FOUR MORE DROPPED BY CHIEF

Suspensions Continue in Growing Police Scandal as Negroes Tell Story.

With the suspension of four more policemen Saturday afternoon by Chief James L. Beavers, it was announced that the latest police scandal would be probed to its very bottom even though it involved the greater part of the force.

The men deprived of their uniforms and equipment and dismissed from the service Saturday pending the investigation of the story that they visited the notorious resort conducted in the rear of 127 Auburn Avenue by Ola Bradley, a negro woman, were J. P. Born, J. E. McDaniel, Mack C. Folds and J. J. Jackson.

Chief Beavers gave the formal order of suspension at 1 o'clock after he had received a report of an investigation made by Captain A. L. Poole. He said that no other policemen were being considered for immediate suspension, but that the investigation would be continued until every guilty person had been discovered.

The four men suspended Friday were Policemen L. W. Evans and R. T. David and Call Officers C. H. Bailey and R. A. Wood.

Those suspended Friday on the charge of having visited and drunk liquor in the negro disorderly house at the rear of 127 Auburn Avenue were Policeman L. W. Evans and R. T. David and Call Officers C. H. Bailey and R. A. Wood.

The suspensions made Saturday came almost entirely as the result of a story told at police headquarters by Ola Bradley, the negro woman who conducts the notorious resort. She made a signed statement in which the names of Born, Folds and Jackson figured prominently.

She related that Born and Folds were in her place one Sunday morning about three months ago. The men became involved in an argument, and she recalled that one of the men called the other a liar. On this, she said, Folds made an effort to get his revolver.

Captain Poole, who is conducting the investigation into the scandal under the direction of Chief Beavers, found the negro woman who is alleged to have been the cause of the dispute. She bore out the statement of Ola Bradley and also of Claude Gray, who was arrested as a witness early Saturday morning.

Deny Woman's Charge.

The Bradley woman, in telling of the visits of Jackson and McDaniel to her place, said that last Monday she gave Jackson two bottles of beer to drink and that McDaniel urged Jackson not to drink it. All of the men deny they are guilty of wrongdoing and say that they were at the place only for the purpose of getting evidence. McDaniel says that he never saw Jackson drink.

Gray is said to have full knowledge of a disgraceful affair which took place in the resort two weeks ago when two policemen are alleged to have become involved in a quarrel. The officers, it is reported, would have come to blows had not Gray stepped in between them and separated them.

Gray will be closely questioned today in the expectation that he will give the Chief the names of a number of other policemen who have been in the habit of making visits there.

"I am going to give Gray a thorough grilling," said the Chief. "The whole truth is what I am after, regardless of how big a scandal is stirred up by the revelations. All of the men are going to get a fair hearing. If these reports are erroneous or falsified, they will have the opportunity to show it."

Wood's Defense.

Wood, who tendered his resignation Saturday morning, said that he and his partner, Bailey, had stopped in at the negro resort to see that everything was all right. He declared that neither of them drank intoxicants there and that when Moon looked in through the window Bailey was

Felder To Be Tried With Lanford, but No Date Is Set Yet

Attorney T. B. Felder and Chief Detective Newport A. Lanford will be tried at the same time in the State's case against them for criminal libel, although no definite plans have been made by the Solicitor as to the date for the trial or whether to transfer the cases to the City Court.

Solicitor Dorsey said he had not yet considered going to trial in the matter, and would not have an opportunity to do so for several days.

The report was current in court circles, however, that the two cases would be transferred to the City Court and probably be tried before the Frank trial.

CREMATORY STRIFE IS ENDED

The crematory row ended Saturday. Mayor Woodward agreed to sign a slightly revised contract. His decision was the result of a conference with Assistant City Attorney W. D. Ellis, Jr., Alderman J. H. Harwell, Councilman A. R. Colcord and C. P. Goree, attorney, friends of Mayor Woodward. A special meeting of Council will be called for Tuesday afternoon to pass it.

The difference between Mayor Woodward and the Council was a point of honor. Council had, by resolution, accepted a proposal of the Destructor Company instead of adopting a contract in order that they might override his veto should he disapprove.

Now a formal contract will be passed in addition to the resolution, which, of course, will take precedence over the resolution. The essentials of the trade had been agreed to, and the only changes made in the recent contract submitted to the Mayor were the insertion of the word "complete" in one paragraph and the change of the word "be" to "the" in another paragraph.

The Destructor Company will be able to get $125,000, first money received from the city, as soon as the program is adopted. No further hitch is anticipated.

It has been announced the crematory will be completed within ten days, at which time all dump piles in the city will be abolished.

Elopers Held Pending White Slave Inquiry

"A happy reunion in the tower" was the promise Recorder Broyles ironically extended to W. T. Wiggins, a mail clerk, who nonchalantly admitted Saturday morning he permitted his wife to leave Jacksonville for Atlanta in company with another man.

Wiggins and Mrs. Rosa Hearn, also of Jacksonville, who testified her husband was dead, were bound over to the State courts by the Recorder on $500 bond each.

"You may have violated the white slave law, also," the Recorder said to Wiggins. The judge said he would have government agents investigate.

NUTTING ENTERS RACE.

Joseph F. Nutting, well-known real estate man, announces that he will be a candidate for Council from the Eighth Ward. Mr. Nutting is a former newspaper man with many friends who will be interested to know of his decision.

You've Been Craving

All these years to own a gold mine. It's not at all impossible. Right here in Atlanta there are many gold mines—some little, some big, some paying small returns, others their tens of thousands.

And the beauty about the Atlanta gold mines is you're not troubled to dig and blast and assay, but every foot of dirt yields a generous tribute.

Several large gold mines have been sold lately in the uptown sections, and many smaller ones in different parts of the city.

Read to-day's Real Estate Ads in the Want "Ad" section, and pick out a gold mine. There's at least one for you.

Capital's Tyranny Caused Unionism, Says E. H. Walker

Edward H. Walker, candidate for Governor in the race with Hoke Smith and Joseph M. Brown, has issued a statement defending unionism in reply to Governor Brown.

"To concentrate indescribable wealth of millions of dollars into the possession of one man," he says, "two things are necessary. First, the law must be broken. Most of the great fortunes of to-day rest on a foundation of bribery, corruption and defiance of the law. Second, the assembling of these big fortunes had to be done by exploiting the lifetime productivity of hundreds of thousands of laborers.

"The Government's failure to protect labor from this crushing greed forced labor to protect itself."

Mothers' Congress Appeals for Milk To Save the Babies

"Save the babies!" is the cry sent up by Atlanta to join with that of the entire nation through the hot summer months. Every mail continues to bring to the Mothers' Congress here supplications for milk. The demand is far greater than the supply.

"Do not delay your aid," is the Mothers' Congress appeal. "It may come too late. Won't you give it to them by sending in a contribution for the milk fund?"

Goethals Says Canal Is Air-Bomb Proof

NEW YORK, June 28.—Colonel George Goethals has returned to Panama. He will remain on the Isthmus until the first ship has passed through the canal. The Colonel laughed at the idea some aviators have they can destroy the Gatun lock by dropping powerful bombs from aircraft.

"I'd like to post a forfeit no aviator could do any serious damage," said Colonel Goethals. "We have not done our work on the locks without care and forethought. Attack from an aircraft has been considered in all the construction work."

Baroness Arrives to Wed St. Louis Man

NEW YORK, June 28.—Baroness Kalinewski, accompanied by her brother, Baron Heinrich Kalinewski, arrived here to-day on the Kaiser Auguste Victoria, and said, much to her brother's disgust, she is en route to St. Louis, where she is to marry James Hurley, a prominent railroad man of that city. Their courtship began a year ago in France when their autos came near colliding.

When asked if he thought he might not marry an American before he left this country, the Baron's only comment was, "Not for mine."

TAX SYSTEM SCORED BY SLATON

Revision of Criminal and Other Laws Also Urged in Executive's Inaugural Address.

Drastic action toward the rejuvenation and correction of Georgia's laws, especially taxation and the Criminal Code, were recommendations which marked the inaugural address of John Marshall Slaton upon his induction into the gubernatorial office in the House of Representatives before the two bodies of the General Assembly and hundreds of visitors at noon Saturday.

The new Chief Executive drew out in sharp contrast the present system of appropriations and taxation and declared the system was wrong.

He brought up for bitter arraignment the lack of school funds, which he termed the lack of a proper foundation for future citizenship of the State. He advocated an inheritance tax, an increased occupation tax upon corporations and a general equalization of taxation throughout the Commonwealth.

Drain Not Checked, He Says.

He called attention to the loss of millions of dollars through abandonment of tax measures such as that on liquor, the dog tax and others, and declared that no substitute for this drain had been made. He recommended increases in taxation for the school fund and the pension fund, and in concluding pointed to a general tide of prosperity which he declared was to pass over Georgia.

In part, Governor Slaton said:

Our system is wrong. The Legislature can appropriate what it pleases, and the tax rate remains the same. The Legislator has made himself a favorite with his constituency by voting for every popular appropriation and nothing suffers but the State's credit.

Unless some check be made, an increase of revenue will be of no avail in preventing the financial embarrassment of the State. Under the enthusiasm of the moment one appropriation bill may exhaust it.

More than four-fifths of the States of the Union derive revenue from what is known as an inheritance tax. I am informed that this tax is the subject of least complaint.

This form of tax has been approved by the highest authorities and is one of the easiest borne and subject to fewer hardships than any other. The inheritance tax is to some extent a corrective.

Corporation Taxation.

Prior to the year 1905, many efforts were made to collect an occupation tax from corporations. Governor Terrell, in his message of the year 1905, recommended a tentative privilege tax based on capital stock of $100,000 per year on corporations having a capital of $1,000,000, or over. He anticipated from this source more than $100,000 a year, and thought that such sum could reasonably be expected without a hardship. The State, however, has not received one-half this sum, and during the year 1913 the estimated revenue from this source is $48,000.

I recommend that the maximum occupation tax on corporations having $1,000,000 capital and over be $200 per annum, and the tax on corporations of less capital be adjusted accordingly.

Equalization of taxes, either through the enforcement of present laws, or new correctives, so that each may bear his proportionate burden, would not mean the increase of taxes upon any one now performing his duty, but would rather mean the lightening of his unfair portion of the load. I commend this subject to your attention.

Bonded Debt To Be Refunded.

An additional reason for establishing and maintaining the State's finances on a sound basis is the necessity of making provision for more than one-half of the entire bonded debt of the State, maturing in 1915. This is an imperative duty resting on this Legislature.

No sinking fund was provided by law to retire the bonds aggregating $3,679,000 which are due in 1915. The entire State's debt is $6,452,500, which does not include the obligations to the University, amounting to $291,500, and the landscrip fund of $90,000.

All the debt of $6,452,500 is provided for, or will be provided for, by the sinking fund required to be raised annually until the debt is paid off, except the

$3,679,000 which falls due in May and July, 1915.

If refunding bonds were issued in 1915, making the first $100,000 fall due in 1935, then the sinking fund could be made to run continuously and retire each year, until paid, $100,000 of this series of 1915 refunding bonds.

This plan would seem advisable in order to relieve the treasury and the people of the increased burden at this time, unless financial conditions at the time of the sale of the bonds should demand that their redemption begin at an earlier period in order to effectuate their more satisfactory disposition.

Leading bond men in financial centers have stated that if they were certified by some responsible trust company, thus assuring their genuineness, and guarding against their being counterfeited, and if their validity were approved by attorneys who are specialists in this line, the expense would be more than repaid in the price that could be obtained. Certainly no safer investment can be afforded than these bonds.

I recommend that through your appropriate committees you consider at once the matter of refunding the State's indebtedness above referred to.

Registration of Voters.

We believe the present registration law should be so amended that when a voter has once proven his qualification by registering and being enrolled, he shall remain a registered voter unless disqualified for cause due to himself.

The foregoing extract from the last platform upon which I was elected, expresses a principle which deserves universal acceptance. It contemplates no change of the constitution which provides for the qualification of the voter.

The farmers of a neighborhood have duly registered, but the succeeding year when busy with their crops, they can not send their taxes to the collector by some neighbor going to town, except on penalty of being disfranchised.

The traveling men who have registered one year can not send their remittance the next year to the proper officer, and so it is with men in every calling who perform civic duties and who have overlooked the last day of registration, or have been prevented from registering anew by compelling reasons. The professional politician never forgets it.

I recommend that the present registration law be amended to correct the injustice indicated. It would always be provided that the voter must have paid his taxes and not subjected himself to any of the disqualifications provided by law.

Highways.

It is needless to impress upon you the importance of our highways. Their value is an asset of the entire State. An intelligent Highway Commission, or Commissioner, clothed with proper authority, could be the means of untold benefit in suggesting proper methods of building the road adapted to the locality, or in solving the problems of engineering which might arise in various sections.

I call your attention to the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the lease of which terminates in 1919. No one, I apprehend, would or should consider its sale, but the problem of its disposition should be considered by a commission with directions to report its recommendations and its reasons therefor.

To delay this matter will mean to put the State at the inexcusable disadvantage of unpreparedness when the time arrives for imperative action.

The Criminal Code.

One of the fundamental purposes of government is the protection of life and safety of the citizen. If the rules of evidence are so shaped as to prevent the discovery of the truth, and if the State is deprived of the means of sifting the facts, the judges and juries are not to be blamed if crimes are allowed to go unpunished.

It is an anomaly that a defendant should take the stand, make any statement that he sees fit, or that his shrewd lawyer has prepared, and being immune from cross-examination, demand that the judge shall charge the jury that they may accept his unsworn statement in preference to all the evidence in the case.

His carefully written statement may contain all manner of prejudiced assertions which constitute no defense, but the State is not allowed to disprove or to question them. The jury is by law instructed that they may consider them. Without introducing evidence, in order that his attorney may make the last speech, he declares that he can prove assertions by various witnesses, often disreputable men, and challenges the Solicitor General to introduce them. This can not be done because the State can not touch for their character.

I, therefore, recommend that a law be passed abolishing the defendant's statement, and providing in its place that he be sworn as a witness, if he desires, but his failure to be so sworn be not subject to adverse comment by prosecuting counsel. This is in accordance with current Federal and State law.

The legislation in Georgia against carrying concealed weapons has in recent years been conspicuous. It has been suggested by the law of self-preservation. Daily we read of men who have shot others, and have been acquitted on the old statement that the deceased threw his hand on his hip pocket, and the defendant shot in fear of his life. When searched, the dead man was found generally unarmed.

If the carrying of concealed weapons were made a felony, subject to be reduced to a misdemeanor by either judge or jury, the deterrent effect of such a law would be the saving of many a life. I earnestly recommend to you the consideration of this question.

Banking Laws.

The banks of a State perform public functions, and as such are properly subjected to governmental supervision. The bankers of the State, with the desire of maintaining a high standard of responsibility and of affording guarantees against improvident management, that imperil the money of the people, recommend legislation looking to the accomplishment of these objects. I commend this subject as one worthy of your serious consideration.

My predecessors have recommended the creation of the position of State Auditor, and in this recommendation I heartily concur. His services could be utilized in checking the cost of new buildings for which requests may be made by the various institutions. Those who have served on the appropriations committees are aware of the inadequate facilities of the State in arriving at the amount of the necessary expenditures.

The Constitution.

The Constitution is the expression of the supreme law of the land. It can only be changed by the people speaking in their sovereign capacity. In order that they may vote intelligently on any proposition it is essential that they understand it. I recommend that in proposing Constitutional amendments, you plainly indicate the proposition to the voter in such language that he may understand the meaning of the question submitted.

My predecessor has called attention to the fact that some of the agricultural schools are well attended, while others receive little patronage, whether due to the matter of location or lack of interest, or from what cause, I am unable to say. Each obtains the same appropriation from the State for maintenance. I recommend that you investigate their condition, and apply the proper remedies.

Slaton is Inaugurated With Simple Ceremonies.

With ceremonies that gained in strength and impressiveness through their very simplicity, John Marshall Slaton to-day became Governor of the State of Georgia, succeeding Joseph M. Brown. The oath of office was administered by Judge William H. Fish, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, at 12:02 o'clock.

Governor Slaton was inducted into office in the presence of a brilliant assemblage of Georgia men and women, including his own and the retiring Governor's family and intimate friends, members of the State Legislature and prominent jurists. For the first time in the history of the State the United States was represented by Judge William T. Newman and Judge Don A. Pardee, of the Federal Court. They occupied seats directly in front of the Speaker's stand.

Galleries and the floor of the House were filled with spectators. By 10 o'clock virtually every seat in the visitors' gallery was taken and room had been provided for a large number on the floor. In the corridors another crowd, unable to gain entrance into the hall, waited patiently for a glimpse of the new executive.

Joint Session Held.

Neither the House nor the Senate transacted any business, convening at 11 o'clock and immediately taking a recess. At 11:45 o'clock both Houses again convened, and the Senate at once adjourned and marched to the House, where members took seats in a semi-circle about the speaker's stand. In the front row of seats about the speakers' stand sat the intimate friends and relatives of Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton. Twenty-eight chairs had been reserved for members of Governor Slaton's family and eight for the family and friends of Governor Brown.

In Governor Slaton's party were Major William F. Slaton, father of the Governor; Mrs. John M. Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Slaton, Justice and Mrs. S. C. Atkinson, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Waldo, Mrs. W. H. Blanchard, Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant, John M. Slaton, Jr., W. F. Slaton, Jr., Slaton Waldo, Albie Waldo, William D. Grant, Miss Margaret Grant, James Jackson Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Phillips and Miss Robinson. In Governor Brown's party were Mrs. Joseph M. Brown, Miss Cora Brown, Charles Brown, Miss Sally Brown, Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Connolly, Mrs. Frances Connolly and Thomas W. Connolly.

Governor Brown Receives Friends.

Governor Brown arrived at the Capitol shortly before 11 o'clock, and went at once into his private office, where he received a number of friends and visitors.

Governor-elect Slaton drove up in his automobile to the Washington Street entrance of the Capitol, accompanied by Mrs. Slaton and his father, Major William F. Slaton. They proceeded to the reception room of the Governor's office, where the inaugural procession formed.

Promptly at 11:45 o'clock Speaker Burwell called the House to order, and immediately thereafter members of the Senate arrived.

The inaugural procession moved from the Governor's office on the first floor. The procession was led by Governor-elect Slaton and Governor Brown. After them came ex-Governor Henry D. McDaniel, and then followed the Justices of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals, the Federal Judges, the State House officers, the members of the joint legislative committee on inauguration, and the immediate families of Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton.

Governor Slaton Presented.

Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton took their places on the Speaker's stand, the first standing to the left of Senator Randolph Anderson and Speaker Burwell and the latter to the right. Rev. James B. Robbins, of the Trinity Methodist Church, opened the ceremonies with prayer, in which he invoked Divine aid for Governor Slaton in the conduct of the affairs of the State.

Randolph Anderson, President of the Senate, presented Governor-elect Slaton to the people of Georgia and the Legislature, and immediately thereafter Justice Fish administered the oath of office. In a speech expressing great confidence in the ability of the incoming executive, Governor Brown presented Governor Slaton with the Great Seal of the State of Georgia.

After the inaugural ceremonies Governor and Mrs. Slaton and ex-Governor and Mrs. Brown lunched at the Executive Mansion. Ex-Governor and Mrs. Brown retired to their farm near Marietta, and Governor Slaton took possession of the mansion in the afternoon.

RIGID PROBE TO BE PUSHED BY BEAVERS

More Suspensions of Policemen as Department Scandal Continues to Grow.

drinking a glass of ice water the negro woman had poured for him.

"The other two officers, David and Evans, who have been suspended with us, were not even in the house," said Wood. "The injustice of it lies in the fact that the police department has taken the word of this one man, Moon, against all four of us, in suspending us for drinking in the place."

On a charge of suspected perjury, Chief Beavers indefinitely suspended Evans immediately following the suspension of Wood, Bailey and David. The patrolman was called before the Chief and stripped of his badge, braid and equipment. The case will be thrashed out by the Police Commission.

The evidence in Recorder's Court was that policemen had frequented the negro resort daily and uniformed men had often been seen entering it in broad daylight. One witness told of a midnight brawl participated in by four officers. The Chief said that he had obtained the names of the frequenters of the place.

He began Saturday morning inquiring into a report of police protection of the Auburn Avenue resort and others of its kind. A number of patrolmen were called before him the first thing after he reported to his office and he prepared to continue his inquiry through the day.

Claim They Got Evidence.

Plainclothesman W. T. Moon admitted to the Recorder that he had drunk whisky at the Auburn Avenue resort with the negress operator. He said, however, that he had only done so to secure evidence. The Recorder took him to task for not having reported the incident earlier.

A negro woman inmate of the house said Moon had been intimate with a girl there. Moon made an emphatic denial of the charge, but said he had been a frequent visitor to the place in the interest of getting evidence against it. Policeman Adams testified to the same thing.

Patrolman Wood branded Moon as a deliberate liar and said that he would prove perjury against him. He also said he would prove Adams had perjured himself, after which he would introduce evidence that would merit the immediate discharge of the two men.

Bailey said that the two men, Wood and Adams, had testified against him in a spirit of revenge because several months ago he arrested Adams for fighting.

Beavers to Investigate.

Sergeant J. H. Barfield, who raided the Auburn Avenue place Friday, told the court that on a previous visit to the place he had seen a patrolman in the hall. The man told him he was looking for a girl who was wanted at headquarters. Chief Beavers will inquire into this incident during the day.

Police Commissioner B. Lee Smith was a prominent figure in the police inquiry Friday. He was closeted with the Chief for several minutes before he suspended the first three men, and later in the day he made a personal investigation of the place on Auburn Avenue. He said that unquestionably the resort had been receiving police protection from a subordinate source.

The next meeting of the Police Commission is July 8, and unless there is a called meeting the charges will not be officially aired before that time.

The officers under suspicion were confident they would be completely exonerated when the Police Board took action, and have retained Attorney R. R. Jackson to represent them. Jackson said that his sympathies were wholly with the dismissed men and he denounced the system where officers of the same rank were assigned the duty of spying on their brother officers.

Policeman L. J. Milam was questioned by Captain Terry late Friday night. He was a partner with Wood, the suspended officer. He was questioned regarding Wood's conduct and reported visits to the place.

Chief Beavers said that his inquiry into the reports of misconduct against his policemen would be extensive and that it would not stop until the department had been purged of every man found guilty of an act unbecoming a policeman.

King Would Give Chief Power to "Fire" Offenders.

Chief of Police Beavers will have power to discharge officers from the department if a resolution to be introduced by Commissioner A. R. King is adopted by the Police Board at its meeting Tuesday, July 8.

"There is not another department of the city government that the head does not have this privilege, and the Chief of Police, above all others, should have the power to discharge an officer when he violates a rule of the department or is found wanting in the qualifications for the place, said Commissioner King.

"The action of the Chief in suspending the men who had visited a questionable house shows it is his intention to rid the department of all that class of policemen who use their office to enter places when not required to do so.

Board Trusts Chief.

"The Chief heard the rumor that policemen were visiting the place in the rear of 127 Auburn Avenue soon after his return from Washington City, and immediately started an investigation, detailing Plainclothes Officers Moon and Adams on the job.

"These men were selected by the Chief not because of any 'personal spite' they might have had against the officers turned up, but because they were, in his opinion, qualified to cope with the case and bring the guilty parties to justice. How well they succeeded the action of the Chief and the conviction of the women in the case in the Recorder's Court shows.

"The Board of Police Commissioners exercises great care in the selection of officers, but are never sure of the men until they are tested. It is up to the Chief and his assistants to do the testing. The Police Board will abide by their decision. The board has the utmost confidence in Chief Beavers and his assistants. They have been proved loyal and true.

Can Appeal to Board.

"In any case where an officer who has been discharged by the Chief feels that he has not been given a square deal he can appeal to the board. The Chief will report to the board all cases of suspension or discharge, and the board either will confirm or reverse him—mostly confirm.

"The Chief has started this investigation and he will carry it to a successful conclusion. It is the duty of citizens who have the welfare of Atlanta at heart to give him every assistance."

MRS. KEEFER AGAIN FORGIVES HUSBAND

Mrs. David Keefer, who tells of her matrimonial mix-ups.

The case against David H. Keefer for disorderly conduct was postponed Saturday afternoon while the police sought witnesses of the affair with his son, Jack Macy, among the guests of the Piedmont driving club Friday night.

Mrs. Keefer swore out a peace warrant in Justice Giradeau's court Saturday afternoon, asking that her husband be put under a peace bond.

"I don't want a divorce; I want to remain Mrs. Keefer. I shall let my husband go in peace," declared Mrs. David H. Keefer, of 80 East Fourteenth Street, who has sworn out a warrant against the well-known broker, charging him with assault and battery on her son, Jack Macy, Friday night.

"I did fly at his throat last night—to kill him," declared Mrs. Keefer Saturday morning with vehemence, "but he warded off the blow and struck me a full blow on the breast. I told him, too, to leave town immediately or I would fill him with bullet holes—but I shall not. I shall sit still in the boat; I shall let him go in peace, for all I want is protection. And that I will have."

Broker and Wife Clash.

The latest sensation in connection with the stormy marital relations of Mr. and Mrs. Keefer, which have furnished "live copy" for papers all the way from Georgia to New York and back again, occurred at a club Friday night about 10 o'clock, when Keefer called with a deputy sheriff to serve papers on his stepson, Jack Macy, to gain possession of a $5,000 automobile.

In the trouble which followed Keefer and young Macy exchanged blows which left marks. Mr. and Mrs. Keefer also clashed. Macy said Saturday morning Keefer struck him first while Deputy Sheriff Miner was attempting to handcuff him. Keefer denies this.

But Mrs. Keefer's own story, as she told it to a reporter for The Georgian Saturday morning, is as follows:

"I returned to New York from Paris in the early part of 1906," said she, "to find there, in my father's home, my old friend and future husband, David H. Keefer.

"He was very ill, and, as I looked there upon his frail form, somehow or other I fancied I saw my former husband and it gave me new courage, new life, for I myself had come from Paris, as I thought, to die.

"He had been a dear friend to me and to Mr. Macy while we were living in Thomasville, Ga., and following Mr. Macy's death he had corresponded with me across the waters.

"And oh those beautiful letters which he wrote to me. How could I think otherwise than that he really loved me from the very depths of his heart?

"A man surely loves a woman if he corresponds in such a way all the way across the waters, don't you think?

Tells About "Real Man."

"So we were married shortly after my return to my father's home. Three days after our wedding I beheld the real man—he actually told me that he believed woman was created only for downfall at the hands of man.

"From that time on he was a beast and more than once he would have allowed me to starve to death if he could. Then came the divorce proceedings in New York State, in which there was much legal juggling at my expense—and that I will not countenance whatever else happens. The scene shifted from New York to Georgia, where I won in the preliminary skirmish—and then he, my recreant husband, came to me to beg forgiveness.

"I forgave—I am always willing to do that—but soon the same old scenes were being enacted. Mr. Keefer, as brilliant as he was and is, was always fond of the dazzle, the things purely of this life.

"He was found in a hotel with another woman. He came nome drunk repeatedly. Things went from bad to worse, and finally we separated. He went away. I remained in New York."

Y. M. C. A. Suspends Operation for Year

While the work of the association will be suspended, the organization will be kept intact. Temporary headquarters will be established in the Baptist Tabernacle.

STATE SECURES NEW PHAGAN EVIDENCE

Frank A. Hooper, associated with Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution of Leo M. Frank on the charge of strangling Mary Phagan, admitted Saturday that Jim Conley, negro sweeper at the National Pencil Factory, had made important additions to the story of his part in the murder mystery and had told of circumstances on the day of the crime which he had revealed in none of his previous statements.

A persistent report that Conley had made the startling admission that he had seen Mary Phagan enter the factory on the day she was slain arose at the time the negro was questioned more than an hour by Solicitor Dorsey early in the week, and this rumor was heightened after Attorney Hooper's interview with the negro Friday.

In all of his statements to the detectives Conley denied he saw the girl at all on the day of the crime until he was horrified by the sight of her dead body lying in the rear of the second floor where he was directed by Leo Frank. Solicitor Dorsey is believed to have wrung the statement from him that he did see Mary Phagan when she came in the door of the factory and went to the second floor to Frank's office.

Hooper Mum on Topic.

Mr. Hooper refused either to affirm or deny this report, declaring that his connection with the case was so recent that he would not be warranted in making any definite statement for publication in reference to the evidence in the possession of the prosecution.

His attention was called to the fact that while in all of the published statements of Conley the negro denied seeing Mary Phagan go into the factory, no one connected with the prosecution could now be induced to say that he still stuck to this particular and puzzling feature of his story. Mr. Hooper, however, would make no comment on the circumstance.

He contented himself with the general assertion that the State has a big stack of evidence of which the defense is in entire ignorance and of which they will remain in ignorance until it is presented when Frank is placed on trial for his life.

"I went to the police station yesterday merely for the purpose of having Conley rehearse his story to me," said Mr. Hooper. "It is true that he told me of a number of circumstances of which I had been in ignorance before, circumstances which have a most important bearing on the case. He made additions to his story which, while they were along the same general line as his last affidavit, gave a detail that assisted me remarkably in getting a much clearer idea of the events as they happened on that day.

Will Be Revealed at Trial.

"I can not tell what they were. They will be revealed when the trial is in actual progress. Mr. Dorsey has guarded his evidence carefully and has refrained from trying his case in the papers. If it were not presumptuous for me to step in and give this evidence away to the public and to the defense it would at least be most unwise.

MRS. STETSON DECLARES MRS. EDDY, DIVINE, STILL RULES SCIENTIST CHURCH

NEW YORK, June 28.—In a remarkable statement to-day Mrs. Augusta Stetson, founder of the first Christian Science church in this city, denied she is seeking to succeed Mrs. Baker G. Eddy, and declared that Mrs. Eddy, like Jesus Christ, did not die as other mortals die, but passed into a spiritual life and still rules as the head of the universal church.

Mrs. Stetson claims to be the spiritual head of the branch church, but says Mrs. Eddy is rising to a final demonstration of her teachings that there is no death.

The statement follows the recent publication of a book by Mrs. Stetson, called "Reminiscences, Sermons and Correspondence," which opponents of Mrs. Stetson say will pave the way for a formal declaration of leadership.

Mrs. Stetson, who was excommunicated from the Christian Science Church because of a dispute over local leadership, said:

"My relations with the church are the same as they have always been since I became a student of Mrs. Eddy. I began working in Christian Science from both a material and spiritual foundation, and continued to demonstrate the power of spirituality over material sense. Step by step, I followed Christ Jesus and Mary Baker Eddy until I had demonstrated up to the point of emergence from a material organization, when I accepted the inevitable, the request of our leader, 'to begin to build on a wholly spiritual foundation, than which there is no other.'

Acknowledges Eddy Leadership.

"Throughout the columns of my book I positively state that Mrs. Eddy is the head of her church, which means the entire body comprising the members of the mother or universal church. Mrs. Eddy has not died, but is rising to a final demonstration of her teachings that 'all is life; there is no death,' and is, as she has been, the spiritual head of the universal church.

"I never have ceased to follow the impersonal ideal once seemingly embodied in flesh. I am steadfast in my convictions that I am the spiritual head of the branch church which she organized and over which she placed me as spiritual head. I am responsible to God and my leader for defending my position.

"I now am awaiting the final victory of truth and love over error and hate. I shall never be separated from my teacher and leader, Mrs. Eddy, nor from my students who comprehend divine metaphysics. My church will stand as a 'light upon the hill,' known and acknowledged by all men as a demonstration of my teaching of Christian Science as taught me by Mary Baker Eddy. The hour has struck. The night has passed. The day dawns. Victory at last rests on the side of Christian Science."

Mrs. Stetson explained this to mean the world will soon realize the divinity of Mrs. Eddy.

Willing to Take Up Rule.

"I was ready and willing to follow my leader, Mrs. Eddy, at her request, and continue to demonstrate at any cost to me the principles of Christian Science, or divine metaphysics, which for many years I had demonstrated in a degree. I am continuing in the church the structure of truth and love and am rising in spiritual power over remaining undestroyed material sense and material organization.

"My spiritual ego consciousness is a member of the body of God, therefore a member of the real church, the house (consciousness) not made with hands, eternal in the one mind.

"Those who have not risen out of material organization and who require personal association and who are not a law unto themselves, but require the help of these a step higher on the ladder of spiritual progress, should remain in the material organization until compelled by the law of truth to advance."

DEATH FROM CHALK POISONING OF CHILD STIRS SCHOOL HEADS

Julia Davenport, one of the friends of Mary Tribble.

Though the home is dark with sorrow, and the death of the little girl has left a void that can never be filled, the parents and friends of little Mary Tribble, 7-year-old victim of colored crayon, find a measure of comfort to-day in the thought that her fate has driven home with terrible earnestness a lesson that will be of incalculable benefit to hundreds of other school children.

The death of the child is to be the price of increased vigilance by the teachers of scores of Atlanta schools in watching over their young charges, and greater care by the pupils.

Many of the teachers of the Atlanta schools have already begun to formulate plans and rules that will minimize the danger to the children in handling colored chalk, and other objects likely to contain poison.

The funeral of the little girl Friday was one of the saddest ever held in East Atlanta. A company of Mary's little friends members of her school and Sunday school classes, gathered at the East Side Baptist Tabernacle to pay a last tribute of love.

They brought great bunches of wild flowers, plucked with their own hands in the nearby woods where Mary had romped with them, and placed them on her coffin. As the funeral procession entered the church, the little boys and girls lined up on either side of the door, and the body of the little girl was carried slowly between the lines of those she loved and who loved her.

STATE BOARD AID FOR MARRIAGE BILL ASKED

One Member of Health Department Already Has Indorsed Hixon Measure.

Efforts to obtain from the State Board of Health an endorsement of the "pure marriage" bill, introduced into the Senate by Senator J. T. Hixon, will be made by friends of the measure, according to an announcement made by Senator Hixon Saturday morning. One physician employed in the offices of the Board of Health already has sought out Senator Hixon and assured him he would lend his personal support to the measure.

Senator Hixon said the work of bringing the attention of the Board of Health to the bill probably would be under the direction of Dr. B. L. Emory, of Villa Rica, Ga., author of the bill, and at whose request it was introduced by Senator Hixon.

Dr. Emory, it is said, personally will present the bill to the Board of Health and ask co-operation in obtaining its passage. The bill was endorsed by the Carroll County Medical Society before it was brought to Atlanta. Senator Hixon is using this written endorsement of the measure as a lever to swing votes for it.

Expects Bill to Get Attention.

Senator Hixon is confident his bill will be taken seriously and that it will receive the careful consideration of the Senate. It raises the marriage age limit in Georgia from 14 to 16 in the case of the woman, and forbids any man marrying who is less than 18 years of age.

By far the most important features of the bill, in the opinion of Senator Hixon and its friends, are the provisions prohibiting the granting of marriage licenses to persons who are afflicted with tuberculosis or other chronic and contagious diseases, and to persons who are habitual drunkards or addicted to the drug habit.

Will Help Prevent Disease.

Senator Hixon is anxious to see his marriage bill become a law. He declares the passage of such a bill will do more to stamp out disease than all other kinds of legislation that might be passed.

"Several of the most progressive States in the Union," Senator Hixon declared, "have laws similar to this bill, and they have worked wonderfully well.

"I expect to live to see the time when such a law will be on the statute books of every State, and when that time comes there will be fewer lunatics and less contagious and hereditary diseases than now."

GEORGIANS GO TO GETTYSBURG REUNION

First Platoon Off Under General A. J. West---Six Hundred to Attend From State.

Headed by General A. J. West, commissioner from Georgia, the First Battalion of Confederate Veterans from Atlanta and the State-at-large left at 11 o'clock Saturday morning for Gettysburg and the national reunion of the blue and the gray on July 1, 2 and 3, fifty years after the battle.

Atlanta, with 75 Confederates and the State of Georgia, with 600, will be well represented in comparison with other States. Through the efforts of General West, the State has obtained a favorite camping ground fronting Confederate Avenue, the main thoroughfare of the reunion city. Situations at this vantage point were sought by every camp.

The first preliminary reunion between the Union and Confederate veterans took place in Atlanta Saturday morning, when the ticket sale started at the Southern Railway office. The participants were a Mr. Black, a Union veteran, and F. L. Hudgins, commander of Camp C. A. Evans, Confederate veterans of Decatur. Seeing Mr. Hudgins and other wearers of the gray buying tickets to Gettysburg, Mr. Black "butted in" and said "Good morning, boys. My name is Black. I was on the other side, but it's all over now and I'm with you."

Prominent Veterans Go.

Among the prominent Atlanta veterans who left on the morning train were General A. J. West, Judge George Hillyer, railroad commissioner; Colonel John W. Lindsey, prison commissioner; Captain J. W. English, president of the Fourth National Bank; J. C. Huff and A. A. Nolan.

Commander F. L. Hudgins and Vice Commanders I. N. Nash and W. H. Mitchell made up the Decatur delegation.

Other Georgia veterans who left from Atlanta on the first train were W. F. Gay, of Newborn, a member of Jefferson Lamar Camp No. 305, of Covington; J. N. Mitchell, Canton; Judge J. F. C. Williams, ordinary of Harris County; Sam Moore, A. F. Truett and J. T. Forester, Hamilton.

Many Carry Wounds.

Many veterans will take to the reunion wounds or other souvenirs connected with the battle or other Civil War events. General West will take the greatest object of interest to be seen at the reunion. It is a Confederate half-dollar, one of four which were coined before the dies were broken. It is valued at $10,000 and was presented to General West by Attorney David H. Keefer.

F. L. Hudgins and I. N. Nash, of Decatur, both were wounded at Gettysburg. Nash lost his left arm and Hudgins was shot through the body. Hudgins took along a frying pan he captured at the Battle of the Wilderness May 6, 1864, when it was filled with salt pork placed there by some combatant who didn't have time to remain and eat.

W. H. Mitchell, the other Decatur veteran, did not participate in the battle of Gettysburg. He tried three times to get here, but on each occasion was wounded in a preliminary battle on the other side of the Potomac. He confessed this morning he didn't know whether he was lucky or unlucky.

Gettysburg Begins to Fill With Veterans.

It is expected to reach its height by to-morrow night. Gallantly the little borough of 4,000 has tackled the proposition of caring for its guests, but already it is beginning to feel the stress.

Army officers, watching the multitude grow, to-day sized up the camp and the preparations, practically completed, and said it was the biggest thing of its kind they had ever seen.

To add to the difficulties and dangers of a situation hazardous under any circumstances, the weather is almost unbearable. With a sun blazing savagely the humidity is so high that every movement is productive of exhaustion. There have been several cases of heat exhaustion.

Considerable indignation has been manifested by army officers and by Lieutenant Colonel Lewis E. Beitler, secretary of the Pennsylvania commission, over the widely published reports that no flags but the Stars and Stripes would be permitted in the camp. No such order ever was issued either by the War Department or the commission. As a matter of fact, several houses in the town are flying the Stars and Bars.

Five troops of State police have been mobilized here and this morning the policing of the town was turned over to them.

THOUSAND SLAIN BY MEXICAN REBELS

MEXICO CITY, June 28.—One thousand soldiers and civilians were slaughtered by rebels when the city of Durango, capital of the State of the same name, fell into the insurgents' hands, according to word received here to-day from that city. Many of the victims were members of prominent families.

Men and women were tortured to death when they did not produce wealth at the bidding of the rebels.

Fighting between federals and insurgents is going on at Uruapam in the State of Michocan. Cuquio, in the State of Jalisco, was taken by rebels yesterday and the garrison put to the sword.

Rebels Advance on Juarez; Fight Near.

EL PASO, TEXAS, June 28.—Pancho Villa, Mexican rebel leader, who has announced his intention of taking Juarez and executing General Salazar, commander of the garrison, in the bull ring, established outposts within three miles of the town.

Ortega, who has 500 men, may cooperate with Villa. If Juarez falls, it will remove the most important Mexican port of entry on the United States border from Huerta and may result in the downfall of the Huerta government.

Nat Goodwin Must Not Eat at Own Cafe

LOS ANGELES, June 28.—Others may dine at the Cafe Goodwin, but not Nat Goodwin, with carte blanche all the way down the menu from caviar to camembert, may not. The genial host found himself in a new role when he sat down in his own cafe. Dining became so inexpensive that it seemed unreasonable not to dine often and well.

The result was that Mr. Goodwin, a few days ago, found himself ill and called a doctor. The doctor told him that he had been too good a patron of the Cafe Goodwin and must not think it his duty to test the entire menu.

Says He Produces Fuel From Water

PHILADELPHIA, June 28.—Through the invention of a device in which water is used as fuel, it is claimed that Henry Clay Wade, a Philadelphia inventor, may revolutionize the production of artificial heat.

The Wade process decomposes water into the gases hydrogen and oxygen, which are combined with carbon and burned so that the heat produced by the combustion of the oil is produced three-fold.

Dr. Percy Starnes To Leave Atlanta

Dr. Percy J. Starnes, who for three years has been city organist in Atlanta, resigned Saturday, effective August 1. Dr. Starnes explained that the Atlanta Music Festival Association will be without funds after that date and he did not care to ask for public subscriptions.

15,000 Coal Miners Ordered to Strike

CHARLESTON, W. VA., June 28.—The three days' conference between the New River coal operators and officials of the United Mine Workers of America with Governor Hatfield as mediator was without avail and today the miners received notice to strike.

Unless some agreement is made by Monday 15,000 miners will quit work.

Nearly everybody in Atlanta reads The Sunday American. YOUR advertisement in the next issue will sell goods.

DO YOUR BEST, IS PONY MAN'S ADVICE

CONTEST GINGER.

Your friends are watching you and the record you are making. You can not afford to lose.

Don't show a "yellow streak." Remember, the others are not landing every subscription they ask for, either.

Remember, the other fellow is working, too.

Do your best, and you are bound to do well.

All contestants in the race for The Georgian and American ponies are keyed up to the highest pitch just now, for the day when the bonus offers will expire is near at hand.

Boys and girls are straining every nerve to get promises fulfilled before July 5, for subscriptions brought in now count more than they will at any future time during the contest.

"Many of the boys and girls waste a lot of good time trying to find out what their rivals are doing," says the contest manager. "This is foolish. It is very likely that accurate information can not be had, for contestants are bragging, just to discourage the others in the race.

"The contestant who goes after votes with all his might will have no time to work about rivals, and will not need to worry about the others, either.

"The thing for the boys and girls to do is to set their minds on winning a pony outfit, and let nothing else distract their attention. No one ever won a fight who went into it half-heartedly."

The standings will be published to-morrow, and there will be gains shown worthy of careful notice.

Builds 2-Acre $15,000 Home for Her Cats

GREENWICH, CONN., June 28.—Mrs. Clifford B. Harmon, daughter of Commodore E. C. Benedict, lifted the first spadeful of ground to-day in the construction of what is to be the most complete home for cats in this country.

The "cattery" is to cover more than two acres of ground. There are to be eight rooms, hot and cold water, electric lights, gas for cooking, two baths, a kittens' nursery, steam heat. In addition there is to be a seven-room cottage for Mrs. F. Y. Mathis, who has been breeding famous cats for about ten years.

PRINCESS LOUISE WRITES NEW BOOK

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MILAN, ITALY, June 28.—Ex-Crown Princess Louise of Saxony, who has resumed the title of Countess of Montignoso, is about to publish another volume of autobiography.

"The book is still my own story," she said to an interviewer, "but it is different from the last. It is a revelation of my own soul in the guise of fiction. I describe Italy's beauties athwart my own personal impressions; very strange ones they are—I'm such a funny person. And, do you know I don't want to know myself well?

"People accuse me of being shifty in my loves. That's true; but I should have been otherwise had I encountered a strong man of iron will who knew how to dominate me. Alas! I have come across only vulgar bourgeois weaklings. That's the why and wherefore of my feverish quest after the happiness to which I, too, have a right.

"If those who sought my friendship had put it out of their minds that I was a Princess of Saxony and had treated me simply as a woman, then, perhaps, I, too, should have enjoyed my good share in life and love. As things are, I travel and travel in a frenzy to distract myself and my greatest horror in life is lest I should become plebeian."

Rate on 50 Chinese Skeletons a Puzzler

NEW ORLEANS, June 28.—What rates to charge for shipping 50 Chinese skeletons from this city to San Francisco is bothering freight agents of this city. The skeletons are "knocked down" and boxed, ready for trans-shipment and burial, "under the eyes of Confucius."

The railroad declares bodies must have been buried at least 20 years before they can be classed as "merchandise." Only a few of the Chinese now under discussion have been interred that length of time.

'Don't Give Up the Ship' Flag Is Prize

TOLEDO, OHIO, June 28.—The battle of Lake Erie of1913 is practically being refought as a part of the centennial celebration here, as the result of the contest for possession of Commodore Perry's "Don't give up the ship" battle flag, which is wanted for the rebuilt flagship Niagara.

Director George Stevens, of the Museum of Art, to-day remained steadfast in his determination not to relinquish to Ensign George M. Lowry the relic, loaned by Secretary Daniels for three months.

Crazy From Heat, Mother Kills Child

Crazed by the heat, Amanda Dieu, a negro woman, strangled her child to death on the farm of Harry L. Schlesinger, two miles north of Buckhead, Saturday morning. The woman is the wife of Turner Dieu, long a tenant of the Schlesinger farm. For some time she had been complaining of the intense heat.

Becoming irritated at something her child had done, she choked it to death before anyone could interfere. She was arrested.

WILSON APPROVES U. P. DISSOLUTION

Plan for Dissolving Great Merger Probably Will Be Made Public Monday.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—A complete agreement on the Union Pacific dissolution plan has been approved by President Wilson. G. P. Todd, of the Department of Justice, will leave for St. Paul to-night to present the plan to the Federal Court.

Details of the dissolution probably will be made public Monday.

Attorney General McReynolds did not deny that it contains a proposition whereby the $126,000,000 of Southern Pacific stock held by the Union Pacific will be disposed of—$88,000,00 0to the Pennsylvania Railway for its holdings in the Baltimore and Ohio Railway and $88,000,000 to be disposed of by a trustee by private sale.

It is understood that the action of the Department of Justice in asking the court to leave a loophole for the filing of possible objection in the details of the Union Pacific plan was merely to leave the way open for the Government in the future to offer suggestions, if occasion seems to warrant.

In other words, it is decided that there shall not be snap judgment in final enforcement of the plan.

Plans Airship Squad In All Russian Corps

ST. PETERSBURG, June 28.—Every Russian army corps is to have a flying squad if the plan of the Minister of War is carried out, it was announced in the Duma.

Great progress is being made in the aerial armament, it was said, and the Government recently doubled the number of dirigibles and had acquired craft known as "aerial dreadnoughts."

The captives probably will be executed.

Flames Sweep Over Town; Relief Rushed

A., B. & A. Strikes Securities Snag

Receivers of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad have been unable to make arrangements to retire the $4,700,000 of 5 per cent receivers' certificates which fall due Tuesday, July 1.

It is believed the certificates will be made to bear 6 per cent from maturity until paid, which may be for some time, in view of the condition of the money market.

H. M. Atkinson and E. T. Lamb left Atlanta early in the week for New York, where they now are endeavoring to arrange for refunding the securities, which in effect are notes made one year ago.

In the absence of these men, representing respectively majority and minority bondholders, no one in the A., B. and A. offices here was able to say just what progress has been made.

The notes in question were sold to retire an issue of $3,250,000 receivers' obligations and equipment trusts, and to provide for certain improvements.

The road went into the hands of a receiver January 2, 1909.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"DEAR, could you make room for this in your trunk?" asked Helen anxiously.

"Um, what is it?" Warren did not look up from the great roll of collars he was fitting in the tray.

"My heavy coat—I'll need it for the steamer."

"Should say I couldn't. Put it in the roll with the rugs."

"But we've got to put both our train coats and the steamer pillow in that—it won't hold any more."

"Then you'll just have to carry it. "See here," opening a small leather case of folding coat hangers, "how many of these things will we need?"

"Take them all, dear, I'll want some. Where is that other case of six, Aunt Emma gave you for Christmas? Oh, here they are."

"Then put them in your own trunk. I'm not going to fill up mine with a lot of truck for you. Look at all those papers," pointing to some packages he had brought from the office.

"Oh, do you have to take all those?"

"That's not all—there's more in that suit case. And they're a darn sight more important than your frillikins."

Helen, who had always counted on putting certain things in Warren's trunk, went back to her room and gazed helplessly at her small and already overcrowded steamer trunk. How could she get everything in?

"Oh, you'll have to throw out everything like that; we can't leave it to draw mice. Now, you're sure you've got everything out of the refrigerator? The butter and the rest of that jar of bacon you can give to the houseman. And you'd better sprinkle some borax around the sink. Wait, I'll come show you."

A Farewell Call.

While Maggie was to stay to clean and close up the apartment, yet Helen wanted to see that nothing was left to draw insects.

She was still in the kitchen, when the 'phone rang and Warren called impatiently:

"Helen! Somebody wants you."

"Oh, WHY will people call us up at the last moment?" she protested resentfully, for every second now was precious.

"Hello! I just wanted to say good-bye," shrilled Mrs. Thurston's voice, "and wish you all kinds of a pleasant trip."

"That's very kind of you," lied Helen politely.

"Your boat's sailing at 3, isn't it? I'd so like to come down to the dock, but I promised Mrs. Walker to go with her to a bridge tea. I disappointed her last week, so I'll just have to go. Well, you certainly have a fine day to start. I was afraid this morning it would rain, but it's cleared off beautifully."

"Yes, it has," murmured Helen stupidly, wild to get back to her packing, but not wanting to be abrupt.

"Oh, while I think of it, I want to give you the address of that place in the Rue de Rivoli, the one I told you about where I got those lovely hand-embroidered nightgowns. Have you a pencil there?"

Helen got a pencil, took down the address and was just about to say good-by when Mrs. Thurston held her with a——

"And I'm going to ask you to get me two more—size 36. You saw the ones I have, I paid fifteen francs for most of them, but use your own judgment—only I shouldn't like to pay over twenty. I'm sure you won't mind getting these for me, will you? And oh, don't you want the address of that handkerchief place, where they embroider the three initials for only a few centimes extra? If you'll hold the phone a minute—I've got the address on one of the boxes they came in."

Helen could hardly restrain her impatience, but she was forced to wait for the address.

Very Annoying.

"If you're getting some for yourself," purred Mrs. Thurston, "and if it isn't TOO much trouble, I SHOULD like another dozen of those tiny evening handkerchiefs—you know the initials—M. C. T."

When Helen finally succeeded in breaking away she turned from the phone with a furious—

"The idea of her calling me up this late to send for things!"

"Well, I'd have cut her off quick enough," growled Warren. "She wouldn't have kept me standing there. Here," shoving toward her some steamship labels he had just filled out with their name and number of their stateroom, "better get these on now. Can't leave everything till the last minute."

Helen took the oval blue and white "North German Lloyd" labels and pasted them on her trunk and suit case with supreme satisfaction. She had always envied people with trunks covered with steamship and foreign hotel labels—it gave their baggage such a traveled, "cosmopolitan" air.

The one label that was left over she put on a large trunk that she had had brought up to get out some things for the trip. It had never been abroad, but she MIGHT have taken it, so she had no scruples in decorating it with a label.

Unfortunately just at that moment Warren appeared.

"These yours?" throwing down a couple of her linen collars that had been sent to the laundry with his. Then noticing the label as she jumped up almost guiltily from her knees before the big trunk, "What's that mean? You're not going to take that trunk?"

"No, dear," flushing in confused anticipation of his ridicule.

"Well why in thunder did you stick on that label?" Then as it dawned on him. "By George, I've heard of fool women who bought foreign labels and plastered up their trunks, but I thought you had some sense."

This incident did not contribute to Helen's speed in packing, for with burning cheeks, she scraped off with the scissors the offending label.

Some Hustling.

And again Helen had to stop her packing to instruct the iceman to leave no more ice until they notified him of their return. Then came the superintendent, whom she had sent for to see about turning off the gas. The time was going fast—and her trunk was not nearly ready.

"Oh, m'am, see what I found!" Maggie held up triumphantly a tea spoon they had looked for yesterday when they had counted the silver. Now more time was taken in unlocking the silver and putting away the spoon.

"What about the table fern, m'am. Didn't you say you were going to give that to Mrs. Hubbard?"

"You can do that after we're gone. Now don't come to me with everything Maggie. Look at the time—I must finish packing!"

"Trunk ready to strap?" called out Warren.

"Not quite, dear," nervously. "In just a few moments."

"Well now don't fool around and not be ready. I've ordered the cab for twelve sharp."

When Helen was much hurried she was apt to become confused, and now she fluttered about trying to do everything at once. There were more interruptions, and twice she had to stop to find something for Warren.

"All right, dear, it's all ready," she answered at last to his repeated call of "Trunk ready?"

"Sure this is the right key?" he demanded. "No, it's the lock! Rusty as the devil. Why in blazes didn't you try it? Get some oil!"

Helen flew for the oil, and for another precious ten minutes Warren fumed over the lock.

"Oh, wait, dear, have you got it locked?" just as he finally succeeded in turning the key. "Oh, I'm so sorry, but I left my bath robe."

Once Again.

Warren's explosives were loud and emphatic as he unlocked the trunk.

"Now is that ALL?" as Helen hastily crushed in the robe. "By Gad, I've never locked a trunk for you yet that I didn't have to open half a dozen times before we started."

But it was hardly a moment later when Maggie brought in a blue serge skirt Helen had asked her to brush. "You're not forgetting this, m'am?"

Helen tried desperately to get it in her suitcase, but there was no room. The trunk would have to be opened again. While she was struggling with the stiff, heavy strap, trying to unbuckle it, Warren passed the door.

"What in the devil are you doing now?"

"Never mind, I—I can open it," flushed and breathless with her exertions. "I just forgot to put in this skirt."

Warren pushed her roughly aside and again opened the trunk, his language more fervid than before.

"Now is THAT ALL?" he roared again as he slammed down the lid.

Helen thought it was. But at almost the last moment, she discovered a pair of shoes she had left out to be polished. The suitcase was bulging full, and she dared not let Warren see her trying to open the trunk again. She would have to carry them in a bundle. There was no other way.

It was not until they were finally whirling to the dock in a cab, with the trunks on top and the hand baggage on the seat before them, that Warren noticed the package Helen was carrying.

"What's that? Put it in your suit case."

"There isn't room. It's nothing dear. I'd just as soon carry it."

But Warren felt through the paper that it was a pair of shoes.

"So you forgot those, did you? Might have known you'd want to get in that trunk again. Gad, that's like you. Starting off for Europe with a pair of shoes in your hand. Next time I go—I go alone!"

What He Meant.

A man once received as a present from a sea captain a fine specimen of a bird which sailors call the "laughing jackass." As he was carrying it home he met a brawny Irish navvy, who stopped and said to him:

"Phwat kind of burrd is that, sorr?"

"That's a laughing jackass," explained the owner, genially.

The Irishman, thinking he was being made fun of, was equal to the occasion, and responded with a twinkle of the eye:

"It's not yourself; it's the burrd I mane, sorr!"

The Mistakes of Jennie .:. By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

Chapter 13.

Jennie was all excited when she saw him and wondered if he would speak to her after her refusing to marry him and her treating him so badly. She did hope he would, and that he would admire her new clothes.

Tom lifted his hat and acted as if there never had been anything the matter between them, and, boy like, did not even notice her new gown, willow plume and things, that Jennie was paying $1.50 a week for on the installment plan.

That day her girl friend at the office said she had it all "cooked up" for a party that night with the boys they were out with before.

One of the boys owned an automobile and they would go out on a "bear" of a time. So that night after work Jennie and her pal met the boys. Jennie was all dressed up and her girl friend's beau didn't seem to have any time for any one except Jennie. This, of course, made the girl jealous, but she held in until after dinner, when they were all a bit "jagged." Then she derided Jennie for trying to take her fellow away from her.

They had a fine row, which made the fellow—who seemed to always pay for their "parties"—very angry. He told the girl he was tired of her anyway, and she had better get some one else to pay her expenses.

Then he proceeded to make violent love to Jennie—and poor Jennie didn't know what to do. The other fellow—the one Jennie was with before—didn't have much to say, and whatever his friend did was all right, being as how his friend held the purse strings.

Coming back in the machine they sat on the back seat and the fellow talked and talked and tried to get Jennie to consent to let him furnish up a flat for her, and she could have anything she wanted. But Jennie was crying, and all she would say was: "NO-NO-NO!" Her girl friend wouldn't speak to her, but had vowed to get even—if it was the last thing in the world she ever did. Jennie begged the fellow to take her home—but he held her all the tighter in his arms, kissing her.

By DOROTHY DIX.

HAVE you ever considered the modern girl and how she differs from the maidens of the past? She's a new species of the feminine sex, and no more like her grandmother, or even her mother, than if she had been wafted down from the planet Mars instead of having just strolled out of the nursery.

We haven't taken much account of her, but you've got to reckon with her in the future, and it's time we sat up and took notice. Consider these little stories as illustrations of the young person and her point of view. The first is on divorce.

The other day I overheard two young girls talking.

Said one: "When a girl marries, she should be very, very careful in choosing her husband, and after she is married she should do the best she can to make a good wife and a happy home, but if she finds out that she has made a mistake, and is miserable, thank Heaven, she doesn't have to stand it. She can always get a divorce."

Said the other girl: "Oh, of course, that's the only thing to do under such circumstances. It won't be my fault if my marriage turns out badly, because I'm going to do everything I can, and bring every particle of intelligence I've got to making it a success, but none of that suffer-and-be-strong business in mine! If my husband isn't what he should be, or treats me badly, or I find I've made an error of judgment, I'm going to correct it just as I would any other mistake.

"I'm not going to stick to it as people used to do in the Dark Ages. Aren't you thankful that you live in these enlightened days, instead of in our grandparents' and our parents' time, when people thought that no matter how miserable you were in your marriage, or how much you hated the person you were married to, you had to endure it?"

An Unusual Remark.

The first girl smiled indulgently. "They were bound in the swaddling clothes of superstition, all right," she said.

I gasped with surprise. These girls belong to old, conservative, rather narrow-minded families, and they themselves are sweet, modest, intelligent, well educated young women, who haven't the faintest idea of being revolutionary, or anything of that sort. What they said simply voiced the viewpoint of the new generation.

They didn't argue about the ethics of divorce at all. They simply accepted divorce as a fact, a modern convenience, something that tended to make life pleasanter, just as they did in elevators in apartment buildings, or electric lights, or running hot and cold water in bath rooms.

If you had made a mistake in marriage and your life was being ruined by it, you corrected it and took a fresh start, just as you would do if you found out that you had engaged in a business that was bankrupting you. They could see no more reason for going on with a marriage that meant daily misery than there would be in going on with an enterprise in which you lost money every day.

You can't argue the divorce question with the modern young girl, because she simply doesn't recognize the ancient view of the matter, that there is anything noble, or pious, or virtuous in living with an individual that brings out all the worst that is in you, or in keeping together a family that is engaged in a perpetual drawn battle at home.

Nor can you argue the suffrage question with young women, because they accept it as a fact that is incontrovertible that they are the equals of the young men they know, and have just as much right to a voice in government. You could find a needle in a haystack easier than a college-bred girl who is an anti.

DOROTHY DIX.

And this is what the modern young girl thinks about woman's sweet dependence. A very rich girl said to me the other day:

"I've got the best and most generous father that any girl ever had. He showers on me everything that money can buy. I've got charge accounts all the way up and down Fifth Avenue, and every month he gives me a big allowance, but I never see a girl standing behind a counter, or sitting behind a typewriter that I don't envy her. I would rather have a dollar and fifty cents that I had earned myself than fifteen hundred dollars that was given me.

"I would give anything on earth to know that I could stand on my own feet instead of being a miserable parasite hanging on somebody else. And every rich girl I know feels the same way. But I've got one comfort, I'll never have to be dependent on a husband. How a woman endures the humiliation of having to ask her husband for every cent she spends I don't understand. It's enough to kill her, and I don't believe women are going to do it much longer. I think in the future that when a girl hasn't got an independent fortune of her own she'll continue after marriage at whatever business she was in before marriage. Financial independence is just as necessary to a woman's self-respect as it is to a man's."

And here's another viewpoint of the 1913 model of girl. If you will recall, the heroes of all old-fashioned novels used to be men who had been sad rakes. They were men with dark pasts, such as Rochester, who fascinated innocent little Jane Eyre, and even as late as a generation or so ago a man lost no prestige in a girl's eyes from having been wild, and having had romantic adventures. Recently an opponent to the bill for requiring all candidates for marriage to produce a health certificate brought up this former attitude of women on this subject in objecting to the passage of the law. He didn't know the modern young girl. I said something of this to one, and she defined the modern girl's position on the question in one phrase:

She Knew.

"We've read Damaged Goods," she said, "and we know what that sort of romance means—insane asylums, surgeons' tables, death."

In former times, when a young girl came to an older woman to confide in her, she asked for advice about some love affair. Nowadays when a girl has a heart-to-heart talk with you she consults you about her life work. The young girls are no longer looking forward to matrimony as the one only desirable career in life. They are thinking of business, of settlement work, of a thousand avocations outside of the home circle. Love is no longer the whole of their existence. It is a thing apart, just as it is of a man. If the right man comes along and asks one, she'll marry, but if he doesn't, she can get along very well without him, thank you.

This is only a cursory view of the young girl of the period. Take a look at her for yourself. At present she is the great human conundrum, and she's the most interesting thing in the world.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

A man remarked that he came from a very large family.

"How many are there of you?" he was asked.

"Well, there were ten of us boys," he said, "and each of us had a sister."

"Good gracious!" exclaimed the other, "then there were twenty of you?"

"No," said the boastful man; "eleven."

Mamma—My dear, what are you doing?

Mamma—But you haven't any little sister!

Little Daughter—No, not yet; but Sally Stuckup has just got one, and I know we always get everything the Stuckups do.

Sheet steel is the latest material utilized in the making of furniture. It is used for sideboards, wardrobes, chiffoniers, writing desks, and it is finished in such perfect imitation of the various woods that the difference can not be detected. The wood finish is applied under a very high temperature, becoming an integral part of the metal and never cracking. This unique furniture has the recommendation of being fireproof, and a lighted match left on a pressed steel sideboard would have no effect whatever on its surface.

"What is the principal difference between modern and ancient times?"

"One of the main points was that the modern earn their living, while the ancients urned their dead."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THARE was a convenshun of misshunarys in town this week & Ma went & toald the ladies of the club that she wud be glad for us to talk at leest one misshunary & keep him at our house so he wuddent have to pay any hotel bill. Pa dident like it a bit, but he dident say much. He kicked a littel, tho.

I can not see why you act so cold about entertaining a noabel man who is going to give up his noabel life, maybe, Ma sed, oaver thare in the Feegee Islands, teaching them awful black men how to be good. Why, sed Ma, I was going to say first that we cud keep two of those noabel men here & now that I see the way you are acting I am glad that I only promised to take one.

Why doesn't he go to a hotel & register, like a noabel drummer or a noabel transhunt of any kind? sed Pa. I doant see anything very noabel about horning into a household & putting everybody out for a week, Pa sed. It is bad enuff to entertain yure relatives all the time, sed Pa, without having any guy with a long face and a short purse setting around and talking about spreading the gospel. Thay spread more hot air than thay spread gospel, sed Pa, them misshunarys, & beesides they eet moar than a trained nurse, wich is sum eeting.

Very Sad.

But this man is a charming gentleman, sed Ma. I am sure that you will like him. Jest then the man calm.

Husband, sed Ma, this is Mister Weeks of Jacksonville. He is going abroad soon to teech the beenited natives ah about religun.

Mr. Weeks was vary slim, vary sad looking. Pa sighed kind of hard, but he asked Mister Weeks to maik hisself at hoam & then Ma sed Now I am going to leeve you two men & littel Bobbie to have a visit while I run oaver to Missus Jones's & get that recipe for stewed steak & milkweed greens, Ma sed.

As soon as Pa was sure Ma was out of the house he asked Mister Weeks of Jacksonville to cum into the library & look at his books. I went in, too.

I have sumthing vary fine here, sed Pa, in this long necked decanter. It is the very finest burbon, Pa sed, & it is so old that it has rumatism. Will you try a snifter?

A Surprise.

I doant mind if I do, sed Mister Weeks. Then Pa poured him a nice drink & took one hisself. He lookeo kind of surprised at Mister Weeks, but I cud see that he was looking at his friend moar friendly.

I am sorry to intrude on you, sir, said Mister Weeks, & as it is I wud have stayed at a hotel, only I got roped into a stud gaim last nite & got my bank roll so nicked that it is almost nit. That is sum corn, he sed. If we was whare we cud, he sed, I wud cum back, but as I am in yure hoam I will try another on you, old sport. I will pour it, it is neerer to me. Say when.

I see you like it, sed Pa. I shud say I do like it, sed Mister Weeks. I have been in a jay town for three weeks, hoalding a kind of reevival, & the only stuff I cud git thare was so feerce that it took all my moral currage to drink it at all. Well, how do you like the way Billy Smith is sailing along now? I hope the Crackers win the pennant. I have a swell bet down that they will cop, he sed.

I nevver seen a man that looked so surprised as Pa. Say, he sed to Mister Weeks of Jacksonville, you are a regular guy. How did you cum to be a misshunary.

Pretty Soft.

Well, sed Mister Weeks, it is a pritty soft graft. A man gets a chance to travel all oaver & see furrin countrys, & as far as curing any beenited natives, all I evver ask them to do is to show me around. I used to be a ball player, he sed, but I got hit on the bean with one of Dent's fast ones, and that chased me out of the gaim. This gaim isent so dangerous.

Aint you afrade you will get et up by a cannibal? I sed to Mister Weeks.

No, sed Mister Weeks. I teach them all to be hard drinkers & thay lose thare deesire to eat.

Jest then Ma caim hoam.

You must be awfully tired, Ma sed to the misshunary.

Yes, I think I will retire & finnish my new lecture for those who grope in the darkness, sed Mister Weeks of Jacksonville. Then he groped to bed.

Turned the Tables.

At Scotch weddings some years ago it used to be the custom to batter the hat of the bridegroom as he was leaving the house in which the ceremony took place. On one of those occasions the friends of a newly-married couple (relatives of the bridegroom) determined to carry out the observance of this custom to the letter.

The bridegroom heard them discussing their plans, and dispatched a messenger to the carriage (which stood waiting) with his hat some time previous to his departure. Then, donning the hat of the male relative who had plotted against him, he prepared to go out to the carriage.

No sooner had he got to the door than his hat was furiously assaulted and almost destroyed. He walked out of the house amid the laughter of the bystanders and entered the vehicle; then, taking the battered hat from his head he threw it into the hands of its proper owner, exclaiming: "Hey, Mr. Dougall, there's your hat," and donned his own amid the cheers of all present.

Mr. Dougall was the unhappiest-looking man in Scotland for some time after that.

: The Bibles of Presidents :

Some Interesting Facts Concerning Them.

ONE of the oldest, if not the very oldest, Bibles connected with the American Government is the book upon which, since 1800, every Chief Justice and every member of the Supreme Court has taken the oath of allegiance when accepting his appointment to Uncle Sam's highest tribunal. More than that, every attorney who has practiced before the Supreme Court since that date—1800—has pledged his allegiance over the little volume, with one exception—Daniel Webster. It is told even yet of the Supreme Court of that day that Mr. Webster's fame as an orator had so preceded him that on that occasion, when he came to argue his first case before the Court, the clerk, Mr. Caldwell, in his eagerness to hear the great speaker, forgot to administer the oath.

Some interesting facts have also been revealed regarding the Bibles used by American Presidents. When Grover Cleveland came to the Capitol for his first inauguration he brought with him a little red Bible his mother had given him when he was a boy, and which he had always cherished as a keepsake. On that Bible he took the oath of office. A few days before Mr. McKinley's inauguration a number of African Methodist bishops came into Mr. McKinley's office one morning with a tremendous package, which proved to be a large family Bible in a big plush box, and they wished Mr. McKinley to use it. Their request was granted, and the big Bible was one of the show objects in the Red Parlor of the White House for a long time afterwards.

A $50,000 Bible.

When Mr. Roosevelt was inducted into office as Governor of New York some one presented him with the Bible which he used on that occasion. His name, which was written on the fly-leaf, was misspelled, but he used the same Bible at his second inauguration, and it has been one of Mr. Roosevelt's most treasured mementos ever since.

These volumes, however, are to Americans of insignificant value when compared with the copy of the Bible, bound in red leather with silver clasps, on which Washington took the oath as first President of the Republic on the balcony of the old Federal Hall in New York. It was borrowed for the occasion, and the descendants of those who lent it preserve it as a most sacred relic.

Americans, inspired perhaps by the example of the late Pierpont Morgan, who included many historic Bibles among his art treasures, have of late years exhibited a great passion for Bible collecting. Bibles belonging to Queen Anne, George III and Richard, Duke of Gloucester, are to be found in the United States.

It was H. E. Huntington, the railway magnate of America, who a couple of years ago paid $50,000 for a Gutenberg Bible which was once in the Ashburnham Library. America, however, has not succeeded in securing a literary treasure to be found among the finest collection of English Bibles in the world, at the Bristol Baptist College. This college possesses the only perfect copy in existence of Tyndale's first New Testament, printed at Worms in 1525. The then Bishop of London bought up and burned this first edition, and thus provided Tyndale money for an improved and larger one. The only other fragment of the destroyed edition is now in the British Museum, but it stops short at the 22d chapter of St. Matthew. The trustees of the college have often been tempted to dispose of this unique volume, but hitherto they have been proof against temptation, though no less than $50,000 has been offered for it.

Another valuable Bible in the collection is a copy of Coverdale's Bible, published in 1535. Lincoln Cathedral possesses the only other perfect copy in existence, although six other more or less complete copies are known to exist.

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

Ina Claire Talks on the Psychology of Clothes

Ina Claire's refreshing beauty.

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

THE dainty little "Quaker Girl," Ina Claire, is entertaining her admirers down at Brighton Beach, where the cool breezes and her own refreshing personality unite to make us all forget how earnestly the sun of summer can pour down molten glory on the city cobblestones at noon to-day.

We sat at a cozy tea table and got acquainted over an iced tea and a soda lemonade, plus chicken sandwiches. "This is my luncheon," said Miss Ina—and, by the way, you pronounce it as if it were Eena—"I don't let all my meals total up to more than one meal—of course you will laugh and say that I can afford to eat all I want. But I can't. You have to meet fat more than half way if you want to ward it off, and make sure that it never starts coming. I never eat candy—it does not do one the least bit of good, and I'd be so grateful if I might get all the sweetness I want from the perfume of all the flowers I want. Flowers have such a wonderful effect on me—on everyone, I think—their perfume and beauty has to make you a little bit lovelier. Don't you think so? Perhaps you will even say in our interview that I wish all the kind people who want to send me gifts would make those gifts of flowers."

"Evidently you are a believer in the importance of surroundings," I suggested.

"Oh, yes," said Miss Claire eagerly, "for my ideal of beauty is sweetness—refinement. You see it in the flowerlike English type."

By the way the unconscious girl who sat across the tea table from me is a perfect exponent of the flowerlike English type.

Likes Clothes.

"I believe in the psychology of clothes, too. I hate things that are just la mode. I happen to like little picture dresses—soft, frilly, cool-looking, girlish things. They happen to suit me, too—so I wear them. But as I grow older and develop and mature I shall not wear these little frocks after I have outworn their type. Why, I want to grow in my work and develop power, and just the same way I want to grow beyond my 19 years in my appearance, too. Don't you think you have to dress your age as well as your type?"

I agreed; for I think that even as clothes must express the wearer, so they limit their wearer in her power of expression. A woman struggling along in a peg-top skirt that makes her walk a peg, too, can not look like the heroine of the poet's fancy:

"Even the light harebell raised its head
Elastic from her airy tread."

As Miss Claire said, "A trained gown expresses impressive dignity at once. Oh, how I should love to wear them, but my mother says that youth should express youth—and I know she is very wise. Youth must work and study and try to grow up gracefully in art and works and looks, but it must not be impatient and try to go faster than itself," added my pretty philosopher sagely.

"And don't you think that moods are very important, too?" I asked. "Flowers in your pathway and pretty clothes make beauty—but does it not come from within?"

Not Fair.

"Indeed it does," answered Miss Claire. "Unpleasant moods take the light and life from the eyes and all the face. It is not fair to other people to indulge in moods—and if you must have them, why just go off by yourself if you can, for your face will show their imprint. Drooping your upper lip in the middle, a la Eddie Foy, is fine for the blues—it curls your mouth up at the corners mechanically—and it makes your spirit laugh at the way you know you look.

"I think if you are young you need plenty of sleep, and simple food to get you into simple food-habits, and flowers and sunshine to help you grow, and work to keep you interested in life. I believe in work for women," went on Miss Claire slowly, "not only because life is happier when you are busy, but because, unless you are helping to create things, you become a critic. And just a critical attitude toward life is likely to become a bitter, droop-mouthed attitude. If you are a worker, and know how much struggle and effort goes into creating each tiny bit of life, you are happier and kinder, and I'm sure you look sweeter, too."

Well, little sister workers, is not that a splendid message for us? To create a bit o' life—and not to berate life—that is what Ina Claire told me.

EXPERIENCE OF MOTHERHOOD

Advice to Expectant Mothers

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The inexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unimpaired condition and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ASK HIM TO CALL AGAIN.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 21 and am in love with a man two years my senior. He called on me a few times. One night I had an engagement and he disappointed me, and I heard he would like to write, but he is very bashful, so would it be proper for me to write to him?

LONELY.

Write a friendly note asking him to call, but do not make it too cordial, and do not be insistent if he refuses. Having made these overtures, let the rest come from him.

IT IS NOT WISE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Is it proper for girls between the ages of 15 and 16 to play kissing games, such as "postoffice," "spin the bottle," etc., with boys between the ages of 17 and 18 at a social gathering? GLADYS.

Don't do it, my dear. It is a silliness that sometimes results in continued and unpardonable familiarity when there are no kissing games as an excuse. Boys think all the more of girls who refuse to give such marks of their favor.

DON'T SEND IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

While at a ball I was introduced to a man who seemed interested in me. His father is in the same place of business as mine. Now, I would like to know if it would be proper for me to send a note through his father, as I do not know his name and address, because he has a stepfather. I would like to have him call to see me, but I do not want his folks to think I am running after him. ANXIOUS.

You do not want his family to think you are running after him, yet such a letter would give them that impression. A better plan would be to wait till he shows greater interest in you.

Next Witness, Please!

"Witness, will you please answer my questions a little more plainly?" queried the lawyer, who was cross-examining an elderly German as to the position of the door, windows, etc., in the house where a crime had been committed.

"I will try—I will try," nervously answered the old man.

"Will you describe to the Court just how the stairs run in that house?" went on the lawyer.

For a few minutes the German looked puzzled, and bit his nails nervously.

"How ze stairs run?" he interrogated a little dazedly.

"Come, come, my good man! How the stairs run, if you please!" said the lawyer, in an exasperated tone.

"Vell," ventured the witness phlegmatically, "ven I am oopstairs zay run down, and ven I am downstairs zay run oop!"

The Triple Tie

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

In that game the Philadelphia nine was composed of nine players with but a single thought, nine bats that thumped as one. They took advantage of every opening and with Chief Bender in the box played with a dash and confidence that filled their supporters with glee and when the cohorts went back to Philadelphia that night it was the hope that the White Sox had gotten rid of all their bad playing and that on the morrow, with Big Ed Walsh in the box, they would brace up and take the Red Sox into camp, thereby making things all even again, with the triple tie no further decided than it was at the start.

Emblems Laid Aside.

No white silk-stockinged banners were flaunted on Broadway that night. The emblems were laid aside for the evening, while the owners thereof sought rathskellers and similar places for the purpose of drowing their sorrows in the flowing bowl. But Comiskey, the owner of the Chicago Club, never gave up the baseball ship. The "Old Roman" called the members of his team to his room and after giving them a verbal dressing down for their wretched exhibition, as only Comiskey himself could do, he exhorted them to go after the Red Sox on the following day and wipe up the Polo Grounds with them.

"Now go out there and beat that Boston bunch!" he exclaimed vehemently in conclusion, "and when you do it I'll hand every member of the team $500. And you, Walsh," he added, turning to the big pitcher, "one thousand extra for you for winning the game."

The morrow came—a glorious October day. The Polo Grounds was packed for the battle of the Red Sox and the White Sox. Fresh from their last headache, full of remorse for the past and hope for the future, the thousand from Chicago massed themselves in that section of the stadium nearest first base, while opposite them, behind third base, sat the rabid Boston "fans," waving red banners and yelling for the Red Sox at the slightest provocation. The Chicago crowd, too, had brought their standards with them, somewhat soiled and bedraggled, it is true, but still sufficiently white to create a vivid impression whenever they were used.

Batteries Announced.

The rival teams took their preliminary practice, while the rival rooters barked at each other across the diamond. Finally the bell rang, the umpires took their place, Connolly behind the plate, Dinneen at first base and the other two at the foul lines, and the megaphone boys announced the batteries. Of these heralds there were three—one to inform the spectators behind the plate, one for the left wing and one for the right wing of the grandstand. This was their simultaneous announcement.

"Batteries for to-day's game: For Boston, Bedient and Carrigan; for Chicago, Walsh and Schalk."

Manager Stahl of the Red Sox had again won the toss and his team took the field. Rath, the Chicago second baseman, stepped to the plate and the Chicago cohorts back of first base gave him a rousing cheer. Hard luck came to the Boston team at the very start. Rath swung at the first ball that Bedient pitched to him, ticked it with his bat, deflecting it so that it struck Carrigan on his first finger, breaking it. The catcher was forced to retire. The megaphone boys announced the change:

"Cady now catching in place of Carrigan."

The Game Is On.

The game went on. Rath finally worked Bedient for a free pass to first. Lord bunted a slow one down the third base line, and in running to get it, the Boston pitcher slipped and fell, Lord reaching first safely and Rath getting to second. Chase rapped a hot one through the box, which Wagner knocked down back of second base, but was unable to field. This filled the bases, with no one out. The section back of first base became a waving field of white banners, and the shouts of leather-lunged Chicagoans could be heard for miles. Collins lifted a long fly to Lewis and Rath scored after the catch. Bodie came along with a two-base hit between Speaker and Hooper, scoring Lord and Chase. Mattick went out on a grounder to Engle and Weaver closed the inning with a foul to Cady.

With his side three runs to the good, Big Ed Walsh stalked to the pitcher's box. That lead was all he asked. The Red Sox had found him almost unbeatable for years. That $1,000 bonus promised by Comiskey he considered as good as in his bank at Meriden. He began proceedings by striking out Hooper and Yerkes and forcing Speaker to roll an easy one to the box, which Walsh himself tossed to first for the thir out.

Collins Replaces Bedient.

Both sides were blanked in the second inning. In the third the White Sox went out in order, but the Red Sox two men on—Wagner by means of a pass and Cady on a single to right. Stahl sent Henrickson in to bat for Bedient, but the little fellow hit into a double play and Hooper fouled to Chase. The Red Sox were still without a run to their credit.

Ray Collins came in to pitch in place of Bedient and he retired the White Sox in order. For Boston, Speaker singled after Yerkes had been disposed of, but neither Lewis nor Gardner could bring him home. The fifth inning was also scoreless for both teams, but the Red Sox came near doing some damage to Walsh in their half of the round. Engle was safe on a low throw of his grounder. Wagner laid down a bunt toward first and beat it to the bag, as no one covered first. Cady advanced the runners with a sacrifice. With the chance of scoring two runs, Stahl himself went to bat in place of Collins and succeeded in drawing a pass to first. This filled the bases with only one out. Stahl, who was still limping from an old injury to his foot, called upon Neil Ball to run for him. The Red Six rooters cheered wildly as Hooper came to the plate. He drove a liner to Mattick and Engle, who tried to score from third, was thrown out at the plate. This piece of ill luck so disconcerted the Royal Rooters' band that it forgot to play "Tessie" for the first time on record.

Buck O'Brien went in to pitch for Boston when the sixth inning opened. He was in fine fettle, and the White Sox couldn't get a man on the bases. These three runs looked bigger and bigger as the game went on. In the last of the sixth, after Yerkes had been retired, Speaker beat out a bunt and Lewis was safe on a fumble, but more hard luck followed the Red Sox when Gardner sent a terrific liner directly in Chase's hands and Wagner boosted a high fly to Rath.

The Chicago crowd went wild when the White Sox got three men on bases in the seventh with only one out, but their cheers turned to groans when O'Brien struck out the next man and speared a hard liner for the third out. But in doing so O'Brien hurt his hand so badly that he was forced to retire.

Last Inning Opens.

It looked as though the Red Sox were all shot to pieces when they went to bat in the last half of the seventh, but Cady reached second on a little fly that struck the right field foul line and rolled to the stand. Taking a dying chance Stahl sent Nunamaker in to bat, but no runs resulted and the score was still 3 to 0 against the Red Sox when the eighth opened, with Leonard in the box for Boston.

Leonard passed the first two men that faced him, but some good pitching and some good luck enable him to get by without being scored upon. The top of the batting order was up for the Red Sox and the Boston crowd implored the boys to do something. They tried very hard, but none of them could drive the ball out of the infield.

The ninth and last inning opened. The White Sox were retired in order. They had not been able to do much with the Boston pitchers, except when they scored the three runs in the first inning, but Big Ed Walsh was going great guns and there was not a member of the team but that felt the game was surely won.

Fought back to the last ditch, the Red Sox went to bat for their last stand. Two thousand spectators left their seats and started home when Lewis, the first up for Boston, died on a roller to Rath. Five thousand more made a rush for the gates when Gardner flied to Collins. Not a sound came from the Boston section. The Chicago contingent was singing and waving flags. There was a faint cheer when Engle managed to work Walsh for a free pass to first. There was a louder cheer when Wagner hit safely just out of Weaver's reach. Some of those who were leaving the grounds paused for a moment to see if there would be any excitement. Cady, with two strikes and three balls called on him, was fooled into striking at a very low one, but the ball struck the ground before it got to Schald and jumped by him. Cady sprinted to first and beat Schalk's throw by a hair. The bases were filled!

Leonard Walks to Plate.

Everybody on the grounds except the Chicago crowd broke into a wild cheer. The Red Sox rooters were like raving maniacs. Three on bases and two out in the last half of the ninth inning! Yes, but what chance did the Red Sox have with a pitcher's turn to bat? Whoever heard of a pitcher "breaking up" a game of ball in the ninth inning with three men on bases and two out? And Stahl had used up all his pinch hitters.

The cheers were at their height and Leonard was walking slowly toward the plate, bat in hand, when Wagner rushed up to Stahl, who was on the first base coaching line, and whispered something in his ear. Instantly Stahl yelled to Leonard.

"Leonard!" he cried.

The pitcher stopped and looked at his manager, who motioned him to keep away from the plate. There was a commotion in the dugout where the Red Sox players were gathered. They were crowded together with their backs to the field. Umpire Connolly called sharply to Stahl:

"Batter up; where's your batter?"

The Chicago section jeered and hooted. "Play ball." "Get a move on." "Get busy," and similar remarks were hurled at the Boston manager, who still stood in the coaching box.

"Whose turn is it to bat, yours, Leonard?" demanded Connolly, striding up to the pitcher.

Leonard nodded.

"Get up to the plate, then," roared Connolly. "You can't delay the game this way."

"Stahl won't let me," replied Leonard.

"Where's your next batter, Stahl?" he roared.

Stahl turned toward the Boston bench, where there was still a commotion among the players.

"Who Is Your Batter-"

"Just a minute, Tommy, give me just a minute," he said to the umpire. "I want to win this game."

Manager Callahan of the White Sox came rushing up. So did Captain Harry Lord. The cheers and the hoots died down.

"What's the matter here," exclaimed Callahan. "I claim the game by forfeit unless a man goes to bat for Boston right now."

Connolly pulled out his watch.

"I'll give you just three minutes to get a man up to the plate," he said to Stahl.

The megaphone boys hurried up. The Boston manager glanced at the players' bench. The bunch of Red Sox players separated and one of them jumped out of the dugout and began selecting a bat from the pile on the ground.

"Who is your batter?" demanded Connolly.

Stahl told him.

Gordon Kelly batting in place of Leonard.

To Be Continued Monday, July 7.

TODAY'S installment of the "The Triple Tie" leaves Gordon Kelly in a very dramatic situation. The final chapters of the story will be printed in The Georgian on Monday, July 7. In the meantime readers of "The Triple Tie" will have until noon next Thursday to send in their conception of the conclusion of the story, containing their solution of the mystery in competition for prizes aggregating $250 offered by The Georgian. The problems for the reader to solve are these:

First—How does Kelly escape the mountaineers?

Second—What happens to Mildred Deery, the heroine?

Third—How did Gordon Kelly, who confessed that he never saw a game of ball and never played a game of ball up to the time he asked Manager Smith of the Atlanta club for a position on his team—how did Gordon Kelly learn to bat, catch and run bases in the marvelous manner he displayed at Atlanta that caused the Boston club to give the unheard-of price of $50,000 for Gordon Kelly's release?

Fourth—What happened when Gordon Kelly went to bat in the ninth inning of the final and deciding game?

Fifth—What is the final ending of the story?

No contributions will be considered if they are delivered at The American office later than July 3 at noon or bear a postmark later than that time.

Please remember that this is not a guessing contest. Originality, literary value and analytical clearness will be largely considered in awarding the prizes. Three judges, in no way connected with The Georgian, will award the prizes.

The prizes for the best solutions are as follows:

First Prize	$100.00
Second Prize	50.00
Third Prize	25.00
Fourth Prize	15.00
Twelve Prizes, each	5.00

"Oh, well," Burke exclaimed amiably, "I didn't really think you did, but I wasn't sure, so I had to take a chance. You understand, don't you, Joe?"

"Sure, I understand," Garson replied, with an amiability equal to the Inspector's own.

Burke's manner continued very amicably as he went on speaking.

Garson resisted the lure.

"If you don't want me—" he began suggestively; and he turned toward the door to the outer hall. "Why, if you don't want me, I'll—get along."

"Oh, what's the hurry, Joe?" Burke retorted, with the effect of stopping the other short. He pressed the buzzer as the agreed signal to Cassidy. "Where did you say Mary Turner was last night?"

At the question, all Garson's fears for the woman rushed back of him with appalling force. Of what avail his safety, if she were still in peril?

"I don't know where she was," he exclaimed, doubtfully. He realized his blunder even as the words left his lips, and sought to correct it as best he might. "Why, yes, I do, too," he went on, as if assailed by sudden memory. "I dropped into her place kind of late, and I guess . . . Yes, she was home, of course. She didn't go out of the house all night." His insistence on the point was of itself suspicious, but eagerness to protect her stultified his wits.

Burke Was Silent.

Burke sat grim and silent, offering no comment on the lie.

"Know anything about young Glider?" he demanded. "Happen to know where he is now?" He rose and came around the desk, so that he stood close to Garson, at whom he glowered.

"Not a thing!" was the earnest answer. But the speaker's fear rose swiftly, for the linking of these names was significant—frightfully significant!

The inner door opened, and Mary Turner entered the office. Garson, with difficulty, suppressed the cry of distress that rose to his lips. For a few moments, the silence was unbroken. Then, presently, Burke, by a gesture, directed the girl to advance toward the center of the room. As she obeyed, he himself went a little toward the door, and, when it opened again, and Dick Glider appeared, he interposed to check the young man's rush forward as his gaze fell on his bride, who stood regarding him with sad eyes.

Garson stared mutely at the burly man in uniform who held their destinies in the hollow of a hand. His lips parted as if he were about to speak. Then, he bade defiance to the impulse. He deemed it safer for all that he should say nothing—now! . . . And it is very easy to say a word too many. And that one may be a word never to be unsaid—or gainsaid.

Then, while still that curious, dynamic silence endured, Cassidy came briskly into the office. By some magic duty he had contrived to give his usually hebetudinous features an expression of enthusiasm.

"Say, Chief," the detective said rapidly, "they've squealed."

Burke regarded his aid with an air intolerably triumphant. His voice came smug:

"Squealed, eh?" His glance ran over Garson for a second, then made its inquisition of Mary and of Dick Glider. He did not give a look to Cassidy as he put his question. "Do they tell the same story?" And then, when the detective had answered in the affirmative, he went on speaking in tones ponderous with self-complacency; and now his eyes held sharply, craftily, on the woman.

"I was right then, after all—right, all the time! Good enough!" Of a sudden, his voice loomed someberly. "Mary Turner, I want you for the murder of——"

Garson's rush halted the sentence. He had leaped forward. His face was rigid. He broke in on the Inspector's words with a gesture of fury. His voice came in a hiss:

"That's a d—d lie. I did it!"

CHAPTER XXIV.

Anguish and Bliss.

Joe Garson had shouted his confession without a second of reflection. But the result must have been the same had he taken years of thought. Between him and her as the victim of the law, there could be no hesitation for choice. Indeed, just now, he had no heed to his own fate. The prime necessity was to save her, Mary, from the toils of the law that were closing around her. For himself, in the days to come, there would be a ghastly dread, but there would never be regret over the cost of saving her. Perhaps, some other he might have let suffer in his stead—not her! Even had he been innocent and she guilty of the crime, he would still have saved her from the waters—he would save her until the end, as far as the power in him might lie. It was thus that, with the primitive directness of his reverential love for the girl, he counted no sacrifice too great in her behalf. Joe Garson was not a good man, as the world esteems goodness. On the contrary, he was distinctly an evil one, a menace to society, on which he preyed constantly. But his good qualities, if few, were of the strongest fiber, rooted in the deeps of him. He loathed treachery. His one guiltiness in this respect had been, curiously enough, toward Mary herself, in the scheme of the burglary which she had forbidden. But, in the last analysis, here his deceit had been designed to bring affluence to her. It was his abhorrence of treachery among pals that had driven him to the murder of the stool pigeon in a fit of ungovernable passion. He might have stayed his hand then, but for the gusty rage that swept him on to the crime. None the less, had he spared the man his hatred of the betrayer would have been the same. And the other virtue of Joe Garson was the complement of this—his own loyalty, a loyalty that made him forget self utterly where he loved, not too much to give.

Frozen With Horror.

The suddenness of it all held Mary voiceless for long seconds. She was frozen with horror of the event. When, at last, words come, they were a frantic prayer of protest.

"No, Joe! No! Don't talk—don't talk!"

Burke, immensely gratified, went nimbly to his chair, and thence surveyed the agitated group with grisly pleasure.

"Joe has talked," he said, significantly.

Mary, shaken as she was by the fact of Garson's confession, nevertheless retained her presence of mind sufficiently to resist with all her strength.

"He did it to protect me," she stated, earnestly.

The Inspector disdained such futile argument. As the doorman appeared in answer to the buzzer, he directed that the stenographer be summoned at once.

"We'll have the confession in due form," he remarked, gazing pleasedly on the three before him.

"He's not going to confess," Mary insisted, with spirit.

But Burke was not in the least impressed. He disregarded her completely, and spoke mechanically to Garson the formal warning required by the law.

RIDERS WILL SCRAMBLE FOR COIN TO-NIGHT

WITH the kind permission of Old Man Weather, and with the enthusiastic co-operation of the greatest string of riders ever gathered for a race meeting in Dixie they're off to-night at the Motordrome for the fourth race meet of the local season—and it looks the best in the bunch.

There's more "pep" and enthusiasm out at Riders' Row to-day, than there has been since the meeting began. Up to this meet the riders have known that, mounted as they are now, Jock McNeil and Wilmer Richards were fast enough to take all the races. The rest got a chance only in the specials.

Now McNeil and Richards have been yanked out and put in a class by themselves. These two meet to-night in three match races at three miles each. This will settle the most momentous speed question of the season. But they will have it all to themselves.

It's a Mighty Close Thing.

With the two fastest machines out of it the rest of the riders will scramble viciously for the Sweepstakes and the Motordrome Purse. It could not be any more even. Of the eight riders who will take part there isn't over a fraction of a second to the mile difference in the machines or the riders. They are calculated to race, nose and nose, every inch of the difference, with the advantage slightly favoring Harry Glenn, because he has the longest nose.

Another improvement in the card comes from the fact that there will be four starters in each heat of the two regular races. In past meets two of the heats have had but three starters. And it really takes four to make the racing good. To-night both the preliminary heats and the finals will have four starters.

It will not be surprising to see some remarkable marks made to-night. The track has been proved so safe that every man is willing to let out to the limit. Thus far there hasn't been a man even scratched.

Accidents Looked For.

To the old-timers the absence of accidents is growing monotonous. Not one of them ever heard of three meets on a new track without at least one bad spill. They looked for them Wednesday night, and it really seemed to disappoint them that nothing happened.

It is a marvelous thing, considering the scores of men who have been killed on board tracks and considering the fine possibilities of a spill at 85 miles an hour or better, that none of the riders fear an accident. They try to be moderately careful. But to expect sudden death—well, it never occurs to them and they are the only men at the track who don't think of it when they come to close quarters at high speed.

With a safe track and machines getting better all the time there is no reason why a fast mark or two should not be set to-night.

The races will start to-night at 8:15. Cars will leave Five Points at short intervals. Tickets are on sale at Tumlin's and Shepherd's. All are provided with rain checks. These checks are good if rain interferes before the program is completed.

Ty Cobb Just Hates Those Polo Grounds

DETROIT, June 28.—"Ty" Cobb was glad to get away from the Polo Grounds. The "Georgia Peach" dearly loves his base hits these days, and in "Ty's" opinion the Polo Grounds is no place for a .450 batting average.

"For the life of me, I can not hit on those grounds," said "Ty." "No wonder the Yankees are not hitting the ball. Hitting is more or less guesswork in New York. Sometimes you never do see the ball till it gets past you.

"It's mighty bad for the outfielders, too; unless a fly is hit so high that it shows above the upper tier, it is very hard to see. A low grounder is often lost in the background of summer clothed fans. I like New York pretty well, but I'm glad I don't have to play 77 games a year on the Polo Grounds."

Ex-Giant Ewing to Return to Baseball

BELLEFONTAINE, O., June 28.—Bob Ewing, former major league pitcher, who quit the game last season to devote all of his attention to farming and the raising of hogs on his farm at New Hampshire, O., is debating with himself as to whether he should re-enter the national game.

He has an offer from Manager Bade Myers, of the Canton team, Interstate League. Myers and Ewing began their professional career together as members of Charley Stroeber's Toledo team, Myers being a catcher at the time.

Ewing, now 38, showed the old-time form he possessed during the nine years he played with the Cincinnati team. For a while Ewing was with the Philadelphia and New York National League clubs.

M'GRAW BEATS ALL BUSHES TO GATHER TALENT

By Damon Runyon.

NEW YORK, June 28.—John J. McGraw is beating the business quite far and wide for baseball talent this season, having inaugurated the most systematic and thorough search for incipient athletes that he has ever conducted.

It is said that "Sinister" Dick Kinsella, the Varnish King, of Springfield, Mo., and McGraw's present chief of scouts, is under a commission that will take him over more territory than any other ivory hunter will cover this year.

This statement is borne out by the movements of the sinister one during the past few weeks. After thoroughly canvassing the bushes of the Middle West, Kinsella has suddenly leaped into the New York State and other leagues in this section of the country, and after a few weeks hereabouts he will comb the Pacific Coast and the Northwest.

The result of Kinsella's activities will probably not be definitely known until late in the summer, or until draft time. However, it is said that he has already spotted half a dozen pitchers.

More than likely Kinsella was instructed to pay particular attention to pitchers this year, as McGraw has suddenly found himself in need of that class of material.

* * *

FERDINAND SCHUPP, the author of the rising curve, is now the only real youngster with the club, and Theodore Goulait is about the only pitcher "plant" belonging to McGraw, although he still has some hopes of Frank Smith, now in the New York State League, developing later on.

Larue Kirby, who was carried along by the Giants for some time last season, and who was left at Mobile with Mike Finn this spring, has been cut loose entirely. There were various reasons why Larue would not do, chief of which was Larue himself. Finn had to send him away, and the last heard of the Michigan terror was at Pensacola, 'way down in Florida.

Stray reports floating in and out of the far sticks indicate that Chance also has some scouts hard at work. It is said that the Peerless Leader has lined up a score of young athletes for September delivery and that several will come from the Texas League, incubator of some of the best ball tossers in the land. Chance also has an eye on various promising young men out on the coast and in the Southern League.

* * *

FOR a long time past there has been an effort on foot to discover the reason why ball players hit less on the Polo Grounds than any other field in either circuit, it being generally admitted that such is the case. Last season the Giants claimed that it was on account of the advertising signs in center field. They said these signs formed a background which practically destroyed their batting eyes.

This year the signs were left off a considerable section of the bleacher wall, and the space was painted an alluring green. Then the Giants proceeded to hit a little bit less than ever, thus acquitting the poor signs of the blame.

BRITISH POLO CAPTAIN COUNTS ON WINNING NEXT

QUEENSTOWN, IRELAND, June 28.—Captain R. G. Ritson, of the English polo team, upon his arrival here from America on the liner Campania, said: "I confidently believe England will win the next polo match. Unquestionably the best polo team won in our recent match. We are delighted with the treatment accorded us in America and the true sportsmanship shown."

BOXING

News of the Ring Game

Young Shugrue, the Eastern lightweight, has billed the toughest fight of his career. Shugrue signed articles yesterday to box Matty Baldwin in a 15-round bout at New Haven, Conn., on July 4 and the fur should certainly fly. Baldwin has fought the best boys in the lightweight division and has always given a good account of himself.

* * *

The fight between Toni Caponi and Jimmy Clabby, scheduled to be held at Indianapolis on July 3, has been called off. The promoters claim that Caponi wanted too much money.

* * *

Tom McCarey has wired Packey McFarland an offer to meet Jack Britton at his arena, providing the latter succeeds in defeating Charlie White at New Orleans on July 4. Britton and Packey met at New York a few months ago, with Packey carrying off the honors by a slight margin.

No more boxing shows are to be staged at Kenosha, Wis., during the summer months. The small attendance at the Coulon-Burns bout is the reason.

* * *

Kid Young, the local newsboy boxer, is simply aching to get into action. Young says he is willing to meet any boy of his weight, from Charley Lee to Matty McCue.

* * *

Joe Mandot and Knockout Brown are both picking Leach Cross to stop Bud Anderson on July 4. Both claim that Leach's well-advertised right hand will land on Anderson's jaw long before the twentieth round is over.

* * *

Tommy Murphy says he will be at the ringside when Ritchie and Rivers clash to challenge the winner. Murphy is surely entitled to a chance at the title as he has fought every worthy contender for the crown during the past two years.

* * *

Murphy has been forced to call off his bout with Johnny Dundee to be held on July 15 on account of a bad hand. He put the injured member out of commission while boxing with one of his sparring partners. Jack White may get the match with Dundee.

* * *

Paris is after a fight between Georges Carpentier and Al Palzer. Tom O'Rourke, manager of Palzer, received a letter from Monsieur Vienne, the Parisian boxing promoter, asking him his terms for such a match.

* * *

Promoters in Milwaukee, Wis., want to stage a bout between Papke and Eddie McGoorty. McGoorty has already agreed to meet the former middleweight champion, but Papke is holding out for a larger guarantee.

EVEN TENNIS EARNS COIN; AMERICA IS "SPORT MAD"

NEW YORK, June 28.—It has been said that America is "sport mad." That the general boom in interest in competitive events extends to tennis is proved by the figures just announced placing the total gate receipts of the recent international matches here at $19,000. Of this surprising sum $7,000 went to defray the expenses of the American team.

Of the net profits of $12,000, half was turned over to the Australian team. The West Side Lawn Tennis Club, on whose courts the matches were played, received $1,400, and the remaining $4,600 was put in the treasury of the National Lawn Tennis Association.

ZAMLOCH TRIES TO STEAL WITH ALL BASES OCCUPIED

DETROIT, June 28.—It has happened again in the big leagues. No longer is John Anderson the proud possessor of the glory of stealing second with the bases filled. Zamloch, a Tiger recruit hurler, pulled the stunt in the second game with the Naps. Stanage was on third, Moriarty on second and the pitcher himself on first. The latter started for second, hit the dirt with a great slide, arose, brushed himself and found Morrie planted at the base. It was a cinch to tag Zamloch, and then an ivory double resulted, as Stanage tried to reach home and was caught on the throw to the plate.

MORAN KNOCKS OUT LOGAN EASILY IN NEW ORLEANS

CHICAGO OPENS OLYMPIC GAMES TO GREAT CROWD

CHICAGO, June 28.—With the huge stands crowded to their capacity, the American Olympic games were opened under the most favorable circumstances to-day. The athletic carnival promises to outclass any event of the same nature eevr held in this country. Athletes from all over the United States and Canada, as well as the point winners from Sweden, who took part in the Olympic games at Stockholm last year, are in attendance.

Almost every conceivable sort of athletic contest has been arranged for the meet, which will continue until July 6. A swimming tank has been dug out in the center of the field and is so constructed that it can be boarded over and covered with earth when not in use. There is also a ski slide on which the skiing tournament will be held. As the weather will not permit the slides being covered with the natural coating of ice, grease has been used and in the preliminary trials found to be successful. Several polo games and feats of horsemanship also have been arranged. The army polo team will in all probability participate in this event.

* * *

TO-DAY the final championship contests for Chicago school children will be run off. The preliminary trials in the competitive drills, marching and like events, were held Thursday and yesterday. Fifty thousand children participated in the preliminaries.

To-morrow will be known as "Swedish Day," and the Swedish singing societies of Chicago have arranged for a monster chorus to join in the singing of national hymns and folk songs.

The intercollegiate athletic championships of the United States, including track and field sports, will be run off Wednesday, while the interscholastic championships, in which 2,000 high school and preparatory school boys are entered, will be decided on Thursday.

* * *

A "SANE Fourth" celebration will be given on Friday, interspersed with athletic events. In the afternoon the junior track and field championships of the United States, composed of 18 standard events, will take place. In the evening there will be more athletic events, educational moving pictures and a fireworks display.

Next Saturday will be the crowning day of the meet. The senior national championships, conducted under the auspices of the A. A. U., will be run off on that day and will bring forth some of the best athletes in the country. Such men as Sheridan, MacGrath, Sheppard, Kiviat, Kohlmainen and others of international reputation will be on hand.

* * *

DURING the meet there will also be archery contests, drills of firemen and policemen, three days of swimming, fencing, wrestling matches and trap shooting. Directly south of the stadium a large plot of ground has been laid out for the trap shooting competition which will be held on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week under the direction of E. W. Heath. The Boy Scouts will also give several exhibition drills under the direction of Dr. P. J. H. Farrell. Several power-boat races on the lake have also been arranged to take place during the week.

THE MOTORCYCLE RAG.

They were sitting in the gloaming and her cheeks were pale and damp
As she said good-bye unto her darling Steve.
But he said, "There ain't no reason for the teardrop in your lamp,
For you haven't got no business for to grieve.
I am going for to leave you and may not come back no more.
I will risk my life as everybody knows.
But although I don't come back again you oughtn't to get sore
With them life insurance papers in your hose."
And as he strode away
She sobbed and then did say:

CHORUS.

"As a patriotic hero
He can bat at minus zero,
And there ain't no sign of beauty in his face,
But I'll gather in the money
From my Motorcycle Honey
If he don't come back alive from that there race."

We note that Roy Good is captain of the Cincinnati motorcycle racing team. This reminds that the virtuous meet their demise at an early age.

Mr. Kirby, who coached the Yale crew, avers that he is well pleased with the ing that an Englishman sometimes is ing that an Englishman cometimes is easily pleased.

Mr. Kirby furthermore avers that Yale will do well when it has learned his stroke from the ground up. Several impartial spectators of the late race were under the impression that Yale had run aground.

"Do not be a fighter," advises James J. Corbett. This advice is followed assiduously by a great majority of our pugilists.

While polo may not strike a popular chord, one might say without fear of successful contradiction that it is not a game for invalids.

Fish stories were told long before men began writing ads for railway companies, but liars were amateurs in those days.

Speaking of the irony of fate, we note that the Red Sox paused long enough to raise aloft in the summer breeze a banner on which was the legend: "World's Champions."

We have it from Ban Johnson that Joe Birmingham is not competent to manage an American League team. Possibly Joe allows his team to win too often for the good of the league.

Boxing experts are wondering who will be Willie Ritchie's manager, but after the fracas on the Fourth a more lucrative position will be that of Mr. Ritchie's doctor.

Bob Fitzsimmons vouchsafes the information that George Rodel is a regular fighter. Jim Corbett expostulates that the said Rodel is a dub. Taking it by and large, Fits wins unanimously.

You'll break your bat on it, he said.

ROY WALKER IS DUBBED "W. JOHNSON OF MINORS"

NEW ORLEANS, June 28.—"Walter Johnson of the minors." This is the title that Southern League fans will bestow upon Roy Walker, former Appalachian League recruit whom Manager Frank took on several days ago to fill in for "Rube" Evans. Walker was given his premier Wednesday against the Lookouts, and proved himself everything his chief sponsor—Jack Adams—claimed. "More speed than any pitcher in the minor leagues."

Walker, though shaded in a pitching duel by Harry Coveleskie, threw sensational ball. He fanned ten members of Kid Elberfeld's mob, giving up but eight hits, which were turned into a brace of scores.

COULON DECIDES TO POSTPONE WILLIAMS BOUT

By Sol Plex.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 28.—Johnny Coulon is not going to fight Johnny "Kid" Williams, of Baltimore, in Tom McCarey's Vernon arena July 29. The bantam champion decided yesterday afternoon that he was not prepared for such a stiff battle in defense of his laurels and announced that he would wire McCarey last night insisting on a postponement until Labor Day Coulon had given McCarey his word, and said he hated to disappoint Uncle Tom, but allowed a champion should take no foolish chances and that he would not fight Challenger Williams until he knew he was physically fit to put forth his best efforts in defense of the championship he has held for over five years.

Two Months in Mountains.

"Just to show the Vernon Club promoter that I intend playing fair ball for him I will leave for the coast July 1 or a few days later and stay there until Labor Day," said Johnny. "I want to get two months in the mountains before facing the Williams party. I am sure that by Labor Day I will be my old self, able to show Mr. Williams how a real champion fights.

"My right hand is bad and I am low in weight because of the hot weather we have been having. This is the first summer I ever tried to box, anyway, and I guess it is a mistake. When my father was alive he never permitted me to fight in the summer time. He argued that I was such a little fellow, always giving away weight, that training in the hot months would get me down too low. That was the trouble the other night at Kenosha. I guess the dad was right, and I will never again book a big match for June, July or August.

"It will be cool and nice in the mountains near Los Angeles and that will be just the thing for me. I can build up until a couple of weeks before Labor Day and then have something to take off when I start the training camp grind for Williams.

Is Sorry for Williams.

"I am sorry for Williams, because the postponement will be hard on him. He already is on the scene, so Labor Day will make a long wait for him. However, he might take on Eddie Campi again on our original date, July 29, the winner to get me on Labor Day. Williams beat Campi in Eddie's first long fight. Since that Campi has whaled both Burns and Ledoux. I think he is entitled to another chance at the Baltimore boy."

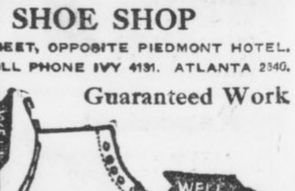
MERCURY AT 105 KNOCKS OUT CUB CHARLEY SMITH

CINCINNATI, June 28.—The temperature of 105 proved too much for Charley Smith, Cub hurler, who collapsed after yesterday's game at Redland field. The veteran walked off the field without trouble, but once within the club house began to totter and suddenly fell to the floor. His mates rushed to his assistance. He was rushed to the hotel.

Yell Defiance at Blood Disorders
A Remedy That Has Shown a Most Remarkable Purifying Effect.


At Last You Can Get Rid of Blood Troubles—S. S. S.
The word medicine is one of the most abused in our language. There are certain medicinal properties just as necessary to health as the food we eat. Take, for example, the well-known tonic medicine, S. S. S. This famous blood purifier contains medicinal components just as vital and essential to healthy blood as the elements of wheat, roast beef, the fats and the sugars that make up our daily ration.
As a matter of fact, there is one ingredient in S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating each cellular part of the body to the healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment. That is why it regenerates the blood supply; why it has such a tremendous influence in overcoming eczema, rash, pimples, and all skin afflictions.
And in regenerating the tissues S. S. S. has a rapid and positive anti-dotal effect upon all those irritating influences that cause rheumatism, sore throat, weak eyes, failing hair, loss of weight, thin, pale cheeks, and that weariness of muscle and nerve that is generally experienced as spring fever. Get a bottle of S. S. S. at any drug store, and in a few days you will not only feel bright and energetic, but you will be the picture of new life. S. S. S. is prepared only in the laboratory of The Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., who maintain a very efficient Medical Department, where all who have any blood disorder of a stubborn nature may write freely for advice and a special book of instruction. S. S. S. is sold everywhere by drug stores, department and general stores.

SPEEDY SPRINT ALL THAT CAN SAVE CRACKERS

By Percy H. Whiting.

IF the Crackers are going to win the pennant this year they must demonstrate it between July 4 and July 16.

The Crackers come home July 4 for the first and only home stay of any importance they get until August 14. On this home stay they get 12 games in a row.

They better win a big majority of them.

• • •

RIGHT now the Crackers are a dangerous distance behind the surprising Gulls, who lead the league. They show no evidence of overtaking Mike Finn's flying club.

No material gain will be made until the team gets home, of course. The Crackers do their gaining on home grounds.

This being true, the local club better make the most of the home stay between July 4 and 16. It will be a long time before they get another.

On July 17 the Crackers go out on a heart-breaking road trip. Of the next 28 games they play 24 on the road.

And you know well the Crackers aren't going to make any advances while this torrid July-August trip is in progress.

• • •

ONE fact that will help is that the Crackers wind up the season with 22 straight games at home. But unless they have begun to gain on the Gulls before that time they will never overtake them. They can't afford to wait for the last home stay. It will be too late. They can't afford to wait until the Gulls falter, for there isn't any certainty they are going to falter.

• • •

IF the Crackers are a disappointment in the Southern League—which they aren't yet—consider the case of the Pelicans. This team looked like a sure one-two-three club. Now it is nowhere and rapidly going further.

Laugh if you want to, but my own opinion is that this is Charley Frank's last year in Pelicantown.

This stuff has been coming in over the grapevine for a couple of months and longer—and coming pretty straight. The Cleveland club undoubtedly owns the New Orleans association. That's a moral certainty. They will want to put one of their own men in charge. They realize that Charley Frank is unpopular in his home town—why, it is difficult to figure, for he has never failed until this year to give them a good ball club. It is believed that the Cleveland folks wanted to be rid of Frank last year but didn't have the heart to fire him, after the showing he made with the 1912 Pelicans.

• • •

THEY need a new deal all around in New Orleans.

That ought to be the best baseball town of the league—it has the population. But it is nearly the worst. There is some good (or bad) reason for this because it is not a condition of long standing.

The Cleveland folks have figured around and have presumably decided that the sacrifice of Charley Frank would be a popular move.

So off comes his head.

A mere prediction, truly! But watch it come through.

PRIZE FIGHTRS' BALL TEAM JIMMY DIME'S NEW IDEA

NEWCASTLE, PA., June 28.—Jimmy Dime, the enterprising manager of pugilists and fight promoter, announces he has organized a team of ball players which would be composed of some of the best boxers in this country, and that they would play several exhibition games with professional teams this summer. Dime stated that there were few remunerative matches for the boxers during the summer and he intended to keep his team going until fall. His line-up is as follows:

Dan Daley, pitcher, heavyweight; Tom McMahon, first base, light heavyweight; Tommy Bresnahan, second base; Joe Chip, catcher, welterweight; George Chip, shortstop, middleweight; "Goo" Stewart, third base, middleweight; Patsy Brannigan, left field, featherweight; Jimmy Dime, center field, manager, and Tommy Jones, right field, lightweight.

By Joe Agler.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., June 28. Lefty Price will endeavor to prove to the Billikens that he is the goods this afternoon, with Chapman behind the plate. We should cop at least two of the three games scheduled for Montgomery. Manush will show up for Monday's game. He seems to be in mid-season shape.

Well, we got that revenge, after all, taking two of the series from the Turtles. Old King Brady twirled superb ball yesterday afternoon in spite of a sun which threatened to warp the grandstand out of shape and blister the infield. "Old Reliable" came back, good and strong, and demonstrated his worth to the Crackers.

We scored in the first on Long's single and Whitey's hit to center. We rocked along to the sixth without a chance, and then Smith singled, Bisland bunted and yours truly got a hit. Baerwald muffed Chapman's fly and Smith scored. I was nipped at second.

Newton was on the mound for the Turtles and pitched great ball, but his teammates couldn't help him much. We all were nearly suffocated with the heat.

MANUSH FOR CRACKERS; WILL JOIN ON THE ROAD

MONTGOMERY, ALA., June 28.—Frank Manush, formerly of the New Orleans Pelicans, recently unconditionally released by Charley Frank, has been signed by Manager Smith as utility player.

Manush has been in Memphis ever since his release. He will join the Crackers to-day or to-morrow.

It is presumed Manush will take the place of George Rohe as the Crackers' utility player.

JOE BEAN, director of playgrounds, deserves a large medal for getting the young men of Atlanta started in a big track and field meet. The event at Piedmont Park July 4 is deserving of the support of all those interested in the physical development of the young men in Atlanta.

No sport is cleaner, healthier or more desirable than track and field meets. Running, jumping and weight throwing contests develop those who take part in them. And moreover, they furnish a fine spectacle for those who witness them.

Unquestionably there will be a tremendous crowd at Piedmont Park Fourth of July morning to see the contests.

Of course no admission fee will be charged. There will be seats, if only on the grass, for all.

It is to be hoped that this meet will be the first of many. Atlanta ought to have one big track and field meet and several small ones each year. In the winter it ought to have an indoor meet in the Auditorium-Armory.

These things will come in time. The hardest work is done. A start has been made.

SINCE the Pittsburg club has been slumping, Manager Fred Clarke caused to be issued orders that the lid would be lifted on the anti-booze clause in the Pirate contracts.

"The players may drink beer if they drink it alone," said Clarke. "The use of the beverage as a tonic I do not believe to be harmful, at least not as much as the restless restraint caused by the clause against it."

This should be interesting to Pittsburg fans who may not know that some of the Pirate players, in St. Louis at least, were lifting the 'lid' before Manager Fred Clarke got his shoulder under it, showing the practicability of such a clause in the first place.

"One night," said Whitey, the other day, "when Kelly was with the old Chicago team, a half-dozen carriages had been ordered by the late Al Johnson to take the players for a ride about the city.

"As the players waited in the hotel a down-and-out fan came wandering in, told Kelly the story of his hardships.

"Kelly went to Johnson.

"'How much will these carriages cost us?' he asked.

"'Oh, I suppose about $35 or $40,' said Al.

"'All right,' said Kel, 'let's call it off and give the money to this old scout.' And it was done.

"Another time," continued Alperman, "Kelly shouted to an umpire: 'Don't fine me, Mr. Ump!' The official stood glaring at him muttering threats of a $50 assessment.

"'Don't fine me,' repeated Mike. 'Fine one of those tight wads, there. It will teach him a lesson. It won't me. If you take $50 away from me, you take the drinks and cigars away from a lot of fellows who are waiting for me at the hotel.'"

THERE'LL be no hidden ball trick victims among the Naps this season unless some one gets careless and forgets Birmingham's instructions. The Naps are directed to hug bases until the opposing pitcher takes his position at the slab, unless they positively know where the ball is.

If the pitcher should take his position on the rubber and the then hidden ball trick be tried by an opposing player, the base runners would move up a base. The taking of the pitching position without being able to deliver the ball would constitute a balk as soon as the pitcher took down his hands.

JOE AGLER has the happy knack of being able to parry inconvenient interruptions with some smart retort that immediately quashes the opposition. And Joe is game to the core. He was playing in a rather noisy game a few years ago, and after a short time a big chunk of wood was thrown at him. Fortunately, the aim was bad, and it fell harmlessly on the platform.

Agler picked it up and showed it to the spectators.

"Good heavens!" he exclaimed in tones of mock anxiety, "one of you fans has lost your head!"

Lee Magee Is Crack Of Cardinals' Team

ST. LOUIS, June 28.—"If I had a few more like Magee" is the substance of a prayerful wish that lingers in the mind of Manager Miller Huggins, of the St. Louis National League team, after many a close game dropped by the Cardinals in which Lee Magee, the speedy young left fielder, has put up a beautiful all-around game, to the exclusion of most of his teammates.

The left fielder of the Cardinals is rightly entitled to this oft repeated, yet unspoken compliment. Magee has all the characteristics to a marked degree of an up-to-date ball player—the speedy kind. He is by far the fastest man on the Cardinal team and one of the best all-around players Manager Huggins has in his line-up. He will take all kinds of chances on the bases and has won many games by his fleetness alone.

MANDOT PICKS RITCHIE TO DEFEAT JOE RIVERS

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 28.—They say a fighter's opinion of another fighter does not amount to a snap. If you want to find out for yourself remember what is written in the following paragraph and think of it when the time comes:

"Joe Mandot, one of the brainiest fighters of the day, picks Willie Ritchie to beat Joe Rivers, and says Leachie Cross will stop Bud Anderson owing to Cross' tremendous power to hit."

See how near Joe comes.

GOPHERS WILL NOT MEET MICHIGAN NEXT FALL

MINNEAPOLIS, June 28.—The University of Minnesota will not meet Michigan on the football field next fall. This was announced to-day by the athletic authorities at the university. The date held open for the possible scheduling of Michigan October 25, has been given to the University of North Dakota. This precludes any possibility of a resumption of football relations with Michigan until at least another year.

RICKEY TO SCOUT FOR BROWNS

ST. LOUIS, June 28.—Branch Rickey, former catcher in both big leagues, who coached the University of Michigan team this year, has returned to his old job as scout for the Browns during the summer. He began work by taking to the team with him two of his Michigan stars, Pitcher Powell and Shortstop Lavans.

THORNTON WINS RIGHT TO BATTLE WITH CHAMPION

NEW ORLEANS, LA., June 28.—Rain played havoc with the schedule of the Southern tennis championship games at the New Orleans Lawn Tennis Club Friday. J. B. Adoue, of Dallas, Texas, went down in defeat before Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, in straight sets, 6-4, 6-1, 6-1. This brings Thornton, the winner of the tournament, against last year's champion, Carleton Smith. This match will be played late to-day after the doubles are finished.

The only other men's matches was stopped by darkness. Only Atlantans were participants, Smith and Mansfield against Tohrnton and Grant in the semi-finals. Much to the surprise of everybody Smith and Mansfield took the first two sets of the match (which is the best three out of five sets) before the game was called.

Grima and Phelps meet Adoue and Shelton to-day. Thornton and Grant will finish their match with Mansfield and Smith before the afternoon games start. Bummerstadt is carded against Lloyd and Hochendale is opposing Strouse.

Early in the afternoon the final round in doubles between the winners of the morning matches is expected to start. Clark is carded to meet the winner of the Hochendale-Strouse match. Mrs. Monroe will meet Miss Murphy at 4 p. m. and half an hour later Thornton will meet Smith. The final round in consolations will start at 5 p. m. The forecast for to-day calls for clear weather and it is expected that the program will be carried through without hindrance.

GUNBOAT SMITH WHIPS BOER RODEL IN THIRD

NEW YORK, June 28.—Gunboat Smith, of California, last night defeated George Rodel, the South African Boer, in the third round of a scheduled ten-round bout at Madison Square Garden. After Rodel had been knocked down twice Referee Billy John stopped the bout.

HERE'S A CHANCE TO MAKE SOME REAL MONEY

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.
(Author of "The Triple Tie.")

It is now up to the readers of The Georgian who have been reading "The Triple Tie" on the magazine page to solve the problems of the novel and send in their conclusions in competition for the prizes aggregating $250 offered by this newspaper.

In this issue of The Georgian is printed the last part of Chapter 43 of "The Triple Tie." At the end of this chapter Gordon Kelly is brought on the scene again. There he is left while the readers of the story send their contributions to The Georgian. Readers will be allowed until noon of Thursday, July 3, in which to send in their answers. No communications will be considered unless they are received at The Georgian office by Thursday at noon or bear a postmark not later than that time.

The final chapters of "The Triple Tie," as written by the author, will be printed in The Georgian of Monday, July 7.

Can You Solve Them?

As an aid to the readers who desire to compete for the prizes it may be said that the problems to be solved are these:

First—How does Gordon Kelly escape from the mountaineers?

Second—What happens to Mildred Deery, the heroine?

Third—How does Gordon Kelly, who never saw a game of baseball or never played a game of baseball up to the time he asked Manager Smith, of the Atlanta Club, for a position on his team—how did Gordon Kelly learn to catch the ball and bat in the phenomenal manner he showed in the games he played at Atlanta?

Fourth—What happened when Gordon Kelly went to bat in the last half of the ninth inning in the final and deciding game of The Triple Tie when there were three on bases, two out and four runs needed for the Red Sox to win?

Fifth—What is the final ending of the story?

It is suggested that readers who desire to compete for the prizes take up the narrative where it leaves off in this issue of The Georgian and complete it as they think it ought to be completed, or as they think the author has completed it, thus solving the problems presented.

Nothing Improbable.

Every novel is a mystery, else no one would read a novel. Speculation as to how a story will "turn out" is usually what keeps a reader interested to the end. Perhaps the mysteries of "The Triple Tie" are no more mysterious than are to be found in the average novel. Certainly every one who has read "The Triple Tie" from the beginning has an idea as to how things "turned out."

It may be hinted that the author has solved the problems in a rational way—that there is nothing improbable in the author's ending of the story.

Please remember that this is not a guessing contest. Originality, literary value and analytical clearness will be largely considered in awarding the prizes. Three judges, in no way connected with The Georgian will make the awards for the best solutions of "The Triple Tie" problems.

So "go to it," readers. You have until noon of Thursday to send in your conclusions.

ATLANTA GIRL WITH 'THE GREAT AMERICAN VOICE' TO SING HERE

Miss Lalla B. Cannon.

Miss Eulalia Bright Cannon, the Atlanta girl who was designated by Professor Sergei Klibansky as possessor of "the great American voice" and awarded a $3,000-a-year grand opera scholarship, will be heard at a free concert of the Atlanta Music Festival Association at the Auditorium at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. She will sing the aria, "O Don Fatale," from "Don Carlos," the song that won her the greatest honor, perhaps, ever accorded an American vocal student.

Miss Cannon, who prefers to be known as Lalla B. Cannon, is spending her vacation with her mother, Mrs. L. C. Cannon, of 647 Peachtree Street. She is a dramatic soprano with a truly wonderful range, and unless her friends prevail upon her to give a benefit recital this will probably be her only appearance in Atlanta this summer. In August or early September she will return to New York to resume her operatic studies under Professor Klibansky, as holder of the scholarship given by a wealthy New York woman.

"I always have aspired to grand opera," Miss Cannon told a Georgian reporter yesterday. "I think it is the grandest career in the world. I have accepted the scholarship. Professor Klibansky will say how long I must study in America and when I must go to Europe and whether I shall become an opera singer. I shall do just what he says, and I do so hope he will think I am fitted for opera."

Gives Her Mother Credit.

Since it all depends on Professor Klibansky's dictum, it can be asserted dogmatically that Miss Cannon will become a grand opera star. In selecting her over 400 competitors, men, women and girls, Klibansky said her voice undoubtedly was capable of as wonderful development as any of the great sopranos now heard in Wagnerian opera.

To her mother Miss Cannon owes and freely gives the credit for the fairylike fortune by which she rose to fame overnight and her sparkling prospects for a future career. A singer from babyhood, Miss Cannon always thought she was a mezzo, and her teachers, even until a few months ago in New York, shared her belief. She wanted to sing all the time, but her mother prevailed upon her to desist, that she might not waste her powers by untutored efforts. When she went to New York to study she scrupulously refrained from vocal exertion, and although the strain of practice taxed her strength, her vocal capabilities were conserved until she sang before Klibansky and was pronounced not a mezzo, but a dramatic soprano of rare quality and power.

Since then she has sung before Madame Gadski, and the peerless diva has expressed the wish to hear her again when next she visits America. To her acceptance of her mother's advice, Miss Cannon ascribes the preservation of her voice till the fortunate meeting with Klibansky.

Fortune Came by Accident.

And here is how she sang for Klibansky and won the scholarship, as she told it to The Georgian:

"A girl friend saw in The New York American an advertisement for 'the great American voice,' inserted by Professor Klibansky. He had taught in the Berlin Conservatory, and was then an instructor in Damrosch's Conservatory, known as the Institute of Musical Art. My friend told me about the advertisement, and I went to see Professor Klibansky that afternoon. There were so many other singers there that it was late when I sang 'The Birth of Morn,' a simple song, for him. He told me to come back the next morning, and I did. I sang 'O Don Fatale,' the aria from 'Don Carlos,' and as you know, I won the scholarship."

When it is considered that the honor of being declared possessor of "the great American voice" and receiving the $3,000 annual scholarship had been promised to another girl before Miss Cannon sang for Klibansky, it readily is seen her recital before him must have convinced him she was another Jenny Lind or Adelina Patti in embryo.

The other girl was Miss Jean Vincent Cooper, of Jackson, Miss. Professor Klibansky told the wealthy patroness it would be a shame for either of the girls to miss securing the best instruction obtainable, particularly when Miss Cooper was a mezzo and Miss Cannon a soprano and each was without a peer in her own field. The patroness then agreed to duplicate her offer, and Miss Cooper and Miss Cannon each were awarded the honor and the prize.

Asked what she thought of the opera as a career for aspiring girls, Miss Cannon replied, "Really, I can't say. To tell the truth, I don't know, for I myself am not in opera yet. But I want to try it, for I think it will be splendid."

Wimbish was hostess at a tea Saturday afternoon at the Piedmont Driving Club in honor of Miss Eloise Oliver, whose marriage to Mr. Frampton Ellis takes place Monday evening; Mrs. Prioleau Ellis, of Springfield, Conn., and Miss Belle Stewart, of Montgomery, who are here for the wedding.

The guests were received on the terrace and tea was served from a table beautifully decorated with hydrangeas, sweetpeas and gardenias. Mrs. Wimbish wore white crepe.

The buffet supper given Friday evening by Mr. and Mrs. William D. Ellis, Jr., was for Miss Oliver and Mr. Ellis. Guests included the wedding attendants and young men who will sit at the bride's table. Garden flowers, smilax and ferns adorned the apartments. $920,630,000 IS COTTON CROP'S 1912 VALUE

Federal Report Shows the South Produced 14,313,015 Bales. Less Than 1911 Production.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The Southern cotton planter should worry. According to a bulletin soon to be issued by Director Durand, of the Bureau of Census, Department of Commerce, the cotton crop for the United States in 1912 amounted to 14,313,015 bales of 500 pounds each, and was worth the trifling sum of $920,630,000.

Although the crop last year was 11.9 per cent less than that of the previous year, it was worth $60,790,000 more than it was in 1911. This almost equals the banner year for cotton, which was in 1910, when he crop amounted to but 12,005,688 bales, 2,307,327 bales less than it did this year, but was worth $963,180,000, the most valuable crop ever raised in this country. While 1910 led in value, 1911 led in amount, the crop that year being 16,250,276 bales.

The statistics show that the cotton crop for the past four years has increased 32 per cent. When it is considered that, of the total area of the countries from which returns of cotton ginned were made, only about one-eleventh was devoted to the production of cotton in 1911 and 1912, the figures afford some idea of the possibilities of cotton production in the United States.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

To-day, or so much thereof as may be necessary, as they put it in legal phrasing, will be Joseph M. Brown's last day in the Executive office in Georgia.

However many people may view his departure, it may be set down as a fact that newspaper men generally will see him go forth to private life with their genuine good will and good wishes.

From the newspaper man's standpoint he has been in many ways a Governor among a thousand. He has been an infinite source of good "copy," and by such fruits are good Governors known in the newspaper man's world.

Governor Brown, had he elected to be a newspaper man instead of a Governor, undoubtedly would have been a star. There never has been anybody in the Executive office who could put as much "punch" into a promulgation as Governor Brown—at least, not within the memory of this writer.

Governor Brown's copy never needs editing. Whatever he has to say, he says it with the emphasis right where it belongs. When it comes to putting the "bang!" into a written document, the newspaper craft arise as a man and call "Little Joe" blessed!

He is the very smallest Governor physically the State has had since Alexander H. Stephens, but he is fearless and straightforward in his utterances. He has insisted—and rightly—that he be not quoted in the public prints in important matters otherwise than directly. But when his written statements have come forth, they have been the real things!

His sense of humor is keen and his good nature irrepressible. If one grows to like him at all, one grows to like him all over. Moreover, one grows more and more to respect and esteem him as one grows more and more to know him.

It is but the simple truth to say that he has "set a pace" in the Executive office that will not be easy to follow. He has left his indelible imprint upon Georgia history, and it is safe to say that he retires with the regard and high esteem of a great majority of his fellow citizens.

Anyway, that's the way this writer feels about it.

Senator M. C. Tarver has stated positively that a bill to create the Chicamauga Judicial Circuit will be introduced in the present Legislature, refusing to say whether he or some other member from the counties affected will be the author of the bill.

From Representative Shropshire of Chattooga County, comes the suggestion of two new counties, Floyd alone remaining in the Rome circuit; Walker, Chattooga and Dade forming another circuit; Whitfield, Murray and Catoosa, a third, and Gordon and Bartown remaining in the Cherokee circuit.

The new Legislature, while promising enough, still shows its inexperience and yet hesitating quality of its membership.

When the clerk calls upon those favoring such and such a bill to stand up, practically the entire membership arises, or remains seated, as the case may be. The custom, of course, is merely to raise the hand, as a sign of voting.

One new member, remembering how easily he had squelched an adversary with a simple objection earlier in the day, yesterday entered a vociferous objection to a motion to adjourn. Naturally, he got a good laugh for his pains.

Nevertheless, the new Legislature looks like a pretty good bet.

Evidently it is composed of untried material, but that is no sure sign there is not plenty of good stuff in the makeup of it.

The real leaders of the new House are yet to be developed, but they likely are there, for all that!

"I do not expect to introduce any bill, but shall occupy the majority of my time in helping to kill some other fellow's bill," was the reply of Senator Charles E. McGregor to-day, when questioned as to any proposed legislation which he might introduce in the present session of the General Assembly.

He continued along the lines of legislation, saying: "I may introduce a resolution looking to the restoration of the old 'blueback speller' into our educational system. I shall also advocate enlarging the duties of the game wardens so as to include the enforcement of all misdemeanor laws upon the statute books, especially the prohibition law. I stand for the enforcement of all laws or their repeal."

Both President Anderson of the Senate and Speaker Burwell of the House are hard at work framing up the standing committees of the two houses of the General Assembly.

This is a tremendous task and requires much patience and careful consideration. Upon the composition of the various committees depends a very great deal of the Legislature's efficiency as a whole. It is necessary, therefore, that members be placed on such committees as they seem best fitted for, and the determination of that is no child's job.

Both the presiding officers hope, however, to have all committee assignments ready for promulgation by Wednesday of next week.

The Legislature is going to be swamped with Fourth of July invitations.

Already a dozen or so have been sent in, and there are more to come.

The result probably will be that the Legislature, instead of accepting any one and attending in a body some particular celebration, will divide into squads and scatter itself pretty well around all over the State.

SPOT INTERESTS GIVE JULY BOOST

Week-End Shorts Cover, Steadying New Crops---Trade Waiting Bureau Report.

NEW YORK, June 28.—At the opening of the cotton market to-day the tone was quiet and first prices were erratic, being 4 points higher to 1 point lower than last night's close. The larger spot houses came into the market, bidding aggressively for July position, but offerings were limited and scattered, resulting in that option jumping 12 points, to 11.14. Other positions were given practically no support, but prices rallied 1 to 5 points from the opening, mostly in sympathy with the advance in July.

Trading, however, was very light, but the ring crowd inclined to sell on some rains which appeared on the map in Texas and increasing cloudiness in the eastern belt. Advisory warning on Texas coast says disturbance has moved from the Gulf southwest and is now centered between Corpus Christi and Del Rio. Wind and tide will subside during the day. Nice warm growing weather with very favorable indications for rains becoming more general over Sunday.

In addition to this, The Journal of Commerce declares that cotton has improved in Georgia and South Carolina during the past month, while North Carolina conditions are about the same as a month ago. Owing to a cold snap, the season is about two weeks late. Plant small, but strong. Stands poor. Cultivation good. Some insects.

The class of buying looked to be short covering over Sunday and traders evening up their line, pending the Government report, to be made public at noon Juyl 3, which will give an estimate of the cotton acreage of 1913 and the condition of the crop to June 25. The general impression seems to prevail that the market will be only a scalping affair until this report is out of the way.

At the close the market was steady, with June and July showing a net gain of 18 points and other positions generally 2 points higher than the final quotations of Friday.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 28.—Spot people and Liverpool were credited with stopping the July notices yesterday, which were said to be about 15,000 bales.

* * *

There is not much looked for in the market until the Government reports its condition figures and the acreage estimate, which is likely to be about 3 per cent increase, while conditions are generally expected around 82 to 83 per cent. However, if the scattered long interest in July is eliminated, this option might be forced higher.

* * *

"When those in control of July believe the liquidation to be over, something is going to happen," remarked J. M. Anderson.

* * *

* * *

Whether July is a "dead duck" it is not definitely known, but brokers close to leading spot interests intimate that the fireworks are not yet over.

* * *

Sentiment is decidedly mixed and the market is in a waiting attitude, pending Bureau day.

The Journal of Commerce has the following on the condition of the cotton crops in North and South Carolina and Georgia:

"North Carolina—There is no material change in the condition from a month ago, when the report of this journal made it 78 per cent. The season is about two weeks late, due largely to cold weather. The plant is generally small and stands poor, while a number of localities are affected with lice. Cultivation is good, except in a few sections, which are grassy. Since the cold spell the weather has been more favorable and cotton is showing improvement.

"South Carolina—Owing to the recent cold spell the crop is now two to three weeks late, but since the warm weather set in the plant is growing nicely and showing improvement. The plant is small and stands generally are poor, but the fields are clean and cultivation good. Some localities, however, are in grass. With the exception of a few lice, the crop is free of insects. Percentage shows an increase over last month, when it was 69.9.

"Georgia—Conditions are very irregular and spotted in Georgia. On account of dry weather early in the season cotton was slow in germinating and the crop is now fully two to three weeks late. The plant is small, but strong and healthy. Cultivation is good and rainfall ample, but stands are generally poor and irregular. Insects are not complained of, and the weather generally is favorable. Percentage condition shows improvement over a month ago, when it was 76.3."

* * *

Dogwood, the principal source of shuttles for use in cotton mills, is growing scarcer year by a year, and various substitutes are being tried, but with no great success.

* * *

Liverpool Conference: "No resolutions passed, but conference approved American recommendation c. i. f. and ½ per cent actual tare and universal type which was made. King, Neville and Francis, representing Americans' new type, like present Liverpool from middling, or about half grade lower below middling.

"It is expected that Liverpool and others will adopt new type."

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Theory mars the crop prospective and a condition handicaps the market. The talent, therefore, is idle enough to worry about environment. Bulls admit the crop over a large area is doing splendidly, but taunt their constitutional enemies with the query, 'How long would it require unfavorable weather or the boll-weevil to put it on the blink?' Bears admit that in some sections the crop is below par, but assert with a show of confidence that a continuation of good weather, with a few timely rains, will enormously improve the condition of that portion of the crop, which thus far has made least progress.

"So the talent has come to expect a Government acreage figure next Thursday showing an increase over last year of about 3 per cent and a Government condition percentage of between 82 and 83. Meanwhile, America knows about what to expect in the way of tariff changes and may begin to shape her affairs accordingly. England's trade is in excellent condition, and the rings are beginning to hear that many foreign mills are running low on stocks of raw material; the movement to secure universal cotton types seems to be making satisfactory progress for the first time in the history of the trade."

WILSON APPROVES DISSOLUTION PLAN

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Dullness pervaded the stock market at the opening to-day, most issues ranging beneath Friday's closing. Canadian Pacific declined a point on a few selling orders.

Amalgamated Copper, after opening unchanged, shaded ⅛. Union Pacific began ⅛ off, but after half an hour had sustained a net gain of ⅛. United States Steel was ⅛ lower at the outset, but later recovered. Utah Copper, Southern Pacific, Reading and Atchison made trifling fractional advances.

St. Paul commenced with a gain of ⅛, but soon lost it and scored a net decline of ⅝. Chesapeake and Ohio and Chino Copper each lost ⅛. Norfolk and Western and Pennsylvania each dropped ¼.

The curb was quiet.

Dealings in the London market were very light. American shares in London were irregular.

Announcement from Washington of the approval of an agreement of the dissolution of the Harriman merger put Union Pacific up 3¼ to 148⅞ before the close. The balance of the list was strengthened. Canadian Pacific rose to 218, for a gain of 1⅝, and Reading went to 158⅜, a net gain of 1¼.

The market closed strong.

Government bonds strong. Other bonds steady.

CHANCE WOULD QUIT IF HIS HEALTH GAVE WAY

NEW YORK, June 28.—Frank Chance will make good with the New York Yankees if his health doesn't go back on him.

Chance is no quitter. He undertook a big task in New York, but he'll get away with it unless his nervous system fails him. The least little thing would upset him last fall. They say he is doing better this year. He should stick with the Yanks and produce a winning club next year. If his health bothers him, however, he'll jump the club overnight and go back to his orange ranch in California.

TRADE SHOULD NOT IGNORE BULLISH WHEAT CONDITION

CHICAGO, June 27.—The Inter Ocean says:

"Those who are bullish on wheat say that conditions in the Northwest are such that the trade can not ignore them much longer and that, despite the impending movement of new winter wheat, its influence will be offset, and that with any further bulge in coarse grains wheat should respond.

"With corn in Oklahoma in the tassel and temperatures around 100, it is possible that continued dry, hot weather will irreparably injure the corn crop. Conservative people advise against following the advance, but favor buying on any good setback. Traders who were in the pit all day yesterday said there was a new class of investment buying which took the offerings from bulls, who were securing profits, and they are looking for higher oats prices, notwithstanding the possibility of good deliveries next month and a liberal carry-over of old oats."

SHARP DECLINE IN PRICE OF CEREALS

Good Rains Encourage Active Selling Move---Cables Weak and Sentiment Mixed.

CHICAGO, June 28.—The professionals in wheat favored the selling side this morning and prices were ⅛ to ⅜ cent lower. The weather map showed light rains in Canada as well as at several points in North Dakota, but none in South Dakota. A dispatch was received from Minneapolis saying that higher temperatures are expected by the Weather Bureau. Liverpool was ⅛ to ¼d higher.

Corn was unchanged to ⅛ to ¼ cent lower on profit taking by longs.

Liverpool was ¼d lower, with Argentina selling freely. A trace of rain was shown at Oklahoma City and some in Texas, but the weather throughout the belt is clear and very hot.

Oats were unchanged to a shade higher for July and a fraction lower for December.

Provisions were easier.

The entire grain list changed to one of weakness during the last half hour of to-day's session. This lowering of prices was on the selling by longs and the putting out of short lines, coupled with a lack of support. Net losses were shown of ⅛ to ⅜ cent in wheat and corn, and ¼ to ⅜ cent in oats. Hog products were lower all around.

Cash sales of wheat at Chicago were 45,000 bushels; corn 75,000 bushels, and oats 60,000.

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Barlett, Frazier & Co: "Wheat—Local shorts covered freely on yesterday's late upturn and we see nothing in the news this morning to cause any particular strength.

"Corn—With prospects of continued warm weather over Sunday any decline in values to-day is unlikely.

"Oats—Weather conditions surrounding corn naturally apply to oats and a steady to higher market is likely to prevail.

QUALITY OF HOGS POOR.

CHICAGO, June 28.—There were two distinct hog markets to-day, one for qualified grades at 8.70 to 8.80 the other for packing mixed stuff from 8.65 down, the price being determined by the proportion of strictly packing hogs. Deterioration of quality is exerting its seasonable influence. The market was steady at the lowest prices of the week and live mutton trade was slumpy, owing to the arrival direct to packers of 40 cars of Southern lambs from Louisville.

The Light Brahmas Sure To Be Original "Come-back" Fowl

Evidence Shows This Popular Bird in Years 1860-90 Will Be in Limelight Soon.

From about 1860 to 1890 the Light Brahma was decidedly the classiest of our thoroughbred chickens. In the show room it was one of the first to be cooped and looked at; the last talked about. It was a thoroughbred from away back where the real thoroughbred was made. It was not one of the mush-room type of thoroughbreds; one that was seen in a great blaze of glory one day and the next day sunken clear below the line of vision because the average man could not breed it to look anything like what it was supposed to represent. It was made to stay. It originated in the good old times you read about when they made things to last and gave value received. This gives you a little idea of the quality of the Light Brahma. But as some other things have been supplanted by goods purported to be "just as good" that did not pan out in the long run, this grand old breed was forced to the wall, as it were, for more than a decade.

It has not been entirely forgotten; not by any manner of means. It has been in what the doctors would call a "comatose state," a sort of semi-conscious condition. But it could not hold such a breed in subjection any great length of time. They would not permanently down. No matter if varieties were brought forth that were reputed to be the only things wearing feathers that were worth having. People have heard things similar to that before and did not take much stock in them. So we begin to see the good old Brahma coming back. We can see its outline on the sky line. We see their onward march with that regular tread which means that there is going to be something doing in the Brahma alley, and that too at no very distant day. We see quite a number of the old guard in the line; they have been there all the while, but the column has been moving so slowly that it was almost noticeable. Now that they have a host of recruits that have put enough ginger into the old lines to set them to moving.

As one prominent old fancier said to another of the same type: It looks a good deal like Brahmas and Langshans, doesn't it? This may not mean very much to the average layman, but to the old-time chicken fancier it means a good deal—it means that the Light Brahmas and the Black Langshans are going to be brought into prominence in the near future and enjoy much of their old-time popularity. During the past decade there have been many and many a poultry show at which there was not a specimen of either of these breeds represented. The first significant intimation the writer had of the Brahmas' reappearance was at the great New Orleans show a year ago last winter when he found a regular lay-out of them. More than a hundred of the very tip-top kind were on exhibition. It almost took our breath away to see them after so long a time without them.

At last winter's Philadelphia show the Light Brahma stood fourth in the list of entries. Now, what do you think of that? A club meeting was held at the Philadelphia show and wide interest was manifested in the grand old breed. At that time it was decided to make Boston the next rallying place for the club meet, and also for a rousing show. We predict that such will be the case, for Boston has always been the nesting ground for this breed. There are quite a number of Light Brahma breeders in the South, with as good a line of goods as can be found anywhere, so we want to put them on notice that it is a good time to begin hunting up the war paint. It is but just that you should each get your share of the trade that is bound to come to this old standby in the next few years. There is no question about it, it is going to come. As we bred the Brahmas ourselves for a good many years, we are only too glad to see them coming into their own. They are deserving.

Frank P. Johnson, Station A, Indianapolis, Ind., is secretary of the club, so if you want to know more about what they are going to do better write to him. In the meantime, see what you can do in producing some good Brahmas.

Judge F. J. Marshall: What is the matter with my little chicks? They make a strange noise like they can not breathe good or like there was something in their windpipe. Please give me a remedy. I am raising them without a mother. They have free range and plenty of room in the sleeping house.
MRS. L. S
Chester, S. C.

Reply: Your chicks have colds, bordering on roup. There are roup remedies galore; in fact, there are so many guaranteed cures that the average amateur is all at sea. The following is one that has been used by many chicks, and at the same time it is harmless: Extract of witch hazel, 4 tablespoonfuls; carbolic acid, 3 drops; water, 2 tablespoonfuls. A convenient way to use it is in a good spring bottom oil can, as used with the sewing machine. One squeeze of the can the best for young chicks, and into the mouth twice daily will do much to relieve the catarrhal condition. Remove the sick from the well. Let the surroundings be clean.

OUR NORTH SIDE AND INMAN PARK DELIVERIES LEAVE THE STORE AT 9:30; SOUTH SIDE AND WEST END AT 2 P. M. GOODS ORDERED BEFORE THESE HOURS WILL BE DELIVERED SAME DAY.

CHICKENS need more care and attention the next two or three months than any other time during the year. It is perfectly natural for chickens to have lice and mites, and unless you look after them they will multiply in such quantities to prove profitable. The little chicks will not reach the growth they should and the hens will not lay if they are covered with these pests. We have ties that you can not expect your flock remedies that will positively get rid of them and the cost is very little. For 35c you can get a can of either Lee's, Conkey's or Pratt's Lice Liquid and we will guarantee either of these preparations to give entire satisfaction.

WE are offering Baby Chick Feed at $2.15 per 100 pounds for the next few days. You know the regular price is $2.50 per 100 pounds. Better take advantage of this.

"My Field the World"--A Fine Motto

(Copyright, 1912.)

A great wonder of the deep is the German ship Imperator, which arrived in America the other day.

What a chapter old Job could have talked about that ship if he had seen it!

Think of a ship with three wireless operators working night and day, ALWAYS ABLE TO TALK TO ONE SIDE OR THE OTHER OF THE OCEAN. Think of a ship with nine decks, seven for first-class passengers—a monstrosity almost as complicated as Dante's hell.

Think of a ship with six elevators running up and down, suites of twelve rooms, anchors that weigh more than twenty-five thousand pounds each, a ship with swimming tanks, greenhouses and a population equal to that of a small city.

Poor old "Behemoth," who impressed Job so deeply, would seem a very small thing compared to this modern Behemoth. The original Behemoth, who "drinketh up a river and hasteth not," could be tucked away in one of the coal bunkers of the Imperator, or burned up in one of the big furnaces and not noticed.

There are many wonderful things about that wonderful ship, with her five captains commanded by an admiral.

She is a great tribute to the power of the German people, a tribute to organization, a proof of the wonderful things that can be accomplished by men that are determined to excel.

But the best thing of all about this great ship is the motto written at her prow, "My field the world." That is a good motto, good for this ship that sails the ocean, good for the great philosopher, Bacon, when he said, "I have taken all knowledge for my province," and "nothing that affects man can be foreign to me."

It is a big motto, "My field the world." But not too big for a man who realizes that the world is man's property, his home and his garden, to be developed and owned by him, to be the firm ground from which he shall look out and study the real world, which is the infinite universe.

Every man worthy of the name should have in his mind that motto of the big ship, "My field the world," and interest himself in the world's doings, interest himself in the progress of the race, in its future and in its past, and determine to be a man whose field really IS the world, and not a mouse, whose field is the corner of some back yard.

A Shaken Confidence Must Be Restored

It will be a relief to the whole country to learn that the Diggs-Caminetti "white-slave" prosecutions in California are to be pressed with due diligence, despite the private pressure brought to bear on the Attorney General and others in Washington.

Indeed, such a course was inevitable the moment District Attorney John L. McNab, of the Northern District of California, made public his courageous letter of resignation to the President, thereby attracting public attention to a grave judicial scandal.

The expression of public opinion was both instant, widespread and practically unanimous. A flood of telegrams poured into the White House.

IT WILL TAKE MORE THAN AN ORDER FROM THE PRESIDENT to go ahead with all seemly speed with these cases, an order penned AFTER a storm of popular indignation had broken, TO RESTORE CONFIDENCE in the impartial workings of those courts of justice over which the Federal authorities have control and in those other officers of the Government who have shown such lax judgment on so serious an occasion.

Congress has the very urgent duty before it of not only establishing all the facts but also of FIXING THE RESPONSIBILITY AND THE BLAME.

:: THE OTHERS ::

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

ONE is the pride of the college,
Handsome and sunny and clever
Joking while gathering knowledge,
Slaving and worrying never.
Baseball and football and rowing,
Sanscrit and Latin and Greek—
Dazed by his wonderful showing,
All of the others stand meek.

One goes through life winning laurels,
Brilliant and able till death;
Proof against foes and their quarrels,
Crushing them all with a breath.
Much as a baby blows bubbles
One leaps along in the race,
Laughing at heartaches and troubles
All of the others must face.

This is a toast to the others,
Hewing their pathway through life—
All the less fortunate brothers
Comrades of sorrow and strife.
Standing and waiting and hoping,
Strangers to Fame and its pride,
Here's to the patiently groping!
Here's to the thousands that tried!

::: LETTERS FROM THE GEORGIAN'S READERS ::

COFFEE.

Editor The Georgian:

What is the matter with the pure food inspector? Is he asleep on his job, that so many brands of adulterated coffee are suffered to be sold to the poor? Ever so many of them have chicory; and in color give a beautiful nut-brown result, but to an inveterate drinker of coffee they are as lifeless as turnip soup.

Suppose the inspector thinks that if people know what they are buying, it is all right. But how about the boarder, when it is passed off on him for coffee? And the temptation is too great, these days of high-priced food to buy the cheaper article.

CAR SERVICE AND STORMS.

Editor The Georgian:

It seems to me the public has a just cause of complaint regarding the street car service which is given them in this city during thunderstorms. It has, during the past few years, become the custom of the Georgia Railway and Power Company to suspend service during even very mild thunderstorms, and with proper equipment this practice seems to be without reason or excuse.

So far as my observation goes, it is not done in any other first-class town, and no sufficient reason has ever been given for doing it in Atlanta. People need the street car service as much when there is a rainstorm accompanied by lightning as at other times.

Writes on

The Automobile

Everything Being Done to Make Automobiles Safe, He Says. They Have Done Wonders for American Roads.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

I WAS almost startled on seeing, in the current number of the magazine called Motor, a picture of an automobile furnished with the new French device of movable electric eyes!

Even when the auto's great glaring eyes are fixed in direction its resemblance at night to a demon of unimaginable swiftness and power is stunning, and one gets out of its way with panicky haste. But when it bears on each side of its head a glowing eye, which turns magically in all directions, searching out the fleeing pedestrian in his retreat by the fence or the hedge, and detecting every obstruction along the borders of its way, the verisimilitude is complete. Man has never yet made anything so thrillingly lifelike, but inspired with a life that seems more than human!

Everything Done for Safety.

Yet while, to the excited imagination, these movable mechanical eyes may increase the terror of the auto rushing through the night, they are, for all wanderers in the ways, all nomads of the night, a means and an assurance of greater safety. They proclaim, again, that the modern demon of the road is a kindly demon, who means no harm, although he speeds so swiftly, and who would not, willingly, hurt a hair of our heads. He is as desirous as are we who look upon him with fear, and jump at his croaking voice, to avoid all evil.

If those who still carp at the automobile, and nurse an antagonism to it, would consider what has been done, and what is still being done—as witness this latest device—to eliminate the peculiar dangers which its invention has introduced into the highways, they would find themselves taking a more philosophical view of things, and would cease their opposition to one of the greatest advances in locomotion that science has ever promoted. You have only to glance through the pages of the magazine I have mentioned in order to convince yourself that the inventors and manufacturers of auto vehicles hold nothing more dear than the question of safety; safety for those who ride and for those who only look upon the riders.

Put Bad Roads Out of Business.

It is the same with the roads themselves. Unthinking people sometimes blame the automobile for damaging the roads—as if most of the roads that we had before its arrival COULD be damaged! But, look at the other side of the affair. Only a few years ago every American traveling in Europe blushed at the thought of the painful contrast between the roads there and most of those that he was accustomed to at home. He could only console himself by the reflection that we were subduing a new continent, and required time to complete the work in good shape.

Then came the auto, and what has been the result? Within a few short years, solely by the stimulus that it has imparted, we have developed thousands upon thousands of miles of roadways that France herself might be proud of. This single invention has caused a leap of improvement that hundreds of years of ordinary progress would not have produced. The automobile has put the old, muddy, rutty, all but impassable roads of our fathers out of commission, and the whole country smiles with the improvement, and grows richer because of it.

Speaking of French roads, I read another interesting thing, which must be set down entirely to the credit of the automobile. We are now building better roads than they have in France, and the reason is because we have built them from the beginning with the needs of the auto in view. It has taught us how to build them. Many of the French roads are beginning to deteriorate. It is the automobile that has searched out and revealed their weak points. The growing use of auto-carriages of all kinds in the French army has brought a strain to bear upon the roads lying in the districts where the threat of invasion causes frequent military maneuvers in time of peace—a strain that was not foreseen when the roads were constructed—and some of them are proving unable to bear it.

Recognizes Their Value.

What will the French do? Will they abandon the army autos, or intermit the maneuvers? To do so would be to invite instant conquest of their country. No, they will reconstruct the roads, and increase the number of their auto cars. They know the inestimable value of the good demon that has come to revolutionize transportation on this planet, and the roads will have to be made durable enough to carry him on his civilizing and peace-promoting way; for the auto, in its manner, is as great a force for universal peace as is the strong battleship. Everything that links the world together makes for universal brotherhood, and the faster we travel the richer and more contented we become.

:: The Ionian Isles ::

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

IT was just 49 years ago that the Parliament of England with a never-to-be-forgotten magnanimity, resolved to return the Ionian Isles to their oldtime owners, the Greeks.

By the Treaty of Paris, in 1815, the high contracting parties, Great Britain, Russia, Austria and Prussia, agreed to place the isles under the exclusive protection of Great Britain. This agreement was reached not because it was desired by the others, but because it was demanded by Great Britain, the demand being backed by the British navy.

It was in these "Isles of Greece," Corfu, Zanta, Santa Maura, Ithaca and the rest, that modern Greek liberty had its birth, and thanks to England, it was there that it grew to the stately proportions of later years. Great Britain, through her protectorate, kept the islands safe from Turkish depredations, and in 1864 gave them to Greece.

On May 30 of that year the Lord High Commissioner of Great Britain handed over the archives to the Greek plenipotentiary, and on June 6 King George made his entry into Corfu.

Let it be remembered that this Corfu is none other than the ancient Coreyra—the little piece of earth that is responsible for the greatest calamity that ever overtook the human race. Coreyra brought on the Peloponnesian war between Sparta and Athens and their allies, the result of which was the ruin of Athens and the arrest of her wonderful civilization. Had it not been for that war the Athenian genius would have kept on with its development for we know not how long a period, and the gain to humanity would have been inconceivably great. From the cultural standpoint Athens was Greece. It was the home of the art, science, philosophy and eloquence, which made Greece immortal, and when Athens went down all that was not barbarism went down along with her.

Because Coreyra appealed to Sparta to help her fight Athens, and because, as a consquence of the fight, Athens was beaten and her empire practically wiped out, the harm was done to mankind that can never be estimated. It took the world eighteen hundred years to recover, even in part, that which was lost through the fatal Peloponnesian war.

FOUR MORE DROPPED BY CHIEF

Suspensions Continue in Growing Police Scandal as Negroes Tell Story.

With the suspension of four more policemen Saturday afternoon by Chief James L. Beavers, it was announced that the latest police scandal would be probed to its very bottom even though it involved the greater part of the force.

The men deprived of their uniforms and equipment and dismissed from the service Saturday pending the investigation of the story that they visited the notorious resort conducted in the rear of 127 Auburn Avenue by Ola Bradley, a negro woman, were J. P. Born, J. E. McDaniel, Mack C. Folds and J. J. Jackson.

Chief Beavers gave the formal order of suspension at 1 o'clock after he had received a report of an investigation made by Captain A. L. Poole. He said that no other policemen were being considered for immediate suspension, but that the investigation would be continued until every guilty person had been discovered.

Those suspended Friday on the charge of having visited and drunk liquor in the negro disorderly house at the rear of 127 Auburn Avenue were Policeman L. W. Evans and R. T. David and Call Officers C. H. Bailey and R. A. Wood.

The suspensions made Saturday came almost entirely as the result of a story told at police headquarters by Ola Bradley, the negro woman who conducts the notorious resort. She made a signed statement in which the names of Born, Folds and Jackson figured prominently.

She related that Born and Folds were in her place one Sunday morning about three months ago. The men became involved in an argument, and she recalled that one of the men called the other a liar. On this, she said, Folds made an effort to get his revolver.

Captain Poole, who is conducting the investigation into the scandal under the direction of Chief Beavers, found the negro woman who is alleged to have been the cause of the dispute. She bore out the statement of Ola Bradley and also of Claude Gray, who was arrested as a witness early Saturday morning.

Deny Woman's Charge.

The Bradley woman, in telling of the visits of Jackson and McDaniel to her place, said that last Monday she gave Jackson two bottles of beer to drink and that McDaniel urged Jackson not to drink it. All of the men deny they are guilty of wrongdoing and say that they were at the place only for the purpose of getting evidence. McDaniel says that he never saw Jackson drink.

Gray is said to have full knowledge of a disgraceful affair which took place in the resort two weeks ago when two policemen are alleged to have become involved in a quarrel. The officers, it is reported, would have come to blows had not Gray stepped in between them and separated them.

Gray will be closely questioned today in the expectation that he will give the Chief the names of a number of other policemen who have been in the habit of making visits there.

"I am going to give Gray a thorough grilling," said the Chief. "The whole truth is what I am after, regardless of how big a scandal is stirred up by the revelations. All of the men are going to get a fair hearing. If these reports are erroneous or falsified, they will have the opportunity to show it."

Wood's Defense.

Wood, who tendered his resignation Saturday morning, said that he and his partner, Bailey, had stopped in at the negro resort to see that everything was all right. He declared that neither of them drank intoxicants there and that when Moon looked in through the window Bailey was

Felder To Be Tried With Lanford, but No Date Is Set Yet

Attorney T. B. Felder and Chief Detective Newport A. Lanford will be tried at the same time in the State's case against them for criminal libel, although no definite plans have been made by the Solicitor as to the date for the trial or whether to transfer the cases to the City Court.

Solicitor Dorsey said he had not yet considered going to trial in the matter, and would not have an opportunity to do so for several days.

The report was current in court circles, however, that the two cases would be transferred to the City Court and probably be tried before the Frank trial.

Slit to Knee Skirt Barred in Louisville

LOUISVILLE, KY., June 28.—Policemen to-day were ordered to arrest any woman wearing a slit skirt that unduly displays her legs.

"A woman who has the nerve to wear a dress that allows her knees to show will not mind so small a matter as a police court trial," said Chief of Police Lindsey.

CREMATORY STRIFE IS ENDED

The crematory row ended Saturday. Mayor Woodward agreed to sign a slightly revised contract. His decision was the result of a conference with Assistant City Attorney W. D. Ellis, Jr., Alderman J. H. Harwell, Councilman A. R. Colcord and C. P. Goree, attorney, friends of Mayor Woodward. A special meeting of Council will be called for Tuesday afternoon to pass it.

The difference between Mayor Woodward and the Council was a point of honor. Council had, by resolution, accepted a proposal of the Destructor Company instead of adopting a contract in order that they might override his veto should he disapprove.

Now a formal contract will be passed in addition to the resolution, which, of course, will take precedence over the resolution. The essentials of the trade had been agreed to, and the only changes made in the recent contract submitted to the Mayor were the insertion of the word "complete" in one paragraph and the change of the word "be" to "the" in another paragraph.

The Destructor Company will be able to get $125,000, first money received from the city, as soon as the program is adopted. No further hitch is anticipated.

It has been announced the crematory will be completed within ten days, at which time all dump piles in the city will be abolished.

Elopers Held Pending White Slave Inquiry

"A happy reunion in the tower" was the promise Recorder Broyles ironically extended to W. T. Wiggins, a mail clerk, who nonchalantly admitted Saturday morning he permitted his wife to leave Jacksonville for Atlanta in company with another man.

Wiggins and Mrs. Rosa Hearn, also of Jacksonville, who testified her husband was dead, were bound over to the State courts by the Recorder on $500 bond each.

"You may have violated the white slave law, also," the Recorder said to Wiggins. The judge said he would have government agents investigate.

NUTTING ENTERS RACE.

Joseph F. Nutting, well-known real estate man, announces that he will be a candidate for Council from the Eighth Ward. Mr. Nutting is a former newspaper man with many friends who will be interested to know of his decision.

You've Been Craving

All these years to own a gold mine. It's not at all impossible. Right here in Atlanta there are many gold mines—some little, some big, some paying small returns, others their tens of thousands.

And the beauty about the Atlanta gold mines is you're not troubled to dig and blast and assay, but every foot of dirt yields a generous tribute.

Several large gold mines have been sold lately in the uptown sctions, and many smaller ones in different parts of the city.

Read to-day's Real Estate Ads in the Want "Ad" section, and pick out a gold mine. There's at least one for you.

TAX SYSTEM SCORED BY SLATON

Revision of Criminal and Other Laws Also Urged in Executive's Inaugural Address.

Drastic action toward the rejuvenation and correction of Georgia's laws, especially taxation and the Criminal Code, were recommendations which marked the inaugural address of John Marshall Slaton upon his induction into the gubernatorial office in the House of Representatives before the two bodies of the General Assembly and hundreds of visitors at noon Saturday.

The new Chief Executive drew out in sharp contrast the present system of appropriations and taxation and declared the system was wrong.

He brought up for bitter arraignment the lack of school funds, which he termed the lack of a proper foundation for future citizenship of the State. He advocated an inheritance tax, an increased occupation tax upon corporations and a general equalization of taxation throughout the Commonwealth.

Drain Not Checked, He Says.

He called attention to the loss of millions of dollars through abandonment of tax measures such as that on liquor, the dog tax and others, and declared that no substitute for this drain had been made. He recommended increases in taxation for the school fund and the pension fund, and in concluding pointed to a general tide of prosperity which he declared was to pass over Georgia.

In part, Governor Slaton said:

Our system is wrong. The Legislature can appropriate what it pleases, and the tax rate remains the same. The Legislator has made himself a favorite with his constituency by voting for every popular appropriations and nothing suffers but the State's credit.

Unless some check be made, an increase of revenue will be of no avail in preventing the financial embarrassment of the State. Under the enthusiasm of the moment one appropriation bill may exhaust it.

More than four-fifths of the States of the Union derive revenue from what is known as an inheritance tax. I am informed that this tax is the subject of least complaint.

This form of tax has been approved by the highest authorities and is one of the easiest borne and subject to fewer hardships than any other. The inheritance tax is to some extent a corrective.

Corporation Taxation.

Prior to the year 1905, many efforts were made to collect an occupation tax from corporations. Governor Terrell, in his message of the year 1905, recommended a tentative privilege tax based on capital stock of $100,000 per year on corporations having a capital of $1,000,000, or over. He anticipated from this source more than $100,000 a year, and thought that such sum could reasonably be expected without a hardship. The State, however, has not received one-half this sum, and during the year 1913 the estimated revenue from this source is $48,000.

I recommend that the maximum occupation tax on corporations having $1,000,000 capital and over be $200 per annum, and the tax on corporations of less capital be adjusted accordingly.

Equalization of taxes, either through the enforcement of present laws, or new corrections, so that each may bear his proportionate burden, would not mean the increase of taxes upon any one now performing his duty, but would rather mean the lightening of his unfair portion of the load. I commend this subject to your attention.

Bonded Debt To Be Refunded.

An additional reason for establishing and maintaining the State's finances on a sound basis is the necessity of making provision for more than one-half of the entire bonded debt of the State, maturing in 1915. This is an imperative duty resting on this Legislature.

No sinking fund was provided by law to retire the bonds aggregating $3,679,000 which are due in 1915. The entire State's debt is $6,452,500, which does not include the obligations to the University, amounting to $291,500, and the landscrip fund of $90,000.

All the debt of $6,452,500 is provided for, or will be provided for, by the sinking fund required to be raised annually until the debt is paid off, except the

NEW YORK, June 28.—Colonel George Goethals has returned to Panama. He will remain on the Isthmus until the first ship has passed through the canal. The Colonel laughed at the idea some aviators have they can destroy the Gatun lock by dropping powerful bombs from aircraft.

$3,679,000 which falls due in May and July, 1915.

If refunding bonds were issued in 1915, making the first $100,000 fall due in 1935, then the sinking fund could be made to run continuously and retire each, year, until paid, $100,000 of this series of 1915 refunding bonds.

This plan would seem advisable in order to relieve the treasury and the people of the increased burden at this time, unless financial conditions at the time of the sale of the bonds should demand that their redemption begin at an earlier period in order to effectuate their more satisfactory disposition.

Leading bond men in financial centers have stated that if they were certified by some responsible trust company, thus assuring their genuineness, and guarding against their being counterfeited, and if their validity were approved by attorneys who are specialists in this line, the expense would be more than repaid in the price that could be obtained. Certainly no safer investment can be afforded than these bonds.

I recommend that through your appropriate committees you consider at once the matter of refunding the State's indebtedness above referred to.

Registration of Voters.

We believe the present registration law should be so amended that when a voter has once proven his qualification by registering, and being enrolled, he shall remain a registered voter unless disqualified for cause due to himself.

The foregoing extract from the last platform upon which I was elected, expresses a principle which deserves universal acceptance. It contemplates no change of the constitution which provides for the qualification of the voter.

The farmers of a neighborhood have duly registered, but the succeeding year when busy with their crops, they can not send their taxes to the collector by some neighbor going to town, except on penalty of being disfranchised.

The traveling men who have registered one year can not send their remittance the next year to the proper officer, and so it is with men in every calling who on duties and who have overlooked the last day of registration, or have been prevented from registering anew by compelling reasons. The professional politician never forgets it.

I recommend that the present registration law be amended to correct the injustice indicated. It would always be provided that the voter must have paid his taxes and not subjected himself to any of the disqualifications provided by law.

Highways.

It is needless to impress upon you the importance of our highways. Their value is an asset of the entire State. An intelligent Highway Commission, or Commissioner, clothed with proper authority, could be the means of untold benefit in suggesting proper methods of building the road adapted to the locality, or in solving the problems of engineering which might arise in various sections.

I call your attention to the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the lease of which terminates in 1919. No one, I apprehend, would or should consider its sale, but the problem of its disposition should be considered by a commission with directions to report its recommendations and its reasons therefor.

To delay this matter will mean to put the State at the inexcusable disadvantage of unpreparedness when the time arrives for imperative action.

The Criminal Code.

One of the fundamental purposes of government is the protection of life and safety of the citizen. If the rules of evidence are so shaped as to prevent the discovery of the truth, and if the State is deprived of the means of sifting the facts, the judges and juries are not to be blamed if crimes are allowed to go unpunished.

It is an anomaly that a defendant should take the stand, make any statement that he sees fit or that his shrewd lawyer has prepared, and being immune from cross-examination, demand that the judge shall charge the jury that they may accept his unsworn statement in preference to all the evidence in the case.

His carefully written statement may contain all manner of prejudiced assertions which constitute no defense, but the State is not allowed to disprove or to question them. The jury is by law instructed that they may consider them. Without introducing evidence, in order that his attorney may make the last speech, he declares that he can prove assertions by various witnesses, often disreputable men, and challenges the Solicitor General to introduce them. This can not be done because the State can not vouch for their character.

I, therefore, recommend that a law be passed abolishing the defendant's statement, and providing in its place that he be sworn as a witness, if he desires, but his failure to be so sworn be not subject to adverse comment by prosecuting counsel. This is in accordance with current Federal and State law.

The legislation in Georgia against carrying concealed weapons bar in recent years been conspicuous. It has been suggested by the law of self-preservation. Daily we read of men who have shot others, and have been acquitted on the old statement that the deceased threw his hand on his hip pocket, and the defendant shot in fear of his life. When searched, the dead man was found generally unarmed.

If the carrying of concealed weapons were made a felony, subject to be reduced to a misdemeanor by either judge or jury, the deterrent effect of such a law would be the saving of many a life. I earnestly recommend to you the consideration of this question.

Banking Laws.

The banks of a State perform public functions, and as such are properly subjected to governmental supervision. The bankers of the State, with the desire of maintaining a high standard of responsibility and of affording guarantees against improvident management, that imperil the money of the people, recommend legislation looking to the accomplishment of these objects. I commend this subject as one worthy of your serious consideration.

My predecessors have recommended the creation of the position of State Auditor, and in this recommendation I heartily concur. His services could be utilized in checking the cost of new buildings for which requests may be made by the various institutions. Those who have served on the appropriations committees are aware of the inadequate facilities of the State in arriving at the amount of the necessary expenditures.

The Constitution.

The Constitution is the expression of the supreme law of the land. It can only be changed by the people speaking in their sovereign capacity. In order that they may vote intelligently on any proposition it is essential that they understand it. I recommend that in proposing Constitutional amendments, you plainly indicate the proposition to the voter in such language that he may understand the meaning of the question submitted.

My predecessor has called attention to the fact that some of the agricultural schools are well attended, while others receive little patronage, whether due to the matter of location or lack of interest, or from what cause, I am unable to say. Each obtains the same appropriation from the State for maintenance. I recommend that you investigate their condition, and apply the proper remedies.

Slaton is Inaugurated With Simple Ceremonies.

With ceremonies that gained in strength and impressiveness through their very simplicity, John Marshall Slaton to-day became Governor of the State of Georgia, succeeding Joseph M. Brown. The oath of office was administered by Judge William H. Fish, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, at 12:02 o'clock.

Governor Slaton was inducted into office in the presence of a brilliant assemblage of Georgia men and women, including his own and the retiring Governor's family and intimate friends, members of the State Legislature and prominent jurists. For the first time in the history of the State the United States was represented by Judge William T. Newman and Judge Don A. Pardee, of the Federal Court. They occupied seats directly in front of the Speaker's stand.

Galleries and the floor of the House were filled with spectators. By 10 o'clock virtually every seat in the visitors' gallery was taken and room had been provided for a large number on the floor. In the corridors another crowd, unable to gain entrance into the hall, waited patiently for a glimpse of the new executive.

Joint Session Held.

Neither the House nor the Senate transacted any business, convening at 11 o'clock and immediately taking a recess. At 11:45 o'clock both Houses again convened, and the Senate at once adjourned and marched to the House, where members took seats in a semi-circle about the speaker's stand. In the front row of seats about the speakers' stand sat the intimate friends and relatives of Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton. Twenty-eight chairs had been reserved for members of Governor Slaton's family and eight for the family and friends of Governor Brown.

In Governor Slaton's party were Major William F. Slaton, father of the Governor; Mrs. John M. Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Slaton, Justice and Mrs. S. C. Atkinson, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Waldo, Mrs. W. H. Blanchard, Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant, John M. Slaton, Jr., W. F. Slaton, Jr., Slaton Waldo, Albie Waldo, William D. Grant, Miss Margaret Grant, James Jackson Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Phillips and Miss Robinson. In Governor Brown's party were Mrs. Joseph M. Brown, Miss Cora Brown, Charles Brown, Miss Sally Brown, Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Connolly, Mrs. Frances Connolly and Thomas W. Connolly.

Governor Brown Receives Friends.

Governor Brown arrived at the Capitol shortly before 11 o'clock, and went at once into his private office, where he received a number of friends and visitors.

Governor-elect Slaton drove up in his automobile to the Washington Street entrance of the Capitol, accompanied by Mrs. Slaton and his father, Major William F. Slaton. They proceeded to the reception room of the Governor's office, where the inaugural procession formed.

Promptly at 11:45 o'clock Speaker Burwell called the House to order, and immediately thereafter members of the Senate arrived.

The inaugural procession moved from the Governor's office on the first floor. The procession was led by Governor-elect Slaton and Governor Brown. After them came ex-Governor Henry D. McDaniel, and then followed the Justices of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals, the Federal Judges, the State House officers, the members of the joint legislative committee on inauguration, and the immediate families of Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton.

Governor Slaton Presented.

Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton took their places on the Speaker's stand, the first standing to the left of Senator Randolph Anderson and Speaker Burwell and the latter to the right. Rev. James B. Robbins, of the Trinity Methodist Church, opened the ceremonies with prayer, in which he invoked Divine aid for Governor Slaton in the conduct of the agairs of the State.

Randolph Anderson, President of the Senate, presented Governor-elect Slaton to the people of Georgia and the Legislature, and immediately thereafter Justice Fish administered the oath of office. In a speech expressing great confidence in the ability of the incoming executive, Governor Brown presented Governor Slaton with the Great Seal of the State of Georgia.

After the inaugural ceremonies Governor and Mrs. Slaton and ex-Governor and Mrs. Brown lunched at the Executive Mansion. Ex-Governor and Mrs. Brown retired to their farm near Marietta, and Governor Slaton took possession of the mansion in the afternoon.

That was the weather situation in Atlanta at 2 o'clock Saturday. Forecaster C. F. VonHerrmann, of the United States Weather Bureau, placed the thermometer on the most exposed point of the Empire Building's roof, where all the breezes played against it, but the mercury would not down. On the contrary, it continued to ascend, and the forecaster said he would not be surprised to see the 94 mark reached during the afternoon.

"Continued warm, with possibly thundershowers in the afternoon," is the forecast for Sunday.

Overcoats Worn at Duluth.

DULUTH, MINN., June 28.—Steam heat was turned on in downtown buildings and apartment houses today, the coldest June 28 in years. Thermometers registered 42 degrees. Overcoats were worn.

Damage $20,000,000 to Crops.

CHICAGO, June 28.—The crops throughout the Middle West suffered from the terrific heat. The oats crop has been almost entirely killed in Illinois, Missouri, Indiana and Iowa, according to reports received to-day at the offices of large grain dealers.

The loss will approach $20,000,000, they said.

RIGID PROBE TO BE PUSHED BY BEAVERS

More Suspensions of Policemen as Department Scandal Continues to Grow.

drinking a glass of ice water the negro woman had poured for him.

"The other two officers, David and Evans, who have been suspended with us, were not even in the house," said Wood. "The injustice of it lies in the fact that the police department has taken the word of this one man, Moon, against all four of us, in suspending us for drinking in the place."

On a charge of supected perjury, Chief Beavers indefinitely suspended Evans immediately following the suspension of Wood, Bailey and David. The patrolman was called before the Chief and stripped of his badge, braid and equipment. The case will be thrashed out by the Police Commission.

The evidence in Recorder's Court was that policemen had frequented the negro resort daily and uniformed men had often been seen entering it in broad daylight. One witness told of a midnight brawl participated in by four officers. The Chief said that he had obtained the names of the frequenters of the place.

He began Saturday morning inquiring into a report of police protection of the Auburn Avenue resort and others of its kind. A number of patrolmen were called before him the first thing after he reported to his office and he prepared to continue his inquiry through the day.

Claim They Got Evidence.

Plainclothesman W. T. "Moon" admitted to the Recorder that he had drunk whisky at the Auburn Avenue resort with the negress operator. He said, however, that he had only done so to secure evidence. The Recorder took him to task for not having reported the incident earlier.

A negro woman inmate of the house said Moon had been intimate with a girl there. Moon made an emphatic denial of the charge, but said he had been a frequent visitor to the place in the interest of getting evidence against it. Policeman Adams testified to the same thing.

Patrolman Wood branded Moon as a deliberate liar and said that he would prove perjury against him. He also said he would prove Adams had perjured himself, after which he would introduce evidence that would merit the immediate discharge of the two men.

Bailey said that the two men, Wood and Adams, had testified against him in a spirit of revenge because several months ago he arrested Adams for fighting.

Beavers to Investigate.

Sergeant J. H. Barfield, who raided the Auburn Avenue place Friday, told the court that on a previous visit to the place he had seen a patrolman in the hall. The man told him he was looking for a girl who was wanted at headquarters. Chief Beavers will inquire into this incident during the day.

Police Commissioner B. Lee Smith was a prominent figure in the police inquiry Friday. He was closeted with the Chief for several minutes before he suspended the first three men, and later in the day he made a personal investigation of the place on Auburn Avenue. He said that unquestionably the resort had been receiving police protection from a subordinate source.

The next meeting of the Police Commission is July 8, and unless there is a called meeting the charges will not be officially aired before that time.

The officers under suspicion were confident they would be completely exonerated when the Police Board took action, and have retained Attorney R. R. Jackson to represent them. Jackson said that his sympathies were wholly with the dismissed men and he denounced the system where officers of the same rank were assigned the duty of spying on their brother officers.

Policeman L. J. Milam was questioned by Captain Terry late Friday night. He was a partner with Wood, the suspended officer. He was questioned regarding Wood's conduct and reported visits to the place.

Chief Beavers said that his inquiry into the reports of misconduct against his policemen would be extensive and that it would not stop until the department had been purged of every man found guilty of an act unbecoming a policeman.

King Would Give Chief Power to "Fire" Offenders.

Chief of Police Beavers will have power to discharge officers from the department if a resolution to be introduced by Commissioner A. R. King is adopted by the Police Board at its meeting Tuesday, July 8.

"There is not another department of the city government that the head does not have this privilege, and the Chief of Police, above all others, should have the power to discharge an officer when he violates a rule of the department or is found wanting in the qualifications for the place, said Commissioner King.

"The action of the Chief in suspending the men who had visited a questionable house shows it is his intention to rid the department of all that class of policemen who use their office to enter places when not required to do so.

Board Trusts Chief.

"The Chief heard the rumor that policemen were visiting the place in the rear of 127 Auburn Avenue soon after his return from Washington City, and immediately started an investigation, detailing Plainclothes Officers Moon and Adams on the job.

"These men were selected by the Chief not because of any 'personal spite' they might have had against the officers turned up, but because they were, in his opinion, qualified to cope with the case and bring the guilty parties to justice. How well they succeeded the action of the Chief and the conviction of the women in the case in the Recorder's Court shows.

"The Board of Police Commissioners exercises great care in the selection of officers, but are never sure of the men until they are tested. It is up to the Chief and his assistants to do the testing. The Police Board will abide by their decision. The board has the utmost confidence in Chief Beavers and his assistants. They have been proved loyal and true.

Can Appeal to Board.

"In any case where an officer who has been discharged by the Chief feels that he has not been given a square deal he can appeal to the board. The Chief will report to the board all cases of suspension or discharge, and the board either will confirm or reverse him—mostly confirm.

"The Chief has started this investigation and he will carry it to a successful conclusion. It is the duty of citizens who have the welfare of Atlanta at heart to give him every assistance."

MRS. KEEFER AGAIN FORGIVES HUSBAND

Mrs. David Keefer, who tells of her matrimonial mix-ups.

The case against David H. Keefer for disorderly conduct was postponed Saturday afternoon while the police sought witnesses of the affair with his son, Jack Macy, among the guests of the Piedmont driving club Friday night.

Mrs. Keefer swore out a peace warrant in Justice Giradeau's court Saturday afternoon, asking that her husband be put under a peace bond.

"I don't want a divorce; I want to remain Mrs. Keefer. I shall let my husband go in peace," declared Mrs. David H. Keefer, of 80 East Fourteenth Street, who has sworn out a warrant against the well-known broker, charging him with assault and battery on her son, Jack Macy, Friday night.

"I did fly at his throat last night—to kill him," declared Mrs. Keefer Saturday morning with vehemence, "but he warded off the blow and struck me a full blow on the breast. I told him, too, to leave town immediately or I would fill him with bullet holes—but I shall not. I shall sit still in the boat; I shall let him go in peace, for all I want is protection. And that I will have."

Broker and Wife Clash.

The latest sensation in connection with the stormy marital relations of Mr. and Mrs. Keefer, which have furnished "live copy" for papers all the way from Georgia to New York and back again, occurred at a club Friday night about 10 o'clock, when Keefer called with a deputy sheriff to serve papers on his stepson, Jack Macy, to gain possession of a $5,000 automobile.

In the trouble which followed Keefer and young Macy exchanged blows which left marks. Mr. and Mrs. Keefer also clashed. Macy said Saturday morning Keefer struck him first while Deputy Sheriff Miner was attempting to handcuff him. Keefer denies this.

But Mrs. Keefer's own story, as she told it to a reporter for The Georgian Saturday morning, is as follows:

"I returned to New York from Paris in the early part of 1906," said she, "to find there, in my father's home, my old friend and future husband, David H. Keefer.

"He was very ill, and, as I looked there upon his frail form, somehow or other I fancied I saw my former husband and it gave me new courage, new life, for I myself had come from Paris, as I thought, to die.

"He had been a dear friend to me and to Mr. Macy while we were living in Thomasville, Ga., and following Mr. Macy's death he had corresponded with me across the waters.

"And oh those beautiful letters which he wrote to me. How could I think otherwise than that he really loved me from the very depths of his heart?

"A man surely loves a woman if he corresponds in such a way all the way across the waters, don't you think?

Tells About "Real Man."

"So we were married shortly after my return to my father's home. Three days after our wedding I beheld the real man—he actually told me that he believed woman was created only for downfall at the hands of man.

"From that time on he was a beast and more than once he would have allowed me to starve to death if he could. Then came the divorce proceedings in New York State, in which there was much legal juggling at my expense—and that I will not countenance whatever else happens. The scene shifted from New York to Georgia, where I won in the preliminary skirmish—and then he, my recreant husband, came to me to beg forgiveness.

"I forgave—I am always willing to do that—but soon the same old scenes were being enacted. Mr. Keefer, as brilliant as he was and is, was always fond of the dazzle, the things purely of this life.

"He was found in a hotel with another woman. He came nome drunk repeatedly. Things went from bad to worse; and finally we separated. He went away. I remained in New York."

Y. M. C. A. Suspends Operation for Year

After twenty-seven years' continued operation the Y. M. C. A. will go out of business July 1, pending the completion of the new association building a year hence. The suspension is necessitated by an agreement to turn the Y. M. C. A. building, at Pryor Street and Auburn Avenue, over to its new proprietors, the Chamber of Commerce.

While the work of the association will be suspended, the organization will be kept intact. Temporary headquarters will be established in the Baptist Tabernacle.

STATE SECURES NEW PHAGAN EVIDENCE

Frank A. Hooper, associated with Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution of Leo M. Frank on the charge of strangling Mary Phagan, admitted Saturday that Jim Conley, negro sweeper at the National Pencil Factory, had made important additions to the story of his part in the murder mystery and had told of circumstances on the day of the crime which he had revealed in none of his previous statements.

A persistent report that Conley had made the startling admission that he had seen Mary Phagan enter the factory on the day she was slain arose at the time the negro was questioned more than an hour by Solicitor Dorsey early in the week, and this rumor was heightened after Attorney Hooper's interview with the negro Friday.

In all of his statements to the detectives Conley denied he saw the girl at all on the day of the crime until he was horrified by the sight of her dead body lying in the rear of the second floor where he was directed by Leo Frank. Solicitor Dorsey is believed to have wrung the statement from him that he did see Mary Phagan when she came in the door of the factory and went to the second floor to Frank's office.

Hooper Mum on Topic.

Mr. Hooper refused either to affirm or deny this report, declaring that his connection with the case was so recent that he would not be warranted in making any definite statement for publication in reference to the evidence in the possession of the prosecution.

His attention was called to the fact that while in all of the published statements of Conley the negro denied seeing Mary Phagan go into the factory, no one connected with the prosecution could now be induced to say that he still stuck to this particular and puzzling feature of his story. Mr. Hooper, however, would make no comment on the circumstance.

He contented himself with the general assertion that the State has a big stack of evidence of which the defense is in entire ignorance and of which they will remain in ignorance until it is presented when Frank is placed on trial for his life.

"I went to the police station yesterday merely for the purpose of having Conley rehearse his story to me," said Mr. Hooper. "It is true that he told me of a number of circumstances of which I had been in ignorance before, circumstances which have a most important bearing on the case. He made additions to his story which, while they were along the same general line as his last affidavit, gave a detail that assisted me remarkably in getting a much clearer idea of the events as they happened on that day.

Will Be Revealed at Trial.

"I can not tell what they were. They will be revealed when the trial is in actual progress. Mr. Dorsey has guarded his evidence carefully and has refrained from trying his case in the papers. If it were not presumptuous for me to step in and give this evidence away to the public and to the defense it would at least be most unwise.

MRS. STETSON DECLARES MRS. EDDY, DIVINE, STILL RULES SCIENTIST CHURCH

NEW YORK, June 28.—In a remarkable statement to-day Mrs. Augusta Stetson, founder of the first Christian Science church in this city, denied she is seeking to succeed Mrs. Baker G. Eddy, and declared that Mrs. Eddy, like Jesus Christ, did not die as other mortals die, but passed into a spiritual life and still rules as the head of the universal church.

Mrs. Stetson claims to be the spiritual head of the branch church, but says Mrs. Eddy is rising to a final demonstration of her teachings that there is no death.

The statement follows the recent publication of a book by Mrs. Stetson, called "Reminiscences, Sermons and Correspondence," which opponents of Mrs. Stetson say will pave the way for a formal declaration of leadership.

Mrs. Stetson, who was excommunicated from the Christian Science Church because of a dispute over local leadership, said:

"My relations with the church are the same as they have always been since I became a student of Mrs. Eddy. I began working in Christian Science from both a material and spiritual foundation, and continued to demonstrate the power of spirituality over material sense. Step by step, I followed Christ Jesus and Mary Baker Eddy until I had demonstrated up to the point of emergence from a material organization, when I accepted the inevitable, the request of our leader, to begin to build on a wholly spiritual foundation, than which there is no other.'

Acknowledges Eddy Leadership.

"Throughout the columns of my book I positively state that Mrs. Eddy is the head of her church, which means the entire body comprising the members of the mother or universal church. Mrs. Eddy has not died, but is rising to a final demonstration of her teachings that 'all is life; there is no death,' and is, as she has been, the spiritual head of the universal church.

"I never have ceased to follow the impersonal ideal once seemingly embodied in flesh. I am steadfast in my convictions that I am the spiritual head of the branch church which she organized and over which she placed me as spiritual head. I am responsible to God and my leader for defending my position.

"I now am awaiting the final victory of truth and love over error and hate. I shall never be separated from my teacher and leader, Mrs. Eddy, nor from my students who comprehend divine metaphysics. My church will stand as a 'light upon the hill,' known and acknowledged by all men as a demonstration of my teaching of Christian Science as taught me by Mary Baker Eddy. The hour has struck. The night has passed. The day dawns. Victory at last rests on the side of Christian Science."

Mrs. Stetson explained this to mean the world will soon realize the divinity of Mrs. Eddy.

Willing to Take Up Rule.

"I was ready and willing to follow my leader, Mrs. Eddy, at her request, and continue to demonstrate at any cost to me the principles of Christian Science, or divine metaphysics, which for many years I had demonstrated in a degree. I am continuing in the church the structure of truth and love and am rising in spiritual power over remaining undestroyed material sense and material organization.

"My spiritual ego consciousness is a member of the body of God, therefore a member of the real church, the house (consciousness) not made with hands, eternal in the one mind.

"Those who have not risen out of material organization and who require personal association and who are not a law unto themselves, but require the help of these a step higher on the ladder of spiritual progress, should remain in the material organization until compelled by the law of truth to advance."

DEATH FROM CHALK POISONING OF CHILD STIRS SCHOOL HEADS

Julia Davenport, one of the friends of Mary Tribble.

Classmates covered grave of girl with flowers.

Though the home is dark with sorrow, and the death of the litle girl has left a void that can never be filled, the parents and friends of little Mary Tribble, 7-year-old victim of colored crayon, find a measure of comfort to-day in the thought that her fate has driven home with terrible earnestness a lesson that will be of incalculable benefit to hundreds of other school children.

The death of the child is to be the price of increased vigilance by the teachers of scores of Atlanta schools in watching over their young charges, and greater care by the pupils.

Many of the teachers of the Atlanta schools have already begun to formulate plans and rules that will minimize the danger to the children in handling colored chalk, and other objects likely to contain poison.

The funeral of the little girl Friday was one of the saddest ever held in East Atlanta. A company of Mary's little friends members of her school and Sunday school classes, gathered at the East Side Baptist Tabernacle to pay a last tribute of love.

They brought great bunches of wild flowers, plucked with their own hands in the nearby woods where Mary had romped with them, and placed them on her coffin. As the funeral procession entered the church, the little boys and girls lined up on either side of the door, and the body of the little girl was carried slowly between the lines of those she loved and who loved her.

STATE BOARD AID FOR MARRIAGE BILL ASKED

One Member of Health Department Already Has Indorsed Hixon Measure.

Efforts to obtain from the State Board of Health an endorsement of the "pure marriage" bill, introduced into the Senate by Senator J. T. Hixon, will be made by friends of the measure, according to an announcement made by Senator Hixon Saturday morning. One physician employed in the offices of the Board of Health already has sought out Senator Hixon and assured him he would lend his personal support to the measure.

Senator Hixon said the work of bringing the attention of the Board of Health to the bill probably would be under the direction of Dr. B. L. Emory, of Villa Rica, Ga., author of the bill, and at whose request it was introduced by Senator Hixon.

Dr. Emory, it is said, personally will present the bill to the Board of Health and ask co-operation in obtaining its passage. The bill was endorsed by the Carroll County Medical Society before it was brought to Atlanta. Senator Hixon is using this written endorsement of the measure as a lever to swing votes for it.

Expects Bill to Get Attention.

Senator Hixon is confident his bill will be taken seriously and that it will receive the careful consideration of the Senate. It raises the marriage age limit in Georgia from 14 to 16 in the case of the woman, and forbids any man marrying who is less than 18 years of age.

By far the most important features of the bill, in the opinion of Senator Hixon and its friends, are the provisions prohibiting the granting of marriage licenses to persons who are afflicted with tuberculosis or other chronic and contagious diseases, and to persons who are habitual drunkards or addicted to the drug habit.

Will Help Prevent Disease.

Senator Hixon is anxious to see his marriage bill become a law. He declares the passage of such a bill will do more to stamp out disease than all other kinds of legislation that might be passed.

"Several of the most progressive States in the Union," Senator Hixon declared, "have laws similar to this bill, and they have worked wonderfully well.

"I expect to live to see the time when such a law will be on the statute books of every State, and when that time comes there will be fewer lunatics and less contagious and hereditary diseases than now."

GEORGIANS GO TO GETTYSBURG REUNION

First Platoon Off Under General A. J. West---Six Hundred to Attend From State.

Headed by General A. J. West, commissioner from Georgia, the First Battalion of Confederate Veterans from Atlanta and the State-at-large left at 11 o'clock Saturday morning for Gettysburg and the national reunion of the blue and the gray on July 1, 2 and 3, fifty years after the battle.

Atlanta, with 75 Confederates and the State of Georgia, with 600, will be well represented in comparison with other States. Through the efforts of General West, the State has obtained a favorite camping ground fronting Confederate Avenue, the main thoroughfare of the reunion city. Situations at this vantage point were sought by every camp.

The first preliminary reunion between the Union and Confederate veterans took place in Atlanta Saturday morning, when the ticket sale started at the Southern Railway office. The participants were a Mr. Black, a Union veteran, and F. L. Hudgins, commander of Camp C. A. Evans, Confederate veterans of Decatur. Seeing Mr. Hudgins and other wearers of the gray buying tickets to Gettysburg, Mr. Black "butted in" and said "Good morning, boys. My name is Black. I was on the other side, but it's all over now and I'm with you."

Prominent Veterans Go.

Among the prominent Atlanta veterans who left on the morning train were General A. J. West, Judge George Hillyer, railroad commissioner; Colonel John W. Lindsey, prison commissioner; Captain J. W. English, president of the Fourth National Bank; J. C. Huff and A. A. Nolan.

Commander F. L. Hudgins and Vice Commanders I. N. Nash and W. H. Mitchell made up the Decatur delegation.

Other Georgia veterans who left from Atlanta on the first train were W. F. Gay, of Newborn, a member of Jefferson Lamar Camp No. 305, of Covington; J. N. Mitchell, Canton; Judge J. F. C. Williams, ordinary of Harris County; Sam Moore, A. F. Truett and J. T. Forester, Hamilton.

Many Carry Wounds.

Many veterans will take to the reunion wounds or other souvenirs connected with the battle or other Civil War events. General West will take the greatest object of interest to be seen at the reunion. It is a Confederate half-dollar, one of four which were coined before the dies were broken. It is valued at $10,000 and was presented to General West by Attorney David H. Keefer.

F. L. Hudgins and I. N. Nash, of Decatur, both were wounded at Gettysburg. Nash lost his left arm and Hudgins was shot through the body. Hudgins took along a frying pan he captured at the Battle of the Wilderness May 6, 1864, when it was filled with salt pork placed there by some combatant who didn't have time to remain and eat.

W. H. Mitchell, the other Decatur veteran, did not participate in the battle of Gettysburg. He tried three times to get here, but on each occasion was wounded in a preliminary battle on the other side of the Potomac. He confessed this morning he didn't know whether he was lucky or unlucky.

Gettysburg Begins to Fill With Veterans.

It is expected to reach its height by to-morrow night. Gallantly the little borough of 4,000 has tackled the proposition of caring for its guests, but already it is beginning to feel the stress.

Army officers, watching the multitude grow, to-day sized up the camp and the preparations, practically completed, and said it was the biggest thing of its kind they had ever seen.

To add to the difficulties and dangers of a situation hazardous under any circumstances, the weather is almost unbearable. With a sun blazing savagely the humidity is so high that every movement is productive of exhaustion. There have been several cases of heat exhaustion.

Considerable indignation has been manifested by army officers and by Lieutenant Colonel Lewis E. Beitler, secretary of the Pennsylvania commission, over the widely published reports that no flags but the Stars and Stripes would be permitted in the camp. No such order ever was issued either by the War Department or the commission. As a matter of fact, several houses in the town are flying the Stars and Bars.

Five troops of State police have been mobilized here and this morning the policing of the town was turned over to them.

WILSON APPROVES U. P. DISSOLUTION

Plan for Dissolving Great Merger Probably Will Be Made Public Monday.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—A complete agreement on the Union Pacific dissolution plan has been approved by President Wilson. G. P. Todd, of the Department of Justice, will leave for St. Paul to-night to present the plan to the Federal Court.

Details of the dissolution probably will be made public Monday.

Attorney General McReynolds did not deny that it contains a proposition whereby the $126,000,000 of Southern Pacific stock held by the Union Pacific will be disposed of—$38,000,00 0to the Pennsylvania Railway for its holdings in the Baltimore and Ohio Railway and $88,000,000 to be disposed of by a trustee by private sale.

It is understood that the action of the Department of Justice in asking the court to leave a loophole for the filing of possible objection in the details of the Union Pacific plan was merely to leave the way open for the Government in the future to offer suggestions, if occasion seems to warrant.

In other words, it is decided that there shall not be snap judgment in final enforcement of the plan.

A., B. & A. Strikes Securities Snag

Receivers of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad have been unable to make arrangements to retire the $4,700,000 of 5 per cent receivers' certificates which fall due Tuesday, July 1.

It is believed the certificates will be made to bear 6 per cent from maturity until paid, which may be for some time, in view of the condition of the money market.

H. M. Atkinson and E. T. Lamb left Atlanta early in the week for New York, where they now are endeavoring to arrange for refunding the securities, which in effect are notes made one year ago.

In the absence of these men, representing respectively majority and minority bondholders, no one in the A., B. and A. offices here was able to say just what progress has been made.

The notes in question were sold to retire an issue of $3,250,000 receivers' obligations and equipment trusts, and to provide for certain improvements.

The road went into the hands of a receiver January 2, 1909.

THOUSAND SLAIN BY MEXICAN REBELS

MEXICO CITY, June 28.—One thousand soldiers and civilians were slaughtered by rebels when the city of Durango, capital of the State of the same name, fell into the insurgents' hands, according to word received here to-day from that city. Many of the victims were members of prominent families.

Men and women were tortured to death when they did not produce wealth at the bidding of the rebels.

Fighting between federals and insurgents is going on at Uruapam in the State of Michocan. Cuquio, in the State of Jalisco, was taken by rebels yesterday and the garrison put to the sword.

Rebels Advance on Juarez; Fight Near.

EL PASO, TEXAS, June 28.—Pancho Villa, Mexican rebel leader, who has announced his intention of taking Juarez and executing General Salazar, commander of the garrison, in the bull ring, established outposts within three miles of the town.

Ortega, who has 500 men, may cooperate with Villa. If Juarez falls, it will remove the most important Mexican port of entry on the United States border from Huerta and may result in the downfall of the Huerta government.

Nat Goodwin Must Not Eat at Own Cafe

LOS ANGELES, June 28.—Others may dine at the Cafe Goodwin, but not Nat Goodwin, with carte blanche all the way down the menu from caviar to camembert, may not. The genial host found himself in a new role when he sat down in his own cafe. Dining became so inexpensive that it seemed unreasonable not to dine often and well.

The result was that Mr. Goodwin, a few days ago, found himself ill and called a doctor. The doctor told him that he had been too good a patron of the Cafe Goodwin and must not think it his duty to test the entire menu.

Says He Produces Fuel From Water

PHILADELPHIA, June 28.—Through the invention of a device in which water is used as fuel, it is claimed that Henry Clay Wade, a Philadelphia inventor, may revolutionize the production of artificial heat.

The Wade process decomposes water into the gases hydrogen and oxygen, which are combined with carbon and burned so that the heat produced by the combustion of the oil is produced three-fold.

Dr. Percy Starnes To Leave Atlanta

Dr. Percy J. Starnes, who for three years has been city organist in Atlanta, resigned Saturday, effective August 1. Dr. Starnes explained that the Atlanta Music Festival Association will be without funds after that date and he did not care to ask for public subscriptions.

15,000 Coal Miners Ordered to Strike

CHARLESTON, W. VA., June 28.—The three days' conference between the New River coal operators and officials of the United Mine Workers of America with Governor Hatfield as mediator was without avail and today the miners received notice to strike.

Unless some agreement is made by Monday 15,000 miners will quit work.

Nearly everybody in Atlanta reads The Sunday American. YOUR advertisement in the next issue will sell goods.

DO YOUR BEST, IS PONY MAN'S ADVICE

CONTEST GINGER.

Your friends are watching you and the record you are making. You can not afford to lose.

Don't show a "yellow streak." Remember, the others are not landing every subscription they ask for, either.

Remember, the other fellow is working, too.

Do your best, and you are bound to do well.

All contestants in the race for The Georgian and American ponies are keyed up to the highest pitch just now, for the day when the bonus offers will expire is near at hand.

Boys and girls are straining every nerve to get promises fulfilled before July 5, for subscriptions brought in now count more than they will at any future time during the contest.

"Many of the boys and girls waste a lot of good time trying to find out what their rivals are doing," says the contest manager. "This is foolish. It is very likely that accurate information can not be had, for contestants are bragging, just to discourage the others in the race.

"The contestant who goes after votes with all his might will have no time to work about rivals, and will not need to worry about the others, either.

"The thing for the boys and girls to do is to set their minds on winning a pony outfit, and let nothing else distract their attention. No one ever won a fight who went into it half-heartedly."

The standings will be published to-morrow, and there will be gains shown worthy of careful notice.

Builds 2-Acre $15,000 Home for Her Cats

GREENWICH, CONN., June 28.—Mrs. Clifford B. Harmon, daughter of Commodore E. C. Benedict, lifted the first spadeful of ground to-day in the construction of what is to be the most complete home for cats in this country.

The "cattery" is to cover more than two acres of ground. There are to be eight rooms, hot and cold water, electric lights, gas for cooking, two baths, a kittens' nursery, steam heat. In addition there is to be a seven-room cottage for Mrs. F. Y. Mathis, who has been breeding famous cats for about ten years.

PRINCESS LOUISE WRITES NEW BOOK

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MILAN, ITALY, June 28.—Ex-Crown Princess Louise of Saxony, who has resumed the title of Countess of Montignoso, is about to publish another volume of autobiography.

"The book is still my own story," she said to an interviewer, "but it is different from the last. It is a revelation of my own soul in the guise of fiction. I describe Italy's beauties athwart my own personal impressions; very strange ones they are—I'm such a funny person. And, do you know I don't want to know myself well?

"People accuse me of being shifty in my loves. That's true; but I should have been otherwise had I encountered a strong man of iron will who knew how to dominate me. Alas! I have come across only vulgar bourgeois weaklings. That's the why and wherefore of my feverish quest after the happiness to which I, too, have a right.

"If those who sought my friendship had put it out of their minds that I was a Princess of Saxony and had treated me simply as a woman, then, perhaps, I, too, should have enjoyed my good share in life and love. As things are, I travel and travel in a frenzy to distract myself and my greatest horror in life is lest I should become plebeian."

Rate on 50 Chinese Skeletons a Puzzler

NEW ORLEANS, June 28.—What rates to charge for shipping 50 Chinese skeletons from this city to San Francisco is bothering freight agents of this city. The skeletons are "knocked down" and boxed, ready for trans-shipment and burial, "under the eyes of Confucius."

The railroad declares bodies must have been buried at least 20 years before they can be classed as "merchandise." Only a few of the Chinese now under discussion have been interred that length of time.

'Don't Give Up the Ship' Flag Is Prize

TOLEDO, OHIO, June 28.—The battle of Lake Erie of1913 is practically being refought as a part of the centennial celebration here, as the result of the contest for possession of Commodore Perry's "Don't give up the ship" battle flag, which is wanted for the rebuilt flagship Niagara.

Director George Stevens, of the Museum of Art, to-day remained steadfast in his determination not to relinquish to Ensign George M. Lowry the relic, loaned by Secretary Daniels for three months.

Crazy From Heat, Mother Kills Child

Crazed by the heat, Amanda Dieu, a negro woman, strangled her child to death on the farm of Harry L. Schiesinger, two miles north of Buckhead, Saturday morning. The woman is the wife of Turner Dieu, long a tenant of the Schiesinger farm. For some time she had been complaining of the intense heat.

Becoming irritated at something her child had done, she choked it to death before anyone could interfere. She was arrested.

Plans Airship Squad In All Russian Corps

ST. PETERSBURG, June 28.—Every Russian army corps is to have a flying squad if the plan of the Minister of War is carried out, it was announced in the Duma.

Great progress is being made in the aerial armament, it was said, and the Government recently doubled the number of dirigibles and had acquired craft known as "aerial dreadnoughts."

RIDERS WILL SCRAMBLE FOR COIN TO-NIGHT

WITH the kind permission of Old Man Weather, and with the enthusiastic co-operation of the greatest string of riders ever gathered for a race meeting in Dixie they're off to-night at the Motordrome for the fourth race meet of the local season—and it looks the best in the bunch.

There's more "pep" and enthusiasm out at Riders' Row to-day, than there has been since the meeting began. Up to this meet the riders have known that, mounted as they are now, Jock. McNeil and Wilmer Richards were fast enough to take all the races. The rest got a chance only in the specials.

Now McNeil and Richards have been yanked out and put in a class by themselves. These two meet to-night in three match races at three miles each. This will settle the most momentous speed question of the season. But they will have it all to themselves.

It's a Mighty Close Thing.

With the two fastest machines out of it the rest of the riders will scramble viciously for the Sweepstakes and the Motordrome Purse. It could not be any more even. Of the eight riders who will take part there isn't over a fraction of a second to the mile difference in the machines or the riders. They are calculated to race, nose and nose, every inch of the difference, with the advantage slightly favoring Harry Glenn, because he has the longest nose.

Another improvement in the card comes from the fact that there will be four starters in each heat of the two regular races. In past meets two of the heats have had but three starters. And it really takes four to make the racing good. To-night both the preliminary heats and the finals will have four starters.

It will not be surprising to see some remarkable marks made to-night. The track has been proved so safe that every man is willing to let out to the limit. Thus far there hasn't been a man even scratched.

Accidents Looked For.

To the old-timers the absence of accidents is growing monotonous. Not one of them ever heard of three meets on a new track without at least one bad spill. They looked for them Wednesday night, and it really seemed to disappoint them that nothing happened.

It is a marvelous thing, considering the scores of men who have been killed on board tracks and considering the fine possibilities of a spill at 85 miles an hour or better, that none of the riders fear an accident. They try to be moderately careful. But to expect sudden death—well, it never occurs to them and they are the only men at the track who don't think of it when they come to close quarters at high speed.

With a safe track and machines getting better all the time there is no reason why a fast mark or two should not be set to-night.

The races will start to-night at 8:15. Cars will leave Five Points at short intervals. Tickets are on sale at Tumlin's and Shepherd's. All are provided with rain checks. These checks are good if rain interferes before the program is completed.

Ty Cobb Just Hates Those Polo Grounds

DETROIT, June 28.—"Ty" Cobb was glad to get away from the Polo Grounds. The "Georgia Peach" dearly loves his base hits these days, and in "Ty's" opinion the Polo Grounds is no place for a .450 batting average.

"For the life of me, I can not hit on those grounds," said "Ty." "No wonder the Yankees are not hitting the ball. Hitting is more or less guesswork in New York. Sometimes you never do see the ball till it gets past you.

"It's mighty bad for the outfielders, too; unless a fly is hit so high that it shows above the upper tier, it is very hard to see. A low grounder is often lost in the background of summer clothed fans. I like New York pretty well, but I'm glad I don't have to play 77 games a year on the Polo Grounds."

Ex-Giant Ewing to Return to Baseball

BELLEFONTAINE, O., June 28.—Bob Ewing, former major league pitcher, who quit the game last season to devote all of his attention to farming and the raising of hogs on his farm at New Hampshire, O., is debating with himself as to whether he should re-enter the national game.

He has an offer from Manager Bade Myers, of the Canton team, Interstate League. Myers and Ewing began their professional career together as members of Charley Stroeber's Toledo team, Myers being a catcher at the time.

Ewing, now 38, showed the old-time form he possessed during the nine years he played with the Cincinnati team. For a while Ewing was with the Philadelphia and New York National League clubs.

M'GRAW BEATS ALL BUSHES TO GATHER TALENT

By Damon Runyon.

NEW YORK, June 28.—John J. McGraw is beating the business quite far and wide for baseball talent this season, having inaugurated the most systematic and thorough search for incipient athletes that he has ever conducted.

It is said that "Sinister" Dick Kinsella, the Varnish King, of Springfield, Mo., and McGraw's present chief of scouts, is under a commission that will take him over more territory than any other ivory hunter will cover this year.

This statement is borne out by the movements of the sinister one during the past few weeks. After thoroughly canvassing the bushes of the Middle West, Kinsella has suddenly leaped into the New York State and other leagues in this section of the country, and after a few weeks hereabouts he will comb the Pacific Coast and the Northwest.

The result of Kinsella's activities will probably not be definitely known until late in the summer, or until draft time. However, it is said that he has already spotted half a dozen pitchers.

More than likely Kinsella was instructed to pay particular attention to pitchers this year, as McGraw has suddenly found himself in need of that class of material.

* * *

FERDINAND SCHUPP, the author of the rising curve, is now the only real youngster with the club, and Theodore Goulait is about the only pitcher "plant" belonging to McGraw, although he still has some hopes of Frank Smith, now in the New York State League, developing later on.

Larue Kirby, who was carried along by the Giants for some time last season, and who was left at Mobile with Mike Finn this spring, has been cut loose entirely. There were various reasons why Larue would not do, chief of which was Larue himself. Finn had to send him away, and the last heard of the Michigan terror was at Pensacola, 'way down in Florida.

Stray reports floating in and out of the far sticks indicate that Chance also has some scouts hard at work. It is said that the Peerless Leader has lined up a score of young athletes for September delivery and that several will come from the Texas League, incubator of some of the best ball tossers in the land. Chance also has an eye on various promising young men out on the coast and in the Southern League.

* * *

FOR a long time past there has been an effort on foot to discover the reason why ball players hit less on the Polo Grounds than any other field in either circuit, it being generally admitted that such is the case. Last season the Giants claimed that it was on account of the advertising signs in center field. They said these signs formed a background which practically destroyed their batting eyes.

This year the signs were left off a considerable section of the bleacher wall, and the space was painted an alluring green. Then the Giants proceeded to hit a little bit less than ever, thus acquitting the poor signs of the blame.

BRITISH POLO CAPTAIN COUNTS ON WINNING NEXT

QUEENSTOWN, IRELAND, June 28.—Captain R. G. Ritson, of the English polo team, upon his arrival here from America on the liner Campania, said: "I confidently believe England will win the next polo match. Unquestionably the best polo team won in our recent match. We are delighted with the treatment accorded us in America and the true sportsmanship shown."

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

Young Shugrue, the Eastern lightweight, has billed the toughest fight of his career. Shugrue signed articles yesterday to box Matty Baldwin in a 15-round bout at New Haven, Conn., on July 4 and the fur should certainly fly. Baldwin has fought the best boys in the lightweight division and has always given a good account of himself.

* * *

The fight between Toni Caponi and Jimmy Clabby, scheduled to be held at Indianapolis on July 3, has been called off. The promoters claim that Caponi wanted too much money.

* * *

Tom McCarey has wired Packey McFarland an offer to meet Jack Britton at his arena, providing the latter succeeds in defeating Charlie White at New Orleans on July 4. Britton and Packey met at New York a few months ago, with Packey carrying off the honors by a slight margin.

No more boxing shows are to be staged at Kenosha, Wis., during the summer months. The small attendance at the Coulon-Burns bout is the reason.

* * *

Kid Young, the local newsboy boxer, is simply aching to get into action. Young says he is willing to meet any boy of his weight, from Charley Lee to Matty McCue.

* * *

Joe Mandot and Knockout Brown are both picking Leach Cross to stop Bud Anderson on July 4. Both claim that Leach's well-advertised right hand will land on Anderson's jaw long before the twentieth round is over.

* * *

Tommy Murphy says he will be at the ringside when Ritchie and Rivers clash to challenge the winner. Murphy is surely entitled to a chance at the title as he has fought every worthy contender for the crown during the past two years.

* * *

Murphy has been forced to call off his bout with Johnny Dundee to be held on July 15 on account of a bad hand. He put the injured member out of commission while boxing with one of his sparring partners. Jack White may get the match with Dundee.

* * *

Paris is after a fight between Georges Carpentier and Al Palzer. Tom O'Rourke, manager of Palzer, received a letter from Monsieur Vienne, the Parision boxing promoter, asking him his terms for such a match.

* * *

Promoters in Milwaukee, Wis., want to stage a bout between Papke and Eddie McGoorty. McGoorty has already agreed to meet the former middleweight champion, but Papke is holding out for a larger guarantee.

EVEN TENNIS EARNS COIN; AMERICA IS "SPORT MAD"

NEW YORK, June 28.—It has been said that America is "sport mad." That the general boom in interest in competitive events extends to tennis is proved by the figures just announced placing the total gate receipts of the recent International matches here at $19,000. Of this surprising sum $7,000 went to defray the expenses of the American team.

Of the net profits of $12,000, half was turned over to the Australian team. The West Side Lawn Tennis Club, on whose courts the matches were played, received $1,400, and the remaining $4,600 was put in the treasury of the National Lawn Tennis Association.

ZAMLOCH TRIES TO STEAL WITH ALL BASES OCCUPIED

DETROIT, June 28.—It has happened again in the big leagues. No longer is John Anderson the proud possessor of the glory of stealing second with the bases filled. Zamloch, a Tiger recruit hurler, pulled the stunt in the second game with the Naps. Stanage was on third, Moriarty on second and the pitcher himself on first. The latter started for second, hit the dirt with a great slide, arose, brushed himself and found Morrie planted at the base. It was a cinch to tag Zamloch, and then an ivory double resulted, as Stanage tried to reach home and was caught on the throw to the plate.

MORAN KNOCKS OUT LOGAN EASILY IN NEW ORLEANS

CHICAGO OPENS OLYMPIC GAMES TO GREAT CROWD

CHICAGO, June 28.—With the huge stands crowded to their capacity, the American Olympic games were opened under the most favorable circumstances to-day. The athletic carnival promises to outclass any event of the same nature eevr held in this country. Athletes from all over the United States and Canada, as well as the point winners from Sweden, who took part in the Olympic games at Stockholm last year, are in attendance.

Almost every conceivable sort of athletic contest has been arranged for the meet, which will continue until July 6. A swimming tank has been dug out in the center of the field and is so constructed that it can be boarded over and covered with earth when not in use. There is also a ski slide on which the skiing tournament will be held. As the weather will not permit the slides being covered with the natural coating of ice, grease has been used and in the preliminary trials found to be successful. Several polo games and feats of horsemanship also have been arranged. The army polo team will in all probability participate in this event.

* * *

TO-DAY the final championship contests for Chicago school children will be run off. The preliminary trials in the competitive drills, marching and like events, were held Thursday and yesterday. Fifty thousand children participated in the preliminaries.

To-morrow will be known as "Swedish Day," and the Swedish singing societies of Chicago have arranged for a monster chorus to join in the singing of national hymns and folk songs.

The Intercollegiate athletic championships of the United States, including track and field sports, will be run off Wednesday, while the interscholastic championships, in which 2,000 high school and preparatory school boys are entered, will be decided on Thursday.

* * *

A "SANE Fourth" celebration will be given on Friday, interspersed with athletic events. In the afternoon the junior track and field championships of the United States, composed of 18 standard events, will take place. In the evening there will be more athletic events, educational moving pictures and a fireworks display.

Next Saturday will be the crowning day of the meet. The senior national championships, conducted under the auspices of the A. A. U., will be run off on that day and will bring forth some of the best athletes in the country. Such men as Sheridan, MacGrath, Sheppard, Kiviat, Kohlmainen and others of international reputation will be on hand.

* * *

DURING the meet there will also be archery contests, drills of firemen and policemen, three days of swimming, fencing, wrestling matches and trap shooting. Directly south of the stadium a large plot of ground has been laid out for the trap shooting competition which will be held on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week under the direction of E. W. Heath. The Boy Scouts will also give several exhibition drills under the direction of Dr. P. J. H. Farrell. Several power-boat races on the lake have also been arranged to take place during the week.

THE MOTORCYCLE RAG.

They were sitting in the gloaming and her cheeks were pale and damp
As she said good-bye unto her darling Steve.
But he said, "There ain't no reason for the teardrop in your lamp,
For you haven't got no business for to grieve.
I am going for to leave you and may not come back no more.
I will risk my life as everybody knows.
But although I don't come back again you oughtn't to get sore
With them life insurance papers in your hose."
And as he strode away
She sobbed and then did say:

CHORUS.

"As a patriotic hero
He can bat at minus zero,
And there ain't no sign of beauty in his face,
But I'll gather in the money
From my Motorcycle Honey
If he don't come back alive from that there race."

We note that Roy Good is captain of the Cincinnati motorcycle racing team. This reminds that the virtuous meet their demise at an early age.

Mr. Kirby, who coached the Yale crew, avers that he is well pleased with the ing that an Englishman sometimes is ing that an Englishman cometimes is easily pleased.

Mr. Kirby furthermore avers that Yale will do well when it has learned his stroke from the ground up. Several impartial spectators of the late race were under the impression that Yale had run aground.

"Do not be a fighter," advises James J. Corbett. This advice is followed assiduously by a great majority of our pugilists.

While polo may not strike a popular chord, one might say without fear of successful contradiction that it is not a game for invalids.

Fish stories were told long before men began writing ads for railway companies, but liars were amateurs in those days.

Speaking of the irony of fate, we note that the Red Sox paused long enough to raise aloft in the summer breeze a banner on which was the legend: "World's Champions."

We have it from Ban Johnson that Joe Birmingham is not competent to manage an American League team. Possibly Joe allows his team to win too often for the good of the league.

Boxing experts are wondering who will be Willie Ritchie's manager, but after the fracas on the Fourth a more lucrative position will be that of Mr. Ritchie's doctor.

Bob Fitzsimmons vouchsafes the information that George Rodel is a regular fighter. Jim Corbett expostulates that the said Rodel is a dub. Taking it by and large, Fits wins unanimously.

ROY WALKER IS DUBBED "W. JOHNSON OF MINORS"

NEW ORLEANS, June 28.—"Walter Johnson of the minors." This is the title that Southern League fans will bestow upon Roy Walker, former Appalachian League recruit whom Manager Frank took on several days ago to fill in for "Rube" Evans. Walker was given his premier Wednesday against the Lookouts, and proved himself everything his chief sponsor—Jack Adams—claimed: "More speed than any pitcher in the minor leagues."

Walker, though shaded in a pitching duel by Harry Coveleskie, threw sensational ball. He fanned ten members of Kid Elberfeld's mob, giving up but eight hits, which were turned into a brace of scores.

COULON DECIDES TO POSTPONE WILLIAMS BOUT

By Sol Plex.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 28.—Johnny Coulon is not going to fight Johnny "Kid" Williams, of Baltimore, in Tom McCarey's Vernon arena July 29. The bantam champion decided yesterday afternoon that he was not prepared for such a stiff battle in defense of his laurels and announced that he would wire McCarey last night insisting on a postponement until Labor Day Coulon had given McCarey his word, and said he hated to disappoint Uncle Tom, but allowed a champion should take no foolish chances and that he would not fight Challenger Williams until he knew he was physically fit to put forth his best efforts in defense of the championship he has held for over five years.

Two Months in Mountains.

"Just to show the Vernon Club promoter that I intend playing fair ball for him I will leave for the coast July 1 or a few days later and stay there until Labor Day," said Johnny. "I want to get two months in the mountains before facing the Williams party. I am sure that by Labor Day I will be my old self, able to show Mr. Williams how a real champion fights.

"My right hand is bad and I am low in weight because of the hot weather we have been having. This is the first summer I ever tried to box, anyway, and I guess it is a mistake. When my father was alive he never permitted me to fight in the summer time. He argued that I was such a little fellow, always giving away weight, that training in the hot months would get me down too low. That was the trouble the other night at Kenosha. I guess the dad was right, and I will never again book a big match for June, July or August.

"It will be cool and nice in the mountains near Los Angeles and that will be just the thing for me. I can build up until a couple of weeks before Labor Day and then have something to take off when I start the training camp grind for Williams.

Is Sorry for Williams.

"I am sorry for Williams because the postponement will be hard on him. He already is on the scene, so Labor Day will make a long wait for him. However, he might take on Eddie Campi again on our original date, July 29, the winner to get me on Labor Day. Williams beat Campi in Eddie's first long fight. Since that Campi has whaled both Burns and Ledoux. I think he is entitled to another chance at the Baltimore boy."

Yell Defiance at Blood Disorders
A Remedy That Has Shown a Most Remarkable Purifying Effect.

The word medicine is one of the most abused in our language. There are certain medicinal properties just as necessary to health as the food we eat. Take, for example, the well-known tonic medicine, S. S. S. This famous blood purifier contains medicinal components just as vital and essential to healthy blood as the elements of wheat, roast beef, the fats and the sugars that make up our daily ration.
As a matter of fact, there is one ingredient in S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating each cellular part of the body to the healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment. That is why it regenerates the blood supply; why it has such a tremendous influence in overcoming eczema, rash, pimples, and all skin afflictions.
And in regenerating the tissues S. S. S. has a rapid and positive anti-dotal effect upon all those irritating influences that cause rheumatism, sore throat, weak eyes, falling hair, loss of weight, thin, pale cheeks, and that weariness of muscle and nerve that is generally experienced as spring fever. Get a bottle of S. S. S. at any drug store, and in a few days you will not only feel bright and energetic, but you will be the picture of new life. S. S. S. is prepared only in the laboratory of the Swift Specific Co., 187 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., who maintain a very efficient Medical Department, where all who have any blood disorder of a stubborn nature may write freely for advice and a special book of instruction. S. S. S. is sold everywhere by drug stores, department and general stores.

SPEEDY SPRINT ALL THAT CAN SAVE CRACKERS

By Percy H. Whiting.

IF the Crackers are going to win the pennant this year they must demonstrate it between July 4 and July 16.

The Crackers come home July 4 for the first and only home stay of any importance they get until August 14. On this home stay they get 12 games in a row.

They better win a big majority of them.

* * *

RIGHT now the Crackers are a dangerous distance behind the surprising Gulls, who lead the league. They show no evidence of overtaking Mike Finn's flying club.

No material gain will be made until the team gets home, of course. The Crackers do their gaining on home grounds.

This being true, the local club better make the most of the home stay between July 4 and 16. It will be a long time before they get another.

On July 17 the Crackers go out on a heart-breaking road trip. Of the next 28 games they play 24 on the road.

And you know well the Crackers aren't going to make any advances while this torrid July-August trip is in progress.

* * *

ONE fact that will help is that the Crackers wind up the season with 22 straight games at home. But unless they have begun to gain on the Gulls before that time they will never overtake them. They can't afford to wait for the last home stay. It will be too late. They can't afford to wait until the Gulls falter, for there isn't any certainty they are going to falter.

* * *

IF the Crackers are a disappointment in the Southern League—which they aren't yet—consider the case of the Pelicans. This team looked like a sure one-two-three club. Now it is nowhere and rapidly going further.

Laugh if you want to, but my own opinion is that this is Charley Frank's last year in Pelicantown.

This stuff has been coming in over the grapevine for a couple of months and longer—and coming pretty straight. The Cleveland club undoubtedly owns the New Orleans association. That's a moral certainty. They will want to put one of their own men in charge. They realize that Charley Frank is unpopular in his home town—why, it is difficult to figure, for he has never failed until this year to give them a good ball club. It is believed that the Cleveland folks wanted to be rid of Frank last year but didn't have the heart to fire him, after the showing he made with the 1912 Pelicans.

* * *

THEY need a new deal all around in New Orleans.

That ought to be the best baseball town of the league—it has the population. But it is nearly the worst. There is some good (or bad) reason for this because it is not a condition of long standing.

The Cleveland folks have figured around and have presumably decided that the sacrifice of Charley Frank would be a popular move.

So off comes his head.

A mere prediction, truly! But watch it come through.

PRIZE FIGHTRS' BALL TEAM JIMMY DIME'S NEW IDEA

NEWCASTLE, PA., June 28.—Jimmy Dime, the enterprising manager of pugilists and fight promoter, announces he has organized a team of ball players which would be composed of some of the best boxers in this country, and that they would play several exhibition games with professional teams this summer. Dime stated that there were few remunerative matches for the boxers during the summer and he intended to keep his team going until fall. His line-up is as follows:

Dan Daley, pitcher, heavyweight; Tom McMahon, first base, light heavyweight; Tommy Bresnahan, second base; Joe Chip, catcher, welterweight; George Chip, shortstop, middleweight; "Goo" Stewart, third base, middleweight; Patsy Brannigan, left field, featherweight; Jimmy Dime, center field, manager, and Tommy Jones, right field, lightweight.

By Joe Agler.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., June 28. Lefty Price will endeavor to prove to the Billikens that he is the goods this afternoon, with Chapman behind the plate. We should cop at least two of the three games scheduled for Montgomery. Manush will show up for Monday's game. He seems to be in mid-season shape.

Well, we got that revenge, after all, taking two of the series from the Turtles. Old King Brady twirled superb ball yesterday afternoon in spite of a sun which threatened to warp the grandstand out of shape and blister the infield. "Old Reliable" came back, good and strong, and demonstrated his worth to the Crackers.

We scored in the first on Long's single and Whitey's hit to center. We rocked along to the sixth without a chance, and then Smith singled, Bisland bunted and yours truly got a hit. Baerwald muffed Chapman's fly and Smith scored. I was nipped at second.

Newton was on the mound for the Turtles and pitched great ball, but his teammates couldn't help him much. We all were nearly suffocated with the heat.

MANUSH FOR CRACKERS; WILL JOIN ON THE ROAD

MONTGOMERY, ALA., June 28.—Frank Manush, formerly of the New Orleans Pelicans, recently unconditionally released by Charley Frank, has been signed by Manager Smith as utility player.

Manush has been in Memphis ever since his release. He will join the Crackers to-day or to-morrow.

It is presumed Manush will take the place of George Rohe as the Crackers' utility player.

JOE BEAN, director of playgrounds, deserves a large medal for getting the young men of Atlanta started in a big track and field meet. The event at Piedmont Park July 4 is deserving of the support of all those interested in the physical development of the young men in Atlanta.

No sport is cleaner, healthier or more desirable than track and field meets. Running, jumping and weight throwing contests develop those who take part in them. And moreover, they furnish a fine spectacle for those who witness them.

Unquestionably there will be a tremendous crowd at Piedmont Park Fourth of July morning to see the contests.

Of course no admission fee will be charged. There will be seats, if only on the grass, for all.

It is to be hoped that this meet will be the first of many. Atlanta ought to have one big track and field meet and several small ones each year. In the winter it ought to have an indoor meet in the Auditorium-Armory.

These things will come in time. The hardest work is done. A start has been made.

SINCE the Pittsburg club has been slumping, Manager Fred Clarke caused to be issued orders that the lid would be lifted on the anti-booze clause in the Pirate contracts.

"The players may drink beer if they drink it alone," said Clarke. "The use of the beverage as a tonic I do not believe to be harmful, at least not as much as the restless restraint caused by the clause against it."

This should be interesting to Pittsburg fans who may not know that some of the Pirate players, in St. Louis at least, were lifting the "lid" before Manager Fred Clarke got his shoulder under it, showing the practicability of such a clause in the first place.

FRED CLARKE, manager of the Pittsburg National League Club, closed a deal recently with the St. Joe Western League Club, for the purchase of Outfielders Joe Kelly and George Watson.

The consideration was not announced, except that money and players were involved. Each man is hitting above the .300 mark, but Watson is now out of the game with a broken leg. They will report to Pittsburg next spring.

"One night," said Whitey, the other day, "when Kelly was with the old Chicago team, a half-dozen carriages had been ordered by the late Al Johnson to take the players for a ride about the city.

"As the players waited in the hotel a down-and-out fan came wandering in, told Kelly the story of his hardships.

"'Kelly went to Johnson.

"'How much will these carriages cost us?' he asked.

"'Oh, I suppose about $35 or $40,' said Al.

"'All right,' said Kel, 'let's call it off and give the money to this old scout.' And it was done.

"Another time," continued Alperman, "Kelly shouted to an umpire: 'Don't fine me, Mr. Ump!' The official stood glaring at him muttering threats of a $50 assessment.

"'Don't fine me,' repeated Mike. 'Fine one of those tight wads, there. It will teach him a lesson. It won't me. If you take $50 away from me, you take the drinks and cigars away from a lot of fellows who are waiting for me at the hotel.'"

THERE'LL be no hidden ball trick victims among the Naps this season unless some one gets careless and forgets Birmingham's instructions. The Naps are directed to hug bases until the opposing pitcher takes his position at the slab, unless they positively know where the ball is.

If the pitcher should take his position on the rubber and the then hidden ball trick be tried by an opposing player, the base runners would move up a base. The taking of the pitching position without being able to deliver the ball would constitute a balk as soon as the pitcher took down his hands.

JOE AGLER has the happy knack of being able to parry inconvenient interruptions with some smart retort that immediately quashes the opposition. And Joe is game to the core. He was playing in a rather noisy game a few years ago, and after a short time a big chunk of wood was thrown at him. Fortunately, the aim was bad, and it fell harmlessly on the platform.

Agler picked it up and showed it to the spectators.

"Good heavens!" he exclaimed in tones of mock anxiety, "one of you fans has lost your head!"

Lee Magee Is Crack Of Cardinals' Team

ST. LOUIS, June 28.—"If I had a few more like Magee" is the substance of a prayerful wish that lingers in the mind of Manager Miller Huggins, of the St. Louis National League team, after many a close game dropped by the Cardinals in which Lee Magee, the speedy young left fielder, has put up a beautiful all-around game, to the exclusion of most of his teammates.

The left fielder of the Cardinals is rightly entitled to this oft repeated, yet unspoken compliment. Magee has all the characteristics to a marked degree of an up-to-date ball player—the speedy kind. He is by far the fastest man on the Cardinal team and one of the best all-around players Manager Huggins has in his line-up. He will take all kinds of chances on the bases and has won many games by his fleetness alone.

MANDOT PICKS RITCHIE TO DEFEAT JOE RIVERS

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 28.—They say a fighter's opinion of another fighter does not amount to a snap. If you want to find out for yourself remember what is written in the following paragraph and think of it when the time comes:

"Joe Mandot, one of the brainiest fighters of the day, picks Willie Ritchie to beat Joe Rivers, and says Leachie Cross will stop Bud Anderson owing to Cross' tremendous power to hit."

See how near Joe comes.

GOPHERS WILL NOT MEET MICHIGAN NEXT FALL

MINNEAPOLIS, June 28.—The University of Minnesota will not meet Michigan on the football field next fall. This was announced to-day by the athletic authorities at the university. The date held open for the possible scheduling of Michigan October 25, has been given to the University of North Dakota. This precludes any possibility of a resumption of football relations with Michigan until at least another year.

RICKEY TO SCOUT FOR BROWNS

ST. LOUIS, June 28.—Branch Rickey, former catcher in both big leagues, who coached the University of Michigan team this year, has returned to his old job as scout for the Browns during the summer. He began work by taking to the team with him two of his Michigan stars, Pitcher Powell and Shortstop Lavans.

THORNTON WINS RIGHT TO BATTLE WITH CHAMPION

NEW ORLEANS, LA., June 28.—Tain played havoc with the ule of the Southern tennis championship games at the New Orleans Lawn Tennis Club Friday. J. B. Adoue, of Dallas, Texas, went down in defeat before Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, in straight sets, 6-4, 6-1, 6-1. This brings Thornton, the winner of the tournament, against last year's champion, Carleton Smith. This match will be played late to-day after the doubles are finished.

The only other men's matches was stopped by darkness. Only Atlantans were participants, Smith and Mansfield against Tohrnton and Grant in the semi-finals. Much to the surprise of everybody Smith and Mansfield took the first two sets of the match (which is the best three out of five sets) before the game was called.

Grima and Phelps meet Adoue and Shelton to-day. Thornton and Grant will finish their match with Mansfield and Smith before the afternoon games start. Bummerstadt is carded against Lloyd and Hochendale is opposing Strouse.

Early in the afternoon the final round in doubles between the winners of the morning matches is expected to start. Clark is carded to meet the winner of the Hochendale-Strouse match. Mrs. Monroe will meet Miss Murphy at 4 p. m. and half an hour later Thornton will meet Smith. The final round in consolations will start at 5 p. m. The forecast for to-day calls for clear weather and it is expected that the program will be carried through without hindrance.

GUNBOAT SMITH WHIPS BOER RODEL IN THIRD

NEW YORK, June 28.—Gunboat Smith, of California, last night defeated George Rodel, the South African Boer, in the third round of a scheduled ten-round bout at Madison Square Garden. After Rodel had been knocked down twice Referee Billy John stopped the bout.

HERE'S A CHANCE TO MAKE SOME REAL MONEY

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.
(Author of "The Triple Tie.")

It is now up to the readers of The Georgian who have been reading "The Triple Tie" on the magazine page to solve the problems of the novel and send in their conclusions in competition for the prizes aggregating $250 offered by this newspaper.

In this issue of The Georgian is printed the last part of Chapter 43 of "The Triple Tie." At the end of this chapter Gordon Kelly is brought on the scene again. There he is left while the readers of the story send their contributions to The Georgian. Readers will be allowed until noon of Thursday, July 3, in which to send in their answers. No communications will be considered unless they are received at The Georgian office by Thursday at noon or bear a postmark not later than that time.

The final chapters of "The Triple Tie," as written by the author, will be printed in The Georgian of Monday, July 7.

Can You Solve Them?

As an aid to the readers who desire to compete for the prizes it may be said that the problems to be solved are these:

First—How does Gordon Kelly escape from the mountaineers?

Second—What happens to Mildred Deery, the heroine?

Third—How does Gordon Kelly, who never saw a game of baseball or never played a game of baseball up to the time he asked Manager Smith, of the Atlanta Club, for a position on his team—how did Gordon Kelly learn to catch the ball and bat in the phenomenal manner he showed in the games he played at Atlanta?

Fourth—What happened when Gordon Kelly went to bat in the last half of the ninth inning in the final and deciding game of The Triple Tie when there were three on base, two out and four runs needed for the Red Sox to win?

Fifth—What is the final ending of the story?

It is suggested that readers who desire to compete for the prizes take up the narrative where it leaves off in this issue of The Georgian and complete it as they think it ought to be completed, or as they think the author has completed it, thus solving the problems presented.

Nothing Improbable.

Every novel is a mystery, else no one would read a novel. Speculation as to how a story will "turn out" is usually what keeps a reader interested to the end. Perhaps the mysteries of "The Triple Tie" are no more mysterious than are to be found in the average novel. Certainly every one who has read "The Triple Tie" from the beginning has an idea as to how things "turned out."

It may be hinted that the author has solved the problems in a rational way—that there is nothing improbable in the author's ending of the story.

Please remember that this is not a guessing contest. Originality, literary value and analytical clearness will be largely considered in awarding the prizes. Three judges, in no way connected with The Georgian will make the awards for the best solutions of "The Triple Tie" problems.

So "go to it," readers. You have until noon of Thursday to send in your conclusions.

ATLANTA GIRL WITH 'THE GREAT AMERICAN VOICE' TO SING HERE

Miss Lalla B. Cannon.

Miss Eulalia Bright Cannon, the Atlanta girl who was designated by Professor Sergei Klibansky as possessor of "the great American voice" and awarded a $3,000-a-year grand opera scholarship, will be heard at a free concert of the Atlanta Music Festival Association at the Auditorium at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. She will sing the aria, "O Don Fatale," from "Don Carlos," the song that won her the greatest honor, perhaps, ever accorded an American vocal student.

Miss Cannon, who prefers to be known as Lalla B. Cannon, is spending her vacation with her mother, Mrs. L. C. Cannon, of 647 Peachtree Street. She is a dramatic soprano with a truly wonderful range, and unless her friends prevail upon her to give a benefit recital this will probably be her only appearance in Atlanta this summer. In August or early September she will return to New York to resume her operatic studies under Professor Klibansky, as holder of the scholarship given by a wealthy New York woman.

"I always have aspired to grand opera," Miss Cannon told a Georgian reporter yesterday. "I think it is the grandest career in the world. I have accepted the scholarship. Professor Klibansky will say how long I must study in America and when I must go to Europe and whether I shall become an opera singer. I shall do just what he says, and I do so hope he will think I am fitted for opera."

Gives Her Mother Credit.

Since it all depends on Professor Klibansky's dictum, it can be asserted dogmatically that Miss Cannon will become a grand opera star. In selecting her over 400 competitors, men, women and girls, Klibansky said her voice undoubtedly was capable of as wonderful development as any of the great sopranos now heard in Wagnerian opera.

To her mother Miss Cannon owes and freely gives the credit for the fairylike fortune by which she rose to fame overnight and her sparkling prospects for a future career. A singer from babyhood, Miss Cannon always thought she was a mezzo, and her teachers, even until a few months ago in New York, shared her belief. She wanted to sing all the time, but her mother prevailed upon her to desist, that she might not waste her powers by untutored efforts. When she went to New York to study she scrupulously refrained from vocal exertion, and although the strain of practice taxed her strength, her vocal capabilities were conserved until she sang before Klibansky and was pronounced not a mezzo, but a dramatic soprano of rare quality and power.

Since then she has sung before Madame Gadski, and the peerless diva has expressed the wish to hear her again when next she visits America. To her acceptance of her mother's advice, Miss Cannon ascribes the preservation of her voice till the fortunate meeting with Klibansky.

Fortune Came by Accident.

And here is how she sang for Klibansky and won the scholarship, as she told it to The Georgian:

"A girl friend saw in The New York American an advertisement for 'the great American voice,' inserted by Professor Klibansky. He had taught in the Berlin Conservatory, and was then an instructor in Damrosch's Conservatory, known as the Institute of Musical Art. My friend told me about the advertisement, and I went to see Professor Klibansky that afternoon. There were so many other singers there that it was late when I sang 'The Birth of Morn,' a simple song, for him. He told me to come back the next morning, and I did. I sang 'O Don Fatale,' the aria from 'Don Carlos,' and as you know, I won the scholarship."

When it is considered that the honor of being declared possessor of "the great American voice" and receiving the $3,000 annual scholarship had been promised to another girl before Miss Cannon sang for Klibansky, it readily is seen her recital before him must have convinced him she was another Jenny Lind or Adelina Patti in embryo.

The other girl was Miss Jean Vincent Cooper, of Jackson, Miss. Professor Klibansky told the wealthy patroness it would be a shame for either of the girls to miss securing the best instruction obtainable, particularly when Miss Cooper was a mezzo and Miss Cannon a soprano and each was without a peer in her own field. The patroness then agreed to duplicate her offer, and Miss Cooper and Miss Cannon each were awarded the honor and the prize.

Asked what she thought of the opera as a career for aspiring girls, Miss Cannon replied, "Really, I can't say. To tell the truth, I don't know, for I myself am not in opera yet. But I want to try it, for I think it will be splendid."

Steals $153,000 to Give Baby Luxuries

CHICAGO, June 28.—Mrs. Edward F. Young and her 10-month-old baby to-day saw her husband taken to Joliet, Ill., to serve a prison term of from one to five years for the confessed embezzlement of $153,000 from the Chicago, Terre Haute and Southeastern Railroad. He was a trusted employee.

"He took the money to use it getting rich so baby and I could have everything we wanted. I'll stick to him. Baby won't know a thing about it," said Mrs. Young.

THE SOCIAL WORLD

Mrs. William A. Wimbish was hostess at a tea Saturday afternoon at the Piedmont Driving Club in honor of Miss Eloise Oliver, whose marriage to Mr. Frampton Ellis takes place Monday evening; Mrs. Prioleau Ellis, of Springfield, Conn., and Miss Belle Stewart, of Montgomery, who are here for the wedding.

The guests were received on the terrace and tea was served from a table beautifully decorated with hydrangeas, sweetpeas and gardenias. Mrs. Wimbish wore white crepe.

The buffet supper given Friday evening by Mr. and Mrs. William D. Ellis, Jr., was for Miss Oliver and Mr. Ellis. Guests included the wedding attendants and young men who will sit at the bride's table. Garden flowers, smilax and ferns adorned the apartments. The table carried out in artistic detail a color scheme of yellow and white.

Mrs. Ellis wore white lingerie draped in lavender chiffon. Her daughter, Miss Adgate Ellis, who assisted, wore blue chiffon and lace. Miss Oliver, the honor guest, wore shadow lace with draperies of pink chiffon, the toilet finished with a sash and girdle of pale blue.

Frazier-Gilreath.

The marriage of Miss Claudia Frazier, of Chattanooga, to John E. Gilreath, of Atlanta, took place Friday afternoon at "Oakdale," the country home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Frazier. $920,630,000 IS COTTON CROP'S 1912 VALUE

Federal Report Shows the South Produced 14,313,015 Bales. Less Than 1911 Production.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The Southern cotton planter should worry. According to a bulletin soon to be issued by Director Durand, of the Bureau of Census, Department of Commerce, the cotton crop for the United States in 1912 amounted to 14,313,015 bales of 500 pounds each, and was worth the trifling sum of $920,630,000.

Although the crop last year was 11.9 per cent less than that of the previous year, it was worth $60,790,000 more than it was in 1911. This almost equals the banner year for cotton, which was in 1910, when he crop amounted to but 12,005,688 bales, 2,307,327 bales less than it did this year, but was worth $963,180,000, the most valuable crop ever raised in this country. While 1910 led in value, 1911 led in amount, the crop that year being 16,250,276 bales.

The statistics show that the cotton crop for the past four years has increased 32 per cent. When it is considered that, of the total area of the countries from which returns of cotton ginned were made, only about one-eleventh was devoted to the production of cotton in 1911 and 1912, the figures afford some idea of the possibilities of cotton production in the United States.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

To-day, or so much thereof as may be necessary, as they put it in legal phrasing, will be Joseph M. Brown's last day in the Executive office in Georgia.

However many people may view his departure, it may be set down as a fact that newspaper men generally will see him go forth to private life with their genuine good will and good wishes.

From the newspaper man's standpoint he has been in many ways a Governor among a thousand. He has been an infinite source of good "copy," and by such fruits are good Governors known in the newspaper man's world.

Governor Brown, had he elected to be a newspaper man instead of a Governor, undoubtedly would have been a star. There never has been anybody in the Executive office who could put as much "punch" into a promulgation as Governor Brown—at least, not within the memory of this writer.

Governor Brown's copy never needs editing. Whatever he has to say, he says it with the emphasis right where it belongs. When it comes to putting the "bang!" into a written document, the newspaper craft arise as a man and call "Little Joe" blessed!

He is the very smallest Governor physically the State has had since Alexander H. Stephens, but he is fearless and straightforward in his utterances. He has insisted—and rightly —that he be not quoted in the public prints in important matters otherwise than directly. But when his written statements have come forth, they have been the real things!

His sense of humor is keen and his good nature irrepressible. If one grows to like him at all, one grows to like him all over. Moreover, one grows more and more to respect and esteem him as one grows more and more to know him.

It is but the simple truth to say that he has "set a pace" in the Executive office that will not be easy to follow. He has left his indelible imprint upon Georgia history, and it is safe to say that he retires with the regard and high esteem of a great majority of his fellow citizens.

Anyway, that's the way this writer feels about it.

Senator M. C. Tarver has stated positively that a bill to create the Chicamauga Judicial Circuit will be introduced in the present Legislature, refusing to say whether he or some other member from the counties affected will be the author of the bill.

From Representative Shropshire of Chattooga County, comes the suggestion of two new counties, Floyd alone remaining in the Rome circuit; Walker, Chattooga and Dade forming another circuit; Whitfield, Murray and Catoosa, a third, and Gordon and Bartown remaining in the Cherokee circuit.

The new Legislature, while promising enough, still shows its inexperience and yet hesitating quality of its membership.

When the clerk calls upon those favoring such and such a bill to stand up, practically the entire membership arises, or remains seated, as the case may be. The custom, of course, is merely to raise the hand, as a sign of voting.

One new member, remembering how easily he had squelched an adversary with a simple objection earlier in the day, yesterday entered a vociferous objection to a motion to adjourn. Naturally, he got a good laugh for his pains.

Nevertheless, the new Legislature looks like a pretty good bet.

Evidently it is composed of untried material, but that is no sure sign there is not plenty of good stuff in the makeup of it.

The real leaders of the new House are yet to be developed, but they likely are there, for all that!

"I do not expect to introduce any bill, but shall occupy the majority of my time in helping to kill some other fellow's bill," was the reply of Senator Charles E. McGregor to-day, when questioned as to any proposed legislation which he might introduce in the present session of the General Assembly.

He continued along the lines of legislation, saying: "I may introduce a resolution looking to the restoration of the old 'blueback speller' into our educational system. I shall also advocate enlarging the duties of the game wardens so as to include the enforcement of all misdemeanor laws upon the statute books, especially the prohibition law. I stand for the enforcement of all laws or their repeal."

Both President Anderson of the Senate and Speaker Burwell of the House are hard at work framing up the standing committees of the two houses of the General Assembly.

This is a tremendous task and requires much patience and careful consideration. Upon the composition of the various committees depends a very great deal of the Legislature's efficiency as a whole. It is necessary, therefore, that members be placed on such committees as they seem best fitted for, and the determination of that is no child's job.

Both the presiding officers hope, however, to have all committee assignments ready for promulgation by Wednesday of next week.

The Legislature is going to be swamped with Fourth of July invitations.

Already a dozen or so have been sent in, and there are more to come.

The result probably will be that the Legislature, instead of accepting any one and attending in a body some particular celebration, will divide into squads and scatter itself pretty well around all over the State.

A majority of the members likely will attend some big function in their own respective neighborhoods.

SPOT INTERESTS GIVE JULY BOOST

Week-End Shorts Cover, Steadying New Crops---Trade Waiting Bureau Report.

NEW YORK, June 28.—At the opening of the cotton market to-day the tone was quiet and first prices were erratic, being 4 points higher to 1 point lower than last night's close. The larger spot houses came into the market, bidding aggressively for July position, but offerings were limited and scattered, resulting in that option jumping 12 points, to 12.14. Other positions were given practically no support, but prices rallied 1 to 5 points from the opening, mostly in sympathy with the advance in July.

Trading, however, was very light, but the ring crowd inclined to sell on some rains which appeared on the map in Texas and increasing cloudiness in the eastern belt. Advisory warning on Texas coast says disturbance has moved from the Gulf southwest and is now centered between Corpus Christi and Del Rio. Wind and tide will subside during the day. Nice warm growing weather with very favorable indications for rains becoming more general over Sunday.

In addition to this, The Journal of Commerce declares that cotton has improved in Georgia and South Carolina during the past month, while North Carolina conditions are about the same as a month ago. Owing to a cold snap, the season is about two weeks late. Plant small, but strong. Stands poor. Cultivation good. Some insects.

The class of buying looked to be short covering over Sunday and traders evening up their line, pending the Government report, to be made public at noon July 3, which will give an estimate of the cotton acreage of 1913 and the condition of the crop to June 25. The general impression seems to prevail that the market will be only a scalping affair until this report is out of the way.

At the close the market was steady, with June and July showing a net gain of 18 points and other positions generally 2 points higher than the final quotations of Friday.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 28.—Spot people and Liverpool were credited with stopping the July notices yesterday, which were said to be about 15,000 bales.

* * *

There is not much looked for in the market until the Government reports its condition figures and the acreage estimate, which is likely to be about 3 per cent increase, while conditions are generally expected around 82 to 83 per cent. However, if the scattered long interest in July is eliminated, this option might be forced higher.

* * *

"When those in control of July believe the liquidation to be over, something is going to happen," remarked J. M. Anderson.

* * *

* * *

Whether July is a "dead duck" it is not definitely known, but brokers close to leading spot interests intimate that the fireworks are not yet over.

* * *

Sentiment is decidedly mixed and the market is in a waiting attitude, pending Bureau day.

The Journal of Commerce has the following on the condition of the cotton crops in North and South Carolina and Georgia:

"North Carolina—There is no material change in the condition from a month ago, when the report of this journal made it 78 per cent. The season is about two weeks late, due largely to cold weather. The plant is generally small and stands poor, while a number of localities are affected with lice. Cultivation is good, except in a few sections, which are grassy. Since the cold spell the weather has been more favorable and cotton is showing improvement.

"South Carolina—Owing to the recent cold spell the crop is now two to three weeks late, but since the warm weather set in the plant is growing nicely and showing improvement. The plant is small and stands generally are poor, but the fields are clean and cultivation good. Some localities, however, are in grass, with the exception of a few lice, the crop is free of insects. Percentage shows an increase over last month, when it was 69.2.

"Georgia—Conditions are very irregular and spotted in Georgia. On account of dry weather early in the season cotton was slow in germinating and the crop is now fully two to three weeks late. The plant is small, but strong and healthy. Cultivation is good and rainfall ample, but stands are generally poor and irregular. Insects are not complained of, and the weather generally is favorable. Percentage condition shows improvement over a month ago, when it was 76.3."

Dogwood, the principal source of shuttles for use in cotton mills, is growing scarcer year by year, and various substitutes are being tried, but with no great success.

* * *

Liverpool Conference: "No resolutions passed, but conference approved American recommendation c. i. f. and e. per cent actual tare and universal type which was made. King, Neville and Francis, representing Americans' new type, like present. Liverpool from middling up, about half grade lower below middling.

"It is expected that Liverpool and others will adopt new type."

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Theory mars the crop prospective and a condition handicaps the market. The talent, therefore, is idle enough to worry about environment. Bulls admit the crop over a large area is doing splendidly, but taunt their constitutional enemies with the query, 'How long would it require unfavorable weather or the boll-weevil to put it on the blink?' Bears admit that in some sections the crop is below par, but assert with a show of confidence that a continuation of good weather, with a few timely rains, will enormously improve the condition of that portion of the crop, which thus far has made least progress.

"So the talent has come to expect a Government acreage figure next Thursday showing an increase over last year of about 3 per cent and a Government condition percentage of between 82 and 83. Meanwhile, America knows about what to expect in the way of tariff changes and may begin to shape her affairs accordingly. England's trade is in excellent condition, and the rings are beginning to hear that many foreign mills are running low on stocks of raw material; the movement to secure universal cotton types seems to be making satisfactory progress for the first time in the history of the trade."

WILSON APPROVES DISSOLUTION PLAN

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Dullness pervaded the stock market at the opening to-day, most issues ranging beneath Friday's closing. Canadian Pacific declined a point on a few selling orders.

Amalgamated Copper, after opening unchanged, shaded ⅛. Union Pacific began ⅛ off, but after half an hour had sustained a net gain of ⅛. United States Steel was ⅛ lower at the outset, but later recovered. Utah Copper, Southern Pacific, Reading and Atchison made trifling additional advances.

St. Paul commenced with a gain of ⅛, but soon lost it and scored a net decline of ⅝. Chesapeake and Ohio and Chino Copper each lost ⅛. Norfolk and Western and Pennsylvania each dropped ¼.

The curb was quiet.

Dealings in the London market were very light. American shares in London were irregular.

Announcement from Washington of the approval of an agreement of the dissolution of the Harriman merger put Union Pacific up 3⅛ to 148⅝ before the close. The balance of the list was strengthened. Canadian Pacific rose to 218, for a gain of 1⅝, and Reading went to 158⅝, a net gain of 1¼.

The market closed strong.

Government bonds strong. Other bonds steady.

CHANCE WOULD QUIT IF HIS HEALTH GAVE WAY

NEW YORK, June 28.—Frank Chance will make good with the New York Yankees if his health doesn't go back on him.

Chance is no quitter. He undertook a big task in New York, but he'll get away with it unless his nervous system fails him. The least little thing would upset him last fall. They say he is doing better this year. He should stick with the Yanks and produce a winning club next year. If his health bothers him, however, he'll jump the club overnight and go back to his orange ranch in California.

TRADE SHOULD NOT IGNORE BULLISH WHEAT CONDITION

CHICAGO, June 27.—The Inter Ocean says:

"Those who are bullish on wheat say that conditions in the Northwest are such that the trade cannot ignore them much longer and that, despite the impending movement of new winter wheat, its influence will be offset, and that with any further bulge in coarse grains wheat should respond.

"With corn in Oklahoma in the tassel and temperatures around 100, it is possible that continued dry, hot weather will irreparably injure the corn crop. Conservative people advise against following the advance, but favor buying on any good setback. Traders who were in the pit all day yesterday said there was a new class of investment buying which took the offerings from bulls, who were securing profits, and they are looking for higher oats prices, notwithstanding the possibility of good deliveries next month and a liberal carry-over of old oats."

SHARP DECLINE IN PRICE OF CEREALS

Good Rains Encourage Active Selling Move---Cables Weak and Sentiment Mixed.

CHICAGO, June 28.—The professionals in wheat favored the selling side this morning and prices were ⅛ to ⅜ cent lower. The weather map showed light rains in Canada as well as at several points in North Dakota, but none in South Dakota. A dispatch was received from Minneapolis saying that higher temperatures are expected by the Weather Bureau. Liverpool was ⅛ to ¼d higher.

Corn was unchanged to ⅛ to ¼ cent lower on profit taking by longs.

Liverpool was ¼d lower, with Argentina selling freely. A trace of rain was shown at Oklahoma City and some in Texas, but the weather throughout the belt is clear and very hot.

Oats were unchanged to a shade higher for July and a fraction lower for December.

Provisions were easier.

The entire grain list changed to one of weakness during the last half hour of to-day's session. This lowering of prices was on the selling by longs and the putting out of short lines, coupled with a lack of support. Net losses were shown of ⅛ to ⅜ cent in wheat and corn, and ¼ to ⅜ cent in oats. Hog products were lower all around.

Cash sales of wheat at Chicago were 45,000 bushels; corn 75,000 bushels, and oats 60,000.

LIVERPOOL GRAIN MARKET.

LIVERPOOL, June 28.—Wheat closed ¼d to ½d higher.

Corn closed ¼d lower.

WHEAT HARVESTING STOPPED.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Weather Bureau wires from Fargo: "Rains past 24 hours seem generally heavy and cover wheat territory of the State. Water to-day showing from Jamestown to Fargo. Moisture situation satisfactory for present, all things considered. Crop promise for the State about an average."

Kansas City says: "No rain anywhere. Harvesting of wheat stopped everywhere on account of heat. No rain is forecast. Temperature 84 at 8 a. m.

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Barlett, Frazier & Co: "Wheat—Local shorts covered freely on yesterday's late upturn and we see nothing in the news this morning to cause any particular strength.

"Corn—With prospects of continued warm weather over Sunday any decline in values to-day is unlikely.

"Oats—Weather conditions surrounding corn naturally apply to oats and a steady to higher market is likely to prevail.

QUALITY OF HOGS POOR.

CHICAGO, June 28.—There were two distinct hog markets to-day, one for qualified grades at 8.70 to 8.80, the other for packing mixed stuff from 8.65 down, the price being determined by the proportion of strictly packing hogs. Deterioration of quality is exerting its seasonable influence. The market was steady at the lowest prices of the week and live mutton trade was slumpy, owing to the arrival direct to packers of 40 cars of Southern lambs from Louisville.

The Light Brahmas Sure To Be Original "Come-back" Fowl

Evidence Shows This Popular Bird in Years 1860-90 Will Be in Limelight Soon.

From about 1860 to 1890 the Light Brahma was decidedly the classiest of our thoroughbred chickens. In the show room it was one of the first to be cooped and looked at; the last talked about. It was a thoroughbred from away back where the real thoroughbred was made. It was not one of the mush-room type of thoroughbreds; one that was seen in a great blaze of glory one day and the next day sunken clear below the line of vision because the average man could not breed it to look anything like what it was supposed to represent. It was made to stay. It originated in the good old times you read about when they made things to last and gave value received. This gives you a little idea of the quality of the Light Brahma. But as some other things have been supplanted by goods purported to be "just as good" that did not pan out in the long run, this grand old breed was forced to the wall, as it were, for more than a decade.

It has not been entirely forgotten; not by any manner of means. It has been in what the doctors would call a "comatose state," a sort of semi-conscious condition. But you could not hold such a breed in subjection any great length of time. They would not permanently down. No matter if varieties were brought forth that were reputed to be the only things wearing feathers that were worth having. People have heard things similar to that before and did not take much stock in them. So we begin to see the good old Brahma coming back. We can see its outline on the sky line. We see their onward march with that regular tread which means that there is going to be something doing in the Brahma alley, and that too at no very distant day. We see quite a number of the old guard in the line; they are there all right. The following is one the column has been moving so slowly that it was almost not noticeable. Now they have a host of recruits that have put enough ginger into the old lines to set them to moving.

As one prominent old fancier said to another of the same type: It looks a good deal like Brahmas and Langshans, doesn't it? This may not mean very much to the average layman, but to the old-time chicken fancier it means a good deal—it means that the Light Brahmas and the Black Langshans are going to be brought into prominence in the near future and enjoy much of their old-time popularity. During the past decade there have been many and many a poultry show at which there was not a specimen of either of these breeds represented. The first significant intimation the writer had of the Brahmas' reappearance was at the great New Orleans show a year ago last winter when he found a regular lay-out of them. More than a hundred of the very tip-top kind were on exhibition. It almost took our breath away to see them after so long a time without them.

At last winter's Philadelphia show the Light Brahma stood fourth in the list of entries. Now, what do you think of that? A club meeting was held at the Philadelphia show and wide interest was manifested in the grand old breed. At that time it was decided to make Boston the next rallying place for the club meet, and also for a rousing show. We predict that such will be the case, for Boston has always been the nesting ground for this breed. There are quite a number of Light Brahma breeders in the South, with as good a line of goods as can be found anywhere, so we want to put them on notice that it is a good time to begin hunting up the war paint. It is but just that you should each get your share of the trade that is bound to come to this old standby in the next few years. There is no question about it, it is going to come. As we bred the Brahmas ourselves for a good many years, we are only too glad to see them coming into their own. They are deserving.

Frank P. Johnson, Station A, Indianapolis, Ind., is secretary of the club, so if you want to know more about what they are going to do better write to him. In the meantime, see what you can do in producing some good Brahmas.

Judge F. J. Marshall: What is the matter with my little chicks? They make a strange noise like they can not breathe good or like there was something in their windpipe. Please give me a remedy. I am raising them without a mother. They have free range and plenty of room in the sleeping house.
MRS. L. S
Chester, S. C.
Reply: Your chicks have colds, bordering on roup. There are roup remedies galore; in fact, there are so many good cures that the average amateur is all at sea. The following is one of the best for young chicks, and at the same time it is harmless: Extract of witch hazel, 4 tablespoonfuls; carbolic acid, 3 drops; water, 2 tablespoonfuls. A convenient way to use it is in a good spring bottom oil can, as used with the sewing machine. One squeeze of the can into each nostril and into the mouth twice daily will do much to relieve the catarrhal condition. Remove the sick from the well. Let the surroundings be clean.

CHICKENS need more care and attention the next two or three months than any other time during the year. It is perfectly natural for chickens to have lice and mites, and unless you look after them they will multiply in such quantities as to prove profitable. The little chicks will not reach the growth they should and the hens will not lay if they are covered with these pests. We have ties that you can not expect your flock remedies that will positively get rid of them and the cost is very little. For 35c you can get a can of either Lee's, Conkey's or Pratt's Lice Liquid and we will guarantee either of these preparations to give entire satisfaction.

WE are offering Baby Chick Feed at $2.15 per 100 pounds for the next few days. You know the regular price is $2.50 per 100 pounds. Better take advantage of this.

"My Field the World"--A Fine Motto

(Copyright, 1913.)

A great wonder of the deep is the German ship Imperator, which arrived in America the other day.

What a chapter old Job could have talked about that ship if he had seen it!

Think of a ship with three wireless operators working night and day, ALWAYS ABLE TO TALK TO ONE SIDE OR THE OTHER OF THE OCEAN. Think of a ship with nine decks, seven for first-class passengers—a monstrosity almost as complicated as Dante's hell.

Think of a ship with six elevators running up and down, suites of twelve rooms, anchors that weigh more than twenty-five thousand pounds each, a ship with swimming tanks, greenhouses and a population equal to that of a small city.

Poor old "Behemoth," who impressed Job so deeply, would seem a very small thing compared to this modern Behemoth. The original Behemoth, who "drinketh up a river and hasteth not," could be tucked away in one of the coal bunkers of the Imperator, or burned up in one of the big furnaces and not noticed.

There are many wonderful things about that wonderful ship, with her five captains commanded by an admiral.

She is a great tribute to the power of the German people, a tribute to organization, a proof of the wonderful things that can be accomplished by men that are determined to excel.

But the best thing of all about this great ship is the motto written at her prow, "My field the world." That is a good motto, good for this ship that sails the ocean, good for the great philosopher, Bacon, when he said, "I have taken all knowledge for my province," and "nothing that affects man can be foreign to me."

It is a big motto, "My field the world." But not too big for a man who realizes that the world is man's property, his home and his garden, to be developed and owned by him, to be the firm ground from which he shall look out and study the real world, which is the infinite universe.

Every man worthy of the name should have in his mind that motto of the big ship, "My field the world," and interest himself in the world's doings, interest himself in the progress of the race, in its future and in its past, and determine to be a man whose field really IS the world, and not a mouse, whose field is the corner of some back yard.

A Shaken Confidence Must Be Restored

It will be a relief to the whole country to learn that the Diggs-Caminetti "white-slave" prosecutions in California are to be pressed with due diligence, despite the private pressure brought to bear on the Attorney General and others in Washington.

Indeed, such a course was inevitable the moment District Attorney John L. McNab, of the Northern District of California, made public his courageous letter of resignation to the President, thereby attracting public attention to a grave judicial scandal.

The expression of public opinion was both instant, widespread and practically unanimous. A flood of telegrams poured into the White House.

IT WILL TAKE MORE THAN AN ORDER FROM THE PRESIDENT to go ahead with all seemly speed with these cases, an order penned AFTER a storm of popular indignation had broken, TO RESTORE CONFIDENCE in the impartial workings of those courts of justice over which the Federal authorities have control and in those other officers of the Government who have shown such lax judgment on so serious an occasion.

Congress has the very urgent duty before it of not only establishing all the facts but also of FIXING THE RESPONSIBILITY AND THE BLAME.

ONE is the pride of the college,
Handsome and sunny and clever
Joking while gathering knowledge,
Slaving and worrying never.
Baseball and football and rowing,
Sanscrit and Latin and Greek—
Dazed by his wonderful showing,
All of the others stand meek.

One goes through life winning laurels,
Brilliant and able till death;
Proof against foes and their quarrels,
Crushing them all with a breath.
Much as a baby blows bubbles
One leaps along in the race,
Laughing at heartaches and troubles
All of the others must face.

This is a toast to the others,
Hewing their pathway through life—
All the less fortunate brothers
Comrades of sorrow and strife.
Standing and waiting and hoping,
Strangers to Fame and its pride,
Here's to the patiently groping!
Here's to the thousands that tried!

COFFEE.

Editor The Georgian:

What is the matter with the pure food inspector? Is he asleep on his job, that so many brands of adulterated coffee are suffered to be sold to the poor? Ever so many of them have chicory; and in color give a beautiful nut-brown result, but to an inveterate drinker of coffee they are as lifeless as turnip soup.

Suppose the inspector thinks that if people know what they are buying, it is all right. But how about the boarder, when it is passed off on him for coffee? And the temptation is too great, these days of high-priced food to buy the cheaper article.

CAR SERVICE AND STORMS.

Editor The Georgian:

It seems to me the public has a just cause of complaint regarding the street car service which is given them in this city during thunderstorms. It has, during the past few years, become the custom of the Georgia Railway and Power Company to suspend service during even very mild thunderstorms, and with proper equipment this practice seems to be without reason or excuse.

So far as my observation goes, it is not done in any other first-class town, and no sufficient reason has ever been given for doing it in Atlanta. People need the street car service as much when there is a rainstorm accompanied by lightning as at other times.

The Automobile

Everything Being Done to Make Automobiles Safe, He Says. They Have Done Wonders for American Roads.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

I WAS almost startled on seeing, in the current number of the magazine called Motor, a picture of an automobile furnished with the new French device of movable electric eyes!

Even when the auto's great glaring eyes are fixed in direction its resemblance at night to a demon of unimaginable swiftness and power is stunning, and one gets out of its way with panicky haste. But when it bears on each side of its head a glowing eye, which turns magically in all directions, searching out the fleeing pedestrian in his retreat by the fence or the hedge, and detecting every obstruction along the borders of its way, the verisimilitude is complete. Man has never yet made anything so thrillingly lifelike, but inspired with a life that seems more than human!

Everything Done for Safety.

Yet while, to the excited imagination, these movable mechanical eyes may increase the terror of the auto rushing through the night, they are, for all wanderers in the ways, all nomads of the night, a means and an assurance of greater safety. They proclaim, again, that the modern demon of the road is a kindly demon, who means no harm, although he speeds so swiftly, and who would not, willingly, hurt a hair of our heads. He is as desirous as are we who look upon him with fear, and jump at his croaking voice, to avoid all evil.

If those who still carp at the automobile, and nurse an antagonism to it, would consider what has been done, and what is still being done—as witness this latest device—to eliminate the peculiar dangers which its invention has introduced into the highways, they would find themselves taking a more philosophical view of things, and would cease their opposition to one of the greatest advances in locomotion that science has ever promoted. You have only to glance through the pages of the magazine I have mentioned in order to convince yourself that the inventors and manufacturers of auto vehicles hold nothing more dear than the question of safety; safety for those who ride and for those who only look upon the riders.

Put Bad Roads Out of Business.

It is the same with the roads themselves. Unthinking people sometimes blame the automobile for damaging the roads—as if most of the roads that we had before its arrival COULD be damaged! But, look at the other side of the affair. Only a few years ago every American traveling in Europe blushed at the thought of the painful contrast between the roads there and most of those that he was accustomed to at home. He could only console himself by the reflection that we were subduing a new continent, and required time to complete the work in good shape.

Then came the auto, and what has been the result? Within a few short years, solely by the stimulus that it has imparted, we have developed thousands upon thousands of miles of roadways that France herself might be proud of. This single invention has caused a leap of improvement that hundreds of years of ordinary progress would not have produced. The automobile has put the old, muddy, rutty, all but impassable roads of our fathers out of commission, and the whole country smiles with the improvement, and grows richer because of it.

Speaking of French roads, I read another interesting thing, which must be set down entirely to the credit of the automobile. We are now building better roads than they have in France, and the reason is because we have built them from the beginning with the needs of the auto in view. It has taught us how to build them. Many of the French roads are beginning to deteriorate. It is the automobile that has searched out and revealed their weak points. The growing use of auto-carriages of all kinds in the French army has brought a strain to bear upon the roads lying in the districts where the threat of invasion causes frequent military maneuvers in time of peace—a strain that was not foreseen when the roads were constructed—and some of them are proving unable to bear it.

Recognizes Their Value.

What will the French do? Will they abandon the army autos, or intermit the maneuvers? To do so would be to invite instant conquest of their country. No, they will reconstruct the roads, and increase the number of their auto cars. They know the inestimable value of the good demon that has come to revolutionize transportation on this planet, and the roads will have to be made durable enough to carry him on his civilizing and peace-promoting way; for the auto, in its manner, is as great a force for universal peace as is the strong battleship. Everything that links the world together makes for universal brotherhood, and the faster we travel the richer and more contented we become.

:: The Ionian Isles ::

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

IT was just 49 years ago that the Parliament of England with a never-to-be-forgotten magnanimity, resolved to return the Ionian Isles to their oldtime owners, the Greeks.

By the Treaty of Paris, in 1815, the high contracting parties, Great Britain, Russia, Austria and Prussia, agreed to place the isles under the exclusive protection of Great Britain. This agreement was reached not because it was desired by the others, but because it was demanded by Great Britain, the demand being backed by the British navy.

It was in these "Isles of Greece," Corfu, Zanta, Santa Maura, Ithaca and the rest, that modern Greek liberty had its birth, and thanks to England, it was there that it grew to the stately proportions of later years. Great Britain, through her protectorate, kept the islands safe from Turkish depredations, and in 1864 gave them to Greece.

On May 30 of that year the Lord High Commissioner of Great Britain handed over the archives to the Greek plenipotentiary, and on June 6 King George made his entry into Corfu.

Let it be remembered that this Corfu is none other than the ancient Coreyra—the little piece of earth that is responsible for the greatest calamity that ever overtook the human race. Coreyra brought on the Peloponnesian war between Sparta and Athens and their allies, the result of which was the ruin of Athens and the arrest of her wonderful civilization. Had it not been for that war the Athenian genius would have kept on with its development for we know not how long a period, and the gain to humanity would have been inconceivably great. From the cultural standpoint Athens was Greece. It was the home of the art, science, philosophy and eloquence, which made Greece immortal, and when Athens went down all that was not barbarism went down along with her.

Because Coreyra appealed to Sparta to help her fight Athens, and because, as a consequence of the fight, Athens was beaten and her empire practically wiped out, the harm was done to mankind that can never be estimated. It took the world eighteen hundred years to recover, even in part, that which was lost through the fatal Peloponnesian war.

Four More Suspended by Chief

FOUR MORE DROPPED BY CHIEF

Suspensions Continue in Growing Police Scandal as Negroes Tell Story.

With the suspension of four more policemen Saturday afternoon by Chief James L. Beavers, it was announced that the latest police scandal would be probed to its very bottom even though it involved the greater part of the force.

The men deprived of their uniforms and equipment and dismissed from the service Saturday pending the investigation of the story that they visited the notorious resort conducted in the rear of 127 Auburn Avenue by Ola Bradley, a negro woman, were J. P. Born, J. E. McDaniel, Mack C. Folds and J. J. Jackson.

Chief Beavers gave the formal order of suspension at 1 o'clock after he had received a report of an investigation made by Captain A. L. Poole. He said that no other policemen were being considered for immediate suspension, but that the investigation would be continued until every guilty person had been discovered.

Those suspended Friday on the charge of having visited and drunk liquor in the negro disorderly house at the rear of 127 Auburn Avenue were Policeman L. W. Evans and R. T. David and Call Officers C. H. Bailey and R. A. Wood.

The suspensions made Saturday came almost entirely as the result of a story told at police headquarters by Ola Bradley, the negro woman who conducts the notorious resort. She made a signed statement in which the names of Born, Folds and Jackson figured prominently.

She related that Born and Folds were in her place one Sunday morning about three months ago. The men became involved in an argument, and she recalled that one of the men called the other a liar. On this, she said, Folds made an effort to get his revolver.

Captain Poole, who is conducting the investigation into the scandal under the direction of Chief Beavers, found the negro woman who is alleged to have been the cause of the dispute. She bore out the statement of Ola Bradley and also of Claude Gray, who was arrested as a witness early Saturday morning.

Deny Woman's Charge.

The Bradley woman, in telling of the visits of Jackson and McDaniel to her place, said that last Monday she gave Jackson two bottles of beer to drink and that McDaniel urged Jackson not to drink it. All of the men deny they are guilty of wrongdoing and say that they were at the place only for the purpose of getting evidence. McDaniel says that he never saw Jackson drink.

Gray is said to have full knowledge of a disgraceful affair which took place in the resort two weeks ago when two policemen are alleged to have become involved in a quarrel. The officers, it is reported, would have come to blows had not Gray stepped in between them and separated them.

Gray will be closely questioned today in the expectation that he will give the Chief the names of a number of other policemen who have been in the habit of making visits there.

"I am going to give Gray a thorough grilling," said the Chief. "The whole truth is what I am after, regardless of how big a scandal is stirred up by the revelations. All of the men are going to get a fair hearing. If these reports are erroneous or falsified, they will have the opportunity to show it."

Wood's Defense.

Wood, who tendered his resignation Saturday morning, said that he and his partner, Bailey, had stopped in at the negro resort to see that everything was all right. He declared that neither of them drank intoxicants there and that when Moon looked in through the window Bailey was

Edward H. Walker, candidate for Governor in the race with Hoke Smith and Joseph M. Brown, has issued a statement defending unionism in reply to Governor Brown.

"To concentrate indescribable wealth of millions of dollars into the possession of one man," he says, "two things are necessary. First, the law must be broken. Most of the great fortunes of to-day rest on a foundation of bribery, corruption and defiance of the law. Second, the assembling of these big fortunes had to be done by exploiting the lifetime productivity of hundreds of thousands of laborers.

"The Government's failure to protect labor from this crushing greed forced labor to protect itself."

Goethals Says Canal Is Air-Bomb Proof

NEW YORK, June 28.—Colonel George Goethals has returned to Panama. He will remain on the Isthmus until the first ship has passed through the canal. The Colonel laughed at the idea some aviators have they can destroy the Gatun lock by dropping powerful bombs from aircraft.

"I'd like to post a forfeit no aviator could do any serious damage," said Colonel Goethals. "We have not done our work on the locks without care and forethought. Attack from an aircraft has been considered in all the construction work."

J. F. Nutting Enters Councilmanic Race

Joseph F. Nutting, well-known real estate man, announces that he will be a candidate for Council from the Eighth Ward. Mr. Nutting is a former newspaper man with many friends who will be interested to know of his decision.

THE WEATHER.

The forecast: Thundershowers to-night or Sunday. Temperatures follow: 6 a. m., 75; 8 a. m., 80; 10 a. m., 86; 12 noon, 92; 2 p. m., 93.

CREMATORY STRIFE IS ENDED

The crematory row ended Saturday. Mayor Woodward agreed to sign a slightly revised contract. His decision was the result of a conference with Assistant City Attorney W. D. Ellis, Jr., Alderman J. H. Harwell, Councilman A. R. Colcord and C. P. Goree, attorney, friends of Mayor Woodward. A special meeting of Council will be called for Tuesday afternoon to pass it.

The difference between Mayor Woodward and the Council was a point of honor. Council had, by resolution, accepted a proposal of the Destructor Company instead of adopting a contract in order that they might override his veto should he disapprove.

Now a formal contract will be passed in addition to the resolution, which, of course, will take precedence over the resolution. The essentials of the trade had been agreed to, and the only changes made in the recent contract submitted to the Mayor were the insertion of the word "complete" in one paragraph and the change of the word "be" to "the" in another paragraph.

The Destructor Company will be able to get $125,000, first money received from the city, as soon as the program is adopted. No further hitch is anticipated.

It has been announced the crematory will be completed within ten days, at which time all dump piles in the city will be abolished.

Elopers Held Pending White Slave Inquiry

"A happy reunion in the tower" was the promise Recorder Broyles ironically extended to W. T. Wiggins, a mail clerk, who nonchalantly admitted Saturday morning he permitted his wife to leave Jacksonville for Atlanta in company with another man.

Wiggins and Mrs. Rosa Hearn, also of Jacksonville, who testified her husband was dead, were bound over to the State courts by the Recorder on $500 bond each.

"You may have violated the white slave law, also," the Recorder said to Wiggins. The judge said he would have government agents investigate.

LONDON, June 28.—A report is current that Ambassador Walter H. Page is trying to lease the Duke of Manchester's town house at 5 Grosvenor Square.

30 Buried in Fall of Garage in Cleveland

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 28.—The Euclid Square Garage collapsed here to-day. Thirty men were buried. Five men were taken to the hospital and ten others are less seriously hurt.

A second story was being erected over the building, the largest of its kind in the city. The false work fell, carrying the workmen with it.

Slit to Knee Skirt Barred in Louisville

LOUISVILLE, KY., June 28.—Policemen to-day were ordered to arrest any woman wearing a slit skirt that unduly displays her legs.

"A woman who has the nerve to wear a dress that allows her knees to show will not mind so small a matter as a police court trial," said Chief of Police Lindsey.

Brown Sees Slaton As 'Worthiest Man'

Governor Slaton:

In the last hours on earth of Alexander the Great, he was asked to whom would he leave that colossal empire which his genius and valor had created. The dying man replied: "To the worthiest one."

To-day we neither participate in nor view any deathbed scene, but the willing transfer of the executive authority of a great and noble people from him to whom I have full often felt they had been too considerately kind to him whom with voice no one can doubt they have declared: "The worthiest one."

And so, in obedience to their mandate, it is my pleasure to deliver to you the symbol of Georgia's sovereignty and good faith—her Great Seal of State.

May God bless you! May God bless the people of Georgia!

Felder To Be Tried With Lanford, but No Date Is Set Yet

Attorney T. B. Felder and Chief Detective Newport A. Lanford will be tried at the same time in the State's case against them for criminal libel, although no definite plans have been made by the Solicitor as to the date for the trial or whether to transfer the cases to the City Court.

Solicitor Dorsey said he had not yet considered going to trial in the matter, and would not have an opportunity to do so for several days.

The report was current in court circles, however, that the two cases would be transferred to the City Court and probably be tried before the Frank trial.

Fighter Escapes; No Law to Detain Him

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Officials of the Department of Justice to-day admit they have been outwitted by Jack Johnson, negro pugilist, convicted under the white slave law. He was set at liberty under $15,000 bond, and skipped out of Chicago to Montreal, Canada, whence he will depart to-morrow for Havre.

It is said there is no law under which Johnson can be brought back to the United States.

'New York Tea Party' To be $20,000 Affair

WASHINGTON, June 28.—A second "Boston Tea Party," but a peaceful one, will be pulled off in New York Harbor to-day, when 100,000 pounds of tea, valued at $20,000, will be dumped overboard.

The Government experts condemned it and six months were granted to the importers to get it out of the country. Now the Collector of the Port has been ordered to destroy it if he can find it any time after noon to-day.

Chicago Police Jail 12 Race Bookmakers

CHICAGO, June 28.—Detectives today had twelve of Chicago's most elusive race horse gamblers behind bars, and knew whence seven others had fled.

The sudden arrests were made on 50 indictments secretly returned against nineteen hand-book-makers, charging violations of gambling laws in making books on the Kentucky Derby Day races.

Missouri Opened to Standard Oil Again

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., June 28. The Missouri Supreme Court to-day held that the Standard Oil Company of Indiana may continue to do business in this State, revoking the recent ouster.

The decision follows the submission of a transcript of evidence taken at Kansas City, which the Standard Oil Company submitted in an effort to prove it now was not violating the anti-trust laws of Missouri.

George Thatcher, Old Minstrel, Dies

He achieved a nation-wide success in George Ade's "County Chairman."

TAX SYSTEM SCORED BY SLATON

Revision of Criminal and Other Laws Also Urged in Executive's Inaugural Address.

Drastic action toward the rejuvenation and correction of Georgia's laws, especially taxation and the Criminal Code, were recommendations which marked the inaugural address of John Marshall Slaton upon his induction into the gubernatorial office in the House of Representatives before the two bodies of the General Assembly and hundreds of visitors at noon Saturday.

The new Chief Executive drew out in sharp contrast the present system of appropriations and taxation and declared the system was wrong.

He brought up for bitter arraignment the lack of school funds, which he termed the lack of a proper foundation for future citizenship of the State. He advocated an inheritance tax, an increased occupation tax upon corporations and a general equalization of taxation throughout the Commonwealth.

Drain Not Checked, He Says.

He called attention to the loss of millions of dollars through abandonment of tax measures such as that on liquor, the dog tax and others, and declared that no substitute for this drain had been made. He recommended increases in taxation for the school fund and the pension fund, and in concluding pointed to a general tide of prosperity which he declared was to pass over Georgia.

In part, Governor Slaton said:

Our system is wrong. The Legislature can appropriate what it pleases, and the tax rate remains the same. The Legislator has made himself a favorite with his constituency by voting for every popular appropriations and nothing suffers but the State's credit.

Unless some check be made, an increase of revenue will be of no avail in preventing the financial embarrassment of the State. Under the enthusiasm of the moment one appropriation bill may exhaust it.

More than four-fifths of the States of the Union derive revenue from what is known as an inheritance tax. I am informed that this tax is the subject of least complaint.

This form of tax has been approved by the highest authorities and is one of the easiest borne and subject to fewer hardships than any other. The inheritance tax is to some extent a corrective.

Corporation Taxation.

Prior to the year 1905, many efforts were made to collect an occupation tax from corporations. Governor Terrell, in his message of the year 1905, recommended a tentative privilege tax based on capital stock of $100,000 per year on corporations having a capital of $1,000,000, or over. He anticipated from this source more than $100,000 a year, and thought that such sum could reasonably be expected without a hardship. The State, however, has not received one-half this sum, and during the year 1913 the estimated revenue from this source is $48,000.

I recommend that the maximum occupation tax on corporations having $1,000,000 capital and over be $200 per annum, and the tax on corporations of less capital be adjusted accordingly.

Equalization of taxes, either through the enforcement of present laws, or new correctives, so that each may bear his proportionate burden, would not mean the increase of taxes upon any one now performing his duty, but would rather mean the lightening of his unfair portion of the load. I commend this subject to your attention.

Bonded Debt To Be Refunded.

An additional reason for establishing and maintaining the State's finances on a sound basis is the necessity of making provision for more than one-half of the entire bonded debt of the State, maturing in 1915. This is an imperative duty resting on this Legislature.

No sinking fund was provided by law to retire the bonds aggregating $3,679,000 which are due in 1915. The entire State's debt is $6,452,500, which does not include the obligations to the University, amounting to $291,500, and the landscrip fund of $90,000.

All the debt of $6,452,500 is provided for, or will be provided for, by the sinking fund required to be raised annually until the debt is paid off, except the

Mothers' Congress Appeals for Milk To Save the Babies

"Save the babies!" is the cry sent up by Atlanta to join with that of the entire nation through the hot summer months. Every mail continues to bring to the Mothers' Congress here supplications for milk. The demand is far greater than the supply.

"Do not delay your aid," is the Mothers' Congress appeal. "It may come too late. Won't you give it to them by sending in a contribution for the milk fund?"

Baroness Arrives to Wed St. Louis Man

NEW YORK, June 28.—Baroness Kalinewski, accompanied by her brother, Baron Heinrich Kalinewski, arrived here to-day on the Kaiser Auguste Victoria, and said, much to her brother's disgust, she is en route to St. Louis, where she is to marry James Hurley, a prominent railroad man of that city. Their courtship began a year ago in France when their autos came near colliding.

When asked if he thought he might not marry an American before he left this country, the Baron's only comment was, "Not for mine."

User of Dahomeyan Salve Is Fireproof

NEW YORK, June 28.—Fire Commissioner Johnson contemplates sending to Africa for a barrelful of "drayon," the sap of the papau tree, to smear on the 4,000 firemen in this city to make them pain-proof while fighting fires.

The commissioner came to this decision after Amgoza Lee, a native of Dahomey, held a burning match against his naked arm, then against his face and his tongue. He showed no evidence that he felt pain.

TAX REVISION IS SLATON'S PLEA IN MESSAGE

New Governor Also Urges Change in Criminal Code, Abolishing Defendant's Statement.

$3,679,000 which falls due in May and July, 1915.

If refunding bonds were issued in 1915, making the first $100,000 fall due in 1935, then the sinking fund could be made to run continuously and retire each year, until paid, $100,000 of this series of 1915 refunding bonds.

This plan would seem advisable in order to relieve the treasury and the people of the increased burden at this time, unless financial conditions at the time of the sale of the bonds should demand that their redemption begin at an earlier period in order to effectuate their more satisfactory disposition.

Leading bond men in financial centers have stated that if they were certified by some responsible trust company, thus assuring their genuineness, and guarding against their being counterfeited, and if their validity were approved by attorneys who are specialists in this line, the expense would be more than repaid in the price that could be obtained. Certainly no safer investment can be afforded than these bonds.

I recommend that through your appropriate committees you consider at once the matter of refunding the State's indebtedness above referred to.

Registration of Voters.

We believe the present registration law should be so amended that when a voter has once proven his qualification by registering and being enrolled, he shall remain a registered voter unless disqualified for cause due to himself.

The foregoing extract from the last platform upon which I was elected, expresses a principle which deserves universal acceptance. It contemplates no change of the constitution which provides for the qualification of the voter.

The farmers of a neighborhood have duly registered, but the succeeding year when busy with their crops, they can not send their taxes to the collector by some neighbor going to town, except on penalty of being disfranchised.

The traveling men who have registered one year can not send their remittance the next year to the proper officer, and so it is with men in every calling who perform civic duties and who have overlooked the last day of registration, or have been prevented from registering anew by compelling reasons. The professional politician never forgets it.

I recommend that the present registration law be amended to correct the injustice indicated. It would always be provided that the voter must have paid his taxes and not subjected himself to any of the disqualifications provided by law.

Highways.

It is needless to impress upon you the importance of our highways. Their value is an asset of the entire State. An intelligent Highway Commission, or Commissioner, clothed with proper authority, could be the means of untold benefit in suggesting proper methods of building the road adapted to the locality, or in solving the problems of engineering which might arise in various sections.

I call your attention to the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the lease of which terminates in 1919. No one, I apprehend, would or should consider its sale, but the problem of its disposition should be considered by a commission with directions to report its recommendations and its reasons therefor.

To delay this matter will mean to put the State at the inexcusable disadvantage of unpreparedness when the time arrives for imperative action.

The Criminal Code.

One of the fundamental purposes of government is the protection of life and safety of the citizen. If the rules of evidence are so shaped as to prevent the discovery of the truth, and if the State is deprived of the means of sifting the facts, the judges and juries are not to be blamed if crimes are allowed to go unpunished.

It is an anomaly that a defendant should take the stand, make any statement that he sees fit, or that his shrewd lawyer has prepared, and being immune from cross-examination, demand that the judge shall charge the jury that they may accept his unsworn statement in preference to all the evidence in the case.

His carefully written statement may contain all manner of prejudiced assertions which constitute no defense, but the State is not allowed to disprove or to question them. The jury is by law instructed that they may consider them. Without introducing evidence, in order that his attorney may make the last speech, he declares that he can prove assertions by various witnesses, often disreputable men, and challenges the Solicitor General to introduce them. This can not be done because the State can not vouch for their character.

I, therefore, recommend that a law be passed abolishing the defendant's statement, and providing in its place that he be sworn as a witness, if he desires, but his failure to be so sworn be not subject to adverse comment by prosecuting counsel. This is in accordance with current Federal and State law.

The legislation in Georgia against carrying concealed weapons has in recent years been conspicuous. It has been suggested by the law of self-preservation. Daily we read of men who have shot others, and have been acquitted on the old statement that the deceased threw his hand on his hip pocket, and the defendant shot in fear of his life. When searched, the dead man was found generally unarmed.

If the carrying of concealed weapons were made a felony, subject to be reduced to a misdemeanor by either judge or jury, the deterrent effect of such a law would be the saving of many a life. I earnestly recommend to you the consideration of this question.

Banking Laws.

The banks of a State perform public functions, and as such are properly subjected to governmental supervision. The bankers of the State, with the desire of maintaining a high standard of responsibility, and of affording guarantees against improvident management, that imperil the money of the people, recommend legislation looking to the accomplishment of these objects. I commend this subject as one worthy of your serious consideration.

My predecessors have recommended the creation of the position of State Auditor, and in this recommendation I heartily concur. His services could be utilized in checking the cost of new buildings for which requests may be made by the various institutions. Those who have served on the appropriations committees are aware of the inadequate facilities of the State in arriving at the amount of the necessary expenditures.

The Constitution.

The Constitution is the expression of the supreme law of the land. It can only be changed by the people speaking in their sovereign capacity. In order that they may vote intelligently on any proposition it is essential that they understand it. I recommend that in proposing Constitutional amendments, you plainly indicate the proposition to the voter in such language that he may understand the meaning of the question submitted.

My predecessor has called attention to the fact that some of the agricultural schools are well attended, while others receive little patronage, whether due to the matter of location or lack of interest, or from what cause, I am unable to say. Each obtains the same appropriation from the State for maintenance. I recommend that you investigate their condition, and apply the proper remedies.

Slaton is Inaugurated With Simple Ceremonies.

With ceremonies that gained in strength and impressiveness through their very simplicity, John Marshall Slaton to-day became Governor of the State of Georgia, succeeding Joseph M. Brown. The oath of office was administered by Judge William H. Fish, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, at 12:02 o'clock.

Governor Slaton was inducted into office in the presence of a brilliant assemblage of Georgia men and women, including his own and the retiring Governor's family and intimate friends, members of the State Legislature and prominent jurists. For the first time in the history of the State the United States was represented by Judge William T. Newman and Judge Don A. Pardee, of the Federal Court. They occupied seats directly in front of the Speaker's stand.

Galleries and the floor of the House were filled with spectators. By 10 o'clock virtually every seat in the visitors' gallery was taken and room had been provided for a large number on the floor. In the corridors another crowd, unable to gain entrance into the hall, waited patiently for a glimpse of the new executive.

Joint Session Held.

Neither the House nor the Senate transacted any business, convening at 11 o'clock and immediately taking a recess. At 11:45 o'clock both Houses again convened, and the Senate at once adjourned and marched to the House, where members took seats in a semi-circle about the speaker's stand. In the front row of seats about the speakers' stand sat the intimate friends and relatives of Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton. Twenty-eight chairs had been reserved for members of Governor Slaton's family and eight for the family and friends of Governor Brown.

In Governor Slaton's party were Major William F. Slaton, father of the Governor; Mrs. John M. Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Slaton, Justice and Mrs. S. C. Atkinson, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Waldo, Mrs. W. H. Blanchard, Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant, John M. Slaton, Jr., W. F. Slaton, Jr., Slaton Waldo, Albie Waldo, William D. Grant, Miss Margaret Grant, James Jackson Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Phillips and Miss Robinson. In Governor Brown's party were Mrs. Joseph M. Brown, Miss Cora Brown, Charles Brown, Miss Sally Brown, Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Connolly, Mrs. Frances Connolly and Thomas W. Connolly.

Governor Brown Receives Friends.

Governor Brown arrived at the Capitol shortly before 11 o'clock, and went at once into his private office, where he received a number of friends and visitors.

Governor-elect Slaton drove up in his automobile to the Washington Street entrance of the Capitol, accompanied by Mrs. Slaton and his father, Major William F. Slaton. They proceeded to the reception room of the Governor's office, where the inaugural procession formed.

Promptly at 11:45 o'clock Speaker Burwell called the House to order, and immediately thereafter members of the Senate arrived.

The inaugural procession moved from the Governor's office on the first floor. The procession was led by Governor-elect Slaton and Governor Brown. After them came ex-Governor Henry D. McDaniel, and then followed the Justices of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals, the Federal Judges, the State House officers, the members of the joint legislative committee on inauguration, and the immediate families of Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton.

Governor Slaton Presented.

Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton took their places on the Speaker's stand, the first standing to the left of Senator Randolph Anderson and Speaker Burwell and the latter to the right. Rev. James B. Robbins, of the Trinity Methodist Church, opened the ceremonies with prayer, in which he invoked Divine aid for Governor Slaton in the conduct of the aqairs of the State.

Randolph Anderson, President of the Senate, presented Governor-elect Slaton to the people of Georgia and the Legislature, and immediately thereafter Justice Fish administered the oath of office. In a speech expressing great confidence in the ability of the incoming executive, Governor Brown presented Governor Slaton with the Great Seal of the State of Georgia.

After the inaugural ceremonies Governor and Mrs. Slaton and ex-Governor and Mrs. Brown lunched at the Executive Mansion. Ex-Governor and Mrs. Brown retired to their farm near Marietta, and Governor Slaton took possession of the mansion in the afternoon.

92 HERE IN SHADE; MANY DIE IN NORTH

Heat Toll Heavy in Chicago and Cleveland---Middle West Crop Loss $20,000,000.

Ninety-two in the shade.

That was the weather situation in Atlanta at 2 o'clock Saturday. Forecaster C. F. VonHerrmann, of the United States Weather Bureau, placed the thermometer on the most exposed point of the Empire Building's roof, where all the breezes played against it, but the mercury would not down. On the contrary, it continued to ascend, and the forecaster said he would not be surprised to see the 94 mark reached during the afternoon.

"Continued warm, with possibly thundershowers in the afternoon," is the forecast for Sunday.

Nine Die in Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, June 28.—Nine more dead, six children and three adults, were added to Cleveland's heat wave toll early to-day. Scores are in hospitals suffering from prostrations.

At 6 o'clock it was 80 and three hours later 90. Yesterday's record of 101 will be broken.

Chicago Babies Doomed.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Another intensely hot day was in prospect today, with no relief in sight for several days. There were eight deaths yesterday and numerous prostrations.

Many deaths among babies are feared to-day.

KANSAS CITY, June 28.—The heat in Kansas and Missouri will be greater to-day than yesterday, when the thermometer recorded 102 to 105 at a number of places.

It was 89 at 9:30 o'clock, 4 degrees hotter than yesterday.

Overcoats Worn at Duluth.

DULUTH, MINN., June 28.—Steam heat was turned on in downtown buildings and apartment houses today, the coldest June 28 in years. Thermometers registered 42 degrees. Overcoats were worn.

Damage $20,000,000 to Crops.

CHICAGO, June 28.—The crops throughout the Middle West suffered from the terrific heat. The oats crop has been almost entirely killed in Illinois, Missouri, Indiana and Iowa, according to reports received to-day at the offices of large grain dealers.

The loss will approach $20,000,000, they said.

RIGID PROBE TO BE PUSHED BY BEAVERS

More Suspensions of Policemen as Department Scandal Continues to Grow.

drinking a glass of ice water the negro woman had poured for him.

"The other two officers, David and Evans, who have been suspended with us, were not even in the house," said Wood. "The injustice of it lies in the fact that the police department has taken the word of this one man, Moon, against all four of us, in suspending us for drinking in the place."

On a charge of suspected perjury, Chief Beavers indefinitely suspended Evans immediately following the suspension of Wood, Bailey and David. The patrolman was called before the Chief and stripped of his badge, braid and equipment. The case will be thrashed out by the Police Commission.

The evidence in Recorder's Court was that policemen had frequented the negro resort daily and uniformed men had often been seen entering it in broad daylight. One witness told of a midnight brawl participated in by four officers. The Chief said that he had obtained the names of the frequenters of the place.

He began Saturday morning inquiring into a report of police protection of the Auburn Avenue resort and others of its kind. A number of patrolmen were called before him the first thing after he reported to his office and he prepared to continue his inquiry through the day.

Claim They Got Evidence.

Plainclothesman W. T. Moon admitted to the Recorder that he had drunk whisky at the Auburn Avenue resort with the negress operator. He said, however, that he had only done so to secure evidence. The Recorder took him to task for not having reported the incident earlier.

A negro woman inmate of the house said Moon had been intimate with a girl there. Moon made an emphatic denial of the charge, but said he had been a frequent visitor to the place in the interest of getting evidence against it. Policeman Adams testified to the same thing.

Patrolman Wood branded Moon as a deliberate liar and said that he would prove perjury against him. He also said he would prove Adams had perjured himself, after which he would introduce evidence that would merit the immediate discharge of the two men.

Bailey said that the two men, Wood and Adams, had testified against him in a spirit of revenge because several months ago he arrested Adams for fighting.

Beavers to Investigate.

Sergeant J. H. Barfield, who raided the Auburn Avenue place Friday, told the court that on a previous visit to the place he had seen a patrolman in the hall. The man told him he was looking for a girl who was wanted at headquarters. Chief Beavers will inquire into this incident during the day.

Police Commissioner B. Lee Smith was a prominent figure in the police inquiry Friday. He was closeted with the Chief for several minutes before he suspended the first three men, and later in the day he made a personal investigation of the place on Auburn Avenue. He said that unquestionably the resort had been receiving police protection from a subordinate source.

The next meeting of the Police Commission is July 8, and unless there is a called meeting the charges will not be officially aired before that time.

The officers under suspicion were confident they would be completely exonerated when the Police Board took action, and have retained Attorney R. R. Jackson to represent them. Jackson said that his sympathies were wholly with the dismissed men and he denounced the system where officers of the same rank were assigned the duty of spying on their brother officers.

Policeman L. J. Milam was questioned by Captain Terry late Friday night. He was a partner with Wood, the suspended officer. He was questioned regarding Wood's conduct and reported visits to the place.

Chief Beavers said that his inquiry into the reports of misconduct against his policemen would be extensive and that it would not stop until the department had been purged of every man found guilty of an act unbecoming a policeman.

King Would Give Chief Power to "Fire" Offenders.

Chief of Police Beavers will have power to discharge officers from the department if a resolution to be introduced by Commissioner A. R. King is adopted by the Police Board at its meeting Tuesday, July 8.

"There is not another department of the city government that the head does not have this privilege, and the Chief of Police, above all others, should have the power to discharge an officer when he violates a rule of the department or is found wanting in the qualifications for the place, said Commissioner King.

"The action of the Chief in suspending the men who had visited a questionable house shows it is his intention to rid the department of all that class of policemen who use their office to enter places when not required to do so.

Board Trusts Chief.

"The Chief heard the rumor that policemen were visiting the place in the rear of 127 Auburn Avenue soon after his return from Washington City, and immediately started an investigation, detailing Plainclothes Officers Moon and Adams on the job.

"These men were selected by the Chief not because of any 'personal spite' they might have had against the officers turned up, but because they were, in his opinion, qualified to cope with the case and bring the guilty parties to justice. How well they succeeded the action of the Chief and the conviction of the women in the case in the Recorder's Court shows.

"The Board of Police Commissioners exercises great care in the selection of officers, but are never sure of the men until they are tested. It is up to the Chief and his assistants to do the testing. The Police Board will abide by their decision. The board has the utmost confidence in Chief Beavers and his assistants. They have been proved loyal and true.

Can Appeal to Board.

"In any case where an officer who has been discharged by the Chief feels that he has not been given a square deal he can appeal to the board. The Chief will report to the board all cases of suspension or discharge, and the board either will confirm or reverse him—mostly confirm.

"The Chief has started this investigation and he will carry it to a successful conclusion. It is the duty of citizens who have the welfare of Atlanta at heart to give him every assistance."

MRS. KEEFER AGAIN FORGIVES HUSBAND

Mrs. David Keefer, who tells of her matrimonial mix-ups.

The case against David H. Keefer for disorderly conduct was postponed Saturday afternoon while the police sought witnesses of the affair with his son, Jack Macy, among the guests of the Piedmont driving club Friday night.

Mrs. Keefer swore out a peace warrant in Justice Giradeau's court Saturday afternoon, asking that her husband be put under a peace bond.

"I don't want a divorce; I want to remain Mrs. Keefer. I shall let my husband go in peace," declared Mrs. David H. Keefer, of 80 East Fourteenth Street, who has sworn out a warrant against the well-known broker, charging him with assault and battery on her son, Jack Macy, Friday night.

"I did fly at his throat last night—to kill him," declared Mrs. Keefer Saturday morning with vehemence, "but he warded off the blow and struck me a full blow on the breast. I told him, too, to leave town immediately or I would fill him with bullet holes—but I shall not. I shall sit still in the boat; I shall let him go in peace, for all I want is protection. And that I will have."

Broker and Wife Clash.

The latest sensation in connection with the stormy marital relations of Mr. and Mrs. Keefer, which have furnished "live copy" for papers all the way from Georgia to New York and back again, occurred at a club Friday night about 10 o'clock, when Keefer called with a deputy sheriff to serve papers on his stepson, Jack Macy, to gain possession of a $5,000 automobile.

In the trouble which followed Keefer and young Macy exchanged blows which left marks. Mr. and Mrs. Keefer also clashed. Macy said Saturday morning Keefer struck him first while Deputy Sheriff Miner was attempting to handcuff him. Keefer denies this.

But Mrs. Keefer's own story, as she told it to a reporter for The Georgian Saturday morning, is as follows:

"I returned to New York from Paris in the early part of 1906," said she, "to find there, in my father's home, my old friend and future husband, David H. Keefer.

"He was very ill, and, as I looked there upon his frail form, somehow or other I fancied I saw my former husband and it gave me new courage, new life, for I myself had come from Paris, as I thought, to die.

"He had been a dear friend to me and to Mr. Macy while we were living in Thomasville, Ga., and following Mr. Macy's death he had corresponded with me across the waters.

"And oh those beautiful letters which he wrote to me. How could I think otherwise than that he really loved me from the very depths of his heart?

"A man surely loves a woman if he corresponds in such a way all the way across the waters, don't you think?

Tells About "Real Man."

"So we were married shortly after my return to my father's home. Three days after our wedding I beheld the real man—he actually told me that he believed woman was created only for downfall at the hands of man.

"From that time on he was a beast and more than once he would have allowed me to starve to death if he could. Then came the divorce proceedings in New York State, in which there was much legal juggling at my expense—and that I will not countenance whatever else happens. The scene shifted from New York to Georgia, where I won in the preliminary skirmish—and then he, my recreant husband, came to me to beg forgiveness.

"I forgave—I am always willing to do that—but soon the same old scenes were being enacted. Mr. Keefer, as brilliant as he was and is, was always fond of the dazzle, the things purely of this life.

"He was found in a hotel with another woman. He came nome drunk repeatedly. Things went from bad to worse, and finally we separated. He went away. I remained in New York."

Y. M. C. A. Suspends Operation for Year

After twenty-scven years' continued operation the Y. M. C. A. will go out of business July 1, pending the completion of the new association building a year hence. The suspension is necessitated by an agreement to turn the Y. M. C. A. building, at Pryor Street and Auburn Avenue, over to its new proprietors, the Chamber of Commerce.

While the work of the association will be suspended, the organization will be kept intact. Temporary headquarters will be established in the Baptist Tabernacle.

STATE SECURES NEW PHAGAN EVIDENCE

Frank A. Hooper, associated with Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution of Leo M. Frank on the charge of strangling Mary Phagan, admitted Saturday that Jim Conley, negro sweeper at the National Pencil Factory, had made important additions to the story of his part in the murder mystery and had told of circumstances on the day of the crime which he had revealed in none of his previous statements.

A persistent report that Conley had made the startling admission that he had seen Mary Phagan enter the factory on the day she was slain arose at the time the negro was questioned more than an hour by Solicitor Dorsey early in the week, and this rumor was heightened after Attorney Hooper's interview with the negro Friday.

In all of his statements to the detectives Conley denied he saw the girl at all on the day of the crime until he was horrified by the sight of her dead body lying in the rear of the second floor where he was directed by Leo Frank. Solicitor Dorsey is believed to have wrung the statement from him that he did see Mary Phagan when she came in the door of the factory and went to the second floor to Frank's office.

Hooper Mum on Topic.

Mr. Hooper refused either to affirm or deny this report, declaring that his connection with the case was so recent that he would not be warranted in making any definite statement for publication in reference to the evidence in the possession of the prosecution.

His attention was called to the fact that while in all of the published statements of Conley the negro denied seeing Mary Phagan go into the factory, no one connected with the prosecution could now be induced to say that he still stuck to this particular and puzzling feature of his story. Mr. Hooper, however, would make no comment on the circumstance.

He contented himself with the general assertion that the State has a big stack of evidence of which the defense is in entire ignorance and of which they will remain in ignorance until it is presented when Frank is placed on trial for his life.

"I went to the police station yesterday merely for the purpose of having Conley rehearse his story to me," said Mr. Hooper. "It is true that he told me of a number of circumstances of which I had been in ignorance before, circumstances which have a most important bearing on the case. He made additions to his story which, while they were along the same general line as his last affidavit, gave a detail that assisted me remarkably in getting a much clearer idea of the events as they happened on that day.

Will Be Revealed at Trial.

"I can not tell what they were. They will be revealed when the trial is in actual progress. Mr. Dorsey has guarded his evidence carefully and has refrained from trying his case in the papers. If it were not presumptuous for me to step in and give this evidence away to the public and to the defense it would at least be most unwise.

MRS. STETSON DECLARES MRS. EDDY, DIVINE, STILL RULES SCIENTIST CHURCH

NEW YORK, June 28.—In a remarkable statement to-day Mrs. Augusta Stetson, founder of the first Christian Science church in this city, denied she is seeking to succeed Mrs. Baker G. Eddy, and declared that Mrs. Eddy, like Jesus Christ, did not die as other mortals die, but passed into a spiritual life and still rules as the head of the universal church.

Mrs. Stetson claims to be the spiritual head of the branch church, but says Mrs. Eddy is rising to a final demonstration of her teachings that there is no death.

The statement follows the recent publication of a book by Mrs. Stetson, called "Reminiscences, Sermons and Correspondence," which opponents of Mrs. Stetson say will pave the way for a formal declaration of leadership.

Mrs. Stetson, who was excommunicated from the Christian Science Church because of a dispute over local leadership, said:

"My relations with the church are the same as they have always been since I became a student of Mrs. Eddy. I began working in Christian Science from both a material and spiritual foundation, and continued to demonstrate the power of spirituality over material sense. Step by step, I followed Christ Jesus and Mary Baker Eddy until I had demonstrated up to the point of emergence from a material organization, when I accepted the inevitable, the request of our leader, 'to begin to build on a wholly spiritual foundation, than which there is no other.'

Acknowledges Eddy Leadership.

"Throughout the columns of my book I positively state that Mrs. Eddy is the head of her church, which means the entire body comprising the members of the mother or universal church. Mrs. Eddy has not died, but is rising to a final demonstration of her teachings that 'all is life; there is no death,' and is, as she has been, the spiritual head of the universal church.

"I never have ceased to follow the impersonal ideal once seemingly embodied in flesh. I am steadfast in my convictions that I am the spiritual head of the branch church which she organized and over which she placed me as spiritual head. I am responsible to God and my leader for defending my position.

"I now am awaiting the final victory of truth and love over error and hate. I shall never be separated from my teacher and leader, Mrs. Eddy, nor from my students who comprehend divine metaphysics. My church will stand as a 'light upon the hill,' known and acknowledged by all men as a demonstration of my teaching of Christian Science as taught me by Mary Baker Eddy. The hour has struck. The night has passed. The day dawns. Victory at last rests on the side of Christian Science."

Mrs. Stetson explained this to mean the world will soon realize the divinity of Mrs. Eddy.

Willing to Take Up Rule.

She continued:

"I was ready and willing to follow my leader, Mrs. Eddy, at her request, and continue to demonstrate at any cost to me the principles of Christian Science, or divine metaphysics, which for many years I had demonstrated in a degree. I am continuing in the church the structure of truth and love and am rising in spiritual power over remaining undestroyed material sense and material organization.

"My spiritual ego consciousness is a member of the body of God, therefore a member of the real church, the house (consciousness) not made with hands, eternal in the one mind.

"Those who have not risen out of material organization and who require personal association and who are not a law unto themselves, but require the help of these a step higher on the ladder of spiritual progress, should remain in the material organization until compelled by the law of truth to advance."

DEATH FROM CHALK POISONING OF CHILD STIRS SCHOOL HEADS

Julia Davenport, one of the friends of Mary Tribble.

Classmates covered grave of girl with flowers.

Though the home is dark with sorrow, and the death of the little girl has left a void that can never be filled, the parents and friends of little Mary Tribble, 7-year-old victim of colored crayon, find a measure of comfort to-day in the thought that her fate has driven home with terrible earnestness a lesson that will be of incalculable benefit to hundreds of other school children.

The death of the child is to be the price of increased vigilance by the teachers of scores of Atlanta schools in watching over their young charges, and greater care by the pupils.

Many of the teachers of the Atlanta schools have already begun to formulate plans and rules that will minimize the danger to the children in handling colored chalk, and other objects likely to contain poison.

The funeral of the little girl Friday was one of the saddest ever held in East Atlanta. A company of Mary's little friends members of her school and Sunday school classes, gathered at the East Side Baptist Tabernacle to pay a last tribute of love.

They brought great bunches of wild flowers, plucked with their own hands in the nearby woods where Mary had romped with them, and placed them on her coffin. As the funeral procession entered the church, the little boys and girls lined up on either side of the door, and the body of the little girl was carried slowly between the lines of those she loved and who loved her.

STATE BOARD AID FOR MARRIAGE BILL ASKED

One Member of Health Department Already Has Indorsed Hixon Measure.

Efforts to obtain from the State Board of Health an endorsement of the "pure marriage" bill, introduced into the Senate by Senator J. T. Hixon, will be made by friends of the measure, according to an announcement made by Senator Hixon Saturday morning. One physician employed in the offices of the Board of Health already has sought out Senator Hixon and assured him he would lend his personal support to the measure.

Senator Hixon said the work of bringing the attention of the Board of Health to the bill probably would be under the direction of Dr. B. L. Emory, of Villa Rica, Ga., author of the bill, and at whose request it was introduced by Senator Hixon.

Dr. Emory, it is said, personally will present the bill to the Board of Health and ask co-operation in obtaining its passage. The bill was endorsed by the Carroll County Medical Society before it was brought to Atlanta. Senator Hixon is using this written endorsement of the measure as a lever to swing votes for it.

Expects Bill to Get Attention.

Senator Hixon is confident his bill will be taken seriously and that it will receive the careful consideration of the Senate. It raises the marriage age limit in Georgia from 14 to 16 in the case of the woman, and forbids any man marrying who is less than 18 years of age.

By far the most important features of the bill, in the opinion of Senator Hixon and its friends, are the provisions prohibiting the granting of marriage licenses to persons who are afflicted with tuberculosis or other chronic and contagious diseases, and to persons who are habitual drunkards or addicted to the drug habit.

Will Help Prevent Disease.

Senator Hixon is anxious to see his marriage bill become a law. He declares the passage of such a bill will do more to stamp out disease than all other kinds of legislation that might be passed.

"Several of the most progressive States in the Union," Senator Hixon declared, "have laws similar to this bill, and they have worked wonderfully well.

"I expect to live to see the time when such a law will be on the statute books of every State, and when that time comes there will be fewer lunatics and less contagious and hereditary diseases than now."

GEORGIANS GO TO GETTYSBURG REUNION

First Platoon Off Under General A. J. West---Six Hundred to Attend From State.

Headed by General A. J. West, commissioner from Georgia, the First Battalion of Confederate Veterans from Atlanta and the State-at-large left at 11 o'clock Saturday morning for Gettysburg and the national reunion of the blue and the gray on July 1, 2 and 3, fifty years after the battle.

Atlanta, with 75 Confederates and the State of Georgia, with 600, will be well represented in comparison with other States. Through the efforts of General West, the State has obtained a favorite camping ground fronting Confederate Avenue, the main thoroughfare of the reunion city. Situations at this vantage point were sought by every camp.

The first preliminary reunion between the Union and Confederate veterans took place in Atlanta Saturday morning, when the ticket sale started at the Southern Railway office. The participants were a Mr. Black, a Union veteran, and F. L. Hudgins, commander of Camp C. A. Evans, Confederate veterans of Decatur. Seeing Mr. Hudgins and other wearers of the gray buying tickets to Gettysburg, Mr. Black "butted in" and said "Good morning, boys. My name is Black. I was on the other side, but it's all over now and I'm with you."

Prominent Veterans Go.

Among the prominent Atlanta veterans who left on the morning train were General A. J. West, Judge George Hillyer, railroad commissioner; Colonel John W. Lindsey, prison commissioner; Captain J. W. English, president of the Fourth National Bank; J. C. Huff and A. A. Nolan.

Commander F. L. Hudgins and Vice Commanders I. N. Nash and W. H. Mitchell made up the Decatur delegation.

Other Georgia veterans who left from Atlanta on the first train were W. F. Gay, of Newborn, a member of Jefferson Lamar Camp No. 305, of Covington; J. N. Mitchell, Canton; Judge J. F. C. Williams, ordinary of Harris County; Sam Moore, A. F. Truett and J. T. Forester, Hamilton.

Many Carry Wounds.

Many veterans will take to the reunion wounds or other souvenirs connected with the battle or other Civil War events. General West will take the greatest object of interest to be seen at the reunion. It is a Confederate half-dollar, one of four which were coined before the dies were broken. It is valued at $10,000 and was presented to General West by Attorney David H. Keefer.

F. L. Hudgins and I. N. Nash, of Decatur, both were wounded at Gettysburg. Nash lost his left arm and Hudgins was shot through the body. Hudgins took along a frying pan he captured at the Battle of the Wilderness May 6, 1864, when it was filled with salt pork placed there by some combatant who didn't have time to remain and eat.

W. H. Mitchell, the other Decatur veteran, did not participate in the battle of Gettysburg. He tried three times to get here, but on each occasion was wounded in a preliminary battle on the other side of the Potomac. He confessed this morning he didn't know whether he was lucky or unlucky.

Gettysburg Begins to Fill With Veterans.

It is expected to reach its height by to-morrow night. Gallantly the little borough of 4,000 has tackled the proposition of caring for its guests, but already it is beginning to feel the stress.

Army officers, watching the multitude grow, to-day sized up the camp and the preparations, practically completed, and said it was the biggest thing of its kind they had ever seen.

To add to the difficulties and dangers of a situation hazardous under any circumstances, the weather is almost unbearable. With a sun blazing savagely the humidity is so high that every movement is productive of exhaustion. There have been several cases of heat exhaustion.

Considerable indignation has been manifested by army officers and by Lieutenant Colonel Lewis E. Beitler, secretary of the Pennsylvania commission, over the widely published reports that no flags but the Stars and Stripes would be permitted in the camp. No such order ever was issued either by the War Department or the commission. As a matter of fact, several houses in the town are flying the Stars and Bars.

Five troops of State police have been mobilized here and this morning the policing of the town was turned over to them.

New Book Tells All About Health-Giving Waters in Georgia

A treatise on the mineral and commercial waters of Georgia has been issued by the State Geological Survey. It gives more than 200 analyses, and much other valuable data.

"Mineral Springs of Georgia" is the name which State Geologist S. W. McCallie has given to the pamphlet, and which is regarded as a valuable "handbook" for physicians.

The booklet tells of the accommodations for visitors at the various springs. It deals with the history of the springs, origin of mineral waters, definition of mineral waters, thermal springs, medicinal value, classification and geographical distribution.

Persons wishing a copy can obtain it by sending 16 cents postage to S. W. McCallie, State Geologist, Atlanta.

Dr. Ridley, who for several years was on the platform as a lecturer, calls this "A character study so arranged as to keep people awake, embodying the humorous things which all of us see, but only a few remember."

Crazed by the heat, Amanda Dieu, a negro woman, strangled her child to death on the farm of Harry L. Schlesinger, two miles north of Buckhead, Saturday morning. The woman is the wife of Turner Dieu, long a tenant of the Schlesinger farm. For some time she had been complaining of the intense heat.

Becoming irritated at something her child had done, she choked it to death before anyone could interfere. She was arrested.

Plans Airship Squad In All Russian Corps

ST. PETERSBURG, June 28.—Every Russian army corps is to have a flying squad if the plan of the Minister of War is carried out, it was announced in the Duma.

Great progress is being made in the aerial armament, it was said, and the Government recently doubled the number of dirigibles and had acquired craft known as "aerial dreadnoughts."

Roumania Warlike; Threatens Bulgaria

BUCHAREST, ROUMANIA, June 28.—The Government to-day ceased granting furloughs to Roumanian soldiers. All officers and troops absent on leave have been ordered to report to the colors. The war office is preparing for a complete mobilization of the army.

MILAN, ITALY, June 28.—Vittorio Mariani, clerk in a railway station at Tivoli, near Rome, at a salary of $5 a week, inherited $6,400,000 from his uncle, Alesandro Corrandoini, who died in Buenos Ayres, where he made his fortune.

The uncle planned to surprise his nephew.

SHOW-ME DRESS MOST DARING IN CENTURY

Newest Paris Style Is to Wear as Little as Possible and That Transparent.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, June 28.—"The most daring in the past 100 years," was the way the summer styles of women's dress for 1913 were described to-day. The newspapers are printing columns of comment, in addition to many letters of protest, against the "immodest" and "immoral" styles.

The latest modes are designed to show as much of the wearer as possible. In addition to the slashed skirts, extreme decollete and sleeveless waists, gowns are being made from diaphanous materials. Little or nothing is worn under these transparent dresses.

Corsets are out of date. Apparently no fashionable woman wears them any longer. The majority of bodices noted at the Auteuil track did not reach more than a few inches above the waistline, and those few inches were filled in with flesh-colored chiffon, so that it would appear that the wearer was adorned with a gown of the most aggravated decollete.

Petticoats also have gone out of date. Those who follow the fashions say none was seen at Auteuil. Many women have adopted the style of wearing tights and dresses slashed far above the knee. Some of the tights were flesh colored; others were of brilliant hues in order to attract attention.

Another new fashion is to adorn the stockings with real jewels and real flowers.

LOS ANGELES, June 28.—Others may dine at the Cafe Goodwin, but not Nat Goodwin, with carte blanche all the way down the menu from caviar to camembert, may not. The genial host found himself in a new role when he sat down in his own cafe. Dining became so inexpensive that it seemed unreasonable not to dine often and well.

The result was that Mr. Goodwin, a few days ago, found himself ill and called a doctor. The doctor told him that he had been too good a patron of the Cafe Goodwin and must not think it his duty to test the entire menu.

Dr. Hanscom Picks 'Salvation' for Text

Dr. George Loring Hanscom will preach the morning service at the Central Congregational Church, Ellis Street and Carnegie Way, Sunday, taking as his subject, "Saved: What Does It Mean?" An elaborate musical program has been arranged.

During July and August Miss Mamie Adel Hays, soprano, will sing at all services. Miss Hays has been studying in New York for the past three years and is spending her vacation in Atlanta.

Dr. Percy Starnes To Leave Atlanta

Dr. Percy J. Starnes, who for three years has been city organist in Atlanta, resigned Saturday, effective August 1. Dr. Starnes explained that the Atlanta Music Festival Association will be without funds after that date and he did not care to ask for public subscriptions.

15,000 Coal Miners Ordered to Strike

CHARLESTON, W. VA., June 28.—The three days' conference between the New River coal operators and officials of the United Mine Workers of America with Governor Hatfield as mediator was without avail and today the miners received notice to strike.

Unless some agreement is made by Monday 15,000 miners will quit work.

Nearly everybody in Atlanta reads The Sunday American. YOUR advertisement in the next issue will sell goods.

DO YOUR BEST, IS PONY MAN'S ADVICE

CONTEST GINGER.

Your friends are watching you and the record you are making. You can not afford to lose.

Don't show a "yellow streak." Remember, the others are not landing every subscription they ask for, either.

Remember, the other fellow is working, too.

Do your best, and you are bound to do well.

All contestants in the race for The Georgian and American ponies are keyed up to the highest pitch just now, for the day when the bonus offers will expire is near at hand.

Boys and girls are straining every nerve to get promises fulfilled before July 5, for subscriptions brought in now count more than they will at any future time during the contest.

"Many of the boys and girls waste a lot of good time trying to find out what their rivals are doing," says the contest manager. "This is foolish. It is very likely that accurate information can not be had, for contestants are bragging, just to discourage the others in the race.

"The contestant who goes after votes with all his might will have no time to work about rivals, and will not need to worry about the others, either.

"The thing for the boys and girls to do is to set their minds on winning a pony outfit, and let nothing else distract their attention. No one ever won a fight who went into it half-heartedly."

The standings will be published to-morrow, and there will be gains shown worthy of careful notice.

Builds 2-Acre $15,000 Home for Her Cats

GREENWICH, CONN., June 28.—Mrs. Clifford B. Harmon, daughter of Commodore E. C. Benedict, lifted the first spadeful of ground to-day in the construction of what is to be the most complete home for cats in this country.

The "cattery" is to cover more than two acres of ground. There are to be eight rooms, hot and cold water, electric lights, gas for cooking, two baths, a kittens' nursery, steam heat. In addition there is to be a seven-room cottage for Mrs. F. Y. Mathis, who has been breeding famous cats for about ten years.

PRINCESS LOUISE WRITES NEW BOOK

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MILAN, ITALY, June 28.—Ex-Crown Princess Louise of Saxony, who has resumed the title of Countess of Montignoso, is about to publish another volume of autobiography.

"The book is still my own story," she said to an interviewer, "but it is different from the last. It is a revelation of my own soul in the guise of fiction. I describe Italy's beauties athwart my own personal impressions; very strange ones they are—I'm such a funny person. And, do you know I don't want to know myself well?

"People accuse me of being shifty in my loves. That's true; but I should have been otherwise had I encountered a strong man of iron will who knew how to dominate me. Alas! I have come across only vulgar bourgeois weaklings. That's the why and wherefore of my feverish quest after the happiness to which I, too, have a right.

"If those who sought my friendship had put it out of their minds that I was a Princess of Saxony and had treated me simply as a woman, then, perhaps, I, too, should have enjoyed my good share in life and love. As things are, I travel and travel in a frenzy to distract myself and my greatest horror in life is lest I should become plebeian."

Rate on 50 Chinese Skeletons a Puzzler

NEW ORLEANS, June 28.—What rates to charge for shipping 50 Chinese skeletons from this city to San Francisco is bothering freight agents of this city. The skeletons are "knocked down" and boxed, ready for trans-shipment and burial, "under the eyes of Confucius."

The railroad declares bodies must have been buried at least 20 years before they can be classed as "merchandise." Only a few of the Chinese now under discussion have been interred that length of time.

'Don't Give Up the Ship' Flag Is Prize

TOLEDO, OHIO, June 28.—The battle of Lake Erie of1913 is practically being refought as a part of the centennial celebration here, as the result of the contest for possession of Commodore Perry's "Don't give up the ship" battle flag, which is wanted for the rebuilt flagship Niagara.

Director George Stevens, of the Museum of Art, to-day remained steadfast in his determination not to relinquish to Ensign George M. Lowry the relic, loaned by Secretary Daniels for three months.

START FIGHT FOR ALABAMA PAVING

Property Owners Declare That the Street Never Has Had Any Improvements.

A strong fight for the repaving of East Alabama Street, between Whitehall Street and Central Avenue, one of the busiest thoroughfares of the city, was begun Saturday with a petition addressed the Mayor and Council. It reads, in part:

"We, the undersigned citizens and property owners on East Alabama Street, between Whitehall Street and Central Avenue, respectfully petition your honorable body to repave this street for the two blocks mentioned as early as possible.

"We desire to call your attention to the face that these two blocks are now paved with the original belgian blocks and the street is in a very bad condition and is a hindrance to traffic. We further wish to call your attention to the fact that these two blocks never have had any improvements or asked for any before this time.

"In the very near future the Louisville and Nashville terminals will be completed, and all of the wholesale produce houses will be located in this section, and traffic necessarily will be increased; therefore, with the present conditions existing, it will be almost impossible to take care of same.

"We suggest that inasmuch as there is a steep grade between Whitehall and Pryor Streets, that this portion of the street be repaved with brick, and the block between Pryor Street and Central Avenue be repaved with wood block."

SINKS AS FRIENDS LAUGH.

NEWTON, N. J., June 28.—While trying to swim the Paulinskill River here with a catch of 40 pounds of fish strung about his neck, Harry C. Pitman, 18, was drowned. Friends nearby thought his cries for help were in fun and laughed at him as he sank.

A., B. & A. Strikes Securities Snag

Receivers of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad have been unable to make arrangements to retire the $4,700,000 of 5 per cent receivers' certificates which fall due Tuesday, July 1.

It is believed the certificates will be made to bear 6 per cent from maturity until paid, which may be for some time, in view of the condition of the money market.

H. M. Atkinson and E. T. Lamb left Atlanta early in the week for New York, where they now are endeavoring to arrange for refunding the securities, which in effect are notes made one year ago.

In the absence of these men, representing respectively majority and minority bondholders, no one in the A., B. and A. offices here was able to say just what progress has been made.

The notes in question were sold to retire an issue of $3,250,000 receivers' obligations and equipment trusts, and to provide for certain improvements.

The road went into the hands of a receiver January 2, 1909.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"DEAR, could you make room for this in your trunk?" asked Helen anxiously.

"Um, what is it?" Warren did not look up from the great roll of collars he was fitting in the tray.

"My heavy coat—I'll need it for the steamer."

"Should say I couldn't. Put it in the roll with the rugs."

"But we've got to put both our train coats and the steamer pillow in that—it won't hold any more."

"Then you'll just have to carry it. "See here," opening a small leather case of folding coat hangers, "how many of these things will we need?"

"Take them all, dear, I'll want some. Where is that other case of six, Aunt Emma gave you for Christmas? Oh, here they are."

"Then put them in your own trunk. I'm not going to fill up mine with a lot of truck for you. Look at all those papers," pointing to some packages he had brought from the office.

"Oh, do you have to take all those?"

"That's not all—there's more in that suit case. And they're a darn sight more important than your frillikins."

Helen, who had always counted on putting certain things in Warren's trunk, went back to her room and gazed helplessly at her small and already overcrowded steamer trunk. How could she get everything in?

"Oh, you'll have to throw out everything like that; we can't leave it to draw mice. Now, you're sure you've got everything out of the refrigerator? The butter and the rest of that jar of bacon you can give to the houseman. And you'd better sprinkle some borax around the sink. Wait, I'll come show you."

A Farewell Call.

She was still in the kitchen, when the 'phone rang and Warren called impatiently:

"Helen! Somebody wants you."

"Oh, WHY will people call us up at the last moment?" she protested resentfully, for every second now was precious.

"Hello! I just wanted to say goodbye,"\ shrilled Mrs. Thurston's voice, "and wish you all kinds of a pleasant trip."

"That's very kind of you," lied Helen politely.

"Your boat's sailing at 3, isn't it? I'd so like to come down to the dock, but I promised Mrs. Walker to go with her to a bridge tea. I disappointed her last week, so I'll just have to go. Well, you certainly have a fine day to start. I was afraid this morning it would rain, but it's cleared off beautifully."

"Yes, it has," murmured Helen stupidly, wild to get back to her packing, but not wanting to be abrupt.

"Oh, while I think of it, I want to give you the address of that place in the Rue de Rivoli, the one I told you about where I got those lovely hand-embroidered nightgowns. Have you a pencil there?"

Helen got a pencil, took down the address and was just about to say good-by when Mrs. Thurston held her with a—

"And I'm going to ask you to get me two more—size 36. You saw the ones I have, I paid fifteen francs for most of them, but use your own judgment—only I shouldn't like to pay over twenty. I'm sure you won't mind getting these for me, will you? And oh, don't you want the address of that handkerchief place, where they embroider the three initials for only a few centimes extra? If you'll hold the phone a minute—I've got the address on one of the boxes they came in."

Helen could hardly restrain her impatience, but she was forced to wait for the address.

Very Annoying.

"If you're getting some for yourself," purred Mrs. Thurston, "and if it isn't TOO much trouble, I SHOULD like another dozen of those tiny evening handkerchiefs—you know the initials—M. C. T."

When Helen finally succeeded in breaking away she turned from the phone with a furious—

"The idea of her calling me up this late to send for things!"

"Well, I'd have cut her off quick enough," growled Warren. "She wouldn't have kept me standing there. Here," shoving toward her some steamship labels he had just filled out with their name and number of their stateroom, "better get these on now. Can't leave everything till the last minute."

Helen took the oval blue and white "North German Lloyd" labels and pasted them on her trunk and suit case with supreme satisfaction. She had always envied people with trunks covered with steamship and foreign hotel labels—it gave their baggage such a traveled, "cosmopolitan" air.

The one label that was left over she put on a large trunk that she had had brought up to get out some things for the trip. It had never been abroad, but she MIGHT have taken it, so she had no scruples in decorating it with a label.

Unfortunately just at that moment Warren appeared.

"These yours?" throwing down a couple of her linen collars that had been sent to the laundry with his. Then noticing the label as she jumped up almost guiltily from her knees before the big trunk, "What's that mean? You're not going to take that trunk?"

"No, dear," flushing in confused anticipation of his ridicule.

"Well why in thunder did you stick on that label?" Then as it dawned on him. "By George, I've heard of fool women who bought foreign labels and plastered up their trunks, but I thought you had some sense."

This incident did not contribute to Helen's speed in packing, for with burning cheeks, she scraped off with the scissors the offending label.

"The ice man's here now, m'am," announced Maggie.

Some Hustling.

And again Helen had to stop her packing to instruct the iceman to leave no more ice until they notified him of their return. Then came the superintendent, whom she had sent for to see about turning off the gas. The time was going fast—and her trunk was not nearly ready.

"Oh, m'am, see what I found!" Maggie held up triumphantly a tea spoon they had looked for yesterday when they had counted the silver. Now more time was taken in unlocking the silver and putting away the spoon.

"What about the table fern, m'am. Didn't you say you were going to give that to Mrs. Hubbard?"

"You can do that after we're gone. Now don't come to me with everything Maggie. Look at the time—I must finish packing!"

"Trunk ready to strap?" called out Warren.

"Not quite, dear," nervously. "In just a few moments."

"Well now don't fool around and not be ready. I've ordered the cab for twelve sharp."

When Helen was much hurried she was apt to become confused, and now he fluttered about trying to do everything at once. There were more interruptions, and twice she had to stop to find something for Warren.

"All right, dear, it's all ready," she answered at last to his repeated call of "Trunk ready?"

"Sure this is the right key?" he demanded. "No, it's the lock! Rusty as the devil. Why in blazes didn't you try it? Get some oil!"

Helen flew for the oil, and for another precious ten minutes Warren fumbled over the lock.

"Oh, wait, dear, have you got it locked?" just as he finally succeeded in turning the key. "Oh, I'm so sorry, but I left my bath robe."

Once Again.

Warren's explosives were loud and emphatic as he unlocked the trunk.

"Now is that ALL?" as Helen hastily crushed in the robe. "By Gad, I've never locked a trunk for you yet that I didn't have to open half a dozen times before we started."

But it was hardly a moment later when Maggie brought in a blue serge skirt Helen had asked her to brush. "You're not forgetting this, m'am?"

Helen tried desperately to get it in her suitcase, but there was no room. The trunk would have to be opened again. While she was struggling with the stiff, heavy strap, trying to unbuckle it, Warren passed the door.

"What in the devil are you doing now?"

"Never mind, I—I can open it," flushed and breathless with her exertions. "I just forgot to put in this skirt."

Warren pushed her roughly aside and again opened the trunk, his language more fervid than before.

"Now is THAT ALL?" he roared again as he slammed down the lid.

Helen thought it was. But at almost the last moment, she discovered a pair of shoes she had left out to be polished. The suitcase was bulging full, and she dared not let Warren see her trying to open the trunk again. She would have to carry them in a bundle. There was no other way.

It was not until they were finally whirling to the dock in a cab, with the trunks on top and the hand baggage on the seat before them, that Warren noticed the package Helen was carrying.

"What's that? Put it in your suit case."

"There isn't room. It's nothing dear, I'd just as soon carry it."

But Warren felt through the paper that it was a pair of shoes.

"So you forgot those, did you? Might have known you'd want to get in that trunk again. Gad, that's like you. Starting off for Europe with a pair of shoes in your hand. Next time I go—I go alone!"

What He Meant.

A man once received as a present from a sea captain a fine specimen of a bird which sailors call the "laughing jackass." As he was carrying it home he met a brawny Irish navvy, who stopped and said to him:

"Phwat kind of burrd is that, sorr?"

"That's a laughing jackass," explained the owner, genially.

The Irishman, thinking he was being made fun of, was equal to the occasion, and responded with a twinkle of the eye:

"It's not yourself; it's the burrd I mane, sorr!"

The Mistakes of Jennie .:. By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

Chapter 13.

Jennie was all excited when she saw him and wondered if he would speak to her after her refusing to marry him and her treating him so badly. She did hope he would, and that he would admire her new clothes.

Tom lifted his hat and acted as if there never had been anything the matter between them, and, boy like, did not even notice her new gown, willow plume and things, that Jennie was paying $1.50 a week for on the installment plan.

That day her girl friend at the office said she had it all "cooked up" for a party that night with the boys they were out with before.

One of the boys owned an automobile and they would go out on a "bear" of a time. So that night after work Jennie and her pal met the boys. Jennie was all dressed up and her girl friend's beau didn't seem to have any time for any one except Jennie. This, of course, made the girl jealous, but she held in until after dinner, when they were all a bit "jagged." Then she 'ebided Jennie for trying to take her fellow away from her.

They had a fine row, which made the fellow—who seemed to always pay for their "parties"—very angry. He told the girl he was tired of her anyway, and she had better get some one else to pay her expenses.

Then he proceeded to make violent love to Jennie—and poor Jennie didn't know what to do. The other fellow—the one Jennie was with before—didn't have much to say, and whatever his friend did was all right, being as how his friend held the purse strings.

Coming back in the machine they sat on the back seat and the fellow talked and talked and tried to get Jennie to consent to let him furnish up a flat for her, and she could have anything she wanted. But Jennie was crying, and all she would say was: "NO-NO-NO!" Her girl friend wouldn't speak to her, but had vowed to get even—if it was the last thing in the world she ever did. Jennie begged the fellow to take her home—but he held her all the tighter in his arms, kissing her.

By DOROTHY DIX.

HAVE you ever considered the modern girl and how she differs from the maidens of the past? She's a new species of the feminine sex, and no more like her grandmother, or even her mother, than if she had been wafted down from the planet Mars instead of having just strolled out of the nursery.

We haven't taken much account of her, but you've got to reckon with her in the future, and it's time we sat up and took notice. Consider these little stories as illustrations of the young person and her point of view. The first is on divorce.

The other day I overheard two young girls talking.

Said one: "When a girl marries, she should be very, very careful in choosing her husband, and after she is married she should do the best she can to make a good wife and a happy home, but if she finds out that she has made a mistake, and is miserable, thank Heaven, she doesn't have to stand it. She can always get a divorce."

Said the other girl: "Oh, of course, that's the only thing to do under such circumstances. It won't be my fault if my marriage turns out badly, because I'm going to do everything I can, and bring every particle of intelligence I've got to making it a success, but none of that suffer-and-be-strong business in mine! If my husband isn't what he should be, or treats me badly, or I find I've made an error of judgment, I'm going to correct it just as I would any other mistake.

"I'm not going to stick to it as people used to do in the Dark Ages. Aren't you thankful that you live in these enlightened days, instead of in our grandparents' and our parents' time, when people thought that no matter how miserable you were in your marriage, or how much you hated the person you were married to, you had to endure it?"

An Unusual Remark.

The first girl smiled indulgently. "They were bound in the swaddling clothes of superstition, all right," she said.

I gasped with surprise. These girls belong to old, conservative, rather narrow-minded families, and they themselves are sweet, modest, intelligent, well educated young women, who haven't the faintest idea of being revolutionary, or anything of that sort. What they said simply voiced the viewpoint of the new generation.

They didn't argue about the ethics of divorce at all. They simply accepted divorce as a fact, a modern convenience, something that tended to make life pleasanter, just as they did in elevators in apartment buildings, or electric lights, or running hot and cold water in bath rooms.

If you had made a mistake in marriage and your life was being ruined by it, you corrected it and took a fresh start, just as you would do if you found out that you had engaged in a business that was bankrupting you. They could see no more reason for going on with a marriage that meant daily misery than there would be in going on with an enterprise in which you lost money every day.

You can't argue the divorce question with the modern young girl, because she simply doesn't recognize the ancient view of the matter, that there is anything noble, or pious, or virtuous in living with an individual that brings out all the worst that is in you, or in keeping together a family that is engaged in a perpetual drawn battle at home.

Nor can you argue the suffrage question with young women, because they accept it as a fact that is incontrovertible that they are the equals of the young men they know, and have just as much right to a voice in government. You could find a needle in a haystack easier than a college-bred girl who is an anti.

DOROTHY DIX.

And this is what the modern young girl thinks about woman's sweet dependence. A very rich girl said to me the other day:

"I've got the best and most generous father that any girl ever had. He showers on me everything that money can buy. I've got charge accounts all the way up and down Fifth Avenue, and every month he gives me a big allowance, but I never see a girl standing behind a counter, or sitting behind a typewriter that I don't envy her. I would rather have a dollar and fifty cents that I had earned myself than fifteen hundred dollars that was given me.

"I would give anything on earth to know that I could stand on my own feet instead of being a miserable parasite hanging on somebody else. And every rich girl I know feels the same way. But I've got one comfort, I'll never have to be dependent on a husband. How a woman endures the humiliation of having to ask her husband for every cent she spends I don't understand. It's enough to kill her, and I don't believe women are going to do it much longer. I think in the future that when a girl hasn't got an independent fortune of her own she'll continue after marriage at whatever business she was in before marriage. Financial independence is just as necessary to a woman's self-respect as it is to a man's."

And here's another viewpoint of the 1913 model of girl. If you will recall, the heroes of all old-fashioned novels used to be men who had been sad rakes. They were men with dark pasts, such as Rochester, who fascinated innocent little Jane Eyre, and even as late as a generation or so ago a man lost no prestige in a girl's eyes from having been wild, and having had romantic adventures. Recently an opponent to the bill for requiring all candidates for marriage to produce a health certificate brought up this former attitude of women on this subject in objecting to the passage of the law. He didn't know the modern young girl. I said something of this to one, and she defined the modern girl's position on the question in one phrase:

She Knew.

"We've read Damaged Goods," she said, "and we know what that sort of romance means—insane asylums, surgeons' tables, death."

In former times, when a young girl came to an older woman to confide in her, she asked for advice about some love affair. Nowadays when a girl has a heart-to-heart talk with you she consults you about her life work. The young girls are no longer looking forward to matrimony as the one only desirable career in life. They are thinking of business, of settlement work, of a thousand avocations outside of the home circle. Love is no longer the whole of their existence. It is a thing apart, just as it is of a man. If the right man comes along and asks one, she'll marry, but if he doesn't, she can get along very well without him, thank you.

This is only a cursory view of the young girl of the period. Take a look at her for yourself. At present she is the great human conundrum, and she's the most interesting thing in the world.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

A man remarked that he came from a very large family.

"How many are there of you?" he was asked.

"Well, there were ten of us boys," he said, "and each of us had a sister."

"Good gracious!" exclaimed the other, "then there were twenty of you?"

"No," said the boastful man; "eleven."

Mamma—My dear, what are you doing?

Mamma—But you haven't any little sister!

Little Daughter—No, not yet; but Sally Stuckup has just got one, and I know we always get everything the Stuckups do.

Sheet steel is the latest material utilized in the making of furniture. It is used for sideboards, wardrobes, chiffoniers, writing desks, and it is finished in such perfect imitation of the various woods that the difference can not be detected. The wood finish is applied under a very high temperature, becoming an integral part of the metal and never cracking. This unique furniture has the recommendation of being fireproof, and a lighted match left on a pressed steel sideboard would have no effect whatever on its surface.

"What is the principal difference between modern and ancient times?"

"One of the main points was that the modern earn their living, while the ancients urned their dead."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THARE was a convenshun of misshunarys in town this week & Ma went & toald the ladies of the club that she wud be glad for us to talk at least one misshunary & keep him at our house so he wuddent have to pay any hotel bill. Pa dident like it a bit, but he dident say much. He kicked a littel, tho.

I can not see why you act 'so cold about entertaining a noabel man who is going to give up his noabel life, maybe, Ma sed, oaver thare in the Feegee Islands, teaching them awful black men how to be good. Why, sed Ma, I was going to say first that we cud keep two of those noabel men here & now that I see the way you are acting I am glad that I only promised to take one.

Why doesn't he go to a hotel & register, like a noabel drummer or a noabel transhunt of any kind? sed Pa. I doant see anything very noabel about horning into a household & putting everybody out for a week, Pa sed. It is bad enuff to entertain yure relatives all the time, sed Pa, without having any guy with a long face and a short purse setting around and talking about spreading the gospel. Thay spread more hot air than thay spread gospel, sed Pa, them misshunarys, & beesides they eet moar than a trained nurse, wich is sum eeting.

Very Sad.

But this man is a charming gentleman, sed Ma. I am sure that you will like him. Jest then the man calm.

Husband, sed Ma, this is Mister Weeks of Jacksonville. He is going abroad soon to teech the beenited natives all about religun.

Mr. Weeks was vary slim, vary sad looking. Pa sighed kind of hard, but he asked Mister Weeks to maik hisself at hoam & then Ma sed Now I am going to leeve you two men & littel Bobbie to have a visit while I run oaver to Missus Jones's & get that recipe for stewed steak & milkweed greens, Ma sed.

As soon as Pa was sure Ma was out of the house he asked Mister Weeks of Jacksonville to cum into the library & look at his books. I went in, too.

I have sumthing vary fine here, sed Pa, in this long necked decanter. It is the very finest burbon, Pa sed, & it is so old that it has rumatism. Will you try a snifter?

A Surprise.

I doant mind if I do, sed Mister Weeks. Then Pa poured him a nice drink & took one hisself. He lookeo kind of surprised at Mister Weeks, but I cud see that he was looking at his friend moar friendly.

I am sorry to intrude on you, sir, said Mister Weeks, & as it is I wud have stayed at a hotel, only I got roped into a stud gaim last nite & got my bank roll so nicked that it is almost nit. That is sum corn, he sed. If we was whare we cud, he sed, I wud cum back, but as I am in yure hoam I will try another on you, old sport. I will pour it, it is neerer to me. Say when.

I see you like it, sed Pa. I shud say I do like it, sed Mister Weeks. I have been in a jay town for three weeks, hoalding a kind of reevival, & the only stuff I cud git thare was so feerce that it took all my morai curage to drink it at all. Well, how do you like the way Billy Smith is sailing along now? I hope the Crackers win the pennant. I have a swell bet down that they will cop, he sed.

I nevver seen a man that looked so surprised as Pa. Say, he sed to Mister Weeks of Jacksonville, you are a regular guy. How did you cum to be a misshunary.

Pretty Soft.

Well, sed Mister Weeks, it is a pritty soft graft. A man gets a chance to travel all oaver & see furrin countrys, & as far as curing any beenited natives, all I evver ask them to do is to show me around. I used to be a ball player, he sed, but I got hit on the bean with one of Dent's fast ones, and that chased me out of the gaim. This gaim isent so dangerous.

Aint you afrade you will get et up by a cannibal? I sed to Mister Weeks.

No, sed Mister Weeks. I teach them all to be hard drinkers & thay lose thare deesire to eat.

Jest then Ma caim hoam.

You must be awfully tired, Ma sed to the misshunary.

Yes, I think I will retire & finnish my new lecture for those who grope in the darkness, sed Mister Weeks of Jacksonville. Then he groped to bed.

Turned the Tables.

At Scotch weddings some years ago it used to be the custom to batter the hat of the bridegroom as he was leaving the house in which the ceremony took place. On one of those occasions the friends of a newly-married couple (relatives of the bridegroom) determined to carry out the observance of this custom to the letter.

The bridegroom heard them discussing their plans, and dispatched a messenger to the carriage (which stood waiting) with his hat some time previous to his departure. Then, donning the hat of the male relative who had plotted against him, he prepared to go out to the carriage.

No sooner had he got to the door than his hat was furiously assaulted and almost destroyed. He walked out of the house amid the laughter of the bystanders and entered the vehicle; then, taking the battered hat from his head he threw it into the hands of its proper owner, exclaiming: "Hey, Mr. Dougall, there's your hat," and donned his own amid the cheers of all present.

Mr. Dougall was the unhappiest-looking man in Scotland for some time after that.

: The Bibles of Presidents :

Some Interesting Facts Concerning Them.

ONE of the oldest, if not the very oldest, Bibles connected with the American Government is the book upon which, since 1800, every Chief Justice and every member of the Supreme Court has taken the oath of allegiance when accepting his appointment to Uncle Sam's highest tribunal. More than that, every attorney who has practiced before the Supreme Court since that date—1800—has pledged his allegiance over the little volume, with one exception—Daniel Webster. It is told even yet of the Supreme Court of that day that Mr. Webster's fame as an orator had so preceded him that on that occasion, when he came to argue his first case before the Court, the clerk, Mr. Caldwell, in his eagerness to hear the great speaker, forgot to administer the oath.

Some interesting facts have also been revealed regarding the Bibles used by American Presidents. When Grover Cleveland came to the Capitol for his first inauguration he brought with him a little red Bible his mother had given him when he was a boy, and which he had always cherished as a keepsake. On that Bible he took the oath of office. A few days before Mr. McKinley's inauguration a number of African Methodist bishops came into Mr. McKinley's office one morning with a tremendous package, which proved to be a large family Bible in a big plush box, and they wished Mr. McKinley to use it. Their request was granted, and the big Bible was one of the show objects in the Red Parlor of the White House for a long time afterwards.

A $50,000 Bible.

When Mr. Roosevelt was inducted into office as Governor of New York some one presented him with the Bible which he used on that occasion. His name, which was written on the fly-leaf, was misspelled, but he used the same Bible at his second inauguration, and it has been one of Mr. Roosevelt's most treasured mementos ever since.

These volumes, however, are to Americans of insignificant value when compared with the copy of the Bible, bound in red leather with silver clasps, on which Washington took the oath as first President of the Republic on the balcony of the old Federal Hall in New York. It was borrowed for the occasion, and the descendants of those who lent it preserve it as a most sacred relic.

Americans, inspired perhaps by the example of the late Pierpont Morgan, who included many historic Bibles among his art treasures, have of late years exhibited a great passion for Bible collecting. Bibles belonging to Queen Anne, George III and Richard, Duke of Gloucester, are to be found in the United States.

It was H. E. Huntington, the railway magnate of America, who a couple of years ago paid $50,000 for a Gutenberg Bible which was once in the Ashburnham Library. America, however, has not succeeded in securing a literary treasure to be found among the finest collection of English Bibles in the world, at the Bristol Baptist College. This college possesses the only perfect copy in existence of Tyndale's first New Testament, printed at Worms in 1525. The then Bishop of London bought up and burned this first edition, and thus provided Tyndale money for an improved and larger one. The only other fragment of the destroyed edition is now in the British Museum, but it stops short at the 22d chapter of St. Matthew. The trustees of the college have often been tempted to dispose of this unique volume, but hitherto they have been proof against temptation, though no less than $50,000 has been offered for it.

Another valuable Bible in the collection is a copy of Coverdale's Bible, published in 1535. Lincoln Cathedral possesses the only other perfect copy in existence, although six other more or less complete copies are known to exist.

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

Ina Claire Talks on the Psychology of Clothes

Ina Claire's refreshing beauty.

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

THE dainty little "Quaker Girl," Ina Claire, is entertaining her admirers down at Brighton Beach, where the cool breezes and her own refreshing personality unite to make us all forget how earnestly the sun of summer can pour down molten glory on the city cobblestones at noon to-day.

We sat at a cozy tea table and got acquainted over an iced tea and a soda lemonade, plus chicken sandwiches. "This is my luncheon," said Miss Ina—and, by the way, you pronounce it as if it were Eena—"I don't let all my meals total up to more than one meal—of course you will laugh and say that I can afford to eat all I want. But I can't. You have to meet fat more than half way if you want to ward it off, and make sure that it never starts coming. I never eat candy—it does not do one the least bit of good, and I'd be so grateful if I might get all the sweetness I want from the perfume of all the flowers I want. Flowers have such a wonderful effect on me—on everyone, I think—their perfume and beauty has to make you a little bit lovelier. Don't you think so? Perhaps you will even say in our interview that I wish all the kind people who want to send me gifts would make those gifts of flowers."

"Evidently you are a believer in the importance of surroundings," I suggested.

"Oh, yes," said Miss Claire eagerly, "for my ideal of beauty is sweetness—refinement. You see it in the flowerlike English type."

By the way the unconscious girl who sat across the tea table from me is a perfect exponent of the flowerlike English type.

Likes Clothes.

"I believe in the psychology of clothes, too. I hate things that are just la mode. I happen to like little picture dresses—soft, frilly, cool-looking, girlish things. They happen to suit me, too—so I wear them. But as I grow older and develop and mature I shall not wear these little frocks after I have outworn their type. Why, I want to grow in my work and develop power, and just the same way I want to grow beyond my 19 years in my appearance, too. Don't you think you have to dress your age as well as your type?"

I agreed; for I think that even as clothes must express the wearer, so they limit their wearer in her power of expression. A woman struggling along in a peg-top skirt that makes her walk a peg, too, can not look like the heroine of the poet's fancy:

"Even the light harebell raised its head
Elastic from her airy tread."

As Miss Claire said, "A trained gown expresses impressive dignity at once. Oh, how I should love to wear them, but my mother says that youth should express youth—and I know she is very wise. Youth must work and study and try to grow up gracefully in art and works and looks, but it must not be impatient and try to go faster than itself," added my pretty philosopher sagely.

"And don't you think that moods are very important, too?" I asked. "Flowers in your pathway and pretty clothes make beauty—but does it not come from within?"

Not Fair.

"Indeed it does," answered Miss Claire. "Unpleasant moods take the light and life from the eyes and all the face. It is not fair to other people to indulge in moods—and if you must have them, why just go off by yourself if you can, for your face will show their imprint. Drooping your upper lip in the middle, a la Eddie Foy, is fine for the blues—it curls your mouth up at the corners mechanically—and it makes your spirit laugh at the way you know you look.

"I think if you are young you need plenty of sleep, and simple food to get you into simple food-habits, and flowers and sunshine to help you grow, and work to keep you interested in life. I believe in work for women," went on Miss Claire slowly, "not only because life is happier when you are busy, but because, unless you are helping to create things, you become a critic. And just a critical attitude toward life is likely to become a bitter, droop-mouthed attitude. If you are a worker, and know how much struggle and effort goes into creating each tiny bit of life, you are happier and kinder, and I'm sure you look sweeter, too."

Well, little sister workers, is not that a splendid message for us? To create a bit o' life—and not to berate life—that is what Ina Claire told me.

EXPERIENCE OF MOTHERHOOD

Advice to Expectant Mothers

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The inexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Conipound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ASK HIM TO CALL AGAIN.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am 21 and am in love with a man two years my senior. He called on me a few times. One night I had an engagement and he disappointed me, and I heard he would like to write, but he is very bashful, so would it be proper for me to write to him?
LONELY.

Write a friendly note asking him to call, but do not make it too cordial, and do not be insistent if he refuses. Having made these overtures, let the rest come from him.

IT IS NOT WISE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
Is it proper for girls between the ages of 15 and 16 to play kissing games, such as "postoffice," "spin the bottle," etc., with boys between the ages of 17 and 18 at a social gathering? GLADYS.

Don't do it, my dear. It is a silliness that sometimes results in continued and unpardonable familiarity when there are no kissing games as an excuse. Boys think all the more of girls who refuse to give such marks of their favor.

DON'T SEND IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
While at a ball I was introduced to a man who seemed interested in me. His father is in the same place of business as mine. Now, I would like to know if it would be proper for me to send a note through his father, as I do not know his name and address, because he has a stepfather. I would like to have him call to see me, but I do not want his folks to think I am running after him. ANXIOUS.

You do not want his family to think you are running after him, yet such a letter would give them that impression. A better plan would be to wait till he shows greater interest in you.

Next Witness, Please!

"Witness, will you please answer my questions a little more plainly?" queried the lawyer, who was cross-examining an elderly German as to the position of the door, windows, etc., in the house where a crime had been committed.

"I will try—I will try," nervously answered the old man.

"Will you describe to the Court just how the stairs run in that house?" went on the lawyer.

For a few minutes the German looked puzzled, and bit his nails nervously.

"How ze stairs run?" he interrogated a little dazedly.

"Come, come, my good man! How the stairs run, if you please!" said the lawyer, in an exasperated tone.

"Vell," ventured the witness phlegmatically, "ven I am oopstairs zay run down, and ven I am downstairs zay run oop!"

The Triple Tie

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

In that game the Philadelphia nine was composed of nine players with but a single thought, nine bats that thumped as one. They took advantage of every opening and with Chief Bender in the box played with a dash and confidence that filled their supporters with glee and when the cohorts went back to Philadelphia that night it was the hope that the White Sox had gotten rid of all their bad playing and that on the morrow, with Big Ed Walsh in the box, they would brace up and take the Red Sox into camp, thereby making things all even again, with the triple tie no further decided than it was at the start.

Emblems Laid Aside.

No white silk-stockinged banners were flaunted on Broadway that night. The emblems were laid aside for the evening, while the owners thereof sought rathskellers and similar places for the purpose of drowing their sorrows in the flowing bowl. But Comiskey, the owner of the Chicago Club, never gave up the baseball ship. The "Old Roman" called the members of his team to his room and after giving them a verbal dressing down for their wretched exhibition, as only Comiskey himself could do, he exhorted them to go after the Red Sox on the followlng day and wipe up the Polo Grounds with them.

"Now go out there and beat that Boston bunch!" he exclaimed vehemently in conclusion, "and when you do it I'll hand every member of the team $500. And you, Walsh," he added, turning to the big pitcher, "one thousand extra for you for winning the game."

The morrow came—a glorious October day. The Polo Grounds was packed for the battle of the Red Sox and the White Sox. Fresh from their last headache, full of remorse for the past and hope for the future, the thousand from Chicago massed themselves in that section of the stadium nearest first base, while opposite them, behind third base, sat the rabid Boston "fans," waving red banners and yelling for the Red Sox at the slightest provocation. The Chicago crowd, too, had brought their standards with them, somewhat soiled and bedraggled, it is true, but still sufficiently white to create a vivid impression whenever they were used.

Batteries Announced.

The rival teams took their preliminary practice, while the rival rooters barked at each other across the diamond. Finally the bell rang, the umpires took their place, Connolly behind the plate, Dinneen at first base and the other two at the foul lines, and the megaphone boys announced the batteries. Of these heralds there were three—one to inform the spectators behind the plate, one for the left wing and one for the right wing of the grandstand. This was their simultaneous announcement.

"Batteries for to-day's game: For Boston, Bedient and Carrigan; for Chicago, Walsh and Schalk."

Manager Stahl of the Red Sox had again won the toss and his team took the field. Rath, the Chicago second baseman, stepped to the plate and the Chicago cohorts back of first base gave him a rousing cheer. Hard luck came to the Boston team at the very start. Rath swung at the first ball that Bedient pitched to him, ticked it with his bat, deflecting it so that it struck Carrigan on his first finger, breaking it. The catcher was forced to retire. The megaphone boys announced the change:

"Cady now catching in place of Carrigan."

The Game Is On.

The game went on. Rath finally worked Bedient for a free pass to first. Lord bunted a slow one down the third base line, and in running to get it, the Boston pitcher slipped and fell. Lord reaching first safely and Rath getting to second. Chase rapped a hot one through the box, which Wagner knocked down back of second base, but was unable to field. This filled the bases, with no one out. The section back of first base became a waving field of white banners, and the shouts of leather-lunged Chicagoans could be heard for miles. Collins lifted a long fly to Lewis and Rath scored after the catch. Bodie came along with a two-base hit between Speaker and Hooper, scoring Lord and Chase. Mattick went out on a grounder to Engle and Weaver closed the inning with a foul to Cady.

With his side three runs to the good, Big Ed Walsh stalked to the pitcher's box. That lead was all he asked. The Red Sox had found him almost unbeatable for years. That $1,000 bonus promised by Comiskey he considered as good as in his bank at Meriden. He began proceedings by striking out Hooper and Yerkes and forcing Speaker to roll an easy one to the box, which Walsh himself tossed to first for the thir out.

Collins Replaces Bedient.

Both sides were blanked in the second inning. In the third the White Sox went out in order, but the Red Sox two men on—Wagner by means of a pass and Cady on a single to right. Stahl sent Henrickson in to bat for Bedient, but the little fellow hit into a double play and Hooper fouled to Chase. The Red Sox were still without a run to their credit.

Ray Collins came in to pitch in place of Bedient and he retired the White Sox in order. For Boston, Speaker singled after Yerkes had been disposed of, but neither Lewis nor Gardner could bring him home. The fifth inning was also scoreless for both teams, but the Red Sox came near doing some damage to Walsh in their half of the round. Engle was safe on a low throw of his grounder. Wagner laid down a bunt toward first and beat it to the bag, as no one covered first. Cady advanced the runners with a sacrifice. With the chance of scoring two runs, Stahl himself went to bat in place of Collins and succeeded in drawing a pass to first. This filled the bases with only one out. Stahl, who was still limping from an old injury to his foot, called upon Neil Ball to run for him. The Red Six rooters cheered wildly as Hooper came to the plate. He drove a liner to Mattick and Engle, who tried to score from third, was thrown out at the plate. This piece of ill luck so disconcerted the Royal Rooters' band that it forgot to play "Tessie" for the first time on record.

Buck O'Brien went in to pitch for Boston when the sixth inning opened. He was in fine fettle, and the White Sox couldn't get a man on the bases. Those three runs looked bigger and bigger as the game went on. In the last of the sixth, after Yerkes had been retired, Speaker beat out a bunt and Lewis was safe on a fumble, but more hard luck followed the Red Sox when Gardner sent a terrific liner directly in Chase's hands and Wagner boosted a high fly to Rath.

The Chicago crowd went wild when the White Sox got three men on bases in the seventh with only one out, but their cheers turned to groans when O'Brien struck out the next man and speared a hard liner for the third out. But in doing so O'Brien hurt his hand so badly that he was forced to retire.

Last Inning Opens.

It looked as though the Red Sox were all shot to pieces when they went to bat in the last half of the seventh, but Cady reached second on a little fly that struck the right field foul line and rolled to the stand. Taking a dying chance Stahl sent Nunamaker in to bat, but no runs resulted and the score was still 3 to 0 against the Red Sox when the eighth opened, with Leonard in the box for Boston.

Leonard passed the first two men that faced him, but some good pitching and some good luck enable him to get by without being scored upon. The top of the batting order was up for the Red Sox and the Boston crowd implored the boys to do something. They tried very hard, but none of them could drive the ball out of the infield.

The ninth and last inning opened. The White Sox were retired in order. They had not been able to do much with the Boston pitchers, except when they scored the three runs in the first inning, but Big Ed Walsh was going great guns and there was not a member of the team but that felt the game was surely won.

Fought back to the last ditch, the Red Sox went to bat for their last stand. Two thousand spectators left their seats and started home when Lewis, the first up for Boston, died on a roller to Rath. Five thousand more made a rush for the gates when Gardner flied to Collins. Not a sound came from the Boston section. The Chicago contingent was singing and waving flags. There was a faint cheer when Engle managed to work Walsh for a free pass to first. There was a louder cheer when Wagner hit safely just out of Weaver's reach. Some of those who were leaving the grounds paused for a moment to see if there would be any excitement. Cady, with two strikes and three balls called on him, was fooled into striking at a very low one, but the ball struck the ground before it got to Schald and jumped by him. Cady sprinted to first and beat Schalk's throw by a hair. The bases were filled!

Leonard Walks to Plate.

Everybody on the grounds except the Chicago crowd broke into a wild cheer. The Red Sox rooters were like raving maniacs. Three on bases and two out in the last half of the ninth inning! Yes, but what chance did the Red Sox have with a pitcher's turn to bat? Whoever heard of a pitcher "breaking up" a game of ball in the ninth inning with three men on bases and two out? And Stahl had used up all his pinch hitters.

The cheers were at their height and Leonard was walking slowly toward the plate, bat in hand, when Wagner rushed up to Stahl, who was on the first base coaching line, and whispered something in his ear. Instantly Stahl yelled to Leonard.

"Leonard!" he cried.

The pitcher stopped and looked at his manager, who motioned him to keep away from the plate. There was a commotion in the dugout where the Red Sox players were gathered. They were crowded together with their backs to the field. Umpire Connolly called sharply to Stahl:

"Batter up; where's your batter?"

The Chicago section jeered and hooted. "Play ball." "Get a move on." "Get busy," and similar remarks were hurled at the Boston manager, who still stood in the coaching box.

"Whose turn is it to bat, yours, Leonard?" demanded Connolly, striding up to the pitcher.

Leonard nodded.

"Get up to the plate, then," roared Connolly. "You can't delay the game this way."

"Stahl won't let me," replied Leonard.

Connolly whipped off his mask and ran toward the Red Sox manager.

"Where's your next batter, Stahl?" he roared.

Stahl turned toward the Boston bench, where there was still a commotion among the players.

"Who Is Your Batter-"

"Just a minute, Tommy, give me just a minute," he said to the umpire. "I want to win this game."

Manager Callahan of the White Sox came rushing up. So did Captain Harry Lord. The cheers and the hoots died down.

"What's the matter here," exclaimed Callahan. "I claim the game by forfeit unless a man goes to bat for Boston right now."

Connolly pulled out his watch.

"I'll give you just three minutes to get a man up to the plate," he said to Stahl.

The megaphone boys hurried up. The Boston manager glanced at the players' bench. The bunch of Red Sox players separated and one of them jumped out of the dugout and began selecting a bat from the pile on the ground.

"Who is your batter?" demanded Connolly.

Stahl told him.

An instant later the heralds raised their megaphones to their lips and amid a deathlike silence bawled this announcement:

Gordon Kelly batting in place of Leonard.

To Be Continued Monday, July 7.

TODAY'S installment of the "The Triple Tie" leaves Gordon Kelly in a very dramatic situation. The final chapters of the story will be printed in The Georgian on Monday, July 7. In the meantime readers of "The Triple Tie" will have until noon next Thursday to send in their conception of the conclusion of the story, containing their solution of the mystery in competition for prizes aggregating $250 offered by The Georgian. The problems for the reader to solve are these:

First—How does Kelly escape the mountaineers?
Second—What happens to Mildred Deery, the heroine?
Third—How did Gordon Kelly, who confessed that he never saw a game of ball and never played a game of ball up to the time he asked Manager Smith of the Atlanta club for a position on his team—how did Gordon Kelly learn to bat, catch and run bases in the marvelous manner he displayed at Atlanta that caused the Boston club to give the unheard-of price of $50,000 for Gordon Kelly's release?
Fourth—What happened when Gordon Kelly went to bat in the ninth inning of the final and deciding game?
Fifth—What is the final ending of the story?

No contributions will be considered if they are delivered at The American office later than July 3 at noon or bear a postmark later than that time.

Please remember that this is not a guessing contest. Originality, literary value and analytical clearness will be largely considered in awarding the prizes. Three judges, in no way connected with The Georgian, will award the prizes.

The prizes for the best solutions are as follows:

First Prize	$100.00
Second Prize	50.00
Third Prize	25.00
Fourth Prize	15.00
Twelve Prizes, each	5.00
Total	$250.00

"Oh, well," Burke exclaimed amiably, "I didn't really think you did, but I wasn't sure, so I had to take a chance. You understand, don't you, Joe?"

"Sure, I understand," Garson replied, with an amiability equal to the Inspector's own.

Burke's manner continued very amicably as he went on speaking.

Garson resisted the lure.

"If you don't want me—" he began suggestively; and he turned toward the door to the outer hall. "Why, if you don't want me, I'll—get along."

"Oh, what's the hurry, Joe?" Burke retorted, with the effect of stopping the other short. He pressed the buzzer as the agreed signal to Cassidy. "Where did you say Mary Turner was last night?"

At the question, all Garson's fears for the woman rushed back of him with appalling force. Of what avail his safety, if she were still in peril? "I don't know where she was," he exclaimed, doubtfully. He realized his blunder even as the words left his lips, and sought to correct it as best he might. "Why, yes, I do, too," he went on, as if assailed by sudden memory, "I dropped into her place kind of late, and I guess. . . . Yes, she was home, of course. She didn't go out of the house all night." His insistence on the point was of itself suspicious, but eagerness to protect her stultified his wits.

Burke Was Silent.

Burke sat grim and silent, offering no comment on the lie.

"Know anything about young Gilder?" he demanded. "Happen to know where he is now?" He rose and came around the desk, so that he stood close to Garson, at whom he glowered.

"Not a thing!" was the earnest answer. But the speaker's fear rose swiftly, for the linking of these names was significant—frightfully significant!

The inner door opened, and Mary Turner entered the office. Garson, with difficulty, suppressed the cry of distress that rose to his lips. For a few momehts, the silence was unbroken. Then, presently, Burke, by a gesture, directed the girl to advance toward the center of the room. As she obeyed, he himself went a little toward the door, and, when it opened again, and Dick Gilder appeared, he interposed to check the young man's rush forward as his gaze fell on his bride, who stood regarding him with sad eyes.

Garson stared mutely at the burly man in uniform who held their destinies in the hollow of a hand. His lips parted as if he were about to speak. Then, he bade defiance to the impulse. He deemed it safer for all that he should say nothing—now! . . And it is very easy to say a word too many. And that one may be a word never to be unsaid—or gainsaid.

Then, while still that curious, dynamic silence endured, Cassidy came briskly into the office. By some magic duty he had contrived to give his usually hebetudinous features an expression of enthusiasm.

"Say, Chief," the detective said rapidly, "they've squealed."

Burke regarded his aid with an air intolerably triumphant. His voice came smug:

"Squealed, eh?" His glance ran over Garson for a second, then made its inquisition of Mary and of Dick Gilder. He did not give a look to Cassidy as he put his question. "Do they tell the same story?" And then, when the detective had answered in the affirmative, he went on speaking in tones ponderous with self-complacency, and now his eyes held sharply, craftily, on the woman.

"I was right then, after all—right, all the time! Good enough!" Of a sudden, his voice loomed someberly. "Mary Turner, I want you for the murder of——"

Garson's rush halted the sentence. He had leaped forward. His face was rigid. He broke in on the Inspector's words with a gesture of fury. His voice came in a hiss:

"That's a d—d lie. I did it!"

CHAPTER XXIV.

Anguish and Bliss.

Joe Garson had shouted his confession without a second of reflection. But the result must have been the same had he taken years of thought. Between him and her as the victim of the law, there could be no hesitation for choice. Indeed, just now, he had no heed to his own fate. The prime necessity was to save her, Mary, from the toils of the law that were closing around her. For himself, in the days to come, there would be a ghastly dread, but there would never be regret over the cost of saving her. Perhaps, some other he might have let suffer in his stead—not her! Even had he been innocent and she guilty of the crime, he would still have saved her from the waters—he would save her until the end, as far as the power in him might lie. It was thus that, with the primitive directness of his reverential love for the girl, he counted no sacrifice too great in her behalf. Joe Garson was not a good man, as the world esteems goodness. On the contrary, he was distinctly an evil one, a menace to society, on which he preyed constantly. But his good qualities, if few, were of the strongest fiber, rooted in the deeps of him. He loathed treachery. His one guiltiness in this respect had been, curiously enough, toward Mary herself, in the scheme of the burglary which she had forbidden. But, in the last analysis, here his deceit had been designed to bring affluence to her. It was his abhorrence of treachery among pals that had driven him to the murder of the stool pigeon in a fit of ungovernable passion. He might have stayed his hand then, but for the gusty rage that swept him on to the crime. None the less, had he spared the man his hatred of the betrayer would have been the same. And the other virtue of Joe Garson was the complement of this—his own loyalty, a loyalty that made him forget self utterly where he loved, not too much to give.

Frozen With Horror.

The suddenness of it all held Mary voiceless for long seconds. She was frozen with horror of the event. When, at last, words come, they were a frantic prayer of protest.

"No, Joe! No! Don't talk—don't talk!"

Burke, immensely gratified, went nimbly to his chair, and thence surveyed the agitated group with grisly pleasure.

"Joe has talked," he said, significantly.

Mary, shaken as she was by the fact of Garson's confession, nevertheless retained her presence of mind sufficiently to resist with all her strength.

"He did it to protect me," she stated, earnestly.

The Inspector disdained such futile argument. As the doorman appeared in answer to the buzzer, he directed that the stenographer be summoned at once.

"We'll have the confession in due form," he remarked, gazing pleasedly on the three before him.

"He's not going to confess," Mary insisted, with spirit.

But Burke was not in the least impressed. He disregarded her completely, and spoke mechanically to Garson the formal warning required by the law.

RIDERS WILL SCRAMBLE FOR COIN TO-NIGHT

WITH the kind permission of Old Man Weather, and with the enthusiastic co-operation of the greatest string of riders ever gathered for a race meeting in Dixie they're off to-night at the Motordrome for the fourth race meet of the local season—and it looks the best in the bunch.

There's more "pep" and enthusiasm out at Riders' Row to-day, than there has been since the meeting began. Up to this meet the riders have known that, mounted as they are now, Jock McNeil and Wilmer Richards were fast enough to take all the races. The rest got a chance only in the specials.

Now McNeil and Richards have been yanked out and put in a class by themselves. These two meet to-night in three match races at three miles each. This will settle the most momentous speed question of the season. But they will have it all to themselves.

It's a Mighty Close Thing.

With the two fastest machines out of it the rest of the riders will scramble viciously for the Sweepstakes and the Motordrome Purse. It could not be any more even. Of the eight riders who will take part there isn't over a fraction of a second to the mile difference in the machines or the riders. They are calculated to race, nose and nose, every inch of the difference, with the advantage slightly favoring Harry Glenn, because he has the longest nose.

Another improvement in the card comes from the fact that there will be four starters in each heat of the two regular races. In past meets two of the heats have had but three starters. And it really takes four to make the racing good. To-night both the preliminary heats and the finals will have four starters.

It will not be surprising to see some remarkable marks made to-night. The track has been proved so safe that every man is willing to let out to the limit. Thus far there hasn't been a man even scratched.

Accidents Looked For.

To the old-timers the absence of accidents is growing monotonous. Not one of them ever heard of three meets on a new track without at least one bad spill. They looked for them Wednesday night, and it really seemed to disappoint them that nothing happened.

It is a marvelous thing, considering the scores of men who have been killed on board tracks and considering the fine possibilities of a spill at 85 miles an hour or better, that none of the riders fear an accident. They try to be moderately careful. But to expect sudden death—well, it never occurs to them and they are the only men at the track who don't think of it when they come to close quarters at high speed.

With a safe track and machines getting better all the time there is no reason why a fast mark or two should not be set to-night.

The races will start to-night at 8:15. Cars will leave Five Points at short intervals. Tickets are on sale at Tumlin's and Shepherd's. All are provided with rain checks. These checks are good if rain interferes before the program is completed.

You're Not in It at All Without a Wishing Sash

Krazy Kat

But Ignatz Refused To Be "It"

M'GRAW BEATS ALL BUSHES TO GATHER TALENT

By Damon Runyon.

NEW YORK, June 28.—John J. McGraw is beating the business quite far and wide for baseball talent this season, having inaugurated the most systematic and thorough search for incipient athletes that he has ever conducted.

It is said that "Sinister" Dick Kinsella, the Varnish King, of Springfield, Mo., and McGraw's present chief of scouts, is under a commission that will take him over more territory than any other ivory hunter will cover this year.

This statement is borne out by the movements of the sinister one during the past few weeks. After thoroughly canvassing the bushes of the Middle West, Kinsella has suddenly leaped into the New York State and other leagues in this section of the country, and after a few weeks hereabouts he will comb the Pacific Coast and the Northwest.

The result of Kinsella's activities will probably not be definitely known until late in the summer, or until draft time. However, it is said that he has already spotted half a dozen pitchers.

More than likely Kinsella was instructed to pay particular attention to pitchers this year, as McGraw has suddenly found himself in need of that class of material.

* * *

FERDINAND SCHUPP, the author of the rising curve, is now the only real youngster with the club, and Theodore Goulait is about the only pitcher "plant" belonging to McGraw, although he still has some hopes of Frank Smith, now in the New York State League, developing later on.

Larue Kirby, who was carried along by the Giants for some time last season, and who was left at Mobile with Mike Finn this spring, has been cut loose entirely. There were various reasons why Larue would not do, chief of which was Larue himself. Finn had to send him away, and the last heard of the Michigan terror was at Pensacola, 'way down in Florida.

Stray reports floating in and out of the far sticks indicate that Chance also has some scouts hard at work. It is said that the Peerless Leader has lined up a score of young athletes for September delivery and that several will come from the Texas League, incubator of some of the best ball tossers in the land. Chance also has an eye on various promising young men out on the coast and in the Southern League.

* * *

FOR a long time past there has been an effort on foot to discover the reason why ball players hit less on the Polo Grounds than any other field in either circuit, it being generally admitted that such is the case. Last season the Giants claimed that it was on account of the advertising signs in center field. They said these signs formed a background which practically destroyed their batting eyes.

This year the signs were left off a considerable section of the bleacher wall, and the space was painted an alluring green. Then the Giants proceeded to hit a little bit less than ever, thus acquitting the poor signs of the blame.

Ty Cobb Just Hates Those Polo Grounds

DETROIT, June 28.—"Ty" Cobb was glad to get away from the Polo Grounds. The "Georgia Peach" dearly loves his base hits these days, and in "Ty's" opinion the Polo Grounds is no place for a .450 batting average.

"For the life of me, I can not hit on those grounds," said "Ty." "No wonder the Yankees are not hitting the ball. Hitting is more or less guesswork in New York. Sometimes you never do see the ball till it gets past you.

"It's mighty bad for the outfielders, too; unless a fly is hit so high that it shows above the upper tier, it is very hard to see. A low grounder is often lost in the background of summer clothed fans. I like New York pretty well, but I'm glad I don't have to play 77 games a year on the Polo Grounds."

Ex-Giant Ewing to Return to Baseball

BELLEFONTAINE, O., June 28.—Bob Ewing, former major league pitcher, who quit the game last season to devote all of his attention to farming and the raising of hogs on his farm at New Hampshire, O., is debating with himself as to whether he should re-enter the national game.

He has an offer from Manager Bade Myers, of the Canton team, Interstate League. Myers and Ewing began their professional career together as members of Charley Stroeber's Toledo team, Myers being a catcher at the time.

Ewing, now 38, showed the old-time form he possessed during the nine years he played with the Cincinnati team. For a while Ewing was with the Philadelphia and New York National League clubs.

M'LOUGHLIN ALONE LEFT IN ENGLISH TOURNAMENT

News of the Ring Game

Young Shugrue, the Eastern lightweight, has billed the toughest fight of his career. Shugrue signed articles yesterday to box Matty Baldwin in a 15-round bout at New Haven, Conn., on July 4 and the fur should certainly fly. Baldwin has fought the best boys in the lightweight division and has always given a good account of himself.

* * *

The fight between Toni Caponi and Jimmy Clabby, scheduled to be held at Indianapolis on July 3, has been called off. The promoters claim that Caponi wanted too much money.

* * *

Tom McCarey has wired Packey McFarland an offer to meet Jack Britton at his arena, providing the latter succeeds in defeating Charlie White at New Orleans on July 4. Britton and Packey met at New York a few months ago, with Packey carrying off the honors by a slight margin.

* * *

No more boxing shows are to be staged at Kenosha, Wis., during the summer months. The small attendance at the Coulon-Burns bout is the reason.

* * *

Kid Young, the local newsboy boxer, is simply aching to get into action. Young says he is willing to meet any boy of his weight, from Charley Lee to Matty McCue.

* * *

Joe Mandot and Knockout Brown are both picking Leach Cross to stop Bud Anderson on July 4. Both claim that Leach's weak advertised right hand will land on Anderson's jaw long before the twentieth round is over.

* * *

Tommy Murphy says he will be at the ringside when Ritchie and Rivers clash to challenge the winner. Murphy is surely entitled to a chance at the title as he has fought every worthy contender for the crown during the past two years.

* * *

Murphy has been forced to call off his bout with Johnny Dundee to be held on July 15 on account of a bad hand. He put the injured member out of commission while boxing with one of his sparring partners, Jack White may get the match with Dundee.

* * *

Paris is after a fight between Georges Carpentier and Al Palzer. Tom O'Rourke, manager of Palzer, received a letter from Monsieur Vienne, the Parision boxing promoter, asking him his terms for such a match.

* * *

Promoters in Milwaukee, Wis., want to stage a bout between Papke and Eddie McGoorty. McGoorty has already agreed to meet the former middleweight champion, but Papke is holding out for a larger guarantee.

EVEN TENNIS EARNS COIN; AMERICA IS "SPORT MAD"

NEW YORK, June 28.—It has been said that America is "sport mad." That the general boom in interest in competitive events extends to tennis is proved by the figures just announced placing the total gate receipts of the recent international matches here at $19,000. Of this surprising sum $7,000 went to defray the expenses of the American team.

Of the net profits of $12,000, half was turned over to the Australian team. The West Side Lawn Tennis Club, on whose courts the matches were played, received $1,400, and the remaining $4,600 was put in the treasury of the National Lawn Tennis Association.

ZAMLOCH TRIES TO STEAL WITH ALL BASES OCCUPIED

DETROIT, June 28.—It has happened again in the big leagues. No longer is John Anderson the proud possessor of the glory of stealing second with the bases filled. Zamloch, a Tiger recruit hurler, pulled the stunt in the second game with the Naps. Stanage was on third, Moriarty on second and the pitcher himself on first. The latter started for second, hit the dirt with a great slide, arose, brushed himself and found Morrie planted at the base. It was a cinch to tag Zamloch, and then an ivory double resulted, as Stanage tried to reach home and was caught on the throw to the plate.

MORAN KNOCKS OUT LOGAN EASILY IN NEW ORLEANS

CHICAGO OPENS OLYMPIC GAMES TO GREAT CROWD

CHICAGO, June 28.—With the huge stands crowded to their capacity, the American Olympic games were opened under the most favorable circumstances to-day. The athletic carnival promises to outclass any event of the same nature eevr held in this country. Athletes from all over the United States and Canada, as well as the point winners from Sweden, who took part in the Olympic games at Stockholm last year, are in attendance.

Almost every conceivable sort of athletic contest has been arranged for the meet, which will continue until July 6. A swimming tank has been dug out in the center of the field and is so constructed that it can be boarded over and covered with earth when not in use. There is also a ski slide on which the skiing tournament will be held. As the weather will not permit the slides being covered with the natural coating of ice, grease has been used and in the preliminary trials found to be successful. Several polo games and feats of horsemanship also have been arranged. The army polo team will in all probability participate in this event.

* * *

TO-DAY the final championship contests for Chicago school children will be run off. The preliminary trials in the competitive drills, marching and like events, were held Thursday and yesterday. Fifty thousand children participated in the preliminaries.

To-morrow will be known as "Swedish Day," and the Swedish singing societies of Chicago have arranged for a monster chorus to join in the singing of national hymns and folk songs.

The intercollegiate athletic championships of the United States, including track and field sports, will be run off Wednesday, while the interscholastic championships, in which 2,000 high school and preparatory school boys are entered, will be decided on Thursday.

* * *

A "SANE Fourth" celebration will be given on Friday, interspersed with athletic events. In the afternoon the junior track and field championships of the United States, composed of 18 standard events, will take place. In the evening there will be more athletic events, educational moving pictures and a fireworks display.

Next Saturday will be the crowning day of the meet. The senior national championships, conducted under the auspices of the A. A. U., will be run off on that day and will bring forth some of the best athletes in the country. Such men as Sheridan, MacGrath, Sheppard, Kiviat, Kohlmainen and others of international reputation will be on hand.

* * *

DURING the meet there will also be archery contests, drills of firemen and policemen, three days of swimming, fencing, wrestling matches and trap shooting. Directly south of the stadium a large plot of ground has been laid out for the trap shooting competition which will be held on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week under the direction of E. W. Heath. The Boy Scouts will also give several exhibition drills under the direction of Dr. P. J. H. Farrell. Several power-boat races on the lake have also been arranged to take place during the week.

THE MOTORCYCLE RAG.

They were sitting in the gloaming and her cheeks were pale and damp
As she said good-bye unto her darling Steve.
But he said, "There ain't no reason for the teardrop in your lamp,
For you haven't got no business for to grieve.
I am going for to leave you and may not come back no more.
I will risk my life as everybody knows.
But although I don't come back again
you oughtn't to get sore
With them life insurance papers in your hose."
And as he strode away
She sobbed and then did say:

CHORUS.

"As a patriotic hero
He can bat at minus zero.
And there ain't no sign of beauty in his face,
But I'll gather in the money
From my Motorcycle Honey
If he don't come back alive from that there race."

We note that Roy Good is captain of the Cincinnati motorcycle racing team. This reminds that the virtuous meet their demise at an early age.

Mr. Kirby, who coached the Yale crew, avers that he is well pleased with the ing that an Englishman sometimes is ing that an Englishman cometimes is easily pleased.

Mr. Kirby furthermore avers that Yale will do well when it has learned his stroke from the ground up. Several impartial spectators of the late race were under the impression that Yale had run aground.

"Do not be a fighter," advises James J. Corbett. This advice is followed assiduously by a great majority of our pugilists.

While polo may not strike a popular chord, one might say without fear of successful contradiction that it is not a game for invalids.

Fish stories were told long before men began writing ads for railway companies, but liars were amateurs in those days.

Speaking of the irony of fate, we note that the Red Sox paused long enough to raise aloft in the summer breeze a banner on which was the legend: "World's Champions."

We have it from Ban Johnson that Joe Birmingham is not competent to manage an American League team. Possibly Joe allows his team to win too often for the good of the league.

Boxing experts are wondering who will be Willie Ritchie's manager, but after the fracas on the Fourth a more lucrative position will be that of Mr. Ritchie's doctor.

Bob Fitzsimmons vouchsafes the information that George Rodel is a regular fighter. Jim Corbett expostulates that the said Rodel is a dub. Taking it by and large, Fits wins unanimously.

H. ZIM DEFYING AN ENEMY.

"Strike, if you will, this fair young head!
You'll break your bat on it, he said.

NEW ORLEANS, June 28.—"Walter Johnson of the minors." This is the title that Southern League fans will bestow upon Roy Walker, former Appalachian League recruit whom Manager Frank took on several days ago to fill in for "Rube" Evans. Walker was given his premier Wednesday against the Lookouts, and proved himself everything his chief sponsor—Jack Adams—claimed: "More speed than any pitcher in the minor leagues."

Walker, though shaded in a pitching duel by Harry Coveleskie, threw sensational ball. He fanned ten members of Kid Elberfeld's mob, giving up but eight hits, which were turned into a brace of scores.

COULON DECIDES TO POSTPONE WILLIAMS BOUT

By Sol Plex.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 28.—Johnny Coulon is not going to fight Johnny "Kid" Williams, of Baltimore, in Tom McCarey's Vernon arena July 29. The bantam champion decided yesterday afternoon that he was not prepared for such a stiff battle in defense of his laurels and announced that he would wire McCarey last night insisting on a postponement until Labor Day Coulon had given McCarey his word, and said he hated to disappoint Uncle Tom, but allowed a champion should take no foolish chances and that he would not fight Challenger Williams until he knew he was physically fit to put forth his best efforts in defense of the championship he has held for over five years.

Two Months in Mountains.

"Just to show the Vernon Club promoter that I intend playing fair ball for him I will leave for the coast July 1 or a few days later and stay there until Labor Day," said Johnny. "I want to get two months in the mountains before facing the Williams party. I am sure that by Labor Day I will be my old self, able to show Mr. Williams how a real champion fights.

"My right hand is bad and I am low in weight because of the hot weather we have been having. This is the first summer I ever tried to box, anyway, and I guess it is a mistake. When my father was alive he never permitted me to fight in the summer time. He argued that I was such a little fellow, always giving away weight, that training in the hot months would get me down too low. That was the trouble the other night at Kenosha. I guess the dad was right, and I will never again book a big match for June, July or August.

"It will be cool and nice in the mountains near Los Angeles and that will be just the thing for me. I can build up until a couple of weeks before Labor Day and then have something to take off when I start the training camp grind for Williams.

Is Sorry for Williams.

"I am sorry for Williams, because the postponement will be hard on him. He already is on the scene, so Labor Day will make a long wait for him. However, he might take on Eddie Campi again on our original date, July 29, the winner to get me on Labor Day. Williams beat Campi in Eddie's first long fight. Since that Campi has whaled both Burns and Ledoux. I think he is entitled to another chance at the Baltimore boy."

MERCURY AT 105 KNOCKS OUT CUB CHARLEY SMITH

CINCINNATI, June 28.—The temperature of 105 proved too much for Charley Smith, Cub hurler, who collapsed after yesterday's game at Redland field. The veteran walked off the field without trouble, but once within the club house began to totter and suddenly fell to the floor. His mates rushed to his assistance. He was rushed to the hotel.

Yell Defiance at Blood Disorders
A Remedy That Has Shown a Most Remarkable Purifying Effect.

The word medicine is one of the most abused in our language. There are certain medicinal properties just as necessary to health as the food we eat. Take, for example, the well-known tonic medicine, S. S. S. This famous blood purifier contains medicinal components just as vital and essential to healthy blood as the elements of wheat, roast beef, the fats and the sugars that make up our daily ration.
As a matter of fact, there is one ingredient in S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating each cellular part of the body to the healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment. That is why it regenerates the blood supply; why it has such a tremendous influence in overcoming eczema, rash, pimples, and all skin afflictions.
And in regenerating the tissues S. S. S. has a rapid and positive antidotal effect upon all those irritating influences that cause rheumatism, sore throat, weak eyes, failing hair, loss of weight, thin, pale cheeks, and that weariness of muscle and nerve that is generally experienced as spring fever. Get a bottle of S. S. S. at any drug store, and in a few days you will not only feel bright and energetic, but you will be the picture of new life. S. S. S. is prepared only in the laboratory of The Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., who maintain a very efficient Medical Department, where all who have any blood disorder of a stubborn nature may write freely for advice and a special book of instruction. S. S. S. is sold everywhere by drug stores, department and general stores.

SPEEDY SPRINT ALL THAT CAN SAVE CRACKERS

By Percy H. Whiting.

IF the Crackers are going to win the pennant this year they must demonstrate it between July 4 and July 16.

The Crackers come home July 4 for the first and only home stay of any importance they get until August 14. On this home stay they get 12 games in a row.

They better win a big majority of them.

* * *

RIGHT now the Crackers are a dangerous distance behind the surprising Gulls, who lead the league. They show no evidence of overtaking Mike Finn's flying club.

No material gain will be made until the team gets home, of course. The Crackers do their gaining on home grounds.

This being true, the local club better make the most of the home stay between July 4 and 16. It will be a long time before they get another.

On July 17 the Crackers go out on a heart-breaking road trip. Of the next 28 games they play 24 on the road.

And you know well the Crackers aren't going to make any advances while this torrid July-August trip is in progress.

* * *

ONE fact that will help is that the Crackers wind up the season with 22 straight games at home. But unless they have begun to gain on the Gulls before that time they will never overtake them. They can't afford to wait for the last home stay. It will be too late. They can't afford to wait until the Gulls falter, for there isn't any certainty they are going to falter.

* * *

IF the Crackers are a disappointment in the Southern League—which they aren't yet—consider the case of the Pelicans. This team looked like a sure one-two-three club. Now it is nowhere and rapidly going further.

Laugh if you want to, but my own opinion is that this is Charley Frank's last year in Pelicantown.

This stuff has been coming in over the grapevine for a couple of months and longer—and coming pretty straight. The Cleveland club undoubtedly owns the New Orleans association. That's a moral certainty. They will want to put one of their own men in charge. They realize that Charley Frank is unpopular in his home town—why, it is difficult to figure, for he has never failed until this year to give them a good ball club. It is believed that the Cleveland folks wanted to be rid of Frank last year but didn't have the heart to fire him, after the showing he made with the 1912 Pelicans.

* * *

THEY need a new deal all around in New Orleans.

That ought to be the best baseball town of the league—it has the population. But it is nearly the worst. There is some good (or bad) reason for this because it is not a condition of long standing.

The Cleveland folks have figured around and have presumably decided that the sacrifice of Charley Frank would be a popular move.

So off comes his head.

A mere prediction, truly! But watch it come through.

PRIZE FIGHTRS' BALL TEAM JIMMY DIME'S NEW IDEA

NEWCASTLE, PA., June 28.—Jimmy Dime, the enterprising manager of pugilists and fight promoter, announces he has organized a team of ball players which would be composed of some of the best boxers in this country, and that they would play several exhibition games with professional teams this summer. Dime stated that there were few remunerative matches for the boxers during the summer and he intended to keep his team going until fall. His line-up is as follows:

Dan Daley, pitcher, heavyweight; Tom McMahon, first base, light heavyweight; Tommy Bresnahan, second base; Joe Chip, catcher, welterweight; George Chip, shortstop, middleweight; "Goo" Stewart, third base, middleweight; Patsy Brannigan, left field, featherweight; Jimmy Dime, center field, manager, and Tommy Jones, right field, lightweight.

By Joe Agler.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., June 28. Lefty Price will endeavor to prove to the Billikens that he is the goods this afternoon, with Chapman behind the plate. We should cop at least two of the three games scheduled for Montgomery. Manush will show up for Monday's game. He seems to be in mid-season shape.

Well, we got that revenge, after all, taking two of the series from the Turtles. Old King Brady twirled superb ball yesterday afternoon in spite of a sun which threatened to warp the grandstand out of shape and blister the infield. "Old Reliable" came back, good and strong, and demonstrated his worth to the Crackers.

We scored in the first on Long's single and Whitey's hit to center. We rocked along to the sixth without a chance, and then Smith singled, Bisland bunted and yours truly got a hit. Baerwald muffed Chapman's fly and Smith scored. I was nipped at second.

Newton was on the mound for the Turtles and pitched great ball, but his teammates couldn't help him much. We all were nearly suffocated with the heat.

MANUSH FOR CRACKERS; WILL JOIN ON THE ROAD

MONTGOMERY, ALA., June 28.—Frank Manush, formerly of the New Orleans Pelicans, recently unconditionally released by Charley Frank, has been signed by Manager Smith as utility player.

Manush has been in Memphis ever since his release. He will join the Crackers to-day or to-morrow.

It is presumed Manush will take the place of George Rohe as the Crackers' utility player.

JOE BEAN, director of playgrounds, deserves a large medal for getting the young men of Atlanta started in a big track and field meet. The event at Piedmont Park July 4 is deserving of the support of all those interested in the physical development of the young men in Atlanta.

No sport is cleaner, healthier or more desirable than track and field meets. Running, jumping and weight throwing contests develop those who take part in them. And moreover, they furnish a fine spectacle for those who witness them.

Unquestionably there will be a tremendous crowd at Piedmont Park Fourth of July morning to see the contests.

Of course no admission fee will be charged. There will be seats, if only on the grass, for all.

It is to be hoped that this meet will be the first of many. Atlanta ought to have one big track and field meet and several small ones each year. In the winter it ought to have an indoor meet in the Auditorium-Armory.

These things will come in time. The hardest work is done. A start has been made.

SINCE the Pittsburg club has been slumping, Manager Fred Clarke caused to be issued orders that the lid would be lifted on the anti-booze clause in the Pirate contracts.

"The players may drink beer if they drink it alone," said Clarke. "The use of the beverage as a tonic I do not believe to be harmful, at least not as much as the restless restraint caused by the clause against it."

This should be interesting to Pittsburg fans who may not know that some of the Pirate players, in St. Louis at least, were lifting the "lid" before Manager Fred Clarke got his shoulder under it, showing the practicability of such a clause in the first place.

FRED CLARKE, manager of the Pittsburg National League Club, closed a deal recently with the St. Joe Western League Club, for the purchase of Outfielders Joe Kelly and George Watson.

The consideration was not announced, except that money and players were involved. Each man is hitting above the .300 mark, but Watson is now out of the game with a broken leg. They will report to Pittsburg next spring.

WHITEY ALPERMAN never tires of telling stories of the great, perhaps the greatest, player the world has ever known.

"One night," said Whitey the other day, "when Kelly was with the old Chicago team, a half-dozen carriages had been ordered by the late Al Johnson to take the players for a ride about the city.

"As the players waited in the hotel a down-and-out fan came wandering in, told Kelly the story of his hardships.

"Kelly went to Johnson.

"'How much will these carriages cost us?' he asked.

"'Oh, I suppose about $35 or $40,' said Al.

"'All right,' said Kel, 'let's call it off and give the money to this old scout.' And it was done.

"Another time," continued Alperman, "Kelly shouted to an umpire: 'Don't fine me, Mr. Ump!' The official stood glaring at him muttering threats of a $50 assessment.

"'Don't fine me,' repeated Mike. 'Fine one of those tight wads, there. It will teach him a lesson. It won't me. If you take $50 away from me, you take the drinks and cigars away from a lot of fellows who are waiting for me at the hotel.'"

THERE'LL be no hidden ball trick victims among the Naps this season unless some one gets careless and forgets Birmingham's instructions. The Naps are directed to hug bases until the opposing pitcher takes his position at the slab, unless they positively know where the ball is.

If the pitcher should take his position on the rubber and the then hidden ball trick be tried by an opposing player, the base runners would move up a base. The taking of the pitching position without being able to deliver the ball would constitute a balk as soon as the pitcher took down his hands.

JOE AGLER has the happy knack of being able to parry inconvenient interruptions with some smart retort that immediately quashes the opposition. And Joe is game to the core. He was playing in a rather noisy game a few years ago, and after a short time a big chunk of wood was thrown at him. Fortunately, the aim was bad, and it fell harmlessly on the platform.

Agler picked it up and showed it to the spectators.

"Good heavens!" he exclaimed in tones of mock anxiety, "one of you fans has lost your head!"

Lee Magee Is Crack Of Cardinals' Team

ST. LOUIS, June 28.—"If I had a few more like Magee" is the substance of a prayerful wish that lingers in the mind of Manager Miller Huggins, of the St. Louis National League team, after many a close game dropped by the Cardinals in which Lee Magee, the speedy young left fielder, has put up a beautiful all-around game, to the exclusion of most of his teammates.

The left fielder of the Cardinals is rightly entitled to this oft repeated, yet unspoken compliment. Magee has all the characteristics to a marked degree of an up-to-date ball player—the speedy kind. He is by far the fastest man on the Cardinal team and one of the best all-around players Manager Huggins has in his line-up. He will take all kinds of chances on the bases and has won many games by his fleetness alone.

MANDOT PICKS RITCHIE TO DEFEAT JOE RIVERS

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 28.—They say a fighter's opinion of another fighter does not amount to a snap. If you want to find out for yourself remember what is written in the following paragraph and think of it when the time comes:

"Joe Mandot, one of the brainiest fighters of the day, picks Willie Ritchie to beat Joe Rivers, and says Leachie Cross will stop Bud Anderson owing to Cross' tremendous power to hit."

GOPHERS WILL NOT MEET MICHIGAN NEXT FALL

MINNEAPOLIS, June 28.—The University of Minnesota will not meet Michigan on the football field next fall. This was announced to-day by the athletic authorities at the university. The date had open for the possible scheduling of Michigan October 25, has been given to the University of North Dakota. This precludes any possibility of a resumption of football relations with Michigan until at least another year.

RICKEY TO SCOUT FOR BROWNS

ST. LOUIS, June 28.—Branch Rickey, former catcher in both big leagues, who coached the University of Michigan team this year, has returned to his old job as scout for the Browns during the summer. He began work by taking to the team with him two of his Michigan stars, Pitcher Powell and Shortstop Lavans.

THORNTON WINS RIGHT TO BATTLE WITH CHAMPION

NEW ORLEANS, LA., June 28.—tain played havoc with the ule of the Southern tennis championship games at the New Orleans Lawn Tennis Club Friday. J. B. Adoue, of Dallas, Texas, went down in defeat before Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, in straight sets, 6-4, 6-1, 6-1. This brings Thornton, the winner of the tournament, against last year's champion, Carleton Smith. This match will be played late to-day after the doubles are finished.

The only other men's matches was stopped by darkness. Only Atlantans were participants, Smith and Mansfield against Tohrnton and Grant in the semi-finals. Much to the surprise of everybody Smith and Mansfield took the first two sets of the match (which is the best three out of five sets) before the game was called.

Grima and Phelps meet Adoue and Shelton to-day. Thornton and Grant will finish their match with Mansfield and Smith before the afternoon games start. Bummerstadt is carded against Lloyd and Hochendale is opposing Strouse.

Early in the afternoon the final round in doubles between the winners of the morning matches is expected to start. Clark is carded to meet the winner of the Hochendale-Strouse match. Mrs. Monroe will meet Miss Murphy at 4 p. m. and half an hour later Thornton will meet Smith. The final round in consolations will start at 5 p. m. The forecast for to-day calls for clear weather and it is expected that the program will be carried through without hindrance.

HERE'S A CHANCE TO MAKE SOME REAL MONEY

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.
(Author of "The Triple Tie.")

It is now up to the readers of The Georgian who have been reading "The Triple Tie" on the magazine page to solve the problems of the novel and send in their conclusions in competition for the prizes aggregating $250 offered by this newspaper.

In this issue of The Georgian is printed the last part of Chapter 43 of "The Triple Tie." At the end of this chapter Gordon Kelly is brought on the scene again. There he is left while the readers of the story send their contributions to The Georgian. Readers will be allowed until noon of Thursday, July 3, in which to send in their answers. No communications will be considered unless they are received at The Georgian office by Thursday at noon or bear a postmark not later than that time.

The final chapters of "The Triple Tie," as written by the author, will be printed in The Georgian of Monday, July 7.

Can You Solve Them?

As an aid to the readers who desire to compete for the prizes it may be said that the problems to be solved are these:

First—How does Gordon Kelly escape from the mountaineers?

Second—What happens to Mildred Deery, the heroine?

Third—How does Gordon Kelly, who never saw a game of baseball or never played a game of baseball up to the time he asked Manager Smith, of the Atlanta Club, for a position on his team—how did Gordon Kelly learn to catch the ball and bat in the phenomenal manner he showed in the games he played at Atlanta?

Fourth—What happened when Gordon Kelly went to bat in the last half of the ninth inning in the final and deciding game of The Triple Tie when there were three on bases, two out and four runs needed for the Red Sox to win?

Fifth—What is the final ending of the story?

It is suggested that readers who desire to compete for the prizes take up the narrative where it leaves off in this issue of The Georgian and complete it as they think it ought to be completed, or as they think the author has completed it, thus solving the problems presented.

Nothing Improbable.

Every novel is a mystery, else no one would read a novel. Speculation as to how a story will "turn out" is usually what keeps a reader interested to the end. Perhaps the mysteries of "The Triple Tie" are no more mysterious than are to be found in the average novel. Certainly every one who has read "The Triple Tie" from the beginning has an idea as to how things "turned out."

It may be hinted that the author has solved the problems in a rational way—that there is nothing improbable in the author's ending of the story.

Please remember that this is not a guessing contest. Originality, literary value and analytical clearness will be largely considered in awarding the prizes. Three judges, in no way connected with The Georgian will make the awards for the best solutions of "The Triple Tie" problems.

So "go to it," readers. You have until noon of Thursday to send in your conclusions.

ATLANTA GIRL WITH 'THE GREAT AMERICAN VOICE' TO SING HERE

Miss Lalla B. Cannon.

Miss Eulalia Bright Cannon, the Atlanta girl who was designated by Professor Sergei Klibansky as possessor of "the great American voice" and awarded a $3,000-a-year grand opera scholarship, will be heard at a free concert of the Atlanta Music Festival Association at the Auditorium at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. She will sing the aria, "O Don Fatale," from "Don Carlos," the song that won her the greatest honor, perhaps, ever accorded an American vocal student.

Miss Cannon, who prefers to be known as Lalla B. Cannon, is spending her vacation with her mother, Mrs. L. C. Cannon, of 647 Peachtree Street. She is a dramatic soprano with a truly wonderful range, and unless her friends prevail upon her to give a benefit recital this will probably be her only appearance in Atlanta this summer. In August or early September she will return to New York to resume her operatic studies under Professor Klibansky, as holder of the scholarship given by a wealthy New York woman.

"I always have aspired to grand opera," Miss Cannon told a Georgian reporter yesterday. "I think it is the grandest career in the world. I have accepted the scholarship. Professor Klibansky will say how long I must study in America and when I must go to Europe and whether I shall become an opera singer. I shall do just what he says, and I do so hope he will think I am fitted for opera."

Gives Her Mother Credit.

Since it all depends on Professor Klibansky's dictum, it can be asserted dogmatically that Miss Cannon will become a grand opera star. In selecting her over 400 competitors, men, women and girls, Klibansky said her voice undoubtedly was capable of as wonderful development as any of the great sopranos now heard in Wagnerian opera.

To her mother Miss Cannon owes and freely gives the credit for the fairylike fortune by which she rose to fame overnight and her sparkling prospects for a future career. A singer from babyhood, Miss Cannon always thought she was a mezzo, and her teachers, even until a few months ago in New York, shared her belief. She wanted to sing all the time, but her mother prevailed upon her to desist, that she might not waste her powers by untutored efforts. When she went to New York to study she scrupulously refrained from vocal exertion, and although the strain of practice taxed her strength, her vocal capabilities were conserved until she sang before Klibansky and was pronounced not a mezzo, but a dramatic soprano of rare quality and power.

Since then she has sung before Madame Gadski, and the peerless diva has expressed the wish to hear her again when next she visits America. To her acceptance of her mother's advice, Miss Cannon ascribes the preservation of her voice till the fortunate meeting with Klibansky.

Fortune Came by Accident.

And here is how she sang for Klibansky and won the scholarship, as she told it to The Georgian:

"A girl friend saw in The New York American an advertisement for 'the great American voice,' inserted by Professor Klibansky. He had taught in the Berlin Conservatory, and was then an instructor in Damrosch's Conservatory, known as the Institute of Musical Art. My friend told me about the advertisement, and I went to see Professor Klibansky that afternoon. There were so many other singers there that it was late when I sang 'The Birth of Morn,' a simple song, for him. He told me to come back the next morning, and I did. I sang 'O Don Fatale,' the aria from 'Don Carlos,' and as you know, I won the scholarship."

When it is considered that the honor of being declared possessor of "the great American voice" and receiving the $3,000 annual scholarship had been promised to another girl before Miss Cannon sang for Klibansky, it readily is seen her recital before him must have convinced him she was another Jenny Lind or Adelina Patti in embryo.

The other girl was Miss Jean Vincent Cooper, of Jackson, Miss. Professor Klibansky told the wealthy patroness it would be a shame for either of the girls to miss securing the best instruction obtainable, particularly when Miss Cooper was a mezzo and Miss Cannon a soprano and each was without a peer in her own field. The patroness then agreed to duplicate her offer, and Miss Cooper and Miss Cannon each were awarded the honor and the prize.

Asked what she thought of the opera as a career for aspiring girls, Miss Cannon replied, "Really, I can't say. To tell the truth, I don't know, for I myself am not in opera yet. But I want to try it, for I think it will be splendid."

Steals $153,000 to Give Baby Luxuries

CHICAGO, June 28.—Mrs. Edward F. Young and her 10-month-old baby to-day saw her husband taken to Joliet, Ill., to serve a prison term of from one to five years for the confessed embezzlement of $153,000 from the Chicago, Terre Haute and Southeastern Railroad. He was a trusted employee.

"He took the money to use it getting rich so baby and I could have everything we wanted. I'll stick to him. Baby won't know a thing about it," said Mrs. Young.

Federal Report Shows the South Produced 14,313,015 Bales. Less Than 1911 Production.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The Southern cotton planter should worry. According to a bulletin soon to be issued by Director Durand, of the Bureau of Census, Department of Commerce, the cotton crop for the United States in 1912 amounted to 14,313,015 bales of 500 pounds each, and was worth the trifling sum of $920,630,000.

Although the crop last year was 11.9 per cent less than that of the previous year, it was worth $60,790,000 more than it was in 1911. This almost equals the banner year for cotton, which was in 1910, when he crop amounted to but 12,005,688 bales, 2,307,327 bales less than it did this year, but was worth $963,180,000, the most valuable crop ever raised in this country. While 1910 led in value, 1911 led in amount, the crop that year being 16,250,276 bales.

The statistics show that the cotton crop for the past four years has increased 32 per cent. When it is considered that, of the total area of the countries from which returns of cotton ginned were made, only about one-eleventh was devoted to the production of cotton in 1911 and 1912, the figures afford some idea of the possibilities of cotton production in the United States.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

To-day, or so much thereof as may be necessary, as they put it in legal phrasing, will be Joseph M. Brown's last day in the Executive office in Georgia.

However many people may view his departure, it may be set down as a fact that newspaper men generally will see him go forth to private life with their genuine good will and good wishes.

From the newspaper man's standpoint he has been in many ways a Governor among a thousand. He has been an infinite source of good "copy," and by such fruits are good Governors known in the newspaper man's world.

Governor Brown, had he elected to be a newspaper man instead of a Governor, undoubtedly would have been a star. There never has been anybody in the Executive office who could put as much "punch" into a promulgation as Governor Brown—at least, not within the memory of this writer.

Governor Brown's copy never needs editing. Whatever he has to say, he says it with the emphasis right where it belongs. When it comes to putting the "bang!" into a written document, the newspaper craft arise as a man and call "Little Joe" blessed!

He is the very smallest Governor physically the State has had since Alexander H. Stephens, but he is fearless and straightforward in his utterances. He has insisted—and rightly—that he be not quoted in the public prints in important matters otherwise than directly. But when his written statements have come forth, they have been the real things!

His sense of humor is keen and his good nature irrepressible. If one grows to like him at all, one grows to like him all over. Moreover, one grows more and more to respect and esteem him as one grows more and more to know him.

It is but the simple truth to say that he has "set a pace" in the Executive office that will not be easy to follow. He has left his indelible imprint upon Georgia history, and it is safe to say that he retires with the regard and high esteem of a great majority of his fellow citizens.

Anyway, that's the way this writer feels about it.

Senator M. C. Tarver has stated positively that a bill to create the Chicamauga Judicial Circuit will be introduced in the present Legislature, refusing to say whether he or some other member from the counties affected will be the author of the bill.

From Representative Shropshire of Chattooga County, comes the suggestion of two new counties, Floyd alone remaining in the Rome circuit; Walker, Chattooga and Dade forming another circuit; Whitfield, Murray and Catoosa, a third, and Gordon and Bartown remaining in the Cherokee circuit.

The new Legislature, while promising enough, still shows its inexperience and yet hesitating quality of its membership.

When the clerk calls upon those favoring such and such a bill to stand up, practically the entire membership arises, or remains seated, as the case may be. The custom, of course, is merely to raise the hand, as a sign of voting.

One new member, remembering how easily he had squelched an adversary with a simple objection earlier in the day, yesterday entered a vociferous objection to a motion to adjourn. Naturally, he got a good laugh for his pains.

Nevertheless, the new Legislature looks like a pretty good bet.

Evidently it is composed of untried material, but that is no sure sign there is not plenty of good stuff in the makeup of it.

The real leaders of the new House are yet to be developed, but they likely are there, for all that!

"I do not expect to introduce any bill, but shall occupy the majority of my time in helping to kill some other fellow's bill," was the reply of Senator Charles E. McGregor to-day, when questioned as to any proposed legislation which he might introduce in the present session of the General Assembly.

He continued along the lines of legislation, saying: "I may introduce a resolution looking to the restoration of the old 'blueback speller' into our educational system. I shall also advocate enlarging the duties of the game wardens so as to include the enforcement of all misdemeanor laws upon the statute books, especially the prohibition law. I stand for the enforcement of all laws or their repeal."

Both President Anderson of the Senate and Speaker Burwell of the House are hard at work framing up the standing committees of the two houses of the General Assembly.

This is a tremendous task and requires much patience and careful consideration. Upon the composition of the various committees depends a very great deal of the Legislature's efficiency as a whole. It is necessary, therefore, that members be placed on such committees as they seem best fitted for, and the determination of that is no child's job.

Both the presiding officers hope, however, to have all committee assignments ready for promulgation by Wednesday of next week.

The Legislature is going to be swamped with Fourth of July invitations.

Already a dozen or so have been sent in, and there are more to come.

The result probably will be that the Legislature, instead of accepting any one and attending in a body some particular celebration, will divide into squads and scatter itself pretty well around all over the State.

A majority of the members likely will attend some big function in their own respective neighborhoods.

SPOT INTERESTS GIVE JULY BOOST

Week-End Shorts Cover, Steadying New Crops---Trade Waiting Bureau Report.

NEW YORK, June 28.—At the opening of the cotton market to-day the tone was quiet and first prices were erratic, being 4 points higher to 1 point lower than last night's close. The larger spot houses came into the market, bidding aggressively for July position, but offerings were limited and scattered, resulting in that option jumping 12 points, to 12.14. Other positions were given practically no support, but prices rallied 1 to 5 points from the opening, mostly in sympathy with the advance in July.

Trading, however, was very light, but the ring crowd inclined to sell on some rains which appeared on the map in Texas and increasing cloudiness in the eastern belt. Advisory warning on Texas coast says disturbance has moved from the Gulf southwest and is now centered between Corpus Christi and Del Rio. Wind and tide will subside during the day. Nice warm growing weather with very favorable indications for rains becoming more general over Sunday.

In addition to this, The Journal of Commerce declares that cotton has improved in Georgia and South Carolina during the past month, while North Carolina conditions are about the same as a month ago. Owing to a cold snap, the season is about two weeks late. Plant small, but strong. Stands poor. Cultivation good. Some insects.

The class of buying looked to be short covering over Sunday and traders evening up their line, pending the Government report, to be made public at noon July 3, which will give an estimate of the cotton acreage of 1913 and the condition of the crop to June 25. The general impression seems to prevail that the market will be only a scalping affair until this report is out of the way.

At the close the market was steady, with June and July showing a net gain of 18 points and other positions generally 2 points higher than the final quotations of Friday.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 28.—Spot people and Liverpool were credited with stopping the July notices yesterday, which were said to be about 15,000 bales.

* * *

There is not much looked for in the market until the Government reports its condition figures and the acreage estimate, which is likely to be about 3 per cent increase, while conditions are generally expected around 82 to 83 per cent. However, if the scattered long interest in July is eliminated, this option might be forced higher.

* * *

"When those in control of July believe the liquidation to be over, something is going to happen," remarked J. M. Anderson.

* * *

* * *

Whether July is a "dead duck" it is not definitely known, but brokers close to leading spot interests intimate that the fireworks are not yet over.

* * *

Sentiment is decidedly mixed and the market is in a waiting attitude, pending Bureau day.

The Journal of Commerce has the following on the condition of the cotton crops in North and South Carolina and Georgia:

"North Carolina—There is no material change in the condition from a month ago, which the report of this journal made it 78 per cent. The season is about two weeks late, due largely to cold weather. The plant is generally small and stands poor, while a number of localities are affected with lice. Cultivation is good, except in a few sections, which are grassy. Since the cold spell the weather has been more favorable and cotton is showing improvement.

"South Carolina—Owing to the recent cold spell the crop is now two to three weeks late, but since the warm weather set in the plant is growing nicely and showing improvement. The plant is small and stands generally are poor, but the fields are clean and cultivation good. Some localities, however, are in grass, with the exception of a few lice, the crop is free of insects. Percentage shows an increase over last month, when it was 69.9.

"Georgia—Conditions are very irregular and spotted in Georgia. On account of dry weather early in the season cotton was slow in germinating and the crop is now fully two to three weeks late. The plant is small, but strong and healthy. Cultivation is good and rainfall ample, but stands are generally poor and irregular. Insects are not complained of, and the weather generally is favorable. Percentage condition shows improvement over a month ago, when it was 76.3."

Dogwood, the principal source of shuttles for use in cotton mills, is growing scarcer year by year, and various substitutes are being tried, but with no great success.

* * *

Liverpool Conference: "No resolutions passed, but conference approved American recommendation c. i. f. and ½ per cent actual tare and universal type which was made. King, Neville and Francis, representing Americans' new type middling up, Liverpool from middling up, about half grade lower below middling.

"It is expected that Liverpool and others will adopt new type."

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Theory mars the crop prospective and condition handicaps the market. The talent, therefore, is idle enough to worry about environment. Bulls admit the crop over a large area is doing splendidly, but taunt their constitutional enemies with the query, 'How long would it require unfavorable weather or the boll-weevil to put it on the bilibk?' Bears admit that in some sections the crop is below par, but assert with a show of confidence that a continuation of good weather, with a few timely rains, will enormously improve the condition of that portion of the crop, which thus far has made least progress.

"So the talent has come to expect a Government acreage figure next Thursday showing an increase over last year of about 3 per cent and a Government condition percentage of between 82 and 83. Meanwhile, America knows about what to expect in the way of tariff changes and may begin to shape her affairs accordingly. England's trade is in excellent condition, and the rings are beginning to hear that many foreign mills are running low on stocks of raw material; the movement to secure universal cotton types seems to be making satisfactory progress for the first time in the history of the trade."

WILSON APPROVES DISSOLUTION PLAN

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Bullness pervaded the stock market at the opening to-day, most issues ranging beneath Friday's closing. Canadian Pacific declined a point on a few selling orders.

Amalgamated Copper, after opening unchanged, shaded ⅛. Union Pacific began ⅜ off, but after half an hour had sustained a net gain of ⅛. United States Steel was ⅛ lower at the outset, but later recovered. Utah Copper, Southern Pacific, Reading and Atchison made trifling fractional advances.

St. Paul commenced with a gain of ⅛, but soon lost it and scored a net decline of ⅜. Chesapeake and Ohio and Ohio Copper each lost ⅛. Norfolk and Western and Pennsylvania each dropped ¼.

The curb was quiet.

Dealings in the London market were very light. American shares in London were irregular.

Announcement from Washington of the approval of an agreement of the dissolution of the Harriman merger put Union Pacific up 3¼ to 148⅞ before the close. The balance of the list was strengthened. Canadian Pacific rose to 218, for a gain of 1⅝, and Reading went 158⅜, a net gain of 1¼.

The market closed strong.

Government bonds strong. Other bonds steady.

CHANCE WOULD QUIT IF HIS HEALTH GAVE WAY

NEW YORK, June 28.—Frank Chance will make good with the New York Yankees if his health doesn't go back on him.

Chance is no quitter. He undertook a big task in New York, but he'll get away with it unless his nervous system fails him. The least little thing would upset him last fall. They say he is doing better this year. He should stick with the Yanks and produce a winning club next year. If his health bothers him, however, he'll jump the club overnight and go back to his orange ranch in California.

TRADE SHOULD NOT IGNORE BULLISH WHEAT CONDITION

CHICAGO, June 27.—The Inter Ocean says:

"Those who are bullish on wheat say that conditions in the Northwest are such that the trade can not ignore them much longer and that, despite the impending movement of new winter wheat, its influence will be offset, and that with any further bulge in coarse grains wheat should respond.

"With corn in Oklahoma in the tassel and temperatures around 100, it is possible that continued dry, hot weather will irreparably injure the corn crop, Conservative people advise against following the advance, but favor buying on any good setback. Traders who were in the pit all day yesterday said there was a new class of investment buying which took the offerings from bulls, who were securing profits, and they are looking for higher oats prices, notwithstanding the possibility of good deliveries next month and a liberal carry-over of old oats."

SHARP DECLINE IN PRICE OF CEREALS

Good Rains Encourage Active Selling Move---Cables Weak and Sentiment Mixed.

CHICAGO, June 28.—The professionals in wheat favored the selling side this morning and prices were ⅛ to ⅜ cent lower. The weather map showed light rains in Canada as well as at several points in North Dakota, but none in South Dakota. A dispatch was received from Minneapolis saying that higher temperatures are expected by the Weather Bureau. Liverpool was ⅛ to ¼d higher.

Corn was unchanged to ⅛ to ¼ cent lower on profit taking by longs.

Liverpool was ¼d lower, with Argentina selling freely. A trace of rain was shown at Oklahoma City and some in Texas, but the weather throughout the belt is clear and very hot.

Oats were unchanged to a shade higher for July and a fraction lower for December.

Provisions were easier.

The entire grain list changed to one of weakness during the last half hour of to-day's session. This lowering of prices was on the selling by longs and the putting out of short lines, coupled with a lack of support. Net losses were shown of ⅛ to ⅜ cent in wheat and corn, and ¼ to ⅜ cent in oats. Hog products were lower all around.

Cash sales of wheat at Chicago were 45,000 bushels; corn 75,000 bushels, and oats 60,000.

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Bartlett, Frazier & Co: "Wheat—Local shorts covered freely on yesterday's late upturn and we see nothing in the news this morning to cause any particular strength.

"Corn—With prospects of continued warm weather over Sunday any decline in values to-day is unlikely.

"Oats—Weather conditions surrounding corn naturally apply to oats and a steady to higher market is likely to prevail.

QUALITY OF HOGS POOR.

CHICAGO, June 28.—There were two distinct hog markets to-day, one for qualified grades at 8.70 to 8.80, the other for packing mixed stuff from 8.65 down, the price being determined by the proportion of strictly packing hogs. Deterioration of quality is exerting its seasonable influence. The market was steady at the lowest prices of the week and live mutton trade was slumpy, owing to the arrival direct to packers of 40 cars of Southern lambs from Louisville.

The Light Brahmas Sure To Be Original "Come-back" Fowl

Evidence Shows This Popular Bird in Years 1860-90 Will Be in Limelight Soon.

From about 1860 to 1890 the Light Brahma was decidedly the classiest of our thoroughbred chickens. In the show room it was one of the first to be cooped and looked at; the last talked about. It was a thoroughbred from away back where the real thoroughbred was made. It was not one of the mush-room type of thoroughbreds; one that was seen in a great blaze of glory one day and the next day sunken clear below the line of vision because the average man could not breed it to look anything like what it was supposed to represent. It was made to stay. It originated in the good old times you read about when they made things to last and gave value received. This gives you a little idea of the quality of the Light Brahma. But as some other things have been supplanted by goods purported to be "just as good" that did not pan out in the long run, this grand old breed was forced to the wall, as it were, for more than a decade.

It has not been entirely forgotten; not by any manner of means. It has been in what the doctors would call a "comatose state," a sort of semi-conscious condition. But you could not hold such a breed in subjection any great length of time. They would not permanently down. No matter if varieties were brought forth that were reputed to be the only things wearing feathers that were worth having. People have heard things similar to that before and did not take much stock in them. So we begin to see the good old Brahma coming back. We can see its outline on the sky line. We see their onward march with that regular tread which means that there is going to be something doing in the Brahma alley, and that too at no very distant day. We see quite a number of the old guard in the line; they have been there all the while, but the column has been moving so slowly that it was almost not noticeable. Now they have a host of recruits that have put enough ginger into the old lines to set them to moving.

As one prominent old fancier said to another of the same type: It looks a good deal like Brahmas and Langshans, doesn't it? This may not mean very much to the average layman, but to the old-time chicken fancier it means a good deal—it means that the Light Brahmas and the Black Langshans are going to be brought into prominence in the near future and enjoy much of their old-time popularity. During the past decade there have been many and many a poultry show at which there was not a specimen of either of these breeds represented. The first significant intimation the writer had of the Brahmas' reappearance was at the great New Orleans show a year ago last winter when he found a regular lay-out of them. More than a hundred of the very tip-top kind were on exhibition. It almost took our breath away to see them after so long a time without them.

At last winter's Philadelphia show the Light Brahma stood fourth in the list of entries. Now, what do you think of that? A club meeting was held at the Philadelphia show and wide interest was manifested in the grand old breed. At that time it was decided to make Boston the next rallying place for the club meet, and also for a rousing show. We predict that such will be the case, for Boston has always been the nesting ground for this breed. There are quite a number of Light Brahma breeders in the South, with as good a line of goods as can be found anywhere, so we want to put them on notice that it is a good time to begin hunting up the war paint. It is but just that you should each get your share of the trade that is bound to come to this old standby in the next few years. There is no question about it, it is going to come. As we bred the Brahmas ourselves for a good many years, we are only too glad to see them coming into their own. They are deserving.

Frank P. Johnson, Station A, Indianapolis, Ind., is secretary of the club, so if you want to know more about what they are going to do better write to him. In the meantime, see what you can do in producing some good Brahmas.

Judge F. J. Marshall: What is the matter with my little chicks? They make a strange noise like they can not breathe good or like there was something in their windpipe. Please give me a remedy. I am raising them without a mother. They have free range and plenty of room in the sleeping house.
MRS. L. S
Chester, S. C.
Reply: Your chicks have colds, bordering on roup. There are roup remedies sure; in fact, there are so many guaranteed cures that the average amateur is all at sea. The following is one of the best for young chicks, and at the same time it is harmless: Extract of witch hazel, 4 tablespoonfuls; carbolic acid, 3 drops; water, 2 tablespoonfuls. A convenient way to use it is in a good spring bottom oil can, as used with the sewing machine. One squeeze of the can into each nostril and into the mouth twice daily will do much to relieve the catarrhal condition. Remove the sick from the well. Let the surroundings be clean.

OUR NORTH SIDE AND INMAN PARK DELIVERIES LEAVE THE STORE AT 9:30; SOUTH SIDE AND WEST END AT 2 P. M. GOODS ORDERED BEFORE THESE HOURS WILL BE DELIVERED SAME DAY.

CHICKENS need more care and attention the next two or three months than any other time during the year. It is perfectly natural for chickens to have lice and mites, and unless you look after them they will multiply in such quantity to prove profitable. The little chicks will not reach the growth they should and the hens will not lay if they are covered with these pests. We have ties that you can not expect your flock remedies that will positively get rid of them and the cost is very little. For 35c you can get a can of either Lee's, Conkey's or Pratt's Lice Liquid and we will guarantee either of these preparations to give entire satisfaction.

WE are offering Baby Chick Feed at $2.15 per 100 pounds for the next few days. You know the regular price is $2.50 per 100 pounds. Better take advantage of this.

"My Field the World"--A Fine Motto

(Copyright, 1913.)

A great wonder of the deep is the German ship Imperator, which arrived in America the other day.

What a chapter old Job could have talked about that ship if he had seen it!

Think of a ship with three wireless operators working night and day, ALWAYS ABLE TO TALK TO ONE SIDE OR THE OTHER OF THE OCEAN. Think of a ship with nine decks, seven for first-class passengers—a monstrosity almost as complicated as Dante's hell.

Think of a ship with six elevators running up and down, suites of twelve rooms, anchors that weigh more than twenty-five thousand pounds each, a ship with swimming tanks, greenhouses and a population equal to that of a small city.

Poor old "Behemoth," who impressed Job so deeply, would seem a very small thing compared to this modern Behemoth. The original Behemoth, who "drinketh up a river and hasteth not," could be tucked away in one of the coal bunkers of the Imperator, or burned up in one of the big furnaces and not noticed.

There are many wonderful things about that wonderful ship, with her five captains commanded by an admiral.

She is a great tribute to the power of the German people, a tribute to organization, a proof of the wonderful things that can be accomplished by men that are determined to excel.

But the best thing of all about this great ship is the motto written at her prow, "My field the world." That is a good motto, good for this ship that sails the ocean, good for the great philosopher, Bacon, when he said, "I have taken all knowledge for my province," and "nothing that affects man can be foreign to me."

It is a big motto, "My field the world." But not too big for a man who realizes that the world is man's property, his home and his garden, to be developed and owned by him, to be the firm ground from which he shall look out and study the real world, which is the infinite universe.

Every man worthy of the name should have in his mind that motto of the big ship, "My field the world," and interest himself in the world's doings, interest himself in the progress of the race, in its future and in its past, and determine to be a man whose field really IS the world, and not a mouse, whose field is the corner of some back yard.

A Shaken Confidence Must Be Restored

It will be a relief to the whole country to learn that the Diggs-Caminetti "white-slave" prosecutions in California are to be pressed with due diligence, despite the private pressure brought to bear on the Attorney General and others in Washington.

Indeed, such a course was inevitable the moment District Attorney John L. McNab, of the Northern District of California, made public his courageous letter of resignation to the President, thereby attracting public attention to a grave judicial scandal.

The expression of public opinion was both instant, widespread and practically unanimous. A flood of telegrams poured into the White House.

IT WILL TAKE MORE THAN AN ORDER FROM THE PRESIDENT to go ahead with all seemly speed with these cases, an order penned AFTER a storm of popular indignation had broken, TO RESTORE CONFIDENCE in the impartial workings of those courts of justice over which the Federal authorities have control and in those other officers of the Government who have shown such lax judgment on so serious an occasion.

Congress has the very urgent duty before it of not only establishing all the facts but also of FIXING THE RESPONSIBILITY AND THE BLAME.

:: THE OTHERS ::

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

ONE is the pride of the college,
  Handsome and sunny and clever
Joking while gathering knowledge,
  Slaving and worrying never.
Baseball and football and rowing,
  Sanscrit and Latin and Greek—
Dazed by his wonderful showing,
  All of the others stand meek.

One goes through life winning laurels,
  Brilliant and able till death;
Proof against foes and their quarrels,
  Crushing them all with a breath.
Much as a baby blows bubbles
  One leaps along in the race,
Laughing at heartaches and troubles
  All of the others must face.

This is a toast to the others,
  Hewing their pathway through life—
All the less fortunate brothers
  Comrades of sorrow and strife.
Standing and waiting and hoping,
  Strangers to Fame and its pride,
Here's to the patiently groping!
  Here's to the thousands that tried!

The Automobile

Everything Being Done to Make Automobiles Safe, He Says. They Have Done Wonders for American Roads.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

I WAS almost startled on seeing, in the current number of the magazine called Motor, a picture of an automobile furnished with the new French device of movable electric eyes!

Even when the auto's great glaring eyes are fixed in direction its resemblance at night to a demon of unimaginable swiftness and power is stunning, and one gets out of its way with panicky haste. But when it bears on each side of its head a glowing eye, which turns magically in all directions, searching out the fleeing pedestrian in his retreat by the fence or the hedge, and detecting every obstruction along the borders of its way, the verisimilitude is complete. Man has never yet made anything so thrillingly lifelike, but inspired with a life that seems more than human!

Everything Done for Safety.

Yet while, to the excited imagination, these movable mechanical eyes may increase the terror of the auto rushing through the night, they are, for all wanderers in the ways, all nomads of the night, a means and an assurance of greater safety. They proclaim, again, that the modern demon of the road is a kindly demon, who means no harm, although he speeds so swiftly, and who would not, willingly, hurt a hair of our heads. He is as desirous as are we who look upon him with fear, and jump at his croaking voice, to avoid all evil.

If those who still carp at the automobile, and nurse an antagonism to it, would consider what has been done, and what is still being done—as witness this latest device—to eliminate the peculiar dangers which its invention has introduced into the highways, they would find themselves taking a more philosophical view of things, and would cease their opposition to one of the greatest advances in locomotion that science has ever promoted. You have only to glance through the pages of the magazine I have mentioned in order to convince yourself that the inventors and manufacturers of auto vehicles hold nothing more dear than the question of safety; safety for those who ride and for those who only look upon the riders.

Put Bad Roads Out of Business.

It is the same with the roads themselves. Unthinking people sometimes blame the automobile for damaging the roads—as if most of the roads that we had before its arrival COULD be damaged! But, look at the other side of the affair. Only a few years ago every American traveling in Europe blushed at the thought of the painful contrast between the roads there and most of those that he was accustomed to at home. He could only console himself by the reflection that we were subduing a new continent, and required time to complete the work in good shape.

Then came the auto, and what has been the result? Within a few short years, solely by the stimulus that it has imparted, we have developed thousands upon thousands of miles of roadways that France herself might be proud of. This single invention has caused a leap of improvement that hundreds of years of ordinary progress would not have produced. The automobile has put the old, muddy, rutty, all but impassable roads of our fathers out of commission, and the whole country smiles with the improvement, and grows richer because of it.

Speaking of French roads, I read another interesting thing, which must be set down entirely to the credit of the automobile. We are now building better roads than they have in France, and the reason is because we have built them from the beginning with the needs of the auto in view. It has taught us how to build them. Many of the French roads are beginning to deteriorate. It is the automobile that has searched out and revealed their weak points. The growing use of auto-carriages of all kinds in the French army has brought a strain to bear upon the roads lying in the districts where the threat of invasion causes frequent military maneuvers in time of peace—a strain that was not foreseen when the roads were constructed—and some of them are proving unable to bear it.

Recognizes Their Value.

What will the French do? Will they abandon the army autos, or intermit the maneuvers? To do so would be to invite instant conquest of their country. No, they will reconstruct the roads, and increase the number of their auto cars. They know the inestimable value of the good demon that has come to revolutionize transportation on this planet, and the roads will have to be made durable enough to carry him on his civilizing and peace-promoting way; for the auto, in its manner, is as great a force for universal peace as is the strong battleship. Everything that links the world together makes for universal brotherhood, and the faster we travel the richer and more contented we become.

:: The Ionian Isles ::

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

IT was just 49 years ago that the Parliament of England with a never-to-be-forgotten magnanimity, resolved to return the Ionian Isles to their oldtime owners, the Greeks.

By the Treaty of Paris, in 1815, the high contracting parties, Great Britain, Russia, Austria and Prussia, agreed to place the isles under the exclusive protection of Great Britain. This agreement was reached not because it was desired by the others, but because it was demanded by Great Britain, the demand being backed by the British navy.

It was in these "Isles of Greece," Corfu, Zanta, Santa Maura, Ithaca and the rest, that modern Greek liberty had its birth, and thanks to England, it was there that it grew to the stately proportions of later years. Great Britain, through her protectorate, kept the islands safe from Turkish depredations, and in 1864 gave them to Greece.

On May 30 of that year the Lord High Commissioner of Great Britain handed over the archives to the Greek plenipotentiary, and on June 6 King George made his entry into Corfu.

Let it be remembered that this Corfu is none other than the ancient Coreyra—the little piece of earth that is responsible for the greatest calamity that ever overtook the human race. Coreyra brought on the Peloponnesian war between Sparta and Athens and their allies, the result of which was the ruin of Athens and the arrest of her wonderful civilization. Had it not been for that war the Athenian genius would have kept on with its development for we know not how long a period, and the gain to humanity would have been inconceivably great. From the cultural standpoint Athens was Greece. It was the home of the art, science, philosophy and eloquence, which made Greece immortal, and when Athens went down all that was not barbarism went down along with her.

Because Coreyra appealed to Sparta to help her fight Athens, and because, as a consquence of the fight, Athens was beaten and her empire practically wiped out, the harm was done to mankind that can never be estimated. It took the world eighteen hundred years to recover, even in part, that which was lost through the fatal Peloponnesian war.

::: LETTERS FROM THE GEORGIAN'S READERS ::

COFFEE.

Editor The Georgian:

What is the matter with the pure food inspector? Is he asleep on his job, that so many brands of adulterated coffee are suffered to be sold to the poor? Ever so many of them have chicory; and in color give a beautiful nut-brown result, but to an inveterate drinker of coffee they are as lifeless as turnip soup.

Suppose the inspector thinks that if people know what they are buying, it is all right. But how about the boarder, when it is passed off on him for coffee? And the temptation is too great, these days of high-priced food to buy the cheaper article.

CAR SERVICE AND STORMS.

Editor The Georgian:

It seems to me the public has a just cause of complaint regarding the street car service which is given them in this city during thunderstorms. It has, during the past few years, become the custom of the Georgia Railway and Power Company to suspend service during even very mild thunderstorms, and with proper equipment this practice seems to be without reason or excuse.

So far as my observation goes, it is not done in any other first-class town, and no sufficient reason has ever been given for doing it in Atlanta. People need the street car service as much when there is a rainstorm accompanied by lightning as at other times.

MRS. KEEFER AGAIN FORGIVES HUSBAND

MRS. DAVID H. KEEFER.

Mrs. David Keefer, who tells of her matrimonial mix-ups.

"I don't want a divorce; I want to remain Mrs. Keefer. I shall let my husband go in peace," declared Mrs. David H. Keefer, of 80 East Fourteenth Street, who has sworn out a warrant against the well-known broker, charging him with assault and battery on her son, Jack Macy, Friday night.

The case in which Keefer, Mrs. Keefer and son, Jack Macy, and Plennie Miner, deputy sheriff, figured will be aired in Police Court Saturday afternoon.

"I did fly at his throat last night—to kill him," declared Mrs. Keefer Saturday morning with vehemence, "but he warded off the blow and struck me a full blow on the breast. I told him, too, to leave town immediately or I would fill him with bullet holes—but I shall not. I shall sit still in the boat; I shall let him go in peace, for all I want is protection. And that I will have."

Broker and Wife Clash.

The latest sensation in connection with the stormy marital relations of Mr. and Mrs. Keefer, which have furnished "live copy" for papers all the way from Georgia to New York and back again, occurred at a club Friday night about 10 o'clock, when Keefer called with a deputy sheriff to serve papers on his stepson, Jack Macy, to gain possession of a $5,000 automobile.

In the trouble which followed Keefer and young Macy exchanged blows which left marks. Mr. and Mrs. Keefer also clashed. Macy said Saturday morning Keefer struck him first while Deputy Sheriff Miner was attempting to handcuff him. Keefer denies this.

But Mrs. Keefer's own story, as she told it to a reporter for The Georgian Saturday morning, is as follows:

"I returned to New York from Paris in the early part of 1906," said she, "to find there, in my father's home, my old friend and future husband, David H. Keefer.

"He was very ill, and, as I looked there upon his frail form, somehow or other I fancied I saw my former husband and it gave me new courage, new life, for I myself had come from Paris, as I thought, to die.

"He had been a dear friend to me and to Mr. Macy while we were living in Thomasville, Ga., and following Mr. Macy's death he had corresponded with me across the waters.

"And oh those beautiful letters which he wrote to me. How could I think otherwise than that he really loved me from the very depths of his heart?

"A man surely loves a woman if he corresponds in such a way all the way across the waters, don't you think?

Tells About "Real Man."

"So we were married shortly after my return to my father's home. Three days after our wedding I beheld the real man—he actually told me that he believed woman was created only for downfall at the hands of man.

"From that time on he was a beast and more than once he would have allowed me to starve to death if he could. Then came the divorce proceedings in New York State, in which there was much legal juggling at my expense—and that I will not countenance whatever else happens. The scene shifted from New York to Georgia, where I won in the preliminary skirmish—and then he, my recreant husband, came to me to beg forgiveness.

"I forgave—I am always willing to do that—but soon the same old scenes were being enacted. Mr. Keefer, as brilliant as he was and is, was always fond of the dazzle, the things purely of this life.

"He was found in a hotel with another woman. He came home drunk repeatedly. Things went from bad to worse, and finally we separated. He went away. I remained in New York."

FOUR MORE DROPPED BY CHIEF

Suspensions Continue in Growing Police Scandal as Negroes Tell Story.

With the suspension of four more policemen Saturday afternoon by Chief James L. Beavers, it was announced that the latest police scandal would be probed to its very bottom even though it involved the greater part of the force.

The men deprived of their uniforms and equipment and dismissed from the service Saturday pending the investigation of the story that they visited the notorious resort conducted in the rear of 127 Auburn Avenue by Ola Bradley, a negro woman, were J. P. Born, J. E. McDaniel, Mack C. Folds and J. J. Jackson.

Chief Beavers gave the formal order of suspension at 1 o'clock after he had received a report of an investigation made by Captain A. L. Poole. He said that no other policemen were being considered for immediate suspension, but that the investigation would be continued until every guilty person had been discovered.

The four men suspended Friday were Policemen L. W. Evans and R. T. David and Call Officers C. H. Bailey and R. A. Wood.

Those suspended Friday on the charge of having visited and drunk liquor in the negro disorderly house at the rear of 127 Auburn Avenue were Policeman L. W. Evans and R. T. David and Call Officers C. H. Bailey and R. A. Wood.

The suspensions made Saturday came almost entirely as the result of a story told at police headquarters by Ola Bradley, the negro woman who conducts the notorious resort. She made a signed statement in which the names of Born, Folds and Jackson figured prominently.

She related that Born and Folds were in her place one Sunday morning about three months ago. The men became involved in an argument, and she recalled that one of the men called the other a liar. On this, she said, Folds made an effort to get his revolver.

He was prevented by Claude Gray, a young negro living at the house.

MEXICO CITY, June 28.—One thousand soldiers and civilians were slaughtered by rebels when the city of Durango, capital of the State of the same name, fell into the insurgents' hands, according to word received here to-day from that city. Many of the victims were members of prominent families.

Men and women were tortured to death when they did not produce wealth at the bidding of the rebels.

Fighting between federals and insurgents is going on at Uruapam in the State of Michocan. Cuquio, in the State of Jalisco, was taken by rebels yesterday and the garrison put to the sword.

Rebels Advance on Juarez; Fight Near.

EL PASO, TEXAS, June 28.—Pancho Villa, Mexican rebel leader, who has announced his intention of taking Juarez and executing General Salazar, commander of the garrison, in the bull ring, established outposts within three miles of the town.

Ortega, who has 500 men, may cooperate with Villa. If Juarez falls, it will remove the most important Mexican port of entry on the United States border from Huerta and may result in the downfall of the Huerta government.

Page Tries to Lease Manchester's House

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 28.—A report is current that Ambassador Walter H. Page is trying to lease the Duke of Manchester's town house at 5 Grosvenor Square.

The house is comfortable, but unpretentious. It would be lost in one of the drawing rooms of Dorchester House, the home of Whitelaw Reid, when he was Ambassador. The rent

Slit to Knee Skirt Barred in Louisville

LOUISVILLE, KY., June 28.—Policemen to-day were ordered to arrest any woman wearing a slit skirt that unduly displays her legs.

"A woman who has the nerve to wear a dress that allows her knees to show will not mind so small a matter as a police court trial," said Chief of Police Lindsey.

Chicago Police Jail 12 Race Bookmakers

CHICAGO, June 28.—Detectives today had twelve of Chicago's most elusive race horse gamblers behind bars, and knew whence seven others had fled.

The sudden arrests were made on 50 indictments secretly returned against nineteen hand-book-makers, charging violations of gambling laws in making books on the Kentucky Derby Day races.

Missouri Opened to Standard Oil Again

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., June 28. The Missouri Supreme Court to-day held that the Standard Oil Company of Indiana may continue to do business in this State, revoking the recent ouster.

The decision follows the submission of a transcript of evidence taken at Kansas City, which the Standard Oil Company submitted in an effort to prove it now was not violating the anti-trust laws of Missouri.

Capital's Tyranny Caused Unionism, Says E. H. Walker

Edward H. Walker, candidate for Governor in the race with Hoke Smith and Joseph M. Brown, has issued a statement defending unionism in reply to Governor Brown.

"To concentrate indescribable wealth of millions of dollars into the possession of one man," he says, "two things are necessary. First, the law must be broken. Most of the great fortunes of to-day rest on a foundation of bribery, corruption and defiance of the law. Second, the assembling of these big fortunes had to be done by exploiting the lifetime productivity of hundreds of thousands of laborers.

"The Government's failure to protect labor from this crushing greed forced labor to protect itself."

Goethals Says Canal Is Air-Bomb Proof

NEW YORK, June 28.—Colonel George Goethals has returned to Panama. He will remain on the Isthmus until the first ship has passed through the canal. The Colonel laughed at the idea some aviators have they can destroy the Gatun lock by dropping powerful bombs from aircraft.

"I'd like to post a forfeit no aviator could do any serious damage," said Colonel Goethals. "We have not done our work on the locks without care and forethought. Attack from an aircraft has been considered in all the construction work."

Fighter Escapes; No Law to Detain Him

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Officials of the Department of Justice to-day admit they have been outwitted by Jack Johnson, negro pugilist, convicted under the white slave law. He was set at liberty under $15,000 bond, and skipped out of Chicago to Montreal, Canada, whence he will depart to-morrow for Havre.

It is said there is no law under which Johnson can be brought back to the United States.

'New York Tea Party' To be $20,000 Affair

WASHINGTON, June 28.—A second "Boston Tea Party," but a peaceful one, will be pulled off in New York Harbor to-day, when 100,000 pounds of tea, valued at $20,000, will be dumped overboard.

The Government experts condemned it and six months were granted to the importers to get it out of the country. Now the Collector of the Port has ordered to destroy it if he can find it any time after noon to-day.

WOODWARD ALL READY TO SIGN

Friends Prevail on Him to Alter Attitude in Crematory Row. Plant Ready in 10 Days.

The crematory row ended Saturday. Mayor Woodward agreed to sign a slightly revised contract. His decision was the result of a conference with Assistant City Attorney W. D. Ellis, Jr., Alderman J. H. Harwell, Councilman A. R. Colcord and C. P. Goree, attorney, friends of Mayor Woodward. A special meeting of Council will be called for Tuesday afternoon to pass it.

The difference between Mayor Woodward and the Council was a point of honor. Council had, by resolution, accepted a proposal of the Destructor Company instead of adopting a contract in order that they might override his veto should he disapprove.

Now a formal contract will be passed in addition to the resolution, which, of course, will take precedence over the resolution. The essentials of the trade had been agreed to, and the only changes made in the recent contract submitted to the Mayor were the insertion of the word "complete" in one paragraph and the change of the word "be" to "the" in another paragraph.

The Destructor Company will be able to get $125,000, first money received from the city, as soon as the program is adopted. No further hitch is anticipated.

It has been announced the crematory will be completed within ten days, at which time all dump piles in the city will be abolished.

Elopers Held Pending White Slave Inquiry

"A happy reunion in the tower" was the promise Recorder Broyles ironically extended to W. T. Wiggins, a mail clerk, who nonchalantly admitted Saturday morning he permitted his wife to leave Jacksonville for Atlanta in company with another man.

Wiggins and Mrs. Rosa Hearn, also of Jacksonville, who testified her husband was dead, were bound over to the State courts by the Recorder on $500 bond each.

They admitted living as man and wife at No. 199 South Pryor Street.

"You may have violated the white slave law, also," the Recorder said to Wiggins. The judge said he would have government agents investigate.

User of Dahomeyan Salve Is Fireproof

NEW YORK, June 28.—Fire Commissioner Johnson contemplates sending to Africa for a barrelful of "drayon," the sap of the papau tree, to smear on the 4,000 firemen in this city to make them pain-proof while fighting fires.

The commissioner came to this decision after Amgoza Lee, a native of Dahomey, held a burning match against his naked arm, then against his face and his tongue. He showed no evidence that he felt pain.

30 Buried in Fall of Garage in Cleveland

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 28.—The Euclid Square Garage collapsed here to-day. Thirty men were buried. Five men were taken to the hospital and ten others are less seriously hurt.

A second story was being erected over the building, the largest of its kind in the city. The false work fell, carrying the workmen with it.

Brown Sees Slaton As 'Worthiest Man'

Governor Slaton:

In the last hours on earth of Alexander the Great, he was asked to whom would he leave that colossal empire which his genius and valor had created. The dying man repiled: "To the worthiest one."

To-day we neither participate in nor view any deathbed scene, but the willing transfer of the executive authority of a great and noble peopde from him to whom I have full often felt they had been too considerately kind to him whom with voice no one can doubt they have declared: "The worthiest one."

And so, in obedience to their mandate, it is my pleasure to deliver to you the symbol of Georgia's sovereignty and good faith—her Great Seal of State.

May God bless you! May God bless the people of Georgia!

Felder To Be Tried With Lanford, but No Date Is Set Yet

Attorney T. B. Felder and Chief Detective Newport A. Lanford will be tried at the same time in the State's case against them for criminal libel, although no definite plans have been made by the Solicitor as to the date for the trial or whether to transfer the cases to the City Court.

Solicitor Dorsey said he had not yet considered going to trial in the matter, and would not have an opportunity to do so for several days.

The report was current in court circles, however, that the two cases would be transferred to the City Court and probably be tried before the Frank trial.

Mothers' Congress Appeals for Milk To Save the Babies

"Save the babies!" is the cry sent up by Atlanta to join with that of the entire nation through the hot summer months. Every mail continues to bring to the Mothers' Congress here supplications for milk. The demand is far greater than the supply.

"Do not delay your aid," is the Mothers' Congress appeal. "It may come too late. Won't you give it to them by sending in a contribution for the milk fund?"

Baroness Arrives to Wed St. Louis Man

NEW YORK, June 28.—Baroness Kalinewski, accompanied by her brother, Baron Heinrich Kalinewski, arrived here to-day on the Kaiser Auguste Victoria, and said, much to her brother's disgust, she is en route to St. Louis, where she is to marry James Hurley, a prominent railroad man of that city. Their courtship began a year ago in France when their autos came near colliding.

When asked if he thought he might not marry an American before he left this country, the Baron's only comment was, "Not for mine."

You've Been Craving

All these years to own a gold mine. It's not at all impossible. Right here in Atlanta there are many gold mines—some little, some big, some paying small returns, others their tens of thousands.

And the beauty about the Atlanta gold mines is you're not troubled to dig and blast and assay, but every foot of dirt yields a generous tribute.

Several large gold mines have been sold lately in the uptown sctions, and many smaller ones in different parts of the city.

Read to-day's Real Estate Ads in the Want "Ad" section, and pick out a gold mine. There's at least one for you.

TAX SYSTEM SCORED BY SLATON

Revision of Criminal and Other Laws Also Urged in Executive's Inaugural Address.

Drastic action toward the rejuvenation and correction of Georgia's laws, especially taxation and the Criminal Code, were recommendations which marked the inaugural address of John Marshall Slaton upon his induction into the gubernatorial office in the House of Representatives before the two bodies of the General Assembly and hundreds of visitors at noon Saturday.

The new Chief Executive drew out in sharp contrast the present system of appropriations and taxation and declared the system was wrong.

He brought up for bitter arraignment the lack of school funds, which he termed the lack of a proper foundation for future citizenship of the State. He advocated an inheritance tax, an increased occupation tax upon corporations and a general equalization of taxation throughout the Commonwealth.

Drain Not Checked, He Says.

He called attention to the loss of millions of dollars through abandonment of tax measures such as that on liquor, the dog tax and others, and declared that no substitute for this drain had been made. He recommended increases in taxation for the school fund and the pension fund, and in concluding pointed to a general tide of prosperity which he declared was to pass over Georgia.

In part, Governor Slaton said:

Our system is wrong. The Legislature can appropriate what it pleases, and the tax rate remains the same. The Legislator has made himself a favorite with his constituency by voting for every popular appropriations and nothing suffers but the State's credit.

Unless some check be made, an increase of revenue will be of no avail in preventing the financial embarrassment of the State. Under the enthusiasm of the moment one appropriation bill may exhaust it.

More than four-fifths of the States of the Union derive revenue from what is known as an inheritance tax. I am informed that this tax is the subject of least complaint.

This form of tax has been approved by the highest authorities and is one of the easiest borne and subject to fewer hardships than any other. The inheritance tax is to some extent a corrective.

Corporation Taxation.

Prior to the year 1905, many efforts were made to collect an occupation tax from corporations. Governor Terrell, in his message of the year 1905, recommended a tentative privilege tax based on capital stock of $100,000 per year on corporations having a capital of $1,000,000, or over. He anticipated from this source more than $100,000 a year, and thought that such sum could reasonably be expected without a hardship. The State, however, has not received one-half this sum, and during the year 1913 the estimated revenue from this source is $48,000.

I recommend that the maximum occupation tax on corporations having $1,000,000 capital and over be $200 per annum, and the tax on corporations of less capital be adjusted accordingly.

Equalization of taxes, either through the enforcement of present laws, or new correctives, so that each may bear his proportionate burden, would not mean the increase of taxes upon any one now performing his duty, but would rather mean the lightening of his unfair portion of the load. I commend this subject to your attention.

Bonded Debt To Be Refunded.

An additional reason for establishing and maintaining the State's finances on a sound basis is the necessity of making provision for more than one-half of the entire bonded debt of the State, maturing in 1915. This is an imperative duty resting on this Legislature.

No sinking fund was provided by law to retire the bonds aggregating $3,679,000 which are due in 1915. The entire State's debt is $6,452,500, which does not include the obligations to the University, amounting to $291,500, and the landscrip fund of $90,000.

All the debt of $6,452,500 is provided for, or will be provided for, by the sinking fund required to be raised annually until the debt is paid off, except the

New Governor Also Urges Change in Criminal Code, Abolishing Defendant's Statement.

$3,679,000 which falls due in May and July, 1915.

If refunding bonds were issued in 1915, making the first $100,000 fall due in 1935, then the sinking fund could be made to run continuously and retire each year, until paid, $100,000 of this series of 1915 refunding bonds.

This plan would seem advisable in order to relieve the treasury and the people of the increased burden at this time, unless financial conditions at the time of the sale of the bonds should demand that their redemption begin at an earlier period in order to effectuate their more satisfactory disposition.

Leading bond men in financial centers have stated that if they were certified by some responsible trust company, thus assuring their genuineness, and guarding against their being counterfeited, and if their validity were approved by attorneys who are specialists in this line, the expense would be more than repaid in the price that could be obtained. Certainly no safer investment can be afforded than these bonds.

I recommend that through your appropriate committees you consider at once the matter of refunding the State's indebtedness above referred to.

Registration of Voters.

We believe the present registration law should be so amended that when a voter has once proven his qualification by registering and being enrolled, he shall remain a registered voter unless disqualified for cause due to himself.

The foregoing extract from the last platform upon which I was elected, expresses a principle which deserves universal acceptance. It contemplates no change of the constitution which provides for the qualification of the voter.

The farmers of a neighborhood have duly registered, but the succeeding year when busy with their crops, they can not send their taxes to the collector by some neighbor going to town, except on penalty of being disfranchised.

The traveling men who have registered one year can not send their remittance the next year to the proper officer, and so it is with men in every calling who perform civic duties and who have overlooked the last day of registration, or have been prevented from registering anew by compelling reasons. The professional politician never forgets it.

I recommend that the present registration law be amended to correct the injustice indicated. It would always be provided that the voter must have paid his taxes and not subjected himself to any of the disqualifications provided by law.

Highways.

It is needless to impress upon you the importance of our highways. Their value is an asset of the entire State. An intelligent Highway Commission, or Commissioner, clothed with proper authority, could be the means of untold benefit in suggesting proper methods of building the road adapted to the locality, or in solving the problems of engineering which might arise in various sections.

I call your attention to the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the lease of which terminates in 1919. No one, I apprehend, would or should consider its sale, but the problem of its disposition should be considered by a commission with directions to report its recommendations and its reasons therefor.

To delay this matter will mean to put the State at the inexcusable disadvantage of unpreparedness when the time arrives for imperative action.

The Criminal Code.

One of the fundamental purposes of government is the protection of life and safety of the citizen. If the rules of evidence are so shaped as to prevent the discovery of the truth, and if the State is deprived of the means of sifting the facts, the judges and juries are not to be blamed if crimes are allowed to go unpunished.

It is an anomaly that a defendant should take the stand, make any statement that he see fit or that his shrewd lawyer has prepared, and being immune from cross-examination, demand that the judge shall charge the jury that they may accept his unsworn statement in preference to all the evidence in the case.

His carefully written statement may contain all manner of prejudiced assertions which constitute no defense, but the State is not allowed to disprove or to question them. The jury is by law instructed that they may consider them. Without introducing evidence, in order that his attorney may make the last speech he declares that he can prove assertions by various witnesses, often disreputable men, and challenges the Solicitor General to introduce them. This can not be done because the State can not vouch for their character.

I, therefore, recommend that a law be passed abolishing the defendant's statement, and providing in its place that he be sworn as a witness, if he desires, but his failure to be so sworn be not subject to adverse comment by prosecuting counsel. This is in accordance with current Federal and State law.

The legislation in Georgia against carrying concealed weapons has in recent years been conspicuous. It has been suggested by the law of self-preservation. Daily we read of men who have shot others, and have been acquitted on the old statement that the deceased threw his hand on his hip pocket, and the defendant shot in fear of his life. When searched, the dead man was found generally unarmed.

If the carrying of concealed weapons were made a felony, subject to be reduced to a misdemeanor by either judge or jury, the deterrent effect of such a law would be the saving of many a life. I earnestly recommend to you the consideration of this question.

Banking Laws.

The banks of a State perform public functions, and as such are properly subjected to governmental supervision. The bankers of the State, with the desire of maintaining a high standard of responsibility and of affording guarantees against improvident management, that imperil the money of the people, recommend legislation looking to the accomplishment of these objects. I commend this subject as one worthy of your serious consideration.

My predecessors have recommended the creation of the position of State Auditor, and in this recommendation I heartily concur. His services could be utilized in checking the cost of new buildings for which requests may be made by the various institutions. Those who have served on the appropriations committees are aware of the inadequate facilities of the State in arriving at the amount of the necessary expenditures.

The Constitution.

The Constitution is the expression of the supreme law of the land. It can only be changed by the people speaking in their sovereign capacity. In order that they may vote intelligently on any proposition it is essential that they understand it. I recommend that in proposing Constitutional amendments, you plainly indicate the proposition to the voter in such language that he may understand the meaning of the question submitted.

My predecessor has called attention to the fact that some of the agricultural schools are well attended, while others receive little patronage, whether due to the matter of location or lack of interest, or from what cause, I am unable to say. Each obtains the same appropriation from the State for maintenance. I recommend that you investigate their condition, and apply the proper remedies.

CHILDREN'S EYES.

Hot sun, wind and dust are dangerous to children's eyes. Better get a pair of smoked glasses if they complain; or, better, let us make an examination and fit the correct lenses. A. K. Hawkes, Opticians, 14 Whitehall.

SCHOOL BOYS' AND GIRLS' BALLOT.

Slaton is Inaugurated With Simple Ceremonies.

With ceremonies that gained in strength and impressiveness through their very simplicity, John Marshall Slaton to-day became Governor of the State of Georgia, succeeding Joseph M. Brown. The oath of office was administered by Judge William H. Fish, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, at 12:02 o'clock.

Governor Slaton was inducted into office in the presence of a brilliant assemblage of Georgia men and women, including his own and the retiring Governor's family and intimate friends, members of the State Legislature and prominent jurists. For the first time in the history of the State the United States was represented by Judge William T. Newman and Judge Don A. Pardee, of the Federal Court. They occupied seats directly in front of the Speaker's stand.

Galleries and the floor of the House were filled with spectators. By 10 o'clock virtually every seat in the visitors' gallery was taken and room had been provided for a large number on the floor. In the corridors another crowd, unable to gain entrance into the hall, waited patiently for a glimpse of the new executive.

Joint Session Held.

Neither the House nor the Senate transacted any business, convening at 11 o'clock and immediately taking a recess. At 11:45 o'clock both Houses again convened, and the Senate at once adjourned and marched to the House, where members took seats in a semi-circle about the speaker's stand. In the front row of seats about the speakers' stand sat the intimate friends and relatives of Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton. Twenty-eight chairs had been reserved for members of Governor Slaton's family and eight for the family and friends of Governor Brown.

In Governor Slaton's party were Major William F. Slaton, father of the Governor; Mrs. John M. Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Slaton, Justice and Mrs. S. C. Atkinson, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Waldo, Mrs. W. H. Blanchard, Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant, John M. Slaton, Jr., W. F. Slaton, Jr., Slaton Waldo, Albie Waldo, William D. Grant, Miss Margaret Grant, James Jackson Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Phillips and Miss Robinson. In Governor Brown's party were Mrs. Joseph M. Brown, Miss Cora Brown, Charles Brown, Miss Sally Brown, Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Connolly, Mrs. Frances Connolly and Thomas W. Connolly.

Governor Brown Receives Friends.

Governor Brown arrived at the Capitol shortly before 11 o'clock, and went at once into his private office, where he received a number of friends and visitors.

Governor-elect Slaton drove up in his automobile to the Washington Street entrance of the Capitol, accompanied by Mrs. Slaton and his father, Major William F. Slaton. They proceeded to the reception room of the Governor's office, where the inaugural procession formed.

Promptly at 11:45 o'clock Speaker Burwell called the House to order, and immediately thereafter members of the Senate arrived.

The inaugural procession moved from the Governor's office on the first floor. The procession was led by Governor-elect Slaton and Governor Brown. After them came ex-Governor Henry D. McDaniel, and then followed the Justices of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals, the Federal Judges, the State House officers, the members of the joint legislative committee on inauguration, and the immediate families of Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton.

Governor Slaton Presented.

Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton took their places on the Speaker's stand, the first standing to the left of Senator Randolph Anderson and Speaker Burwell and the latter to the right. Rev. James B. Robbins, of the Trinity Methodist Church, opened the ceremonies with prayer, in which he invoked Divine aid for Governor Slaton in the conduct of the affairs of the State.

Randolph Anderson, President of the Senate, presented Governor-elect Slaton to the people of Georgia and the Legislature, and immediately thereafter Justice Fish administered the oath of office. In a speech expressing great confidence in the ability of the incoming executive, Governor Brown presented Governor Slaton with the Great Seal of the State of Georgia.

After the inaugural ceremonies Governor and Mrs. Slaton and ex-Governor and Mrs. Brown lunched at the Executive Mansion. Ex-Governor and Mrs. Brown retired to their farm near Marietta, and Governor Slaton took possession of the mansion in the afternoon.

Y. M. C. A. Suspends Operation for Year

After twenty-seven years' continued operation the Y. M. C. A. will go out of business July 1, pending the completion of the new association building a year hence. The suspension is necessitated by an agreement to turn the Y. M. C. A. building, at Pryor Street and Auburn Avenue, over to its new proprietors, the Chamber of Commerce.

While the work of the association will be suspended, the organization will be kept intact. Temporary headquarters will be established in the Baptist Tabernacle.

STATE SECURES NEW PHAGAN EVIDENCE

Frank A. Hooper, associated with Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution of Leo M. Frank on the charge of strangling Mary Phagan, admitted Saturday that Jim Conley, negro sweeper at the National Pencil Factory, had made important additions to the story of his part in the murder mystery and had told of circumstances on the day of the crime which he had revealed in none of his previous statements.

A persistent report that Conley had made the startling admission that he had seen Mary Phagan enter the factory on the day she was slain arose at the time the negro was questioned more than an hour by Solicitor Dorsey early in the week, and this rumor was heightened after Attorney Hooper's interview with the negro Friday.

In all of his statements to the detectives Conley denied he saw the girl at all on the day of the crime until he was horrified by the sight of her dead body lying in the rear of the second floor where he was directed by Leo Frank. Solicitor Dorsey is believed to have wrung the statement from him that he did see Mary Phagan when she came in the door of the factory and went to the second floor to Frank's office.

Hooper Mum on Topic.

Mr. Hooper refused either to affirm or deny this report, declaring that his connection with the case was so recent that he would not be warranted in making any definite statement for publication in reference to the evidence in the possession of the prosecution.

His attention was called to the fact that while in all of the published statements of Conley the negro denied seeing Mary Phagan go into the factory, no one connected with the prosecution could now be induced to say that he still stuck to this particular and puzzling feature of his story. Mr. Hooper, however, would make no comment on the circumstance.

He contented himself with the general assertion that the State has a big stack of evidence of which the defense is in entire ignorance and of which they will remain in ignorance until it is presented when Frank is placed on trial for his life.

"I went to the police station yesterday merely for the purpose of having Conley rehearse his story to me," said Mr. Hooper. "It is true that he told me of a number of circumstances of which I had been in ignorance before, circumstances which have a most important bearing on the case. He made additions to his story which, while they were along the same general line as his last affidavit, gave a detail that assisted me remarkably in getting a much clearer idea of the events as they happened on that day.

Will Be Revealed at Trial.

"I can not tell what they were. They will be revealed when the trial is in actual progress. Mr. Dorsey has guarded his evidence carefully and has refrained from trying his case in the papers. If it were not presumptuous for me to step in and give this evidence away to the public and to the defense it would at least be most unwise.

"The negro appeared to be telling a straightforward story. He said nothing that caused me to alter my theory of the killing in the least. So far as I know, there never has been any serious doubt that those were bloodstains there on the second floor. I am confident that it was there that the attack was made. I questioned Conley only occasionally, preferring to let him go ahead and tell his story in his own way. Only when some point puzzled me for a moment did I stop him for an explanation."

Mr. Hooper said Solicitor Dorsey had built up a convincing case against the factory superintendent, one into which the defense would have extreme difficulty in injecting the element of "reasonable doubt."

RIGID PROBE TO BE PUSHED BY BEAVERS

the investigation into the scandal under the direction of Chief Beavers, found the negro woman who is alleged to have been the cause of the dispute. She bore out the statement of Ola Bradley and also of Claude Gray, who was arrested as a witness early Saturday morning.

Deny Woman's Charge.

The Bradley woman, in telling of the visits of Jackson and McDaniel to her place, said that last Monday she gave Jackson two bottles of beer to drink and that McDaniel urged Jackson not to drink it. All of the men deny they are guilty of wrongdoing and say that they were at the place only for the purpose of getting evidence. McDaniel says that he never saw Jackson drink.

Gray is said to have full knowledge of a disgraceful affair which took place in the resort two weeks ago when two policemen are alleged to have become involved in a quarrel. The officers, it is reported, would have come to blows had not Gray stepped in between them and separated them.

Gray will be closely questioned today in the expectation that he will give the Chief the names of a number of other policemen who have been in the habit of making visits there.

"I am going to give Gray a thorough grilling," said the Chief. "The whole truth is what I am after, regardless of how big a scandal is stirred up by the revelations. All of the men are going to get a fair hearing. If these reports are erroneous or falsified, they will have the opportunity to show it."

Wood's Defense.

Wood, who tendered his resignation Saturday morning, said that he and his partner, Bailey, had stopped in at the negro resort to see that everything was all right. He declared that neither of them drank intoxicants there and that when Moon looked in through the window Bailey was drinking a glass of ice water the negro woman had poured for him.

"The other two officers, David and Evans, who have been suspended with us, were not even in the house," said Wood. "The injustice of it lies in the fact that the police department has taken the word of this one man, Moon, against all four of us, in suspending us for drinking in the place."

On a charge of suspected perjury, Chief Beavers indefinitely suspended Evans immediately following the suspension of Wood, Bailey and David. The patrolman was called before the Chief and stripped of his badge, braid and equipment. The case will be thrashed out by the Police Commission.

The evidence in Recorder's Court was that policemen had frequented the negro resort daily and uniformed men had often been seen entering it in broad daylight. One witness told of a midnight brawl participated in by four officers. The Chief said that he had obtained the names of the frequenters of the place.

He began Saturday morning inquiring into a report of police protection of the Auburn Avenue resort and others of its kind. A number of patrolmen were called before him the first thing after he reported to his office and he prepared to continue his inquiry through the day.

Claim They Got Evidence.

Plainclothesman W. T. Moon admitted to the Recorder that he had drunk whisky at the Auburn Avenue resort with the negress operator. He said, however, that he had only done so to secure evidence. The Recorder took him to task for not having reported the incident earlier.

A negro woman inmate of the house said Moon had been intimate with a girl there. Moon made an emphatic denial of the charge, but said he had been a frequent visitor to the place in the interest of getting evidence against it. Policeman Adams testified to the same thing.

Patrolman Wood branded Moon as a deliberate liar and said that he would prove perjury against him. He also said he would prove Adams had perjured himself, after which he would introduce evidence that would merit the immediate discharge of the two men.

Bailey said that the two men, Wood and Adams, had testified against him in a spirit of revenge because several months ago he arrested Adams for fighting.

Beavers to Investigate.

Sergeant J. H. Barfield, who raided the Auburn Avenue place Friday, told the court that on a previous visit to the place he had seen a patrolman in the hall. The man told him he was looking for a girl who was wanted at headquarters. Chief Beavers will inquire into this incident during the day.

Police Commissioner B. Lee Smith was a prominent figure in the police inquiry Friday. He was closeted with the Chief for several minutes before he suspended the first three men, and later in the day he made a personal investigation of the place on Auburn Avenue. He said that unquestionably the resort had been receiving police protection from a subordinate source.

The next meeting of the Police Commission is July 8, and unless there is a called meeting the charges will not be officially aired before that time.

The officers under suspicion were confident they would be completely exonerated when the Police Board took action, and have retained Attorney R. R. Jackson to represent them. Jackson said that his sympathies were wholly with the dismissed men and he denounced the system where officers of the same rank were assigned the duty of spying on their brother officers.

Policeman L. J. Milam was questioned by Captain Terry late Friday night. He was a partner with Wood, the suspended officer. He was questioned regarding Wood's conduct and reported visits to the place.

Chief Beavers said that his inquiry into the reports of misconduct against his policemen would be extensive and that it would not stop until the department had been purged of every man found guilty of an act unbecoming a policeman.

King Would Give Chief Power to "Fire" Offenders.

Chief of Police Beavers will have power to discharge officers from the department if a resolution to be introduced by Commissioner A. R. King is adopted by the Police Board at its meeting Tuesday, July 8.

"There is not another department of the city government that the head does not have this privilege, and the Chief of Police, above all others, should have the power to discharge an officer when he violates a rule of the department or is found wanting in the qualifications for the place, said Commissioner King.

"The action of the Chief in suspending the men who had visited a questionable house shows it is his intention to rid the department of all that class of policemen who use their office to enter places when not required to do so.

Board Trusts Chief.

"The Chief heard the rumor that policemen were visiting the place in the rear of 127 Auburn Avenue soon after his return from Washington City, and immediately started an investigation, detailing Plainclothes Officers Moon and Adams on the job.

"These men were selected by the Chief not because of any 'personal spite' they might have had against the officers turned up, but because they were, in his opinion, qualified to cope with the case and bring the guilty parties to justice. How well they succeeded the action of the Chief and the conviction of the women in the case in the Recorder's Court shows.

"The Board of Police Commissioners exercises great care in the selection of officers, but are never sure of the men until they are tested. It is up to the Chief and his assistants to do the testing. The Police Board will abide by their decision. The board has the utmost confidence in Chief Beavers and his assistants. They have been proved loyal and true.

Can Appeal to Board.

"In any case where an officer who has been discharged by the Chief feels that he has not been given a square deal he can appeal to the board. The Chief will report to the board all cases of suspension or discharge, and the board either will confirm or reverse him—mostly confirm.

"The Chief has started this investigation and he will carry it to a successful conclusion. It is the duty of citizens who have the welfare of Atlanta at heart to give him every assistance."

MRS. STETSON DECLARES MRS. EDDY, DIVINE, STILL RULES SCIENTIST CHURCH

NEW YORK, June 28.—In a remarkable statement to-day Mrs. Augusta Stetson, founder of the first Christian Science church in this city, denied she is seeking to succeed Mrs. Baker G. Eddy, and declared that Mrs. Eddy, like Jesus Christ, did not die as other mortals die, but passed into a spiritual life and still rules as the head of the universal church.

Mrs. Stetson claims to be the spiritual head of the branch church, but says Mrs. Eddy is rising to a final demonstration of her teachings that there is no death.

The statement follows the recent publication of a book by Mrs. Stetson, called "Reminiscences, Sermons and Correspondence," which opponents of Mrs. Stetson say will pave the way for a formal declaration of leadership.

Mrs. Stetson, who was excommunicated from the Christian Science Church because of a dispute over local leadership, said:

"My relations with the church are the same as they have always been since I became a student of Mrs. Eddy. I began working in Christian Science from both a material and spiritual foundation, and continued to demonstrate the power of spirituality over material sense. Step by step, I followed Christ Jesus and Mary Baker Eddy until I had demonstrated up to the point of emergence from a material organization, when I accepted the inevitable, the request of our leader, 'to begin to build on a wholly spiritual foundation, than which there is no other.'

Acknowledges Eddy Leadership.

"Throughout the columns of my book I positively state that Mrs. Eddy is the head of her church, which means the entire body comprising the members of the mother or universal church. Mrs. Eddy has not died, but is rising to a final demonstration of her teachings that 'all is life; there is no death,' and is, as she has been, the spiritual head of the universal church.

"I never have ceased to follow the impersonal ideal once seemingly embodied in flesh. I am steadfast in my convictions that I am the spiritual head of the branch church which she organized and over which she placed me as spiritual head. I am responsible to God and my leader for defending my position.

"I now am awaiting the final victory of truth and love over error and hate. I shall never be separated from my teacher and leader, Mrs. Eddy, nor from my students who comprehend divine metaphysics. My church will stand as a 'light upon the hill,' known and acknowledged by all men as a demonstration of my teaching of Christian Science as taught me by Mary Baker Eddy. The hour has struck. The night has passed. The day dawns. Victory at last rests on the side of Christian Science."

Mrs. Stetson explained this to mean the world will soon realize the divinity of Mrs. Eddy.

Willing to Take Up Rule.

She continued:

"I was ready and willing to follow my leader, Mrs. Eddy, at her request, and continue to demonstrate at any cost to me the principles of Christian Science, or divine metaphysics, which for many years I had demonstrated in a degree. I am continuing in the church the structure of truth and love and am rising in spiritual power over remaining undestroyed material sense and material organization.

"My spiritual ego consciousness is a member of the body of God, therefore a member of the real church, the house (consciousness) not made with hands, eternal in the one mind.

"Those who have not risen out of material organization and who require personal association and who are not a law unto themselves, but require the help of these a step higher on the ladder of spiritual progress, should remain in the material organization until compelled by the law of truth to advance."

DEATH FROM CHALK POISONING OF CHILD STIRS SCHOOL HEADS

Julia Davenport, one of the friends of Mary Tribble.

Classmates covered grave of girl with flowers.

Though the home is dark with sorrow, and the death of the little girl has left a void that can never be filled, the parents and friends of little Mary Tribble, 7-year-old victim of colored crayon, find a measure of comfort to-day in the thought that her fate has driven home with terrible earnestness a lesson that will be of incalculable benefit to hundreds of other school children.

The death of the child is to be the price of increased vigilance by the teachers of scores of Atlanta schools in watching over their young charges, and greater care by the pupils.

Many of the teachers of the Atlanta schools have already begun to formulate plans and rules that will minimize the danger to the children in handling colored chalk, and other objects likely to contain poison.

The funeral of the little girl Friday was one of the saddest ever held in East Atlanta. A company of Mary's little friends members of her school and Sunday school classes, gathered at the East Side Baptist Tabernacle to pay a last tribute of love.

They brought great bunches of wild flowers, plucked with their own hands in the nearby woods where Mary had romped with them, and placed them on her coffin. As the funeral procession entered the church, the little boys and girls lined up on either side of the door, and the body of the little girl was carried slowly between the lines of those she loved and who loved her.

STATE BOARD AID FOR MARRIAGE BILL ASKED

One Member of Health Department Already Has Indorsed Hixon Measure.

Efforts to obtain from the State Board of Health an endorsement of the "pure marriage" bill, introduced into the Senate by Senator J. T. Hixon, will be made by friends of the measure, according to an announcement made by Senator Hixon Saturday morning. One physician employed in the offices of the Board of Health already has sought out Senator Hixon and assured him he would lend his personal support to the measure.

Senator Hixon said the work of bringing the attention of the Board of Health to the bill probably would be under the direction of Dr. B. L. Emory, of Villa Rica, Ga., author of the bill, and at whose request it was introduced by Senator Hixon.

Dr. Emory, it is said, personally will present the bill to the Board of Health and ask co-operation in obtaining its passage. The bill was endorsed by the Carroll County Medical Society before it was brought to Atlanta. Senator Hixon is using this written endorsement of the measure as a lever to swing votes for it.

Expects Bill to Get Attention.

Senator Hixon is confident his bill will be taken seriously and that it will receive the careful consideration of the Senate. It raises the marriage age limit in Georgia from 14 to 16 in the case of the woman, and forbids any man marrying who is less than 18 years of age.

By far the most important features of the bill, in the opinion of Senator Hixon and its friends, are the provisions prohibiting the granting of marriage licenses to persons who are afflicted with tuberculosis or other chronic and contagious diseases, and to persons who are habitual drunkards or addicted to the drug habit.

Will Help Prevent Disease.

Senator Hixon is anxious to see his marriage bill become a law. He declares the passage of such a bill will do more to stamp out disease than all other kinds of legislation that might be passed.

"Several of the most progressive States in the Union," Senator Hixon declared, "have laws similar to this bill, and they have worked wonderfully well.

"I expect to live to see the time when such a law will be on the statute books of every State, and when that time comes there will be fewer lunatics and less contagious and hereditary diseases than now."

GEORGIANS GO TO GETTYSBURG REUNION

First Platoon Off Under General A. J. West---Six Hundred to Attend From State.

Headed by General A. J. West, commissioner from Georgia, the First Battalion of Confederate Veterans from Atlanta and the State-at-large left at 11 o'clock Saturday morning for Gettysburg and the national reunion of the blue and the gray on July 1, 2 and 3, fifty years after the battle.

Atlanta, with 75 Confederates and the State of Georgia, with 600, will be well represented in comparison with other States. Through the efforts of General West, the State has obtained a favorite camping ground fronting Confederate Avenue, the main thoroughfare of the reunion city. Situations at this vantage point were sought by every camp.

The first preliminary reunion between the Union and Confederate veterans took place in Atlanta Saturday morning, when the ticket sale started at the Southern Railway office. The participants were a Mr. Black, a Union veteran, and F. L. Hudgins, commander of Camp C. A. Evans, Confederate veterans of Decatur. Seeing Mr. Hudgins and other wearers of the gray buying tickets to Gettysburg, Mr. Black "butted in" and said "Good morning, boys. My name is Black. I was on the other side, but it's all over now and I'm with you."

Prominent Veterans Go.

Among the prominent Atlanta veterans who left on the morning train were General A. J. West, Judge George Hillyer, railroad commissioner; Colonel John W. Lindsey, prison commissioner; Captain J. W. English, president of the Fourth National Bank; J. C. Huff and A. A. Nolan.

Commander F. L. Hudgins and Vice Commanders I. N. Nash and W. H. Mitchell made up the Decatur delegation.

Other Georgia veterans who left from Atlanta on the first train were W. F. Gay, of Newborn, a member of Jefferson Lamar Camp No. 305, of Covington; J. N. Mitchell, Canton; Judge J. F. C. Williams, ordinary of Harris County; Sam Moore, A. F. Truett and J. T. Forester, Hamilton.

Many Carry Wounds.

Many veterans will take to the reunion wounds or other souvenirs connected with the battle or other Civil War events. General West will take the greatest object of interest to be seen at the reunion. It is a Confederate half-dollar, one of four which were coined before the dies were broken. It is valued at $10,000 and was presented to General West by Attorney David H. Keefer.

F. L. Hudgins and I. N. Nash, of Decatur, both were wounded at Gettysburg. Nash lost his left arm and Hudgins was shot through the body. Hudgins took along a frying pan he captured at the Battle of the Wilderness May 6, 1864, when it was filled with salt pork placed there by some combatant who didn't have time to remain and eat.

W. H. Mitchell, the other Decatur veteran, did not participate in the battle of Gettysburg. He tried three times to get here, but on each occasion was wounded in a preliminary battle on the other side of the Potomac. He confessed this morning he didn't know whether he was lucky or unlucky.

Gettysburg Begins to Fill With Veterans.

It is expected to reach its height by to-morrow night. Gallantly the little borough of 4,000 has tackled the proposition of caring for its guests, but already it is beginning to feel the stress.

Army officers, watching the multitude grow, to-day sized up the camp and the preparations, practically completed, and said it was the biggest thing of its kind they had ever seen.

To add to the difficulties and dangers of a situation hazardous under any circumstances, the weather is almost unbearable. With a sun blazing savagely the humidity is so high that every movement is productive of exhaustion. There have been several cases of heat exhaustion.

Considerable indignation has been manifested by army officers and by Lieutenant Colonel Lewis E. Beitler, secretary of the Pennsylvania commission, over the widely published reports that no flags but the Stars and Stripes would be permitted in the camp. No such order ever was issued either by the War Department or the commission. As a matter of fact, several houses in the town are flying the Stars and Bars.

Five troops of State police have been mobilized here and this morning the policing of the town was turned over to them.

New Book Tells All About Health-Giving Waters in Georgia

A treatise on the mineral and commercial waters of Georgia has been issued by the State Geological Survey. It gives more than 200 analyses and much other valuable data.

"Mineral Springs of Georgia" is the name which State Geologist S. W. McCallie has given to the pamphlet, and which is regarded as a valuable "handbook" for physicians.

The booklet tells of the accommodations for visitors at the various springs. It deals with the history of the springs, origin of mineral waters, definition of mineral waters, thermal springs, medicinal value, classification and geographical distribution.

Persons wishing a copy can obtain it by sending 16 cents postage to S. W. McCallie, State Geologist, Atlanta.

Dr. Ridley to Make Humorous Address

Dr. Caleb A. Ridley, of Central Baptist Church, will give his lecture, "The Longest Pole Knocks the Persimmon," Thursday evening at the church. The lecture is free to the public.

Dr. Ridley, who for several years was on the platform as a lecturer, calls this "A character study so arranged as to keep people awake, embodying the humorous things which all of us see, but only a few remember."

Crazy From Heat, Mother Kills Child

Crazed by the heat, Amanda Dieu, a negro woman, strangled her child to death on the farm of Harry L. Schlesinger, two miles north of Buckhead, Saturday morning. The woman is the wife of Turner Dieu, long a tenant of the Schlesinger farm. For some time she had been complaining of the intense heat.

Becoming irritated at something her child had done, she choked it to death before anyone could interfere. She was arrested.

Plans Airship Squad In All Russian Corps

ST. PETERSBURG, June 28.—Every Russian army corps is to have a flying squad if the plan of the Minister of War is carried out, it was announced in the Duma.

Great progress is being made in the aerial armament, it was said, and the Government recently doubled the number of dirigibles and had acquired craft known as "aerial dreadnoughts."

Roumania Warlike; Threatens Bulgaria

BUCHAREST, ROUMANIA, June 28.—The Government to-day ceased granting furloughs to Roumanian soldiers. All officers and troops absent on leave have been ordered to report to the colors. The war office is preparing for a complete mobilization of the army.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MILAN, ITALY, June 28.—Vittorio Mariani, clerk in a railway station at Tivoli, near Rome, at a salary of $5 a week, inherited $6,400,000 from his uncle, Alesandro Corrandoini, who died in Buenos Ayres, where he made his fortune.

The uncle planned to surprise his nephew.

SHOW-ME DRESS MOST DARING IN CENTURY

Newest Paris Style Is to Wear as Little as Possible and That Transparent.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, June 28.—"The most daring in the past 100 years," was the way the summer styles of women's dress for 1913 were described to-day. The newspapers are printing columns of comment, in addition to many letters of protest, against the "immodest" and "immoral" styles.

The latest modes are designed to show as much of the wearer as possible. In addition to the slashed skirts, extreme decollete and sleeveless waists, gowns are being made from diaphanous materials. Little or nothing is worn under these transparent dresses.

Corsets are out of date. Apparently no fashionable woman wears them any longer. The majority of bodices noted at the Auteuil track did not reach more than a few inches above the waistline, and those few inches were filled in with flesh-colored chiffon, so that it would appear that the wearer was adorned with a gown of the most aggravated decollete.

Petticoats also have gone out of date. Those who follow the fashions say none was seen at Auteuil. Many women have adopted the style of wearing tights and dresses slashed far above the knee. Some of the tights were flesh colored; others were of brilliant hues in order to attract attention.

Another new fashion is to adorn the stockings with real jewels and real flowers.

Nat Goodwin Must Not Eat at Own Cafe

LOS ANGELES, June 28.—Others may dine at the Cafe Goodwin, but not Nat Goodwin, with carte blanche all the way down the menu from caviar to camembert, may not. The genial host found himself in a new role when he sat down in his own cafe. Dining became so inexpensive that it seemed unreasonable not to dine often and well.

The result was that Mr. Goodwin, a few days ago, found himself ill and called a doctor. The doctor told him that he had been too good a patron of the Cafe Goodwin and must not think it his duty to test the entire menu.

Dr. Hanscom Picks 'Salvation' for Text

15,000 Coal Miners Ordered to Strike

CHARLESTON, W. VA., June 28.—The three days' conference between the New River coal operators and officials of the United Mine Workers of America with Governor Hatfield as mediator was without avail and today the miners received notice to strike.

Unless some agreement is made by Monday 15,000 miners will quit work.

DO YOUR BEST, IS PONY MAN'S ADVICE

CONTEST GINGER.

Your friends are watching you and the record you are making. You can not afford to lose.

Don't show a "yellow streak." Remember, the others are not landing every subscription they ask for, either.

Remember, the other fellow is working, too.

Do your best, and you are bound to do well.

All contestants in the race for The Georgian and American ponies are keyed up to the highest pitch just now, for the day when the bonus offers will expire is near at hand.

Boys and girls are straining every nerve to get promises fulfilled before July 5, for subscriptions brought in now count more than they will at any future time during the contest.

"Many of the boys and girls waste a lot of good time trying to find out what their rivals are doing," says the contest manager. "This is foolish. It is very likely that accurate information can not be had, for contestants are bragging, just to discourage the others in the race.

"The contestant who goes after votes with all his might will have no time to work about rivals, and will not need to worry about the others, either.

"The thing for the boys and girls to do is to set their minds on winning a pony outfit, and let nothing else distract their attention. No one ever won a fight who went into it half-heartedly."

The standings will be published to-morrow, and there will be gains shown worthy of careful notice.

In addition there is to be a seven-room cottage for Mrs. F. Y. Mathis, who has been breeding famous cats for about ten years.

PRINCESS LOUISE WRITES NEW BOOK

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MILAN, ITALY, June 28.—Ex-Crown Princess Louise of Saxony, who has resumed the title of Countess of Montignoso, is about to publish another volume of autobiography.

"The book is still my own story," she said to an interviewer, "but it is different from the last. It is a revelation of my own soul in the guise of fiction. I describe Italy's beauties athwart my own personal impressions; very strange ones they are—I'm such a funny person. And, do you know I don't want to know myself well?

"People accuse me of being shifty in my loves. That's true; but I should have been otherwise had I encountered a strong man of iron will who knew how to dominate me. Alas! I have come across only vulgar bourgeois weaklings. That's the why and wherefore of my feverish quest after the happiness to which I, too, have a right.

"If those who sought my friendship had put it out of their minds that I was a Princess of Saxony and had treated me simply as a woman, then, perhaps, I, too, should have enjoyed my good share in life and love. As things are, I travel and travel in a frenzy to distract myself and my greatest horror in life is lest I should become plebeian."

Rate on 50 Chinese Skeletons a Puzzler

NEW ORLEANS, June 28.—What rates to charge for shipping 50 Chinese skeletons from this city to San Francisco is bothering freight agents of this city. The skeletons are "knocked down" and boxed, ready for trans-shipment and burial, "under the eyes of Confucius."

The railroad declares bodies must have been buried at least 20 years before they can be classed as "merchandise." Only a few of the Chinese now under discussion have been interred that length of time.

'Don't Give Up the Ship' Flag Is Prize

TOLEDO, OHIO, June 28.—The battle of Lake Erie of 1913 is practically being refought as a part of the centennial celebration here, as the result of the contest for possession of Commodore Perry's "Don't give up the ship" battle flag, which is wanted for the rebuilt flagship Niagara.

Director George Stevens, of the Museum of Art, to-day remained steadfast in his determination not to relinquish to Ensign George M. Lowry the relic, loaned by Secretary Daniels for three months.

START FIGHT FOR ALABAMA PAVING

Property Owners Declare That the Street Never Has Had Any Improvements.

A strong fight for the repaving of East Alabama Street, between Whitehall Street and Central Avenue, one of the busiest thoroughfares of the city, was begun Saturday with a petition addressed the Mayor and Council. It reads, in part:

"We, the undersigned citizens and property owners on East Alabama Street, between Whitehall Street and Central Avenue, respectfully petition your honorable body to repave this street for the two blocks mentioned as early as possible.

"We desire to call your attention to the face that these two blocks are now paved with the original belgian blocks and the street is in a very bad condition and is a hindrance to traffic. We further wish to call your attention to the fact that these two blocks never have had any improvements or asked for any before this time.

"In the very near future the Louisville and Nashville terminals will be completed, and all of the wholesale produce houses will be located in this section, and traffic necessarily will be increased; therefore, with the present conditions existing, it will be almost impossible to take care of same.

"We suggest that inasmuch as there is a steep grade between Whitehall and Pryor Streets, that this portion of the street be repaved with brick, and the block between Pryor Street and Central Avenue be repaved with wood block."

Chinese Slay 600 Brigands in Battle

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PEKIN, June 28.—Six hundred brigands were killed and 80 captured by Republican troops in the province of Honan to-day. Brigands have been pillaging, murdering and burning in the mountains under the leadership of Hibinders for months.

The captives probably will be executed.

SINKS AS FRIENDS LAUGH.

NEWTON, N. J., June 28.—While trying to swim the Paulinskill River here with a catch of 40 pounds of fish strung about his neck, Harry C. Pitman, 18, was drowned. Friends nearby thought his cries for help were in fun and laughed at him as he sank.

A., B. & A. Strikes Securities Snag

Receivers of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad have been unable to make arrangements to retire the $4,700,000 of 5 per cent receivers' certificates which fall due Tuesday, July 1.

It is believed the certificates will be made to bear 6 per cent from maturity until paid, which may be for some time, in view of the condition of the money market.

H. M. Atkinson and E. T. Lamb left Atlanta early in the week for New York, where they now are endeavoring to arrange for refunding the securities, which in effect are notes made one year ago.

In the absence of these men, representing respectively majority and minority bondholders, no one in the A., B. and A. offices here was able to say just what progress has been made.

The notes in question were sold to retire an issue of $3,250,000 receivers' obligations and equipment trusts, and to provide for certain improvements.

The road went into the hands of a receiver January 2, 1909.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"DEAR, could you make room for this in your trunk?" asked Helen anxiously.

"Um, what is it?" Warren did not look up from the great roll of collars he was fitting in the tray.

"My heavy coat—I'll need it for the steamer."

"Should say I couldn't. Put it in the roll with the rugs."

"But we've got to put both our train coats and the steamer pillow in that—it won't hold any more."

"Then you'll just have to carry it. "See here," opening a small leather case of folding coat hangers, "how many of these things will we need?"

"Take them all, dear. I'll want some. Where is that other case of six, Aunt Emma gave you for Christmas? Oh, here they are."

"Then put them in your own trunk. I'm not going to fill up mine with a lot of truck for you. Look at all those papers," pointing to some packages he had brought from the office.

"Oh, do you have to take all those?"

"That's not all—there's more in that suit case. And they're a darn sight more important than your frillikins."

Helen, who had always counted on putting certain things in Warren's trunk, went back to her room and gazed helplessly at her small and already overcrowded steamer trunk. How could she get everything in?

"What shall I do with this, ma'am?" demanded Maggie, appearing at the door with an opened package of cereal.

"Oh, you'll have to throw out everything like that; we can't leave it to draw mice. Now, you're sure you've got everything out of the refrigerator? The butter and the rest of that jar of bacon you can give to the houseman. And you'd better sprinkle some borax around the sink. Wait, I'll come show you."

A Farewell Call.

She was still in the kitchen, when the 'phone rang and Warren called impatiently:

"Helen! Somebody wants you."

"Oh, WHY will people call us up at the last moment?" she protested resentfully, for every second now was precious.

"Hello! I just wanted to say goodbye," shrilled Mrs. Thurston's voice, "and wish you all kinds of a pleasant trip."

"That's very kind of you," lied Helen politely.

"Your boat's sailing at 3, isn't it? I'd so like to come down to the dock, but I promised Mrs. Walker to go with her to a bridge tea. I disappointed her last week, so I'll just have to go. Well, you certainly have a fine day to start. I was afraid this morning it would rain, but it's cleared off beautifully."

"Yes, it has," murmured Helen stupidly, wild to get back to her packing, but not wanting to be abrupt.

"Oh, while I think of it, I want to give you the address of that place in the Rue de Rivoli, the one I told you about where I got those lovely hand-embroidered nightgowns. Have you a pencil there?"

Helen got a pencil, took down the address and was just about to say good-by when Mrs. Thurston held her with a——

"And I'm going to ask you to get me two more—size 36. You saw the ones I have, I paid fifteen francs for most of them, but use your own judgment—only I shouldn't like to pay over twenty. I'm sure you won't mind getting these for me, will you? And oh, don't you want the address of that handkerchief place, where they embroider the three initials for only a few centimes extra? If you'll hold the phone a minute—I've got the address on one of the boxes they came in."

Helen could hardly restrain her impatience, but she was forced to wait for the address.

Very Annoying.

"If you're getting some for yourself," purred Mrs. Thurston, "and if it isn't TOO much trouble, I SHOULD like another dozen of those tiny evening handkerchiefs—you know the initials—M. C. T."

When Helen finally succeeded in breaking away she turned from the phone with a furious—

"The idea of her calling me up this late to send for things!"

"Well, I'd have cut her off quick enough," growled Warren. "She wouldn't have kept me standing there. Here," shoving toward her some steamship labels he had just filled out with their name and number of their stateroom, "better get these on now. Can't leave everything till the last minute."

Helen took the oval blue and white "North German Lloyd" labels and pasted them on her trunk and suit case with supreme satisfaction. She had always envied people with trunks covered with steamship and foreign hotel labels—it gave their baggage such a traveled, "cosmopolitan" air.

The one label that was left over she put on a large trunk that she had had brought up to get out some things for the trip. It had never been abroad, but she MIGHT have taken it, so she had no scruples in decorating it with a label.

Unfortunately just at that moment Warren appeared.

"These yours?" throwing down a couple of her linen collars that had been sent to the laundry with his. Then noticing the label as she jumped up almost guiltily from her knees before the big trunk, "What's that mean? You're not going to take that trunk?"

"No, dear," flushing in confused anticipation of his ridicule.

"Well why in thunder did you stick on that label?" Then as it dawned on him. "By George, I've heard of fool women who bought foreign labels and plastered up their trunks, but I thought you had some sense."

This incident did not contribute to Helen's speed in packing, for with burning cheeks, she scraped off with the scissors the offending label.

"The ice man's here now, m'am," announced Maggie.

Some Hustling.

And again Helen had to stop her packing to instruct the iceman to leave no more ice until they notified him of their return. Then came the superintendent, whom she had sent for to see about turning off the gas. The time was going fast—and her trunk was not nearly ready.

"Oh, m'am, see what I found!" Maggie held up triumphantly a tea spoon they had looked for yesterday when they had counted the silver. Now more time was taken in unlocking the silver and putting away the spoon.

"What about the table fern, m'am. Didn't you say you were going to give that to Mrs. Hubbard?"

"You can do that after we're gone. Now don't come to me with everything Maggie. Look at the time—I must finish packing!"

"Trunk ready to strap?" called out Warren.

"Not quite, dear," nervously. "In just a few moments."

"Well now don't fool around and not be ready. I've ordered the cab for twelve sharp."

When Helen was much hurried she was apt to become confused, and now he fluttered about trying to do everything at once. There were more interruptions, and twice she had to stop to find something for Warren.

"All right, dear, it's all ready," she answered at last to his repeated call of "Trunk ready?"

"Sure this is the right key?" he demanded. "No, it's the lock! Rusty as the devil. Why in blazes didn't you try it? Get some oil!"

Helen flew for the oil, and for another precious ten minutes Warren fumbled over the lock.

"Oh, wait, dear, have you got it locked?" just as he finally succeeded in turning the key. "Oh, I'm so sorry, but I left my bath robe."

Once Again.

Warren's explosives were loud and emphatic as he unlocked the trunk.

"Now is that ALL?" as Helen hastily crushed in the robe. "By Gad, I've never locked a trunk for you yet that I didn't have to open half a dozen times before we started."

But it was hardly a moment later when Maggie brought in a blue serge skirt Helen had asked her to brush. "You're not forgetting this, m'am?"

Helen tried desperately to get it in her suitcase, but there was no room. The trunk would have to be opened again. While she was struggling with the stiff, heavy strap, trying to unbuckle it, Warren passed the door.

"What in the devil are you doing now?"

"Never mind, I—I can open it," flushed and breathless with her exertions. "I just forgot to put in this skirt."

Warren pushed her roughly aside and again opened the trunk, his language more fervid than before.

"Now is THAT ALL?" he roared again as he slammed down the lid.

Helen thought it was. But at almost the last moment, she discovered a pair of shoes she had left out to be polished. The suitcase was bulging full, and she dared not let Warren see her trying to open the trunk again. She would have to carry them in a bundle. There was no other way.

It was not until they were finally whirling to the dock in a cab, with the trunks on top and the hand baggage on the seat before them, that Warren noticed the package Helen was carrying.

"What's that? Put it in your suit case."

"There isn't room. It's nothing dear, I'd just as soon carry it."

But Warren felt through the paper that it was a pair of shoes.

"So you forgot those, did you? Might have known you'd want to get in that trunk again. Gad, that's like you. Starting off for Europe with a pair of shoes in your hand. Next time I go—I go alone!"

What He Meant.

A man once received as a present from a sea captain a fine specimen of a bird which sailors call the "laughing jackass." As he was carrying it home he met a brawny Irish navvy, who stopped and said to him:

"Phwat kind of burrd is that, sorr?"

"That's a laughing jackass," explained the owner, genially.

The Irishman, thinking he was being made fun of, was equal to the occasion, and responded with a twinkle of the eye:

"It's not yourself; it's the burrd I mane, sorr!"

The Mistakes of Jennie .:. By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

Chapter 13.

A FEW days after Jennie had got her new clothes she met Tom on her way to work.

Jennie was all excited when she saw him and wondered if he would speak to her after her refusing to marry him and her treating him so badly. She did hope he would, and that he would admire her new clothes.

Tom lifted his hat and acted as if there never had been anything the matter between them, and, boy like, did not even notice her new gown, willow plume and things, that Jennie was paying $1.50 a week for on the installment plan.

That day her girl friend at the office said she had it all "cooked up" for a party that night with the boys they were out with before.

One of the boys owned an automobile and they would go out on a "bear" of a time. So that night after work Jennie and her pal met the boys. Jennie was all dressed up and her girl friend's beau didn't seem to have any time for any one except Jennie. This, of course, made the girl jealous, but she held in until after dinner, when they were all a bit "jagged." Then she derided Jennie for trying to take her fellow away from her.

They had a fine row, which made the fellow—who seemed to always pay for their "parties"—very angry. He told the girl he was tired of her anyway, and she had better get some one else to pay her expenses.

Then he proceeded to make violent love to Jennie—and poor Jennie didn't know what to do. The other fellow—the one Jennie was with before—didn't have much to say, and whatever his friend did was all right, being as how his friend held the purse strings.

Coming back in the machine they sat on the back seat and the fellow talked and talked and tried to get Jennie to consent to let him furnish up a flat for her, and she could have anything she wanted. But Jennie was crying, and all she would say was: "NO-NO-NO!" Her girl friend wouldn't speak to her, but had vowed to get even—if it was the last thing in the world she ever did. Jennie begged the fellow to take her home—but he held her all the tighter in his arms, kissing her.

By DOROTHY DIX.

HAVE you ever considered the modern girl and how she differs from the maidens of the past? She's a new species of the feminine sex, and no more like her grandmother, or even her mother, than if she had been wafted down from the planet Mars instead of having just strolled out of the nursery.

We haven't taken much account of her, but you've got to reckon with her in the future, and it's time we sat up and took notice. Consider these little stories as illustrations of the young person and her point of view. The first is on divorce.

The other day I overheard two young girls talking.

Said one: "When a girl marries, she should be very, very careful in choosing her husband, and after she is married she should do the best she can to make a good wife and a happy home, but if she finds out that she has made a mistake, and is miserable, thank Heaven, she doesn't have to stand it. She can always get a divorce."

Said the other girl: "Oh, of course, that's the only thing to do under such circumstances. It won't be my fault if my marriage turns out badly, because I'm going to do everything I can, and bring every particle of intelligence I've got to making it a success, but none of that suffer-and-be-strong business in mine! If my husband isn't what he should be, or treats me badly, or I find I've made an error of judgment, I'm going to correct it just as I would any other mistake.

"I'm not going to stick to it as people used to do in the Dark Ages. Aren't you thankful that you live in these enlightened days, instead of in our grandparents' and our parents' time, when people thought that no matter how miserable you were in your marriage, or how much you hated the person you were married to, you had to endure it?"

An Unusual Remark.

The first girl smiled indulgently. "They were bound in the swaddling clothes of superstition, all right," she said.

I gasped with surprise. These girls belong to old, conservative, rather narrow-minded families, and they themselves are sweet, modest, intelligent, well educated young women, who haven't the faintest idea of being revolutionary, or anything of that sort. What they said simply voiced the viewpoint of the new generation.

They didn't argue about the ethics of divorce at all. They simply accepted divorce as a fact, a modern convenience, something that tended to make life pleasanter, just as they did in elevators in apartment buildings, or electric lights, or running hot and cold water in bath rooms.

If you had made a mistake in marriage and your life was being ruined by it, you corrected it and took a fresh start, just as you would do if you found out that you had engaged in a business that was bankrupting you. They could see no more reason for going on with a marriage that meant daily misery than there would be in going on with an enterprise in which you lost money every day.

You can't argue the divorce question with the modern young girl, because she simply doesn't recognize the ancient view of the matter, that there is anything noble, or pious, or virtuous in living with an individual that brings out all the worst that is in you, or in keeping together a family that is engaged in a perpetual drawn battle at home.

Nor can you argue the suffrage question with young women, because they accept it as a fact that is incontrovertible that they are the equals of the young men they know, and have just as much right to a voice in government. You could find a needle in a haystack easier than a college-bred girl who is an anti.

DOROTHY DIX.

And this is what the modern young girl thinks about woman's sweet dependence. A very rich girl said to me the other day:

"I've got the best and most generous father that any girl ever had. He showers on me everything that money can buy. I've got charge accounts all the way up and down Fifth Avenue, and every month he gives me a big allowance, but I never see a girl standing behind a counter or sitting behind a typewriter that I don't envy her. I would rather have a dollar and fifty cents that I had earned myself than fifteen hundred dollars that was given me.

"I would give anything on earth to know that I could stand on my own feet instead of being a miserable parasite hanging on somebody else. And every rich girl I know feels the same way. But I've got one comfort, I'll never have to be dependent on a husband. How a woman endures the humiliation of having to ask her husband for every cent she spends I don't understand. It's enough to kill her, and I don't believe women are going to do it much longer. I think in the future that when a girl hasn't got an independent fortune of her own she'll continue after marriage at whatever business she was in before marriage. Financial independence is just as necessary to a woman's self-respect as it is to a man's."

And here's another viewpoint of the 1913 model of girl. If you will recall, the heroes of all old-fashioned novels used to be men who had been sad rakes. They were men with dark pasts, such as Rochester, who fascinated innocent little Jane Eyre, and even as late as a generation or so ago a man lost no prestige in a girl's eyes from having been wild, and having had romantic adventures. Recently an opponent to the bill for requiring all candidates for marriage to produce a health certificate brought up this former attitude of women on this subject in objecting to the passage of the law. He didn't know the modern young girl. I said something of this to one, and she defined the modern girl's position on the question in one phrase:

She Knew.

"We've read Damaged Goods," she said, "and we know what that sort of romance means—insane asylums, surgeons' tables, death."

In former times, when a young girl came to an older woman to confide in her, she asked for advice about some love affair. Nowadays when a girl has a heart-to-heart talk with you she consults you about her life work. The young girls are no longer looking forward to matrimony as the one only desirable career in life. They are thinking of business, of settlement work, of a thousand avocations outside of the home circle. Love is no longer the whole of their existence. It is a thing apart, just as it is of a man. If the right man comes along and asks one, she'll marry, but if he doesn't, she can get along very well without him, thank you.

This is only a cursory view of the young girl of the period. Take a look at her for yourself. At present she is the great human conundrum, and she's the most interesting thing in the world.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

A man remarked that he came from a very large family.

"How many are there of you?" he was asked.

"Well, there were ten of us boys," he said, "and each of us had a sister."

"Good gracious!" exclaimed the other, "then there were twenty of you?"

"No," said the boastful man; "eleven."

Mamma—My dear, what are you doing?

Little Daughter—Making a pen wiper for my little sister.

Mamma—But you haven't any little sister!

Little Daughter—No, not yet; but Sally Stuckup has just got one, and I know we always get everything the Stuckups do.

Sheet steel is the latest material utilized in the making of furniture. It is used for sideboards, wardrobes, chiffoniers, writing desks, and it is finished in such perfect imitation of the various woods that the difference can not be detected. The wood finish is applied under a very high temperature, becoming an integral part of the metal and never cracking. This unique furniture has the recommendation of being fireproof, and a lighted match left on a pressed steel sideboard would have no effect whatever on its surface.

"What is the principal difference between modern and ancient times?"

"One of the main points was that the modern earn their living, while the ancients urned their dead."

Mr. Weeks was vary slim, vary sad looking. Pa sighed kind of hard, but he asked Mister Weeks to malk himself at hoam & then Ma sed Now I am going to leeve you two men & littel Bobbie to have a visit while I run oaver to Missus Jones's & get that recipe for stewed steak & milkweed greens, Ma sed.

As soon as Pa was sure Ma was out of the house he asked Mister Weeks of Jacksonville to cum into the library & look at his books. I went in, too.

I have sumthing vary fine here, sed Pa, in this long necked decanter. It is the very finest burbon, Pa sed, & it is so old that it has rumatism. Will you try a snifter?

A Surprise.

I doant mind if I do, sed Mister Weeks. Then Pa poured him a nice drink & took one hisself. He looked kind of surprised at Mister Weeks, but I cud see that he was looking at his friend moar friendly.

I am sorry to intrude on you, sir, said Mister Weeks, & as it is I wud have stayed at a hotel, only I got roped into a stud gaim last nite & got my bank roll so nicked that it is almost nit. That is sum corn, he sed. If we was whare we cud, he sed, I wud cum back, but as I am in yure hoam I will try another on you, old sport. I will pour it, it is neerer to me. Say when.

I see you like it, sed Pa. I shud say I do like it, sed Mister Weeks. I have been in a jay town for three weeks, hoalding a kind of reevival, & the only stuff I cud git thare was so feerce that it took all my moral currage to drink it at all. Well, how do you like the way Billy Smith is sailing along now? I hope the Crackers win the pennant. I have a swell bet down that they will cop, he sed.

I nevver seen a man that looked so surprised as Pa. Say, he sed to Mister Weeks of Jacksonville, you are a regular guy. How did you cum to be a misshunary.

Pretty Soft.

Well, sed Mister Weeks, it is a pritty soft graft. A man gets a chance to travel all oaver & see furrin countrys, & as far as curing any beenited natives, all I evver ask them to do is to show me around. I used to be a ball player, he sed, but I got hit on the bean with one of Dent's fast ones, and that chased me out of the gaim. This gaim isent so dangerous.

Aint you afrade you will get et up by a cannibal? I sed to Mister Weeks.

No, sed Mister Weeks. I teach them all to be hard drinkers & thay lose thare deesire to eat.

Jest then Ma caim hoam.

You must be awfully tired, Ma sed to the misshunary.

Yes, I think I will retire & finnish my new lecture for those who grope in the darkness, sed Mister Weeks of Jacksonville. Then he groped to bed.

Turned the Tables.

At Scotch weddings some years ago it used to be the custom to batter the hat of the bridegroom as he was leaving the house in which the ceremony took place. On one of those occasions the friends of a newly-married couple (relatives of the bridegroom) determined to carry out the observance of this custom to the letter.

The bridegroom heard them discussing their plans, and dispatched a messenger to the carriage (which stood waiting) with his hat some time previous to his departure. Then, donning the hat of the male relative who had plotted against him, he prepared to go out to the carriage.

No sooner had he got to the door than his hat was furiously assaulted and almost destroyed. He walked out of the house amid the laughter of the bystanders and entered the vehicle; then, taking the battered hat from his head he threw it into the hands of its proper owner, exclaiming: "Hey, Mr. Dougall, there's your hat," and donned his own amid the cheers of all present.

Mr. Dougall was the unhappiest-looking man in Scotland for some time after that.

: The Bibles of Presidents :

Some Interesting Facts Concerning Them.

ONE of the oldest, if not the very oldest, Bibles connected with the American Government is the book upon which, since 1800, every Chief Justice and every member of the Supreme Court has taken the oath of allegiance when accepting his appointment to Uncle Sam's highest tribunal. More than that, every attorney who has practiced before the Supreme Court since that date—1800—has pledged his allegiance over the little volume, with one exception—Daniel Webster. It is told even yet of the Supreme Court of that day that Mr. Webster's fame as an orator had so preceded him that on that occasion, when he came to argue his first case before the Court, the clerk, Mr. Caldwell, in his eagerness to hear the great speaker, forgot to administer the oath.

Some interesting facts have also been revealed regarding the Bibles used by American Presidents. When Grover Cleveland came to the Capitol for his first inauguration he brought with him a little red Bible his mother had given him when he was a boy, and which he had always cherished as a keepsake. On that Bible he took the oath of office. A few days before Mr. McKinley's inauguration a number of African Methodist bishops came into Mr. McKinley's office one morning with a tremendous package, which proved to be a large family Bible in a big plush box, and they wished Mr. McKinley to use it. Their request was granted, and the big Bible was one of the show objects in the Red Parlor of the White House for a long time afterwards.

A $50,000 Bible.

When Mr. Roosevelt was inducted into office as Governor of New York some one presented him with the Bible which he used on that occasion. His name, which was written on the fly-leaf, was misspelled, but he used the same Bible at his second inauguration, and it has been one of Mr. Roosevelt's most treasured mementos ever since.

These volumes, however, are to Americans of insignificant value when compared with the copy of the Bible, bound in red leather with silver clasps, on which Washington took the oath as first President of the Republic on the balcony of the old Federal Hall in New York. It was borrowed for the occasion, and the descendants of those who lent it preserve it as a most sacred relic.

Americans, inspired perhaps by the example of the late Pierpont Morgan, who included many historic Bibles among his art treasures, have of late years exhibited a great passion for Bible collecting. Bibles belonging to Queen Anne, George III and Richard, Duke of Gloucester, are to be found in the United States.

It was H. E. Huntington, the railway magnate of America, who a couple of years ago paid $50,000 for a Gutenberg Bible which was once in the Ashburnham Library. America, however, has not succeeded in securing a literary treasure to be found among the finest collection of English Bibles in the world, at the Bristol Baptist College. This college possesses the only perfect copy in existence of Tyndale's first New Testament, printed at Worms in 1525. The then Bishop of London bought up and burned this first edition, and thus provided Tyndale money for an improved and larger one. The only other fragment of the destroyed edition is now in the British Museum, but it stops short at the 22d chapter of St. Matthew. The trustees of the college have often been tempted to dispose of this unique volume, but hitherto they have been proof against temptation, though no less than $50,000 has been offered for it.

Another valuable Bible in the collection is a copy of Coverdale's Bible, published in 1535. Lincoln Cathedral possesses the only other perfect copy in existence, although six other more or less complete copies are known to exist.

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

Ina Claire Talks on the Psychology of Clothes

Ina Claire's refreshing beauty.

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

THE dainty little "Quaker Girl," Ina Claire, is entertaining her admirers down at Brighton Beach, where the cool breezes and her own refreshing personality unite to make us all forget how earnestly the sun of summer can pour down molten glory on the city cobblestones at noon to-day.

We sat at a cozy tea table and got acquainted over an iced tea and a soda lemonade, plus chicken sandwiches. "This is my luncheon," said Miss Ina—and, by the way, you pronounce it as if it were Eena—"I don't let all my meals total up to more than one meal—of course you will laugh and say that I can afford to eat all I want. But I can't. You have to meet fat more than half way if you want to ward it off, and make sure that it never starts coming. I never eat candy—it does not do one the least bit of good, and I'd be so grateful if I might get all the sweetness I want from the perfume of all the flowers I want. Flowers have such a wonderful effect on me—on everyone, I think—their perfume and beauty has to make you a little bit lovelier. Don't you think so? Perhaps you will even say in our interview that I wish all the kind people who want to send me gifts would make those gifts of flowers."

"Evidently you are a believer in the importance of surroundings," I suggested.

"Oh, yes," said Miss Claire eagerly, "for my ideal of beauty is sweetness—refinement. You see it in the flowerlike English type."

By the way the unconscious girl who sat across the tea table from me is a perfect exponent of the flowerlike English type.

Likes Clothes.

"I believe in the psychology of clothes, too. I hate things that are just la mode. I happen to like little picture dresses—soft, frilly, cool-looking, girlish things. They happen to suit me, too—so I wear them. But as I grow older and develop and mature I shall not wear these little frocks after I have outworn their type. Why, I want to grow in my work and develop power, and just the same way I want to grow beyond my 19 years in my appearance, too. Don't you think you have to dress your age as well as your type?"

I agreed; for I think that even as clothes must express the wearer, so they limit their wearer in her power of expression. A woman struggling along in a peg-top skirt that makes her walk a peg, too, can not look like the heroine of the poet's fancy:

"Even the light harebell raised its head
Elastic from her airy tread."

As Miss Claire said, "A trained gown expresses impressive dignity at once. Oh, how I should love to wear them, but my mother says that youth should express youth—and I know she is very wise. Youth must work and study and try to grow up gracefully in art and works and looks, but it must not be impatient and try to go faster than itself," added my pretty philosopher sagely.

"And don't you think that moods are very important, too?" I asked. "Flowers in your pathway and pretty clothes make beauty—but does it not come from within?"

Not Fair.

"Indeed it does," answered Miss Claire. "Unpleasant moods take the light and life from the eyes and all the face. It is not fair to other people to indulge in moods—and if you must have them, why just go off by yourself if you can, for your face will show their imprint. Drooping your upper lip in the middle, a la Eddie Foy, is fine for the blues—it curls your mouth up at the corners mechanically—and it makes your spirit laugh at the way you know you look.

"I think if you are young you need plenty of sleep, and simple food to get you into simple food-habits, and flowers and sunshine to help you grow, and work to keep you interested in life. I believe in work for women," went on Miss Claire slowly, "not only because life is happier when you are busy, but because, unless you are helping to create things, you become a critic. And just a critical attitude toward life is likely to become a bitter, droop-mouthed attitude. If you are a worker, and know how much struggle and effort goes into creating each tiny bit of life, you are happier and kinder, and I'm sure you look sweeter, too."

Well, little sister workers, is not that a splendid message for us? To create a bit o' life—and not to berate life—that is what Ina Claire told me.

EXPERIENCE OF MOTHERHOOD

Advice to Expectant Mothers

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The inexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ASK HIM TO CALL AGAIN.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 21 and am in love with a man two years my senior. He called on me a few times. One night I had an engagement and he disappointed me, and I heard he would like to write, but he is very bashful, so would it be proper for me to write to him?

LONELY.

Write a friendly note asking him to call, but do not make it too cordial, and do not be insistent if he refuses. Having made these overtures, let the rest come from him.

IT IS NOT WISE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Is it proper for girls between the ages of 15 and 16 to play kissing games, such as "postoffice," "spin the bottle," etc., with boys between the ages of 17 and 18 at a social gathering? GLADYS.

Don't do it, my dear. It is a silliness that sometimes results in continued and unpardonable familiarity when there are no kissing games as an excuse. Boys think all the more of girls who refuse to give such marks of their favor.

DON'T SEND IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

While at a ball I was introduced to a man who seemed interested in me. His father is in the same place of business as mine. Now, I would like to know if it would be proper for me to send a note through his father, as I do not know his name and address, because he has a stepfather. I would like to have him call to see me, but I do not want his folks to think I am running after him. ANXIOUS.

You do not want his family to think you are running after him, yet such a letter would give them that impression. A better plan would be to wait till he shows greater interest in you.

Next Witness, Please!

"Witness, will you please answer my questions a little more plainly?" queried the lawyer, who was cross-examining an elderly German as to the position of the door, windows, etc., in the house where a crime had been committed.

"I will try—I will try," nervously answered the old man.

"Will you describe to the Court just how the stairs run in that house?" went on the lawyer.

For a few minutes the German looked puzzled, and bit his nails nervously.

"How ze stairs run?" he interrogated a little dazedly.

"Come, come, my good man! How the stairs run, if you please!" said the lawyer, in an exasperated tone.

"Vell," ventured the witness phlegmatically, "ven I am oopstairs zay run down, and ven I am downstairs zay run oop!"

The Triple Tie

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

In that game the Philadelphia nine was composed of nine players with but a single thought, nine bats that thumped as one. They took advantage of every opening and with Chief Bender in the box played with a dash and confidence that filled their supporters with glee and when the cohorts went back to Philadelphia that night it was the hope that the White Sox had gotten rid of all their bad playing and that on the morrow, with Big Ed Walsh in the box, they would brace up and take the Red Sox into camp, thereby making things all even again, with the triple tie no further decided than it was at the start.

Emblems Laid Aside.

No white silk-stockinged banners were flaunted on Broadway that night. The emblems were laid aside for the evening, while the owners thereof sought rathskellers and similar places for the purpose of drowning their sorrows in the flowing bowl. But Comiskey, the owner of the Chicago Club, never gave up the baseball ship. The "Old Roman" called the members of his team to his room and after giving them a verbal dressing down for their wretched exhibition, as only Comiskey himself could do, he exhorted them to go after the Red Sox on the following day and wipe up the Polo Grounds with them.

"Now go out there and beat that Boston bunch!" he exclaimed vehemently in conclusion, "and when you do it I'll hand every member of the team $500. And you, Walsh," he added, turning to the big pitcher, "one thousand extra for you for winning the game."

The morrow came—a glorious October day. The Polo Grounds was packed for the battle of the Red Sox and the White Sox. Fresh from their last headache, full of remorse for the past and hope for the future, the thousand from Chicago massed themselves in that section of the stadium nearest first base, while opposite them, behind third base, sat the rabid Boston "fans," waving red banners and yelling for the Red Sox at the slightest provocation. The Chicago crowd, too, had brought their standards with them, somewhat soiled and bedraggled, it is true, but still sufficiently white to create a vivid impression whenever they were used.

Batteries Announced.

The rival teams took their preliminary practice, while the rival rooters barked at each other across the diamond. Finally the bell rang, the umpires took their place, Connolly behind the plate, Dinneen at first base and the other two at the foul lines, and the megaphone boys announced the batteries. Of these heralds there were three—one to inform the spectators behind the plate, one for the left wing and one for the right wing of the grandstand. This was their simultaneous announcement.

"Batteries for to-day's game: For Boston, Bedlent and Carrigan; for Chicago, Walsh and Schalk."

Manager Stahl of the Red Sox had again won the toss and his team took the field. Rath, the Chicago second baseman, stepped to the plate and the Chicago cohorts back of first base gave him a rousing cheer. Hard luck came to the Boston team at the very start. Rath swung at the first ball that Bedlent pitched to him, ticked it with his bat, deflecting it so that it struck Carrigan on his first finger, breaking it. The catcher was forced to retire. The megaphone boys announced the change:

"Cady now catching in place of Carrigan."

The Game Is On.

The game went on. Rath finally worked Bedlent for a free pass to first. Lord bunted a slow one down the third base line, and in running to get it, the Boston pitcher slipped and fell, Lord reaching first safely and Rath getting to second. Chase rapped a hot one through the box, which Wagner knocked down back of second base, but was unable to field. This filled the bases, with no one out. The section back of first base became a waving field of white banners, and the shouts of leather-lunged Chicagoans could be heard for miles. Collins lifted a long fly to Lewis and Rath scored after the catch. Bodie came along with a two-base hit between Speaker and Hooper, scoring Lord and Chase. Mattick went out on a grounder to Engle and Weaver closed the inning with a foul to Cady.

With his side three runs to the good, Big Ed Walsh stalked to the pitcher's box. That lead was all he asked. The Red Sox had found him almost unbeatable for years. That $1,000 bonus promised by Comiskey he considered as good as in his bank at Meriden. He began proceedings by striking out Hooper and Yerkes and forcing Speaker to roll an easy one to the box, which Walsh himself tossed to first for the thir out.

Collins Replaces Bedient.

Both sides were blanked in the second inning. In the third the White Sox went out in order, but the Red Sox two men on—Wagner by means of a pass and Cady on a single to right. Stahl sent Henrickson in to bat for Bedient, but the little fellow hit into a double play and Hooper fouled to Chase. The Red Sox were still without a run to their credit.

Ray Collins came in to pitch in place of Bedient and he retired the White Sox in order. For Boston, Speaker singled after Yerkes had been disposed of, but neither Lewis nor Gardner could bring him home. The fifth inning was also scoreless for both teams, but the Red Sox came near doing some damage to Walsh in their half of the round. Engle was safe on a low throw of his grounder. Wagner laid down a bunt toward first and beat it to the bag, as no one covered first. Cady advanced the runners with a sacrifice. With the chance of scoring two runs, Stahl himself went to bat in place of Collins and succeeded in drawing a pass to first. This filled the bases with only one out. Stahl, who was still limping from an old injury to his foot, called upon Nell Ball to run for him. The Red Six rooters cheered wildly as Hooper came to the plate. He drove a liner to Mattick and Engle, who tried to score from third, was thrown out at the plate. This piece of ill luck so disconcerted the Royal Rooters' band that it forgot to play "Tessie" for the first time on record.

Buck O'Brien went in to pitch for Boston when the sixth inning opened. He was in fine fettle, and the White Sox couldn't get a man on the bases. Those three runs looked bigger and bigger as the game went on. In the last of the sixth, after Yerkes had been retired, Speaker beat out a bunt and Lewis was safe on a fumble, but more hard luck followed the Red Sox when Gardner sent a terrific liner directly in Chase's hands and Wagner boosted a high fly to Rath.

The Chicago crowd went wild when the White Sox got three men on bases in the seventh with only one out, but their cheers turned to groans when O'Brien struck out the next man and speared a hard liner for the third out. But in doing so O'Brien hurt his hand so badly that he was forced to retire.

Last Inning Opens.

It looked as though the Red Sox were all shot to pieces when they went to bat in the last half of the seventh, but Cady reached second on a little fly that struck the right field foul line and rolled to the stand. Taking a dying chance Stahl sent Nunamaker in to bat, but no runs resulted and the score was still 3 to 0 against the Red Sox when the eighth opened, with Leonard in the box for Boston.

Leonard passed the first two men that faced him, but some good pitching and some good luck enable him to get by without being scored upon. The top of the batting order was up for the Red Sox and the Boston crowd implored the boys to do something. They tried very hard, but none of them could drive the ball out of the infield.

The ninth and last inning opened. The White Sox were retired in order. They had not been able to do much with the Boston pitchers, except when they scored the three runs in the first inning, but Big Ed Walsh was going great guns and there was not a member of the team but that felt the game was surely won.

Fought back to the last ditch, the Red Sox went to bat for their last stand. Two thousand spectators left their seats and started home when Lewis, the first up for Boston, died on a roller to Rath. Five thousand more made a rush for the gates when Gardner flied to Collins. Not a sound came from the Boston section. The Chicago contingent was singing and waving flags. There was a faint cheer when Engle managed to work Walsh for a free pass to first. There was a louder cheer when Wagner hit safely just out of Weaver's reach. Some of those who were leaving the grounds paused for a moment to see if there would be any excitement. Cady, with two strikes and three balls called on him, was fooled into striking at a very low one, but the ball struck the ground before it got to Schald and jumped by him. Cady sprinted to first and beat Schalk's throw by a hair. The bases were filled!

Leonard Walks to Plate.

Everybody on the grounds except the Chicago crowd broke into a wild cheer. The Red Sox rooters were like raving maniacs. Three on bases and two out in the last half of the ninth inning! Yes, but what chance did the Red Sox have with a pitcher's turn to bat? Whoever heard of a pitcher "breaking up" a game of ball in the ninth inning with three men on bases and two out? And Stahl had used up all his pinch hitters.

The cheers were at their height and Leonard was walking slowly toward the plate, bat in hand, when Wagner rushed up to Stahl, who was on the first base coaching line, and whispered something in his ear. Instantly Stahl yelled to Leonard.

"Leonard!" he cried.

The pitcher stopped and looked at his manager, who motioned him to keep away from the plate. There was a commotion in the dugout where the Red Sox players were gathered. They were crowded together with their backs to the field. Umpire Connolly called sharply to Stahl:

"Batter up; where's your batter?"

The Chicago section jeered and hooted. "Play ball." "Get a move on." "Get busy," and similar remarks were hurled at the Boston manager, who still stood in the coaching box.

"Whose turn is it to bat, yours, Leonard?" demanded Connolly, striding up to the pitcher.

Leonard nodded.

"Get up to the plate, then," roared Connolly. "You can't delay the game this way."

"Stahl won't let me," replied Leonard.

Connolly whipped off his mask and ran toward the Red Sox manager.

"Where's your next batter, Stahl?" he roared.

Stahl turned toward the Boston bench, where there was still a commotion among the players.

"Who Is Your Batter-"

"Just a minute, Tommy, give me just a minute," he said to the umpire. "I want to win this game."

Manager Callahan of the White Sox came rushing up. So did Captain Harry Lord. The cheers and the hoots died down.

"What's the matter here," exclaimed Callahan. "I claim the game by forfeit unless a man goes to bat for Boston right now."

Connolly pulled out his watch.

"I'll give you just three minutes to get a man up to the plate," he said to Stahl.

The megaphone boys hurried up. The Boston manager glanced at the players' bench. The bunch of Red Sox players separated and one of them jumped out of the dugout and began selecting a bat from the pile on the ground.

"Who is your batter?" demanded Connolly.

Stahl told him.

An instant later the heralds raised their megaphones to their lips and amid a deathlike silence bawled this announcement:

Gordon Kelly batting in place of Leonard.

TODAY'S installment of the "The Triple Tie" leaves Gordon Kelly in a very dramatic situation. The final chapters of the story will be printed in The Georgian on Monday, July 7. In the meantime readers of "The Triple Tie" will have until noon next Thursday to send in their conception of the conclusion of the story, containing their solution of the mystery in competition for prizes aggregating $250 offered by The Georgian. The problems for the reader to solve are these:

First—How does Kelly escape the mountaineers?

Second—What happens to Mildred Deery, the heroine?

Third—How did Gordon Kelly, who confessed that he never saw a game of ball and never played a game of ball up to the time he asked Manager Smith of the Atlanta club for a position on his team—how did Gordon Kelly learn to bat, catch and run bases in the marvelous manner he displayed at Atlanta that caused the Boston club to give the unheard-of price of $50,000 for Gordon Kelly's release?

Fourth—What happened when Gordon Kelly went to bat in the ninth inning of the final and deciding game?

Fifth—What is the final ending of the story?

No contributions will be considered if they are delivered at The American office later than July 3 at noon or bear a postmark later than that time.

Please remember that this is not a guessing contest. Originality, literary value and analytical clearness will be largely considered in awarding the prizes. Three judges, in no way connected with The Georgian, will award the prizes.

The prizes for the best solutions are as follows:

First Prize	$100.00
Second Prize	50.00
Third Prize	25.00
Fourth Prize	15.00
Twelve Prizes, each	5.00
Total	$250.00

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

"Oh, well," Burke exclaimed amiably, "I didn't really think you did, but I wasn't sure, so I had to take a chance. You understand, don't you, Joe?"

"Sure, I understand," Garson replied, with an amiability equal to the Inspector's own.

Burke's manner continued very amicably as he went on speaking.

"You see, Joe, anyhow, we've got the right party safe enough. You can bet on that!"

Garson resisted the lure.

"If you don't want me—" he began suggestively, and he turned toward the door to the outer hall. "Why, if you don't want me, I'll—get along."

"Oh, what's the hurry, Joe?" Burke retorted, with the effect of stopping the other short. He pressed the buzzer as the agreed signal to Cassidy. "Where did you say Mary Turner was last night?"

At the question, all Garson's fears for the woman rushed back of him with appalling force. Of what avail his safety, if she were still in peril? "I don't know where she was," he exclaimed, doubtfully. He realized his blunder even as the words left his lips, and sought to correct it as best he might. "Why, yes, I do, too," he went on, as if assailed by sudden memory. "I dropped into her place kind of late, and I guess . . . Yes, she was home, of course. She didn't go out of the house all night." His insistence on the point was of itself suspicious, but eagerness to protect her stultified his wits.

Burke Was Silent.

Burke sat grim and silent, offering no comment on the lie.

"Know anything about young Gilder?" he demanded. "Happen to know where he is now?" He rose and came around the desk, so that he stood close to Garson, at whom he glowered.

"Not a thing!" was the earnest answer. But the speaker's fear rose swiftly, for the linking of these names was significant—frightfully significant!

The inner door opened, and Mary Turner entered the office. Garson, with difficulty, suppressed the cry of distress that rose to his lips. For a few moments, the silence was unbroken. Then, presently, Burke, by a gesture, directed the girl to advance toward the center of the room. As she obeyed, he himself went a little toward the door, and, when it opened again, and Dick Gilder appeared, he interposed to check the young man's rush forward as his gaze fell on his bride, who stood regarding him with sad eyes.

Garson stared mutely at the burly man in uniform who held their destinies in the hollow of a hand. His lips parted as if he were about to speak. Then, he bade defiance to the impulse. He deemed it safer for all that he should say nothing—now! . . . And it is very easy to say a word too many. And that one may be a word never to be unsaid—or gainsaid.

Then, while still that curious, dynamic silence endured, Cassidy came briskly into the office. By some magic duty he had contrived to give his usually hebetudinous features an expression of enthusiasm.

"Say, Chief," the detective said rapidly, "they've squealed."

Burke regarded his aid with an air intolerably triumphant. His voice came smug:

"Squealed, eh?" His glance ran over Garson for a second, then made its inquisition of Mary and of Dick Gilder. He did not give a look to Cassidy as he put his question. "Do they tell the same story?" And then, when the detective had answered in the affirmative, he went on speaking in tones ponderous with self-complacency; and now his eyes held sharply, craftily, on the woman.

"I was right then, after all—right, all the time! Good enough!" Of a sudden, his voice loomed somberly. "Mary Turner, I want you for the murder of——"

Garson's rush halted the sentence. He had leaped forward. His face was rigid. He broke in on the Inspector's words with a gesture of fury. His voice came in a hiss:

"That's a d—d lie. I did it!"

CHAPTER XXIV.

Anguish and Bliss.

Joe Garson had shouted his confession without a second of reflection. But the result must have been the same had he taken years of thought. Between him and her as the victim of the law, there could be no hesitation for choice. Indeed, just now, he had no heed to his own fate. The prime necessity was to save her, Mary, from the toils of the law that were closing around her. For himself, in the days to come, there would be a ghastly dread, but there would never be regret over the cost of saving her. Perhaps, some other he might have let suffer in his stead—not her! Even had he been innocent and she guilty of the crime, he would still have saved her from the waters—he would save her until the end, as far as the power in him might lie. It was thus that, with the primitive directness of his reverential love for the girl, he counted no sacrifice too great in her behalf. Joe Garson was not a good man, as the world esteems goodness. On the contrary, he was distinctly an evil one, a menace to society, on which he preyed constantly. But his good qualities, if few, were of the strongest fiber, rooted in the deeps of him. He loathed treachery. His one guiltiness in this respect had been, curiously enough, toward Mary herself, in the scheme of the burglary which she had forbidden. But, in the last analysis, here his deceit had been designed to bring affluence to her. It was his abhorrence of treachery among pals that had driven him to the murder of the stool pigeon in a fit of ungovernable passion. He might have stayed his hand then, but for the gusty rage that swept him on to the crime. None the less, had he spared the man his hatred of the betrayer would have been the same. And the other virtue of Joe Garson was the complement of this—his own loyalty, a loyalty that made him forget self utterly where he loved, not too much to give.

Frozen With Horror.

The suddenness of it all held Mary voiceless for long seconds. She was frozen with horror of the event. When, at last, words come, they were a frantic prayer of protest.

"No, Joe! No! Don't talk—don't talk!"

Burke, immensely gratified, went nimbly to his chair, and thence surveyed the agitated group with grisly pleasure.

"Joe has talked," he said, significantly.

Mary, shaken as she was by the fact of Garson's confession, nevertheless retained her presence of mind sufficiently to resist with all her strength.

"He did it to protect me," she stated, earnestly.

The Inspector disdained such futile argument. As the doorman appeared in answer to the buzzer, he directed that the stenographer be summoned at once.

"We'll have the confession in due form," he remarked, gazing pleasedly on the three before him.

"He's not going to confess," Mary insisted, with spirit.

But Burke was not in the least impressed. He disregarded her completely, and spoke mechanically to Garson the formal warning required by the law.

RIDERS WILL SCRAMBLE FOR COIN TO-NIGHT

WITH the kind permission of Old Man Weather, and with the enthusiastic co-operation of the greatest string of riders ever gathered for a race meeting in Dixie they're off to-night at the Motordrome for the fourth race meet of the local season—and it looks the best in the bunch.

There's more "pep" and enthusiasm out at Riders' Row to-day, than there has been since the meeting began. Up to this meet the riders have known that, mounted as they are now, Jock McNeil and Wilmer Richards were fast enough to take all the races. The rest got a chance only in the specials.

Now McNeil and Richards have been yanked out and put in a class by themselves. These two meet to-night in three match races at three miles each. This will settle the most momentous speed question of the season. But they will have it all to themselves.

It's a Mighty Close Thing.

With the two fastest machines out of it the rest of the riders will scramble viciously for the Sweepstakes and the Motordrome Purse. It could not be any more even. Of the eight riders who will take part there isn't over a fraction of a second to the mile difference in the machines or the riders. They are calculated to race, nose and nose, every inch of the difference, with the advantage slightly favoring Harry Glenn, because he has the longest nose.

Another improvement in the card comes from the fact that there will be four starters in each heat of the two regular races. In past meets two of the heats have had but three starters. And it really takes four to make the racing good. To-night both the preliminary heats and the finals will have four starters.

It will not be surprising to see some remarkable marks made to-night. The track has been proved so safe that every man is willing to let out to the limit. Thus far there hasn't been a man even scratched.

Accidents Looked For.

To the old-timers the absence of accidents is growing monotonous. Not one of them ever heard of three meets on a new track without at least one bad spill. They looked for them Wednesday night, and it really seemed to disappoint them that nothing happened.

It is a marvelous thing, considering the scores of men who have been killed on board tracks and considering the fine possibilities of a spill at 85 miles an hour or better, that none of the riders fear an accident. They try to be moderately careful. But to expect sudden death—well, it never occurs to them and they are the only men at the track who don't think of it when they come to close quarters at high speed.

With a safe track and machines getting better all the time there is no reason why a fast mark or two should not be set to-night.

The races will start to-night at 8:15. Cars will leave Five Points at short intervals. Tickets are on sale at Tumlin's and Shepherd's. All are provided with rain checks. These checks are good if rain interferes before the program is completed.

Ty Cobb Just Hates Those Polo Grounds

DETROIT, June 28.—"Ty" Cobb was glad to get away from the Polo Grounds. The "Georgia Peach" dearly loves his base hits these days, and in "Ty's" opinion the Polo Grounds is no place for a .450 batting average.

"For the life of me, I can not hit on those grounds," said "Ty." "No wonder the Yankees are not hitting the ball. Hitting is more or less guesswork in New York. Sometimes you never do see the ball till it gets past you.

"It's mighty bad for the outfielders, too; unless a fly is hit so high that it shows above the upper tier, it is very hard to see. A low grounder is often lost in the background of summer clothed fans. I like New York pretty well, but I'm glad I don't have to play 77 games a year on the Polo Grounds."

Ex-Giant Ewing to Return to Baseball

BELLEFONTAINE, O., June 28.—Bob Ewing, former major league pitcher, who quit the game last season to devote all of his attention to farming and the raising of hogs on his farm at New Hampshire, O., is debating with himself as to whether he should re-enter the national game.

He has an offer from Manager Bade Myers, of the Canton team, Interstate League. Myers and Ewing began their professional career together as members of Charley Stroeber's Toledo team, Myers being a catcher at the time.

Ewing, now 38, showed the old-time form he possessed during the nine years he played with the Cincinnati team. For a while Ewing was with the Philadelphia and New York National League clubs.

You're Not in It at All Without a Wishing Sash

Krazy Kat

But Ignatz Refused To Be "It"

M'GRAW BEATS ALL BUSHES TO GATHER TALENT

By Damon Runyon.

NEW YORK, June 28.—John J. McGraw is beating the business quite far and wide for baseball talent this season, having inaugurated the most systematic and thorough search for incipient athletes that he has ever conducted.

It is said that "Sinister" Dick Kinsella, the Varnish King, of Springfield, Mo., and McGraw's present chief of scouts, is under a commission that will take him over more territory than any other ivory hunter will cover this year.

This statement is borne out by the movements of the sinister one during the past few weeks. "After thoroughly canvassing the bushes of the Middle West, Kinsella has suddenly leaped into the New York State and other leagues in this section of the country, and after a few weeks hereabouts he will comb the Pacific Coast and the Northwest.

The result of Kinsella's activities will probably not be definitely known until late in the summer, or until draft time. However, it is said that he has already spotted half a dozen pitchers.

More than likely Kinsella was instructed to pay particular attention to pitchers this year, as McGraw has suddenly found himself in need of that class of material.

* * *

FERDINAND SCHUPP, the author of the rising curve, is now the only real youngster with the club, and Theodore Goulait is about the only pitcher "plant" belonging to McGraw, although he still has some hopes of Frank Smith, now in the New York State League, developing later on.

Larue Kirby, who was carried along by the Giants for some time last season, and who was left at Mobile with Mike Finn this spring, has been cut loose entirely. There were various reasons why Larue would not do, chief of which was Larue himself. Finn had to send him away, and the last heard of the Michigan terror was at Pensacola, 'way down in Florida.

Stray reports floating in and out of the far sticks indicate that Chance also has some scouts hard at work. It is said that the Peerless Leader has lined up a score of young athletes for September delivery and that several will come from the Texas League, incubator of some of the best ball tossers in the land. Chance also has an eye on various promising young men out on the coast and in the Southern League.

* * *

FOR a long time past there has been an effort on foot to discover the reason why ball players hit less on the Polo Grounds than any other field in either circuit, it being generally admitted that such is the case. Last season the Giants claimed that it was on account of the advertising signs in center field. They said these signs formed a background which practically destroyed their batting eyes.

This year the signs were left off a considerable section of the bleacher wall, and the space was painted an alluring green. Then the Giants proceeded to hit a little bit less than ever, thus acquitting the poor signs of the blame.

BRITISH POLO CAPTAIN COUNTS ON WINNING NEXT

QUEENSTOWN, IRELAND, June 28.—Captain R. G. Ritson, of the English polo team, upon his arrival here from America on the liner Campania, said: "I confidently believe England will win the next polo match. Unquestionably the best polo team won in our recent match. We are delighted with the treatment accorded us in America and the true sportsmanship shown."

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

Young Shugrue, the Eastern lightweight, has billed the toughest fight of his career. Shugrue signed articles yesterday to box Matty Baldwin in a 15-round bout at New Haven, Conn., on July 4 and the fur should certainly fly. Baldwin has fought the best boys in the lightweight division and has always given a good account of himself.

* * *

The fight between Toni Cagoni and Jimmy Clabby, scheduled to be held at Indianapolis on July 3, has been called off. The promoters claim that Caponi wanted too much money.

* * *

Tom McCarey has wired Packey McFarland an offer to meet Jack Britton at his arena, providing the latter succeeds in defeating Charlie White at New Orleans on July 4. Britton and Packey met at New York a few months ago, with Packey carrying off the honors by a slight margin.

* * *

No more boxing shows are to be staged at Kenosha, Wis., during the summer months. The small attendance at the Coulon-Burns bout is the reason.

* * *

Kid Young, the local newsboy boxer, is simply aching to get into action. Young says he is willing to meet anyboy of his weight, from Charley Lee to Matty McCue.

* * *

Joe Mandot and Knockout Brown are both picking Leach Cross to stop Bud Anderson on July 4. Both claim that Leach's well-advertised right hand will land on Anderson's jaw long before the twentieth round is over.

* * *

Tommy Murphy says he will be at the ringside when Ritchie and Rivers clash to challenge the winner. Murphy is surely entitled to a chance at the title as he has fought every worthy contender for the crown during the past two years.

* * *

Murphy has been forced to call off his bout with Johnny Dundee to be held on July 15 on account of a bad hand. He put the injured member out of commission while boxing with one of his sparring partners. Jack White may get the match with Dundee.

* * *

Paris is after a fight between Georges Carpentier and Al Palzer. Tom O'Rourke, manager of Palzer, received a letter from Monsieur Vienne, the Parision boxing promoter, asking him his terms for such a match.

* * *

Promoters in Milwaukee, Wis., want to stage a bout between Papke and Eddie McGoorty. McGoorty has already agreed to meet the former middleweight champion, but Papke is holding out for a larger guarantee.

EVEN TENNIS EARNS COIN; AMERICA IS "SPORT MAD"

NEW YORK, June 28.—It has been said that America is "sport mad." That the general boom in interest in competitive events extends to tennis is proved by the figures just announced placing the total gate receipts of the recent international matches here at $19,000. Of this surprising sum $7,000 went to defray the expenses of the American team.

Of the net profits of $12,000, half was turned over to the Australian team. The West Side Lawn Tennis Club, on whose courts the matches were played, received $1,400, and the remaining $4,600 was put in the treasury of the National Lawn Tennis Association.

ZAMLOCH TRIES TO STEAL WITH ALL BASES OCCUPIED

DETROIT, June 28.—It has happened again in the big leagues. No longer is John Anderson the proud possessor of the glory of stealing second with the bases filled. Zamloch, a Tiger recruit hurler, pulled the stunt in the second game with the Nats. Stanage was on third, Moriarty on second and the pitcher himself on first. The latter started for second, hit the dirt with a great slide, arose, brushed himself and found Morrie planted at the base. It was a cinch to tag Zamloch, and then an ivory double resulted, as Stanage tried to reach home and was caught on the throw to the plate.

MORAN KNOCKS OUT LOGAN EASILY IN NEW ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS, June 28.—Frank Moran definitely settled the question of his superiority over Tim Logan last night by knocking out the New York boxer in the fourth round of their scheduled ten-round bout.

CHICAGO OPENS OLYMPIC GAMES TO GREAT CROWD

CHICAGO, June 28.—With the huge stands crowded to their capacity, the American Olympic games were opened under the most favorable circumstances to-day. The athletic carnival promises to outclass any event of the same nature ever held in this country. Athletes from all over the United States and Canada, as well as the point winners from Sweden, who took part in the Olympic games at Stockholm last year, are in attendance.

Almost every conceivable sort of athletic contest has been arranged for the meet, which will continue until July 6. A swimming tank has been dug out in the center of the field and is constructed that it can be boarded over and covered with earth when not in use. There is also a ski slide on which the skiing tournament will be held. As the weather will not permit the slides being covered with the natural coating of ice, grease has been used and in the preliminary trials found to be successful. Several polo games and feats of horsemanship also have been arranged. The army polo team will in all probability participate in this event.

* * *

TO-DAY the final championship contests for Chicago school children will be run off. The preliminary trials in the competitive drills, marching and like events, were held Thursday and yesterday. Fifty thousand children participated in the preliminaries.

To-morrow will be known as "Swedish Day," and the Swedish singing societies of Chicago have arranged for a monster chorus to join in the singing of national hymns and folk songs.

The intercollegiate athletic championships of the United States, including track and field sports, will be run off Wednesday, while the interscholastic championships, in which 2,000 high school and preparatory school boys are entered, will be decided on Thursday.

* * *

A "SANE Fourth" celebration will be given on Friday, interspersed with athletic events. In the afternoon the junior track and field championships of the United States, composed of 18 standard events, will take place. In the evening there will be more athletic events, educational moving pictures and a fireworks display.

Next Saturday will be the crowning day of the meet. The senior national championships, conducted under the auspices of the A. A. U., will be run off on that day and will bring forth some of the best athletes in the country. Such men as Sheridan, MacGrath, Sheppard, Kiviat, Kohlmainen and others of international reputation will be on hand.

* * *

DURING the meet there will also be archery contests, drills of firemen and policemen, three days of swimming, fencing, wrestling matches and trap shooting. Directly south of the stadium a large plot of ground has been laid out for the trap shooting competition which will be held on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week under the direction of E. W. Heath. The Boy Scouts will also give several exhibition drills under the direction of Dr. P. J. H. Farrell. Several power-boat races on the lake have also been arranged to take place during the week.

They were sitting in the gloaming and her cheeks were pale and damp
As she said good-bye unto her darling Steve.
But he said, "There ain't no reason for the teardrop in your lamp,
For you haven't got no business for to grieve.
I am going for to leave you and may not come back no more.
I will risk my life as everybody knows.
But although I don't come back again you oughtn't to get sore
With them life insurance papers in your hose."
And as he strode away
She sobbed and then did say:

CHORUS.

"As a patriotic hero
He can bat at minus zero,
And there ain't no sign of beauty in his face,
But I'll gather in the money
From my Motorcycle Honey
If he don't come back alive from that there race."

We note that Roy Good is captain of the Cincinnati motorcycle racing team. This reminds that the virtuous meet their demise at an early age.

Mr. Kirby, who coached the Yale crew, avers that he is well pleased with the ing that an Englishman sometimes is ing that an Englishman cometimes is easily pleased.

Mr. Kirby furthermore avers that Yale will do well when it has learned his stroke from the ground up. Several impartial spectators of the late race were under the impression that Yale had run aground.

"Do not be a fighter," advises James J. Corbett. This advice is followed assiduously by a great majority of our pugilists.

While polo may not strike a popular chord, one might say without fear of successful contradiction that it is not a game for invalids.

Fish stories were told long before men began writing ads for railway companies, but liars were amateurs in those days.

Speaking of the irony of fate, we note that the Red Sox paused long enough to raise aloft in the summer breeze a banner on which was the legend: "World's Champions."

We have it from Ban Johnson that Joe Birmingham is not competent to manage an American League team. Possibly Joe allows his team to win too often for the good of the league.

Boxing experts are wondering who will be Willie Ritchie's manager, but after the fracas on the Fourth a more lucrative position will be that of Mr. Ritchie's doctor.

Bob Fitzsimmons vouchsafes the information that George Rodel is a regular fighter. Jim Corbett expostulates that the said Rodel is a dub. Taking it by and large, Fits wins unanimously.

ROY WALKER IS DUBBED "W. JOHNSON OF MINORS"

NEW ORLEANS, June 28.—"Walter Johnson of the minors." This is the title that Southern League fans will bestow upon Roy Walker, former Appalachian League recruit whom Manager Frank took on several days ago to fill in for "Rube" Evans. Walker was given his premier Wednesday against the Lookouts, and proved himself everything his chief sponsor—Jack Adams—claimed: "More speed than any pitcher in the minor leagues."

Walker, though shaded in a pitching duel by Harry Coveleskie, threw sensational ball. He fanned ten members of Kid Elberfeld's mob, giving up but eight hits, which were turned into a brace of scores.

COULON DECIDES TO POSTPONE WILLIAMS BOUT

By Sol Plex.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 28.—Johnny Coulon is not going to fight Johnny "Kid" Williams, of Baltimore, in Tom McCarey's Vernon arena July 29. The bantam champion decided yesterday afternoon that he was not prepared for such a stiff battle in defense of his laurels and announced that he would wire McCarey last night insisting on a postponement until Labor Day. Coulon had given McCarey his word, and said he hated to disappoint Uncle Tom, but allowed a champion should take no foolish chances and that he would not fight Challenger Williams until he knew he was physically fit to put forth his best efforts in defense of the championship he has held for over five years.

Two Months in Mountains.

"Just to show the Vernon Club promoter that I intend playing fair ball for him I will leave for the coast July 1 or a few days later and stay there until Labor Day," said Johnny. "I want to get two months in the mountains before facing the Williams party. I am sure that by Labor Day I will be my old self, able to show Mr. Williams how a real champion fights.

"My right hand is bad and I am low in weight because of the hot weather we have been having. This is the first summer I ever tried to box, anyway, and I guess it is a mistake. When my father was alive he never permitted me to fight in the summer time. He argued that I was such a little fellow, always giving away weight, that training in the hot months would get me down too low. That was the trouble the other night at Kenosha. I guess the dad was right, and I will never again book a big match for June, July or August.

"It will be cool and nice in the mountains near Los Angeles and that will be just the thing for me. I can build up until a couple of weeks before Labor Day and then have something to take off when I start the training camp grind for Williams.

Is Sorry for Williams.

"I am sorry for Williams because the postponement will be hard on him. He already is on the scene, so Labor Day will make a long wait for him. However, he might take on Eddie Campi again on our original date, July 29, the winner to get me on Labor Day. Williams beat Campi in Eddie's first long fight. Since that Campi has whaled both Burns and Ledoux. I think he is entitled to another chance at the Baltimore boy."

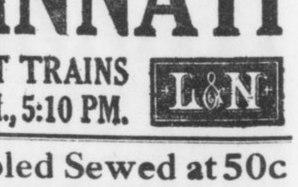
Yell Defiance at Blood Disorders

A Remedy That Has Shown a Most Remarkable Purifying Effect.



At Last You Can Get Rid of Blood Troubles—S. S. S.

The word medicine is one of the most abused in our language. There are certain medicinal properties just as necessary to health as the food we eat. Take, for example, the well-known tonic medicine, S. S. S. This famous blood purifier contains medicinal components just as vital and essential to healthy blood as the elements of wheat, roast beef, the fats and the sugars that make up our daily ration.

As a matter of fact, there is one ingredient in S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating each cellular part of the body to the healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment. That is why it regenerates the blood supply; why it has such a tremendous influence in overcoming eczema, rash, pimples, and all skin afflictions.

And in regenerating the tissues S. S. S. has a rapid and positive antidotal effect upon all those irritating influences that cause rheumatism, sore throat, weak eyes, falling hair, loss of weight, thin, pale cheeks, and that weariness of muscle and nerve that is generally experienced as spring fever. Get a bottle of S. S. S. at any drug store, and in a few days you will not only feel bright and energetic, but you will be the picture of new life. S. S. S. is prepared only in the laboratory of The Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., who maintain a very efficient Medical Department, where all who have any blood disorder of a stubborn nature may write freely for advice and a special book of instruction. S. S. S. is sold everywhere by drug stores, department and general stores.

SPEEDY SPRINT ALL THAT CAN SAVE CRACKERS

By Percy H. Whiting.

IF the Crackers are going to win the pennant this year they must demonstrate it between July 4 and July 16.

The Crackers come home July 4 for the first and only home stay of any importance they get until August 14. On this home stay they get 12 games in a row.

They better win a big majority of them.

* * *

RIGHT now the Crackers are a dangerous distance behind the surprising Gulls, who lead the league. They show no evidence of overtaking Mike Finn's flying club.

No material gain will be made until the team gets home, of course. The Crackers do their gaining on home grounds.

This being true, the local club better make the most of the home stay between July 4 and 16. It will be a long time before they get another.

On July 17 the Crackers go out on a heart-breaking road trip. Of the next 28 games they play 24 on the road.

And you know well the Crackers aren't going to make any advances while this torrid July-August trip is in progress.

* * *

ONE fact that will help is that the Crackers wind up the season with 22 straight games at home. But unless they have begun to gain on the Gulls before that time they will never overtake them. They can't afford to wait for the last home stay. It will be too late. They can't afford to wait until the Gulls falter, for there isn't any certainty they are going to falter.

* * *

IF the Crackers are a disappointment in the Southern League—which they aren't yet—consider the case of the Pelicans. This team looked like a sure one-two-three club. Now it is nowhere and rapidly going further.

Laugh if you want to, but my own opinion is that this is Charley Frank's last year in Pelicantown.

This stuff has been coming in over the grapevine for a couple of months and longer—and coming pretty straight. The Cleveland club undoubtedly owns the New Orleans association. That's a moral certainty. They will want to put one of their own men in charge. They realize that Charley Frank is unpopular in his home town—why, it is difficult to figure, for he has never failed until this year to give them a good ball club. It is believed that the Cleveland folks wanted to be rid of Frank last year but didn't have the heart to fire him, after the showing he made with the 1912 Pelicans.

* * *

THEY need a new deal all around in New Orleans.

That ought to be the best baseball town of the league—it has the population. But it is nearly the worst. There is some good (or bad) reason for this because it is not a condition of long standing.

The Cleveland folks have figured around and have presumably decided that the sacrifice of Charley Frank would be a popular move.

So off comes his head.

A mere prediction, truly! But watch it come through.

PRIZE FIGHTRS' BALL TEAM JIMMY DIME'S NEW IDEA

NEWCASTLE, PA., June 28.—Jimmy Dime, the enterprising manager of pugilists and fight promoter, announces he has organized a team of ball players which would be composed of some of the best boxers in this country, and that they would play several exhibition games with professional teams this summer. Dime stated that there were few remunerative matches for the boxers during the summer and he intended to keep his team going until fall. His line-up is as follows:

Dan Daley, pitcher, heavyweight; Tom McMahon, first base, light heavyweight; Tommy Bresnahan, second base; Joe Chip, catcher, welterweight; George Chip, shortstop, middleweight; "Goo" Stewart, third base, middleweight; Patsy Brannigan, left field, featherweight; Jimmy Dime, center field, manager, and Tommy Jones, right field, lightweight.

By Joe Agler.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., June 28. Lefty Price will endeavor to prove to the Billikens that he is the goods this afternoon, with Chapman behind the plate. We should cop at least two of the three games scheduled for Montgomery. Manush will show up for Monday's game. He seems to be in mid-season shape.

Well, we got that revenge, after all, taking two of the series from the Turtles. Old King Brady twirled superb ball yesterday afternoon in spite of a sun which threatened to warp the grandstand out of shape and blister the infield. "Old Reliable" came back, good and strong, and demonstrated his worth to the Crackers.

We scored in the first on Long's single and Whitey's hit to center. We rocked along to the sixth without a chance, and then Smith singled, Bisland bunted and yours truly got a hit. Baerwald muffed Chapman's fly and Smith scored. I was nipped at second.

Newton was on the mound for the Turtles and pitched great ball, but his teammates couldn't help him much. We all were nearly suffocated with the heat.

MANUSH FOR CRACKERS; WILL JOIN ON THE ROAD

MONTGOMERY, ALA., June 28.—Frank Manush, formerly of the New Orleans Pelicans, recently unconditionally released by Charley Frank, has been signed by Manager Smith as utility player.

Manush has been in Memphis ever since his release. He will join the Crackers to-day or to-morrow.

It is presumed Manush will take the place of George Rohe as the Crackers' utility player.

JOE BEAN, director of playgrounds, deserves a large medal for getting the young men of Atlanta started in a big track and field meet. The event at Piedmont Park July 4 is deserving of the support of all those interested in the physical development of the young men in Atlanta.

No sport is cleaner, healthier or more desirable than track and field meets. Running, jumping and weight throwing contests develop those who take part in them. And moreover, they furnish a fine spectacle for those who witness them.

Unquestionably there will be a tremendous crowd at Piedmont Park Fourth of July morning to see the contests.

Of course no admission fee will be charged. There will be seats, if only on the grass, for all.

It is to be hoped that this meet will be the first of many. Atlanta ought to have one big track and field meet and several small ones each year. In the winter it ought to have an indoor meet in the Auditorium-Armory.

These things will come in time. The hardest work is done. A start has been made.

SINCE the Pittsburg club has been slumping, Manager Fred Clarke caused to be issued orders that the lid would be lifted on the anti-booze clause in the Pirate contracts.

"The players may drink beer if they drink it alone," said Clarke. "The use of the beverage as a tonic I do not believe to be harmful, at least not as much as the restless restraint caused by the clause against it."

This should be interesting to Pittsburg fans who may not know that some of the Pirate players, in St. Louis at least, were lifting the "lid" before Manager Fred Clarke got his shoulder under it, showing the practicability of such a clause in the first place.

FRED CLARKE, manager of the Pittsburg National League Club, closed a deal recently with the St. Joe Western League Club, for the purchase of Outfielders Joe Kelly and George Watson.

The consideration was not announced, except that money and players were involved. Each man is hitting above the .300 mark, but Watson is now out of the game with a broken leg. They will report to Pittsburg next spring.

WHITEY ALPERMAN never tires of telling stories of the great, perhaps the greatest, player the world has ever known.

"One night," said Whitey, the other day, "when Kelly was with the old Chicago team, a half-dozen carriages had been ordered by the late Al Johnson to take the players for a ride about the city.

"As the players waited in the hotel a down-and-out fan came wandering in, told Kelly the story of his hardships.

"Kelly went to Johnson.

"'How much will these carriages cost us?' he asked.

"'Oh, I suppose about $35 or $40,' said Al.

"'All right,' said Kel, 'let's call it off and give the money to this old scout.' And it was done.

"Another time," continued Alperman, "Kelly shouted to an umpire: 'Don't fine me, Mr. Ump!' The official stood glaring at him muttering threats of a $50 assessment.

"'Don't fine me,' repeated Mike. 'Fine one of those tight wads, there. It will teach him a lesson. It won't me. If you take $50 away from me, you take the drinks and cigars away from a lot of fellows who are waiting for me at the hotel.'"

* * *

THERE'LL be no hidden ball trick victims among the Naps this season unless some one gets careless and forgets Birmingham's instructions. The Naps are directed to hug bases until the opposing pitcher takes his position at the slab, unless they positively know where the ball is.

If the pitcher should take his position on the rubber and the then hidden ball trick be tried by an opposing player, the base runners would move up a base. The taking of the pitching position without being able to deliver the ball would constitute a balk as soon as the pitcher took down his hands.

JOE AGLER has the happy knack of being able to parry inconvenient interruptions with some smart retort that immediately quashes the opposition. And Joe is game to the core. He was playing in a rather noisy game a few years ago, and after a short time a big chunk of wood was thrown at him. Fortunately, the aim was bad, and it fell harmlessly on the platform.

Agler picked it up and showed it to the spectators.

"Good heavens!" he exclaimed in tones of mock anxiety, "one of you fans has lost your head!"

Lee Magee Is Crack Of Cardinals' Team

ST. LOUIS, June 28.—"If I had a few more like Magee" is the substance of a prayerful wish that lingers in the mind of Manager Miller Huggins, of the St. Louis National League team, after many a close game dropped by the Cardinals in which Lee Magee, the speedy young left fielder, has put up a beautiful all-around game, to the exclusion of most of his teammates.

The left fielder of the Cardinals is rightly entitled to this oft repeated, yet unspoken compliment. Magee has all the characteristics to a marked degree of an up-to-date ball player—the speedy kind. He is by far the fastest man on the Cardinal team and one of the best all-around players Manager Huggins has in his line-up. He will take all kinds of chances on the bases and has won many games by his fleetness alone.

MANDOT PICKS RITCHIE TO DEFEAT JOE RIVERS

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 28.—They say a fighter's opinion of another fighter does not amount to a snap. If you want to find out for yourself remember what is written in the following paragraph and think of it when the time comes:

"Joe Mandot, one of the brainiest fighters of the day, picks Willie Ritchie to beat Joe Rivers, and says Leachie Cross will stop Bud Anderson owing to Cross' tremendous power to hit."

See how near Joe comes.

GOPHERS WILL NOT MEET MICHIGAN NEXT FALL

MINNEAPOLIS, June 28.—The University of Minnesota will not meet Michigan on the football field next fall. This was announced to-day by the athletic authorities at the university. The date held open for the possible scheduling of Michigan October 25, has been given to the University of North Dakota. This precludes any possibility of a resumption of football relations with Michigan until at least another year.

RICKEY TO SCOUT FOR BROWNS

ST. LOUIS, June 28.—Branch Rickey, former catcher in both big leagues, who coached the University of Michigan team this year, has returned to his old job as scout for the Browns during the summer. He began work by taking to the team with him two of his Michigan stars, Pitcher Powell and Shortstop Lavans.

THORNTON WINS RIGHT TO BATTLE WITH CHAMPION

NEW ORLEANS, LA., June 28.—Tain played havoc with the rule of the Southern tennis championship games at the New Orleans Lawn Tennis Club Friday. J. B. Adoue, of Dallas, Texas, went down in defeat before Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, in straight sets, 6-4, 6-1, 6-1. This brings Thornton, the winner of the tournament, against last year's champion, Carleton Smith. This match will be played late to-day after the doubles are finished.

The only other men's matches was stopped by darkness. Only Atlantans were participants, Smith and Mansfield against Tohrnton and Grant in the semi-finals. Much to the surprise of everybody Smith and Mansfield took the first two sets of the match (which is the best three out of five sets) before the game was called.

Grima and Phelps meet Adoue and Shelton to-day. Thornton and Grant will finish their match with Mansfield and Smith before the afternoon games start. Bummerstadt is carded against Lloyd and Hochendale is opposing Strouse.

Early in the afternoon the final round in doubles between the winners of the morning matches is expected to start. Clark is carded to meet the winner of the Hochendale-Strouse match. Mrs. Monroe will meet Miss Murphy at 4 p. m. and half an hour later Thornton will meet Smith. The final round in consolations will start at 5 p. m. The forecast for to-day calls for clear weather and it is expected that the program will be carried through without hindrance.

GUNBOAT SMITH WHIPS BOER RODEL IN THIRD

NEW YORK, June 28.—Gunboat Smith, of California, last night defeated George Rodel, the South African Boer, in the third round of a scheduled ten-round bout at Madison Square Garden. After Rodel had been knocked down twice Referee Billy John stopped the bout.

HERE'S A CHANCE TO MAKE SOME REAL MONEY

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.
(Author of "The Triple Tie.")

It is now up to the readers of The Georgian who have been reading "The Triple Tie" on the magazine page to solve the problems of the novel and send in their conclusions in competition for the prizes aggregating $250 offered by this newspaper.

In this issue of The Georgian is printed the last part of Chapter 43 of "The Triple Tie." At the end of this chapter Gordon Kelly is brought on the scene again. There he is left while the readers of the story send their contributions to The Georgian. Readers will be allowed until noon of Thursday, July 3, in which to send in their answers. No communications will be considered unless they are received at The Georgian office by Thursday at noon or bear a postmark not later than that time.

The final chapters of "The Triple Tie," as written by the author, will be printed in The Georgian of Monday, July 7.

Can You Solve Them?

As an aid to the readers who desire to compete for the prizes it may be said that the problems to be solved are these:

First—How does Gordon Kelly escape from the mountaineers?

Second—What happens to Mildred Deery, the heroine?

Third—How does Gordon Kelly, who never saw a game of baseball or never played a game of baseball up to the time he asked Manager Smith, of the Atlanta Club, for a position on his team—how did Gordon Kelly learn to catch the ball and bat in the phenomenal manner he showed in the games he played at Atlanta?

Fourth—What happened when Gordon Kelly went to bat in the last half of the ninth inning in the final and deciding game of The Triple Tie when there were three on bases, two out and four runs needed for the Red Sox to win?

Fifth—What is the final ending of the story?

It is suggested that readers who desire to compete for the prizes take up the narrative where it leaves off in this issue of The Georgian and complete it as they think it ought to be completed, or as they think the author has completed it, thus solving the problems presented.

Nothing Improbable.

Every novel is a mystery, else no one would read a novel. Speculation as to how a story will "turn out" is usually what keeps a reader interested to the end. Perhaps the mysteries of "The Triple Tie" are no more mysterious than are to be found in the average novel. Certainly every one who has read "The Triple Tie" from the beginning has an idea as to how things "turned out."

It may be hinted that the author has solved the problems in a rational way—that there is nothing improbable in the author's ending of the story.

Please remember that this is not a guessing contest. Originality, literary value and analytical clearness will be largely considered in awarding the prizes. Three judges, in no way connected with The Georgian will make the awards for the best solutions of "The Triple Tie" problems.

So "go to it," readers. You have until noon of Thursday to send in your conclusions.

ATLANTA GIRL WITH 'THE GREAT AMERICAN VOICE" TO SING HERE

Miss Lalla B. Cannon.

Miss Eulalia Bright Cannon, the Atlanta girl who was designated by Professor Sergei Klibansky as possessor of "the great American voice" and awarded a $3,000-a-year grand opera scholarship, will be heard at a free concert of the Atlanta Music Festival Association at the Auditorium at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. She will sing the aria, "O Don Fatale," from "Don Carlos," the song that won her the greatest honor, perhaps, ever accorded an American vocal student.

Miss Cannon, who prefers to be known as Lalla B. Cannon, is spending her vacation with her mother, Mrs. L. C. Cannon, of 647 Peachtree Street. She is a dramatic soprano with a truly wonderful range, and unless her friends prevail upon her to give a benefit recital this will probably be her only appearance in Atlanta this summer. In August or early September she will return to New York to resume her operatic studies under Professor Klibansky, as holder of the scholarship given by a wealthy New York woman.

"I always have aspired to grand opera," Miss Cannon told a Georgian reporter yesterday. "I think it is the grandest career in the world. I have accepted the scholarship. Professor Klibansky will say how long I must study in America and when I must go to Europe and whether I shall become an opera singer. I shall do just what he says, and I do so hope he will think I am fitted for opera."

Gives Her Mother Credit.

Since it all depends on Professor Klibansky's dictum, it can be asserted dogmatically that Miss Cannon will become a grand opera star. In selecting her over 400 competitors, men, women and girls, Klibansky said her voice undoubtedly was capable of as wonderful development as any of the great sopranos now heard in Wagnerian opera.

To her mother Miss Cannon owes and freely gives the credit for the fairylike fortune by which she rose to fame overnight and her sparkling prospects for a future career. A singer from babyhood, Miss Cannon always thought she was a mezzo, and her teachers, even until a few months ago in New York, shared her belief. She wanted to sing all the time, but her mother prevailed upon her to desist, that she might not waste her powers by untutored efforts. When she went to New York to study she scrupulously refrained from vocal exertion, and although the strain of practice taxed her strength, her vocal capabilities were conserved until she sang before Klibansky and was pronounced not a mezzo, but a dramatic soprano of rare quality and power.

Since then she has sung before Madame Gadski, and the peerless diva has expressed the wish to hear her again when next she visits America. To her acceptance of her mother's advice, Miss Cannon ascribes the preservation of her voice till the fortunate meeting with Klibansky.

Fortune Came by Accident.

And here is how she sang for Klibansky and won the scholarship, as she told it to The Georgian:

"A girl friend saw in The New York American an advertisement for 'the great American voice,' inserted by Professor Klibansky. He had taught in the Berlin Conservatory, and was then an instructor in Damrosch's Conservatory, known as the Institute of Musical Art. My friend told me about the advertisement, and I went to see Professor Klibansky that afternoon. There were so many other singers there that it was late when I sang 'The Birth of Morn,' a simple song, for him. He told me to come back the next morning, and I did. I sang 'O Don Fatale,' the aria from 'Don Carlos,' and as you know, I won the scholarship."

When it is considered that the honor of being declared possessor of "the great American voice" and receiving the $3,000 annual scholarship had been promised to another girl before Miss Cannon sang for Klibansky, it readily is seen her recital before him must have convinced him she was another Jenny Lind or Adelina Patti in embryo.

The other girl was Miss Jean Vincent Cooper, of Jackson, Miss. Professor Klibansky told the wealthy patroness it would be a shame for either of the girls to miss securing the best instruction obtainable, particularly when Miss Cooper was a mezzo and Miss Cannon a soprano and each was without a peer in her own field. The patroness then agreed to duplicate her offer, and Miss Cooper and Miss Cannon each were awarded the honor and the prize.

Asked what she thought of the opera as a career for aspiring girls, Miss Cannon replied, "Really, I can't say. To tell the truth, I don't know, for I myself am not in opera yet. But I want to try it, for I think it will be splendid."

$920,630,000 IS COTTON CROP'S 1912 VALUE

Federal Report Shows the South Produced 14,313,015 Bales. Less Than 1911 Production.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The Southern cotton planter should worry. According to a bulletin soon to be issued by Director Durand, of the Bureau of Census, Department of Commerce, the cotton crop for the United States in 1912 amounted to 14,313,015 bales of 500 pounds each, and was worth the trifling sum of $920,630,000.

Although the crop last year was 11.9 per cent less than that of the previous year, it was worth $60,790,000 more than it was in 1911. This almost equals the banner year for cotton, which was in 1910, when he crop amounted to but 12,005,688 bales, 2,307,327 bales less than it did this year, but was worth $963,180,000, the most valuable crop ever raised in this country. While 1910 led in value, 1911 led in amount, the crop that year being 16,250,276 bales.

The statistics show that the cotton crop for the past four years has increased 32 per cent. When it is considered that, of the total area of the countries from which returns of cotton ginned were made, only about one-eleventh was devoted to the production of cotton in 1911 and 1912, the figures afford some idea of the possibilities of cotton production in the United States.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

To-day, or so much thereof as may be necessary, as they put it in legal phrasing, will be Joseph M. Brown's last day in the Executive office in Georgia.

However many people may view his departure, it may be set down as a fact that newspaper men generally will see him go forth to private life with their genuine good will and good wishes.

From the newspaper man's standpoint he has been in many ways a Governor among a thousand. He has been an infinite source of good "copy," and by such fruits are good Governors known in the newspaper man's world.

Governor Brown, had he elected to be a newspaper man instead of a Governor, undoubtedly would have been a star. There never has been anybody in the Executive office who could put as much "punch" into a promulgation as Governor Brown—at least, not within the memory of this writer.

Governor Brown's copy never needs editing. Whatever he has to say, he says it with the emphasis right where it belongs. When it comes to putting the "bang!" into a written document, the newspaper craft arise as a man and call "Little Joe" blessed!

Of one other thing every newspaper man coming in contact with Governor Brown seemingly is convinced—his courage.

He is the very smallest Governor physicially the State has had since Alexander H. Stephens, but he is fearless and straightforward in his utterances. He has insisted—and rightly—that he be not quoted in the public prints in important matters otherwise than directly. But when his written statements have come forth, they have been the real things!

His sense of humor is keen and his good nature irrepressible. If one grows to like him at all, one grows to like him all over. Moreover, one grows more and more to respect and esteem him as one grows more and more to know him.

It is but the simple truth to say that he has "set a pace" in the Executive office that will not be easy to follow. He has left his indelible imprint upon Georgia history, and it is safe to say that he retires with the regard and high esteem of a great majority of his fellow citizens.

Anyway, that's the way this writer feels about it.

Senator M. C. Tarver has stated positively that a bill to create the Chicamauga Judicial Circuit will be introduced in the present Legislature, refusing to say whether he or some other member from the counties affected will be the author of the bill.

From Representative Shropshire of Chattooga County, comes the suggestion of two new counties, Floyd alone remaining in the Rome circuit; Walker, Chattooga and Dade forming another circuit; Whitfield, Murray and Catoosa, a third, and Gordon and Bartown remaining in the Cherokee circuit.

The new Legislature, while promising enough, still shows its inexperience and yet hesitating quality of its membership.

When the clerk calls upon those favoring such and such a bill to stand up, practically the entire membership arises, or remains seated, as the case may be. The custom, of course, is merely to raise the hand, as a sign of voting.

One new member, remembering how easily he had squelched an adversary with a simple objection earlier in the day, yesterday entered a vociferous objection to a motion to adjourn. Naturally, he got a good laugh for his pains.

Nevertheless, the new Legislature looks like a pretty good bet.

Evidently it is composed of untried material, but that is no sure sign there is not plenty of good stuff in the makeup of it.

The real leaders of the new House are yet to be developed, but they likely are there, for all that!

"I do not expect to introduce any bill, but shall occupy the majority of my time in helping to kill some other fellow's bill," was the reply of Senator Charles E. McGregor to-day, when questioned as to any proposed legislation which he might introduce in the present session of the General Assembly.

He continued along the lines of legislation, saying: "I may introduce a resolution looking to the restoration of the old 'blueback speller' into our educational system. I shall also advocate enlarging the duties of the game wardens so as to include the enforcement of all misdemeanor laws upon the statute books, especially the prohibition law. I stand for the enforcement of all laws or their repeal."

Major McGregor is one of the most picturesque men in the General Assembly. He is a distinct type of the old-time solon, with quaint ideas about men and things here and there.

The Senator is a devoted follower of "Tom" Watson and is one of his most ardent champions upon all occasions.

Both President Anderson of the Senate and Speaker Burwell of the House are hard at work framing up the standing committees of the two houses of the General Assembly.

This is a tremendous task and requires much patience and careful consideration. Upon the composition of the various committees depends a very great deal of the Legislature's efficiency as a whole. It is necessary, therefore, that members be placed on such committees as they seem best fitted for, and the determination of that is no child's job.

Both the presiding officers hope, however, to have all committee assignments ready for promulgation by Wednesday of next week.

The Legislature is going to be swamped with Fourth of July invitations.

Already a dozen or so have been sent in, and there are more to come.

The result probably will be that the Legislature, instead of accepting any one and attending in a body some particular celebration, will divide into squads and scatter itself pretty well around all over the State.

A majority of the members likely will attend some big function in their own respective neighborhoods.

SPOT INTERESTS GIVE JULY BOOST

Week-End Shorts Cover, Steadying New Crops---Trade Waiting Bureau Report.

NEW YORK, June 28.—At the opening of the cotton market to-day the tone was quiet and first prices were erratic, being 4 points higher to 1 point lower than last night's close. The larger spot houses came into the market, bidding aggressively for July position, but offerings were limited and scattered, resulting in that option jumping 12 points, to 12.14. Other positions were given practically no support, but prices rallied 1 to 5 points from the opening, mostly in sympathy with the advance in July.

Trading, however, was very light, but the ring crowd inclined to sell on some rains which appeared on the map in Texas and increasing cloudiness in the eastern belt. Advisory warning on Texas coast says disturbance has moved from the Gulf southwest and is now centered between Corpus Christi and Del Rio. Wind and tide will subside during the day. Nice warm growing weather with very favorable indications for rains becoming more general over Sunday.

In addition to this, The Journal of Commerce declares that cotton has improved in Georgia and South Carolina during the past month, while North Carolina conditions are about the same as a month ago. Owing to a cold snap, the season is about two weeks late. Plant small, but strong. Stands poor. Cultivation good. Some insects.

The class of buying looked to be short covering over Sunday and traders evening up their line, pending the Government report, to be made public at noon Juyl 3, which will give an estimate of the cotton acreage of 1913 and the condition of the crop to June 25. The general impression seems to prevail that the market will be only a scalping affair until this report is out of the way.

At the close the market was steady, with June and July showing a net gain of 18 points and other positions generally 2 points higher than the final quotations of Friday.

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 28.—Spot people and Liverpool were credited with stopping the July notices yesterday, which were said to be about 15,000 bales.

* * *

There is not much looked for in the market until the Government reports its condition figures and the acreage estimate, which is likely to be about 3 per cent increase, while conditions are generally expected around 82 to 83 per cent. However, if the scattered long interest in July is eliminated, this option might be forced higher.

* * *

"When those in control of July believe the liquidation to be over, something is going to happen," remarked J. M. Anderson.

* * *

* * *

Whether July is a "dead duck" it is not definitely known, but brokers close to leading spot interests intimate that the fireworks are not yet over.

* * *

Sentiment is decidedly mixed and the market is in a waiting attitude, pending Bureau day.

The Journal of Commerce has the following on the condition of the cotton crops in North and South Carolina and Georgia:

"North Carolina—There is no material change in the condition from a month ago, when the report of this journal made it 78 per cent. The season is about two weeks late, due largely to cold weather. The plant is generally small and stands poor, while a number of localities are affected with lice. Cultivation is good, except in a few sections, which are grassy. Since the cool spell the weather has been more favorable and cotton is showing improvement.

"South Carolina—Owing to the recent cool spell the crop is now two to three weeks late, but since the warm weather set in the plant is growing nicely and showing improvement. The plant is small and stands generally are poor, but the fields are clean and cultivation good. Some localities, however, are in grass. With the exception of a few lice, the crop is free of insects. Percentage shows an increase over last month, when it was 69.9.

"Georgia—Conditions are very irregular and spotted in Georgia. On account of dry weather early in the season cotton was slow in germinating and the crop is now fully two to three weeks late. The plant is small, but strong and healthy. Cultivation is good and rainfall ample, but stands are generally poor and irregular. Insects are not complained of, and the weather generally is favorable. Percentage condition shows improvement over a month ago, when it was 76.3."

Dogwood, the principal source of shuttles for use in cotton mills, is growing scarcer year by a year, and various substitutes are being tried, but with no great success.

* * *

Liverpool Conference: "No resolutions passed, but conference approved American recommendation i. f. and 5 per cent actual tare and universal tape which was made. King, Neville and Francis, representing Americans' new type, like present Liverpool from middling up, about half grade lower below middling.

"It is expected that Liverpool and others will adopt new type."

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Theory mars the crop prospective and a condition handicaps the market. The talent, therefore, is idle enough to worry about environment. Bulls admit the crop over a large area is doing splendidly, but taunt their constitutional enemies with the query, 'How long would it require unfavorable weather or the boll-weevil to put it on the blink?' Bears admit that in some sections the crop is below par, but assert with a show of confidence that a continuation of good weather, with a few timely rains, will enormously improve the condition of that portion of the crop, which thus far has made least progress.

"So the talent has come to expect a Government acreage figure next Thursday showing an increase over last year of about 3 per cent and a Government condition percentage of between 82 and 83. Meanwhile, America knows about what to expect in the way of tariff changes and may begin to shape her affairs accordingly. England's trade is in excellent condition, and the rings are beginning to hear that many foreign mills are running low on stocks of raw material; that movement to secure universal cotton types seems to be making satisfactory progress for the first time in the history of the trade."

WILSON APPROVES DISSOLUTION PLAN

Big Advance Follows Report. President in Harmony With Agreement.

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Dullness pervaded the stock market at the opening to-day, most issues ranging beneath Friday's closing. Canadian Pacific declined a point on a few selling orders.

Amalgamated Copper, after opening unchanged, shaded ⅛. Union Pacific began ⅛ off, but after half an hour had sustained a net gain of ⅛. United States Steel was ⅛ lower at the outset, but later recovered. Utah Copper, Southern Pacific, Reading and Atchison made trifling fractional advances.

St. Paul commenced with a gain of ⅛, but soon lost it and scored a net decline of ⅜. Chesapeake and Ohio and Chino Copper each lost ⅛. Norfolk and Western and Pennsylvania each dropped ¼.

The curb was quiet.

Dealings in the London market were very light. American shares in London were irregular.

Announcement from Washington of the approval of an agreement of the dissolution of the Harriman merger put Union Pacific up 3¼ to 148⅞ before the close. The balance of the list was strengthened. Canadian Pacific rose to 218, for a gain of 1⅝, and Reading went to 158⅜, a net gain of 1¼.

The market closed strong.

Government bonds strong. Other bonds steady.

CHANCE WOULD QUIT IF HIS HEALTH GAVE WAY

NEW YORK, June 28.—Frank Chance will make good with the New York Yankees if his health doesn't go back on him.

Chance is no quitter. He undertook a big task in New York, but he'll get away with it unless his nervous system fails him. The least little thing would upset him last fall. They say he is doing better this year. He should stick with the Yanks and produce a winning club next year. If his health bothers him, however, he'll jump the club overnight and go back to his orange ranch in California.

TRADE SHOULD NOT IGNORE BULLISH WHEAT CONDITION

CHICAGO, June 27.—The Inter Ocean says:

"Those who are bullish on wheat say that conditions in the Northwest are such that the trade can not ignore them much longer and that, despite the impending movement of new winter wheat, its influence will be offset, and that with any further bulge in coarse grains wheat should respond.

"With corn in Oklahoma in the tassel and temperatures around 100, it is possible that continued dry, hot weather will irreparably injure the corn crop. Conservative people advise against following the advance, but favor buying on any good setback. Traders who were in the pit all day yesterday said there was a new class of investment buying which took the offerings from bulls, who were securing profits, and they are looking for higher oats prices, notwithstanding the possibility of good deliveries next month and a liberal carry-over of old oats."

SHARP DECLINE IN PRICE OF CEREALS

Good Rains Encourage Active Selling Move---Cables Weak and Sentiment Mixed.

CHICAGO, June 28.—The professionals in wheat favored the selling side this morning and prices were ½ to ⅝ cent lower. The weather map showed light rains in Canada as well as at several points in North Dakota, but none in South Dakota. A dispatch was received from Minneapolis saying that higher temperatures are expected by the Weather Bureau. Liverpool was ⅛ to ¼d higher.

Corn was unchanged to ⅛ to ¼ cent lower on profit taking by longs.

Liverpool was ¼d lower, with Argentina selling freely. A trace of rain was shown at Oklahoma City and some in Texas, but the weather throughout the belt is clear and very hot.

Oats were unchanged to a shade higher for July and a fraction lower for December.

Provisions were easier.

The entire grain list changed to one of weakness during the last half hour of to-day's session. This lowering of prices was on the selling by longs and the putting out of short lines, coupled with a lack of support. Net losses were shown of ⅛ to ⅜ cent in wheat and corn, and ¼ to ⅜ cent in oats. Hog products were lower all around.

Cash sales of wheat at Chicago were 45,000 bushels; corn 75,000 bushels, and oats 60,000.

LIVERPOOL GRAIN MARKET.

LIVERPOOL, June 28.—Wheat closed ⅛d to ¼d higher.

Corn closed ¼d lower.

WHEAT HARVESTING STOPPED.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Weather Bureau wires from Fargo: "Rains past 24 hours seem generally heavy and cover wheat territory of the State. Water to-day showing from Jamestown to Fargo. Moisture situation satisfactory for present, all things considered. Crop promise for the State about an average."

Kansas City says: "No rain anywhere. Harvesting of wheat stopped everywhere on account of heat. No rain is forecast. Temperature 84 at 8 a. m.

OPINION ON GRAIN.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Barlett, Frazier & Co: "Wheat—Local shorts covered freely on yesterday's late upturn and we see nothing in the news this morning to cause any particular strength.

"Corn—With prospects of continued warm weather over Sunday any decline in values to-day is unlikely.

"Oats—Weather conditions surrounding corn naturally apply to oats and a steady to higher market is likely to prevail.

"Provisions—Still considerable disposition on the part of longs to take profits."

QUALITY OF HOGS POOR.

CHICAGO, June 28.—There were two distinct hog markets to-day, one for qualified grades at 8.70 to 8.80, the other for packing mixed stuff from 8.65 down, the price being determined by the proportion of strictly packing hogs. Deterioration of quality is exerting its seasonable influence. The market was steady at the lowest prices of the week and live mutton trade was slumpy, owing to the arrival direct to packers of 40 cars of Southern lambs from Louisville.

The Light Brahmas Sure To Be Original "Come-back" Fowl

Evidence Shows This Popular Bird in Years 1860-90 Will Be in Limelight Soon.

From about 1860 to 1890 the Light Brahma was decidedly the classiest of our thoroughbred chickens. In the show room it was one of the first to be cooped and looked at; the last talked about. It was a thoroughbred from away back where the real thoroughbred was made. It was not one of the mushroom type of thoroughbreds; one that was seen in a great blaze of glory one day and the next day sunken clear below the line of vision because the average man could not breed it to look anything like what it was supposed to represent. It was made to stay. It originated in the good old times you read about when they made things to last and gave value received. This gives you a little idea of the quality of the Light Brahma. But as some other things have been supplanted by goods purported to be "just as good" that did not pan out in the long run, this grand old breed was forced to the wall, as it were, for more than a decade.

It has not been entirely forgotten; not by any manner of means. It has been in what the doctors would call a "comatose state," a sort of semi-conscious condition. But you could not hold such a breed in subjection any great length of time. They would not permanently down. No matter if varieties were brought forth that were reputed to be the only things wearing feathers that were worth having. People have heard things similar to that before and did not take much stock in them. So we begin to see the good old Brahma coming back. We can see its outline on the sky line. We see their onward march with that regular tread which means that there is going to be something doing in the Brahma alley, and that too at no very distant day. We see quite a number of the old guard in the line; they have been there all the while, but the column has been moving so slowly that it was almost not noticeable. Now they have a host of recruits that have put enough ginger into the old lines to set them to moving.

As one prominent old fancier said to another of the same type: "It looks a good deal like Brahmas and Langshans, doesn't it? This may not mean very much to the average layman, but to the old-time chicken fancier it means a good deal—it means that the Light Brahmas and the Black Langshans are going to be brought into prominence in the near future and enjoy much of their old-time popularity. During the past decade there have been many and many a poultry show at which there was not a specimen of either of these breeds represented. The first significant intimation the writer had of the Brahmas' reappearance was at the great New Orleans show a year ago last winter when he found a regular lay-out of them. More than a hundred of the very tip-top kind were on exhibition. It almost took our breath away to see them after so long a time without them.

At last winter's Philadelphia show the Light Brahma stood fourth in the list of entries. Now, what do you think of that? A club meeting was held at the Philadelphia show and wide interest was manifested in the grand old breed. At that time it was decided to make Boston the next rallying place for the club meet, and also for a rousing show. We predict that such will be the case, for Boston has always been the nesting ground for this breed. There are quite a number of Light Brahma breeders in the South, with as good a line of goods as can be found anywhere, so we want to put them on notice that it is a good time to begin hunting up the war paint. It is but just that you should each get your share of the trade that is bound to come to this old standby in the next few years. There is no question about it, it is going to come. As we bred the Brahmas ourselves for a good many years, we are only too glad to see them coming into their own. They are deserving.

Frank P. Johnson, Indianapolis, Ind., is secretary of the club, so if you want to know more about what they are going to do better write to him. In the meantime, see what you can do in producing some good Brahmas.

Judge F. J. Marshall: What is the matter with my little chicks? They make a strange noise like they can not breathe good or like there was something in their windpipe. Please give me a remedy. I am raising them without a mother. They have free range and plenty of room in the sleeping house.
MRS. L. S
Chester, S. C.
Reply: Your chicks have colds, bordering on roup. There are roup remedies galore; in fact, there are so many nostrums that the average amateur is all at sea. The following is one of the best for young chicks, and at the same time it is harmless: Extract of witch hazel, 4 tablespoonfuls; carbolic acid, 3 drops; water, 2 tablespoonfuls. A convenient way to use it is in a good spring bottom oil can, as used with the sewing machine. One squeeze of the can into each nostril and into the mouth twice daily will do much to relieve the catarrhal condition. Remove the sick from the well. Let the surroundings be clean.

OUR NORTH SIDE AND INMAN PARK DELIVERIES LEAVE THE STORE AT 9:30; SOUTH SIDE AND WEST END AT 2 P. M. GOODS ORDERED BEFORE THESE HOURS WILL BE DELIVERED SAME DAY.

CHICKENS need more care and attention the next two or three months than any other time during the year. It is perfectly natural for chickens to have lice and mites, and unless you look after them they will multiply in such quantities to prove profitable. The little chicks will not reach the growth they should and the hens will not lay if they are covered with these pests. We have ties that you can not expect your flock to remedies that will positively get rid of them and the cost is very little. For 35c you can get a can of either Lee's, Conkey's or Pratt's Lice Liquid and we will guarantee either of these preparations to give entire satisfaction.

WE have just gotten in a lot of nice, fresh, clean Red Comb Feed. The price for scratch and mash is $2.25 per 100 pounds.

"My Field the World"--A Fine Motto

(Copyright, 1913.)

A great wonder of the deep is the German ship Imperator, which arrived in America the other day.

What a chapter old Job could have talked about that ship if he had seen it!

Think of a ship with three wireless operators working night and day, ALWAYS ABLE TO TALK TO ONE SIDE OR THE OTHER OF THE OCEAN. Think of a ship with nine decks, seven for first-class passengers—a monstrosity almost as complicated as Dante's hell.

Think of a ship with six elevators running up and down, suites of twelve rooms, anchors that weigh more than twenty-five thousand pounds each, a ship with swimming tanks, greenhouses and a population equal to that of a small city.

Poor old "Behemoth," who impressed Job so deeply, would seem a very small thing compared to this modern Behemoth. The original Behemoth, who "drinketh up a river and hasteth not," could be tucked away in one of the coal bunkers of the Imperator, or burned up in one of the big furnaces and not noticed.

There are many wonderful things about that wonderful ship, with her five captains commanded by an admiral.

She is a great tribute to the power of the German people, a tribute to organization, a proof of the wonderful things that can be accomplished by men that are determined to excel.

But the best thing of all about this great ship is the motto written at her prow, "My field the world." That is a good motto, good for this ship that sails the ocean, good for the great philosopher, Bacon, when he said, "I have taken all knowledge for my province," and "nothing that affects man can be foreign to me."

It is a big motto, "My field the world." But not too big for a man who realizes that the world is man's property, his home and his garden, to be developed and owned by him, to be the firm ground from which he shall look out and study the real world, which is the infinite universe.

Every man worthy of the name should have in his mind that motto of the big ship, "My field the world," and interest himself in the world's doings, interest himself in the progress of the race, in its future and in its past, and determine to be a man whose field really IS the world, and not a mouse, whose field is the corner of some back yard.

A Shaken Confidence Must Be Restored

It will be a relief to the whole country to learn that the Diggs-Caminetti "white-slave" prosecutions in California are to be pressed with due diligence, despite the private pressure brought to bear on the Attorney General and others in Washington.

Indeed, such a course was inevitable the moment District Attorney John L. McNab, of the Northern District of California, made public his courageous letter of resignation to the President, thereby attracting public attention to a grave judicial scandal.

The expression of public opinion was both instant, widespread and practically unanimous. A flood of telegrams poured into the White House.

IT WILL TAKE MORE THAN AN ORDER FROM THE PRESIDENT to go ahead with all seemly speed with these cases, an order penned AFTER a storm of popular indignation had broken, TO RESTORE CONFIDENCE in the impartial workings of those courts of justice over which the Federal authorities have control and in those other officers of the Government who have shown such lax judgment on so serious an occasion.

Congress has the very urgent duty before it of not only establishing all the facts but also of FIXING THE RESPONSIBILITY AND THE BLAME.

:: THE OTHERS ::

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

ONE is the pride of the college,
Handsome and sunny and clever
Joking while gathering knowledge,
Slaving and worrying never.
Baseball and football and rowing,
Sanscrit and Latin and Greek—
Dazed by his wonderful showing,
All of the others stand meek.

One goes through life winning laurels,
Brilliant and able till death;
Proof against foes and their quarrels,
Crushing them all with a breath.
Much as a baby blows bubbles
One leaps along in the race,
Laughing at heartaches and troubles
All of the others must face.

This is a toast to the others,
Hewing their pathway through life—
All the less fortunate brothers
Comrades of sorrow and strife.
Standing and waiting and hoping,
Strangers to Fame and its pride,
Here's to the patiently groping!
Here's to the thousands that tried!

The Automobile

Everything Being Done to Make Automobiles Safe, He Says. They Have Done Wonders for American Roads.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

I WAS almost startled on seeing, in the current number of the magazine called Motor, a picture of an automobile furnished with the new French device of movable electric eyes!

Even when the auto's great glaring eyes are fixed in direction its resemblance at night to a demon of unimaginable swiftness and power is stunning, and one gets out of its way with panicky haste. But when it bears on each side of its head a glowing eye, which turns magically in all directions, searching out the fleeing pedestrian in his retreat by the fence or the hedge, and detecting every obstruction along the borders of its way, the verisimilitude is complete. Man has never yet made anything so thrillingly lifelike, but inspired with a life that seems more than human!

Everything Done for Safety.

Yet while, to the excited imagination, these movable mechanical eyes may increase the terror of the auto rushing through the night, they are, for all wanderers in the ways, all nomads of the night, a means and an assurance of greater safety. They proclaim, again, that the modern demon of the road is a kindly demon, who means no harm, although he speeds so swiftly, and who would not, willingly, hurt a hair of our heads. He is as desirous as are we who look upon him with fear, and jump at his croaking voice, to avoid all evil.

If those who still carp at the automobile, and nurse an antagonism to it, would consider what has been done, and what is still being done—as witness this latest device—to eliminate the peculiar dangers which its invention has introduced into the highways, they would find themselves taking a more philosophical view of things, and would cease their opposition to one of the greatest advances in locomotion that science has ever promoted. You have only to glance through the pages of the magazine I have mentioned in order to convince yourself that the inventors and manufacturers of auto vehicles hold nothing more dear than the question of safety; safety for those who ride and for those who only look upon the riders.

Put Bad Roads Out of Business.

It is the same with the roads themselves. Unthinking people sometimes blame the automobile for damaging the roads—as if most of the roads that we had before its arrival COULD be damaged! But, look at the other side of the affair. Only a few years ago every American traveling in Europe blushed at the thought of the painful contrast between the roads there and most of those that he was accustomed to at home. He could only console himself by the reflection that we were subduing a new continent, and required time to complete the work in good shape.

Then came the auto, and what has been the result? Within a few short years, solely by the stimulus that it has imparted, we have developed thousands upon thousands of miles of roadways that France herself might be proud of. This single invention has caused a leap of improvement that hundreds of years of ordinary progress would not have produced. The automobile has put the old, muddy, rutty, all but impassable roads of our fathers out of commission, and the whole country smiles with the improvement, and grows richer because of it.

Speaking of French roads, I read another interesting thing, which must be set down entirely to the credit of the automobile. We are now building better roads than they have in France, and the reason is because we have built them from the beginning with the needs of the auto in view. It has taught us how to build them. Many of the French roads are beginning to deteriorate. It is the automobile that has searched out and revealed their weak points. The growing use of auto-carriages of all kinds in the French army has brought a strain to bear upon the roads lying in the districts where the threat of invasion causes frequent military maneuvers in time of peace—a strain that was not foreseen when the roads were constructed—and some of them are proving unable to bear it.

Recognizes Their Value.

What will the French do? Will they abandon the army autos, or intermit the maneuvers? To do so would be to invite instant conquest of their country. No, they will reconstruct the roads, and increase the number of their auto cars. They know the inestimable value of the good demon that has come to revolutionize transportation on this planet, and the roads will have to be made durable enough to carry him on his civilizing and peace-promoting way; for the auto, in its manner, is as great a force for universal peace as is the strong battleship. Everything that links the world together makes for universal brotherhood, and the faster we travel the richer and more contented we become.

:: The Ionian Isles ::

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

IT was just 49 years ago that the Parliament of England with a never-to-be-forgotten magnanimity, resolved to return the Ionian Isles to their oldtime owners, the Greeks.

By the Treaty of Paris, in 1815, the high contracting parties, Great Britain, Russia, Austria and Prussia, agreed to place the isles under the exclusive protection of Great Britain. This agreement was reached not because it was desired by the others, but because it was demanded by Great Britain, the demand being backed by the British navy.

It was in these "Isles of Greece," Corfu, Zanta, Santa Maura, Ithaca and the rest, that modern Greek liberty had its birth, and thanks to England, it was there that it grew to the stately proportions of later years. Great Britain, through her protectorate, kept the islands safe from Turkish depredations, and in 1864 gave them to Greece.

On May 30 of that year the Lord High Commissioner of Great Britain handed over the archives to the Greek plenipotentiary, and on June 6 King George made his entry into Corfu.

Let it be remembered that this Corfu is none other than the ancient Coreyra—the little piece of earth that is responsible for the greatest calamity that ever overtook the human race. Coreyra brought on the Peloponnesian war between Sparta and Athens and their allies, the result of which was the ruin of Athens and the arrest of her wonderful civilization. Had it not been for that war the Athenian genius would have kept on with its development for we know not how long a period, and the gain to humanity would have been inconceivably great. From the cultural standpoint Athens was Greece. It was the home of the art, science, philosophy and eloquence, which made Greece immortal, and when Athens went down all that was not barbarism went down along with her.

Because Coreyra appealed to Sparta to help her fight Athens, and because, as a consequence of the fight, Athens was beaten and her empire practically wiped out, the harm was done to mankind that can never be estimated. It took the world eighteen hundred years to recover, even in part, that which was lost through the fatal Peloponnesian war.

COFFEE.

Editor The Georgian:

What is the matter with the pure food inspector? Is he asleep on his job, that so many brands of adulterated coffee are suffered to be sold to the poor? Ever so many of them have chicory; and in color give a beautiful nut-brown result, but to an inveterate drinker of coffee they are as lifeless as turnip soup.

Suppose the inspector thinks that if people know what they are buying, it is all right. But how about the boarder, when it is passed off on him for coffee? And the temptation is too great, these days of high-priced food to buy the cheaper article.

CAR SERVICE AND STORMS.

Editor The Georgian:

It seems to me the public has a just cause of complaint regarding the street car service which is given them in this city during thunderstorms. It has, during the past few years, become the custom of the Georgia Railway and Power Company to suspend service during even very mild thunderstorms, and with proper equipment this practice seems to be without reason or excuse.

So far as my observation goes, it is not done in any other first-class town, and no sufficient reason has ever been given for doing it in Atlanta. People need the street car service as much when there is a rainstorm accompanied by lightning as at other times.

Goethals Says Canal Is Air-Bomb Proof

NEW YORK, June 28.—Colonel George Goethals has returned to Panama. He will remain on the Isthmus until the first ship has passed through the canal. The Colonel laughed at the idea some aviators have they can destroy the Gatun lock by dropping powerful bombs from aircraft.

"I'd like to post a forfeit no aviator could do any serious damage," said Colonel Goethals. "We have not done our work on the locks without care and forethought. Attack from an aircraft has been considered in all the construction work."

Dr. Percy Starnes To Leave Atlanta

Dr. Percy J. Starnes, who for three years has been city organist in Atlanta, resigned Saturday, effective August 1. Dr. Starnes explained that the Atlanta Music Festival Association will be without funds after that date and that he did not care to ask for public subscriptions.

After a vacation Dr. Starnes will go on a concert tour of Canada and Eastern cities.

THE WEATHER.

Forecast for Atlanta and Georgia—Generally fair Saturday and Sunday.

Warning Against Carelessness of Pupils Driven Home—Classmates Honor Mary Tribble.

Though the home is dark with sorrow, and the death of the little girl has left a void that can never be filled, the parents and friends of little Mary Tribble, 7-year-old victim of colored crayon, find a measure of comfort to-day in the thought that her fate has driven home with terrible earnestness a lesson that will be of incalculable benefit to hundreds of other school children.

The death of the child is to be the price of increased vigilance by the teachers of scores of Atlanta schools in watching over their young charges, and greater care by the pupils.

Many of the teachers of the Atlanta schools have already begun to formulate plans and rules that will minimize the danger to the children in handling colored chalk, and other objects likely to contain poison.

The funeral of the little girl Friday was one of the saddest ever held in East Atlanta. A company of Mary's little friends members of her school and Sunday school classes, gathered at the East Side Baptist Tabernacle to pay a last tribute of love.

They brought great bunches of wild flowers, plucked with their own hands in the nearby woods where Mary had romped with them, and placed them on her coffin. As the funeral procession entered the church, the little boys and girls lined up on either side of the door, and the body of the little girl was carried slowly between the lines of those she loved and who loved her.

WIFE AGAIN FORGIVES KEEFER

Causes Broker's Arrest on Charge of Assaulting Son, Then Says He Can Go Free.

"I don't want a divorce; I want to remain Mrs. Keefer. I shall let my husband go in peace," declared Mrs. David H. Keefer, of 80 East Fourteenth Street, who has sworn out a warrant against the well-known broker, charging him with assault and battery on her son, Jack Macy, Friday night.

The case in which Keefer, Mrs. Keefer and son, Jack Macy, and Plennie Miner, deputy sheriff, figured will be aired in Police Court Saturday afternoon.

"I did fly at his throat last night—to kill him," declared Mrs. Keefer Saturday morning with vehemence, "but he warded off the blow and struck me a full blow on the breast. I told him, too, to leave town immediately or I would fill him with bullet holes—but I shall not. I shall sit still in the boat; I shall let him go in peace, for all I want is protection. And that I will have."

Broker and Wife Clash.

The latest sensation in connection with the stormy marital relations of Mr. and Mrs. Keefer, which have furnished "live copy" for papers all the way from Georgia to New York and back again, occurred at a club Friday night about 10 o'clock, when Keefer called with a deputy sheriff to serve papers on his stepson, Jack Macy, to gain possession of a $5,000 automobile.

In the trouble which followed Keefer and young Macy exchanged blows which left marks. Mr. and Mrs. Keefer also clashed. Macy said Saturday morning Keefer struck him first while Deputy Sheriff Miner was attempting to handcuff him. Keefer denies this.

But Mrs. Keefer's own story, as she told it to a reporter for The Georgian Saturday morning, is as follows:

"I returned to New York from Paris in the early part of 1906," said she, "to find there, in my father's home, my old friend and future husband, David H. Keefer.

"He was very ill, and, as I looked there upon his frail form, somehow or other I fancied I saw my former husband and it gave me new courage, new life, for I myself had come from Paris, as I thought, to die.

"He had been a dear friend to me and to Mr. Macy while we were living in Thomasville, Ga., and following Mr. Macy's death he had corresponded with me across the waters.

"And oh those beautiful letters which he wrote to me. How could I think otherwise than that he really loved me from the very depths of his heart?

"A man surely loves a woman if he corresponds in such a way all the way across the waters, don't you think?

Tells About "Real Man."

"So we were married shortly after my return to my father's home. Three days after our wedding I beheld the real man—he actually told me that he believed woman was created only for downfall at the hands of man.

"From that time on he was a beast and more than once he would have allowed me to starve to death if he could. Then came the divorce proceedings in New York State, in which there was much legal juggling at my expense—and that I will not countenance whatever else happens. The scene shifted from New York to Georgia, where I won in the preliminary skirmish—and then he, my recreant husband, came to me to beg forgiveness.

"I forgave—I am always willing to do that—but soon the same old scenes were being enacted. Mr. Keefer, as brilliant as he was and is, was always fond of the dazzle, the things purely of this life.

They Separate Again.

"He was found in a hotel with another woman. He came home drunk repeatedly. Things went from bad to worse, and finally we separated. He went away. I remained in New York."

Capital's Tyranny Caused Unionism, Says E. H. Walker

Edward H. Walker, candidate for Governor in the race with Hoke Smith and Joseph M. Brown, has issued a statement defending unionism in reply to Governor Brown.

"To concentrate indescribable wealth of millions of dollars into the possession of one man," he says, "two things are necessary. First, the law must be broken. Most of the great fortunes of to-day rest on a foundation of bribery, corruption and defiance of the law. Second, the assembling of these big fortunes had to be done by exploiting the lifetime productivity of hundreds of thousands of laborers.

"The Government's failure to protect labor from this crushing greed forced labor to protect itself."

HOOPER GETS NEW FRANK EVIDENCE

Conley's Admissions Strengthen Rumor He Saw Mary Phagan Just Before Slaying.

Frank A. Hooper, associated with Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution of Leo M. Frank on the charge of strangling Mary Phagan, admitted Saturday that Jim Conley, negro sweeper at the National Pencil Factory, had made important additions to the story of his part in the murder mystery and had told of circumstances on the day of the crime which he had revealed in none of his previous statements.

A persistent report that Conley had made the startling admission that he had seen Mary Phagan enter the factory on the day she was slain arose at the time the negro was questioned more than an hour by Solicitor Dorsey early in the week, and this rumor was heightened after Attorney Hooper's interview with the negro Friday.

In all of his statements to the detectives Conley denied he saw the girl at all on the day of the crime until he was horrified by the sight of her dead body lying in the rear of the second floor where he was directed by Leo Frank. Solicitor Dorsey is believed to have wrung the statement from him that he did see Mary Phagan when she came in the door of the factory and went to the second floor to Frank's office.

Hooper Mum on Topic.

Mr. Hooper refused either to affirm or deny this report, declaring that his connection with the case was so recent that he would not be warranted in making any definite statement for publication in reference to the evidence in the possession of the prosecution.

His attention was called to the fact that while in all of the published statements of Conley the negro denied seeing Mary Phagan go into the factory, no one connected with the prosecution could now be induced to say that he still stuck to this particular and puzzling feature of his story. Mr. Hooper, however, would make no comment on the circumstance.

He contented himself with the general assertion that the State has a big stack of evidence of which the defense is in entire ignorance and of which they will remain in ignorance until it is presented when Frank is placed on trial for his life.

"I went to the police station yesterday merely for the purpose of having Conley rehearse his story to me," said Mr. Hooper. "It is true that he told me of a number of circumstances of which I had been in ignorance before, circumstances which have a most important bearing on the case. He made additions to his story which, while they were along the same general line as his last affidavit, gave a detail that assisted me remarkably in getting a much clearer idea of the events as they happened on that day.

Will Be Revealed at Trial.

"I can not tell what they were. They will be revealed when the trial is in actual progress. Mr. Dorsey has guarded his evidence carefully and has refrained from trying his case in the papers. If it were not presumptuous for me to step in and give this evidence away to the public and to the defense it would at least be most unwise.

Mr. Hooper said Solicitor Dorsey had built up a convincing case against the factory superintendent, one into which the defense would have extreme difficulty in injecting the element of "reasonable doubt."

RIGID PROBE PUSHED BY BEAVERS

Charges of Corruption Made by Ex-Bluecoat, Who Promises Complete Expose.

That four more policemen would be added to the list of four already suspended in Atlanta's sensational police scandal was made known shortly after noon Saturday.

The latest names involved in the revelations of alleged police corruption are J. P. Born, J. E. McDaniel, Mack C. Folde and J. J. Jackson. The order was given that they be notified of their suspension as soon as they reported for duty on Saturday.

Those suspenedd Friday on the charge of having visited and drunk liquor in the negro disorderly house at the rear of 127 Auburn Avenue were Policeman L. W. Evans and R. T. David and Call Officers C. H. Bailey and R. A. Wood.

Based on Woman's Story.

The suspensions made Saturday came almost entirely as the result of a story told at police headquarters by Ola Bradley, the negro woman who conducts the notorious resort. She made a signed statement in which the names of Born, Folds and Jackson figured prominently.

She related that Born and Folds were in her place one Sunday morning about three months ago. The men became involved in an argument, and she recalled that one of the men called the other a liar. On this, she said, Folds made an effort to get his revolver.

She was prevented by Claude Gray, a young negro living at the house.

Captain Poole, who is conducting the investigation into the scandal under the direction of Chief Beavers, found the negro woman who is alleged to have been the cause of the dispute. She bore out the statement of Ola Bradley and also of Claude Gray, who was arrested as a witness early Saturday morning.

The Bradley woman, in telling of the visits of Jackson and McDaniel to her place, said that last Monday she gave Jackson two bottles of beer to drink and that McDaniel urged Jackson not to drink it. All of the men deny they are guilty of wrong-doing and say that they were at the place only for the purpose of getting evidence. McDaniel says that he never saw Jackson drink.

Gray is said to have full knowledge of a disgraceful affair which took place in the resort two weeks ago when two policemen are alleged to have become involved in a quarrel. The officers, it is reported, would have come to blows had not Gray stepped in between them and separated them.

Gray will be closely questioned today in the expectation that he will give the Chief the names of a number of other policemen who have been in the habit of making visits there.

"I am going to give Gray a thorough grilling," said the Chief. "The whole truth is what I am after, regardless of how big a scandal is stirred up by the revelations. All of the men are going to get a fair hearing. If these reports are erroneous or falsified, they will have the opportunity to show it."

Wood's Defense.

Wood, who tendered his resignation Saturday morning, said that he and his partner, Bailey, had stopped in at the negro resort to see that everything was all right. He declared that neither of them drank intoxicants there and that when Moon looked in through the window Bailey was drinking a glass of ice water the negro woman had poured for him.

"The other two officers, David and Evans, who have been suspended with us, were not even in the house," said Wood. "The injustice of it lies in the fact that the police department has

Felder To Be Tried With Lanford, but No Date Is Set Yet

Attorney T. B. Felder and Chief Detective Newport A. Lanford will be tried at the same time in the State's case against them for criminal libel, although no definite plans have been made by the Solicitor as to the date for the trial or whether to transfer the cases to the City Court.

Solicitor Dorsey said he had not yet considered going to trial in the matter, and would not have an opportunity to do so for several days.

The report was current in court circles, however, that the two cases would be transferred to the City Court and probably be tried before the Frank trial.

Mothers' Congress Appeals for Milk To Save the Babies

"Save the Babies" is the cry sent up by Atlanta to join with that of the entire nation through the hot summer months. Every mail continues to bring to the Mothers' Congress here supplications for milk. The demand is far greater than the supply.

"Do not delay your aid," the Mothers' Congress appeal. "It may come too late. Won't you give it to them by sending in a contribution for the milk fund?"

Baroness Arrives to Wed St. Louis Man

NEW YORK, June 28.—Baroness Kalinewski, accompanied by her brother, Baron Heinrich Kalinewski, arrived here to-day on the Kaiser Auguste Victoria, and said, much to her brother's disgust, she is en route to St. Louis, where she is to marry James Hurley, a prominent railroad man of that city. Their courtship began a year ago in France when their autos came near colliding.

When asked if he thought he might not marry an American before he left this country, the Baron's only comment was, "Not for mine."

TAX SYSTEM SCORED BY SLATON

Revision of Criminal and Other Laws Also Urged in Executive's Inaugural Address.

Drastic action toward the rejuvenation and correction of Georgia's laws, especially taxation and the Criminal Code, were recommendations which marked the inaugural address of John Marshall Slaton upon his induction into the gubernatorial office in the House of Representatives before the two bodies of the General Assembly and hundreds of visitors at noon Saturday.

The new Chief Executive drew out in sharp contrast the present system of appropriations and taxation and declared the system was wrong.

He brought up for bitter arraignment the lack of school funds, which he termed the lack of a proper foundation for future citizenship of the State. He advocated an inheritance tax, an increased occupation tax upon corporations and a general equalization of taxation throughout the Commonwealth.

Drain Not Checked, He Says.

He called attention to the loss of millions of dollars through abandonment of tax measures such as that on liquor, the dog tax and others, and declared that no substitute for this drain had been made. He recommended increases in taxation for the school fund and the pension fund, and in concluding pointed to a general tide of prosperity which he declared was to pass over Georgia.

In part, Governor Slaton said:

Our system is wrong. The Legislature can appropriate what it pleases, and the tax rate remains the same. The Legislator has made himself a favorite with his constituency by voting for every popular appropriations and nothing suffers but the State's credit.

Unless some check be made, an increase of revenue will be of no avail in preventing the financial embarrassment of the State. Under the enthusiasm of the moment one appropriation bill may exhaust it.

More than four-fifths of the States of the Union derive revenue from what is known as an inheritance tax. I am informed that this tax is the subject of least complaint.

This form of tax has been approved by the highest authorities and is one of the easiest borne and subject to fewer hardships than any other. The inheritance tax is to some extent a corrective.

Corporation Taxation.

Prior to the year 1905, many efforts were made to collect an occupation tax from corporations. Governor Terrell, in his message of the year 1905, recommended a tentative privilege tax based on capital stock of $100,000 per year on corporations having a capital of $1,000,000, or over. He anticipated from this source more than $100,000 a year, and thought that such sum could reasonably be expected without a hardship. The State, however, has not received one-half this sum, and during the year 1913 the estimated revenue from this source is $48,000.

I recommend that the maximum occupation tax on corporations having $1,000,000 capital and over be $200 per annum, and the tax on corporations of less capital be adjusted accordingly.

Equalization of taxes, either through the enforcement of present laws, or new correctives, so that each may bear his proportionate burden, would not mean the increase of taxes upon any one now performing his duty, but would rather mean the lightening of his unfair portion of the load. I commend this subject to your attention.

Bonded Debt To Be Refunded.

An additional reason for establishing and maintaining the State's finances on a sound basis is the necessity of making provision for more than one-half of the entire bonded debt of the State, maturing in 1915. This is an imperative duty resting on this Legislature.

No sinking fund was provided by law to retire the bonds aggregating $3,679,000 which are due in 1915. The entire State's debt is $6,452,500, which does not include the obligations to the University, amounting to $291,500, and the Landscript Fund of $90,000.

All the debt of $6,452,500 is provided for, or will be provided for, by the sinking fund required to be raised annually until the debt is paid off, except the

$3,675,000 which falls due in May and July, 1915.

If refunding bonds were issued in 1915, making the first $100,000 fall due in 1935, then the sinking fund could be made to run continuously and retire each year, until paid, $100,000 of this series of 1915 refunding bonds.

This plan would seem advisable in order to relieve the treasury and the people of the increased burden at this time, unless financial conditions at the time of the sale of the bonds should demand that their redemption begin at an earlier period in order to effectuate their more satisfactory disposition.

Leading bond men in financial centers have stated that if they were certified by some responsible trust company, thus assuring their genuineness, and guarding against their being counterfeited, and if their validity were approved by attorneys who are specialists in this line, the expense would be more than repaid in the price that could be obtained. Certainly no safer investment can be afforded than these bonds.

I recommend that through your appropriate committees you consider at once the matter of refunding the State's indebtedness above referred to.

Registration of Voters.

We believe the present registration law should be so amended that when a voter has once proven his qualification by registering and being enrolled, he shall remain a registered voter unless disqualified for cause due to himself.

The foregoing extract from the last platform upon which I was elected, expresses a principle which deserves universal acceptance. It contemplates no change of the constitution which provides for the qualification of the voter.

The farmers of a neighborhood have duly registered, but the succeeding year when busy with their crops, they can not send their taxes to the collector by some neighbor going to town, except on penalty of being disfranchised.

The traveling men who have registered one year can not send their remittance the next year to the proper officer, and so it is with men in every calling who perform civic duties and who have overlooked the last day of registration, or have been prevented from registering anew by compelling reasons. The professional politician never forgets it.

I recommend that the present registration law be amended to correct the injustice indicated. It would always be provided that the voter must have paid his taxes and not subjected himself to any of the disqualifications provided by law.

Highways.

It is needless to impress upon you the importance of our highways. Their value is an asset of the entire State. An intelligent Highway Commission, or Commissioner, clothed with proper authority, could be the means of untold benefit in suggesting proper methods of building the road adapted to the locality, or in solving the problems of engineering which might arise in various sections.

I call your attention to the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the lease of which terminates in 1919. No one, I apprehend, would or should consider its sale, but the problem of its disposition should be considered by a commission with directions to report its recommendations and its reasons therefor.

To delay this matter will mean to put the State at the inexcusable disadvantage of unpreparedness when the time arrives for imperative action.

The Criminal Code.

One of the fundamental purposes of government is the protection of life and safety of the citizen. If the rules of evidence are so shaped as to prevent the discovery of the truth, and if the State is deprived of the means of sifting the facts, the judges and juries are not to be blamed if crimes are allowed to go unpunished.

It is an anomaly that a defendant should take the stand, make any statement that he sees fit or that his shrewd lawyer has prepared, andbeing immune from cross-examination, demand that the judge shall charge the jury that they may accept his unsworn statement in preference to all the evidence in the case.

His carefully written statement may contain all manner of prejudiced assertions which constitute no defense, but the State is not allowed to disprove or to question them. The jury is by law instructed that they may consider them. Without introducing evidence, in order that his attorney may make the last speech, he declares that he can prove assertions by various witnesses, often disreputable men, and challenges the Solicitor General to introduce them. This can not be done because the State can not vouch for their character.

I, therefore, recommend that a law be passed abolishing the defendant's statement, and providing in its place that he be sworn as a witness, if he desires, but his failure to be so sworn be not subject to adverse comment by prosecuting counsel. This is in accordance with current Federal and State law.

The legislation in Georgia against carrying concealed weapons has in recent years been conspicuous. It has been suggested by the law of self-preservation. Daily we read of men who have shot others, and have been acquitted on the old statement that the deceased threw his hand on his hip pocket, and the defendant shot in fear of his life. When searched, the dead man was found generally unarmed.

If the carrying of concealed weapons were made a felony, subject to be reduced to a misdemeanor by either judge or jury, the deterrent effect of such a law would be the saving of many a life. I earnestly recommend to you the consideration of this question.

Banking Laws.

The banks of a State perform public functions, and as such are properly subjected to governmental supervision. The bankers of the State, with the desire of maintaining a high standard of responsibility and of affording guarantees against improvident management, that imperil the money of the people, recommend legislation looking to the accomplishment of these objects. I commend this subject as one worthy of your serious consideration.

My predecessors have recommended the creation of the position of State Auditor, and in this recommendation I heartily concur. His services could be utilized in checking the cost of new buildings for which requests may be made by the various institutions. Those who have served on the appropriations committees are aware of the inadequate facilities of the State in arriving at the amount of the necessary expenditures.

The Constitution.

The Constitution is the expression of the supreme law of the land. It can only be changed by the people speaking in their sovereign capacity. In order that they may vote intelligently on any proposition it is essential that they understand it. I recommend that in proposing Constitutional amendments, you plainly indicate the proposition to the voter in such language that he may understand the meaning of the question submitted.

My predecessor has called attention to the fact that some of the agricultural schools are well attended, while others receive little patronage, whether due to the matter of location or lack of interest, or from what cause, I am unable to say. Each obtains the same appropriation from the State for maintenance. I recommend that you investigate their condition, and apply the proper remedies.

Administration of Oath Made Simple Ceremony.

With the simplest ceremonies in the history of the State, marked by the absence of all military display and red tape, John Marshall Slaton became Governor of the State of Georgia in the hall of the House of Representatives of the State Capitol Saturday at 12 o'clock noon, succeeding Governor Joseph M. Brown.

The joint committee on inaugural arrangements selected from the memberships of the Senate and the House has conformed to the expressed desires of Governor-elect Slaton in preparing for his induction into office, and there is none of the pomp and excitement attending previous gubernatorial inaugurations. Within an hour or an hour and a half after the ceremonies began Governor Joseph M. Brown had relinquished his office and made preparations to retire to his Cobb County farm, and his Excellency John Marshall Slaton took his place as head of the State government.

Great Crowds Attend.

The weather of inauguration day was all that could be desired, and as early as 10 o'clock crowds of Georgians began to throng the Capitol building. Half an hour later seats in the Hall of Representatives were at a premium, and hundreds of the sightseers were forced to stand during the whole of the ceremonies.

Virtually no legislature work was done by either of the bodies of the Legislature Saturday. The House convened at 10 o'clock and the Senate at 11 o'clock. Both houses adjourned at 11:45 o'clock and the members of the Senate proceeded to the House for the inauguration ceremonies. With the Senate and the House gathered in joint session messages were sent to the retiring and incoming Governors that all was ready. Guests of honor, who included the State House officials, judges of the Supreme Court and of the Court of Appeals, ex-Governors and Federal judges, met in the executive offices with Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton. They were escorted to the House by the joint committee on arrangements, comprising Senators John T. Allen and M. E. Rushin and Representatives Crawford Wheatley, R. N. Hardeman and R. R. Blackburn. There they were seated directly in front of the Speaker's stand.

Address Closes Ceremonies.

The inauguration ceremonies were opened with invocation by Rev. John R. Robins, of the Trinity Methodist Church. Randolph Anderson, President of the Senate, presented Governor-elect John M. Slaton to the General Assembly, after which Chief Justice William H. Fish administered the oath of office. Then the Secretary of State presented to Governor Brown the Great Seal of the State of Georgia, who delivered it to Governor Slaton. The latter then in turn delivered it to the Secretary of State. The ceremonies closed with the inaugural address of Governor Slaton.

Following the inaugural Governor and Mrs. Slaton dined with Governor and Mrs. Brown at the Executive Mansion. There were present only the immediate family of Governor Slaton and Governor Brown, and of Mrs. Grant, mother of Mrs. Slaton.

At 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon Governor and Mrs. Brown will retire to their farm near Marietta, in Cobb County, and Governor and Mrs. Slaton will take possession of the Executive Mansion.

On the contrary, it continued to ascend, and the forecaster said he would not be surprised to see the 94 mark reached during the afternoon.

"We have no other noon records at hand right now," Mr. VonHerrmann said, "but my recollection is that 92 is the highest noon temperature this summer in Atlanta."

"Continued warm, with possibly thundershowers in the afternoon," is the forecast for Sunday.

MAYOR'S FRIENDS TO URGE HIM TO GIVE IN

Think He Should Drop Crematory Fight---Garbage Injunction Is Being Staved Off.

Further efforts to settle the crematory controversy between Mayor Woodward and the Council will be made Saturday by Assistant City Attorney W. D. Ellis, Jr., Councilman A. R. Colcord and Alderman J. H. Harwell. These men, friends of the Mayor, think he should drop his fight. They still hope for a compromise. Other officials declare the only course is for Council to override Mayor Woodward.

Members of the Board of Health said they were disappointed that Mayor Woodward did not attend the session Friday when the garbage situation was reviewed. A resolution was passed calling on the Mayor to approve the crematory contract.

Mayor Woodward's terse reply to this message was that Dr. W. L. Gilbert and the other members of the Board of Health who are active in the interests of the crematory should have thought of the city's health before tearing down the old crematory.

Attorney Thomas Goodwin said he was preparing to enjoin the city from hauling any more garbage to the junction of Milton Avenue and the Belt Line Railroad. Sanitary Chief Jentzen said he would be helpless if such action was taken. Mr. Goodwin promised to delay as long as he could.

MRS. STETSON DECLARES MRS. EDDY, DIVINE, STILL RULES SCIENTIST CHURCH

NEW YORK, June 28.—In a remarkable statement to-day Mrs. Augusta Stetson, founder of the First Christian Science Church in this city, denied she is seeking to succeed Mrs. Baker G. Eddy, and declared that Mrs. Eddy, like Jesus Christ, did not die as other mortals die, but passed into a spiritual life and still ules as the head of the universal church.

Mrs. Stetson claims to be the spiritual head of the branch church, but says Mrs. Eddy is rising to a final demonstration of her teachings that there is no death.

The statement follows the recent publication of a book by Mrs. Stetson, called "Reminiscences, Sermons and Correspondence," which opponents of Mrs. Stetson say will pave the way for a formal declaration of leaders.

Mrs. Stetson, who was excommunicated from the Christian Science Church because of a dispute over local leadership, said:

"My relations with the church are the same as they have always been since I became a student of Mrs. Eddy. I began working in Christian Science from both a material and spiritual foundation, and continued to demonstrate the power of spirituality over material sense. Step by step, I followed Christ Jesus and Mary Baker Eddy until I had demonstrated up to the point of emergence from a material organization, when I accepted the inevitable, the request of our leader, 'to begin to build on a wholly spiritual foundation, than which there is no other.'

Acknowledges Eddy Leadership.

"Throughout the columns of my book I positively state that Mrs. Eddy is the head of her church, which means the entire body comprising the members of the mother or universal church. Mrs. Eddy has not died, but is rising to a final demonstration of her teachings that 'all is life; there is no death,' and is, as she has been, the spiritual head of the universal church.

"I never have ceased to follow the impersonal ideal once seemingly embodied in flesh. I am steadfast in my convictions that I am the spiritual head of the branch church which she organized and over which she placed me as spiritual head. I am responsible to God and my leader for defending my position.

"I now am awaiting the final victory of truth and love over error and hate. I shall never be separated from my teacher and leader, Mrs. Eddy, nor from my students who comprehend divine metaphysics. My church will stand as a 'light upon the hill,' known and acknowledged by all men as a demonstration of my teaching of Christian Science as taught me by Mary Baker Eddy. The hour has struck. The night has passed. The day dawns. Victory at last rests on the side of Christian Science."

Mrs. Stetson explained this to mean the world will soon realize the divinity of Mrs. Eddy.

Willing to Take Up Rule.

She continued:

"I was ready and willing to follow my leader, Mrs. Eddy, at her request, and continue to demonstrate at any cost to me the principles of Christian Science, or divine metaphysics, which for many years I had demonstrated in a degree. I am continuing in the church the structure of truth and love and am rising in spiritual power over remaining undestroyed material sense and material organization.

"My spiritual ego consciousness is a member of the body of God, therefore a member of the real church, the house (consciousness) not made with hands, eternally in the one mind.

"Those who have not risen out of material organization and who require personal association and who are not a law unto themselves, but require the help of these a step higher on the ladder of spiritual progress, should remain in the material organization until compelled by the law of truth to advance."

ATLANTA GIRL WITH 'THE GREAT AMERICAN VOICE' TO SING HERE

Miss Lalla B. Cannon.

Miss Eulalia Bright Cannon, the Atlanta girl who was designated by Professor Sergei Klibansky as possessor of "the great American voice" and awarded a $3,000-a-year grand opera scholarship, will be heard at a free concert of the Atlanta Music Festival Association at the Auditorium at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. She will sing the aria, "O Don Fatale," from "Don Carlos," the song that won her the greatest honor, perhaps, ever accorded an American vocal student.

Miss Cannon, who prefers to be known as Lalla B. Cannon, is spending her vacation with her mother, Mrs. L. C. Cannon, of 647 Peachtree Street. She is a dramatic soprano with a truly wonderful range, and unless her friends prevail upon her to give a benefit recital this will probably be her only appearance in Atlanta this summer. In August or early September she will return to New York to resume her operatic studies under Professor Klibansky, as holder of the scholarship given by a wealthy New York woman.

"I always have aspired to grand opera," Miss Cannon told a Georgian reporter yesterday. "I think it is the grandest career in the world. I have accepted the scholarship. Professor Klibansky will say how long I must study in America and when I must go to Europe and whether I shall become an opera singer. I shall do just what he says, and I do so hope he will think I am fitted for opera."

Gives Her Mother Credit.

Since it all depends on Professor Klibansky's dictum, it can be asserted dogmatically that Miss Cannon will become a grand opera star. In selecting her over 400 competitors, men, women and girls, Klibansky said her voice undoubtedly was capable of as wonderful development as any of the great sopranos now heard in Wagnerian opera.

To her mother Miss Cannon owes and freely gives the credit for the fairylike fortune by which she rose to fame overnight and her sparkling prospects for a future career. A singer from babyhood, Miss Cannon always thought she was a mezzo, and her teachers, even until a few months ago in New York, shared her belief. She wanted to sing all the time, but her mother prevailed upon her to desist, that she might not waste her powers by untutored efforts. When she went to New York to study she scrupulously refrained from vocal exertion, and although the strain of practice taxed her strength, her vocal capabilities were conserved until she sang before Klibansky and was pronounced not a mezzo, but a dramatic soprano of rare quality and power.

Since then she has sung before Madame Gadski, and the peerless diva has expressed the wish to hear her again when next she visits America. To her acceptance of her mother's advice, Miss Cannon ascribes the preservation of her voice till the fortunate meeting with Klibansky.

Fortune Came by Accident.

And here is how she sang for Klibansky and won the scholarship, as she told it to The Georgian:

"A girl friend saw in The New York American an advertisement for 'the great American voice,' inserted by Professor Klibansky. He had taught in the Berlin Conservatory, and was then an instructor in Damrosch's Conservatory, known as the Institute of Musical Art. My friend told me about the advertisement, and I went to see Professor Klibansky that afternoon. There were so many other singers there that it was late when I sang 'The Birth of Morn,' a simple song, for him. He told me to come back the next morning, and I did. I sang 'O Don Fatale,' the aria from 'Don Carlos,' and as you know, I won the scholarship."

When it is considered that the honor of being declared possessor of "the great American voice" and receiving the $3,000 annual scholarship had been promised to another girl before Miss Cannon sang for Klibansky, it readily is seen her recital before him must have convinced him she was another Jenny Lind or Adelina Patti in embryo.

The other girl was Miss Jean Vincent Cooper, of Jackson, Miss. Professor Klibansky told the wealthy patroness it would be a shame for either of the girls to miss securing the best instruction obtainable, particularly when Miss Cooper was a mezzo and Miss Cannon a soprano and each was without a peer in her own field. The patroness then agreed to duplicate her offer, and Miss Cooper and Miss Cannon each were awarded the honor and the prize.

Asked what she thought of the opera as a career for aspiring girls, Miss Cannon replied, "Really, I can't say. To tell the truth, I don't know, for I myself am not in opera yet. But I want to try it, for I think it will be splendid."

STATE BOARD AID FOR MARRIAGE BILL ASKED

One Member of Health Department Already Has Indorsed Hixon Measure.

Efforts to obtain from the State Board of Health an endorsement of the "pure marriage" bill, introduced into the Senate by Senator J. T. Hixon, will be made by friends of the measure, according to an announcement made by Senator Hixon Saturday morning. One physician employed in the offices of the Board of Health already has sought out Senator Hixon and assured him he would lend his personal support to the measure.

Senator Hixon said the work of bringing the attention of the Board of Health to the bill probably would be under the direction of Dr. B. L. Emory, of Villa Rica, Ga., author of the bill, and at whose request it was introduced by Senator Hixon.

Dr. Emory, it is said, personally will present the bill to the Board of Health and ask co-operation in obtaining its passage. The bill was endorsed by the Carroll County Medical Society before it was brought to Atlanta. Senator Hixon is using this written endorsement of the measure as a lever to swing votes for it.

Expects Bill to Get Attention.

Senator Hixon is confident his bill will be taken seriously and that it will receive the careful consideration of the Senate. It raises the marriage age limit in Georgia from 14 to 16 in the case of the woman, and forbids any man marrying who is less than 18 years of age.

By far the most important features of the bill, in the opinion of Senator Hixon and its friends, are the provisions prohibiting the granting of marriage licenses to persons who are afflicted with tuberculosis or other chronic and contagious diseases, and to persons who are habitual drunkards or addicted to the drug habit.

Will Help Prevent Disease.

Senator Hixon is anxious to see his marriage bill become a law. He declares the passage of such a bill will do more to stamp out disease than all other kinds of legislation that might be passed.

"Several of the most progressive States in the Union," Senator Hixon declared, "have laws similar to this bill, and they have worked wonderfully well.

"I expect to live to see the time when such a law will be on the statute books of every State, and when that time comes there will be fewer lunatics and less contagious and hereditary diseases than now."

A., B. & A. Strikes Securities Snag

Receivers of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad have been unable to make arrangements to retire the $4,700,000 of 5 per cent receivers' certificates which fall due Tuesday, July 1.

It is believed the certificates will be made to bear 6 per cent from maturity until paid, which may be for some time, in view of the condition of the money market.

H. M. Atkinson and E. T. Lamb left Atlanta early in the week for New York, where they now are endeavoring to arrange for refunding the securities, which in effect are notes made one year ago.

In the absence of these men, representing respectively majority and minority bondholders, no one in the A., B. and A. offices here was able to say just what progress has been made.

The notes in question were sold to retire an issue of $3,250,000 receivers' obligations and equipment trusts, and to provide for certain improvements.

The road went into the hands of a receiver January 2, 1909.

RIGID PROBE TO BE PUSHED BY BEAVERS

Charge of Corruption Made by Ex-Policeman Wood, Who Promises Expose.

taken the word of this one man, Moon, against all four of us, in suspending us for drinking in the place."

Chief Suspends Evans.

On a charge of suspected perjury, Chief Beavers indefinitely suspended Evans immediately following the suspension of Wood, Bailey and David. The patrolman was called before the Chief and stripped of his badge, braid and equipment. The case will be thrashed out by the Police Commission.

The evidence in Recorder's Court was that policemen had frequented the negro resort daily and uniformed men had often been seen entering it in broad daylight. One witness told of a midnight brawl participated in by four officers. The Chief said that he had obtained the names of the frequenters of the place.

He began Saturday morning inquiring into a report of police protection of the Auburn Avenue resort and others of its kind. A number of patrolmen were called before him the first thing after he reported to his office and he prepared to continue his inquiry through the day.

Claim They Got Evidence.

Plainclothesman W. T. Moon admitted to the Recorder that he had drunk whisky at the Auburn Avenue resort with the negress operator. He said, however, that he had only done so to secure evidence. The Recorder took him to task for not having reported the incident earlier.

A negro woman inmate of the house said Moon had been intimate with a girl there. Moon made an emphatic denial of the charge, but said he had been a frequent visitor to the place in the interest of getting evidence against it. Policeman Adams testified to the same thing.

Patrolman Wood branded Moon as a deliberate liar and said that he would prove perjury against him. He also said he would prove Adams had perjured himself, after which he would introduce evidence that would merit the immediate discharge of the two men.

Bailey said that the two men, Wood and Adams, had testified against him in a spirit of revenge because several months ago he arrested Adams for fighting.

Beavers to Investigate.

Sergeant J. H. Barfield, who raided the Auburn Avenue place Friday, told the court that on a previous visit to the place he had seen a patrolman in the hall. The man told him he was looking for a girl who was wanted at headquarters. Chief Beavers will inquire into this incident during the day.

Police Commissioner B. Lee Smith was a prominent figure in the police inquiry Friday. He was closeted with the Chief for several minutes before he suspended the first three men, and later in the day he made a personal investigation of the place on Auburn Avenue. He said that unquestionably the resort had been receiving police protection from a subordinate source.

The next meeting of the Police Commission is July 8, and unless there is a called meeting the charges will not be officially aired before that time.

Accused Men Confident.

The officers under suspicion were confident they would be completely exonerated when the Police Board took action, and have retained Attorney R. R. Jackson to represent them. Jackson said that his sympathies were wholly with the dismissed men and he denounced the system where officers of the same rank were assigned the duty of spying on their brother officers.

Policeman L. J. Milam was questioned by Captain Terry late Friday night. He was a partner with Wood, the suspended officer. He was questioned regarding Wood's conduct and reported visits to the place.

Chief Beavers said that his inquiry into the reports of misconduct against his policemen would be extensive and that it would not stop until the department had been purged of every man found guilty of an act unbecoming a policeman.

King Would Give Chief Power to "Fire" Offenders.

Chief of Police Beavers will have power to discharge officers from the department if a resolution to be introduced by Commissioner A. R. King is adopted by the Police Board at its meeting Tuesday, July 8.

"There is not another department of the city government that the head does not have this privilege, and the Chief of Police, above all others, should have the power to discharge an officer when he violates a rule of the department or is found wanting in the qualifications for the place, said Commissioner King.

"The action of the Chief in suspending the men who had visited a questionable house shows it is his intention to rid the department of all that class of policemen who use their office to enter places when not required to do so.

Board Trusts Chief.

"The Chief heard the rumor that policemen were visiting the place in the rear of 127 Auburn Avenue soon after his return from Washington City, and immediately started an investigation, detailing Plainclothes Officers Moon and Adams on the job.

"These men were selected by the Chief not because of any 'personal spite' they might have had against the officers turned up, but because they were, in his opinion, qualified to cope with the case and bring the guilty parties to justice. How well they succeeded the action of the Chief and the conviction of the women in the case in the Recorder's Court shows.

"The Board of Police Commissioners exercises great care in the selection of officers, but are never sure of the men until they are tested. It is up to the Chief and his assistants to do the testing. The Police Board will abide by their decision. The board has the utmost confidence in Chief Beavers and his assistants. They have been proved loyal and true.

Can Appeal to Board.

"In any case where an officer who has been discharged by the Chief feels that he has not been given a square deal he can appeal to the board. The Chief will report to the board all cases of suspension or discharge, and the board either will confirm or reverse him—mostly confirm.

"The Chief has started this investigation and he will carry it to a successful conclusion. It is the duty of citizens who have the welfare of Atlanta at heart to give him every assistance."

GEORGIANS GO TO GETTYSBURG REUNION

First Platoon Off Under General A. J. West---Six Hundred to Attend From State.

Headed by General A. J. West, commissioner from Georgia, the First Battalion of Confederate Veterans from Atlanta and the State-at-large left at 11 o'clock Saturday morning for Gettysburg and the national reunion of the blue and the gray on July 1, 2 and 3, fifty years after the battle.

Atlanta, with 75 Confederates and the State of Georgia, with 600, will be well represented in comparison with other States. Through the efforts of General West, the State has obtained a favorite camping ground fronting Confederate Avenue, the main thoroughfare of the reunion city. Situations at this vantage point were sought by every camp.

The first preliminary reunion between the Union and Confederate veterans took place in Atlanta Saturday morning, when the ticket sale started at the Southern Railway office. The participants were a Mr. Black, a Union veteran, and F. L. Hudgins, commander o fCamp C. A. Evans, Confederate veterans of Decatur. Seeing Mr. Hudgins and other wearers of the gray buying tickets to Gettysburg, Mr. Black "butted in" and said "Good morning, boys. My name is Black. I was on the other side, but it's all over now and I'm with you."

Prominent Veterans Go.

Among the prominent Atlanta veterans who left on the morning train were General A. J. West, Judge George Hillyer, railroad commissioner; Colonel John W. Lindsey, prison commissioner; Captain J. W. English, president of the Fourth National Bank; J. C. Huff and A. A. Nolan.

Commander F. L. Hudgins and Vice Commanders I. N. Nash and W. H. Mitchell made up the Decatur delegation.

Other Georgia veterans who left from Atlanta on the first train were W. F. Gay, of Newborn, a member of Jefferson Lamar Camp No. 305, of Covington; J. N. Mitchell, Canton; Judge J. F. C. Williams, ordinary of Harris County; Sam Moore, A. F. Truett and J. T. Forester, Hamilton.

Many Carry Wounds.

Many veterans will take to the reunion wounds or other souvenirs connected with the battle or other Civil War events. General West will take the greatest object of inerest to be seen at the reunion. It is a Confederate half-dollar, one of four which were coined before the dies were broken. It is valued at $10,000 and was presented to General West by Attorney David H. Keefer.

F. L. Hudgins and I. N. Nash, of Decatur, both were wounded at Gettysburg. Nash lost his left arm and Hudgins was shot through the body. Hudgins took along a frying pan he captured at the Battle of the Wilderderness May 6, 1864, when it was filled with salt pork placed there by some combatant who didn't have time to remain and eat.

W. H. Mitchell, the other Decatur veteran, did not participate in the battle of Gettysburg. He tried three times to ge here, bu on each occasion was wounded in a preliminary battle on the other side of the Potomac. He confessed this morning he didn't know whether he was lucky or unlucky.

Gettysburg Begins to Fill With Veterans.

GETTYSBURG, June 28.—The real invasion of Blue and Gray veterans began early to-day.

It is expected to reach its height by to-morrow night. Gallantly the little borough of 4,000 has tackled the proposition of caring for its guests, but already it is beginning to feel the stress.

Army officers, watching the multitude grow, to-day sized up the camp and the preparations, practically completed, and said it was the biggest thing of its kind they had ever seen.

oT add to the difficulties and dangers of a situation hazardous under any circumstances, the weather is almost unbearable. With a sun blazing savagely the humidity is so high that every movement is productive of exhaustion. There have been several cases of heat exhaustion.

Considerable indignation has been manifested by army officers and by Lieutenant Colonel Lewiss E. Beitler, secretary of the Pennsylvania commission, over the widely published reports that no flags but the Stars and Stripes would be permitted in the camp. No such order ever was issued either by the War Department or the commission. As a matter of fact, several houses in the town are flying the Stars and Bars.

Five troops of State police have been mobilized here and this morning the policing of the town was turned over to them.

SHOW-ME DRESS MOST DARING YET

Newest Paris Style Is to Wear as Little as Possible and That Transparent.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

PARIS, June 28.—"The most daring in the past 100 years," was the way the summer styles of women's dress for 1913 were described to-day. The newspapers are printing columns of comment, in addition to many letters of protest, against the "immodest" and "immoral" styles.

The latest modes are designed to show as much of the wearer as possible. In addition to the slashed skirts, extreme decollete and sleeveless waists, gowns are being made from diaphanous materials. Little or nothing is worn under these transparent dresses.

Corsets are out of date. Apparently no fashionable woman wears them any longer. The majority of bodices noted at the Auteuil track did not reach more than a few inches above the waistline, and those few inches were filled in with flesh-colored chiffon, so that it would appear that the wearer was adorned with a gown of the most aggravated decollete.

Petticoats also have gone out of date. Those who follow the fashions say none was seen at Auteuil. Many women have adopted the style of wearing tights and dresses slashed far above the knee. Some of the tights were flesh colored; others were of brilliant hues in order to attract attention.

Another new fashion is to adorn the stockings with real jewels and real flowers.

CHARLESTON, W. VA., June 28.—The three days' conference between the New River coal operators and officials of the United Mine Workers of America with Governor Hatfield as mediator was without avail and today the miners received notice to strike.

Unless some agreement is made by Monday 15,000 miners will quit work.

PRINCESS LOUISE WRITES NEW BOOK

"It Is a Revelation of My Own Soul in Guise of Fiction," She Declares.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MILAN, ITALY, June 28.—Ex-Crown Princess Louise of Saxony, who has resumed the title of Countess of Montignoso, is about to publish another volume of autobiography.

"The book is still my own story," she said to an interviewer, "but it is different from the last. It is a revelation of my own soul in the guise of fiction. I describe Italy's beauties athwart my own personal impressions; very strange ones they are—I'm such a funny person. And, do you know I don't want to know myself well?

"People accuse me of being shifty in my loves. That's true; but I should have been otherwise had I encountered a strong man of iron will who knew how to dominate me. Alas! I have come across only vulgar bourgeois weaklings. That's the why and wherefore of my feverish quest after the happiness to which I, too, have a right.

"If those who sought my friendship had put it out of their minds that I was a Princess of Saxony and had treated me simply as a woman, then, perhaps, I, too, should have enjoyed my good share in life and love. As things are, I travel and travel in a frenzy to distract myself and my greatest horror in life is lest I should become plebeian."

'Don't Give Up the Ship' Flag Is Prize

TOLEDO, OHIO, June 28.—The battle of Lake Erie of1913 is practically being refought as a part of the centennial celebration here, as the result of the contest for possession of Commodore Perry's "Don't give up the ship" battle flag, which is wanted for the rebuilt flagship Niagara.

Director George Stevens, of the Museum of Art, to-day remained steadfast in his determination not to relinquish to Ensign George M. Lowry the relic, loaned by Secretary Daniels for three months.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Mrs. Edward F. Young and her 10-month-old baby to-day saw her husband taken to Joliet, Ill., to serve a prison term of from one to five years for the confessed embezzlement of $153,000 from the Chicago, Terre Haute and Southeastern Railroad. He was a trusted employee.

"He took the money to use it getting rich so baby and I could have everything we wanted. I'll stick to him. Baby won't know a thing about it," said Mrs. Young.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"DEAR, could you make room for this in your trunk?" asked Helen anxiously.

"Um, what is it?" Warren did not look up from the great roll of collars he was fitting in the tray.

"My heavy coat—I'll need it for the steamer."

"Should say I couldn't. Put it in the roll with the rugs."

"But we've got to put both our train coats and the steamer pillow in that—it won't hold any more."

"Then you'll just have to carry it. "See here," opening a small leather case of folding coat hangers, "how many of these things will we need?"

"Take them all, dear. I'll want some. Where is that other case of six. Aunt Emma gave you for Christmas? Oh, here they are."

"Then put them in your own trunk. I'm not going to fill up mine with a lot of truck for you. Look at all those papers," pointing to some packages he had brought from the office.

"Oh, do you have to take all those?"

"That's not all—there's more in that suit case. And they're a darn sight more important than your frillikins."

Helen, who had always counted on putting certain things in Warren's trunk, went back to her room and gazed helplessly at her small and already overcrowded steamer trunk. How could she get everything in?

"What shall I do with this, ma'am?" demanded Maggie, appearing at the door with an opened package of cereal.

"Oh, you'll have to throw out everything like that; we can't leave it to draw mice. Now, you're sure you've got everything out of the refrigerator? The butter and the rest of that jar of bacon you can give to the houseman. And you'd better sprinkle some borax around the sink. Wait, I'll come show you."

A Farewell Call.

While Maggie was to stay to clean and close up the apartment, yet Helen wanted to see that nothing was left to draw insects.

She was still in the kitchen, when the 'phone rang and Warren called impatiently:

"Helen! Somebody wants you."

"Oh, WHY will people call us up at the last moment?" she protested resentfully, for every second now was precious.

"Hello! I just wanted to say goodbye," shrilled Mrs. Thurston's voice, "and wish you all kinds of a pleasant trip."

"That's very kind of you," lied Helen politely.

"Your boat's sailing at 3, isn't it? I'd so like to come down to the dock, but I promised Mrs. Walker to go with her to a bridge tea. I disappointed her last week, so I'll just have to go. Well, you certainly have a fine day to start. I was afraid this morning it would rain, but it's cleared off beautifully."

"Yes, it has," murmured Helen stupidly, wild to get back to her packing, but not wanting to be abrupt.

"Oh, while I think of it, I want to give you the address of that place in the Rue de Rivoli, the one I told you about where I got those lovely hand-embroidered nightgowns. Have you a pencil there?"

Helen got a pencil, took down the address and was just about to say good-by when Mrs. Thurston held her with a——

"And I'm going to ask you to get me two more—size 36. You saw the ones I have, I paid fifteen francs for most of them, but use your own judgment—only I shouldn't like to pay over twenty. I'm sure you won't mind getting these for me, will you? And oh, don't you want the address of that handkerchief place, where they embroider the three initials for only a few centimes extra? If you'll hold the phone a minute—I've got the address on one of the boxes they came in."

Helen could hardly restrain her impatience, but she was forced to wait for the address.

Very Annoying.

"If you're getting some for yourself," purred Mrs. Thurston, "and if it isn't TOO much trouble, I SHOULD like another dozen of those tiny evening handkerchiefs—you know the initials—M. C. T."

When Helen finally succeeded in breaking away she turned from the phone with a furious—

"The idea of her calling me up this late to send for things!"

"Well, I'd have cut her off quick enough," growled Warren. "She wouldn't have kept me standing there. Here," shoving toward her some steamship labels he had just filled out with their name and number of their stateroom, "better get these on now. Can't leave everything till the last minute."

Helen took the oval blue and white "North German Lloyd" labels and pasted them on her trunk and suit case with supreme satisfaction. She had always envied people with trunks covered with steamship and foreign hotel labels—it gave their baggage such a traveled, "cosmopolitan" air.

The one label that was left over she put on a large trunk that she had had brought up to get out some things for the trip. It had never been abroad, but she MIGHT have taken it, so she had no scruples in decorating it with a label.

Unfortunately just at that moment Warren appeared.

"These yours?" throwing down a couple of her linen collars that had been sent to the laundry with his. Then noticing the label as she jumped up almost guiltily from her knees before the big trunk, "What's that mean? You're not going to take that trunk?"

"No, dear," flushing in confused anticipation of his ridicule.

"Well why in thunder did you stick on that label?" Then as it dawned on him. "By George, I've heard of fool women who bought foreign labels and plastered up their trunks, but I thought you had some sense."

This incident did not contribute to Helen's speed in packing, for with burning cheeks, she scraped off with the scissors the offending label.

"The ice man's here now, m'am," announced Maggie.

Some Hustling.

And again Helen had to stop her packing to instruct the iceman to leave no more ice until they notified him of their return. Then came the superintendent, whom she had sent for to see about turning off the gas. The time was going fast—and her trunk was not nearly ready.

"Oh, m'am, see what I found!" Maggie held up triumphantly a tea spoon they had looked for yesterday when they had counted the silver. Now more time was taken in unlocking the silver and putting away the spoon.

"What about the table fern, m'am. Didn't you say you were going to give that to Mrs. Hubbard?"

"You can do that after we're gone. Now don't come to me with everything Maggie. Look at the time—I must finish packing!"

"Trunk ready to strap?" called out Warren.

"Not quite, dear," nervously. "In just a few moments."

"Well now don't fool around and not be ready. I've ordered the cab for twelve sharp."

When Helen was much hurried she was apt to become confused, and now she fluttered about trying to do everything at once. There were more interruptions, and twice she had to stop to find something for Warren.

"All right, dear, it's all ready," she answered at last to his repeated call of "Trunk ready?"

"Sure this is the right key?" he demanded. "No, it's the lock! Rusty as the devil. Why in blazes didn't you try it? Get some oil!"

Helen flew for the oil, and for another precious ten minutes Warren fumed over the lock.

"Oh, wait, dear, have you got it locked?" just as he finally succeeded in turning the key. "Oh, I'm so sorry, but I left my bath robe."

Once Again.

Warren's explosives were loud and emphatic as he unlocked the trunk.

"Now is that ALL?" as Helen hastily crushed in the robe. "By Gad, I've never locked a trunk for you yet that I didn't have to open half a dozen times before we started."

But it was hardly a moment later when Maggie brought in a blue serge skirt Helen had asked her to brush. "You're not forgetting this, m'am?"

Helen tried desperately to get it in her suitcase, but there was no room. The trunk would have to be opened again. While she was struggling with the stiff, heavy strap, trying to unbuckle it, Warren passed the door.

"What in the devil are you doing now?"

"Never mind, I—I can open it," flushed and breathless with her exertions. "I just forgot to put in this skirt."

Warren pushed her roughly aside and again opened the trunk, his language more fervid than before.

"Now is THAT ALL?" he roared again as he slammed down the lid.

Helen thought it was. But at almost the last moment, she discovered a pair of shoes she had left out to be polished. The suitcase was bulging full, and she dared not let Warren see her trying to open the trunk again. She would have to carry them in a bundle. There was no other way.

It was not until they were finally whirling to the dock in a cab, with the trunks on top and the hand baggage on the seat before them, that Warren noticed the package Helen was carrying.

"What's that? Put it in your suit case."

"There isn't room. It's nothing dear. I'd just as soon carry it."

But Warren felt through the paper that it was a pair of shoes.

"So you forgot those, did you? Might have known you'd want to get in that trunk again. Gad, that's like you. Starting off for Europe with a pair of shoes in your hand. Next time I go—I go alone!"

What He Meant.

A man once received as a present from a sea captain a fine specimen of a bird which sailors call the "laughing jackass." As he was carrying it home he met a brawny Irish navvy, who stopped and said to him:

"Phwat kind of burrd is that, sorr?"

"That's a laughing jackass," explained the owner, genially.

The Irishman, thinking he was being made fun of, was equal to the occasion, and responded with a twinkle of the eye:

"It's not yourself; it's the burrd I mane, sorr!"

The Mistakes of Jennie .:. By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

Chapter 13.

A FEW days after Jennie had got her new clothes she met Tom on her way to work.

Jennie was all excited when she saw him and wondered if he would speak to her after her refusing to marry him and her treating him so badly. She did hope he would, and that he would admire her new clothes.

Tom lifted his hat and acted as if there never had been anything the matter between them, and, boy like, did not even notice her new gown, willow plume and things, that Jennie was paying $1.50 a week for on the installment plan.

That day her girl friend at the office said she had it all "cooked up" for a party that night with the boys they were out with before.

One of the boys owned an automobile and they would go out on a "bear" of a time. So that night after work Jennie and her pal met the boys. Jennie was all dressed up and her girl friend's beau didn't seem to have any time for any one except Jennie. This, of course, made the girl jealous, but she held in until after dinner, when they were all a bit "jagged." Then she derided Jennie for trying to take her fellow away from her.

They had a fine row, which made the fellow—who seemed to always pay for their "parties"—very angry. He told the girl he was tired of her anyway, and she had better get some one else to pay her expenses.

Then he proceeded to make violent love to Jennie—and poor Jennie didn't know what to do. The other fellow—the one Jennie was with before—didn't have much to say, and whatever his friend did was all right, being as how his friend held the purse strings.

Coming back in the machine they sat on the back seat and the fellow talked and talked and tried to get Jennie to consent to let him furnish up a flat for her, and she could have anything she wanted. But Jennie was crying, and all she would say was: "NO-NO-NO!" Her girl friend wouldn't speak to her, but had vowed to get even—if it was the last thing in the world she ever did. Jennie begged the fellow to take her home—but he held her all the tighter in his arms, kissing her.

The Modern Girl : A New Species of the Feminine Sex

By DOROTHY DIX.

HAVE you ever considered the modern girl and how she differs from the maidens of the past? She's a new species of the feminine sex, and no more like her grandmother, or even her mother, than if she had been wafted down from the planet Mars instead of having just strolled out of the nursery.

We haven't taken much account of her, but you've got to reckon with her in the future, and it's time we sat up and took notice. Consider these little stories as illustrations of the young person and her point of view. The first is on divorce.

The other day I overheard two young girls talking.

Said one: "When a girl marries, she should be very, very careful in choosing her husband, and after she is married she should do the best she can to make a good wife and a happy home, but if she finds out that she has made a mistake, and is miserable, thank Heaven, she doesn't have to stand it. She can always get a divorce."

Said the other girl: "Oh, of course, that's the only thing to do under such circumstances. It won't be my fault if my marriage turns out badly, because I'm going to do everything I can, and bring every particle of intelligence I've got to making it a success, but none of that suffer-and-be-strong business in mine! If my husband isn't what he should be, or treats me badly, or I find I've made an error of judgment, I'm going to correct it just as I would any other mistake.

"I'm not going to stick to it as people used to do in the Dark Ages. Aren't you thankful that you live in these enlightened days, instead of in our grandparents' and our parents' time, when people thought that no matter how miserable you were in your marriage, or how much you hated the person you were married to, you had to endure it?"

An Unusual Remark.

The first girl smiled indulgently. "They were bound in the swaddling clothes of superstition, all right," she said.

I gasped with surprise. These girls belong to old, conservative, rather narrow-minded families, and they themselves are sweet, modest, intelligent, well educated young women, who haven't the faintest idea of being revolutionary, or anything of that sort. What they said simply voiced the viewpoint of the new generation.

They didn't argue about the ethics of divorce at all. They simply accepted divorce as a fact, a modern convenience, something that tended to make life pleasanter, just as they did in elevators in apartment buildings, or electric lights, or running hot and cold water in bath rooms.

If you had made a mistake in marriage and your life was being ruined by it, you corrected it and took a fresh start, just as you would do if you found out that you had engaged in a business that was bankrupting you. They could see no more reason for going on with a marriage that meant daily misery than there would be in going on with an enterprise in which you lost money every day.

You can't argue the divorce question with the modern young girl, because she simply doesn't recognize the ancient view of the matter, that there is anything noble, or pious, or virtuous in living with an individual that brings out all the worst that is in you, or in keeping together a family that is engaged in a perpetual drawn battle at home.

Nor can you argue the suffrage question with young women, because they accept it as a fact that is incontrovertible that they are the equals of the young men they know, and have just as much right to a voice in government. You could find a needle in a haystack easier than a college-bred girl who is an anti.

DOROTHY DIX.

And this is what the modern young girl thinks about woman's sweet dependence. A very rich girl said to me the other day:

"I've got the best and most generous father that any girl ever had. He showers on me everything that money can buy. I've got charge accounts all the way up and down Fifth Avenue, and every month he gives me a big allowance, but I never see a girl standing behind a counter, or sitting behind a typewriter that I don't envy her. I would rather have a dollar and fifty cents that I had earned myself than fifteen hundred dollars that was given me.

"I would give anything on earth to know that I could stand on my own feet instead of being a miserable parasite hanging on somebody else. And every rich girl I know feels the same way. But I've got one comfort, I'll never have to be dependent on a husband. How a woman endures the humiliation of having to ask her husband for every cent she spends I don't understand. It's enough to kill her, and I don't believe women are going to do it much longer. I think in the future that when a girl hasn't got an independent fortune of her own she'll continue after marriage at whatever business she was in before marriage. Financial independence is just as necessary to a woman's self-respect as it is to a man's."

And here's another viewpoint of the 1913 model of girl. If you will recall, the heroes of all old-fashioned novels used to be men who had been sad rakes. They were men with dark pasts, such as Rochester, who fascinated innocent little Jane Eyre, and even as late as a generation or so ago a man lost no prestige in a girl's eyes from having been wild, and having had romantic adventures. Recently an opponent to the bill for requiring all candidates for marriage to produce a health certificate brought up this former attitude of women on this subject in objecting to the passage of the law. He didn't know the modern young girl. I said something of this to one, and she defined the modern girl's position on the question in one phrase:

She Knew.

"We've read Damaged Goods," she said, "and we know what that sort of romance means—insane asylums, surgeons' tables, death."

In former times, when a young girl came to an older woman to confide in her, she asked for advice about some love affair. Nowadays when a girl has a heart-to-heart talk with you she consults you about her life work. The young girls are no longer looking forward to matrimony as the one only desirable career in life. They are thinking of business, of settlement work, of a thousand avocations outside of the home circle. Love is no longer the whole of their existence. It is a thing apart, just as it is of a man. If the right man comes along and asks one, she'll marry, but if he doesn't, she can get along very well without him, thank you.

This is only a cursory view of the young girl of the period. Take a look at her for yourself. At present she is the great human conundrum, and she's the most interesting thing in the world.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

A man remarked that he came from a very large family.

"How many are there of you?" he was asked.

"Well, there were ten of us boys," he said, "and each of us had a sister."

"Good gracious!" exclaimed the other, "then there were twenty of you?"

"No," said the boastful man; "eleven."

Mamma—My dear, what are you doing?

Little Daughter—Making a pen wiper for my little sister.

Mamma—But you haven't any little sister!

Little Daughter—No, not yet; but Sally Stuckup has just got one, and I know we always get everything the Stuckups do.

Sheet steel is the latest material utilized in the making of furniture. It is used for sideboards, wardrobes, chiffoniers, writing desks, and it is finished in such perfect imitation of the various woods that the difference can not be detected. The wood finish is applied under a very high temperature, becoming an integral part of the metal and never cracking. This unique furniture has the recommendation of being fireproof, and a lighted match left on a pressed steel sideboard would have no effect whatever on its surface.

"What is the principal difference between modern and ancient times?"

"One of the main points was that the modern earn their living, while the ancients urned their dead."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THARE was a convenshun of misshunarys in town this week & Ma went & toald the ladies of the club that she wud be glad for us to talk at leest one misshunary & keep him at our house so he wuddent have to pay any hotel bill. Pa dident like it a bit, but he dident say much. He kicked a littel, tho.

I can not see why you act so cold about entertaining a noabel man who is going to give up his noabel life, maybe, Ma sed, oaver thare in the Feegee Islands, teaching them awful black men how to be good. Why, sed Ma, I was going to say first that we cud keep two of those noabel men here & now that I see the way you are acting I am glad that I only promised to take one.

Why doesn't he go to a hotel & register, like a noabel drummer or a noabel transhunt of any kind? sed Pa. I doant see anything very noabel about horning into a household & putting everybody out for a week, Pa sed. It is bad enuff to entertain yure relatives all the time, sed Pa, without having any guy with a long face and a short purse setting around and talking about spreading the gospel. Thay spread more hot air than thay spread gospel, sed Pa, them misshunarys, & beesides they eet moar than a trained nurse, wich is sum eeting.

Very Sad.

But this man is a charming gentleman, sed Ma. I am sure that you will like him. Jest then the man caim.

Husband, sed Ma, this is Mister Weeks of Jacksonville. He is going abroad soon to teech the beenited natives all about religun.

Mr. Weeks was vary slim, vary sad looking. Pa sighed kind of hard, but he asked Mister Weeks to malk hisself at hoam & then Ma sed Now I am going to leeve you two men & littel Bobbie to have a visit while I run oaver to Missus Jones's & get that recipe for stewed steak & milkweed greens, Ma sed.

As soon as Pa was sure Ma was out of the house he asked Mister Weeks of Jacksonville to cum into the library & look at his books. I went in, too.

I have sumthing vary fine here, sed Pa, in this long necked decanter. It is the very finest burbon, Pa sed, & it is so old that it has rumatism. Will you try a snifter?

A Surprise.

I doant mind if I do, sed Mister Weeks. Then Pa poured him a nice drink & took one hisself. He looked kind of surprised at Mister Weeks, but I cud see that he was looking at his friend moar friendly.

I am sorry to intrude on you, sir, said Mister Weeks, & as it is I wud have stayed at a hotel, only I got roped into a stud gaim last nite & got my bank roll so nicked that it is almost nit. That is sum corn, he sed. If we was whare we cud, he sed, I wud cum back, but as I am in yure hoam I will try another on you, old sport. I will pour it, it is neerer to me. Say when.

I see you like it, sed Pa. I shud say I do like it, sed Mister Weeks. I have been in a jay town for three weeks, hoalding a kind of reevival, & the only stuff I cud git thare was so feerce that it took all my moral curage to drink it at all. Well, how do you like the way Billy Smith is sailing along now? I hope the Crackers win the pennant. I have a swell bet down that they will cop, he sed.

I nevver seen a man that looked so surprised as Pa. Say, he sed to Mister Weeks of Jacksonville, you are a regular guy. How did you cum to be a misshunary.

Pretty Soft.

Well, sed Mister Weeks, it is a pritty soft graft. A man gets a chance to travel all oaver & see furrin countrys, & as far as curing any beenited natives, all I evver ask them to do is to show me around. I used to be a ball player, he sed, but I got hit on the bean with one of Dent's fast ones, and that chased me out of the gaim. This gaim isent so dangerous.

Aint you afrade you will get et up by a cannibal? I sed to Mister Weeks.

No, sed Mister Weeks. I teach them all to be hard drinkers & thay lose thare deesire to eat.

Jest then Ma caim hoam.

You must be awfully tired, Ma sed to the misshunary.

Yes, I think I will retire & finnish my new lecture for those who grope in the darkness, sed Mister Weeks of Jacksonville. Then he groped to bed.

Turned the Tables.

At Scotch weddings some years ago it used to be the custom to batter the hat of the bridegroom as he was leaving the house in which the ceremony took place. On one of those occasions the friends of a newly-married couple (relatives of the bridegroom) determined to carry out the observance of this custom to the letter.

The bridegroom heard them discussing their plans, and dispatched a messenger to the carriage (which stood waiting) with his hat some time previous to his departure. Then, donning the hat of the male relative who had plotted against him, he prepared to go out to the carriage.

No sooner had he got to the door than his hat was furiously assaulted and almost destroyed. He walked out of the house amid the laughter of the bystanders and entered the vehicle; then, taking the battered hat from his head he threw it into the hands of its proper owner, exclaiming: "Hey, Mr. Dougall, there's your hat," and donned his own amid the cheers of all present.

Mr. Dougall was the unhappiest-looking man in Scotland for some time after that.

: The Bibles of Presidents :

Some Interesting Facts Concerning Them.

ONE of the oldest, if not the very oldest, Bibles connected with the American Government is the book upon which, since 1800, every Chief Justice and every member of the Supreme Court has taken the oath of allegiance when accepting his appointment to Uncle Sam's highest tribunal. More than that, every attorney who has practiced before the Supreme Court since that date—1800—has pledged his allegiance over the little volume, with one exception—Daniel Webster. It is told even yet of the Supreme Court of that day that Mr. Webster's fame as an orator had so preceded him that on that occasion, when he came to argue his first case before the Court, the clerk, Mr. Caldwell, in his eagerness to hear the great speaker, forgot to administer the oath.

Some interesting facts have also been revealed regarding the Bibles used by American Presidents. When Grover Cleveland came to the Capitol for his first inauguration he brought with him a little red Bible his mother had given him when he was a boy, and which he had always cherished as a keepsake. On that Bible he took the oath of office. A few days before Mr. McKinley's inauguration a number of African Methodist bishops came into Mr. McKinley's office one morning with a tremendous package, which proved to be a large family Bible in a big plush box, and they wished Mr. McKinley to use it. Their request was granted, and the big Bible was one of the show objects in the Red Parlor of the White House for a long time afterwards.

A $50,000 Bible.

When Mr. Roosevelt was inducted into office as Governor of New York some one presented him with the Bible which he used on that occasion. His name, which was written on the fly-leaf, was misspelled, but he used the same Bible at his second inauguration, and it has been one of Mr. Roosevelt's most treasured mementos ever since.

These volumes, however, are to Americans of insignificant value when compared with the copy of the Bible, bound in red leather with silver clasps, on which Washington took the oath as first President of the Republic on the balcony of the old Federal Hall in New York. It was borrowed for the occasion, and the descendants of those who lent it preserve it as a most sacred relic.

Americans, inspired perhaps by the example of the late Pierpont Morgan, who included many historic Bibles among his art treasures, have of late years exhibited a great passion for Bible collecting. Bibles belonging to Queen Anne, George III and Richard, Duke of Gloucester, are to be found in the United States.

It was H. E. Huntington, the railway magnate of America, who a couple of years ago paid $50,000 for a Gutenberg Bible which was once in the Ashburnham Library. America, however, has not succeeded in securing a literary treasure to be found among the finest collection of English Bibles in the world, at the Bristol Baptist College. This college possesses the only perfect copy in existence of Tyndale's first New Testament, printed at Worms in 1525. The then Bishop of London bought up and burned this first edition, and thus provided Tyndale money for an improved and larger one. The only other fragment of the destroyed edition is now in the British Museum, but it stops short at the 22d chapter of St. Matthew. The trustees of the college have often been tempted to dispose of this unique volume, but hitherto they have been proof against temptation, though no less than $50,000 has been offered for it.

Another valuable Bible in the collection is a copy of Coverdale's Bible, published in 1535. Lincoln Cathedral possesses the only other perfect copy in existence, although six other more or less complete copies are known to exist.

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

Ina Claire Talks on the Psychology of Clothes

Ina Claire's refreshing beauty.

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

THE dainty little "Quaker Girl," Ina Claire, is entertaining her admirers down at Brighton Beach, where the cool breezes and her own refreshing personality unite to make us all forget how earnestly the sun of summer can pour down molten glory on the city cobblestones at noon to-day.

We sat at a cozy tea table and got acquainted over an iced tea and a soda lemonade, plus chicken sandwiches. "This is my luncheon," said Miss Ina—and, by the way, you pronounce it as if it were Eena—"I don't let all my meals total up to more than one meal—of course you will laugh and say that I can afford to eat all I want. But I can't. You have to meet fat more than half way if you want to ward it off, and make sure that it never starts coming. I never eat candy—it does not do one the least bit of good, and I'd be so grateful if I might get all the sweetness I want from the perfume of all the flowers I want. Flowers have such a wonderful effect on me—on everyone, I think—their perfume and beauty has to make you a little bit lovelier. Don't you think so? Perhaps you will even say in our interview that I wish all the kind people who want to send me gifts would make those gifts of flowers."

"Evidently you are a believer in the importance of surroundings," I suggested.

"Oh, yes," said Miss Claire eagerly, "for my ideal of beauty is sweetness—refinement. You see it in the flowerlike English type."

By the way the unconscious girl who sat across the tea table from me is a perfect exponent of the flowerlike English type.

Likes Clothes.

"I believe in the psychology of clothes, too. I hate things that are just la mode. I happen to like little picture dresses—soft, frilly, cool-looking, girlish things. They happen to suit me, too—so I wear them. But as I grow older and develop and mature I shall not wear these little frocks after I have outworn their type. Why, I want to grow in my work and develop power, and just the same way I want to grow beyond my 19 years in my appearance, too. Don't you think you have to dress your age as well as your type?"

I agreed; for I think that even as clothes must express the wearer, so they limit their wearer in her power of expression. A woman struggling along in a peg-top skirt that makes her walk a peg, too, can not look like the heroine of the poet's fancy:

"Even the light harebell raised its head
Elastic from her airy tread."

As Miss Claire said, "A trained gown expresses impressive dignity at once. Oh, how I should love to wear them, but my mother says that youth should express youth—and I know she is very wise. Youth must work and study and try to grow up gracefully in art and works and looks, but it must not be impatient and try to go faster than itself," added my pretty philosopher sagely.

"And don't you think that moods are very important, too?" I asked. "Flowers in your pathway and pretty clothes make beauty—but does it not come from within?"

Not Fair.

"Indeed it does," answered Miss Claire. "Unpleasant moods take the light and life from the eyes and all the face. It is not fair to other people to indulge in moods—and if you must have them, why just go off by yourself if you can, for your face will show their imprint. Drooping your upper lip in the middle, a la Eddie Foy, is fine for the blues—it curls your mouth up at the corners mechanically—and it makes your spirit laugh at the way you look.

"I think if you are young you need plenty of sleep, and simple food to get you into simple food-habits, and flowers and sunshine to help you grow, and work to keep you interested in life. I believe in work for women," went on Miss Claire slowly, "not only because life is happier when you are busy, but because, unless you are helping to create things, you become a critic. And just a critical attitude toward life is likely to become a bitter, droop-mouthed attitude. If you are a worker, and know how much struggle and effort goes into creating each tiny bit of life, you are happier and kinder, and I'm sure you look sweeter, too."

Well, little sister workers, is not that a splendid message for us? To create a bit o' life—and not to berate life—that is what Ina Claire told me.

EXPERIENCE OF MOTHERHOOD

Advice to Expectant Mothers

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The inexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

ASK HIM TO CALL AGAIN.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 21 and am in love with a man two years my senior. He called on me a few times. One night I had an engagement and he disappointed me, and I heard he would like to write, but he is very bashful, so would it be proper for me to write to him?

LONELY.

Write a friendly note asking him to call, but do not make it too cordial, and do not be insistent if he refuses. Having made these overtures, let the rest come from him.

IT IS NOT WISE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Is it proper for girls between the ages of 15 and 16 to play kissing games, such as "postoffice," "spin the bottle," etc., with boys between the ages of 17 and 18 at a social gathering? GLADYS.

Don't do it, my dear. It is a silliness that sometimes results in continued and unpardonable familiarity when there are no kissing games as an excuse. Boys think all the more of girls who refuse to give such marks of their favor.

DON'T SEND IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

While at a ball I was introduced to a man who seemed interested in me. His father is in the same place of business as mine. Now, I would like to know if it would be proper for me to send a note through his father, as I do not know his name and address, because he has a stepfather. I would like to have him call to see me, but I do not want his folks to think I am running after him. ANXIOUS.

You do not want his family to think you are running after him, yet such a letter would give them that impression. A better plan would be to wait till he shows greater interest in you.

Next Witness, Please!

"Witness, will you please answer my questions a little more plainly?" queried the lawyer, who was cross-examining an elderly German as to the position of the door, windows, etc., in the house where a crime had been committed.

"I will try—I will try," nervously answered the old man.

"Will you describe to the Court just how the stairs run in that house?" went on the lawyer.

For a few minutes the German looked puzzled, and bit his nails nervously.

"How ze stairs run?" he interrogated a little dazedly.

"Come, come, my good man! How the stairs run, if you please!" said the lawyer, in an exasperated tone.

"Vell," ventured the witness phlegmatically, "ven I am oopstairs zay run down, and ven I am downstairs zay run oop!"

The Triple Tie

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

In that game the Philadelphia nine was composed of nine players with but a single thought, nine bats that thumped as one. They took advantage of every opening and with Chief Bender in the box played with a dash and confidence that filled their supporters with glee and when the cohorts went back to Philadelphia that night it was the hope that the White Sox had gotten rid of all their bad playing and that on the morrow, with Big Ed Walsh in the box, they would brace up and take the Red Sox into camp, thereby making things all even again, with the triple tie no further decided than it was at the start.

Emblems Laid Aside.

No white silk-stockinged banners were flaunted on Broadway that night. The emblems were laid aside for the evening, while the owners thereof sought rathskellers and similar places for the purpose of drowing their sorrows in the flowing bowl. But Comiskey, the owner of the Chicago Club, never gave up the baseball ship. The "Old Roman" called the members of his team to his room and after giving them a verbal dressing down for their wretched exhibition, as only Comiskey himself could do, he exhorted them to go after the Red Sox on the following day and wipe up the Polo Grounds with them.

"Now go out there and beat that Boston bunch!" he exclaimed vehemently in conclusion, "and when you do it I'll hand every member of the team $500. And you, Walsh," he added, turning to the big pitcher, "one thousand extra for you for winning the game."

The morrow came—a glorious October day. The Polo Grounds was packed for the battle of the Red Sox and the White Sox. Fresh from their last headache, full of remorse for the past and hope for the future, the thousand from Chicago massed themselves in that section of the stadium nearest first base, while opposite them, behind third base, sat the rabid Boston "fans," waving red banners and yelling for the Red Sox at the slightest provocation. The Chicago crowd, too, had brought their standards with them, somewhat soiled and bedraggled, it is true, but still sufficiently white to create a vivid impression whenever they were used.

Batteries Announced.

The rival teams took their preliminary practice, while the rival rooters barked at each other across the diamond. Finally the bell rang, the umpires took their place, Connolly behind the plate, Dinneen at first base and the other two at the foul lines, and the megaphone boys announced the batteries. Of these heralds there were three—one to inform the spectators behind the plate, one for the left wing and one for the right wing of the grandstand. This was their simultaneous announcement.

"Batteries for to-day's game: For Boston, Bedient and Carrigan; for Chicago, Walsh and Schalk."

Manager Stahl of the Red Sox had again won the toss and his team took the field. Rath, the Chicago second baseman, stepped to the plate and the Chicago cohorts back of first base gave him a rousing cheer. Hard luck came to the Boston team at the very start. Rath swung at the first ball that Bedient pitched to him, ticked it with his bat, deflecting it so that it struck Carrigan on his first finger, breaking it. The catcher was forced to retire. The megaphone boys announced the change:

"Cady now catching in place of Carrigan."

The Game Is On.

The game went on. Rath finally worked Bedient for a free pass to first. Lord bunted a slow one down the third base line, and in running to get it, the Boston pitcher slipped and fell, Lord reaching first safely and Rath getting to second. Chase rapped a hot one through the box, which Wagner knocked down back of second base, but was unable to field. This filled the bases, with no one out. The section back of first base became a waving field of white banners, and the shouts of leather-lunged Chicagoans could be heard for miles. Collins lifted a long fly to Lewis and Rath scored after the catch. Bodie came along with a two-base hit between Speaker and Hooper, scoring Lord and Chase. Mattick went out on a grounder to Engle and Weaver closed the inning with a foul to Cady.

With his side three runs to the good, Big Ed Walsh stalked to the pitcher's box. That lead was all he asked. The Red Sox had found him almost unbeatable for years. That $1,000 bonus promised by Comiskey he considered as good as in his bank at Meriden. He began proceedings by striking out Hooper and Yerkes and forcing Speaker to roll an easy one to the box, which Walsh himself tossed to first for the thir out.

Collins Replaces Bedient.

Both sides were blanked in the second inning. In the third the White Sox went out in order, but the Red Sox two men on—Wagner by means of a pass and Cady on a single to right. Stahl sent Henrickson in to bat for Bedient, but the little fellow hit into a double play and Hooper fouled to Chase. The Red Sox were still without a run to their credit.

Ray Collins came in to pitch in place of Bedient and he retired the White Sox in order. For Boston, Speaker singled after Yerkes had been disposed of, but neither Lewis nor Gardner could bring him home. The fifth inning was also scoreless for both teams, but the Red Sox came near doing some damage to Walsh in their half of the round. Engle was safe on a low throw of his grounder. Wagner laid down a bunt toward first and beat it to the bag, as no one covered first. Cady advanced the runners with a sacrifice. With the chance of scoring two runs, Stahl himself went to bat in place of Collins and succeeded in drawing a pass to first. This filled the bases with only one out. Stahl, who was still limping from an old injury to his foot, called upon Nell Ball to run for him. The Red Six rooters cheered wildly as Hooper came to the plate. He drove a liner to Mattick and Engle, who tried to score from third, was thrown out at the plate. This piece of ill luck so disconcerted the Royal Rooters' band that it forgot to play "Tessie" for the first time on record.

Buck O'Brien went in to pitch for Boston when the sixth inning opened. He was in fine fettle, and the White Sox couldn't get a man on the bases. Those three runs looked bigger and bigger as the game went on. In the last of the sixth, after Yerkes had been retired, Speaker beat out a bunt and Lewis was safe on a fumble, but more hard luck followed the Red Sox when Gardner sent a terrific liner directly in Chase's hands and Wagner boosted a high fly to Rath.

The Chicago crowd went wild when the White Sox got three men on bases in the seventh with only one out, but their cheers turned to groans when O'Brien struck out the next man and speared a hard liner for the third out. But in doing so O'Brien hurt his hand so badly that he was forced to retire.

Last Inning Opens.

It looked as though the Red Sox were all shot to pieces when they went to bat in the last half of the seventh, but Cady reached second on a little fly that struck the right field foul line and rolled to the stand. Taking a dying chance Stahl sent Nunamaker in to bat, but no runs resulted and the score was still 3 to 0 against the Red Sox when the eighth opened, with Leonard in the box for Boston.

Leonard passed the first two men that faced him, but some good pitching and some good luck enable him to get by without being scored upon. The top of the batting order was up for the Red Sox and the Boston crowd implored the boys to do something. They tried very hard, but none of them could drive the ball out of the infield.

The ninth and last inning opened. The White Sox were retired in order. They had not been able to do much with the Boston pitchers, except when they scored the three runs in the first inning, but Big Ed Walsh was going great guns and there was not a member of the team but that felt the game was surely won.

Fought back to the last ditch, the Red Sox went to bat for their last stand. Two thousand spectators left their seats and started home when Lewis, the first up for Boston, died on a roller to Rath. Five thousand more made a rush for the gates when Gardner flied to Collins. Not a sound came from the Boston section. The Chicago contingent was singing and waving flags. There was a faint cheer when Engle managed to work Walsh for a free pass to first. There was a louder cheer when Wagner hit safely just out of Weaver's reach. Some of those who were leaving the grounds paused for a moment to see if there would be any excitement. Cady, with two strikes and three balls called on him, was fooled into striking at a very low one, but the ball struck the ground before it got to Schald and jumped by him. Cady sprinted to first and beat Schalk's throw by a hair. The bases were filled!

Leonard Walks to Plate.

Everybody on the grounds except the Chicago crowd broke into a wild cheer. The Red Sox rooters were like raving maniacs. Three on bases and two out in the last half of the ninth inning! Yes, but what chance did the Red Sox have with a pitcher's turn to bat? Whoever heard of a pitcher "breaking up" a game of ball in the ninth inning with three men on bases and two out? And Stahl had used up all his pinch hitters.

The cheers were at their height and Leonard was walking slowly toward the plate, bat in hand, when Wagner rushed up to Stahl, who was on the first base coaching line, and whispered something in his ear. Instantly Stahl yelled to Leonard.

"Leonard!" he cried.

The pitcher stopped and looked at his manager, who motioned him to keep away from the plate. There was a commotion in the dugout where the Red Sox players were gathered. They were crowded together with their backs to the field. Umpire Connolly called sharply to Stahl:

"Batter up; where's your batter?"

The Chicago section jeered and hooted. "Play ball." "Get a move on." "Get busy," and similar remarks were hurled at the Boston manager, who still stood in the coaching box.

"Whose turn is it to bat, yours, Leonard?" demanded Connolly, striding up to the pitcher.

Leonard nodded.

"Get up to the plate, then," roared Connolly. "You can't delay the game this way."

"Stahl won't let me," replied Leonard.

Connolly whipped off his mask and ran toward the Red Sox manager.

"Where's your next batter, Stahl?" he roared.

Stahl turned toward the Boston bench, where there was still a commotion among the players.

"Who Is Your Batter-"

"Just a minute, Tommy, give me just a minute," he said to the umpire. "I want to win this game."

Manager Callahan of the White Sox came rushing up. So did Captain Harry Lord. The cheers and the hoots died down.

"What's the matter here," exclaimed Callahan. "I claim the game by forfeit unless a man goes to bat for Boston right now."

Connolly pulled out his watch.

"I'll give you just three minutes to get a man up to the plate," he said to Stahl.

The megaphone boys hurried up. The Boston manager glanced at the players' bench. The bunch of Red Sox players separated and one of them jumped out of the dugout and began selecting a bat from the pile on the ground.

"Who is your batter?" demanded Connolly.

Stahl told him.

An instant later the heralds raised their megaphones to their lips and amid a deathlike silence bawled this announcement:

Gordon Kelly batting in place of Leonard.

"Oh, well," Burke exclaimed amiably, "I didn't really think you did, but I wasn't sure, so I had to take a chance. You understand, don't you, Joe?"

"Sure, I understand," Garson replied, with an amiability equal to the Inspector's own.

Burke's manner continued very amicably as he went on speaking.

"You see, Joe, anyhow, we've got the right party safe enough. You can bet on that!"

Garson resisted the lure.

"If you don't want me—" he began suggestively; and he turned toward the door to the outer hall. "Why, if you don't want me, I'll—get along."

"Oh, what's the hurry, Joe?" Burke retorted, with the effect of stopping the other short. He pressed the buzzer as the agreed signal to Cassidy. "Where did you say Mary Turner was last night?"

At the question, all Garson's fears for the woman rushed back of him with appalling force. Of what avail his safety, if she were still in peril?

"I don't know where she was," he exclaimed, doubtfully. He realized his blunder even as the words left his lips, and sought to correct it as best he might. "Why, yes, I do, too," he went on, as if assailed by sudden memory. "I dropped into her place kind of late, and I guess. . . . Yes, she was home, of course. She didn't go out of the house all night." His insistence on the point was of itself suspicious, but eagerness to protect her stultified his wits.

Burke Was Silent.

Burke sat grim and silent, offering no comment on the lie.

"Know anything about young Gilder?" he demanded. "Happen to know where he is now?" He rose and came around the desk, so that he stood close to Garson, at whom he glowered.

"Not a thing!" was the earnest answer. But the speaker's fear rose swiftly, for the linking of these names was significant—frightfully significant!

The inner door opened, and Mary Turner entered the office. Garson, with difficulty, suppressed the cry of distress that rose to his lips. For a few moments, the silence was unbroken. Then, presently, Burke, by a gesture, directed the girl to advance toward the center of the room. As she obeyed, he himself went a little toward the door, and, when it opened again, and Dick Gilder appeared, he interposed to check the young man's rush forward as his gaze fell on his bride, who stood regarding him with sad eyes.

Garson stared mutely at the burly man in uniform who held their destinies in the hollow of a hand. His lips parted as if he were about to speak. Then, he bade defiance to the impulse. He deemed it safer for all that he should say nothing—now! . . . And it is very easy to say a word too many. And that one may be a word never to be unsaid—or gainsaid.

Then, while still that curious, dynamic silence endured, Cassidy came briskly into the office. By some magic duty he had contrived to give his usually hebetudinous features an expression of enthusiasm.

"Say, Chief," the detective said rapidly, "they've squealed."

Burke regarded his aid with an air intolerably triumphant. His voice came smug:

"Squealed, eh?" His glance ran over Garson for a second, then made its inquisition of Mary and of Dick Gilder. He did not give a look to Cassidy as he put his question. "Do they tell the same story?" And then, when the detective had answered in the affirmative, he went on speaking in tones ponderous with self-complacency; and now his eyes held sharply, craftily, on the woman.

"I was right then, after all—right, all the time! Good enough!" Of a sudden, his voice loomed someberly. "Mary Turner, I want you for the murder of——"

Garson's rush halted the sentence. He had leaped forward. His face was rigid. He broke in on the Inspector's words with a gesture of fury. His voice came in a hiss:

"That's a d—d lie. I did it!"

CHAPTER XXIV.

Anguish and Bliss.

Joe Garson had shouted his confession without a second of reflection. But the result must have been the same had he taken years of thought. Between him and her as the victim of the law, there could be no hesitation for choice. Indeed, just now, he had no heed to his own fate. The prime necessity was to save her, Mary, from the toils of the law that were closing around her. For himself, in the days to come, there would be a ghastly dread, but there would never be regret over the cost of saving her. Perhaps, some other he might have let suffer in his stead—not her! Even had he been innocent and she guilty of the crime, he would still have saved her from the waters—he would save her until the end, as far as the power in him might lie. It was thus that, with the primitive directness of his reverential love for the girl, he counted no sacrifice too great in her behalf. Joe Garson was not a good man, as the world esteems goodness. On the contrary, he was distinctly an evil one, a menace to society, on which he preyed constantly. But his good qualities, if few, were of the strongest fiber, rooted in the deeps of him. He loathed treachery. His one guiltiness in this respect had been, curiously enough, toward Mary herself, in the scheme of the burglary which she had forbidden. But, in the last analysis, here his deceit had been designed to bring affluence to her. It was his abhorrence of treachery among pals that had driven him to the murder of the stool pigeon in a fit of ungovernable passion. He might have stayed his hand then, but for the gusty rage that swept him on to the crime. None the less, had he spared the man his hatred of the betrayer would have been the same. And the other virtue of Joe Garson was the complement of this—his own loyalty, a loyalty that made him forget self utterly where he loved, not too much to give.

Frozen With Horror.

The suddenness of it all held Mary voiceless for long seconds. She was frozen with horror of the event. When, at last, words come, they were a frantic prayer of protest.

"No, Joe! No! Don't talk—don't talk!"

Burke, immensely gratified, went nimbly to his chair, and thence surveyed the agitated group with grisly pleasure.

"Joe has talked," he said, significantly.

Mary, shaken as she was by the fact of Garson's confession, nevertheless retained her presence of mind sufficiently to resist with all her strength.

"He did it to protect me, " she stated, earnestly.

The Inspector disdained such futile argument. As the doorman appeared in answer to the buzzer, he directed that the stenographer be summoned at once.

"We'll have the confession in due form," he remarked, gazing pleasedly on the three before him.

"He's not going to confess," Mary insisted, with spirit.

But Burke was not in the least impressed. He disregarded her completely, and spoke mechanically to Garson the formal warning required by the law.

RIDERS WILL SCRAMBLE FOR COIN TO-NIGHT

WITH the kind permission of Old Man Weather, and with the enthusiastic co-operation of the greatest string of riders ever gathered for a race meeting in Dixie they're off to-night at the Motordrome for the fourth race meet of the local season—and it looks the best in the bunch.

There's more "pep" and enthusiasm out at Riders' Row to-day, than there has been since the meeting began. Up to this meet the riders have known that, mounted as they are now, Jock McNeil and Wilmer Richards were fast enough to take all the races. The rest got a chance only in the specials.

Now McNeil and Richards have been yanked out and put in a class by themselves. These two meet to-night in three match races at three miles each. This will settle the most momentous speed question of the season. But they will have it all to themselves.

It's a Mighty Close Thing.

With the two fastest machines out of it the rest of the riders will scramble viciously for the Sweepstakes and the Motordrome Purse. It could not be any more even. Of the eight riders who will take part there isn't over a fraction of a second to the mile difference in the machines or the riders. They are calculated to race, nose and nose, every inch of the difference, with the advantage slightly favoring Harry Glenn, because he has the longest nose.

Another improvement in the card comes from the fact that there will be four starters in each heat of the two regular races. In past meets two of the heats have had but three starters. And it really takes four to make the racing good. To-night both the preliminary heats and the finals will have four starters.

It will not be surprising to see some remarkable marks made to-night. The track has been proved so safe that every man is willing to let out to the limit. Thus far there hasn't been a man even scratched.

Accidents Looked For.

To the old-timers the absence of accidents is growing monotonous. Not one of them ever heard of three meets on a new track without at least one bad spill. They looked for them Wednesday night, and it really seemed to disappoint them that nothing happened.

It is a marvelous thing, considering the scores of men who have been killed on board tracks and considering the fine possibilities of a spill at 85 miles an hour or better, that none of the riders fear an accident. They try to be moderately careful. But to expect sudden death—well, it never occurs to them and they are the only men at the track who don't think of it when they come to close quarters at high speed.

With a safe track and machines getting better all the time there is no reason why a fast mark or two should not be set to-night.

The races will start to-night at 8:15. Cars will leave Five Points at short intervals. Tickets are on sale at Tumlin's and Shepherd's. All are provided with rain checks. These checks are good if rain interferes before the program is completed.

Ty Cobb Just Hates Those Polo Grounds

DETROIT, June 28.—"Ty" Cobb was glad to get away from the Polo Grounds. The "Georgia Peach" dearly loves his base hits these days, and in "Ty's" opinion the Polo Grounds is no place for a .450 batting average.

"For the life of me, I can not hit on those grounds," said "Ty." "No wonder the Yankees are not hitting the ball. Hitting is more or less guesswork in New York. Sometimes you never do see the ball till it gets past you.

"It's mighty bad for the outfielders, too; unless a fly is hit so high that it shows above the upper tier, it is very hard to see. A low grounder is often lost in the background of summer clothed fans. I like New York pretty well, but I'm glad I don't have to play 77 games a year on the Polo Grounds."

Ex-Giant Ewing to Return to Baseball

BELLEFONTAINE, O., June 28.—Bob Ewing, former major league pitcher, who quit the game last season to devote all of his attention to farming and the raising of hogs on his farm at New Hampshire, O., is debating with himself as to whether he should re-enter the national game.

He has an offer from Manager Bade Myers, of the Canton team, Interstate League. Myers and Ewing began their professional career together as members of Charley Stroeber's Toledo team. Myers being a catcher at the time.

Ewing, now 38, showed the old-time form he possessed during the nine years he played with the Cincinnati team. For a while Ewing was with the Philadelphia and New York National League clubs.

WIMBLEDON, ENGLAND, June 28.—Maurice E. McLoughlin, of San Francisco, is the only American left in the English tennis tournament. The American champion is left alone to fight his way to the finals. Craig Biddle, R. C. Powell and Wallace F. Johnson went down in defeat before their opponents.

Krazy Kat

M'GRAW BEATS ALL BUSHES TO GATHER TALENT

By Damon Runyon.

NEW YORK, June 28.—John J. McGraw is beating the business quite far and wide for baseball talent this season, having inaugurated the most systematic and thorough search for incipient athletes that he has ever conducted.

It is said that "Sinister" Dick Kinsella, the Varnish King, of Springfield, Mo., and McGraw's present chief of scouts, is under a commission that will take him over more territory than any other ivory hunter will cover this year.

This statement is borne out by the movements of the sinister one during the past few weeks. After thoroughly canvassing the bushes of the Middle West, Kinsella has suddenly leaped into the New York State and other leagues in this section of the country, and after a few weeks hereabouts he will comb the Pacific Coast and the Northwest.

The result of Kinsella's activities will probably not be definitely known until late in the summer, or until draft time. However, it is said that he has already spotted half a dozen pitchers.

More than likely Kinsella was instructed to pay particular attention to pitchers this year, as McGraw has suddenly found himself in need of that class of material.

* * *

FERDINAND SCHUPP, the author of the rising curve, is now the only real youngster with the club, and Theodore Goulait is about the only pitcher "plant" belonging to McGraw, although he still has some hopes of Frank Smith, now in the New York State League, developing later on.

Larue Kirby, who was carried along by the Giants for some time last season, and who was left at Mobile with Mike Finn this spring, has been cut loose entirely. There were various reasons why Larue would not do, chief of which was Larue himself. Finn had to send him away, and the last heard of the Michigan terror was at Pensacola, "way down in Florida.

Stray reports floating in and out of the far sticks indicate that Chance also has some scouts hard at work. It is said that the Peerless Leader has lined up a score of young athletes for September delivery and that several will come from the Texas League, incubator of some of the best ball tossers in the land. Chance also has an eye on various promising young men out on the coast and in the Southern League.

* * *

FOR a long time past there has been an effort on foot to discover the reason why ball players hit less on the Polo Grounds than any other field in either circuit, it being generally admitted that such is the case. Last season the Giants claimed that it was on account of the advertising signs in center field. They said these signs formed a background which practically destroyed their batting eyes.

This year the signs were left off a considerable section of the bleacher wall, and the space was painted an alluring green. Then the Giants proceeded to hit a little bit less than ever, thus acquitting the poor signs of the blame.

Tommy Murphy says he will be at the ringside when Ritchie and Rivers clash to challenge the winner. Murphy is surely entitled to a chance at the title as he has fought every worthy contender for the crown during the past two years.

Murphy has been forced to call off his bout with Johnny Dundee to be held on July 15 on account of a bad hand. He put the injured member out of commission while boxing with one of his sparring partners. Jack White may get the match with Dundee.

EVEN TENNIS EARNS COIN; AMERICA IS "SPORT MAD"

NEW YORK, June 28.—It has been said that America is "sport mad." That the general boom in interest in competitive events extends to tennis is proved by the figures just announced placing the total gate receipts of the recent international matches here at $19,000. Of this surprising sum $7,000 went to defray the expenses of the American team.

Of the net profits of $12,000, half was turned over to the Australian team. The West Side Lawn Tennis Club, on whose courts the matches were played, received $1,400, and the remaining $4,600 was put in the treasury of the National Lawn Tennis Association.

ZAMLOCH TRIES TO STEAL WITH ALL BASES OCCUPIED

DETROIT, June 28.—It has happened again in the big leagues. No longer is John Anderson the proud possessor of the glory of stealing second with the bases filled. Zamloch, a Tiger recruit hurler, pulled the stunt in the second game with the Nats. Stanage was on third, Moriarty on second and the pitcher himself on first. The latter started for second, hit the dirt with a great slide, arose, brushed himself and found Morrie planted at the base. It was a cinch to tag Zamloch, and then an ivory double resulted, as Stanage tried to reach home and was caught on the throw to the plate.

MORAN KNOCKS OUT LOGAN EASILY IN NEW ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS, June 28.—Frank Moran definitely settled the question of his superiority over Tim Logan last night by knocking out the New York boxer in the fourth round of their scheduled ten-round bout.

CHICAGO OPENS OLYMPIC GAMES TO GREAT CROWD

CHICAGO, June 28.—With the huge stands crowded to their capacity, the American Olympic games were opened under the most favorable circumstances to-day. The athletic carnival promises to outclass any event of the same nature eevr held in this country. Athletes from all over the United States and Canada, as well as the point winners from Sweden, who took part in the Olympic games at Stockholm last year, are in attendance.

Almost every conceivable sort of athletic contest has been arranged for the meet, which will continue until July 6. A swimming tank has been dug out in the center of the field and is so constructed that it can be boarded over and covered with earth when not in use. There is also a ski slide on which the skiing tournament will be held. As the weather will not permit the slides being covered with the natural coating of ice, grease has been used and in the preliminary trials found to be successful. Several polo games and feats of horsemanship also have been arranged. The army polo team will in all probability participate in this event.

* * *

TO-DAY the final championship contests for Chicago school children will be run off. The preliminary trials in the competitive drills, marching and like events, were held Thursday and yesterday. Fifty thousand children participated in the preliminaries.

To-morrow will be known as "Swedish Day," and the Swedish singing societies of Chicago have arranged for a monster chorus to join in the singing of national hymns and folk songs.

The intercollegiate athletic championships of the United States, including track and field sports, will be run off Wednesday, while the intercholastic championships, in which 2,000 high school and preparatory school boys are entered, will be decided on Thursday.

* * *

A "SANE Fourth" celebration will be given on Friday, interspersed with athletic events. In the afternoon the junior track and field championships of the United States, composed of 18 standard events, will take place. In the evening there will be more athletic events, educational moving pictures and a fireworks display.

Next Saturday will be the crowning day of the meet. The senior national championships, conducted under the auspices of the A. A. U., will be run off on that day and will bring forth some of the best athletes in the country. Such men as Sheridan, MacGrath, Sheppard, Kiviat, Kohlmainen and others of international reputation will be on hand.

* * *

DURING the meet there will also be archery contests, drills of firemen and policemen, three days of swimming, fencing, wrestling matches and trap shooting. Directly south of the stadium a large plot of ground has been laid out for the trap shooting competition which will be held on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week under the direction of E. W. Heath. The Boy Scouts will also give several exhibition drills under the direction of Dr. P. J. H. Farrell. Several power-boat races on the lake have also been arranged to take place during the week.

THE MOTORCYCLE RAG.

They were sitting in the gloaming and her cheeks were pale and damp
As she said good-bye unto her darling Steve.
But he said, "There ain't no reason for the teardrop in your lamp,
For you haven't got no business for to grieve.
I am going for to leave you and may not come back no more.
I will risk my life as everybody knows.
But although I don't come back again you oughtn't to get sore
With them life insurance papers in your nose."
And as he strode away
She sobbed and then did say:

CHORUS.

"As a patriotic hero
He can bat at minus zero,
And there ain't no sign of beauty in his face,
But I'll gather in the money
From my Motorcycle Honey
If he don't come back alive from that there race."

We note that Roy Good is captain of the Cincinnati motorcycle racing team. This reminds that the virtuous meet their demise at an early age.

Mr. Kirby, who coached the Yale crew, avers that he is well pleased with the ing that an Englishman sometimes is ing that an Englishman sometimes is easily pleased.

Mr. Kirby furthermore avers that Yale will do well when it has learned his stroke from the ground up. Several impartial spectators of the late race were under the impression that Yale had run aground.

"Do not be a fighter," advises James J. Corbett. This advice is followed assiduously by a great majority of our pugilists.

While polo may not strike a popular chord, one might say without fear of successful contradiction that it is not a game for invalids.

Fish stories were told long before men began writing ads for railway companies, but liars were amateurs in those days.

Speaking of the irony of fate, we note that the Red Sox paused long enough to raise aloft in the summer breeze a banner on which was the legend: "World's Champions."

We have it from Ban Johnson that Joe Birmingham is not competent to manage an American League team. Possibly Joe allows his team to win too often for the good of the league.

Boxing experts are wondering who will be Willie Ritchie's manager, but after the fracas on the Fourth a more lucrative position will be that of Mr. Ritchie's doctor.

Bob Fitzsimmons vouchsafes the information that George Rodel is a regular fighter. Jim Corbett expostulates that the said Rodel is a dub. Taking it by and large, Fits wins unanimously.

ROY WALKER IS DUBBED "W. JOHNSON OF MINORS"

NEW ORLEANS, June 28.—"Walter Johnson of the minors." This is the title that Southern League fans will bestow upon Roy Walker, former Appalachian League recruit whom Manager Frank took on several days ago to fill in for "Rube" Evans. Walker was given his premier Wednesday against the Lookouts, and proved himself everything his chief sponsor—Jack Adams—claimed: "More speed than any pitcher in the minor leagues."

Walker, though shaded in a pitching duel by Harry Coveleskie, threw sensational ball. He fanned ten members of Kid Elberfeld's mob, giving up but eight hits, which were turned into a brace of scores.

COULON DECIDES TO POSTPONE WILLIAMS BOUT

By Sol Plex.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 28.—Johnny Coulon is not going to fight Johnny "Kid" Williams, of Baltimore, in Tom McCarey's Vernon arena July 29. The bantam champion decided yesterday afternoon that he was not prepared for such a stiff battle in defense of his laurels and announced that he would wire McCarey last night insisting on a postponement until Labor Day. Coulon had given McCarey his word, and said he hated to disappoint Uncle Tom, but allowed a champion should take no foolish chances and that he would not fight Challenger Williams until he knew he was physically fit to put forth his best efforts in defense of the championship he has held for over five years.

Two Months in Mountains.

"Just to show the Vernon Club promoter that I intend playing fair ball for him I will leave for the coast July 1 or a few days later and stay there until Labor Day," said Johnny. "I want to get two months in the mountains before facing the Williams party. I am sure that by Labor Day I will be my old self, able to show Mr. Williams how a real champion fights.

"My right hand is bad and I am low in weight because of the hot weather we have been having. This is the first summer I ever tried to box, anyway, and I guess it is a mistake. When my father was alive he never permitted me to fight in the summer time. He argued that I was such a little fellow, always giving away weight, that training in the hot months would get me down too low. That was the trouble the other night at Kenosha. I guess the dad was right, and I will never again book a big match for June, July or August.

"It will be cool and nice in the mountains near Los Angeles and that will be just the thing for me. I can build up until a couple of weeks before Labor Day and then have something to take off when I start the training camp grind for Williams.

Is Sorry for Williams.

"I am sorry for Williams because the postponement will be hard on him. He already is on the scene, so Labor Day will make a long wait for him. However, he might take on Eddie Campi again on our original date, July 29, the winner to get me on Labor Day. Williams beat Campi in Eddie's first long fight. Since that Campi has whaled both Burns and Ledoux. I think he is entitled to another chance at the Baltimore boy."

MERCURY AT 105 KNOCKS OUT CUB CHARLEY SMITH

CINCINNATI, June 28.—The temperature of 105 proved too much for Charley Smith, Cub hurler, who collapsed after yesterday's game at Redland field. The veteran walked off the field without trouble, but once within the club house began to totter and suddenly fell to the floor. His mates rushed to his assistance. He was rushed to the hotel.

Yell Defiance at Blood Disorders

A Remedy That Has Shown a Most Remarkable Purifying Effect.

At Last You Can Get Rid of Blood Troubles—S. S. S.

The word medicine is one of the most abused in our language. There are certain medicinal properties just as necessary to health as the food we eat. Take, for example, the well-known tonic medicine, S. S. S. This famous blood purifier contains medicinal components just as vital and essential to healthy blood as the elements of wheat, roast beef, the fats and the sugars that make up our daily ration.

As a matter of fact, there is one ingredient in S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating each cellular part of the body to the healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment. That is why it regenerates the blood supply; why it has such a tremendous influence in overcoming eczema, rash, pimples, and all skin afflictions.

And in regenerating the tissues S. S. S. has a rapid and positive anti-dotal effect upon all those irritating influences that cause rheumatism, sore throat, weak eyes, falling hair, loss of weight, thin, pale cheeks, and that weariness of muscle and nerve that is generally experienced as spring fever. Get a bottle of S. S. S. at any drug store, and in a few days you will not only feel bright and energetic, but you will be the picture of new life. S. S. S. is prepared only in the laboratory of The Swift Specific Co., 137 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., who maintain a very efficient Medical Department, where all who have any blood disorder of a stubborn nature may write freely for advice and a special book of instruction. S. S. S. is sold everywhere by drug stores, department and general stores.

SPEEDY SPRINT ALL THAT CAN SAVE CRACKERS

By Percy H. Whiting.

IF the Crackers are going to win the pennant this year they must demonstrate it between July 4 and July 16.

The Crackers come home July 4 for the first and only home stay of any importance they get until August 14. On this home stay they get 12 games in a row.

They better win a big majority of them.

* * *

RIGHT now the Crackers are a dangerous distance behind the surprising Gulls, who lead the league. They show no evidence of overtaking Mike Finn's flying club.

No material gain will be made until the team gets home, of course. The Crackers do their gaining on home grounds.

This being true, the local club better make the most of the home stay between July 4 and 16. It will be a long time before they get another.

On July 17 the Crackers go out on a heart-breaking road trip. Of the next 28 games they play 24 on the road.

And you know well the Crackers aren't going to make any advances while this torrid July-August trip is in progress.

* * *

ONE fact that will help is that the Crackers wind up the season with 22 straight games at home. But unless they have begun to gain on the Gulls before that time they will never overtake them. They can't afford to wait for the last home stay. It will be too late. They can't afford to wait until the Gulls falter, for there isn't any certainty they are going to falter.

* * *

IF the Crackers are a disappointment in the Southern League—which they aren't yet—consider the case of the Pelicans. This team looked like a sure one-two-three club. Now it is nowhere and rapidly going further.

Laugh if you want to, but my own opinion is that this is Charley Frank's last year in Pelicantown.

This stuff has been coming in over the grapevine for a couple of months and longer—and coming pretty straight. The Cleveland club undoubtedly owns the New Orleans association. That's a moral certainty. They will want to put one of their own men in charge. They realize that Charley Frank is unpopular in his home town—why, it is difficult to figure, for he has never failed until this year to give them a good ball club. It is believed that the Cleveland folks wanted to be rid of Frank last year but didn't have the heart to fire him, after the showing he made with the 1912 Pelicans.

* * *

THEY need a new deal all around in New Orleans.

That ought to be the best baseball town of the league—it has the population. But it is nearly the worst. There is some good (or bad) reason for this because it is not a condition of long standing.

The Cleveland folks have figured around and have presumably decided that the sacrifice of Charley Frank would be a popular move.

So off comes his head.

A mere prediction, truly! But watch it come through.

PRIZE FIGHTRS' BALL TEAM JIMMY DIME'S NEW IDEA

NEWCASTLE, PA., June 28.—Jimmy Dime, the enterprising manager of pugilists and fight promoter, announces he has organized a team of ball players which would be composed of some of the best boxers in this country, and that they would play several exhibition games with professional teams this summer. Dime stated that there were few remunerative matches for the boxers during the summer and he intended to keep his team going until fall. His line-up is as follows:

Dan Daley, pitcher, heavyweight; Tom McMahon, first base, light heavyweight; Tommy Bresnahan, second base; Joe Chip, catcher, welterweight; George Chip, shortstop, middleweight; "Goo" Stewart, third base, middleweight; Patsy Brannigan, left field, featherweight; Jimmy Dime, center field, manager, and Tommy Jones, right field, lightweight.

By Joe Agler.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., June 28. Lefty Price will endeavor to prove to the Billikens that he is the goods this afternoon, with Chapman behind the plate. We should cop at least two of the three games scheduled for Montgomery. Manush will show up for Monday's game. He seems to be in mid-season shape.

Well, we got that revenge, after all, taking two of the series from the Turtles. Old King Brady twirled superb ball yesterday afternoon in spite of a sun which threatened to warp the grandstand out of shape and blister the infield. "Old Reliable" came back, good and strong, and demonstrated his worth to the Crackers.

We scored in the first on Long's single and Whitey's hit to center. We rocked along to the sixth without a chance, and then Smith singled, Bisland bunted and yours truly got a hit. Baerwald muffed Chapman's fly and Smith scored. I was nipped at second.

Newton was on the mound for the Turtles and pitched great ball, but his teammates couldn't help him much. We all were nearly suffocated with the heat.

MANUSH FOR CRACKERS; WILL JOIN ON THE ROAD

MONTGOMERY, ALA., June 28.—Frank Manush, formerly of the New Orleans Pelicans, recently unconditionally released by Charley Frank, has been signed by Manager Smith as utility player.

Manush has been in Memphis ever since his release. He will join the Crackers to-day or to-morrow.

It is presumed Manush will take the place of George Rohe as the Crackers' utility player.

JOE BEAN, director of playgrounds, deserves a large medal for getting the young men of Atlanta started in a big track and field meet. The event at Piedmont Park July 4 is deserving of the support of all those interested in the physical development of the young men in Atlanta.

No sport is cleaner, healthier or more desirable than track and field meets. Running, jumping and weight throwing contests develop those who take part in them. And moreover, they furnish a fine spectacle for those who witness them.

Unquestionably there will be a tremendous crowd at Piedmont Park Fourth of July morning to see the contests.

Of course no admission fee will be charged. There will be seats, if only on the grass, for all.

It is to be hoped that this meet will be the first of many. Atlanta ought to have one big track and field meet and several small ones each year. In the winter it ought to have an indoor meet in the Auditorium-Armory.

These things will come in time. The hardest work is done. A start has been made.

SINCE the Pittsburg club has been slumping, Manager Fred Clarke caused to be issued orders that the lid would be lifted on the anti-booze clause in the Pirate contracts.

"The players may drink beer if they drink it alone," said Clarke. "The use of the beverage as a tonic I do not believe to be harmful, at least not as much as the restless restraint caused by the clause against it."

This should be interesting to Pittsburg fans who may not know that some of the Pirate players, in St. Louis at least, were lifting the "lid" before Manager Fred Clarke got his shoulder under it, showing the practicability of such a clause in the first place.

FRED CLARKE, manager of the Pittsburg National League Club, closed a deal recently with the St. Joe Western League Club, for the purchase of Outfielders Joe Kelly and George Watson.

The consideration was not announced, except that money and players were involved. Each man is hitting above the .300 mark, but Watson is now out of the game with a broken leg. They will report to Pittsburg next spring.

WHITEY ALPERMAN never tires of telling stories of the great, perhaps the greatest, player the world has ever known.

"One night," said Whitey, the other day, "when Kelly was with the old Chicago team, a half-dozen carriages had been ordered by the late Al Johnson to take the players for a ride about the city.

"As the players waited in the hotel a down-and-out fan came wandering in, told Kelly the story of his hardships.

"Kelly went to Johnson.

"'How much will these carriages cost us?' he asked.

"'Oh, I suppose about $35 or $40,' said Al.

"'All right,' said Kel, 'let's call it off and give the money to this old scout.' And it was done.

"Another time," continued Alperman, "Kelly shouted to an umpire: 'Don't fine me, Mr. Ump!' The official stood glaring at him muttering threats of a $50 assessment.

"'Don't fine me,' repeated Mike. 'Fine one of those tight wads, there. It will teach him a lesson. It won't me. If you take $50 away from me, you take the drinks and cigars away from a lot of fellows who are waiting for me at the hotel.'"

THERE'LL be no hidden ball trick victims among the Naps this season unless some one gets careless and forgets Birmingham's instructions. The Naps are directed to hug bases until the opposing pitcher takes his position at the slab, unless they positively know where the ball is.

If the pitcher should take his position on the rubber and the then hidden ball trick be tried by an opposing player, the base runners would move up a base. The taking of the pitching position without being able to deliver the ball would constitute a balk as soon as the pitcher took down his hands.

JOE AGLER has the happy knack of being able to parry inconvenient interruptions with some smart retort that immediately quashes the opposition. And Joe is game to the core. He was playing in a rather noisy game a few years ago, and after a short time a big chunk of wood was thrown at him. Fortunately, the aim was bad, and it fell harmlessly on the platform.

Agler picked it up and showed it to the spectators.

"Good heavens!" he exclaimed in tones of mock anxiety, "one of you fans has lost your head!"

Lee Magee Is Crack Of Cardinals' Team

ST. LOUIS, June 28.—"If I had a few more like Magee" is the substance of a prayerful wish that lingers in the mind of Manager Miller Huggins, of the St. Louis National League team, after many a close game dropped by the Cardinals in which Lee Magee, the speedy young left fielder, has put up a beautiful all-around game, to the exclusion of most of his teammates.

The left fielder of the Cardinals is rightly entitled to this oft repeated, yet unspoken compliment. Magee has all the characteristics to a marked degree of an up-to-date ball player—the speedy kind. He is by far the fastest man on the Cardinal team and one of the best all-around players Manager Huggins has in his line-up. He will take all kinds of chances on the bases and has won many games by his fleetness alone.

MANDOT PICKS RITCHIE TO DEFEAT JOE RIVERS

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 28.—They say a fighter's opinion of another fighter does not amount to a snap. If you want to find out for yourself remember what is written in the following paragraph and think of it when the time comes:

"Joe Mandot, one of the brainiest fighters of the day, picks Willie Ritchie to beat Joe Rivers, and says Leachie Cross will stop Bud Anderson owing to Cross' tremendous power to hit."

See how near Joe comes.

GOPHERS WILL NOT MEET MICHIGAN NEXT FALL

MINNEAPOLIS, June 28.—The University of Minnesota will not meet Michigan on the football field next fall. This was announced to-day by the athletic authorities at the university. The date held open for the possible scheduling of Michigan October 25, has been given to the University of North Dakota. This precludes any possibility of a resumption of football relations with Michigan until at least another year.

RICKEY TO SCOUT FOR BROWNS

ST. LOUIS, June 28.—Branch Rickey, former catcher in both big leagues, who coached the University of Michigan team this year, has returned to his old job as scout for the Browns during the summer. He began work by taking to the team with him two of his Michigan stars, Pitcher Powell and Shortstop Lavans.

THORNTON WINS RIGHT TO BATTLE WITH CHAMPION

NEW ORLEANS, LA., June 28.—Rain played havoc with the schedule of the Southern tennis championship games at the New Orleans Lawn Tennis Club Friday. J. B. Adoue, of Dallas, Texas, went down in defeat before Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, in straight sets, 6-4, 6-1, 6-1. This brings Thornton, the winner of the tournament, against last year's champion, Carleton Smith. This match will be played late to-day after the doubles are finished.

The only other men's matches was stopped by darkness. Only Atlantans were participants, Smith and Mansfield against Tohrnton and Grant in the semi-finals. Much to the surprise of everybody Smith and Mansfield took the first two sets of the match (which is the best three out of five sets) before the game was called.

Grima and Phelps meet Adoue and Shelton to-day. Thornton and Grant will finish their match with Mansfield and Smith before the afternoon games start. Bummerstadt is carded against Lloyd and Hochendale is opposing Strouse.

Early in the afternoon the final round in doubles between the winners of the morning matches is expected to start. Clark is carded to meet the winner of the Hochendale-Strouse match. Mrs. Monroe will meet Miss Murphy at 4 p. m. and half an hour later Thornton will meet Smith. The final round in consolations will start at 5 p. m. The forecast for to-day calls for clear weather and it is expected that the program will be carried through without hindrance.

GUNBOAT SMITH WHIPS BOER RODEL IN THIRD

NEW YORK, June 28.—Gunboat Smith, of California, last night defeated George Rodel, the South African Boer, in the third round of a scheduled ten-round bout at Madison Square Garden. After Rodel had been knocked down twice Referee Billy John stopped the bout.

HERE'S A CHANCE TO MAKE SOME REAL MONEY

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

(Author of "The Triple Tie.")

It is now up to the readers of The Georgian who have been reading "The Triple Tie" on the magazine page to solve the problems of the novel and send in their conclusions in competition for the prizes aggregating $250 offered by this newspaper.

In this issue of The Georgian is printed the last part of Chapter 43 of "The Triple Tie." At the end of this chapter Gordon Kelly is brought on the scene again. There he is left while the readers of the story send their contributions to The Georgian. Readers will be allowed until noon of Thursday, July 3, in which to send in their answers. No communications will be considered unless they are received at The Georgian office by Thursday at noon or bear a postmark not later than that time.

The final chapters of "The Tripie Tie," as written by the author, will be printed in The Georgian of Monday, July 7.

Can You Solve Them?

As an aid to the readers who desire to compete for the prizes it may be said that the problems to be solved are these:

First—How does Gordon Kelly escape from the mountaineers?

Second—What happens to Mildred Deery, the heroine?

Third—How does Gordon Kelly, who never saw a game of baseball or never played a game of baseball up to the time he asked Manager Smith, of the Atlanta Club, for a position on his team—how did Gordon Kelly learn to catch the ball and bat in the phenomenal manner he showed in the games he played at Atlanta?

Fourth—What happened when Gordon Kelly went to bat in the last half of the ninth inning in the final and deciding game of The Triple Tie when there were three on bases, two out and four runs needed for the Red Sox to win?

Fifth—What is the final ending of the story?

It is suggested that readers who desire to compete for the prizes take up the narrative where it leaves off in this issue of The Georgian and complete it as they think it ought to be completed, or as they think the author has completed it, thus solving the problems presented.

Nothing Improbable.

Every novel is a mystery, else no one would read a novel. Speculation as to how a story will "turn out" is usually what keeps a reader interested to the end. Perhaps the mysteries of "The Triple Tie" are no more mysterious than are to be found in the average novel. Certainly every one who has read "The Triple Tie" from the beginning has an idea as to how things "turned out."

It may be hinted that the author has solved the problems in a rational way—that there is nothing improbable in the author's ending of the story.

Please remember that this is not a gussaing contest. Originality, literary value and analytical clearness will be largely considered in awarding the prizes. Three judges, in no way connected with The Georgian will make the awards for the best solutions of "The Triple Tie" problems.

So "go to it," readers. You have until noon of Thursday to send in your conclusions.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

To-day, or so much thereof as may be necessary, as they put it in legal phrasing, will be Joseph M. Brown's last day in the Executive office in Georgia.

However many people may view his departure, it may be set down as a fact that newspaper men generally will see him go forth to private life with their genuine good will and good wishes.

From the newspaper man's standpoint he has been in many ways a Governor among a thousand. He has been an infinite source of good "copy," and by such fruits are good Governors known in the newspaper man's world.

Governor Brown, had he elected to be a newspaper man instead of a Governor, undoubtedly would have been a star. There never has been anybody in the Executive office who could put as much "punch" into a promulgation as Governor Brown—at least, not within the memory of this writer.

Governor Brown's copy never needs editing. Whatever he has to say, he says it with the emphasis right where it belongs. When it comes to putting the "bang!" into a written document, the newspaper craft arise as a man and call "Little Joe" blessed!

Of one other thing every newspaper man coming in contact with Governor Brown seemingly is convinced—his courage.

He is the very smallest Governor physicially the State has had since Alexander H. Stephens, but he is fearless and straightforward in his utterances. He has insisted—and rightly—that he be not quoted in the public prints in important matters otherwise than directly. But when his written statements have come forth, they have been the real things!

His sense of humor is keen and his good nature irrepressible. If one grows to like him at all, one grows to like him all over. Moreover, one grows more and more to respect and esteem him as one grows more and more to know him.

It is but the simple truth to say that he has "set a pace" in the Executive office that will not be easy to follow. He has left his indelible imprint upon Georgia history, and it is safe to say that he retires with the regard and high esteem of a great majority of his fellow citizens.

Anyway, that's the way this writer feels about it.

Senator M. C. Tarver has stated positively that a bill to create the Chicamauga Judicial Circuit will be introduced in the present Legislature, refusing to say whether he or some other member from the counties affected will be the author of the bill.

From Representative Shropshire of Chattooga County, comes the suggestion of two new counties, Floyd alone remaining in the Rome circuit; Walker, Chattooga and Dade forming another circuit; Whitfield, Murray and Catoosa, a third, and Gordon and Bartown remaining in the Cherokee circuit.

The new Legislature, while promising enough, still shows its inexperience and yet hesitating quality of its membership.

When the clerk calls upon those favoring such and such a bill to stand up, practically the entire membership arises, or remains seated, as the case may be. The custom, of course, is merely to raise the hand, as a sign of voting.

One new member, remembering how easily he had squelched an adversary with a simple objection earlier in the day, yesterday entered a vociferous objection to a motion to adjourn. Naturally, he got a good laugh for his pains.

Nevertheless, the new Legislature looks like a pretty good bet.

Evidently it is composed of untried material, but that is no sure sign there is not plenty of good stuff in the makeup of it.

The real leaders of the new House are yet to be developed, but they likely are there, for all that!

"I do not expect to introduce any bill, but shall occupy the majority of my time in helping to kill some other fellow's bill," was the reply of Senator Charles E. McGregor to-day, when questioned as to any proposed legislation which he might introduce in the present session of the General Assembly.

He continued along the lines of legislation, saying: "I may introduce a resolution looking to the restoration of the old 'blueback speller' into our educational system. I shall also advocate enlarging the duties of the game wardens so as to include the enforcement of all misdemeanor laws upon the statute books, especially the prohibition law. I stand for the enforcement of all laws or their repeal."

Major McGregor is one of the most picturesque men in the General Assembly. He is a distinct type of the old-time solon, with quaint ideas about men and things here and there.

The Senator is a devoted follower of "Tom" Watson and is one of his most ardent champions upon all occasions.

Both President Anderson of the Senate and Speaker Burwell of the House are hard at work framing up the standing committees of the two houses of the General Assembly.

This is a tremendous task and requires much patience and careful consideration. Upon the composition of the various committees depends a very great deal of the Legislature's efficiency as a whole. It is necessary, therefore, that members be placed on such committees as they seem best fitted for, and the determination of that is no child's job.

Both the presiding officers hope, however, to have all committee assignments ready for promulgation by Wednesday of next week.

The Legislature is going to be swamped with Fourth of July invitations.

Already a dozen or so have been sent in, and there are more to come.

The result probably will be that the Legislature, instead of accepting any one and attending in a body some particular celebration, will divide into squads and scatter itself pretty well around all over the State.

A majority of the members likely will attend some big function in their own respective neighborhoods.

GERMANS' FARM LOAN PRAISED AS MODEL

Government Backs Mortgage System, Permitting Payment on Easy Installments.

By HARRIS WEINSTOCK.
(California Vice Chairman of American Commission.)

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

HANOVER, June 28.—The tour of the American Commission through Germany is demonstrating that in the matter of seeking the economic welfare and bettering the condition of the farmer Germany is fully 25 years in advance of us.

In Germany, largely through Government aid, the smallest farmer can borrow money more cheaply than the merchant, generally as cheaply as any great financier could borrow it despite the fact that the farmer needs dollars where the financier would need millions.

The Government, in some instances, initiates banks, in other cases liberally aids banks that have the end in view of enabling the farmer to get credit for land purchase or improvement at the world's lowest rate of interest or the longest possible time for repayment.

Effects of Credit System.

This system, combined with cooperative distribution, has been the foundation of the unprecedented growth and development of German agriculture in the last two decades. It is authoritatively stated that the soil of Germany is made to yield on an average about twice as much per acre as the American soil, despite the fact that the American soil in its virgin state is as good if not better.

This is possible in Germany because the farmer gets whatever financial aid his circumstances warrant and because of the interest the Government takes in giving him a scientific education in agricultural matters.

Given the same high cost of land, the same high cost of cultivation, the same small holdings under which the German farmer labors, an American farmer, paying the price he does for the use of money in meeting the difficulties he faces when farming on a small scale, would literally starve when the small German farmer is highly prosperous.

Farm Problems in United States.

The last census shows farm tenancy in our country increasing out of all proportion to ownership. This serious matter should not be treated lightly by American statesmen. Men will fight for their land where they won't for their landlords. The most valuable asset a country can have is its small farmer.

Minimize this asset and you weaken the very foundation upon which a nation rests. Wisdom dictates that every effort should be made to encourage the American farm tenant to become a farm proprietor and succeed as such.

The experience of Germany and other European countries thus far investigated by the commission demonstrates that the first step along this line is to enable the small farmer to get all the financial credit whereto he may be entitled at the lowest market rates with the longest time for repayment on the installment plan. The German land mortgage system does all this.

It is this system modified to meet American conditions that is strongly appealing to the commission as the great message to be brought home as a result of its investigation.

Europe's Mortgage System.

Under the European amortization plan the small farmer gets his money at from 4 to 5 per cent interest, payable at his option at the rate of one-half of 1 per cent a year on the principal. He thus has over 50 years wherein to wipe out his mortgage or as much less time as suits his convenience.

His gross annual payment for interest and principal is considerably less than the American farmer pays for interest alone.

It is my opinion and hope that the American commission will be able to present some plan to the American people whereby the German land mortgage system can be applied to American conditions. It will then become the opportunity, as it should be the duty, of American statesmen to devise legislation, whever legislation is essential, to carry out this plan.

This will be taking the first step toward advancing the highest economic welfare of the small American farmer, the very backbone of the nation.

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

Diplomatic to the Very Last.

An Atlantan just returned from a visit to France tells this one:

The Mayor of a French town had, in accordance with the regulations, to make out a passport for a rich and highly respectable lady of his acquaintance, who, in spite of a slight disfigurement, was very vain of her personal appearance. His native politeness prompted him to gloss over the defect, but after a moment's reflection he wrote among the items of personal description:

"Eyes, beautiful, tender, expressive, but one of them missing."

Sweeping Assertion Of a Professional.

At a banquet of New York newspaper men recently a story was told to exemplify the pride which every man should take in the work by which he makes a living.

Two street sweepers, seated on a curbstone, were discussing a comrade who had died the day before.

"Bill certainly was a good sweeper," said one.

"Y-e-s," conceded the other, thoughtfully. "But don't you think he was a little weak around the lamp-posts?"

Doors and What They Really Mean.

"If the wages I pay you here in the store are too small to make it possible for you to live on them," said the stony-hearted merchant, "I'll tell you what I'll do. My wife has been advertising for three weeks for a housemaid. You take the job and we will pay you $7 a week, give you excellent board, provide you with a nice room and let you have Thursday and Sunday afternoons off. You can have practically every cent you get. The work won't be as hard as it is here, either."

"Yes, but here I am allowed to come in the front door."

Builds 2-Acre $15,000 Home for Her Cats

GREENWICH, CONN., June 28.—Mrs. Clifford B. Harmon, daughter of Commodore E. C. Benedict, lifted the first spadeful of ground to-day in the construction of what is to be the most complete home for cats in this country.

The "cattery" is to cover more than two acres of ground. There are to be eight rooms, hot and cold water, electric lights, gas for cooking, two baths, a kittens' nursery, steam heat. In addition there is to be a seven-room cottage for Mrs. F. Y. Mathis, who has been breeding famous cats for about ten years.

French and Spanish To Slay Wild Tribe

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

GIBRALTAR, June 28.—An army of over 50,000 Spanish and French troops is being massed in Morocco where the natives have gone to war against the foreigners. One thousand Spanish troops sailed to-day.

Desert heat and typhoid fever is killing many soldiers. No quarter will be extended to the Kabyle tribesmen, the most ferocious of the natives.

User of Dahomeyan Salve Is Fireproof

NEW YORK, June 28.—Fire Commissioner Johnson contemplates sending to Africa for a barrelful of "drayon," the sap of the papau tree, to smear on the 4,000 firemen in this city to make them pain-proof while fighting fires.

The commissioner came to this decision after Amgoza Lee, a native of Dahomey, held a burning match against his naked arm, then against his face and his tongue. He showed no evidence that he felt pain.

$920,630,000 IS COTTON CROP'S 1912 VALUE

Federal Report Shows the South Produced 14,313,015 Bales. Less Than 1911 Production.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The Southern cotton planter should worry. According to a bulletin soon to be issued by Director Durand, of the Bureau of Census, Department of Commerce, the cotton crop for the United States in 1912 amounted to 14,313,015 bales of 500 pounds each, and was worth the trifling sum of $920,630,000.

Although the crop last year was 11.9 per cent less than that of the previous year, it was worth $60,790,000 more than it was in 1911. This almost equals the banner year for cotton, which was in 1910 when he crop amounted to but 12,005,688 bales, 2,307,327 bales less than it did this year, but was worth $963,180,000, the most valuable crop ever raised in this country. While 1910 led in value, 1911 led in amount, the crop that year being 16,250,276 bales.

The statistics show that the cotton crop for the past four years has increased 32 per cent. When it is considered that, of the total area of the countries from which returns of cotton ginned were made, only about one-eleventh was devoted to the production of cotton in 1911 and 1912, the figures afford some idea of the possibilities of cotton production in the United States.

Rebels Advance on Juarez; Fight Near

EL PASO, TEXAS, June 28.—Pancho Villa, Mexican rebel leader, who has announced his intention of taking Juarez and executing General Salazar, commander of the garrison, in the bull ring, established outposts within three miles of the town.

Ortega, who has 500 men, may cooperate with Villa. If Juarez falls, it will remove the most important Mexican port of entry on the United States border from Huerta and may result in the downfall of the Huerta government.

Mrs. Chester will be escorted by her sons, Charles, aged 13, and Henry, aged 14. They will assist her in selling souvenirs.

Woodrow Wilson Held as a Vagrant

COLUMBUS, OHIO, June 28.—Woodrow Wilson, aged 36, of Washington, D. C., was arrested here to-day on a charge of vagrancy. He pleaded guilty to the charge and was given 30 days in jail.

Wilson said he was not related to the President and gave his occupation as a skin finisher.

Says He Produces Fuel From Water

PHILADELPHIA, June 28.—Through the invention of a device in which water is used as fuel, it is claimed that Henry Clay Wade, a Philadelphia inventor, may revolutionize the production of artificial heat.

The Wade process decomposes water into the gases hydrogen and oxygen, which are combined with carbon and burned so that the heat produced by the combustion of the oil is produced three-fold.

All contestants in the race for The Georgian and American ponies are keyed up to the highest pitch just now, for the day when the bonus offers will expire is near at hand.

Boys and girls are straining every nerve to get promises fulfilled before July 5, for subscriptions brought in now count more than they will at any future time during the contest.

"Many of the boys and girls waste a lot of good time trying to find out what their rivals are doing," says the contest manager. "This is foolish. It is very likely that accurate information can not be had, for contestants are bragging, just to discourage the others in the race.

"The contestant who goes after votes with all his might will have no time to work about rivals, and will not need to worry about the others, either.

"The thing for the boys and girls to do is to set their minds on winning a pony outfit, and let nothing else distract their attention. No one ever won a fight who went into it half-heartedly."

The standings will be published to-morrow, and there will be gains shown worthy of careful notice.

Nat Goodwin Must Not Eat at Own Cafe

LOS ANGELES, June 28.—Others may dine at the Cafe Goodwin, but not Nat Goodwin, with carte blanche all the way down the menu from caviar to camembert, may not. The genial host found himself in a new role when he sat down in his own cafe. Dining became so inexpensive that it seemed unreasonable not to dine often and well.

The result was that Mr. Goodwin, a few days ago, found himself ill and called a doctor. The doctor told him that he had been too good a patron of the Cafe Goodwin and must not think it his duty to test the entire menu.

BLOUNT'S BOOK IS LAUDED BY BRYAN

Macon Man's Criticism of Philippine Officers Is Referred to as "Valuable Literature."

WASHINGTON, June 28.—A letter from William J. Bryan, now Secretary of State, published in the current issue of Life, in which high praise is given to a book denouncing the policy of American administrators in the Philippines, attracted much comment here to-day.

The book was written by James H. Blount, of Macon, Ga., formerly a judge in the Philippine courts, and is entitled "The American Occupation of the Philippines." It was brought out about a year ago. Copies were sent to members of the House and Senate, and it has been reported that Andrew Carnegie and others interested in "anti-imperialism" have aided its distribution.

Mr. Bryan's indorsement is in response to the query: "What is the best book you have read during the last twelve months?"

Mr. Bryan's reply, dated Miami, Fla., February 8, 1912, is:

"I have been kept so busy this winter that I have not had an opportunity to read very many books, and books differ so much that it is difficult to single out one and give it a position of pre-eminence.

"One of the most interesting books I have read is the one written by Judge James H. Blount and published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York, entitled 'The American Occupation of the Philippines.' It presents a large amount of information on the Philippines question and that information is selected and arranged with intelligence. As that subject is one of great importance, I regard this as a valuable contribution to the literature upon the subject—the most valuable that I have seen."

Rate on 50 Chinese Skeletons a Puzzler

NEW ORLEANS, June 28.—What rates to charge for shipping 50 Chinese skeletons from this city to San Francisco is bothering freight agents of this city. The skeletons are "knocked down" and boxed, ready for trans-shipment and burial, "under the eyes of Confucius."

The railroad declares bodies must have been buried at least 20 years before they can be classed as "merchandise." Only a few of the Chinese now under discussion have been interred that length of time.

Quarry Manager Is Shot by Ex-Employee

Walter Venable is in Grady Hospital with three bullets in his abdomen and Bill Collum is in the Stone Mountain jail as a result of a fight Friday. Venable, the son of A. O Venable, is assistant manager of the Venable Stone Works. Collum formerly was an engineer there.

According to report, Collum accosted Venable in front of a drug store and passed an insult. Venable knocked him down three times. When Collum arose the third time he began shooting.

Venable was rushed to Grady Hospital in his father's automobile. Mr. Venable said his son's wounds were not serious.

The Proper Thing To Do Whenever You Want A Good Cook A Cozy Room A First-Class Stenographer Bookkeeper Salesman or Clerk Is To Let A Georgian "Want Ad" Get It For You.

They Are Easy to Write and Easy to Pay For

COTTON GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 28.—Spot people and Liverpool were credited with stopping the July notices yesterday, which were said to be about 15,000 bales.

* * *

There is not much looked for in the market until the Government reports its condition figures and the acreage estimate, which is likely to be about 3 per cent increase, while conditions are generally expected around 82 to 83 per cent. However, if the scattered long interest in July is eliminated, this option might be forced higher.

* * *

"When those in control of July believe the liquidation to be over, something is going to happen," remarked J. M. Anderson.

* * *

* * *

Whether July is a "dead duck" it is not definitely known, but brokers close to leading spot interests intimate that the fireworks are not yet over.

* * *

Sentiment is decidedly mixed and the market is in a waiting attitude, pending Bureau day.

The Journal of Commerce has the following on the condition of the cotton crops in North and South Carolina and Georgia:

"North Carolina—There is no material change in the condition from a month ago, when the report of this journal made it 78 per cent. The season is about two weeks late, due largely to cold weather. The plant is generally small and stands poor, while a number of localities are affected with lice. Cultivation is good, except in a few sections, which are grassy. Since the cold spell the weather has been more favorable and cotton is showing improvement.

"South Carolina—Owing to the recent cold spell the crop is now two to three weeks late, but since the warm weather set in the plant is growing nicely and showing improvement. The plant is small and stands generally are poor, but the fields are clean and cultivation good. Some localities, however, are in grass, with the exception of a few lice, the crop is free of insects. Percentage shows an increase over last month, when it was 69.9.

"Georgia—Conditions are very irregular and spotted in Georgia. On account of dry weather early in the season cotton was slow in germinating and the crop is now fully two to three weeks late. The plant is small, but strong and healthy. Cultivation is good and rainfall ample, but stands are generally poor and irregular. Insects are not complained of, and the weather generally is favorable. Percentage condition shows improvement over a month ago, when it was 76.2."

Dogwood, the principal source of shuttles for use in cotton mills, is growing scarcer year by a year, and various substitutes are being tried, but with no great success.

* * *

Liverpool Conference: "No resolutions passed, but conference approved American recommendation c. i. f. and 5 per cent actual tare and universal type which was made. King, Neville and Francis, representing Americans' new type, like present Liverpool from middling up, about half grade lower below middling.

"It is expected that Liverpool and others will adopt new type."

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Theory mars the crop prospective and a condition handicaps the market. The talent, therefore, is idle enough to worry about environment. Bulls admit the crop over a large area is doing splendidly, but taunt their constitutional enemies with the query, 'How long would it require unfavorable weather or the boll-weevil to put it on the blink?' Bears admit that in some sections the crop is below par, but assert with a show of confidence that a continuation of good weather, with a few timely rains, will enormously improve the condition of that portion of the crop, which thus far has made least progress.

"So the talent has come to expect a Government acreage figure next Thursday showing an increase over last year of about 3 per cent and a Government condition percentage of between 82 and 83. Meanwhile, America knows about what to expect in the way of tariff changes and may begin to shape her affairs accordingly. England's trade is in excellent condition, and the rings are beginning to hear that many foreign mills are running low on stocks of raw material; the movement to secure universal cotton types seems to be making satisfactory progress for the first time in the history of the trade."

WILSON APPROVES DISSOLUTION PLAN

Big Advance Follows Report. President in Harmony With Agreement.

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Dullness pervaded the stock market at the opening to-day, most issues ranging beneath Friday's closing. Canadian Pacific declined a point on a few selling orders.

Amalgamated Copper, after opening unchanged, shaded ⅛. Union Pacific began ⅛ off, but after half an hour had sustained a net gain of ⅛. United States Steel was ⅛ lower at the outset, but later recovered. Utah Copper, Southern Pacific, Reading and Atchison made trifling fractional advances.

St. Paul commenced with a gain of ¼, but soon lost it and scored a net decline of ⅜. Chesapeake and Ohio and Chino Copper each lost ⅛. Norfolk and Western and Pennsylvania each dropped ¼.

The curb was quiet.

Dealings in the London market were very light. American shares in London were irregular.

Announcement from Washington of the approval of an agreement of the dissolution of the Harriman merger put Union Pacific up 3¼, to 148⅜ before the close. The balance of the list was strengthened. Canadian Pacific rose to 218, for a gain of 1⅝, and Reading went to 158⅝, a net gain of 1¼.

The market closed strong.

Government bonds strong. Other bonds steady.

CHANCE WOULD QUIT IF HIS HEALTH GAVE WAY

NEW YORK, June 28.—Frank Chance will make good with the New York Yankees if his health doesn't go back on him.

Chance is no quitter. He undertook a big task in New York, but he'll get away with it unless his nervous system falls him. The least little thing would upset him last fall. They say he is doing better this year. He should stick with the Yanks and produce a winning club next year. If his health bothers him however, he'll jump the club overnight and go back to his orange ranch in California.

Care and Attention Should Be Given to Chicks After Weaned

Chicks Should Be Fairly Well Feathered Before Weaned—Dryness Essential, Both in House and Yard.

Edited by Judge F. J. Marshall.

When chicks are forced to look after themselves by being weaned by their mother, or are changed from a brooder to a brood coop, is when they begin to demonstrate their inheritance of strength and vigor or their lack of it. When these changed conditions take place, then it is that they must depend almost wholly upon their own resources. Then they must depend upon the warmth of their feathers and internal heat. The chicks, if hearty and healthy, will push forward in rapid growth to maturity. Strong, healthy parentage makes itself felt, as do also all the conditions of food, feeding, care and management. The age at which chicks should be weaned or removed from the brooder depends upon the variety of considerations—the condition of the chicks themselves as to advancement, the climatic conditions of the season. The little fellows should be fairly well feathered and able to withstand, to a reasonable degree, the sudden changes that frequently come in almost any section of the country. Much depends upon the breed, the season and care with which they are to be handled. The smaller, laying breeds feather out very quickly, and should be pretty well feathered and ready to colonize by the time they are eight weeks old, and will stand quite cool weather if they are only kept dry. The American breeds and common mixtures about that size and type will require about ten weeks for the same process. While they are heavy, Asiatic breeds are very slow maturing and require from three to four months to get anything like a good covering. The weather conditions are very strong factors in the rearing of chicks after they are weaned. Dryness is very essential both in the houses and the yards. While dampness and chilly winds are very likely to cause trouble, on the other hand hot, sultry weather often has a bad effect when they can not escape from their unhealthy condition. There is nothing like plenty room and ventilation. All brood coops should be provided with good wire fronts to provide the ventilation, and at the same time to prevent intrusion from night prowlers. It is advisable at all times to avoid crowding, and there is only one way to do that, and that is by not allowing a great number to roost in one coop or house, no matter how large it may be, for when the nights become cool, they will huddle into small space, and those which happen to be about in the middle must suffer. Chicks of about the same size and vigor should only be allowed in the flock. Any weaklings should be culled out and placed with a younger lot. This will not only be an advantage to the weakly ones, but will make a more uniform-looking lot out of each. Separating the sexes is a profitable proposition, and in the case of the smaller or laying breeds or mixed and common chicks of that type the separating should take place at weaning time. This will give both the cockerels and the pullets a much better chance for making good growth, and their management can be so much better adapted to the purpose in view for each. If the flocks can be separated and given unlimited range, so much the better. Where chicks can be allowed the run of growing corn, it makes an ideal run conducive to growth. Where it becomes necessary, on account of the garden, the nearness to neighbors or similar reasons, to yard the young ones, the fence may be made tight by a 12-inch board or a strip of 1-inch mesh wire, and the balance of regulation poultry wire. Where chicks have only limited space, it is a good thing to spade up at least part of the yard quite often with grain scattered about in it. Protection from the extreme heat in summer should be provided if there is not already shade trees in the yards. Old canvas or awnings of some kind can easily be arranged and are fully appreciated by the youngsters. Another very profitable thing where heavy, sudden showers are common are little shelters easily reached by the little ones. They will save many a chick from an untimely death. These little emergency shelters need not be any more than two or three wide boards slanted against the fence or supported in any other similar manner to run the water off. No chicken coop or house should be a hotbox in the day time or at night. Screen the front, also windows and doors, to allow good circulation. Of course, good, wholesome food is necessary to provide rapid growth. Avoid all sour mixtures of a sloppy nature, except sour milk or curd, which is good and wholesome. Dry grains and feed of that nature are advisable. Keep them filled up. Rapid growth requires full and complete feeding.

CHICKENS need more care and attention the next two or three months than any other time during the year. It is perfectly natural for chickens to have lice and mites, and unless you look after them they will multiply in such quantities to prove profitable. The little chicks will not reach the growth they should and the hens will not lay if they are covered with these pests. We have ties that you can not expect your flock remedies that will positively get rid of them and the cost is very little. For 35c you can get a can of either Lee's, Conkey's or Pratt's Lice Liquid and we will guarantee either of these preparations to give entire satisfaction.

WE have just gotten in a lot of nice, fresh, clean Red Comb Feed. The price for scratch and mash is $2.25 per 100 pounds.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Close-in Acreage Bought for $32,375

Edwin P. Ansley Adds to Park. Three Fine New Residences. Other Realty Notes.

Recent additions to Ansley Park seem to portend an extension of that residential neighborhood until it reaches limits much farther to the north than at present, perhaps as far as Rock Springs, or beyond. This was hinted at the other day by members of the Edwin P. Ansley real estate agency and is borne out in part thus far in the additions already made, and an addition of more recent date which has just gone to record.

Mr. Ansley has bought from Mrs. Sallie J. Bearse a 16.9-acre tract, bounded on the east by North Boulevard, etc., for $25,375, on terms of $1,267 cash and notes at 7 per cent; and from Paul E. and Lizzie L. Stephens a 5-acre tract, bounded on the north by Rock Springs Avenue and on the east by Boulevard, for $7,000, on terms of $1,000 cash and the balance in notes at the same rate of interest.

The original Ansley Park tract contained about 200 acres and was bought from the late George W. Collier for about $300,000, Mr. Collier having bought it in the pioneer days for $150. Since the above purchase some 20 acres were bought from Mrs. Harriet F. Brandon for approximately $18,000, and the addition of more acreage promises to bring about more interesting development.

Papers in Interesting Sales.

The northeast corner of Peachtree Road and Peachtree Way, which was sold June 15, 1912, by George L. Dickinson, of Florida, to Eugene Dickey, has been transferred to J. W. Goldsmith, Jr.

Deeds have gone to record in the conveyance May 9 of 87 Luckie Street, 40 by 150, to Paul Goldsmith from Alex Reeves, for $28,000, on terms of $11,250 cash, the assumption of a $10,000 loan and notes at 6 per cent.

Two More Fine Residences.

Dr. Joseph Jacobs, it was learned Friday, will move from his downtown house on the east side of Peachtree, between Sixth and Seventh Streets, and will erect a handsome country home on Peachtree Road, between Buckhead and Brookhaven.

Charles Godfrey, builder of one of the first homes at East Lake and now a resident there, has bought a lot at Brookhaven, and it is reported will soon build there.

The contract for J. J. Haverty's fine residence on Peachtree Road, north of Jack J. Spalding's "Deerland," has been let to [illegible]man Construction Company and work will start in a short time. The house will cost about $50,000.

Application for Permit.

Application was made Friday for a permit to construct at Auburn Avenue and Butler Street the $76,803 auditorium and business building of the G. U. O. I. O. O. F. (colored).

More Money in Sight.

People vitally interested in the condition of the local money market have noted with pleasure a decided "loosening up" of the banks with loan funds. A depositor who was turned down flatly several weeks ago on application for a $5,000 loan received this week a letter from his bank saying that he could get the money at the usual rates. Many others who found a temporary tightness in money have succeeded in making arrangements to carry on business operations.

Charter Applied For.

Heirs of the late Sidney H. Phelan have applied to the Superior Court, through Barry Wright, of Rome, attorney, for a charter for the S. H. Phelan Company (Inc.), the purpose of the organization being to handle the Phelan estate.

After Executive Mansion.

Although Forrest & George Adair expect to make no proposition to the State Legislature this year relative to acquiring the Executive Mansion property for Asa G. Candler, several other real estate agents will probably open up the matter. One of the latter gathered all the information necessary some time ago and announced that he would offer a site on Peachtree Road. It is stated authoritatively that the Rhodes mansion on Peachtree, near Seventeenth Street, will not be put up this year. Charles H. Black offered it two years ago as agent for Mr. Rhodes.

Mr. Candler has no definite plans for his extensive frontage, beginning with the old Capital City Club property. He declared some time ago that the local political situation was such that he didn't feel justified in going ahead, and intimated that he had not been able to determine what character of improvements to make.

New Subdivision Opened.

Oakwood Terrace, a subdivision of 100 residence lots owned by the McKenzie Trust Company, has been placed with the L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency for sale. This property is just off East Lake Drive and adjoins Druid Hills. The Bottenfield Agency now has subdivisions worth approximately $1,000,000.

Knox Going to Convention.

The local delegation of real estate dealers going to the sixth annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges in Winnipeg the latter part of July, promises to be swelled by several other delegates before the lists have closed. Fitzhugh Knox, builder and real estate developer, has plans for going. The names of others have been published.

Additions to Sales Force.

O. P. Lyman, formerly with the A. K. Hawkes Company, and C. S. Martin, formerly of Tennessee, have joined the city sales force of the L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency. Both men are well acquainted with realty values and are expected to prove a valuable addition to the firm.

"My Field the World"--A Fine Motto

(Copyright, 1913.)

A great wonder of the deep is the German ship Imperator, which arrived in America the other day.

What a chapter old Job could have talked about that ship if he had seen it!

Think of a ship with three wireless operators working night and day, ALWAYS ABLE TO TALK TO ONE SIDE OR THE OTHER OF THE OCEAN. Think of a ship with nine decks, seven for first-class passengers—a monstrosity almost as complicated as Dante's hell.

Think of a ship with six elevators running up and down, suites of twelve rooms, anchors that weigh more than twenty-five thousand pounds each, a ship with swimming tanks, greenhouses and a population equal to that of a small city.

Poor old "Behemoth," who impressed Job so deeply, would seem a very small thing compared to this modern Behemoth. The original Behemoth, who "drinketh up a river and hasteth not," could be tucked away in one of the coal bunkers of the Imperator, or burned up in one of the big furnaces and not noticed.

There are many wonderful things about that wonderful ship, with her five captains commanded by an admiral.

She is a great tribute to the power of the German people, a tribute to organization, a proof of the wonderful things that can be accomplished by men that are determined to excel.

But the best thing of all about this great ship is the motto written at her prow, "My field the world." That is a good motto, good for this ship that sails the ocean, good for the great philosopher, Bacon, when he said, "I have taken all knowledge for my province," and "nothing that affects man can be foreign to me."

It is a big motto, "My field the world." But not too big for a man who realizes that the world is man's property, his home and his garden, to be developed and owned by him, to be the firm ground from which he shall look out and study the real world, which is the infinite universe.

Every man worthy of the name should have in his mind that motto of the big ship, "My field the world," and interest himself in the world's doings, interest himself in the progress of the race, in its future and in its past, and determine to be a man whose field really IS the world, and not a mouse, whose field is the corner of some back yard.

A Shaken Confidence Must Be Restored

It will be a relief to the whole country to learn that the Diggs-Caminetti "white-slave" prosecutions in California are to be pressed with due diligence, despite the private pressure brought to bear on the Attorney General and others in Washington.

Indeed, such a course was inevitable the moment District Attorney John L. McNab, of the Northern District of California, made public his courageous letter of resignation to the President, thereby attracting public attention to a grave judicial scandal.

The expression of public opinion was both instant, widespread and practically unanimous. A flood of telegrams poured into the White House.

IT WILL TAKE MORE THAN AN ORDER FROM THE PRESIDENT to go ahead with all seemly speed with these cases, an order penned AFTER a storm of popular indignation had broken, TO RESTORE CONFIDENCE in the impartial workings of those courts of justice over which the Federal authorities have control and in those other officers of the Government who have shown such lax judgment on so serious an occasion.

Congress has the very urgent duty before it of not only establishing all the facts but also of FIXING THE RESPONSIBILITY AND THE BLAME.

:: THE OTHERS ::

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

ONE is the pride of the college,
Handsome and sunny and clever
Joking while gathering knowledge,
Slaving and worrying never.
Baseball and football and rowing,
Sanscrit and Latin and Greek—
Dazed by his wonderful showing,
All of the others stand meek.

One goes through life winning laurels,
Brilliant and able till death;
Proof against foes and their quarrels,
Crushing them all with a breath.
Much as a baby blows bubbles
One leaps along in the race,
Laughing at heartaches and troubles
All of the others must face.

This is a toast to the others,
Hewing their pathway through life—
All the less fortunate brothers
Comrades of sorrow and strife.
Standing and waiting and hoping,
Strangers to Fame and its pride,
Here's to the patiently groping!
Here's to the thousands that tried!

The Automobile

Everything Being Done to Make Automobiles Safe, He Says. They Have Done Wonders for American Roads.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

I WAS almost startled on seeing, in the current number of the magazine called Motor, a picture of an automobile furnished with the new French device of movable electric eyes!

Even when the auto's great glaring eyes are fixed in direction its resemblance at night to a demon of unimaginable swiftness and power is stunning, and one gets out of its way with panicky haste. But when it bears on each side of its head a glowing eye, which turns magically in all directions, searching out the fleeing pedestrian in his retreat by the fence or the hedge, and detecting every obstruction along the borders of its way, the verisimilitude is complete. Man has never yet made anything so thrillingly lifelike, but inspired with a life that seems more than human!

Everything Done for Safety.

Yet while, to the excited imagination, these movable mechanical eyes may increase the terror of the auto rushing through the night, they are, for all wanderers in the ways, all nomads of the night, a means and an assurance of greater safety. They proclaim, again, that the modern demon of the road is a kindly demon, who means no harm, although he speeds so swiftly, and who would not, willingly, hurt a hair of our heads. He is as desirous as are we who look upon him with fear, and jump at his croaking voice, to avoid all evil.

If those who still carp at the automobile, and nurse an antagonism to it, would consider what has been done, and what is still being done—as witness this latest device—to eliminate the peculiar dangers which its invention has introduced into the highways, they would find themselves taking a more philosophical view of things, and would cease their opposition to one of the greatest advances in locomotion that science has ever promoted. You have only to glance through the pages of the magazine I have mentioned in order to convince yourself that the inventors and manufacturers of auto vehicles hold nothing more dear than the question of safety; safety for those who ride and for those who only look upon the riders.

Put Bad Roads Out of Business.

It is the same with the roads themselves. Unthinking people sometimes blame the automobile for damaging the roads—as if most of the roads that we had before its arrival COULD be damaged! But, look at the other side of the affair. Only a few years ago every American traveling in Europe blushed at the thought of the painful contrast between the roads there and most of those that he was accustomed to at home. He could only console himself by the reflection that we were subduing a new continent, and required time to complete the work in good shape.

Then came the auto, and what has been the result? Within a few short years, solely by the stimulus that it has imparted, we have developed thousands upon thousands of miles of roadways that France herself might be proud of. This single invention has caused a leap of improvement that hundreds of years of ordinary progress would not have produced. The automobile has put the old, muddy, rutty, all but impassable roads of our fathers out of commission, and the whole country smiles with the improvement, and grows richer because of it.

Speaking of French roads, I read another interesting thing, which must be set down entirely to the credit of the automobile. We are now building better roads than they have in France, and the reason is because we have built them from the beginning with the needs of the auto in view. It has taught us how to build them. Many of the French roads are beginning to deteriorate. It is the automobile that has searched out and revealed their weak points. The growing use of auto-carriages of all kinds in the French army has brought a strain to bear upon the roads lying in the districts where the threat of invasion causes frequent military maneuvers in time of peace—a strain that was not foreseen when the roads were constructed—and some of them are proving unable to bear it.

Recognizes Their Value.

What will the French do? Will they abandon the army autos, or intermit the maneuvers? To do so would be to invite instant conquest of their country. No, they will reconstruct the roads, and increase the number of their auto cars. They know the inestimable value of the good demon that has come to revolutionize transportation on this planet, and the roads will have to be made durable enough to carry him on his civilizing and peace-promoting way; for the auto, in its manner, is as great a force for universal peace as is the strong battleship. Everything that links the world together makes for universal brotherhood, and the faster we travel the richer and more contented we become.

:: The Ionian Isles ::

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

IT was just 49 years ago that the Parliament of England with a never-to-be-forgotten magnanimity, resolved to return the Ionian Isles to their oldtime owners, the Greeks.

By the Treaty of Paris, in 1815, the high contracting parties, Great Britain, Russia, Austria and Prussia, agreed to place the isles under the exclusive protection of Great Britain. This agreement was reached not because it was desired by the others, but because it was demanded by Great Britain, the demand being backed by the British navy.

It was in these "Isles of Greece," Corfu, Zanta, Santa Maura, Ithaca and the rest, that modern Greek liberty had its birth, and thanks to England, it was there that it grew to the stately proportions of later years. Great Britain, through her protectorate, kept the islands safe from Turkish depredations, and in 1864 gave them to Greece.

On May 30 of that year the Lord High Commissioner of Great Britain handed over the archives to the Greek plenipotentiary, and on June 6 King George made his entry into Corfu.

Let it be remembered that this Corfu is none other than the ancient Coreyra—the little piece of earth that is responsible for the greatest calamity that ever overtook the human race. Coreyra brought on the Peloponnesian war between Sparta and Athens and their allies, the result of which was the ruin of Athens and the arrest of her wonderful civilization. Had it not been for that war the Athenian genius would have kept on with its development for we know not how long a period, and the gain to humanity would have been inconceivably great. From the cultural standpoint Athens was Greece. It was the home of the art, science, philosophy and eloquence, which made Greece immortal, and when Athens went down all that was not barbarism went down along with her.

Because Coreyra appealed to Sparta to help her fight Athens, and because, as a consequence of the fight, Athens was beaten and her empire practically wiped out, the harm was done to mankind that can never be estimated. It took the world eighteen hundred years to recover, even in part, that which was lost through the fatal Peloponnesian war.

::: LETTERS FROM THE GEORGIAN'S READERS ::

COFFEE.

Editor The Georgian:

What is the matter with the pure food inspector? Is he asleep on his job, that so many brands of adulterated coffee are suffered to be sold to the poor? Ever so many of them have chicory; and in color give a beautiful nut-brown result, but to an inveterate drinker of coffee they are as lifeless as turnip soup.

Suppose the inspector thinks that if people know what they are buying, it is all right. But how about the boarder, when it is passed off on him for coffee? And the temptation is too great, these days of high-priced food to buy the cheaper article.

CAR SERVICE AND STORMS.

Editor The Georgian:

It seems to me the public has a just cause of complaint regarding the street car service which is given them in this city during thunderstorms. It has, during the past few years, become the custom of the Georgia Railway and Power Company to suspend service during even very mild thunderstorms, and with proper equipment this practice seems to be without reason or excuse.

So far as my observation goes, it is not done in any other first-class town, and no sufficient reason has ever been given for doing it in Atlanta. People need the street car service as much when there is a rainstorm accompanied by lightning as at other times.

HOOPER SECURES NEW EVIDENCE FROM CONLEY

MORE SUSPENSIONS IN POLICE SCANDAL

Keefer Fights Stepson in Club

KEEFER ROW IN POLICE COURT

Broker, Mauled by Son, Will Fight Wife's Charge of Assault.

Mauled and pummeled by his young stepson, then arrested at the instance of his wife on the charge of disorderly conduct to which he will answer Saturday afternoon, David H. Keefer, prominent Atlanta broker, is convinced that the role of hero in a stormy matrimonial drama is not at all what it is cracked up to be.

The latest chapter in Mr. Keefer's highly interesting marital career was begun Friday evening when he went to the Piedmont Driving Club, in company with Deputy Sheriff Piennie Miner, to get possession of a $5,000 machine on a bail trover.

His stepson, Jack Marcy, had the machine, and when he saw Keefer approaching with the officer he promptly sallied forth to do battle. There were a few words, spectators say, but they were angry words.

Alleged to Have Used Feet.

Before Deputy Miner was aware of what was going on Keefer and his stepson had mixed. Young Marcy is said to have struck Keefer several times and to have added to this indignity by kicking him.

At this exciting juncture Deputy Miner stopped hostilities by stepping between the combatants. Miner took possession of the car in which Marcy had driven to the club.

Mrs. Keefer had been apprised of the encounter between her son and her husband and arrived at the scene just as peace was about to settle. She rushed up to her husband. His story is that she attempted to strike him and that he seized her by the wrists to save himself a second beating.

Wife Says He Struck Her.

Her version is that he struck her and on this tale she later asked for his arrest.

He heard that the warrant had been issued and went to the police station in a taxicab last night and deposited $200 bail. He branded the charge as ridiculous and as an effort to get revenge for the issuance of the bail trover.

The Keefers were married in 1906. Mrs. Keefer instituted divorce proceedings in 1911, but the case was dismissed, Keefer stated. Since then the two have been separated much of the time. They have not been living together for the last eight months. Part of this time Mrs. Keefer has been in her home in Connecticut.

Rebels Advance on Juarez; Fight Near

EL PASO, TEXAS, June 28.—Pancho Villa, Mexican rebel leader, who has announced his intention of taking Juarez and executing General Salazar, commander of the garrison in the bull ring, established outposts within three miles of the town.

Ortega, who has 500 men, may cooperate with Villa. If Juarez falls, it will remove the most important Mexican port of entry on the United States border from Huerta and may result in the downfall of the Huerta government.

Plans Airship Squad In All Russian Corps

ST. PETERSBURG, June 28.—Every Russian army corps is to have a flying squad if the plan of the Minister of War is carried out, it was announced in the Duma.

Great progress is being made in the aerial armament, it was said, and the Government recently doubled the number of dirigibles and had acquired craft known as "aerial dreadnoughts."

New Book Tells All About Health-Giving Waters in Georgia

A treatise on the mineral and commercial waters of Georgia has been issued by the State Geological Survey. It gives more than 200 analyses, and much other valuable data.

"Mineral Springs of Georgia" is the name which State Geologist S. W. McCallie has given to the pamphlet, and which is regarded as a valuable "handbook" for physicians.

The booklet tells of the accommodations for visitors at the various springs. It deals with the history of the springs, origin of mineral waters, definition of mineral waters, thermal springs, medicinal value, classification and geographical distribution.

Persons wishing a copy can obtain it by sending 16 cents postage to S. W. McCallie, State Geologist, Atlanta.

Builds 2-Acre $15,000 Home for Her Cats

GREENWICH, CONN., June 28.—Mrs. Clifford B. Harmon, daughter of Commodore E. C. Benedict, lifted the first spadeful of ground to-day in the construction of what is to be the most complete home for cats in this country.

The "cattery" is to cover more than two acres of ground. There are to be eight rooms, hot and cold water, electric lights, gas for cooking, two baths, a kittens' nursery, steam heat. In addition there is to be a seven-room cottage for Mrs. F. Y. Mathis, who has been breeding famous cats for about ten years.

Goethals Says Canal Is Air-Bomb Proof

NEW YORK, June 28.—Colonel George Goethals has returned to Panama. He will remain on the Isthmus until the first ship has passed through the canal. The Colonel laughed at the idea some aviators have they can destroy the Gatun lock by dropping powerful bombs from aircraft.

"I'd like to post a forfeit no aviator could do any serious damage," said Colonel Goethals. "We have not done our work on the locks without care and forethought. Attack from an aircraft has been considered in all the construction work."

Baroness Arrives to Wed St. Louis Man

NEW YORK, June 28.—Baroness Kalinewski, accompanied by her brother, Baron Heinrich Kalinewski, arrived here to-day on the Kaiser Auguste Victoria, and said, much to her brother's disgust, she is en route to St. Louis, where she is to marry James Hurley, a prominent railroad man of that city. Their courtship began a year ago in France when their autos came near colliding.

When asked if he thought he might not marry an American before he left this country, the Baron's only comment was, "Not for mine."

Rate on 50 Chinese Skeletons a Puzzler

NEW ORLEANS, June 28.—What rates to charge for shipping 50 Chinese skeletons from this city to San Francisco is bothering freight agents of this city. The skeletons are "knocked down" and boxed, ready for trans-shipment and burial, "under the eyes of Confucius."

The railroad declares bodies must have been buried at least 20 years before they can be classed as "merchandise." Only a few of the Chinese now under discussion have been interred that length of time.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Mrs. Marie Chester is preparing here for a hike to Minneapolis. She proposes to make the walk a means of restoring her fortune wiped out by a fire which destroyed her home in Middletown, N. Y. She will start within a week from the City Hall.

Mrs. Chester will be escorted by her sons, Charles, aged 13, and Henry, aged 14. They will assist her in selling souvenirs.

RIGID PROBE PUSHED BY BEAVERS

Charges of Corruption Made by Ex-Bluecoat, Who Promises Complete Expose.

Sensational disclosures which will result in the suspension of at least two more policemen were expected from the arrest Saturday morning of Claude Gray, a negro living at the notorious resort at the rear of 127 Auburn Avenue, which the four policeman suspended Friday are alleged to have frequented.

Gray is said to have full knowledge of a disgraceful affair which took place in the resort two weeks ago when two policemen are alleged to have become involved in a quarrel. The officers, it is reported, would have come to blows had not Gray stepped in between them and separated them.

Ola Bradley, the negro woman conducting the place, also used her efforts to prevent the men from fighting, it is said, threatening them that she would call the police station if they continued.

More Disclosures Near.

Both officers whose names have been mentioned to Chief Beavers in connection with the affair are said to be married.

Gray will be closely questioned today in the expectation that he will give the Chief the names of a number of other policemen who have been in the habit of making visits there.

"I am going to give Gray a thorough grilling," said the Chief. "The whole truth is what I am after, regardless of how big a scandal is stirred up by the revelations. All of the men are going to get a fair hearing. If these reports are erroneous or falsified they will have the opportunity to show it."

At the same time startling revelations were promised by Robert A. Wood, suspended policeman who resigned and promised a complete expose of corruption in the department. He said that all ranks would be affected, including the vice squad.

Chief Suspends Evans.

On a charge of suspected perjury, Chief Beavers indefinitely suspended Evans immediately following the suspension of Wood, Bailey and David. The patrolman was called before the Chief and stripped of his badge, braid and equipment. The case will be thrashed out by the Police Commission.

The evidence in Recorder's Court was that policemen had frequented the negro resort daily and uniformed men had often been seen entering it in broad daylight. One witness told of a midnight brawl participated in by four officers. The Chief said that he had obtained the names of the frequenters of the place.

He began Saturday morning inquiring into a report of police protection of the Auburn Avenue resort and others of its kind. A number of patrolmen were called before him the first thing after he reported to his office and he prepared to continue his inquiry through the day.

Claim They Got Evidence.

Plainclothesman W. T. Moon admitted to he Recorder that he had drunk whisky at the Auburn Avenue resort with the negress operator. He said, however, that he had only done so to secure evidence. The Recorder took him to task for not having reported the incident earlier.

A negro woman inmate of the house said Moon had been intimate with a girl there. Moon made an emphatic denial of the charge, but said he had been a frequent visitor to the place in the interest of getting evidence against it. Policeman Adams testified to the same thing.

Patrolman Wood branded Moon as a deliberate liar and said that he would prove perjury against him. He also said he would prove Adams had perjured himself, after which he would introduce evidence that would

Capital's Tyranny Caused Unionism, Says E. H. Walker

Edward H. Walker, candidate for Governor in the race with Hoke Smith and Joseph M. Brown, has issued a statement defending unionism in reply to Governor Brown.

"To concentrate indescribable wealth of millions of dollars into the possession of one man," he says, "two things are necessary. First, the law must be broken. Most of the great fortunes of to-day rest on a foundation of bribery, corruption and defiance of the law. Second, the assembling of these big fortunes had to be done by exploiting the lifetime productivity of hundreds of thousands of laborers.

"The Government's failure to protect labor from this crushing greed forced labor to protect itself."

Nat Goodwin Must Not Eat at Own Cafe

LOS ANGELES, June 28.—Others may dine at the Cafe Goodwin, but not Nat Goodwin, with carte blanche all the way down the menu from caviar to camembert, may not. The genial host found himself in a new role when he sat down in his own cafe. Dining became so inexpensive that it seemed unreasonable not to dine often and well.

The result was that Mr. Goodwin, a few days ago, found himself ill and called a doctor. The doctor told him that he had been too good a patron of the Cafe Goodwin and must not think it his duty to test the entire menu.

Says He Produces Fuel From Water

PHILADELPHIA, June 28.—Through the invention of a device in which water is used as fuel, it is claimed that Henry Clay Wade, a Philadelphia inventor, may revolutionize the production of artificial heat.

The Wade process decomposes water into the gases hydrogen and oxygen, which are combined with carbon and burned so that the heat produced by the combustion of the oil is produced three-fold.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 28.—A report is current that Ambassador Walter H. Page is trying to lease the Duke of Manchester's town house at 5 Grosvenor Square.

The house is comfortable, but unpretentious. It would be lost in one of the drawing rooms of Dorchester House, the home of Whitelaw Reid, when he was Ambassador. The rent would be about $17,000 to $20,000.

It is reported Roumania is about to abandon her attitude of neutrality and take sides against Bulgaria.

GOV. SLATON TAKES OATH SIMPLY

With the simplest ceremonies in the history of the State, marked by the absence of all military display and red tape, John Marshall Slaton becomes Governor of the State of Georgia in the hall of the House of Representatives of the State Capitol Saturday at 12 o'clock noon, succeeding Governor Joseph M. Brown.

The joint committee on inaugural arrangements selected from the memberships of the Senate and the House has conformed to the expressed desires of Governor-elect Slaton in preparing for his induction into office, and there is none of the pomp and excitement attending previous gubernatorial inaugurations. Within an hour or an hour and a half after the ceremonies begin, Governor Joseph M. Brown will have relinquished his office and made preparations to retire to his Cobb County farm, and His Excellency John Marshall Slaton will take his place as head of the State Government.

Governor Slaton will give voice to certain distinct policies of his own in his inaugural address, which also will be his message to the Legislature. He will recommend certain legislation and condemn certain other legislation, but there will not be that tense, enrvous feeling that usually characterizes a change of administration, though it be usually hidden behind a mask of pomp and display.

Great Crowds Attend.

The weather of inauguration day was all that could be desired, and as early as 10 o'clock crowds of Georgians began to throng the Capitol building. Half an hour later seats in the Hall of Representatives were at a premium, and it is expected that hundreds of the sightseers will be forced to stand during the whole of the ceremonies.

Virtually no legislative work will be done by either of the bodies of the Legislature Saturday. The House convened at 10 o'clock and the Senate at 11 o'clock. Both houses will adjourn at 11:45 o'clock and the members of the Senate will proceed to the House for the inauguration ceremonies. With the Senate and the House gathered in joint session messages will be sent to the retiring and incoming Governors that all is ready. Guests of honor, who include the State House officials, judges of the Supreme Court and of the Court of Appeals, ex-Governors and Federal judges, will meet in the executive offices with Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton. They will be escorted to the House by the joint committee on arrangements, comprising Senators John T. Allen and M. E. Rushin and Representatives Crawford Wheatley, R. N. Hardeman and R. R. Blackburn. There they will be seated directly in front of the Speaker's stand.

Address Closes Ceremonies.

The inauguration ceremonies will be opened with invocation by Rev. John B. Robins, of the Trinity Methodist Church. Randolph Anderson, President of the Senate, will present Governor-elect John M. Slaton to the General Assembly, after which Chief Justice William H. Fish will administer the oath of office. Then the Secretary of State will present to Governor Brown the great seal of the State of Georgia. The latter will then in turn deliver it to the Secretary of State. The ceremonies will close with the inaugural address of Governor Slaton.

User of Dahomeyan Salve Is Fireproof

NEW YORK, June 28.—Fire Commissioner Johnson contemplates sending to Africa for a barrelful of "drayon," the sap of the papau tree, to smear on the 4,000 firemen in this city to make them pain-proof while fighting fires.

The commissioner came to this decision after Amgoza Lee, a native of Dahomey, held a burning match against his naked arm, then against his face and his tongue. He showed no evidence that he felt pain.

NEW FACTS GIVEN BY NEGRO

Admissions to Prosecutor's Aide Strengthens Rumor That He Saw Girl Just Before Crime.

Frank A. Hooper, associated with Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution of Leo M. Frank on the charge of strangling Mary Phagan, admitted Saturday that Jim Conley, negro sweeper at the National Pencil Factory, had made important additions to the story of his part in the murder mystery and had told of circumstances on the day of the crime which he had revealed in none of his previous statements.

A persistent report that Conley had made the startling admission that he had seen Mary Phagan enter the factory on the day she was slain arose at the time the negro was questioned more than an hour by Solicitor Dorsey early in the week, and this rumor was heightened after Attorney Hooper's interview with the negro Friday.

In all of his statements to the detectives Conley denied he saw the girl at all on the day of the crime until he was horrified by the sight of her dead body lying in the rear of the second floor where he was directed by Leo Frank. Solicitor Dorsey is believed to have wrung the statement from him that he did see Mary Phagan when she came in the door of the factory and went to the second floor to Frank's office.

Hooper Mum on Topic.

Mr. Hooper refused either to affirm or deny this report, declaring that his connection with the case was so recent that he would not be warranted in making any definite statement for publication in reference to the evidence in the possession of the prosecution.

His attention was called to the fact that while in all of the published statements of Conley the negro denied seeing Mary Phagan go into the factory, no one connected with the prosecution could now be induced to say that he still stuck to this particular and puzzling feature of his story. Mr. Hooper, however, would make no comment on the circumstance.

He contented himself with the general assertion that the State has a big stack of evidence of which the defense is in entire ignorance and of which they will remain in ignorance until it is presented when Frank is placed on trial for his life.

"I went to the police station yesterday merely for the purpose of having Conley rehearse his story to me," said Mr. Hooper. "It is true that he told me of a number of circumstances of which I had been in ignorance before, circumstances which have a most important bearing on the case. He made additions to his story which, while they were along the same general line as his last affidavit, gave a detail that assisted me remarkably in getting a much clearer idea of the events as they happened on that day.

Will Be Revealed at Trial.

"I can not tell what they were. They will be revealed when the trial is in actual progress. Mr. Dorsey has guarded his evidence carefully and has refrained from trying his case in the papers. If it were not presumptuous for me to step in and give this evidence away to the public and to the defense it would at least be most unwise.

"The negro appeared to be telling a straightforward story. He said nothing that caused me to alter my theory of the killing in the least. So far as I know, there never has been any serious doubt that those were bloodstains there on the second floor. I am confident that it was there that the attack was made. I questioned Conley only occasionally, preferring to let him go ahead and tell his story in his own way. Only when some point puzzled me for a moment did I stop him for an explanation."

Mr. Hooper said Solicitor Dorsey had built up a convincing case against the factory superintendent, one into which the defense would have extreme difficulty in injecting the element of "reasonable doubt."

merit the immediate discharge of the two men.

Bailey said that the two men, Wood and Adams, had testified against him in a spirit of revenge because several months ago he arrested Adams for fighting.

Beavers to Investigate.

Sergeant J. H. Barfield, who raided the Auburn Avenue place Friday, told the court that on a previous visit to the place he had seen a patrolman in the hall. The man told him he was looking for a girl who was wanted at headquarters. Chief Beavers will inquire into this incident during the day.

Police Commissioner B. Lee Smith was a prominent figure in the police inquiry Friday. He was closeted with the Chief for several minutes before he suspended the first three men, and later in the day he made a personal investigation of the place on Auburn Avenue. He said that unquestionably the resort had been receiving police protection from a subordinate source.

The next meeting of the Police Commission is July 8, and unless there is a called meeting the charges will not be officially aired before that time.

Accused Men Confident.

The officers under suspicion were confident they would be completely exonerated when the Police Board took action, and have retained Attorney R. R. Jackson to represent them. Jackson said that his sympathies were wholly with the dismissed men and he denounced the system where officers of the same rank were assigned the duty of spying on their brother officers.

Policeman L. J. Milam was questioned by Captain Terry late Friday night. He was a partner with Wood, the suspended officer. He was questioned regarding Wood's conduct and reported visits to the place.

Chief Beavers said that his inquiry into the reports of misconduct against his policemen would be extensive and that it would not stop until the department had been purged of every man found guilty of an act unbecoming a policeman.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

To-day, or so much thereof as may be necessary, as they put it in legal phrasing, will be Joseph M. Brown's last day in the Executive office in Georgia.

However many people may view his departure, it may be set down as a fact that newspaper men generally will see him go forth to private life with their genuine good will and good wishes.

From the newspaper man's standpoint he has been in many ways a Governor among a thousand. He has been an infinite source of good "copy," and by such fruits are good Governors known in the newspaper man's world.

Governor Brown, had he elected to be a newspaper man instead of a Governor, undoubtedly would have been a star. There never has been anybody in the Executive office who could put as much "punch" into a promulgation as Governor Brown—at least, not within the memory of this writer.

Governor Brown's copy never needs editing. Whatever he has to say, he says it with the emphasis right where it belongs. When it comes to putting the "bang!" into a written document, the newspaper craft arise as a man and call "Little Joe" blessed!

Of one other thing every newspaper man coming in contact with Governor Brown seemingly is convinced—his courage.

He is the very smallest Governor physically the State has had since Alexander H. Stephens, but he is fearless and straightforward in his utterances. He has insisted—and rightly—that he be not quoted in the public prints in important matters otherwise than directly. But when his written statements have come forth, they have been the real things!

His sense of humor is keen and his good nature irrepressible. If one grows to like him at all, one grows to like him all over. Moreover, one grows more and more to respect and esteem him as one grows more and more to know him.

It is but the simple truth to say that he has "set a pace" in the Executive office that will not be easy to follow. He has left his indelible imprint upon Georgia history, and it is safe to say that he retires with the regard and high esteem of a great majority of his fellow citizens.

Anyway, that's the way this writer feels about it.

Senator M. C. Tarver has stated positively that a bill to create the Chicamauga Judicial Circuit will be introduced in the present Legislature, refusing to say whether he or some other member from the counties affected will be the author of the bill.

From Representative Shropshire of Chattooga County, comes the suggestion of two new counties, Floyd alone remaining in the Rome circuit; Walker, Chattooga and Dade forming another circuit; Whitfield, Murray and Catoosa, a third, and Gordon and Bartown remaining in the Cherokee circuit.

The new Legislature, while promising enough, still shows its inexperience and yet hesitating quality of its membership.

When the clerk calls upon those favoring such and such a bill to stand up, practically the entire membership arises, or remains seated, as the case may be. The custom, of course, is merely to raise the hand, as a sign of voting.

One new member, remembering how easily he had squelched an adversary with a simple objection earlier in the day, yesterday entered a vociferous objection to a motion to adjourn. Naturally, he got a good laugh for his pains.

Nevertheless, the new Legislature looks like a pretty good bet.

Evidently it is composed of untried material, but that is no sure sign there is not plenty of good stuff in the makeup of it.

The real leaders of the new House are yet to be developed, but they likely are there, for all that!

"I do not expect to introduce any bill, but shall occupy the majority of my time in helping to kill some other fellow's bill," was the reply of Senator Charles E. McGregor to-day, when questioned as to any proposed legislation which he might introduce in the present session of the General Assembly.

He continued along the lines of legislation, saying: "I may introduce a resolution looking to the restoration of the old 'blueback speller' into our educational system. I shall also advocate enlarging the duties of the game wardens so as to include the enforcement of all misdemeanor laws upon the statute books, especially the prohibition law. I stand for the enforcement of all laws or their repeal."

Major McGregor is one of the most picturesque men in the General Assembly. He is a distinct type of the old-time solon, with quaint ideas about men and things here and there.

The Senator is a devoted follower of "Tom" Watson and is one of his most ardent champions upon all occasions.

Both President Anderson of the Senate and Speaker Burwell of the House are hard at work framing up the standing committees of the two houses of the General Assembly.

This is a tremendous task and requires much patience and careful consideration. Upon the composition of the various committees depends a very great deal of the Legislature's efficiency as a whole. It is necessary, therefore, that members be placed on such committees as they seem best fitted for, and the determination of that is no child's job.

Both the presiding officers hope, however, to have all committee assignments ready for promulgation by Wednesday of next week.

The Legislature is going to be swamped with Fourth of July invitations.

Already a dozen or so have been sent in, and there are more to come.

The result probably will be that the Legislature, instead of accepting any one and attending in a body some particular celebration, will divide into squads and scatter itself pretty well around all over the State.

A majority of the members likely will attend some big function in their own respective neighborhoods.

Pryor Street Church To Celebrate Sunday

Y. M. C. A. Suspends Operation for Year

After twenty-seven years' continued operation the Y. M. C. A. will go out of business July 1, pending the completion of the new association building a year hence. The suspension is necessitated by an agreement to turn the Y. M. C. A. building, at Pryor Street and Auburn Avenue, over to its new proprietors, the Chamber of Commerce.

While the work of the association will be suspended, the organization will be kept intact. Temporary headquarters will be established in the Baptist Tabernacle.

School Instructors To Meet Next Week

Among those who will lecture at the conference are Dr. H. A. Hollister, University of Illinois; Dean Southwick, Boston School of Expression; Miss Elizabeth Holt, Augusta, and President R. P. Howe, of Thomaston.

$920,630,000 IS COTTON CROP'S 1912 VALUE

Federal Report Shows the South Produced 14,313,015 Bales. Less Than 1911 Production.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The Southern cotton planter should worry. According to a bulletin soon to be issued by Director Durand, of the Bureau of Census, Department of Commerce, the cotton crop for the United States in 1912 amounted to 14,313,015 bales of 500 pounds each, and was worth the trifling sum of $920,630,000.

Although the crop last year was 11.9 per cent less than that of the previous year, it was worth $60,790,000 more than it was in 1911. This almost equals the banner year for cotton, which was in 1910, when he crop amounted to but 12,005,688 bales, 2,307,327 bales less than it did this year, but was worth $963,180,000, the most valuable crop ever raised in this country. While 1910 led in value, 1911 led in amount, the crop that year being 16,250,276 bales.

The statistics show that the cotton crop for the past four years has increased 32 per cent. When it is considered that, of the total area of the countries from which returns of cotton ginned were made, only about one-eleventh was devoted to the production of cotton in 1911 and 1912, the figures afford some idea of the possibilities of cotton production in the United States.

Mercury Threatens Rapid Climb, Then Decides to Behave

The official thermomter on the roof of the Empire Building threw a scare into the United States Weather Bureau Saturday morning by registering 80 degrees of heat at 7 o'clock. It was the highest 7 o'clock mark of the summer.

Had the usual gain—5 to 10 degrees—followed between 7 and 8 o'clock, all records for early morning temperatures would have been shattered. But the thermometer did another unheard of thing—stood still for an hour.

The minimum temperature of the night was 72 degrees, which was the mark at sunrise Saturday morning. The thermometer registered 75 at 6 o'clock.

West wind of only eight miles' velocity and average humidity had no perceptible effect. "Fair and continued warm" is the forecast.

A., B. & A. Strikes Securities Snag

Receivers of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad have been unable to make arrangements to retire the $4,700,000 of 5 per cent receivers' certificates which fall due Tuesday, July 1.

It is believed the certificates will be made to bear 6 per cent from maturity until paid, which may be for some time, in view of the condition of the money market.

H. M. Atkinson and E. T. Lamb left Atlanta early in the week for New York, where they now are endeavoring to arrange for refunding the securities, which in effect are notes made one year ago.

In the absence of these men, representing respectively majority and minority bondholders, no one in the A., B. and A. offices here was able to say just what progress has been made.

The notes in question were sold to retire an issue of $3,250,000 receivers' obligations and equipment trusts, and to provide for certain improvements.

The road went into the hands of a receiver January 2, 1909.

ATLANTA GIRL WITH 'THE GREAT AMERICAN VOICE' TO SING HERE

Miss Lalla B. Cannon.

Miss Eulalia Bright Cannon, the Atlanta girl who was designated by Professor Sergei Klibansky as possessor of "the great American voice" and awarded a $3,000-a-year grand opera scholarship, will be heard at a free concert of the Atlanta Music Festival Association at the Auditorium at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. She will sing the aria, "O Don Fatale," from "Don Carlos," the song that won her the greatest honor, perhaps, ever accorded an American vocal student.

Miss Cannon, who prefers to be known as Lalla B. Cannon, is spending her vacation with her mother, Mrs. L. C. Cannon, of 647 Peachtree Street. She is a dramatic soprano with a truly wonderful range, and unless her friends prevail upon her to give a benefit recital this will probably be her only appearance in Atlanta this summer. In August or early September she will return to New York to resume her operatic studies under Professor Klibansky, as holder of the scholarship given by a wealthy New York woman.

"I always have aspired to grand opera," Miss Cannon told a Georgian reporter yesterday. "I think it is the grandest career in the world. I have accepted the scholarship. Professor Klibansky will say how long I must study in America and when I must go to Europe and whether I shall become an opera singer. I shall do just what he says, and I do so hope he will think I am fitted for opera."

Gives Her Mother Credit.

Since it all depends on Professor Klibansky's dictum, it can be asserted dogmatically that Miss Cannon will become a grand opera star. In selecting her over 400 competitors, men, women and girls, Klibansky said her voice undoubtedly was capable of as wonderful development as any of the great sopranos now heard in Wagnerian opera.

To her mother Miss Cannon owes and freely gives the credit for the fairylike fortune by which she rose to fame overnight and her sparkling prospects for a future career. A singer from babyhood, Miss Cannon always thought she was a mezzo, and her teachers, even until a few months ago in New York, shared her belief. She wanted to sing all the time, but her mother prevailed upon her to desist, that she might not waste her powers by untutored efforts. When she went to New York to study she scrupulously refrained from vocal exertion, and although the strain of practice taxed her strength, her vocal capabilities were conserved until she sang before Klibansky and was pronounced not a mezzo, but a dramatic soprano of rare quality and power.

Since then she has sung before Madame Gadski, and the peerless diva has expressed the wish to hear her again when next she visits America. To her acceptance of her mother's advice, Miss Cannon ascribes the preservation of her voice till the fortunate meeting with Klibansky.

Fortune Came by Accident.

And here is how she sang for Klibansky and won the scholarship, as she told it to The Georgian:

"A girl friend saw in The New York American an advertisement for 'the great American voice,' inserted by Professor Klibansky. He had taught in the Berlin Conservatory, and was then an instructor in Damrosch's Conservatory, known as the Institute of Musical Art. My friend told me about the advertisement, and I went to see Professor Klibansky that afternoon. There were so many other singers there that it was late when I sang 'The Birth of Morn,' a simple song, for him. He told me to come back the next morning, and I did. I sang 'O Don Fatale,' the aria from 'Don Carlos,' and as you know, I won the scholarship."

When it is considered that the honor of being declared possessor of "the great American voice" and receiving the $3,000 annual scholarship had been promised to another girl before Miss Cannon sang for Klibansky, it readily is seen her recital before him must have convinced him she was another Jenny Lind or Adelina Patti in embryo.

The other girl was Miss Jean Vincent Cooper, of Jackson, Miss. Professor Klibansky told the wealthy patroness it would be a shame for either of the girls to miss securing the best instruction obtainable, particularly when Miss Cooper was a mezzo and Miss Cannon a soprano and each was without a peer in her own field. The patroness then agreed to duplicate her offer, and Miss Cooper and Miss Cannon each were awarded the honor and the prize.

Asked what she thought of the opera as a career for aspiring girls, Miss Cannon replied, "Really, I can't say. To tell the truth, I don't know, for I myself am not in opera yet. But I want to try it, for I think it will be splendid."

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"Quo Vadis" to Leave.

"Quo Vadis" will leave Atlanta after the two performances at the Grand today. It is not possible that these wonderful pictures will ever be seen here again.

Starting on Monday afternoon, and continuing all week, with daily matinees at 2:30 and night performances at 8:30, a complete entertainment of an hour and one-half made up of genuine Edison Talking Pictures, and the highest class of first run motion pictures, will be the Grand's attraction.

New Bill Ready at Forsyth.

The seven acts making up this week's program of vaudeville at the Forsyth will scatter to all directions after tonight's performance, and starting Sunday and Monday morning, seven new features will assemble to make up a bill that will be seen for the first time Monday afternoon at the busy theater.

The headliner will be Edward Abeles. Billy McDermott, the tramp comedian; Violinsky, the pianist and violinist, and the Welch-Francis Company in a genuine laugh-producing sketch, are others on the new bill.

GERMANS' FARM LOAN PRAISED AS MODEL

Government Backs Mortgage System, Permitting Payment on Easy Installments.

By HARRIS WEINSTOCK.
(California Vice Chairman of American Commission.)
Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

HANOVER, June 28.—The tour of the American Commission through Germany is demonstrating that in the matter of seeking the economic welfare and bettering the condition of the farmer Germany is fully 25 years in advance of us.

In Germany, largely through Government aid, the smallest farmer can borrow money more cheaply than the merchant, generally as cheaply as any great financier could borrow it despite the fact that the farmer needs dollars where the financier would need millions.

The Government, in some instances, initiates banks, in other cases liberally aids banks that have the end in view of enabling the farmer to get credit for land purchase or improvement at the world's lowest rate of interest or the longest possible time for repayment.

Effects of Credit System.

This system, combined with cooperative distribution, has been the foundation of the unprecedented growth and development of German agriculture in the last two decades. It is authoritatively stated that the soil of Germany is made to yield on an average about twice as much per acre as the American soil, despite the fact that the American soil in its virgin state is as good if not better.

This is possible in Germany because the farmer gets whatever financial aid his circumstances warrant and because of the interest the Government takes in giving him a scientific education in agricultural matters.

Given the same high cost of land, the same high cost of cultivation, the same small holdings under which the German farmer labors, an American farmer, paying the price he does for the use of money in meeting the difficulties he faces when farming on a small scale, would literally starve when the small German farmer is highly prosperous.

Farm Problems in United States.

The last census shows farm tenancy in our country increasing out of all proportion to ownership. This serious matter should not be treated lightly by American statesmen. Men will fight for their land where they won't for their landlords. The most valuable asset a country can have is its small farmer.

Minimize this asset and you weaken the very foundation upon which a nation rests. Wisdom dictates that every effort should be made to encourage the American farm tenant to become a farm proprietor and succeed as such.

The experience of Germany and other European countries thus far investigated by the commission demonstrates that the first step along this line is to enable the small farmer to get all the financial credit whereto he may be entitled at the lowest market rates with the longest time for repayment on the installment plan. The German land mortgage system does all this.

It is this system modified to meet American conditions that is strongly appealing to the commission as the great message to be brought home as a result of its investigation.

Europe's Mortgage System.

Under the European amortization plan the small farmer gets his money at from 4 to 5 per cent interest, payable at his option at the rate of one-half of 1 per cent a year on the principal. He thus has over 50 years wherein to wipe out his mortgage or as much less time as suits his convenience.

His gross annual payment for interest and principal is considerably less than the American farmer pays for interest alone.

It is my opinion and hope that the American commission will be able to present some plan to the American people whereby the German land mortgage system can be applied to American conditions. It will then become the opportunity, as it should be the duty, of American statesmen to devise legislation, whever legislation is essential, to carry out this plan.

This will be taking the first step toward advancing the highest economic welfare of the small American farmer, the very backbone of the nation.

'New York Tea Party' To be $20,000 Affair

WASHINGTON, June 28.—A second "Boston Tea Party," but a peaceful one, will be pulled off in New York Harbor to-day, when 100,000 pounds of tea, valued at $20,000, will be dumped overboard.

The Government experts condemned it and six months were granted to the importers to get it out of the country. Now the Collector of the Port has been ordered to destroy it if he can find it any time after noon to-day.

STATE BOARD AID FOR MARRIAGE BILL ASKED

State Board of Health Department Already Has Endorsed Hixon Measure.

Efforts to obtain from the State Board of Health an endorsement of the "pure marriage" bill, introduced into the Senate by Senator J. T. Hixon, will be made by friends of the measure, according to an announcement made by Senator Hixon Saturday morning. One physician employed in the offices of the Board of Health already has sought out Senator Hixon and assured him he would lend his personal support to the measure.

Senator Hixon said the work of bringing the attention of the Board of Health to the bill probably would be under the direction of Dr. B. L. Emory, of Villa Rica, Ga., author of the bill, and at whose request it was introduced by Senator Hixon.

Dr. Emory, it is said, personally will present the bill to the Board of Health and ask co-operation in obtaining its passage. The bill was endorsed by the Carroll County Medical Society before it was brought to Atlanta. Senator Hixon is using this written endorsement of the measure as a lever to swing votes for it.

Expects Bill to Get Attention.

Senator Hixon is confident his bill will be taken seriously and that it will receive the careful consideration of the Senate. It raises the marriage age limit in Georgia from 14 to 16 in the case of the woman, and forbids any man marrying who is less than 18 years of age.

By far the most important features of the bill, in the opinion of Senator Hixon and its friends, are the provisions prohibiting the granting of marriage licenses to persons who are afflicted with tuberculosis or other chronic and contagious diseases, and to persons who are habitual drunkards or addicted to the drug habit.

Will Help Prevent Disease.

Senator Hixon is anxious to see his marriage bill become a law. He declares the passage of such a bill will do more to stamp out disease than all other kinds of legislation that might be passed.

"Several of the most progressive States in the Union," Senator Hixon declared, "have laws similar to this bill, and they have worked wonderfully well.

"I expect to live to see the time when such a law will be on the statute books of every State, and when that time comes there will be fewer lunatics and less contagious and hereditary diseases than now."

HERE'S A CHANCE TO MAKE SOME REAL MONEY

If You've Been Reading "The Triple Tie," Try to Solve It's Problems.

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.
(Author of "The Triple Tie.")

It is now up to the readers of The Georgian who have been reading "The Triple Tie" on the magazine page to solve the problems of the novel and send in their conclusions in competition for the prizes aggregating $250 offered by this newspaper.

In this issue of The Georgian is printed the last part of Chapter 42 of "The Triple Tie." At the end of this chapter Gordon Kelly is brought on the scene again. There he is left while the readers of the story send their contributions to The Georgian. Readers will be allowed until noon of Thursday, July 3, in which to send in their answers. No communications will be considered unless they are received at The Georgian office by Thursday at noon or bear a postmark not later than that time.

The final chapters of "The Tripie Tie," as written by the author, will be printed in The Georgian of Monday, July 7.

Can You Solve Them?

As an aid to the readers who desire to compete for the prizes it may be said that the problems to be solved are these:

First—How does Gordon Kelly escape from the mountaineers?

Second—What happens to Mildred Deery, the heroine?

Third—How does Gordon Kelly, who never saw a game of baseball or never played a game of baseball up to the time he asked Manager Smith, of the Atlanta Club, for a position on his team—how did Gordon Kelly learn to catch the ball and bat in the phenomenal manner he showed in the games he played at Atlanta?

Fourth—What happened when Gordon Kelly went to bat in the last half of the ninth inning in the final and deciding game of The Triple Tie when there were three on bases, two out and four runs needed for the Red Sox to win?

Fifth—What is the final ending of the story?

It is suggested that readers who desire to compete for the prizes take up the narrative where it leaves off in this issue of The Georgian and complete it as they think it ought to be completed, or as they think the author has completed it, thus solving the problems presented."

Nothing Improbable.

Every novel is a mystery, else no one would read a novel. Speculation as to how a story will "turn out" is usually what keeps a reader interested to the end. Perhaps the mysteries of "The Triple Tie" are no more mysterious than are to be found in the average novel. Certainly every one who has read "The Triple Tie" from the beginning has an idea as to how things "turned out."

It may be hinted that the author has solved the problems in a rational way—that there is nothing improbable in the author's ending of the story.

Please remember that this is not a guessing contest. Originality, literary value and analytical clearness will be largely considered in awarding the prizes. Three judges, in no way connected with The Georgian will make the awards for the best solutions of "The Triple Tie" problems.

So "go to it," readers. You have until noon of Thursday to send in your conclusions.

DEATH FROM CHALK STIRS SCHOOL HEADS

Julia Davenport, one of the friends of Mary Tribble.

Though the home is dark with sorrow, and the death of the litle girl has left a void that can never be filled, the parents and friends of little Mary Tribble, 7-year-old victim of colored crayon, find a measure of comfort to-day in the thought that her fate has driven home with terrible earnestness a lesson that will be of incalculable benefit to hundreds of other school children.

The death of the child is to be the price of increased vigilance by the teachers of scores of Atlanta schools in watching over their young charges, and greater care by the pupils.

Many of the teachers of the Atlanta schools have already begun to formulate plans and rules that will minimize the danger to the children in handling colored chalk, and other objects likely to contain poison.

The funeral of the little girl Friday was one of the saddest ever held in East Atlanta. A company of Mary's little friends members of her school and Sunday school classes, gathered at the East Side Baptist Tabernacle to pay a last tribute of love.

They brought great bunches of wild flowers, plucked with their own hands in the nearby woods where Mary had romped with them, and placed them on her coffin. As the funeral procession entered the church, the little boys and girls lined up on either side of the door, and the body of the little girl was carried slowly between the lines of those she loved and who loved her.

PRINCESS LOUISE WRITES NEW BOOK

"It Is a Revelation of My Own Soul in Guise of Fiction," She Declares.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

MILAN, ITALY, June 28.—Ex-Crown Princess Louise of Saxony who has resumed the title of Countess of Montignoso, is about to publish another volume of autobiography.

"The book is still my own story," she said to an interviewer, "but it is different from the last. It is a revelation of my own soul in the guise of fiction. I describe Italy's beauties athwart my own personal impressions; very strange ones they are—I'm such a funny person. And, do you know I don't want to know myself well?

"People accuse me of being shifty in my loves. That's true; but I should have been otherwise had I encountered a strong man of iron will who knew how to dominate me. Alas! I have come across only vulgar bourgeois weaklings. That's the why and wherefore of my feverish quest after the happiness to which I, too, have a right.

"If those who sought my friendship had put it out of their minds that I was a Princess of Saxony and had treated me simply as a woman, then, perhaps, I, too, should have enjoyed my good share in life and love. As things are, I travel and travel in a frenzy to distract myself and my greatest horror in life is lest I should become plebeian."

BLOUNT'S BOOK IS LAUDED BY BRYAN

WASHINGTON, June 28.—A letter from William J. Bryan, now Secretary of State, published in the current issue of Life, in which high praise is given to a book denouncing the policy of American administrators in the Philippines, attracted much comment here to-day.

The book was written by James H. Blount, of Macon, Ga., formerly a judge in the Philippine courts, and is entitled "The American Occupation of the Philippines." It was brought out about a year ago. Copies were sent to members of the House and Senate, and it has been reported that Andrew Carnegie and others interested in "anti-imperialism" have aided its distribution.

Mr. Bryan's indorsement is in response to the query: "What is the best book you have read during the last twelve months?"

Mr. Bryan's reply, dated Miami, Fla., February 8, 1912, is:

"I have been kept so busy this winter that I have not had an opportunity to read very many books, and books differ so much that it is difficult to single out one and give it a position of pre-eminence.

"One of the most interesting books I have read is the one written by Judge James H. Blount and published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York, entitled 'The American Occupation of the Philippines.' It presents a large amount of information on the Philippines question and that information is selected and arranged with intelligence. As that subject is one of great importance, I regard this as a valuable contribution to the literature upon the subject—the most valuable that I have seen."

CONTEST GINGER.

Your friends are watching you and the record you are making. You can not afford to lose.

Don't show a "yellow streak." Remember, the others are not landing every subscription they ask for, either.

Remember, the other fellow is working, too.

Do your best, and you are bound to do well.

All contestants in the race for The Georgian and American ponies are keyed up to the highest pitch just now, for the day when the bonus offers will expire is near at hand.

Boys and girls are straining every nerve to get promises fulfilled before July 5, for subscriptions brought in now count more than they will at any future time during the contest.

"Many of the boys and girls waste a lot of good time trying to find out what their rivals are doing," says the contest manager. "This is foolish. It is very likely that accurate information can not be had, for contestants are bragging, just to discourage the others in the race.

"The contestant who goes after votes with all his might will have no time to work about rivals, and will not need to worry about the others, either.

"The thing for the boys and girls to do is to set their minds on winning a pony outfit, and let nothing else distract their attention. No one ever won a fight who went into it half-heartedly."

The standings will be published to-morrow, and there will be gains shown worthy of careful notice.

Beauty Secrets of Beautiful Women

Ina Claire Talks on the Psychology of Clothes

Ina Claire's refreshing beauty.

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

THE dainty little "Quaker Girl," Ina Claire, is entertaining her admirers down at Brighton Beach, where the cool breezes and her own refreshing personality unite to make us all forget how earnestly the sun of summer can pour down molten glory on the city cobblestones at noon to-day.

We sat at a cozy tea table and got acquainted over an iced tea and a soda lemonade; plus chicken sandwiches. "This is my luncheon," said Miss Ina—and, by the way, you pronounce it as if it were Eena—"I don't let all my meals total up to more than one meal—of course you will laugh and say that I can afford to eat all I want. But I can't. You have to meet fat more than half way if you want to ward it off, and make sure that it never starts coming. I never eat candy—it does not do one the least bit of good, and I'd be so grateful if I might get all the sweetness I want from the perfume of all the flowers I want. Flowers have such a wonderful effect on me—on everyone, I think—their perfume and beauty has to make you a little bit lovelier. Don't you think so? Perhaps you will even say in our interview that I wish all the kind people who want to send me gifts would make those gifts of flowers."

"Evidently you are a believer in the importance of surroundings," I suggested.

"Oh, yes," said Miss Claire eagerly, "for my ideal of beauty is sweetness—refinement. You see it in the flowerlike English type."

By the way the unconscious girl who sat across the tea table from me is a perfect exponent of the flowerlike English type.

Likes Clothes.

"I believe in the psychology of clothes, too. I hate things that are just la mode. I happen to like little picture dresses—soft, frilly, coollooking, girlish things. They happen to suit me, too—so I wear them. But as I grow older and develop and mature I shall not wear these little frocks after I have outworn their type. Why, I want to grow in my work and develop power, and just the same way I want to grow beyond my 19 years in my appearance, too. Don't you think you have to dress your age as well as your type?"

I agreed; for I think that even as clothes must express the wearer, so they limit their wearer in her power of expression. A woman struggling along in a peg-top skirt that makes her walk a peg, too, can not look like the heroine of the poet's fancy:

"Even the light harebell raised its head
Elastic from her airy tread."

As Miss Claire said, "A trained gown expresses impressive dignity at once. Oh, how I should love to wear them, but my mother says that youth should express youth—and I know she is very wise. Youth must work and study and try to grow up gracefully in art and works and looks, but it must not be impatient and try to go faster than itself," added my pretty philosopher sagely.

"And don't you think that moods are very important, too?" I asked. "Flowers in your pathway and pretty clothes make beauty—but does it not come from within?"

Not Fair.

"Indeed it does," answered Miss Claire. "Unpleasant moods take the light and life from the eyes and all the face. It is not fair to other people to indulge in moods—and if you must have them, why just go off by yourself if you can, for your face will show their imprint. Drooping your upper lip in the middle, a la Eddie Foy, is fine for the blues—it curls your mouth up at the corners mechanically—and it makes your spirit laugh at the way you know you look.

"I think if you are young you need plenty of sleep, and simple food to get you into simple food-habits, and flowers and sunshine to help you grow, and work to keep you interested in life. I believe in work for women," went on Miss Claire slowly, "not only because life is happier when you are busy, but because, unless you are helping to create things, you become a critic. And just a critical attitude toward life is likely to become a bitter, droop-mouthed attitude. If you are a worker, and know how much struggle and effort goes into creating each tiny bit of life, you are happier and kinder, and I'm sure you look sweeter, too."

Well, little sister workers, is not that a splendid message for us? To create a bit o' life—and not to berate life—that is what Ina Claire told me.

EXPERIENCE OF MOTHERHOOD

Advice to Expectant Mothers

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The inexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

ASK HIM TO CALL AGAIN.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 21 and am in love with a man two years my senior. He called on me a few times. One night I had an engagement and he disappointed me, and I heard he would like to write, but he is very bashful, so would it be proper for me to write to him?

LONELY.

Write a friendly note asking him to call, but do not make it too cordial, and do not be insistent if he refuses. Having made these overtures, let the rest come from him.

IT IS NOT WISE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Is it proper for girls between the ages of 15 and 16 to play kissing games, such as "postoffice," "spin the bottle," etc., with boys between the ages of 17 and 18 at a social gathering? GLADYS.

Don't do it, my dear. It is a silliness that sometimes results in continued and unpardonable familiarity when there are no kissing games as an excuse. Boys think all the more of girls who refuse to give such marks of their favor.

DON'T SEND IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

While at a ball I was introduced to a man who seemed interested in me. His father is in the same place of business as mine. Now, I would like to know if it would be proper for me to send a note through his father, as I do not know his name and address, because he has a stepfather. I would like to have him call to see me, but I do not want his folks to think I am running after him. ANXIOUS.

You do not want his family to think you are running after him, yet such a letter would give them that impression. A better plan would be to wait till he shows greater interest in you.

Next Witness, Please!

"Witness, will you please answer my questions a little more plainly?" queried the lawyer, who was cross-examining an elderly German as to the position of the door, windows, etc., in the house where a crime had been committed.

"I will try—I will try," nervously answered the old man.

"Will you describe to the Court just how the stairs run in that house?" went on the lawyer.

For a few minutes the German looked puzzled, and bit his nails nervously.

"How ze stairs run?" he interrogated a little dazedly.

"Come, come, my good man! How the stairs run, if you please!" said the lawyer, in an exasperated tone.

"Vell," ventured the witness phlegmatically, "ven I am oopstairs zay run down, and ven I am downstairs zay run oop!"

The Triple Tie

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

In that game the Philadelphia nine was composed of nine players with but a single thought, nine bats that thumped as one. They took advantage of every opening and with Chief Bender in the box played with a dash and confidence that filled their supporters with glee and when the cohorts went back to Philadelphia that night it was the hope that the White Sox had gotten rid of all their bad playing and that on the morrow, with Big Ed Walsh in the box, they would brace up and take the Red Sox into camp, thereby making things all even again, with the triple tie no further decided than it was at the start.

Emblems Laid Aside.

No white silk-stockinged banners were flaunted on Broadway that night. The emblems were laid aside for the evening, while the owners thereof sought rathskellers and similar places for the purpose of drowing their sorrows in the flowing bowl. But Comiskey, the owner of the Chicago Club, never gave up the baseball ship. The "Old Roman" called the members of his team to his room and after giving them a verbal dressing down for their wretched exhibition, as only Comiskey himself could do, he exhorted them to go after the Red Sox on the following day and wipe up the Polo Grounds with them.

"Now go out there and beat that Boston bunch!" he exclaimed vehemently in conclusion, "and when you do it I'll hand every member of the team $500. And you, Walsh," he added, turning to the big pitcher, "one thousand extra for you for winning the game."

The morrow came—a glorious October day. The Polo Grounds was packed for the battle of the Red Sox and the White Sox. Fresh from their last headache, full of remorse for the past and hope for the future, the thousand from Chicago massed themselves in that section of the stadium nearest first base, while opposite them, behind third base, sat the rabid Boston "fans," waving red banners and yelling for the Red Sox at the slightest provocation. The Chicago crowd, too, had brought their standards with them, somewhat soiled and bedraggled, it is true, but still sufficiently white to create a vivid impression whenever they were used.

Batteries Announced.

The rival teams took their preliminary practice, while the rival rooters barked at each other across the diamond. Finally the bell rang, the umpires took their place, Connolly behind the plate, Dinneen at first base and the other two at the foul lines, and the megaphone boys announced the batteries. Of these heralds there were three—one to inform the spectators behind the plate, one for the left wing and one for the right wing of the grandstand. This was their simultaneous announcement.

"Batteries for to-day's game: For Boston, Bedient and Carrigan; for Chicago, Walsh and Schalk."

Manager Stahl of the Red Sox had again won the toss and his team took the field. Rath, the Chicago second baseman, stepped to the plate and the Chicago cohorts back of first base gave him a rousing cheer. Hard luck came to the Boston team at the very start. Rath swung at the first ball that Bedient pitched to him, ticked it with his bat, deflecting it so that it struck Carrigan on his first finger, breaking it. The catcher was forced to retire. The megaphone boys announced the change:

"Cady now catching in place of Carrigan."

The Game Is On.

The game went on. Rath finally worked Bedient for a free pass to first. Lord bunted a slow one down the third base line, and in running to get it, the Boston pitcher slipped and fell. Lord reaching first safely and Rath getting to second. Chase rapped a hot one through the box, which Wagner knocked down back of second base, but was unable to field. This filled the bases, with no one out. The section back of first base became a waving field of white banners, and the shouts of leather-lunged Chicagoans could be heard for miles. Collins lifted a long fly to Lewis and Rath scored after the catch. Bodie came along with a two-base hit between Speaker and Hooper, scoring Lord and Chase. Mattick went out on a grounder to Engle and Weaver closed the inning with a foul to Cady.

With his side three runs to the good, Big Ed Walsh stalked to the pitcher's box. That lead was all he asked. The Red Sox had found him almost unbeatable for years. That $1,000 bonus promised by Comiskey he considered as good as in his bank at Meriden. He began proceedings by striking out Hooper and Yerkes and forcing Speaker to roll an easy one to the box, which Walsh himself tossed to first for the thir out.

Collins Replaces Bedient.

Both sides were blanked in the second inning. In the third the White Sox went out in order, but the Red Sox two men on—Wagner by means of a pass and Cady on a single to right. Stahl sent Henrickson in to bat for Bedient, but the little fellow hit into a double play and Hooper fouled to Chase. The Red Sox were still without a run to their credit.

Ray Collins came in to pitch in place of Bedient and he retired the White Sox in order. For Boston, Speaker singled after Yerkes had been disposed of, but neither Lewis nor Gardner could bring him home. The fifth inning was also scoreless for both teams, but the Red Sox came near doing some damage to Walsh in their half of the round. Engle was safe on a low throw of his grounder. Wagner laid down a bunt toward first and beat it to the bag, as no one covered first. Cady advanced the runners with a sacrifice. With the chance of scoring two runs, Stahl himself went to bat in place of Collins and succeeded in drawing a pass to first. This filled the bases with only one out. Stahl, who was still limping from an old injury to his foot, called upon Neil Ball to run for him. The Red Six rooters cheered wildly as Hooper came to the plate. He drove a liner to Mattick and Engle, who tried to score from third, was thrown out at the plate. This piece of ill luck so disconcerted the Royal Rooters' band that it forgot to play "Tessie" for the first time on record.

Buck O'Brien went in to pitch for Boston when the sixth inning opened. He was in fine fettle, and the White Sox couldn't get a man on the bases. Those three runs looked bigger and bigger as the game went on. In the last of the sixth, after Yerkes had been retired, Speaker beat out a bunt and Lewis was safe on a fumble, but more hard luck followed the Red Sox when Gardner sent a terrific liner directly in Chase's hands and Wagner boosted a high fly to Rath.

The Chicago crowd went wild when the White Sox got three men on bases in the seventh with only one out, but their cheers turned to groans when O'Brien struck out the next man and speared a hard liner for the third out. But in doing so O'Brien hurt his hand so badly that he was forced to retire.

Last Inning Opens.

It looked as though the Red Sox were all shot to pieces when they went to bat in the last half of the seventh, but Cady reached second on a little fly that struck the right field foul line and rolled to the stand. Taking a dying chance Stahl sent Nunamaker in to bat, but no runs resulted and the score was still 3 to 0 against the Red Sox when the eighth opened, with Leonard in the box for Boston.

Leonard passed the first two men that faced him, but some good pitching and some good luck enable him to get by without being scored upon. The top of the batting order was up for the Red Sox and the Boston crowd implored the boys to do something. They tried very hard, but none of them could drive the ball out of the infield.

The ninth and last inning opened. The White Sox were retired in order. They had not been able to do much with the Boston pitchers, except when they scored the three runs in the first inning, but Big Ed Walsh was going great guns and there was not a member of the team but that felt the game was surely won.

Fought back to the last ditch, the Red Sox went to bat for their last stand. Two thousand spectators left their seats and started home when Lewis, the first up for Boston, died on a roller to Rath. Five thousand more made a rush for the gates when Gardner flied to Collins. Not a sound came from the Boston section. The Chicago contingent was singing and waving flags. There was a faint cheer when Engle managed to work Walsh for a free pass to first. There was a louder cheer when Wagner hit safely just out of Weaver's reach. Some of those who were leaving the grounds paused for a moment to see if there would be any excitement. Cady, with two strikes and three balls called on him, was fooled into striking at a very low one, but the ball struck the ground before it got to Schald and jumped by him. Cady sprinted to first and beat Schalk's throw by a hair. The bases were filled!

Leonard Walks to Plate.

Everybody on the grounds except the Chicago crowd broke into a wild cheer. The Red Sox rooters were like raving maniacs. Three on bases and two out in the last half of the ninth inning! Yes, but what chance did the Red Sox have with a pitcher's turn to bat? Whoever heard of a pitcher "breaking up" a game of ball in the ninth inning with three men on bases and two out? And Stahl had used up all his pinch hitters.

The cheers were at their height and Leonard was walking slowly toward the plate, bat in hand, when Wagner rushed up to Stahl, who was on the first base coaching line, and whispered something in his ear. Instantly Stahl yelled to Leonard.

"Leonard!" he cried.

The pitcher stopped and looked at his manager, who motioned him to keep away from the plate. There was a commotion in the dugout where the Red Sox players were gathered. They were crowded together with their backs to the field. Umpire Connolly called sharply to Stahl:

"Batter up; where's your batter?"

The Chicago section jeered and hooted. "Play ball." "Get a move on." "Get busy," and similar remarks were hurled at the Boston manager, who still stood in the coaching box.

"Whose turn is it to bat, yours, Leonard?" demanded Connolly, striding up to the pitcher.

Leonard nodded.

"Get up to the plate, then," roared Connolly. "You can't delay the game this way."

"Stahl won't let me," replied Leonard.

Connolly whipped off his mask and ran toward the Red Sox manager.

"Where's your next batter, Stahl?" he roared.

Stahl turned toward the Boston bench, where there was still a commotion among the players.

"Who Is Your Batter-"

"Just a minute, Tommy, give me just a minute," he said to the umpire. "I want to win this game."

Manager Callahan of the White Sox came rushing up. So did Captain Harry Lord. The cheers and the hoots died down.

"What's the matter here," exclaimed Callahan. "I claim the game by forfeit unless a man goes to bat for Boston right now."

Connolly pulled out his watch.

"I'll give you just three minutes to get a man up to the plate," he said to Stahl.

The megaphone boys hurried up. The Boston manager glanced at the players' bench. The bunch of Red Sox players separated and one of them jumped out of the dugout and began selecting a bat from the pile on the ground.

"Who is your batter?" demanded Connolly.

Stahl told him.

An instant later the heralds raised their megaphones to their lips and amid a deathlike silence bawled this announcement:

Gordon Kelly batting in place of Leonard.

To Be Continued Monday, July 7.

TODAY'S installment of the "The Triple Tie" leaves Gordon Kelly in a very dramatic situation. The final chapters of the story will be printed in The Georgian on Monday, July 7. In the meantime readers of "The Triple Tie" will have until noon next Thursday to send in their conception of the conclusion of the story, containing their solution of the mystery in competition for prizes aggregating $250 offered by The Georgian. The problems for the reader to solve are these:

First—How does Kelly escape the mountaineers?

Second—What happens to Mildred Deery, the heroine?

Third—How did Gordon Kelly, who confessed that he never saw a game of ball and never played a game of ball up to the time he asked Manager Smith of the Atlanta club for a position on his team—how did Gordon Kelly learn to bat, catch and run bases in the marvelous manner he displayed at Atlanta that caused the Boston club to give the unheard-of price of $50,000 for Gordon Kelly's release?

Fourth—What happened when Gordon Kelly went to bat in the ninth inning of the final and deciding game?

Fifth—What is the final ending of the story?

No contributions will be considered if they are delivered at The American office later than July 3 at noon or bear a postmark later than that time.

Please remember that this is not a guessing contest. Originality, literary value and analytical clearness will be largely considered in awarding the prizes. Three judges, in no way connected with The Georgian, will award the prizes.

The prizes for the best solutions are as follows:

First Prize	$100.00
Second Prize	50.00
Third Prize	25.00

"Oh, well," Burke exclaimed amiably, "I didn't really think you did, but I wasn't sure, so I had to take a chance. You understand, don't you, Joe?"

"Sure, I understand," Garson replied, with an amiability equal to the Inspector's own.

Burke's manner continued very amicably as he went on speaking.

"You see, Joe, anyhow, we've got the right party safe enough. You can bet on that!"

Garson resisted the lure.

"If you don't want me—" he began suggestively; and he turned toward the door to the outer hall. "Why, if you don't want me, I'll—get along."

"Oh, what's the hurry, Joe?" Burke retorted, with the effect of stopping the other short. He pressed the buzzer as the agreed signal to Cassidy. "Where did you say Mary Turner was last night?"

At the question, all Garson's fears for the woman rushed back of him with appalling force. Of what avail his safety, if she were still in peril?

"I don't know where she was," he exclaimed, doubtfully. He realized his blunder even as the words left his lips, and sought to correct it as best he might. "Why, yes, I do, too," he went on, as if assailed by sudden memory. "I dropped into her place kind of late, and I guess . . . Yes, she was home, of course. She didn't go out of the house all night." His insistence on the point was of itself suspicious, but eagerness to protect her stultified his wits.

Burke Was Silent.

Burke sat grim and silent, offering no comment on the lie.

"Know anything about young Gilder?" he demanded. "Happen to know where he is now?" He rose and came around the desk, so that he stood close to Garson, at whom he glowered.

"Not a thing!" was the earnest answer. But the speaker's fear rose swiftly, for the linking of these names was significant—frightfully significant!

The inner door opened, and Mary Turner entered the office. Garson, with difficulty, suppressed the cry of distress that rose to his lips. For a few moments, the silence was unbroken. Then, presently, Burke, by a gesture, directed the girl to advance toward the center of the room. As she obeyed, he himself went a little toward the door, and, when it opened again, and Dick Gilder appeared, he interposed to check the young man's rush forward as his gaze fell on his bride, who stood regarding him with sad eyes.

Garson stared mutely at the burly man in uniform who held their destinies in the hollow of a hand. His lips parted as if he were about to speak. Then, he bade defiance to the impulse. He deemed it safer for all that he should say nothing—now! . . . And it is very easy to say a word too many. And that one may be a word never to be unsaid—or gainsaid.

Then, while still that curious, dynamic silence endured, Cassidy came briskly into the office. By some magic duty he had contrived to give his usually hebetudinous features an expression of enthusiasm.

"Say, Chief," the detective said rapidly, "they've squealed."

Burke regarded his aid with an air intolerably triumphant. His voice came smug:

"Squealed, eh?" His glance ran over Garson for a second, then made its inquisition of Mary and of Dick Gilder. He did not give a look to Cassidy as he put his question. "Do they tell the same story?" And then, when the detective had answered in the affirmative, he went on speaking in tones ponderous with self-complacency; and now his eyes held sharply, craftily, on the woman.

"I was right then, after all—right, all the time! Good enough!" Of a sudden, his voice loomed someberly. "Mary Turner, I want you for the murder of——"

Garson's rush halted the sentence. He had leaped forward. His face was rigid. He broke in on the Inspector's words with a gesture of fury. His voice came in a hiss:

"That's a d—d lie. I did it!"

CHAPTER XXIV.

Anguish and Bliss.

Joe Garson had shouted his confession without a second of reflection. But the result must have been the same had he taken years of thought. Between him and her as the victim of the law, there could be no hesitation for choice. Indeed, just now, he had no heed to his own fate. The prime necessity was to save her, Mary, from the toils of the law that were closing around her. For himself, in the days to come, there would be a ghastly dread, but there would never be regret over the cost of saving her. Perhaps, some other he might have let suffer in his stead—not her! Even had he been innocent and she guilty of the crime, he would still have saved her from the waters—he would save her until the end, as far as the power in him might lie. It was thus that, with the primitive directness of his reverential love for the girl, he counted no sacrifice too great in her behalf. Joe Garson was not a good man, as the world esteems goodness. On the contrary, he was distinctly an evil one, a menace to society, on which he preyed constantly. But his good qualities, if few, were of the strongest fiber, rooted in the deeps of him. He loathed treachery. His one guiltiness in this respect had been, curiously enough, toward Mary herself, in the scheme of the burglary which she had forbidden. But, in the last analysis, here his deceit had been designed to bring affluence to her. It was his abhorrence of treachery among pals that had driven him to the murder of the stool pigeon in a fit of ungovernable passion. He might have stayed his hand then, but for the gusty rage that swept him on to the crime. None the less, had he spared the man his hatred of the betrayer would have been the same. And the other virtue of Joe Garson was the complement of this—his own loyalty, a loyalty that made him forget self utterly where he loved, not too much to give.

Frozen With Horror.

The suddenness of it all held Mary voiceless for long seconds. She was frozen with horror of the event. When, at last, words come, they were a frantic prayer of protest.

"No, Joe! No! Don't talk—don't talk!"

Burke, immensely gratified, went nimbly to his chair, and thence surveyed the agitated group with grisly pleasure.

"Joe has talked," he said, significantly.

Mary, shaken as she was by the fact of Garson's confession, nevertheless retained her presence of mind sufficiently to resist with all her strength.

"He did it to protect me," she stated, earnestly.

The Inspector disdained such futile argument. As the doorman appeared in answer to the buzzer, he directed that the stenographer be summoned at once.

"We'll have the confession in due form," he remarked, gazing pleasedly on the three before him.

"He's not going to confess," Mary insisted, with spirit.

But Burke was not in the least impressed. He disregarded her completely, and spoke mechanically to Garson the formal warning required by the law.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"DEAR, could you make room for this in your trunk?" asked Helen anxiously.

"Um, what is it?" Warren did not look up from the great roll of collars he was fitting in the tray.

"My heavy coat—I'll need it for the steamer."

"Should say I couldn't. Put it in the roll with the rugs."

"But we've got to put both our train coats and the steamer pillow in that—it won't hold any more."

"Then you'll just have to carry it. 'See here,'" opening a small leather case of folding coat hangers, "how many of these things will we need?"

"Take them all, dear, I'll want some. Where is that other case of six, Aunt Emma gave you for Christmas? Oh, here they are."

"Then put them in your own trunk. I'm not going to fill up mine with a lot of truck for you. Look at all those papers," pointing to some packages he had brought from the office.

"Oh, do you have to take all those?"

"That's not all—there's more in that suit case. And they're a darn sight more important than your frillikins."

Helen, who had always counted on putting certain things in Warren's trunk, went back to her room and gazed helplessly at her small and already overcrowded steamer trunk. How could she get everything in?

"What shall I do with this, ma'am?" demanded Maggie, appearing at the door with an opened package of cereal.

"Oh, you'll have to throw out everything like that; we can't leave it to draw mice. Now, you're sure you've got everything out of the refrigerator? The butter and the rest of that jar of bacon you can give to the houseman. And you'd better sprinkle some borax around the sink. Wait, I'll come show you."

A Farewell Call.

While Maggie was to stay to clean and close up the apartment, yet Helen wanted to see that nothing was left to draw insects.

She was still in the kitchen, when the 'phone rang and Warren called impatiently:

"Helen! Somebody wants you."

"Oh, WHY will people call us up at the last moment?" she protested resentfully, for every second now was precious.

"Hello! I just wanted to say goodbye," shrilled Mrs. Thurston's voice, "and wish you all kinds of a pleasant trip."

"That's very kind of you," lied Helen politely.

"Your boat's sailing at 3, isn't it? I'd so like to come down to the dock, but I promised Mrs. Walker to go with her to a bridge tea. I disappointed her last week, so I'll just have to go. Well, you certainly have a fine day to start. I was afraid this morning it would rain, but it's cleared off beautifully."

"Yes, it has," murmured Helen stupidly, wild to get back to her packing, but not wanting to be abrupt.

"Oh, while I think of it, I want to give you the address of that place in the Rue de Rivoli, the one I told you about where I got those lovely hand-embroidered nightgowns. Have you a pencil there?"

Helen got a pencil, took down the address and was just about to say good-by when Mrs. Thurston held her with a—

"And I'm going to ask you to get me two more—size 36. You saw the ones I have, I paid fifteen francs for most of them, but use your own judgment—only I shouldn't like to pay over twenty. I'm sure you won't mind getting these for me, will you? And oh, don't you want the address of that handkerchief place, where they embroider the three initials for only a few centimes extra? If you'll hold the phone a minute—I've got the address on one of the boxes they came in."

Helen could hardly restrain her impatience, but she was forced to wait for the address.

Very Annoying.

"If you're getting some for yourself," purred Mrs. Thurston, "and if it isn't TOO much trouble, I SHOULD like another dozen of those tiny evening handkerchiefs—you know the initials—M. C. T."

When Helen finally succeeded in breaking away she turned from the phone with a furious—

"The idea of her calling me up this late to send for things!"

"Well, I'd have cut her off quick enough," growled Warren. "She wouldn't have kept me standing there. Here," shoving toward her some steamship labels he had just filled out with their name and number of their stateroom, "better get these on now. Can't leave everything till the last minute."

Helen took the oval blue and white "North German Lloyd" labels and pasted them on her trunk and suit case with supreme satisfaction. She had always envied people with trunks covered with steamship and foreign hotel labels—it gave their baggage such a traveled, "cosmopolitan" air.

The one label that was left over she put on a large trunk that she had had brought up to get out some things for the trip. It had never been abroad, but she MIGHT have taken it, so she had no scruples in decorating it with a label.

Unfortunately just at that moment Warren appeared.

"These yours?" throwing down a couple of her linen collars that had been sent to the laundry with his. Then noticing the label as she jumped up almost guiltily from her knees before the big trunk, "What's that mean? You're not going to take that trunk?"

"No, dear," flushing in confused anticipation of his ridicule.

"Well why in thunder did you stick on that label?" Then as it dawned on him. "By George, I've heard of fool women who bought foreign labels and plastered up their trunks, but I thought you had some sense."

This incident did not contribute to Helen's speed in packing, for with burning cheeks, she scraped off with the scissors the offending label.

"The ice man's here now, m'am," announced Maggie.

Some Hustling.

And again Helen had to stop her packing to instruct the iceman to leave no more ice until they notified him of their return. Then came the superintendent, whom she had sent for to see about turning off the gas. The time was going fast—and her trunk was not nearly ready.

"Oh, m'am, see what I found!" Maggie held up triumphantly a tea spoon they had looked for yesterday when they had counted the silver. Now more time was taken in unlocking the silver and putting away the spoon.

"What about the table fern, m'am. Didn't you say you were going to give that to Mrs. Hubbard?"

"You can do that after we're gone. Now don't come to me with everything Maggie. Look at the time—I must finish packing!"

"Trunk ready to strap?" called out Warren.

"Not quite, dear," nervously. "In just a few moments."

"Well now don't fool around and not be ready. I've ordered the cab for twelve sharp."

When Helen was much hurried she was apt to become confused, and now she fluttered about trying to do everything at once. There were more interruptions, and twice she had to stop to find something for Warren.

"All right, dear, it's all ready," she answered at last to his repeated call of "Trunk ready?"

"Sure this is the right key?" he demanded. "No, it's the lock! Rusty as the devil. Why in blazes didn't you try it? Get some oil!"

Helen flew for the oil, and for another precious ten minutes Warren fumbled over the lock.

"Oh, wait, dear, have you got it locked?" just as he finally succeeded in turning the key. "Oh, I'm so sorry, but I left my bath robe."

Once Again.

Warren's explosives were loud and emphatic as he unlocked the trunk.

"Now is that ALL?" as Helen hastily crushed in the robe. "By Gad, I've never locked a trunk for you yet that I didn't have to open half a dozen times before we started."

But it was hardly a moment later when Maggie brought in a blue serge skirt Helen had asked her to brush. "You're not forgetting this, m'am?"

Helen tried desperately to get it in her suitcase, but there was no room. The trunk would have to be opened again. While she was struggling with the stiff, heavy strap, trying to unbuckle it, Warren passed the door.

"What in the devil are you doing now?"

"Never mind, I—I can open it," flushed and breathless with her exertions. "I just forgot to put in this skirt."

Warren pushed her roughly aside and again opened the trunk, his language more fervid than before.

"Now is THAT ALL?" he roared again as he slammed down the lid.

Helen thought it was. But at almost the last moment, she discovered a pair of shoes she had left out to be polished. The suitcase was bulging full, and she dared not let Warren see her trying to open the trunk again. She would have to carry them in a bundle. There was no other way.

It was not until they were finally whirling to the dock in a cab, with the trunks on top and the hand baggage on the seat before them, that Warren noticed the package Helen was carrying.

"What's that? Put it in your suit case."

"There isn't room. It's nothing dear. I'd just as soon carry it."

But Warren felt through the paper that it was a pair of shoes.

"So you forgot those, did you? Might have known you'd want to get in that trunk again. Gad, that's like you. Starting off for Europe with a pair of shoes in your hand. Next time I go—I go alone!"

What He Meant.

A man once received as a present from a sea captain a fine specimen of a bird which sailors call the "laughing jackass." As he was carrying it home he met a brawny Irish navvy, who stopped and said to him:

"Phwat kind of burrd is that, sorr?"

"That's a laughing jackass," explained the owner, genially.

The Irishman, thinking he was being made fun of, was equal to the occasion, and responded with a twinkle of the eye:

"It's not yourself; it's the burrd I mane, sorr!"

The Mistakes of Jennie .:. By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

Me made voilent love to Jennie.

Chapter 13.

A FEW days after Jennie had got her new clothes she met Tom on her way to work.

Jennie was all excited when she saw him and wondered if he would speak to her after her refusing to marry him and her treating him so badly. She did hope he would, and that he would admire her new clothes.

Tom lifted his hat and acted as if there never had been anything the matter between them, and, boy like, did not even notice her new gown, willow plume and things, that Jennie was paying $1.50 a week for on the installment plan.

That day her girl friend at the office said she had it all "cooked up" for a party that night with the boys they were out with before.

One of the boys owned an automobile and they would go out on a "bear" of a time. So that night after work Jennie and her pal met the boys. Jennie was all dressed up and her girl friend's beau didn't seem to have any time for any one except Jennie. This, of course, made the girl jealous, but she held in until after dinner, when they were all a bit "jagged." Then she derided Jennie for trying to take her fellow away from her.

They had a fine row, which made the fellow—who seemed to always pay for their "parties"—very angry. He told the girl he was tired of her anyway, and she had better get some one else to pay her expenses.

Then he proceeded to make violent love to Jennie—and poor Jennie didn't know what to do. The other fellow—the one Jennie was with before—didn't have much to say, and whatever his friend did was all right, being as how his friend held the purse strings.

Coming back in the machine they sat on the back seat and the fellow talked and talked and tried to get Jennie to consent to let him furnish up a flat for her, and she could have anything she wanted. But Jennie was crying, and all she would say was: "NO-NO-NO!" Her girl friend wouldn't speak to her, but had vowed to get even—if it was the last thing in the world she ever did. Jennie begged the fellow to take her home—but he held her all the tighter in his arms, kissing her.

The Modern Girl : A New Species of the Feminine Sex

By DOROTHY DIX.

HAVE you ever considered the modern girl and how she differs from the maidens of the past? She's a new species of the feminine sex, and no more like her grandmother, or even her mother, than if she had been wafted down from the planet Mars instead of having just strolled out of the nursery.

We haven't taken much account of her, but you've got to reckon with her in the future, and it's time we sat up and took notice. Consider these little stories as illustrations of the young person and her point of view. The first is on divorce.

The other day I overheard two young girls talking.

Said one: "When a girl marries, she should be very, very careful in choosing her husband, and after she is married she should do the best she can to make a good wife and a happy home, but if she finds out that she has made a mistake, and is miserable, thank Heaven, she doesn't have to stand it. She can always get a divorce."

Said the other girl: "Oh, of course, that's the only thing to do under such circumstances. It won't be my fault if my marriage turns out badly, because I'm going to do everything I can, and bring every particle of intelligence I've got to making it a success, but none of that suffer-and-be-strong business in mine! If my husband isn't what he should be, or treats me badly, or I find I've made an error of judgment, I'm going to correct it just as I would any other mistake.

"I'm not going to stick to it as people used to do in the Dark Ages. Aren't you thankful that you live in these enlightened days, instead of in our grandparents' and our parents' time, when people thought that no matter how miserable you were in your marriage, or how much you hated the person you were married to, you had to endure it?"

An Unusual Remark.

The first girl smiled indulgently. "They were bound in the swaddling clothes of superstition, all right," she said.

I gasped with surprise. These girls belong to old, conservative, rather narrow-minded families, and they themselves are sweet, modest, intelligent, well educated young women, who haven't the faintest idea of being revolutionary, or anything of that sort. What they said simply voiced the viewpoint of the new generation.

They didn't argue about the ethics of divorce at all. They simply accepted divorce as a fact, a modern convenience, something that tended to make life pleasanter, just as they did in elevators in apartment buildings, or electric lights, or running hot and cold water in bath rooms.

If you had made a mistake in marriage and your life was being ruined by it, you corrected it and took a fresh start, just as you would do if you found out that you had engaged in a business that was bankrupting you. They could see no more reason for going on with a marriage that meant daily misery than there would be in going on with an enterprise in which you lost money every day.

You can't argue the divorce question with the modern young girl, because she simply doesn't recognize the ancient view of the matter, that there is anything noble, or pious, or virtuous in living with an individual that brings out all the worst that is in you, or in keeping together a family that is engaged in a perpetual drawn battle at home.

Nor can you argue the suffrage question with young women, because they accept it as a fact that is incontrovertible that they are the equals of the young men they know, and have just as much right to a voice in government. You could find a needle in a haystack easier than a college-bred girl who is an anti.

DOROTHY DIX.

And this is what the modern young girl thinks about woman's sweet dependence. A very rich girl said to me the other day:

"I've got the best and most generous father that any girl ever had. He showers on me everything that money can buy. I've got charge accounts all the way up and down Fifth Avenue, and every month he gives me a big allowance, but I never see a girl standing behind a counter, or sitting behind a typewriter that I don't envy her. I would rather have a dollar and fifty cents that I had earned myself than fifteen hundred dollars that was given me.

"I would give anything on earth to know that I could stand on my own feet instead of being a miserable parasite hanging on somebody else. And every rich girl I know feels the same way. But I've got one comfort, I'll never have to be dependent on a husband. How a woman endures the humiliation of having to ask her husband for every cent she spends I don't understand. It's enough to kill her, and I don't believe women are going to do it much longer. I think in the future that when a girl hasn't got an independent fortune of her own she'll continue after marriage at whatever business she was in before marriage. Financial independence is just as necessary to a woman's self-respect as it is to a man's."

And here's another viewpoint of the 1913 model of girl. If you will recall, the heroes of all old-fashioned novels used to be men who had been sad rakes. They were men with dark pasts, such as Rochester, who fascinated innocent little Jane Eyre, and even as late as a generation or so ago a man lost no prestige in a girl's eyes from having been wild, and having had romantic adventures. Recently an opponent to the bill for requiring all candidates for marriage to produce a health certificate brought up this former attitude of women on this subject in objecting to the passage of the law. He didn't know the modern young girl. I said something of this to one, and she defined the modern girl's position on the question in one phrase:

She Knew.

"We've read Damaged Goods," she said, "and we know what that sort of romance means—insane asylums, surgeons' tables, death."

In former times, when a young girl came to an older woman to confide in her, she asked for advice about some love affair. Nowadays when a girl has a heart-to-heart talk with you she consults you about her life work. The young girls are no longer looking forward to matrimony as the one only desirable career in life. They are thinking of business, of settlement work, of a thousand avocations outside of the home circle. Love is no longer the whole of their existence. It is a thing apart, just as it is of a man. If the right man comes along and asks one, she'll marry, but if he doesn't, she can get along very well without him, thank you.

This is only a cursory view of the young girl of the period. Take a look at her for yourself. At present she is the great human conundrum, and she's the most interesting thing in the world.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

A man remarked that he came from a very large family.

"How many are there of you?" he was asked.

"Well, there were ten of us boys," he said, "and each of us had a sister."

"Good gracious!" exclaimed the other, "then there were twenty of you?"

"No," said the boastful man; "eleven."

Mamma—My dear, what are you doing?

Little Daughter—Making a pen wiper for my little sister.

Mamma—But you haven't any little sister!

Little Daughter—No, not yet; but Sally Stuckup has just got one, and I know we always get everything the Stuckups do.

Sheet steel is the latest material utilized in the making of furniture. It is used for sideboards, wardrobes, chiffoniers, writing desks, and it is finished in such perfect imitation of the various woods that the difference can not be detected. The wood finish is applied under a very high temperature, becoming an integral part of the metal and never cracking. This unique furniture has the recommendation of being fireproof, and a lighted match left on a pressed steel sideboard would have no effect whatever on its surface.

"What is the principal difference between modern and ancient times?"

"One of the main points was that the modern earn their living, while the ancients urned their dead."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THARE was a convenshun of migshunarys in town this week & Ma went & toald the ladies of the club that she wud be glad for us to taik at leest one misshunary & keep him at our house so he wuddent have to pay any hotel bill. Pa dident like it a bit, but he dident say much. He kicked a littel, tho.

I can not see why you act so cold about entertaining a noabel man who is going to give up his noabel life, maybe, Ma sed, oaver thare in the Feegee Islands, teaching them awful black men how to be good. Why, sed Ma, I was going to say first that we cud keep two of those noabel men here & now that I see the way you are acting I am glad that I only promised to take one.

Why doesn't he go to a hotel & register, like a noabel drummer or a noabel transhunt of any kind? sed Pa. I doant see anything very noabel about horning into a household & putting everybody out for a week, Pa sed. It is bad enuff to entertain yure relatives all the time, sed Pa, without having any guy with a long face and a short purse setting around and talking about spreading the gospel. Thay spread more hot air than thay spread gospel, sed Pa, them misshunarys, & beesides they eet moar than a trained nurse, wich is sum eeting.

Very Sad.

But this man is a charming gentleman, sed Ma. I am sure that you will like him. Jest then the man caim.

Husband, sed Ma, this is Mister Weeks of Jacksonville. He is going abroad soon to teech the beenited natives all about religun.

Mr. Weeks was vary slim, vary sad looking. Pa sighed kind of hard, but he asked Mister Weeks to maik hisself at hoam & then Ma sed Now I am going to leeve you two men & littel Bobbie to have a visit while I run oaver to Missus Jones's & get that recipe for stewed steak & milkweed greens, Ma sed.

As soon as Pa was sure Ma was out of the house he asked Mister Weeks of Jacksonville to cum into the library & look at his books. I went in, too.

I have sumthing vary fine here, sed Pa, in this long necked decanter. It is the very finest burbon, Pa sed, & it is so old that it has rumatism. Will you try a snifter?

A Surprise.

I doant mind if I do, sed Mister Weeks. Then Pa poured him a nice drink & took one hisself. He looked kind of surprised at Mister Weeks, but I cud see that he was looking at his friend moar friendly.

I am sorry to intrude on you, sir, said Mister Weeks, & as it is I wud have stayed at a hotel, only I got roped into a stud gaim last nite & got my bank roll so nicked that it is almost nit. That is sum corn, he sed. If we was whare we cud, he sed, I wud cum back, but as I am in yure hoam I will try another on you, old sport. I will pour it, it is neerer to me. Say when.

I see you like it, sed Pa. I shud say I do like it, sed Mister Weeks. I have been in a jay town for three weeks, hoalding a kind of reevival, & the only stuff I cud git thare was so feerce that it took all my moral curage to drink it at all. Well, how do you like the way Billy Smith is sailing along now? I hope the Crackers win the pennant. I have a swell bet down that they will cop, he sed.

I nevver seen a man that looked so surprised as Pa. Say, he sed to Mister Weeks of Jacksonville, you are a regular guy. How did you cum to be a misshunary.

Pretty Soft.

Well, sed Mister Weeks, it is a pritty soft graft. A man gets a chance to travel all oaver & see furrin countrys, & as far as curing any beenited natives, all I evver ask them to do is to show me around. I used to be a ball player, he sed, but I got hit on the bean with one of Dent's fast ones, and that chased me out of the gaim. This gaim isent so dangerous.

Aint you afrade you will get et up by a cannibal? I sed to Mister Weeks.

No, sed Mister Weeks. I teach them all to be hard drinkers & thay lose thare deesire to eat.

Jest then, Ma caim hoam.

You must be awfully tired, Ma sed to the misshunary.

Yes, I think I will retire & finnish my new lecture for those who grope in the darkness, sed Mister Weeks of Jacksonville. Then he groped to bed.

Turned the Tables.

At Scotch weddings some years ago it used to be the custom to batter the hat of the bridegroom as he was leaving the house in which the ceremony took place. On one of those occasions the friends of a newly-married couple (relatives of the bridegroom) determined to carry out the observance of this custom to the letter.

The bridegroom heard them discussing their plans, and dispatched a messenger to the carriage (which stood waiting) with his hat some time previous to his departure. Then, donning the hat of the male relative who had plotted against him, he prepared to go out to the carriage.

No sooner had he got to the door than his hat was furiously assaulted and almost destroyed. He walked out of the house amid the laughter of the bystanders and entered the vehicle; then, taking the battered hat from his head he threw it into the hands of its proper owner, exclaiming: "Hey, Mr. Dougall, there's your hat," and donned his own amid the cheers of all present.

Mr. Dougall was the unhappiest-looking man in Scotland for some time after that.

: The Bibles of Presidents :

Some Interesting Facts Concerning Them.

ONE of the oldest, if not the very oldest, Bibles connected with the American Government is the book upon which, since 1800, every Chief Justice and every member of the Supreme Court has taken the oath of allegiance when accepting his appointment to Uncle Sam's highest tribunal. More than that, every attorney who has practiced before the Supreme Court since that date—1800—has pledged his allegiance over the little volume, with one exception—Daniel Webster. It is told even yet of the Supreme Court of that day that Mr. Webster's fame as an orator had so preceded him that on that occasion when he came to argue his first case before the Court, the clerk, Mr. Caldwell, in his eagerness to hear the great speaker, forgot to administer the oath.

Some interesting facts have also been revealed regarding the Bibles used by American Presidents. When Grover Cleveland came to the Capitol for his first inauguration he brought with him a little red Bible his mother had given him when he was a boy, and which he had always cherished as a keepsake. On that Bible he took the oath of office. A few days before Mr. McKinley's inauguration a number of African Methodist bishops came into Mr. McKinley's office one morning with a tremendous package, which proved to be a large family Bible in a big plush box, and they wished Mr. McKinley to use it. Their request was granted, and the big Bible was one of the show objects in the Red Parlor of the White House for a long time afterwards.

A $50,000 Bible.

When Mr. Roosevelt was inducted into office as Governor of New York some one presented him with the Bible which he used on that occasion. His name, which was written on the fly-leaf, was misspelled, but he used the same Bible at his second inauguration, and it has been one of Mr. Roosevelt's most treasured mementos ever since.

These volumes, however, are to Americans of insignificant value when compared with the copy of the Bible, bound in red leather with silver clasps, on which Washington took the oath as first President of the Republic on the balcony of the old Federal Hall in New York. It was borrowed for the occasion, and the descendants of those who lent it preserve it as a most sacred relic.

Americans, inspired perhaps by the example of the late Pierpont Morgan, who included many historic Bibles among his art treasures, have of late years exhibited a great passion for Bible collecting. Bibles belonging to Queen Anne, George III and Richard, Duke of Gloucester, are to be found in the United States.

It was H. E. Huntington, the railway magnate of America, who a couple of years ago paid $50,000 for a Gutenberg Bible which was once in the Ashburnham Library. America, however, has not succeeded in securing a literary treasure to be found among the finest collection of English Bibles in the world, at the Bristol Baptist College. This college possesses the only perfect copy in existence of Tyndale's first New Testament, printed at Worms in 1525. The then Bishop of London bought up and burned this first edition, and thus provided Tyndale money for an improved and larger one. The only other fragment of the destroyed edition is now in the British Museum, but it stops short at the 22d chapter of St. Matthew. The trustees of the college have often been tempted to dispose of this unique volume, but hitherto they have been proof against temptation, though no less than $50,000 has been offered for it.

Another valuable Bible in the collection is a copy of Coverdale's Bible, published in 1535. Lincoln Cathedral possesses the only other perfect copy in existence, although six other more or less complete copies are known to exist.

RIDERS WILL SCRAMBLE FOR COIN TO-NIGHT

WITH the kind permission of Old Man Weather, and with the enthusiastic co-operation of the greatest string of riders ever gathered for a race meeting in Dixie they're off to-night at the Motordrome for the fourth race meet of the local season—and it looks the best in the bunch.

There's more "pep" and enthusiasm out at Riders' Row to-day, than there has been since the meeting began. Up to this meet the riders have known that, mounted as they are now, Jock McNeil and Wilmer Richards were fast enough to take all the races. The rest got a chance only in the specials.

Now McNeil and Richards have been yanked out and put in a class by themselves. These two meet to-night in three match races at three miles each. This will settle the most momentous speed question of the season. But they will have it all to themselves.

It's a Mighty Close Thing.

With the two fastest machines out of it the rest of the riders will scramble viciously for the Sweepstakes and the Motordrome Purse. It could not be any more even. Of the eight riders who will take part there isn't over a fraction of a second to the mile difference in the machines or the riders. They are calculated to race, nose and nose, every inch of the difference, with the advantage slightly favoring Harry Glenn, because he has the longest nose.

Another improvement in the card comes from the fact that there will be four starters in each heat of the two regular races. In past meets two of the heats have had but three starters. And it really takes four to make the racing good. To-night both the preliminary heats and the finals will have four starters.

It will not be surprising to see some remarkable marks made to-night. The track has been proved so safe that every man is willing to let out to the limit. Thus far there hasn't been a man even scratched.

Accidents Looked For.

To the old-timers the absence of accidents is growing monotonous. Not one of them ever heard of three meets on a new track without at least one bad spill. They looked for them Wednesday night, and it really seemed to disappoint them that nothing happened.

It is a marvelous thing, considering the scores of men who have been killed on board tracks and considering the fine possibilities of a spill at 85 miles an hour or better, that none of the riders fear an accident. They try to be moderately careful. But to expect sudden death—well, it never occurs to them and they are the only men at the track who don't think of it when they come to close quarters at high speed.

With a safe track and machines getting better all the time there is no reason why a fast mark or two should not be set to-night.

The races will start to-night at 8:15. Cars will leave Five Points at short intervals. Tickets are on sale at Tumlin's and Shepherd's. All are provided with rain checks. These checks are good if rain interferes before the program is completed.

Ty Cobb Just Hates Those Polo Grounds

DETROIT, June 28.—"Ty" Cobb was glad to get away from the Polo Grounds. The "Georgia Peach" dearly loves his base hits these days, and in "Ty's" opinion the Polo Grounds is no place for a .450 batting average.

"For the life of me, I can not hit on those grounds," said "Ty." "No wonder the Yankees are not hitting the ball. Hitting is more or less guesswork in New York. Sometimes you never do see the ball till it gets past you.

"It's mighty bad for the outfielders, too; unless a fly is hit so high that it shows above the upper tier, it is very hard to see. A low grounder is often lost in the background of summer clothed fans. I like New York pretty well, but I'm glad I don't have to play 77 games a year on the Polo Grounds."

Ex-Giant Ewing to Return to Baseball

BELLEFONTAINE, O., June 28.—Bob Ewing, former major league pitcher, who quit the game last season to devote all of his attention to farming and the raising of hogs on his farm at New Hampshire, O., is debating with himself as to whether he should re-enter the national game.

He has an offer from Manager Bade Myers, of the Canton team, Interstate League. Myers and Ewing began their professional career together as members of Charley Stroeber's Toledo team, Myers being a catcher at the time.

Ewing, now 38, showed the old-time form he possessed during the nine years he played with the Cincinnati team. For a while Ewing was with the Philadelphia and New York National League clubs.

M'GRAW BEATS ALL BUSHES TO GATHER TALENT

By Damon Runyon.

NEW YORK, June 28.—John J. McGraw is beating the business quite far and wide for baseball talent this season, having inaugurated the most systematic and thorough search for incipient athletes that he has ever conducted.

It is said that "Sinister" Dick Kinsella, the Varnish King, of Springfield, Mo., and McGraw's present chief of scouts, is under a commission that will take him over more territory than any other ivory hunter will cover this year.

This statement is borne out by the movements of the sinister one during the past few weeks. After thoroughly canvassing the bushes of the Middle West, Kinsella has suddenly leaped into the New York State and other leagues in this section of the country, and after a few weeks hereabouts he will comb the Pacific Coast and the Northwest.

The result of Kinsella's activities will probably not be definitely known until late in the summer, or until draft time. However, it is said that he has already spotted half a dozen pitchers.

More than likely Kinsella was instructed to pay particular attention to pitchers this year, as McGraw has suddenly found himself in need of that class of material.

* * *

FERDINAND SCHUPP, the author of the rising curve, is now the only real youngster with the club, and Theodore Goulait is about the only pitcher "plant" belonging to McGraw, although he still has some hopes of Frank Smith, now in the New York State League, developing later on.

Larue Kirby, who was carried along by the Giants for some time last season, and who was left at Mobile with Mike Finn this spring, has been cut loose entirely. There were various reasons why Larue would not do, chief of which was Larue himself. Finn had to send him away, and the last heard of the Michigan terror was at Pensacola, 'way down in Florida.

Stray reports floating in and out of the far sticks indicate that Chance also has some scouts hard at work. It is said that the Peerless Leader has lined up a score of young athletes for September delivery, and that several will come from the Texas League, incubator of some of the best ball tossers in the land. Chance also has an eye on various promising young men out on the coast and in the Southern League.

* * *

FOR a long time past there has been an effort on foot to discover the reason why ball players hit less on the Polo Grounds than any other field in either circuit, it being generally admitted that such is the case. Last season the Giants claimed that it was on account of the advertising signs in center field. They said these signs formed a background which practically destroyed their batting eyes.

This year the signs were left off a considerable section of the bleacher wall, and the space was painted an alluring green. Then the Giants proceeded to hit a little bit less than ever, thus acquitting the poor signs of the blame.

BRITISH POLO CAPTAIN COUNTS ON WINNING NEXT

Unquestionably the best polo team won in our recent match. We are delighted with the treatment accorded us in America and the true sportsmanship shown."

EVEN TENNIS EARNS COIN; AMERICA IS "SPORT MAD"

NEW YORK, June 28.—It has been said that America is "sport mad." That the general boom in interest in competitive events extends to tennis is proved by the figures just announced placing the total gate receipts of the recent international matches here at $19,000. Of this surprising sum $7,000 went to defray the expenses of the American team.

Of the net profits of $12,000, half was turned over to the Australian team. The West Side Lawn Tennis Club, on whose courts the matches were played, received $1,400, and the remaining $4,600 was put in the treasury of the National Lawn Tennis Association.

ZAMLOCH TRIES TO STEAL WITH ALL BASES OCCUPIED

DETROIT, June 28.—It has happened again in the big leagues. No longer is John Anderson the proud possessor of the glory of stealing second with the bases filled. Zamloch, a Tiger recruit hurler, pulled the stunt in the second game with the Naps. Stanage was on third, Moriarty on second and the pitcher himself on first. The latter started for second, hit the dirt with a great slide, arose, brushed himself and found Morrie planted at the base. It was a cinch to tag Zamloch, and then an ivory double resulted, as Stanage tried to reach home and was caught on the throw to the plate.

MORAN KNOCKS OUT LOGAN EASILY IN NEW ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS, June 28.—Frank Moran definitely settled the question of his superiority over Tim Logan last night by knocking out the New York boxer in the fourth round of their scheduled ten-round bout.

CHICAGO OPENS OLYMPIC GAMES TO GREAT CROWD

CHICAGO, June 28.—With the huge stands crowded to their capacity, the American Olympic games were opened under the most favorable circumstances to-day. The athletic carnival promises to outclass any event of the same nature eevr held in this country. Athletes from all over the United States and Canada, as well as the point winners from Sweden, who took part in the Olympic games at Stockholm last year, are in attendance.

Almost every conceivable sort of athletic contest has been arranged for the meet, which will continue until July 6. A swimming tank has been dug out in the center of the field and is so constructed that it can be boarded over and covered with earth when not in use. There is also a ski slide on which the skiing tournament will be held. As the weather will not permit the slides being covered with the natural coating of ice, grease has been used and in the preliminary trials found to be successful. Several polo games and feats of horsemanship also have been arranged. The army polo team will in all probability participate in this event.

* * *

TO-DAY the final championship contests for Chicago school children will be run off. The preliminary trials in the competitive drills, marching and like events, were held Thursday and yesterday. Fifty thousand children participated in the preliminaries.

To-morrow will be known as "Swedish Day," and the Swedish singing societies of Chicago have arranged for a monster chorus to join in the singing of national hymns and folk songs.

The intercollegiate athletic championships of the United States, including track and field sports, will be run off Wednesday, while the interscholastic championships, in which 2,000 high school and preparatory school boys are entered, will be decided on Thursday.

* * *

A "SANE Fourth" celebration will be given on Friday, interspersed with athletic events. In the afternoon the junior track and field championships of the United States, composed of 18 standard events, will take place. In the evening there will be more athletic events, educational moving pictures and a fireworks display.

Next Saturday will be the crowning day of the meet. The senior national championships, conducted under the auspices of the A. A. U., will be run off on that day and will bring forth some of the best athletes in the country. Such men as Sheridan, MacGrath, Sheppard, Kiviat, Kohlmainen and others of international reputation will be on hand.

* * *

DURING the meet there will also be archery contests, drills of firemen and policemen, three days of swimming, fencing, wrestling matches and trap shooting. Directly south of the stadium a large plot of ground has been laid out for the trap shooting competition which will be held on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week under the direction of E. W. Heath. The Boy Scouts will also give several exhibition drills under the direction of Dr. P. J. H. Farrell. Several power-boat races on the lake have also been arranged to take place during the week.

THE MOTORCYCLE RAG.

They were sitting in the gloaming and her cheeks were pale and damp
As she said good-bye unto her darling Steve.
But he said, "There ain't no reason for the teardrop in your lamp,
For you haven't got no business for to grieve.
I am going for to leave you and may not come back no more.
I will risk my life as everybody knows.
But although I don't come back again you oughtn't to get sore
With them life insurance papers in your hose."
And as he strode away
She sobbed and then did say:

CHORUS.

"As a patriotic hero
He can bat at minus zero,
And there ain't no sign of beauty in his face,
But I'll gather in the money
From my Motorcycle Honey
If he don't come back alive from that there race."

We note that Roy Good is captain of the Cincinnati motorcycle racing team. This reminds that the virtuous meet their demise at an early age.

Mr. Kirby, who coached the Yale crew, avers that he is well pleased with the ing that an Englishman sometimes is ing that an Englishman cometimes is easily pleased.

Mr. Kirby furthermore avers that Yale will do well when it has learned his stroke from the ground up. Several impartial spectators of the late race were under the impression that Yale had run aground.

"Do not be a fighter," advises James J. Corbett. This advice is followed assiduously by a great majority of our pugilists.

While polo may not strike a popular chord, one might say without fear of successful contradiction that it is not a game for invalids.

Fish stories were told long before men began writing ads for railway companies, but liars were amateurs in those days.

Speaking of the irony of fate, we note that the Red Sox paused long enough to raise aloft in the summer breeze a banner on which was the legend: "World's Champions."

We have it from Ban Johnson that Joe Birmingham is not competent to manage an American League team. Possibly Joe allows his team to win too often for the good of the league.

Boxing experts are wondering who will be Willie Ritchie's manager, but after the fracas on the Fourth a more lucrative position will be that of Mr. Ritchie's doctor.

Bob Fitzsimmons vouchsafes the information that George Rodel is a regular fighter. Jim Corbett expostulates that the said Rodel is a dud. Taking it by and large, Fits wins unanimously.

ROY WALKER IS DUBBED "W. JOHNSON OF MINORS"

NEW ORLEANS, June 28.—"Walter Johnson of the minors." This is the title that Southern League fans will bestow upon Roy Walker, former Appalachian League recruit whom Manager Frank took on several days ago to fill in for "Rube" Evans. Walker was given his premier Wednesday against the Lookouts, and proved himself everything his chief sponsor—Jack Adams—claimed: "More speed than any pitcher in the minor leagues."

Walker, though shaded in a pitching duel by Harry Coveleskie, threw sensational ball. He fanned ten members of Kid Elberfeld's mob, giving up but eight hits, which were turned into a brace of scores.

COULON DECIDES TO POSTPONE WILLIAMS BOUT

By Sol Plex.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 28.—Johnny Coulon is not going to fight Johnny "Kid" Williams, of Baltimore, in Tom McCarey's Vernon arena July 29. The bantam champion decided yesterday afternoon that he was not prepared for such a stiff battle in defense of his laurels and announced that he would wire McCarey last night insisting on a postponement until Labor Day Coulon had given McCarey his word, and said he hated to disappoint Uncle Tom, but allowed a champion should take no foolish chances and that he would not fight Challenger Williams until he knew he was physically fit to put forth his best efforts in defense of the championship he has held for over five years.

Two Months in Mountains.

"Just to show the Vernon Club promoter that I intend playing fair ball for him I will leave for the coast July 1 or a few days later and stay there until Labor Day," said Johnny. "I want to get two months in the mountains before facing the Williams party. I am sure that by Labor Day I will be my old self, able to show Mr. Williams how a real champion fights.

"My right hand is bad and I am low in weight because of the hot weather we have been having. This is the first summer I ever tried to box, anyway, and I guess it is a mistake. When my father was alive he never permitted me to fight in the summer time. He argued that I was such a little fellow, always giving away weight, that training in the hot months would get me down too low. That was the trouble the other night at Kenosha. I guess the dad was right, and I will never again book a big match for June, July or August.

"It will be cool and nice in the mountains near Los Angeles and that will be just the thing for me. I can build up until a couple of weeks before Labor Day and then have something to take off when I start the training camp grind for Williams.

Is Sorry for Williams.

"I am sorry for Williams because the postponement will be hard on him. He already is on the scene, so Labor Day will make a long wait for him. However, he might take on Eddie Campi again on our original date, July 29, the winner to get me on Labor Day. Williams beat Campi in Eddie's first long fight. Since that Campi has whaled both Burns and Ledoux. I think he is entitled to another chance at the Baltimore boy."

MERCURY AT 105 KNOCKS OUT CUB CHARLEY SMITH

CINCINNATI, June 28.—The temperature of 105 proved too much for Charley Smith, Cub hurler, who collapsed after yesterday's game at Redland field. The veteran walked off the field without trouble, but once within the club house began to totter and suddenly fell to the floor. His mates rushed to his assistance. He was rushed to the hotel.

Yell Defiance at Blood Disorders
A Remedy That Has Shown a Most Remarkable Purifying Effect.

At Last You Can Get Rid of Blood Troubles—S. S. S.
The word medicine is one of the most abused in our language. There are certain medicinal properties just as necessary to health as the food we eat. Take, for example, the well-known tonic medicine, S. S. S. This famous blood purifier contains medicinal components just as vital and essential to healthy blood as the elements of wheat, roast beef, the fats and the sugars that make up our daily ration.
As a matter of fact, there is one ingredient in S. S. S. which serves the active purpose of stimulating each cellular part of the body to the healthy and judicious selection of its own essential nutriment. That is why it regenerates the blood supply; why it has such a tremendous influence in overcoming eczema, rash, pimples, and all skin afflictions.
And in regenerating the tissues S. S. S. has a rapid and positive antidotal effect upon all those irritating influences that cause rheumatism, sore throat, weak eyes, failing hair, loss of weight, thin, pale cheeks, and that weariness of muscle and nerve that is generally experienced as spring fever. Get a bottle of S. S. S. at any drug store, and in a few days you will not only feel bright and energetic, but you will be the picture of new life. S. S. S. is prepared only in the laboratory of the Swift Specific Co., 127 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., who maintain a very efficient Medical Department, where all who have any blood disorder of a stubborn nature may write freely for advice and a special book of instruction. S. S. S. is sold everywhere by drug stores, department and general stores.

SPEEDY SPRINT ALL THAT CAN SAVE CRACKERS

By Percy H. Whiting.

IF the Crackers are going to win the pennant this year they must demonstrate it between July 4 and July 16.

The Crackers come home July 4 for the first and only home stay of any importance they get until August 14. On this home stay they get 12 games in a row.

They better win a big majority of them.

* * *

RIGHT now the Crackers are a dangerous distance behind the surprising Gulls, who lead the league. They show no evidence of overtaking Mike Finn's flying club.

No material gain will be made until the team gets home, of course. The Crackers do their gaining on home grounds.

This being true, the local club better make the most of the home stay between July 4 and 16. It will be a long time before they get another.

On July 17 the Crackers go out on a heart-breaking road trip. Of the next 28 games they play 24 on the road.

And you know well the Crackers aren't going to make any advances while this torrid July-August trip is in progress.

* * *

ONE fact that will help is that the Crackers wind up the season with 22 straight games at home. But unless they have begun to gain on the Gulls before that time they will never overtake them. They can't afford to wait for the last home stay. It will be too late. They can't afford to wait until the Gulls falter, for there isn't any certainty they are going to falter.

* * *

IF the Crackers are a disappointment in the Southern League—which they aren't yet—consider the case of the Pelicans. This team looked like a sure one-two-three club. Now it is nowhere and rapidly going further.

Laugh if you want to, but my own opinion is that this is Charley Frank's last year in Pelicantown.

This stuff has been coming in over the grapevine for a couple of months and longer—and coming pretty straight. The Cleveland club undoubtedly owns the New Orleans association. That's a moral certainty. They will want to put one of their own men in charge. They realize that Charley Frank is unpopular in his home town—why, it is difficult to figure, for he has never failed until this year to give them a good ball club. It is believed that the Cleveland folks wanted to be rid of Frank last year but didn't have the heart to fire him, after the showing he made with the 1912 Pelicans.

* * *

THEY need a new deal all around in New Orleans.

That ought to be the best baseball town of the league—it has the population. But it is nearly the worst. There is some good (or bad) reason for this because it is not a condition of long standing.

The Cleveland folks have figured around and have presumably decided that the sacrifice of Charley Frank would be a popular move.

So off comes his head.

A mere prediction, truly! But watch it come through.

PRIZE FIGHTRS' BALL TEAM JIMMY DIME'S NEW IDEA

NEWCASTLE, PA., June 28.—Jimmy Dime, the enterprising manager of pugilists and fight promoter, announces he has organized a team of ball players which would be composed of some of the best boxers in this country, and that they would play several exhibition games with professional teams this summer. Dime stated that there were few remunerative matches for the boxers during the summer and he intended to keep his team going until fall. His line-up is as follows:

Dan Daley, pitcher, heavyweight; Tom McMahon, first base, light heavyweight; Tommy Bresnahan, second base; Joe Chip, catcher, welterweight; George Chip, shortstop, middleweight; "Goo" Stewart, third base, middleweight; Patsy Brannigan, left field, featherweight; Jimmy Dime, center field, manager, and Tommy Jones, right field, lightweight.

By Joe Agler.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., June 28. Lefty Price will endeavor to prove to the Billikens that he is the goods this afternoon, with Chapman behind the plate. We should cop at least two of the three games scheduled for Montgomery. Manush will show up for Monday's game. He seems to be in mid-season shape.

Well, we got that revenge, after all, taking two of the series from the Turtles. Old King Brady twirled superb ball yesterday afternoon in spite of a sun which threatened to warp the grandstand out of shape and blister the infield. "Old Reliable" came back, good and strong, and demonstrated his worth to the Crackers.

We scored in the first on Long's single and Whitey's hit to center. We rocked along to the sixth without a chance, and then Smith singled, Bisland bunted and yours truly got a hit. Baerwald muffed Chapman's fly and Smith scored. I was nipped at second.

Newton was on the mound for the Turtles and pitched great ball, but his teammates couldn't help him much. We all were nearly suffocated with the heat.

MANUSH FOR CRACKERS; WILL JOIN ON THE ROAD

MONTGOMERY, ALA., June 28.—Frank Manush, formerly of the New Orleans Pelicans, recently unconditionally released by Charley Frank, has been signed by Manager Smith as utility player.

Manush has been in Memphis ever since his release. He will join the Crackers to-day or to-morrow.

It is presumed Manush will take the place of George Rohe as the Crackers' utility player.

Among the latest improvement in railroad rolling stock is the modern steel sleeping car, which stands in the sizzling yards, all day absorbing and storing up heat to be given off to a ball club that tries to travel and sleep at night.

JOE BEAN, director of playgrounds, deserves a large medal for getting the young men of Atlanta started in a big track and field meet. The event at Piedmont Park July 4 is deserving of the support of all those interested in the physical development of the young men in Atlanta.

No sport is cleaner, healthier or more desirable than track and field meets. Running, jumping and weight throwing contests develop those who take part in them. And moreover, they furnish a fine spectacle for those who witness them.

Unquestionably there will be a tremendous crowd at Piedmont Park Fourth of July morning to see the contests.

Of course no admission fee will be charged. There will be seats, if only on the grass, for all.

It is to be hoped that this meet will be the first of many. Atlanta ought to have one big track and field meet and several small ones each year. In the winter it ought to have an indoor meet in the Auditorium-Armory.

These things will come in time. The hardest work is done. A start has been made.

SINCE the Pittsburg club has been slumping, Manager Fred Clarke caused to be issued orders that the lid would be lifted on the anti-booze clause in the Pirate contracts.

"The players may drink beer if they drink it alone," said Clarke. "The use of the beverage as a tonic I do not believe to be harmful, at least not as much as the restless restraint caused by the clause against it."

This should be interesting to Pittsburg fans who may not know that some of the Pirate players, in St. Louis at least, were lifting the "lid" before Manager Fred Clarke got his shoulder under it, showing the practicability of such a clause in the first place.

FRED CLARKE, manager of the Pittsburg National League Club, closed a deal recently with the St. Joe Western League Club, for the purchase of Outfielders Joe Kelly and George Watson.

The consideration was not announced, except that money and players were involved. Each man is hitting above the .300 mark, but Watson is now out of the game with a broken leg. They will report to Pittsburg next spring.

WHITEY ALPERMAN never tires of telling stories of the great, perhaps the greatest, player the world has ever known.

"One night," said Whitey, the other day, "when Kelly was with the old Chicago team, a half-dozen carriages had been ordered by the late Al Johnson to take the players for a ride about the city.

"As the players waited in the hotel a down-and-out fan came wandering in, told Kelly the story of his hardships.

"Kelly went to Johnson.

"'How much will these carriages cost us?' he asked.

"'Oh, I suppose about $35 or $40,' said Al.

"'All right,' said Kel, 'let's call it off and give the money to this old scout.' And it was done.

"Another time," continued Alperman, "Kelly shouted to an umpire: 'Don't fine me, Mr. Ump!' The official stood glaring at him muttering threats of a $50 assessment.

"'Don't fine me,' repeated Mike. 'Fine one of those tight wads, there. It will teach him a lesson. It won't me. If you take $50 away from me, you take the drinks and cigars away from a lot of fellows who are waiting for me at the hotel.'"

THERE'LL be no hidden ball trick victims among the Naps this season unless some one gets careless and forgets Birmingham's instructions. The Naps are directed to hug bases until the opposing pitcher takes his position at the slab, unless they positively know where the ball is.

If the pitcher should take his position on the rubber and the then hidden ball trick be tried by an opposing player, the base runners would move up a base. The taking of the pitching position without being able to deliver the ball would constitute a balk as soon as the pitcher took down his hands.

JOE AGLER has the happy knack of being able to parry inconvenient interruptions with some smart retort that immediately quashes the opposition. And Joe is game to the core. He was playing in a rather noisy game a few years ago, and after a short time a big chunk of wood was thrown at him. Fortunately, the aim was bad; and it fell harmlessly on the platform.

Agler picked it up and showed it to the spectators.

"Good heavens!" he exclaimed in tones of mock anxiety, "one of you fans has lost your head!"

Lee Magee Is Crack Of Cardinals' Team

ST. LOUIS, June 28.—"If I had a few more like Magee" is the substance of a prayerful wish that lingers in the mind of Manager Miller Huggins, of the St. Louis National League team, after many a close game dropped by the Cardinals in which Lee Magee, the speedy young left fielder, has put up a beautiful all-around game, to the exclusion of most of his teammates.

The left fielder of the Cardinals is rightly entitled to this oft repeated, yet unspoken compliment. Magee has all the characteristics to a marked degree of an up-to-date ball player—the speedy kind. He is by far the fastest man on the Cardinal team and one of the best all-around players Manager Huggins has in his line-up. He will take all kinds of chances on the bases and has won many games by his fleetness alone.

MANDOT PICKS RITCHIE TO DEFEAT JOE RIVERS

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 28.—They say a fighter's opinion of another fighter does not amount to a snap. If you want to find out for yourself remember what is written in the following paragraph and think of it when the time comes:

"Joe Mandot, one of the brainiest fighters of the day, picks Willie Ritchie to beat Joe Rivers, and says Leachie Cross will stop Bud Anderson owing to Cross' tremendous power to hit."

See how near Joe comes.

GOPHERS WILL NOT MEET MICHIGAN NEXT FALL

MINNEAPOLIS, June 28.—The University of Minnesota will not meet Michigan on the football field next fall. This was announced to-day by the athletic authorities at the university. The date held open for the possible scheduling of Michigan October 25, has been given to the University of North Dakota. This precludes any possibility of a resumption of football relations with Michigan until at least another year.

RICKEY TO SCOUT FOR BROWNS

ST. LOUIS, June 28.—Branch Rickey, former catcher in both big leagues, who coached the University of Michigan team this year, has returned to his old job as scout for the Browns during the summer. He began work by taking to the team with him two of his Michigan stars, Pitcher Powell and Shortstop Lavans.

THORNTON WINS RIGHT TO BATTLE WITH CHAMPION

NEW ORLEANS, LA., June 28.—Rain played havoc with the rule of the Southern tennis championship games at the New Orleans Lawn Tennis Club Friday. J. B. Adoue, of Dallas, Texas, went down in defeat before Nat Thornton, of Atlanta, in straight sets, 6-4, 6-1, 6-1. This brings Thornton, the winner of the tournament, against last year's champion, Carleton Smith. This match will be played late to-day after the doubles are finished.

The only other men's matches was stopped by darkness. Only Atlantans were participants, Smith and Mansfield against Tohrnton and Grant in the semi-finals. Much to the surprise of everybody Smith and Mansfield took the first two sets of the match (which is the best three out of five sets) before the game was called.

Grima and Phelps meet Adoue and Shelton to-day. Thornton and Grant will finish their match with Mansfield and Smith before the afternoon games start. Bummerstadt is carded against Lloyd and Hochendale is opposing Strouse.

Early in the afternoon the final round in doubles between the winners of the morning matches is expected to start. Clark is carded to meet the winner of the Hochendale-Strouse match. Mrs. Monroe will meet Miss Murphy at 4 p. m. and half an hour later Thornton will meet Smith. The final round in consolations will start at 5 p. m. The forecast for to-day calls for clear weather and it is expected that the program will be carried through without hindrance.

GUNBOAT SMITH WHIPS BOER RODEL IN THIRD

NEW YORK, June 28.—Gunboat Smith, of California, last night defeated George Rodel, the South African Boer, in the third round of a scheduled ten-round bout at Madison Square Garden. After Rodel had been knocked down twice Referee Billy John stopped the bout.

Care and Attention Should Be Given to Chicks After Weaned

Chicks Should Be Fairly Well Feathered Before Weaned—Dryness Essential, Both in House and Yard.

Edited by Judge F. J. Marshall.

When chicks are forced to look after themselves by being weaned by their mother, or are changed from a brooder to a brood coop, is when they begin to demonstrate their inheritance of strength and vigor or their lack of it. When these changed conditions take place, then it is that they must depend almost wholly upon their own resources. Then they must depend upon the warmth of their feathers and internal heat. The chicks, if hearty and healthy, will push forward in rapid growth to maturity. Strong, healthy parentage makes itself felt, as do also all the conditions of food, feeding, care and management. The age at which chicks should be weaned or removed from the brooder depends upon the variety of considerations—the condition of the chicks themselves as to advancement, the climatic conditions of the season. The little fellows should be fairly well feathered and able to withstand, to a reasonable degree, the sudden changes that frequently come in almost any section of the country. Much depends upon the breed, the season and care with which they are to be handled. The smaller, laying breeds feather out very quickly, and should be pretty well feathered and ready to colonize by the time they are eight weeks old, and will stand quite cool weather if they are only kept dry. The American breeds and common mixtures about that size and type will require about ten weeks for the same process. While they are heavy, Asiatic breeds are very slow maturing and require from three to four months to get anything like a good covering. The weather conditions are very strong factors in the rearing of chicks after they are weaned. Dryness is very essential both in the houses and the yards. While dampness and chilly winds are very likely to cause trouble, on the other hand hot, sultry weather often has a bad effect when they can not escape from their unhealthy condition. There is nothing like plenty room and ventilation. All brood coops should be provided with good wire fronts to provide the ventilation, and at the same time to prevent intrusion from night prowlers. It is advisable at all times to avoid crowding, and there is only one way to do that, and that is by not allowing a great number to roost in one coop or house, do matter how large it may be, for when the nights become cool, they will huddle into small space, and those which happen to be about in the middle must suffer. Chicks of about the same size and vigor should only be allowed in the flock. Any weaklings should be culled out and placed with a younger lot. This will not only be an advantage to the weakly ones, but will make a more uniform-looking lot out of each. Separating the sexes is a profitable proposition, and in the case of the smaller or laying breeds or mixed and common chicks of that type the separating should take place at weaning time. This will give both the cockerels and the pullets a much better chance for making good growth, and their management can be so much better adapted to the purpose in view for each. If the flocks can be separated and given unlimited range, so much the better. Where chicks can be allowed the run of growing corn, it makes an ideal run conducive to growth. Where it becomes necessary, on account of the garden, the nearness to neighbors or similar reasons, to yard the young ones, the fence may be made tight by a 12-inch board or a strip of 1-inch mesh wire, and the balance of regulation poultry wire. Where chicks have only limited space, it is a good thing to spade up at least part of the yard quite often with grain scattered about in it. Protection from the extreme heat in summer should be provided if there is not already shade trees in the yards. Old canvas or awnings of some kind can easily be arranged and are fully appreciated by the youngsters. Another very profitable thing where heavy, sudden showers are common are little shelters easily reached by the little ones. They will save many a chick from an untimely death. These little emergency shelters need not be any more than two or three wide boards slanted against the fence or supported in any other similar manner to run the water off. No chicken coop or house should be a hotbox in the day time or at night. Screen the front, also windows and doors, to allow good circulation. Of course, good, wholesome food is necessary to provide rapid growth. Avoid all sour mixtures of a sloppy nature, except sour milk or curd, which is good and wholesome. Dry grains and feed of that nature are advisable. Keep them filled up. Rapid growth requires full and complete feeding.

CHICKENS need more care and attention the next two or three months than any other time during the year. It is perfectly natural for chickens to have lice and mites, and unless you look after them they will multiply in such quantity to prove profitable. The little chicks and the hens will not lay if they are covered with these pests. We have ties that you can not expect your flock remedies that will positively get rid of them and the cost is very little. For 35c you can get a can of either Lee's, Conkey's or Pratt's Lice Liquid and we will guarantee either of these preparations to give entire satisfaction.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Close-in Acreage Bought for $32,375

Edwin P. Ansley Adds to Park. Three Fine New Residences. Other Realty Notes.

Recent additions to Ansley Park seem to portend an extension of that residential neighborhood until it reaches limits much farther to the north than at present, perhaps as far as Rock Springs, or beyond. This was hinted at the other day by members of the Edwin P. Ansley real estate agency and is borne out in part thus far in the additions already made, and an addition of more recent date which has just gone to record.

Mr. Ansley has bought from Mrs. Sallie J. Bearse a 16.9-acre tract, bounded on the east by North Boulevard, etc., for $25,375, on terms of $1,267 cash and notes at 7 per cent; and from Paul E. and Lizzie L. Stephens a 5-acre tract, bounded on the north by Rock Springs Avenue and on the east by Boulevard, for $7,000, on terms of $1,000 cash and the balance in notes at the same rate of interest.

The original Ansley Park tract contained about 200 acres and was bought from the late George W. Collier for about $300,000, Mr. Collier having bought it in the pioneer days for $150. Since the above purchase some 20 acres were bought from Mrs. Harriet F. Brandon for approximately $18,000, and the addition of more acreage promises to bring about more interesting development.

Papers in Interesting Sales.

The northeast corner of Peachtree Road and Peachtree Way, which was sold June 15, 1912, by George L. Dickinson, of Florida, to Eugene Dickey, has been transferred to J. W. Goldsmith, Jr.

Deeds have gone to record in the conveyance May 9 of 87 Luckie Street, 40 by 150, to Paul Goldsmith from Alex Reeves, for $28,000, on terms of $11,250 cash, the assumption of a $10,000 loan and notes at 6 per cent.

Two More Fine Residences.

Dr. Joseph Jacobs, it was learned Friday, will move from his downtown house on the east side of Peachtree, between Sixth and Seventh Streets, and will erect a handsome country home on Peachtree Road, between Buckhead and Brookhaven.

Charles Godfrey, builder of one of the first homes at East Lake and now a resident there, has bought a lot at Brookhaven, and it is reported will soon build there.

The contract for J. J. Haverty's fine residence on Peachtree Road, north of Jack J. Spalding's "Deerland," has been let to the Pittman Construction Company and work will start in a short time. The house will cost about $50,000.

Application for Permit.

Application was made Friday for a permit to construct at Auburn Avenue and Butler Street the $76,803 auditorium and business building of the G. U. O. I. O. O. F. (colored).

More Money in Sight.

People vitally interested in the condition of the local money market have noted with pleasure a decided "loosening up" of the banks with loan funds. A depositor who was turned down flatly several weeks ago on application for a $5,000 loan received this week a letter from his bank saying that he could get the money at the usual rates. Many others who found a temporary tightness in money have succeeded in making arrangements to carry on business operations.

Charter Applied For.

Heirs of the late Sidney H. Phelan have applied to the Superior Court, through Barry Wright, of Rome, attorney, for a charter for the S. H. Phelan Company (Inc.), the purpose of the organization being to handle the Phelan estate.

After Executive Mansion.

Although Forrest & George Adair expect to make no proposition to the State Legislature this year relative to acquiring the Executive Mansion property for Asa G. Candler, several other real estate agents will probably open up the matter. One of the latter gathered all the information necessary some time ago and announced that he would offer a site on Peachtree Road. It is stated authoritatively that the Rhodes mansion on Peachtree, near Seventeenth Street, will not be put up this year. Charles H. Black offered it two years ago as agent for Mr. Rhodes.

Mr. Candler has no definite plans for his extensive frontage, beginning with the old Capital City Club property. He declared some time ago that the local political situation was such that he didn't feel justified in going ahead, and intimated that he had not been able to determine what character of improvements to make.

New Subdivision Opened.

Oakwood Terrace, a subdivision of 100 residence lots owned by the McKenzie Trust Company, has been placed with the L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency for sale. This property is just off East Lake Drive and adjoins Druid Hills. The Bottenfield Agency now has subdivisions worth approximately $1,000,000.

Knox Going to Convention.

The local delegation of real estate dealers going to the sixth annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges in Winnipeg the latter part of July, promises to be swelled by several other delegates before the lists have closed. Fitzhugh Knox, builder and real estate developer, has plans for going. The names of others have been published.

Additions to Sales Force.

O. P. Lyman, formerly with the A. K. Hawkes Company, and C. S. Martin, formerly of Tennessee, have joined the city sales force of the L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency. Both men are well acquainted with realty values and are expected to prove a valuable addition to the firm.

"My Field the World"--A Fine Motto

(Copyright, 1913.)

A great wonder of the deep is the German ship Imperator, which arrived in America the other day.

What a chapter old Job could have talked about that ship if he had seen it!

Think of a ship with three wireless operators working night and day, ALWAYS ABLE TO TALK TO ONE SIDE OR THE OTHER OF THE OCEAN. Think of a ship with nine decks, seven for first-class passengers—a monstrosity almost as complicated as Dante's hell.

Think of a ship with six elevators running up and down, suites of twelve rooms, anchors that weigh more than twenty-five thousand pounds each, a ship with swimming tanks, greenhouses and a population equal to that of a small city.

Poor old "Behemoth," who impressed Job so deeply, would seem a very small thing compared to this modern Behemoth. The original Behemoth, who "drinketh up a river and hasteth not," could be tucked away in one of the coal bunkers of the Imperator, or burned up in one of the big furnaces and not noticed.

There are many wonderful things about that wonderful ship, with her five captains commanded by an admiral.

She is a great tribute to the power of the German people, a tribute to organization, a proof of the wonderful things that can be accomplished by men that are determined to excel.

But the best thing of all about this great ship is the motto written at her prow, "My field the world." That is a good motto, good for this ship that sails the ocean, good for the great philosopher, Bacon, when he said, "I have taken all knowledge for my province," and "nothing that affects man can be foreign to me."

It is a big motto, "My field the world." But not too big for a man who realizes that the world is man's property, his home and his garden, to be developed and owned by him, to be the firm ground from which he shall look out and study the real world, which is the infinite universe.

Every man worthy of the name should have in his mind that motto of the big ship, "My field the world," and interest himself in the world's doings, interest himself in the progress of the race, in its future and in its past, and determine to be a man whose field really IS the world, and not a mouse, whose field is the corner of some back yard.

A Shaken Confidence Must Be Restored

It will be a relief to the whole country to learn that the Diggs-Caminetti "white-slave" prosecutions in California are to be pressed with due diligence, despite the private pressure brought to bear on the Attorney General and others in Washington.

Indeed, such a course was inevitable the moment District Attorney John L. McNab, of the Northern District of California, made public his courageous letter of resignation to the President, thereby attracting public attention to a grave judicial scandal.

The expression of public opinion was both instant, widespread and practically unanimous. A flood of telegrams poured into the White House.

IT WILL TAKE MORE THAN AN ORDER FROM THE PRESIDENT to go ahead with all seemly speed with these cases, an order penned AFTER a storm of popular indignation had broken, TO RESTORE CONFIDENCE in the impartial workings of those courts of justice over which the Federal authorities have control and in those other officers of the Government who have shown such lax judgment on so serious an occasion.

Congress has the very urgent duty before it of not only establishing all the facts but also of FIXING THE RESPONSIBILITY AND THE BLAME.

:: THE OTHERS ::

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

ONE is the pride of the college,
Handsome and sunny and clever
Joking while gathering knowledge,
Slaving and worrying never.
Baseball and football and rowing,
Sanscrit and Latin and Greek—
Dazed by his wonderful showing,
All of the others stand meek.

One goes through life winning laurels,
Brilliant and able till death;
Proof against foes and their quarrels,
Crushing them all with a breath.
Much as a baby blows bubbles
One leaps along in the race,
Laughing at heartaches and troubles
All of the others must face.

This is a toast to the others,
Hewing their pathway through life—
All the less fortunate brothers
Comrades of sorrow and strife.
Standing and waiting and hoping,
Strangers to Fame and its pride,
Here's to the patiently groping!
Here's to the thousands that tried!

COFFEE.

Editor The Georgian:

What is the matter with the pure food inspector? Is he asleep on his job, that so many brands of adulterated coffee are suffered to be sold to the poor? Ever so many of them have chicory; and in color give a beautiful nut-brown result, but to an inveterate drinker of coffee they are as lifeless as turnip soup.

Suppose the inspector thinks that if people know what they are buying, it is all right. But how about the boarder, when it is passed off on him for coffee? And the temptation is too great, these days of high-priced food to buy the cheaper article.

CAR SERVICE AND STORMS.

Editor The Georgian:

It seems to me the public has a just cause of complaint regarding the street car service which is given them in this city during thunderstorms. It has, during the past few years, become the custom of the Georgia Railway and Power Company to suspend service during even very mild thunderstorms, and with proper equipment this practice seems to be without reason or excuse.

So far as my observation goes, it is not done in any other first-class town, and no sufficient reason has ever been given for doing it in Atlanta. People need the street car service as much when there is a rainstorm accompanied by lightning as at other times.

The Automobile

Everything Being Done to Make Automobiles Safe, He Says. They Have Done Wonders for American Roads.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

I WAS almost startled on seeing, in the current number of the magazine called Motor, a picture of an automobile furnished with the new French device of movable electric eyes!

Even when the auto's great glaring eyes are fixed in direction its resemblance at night to a demon of unimaginable swiftness and power is stunning, and one gets out of its way with panicky haste. But when it bears on each side of its head a glowing eye, which turns magically in all directions, searching out the fleeing pedestrian in his retreat by the fence or the hedge, and detecting every obstruction along the borders of its way, the verisimilitude is complete. Man has never yet made anything so thrillingly lifelike, but inspired with a life that seems more than human!

Everything Done for Safety.

Yet while, to the excited imagination, these movable mechanical eyes may increase the terror of the auto rushing through the night, they are, for all wanderers in the ways, all nomads of the night, a means and an assurance of greater safety. They proclaim, again, that the modern demon of the road is a kindly demon, who means no harm, although he speeds so swiftly, and who would not, willingly, hurt a hair of our heads. He is as desirous as are we who look upon him with fear, and jump at his croaking voice, to avoid all evil.

If those who still carp at the automobile, and nurse an antagonism to it, would consider what has been done, and what is still being done—as witness this latest device—to eliminate the peculiar dangers which its invention has introduced into the highways, they would find themselves taking a more philosophical view of things, and would cease their opposition to one of the greatest advances in locomotion that science has ever promoted. You have only to glance through the pages of the magazine I have mentioned in order to convince yourself that the inventors and manufacturers of auto vehicles hold nothing more dear than the question of safety; safety for those who ride and for those who only look upon the riders.

Put Bad Roads Out of Business.

It is the same with the roads themselves. Unthinking people sometimes blame the automobile for damaging the roads—as if most of the roads that we had before its arrival COULD be damaged! But, look at the other side of the affair. Only a few years ago every American traveling in Europe blushed at the thought of the painful contrast between the roads there and most of those that he was accustomed to at home. He could only console himself by the reflection that we were subduing a new continent, and required time to complete the work in good shape.

Then came the auto, and what has been the result? Within a few short years, solely by the stimulus that it has imparted, we have developed thousands upon thousands of miles of roadways that France herself might be proud of. This single invention has caused a leap of improvement that hundreds of years of ordinary progress would not have produced. The automobile has put the old, muddy, rutty, all but impassable roads of our fathers out of commission, and the whole country smiles with the improvement, and grows richer because of it.

Speaking of French roads, I read another interesting thing, which must be set down entirely to the credit of the automobile. We are now building better roads than they have in France, and the reason is because we have built them from the beginning with the needs of the auto in view. It has taught us how to build them. Many of the French roads are beginning to deteriorate. It is the automobile that has searched out and revealed their weak points. The growing use of auto-carriages of all kinds in the French army has brought a strain to bear upon the roads lying in the districts where the threat of invasion causes frequent military maneuvers in time of peace—a strain that was not foreseen when the roads were constructed—and some of them are proving unable to bear it.

Recognizes Their Value.

What will the French do? Will they abandon the army autos, or intermit the maneuvers? To do so would be to invite instant conquest of their country. No, they will reconstruct the roads, and increase the number of their auto cars. They know the inestimable value of the good demon that has come to revolutionize transportation on this planet, and the roads will have to be made durable enough to carry him on his civilizing and peace-promoting way; for the auto, in its manner, is as great a force for universal peace as is the strong battleship. Everything that links the world together makes for universal brotherhood, and the faster we travel the richer and more contented we become.

:: The Ionian Isles ::

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

IT was just 49 years ago that the Parliament of England with a never-to-be-forgotten magnanimity, resolved to return the Ionian Isles to their oldtime owners, the Greeks.

By the Treaty of Paris, in 1815, the high contracting parties, Great Britain, Russia, Austria and Prussia, agreed to place the isles under the exclusive protection of Great Britain. This agreement was reached not because it was desired by the others, but because it was demanded by Great Britain, the demand being backed by the British navy.

It was in these "Isles of Greece," Corfu, Zanta, Santa Maura, Ithaca and the rest, that modern Greek liberty had its birth, and thanks to England, it was there that it grew to the stately proportions of later years. Great Britain, through her protectorate, kept the islands safe from Turkish depredations, and in 1864 gave them to Greece.

On May 30 of that year the Lord High Commissioner of Great Britain handed over the archives to the Greek plenipotentiary, and on June 6 King George made his entry into Corfu.

Let it be remembered that this Corfu is none other than the ancient Coreyra—the little piece of earth that is responsible for the greatest calamity that ever overtook the human race. Coreyra brought on the Peloponnesian war between Sparta and Athens and their allies, the result of which was the ruin of Athens and the arrest of her wonderful civilization. Had it not been for that war the Athenian genius would have kept on with its development for we know not how long a period, and the gain to humanity would have been inconceivably great. From the cultural standpoint Athens was Greece. It was the home of the art, science, philosophy and eloquence, which made Greece immortal, and when Athens went down all that was not barbarism went down along with her.

Because Coreyra appealed to Sparta to help her fight Athens, and because, as a consequence of the fight, Athens was beaten and her empire practically wiped out, the harm was done to mankind that can never be estimated. It took the world eighteen hundred years to recover, even in part, that which was lost through the fatal Peloponnesian war.

Three Policemen Suspended; Scandal Is Brewing

CONLEY IS GRILLED BY PROSECUTION

DORSEY HAS NEW FRANK EVIDENCE

New activity was injected into the Phagan case Friday when James Conley, negro sweeper at the National Pencil Factory, was removed secretly from his cell in police station and closely questioned by Frank Hooper, who will aid Solicitor Dorsey in the prosecution of Leo Frank.

The move was surrounded with the utmost secrecy. The negro was taken from his cell by Detective Starnes, and behind locked doors questioned anew in the room used by the Police Commissioners. He had been in for many minutes before the action became known.

Mr. Hooper asked Conley various new questions, and after the quizzing was over hurried away from the police station.

Dorsey Has New Evidence.

It was the first time that Hooper had questioned the negro.

That a mass of evidence which the Atlanta detective force had no part in getting, and of which the members have had no knowledge, will be presented at the trial of Frank by Solicitor General Dorsey became known Friday.

Developments revealed that the Solicitor, through his personal investigation and that of his "greatest detective," has discovered a number of persons whose names have not been connected with the mystery in any way by the local detectives. From these persons the Solicitor has obtained much evidence which will be made public for the first time when Frank is put on trial for his life.

Detective Identified.

Mr. Dorsey for a time engaged the services of a well-known detective whose name he kept carefully a secret, but whose identity was disclosed Friday by The Georgian's Houston, Tex., correspondent as Frank Pond, who was connected with the Pinkerton forces for a number of years. Pond is now in Houston, where he was seen by the reporter.

It is understood Pond was shadowed by the Atlanta detectives all the ten days he was working on the case for the Solicitor. He is said to have registered at eight different hotels under as many different names. At the

CATCH THREE POLICEMEN IN 'TIGER'

Three policemen, Call Officers C. H. Bailey and R. A. Wood and Patrolman R. T. David were suspended by Chief of Police Beavers Friday afternoon on charges of visiting a negro blind tiger in the rear of 127 Auburn Avenue.

Ola Bradley and Helen Moody, negro women, will be tried in Police Court Friday afternoon on charges of running the blind tiger and furnishing liquor to the officers.

Chief Beavers intimated that sensations in police circles may develop during the trial of the two women, and it is rumored around headquarters that other policemen probably will be involved in the affair, and that other suspensions are likely.

The arrest of the two women and the suspension of Bailey, Wood and David followed an investigation conducted by Plain Clothes Officers Moon and Adams. For several weeks reports have been coming to Chief Beavers that the women were operating a blind tiger on Auburn Avenue, and lately that policemen were frequenting the place.

Moon and Adams were detailed to watch the place and gather evidence. They reported to Chief Beavers that on Thursday morning at 12:20 o'clock they saw the three officers enter the place, and saw the negro women pour out something in a glass and hand it to them. They did not, they said, see the officers drinking, as they stepped into the shadows after receiving the liquor.

Late Thursday afternoon Chief Beavers, with Captain Perry and Moon and Adams, raided the blind tiger and arrested the two women. They found on the premises four gallons of whisky and a lot of empty whisky and beer bottles. The whisky was confiscated and taken to police headquarters.

Train Kills Girl as She Falls Over Rails

DUBLIN, June 27.—Miss Sadie Brantley was run down and killed by a Wrightsville and Tennille passenger train to-day near Harrison.

Miss Brantley and some friends were sitting on the bank of the roadbed. Just before the train approached she jumped up and started down the track. After running a short distance she fell.

Court House Robbed; Police Station Near

COLUMBUS, GA. June 27.—Under brilliant arc lights, just across the street from police headquarters, offices in the Muscogee County court house were robbed of about $200.

The burglary took place between midnight and dawn. The office of the city clerk, which is in the building, and also that of the County Tax Collector, were rifled.

Wilson in White, Another Precedent

WASHINGTON, June 27.—President Wilson has been appearing in summer dress these hot days. He wears a suit of white duck and shoes of white canvas.

This is another case of Mr. Wilson's seizing an opportunity to establish a precedent that Colonel Roosevelt neglected during his residence in the White House.

Miss Wilson Dances At Social Club Ball

MADISON, WIS., June 27.—Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of the President, sang several songs at a social center club entertainment.

Later she danced with members of the club.

'Chemise Expose' Is Paris' Newest and Most Risque Dance

NEW YORK, June 27.—Take it from Miss Gail Keene, a passenger who arrived here to-day on the Mauretania, that the "chemise expose," a new dance which has just struck Paris, will bring people back to the fig-leaf days if it ever gets popular. The dance will be brought to New York and presented here unless the police interfere.

"I saw the dance in Paris," said Miss Keene, "and also the dancer—all of her."

"Is the gown slashed?" asked a reporter.

"Slashed!" exclaimed Miss Keene. "There isn't enough of it to slash. As for the dance, just add the tango to the bunny hug and the turkey trot, then multiply that by three and add a dash of tabasco."

Georgia Veterans Get U. S. Tents, and Apology by Fowler

WASHINGTON, June 27.—Representative Fowler of Illinois, who defeated the passage of the resolution authorizing the War Department to lend tents to the Confederate veterans for their reunion at Brunswick, Ga., apologized for his act Thursday afternoon, and the resolution was passed.

"I can not afford to offend the old soldiers of the country," said Mr. Fowler in explanation. "Therefore, I withdraw my objection and ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the resolution and urge its passage."

This was done amid applause.

Key's Grandson, Too Poor for Reunion Trip, Heartbroken

GETTYSBURG, PA., June 27.—John Francis Key, grandson of Francis Scott Key, author and composer of "The Star Spangled Banner," is in a State home for Confederate veterans at Pikesville, Md., almost broken-hearted because for some reason he has failed to obtain transportation to Gettysburg for the anniversary celebration and subsistence while here.

News of the plight of the aged veteran, who was engaged in the battle, was brought here by William Page and William F. Brawner, the only Confederates on the scene thus far.

Juarez Threatened By Attack of Rebels

EL PASO, TEX., June 27.—Scouts sent out by General Salazar, Federal commander in Juarez, reported to-day that Pancho Villa, with a horde of rebels and bandits, is about 50 miles southwest of Juarez, preparing to attack the town.

Villa declares that he will capture Juarez and execute Salazar in the bull ring. Many residents of Juarez have fled to this city.

WAR BEGUN ON CHILD LABOR

A fight to abolish child labor in Georgia was inaugurated in the Assembly Friday morning. Three bills, designed to remedy present conditions, were introduced in the upper branch by President of the Senate Randolph Anderson and Senator Fred Kea. In the House, a measure aimed at reform child labor was introduced by Representative Sheppard.

Senator Kea announced that the two bills of which he is author, which compel factories to furnish information regarding labor conditions to the Department of Commerce and Labor, and compel factories to provide seats for women employees, were suggested by H. M. Stanley, head of the Georgia Department of Commerce and Labor, and have the backing of the unions. They embody recommendations made in a report submitted to the unions by an investigating committee several months ago, it is said.

Senator Anderson's bill goes into detail regarding the ages at which a child can work in a factory. It contains the following provisions:

Features of Anderson Bill.

After 1913 no child under 12 years of age shall be employed in a factory or other industrial institution.

After 1914 no child under 13 years of age shall be employed.

After 1915 no child under 14 years of age shall be employed.

Senator Anderson's bill provides also for the repeal of section 3146 of the Code of 1910, which provides that no child under the age of 14 shall be employed, unless the child can read and write. He offers as a substitute the provision that no child between the ages of 14 and 16 shall be employed unless the child can read ordinary English and write ordinary English sentences. If there is doubt of the child's ability to read or write, the matter shall be referred to an agent of the Department of Commerce and Labor for a decision.

Factory Conditions Hit.

Senator Kea's bills are directed more at reforming factory conditions and taking care of women workers. One of his bills requires the owners of a factory to give to the Department of Commerce and Labor information regarding labor conditions, hours of labor, earnings of the laborers, the character and amount of labor employed, and all other information that might be requested by the Department of Commerce and Labor.

His other bill makes it incumbent upon factory owners to provide suitable seats for all women employees, and permit their use when the employees are not actively engaged in the work of the plant.

The labor bills attracted considerable attention among the members of the Senate. Senator Anderson and Senator Kea are confident that they will pass without opposition.

Similar Bill in House.

A child labor bill was introduced in the House Friday morning by Representative Sheppard of Sumter County. It provides a scale of ages under which a child may not be employed, this limit being placed at 12 years in 1913, not under 13 years in 1914, and not under 14 years in 1915.

One section of the bill states that no child over 14 years of age and under 16 who cannot read will be permitted to be employed in any factory, mill or workshop. A penalty is provided by making the offense a misdemeanor.

A compulsory education bill was introduced by Representative Fulbright of Burke County, requiring all children under 14 years of age to attend schools at least 60 days during the year.

BAR GRAVEYARD FOR DOGS.

RIDGEFIELD, PA., June 27.—The plan to establish a burying ground for dogs in the residence section here was quickly abandoned when citizens voiced their objection.

Policeman Thrown By Horse; Badly Injured in Fall

Mounted Policeman J. A. Hollis was seriously injured Friday morning by a fractious horse which threw him into the gutter and fell on him. Hollis' back was severely sprained and he suffered internal injuries.

The police department has been buying new horses lately for the use of its mounted policemen. One was brought to the station Friday morning at 8 o'clock to be tried out Hollis was instructed to ride the horse about the city and determine its fitness.

When on Ellis Street, near Valentine, the horse became ugly and began to buck, finally succeeding in throwing Hollis off, but losing its own footing in so doing. Several spectators ran up and a call was sent in to police headquarters and to the Grady Hospital when Hollis lay inert on the pavement.

Captain Poole and other officers from the police station rushed to the scene in Chief Beavers' automobile and Hollis was taken to the hospital.

90 at Noon; Not Bad for Atlanta, Forecaster Says

Atlanta sweltered again Friday, when exactly 90 degrees was the mark of the mercury in the official weather bureau thermometer at noon. Low humidity, only 50 per cent, served to make the heat considerably less oppressive.

"This is not bad weather at all for Atlanta," said Forecaster C. F. Von Herrmann. "Atlanta is in the South and this is the month of June."

Having viewed all the maps provided by the Federal Weather Department, Mr. VonHerrmann said the temperature probably would remain stationary several days, beginning with 73, or thereabouts, every morning and ascending to 90 or 92 between 2 and 3 o'clock every afternoon.

Mrs. 'Bud' Fisher Recovers; to Go to New York Sunday

Mrs. "Bud" Fisher, wife of the creator of Mutt and Jeff, known on the stage as Pauline Welch, who was the victim of an unusual accident at the Piedmont Hotel, has recuperated sufficiently to undertake the trip to New York. Mr. Fisher said Friday they would leave Atlanta at 11 o'clock Sunday morning.

Mrs. Fisher has regained most of her strength, and the long gash in her throat has practically healed. It will be necessary for her to undergo a three-month treatment to obviate all danger of a scar.

Mr. and Mrs. Fisher have canceled all their vaudeville arrangements for the summer.

McReynolds Has 11 On Trail of Speer

MACON, June 27.—There now are eleven agents of the Department of Justice engaged in investigating the official record of Judge Emory Speer in the territory of the United States Court for the Southern District of Georgia. They are headed by D. J. Bailey, chief examiner for the Southern States, and R. Colton Lewis, special examiner for the Department of Justice.

A majority of the agents are in Savannah. It is understood they will go to Augusta next.

U. S. Tries to Halt Escape of Pugilist

CHICAGO, June 27.—Quick action was taken by Federal authorities in Chicago when they learned that Jack Johnson, negro pugilist and convicted trafficker in white women, was planning to leave Montreal, Canada, for Russia. Red tape was discarded and Charles F. Dewoody, special agent of the Department of Justice, prepared to leave for Montreal.

Telegrams were sent to the Montreal authorities and the Canadian Government officials.

TRUE BILLS CHARGE LIBEL

Three indictments charging criminal libel were returned Friday by the Grand Jury against Colonel Thomas B. Felder, the Atlanta attorney, and Newport Lanford, Chief of Detectives, who accused each other of most everything in the category after the famous dictograph episode. There are two bills against Felder and one against Lanford.

The two men will be placed under bond and will be tried in the Fulton County courts under the misdemeanor act for unlawfully and maliciously accusing each other, according to the true bills.

The penalty for conviction of a misdemeanor is six months in the county jail, twelve months in the penitentiary, a fine not exceeding $1,000; either or all three.

Colonel Felder appeared at the Solicitor's office about 2 o'clock and furnished the $500 bond required. Chief Lanford had not been located at that time, but was expected to do likewise.

The accusation against both men is based on recriminations issued against each other and published in the Sunday newspapers of May 25 and June 8.

In those statements Colonel Felder attacked Lanford bitterly, hurling a line of invectives that the greatest of the Roman orators might have envied. He attacked Lanford's private and public character, accusing him of "hideous crimes."

Lanford in Full Denial.

Chief Lanford replied in kind, denouncing Colonel Felder as a "contemptible liar, scoundrel and coward." He denied absolutely any wrong-doing.

To establish the fact that the statements published had actually been made by Felder and Lanford, the Grand Jury summoned Sidney Ormond, city editor of The Constitution, and M. D. Clofine, city editor of Hearst's Sunday American. Both men testified that there could be no question that Felder and Lanford issued the statements in question.

The new turn in the dictograph fight was entirely unexpected and promises stirring developments. If the charges are upheld and the two men formally accused, the real fight will come at the trial, when it will be up to both Lanford and Felder to prove the charges they made against each other.

Real Revelations Promised.

That will bare the real inside of the dictograph trap and other things that have been rumored in the last few weeks, and some real explosions are anticipated.

Subpenas also have been issued out of the Solicitor General's office for other witnesses who engaged in the controversy at a time when charges and countercharges were flying thick and fast. It is the announced intention of the Grand Jury to probe carefully and thoroughly into Colonel Felder's charges of alleged crookedness in the detective department.

It is rumored in the lobbies of the courthouse that the investigation of the Felder charge will in time develop into another and more searching inquiry into the vice situation in Atlanta. Colonel Felder's charges have been based on the alleged protection of resorts by Chief Lanford and his detectives, which have been as vigorously denied.

Poincare Off for France 'Mid Cheers

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 27.—A farewell as cordial as his reception was given to President Raymond Poincare of France, to-day, when he brought his visit to a close and left Dover for Paris. Enormous crowds cheered the French Executive as he was driven to the station, under escort of a squadron of household troops.

M. Poincare evidently was highly gratified at the result of his trip.

Woman Charged With Slapping Policeman

Mrs. Mary C. Brown, who says her home is in Kennesaw, Ga., will be tried before Judge Broyles Friday afternoon, charged with being drunk and raising a disturbance at Five Points Thursday.

The woman was arrested by Plainclothes Officers Pittman and Holley, and when they took her to the call box she slapped Pittman in the face. The officer, it is reported, returned the slap with interest.

Mrs. W. H. Burwell Is an Able Campaign Helper and Also a Trusted Lieutenant.

Mrs. Lyra Reid Burwell, wife of Speaker William H. Burwell of the Georgia House of Representatives, knows more about her husband's campaign than anybody else, unless the Speaker himself.

Mrs. Burwell has taken a deep interest in her husband's long and successful political career. She has been, in a way, the Speaker's most intimate help, and the most delicate problems frequently have been submitted to her for an opinion before passed on. In many instances her advice has prevailed over the judgment of her husband and his most trusted advisers.

In the campaign for the Speakership, Mrs. Burwell kept close tab on all correspondence touching the race, and knew, long before the roll was called, just exactly how this, that, and the other member might be expected to vote.

Mrs. Burwell, before her marriage, was Miss Reid, of Hancock County.

The charming little Miss with Mrs. Burwell in the picture is Lyra Reid Burwell, the only child of the Speaker and his wife.

The home of the Burwells is sure to be the center of much social activity during the session of the House now on.

Mississippi Prison Board Head Indicted

JACKSON, MISS., June 27.—An indictment has been returned against C. C. Smith, president of the board of trustees of the State Penitentiary Department, charging irregularities, and specifying the purchase of an automobile for $400 and its subsequent sale to the State for $960.

Governor Brewer still is active in probing the affairs of the penitentiary department.

WAR OPENED TO ABOLISH DEATH CROSSINGS

Cheney Heads Movement in Legislature—Plans to Have Towns and Counties Pay Part.

An aggressive movement to abolish railroad grade crossings in Georgia has been inaugurated in the present Legislature.

It will be backed vigorously by a number of the strong men of the House, headed by Representative John P. Cheney, of Cobb, a legislator of force and large experience.

Mr. Cheney, said to be slated for the chairmanship of the Western and Atlantic Railroad Committee, is perhaps the best posted man in the House on matters pertaining to railroads, and the fact that he is to father the movement for the abolition of grade crossings has been accepted by the House membership as meaning that the movement has a good chance of being carried to a successful conclusion.

The gentleman from Cobb will endeavor to divide the cost of providing underpasses and overpasses, where they may be deemed necessary, equitably and fairly between the roads and the counties or municipalities wherein the dangerous crossings are located, and it will be the purpose of the measure to inaugurate the constructive work gradually and within the bounds of reason, in so far as the cost of the same is concerned.

It is realized that the matter of putting in underpasses and overpasses likely will prove to be very expensive, but Representative Cheney thinks it will be a paying proposition, not only in the saving of human lives, but in the saving of real money, for both parties to the work.

It will be left to the Railroad Commission to designate such crossings as are rated dangerous, and for it to say further upon what terms the dangerous situations shall be remedied.

Mr. Cheney believes that the railroads, when they understand the full import of his proposed measure, not only will not fight it, but may be depended upon to co-operate in its enactment. And, whether that is so or not, the gentleman from Cobb expresses himself as determined to push the matter to a conclusion before the present Legislature.

Neither the House nor the Senate is expecting to do anything more than "mark time" from now until Monday.

Governor Brown's final communications are all in, and every executive appointment requiring the confirmation of the Senate has been attended to.

To-day the retiring Governor is busy winding up various details of his administration, none of which are important. By Friday night he will have closed his work and will be ready for the inauguration of his successor.

Wide Range of Bills Introduced Into Senate.

The following bills were introduced in the Senate Friday morning:

By Hine, of the Thirty-fifth—To provide that notice by the carrier shall be given to consignors of freight before undelivered goods may be sold; to enlarge the duties of the Railroad Commission; to authorize the chairman as well as the secretary of the Railroad Commission to certify copies of reports, etc.

Bill Provides for Registration Lists.

Establishment of a permanent registration list is the intent of a bill introduced into the House Friday morning by Representative Wright, of Floyd, and Representative Cole, of Bartow County.

The bill requires tax collectors to keep the books in their offices, where the qualified electors may be registered in alphabetical order. The bill was referred to General Judiciary Committee number one.

Representative Clarke, of Dougherty County, introduced a bill defining the qualifications of an elector, one of them being that the elector must be one who can be "trusted by a virtuous woman, without fear of criminal assault, in any and all secluded places, even when not protected." The Board of Registrars will be the judge of this qualification.

Several other bills proposing minor changes in the registration laws were introduced.

President Appoints Blalock Collector of Georgia Revenue

WASHINGTON, June 27.—The President to-day sent to the Senate the nomination of Aaron O. Blalock, of Fayetteville, Ga., to be Collector of Internal Revenue for the District of Georgia.

Mackay Goes Abroad And Suit Is Hinted

NEW YORK, June 27.—Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay hurried to town this afternoon from her country home at Roslyn, L. I., to confer with her attorney, Henry W. Taft. Her sudden appearance upon the heels of the departure of her husband for Europe on Wednesday aboard the Imperator gave rise to a report that she contemplated some legal action.

At the office of Mr. Taft no word of Mrs. Mackay's visit was given out.

At the Mackay residence at Roslyn no information as to the plans of Mr. Mackay or his wife was ventured. Late Wednesday night Mrs. Mackay informed interviewers that no papers in any action started by Mr. Mackay had been served upon her.

'DRYS' PIN HOPE ON WEBB LAW EXTENSION

Effective Anti-Shipping Bill Is Probably Only Legislation They Will Urge This Session.

A fight for the further extension of prohibition in Georgia will be made in the present Legislature, and it will center around a bill proposed by Senator Hixon, of the Thirty-seventh District, in the Senate, and Representatives Fullbright, of Burke, and Evans, of Screven, in the House.

This bill will seek to extend the State laws to dovetail them into the Webb law. It is understood the Georgia Anti-Saloon League will pin its entire hopes to this law to the exclusion of all other proposed legislation.

Senator J. T. Hixon, author of the temperance bill introduced in the Senate Thursday, declared that in his opinion the reports of an alleged liquor lobby, formed to fight his bill, have been exaggerated to a certain extent.

"I have no definite knowledge," he said, "that such a lobby exists, and I doubt very much if the lobby is formed. Scattering reports have come to our ears that the liquor men have established headquarters at a hotel, but these reports have not been confirmed.

Doesn't Expect Fight.

"In fact, I do not think the liquor men will work against the bill I introduced yesterday. The bill is more or less a matter of form, and is designed merely to put into force the Webb bill passed by Congress.

"Of course, if it should develop later that a liquor lobby has been formed to influence legislation by illegal means, the Legislature should certainly take some action with a view to halting their operations."

Georgia prohibitionists are said to be lukewarm regarding another "Tippins bill," as they believe the State now has all the restrictive prohibition law it needs.

The Federal statute prohibits, without penalty the shipment of intoxicating liquors into "dry" States. A defendant indicted in a State court for shipping intoxicants into "dry" States can not plead the benefit or protection of the Federal interstate commerce laws, as that is specifically denied him in the Webb act.

Legislative Attitude In Doubt.

The temper of the new Legislature with respect to this proposed readjustment of the prohibition situation in Georgia yet is very uncertain.

The last Legislature enacted a further restrictive prohibition law, only to sustain subsequently an executive veto.

Curiously enough, the Georgia Anti-Saloon League appears to have won a point by securing from both candidates for the presidency of the Senate committals to the very measure now proposed.

Whether the liquor and beer interests will line up against the new measure is problematical.

Beer Interests Satisfied.

The beer interests are well satisfied with the present situation in Georgia, and if there be further prohibition legislation against the shipment of beers into Georgia, the local breweries may figure that that merely will help them from a financial standpoint.

It is contended by many that the breweries really are making more money in Georgia nowadays than they ever have made before, and that the more outsiders are hampered in selling within the State, the better off the breweries are.

If the liquor interests have made any effort to block further prohibition legislation in Georgia, not many legislators seem to have heard of it. It is understood, however, that they will fight the Webb bill in the Federal courts.

SAILOR'S HEIRESS BRIDE BEGS HE BE RELEASED

MRS. A. HARRINGTON WILSON.

Mrs. A. Harrington Wilson Would Carry Plea for Bluejacket's Discharge to Daniels.

Mrs. A. Harrington Wilson, who was Miss Colleen Curry, a wealthy heiress of Key West, Fla., who recently married A. Harrington Wilson, a bluejacket in the United States Navy with sixteen months yet to serve, will appeal to Uncle Sam, through her cousin, ex-Senator Harris, of Florida, to grant an honorable discharge to her husband after two months' further service.

If this appeal is unavailing, Mrs. Wilson declared Friday that she would go in person before Secretary of the Navy Daniels, with whom she is acquainted, and there, summoning all of the power of her Southern grace and charm, would plead her case directly to him.

But she does not believe this course will be necessary. She is confident that the justice of her petition will be recognized by the Government and that her husband will obtain his discharge on the appeal made through ex-Senator Harris.

Wilson Tired of Navy.

Young Wilson entirely approves her efforts. His three years' career in the navy was all very interesting and romantic until the greater romance entered his life. Then an existence on stormy ocean palled and he decided for the quieter seas of matrimony.

Wilson met Miss Curry in the Dry Tortugas and there, where the tropical breezes blow the year around, he wooed and won her.

Just as their troth had been plighted and the happy day had been set for Friday, June 13, the mother back at her home in Key West learned of what was going on and sent a hurry-up wireless message for her daughter to come right home. Miss Curry went, but it was with little joy in her heart that she remained there with her sweetheart miles and miles separated from her.

She came to Atlanta to visit her former schoolmate, Mrs. Roscoe Walker, of 21 Cleburne Avenue. She wrote to Wilson, telling him that the disposal of her heart was her own affair and for him to come right on to Atlanta.

Married in Atlanta.

He obtained a ten days' furlough and came. They were married by the Rev. John Wing in the West End Episcopal Church Friday, the 13th. Three days later Wilson returned alone to the Dry Tortugas.

Upon the failure of an appeal to the Navy Department for an honorary discharge by Young Wilson, Mrs. Wilson took up the fight. If successful she will aid her husband, who is a graduate pharmacist, in establishing a drug store in this city. With this end in view, Mrs. Wilson is today looking for a house, where the young couple will begin the life for which they have braved her mother's displeasure.

PARDEE AGAINST PARKING AUTOS IN STREETS

Federal Judge Declares Steps Should Be Taken for Better Traffic Regulations.

Denouncing traffic conditions in Atlanta, Judge Don A. Pardee of the United States Court of Appeals Friday declared that some action at once should be taken to prevent the parking of automobiles and other vehicles in the public thoroughfares.

"The city should have an inspector to regulate traffic," declared the Judge; "an inspector who would do his duty and keep the streets from being lined from morning till night with conveyances which are practically stored in the main streets."

Negro Pugilist in Flight From U. S. Deported by Canada

OTTAWA, ONT., June 27.—The Canadian Government to-day issued an order for the deportation of Jack Johnson, who left Chicago yesterday while under sentence on a white slave charge, and who now is in Montreal, unless he has a through ticket for a European steamer.

The order provides that Johnson take passage at once on the boat or be sent back to Chicago.

Southern Diva Sees English Opera Soon

NEW YORK, June 27.—Madame Charlotte Nelson Brailey, prominent in Knoxville, Tenn., society and formerly with the Metropolitan Opera Company, defended opera in English to-day and predicted a future for it.

"You know the real difficulty; we are the people who are holding back opera in English. The American artists think that unless they sing in Italian, French or German they are not fully graduated in the school of grand opera. I believe that all these objections of enunciation, etc., is nonsense.

"Unless opera, be it grand opera or anything else, is 'foreign' it is not supposed to be smart. In the country, however, opera in English will soon be demanded and gain a foothold."

Boys Shave Heads To Foil School Order

NEW YORK, June 27.—There are 500 hairless boys in public school 92, and the barber shops near Broome and Ridge Streets have had a grand rush the last few days.

It started when Mrs. P. Liebling told the 39 youngsters in the 2-B grade last Tuesday that she expected each to have his hair combed and parted next morning. When the class was called yesterday there wasn't a hair visible on any head.

When the other boys in the school saw the distinction attained by the boys in grade 2-B they followed suit.

DORSEY GUARDS VITAL FRANK EVIDENCE

His Detective Found Facts, It Is Said, Local Sleuths Missed, Which He Will Present.

Coroner's inquest he sat by the Solicitor and no one present except Mr. Dorsey knew who he was.

Did Work Before Inquest.

Pond did most of his work before the inquest. Before coming to Atlanta he was in Asheville, N. C., on a private case. In connection with the case, he was obliged to come to this city, and while here met Solicitor Dorsey. The Solicitor obtained the consent of Pond's employer to the plan of having the detective work on the Phagan mystery for ten days or two weeks.

Pond, by a process of elimination, reached the decision that Frank was the only person who could have committed the crime, but this was before it had been discovered that Conley was in the factory and drunk at the time of the crime.

One of the witnesses who will be called by the Solicitor, of whose testimony the detectives evidently have had no knowledge, is Mrs. May Barrett. The Solicitor is believed to regard her statements as of great importance.

Daughter Says She Knows.

Mrs. Barrett is the woman who several weeks ago came, screaming, from the offices of the Solicitor and crying that someone had been telling lies about her.

Mrs. Barrett's daughter, Mrs. George Bailey, had told the officials that her mother knew more about the mystery than she had disclosed. This led to the questioning and the woman's hysterics. She was brought to the office on another day and this time she emerged from the office of the Solicitor quietly, and the impression was that she told the Solicitor all she knew of the case. She has been called to his office several times since and questioned.

Mrs. Barrett's name was mentioned in a puzzling manner in the testimony of Miss Corinthia Hall at the Coroner's inquest.

Miss Hall was asked if she had not seen Mrs. Barrett on the fourth floor on the day of the crime and if later, in telling of the incident to A. P. Hayes, she had not said that Mrs. Barrett had some sacks in her hand and was confused when she was asked what she was doing with them.

What the purpose was in this line of interrogation never has been explained.

The conversation with Mrs. Barrett must have occurred before Mary Phagan entered the factory, and what bearing the incident could have had on the strangling remains a mystery to the public, although the Solicitor may have the secret in his possession.

WRIT TO HALT GARBAGE DUMPING THREATENED; HEALTH PROBLEM GROWS

Notification that an injunction suit against the Milton Avenue refuse center would be filed against the city caused Sanitary Chief John Jentzen to declare Friday that such a course would paralyze his department. He said the city had run its course in securing places, and action on the part of citizens to stop them would mean the creation of a serious health problem.

This development and the declaration of the attorneys for the Destructor Company that, while the incinerator would be ready for use within ten days, they would not turn it over to the city until they had assurance of getting their money, has alarmed city officials. A special meeting of the Board of Health immediately was called for 5 o'clock Friday afternoon. Dr. W. L. Gilbert, ex-president of the board, said:

"I will introduce a resolution calling on Mayor Woodward to stop his stalling and settle this controversy. I hope he'll be present. We are going to show the people where the blame lies."

Crisis Admits of No Delay.

While Council practically is unanimous on a contract, the action of Alderman Harwell in moving a reconsideration and the opposition of the Mayor will delay final action for a month. That means that during the coming month of the hottest season of the year and when there is most garbage, the crematory cannot be put into use.

It seems that further efforts at a compromise are useless, but the arousal of private citizens to a determination to enjoin dumping garbage as a nuisance brings before the officials a situation that will admit no delay. They all agree that the new crematory must be put into operation at the earliest possible moment.

Attorney Thomas Goodwin, representing Robert Shivers and others, said Friday he would immediately file an injunction against the city for dumping garbage at Milton Avenue and the Belt Line Railroad. He said he would go before the Board of Health and explain his intention.

Denounces Foul Odors.

"The foul odors from that disease-breeding pit threaten to drive my clients from their homes," said Mr. Goodwin.

To the Milton Avenue dump pile, sixteen mule carts and four automobile trucks haul; to Forrest Avenue, 38 mule carts; to the Jackson and Ninth Street, eleven mule carts; to Bellwood Avenue, 29 mule carts; to Garibaldi Street, in Pittsburg, eighteen mule carts; to Fair Street and Smallpox Hospital, nine mule carts; to Greensferry Ave. and Ashby Street, ten mule carts, and to Fair Street, beyond Ashby Street, fourteen mule carts.

These are the principal places. Homes are within several hundred feet of each. Since the intense hot weather began city officials have been flooded with protests from citizens. All are on the verge of filing suits.

Attorney Scores Mayor.

George Spence, one of the attorneys for the Destructor Company, said that Mayor Woodward might as well have turned the whole contract over to the Georgia Railway and Power Company as to offer to sign a new contract drawn by three of six attorneys he named. The attorneys all represent the power company, according to Mr. Spence.

Mayor Woodward asserted the crematory matter had been talked to death, but that all the talking would not convert him to the wishes of the Destructor Company. He said he was willing to pay $260,000 for the plant, although that was too much; but that he would sign no contract until one was drawn formally and legally.

"They can settle this matter in half an hour when they are ready to come to that," he said.

TAX REVISION IS URGED TO PAY TEACHERS

Men to Head Committees in the House and Senate Favor It. All See Need of Action.

With sentiment in Senate and House virtually unanimous that some system must be devised to provide for the prompt payment of the country school teachers, the State's most neglected employees, indications are that the matter will receive early consideration.

The relief of the teachers, lobby gossip has it, will not come in any way but by tax revision, and it is generally understood legislators who are foremost in urging that the teachers be paid are bending their energies to obtain an early consideration of the tax revision measure.

The brunt of the work of shaping measures to revise the tax system, and incidentally to pay the teachers, falls upon the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee and the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

It is said that the men slated for these positions, Representative L. R. Akin and Senator B. S. Miller, heartily favor some arrangement whereby the teachers can be paid, and are willing to increase the tax rate to get the money.

Representative Akin is a consistent advocate of a plan to pay the teachers each year upon the completion of their work instead of forcing them to wait six and eight months. He declares the depleted treasury, which makes it impossible to handle the State's financial affairs, is a direct result of Georgia's unsatisfactory tax system.

Though sentiment is in favor of a plan to pay the teachers, Representatives and Senators differ on the method. Three plans have been advanced. They will be threshed out and the best parts of each embodied in a bill.

Many members think the necessary procedure is to revise the tax system far enough to force property owners to make a fair return of their property; others are willing that the tax rate should be increased temporarily until the arrears of the teachers have been paid, and others maintain that relief will better come by cutting down appropriations and putting the teachers ahead of the other employees of the State.

USE 'FOLLOW-UP SYSTEM;' WIN PRIZE PONY

Georgian and American Convert Many Short-Term Subscribers—Go After 'Em.

Accidentally, the contest manager has discovered that many of the contestants are overlooking an excellent opportunity in their race for The Georgian and American ponies.

Here is how it happened: A man dropped into the office and put down the money for a six months's subscription.

"One of the little girls out in my neighborhood is trying to win one of the ponies," he remarked. "I took The Georgian and American a month just to please her. The month is up, and I like the papers so well that I want to take them all the time."

The contest manager was told about the case as giving evidence of the good the contest is doing in gaining friends for the papers. He at once saw a different angle of the incident.

Many Friends of Papers.

"Now there's lots of good votes which contestants might have earned," he remarked. "I believe many of the contestants are overlooking just such chances. Every one of the boys and girls ought to look over the list of short-term subscriptions secured and make a conscientious record of expiration dates. Just before the terms expire, the contestant should see these subscribers again. Ten to one they will have become friends of the papers, and will be anxious to renew for a longer period.

"System wins every time, and this is one of the best systems I know of our getting votes."

Business men have what they call a "follow-up" plan. No customer and no prospective customer is allowed to forget that the business man is anxious to have his patronage. At regular intervals, he is seen by a salesman, or approached through a letter.

Contestants can do no better than follow the plan adopted by most successful business men of to-day.

Overlook no opportunity—check up all the short-term subscribers, and get after them for renewals.

FACTORY HEADS TO HAVE 250 AT BIG BANQUET

Plans for Permanent Exhibit of Atlanta-Made Goods Will Be Discussed From All Angles.

Atlanta will have a permanent manufacturers' exhibit of Atlanta-made goods, located in a permanent home, if plans of a special committee of the Chamber of Commerce are accepted at a banquet to manufacturers at the Hotel Ansley Thursday evening. The committee comprises Brooks Morgan, chairman; J. K. Orr, Bolling H. Jones, M. M. Davies and J. T. Rose.

Every manufacturer in Atlanta has been invited to attend the banquet. The plan for a permanent home will be presented to the assembly and a permanent organization of the manufacturers perfected.

Walter G. Cooper, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, said Friday he expected to see more than 100 manufacturers join the association Thursday night. The remaining 400 will fall in line within the next few months, Mr. Cooper believes.

Heretofore Atlanta manufacturers have been contented with an annual exhibit.

The banquet will be an elaborate affair. More than 250 guests are expected to attend upon invitations sent out by the Chamber of Commerce. The occasion will be informal and arrangements "will be made whereby guests can assemble in congenial groups of six or eight at tables. Evening dress, according to the terms of the letter of invitation, will be entirely out of order.

$9,000 BATEMAN SWINDLE CASE ON TRIAL

Felder Faces Lanford First Time Since Dictograph Row When Detective Testifies.

Chief of Dectives Newport Lanford and Colonel Thomas B. Felder met Friday morning for the first time since their row in the Grand Jury witness room a few weeks. Chief Lanford was a witness for Judge J. N. Bateman, tried on a charge of larceny after trust in connection with an alleged pool room swindle. Colonel Felder cross-examined him as the attorney for Frank Rothleutner, the prosecutor.

The case came to trial before Superior Judge L. S. Roan Thursday afternoon. The session was taken up with a narrative by Rothleutner, an Austrian, who unfolded a story of a $9,000 swindle in which he said H. H. Brown, J. H. Blake and J. N. Bateman were principals. Brown and Blake have not been arrested.

Won $56,000 on Horses.

Rothleutner said he met Brown at Miami, Fla., in February, and after forming his acquaintance was introduced to Blake, who said he had won fabulous sums at the Miami pool room. He said that finally he went to the place with them, where he met Judge Bateman, who was called the "commissioner," and seemed to be in authority.

Rothleutner said that after making several small bets and winning, he listened to the entreaties of Blake and Brown and made a bet of $10,000, for which he put up his personal check. The horse won, he said, but the "commissioner" would not pay him until he proved that his check was good.

After a futile effort to get the banks at Kilgore, Neb., to honor his draft for this amount, he said, he telegraphed his son to round up $10,000 worth of cattle and send him the money. After about ten days' delay he received from his son $9,000, all the cattle had sold for. Blake and Brown went with him to Jacksonville to get the draft cashed, he said, and Judge Bateman went with them as far as St. Augustine.

"Branch" in Atlanta.

Rothleutner said that when he got the money Brown and Blake told him to come on to the branch of the "syndicate" at Atlanta, where he could get his winnings without any trouble. He said that he was taken by them to 171½ Whitehall Street, where they went into a room on the third floor that had much the same appearance of the room in Miami.

He said that while the cashier was telegraphing Miami to find out whether to pay the $56,000 they had won, Brown and Blake persuaded him to bet his $9,000, which he did.

Rothleutner claims that the place in Atlanta was operated by Judge Bateman, and was a fake pool room. He said the telegraph wires ended in another room and that the promoters had any horse they wished to cross under the wire first.

MEN WELCOME MOTHER'S FRIEND

A Duty That Every Man Owes to Those Who Perpetuate the Race.

It is just as important that men should know of progressive methods in advance of motherhood. The suffering, pain and distress incident to child-bearing can be easily avoided by having at hand a bottle of Mother's Friend.

This is a wonderful penetrating, external application that relieves all tension upon the muscles and enables them to expand without the painful strain upon the ligaments. Thus there is avoided all those nervous spells; the tendency to nausea or morning sickness is counteracted, and a bright, sunny, happy disposition is preserved that reflects wonderfully upon the character and temperament of the little one soon to open its eyes in bewilderment at the joy of his arrival. You can obtain a bottle of "Mother's Friend" at any drug store at $1.00, and it will be the best dollar's worth you ever obtained. It preserves the mother's health, enables her to make a quick and complete recovery, and thus renewed strength she will eagerly devote herself to the care and attention which mean so much to the welfare of the child. Write to the Bradfield Regulator Co., 129 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their valuable and instructive book of guidance for expectant mothers. Get a bottle of Mother's Friend to-day.

LITTLE STORIES of the TOWN

An Automobile Afterthought.

A group at the Georgian Terrace were talking motors and motoring, and one of the party was telling his exploits; how on a certain ride of a summer's night he found himself with enough gas to get home, but not sufficient to take him over a short, stiff hill that barred the way. They got half-way up, but no farther, because the gas in the tank was too low, and there they stayed until one of the party walked a mile to the nearest telephone and called for help. They waited and waited for the welcome sound of a car coming, but there was no sign.

After an hour or more had passed a sorry one-horse hack ambled up and its driver inquired:

"Be you the parties what wants this gazzerleen?" They were, and he handed out the five-gallon can. "Frank didn't have nobody to send, so he asked me," the driver explained.

"Well, that was certainly some funny experience," the narrator concluded. "What do you think of it, old man?" he concluded, turning to me. "What would you have done in the same circumstances?"

"Turned right around and backed up, of course."

A Season Ticket Was His Wish.

At a certain college not a thousand miles from Atlanta the male students were not permitted to visit the resident lady boarders. One day a male student was caught in the act of doing so and was court-martialed.

The head master, addressing him, said: "Well, Mr. Blank, the penalty for the first offense is 50 cents, for the second, $2.50; for the third, $5, and so on, up to $15."

In solemn tones the trespasser said: "How much would a season ticket cost?"

Perfectly Willing To Be the Fall Guy.

There was not even standing room in the crowded car, but one more passenger, a young woman, wedged her way along just inside the doorway. Each time the car took a sudden lurch forward she fell helplessly back, and three times landed in the arms of a large, comfortable man. The third time it happened he said, quietly:

"Hadn't you better stay here?"

The Madero brothers are entirely out of Mexican politics.

REFORMATORY FOR GIRLS SEEMS SURE

Senate President and Others Indorse Measure for Home for Wayward in Georgia.

President Randolph Anderson of the Senate has announced that he will support a measure for the establishment of an industrial home for wayward girls in Georgia. Leading members of both the House and Senate have pledged support.

The measure has ben indorsed by Superior Court judges and by practically all of the women's clubs and social welfare organizations throughout Georgia.

Even as the law now stands, it is contemplated that Georgia should have some place for the detention and care of wayward girls. The State Reformatory at Milledgeville was instituted with the idea of caring for boys and girls, but the lack of necessary facilities and money for that institution and other circumstances have made it impossible for that institution to be used as anything but a boys' reformatory.

The need of a similar institution for girls is recognized, and it is believed will receive no opposition.

Mr. Anderson said:

"The growth of the towns of Georgia has forced this problem upon our attention. It is one of those measures of prevention which we must institute, and that right early."

Scandal in Peerage Hinted in Will Suit

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 27.—Testimony touching domestic affairs of Lord and Lady Sackville was given to-day in the suit brought in an effort to break the will of the late Sir John Murray Scott, because he left Lady Sackville $5,000,000. Undue influence was alleged by relatives of Sir John.

Private letters were introduced showing that Lady Sackville invited the warmest affection from Sir John. One ended: "Won't you please call me your little rascal?"

Colonel Has His Eye On Jungles of Brazil

NEW YORK, June 27.—Another tropical jungle trip, with probably big game hunting as an incident, may be indulged in by former President Roosevelt in course of his visit to South America.

While in South America, it is stated in The Outlook, he will visit Brazil and Chili, and "possibly will take the occasion to make a trip into the tropical interior of the continent."

RIDING BREECHES BARRED BY KING

George Joins Queen in Fight on Females Riding Astride—Expert Agrees With Royalty.

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, June 27.—King George to-day joined Queen Mary in her ban on women riding astride by issuing another royal decree that no woman rider shall wear breeches in the presence of the King or Queen. These "commands" have aroused a great deal of discussion among equestriennes.

Lady Greenall, wife of Sir Gilbert Greenall, one of the promoters of the International Horse Show, took the side of the King and Queen Mary.

"It is certainly a more pleasing sight to see a woman rider in the traditional side-saddle and dressed in feminine garb than to see her tearing along wearing man's clothing and seated in a man's saddle. Experience has taught that the side-saddle is the real saddle for women," said she.

Others, however, took an entirely opposite view.

U. S. Still Leads In Meat Exporting

WASHINGTON, June 27.—The total value of meats and food animals entering international trade, according to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce, is approximately $450,000,000 per annum, of which about one-third is from the United States, and consists chiefly of pork and pork products.

While the total value of meat products and food animals exported from the United States in the year which ends with this month will be only about $150,000,000, against approximately $250,000,000 in 1906, this reduced total far exceeds that of any other country.

MIXED MEDICAL BOARD PLAN IS DENOUNCED

"Irregulars" Claim "Regulars" Might Tyrannize Profession if Proposed Bill Becomes Law.

A bill to be fought out in the Legislature creating a composite board of medical examiners for the State of Georgia, framed by the American Medical Association, has brought a storm of protests from a large number of physicians not only in Atlanta, but throughout the State.

The bill provides for a board of eight members, composed of "eight practicing physicians of integrity and ability, who shall be residents of, and have ben duly licensed to practice medicine in this State, and who shall have graduated from reputable medical schools and have been engaged in the active practice of their profession within this State for at least a period of five years, but none of them shall be connected in any way with any medical college."

Five members of this board shall be "regular" physicians, two shall be eclectic physicians and one shall be a homeopathic physician, all to be appointed by the Governor.

And here comes one of the greatest issues: Five out of the eight members are to be "regular" or allopathic physicians, two eclectic and one homeopathic. It is the contention of the physicians outside the ranks of the "regulars" that if the examiners saw fit—and they might—only allopaths would be permitted to practice medicine in Georgia. The two eclectics and one homeopath constitute a small minority of the board as provided in the bill.

"Regulars" Might Get Jobs.

A president, vice president and secretary-treasurer are to be selected by the board, and salaries shall be paid out of the funds of the board. The supposition is that these officers will be selected from the ranks of the "regulars," as they have the majority. These funds are provided further on in the bill.

Applicants must pass examinations as prescribed by the board and must be graduates of colleges recognized by the board. The board also has the right to revoke the license of any physician at any time, for causes as adopted by the board.

Each applicant must have his certificate recorded by the clerk in the county where he resides and practices his profession, the applicant to pay a fee for the same.

Under this act the board has the right to pass upon the good standing of any medical college. Only such medical colleges will be considered in good standing as possess a full and complete faculty for the teaching of medicine, surgery, obstetrics in all its branches, afford their students adequate clinical and hospital facilities, require attendance upon at least 80 per cent of each course of instruction, etc.

Section 8 provides for examinations and requirements by the board and a fee of $2 shall accompany the application, and a like amount shall be paid by the applicant for each separate subject upon which he may be required to be examined.

A fee of $20 is required of each applicant, which shall accompany the application. A fee of $50 shall be paid for issuing a license by reciprocity. No part of any fee is returnable under any circumstances.

May Revoke License.

The board may refuse to grant, or may revoke any license to practice medicine for a score or more reasons, one of which is advertising.

The penalty attached to violations of the act is a fine of from $500 to $1,000, or by a term of two to five years in the penitentiary, either or both.

"The claim of the 'regulars' that five of the eight members of the board shall be from their ranks is that the relative number engaged in the practice of medicine in the State is greater," said a prominent physician who opposes the passage of the bill.

"The board could, by a majority vote, refuse to grant a license to any but a 'regular,' or revoke the license of any practitioner who does not observe the 'ethics' of the profession."

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

Forsyth Bill Pleases.

The Forsyth is enjoying a wonderfully interesting week with its headliners and features that have been keeping the theater busy since Monday afternoon. The feature acts are classed with the best that are seen along Broadway, and the headliners are the same that top bills in every principal theater devoted to this class of entertainment in the country.

The Vanderbilt and George Ideal, the swimmier, and the Six Musical Cuttys would make the show of value if there were not four other numbers, each of which has won its.

The bill next week will be Eo Abeles in a comedy sketch called "He Has to Be Nice."

Talking Pictures Coming.

"Quo Vadis" has nearly completed its engagement at the Grand. The wonderful picture has been witnessed by thousands of people since its opening a week ago last Monday, and there is every indication now that the attendance record of the first week will be eclipsed.

Commencing with Monday matinee, and continuing all the week, the first presentation of Thomas A. Edison's talking pictures will be given in Atlanta at the Grand. It will be recalled that this wonderful accomplishment of the electrical wizard created a sensation in New York, and that these pictures have been shown in numbers of theaters, but this is the first opportunity that the Grand management has had to secure a set of the machinery necessary to make the production.

"The Merry Whirl" at the Bijou.

"The Merry Whirl" will be offered at the several performances on Saturday and to-day, and, judging from the cordial reception that has been given the musical comedy during the week, the popular theater will be packed to its capacity the remainder of the engagement. Next week's attraction will be "A Trip to Paris."

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

The Kimball House lobby nowadays is a bewildering mass of placards announcing the various reasons why this, that and the other new county should be created by the present Legislature.

In all, there are a baker's dozen of new counties knocking at the door of the Legislature for admission, and at least two or three of them are being viewed with considerable favor.

The proposed new county of Candler, to be fashioned of slices of those three monster counties—Bulloch, Tattnall and Emanuel—was the first one to get before the Legislature for consideration. On the opening day a bill was introduced calling for a certificate of birth from the General Assembly for Candler.

This county seems likely to win out. It generally is looked upon as a sound proposition, and many legislators are outspoken in their advocacy of it.

The present Legislature is not hostile to the new county idea, when the idea is meritorious, and it generally is agreed that Candler is.

Indeed, the impression is that the sole test the General Assembly will put upon proposed new counties will be that of merit. If it is a good proposition, really and truly, it will stand a fine chance to go through; if it isn't, it will stand little, if any, chance.

That seems to be the beginning and the ending of the situation the new counties are up against.

It undoubtedly seems to be true that every new county created by the Legislatures in the past few years has very materially increased tax returns, and there is general satisfaction in every one of them.

It is not probable that all of the new county propositions will go through, but it seems likely that several of them may.

And, anyway, Candler, the first entry, looks like a pretty good bet.

The percentage of lawyers in the present House of Representatives is remarkably small.

There are only thirty-one attorneys in the House, which is hardly more than half the usual number.

Notwithstanding this fact, however, the percentage of city Legislators in the present House is considerably in excess of the rural membership.

All in all, the new Legislature impresses visitors to the Capitol from day to day as being well up to the average, if not of higher quality than usual.

President Anderson presided over the General Assembly in joint session for the first time Thursday.

The joint session, being on the job for the first time in its life, apparently didn't know how to behave.

It loafed along on its work in an embarrassed and hesitating sort of fashion for a few moments, twirling its thumbs, or words to that effect, until President Anderson finally arose and said: "Won't some Senator kindly introduce a resolution providing for tellers, so we can proceed with the count for Governor and State House officers?"

Judge Allen promptly arose to the demands of the occasion and offered the resolution, as the President had suggested, and after that everything was pretty enough!

Through inadvertence the inheritance tax bill offered on Wednesday by Mr. Swift, of Muscogee, was given out as having been offered by his colleague, Mr. Slade. The wrong name got on the bill somehow.

Mr. Slade is supporting his associate's bill, but has no desire to take credit for its composition, as credit for that belongs to Mr. Swift.

Mr. Swift is one of the younger members of the new House and has never been to the Legislature before. He already has made many frinds, however.

J. Walter Wise, of Fayetteville, who will be a candidate for Congress again next summer, has been mingling with his friends in Atlanta of late, and says he has been greatly encouraged in his ambitions to represent the Sixth District in the National House of Representatives.

The contest between Mr. Wise and Judge Bartlett last time was very close, and another race between them would be exceedingly spectacular. It has been rather persistently rumored, however, that Judge Bartlett will not seek re-election to the House, as he will have rounded out an even 20 years in Congress at the expiration of his present term.

Judge Bartlett has made no formal statement of his intention to retire, however, as Congressman Hardwick has, and it may be that he will run again. If he does not, it seem likely that Mr. Wise may receive the office without opposition.

"Uncle Billie" Wilson, of the last House of Representatives, is down from Gwinette, shaking hands with the "boys."

"Uncle Billie" is one of the generally popular veterans that spend a good deal of time in the Capital during legislative sessions, and there are few men within the State better posted on things than he. He is an optimist, and does not believe that things are headed for the demnition bowwows, and he never views with alarm. Pointing with pride is his long suit, and he gets away with it splendidly.

Judge Augustus W. Fite, of the Cherokee Circuit, fighter, friend of the people, foe of the Demon Rum, and so forth and so on, is in Atlanta.

Judge Fite may be persona non grata in some neighborhoods, but he always is the center of an admiring group in the Kimball lobby, and when he is talking, the audience most always is sitting up and taking notice. He is courageous, and doesn't in the least mind saying what he thinks about people and things, whether his hearers agree or no.

Just now, the judge is earnestly advocating reform in the way of railroad grade crossings in Georgia, and he thinks that something should and must be done along that line pretty soon.

He thinks the matter should be adjusted in fairness and equity to the roads as well as the people, however.

Your digestion cannot be at its best without good teeth.

PUBLIC COMFORT STATION BOOSTED

Leading Citizens Indorse Movement and Suggest Plans for Its Consummation.

The movement for a public comfort station in Atlanta has received impetus in the few days since it was launched, through indorsement by leading citizens.

The plan most favored is to place the station at some central point and equip it with blootblack stands, news stands, writing desks, telephones and similar conveniences, having sufficient attendants to maintain it in a sanitary manner. It is proposed to have it under the supervision of the police department.

L. C. Green, a member of the Chamber of Commerce, suggested Friday that the station be constructed south of the Peters Building, beneath the steps leading down to Wall Street, or that the Pryor Street underpass be used by closing the pass midway and using the north end for women and the south end for men, remodeling the underpass to meet the purpose.

"The money for this plan very easily could be raised by the City Council," said Mr. Green, "but if the city did not desire to engage in the project, I believe there are plenty of enterprising men with money who would build such a place and lease it from ten to twenty years to some reliable man who could have a soda fount, cigar stand, news stand, bootblack stand and other conveniences."

End of Harvester Trust Case in Sight

CHICAGO, June 27.—Final testimony in the Government's suit to dissolve the International Harvester Company as a trust was expected late to-day. The taking of evidence, with occasional short interruptions, has been in progress nearly a year. Several thousand typewritten pages of testimony have been taken.

The defense has completed the presentation of its evidence and the Government will call only one or two witnesses in rebuttal.

MISSING GIRL FOUND.

NEW YORK, June 27.—Helen McCarthy has been found, according to the police. The 16-year-old mysteriously disappeared Tuesday night.

Corbett Tells Best Temperance Lesson

NEW YORK, June 27.—"That was the best lesson on temperance I ever learned in my life," declared James J. Corbett, former champion prizefighter, addressing the Whitestone L. I. branch of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. He said, while a young man in San Francisco, he was employed in a bank as a clerk, and had been the protege of the vice president.

"This man's only fault was drinking," said Corbett, "and a few years later, when I was a prizefighter in New York, he came to my hotel, dressed in the shabbiest clothes, begging for money. Drink had broken him entirely."

Instinct Put Before Eugenics by Doctor

NEW YORK, June 27.—Commenting on the declaration of Dr. H. R. Morris at a medical convention in Chicago that a Federal eugenic law would result in a Spartan race, Dr. James W. Walsh, medical expert, said instinct was preferable to artificial regulations.

"The Spartans," he asserted, "were the best fighting machines the world ever had, but they have not left us a single intelligent idea. Athens, of the same size as Sparta, with the same race and climate, left the world an immense heritage of ideas without any of this eugenic nonsense."

Chicago Heat Toll Three; Cleveland, 7

CHICAGO, June 27.—Another hot day swooped down upon Chicago to-day. Slight promise of relief was held out by the weather forecaster, who said that thundershowers were due to-night.

Three deaths from heat occurred yesterday and several prostrations were reported early to-day.

CLEVELAND, June 27. — The deaths of seven babies occurred last night, due to the terrific heat.

PETITIONERS WANT HIGHLAND PAVED

Ask Improvements From Fort Street to Bridge Over the Belt Line.

Petitions are being circulated by property owners in Highland Avenue for the repaving of the thoroughfare from Fort Street to the bridge over the belt line of the Southern Railway.

This portion of Highland Avenue was paved with Belgian blocks about 20 years ago.

"If anyone can spend a night in Highland Avenue from Fort Street to the bridge without being awakened a dozen times they are deaf," said a resident. "The sewer department has torn up the paving several times and replaced it. The waterworks department has torn up the paving and replaced it many times. The gas company has torn it up innumerable times. The telephone company has also took a turn at tearing up the paving, until it is as uneven and rough as the hide of a politician and as noisy as a Fourth of July orator. Why, even the street cars have become infected with the noise microbe—especially those in the early morning. A drum corps in full operation would be soothing in its quietness to Highland Avenue at almost any hour of the day.

"And this leads me to remark that it is only a question of a short time until a viaduct will be built over the Butler Street dip, making the ending of Highland Avenue at Piedmont and Harris Streets. This is another improvement which will be taken up just as soon as the street is repaved with a smooth paving. The importance of Highland Avenue is greater than that of almost any other street on the North Side next to Peachtree, and it will be good business to repave the street and build the viaduct across darktown."

TALE OF PLOT TO SELL CONGRESS AMAZES U. S.

Representative Palmer Discloses Attempt to Bargain With New York Money Kings.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—All the country is grasping to-day over the remarkable story told to the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee by Representaitve Mitchell Palmer, of Pennsylvania, of an attempt to sell Congress to the money kings of Wall Street.

Lewis Cass Ledyard, a prominent New York lawyer, was the man to whom a bogus Representative Palmer offered the control, and many telephone conversations were held between the two.

Then, according to the story, Attorney Edward Lauterbach appeared and told Mr. Ledyard that he spoke for several "important gentlemen of the House.

When Mr. Ledyard expressed doubts, Mr. Lauterbach, it is said, urged him to come to Washington and meet the "important gentlemen" in question. In this connection, it was asserted by Representative Palmer on the witness stand that Mr. Lauterbach named Speaker Clark and the House floor leader and several other noted Congressmen.

Lauterbach denied he had been connected with the alleged attempt to sell control over Congress to the money interests.

He was actuated in offering his services, he declared, by the sole fact that he wished again to represent Morgan & Co.

Mr. Lauterbach told of his connection with Morgan & Co., and declared that he had been told by the banking house, after Mr. Lamar had got into disfavor with Mr. Morgan, that his relations with Mr. Lamar must cease or his connections with the house of Morgan would suffer.

Budget Plan Fight Will Be Reopened

WASHINGTON, June 27.—The budget system of handling appropriations by concentrating in the hands of a principal committee the power to allot to the various appropriating committees of the House the amounts to which each shall be entitled, will be revived soon.

House said to-day they would propose a new budget system almost identical to the one that was rejected.

Meningitis Cured by Carbolic Injections

BALTIMORE, June 27.—For the first time in the history of the Franklin Square Hospital and the first time in the memory of any of the physicians of the institution the cure of cerebro spinal meningitis by the use of carbolic acid injections has been effected by Dr. L. S. Horka, resident physician there.

The patient was Charlotte Walsh, of this city, who was taken to the institution in a dying condition.

Troup Planter Is Slain by Neighbor

WEST POINT, GA., June 27.—Jesse Haralson, of Troup County, was shot dead by Ben Dixon, a neighbor, last night.

The men had a personal encounter in the afternoon and Haralson waylaid Dixon as he went to the pasture for his cow. Dixon says he heard the bushes rattle behind him and saw Haralson approaching with a gun. He drew his revolver and shot his foe dead.

Aged Judge Arrested For Abusing Lawyer

MOBILE, June 27.—Judge Samuel B. Brown, presiding magistrate of the Circuit Court of Mobile County, was arrested here by the police on a charge of disorderly conduct preferred by Assistant State Solicitor Tisdale Touart.

The Magistrate, who is aged and has but one leg, and the Solicitor had some words.

MOVIES DISRUPT BURLEY SOCIETY

Members of Tobacco Pool View Extravagance at Their President's Fete, Then Revolt.

LOUISVILLE, KY., June 27.—The Burley Society, an organization of tobacco growers who pooled their crops to combat the tobacco trust, to-day was threatened with disruption when the members revolted against the directors and began a campaign to oust them.

The dissatisfaction officially was said to have started with the appropriation of $600,000 for the purchase of a Louisville tobacco factory without consulting the stockholders, but the real reason was said to be the unfavorable criticism of the society that followed the private race meet given in April by Mrs. Lawrence Lebus, wife of the president of the society.

Moving pictures of the meet, the first sanctioned for private entertainment, showed guests turkey-trotting and doing other stunts usual at expensive social functions.

The lavish display stirred the members of the Burley Society when they saw the moving pictures and thought of the meager profits the society, of which Lebus is the head, has earned since its organization.

The officers of the society have opened headquarters in Lexington and plan to fight to retain control of the election.

of health are often caused by

Coffee Drinking

When headache, indigestion, nervousness, liver inactivity or other disturbing symptoms begin to rob one of pleasure and comfort it's well to look for the cause.

If you find it to be coffee-drinking, quit and use Instant Postum, the pure food-drink made from clean, hard wheat. Contains no caffein (as does coffee) nor any other drug.

Instant Postum is regular Postum reduced to powder form and soluble in water.

Regular Postum must be boiled.

Instant Postum doesn't require boiling, but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in an ordinary cup of hot water and adding sugar and cream to taste.

A level teaspoonful makes it right for most persons. A big cup requires more, and some people who like strong things use a heaping spoonful and temper it with a large supply of cream.

When you find out just how you like it, have it always served that way. Made right, Instant Postum has a snappy flavor that is wonderfully pleasing.

RESOLUTION ASKS W. & A. EXTENSION

Senator Sweat Wants Commission Named to Pass on State Railroad's Future.

A resolution providing for a commission of five citizens to investigate and report on the proposed extension of the Western and Atlantic Railroad was introduced in the Senate by Senator J. I. Sweat.

The resolution suggests the purchase of a line extending from Atlanta to Fort Valley from the Southern Railway, and the purchase of the Atlanta, Waycross and Northern Railroad. This would extend the Western and Atlantic to the port of St. Marys, with a line of railroad extending from St. Marys to Kingsland, and a route surveyed and located from Kingsland to Waycross and on to Fort Valley.

Senator Sweat's resolution declares that this extension of the road would constitute a continuous trunk line from Chattanooga to St. Marys, and from St. Marys to Jacksonville, which, being operated under the control of the State, would tend to fix and establish reduced freight and passenger rates; or, if leased, would yield the State an immense revenue, sufficient to largely relieve the people of the Stat from the burdens of taxation."

A bill to provide for the teaching of agriculture in all the grades of the public schools of Georgia was introduced by Senator W. J. Bush. It sets forth that its provisions shall not apply to cities having a population of 5,000 or more.

M'CRORY HAS PLAN TO PAY TEACHERS

Will Introduce Resolution Requiring State Treasurer to Settle All Claims.

A resolution providing a method for the immediate payment of the country school teachers of Georgia will be introduced by Representative McCrory of Schley County in the House Saturday morning. It instructs the Treasurer to make a list of all claims against the State and to pay them in their priority, except the wages of State employees and appropriations to the State Sanitarium.

This would place the country teachers near the top of the list.

The McCrory resolution reads:

"A resolution instructing the Treasurer of Georgia to list all claims against the State and to pay off the same according to priority, except as to employes of the State and appropriations for the State Sanitarium and for other purposes.

"Be it resolved: That from and after the adoption of this resolution that the Treasurer of this State shall make a list of all claims according to priority, except the wages of employees of said State and appropriations to the State Sanitarium."

Lungs Were Affected; Now in Good Health

The makers of Eckman's Alterative, a remedy for Throat and Lung Troubles, do not claim that it will restore every one to perfect health, but so many have voluntarily testified it saved their lives that all who have this dread disease should investigate and try it. It should stop the night sweats, reduce fever, promote appetite and in very many cases prolong life. Read what it accomplished in this case:

Catherine Ave. and Ascot Place, Queen's Court, L. I.

"Gentlemen: In the year 1908 I was taken with a heavy cold and a nasty cough and went to several doctors, including a specialist. Their medicines failed. My brother then recommended Eckman's Alterative to me very highly. It is now nearly two years since I first took it. I am now well and I dare say that I would have been buried long ago if it had not been for Eckman's Alterative. I wish to thank you for the Godsend to me. Wherever I go I highly recommend the Alterative, as I owe my life to it."

(Affidavit) JOS. J. TROESCHER.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious in cases of severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Does not contain narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. For sale by all of Jacobs' Drug Stores and other leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

How Long Is Coat To Be? Queens of Style Near War

CHICAGO, June 27.—It isn't the lack of petticoats nor the filmy nature of the skirt that is worrying the ladies' tailors and dressmakers. It is the length of the coat. That puzzling question threatens to-day to split the great association that rules these things in America.

The tailors and dressmakers meet in convention at the Marbridge Building, Friday, and twenty-two States, presided over by D. Mikol, of Boston, will fight out the question of coat length. The New York tailors insist on 38 inches as maximum and would prefer 40 inches. But the Illinois men say that 30 inches is plenty, and they won't stand for more than 32 inches at the most.

HOUSE SETS DATE TO ELECT SENATOR

July 15 Selected in Bill Passed by Body on Third Day, Marking New Record.

The House broke its record Friday morning when it passed a bill on the third day of its session. The bill provides for the election of a United States Senator. It was introduced the first day of the session and the third reading of the bill was moved by Minter Wimberly, of Bibb, Friday morning.

Objection was made to putting the bill on the third reading, but on earnest pleading by Mr. Wimberly objection was withdrawn, except by Fulbright of Burke, who said that his only objection was on the grounds that the validity of the House had been attacked.

He finally withdrew his objection, saying he did not wish to be the only objector.

Wimberly's plea was based on the fact that the State might be without senatorial representation if the matter was delayed.

July 15 was set as election day.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER.

"DEAR, could you make room for this in your trunk?" asked Helen anxiously.

"Um, what is it?" Warren did not look up from the great roll of collars he was fitting in the tray.

"My heavy coat—I'll need it for the steamer."

"Should say I couldn't. Put it in the roll with the rugs."

"But we've got to put both our train coats and the steamer pillow in that—it won't hold any more."

"Then you'll just have to carry it. "See here," opening a small leather case of folding coat hangers, "how many of these things will we need?"

"Take them all, dear. I'll want some. Where is that other case of six, Aunt Emma gave you for Christmas? Oh, here they are."

"Then put them in your own trunk. I'm not going to fill up mine with a lot of truck for you. Look at all those papers," pointing to some packages he had brought from the office.

"Oh, do you have to take all those?"

"That's not all—there's more in that suit case. And they're a darn sight more important than your frillikins."

Helen, who had always counted on putting certain things in Warren's trunk, went back to her room and gazed helplessly at her small and already overcrowded steamer trunk. How could she get everything in?

"What shall I do with this, ma'am?" demanded Maggie, appearing at the door with an opened package of cereal.

"Oh, you'll have to throw out everything like that; we can't leave it to draw mice. Now, you're sure you've got everything out of the refrigerator? The butter and the rest of that jar of bacon you can give to the houseman. And you'd better sprinkle some borax around the sink. Wait, I'll come show you."

A Farewell Call.

While Maggie was to stay to clean and close up the apartment, yet Helen wanted to see that nothing was left to draw insects.

She was still in the kitchen, when the 'phone rang and Warren called impatiently:

"Helen! Somebody wants you."

"Oh, WHY will people call us up at the last moment?" she protested resentfully, for every second now was precious.

"Hello! I just wanted to say goodbye," shrilled Mrs. Thurston's voice, "and wish you all kinds of a pleasant trip."

"That's very kind of you," lied Helen politely.

"Your boat's sailing at 3, isn't it? I'd so like to come down to the dock, but I promised Mrs. Walker to go with her to a bridge tea. I disappointed her last week, so I'll just have to go. Well, you certainly have a fine day to start. I was afraid this morning it would rain, but it's cleared off beautifully."

"Yes, it has," murmured Helen stupidly, wild to get back to her packing, but not wanting to be abrupt.

"Oh, while I think of it, I want to give you the address of that place in the Rue de Rivoli, the one I told you about where I got those lovely hand-embroidered nightgowns. Have you a pencil there?"

Helen got a pencil, took down the address and was just about to say good-by when Mrs. Thurston held her with a——

"And I'm going to ask you to get me two more—size 36. You saw the ones I have, I paid fifteen francs for most of them, but use your own judgment—only I shouldn't like to pay over twenty. I'm sure you won't mind getting these for me, will you? And oh, don't you want the address of that handkerchief place, where they embroider the three initials for only a few centimes extra? If you'll hold the phone a minute—I've got the address on one of the boxes they came in."

Helen could hardly restrain her impatience, but she was forced to wait for the address.

Very Annoying.

"If you're getting some for yourself," purred Mrs. Thurston, "and if it isn't TOO much trouble, I SHOULD like another dozen of those tiny evening handkerchiefs—you know the initials—M. C. T."

When Helen finally succeeded in breaking away she turned from the phone with a furious—

"The idea of her calling me up this late to send for things!"

"Well, I'd have cut her off quick enough," growled Warren. "She wouldn't have kept me standing there. Here," shoving toward her some steamship labels he had just filled out with their name and number of their stateroom, "better get these on now. Can't leave everything till the last minute."

Helen took the oval blue and white "North German Lloyd" labels and pasted them on her trunk and suit case with supreme satisfaction. She had always envied people with trunks covered with steamship and foreign hotel labels—it gave their baggage such a traveled, "cosmopolitan" air.

The one label that was left over she put on a large trunk that she had had brought up to get out some things for the trip. It had never been abroad, but she MIGHT have taken it, so she had no scruples in decorating it with a label.

Unfortunately just at that moment Warren appeared.

"These yours?" throwing down a couple of her linen collars that had been sent to the laundry with his. Then noticing the label as she jumped up almost guiltily from her knees before the big trunk, "What's that mean? You're not going to take that trunk?"

"No, dear," flushing in confused anticipation of his ridicule.

"Well why in thunder did you stick on that label?" Then as it dawned on him. "By George, I've heard of fool women who bought foreign labels and plastered up their trunks, but I thought you had some sense."

This incident did not contribute to Helen's speed in packing, for with burning cheeks, she scraped off with the scissors the offending label.

"The ice man's here now, m'am," announced Maggie.

Some Hustling.

And again Helen had to stop her packing to instruct the iceman to leave no more ice until they notified him of their return. Then came the superintendent, whom she had sent for to see about turning off the gas. The time was going fast—and her trunk was not nearly ready.

"Oh, m'am, see what I found!" Maggie held up triumphantly a tea spoon they had looked for yesterday when they had counted the silver. Now more time was taken in unlocking the silver and putting away the spoon.

"What about the table fern, m'am. Didn't you say you were going to give that to Mrs. Hubbard?"

"You can do that after we're gone. Now don't come to me with everything Maggie. Look at the time—I must finish packing!"

"Trunk ready to strap?" called out Warren.

"Not quite, dear," nervously. "In just a few moments."

"Well now don't fool around and not be ready. I've ordered the cab for twelve sharp."

When Helen was much hurried she was apt to become confused, and now she fluttered about trying to do everything at once. There were more interruptions, and twice she had to stop to find something for Warren.

"All right, dear, it's all ready," she answered at last to his repeated call of "Trunk ready?"

"Sure this is the right key?" he demanded. "No, it's the lock! Rusty as the devil. Why in blazes didn't you try it? Get some oil!"

Helen flew for the oil, and for another precious ten minutes Warren fumed over the lock.

"Oh, wait, dear, have you got it locked?" just as he finally succeeded in turning the key. "Oh, I'm so sorry, but I left my bath robe."

Once Again.

Warren's explosives were loud and emphatic as he unlocked the trunk.

"Now is that ALL?" as Helen hastily crushed in the robe. "By Gad, I've never locked a trunk for you yet that I didn't have to open half a dozen times before we started."

But it was hardly a moment later when Maggie brought in a blue serge skirt Helen had asked her to brush. "You're not forgetting this, m'am?"

Helen tried desperately to get it in her suitcase, but there was no room. The trunk would have to be opened again. While she was struggling with the stiff, heavy strap, trying to unbuckle it, Warren passed the door.

"What in the devil are you doing now?"

"Never mind, I—I can open it," flushed and breathless with her exertions. "I just forgot to put in this skirt."

Warren pushed her roughly aside and again opened the trunk, his language more fervid than before.

"Now is THAT ALL?" he roared again as he slammed down the lid.

Helen thought it was. But at almost the last moment, she discovered a pair of shoes she had left out to be polished. The suitcase was bulging full, and she dared not let Warren see her trying to open the trunk again. She would have to carry them in a bundle. There was no other way.

It was not until they were finally whirling to the dock in a cab, with the trunks on top and the hand baggage on the seat before them, that Warren noticed the package Helen was carrying.

"What's that? Put it in your suit case."

"There isn't room. It's nothing dear. I'd just as soon carry it."

But Warren felt through the paper that it was a pair of shoes.

"So you forgot those, did you? Might have known you'd want to get in that trunk again. Gad, that's like you. Starting off for Europe with a pair of shoes in your hand. Next time I go—I go alone!"

What He Meant.

A man once received as a present from a sea captain a fine specimen of a bird which sailors call the "laughing jackass." As he was carrying it home he met a brawny Irish navvy, who stopped and said to him:

"Phwat kind of burrd is that, sorr?"

"That's a laughing jackass," explained the owner, genially.

The Irishman, thinking he was being made fun of, was equal to the occasion, and responded with a twinkle of the eye:

"It's not yourself; it's the burrd I mane, sorr!"

The Mistakes of Jennie .:. By HAL COFFMAN

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a Southern Girl in the Big City

Me made voilent love to Jennie.

Chapter 13.

A FEW DAYS after Jennie had got her new clothes she met Tom on her way to work.

Jennie was all excited when she saw him and wondered if he would speak to her after her refusing to marry him and her treating him so badly. She did hope he would, and that he would admire her new clothes.

Tom lifted his hat and acted as if there never had been anything the matter between them, and, boy like, did not even notice her new gown, willow plume and things, that Jennie was paying $1.50 a week for on the installment plan.

That day her girl friend at the office said she had it all "cooked up" for a party that night with the boys they were out with before.

One of the boys owned an automobile and they would go out on a "bear" of a time. So that night after work Jennie and her pal met the boys. Jennie was all dressed up and her girl friend's beau didn't seem to have any time for any one except Jennie. This, of course, made the girl jealous, but she held in until after dinner, when they were all a bit "jagged." Then she derided Jennie for trying to take her fellow away from her.

They had a fine row, which made the fellow—who seemed to always pay for their "parties"—very angry. He told the girl he was tired of her anyway, and she had better get some one else to pay her expenses.

Then he proceeded to make violent love to Jennie—and poor Jennie didn't know what to do. The other fellow—the one Jennie was with before—didn't have much to say, and whatever his friend did was all right, being as how his friend held the purse strings.

Coming back in the machine they sat on the back seat and the fellow talked and talked and tried to get Jennie to consent to let him furnish up a flat for her, and she could have anything she wanted. But Jennie was crying, and all she would say was: "NO-NO-NO!" Her girl friend wouldn't speak to her, but had vowed to get even—if it was the last thing in the world she ever did. Jennie begged the fellow to take her home—but he held her all the tighter in his arms, kissing her.

The Modern Girl : A New Species of the Feminine Sex

By DOROTHY DIX.

HAVE you ever considered the modern girl and how she differs from the maidens of the past? She's a new species of the feminine sex, and no more like her grandmother, or even her mother, than if she had been wafted down from the planet Mars instead of having just strolled out of the nursery.

We haven't taken much account of her, but you've got to reckon with her in the future, and it's time we sat up and took notice. Consider these little stories as illustrations of the young person and her point of view. The first is on divorce.

The other day I overheard two young girls talking.

Said one: "When a girl marries, she should be very, very careful in choosing her husband, and after she is married she should do the best she can to make a good wife and a happy home, but if she finds out that she has made a mistake, and is miserable, thank Heaven, she doesn't have to stand it. She can always get a divorce."

Said the other girl: "Oh, of course, that's the only thing to do under such circumstances. It won't be my fault if my marriage turns out badly, because I'm going to do everything I can, and bring every particle of intelligence I've got to making it a success, but none of that suffer-and-be-strong business in mine! If my husband isn't what he should be, or treats me badly, or I find I've made an error of judgment, I'm going to correct it just as I would any other mistake.

"I'm not going to stick to it as people used to do in the Dark Ages. Aren't you thankful that you live in these enlightened days, instead of in our grandparents' and our parents' time, when people thought that no matter how miserable you were in your marriage, or how much you hated the person you were married to, you had to endure it?"

An Unusual Remark.

The first girl smiled indulgently. "They were bound in the swaddling clothes of superstition, all right," she said.

I gasped with surprise. These girls belong to old, conservative, rather narrow-minded families, and they themselves are sweet, modest, intelligent, well educated young women, who haven't the faintest idea of being revolutionary, or anything of that sort. What they said simply voiced the viewpoint of the new generation.

They didn't argue about the ethics of divorce at all. They simply accepted divorce as a fact, a modern convenience, something that tended to make life pleasanter, just as they did in elevators in apartment buildings, or electric lights, or running hot and cold water in bath rooms.

If you had made a mistake in marriage and your life was being ruined by it, you corrected it and took a fresh start, just as you would do if you found out that you had engaged in a business that was bankrupting you. They could see no more reason for going on with a marriage that meant daily misery than there would be in going on with an enterprise in which you lost money every day.

You can't argue the divorce question with the modern young girl, because she simply doesn't recognize the ancient view of the matter, that there is anything noble, or pious, or virtuous in living with an individual that brings out all the worst that is in you, or in keeping together a family that is engaged in a perpetual drawn battle at home.

Nor can you argue the suffrage question with young women, because they accept it as a fact that is incontrovertible that they are the equals of the young men they know, and have just as much right to a voice in government. You could find a needle in a haystack easier than a college-bred girl who is an anti.

DOROTHY DIX.

And this is what the modern young girl thinks about woman's sweet dependence. A very rich girl said to me the other day:

"I've got the best and most generous father that any girl ever had. He showers on me everything that money can buy. I've got charge accounts all the way up and down Fifth Avenue, and every month he gives me a big allowance, but I never see a girl standing behind a counter, or sitting behind a typewriter that I don't envy her. I would rather have a dollar and fifty cents that I had earned myself than fifteen hundred dollars that was given me.

"I would give anything on earth to know that I could stand on my own feet instead of being a miserable parasite hanging on somebody else. And every rich girl I know feels the same way. But I've got one comfort, I'll never have to be dependent on a husband. How a woman endures the humiliation of having to ask her husband for every cent she spends I don't understand. It's enough to kill her, and I don't believe women are going to do it much longer. I think in the future that when a girl hasn't got an independent fortune of her own she'll continue after marriage at whatever business she was in before marriage. Financial independence is just as necessary to a woman's self-respect as it is to a man's."

And here's another viewpoint of the 1913 model of girl. If you will recall, the heroes of all old-fashioned novels used to be men who had been sad rakes. They were men with dark pasts, such as Rochester, who fascinated innocent little Jane Eyre, and even as late as a generation or so ago a man lost no prestige in a girl's eyes from having been wild, and having had romantic adventures. Recently an opponent to the bill for requiring all candidates for marriage to produce a health certificate brought up this former attitude of women on this subject in objecting to the passage of the law. He didn't know the modern young girl. I said something of this to one, and she defined the modern girl's position on the question in one phrase:

She Knew.

"We've read Damaged Goods," she said, "and we know what that sort of romance means—insane asylums, surgeons' tables, death."

In former times, when a young girl came to an older woman to confide in her, she asked for advice about some love affair. Nowadays when a girl has a heart-to-heart talk with you she consults you about her life work. The young girls are no longer looking forward to matrimony as the one only desirable career in life. They are thinking of business, of settlement work, of a thousand avocations outside of the home circle. Love is no longer the whole of their existence. It is a thing apart, just as it is of a man. If the right man comes along and asks one, she'll marry, but if he doesn't, she can get along very well without him, thank you.

This is only a cursory view of the young girl of the period. Take a look at her for yourself. At present she is the great human conundrum, and she's the most interesting thing in the world.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

A man remarked that he came from a very large family.

"How many are there of you?" he was asked.

"Well, there were ten of us boys," he said, "and each of us had a sister."

"Good gracious!" exclaimed the other, "then there were twenty of you?"

"No," said the boastful man; "eleven."

Mamma—My dear, what are you doing?

Little Daughter—Making a pen wiper for my little sister.

Mamma—But you haven't any little sister!

Little Daughter—No, not yet; but Sally Stuckup has just got one, and I know we always get everything the Stuckups do.

Sheet steel is the latest material utilized in the making of furniture. It is used for sidebcards, wardrobes, chiffoniers, writing desks, and it is finished in such perfect imitation of the various woods that the difference can not be detected. The wood finish is applied under a very high temperature, becoming an integral part of the metal and never cracking. This unique furniture has the recommendation of being fireproof, and a lighted match left on a pressed steel sideboard would have no effect whatever on its surface.

"What is the principal difference between modern and ancient times?"

"One of the main points was that the modern earn their living, while the ancients urned their dead."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

THARE was a convenshun of misshunarys in town this week & Ma went & toald the ladies of the club that she wud be glad for us to talk at leest one misshunary & keep him at our house so he wuddent have to pay any hotel bill. Pa dident like it a bit, but he dident say much. He kicked a littel, tho.

I can not see why you act so cold about entertaining a noabel man who is going to give up his noabel life, maybe, Ma sed, oaver thare in the Feegee Islands, teaching them awful black men how to be good. Why, sed Ma, I was going to say first that we cud keep two of those noabel men here & now that I see the way you are acting I am glad that I only promised to take one.

Why doesn't he go to a hotel & register, like a noabel drummer or a noabel transhunt of any kind? sed Pa. I doant see anything very noabel about horning into a household & putting everybody out for a week, Pa sed. It is bad enuff to entertain yure relatives all the time, sed Pa, without having any guy with a long face and a short purse setting around and talking about spreading the gospel. Thay spread more hot air than thay spread gospel, sed Pa, them misshunarys, & beesides they eet moar than a trained nurse, wich is sum eeting.

Very Sad.

But this man is a charming gentleman, sed Ma. I am sure that you will like him. Jest then the man caim.

Husband, sed Ma, this is Mister Weeks of Jacksonville. He is going abroad soon to teech the beenited natives all about religun.

Mr. Weeks was vary slim, vary sad looking. Pa sighed kind of hard, but he asked Mister Weeks to maik hisself at hoam & then Ma sed Now I am going to leeve you two men & littel Bobbie to have a visit while I run oaver to Missus Jones's & get that recipe for stewed steak & milkweed greens, Ma sed.

As soon as Pa was sure Ma was out of the house he asked Mister Weeks of Jacksonville to cum into the library & look at his books. I went in, too.

I have sumthing vary fine here, sed Pa, in this long necked decanter. It is the very finest burbon, Pa sed, & it is so old that it has rumatism. Will you try a snifter?

A Surprise.

I doant mind if I do, sed Mister Weeks. Then Pa poured him a nice drink & took one hisself. He looked kind of surprised at Mister Weeks, but I cud see that he was looking at his friend moar friendly.

I am sorry to intrude on you, sir, said Mister Weeks, & as it is I wud have stayed at a hotel, only I got roped into a stud gaim last nite & got my bank roll so nicked that it is almost nit. That is sum corn, he sed. If we was whare we cud, he sed, I wud cum back, but as I am in yure hoam I will try another on you, old sport. I will pour it, it is neerer to me. Say when.

I see you like it, sed Pa. I shud say I do like it, sed Mister Weeks. I have been in a jay town for three weeks, hoalding a kind of reevival, & the only stuff I cud git thare was so feerce that it took all my moral currage to drink it at all. Well, how do you like the way Billy Smith is sailing along now? I hope the Crackers win the pennant. I have a swell bet down that they will cop, he sed.

I nevver seen a man that looked so surprised as Pa. Say, he sed to Mister Weeks of Jacksonville, you are a regular guy. How did you cum to be a misshunary.

Pretty Soft.

Well, sed Mister Weeks, it is a pritty soft graft. A man gets a chance to travel all oaver & see furrin countrys, & as far as curing any beenited natives, all I evver ask them to do is to show me around. I used to be a ball player, he sed, but I got hit on the bean with one of Dent's fast ones, and that chased me out of the gaim. This gaim isent so dangerous.

Aint you afrade you will get et up by a cannibal? I sed to Mister Weeks.

No, sed Mister Weeks. I teach them all to be hard drinkers & thay lose thare deesire to eat.

Jest then Ma caim hoam.

You must be awfully tired, Ma sed to the misshunary.

Yes, I think I will retire & finnish my new lecture for those who grope in the darkness, sed Mister Weeks of Jacksonville. Then he groped to bed.

Turned the Tables.

At Scotch weddings some years ago it used to be the custom to batter the hat of the bridegroom as he was leaving the house in which the ceremony took place. On one of those occasions the friends of a newly-married couple (relatives of the bridegroom) determined to carry out the observance of this custom to the letter.

The bridegroom heard them discussing their plans, and dispatched a messenger to the carriage (which stood waiting) with his hat some time previous to his departure. Then, donning the hat of the male relative who had plotted against him, he prepared to go out to the carriage.

No sooner had he got to the door than his hat was furiously assaulted and almost destroyed. He walked out of the house amid the laughter of the bystanders and entered the vehicle; then, taking the battered hat from his head he threw it into the hands of its proper owner, exclaiming: "Hey, Mr. Dougall, there's your hat," and donned his own amid the cheers of all present.

Mr. Dougall was the unhappiest-looking man in Scotland for some time after that.

: The Bibles of Presidents :

Some Interesting Facts Concerning Them.

ONE of the oldest, if not the very oldest, Bibles connected with the American Government is the book upon which, since 1800, every Chief Justice and every member of the Supreme Court has taken the oath of allegiance when accepting his appointment to Uncle Sam's highest tribunal. More than that, every attorney who has practiced before the Supreme Court since that date—1800—has pledged his allegiance over the little volume, with one exception—Daniel Webster. It is told even yet of the Supreme Court of that day that Mr. Webster's fame as an orator had so preceded him that on that occasion, when he came to argue his first case before the Court, the clerk, Mr. Caldwell, in his eagerness to hear the great speaker, forgot to administer the oath.

Some interesting facts have also been revealed regarding the Bibles used by American Presidents. When Grover Cleveland came to the Capitol for his first inauguration he brought with him a little red Bible his mother had given him when he was a boy, and which he had always cherished as a keepsake. On that Bible he took the oath of office. A few days before Mr. McKinley's inauguration a number of African Methodist bishops came into Mr. McKinley's office one morning with a tremendous package, which proved to be a large family Bible in a big plush box, and they wished Mr. McKinley to use it. Their request was granted, and the big Bible was one of the show objects in the Red Parlor of the White House for a long time afterwards.

A $50,000 Bible.

When Mr. Roosevelt was inducted into office as Governor of New York some one presented him with the Bible which he used on that occasion. His name, which was written on the flyleaf, was misspelled, but he used the same Bible at his second inauguration, and it has been one of Mr. Roosevelt's most treasured mementos ever since.

These volumes, however, are to Americans of insignificant value when compared with the copy of the Bible, bound in red leather with silver clasps, on which Washington took the oath as first President of the Republic on the balcony of the old Federal Hall in New York. It was borrowed for the occasion, and the descendants of those who lent it preserve it as a most sacred relic.

Americans, inspired perhaps by the example of the late Pierpont Morgan, who included many historic Bibles among his art treasures, have of late years exhibited a great passion for Bible collecting. Bibles belonging to Queen Anne, George III and Richard, Duke of Gloucester, are to be found in the United States.

It was H. E. Huntington, the railway magnate of America, who a couple of years ago paid $50,000 for a Gutenberg Bible which was once in the Ashburnham Library. America, however, has not succeeded in securing a literary treasure to be found among the finest collection of English Bibles in the world, at the Bristol Baptist College. This college possesses the only perfect copy in existence of Tyndale's first New Testament, printed at Worms in 1525. The then Bishop of London bought up and burned this first edition, and thus provided Tyndale money for an improved and larger one. The only other fragment of the destroyed edition is now in the British Museum, but it stops short at the 22d chapter of St. Matthew. The trustees of the college have often been tempted to dispose of this unique volume, but hitherto they have been proof against temptation, though no less than $50,000 has been offered for it.

Another valuable Bible in the collection is a copy of Coverdale's Bible, published in 1535. Lincoln Cathedral possesses the only other perfect copy in existence, although six other more or less complete copies are known to exist.

Ina Claire's refreshing beauty.

By LILIAN LAUFERTY.

THE dainty little "Quaker Girl," Ina Claire, is entertaining her admirers down at Brighton Beach, where the cool breezes and her own refreshing personality unite to make us all forget how earnestly the sun of summer can pour down molten glory on the city cobblestones at noon to-day.

We sat at a cozy tea table and got acquainted over an iced tea and a soda lemonade, plus chicken sandwiches. "This is my luncheon," said Miss Ina—and, by the way, you pronounce it as if it were Eena—"I don't let all my meals total up to more than one meal—of course you will laugh and say that I can afford to eat all I want. But I can't. You have to meet fat more than half way if you want to ward it off, and make sure that it never starts coming. I never eat candy—it does not do one the least bit of good, and I'd be so grateful if I might get all the sweetness I want from the perfume of all the flowers I want. Flowers have such a wonderful effect on me—on everyone, I think—their perfume and beauty has to make you a little bit lovelier. Don't you think so? Perhaps you will even say in our interview that I wish all the kind people who want to send me gifts would make those gifts of flowers."

"Evidently you are a believer in the importance of surroundings," I suggested.

"Oh, yes," said Miss Claire eagerly, "for my ideal of beauty is sweetness—refinement. You see it in the flowerlike English type."

By the way the unconscious girl who sat across the tea table from me is a perfect exponent of the flowerlike English type.

Likes Clothes.

"I believe in the psychology of clothes, too. I hate things that are just la mode. I happen to like little picture dresses—soft, frilly, cool-looking, girlish things. They happen to suit me, too—so I wear them. But as I grow older and develop and mature I shall not wear these little frocks after I have outworn their type. Why, I want to grow in my work and develop power, and just the same way I want to grow beyond my 19 years in my appearance, too. Don't you think you have to dress your age as well as your type?"

I agreed; for I think that even as clothes must express the wearer, so they limit their wearer in her power of expression. A woman struggling along in a peg-top skirt that makes her walk a peg, too, can not look like the heroine of the poet's fancy:

"Even the light harebell raised its head
Elastic from her airy tread."

As Miss Claire said, "A trained gown expresses impressive dignity at once. Oh, how I should love to wear them, but my mother says that youth should express youth—and I know she is very wise. Youth must work and study and try to grow up gracefully in art and works and looks, but it must not be impatient and try to go faster than itself," added my pretty philosopher sagely.

"And don't you think that moods are very important, too?" I asked. "Flowers in your pathway and pretty clothes make beauty—but does it not come from within?"

Not Fair.

"Indeed it does," answered Miss Claire. "Unpleasant moods take the light and life from the eyes and all the face. It is not fair to other people to indulge in moods—and if you must have them, why just go off by yourself if you can, for your face will show their imprint. Drooping your upper lip in the middle, a la Eddie Foy, is fine for the blues—it curls your mouth up at the corners mechanically—and it makes your spirit laugh at the way you know you look.

"I think if you are young you need plenty of sleep, and simple food to get you into simple food-habits, and flowers and sunshine to help you grow, and work to keep you interested in life. I believe in work for women," went on Miss Claire slowly, "not only because life is happier when you are busy, but because, unless you are helping to create things, you become a critic. And just a critical attitude toward life is likely to become a bitter, droop-mouthed attitude. If you are a worker, and know how much struggle and effort goes into creating each tiny bit of life, you are happier and kinder, and I'm sure you look sweeter, too."

Well, little sister workers, is not that a splendid message for us? To create a bit o' life—and not to berate life—that is what Ina Claire told me.

EXPERIENCE OF MOTHERHOOD

Advice to Expectant Mothers

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The inexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ASK HIM TO CALL AGAIN.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I am 21 and am in love with a man two years my senior. He called on me a few times. One night I had an engagement and he disappointed me, and I heard he would like to write, but he is very bashful, so would it be proper for me to write to him?
LONELY.

Write a friendly note asking him to call, but do not make it too cordial, and do not be insistent if he refuses. Having made these overtures, let the rest come from him.

IT IS NOT WISE.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
Is it proper for girls between the ages of 15 and 16 to play kissing games, such as "postoffice," "spin the bottle," etc., with boys between the ages of 17 and 18 at a social gathering? GLADYS.

Don't do it, my dear. It is a silliness that sometimes results in continued and unpardonable familiarity when there are no kissing games as an excuse. Boys think all the more of girls who refuse to give such marks of their favor.

DON'T SEND IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
While at a ball I was introduced to a man who seemed interested in me. His father is in the same place of business as mine. Now, I would like to know if it would be proper for me to send a note through his father, as I do not know his name and address, because he has a stepfather. I would like to have him call to see me, but I do not want his folks to think I am running after him. ANXIOUS.

You do not want his family to think you are running after him, yet such a letter would give them that impression. A better plan would be to wait till he shows greater interest in you.

Next Witness, Please!

"Witness, will you please answer my questions a little more plainly?" queried the lawyer, who was cross-examining an elderly German as to the position of the door, windows, etc., in the house where a crime had been committed.

"I will try—I will try," nervously answered the old man.

"Will you describe to the Court just how the stairs run in that house?" went on the lawyer.

For a few minutes the German looked puzzled, and bit his nails nervously.

"How ze stairs run?" he interrogated a little dazedly.

"Come, come, my good man! How the stairs run, if you please!" said the lawyer, in an exasperated tone.

"Vell," ventured the witness phlegmatically, "ven I am oopstairs zay run down, and ven I am downstairs zay run oop!"

The Triple Tie

A Story for Baseball Fans That Will Interest Every Lover of the National Game

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.
Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

In that game the Philadelphia nine was composed of nine players with but a single thought, nine bats that thumped as one. They took advantage of every opening and with Chief Bender in the box played with a dash and confidence that filled their supporters with glee and when the cohorts went back to Philadelphia that night it was the hope that the White Sox had gotten rid of all their bad playing and that on the morrow, with Big Ed Walsh in the box, they would brace up and take the Red Sox into camp, thereby making things all even again, with the triple tie no further decided than it was at the start.

Emblems Laid Aside.

No white silk-stockinged banners were flaunted on Broadway that night. The emblems were laid aside for the evening, while the owners thereof sought rathskellers and similar places for the purpose of drowning their sorrows in the flowing bowl. But Comiskey, the owner of the Chicago Club, never gave up the baseball ship. The "Old Roman" called the members of his team to his room and after giving them a verbal dressing down for their wretched exhibition, as only Comiskey himself could do, he exhorted them to go after the Red Sox on the following day and wipe up the Polo Grounds with them.

"Now go out there and beat that Boston bunch!" he exclaimed vehemently in conclusion, "and when you do it I'll hand every member of the team $500. And you, Walsh," he added, turning to the big pitcher, "one thousand extra for you for winning the game."

The morrow came—a glorious October day. The Polo Grounds was packed for the battle of the Red Sox and the White Sox. Fresh from their last headache, full of remorse for the past and hope for the future, the thousand from Chicago massed themselves in that section of the stadium nearest first base, while opposite them, behind third base, sat the rabid Boston "fans," waving red banners and yelling for the Red Sox at the slightest provocation. The Chicago crowd, too, had brought their standards with them, somewhat soiled and bedraggled, it is true, but still sufficiently white to create a vivid impression whenever they were used.

Batteries Announced.

The rival teams took their preliminary practice, while the rival rooters barked at each other across the diamond. Finally the bell rang, the umpires took their place, Connolly behind the plate, Dinneen at first base and the other two at the foul lines, and the megaphone boys announced the batteries. Of these heralds there were three—one to inform the spectators behind the plate, one for the left wing and one for the right wing of the grandstand. This was their simultaneous announcement.

"Batteries for to-day's game: For Boston, Bedient and Carrigan; for Chicago, Walsh and Schalk."

Manager Stahl of the Red Sox had again won the toss and his team took the field. Rath, the Chicago second baseman, stepped to the plate and the Chicago cohorts back of first base gave him a rousing cheer. Hard luck came to the Boston team at the very start. Rath swung at the first ball that Bedient pitched to him, ticked it with his bat, deflecting it so that it struck Carrigan on his first finger, breaking it. The catcher was forced to retire. The megaphone boys announced the change:

"Cady now catching in place of Carrigan."

The Game Is On.

The game went on. Rath finally worked Bedient for a free pass to first. Lord bunted a slow one down the third base line, and in running to get it, the Boston pitcher slipped and fell, Lord reaching first safely and Rath getting to second. Chase rapped a hot one through the box, which Wagner knocked down back of second base, but was unable to field. This filled the bases, with no one out. The section back of first base became a waving field of white banners, and the shouts of leather-lunged Chicagoans could be heard for miles. Collins lifted a long fly to Lewis and Rath scored after the catch. Bodie came along with a two-base hit between Speaker and Hooper, scoring Lord and Chase. Mattick went out on a grounder to Engle and Weaver closed the inning with a foul to Cady.

With his side three runs to the good, Big Ed Walsh stalked to the pitcher's box. That lead was all he asked. The Red Sox had found him almost unbeatable for years. That $1,000 bonus promised by Comiskey he considered as good as in his bank at Meriden. He began proceedings by striking out Hooper and Yerkes and forcing Speaker to roll an easy one to the box, which Walsh himself tossed to first for the thir out.

Collins Replaces Bedient.

Both sides were blanked in the second inning. In the third the White Sox went out in order, but the Red Sox two men on—Wagner by means of a pass and Cady on a single to right. Stahl sent Henrickson in to bat for Bedient, but the little fellow hit into a double play and Hooper fouled to Chase. The Red Sox were still without a run to their credit.

Ray Collins came in to pitch in place of Bedient and he retired the White Sox in order. For Boston, Speaker singled after Yerkes had been disposed of, but neither Lewis nor Gardner could bring him home. The fifth inning was also scoreless for both teams, but the Red Sox came near doing some damage to Walsh in their half of the round. Engle was safe on a low throw of his grounder. Wagner laid down a bunt toward first and beat it to the bag, as no one covered first. Cady advanced the runners with a sacrifice. With the chance of scoring two runs, Stahl himself went to bat in place of Collins and succeeded in drawing a pass to first. This filled the bases with only one out. Stahl, who was still limping from an old injury to his foot, called upon Neil Ball to run for him. The Red Six rooters cheered wildly as Hooper came to the plate. He drove a liner to Mattick and Engle, who tried to score from third, was thrown out at the plate. This piece of ill luck so disconcerted the Royal Rooters' band that it forgot to play "Tessie" for the first time on record.

Buck O'Brien went in to pitch for Boston when the sixth inning opened. He was in fine fettle, and the White Sox couldn't get a man on the bases. Those three runs looked bigger and bigger as the game went on. In the last of the sixth, after Yerkes had been retired, Speaker beat out a bunt and Lewis was safe on a fumble, but more hard luck followed the Red Sox when Gardner sent a terrific liner directly in Chase's hands and Wagner boosted a high fly to Rath.

The Chicago crowd went wild when the White Sox got three men on bases in the seventh with only one out, but their cheers turned to groans when O'Brien struck out the next man and speared a hard liner for the third out. But in doing so O'Brien hurt his hand so badly that he was forced to retire.

Last Inning Opens.

It looked as though the Red Sox were all shot to pieces when they went to bat in the last half of the seventh, but Cady reached second on a little fly that struck the right field foul line and rolled to the stand. Taking a dying chance Stahl sent Nunamaker in to bat, but no runs resulted and the score was still 3 to 0 against the Red Sox when the eighth opened, with Leonard in the box for Boston.

Leonard passed the first two men that faced him, but some good pitching and some good luck enable him to get by without being scored upon. The top of the batting order was up for the Red Sox and the Boston crowd implored the boys to do something. They tried very hard, but none of them could drive the ball out of the infield.

The ninth and last inning opened. The White Sox were retired in order. They had not been able to do much with the Boston pitchers, except when they scored the three runs in the first inning, but Big Ed Walsh was going great guns and there was not a member of the team but that felt the game was surely won.

Fought back to the last ditch, the Red Sox went to bat for their last stand. Two thousand spectators left their seats and started home when Lewis, the first up for Boston, died on a roller to Rath. Five thousand more made a rush for the gates when Gardner filed to Collins. Not a sound came from the Boston section. The Chicago contingent was singing and waving flags. There was a faint cheer when Engle managed to work Walsh for a free pass to first. There was a louder cheer when Wagner hit safely just out of Weaver's reach. Some of those who were leaving the grounds paused for a moment to see if there would be any excitement. Cady, with two strikes and three balls called on him, was fooled into striking at a very low one, but the ball struck the ground before it got to Schald and jumped by him. Cady sprinted to first and beat Schalk's throw by a hair. The bases were filled!

Leonard Walks to Plate.

Everybody on the grounds except the Chicago crowd broke into a wild cheer. The Red Sox rooters were like raving maniacs. Three on bases and two out in the last half of the ninth inning! Yes, but what chance did the Red Sox have with a pitcher's turn to bat? Whoever heard of a pitcher "breaking up" a game of ball in the ninth inning with three men on bases and two out? And Stahl had used up all his pinch hitters.

The cheers were at their height and Leonard was walking slowly toward the plate, bat in hand, when Wagner rushed up to Stahl, who was on the first base coaching line, and whispered something in his ear. Instantly Stahl yelled to Leonard.

"Leonard!" he cried.

The pitcher stopped and looked at his manager, who motioned him to keep away from the plate. There was a commotion in the dugout where the Red Sox players were gathered. They were crowded together with their backs to the field. Umpire Connolly called sharply to Stahl:

"Batter up; where's your batter?"

The Chicago section jeered and hooted. "Play ball." "Get a move on." "Get busy," and similar remarks were hurled at the Boston manager, who still stood in the coaching box.

"Whose turn is it to bat, yours, Leonard?" demanded Connolly, striding up to the pitcher.

Leonard nodded.

"Get up to the plate, then," roared Connolly. "You can't delay the game this way."

"Stahl won't let me," replied Leonard.

"Where's your next batter, Stahl?" he roared.

Stahl turned toward the Boston bench, where there was still a commotion among the players.

"Who Is Your Batter-"

"Just a minute, Tommy, give me just a minute," he said to the umpire. "I want to win this game."

Manager Callahan of the White Sox came rushing up. So did Captain Harry Lord. The cheers and the hoots died down.

Connolly pulled out his watch.

"I'll give you just three minutes to get a man up to the plate," he said to Stahl.

The megaphone boys hurried up. The Boston manager glanced at the players' bench. The bunch of Red Sox players separated and one of them jumped out of the dugout and began selecting a bat from the pile on the ground.

"Who is your batter?" demanded Connolly.

Stahl told him.

An instant later the heralds raised their megaphones to their lips and amid a deathlike silence bawled this announcement:

Gordon Kelly batting in place of Leonard.

To Be Continued Monday, July 7.

TODAY'S installment of the "The Triple Tie" leaves Gordon Kelly in a very dramatic situation. The final chapters of the story will be printed in The Georgian on Monday, July 7. In the meantime readers of "The Triple Tie" will have until noon next Thursday to send in their conception of the conclusion of the story, containing their solution of the mystery in competition for prizes aggregating $250 offered by The Georgian. The problems for the reader to solve are these:

First—How does Kelly escape the mountaineers?
Second—What happens to Mildred Deery, the heroine?
Third—How did Gordon Kelly, who confessed that he never saw a game of ball and never played a game of ball up to the time he asked Manager Smith of the Atlanta club for a position on his team—how did Gordon Kelly learn to bat, catch and run bases in the marvelous manner he displayed at Atlanta that caused the Boston club to give the unheard-of price of $50,000 for Gordon Kelly's release?
Fourth—What happened when Gordon Kelly went to bat in the ninth inning of the final and deciding game?
Fifth—What is the final ending of the story?

No contributions will be considered if they are delivered at The American office later than July 3 at noon or bear a postmark later than that time.

Please remember that this is not a guessing contest. Originality, literary value and analytical clearness will be largely considered in awarding the prizes. Three judges, in no way connected with The Georgian, will award the prizes.

The prizes for the best solutions are as follows:

First Prize	$100.00
Second Prize	50.00
Third Prize	25.00
Fourth Prize	15.00
Twelve Prizes, each	5.00

"Oh, well," Burke exclaimed amiably, "I didn't really think you did, but I wasn't sure, so I had to take a chance. You understand, don't you, Joe?"

"Sure, I understand," Garson replied, with an amiability equal to the Inspector's own.

Burke's manner continued very amicably as he went on speaking.

"You see, Joe, anyhow, we've got the right party safe enough. You can bet on that!"

Garson resisted the lure.

"If you don't want me—" he began suggestively; and he turned toward the door to the outer hall. "Why, if you don't want me, I'll—get along."

"Oh, what's the hurry, Joe?" Burke retorted, with the effect of stopping the other short. He pressed the buzzer as the agreed signal to Cassidy. "Where did you say Mary Turner was last night?"

At the question, all Garson's fears for the woman rushed back of him with appalling force. Of what avail his safety, if she were still in peril?

"I don't know where she was," he exclaimed, doubtfully. He realized his blunder even as the words left his lips, and sought to correct it as best he might. "Why, yes, I do, too," he went on, as if assailed by sudden memory. "I dropped into her place kind of late, and I guess. . . . Yes, she was home, of course. She didn't go out of the house all night." His insistence on the point was of itself suspicious, but eagerness to protect her stultified his wits.

Burke Was Silent.

Burke sat grim and silent, offering no comment on the lie.

"Know anything about young Gilder?" he demanded. "Happen to know where he is now?" He rose and came around the desk, so that he stood close to Garson, at whom he glowered.

"Not a thing!" was the earnest answer. But the speaker's fear rose swiftly, for the linking of these names was significant—frightfully significant!

The inner door opened, and Mary Turner entered the office. Garson, with difficulty, suppressed the cry of distress that rose to his lips. For a few moments, the silence was unbroken. Then, presently, Burke, by a gesture, directed the girl to advance toward the center of the room. As she obeyed, he himself went a little toward the door, and, when it opened again, and Dick Gilder appeared, he interposed to check the young man's rush forward as his gaze fell on his bride, who stood regarding him with sad eyes.

Garson stared mutely at the burly man in uniform who held their destinies in the hollow of a hand. His lips parted as if he were about to speak. Then, he bade defiance to the impulse. He deemed it safer for all that he should say nothing—now! . . And it is very easy to say a word too many. And that one may be a word never to be unsaid—or gainsaid.

Then, while still that curious, dynamic silence endured, Cassidy came briskly into the office. By some magic duty he had contrived to give his usually hebetudinous features an expression of enthusiasm.

"Say, Chief," the detective said rapidly, "they've squealed."

Burke regarded his aid with an air intolerably triumphant. His voice came smug:

"Squealed, eh?" His glance ran over Garson for a second, then made its inquisition of Mary and of Dick Gilder. He did not give a look to Cassidy as he put his question. "Do they tell the same story?" And then, when the detective had answered in the affirmative, he went on speaking in tones ponderous with self-complacency; and now his eyes held sharply, craftily, on the woman.

"I was right then, after all—right, all the time! Good enough!" Of a sudden, his voice loomed someberly. "Mary Turner, I want you for the murder of——"

Garson's rush halted the sentence. He had leaped forward. His face was rigid. He broke in on the Inspector's words with a gesture of fury. His voice came in a hiss:

"That's a d—d lie. I did it!"

CHAPTER XXIV.

Anguish and Bliss.

Joe Garson had shouted his confession without a second of reflection. But the result must have been the same had he taken years of thought. Between him and her as the victim of the law, there could be no hesitation for choice. Indeed, just now, he had no heed to his own fate. The prime necessity was to save her, Mary, from the toils of the law that were closing around her. For himself, in the days to come, there would be a ghastly dread, but there would never be regret over the cost of saving her. Perhaps, some other he might have let suffer in his stead—not her! Even had he been innocent and she guilty of the crime, he would still have saved her from the waters—he would save her until the end, as far as the power in him might lie. It was thus that, with the primitive directness of his reverential love for the girl, he counted no sacrifice too great in her behalf. Joe Garson was not a good man, as the world esteems goodness. On the contrary, he was distinctly an evil one, a menace to society, on which he preyed constantly. But his good qualities, if few, were of the strongest fiber, rooted in the deeps of him. He loathed treachery. His one guiltiness in this respect had been, curiously enough, toward Mary herself, in the scheme of the burglary which she had forbidden. But, in the last analysis, here his deceit had been designed to bring affluence to her. It was his abhorrence of treachery among pals that had driven him to the murder of the stool pigeon in a fit of ungovernable passion. He might have stayed his hand then, but for the gusty rage that swept him on to the crime. None the less, had he spared the man his hatred of the betrayer would have been the same. And the other virtue of Joe Garson was the complement of this—his own loyalty, a loyalty that made him forget self utterly where he loved, not too much to give.

Frozen With Horror.

The suddenness of it all held Mary voiceless for long seconds. She was frozen with horror of the event. When, at last, words come they were a frantic prayer of protest.

"No, Joe! No! Don't talk—don't talk!"

Burke, immensely gratified, went nimbly to his chair, and thence surveyed the agitated group with grisly pleasure.

"Joe has talked," he said, significantly.

Mary, shaken as she was by the fact of Garson's confession, nevertheless retained her presence of mind sufficiently to resist with all her strength.

"He did it to protect me, " she stated, earnestly.

The Inspector disdained such futile argument. As the doorman appeared in answer to the buzzer, he directed that the stenographer be summoned at once.

"We'll have the confession in due form," he remarked, gazing pleasedly on the three before him.

"He's not going to confess," Mary insisted, with spirit.

But Burke was not in the least impressed. He disregarded her completely, and spoke mechanically to Garson the formal warning required by the law.

Three indictments charging criminal libel were returned Friday by the Grand Jury against Colonel Thomas B. Felder, the Atlanta attorney, and Newport Lanford, Chief of Detectives, who accused each other of most everything in the category after the famous dictograph episode. There are two bills against Felder and one against Lanford.

The two men will be placed under bond and will be tried in the Fulton County courts under the misdemeanor act for unlawfully and maliciously accusing each other, according to the true bills.

The penalty for conviction of a misdemeanor is six months in the county jail, twelve months in the penitentiary, a fine not exceeding $1,000; either or all three.

Colonel Felder appeared at the Solicitor's office about 2 o'clock and furnished the $500 bond required. Chief Lanford had not been located at that time, but was expected to do likewise.

The accusation against both men is based on recriminations issued against each other and published in the Sunday newspapers of May 25 and June 8.

In those statements Colonel Felder attacked Lanford bitterly, hurling a line of invectives that the greatest of the Roman orators might have envied. He attacked Lanford's private and public character, accusing him of "hideous crimes."

Lanford in Full Denial.

Chief Lanford replied in kind, denouncing Colonel Felder as a "contemptible liar, scoundrel and coward." He denied absolutely any wrong-doing.

To establish the fact that the statements published had actually been made by Felder and Lanford, the Grand Jury summoned Sidney Ormond, city editor of The Constitution, and M. D. Clofine, city editor of Hearst's Sunday American. Both men testified that there could be no question that Felder and Lanford issued the statements in question.

The new turn in the dictograph fight was entirely unexpected and promises stirring developments. If the charges are upheld and the two men formally accused, the real fight will come at the trial, when it will be up to both Lanford and Felder to prove the charges they made against each other.

Real Revelations Promised.

That will bare the real inside of the dictograph trap and other things that have been rumored in the last few weeks, and some real explosions are anticipated.

Subpenas also have been issued out of the Solicitor General's office for other witnesses who engaged in the controversy at a time when charges and countercharges were flying thick and fast. It is the announced intention of the Grand Jury to probe carefully and thoroughly into Colonel Felder's charges of alleged crookedness in the detective department.

It is rumored in the lobbies of the courthouse that the investigation of the Felder charge will in time develop into another and more searching inquiry into the vice situation in Atlanta. Colonel Felder's charges have been based on the alleged protection of resorts by Chief Lanford and his detectives, which have been as vigorously denied.

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

News comes from Chicago that Emil Thiry will manage Willie Ritchie from now on. Thiry is at present looking after the affairs of Packey McFarland, but has agreed to leave for the coast at once to handle Ritchie in his bout against Rivers on July 4. Thiry was manager of Ritchie before Nolan.

* * *

Frank Klaus and Jimmy Gardner have been matched for a 12-round battle before the Atlas A. A., of Boston, on July 1. They will box at catchweights. It will be Gardner's first fight in nearly two years.

* * *

Johnny Dundee, who secured the decision over Jack White in a 20-round go at Vernon, Cal., last week, has left Los Angeles, Cal., and gone to Albuquerque, N. Mex. He is billed to meet Tommy Dixon there on the afternoon of July 4. He was accompanied by Scotty Montieth, his manager.

* * *

The Charlie White-Jack Britton match scheduled to take place at New Orleans next month, has been cut from 20 to 10 rounds. The Governor of Louisiana refuses to stand for 20-round fights.

* * *

Terry Nelson, the local Greek lightweight, has agreed to meet Mike Saul in a return match. The pair recently clashed in a 10-round go at the Auditorium-Armory with honors even. The boys will probably be matched at the next show to be held here.

* * *

Johnny Coulon, bantamweight champion of the world, has asked Tom McCarey to postpone his 20-round affair with Kid Williams on July 29 to Labor Day. Johnny says he will need the extra time to get into perfect shape.

* * *

McCarey, however, has become discouraged with the stalling tactics of the champion and will probably refuse him the delay. The coast promoter has already postponed the go once.

* * *

* * *

Gunboat Smith and George Rodel will don the gloves for a scheduled 10-round set-to at New York on Friday night. Smith has been made a 2 to 1 favorite over the Boer. In a former match between the pair Smith floored Rodel no less than five times, but failed to put him away for the count.

* * *

Al Kubiak is coming back into the game. The big fellow has agreed to meet Jim Savage at New York some time next month.

GREATEST CARD EVER FOR MEET AT MOTORDROME

JACK PRINCE has put the kibosh on the Richards-McNeil First Prize Trust that has been gobbling all the fat money out at the local Motordrome. And he did it very simply. He just changed the program a bit.

The idea was that, by eliminating Richards and McNeil from the sweepstakes and the purse, grand races would be produced. It would be a wise man who could pick the winner, with those two out.

But, of course, the public wants to see McNeil and Richards take another shot at their celebrated warfare for first honors. In consequence these two have been matched for a series of three races, each at three miles.

Match Race a Wonder.

The match races will give the Motordrome patrons their first chance to see McNeil and Richards fight it out—to determine the stirring question of supremacy between the famous Indian No. 23 and the J. A. P. motor. Out of six attempts Richards has won four times, McNeil twice. But Richards has never won when McNeil's motor was right. And on the other hand, Richards' machine has never faltered, while the Jap gets out of order like a delicate stomach.

It is likely that those sportively inclined will make this event the medium of a plunge. The riders at the track have put up enough so that the losers in the wagering game will kick away the proceeds of a week's work. The present odds are even. The wise lads believe that the J. A. P. motor is faster, but that it will hardly last through three three-mile heats. Anyway, it is a great wagering opportunity.

Races Are Wide Open Now.

With McNeil and Richards out of the sweepstakes and the purse they immediately become great races. With those two men in, it is moderately certain that one or the other would cop, unless they fell. The only interest would be in the contest between the two of them. But this contest has been taken out and will be run off by itself. And it's anybody's race in the main event.

One particularly good feature of the purse and the sweepstakes is that there will be four riders in each of the two preliminary heats. Two riders in each heat will qualify for the finals. There will, therefore, be four riders in each final event as well.

All Have a Chance.

The riders who have a chance at the two main prizes will be about as numerous as the entries. Morty Graves, Georges Renel, Freddie Luther, George Lockner, Billy Shields, Harry Swartz, Henry Lewis and Harry Glenn are about evenly matched. Of course, Graves and Renel look particularly dangerous, but the winner may turn up among the other six riders.

Anyway, it will be a great race. With four riders in each heat, with the two most dangerous competitors removed to a match race and with virtually a new layout, there will be big competition Saturday night.

For the match race the largest purse of the season has been offered, and McNeil and Richards will go after it for blood. There will be three heats in this event, each at three miles. McNeil is putting in twelve hours a day trying to strengthen every weak point of his machine, and he believes he will have the "Auld Nick," as he calls it, ready to go through all three heats without a bobble.

One is surprised to read a boxing expert's dope to the effect that Eddie McGoorty needs a regular manager. Were we to be asked, we should suggest a regular guardian.

Not that we study the market reports, but the fact that motorcycle racers wear football headgear leads one to suppose that the price of ivory is high.

Giff Pinchot may be a great little conservationist, but he has nothing on Chris Mathewson, who goes through nine innings with 70 heaves.

We had begun to believe in the theory that there were only seven original jokes until we learned that Jim Corbett was about to deliver lectures before the W. C. T. U.

There is no fault to be found with Mr. Mathewson's remark that "the Cubs have developed considerable puissance," except that Heine Zim may get the impression that the said Mathewson has been calling him names.

In other words, that Calgary jury decided that Arthur Pelky was not guilty, but don't do it again.

Up to date Jimmy Coulon has not emitted any paeans of joy over the fact that he is matched with one Kid Williams.

There are two ways to look at Mr. Coulon's work in Kenosha. One is that he has not had many fights lately and the other is that he is lucky he hasn't.

FINE CHANCE.

As we understand it, Connie Mack and gang are losing a lot of sleep in their efforts to decide what to do with the winner's end of the world's series next fall.

Still, if Mr. Pelky can only keep up his batting average there will be no strenuous objection if he tackles a few more white hopes.

GEERS' PACERS FOR 1913 LOOK CERTAIN WINNERS

NORTH RANDALL, O., June 27.—Pop Geers, the grand old man of light harness racing, has arrived here with a bunch of 27 horses, which he will train for the Grand Circuit races.

It is doubtful if Pop, in his palmiest days, ever started a campaign with as likely a looking bunch.

For the pacing features Vernon McKinney (2.01 1-2), John Patchen II, the demon pacer of 1912, and Don Densmore (2.02 1-2) form a trio the like of which has never been found in one stable since the harness sport first came into prominence.

Aker and The Assessor are the candidates for the slow pacing events.

Dudie Archdale (2.04 1-4) and Anvil (2.06) are Geer's reliances in the free-for-all trots.

CHRISTY MATHEWSON'S BIG LEAGUE GOSSIP

NEW YORK, June 27.—Boston has finally hit its stride. Jake Stahl's team has picked up wonderfully in the last couple of weeks, but I doubt whether they will be able to catch the fast-flying Athletics. The Red Sox are more than ten games behind the Athletics now, and, to my mind, there is no team in the world which can spot the Athletics ten games on the first of July and catch them.

The American League race is divided into three parts, as J. Caesar so aptly remarked anent Gaul. The Athletics and Cleveland are the contenders. The Red Sox, White Sox and Washington are arguing it out to see which one of the three finally drops back into the second division, because it looks as if one would surely land there. Probably it will be either Washington or Chicago. The Red Sox should finish in the first division. Washington has been a great disappointment after its fine showing last year.

* * *

THE New York, Detroit and St. Louis teams are struggling to find out which one will wind up in the final place. Chance has predicted the Yankees will finish sixth, but they will have to do a lot of hustling to beat out Detroit. Chance has greatly improved his club, but it could stand a lot of it.

* * *

THE Giants' pitchers made a grand showing throughout the West. Tesreau, of the veterans, was the only one who was not up to his mark of last season. He lacked control in a couple of starts, the heat apparently affecting his big bulk during one of his starts in Cincinnati. Fromme was a consistent performer, appearing in two tough games and getting away with both of these. Marquard also pitched some grand ball, losing a couple of decisions through no fault of his own, but on account of errors in his support. Demaree likes this hot weather and should travel at a big clip to the end of August. The Giants' future looks very rosy, and I can see no reason why we should not take our third pennant. The team is going exceptionally smooth now, so well that a man of the caliber of Herzog is sitting on the bench because McGraw does not care to trifle with his luck and break up a winning combination. I do not think of another club in the league on which Herzog would not be working regularly. It is through no fault of his own that he is not, but because he was ill for a few days and Shafer had jumped into his job with a splash before he could recover.

JULY DROPS ON HEAVY NOTICES

Big Spot Houses Stop 20,000 Notices for Liverpool---Market Is Narrow.

NEW YORK, June 27.—Influenced by easier cables and favorable weather conditions overnight the cotton market opened dull to-day with first prices at net unchanged to 5 points lower than Thursday's final. A buying movement developed later which caused recoveries in most active positions. The market was influenced to a large extent by notices.

Incomplete returns indicated notices of about 20,000 bales, or one-half of the local stock, which is supposed to be controlled by Liverpool interests. They were being stopped, according to reports, by a big spot house acting for Liverpool interests. The belief seems to prevail that as soon as notices is out of the way further advance will come.

The ring and certain brokers who usually represent spot houses were good sellers of new crop positions. However, the latter stock took on considerable July contracts.

The Journal of Commerce in its condition report of the crop was rather bearish on Texas and Oklahoma. This encouraged freer offerings, resulting in prices reflexing some 5 to 10 points from the previous close.

At the close the market was steady with near positions at a net decline of 8 to 12 points and distant positions 1 to 5 points lower than the final quotations of Thursday.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: July, 11.95; August, 11.93; October, 11.43; January, 11.37.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, June 27.—Weather conditions continue good. Map shows cloudy in the southwestern quarter; fair in remainder of the belt; warm, normal night temperatures. A few scattered showers in the interior with better rains in the coast districts. Indications are for partly cloudy to fair; scattered showers more numerous in the coast sections.

Liverpool came in rather poor and quotes spots 5 points lower; sales 7,000 bales. Early advices from New York stated that about 25,000 July tenders were made, most of which were being stopped by McFadden. The market here is quiet around 11.53 for December. No trading of consequence.

COTTON GOSSIP

The Journal of Commerce has the following on the condition of the crop in Texas and Oklahoma:

"Texas—Many correspondents report that the condition of cotton could not be better. The plant, though generally small, is healthy and vigorous, with good stands and fields well cultivated. As a rule, rain has been plentiful, but there are some sections yet needing more moisture, but none are suffering from drouth. Owing to cool nights, growth has been rather slow, and the crop is generally a week late. Boll weevils and grasshoppers are reported occasionally, but the damage is slight. Percentage condition will probably show a few points above last month, when it was 87.7.

"Oklahoma—As in Texas, present prospects for cotton are very bright; it is generally earlier than a year ago, and rainfall has been just about right, except in a few localities where rain is needed. A number of correspondents report prospects never better, with good stands, a strong plant and fields well cultivated. Lice are reported as doing some damage, but not serious. Percentage condition has not changed much since a month ago, when it was 89.6, but it is better than a year ago, when it was 85.3."

* * *

Mitchell and Parrott were the principal buyers of July. The selling was limited and scattered around the opening. About 20,000 notices were issued. Spot houses purchased July. Cone, Hubbard and Mitchell were free sellers of the new crops.

* * *

It is said that 10,000 notices were issued by Hubbard and stopped by McFadden.

* * *

There was nothing definite in the estimates of notices to be issued to-day, but it is thought 20,000 bales would be tendered by the various local spot houses who own the 42,000 bales here. Liverpool is expected to take up every bale tendered. The following shows notices issued at an early hour to-day.

Hubbard out with about 2,400, McFadden 700, Norden 600, Randolph 500, Hooper 1,000, Weld 4,000, Dick Bros. 500 and Robert More out with about 3,500.

* * *

Foreign houses were good sellers of summer months yesterday.

* * *

John McFadden is due to arrive here from Liverpool to-day and it said to be bullish.

* * *

July longs express the belief that they see no urgent demand for July, concluded that shorts were pretty well covered.

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas and Oklahoma clear and warm."

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, June 27.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map favorable, shows cloudy in the southwestern quarter of the belt. Fair elsewhere, few light scattered showers with better rains in the coast districts. Indications are for partly cloudy to fair, scattered showers mostly on coast districts.

* * *

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Temperatures continue favorable and some rain is falling over portions of the belt. A Gulf storm is expected to bring more rain. Those crop prognosticators who base their yield on weather data are not enthusiasts among the big crop people.

During several weeks the belt has enjoyed most splendid weather, and the outlook is particularly encouraging in the western half of the belt. There is a great deal of diversity of opinion as to the status of the crop east of the Mississippi. Nevertheless, the talent is now divided into two schools of thought on the crop question. One assumes that favorable weather has overcome all the handicaps and that in the absence of continued unfavorable conditions the crop will progress toward a monster yield. The other assumes that backsets prior to the coming of the current good weather were severe enough to have imposed a very difficult job on the weather god; consequently they now contend that over a large area the plant is smaller than normal for this time of year."

* * *

Reliable house at Fort Worth, Texas, wires: "Our San Antonio office wires early cotton fruiting well. Half-grown bolls in many fields. Expect first bale at San Antonio district by July 15. First bale extreme southern belt should show up this week. Looks to us as if the crop will be much earlier than expected."

MILLER-COTTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, June 27.—July notices amounting to probably 20,000 weakened that option and new months are down in sympathy. Market is narrow. Crop is still going well, but rain is beginning to be needed. Western forecast for unsettled weather was the basis of some early selling.

Pending the Government report we look for narrow fluctuations, after which the course of prices will depend on crop developments.

STOCKS DULL BUT STEADY ALL DAY

Foreign and Local Buying Sustains Present Levels---Union Pacific Strongest Issue.

By C. W. STORM.

NEW YORK, June 27.—Union Pacific was one of the strongest issues on the list at the opening of the stock market to-day, advancing ½ on buying said to be by large houses in both this city and London. News from Mexico City that a receiver has been appointed for the National Railways System had a depressing effect because of the large amount of American capital invested in the shares of this company. The list showed considerable irregularity.

Amalgamated Copper advanced fractionally, then lost its gain. Lehigh Valley, which sold ex-dividend of 5 per cent, began at 146½, then lost a point on a few transactions.

United States Steel common was in fairly good demand, advancing ⅜. Reading gained ½, but shaded. Pennsylvania was up ¼. New York Central lost 1¼ on its early dealings. Northern Pacific advanced fractionally. Missouri Pacific, Chino Copper, American Can, Chesapeake and Ohio and St. Paul gained fractionally. American Smelting was ¼ lower at the outset, but recovered and made a fractional gain.

The curb was steady.

Trading in the London market was quiet. Dealings in Americans were professional and narrow. The Harrimans showed the best tone. Canadian Pacific in London was quiet.

Nearly all the list declined to some extent during the first hour, due to news of the Mexican railroads. Soon after, however, the majority began to rise, but not sufficiently to cover the early losses. Union Pacific declined ¾ to 145¼, and New York Central showed a loss of 1 point. Copper was off 1 point and Steel remained about unchanged. The railroads recovered fractional losses and the National Railroad of Mexico second preferred dropped 3 points to 11. A few minutes before noon the tone was weak.

Call money loaned at 1½.

Little of no interest was displayed in the market in the late afternoon and during the last hour trading was wholly professional. Steel sold around 53⅜, unchanged from the noon quotations and Union Pacific was also unchanged. Both were lower than the opening prices. Canadian Pacific crossed 217 for a fractional gain, but Lehigh Valley was lower. Northern Pacific was unchanged from the early afternoon range, but Reading rallied slightly. The tone was listless.

The market closed steady. Governments unchanged; other bonds steady.

REPORTS OF WOOL SALES MISLEADING

Dealers Unwilling to Admit Full Amount of Transactions. Tone in West Firmer.

BOSTON, June 27.—Trading in wool apparently has been quiet all the week, though it is claimed that more wool has been selling than dealers are willing to admit. It is suggested that this alone can satisfactorily explain the attitude of the dealers in the West, where the tone is distinctly firmer. While receipts here are much smaller than at the same time last year, it is said that the territory clip is being cleaned up fairly well, though a large proportion of the new wool so far moved has been by consignment. Conditions in both the wool and goods markets are still unsettled and substantial improvement is impossible while the tariff remains unreformed. Conservative estimates give the total sales for the week as approaching a million pounds, though it is very difficult to get definite figures. Sales of foreign wools have been small and scattering.

Receipts of wool in pounds for the week ended and including Wednesday were as follows:

	1913.	1912.
Domestic	3,881,819	6,784,224
Foreign	583,565	746,850
Totals	4,465,184	7,531,074

Total receipts of 4,465,184 pounds, compared with 3,563,127 pounds for the preceding week, of which 3,173,282 pounds were domestic wools.

Receipts in pounds from and including January 1, 1913, as compared with the corresponding period in 1912 were as follows:

	1913.	1912.
Domestic	44,029,846	72,408,664
Foreign	40,937,435	69,117,384

CHICAGO BOARD BREAKS PRECEDENT, CLOSING JULY 5

NEW YORK, June 26.—Advices from Chicago that the Board of Trade had decided to observe an extra holiday on July 5 caused surprise all around. Not the oldest inhabitant can recall a time when the Board of Trade observed two holidays in succession.

The New York Stock Exchange's governing committee decided to close July 5, as was expected, and as the Cotton Exchange also will observe a triple holiday, the financial district will be deserted to a greater extent than ever before.

COTTON SEED OIL.

NEW YORK, June 27.—The cotton seed oil market was active to-day and prices higher on demand from old crop shorts and broadening speculative demand. This is first tender day on July, but none has come out.

WHEAT STAND THIN.

CHICAGO, June 27.—W. B. Snow wires from Jamestown, N. Dak.: "Wheat in Jim River Valley, of this State, shows thin stand, but otherwise fully as good as normal. Green, growing vigorously and just shooting to head. If balance of the season is good a large yield can be made, but not up to last year. Crop now entering critical period, with ample moisture for current needs.

"Splendid rains last night and more threatening. Phone reports indicate general rains over central part of State."

Wheat—No. 2 red	97½
Corn—No. 2	62½
Oats—No. 2	40½

CHICAGO, June 27.—Corn was up sharply this morning on a scare of shorts, who bought that grain eagerly because of the hot winds in the Southwest. Later prices were ⅞@1½c over the resting spots of yesterday. The Kansas report, as issued by Secretary Coburn, of the Agricultural Bureau, places the condition of corn at 85 on an area of 6,889,000 acres. A year ago the condition was 84 and last October it was 72 when 156,000,000 bushels were harvested. The wheat condition in Kansas is placed at 63, against 89 in April and 76 a year ago, when the crop was 88,000,000 bushels. About 6,000,000 acres of wheat will be harvested this year. Twenty-two per cent wheat has been abandoned. The Government June report made the condition 72. The condition of oats is placed at 49, against 75 last year, when the crop was 42,000,000 bushels.

Wheat was ⅜@½c higher this morning in sympathy with corn.

Oats were up ¾@1c and strong, with shorts covering.

Provisions were slow and easier.

While the best prices for wheat failed to hold, owing to profit-taking sales late in the session, there were net gains for the day of ¼c to ¾c. "Hedging" sales against the new crop were reported as liberal again, and it was also said that foreigners were sellers here because of the excellent prospects in Russia and the fact that they have considerable wheat bought from that country for early fall delivery.

Corn closed at advances of 1⅝c to 1¾c and oats were up 1¼c to 1⅝c. There was a genuine bull market in both the coarse grains and the selling was led by some of the more seasoned operators at Chicago and St. Louis.

Provisions were a shade lower all around.

MODERN MILLER CROP REPORT.

ST. LOUIS, June 27.—The wheat harvest is progressing under favorable conditions. There have been numerous rainstorms during the week, but these usually covered small areas and did no damage further than delay harvest. The yield generally is up to expectation and in many localities the grain is thrashing out better than had been expected, as it was thought that much of the wheat would not yield well because the extreme warm and dry weather had ripened crop too rapidly.

Indications are that farmers will market wheat freely in July and August if prices do not get too low.

DEWEY DEMANDS NAVY NEXT TO ENGLAND'S

"Inadequacy Is an Invitation to War," Declares Admiral, Urging More Ships.

WASHINGTON, June 27.—An adequate American navy means a fleet second only to that of Great Britain, and "inadequacy is an invitation to war," is the opinion of Admiral Dewey, ranking naval officer of the United States.

"I believe it is the duty of each generation to pay its own insurance and not to thrust its burdens on the generations that come after; and the insurance for peace is a navy strong enough to compel it," says the Admiral in an article written for the program for Navy Day at Newport, July 2, and just made public.

"The only function and justification for the existence of a nevy is the preservation of peace. To perform this function the navy must be adequate, and, though so much discussed in these recent times, the word 'adequate,' as applied to the navy, has but one meaning, and that is an 'adequate navy' is a navy of a strength sufficient to meet and defeat any probable enemy.

Must Pay Penalty.

"This strength is not absolute, but is relative, and varies from period to period as the other naval powers of the world vary their naval strengths. At the present period 'adequacy' on our part calls for a navy second to that of England only.

"We, ourselves, through lack of our fathers and grandfathers, paid the penalty of our generation in the loss of hundreds of thousands of lives, and our sons and grandsons have been paying the costs of the billions of dollars wasted and the hundreds of millions of pensions for which they were mortgaged; and they still continue to pay.

Mortgaged by War.

"We are paying to-day for the navy, as an insurance which does not insure us, roughtly $1.50 per capita per annum. Besides what has already been paid in lives and money, we are still mortgaged, by lack of foresight in our fathers, to the extent of the national debt and the additional $1.80 per capita per annum that we are paying in pensions.

"Shall our lack of foresight continue this system fo mortgaging the coming generations, or shall we add the relatively small sum needed to the insufficient insurance we all pay to make thati nsuranec adequate?"

Submarine 'Movies' Taken in Diving Tube

Three Operators Work Machine Under Water, Through Windows, Aided by Electric Lights.

NORFOLK, June 28.—Moving pictures of submarine life have been made possible through the invention by Captain J. H. Williamson, of a flexible tube with a windowed chamber, in which three men can work. A son of the inventor to-day successfully developed a series of pictures he took in the tube last week.

He descended to a depth of thirty-five feet at night, and with the aid of four powerful electric lights took pictures of fish at the bottom of Hampton Roads. Another picture was made of his brother, who dived down in front of the window in the tube.

COUNTRY'S BEST NEGRO SINGERS COMING

High-Class Artists Promised for Annual Festival Celebrating Emancipation Proclamation.

Some of the best negro singers in the world will be heard at the Atlanta Auditorium July 3 and 4, when the annual concert and celebration of the Atlanta Colored Musical Festival Association, in celebration of the semi-centennial anniversary of the Emancipation Proclamation will be held.

Many of the singers and musicians who will appear during the two days' celebration are no strangers to negro music lovers of Atlanta. Anita Patti Brown, a Chicago soprano soloist, will sing. A new singer will be Roland B. Hayes, of Boston, considered the greatest tenor of the negro race. Clarence Cameron White, regarded as the most finished negro violinist, will appear for the first time.

Fisk Singers Coming.

Among the other attractions will be A. G. Price, of Nashville, basso, and Rev. J. W. E. Bowen, a noted negro orator.

Probably the greatest feature will be the Fisk Jubilee Singers, the company of musicians who have carried the Southern plantation songs to all parts of the world.

The celebration and festival is to be divided into three features. A pageant play on Thursday night opens the festival. This is the original conception of Rev. H. H. Proctor, of Atlanta, and is divided into ten scenes, painted by Sossman, the Southern scene painter. They illustrate the progress of the negro race.

Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock a matinee will b egiven, at which nothing but "negro music," the songs of the Southern plantation and classical selections based on these melodies will be heard.

Hallelujah Chorus Climax.

The climax of the festival will come Friday night, when all the stars will be brought together in a concert. The program will close with a rendition of Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus," by the Fisk Singers and the chorus of 200.

Atlanta is the only city in the world where a musical festival is conducted by negro people, and visitors are expected from all over the country. One thousand seats have been reserved for white persons. Tickers for these seats will be on sale Monday morning at the Cable Company and the Phillips & Crew Company.

8 to 12 Best Hours For Working Man

Dr. H. L. Banks, of Boston, Says That Superior Results Can be Obtained in This Period.

BOSTON, June 28.—"Your nerves are at their best for four hours a day, from 8 in the morning until noon," says Dr. H. L. Banks, of 485 Beacon Street. He believes that no professional man who has to depend upon his nerves in order to do his most effective work can work more than four hours a day to advantage.

"For the last three years," says he, "I have been studying the nervous system.

"I give my time in the afternoon to farmwork. This is a most excellent way to, restore your lost nervous energy.

"I would advise everyone to get two hours daily in the open air.

"Outdoor work and exercise is the greatest nerve restorative."

Care and Attention Should Be Given to Chicks After Weaned

Chicks Should Be Fairly Well Feathered Before Weaned—Dryness Essential, Both in House and Yard.

Edited by Judge F. J. Marshall.

When chicks are forced to look after themselves by being weaned by their mother, or are changed from a brooder to a brood coop, is when they begin to demonstrate their inheritance of strength and vigor or their lack of it. When these changed conditions take place, then it is that they must depend almost wholly upon their own resources. Then they must depend upon the warmth of their feathers and internal heat. The chicks, if hearty and healthy, will push forward in rapid growth to maturity. Strong, healthy parentage makes itself felt, as do also all the conditions of food, feeding, care and management. The age at which chicks should be weaned or removed from the brooder depends upon the variety of considerations—the condition of the chicks themselves as to advancement, the climatic conditions of the season. The little fellows should be fairly well feathered and able to withstand, to a reasonable degree, the sudden changes that frequently come in almost any section of the country. Much depends upon the breed, the season and care with which they are to be handled. The smaller, laying breeds feather out very quickly, and should be pretty well feathered and ready to colonize by the time they are eight weeks old, and will stand quite cool weather if they are only kept dry. The American breeds and common mixtures about that size and type will require about ten weeks for the same process. While they are heavy, Asiatic breeds are very slow maturing and require from three to four months to get anything like a good covering. The weather conditions are very strong factors in the rearing of chicks after they are weaned. Dryness is very essential both in the houses and the yards. While dampness and chills winds are very likely to cause trouble, on the other hand hot, sultry weather often has a bad effect when they can not escape from their unhealthy condition. There is nothing like plenty room and ventilation. All brood coops should be provided with good wire fronts to provide the ventilation, and at the same time to prevent intrusion from night prowlers. It is advisable at all times to avoid crowding, and there is only one way to do that, and that is by not allowing a great number to roost in one coop or house, no matter how large it may be, for when the nights become cool, they will huddle into small space, and those which happen to be about in the middle must suffer. Chicks of about the same size and vigor should only be allowed in the flock. Any weaklings should be culled out and placed with a younger lot. This will not only be an advantage to the weakly ones, but will make a more uniform-looking lot out of each. Separating the sexes is a profitable proposition, and in the case of the smaller or laying breeds or mixed and common chicks of that type the separating should take place at weaning time. This will give both the cockerels and the pullets a much better chance for making good growth, and their management can be so much better adapted to the purpose in view for each. If the flocks can be separated and given unlimited range, so much the better. Where chicks can be allowed the run of growing corn, it makes an ideal run conducive to growth. Where it becomes necessary, on account of the garden, the nearness to neighbors or similar reasons, to yard the young ones, the fence may be made tight by a 12-inch board or a strip of 1-inch mesh wire, and the balance of regulation poultry wire. Where chicks have only limited space, it is a good thing to spade up at least part of the yard quite often with grain scattered about in it. Protection from the extreme heat in summer should be provided if there is not already shade trees in the yards. Old canvas or awnings of some kind can easily be arranged and are fully appreciated by the youngsters. Another very profitable thing where heavy, sudden showers are common are little shelters easily reached by the little ones. They will save many a chick from an untimely death. These little emergency shelters need not be any more than two or three wide boards slanted against the fence or supported in any other similar manner to run the water off. No chicken coop or house should be a hotbox in the day time or at night. Screen the front, also windows and doors, to allow good circulation. Of course, good, wholesome food is necessary to provide rapid growth. Avoid all sour mixtures of a sloppy nature, except sour milk or curd, which is good and wholesome. Dry grains and feed of that nature are advisable. Keep them filled up. Rapid growth requires full and complete feeding.

CHICKENS need more care and attention the next two or three months than any other time during the year. It is perfectly natural for chickens to have lice and mites, and unless you look after them they will multiply in such quantities to prove profitable. The little chicks will not reach the growth they should and the hens will not lay if they are covered with these pests. We have ties that you can not expect your flock remedies that will positively get rid of them and the cost is very little. For 35c you can get a can of either Lee's, Conkey's or Pratt's Lice Liquid and we will guarantee either of these preparations to give entire satisfaction.

WE have just gotten in a lot of nice, fresh, clean Red Comb Feed. The price for scratch and mash is $2.25 per 100 pounds.

WE are offering Baby Chick Feed at $2.15 per 100 pounds for the next few days. You know the regular price is $2.50 per 100 pounds. Better take advantage of this.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Close-in Acreage Bought for $32,375

Edwin P. Ansley Adds to Park. Three Fine New Residences. Other Realty Notes.

Recent additions to Ansley Park seem to portend an extension of that residential neighborhood until it reaches limits much farther to the north than at present, perhaps as far as Rock Springs, or beyond. This was hinted at the other day by members of the Edwin P. Ansley real estate agency and is borne out in part thus far in the additions already made, and an addition of more recent date which has just gone to record.

Mr. Ansley has bought from Mrs. Sallie J. Bearse, a 16.9-acre tract, bounded on the east by North Boulevard, etc., for $25,375, on terms of $1,267 cash and notes at 7 per cent; and from Paul E. and Lizzie L. Stephens a 5-acre tract, bounded on the north by Rock Springs Avenue and on the east by Boulevard, for $7,000, on terms of $1,000 cash and the balance in notes at the same rate of interest.

The original Ansley Park tract contained about 200 acres and was bought from the late George W. Collier for about $300,000, Mr. Collier having bought it in the pioneer days for $150. Since the above purchase some 20 acres were bought from Mrs. Harriet F. Brandon for approximately $18,000, and the addition of more acreage promises to bring about more interesting development.

Papers in Interesting Sales.

The northeast corner of Peachtree Road and Peachtree Way, which was sold June 15, 1912, by George L. Dickinson, of Florida, to Eugene Dickey, has been transferred to J. W. Goldsmith, Jr.

Deeds have gone to record in the conveyance May 9 of 87 Luckie Street, 40 by 150, to Paul Goldsmith from Alex Reeves, for $28,000, on terms of $11,250 cash, the assumption of a $10,000 loan and notes at 6 per cent.

Two More Fine Residences.

Dr. Joseph Jacobs, it was learned Friday, will move from his downtown house on the east side of Peachtree, between Sixth and Seventh Streets, and will erect a handsome country home on Peachtree Road, between Buckhead and Brookhaven.

Charles Godfrey, builder of one of the first homes at East Lake and now a resident there, has bought a lot at Brookhaven, and it is reported will soon build there.

The contract for J. J. Haverty's fine residence on Peachtree Road, north of Jack J. Spalding's "Deerland," has been let to the Pittman Construction Company and work will start in a short time. The house will cost about $50,000.

Application for Permit.

Application was made Friday for a permit to construct at Auburn Avenue and Butler Street the $76,803 auditorium and business building of the G. U. O. I. O. O. F. (colored).

More Money in Sight.

People vitally interested in the condition of the local money market have noted with pleasure a decided "loosening up" of the banks with loan funds. A depositor who was turned down flatly several weeks ago on application for a $5,000 loan received this week a letter from his bank saying that he could get the money at the usual rates. Many others who found a temporary tightness in money have succeeded in making arrangements to carry on business operations.

Charter Applied For.

Heirs of the late Sidney H. Phelan have applied to the Superior Court, through Barry Wright, of Rome, attorney, for a charter for the S. H. Phelan Company (Inc.), the purpose of the organization being to handle the Phelan estate.

After Executive Mansion.

Although Forrest & George Adair expect to make no proposition to the State Legislature this year relative to acquiring the Executive Mansion property for Asa G. Candler, several other real estate agents will probably open up the matter. One of the latter gathered all the information necessary some time ago and announced that he would offer a site on Peachtree Road. It is stated authoritatively that the Rhodes mansion on Peachtree, near Seventeenth Street, will not be put up this year. Charles H. Black offered it two years ago as agent for Mr. Rhodes.

Mr. Candler has no definite plans for his extensive frontage, beginning with the old Capital City Club property. He declared some time ago that the local political situation was such that he didn't feel justified in going ahead, and intimated that he had not been able to determine what character of improvements to make.

New Subdivision Opened.

Oakwood Terrace, a subdivision of 100 residence lots owned by the McKenzie Trust Company, has been placed with the L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency for sale. This property is just off East Lake Drive and adjoins Druid Hills. The Bottenfield Agency now has subdivisions worth approximately $1,000,000.

Knox Going to Convention.

The local delegation of real estate dealers going to the sixth annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges in Winnipeg the latter part of July, promises to be swelled by several other delegates before the lists have closed. Fitzhugh Knox, builder and real estate developer, has plans for going. The names of others have been published.

Additions to Sales Force.

O. P. Lyman, formerly with the A. K. Hawkes Company, and C. S. Martin, formerly of Tennessee, have joined the city sales force of the L. P. Bottenfield Real Estate Agency. Both men are well acquainted with realty values and are expected to prove a valuable addition to the firm.

"My Field the World"--A Fine Motto

(Copyright, 1913.)

A great wonder of the deep is the German ship Imperator, which arrived in America the other day.

What a chapter old Job could have talked about that ship if he had seen it!

Think of a ship with three wireless operators working night and day, ALWAYS ABLE TO TALK TO ONE SIDE OR THE OTHER OF THE OCEAN. Think of a ship with nine decks, seven for first-class passengers—a monstrosity almost as complicated as Dante's hell.

Think of a ship with six elevators running up and down, suites of twelve rooms, anchors that weigh more than twenty-five thousand pounds each, a ship with swimming tanks, greenhouses and a population equal to that of a small city.

Poor old "Behemoth," who impressed Job so deeply, would seem a very small thing compared to this modern Behemoth. The original Behemoth, who "drinketh up a river and hasteth not," could be tucked away in one of the coal bunkers of the Imperator, or burned up in one of the big furnaces and not noticed.

There are many wonderful things about that wonderful ship, with her five captains commanded by an admiral.

She is a great tribute to the power of the German people, a tribute to organization, a proof of the wonderful things that can be accomplished by men that are determined to excel.

But the best thing of all about this great ship is the motto written at her prow, "My field the world." That is a good motto, good for this ship that sails the ocean, good for the great philosopher, Bacon, when he said, "I have taken all knowledge for my province," and "nothing that affects man can be foreign to me."

It is a big motto, "My field the world." But not too big for a man who realizes that the world is man's property, his home and his garden, to be developed and owned by him, to be the firm ground from which he shall look out and study the real world, which is the infinite universe.

Every man worthy of the name should have in his mind that motto of the big ship, "My field the world," and interest himself in the world's doings, interest himself in the progress of the race, in its future and in its past, and determine to be a man whose field really IS the world, and not a mouse, whose field is the corner of some back yard.

A Shaken Confidence Must Be Restored

It will be a relief to the whole country to learn that the Diggs-Caminetti "white-slave" prosecutions in California are to be pressed with due diligence, despite the private pressure brought to bear on the Attorney General and others in Washington.

Indeed, such a course was inevitable the moment District Attorney John L. McNab, of the Northern District of California, made public his courageous letter of resignation to the President, thereby attracting public attention to a grave judicial scandal.

The expression of public opinion was both instant, widespread and practically unanimous. A flood of telegrams poured into the White House.

IT WILL TAKE MORE THAN AN ORDER FROM THE PRESIDENT to go ahead with all seemly speed with these cases, an order penned AFTER a storm of popular indignation had broken, TO RESTORE CONFIDENCE in the impartial workings of those courts of justice over which the Federal authorities have control and in those other officers of the Government who have shown such lax judgment on so serious an occasion.

Congress has the very urgent duty before it of not only establishing all the facts but also of FIXING THE RESPONSIBILITY AND THE BLAME.

:: THE OTHERS ::

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

ONE is the pride of the college,
Handsome and sunny and clever
Joking while gathering knowledge,
Slaving and worrying never.
Baseball and football and rowing,
Sanscrit and Latin and Greek—
Dazed by his wonderful showing,
All of the others stand meek.

One goes through life winning laurels,
Brilliant and able till death;
Proof against foes and their quarrels,
Crushing them all with a breath.
Much as a baby blows bubbles
One leaps along in the race,
Laughing at heartaches and troubles
All of the others must face.

This is a toast to the others,
Hewing their pathway through life—
All the less fortunate brothers
Comrades of sorrow and strife.
Standing and waiting and hoping,
Strangers to Fame and its pride,
Here's to the patiently groping!
Here's to the thousands that tried!

The Automobile

Everything Being Done to Make Automobiles Safe, He Says. They Have Done Wonders for American Roads.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

I WAS almost startled on seeing, in the current number of the magazine called Motor, a picture of an automobile furnished with the new French device of movable electric eyes!

Even when the auto's great glaring eyes are fixed in direction its resemblance at night to a demon of unimaginable swiftness and power is stunning, and one gets out of its way with panicky haste. But when it bears on each side of its head a glowing eye, which turns magically in all directions, searching out the fleeing pedestrian in his retreat by the fence or the hedge, and detecting every obstruction along the borders of its way, the verisimilitude is complete. Man has never yet made anything so thrillingly lifelike, but inspired with a life that seems more than human!

Everything Done for Safety.

Yet while, to the excited imagination, these movable mechanical eyes may increase the terror of the auto rushing through the night, they are, for all wanderers in the ways, all nomads of the night, a means and an assurance of greater safety. They proclaim, again, that the modern demon of the road is a kindly demon, who means no harm, although he speeds so swiftly, and who would not, willingly, hurt a hair of our heads. He is as desirous as are we who look upon him with fear, and jump at his croaking voice, to avoid all evil.

If those who still carp at the automobile, and nurse an antagonism to it, would consider what has been done, and what is still being done—as witness this latest device—to eliminate the peculiar dangers which its invention has introduced into the highways, they would find themselves taking a more philosophical view of things, and would cease their opposition to one of the greatest advances in locomotion that science has ever promoted. You have only to glance through the pages of the magazine I have mentioned in order to convince yourself that the inventors and manufacturers of auto vehicles hold nothing more dear than the question of safety; safety for those who ride and for those who only look upon the riders.

Put Bad Roads Out of Business.

It is the same with the roads themselves. Unthinking people sometimes blame the automobile for damaging the roads—as if most of the roads that we had before its arrival COULD be damaged! But, look at the other side of the affair. Only a few years ago every American traveling in Europe blushed at the thought of the painful contrast between the roads there and most of those that he was accustomed to at home. He could only console himself by the reflection that we were subduing a new continent, and required time to complete the work in good shape.

Then came the auto, and what has been the result? Within a few short years, solely by the stimulus that it has imparted, we have developed thousands upon thousands of miles of roadways that France herself might be proud of. This single invention has caused a leap of improvement that hundreds of years of ordinary progress would not have produced. The automobile has put the old, muddy, rutty, all but impassable roads of our fathers out of commission, and the whole country smiles with the improvement, and grows richer because of it.

Speaking of French roads, I read another interesting thing, which must be set down entirely to the credit of the automobile. We are now building better roads than they have in France, and the reason is because we have built them from the beginning with the needs of the auto in view. It has taught us how to build them. Many of the French roads are beginning to deteriorate. It is the automobile that has searched out and revealed their weak points. The growing use of auto-carriages of all kinds in the French army has brought a strain to bear upon the roads lying in the districts where the threat of invasion causes frequent military maneuvers in time of peace—a strain that was not foreseen when the roads were constructed—and some of them are proving unable to bear it.

Recognizes Their Value.

What will the French do? Will they abandon the army autos, or intermit the maneuvers? To do so would be to invite instant conquest of their country. No, they will reconstruct the roads, and increase the number of their auto cars. They know the inestimable value of the good demon that has come to revolutionize transportation on this planet, and the roads will have to be made durable enough to carry him on his civilizing and peace-promoting way; for the auto, in its manner, is as great a force for universal peace as is the strong battleship. Everything that links the world together makes for universal brotherhood, and the faster we travel the richer and more contented we become.

:: The Ionian Isles ::

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

IT was just 49 years ago that the Parliament of England with a never-to-be-forgotten magnanimity, resolved to return the Ionian Isles to their oldtime owners, the Greeks.

By the Treaty of Paris, in 1815, the high contracting parties, Great Britain, Russia, Austria and Prussia, agreed to place the isles under the exclusive protection of Great Britain. This agreement was reached not because it was desired by the others, but because it was demanded by Great Britain, the demand being backed by the British navy.

It was in these "Isles of Greece," Corfu, Zanta, Santa Maura, Ithaca and the rest, that modern Greek liberty had its birth, and thanks to England, it was there that it grew to the stately proportions of later years. Great Britain, through her protectorate, kept the islands safe from Turkish depredations, and in 1864 gave them to Greece.

On May 30 of that year the Lord High Commissioner of Great Britain handed over the archives to the Greek plenipotentiary, and on June 6 King George made his entry into Corfu.

Let it be remembered that this Corfu is none other than the ancient Coreyra—the little piece of earth that is responsible for the greatest calamity that ever overtook the human race. Coreyra brought on the Peloponnesian war between Sparta and Athens and their allies, the result of which was the ruin of Athens and the arrest of her wonderful civilization. Had it not been for that war the Athenian genius would have kept on with its development for we know not how long a period, and the gain to humanity would have been inconceivably great. From the cultural standpoint Athens was Greece. It was the home of the art, science, philosophy and eloquence, which made Greece immortal, and when Athens went down all that was not barbarism went down along with her.

Because Coreyra appealed to Sparta to help her fight Athens, and because, as a consquence of the fight, Athens was beaten and her empire practically wiped out, the harm was done to mankind that can never be estimated. It took the world eighteen hundred years to recover, even in part, that which was lost through the fatal Peloponnesian war.

::: LETTERS FROM THE GEORGIAN'S READERS ::

COFFEE.

Editor The Georgian:

What is the matter with the pure food inspector? Is he asleep on his job, that so many brands of adulterated coffee are suffered to be sold to the poor? Ever so many of them have chicory; and in color give a beautiful nut-brown result, but to an inveterate drinker of coffee they are as lifeless as turnip soup.

Suppose the inspector thinks that if people know what they are buying, it is all right. But how about the boarder, when it is passed off on him for coffee? And the temptation is too great, these days of high-priced food to buy the cheaper article.

CAR SERVICE AND STORMS.

Editor The Georgian:

It seems to me the public has a just cause of complaint regarding the street car service which is given them in this city during thunderstorms. It has, during the past few years, become the custom of the Georgia Railway and Power Company to suspend service during even very mild thunderstorms, and with proper equipment this practice seems to be without reason or excuse.

So far as my observation goes, it is not done in any other first-class town, and no sufficient reason has ever been given for doing it in Atlanta. People need the street car service as much when there is a rainstorm accompanied by lightning as at other times.
