lawn Party, as produced by ten clever young people, is a feature of the bill. The Three Leightons, in their original sketch of minstrel life; Adonis and his dog in "The Act Beautiful;" Karl Emmy's Pets, a wonderful trained animal act, and Whitefield and Ireland, in a comedy offering, make up the complete program.

"Quo Vadis" at the Grand.

A sensation so great that one of the largest theaters in New York has been unable to accommodate the crowds that are demanding seats is "Quo Vadis," the attraction at the Grand this week—matinee daily at 2:30 and night at 8:30.

"Quo Vadis" is presented by George Kleine, in connection with Cohan and Harris, and a small fortune was paid to the Societa Italiana, of Rome, Italy, for the American rights. The Cines people used eighteen months of hard work to make the production of 10,000 feet of film and the three acts and eight scenes in the sensation make up the greatest and the most wonderful photo-play the world has ever seen. Europe is alive with interest in these pictures. New York, Chicago and Philadelphia have all shown wonderful returns, and that Atlanta will quickly take its place in the line is evidenced by the advance sale that has been growing steadily since last Thursday when the box office was opened.

"The Duke of Durham" at Bijou.

Following the several musical tabloids of the last few weeks in which patrons of the Bijou have shown that this class of entertainment meets with popular approval, the announcement is made that "The Duke of Durham," probably the most expensive organization of its kind, will furnish amusement for patrons of the Bijou this week.

Lou L. Shean, the German singing comedian, heads the list of funmakers.

RAG PLAYERS WILL PROVE WHO'S WHO

Best Performers in Atlanta Will Enter Contest Against Weatherholt Player-Piano.

Who is the ragtime champion piano player of Atlanta?

That is the question that T. E. Weatherholt, president of the Weatherholt Piano Company, 72 North Broad Street, will try to solve Wednesday afternoon.

As a result of his extensive advertising recently in the interest of his player-piano club, Mr. Weatherholt has received hundreds of letters asking if his player-pianos can turn out ragtime in regulation style.

These letters have convinced Mr. Weatherholt the country is ragtime-mad. Everybody wants ragtime.

Hugh Cardoza, local theatrical wizard, said this long ago, and Mr. Weatherholt now thinks he is right. Mr. Cardoza says all that is necessary to prove this is to listen to the applause in the Forsyth after a ragtime act goes on.

Mr. Weatherholt has answered all his correspondents to the effect that a Weatherholt player-piano can turn out ragtime better than a professional, and to show folks this is true he has arranged the ragtime contest for Wednesday afternoon.

Some of the best performers on the piano have been secured, and they promise to play the best ragtime they know how to play.

The player-piano will do the same. Frank Hammond, executive secretary to Mayor Woodward and an expert judge of ragtime, will be the judge.

Mr. Hammond has made a study of ragtime. He is one lover of classical music who likes ragtime, and he has a large assortment at his home. He is a syncopatic sharp and has a trained ear for the music which sets feet to moving and shoulders to going up and down.

USE OF CALOMEL PRACTICALLY STOPPED

For Bilious Attacks, Constipation and All Liver Troubles—Dangerous Calomel Gives Way to Dodson's Liver Tone.

Every druggist in the State has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason—Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is often dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," say druggists.

Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by all druggists who sell it. A large bottle costs 50 cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of sluggishness, you have only to ask for your money back. It will be promptly returned.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant tasting, purely vegetable remedy—harmless to both children and adults. A bottle in the house may save you a day's work or keep your children from missing school. Keep your liver working and your liver will not keep you from working.

Slays Man for $6 And Share in Still

GAINESVILLE, June 16.—Bartow Cantrell, in jail, has confessed to the murder of Arthur Hawkins, near Bellton, Hall County, two weeks ago. He claimed that his brother, James Cantrell, offered him $6 and a half interest in his still to slay Hawkins.

Mrs. Silvey Hawkins, wife of the murdered man, is in jail with her 18-month-old baby.

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—The quiet and unassuming little village of Watts, near here, is so wrought up over gibes of comedians in Los Angeles theaters that it plans suit for $25,000 damages against a local theatrical company.

"Watts has been the goat long enough," said a prominent citizen. "When actors exhaust their repertoire of stereotyped jokes they single out Watts for further comedy, and we intend to be paid for it."

TENNESSEE FACES CRISIS OVER DEBT

Factional Politics Prevents Legislation to Provide for $11,458,000 Obligations Due July 1.

NASHVILLE, June 16.—Tennessee faces the possibility of defaulting on its State debt of $11,458,000 due July 1, because of partisan politics.

To-morrow brings the most important financial event of Tennessee since the settlement of the State debt that accrued from carpetbag rule, when bids on loans to refund the debt will be opened.

That the refunding act needs amending is agreed by both Democrats and Fusionists. Legislative authority is needed for the execution of short-term loans so that the big bond issue may be deferred until times get better. The opening of bids to-morrow will be the second attempt of the State to sell its securities. The first, three weeks ago, brought an offer of only $862.50 per $1,000.

TURFMAN SUFFERS FIRE LOSS.

LEXINGTON, KY., June 16.—Two new automobiles, several other vehicles and the poultry houses burned at the Idle Hour Stock Farm of E. R. Bradley, millionaire New York-Chicago turfman, here to-day. The fire started by the explosion of a gasoline tank.

Crepe de Chine Underwear at Half Price

And not just a few odd pieces, but practically every crepe de chine garment of this wonderfully fine stock!

Half price!

Indeed, such splendid news hardly gets into the papers once in a twelvemonth.

And there is no denying that right now crepe de chine underwear is in the height of Fashion's favor.

Makers have been straining every point to make deliveries---the scarcity of crepe de chine that you have heard so much of this season is in a great measure due to the unprecedented use of this fabric for underwear.

And, in face of all these facts, we come forward now with a half-price sale!

It is hard to imagine a woman who will not be interested, who will not want to share the opportunities---and what a fine time this month's brides will have!

The sale begins with the opening of the store, and although the half price extends to every crepe de chine garment in this big, well-selected stock, excepting a few white petticoats and several sets, we do not believe quantities will last long as soon as women come to see just what this opportunity is.

The price range---

$5.00 Garments are	$2.50	$10.00 Garments are	$5.00
$6.00 Garments are	$3.00	$12.00 Garments are	$6.00
$7.50 Garments are	$3.75	$15.00 Garments are	$7.50
$8.00 Garments are	$4.00	$18.00 Garments are	$9.00
$8.50 Garments are	$4.25	A $36.00 Set is	$18.00
$9.00 Garments are	$4.50	A $40.00 Set is	$20.00

Drawers, including knickerbockers, gowns, petticoats, combinations, princess slips and a few negligees. Choose from pink, light blue, yellow and white—except the petticoats—no white petticoats.

The crepe de chine is always pure silk, heavy quality. As the prices mount the trimmings become more elaborate and beautiful—dainty rosettes and bows, sheer shadow laces, rich cream eluny laces, Irish crochet laces and round thread Valenciennes. A woman would search long and far for more exquisite garments—remember they are our own fine stock!

7 PLAYGROUNDS NOW OPEN TO CHILDREN

Great Crowds Flock to Places of Recreation—Piedmont Bathing Hours Changed.

Seven of the best equipped playgrounds Atlanta has ever had were opened Monday morning for the season of 1913. This is a fewer number than heretofore, but Dan Carey, General Manager of Parks, and Joe Bean, director of playgrounds, announce that they are better equipped than playgrounds of former years.

The opening Monday was auspicious. Crowds of children gathered at the five white playgrounds, Grant Park, Mims Park, Joyner Park, English Avenue and Pine Hill playgrounds. Two negro playgrounds are maintained, one at Stoor's School yard and another at Gray's School yard.

The playgrounds will be open every day in the week from 8:30 to 11:30 o'clock in the morning and from 3:30 to 6:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

In connection with the playground work Mr. Carey announced that the bathing hours at Piedmont Park lake had been changed. Hereafter no one will be admitted into the lake from 11 o'clock in the morning until 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

Mr. Carey said that between these hours it was too hot to go into the lake.

Wife Asks Alimony of Count deGratresse

NEW YORK, June 16.—Countess Marie DeGratrasse, wife of Count Joseph Gratresse, a civil engineer, has applied to Supreme Court Justice Giegerich to reopen her divorce case and grant her alimony.

The attorney for the Countess informed Justice Giegerich that the litigants may have been in collusion in agreeing upon $15 a week payments to the Countess. The Count's lawyer denied any collusion.

The Count has an alienation suit against Leon J. Garcey, 261 Fifth Avenue, whom he charges with supplying money for the Countess' divorce proceedings. Garcey denies.

Rothschilds Push Oil War on Standard

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—Another battle was on between the Rothschilds of England and the Standard Oil Company to-day in California, following the arrival of the Dutch tank steamer Kessler from Sumatra, carrying 3,000,000 gallons of gasoline. The Rothschilds sent to the United States the best grade of gasoline obtainable in the Orient.

This shipment, it was announced, is the first of many to be used in breaking the hold of the Standard Oil Company on the Pacific Coast.

"Petticoat Cops" Will Watch Newport Swim

NEWPORT, R. I., June 16.—Two policewomen have been placed on duty at the beach here by the Civic League. Their uniform consists of a blue blouse with brass buttons, a blue skirt and a sailor straw hat.

They will patrol the beach all summer and give especial attention to women in need of aid.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS OUT FOR RECORD

Twenty Working to Make Next Sunday's Attendance Biggest. Picnics This Week.

Twenty Sunday schools began Monday a campaign to smash all attendance records next Sunday and make the average increase for the year more than 100 members for each school.

The total attendance Sunday in the schools in the exchange agreement was 6,690, or an average of 334 for each school. The figure for the same schools last year was 5,057, an average of 252.

Two large picnics are planned for this week, the joint outing of the Second Baptist and First Christian Sunday schools, Tuesday afternoon and evening at Grant Park.

Following are the attendance figures Sunday:

Turks Fear Plot to Replace Abdul Hamid

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 16.—Commanders of the international fleet of warships in the Golden Horn have given notice to the Government they will protect the city if there is an uprising. Many more arrests were made to-day in connection with the assassination of Grand Vizier Mahmud Shevket Pasha.

Young Turk advisers profess to scent a plot on the part of the reactionaries to put Abdul Hamid back on the throne. A guard is maintained over the son of Kaimil Pasha, former Grand Vizier, who was arrested Sunday.

Tight Money Hits Egg And Butter Traders

NEW YORK, June 16.—Money stringency is having its effect upon the stores of butter and eggs. Holdings of eggs in New York City now are short 350,000 cases, of 30 dozen to the case, of what they were a year ago. Last year the limit advanced on eggs was $5.50 per case, and this year it is $4.50. Receivers have trouble in getting this.

The scarcity of money is being felt more in butter than in egg channels. Last year $15 was advanced per tub, while this year the banks are trying to hold down to $12.

Mrs. Hearst Gives Idols to Museum

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—An excellent collection of Hopi Indian idols was presented to the University of California anthropological museum at the Affiliated Colleges by Mrs. Phoebe A. Hearst.

Assistant Curator Gifford delivered a lecture on the Indian tepee, illuminating his topic by lantern slides, before a large audience.

DAY AT UNIVERSITY FOR 'UNDERGRADS'

Branch Colleges Represented at Athens on Monday—Alumni Reunions on Tuesday.

ATHENS, GA., June 16.—Following the largely attended baccalaureate exercises yesterday, when the commencement sermon was delivered by Dr. W. N. Ainsworth, of Macon, the undergraduate exercises of the University of Georgia were held in the chapel this morning. Speakers from the university departments in Athens, Atlanta, Augusta, Dahlonega and Milledgeville participated.

The trustees to-day advanced Instructor R. C. Wilson to assistant professor of pharmacy. Professors W. O. Payne and S. M. Sallyer were each granted a year's leave of absence. A petition from students to permit a dance in the alumni hall was not granted. The branch colleges ware requested to mail copies of all publications as soon as published to the general board of trustees. The Law School was given additional space, taking the rooms formerly occupied by Professor John E. Morris, who will use the class rooms vacated by Professor T. J. Woofter, removed to the new Peabody Hall. Professor Woofter was granted a leave of absence in 1914-15. A recommendation that the sophomore declamation be discontinued was disapproved.

This afternoon the military department's prize drill takes place on Sanford Field and the appointment of cadet officers for next year. Two new flags will be presented to the university and received by Misses Helen Baxter, of Omaha, and Florence Hooper, of Athens, who will be attended by Misses Mary Arthur and Laura Cobb Hutchens.

To-night the annual champion debate between Demosthenian and Phi Kappa societies will take place, when four forensic juniors will argue whether or not the Philippines should be given their independence.

British Polo Players To Challenge Again

NEW YORK, June 16.—It was expected the Duke of Westminster, foremost exponent of polo in England, soon will send a challenge to the victorious Americans for another international polo match, to be played either next year or in 1915. The vanquished British console themselves because of the close score. Last Tuesday it was 5 1-2 goals to 3 and Saturday, 4 1-2 to 4 1-4.

A farewell dinner will be given to the Englishmen to-night. They expect to sail for England this week.

English Denounce Umpire.

LONDON, June 16.—English sportsmen are denouncing the umpire who decided a foul against the British polo players in their game Saturday against the American team. They claim the action of the referee was "unjustifiable" and "a miserable misfortune" and that the umpire had no right to halt the game.

Queen of Belgians Is in Sanitarium

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MONTRAUX, SWITZERLAND, June 16.—The Queen of the Belgians has been severely ill at Dr. Widmer's Sanitarium here two weeks. It is expected to be some time before she will be able to leave and she has canceled her engagements for the fetes at Ghent and other places which begin June 22.

American Colony in Palestine Prospers

BOSTON, June 16.—Jesse A. Yantis, representative of the American colony in Palestine, is here studying several classes of machinery which he hopes to introduce in Jerusalem.

This colony of Americans removed to Jerusalem in order that they might live as they believe the Saviour would if He were on earth to-day.

Woman Made Forest Rider in California

SACRAMENTO, CAL., June 16.—Miss Hallie Daggett, appointed forest guard in the Siskiyou reserve, is probably the first woman to hold that position in this country.

She was assigned to the Lookout post at Eddy's Gulch to watch for forest fires.

Pastor Lauds Movies As Agent for Good

CHICAGO, June 16.—One of the greatest influences for good is the moving pictures, according to Rev. Johnston Meyers, pastor of Immanuel Baptist Church.

Dr. Meyers said in a sermon that he was a regular patron of the movies.

"Blue Tag" Furniture Sale

True to the Best Traditions of Any That Have Gone Before

A Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose Co. "Blue Tag" Furniture Sale!

To Atlantans who recall the fine economies of "The Blue Tag" sales the mere announcement that here now is another would doubtless be sufficient to hurry them to the store-filled with the confidence that this is their opportunity to buy furniture to greatest advantage.

But this "Blue Tag" sale is planned to outdo all others!

Yes, to outdo ALL others. It has not been an easy task to prepare such a sale; the records and traditions of the others mark them as trade triumphs---as classics in the furniture business; but the guiding spirit of progress whispers that this one shall begin where the others left off and become a monumental merchandise movement only after it eclipses its predecessors.

And so have the preparations gone forward!

Judge for yourself the possibilities it offers you.

Here is the South's greatest furniture stock.

Every piece of it was chosen after careful, very careful examination, as the best of its kind for regular selling.

It is worthy furniture, right furniture, built to last year on year.

And Right Now

Every piece of furniture, excepting summer furniture, and several makes the prices of which we have contracted to maintain, in this, the South's greatest stock, is offered at a substantial reduction from its regular price; in fact, substantial reduction hardly expresses the vigorous price reductions you will find here.

And this in face of the fact that right now furniture prices are climbing to higher levels.

So whether it be---

Bedroom==Including Brass Beds==Dining Room or Living Room Furniture

Or all of these that you need---and in this month of brides and of new home-making there are many who will want furnishings for entire homes---now is the big opportunity. The tremendous varieties here mean that you may select to a nicety just the furniture you would have in your home. The tremendous reductions mean that you may save as you had never expected.

So come to-morrow. You will find the Blue Tags on everything; they tell their own story and it is an interesting story of fine savings.

Period Furniture

It is worthy of particular note in this noteworthy event that, although every little separate chair, rocker, desk, table, chiffonier, and the like in stock (with those exceptions already noted) is included, some of the healthiest reductions have been made on the rich and true sets of Period Furniture and reproductions of antique pieces-- Sheraton, Jacobean, William and Mary, Chippendale and others. Sets for bedroom, dining room and living room.

STATE POLITICAL POT BOILS AT KIMBALL

Candidates for House Speaker and Senate President Open Headquarters.

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

The Kimball House lobby, where for years and years Georgia politicians most have congregated, and which still seems to be the undisputed Mecca of Cracker statesmen, real and near, already has assumed that busy and more or less agitated appearance so unmistakably prophetic of the annual getting together of the Legislature.

Headquarters have been opened for two speakership candidates, two presidency of the Senate candidates and at least one new county, Candler.

Within the next day or so other headquarters will be opened, and other fights inaugurated. The clans unmistakably are gathering for the fray, and the forthcoming session bids fair to be one of great interest and far-reaching consequence.

The first new county proposition to get busy on the job is, as aforesaid, Candler. The boosters of this proposition say they have their contest well in hand, and they unquestionably expect to win.

This new county is to be made up of slices of Bulloch, Tattnall and Emanuel, all three large counties, and there is little, if any, opposition in the territory affected.

Metter, a hustling town of around 4,000, is to be the county seat of Candler. It is located in the western part of Bulloch, but is so near the line of the other counties that it is practically situated at the "corners" of the three, as is Winder, in the proposed new county of Barrow.

Every newspaper but one in the section concerned in the new county of Candler is favorable to the proposition, and the boomers of the game claim that they already have pledged more than sufficient votes to put their proposition over.

Outside the contests for the speakership and the presidency of the Senate, one hears more of these two new county proposals than anything else nowadays, and both of them—Barrow and Candler—look good to go through.

The contests between Senators John T. Allen, of the Twentieth, and Randolph Anderson, of the First, as to which shall be chosen President of the Senate, unquestionably is very much "up in the air."

Both men express themselves as being entirely confident, and both show figures to prove their respective claims. Moreover, both seem to be in dead earnest in stating their positions.

The average member of the new Legislature, however, seems to be very much "from Missouri" with respect to that race. The impression is that it yet is any man's race. Both Allen and Anderson are working hard and leaving no stone unturned to win out.

The Allen men are saying that Anderson will retire before the "showdown," but as the Anderson men are saying the same thing concerning Allen, how can one tell?

It looks as if a "showdown" of strength on the floor of the Senate, after Secretary Northen calls it to order, will be the only thing that will tell the tale accurately and to stay put.

One hears much in the hotel lobbies nowadays of tax reform.

There seems little doubt that it will be the paramount consideration of the new General Assembly.

It generally is agreed that the State can not travel much farther without more revenue, and to raise the tax rate is out of the question. Politically, the Legislature feels that it would be committing suicide to attempt to get the tax rate up, after any sort of fashion.

The only way to get additional revenue, therefore, is to raise the assessments and returns in such wise that the total amount against which the tax rate operates may be as nearly as possible 50 per cent higher than now.

This is a large problem, and will require the very best and most statesmanlike minds of the Legislature to work out. Whatever bill is framed along this line will arise in the House, of course, and it will be carefully designed to work as equitably as it may to all parties concerned.

The problem of taxation is one of the most delicate, as well as important, that the Legislature has to handle, and it is more acute this year than it has been in a quarter of a century.

Parties interested in heron production in Glynn County, particularly growers of the egret variety, are greatly interested in the news from Washington to the effect that the Department of Agriculture will undertake to develop a rooster of plumage suitable for substitution for that of the egret, now used so extensively in the aigrette millinery trade.

The largest colony of egrets in the world is located in Glynn County, and a great many people are extensively interested in the trade.

For many years, the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and the Audubon Society have protested against the taking of the nuptial plumage from the egrets for millinery purposes. The taking of the plumage almost invariably means the death of the mother bird, and the consequent starvation of her young in the nest. The aigrette plumage is to be had of the egret herons only while the mother's brood is very young.

"This proposition looks more or less like a suffragette movement," said a well-known legislator, discussing the matter of the rooster's plumage to-day, "but it looks fair and square, nevertheless. That's the reason I am for it. We should protect the egrets, or pretty soon there will be none left in Georgia.

"Let the national department proceed. I would not object to egrets fashioned from roosters' tails—if the women folks like them as well, far be from me to put in a word for the sters."

In addition to the pupils, Miss Nellie Landrum gave two vocal numbers. She was accompanied by Miss Miriam Landrum, piano, and Mr. Ralph Landrum, violin. Mr. William Terrell gave two selection on violin, accompanied on piano by Miss Victoria Ray.

Galloway-Brown.

Mrs. Walter G. Brown announces the marriage of her daughter, Mabel Claire, to Mr. Charles Galloway Thursday, June 19.

The marriage will be quietly observed at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. R. O. Walker, 717 Edgewood Avenue, Inman Park.

For Miss Abernathy.

Miss Grace Abernathy, a bride-elect, was honor guest at a domino luncheon Friday morning at Mrs. Charles A. Forrest's home in Gordon Street. The reception rooms were decorated with daisies and gladioli.

At the luncheon which followed the game a color scheme of yellow and white was carried out in detail. The guest of honor was given a silver-mounted hat brush. The guests were:

Misses Maude Daniels, Julia Purser, Allie Purser, Lucile Quinn, Mrs. N. T. Pool, Mrs. R. H. Dobbs, Mrs. Rush Irwin, Miss Lucile Daniels, Mrs. Marion Hardwick, Mrs. James Markley and her guest, Miss Greer; Mrs. R. M. Hopkins, Miss Mildred Hardy, Miss Nora Goodman, Miss Daisy Smith, Mrs. W. A. Hartman, Mrs. R. H. Caldwell, Mrs. Benjamin J. Burton, of Lavonia, Ga., and Mrs. L. A. Tiller.

For Miss Baker.

Miss Laurian Johnson will entertain 25 young girls at tea Tuesday afternoon in honor of her guest, Miss Elizabeth Baker, of Macon.

Atlanta Girls in Athens.

A large number of Atlanta's younger set is in attendance on the University commencement in Athens this week. Misses Jane and Kate Cooper are guests of Miss Eugenia Ivey. Misses Virginia Lipscomb and Bertha Moore, accompanied by Mrs. Rutherford Lipscomb, motored to Athens Sunday. Miss Lipscomb will be with Mrs. M. A. Lipscomb, and Miss Moore with Mrs. W. D. Hooper.

Miss Mary Rice is the guest of Mrs. John W. Morton. Miss Helen McCarty is with Miss Florence Hooper. Miss Wyckliffe Wurm is at the Georgian. Miss Van McKinnon is at the Georgian, chaperoned by Mrs. William McCarty. Miss Josephine Mobley, chaperoned by her mother, Mrs. J. R. Mobley, is at the Georgian.

Misses Adgate Ellis, Cora McCord Brown, Ruth Reid and Mary Murphy are other Atlanta girls who are to be guests at the many commencement festivities in Athens this week.

Misses Elizabeth Dunson and Eloise Gay are also there. Mrs. Edwin P. Ansley is chaperoning Miss Mamie Ansley at the Georgian, and Mrs. Arnold Broyles accompanied her daughter, Miss Louise Broyles, to attend the commencement gayeties and to witness the graduation of Mr. Edwin Broyles.

Astor Buys London Paper For $1,250,000

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 16.—William Waldorf Astor, expatriated American, has purchased The Morning Post, long regarded as the society organ and sought after by several prominent newspaper publishers. The price paid is said to have been $1,250,000.

Mr. Astor is already the owner of The Pall Mall Gazette, an afternoon paper, and The Observer, a Sunday publication.

Mr. Astor has been trying for a considerable time to secure a morning newspaper to aid him in reaching the peerage.

Newspaper men here say Astor now controls the three most influential political journals in the United Kingdom.

NEW PRIZES WIN FAVOR IN CONTEST

Georgian Gives Tips to Hustlers in Race for Extra Ponies and Watches.

TIPS TO CONTESTANTS.

The hustler always finds favor with his friends.

Someone will tell you that you can't win. Get the laugh on him.

Wanting to win and hustling to win are two different things.

Rumors about what others are doing will not get you votes.

Lack of hustle is "the pace that kills."

Two ponies for every district and two watches for every race—these are the prizes now in The Georgian and American contest.

The first prizes remain the same—pony outfits, "ready to drive away." Second prizes are ponies with saddles. Third and fourth prizes are the watches.

From now on there is no excuse for dallying.

If you can not win a first prize, there is a second prize almost as valuable, and if you fail for a pony, try for a watch as consolation.

No offer like this ever has been made before by an Atlanta paper. The rewards are enough to stimulate the enthusiasm of the most lethargic boy or girl.

There should be an immediate speeding up, particularly as there is a special offer which may expire any day—50,000 extra votes for the first $30 turned in for subscriptions. Another special offer of extra votes in telling quantities for every club of five expires July 5.

It is time to "get busy." Let your competitors see every Wednesday and Sunday that you are in the race in earnest.

World Move to Stop Frauds in Medicine

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., June 16.—That the "patent medicine" business and quackery has become so serious and widespread that a world-wide effort is being made to curtail it was the report of a committee at the sixty-fourth annual session of the American Medical Association, which opened to-day.

The membership of the association last year increased from 34,283 to 37,913, while the membership of the fifty-two constituent State associations during the year grew from 70,021 to 70,538.

COLLEGE MEN WASH DISHES.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—Of the 700 members of the San Francisco Dish Washers' Union, 100 are college graduates. This is a greater proportion of college men than can be found in any other labor organization.

The Joy of Coming Motherhood

A Wonderful Remedy That is a Natural Aid and Relieves the Tension.

Mother's Friend, a famous external remedy, is the only one known that is able to reach all the different parts involved. It is a penetrating application after the formula of a noted family doctor, and lubricates every muscle, nerve, tissue or tendon affected. It goes directly to the strained portions and gently but surely relieves all tendency to soreness or strain.

By its daily use there will be no pain, no distress, no nausea, no danger of laceration or other accident, and the period will be one of supreme comfort and joyful anticipation.

To all young women Mother's Friend is one of the greatest of all helpful influences, for it robs childbirth of all its agonies and dangers, dispels all the doubt and dread, all sense of fear, and thus enables the mind and body to await the greatest event in a woman's life with untrammeled gladness.

Mother's Friend is a most cherished remedy in thousands of homes, and is of such peculiar merit and value as to make it essentially one to be recommended by all women.

You will find it on sale at all drug stores at $1 a bottle, or the druggist will gladly get it for you if you insist upon it. Mother's Friend is prepared only by the Bradfield Regulator Company, 127 Lamar Building, Atlanta, Ga., who will send you by mail, sealed, a very instructive book to expectant mothers. Write for it to-day.

"September Morn" Bathing Suits Are Barred in Denver

DENVER, COL., June 16.—A skirt, bloomers and a waist that comes close to the neck is the official bathing suit of Denver, under the commission form of government, as tentatively designed by Otto F. Thum, commissioner of property and therefore in charge of the park department, incidentally all the city beaches.

"I certainly believe it is not right for a woman to appear at a public bathing place clad only in tights," he said. "She hasn't on sufficient clothing then to be decent in her own bed room."

Men, Hatless, to Bear Parasols in Berlin

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 16.—Dress reform leagues in Berlin, Dresden, Bonn and other German towns have decreed that for the summer men shall go hatless and protect their heads with parasols. They have also decided men must not wear coats, substituting blouses cut after the fashion of a schoolboy's garment.

LABOR PARADE TO ECLIPSE ALL PAST

The Atlanta Federation of Labor is planning the greatest Labor Day parade Atlanta has ever known. At a meeting Sunday afternoon attended by representatives from every union in the city, it was decided to make this year's showing the greatest ever.

Ex-presidents and ex-delegates to the American Federation of Labor, executive officers of the Atlanta Federation and State Federation and Rev. Schaeffer, of the Evangelical Association, were added to the committee.

G. A. R. Is Ordered To Chattanooga

BRIDGEPORT, CONN., June 16.—General orders for the forty-seventh national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic at Chattanooga, Tenn., September 15 to 20, were issued by Commander-in-Chief Alfred B. Beers.

The fact is emphasized that a national encampment has never before been held so far south, and all veterans are urged to take this opportunity to visit the historic battlefields of Missionary Ridge, Lookout Mountain, Chickamauga and from Chattanooga to Atlanta.

Attention is directed to the Gettysburg reunion, the first day of which, July 1, will be veterans' day, under the direction of the commander-in-chief of the G. A. R.

Millionaire at 86 Weds for 4th Time

NEW BEDFORD, MASS., June 16. David A. Snell, millionaire cracker manufacturer, who is 86 years old, has just been married for the fourth time.

The present Mrs. Snell was Mrs. Janet Hamilton, of Boston, who for some time has acted as Mr. Snell's housekeeper. She is 32 years his junior.

ATLANTA BEATS EAST FOR TRADE

"Atlanta is the most cheerful spot on the map," says W. S. Lounsbury, vice president of the Travelers' Bank and Trust Company, just returned from a trip which included visits to Baltimore, Washington, Philadelphia, New York, Boston, New Haven and small towns in the States of New York and New Jersey.

"I made it my business to call on the bankers in all the Eastern cities. It is a relief to get out of the atmosphere of the North and East back into the realm of confidence," he says.

"Atlanta is to be congratulated on being in the best shape of any city east of Chicago. Business is splendid here, compared to the East. Part of it, indeed, is at the expense of the East.

"One of the loudest wails I heard was from Baltimore. Atlanta jobbers are cutting deeply into Baltimore's trade, particularly in the Carolinas, and, to make it a little more painful to the Maryland dealers, the trade which is coming to Atlanta is the 'cream.'

"The trouble in the North is that the loans are based largely on Wall Street securities, instead of on the crops, as here. Consequently, Atlanta, looking to the fields for news, gets cheerful tidings, while the East, looking at Wall Street, is depressed."

Recovered From Severe Lung Trouble

Plenty of fresh air and good food are necessary to persons suffering from lung trouble, but something more is needed to bring about full health. Eckman's Alterative is a medicine for throat and lung troubles, and so many reports have been received showing that it brought about good results in a number of cases which were declared hopeless, that all sufferers who are not benefiting otherwise should at least investigate what it has done for others. Investigate this case:

Madison Lake, Minn.

"Gentlemen: In December, 1908, March, 1909, and September, 1909, I was taken with hemorrhages of the lungs which confined me several weeks, each time to my bed. My doctor advised me to go West.

"In November I started for Denver, Colo. After my arrival I met Michael Brody, who upon learning of my condition, urged me to take Eckman's Alterative. In about two months I began to feel better. I kept on taking the medicine and improved fast. In March, 1910, I returned home. I think I am entirely well, have a good appetite and sleep well. When I left Denver my weight was 120 pounds. I now weight 165, my normal weight. I thank God and your Alterative for my health."

(Affidavit) PAUL L. FASNACHT.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most effectious in cases of Severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma. Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all leading drug stores and other leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

The SOCIAL WORLD

The tennis tourney for the State championship, which is on at the Driving Club this week, will attract large crowds to witness the games, and, of course, the inevitable dancing will follow. The popular club will be the scene of much informal entertaining during the week.

Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, has won the championship twice, and defends it in the present tournament. E. V. Carter, Jr., and E. S. Mansfield hold the championship in doubles. A number of expert women players are to take part in the mixed doubles.

The Sunday assemblage at the Capital City Country Club was a large and representative one. Swimming was a favorite mode of recreation for the men, although only a few women braved the waters, for some reason or other. An informal air hovers over the charming Country Club, which will be fostered.

The large attendance at the week-end dinner dance of the Driving Club and the informal dance at East Lake shows that the summer exodus for Atlanta society has hardly begun.

For Mrs. Ingersoll.

Mrs. Mell Wilkinson entertained informally at luncheon at the Piedmont Driving Club Monday, in honor of Mrs. Royal Ingersoll, other guests including Mrs. J. M. VanHarlingen, Mrs. W. D. Smith, Mrs. VanWinkle Wilkerson and Mrs. Edward VanElnkle.

For Miss Francis.

Mrs. Bertram Norris entertained at a box party at the Forsyth Monday afternoon for Miss Martha Francis, a bride-elect.

Copeland-Miller.

A wedding of interest throughout Georgia and Alabama was that on June 11 of Miss Mamie Miller, of Fort Valley, Ga., to Dr. Henry Moss Copeland, of Atlanta, at the Methodist Episcopal Church of Fort Valley.

Bridesmaids were Misses Bessie Smith, Atlanta; Carol Dean, Gainesville; Telete Scott, Canton; Janie Culpepper, Fort Valley. They were gowned in white meteor crepe with pointed trains and carried white sweetpeas. Groomsmen were Dr. Richard R. Daly and Mr. F. L. Wilson, of Atlanta, and Mr. William Wright, of Fort Valley.

Mesdames W. F. Miller and H. C. Neil were matrons of honor, the first in white crepe de chine and duchess lace. Mrs. Neil wore her wedding gown of charmeuse satin and duchess lace. Both carried white sweetpeas. Flower girls were Marjorie Frown and Margaret McMillan. Mr. Seth Copeland was best man.

The bride wore a gown of crepe sylvia, draped with princess and rose point lace, made with a court train. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and valley lilies. Her veil was of lace, arranged from a Dutch cap and caught with orange blossoms.

A reception was given at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Osborne Miller.

Dr. and Mrs. Copeland will spend their honeymoon in the mountains of North Carolina.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Greenfield, Mrs. M. C. Hardin, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Lanier, Judge and Mrs. John R. Wilkinson, of Atlanta.

Morris-Huie.

Mrs. Robert S. Huie announces the engagement of her daughter, Alice Mae, to Mr. Robert Ernest Morris, of Atlanta. The wedding will take place at the home of the bride, near Philadelphia Church, Clayton County, Thursday evening, June 19, at 8:30 o'clock.

For Miss Graves.

Mrs. Rix Stafford will entertain a few members of the schoolgirl set informally at bridge Thursday in honor of Miss LaGrange Katherine Graves, of Rome, a guest of Miss Louise Couper.

Memorial Asosciation to Meet.

The Uncle Remus Memorial Association will hold a meeting Tuesday at 10:30 o'clock in the assembly room of Carnegie Library.

For Miss Hughes.

In honor of Miss Mary Hughes, whose wedding to Mr. Ernest Osborne will take place Wednesday evening, there has been a series of parties.

Tuesday afternoon Miss Ollie May Osborne gave a reception. Thursday Miss Mae Richardson was hostess at luncheon and the same afternoon Miss Florence Dugger entertained the wedding party at the matinee. Mrs. Joseph Paulson invited twelve girls to meet Miss Hughes at bridge Friday afternoon and Saturday afternoon Misses Wilt entertained at tea for her.

The Wilt home was decorated with pink sweetpeas, a mound of these flowers adorning the tea table.

Assisting in entertaining were Misses Ollie May Osborne, Lucy Windsor, Sarah Randall, Alma Downing, Kathleen Simpson, Jan Robinson, Emma and Rusha Wesley and Mrs. R. W. Wilt.

Miss Mamie Wilt wore pink chiffon with wreaths of pink rosebuds. Miss Etter Wilt was in white silk marquisette. Miss Hughes wore pink crepe embroidered in pink. Mrs. Wilt wore black lace with a corsage of sweetpeas and lillies of the valley.

About 150 guests were present.

For Miss Arnold.

A heart dice party, at which Mrs. Charles A. Forrest entertained Friday afternoon at her home on Gordon Street, was for her young niece, Mary Ella Arnold. A profusion of daisies and gladioli formed the decoration of the attractive reception rooms, where the six tables were placed.

Trophies for top score and consolation were a dainty white fan, won by Virginia Collier, and a silver vanity box, cut by Elizabeth Wheeler. Guest of honor was presented with silk stockings. Punch was served by Martha Irwin and Elizabeth Merrideth. Guests were: Fay Spink, Marjorie Kurfees, Eva Stewart, Mary Nichols, Marie Colcord, Sara Colcord, Frances Stokes, Mary Brittain, Maude Foster, Lucile Price, Caroline Vickers, Kathryn Vickers, Catherine Hackett, Lois Verner, Annabeth Smith, Margaret White, Grace Cook, Marie Lester, Elizabeth Wheeler, Lucile Trimble, Cecil Trimble, Mary Tiller, Elizabeth Cofield, Helene Stewart and Virginia Collier.

For Miss Pearl Mobley.

Mrs. Edward L. Humphreys was hostess at a linen shower Thursday afternoon for Miss Pearl Mobley, a bride-elect.

In a game of heart-dice Miss Bernice Scott won a fan for top score, Miss Lillian Brooks received a picture as consolation, and Miss Mobley was presented with a hand-embroidered collar.

The apartment was decorated with daisies and ferns.

Those invited to meet Miss Mobley were Misses Lillian Brooks, Bernice Scott, Bernice Denton, Frances Lazear, Celia Hiers, Curd, Dora Hiers, Mrs. E. M. Redwine, Mrs. Max Epstein, Mrs. M. H. Chandler, Mrs. A. T. Vandiver and Mrs. William L. Scott.

Mrs. Max Epstein gave a box party at the Forsyth Saturday afternoon for Miss Mobley. Guests were Misses Lillian Brooks, Dora Hiers, Frances Lazear, Mrs. Edward L. Humphreys, Mrs. E. M. Redwine, Mrs. Joseph Lazear and Mrs. Sara Lazear.

Child's Birthday Party.

A birthday party was given for Frederick Lindley Beers, Jr. Pink sweetpeas were used as decorations. The pink birthday cake with its one candle, surrounded by pink sweetpeas, formed the centerpiece of the table. Pink ices and cakes were served, and at each place a tiny baby basket of pink mints decorated with sweetpeas was given as a favor.

Those invited were Misses Margaret Hood Bobbin Dennis, Elizabeth Carlton, Mary Ruth Wight, Mary Stillman, Sarah Stillman, Georgia Drysdale, Linda Cox, Masters Robert Carlton, Allison Adams, William Palmour, Colquitt Carter, Jr.

Piano Recital.

Pupils of Mrs. Lillian Woodberry Johnson gave a piano recital at the music studio. Program numbers showed a wide range of style and selection. Mrs. Johnson received hearty congratulations.

Those taking part in the recital were Misses Margaret Snow, Sarah Snow, Leone Spinks, Louise Granade, Sarah Smith, Lillian Connor, Cecil Garrett, Jessie Lea Davenport, Josephine Smith, Maud Goodwin, Edith London, Annie Rose Kenimer, Mary Kenimer, Ruth Walker, Montine Jones, Mattie Lou Crenshaw, Florence Green, Lucile Little, Bessie Sorrow, Grace Davis, Lucy Swann, Minnie Pickler, Carrie Lee Featherstone.

Wedding Plans Changed.

Mr. and Mrs. David Patman Daniell announce a change in the plans of the marriage of their daughter, Vera Belle, to Mr. Homer Leon Wilson. The wedding will take place at Collins' Memorial Church, Bolton, Ga., at 6 p. m., June 19. It was previously planned at the home of the bride's parents in Bolton.

For Miss Daniell.

Misses Claudia and Bertha Hudson entertained with a shower for Miss Vera Daniell, a June bride-elect. Sweetpeas decorated the living and reception rooms. The prize was won by Miss Emmee Branham. The bride was presented with silk hose.

Those present were Miss Vera Daniell, Miss Grace Bell, Miss Ruth Gable, Miss Margaret Berge, Miss Montine Byrd, Misses Lucy and Susie Johnson, Misses Mary and Bertha Heins, Miss Ethel Rutherford, Misses Elizabeth and Frances Walker, Mrs. Lamar Ray, Misses Clara and Milly Loughry, Mrs. Gordon Stowers, Miss Nettie Summerlin, Miss Reggie Sue Daniell, Miss Lilly Mae Adams, Misses Cassie and Annie Lou Hunter, Miss Emmee Branham, Miss Fae Bancroft and Miss Pearl Gary.

Miss Richardson's Recital.

A piano recital was given by Miss Kate Richardson Friday evening. Miss Richardson is a graduate of Miss Evelyn Jackson's school of music. She will receive her diploma at the closing recital Tuesday evening. Her program follows:

Sonata in C sharp minor, Beethoven.

(a) Nocturne, Op. 27, No. 2, Chopin; (b) Prelude in D, Chopin; (c) "On the Mountains," Grieg.

Polonaise, Moszkowski.

(a) Gondolerie, Liszt; (b) Nachstucke, Schumann; (c) Silver Spring, Mason.

Rhapsodie, No. 2, Liszt.

Rondo, Chopin.

Owens-Hall.

The initial social event of the week and one in which is centered the interest of a host of friends will be the marriage of Miss Charles Owens and Mr. Edward Buckinham Hall, of Morristown, N. J., Monday evening at 8:30 o'clock.

On account of illness in the bride's family the invitations to the church ceremony have been recalled and the ceremony will take place instead at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Owens, on Eleventh Street, in the presence of relatives and a few close friends.

A number of out-of-town guests will attend the wedding, among them the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Hall, of Morristown, N. J., and New York.

For Miss Buckner.

Miss Helen Jones will give a reception Tuesday afternoon, June 24, for her guest, Miss Margaret Buckner, of Roanoke, Va.

Miss Margaret Northen will entertain several young people at Highland Farm, the country place of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Northen, one afternoon this week for Miss Buckner.

U. S. Officials Inspect Pensacola Navy Yard

PENSACOLA, FLA., June 16.—Admiral John R. Edwards, U. S. N.; Captain George Evans, naval constructor; W. G. DuBose, civil engineer, and A. L. Parsons, of the Survey Board, are here to-day inspecting the Pensacola navy yard.

After inspecting other Southern yards, they will make recommendations to Secretary of the Navy Daniels.

The future of this yard is dependent upon to-day's inspection.

JUAREZ IS REINFORCED.

EL PASO, June 16.—Three hundred men under General Salazar and Colonel Porelli to-day joined the Federal garrison at Juarez. The arrival of the troops to reinforce the Huerta troops quartered there relieved the fear that 1,200 rebels encamped 30 miles from the city would attack it.

A Good Clean Show at the Dutch Mill.

The Dutch Mill is one of the cleanest and best playhouses in Atlanta, with the most beautiful movies, projected on a radium gold screen, producing a soft, pleasing effect that does not injure the eye.

And there is Mae Reilly and the Dutch Mill Stock Company—real beauties, real entertainers and really clean comedy. Enjoy yourself at the Dutch Mill.

Farmer's Wife Ends Life With a Pistol

VALDOSTA, June 16.—Mrs. Sallie Newsome, wife of a farmer living in the southern part of Lowndes County, committed suicide by shooting herself through the head with a pistol. There were no eyewitnesses. Coroner Solomon has gone to the scene to make an investigation.

The woman's husband and young children heard the shot and, rushing into the room, found her lying dead across the bed. It is rumored that Mrs. Newsome's married life was not happy.

Ship Limps on, Side Patched With Canvas

DULUTH, MINN., June 16.—The steamer Jesse Spaulding was afloat to-day and laboring toward Duluth, a section of canvas covering a large hole in her side. The Spaulding collided with the William M. Snyder, Jr., in Lake Superior yesterday, and, after flying distress signals, disappeared in a fog.

It was feared that she had gone down with her crew of sixteen.

"September Morn"

HAND-PAINTED water color photogravures of Paul Chabas' nude painting, "September Morn," fill one window of the Cole Book Company, and instead of harsh criticism excited only pity, which was due to the fact that the manager of the store took occasion to select about the coldest June day in the history of the city's weather for this art exhibition.

The original painting excited no end of comment when brought to this country for exhibition purposes. It was first placed in one of the windows of a Fifth Avenue art gallery, and was promptly spied by one of Anthony Comstock's agents, who demanded that it be taken out or he would go to the courts. Afterward Comstock himself decided the picture was nothing to shock anyone, according to newspaper accounts at the time, and agreed with the manager of the art gallery that it was artistic.

The picture was sent from one large city in the East to the other and caused more comment than any painting in years. It is now in one of the big European art galleries.

The figure is that of a young blonde-haired girl, who is about to take her bath, and is said to be the same model as the figure in "Twilight" by the same artist. "September Morn" was exhibited in the last Paris salon, and received high praise from the artists in the Parisian capital.

The cut represents only the figure, which occupies a small part of the picture. Just bare outlines of mountains are seen in the distance, which rise from the water through a misty haze. The coloring is most delicate. The reproductions in the Whitehall Street store are two different sizes.

Mother and Sons

By Virginia T. Van De Water.

"OH, it is pitiful, pitiful," exclaims Thackeray, "the bootless love of mothers for their children in Vanity Fair!"

The words recurred to my mind as I looked into the tragic eyes of a widow the mother of two sons. Her husband had died when her oldest child was but five years old. She was what has been called "a born mother," with whom maternity was an absorbing passion. She had married at eighteen and was a widow at twenty-six. For years she had worked uncomplainingly to educate her sons.

There had been not only work but the sacrifice of many of the things in which women delight. She had not had time to go into society during working-hours, and in the evening she "did not like to leave the boys." She put them both through college, living close to them, spending her strength and youth in the effort. When one of them finished his university course he went into business on the Pacific slope. Then the mother's face developed lines of anxiety, still she smiled bravely.

"I educated him that he might make the best of his chances," she said firmly, "and it would be selfish for me to mention to him my dread of parting from him. And I have my other boy, you know."

Two years later her second son was graduated and went to South America as a mining engineer. It was soon after this that I called on the lonely mother. She had grown old in a few weeks. She began talking of her boys—calmly at first, then her voice quivered and broke.

Need Her No More.

"What is there for me to do now?" she asked. "I am no good to anybody. I have dropped utterly out of the old set and world to which I once belonged. I am too old to learn new ways. My one aim has been to fit my boys for the battle of life, but I hoped that battle would be fought near me. Now I am left alone. I would be a selfish creature in the eyes of the world if I were to try to keep my sons with me—for they have their own lives to live, and mine is done. They will never be mine again. They will sometimes come to see me, but they will never come as they used to come. They need me no more."

She is not yet fifty and feels that her life is done! She is one of the "Mothers of Men" of whom George Cabot Lodge wrote:

"Weep, mothers of men!
The hands of the world are strong to take
The lives ye bear for the world's sole sake,
To try their souls till they bend or break;
Your children vanish from out your ken—
Weep, mothers of men!"

It is all true, viewed from one standpoint, and yet when women dare make a moan like this the world calls them selfish. If so, then it is too late for the mischief to be repaired.

"The greatest kindness we can do our children is to teach them to be independent of us," remarked one woman sententiously.

The mother to whom she spoke flung her hands out with a gesture that was almost despairing.

"Ah, yes!" she exclaimed bitterly, "but good Lord! who is going to teach US to be independent of THEM!"

There is the cry of the mother. Who, indeed?

Never Lose Daughters.

Mothers of daughters claim that they never lose these, and their contention is true. Even after a girl marries she turns to her mother for advice and counsel, often loving her better than she did before she appreciated what women must suffer for their children.

Yet, for the mother of sons there is always the possibility of which our poet writes. How can she fortify herself against this misery? It can not be prevented—God help her!—but it may be made lighter. For she can be less unreasoningly unselfish.

Does this sound cruel? Such selfishness as I have in mind is kindness to the mother and true kindness to the child. No boy is better for knowing that he fills his mother's entire mental and spiritual horizon, that she counts all sacrifice for him as gain. The time arrives—unless he be unusually noble—when, in spite of himself, the sacrifice is taken for granted by him; he thinks of it as his due and makes a common thing of it.

Would I have a boy sacrifice his future to his mother? No, but I would have him consult her a little in planning that future, and he will not do this if she has not taught him to consider her wishes as well as his own. If two equally good opportunities present themselves, I would have him choose the one which will keep him near his mother rather than that at the other side of the continent—always supposing the one at home means as big a future for him as does the one abroad.

Wider Views of Life.

But we are dealing now with the mother, rather than with the boy. I claim that even when her children are mere babies she should force herself to take an interest in things outside of the nursery. She need not neglect her children to do this. Indeed, she will give them better care and bring them up in a finer, broader atmosphere if she has wide views of life and knows what is going on in the world. And, as her children grow to need less of her personal care, she ought to go about and meet people and think of other things as of the needs and wishes of her offspring.

Blessed—thrice blessed—is the mother of men when those men remain near her. If they must leave her she can not escape keen suffering, but if she has filled her "world" very "full of a number of things" she may escape adding to the pain of parting and missing the irony of a desolate, objectless life, an empty heart and idle hands.

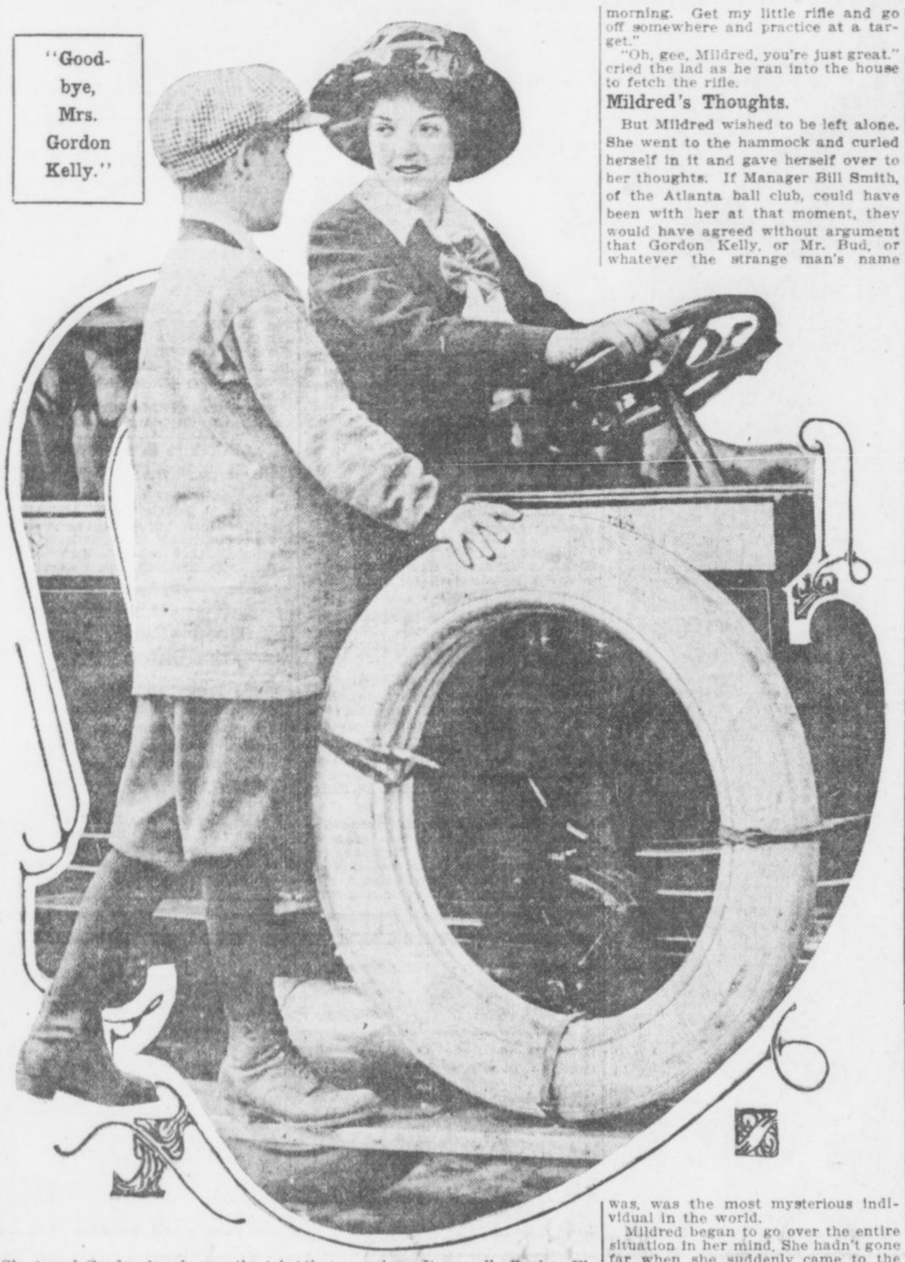
THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is fishing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life.

Now go on with the story.



"Good-bye, Mrs. Gordon Kelly."

CHAPTER XXIX.

THREE days passed before Gordon Kelly heard directly from Mildred Deery. Her nerves shattered and on the verge of hysteria, she had been taken home by Gordon after the near-tragedy in which Cain was involved. She would not allow Mrs. Shephard to summon either of her parents from Atlanta nor would she permit her to call the nearest doctor. She was her own physician in the days that followed and she began by prescribing complete rest and quietness. That, she told herself, was what the most celebrated physician in the land would have told her.

Gordon talked over the telephone with Elmer twice a day, night and morning, in the intervals before he saw Mildred again. With Steve as the messenger, he sent her all sorts of little delicacies and rare flowers. Where they came from she could not imagine. Certainly he had not had time to order them from Atlanta or Chattanooga, the nearest large cities; in fact, she doubted if they could be procured anywhere in those cities. His thoughtfulness had not a little to do with her convalescence, following the shock of the encounter with Cain.

Mildred Telephones.

On the morning of the third day she awoke calm and even cheerful. At breakfast she remarked to Elmer that she would be ready to resume the lesson in French, whereat the lad exclaimed, "Oh, shucks." Soon after she went to the telephone, rang three times and listened.

"Is Mr. Kelly at home?" she asked, when the ring had been answered. Elmer, who was within earshot, though not eavesdropping, grinned.

"There is no Mr. Kelly here," came the reply.

"Wait just a minute, please," said the voice, interrupting. There was some confusion on the other end of the line and then she heard Gordon Kelly's voice.

"Good morning," he said. "Is this you, Mildred?"

"Yes, Mr. Kelly."

"Mr. Kelly, eh? You call me Mr. Kelly one minute and Gordon the next. However, I won't quarrel with you, because you have been ill. How are you this morning? I have been very anxious about you."

"I am feeling quite myself again and thank you ever so much for all those nice things you sent me and for those lovely flowers. Tell me, where in the world did you get them?"

"The flowers? Oh, the gardener produced them when I made a requisition. The housekeeper produced the other things. I'm glad you enjoyed them."

An Engagement.

There was a brief silence, then Gordon said:

"Are you still there?"

"Yes," replied Mildred. "I was just thinking what a strange man you are with your automobiles and your gardeners and your colored genie and your housekeepers and your network of telephones away up here in the mountains, and your ball playing."

She heard Gordon laugh over the telephone. Then he said:

"Well, you know, the first time I saw you at your house your mother asked me about my life in the mountains; you wouldn't let me tell her and afterward, when I asked you why you did it, you said it was a secret. Do you remember?"

"Yes, I do, and it turns out a good deal more of a mystery than I had bargained for."

When Gordon spoke again his voice was lowered.

"Tell me, please; when will you feel well enough to let me see you?"

Mildred unconsciously lowered her voice, too.

"Why—I feel all right now. I'm not ill any more."

"May I call this afternoon?" he said, eagerly.

"Certainly; delighted to have you. But suppose I meet you?"

"Fine! Great! Where?"

"At—at—say at the bridge at 3. Now, good-bye; I must give Elmer his lesson in French."

If Mildred could have seen through the telephone, she would have seen Gordon slam up the receiver and turn three backward somersaults without stopping.

After all the threats, Elmer didn't take his lesson. It is true the books were produced and Mildred sat down at a table, opposite Elmer on the porch and assumed the dignified air of a schoolmarm, but that was as far as they got with the foreign language that morning. It was all off when Elmer said with a grin:

"They didn't know any Mr. Kelly up there, did they?"

No Gordon Kelly.

"What do you know about it, you little rascal?" demanded Mildred.

"I know all about it. There's no such man as Gordon Kelly."

"What do you mean, child?"

"I mean just what I say. There's no such person as Gordon Kelly."

"That's simply nonsense, Elmer; what in the world ails you to-day?"

"Oh, I got you buffaloed all right, Mildred. Ha, ha!" and he laughed gleefully.

"Elmer, you can be the most tantalizing boy I ever knew when you want to be. Now, look me straight in the eye and tell me what you mean."

"I'm telling you the truth, Mildred," said the lad, seriously. "His name isn't Gordon Kelly at all; it's Mr. Bud."

"Mr. Bud! Elmer, you're simply crazy. I won't listen to you any more. Take your books and go away."

"Now, Mildred, listen. I'm not fooling at all." Thereupon he told her of finding the telephone beside the brook and calling up Gordon Kelly and of his conversation with Steve, the colored boy. When he had finished Mildred tossed her head in the air and said, with decision:

"I'll find out what his name is mighty quick."

"When?"

"This afternoon. Now, I'll excuse you from taking your lesson this morning. Get my little rifle and go off somewhere and practice at a target."

"Oh, gee, Mildred, you're just great," cried the lad as he ran into the house to fetch the rifle.

Mildred's Thoughts.

But Mildred wished to be left alone. She went to the hammock and curled herself in it and gave herself over to her thoughts. If Manager Bill Smith, of the Atlanta ball club, could have been with her at that moment, they would have agreed without argument that Gordon Kelly, or Mr. Bud, or whatever the strange man's name was, was the most mysterious individual in the world.

Mildred began to go over the entire situation in her mind. She hadn't gone far when she suddenly came to the realization that she hardly knew anything at all about Gordon Kelly. She knew nothing about his family, his life nor his habits. He had been introduced into her family as Gordon Kelly, yet here, up in his mountain home, no one knew of a Gordon Kelly. They called him Mr. Bud. Who was Mr. Bud? Her father certainly didn't know him by that name. He had told her that he had met Gordon Kelly through Judge Barbee. Certainly the Judge wouldn't be a party to any deception. Was Gordon Kelly an assumed name? Was it an alias? Her father had told her nothing about Gordon Kelly's family—because he didn't know anything about it himself, probably.

Was his family "respectable?" Did he really own the property, or was he an employee or representative of the people that did own it? He might be a foreman or a superintendent. No harm in that, thought Mildred, but she would like to know about it.

Then she reviewed her brief acquaintance with Gordon Kelly. She recalled the conversations she had had with him in the few times they had met. The talk, she remembered, was mostly about books and music and kindred topics and the small talk that two young people would indulge in. It came back to her that he talked with great intelligence on music and art and literature. Surely he was refined and cultured. His family must be "respectable."

And then Mildred thought of Gordon Kelly the MAN—the tall, fine-featured, broad-shouldered, strong and powerful MAN. And her mind dwelt on his simplicity of manner, his kindness and gentleness and his prowess on the ball field and his bravery so lately displayed. And she was satisfied. She smiled contentedly to herself as she lay curled in the hammock. No, she would not break the engagement she had for 3 o'clock that afternoon, but she would find out all about the Gordon Kelly-Mr. Bud mystery.

"Make me look pretty, Mandy," said Mildred to her maid, who assisted her to dress when the time came. "I'se got a 'portant 'gagement fo' dis' afternoon."

She seldom allowed herself to unbend in dignity to her maid, but today she was feeling very cheerful and happy.

"Will you wear your tan dress, Miss Mildred?" asked the maid.

"No, Mandy, I'll wear the light blue; it's more becoming, don't you think so?"

Thus arrayed, she went out on the porch and asked Elmer to bring the runabout around. When it came she stepped in it and took her place behind the wheel.

"Good-bye, Elmer, see you later," she said to the lad.

"Gee, ain't I going, too?" said Elmer in a tone of disappointment.

"Not this time, honey; good-bye."

Before the car was fairly in motion the boy jumped on the side of it and, leaning over, whispered mischievously in Mildred's ear:

"Good-bye, Mrs. Gordon Kelly."

"You little wretch!" exclaimed Mildred, blushing furiously.

But she turned her head a moment later and waved her hand and smiled at him.

CHAPTER XXX.

WHEN Forrest Cain, lying unconscious in the road beside his automobile, regained his senses he saw Gordon Kelly standing over him. His mind was befuddled and he did not recall what had happened to him. Kelly prodded him with the toe of his shoe as though he was a dead snake and said, sharply, "Get up."

Cain rose slowly to his feet. The fight was all out of him.

"Walk around," ordered Kelly. Cain took a few steps. Kelly left him and joined Mildred and Elmer. "He is all right. Get in the car, please, and we will get out of this."

Without even another glance at Cain, the three entered Kelly's automobile and a minute later they were whirling down the road, leaving Cain, with singular indifference, to his own meditations.

Cain was sober by this time—sober, sullen and resentful. His right hand pained him. He looked at the back of it where the stone thrown by Elmer had struck him. It was crushed and bleeding. The fingers hung down as though without life. He felt of the bruise and winced. There was no doubt but that bones were broken. He cranked the motor with his left hand, entered the car and attempted to set the control into low speed, but found he had lost the use of his right hand. Reaching over with his left hand, however, he was able to manipulate the lever and then, easing in the clutch, the car moved slowly ahead. It was necessary to turn around. This was accomplished with infinite labor and finally the car was straightened out for the journey to Cain's shack. This had to be taken at low speed, however, because once the car started ahead he could not change the speed, as he only had the use of his left hand and could not take that from the steering wheel in order to change gears.

In gloomy silence he crawled back the six miles to his mountain habitation. He summoned his man George and commanded him to pack up. His campaign had utterly failed. He would go back to Atlanta to nurse his injury, nurse his lacerated feelings and plan some revenge that would settle scores with Gordon Kelly once and for all. While his man was busy packing he bathed his hand in cold water and, after pouring whisky on the wound as an antiseptic (and pouring a considerable quantity of it down his throat as an antisplenetic) he bandaged the injured member, swore at George on general principles and went outside to smoke and think some more.

In his three personal encounters with Gordon Kelly Cain had been badly worsted, verbally or physically, every time. Yet Gordon Kelly was in no way to blame in any case. He was attending strictly to his own business and had sought no quarrel with the man who declared himself his foe. This phase of the matter never once entered the mind of Cain. He only knew that it was through Gordon Kelly that all his troubles came.

At this point his sullen reveries were interrupted by the appearance of a tall, raw-boned, black-bearded man, dressed in the uncouth habiliments of the backwoods. Without a nod or any salutation, he made known the nature of his business.

"We done run out of matches," he said. "Got any?"

Cain was accustomed to deference from those he considered beneath him.

"What do you want with them?" he asked with a scowl.

"Eat 'em, mebbe; what's that to you?" drawled the stranger.

"Where do you come from?"

"None o' your damned business. Ef yer ain't got no matches, say so."

"You're on my property; you're trespassing," declared Cain.

"What do you all reckon you're goin' to do about?" observed the stranger in the same even tone.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the twenty-four installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 25th installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

Man Who Loves Like a Pirate

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

C. C. W. writes:

"I am 27 years of age, and am desperately in love with a girl three years my junior. She is beautiful, accomplished and a leader in our social set. Although I have proposed to her three or four times, she still refuses to marry me. I feel certain that there is no other occupying her time, for if I had a rival I would unquestionably put him out of the way.

"How am I to persuade this cold-hearted woman to become my bride?"

Persuade her by storming her father's castle some dark night, and carrying her off strapped behind you on the back of your noble charger. That is the time-honored method of all swashbucklers, and it is the method that would most appeal to one who says if he had a rival he would "unquestionably put him out of the way."

It is not the modern way. It is not the sane way, but you are not modern, and I could almost suggest that one who talks of putting a rival "out of the way" is not sane.

It is a further mark that you are not wise that you call your sweetheart coldhearted. Because a woman will not yield to one lover doesn't prove she has a cold heart. In your case, my dear Sir Reginald, or Sir Launcelot, or whoever was the hero of your latest fiction, the cold heart of your lady love proves a cool head.

She will not marry you though you propose twenty times. There is something to you of which she does not approve. Instead of making over yourself, you keep on proposing, imagining that the opposition to be overcome lies not in your matchless person, but in her cold heart.

A Gory Love.

Yours is a love that reeks of gore and gunpowder. You emit fire from your nostrils when you speak of your passion, and would impress this woman with your daredevil disposition, your dauntless courage, and your untamed strength. I have known men who loved like pirates, just as you love. They became the kind of husbands who were afraid to go to the door when there was a ring late at night, and sent their wives instead.

You talk like a cheap hero in a book. It is the sort of talk that sometimes has telling effect on girls of 16, but, thank Heaven, the lady love of your piratical schemes and bloodthirsty dreams is 24 and has such a clear vision that she sees you as you are.

My dear, bold buccaneer, drop your paper sword, wipe the ink-red stains from your hands, cut off that fierce mustache and become a MAN. If you really love this woman, make of yourself such a worthy man that she will no longer spurn you, but will seek you instead.

Don't get on your knees when you propose, as did the heroes in your favorite fiction. Don't color your conversation with threats to carry her off bodily, slaying all who intervene. Stand on your feet, like a manly man, and tell her you love her in language that befits these most sane and prosaic times.

Your paper sword has failed to win. Try the better way of showing her a good, strong right arm that is ready to serve her through life.

Recognize the existence of a rival and know that he lies in this masquerade you have put on. "Put him out of the way" by all means by conducting yourself in a saner fashion.

Be a man and love as a man of 27 should love, leaving to those ten years your junior dreams and schemes that smell of gunpowder and gore.

By LADY DOROTHY NEVILL. .:.

A GRANDE DAME and leader of the social world during the greater part of the past century, Lady Dorothy Nevill, who died recently, was famous for her charm of manner, incisive wit, and brilliant repartee. She was the confidante of royal personages, statesmen, field marshals and diplomatists. At her receptions one met all the most attractive people of the day. Her intimate friends included such noted men as Beaconsfield, Gladstone, Wilberforce, Cobden, Bright and Matthew Arnold. Her greatest friend, perhaps, was Beaconsfield. He was always "Dear Dizzy" to Lady Dorothy, while he always addressed her as "My Dearest Dorothy," and their correspondence provides many interesting glimpses of this great Tory statesman.

Perhaps one of the best stories which Lady Dorothy has told about Disraeli is that concerning the occasion when a photographer asked him to pose for a photograph leaning on a chair. This at once aroused the indignation of Mrs. Disraeli. "I soon settled that," she said, afterwards, to Lady Dorothy, when relating the incident, "for I said, 'Dizzy has always stood alone, and he shall continue to do so.'"

"The Gorgeous Lily."

On one occasion Lady Dorothy, who was sitting next to Mr. Gladstone, was asked by the latter if she had ever heard Lord Beaconsfield express any particular fondness for the primrose. She admitted he had not, adding, "The gorgeous lily, I think, was more to his taste."

Referring to Gladstone, Lady Dorothy used to tell a story which is illustrative of the "Grand Old Man's" character. He was discoursing to her of the perfect immunity of English public men from all dangers of assault or assassination in his day, and all the time two detectives, dressed as footmen, were in the very room guarding him, while another was upstairs in the drawing-room ready to mingle with the guests.

It was Mr. Joseph Chamberlain who, talking to Lady Dorothy of female suffrage, once said, "Thank goodness, there are no female members. Of the two evils I prefer Parnellites to petticoats."

Lady Dorothy herself was equally severe in regard to suffragettes, for in one of her books she writes: "Heaven did not make women insinuating and persuasive that they might be peevish. It did not make them feeble that they might be imperious; it did not give them softer voices than man in order that they might rail at him; not delicate features to be destroyed by rage. Angry women forget themselves and the dignity of their sex, which has never gained much by scolding."

Lady Dorothy Nevill had a good deal to say about the change that has taken place in the character and the manners of women since her own earlier days. She considered the modern woman is spoilt, has too much time on her hands, takes up too many fads, and completely dominates her husband. This struck the old Shah of Persia very much. He said: "It seems to me that the English and American husband is nothing better than a sort of butler."

Lady Dorothy was particularly severe on the "smart set" of to-day. "The elite," she said, "are fast, flippant and smart. People are less interesting to talk to, less sociable, less brilliant in conversation, less interested in things." And as an illustration of the change in the life of a society woman, who to-day thinks nothing of spending $5,000 a year on her dress, she mentions how she and her sister were given a dress allowance of $250 and $200, respectively, by their adoring father.

She was also wont to refer to the fact that in her younger days parents were very particular about the matrimonial alliances made in their families, and she told an amusing story of one old peer who was greatly surprised to be told by his sister that she had developed a great affection for a well-known scientist of humble birth.

The peer sent for him and said, brusquely, "Now, sir, I should like to know something about your family."

"I think it will be sufficient," replied the scientist, who awes of Semitic extraction, "to say that I descended from the illustrious blood of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob."

The peer was taken aback. "Oh," he said, "of course, my family has nothing to compare with that; therefore, if my sister really likes you, you'd better take her."

Leap Year Proposals.

This reminds one of another story which Lady Dorothy relates in one of her books concerning an East Anglican clergyman who was visited by a lady parishioner and asked whether he thought a woman might, in any circumstances, propose to a man. Much taken aback, the poor rector replied that he certainly thought there might be circumstances which would make such a proposal justifiable. Upon which, without the slightest hesitation, the lady exclaimed, "As Nathan said unto David, 'Thou art the man.'" And, seeing no possibility of escape, he was.

Speaking of the amusements of girls in her time, Lady Dorothy said that in the sixties, when old-fashioned croquet occupied most of her attention, it was supposed to be responsible for many marriages. "Are you going to make a flower-bed here, Thomas?" asked a young lady of the gardener. "Yes, mum, them's the horders." "Why, it will quite spoil our croquet ground." "Can't help it, mum. Them's yer pa's horders. He ses as 'ow to have it laid out for 'orticulture, not 'usbandry."

Lady Dorothy also numbered the late King Edward among her personal friends. Once, sitting next to him at dinner, he noticed she ate oysters with a knife. He made a humorous comment, and the next morning presented her with a beautiful case of oyster knives, and in the note which accompanied them said: "In remembrance of your criminal tendency."

A "Regular" Babe.

It was a timber law case, in which Tim Healy was counsel for the defense. In the course of the case a youthful witness was put up as an expert on the plaintiff's side. Tim got up to cross-examine.

"What age are you?"

"Twenty-one years."

"How long have you been in the timber trade?"

"Two years."

Tim sat down, saying, "A regular babe in the wood, my lord," which discounted the evidence of the youthful expert.

Their Married Life

Helen Is Made to Feel That She Is Too Exacting and Expects Too Much of Maggie.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"WHY, Maggie, this isn't a clean cloth. Look at this!" Helen pointed to a distinct grease spot on the damask tablecloth. "And here's another. Why, this is the cloth we had on for breakfast."

"'Twas clean last night, ma'am," grumbled Maggie. "That makes three we've had on this week. We can't have no clean cloth every night."

"Well, we certainly will when we have guests. Now, you'll simply have to change this, Maggie. You ought to have known that cloth wouldn't do for dinner to-night."

"I won't have no time to unset that table now, ma'am," obstinately. "It's after 6 already."

Helen flushed and bit her lips. Maggie was growing more and more impertinent, but just before a company dinner was not the time to reprove her. So with an effort Helen kept back the sharp words and began deliberately to unset the table herself.

It was late and she was not yet dressed, but having taken the stand that there must be a clean cloth, she had no choice now but to put one on.

The first cloth she unfolded was an old one that had been darned; the next had a claret stain. Both of these had to be refolded and put back. The third was badly ironed and was hard to get on straight, but she finally got it adjusted and began to reset the table.

As she replaced the silver she found that there had been only three forks by each plate.

Fork Missing.

"Maggie, you forgot to put down an extra fork for the relish," as Maggie came in to get a dish from the sideboard.

"We aint got no relish, ma'am."

"Why, I told you to open a can of those anchovies."

"We used the last can of them, ma'am, last Sunday."

"But surely there's another can." Helen went out in the pantry to convince herself. "Well, we MUST have some kind of a relish. Oh, here's that jar of anchovy paste! Make some little squares of toast and spread it with this. You've got a hard-boiled egg," glancing in the refrigerator; "you can grate that over it."

Maggie, who was whipping the cream for the berries, turned around with an angry flush.

"You're wanting too much, ma'am. That's fancy cooking. Cooks who makes them fussy dishes gets $50 a month! And you expect me at the last minute to drop everything and——"

"That'll do, Maggie. As soon as I can get dressed I'll make this myself. And if you think you can get a place as a $50 cook I'd advise you to take it."

Helen flounced into her dressing room. For her dinner was already spoiled. She could never enjoy anything after any kind of a scene. Her whole nature shrank from contention, and just to keep peace she had let Maggie have her own way for so long that now she resented everything she was told.

The fact that the girl was honest, economical and an excellent cook had made Helen put up with everything else. But now she felt that she would rather have someone more agreeable and amenable, even though less capable.

A Man's Job.

Warren came in whistling, which with him was an evidence of rare good humor. Helen ran into his room with a hurried greeting.

"Oh, I'm so glad you've come, dear. Can you hook me up before you dress? I don't want to ask Maggie—she's been perfectly horrid!"

"Humph! Turn around here to the light, then. What's this thing?"

"Oh, wait—that's the inside belt! I'll hook that. There! Oh, dear, Maggie's getting to be IMPOSSIBLE!"

"What's the matter now?" as he clumsily hooked the dress.

"She put a soiled tablecloth on to-night—and I had to change it myself. And when I asked her to make some anchovy toast for a relish she said cooks get $50 a month for making those fancy dishes. Hurry, dear; never mind the bottom ones—I can hook those."

"Here—you hold still! You wanted me to fasten this—didn't you?"

She drew away from his still fumbling fingers and darted out into the kitchen. Maggie was fixing the salad. Helen maintained a cold, disapproving silence as she sliced the bread, cut the crust off to make small squares and put them on the broiler in the already heated oven.

The heat flushed her face and she burnt her finger, which increased her resentment. Hurriedly she mixed a spoonful of butter, spread it thickly on the toast and garnished each piece with the grated hard-boiled egg.

Fortunately the Thurstons were a few moments late, and Helen had the dainty squares of anchovy toast at each plate before the bell rang. But now she was flustered and nervous and felt in no mood for guests. However, as Warren was in an especially genial humor, her silence and abstraction were not noticed.

"What is this?" asked Mrs. Thurston. "Anchovy toast, isn't it? I wish Jane would make things like this. A relish adds so much to the dinner."

"S-s-sh," whispered Helen, with a glance toward the pantry. "I had to make it myself. Oh, I've had a TIME with her this evening! I feel I'm just about through."

"Why, I thought Maggie was such a good girl?" questioned Mrs. Thurston in surprise.

Her Own Story.

"She is—if you let her do everything her own way. But there ARE times when you want things done your own way. Just to keep peace I've let her dominate me more and more. I'll never begin that with another girl. It's always a mistake—they always take advantage of it."

"Well, I should advise you to hold on to Maggie," was Mr. Thurston's comment. "We've had a devil of a time for the last few weeks."

"Oh, didn't you like that Swedish woman?" asked Helen.

Mrs. Thurston shrugged her shoulders. "We've had three since then."

"But I thought she was going to be so good? She was a working housekeeper, wasn't she?"

"That's what she SAID she was," grinned Mrs. Thurston. "But she wouldn't work, and she didn't know anything about housekeeping! Then we had a German girl. She was RICH! Tell about her, Minnie."

Mrs. Thurston laughed. "Well, we forgot to lock the wine up one night, and she drank half a bottle of cherry brandy. The next morning I had to get breakfast."

"That's one fine thing about Maggie," announced Warren. "We never have to lock up the wine or anything else. And our grocery and butcher bills have been less since we've had her than they've ever been before."

"Well, that's just what we're looking for," said Mr. Thurston emphatically. "In case you let her go, turn her over to us, will you? By Jove, the one we've got now is extravagant, all right."

"Yes, she's very wasteful," agreed Mrs. Thurston. "We've used five pounds of butter this week—just for us two."

"Five!" exclaimed Helen. "Why, Maggie rarely uses more than three."

"Three? We've never used as little as that since we've been housekeeping. We've never had a girl that didn't either take stuff home or feed a lot of company in the kitchen. This one has a beau that comes two nights a week, and she gets him a regular supper. But what can we say? We just have to put up with it."

"Well, I'D say a good deal." Warren's tone was emphatic.

"Not if you'd been through what we've been in the last two months," declared Mr. Thurston, grimly. "You don't know what a cinch you've got in Maggie."

Helen Uncomfortable.

Helen had the uncomfortable feeling that all this was tending to make her seem in the wrong. The inference was that if she could not get along with such a paragon of virtues as Maggie, she must be over-particular and very hard to please. The injustice of this rankled keenly. They only saw the best of Maggie; they did not know how trying, sullen and impertinent she could be.

The Thurstons stayed late, and as they were starting home Mrs. Thurston happened to glance in the bedroom. As usual, Maggie had fixed the bed for the night, taken off the counterpane and neatly turned down the covers. On the table was a fresh pitcher of ice water, covered with a napkin.

"Well, I call that luxury," Mrs. Thurston declared. "Look, Henry," calling to her husband, who was getting on his overcoat in the hall. "That's the way Maggie fixes their bed every night. Do you suppose we'll ever have the luck to get a girl like that?"

Helen flushed. It was only an added evidence of Maggie's perfection and of her own lack of appreciation.

Later, when Warren wound his watch for the night, he frowned over it thoughtfully.

"See here, we HAVE got a cinch in Maggie, but you don't seem to know it. You expect too blamed much of a girl. Great Scott, if you can't get along with her, who CAN you get along with? We've got a good thing and we're going to take Thurston's advice and hold on to it. Now you can just make up your mind to that."

The doors of a certain new house had shrunk horribly, as is the way of the modern door made of unseasoned wood. The builder would not send the joiner to replace them, so the householder tried the ironical method and wrote:

"Dear Sir: The mice can run under most of our doors, but our cat can not follow them. Will you please send a man at once to make room under the doors for the cat, and much oblige?"

Next day the joiners came.

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

"Cultivate Harmonious Surroundings," Says Doris Keane

Miss Keane's stage-room bower, and her favorite picture.

By LILLIAN LAUFERTY.

WITCHERY, charm incarnate, the lure of "the eternal woman," are to become living and tangible qualities through Doris Keane's portrayal of Margarita Cavallini in "Romance"—made real at Maxine Elliott's theater in New York.

Of course you have often read a book or seen a play in which earnest author and striving characters tell you again and again how charming is the fair heroine. All their insistence never makes it true! For the witchery of moonlight and the appeal of lovely woman are subtle things you must feel in stirring heart the while you see with rapt eyes.

But the Italian prima donna of "Romance" fascinates and bewitches even when you disapprove of the saucy jade—and at last she wins you heart and soul as with brimming eyes you sit rapt and thrilled the while she rises to the sacred realization of her woman's soul and pleads with her adorer, "Let me be good."

The curtain fell on an old man's dream of youth—or romance—and I was whisked back to the realm of glaring lights, of rouge pots and cold cream jars, of wigs and artifice, to visit our new star in her non-twinkling daylight environment—the dressing room.

All around me were flowered curtains and draperies of quaint old chintz—and everywhere, on stray shelves, on the dressing table, in free corners were glowing, fragrant flowers. And in the midst of this beauty and light sat Doris Keane still pulsing with the emotion she had felt the while she portrayed it.

Her Passion.

"You love beauty?" I ventured.

"I love beautiful surroundings and the personality they must develop," said Miss Keane. "You see, I have a sister—ever since our childhood I had known and felt and admired her radiant beauty. I knew I could never be like that—and one accepts the impossible serenely after a time. I accepted beauty and did not analyze it, I began to think more about personality and the power that brings.

"Ah, is not personality a wonderful thing! That almost all women can develop—the force, the magnetism that a rare and evenly developed personality bring are to me more lovely than beauty. Though, of course, the daughters of Eve do try to look as well as possible, to make that quick little appeal that gives personality a hearing.

"The most charming women have varying personalities. Do you know when I am most popular with myself? It is when I have a sudden realization that I looked like a girl of 15 in the morning, and that now in sophisticated evening clothes I look suddenly 'grande dame'—elderly even."

Of course Miss Keane would have some difficulty in looking "elderly," for, in spite of her well-bred poise, in spite of the keen power to analyze and appraise life that glows in the deep fires of her great brown eyes, Miss Keane is a girlish and appealing little figure.

In her Junoesque costume in "The Affairs of Anatol," early this winter, she managed to look tall and stately, in her present play she is an exotic Italian, but in propria persona Miss Keane is a brown-haired American girl whose earnestness of purpose and ambitious willingness to work add to the fervor of artistic inspiration and make her beautiful with a charm that surmounts mere prettiness of feature in a way that affords a little sermon all its own.

"Surroundings are so important," went on Miss Keane. "One evening recently a party of friends took me to a restaurant all done in heavy plush hangings and oppressive gilt. My personality was smothered, and I became a quiet, depressed creature quite different from the animated person I had been just before.

A Sure Sign.

"That made me finally sure of my theory. Surround yourself with fresh, clean, airy, wholesome surroundings. For purposes of stimulating mind and spirit a day in the country far surpasses a glass of champagne. The outdoors—trees, green growing things and a chance in nature and solitude to know your own soul are the most wonderful tonics I know.

"Isolation, solitude—a chance to 'ventilate my soul'—are the things I like best in the world.

"Since I was six years old I have known what I wanted to do in the world. That is young, perhaps—but ever since I can remember I have been working toward a chance to act—to interpret character. Women must find themselves and the outlet for their powers if they want to be happy—and whatever charm tragic beauty has, the loveliness of a happy soul working toward a goal is more appealing to the world—and men.

"But while I like men—the man is not come—I think for the actress who is afire with her art all else must be secondary."

I looked at those glowing brown eyes—alight with ambition, with earnest purpose, with desire to see deep into the great mystery of life—for Miss Keane glories in the vastness of life, and thinks to absolutely understand even one phase of it would be a splendid thing—as I looked at those fine eyes I felt that Doris Keane had told me the great secrets of spiritual beauty that can illuminate the face of any woman who desires it.

To rise above the tawdry plush and gilt facts of life, to "ventilate your soul," and open it to the loveliness of Nature, to find yourself and the outlet for your powers—to keep happily, healthily busy, to know ambition's spur, and to strive to grow—these are the beauty secrets of Doris Keane, who has not thought much about beauty—and yet has cultivated a spirit and charm that make her natural loveliness ever a greater delight.

Lost Books That Caused Tragedies

WHEN Thomas Carlyle had finished the first volume of his "French Revolution," a work which had cost him months of incessant toil and the verification of thousands of facts and references, he lent the manuscript to John Stuart Mill. Surely, that philosopher had one of the worst tasks ever allotted to a mortal man when he had to tell the "Sage of Chelsea" that the priceless manuscript had been thrown into the fire by a careless servant, and only a few charred leaves—still to be seen in Cheyne Row, Chelsea—remained to tell the tale.

Sir Isaac Newton was the victim of a similar catastrophe, but the "friend" responsible was not human, but canine—his favorite little dog. He left him in his study alone, and when he came back found that he had "chewed" the mathematical calculations of many strenuous months. Many accounts say that Newton took it very calmly, but the truth is that it preyed upon his mind to such an extent as to cause much temporary mental aberration.

One of the great losses to literature was the burning of six books of Spenser's "Faery Queen" which the poet is said to have left in his house in County Tyrone, Ireland. A rebellion broke out, and the place was burned; and not only did the poet's youngest child perish in the flames, but, it is said, also about as much of the great poem as we possess at present.

All lovers of Byron are aware that this erratic genius found time in his short, adventurous life to write his memoirs, and that on his death these passed into the hands of his friend, Thomas Moore, who, exercising a discretion committed to him, promptly consigned the manuscript to the flames.

No doubt the writer of "Irish Melodies" had very good and highly proper reasons for taking this decisive step, and it is quite likely that the publication of the memoirs would not, for obvious reasons, have been possible for many years after the poet's death; yet as succeeding generations have been brought face to face with the peculiarly complex genius of Byron, with its lofty moods and its many dark places, they have felt need of the light which only the records written by a vanished hand could have supplied.

Since the death of Auguste Strindberg, the famous Swedish novelist and dramatist—who, by the way, had much in common with Byron—many of his works have been translated into the English language and are already the center of heated controversy in literary circles. It is possible, therefore, that the powerful, if somewhat misanthropical, writings of this Swedish recluse may be read and treasured by generations to come. But all his works will not go down to posterity, for it is said that in a sudden fit of despondency Strindberg himself destroyed a number of his manuscripts, which, through lack of time or inclination, he never wrote again.

WITHIN THE LAW

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intrigue and Love

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Turner, an orphan, employed in Edward Gilder's department store, is unjustly accused of theft and sent to prison. She is hounded by the police on her release, and finally goes to live with Joe Garson, a forger, and Aggie Lynch, a blackmailer, both of whom treat her with respect. Mary resolves to keep "within the law." She becomes the leader of a band of swindlers. Gilder's son, Dick, falls in love with her, and she marries him to be revenged on his father—and then finds that she is in love with him. Dick refuses to give her up, a demand made by his father, Mary disappears. Police Inspector Burke in an effort to aid the elder Gilder schemes to secure the arrest of Mary through "English Eddie" Griggs, a police informer. Garson plans to rob the Gilder home on a tip from Griggs. Mary hears of it and tries to prevent it, going to the Gilder home. Mary pleads with Garson to drop the robbery, and Dick enters. Garson kills Griggs when Mary corners the latter and he admits he is working for the police. Burke enters the house, a searchlight throwing its rays on the dead man's body. Mary and Dick are arrested, because Mary tells Burke that Dick shot Griggs in defense of his home. The District Attorney tries to quash the case against young Gilder. Inspector Burke obtains from Miss Helen Travers West, daughter of a prominent railroad official, a promise that she will tell something about Mary.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"I shall do nothing of the sort. Sit down, indeed!—here! Why, I have been arrested——" There came a break in the music of her tones throbbing resentment. A little sob crept in, and broke the sequence of words. The dainty face was vivid with shame. "I——" she faltered, "I've been arrested—by a common policeman!"

The Inspector seized on the one flaw left him for defense against her indictment.

"No, no, miss," he argued, earnestly. "Excuse me. It wasn't any common policeman—it was a detective sergeant."

But this effort to placate was quite in vain. The ingenuous little beauty with the child's face and the blue eyes so widely opened fairly panted in her revolt against the ignominy of her position, and was not to be so easily appeased. Her voice came vibrant with disdain. Her level gaze on the Inspector was of a sort to suggest to him anxieties over possible complications here.

"You wait!" she cried violently. "You just wait, I tell you, until my papa hears of this!"

Burke regarded the furious girl doubtfully.

"Who is your papa?" he asked, with a bit of alarm stirring in his breast, for he had no mind to offend anyone of importance where there was no need.

"I sha'nt tell you," came the petulant retort from the girl. Her ivory forehead was wrinkled charmingly in a little frown of obstinacy. "Why," she went on, displaying new symptoms of distress over another appalling idea that flashed on her in this moment, "you would probably give my name to the reporters." Once again the rosebud mouth drooped into curves of sorrow, of a great self-pity. "If it ever got into the newspapers, my family would die of shame!"

The pathos of her fear pierced through the hardened crust of the police official. He spoke apologetically.

"Now, the easiest way out for both of us," he suggested, "is for you tell me just who you are. You see, young lady, you were found in the house of a notorious crook."

The haughtiness of the girl waxed. It seemed as if she grew an inch taller in her scorn of the Inspector's saying.

"How perfectly absurd!" she exclaimed, scathingly. "I was calling on Miss Mary Turner!"

"How Did You Meet Her?"

"How did you come to meet her, anyhow?" Burke inquired. He still held his big voice to a softer modulation than to which it was habituated.

Yet, the disdain of the girl seemed only to increase momently. She showed plainly that she regarded this brass-buttoned official as one unbearably insolent in his demeanor toward her. Nevertheless, she condescended to reply, with an exaggeration of the aristocratic drawl to indicate her displeasure.

"I was introduced to Miss Turner," she explained, "by Mr. Richard Gilder. Perhaps you have heard of his father, the owner of the Emporium."

"Oh, yes, I've heard of his father and of him, too," Burke admitted, placatingly.

But the girl relaxed not a whit in her attitude of offense.

"Then," she went on severely, "you must see at once that you are entirely mistaken in this matter." Her blue eyes widened further as she stared accusingly at the Inspector, who betrayed evidences of perplexity, and hesitated for an answer. Then, the doll-like, charming face took on a softer look, which had in it a suggestion of appeal.

"Don't you see it?" she demanded.

"Well, no," Burke rejoined uneasily; "not exactly, I don't!" In the presence of this delicate and graceful femininity he experienced a sudden novel distaste for his usual sledge-hammer methods of attack in interrogation. Yet his duty required that he should continue his questioning. He found himself, in fact, between the devil and the deep sea—though this particular devil appeared rather as an angel of light.

Now, at his somewhat feeble remark in reply to her query, the childish face grew as hard as its curving contours would permit.

"Sir!" she cried indignantly. Her little head was thrown back in scornful reproof, and she turned a shoulder toward the official contemptuously.

"Now, now!" Burke exclaimed in remonstrance. After all, he could not be brutal with this guileless maiden. He must, however, make the situation clear to her, lest she think him a beast—which would never do!

"You see, young lady," he went on with a gentleness of voice and manner that would have been inconceivable to Dacey and Chicago Red; "you see, the fact is that, even if you were introduced to this Mary Turner by young Mr. Gilder, this same Mary Turner herself is an ex-convict, and she's just been arrested for murder."

At the dread word a startling change was wrought in the girl. She wheeled to face the Inspector, her slender body swaying a little toward him. The rather heavy brows were lifted slightly in a disbelieving stare. The red lips were parted, rounded in a tremulous horror.

"Murder!" she gasped, and then was silent.

"Yes," Burke went on, wholly at ease now, since he had broken the ice thus effectually. "You see, if there's a mistake about you, you don't want it to go any further—not a mite further, that's sure. So, you see, now, that's one of the reasons why I must know just who you are." Then, in his turn, Burke put the query that the girl had put to him a little while before. "You see that, don't you?"

"Oh, yes, yes!" was the instant agreement. "You should have told me all about this horrid thing in the first place." Now the girl's manner was transformed. She smiled wistfully on the Inspector, and the glance of the blue eyes was very kind, subtly alluring. Yet in this unbending, there appeared even more decisively than hitherto the fine qualities in bearing of one delicately nurtured. She sank down in a chair by the desk and forthwith spoke with a simplicity that in itself was somehow peculiarly potent in its effect on the official who gave attentive ear.

"My name is Helen Travers West," she announced.

Burke started a little in his seat, and regarded the speaker with a new deference as he heard that name uttered.

"Not the daughter of the railway president?" he inquired.

She Displayed Agitation.

"Yes," the girl admitted. Then, anew, she displayed a serious agitation over the thought of any possible publicity in this affair.

"Oh, please, don't tell anyone," she begged prettily. The blue eyes were very imploring, beguiling, too. The timid smile that wreathed the tiny mouth was marvelously winning. The neatly gloved little hands were held outstretched, clasped in supplication. "Surely, sir, you see now quite plainly why it must never be known by any one in all the wide, wide world that I have ever been brought to this perfectly dreadful place—though you have been quite nice!" Her voice dropped to a note of musical prayerfulness. The words were spoken very softly and very slowly, with intonations difficult for a man to deny. "Please let me go home." She plucked a minute handkerchief from her handbag, put it to her eyes, and began to sob quietly.

The burly Inspector of Police was moved to quick sympathy. Really, when all was said and done, it was a shame that one like her should by some freak of fate have become involved in the sordid, vicious things that his profession made it obligatory on him to investigate. There was a considerable hint of the paternal in his air as he made an attempt to offer consolation to the afflicted damsel.

"That's all right, little lady," he exclaimed, cheerfully. "Now, don't you be worried—not a little bit. Take it from me, Miss West, * * * Just go ahead and tell me all you know about this Turner woman. Did you see her yesterday?"

The girl's sobs ceased. After a final dab with the minute handkerchief, she leaned forward a little toward the Inspector, and proceeded to put a question to him with great eagerness.

"Will you let me go home as soon as I've told you the teenty little I know?"

"Yes," Burke agreed promptly, with an encouraging smile. And for a good measure of reassurance he added as one might to an alarmed child: "No one is going to hurt you, young lady."

"Well, then, you see, it was this way," began the brisk explanation. "Mr. Gilder was calling on me one afternoon, and he said to me then that he knew a very charming young woman, who——"

Here the speech ended abruptly, and once again the handkerchief was brought into play as the sobbing broke to a moan.

Burke felt himself vaguely guilty as the cause of such suffering on the part of one so young, so fair, so innocent. As a culprit, he sought his best to afford a measure of soothing for this grief that had had its source in his performance of duty.

Her Voice Sank.

"That's all right, little lady," he urged in a voice as nearly mellifluous as he could contrive with its mighty volume. "That's all right. I have to keep on telling you. Nobody's going to hurt you—not a little bit. Believe me! Why, nobody ever would want to hurt you!"

But this well-meant attempt to assuage the stricken creature's woe was futile. The sobbing continued. With it came a plaintive cry, many times repeated, softly, but very miserably.

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear!"

"Isn't there something else you can tell about this woman?" Burke inquired in desperation before the plaintive outburst. He hoped to distract her from such grief over her predicament.

The girl gave no least heed to the question.

"Oh, I'm so frightened!" she gasped.

"Tut, tut!" the Inspector chided. "Now, I tell you there's nothing at all for you to be afraid of."

"I'm afraid!" the girl asserted dismally. "I'm afraid you will—put me—in a cell!" Her voice sank to a murmur hardly audible as she spoke the words so fraught with dread import to one of her refined sensibilities.

"Pooh!" Burke returned, gallantly. "Why, my dear young lady, nobody in the world would think of you and a cell at the same time—no, indeed!"

Instantly, the girl responded to this bald flattery. She fairly radiated appreciation of the compliment, as she turned her eyes, dewy with tears, on the somewhat flustered Inspector.

"Oh, thank you!" she exclaimed, with naive enjoyment.

Forthwith, Burke set out to make the most of this favorable opportunity.

"Are you sure you've told me all you know about this woman?" he questioned.

Burke Was Moved.

"Oh, yes! I've only seen her two or three times," came the ready response. The voice changed to supplication, and again the clasped hands were extended beseechingly.

"O please, Commissioner! Won't you let me go home?"

The use of a title higher than his own flattered the Inspector, and he was moved to graciousness. Besides, it was obvious that his police net in this instance had enmeshed only the most harmless of doves. He smiled encouragingly.

"Well, now, little lady," he said, almost tenderly, "if I let you go now, will you promise to let me know if you are able to think of anything else about this Turner woman?"

"I will—indeed, I will!" came the fervent assurance. There was something almost—quite provocative in the flash of gratitude that shone forth from the blue eyes of the girl in that moment of her superlative relief. It moved Burke to a desire for rehabilitation in her estimation.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

CONVINCE HER THEY ARE FALSE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen and deeply in love with a girl of seventeen. Some jealous person told her false stories about me that she believes. This caused a quarrel. Please tell me a way to regain her affections.

B. H.

You must never rest idle under false accusations. Convince her of your innocence and let the matter end there. Let it end for the reason that you are too young to know what love is.

YOU WERE RIGHT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been acquainted with a young man for several months, and he has taken me out quite a number of times. The last time he called he wanted to take me to a dance, but I refused, as he did not notify me in time so that I could get ready. Was I right in doing so? Since then he has not called to see me.

F. C.

You had the right of refusal, of course. If he is pouting because of it, believe me, my dear, he will prove a very uncomfortable friend, and you must waste no time or emotions on him.

BUD ANDERSON PUZZLES COAST FIGHT CRITICS

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 16.—That the coast fight critics are not yet quite sure whether Bud Anderson, of Medford, Oreg., is a real fighter or only a flash in the pan is indicated quite clearly by the remarks of all the men who have been out there and have watched him battle. Some say that he is one of the wonders of the world and others are waiting to see whether he defeats Leach Cross before expressing a definite opinion. He is to battle Cross on July 4 in a twenty-round battle, and his standing largely will be determined by the outcome of that affair.

* * *

BOB LAGA, the old-time Chicagoan, who has been a follower of the boxing game for years and has handled some of the best of them, was in the city last night and had something to say of Anderson. "Whitey Bob," as he was known around when boxing flourished here, has been in the East scouting, but is on his way back to Los Angeles. He thinks Anderson is one of the very greatest of the lightweights, and if he doesn't get bigger nothing on earth but a serious accident can keep him out of the lightweight title. Laga bases his opinion on Bud's punching ability alone and nothing else.

* * *

"BUD doesn't look to have such a terrific wallop, but what he has is a short, stunning wallop that seems to have his opponents dazed right from the start," is the way Bob puts it. "He hits from a very short distance, but there must be a terrible lot of sting to his either hand. He surely will beat Cross in the coming bout, but it will be a poor contest unless Cross will go in and take a chance. Anderson likes to wait for his man to come in close before he hits. Cross is much the same sort of a workman, and there may be a lot of standing around and stalling in this match."

* * *

BOB further expressed the opinion that Ad Wolgast is all in and that it will be next to impossible for him to come back in the old style and do any good with some of the newcomers of the division. "He seems to have lost all of the old stamina and pep," Laga said. "He seems as anxious as ever to do battle and looks fine, but there's something wrong."

* * *

WHEN Leach Cross was on a visit here this week he was continually boosting his younger brother, Phil, claiming that the lad could trim any and all of them at 142 to 145 pounds. Leach was very frank to admit that Phil is a better man than he is, and said that when Phil was put in in a semi wind-up to one of his battles it always took the edge off Leach's contest. "Phil has the crowd crazy when he fights, and then when I come on it makes me look bad." Leach said, "I'd like to see him get a chance with some of the welterweights around here, for I think he is a champion sure."

RITCHIE OWES HIGH STANDING TO AD. WOLGAST

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—A good deal was said about the inadvisability of matching Wolgast and Ritchie, but the expressions of opinion have simply been of an individual character and not always the fruit of sober reflection and a desire to be fair.

If Ritchie ever accomplishes one-half of what Wolgast did in the ring Willie's name will echo down the corridors with more of a reverberation than it is producing at present. Wolgast gave Ritchie a chance at the title when Ritchie had little or no standing as a fighter, and if pugilism were not such a cut-throat proposition gratitude should impel Ritchie to be as generous as Wolgast was.

If Ritchie had knocked out Wolgast there would have been some pith in the argument that the public would not care to see the two lads sent together again. But Willie did nothing of the sort. It was Wolgast's foul blow that made Ritchie champion, and that is why some of the sneering critics of the Far East tack the letters O. F. P. on to Ritchie's title. And for fear you don't know it should be stated that O. F. P. stands for Other Fellow's Punch.

Sports and Such

ABOUT THE ONLY REAL tragedy in connection with the recent polo match was the spectacle of the profound experts of polo—than whom there are none profounder—trying to explain the defeat of the English.

* * *

THE ONE BRIGHT BIT OF polo comedy was contributed by Harry Payne Whitney, captain of the American team, who said that he objected to the "commercialization of polo" as manifest in the plan to have the players wear numbers on their saddle cloths so that the spectators might identify them.

It might be pointed out to Mr. Whitney that the commercialization of polo began with himself and the other members of the Polo Association in charging from $2.50 to $250 for the privilege of watching the game.

* * *

MOST OF THE EXPECTED nervous prostration in connection with the managerial performance of J. Evers seems to be on the side of his opponents.

* * *

IT MAY BE CONFIDENTLY predicted that Johnny Kilbane will soon lose the featherweight title. He insists on fighting somebody now and then, contrary to the basic law of modern ring champions.

FEATHERS TO BATTLE IN NEW YORK ON WEDNESDAY

NEW YORK, June 16.—The St. Nicholas Athletic Club will stage a featherweight elimination tournament between six of the leading featherweights in the country next Wednesday night.

Matt Brock, of Cleveland, who is to meet Tommy Houck, arrived to-day. Kid Julian will arrive to-morrow. Joe Coster, who is to be Julian's opponent, is training at Brooklyn. Patsy Kline is getting in shape for his battle with Eddie O'Keefe, of Philadelphia.

TRENDALL AND MURPHY TO CLASH IN ST. LOUIS RING

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—Harry Trendall and Eddie Murphy will clash here in the star bout at the National Athletic Club Coliseum Wednesday, June 18. Trendall and Murphy will weigh 135 at 3 o'clock.

Murphy comes from Cleveland. He boxed a ten-round draw with Jack Britton at Kenosha, Wis., two weeks ago.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Ad Wolgast is certainly one popular fighter with the coast fans. Although Joe Rivers is a native son many of the fans out West were clamoring for the ex-champion to get the first chance at Ritchie. Ad's style of boxing, combined with his willingness to meet all comers when he was champion, has built up a large following for the "fighting Dutchman."

* * *

Mike Saul, who made his first fight last Friday in over a year, says he is after a return match with Terry Nelson. Mike seemed to be a big favorite with the fans and should be heard from in the future if he gets into good condition.

* * *

Kid Williams found Jem Kendrick easy picking at Baltimore the other night. The former handed the Englishman a terrific lacing and forced his second to throw up the sponge in the sixth round.

* * *

Tom Gibbons threatens to follow the footsteps of his brother, Mike, in the pugilistic world. Tom's latest achievement was a ten-round victory over Jack Denning last week and the latter is far from a slouch. Mike's brother is now after bouts with Frank Klaus and Jack Dillon.

* * *

In speaking of star middleweights why not mention the name of Jimmy Clabby, the veteran Hammond middleweight. Jimmy traveled to Butte, Mont., last Friday and handed Eddie McGoorty a fine trimming in ten rounds. Clabby was given a great ovation when the referee gave him the decision. The defeat just about eliminates McGoorty as a contender for the title.

* * *

Patsy Brannigan, the Pittsburg featherweight will get into action to-night. Patsy is scheduled to meet Young Mahoney in a ten-round engagement at Milwaukee, Wis. This will be Patsy's first battle since he defeated Matty McCue in the Brewer City about five weeks ago.

* * *

Abe Attell may get another chance at the featherweight title. A San Francisco promoter has offered the ex-champion a match with Kilbane on June 30 and Abe is expected to accept. The promoter has already received Kilbane's consent to the match.

* * *

Danny Morgan is just $350 short to-day. The talkative manager wagered that amount on Young Ahearn to stop Mike Gibbons and his protege took a bad lacing from the St. Paul sensation. He was stopped in the fourth round.

* * *

Chicago fans are betting on Jack White to defeat Johnny Dundee when the two clash in a 20-round scrap on Tuesday night. The Windy City fans think Jack is too tough for the Eastern featherweight.

* * *

Charlie White is tackling about the toughest boy in the lightweight division on July 4 when he hooks up with Jack Britton at New Orleans. Willie Ritchie, Joe Rivers and Bud Anderson have all dodged bouts with Britton. The latter is also credited with a clean-cut victory over Leach Cross.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

CINCINNATI, June 16.—The Athletics look like the class of the American League now, and indications are the race on that circuit will be over by August. No club in the league, with the possible exception of Cleveland, seems to be able to stop Mack's team or even interrupt it. The supposed weakness in the pitching box has not developed yet, nor does it threaten to. Clever "Connie" is working his twirling talent with the foresight of a genius.

There is a psychological angle to the Athletics' great showing this year which should interest the fan to whom the spectacular appeals. Throughout both big leagues, but particularly in the American, a mania for sign stealing has developed, and the Athletics are the past masters in this art, according to the members of the other clubs in their circuit.

Personally, I believe the Athletics get credit for lots more stuff than they get away with. But they developed a new system of getting signs this spring which has baffled most of the clubs so far.

As soon as the batters begin being tipped to the catcher's signals, the opposing club generally catches on. Their sureness of hitting is an indication. Such a discovery starts a search of the source of the information. Many backstops, when working against the Athletics this year, have attempted to be so careful to conceal their signs from the men on the coaching lines that they crowd their knees right up almost tight together in the front when in the stooping position before the pitch, so only the twirlers can see their fingers. The result is that the sign shows out behind. The Athletics have been walking a little bit out of the line of march from the bench to the home plate when waiting to go to the bat and watching the catcher from the back. As soon as the man "on deck" awaiting his turn to hit sees a sign for a curve ball, he says:

"Take one, old boy!"

This may not mean "take one" at all, but it does inform the batter in the code that the pitcher is going to deliver a curve ball. If it is to be a fast one he says:

"Walk into one!"

* * *

A CERTAIN official in the American League was telling me a story the other day about a shrewd catcher who became aware that the Athletics were stealing his signals, but was worried because he could not locate the source. The official, himself, had discovered the means by which they were being tipped off, but it was none of his affairs to interfere, unless the other club complained about the waiting batters walking out of the line to the plate.

"They've got a fellow outside the park in that apartment house flashing my signs by pulling a curtain up and down," complained the catcher to the umpire.

Whenever a catcher cannot discover a source, he always looks for the tipping bureau outside the park, but that style of wigwagging is very much out of date now and strictly against the rules.

"Eddie" Collins was on first base when the catcher began to "beef" to the umpire.

"Now I'm going to ask for a pitchout, and you watch Collins," said the catcher. "He won't move off first base."

Sure enough. The twirler delivered a pitchout, and Collins stuck to the bag like a countryman in a big city to his bank roll.

"Watch that curtain out there now," continued the catcher. "I am going to order another pitchout."

Collins again stuck to the bag, and the curtain, by a strange coincidence, moved or appeared to move.

"What did I tell you?" exclaimed the catcher.

"They ain't getting them there," answered the umpire.

This discovering of the signs has helped the Athletics immensely, because they wait until they have the pitcher in a hole and he has to lay the ball over. Then comes the hit-and-run play, and away they go. Do not think for a minute that I am criticising the method. It shows that they are a lot of smart ball players, and it is regarded as being perfectly fair to take signs through quickness of eye.

Only artificial aids to detection are against the rules. And the fact that the opposing clubs always think the Athletics are getting the signs gives Mack's team an edge, whether it is true or not.

* * *

THERE is only one pitcher in the American League against whom the Athletics have no desire to be tipped off beforehand as to the probable pitch. He is Walter Johnson, of Washington. He has too much speed, and the most finished methods of sign stealing are not infallible. It ceases to come under the head of pleasure against him.

"I don't want anybody telling me what to expect when that bird is working," said "Stuffy" McInnis recently, referring to Johnson. "His fast one moves too quick to get out of the way if you are up there set for a curve ball. If it once hits you, it is generally too late for an ambulance. It is time to order a hearse."

* * *

WHILE we are on the subject of sign stealing, they tell a good story about the acumen of the Cubans when the Athletics went to Havana to play in 1910. The Cuban club had heard all the talk of the Philadelphia team stealing signs, so they decided to fool them by giving the signals in Spanish. "Connie" Mack immediately signed an interpreter to sit on the bench, but he was discovered after a few innings and chased to cover, even though he did have on a Philadelphia uniform.

PHILLIES' PRESIDENT IS NEAR DEATH AT HIS HOME

PHILADELPHIA, June 16.—William H. Locke, president and part owner of the Phillies and pacemaker of the Lynch League, is dangerously ill at his home here, and his players fear he will not live to see them win a pennant. Locke, it is said, is suffering from cancer and neuritis.

Before taking the executive chair in Philadelphia Locke was secretary of the Pittsburg club. He is regarded as one of the best posted men in baseball, having been selected to handle the business end of three world's series.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

OLD-FASHIONED BLEACHERS.

How dear to my heart were the old-fashioned bleachers,
The place where I sat in the ages gone by,
Where I could distinguish a ball player's features
Without a big telescope glued to my eye.
The bleacherite now, with a strong pair of glasses,
May sometimes distinguish a ball player's face.
He wonders who hits and who whiffs and who passes,
And yearns for the bleachers that stood by third base.

The old-fashioned bleachers,
The dust-covered bleachers,
The sun-beaten bleachers
That stood by third base.

We sat in our seats with the sun streaming o'er us,
And we knew every athlete who played in the game.
We cheered them or jeered them in deafening chorus,
And knew every man by his intimate name.
To-day we are scorned by the magnate's assistants,
Who order us hence with a frown on their face.
We sit in the bleachers a mile in the distance,
And yearn for the bleachers that stood by third base.

The old-fashioned bleachers,
The dust-covered bleachers,
The sun-beaten bleachers,
That stood by third base.

Christy Mathewson finally has awakened to the fact that the Phillies have a chance to win. This leads one to suspect that Chris has been reading the newspapers.

When Joe Dunn can negotiate a two-bagger without knocking the ball out of the park, it is a sign that he is developing speed.

Speaking of fables, there is the story of the ball player who kicks because he is not worked hard enough.

The press agent arises to remark that Jack Dillon is in the same class as Stanley Ketchel. Being as Stanley is dead, we believe said press agent.

A motorcycle race these days generally results in a broken record or a broken motorcycle.

Mr. Ritchie is willing to weigh a ton for Mr. Rivers, but when it comes to Mr. McFarland—that's something else again.

RUCKER MAY BE TRADED TO CUBS FOR BRESNAHAN

By Davenport.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 16.—There is a chance that Nap Rucker will be wearing a Cub uniform within the next few days, and your old friend, Rajah Bresnahan, may be seen cavorting about as a Dodger.

Can't tell, for stranger things than that have happened and there are persistent rumors afloat that a deal is on between President Murphy and Charles Ebbetts whereby Murphy's ten-thousand-dollar beauty will go to Brooklyn in exchange for the star twirler of the Brooklyn Club.

Putting Mr. Murphy right, right off the reel, he makes a vigorous denial that any such trade is even contemplated, but the tip came from Brooklyn Saturday to the effect there was strong talk of a trade.

Incidentally, Charles Ebbets is the man who is backing fire. Charles can't see Bresnahan for Rucker and would give instead Ragan, but Murphy is holding out for the big southpaw.

Murphy After Pitchers.

However, there are many reasons for such a trade. Mr. Murphy has said right along that he was in search of a star twirler. "Not a youngster," said Mr. Murphy several weeks ago, "but a veteran who has been tried and found not wanting."

There can be no denying Nap Rucker answers the call. He has been tried several times and found "not guilty" every time. He is a veteran, knows every batter in the National League and has the enviable reputation of being one of the coolest, brainiest pitchers on the National League list.

Bresnahan has been decorating the Chicago bench ever since the season opened. He has caught very few full games, but Mr. Murphy says he values him because something might happen to Jimmy Archer and Rajah would be a valuable man under such contingencies.

Archer Best in National.

Archer has been working faithfully all through the season thus far. It is admitted all around the circuit that Jimmy is the star backstop of President Lynch's organization.

The Dodgers, who were camping on the heels of the league-leading Phillies just a few weeks ago, are now in fourth place, and the loss of a few more games may send them into sixth place, as the Pirates and Braves, who have been traveling at a good clip, are not so very far in the rear.

The Cardinals tied the score in the seventh inning and won out in the ninth yesterday in the game against the Phillies.

* * *

Some of the big league scouts are making overtures to Harry Imlay, of the University of Pennsylvania team, who has pitched some wonderful games this season, but Imlay has declared that he will not enter the professional baseball ranks.

* * *

Martin Walsh, brother of "Big Ed," the White Sox twirling star, pitched a no-hit no-run game for the Tarrytown, N. Y., team, against the Stamford, Conn., team yesterday.

* * *

Hal Chase, since joining the White Sox, has been hitting at a .345 clip and fielding in faultless fashion.

The Naps played amateurish ball yesterday in their own ballwick, and as a result the Senators romped home a 10 to 5 winner.

NEW ZEALANDER WINS FRENCH TENNIS MEET

PARIS, June 16.—The finals in the lawn tennis championship were played Sunday at Saint Cloud. In the men's singles, A. F. Wilding, of New Zealand, beat the French representative, Andre H. Cobert.

In the women's single, Fraulein Reike, Germany, beat Mlle. Broquedis, France.

The Germans, VonBissing and Kleinschroth, won the men's doubles from Froitzheim, Germany, and Wilding, New Zealand.

Miss Ryan, of California, and Max DeCugis, France, had a walk-over in the mixed doubles against Mme. Golding, France, and Wilding, the latter being too tired to play again.

CANCER ENDING LIFE OF FAMOUS QUARTERBACK

ROCKFORD, ILL., June 16.—Joe Hunter, famous quarterback for Northwestern University some years ago, who for three seasons was picked for the all-Western eleven, is dying at Los Angeles following an operation for cancer of the stomach. Recently he has been practicing law at Tucson, Ariz.

NIGHT RACING AT 'DROME TO START TUESDAY

THE question whether Jock McNeil, the Scotch rider, or Wilmer Richards, the Texan, has the fatest motorcycle in Dixie will be settled Tuesday night on the shelving sides of the new Prince Motordrome, which will be thrown open for night racing at that time.

McNeil rides a J. A. P. motor. The engine was made in England and imported by the little Scotchman. He built up the rest of the motorcycle himself from parts picked up in this country. Richards has the famous "23" Indian, a racing machine of known speed, long record and bloody career, a machine that has been killing its man and breaking its record for several years past.

In Saturday's sport at the Motordrome McNeil and Richards met but once. That was in a five-mile final of the Speedway Sweepstakes. And McNeil won. But it was not conclusive. Richards, one of the wisest riders on the globe, was laying right behind the pack up to the finish. When he let out, he was showing more speed than any of them. But he did not let out in time. McNeil did a little letting out himself and held his advantage across the tape.

They should have fought it out in the Motordrome Purse, but the gasoline tank on the Scot's machine sprang a seam and could not be repaired in time for any further racing. Richards won the next race handily.

Oh, You Race Question!

Both men will meet in every regular event Tuesday night, and the question of supremacy of Texan or Scot, of Jap or Indian (and that's some race question for you!), will be settled.

It might happen, of course, that neither man would win a race, even if they settled their argument. There are several riders yet to be heard from.

For instance, Harry Swartz is due to show something Tuesday night. Swartz was handicapped Saturday by the fact that he had to fit new wheels on his machine at the last minute. His Excelsior has been used for road racing and was fitted with road rims and road tires. These were changed at the last minute, but Swartz had no chance to get his machine right. He will have it tuned up right by Tuesday night and as his machine is fast and as there is no better rider in America than Harry, he is likely to be heard from, LOUD.

Glenn and Renel to Meet.

One of the feature events Tuesday will be a match race between Harry Glenn, of Atlanta, and Georges Renel, of Paris. On Saturday, in the match race, they finished so close together that the judges declared it a dead heat, though, of course, each man claimed that he won. Considerable feeling was stirred up over the thing and they will ride it over for a purse on Tuesday.

The meet Tuesday night will start at 8:30. Tickets are already on sale at Tumlin's and Shepherd's stands.

M'FARLAND PLANS TRIP TO EUROPE FOR FOLKS

CHICAGO, ILL., June 16.—Another big treat is in store for Packey McFarland's folks, and all at the fighter's expense. On Wednesday they sail from New York on the steamer Carpathia for Ireland, their native land, to be gone three months. All of this time, however, will not be spent in Ireland. London, Paris and Scotland will be some of the stops before they return to this country.

This is not the only treat Packey has given his folks. He purchased a home for them on Garfield Boulevard not so long ago and is allowing them the rent from one of his six-flat buildings. Packey plans to return to the ring shortly and has instructed his manager to get in touch with the various clubs.

HOFMAN AND FERRY DRAW RELEASE FROM PIRATES

PITTSBURG, June 16.—Artie Hofman, outfielder of the Pirates and former star of the Chicago Cubs, and Pitcher Jack Ferry have been released by Maanger Fred Clarke. Hofman is slated to go to Kansas City, but refuses, and asks to be sent to the Pacific Coast League. Ferry is to go to the Columbus team, of the American Association.

DREYFUSS AFTER SHORTSTOP.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16.—Barney Dreyfuss and Duke Farrell were in the stands here Saturday watching the work of St. Paul's shortstop, Scott.

Vols Are Here For Three Games
Schwartzies Always Worry Locals

By Percy H. Whiting.

BILL SCHWARTZ, the well-known boy manager, and the Volunteer ball club of Nashville (Tenn., not Ga.) have arrived safely in Atlanta, and this afternoon will tangle with the Crackers in the first game of a three-game spasm.

Gilbert Price will probably get the assignment to hurl for the Crackers. Joseph Dunn will catch, as usual.

* * *

CURIOSITY as to the work of the pitchers of late prompts a comparison of the batting averages that Southern League teams have piled up in the last six series, with the batting averages of the same teams for the whole season. This is calculated to show whether the teams the Crackers have faced recently are hitting harder or lighter against other teams than they are against the Crackers. Here is the answer:

In the last series against the Lookouts Elberfeld's men batted .292 against Cracker pitchers. Their average for the season is .251. Score one against Cracker hurlers.

In the series before that, against Birmingham, the Barons could bat but .194 against Cracker pitchers. For the season the Barons are batting .209. Score one for the local hurlers.

Against Chattanooga in the last series here the Lookouts were held to an average of .219. This was another verdict for the pitchers.

In the one-game series with Montgomery the Billiken batters were held down to a mark of .217, which was still another victory for the hurlers.

In the series before the pitchers held the Vols to a batting average of .200, compared with .232 for the entire season.

Of course such comparisons are not conclusive. A pitcher may allow only one hit in a game but may walk so many that he loses. Three bases on balls followed by a home run will lose a lot of ball games for a pitcher, even if the rest of his string is shut-out stuff.

* * *

THE batting figures show the Crackers a great scoring machine. They have a higher batting average and have not only made more hits in each game but also an average of more runs to the game than any other club in the league. The Crackers have averaged 4 1357-1596 runs to a game, the Gulls have averaged 4 1215-1594, giving them the worst of it by a trifling matter of 142-1596ths of a run.

One thing that is enabling the Gulls to run away with the league is their advantage in base stealing. They have 127 stolen bases thus far, to the Crackers' 58. Five Southern League clubs lead the Crackers in base stealing, despite the fact that no team in the league puts so many men on first.

Here are the batting figures for the league:

Frank Fails to Get Two Billiken Players

MEMPHIS, TENN., June 16.—Manager Frank, of New Orleans, will not get players Bagby and Kutina, now the property of the Montgomery club. The controversy between these two clubs came to an end yesterday, when President Kavanaugh of the league ruled that while President Jones, of Montgomery, was guilty of a moral obligation, the evidence at hand did not warrant awarding Frank the players.

Frank did not propose the deal, as was generally supposed. On the other hand, Jones took the initiative. Here are the telegrams on which the league's executive based his decision:

Jones wired Frank:

Will you give Snedecor and $750 for Bagby and Kutina?

Frank came back:

We accept your proposition.

To which Jones returned:

I made an inquiry, not a proposition.

CUTLER AND ROLLER AGREE TO MEET IN RETURN BOUT

DALLAS, TEXAS, June 16.—Dr. Roller, one of the cleverest heavyweight wrestlers in the business, has won a return match with Charlie Cutler, this time a $200 side bet going with the victory. Roller was thrown by Charlie Cutler here Thursday night after he had gained the first fall. He claims he was tricked into the last fall and protested so strongly that Cutler agreed to meet him again, provided a side bet accompanied the match. This Roller immediately consented to, and now the pair are looking for a club to stage the contest. The physician-wrestler believes he can down Charlie in two straight falls and wants another opportunity to demonstrate it.

Seven Batters Are Bunched in Race

The race for batting leadership in the Southern League this year is better than the Southland has known for years. Seven players are bunched, neck and neck, and they swap positions almost daily.

Including Sunday's games in the figuring Long still holds the lead, with D. Robertson a great second and Elberfeld third by an eyelash. In the second division Welchonce, Knisely, Sloan and Wally Smith are right in a heap.

Here are the averages to date:

Player—	A.B.	H.	Pct.
Long	223	80	.358
Robertson	205	72	.351
Elberfeld	195	68	.349
Welchonce	234	77	.329
Knisely	127	41	.323
Sloan	232	75	.323
W. Smith	209	66	.316

Stomach Catch is Latest Fad
Maranville Does Not Use Hands

By Charles Dryden.

CHICAGO, June 16.—Among the other special attractions now with the Braves may be mentioned Mr. Maranville, the liliputian shortstop who catches pop flies in the pit of his stomach with little or no assistance from his hands. Mr. Maranville wears no cuffs or false mustache with which to deceive the eyeball, and he makes these catches while facing the spectators. Should he attempt to make a similar catch while running with the ball it might lead to a crack on the coco unless Mr. M. arrived in time to get the range or angle of the descending pill and back up a step or two. For many years athletes have employed the stomach while traveling from bag to bag, but until the advent of Mr. Maranville we do not remember one who used his bread basket in the manner described.

* * *

JIM LAVENDER is able to explain, out of one side of his mouth, how he happened to stop a line drive with his chin in the battle against the Muscatangs. It was a new pill, white and clean, and the smash traveled in line with a large lady sitting in the grandstand and wearing a white shirtwaist. Lavender did not see the ball until it cracked him on the point of the jaw and dropped at his feet. After throwing the batter out Jim clawed around in the grass and picked up a small white object which he carried to the bench under the impression that it was a tooth. The object was Mr. Lavender's wad of chewing gum, which was jarred from his gills by the impact of the blow on the chin. Sooner or later the world's greatest spitballers meet with disaster. Either they lose their arms, their stuff or their chewing wax. Life is one dodgasted thing after another.

* * *

THROUGH the kindness of Charles Cooper Fraser, formerly of this city, and the courtesy of C. Williams, who carried the clipping from Muscatine, we are able to present in this issue a few epigrams from the Cedar Rapids, Iowa, score card:

UMPIRE SWATS MERKLE OVER BEAN WITH MASK

ZANESVILLE, OHIO, June 16.—In an exciting exhibition game here Sunday afternoon between the New York Nationals and the local Interstate League team, the Giants won by the score of 5 to 4, although Umpire Frank Newhouse, of the International League, declared the game forfeited to Zanesville 9 to 0, following his fight with Merkle, of the Giants.

Merkle in the eighth objected to Newhouse's decision on a close play at first and finally made a pass at the umpire. Newhouse hit the New York first baseman over the head with his mask and brought blood from the gash, then ordered him from the game. Merkle refused to go and the umpire then forfeited the game to Zanesville, 9 to 0. Manager Marty Hogan, of the locals, however, ordered the game continued and he himself acted as umpire.

TENNIS TOURNEY DRAWS EXPERTS TO CLUB COURTS

GEORGIA tennis cracks gathered at the Piedmont Driving Club Monday for the first rounds of the ninth annual State tournament, which will continue all the week.

Drawings for the matches were made early in the day and the players settled down to work. Perhaps the best tennis seen in years is expected on the club courts in this tournament.

A three-year trophy is offered for the winner in men's singles. Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, has won it twice and now defends it. A third victory will give him permanent possession. Dr. Karl F. Little also has won it twice, while those who have once held it include G. V. Angier, Jr., Frank T. Payne, Eden T. Taylor and E. V. Carter, Jr.

E. V. Carter, Jr., and E. S. Mansfield, champions in doubles last year, will defend their championship this season.

Frank Reynolds is refereeing the play.

DANGER SEEN IN $500,000,000 NOTE ISSUE

Forbes Says McAdoo's Readiness to Give Out Paper Is Invitation to Credit Jamboree

By B. C. FORBES.

To flood the country with half a billion emergency bank notes at this time would drive gold to Europe, would gravely aggravate credit inflation here and render our last state worse than our first. We have already in circulation the largest volume of bank notes ever put out.

* * *

We don't need more, but less credit, less borrowing.

* * *

Secretary McAdoo's unexpected announcement that he stands ready to issue $500,000,000 Aldrich notes is a direct invitation to go on a jamboree. New York bankers—who, after all, do know something about banking—have been striving with might and main for months to curtail the credit expansion that has gone to perilous lengths throughout the country. They have, moreover, practiced what they have been preaching: loans here have been rigidly discouraged, speculators have been obliged to stop their antics and liquid resources have been zealously accumulated in preparation for autumnal needs.

* * *

But country banks have gone on their way merrily, lending to all and sundry. The expansion in national bank loans alone has been at the rate of $1,000,000 every business day for the last twelve months—without one cent addition to cash on hand to justify this inflation.

* * *

Bank notes are not capital.

* * *

The scarcity is a scarcity of capital, not currency. Newly blossomed "experts" on national finance would do well to insert that fact into their noodles and keep it there in a prominent place. More nonsense is being written and spoken about financial subjects by men in prominent positions than at any time since William Jennings Bryan championed his famous "sixteen-to-one."

* * *

Washington can not create capital by opening currency flood-gates. Capital can come into being only through the people spending less than they earn—that is, by saving. The urgent need to-day is for less borrowing, not for more borrowing, a la Secretary McAdoo's latest proposal.

* * *

Let the Wilson administration be assured that the more bank notes they pump into circulation at this time, the easier will it be for Europe to take gold from us. We have exported $60,000,000 gold within the last five months and the chances are that more will go within the next fortnight. Europe is hungry for gold, the medium that speaks all languages and can do duty in any land. She will leave us our emergency currency and take our yellow metal.

* * *

To the novitiate the prospect of releasing $500,000,000 additional currency is most inspiring. It intoxicates. But those who can see below the surface, those who can diagnose the difference between bank notes and actual wealth, shrink from contemplating the outcome of any wholesale issuance of emergency notes at this juncture. Borrowers should pull in sail between now and the crop-moving season. They should not rush deeper into debt.

* * *

The Treasury Department should not dissipate resources at this time. It should fortify itself against the abnormal demands that the marketing of bumper crops can not fail to entail. In non-panic, but ominous times, all banking institutions should curtail credits. It is only when a crisis is imminent that a policy of granting generous and prompt assistance should be adopted and courageously followed.

* * *

It is a pity that the Treasury Department has elected to hold itself aloof from the best banking minds in the country and go blindly ahead.

Shuptine Leads for Seat From Chatham

SAVANNAH, June 16.—Early indications are that Herman C. Shuptine will go to the Legislature as the Representative from Chatham County to succeed Pleasant A. Stovall, resigned. The morning vote was fairly heavy. J. J. Bauhan, the other candidate, is running a close second.

Shuptine is the administration candidate.

Count Goes to Work In New York Bank

NEW YORK, June 16.—Count Adolf VonBernstorff, son of the German Ambassador in Washington, is working in the banking firm of Speyer & Co. in Pine Street. He is studying finance in preparation for a diplomatic career.

FOUR DYING IN MINE BLAST.

ALLIANCE, OHIO, June 16.—Ten men were injured, four fatally, in a mine blast explosion near Piney Fork this morning, caused by the short circuiting of an electric wire which ignited a keg of powder.

GENERAL BUYING BOOSTS COTTON

Old and New Crops Purchased Heavily on Bullish Report of Times-Democrat.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Firm cables and a good demand from spot people caused the cotton market to open steady to-day, first prices being 1 to 8 points higher than Saturday's final. After the call the list continued steady. The ring crowd, however, inclined to sell on favorable weather developments over Sunday, and Washington promises fair and warm weather during the coming week. Beneficial rains fell in South Texas Sunday, resulting in most active positions, except August, dropping 1 to 5 points from the initial levels.

During the forenoon a wave of heavy short covering dominated the market, which encouraged a good speculative demand. This class of buying was based on The New Orleans Times-Democrat report on the condition of the crop, the report being construed as bullish, which had a stimulating effect on the market. Offerings were eliminated considerably and prices made a rapid advance of 11 to 16 points over the previous close. July and August were in active demand, but the new crop positions were in the best demand and showed the greatest gain.

Memphis and some Wall Street houses were reported good buyers of the new crops. Spot people were noticeable buyers of the old crop. New Orleans was a good buyer, based on The Times-Democrat report.

Weather and crop advices were most favorable. The Memphis Commercial summary of the crop was bearish, but offering continued light and scattered.

Interests now seems to be centered on the consumption rather than crop news.

During the afternoon session the market was somewhat easy, prices recorded further gains, being 10 to 13 points over the opening quotations.

At the close the market was steady, with prices showing a net gain of 14 to 24 points from the final quotations of Saturday.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New Orleans: July 12.10, August 12.01, October 11.47, January 11.41.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, June 16.—Weather conditions and changes over Sunday were distinctly favorable. Dry weather prevailed over most of the belt. The only precipitation of consequence occurred in South Texas, where it was needed. Minimum temperatures are 10 to 20 degrees higher than on Friday and are now entirely normal. Indications are for continuation of generally fair and warm weather, except in the coast districts of Louisiana and Texas, where it will be cloudy and possibly showery.

The Memphis Commercial-Appeal summary for the week is very favorable. Other crop reports are mostly favorable.

The Liverpool market was about as due on the opening; spot sales continue large, 10,000 bales to-day, at 2 points higher. Our market showed strength this morning and advanced to 12.06 for August and 11.58 for October, principally owing to the renewed strength and activity of July in New York. The weekly weather report to-morrow is expected to be bullish, as it covers the spell of last week. New York says that the strained conditions in July dominate the market and a decline in new crops does not seem probable until the summer positions are liquidated.

New York continued strong on bullish reports on both crops. Our market likewise held the advance well on small buying as selling is intimidated.

MILLER-COTTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, June 16.—New York seems inclined to work more to the bull side to-day, and, selling being scarce, no great volume of demand has been necessary to bring an advance. Weather over Sunday was ideal and crop accounts are good, but strength in summer months and fair demand in spot markets influences sentiment strongly. It is impossible to tell how far this swing will go, but short interest has been greatly reduced.

RENEWED SELLING PUTS STOCKS OFF

Transactions Attributed Mainly to Professionals — Reactionary Tendency Expected.

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Instead of following the lead of Americans in London, the stock market turned weak at the opening here to-day and declines were general throughout the list. Some stocks which started with advances were caught in the movement and lost part or all of their gain.

Canadian Pacific dropped 1⅝. United States Steel common began at 54¼ for a gain of ¼, but soon lost its advance and sustained a net decline of ⅝. Pressure was directed against Union Pacific, this issue losing a full point. New York, New Haven and Hartford again broke to par, selling at 100 for the loss of 1 point. Amalgamated Copper lost its fractional advance and shaded.

American Smelting was up ⅜ at the outset, but within half an hour was selling ¼ under Saturday's final.

Among the other losses were Reading ⅜, Pennsylvania ¼, Northern Pacific ½, Missouri Pacific ⅜, Lehigh Valley ⅝, Great Northern preferred ½ and Atchison ⅛.

Gains were made by Utah Copper, New York Central, American Car and Foundry and American Can.

Goldfield Consolidated, which closed Saturday at 1⅞, was stricken from the list of stock exchange securities to-day.

The curb was steady.

Americans in London were strong. Canadian Pacific in London was irregular.

After a few minutes of active trading the market began to waver and fractional losses were recovered in several of the leading issues. Union Pacific suffered the most, falling 1¼ to 145¼. Steel was off ⅜ from the opening. Copper and Pennsylvania were off ¼. Canadian Pacific continued its downward movement, reaching 219, a fall of 1¾.

Southern Pacific was off 1¼. Other issues suffered slight losses.

Call money loaned at 1⅜.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 16.—J. M. Anderson: "Some of the ring crowd were aggressive sellers on and after the opening and their sales found ready purchasers. It was evident that a lot of cotton was wanted. Memphis reported a good buyer of new crop; also some of the Wall Street houses. This started a wave of short covering and a rapid advance followed. After the first hour there seemed to be very little cotton for sale. The new crop option was much stronger than the old in the beginning, but spot people were noticeable buyers of old crops. Selling was scattered. The Times-Democrat was out with a bullish report, which brought some buying from New Orleans. However, Turner's report was bearish. Weather was favorable and private wires reported good conditions in some sections. The bears are very limited. Interests now seem to be entered on consumption, which, of course, must be recognized a rise or fall, until there are further developments."

* * *

NEW YORK, June 16.—The market opened steady. The ring crowd was inclined to sell. The market, however, held steady after a sharp decline from the opening. The Times-Democrat crop report was construed as bullish, causing heavy buying.

* * *

Heavy short covering dominated the market after the call; also speculative buying. Spot people purchased July, causing the advance.

* * *

Memphis wires under date of June 14: "Reports received at the Cotton Exchange to-day say farmers in and around Klimichael, Miss., are plowing up acres of cotton because the boll weevil has appeared in swarms."

* * *

Liverpool cables: "American middling fair, 7.53d; good middling, 6.99d; middling, 6.75d; low middling, 6.59d; good ordinary, 6.23d; ordinary, 5.89d."

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas and Oklahoma, generally clear and warmer."

* * *

So far as weather news is concerned, there is very little incentive to support the new crops.

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, June 16.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map is very good; shows fair and warm over the entire belt, except partly cloudy in southwestern quarter; no rain except few sprinkles in Central Texas and some good rains in South Texas where needed; night temperatures 10 to 20 degrees warmer than Friday and some entirely normal.

Washington forecast for week: "Warm and generally fair weather greater part of coming week in Southern States, although local thundershowers probable along immediate Gulf and South Atlantic coast."

The map continues to indicate generally fair and warm weather, except possibly few showers in South Texas.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat herewith presents its correspondents' first report on the cotton crop of 1913. The consensus of opinion points to the fololwing results:

1. The increase of acreage is slight—probably about 3 per cent at the most.

2. The general condition is fairly favorable, but many sections complain of poor stands, caused by unseasonably low temperatures.

3. Labor is said to be scarce in some districts in consequence of migration to towns and public works.

4. Taking the belt as a whole, the crop is an exceedingly spotted one, and the weather of the next month will be extremely important.

5. There is a good deal of talk of boll weevil, but it is too soon to form an idea of the probable damage.

Wheat—No. 2 red	.97 @98
Corn—No. 2	62½
Oats—No. 2	41½@42

CHICAGO, June 16.—Wheat closed strong around the best prices reached and at advances of 1¼@1½. The bull fever seemed to be more in evidence to-day than was the case during several of the strong sessions of last week. While there were rains in the spring wheat country, they were reported as inadequate, and where additional moisture is wanted and the weather was cloudy, it was reported late that it was clearing up. This was the case, especially at Grand Forks, N. D. Export clearances were 774,000 bushels and for the month of May were 11,151,000 bushels compared with 4,385,000 for a like period last year.

Corn closed with gains of 1½@1⅝ and oats were up 2⅛@2⅜.

Provisions were higher all around.

DRY GOODS REVIEW.

Marshall Field & Company, in their weekly review of the dry goods trade, say:

"Total sales in dry goods show a gain for the first two weeks in June in comparison with those of the corresponding period of a year ago. This is true both of our wholesale and retail. Current business through the mails and from the man on the road has kept up remarkably well following the preinventory sale and in view of the low temperature during the early part of the week. Collections continue better than normal.

"Orders manifest much interest in lines that are being shown for fall delivery, especially silks and women's ready-to-wear garments.

"Our representatives traveling through the Southeastern States report very favorable crop prospects and good business is coming from that section.

"Much enthusiasm is apparent among merchants of the Pacific Coast and Rocky Mountain States in consequence of good immediate retail business and the excellent outlook for abundant crops."

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 16.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co.:

Wheat—Since Saturday weather has been fairly good in many portions of North Dakota and it is raining at several points in that State this morning. Look for a nervous market and the fact that some precipitation has occurred in the spring wheat country is apt to give us a little more easier tendency.

Corn—Bullish sentiment is rampant, chiefly on dry conditions, but we doubt very much if any severe damage to growing crop has taken place up to the present time owing to lack of moisture.

Oats—The lack of rain, in our opinion, has a much more important bearing on the condition of this crop than on corn, especially as temperatures are so high. Reports continue to show lack of color and short growth

Good Progress Made By the Cotton Crop

MEMPHIS, June 16.—Reports from the Cotton Exchange to-day shows the cotton crop throughout the South to be generally good. Recent heavy rains have produced new strength in the plant, and the fields are clean of weeds. Labor is plentiful, and, as the planters are forced to meet fewer claims than usual, they will make more money than they have in many years.

The acreage in corn throughout Tennessee, Mississippi and Arkansas has greatly increased, and while more cotton is planted, the report says farmers have utilized thousands of acres of waste lands.

CREMATORY PUT UP TO COUNCIL BY MAYOR

Neither Approves Nor Disapproves Resolution Calling for Option on Electric Feature.

In notifying Council of his approval of the June budget and the purchase of the $260,000 crematory, Mayor Woodward Monday "washed his hands" of that part of the old crematory contract providing a $100,000 electric power plant in connection with the incinerator.

The Mayor notified Council he would take no action whatever on the resolution of Alderman Nutting and Councilman Mason calling for an option from the Destructor Company on the electric feature. Because he took no action the resolution automatically goes into effect.

Mayor Woodward's special message reads:

"I return the accompanying three resolutions passed at your session of June 2, 1913, without my signature of approval or disapproval.

"The whole subject matter contained in all three of the resolutions can be carried out by the framing of a contract with the Destructor Company incorporating the different matters contained in the resolutions.

"By careful reading of the different resolutions it will be noted that your honorable body has repeatedly mentioned the contract entered into in 1912, which the Supreme Court of this State has decided illegal and void and ordered an injunction against the further carrying on of the Destructor plant under the provisions of that contract. Under that condition of things, I feel that I am enjoined against any measure that may be looking to the fulfillment of that contract. All of the provisions specified in the different resolutions can be placed in a new contract to be entered into by your general body.

"In returning these papers to the General Council in this manner, I hope that my position is fully understood. While I do not believe that the city has received full benefit from this transaction, yet I do not feel disposed to interfere further if the new contract is so constructed as to give the city the benefit of all of the concessions enumerated."

Rites To Be Simple at Mrs. Bryan's Burial

Simplicity will mark the funeral of Mrs. Mary E. Bryan, one of the South's leading women writers who died Sunday night at her home in Clarkston, Ga. Many prominent persons, however, will be present to pay their last respects to the pioneer authoress.

Mrs. Bryan's prolific pen has touched the hearts of Southern people for the past half century. Besides contributing to many magazines, she also published 47 books.

Financially her work met with great success. Shortly before her death, Mrs. Bryan's held the position of editor of The Fireside Companion, in which position she is said to have received a salary of $25,000 a year, probably one of the highest ever paid to a woman in the United States.

Mrs. Bryan first gained recognition in the literary world when her work appeared in Scott's Magazine, which was published shortly after the Civil War. Later she went with The Sunny South for which periodicals she wrote for twelve years. When this magazine was taken over by Uncle Remus' Magazine, Mrs. Bryan became editor of a department in the latter. It was during her connection with the Uncle Remus periodical that Mrs. Bryan's most appealing work was accomplished.

Through her magazine articles and poetry she won the hearts of the legions of her readers. Rapidly she arose to national prominence. Her novels and books of the Southland have found themselves into the libraries of every city of the world.

Mrs. Bryan is survived by her three children, Mrs. Pearl Byrd, of Clarkston; Mrs. C. A. Wilson, of St. Louis and Fred Bryan, of Clarkston.

OBITUARY.

J. J. Kaesser, 46 years old, died at his home, 32 West Peachtree Place, at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. He was a lieutenant of Fire Company No. 3, and had been a member of the department 16 years. Surviving him are Mrs. Kaesser and a son, W. G. Kaesser. Funeral at 3:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at Barclay & Brandon's funeral chapel, corner of Ivy and Baker Streets.

Mrs. S. T. Watkins, aged forty-four, died at a private sanitarium Sunday night. She was the wife of S. T. Watkins, of 24 Norcross Street, a Southern Railway engineer. Besides her husband, Mrs. Watkins is survived by four sons, K. E., E. O., H. H. and S. T. Watkins, Jr., and one daughter, Mrs. W. E. Wadden, of Selma, Ala. The body was removed to the chapel of Barclay & Brandon and prepared for shipment to Keysville, Va., for funeral and interment.

The funeral of Lieutenant J. J. Kaesser, who died at a private sanitarium Sunday afternoon, will be held from the chapel of Barclay & Brandon Tuesday afternoon. Lieutenant Kaesser was one of the best-liked men in the Fire Department, and had been with the department for over 18 years. He was promoted to the lieutenancy of Engine House No. 3 some time ago. He is survived by his wife and one son, W. G. Kaesser.

Robert Hobbs, 57 years old, died at his residence in Adamsville at 8 o'clock Sunday morning. He is survived by a wife and four children. The funeral will be from the chapel of Harry G. Poole's funeral home at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon, and the interment at the family burying ground at Adamsville.

Mrs. S. T. Watkins, 44 years old, of 34 Norcross Street, died at a private sanitarium at 9:30 o'clock Sunday night. The body was taken to-day to Keysville, Va. Mrs. Watkins is survived by her husband, Sam T. Watkins; four sons, Kirby J., Elmer O., Sam T., Jr., and Howard H. Watkins, and one daughter, Mrs. W. E. Madden, of Selma, Ala.

M. D. Campbell, sixty-four years old, died at the residence, 9 Jennings Street, at 3 o'clock Sunday morning. He is survived by two sons, T. M. and J. F. Campbell, and four daughters, Mrs. H. K. Gordon, Mrs. G. H. Perry, Mrs. John Dixon and Miss Jessie Campbell. Funeral from the chapel of P. J. Bloomfield at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon. Interment at Greenwood.

Mrs. Sarah A. Martin, 44 years old, died at her home in Buckhead at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon. She is survived by her husband, H. T. Martin. Funeral at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon from Barclay & Brandon's undertaking parlors. Interment at Atlanta Heights.

John H. Carr, the 8-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Carr, of 315 West Third Street, died at the residence at 6 o'clock Sunday evening. Funeral services were held from the chapel of Harry G. Poole at 9:30 Monday morning. Interment at Sandy Springs.

Mrs. Annie McWilliams, 50 years old, died at the residence, 59 Robbins Street, at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Besides her husband, W. M. McWilliams, she is survived by two children, Mrs. Lela Sanders and W. O. McWilliams. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Suicide's Last Wish Is That Flowers Be Put Upon His Grave

"Take good care of the baby and put a few flowers on my grave."

M. Roy Fowler, 125 Hunnicutt Street, fell unconscious at his wife's feet Sunday afternoon with these words on his lips. Fowler had just swallowed a bottle of carbolic acid. He died a few minutes later in an ambulance going to Grady Hospital.

Fowler ran a butcher shop on East Hunter Street. Financial troubles, it is believed, caused him to end his life. He was an Odd Fellow and a Red Man and a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. He was 46 years old. Surviving are Mrs. Fowler and the baby, three brothers, J. L. Fowler, W. A. Fowler and T. A. Fowler, and two sisters, Miss Nan Fowler and Mrs. L. A. Hudson.

The body will be taken at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday morning to Indian Creek Cemetery for burial.

Steers Car Into Pole To Avert Collision

Paul H. Norcross, wife and child narrowly escaped serious injury Sunday afternoon, when, to avoid collision, Mr. Norcross was forced to swerve his automobile into a telephone pole at the corner of Highland and Ponce DeLeon Avenues. None of the party was injured. The car was badly damaged, and the pole was cut in half.

Mr. Norcross was driving down Ponce DeLeon Avenue early in the afternoon. At the junction of Highland Avenue he saw an automobile going in the same direction as a street car. The automobile was obscured until Mr. Norcross' machine was almost even with the trolley.

Cardinal Not Insane; Ill of Neurasthenia

ROME, June 16.—Cardinal Vives y Tuto, prefect of the congregation for religious affairs, who, according to certain reports, had become insane, is suffering only from neurasthenia, and by the advice of physicians has retired to a monastery at Frascati, near Rome.

Cardinal Vive y Tuto acquired a very prominent position at the Vatican after the election of Pope Pius X, and has even been considered as a probable candidate for the succession.

Angered Woman Sues Pastor for $25,000

PORTLAND, June 16.—Because she objected to being called "an obstreperous person, a mischief-maker and a nuisance," Mrs. A. E. Clark, wife of a prom nent attorney, filed a suit for $25,000 against Rev. A. A. Morrison, pastor of Trinity Episcopal Church of this city.

Her attorney says the trouble grew out of Mrs. Clark's insistence on having women members of the fashionable church on the governing board of that congregation.

Uncle Sam Conducts 'Movies' for Toilers

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Through the award of contracts for several thousand feet of motion picture films, it has just become known that the United States Government is engaged in the moving picture business on a big scale.

The enterprise is carried on by the reclamation service camps in the West to keep the workmen and their families, isolated from the world, contented and happy.

Militants Must Pay For Broken Windows

LONDON, June 16.—A judgment for $7,000 damages for window smashing was awarded to-day in the King's bench division against a number of leaders of militant suffragettes in favor of 93 westend merchants whose property suffered in suffrage raids.

Among the defendants in the case were Mr. and Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst and Mrs. Flora Drummond.

SOCIAL SURVEY WILL FOLLOW DIAGNOSIS

Russell Sage Workers Here Describe Preliminary Study of Conditions Found.

Shelby M. Harrison, director in the department of surveys and exhibits of the Russell Sage Foundation, in an interview with The Georgian Monday outlined the work he and his two associates are doing in Atlanta by invitation of a Chamber of Commerce committee.

"We are making a preliminarydiagnosis and pathfinder's survey," he said, "and in our report to the committee we will make certain specific recommendations which probably will lead to a social survey. We are not making the social survey now."

Mr. Harrison and his two associates, Franz Schneider, Jr., and Zenas L. Potter, are doctors of the body politic. They emphasize the fact they are not fault-finders. They go to a city, study sociological conditions from an entirely disinterested and unbiased angle and make a report. If the report makes the city or members of the city's sociological organizations see themselves as others see them, then they have accomplished their purpose. It is up to the city, then, to improve condtions and make the place a little better to live in.

"All Cities Have Problems."

"The last 25 years have brought many changes in social and personal relationships," Mr. Harrison said, outlining the basic principles behind the Sage foundation. "As cities grow, and factories come in, conditions change. The factories bring immigrants, and that brings new conditions. The entrance of women into industry and new methods of production all change conditions. I am just citing these as examples. Every advance and progress brings on changed conditions.

"Every change means a new problem. These problems are sociological. It is our business to diagnose these problems and make specific recommendations. In Atlanta we shall make detailed recommendations which may involve a social survey. The survey will point out the exact problems the city has to solve, and offer further suggestions and such help as may be desirable or desired. Then the credit for solving them will go to your local civic organizations, for it is they who must lead in the actual work."

For a week, now, Messrs. Harrison, Schneider and Potter have studied housing and living conditions in Atlanta; recreation, problems of education and of poverty, and the sanitary and penal systems. Mr. Harrison will go to New York to-morrow. Messrs. Schneider and Potter will continue the investigations through the week. They will leave the city with their data, and after a few weeks submit their findings, together with recommendations.

Will Suggest Improvement.

"Of course, I can't reveal the nature of this report in advance," Mr. Harrison said. "But I will say this much. We will be specific in recommending things to be taken in the survey. On a few subjects we will be able to outline suggestions for immediate improvement."

The spirit in which the Sage investigators enter upon their work was described by Mr. Harrison as follows: "Our attitude is thoroughly sympathetic with local agencies. We are not coming in Atlanta as iconoclasts trying to break down what you are doing. As distinterested parties, we naturally are capable of making detached observations. Then the social survey, as it always does, will bring together the instrumentalities for solving such problems as you may have. The social survey applies scientific methods to the solution of modern community problems.

"Such diagnoses as we are making and such social surveys as will probably follow in Atlanta are designed to stimulate a healthy public opinion. The object is to solve the city's social problems rather than to palliate them."

During the last year the Sage Foundation has received requests for diagnoses and surveys from 100 cities, most of them in the East and Middle West. Atlanta is the first Southern city to call for the preliminary pathfinder's survey.

"We felt the survey was a very progressive move on the part of your Chamber of Commerce," Mr. Harrison said. "Your Chamber of Commerce members are up on their toes, doing everything possible to make the city even more desirable to live in and a better commercial center. There are not a lot of chambers of commerce in the country, you know, that have seen it is a good thing to improve the place they live in, although this is the fundamental thing in making the city a good commercial center."

China Also Seeks Suffrage.

BUDAPEST, June 16.—Prediction was made to-day in the convention of the International Woman's Suffrage Congress that, in the 1916 election in the United States, every woman in the 48 States will have equal voting rights with men. China was enrolled in the congress to-day, bringing the representation up to five continents and 25 nations.

4 STATES WIN IN RATE FIGHTS; ONE LOSES

Supreme Court Decisions Against Railroads Over Whole West. Missouri Victory Partial.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Four States won victories and one lost to-day in railroad rate decisions rendered by the United States Supreme Court.

In the Missouri cases the State won a partial victory. Six of nine decisions were against the railroads.

There was no decision in the Nashville grain case.

The 2-cent passenger rate law of 1907 of the State of West Virginia was declared valid. The Chesapeake and Ohio sought an injunction on the same grounds as those relied on by railroads in other States that have unsuccessfully fought the law.

Oregon Rates Upheld.

The Oregon rate cases, brought by the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company, were decided in favor of the State.

The Arkansas State rate was declared constitutional.

The Kansas law fixing a minimum rate for the transportation of oil and fixing severe penalties for excess charges was held unconstitutional.

The six roads which will have to abide by maximum rates fixed by Missouri are the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy; the Sante Fe; Kansas City Southern; Missouri, Kansas and Texas; Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, including the St. Louis, Kansas City and Colorado and the St. Louis and San Francisco.

Three Cases Lost.

In three Missouri cases the rates were held to be confiscatory, the St. Louis and Hannibal, the Kansas City, Clinton and Springfield and the Chicago and Great Western.

The decision in the Missouri cases follows the principles laid down by the Minnesota cases. The right of the State to regulate intrastate commerce is upheld. The rates so fixed were held not to be confiscatory, except in the cases of the smaller roads.

U. S. Has No Special Jurisdiction on Sea.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The civil rights act of 1875, giving the United States jurisdiction in the District of Columbia, in Territories and over vessels on the sea, to-day was declared invalid by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Individual Can Prevent Pollution of Streams.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The rights of a private individual to bring suit to prevent the pollution of streams was upheld to-day by the Supreme Court in the caseo f the Arizona Copper Company against W. A. Gillespie.

New Trial Granted Man Sentenced to Life Imprisonment

A new trial was granted by the Supreme Court Monday morning to Warren Clements, given a life sentence for killing E. J. Griffin in Lowndes County. The Supreme Court held that the trial judge erred in making his charge.

Clements and several other men were on an automobile trip with Griffin when the killing took place. Clements fired a pistol and Griffin charged him with shooting at the automobile. This was denied and a quarrel resulted. Evidence in the case showed that the two men had stood at opposite ends of the automobile and shot at each other. Griffin received a wound from which he died later.

Wilson Girls to Keep House for President

WASHINGTON, June 16.—During the summer Miss Margaret Wilson, eldest daughter of the President, and her sisters will take turns in keeping house for their father, marooned at the White House by the tariff and currency bills.

Miss Margaret has left for a series of visits in the Middle West. She will be first the guest of Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, in Madison, Wis., and will spend several weeks with other friends before joining her mother at their summer home in Cornish, N. H., and sending the second sister to "take care of papa."

Robs Partner; Gives Up to Pay Penalty

RICHMOND, June 16.—Conscience-stricken because he had stolen $100 from Dan Bennett, his partner in the fruit business, at Waycross, Ga., A. L. Christian, aged 35, gave himself up to the police here. In police court to-day his case was continued until June 21, pending receipt of information from the Georgia authorities.

Christian says he wants to go back to Waycross and serve his time, so that he can continue to make that place his home. He left Waycross a month ago.

Twelfth of Family Gives Life to Lepers

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—Rev. Gottfried Hahn, recently ordained a minister of the German Evangelical Church, has departed for Purulia, India, where a colony of lepers is located.

Eleven others of his family, including his aged mother, ministered to the lepers of the same colony, serving many years in constant danger of contracting the disease.

Some Interesting Facts Concerning The Turkey Tribe

The Turkey the Only Fowl Extensively Bred in a Domestic State That Was Previously Wild.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

The turkey is the only fowl that is extensively bred in a domestic state that was previously wild. With this in view, it is really essential that we should know something of its habits while in the wild state. In the first place, it very naturally secured a great deal of exercise while doing its foraging for its daily rations. All this foraging served a twofold purpose; it not only gave them the much-needed food for maintenance, but the exercise they got made them very hardy and thrifty. It enabled them to make the flight that was absolutely necessary that they might keep out of the reach of the Indians' bow and arrow or the white man's gun. This great vigor has, to a great extent, been carried down through generations to the present time, but in a very much modified form. In fact, every turkey that is raised in close quarters and used as a breeder is helping just that much to sound the death roll of the turkey. It weakens its constitution, and this weakness is transmitted to the next generation. Many people who attempt to raise turkeys in that way are really ignorant of the real harm they are doing the race of turkeys by such a course. But, thank fortune, not very many ever reach maturity over this route. Then there are so many persons working with turkeys who do not recognize one of the turkey's natural food lines. They fail to remember, if they ever knew, that the turkey's food in its wild state consisted chiefly of insects, interspersed with wild seeds, beech nuts, berries, etc., but little or no corn. The average poultry keeper who has not really studied the conditions as he should, feeds too much corn and cornmeal. Corn fed exclusively, or nearly so, is too rich a food and tends to pack the crop and the result is liver trouble. You will notice one going a little slow with a sort of measured tread. This will be about the only symptom noticed, but is enough to lay out many a promising half-grown turkey. Wheat, where it can be had, is one of the safest foods one can use. Used in the whole grain and its various millings, such as good bran, middlings and low-grade flour.

Middlings moistened with skim milk makes an ideal feed for the morning and then the evening feed may be of cracked corn and wheat, about half and half. Into the mash should be cut onion tops of about one-third inch lengths and mixed through. This is relished and at the same time is a great health promoter. Where low-grade flour is to be procured and not the shorts or middlings, it should be mixed half and half with good bran by measure. This is to be used as the shorts with milk. Turkeys should be induced to stay on the range as much as possible. To encourage this, one can scatter a little cracked corn out from the buildings in a trail to the woods and fields for a few times. This will get them to hunting in good shape if they are not fully inclined otherwise. Do not feed at noon time before they get to be of some size. When they find that they must stay out on the range to secure their living they will be but little trouble. If they seem to get a good supply of food in the fields, being satisfied, it is a good practice to give them but a very small feed at night, simply to encourage them to come home to roost. After they have gone to roost it is a good plan to put out their morning feed so they can get it at daybreak and go.

As a general thing, everything and everybody eats too much, so if they are doing fairly well on the range, let them alone until you notice that they are really hungry when they come home. It will then be evidence that foodstuff is getting scarce out there and it must be forthcoming from another source.

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Concerns Formed For Development

Two Corporations With $350,000 Capital Seek Charters—Mrs. Akin and Others File Petitions.

Two large private companies have been formed for the development of local real estate. Mrs. John W. Akin, Winter Alfriend and V. A. Batchelor have petitioned the Superior Court for a charter to do business under the name of the Capital City Investments Company, and E. W. Alfriend, Mrs. Akin and Mr. Batchelor are seeking the name of the Georgia Investment Corporation. The former will start with $100,000 capital and carry the right to increase to $300,000, and the latter will be capitalized at $250,000, with the privilege of increasing to $500,000. Batchelor & Cheatham filed the petitions as atorneys. The Alfriends and Mrs. Akin are already in several big development enterprises.

Permit for $6,000 Home.

Building Inspector Ed R. Hays has issued a building permit to Mrs. W. B. Crouch to erect a $6,000 home at 479 St. Charles Avenue. This will be two stories and brick veneer.

Interest in Tax Question.

The proposal of Alderman John S. Candler that the tax assessments on Atlanta real estate should be lowered and the rate raised, to provide for an equalization that has long been needed, is in direct line with the contention of local real estate men. Some time ago, when Alderman John E. McClelland suggested that assessments be raised, the real estate men passed a resolution protesting against the move. They contended that the rate and, not the assessment, should be raised, and that this would incidentally establish a better proportion between what Fulton County paid the State and the total amount paid by all the counties. It has been estimated that Fulton pays, from all sources except corporation and special taxes, one-seventh of the State's tax revenue, which is held to be entirely too much. The real estate men consider the tax question a serious one, and they are greatly interested in Alderman Candler's plan.

Effect of Boulevard.

People owning property along the Marietta Road have learned with more than ordinary interest of the plan to build an automobile boulevard from Atlanta to Murphy, N. C., since this improvement would be a great help to the property in the section affected. Farmers got out, pads and pencils Monday and tried to figure exactly how the road ought to run. There is a great deal of undeveloped territory in the northern section of the State, and the advocates of the plan for the highway claim that a good road will send property values much higher.

Income Tax Opposition.

Concerted opposition to the Federal income tax measure as it relates to real estate and rents has sprung up from another source. The National Association of Real Estate Exchanges has gone on record as opposing certain features of the bill. In its present form the bill has passed Congress and is now to be voted by the Senate. It appears that the real estate interests were slow in detecting objectionable features, since the bill had got fairly on its way before much definite action was taken. Members of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, it will be recalled, met recently and voted to protest the clause relating to the payment of taxes out of tenant fees, instead of from the landlords.

A Mother's Work and Her Hopes

An Editorial Written Especially for Men and Boys

(Copyright, 1913)

This editorial is not written for women. It is written for MEN, and for boys; for the millions who fail to appreciate the work that mothers do, for the millions that ignore the self-sacrifice and devotion upon which society is based.

On a hot night, in the dusty streets of a dirty city, you see hundreds of women sitting on porches, TAKING CARE OF BABIES.

In lonesome farm houses, far out on monotonous plains, with the late sun setting on a long day of hard work, you find women, cheerful and persevering, TAKING CARE OF BABIES.

In the middle of the night, in earliest morning, when MEN sleep, all over the world, in ice huts North, in Southern tents, in big houses and in dingy tenements, you find women awake, cheerfully and gladly TAKING CARE OF BABIES.

We respect and praise the man selfishly working for himself.

If he builds up a great industry and a great personal fortune, we praise him.

If he risks his life for personal glory and for praise, we praise him.

If he shows courage even in saving his own carcass from destruction, we praise him.

There was never a man whose courage, or devotion, could be compared with that of a woman caring for her baby.

The mother's love is unselfish, and it has no limit this side of the grave.

You will find ONE man in a thousand who will risk his life for a cause.

You will find a THOUSAND women in a thousand who will risk their lives for their babies.

Everything that a man has and is he owes to his mother. From her he gets health, brain, encouragement, moral character, and ALL his chances of success.

How poorly the mother's service is repaid by men individually, and by society as a whole!

The individual man feels that he has done much if he gives sufficient money and a LITTLE attention to her who brought him from nothingness into life and sacrificed her sleep and youth and strength for his sake.

Society, the aggregate of human beings, feels that its duty is done when a few hospitals are opened for poor mothers, and a little medicine doled out in cold-hearted fashion to the sick child.

Fortunately, it may truly be said that the great man is almost always appreciative of his greater mother.

Napoleon was cold, jealous of other men, monumentally egotistical when comparing himself with other sons of women. But he reverenced and appreciated the noble woman who bore him, lived for him, and watched over him to the end. He said:

"It is to my mother, to her good principles, that I owe my success and all I have that is worth while. I do not hesitate to say that the future of the child depends on the mother."

The future of the individual child depends on the individual mother, and the future of the race depends on the mothers of the race.

Think what has been done for mankind by thousands of millions of perfectly devoted mothers.

Every mother is entirely DEVOTED, entirely HOPEFUL, entirely CONFIDENT that no future is too great for her baby's deserts.

The little head—often hopelessly ill-shaped—rolls about feebly on the thin neck devoid of muscles. The toothless gums chew whatever comes along. The wondering eyes look feebly, aimlessly about, without focus or concentration. The future human being, to the cold-blooded onlooker, is a useless little atom added to the human sea of nonentity.

But to the mother that baby is the marvel of all time. There is endless meaning in the first mumblings, endless soul in the senile, baby smile, unlimited possibilities in the knobby forehead and round, hairless head. She sees in the future of the baby responsibilities of government, and feels that one so perfectly lovely must eventually be acclaimed ruler by mankind.

As a result of perfect confidence in its future, the mother gives to every baby perfect devotion, perfect and affectionate moral education. Each child begins life inspired by the most beautiful example of altruism and self-sacrifice.

Kindness has gradually taken the place of brutality among human beings, because every baby at its birth has found itself surrounded by absolute kindness.

The mother's kindness forms moral character.

The mother's confidence and encouragement stimulate ambition and inspire courage.

The mother's patient watchfulness gives good health, and fights disease when it comes.

The mother's wrathful protection shields the child from the stern and dwarfing severity of fathers.

Truly, a man may and should be judged by his feeling toward his own mother, and toward the mothers of other men—of ALL MEN.

In the character of Christ, whose last earthly thought on Golgotha was for His Mother, as in the character of the hard-working, ignorant man whose earnings go to make his mother comfortable, the most beautiful trait is devotion to the mother who suffers and works for her children, from the hours that precede their birth through all the years that they spend on earth together.

Honor thy father and THY MOTHER.

And honor the mothers of other men. Make their task easier through fair payment of the men who support the children, through good public schools for their children, through respectful treatment of ALL women.

The mother is happy. For she knows "the deep joy of loving some one else more than herself."

You honor yourself, and prove yourself worthy of a good mother and of final success, when you do something for the mothers of the world.

There IS a Conspiracy Against This Man

Many a time you hear a young man say there's a conspiracy in his office to keep him from advancing. Usually he's right. There IS a conspiracy, and the conspirators are his baser selves. When the young man in the picture loafs at his work; when he drinks; when he stays up all night gambling—he's heading the conspiracy against his own success. And that's the only sort of conspiracy that can ever keep a man from his goal.

Mr. Suburbs Merely Forgot the Gasoline

The Progress and Prosperity of Los Angeles a Triumph of Intelligence and Independence

NEWS articles have been circulated in the East concerning the late election in Los Angeles, containing statements which are not justified by the facts.

These misstatements have emanated from the newspapers of a certain political leader or boss of Los Angeles, who was defeated in the late election and who has attempted to excuse himself and explain his own defeat by an attack upon the electorate of Los Angeles.

As a matter of fact, Los Angeles has voted in this election with its usual good sense and good judgment, with its customary progressive spirit and high morality.

Mr. Rose, the newly elected Mayor, has had an excellent career as a judge, is a man of experience in politics and of sterling character as a citizen. He will give Los Angeles the efficient, honest, progressive administration that the intelligent and public-spirited citizens of that city demand, and Los Angeles in its choice for Mayor is a subject for congratulation.

The high character of the politics of Los Angeles and the tremendous advantage of such clean and conscientious politics, in contributing to the wonderful growth and attractiveness of that city, are things which the citizens of New York should study and imitate.

In this late election, and in previous elections, party prejudices and national political partisanship played no part whatever. There was no candidate of the Democratic party and no candidate of the Republican party in the local field. The Socialist party, to be sure, was in evidence and ran third in the race, but the two leading parties in numerical strength were two absolutely independent parties, with independent citizens as candidates on each of their tickets.

The whole election was fought out upon the mere matter of the availability and the capability of the candidates.

The decision in favor of Mr. Rose was reached mainly because of the belief of the people in his special fitness and his unexceptionable qualities as a man and a citizen.

One other influence of importance, however, entered into the campaign, and that was a declaration in favor of Mr. Shenk, the independent candidate opposing Mr. Rose, by Mr. Edwin T. Earl, a political leader, or rather boss, in Los Angeles politics.

Even though Mr. Earl is a boss, he is not a squalid one of the kind that dominate so many of our Eastern cities. He is a man of ability and of wealth, but he is considered a boss and he had been accused of using his political power to the advantage of his private interests.

The independent citizens of Los Angeles refused to tolerate a boss or the candidate of a boss. Mr. Shenk had been the leading candidate, and the betting stood at 2 to 1 in his favor. But when Mr. Shenk refused to repudiate satisfactorily the boss and the attempted association of the boss, the public-spirited citizens of Los Angeles turned from Mr. Shenk to Mr. Rose, and elected Mr. Rose by a handsome plurality.

What an inspiration action like this is to the cause of independence, clean politics and good government everywhere! What could not New York accomplish if the citizens of New York had the independence and the courage and the public spirit of the citizens of Los Angeles! How long would the people of New York be betrayed by their parties and their public officials if the citizens of New York would support no party in municipal matters except an independent party, and no candidate except a candidate that was wholly free from boss dictation and domination?

The citizens of Los Angeles regard the conduct of their municipal government as a great business enterprise, and they approach the question from a sound business point of view, free from personal selfishness or party prejudice.

They have put into operation direct primaries, the initiative, the referendum and the recall. They select candidates with the one consideration of the fitness of the candidates. They elect them without bias or prejudice. They instruct them through the initiative. They review their acts through the referendum, and they retire them, if unfaithful or incompetent, through the recall.

Los Angeles is far ahead of New York in progressive principles, in public spirit and in the efficient conduct of its government. The result is a public administration which is as clean and wholesome as a private household.

Los Angeles has the beauty of its site, a matchless climate, an intellectual and enterprising people, attractive and distinctive architecture, delightful homes surrounded with parks and gardens. It is the center of a great petroleum trade and an extensive citrus fruit industry, an entrepot for the maritime trade of the world and the metropolis of the expanding empire of the great Southwest.

But who shall say that the wonderful growth in population and prosperity of Los Angeles, which is one of the marvels of this marvelous land, is not due as much to its wholesome political condition as to the wonderful climate of this favored section and the varied resources of its farms and orchards, its oil wells, its manufactures and its mines?

Would not New York confer upon itself an immeasurable material as well as a moral benefit if it would learn, like Los Angeles, to conduct its government cleanly and competently in the control of the whole people and in the best interests of the whole people?

DR. COOK OF POLE FAME GETS INTO TOWN

Man Who Said He Discovered the North Pole Arrives Here With a Heat Wave.

Well, well, here's old Doctor Cook and hot weather in town at the same time.

There will be hot air everywhere.

There was great commotion at the Aragon Hotel when a medium-seized man, of quite saintly mien, came in and registered:

"Dr. Frederick H. Cook."

The clerk looked up at the new guest in a startled manner. The guest smiled back at him invitingly.

"Is he the real article?" everybody asked.

Then a gust of hot air blew into the lobby from the street.

It Is He.

Whatever significance there may have been in that, it was at any rate, Dr. Cook.

The Polar explorer slept late Monday morning and could not be interviewed by the brigade of reporters and photographers who stormed his door before breakfast. But when he did arise he spoke freely.

Seeks Fair Play.

"I am on a tour of the South," declared the famous polar explorer. "I am appealing to the middle classes, and find that the people of the South are for me. At present I am en route to Madison, Ga., where I will lecture on the Arctic region.

"From what I have seen of Atlanta at this early hour, I think it is a beautiful city."

Steers Car Into Pole To Avert Collision

Paul H. Norcross, wife and child narrowly escaped serious injury Sunday afternoon, when, to avoid collision, Mr. Norcross was forced to swerve his automobile into a telephone pole at the corner of Highland and Ponce DeLeon Avenues. None of the party was injured. The car was badly damaged, and the pole was cut in half.

Mr. Norcross was driving down Ponce DeLeon Avenue early in the afternoon. At the junction of Highland Avenue he saw an automobile going in the same direction as a street car. The automobile was obscured until Mr. Norcross' machine was almost even with the trolley.

Chicago Labor Body For War on "Slavers"

CHICAGO, June 16.—The Chicago branch of the Federation of Labor to-day was on record as favoring the perpetuation of the Illinois Senate white slave committee headed by Lieutenant Governor Barrett O'Hara. The committee has been investigating wage conditions among women and girls, and working for better methods of fighting white slavers.

The labor organization will petition the Legislature to make the committee a commission and appropriate funds for its use.

Wilsons to Celebrate Their Anniversary

WASHINGTON, June 16.—President and Mrs. Wilson will celebrate their twenty-eighth wedding anniversary in the White House on June 24.

No special plans have been made for the day, but it is possible that a family dinner party will be given that night.

The President won his bride in Savannah, Ga. According to the announcement of the marriage in the local papers at the time, Mrs. Wilson then rejoiced in the old-fashioned name of "Ellie Lou."

Heat is Fatal in North Middle-West

CHICAGO, June 16.—Several more days of intense heat are in prospect to-day, following a sizzling 24 hours. The entire north central part of the country was hot yesterday. Eight deaths were reported.

In Chicago the mercury reached 94. The same maximum was reported at Et. Louis, Montgomery, Jacksonville, Kansas City and North Platte. That was 10 ten degrees hotter than the maximum for the day at New Orleans, and 2 degrees cooler than at Omaha, Des Moines and St. Paul.

No Grape Juice for Sec. Daniels; He's On the Water Wagon

BOSTON, June 16.—Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels has enrolled himself with Secretary of State Bryan, Colonel Roosevelt, Mayor Fitzgerald and others, by declaring that a so-called "soft drink" is his favorite tipple.

Bryan says grape juice, Colonel Roosevelt prefers milk, Mayor Fitzgerald dilutes his grape juice with ginger ale to add a little "tang." "But give me bottled mineral water," declared Secretary Daniels. "I wouldn't spoil my stomach with grape juice and milk makes one fat. Mineral water is refreshing, harmless and won't offend the most abstemious."

"September Morn" Bathing Suits Are Barred in Denver

DENVER, COL., June 16.—A skirt, bloomers and a waist that comes close to the neck is the official bathing suit of Denver, under the commission form of government, as tentatively designed by Otto F. Thum, commissioner of property and therefore in charge of the park department, incidentally all the city beaches.

"I certainly believe it is not right for a woman to appear at a public bathing place clad only in tights," he said. "She hasn't on sufficient clothing then to be decent in her own bed room."

Wilson Girls to Keep House for President

WASHINGTON, June 16.—During the summer Miss Margaret Wilson, eldest daughter of the President, and her sisters will take turns in keeping house for their father, marooned at the White House by the tariff and currency bills.

Miss Margaret has left for a series of visits in the Middle West. She will be first the guest of Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, in Madison, Wis., and will spend several weeks with other friends before joining her mother at their summer home in Cornish, N. H., and sending the second sister to "take care of papa."

Angered Woman Sues Pastor for $25,000

PORTLAND, June 16.—Because she objected to being called "an obstreperous person, a mischief-maker and a nuisance," Mrs. A. E. Clark, wife of a prominent attorney, filed a suit for $25,000 against Rev. A. A. Morrison, pastor of Trinity Episcopal Church of this city.

Her attorney says the trouble grew out of Mrs. Clark's insistence on having women members of the fashionable church on the governing board of that congregation.

Ah, at Last, Women Are to Have 'Em

CHICAGO, June 16.—"Trouserines" will be offered by Chicago dressmakers to take the place of the popular, but abused, slashed skirt. Woman must pull 'em on over her feet, too, just like the men do it. Thus the dream of many decades is coming true.

The Chicago Dressmakers' Association has so decreed. The new style is to be a great flaring ankle-length pair o' something, draped so that on the street one will never stare.

Risque Books Most Sought by Readers

CHICAGO, June 14.—Books that twenty years ago were considered unfit for public circulation now are most eagerly sought, according to employees in the Chicago Public Library.

"The reading public has become broadened in its attitude toward discussions of problems of sex life until now these discussions are eagerly sought," one said.

Boxing Girl Makes Suitors Take Count

NEW YORK, June 16.—Miss Jean Morrell, "boxing girl of the movies," is back in New York after a brief visit in Europe.

Miss Morrell, on board ship, challenged every suitor to a three-round bout in the gymnasium. Only one managed to get a draw.

One ardent suitor assured Miss Morrell he would not hurt her. One blow sent him down for the count.

THE WEATHER.

Forecast for Atlanta and Georgia—Fair Monday and probably Tuesday; light, variable winds.

FARM UNION HEAD GIVES PRAISE TO HEARST

Charles S. Barrett Declares Papers Helped in Awakening Dixie Farmers to Call of Progress.

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—"The Hearst newspapers have been steadfast friends of the Farmers' Union, and have given us invaluable assistance. The personal interest of Mr. Hearst and the splendid editorial and other help of John Temple Graves have done much to enable us to accomplish what we have done."

This was the assertion of Charles S. Barrett, of Union City, Ga., president of the great and rapidly growing Farmers' Union, who in ten years has become one of the most potent personalities in American life. Mr. Barrett was in Los Angeles Sunday. He will leave this evening for San Francisco, on his way to Basin, Wyo., and Bismarck, S. D., to attend farmers' conventions.

Mr. Barrett is the guiding genius of the Farmers' Educational and Cooperative Union, which has 38,000 local lodges and 3,000,000 members.

Union Awakened Dixie.

"Our organization is built on the principle of education and co-operation among farmers," said Mr. Barrett yesterday. "The South was backward in agricultural development, but there has been a great awakening and the Farmers' Union, in many ways, has been the greatest financier in the change. The Union was first mainly a Southern organization, but our greatest growth now is in the Middle West.

"The South has depended almost wholly on cotton. The Union taught the farmers the necessity of growing other things; raising their own hay, grain and meat, and this diversity of production is one of the foundation stones of our new prosperity.

"My own State of Georgia was far down in the list of States, but so remarkable has been the progress made that the Government reports place it fourth in agricultural products now.

Educate the Farmers.

"We try to educate the farmers and then to bring them into co-operation in any direction feasible. We have not started many stores. In the South the lodges built and operate warehouses; in the West, packing plants and elevators.

"We do not run for office or nominate candidates. We have not a thing to do with partisan politics, but we retire a man now and then to private life just by way of example."

Mr. Barrett smiled reminiscently as he drew this distinction between politics and politics.

"One of our bills aims at the prohibition of gambling in farm products. It has been passed twice by the House, but blocked by the Senate, and Murphy J. Foster, of Louisiana, one of our strongest opponents, is now living quietly at his home near New Orleans in consequence. We had to retire him.

Tells of Retiring Foes.

"'Uncle John' Lamb, of Virginia, chairman of the General Agricultural Committee, fought us. We had to excuse him from further public service at the primary last August.

"The Farmers' Union is a staunch advocate of scientific farming. Many agricultural colleges have been established in the South through its influence, and more liberal support given those already founded in consequence of its demands.

"The union was directly responsible for the Bureau of Markets recently established by Congress, the purpose of which is to lend any possible assistance by way of information that will help the farmers in marketing their products."

Turks Fear Plot to Replace Abdul Hamid

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 16.—Commanders of the international fleet of warships in the Golden Horn have given notice to the Government they will protect the city if there is an uprising. Many more arrests were made to-day in connection with the assassination of Grand Vizier Mahmud Shevket Pasha.

Young Turk advisers profess to scent a plot on the part of the reactionaries to put Abdul Hamid back on the throne. A guard is maintained over the son of Kamil Pasha, former Grand Vizier, who was arrested Sunday.

U.S. CRUSHES MOROS IN MIDNIGHT BATTLE

Philippine Rebels Flee Into the Mountains After Their Last Defenses Are Captured.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MANILA, P. I., June 16.—In a night attack on the remaining defenses of the rebellious Moros on the Island of Jolo the American troops and their native allies, under Brigadier General John J. Pershing, U. S. A., routed the rebel Filipinos with the loss of six men killed and seven wounded.

All the American soldiers killed were scouts.

News of the engagement was received by the military authorities today in a wireless message from Jolo. The radio said the rebellious natives, after deserting their trenches, fled into the mountains, pursued by Americans and the constabulary.

Desultory fighting between the rival forces has been going on for several days. The entire casualties on the American side were 30 killed and wounded. The native loss is believed to be much heavier.

General Pershing is warm in his praise of the gallantry of the Americans.

Grocer Sprints When Attacked by Robbers

Joseph Franklin, a prominent wholesale grocer, was attacked by three footpads Sunday night.

Mr. Franklin resides at 151 Washington Street and the hold-up occurred on Crumley, between Washington and Pulliam Streets, just a short distance from his home.

Three negroes stepped in front of him, near his home at 151 Washington Street, and, pointing a pistol at his head, ordered him to hold up his hands. One reached for a diamond which Franklin wore in his shirt. Franklin caught him by the throat and bore him to the ground. Another negro pounced upon the grocer's back. He shook loose from this one and broke into a sprint, followed by three shots from the highwaymen.

Lands in Jail While On a Vacation Spree

MACON, GA., June 16.—C. J. Williamson, of Panama City, Fla., came to Macon on a vacation. Saturday night he drank too much, and when he regained his senses he was in the parlor of the home of R. H. Plant, Jr., two miles from the city limits, with his shoes, hat and coat missing, and the owner of the house holding him at bay with a pistol.

Mr. Plant shot twice at the intruder, and narrowly missed him. He was jailed by Sheriff Hicks.

Twelfth of Family Gives Life to Lepers

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—Rev. Gottfried Hahn, recently ordained a minister of the German Evengelical Church, has departed for Purulia, India, where a colony of lepers is located.

Eleven others of his family, including his aged mother, ministered to the lepers of the same colony, serving many years in constant danger of contracting the disease.

COUNCIL TO PASS BUDGET EVEN IF VETOED

Mayor Repeats Statement That He Will Not Violate Supreme Court Crematory Decision.

Mayor James G. Woodward will affix his conditional approval to the June apportionment sheet Monday, the proviso being that nothing therein shall be construed in violation of the Supreme Court's crematory decision. Council, though, will construe this action as a disapproval and proceed in the afternoon to pass the budget as if the Mayor had vetoed it.

Following the budget's final passage Council will approve the $260,000 contract for the purchase of the crematory. The contract then will go to the Mayor, and if he vetoes it it will be passed over his objections.

Mayor Woodward Monday morning repeated his previous statement that he had nothing against the budget, but affixed certain conditions to his approval solely to be on the safe side.

Alderman Harwell is reported to be investigating the advisability of an additional 25 cent tax levy for public improvements. It is not known if his ordinance to this effect will be introduced to-day.

The Ivy Street boulevard proposition, involving franchise for double-track street car service on Piedmont Avenue, may and may not be presented to the General Council.

Councilman C. L. Ashley's segregation ordinance will be returned with the favorable recommendation of the police committee. Ashley said he expected the measure to pass unanimously.

A member of the park board to succeed Frank Wilby, who resigned, will be elected. A close contest is anticipated between Oscar Weinmeister and A. N. Thom.

Near-beer licenses, 170 in all, will be presented for renewal.

PIANO RECITAL IS HELD.

A piano recital by the pupils of Miss Mabel D. McIver was given at the residence, 495 South Pryor Street. Violin selections were rendered by Miss McIver, Marie Carlton and C. P. Agricola. Gold medals were presented to the six pupils showing the most improvement during the past term.

Says She Needs Money For Boys' Home and Praises Light, Flowing Costume For Women.

NEW YORK, June 16.—Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson has arrived on the Olympic. This chic little lady, who has earned the sobriquet of "the most unconventional woman in all England," will dance in New York swathed in picturesque Arabian costume, consisting of brown and white draperies, in a drama based on the Biblical character Judith.

For her two weeks' work she will receive $10,000.

The love for Oriental dress was gained by Lady Constance while in India.

"The day will come when all women will dress like those of Egypt and India," she said. "The cost is nominal, and I am relieved of all worry about the changing styles. Then, too, this costume is comfortable, and that is something that can not be said for the modern attire favored by women. And, also, I think that I am safe in saying it is about as becoming as most modern outfits."

Lady Constance has been implored many times by her relatives, the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, not to dance in public. But Lady Constance said she needed the money for a boys' home in Scotland which she is trying to help.

Tight Money Hits Egg And Butter Traders

NEW YORK, June 16.—Money stringency is having its effect upon the stores of butter and eggs. Holdings of eggs in New York City now are short 350,000 cases, of 30 dozen to the case, of what they were a year ago. Last year the limit advanced on eggs was $5.50 per case, and this year it is $4.50. Receivers have trouble in getting this.

The scarcity of money is being felt more in butter than in egg channels. Last year $15 was advanced per tub, while this year the banks are trying to hold down to $12.

Girl's Auto Death Dream Comes True

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—Miss Kitty Howe, a pretty young chorus girl, dreamed that she would be killed in an automobile accident. Yesterday she leaped from a speeding car when it struck a rock. She landed in a pile of stones, fracturing her skull. Ten hours later she died in a hospital.

Suicide's Last Wish Is That Flowers Be Put Upon His Grave

"Take good care of the baby and put a few flowers on my grave."

M. Roy Fowler, 125 Hunnicutt Street, fell unconscious at his wife's feet Sunday afternoon with these words on his lips. Fowler had just swallowed a bottle of carbolic acid. He died a few minutes later in an ambulance going to Grady Hospital.

Fowler ran a butcher shop on East Hunter Street. Financial troubles, it is believed, caused him to end his life. He was an Odd Fellow and a Red Man and a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. He was 46 years old. Surviving are Mrs. Fowler and the baby, three brothers, J. L. Fowler, W. A. Fowler and T. A. Fowler, and two sisters, Miss Nan Fowler and Mrs. L. A. Hudson.

The body will be taken at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday morning to Indian Creek Cemetery for burial.

Man Running for Train is Hit by an Engine; Dies in Hour

Carl Brown, 23 years old, of Stone Mountain, was struck by a switch engine of the Georgia Railroad early Monday morning and received injuries from which he died an hour later. He attempted to board a moving passenger train in the Atlanta yards.

C. B. Bishop, of Scottdale, Brown's companion, had boarded the train and turned on the coach steps to call to his friend.

Brown, running across the yards in the darkness, failed to see the approaching switch engine. He was struck by the engine's cowcatcher and hurled fifteen feet. He was picked up unconscious and hurried to the Elkin-Goldsmith Sanitarium.

Brown and Bishop had been in Atlanta visiting young ladies. They overstayed their time and had tried to make a short cut to the train.

Cardinal Not Insane; Ill of Neurasthenia

ROME, June 16.—Cardinal Vives y Tuto, prefect of the congregation for religious effairs, who, according to certain reports, had become insane, is suffering only from neurasthenia, and by the advice of physicians has retired to a monastery at Frascati, near Rome.

Cardinal Vive y Tuto acquired a very prominent position at the Vatican after the election of Pope Pius X, and has even been considered as a probable candidate for the succession.

Uncle Sam Conducts 'Movies' for Toilers

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Through the award of contracts for several thousand feet of motion picture films it has just become known that the United States Government is engaged in the moving picture business on a big scale.

The enterprise is carried on by the reclamation service camps in the West to keep the workmen and their families, isolated from the world, contented and happy.

'Antis' Say Suffrage Reduces Birth Rate

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Prize-winning anti-suffragist essays received at haedquarters here claim the birth rate in America is falling off because of suffrage activities.

One wrote:

"A suffragist approaches motherhood a bankrupt. Too often her marriage is barren or her offspring is defective in mind or body."

FRANK TIGHT IN NET, SAYS AIDE OF DORSEY

Attorney Hooper Declares State Is Prepared for Any Move the Defense May Make.

Frank A. Hooper, the well-known criminal lawyer who has been engaged to assist Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey in the trial of Leo M. Frank for the alleged murder of Mary Phagan, said Monday that the case was complete and was ready for presentation in court at any time.

Mr. Hooper asserted that the attorneys interested in the prosecution had investigated every angle of the mystery so thoroughly and fortified themselves against any defense that Frank will present, that practically nothing remained to be done until the case was called for trial. The departure of Solicitor Dorsey for a week's vacation, he said, was an indication of the preparedness of the prosecution.

No new developments are expected by the prosecution, according to Mr. Hooper. All of the stories and rumors have been run down to their original source. The defense, in his opinion, will be able to spring no surprise that has not been anticipated by the prosecution.

Mrs. Frank Gives Interview.

The American printed Sunday an exclusive interview with Mrs. Frank, whose husband, Leo M. Frank, is under indictment charged with the murder of 14-year-old Mary Phagan. It was the first time that Mrs. Frank had permitted herself to be interviewed since the Coroner's jury a month ago recommended that the Grand Jury hold her husband for trial.

She broke her silence to tell the thousands who have been gripped by the remarkable murder mystery just why she is absolutely confident and positive that Frank could not have been the author of the terrible deed. She made no plea for sympathy, but expressed herself as fully reconciled to the processes of the law, even though they temporarily caused her the greatest sorrow and kept her husband behind the cars as a man suspected of one of the most brutal crimes thinkable. The loyal wife said that she was able to bear the present belief because of the assurance of Frank's ultimate and complete vindication.

Why She Believes Husband.

On the fact that she believes from her life with the suspected slayer that any gross or immoral act is utterly apart from his nature, she bases much of her belief in his entire innocence.

She said, in part:

"In all the year and a half of our engagement, in the happy knowledge and consent of both our parents, I was Leo's 'best girl' and he was my one and only beau. If I went to a party, it was conceded that I should go with Leo, and if Leo went, he invariably went with me. You know, the people of my faith do those things in that way—with us, betrothal is all but as sacred as marriage itself.

"Leo Frank and myself have been man and wife for two years and a half. I state it as a circumstance showing how sweet and mutually happy our home life has been, and not as a thing I should mention ordinarily, that during all the two and a half years of our wedded life not once has Leo been away from me at night, save when once a month he attended the meetings of the Jewish Order of B'nai Brith, of which he was the president in Atlanta until he was arrested.

He Preferred Staying Home.

"He might have gone out in the evenings, perhaps without my knowledge, to places he should not have gone, so far as my free consent may have figured as a factor in his going. I merely cite it as a truthful circumstance that he has not elected to go. He seemed rather to prefer staying home with me. Naturally, that made me very happy—for I am, after all, a woman, like other women, and a woman never gets to the point where she does not dearly love for her husband to show her that he is still her sweetheart.

"We have lived here in this house, with my father and mother. To them, Leo has been devoted and always most considerate. They love him as a son; they took him close to their hearts before the wedding bells had ceased to ring—for that is the way our people do in those matters.

"I will tell you another reason why I think Leo Frank could not have committed the diabolical crime charged to him. He is devoted to children—little children especially.

"We have no children of our own, unfortunately, but there are several nieces and nephews in the family, and to every one of them Mr. Frank is affectionately attached. I have seen him play with a two-year-old child for hours, not once, but many times.

Helps Little Orphan Children.

"He has been with Mr. Milton Klein, for many years one of the moving spirits in providing innocent and healthful outdoor recreation and pleasure for the children of the Hebrews' Orphan Home.

"Is a man who loves children as Leo Frank loves them likely to have a hand in the slaying of an innocent child, not yet budded into youthful womanhood, as Mary Phagan is said to have been?

"If there is one person in all the world he has been more devoted to than to me, it is his aged and blind uncle, M. Frank. Is a man who is kind and considerate to the lame, the halt and the blind such a man as would take a hand in the killing of a child?

"Ah, surely, surely, there are few people who will—who can—believe that!

Always Kind and Generous.

"In the home, where Leo Frank has spent his time away from his business, he always has been the most kind, the most generous, the most thoughtful, the most considerate and the most affectionate of men.

"I think my knowledge of Leo Frank and the kind of man he is is worth more than the word of a shiftless negro who has lied persistently and vigorously ever since he was arrested as a suspect—but while my voice will be hushed in the court room, his will be heard by both the judge and the jury trying my husband for his life.

"There is, of course, much in this case that has seemed to me cruel—and now and then I have been moved to some measure of bitterness in my thoughts. But I believe that truth is mighty, and all I want is fair play.

She Wants Fair Play.

"If we can get fair play, my husband will be restored soon to me and to his family and his friends—and when he is, we shall take up calmly, and in such degree of forgetfulness as we can summon to our aid, the disrupted thread of our life, bind up our wounds, and try to hold against no man aught of ill will or resentment.

"That's the way I feel about it, and that's the way Leo feels about it. That's the way mother and father feel about it, too.

"We await the trial of Leo Frank in confidence. We have come to think that, after all, we shall get fair treatment—and as that is all we have asked for, we are more and more optimistic every day as to the conclusion."

Wife Asks Alimony of Count deGratresse

NEW YORK, June 16.—Countess Marie DeGratresse, wife of Count Joseph Gratresse, a civil engineer, has applied to Supreme Court Justice Giegerich to reopen her divorce case and grant her alimony.

The attorney for the Countess informed Justice Giegerich that the litigants may have been in collusion in agreeing upon $15 a week payments to the Countess. The Count's lawyer denied any collusion.

The Count has an alienation suit against Leon J. Garcey, 261 Fifth Avenue, whom he charges with supplying money for the Countess' divorce proceedings. Garcey denies.

'LITTLE JEFF' MAY GET ATLANTA WIFE

"Bud" Fisher Thinks Gate City Girls Are Best in the Whole World.

"But" Fisher is in town searching Atlanta for a life partner with whom he may make happy the life of poor, oppressed little Jeff.

Mutt is married, as everyone knows, and there are one or two diminutive Mutts running about the Mutt domicile. Now, it's Jeff's turn. Mutt's domestic life has not been entirely happy, it is true. His well-known flirtatious tendencies have had a severe crimp put in them by the young woman whom Bud wished on Mutt, and he hasn't had much more liberty that a 60-day visitor at the Tower when he is at home—which isn't often—but this is no reason to discourage the search for Jeff's helpmeet, thinks Fisher.

Anyway, the distinguished creator of Mutt and Jeff, who will star at the Forsyth all this week, ascribes what marital unhappiness that Mutt has experienced to the fact that his bride was not picked in Atlanta.

"Had I picked Mutt's wife under the romantic skies of the Southland, all would have been well," said Bud, sadly.

Bud ought to know. It was here that the romance of his own life took place. He was in Atlanta last year drawing his inimitable pictures for the amusement of the theater crowds, just as he is going to do this week. On the bill with him was Miss Pauline Welch. The week's entertainments were hardly under way before the story was printed that the two artists had met and that it was a case of love at first sight. A short time later they were married and the press agent was vindicated. Miss Welch, now Mrs. Fisher, is traveling with her husband and is on the Forsyth program again this year.

"This is the place to pick out a wife," said Bud. "That's why I'm looking up one for little Jeff."

Kansas Would Catch Up With Her Laws

TOPEKA, KANS., June 16.—Governor George Hodges would have the Kansas Legislature cease meeting for eight or ten years so that the State could catch up with the laws now on its statute books. For six years now Kansas Legislatures have been passing the most progressive enactments in the country. Here are some of the "first things" Kansas did and which other States are copying:

Kansas blue sky law, copied by 17 States.

Abolished common drinking cup, copied by 28 States and Government.

Abolished common roller towel.

Created first small debtors' courts where lawyers and fees are unknown.

Provided efficiency test for all bank employees.

Provided first rating bureau for fire insurance.

"Let the Legislature disband for a number of years until the State catches up," said the Governor. "We have a greater number of progressive laws upon our statute books than any other Commonwealth."

The Joy of Coming Motherhood

A Wonderful Remedy That is a Natural Aid and Relieves the Tension.

Mother's Friend, a famous external remedy, is the only one known that is able to reach all the different parts involved. It is a penetrating application after the formula of a noted family doctor, and lubricates every muscle, nerve, tissue or tendon affected. It goes directly to the strained portions and gently but surely relieves all tendency to soreness or strain.

By its daily use there will be no pain, no distress, no nausea, no danger of laceration or other accident, and the period will be one of supreme comfort and joyful anticipation.

To all young women Mother's Friend is one of the greatest of all helpful influences, for it robs childbirth of all its agonies and dangers, dispels all the doubt and dread, all sense of fear, and thus enables the mind and body to await the greatest event in a woman's life with untrammeled gladness.

Mother's Friend is a most cherished remedy in thousands of homes, and is of such peculiar merit and value as to make it essentially one to be recommended by all women.

You will find it on sale at all drug stores at $1 a bottle, or the druggist will gladly get it for you if you insist upon it. Mother's Friend is prepared only by the Bradfield Regulator Company, 131 Lamar Building, Atlanta, Ga., who will send you by mail, sealed, a very instructive book to expectant mothers. Write for it to-day.

NEW "POISONED PEN" CHARGES PREPARED

Only Two Letters Are Made Public in the Sensational New Jersey Trial.

ELIZABETH, N. J., June 16.—New charges of writing "poisoned pen" letters are being prepared against Mrs. Anna J. Pollard, whose prosecution on the complaint of Mrs. Charles F. Jones has been adjourned for a few days. This statement was made by Abe J. David, counsel to Mrs. Jones, who says that he will have a new complainant and a new batch of letters upon which to base the new charges.

Justice Owen P. Mahon adjourned the hearing of Mrs. Pollard upon the statement of a physician that Mrs. Jones, the complainant, would not be able to attend the court by reason of illness.

It was apparent that she would not be in condition to testify for some time, and Attorney David then asserted that he would try the idea of a new complaint in order to force a speedy hearing. Two letters were made public.

One of the Letters.

The first of the letters produced was to Dr. Charles Jones, and was dated Elizabeth. It ran in this wise:

Only a warning to inform you that your brothers' wives, who are as thick as Jersey skeeters, were in a very fast resort, having great sport writing anonymous letters to your wife. I am sure that you have no idea of the extent to which this is carried on. My daughter is intimate with the two women, and she told me about them.

There was no signature. The letter was received in January.

Another letter to Mrs. William Meeks, of 183 DeHart Place, told of the inside workings of the D. A. R. and Dr. Horace Livingood also had letters received in November, 1910, and March, 1911.

"I Am a True Friend."

The longest of the letters produced by Attorney David was sent to Mrs. Dubois Bunting, who, before her marriage to Dr. Bunting, was Miss Mabel MacDougal, and known to her intimates as "Audrey." The letter follows:

My Dear Audrey—I am a true friend of yours, but not much of a typewriter. I am going to give you a heart-to-heart talk, which I hope you will take in the spirit in which it is intended. Mrs. Jones is no friend further than what she can get out of you, and the way she talks and the shameful manner she talks about Dr. Bunting is enough to make the blood of a Methodist minister boil.

Mrs. Jones has lived here eight years, and is wild to get into society. She thinks she is finally going in through you. Dr. Bunting, she says, is a handsome man, but what practice has he got? Only among Peterstown folks, she says, and he is only allowed to operate at one hospital and can not get into the clinic.

Take Dr. Bailey, for instance. Mrs. Jones falls all over herself when Mrs. Fred Bailey is around. Behind their backs they advise every one to change doctors and get well. They say he is a quack and enough to kill a horse.

Dr. Jones has two brothers in this city—one, Ernest Jones, a carpenter, at 153 Sayers Avenue, and another, Thomas Jones. The others would not associate with Mrs. Charles F. Jones on account of her terrible tongue.

Mrs. Mary E. Bryan's Death at Clarkston Causes Regret Here

News of the death of Mrs. Mary E. Bryan at her home in Clarkston Sunday night was received with profound regret in Atlanta, where the noted author was dearly beloved. Her death was not unexpected, as she had been ill for some time.

Mrs. Bryan won a great following through her writings. She was the author of 47 books, all unusually popular. One of them, "Mance," was one of the greatest sellers in American literature. She was a contributor to many magazines and long received a salary of $25,000 a year as editor of The Fireside Companion. She was connected with The Sunny South for twelve years and also had charge of a department with Uncle Remus' Magazine.

Mrs. Bryan's death occurred at 10:30 o'clock. Funeral arrangements have not been made.

OBITUARY.

M. D. Campbell, sixty-four years old, died at the residence, 9 Jennings Street, at 3 o'clock Sunday morning. He is survived by two sons, T. M. and J. F. Campbell, and four daughters, Mrs. H. K. Gordon, Mrs. G. H. Perry, Mrs. John Dixon and Miss Jessie Campbell. Funeral from the chapel of P. J. Bloomfield at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon. Interment at Greenwood.

Mrs. S. T. Watkins, aged forty-four, died at a private sanitarium Sunday night. She was the wife of S. T. Watkins, of 24 Norcross Street, a Southern Railway engineer. Besides her husband, Mrs. Watkins is survived by four sons, K. E., E. O., H. H. and S. T. Watkins, Jr., and one daughter, Mrs. W. E. Wadden, of Selma, Ala. The body was removed to the chapel of Barclay & Brandon and prepared for shipment to Keysville, Va., for funeral and interment.

The funeral of Lieutenant J. J. Kaesser, who died at a private sanitarium Sunday afternoon, will be held from the chapel of Barclay & Brandon Tuesday afternoon. Lieutenant Kaesser was one of the best-liked men in the Fire Department, and had been with the department for over 18 years. He was promoted to the lieutenancy of Engine House No. 3 some time ago. He is survived by his wife and one son, W. G. Kaesser.

Robert Hobbs, 57 years old, died at his residence in Adamsville at 8 o'clock Sunday morning. He is survived by a wife and four children. The funeral will be from the chapel of Harry G. Poole's funeral home at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon, and the interment at the family burying ground at Adamsville.

Mrs. Annie McWilliams, 50 years old, died at the residence, 59 Robbins Street, at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Beside her husband, W. M. McWilliams, she is survived by two children, Mrs. Lela Sanders and W. O. McWilliams. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

John H. Carr, the 8-month-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Carr, of 315 West Third Street, died at the residence at 6 o'clock Sunday evening. Funeral services were held from the chapel of Harry G. Poole at 9:30 Monday morning. Interment at Sandy Springs.

NEW PRIZES WIN FAVOR IN CONTEST

Georgian Gives Tips to Hustlers in Race for Extra Ponies and Watches.

TIPS TO CONTESTANTS.

The hustler always finds favor with his friends.

Someone will tell you that you can't win. Get the laugh on him.

Wanting to win and hustling to win are two different things.

Rumors about what others are doing will not get you votes.

Lack of hustle is "the pace that kills."

Two ponies for every district and two watches for every race—these are the prizes now in The Georgian and American contest.

The first prizes remain the same—pony outfits, "ready to drive away." Second prizes are ponies with saddles. Third and fourth prizes are the watches.

From now on there is no excuse for dallying.

If you can not win a first prize, there is a second prize almost as valuable, and if you fail for a pony, try for a watch as consolation.

No offer like this ever has been made before by an Atlanta paper. The rewards are enough to stimulate the enthusiasm of the most lethargic boy or girl.

There should be an immediate speeding up, particularly as there is a special offer which may expire any day—50,000 extra votes for the first $30 turned in for subscriptions. Another special offer of extra votes in telling quantities for every club of five expires July 5.

It is time to "get busy." Let your competitors see every Wednesday and Sunday that you are in the race in earnest.

Rothschilds Push Oil War on Standard

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—Another battle was on between the Rothschilds of England and the Standard Oil Company to-day in California, following the arrival of the Dutch tank steamer Kessler from Sumatra, carrying 3,000,000 gallons of gasoline. The Rothschilds sent to the United States the best grade of gasoline obtained in the Orient.

This shipment, it was announced, is the first of many to be used in breaking the hold of the Standard Oil Company on the Pacific Coast.

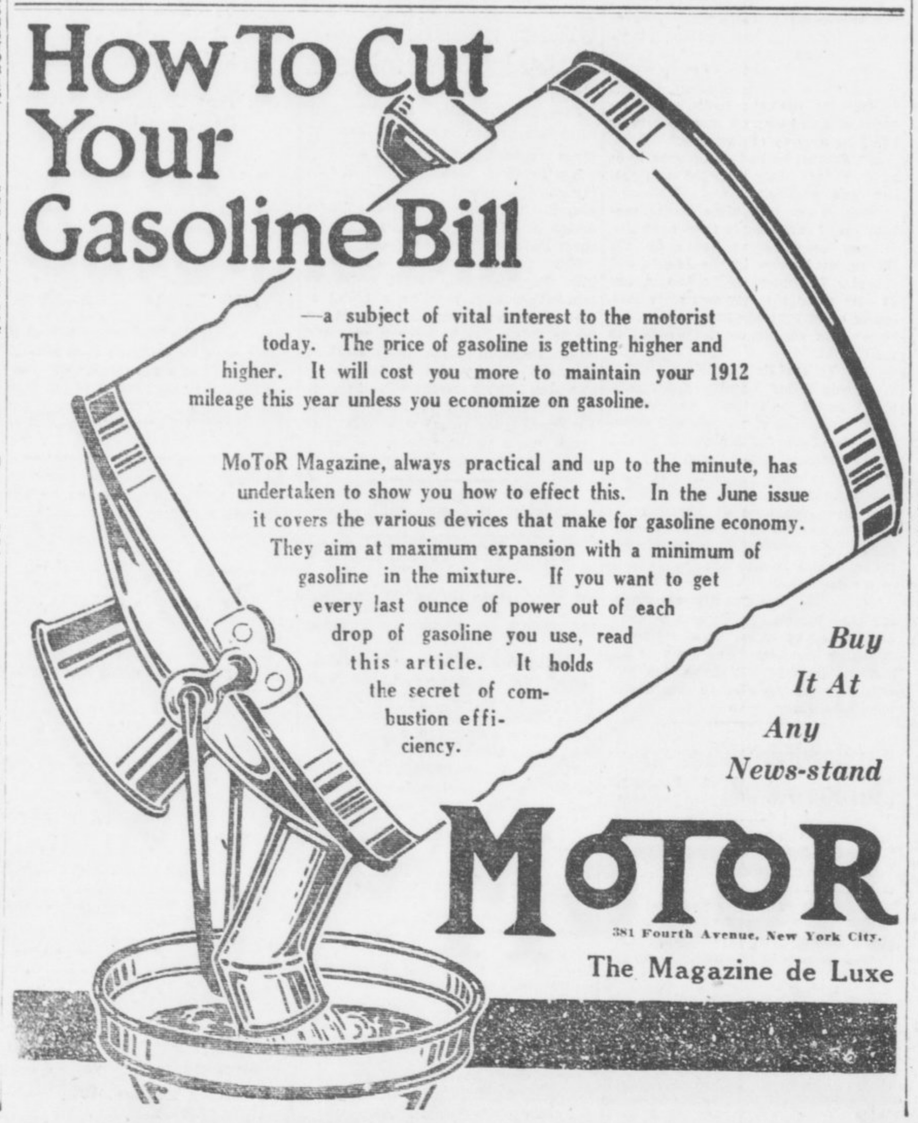
How To Cut Your Gasoline Bill



—a subject of vital interest to the motorist today. The price of gasoline is getting higher and higher. It will cost you more to maintain your 1912 mileage this year unless you economize on gasoline.

MoToR Magazine, always practical and up to the minute, has undertaken to show you how to effect this. In the June issue it covers the various devices that make for gasoline economy. They aim at maximum expansion with a minimum of gasoline in the mixture. If you want to get every last ounce of power out of each drop of gasoline you use, read this article. It holds the secret of combustion efficiency.

Life's Worth Living in Georgia

If you prefer city life, there are no better cities in the world than those in Georgia.
If you prefer village life, the smaller towns in Georgia offer every inducement.
If you prefer country or farm life, Georgia offers greater inducements than any State in the Union. Georgia lands work the year round, from two to five crops being gathered off of the same land each year---crops that are profitable.

Climate and Soil

The climate is such that farmers do not have to house stock during the winter, there being good grazing the entire year. For raising cattle and stock Georgia offers greater inducements than can be found elsewhere.
The soil is suited for almost anything that grows and can be utilized the entire year. The prices at which good farm land can be purchased at present in Georgia are so low that it is a matter of comment---some thinking that the land is not so good as stated. The land is good, but there are thousands of acres that are now lying idle and the good people of Georgia are anxious for good farmers to come among them. Consequently the land is cheaper here than elsewhere.

DANGER SEEN IN $500,000,000 NOTE ISSUE

Forbes Says McAdoo's Readiness to Give Out Paper Is Invitation to Credit Jamboree

By B. C. FORBES.

To flood the country with half a billion emergency bank notes at this time would drive gold to Europe, would gravely aggravate credit inflation here and render our last state worse than our first. We have already in circulation the largest volume of bank notes ever put out.

* * *

We don't need more, but less credit, less borrowing.

* * *

Secretary McAdoo's unexpected announcement that he stands ready to issue $500,000,000 Aldrich notes is a direct invitation to go on a jamboree. New York bankers—who, after all, do know something about banking—have been striving with might and main for months to curtail the credit expansion that has gone to perilous lengths throughout the country. They have, moreover, practiced what they have been preaching: loans here have been rigidly discouraged, speculators have been obliged to stop their antics and liquid resources have been zealously accumulated in preparation for autumnal needs.

* * *

But country banks have gone on their way merrily, lending to all and sundry. The expansion in national bank loans alone has been at the rate of $1,000,000 every business day for the last twelve months—without one cent addition to cash on hand to justify this inflation.

* * *

Bank notes are not capital.

* * *

The scarcity is a scarcity of capital, not currency. Newly blossomed "experts" on national finance would do well to insert that fact into their noodles and keep it there in a prominent place. More nonsense is being written and spoken about financial subjects by men in prominent positions than at any time since William Jennings Bryan championed his famous "sixteen-to-one."

* * *

Washington can not create capital by opening currency flood-gates. Capital can come into being only through the people spending less than they earn—that is, by saving. The urgent need to-day is for less borrowing, not for more borrowing, a la Secretary McAdoo's latest proposal.

* * *

Let the Wilson administration be assured that the more bank notes they pump into circulation at this time, the easier will it be for Europe to take gold from us. We have exported $60,000,000 gold within the last five months and the chances are that more will go within the next fortnight. Europe is hungry for gold, the medium that speaks all languages and can do duty in any land. She will leave us our emergency currency and take our yellow metal.

* * *

To the novitiate the prospect of releasing $500,000,000 additional currency is most inspiring. It intoxicates. But those who can see below the surface, those who can diagnose the difference between bank notes and actual wealth, shrink from contemplating the outcome of any wholesale issuance of emergency notes at this juncture. Borrowers should pull in sail between now and the crop-moving season. They should not rush deeper into debt.

* * *

The Treasury Department should not dissipate resources at this time. It should fortify itself against the abnormal demands that the marketing of bumper crops can not fail to entail. In non-panic, but ominous times, all banking institutions should curtail credits. It is only when a crisis is imminent that a policy of granting generous and prompt assistance should be adopted and courageously followed.

* * *

It is a pity that the Treasury Department has elected to hold itself aloof from the best banking minds in the country and go blindly ahead.

Queen of Belgians Is in Sanitarium

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MONTRAUX, SWITZERLAND, June 16.—The Queen of the Belgians has been severely ill at Dr. Widmer's Sanitarium here two weeks. It is expected to be some time before she will be able to leave and she has canceled her engagements for the fetes at Ghent and other places which begin June 22.

Men, Hatless, to Bear Parasols in Berlin

BERLIN, June 16.—Dress reform leagues in Berlin, Dresden, Bonn and other German towns have decreed that for the summer men shall go hatless and protect their heads with parasols. They have also decided men must not wear coats, substituting blouses cut after the fashion of a schoolboy's garment.

Social Survey by Experts Shows City of Atlanta Has Few Ills

Civic Doctors Make Diagnosis to Prescribe Cure for Needs

Shelby M. Harrison.

Franz Schnieder, Jr.

Zenas Potter.

Recommendation of Investigators Will Determine if Complete 'Treatment' Is Necessary.

Declaring the social survey of Atlanta which he and his assistants—Franz Schneider, Jr., and Zenas L. Potter—are making is city-wide in scope and not aimed at conditions existing among citizens of any one class or color, Shelby M. Harrison, of the Russell Sage Foundation, said their report to the Chamber of Commerce would treat of six subjects relating to living conditions in the Gate City.

"No information as to the exact nature of the subjects we are studying will be made public for a few days," said Mr. Harrison. "We must first 'get the lay of the land,' so to speak, before we can be more definite than to say we are studying living conditions in Atlanta. However, our investigations will affect one class of citizens as much as another. We hope to throw light on certain conditions supposed to be existing in the city, and will make recommendations in our report which we believe will remedy such conditions as we find."

Mr. Harrison declared their investigations thus far have shown that conditions in Atlanta compare favorably with other cities, and in many respects this city is in the lead. He praised the Atlanta spirit, evidences of which he said he found throughout the city—a spirit of progress and uplift which he intimated will make the work of carrying out the recommendations of the "civic doctors" easier and the results of the work more rapid.

Making "Pathfinding" Survey.

Mr. Harrison said the reports which have gotten out that he and his colleagues are conducting a complete social survey of the city are erroneous.

"Ours is only what we call a 'pathfinding survey,'" he said. "We blaze the trail for a complete survey if it should be shown that one is needed. By a pathfinding survey we hope to fulfill two missions—that of obtaining a diagnosis of the city's ills and determining whether a complete survey is needed, and indicating the lines along which a complete survey should be made and the probable length of time required to make it.

"It may be our pathfinding survey will be all that is needed, and that our recommendations will contain the necessary remedies for the cure of the 'ills of Atlanta.' In view of the fact, however, that more than 100 cities in the United States have felt the need of a complete social survey after the pathfinding survey has been made, it is reasonable to suppose that Atlanta also will need one."

Pointing out that a complete survey would indicate the ills of the city, Mr. Harrison said the social survey is not a cure-all and is not in itself an improvement of conditions. He likened the work of the social survey to the work of a physician.

Whole City "Doctored."

"As a physician diagnoses an individual's ills," he said, "a social survey seeks to diagnose a community's ills. As a physician prescribes a remedy, a social survey seeks to prescribe a remedy. If the patient denies the truth of his physician's diagnosis, or refuses to apply the remedy, he will have gained nothing by the treatment. So if a community refuses to face the facts or to correct the evils revealed by a social survey, then the undertaking will be without results. It will be up to the citizens of Atlanta, when the social survey has come and gone, to decide what the real results will be."

A complete social survey, Mr. Harrison said, should have these three effects in the community:

1. It should furnish a sufficient body of facts to permit the planning of a program of advance for at least five years.

2. It should, by informing the people of the city about their problems, secure for a program of community progress a widespread public support. Many a far-sighted public official cherishes a vision of what he might accomplish for social well-being had he the strong backing of public opinion. But often he finds the public indifferent, while a few selfishly interested people hamper his work at every opportunity. Public indifference is due to lack of knowledge. Public education on community problems is a survey's prime purpose.

3. A social survey may point out certain serious problems in need of more extensive study when the city is prepared to take them up.

Astor Buys London Paper For $1,250,000

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 16.—William Waldorf Astor, expatriated American, has purchased The Morning Post, long regarded as the society organ and sought after by several prominent newspaper publishers. The price paid is said to have been $1,250,000.

Mr. Astor is already the owner of The Pall Mall Gazette, an afternoon paper, and The Observer, a Sunday publication.

Mr. Astor has been trying for a considerable time to secure a morning newspaper to aid him in reaching the peerage.

Newspaper men here say Astor now controls the three most influential political journals in the United Kingdom.

American Colony in Palestine Prospers

BOSTON, June 16.—Jesse A. Yantis, representative of the American colony in Palestine, is here studying several classes of machinery which he hopes to introduce in Jerusalem.

This colony of Americans removed to Jerusalem in order that they might live as they believe the Saviour would if He were on earth to-day.

Has Counted Nation's Wealth for 50 Years

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Rounding out her fifty years of service in the Treasury Department, Miss Emma R. Graves, 84 years old, is the sunshine of the place.

For half a century Miss Graves has been steadily counting the nation's wealth. Billions of dollars have passed under her nimble fingers, and she has the record of never having made a mistake in the count.

She still occupies the position of an expert, counting notes which have been turned in to be destroyed.

USE OF CALOMEL PRACTICALLY STOPPED

For Bilious Attacks, Constipation and All Liver Troubles—Dangerous Calomel Gives Way to Dodson's Liver Tone.

Every druggist in the State has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason—Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is often dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," say druggists.

Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by all druggists who sell it. A large bottle costs 50 cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of sluggishness, you have only to ask for your money back. It will be promptly returned.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant tasting, purely vegetable remedy—harmless to both children and adults. A bottle in the house may save you a day's work or keep your children from missing school. Keep your liver working and your liver will not keep you from working.

STATE POLITICAL POT BOILS AT KIMBALL

Candidates for House Speaker and Senate President Open Headquarters.

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

The Kimball House lobby, where for years and years Georgia politicians most have congregated, and which still seems to be the undisputed Mecca of Cracker statesmen, real and near, already has assumed that busy and more or less agitated appearance so unmistakably prophetic of the annual getting together of the Legislature.

Headquarters have been opened for two speakership candidates, two presidency of the Senate candidates, and at least one new county, Candler.

Within the next day or so other headquarters will be opened, and other fights inaugurated. The clans unmistakably are gathering for the fray, and the forthcoming session bids fair to be one of great interest and far-reaching consequence.

The first new county proposition to get busy on the job is, as aforesaid, Candler. The boosters of this proposition say they have their contest well in hand, and they unquestionably expect to win.

This new county is to be made up of slices of Bulloch, Tattnall and Emanuel, all three large counties, and there is little, if any, opposition in the territory affected.

Metter, a hustling town of around 4,000, is to be the county seat of Candler. It is located in the western part of Bulloch, but is so near the line of the other counties that it is practically situated at the "corners" of the three, as is Winder, in the proposed new county of Barrow.

Every newspaper but one in the section concerned in the new county of Candler is favorable to the proposition, and the boomers of the game claim that they already have pledged more than sufficient votes to put their proposition over.

Outside the contests for the speakership and the presidency of the Senate, one hears more of these two new county proposals than anything else nowadays, and both of them—Barrow and Candler—look good to go through.

The contests between Senators John T. Allen, of the Twentieth, and Randolph Anderson, of the First, as to which shall be chosen President of the Senate, unquestionably is very much "up in the air."

Both men express themselves as being entirely confident, and both show figures to prove their respective claims. Moreover, both seem to be in dead earnest in stating their positions.

The average member of the new Legislature, however, seems to be very much "from Missouri" with respect to that race. The impression is that it yet is any man's race. Both Allen and Anderson are working hard and leaving no stone unturned to win out.

The Allen men are saying that Anderson will retire before the "showdown," but as the Anderson men are saying the same thing concerning Allen, how can one tell?

It looks as if a "showdown" of strength on the floor of the Senate, after Secretary Northen calls it to order, will be the only thing that will tell the tale accurately and to stay put.

One hears much in the hotel lobbies nowadays of tax reform.

There seems little doubt that it will be the paramount consideration of the new General Assembly.

It generally is agreed that the State can not travel much farther without more revenue, and to raise the tax rate is out of the question. Politically, the Legislature feels that it would be committing suicide to attempt to get the tax rate up, after any sort of fashion.

The only way to get additional revenue, therefore, is to raise the assessments and returns in such wise that the total amount against which the tax rate operates may be as nearly as possible 50 per cent higher than now.

This is a large problem, and will require the very best and most statesmanlike minds of the Legislature to work out. Whatever bill is framed along this line will arise in the House, of course, and it will be carefully designed to work as equitably as it may to all parties concerned.

The problem of taxation is one of the most delicate, as well as important, that the Legislature has to handle, and it is more acute this year than it has been in a quarter of a century.

Parties interested in heron production in Glynn County, particularly growers of the egret variety, are greatly interested in the news from Washington to the effect that the Department of Agriculture will undertake to develop a rooster of plumage suitable for substitution for that of the egret, now used so extensively in the aigrette millinery trade.

The largest colony of egrets in the world is located in Glynn County, and a great many people are extensively interested in the trade.

For many years, the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and the Audubon Society have protested against the taking of the nuptial plumage from the egrets for millinery purposes. The taking of the plumage almost invariably means the death of the mother bird, and the consequent starvation of her young in the nest. The aigrette plumage is to be had of the egret herons only while the mother's brood is very young.

"This proposition looks more or less like a suffragette movement," said a well-known legislator, discussing the matter of the rooster's plumage to-day, "but it looks fair and square, nevertheless. That's the reason I am for it. We should protect the egrets, or pretty soon there will be none left in Georgia.

"Let the national department proceed. I would not object to egrets fashioned from roosters' tails—if the women folks like them as well, far be it from me to put in a word for the roosters."

Society Off to Tribble Wedding

Atlantans Go in a Special Car

Miss Ruth Tribble, of Athe ns.

Prominent People From Throughout State to Witness Ceremony at Bride's Home June 19.

Atlanta society people are preparing to attend the wedding of Miss Ruth Tribble to Samuel Dick, of Atlanta, at the bride's home in Athens June 19. A large party will travel in a private car to Athens. A great throng of persons prominent in society from over the State will attend the wedding.

Miss Tribble is the daughter of Congressman Tribble. The wedding will be one of the most notable June marriages in Georgia. Both Miss Tribble and Mr. Dick are unusually prominent in society.

The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. E. L. Hill, assisted by Dr. J. W. Lynch, of the First Baptist Church.

Mrs. S. J. Tribble, the mother of the bride, will be the matron of honor. Miss Callie Hoke Smith, of Washington, D. C., will be maid of honor.

The bridesmaids will be Miss Jane Thrall, of Williamsport, Pa.; Miss Ruth Barren, of Philadelphia, Pa., and Miss Martha Phinizy, of Athens.

Mr. Dick will be attended by his brother, Mr. Jackson Dick, as best man.

The groomsmen will be Mr. James Harris, Mr. Wimberly Peters, Mr. Milton Dargan, Jr., Mr. William Manry, of Atlanta.

A reception at the home of the bride's parents on Milledge Avenue will follow the ceremony.

War Veteran, Aged 84, Father of Baby

ST. JOSEPH, MO., June 16.—William S. Coffield, 84 years old, veteran of the Mexican War, as well as two Indian wars and the Civil War, is the father of a girl baby, born last night. Coffield draws a pension of $55 a month from the Government.

Auto Has Red Flag; Chased by Angry Bull

SACRAMENTO, June 16.—A red Sacramento pennant attached to the rear of the automobile of H. A. McClellan, of this city, almost brought disaster upon himself and family when a bull attacked the machine from the flank on the road between Nicolas and Lincoln. By dodging and speeding the chauffeur managed to escape with a punctured tire which the bull gored with his horns.

GAY-COLORED HENS THIS FANCIER'S AIM

Laws Prohibiting the Killing of Bright-Plumaged Birds Furnish Inspiration.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Fowl fanciers and experts in the Bureau of Animal Industry are seeking some method of cross-breeding whereby the unattractive but useful hen can sprout plumage as variegated as Joseph's coat of many colors.

The activity of the experts is inspired by the stringent laws passed and in preparation against the destruction of birds for their plumage.

The bird division of the National Museum also has the matter under consideration, but it is inclined to believe that the evolution of the common hen along the lines desired is scarcely practicable.

"It might be accomplished," said one of the museum scientists facetiously, "by hatching the eggs in a dye house. It might also be accomplished by feeding the chickabiddies ochre, Prussian blue and other variochre, prussian blue and other varior other grain. One, you know, never can tell what might happen in such a truly scientific experiment."

The Bureau of Animal Industry, however, is taking the matter more seriously and is casting about for some solution of the subject.

Millionaire at 86 Weds for 4th Time

NEW BEDFORD, MASS., June 16. David A. Snell, millionaire cracker manufacturer, who is 86 years old, has just been married for the fourth time.

The present Mrs. Snell was Mrs. Janet Hamilton, of Boston, who for some time has acted as Mr. Snell's housekeeper. She is 33 years his junior.

Strike Big Gas Flow In Abandoned Field

COFFEYVILLE, KANS., June 16.—A 27,000,000-foot gas well, the greatest in years, has been brought in south of Wann, Okla., by the Kasigan Gas Company.

The well has a rock pressure of 550 pounds. The field is an old one, long ago drilled up, but all wells had stopped.

CARNEGIE HELPS KAISER CELEBRATE

Americans Greet Wilhelm on 25th Anniversary of His Ascension to the Throne.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BERLIN, June 16.—Andrew Carnegie, leading worker for word-wide peace, to-day paid his respects to Emperor William, the "war lord of Europe." Mr. Carnegie was accompanied by other American peace commissioners who came here to extend felicitations to the Kaiser as part of the quarter centennial celebration of the ascension of the Emperor to the throne of Germany.

Although yesterday was the real anniversary, William having ascended the throne June 15, 1888, because it was Sunday the secular ceremonies were postponed until to-day.

Shortly after dawn the massed military bands from all the garrisons in the environs of Berlin assembled in Unter Den Linden and a crash of martial music, which echoed and reechoed through the neighboring streets, followed.

Seven thousand school children joined in singing "The Watch on the Rhine" and other tunes the bands played. The streets were crowded with visitors from all sections of the empire. Among these were many American, English and other foreign tourists.

A mighty crowd gathered about the marble palace in Potsdam and sang the national hymn time and again. The wetaher was ideal for the occasion.

G. A. R. Is Ordered To Chattanooga

BRIDGEPORT, CONN., June 16.—General orders for the forty-seventh national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic at Chattanooga, Tenn., September 15 to 20, were issued by Commander-in-Chief Alfred B. Beers.

The fact is emphasized that a national encampment has never before been held so far south, and all veterans are urged to take this opportunity to visit the historic battlefields of Missionary Ridge, Lookout Mountain, Chickamauga and from Chattanooga to Atlanta.

Attention is directed to the Gettysburg reunion, the first day of which, July 1, will be veterans' day, under the direction of the commander-in-chief of the G. A. R.

Recovered From Severe Lung Trouble

Plenty of fresh air and good food are necessary to persons suffering from lung trouble, but something more is needed to bring about full health. Eckman's Alterative is a medicine for throat and lung troubles, and so many reports have been received showing that it brought about good results in a number of cases which were declared hopeless, that all sufferers who are not benefiting otherwise should at least investigate what it has done for others. Investigate this case:

Madison Lake, Minn.

"Gentlemen: In December, 1908, March, 1909, and September, 1909, I was taken with hemorrhages of the lungs which confined me several weeks, each time to my bed. My doctor advised me to go West.

"In November I started for Denver, Colo. After my arrival I met Michael Brody, who upon learning of my condition, urged me to take Eckman's Alterative. In about two months I began to feel better. I kept on taking the medicine and improved fast. In March, 1910, I returned home. I think I am entirely well, have a good appetite and sleep well. When I left Denver my weight was 130 pounds. I now weight 165, my normal weight. I thank God and your Alterative for my health."

Mother and Sons

By Virginia T. Van De Water.

"OH, it is pitiful, pitiful," exclaims Thackeray, "the boodless love of mothers for their children in Vanity Fair!"

The words recurred to my mind as I looked into the tragic eyes of a widow the mother of two sons. Her husband died when her oldest child was but five years old. She was what has been called "a born mother," with whom maternity was an absorbing passion. She had married at eighteen and was a widow at twenty-six. For years she had worked uncomplainingly to educate her sons.

There had been not only work but the sacrifice of many of the things in which women delight. She had not had time to go into society during working-hours, and in the evening she "did not like to leave the boys." She put them both through college, living close to them, spending her strength and youth in the effort. When one of them finished his university course he went into business on the Pacific slope. Then the mother's face developed lines of anxiety, still she smiled bravely.

"I educated him that he might make the best of his chances," she said firmly, "and it would be selfish for me to mention to him my dread of parting from him. And I have my other boy, you know."

Two years later her second son was graduated and went to South America as a mining engineer. It was soon after this that I called on the lonely mother. She had grown old in a few weeks. She began talking of her boys—calmly at first, then her voice quivered and broke.

Need Her No More.

"What is there for me to do now?" she asked. "I am no good to anybody. I have dropped utterly out of the old set and world to which I once belonged. I am too old to learn new ways. My one aim has been to fit my boys for the battle of life, but I hoped that battle would be fought near me. Now I am left alone. I would be a selfish creature in the eyes of the world if I were to try to keep my sons with me—for they have their own lives to live, and mine is done. They will never be mine again. They will sometimes come to see me, but they will never come as they used to come. They need me no more."

She is not yet fifty and feels that her life is done! She is one of the "Mothers of Men" of whom George Cabot Lodge wrote:

"Weep, mothers of men!
The hands of the world are strong to take
The lives ye bear for the world's sole sake,
To try their souls till they bend or break;
Your children vanish from out your ken—
Weep, mothers of men!"

It is all true, viewed from one standpoint, and yet when women dare make a moan like this the world calls them selfish. If so, then it is too late for the mischief to be repaired.

"The greatest kindness we can do our children is to teach them to be independent of us," remarked one woman sententiously.

The mother to whom she spoke flung her hands out with a gesture that was almost despairing.

"Ah, yes!" she exclaimed bitterly, "but good Lord! who is going to teach US to be independent of THEM!"

There is the cry of the mother. Who, indeed?

Never Lose Daughters.

Mothers of daughters claim that they never lose these, and their contention is true. Even after a girl marries she turns to her mother for advice and counsel, often loving her better than she did before she appreciated what women must suffer for their children.

Yet, for the mother of sons there is always the possibility of which our poet writes. How can she fortify herself against this misery? It can not be prevented—God help her!—but it may be made lighter. For she can be less unreasoningly unselfish.

Does this sound cruel? Such selfishness as I have in mind is kindness to the mother and true kindness to the child. No boy is better for knowing that he fills his mother's entire mental and spiritual horizon, that she counts all sacrifice for him as gain. The time arrives—unless he be unusually noble—when, in spite of himself, the sacrifice is taken for granted by him; he thinks of it as his due and makes a common thing of it.

Would I have a boy sacrifice his future to his mother? No, but I would have him consult her a little in planning that future, and he will not do this if she has not taught him to consider her wishes as well as his own. If two equally good opportunities present themselves, I would have him choose the one which will keep him near his mother rather than that at the other side of the continent—always supposing the one at home means as big a future for him as does the one abroad.

Wider Views of Life.

But we are dealing now with the mother, rather than with the boy. I claim that even when her children are more babies she should force herself to take an interest in things outside of the nursery. She need not neglect her children to do this. Indeed, she will give them better care and bring them up in a finer, broader atmosphere if she has wide views of life and knows what is going on in the world. And, as her children grow to need less of her personal care, she ought to go about and meet people and think of other things as of the needs and wishes of her offspring.

Blessed—thrice blessed—is the mother of men when those men remain near her. If they must leave her she can not escape keen suffering, but if she has filled her "world" very "full of a number of things" she may escape adding to the pain of parting and missing the agony of a desolate, objectless life, an empty heart and idle hands.

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is fishing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life.

Now go on with the story.

CHAPTER XXIX.

THREE days passed before Gordon Kelly heard directly from Mildred Deery. Her nerves shattered and on the verge of hysteria, she had been taken home by Gordon after the near-tragedy in which Cain was involved. She would not allow Mrs. Shephard to summon either of her parents from Atlanta nor would she permit her to call the nearest doctor. She was her own physician in the days that followed and she began by prescribing complete rest and quietness. That, she told herself, was what the most celebrated physician in the land would have told her.

Gordon talked over the telephone with Elmer twice a day, night and morning, in the intervals before he saw Mildred again. With Steve as the messenger, he sent her all sorts of little delicacies and rare flowers. Where they came from she could not imagine. Certainly he had not had time to order them from Atlanta or Chattanooga, the nearest large cities; in fact, she doubted if they could be procured anywhere in those cities. His thoughtfulness had not a little to do with her convalescence, following the shock of the encounter with Cain.

Mildred Telephones.

On the morning of the third day she awoke calm and even cheerful. At breakfast she remarked to Elmer that she would be ready to resume the lesson in French, whereat the lad exclaimed, "Oh, shucks." Soon after she went to the telephone, rang three times and listened.

"Is Mr. Kelly at home?" she asked, when the ring had been answered. Elmer, who was within earshot, though not eavesdropping, grinned.

"There is no Mr. Kelly here," came the reply.

"Wait just a minute, please," said the voice, interrupting. There was some confusion on the other end of the line and then she heard Gordon Kelly's voice.

"Good morning," he said. "Is this you, Mildred?"

"Yes, Mr. Kelly."

"Mr. Kelly, eh? You call me Mr. Kelly one minute and Gordon the next. However, I won't quarrel with you, because you have been ill. How are you this morning? I have been very anxious about you."

"I am feeling quite myself again and thank you ever so much for all those nice things you sent me and for those lovely flowers. Tell me, where in the world did you get them?"

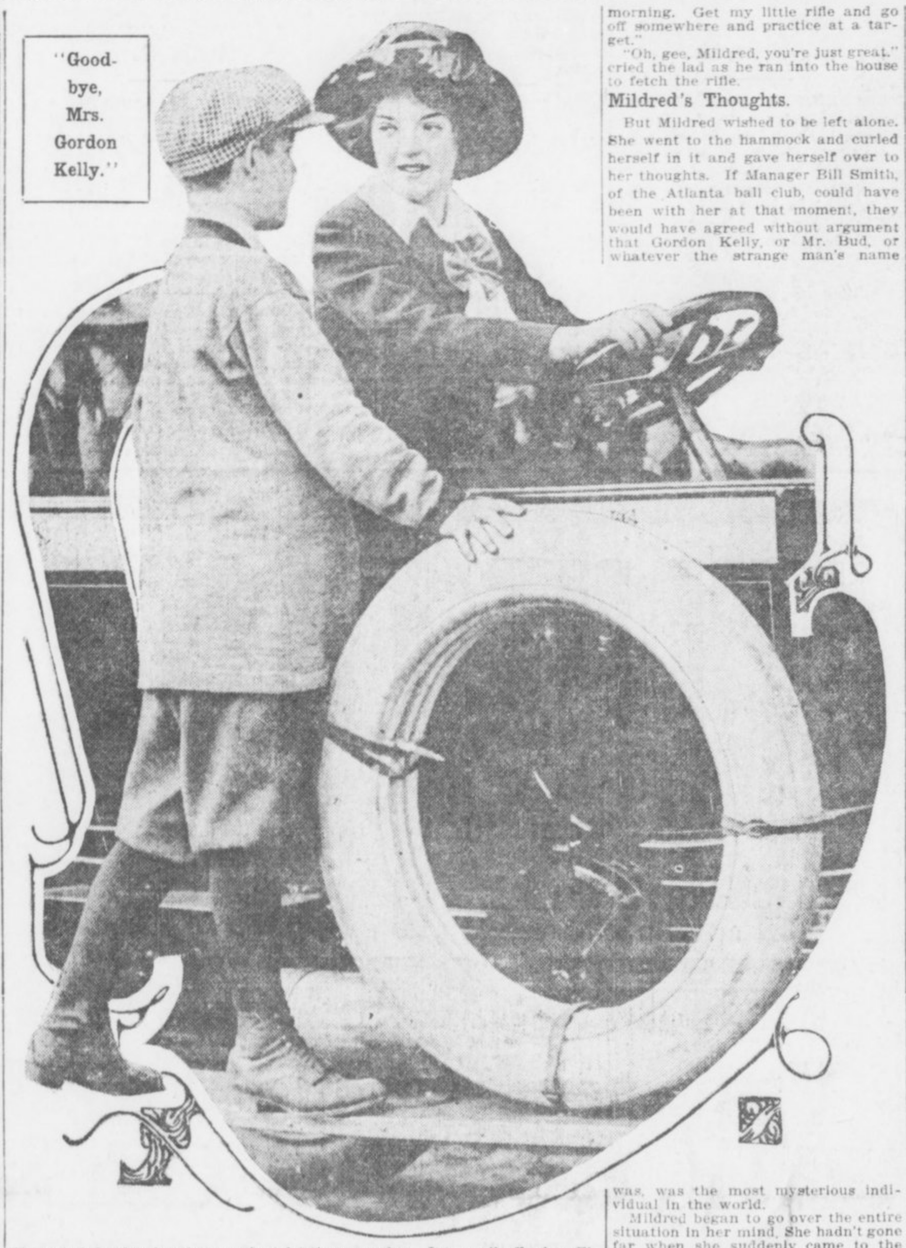
"The flowers? Oh, the gardener produced them when I made a requisition. The housekeeper produced the other things. I'm glad you enjoyed them."

An Engagement.

There was a brief silence, then Gordon said:

"Are you still there?"

"Yes," replied Mildred. "I was just thinking what a strange man you are with your automobiles and your gardeners and your colored genie and your housekeepers and your network of telephones away up here in the mountains, and your ball playing."



"Good-bye, Mrs. Gordon Kelly."

She heard Gordon laugh over the telephone. Then he said:

"Well, you know, the first time I saw you at your house your mother asked me about my life in the mountains; you wouldn't let me tell her and afterward, when I asked you why you did it, you said it was a secret. Do you remember?"

"Yes, I do, and it turns out a good deal more of a mystery than I had bargained for."

When Gordon spoke again his voice was lowered.

"Tell me, please; when will you feel well enough to let me see you?"

Mildred unconsciously lowered her voice, too.

"Why—I feel all right now. I'm not ill any more."

"May I call this afternoon?" he said, eagerly.

"Certainly; delighted to have you. But suppose I meet you?"

"Fine! Great! Where?"

"At—at—say at the bridge at 3. Now, good-bye; I must give Elmer his lesson in French."

If Mildred could have seen through the telephone, she would have seen Gordon slam up the receiver and turn three backward somersaults without stopping.

After all the threats, Elmer didn't take his lesson. It is true the books were produced and Mildred sat down at a table, opposite Elmer on the porch and assumed the dignified air of a schoolmarm, but that was as far as they got with the foreign language that morning. It was all off when Elmer said with a grin:

"They didn't know any Mr. Kelly up there, did they?"

No Gordon Kelly.

"What do you know about it, you little rascal?" demanded Mildred.

"I know all about it. There's no such man as Gordon Kelly."

"What do you mean, child?"

"I mean just what I say. There's no such person as Gordon Kelly."

"That's simply nonsense, Elmer; what in the world ails you to-day?"

"Oh, I got you buffaloed all right, Mildred. Ha, ha!" and he laughed gleefully.

"Elmer, you can be the most tantalizing boy I ever knew when you want to be. Now, look me straight in the eye and tell me what you mean."

"I'm telling you the truth, Mildred," said the lad, seriously. "His name isn't Gordon Kelly at all; it's Mr. Bud."

"Mr. Bud! Elmer, you're simply crazy. I won't listen to you any more. Take your books and go away."

"Now, Mildred, listen. I'm not fooling at all." Thereupon he told her of finding the telephone beside the brook and calling up Gordon Kelly and of his conversation with Steve, the colored boy. When he had finished Mildred tossed her head in the air and said, with decision:

"I'll find out what his name is mighty quick."

"When?"

"This afternoon. Now, I'll excuse you from taking your lesson this morning. Get my little rifle and go off somewhere and practice at a target."

"Oh, gee, Mildred, you're just great," cried the lad as he ran into the house to fetch the rifle.

Mildred's Thoughts.

But Mildred wished to be left alone. She went to the hammock and curled herself in it and gave herself over to her thoughts. If Manager Bill Smith, of the Atlanta ball club, could have been with her at that moment, they would have agreed without argument that Gordon Kelly, or Mr. Bud, or whatever the strange man's name was, was the most mysterious individual in the world.

Mildred began to go over the entire situation in her mind. She hadn't gone far when she suddenly came to the realization that she hardly knew anything at all about Gordon Kelly. She knew nothing about his family, his life nor his habits. He had been introduced into her family as Gordon Kelly; yet here, up in his mountain home, no one knew of a Gordon Kelly. They called him Mr. Bud. Who was Mr. Bud? Her father certainly didn't know him by that name. He had told her that he had met Gordon Kelly through Judge Barbee. Certainly the Judge wouldn't be a party to any deception. Was Gordon Kelly an assumed name? Was it an alias? Her father had told her nothing about Gordon Kelly's family—because he didn't know anything about it himself, probably.

Was his family "respectable?" Did he really own the property, or was he an employee or representative of the people that did own it? He might be a foreman or a superintendent. No harm in that, thought Mildred, but she would like to know about it.

Then she reviewed her brief acquaintance with Gordon Kelly. She recalled the conversations she had had with him in the few times they had met. The talk, she remembered, was mostly about books and music and kindred topics and the small talk that two young people would indulge in. It came back to her that he talked with great intelligence on music and art and literature. Surely he was refined and cultured. His family must be "respectable."

And then Mildred thought of Gordon Kelly the MAN—the tall, fine-featured, broad-shouldered, strong and powerful MAN. And her mind dwelt on his simplicity of manner, his kindness and gentleness and his prowess on the ball field and his bravery so lately displayed. And she was satisfied. She smiled contentedly to herself as she lay curled in the hammock. No, she would not break the engagement she had for 3 o'clock that afternoon, but she would find out all about the Gordon Kelly-Mr. Bud mystery.

"Make me look pretty, Mandy," said Mildred to her maid, who assisted her to dress when the time came. "I'se got a 'portant 'gagement fo' dis' afternoon."

She seldom allowed herself to unbend in dignity to her maid, but today she was feeling very cheerful and happy.

"Will you wear your tan dress, Miss Mildred?" asked the maid.

"No, Mandy, I'll wear the light blue; it's more becoming, don't you think so?"

Thus arrayed, she went out on the porch and asked Elmer to bring the runabout around. When it came she stepped in it and took her place behind the wheel.

"Good-bye, Elmer, see you later," she said to the lad.

"Gee, ain't I going, too?" said Elmer in a tone of disappointment.

"Not this time, honey; good-bye."

Before the car was fairly in motion the boy jumped on the side of it and, leaning over, whispered mischievously in Mildred's ear:

"Good-bye, Mrs. Gordon Kelly."

"You little wretch!" exclaimed Mildred, blushing furiously.

But she turned her head a moment later and waved her hand and smiled at him.

CHAPTER XXX.

WHEN Forrest Cain, lying unconscious in the road beside his automobile, regained his senses he saw Gordon Kelly standing over him. His mind was befuddled and he did not recall what had happened to him. Kelly prodded him with the toe of his shoe as though he was a dead snake and said, sharply, "Get up."

Cain rose slowly to his feet. The fight was all out of him.

"Walk around," ordered Kelly. Cain took a few steps. Kelly left him and joined Mildred and Elmer. "He is all right. Get in the car, please, and we will get out of this."

Without even another glance at Cain, the three entered Kelly's automobile and a minute later they were whirling down the road, leaving Cain, with singular indifference, to his own meditations.

Cain was sober by this time—sober, sullen and resentful. His right hand pained him. He looked at the back of it where the stone thrown by Elmer had struck him. It was crushed and bleeding. The fingers hung down as though without life. He felt of the bruise and winced. There was no doubt but that bones were broken. He cranked the motor with his left hand, entered the car and attempted to set the control into low speed, but found he had lost the use of his right hand. Reaching over with his left hand, however, he was able to manipulate the lever and then, easing in the clutch, the car moved slowly ahead. It was necessary to turn around. This was accomplished with infinite labor and finally the car was straightened out for the journey to Cain's shack. This had to be taken at low speed, however, because once the car started ahead he could not change the speed, as he only had the use of his left hand and could not take that from the steering wheel in order to change gears.

In gloomy silence he crawled back the six miles to his mountain habitation. He summoned his man George and commanded him to pack up. His campaign had utterly failed. He would go back to Atlanta to nurse his injury, nurse his lacerated feelings and plan some revenge that would settle scores with Gordon Kelly once and for all. While his man was busy packing he bathed his hand in cold water and, after pouring whisky on the wound as an antiseptic (and pouring a considerable quantity of it down his throat as an antisplenetic) he bandaged the injured member, swore at George on general principles and went outside to smoke and think some more.

In his three personal encounters with Gordon Kelly Cain had been badly worsted, verbally or physically, every time. Yet Gordon Kelly was in no way to blame in any case. He was attending strictly to his own business and had sought no quarrel with the man who declared himself his foe. This phase of the matter never once entered the mind of Cain. He only knew that it was through Gordon Kelly that all his troubles came.

At this point his sullen reveries were interrupted by the appearance of a tall, raw-boned, black-bearded man, dressed in the uncouth habiliments of the backwoods. Without a nod or any salutation, he made known the nature of his business.

"We done run out of matches," he said. "Got any?"

Cain was accustomed to deference from those he considered beneath him.

"What do you want with them?" he asked with a scowl.

"Ent 'em, mebbe; what's that to you?" drawled the stranger.

"Where do you come from?"

"None o' your damned business. Ef yer ain't got no matches, say so."

"You're on my property; you're trespassing," declared Cain.

"What do you all reckon you're goin' to do about?" observed the stranger in the same even tone.

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the twenty-four installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 25th installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

Man Who Loves Like a Pirate

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

C. C. W. writes:

"I am 27 years of age, and am desperately in love with a girl three years my junior. She is beautiful, accomplished and a leader in our social set. Although I have proposed to her three or four times, she still refuses to marry me. I feel certain that there is no other occupying her time, for if I had a rival I would unquestionably put him out of the way.

"How am I to persuade this cold-hearted woman to become my bride?"

Persuade her by storming her father's castle some dark night, and carrying her off strapped behind you on the back of your noble charger. That is the time-honored method of all swashbucklers, and it is the method that would most appeal to one who says if he had a rival he would "unquestionably put him out of the way."

It is not the modern way. It is not the sane way, but you are not modern, and I could almost suggest that one who talks of putting a rival "out of the way" is not sane.

It is a further mark that you are not wise that you call your sweetheart coldhearted. Because a woman will not yield to one lover doesn't prove she has a cold heart. In your case, my dear Sir Reginald, or Sir Launcelot, or whoever was the hero of your latest fiction, the cold heart of your lady love proves a cool head.

She will not marry you though you propose twenty times. There is something to you of which she does not approve. Instead of making over yourself, you keep on proposing, imagining that the opposition to be overcome lies not in your matchless person, but in her cold heart.

A Gory Love.

Yours is a love that reeks of gore and gunpowder. You emit fire from your nostrils when you speak of your passion, and would impress this woman with your daredevil disposition, your dauntless courage, and your untamed strength. I have known men who loved like pirates, just as you love. They became the kind of husbands who were afraid to go to the door when there was a ring late at night, and sent their wives instead.

You talk like a cheap hero in a book. It is the sort of talk that sometimes has telling effect on girls of 16, but, thank Heaven, the lady love of your piratical schemes and blood-thirsty dreams is 24 and has such a clear vision that she sees you as you are.

My dear, bold buccaneer, drop your paper sword, wipe the ink-red stains from your hands, cut off that fierce mustache and become a MAN. If you really love this woman, make of yourself such a worthy man that she will no longer spurn you, but will seek you instead.

Don't get on your knees when you propose, as did the heroes in your favorite fiction. Don't color your conversation with threats to carry her off bodily, slaying all who intervene. Stand on your feet, like a manly man, and tell her you love her in language that befits these most sane and prosaic times.

Your paper sword has failed to win. Try the better way of showing her a good, strong right arm that is ready to serve her through life.

Recognize the existence of a rival and know that he lies in this masquerade you have put on. "Put him out of the way" by all means by conducting yourself in a saner fashion.

Be a man and love as a man of 27 should love, leaving to those ten years your junior dreams and schemes that smell of gunpowder and gore.

By LADY DOROTHY NEVILL. .:.

A GRANDE DAME and leader of the social world during the greater part of the past century, Lady Dorothy Nevill, who died recently, was famous for her charm of manner, incisive wit, and brilliant repartee. She was the confidante of royal personages, statesmen, field marshals and diplomatists. At her receptions one met all the most attractive people of the day. Her intimate friends included such noted men as Beaconsfield, Gladstone, Wilberforce, Cobden, Bright and Matthew Arnold. Her greatest friend, perhaps, was Beaconsfield. He was always "Dear Dizzy" to Lady Dorothy, while he always addressed her as "My Dearest Dorothy," and their correspondence provides many interesting glimpses of this great Tory statesman.

Perhaps one of the best stories which Lady Dorothy has told about Disraeli is that concerning the occasion when a photographer asked him to pose for a photograph leaning on a chair. This at once aroused the indignation of Mrs. Disraeli. "I soon settled that," she said, afterwards, to Lady Dorothy, when relating the incident, "for I said, 'Dizzy has always stood alone, and he shall continue to do so.'"

"The Gorgeous Lily."

On one occasion Lady Dorothy, who was sitting next to Mr. Gladstone, was asked by the latter if she had ever heard Lord Beaconsfield express any particular fondness for the primrose. She admitted he had not, adding, "The gorgeous lily, I think, was more to his taste."

Referring to Gladstone, Lady Dorothy used to tell a story which is illustrative of the "Grand Old Man's" character. He was discoursing to her of the perfect immunity of English public men from all dangers of assault or assassination in his day, and all the time two detectives, dressed as footmen, were in the very room guarding him, while another was upstairs in the drawing-room ready to mingle with the guests.

It was Mr. Joseph Chamberlain who, talking to Lady Dorothy of female suffrage, once said, "Thank goodness, there are no female members. Of the two evils I prefer Parnellites to petticoats."

Lady Dorothy herself was equally severe in regard to suffragettes, for in one of her books she writes: "Heaven did not make women insinuating and persuasive that they might be peevish. It did not make them feeble that they might be imperious; it did not give them softer voices than man in order that they might rail at him; not delicate features to be destroyed by rage. Angry women forget themselves and the dignity of their sex, which has never gained much by scolding."

Lady Dorothy Nevill had a good deal to say about the change that has taken place in the character and the manners of women since her own earlier days. She considered the modern woman is spoilt, has too much time on her hands, takes up too many fads, and completely dominates her husband. This struck the old Shah of Persia very much. He said: "It seems to me that the English and American husband is nothing better than a sort of butler."

Lady Dorothy was particularly severe on the "smart set" of to-day. "The elite," she said, "are fast, flippant and smart. People are less interesting to talk to, less sociable, less brilliant in conversation, less interested in things." And as an illustration of the change in the life of a society woman, who to-day thinks nothing of spending $5,000 a year on her dress, she mentions how she and her sister were given a dress allowance of $250 and $200, respectively, by their adoring father.

She was also wont to refer to the fact that in her younger days parents were very particular about the matrimonial alliances made in their families, and she told an amusing story of one old peer who was greatly surprised to be told by his sister that she had developed a great affection for a well-known scientist of humble birth.

The peer sent for him and said, brusquely, "Now, sir, I should like to know something about your family."

"I think it will be sufficient," replied the scientist, who was of Semitic extraction, "to say that I descended from the illustrious blood of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob."

The peer was taken aback. "Oh," he said, "of course, my family has nothing to compare with that; therefore, if my sister really likes you, you'd better take her."

Leap Year Proposals.

This reminds one of another story which Lady Dorothy relates in one of her books concerning an East Anglican clergyman who was visited by a lady parishioner and asked whether he thought a woman might, in any circumstances, propose to a man. Much taken aback, the poor rector replied that he certainly thought there might be circumstances which would make such a proposal justifiable. Upon which, without the slightest hesitation, the lady exclaimed, "As Nathan said unto David, 'Thou art the man.'" And, seeing no possibility of escape, he was.

Speaking of the amusements of girls in her time, Lady Dorothy said that in the sixties, when old-fashioned croquet occupied most of her attention, it was supposed to be responsible for many marriages. "Are you going to make a flower-bed here, Thomas?" asked a young lady of the gardener. "Yes, mum, them's the horders." "Why, it will quite spoil our croquet ground." "Can't help it, mum. Them's yer pa's horders. He ses as 'ow to have it laid out for 'orticulture, not 'usbandry."

Lady Dorothy also numbered the late King Edward among her personal friends. Once, sitting next to him at dinner, he noticed she ate oysters with a knife. He made a humorous comment, and the next morning presented her with a beautiful case of oyster knives, and in the note which accompanied them said: "In remembrance of your criminal tendency."

A "Regular" Babe.

It was a timber law case, in which Tim Healy was counsel for the defense. In the course of the case a youthful witness was put up as an expert on the plaintiff's side. Tim got up to cross-examine.

"What age are you?"

"Twenty-one years."

"How long have you been in the timber trade?"

"Two years."

Tim sat down, saying, "A regular babe in the wood, my lord," which discounted the evidence of the youthful expert.

Their Married Life

Helen Is Made to Feel That She Is Too Exacting and Expects Too Much of Maggie.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"WHY, Maggie, this isn't a clean cloth. Look at this!" Helen pointed to a distinct grease spot on the damask tablecloth. "And here's another. Why, this is the cloth we had on for breakfast."

"'Twas clean last night, ma'am," grumbled Maggie. "That makes three we've had on this week. We can't have no clean cloth every night."

"Well, we certainly will when we have guests. Now, you'll simply have to change this, Maggie. You ought to have known that cloth wouldn't do for dinner to-night."

"I won't have no time to unset that table now, ma'am," obstinately. "It's after 6 already."

Helen flushed and bit her lips. Maggie was growing more and more impertinent, but just before a company dinner was not the time to reprove her. So with an effort Helen kept back the sharp words and began deliberately to unset the table herself.

It was late and she was not yet dressed, but having taken the stand that there must be a clean cloth, she had no choice now but to put one on.

The first cloth she unfolded was an old one that had been darned; the next had a claret stain. Both of these had to be refolded and put back. The third was badly ironed and was hard to get on straight, but she finally got it adjusted and began to reset the table.

As she replaced the silver she found that there had been only three forks by each plate.

Fork Missing.

"Maggie, you forgot to put down an extra fork for the relish," as Maggie came in to get a dish from the sideboard.

"We aint got no relish, ma'am."

"Why, I told you to open a can of those anchovies."

"We used the last can of them, ma'am, last Sunday."

"But surely there's another can." Helen went out in the pantry to convince herself. "Well, we MUST have some kind of a relish. Oh, here's that jar of anchovy paste! Make some little squares of toast and spread it with this. You've got a hard-boiled egg," glancing in the refrigerator; "you can grate that over it."

Maggie, who was whipping the cream for the berries, turned around with an angry flush.

"You're wanting too much, ma'am. That's fancy cooking. Cooks who makes them fussy dishes gets $50 a month! And you expect me at the last minute to drop everything and——"

"That'll do, Maggie. As soon as I can get dressed I'll make this myself. And if you think you can get a place as a $50 cook I'd advise you to take it."

Helen flounced into her dressing room. For her dinner was already spoiled. She could never enjoy anything after any kind of a scene. Her whole nature shrank from contention, and just to keep peace she had let Maggie have her own way for so long that now she resented everything she was told.

The fact that the girl was honest, economical and an excellent cook had made Helen put up with everything else. But now she felt that she would rather have someone more agreeable and amenable, even though less capable.

A Man's Job.

Warren came in whistling, which with him was an evidence of rare good humor. Helen ran into his room with a hurried greeting.

"Oh, I'm so glad you've come, dear. Can you hook me up before you dress? I don't want to ask Maggie—she's been perfectly horrid!"

"Humph! Turn around here to the light, then. What's this thing?"

"Oh, wait—that's the inside belt! I'll hook that. There! Oh, dear, Maggie's getting to be IMPOSSIBLE!"

"What's the matter now?" as he clumsily hooked the dress.

"She put a soiled tablecloth on to-night—and I had to change it myself. And when I asked her to make some anchovy toast for a relish she said cooks get $50 a month for making those fancy dishes. Hurry, dear; never mind the bottom ones—I can hook those."

"Here—you hold still! You wanted me to fasten this—didn't you?"

She drew away from his still fumbling fingers and darted out into the kitchen. Maggie was fixing the salad. Helen maintained a cold, disapproving silence as she sliced the bread, cut the crust off to make small squares and put them on the broiler in the already heated oven.

The heat flushed her face and she burnt her finger, which increased her resentment. Hurriedly she mixed a spoonful of butter, spread it thickly on the toast and garnished each piece with the grated hard-boiled egg.

Fortunately the Thurstons were a few moments late, and Helen had the dainty squares of anchovy toast at each plate before the bell rang. But now she was flustered and nervous and felt in no mood for guests. However, as Warren was in an especially genial humor, her silence and abstraction were not noticed.

"What is this?" asked Mrs. Thurston. "Anchovy toast, isn't it? I wish Jane would make things like this. A relish adds so much to the dinner."

"S-s-sh," whispered Helen, with a glance toward the pantry. "I had to make it myself. Oh, I've had a TIME with her this evening! I feel I'm just about through."

"Why, I thought Maggie was such a good girl?" questioned Mrs. Thurston in surprise.

Her Own Story.

"She is—if you let her do everything her own way. But there ARE times when you want things done your own way. Just to keep peace I've let her dominate me more and more. I'll never begin that with another girl. It's always a mistake—they always take advantage of it."

"Well, I should advise you to hold on to Maggie," was Mr. Thurston's comment. "We've had a devil of a time for the last few weeks."

"Oh, didn't you like that Swedish woman?" asked Helen.

Mrs. Thurston shrugged her shoulders. "We've had three since then."

"But I thought she was going to be so good? She was a working housekeeper, wasn't she?"

"That's what she SAID she was," grinned Mrs. Thurston. "But she wouldn't work, and she didn't know anything about housekeeping! Then we had a German girl. She was RICH! Tell about her, Minnie."

Mrs. Thurston laughed. "Well, we forgot to lock the wine up one night, and she drank half a bottle of cherry brandy. The next morning I had to get breakfast."

"That's one fine thing about Maggie," announced Warren. "We never have to lock up the wine or anything else. And our grocery and butcher bills have been less since we've had her than they've ever been before."

"Well, that's just what we're looking for," said Mr. Thurston emphatically. "In case you let her go, turn her over to us, will you? By Jove, the one we've got now is extravagant, all right."

"Yes, she's very wasteful," agreed Mrs. Thurston. "We've used five pounds of butter this week—just for us two."

"Five!" exclaimed Helen. "Why, Maggie rarely uses more than three."

"Three? We've never used as little as that since we've been housekeeping. We've never had a girl that didn't either take stuff home or feed a lot of company in the kitchen. This one has a beau that comes two nights a week, and she gets him a regular supper. But what can we say? We just have to put up with it."

"Well, I'D say a good deal." Warren's tone was emphatic.

"Not if you'd been through what we've been in the last two months," declared Mr. Thurston, grimly. "You don't know what a cinch you've got in Maggie."

Helen Uncomfortable.

Helen had the uncomfortable feeling that all this was tending to make her seem in the wrong. The inference was that if she could not get along with such a paragon of virtues as Maggie, she must be over-particular and very hard to please. The injustice of this rankled keenly. They only saw the best of Maggie; they did not know how trying, sullen and impertinent she could be.

The Thurstons stayed late, and as they were starting home Mrs. Thurston happened to glance in the bedroom. As usual, Maggie had fixed the bed for the night, taken off the counterpane and neatly turned down the covers. On the table was a fresh pitcher of ice water, covered with a napkin.

"Well, I call that luxury," Mrs. Thurston declared. "Look, Henry," calling to her husband, who was getting on his overcoat in the hall. "That's the way Maggie fixes their bed every night. Do you suppose we'll ever have the luck to get a girl like that?"

Helen flushed. It was only an added evidence of Maggie's perfection and of her own lack of appreciation.

Later, when Warren wound his watch for the night, he frowned over it thoughtfully.

"See here, we HAVE got a cinch in Maggie, but you don't seem to know it. You expect too blamed much of a girl. Great Scott, if you can't get along with her, who CAN you get along with? We've got a good thing and we're going to take Thurston's advice and hold on to it. Now you can just make up your mind to that."

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

"Cultivate Harmonious Surroundings," Says Doris Keane

Miss Keane's stage-room bower, and her favorite picture.

By LILLIAN LAUFERTY.

WITCHERY, charm incarnate, the lure of "the eternal woman," are to become living and tangible qualities through Doris Keane's portrayal of Margarita Cavallini in "Romance"—made real at Maxine Elliott's theater in New York.

Of course you have often read a book or seen a play in which earnest author and striving characters tell you again and again how charming is the fair heroine. All their insistence never makes it true! For the witchery of moonlight and the appeal of lovely woman are subtle things you must feel in stirring heart the while you see with rapt eyes.

But the Italian prima donna of "Romance" fascinates and bewitches even when you disapprove of the saucy jade—and at last she wins you heart and soul as with brimming eyes you sit rapt and thrilled the while she rises to the sacred realization of her woman's soul and pleads with her adorer, "Let me be good."

The curtain fell on an old man's dream of youth—or romance—and I was whisked back to the realm of glaring lights, of rouge pots and cold cream jars, of wigs and artifice, to visit our new star in her non-twinkling daylight environment—the dressing room.

All around me were flowered curtains and draperies of quaint old chintz—and everywhere, on stray shelves, on the dressing table, in free corners were glowing, fragrant flowers. And in the midst of this beauty and light sat Doris Keane still pulsing with the emotion she had felt the while she portrayed it.

Her Passion.

"You love beauty?" I ventured.

"I love beautiful surroundings and the personality they must develop," said Miss Keane. "You see, I have a sister—ever since our childhood I had known and felt and admired her radiant beauty. I knew I could never be like that—and one accepts the impossible serenely after a time. I accepted beauty and did not analyze it. I began to think more about personality and the power that brings.

"Ah, is not personality a wonderful thing! That almost all women can develop—the force, the magnetism that a rare and evenly developed personality bring are to me more lovely than beauty. Though, of course, the daughters of Eve do try to look as well as possible, to make that quick little appeal that gives personality a hearing.

"The most charming women have varying personalities. Do you know when I am most popular with myself? It is when I have a sudden realization that I looked like a girl of 15 in the morning, and that now in sophisticated evening clothes I look suddenly 'grande dame'—elderly even."

Of course Miss Keane would have some difficulty in looking "elderly," for, in spite of her well-bred poise, in spite of the keen power to analyze and appraise life that glows in the deep fires of her great brown eyes, Miss Keane is a girlish and appealing little figure.

In her Juneesque costume in "The Affairs of Anatol," early this winter, she managed to look tall and stately, in her present play she is an exotic Italian, but in propria persona Miss Keane is a brown-haired American girl whose earnestness of purpose and ambitious willingness to work add to the fervor of artistic inspiration and make her beautiful with a charm that surmounts mere prettiness of feature in a way that affords a little sermon all its own.

"Surroundings are so important," went on Miss Keane. "One evening recently a party of friends took me to a restaurant all done in heavy plush hangings and oppressive gilt. My personality was smothered, and I became a quiet, depressed creature quite different from the animated person I had been just before.

A Sure Sign.

"That made me finally sure of my theory. Surround yourself with fresh, clean, airy, wholesome surroundings. For purposes of stimulating mind and spirit a day in the country far surpasses a glass of champagne. The outdoors—trees, green growing things and a chance in nature and solitude to know your own soul are the most wonderful tonics I know.

"Isolation, solitude—a chance to 'ventilate my soul'—are the things I like best in the world.

"Since I was six years old I have known what I wanted to do in the world. That is young, perhaps—but ever since I can remember I have been working toward a chance to act—to interpret character. Women must find themselves and the outlet for their powers if they want to be happy—and whatever charm tragic beauty has, the loveliness of a happy soul working toward a goal is more appealing to the world—and men.

"But while I like men—the man is not come—I think for the actress who is afire with her art all else must be secondary."

I looked at those glowing brown eyes—alight with ambition, with earnest purpose, with desire to see deep into the great mystery of life—for Miss Keane glories in the vastness of life, and thinks to absolutely understand even one phase of it would be a splendid thing—as I looked at those fine eyes I felt that Doris Keane had told me the great secrets of spiritual beauty that can illuminate the face of any woman who desires it.

To rise above the tawdry plush and gilt facts of life, to "ventilate your soul," and open it to the loveliness of Nature, to find yourself and the outlet for your powers—to keep happily, healthily busy, to know ambition's spur, and to strive to grow—these are the beauty secrets of Doris Keane, who has not thought much about beauty—and yet has cultivated a spirit and charm that make her natural loveliness ever a greater delight.

WITHIN THE LAW

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intrigue and Love

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Turner, an orphan, employed in Edward Gilder's department store, is unjustly accused of theft and sent to prison. She is hounded by the police on her release, and finally goes to live with Joe Garson, a forger, and Aggie Lynch, a blackmailer, both of whom treat her with respect. Mary resolves to keep "within the law." She becomes the leader of a band of swindlers. Gilder's son, Dick, falls in love with her, and she marries him to be revenged on his father—and then finds that she is in love with him. Dick refuses to give her up, a demand made by his father, Mary disappears. Police Inspector Burke in an effort to aid the elder Gilder schemes to secure the arrest of Mary through "English Eddie" Griggs, a police informer. Garson plans to rob the Gilder home on a tip from Griggs. Mary hears of it and tries to prevent it, going to the Gilder home. Mary pleads with Garson to drop the robbery, and Dick enters. Garson kills Griggs when Mary corners the latter and he admits he is working for the police. Burke enters the house, a searchlight throwing its rays on the dead man's body. Mary and Dick are arrested, because Mary tells Burke that Dick shot Griggs in defense of his home. The District Attorney tries to quash the case against young Gilder. Inspector Burke obtains from Miss Helen Travers West, daughter of a prominent railroad official, a promise that she will tell something about Mary.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"I shall do nothing of the sort. Sit down, indeed!—here! Why, I have been arrested——" There came a break in the music of her tones throbbing resentment. A little sob crept in, and broke the sequence of words. The dainty face was vivid with shame. "I——" she faltered, "I've been arrested—by a common policeman!"

The Inspector seized on the one flaw left him for defense against her indictment.

"No, no, miss," he argued, earnestly. "Excuse me. It wasn't any common policeman—it was a detective sergeant."

But this effort to placate was quite in vain. The ingenuous little beauty with the child's face and the blue eyes so widely opened fairly panted in her revolt against the ignominy of her position, and was not to be so easily appeased. Her voice came vibrant with disdain. Her level gaze on the Inspector was of a sort to suggest to him anxieties over possible complications here.

"You wait!" she cried violently. "You just wait, I tell you, until my papa hears of this!"

Burke regarded the furious girl doubtfully.

"Who is your papa?" he asked, with a bit of alarm stirring in his breast, for he had no mind to offend anyone of importance where there was no need.

"I sha'nt tell you," came the petulant retort from the girl. Her ivory forehead was wrinkled charmingly in a little frown of obstinacy. "Why," she went on, displaying new symptoms of distress over another appalling idea that flashed on her in this moment, "you would probably give my name to the reporters." Once again the rosebud mouth drooped into curves of sorrow, of a great self-pity. "If it ever got into the newspapers, my family would die of shame!"

The pathos of her fear pierced through the hardened crust of the police official. He spoke apologetically.

"Now, the easiest way out for both of us," he suggested, "is for you tell me just who you are. You see, young lady, you were found in the house of a notorious crook."

The haughtiness of the girl waxed. It seemed as if she grew an inch taller in her scorn of the Inspector's saying.

"How perfectly absurd!" she exclaimed, scathingly. "I was calling on Miss Mary Turner!"

"How Did You Meet Her?"

"How did you come to meet her, anyhow?" Burke inquired. He still held his big voice to a softer modulation than to which it was habituated.

Yet, the disdain of the girl seemed only to increase momently. She showed plainly that she regarded this brass-buttoned official as one unbearably insolent in his demeanor toward her. Nevertheless, she condescended to reply, with an exaggeration of the aristocratic drawl to indicate her displeasure.

"I was introduced to Miss Turner," she explained, "by Mr. Richard Gilder. Perhaps you have heard of his father, the owner of the Emporium."

"Oh, yes, I've heard of his father and of him, too," Burke admitted, placatingly.

But the girl relaxed not a whit in her attitude of offense.

"Then," she went on severely, "you must see at once that you are entirely mistaken in this matter." Her blue eyes widened further as she stared accusingly at the Inspector, who betrayed evidences of perplexity, and hesitated for an answer. Then, the doll-like, charming face took on a softer look, which had in it a suggestion of appeal.

"Don't you see it?" she demanded.

"Well, no," Burke rejoined uneasily; "not exactly, I don't!" In the presence of this delicate and graceful femininity he experienced a sudden, novel distaste for his usual sledge-hammer methods of attack in interrogation. Yet his duty required that he should continue his questioning. He found himself, in fact, between the devil and the deep sea—though this particular devil appeared rather as an angel of light.

Now, at his somewhat feeble remark in reply to her query, the childish face grew as hard as its curving contours would permit.

"Sir!" she cried indignantly. Her little head was thrown back in scornful reproof, and she turned a shoulder toward the official contemptuously.

"Now, now!" Burke exclaimed in remonstrance. After all, he could not be brutal with this guileless maiden. He must, however, make the situation clear to her, lest she think him a beast—which would never do!

"You see, young lady," he went on with a gentleness of voice and manner that would have been inconceivable to Dacey and Chicago Red; "you see, the fact is that, even if you were introduced to this Mary Turner by young Mr. Gilder, this same Mary Turner herself is an ex-convict, and she's just been arrested for murder."

At the dread word a startling change was wrought in the girl. She wheeled to face the Inspector, her slender body swaying a little toward him. The rather heavy brows were lifted slightly in a disbelieving stare. The red lips were parted, rounded in a tremulous horror.

"Murder!" she gasped, and then was silent.

"Yes," Burke went on, wholly at ease now, since he had broken the ice thus effectually. "You see, if there's a mistake about you, you don't want it to go any further—not a mite further, that's sure. So, you see, now, that's one of the reasons why I must know just who you are." Then, in his turn, Burke put the query that the girl had put to him a little while before. "You see that, don't you?"

"Oh, yes, yes!" was the instant agreement. "You should have told me all about this horrid thing in the first place." Now the girl's manner was transformed. She smiled wistfully on the Inspector, and the glance of the blue eyes was very kind, subtly alluring. Yet in this unbending, there appeared even more decisively than hitherto the fine qualities in bearing of one delicately nurtured. She sank down in a chair by the desk and forthwith spoke with a simplicity that in itself was somehow peculiarly potent in its effect on the official who gave attentive ear.

"My name is Helen Travers West," she announced.

Burke started a little in his seat, and regarded the speaker with a new deference as he heard that name uttered.

"Not the daughter of the railway president?" he inquired.

She Displayed Agitation.

"Yes," the girl admitted. Then, anew, she displayed a serious agitation over the thought of any possible publicity in this affair.

"Oh, please, don't tell anyone," she begged prettily. The blue eyes were very imploring, beguiling, too. The timid smile that wreathed the tiny mouth was marvelously winning. The neatly gloved little hands were held outstretched, clasped in supplication. "Surely, sir, you see now quite plainly why it must never be known by any one in all the wide, wide world that I have ever been brought to this perfectly dreadful place—though you have been quite nice!" Her voice dropped to a note of musical prayerfulness. The words were spoken very softly and very slowly, with intonations difficult for a man to deny. "Please let me go home." She plucked a minute handkerchief from her handbag, put it to her eyes, and began to sob quietly.

The burly Inspector of Police was moved to quick sympathy. Really, when all was said and done, it was a shame that one like her should by some freak of fate have become involved in the sordid, vicious things that his profession made it obligatory on him to investigate. There was a considerable hint of the paternal in his air as he made an attempt to offer consolation to the afflicted damsel.

"That's all right, little lady," he exclaimed, cheerfully. "Now, don't you be worried—not a little bit. Take it from me, Miss West. * * * Just go ahead and tell me all you know about this Turner woman. Did you see her yesterday?"

The girl's sobs ceased. After a final dab with the minute handkerchief, she leaned forward a little toward the Inspector, and proceeded to put a question to him with great eagerness.

"Will you let me go home as soon as I've told you the teenty little I know?"

"Yes," Burke agreed promptly, with an encouraging smile. And for a good measure of reassurance he added as one might to an alarmed child: "No one is going to hurt you, young lady."

"Well, then, you see, it was this way," began the brisk explanation. "Mr. Gilder was calling on me one afternoon, and he said to me then that he knew a very charming young woman, who——"

Here the speech ended abruptly, and once again the handkerchief was brought into play as the sobbing broke to a moan.

Burke felt himself vaguely guilty as the cause of such suffering on the part of one so young, so fair, so innocent. As a culprit, he sought his best to afford a measure of soothing for this grief that had had its source in his performance of duty.

Her Voice Sank.

"That's all right, little lady," he urged in a voice as nearly mellifluous as he could contrive with its mighty volume. "That's all right. I have to keep on telling you. Nobody's going to hurt you—not a little bit. Believe me! Why, nobody ever would want to hurt you!"

But this well-meant attempt to assuage the stricken creature's woe was futile. The sobbing continued. With it came a plaintive cry, many times repeated, softly, but very miserably.

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear!"

"Isn't there something else you can tell about this woman?" Burke inquired in desperation before the plaintive outburst. He hoped to distract her from such grief over her predicament.

The girl gave no least heed to the question.

"Oh, I'm so frightened!" she gasped.

"Tut, tut!" the Inspector chided. "Now, I tell you there's nothing at all for you to be afraid of."

"I'm afraid!" the girl asserted dismally. "I'm afraid you will—put me in a cell!" Her voice sank to a murmur hardly audible as she spoke the words so fraught with dread import to one of her refined sensibilities.

"Pooh!" Burke returned, gallantly. "Why, my dear young lady, nobody in the world would think of you and a cell at the same time—no, indeed!"

Instantly, the girl responded to this bald flattery. She fairly radiated appreciation of the compliment, as she turned her eyes, dewy with tears, on the somewhat flustered Inspector.

"Oh, thank you!" she exclaimed, with naive enjoyment.

Forthwith, Burke set out to make the most of this favorable opportunity.

"Are you sure you've told me all you know about this woman?" he questioned.

Burke Was Moved.

"Oh, yes! I've only seen her two or three times," came the ready response. The voice changed to supplication, and again the clasped hands were extended beseechingly.

"O please, Commissioner! Won't you let me go home?"

The use of a title higher than his own flattered the Inspector, and he was moved to graciousness. Besides, it was obvious that his police net in this instance had enmeshed only the most harmless of doves. He smiled encouragingly.

"Well, now, little lady," he said, almost tenderly, "if I let you go now, will you promise to let me know if you are able to think of anything else about this Turner woman?"

"I will—indeed, I will!" came the fervent assurance. There was something almost—quite provocative in the flash of gratitude that shone forth from the blue eyes of the girl in that moment of her superlative relief. It moved Burke to a desire for rehabilitation in her estimation.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

CONVINCE HER THEY ARE FALSE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen and deeply in love with a girl of seventeen. Some jealous person told her false stories about me that she believes. This caused a quarrel. Please tell me a way to regain her affections.

B. H.

You must never rest idle under false accusations. Convince her of your innocence and let the matter end there. Let it end for the reason that you are too young to know what love is.

YOU WERE RIGHT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been acquainted with a young man for several months, and he has taken me out quite a number of times. The last time he called he wanted to take me to a dance, but I refused, as he did not notify me in time so that I could get ready. Was I right in doing so? Since then he has not called to see me. F. C.

You had the right of refusal, of course. If he is pouting because of it, believe me, my dear, he will prove a very uncomfortable friend, and you must waste no time or emotions on him.

Up-to-Date Jokes

The doors of a certain new house had shrunk horribly, as is the way of the modern door made of unseasoned wood. The builder would not send the joiner to replace them, so the householder tried the ironical method and wrote:

"Dear Sir: The mice can run under most of our doors, but our cat can not follow them. Will you please send a man at once to make room under the doors for the cat, and much oblige?"

Next day the joiners came.

.:. Lost Books That Caused Tragedies .:.

WHEN Thomas Carlyle had finished the first volume of his "French Revolution," a work which had cost him months of incessant toil and the verification of thousands of facts and references, he lent the manuscript to John Stuart Mill. Surely, that philosopher had one of the worst tasks ever allotted to a mortal man when he had to tell the "Sage of Chelsea" that the priceless manuscript had been thrown into the fire by a careless servant, and only a few charred leaves—still to be seen in Cheyne Row, Chelsea—remained to tell the tale.

Sir Isaac Newton was the victim of a similar catastrophe, but the "friend" responsible was not human, but canine—his favorite little dog. He left him in his study alone, and when he came back found that he had "chewed" the mathematical calculations of many strenuous months. Many accounts say that Newton took it very calmly, but the truth is that it preyed upon his mind to such an extent as to cause much temporary mental aberration.

One of the great losses to literature was the burning of six books of Spenser's "Faery Queen" which the poet is said to have left in his house in County Tyrone, Ireland. A rebellion broke out, and the place was burned; and not only did the poet's youngest child perish in the flames, but, it is said, also about as much of the great poem as we possess at present.

All lovers of Byron are aware that this erratic genius found time in his short, adventurous life to write his memoirs, and that on his death these passed into the hands of his friend, Thomas Moore, who, exercising a discretion committed to him, promptly consigned the manuscript to the flames.

No doubt the writer of "Irish Melodies" had very good and highly proper reasons for taking this decisive step, and it is quite likely that the publication of the memoirs would not, for obvious reasons, have been possible for many years after the poet's death; yet as succeeding generations have been brought face to face with the peculiarly complex genius of Byron, with its lofty moods and its many dark places, they have felt need of the light which only the records written by a vanished hand could have supplied.

Since the death of Auguste Strindberg, the famous Swedish novelist and dramatist—who, by the way, had much in common with Byron—many of his works have been translated into the English language and are already the center of heated controversy in literary circles. It is possible, therefore, that the powerful, if somewhat misanthropical, writings of this Swedish recluse may be read and treasured by generations to come. But all his works will not go down to posterity, for it is said that in a sudden fit of despondency Strindberg himself destroyed a number of his manuscripts, which, through lack of time or inclination, he never wrote again.

BUD ANDERSON PUZZLES COAST FIGHT CRITICS

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 16.—That the coast fight critics are not yet quite sure whether Bud Anderson, of Medford, Oreg., is a real fighter or only a flash in the pan is indicated quite clearly by the remarks of all the men who have been out there and have watched him battle. Some say that he is one of the wonders of the world and others are waiting to see whether he defeats Leach Cross before expressing a definite opinion. He is to battle Cross on July 4 in a twenty-round battle, and his standing largely will be determined by the outcome of that affair.

* * *

BOB LAGA, the old-time Chicagoan, who has been a follower of the boxing game for years and has handled some of the best of them, was in the city last night and had something to say of Anderson. "Whitey Bob," as he was known around when boxing flourished here, has been in the East scouting, but is on his way back to Los Angeles. He thinks Anderson is one of the very greatest of the lightweights, and if he doesn't get bigger nothing on earth but a serious accident can keep him out of the lightweight title. Laga bases his opinion on Bud's punching ability alone and nothing else.

* * *

"BUD doesn't look to have such a terrific wallop, but what he has is a short, stunning wallop that seems to have his opponents dazed right from the start," is the way Bob puts it. "He hits from a very short distance, but there must be a terrible lot of sting to his either hand. He surely will beat Cross in the coming bout, but it will be a poor contest unless Cross will go in and take a chance. Anderson likes to wait for his man to come in close before he hits. Cross is much the same sort of a workman, and there may be a lot of standing around and stalling in this match."

* * *

BOB further expressed the opinion that Ad Wolgast is all in and that it will be next to impossible for him to come back in the old style and do any good with some of the newcomers of the division. "He seems to have lost all of the old stamina and pep," Laga said. "He seems as anxious as ever to do battle and looks fine, but there's something wrong."

* * *

WHEN Leach Cross was on a visit here this week he was continually boosting his younger brother, Phil, claiming that the lad could trim any and all of them at 142 to 145 pounds. Leach was very frank to admit that Phil is a better man than he is, and said that when Phil was put in in a semi wind-up to one of his battles it always took the edge off Leach's contest. "Phil has the crowd crazy when he fights, and then when I come on it makes me look bad." Leach said. "I'd like to see him get a chance with some of the welterweights around here, for I think he is a champion sure."

* * *

CROSS is one of the fighters of the country who believes Joe Mandot is yet among the greatest lightweights in the business. "Though I knocked him out, it was more or less of a scratch and plenty luck," the little Jew boy said. "He led me a dog's life for nine rounds and I don't know of any fighter in the country I wouldn't rather have in front of me than this same Mandot. If they think he is easy they can have my forty-nine per cent of him, and welcome."

* * *

BILLY WALTERS, the naval station welter, is fairly screaming to get back into the fighting game. He has been beseeching his manager, George Dugdale, to get busy and George is now scouting the country for a likely opponent for William and a sizable purse to go along with it. Walters dropped around the other evening and his appearance bears out his assertion that he is in the finest shape of his career. Nothing would suit him better than a return match with Spikelets Kelly.

RITCHIE OWES HIGH STANDING TO AD. WOLGAST

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—A good deal was said about the inadvisability of matching Wolgast and Ritchie, but the expressions of opinion have simply been of an individual character and not always the fruit of sober reflection and a desire to be fair.

If Ritchie ever accomplishes one-half of what Wolgast did in the ring Willie's name will echo down the corridors with more of a reverberation than it is producing at present. Wolgast gave Ritchie a chance at the title when Ritchie had little or no standing as a fighter, and if pugilism were not such a cut-throat proposition gratitude should impel Ritchie to be as generous as Wolgast was.

If Ritchie had knocked out Wolgast there would have been some pith in the argument that the public would not care to see the two lads sent together again. But Willie did nothing of the sort. It was Wolgast's foul blow that made Ritchie champion, and that is why some of the sneering critics of the Far East tack the letters O. F. P. on to Ritchie's title. And for fear you don't know it should be stated that O. F. P. stands for Other Fellow's Punch.

* * *

BOB M'ALLISTER added one more to his collection of four-round decisions when he defeated able-bodied Sailor Grande at the Pavilion Rink the other night. But while Bob showed to better advantage than at any previous time since he turned professional, he failed to win golden opinion as a championship possibility. The punch his friends have been hoping for and waiting for is not in evidence yet and Bob showed plainly that it takes but a few rounds of brisk work to render him tired.

Of course, Bob's faulty condition may be accounted for on the theory that he engaged in very light training for his affair with the navy man, but the absence of the punch is not easy of explanation. It is beginning to look as though he is destined to gain fame as a clever sparrer and nothing more.

Sports and Such

ABOUT THE ONLY REAL tragedy in connection with the recent polo match was the spectacle of the profound experts of polo—than whom there are none profounder—trying to explain the defeat of the English.

* * *

THE ONE BRIGHT BIT OF polo comedy was contributed by Harry Payne Whitney, captain of the American team, who said that he objected to the "commercialization of polo" as manifest in the plan to have the players wear numbers on their saddle cloths so that the spectators might identify them.

It might be pointed out to Mr. Whitney that the commercialization of polo began with himself and the other members of the Polo Association in charging from $2.50 to $250 for the privilege of watching the game.

FEATHERS TO BATTLE IN NEW YORK ON WEDNESDAY

NEW YORK, June 16.—The St. Nicholas Athletic Club will stage a featherweight elimination tournament between six of the leading featherweights in the country next Wednesday night.

Matt Brock, of Cleveland, who is to meet Tommy Houck, arrived to-day. Kid Julian will arrive to-morrow. Joe Coster, who is to be Julian's opponent, is training at Brooklyn. Patsy Kline is getting in shape for his battle with Eddie O'Keefe, of Philadelphia.

TRENDALL AND MURPHY TO CLASH IN ST. LOUIS RING

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—Harry Trendall and Eddie Murphy will clash here in the star bout at the National Athletic Club Coliseum Wednesday, June 18. Trendall and Murphy will weigh 135 at 3 o'clock.

Murphy comes from Cleveland. He boxed a ten-round draw with Jack Britton at Kenosha, Wis., two weeks ago.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

CINCINNATI, June 16.—The Athletics look like the class of the American League now, and indications are the race on that circuit will be over by August. No club in the league, with the possible exception of Cleveland, seems to be able to stop Mack's team or even interrupt it. The supposed weakness in the pitching box has not developed yet, nor does it threaten to. Clever "Connie" is working his twirling talent with the foresight of a genius.

There is a psychological angle to the Athletics' great showing this year which should interest the fan to whom the spectacular appeals. Throughout both big leagues, but particularly in the American, a mania for sign stealing has developed, and the Athletics are the past masters in this art, according to the members of the other clubs in their circuit.

Personally, I believe the Athletics get credit for lots more stuff than they get away with. But they developed a new system of getting signs this spring which has baffled most of the clubs so far.

As soon as the batters begin being tipped to the catcher's signals, the opposing club generally catches on. Their sureness of hitting is an indication. Such a discovery starts a search of the source of the information. Many backstops, when working against the Athletics this year, have attempted to be so careful to conceal their signs from the men on the coaching lines that they crowd their knees right up almost tight together in the front when in the stooping position before the pitch, so only the twirlers can see their fingers. The result is that the sign shows out behind. The Athletics have been walking a little bit out of the line of march from the bench to the home plate when waiting to go to the bat and watching the catcher from the back. As soon as the man "on deck" awaiting his turn to hit sees a sign for a curve ball, he says:

"Take one, old boy!"

This may not mean "take one" at all, but it does inform the batter in the code that the pitcher is going to deliver a curve ball. If it is to be a fast one he says:

"Walk into one!"

* * *

A CERTAIN official in the American League was telling me a story the other day about a shrewd catcher who became aware that the Athletics were stealing his signals, but was worried because he could not locate the source. The official, himself, had discovered the means by which they were being tipped off, but it was none of his affairs to interfere, unless the other club complained about the waiting batters walking out of the line to the plate.

"They've got a fellow outside the park in that apartment house flashing my signs by pulling a curtain up and down," complained the catcher to the umpire.

Whenever a catcher cannot discover a source, he always looks for the tipping bureau outside the park, but that style of wigwagging is very much out of date now and strictly against the rules.

"Eddie" Collins was on first base when the catcher began to "beef" to the umpire.

"Now I'm going to ask for a pitchout, and you watch Collins," said the catcher. "He won't move off first base."

Sure enough. The twirler delivered a pitchout, and Collins stuck to the bag like a countryman in a big city to his bank roll.

"Watch that curtain out there now," continued the catcher. "I am going to order another pitchout."

Collins again stuck to the bag, and the curtain, by a strange coincidence, moved or appeared to move.

"What did I tell you?" exclaimed the catcher.

"They ain't getting them there," answered the umpire.

This discovering of the signs has helped the Athletics immensely, because they wait until they have the pitcher in a hole and he has to lay the ball over. Then comes the hit-and-run play, and away they go. Do not think for a minute that I am criticising the method. It shows that they are a lot of smart ball players, and it is regarded as being perfectly fair to take signs through quickness of eye.

Only artificial aids to detection are against the rules. And the fact that the opposing clubs always think the Athletics are getting the signs gives Mack's team an edge, whether it is true or not.

* * *

THERE is only one pitcher in the American League against whom the Athletics have no desire to be tipped off beforehand as to the probable pitch. He is Walter Johnson, of Washington. He has too much speed, and the most finished methods of sign stealing are not infallible. It ceases to come under the head of pleasure against him.

"I don't want anybody telling me what to expect when that bird is working," said "Stuffy" McInnis recently, referring to Johnson. "His fast one moves too quick to get out of the way if you are up there set for a curve ball. If it once hits you, it is generally too late for an ambulance. It is time to order a hearse."

* * *

WHILE we are on the subject of sign stealing, they tell a good story about the acumen of the Cubans when the Athletics went to Havana to play in 1910. The Cuban club had heard all the talk of the Philadelphia team stealing signs, so they decided to fool them by giving the signals in Spanish. "Connie" Mack immediately signed an interpreter to sit on the bench, but he was discovered after a few innings and chased to cover, even though he did have on a Philadelphia uniform.

PHILLIES' PRESIDENT IS NEAR DEATH AT HIS HOME

PHILADELPHIA, June 16.—William H. Locke, president and part owner of the Phillies and pacemaker of the Lynch League, is dangerously ill at his home here, and his players fear he will not live to see them win a pennant. Locke, it is said, is suffering from cancer and neuritis.

Before taking the executive chair in Philadelphia Locke was secretary of the Pittsburg club. He is regarded as one of the best posted men in baseball, having been selected to handle the business end of three world's series.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

OLD-FASHIONED BLEACHERS.

How dear to my heart were the old-fashioned bleachers,
The place where I sat in the ages gone by,
Where I could distinguish a ball player's features
Without a big telescope glued to my eye.
The bleacherite now, with a strong pair of glasses,
May sometimes distinguish a ball player's face.
He wonders who hits and who whiffs and who passes,
And yearns for the bleachers that stood by third base.

The old-fashioned bleachers,
The dust-covered bleachers,
The sun-beaten bleachers
That stood by third base.

We sat in our seats with the sun streaming o'er us,
And we knew every athlete who played in the game.
We cheered them or jeered them in deafening chorus,
And knew every man by his intimate name.
To-day we are scorned by the magnate's assistants,
Who order us hence with a frown on their face.
We sit in the bleachers a mile in the distance,
And yearn for the bleachers that stood by third base.

The old-fashioned bleachers,
The dust-covered bleachers,
The sun-beaten bleachers,
That stood by third base.

Christy Mathewson finally has awakened to the fact that the Phillies have a chance to win. This leads one to suspect that Chris has been reading the newspapers.

When Joe Dunn can negotiate a two-bagger without knocking the ball out of the park, it is a sign that he is developing speed.

Speaking of fables, there is the story of the ball player who kicks because he is not worked hard enough.

The press agent arises to remark that Jack Dillon is in the same class as Stanley Ketchel. Being as Stanley is dead, we believe said press agent.

Connie Mack may have done the American League a favor when he let Joe Jackson be delivered up to Cleveland, but he wasn't wise to said fact at the time.

Mr. Ritchie is willing to weigh a ton for Mr. Rivers, but when it comes to Mr. McFarland—that's something else again.

A motorcycle race these days generally results in a broken record or a broken motorcycle.

Joe Tinker acted like a rude person when he smote Otto Knabe on the features, but the thought of managing Cincinnati is enough to make any man feel rude.

No, Rollo, there is no truth in the rumor that baseball magnates will follow Mr. Mathewson's example and refuse to work on Sunday.

RINGSIDE NEWS

Ad Wolgast is certainly one popular fighter with the coast fans. Although Joe Rivers is a native son many of the fans out West were clamoring for the ex-champion to get the first chance at Ritchie. Ad's style of boxing, combined with his willingness to meet all comers when he was champion, has built up a large following for the "fighting Dutchman."

* * *

Mike Saul, who made his first fight last Friday in over a year, says he is after a return match with Terry Nelson. Mike seemed to be a big favorite with the fans and should be heard from in the future if he gets into good condition.

* * *

Kid Williams found Jem Kendrick easy picking at Baltimore the other night. The former handed the Englishman a terrific lacing and forced his second to throw up the sponge in the sixth round.

* * *

Tom Gibbons threatens to follow the footsteps of his brother, Mike, in the pugilistic world. Tom's latest achievement was a ten-round victory over Jack Denning last week and the latter is far from a slouch. Mike's brother is now after bouts with Frank Klaus and Jack Dillon.

* * *

In speaking of star middleweights why not mention the name of Jimmy Clabby, the veteran Hammond middleweight. Jimmy traveled to Butte, Mont., last Friday and handed Eddie McGoorty a fine trimming in ten rounds. Clabby was given a great ovation when the referee gave him the decision. The defeat just about eliminates McGoorty as a contender for the title.

* * *

Patsy Brannigan, the Pittsburg featherweight will get into action to-night. Patsy is scheduled to meet Young Mahoney in a ten-round engagement at Milwaukee, Wis. This will be Patsy's first battle since he defeated Matty McCue in the Brewer City about five weeks ago.

* * *

Abe Attell may get another chance at the featherweight title. A San Francisco promoter has offered the ex-champion a match with Kilbane on June 30 and Abe is expected to accept. The promoter has already received Kilbane's consent to the match.

* * *

Danny Morgan is just $350 short to-day. The talkative manager wagered that amount on Young Ahearn to stop Mike Gibbons and his protege took a bad lacing from the St. Paul sensation. He was stopped in the fourth round.

* * *

Chicago fans are betting on Jack White to defeat Johnny Dundee when the two clash in a 20-round scrap on Tuesday night. The Windy City fans think Jack is too tough for the Eastern featherweight.

* * *

Charlie White is tackling about the toughest boy in the lightweight division on July 4 when he hooks up with Jack Britton at New Orleans. Willie Ritchie, Joe Rivers and Bud Anderson have all dodged bouts with Britton. The latter is also credited with a clean-cut victory over Leach Cross.

* * *

Pneumatic boxing gloves were used at a Newark club the other night. It is said that the contestants struck knock-out blows with great profusion and no damage followed.

* * *

Local fans are still talking about the great showing made by Spider Britt against Meyer Pries at the Auditorium-Armory. Spider fought better than he has in months and outside of the first three rounds Pries never had a chance. Britt took all the blows Meyer could hand him and never winced. When Pries went down in the sixth round he was all in.

Willie Ritchie and Joe Rivers have started training for their title match at Frisco on July 4. Ritchie rules a 10-to-9 favorite in the early betting.

RUCKER MAY BE TRADED TO CUBS FOR BRESNAHAN

By Davenport.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 16.—There is a chance that Nap Rucker will be wearing a Cub uniform within the next few days, and your old friend, Rajah Bresnahan, may be seen cavorting about as a Dodger.

Can't tell, for stranger things than that have happened and there are persistent rumors afloat that a deal is on between President Murphy and Charles Ebbetts whereby Murphy's ten-thousand-dollar beauty will go to Brooklyn in exchange for the star twirler of the Brooklyn Club.

Putting Mr. Murphy right, right off the reel, he makes a vigorous denial that any such trade is even contemplated, but the tip came from Brooklyn Saturday to the effect there was strong talk of a trade.

Incidentally, Charles Ebbets is the man who is backing fire. Charles can't see Bresnahan for Rucker and would give instead Ragan, but Murphy is holding out for the big southpaw.

The boss of the Cubs waxed wroth when informed that there were rumors to the effect a trade was on and said, "there is absolutely no truth in the report."

Murphy After Pitchers.

However, there are many reasons for such a trade. Mr. Murphy has said right along that he was in search of a star twirler. "Not a youngster," said Mr. Murphy several weeks ago, "but a veteran who has been tried and found not wanting."

There can be no denying Nap Rucker answers the call. He has been tried several times and found "not guilty" every time. He is a veteran, knows every batter in the National League and has the enviable reputation of being one of the coolest, brainiest pitchers on the National League list.

Bresnahan has been decorating the Chicago bench ever since the season opened. He has caught very few full games, but Mr. Murphy says he values him because something might happen to Jimmy Archer and Rajah would be a valuable man under such contingencies.

Archer Best in National.

Archer has been working faithfully all through the season thus far. It is admitted all around the circuit that Jimmy is the star backstop of President Lynch's organization.

Murphy has Tom Needham and Mike Heckinger. The former is a seasoned veteran and there's many a good game left in Tom's hide. His work behind the bat in that contest at Muscatine showed him to be in prime condition. His pegging to second was on a par with that of any catcher in the business, and every fan who knows the Cubs knows Tom's think tank is fairly slopping over with good baseball common sense.

NEW ZEALANDER WINS FRENCH TENNIS MEET

PARIS, June 16.—The finals in the lawn tennis championship were played Sunday at Saint Cloud. In the men's singles, A. F. Wilding, of New Zealand, beat the French representative, Andre H. Cobert.

In the women's single, Fraulein Reike, Germany, beat Mlle. Broquedis, France.

The Germans, VonBissing and Kleinschroth, won the men's doubles from Froitzheim, Germany, and Wilding, New Zealand.

Miss Ryan, of California, and Max DeCugis, France, had a walk-over in the mixed doubles against Mme. Golding, France, and Wilding, the latter being too tired to play again.

NIGHT RACING AT 'DROME TO START TUESDAY

THE question whether Jock McNeil, the Scotch rider, or Wilmer Richards, the Texan, has the fatest motorcycle in Dixie will be settled Tuesday night on the shelving sides of the new Prince Motordrome, which will be thrown open for night racing at that time.

McNeil rides a J. A. P. motor. The engine was made in England and imported by the little Scotchman. He built up the rest of the motorcycle himself from parts picked up in this country. Richards has the famous "23" Indian, a racing machine of known speed, long record and bloody career, a machine that has been killing its man and breaking its record for several years past.

In Saturday's sport at the Motordrome McNeil and Richards met but once. That was in a five-mile final of the Speedway Sweepstakes. And McNeil won. But it was not conclusive. Richards, one of the wisest riders on the globe, was laying right behind the pack up to the finish. When he let out, he was showing more speed than any of them. But he did not let out in time. McNeil did a little letting out himself and held his advantage across the tape.

They should have fought it out in the Motordrome Purse, but the gasoline tank on the Scot's machine sprang a seam and could not be repaired in time for any further racing. Richards won the next race handily.

Oh, You Race Question!

Both men will meet in every regular event Tuesday night, and the question of supremacy of Texan or Scot, of Jap or Indian (and that's some race question for you!), will be settled.

It might happen, of course, that neither man would win a race, even if they settled their argument. There are several riders yet to be heard from.

For instance, Harry Swartz is due to show something Tuesday night. Swartz was handicapped Saturday by the fact that he had to fit new wheels on his machine at the last minute. His Excelsior has been used for road racing and was fitted with road rims and road tires. These were changed at the last minute, but Swartz had no chance to get his machine right. He will have it tuned up right by Tuesday night and as his machine is fast and as there is no better rider in America than Harry, he is likely to be heard from, LOUD.

M. Graves, of Los Angeles, is another who did not come into his own on Saturday. He is one of the really great riders in the country, but somehow he could not seem to get the greatest possible speed out of his Indian.

Henry Lewis, the Jinx Kid, can be counted on for more than he showed Saturday. His machine caught fire just before the meet and motorcycle and riders were put on the blink to such an extent that neither did much in the races. They will be heard from Tuesday night.

Glenn and Renel to Meet.

One of the feature events Tuesday will be a match race between Harry Glenn, of Atlanta, and Georges Renel, of Paris. On Saturday, in the match race, they finished so close together that the judges declared it a dead heat, though, of course, each man claimed that he won. Considerable feeling was stirred up over the thing and they will ride it over for a purse on Tuesday. Renel has been riding the boards for years and naturally should have a tremendous advantage over the Atlantan, who rode his first Motordrome race Saturday. It happens, however, that Renel can not get his machine going as it should and has not yet been able to develop a speed that will put him at the top of the heap. He believes, however, that even before he gets his engine right he can trim Harry Glenn, and as the Atlantan holds opposite views they will have it out Tuesday night.

The meet Tuesday night will start at 8:30. Tickets are already on sale at Tumlin's and Shepherd's stands.

CANCER ENDING LIFE OF FAMOUS QUARTERBACK

ROCKFORD, ILL., June 16.—Joe Hunter, famous quarterback for Northwestern University some years ago, who for three seasons was picked for the all-Western eleven, is dying at Los Angeles following an operation for cancer of the stomach. Recently he has been practicing law at Tucson, Ariz.

Vols Are Here For Three Games
Schwartzies Always Worry Locals

By Percy H. Whiting.

BILL SCHWARTZ, the well-known boy manager, and the Volunteer ball club of Nashville (Tenn., not Ga.) have arrived safely in Atlanta, and this afternoon will tangle with the Crackers in the first game of a three-game spasm.

Gilbert Price will probably get the assignment to hurl for the Crackers. Joseph Dunn will catch, as usual.

The Nashville team has had an exasperating way this season of trimming the Crackers, but there is a chance that maybe the tables will be turned this trip. If the local pitchers can stop the Vol batters it should be a cinch, but then you can't tell.

* * *

CURIOSITY as to the work of the pitchers of late prompts a comparison of the batting averages that Southern League teams have piled up in the last six series, with the batting averages of the same teams for the whole season. This is calculated to show whether the teams the Crackers have faced recently are hitting harder or lighter against other teams than they are against the Crackers. Here is the answer:

In the last series against the Lookouts Elberfeld's men batted .292 against Cracker pitchers. Their average for the season is .251. Score one against Cracker hurlers.

In the series before that, against Birmingham, the Barons could bat but .194 against Cracker pitchers. For the season the Barons are batting .209. Score one for the local hurlers.

Against Chattanooga in the last series here the Lookouts were held to an average of .219. This was another verdict for the pitchers.

In the one-game series with Montgomery the Billiken batters were held down to a mark of .217, which was still another victory for the hurlers.

In the series before the pitchers held the Vols to a batting average of .200, compared with .232 for the entire season.

Of course such comparisons are not conclusive. A pitcher may allow only one hit in a game but may walk so many that he loses. Three bases on balls followed by a home run will lose a lot of ball games for a pitcher, even if the rest of his string is shut-out stuff.

At the same time hits count and this comparison here given shows that the opponents of the Crackers are not hammering the heads off the local men.

All the Atlanta pitchers need now is to steady down a bit. If they do it the rest will be easy.

* * *

THE batting figures show the Crackers a great scoring machine. They have a higher batting average and have not only made more hits in each game but also an average of more runs to the game than any other club in the league. The Crackers have averaged 4 1357-1596 runs to a game, the Gulls have averaged 4 1215-1594, giving them the worst of it by a trifling matter of 142-1596ths of a run.

The leaders in the various batting and scoring departments are:

Gulls best 2-base hitters, with 78.

Montgomery the leading 3-base hitters, with 39.

Mobile the best home-run smashers (thanks to fences and the fact that the Gulls have played more games than the Crackers) with 13.

In total bases the Gulls lead, but this is owing to the fact that they have played more games. The Crackers have averaged the amazing amount of 12 total bases per game, the Gulls only 11.

One thing that is enabling the Gulls to run away with the pennant is their advantage in base stealing. They have 127 stolen bases thus far, to the Crackers' 58. Five Southern League clubs lead the Crackers in base stealing, despite the fact that no team in the league puts so many men on first.

Here are the batting figures for the league:

Frank Fails to Get Two Billiken Players

MEMPHIS, TENN., June 16.—Manager Frank, of New Orleans, will not get players Bagby and Kutina, now the property of the Montgomery club. The controversy between these two clubs came to an end yesterday, when President Kavanaugh of the league ruled that while President Jones, of Montgomery, was guilty of a moral obligation, the evidence at hand did not warrant awarding Frank the players.

Frank did not propose the deal, as was generally supposed. On the other hand, Jones took the initiative. Here are the telegrams on which the league's executive based his decision:

Jones wired Frank:

Will you give Snedecor and $750 for Bagby and Kutina?

Frank came back:

We accept your proposition.

To which Jones returned:

I made an inquiry, not a proposition.

Seven Batters Are Bunched in Race

The race for batting leadership in the Southern League this year is better than the Southland has known for years. Seven players are bunched, neck and neck, and they swap positions almost daily.

Including Sunday's games in the figuring Long still holds the lead, with D. Robertson a great second and Elberfeld third by an eyelash. In the second division Welchonce, Knisely, Sloan and Wally Smith are right in a heap.

Here are the averages to date:

Player—	A.B.	H.	Pct.
Long	223	80	.358
Robertson	205	72	.351
Elberfeld	195	68	.349
Welchonce	224	77	.329
Knisely	127	41	.323
Sloan	232	75	.323
W. Smith	209	66	.316

Stomach Catch is Latest Fad
Maranville Does Not Use Hands

By Charles Dryden.

CHICAGO, June 16.—Among the other special attractions now with the Braves may be mentioned Mr. Maranville, the liliputian shortstop who catches pop flies in the pit of his stomach with little or no assistance from his hands. Mr. Maranville wears no cuffs or false mustache with which to deceive the eyeball, and he makes these catches while facing the spectators. Should he attempt to make a similar catch while running with the ball it might lead to a crack on the coco unless Mr. M. arrived in time to get the range or angle of the descending pill and back up a step or two. For many years athletes have employed the stomach while traveling from bag to bag, but until the advent of Mr. Maranville we do not remember one who used his bread basket in the manner described.

* * *

JIM LAVENDER is able to explain, out of one side of his mouth, how he happened to stop a line drive with his chin in the battle against the Muscatangs. It was a new pill, white and clean, and the smash traveled in line with a large lady sitting in the grandstand and wearing a white shirtwaist. Lavender did not see the ball until it cracked him on the point of the jaw and dropped at his feet. After throwing the batter out Jim clawed around in the grass and picked up a small white object which he carried to the bench under the impression that it was a tooth. The object was Mr. Lavender's wad of chewing gum, which was jarred from his gills by the impact of the blow on the chin. Sooner or later the world's greatest spitballers meet with disaster. Either they lose their arms, their stuff or their chewing wax. Life is one dodgasted thing after another.

* * *

THROUGH the kindness of Charles Cooper Fraser, formerly of this city, and the courtesy of C. Williams, who carried the clipping from Muscatine, we are able to present in this issue a few epigrams from the Cedar Rapids, Iowa, score card:

Colt Hofer was 19 Saturday. As Colt has the smoke and all other pitching stuff, Pa Hill is excused for robbing the cradle.

All the Rabbits need is a little more pep in yelling. The noise helps with the fighting spirit.

Hyzer was released yesterday because he was minus the guts while at bat.

UMPIRE SWATS MERKLE OVER BEAN WITH MASK

ZANESVILLE, OHIO, June 16.—In an exciting exhibition game here Sunday afternoon between the New York Nationals and the local Interstate League team, the Giants won by the score of 5 to 4, although Umpire Frank Newhouse, of the International League, declared the game forfeited to Zanesville 9 to 0, following his fight with Merkle, of the Giants.

Merkle in the eighth objected to Newhouse's decision on a close play at first and finally made a pass at the umpire. Newhouse hit the New York first baseman over the head with his mask and brought blood from the gash, then ordered him from the game. Merkle refused to go and the umpire then forfeited the game to Zanesville, 9 to 0. Manager Marty Hogan, of the locals, however, ordered the game continued and he himself acted as umpire.

LEDOUX ARRIVES ON COAST; WILL MEET EDDIE CAMPI

LOS ANGELES, June 16.—Charley Ledoux, bantamweight champion of France, accompanied by his manager, Frank Galvin, and Trainer Joe Smith, arrived in Los Angeles last night.

Ledoux is matched to box Eddie Campi 20 rounds before the Pacific Athletic Club, at Vernon, a week from to-morrow night.

TENNIS TOURNEY DRAWS EXPERTS TO CLUB COURTS

Georgia tennis cracks gathered at the Piedmont Driving Club Monday for the first rounds of the ninth annual State tournament, which will continue all the week.

Drawings for the matches were made early in the day and the players settled down to work. Perhaps the best tennis seen in years is expected on the club courts in this tournament.

A three-year trophy is offered for the winner in men's singles. Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, has won it twice and now defends it. A third victory will give him permanent possession. Dr. Karl F. Little also has won it twice, while those who have once held it include G. V. Angier, Jr., Frank T. Payne, Eden T. Taylor and E. V. Carter, Jr.

E. V. Carter, Jr., and E. S. Mansfield, champions in doubles last year, will defend their championship this season.

Frank Reynolds is refereeing the play.

HANNES KOLMHMAINEN IS REINSTATED BY A. A. U.

NEW YORK, June 16.—The registration committee of the Metropolitan Association, a branch of the A. A. U., have reinstated Hannes Kolehmainen, who was suspended Thursday for failing to send in a report of his expenses at a meet. The Finnish runner is now in Duluth, Minn.

Colorado Is Bigger than Imagination

The brush of fancy can't paint upon the canvas of the mind as wonderfully as nature's titanic hands have built here in the birth-spot of the mighty Rockies.

But Colorado is a condition as well as a picture. You'll not only see a country different from any under the stars, but you'll be a different human the moment you stand in the shadows of her majestic ranges and bathe your worn and sluggish city-dulled being in the vital, sparkling, clean, clear, sweet air of the great American Highlands.

Poultry, Pet and Live Stock

Adjoining States Ship Millions Poultry and Eggs to Ga. Annually

Current News of the Poultry World. Northern Pacific Ry. Has Poultry Farm for Dining Car Use.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

Recent reports go to show that Georgia is having shipped in principally from Tennessee about $4,000,000 worth of poultry and eggs annually. While her adjoining State, Tennessee, from whom she buys, is producing and shipping annually over $20,000,000 worth. It seems that no other State in the Union has made such rapid strides in the development of the poultry business commercially as has Tennessee. There seems to be a lot of wide-awake farmers and stock raisers up there who have gotten the work to going, and it is spreading like wildfire. A hint to the wise should be sufficient to get things going like that down here—keep the money at home at least, if no more.

One of Swift & Co.'s superintendents reports that within a radius of 60 miles of Ottumwa, Iowa, that eight to twelve cars of poultry are shipped weekly, and quite frequently 100 to 300 fowls are received from one farmer at a time. And it must be remembered that land in that section is worth from $125 to $175 per acre, and its value depends upon its producing capacity. It looks a good deal like poultry was a pretty good asset.

The railroads usually get into the good things as well as common folks do. They not only own tracts of land, but they are going to make something out of it, too. For three years the Northern Pacific has maintained a poultry farm at Kent, Wash., not far from Seattle, where they maintain over 10,000 White Leghorn hens, producing on an average 150 dozen eggs a day for use on their dining cars. The railway is also securing the milk for these cars from 300 fine thoroughbred cows kept in the same locality, but upon a different farm.

They maintain a large bakery in Seattle and one in St. Paul to furnish their cars with bread, cakes and pies of the finest kind. They evidently intend that the people shall be supplied from first hands with the best of supplies.

The managers of The Poultry Item, one of the leading poultry journals of this country, are getting ready to put on another of their annual mid-summer continuous poultry exhibitions at Atlantic City.

It will last throughout the great tourist season at this popular resort. This will be the second one of the series, they having had one there last summer during July and August. It is put on for the purpose of advertising, both the promoters and the different varieties of exhibition stock will be there. It will be open to every one, and in addition to the displays of poultry there will be incubators and brooders in operation; various kinds of coops, houses and appliances of various kinds that are of value and interest to the average poultry keeper, either large or small.

There is no question that it will be the means of getting these goods before more and a greater variety of humanity than almost any way a person could conceive. Let the good work go on, for the masses certainly need the information.

The disease known as "gapes," and from which thousands of young chicks suffer and die annually, particularly in localities where the land is a heavy clay soil and the water does not get away quickly.

This kind of soil becomes infested with the larvae which produces the little red worms that get into the wind-pipe of the little fellows and choke them to death. Professor H. Garman, of the Kentucky Station, has been experimenting along this line by putting a bunch of chickens on a tight board floor for some three weeks when first hatched. Another lot of the same hatching was allowed to run on the ground, and in the wet grass. The ones kept on the floor had no traces of the trouble, while among those allowed the run of the land suffered greatly, and while some died, others had to be treated with the horsehair loop to remove the clot of worms. This should be a tip to poultry raisers who live in localities where they are so troubled—and upon which poultry has been kept for generations and not been plowed or turned over.

A Mother's Work and Her Hopes

An Editorial Written Especially for Men and Boys

(Copyright, 1913)

This editorial is not written for women. It is written for MEN, and for boys; for the millions who fail to appreciate the work that mothers do, for the millions that ignore the self-sacrifice and devotion upon which society is based.

On a hot night, in the dusty streets of a dirty city, you see hundreds of women sitting on porches, TAKING CARE OF BABIES.

In lonesome farm houses, far out on monotonous plains, with the late sun setting on a long day of hard work, you find women, cheerful and persevering, TAKING CARE OF BABIES.

In the middle of the night, in earliest morning, when MEN sleep, all over the world, in ice huts North, in Southern tents, in big houses and in dingy tenements, you find women awake, cheerfully and gladly TAKING CARE OF BABIES.

We respect and praise the man selfishly working for himself.

If he builds up a great industry and a great personal fortune, we praise him.

If he risks his life for personal glory and for praise, we praise him.

If he shows courage even in saving his own carcass from destruction, we praise him.

There was never a man whose courage, or devotion, could be compared with that of a woman caring for her baby.

The mother's love is unselfish, and it has no limit this side of the grave.

You will find ONE man in a thousand who will risk his life for a cause.

You will find a THOUSAND women in a thousand who will risk their lives for their babies.

Everything that a man has and is he owes to his mother. From her he gets health, brain, encouragement, moral character, and ALL his chances of success.

How poorly the mother's service is repaid by men individually, and by society as a whole!

The individual man feels that he has done much if he gives sufficient money and a LITTLE attention to her who brought him from nothingness into life and sacrificed her sleep and youth and strength for his sake.

Society, the aggregate of human beings, feels that its duty is done when a few hospitals are opened for poor mothers, and a little medicine doled out in cold-hearted fashion to the sick child.

Fortunately, it may truly be said that the great man is almost always appreciative of his greater mother.

Napoleon was cold, jealous of other men, monumentally egotistical when comparing himself with other sons of women. But he reverenced and appreciated the noble woman who bore him, lived for him, and watched over him to the end. He said:

"It is to my mother, to her good principles, that I owe my success and all I have that is worth while. I do not hesitate to say that the future of the child depends on the mother."

The future of the individual child depends on the individual mother, and the future of the race depends on the mothers of the race.

Think what has been done for mankind by thousands of millions of perfectly devoted mothers.

Every mother is entirely DEVOTED, entirely HOPEFUL, entirely CONFIDENT that no future is too great for her baby's deserts.

The little head—often hopelessly ill-shaped—rolls about feebly on the thin neck devoid of muscles. The toothless gums chew whatever comes along. The wondering eyes look feebly, aimlessly about, without focus or concentration. The future human being, to the cold-blooded onlooker, is a useless little atom added to the human sea of nonentity.

But to the mother that baby is the marvel of all time. There is endless meaning in the first mumblings, endless soul in the senile, baby smile, unlimited possibilities in the knobby forehead and round, hairless head. She sees in the future of the baby responsibilities of government, and feels that one so perfectly lovely must eventually be acclaimed ruler by mankind.

As a result of perfect confidence in its future, the mother gives to every baby perfect devotion, perfect and affectionate moral education. Each child begins life inspired by the most beautiful example of altruism and self-sacrifice.

Kindness has gradually taken the place of brutality among human beings, because every baby at its birth has found itself surrounded by absolute kindness.

The mother's kindness forms moral character.

The mother's confidence and encouragement stimulate ambition and inspire courage.

The mother's patient watchfulness gives good health, and fights disease when it comes.

The mother's wrathful protection shields the child from the stern and dwarfing severity of fathers.

Truly, a man may and should be judged by his feeling toward his own mother, and toward the mothers of other men—of ALL MEN.

In the character of Christ, whose last earthly thought on Golgotha was for His Mother, as in the character of the hard-working, ignorant man whose earnings go to make his mother comfortable, the most beautiful trait is devotion to the mother who suffers and works for her children, from the hours that precede their birth through all the years that they spend on earth together.

Honor thy father and THY MOTHER.

And honor the mothers of other men. Make their task easier through fair payment of the men who support the children, through good public schools for their children, through respectful treatment of ALL women.

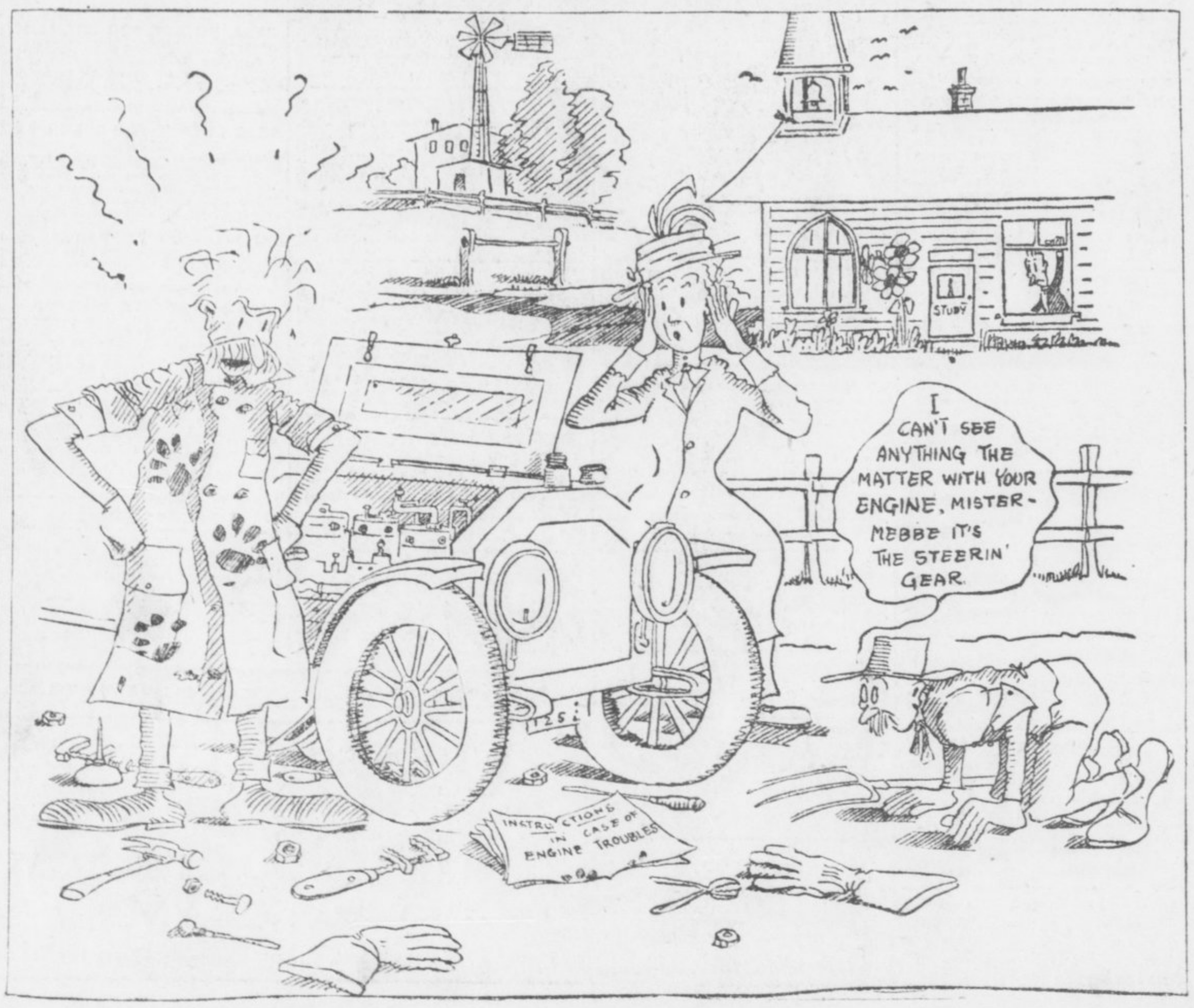
The mother is happy. For she knows "the deep joy of loving some one else more than herself."

You honor yourself, and prove yourself worthy of a good mother and of final success, when you do something for the mothers of the world.

There IS a Conspiracy Against This Man

Many a time you hear a young man say there's a conspiracy in his office to keep him from advancing. Usually he's right. There IS a conspiracy, and the conspirators are his baser selves. When the young man in the picture loafs at his work; when he drinks; when he stays up all night gambling—he's heading the conspiracy against his own success. And that's the only sort of conspiracy that can ever keep a man from his goal.

Mr. Suburbs Merely Forgot the Gasoline



Reprinted From the New York Evening Journal.

The Progress and Prosperity of Los Angeles a Triumph of Intelligence and Independence

NEWS articles have been circulated in the East concerning the late election in Los Angeles, containing statements which are not justified by the facts.

These misstatements have emanated from the newspapers of a certain political leader or boss of Los Angeles, who was defeated in the late election and who has attempted to excuse himself and explain his own defeat by an attack upon the electorate of Los Angeles.

As a matter of fact, Los Angeles has voted in this election with its usual good sense and good judgment, with its customary progressive spirit and high morality.

Mr. Rose, the newly elected Mayor, has had an excellent career as a judge, is a man of experience in politics and of sterling character as a citizen. He will give Los Angeles the efficient, honest, progressive administration that the intelligent and public-spirited citizens of that city demand, and Los Angeles in its choice for Mayor is a subject for congratulation.

The high character of the politics of Los Angeles and the tremendous advantage of such clean and conscientious politics, in contributing to the wonderful growth and attractiveness of that city, are things which the citizens of New York should study and imitate.

In this late election, and in previous elections, party prejudices and national political partisanship played no part whatever. There was no candidate of the Democratic party and no candidate of the Republican party in the local field. The Socialist party, to be sure, was in evidence and ran third in the race, but the two leading parties in numerical strength were two absolutely independent parties, with independent citizens as candidates on each of their tickets.

The whole election was fought out upon the mere matter of the availability and the capability of the candidates.

The decision in favor of Mr. Rose was reached mainly because of the belief of the people in his special fitness and his unexceptionable qualities as a man and a citizen.

One other influence of importance, however, entered into the campaign, and that was a declaration in favor of Mr. Shenk, the independent candidate opposing Mr. Rose, by Mr. Edwin T. Earl, a political leader, or rather boss, in Los Angeles politics.

Even though Mr. Earl is a boss, he is not a squalid one of the kind that dominate so many of our Eastern cities. He is a man of ability and of wealth, but he is considered a boss and he had been accused of using his political power to the advantage of his private interests.

The independent citizens of Los Angeles refused to tolerate a boss or the candidate of a boss. Mr. Shenk had been the leading candidate, and the betting stood at 2 to 1 in his favor. But when Mr. Shenk refused to repudiate satisfactorily the boss and the attempted association of the boss, the public-spirited citizens of Los Angeles turned from Mr. Shenk to Mr. Rose, and elected Mr. Rose by a handsome plurality.

What an inspiration action like this is to the cause of independence, clean politics and good government everywhere! What could not New York accomplish if the citizens of New York had the independence and the courage and the public spirit of the citizens of Los Angeles! How long would the people of New York be betrayed by their parties and their public officials if the citizens of New York would support no party in municipal matters except an independent party, and no candidate except a candidate that was wholly free from boss dictation and domination?

The citizens of Los Angeles regard the conduct of their municipal government as a great business enterprise, and they approach the question from a sound business point of view, free from personal selfishness or party prejudice.

They have put into operation direct primaries, the initiative, the referendum and the recall. They select candidates with the one consideration of the fitness of the candidates. They elect them without bias or prejudice. They instruct them through the initiative. They review their acts through the referendum, and they retire them, if unfaithful or incompetent, through the recall.

Los Angeles is far ahead of New York in progressive principles, in public spirit and in the efficient conduct of its government. The result is a public administration which is as clean and wholesome as a private household.

Los Angeles has the beauty of its site, a matchless climate, an intellectual and enterprising people, attractive and distinctive architecture, delightful homes surrounded with parks and gardens. It is the center of a great petroleum trade and an extensive citrus fruit industry, an entrepot for the maritime trade of the world and the metropolis of the expanding empire of the great Southwest.

But who shall say that the wonderful growth in population and prosperity of Los Angeles, which is one of the marvels of this marvelous land, is not due as much to its wholesome political condition as to the wonderful climate of this favored section and the varied resources of its farms and orchards, its oil wells, its manufactures and its mines?

Would not New York confer upon itself an immeasurable material as well as a moral benefit if it would learn, like Los Angeles, to conduct its government cleanly and competently in the control of the whole people and in the best interests of the whole people?

SEPTEMBER MORN EDICT BY POLICE DEFIED

H. S. Cole Refuses to Take Copies of Famous Nude Painting From Store Window.

"September Morn," the famous painting which caused New York and Chicago to blush and finally had to be draped with trouserettes, stirred up a tempest in Atlanta Saturday when H. S. Cole, of the Cole Book Company, Whitehall Street, defied the sudden edict of the police that the beautiful maiden must not be exposed to the vulgar gaze of downtown shoppers.

For some days now the shy, lissome damsel has lured the eyes of passers-by to the book shop window—a score or more damsels, it should be said, for copies hung everywhere make of the window a regular bower of beauty unadorned.

Serene and untroubled the charming young woman, brought into a troubled life by the magic brush of M. Paul Chabas, the famous French artist, has gazed through her fifty or more eyes into the hustle and bustle of Atlanta with a pensive gaze that seemed to express longing for some cool brook in placid Brittany.

Woman Gasps, Tells Police.

All unsuspecting, then, the maid stood when unexpectedly the blow fell. A woman shopper passing the store took one glance at the fair form—gasped in horror and notified the police.

Detective Shaw, who has an eye for art as well as other things, was dispatched to the scene. He viewed the canvas with cold, calculating eye. Yes, it was very, very beautiful, but—and the "but" sealed the lady's fate as far as the police were concerned.

Shaw notified Mr. Cole that the young woman would have to keep more sheltered quarters. In Brittany she could thus disport herself, yes—but on the main street of Atlanta, no.

Mr. Cole was indignant. He cited art authorities to show the canvas was a masterpiece and that only prudish, evil minds could see evil in it. Shaw called up his superior, Acting Chief Jett.

For Vulgar Public? Never!

The Chief paid a formal call on Miss September and branded her an undesirable citizen—just as undesirable in Atlanta as in Chicago, New York, Washington and other places.

For private inspection and appreciation she might pass, but for the vulgar public, no.

Chief Jett ordered her exiled. Mr. Cole referred her to Willis Everett, chairman of the Carnegie Library board of trustees, which also censors the movies. Mr. Everett agreed with Mr. Cole that M. Chabas had performed an immortal feat when he gave Miss September life, but —and there you are.

"I assuredly shall resist any order to remove 'September Morn' from the window," said Mr. Cole. "There was a glint of determination in his eyes.

"That is a beautiful piece of artistry. There is nothing indecent or suggestive about it. I do not understand that there is any ordinance which can prevent me from displaying it in the window. If there is, I will have to learn of it in court.

"Mr. Shaw, one of the city detectives, told me that a woman of some society had complained to him of the picture. I told him 'nothing doing,' that the picture was going to remain. He took it to Assistant Chief Jett and the latter, in turn, passed it on to the censors."

Suicide Said Beware Of Mothers-in-Law

ROME, June 15.—"Boys, when you marry, stay away from your mother-in-law unless she is a good Christian woman." This is the way Charles Robinson, who blew out his brains and attempted to kill his wife and mother-in-law, expressed himself in a letter found on his body.

"This is an awful crime," he went on to say, "but I was driven to it like a dog. I don't blame my wife so much as I do my mother-in-law. She is to blame for it all. I have tried to do what was right by all of them, but they would not let me."

Mob Fires Cabin to Get a Negro Slayer

GREENWOOD, MISS., June 15.—A mob of more than 1,000 men, who attempted to capture and lynch Jim Williams, a negro, set fire to the house where he had barricaded himself to-day and watched him shoot himself when the flames reached him. His body was raked from the burning embers and hanged.

Williams killed the cook of a white family of Greenwood and threw her baby out of a second-story window. He escaped and bloodhounds were placed on his trail. For more than 48 hours, through the Yazoo River swamps, the dogs followed the negro's trail, finally leading the mob to a deserted cabin.

Spaniards Lose 200 In Morocco Battle

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

TANGIER, MOROCCO, June 15.—An army of 3,000 Kabyle and Riff tribesmen are attacking the town of Tetuan, where a Spanish column has taken refuge. The Spaniards made a stand outside of the town, but were driven from the field, leaving 200 dead and wounded behind.

PARIS, June 14.—Sixty French soldiers have been killed, ten are missing and hundreds have been wounded as a result of the past three days' fighting between French soldiers and natives in Morocco.

The revolt in Morocco is growing.

Wilson's Face Has No Double, Painter Says

WASHINGTON, June 15.—President Wilson was praised to-day by L. Theodore Dube, an artist, who has just completed a portrait of the President he will exhibit at the next Salon in Paris.

"President Wilson is not the best subject I have painted," said the artist, "but his face is unlike any other. There are no two Wilsons."

Mrs. Wilson, an artist of no small merit herself, consulted daily with Dr. Dube as to the fine points in the portrait's execution.

Ulster League Ready for Defense by Arms

LONDON, June 15.—Lord Willoughby de Broke, Chairman of the British League for the Support of Ulster and the Union, has issued an appeal for volunteers to join the League and "make ready to stand in the trenches with those who are going to defend our common inheritance."

The appeal says that the League has a hundred agents in different parts of Great Britain, engaged in organizing their fellow-countrymen.

Shire Stock Bred in U. S. to Get Prize

WASHINGTON, June 15.—In the hope of advancing the breeding of shire horses in the United States the Shire Horse Society of England informed the Bureau of Animal Industry that it would offer a series of prizes during the next five years for the best shire stallion and shire mare exhibited.

The prizes will be gold cups, valued at $250 each, and two will be awarded each year until 1917.

Weds Prince After Several Attempts

VIENNA, June 15.—Mrs. Hugo Pratt, of Chicago and New York, and Prince Arsene Karageorgevitch, brother of King Peter of Servia, have succeeded in getting married, according to a reliable diplomatic source. The ceremony took place in the Russian church at Paris.

Several previous efforts by Mrs. Pratt and her Prince to induce some one to perform the marriage ceremony failed.

Lady Scott Breaks Down on Polar Ship

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

CARDIFF, WALES, June 15.—Lady Scott, widow of Captain Robert F. Scott, the heroic explorer who lost his life in the Antarctic, accompanied by her little son Peter, to-day boarded and inspected Scott's ship, the Terra Nova.

The Terra Nova has just arrived from New Zealand. Lady Scott broke down and wept.

$350,000 BALTIMORE FIRE.

BALTIMORE, June 15.—Fire last night in the Martin-Wagner Company's plant, Wagners Point, destroyed nine buildings, causing a total loss of $350,000. About 400 workmen will be thrown out of employment.

PROSPERITY SHOWN BY LUXURY SALES

Gems and Pianos, a Drug in Dull Years, Are Going Fast—Jobbers Busy and Happy.

Were there any slowing down of business in Atlanta, luxuries would be the first to feel the change. Jewelry certainly is to be classed as a luxury—something the public can dispense with in any pinch of circumstances. But—sales of diamonds, jewelry and pianos are heavier than in 1912.

"Sales of diamonds are on the gain," says H. W. Anderson, of Maier & Berkele, jewelers. "Our diamond business has increased about 50 per cent a year. In general, the volume of our sales held even for the first four months of the year. May showed a gain. June will show a greater gain, from indications. This is comparing sales with 1912, which in itself was the greatest of 26 consecutive years."

Pianos are not among the necessities of life, whatever the musician may think. Piano sales fall off in bad years.

H. S. Holmes, of the Cleveland-Manning Piano Company, says the business of that concern for May was ahead of any month of this year, and the total to date for 1913 ahead of any year's sales for an equal period.

"Collections are improving," says Mr. Holmes, "instead of declining. Piano sales are the first to fall off in bad times, and the last to recover afterwards. Since our sales are increasing, we take it as an indication that general conditions must be sound."

Jobbers Are Satisfied.

Jobbers supplying the territory contributory to Atlanta are satisfied with trade. P. D. Yates, vice president of the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt Company, says:

"We have sold as much or more goods than in 1912. Collections are satisfactory, and, in view of conditions, are exceptional.

"Business men who are operating on a conservative basis will find, I believe, that 1913 has been one of their most profitable years. They are buying in small quantities. They are cleaning off their shelves. They are selling customers what they need, instead of allowing them to run riot through the store.

"The progressive merchant will find himself in better shape than for years past when 1913 comes to a close.

"Fall trade, I believe, will far surpass the expectations of the average merchant and business man. I have returned from a trip through portions of the State. The crop looks good. It is growing; it is clean and the acreage is larger than last year. It has been produced cheaply.

"This is a year when efficiency counts for the farmer, the retailer and the jobber. Efficient men will make good profits this year."

Manufacturer Feels No Pinch.

"Our fiscal year runs until June 1," says J. K. Orr, manufacturer of shoes. "At the close of business June 1, we began to take reckoning of the year's transactions. We find that the factory has just ended the biggest year in our history, as to sales and as to production. Besides, this, the quality of our output has been improved steadily. Fall orders are coming in now at a good rate. The crop outlook is good, and it will be a crop which cost the farmers very little to make.

"Collections are fair. Business emphatically is good."

South Bulwark of Nation.

Wilmer L. Moore, president of the Southern States Life Insurance Company and of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, looks for great things from the coming crop.

"Cotton is looking well," he says. "It is clean and well cultivated, and is coming along nicely. Every prospect is for a good yield and at moderate expense.

"Admit, for the sake of argument, that the croakers are right and that the East is in for a period of depression. In this case, the South will, as always, fare better than any other section. With that great solid asset—the cotton crop—the South is in an impregnable position, and, as always before, will prove the mainstay of the nation."

Soapy Floor Basis Of Damage Suit by Girl for Injuries

Soap on the tiled floor of the Empire Building caused Miss S. A. Boyd to fall and suffer serious injury, according to a suit for $5,000 damages against the building company, filed with the Superior Court to-day.

Miss Boyd said that when the janitors washed the floor one morning in April they failed to remove the soap and that when she started to an office on the thirteenth floor she slipped and fell, wrenching her ankle and receiving other injuries that incapacitated her for work for several weeks.

Suicide's Blood Fails To Save Woman's Life

BALTIMORE, June 15.—Having given his blood to save the life of Mrs. Maria Maggio Wednesday night, Camilo Zanti was overwhelmed with grief when told of the woman's death early to-day.

A few days prior to his heroic act, Zanti became despondent and attempted in vain to take his own life. When he returned to the hospital to have the bandage changed, he was informed of the woman's dying condition and told a man in his splendid physical condition might save her by submitting to a transfusion of blood. He readily consented.

State Dentists Meet In Atlanta Next Year

COLUMBUS, GA., June 15.—Georgia State Dental Society closed its convention to-day. Atlanta was selected as the next meeting place.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

Dr. E. Tigner, Milledgeville, president; Dr. M. D. Huff, Atlanta, vice president; Dr. A. A. Williams, Columbus, second vice president; Dr. M. M. Forbes, Atlanta, re-elected secretary; Dr. W. M. Zirkle, Atlanta, re-elected treasurer.

Richeson's Brain Is Said to be Missing

BOSTON, June 15.—What has become of the brain, heart and other organs of Clarence V. T. Richeson, slayer of Avis Linnell?

Reports from Amherst, Va., state the body is filled with sawdust and the organs are missing.

Medical Examiner Magrath, who performed the autopsy on Richeson's body, following the latter's electrocution for the murder, declares the body left his care intact.

'Women's Immodest Dress a Grave Evil'

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Chief Peterson, of Oakland, Cal., told the Police Chiefs assembled here that a cause of immorality among men is the immodest dress of the average American woman. He called it a "grave evil," and said:

"Decent dressing on the part of women would do more than a million lectures to increase the standard of morality among young men."

Baptists Call Tango Grossly Un-American

COLLINGSWOOD, N. J., June 15.—The Camden Baptist Association, comprising fifty-six churches and 10,000 members, adopted a resolution declaring the tango and the turkey trot to be grossly obscene and un-American.

The convention aimed to stop the hug glides. It also favored eugenic marriages.

BAD FAITH BY PRESIDENT HINTED AT INQUIRY

Letter Read in Attempt to Show That He Promised Not to Harm Beet Sugar Interests.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Over the protest of Senator Reed, F. R. Hathaway, Sr., secretary of the Michigan Beet Sugar Company, made public before the Overman lobby inquiry committee the following letter from A. J. Douglas, treasurer of the company, to W. H. Wallace, general manager, following an address by Woodrow Wilson in Detroit during the presidential campaign:

"After Mr. Wilson's address in the Armory last evening I had the opportunity of saying to him: 'The people of Michigan interested in the beet sugar industry stood ready to invest millions of dollars more in this industry, but before doing so wanted his reassurance toward this legitimate industry.'

"You Need Not Fear Me."

"His reply to this question, which was in a forceful and emphatic manner, was: 'You need not be one bit afraid of me, sir.'

"I don't believe that Mr. Wilson will take any steps that will annihilate or retard a legitimate industry as ours is. He impressed me with his earnestness in this."

Mr. Hathaway testified that since the free sugar bill had been offered the preferred stock of his company had declined from par to 90, and the common from 90 to 30, with no purchasers.

Senator Nelson, who insisted that the letter be read, said that he merely wanted to show that the sugar interests had been led to believe that they had nothing to fear before the bill was drafted.

Hill Lobby Is Denied.

John H. Carroll, of St. Louis, general attorney for the Hill railroad system, testified that his only activity in tariff matters was the filing of a brief with Senator Stone against placing a duty on creosote oil, which is used largely by railroads as a wood preservative.

He said that the Hill railroads maintain no legislative agent in Washington, although they were formerly represented by Charles J. Faulkner. He said James J. Hill and L. C. Gilman, of the Hill system, had been in Washington, but not in connection with the tariff.

Cabinet Can Wear 'Tiles' at Any Angle

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Representative Victor Murdock told W. J. Bryan he had observed the Secretary and his attaches march down Pennsylvania Avenue, escorted by a troop of cavalry, in the cavalcade that was part of the reception to Dr. Muller, Brazilian Minister.

"I stood on the curb with the common people and made an interesting observation," Murdock told Bryan.

"What was that?" asked Bryan.

"I noticed that every man in the party wore his plug hat at a different angle."

"That's a sign of our strong individuality," said Bryan. "You know this administration is different from all others."

Atlanta Accommodations For Georgia Legislators

They Cut Honey From Honeymoon Birmingham Couple Achieve Fame

Magic City Grasps at New Fad

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Walker, of Birmingham, who declare their honeymoon in Europe was devoid of romance.

Joseph Walker and Bride, Back From European Wedding Tour, Popularize Latest Way.

The "Magic City" of the South, otherwise known as Birmingham, Ala., is on the map at last—it has a fad, the first ever recorded in the smoky city, termed the "Walker Honeymoon," named for Joseph Walker, who, with his bride, says there wasn't any honeymoon to their "honeymoon" across the seas.

Mr. and Mrs. Walker, who have just returned from their bridal trip, told reporters in New York their "honeymoon" trip was entirely void of what is commonly termed romance; the startling news was flashed to all parts of the country, including Birmingham, and now the Magic Cityites who are engaging themselves and getting married are following suit—in other words, they have "cut the romance stuff," for it's the fad.

If reports are true, florists and others who have been making big "rake-offs" as a result of numerous church weddings in the Magic City are preparing to cut salaries and retrench in various ways to meet the decrease in business, since the "Walker Honeymoon" fad hit the town amidships.

In short, Old Romance is on its last legs in Birmingham, for what the Walkers, who are among the first, socially, in the city, say, goes. And this is entirely natural, say the fadists, for the "Magic City" is first, last and all the time an industrial city—and whoever heard of such a combination as romance and industry?

Mrs. Clark's Brother Gets Job as Hostler

KANSAS CITY, June 15.—J. A. Bennett, a brother of Mrs. Champ Clark, won the appointment, over several competitors, as hostler of the Police Department.

Bennett got the place without any aid or personal indorsement from the Speaker of the House of Representatives. He came from Pike County years ago, and one of the new Police Commissioners, W. C. Reynolds, also is a Piker. He gave Bennett the place, which pays $60 a month.

CLUBS VICTORIOUS IN LIQUOR TRIALS

Last Three of Twelve Indicted Get Verdict When Witness Can't Distinguish Near-Beer.

The inability of the State's star witness to tell the difference between lager and near-beer scored a final victory for the last three of the local locker clubs under indictment for illegal retailing of liquor.

The jury in the City Court Saturday morning found the Theatrical, Metropolitan and Beavers Club not guilty of selling whisky and beer to persons not members, and dismissed the case against the Georgia Athletic Club because it went out of business more than a year ago.

G. S. Bohannon was the only witness against the three clubs. He testified to having gone to the clubs with a private detective and having purchased beer. He said he never drank before and didn't know the difference between lager and near-beer.

The clubs were the last of twelve indicted by the Grand Jury several months ago.

Japanese Note Omits Constitution Charge

TOKIO, June 15.—It is learned Japan decided to omit from the text of its rejoinder to the American Government's reply to the protest against the California alien land law the contention that it violates the fourteenth amendment.

The point is left for the Japanese ambassador and the Secretary of State to discuss.

ELKS OBSERVE FLAG DAY.

CHATTANOOGA, June 15.—Flag Day will be fittingly observed tonight by the local lodge of Elks with public exercises. L. Hope Sheppard will be the principal speaker.

STATE TAKES ADVANTAGE OF POINTS KNOWN

Exposure of Evidence by Prisoner's Lawyer Aids Prosecution in Preparing for Battle.

With certain of the strong defenses of Leo M. Frank exposed by the preliminary battle over the custody of the negro Conley, the prosecution in the Phagan murder mystery went to work on the case to-day with its first definite idea of the sort of a stronghold it must assault.

It was assured that the accused man's lawyers would not rest with fighting suspicion away from Frank, but would seek to fasten the guilt so firmly upon Conley that Frank not only would be acquitted, but that he would be cleared of every stain which has been cast upon his name and reputation by the terrible charges lodged against him.

Report was rife Saturday morning that the attorneys for Frank had not yet acknowledged defeat in their efforts to have Conley confined at the Tower instead of at the police station, where they charge he is improperly protected and "petted" by the detectives. The next move was rumored to be the swearing out of a warrant charging the negro with the murder, to compel Conley's removal to the Tower.

Attacked by Rosser.

Luther Z. Rosser, chief of counsel for Frank, has branded as most unusual and irregular the procedure which has allowed the negro, who has confessed to being accessory after the fact, to be left without an indictment against him on the charge to which he has virtually pleaded guilty.

Rosser urged an impartial investigation into the possibility that he is even more seriously connected with the crime which resulted in the grewsome death of Mary Phagan.

Chief of Detectives Lanford said Saturday when he was apprised of the contemplated move of those who wish to see the negro's stories investigated by an impartial body that he assuredly would honor any warrant which on its face appeared bona fide, but that he would fight any effort to take Conley to the jail, which he suspected had back of it the animus of persons unfriendly to the negro and friendly to Frank. Lanford asserted that all of his actions in the Phagan mystery had been inspired by the desire to get the guilty man, and that it was his conviction that the negro was only a tool after the actual crime.

Guarding Against Surprise.

After the developments of Friday, it became evident that the prosecution, while it is busying itself in an effort to place the crime on Frank, must guard against the surprise of finding all of a sudden that the defense has stolen a march and has in the meantime shifted every tenable suspicion directly upon the negro Conley.

Most of the evidence must be circumstantial. Even the negro's succession of contradictory affidavits, if any one of them is to be accepted, must be regarded as circumstantial, for in none of them does he say that he saw the killing of the girl. She was dead, he avers, when he first saw the body. So the death might have been quite accidental, even if every word of the negro's latest affidavit is to be believed.

From the fact that the evidence is so purely circumstantial and that it is a matter of grave doubt whether any of the negro's statements can be accepted as having any element of truth, the defense will maintain, it became evident from its attitude Friday, that the evidence points far more certainly and positively toward Conley as the murderer than toward Frank.

Absolutely nothing of a suspicious nature has been brought against Frank, the defense will assert, except that he had the opportunity. On the other hand, a score of suspicious circumstances will be brought against the negro.

The work of the prosecution from this time on will be the adding of confirmatory evidence to the negro's stories. The detectives have professed to have a great amount of evidence bearing out Conley's statements of what happened in the factory on the day of the murder. They have said that they are keeping much of this under cover for the purposes of prosecution until the trial of Frank begins.

When taxed with the question as to how they could believe the negro's latest statement and accept it as the unqualified truth, when the negro admittedly had told a string of lies and falsehoods previously, they have said that they will not have to depend on the negro's story alone, but will have substantiating evidence to bolster up every statement that he has made.

Besides the collecting of confirmatory evidence, the prosecution is busy in an effort to break down Frank's iron-bound alibis. So strong have these alibis been established it has appeared that they are unassailable, but the Solicitor General is overlooking no chances and has had his agents investigating Frank's every movement on the day of the crime.

Dorsey Goes East For Week's Vacation.

Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey left Saturday afternoon for a week's vacation at Atlantic City, New York and Philadelphia. He said he had the Phagan case so well in hand that his absence would make no difference in the prosecution.

New developments will be handled by E. A. Stephens, Assistant Solicitor General, and Frank Hooper, whom Solicitor Dorsey has associated with him in the case.

The Solicitor conferred with William M. Smith, attorney for Conley, a few minutes at the Terminal Station before the departure of the train.

29 Ways of Holding a Broom Are Found

NEW YORK, June 15.—Twenty-nine methods of holding a broom have been discovered by the newly created technical board operating for city efficiency. For instance:

Broom militant—Seized firmly in both fists above a cat of husband.

Broom playful—Grabbed by baby fingers in "ride a horse."

Broom lifesaver—Clutched in left hand by man who with right hand removes straw for pipe cleaner.

Just broom—This includes the other twenty-four varieties.

Only one of these is correct, according to the report.

Mute Searches for Dumb Wife in Vain

DALTON, GA., June 15.—With his wife mysteriously missing, John Wagner, a stonecutter, is prosecuting a vigorous search. Both are deaf mutes.

Wagner moved here from Ball Ground several weeks ago, and arranged for his wife to join him. He received a telegram that she would arrive on a certain train, but she did not come. A telegram to Ball Ground brought the reply that she had left for Dalton; but a later message stated she had boarded a train to Knoxville. The supposition is that she took the wrong train by mistake.

'Uncle John' Ross Dies in U. S. Prison

"Uncle John" Ross, 63 years old, a unique character in the Atlanta Federal Prison, died late Friday afternoon. Born in Nova Scotia, he ran away from home when he was 20 years old. During a brawl in a Yokahoma drinking place he killed a fellow sailor and was sentenced to prison for life in 1880.

When the Federal Prison at Atlanta was completed in 1902 "Uncle John" was brought here. At his death he was president of the prison Christian Endeavor Society.

Cook Stoves Prove Poor Savings Banks

ELKINS, W. VA., June 15.—Thousands of people of the United States, still incredulous, bury their savings in the ground or hide them in the ovens of cookstoves for safe-keeping, according to United States Treasurer John Burke.

"Every fall," said Mr. Burke, "the Treasurer's office receives many fragments of burned paper money which had been stored in stoves during warm weather."

Berlin Men Affect Feminine Fashions

BERLIN, June 4.—The latest fashion here is the carrying of fancy colored parasols by the men.

Silk blouses, marked with plenty of fancy network, are also considered very fashionable and are worn by the men in very hot weather.

STRIKERS CLAIM MINE GUARDS BEGAN WAR

Senate Committee, Sifting Evidence to Get at Facts, May Call Governor Hatfield.

CHARLESTON, W. VA., June 15.—Inquiry into the causes of the strike in the Paint Creek coal fields and the riotous conditions resulting occupied the entire time of the Senate subcommittee's investigation at last night's session and will be the main part of the investigation to-day. Some fifty miners were subpenaed.

The riotous conditions in the strike zone were laid at the door of the mine guards by the strikers who testified. Most of the witnesses were from Paint Creek proper and their testimony has reverted to the town of Mucklow, controlled by Scranton, Pa., capitalists.

Town "Shot Up" Thrice.

Mucklow had been thrice "shot up" since the strike was ordered April 18, 1912.

For ten years Paint Creek proper had been quiet. It was unionized and not a mine guard had carried his Winchester to those mining camps. Last year the operators refused to grant the increase of 2 1-2 cents a ton ordered by the Cleveland miners' convention and the agreement was discontinued. Many of the miners went on strike and early in May the first mine guards were brought into the district.

Until that time the mine leaders claim they had been peaceful. Armed guards evicted them from company property and reigns of terror ensued. There has been no complaint of short weights, store prices or the houses in which the miners lived.

Operators Defend Guards.

Such was the story told to the Senate committee by the miners. Counsel for the operators tried to bring out on cross-examination that it was not until armed strikers were parading around the mining camps threatening men who remained at work that guards were imported to protect the coal properties.

Former Governor Glasscock was recalled. He read much correspondence between himself and the coal operators and the United Mine Workers. These showed that on two occasions the coal operators refused to arbitrate because it would be recognizing the union, placing the operators and miners of other States in control of the coal industry of West Virginia.

Governor Hatfield may be called to the stand.

Important Sayings

By important people on topics of live interest

"There should be no income except from labor and nature. Mere ownership of money or land should not bring additional wealth to the owner unless at the same time he is a producer. My doctrine applies not only to money loaned, but also to land which is rented and to other business methods of the present day."—Professor Albion W. Small, of the University of Chicago, President of the American Sociological Society, in plea for abolition of interest.

"Twice within a year the entire mileage of this section has been on the verge of a colossal strike, due to the inability of the railroads and the workers' organization to agree upon a form of arbitration, although both were ready to arbitrate, and are still ready to arbitrate if a satisfactory form of arbitration is provided by law. Our committee feel it imperative that no time be lost in bringing the subject to the attention of Congress."—Seth Low, President of the National Civic Federation, interviewed at Washington on proposed national arbitration act.

"Beware of the professional reformer and investigator, who is ready to reform anything and everything except himself and the things in which he is interested. Be always on the side of true reform, but do not spell reform with a capital R, and do not use your activities in this regard as do many of the magazine writers and publications."—President Humphreys, of Stevens Institute of Technology, in address to graduating class.

Railway President Sees Easier Money

NEW YORK, June 15.—William A. Gardner, president of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway, on a visit here, said he did not believe the present tightness of money would extend to next fall.

"Western banks," he said, "are already increasing their reserves for handling and moving crops."

J. L. MEEK, A. G. P. A.

MRS. WILCOX TO WRITE POEM ON TANGO

Thinks American Dances are Most Graceful on Earth—"Danse du Ventre" Naughty.

NEW YORK, June 15.—"The turkey trot and the tango as they are danced in America are the most graceful dances I have ever seen, and I intend to write a poem about them," declared Mrs. Ella Wheeler Wilcox, as she came down the gangplank from the White Star steamship Olympic.

Mrs. Wilcox is home to-day from a three months' vacation abroad, most of which she spent in Sicily and Tunis, studying and enjoying the fascinating dances native to those countries. Incidentally, she took with her a mandolin, and in the brief period of her foreign sojourn acquired remarkable proficiency in playing the native melodies of the people she visited. On board the Olympic, coming home, she delighted the saloon passengers with her daily performances on the mandolin, varied by exhibitions of her grace as a dancer.

"The Wilcox Glide."

When, after great urging, she reluctantly consented to give her fellow passengers a glimpse of the latest dance movement, christened in honor of its inventor "The Wilcox Glide," the poet was given one of the most remarkable ovations of her career. Although the liner carried an unusually large number of notables, Mrs. Wilcox easily took first rank in popularity throughout the voyage across the Atlantic. Her reception by the passengers on the Olympic rivaled that accorded her in London, following her appearance at court on May 7 last.

"I had a very lovely time at my presentation to the King and Queen of England," was the way in which Mrs. Wilcox commented on that event.

London Crazy Over Tango.

"The dances I saw in London," she said, "are simply copies of the American turkey trot and tango. The people over there are simply wild about those dances. They have devised social functions which they call 'dansantes.' The dansante is a combination of a tea, a musicale and a dance. They hold these affairs in the afternoon at the large hotels, and they are wonderfully patronized. The hotels are always filled to overflowing whenever a dansante is given.

"I saw the famous 'trantella,' the dance that is so frequently mentioned in novels and poems as done by natives of Sicily," continued Mrs. Wilcox, "and I am sorry to be compelled to admit that I was much disappointed in it. In Tunis I watched with interest the native 'danse du ventre,' and my principal impression was that it is not a dance that we should wish to see become popular in America. However, over there it is taught to girls at the early age of eight or nine years.

"But, after all, the real poetry of motion is found in the American dances, the turkey trot and the tango."

Woman Finds Body Of Soldier-Suicide

SAVANNAH, GA., June 15.—Pushing her way through the underbrush on Tybee Island in search of huckleberries, Mrs. John Moore, wife of Sergeant John Moore, at Fort Screven, came suddenly upon the body of a man dressed in military uniform.

The body was later identified as that of Priate Charles Lind, whose enlistment in the army at Fort Screven expired on May 26. It is believed he committed suicide.

SHERIFF MANGUM NEAR END, SAYS LAWYER SMITH

Attorney for Conley Injects Politics Into Dispute Over Negro's Place of Confinement.

William M. Smith, counsel for James Conley, confessed accessory after the fact in the killing of Mary Phagan, in a statement Saturday sought to make a political issue out of his controversy with Sheriff Mangum over the alleged treatment Conley received while in the Tower.

Attorney Smith employed references to his own previous statement that the jail was five stories high; was divided into four wings with seventeen cell blocks distributed over five floors, to discredit Sheriff Mangum's characterization of the entire affidavit as "an infamous lie."

He continued by asking if his other references to the structural conditions at the Tower also were lies. He added that Conley had furnished him with an affidavit as to the treatment he had received as a prisoner at the jail, and said he had given to Sheriff Mangum the name of one person, though what the charges are against this person the attorney does not specify. He intimated he had performed services for the Sheriff in the past and that there was much more he could tell if he desired.

The attorney concludes his reply to the Sheriff by the observation that Mr. Mangum "must be reaching the point where his usefulness to the public in his present position is at an end, and the citizens of this county would do well to select from among his ranks of splendid deputies a new Sheriff in the next election."

In discussing his affidavit, Mr. Smith remarked:

"I did state that I thought the condition was due to the physical construction of the jail and to the fact that the county authorities did not give Sheriff Mangum money to hire sufficient guards. I stated that the best Sheriff in the world, with the best and most efficient deputies, could probably do no better under the conditions that Sheriff Mangum and his deputies were placed. If I lied anywhere, it was in an effort to exonerate Sheriff Mangum from any blame in connection with the conditions in Fulton County jail.

"Mangum may forget, but he has men on his force who do not, and the general public remembers the weight of obligation that should rest upon him for services rendered by me to him in the past. For him to rush into public print and denounce me as an 'infamous liar,' probably without reading the many statements made in my affidavit exonerating him and his men, is not entirely surprising to me.

"If Sheriff Mangum wants me to tell the general public through the press the conditions as I know them to exist relative to the Fulton County jail, I can do it, and with the gloves off."

6,882 Can Vote in Chatham Primary

SAVANNAH, June 15.—There will be 6,882 qualified to vote in the Chatham County primary on Monday, at which the Democratic nominee for the vacancy in the State Legislature, caused by the resignation of Colonel P. A. Stovall, will be chosen. Since the last election 318 names have been added to the registration lists.

Herman Shuptrine and J. J. Boughan are the only candidates.

Japs Would Renew Arbitration Treaty

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Japan is willing to extend the existing arbitration treaty with the United States for five years, according to an announcement by Secretary of State Bryan to-day. The treaty, providing for arbitration of disputes except those of vital interests or national honor, expires August 27.

A convention for its renewal probably will be signed on that date.

POUGHKEEPSIE, June 15.—President Taylor at the forty-eighth commencement of Vassar College, announced a gift of $75,000 for a chair of political science and $10,000 for general purposes.

Dr. Taylor will retire Februray 1, 1914, at the end of twenty-seven years of service.

Ball Player, 'Beaned' By Fast Ball, Dying

CHARLEROI, PA., June 15.—Raymond H. Black, a young jeweler of this city, is dying at the Allegheny General Hospital in Pittsburg as a result of a fractured skull, the result of being "beaned" by a pitched ball during a game in this city on Thursday between two teams of ex-college men.

'K. O.' of Legislator Starts Illinois Quiz

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 15.—Official investigation was proposed to-day of the fist fight which occurred on the floor of the Illinois House late yesterday. Representative Thomas N. Gorman, of Peoria, "wet" leader, will be formally accused of assault upon George H. Wilson, of Quincy, "dry" advocate, while the House was in session.

Wilson was knocked down, and nearly out, from a blow from Gorman's fist.

Sinclair's Mother Reviles Kemp

'Southerner Would Have Shot Him'

'Author Not Free Love Believer'

Novelist and Family Sail for Germany to Study Factory Conditions There.

NEW YORK, June 15.—"If my son, Upton, had been a true Southerner he would have killed Harry Kemp!"

This was the vindictive utterance of Mrs. Sinclair, mother of the novelist and Ardenite, as she and her son, his new wife and the latter's sister, Miss Dollie Kombrough, were about to leave for Germany to study factory conditions there.

"Upton's silent contempt for Kemp shows his great charity of mind," continued Mrs. Sinclair. She added that in spite of the many stories printed of her son's liberal views, he is not a believer in free love.

Sinclair declined to discuss Kemp, "the tramp poet," who was successful in wrecking Sinclair's married happiness by winning the love of his wife, Mrs. Meta Fuller Sinclair.

Upton Sinclair, his mother (below), and wife to whom he was married after Harry Kemp, the tramp poet, stole his first.

MOURN DEATH OF S. H. PHELAN, SR.

Well Known Atlanta Business Man and War Veteran Had Notable Career.

General regret is felt in Atlanta business circles to-day over the death of S. H. Phelan, Sr., which occurred at his home in Crawford County Friday afternoon. He was 66 years old.

Mr. Phelan lived in Atlanta for more than twenty years, and during his residence here was prominent in the city's commercial life. He was a charter member of the Capital City Club, which was organized in his office. He was also one of the directors of the Cotton States Exposition, held in Atlanta in 1895, and much of the success of that enterprise was due to his work. During the many years of his residence he was one of the vestrymen of St. Luke's Episcopal Church, and took a leading part in the activities of the church. He left Atlanta about eight years ago, when he retired from active business, and since that time has lived with his son, Leman Phelan, on his plantation in Crawford County.

Mr. Phelan was born in Montgomery, Ala., and lived there until the outbreak of the Civil War. He then enlisted in the Confederate army, and with his seven brothers formed the famous Phelan battery. Mr. Phelan was one of the youngest men in the Southern army, and served with honor throughout the war.

He is survived by seven children, four daughters and three sons, as follows: Mrs. U. S. Atkinson, Mrs. E. E. Dallis and Mrs. A. W. Goldsmith, of Atlanta; Mrs. Barry Wright, of Rome, Ga.; M. G. Phelan and S. H. Phelan, Jr., of Atlanta, and Leman Phelan, of Crawford County.

The body probably will be brought to Atlanta for burial.

Hotel Men of State Discuss Legislation

SAVANNAH, June 15.—The session of the Georgia Hotel Men's Association was held at Tybee to-day. Mayor R. P. Lovett, delivered an address of welcome, and T. W. Hooks, of Dublin, president of the association, responded. By request a number of traveling men joined in the discussion of proposed hotel legislation which was explained by L. M. Jordan, of Atlanta, attorney for the association. It has been suggested by the traveling men that hotels be regularly inspected by a State inspector.

CITIZENS INSIST ON DEEP VICE INQUIRY

Grand Jury to Go Into Charge Again Tuesday, Taking Up Dictograph Records.

It was practically certain today the Grand Jury had determined to investigate the vice and dictograph charges when it met again Tuesday.

Foreman L. H. Beck Saturday morning said every mail brought him numerous communications touching on some phase of the vice or dictograph question, and that every one urged a thorough investigation. He said if the routine cases could be disposed of, or put aside, the probe would begin in earnest next week.

"We would have taken this matter up long ago had it not been for the criminal cases presented by the Solicitor," said Mr. Beck. "When we meet, and the witnesses in the cases have been summoned, it would be unjust not to dispose of the cases and let them go. If the calendar is light next week in all probability we will go into the general investigation."

While names of witnesses have been furnished in anonymous communications, almost every person who has testified before the Grand Jury in its investigation thus far has furnished the names of persons who would testify to substantiate one or the other side in the controversy. Some of the witnesses say they can tell of the existence of wholesale vice, while others state the conditions are better in Atlanta than they have ever been.

Colonel Thomas B. Felder, Mayor James G. Woodward, Chief of Police James L. Beavers and Detective Chief Newport Lanford have each registered a request with the Grand Jury that the dictograph incident and the counter charges of vice be investigated.

Former Bandit Sees Daughter Graduated

GRAND JUNCTION, COLO., June 15.—Elzy Lay, reformed bandit and bank robber, who, 30 years ago, was known and feared as one of the most desperate criminals of the West, walked all the way from his mountain home, more than 50 miles, to witness the graduation of his daughter at the Wilcox School, near Vernal.

He had not seen the girl for 16 years. Lay owns a large cattle ranch.

Routs Escorts; Kills Woman and Himself

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., June 15.—Jealousy caused Robert White, a wireless operator, to kill his sweetheart, Miss Jennie Wade, here, after tracking her in an automobile. After a quarre White went on a search for the girl. Finding her with two male escorts, he first warned them away, then shot the girl and himself.

The couple became engaged only a few days ago.

SPRATT RETAINS TITLE OF RIFLE CHAMPION

Leads Marksmen for Second Year Running—Score 521 Out of 600 Possible.

Captain W. T. Spratt, Jr., of Atlanta, inspector of rifle practice for the Fifth Regiment, won the State championship in the National Guard shoot at Camp Evans, making a score of 521 out of a possible 600 points. This is the second successive year he has taken the State championship, and the third time he has held the title.

From a low position in the first day's shoot, Captain Spratt made a spectacular climb to the lead, and in Friday's contest succeeded in obtaining a 19-point lead. At the finish of the shoot Saturday he still had this lead.

First Sergeant O. J. Metcalf, of the Coast Artillery Corps, Savannah, was second with a score of 502, with First Lieutenant P. A. Dickinson, Company H, Second Infantry, Monroe, third, score 496. Private E. C. Hale, 494, and Sergeant W. S. Hale, 492, of Company H, Third Infantry, Winder, took the fourth and fifth positions.

Team Trophy Winners.

Team trophies were won as follows:

First—Team 1, Fifth Infantry, Atlanta, winner of the General Anderson trophy, with 2,457 out of possible 3,000 points.

Second—Team 1, Second Infantry, Macon, winner of Colonel John S. Candler trophy, score 2,301.

Third—Team selected entirely from Company H, Third Infantry, Winder, Paxon trophy, score 2,101.

Other teams finished as follows: Fourth, Governor's Horse Guards, Atlanta; fifth, Squadded Team; sixth, Team 2, Fifth Regiment, Atlanta; seventh, Team 2, Second Infantry, Macon; eighth, First Infantry, Savannah; ninth, Team 3, Second infantry, Macon; tenth, Team 4, Second Infantry, Macon.

Individual Medal Winners.

Individual medals were won by the following:

Daniel medal for highest score, 200 yards, slow fire, won by Major Claude C. Smith, Judge Advocate General, Atlanta, 86 out of 100 points.

Kicklighter medal, highest score, 600 yards, First Sergeant O. J. Metcalf, Savannah Volunteer Guards, 92 out of 100.

Dunwody medal, 200 yards surprise fire, disappearing target, won by Private Ewel C. Hale, Company H, Third Infantry, Winder, 97 out of 100.

Scott medal for skirmish fire, won by Corporal J. R. Cothran, Company D, Fifth Infantry, Atlanta, 168 out of 100.

Stockdale medal, 1,000 yards, won by Captain W. T. Spratt, Jr., Atlanta, 91 out of 100.

Crankshaw medal for highest aggregate score and State championship, also won by Captain Spratt.

Would Make Changes in Constitution Easy

WASHINGTON, June15.— As a part of the Progressive party program in Congress Representative Chandler, of New York, is preparing to press a resolution proposing a constitutional provision that amendments to the Constitution may be proposed by Congress whenever a majority of both houses in the same session of Congress shall deem it necessary, or by conventions, or by not less than one-fourth of the States.

The plan would require a constitutional convention every 30 years.

'Huck' Finn Story Wins Suit for Boy

ST. LOUIS, June 15.—Mark Twain's story of Huckleberry Finn was told to a jury in Judge Henning's court by the attorney for Clyde D. Richey, 14, in his suit for $4,500 damages against the United Railways Company for a beating the boy said a conductor gave him.

The boy was given damages.

THE CRUISE OF THE "GRAPE FRUIT!"

Copyright, 1913, International News Service.

"Avast there! Ahoy! I believe those are the correct maritime expressions! First-class in peaceful behavior please give your attention!" These vigorous words were uttered by Admiral Professor Juice, the fearless commander of the battleship "Grape Fruit," as he strode back and forth on the parlor floor or quarter deck of his noble vessel! "Bill Jones and Tom Smith will now give a demonstration of what we should do when an enemy attacks us! Bill will smite one of Tom's cheeks and then Tom will turn the other cheek! Sam Wiggins will then give us the Peace Dance, formerly called the Sailor's Hornpipe!" At this moment the lookout shouted, "Big bunch of battleships coming, sir!" "All hands stand by to present olive branches!" cried the Admiral in a firm voice. Suddenly a tremendous and unexpected—

GETS TWO YEARS FOR ROBBING PARCEL POST

Conviction of William Stokes Is First Under New Law in the Atlanta District.

Judge Newman in the United States District Court sentenced Will Stokes to serve two years in the Federal prison for robbing the parcel post.

It is the first conviction on that charge in this district since the parcel post was started, although for some time many packages have been stolen from the Terminal Station. Stokes was convicted on one count of stealing a gray Russian velour hat, worth $7.50.

On March 16 J. H. Zachery, who has offices in the Empire Building, took his hat to Daniel Bros. to be renovated. Daniel Bros. sent the hat on the day following through the parcel post to the Trimble Hat Company, Orange Valley, N. J.

The hat never was received by the Trimble Hat Company and United States postoffice inspectors at once set to work to run down the thief. In this they were accidentally aided by the Atlanta detectives, who several months later, after a store had been robbed in East Atlanta, arrested Will Stokes on suspicion.

A search of Stokes' domicile revealed stolen property worth about $300. All the stuff had been stolen from the parcel post.

Stokes was wearing the missing hat when arrested. He denied he had stolen it, saying he purchased it from a man who came out of The Constitution office bareheaded on March 2. Here Stokes was caught, for the hat was not shipped until March 17.

The jury that heard the evidence in the case thought it a fair supposition that if the other articles recovered were stolen from the parcel post, it was reasonable to suppose the hat came into the possession of the prisoner in the same manner.

For several months Stokes worked at the Terminal Station. In the last six months twelve sacks of mail have been stolen, together with innumerable articles sent by parcel post from this station.

Money Trust Seen in Currency Reform

WASHINGTON, June 15.—After introducing a bill in the House which would give either house of Congress the right to delve into the affairs of national banks, Representative Henry, of Texas, charged that the Wall Street money trust was behind the present effort to get currency reform legislation.

Henry said the passage of currency reform legislation without a further investigation of the money trust would be a betrayal of Democratic pledges.

Gettysburg Can't Care For 45,000

PHILADELPHIA, June 15—Gettysburg is facing a problem in caring for the 45,000 Confederate war veterans who have asked accommodations for the anniversary celebration next month. The 5,000 inhabitants of the village can care for about 25,000. Food will be available for more, but the pressure of passenger train service will limit the amount of food that can be carried into the town.

To provide against a famine the anniversary commission has arranged that all supplies be taken in before the veterans arrive.

Dr. Samuel Dixon, of the State Department of Health, in charge of sanitary arrangements, says there must be of necessity many cases of illness. A large number, it is feared, will suffer from the heat and the excitement and strain of travel.

Arrangements have been made with hospitals in neighboring cities to receive cases from the emergency Hospital to the installed on the field.

Georgia Eclectics Meet Here Monday

The fortieth annual meeting of the Georgia Eclectic Medical Association will be held in Atlanta at the Aragon Hotel next Monday and Tuesday. A large attendance is expected. There will be visitors from other State associations.

The Georgia association is one of the leading institutes of this school of medicine. Georgia is one of few States maintaining a separate board of examiners for graduates of the eclectic schools.

The Georgia association is a member of the National Eclectic Association.

'3 Tads Mine, 3 My Husband's, 1 Ours'

A young woman from Tallapoosa stepped from a train at the Terminal Station Friday afternoon followed by seven children. The youngsters appeared to be about the same age, and curiosity was rampant. Finally Mrs. Payne, the matron, undertook to solve the mystery. She said:

"Are not some of these children twins, madam?"

"No," the woman replied, "three are mine, three are my husband's and one is ours."

Swindler Admits He Is One of Gang Here

Henry Brown, a negro, who says his home is in Montgomery, Saturday confessed to the police that he is a member of a gang of negroes that for three weeks has victimized numerous Atlanta merchants, reaping a harvest of several hundred dollars.

The game was to order groceries or other goods sent to a certain place with change for a bill, usually $20, and disappear with goods and money.

RULING IN GRAIN CASE EXPECTED MONDAY

Atlanta to Have Big Elevators if United States Supreme Court Upholds Extension Plea.

Decision of the United States Supreme Court in the grain products reshipping case, which may result in expenditure of $750,000 for grain elevators in Atlanta, is expected Monday, according to Harry T. Moore, traffic manager of the Atlanta Freight Bureau.

The case, which has been an issue for more than three years, was won several months ago before the Interstate Commerce Commission but held up later following appeal of the carriers of Nashville, the present reshipping point, to the commerce court. The Commerce Court overruled the decision of the commission and the case was taken to the United States Supreme Court.

The traffic interests, according to Mr. Moore, are hopeful of a favorable decision extending the territory to Atlanta. If such extension is made at least two or three big grain elevators, costing about $750,000 and employing about 200 men, will be erected in Atlanta.

Manager Moore expects shortly also a decision of the Supreme Court in the newspaper rate case, in which complaint was filed on the print paper rate from Eastern points into Atlanta, as well as decision on the complaint against present rates both East and West into Atlanta. Under the established rates Birmingham pays 89 cents as compared with 93 cents paid by Atlanta from Cincinnati. The difference in distance is only seven miles.

Commission Approves Rate Readjustment.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—The adjustment of rates on grain from points in South Dakota, Minnesota and Iowa to Duluth and Minneapolis, Minn., Superior and Milwaukee, Wis., and Chicago, proposed by railroads operating in that section, was approved to-day by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The new tariff allows a rate of 1 cent more per hundred pounds on shipments reconsigned from Milwaukee to the East than upon shipments via Minneapolis.

By approving the adjustments the commission vacates its order suspending the postponement made by the railroads in removing discrimination in what has become known as the Chicago-Duluth grain rate case.

RECOVERS INSURANCE.

CHATTANOOGA, June 15.—G. L. Stevens, of Cassandra, Ga., has been awarded $200 by Squire Eager against the Manufacturers, Merchants and Mechanics' Insurance Company of this city. A house insured by Stevens burned.

2 Accused Wilcox Men Granted Bail

CORDELE, GA., June 15.—In Superior Court of Crisp County to-day Judge W. F. George granted applications for bail in the sum of $100 each for Enoch McElmore and W. W. Ridgeway, who, with J. J. Coleman, W. A. Coleman and W. H. Stephens, are charged with the murder of Leon Melvin, who was waylaid and shot on a public highway in Wilcox County on April 6.

Action on an application for bail for J. J. Coleman was continued for ten days, awaiting additional affidavits. It is not thought W. A. Coleman and Stephens will ask for bond.

A change of venue for these two defendants from Wilcox County to Crisp will be applied for at the next term of Wilcox Superior Court, it is said.

Gen. A. J. West Reunion Speaker

Governor-elect John M. Slaton has been invited to represent the State of Georgia at the fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg July 3, and to make a speech, but the State Legislature will be in session and Governor Slaton has asked General Andrew J. West to speak for him. General West has accepted.

General West previously had been selected to speak at Gettysburg. He will consolidate the two speeches.

Seventy-five Atlanta people have signified their intention of attending, and reservations have been asked for 550 people throughout the State.

Ex-Governor Henry D. McDaniel who was wounded at Gettysburg, and Captain James W. English will go.

State Mediates Row Of Roads and Clerks

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., June 15.—A conference between State Labor Commissioner Clary and attorneys for the Iron Mountain and Rock Island Railways was held here to-day relative to the charge by members of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks that the railroads were attempting to break up the order in Arkansas by discharging employees unless they quit the brotherhood.

Commissioner Clary thinks the matter will be amicably adjusted. A further hearing was set for June 27.

EMPIRE CHARGES FALSE, ADMITS HUTCHESON

Lawyer Withdraws Accusations and Makes Apology to Hotel Lessee, J. L. Edmondson.

Carl Hutcheson, the young lawyer who made serious charges against the Empire Hotel, involving Marion Jackson, in a letter to John L. Edmondson, lessee of the hotel, today retracted every accusation and made a complete and sweeping apology. He said he had been grossly deceived by a man who committed perjury in making an affidavit against the hotel.

Here is Mr. Hutcheson's letter:

Mr. John L. Edmondson.

Atlanta, Ga.

My Dear Friend: You have seen a copy of an affidavit which was given to me in which the Empire Hotel was held up as an immoral hostelry. I wrote this affidavit in good faith and accepted the contents therein in good faith, but after conferring with Assistant Chief of Police Jett, whom I consider an honorable officer, I am convinced that the party who made the affidavit swore to a lie; that what he sets out in said affidavit is false, and that I have done you a wrong which I can never correct, except by future steadfast friendship.

In taking the man's affidavit, I wrote it as he gave it, but I am now convinced that he swore falsely. I wish to also state that I shall make every effort to have the affiant brought to justice, and I shall utilize every effort of mind and body to prosecute the affiant, and all parties connected therewith for perjury to the extent of my ability. I detest and despise liars, impostors and perjurers, and nothing would give me more pleasure than to place the affiant and his co-conspirators, if you please, in prison, where they justly belong.

I wish to state that I have never known you to do a dishonorable act, and more than that we have fought our battles side by side in the past, and I trust that we may do so in the future.

I beg to state that I think a man is a coward, if he does not acknowledge a mistake. I am confident that if any disorderly women or lewd women were ever guests at your hotel that you were not cognizant thereof.

In justice to myself, I will state, and I think that you will agree with me, that under the circumstances I had acted in good faith in this entire matter; unless, I made the error of not conferring with you before I placed before the Grand Jury the affidavit which I now consider a damnable piece of perjury by irresponsible parties. If my hundreds of friends consider that I am vacillating, let them have their opinions. I will not, before God and man, do any person wrong if I can avoid it. Why? Because "truth crushed to earth will rise again with might and power."

In this letter I hereby call the attention of the Grand Jury to an affidavit now in their possession which I consider a nefarious piece of work, as mean and low as the burning of Rome by Nero.

In conclusion, I wish to state that I shall continue to fight and bring to light the truth of my general accusations concerning vice conditions in this city, as published in the press of May 27; but never shall I allow any person to be wronged when I am convinced that I have been instrumental in wronging him.

I trust that this, my letter, will be accepted in the same spirit in which I write it.

Sincerely yours,

CARL HUTCHESON.

Crown Shy Evidence Of McCarty's Death

CALGARY, ALBERTA, June 15.—The Crown Prosecutor to-day is trying to buy a copy of the testimony taken by the Coroner's Jury in his investigation of the death of Luther McCarty in a prize fight here. Only two stenographers attended the inquest, one employed by the attorneys for Arthur Pelky, McCarty's opponent in the ring, and the other by a newspaper man. Neither of the copies is for sale.

Pelky will be tried next Thursday. Medical experts from Chicago and New York will testify McCarty dislocated his own neck.

McReynolds Limits Banks for Suburbs

WASHINGTON, June 15.—Suburbs of big cities in future will be unable to organize small national banks with capital of $25,000 or $50,000.

Attorney General McReynolds has rendered an opinion that if a city has a population of more than 50,000, the minimum capital for its national banks, whether in the city proper or in the suburbs, must be $200,000.

M'CRORY TO FIGHT TEXT BOOK TRUST

Legislator Thinks School Patrons Are Being Robbed—Says State Should Print Books.

War on the so-called school book trust will be declared in the Legislature this summer when Representative C. R. McCrory, of Schley County, introduces a bill which he says will save the people of Georgia $600,000 in the purchase of text books.

Mr. McCrory, who has made a special study of the matter, believes the patrons of schools are being robbed outright, and he advocates that the State should go into the publishing business and have printed by competitive bids and sold at actual cost all the books used in the common and high schools.

Discussing the matter, Mr. McCrory cites the case of Ontario, Canada, which has tried the system he advocates. Where $100 is spent in Atlanta for primers, he says, only $16 is the outlay in Ontario. For each $100 spent in Georgia for arithmetics, he says, you can buy the same number of better ones in Ontario for $25.

The argument that difference in cost is a result of the payment of duty on paper in the United States is not good, Mr. McCrory says, because the very opposite is true—Ontario pays a duty, and we do not.

Mr. McCrory says he will wage an aggressive fight for the measure, which is timely, since the the five-year contract with the school book publishers expires this summer.

Minimum Text Book Price Bill Is Passed.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., June 15.—Senator Magill's County Text Book Bill, which provides that text book publishers shall file copies of their books with the State Superintendent and that the price of such books in Illinois shall not be higher than that at which they are sold in other States, was passed by the Senate.

'Human Equation' in Railroading Stressed

STAMFORD, CONN., June 15.—That the "human equation" enters largely into railroading and that no railway can guard itself absolutely against wrecks was the sworn opinion given to-day by C. N. Woodward, general superintendent of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railway, at the inquest into the wreck of the Springfield Express here, which resulted in six deaths.

President Charles S. Mellen, already under indictment as the result of a previous wreck on his line, has been subpenaed.

Teachers Converted Dunne to Suffrage

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., June 15.—Suffragists to-day learned why Governor Dunne was an advocate of their cause. He explained it in his address at the jubilee banquet here following the adoption of the equal rights bill in the Legislature.

"When I was Mayor of Chicago," said Governor Dunne, "the most potent factor for good that I could depend upon in the city was the army of women school teachers—6,000 of them. Watching the work of these women, I became an advocate of woman."

Town Fights Forest Fires for Existence

DETOSKEY, MICH., June 15.—The town of Epsilon, Mich., near here, was threatened to-day by forest fires that have been raging for the last three days.

Heavy property damage has been done near Epsilon and the residents of the town have been working in relays fighting the fires day and night.

ROUND-ABOUT-TOWN STORIES

No Cause for The Least Fear.

An Atlanta doctor who had been called in to attend a patient suffering from a severe attack of apoplexy dropped into a restaurant the other night and saw his patient gorging himself with food that he had forbidden. He walked over to the table and said, with some show of indignation:

"I thought I told you not to eat any porterhouse steak without my permission?"

"So you did, doc; so you did."

"Then why are you disobeying my order?"

"This won't delay the paying of your bill, doc; this steak is being paid for by my friend here."

An Antique, And Expensive.

An old lady was searching in the dim bric-a-brac shop for something odd to take home with her. Finally she noticed a quaint figure, the head and shoulders of which appeared above the counter at the farthest end of the room. She turned to the clerk and said: "What's that queer old Japanese idol over there worth?"

The clerk answered in a subdued tone: "About $50,000, ma'am. That's the proprietor."

It Was Tommy's Little Drumstick.

One evening when Tommy, aged 5, who lives in West End, was having his daily bath, his mother was trying with small success to scrub his grimy little knees.

After watching her for some time, he said, patronizingly:

"Never mind, mamma. Don't you know that's the dark meat, anyway?"

En Route, That Was All.

"Drive like the dickens!" shouted the West Peachtree Street man, springing into a cab.

With a lurch the vehicle went forward and away they went like lightning through the streets.

People shouted, policemen impotently held up their hands as the cab dashed up one street and down another, taking corners on two wheels and threatening destruction on every hand.

At last, after half an hour's furious racing, they slowed up and the fare poked his head out of the window.

"Are we nearly there?" he asked, breathlessly.

The driver turned in his seat and shouted:

"Where did you want to go, sir? You have not told me yet."

Daniels Joins the Soft Drink Brigade

BOSTON, June 1.—Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels, in Boston for the Flag Day celebration, today enrolled in the "soft drink" brigade.

Bryan says grape juice, Roosevelt prefers buttermilk, Mayor Fitzgerald dilutes his grape juice with ginger ale to add a little "tang."

"But give me bottled mineral water," declared Secretary Daniels. "I would spoil my stomach with grape juice, and milk makes one fat."

UNDERPASS ISSUE UP TO RAILROADS

Plan Worked Out to Solve Forsyth Street Problem Only Needs Railway's Sanction.

To hasten closing of the Forsyth Street underpass, Chairman J. T. Kimbrough, of the Bridge Committee of the General Council, has invited the Georgia Railroad Commission to attend a conference in the Mayor's office at 11 o'clock this morning.

Efforts will be made to get the assent of the Railroad Commission and the N., C. and St. L. Railroad to temporary closing of the underpass, so the plans can be laid before Governor Brown immediately.

The Bridge Committee and the citizens, who compose the general underpass committee, adhere to the plan of closing the underpass immediately under pledge to reopen it if necessary.

President Winburn, of the Central of Georgia, has given the city an easement from Alabama Street to Forsyth, to continue indefinitely and one year after notice. During this year, Chairman Kimbrough said, the city would have ample time to provide another way of ingress and egress to and from the W. and A. team tracks.

This temporary plan was agreed to at a previous conference, and its consummation depends on the assent of the N., C. and St. L., lessees of the W. and A. Railroad. President John W. Thomas, of the N., C. and St. L., wired Chairman Kimbrough that Hunter McDonald, chief engineer of the N., C. and St. L., would represent that road at to-day's conference.

Chairman Kimbrough is authority for the statement that the street car company is anxious to move its tracks to the center of Forsyth Street. If the Governor, the Railroad Commissioners and the N., C. and St. L. engineer agree to the temporary closing plan, Forsyth Street will be an unobstructed thoroughfare soon.

W. A. Quillian Dies At Commerce Home

COMMERCE, June 15.—W. A. Quillian died at his home here to-day. He moved to Commerce about thirty years ago from Banks County. He formerly represented Banks in the Legislature and was also Mayor of Commerce. He leaves two brothers, Fletcher A. Quillian, former Mayor Pro Tem. of Atlanta, and J. T. Quillian, of Commerce, besides three children.

Interment will take place from the First Methodist Church Sunday.

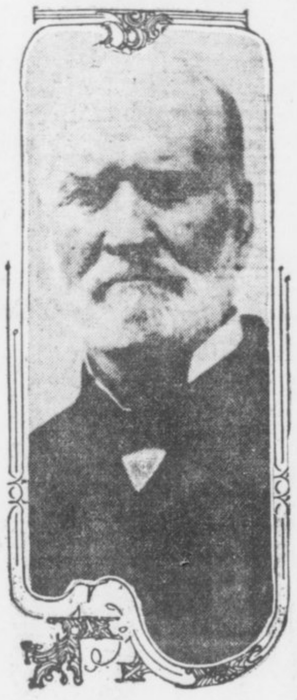
AUCTION

NEXT THURSDAY IS THE DAY



Ex-Secretary Wilson===

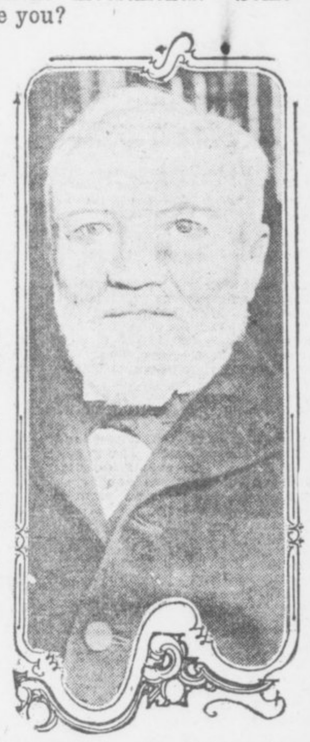
Hon. James Wilson, former Secretary of Agriculture in Washington during several administrations, said not long ago in a speech before the people of Augusta, Ga.:

"You are going to find your lands getting away from you and prices advancing. The people from the North and West are coming South. This is the realm of future prosperity. The soil, climate and the people of the South have heretofore been greatly misunderstood. A new epoch in its history is now beginning. Opportunity for development in the South is unrivaled, and is here for both capitalist and home-seeker."

Mr. Wilson is well fitted to speak about the South. And these words coming from a man who knows every section of the country are very significant. He has been here many times and has studied the land question in the South closely. For that reason he is well qualified to speak.

What he says is reason why real estate is an excellent investment, and particularly Atlanta real estate. And past history shows that no section of Atlanta is better for investment in real estate than Ansley Park. That's why the twenty-five lots which will be auctioned off next Thursday in Ansley Park Annex will be excellent investments. Somebody is going to make some money. Will it be you?

Andrew Carnegie Says----



"Young woman or young man, buy some suburban property and hold on to it. It is the surest investment since civilization."

The famous ironmaster knows what he is talking about. He has practiced what he preaches, for he is a large landowner.

Everybody knows what happened after every other auction of Ansley Park lots. Those who keep posted say the same thing will happen regarding the Ansley Park Annex lots which will be auctioned off next Thursday afternoon.

Thousands upon thousands of dollars have been made for Ansley Park investors. The name of Ansley Park has been synonymous with increased values and steady enhancement. Ansley Park Annex has been given the same care and attention which characterized the development of Ansley Park. The lots are high and overlook Ansley Park.

Ansley Park Annex lots present a good opportunity to Atlanta investors to follow the advice of the millionaire ironmaster.

Russell Sage----

During his lifetime, the advice of Russell Sage was sought by the greatest financiers in the world. He was an authority on the accumulation of money and that he was a good authority was demonstrated by the many millions which he left when he died. This is what he thought about real estate investments:

"Buy lots in outlying districts, paying a small sum each week; await developments, follow your vocation and in the end other people have made money for you."

That this was good advice has been shown time and again in Atlanta, and with Ansley Park lots in particular. The enhancement in this property has been phenomenal. It is pointed out by enthusiastic Atlantans as an illustration of Atlanta's wonderful growth. The whole South knows about it.

That's why Ansley Park Annex lots which will be auctioned off next Thursday will present an excellent opportunity for following the advice of the late financier.

Grover Cleveland----

Not only successful business men and financiers point to enhancement in realty values as good illustrations of the accumulation of wealth, but the same advice is given by statesmen. Among those who made a close study of this was the late ex-President Grover Cleveland. This is what he said:

"More wealth has been gathered from the suburban realty than all other methods combined."

Isn't the advice of such authorities worth following? Just think of the Atlanta men you know about who have made fortunes by the enhancement of Atlanta real estate values. You can count lots of them. Even among your friends you will find some who have made money by simply buying Atlanta real estate, and then, as Russell Sage said: "Let other people make money for you."

Remember the day of the auction—

NEXT THURSDAY, JUNE 19. If you go out there and buy a lot, it will probably be an eventful day for you. It may be that your fortune will date from that day. There are twenty-five lots out there waiting to make money for some folks. Be one of the folks.

MAD DOG CASE IS IMPORTANT LAW TEST

Question Is, Can State Mandamus Mayor to Perform Administrative Act?

By JAMES B. NEVIN.

May a court in Georgia by writ of mandamus compel a Mayor of a duly incorporated Georgia city to perform an administrative act, if the Mayor declines to perform it of his own motion?

The first case of the sort ever filed in a Georgia court is now up for hearing in Savannah, and lawyers all over Georgia are watching it with interest.

Because he is entitled to have "the said Mayor perform his official duty as herein set out," and because he is "without any other legal remedy except the writ of mandamus to compel the performance of the official duty of the said Mayor. Major George H. Richter has filed in the Superior Court a writ of mandamus against Mayor Richard J. Davant to compel the enforcement of the dog ordinance.

The writ goes on to state that the relator (Major Richter) "was bit by a dog while upon the streets on June 10, 1913, and on said day called upon said Mayor and informed him that his failure to enforce the ordinance of the city had been the cause of the relator's being bit." The said Mayor then informed the relator that he could not enforce the said ordinance, and asked relator, "What are you going to do about it?"

Judge Charlton is presiding in the case, and it is one of more than ordinary moment, despite its seemingly humorous aspect.

A recent mad dog scare in Savannah precipitated this matter. During the progress of the scare more than a dozen people were bitten, but the dog law ordinance has remained a dead letter on the statute books, nevertheless.

It was stated recently in this column that in the last national census "Laurens lost its place as one of Georgia's big six counties, and Muscogee slipped in."

This statement was misleading and inaccurate in a way, and H. M. Stanley, State Commissioner of Commerce and Labor, calls attention to it in the following interesting communication:

"Laurens lost to Muscogee only in that she failed to win over Muscogee. Under the circumstances some figures will hardly prove to be amiss. In 1890 Laurens had a population of 13,742 and was the fifty-second County in population in the State. That same year Muscogee had 27,761 people and was the seventh County in population. Then years later Laurens rose to fourteenth place, with a total population of 25,908. Muscogee still remained seventh with a total population of 29,836, Thomas jumping from eighth to sixth place. When the census was taken in 1910 it showed that Laurens had gained seven more numbers and had a population of 35,501. Muscogee went up one point and had, in 1910, a population of 37,227. From 1900 to 1910 Laurens gained 9,593 inhabitants and Muscogee 6,391. Although Laurens failed to win over Muscogee, losing by 726, during the decade ending with 1910 she gained 3,202 more inhabitants than Muscogee."

Columbus wishes to be put under a commission form of government, and steps to effect the change have been inaugurated.

At a recent mass meeting in that city, resolutions were adopted calling upon the members of the House from Muscogee to prepare and present a bill looking to commission government in Columbus, and submit as soon as possible after the Legislature meets. An overwhelming majority of the citizens of Columbus are thought to be favorable to the measure.

The Honorable Tinsly Ragland, member of the House from Talbot, is coming to Atlanta with the weight of empire upon his broad and willing shoulders.

His fell purpose is to have the interesting—er—locality of—er—Box Springs incorporated as a Georgia town.

Unless Box Springs is incorporated pretty quick, Tinsley Ragland likely will go into rapid decline and become the most unhappy and melancholy man in the world.

He lives, breathes and thinks nothing but an incorporated Box Springs nowadays.

Beginning next week, things will take on a lively color here in Atlanta, so far as politics is concerned.

Both Judge Allen and Senator Anderson already have secured headquarters in the Kimball House, wherein they will conduct their rival campaigns for the presidency of the Senate, while Representatives Burwell and Hardeman have also secured headquarters for their speakership campaigns.

In addition to these headquarters, the proposed new counties of Barrow and Candler are ready for business, or will be before the Legislature meets.

The Kimball House lobby, where for years politicians in Georgia most have congregated, presents nowadays an animated scene. Already the advance legislative guard is on hand, and it is a dull day when one fails to meet fifteen or twenty well-known public men about that place.

The forthcoming session of the Legislature is going to be a most interesting one. The new House is made up in heavy majority of new men and its principal concern is to be tax reform.

Buys $2,000 Pearl In Clam for 10 Cts.

LONGBRANCH, N. J., June 15.—A pearl, appraised by experts to be worth $2,000, was found in a clam by a stranger to whom Captain Charles Casler, a fisherman, had sold a few at the wharf here for 10 cents.

The stranger pried open and ate them, when he discovered the precious gem.

Largest Bible Class Breaks Record

Sells 1,000 Entertainment Tickets

Mrs. Talcott to Repeat Readings

Mrs. Janet R. Talcott, who will give literary recital at First Christian Church on Monday next.

Program Reproduced by Special Request—Entertainer to Leave Atlanta Soon.

The largest number of tickets ever sold for a single church entertainment in Atlanta has been sold by the First Christian Bible Class, which is the largest Sunday school in the world, the number of tickets disposed of being 1,000.

Monday evening Mrs. Janet R. Talcott will present her interpretive reading of VanDyke's "Other Wise Man" in the main auditorium of the First Christian Church. Several months ago Mrs. Talcott gave the same program which she is repeating at the request of hundreds of people who missed her first entertainment.

Immediately after this final appearance of Mrs. Talcott before an Atlanta audience she will leave for Cleveland, Ohio, where she will reside.

Mrs. Talcott has arranged several Southern programs to be given in the North in the near future, which will include the writings of Joel Chandler Harris, Miss Mildred Rutherford, Frank L. Stanton, Sidney Lanier, Lollie Belle Wylie and other Southern writers.

Miss Carrie Porter will assist Mrs. Talcott Monday evening, rendering vocal solos that fill the intermissions in the reading.

PROTEST IS MADE AGAINST CAR LINE

A vigorous protest against the proposed routing of cars the length of Piedmont Avenue was lodged with the Councilmen of the Eighth Ward by residents of that section Saturday morning.

A committee made up of J. V. Boehm, A. J. Shropshire and M. B. Eubanks, residing on Myrtle Street, represented that the proposed plan would be objectionable and would serve to depreciate property values in the residential section in that the cars would run through the negro district going to and from the center of the city.

Those opposed to the plan outlined by the Street Railway Committee assert that if the committee maintains its present attitude and if it appears that Council will adopt its recommendations, an indignation meeting of the patrons of the Piedmont Avenue car line in the Eighth Ward will be called for Monday night in the Tenth Street School house to frame a more emphatic protest.

MOROS REMAIN FIRM AGAINST U. S. ATTACK

MANILA, P. I., June 15.—American soldiers and native constabulary, fighting under the Stars and Stripes, made another attack to-day at Bagsag upon the rebellious Moros, whom Brigadier General John J. Pershing, U. S. A., commander of Mindanao, is trying to subdue and disarm.

The Americans attacked the remaining fort held by the Moros, but met with stiff resistance.

The rebels are fighting with fanatical gallantry, while the Americans have shown heroic courage throughout.

The fighting has been going on for three days.

Senate Committee Studies Metal List

WASHINGTON, June 15.—The Democratic members of the Senate Finance Committee to-day took up consideration of the sub-committee report on the metal schedule, which was started yesterday. A number of changes have been suggested in this schedule, among them the free listing of ferro-manganese and blast furnace products.

The Williams sub-committee is said to have nearly completed its labors. Chairman Simmons intends to report the amended bill to the Democratic caucus next week.

Bishop Bequeaths Relics to Cathedral

ALBANY, June 15.—In the last will of William Croswell Doane, Bishop of Albany, he gave to the Cathedral of All Saints the pastoral staff, which was made out of the roof timbers of the refectory in the old building of St. Augustines, Canterbury.

Bishop Doane also bequeathed to the Cathedral the folio editions of the Fathers and Councils and of the prayer books of the Church of England.

157 SEEK PLACES IN MAIL SERVICE

Postmaster Hugh McKee Saturday was a busy man. There were 113 applicants for clerkships and 44 for positions as letter carriers before him for inspection, preliminary to appointment.

Eight clerks and five carriers will be taken on at once. The other applicants will be put on during the year as they are needed.

It is estimated by Mr. McKee that at the present rate of growth in the mail at the Atlanta office, owing to the increased population, before the year is out he will have taken on 20 additional clerks and six to ten additional carriers.

One of the latest features of the physical examination is the barring of all applicants who have what is known as flat feet. To test whether the applicant is affected with this deformity, he is required to stand on his tiptoes and jump as far as possible and land squarely on the ball of the foot.

The applicants selected will go into the service as substitutes and will receive $800 per year as a starter. After the first year the salary is raised to $900, and each succeeding year a gradual increase until the salary totals $1,200 per year. Substitutes average about $40 per month until they are appointed as regular carriers or clerks by the postmaster.

New York Banks War Dictators of World

ST. PAUL, June 15.—The high cost of living is due to the waste caused by expenditures for so-called national defense, according to Dr. David Starr Jordan, President of Leland Standford (Jr.) University. He declared that war between Japan and the United States was an impossibility.

He said New York bankers practically controlled the war situation of the world, and added:

"There is no country in the world that could attack the United States without first coming to New York to borrow money with which to carry on its warfare and arranging all details here."

Mother and Sons

By Virginia T. Van De Water.

"OH, it is pitiful, pitiful," exclaims Thackeray, "the bootless love of mothers for their children in Vanity Fair!"

The words recurred to my mind as I looked into the tragic eyes of a widow the mother of two sons. Her husband had died when her oldest child was but five years old. She was what has been called "a born mother," with whom maternity was an absorbing passion. She had married at eighteen and was a widow at twenty-six. For years she had worked uncomplainingly to educate her sons.

There had been not only work but the sacrifice of many of the things in which women delight. She had not had time to go into society during working-hours, and in the evening she "did not like to leave the boys." She put them both through college, living close to them, spending her strength and youth in the effort. When one of them finished his university course he went into business on the Pacific slope. Then the mother's face developed lines of anxiety, still she smiled bravely.

"I educated him that he might make the best of his chances," she said firmly, "and it would be selfish for me to mention to him my dread of parting from him. And I have my other boy, you know."

Two years later her second son was graduated and went to South America as a mining engineer. It was soon after this that I called on the lonely mother. She had grown old in a few weeks. She began talking of her boys—calmly at first, then her voice quivered and broke.

Need Her No More.

"What is there for me to do now?" she asked. "I am no good to anybody. I have dropped utterly out of the old set and world to which I once belonged. I am too old to learn new ways. My one aim has been to fit my boys for the battle of life, but I hoped that battle would be fought near me. Now I am left alone. I would be a selfish creature in the eyes of the world if I were to try to keep my sons with me—for they have their own lives to live, and mine is done. They will never be mine again. They will sometimes come to see me, but they will never come as they used to come. They need me no more."

She is not yet fifty and feels that her life is done! She is one of the "Mothers of Men" of whom George Cabot Lodge wrote:

"Weep, mothers of men!
The hands of the world are strong to take
The lives ye bear for the world's sole sake,
To try their souls till they bend or break;
Your children vanish from out your ken—
Weep, mothers of men!"

It is all true, viewed from one standpoint, and yet when women dare make a moan like this the world calls them selfish. If so, then it is too late for the mischief to be repaired.

"The greatest kindness we can do our children is to teach them to be independent of us," remarked one woman sententiously.

The mother to whom she spoke flung her hands out with a gesture that was almost despairing.

"Ah, yes!" she exclaimed bitterly, "but good Lord! who is going to teach US to be independent of THEM!"

There is the cry of the mother. Who, indeed?

Never Lose Daughters.

Mothers of daughters claim that they never lose these, and their contention is true. Even after a girl marries she turns to her mother for advice and counsel, often loving her better than she did before she appreciated what women must suffer for their children.

Yet, for the mother of sons there is always the possibility of which our poet writes. How can she fortify herself against this misery? It can not be prevented—God help her!—but it may be made lighter. For she can be less unreasoningly unselfish.

Does this sound cruel? Such selfishness as I have in mind is kindness to the mother and true kindness to the child. No boy is better for knowing that he fills his mother's entire mental and spiritual horizon, that she counts all sacrifice for him as gain. The time arrives—unless he be unusually noble—when, in spite of himself, the sacrifice is taken for granted by him; he thinks of it as his due and makes a common thing of it.

Would I have a boy sacrifice his future to his mother? No, but I would have him consult her a little in planning that future, and he will not do this if she has not taught him to consider her wishes as well as his own. If two equally good opportunities present themselves, I would have him choose the one which will keep him near his mother rather than that at the other side of the continent—always supposing the one at home means as big a future for him as does the one abroad.

Wider Views of Life.

But we are dealing now with the mother, rather than with the boy. I claim that even when her children are more babies she should force herself to take an interest in things outside of the nursery. She need not neglect her children to do this. Indeed, she will give them better care and bring them up in a finer, broader atmosphere if she has wide views of life and knows what is going on in the world. And, as her children grow to need less of her personal care, she ought to go about and meet people and think of other things as of the needs and wishes of her offspring.

Blessed—thrice blessed—is the mother of men when those men remain near her. If they must leave her she can not escape keen suffering, but if she has fitted her "world" very "full of a number of things" she may escape adding to the pain of parting and missing the agony of a desolate, objectless life, an empty heart and idle hands.

THE TRIPLE TIE

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

SYNOPSIS

Gordon Kelly, a mountain boy of Georgia, goes to Atlanta. He becomes the sensation of the baseball world through his marvelous playing, although he said that he had never played a game before arriving in Atlanta. He is bought by the Boston American League Club for $50,000. Kelly incurs the enmity of Forrest Cain, a wealthy ne'er-do-well, at the same time winning the friendship and love of Mildred Deery, daughter of an Atlanta banker. Kelly is hurt in a game and Mildred runs to his assistance. He recovers, leaves the hospital and mysteriously disappears. He is not heard from for months. Mildred admits to herself that she loves Kelly. Her father dislikes the publicity given Mildred's assistance to Kelly on the baseball field. He gets Mildred to agree to go to the mountains. Cain follows Mildred and calls upon her. While Mildred is fishing she suddenly comes upon Gordon Kelly. In the meeting each learns of the other's love. Kelly is sought everywhere by the press. Cain proposes to Mildred and is refused. Kelly meets Cain and the latter tries to shoot Kelly. Elmer saves Kelly's life.

Now go on with the story.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

CHAPTER XXIX.

THREE days passed before Gordon Kelly heard directly from Mildred Deery. Her nerves shattered and on the verge of hysteria, she had been taken home by Gordon after the near-tragedy in which Cain was involved. She would not allow Mrs. Shephard to summon either of her parents from Atlanta nor would she permit her to call the nearest doctor. She was her own physician in the days that followed and she began by prescribing complete rest and quietness. That, she told herself, was what the most celebrated physician in the land would have told her.

Gordon talked over the telephone with Elmer twice a day, night and morning, in the intervals before he saw Mildred again. With Steve as the messenger, he sent her all sorts of little delicacies and rare flowers. Where they came from she could not imagine. Certainly he had not had time to order them from Atlanta or Chattanooga, the nearest large cities; in fact, she doubted if they could be procured anywhere in those cities. His thoughtfulness had not a little to do with her convalescence, following the shock of the encounter with Cain.

Mildred Telephones.

On the morning of the third day she awoke calm and even cheerful. At breakfast she remarked to Elmer that she would be ready to resume the lesson in French, whereat the lad exclaimed, "Oh, shucks." Soon after she went to the telephone, rang three times and listened.

"Is Mr. Kelly at home?" she asked, when the ring had been answered. Elmer, who was within earshot, though not eavesdropping, grinned.

"There is no Mr. Kelly here," came the reply.

"Wait just a minute, please," said the voice, interrupting. There was some confusion on the other end of the line and then she heard Gordon Kelly's voice.

"Good morning," he said. "Is this you, Mildred?"

"Yes, Mr. Kelly."

"Mr. Kelly, eh? You call me Mr. Kelly one minute and Gordon the next. However, I won't quarrel with you, because you have been ill. How are you this morning? I have been very anxious about you."

"I am feeling quite myself again and thank you ever so much for all those nice things you sent me and for those lovely flowers. Tell me, where in the world did you get them?"

"The flowers? Oh, the gardener produced them when I made a requisition. The housekeeper produced the other things. I'm glad you enjoyed them."

An Engagement.

There was a brief silence, then Gordon said:

"Are you still there?"

"Yes," replied Mildred. "I was just thinking what a strange man you are with your automobiles and your gardeners and your colored genie and your housekeepers and your network of telephones away up here in the mountains, and your ball playing."

"Good-bye, Mrs. Gordon Kelly."

She heard Gordon laugh over the telephone. Then he said:

"Well, you know, the first time I saw you at your house your mother asked me about my life in the mountains; you wouldn't let me tell her and afterward, when I asked you why you did it, you said it was a secret. Do you remember?"

"Yes, I do, and it turns out a good deal more of a mystery than I had bargained for."

When Gordon spoke again his voice was lowered.

"Tell me, please; when will you feel well enough to let me see you?"

Mildred unconsciously lowered her voice, too.

"Why—I feel all right now. I'm not ill any more."

"May I call this afternoon?" he said, eagerly.

"Certainly; delighted to have you. But suppose I meet you?"

"Fine! Great! Where?"

"At—at—say at the bridge at 3. Now, good-bye; I must give Elmer his lesson in French."

If Mildred could have seen through the telephone, she would have seen Gordon slam up the receiver and turn three backward somersaults without stopping.

After all the threats, Elmer didn't take his lesson. It is true the books were produced and Mildred sat down at a table, opposite Elmer on the porch and assumed the dignified air of a schoolmarm, but that was as far as they got with the foreign language that morning. It was all off when Elmer said with a grin:

"They didn't know any Mr. Kelly up there, did they?"

No Gordon Kelly.

"What do you know about it, you little rascal?" demanded Mildred.

"I know all about it. There's no such man as Gordon Kelly."

"What do you mean, child?"

"I mean just what I say. There's no such person as Gordon Kelly."

"That's simply nonsense, Elmer; what in the world ails you to-day?"

"Oh, I got you buffaloed all right, Mildred. Ha, ha!" and he laughed gleefully.

"Elmer, you can be the most tantalizing boy I ever knew when you want to be. Now, look me straight in the eye and tell me what you mean."

"I'm telling you the truth, Mildred," said the lad, seriously. "His name isn't Gordon Kelly at all; it's Mr. Bud."

"Mr. Bud! Elmer, you're simply crazy. I won't listen to you any more. Take your books and go away."

"Now, Mildred, listen. I'm not fooling at all." Thereupon he told her of finding the telephone beside the brook and calling up Gordon Kelly and of his conversation with Steve, the colored boy. When he had finished Mildred tossed her head in the air and said, with decision:

"I'll find out what his name is mighty quick."

"When?"

"This afternoon. Now, I'll excuse you from taking your lesson this morning. Get my little rifle and go off somewhere and practice at a target."

"Oh, gee, Mildred, you're just great," cried the lad as he ran into the house to fetch the rifle.

Mildred's Thoughts.

But Mildred wished to be left alone. She went to the hammock and curled herself in it and gave herself over to her thoughts. If Manager Bill Smith, of the Atlanta ball club, could have been with her at that moment, they would have agreed without argument that Gordon Kelly, or Mr. Bud, or whatever the strange man's name was, was the most mysterious individual in the world.

Mildred began to go over the entire situation in her mind. She hadn't gone far when she suddenly came to the realization that she hardly knew anything at all about Gordon Kelly. She knew nothing about his family, his life nor his habits. He had been introduced into her family as Gordon Kelly, yet here, up in his mountain home, no one knew of a Gordon Kelly. They called him Mr. Bud. Who was Mr. Bud? Her father certainly didn't know him by that name. He had told her that he had met Gordon Kelly through Judge Barbee. Certainly the Judge wouldn't be a party to any deception. Was Gordon Kelly an assumed name? Was it an alias? Her father had told her nothing about Gordon Kelly's family—because he didn't know anything about it himself, probably.

Was his family "respectable?" Did he really own the property, or was he an employee or representative of the people that did own it? He might be a foreman or a superintendent. No harm in that, thought Mildred, but she would like to know about it.

Then she reviewed her brief acquaintance with Gordon Kelly. She recalled the conversations she had had with him in the few times they had met. The talk, she remembered, was mostly about books and music and kindred topics and the small talk that two young people would indulge in. It came back to her that he talked with great intelligence on music and art and literature. Surely he was refined and cultured. His family must be "respectable."

And then Mildred thought of Gordon Kelly the MAN—the tall, fine-featured, broad-shouldered, strong and powerful MAN. And her mind dwelt on his simplicity of manner, his kindness and gentleness and his prowess on the ball field and his bravery so lately displayed. And she was satisfied. She smiled contentedly to herself as she lay curled in the hammock. No, she would not break the engagement she had for 3 o'clock that afternoon, but she would find out all about the Gordon Kelly-Mr. Bud mystery.

"Make me look pretty, Mandy," said Mildred to her maid, who assisted her to dress when the time came. "I'se got a 'portant 'gagement fo' dis' afternoon."

She seldom allowed herself to unbend in dignity to her maid, but today she was feeling very cheerful and happy.

"Will you wear your tan dress, Miss Mildred?" asked the maid.

"No, Mandy, I'll wear the light blue; it's more becoming, don't you think so?"

Thus arrayed, she went out on the porch and asked Elmer to bring the runabout around. When it came she stepped in it and took her place behind the wheel.

"Good-bye, Elmer, see you later," she said to the lad.

"Gee, ain't I going, too?" said Elmer in a tone of disappointment.

"Not this time, honey; good-bye."

Before the car was fairly in motion the boy jumped on the side of it and, leaning over, whispered mischievously in Mildred's ear:

"Good-bye, Mrs. Gordon Kelly."

"You little wretch!" exclaimed Mildred, blushing furiously.

But she turned her head a moment later and waved her hand and smiled at him.

CHAPTER XXX.

WHEN Forrest Cain, lying unconscious in the road beside his automobile, regained his senses he saw Gordon Kelly standing over him. His mind was befuddled and he did not recall what had happened to him. Kelly prodded him with the toe of his shoe as though he was a dead snake and said, sharply, "Get up."

Cain rose slowly to his feet. The fight was all out of him.

"Walk around," ordered Kelly. Cain took a few steps. Kelly left him and joined Mildred and Elmer. "He is all right. Get in the car, please, and we will get out of this."

Without even another glance at Cain, the three entered Kelly's automobile and a minute later they were whirling down the road, leaving Cain, with singular indifference, to his own meditations.

Cain was sober by this time—sober, sullen and resentful. His right hand pained him. He looked at the back of it where the stone thrown by Elmer had struck him. It was crushed and bleeding. The fingers hung down as though without life. He felt of the bruise and winced. There was no doubt but that bones were broken. He cranked the motor with his left hand, entered the car and attempted to set the control into low speed, but found he had lost the use of his right handl. Reaching over with his left hand, however, he was able to manipulate the lever and then, easing in the clutch, the car moved slowly ahead. It was necessary to turn around. This was accomplished with infinite labor and finally the car was straightened out for the journey to Cain's shack. This had to be taken at low speed, however, because once the car started ahead he could not change the speed, as he only had the use of his left hand and could not take that from the steering wheel in order to change gears.

In gloomy silence he crawled back the six miles to his mountain habitation. He summoned his man George and commanded him to pack up. His campaign had utterly failed. He would go back to Atlanta to nurse his injury, nurse his lacerated feelings and plan some revenge that would settle scores with Gordon Kelly once and for all. While his man was busy packing he bathed his hand in cold water and, after pouring whisky on the wound as an antiseptic (and pouring a considerable quantity of it down his throat as an antisplenetic) he bandaged the injured member, swore at George on general principles and went outside to smoke and think some more.

In his three personal encounters with Gordon Kelly Cain had been badly worsted, verbally or physically, every time. Yet Gordon Kelly was in no way to blame in any case. He was attending strictly to his own business and had sought no quarrel with the man who declared himself his foe. This phase of the matter never once entered the mind of Cain. He only knew that it was through Gordon Kelly that all his troubles came.

At this point his sullen reveries were interrupted by the appearance of a tall, raw-boned, black-bearded man, dressed in the uncouth habiliments of the backwoods. Without a nod or any salutation, he made known the nature of his business.

"We done run out of matches," he said. "Got any?"

Cain was accustomed to deference from those he considered beneath him.

"What do you want with them?" he asked with a scowl.

"Eat 'em, mebbe; what's that to you?" drawled the stranger.

"Where do you come from?"

"None o' your damned business. Ef yer ain't got no matches, say so."

"You're on my property; you're trespassing," declared Cain.

"What do you all reckon you're goin' to do about?" observed the stranger in the same even tone.

$250 in Prizes for Best Solution of "The Triple Tie"

YOU read the twenty-four installments of the great baseball mystery story of "The Triple Tie" and now you have a fair idea of the simplicity of the offer The Georgian makes—how you may win $100 by working out the solution of the mystery as nearly as its author, A. H. C. Mitchell, has done as you can.

Mr. Mitchell has written the last chapter, but his copy is sealed up in a vault at the American National Bank. When all but this final chapter has been printed, The Georgian readers will be asked to submit to three competent judges, none of them connected with this newspaper, their version of what the grand denouement should be.

To the person who most closely approximates Mr. Mitchell's final chapter $100 will be awarded. Other prizes, making the total prize list $250, also will be distributed.

Here is the list of the awards:

No. 1	$100
No. 2	$50
No. 3	$25
No. 4	$15
Nos. 5 to 16, each	5

Read the 25th installment of the great mystery story and you will not need to be urged to read the succeeding chapters. The story will grip you. As you read, try to follow the author's channel of thought and when the time comes for you to sit down and write that final chapter, be ready to win one of the big cash prizes in The Georgian's great offer.

Man Who Loves Like a Pirate

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

C. C. W. writes:

"I am 27 years of age, and am desperately in love with a girl three years my junior. She is beautiful, accomplished and a leader in our social set. Although I have proposed to her three or four times, she still refuses to marry me. I feel certain that there is no other occupying her time, for if I had a rival I would unquestionably put him out of the way.

"How am I to persuade this cold-hearted woman to become my bride?"

Persuade her by storming her father's castle some dark night, and carrying her off strapped behind you on the back of your noble charger. That is the time-honored method of all swashbucklers, and it is the method that would most appeal to one who says if he had a rival he would "unquestionably put him out of the way."

It is not the modern way. It is not the sane way, but you are not modern, and I could almost suggest that one who talks of putting a rival "out of the way" is not sane.

It is a further mark that you are not wise that you call your sweetheart coldhearted. Because a woman will not yield to one lover doesn't prove she has a cold heart. In your case, my dear Sir Reginald, or Sir Launcelot, or whoever was the hero of your latest fiction, the cold heart of your lady love proves a cool head.

She will not marry you though you propose twenty times. There is something to you of which she does not approve. Instead of making over yourself, you keep on proposing, imagining that the opposition to be overcome lies not in your matchless person, but in her cold heart.

A Gory Love.

Yours is a love that reeks of gore and gunpowder. You emit fire from your nostrils when you speak of your passion, and would impress this woman with your daredevil disposition, your dauntless courage, and your untamed strength. I have known men who loved like pirates, just as you love. They became the kind of husbands who were afraid to go to the door when there was a ring late at night, and sent their wives instead.

You talk like a cheap hero in a book. It is the sort of talk that sometimes has telling effect on girls of 16, but, thank Heaven, the lady love of your piratical schemes and bloodthirsty dreams is 24 and has such a clear vision that she sees you as you are.

My dear, bold buccaneer, drop your paper sword, wipe the ink-red stains from your hands, cut off that fierce mustache and become a MAN. If you really love this woman, make of yourself such a worthy man that she will no longer spurn you, but will seek you instead.

Don't get on your knees when you propose, as did the heroes in your favorite fiction. Don't color your conversation with threats to carry her off bodily, slaying all who intervene. Stand on your feet, like a manly man, and tell her you love her in language that befits these most sane and prosaic times.

Your paper sword has failed to win. Try the better way of showing her a good, strong right arm that is ready to serve her through life.

Recognize the existence of a rival and know that he lies in this masquerade you have put on. "Put him out of the way" by all means by conducting yourself in a saner fashion.

Be a man and love as a man of 27 should love, leaving to those ten years your junior dreams and schemes that smell of gunpowder and gore.

.:. Revelations of High English Society .:.

By LADY DOROTHY NEVILL.

A GRANDE DAME and leader of the social world during the greater part of the past century, Lady Dorothy Nevill, who died recently, was famous for her charm of manner, incisive wit, and brilliant repartee. She was the confidante of royal personages, statesmen, field marshals and diplomatists. At her receptions one met all the most attractive people of the day. Her intimate friends included such noted men as Beaconsfield, Gladstone, Wilberforce, Cobden, Bright and Matthew Arnold. Her greatest friend, perhaps, was Beaconsfield. He was always "Dear Dizzy" to Lady Dorothy, while he always addressed her as "My Dearest Dorothy," and their correspondence provides many interesting glimpses of this great Tory statesman.

Perhaps one of the best stories which Lady Dorothy has told about Disraeli is that concerning the occasion when a photographer asked him to pose for a photograph leaning on a chair. This at once aroused the indignation of Mrs. Disraeli. "I soon settled that," she said, afterwards, to Lady Dorothy, when relating the incident, "for I said, 'Dizzy has always stood alone, and he shall continue to do so.'"

"The Gorgeous Lily."

On one occasion Lady Dorothy, who was sitting next to Mr. Gladstone, was asked by the latter if she had ever heard Lord Beaconsfield express any particular fondness for the primrose. She admitted he had not, adding, "The gorgeous lily, I think, was more to his taste."

Referring to Gladstone, Lady Dorothy used to tell a story which is illustrative of the "Grand Old Man's" character. He was discoursing to her of the perfect immunity of English public men from all dangers of assault or assassination in his day, and all the time two detectives, dressed as footmen, were in the very room guarding him, while another was upstairs in the drawing-room ready to mingle with the guests.

It was Mr. Joseph Chamberlain who, talking to Lady Dorothy of female suffrage, once said, "Thank goodness, there are no female members. Of the two evils I prefer Parnellites to petticoats."

Lady Dorothy herself was equally severe in regard to suffragettes, for in one of her books she writes: "Heaven did not make women insinuating and persuasive that they might be peevish. It did not make them feeble that they might be imperious; it did not give them softer voices than man in order that they might rail at him; not delicate features to be destroyed by rage. Angry women forget themselves and the dignity of their sex, which has never gained much by scolding."

Lady Dorothy Nevill had a good deal to say about the change that has taken place in the character and the manners of women since her own earlier days. She considered the modern woman is spoilt, has too much time on her hands, takes up too many fads, and completely dominates her husband. This struck the old Shah of Persia very much. He said: "It seems to me that the English and American husband is nothing better than a sort of butler."

Lady Dorothy was particularly severe on the "smart set" of to-day. "The elite," she said, "are fast, flippant and smart. People are less interesting to talk to, less sociable, less brilliant in conversation, less interested in things." And as an illustration of the change in the life of a society woman, who to-day thinks nothing of spending $5,000 a year on her dress, she mentions how she and her sister were given a dress allowance of $250 and $200, respectively, by their adoring father.

She was also wont to refer to the fact that in her younger days parents were very particular about the matrimonial alliances made in their families, and she told an amusing story of one old peer who was greatly surprised to be told by his sister that she had developed a great affection for a well-known scientist of humble birth.

The peer sent for him and said, brusquely, "Now, sir, I should like to know something about your family."

"I think it will be sufficient," replied the scientist, who aws of Semitic extraction, "to say that I descended from the illustrious blood of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob."

The peer was taken aback. "Oh," he said, "of course, my family has nothing to compare with that; therefore, if my sister really likes you, you'd better take her."

Leap Year Proposals.

This reminds one of another story which Lady Dorothy relates in one of her books concerning an East Anglican clergyman who was visited by a lady parishioner and asked whether he thought a woman might, in any circumstances, propose to a man. Much taken aback, the poor rector replied that he certainly thought there might be circumstances which would make such a proposal justifiable. Upon which, without the slightest hesitation, the lady exclaimed, "As Nathan said unto David, 'Thou art the man.'" And, seeing no possibility of escape, he was.

Speaking of the amusements of girls in her time, Lady Dorothy said that in the sixties, when old-fashioned croquet occupied most of her attention, it was supposed to be responsible for many marriages. "Are you going to make a flower-bed here, Thomas?" asked a young lady of the gardener. "Yes, mum, them's the horders." "Why, it will quite spoil our croquet ground." "Can't help it, mum. Them's yer pa's horders. He ses as 'ow to have it laid out for 'orticulture, not 'usbandry."

Lady Dorothy also numbered the late King Edward among her personal friends. Once, sitting next to him at dinner, he noticed she ate oysters with a knife. He made a humorous comment, and the next morning presented her with a beautiful case of oyster knives, and in the note which accompanied them said: "In remembrance of your criminal tendency."

A "Regular" Babe.

It was a timber law case, in which Tim Healy was counsel for the defense. In the course of the case a youthful witness was put up as an expert on the plaintiff's side. Tim got up to cross-examine.

"What age are you?"

"Twenty-one years."

"How long have you been in the timber trade?"

"Two years."

Tim sat down, saying, "A regular babe in the wood, my lord," which discounted the evidence of the youthful expert.

Their Married Life

Helen Is Made to Feel That She Is Too Exacting and Expects Too Much of Maggie.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"WHY, Maggie, this isn't a clean cloth. Look at this!" Helen pointed to a distinct grease spot on the damask tablecloth. "And here's another. Why, this is the cloth we had on for breakfast."

"'Twas clean last night, ma'am," grumbled Maggie. "That makes three we've had on this week. We can't have no clean cloth every night."

"Well, we certainly will when we have guests. Now, you'll simply have to change this, Maggie. You ought to have known that cloth wouldn't do for dinner to-night."

"I won't have no time to unset that table now, ma'am," obstinately. "It's after 6 already."

Helen flushed and bit her lips. Maggie was growing more and more impertinent, but just before a company dinner was not the time to reprove her. So with an effort Helen kept back the sharp words and began deliberately to unset the table herself.

It was late and she was not yet dressed, but having taken the stand that there must be a clean cloth, she had no choice now but to put one on.

The first cloth she unfolded was an old one that had been darned; the next had a claret stain. Both of these had to be refolded and put back. The third was badly ironed and was hard to get on straight, but she finally got it adjusted and began to reset the table.

As she replaced the silver she found that there had been only three forks by each plate.

Fork Missing.

"Maggie, you forgot to put down an extra fork for the relish," as Maggie came in to get a dish from the sideboard.

"We aint got no relish, ma'am."

"Why, I told you to open a can of those anchovies."

"We used the last can of them, ma'am, last Sunday."

"But surely there's another can." Helen went out in the pantry to convince herself. "Well, we MUST have some kind of a relish. Oh, here's that jar of anchovy paste! Make some little squares of toast and spread it with this. You've got a hard-boiled egg," glancing in the refrigerator; "you can grate that over it."

Maggie, who was whipping the cream for the berries, turned around with an angry flush.

"You're wanting too much, ma'am. That's fancy cooking. Cooks who makes them fussy dishes gets $50 a month! And you expect me at the last minute to drop everything and——"

"That'll do, Maggie. As soon as I can get dressed I'll make this myself. And if you think you can get a place as a $50 cook I'd advise you to take it."

Helen flounced into her dressing room. For her dinner was already spoiled. She could never enjoy anything after any kind of a scene. Her whole nature shrank from contention, and just to keep peace she had let Maggie have her own way for so long that now she resented everything she was told.

The fact that the girl was honest, economical and an excellent cook had made Helen put up with everything else. But now she felt that she would rather have someone more agreeable and amenable, even though less capable.

A Man's Job.

Warren came in whistling, which with him was an evidence of rare good humor. Helen ran into his room with a hurried greeting.

"Oh, I'm so glad you've come, dear. Can you hook me up before you dress? I don't want to ask Maggie—she's been perfectly horrid!"

"Humph! Turn around here to the light, then. What's this thing?"

"Oh, wait—that's the inside belt! I'll hook that. There! Oh, dear, Maggie's getting to be IMPOSSIBLE!"

"What's the matter now?" as he clumsily hooked the dress.

"She put a soiled tablecloth on to-night—and I had to change it myself. And when I asked her to make some anchovy toast for a relish she said cooks get $50 a month for making those fancy dishes. Hurry, dear; never mind the bottom ones—I can hook those."

"Here—you hold still! You wanted me to fasten this—didn't you?"

She drew away from his still fumbling fingers and darted out into the kitchen. Maggie was fixing the salad. Helen maintained a cold, disapproving silence as she sliced the bread, cut the crust off to make small squares and put them on the broiler in the already heated oven.

The heat flushed her face and she burnt her finger, which increased her resentment. Hurriedly she mixed a spoonful of butter, spread it thickly on the toast and garnished each piece with the grated hard-boiled egg.

Fortunately the Thurstons were a few moments late, and Helen had the dainty squares of anchovy toast at each plate before the bell rang. But now she was flustered and nervous and felt in no mood for guests. However, as Warren was in an especially genial humor, her silence and abstraction were not noticed.

"What is this?" asked Mrs. Thurston. "Anchovy toast, isn't it? I wish Jane would make things like this. A relish adds so much to the dinner."

"S-s-sh," whispered Helen, with a glance toward the pantry. "I had to make it myself. Oh, I've had a TIME with her this evening! I feel I'm just about through."

"Why, I thought Maggie was such a good girl?" questioned Mrs. Thurston in surprise.

Her Own Story.

"She is—if you let her do everything her own way. But there ARE times when you want things done your own way. Just to keep peace I've let her dominate me more and more. I'll never begin that with another girl. It's always a mistake—they always take advantage of it."

"Well, I should advise you to hold on to Maggie," was Mr. Thurston's comment. "We've had a devil of a time for the last few weeks."

"Oh, didn't you like that Swedish woman?" asked Helen.

Mrs. Thurston shrugged her shoulders. "We've had three since then."

"But I thought she was going to be so good? She was a working housekeeper, wasn't she?"

"That's what she SAID she was," grinned Mrs. Thurston. "But she wouldn't work, and she didn't know anything about housekeeping! Then we had a German girl. She was RICH! Tell about her, Minnie."

Mrs. Thurston laughed. "Well, we forgot to lock the wine up one night, and she drank half a bottle of cherry brandy. The next morning I had to get breakfast."

"That's one fine thing about Maggie," announced Warren. "We never have to lock up the wine or anything else. And our grocery and butcher bills have been less since we've had her than they've ever been before."

"Well, that's just what we're looking for," said Mr. Thurston emphatically. "In case you let her go, turn her over to us, will you? By Jove, the one we've got now is extravagant, all right."

"Yes, she's very wasteful," agreed Mrs. Thurston. "We've used five pounds of butter this week—just for us two."

"Five!" exclaimed Helen. "Why, Maggie rarely uses more than three."

"Three? We've never used as little as that since we've been housekeeping. We've never had a girl that didn't either take stuff home or feed a lot of company in the kitchen. This one has a beau that comes two nights a week, and she gets him a regular supper. But what can we say? We just have to put up with it."

"Well, I'D say a good deal." Warren's tone was emphatic.

"Not if you'd been through what we've been in the last two months," declared Mr. Thurston, grimly. "You don't know what a cinch you've got in Maggie."

Helen Uncomfortable.

Helen had the uncomfortable feeling that all this was tending to make her seem in the wrong. The inference was that if she could not get along with such a paragon of virtues as Maggie, she must be over-particular and very hard to please. The injustice of this rankled keenly. They only saw the best of Maggie; they did not know how trying, sullen and impertinent she could be.

The Thurstons stayed late, and as they were starting home Mrs. Thurston happened to glance in the bedroom. As usual, Maggie had fixed the bed for the night, taken off the counterpane and neatly turned down the covers. On the table was a fresh pitcher of ice water, covered with a napkin.

"Well, I call that luxury," Mrs. Thurston declared. "Look, Henry," calling to her husband, who was getting on his overcoat in the hall. "That's the way Maggie fixes their bed every night. Do you suppose we'll ever have the luck to get a girl like that?"

Helen flushed. It was only an added evidence of Maggie's perfection and of her own lack of appreciation.

Later, when Warren wound his watch for the night, he frowned over it thoughtfully.

"See here, we HAVE got a cinch in Maggie, but you don't seem to know it. You expect too blamed much of a girl. Great Scott, if you can't get along with her, who CAN you get along with? We've got a good thing and we're going to take Thurston's advice and hold on to it. Now you can just make up your mind to that."

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

"Cultivate Harmonious Surroundings," Says Doris Keane

Miss Keane's stage-room bower, and her favorite picture.

By LILLIAN LAUFERTY.

WITCHERY, charm incarnate, the lure of "the eternal woman," are to become living and tangible qualities through Doris Keane's portrayal of Margarita Cavallini in "Romance"—made real at Maxine Elliott's theater in New York.

Of course you have often read a book or seen a play in which earnest author and striving characters tell you again and again how charming is the fair heroine. All their insistence never makes it true! For the witchery of moonlight and the appeal of lovely woman are subtle things you must feel in stirring heart the while you see with rapt eyes.

But the Italian prima donna of "Romance" fascinates and bewitches even when you disapprove of the saucy jade—and at last she wins you heart and soul as with brimming eyes you sit rapt and thrilled the while she rises to the sacred realization of her woman's soul and pleads with her adorer, "Let me be good."

The curtain fell on an old man's dream of youth—or romance—and I was whisked back to the realm of glaring lights, of rouge pots and cold cream jars, of wigs and artifice, to visit our new star in her non-twinkling daylight environment—the dressing room.

All around me were flowered curtains and draperies of quaint old chintz—and everywhere, on stray shelves, on the dressing table, in free corners were glowing, fragrant flowers. And in the midst of this beauty and light sat Doris Keane still puising with the emotion she had felt the while she portrayed it.

Her Passion.

"You love beauty?" I ventured.

"I love beautiful surroundings and the personality they must develop," said Miss Keane. "You see, I have a sister—ever since our childhood I had known and felt and admired her radiant beauty. I knew I could never be like that—and one accepts the impossible serenely after a time. I accepted beauty and did not analyze it. I began to think more about personality and the power that brings.

"Ah, is not personality a wonderful thing! That almost all women can develop—the force, the magnetism that a rare and evenly developed personality bring are to me more lovely than beauty. Though, of course, the daughters of Eve do try to look as well as possible, to make that quick little appeal that gives personality a hearing.

"The most charming women have varying personalities. Do you know when I am most popular with myself? It is when I have a sudden realization that I looked like a girl of 15 in the morning, and that now in sophisticated evening clothes I look suddenly 'grande dame'—elderly even."

Of course Miss Keane would have some difficulty in looking "elderly," for, in spite of her well-bred poise, in spite of the keen power to analyze and appraise life that glows in the deep fires of her great brown eyes, Miss Keane is a girlish and appealing little figure.

In her Junoesque costume in "The Affairs of Anatol," early this winter, she managed to look tall and stately, in her present play she is an exotic Italian, but in propria persona Miss Keane is a brown-haired American girl whose earnestness of purpose and ambitious willingness to work add to the fervor of artistic inspiration and make her beautiful with a charm that surmounts mere prettiness of feature in a way that affords a little sermon all its own.

"Surroundings are so important," went on Miss Keane. "One evening recently a party of friends took me to a restaurant all done in heavy plush hangings and oppressive gilt. My personality was smothered, and I became a quiet, depressed creature quite different from the animated person I had been just before.

A Sure Sign.

"That made me finally sure of my theory. Surround yourself with fresh, clean, airy, wholesome surroundings. For purposes of stimulating mind and spirit a day in the country far surpasses a glass of champagne. The outdoors—trees, green growing things and a chance in nature and solitude to know your own soul are the most wonderful tonics I know.

"Isolation, solitude—a chance to 'ventilate my soul'—are the things I like best in the world.

"Since I was six years old I have known what I wanted to do in the world. That is young, perhaps—but ever since I can remember I have been working toward a chance to act—to interpret character. Women must find themselves and the outlet for their powers if they want to be happy—and whatever charm tragic beauty has, the loveliness of a happy soul working toward a goal is more appealing to the world—and men.

"But while I like men—the man is not come—I think for the actress who is afire with her art all else must be secondary."

I looked at those glowing brown eyes—alight with ambition, with earnest purpose, with desire to see deep into the great mystery of life—for Miss Keane glories in the vastness of life, and thinks to absolutely understand even one phase of it would be a splendid thing—as I looked at those fine eyes I felt that Doris Keane had told me the great secrets of spiritual beauty that can illuminate the face of any woman who desires it.

To rise above the tawdry plush and gilt facts of life, to "ventilate your soul," and open it to the loveliness of Nature, to find yourself and the outlet for your powers—to keep happily, healthily busy, to know ambition's spur, and to strive to grow—these are the beauty secrets of Doris Keane, who has not thought much about beauty—and yet has cultivated a spirit and charm that make her natural loveliness ever a greater delight.

WITHIN THE LAW

A Powerful Story of Adventure, Intrigue and Love

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Turner, an orphan, employed in Edward Gilder's department store, is unjustly accused of theft and sent to prison. She is hounded by the police on her release, and finally goes to live with Joe Garson, a forger, and Aggie Lynch, a blackmailer, both of whom treat her with respect. Mary resolves to keep "within the law." She becomes the leader of a band of swindlers. Gilder's son, Dick, falls in love with her, and she marries him to be revenged on his father—and then finds that she is in love with him. Dick refuses to give her up, a demand made by his father, Mary disappears. Police Inspector Burke in an effort to aid the elder Gilder schemes to secure the arrest of Mary through "English Eddie" Griggs, a police informer. Garson plans to rob the Gilder home on a tip from Griggs. Mary hears of it and tries to prevent it, going to the Gilder home. Mary pleads with Garson to drop the robbery, and Dick enters. Garson kills Griggs when Mary corners the latter and he admits he is working for the police. Burke enters the house, a searchlight throwing its rays on the dead man's body. Mary and Dick are arrested, because Mary tells Burke that Dick shot Griggs in defense of his home. The District Attorney tries to quash the case against young Gilder. Inspector Burke obtains from Miss Helen Travers West, daughter of a prominent railroad official, a promise that she will tell something about Mary.

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT.

"I shall do nothing of the sort. Sit down, indeed!—here! Why, I have been arrested——" There came a break in the music of her tones throbbing resentment. A little sob crept in, and broke the sequence of words. The dainty face was vivid with shame. "I——" she faltered, "I've been arrested—by a common policeman!"

The Inspector seized on the one flaw left him for defense against her indictment.

"No, no, miss," he argued, earnestly. "Excuse me. It wasn't any common policeman—it was a detective sergeant."

But this effort to placate was quite in vain. The ingenuous little beauty with the child's face and the blue eyes so widely opened fairly panted in her revolt against the ignominy of her position, and was not to be so easily appeased. Her voice came vibrant with disdain. Her level gaze on the Inspector was of a sort to suggest to him anxieties over possible complications here.

"You wait!" she cried violently. "You just wait, I tell you, until my papa hears of this!"

Burke regarded the furious girl doubtfully.

"Who is your papa?" he asked, with a bit of alarm stirring in his breast, for he had no mind to offend anyone of importance where there was no need.

"I sha'nt tell you," came the petulant retort from the girl. Her ivory forehead was wrinkled charmingly in a little frown of obstinacy. "Why," she went on, displaying new symptoms of distress over another appalling idea that flashed on her in this moment, "you would probably give my name to the reporters." Once again the rosebud mouth drooped into curves of sorrow, of a great self-pity. "If it ever got into the newspapers, my family would die of shame!"

The pathos of her fear pierced through the hardened crust of the police official. He spoke apologetically.

"Now, the easiest way out for both of us," he suggested, "is for you tell me just who you are. You see, young lady, you were found in the house of a notorious crook."

The haughtiness of the girl waxed. It seemed as if she grew an inch taller in her scorn of the Inspector's saying.

"How perfectly absurd!" she exclaimed, scathingly. "I was calling on Miss Mary Turner!"

"How Did You Meet Her?"

"How did you come to meet her, anyhow?" Burke inquired. He still held his big voice to a softer modulation than to which it was habituated.

Yet the disdain of the girl seemed only to increase momently. She showed plainly that she regarded this brass-buttoned official as one unbearably insolent in his demeanor toward her. Nevertheless, she condescended to reply, with an exaggeration of the aristocratic drawl to indicate her displeasure.

"I was introduced to Miss Turner," she explained, "by Mr. Richard Gilder. Perhaps you have heard of his father, the owner of the Emporium."

"Oh, yes. I've heard of his father and of him, too," Burke admitted, placatingly.

But the girl relaxed not a whit in her attitude of offense.

"Then," she went on severely, "you must see at once that you are entirely mistaken in this matter." Her blue eyes widened further as she stared accusingly at the Inspector, who betrayed evidences of perplexity, and hesitated for an answer. Then, the doll-like, charming face took on a softer look, which had in it a suggestion of appeal.

"Don't you see it?" she demanded. "Well, no," Burke rejoined uneasily; "not exactly, I don't!" In the presence of this delicate and graceful femininity he experienced a sudden, novel distaste for his usual sledge-hammer methods of attack in interrogation. Yet his duty required that he should continue his questioning. He found himself, in fact, between the devil and the deep sea—though this particular devil appeared rather as an angel of light.

Now, at his somewhat feeble remark in reply to her query, the childish face grew as hard as its curving contours would permit.

"Sir!" she cried indignantly. Her little head was thrown back in scornful reproof, and she turned a shoulder toward the official contemptuously.

"Now, now!" Burke exclaimed in remonstrance. After all, he could not be brutal with this guileless maiden. He must, however, make the situation clear to her, lest she think him a beast—which would never do!

"You see, young lady," he went on with a gentleness of voice and manner that would have been inconceivable to Dacey and Chicago Red; "you see, the fact is that, even if you were introduced to this Mary Turner by young Mr. Gilder, this same Mary Turner herself is an ex-convict, and she's just been arrested for murder."

At the dread word a startling change was wrought in the girl. She wheeled to face the Inspector, her slender body swaying a little toward him. The rather heavy brows were lifted slightly in a disbelieving stare. The red lips were parted, rounded in a tremulous horror.

"Murder!" she gasped, and then was silent.

"Yes," Burke went on, wholly at ease now, since he had broken the ice thus effectually. "You see, if there's a mistake about you, you don't want it to go any further—not a mite further, that's sure. So, you see, now, that's one of the reasons why I must know just who you are." Then, in his turn, Burke put the query that the girl had put to him a little while before. "You see that, don't you?"

"Oh, yes, yes!" was the instant agreement. "You should have told me all about this horrid thing in the first place." Now the girl's manner was transformed. She smiled wistfully on the Inspector, and the glance of the blue eyes was very kind, subtly alluring. Yet in this unbending, there appeared even more decisively than hitherto the fine qualities in bearing of one delicately nurtured. She sank down in a chair by the desk and forthwith spoke with a simplicity that in itself was somehow peculiarly potent in its effect on the official who gave attentive ear.

"My name is Helen Travers West," she announced.

Burke started a little in his seat, and regarded the speaker with a new deference as he heard that name uttered.

"Not the daughter of the railway president?" he inquired.

She Displayed Agitation.

"Yes," the girl admitted. Then, anew, she displayed a serious agitation over the thought of any possible publicity in this affair.

"Oh, please, don't tell anyone," she begged prettily. The blue eyes were very imploring, beguiling, too. The timid smile that wreathed the tiny mouth was marvelously winning. The neatly gloved little hands were held outstretched, clasped in supplication. "Surely, sir, you see now quite plainly why it must never be known by any one in all the wide, wide world that I have ever been brought to this perfectly dreadful place—though you have been quite nice!" Her voice dropped to a note of musical prayerfulness. The words were spoken very softly and very slowly, with intonations difficult for a man to deny. "Please let me go home." She plucked a minute handkerchief from her handbag, put it to her eyes, and began to sob quietly.

The burly Inspector of Police was moved to quick sympathy. Really, when all was said and done, it was a shame that one like her should by some freak of fate have become involved in the sordid, vicious things that his profession made it obligatory on him to investigate. There was a considerable hint of the paternal in his air as he made an attempt to offer consolation to the afflicted damsel.

"That's all right, little lady," he exclaimed, cheerfully. "Now, don't you be worried—not a little bit. Take it from me, Miss West. * * * Just go ahead and tell me all you know about this Turner woman. Did you see her yesterday?"

The girl's sobs ceased. After a final dab with the minute handkerchief, she leaned forward a little toward the Inspector, and proceeded to put a question to him with great eagerness.

"Will you let me go home as soon as I've told you the teenty little I know?"

"Yes," Burke agreed promptly, with an encouraging smile. And for a good measure of reassurance he added as one might to an alarmed child: "No one is going to hurt you, young lady."

"Well, then," you see, it was this way," began the brisk explanation. "Mr. Gilder was calling on me one afternoon, and he said to me then that he knew a very charming young woman, who——"

Here the speech ended abruptly, and once again the handkerchief was brought into play as the sobbing broke to a moan.

Burke felt himself vaguely guilty as the cause of such suffering on the part of one so young, so fair, so innocent. As a culprit, he sought his best to afford a measure of soothing for this grief that had had its source in his performance of duty.

Her Voice Sank.

"That's all right, little lady," he urged in a voice as nearly mellifluous as he could contrive with its mighty volume. "That's all right. I have to keep on telling you. Nobody's going to hurt you—not a little bit. Believe me! Why, nobody ever would want to hurt you!"

But this well-meant attempt to assuage the stricken creature's woe was futile. The sobbing continued. With it came a plaintive cry, many times repeated, softly, but very miserably.

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear!"

"Isn't there something else you can tell about this woman?" Burke inquired in desperation before the plaintive outburst. He hoped to distract her from such grief over her predicament.

The girl gave no least heed to the question.

"Oh, I'm so frightened!" she gasped.

"Tut, tut!" the Inspector chided. "Now, I tell you there's nothing at all for you to be afraid of."

"I'm afraid!" the girl asserted dismally. "I'm afraid you will—put me—in a cell!" Her voice sank to a murmur hardly audible as she spoke the words so fraught with dread import to one of her refined sensibilities.

"Pooh!" Burke returned, gallantly. "Why, my dear young lady, nobody in the world would think of you and a cell at the same time—no, indeed!"

Instantly, the girl responded to this bald flattery. She fairly radiated appreciation of the compliment, as she turned her eyes, dewy with tears, on the somewhat flustered Inspector.

"Oh, thank you!" she exclaimed, with naive enjoyment.

Forthwith, Burke set out to make the most of this favorable opportunity.

"Are you sure you've told me all you know about this woman?" he questioned.

Burke Was Moved.

"Oh, yes! I've only seen her two or three times," came the ready response. The voice changed to supplication, and again the clasped hands were extended beseechingly.

"O please, Commissioner! Won't you let me go home?"

The use of a title higher than his own flattered the Inspector, and he was moved to graciousness. Besides, it was obvious that his police net in this instance had enmeshed only the most harmless of doves. He smiled encouragingly.

"Well, now, little lady," he said, almost tenderly, "if I let you go now, will you promise to let me know if you are able to think of anything else about this Turner woman?"

"I will—indeed, I will!" came the fervent assurance. There was something almost—quite provocative in the flash of gratitude that shone forth from the blue eyes of the girl in that moment of her superlative relief. It moved Burke to a desire for rehabilitation in her estimation.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

CONVINCE HER THEY ARE FALSE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen and deeply in love with a girl of seventeen. Some jealous person told her false stories about me that she believes. This caused a quarrel. Please tell me a way to regain her affections.

B. H.

You must never rest idle under false accusations. Convince her of your innocence and let the matter end there. Let it end for the reason that you are too young to know what love is.

YOU WERE RIGHT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been acquainted with a young man for several months, and he has taken me out quite a number of times. The last time he called he wanted to take me to a dance, but I refused, as he did not notify me in time so that I could get ready. Was I right in doing so? Since then he has not called to see me. F. C.

You had the right of refusal, of course. If he is pouting because of it, believe me, my dear, he will prove a very uncomfortable friend, and you must waste no time or emotions on him.

Up-to-Date Jokes

The doors of a certain new house had shrunk horribly, as is the way of the modern door made of unseasoned wood. The builder would not send the joiner to replace them, so the householder tried the ironical method and wrote:

"Dear Sir: The mice can run under most of our doors, but our cat can not follow them. Will you please send a man at once to make room under the doors for the cat, and much oblige?"

Next day the joiners came.

.:. Lost Books That Caused Tragedies .:.

WHEN Thomas Carlyle had finished the first volume of his "French Revolution," a work which had cost him months of incessant toil and the verification of thousands of facts and references, he lent the manuscript to John Stuart Mill. Surely, that philosopher had one of the worst tasks ever allotted to a mortal man when he had to tell the "Sage of Chelsea" that the priceless manuscript had been thrown into the fire by a careless servant, and only a few charred leaves—still to be seen in Cheyne Row, Chelsea—remained to tell the tale.

Sir Isaac Newton was the victim of a similar catastrophe, but the "friend" responsible was not human, but canine—his favorite little dog. He left him in his study alone, and when he came back found that he had "chewed" the mathematical calculations of many strenuous months. Many accounts say that Newton took it very calmly, but the truth is that it preyed upon his mind to such an extent as to cause much temporary mental aberration.

One of the great losses to literature was the burning of six books of Spenser's "Faery Queen" which the poet is said to have left in his house in County Tyrone, Ireland. A rebellion broke out, and the place was burned; and not only did the poet's youngest child perish in the flames, but, it is said, also about as much of the great poem as we possess at present.

All lovers of Byron are aware that this erratic genius found time in his short, adventurous life to write his memoirs, and that on his death these passed into the hands of his friend, Thomas Moore, who, exercising a discretion committed to him, promptly consigned the manuscript to the flames.

No doubt the writer of "Irish Melodies" had very good and highly proper reasons for taking this decisive step, and it is quite likely that the publication of the memoirs would not, for obvious reasons, have been possible for many years after the poet's death; yet as succeeding generations have been brought face to face with the peculiarly complex genius of Byron, with its lofty moods and its many dark places, they have felt need of the light which only the records written by a vanished hand could have supplied.

Since the death of Auguste Strindberg, the famous Swedish novelist and dramatist—who, by the way, had much in common with Byron—many of his works have been translated into the English language and are already the center of heated controversy in literary circles. It is possible, therefore, that the powerful, if somewhat misanthropical, writings of this Swedish recluse may be read and treasured by generations to come. But all his works will not go down to posterity, for it is said that in a sudden fit of despondency Strindberg himself destroyed a number of his manuscripts, which, through lack of time or inclination, he never wrote again.

M'CUE SETBACK DUE TO POOR MANAGEMENT

THE brilliant ring career of Matty McCue, Racine's crack little featherweight, received a severe jolt the other night in Milwaukee when he pitted his science, cleverness and punch against Patsy Brannigan, of Pittsburg, and as a result he must practicaliy start over. That is, he must content himself with high-class semi-wind-ups or take the cheaper grade of finals. Matty, prior to his Milwaukee battle, was matched to box Abe Attell in Kenosha, the bout being slated for next month. But the defeat by Brannigan caused the promoters to change their minds. And all this because Matty is handled by an inexperienced manager. Not that John McCue, the manager, isn't a nice little fellow, but he isn't on to the game of handling a boy of Matty's worth, and so long as he pilots him along the lines he has thus far, Matty is going to face constant obstacles.

* * *

FOR almost three weeks McCue, the manager, kept his charge down around the 122-pound mark. Whether he had a fight on or not Matty was kept near that weight, and as a result he was weak and was robbed of the necessary strength in his fight with Brannigan. Had he been allowed to take on weight between his matches, build up and then reduce again, the effect wouldn't have been so telling, but the constant strain was too much for the growing youngster.

* * *

MATTY'S career isn't by any means ended, and there is hope for his reaching the top yet, but the older McCue should get some aide, some person who knows the game from A to Z, some faithful, honest manager, and go along with him and heed his suggestions. The making of a great little fighter is in McCue, but it can be killed off by such work as he has been forced to do.

* * *

ERNIE ZANDERS, one of Chicago's crack middleweights, has nestled under the wing of Emil Thiry and hereafter the lad who piloted Packey McFarland into much of his fortune and glory will give his time and attention to the printer-fighter. Already Emil is busy trying to close a match with Mike Gibbons, the St. Paul sensation. Kenosha's matchmaker has offered Zanders a date if his manager can get Gibbons.

* * *

ZANDERS believes he can get to the top under good handling and he is going to make a new start. Recently he fought Gus Christie in Madison, Wis., his first fight since his return from Australia, and while some of the reports credited him with a draw Zanders has several clippings to prove he won decisively. Ernie wasn't any too well when he tackled the Milwaukee lad. What he needed was the care of a good manager, one who could give all his time and attention, and he seems to have found that man now.

* * *

TWO years ago, when Packey was ready to quit the ring, Thiry took hold of him and added almost $100,000 to his bank roll. And much glory went with Packey's right achievements. Thiry believes he can do much with his new charge.

NATIONAL COMMISSION AWARDS BEALL TO SOX

CINCINNATI, June 16.—The national baseball commission in a decision handed down to-day declared the transfer of Player John W. Beall from the Cleveland American League club to the Milwaukee American Association club to be null and void, owing to the neglect of the former club to ask for waivers on the player.

The Cleveland club is fined $25 for its failure to comply with the commission's rules, and the player is awarded to the Chicago American League club upon the payment of the waiver price. The Boston National League club also wanted the player.

The decision was the outcome of Beall's application to be declared a free agent, which was denied.

FEDERAL LEAGUE IS NOW AFTER ROGER BRESNAHAN

MILWAUKEE, June 16.—As a result of alleged efforts of agents of the St. Louis National League Club and the Chicago Cubs to tamper with Pitcher McGuire and Outfielder Kavanagh, of the Chicago Federal League Club, President John T. Powers, of the Federal organization, said to-day the first move in retaliation will be to take Roger Bresnahan from the Chicago Cubs.

It is understood that if Bresnahan can be induced to leave Chicago he would be given the franchise and club at Toledo in opposition to the American Association club. President Powers said his league would retaliate by taking players from the Wisconsin-Illinois League and the American Association.

Great Battle Spoiled by Tumble

Savage and White Fall From Ring

By Fuzzy Woodruff.

JIM SAVAGE may to-day thank his stars—and he saw a firmament full last night—that he was not born six centuries ago. Had he been in this world at that day and time he would have been nursing a broken neck in a black box this morning, and his friends would be making remarks to the general effect that he was looking natural.

As it was, though, last night happened to be Friday, the Thirteenth, 1913, instead of Friday, the Thirteenth, 1313, and Mr. Savage is able to-day to sit up and take nourishment after his clash with Sailor White, of New York, at the Auditorium-Armory, which ended abruptly when both scrappers fell from the ring, Savage landing on his head and shoulders with the titanic tar on top of him.

The accident ended what promised to be the best heavyweight fight ever staged in Atlanta. Both White and Savage appeared trained to the minute, and had just finished the feeling out process and gave every indication that the mixing would be fierce and merry when the crash came.

White weighed in at 201, while Savage was fourteen pounds lighter, but the speed at which the conqueror of Kubiak traveled more than made up for his lack in poundage.

* * *

BOTH men were extremely careful in the first round, each being particularly leary in the clinches, evidently preferring to find out each other at long range. The Sailor showed a bit more cleverness than he had been given credit for, his dodging of Savage's lead and the use of his left hand at a distance being decidedly neat.

In the second round the men warmed to their work, White forcing the fighting and Savage doing a Charley Mitchell skip around the ring in avoiding his rushes. Toward the end of the round the first serious blow was struck. It was a terrifice straight right, sent with perfect judgment of distance to the point of the seaman's chin.

To the spectators it appeared that the wallop was hard enough to shake the superstructure of the biggest dreadnought in the navy. White merely blinked, though, and kept coming.

The third round found both men willing to rough it. There was an exchange of right and left and then a clinch against the ropes. Savage was backed against the hemp and White was leaning his entire weight on him. While in this clinch the sailor shot his right hand hard to Savage's body. As he did so the staples holding the rope post in a neutral corner broke. The ropes and 400 pounds of struggling brawn crashed to the floor four feet below.

White, whose fall was broken by Savage, was up in an instant and rushed back to the ring, taking his corner. Savage lay on his back, breathing heavily with eyes rolling.

Dr. Louis Rouglin, the club physician, went to work at once to revive him. When Savage finally regained consciousness he wanted to go on with the bout. Dr. Rouglin, after an examination, declared that the muscles of the fighter's neck had been badly wrenched, and it would be dangerous for the contest to continue. He so informed Referee Lou Castro, and the affair was called no contest.

THE first bouts made up for the unsatisfactory termination of the windup. The first go brought together Mike Saul and Terry Nelson, the Chattanooga Greek. It was Saul's first appearance as a boxer in a year, and his condition was palpably poor.

In the early rounds Nelson hit him at will and seemed to have the bout cinched in the fourth, Saul taking his corner, all but out.

Mike came back with a rush in the fifth, though, and fairly smothered his Hellenic opponent with a rain of blows to body and head. He was tired again in the tenth round, but by using good generalship lasted it out without a great deal of punishment and earned a draw.

MAYER PRIES won his accolade, but lost a fight in his scheduled 10-round go with Spider Britt. These ancient bantam rivals went into the ring with the determination to settle their grievances once and for all. Both were supremely confident.

As a result the fans saw the fastest milling witnessed here in many a moon. From the tap of the gong they went to it hammer and tongs, both wide open, both looking for a knockout.

In the first Pries seemed destined to win, though Britt fought back as fiercely as a treed bob cat. The spectators were on their feet yelling themselves hoarse when the gong ended the round with both boys dead tired.

The second was a repetition of the first, it, too, being Pries' round with the milling fast and furious. In the third Britt changed his tactics. He came out covered up and permitted Pries to slam away at his protected head, cutting loose only when he had a dead opening. In the infighting he worked on his rival's mid-section and soon had him in trouble.

Britt had apparently worked hard for the bout and was in excellent shape, while Pries' first round speed had halted.

From the third on it was just a question as to when Britt would win. Pries showed none of the yellow with which he has been credited. He took a great beating gamely. He was down for the count in the fifth and again in the sixth.

He was practically helpless when Britt shot two hard rights to his stomach, crumpling him to the floor. The referee stopped the mill here, declaring Britt the winner.

BUD UNDERSON MAY MEET M'FARLAND IN COAST BOUT

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 16.—"Packey" McFarland will be asked within two months to fight this bird Bud Anderson," vehemently exclaimed Tom McCarey yesterday.

"He might not do it, but he will have a chance to, but I'm not saying that I will make the offer."

And McCarey smiled and looked lovingly at his real diamond.

'More than a year ago McFarland wrote me that any time Ad Wolgast got gay and wanted to throw a lot of money into a bank to lick any man at 133 pounds, McFarland would cover the money and make 133 pounds ringside. And yet some persons think Packey can't make 133 unless he cuts his left foot off."

And then McCarey smiled again, which makes one think that Packey will be seen in Los Angeles before the summer is done.

EMPIRE STATE LEAGUE TO EXTEND BASEBALL SEASON

CORDELE, GA., June 16.—At the meeting of the directors of the Empire State League held in Cordele yesterday a motion was carried to extend the season by tacking on twelve additional games to the present schedule and divide the season with 51 games in each series.

The original schedule will be followed out as it stands. It was argued that a split of the season without the extension would practically give Valdosta, with its present lead, a cinch on winning the first series.

When the motion was made by Mr. Mitchell, of Americus, and seconded by Mr. Brewer, of Waycross, and put to a vote a tie resulted, the vote of President Oscar Groover, of Thomasville, causing its adoption.

JIMMY CLABBY AWARDED DECISION OVER M'GOORTY

BUTTE, MONT., June 16.—Jimmy Clabby, of Hammond, Ind., middleweight, is to-day claiming the championship of his division. In a wonderful uphill 12-round contest here last night with Eddie McGoorty, Clabby succeeded in securing the referee's decision.

It was a great battle, one of the fastest, cleverest and best seen in this section of the country in years.

MISS DOROTHY GREEN WINS THE TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP

PHILADELPHIA, June 16.—Miss Dorothy Green, of the Merion Cricket Club, near here, yesterday defeated Miss Edna Wildey, of Plainfield, N. J., in the final round of the woman's national tennis championship in singles. The score was 6-2, 6-4. Miss Green will to-day meet Miss Mary Browne, of California, the titleholder, for the championship.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 14.—The Athletics still look like the class of the American League, with the Cleveland boys, the big surprises, pushing them pretty hard. "Connie" Mack's team has won a lot of games in succession, which nourished it very much. The club itself is a wonder, the only weakness being in the pitching box. Bender and Plank are the two veterans, and for the rest of his twirling Mack has to depend on a flock of youngsters. Most of these look to be very good, so American Leaguers say, but they lack the old experience. Houck, in particular, displays as much stuff as Bender, but he has not the knowledge of big league batsmen or the shrewdness to apply it which the Indian possesses.

* * *

BENDER never looked better than he does this season, so players have told me who have batted against him. The Indian is in wonderful condition, and is thriving on work. "Connie" Mack, the wily, is jockeying his pitchers to get the last drop out of his two veterans. He has been starting games with his youngsters, and then just as soon as his club gets two or three runs ahead—bing! In goes either Bender or Plank to cinch it. Coombs, the third veteran, is in such bad health it is doubtful if he will work again this season. He is recovering very slowly from his illness, typhoid fever.

* * *

THE Cleveland club's best chance to win the flag depends on an injury to one of Mack's two veteran pitchers. Birmingham has a great flock of twirlers, the best acting set in the American League now. Steen, Gregg and Falkenberg are all going at top speed, and all are experienced. Blanding has shown some flashes of form and helps out a good deal. The players have imbibed the spirit of winning, and are playing their heads off for Birmingham, who is making a grand leader and is pushing the fight into his club in good style. The Cleveland team, outside of the box, has not the set and balance of the Athletics. Both Lajoie and Jackson are great hitters, and the infield, with two youngsters in it, is moving well. The chances of Birmingham beating the Athletics depends on his twirlers.

* * *

MANY a ball game is won by a little thing. All is regarded as being fair in love, war and baseball. Here is a good story: We were playing some time ago against the Cubs, when Larry Doyle came to the bat. A low ball on the inside hit something with a resounding thud, and Doyle went down, rubbing his ankle.

"Shall I take off his shoe?" asked one of the players who rushed to assist him.

"Sure," said Larry, groaning with agony.

"Ed" Mackall, the Giants' trainer, rubbed his ankle and felt of it. Finally Doyle was helped to first base. He scored the run which won the game from that point on a double.

"Did that ball hurt your ankle when it hit you, Larry?" McGraw asked Doyle when he came to the bench.

"It didn't hit me. It hit the bat," answered Larry.

"You're an actor, you are," suggested McGraw, "not a ball player."

Report That Benton Will Sign for Life

SAVANNAH, GA., June 16.—A story from Cincinnati has reached Savannah to the effect that after hurling a magnificent game Pitcher J. P. Benton, better known as Rubs, announced his engagement to Miss Ruth Rorh, of Hyde Park, a Cincinnati suburb. "Rube" is a straw mound performer for the Cincinnati National team.

"Rube" Benton is the man who several years ago wrote to the secretary of the Savannah Baseball Association asking for a job on the pitching staff of the Indians. He comes from the apple growing section of North Georgia, and his chief claim of ability was that he knew he could pitch baseball because he had practiced throwing apples in his father's orchards. The application was turned down by the Savannah Club.

"Rube" then wrote to Macon. His application received better treatment there, and a try-out was secured. The fellow from the country made good, and that year Macon turned out a championship team with "Rube" Benton as the principal contributor to success.

Before the season was more than half over there were big league scouts from many cities watching his performances from the grandstands in the cities in which he worked. Before the end of the season was well in sight several offers were made for the big countryman. Cincinnati succeeded in landing him, and he went up next season to real fast company.

Pitching apples in orchards surely must be a good baseball developer, if "Rube's" tale is to be believed. After he landed in Cincinnati he never was even considered as one of the men to be released. He made good from the start and has been delivering the goods in grand style ever since.

Coulon Insists on Square Deal

Baltimore May Lose Big Match

By Ed W. Smith.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 16.—It isn't at all surprising to the friends of Johnny Coulon that the bantam champion has declined to meet his strongest rival for the bantam championship in the latter's own city with the latter's own referee and at a club run by the latter's own manager. Sammy Harris, who manages the affairs of Kid Williams, the Baltimore Dane, who has been such a persistent challenger of the Logan Square lad, wants to stage the contest the night of July 3 at the Oriole Ball Park there. He says the police of Baltimore will not permit an alien referee to be third man in the ring because Billy Job, of New York, almost created a riot there some time back by giving what they called an outrageous decision in favor of Abe Attell when the latter really was beaten.

* * *

QUITE naturally enough Coulon does not intend to kiss his title good-by by entering the ring against Williams and have his honors thrown into the balance with a Williams-Baltimore referee acting as third man. Coulon does not think everybody in Baltimore would willfully give him the worst of it and believes there are honest men there—but he is not taking any unnecessary chances of possibly running into the other kind. They are permitted to give decisions in Baltimore and they think down there that Williams can beat the world. Looks very much to Coulon's friends here as if he would be taking a chance.

* * *

NOW, Coulon is anxious to battle Williams, but wants a fair field when the affair is dragged off. He feels that he would get a square deal and nothing else on the Pacific coast and has started the wheels working to have the match transferred out there for the middle or latter part of July, the main date having already been filled at the McCarey arena with the Leach Cross-Bud Anderson battle. Johnny has been offered just as much money in Los Angeles as he can get in Baltimore.

* * *

LEACH CROSS, the New York lightweight, who is on his way to the coast to box Bud Anderson, is a philosopher in his homely East Side way. He is going against a tough man and admits it, but he isn't worrying a great deal because there is a lot of nourishment in the present engagement and that is chiefly what he is going out there for. Said nourishment comes in the form of a guarantee of $4,000 for his services against Anderson on the Fourth, a glorious day for Leach at least. Leach says this is the sort of a capsule that is not the least bit hard to take. And it shouldn't be.

* * *

IT shouldn't be because the last time Cross went out to the Pacific coast he received just about $348 for his services and in addition a hard beating in 42 rounds at the hands of "Fighting Dick" Hyland, then in his prime. That was a sad trip for the Cross boy and he has never forgotten it. But times have changed materially now and nothing illustrates this better than the difference in the money then and now. Cross attained a great reputation out on the Pacific coast because he trimmed Joe Mandot in such decisive style in New Orleans a short time back. Joe was considered pretty good on the coast and the man who knocked him out naturally didn't have much trouble getting on a match there. Besides, McCarey is fighting all the time to get new faces in his matches.

Lungs Affected By Rheumatism

Pneumonia, Bronchitis, Asthma and Anemia Often Directly the Results of Rheumatic Blood.

Avoid Grippe, Sore Throat and Similar Troubles by Using S. S. S.

If you have a persistent, nagging bronchial cough beware of cough remedies. They are merely local in action, and if they do relieve it is the narcotics that do it. What you require is a blood purifier, a searching antidote that removes from the circulation the acid poisons that by their reflexes attack all weakened, susceptible spots and thus create local symptoms. The very best remedy known is Swift's Sure Specific. You will find it on sale in any drug store at $1.00 per bottle. It goes straight into the blood, becomes an internal blood bath, wonderfully stimulates the increase of red corpuscles, cures all the local fever spots and irritations, increases appetite, you take on flesh and feel a wonderful sense of renewed strength. Hundreds of people worried beyond control at cough, pains in the chest, sore throat and constant expectoration of thick mucus have experienced the most wonderful change after using S. S. S. All doubt and apprehension is gone, those peculiar pains and aches vanish, there follows a period of most intense rejoicing to find that worst fears were based entirely upon a mistaken notion that cough and chest pains come from the lungs. These are rheumatic conditions, and you will quickly realize it after using S. S. S. for a few days. Get a bottle of S. S. S. to-day at the drug store and then say good-bye to all those pains that have worried you.

CRACKERS HAVE ONLY GULLS TO BEAT FOR 'RAG'

By Percy H. Whiting.

THE Cracker Club better forget that there are any other clubs in this Southern League except Mobile.

The race for the rest of the season—or for a month anyhow—is bound to be between the Gulls and the Crackers.

It has been a hard matter to take the Gulls seriously. If class really counts they are nowhere. Paulet, Starr, Stock and O'Dell don't impress as an infield. Clark, Robertson and Sentell are not exactly our idea of a great outfield. Schmidt has proved to be a useful catcher, but he can't win pennants by himself. The pitching staff is good but lacks a lot of being great.

Yet this Gull team goes right ahead winning two out of every three games it plays. It has been doing it since the season started. Every time they lose one and you get a little encouraged they go out again and win two and it's all off once more.

To-day the Gulls have won a shade less than two-thirds of their games. They have a lead of over 100 points, or 7 games, over the Crackers. This isn't much, provided the Gulls will only slump. But if they keep right on winning two out of every three games they will be hard to head.

* * *

IT IS getting time for the Crackers to settle down and chase the Gulls. You can probably disregard Montgomery and Chattanooga. Nashville is a foxy team, with a wise manager. But it lacks class. Birmingham is going to improve a lot, but it will start too late.

The race from now on is likely to be a two-team affair. The Crackers are going to have to hustle to keep ahead of Nashville and Montgomery. But they are going to have to FLY to get to the Gulls.

It is a foolish thing that the Crackers are behind the Gulls. Size the teams up, man for man, and the Crackers should be leading by a couple of hundred points.

The Cracker pitchers are coming around. They are pitching nice ball now. It is up to the team. It is going to take hard work to get to the Gulls. They can't "kid along" and do it. It will be a stern chase from now on.

It's all right to say a team like the Mobile club hasn't class.

It hasn't.

But as long as it goes through the season winning two out of three games it takes a lot of beating.

* * *

THE final game in Chattanooga doesn't look serious. Next week the Crackers are home. They open with the pesky Nashville club and follow with three games against the Barons.

That week at home will give the Crackers a good chance to show that they are in earnest in this pennant chase. The Vols have always given them nothing but trouble. With the pitchers going right, it is high time to shake off this Vol jinx.

The Crackers had better pile up what they can this week and next. For the week after they start barnstorming, and they keep it up until Fourth of July week.

* * *

BEFORE George Stallings started out on his present season as manager of the Braves he said that he was going to make good this time or quit baseball. The Braves are now in next to last place. And the question arises, Does the trick of elevating the Braves from last to next to last constitute "making good?" Considering the Braves and everything else, it probably does.

Right now the Braves aren't so far behind St. Louis and are within shouting distance of Pittsburg. With a little luck, they might finish near the top of the second division.

* * *

THEY'VE revived a fine old story at the expense of Honest Dan Pfenninger. It seems that one day over in Birmingham, when the Crackers and Barons were mingling—oh, it wasn't this year; in fact, it was some years back—the grandstand was occupied by a howling mob. And one of 'em was drunk. The chap who was jingled stopped a pop boy and inquired: "Shay, m' lad, is it true that P-f-f-f-fenninger is night washman?"

"Yes, sir," answered the boy, "they say he works for Judge Kavanaugh as a night watchman."

The man relapsed into a maudlin stupor and Dan continued to call them—worse and worse, as usual.

Again the gent with the jag called to the pop boy.

"M' lad," said he, "mus' be mistake 'bout Dan being night washman. 'F'e can't see 'em by daylight, how'n'ell can he see 'em in dark?"

36 ROUNDS OF BOXING OFFERED FOR FIFTY CENTS

MILWAUKEE, WIS., June 14.—Boxing promoters here have taken to the popular-priced shows and the new move seems to have made a great hit with local ring enthusiasts.

Thirty-six rounds of battling is offered the public next Monday night for 50 cents. This does not mean that all seats sell at that figure, but the general admission has been placed at that price. Ringside seats sell at $2.

The full card is:

Acclaim Australian Most Unique Boxer; Is All-Around Star

Jerry Jerome, 40 Years Old, Is Still Active in the Fight Arena.

MELBOURNE, N. S. W., June 14.—Jerry Jerome is probably unique among the boxers of the world. He is an Australian aboriginal, which is a type of "smoke" without the swank and the hide of the negro of African blood.

He was brought up on a Queensland cattle station, and, like all the natives left in the civilized parts of Australia, is now under the supervision of a government "Aborigines Protection Board."

Jerome is about forty years old, and in boxing is practically self-taught. He has methods which are altogether his own. He leads with the right, and uses the left as a finisher. With such unconventional habits, he ought by all tradition to be a gift to any well-trained middleweight, but he has wonderful natural speed and a great punch and has knocked out many good men.

One of the hardest punches is a short left jolt to the body, and with that punch he knocked out de Balzac, leaving the Frenchman on the floor with not a cubic inch of air remaining inside his lungs.

In addition to being a boxer, Jerry is a champion runner, a champion swimmer and a wonderful trainer of buck-jumping horses. Jerry is also acclaimed as the champion ginger-beer drinker of Queensland. So, altogether, he is a great character, and he is immensely popular with the fans round every ring in Australia. Jerry, by the way, is able to fight either in the middle or light heavyweight division.

When the American boxers were in Australia in 1910-11, this same Jerry Jerome was not to the candy as he is now. Jimmy Clabby fought a fellow named Gus Devitt, champion of New Zealand, at Brisbane, Queensland, on Christmas Day and put him away in forty seconds.

Jimmy wanted to give the fans a run for their money and offered to take on Jerome without extra cost, but Jerry backed water, his manager wanting the coin, so there was nothing doing. Later Cyclone Johnny Thompson went to Brisbane, on January 11, 1911, and met Jerome, putting him away in three rounds. Probably Jerry profited by his experiences with the Yankees for he has surely been going some guns of late in Australia, even though he is forty years of age.

Carl Cashion May Be Forced to Quit Game

Carolina Star Strains Muscle in Arm and Physicians Fear Injury Cannot be Repaired.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Carl Cashion may never pitch another baseball game.

The big lad from Carolina, who last year won eleven games out of seventeen, and who up until recently has been considered the most promising youngster in the American League, may have to quit the game for good and ever.

It was in Cleveland last month that Cashion wrenched a muscle loose in the region of his right elbow. Since then he has been treated by physicians, but with no signs of improvement.

During the morning practice recently Cashion worked out, but could get little on the ball, and his arm pained him so that he was forced to stop.

A consultation was held between the club physician and other experts as to what could be done for the big fellow. The result of this conference is not known.

Cashion's case is a puzzling one, and it is rumored that his pitching days are over.

The Carolina curver has youth on his side, and it is, of course, possible that he may eventually regain the use of his pitching arm, but those who are familiar with his case are far from optimistic.

It is interesting to note that Cashion's twenty-fourth birthday arrived last week.

Scout Mike Kahoe dug up the big chap during the summer of 1911 and the Washington club purchased his release from the Greenville club of the Carolina Association.

Cashion broke into the league against the Chicago White Sox, pitching the second game of a double-header. He won it by a comfortable margin, and from that time until the present has been regarded by wise baseball men as the makings of a great pitcher.

I AM devoting my time and attention to the work of assisting the medical profession in its task of trying to bring about a cure for the unfortunate persons suffering from "neurasthenia."

The number of people who are breaking down and are forced to leave their professional or business duties, is greatly increasing every year. About this season of the year they all seem to think of seeking some repair shop, where the actual work of putting themselves in a normal condition can be satisfactorily performed.

I am surrounded by them 365 days in the year. Therefore, from the fact that each and every one of them has described his case to me, what he considered the cause of his condition, also his physician and more than one physician interested in the same case has given me his opinion and views of the situation—there may be some little value to my opinion of the cause of "neurasthenia," and what I consider the prospects are for recovery.

A person suffering from neurasthenia is like one bankrupt, excepting that he has completely exhausted his nervous energy and is drawing checks for more when he has not any at all in the bank. He is chronically tired. The ordinary means of rest do not rest him at all. If he sleeps a reasonable number of hours he is just as tired in the morning as he was at night. He feels languid. His mind refuses to work and the slightest confusion upsets him so that he becomes irritable, and after the confusion has subsided he is exhausted.

Is Filled With Fear.

He is filled with fear and apprehension. He cannot tell you why or what it is all about. He begins to lose confidence in his own ability; he is not able to concentrate his mind upon his work; he is given to self-analysis; he believes that he has more than his share of troubles and petty annoyances; he is unable to come to any positive decisions and stand by them.

He accuses himself of thinking, when as a matter of fact he cannot think at all. Things he should think of he forgets, and things that do not really exist he is thinking about. In fact, he imagines that he has more trouble than anybody else in the world when he really hasn't any.

His work is poorly done for the reason that he is unable to concentrate and confine himself to one thing until it is well done; consequently these poorly accomplished or half-finished matters come back and the affairs of yesterday and days before, meet before him the affairs of to-day, causing confusion and more work, also making him feel that he is incompetent and destroying his confidence in himself.

Such a condition is confusing even to the man who is normal. It is also humiliating and annoying. He becomes irritated, bewildered, loses his self-control, blames everybody about him, makes himself miserable and unhappy because he has been unjust to others who were really doing their best to help him.

Refuses to Leave Business.

He refuses to leave his business affairs as he imagines that everything would go to ruin without him, when as a matter of fact, things would be much better were he to remain away, because he has been robbed, temporarily of the power of reason—God's greatest blessing; for upon reason your judgment is based, and when your reason is toppling your judgment is not reliable and cannot be depended upon.

I have had hundreds of men under my care that have accomplished great things, and when they were with me, or when they first came to me, their ability to reason and to exercise judgment was so poor that you would not give them $5 a week in any position that you could think of. Yet they cannot realize that fact. They still think that their reason and working capacity is of some value. Many of them hung on until they nearly ruined their well established reputations and business, and even then reluctantly submitted to a temporary retirement.

This is not a disease. It is a condition that is entirely nerves and is due solely to the fact that their nervous energy is completely exhausted. It is not a dangerous condition for the reason that they can all get well IF they would only consent to obey their doctors. But there, again, comes the difficulty. The doctor can only advise them. It is not a case for medicine, and they will not obey their doctor's advice.

In the first place they cannot conceive the true meaning nor the importance of this advice, and if they make an attempt to follow his advice it will be so poorly done that it will have no good results. They hesitate to submit, yet that submission is the only thing that will save them, for that condition from which they are suffering will lead on to something worse than any human being can ever imagine.

Not As They Appear.

I have seen big, strong, handsome, fine-looking men, in their prime of life, whom any person would point out as an exceptionally well-blessed individual, with good health and all that goes to make up a perfect man. And yet I have seen this same man sit down and cry like a child, declare that there was nothing on earth worth living for; that he was afraid to go from the house to the gate alone; afraid to be in the room overnight without a light burning and an attendant where he could see him whenever he opened his eyes.

He will tell you awful stories about what he believes was going to happen; declare that he has awful pains in some part of his physical being, and all the misery that one could imagine he would picture to you as a part of his suffering, when as a matter of fact, a thorough examination by skilled physicians will prove him to be in perfect physical health without a pain or an ache.

He will sit down at the table and, like a hungry animal, devour more food in a few minutes than a normal person would be able to eat in an hour. Then he would declare that he had indigestion.

Why not? He has swallowed his food without eating it and there again is a tremendous demand for nerve energy in the stomach to digest that food which was not eaten, but just swallowed. And as his nerve energy is all exhausted, where is there to be any for the demand from the stomach? He is, of course, in agony, mentally and physically, for his indigestion is justly punishing him and the wretched condition of his mind is affecting the stomach.

There are dozens of other types, but all come under the same heading, so far as their ailment is concerned. They are "neurasthenics," and if they do not take their doctor's advice and hasten to the repair shop before they reach the condition which is beyond repair, they need expect nothing but greater horrors and serious results.

BIRMINGHAM MAY GET A. A. U. ALL-AROUND MEET

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., June 14.—Secretary Benedetto of the Southern Association, who returned yesterday from Birmingham, where the Southern Championships were decided recently announces that the all-round meet in all probability will be awarded to Birmingham A. C. The date for the meet will be decided at a meeting to be held shortly.

ORIOLES SEEK DERRICK FROM NEW YORK AMERICANS

BALTIMORE, June 14.—Jack Dunn, owner of the Baltimore club, is negotiating with the New York Americans for the services of Shortstop Claude Derrick, who was a member of the Orioles last year. Dunn is said to be willing to buy Derrick outright, or he will exchange a pitcher for him.

THREE STAR PLAYERS JOIN FEDERAL LEAGUE

PITTSBURG, June 16.—Elmer Knetzer, pitcher and hold-out of the Brooklyn team; Jack Lewis, former second baseman of the Boston Red Sox, and Tom Murray, St. Paul catcher, all Pittsburg boys, have signed contracts and will join the Pittsburg team of the Federal League at Indianapolis to-day.

DREYFUSS WATCHES SCOTT.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 16.—Barney Dreyfuss and Duke Farrell were in the stands here yesterday watching the work of St. Paul's shortstop, Scott.

CARRUTHERS TO HELP ILLINI.

GALESBURG, ILL., June 14.—Ira T. Carruthers, who has had charge of athletics at Knox College for three years, announced to-day that he would resign to become assistant football coach at the University of Illinois.

HEAVIES SIGNED UP.

JOPLIN, MO., June 14.—"Jeff" Clarke yesterday signed a contract to meet Harry Wills in a ten-round bout at New Orleans on June 18. The agreement provides the winner of the bout is to meet Sam Langford in July at New Orleans.

RITCHIE AND RIVERS AT WORK FOR TITLE BOUT

SAN FRANCISCO, June 14.—Willie Ritchie, lightweight champion, and Joe Rivers, the Mexican, started training for their 20-round bout in this city on July 4. The bout was called off about a week ago because Ritchie refused to weigh in at 133 pounds. However, a new contract was signed which permitted 134 pounds ringside. The forfeit of not making the weight was fixed at $2,500.

LONG REST FOR COOMBS.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., June 14.—It was announced to-day that Jack Coombs, Connie Mack's star pitcher, who has been ill, will leave the Athletics temporarily and go to his home in Maine for a long rest. He will probably return in August.

THE MARVELOUS PHOTO PLAY NOW THE RAGE IN NEW YORK
BUYS SEAT NOW Mat. 25c Night 25-50c

RINGSIDE NOTES

Because of his exorbitant demands Champion Johnny Kilbane will not get the chance to box in Milwaukee for some time. The matchmaker of the National A. C. of that city wired Kilbane asking him his terms to box Charlie White. Jimmy Dunn, the champion's manager, wired back that Kilbane must get a $5,000 guarantee, with the privilege of 35 per cent of the receipts. He was promptly passed up.

* * *

The Willie Ritchie-Joe Rivers match has been definitely closed. The bout is scheduled to go 20 rounds and will be held in Eddie Graney's arena at Frisco. The forfeit for not making the weight was fixed at $2,500. The men agreed to weigh 134 pounds, ringside.

* * *

Australia is well supplied with English fighters, for there are more than a dozen of them in that country at present taking part in bouts. Those who are there are Johnny Summers, the English welterweight champion, Jim Sullivan, Harry Mansfield, Petty Officer Curran, Sid Burns, Boto Driscoll, Harry Thomas and Ald Goodwin.

* * *

Charley Ledoux, the French bantam, left Friday for the coast. He is practically matched to meet Eddie Campi, June 24.

* * *

Tom McCarey expects the Leach Cross-Bud Anderson scrap to be the biggest attraction staged on the coast in years. Anderson has become as big a card as Rivers in Los Angeles and the fans have already taken a liking to Cross. They are billed to get together on July 4.

* * *

Johnny Kilbane received $1,200 for trimming Jimmy Fox at Frisco the other night. Not very much for a champion.

* * *

"If Sammy Harris, manager of Kid Williams, is willing to have Charley White, the New York referee, officiate in my 20-round bout at Baltimore on July 4," says Johnny Coulon, "then I will lose no time in signing the articles of agreement for the contest. I will not stand for any Baltimore referee, as Harris suggests, for I demand a square deal."

* * *

Medford, Oreg., fight fans have pledged themselves to make a present of $1,000 to Billy Nolan, manager of Willie Ritchie, if he will allow Ritchie to sign an agreement to meet Bud Anderson.

* * *

George Rodel beat Jim Flynn out of a Gunboat Smith match at New York on June 27. Flynn was willing to tackle Smith despite the fact that he has two injured hands. This speaks pretty highly of Savage, who made Flynn dodge a meeting with him here.

* * *

If Jack White defeats Johnny Dundee at Los Angeles on June 17 he is to seek a bout with Johnny Kilbane. This information comes to us in a letter from White, who says he is getting into the best shape of his life for his clash with the Eastern boy.

* * *

Bombardier Billy Wells' next fight may be with Packey Mahoney for a purse of $2,000. The match, if closed, will be staged on June 30.

* * *

Wells has also been matched to meet George Carpentier in a return match in London some time in November. On June 1, Carpentier knocked out Wells in the fourth round at Ghent, Belgium, and won the heavyweight championship of Europe.

* * *

Patsy Brannigan and Eddie Wimler will clash in a six-round set-to at Pittsburg to-night. This will be Brannigan's first bout since he defeated Matty McCue last month at Milwaukee, Wis.

Poultry, Pet and Live Stock

Adjoining States Ship Millions Poultry and Eggs to Ga. Annually

Current News of the Poultry World. Northern Pacific Ry. Has Poultry Farm for Dining Car Use.

Recent reports go to show that Georgia is having shipped in principally from Tennessee about $4,000,000 worth of poultry and eggs annually. While her adjoining State, Tennessee, from whom she buys, is producing and shipping annually over $20,000,000 worth. It seems that no other State in the Union has made such rapid strides in the development of the poultry business commercially as has Tennessee. There seems to be a lot of wide-awake farmers and stock raisers up there who have gotten the work to going, and it is spreading like wildfire. A hint to the wise should be sufficient to get things going like that down here—keep the money at home at least, if no more.

One of Swift & Co.'s superintendents reports that within a radius of 60 miles of Ottumwa, Iowa, that eight to twelve cars of poultry are shipped weekly, and quite frequently 100 to 300 fowls are received from one farmer at a time. And it must be remembered that land in that section is worth from $125 to $175 per acre, and its value depends upon its producing capacity. It looks a good deal like poultry was a pretty good asset.

The railroads usually get into the good things as well as common folks do. They not only own tracts of land, but they are going to make something out of it, too. For three years the Northern Pacific has maintained a poultry farm at Kent, Wash., not far from Seattle, where they maintain over 10,000 White Leghorn hens, producing on an average 150 dozen eggs a day for use on their dining cars. The railway is also securing the milk for these cars from 300 fine thoroughbred cows kept in the same locality, but upon a different farm.

They maintain a large bakery in Seattle and one in St. Paul to furnish their cars with bread, cakes and pies of the finest kind. They evidently intend that the people shall be supplied from first hands with the best of supplies.

The managers of The Poultry Item, one of the leading poultry journals of this country, are getting ready to put on another of their annual midsummer continuous poultry exhibitions at Atlantic City.

It will last throughout the great tourist season at this popular resort. This will be the second one of the series, they having had one there last summer during July and August. It is put on for the purpose of advertising, both the promoters and the different varieties of exhibition stock will be there. It will be open to every one, and in addition to the displays of poultry there will be incubators and brooders in operation; various kinds of coops, houses and appliances of various kinds that are of value and interest to the average poultry keeper, either large or small.

EDITED BY JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL

There is no question that it will be the means of getting these goods before more and a greater variety of humanity than almost any way a person could conceive. Let the good work go on, for the masses certainly need the information.

The disease known as "gapes," and from which thousands of young chicks suffer and die annually, particularly in localities where the land is a heavy clay soil and the water does not get away quickly.

This kind of soil becomes infested with the larvae which produces the little red worms that get into the wind-pipe of the little fellows and choke them to death. Professor H. Garman, of the Kentucky Station, has been experimenting along this line by putting a bunch of chickens on a tight board floor for some three weeks when first hatched. Another lot of the same hatching was allowed to run on the ground, and in the wet grass. The ones kept on the floor had no traces of the trouble, while among those allowed the run of the land suffered greatly, and while some died, others had to be treated with the horsehair loop to remove the clot of worms. This should be a tip to poultry raisers who live in localities where they are so troubled—and upon which poultry has been kept for generations and not been plowed or turned over.

ROOMS WANTED.

WANTED—Accommodations for the Georgia legislators. They are coming in now and will be in session at the State Capitol from June 25 for FIFTY days. All of them are on the outlook for nice, comfortable and home-like places to eat their meals, or to board or to rent. Many of the places these legislators had last year did not suit them and they desire to find something better. All the legislators will read The Georgian—that's certain. Their attention will be called day after day to the "Legislators' Accommodations" column on the Want Ad pages of The Georgian. This will be a big advantage to you. So if you have eating or boarding places or have rooms, apartments or houses for rent, your ad should be under the "Legislators' Accommodations" heading. An investment of a few cents will keep your house full for the next three months. Phone or send in your ad at once.

FOUND—If you lose anything and will advertise it in Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian you will surely recover it if it is found by an honest person. A three-time ad seldom fails. Remarkable recoveries are brought about every day through the Lost and Found column.

APARTMENTS WANTED.

If you have decided to spend a few months away from home this summer and would like to have some one take care of your home during that time, we know of no better and quicker way to find reliable parties to care for it than to place a small "Want Ad" in Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian. Try it and see.

HOUSES WANTED.

WANTED—Nice seven or eight-room two-story house; furnace; all conveniences; good locality, Inman Park, North Side or West End; must be good condition; possession by July 15; not over $52.50. Address H., Box 737, care Georgian. 6-14-7

WANTED—To lease a six or seven-room modern house; reasonable rent; from owner. J. W. Corey, 619 West Peachtree Street. 41-13-6

If you have decided to spend a few months away from home this summer and would like to have some one take care of your home during that time, we know of no better and quicker way to find reliable parties to care for it than to place a small "Want Ad" in Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian. Try it and see.

THIS VERY MINUTE the opportunity you've long sought awaits you in the Want Ad pages of Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian. Not an issue is printed that does not contain the cream of desirable positions, excellent boarding and rooming places, fine business opportunities, real estate bargains and other things. A Mother's Work and Her Hopes

(Copyright, 1913)

This editorial is not written for women. It is written for MEN, and for boys; for the millions who fail to appreciate the work that mothers do, for the millions that ignore the self-sacrifice and devotion upon which society is based.

On a hot night, in the dusty streets of a dirty city, you see hundreds of women sitting on porches, TAKING CARE OF BABIES.

In lonesome farm houses, far out on monotonous plains, with the late sun setting on a long day of hard work, you find women, cheerful and persevering, TAKING CARE OF BABIES.

In the middle of the night, in earliest morning, when MEN sleep, all over the world, in ice huts North, in Southern tents, in big houses and in dingy tenements, you find women awake, cheerfully and gladly TAKING CARE OF BABIES.

We respect and praise the man selfishly working for himself.

If he builds up a great industry and a great personal fortune, we praise him.

If he risks his life for personal glory and for praise, we praise him.

If he shows courage even in saving his own carcass from destruction, we praise him.

There was never a man whose courage, or devotion, could be compared with that of a woman caring for her baby.

The mother's love is unselfish, and it has no limit this side of the grave.

You will find ONE man in a thousand who will risk his life for a cause.

You will find a THOUSAND women in a thousand who will risk their lives for their babies.

Everything that a man has and is he owes to his mother. From her he gets health, brain, encouragement, moral character, and ALL his chances of success.

How poorly the mother's service is repaid by men individually, and by society as a whole!

The individual man feels that he has done much if he gives sufficient money and a LITTLE attention to her who brought him from nothingness into life and sacrificed her sleep and youth and strength for his sake.

Society, the aggregate of human beings, feels that its duty is done when a few hospitals are opened for poor mothers, and a little medicine doled out in cold-hearted fashion to the sick child.

Fortunately, it may truly be said that the great man is almost always appreciative of his greater mother.

Napoleon was cold, jealous of other men, monumentally egotistical when comparing himself with other sons of women. But he reverenced and appreciated the noble woman who bore him, lived for him, and watched over him to the end. He said:

"It is to my mother, to her good principles, that I owe my success and all I have that is worth while. I do not hesitate to say that the future of the child depends on the mother."

The future of the individual child depends on the individual mother, and the future of the race depends on the mothers of the race.

Think what has been done for mankind by thousands of millions of perfectly devoted mothers.

Every mother is entirely DEVOTED, entirely HOPEFUL, entirely CONFIDENT that no future is too great for her baby's deserts.

The little head—often hopelessly ill-shaped—rolls about feebly on the thin neck devoid of muscles. The toothless gums chew whatever comes along. The wondering eyes look feebly, aimlessly about, without focus or concentration. The future human being, to the cold-blooded onlooker, is a useless little atom added to the human sea of nonentity.

But to the mother that baby is the marvel of all time. There is endless meaning in the first mumblings, endless soul in the senile, baby smile, unlimited possibilities in the knobby forehead and round, hairless head. She sees in the future of the baby responsibilities of government, and feels that one so perfectly lovely must eventually be acclaimed ruler by mankind.

As a result of perfect confidence in its future, the mother gives to every baby perfect devotion, perfect and affectionate moral education. Each child begins life inspired by the most beautiful example of altruism and self-sacrifice.

Kindness has gradually taken the place of brutality among human beings, because every baby at its birth has found itself surrounded by absolute kindness.

The mother's kindness forms moral character.

The mother's confidence and encouragement stimulate ambition and inspire courage.

The mother's patient watchfulness gives good health, and fights disease when it comes.

The mother's wrathful protection shields the child from the stern and dwarfing severity of fathers.

Truly, a man may and should be judged by his feeling toward his own mother, and toward the mothers of other men—of ALL MEN.

In the character of Christ, whose last earthly thought on Golgotha was for His Mother, as in the character of the hard-working, ignorant man whose earnings go to make his mother comfortable, the most beautiful trait is devotion to the mother who suffers and works for her children, from the hours that precede their birth through all the years that they spend on earth together.

Honor thy father and THY MOTHER.

And honor the mothers of other men. Make their task easier through fair payment of the men who support the children, through good public schools for their children, through respectful treatment of ALL women.

The mother is happy. For she knows "the deep joy of loving some one else more than herself."

You honor yourself, and prove yourself worthy of a good mother and of final success, when you do something for the mothers of the world.

There IS a Conspiracy Against This Man

Many a time you hear a young man say there's a conspiracy in his office to keep him from advancing. Usually he's right. There IS a conspiracy, and the conspirators are his baser selves. When the young man in the picture loafs at his work; when he drinks; when he stays up all night gambling—he's heading the conspiracy against his own success. And that's the only sort of conspiracy that can ever keep a man from his goal.

Mr. Suburbs Merely Forgot the Gasoline

The Progress and Prosperity of Los Angeles a Triumph of Intelligence and Independence

NEWS articles have been circulated in the East concerning the late election in Los Angeles, containing statements which are not justified by the facts.

These misstatements have emanated from the newspapers of a certain political leader or boss of Los Angeles, who was defeated in the late election and who has attempted to excuse himself and explain his own defeat by an attack upon the electorate of Los Angeles.

As a matter of fact, Los Angeles has voted in this election with its usual good sense and good judgment, with its customary progressive spirit and high morality.

Mr. Rose, the newly elected Mayor, has had an excellent career as a judge, is a man of experience in politics and of sterling character as a citizen. He will give Los Angeles the efficient, honest, progressive administration that the intelligent and public-spirited citizens of that city demand, and Los Angeles in its choice for Mayor is a subject for congratulation.

The high character of the politics of Los Angeles and the tremendous advantage of such clean and conscientious politics, in contributing to the wonderful growth and attractiveness of that city, are things which the citizens of New York should study and imitate.

In this late election, and in previous elections, party prejudices and national political partisanship played no part whatever. There was no candidate of the Democratic party and no candidate of the Republican party in the local field. The Socialist party, to be sure, was in evidence and ran third in the race, but the two leading parties in numerical strength were two absolutely independent parties, with independent citizens as candidates on each of their tickets.

The whole election was fought out upon the mere matter of the availability and the capability of the candidates.

The decision in favor of Mr. Rose was reached mainly because of the belief of the people in his special fitness and his unexceptionable qualities as a man and a citizen.

One other influence of importance, however, entered into the campaign, and that was a declaration in favor of Mr. Shenk, the independent candidate opposing Mr. Rose, by Mr. Edwin T. Earl, a political leader, or rather boss, in Los Angeles politics.

Even though Mr. Earl is a boss, he is not a squalid one of the kind that dominate so many of our Eastern cities. He is a man of ability and of wealth, but he is considered a boss and he had been accused of using his political power to the advantage of his private interests.

The independent citizens of Los Angeles refused to tolerate a boss or the candidate of a boss. Mr. Shenk had been the leading candidate, and the betting stood at 2 to 1 in his favor. But when Mr. Shenk refused to repudiate satisfactorily the boss and the attempted association of the boss, the public-spirited citizens of Los Angeles turned from Mr. Shenk to Mr. Rose, and elected Mr. Rose by a handsome plurality.

What an inspiration action like this is to the cause of independence, clean politics and good government everywhere! What could not New York accomplish if the citizens of New York had the independence and the courage and the public spirit of the citizens of Los Angeles! How long would the people of New York be betrayed by their parties and their public officials if the citizens of New York would support no party in municipal matters except an independent party, and no candidate except a candidate that was wholly free from boss dictation and domination?

The citizens of Los Angeles regard the conduct of their municipal government as a great business enterprise, and they approach the question from a sound business point of view, free from personal selfishness or party prejudice.

They have put into operation direct primaries, the initiative, the referendum and the recall. They select candidates with the one consideration of the fitness of the candidates. They elect them without bias or prejudice. They instruct them through the initiative. They review their acts through the referendum, and they retire them, if unfaithful or incompetent, through the recall.

Los Angeles is far ahead of New York in progressive principles, in public spirit and in the efficient conduct of its government. The result is a public administration which is as clean and wholesome as a private household.

Los Angeles has the beauty of its site, a matchless climate, an intellectual and enterprising people, attractive and distinctive architecture, delightful homes surrounded with parks and gardens. It is the center of a great petroleum trade and an extensive citrus fruit industry, an entrepot for the maritime trade of the world and the metropolis of the expanding empire of the great Southwest.

But who shall say that the wonderful growth in population and prosperity of Los Angeles, which is one of the marvels of this marvelous land, is not due as much to its wholesome political condition as to the wonderful climate of this favored section and the varied resources of its farms and orchards, its oil wells, its manufactures and its mines?

Would not New York confer upon itself an immeasurable material as well as a moral benefit if it would learn, like Los Angeles, to conduct its government cleanly and competently in the control of the whole people and in the best interests of the whole people?
