'I AM READY FOR TRIAL,' SAYS FRANK

TELEPHONE GIRLS HELP POLICE TRAP BURGLARS

THIEF SHOT RESISTING ARREST

Trio of Robbers Surprised as They Are Looting Store Caught in Long Chase.

The presence of mind of half a dozen girls employed at the Atlanta Telephone Exchange, at Ivy and Edgewood streets, in notifying the police when they saw burglars breaking into the candy store of Michael Koliff, across the street, resulted in the capture of two negro burglars early Wednesday morning.

In the chase and battle which followed the arrival of the police one of the negroes, Will Wauker, was shot in the right leg by Call Officer Watson, but was not wounded seriously.

The other negro, Dave Smith, was found hiding in a cellar on Houston street half an hour later by Plain Clothes Officer Gresham and Captain Mayo.

The police declare that the burglars would have escaped with their booty had it not been for the telephone gi and Chief of Police Beavers has extended his personal thanks and congratulations to the girls for their presence of mind.

Heard Glass Crash.

The young women, while working at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday morning, heard the sound of breaking glass as the burglars smashed the window of the candy store.

Looking out of the exchange window the grils saw the two men enter a store. A third posted himself on the corner as lookout.

While several of the young women watched the burglars, another of the girls telephoned police headquarters and notified the police.

Assistant Chief Jett, Captain Mayo, Call Officers Watson and Anderson and Policeman McWilliams went to the scene in an automobile. As the car, driven at top speed, dashed up to the front of the candy store, the negro who stood on the sidewalk saw the officers coming and ran. The police, thinking he was the only man in the job, started in pursuit, but were called back by the telephone girls, who were gathered at the windows of the plant.

Call Policemen Back.

"Come back," they cried, "there are two others in the store!"

As the car turned and started hurriedly back to the store, two negroes dashed out of the front door and ran up Ivy street, with the police in pursuit. The negroes turned down Auburn avenue and ran to the plant of the Coca-Cola Bottling Company, where they separated.

One of them disappeared in the darkness, but the other was seen to run around to the back of the plant. The police surrounded the place, and Captain Mayo went into the darkness after him.

He flushed the negro in a few minutes, and the burglar ran out into the open on the rear side of the plant, directly toward Officer Watson.

Leaps at Policeman.

The policeman yelled three times at the negro to halt. The burglar, however, continued to advance, and as he struck at the officer, Watson leaped aside and fired, the bullet penetrating the negro's leg.

The wounded negro was sent to the Grady Hospital in the automobile, and the police continued their search for the other burglar. Half an hour later Captain Mayo and Officer Gresham found him crouched in the darkness of a cellar on Houston street. Gresham came upon the negro suddenly, and the burglar, probably thinking the officer was alone, leaped up with a curse.

Gresham covered him with his revolver, but the negro continued to advance. As Gresham was about to fire, Captain Mayo came up and covered the negro and he surrendered.

When the automobile, crowded with police and prisoners, passed the telephone exchange en route back to the station, they were applauded by the young women who crowded the windows and who were responsible for the capture of the two negroes.

Port Tampa Negro Shoots 3 Whites; 2 Victims May Die

TAMPA, July 23.—Three white men, Ernest Chaney, Walter Chaney and T. B. Austin, were shot by Columbus Hawkins, a negro, at Port Tampa to-day.

The three white men, with G. C. Mead, went to Hawkins' house, in the negro quarter, at an early hour to collect a debt which they say Charles Bell, another negro, owed Austin. When they rapped at Hawkins' back door he told them Bell was not there. They went to the front door and were met by Hawkins. He claims they began to shoot, and shows a small wound in his finger as proof.

Hawkins opened fire, wounding three of the four. All of his five bullets found a target. All of the white men are seriously hurt and it would not be surprising if Ernest Chaney and Austin die. They had been drinking.

Marshal Walker found Bell in the house and rushed him and Hawkins to the county jail here to avoid trouble.

Somewhere in the United States a Russian emigrant named Trooshkovsky died a few years ago, leaving a vast fortune, and in the effort to locate in whose hands the estate is now being held, W. Trooshkovsky, of St. Petersburg, Russia, has implored the assistance of Governor Slaton.

While such information would not be in the Governor's office, through newspaper publicity Governor Slaton hopes to be able to furnish the information requested if Trooshkovsky lived in Georgia. Any person having information is requested to communicate with the Governor.

The County Court dismissed a charge brought against the Chief by Merritt, who accused Ferguson of making undue advances to Merritt's wife.

Ferguson was the low man among seven candidates for the nomination for Chief in yesterday's primary. John W. Watson was renominated for Mayor.

FRIEDMANN 'CURE' FAILS THORNTON

Young Atlanta Banker Sinks Rapidly and Dies at Asheville Following New Treatment.

Bitter arraignment of Dr. Franz Friedrich Friedmann, the German scientist and discoverer of a serum hailed as a curative of tuberculosis, followed the death of Austell Thornton, one of the best-known young bankers in Atlanta, near Asheville, N. C., early Wednesday morning.

Thornton's death was the result of tuberculosis, which set in following an attack of pneumonia eighteen months ago. When Dr. Friedmann came to this country last winter with his serum, heralded as a cure for consumptives, Thornton went to New York and underwent the treatment.

While Dr. Friedmann used the Bellevue Hospital there in demonstrating his cures, he also did a great deal of work in hotels among patients who flocked to Manhattan from all over the United States.

Treated by Friedmann.

Thornton received his injections at the hotel where he was stopping, and it is said that Dr. Friedmann himself administered them. It is also declared that the German physician charged young Thornton a fabulous price for the treatment, one person Wednesday morning placing the sum at $3,500.

Thornton ended his treatments and left New York three months ago in the belief that the serum would prove a curative, as it had been claimed. The only improvement at all noticeable was a lessening of the fever.

"I am firmly convinced," said S. H. Venable, an uncle of Thornton's widow, that the Friedmann treatment hastened Thornton's end. When he went to New York to take the injections the young man was not in a dangerous condition, still almost immediately after he left New York after the serum had been injected into him he began to grow weaker. The plague's ravages were more noticeable."

Mr. Thornton was about 31 years old, and had resided in Atlanta since childhood. Six years ago he married Miss Bob Venable.

He was prominent in society and club circles, being a member of the Piedmont Driving Club, the Capital City Club and of practically every other prominent social organization of the city.

The funeral will be held Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock from the family home, No. 611 Peachtree street. Interment private at Oakland.

Mr. Thornton was one of the best known citizens of Atlanta, and at the time of his death was a director in the Atlanta National Bank. He had large private interests and at one time was president of the Pine Mountain Granite Company. He was educated at the University of Georgia. His father, the late A. B. Thornton, was also a director in the Atlanta National.

He is survived by his widow and two children; also his mother, Mrs. Albert Thornton; his brother, Albert Thornton, and his sister, Miss Janie Thornton, all of Atlanta.

Shoots Stepmother To Reunite Parents

BASS LAKE, IND., July 23.—Martin Strasburger tried to kill his stepmother and then ended his own life, that the way might be cleared for a reconciliation between his father and divorced mother.

This is the theory held by many here as the solution of the double shooting at Frank Strasburger's country home, in which the second Mrs. Strasburger was wounded and Strasburger's son Martin killed himself.

RIVALRY, MINUS DISCORD, ABOUNDS IN BOOSTER BUTTON BEAUTY RACE

Candidates for sponsorship of 500,000 Club growing numerous.

Miss Maud Steele, new entry of brunette type and one of prettiest in contest.

Veritable Shower of Coupon Votes Received, Showing Enthusiasm in Competition.

Rivalry in Atlanta's booster button beauty contest threatens to equal that immortal mythological event in which Ate, Goddess of Discord, dropped a golden apple at the feet of Paris marked for the fairest one.

But no such disastrous result as the destruction of Troy is expected unless Birmingham or Memphis should steal Atlanta's prettiest girl and then outrank the Gate City in the census of 1920.

Atlantans fell sure that the girl elected the sponsor of the "500,000 Booster Club" will glory in her leadership and be present to act as queen of the celebration when the 500,000 population is counted in 1920.

One of the fairest candidates nominated Wednesday is Miss Maud Steele, of 9 Venable street. She is a brunette, though not extreme, and gives the brunette almost an equal place with the blondes in the number of candidates.

Each day brings in new candidates, and a snowstorm of coupon votes for the favorites. It is a wonderful contest indeed. But why shouldn't it be?

The prettiest girl in Atlanta! Just think of it.

Lull in War Over Control of Police

JACKSONVILLE, July 23.—There is a lull in the fight between Mayor Swearingen and the bond trustees today over the control of the police department. No charges have been filed against Chief Roach, and the Mayor has not decided as to when he will act.

The trustees are standing pat and say they will not permit Roach to be dismissed for political reasons.

Hill, district engineer of the Geological Survey, made here today.

Bacon, Needed at Capital, Unable to Address Assembly

Senator Bacon will not be able to address the General Assembly of Georgia in response to the invitation extended him last week, on account of the absolute necessity of every Democratic Senator being in Washington while the tariff bill is before Congress.

In a letter expressing deep regret, Senator Bacon also inclosed a letter from Senator Kern urging him not to leave the National Capital at this time because of the existing strained relations with certain nations.

The letter was read in the House and Senate Wednesday morning, and resolutions of regret at Senator Bacon's forced declination were adopted.

The rest of the day the Cardinal passed in repose. He received many telegrams and letters of felicitation, including a cablegram from the Pope and rulers of Europe.

TRACE FOUND HERE OF NEGRO SAID TO HAVE SEEN PHAGAN SLAYING

Sister of Will Green Tells Police He Slept at Home at Hour Girl Was Slain; Jim Conley, Factory Sweeer Again Grilled.

Here are Wednesday's important developments in the Phagan murder mystery:

Bloodstained glove of Mary Phagan is said to have been found on the first floor near the place the discovery of her pay envelope was made.

New evidence is found tending to establish the identity of the negro, Will Green, said to have seen the attack upon Mary Phagan.

Newt Lee, negro night watchman at the pencil factory, undergoes a grilling examination at the hands of Solicitor General Dorsey and his associate counsel, Frank A. Hooper.

J. M. Gantt, expected to give sensational evidence for the prosecution at the trial, is in conference with the solicitor and present at the grilling of Lee.

Leo M. Frank tells Sheriff Mangum that he is eager for the trial to begin, and will be ready when it is called Monday morning.

Solicitor Dorsey announces that he will insist that there be no further delay.

It became known Wednesday that the defense in the Frank case had been informed that the negro, Will Green, who is said to have been shooting craps with Jim Conley the day that Mary Phagan was murdered and to have seen her attacked, and the Wil lGreen living at 105 Thurmond street, Atlanta, are the same person.

Private detectives in the employ of the defense have trailed the negro across a half-dozen States and have missed him by as small a margin as 30 minutes in some of the towns they have visited in the chase.

Trailed by a Ring.

Charles Fine, proprietor of the Radius Jewelry Company, No. 107 Peachtree street, when he read in The Georgian that the defense was searching for a Will Green, recalled that he had a ring in his store which was to have been called for by a negro of the same name, but which unaccountably had been left there without a claimant. He regarded this as peculiar, and notified persons interested in the defense.

A negro calling himself J. Will Green visited the store May 16 and displayed a rather ornate gold ring, worth probably $12 or $15. He desired to have a Radius diamond set in it, and said that he would be around within a day or two after it. He never returned. It was about this time that the report spread around the city that the Phagan murder had had an eyewitness in the person of a negro who was shooting craps with Conley.

A sister of the Will Green who left the ring at the jewelry store was seen Wednesday. She said that her brother had left town about two months ago and that none of the family had heard from him since or had any idea where he was. She said he was working with some small circus or theatrical troupe when he left.

Sister Offers an Alibi.

The Green that the detectives have been pursuing is known to be connected with a circus or show, additional strength thus being given to the theory that their identity is the same.

She thought the detectives were mistaken in believing that her brother knew anything about the crime. He slept practically all the day that Mary Phagan was murdered, she declared, and didn't even go downtown to see the Memorial Day parade, although he was urged by one of his friends. He was working nights for the Southern Railway at this time, according to the sister, joining the show people a few days later.

She failed to explain why he suddenly had left town without stopping to recover the gold ring of considerable value which he had left at the Fine jewelry store.

Gantt Sees Solicitor.

J. M. Gantt, a discharged employee of the National Pencil Factory, who Wednesday conferred with Solicitor General Dorsey and Attorney Frank A. Hooper, denied that he made the startling statement to them that he saw at 1 o'clock on the day that Mary Phagan was murdered Jim Conley and Leo Frank conversing together in Frank's office.

Intimation that Gantt contemplated making such a statement to the prosecution is said to have come to the defense in an anonymous letter some time ago. The writer said in effect:

"I was standing on the street the other day and heard Gantt talking to some other fellow. He told this fellow that he had stood across the street Saturday, April 26, and had looked through the window of the factory and seen Jim Conley talking to Frank in Frank's office.

"I don't think Gantt has told this to the Solicitor yet, and, as he is not in very good financial condition, I think that he might be persuaded to keep it quiet if he was sent a little money."

No attention was paid to the letter.

Lee Grilled Again.

Gantt, the Solicitor and attorney were in the jail together. They remained two and a quarter hours questioning Newt Lee closely. They went over practically the same ground that was covered in the inquest, quizzing him about his actions the day of the murder and his whereabouts every minute during the time before he reported at the factory and about Frank's manner when he met him at the factory.

Lee stuck to his previous story, and declared that he knew nothing about the crime until he came upon the body that night. They asked him how he happened to go into the basement at that time, and he made the same explanation that he gave before the Coroner's Jury.

Lee said that he did not see Conley there that night and did not even know Conley by sight. In the afternoon it was planned to take Conley from the police station to the jail to confront Lee and question the two together.

Lanford Scouts Bludgeon Evidence.

Chief of Detectives Newport Lanford Wednesday morning ridiculed the story that the defense of Leo M. Frank has in its possession a bloody club, alleged to have been found by two Pinkerton detectives on May 10 in the National Pencil factory, and with which, it is reported, the defense will contend Mary Phagan was slain by James Conley, the negro sweeper.

Asserting that he knows nothing whatever of the alleged bloody club, Chief Lanford declared that, if Pinkerton detectives found such a weapon on May 10, or any other date, they had failed to report the fact to him. Failure to officially report such a find would be regarded as a breach of the pact between the city detectives and the Pinkertons, as the latter officers, while employed by the pencil factory, have been working hand in hand with city detectives, with the understanding that any evidence they unearthed would be communicated to detective headquarters.

Has Received No Report.

"If Pinkerton detectives found a bloody club in the pencil factory they certainly should have reported that fact to me at once—I have received no such report," said Chief Lanford.

The police regard as significant the attitude of Harry Scott, who is managing the Pinkerton investigation, and who, subsequent to May 10, has continued to assert his belief in the guilt of Frank.

Chief Lanford characterized the alleged finding of the club as an "absurdity," and scouted the idea of it having any bearing on the case. He is satisfied, he said, that it will never figure as evidence.

The chief said the only club found in the pencil factory, of which he had any knowledge, was a small section of broom handle, about a foot in length, which hung by a cord beside the desk of Leo M. Frank in the latter's private office.

Broom Handle Was Found.

This "club" bore no blood stains, he said, and showed no evidence of having ever been used as a weapon in any way. It was too light to have done any damage had a blow been struck with it, he said.

Chief Lanford treated the bloody club story in the manner of a joke.

"Do you see a club there?" remarked the Chief, pointing to a perfectly clear spot on his office floor, when asked as to the reported find by the Pinkertons.

"Well, that's the answer," he continued. "There is just as much of a bloody club lying there on that floor as there was on the floor of the pencil factory, where it is said the Pinkertons found their bloody club. The whole thing is absurd and will have no bearing whatever on the case of Frank. I'm satisfied this mysterious club will never be introduced in evidence.

No Weapon Was Found.

"When it is recalled that the very spot that yielded up this bloody club was searched thoroughly more than a dozen times by numerous officers prior to May 10 and no club nor other weapon was found, the ridiculousness of this story is apparent. We searched that factory from top to bottom and bottom to top, closely investigating every conceivable place for weapons or any other bit of evidence that might throw light on the mystery, and yet no club was found.

"There's absolutely nothing to it.

"In Frank's private office we found a small piece of broomstick, hanging by a cord beside his desk. There were no blood stains on it, and it showed no evidence of having been used as a weapon. In the first place, it was too light to serve as a weapon. This was the only club found in the factory at the time any possible weapons should have been found and would have been found."

Date Still in Doubt.

Reuben Arnold said Wednesday that the defense would ask for no continuance of the Frank case except for such imperative reasons as the absence of material witnesses or the illness of counsel. Luther Rosser, chief of counsel, also has indicated that no move will be made by the defense for further delay in the trial unless an emergency arises of the sort described by Attorney Arnold.

Informal conferences between the counsel in the Crawford will case and those in the Frank case, in both of which Rosser and Arnold appear as attorneys, have resulted in the announcement that the persons interested in the Crawford hearing are willing to waive the priority of their case and permit the Frank trial to go on Monday.

Breakfasters Eat On Calmly as Fire Is Fought in Cafe

Fire which broke out in the ceiling of Durand's Restaurant shortly before 7:30 o'clock Wednesday morning failed to take the appetite from a dozen men, who calmly continued eating their breakfast while firemen swarmed the room. Even when the firemen mounted ladders and began hacking at the ceiling the diners were not dismayed.

The fire was of little consequence, the ceiling catching probably from a defective wire near the flue of the warming retainer. The call brought out every central company, though, while a great crowd of early morning workers gathered.

SENATE ACTS TO ENFORCE WEBB LIQUOR LAW

Passes Hixon-Searcy Bill—Fight Rages Over 3-Gallon Burden of Proof Clause.

By a vote of 36 to 3 the Senate Wednesday afternoon passed the Hixon-Searcy prohibition bill providing for the enforcement of the Webb bill in Georgia.

The bill makes it unlawful for any firm or corporation to transport liquor into the State for illegal purposes and places the burden of proof of such legality upon the shipper when quantities in excess of three gallons are shipped.

Three-Gallon Clause Attacked.

It was around the three-gallon provision as recommended in the Temperance Committee substitute that the fight centered Wednesday morning. Senator Hixon, chairman of the committee and author of the original bill, and Senator Searcy, vice chairman of the committee, opposed this provision on the ground that the whole burden of proof should be placed on the carrier.

This was vigorously opposed, however, by Senator McNeill, of the Twenty-second, a member of the committee, who declared that such a provision was an unjust burden upon the carrier.

Senator Harrell, of the Twelfth, also opposed the Hixon-Searcy measure, declaring that the measure was an effort to punish the innocent carrier rather than the illegal "blind tiger" within the State.

Increase in Crime Charged.

As the bill stands the burden of proof of illegal sale is placed on the State when quantities less than three gallons are shipped into the State. Several amendments, including those of Senator Hixon, striking out the three-gallon clause, were voted down before the final passage of the bill.

In the course of the debate sensational statements were made by Senator McNeil, "a prohibitionist in restriction," who declared that under the present prohibition law with its "nefarious results," felonies in the State had increased 66 per cent.

APPEAL IN W. & A. CASE ORDERED BY SLATON

Governor Upsets Predecessor's Precedent by Carrying Suit to U. S. Supreme Court.

Governor Slaton Wednesday morning instructed Attorney General Thomas S. Felder and James K. Hines, special attorney for the Railroad Commission, to appeal to the United States Supreme Court in the State's suit against the Western and Atlantic Railroad Company, seeking to restrain the company from charging higher rates than those fixed by the Georgia standard tariff and classification.

The appeal for injunction by the State was turned down by the Superior and Supreme Courts.

Governor Slaton's act is directly contrary to that of Governor Brown, who, when the State Supreme Court ruled against the State, instructed the Attorney General not to appeal, holding it would be of no avail.

The Governor acted upon the advice of the Attorney General and Mr. Hines, who, immediately after his inauguration, urged him to order an appeal.

SECOND CHAPTER IN PHAGAN MYSTERY

The Discovery of the Body of the Slain Factory Girl and Start of Hunt for Slayer.

CHAPTER II.

His heart pounding in superstitious fright, Newt Lee, the night watchman, forced himself to approach the strange object on the pile of debris in the pencil factory basement. A step nearer and he could make out what appeared to be a human foot. He recoiled and was on the point of precipitate flight.

But he must look closer, he thought. Perhaps, after all, it was only the ghastly prank of some of the factory employees who had manufactured a rude effigy and placed it there to scare him.

Determinedly he walked closer and thrust his lantern out over the mysterious object. He shrieked. Before his horrified eyes the shaky and uncertain light of his lantern disclosed the body of a little girl.

Grimed, bloody and mutilated the body lay on the flat of its back, as the terrified negro remembered it afterward, although the police, coming a few minutes later, found the body on its face, one arm drawn slightly up under the body and the other stretched full length at the side.

Discrepancy Not Explained.

This strange discrepancy never has been explained to the public except by the possibility that Lee, in his terror, was mistaken in the position he believed the body was in when he discovered it. Conley, telling his remarkable story three weeks later, said that he dumped the girl's body face downward on the trash pile where it later was come upon by Lee.

Lee was to oappalled by his grewsome find to make a close investigation. He only saw that it was a little white girl and that she had been murdered. With frightened steps he hurried to the ladder at the other end of the basement. He was in a panic. He scuttled up the ladder and dropped the trap door over it. He felt a bit relieved away from the blackness of the basement and the awful thing that it contained.

In a moment he remembered that Mr. Frank had told him that when anything happened at the factory to call the police. The telephone at police headquarters rang at 3:30 o'clock. Policeman Anderson answered it perfunctorily. Suddenly he straightened in his chair, his indifference dropping from him in a flash.

"What's that? What's that?" he shouted, trying to make out the incoherent message of the negro at the other end of the wire. Finally he understood that a girl had been killed and that her body was lying in the basement of the National Pencil Factory on Forsyth street.

Police Rush to Scene.

"There's been a murder, fellows," he exclaimed, slamming the receiver on the hook. "Boots" Rogers was in the station. His automobile stood in front. The two men rushed out and jumped into the car. In the still morning hours, they dashed toward the scene of the tragedy. Sergeants Dobbs and Brown stood conversing at Pryor and Decatur streets. An instant's stop was made and the two officers leaped into the car.

The automobile sped on to Forsyth street, and then down to the bleak, gray building from which only one dim light flickered. The car had barely stopped before the men were out of it, and on the sidewalk. They tried the door and it was locked. They rattled it impatiently and in a moment the figure of the still frightened negro, swinging his smoky lantern, was seen coming down the stairs that lead from the second floor.

"Where's the body?" was the first question they shot at him.

Already the negro was under the shadow of suspicion.

"Come this way," Lee replied, and led the way to the opening into the dark basement.

Into the Dark Basement.

One by one the officers descended the narrow ladder into the inky darkness, unrelieved except by the single gas jet, which was turned so low that the negro Lee described it as a "lightning bug." Dobbs and Brown, with the negro, took the lead. Straight to the huddled, tragic form the black man guided the men. Sergeant Brown took one look.

"My God, it's only a child!" he exclaimed.

And the child was little Mary Phagan, who had gone forth from home the day before filled with the happiness of youth and untouched by any thought of harm or evil.

The change was terrible. In the tortured form that lay cold in the factory basement could hardly be recognized the fresh, pretty girl that came to Atlanta the day before to draw her pay and take childish delight in the Memorial Day parade.

The brute who slew her had worked a sickening transformation in her features. The smiling, innocent face was bruised, swollen and discolored. Cinders and black dirt were ground into the tender face so that at first it was almost impossible to tell whether she was black or white.

Dragged About the Floor.

She appeared to have been dragged across the basement floor by her murderer with as little feeling as is given a sheep in the shambles.

Blood from an ugly wound in the back of the head soaked and matted the pretty hair that, with girlish vanity, had been carefully brushed and tied with twin blue ribbons on each side of her head when she left home.

A length of heavy cord was looped about her neck, and the deep purple imprints in her flesh told that her assailant had used this either to drag her across the floor or to strangle her to death. If the story of the negro Conley is found to be true, the body was not dragged in the basement. A clumsy gag, torn from her dress, was bound around her head.

The pongee silk lavender dress which Mary proudly had donned for the holiday was torn and bloodstained. The twin bows of blue had been kept in place by the gag bound around her head. One little slipper was on her right foot and the other was found a few feet away. Her hat was found near the elevator shaft.

Basement Is Searched.

When the policemen had recovered from their first horror, they set out at once to investigate. They had hardly begun a search of the basement before their eyes lighted on two bits of paper by the side of the body. These contained the mysterious incoherent notes which were to play such a large part in the progress of the investigation.

This is the manner in which one of the almost illegible scrawls was deciphered:

"He said he wood love me laid down like the night witch did it, but that long tall black negro did it by hisself."

The other read:

"Mama that negro hired down here did this I went to get water and he pushed me down this hole a long tall negro black that has it woke long lean tall negro I write while play with me."

By daybreak the police and detective departments were in a turmoil of excitement.

Lee Put Under Arrest.

Newt Lee, the only person at the time known to have been in the factory while the murdered girl was there, was placed under immediate arrest, being taken directly from the factory to the police station. The dragnet was spread for other suspects. Leo Frank had been called from the factory by Policeman Anderson, but no answer came to the telephone. Early in the morning an automobile was sent to his house and he was brought to the police station to tell all he knew in order to assist the officers in their search for the criminal.

Soon after daybreak the news spread that a terrible murder had been committed; that a 14-year-old girl had been attacked and strangled in the National Pencil factory. Crowds of morbidly curious began to gather about the factory. They pressed their way into the front door and swarmed down into the cellar. Officers had difficulty in handling them.

Who the victim of the tragedy was the officers had not yet succeeded in establishing. Someone had said he thought it was a girl by the name of "Fagan," but no one was certain. Grace Hicks, of No. 100 McDonough road, one of the girl employees of the factory, was brought from her home by "Boots" Rogers to identify the body.

Girl Identifies Victim.

She looked at the swollen face and at the little gold bracelet imbedded in the flesh of the arm.

"It's Mary Phagan," she cried, and fainted.

She had been a warm friend of the murdered girl and at one time had worked by her side.

One of the most pathetic scenes was enacted when 12-year-old Vera Epps, who had been a chum and playmate of the Phagan girl since Mary had moved to Atlanta, visited the morgue and looked upon the distorted features of her little friend.

She burst into hysterical weeping and would not be comforted. She probably did not comprehend the full tragedy, but she knew that her playmate had been taken from her in a terrible manner and that some man fiendishly and ruthlessly had strangled her to death. Her father and mother were with her. They tried to get her to leave the room where the body lay, but she stayed on for more than an hour.

Cries Out for Vengeance.

Childish rage was added to her sorrow and she cried for vengeance.

"I'd help lynch the man that killed poor Mary," she cried, clenching her little hands in fury. "If they'd just let me I'd like to hold the rope that choked him to death. That's all he deserves. I was playing with Mary only a few days ago. She was my playmate nearly every day, but when I saw her dead body I hardly would have known her."

A grief-stricken home on Lindsay street received the news of Mary Phagan's fate that morning. Mrs. Coleman, her mother, had been frantic with anxiety when Mary had failed to return home the night before. Mary had said that she would return directly after the Memorial Day parade. She never had failed in any of her promises.

But the mother remembered that Mary had remarked about wanting to go to the Bijou. Possibly she had met some of her girl companions and they had gone to the entertainment in the evening. She sent Mr. Coleman to town to wait at the door of the theater. He waited until long after the crowd had filed out, but Mary did not come. Mrs. Phagan slept hardly at all that night.

Mother Had Premonition.

Mary probably had gone to the home of one of her friends, she tried to assure herself, but a deadly weight of fear oppressed her in spite of all her efforts to shake it off. She would doze into a troubled slumber only to awake with a premonition that harm had come to her child.

When a knock came at the door that morning she answered with a sinking heart.

Helen Ferguson, a girl living nearby, stood there with the tragic message on her lips.

"Mary is——" she started to say.

"Not dead?" shrieked Mrs. Coleman, knowing too well that it was so. Other members of the family rushed to the door and they were told the meager facts as they were known then, only that Mary's dead body had been found in the basement of the factory and that she plainly had been murdered.

Mrs. Coleman swooned and for days she was unable to do more than walk about the house and moan for her little girl.

Aroused by the shocking crime, practically the entire detective force was sent out to capture the murderer of the girl. It was only the matter of a few hours before the police station was filled with persons who declared that they had seen Mary Phagan some time on the day that she was slain or that they had seen a girl of about her age with one or more men at various times of the night.

Every Clew Run Down.

The detectives were hampered as much as they were aided by these well meaning persons. They were forced to investigate every story that had any semblance of furnishing a clew to the mystery. Hours that day were wasted in looking up tales of suspicious occurrences on the streets of Atlanta that Saturday night.

Newt Lee, already in custody, was kept under a running fire of questions, but maintained, even when he broke down and wept, that he knew absolutely nothing about the crime except that he found the body in the basement.

A traveling man told the detectives that he saw a girl he was certain was Mary Phagan standing in front of the factory Saturday afternoon talking to a man. Another person told a story of seeing three men, intoxicated and reeling, leading a little girl in short dress, near midnight Saturday. The girl, he said, appeared reluctant to go with them and was crying.

Another story that had to be investigated was that a girl of Mary Phagan's age had been seen talking to a man on the sidewalk near the pencil factory at a late hour Saturday night, and that she seemed to be trying to get away from him.

The police at this time were ready to credit the story that the girl had been lured to the factory at night and there attacked and killed. Nothing as yet had developed to substantiate the theory that she never had left the building after she entered it Saturday noon to obtain her pay envelope.

Startling Story Told.

After scores of persons had related suspicious incidents that they had observed came the most startling story of all. It was that Mary had been seen on the street at about 12:30 Saturday night by an acquaintance who actually had spoken to her and had received a reply.

E. L. Sentell, an employee of Kamper's grocery, was the informant. He had known Mary Phagan for years, he said. He was walking on Forsyth street that night when he was attracted by the sight of a man coming down the street walking with a little girl in short dresses. As a girl of this age was an uncommon sight on the street at this hour of night, he waited as they approached. He was startled to recognize Mary Phagan in the little girl. He knew that her parents were not accustomed to let her go out at this late hour.

He spoke to her as she and the man passed.

"Hello, Mary," he said.

"Hello, Ed," she replied.

This is the sensational story that he told. Unquestionably, the man she was with must be the man who knew about her death. A clew to his supposed identity was obtained. Sentell was positive he could recognize the man when he faced him. The news spread like wildfire that an arrest was to be made and that the man to be taken was without doubt the one who had lured Mary Phagan to the factory and killed her.

Within an hour the waiting crowds at the police station saw the officers arriving with their prisoner.

ATTACK BURLESON FOR POST RATE CUT

Certain Members of Congress Also Oppose Increase in Maximum Size of Parcels.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—Postmaster General Burleson has been requested by the Senate Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads to appear before the committee Thursday and explain his order reducing parcel post rates and increasing the maximum size packages to be carried by that service from 11 to 20 pounds. This order is to become effective August 15.

Certain members of Congress, including members of the Senate committee, are opposed to this new order of the Postmaster General.

Senator Bryan said to-day:

"I think that the order of the Postmaster General at this time was illadvised. I intend to use every effort to get my bill repealing that section of the law which the Postmaster General claims gives him authority to change the rates passed by Congress before his order can go into effect."

Hatpin Stab May Cause Man's Death

SAVANNAH, July 23.—As a result of what may have been a hatpin wound in the arm, a Greek named Ricardos is in the Oglethorpe Hospital in a critical condition. Double pneumonia has set in, and it is not expected that he will recover.

The police are investigating a report that the Greek was jabbed in the arm by a woman with a hatpin.

BURGLAR ADMITS SUIT CASE THEFTS

Miller, Caught Robbing Store, Confesses When Accused by Detective Who Posed as Pal.

R. W. Miller, held by the police on a charge of breaking into Gober's store, at No. 30 Carroll street, confessed to numerous thefts of suit cases from passenger stations when confronted with a member of the detective force who had been masquerading with him as a pal, according to the police.

P. W. Reeves, captured with Miller, grew sullen during the grilling and would say nothing. Chief Lanford told of the new evidence Wednesday.

When Miller and Reeves were trapped Monday night a third man escaped through a window. At the police station the pair denied all guilt. Then the detective, whose name Chief Lanford refuses to disclose, confronted them. Reeves branded the detective a liar. For a moment violence was feared.

Miller's home, near Red Oak, was searched Tuesday afternoon. A suit case and a pair of white canvas shoes, stolen from the Terminal station on July 4, were found.

Miller and Reeves will be arraigned before Recorder Broyles Thursday.

WOMEN SOUGHT FOR THEFT OF HEIRLOOMS

Georgian Want Ad Reveals Disappearance of Silver in Bank Rest Room.

Loss of a package of old and extremely valuable silverware has resulted in a search for two young women who are believed to have picked up the valuables.

The package disappeared several days ago while the owner was in the rest room of the Third National Bank Building, and it is believed that two young women who were in the room at the time and who are not employed in the building, walked away with it.

The loss has been attracting attention by the appearance of a unique advertisement in the loss column of The Georgian, reading, "The lady who removed silverware from rest room in the Third National Bank Building will avoid trouble by returning immediately to Room 1405, Third National Bank Building."

The silverware bears the monogram of "C," engraved on it a century ago. The package contained a number of spoons, sugar shells and other pieces. They were heirlooms and highly prized.

It is probable that arrests will follow unless the silverware is returned, as the owner is sure she can identify the young women who were in the reat room.

SAYS HIS BRIDE PUT GLASS IN HIS COFFEE

E. R. Sweat, Seeking Divorce, Bares What He Declares Was Attempt on His Life.

That his bride of six months placed pulverized glass in his coffee with the evident purpose of killing him is one of the sensational charges made in a suit for divorce filed Wednesday by E. R. Sweat, of No. 33 Gresham street, through his attorney, S. A. Boorstin.

Sweat claims that persecutions at the hands of his wife, of which the alleged attempt to administer the ground glass was the climax, have left him a nervous wreck and unfit for work.

They were wed February 8, after a romantic courtship. Married life soon palled on the wife, according to Sweat. Her ill treatment of him began before a month had passed, he says. She reproved him one day, he recites, by slapping him in the face in the presence of strangers. Then she grew more persistent.

Sweat swears that she would sleep the whole day for the sole purpose of keeping him awake and tormenting him when he returned home tired from work at night.

They separated after an incident of July 15. Sweat's story is that he came home from work that night and sat down at the supper table. He drank one cup of coffee and asked for another. He says that the second cup tasted peculiar and that when he stirred it and got some of the grounds on his spoon he discovered a quantity of pulverized glass.

He declares that he charged her with an attempt to kill him and that she replied by hurling the sugar bowl out of the window and snatching the coffee cup from his grasp and destroying it. She left the saucer on the table and in this, Sweat claims, there remained some of the glass which he had removed from the cup.

J. Ham Lewis Martyr To Senatorial Dignity

WASHINGTON, July 21.—J. Ham Lewis, Senator from Illinois, to-day answered a query anent semi-wintry raiment, consisting of buckskin gloves, felt hat, dark gray suit of heavy texture and parti-colored woolen vest, within which he braved the sweltering weather.

"Misconceived Senatorial dignity decrees that we shall wear a vest," explained Senator Lewis, fingering the garment in question, "when we would fain di-vest ourselves of the encumbrance."

House Bill Requires Seed Cotton Record

A bill requiring all purchasers of seed cotton to keep a complete record of the same has been introduced in the House by Representatives Hines and Moon, of Troup County.

In the last few weeks many complaints have been filed with the Commissioner of Agriculture by farmers who stated that seed cotton which they had purchased under the highest recommendations had proved to be either of inferior quality or absolutely worthless.

Yellowjackets Rout Soldiers of Second Regiment

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, July 23.—After having crowned themselves with glory by routing the "enemy," composed of another battalion of the regiment, a detachment of the Second Georgia infantry to-day was put to ignominious flight by a swarm of yellowjackets, encountered on the battlefield. Several of the soldiers were stung, but the majority escaped by a hasty and disorganized retreat.

While to-day's "battle" was in progress a squad of soldiers digging intrenchments unearthed a human skeleton.

The Macon Volunteers last night entertained Colonel Thomas and other officers at supper, followed by a "badger" fight. Lieutenant Whittaker, of the Floyd Rifles, held the "badger."

Captain J. A. Fort, of Americus, was to-day's officer of the day.

Republican Regime In Portugal Totters

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

Troops are being rushed to all points in an effort to check the rebellion, which Government officials consider the most serious since the new form of government was established.

7 DAYS LEFT AND LAST PONY VOTE BONUS IS ON

Sharpest Competition Due in Home Stretch—Extra Ballots Only on American.

Just one week from Thursday The Georgian and American pony contest closes! Think what this means to the contestants. Just seven days in which to hustle in votes!

Nothing counts now save subscriptions to The Georgian and Sunday American, and there are no bonus votes except for subscriptions to The Sunday American.

On The Sunday American, therefore, the contestants should concentrate their efforts. The "Red Letter Ballots" may save the day for any boy or girl. Red letter ballots are good for 4,500 votes, in addition to the regular schedule, when accompanied by a two-year paid-in-advance subscription to The Sunday American; 2,000 votes when accompanied by a year's subscription and 800 votes when accompanied by a six months' subscription.

No matter what newspaper, or how many newspapers, the resident of Atlanta or the South reads during the week, every one wants The Sunday American. Therefore, while this bonus offer is not as liberal as those which have gone before, it should be of great assistance in piling up votes.

And how the votes will roll up during the week! The standings will be published every day, for a time. Watch them, and see how keen is the race for the ponies.

It is a safe prediction that every day will see startling changes in the standings. This last week of the contest is not going to be pleasant for the over-confident, for the easy-going, or for the faint-hearted. It will be a cruel pace set by the leaders, with every one guessing, and every one in the dark.

There is not a boy or a girl in any district who can be sure of success, not a one but needs every possible vote that can be solicited, entreated, or cajoled from relatives, friends, or strangers.

It is the home stretch which the contestants are entering now, and the going will be swift.

Georgia Weekly Press Association Names New Recording Secretary and Treasurer.

LA GRANGE, July 23.—Two officers who have served the Georgia Weekly Press Association for twenty or more years retired to-day when the annual election was held. B. T. Mosely, of The Danielsville Monitor, for twenty years treasurer, is succeeded by J. J. Howell, of The Cuthbert Leader. W. A. Shackelford, of The Oglethorpe Echo, Lexington, recording secretary since the association was formed 27 years ago, is succeeded by C. E. Benns, of The Butler Herald.

H. M. Stanley, of The Dublin Courier-Dispatch, was re-elected corresponding secretary. P. T. McCutcheon, of The Franklin News-Banner, was elected president; J. C. McAuliffe, of The Milledgeville News, first vice president, and J. A. Perry, of The LaGrange Reporter, second vice president.

Governor and Mrs. John M. Slaton arrived this afternoon from Atlanta to attend the barbecue given the editors by Fuller E. Callaway and to be honor guests at the banquet tonight by the citizens of LaGrange.

Members of the association leave on a special train at 9 o'clock Thursday morning for Brunswick and St. Simons Island, where several days will be spent.

The members of the association returned to LaGrange from West Point late Tuesday afternoon, after a reception at the home of W. Trox Bankston, editor of The West Point-Lanett News, and an old-fashioned Georgia barbecue served on the banks of the Chattahoochee River by the citizens of that city.

A session of the convention was held in the courthouse Tuesday night. Besides routine matters there were interesting papers from a number of the leading members of the association on subjects of live interest to the weekly press of the State.

DEAD IN RUINS OF FACTORY NOW FIXED AT 58

Probe Begun of Binghamton Holocaust as Death List Grows. Girls Trapped at Benches.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., July 23.—Searching parties to-day worked in the ruins of the building of the Binghamton Clothing Company seeking bodies believed to be buried there.

Streams of water were played on the building all night to cool them enough to allow the rescue work to begin. Workmen at daylight began digging at the tons of charred timber, brick and mortar, in an effort to reach the bodies still known to be buried in the debris.

At noon on Wednesday twenty-one bodies had been recovered. The death list will reach 58, it was estimated. Ten injured are in a hospital. Of the 111 persons in the building at the time the fire broke out only 38 escaped. Thirty-seven are missing.

Girls Mistake Alarm.

Belief that the alarm was sounded only as a fire drill, caused the great loss of life. When the girls and women working in the factory realized that the building was burning the main avenue of escape had already been cut off. Instantly the other exits were choked with panic-stricken girls.

Many reached the windows but the firemen and others bent on rescuing inmates were powerless to aid them, owing to the rapidity with which the flames licked up the inflammable mill material.

Eighteen minutes elapsed from the time the fire broke out until the walls fell and the building was in ruins.

Fire Laid to Smoker.

Reed B. Freeman, president of the company, attributes the fire to the carelessness of an employee in throwing a cigarette butt under a stairway, where inflammable material was stored.

Smoking was prohibited in the building, but many employees were addicted to the habit, according to Freeman, and often went to the alley near the building to smoke.

Rigid investigation of the fire will be made by the authorities. They will investigate the charges made that gasoline was stored in the building, dangerously near the stairway from the upper floors and that the fire escapes were so exposed that many victims were burned while trying to descend.

ANSLEY PARK TO QUIZ COUNCIL ON PAVING

Residents Will Demand Reason for Delay—Quest Vain Declares Mayor.

A delegation of Ansley Park citizens will go before the Streets Committee of Council at its meeting a week from Friday to protest against the lack of work in Ansley Park and to insist that Peachtree Circle and South Prado, for which money has been appropriated, be paved at once.

These citizens declare they will demand to know who is responsible for the delay. The money was appropriated January 1. The property owners are to pay a greater proportion than the city. Yet not a pick has been stuck in the park during the seven months of the year, with the exception of one short block on Lombardy street.

Mayor Woodward declared Wednesday that little relief from such conditions could be expected so long as our present system of government was in effect. He said he had been trying to tell the people all the year that they could not trace responsibility in matters of such gross incompetency and negligence.

"This new charter of Council's the Legislature is about to submit to the people is far worse," he said. "It provides for a board to supervise the construction department, which will be about as satisfactory as the remainder of our boards.

"The Ansley Park citizens will have to frighten the whole city government into action to get any real results."

PASSIVE MEXICO POLICY SCORED BY SENATORS

Fall's Resolution, Guaranteeing American Citizens' Rights Abroad, Is Tabled.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—The Fall resolution guaranteeing constitutional rights to American citizens abroad and protection to their property, went over without debate when the Senate met to-day. This leaves the resolution tabled and ready for consideration at any time the author may see fit to again call it up.

Fall agreed with members of the Senate that enough publicity has been given the Mexican situation for the present and on motion of Senator Simmons, the tariff bill was made the order of business.

Senator Fall made it plain that he was not averse to having his resolution referred to the Foreign Relations Committee in accordance with the suggestion of Chairman Bacon of that committee.

"I feel confident that sufficient publicity has been given the Mexican situation through debate on this resolution," said Senator Fall, "to make it plain that the United States either must revoke the order prohibiting the exportation of arms into Mexico, or take a determined attitude with regard to the protection of Americans in Mexico."

Senator Fall said in regard to the Mexican situation that no greater error could be made than a continuance of the dilatory tactics pursued by the United States in the past. Agreeing with Fall in this view were a large number of Senators in both sides of the chamber.

President and Bacon Confer on Mexico.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—President Wilson to-day summoned Representative Flood, chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, and Senator Bacon, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, to the White House to confer on conditions in Mexico.

The delicacy of the present situation enforced a policy of secrecy at the White House, but it was asserted that the purpose of to-day's conference was to discuss the advisability of removing the ban from shipments of arms and ammunition to the constitutionalists in Northern Mexico.

General Carranza and other revolutionists have been pleading for weeks for the removal of this prohibition, claiming that they are entitled to the same privileges accorded to the Maderists by President Taft.

It is doubtful if any decisive move will be made until after the removal of Ambassador Wilson, but it is practically certain that this Government will favor the removal of the prohibition relative to the shipment of arms to the rebels and then will await developments in the hope of establishing a stable government in Mexico.

U. S. Prepared to Act on Short Notice.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—Dispatch of a gunboat to Mexican waters, in addition to the four battleships already there, the presence of Secretary of War Garrison and General Leonard Wood on the Texas border and the summoning of Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson to Washington are taken to indicate the intention of official circles here that the Mexican situation will no longer be allowed by President Wilson to drift.

Reports from Chihuahua and Coahuila indicate the centralization of the Federalist forces in those provinces and the opening of railroad communication from the capital to the border within a week.

Mexico Is Stuffed With Ammunition for U. S.

LAREDO, TEXSA, July 23.—A bitter arraignment of the United States, accusing the Government of fostering the revolution which resulted in the overthrow of President Diaz, and of aiming mortal blows at the liberty and sovereignty of the weaker Central American nations, in direct contrast to the principles of the Monroe Doctrine, has been published in Spanish and distributed throughout Mexico.

A copy of the document to-day was forwarded to the State Department at Washington.

"With the pretext of diffusing civilization," says the document, "they (the United States) send to the limit of the continent all the castoffs, all the excess of population which congests their cities, and heralds of culture and progress, the majority of those who arrive are tramps, broken bankers, defaulters, pardoned prisoners, the bulls of their cosmopolitan criminals.

"These are they who come to us, who, supported by them in obtaining concessions, in founding banks without capital, to suck like vampires the blood and the riches of the ingenuous and credulous, noble and confiding people."

The Waters-Pierce Oil Company and the Harriman interests are flayed for their efforts to establish trusts in oil and railroad properties. The document then says:

"We have given them our riches and our confidence, but we will not give them an atom of our dignity nor another hand's breadth of our territory. The people must stand erect at the proper moment, and this now has arrived. They can not annihilate us. International complications will prevent them.

"They would require 100,000 men to invade Mexico, and their triumph, if they triumph, would be over burning fields and mountains of corpses. They would need their entire fleet to blockade our ports.

"This would be very dangerous for them, for there is someone lying in ambush. Mexico is bristling with rifles and stuffed with ammunition. It would be a horrible war."

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

The Committee on Constitutional Amendments is the hardest worked committee at present in the House, but when it has cleared away the new county propositions, which it is trying manfully to do, it will get a much needed and deserved breathing spell.

Mr. Myrick, of Chatham, the chairman of the committee, is one of the Legislature's really tireless workers, and sits patiently through the most exhaustive hearings, without expressing the slightest desire to cut anybody off or shut up the noise.

He seems determined to give every new county proposition coming up a "square deal" and a full committee hearing, no matter what happens thereafter in the House.

After the new counties are disposed of, however, the work of the Constitutional Amendments Committee will be by no means at an end. There yet is to come up Mr. Edmondson's bill calling for a Constitutional convention, and while the impression is that no such bill likely will pass the House at this session, that would by no means stop the Constitutional Amendments Committee from considering, and recommending it, one way or the other, to the House.

Besides this, there are half dozen other proposed amendments to the Constitution, some of which will have aggressive and most influential backing. All of these Chairman Myrick intends giving a hearing, if time holds out.

The only thing that can head off the chairman of Constitutional Amendments Committee in the matter of hard work is adjournment—and that will not come for twenty-odd days yet.

Phil Cook, Secretary of State, is happy!

He thinks he is going to get a new Great Seal of State soon, and that is what he has been looking for—these many days.

For long, long years, Secretary Cook's pet grievance—he hasn't many grievances of any sort—has been that worn-out Great Seal of State, which, despite his best efforts, can hardly be made out on legal documents.

Secretary Cook isn't at all foolish about great seals of state, either. He figures that he could have wabbled along without them, had they never been invented, and he would be, perhaps, quite as happy, had he never heard tell of one.

Still, if Georgia must have a great seal of state, he opines that it should be one that might be differentiated from other and less important seals, and that without the aid of a 40-horsepower microscope.

"Look at this thing, now," said the Secretary, exhibiting a specimen of the present great seal's most deadly work. "Could you tell whether that is the great seal of Georgia or the great seal of Kamchatka? I couldn't, if I didn't know. What's the use having such a great seal?"

Nobody could answer that, and so everybody listening agreed that the Legislature should, and probably will, pass the present bill of Mr. Nunnally, providing for a new great seal.

"The best office in Bibb County" will not be the best office after the first of January if a bill proposed by Representative Wallace Miller is passed by the present Legislature.

This is the office of Clerk of the City Court, now held by Charles H. Smith, 23 years of age, who draws an income of $8,000, collected in fees.

Mr. Miller's bill puts the clerk on a salary basis and provides for a salary of $2,400. The clerk is appointed by the judge, who now receives a salary of $3,300, but for whose benefit there has already been a bill introduced, raising the pay to $5,000.

The duties of this Clerk of Court are very light, and as he has a well-paid assistant, the office is really a delightful one. It has long been considered the choicest office of the county.

Professor J. W. Boyd, of Fairmount, Gordon County, whose eloquent plea for Tate County was successful before the House Committee on Constitutional Amendments Tuesday, is one of the most picturesque men that ever served in the Georgia Legislature.

When a member of the State Senate in 1908, he introduced the famous bill abolishing the convict lease system in Georgia, and no man fought for the passage of that measure through both Houses and both committees more aggressively and more effectively than Boyd.

He is an orator of the old school, with a "hallelujah lick" that reminds one instantly of that other eloquent North Georgian, the late Congressman William H. Felton. Undoubtedly, it was Boyd's great effort before the committee on Tuesday that carried the day for Tate.

The argument winning the greatest favor, perhaps, was that wherein Boyd assured the committee that the creation of Tate would result, by reason of the amalgamation therein of the Republican end of Pickens, in the abolition of one rock-ribbed Republican county—Pickens—and the creation of a new rock-ribbed Democratic county of Tate.

It has been years since Pickens sent a Democrat to the Legislature, all because of the Republican end of the county that Boyd proposes to whack off. The Republicans of Pickens, needless to say, are bitterly opposed to Tate and are fighting it tooth and nail. The pressing of this partisan point before the committee, however, was effective.

Of course, Senator Boyd urged other points, such as earnest desire upon the part of the population effected, necessity of location, wealth and Tate's ability to take care of itself, but the big card undoubtedly seems to have been the anti-Republican argument before a Democratic committee.

Tate will go before the House when it does go with considerable favor behind it.

LAWMAKERS PUT IN TEACHERS' FIX BY MEASURE

McMichael Resolution Diverts Legislators' Salary Fund to Schoolma'ams.

To pay the members of the Georgia General Assembly in 1914 in script, payable within six months, and apply the fund set aside for legislators' salaries to the payment of country school teachers is the provision of a resolution introduced by Representative McMichael, of Marion County, Thursday morning. The resolution would have provided for this at the present session, but for the fact that many members already have drawn their pay.

Should the resolution be adopted it would mean that two-thirds of the annual deficit of $100,000 in school teachers' salaries would be made up at once. The daily payroll of the Legislature amounts to from $1,300 to $1,500 a day.

The teachers are awaiting the payment of more than $100,000 on their salaries, past due many months. Script usually is given, but as payment is deferred from six to twelve months they are forced to discount at from 10 to 50 per cent, if they are not in position to support themselves until payment of the script is made by the State.

McMichael's resolution is a bit sarcastic, referring to the fact that all other employees of the State from the Governor down to the janitors, including the members of the General Assembly, are paid promptly.

The resolution was referred to the Committee on Education.

The resolution provides for the payment of cash to the legislators for actual mileage due the members.

PRISON REFORM PUSHED BY WELTNER

Secretary of Crusaders Urges Indeterminate Sentence as Best for Convicts.

Another gun in the campaign of the bill providing indeterminate prison sentences, which has been favorably reported by both House and Senate Committees, has been fired by Philip Weltner, secretary of the Prison Reform Association, which is responsible for the bill.

"The enactment of the bill will not only improve convict conditions in Georgia," Mr. Weltner declares, "but it will increase the efficiency of the convicts in road building. The indeterminate sentence is based on justice and common sense rather than sentiment and mercy; and wherever it has been tried it has tended to embarrass the crook by keeping him in up to the limit, yet holding the door of opportunity open to the occasional offenders whom kind treatment and hope can reform.

"To give a convict a fixed term of imprisonment means that the law believes it can foretell the length of time it will take to discipline him. Wrong doing gets the perpetrator into prison; right doing ought to be his only means of getting out."

Great July Pre-Inventory Sales at

A "Let-Go" of Fine Linens

Prices Drop to Halt and Less for This Most Extraordinary Clearaway

"Clean Stocks" is our slogan—our rigid Pre-Inventory Policy is not to carry over any soiled merchandise nor odds and ends.

That's the reason for the finest linens in the South being offered at a fraction of their value.

To our certain knowledge no Southern store ever offered linens of such qualities at these near-half and less-than-half prices.

The left aisle table and counters are heaped high with values. Though the sale is scheduled for three days—Thursday, Friday and Saturday—it is plain that the best Bargains will be snapped up Thursday. Selling starts at 8:30 with these unprecedented values.

CRISIS IN WATER PROBLEM REACHED

Board to Debate Situation—Only Six Feet of Clear Liquid Left in Reservoirs.

The City Water Board will meet Wednesday afternoon to consider a water situation that constantly has grown more grave since the breaking of the 18,000,000-gallon pump at the river station two weeks ago.

The reserve supply in the reservoirs at the Hemphill station has dropped two feet since that date. It will take at least two weeks to put the big pump in working order again. While the reservoirs have over 20 feet of water in them there is only a 6-foot margin from muddy water. This is due to the fact that the location of the filtration plant will not permit water to flow through it lower than that point.

A conference was held Wednesday morning between J. O. Cochran, president of the Park Board; W. Z. Smith, general manager of waterworks, and W. E. Dunn, president of the Water Board, to consider cutting off the 500,000-gallon daily flow into Piedmont Park lake. That would mean that the bathing would have to be stopped. It was decided that no further action would be taken at present than to shorten the hours for bathing in the lake.

Although twenty men are working on the broken pump, as many as can be effectively used in both day and night shifts, it is feared that the water pressure may have to be reduced so as to make the daily consumption of the city equal the amount pumped from the river each day.

WATSON EAGER TO HIT MUGWUMPS

Lobby Inquiry Shows Indiana Legislator Couldn't Influence Tariff Board Selections.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—Members of the Overman Lobby Inquiry Committee to-day said an effort would be made this week to finish reading into the record several thousand letters made public by M. M. Mulhall.

The correspondence showed that, on September 18, James E. Watson, of Indiana, wrote to Mulhall that President Taft had turned over to Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh the entire question of the tariff board personnel.

Mugwump Peeved Watson.

"If MacVeagh were a Republican we might reach him," wrote Watson, "but he is a mugwump and I swear that I never know what to do with a mugwump, inasmuch as I have no right to kill him."

On September 28 Mulhall wrote to John Kirby, Jr., president of the National Association of Manufacturers:

"I wish to do all I possibly can to beat in Maryland this fall the amendment to the Constitution disfranchising the negroes, which, if carried, will make Maryland a one-party State and wipe out of Congress three Republican members, one of whom is the best friend we ever had in Congress, Sydney E. Mudd."

Tried to Get Watson.

Mulhall called on several manufacturers interested in the Danbury hatters' strike, to have them employ Watson as counsel in the ensuing litigation.

Arkansas Freight Rates Cut 20 Per Cent

LITTLE ROCK, July 23.—Effective to-day the trunk line railroads in Arkansas accepted the Arkansas Railroad Commission's standard freight tariff, which reduces railway rates approximately 20 per cent and will probably cut earnings of the railways $500,000 a year in the State.

Five years' litigation between State and railroads over these rates resulted in a victory in United States Supreme Court for the State.

WIFE NOW DENIES THAT SHE SHOT TOM WOOD

Gainesville Bride to Repudiate Confession When Taken Before Grand Jury.

GAINESVILLE, July 22.—Repudiating her confession as to the shooting of her ball player husband, Tom Wood, and charging a man with firing the bullet will be the sensational testimony of Mrs. Pearl Thomas Wood before the Hall County Grand Jury this afternoon. This man comes from a prominent family and his arrest is expected.

This man was an old friend of Mrs. Wood's, and when she was told by her husband that he was going to desert her, it is said, she appealed to him. He came to the Wood home on Athens street, where a quarrel began, ending in the probably fatal wounding of Wood.

Gainesville is greatly excited over the shooting. The statement this morning that Mrs. Wood would completely repudiate her confession and charge the man with firing the shot aroused intense interest. The Grand Jury is in session, and the Solicitor announced this morning that an immediate investigation would be held.

At a local hospital Tom Wood lies in a dying condition, a bullet hole in one of his lungs and with but two days at the most in which he can possibly live. At the county jail is his bride of a few months, completely prostrated. Tuesday night she confessed to the killing, declaring that she had determined to kill her husband rather than have him desert her. She declared that he had decided upon a separation and was preparing to leave Gainesville.

Quarrel Precedes Shooting.

According to the account of the shooting, which, it is said, Mrs. Wood will make to the Grand Jury, her husband, another man and herself were in the Wood home when a quarrel ensued, during which the other man drew a pistol. Wood ran from the house and as he darted out the front door the other man shot, Wood falling fatally wounded upon the porch.

Neighbors rushed in and found Mrs. Wood weeping over the body of her youthful husband. An automobile was obtained and the wounded man placed in it. Mrs. Wood accompanied him to the hospital, holding his head tenderly in her lap, while her cries drew the tears from others in the machine. In contrast to her piteous condition the husband charged her time and again with shooting him. His protestations that "She shot me!" "She shot me!" continued after he had been placed upon the operating table.

Bride Goes to Jail.

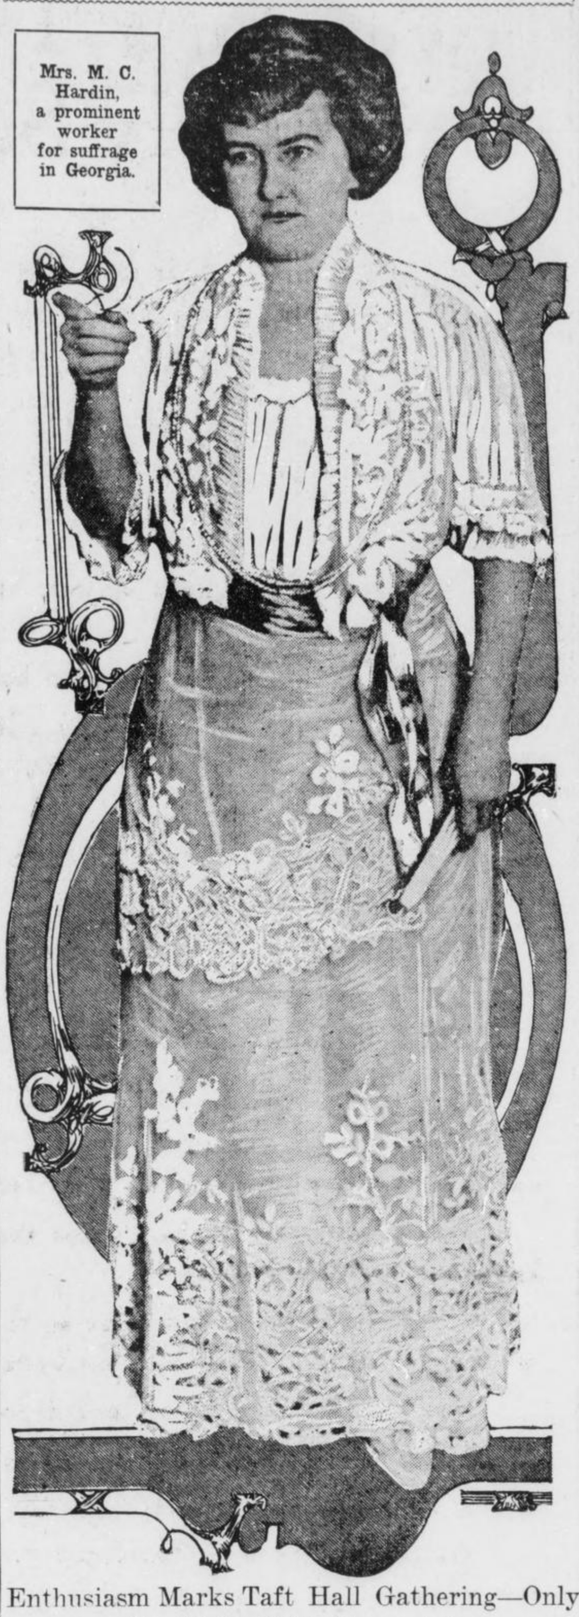
A few moments after the wounded man was taken to the hospital Sheriff Spencer arrived there. Mrs. Wood surrendered to him and admitted that she had done the shooting. She begged to be allowed to remain with her husband, but owing to his condition and his continual charges that she had done the shooting, it was thought best to remove her. She was taken to the county jail, where she spent the night weeping and piteously declaring her love for her husband.

"He was preparing to desert me, and was going away at midnight," she told the Sheriff. "He came to the house to tell me good-bye. I made up my mind I would rather kill him than have him desert me."

Mrs. Wood is a bride of but a few months. Wood has played with the Gainesville ball club for a long while. The courtship began a few months ago, when he was introduced to her at the ball park. She was Miss Pearl Thomas, and comes from a highly respected family, which has been living in Gainesville for ten years. She was extremely popular and a host of her friends called at the county jail this morning.

Wood's home is in Nashville and his parents are expected to arrive to-day. Doctors state there is no chance for his recovery.

SUFFRAGE CAUSE HERE BOOSTED BY BIG MEET



Mrs. M. C. Hardin, a prominent worker for suffrage in Georgia.

Enthusiasm Marks Taft Hall Gathering—Only "Anti" Partially Converted.

Spurred to enthusiasm by Mrs. William Peel, presiding officer, several hundred suffragists and a suffragette or two at Taft Hall Tuesday participated in a monster meeting, in many respects unequaled before in Atlanta. Round after round of applause marked the efforts of every speaker.

The meeting was an all-suffrage affair, for although a debate was advertised not a single out-and-out anti-suffragist speech was made. Ernest Neal, member of the House of Representatives, was the only speaker of the opposition, and even he declared he had little faith in many of the stock arguments of the antis and that he wished Mrs. Peel godspeed in the present movement.

Debate Is Opened.

Following an organ recital by Dr. Percy J. Starnes, Mrs. Peel called the meeting to order. "If it had not been for woman," she said in opening the discussion, "man would still be walking on four legs. But woman has performed her duty and as a result all of us are to-day walking on two legs."

Following Representative Neal's address, R. A. Broyles declared the men needed the women to help them out in things political.

Among the other speakers were Dr. A. M. Highlett, who declared he was a suffragist first, last and all the time, for the reason that women are as intelligent as men; Mrs. S. E. Cunningham, who paid high tribute to the cause; Mrs. Frances Whitesides, a leader in the Civic League; Mrs. Mary McLendon, "the original suffragette," president of the Georgia League, Mrs. M. C. Hardin and Dr. John E. White.

Mrs. McLendon Speaks.

Mrs. McLendon spoke of the first efforts of Georgia women to organize, and asserted the present movement would result in a perfect organization throughout the State.

Dr. White made a vigorous address in favor of suffrage and sharply criticised the "idle rich" woman, who, he said, sought a good time for life by marrying a man with an automobile.

At the meeting's close Mrs. Peel invited all anti-suffragists in the house to stand up. No one stood up.

ACQUITTED OF GRAFT CHARGE.

SLIT SKIRT FAD NOT WORRYING OUR MAYOR

"Let 'Em Wear Anything They Want," He Says—"If They Can Stand It, I Can."

'X-Rays' All Depend On Point of View

In Boulder, Colo., the diaphanous 'silhouette skirt may be worn in the shade only.

AND

In Lima, Ohio, this revealing garment of line without substance is absolutely taboo.

BUT

In Atlanta to-day Mayor Woodward averred that the new gown problem was one for women only to decide upon for themselves.

Atlanta will not try to regulate skirts. A spirit of conservatism has marked the police department since the vindication of Miss September Morn, who was discovered in a mountain pool in the show window of a book store.

The skirt question has been before the people ever since Mrs. Adam, more generally known under her maiden name of Eve, first appeared garbed in the foliage of the ancient ficus carica.

There are those who hold the modern tendency is back to the foliage skirt, not the fig leaf, but possibly the leaf of the asparagus fern or other chiffon-like vegetable.

How Other Towns View It.

Miss Mary Lindsay, of Lima, Ohio, the town named after the well known bean, has been arrested because her slit skirt left practically nothing to conjecture.

The Mayor of Boulder, Colo., has issued an order in which he admits that a woman may wear as thin a skirt as her taste and the weaver's art will allow. But he insists that it be worn on the shady side of the street only.

The courts will probably have to decide the course to be taken by a fashionably gowned women when the sun at the zenith illuminates both sides of the street.

"It's Up to Them," Says Mayor.

Mayor James G. Woodward declared that he certainly would not undertake to tell women how to dress.

And the policy of all the members of his administration would be to leave these matters entirely with the women.

"If they can stand it, I can," he said. "It doesn't bother me and I don't think it any business of the police to interfere.

"Whether it's a silhouette skirt or a sheath gown, it's entirely up to them."

Anniston's Mayor Missed the Shock.

ANNISTON, July 23.—Annistonians received their first "slit skirt" shock Tuesday, when a young woman from out of town appeared on Noble street, the principal business thoroughfare, attired in one of the ultra-garments, minus the old-fashioned petticoat. Mayor J. L. Wikle was in Birmingham. Chief of Police Shiretzki and Recorder J. F. Green were non-committal.

Student Dedicates Chinese Restaurant

"If people would look about them and learn from others, the world would be better," declared Timothy Tingfang Lew, a young Chinese student of the University of Georgia, in an address at the opening of a new Chinese restaurant at 86 1-2 North Broad street Tuesday night.

"Everybody can learn something from those about him," he continued. "And every nation can learn something from the study of the customs of other nations. If people would study other people they would know more."

CRAWFORD WILL CASE HEARING POSTPONED

Uncertainty Regarding Frank Trial Results in Delay Until Next Monday.

Because of the uncertainty regarding the trial of Leo M. Frank, Auditor James L. Anderson Wednesday postponed the hearing of the Crawford will case until next Monday, at the request of Reuben Arnold, counsel for Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, who is also connected with the defense of Frank.

Mr. Anderson announced that should the Frank trial again be postponed the Crawford case will be called at that time, but should Judge Roan decide to call Frank's trial for Monday morning the hearing of the will case will be indefinitely postponed, its resumption to be governed entirely by the disposition of the Frank case.

Plan to Explode Poison Claim.

The postponing of the hearing on Wednesday morning prevented the introduction of what Mrs. Crawford's attorneys claim is their most convincing evidence in Mrs. Crawford's denial that she had killed her husband, Joshua B. Crawford, by poisoning him. It is understood that they had planned to place Dr. J. W. Hurt, Crawford's family physician, on the stand.

Dr. Hurt, Mrs. Crawford's attorneys claim, will testify that while attending Mr. Crawford during his last illness, he frequently gave him morphine and other drugs to allay the pain. These drugs given by Dr. Hurt, the defense will claim, are what Dr. Harris found in Crawford's stomach when the body was exhumed and a post-mortem made.

It is probable that Dr. Hurt will be one of the first witnesses when the hearing is resumed, which, unless the Frank trial is postponed, probably will not be until about the middle of August.

Search On For Barber.

Attorneys for the heirs-at-law stated Wednesday that they will continue the search for Fred Lumb, the barber who is charged with being Mrs. Crawford's accomplice in the alleged poison plot. Unable to locate Lumb in New York, where he was last heard of, it is planned to extend the search all over the United States.

Attorney J. S. James, chief of counsel for the heirs, said that Lumb has lived in different parts of the United States under various names, all of which are known. It is suspected that Lumb is living under one of the names he has formerly used, and efforts will be made to obtain trace of him.

Slayer of Feudist Gets Life Sentence

LEXINGTON, July 23.—Andrew Johnson, charged with being one of the men who assassinated Ed Callahan, former noted feudist of the Breathitt County mountains, has been found guilty at Winchester, Ky., and given a life sentence.

THE PLAYS THIS WEEK

"Good Morning, Judge."

The universal verdict of the patrons of the Bijou is that this week's attraction, "Good Morning, Judge," is one of the snappiest, liveliest and most pleasing musical comedies of the season, and judging from the cordial reception that has been given the attraction so far, standing room will be at a premium the entire week. Differing from most of the musical comedies that have been offered at the Bijou, "Good Morning, Judge," has a well-defined plot, which concerns the election of a German brewer to the mayoralty of his home town and the many ludicrous situations that arises when the good-natured brewer is forced to assume the position of municipal judge.

The musical numbers are new and up to date and the costumes in keeping with the splendid tone of the attraction.

Forsyth Packed.

"Sold out" has been the record at every performance at the Forsyth this week, and a wonderful advance sale for the remaining performances indicating that the busy theater is going to make a new attendance record, possibly eclipsing the figures set up by Miss Kellermann two years ago. The show is one of the strongest that has ever been offered in vaudeville in Atlanta. There is not a weak spot, every act counts and the applause is distributed evenly.

The big feature of the program is the appearance of John F. Conroy, the only person who possesses every kind of medal that has been awarded for heroism. Conroy has saved 137 lives. Assisted by two pretty girls, he gives a diving exhibition that is superior to any that has been seen in Atlanta.

Thrills at Big Movie at Grand.

A more wonderful photo-play than Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables" has rarely been seen. There is interest in this 12,000 feet of film from the introduction of Jean Valjean until the last inch has been run off, and the Grand is being filled at the daily matinee and night performances. The characters of the Hugo novel are played by some of the most distinguished actors of France. The performances are given at 2:30 and at 8:30.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

MISTER and Missus Riley was up to our house last nite, and thay had thare littel son Tommie with them. He was the freshest kid that I ever seen, and if I dident know so much moar about boxing than he knows, I wud have took him out in the yard & handed him a few hot wallops, & beesides, I felt kind of sorry for him beekaus his Pa & Ma kind of spoiled him. All that his Ma sed to him wen he spoak out of his turn was Now, Tommie, that isent nice.

I doant think we will move back to the city till skool beegins aggenn, sed Pa to the Rileys. We like it out here in the country & beesides, I want Bobbie to stay here as long as possibel. A boy is always better off in the country than he is in the city.

Oh, mercy, sed Missus Riley, how can you say that? Why, just think of the advantages that a boy has wen he is getting a city bringing up.

He Learns Things.

My husband doesn't think so, sed Ma. You see, he was born & brought up in a small town, & he says that a boy born & brought up in a small town has more all around training. He can learn to swim & hunt & fish & row a boat & hitch up a horse & a lot of other things that maiks a man out of him wen he grows up.

But a boy in the city can get such perfect manners, sed Missus Riley. Tommie has learned all he knows about manners by associating with nice little boys in the city that lern thare manners from thare private teechers, the little deers. You are always careful about yure manners, aint you, Tommie, sed Missus Riley.

I shud worry about manners, sed Tommie. What do I care about manners. People in Hoboken have all the manners, sed Tommie.

Now, Tommie, that isent nice, sed Missus Riley. See what a quiet little chap Bobbie is.

That is beekaus he is a bonehead & can't think of anything to say, sed Tommie Riley. He beelongs rite up here in the minor league whare he it, that kid.

I got pritty mad but I knew enuff to keep still. My Ma always told me not to start a quarl in the presens of older peepul.

I wuddent stay in this jay town any longer than I cud help, sed the Riley kid. The peepul here doant know they are alive.

You know a whole lot for a yung man, don't you, sed Pa. You will grow up to be a regular city feller, all rite, one of them clerks that rides to work & back home in the trolley & talks a ride on Sunday for a outing & then goes around telling what a wise fish he is.

Tommie will never be that kind of a braggart, sed Missus Riley, looking at Pa kind of hard. My littel son knows too much to be a braggart, doant you, Tommie?

Tell it to Sweeney, sed Tommie to his mother. Cheese on all that talk about me. Lay off on me and talk about sumbody that doesn't know anything.

Now, Tommie, that isent nice, sed his mother.

I shud fret and take a sweat, sed the Riley kid. I shud worry and git gray, he sed.

Pa Talks.

Tommie, sed Pa, as long as yure parents will not tell you the truth, I am going to. You think you are a vary smart yung man bekaus sumbody taught you how to say, "I shud worry." You can say that & you can sing "Snooky Ookums" & part of "In my Harum," and that lets you out. & then you cum up here in the country & try to maik fun of grown up peepul that knew moar when thay was babies than you will ever know wen you grow up. You ought to be spanked, Tommie, & sent to bed to think it oaver.

Then Tommie looked at Pa kind of fresh & sed Say, this is a queer kind of a country.

I guess if he had stayed long I wud have had to soak Tommie, but his Pa & Ma got kind of mad wen they seen we dident like thare son, so thay took him hoam.

Where Riches Count.

The late Mr. Bradley Martin, who was himself a polished wit, used to recall with delight a conversation he overheard between two girls apropos of an aged millionaire's marriage to a debutante.

"I know he's rich," said one, "but isn't he too old to be considered eligible?"

"My dear," answered the other girl, "he's too eligible to be considered old."

Stella Barre Tells of the Value of Voice Culture.

Miss Stella Barre.

"WHEN I began making vocal culture a serious study a few years ago—six, to be accurate," said Stella Barre in the most delightfully musical of voices, as we sipped cooling ices after the matinee, "no one except my teacher and myself believed I had a voice to train. We did believe, though—we worked hard to prove it—and now we have a few followers, haven't we?"

If you have heard Stella Barre's top note and a few others below it such as she renders at the performances of "All Aboard" in New York you will agree that she has triumphantly proved the existence of her voice. And a voice is, as we have been told, "an excellent thing in woman," be it low and sweet, or be it high and sweet; but heaven forefend that any one of us have the high-pitched nasal voice, or the husky, breathy croak that are an unfortunate tradition as the possessions of the American woman.

"No amount of study is too hard," said the charming singer, "if it gives you at last the goal of your dreams. But you have to work with your brain as well as your body. And the thing I would warn girls most earnestly against is overfatigue. It is so easy to think, 'Oh, I will just keep at this a bit longer,' and to use up so much energy and strength that you infringe on your reserve store. Now I really practice all afternoon long—but only about fifteen minutes at a time. I work a bit, and then I go off to something quite different, and then back to work. In this way, I probably put in three or four hours' work with less fatigue than two hours of steady application and overstrain would give.

"You read so many romances of how the fair telephone girl wins a millionaire husband by saying 'Hello' very sweetly to his listening ear. There is something in every tale—fairy or otherwise—you hear, and whether a girl has a singing voice or not, a few singing lessons will vastly improve her speaking voice—and perhaps help to discover another prima donna.

A Suggestion.

"For the girl who can not afford singing lessons, I would suggest deep breathing at an open window morning and night, or whenever she has a chance to try it during the day. Then fill the lungs and hold the breath back of the voice while speaking a few words, gradually increasing the number until you have breath control and all the while keeping the voice as deep, clear and low as possible."

"But you don't think that voice alone is sufficient beauty for woman, do you?" I asked, for every line of Miss Barre's cool coral colored linen dress and white hat bespoke a careful attention to the mysteries of true becomingness in dress, with beauty and good taste duly commingled—and these mysteries become just plain everyday facts in the clever hands and brain of the woman who knows how to dress. "I am sure that you recognize the importance of dress and manner in the field of womanly charm."

"Yes," said Miss Barre, with the pleasing attention that she always gives to your part of the conversation; "I believe in dress and manner as adjuncts to beauty, and I have just four little pet theories for the first aids to beauty. Here they are: First and most important, KEEP UP. Keep up and ahead of what you are doing of events and happenings; just cultivate a habit of feeling light and buoyant and not weighted down or impeded by life.

"Next, BE PLEASANT. Friends are as easy to acquire as enemies, and a pleasant greeting to the people you meet won't harm them or you.

A Mental Picture.

"Of course, I believe in dressing as well and as becomingly as your means will allow. And to do that you must cultivate your imagination. Do you know, I can always see myself walking out of the front door and down the street in a dress just about the time I am having my first fitting. I picture myself in clothes, and as I don't like freak pictures, I don't get freak clothes. I make sure that my hats form a background for my face, although if I had a short neck I would be careful not to make it appear still shorter by wearing hats that would cut it off in the course of their down-droop in back. And I study the line of my throat. A neck is pretty generally becoming—except to the woman with an exceedingly long, narrow face. Square neck for her, and a round line that cuts off the throat should be generally taboo.

"It's a science, isn't it?" laughed Miss Barre. "Why, I believe taste in dress has as many branches and ramifications as the study of singing. But they are both worth while, aren't they?"

And we all agree, don't we, little sisters?

One Woman's :-: Story :-:

By Virginia T. Van de Water.

CHAPTER VII.

PERHAPS Mary Danforth did not acknowledge to herself why it was so hard for her to give her mind to her studies during the evening on which she received Craig's pansies. If she appreciated that the sender of the flowers was in her consciousness more than was the book of civics lying open in the glow of her student's lamp, she did not admit it even in her innermost thoughts. She tried to "concentrate," but her wits wandered, and, time and again, she found, with a guilty start, that for some minutes she had been gazing abstractedly at nothing. It was late when at last she put out her light, urged to this course by her mother, who insisted that she was wearing herself out studying so hard, and that she would be "good for nothing" in the morning.

When Mary awoke on the morrow she was forced to confess the accuracy of the final part of her mother's prediction, for she did feel "good for nothing." Her eyes smarted and her limbs ached as she busied herself with her toilet. A vague feeling of disappointment possessed her, depressing and, at the same time, irritating her, and she went to breakfast with her nerves and temper on edge. She had difficulty in controlling her feelings when Mrs. Danforth, in her desire to promote table talk, innocently introduced the subject of Craig—feeling that he would be an interesting topic of conversation.

Vexed at the Blush.

"I declare," announced the kind-hearted matron, amiably, "I have almost fallen in love myself with that tall Texan. He has such beautiful manners and is so considerate of elderly people. Don't you think he is delightful?"

As this remark was addressed to the table at large, Mary, vexed at the blush which she felt creeping to her forehead, busied herself with her grapefruit and made no reply.

"Don't you like him, daughter?" persisted her mother.

"I think that he's a presentable man, mother, if that's what you mean," responded the girl tartly and with tightening lips. "You can hardly expect me to say, as you just said, that I am 'almost in love with him' myself, can you?"

The words were sharp and the tone harsh. The speaker suddenly appreciated that this was the second time within a few days that she had been impatient with her mother. As before, she regretted her show of temper when she saw the wounded expression in her mother's eyes. She noted also that her father was looking at her in amazement.

"I did not mean to speak like that, mother," she said quickly and penitently. She pushed her chair back from the table and, going around to the elderly woman, laid her own flushed cheek against the wrinkled one. "I had no business to be so cross, and I am very sorry. I am as nervous as a cat this morning. Please forgive me."

Mrs. Danforth patted her daughter's hand, her face all smiles in an instant.

"That's all right, my darling," she soothed. "We all have our cranky spells. Now eat your breakfast, for it is getting late. I shall be glad when this dreadful grind is over and you have graduated," she added, with a sigh. "You are not like your dear self these days, and it is because you are overwrought and overtired."

Mary made no protest. She wondered secretly if the strain of work was entirely responsible for her vague sense of discontent and uncertainty. Breakfast over, she hurried to her room to collect her books, and, as she returned to the hall, ready to leave the house, she came upon her father. He was leaning against the wall, his hand to his head. His face was pale and his brow contracted as if he were suffering.

"Father!" exclaimed the girl in alarm, "what is the matter?"

"Nothing to worry about, pet," he insisted. "I was just a little dizzy and headachy for a minute. I'm better now. Don't look so frightened!"

"Dad," said Mary, anxiously, "you are not well. You've been overworking."

"Oh, I guess not," he replied with an attempt at raillery. "An old codger like me must expect such feelings this warm weather, that's all—but I find it hard to remember that I'm getting old."

"Won't you see a doctor?" urged Mary.

Mary Gets a Shock.

"Pshaw!" he laughed. "I'm all right, I tell you! Don't mention this little turn to your mother, for she makes a mountain of a molehill when I don't feel up to the scratch."

On the way to school Mary thought of her father with some perturbation but the hurry and bustle of the day's work drove all other worries from her brain and she had forgotten the little episode by the time she boarded the subway train in the evening. She watched the express on which she rode draw away from a local train. As the lighted windows slid slowly backward she thought of how she had first seen Gordon Craig under circumstances like these. It was like a story book romance, and he looked not unlike a book hero, she said to herself with a contemptuous smile at her own silliness.

Her thoughts were still busy with him as she walked along toward her home. When she turned into her own street, several leather-lunged men, carrying bundles of papers, were shouting "Extra" at the other end of the block in the hollow, reverberating tones of the New York disaster harbinger. Still dreaming, she paid little heed to them, but went up to her apartment, her mind on the man she had known for such a little while. Strange, she mused, that he should have impressed her so strongly. Her father was standing in the drawing room as she entered her home. A glance at his face brought her to a comprehension of the news venders' cries as they were borne now to her ears through the open windows.

"Terrible accident on the Bosting Express!" they were shouting.

Blindly the girl stretched her hands to her father as he came toward her.

"Dad," she asked hoarsely, "was that——"

She got no further, for her father put his arm quickly about her and drew her to him.

"Yes, little girl," he said, tremulously, "the Boston Express—Craig's train—has been wrecked, and, God help us! most of the Pullman passengers are dead!"

The Ghost Breaker

The Most Exciting Serial of the Year.

SERIALIZED

By J. W. McCONAUGHY

(Copyright, 1913, by Star Co.)

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Rusty raised his head and timidly put it out around the angle of the fireplace, where he had taken refuge.

"Wha is he?" he asked huskily.

His master straightened up, put the revolver back in its holster and pointed grimly to the trap.

"Water and a long drop," he said quietly. "There's another of the Duke's men gone."

Rusty got shakily to his feet. "I knowed them battleship boogies was spooks," he observed dolefully. The plural suggested something to Jarvis. He motioned Rusty to stay back, and, picking up the sword, advanced on the second figure. He made two or three feints to strike and got no response. Then he gave it a powerful push with the point. The armor toppled over and fell down the stairs with a hollow clash. It was empty.

"I guess he's harmless."

Rusty immediately began gathering up the pieces.

"I'll fix dis one so he won't jump no mo'!" he declared, savagely.

"What are you going to do?"

"I'm gonna sink this other battleship!"

"Hold on—wait a minute. I reckon we can use that," said Jarvis, smiling a little. "It takes a thief to catch a thief, they say. We'll just out-spook Mr. Ghost. Come on, Rusty," he went on impatiently, holding up the breastplate and back-piece like an undershirt, "get into this hardware as fast as you can."

Rusty drew back with violent headshakings.

"Marse Warren, I don' wanna be no spook."

"Listen!" commanded his master, sharply. "Somebody was working in this room. It's a cinch that the treasure is here and it's a bigger cinch he'll come back to get it when we are gone."

"You ain't gonna leave me heah alone!" protested the old darkey.

The Plan.

"Sure! I'm going to put you in this so you can watch. I'm going t make a bluff that we're both gone. You'll be as safe as a church in this. No one would ever think of looking for one of us in this armor. You watch, and when he starts to work—then yell your head off!"

"I'll yell so loud they'll hear me in Kentucky," Rusty assured him, reluctantly permitting himself to be armored.

"You give your best yell and then I'll nail him."

Rusty sniffed doubtfully. "If you don't nail him he'll nail me!"

Jarvis grunted and fussed over the armor as the right valiant swashbuckler for whom it was constructed was less generously designed amidships than the rotund darky.

"Marse Warren," remarked Rusty, presently, "you mus' think a heap o' Miss Princess to go prowlin' and projec'ing 'roun' in dis boogy house in de dark."

"What makes you think that?" mumbled Jarvis, toiling with a rusty clasp.

"Marse Warren," said Rusty, solemnly, "I knowed you since you was a baby."

"What's that got to do with it?' Pull in your breath a little bit."

"She gin you dat jew'lry you got 'roun' your neck, didn' she? She kind o' crazy 'bout you, too, ain't she?"

"How do you know?" inquired Jarvis, his eagerness concealed by the fact that he was bending over in the rear trying to joint the greaves to Rusty's ponderous calves.

"I knows, all right!" declared Rusty.

"But how do you know? Quit shifting around!"

"We-ell, I'm goin' to tell you, an' then you'll know how I knows. Jus' 'fore them horses jumped on me—when I was waitin' in de road—I heard a winder go up slap! An' dare was de Princess a-lookin' up at de moon, jes' like a picter. Jes' a-lookin' at de moon, an' she says—an' she says—"

"What did she say?" snapped Jarvis.

"'Ah,' she says, a-lookin' at de moon, she says, 'de world am begun all over ag'in fo' me.'"

Good News.

Warren started and was conscious of a singing in his ears that was not all due to the constant bending over required of a squire-at-arms. He held his tongue, knowing a darky's fondness for sentimental gossip, and Rusty went on:

"And den—and den—she go right on an' she says—she says, 'Gawd be with you, my American!'"

A steel thigh-piece slipped through Jarvis' fingers and clattered to the floor.

"An'," concluded Rusty, with invincible logic, "I'se de only American 'reun' heah 'cep' you, Marse Warren."

"God bless you, Rusty!" said his master, fervently, to himself. But aloud he said, holding up the heavy casque:

"Here—put your head in this Stetson. Gloves—here now! How do you feel?"

Jarvis surveyed him with a grin. Sancho Panza would have looked a courtly and sprightly cavalier by comparison.

"All in," was the glum response from the hollow depths of the helmet. "Do I look like a spook?"

"You're a wonderful sight!" declared his master, heartily. "Now, Rusty, get over here. Where's your sword?"

A cataclysmic sneeze caused the armor to rattle like a junk wagon.

"I never heard a ghost sneeze before," chided his master, reprovingly.

"Marse Warren, I'se catchin' cold," pleaded the knight, in the hope of pardon.

"Nonsense! Now, Rusty, keep your ears and eyes open—don't move a muscle. If anyone comes, yell your head off—but don't sneeze!"

"Marse Warren, I wanna go home!"

"We haven't any home, Rusty," was the sober response, as his master adjusted him on the pedestal. Rusty sighed till the clasps of the armor creaked complaint.

"Marse Warren, I don't evah 'spect to get out o' dis boogy house nohow."

"Well, Rusty, there are some things ——"

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

Give Her a Chance

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"I AM 20," writes a young man, "have no bad habits, and for eight months have been in love with a girl of my own age. I have always given her as good a time as my salary would permit. One day I went to her place of employment, opened the door quietly to surprise her, and found her in the arms of a man who is known to have brought dishonor to at least two young girls.

"I have learned since that she has frequently gone to places of amusement with him. When I told her of his true character she admitted it, but said he was a good spender, and, as she was not engaged to me, I had no right to object. I love her with all my heart and would not see any trouble befall her. Should I stand aside and let her pay the price?"

No! That would be wrong were you only friends, and an unpardonable crime since you love her.

She pleads that she is not engaged to you, and you have no right to object. Seek an engagement, and give yourself the right!

The girl is going headlong to ruin, and a diverted interest may save her. She is not wicked; she is foolish. She is concerned only for the good times the present may bring. Make her, by the power of your love, see that there are better times in the future. Give her the interest that every girl longs for—the hopes, the dreams, the all-enveloping satisfaction with one's self and life that center around an engagement ring.

A Suggestion.

Induce her to change her place of employment; you surely have women friends whose amusements are unquestionable and whose influence is for good. See that they make her acquaintance, and that she is thrown in with them. Teach her the difference between the real and the shadowy. Never find fault with what she has done, or moralize on the degradation from which you hope to save her.

Treat her as if you trusted her. Appeal to her higher nature always, letting her see that you know she is too good to do the things other foolish girls do, and for whom life is never so long that they get through the paying.

Always keep in her mind the little home you are building for her, and when you take her through the air-castle of your dreams explain its needs and your means as if you were talking to an intelligent being. This will give her a sympathetic understanding of the limitations of your income, and the knowledge that you are saving for her will check any envious sighs for other men who are greater spenders, and cause her to insist on a greater economy than even you had advocated.

Try it! Every good woman is using her influence to redeem some man. If this were not so, humanity would retrograde instead of progress. With all these centuries of obligation heaped upon him, every man personally owes to every weak and willful woman all the influence and strength he can muster to save her.

The Best Way. 4

The strongest influence for a woman's good is that which appeals through the heart. All sighing for vanities of dress, position and person is stifled when she loves. Vanity is a stage of silliness that her heart sooner than her head helps her to outgrow.

If this girl loves you, it will not be impossible to rescue her. But, if she loves you or not, if she assents to an engagement or not, does not lessen your responsibility concerning her. If she will not heed you, and you know you are right concerning this man's dishonorable intentions, you owe it to all womankind to inform the girl's parents of what she is doing.

Help them build the protecting rail at the top of the cliff. That will show a greater Christianity than being content with contributing money or means to an amoulance to be stationed at its base.

BACKACHE A SYMPTOM

Of More Serious Illness Approaching. Mrs. Bender's Case.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Read about Mrs. Bender's experience:

St. James, Mo.—"About a year ago I was irregular, had cramps every month, headache and constant backache. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used the Sanative Wash and I am relieved of all my troubles and am in perfect health. I shall recommend your medicine to all my friends and you may publish this testimonial for the benefit of other suffering women."—Mrs. Anna Bender, St. James, Missouri.

Another Case.

Dixon, Iowa.—"I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for some time and it has done me much good. My back troubled me very much. It seemed weak. I had much pain and I was not as regular as I should have been. The Compound has cured these troubles and I recommend it to all my friends."—Mrs. Bertha Dierksen, Box 102, Dixon, Iowa.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

How to Dance the "Tango-Classique"

Some Rules and Suggestions for the Up-to-Date Whirlers

By LILLIAN LAUFERTY.

THERE are as many rules for dancing as there are successful dancers now before our public—and that number is legion. But the one rule from which we can never get away if we want to really dance is: "Know your subject."

You can no more dance in a finished and attractive manner without all the ingredients that go to make a dance than you can bake a cherry pie without flour and butter and sugar and water and cherries. Learn this rule by heart before you get up at some giddy "The Dansant," and with one eye on a supposedly admiring gallery, whirl in the mazes of a breakneck awkwardness.

Up at the Ziegfeld "Follies of 1913," at the New Amsterdam Theater, in New York, Rose Dolly and Martin Brown are doing a fascinating combination of true "Tango" and modified Turkey Trot, that they

"You must keep exactly with the rythm of the music."

call "classique excentrique," and for the benefit of all who have seen them and the other lovers of Terpsichore who have not, they formulated for me a few simple rules for dancing.

Little Rose Dolly is like a scarlet tangoer streaking across a Southern sky—or a dash of her own Hungarian Paprika in a prosaic salad; and Martin Brown is a typical, up-to-date American youth—with the tall, slender, thoroughbred look we are all beginning to strive for. And here is "How they do it."

How to Do It.

"If you are a beginner," said Miss Dolly, "take a clever dancer—or a clever national dance—as your pattern. Study the steps, make up your mind which ones you can imitate, and then practice them one at a time with music to help you and spur you on. Work and work till you can get up and do a step and have it look just like play."

"That is quite right," said Mr. Brown. "Expression when you are doing it. Don't look strained or anxious. Practice a step in private, and work at it so hard that when you do it publicly it will look like play.

"You must keep exactly with the rhythm of the music—keep time, in other words. Follow the music, do steps that you have mastered, and do not do freak steps that don't fit in with your own personality at all. And above all, keep your toes pointed out all the time. No matter how pretty a step is, it does not look attractive if you do it in pigeon-toed fashion." He illustrated—and the same step done with pointing toe and with turned ankle and inpointed toe became a very different movement.

"Toes are very important in dancing," cried Miss Dolly, "although the modern dancer does not have to stand on them like a ballet dancer, she must keep them out and down, and sway gracefully on the ball of the foot and get the habit of keeping the instep and heel raised.

"Practice relaxing shoulders, knees and ankles."

A Good Way to Learn.

"A good way to learn the modern dances is to stand up and just practice relaxing shoulders, elbows, knees and ankles in a sort of gradual shuffle. Do this first standing firmly on your feet, then rise to the balls of the feet and try it again, then take a step or two with the body relaxed and swaying. Do this first without music and in front of a mirror, then add music, and do it again in front of the mirror. And finally do away with the mirror, and just yield as unconsciously as possible to the rythm of the dance. You will be surprised how easily it will come after you have learned to relax.

"Then you must add steps to your ingredients of knowing how to keep time, how to relax and how to express the feeling that music gives you," added Mr. Brown. "Master a quick, little, short step and a long glide, combine them in various ways, add a little ability to kick gracefully—not high necessarily—but with gracefully pointed toe and an appearance of ease—and watch clever dancers for suggestions as to steps. In this way, even without the aid of a teacher, you can learn to be a home-made turkey trotter."

:-: Helping Jimmy :-:

Today's Short Story---Complete

"I SAW Jimmy this morning," I mentionel casually.

"Yes?" answered Mrs. Veralour.

"Yes. I think we shall have to take to calling him James. The hand of time seems to have given him a sudden, fearful blow. He looked as if he had seen trouble through a microscope. Has anybody left him money, do you know?"

"Money? Good gracious, no!"

"Poor old chap. Then he must have lost his little all."

"What do you mean?" demanded Mrs. Veralour, tapping her foot impatiently. "Why must it be one or the other?"

"Well," I said, "anybody could see it was money trouble of some sort. He had the appearance of being a pauper trying to look like a millionaire, or else a millionaire disguised as a pauper. His clothes have aged frightfully during the last few days. In fact, you could hardly call them clothes; they were merely emblems of civilization."

Mrs. Veralour seemed about to speak, and then, changing her mind, put her hand in front of her mouth and converted her remark into a yawn.

"Or else it is love," I murmured, gazing dreamily into the fire.

Mrs. Veralour said nothing. Taking a cigarette from the box, she tapped it uncertainly on the back of her hand.

"Of course," she said at last, with somewhat superfluous frankness, "I—I make mistakes sometimes. You know Florence Appleton, don't you? Jimmy was frightfully gone on her. He used to come round here every afternoon and tell me how much he loved her."

"What a ridiculous thing to do. It would have been considerably more sensible for him to have gone round and told the girl how much he loved you."

Very Extraordinary.

"What?" ejaculated Mrs. Veralour, with a laugh that was nearly a shriek. "Mr. Blake, what an extraordinary thing to say."

"Well," I said, "isn't the next best thing to telling a girl you love her to tell her you don't? Especially a girl so sought after as Florence Appleton. She'd immediately begin to wonder what was the matter with him."

"M'yes," said Mrs. Veralour, "I suppose she is inclined to think that every man is in love with her; but then she's got such hordes of admirers it's really not the girl's fault."

"No," I agreed, "it's not her fault, it's her forune."

"Misfortune?" murmured Mrs. Veralour, who never by any chance listens to what I say, "well, I don't know about that. Still, as I was saying, Jimmy used to come round and tell me all about it, and I promised to help him."

"Mrs. Veralour," I said, indignantly, "you're always match-making. It's abominable. You don't deserve to be a widow."

"I promised to help him," repeated Mrs. Veralour, firmly, deaf to my remark. "He wanted rather a lot of helping," she added, reflectively; "he was so awfully shy. Fancy a man being shy."

"Why not? Somebody's got to be. What did you do? I suppose you praised him up to the skies to her."

Mrs. Veralour looked at me with an air of mild amusement.

"My dear Mr. Blake. Is your grandmother still alive?"

"Eh? Yes. Why?"

"Oh, I was only wondering where you got all your old-fashioned ideas from. Of course, I didn't praise him I ran him down. I used to go round and tell her most frightful stories of him. I warned her against him. Once you warn a girl against a man, you've wasted your time. It's like putting a 'dangerous' notice up on a sheet of ice; everybody goes to see why it was put there."

The Only Way.

"Oh," I said, weakly, "I have had many a ducking myself."

"The best reputation a man can have," she pursued, "is not to have one. The worst of it is Jimmy wouldn't live down to his reputation."

"That must be very disheartening," I said, sympathetically, "when you're doing your worst for a man."

"Yes, it was. Really, I think it was her money he was afraid of."

"Coward."

"M'yes. Still, I suppose it is humiliating for a rich girl to tell you she can never be a poor man's wife. However, I got him at last to promise that he would propose if I contrived a good opportunity for him."

She paused for a reflective moment.

"You know the summer house in the garden, don't you?"

"I do," I said, "and you know I do."

"Yes, you do, don't you," she smiled. I had a spring lock fixed on that door. You know, one of those that you can only open from the outside."

"I know. I begin to see the end of this story."

"M'm," she said. "That's the worst of being so bright—nothing comes as a surprise. Well, after I'd had the lock put on I invited them both round to lunch. Of course, I asked a lot of other people, so as not to arouse her suspicions. They all came; one or two girls and a lot of men—most of her horde, in fact. After lunch we all went out on the lawn."

"Do get on, Mrs. Veralour; you're like a writer on space rates. There are some things one takes for granted."

"I'd told Jimmy what he'd got to do."

"Get the girl in the summer house, and then you'd come along and snap the door on them?"

"Yes. Don't you think being locked in a summer house together was a good opportunity?"

"I think so. He could lead up to a proposal by saying how he wished they could never get out again. That's what you meant, isn't it?"

"Yes; only nothing quite so silly as that. I was going to give them half an hour to themselves, but after about ten minutes all the men commenced to drift away in search of her, and I was afraid they'd take her away from poor Jimmy. So I hurried along to the summer house at once."

"Go on," I urged. "Quicken the action."

"I listened for a minute to make sure they were really in there; as soon as I heard her voice I gave the door a push."

"Congratulations. A tip-top scheme, jolly well carried out."

"Well, I do think so," asserted Mrs. Veralour, in a tone curiously defensive. I—I still think so."

"Why, of course. You don't mean to say, when you opened the door later on, they weren't engaged?"

"Oh, no; they were engaged all right."

"Good," I paused for a moment, struck by a sudden thought. "But look here, what was old Jimmy looking so absolutely wretched about when I saw him this morning?"

Mrs. Veralour hesitated, and then pulled herself together.

"It wasn't he in the summer house with her, after all," she said.

Up-to-Date Jokes

The chief constable of a small town received by post six "Rogues' Gallery" photographs, taken in different positions, of an old offender wanted for burglary in a neighboring city. A fortnight later the city chief of police received this letter from the constable:

"I have arrested five of the men, and am going after the sixth tonight."

Teacher—What little boy can tell me where the home of the swallow is?

"Your town boasts a band, does it not?"

"Not exactly. We've got a band, but we don't boast of it. We just endure it."

Mr. Squills (dictating a letter of indignation)—Sir, my typist, being a lady, can not take down what I think of you; I, being a gentleman, can not even think it; but you, being neither, can easily guess my thoughts.

Binks, the Hero.

"Darling," she murmured, as she nestled against his shoulder, "do you know that horried people are saying that you are marrying me for my money?"

He leaped to his feet. "The miserable creatures!" he roared. "I won't stand it! Tell me who they are, and I'll horewhip them! I'll——"

"But, my dear," she objected, "you would create scandal, and the case would be made horribly public in the papers, and then I really could not marry you."

"What, then," he muttered, hopelessly, "can be done?"

"Darling, it is easy,' she replied, "I will make over my fortune to my brothers and sisters, and everybody shall know of it. Then no one shall be able to make horrible accusations against you."

But then he drew himself up proudly. His manliness had won a moral victory.

"Nay, Araminta!" he exclaimed. "Do not put thy sweet self to any trouble. Anthrobald Binks is proof against every slanderer!"

Ten Commandments of the Summer Visitor

By DOROTHY DIX.

INVITE not thyself to the house of another, oh, my daughter, for if so be thy friend hungereth and thirsteth for thy society she will arise and send to thee a writing bidding thee to come straightway to her abode. Yea, she will send for thee swiftly by means of the telegraph and the night letter, and if so be she holdeth her hand, take that for a sign which never faileth that she wanteth thee not.

2—Accept not an invitation from a man to tarry and stay at his house until it hath been O. K.'d by his wife, for verily I say unto thee that no man hath authority within his own home, no, not so much as to give a bone to a stray dog. It is the wife and the wife's people, and the wife's friends who have dominion over the spare bedroom.

3—When thou visiteth cast not the goo-goo eyes at thy hostess's son, nor upon her male relatives, nor upon her husband, for it is written that she that snareth the fancy of the men of the household shalt be invited there no more.

Don't Stay Too Long.

4—Forget not to take in thy trunk thy curling iron, and thy sewing tools, and thy postage stamps, and thy script for letters, and all the things of which thou hast daily need, for a borrower is an abomination and worse than the pestilence that destroyeth by night.

Praise Their Offspring.

5—Incline thy heart unto the amusements that hath been prepared for thee, and make thy countenance mirthful, though thy soul fainteth within thee when thy hostess sayeth, 'Rejoice and be glad, for to-day we go forth to picnic in the woods, and to partake of squashed lemon pie flavored with ants." Likewise dissemble thy sorrow when she trotteth thee to the church sociable, or naileth thee to the card table until thy stomach turneth in despair and thy wife riseth in rebellion.

Invite Not Thyself.

6—When thou visiteth cast veracity to the winds, for verily truth hath no place in a popular house guest. Say of thy hostess's house, "Truly, this is a palace, fit for a king. Tell me, I pray thee, what marvellous architect planned it?" Beat upon thy breast and call Heaven to witness that there was never such a view, though it be but as the view of a fly that is caught under a teacup. Praise the beauty and the wit and the way the offspring of thy hostess reciteth, and when thou departeth thy hostess shall say of thee, "Surely, here is a woman of discernment, and I will bid her return again."

7—Conform thy ways to the ways of the house that thou visiteth. Arise while it is yet night, if it be the custom of thy hosts, so that thou shalt breakfast with them, and give no trouble to the servants, for, behold, a hand-maiden in the suburbs is as precious as gold, yea, as fine gold, and as difficult to keep.

8—If thou followeth a diet and eateth of strange food prepared after an ungodly manner, visit not at all, but hie thee to an inn where thou canst pay for the trouble thou givest. Thus shalt thou save thyself from being hated by thy friends.

9—Forget not to tip the hand-maiden who waiteth upon thee, for the button-her-up-in-the-back is worthy of her hire.

10—And if thou forgettest all of the other commandments of the Summer visitor, remember this, oh, my daughter: Make thy visit short. Tarry not long in thy friend's house lest she be weary of thee. Go while yet she entreateth thee to stay with her, for it is better that thy hostess should weep because thou goest than to shed tears because thou stayest. Selah!

Saving His Face

At a very convivial dinner a man with a preternaturally solemn face arose, wine glass in hand, to propose a toast.

"May we never," he said, in deep, measured tones, "drink any more of this stuff—"

He paused, and there was a horrified silence for several seconds—"than is good for us!"

:-: The Practice of Self-Control :-:

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED.
Author of "The Etiquette of New York To-day."

IN any sphere of life self-control is an important element toward success and happiness. Control of mind is a factor toward overcoming the tendency to be oversensitive, suspicious, or tormented by imaginary slights. Moping and brooding over fancied grievances will never achieve peace. Sensitive people, who take offense easily, are very difficult to get on with. We are never sure "where to find them," as the saying is. They are constantly making exactions of their friends, calling them to account for certain delinquencies.

Social life often requires the making of concessions, the common sense not to construe the thoughtlessness of a friend into an intentional slight, or absentmindedness into indifference. Naturally, we feel that something is due between intimate friends, but even in the case of intimates a margin of kindly concession must be made. The fear that one is not receiving sufficient attention from others is an unpleasant form of egotism.

Delay in Calling.

The many demands of social life oblige people not to hold one another too seriously to account for delay in calling, for instance. Among acquaintances delay in calling, or returning calls, need not be taken as an indication of a wish to be exclusive or an intention to be neglectful. Allowances have to be made for the failings of others on this score. When an acquaintance calls after a lengthy delay it is an important courtesy to welcome her cordially, not to allude to any misunderstanding, to hasten to accept, in the kindest spirit, any explanation which may be offered, not to dwell on the subject but pass on to other matters and to do this without permittin the shadow of a suggestion that she has been dilatory. It is wise for the person making a delayed call not to be too profuse in excuses.

Many reasons for delayed calls may be considered by the sensible person who is willing to make concessions toward friends. Absence from home, illness, engagements, various home duties, interests in charitable or other work very absorbing to one's time may be among the causes for delay. The wish to have some leisure to pursue personal tastes may be another reason.

Control of Temper.

While the casting out of fretful grievances is of importance in daily life, control of temper is a rule of life to be practiced by every well-bred person. It is well not to get too excited and to remember to close a door gently. "I never knew anyone who went about banging doors and playing whirlwind to possess any influence whatever," said a wise woman.

The practice of self-control and composure will have an immense effect on one's own manners and will be sure to make a pleasing impression everywhere. To sit quietly, to keep the hands still, to walk calmly, these little things lend a charm to the person who has acquired them.

It is salutary to take stock of ourselves and recognize our own shortcomings and try to remedy them. It is good to get out of ourselves, to stop being self-centered, to give up talking of ourselves and our grievances and to live in the sunshine of cheerfulness and the breeze of larger interests.

SPORTS AND SUCH

By RIGHT CROSS

SPORT.

THEY were gathered at the ringside at twenty bucks per chair;
The champion pug was walloping his enemy with care.
"Hey! Soak 'im! Can the stallin'!" all indignantly they shout.
"Cut loose with one good honest slam and knock the rummy out!"
And soft the champion answers as the mutt he gently pounds:
"I've contracted with the movies, and this fight goes twenty rounds!"
Around and 'round the motor track the mad-speed demons fly,
While thousands cheer those heroes who still dare to do or die—
The modern gladiators brave who dread nor death nor hurt,
And boldly risk erasure in the grand old name of sport.
Now comes the far-flashed message,
Lo! The conqueror is in!
And slowly is this line ticked out:
"Tight-Rim-Stick Tires win!"

CHAMPION RITCHIE IN HIS plan to take a long rest is not so ill-advised as might at first appear. There is no case on record where a champion ever lost a title while resting.

THE SPORT CALDRON IS bubbling madly. In addition to the protested Yanks-Browns game and the white heavyweight championship controversy, Capablanca now claims a forfeit in his contest with Tenewurzel in the chess-masters' tournament.

SINCE JOHNNY COULON HAS declined to meet Kid Williams one Eddie Campi is going to tackle the little Baltimore terror again, thus proving the old adage that dubs rush in where champions prefer to rest.

THE IMMIGRATION AUTHORITIES should investigate Frank McGuinness, who claims to have been champion of the English navy. He has knocked seven men in seven starts around New York, which is enough to demonstrate that he was never remotely connected with the English navy.

THE MAGNATES MUST BE right in their contention that ballplayers draw bigger pay to-day than ever before. It is only within the last year or two that they could afford appendicitis.

THE NATIONAL COMMISSION, furthermore, is coming to the aid of the ballplayer more every day. When badly injured in a game—other injuries don't count—he can not now be released on the day he goes to the hospital. The owner is compelled to wait a couple of weeks.

BAN JOHNSON SAYS THERE are no big profits in baseball nowadays. We gathered as much from the fact that big league franchises are going begging at $1,000,000 or so in the open market.

JEANNETTE VS. LANGFORD.

NEW YORK, July 23.—It is said Joe Jeannette and Sam Langford are practically matched to meet shortly in a 20-round bout at Los Angeles.

TINKER DRAWS SUSPENSION.

BOSTON, July 23.—Manager Joe Tinker, of the Cincinnati National League team, was suspended yesterday for an argument with Umpire Orth in Monday's game.

RINGSIDE NOTES

Mike Saul, the voting referee, is on the warpath. Mike is after the scalp of Eddie Hanlon and says he will not rest until he drags the latter into the ring with him. "Let Hanlon make 135 pounds at 3 o'clock and I will give him a $50 side bet," wails Mike, "and if he can't make that weight let him step out of the lightweight division." After dispersing with these few words Mike darted up Peachtree with a large cigar between his teeth.

The question of weight is holding up the proposed Jack White-Abe Attell match on the coast for August 25. Attell is demanding 124 pounds ringside, while White is sticking out for 126 pounds at 3 o'clock.

Charlie White writes from Chicago that he is ready to come to Atlanta for another ring engagement. The crack Windy City battler says he will meet any boy the promoters wish to put him on with. A match between White and Whitney should prove a corker.

Kid Young has entirely recovered from his battle with Charlie Lee and is now ready to meet his rival in a return encounter. Young says he will start light work at once so as to be in the best shape in case he does get another match with Lee.

Ad Wolgast is to be seen in action on the coast again. Tom McCarey has signed the ex-champion to meet Johnny Dundee in a 20-round affair next month. Dundee and Wolgast are at Los Angeles at the present time and will start work for the mill some time next week.

Coast fans are going wild over the coming Matty Baldwin-Leach Cross bout scheduled to take place at Los Angeles on July 29. Baldwin is well thought of our West, as he holds a 20-round verdict over Willie Ritchie, the present title holder.

FIVE PLAYERS HAVE CHANCE TO WIN BIG PRIZE

Jordan, Manchester, Murphy, Holliday and Champlin Have Chance to Finish First.

WHO is going to win the handsome loving cup being donated by Hearst's Sunday American and The Atlanta Georgian to the most popular player in the Empire State League? This is the question that is puzzling fans in this circuit these days.

Five players are now closely bunched, with any one of them having an excellent chance to cop the big prize. Then there are several others who may still be heard from if their followers will only get busy. But at the present time Dick Manchester, Pat Murphy, Otto Jordan, Goat Holliday and H. Champlin have the best chance. They are the favorites and have been taking turns in holding the top rung of the ladder for the past few weeks.

Jordan Setting Pace.

Otto Jordan is setting the pace now. The Valdosta manager has hit his early stride, and votes are pouring in fast for him. Manchester and Murphy are right behind the Valdosta manager and may oust him from his present position any day.

Goat Holliday was the big man yesterday. Several hundred votes were sent in by his admirers and he is but a few votes behind Murphy. Rube Zellers, Dudley, Mutts Gray, and Franks are also moving up in the race.

Everybody Clipping Coupons.

The coupon-clipping stunt is now the popular sport among the fans in this circuit. The fans have taken to this contest with a vengeance, and every day some player does some star work, usually a batch of coupons are received for him the next day. When Valdosta wins, Jordan is remembered by the fans. When Murphy gets a couple of hits or has a good day in the field, Thomasville fans are heard from, and so on down the list.

Send in Votes.

The coupon appears in to-day's paper, so get busy and vote for your favorite diamond star. The more votes sent in by you, the better chance your player has of moving up in the race. Remember, you can get your friends or neighbors to help you. By all means don't hang on to your coupons. Mail them to the Baseball Popularity Editor, Atlanta Georgian, Atlanta, Ga.

'CHICK' EVANS LOW MAN IN WESTERN TOURNAMENT

HOMEWOOD COUNTRY CLUB, FLOOSMOOR, ILL., July 23.—Playing exceedingly fine golf, Charles Evans, Jr., the present title holder of the Western amateur championship, played in the second half of the qualifying round here this morning and led the 64 survivors when he turned in a card of 73 for the round.

This, with his score of 78 made yesterday, gives him a grand total of 151 for the 36 holes. He went out in 38 and came back in 35. On the home hole he holed his approach, which was off the green, a distance of 75 feet from the cup, and it gave him a four for the hole and enabled him to beat Warren K. Wood's score of 152.

Warren Wood, of the Homewood Club, made the morning round in 75, taking 36 for the first nine holes and 39 for the return trip. This, with his score of 77 made yesterday, gives him second best score in the qualifying round.

WOOD WILL BE OUT OF GAME FOR SEVERAL WEEKS

BOSTON, July 23.—Joe Wood, star pitcher for the Boston Americans, will be out of the game for several weeks.

Examination of his injured right under the X-ray yesterday showed that there is a crack in the end of the big bone, and indications are that a piece of the bone has been chipped off. Unusual care is being taken in the treatment of the injury to guard against stiffness in the joints, which would put an end to Wood's usefulness as a pitcher

NILES AND DABNEY WIN EASTERN TENNIS DOUBLES

BOSTON, July 23.—In the opening round of the Eastern tennis doubles at Longwood yesterday Niles and Dabney defeated Clothier and Gardner in one of the most sensational doubles matches ever played at the local court. Score, 7-5, 6-4, 4-6 and 6-4.

In the only singles match played this morning S. C. Inman defeated H. C. Pray 6-4, 6-2 and 6-3.

SMITH ASKED $5,000 TO BOX FIREMAN FLYNN

By Otto Floto.

THE inside story of how the match between Gunboat Smith and Jim Flynn was finally cinched is just coming to light. In order to get the Gunboat person's bold Spencerian moniker to the legal sheet of paper on which were written the conditions that are to govern the bout, Jack Curley was forced to guarantee Smith and his spiritual adviser, James Buckley, that their share would amount to $5,000. Curley did not care to assume the risk, but was forced up to a barrier which meant either comply with the demand or no match. Smith, it is claimed, wanted the refusal to guarantee him the amount named above as a loophole to crawl out of the meeting with the Pueblo-an.

"The very fact that I have shown such anxiety to clinch the bout for Flynn speaks louder than words how certain I am that Jim can stow away the Gunboat," writes Curley. "If from what I have seen of Smith entitles him to be called the Gunboat then Flynn is the Battering Ram and will sink the old hulk as soon as he jams into it. This battle, as you know, is the commencement of the elimination of 'white hopes.' Manager Billy Gibson will offer a belt emblematic of the premier heavyweight honors among the whites. If Flynn wins it—and there isn't the least doubt in my mind but that he will—I want to go on record right now as saying he'll be ready to defend it against all comers. We'll give out checks like they do in the barber shops on which will be printed the word NEXT."

JEANNETTE WINS BOUT.

NEW YORK, July 23.—Joe Jeannette failed to make an impression here when he met John Lester Johnson. The contest went ten rounds with Jeannette an easy winner. Sheriff Harburger ordered the bout stopped between Willie Rothwell and Ralph Rose in the fourth round when Rose hit low.

COOPERSTOWN WINS POLO MATCH.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., July 23.—The Army polo polo quartet was defeated by the Cooperstown team in the second round for the Overture Cup at the annual Point Judith tournament yesterday by a score of 9½ goals to 7.

But C. Murphy Opened Up---Once Bargain in Joe Agler Resulted

By O. B. Keeler.

SPEAKING of Chubby Chawles Murphy, however—and a good many people are speaking of C. C. these days—it musn't be gathered that Mr. Murphy never has opened up his heart at all, just because he was the least bit fractious in that little matter of the Leifield deal with Atlanta.

Not by any means.

There was a time, now, that Mr. Murphy did the Crackers a good turn, and you may judge how good it was by the fact that the Cubs' owner sold the Crackers a ball player for exactly half the price he could have realized elsewhere.

Doesn't sound like Mr. Murphy, does it?

But it was—and he didn't have to do it, either.

Maybe you remember when Joe Agler came to the Crackers. Maybe you also remember just how it was that he didn't stay in Jersey City, where he came from. But if you don't you may find an excuse for a bit of history.

Agler belonged to the Cubs, Jersey City made an offer for him. Murphy accepted the offer. Agler reported.

So far, O. K.

Then came the trouble.

Mr. Murphy asked for the price. He said it was $3,500. Jersey City said it was $2,500. Mr. Murphy showed a telegram offering $3,500. Mr. J. City showed a telegram, filed at the other end, offering $2,500.

Apparently both were correct. Undeniably both were sincere in their convictions. The mistake seems to have happened along the wire somewhere.

But, anyway, there was a fearful row. Jersey City offered to pay $2,500 for Agler. Mr. Murphy wouldn't touch it with boxing gloves.

Right at the top of the squabble Mr. Murphy wired heatedly to know what the Atlanta club would give for a perfectly good fork-hand first sacker.

The Atlanta management said $1,250.

Mr. Murphy said, "Done."

And it was.

And (considering also Mr. Agler's first basing capacity) the Atlanta management has felt pretty kindly toward Mr. Murphy, which may serve to offset some of the regard entertained for the Cubs' owner in Jersey City.

NEWS from our old friend, "Lefty" Russell.

The expensive southpaw didn't have much luck with the Athletics, and when he came to Atlanta year before last he didn't find the come-back trail thickly set with four-leaf clovers. The prize beauty showed class in only one game. Then he flivvered. Also his habits were not of the most serene, and he was afflicted with temperament.

It looked as if he never would be a regular pitcher.

And he isn't now.

He's a first baseman with the Allentown club, of the Tri-State League. And the last set of records from that circuit give Lefty a fine little rating.

Playing in 61 games, the ex-slabman has a batting average of .314 and stands well up toward the top of the heap. His fielding average is not so lofty, but his .975 is explained by a willingness to go after anything in sight.

And the folks down at Allentown like Lefty pretty well, thank you!

THE grim rally of the apparently down-and-out Pirates is getting to be the talk of the National League. Not even the Giants have been steaming along with the powerful drive of the Clarke machine in the last two weeks, though the commanding lead of McGraw's clan overshadows a spurt that otherwise might be threatening. The present series between the clubs cuts deeply into the situation, especially as the Pirates started it with the record of being easy for the Giants in every previous encounter this season.

KILBANE PLANS LONG TRIP; TO MEET BEST IN CLASS

CLEVELAND, OHIO, July 23.—Johnny Kilbane, featherwieght champion, has announced that his promised trip to Ireland will be extended into a boxing tour of the world. The champion will go after the best in England, Ireland and the Continent, after which he may visit Australia and meet the best featherweights there.

Don't All Speak At Once.

By O. B. KEELER.

WHO was it said the Pirates were through—
That they lacked the class and the wallop, too;
Who kidded the slump of that mighty crew
In phrases of light derision?
Who was it said that when Honus passed
The Skull and Bones would crawl down the mast—
That the One Best Wager, first and last,
Was a berth in the Second Division?

WHO was it said they would walk forlorn
In the Lowly Ways that are trimmed with thorn—
Would play the target for wads of scorn,
With never a flash of defiance?
They're traveling now, on the season's wane,
At a mighty clip—but the dopesters strain
For a Tip to quiet the wild refrain:
"Will they EVER wallop the Giants?"

FRENCH CHAMPION QUITS; TAME BRAND OF KNOCK-OUT

BOSTON, July 23.—Mariel Thomas, welterweight champion of France, was declared defeated by Mike Glover, of South Boston, in the fourth round of a bout here last night.

Thomas had the better of the argument in the first two rounds, but Glover became aggressive in the third. After two minutes of fighting in the fourth round, Thomas dropped his hands and walked toward his corner, followed by Glover. Referee Sheehan interfered, rendering a decision of a "technical knockout."

BOSTON, July 23.—The work of strengthening the Boston Americans for the pennant race of 1914 has begun. Two young pitchers have been bought within a few days. Pitcher Radloff, whose purchase from the Manistee club of the Michigan State League was announced here to-day, being the latest acquisition. The newcomer is a left-hander. He will report at the close of the Michigan League season.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

THE PLAYERS' UNION.

The score was knotted in the ninth, a man on every base,
And on the slab the pitcher stood with sorrow on his face.
Then up stepped mighty Tyrus Cobb, his bludgeon in his hands,
And mighty were the cheers that rang throughout the crowded stands.
But Tyrus never smote the ball upon that fateful day,
For all the athletes turned their backs and calmly walked away.
"There's nothing doing," they averred, and left the baseball yard.
"We can not play against that guy—he has no union card."

Some base wretch has unearthed the fact that Mr. Chappelle's first name is Laverne. This shows that you can always get something on somebody if you dig deep enough.

Old Bill Naughton uttered a great truth when he said that fighters get more than they are worth. A conservative estimate is that most of them get 99 per cent too much.

If those Pirates do not have a care they may be thrown into the hoose gow for exceeding the speed limit.

If the National League schedule were to open on the Fourth of July, the Pirates would finish approximately 147 parasangs to the good.

The sole trouble with the said Pirates is that they can't break the old habit of being left at the post.

Bobby Wallace did the hero stunt at a fire yonder eve, thereby garnering almost as much glory as if he had made a home run with the bases full.

I love to see Old Joe Dunn as he gayly frisks about,
As graceful as a William goat that suffers from the gout.

Bat Nelson says he has quit the ring in order to have more time to count his money. This always has been Mr. Nelson's favorite pastime.

The reason Brooklyn is not losing more games is that there is a rule forbidding it to play more than two games in one day.

"The Giants will win in a walk," quoth Joe Tinker, who, having been walked on by said Giants, knows something of their walking ability.

The man who first called it the sport of kings must have had an awful grouch against the monarchial form of government.

WHITE AND CAPERS BEAT AUGUSTA NET CHAMPIONS

AUGUSTA, GA., July 23.—When Henry Garrett and Will Gary defated the Waring brothers, of Columbia, S. C., for the championship in doubles in the recent South Atlantic tennis tournament it was thought that the Augusta cracks would rest secure with their hard-fought-for honors until next year, at least, when an effort would be made to defeat them. But such was not to be.

There is being conducted a city tennis tournament here and Ed H. White and Frank H. Capers, who did not look at all serious in the South Atlantic tennis tourney, defeated Garrett and Gary 6-3, 3-6 and 6-0. It was about the rudest jolt that Messrs. Garrett and Gary have had in a long time.

STATE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE ORGANIZED

Optimistic Trade Boosters From Throughout Georgia Namee Executive Committee.

Voicing their belief that a new era of prosperity is dawning for Georgia, more than 75 representatives of trade and commercial bodies of various towns and counties in the State met at the headquarters of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce Wednesday morning and took the first steps in an organization of a great State commercial organization, to be known as the Georgia Chamber of Commerce. C. J. Haden, chairman of the special committee of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, which called the statewide meeting, presided.

The convention unanimously and enthusiastically adopted resolutions prepared by a committee on temporary organization, headed by C. G. Bradley, of Madison, that the new State organization be formed. The resolutions provided for the naming of an executive committee of seven, with C. J. Haden, of Atlanta, as chairman, to take charge of the active work of organization. This committee, which Mr. Haden announced he will appoint within two weeks, will name a vice president for each county in the State that is affiliated with the central organization, a secretary and treasurer, and will have charge of the work of securing a charter for the State chamber and the drafting of a constitution and by-laws.

Next Meet in Macon.

The next meeting of the State organization will be held in Macon, Ga., at the pleasure of the executive committee. This meeting probably will not be called until the committee has completed its work of securing a charter and drafting the constitution and by-laws. A president will be elected at the Macon meeting, which, it is hoped, will be attended by not less than 300 representatives of commercial bodies.

Considerable discussion developed in the selection of the next place of meeting, with Atlanta and Macon as the contending cities. The tide was turned in favor of Macon when Mayor Woodward of Atlanta, President Moore of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce and other prominent Atlantans declared that the Central Georgia city should be given the preference over Atlanta.

Not an Atlanta Move.

"We must show the people of Georgia that this is not solely an Atlanta movement," declared Mayor Woodward, "and that we are willing to work for the good of the whole State as much as we are willing to work for Atlanta. This movement must be made State-wide to attain its proper measure of success, and it can not be made State-wide if the people become imbued with the idea that it is strictly an Atlanta affair. By all means the next meeting should be held in Macon, and if possible future meetings, at least until the Chamber of Commerce has become thoroughly established should be held in various cities throughout the State."

The question of where the meetings of the State organization shall be held will not be definitely decided until the Macon meeting. It is probable that the executive committee will submit, at that time, recommendations as to the regular meetings of the State body. Chairman Haden is of the opinion that the meetings, at least for a year or two, should not be held at any one place twice in succession.

Speeches Full of Optimism.

A number of optimistic addresses, expressing a firm belief in the future of Georgia and in the State Chamber of Commerce as a method of development, were delivered during the Wednesday morning session. Among the speakers were prominent business men from all over the State and several representatives of railroads that do business in Georgia, all of whom pledged their support and the support of their corporations to the new movement.

V. N. Richards, of Washington, of the Southern Railway, and J. A. Pride, of Norfolk, Va., representing the Seaboard Air Line, were among the railroad men who addressed the meeting. Other speakers were Dan G. Hughes, of Twiggs County; Philip G. Campbell, of Atlanta, founder of the "Corn Club" movement; Robert Maddox, of Atlanta; R. D. Cole, of Newnan; C. D. McKinney, of Decatur, and C. G. Bradley, of Morgan County.

At 1 o'clock the visiting delegates were entertained at a luncheon at the Capital City Club, as guests of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

House Still Toils With Funds Bill

The House gave three hours to the consideration of the general appropriations bill Wednesday and managed to get through nine pages. Only one change was made in the report of the committee. This was the adoption of an amendment by John Y. Smith, of Atlanta, increasing the appropriation for the Soldiers' Home from $25,000 to $30,000 a year.

At 10 o'clock the House resolved itself into a committee of the whole and took up the appropriations bill, with Speaker Pro Tem McMichael in the chair. An obstacle was met in the adoption of Section 1 and Section 1-A, which provides for the salaries of Statehouse officers, in amendments offered by Representative Ed Wohlwender. The Representative from Muscogee wanted to know whether any of the Statehouse officers were receiving fees, and it took an hour's discussion for the other members to convince him that everyone was on the salary basis. He offered two amendments, but withdrew both.

In the appropriations bill no objection was made to amounts set aside for the colleges of Georgia, as published in The Georgian several days ago.

When the House takes up the bill Thursday it will begin with the appropriation of $2,500,000 for the public schools of the State. This is the exact amount as paid out to country school teachers this year, which is more than $100,000 under the actual expense incurred and the amount appropriated by the last Legislature.

Anthony N. Brady Dead in London

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

LONDON, July 23.—Anthony N. Brady, New York financier, died last night in his rooms at the Hotel Charlton of heart disease.

Mr. Brady, whose fortune is estimated at $100,000,000, arrived in London from New York two weeks ago. It is believed grief over the death of his daughter in a wreck on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad at Westport, Conn., last October, hastened his end.

Louis Sherry, the New York restaurant man, who was with Mr. Brady, has arranged to ship the body back to America to-morrow on the liner Olympic.

TOO MUCH LAW, NOT ENOUGH THOUGHT

Prevailing Unrest Injures Business—Lack of Sympathy Destroys Incentive.

By B. C. FORBES.

Throughout this country there is a growing tendency to act first and then think. We have too much action and not enough thinking. We pass a hundred laws, for example, where five would suffice. No other nation scribbles on its statute books such a conglomeration of nonsense as our legislators indulge in every year.

We are too restless, to feverish, too prone to chase after will-o'-the-wisp panaceas. We are becoming enamored of turmoil, or social strife, of backbiting.

There are manifold wrongs to be righted, it is true. We do well to rise up in wrath against certain practices in both high and low places. Yet, the symptoms of restlessness prevalent to-day suggest underlying godlessness, or, perhaps I should call it mental polse.

Our educational institutions teach how to do things rather than how to think. And when one considers that progress should, and no doubt will, mean less need for all-day work and more time for thought and reflection, is it not infinitely important that THINKING be cultivated? Have not many of us lost the habit of communion with ourselves? Some have even ceased to be able to converse. We must have constant distraction—business, it may be, or pleasure. We must have an eternal round of theaters, cabarets, moving pictures, vaudeville, automobiling, boating, trips hither and thither, "thrillers" of the Coney Island pattern, etc., etc., etc.

We have little opportunity to get acquainted with ourselves.

Family life, the quiet home circle, tranquil pursuits are a-dying.

The storm and strife of business, of money-making appears to be growing more tense and desperate every day. We have all but killed sentiment in the hurly-burly of latter-day competition.

We have not masters and men, but corporations and "hands." The head of a department told me on Saturday that an employe came to him and expressed regret at leaving after fifteen years' service, but the executive was nonplussed, for he was not aware that he had ever set eyes on the employe until that moment!

"Efficiency" is supposed to be a foe to all sentiment in business. My humble opinion is that without a modicum of sentiment between the employee and the employer or superior you can not have the fullest measure of efficiency. There must be something more than the mere performance of a task under strict surveillance. There must be some sense of loyalty, a spirit of camaraderie, the right esprit de corps. You can not geth the best results by a policy of heartlessness, by treating men as machines, by ignoring the human side of them. They are of the same flesh and blood as their overseers and employers. They have like hopes and ambitions. They have family ties, domestic troubles and joys exactly as their "superiors" have.

On Saturday I was privileged to attend an annual outing of one of our great banks, an institution employing a force of between 450 and 500. Its president had them all, along with almost as many of their families and friends, at his beautiful home as his guests for the afternoon and evening. Such a gracious act makes more for loyalty and honesty and industry and service than all the "efficiency" maxims propounded in the last half dozen years.

The personal element can not be crushed and killed with impunity. A little break in the year's round, such as that I mention, serves as a reminder that life has its pleasant as well as its serious side; that there is a time to laugh as well as work; that the chief officer is not above associating with the humblest clerk, that all are human, that there are other bonds than salary contracts.

There is need for taking the rough edge off life. There is need for sentiment and sympathy and fuller understanding, room for a helping hand, for a little encouragement. Things can not always go well. Life is not one grand, sweet song.

My bonny man, the warld, it's true,
Was made for neither me nor you;
It's just a place to warstle through,
As Job confessed o't;
And aye the best that we'll can do
Is mak the best o't.

What you would like's a palace ha',
Or Sunday parlor dink an' braw
Wi' a' things ordered in a raw
By denty leddies.
Weel, than, ye cannae hae't that's a'
That to be said is.

As Robert Louis Stevens says:

Glossary—"Warstle," wrestle. "Ha'," hall. "Dink an' braw," neat and pretty. "Denty leddies," dainty ladies.

COTTON GOSSIP

The market has been very weak all day on predictions of unsettled weather with showers over the western belt. The selling for a while was general with no special support. The weakness of the July position in New Orleans has also caused selling here. Some of those who have been identified with the bull side for the past two weeks were among the sellers, though they are buying now on the decline and express the belief that the market should be bought on soft spots regardless of weather conditions, especially with the spot situation so acute. Though you hear a great many bearish expressions to the effect that we have seen the high level for some time to come.—J. M. Anderson.

Riordan sold 4,000 bales of January at 11.25.

Bishop, Texas, says: "More cotton pickers in demand and Mexican rebels and federals coming for the purpose. Cotton opening fast on 700-acre farm, promising bale to the acre."

Dallas wires: "Texas generally clear. Oklahoma—North portion cloudy; balance clear."

NEW ORLEANS, July 23.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map shows very favorable conditions; cloudy over entire eastern half of the belt and Oklahoma. Fair in rest of the belt. Splendid rains in the Eastern States and Alabama, nice showers in Louisiana and Mississippi. Heavy rains in Galveston, but none in interior of Texas. Indications are for clearing over the Atlantics, showers in the Central States and Eastern part of Texas with increasing cloudiness over the Western half of Texas.

Liverpool cables: "Spot cotton, fair demand; prices easier; sales estimated 8,000. American middling fair, 7.29; good middling, 6.95; middling, 6.68; low middling, 6.49; good ordinary, 6.01; ordinary, 5.67."

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "July gyrations stirred the lethargic New Orleans talent out of a half slumber. Ring traders were not looking for anything of the kind, and for a time lacked an adequate explanation of the market's action. All along it has been understood that the strength of the New Orleans July position resulted from the presence of concentrated long interest, held by a few men who were expected to stand pat and receive cotton, and from the presence of a scattered long interest held by men who were simply riding on the backs of the other fellow. So confident were the riders that July would be protected to the last that they neglected the small but important formality of watching the pulse of the market, in session and out.

"Early yesterday the fact became known to a few that the concentrated long interest in July had been wholly liquidated and the wise boys moved to the ringside to watch the fun when the 'riders' should wake up. The news spread slowly and the sensitive nerve was not touched until after the lunch hour. Then pandemonium broke loose. There were not a great many outstanding speculative long contracts, but as everybody interested wanted to liquidate at one and the same moment, fluctuations were violent. The talent has now turned its attention to August. It is well within the range of the possible that a few of the 2,300 bales taken up on July contracts may be retendered on August. It is also possible that the talent may shy away from August, because of the comparative rapidity with which new crop cotton is now showing up, as there is a disposition in some quarters to believe that 'first' bales will be more quickly followed by a free movement than is usual."

MILLER-COTTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, July 23.—Influence of excellent rains in Atlantic States was felt in the market. With showers predicted for Texas the outlook is quite encouraging for crops. Sentiment is more bearish, and selling would probably be free if rains come over the Southwest. Otherwise, the market may wait on further developments without material decline.

BAR SILVER.

NEW YORK, July 23.—Commercial bar silver, 58⅞; Mexican dollars, 47.

LONDON, July 23.—Bar silver steady, 27¼d, up 1-16d.

COTTON SEED OIL.

NEW YORK, July 23.—October was the center of attraction in the cotton seed oil market to-day, selling up 12 points. Later months were in demand from speculators. Crude mills are very firm in their views, and are offering very sparingly at about half a cent above the market.

Refiners continue moderate buyers of old crop oil, this demand forcing the price up. On the advance there were moderate realizing sales, which caused a setback in October and November of 4 to 5 points.

COTTON DROPS ON WEATHER OUTLOOK

Bull Clique Liquidates When Longs Curtail Holdings—Buying Light—No Support.

NEW YORK, July 23.—With cables at a point or so better than had been expected and no rain in either Texas or Oklahoma, the cotton market opened quiet and steady to-day, with prices showing irregularity, being 2 off to 3 points higher than the closing quotations of Tuesday. Barometric conditions as shown on the map did not indicate any rain in prospect for the Western belt, resulting in most active positions increasing their gains 2 to 4 points from the initial level.

Cotton bulls received another jolt after the call when another drop of 30 points in July cotton at New Orleans unsettled the market. July New Orleans dropped from 12.00 to 11.70, while August followed with a loss of 25 points. This, together with the late map showing unsettled weather condition in the Western belt, was about the only interesting feature, with the exception of scattered trade buying, the market was friendless and prices droped 6 to 12 points from the opening. July and August were the heaviest pressed, both declining 12 points. The selling was generally accredited to holders of long contracts, who were tired of waiting for the market to pull out of the rut.

During the afternoon session Memphis operators were reported sellers on the rumor that the National Ginners Association gave the crop 82 per cent, compared with the Government figures of July 3, of 81.8, which would indicate a slight improvement for the month. This brought out a renewal of the early selling sufficiently to maintain prices around the low point.

The market closed steady with prices at a net decline of 9 to 12 points from Tuesday's final.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER.

NEW ORLEANS, July 23.—There were good and rather general rains over night in Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina; showers fell in Louisiana and Mississippi. Galveston, Tex., had a good rain, but there was little in the interior of the State. Indications are for clearing weather in the Atlantics, cloudy in the Central and Western States; more general showers in Central belt, and also in the Eastern section of Texas and Western Oklahoma. More general rains are indicated for the Western States toward Saturday.

Liverpool was about as due and quotes spots 3 points lower; sales, 8,000 bales. Futures weakened toward the close on better weather news.

Our market opened at unchanged figures, but soon gave way on the Government forecast of unsettled weather and showers for the Western States. August showed the greatest decline, probably consequence of hedge selling against spots. Trading settled around 11.42 for October. While there is no pronounced supporting demand from the trade, selling is conservative to avoid defeat on technical conditions.

New York advises that freight room for 4,000 bales to be shipped out of the local stock to Liverpool has been canceled, and that some cotton is coming there for delivery on July.

COPPER STOCKS HEAVILY BOUGHT

Big Issues Readily Absorbed by Strong Sources Who Disregard Temporary Fluctuations.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 23.—Lower prices prevailed at the opening of the stock market to-day, with the exception of the copper shares which ruled strong.

Canadian Pacific showed a loss of a point in response to a similar decline in the London market. Other industrial issues yielded fractionally, but the recessions were not accompanied by any indications of weakness, and as the leader the one developed after the first few minutes of trading.

United States Government 2s showed a further decline this morning, 10,000 of the bonds selling at 96¾, a decrease of ⅜.

The London market was dull.

Trading on the curb was steady.

The tone continued dull through the forenoon and all around fractional losses were recorded. Canadian Pacific dropped ¼, a net loss of 1¼. Steel, New York, New Haven and Hartford and Union Pacific declined ⅛. Petroleum was the most prominent in the declines, losing 1⅛ since the opening. Changes in other issues were in the form of fractional declines.

Call money loaning at 2¼.

The market closed strong. Government bonds strong; other bonds firm.

STOCK GOSSIP

While the market has a reactionary tendency, do not look for any decline of consequence. There seems to be a steady accumulation of the better class of stocks on all recessions by the large interests, who buy for a long pull and disregard temporary fluctuations. Prices of dividend-paying issues are low, and if present crop prospects materialize at harvest time, we look for a continuation of large earnings for railroads, and a higher range of values before the end of the year.—G. D. Potter.

Fat Hens Declared To Be Best Layers

Grain Feeding Gives Desired Result. Expert Tells When Fowl Is Useless.

By JUDGE J. F. MARSHALL.

It is no secret with a great many poultrymen and farmers that a well-fed, fat hen is a good egg producer, in spite of the hue and cry by a certain class warning us not to get our hens fat.

I believe these people are honest in their opinions. I think they have been governed almost wholly by the fact that at times they have killed an old hen that had passed her usefulness and quit producing eggs, and the hen in question was filled with fat and no signs of eggs.

Putting two and two together, they decided that the reason she was not producing eggs was on account of her fat, while the real truth in the matter is she was too old to produce eggs. And her fatness is explained by lack of exercise.

Observation covering a period of nearly 40 years, during which I have made a study of the hen, her laying times, her condition during that time, and in fact everything pertaining to egg production, has brought me to the conclusion that it is the fat but energetic hen that gives us the eggs.

Corn Not a Bad Feed.

I have seen hundreds of hens dressed for the table, and it has been almost a universal rule that the hen that was full of eggs in various stages of formation was also full of layers of fat. I have observed hundreds of farmers who would feed their hens corn almost exclusively the year round and market eggs by the bushel all the time. They were stock farmers who had more corn to spare than any other kind of grain, and they made use of it.

How often you have heard corn condemned? Some go so far as to assert that it should not be fed to hens at all in any considerable quantity.

Did you ever stop to think that the yolk of the egg is about 60 per cent fat, while the white and shell contain no fat? The yolk being the first part of the egg to form must necessarily have, as the Irishman said, the wherewithal to form it from. The fat must be there ready for the work.

Surplus Energy Gives Eggs.

We must remember that the egg is manufactured from the surplus energy the hen has over and above that necessary to maintain her body in a good, healthy condition. As soon as that point is reached she begins to lay on the reserve, which is fat out of which the egg is made.

There may be an occasional hen that will take on fat abnormally and get filled up so as to retard egg production, but we must take the chances on that if we are working for heavy egg production. Such hens usually are not worth much for eggs in any event.

There is a class of hens that tend to take on fat outside of the digestive tract on the lower part of the abdomen. They get so fat that it is difficult for them to walk. As a rule such hens had just as well be disposed of as soon as found in that condition, for the fat is in such a position that it can not be utilized in egg formation.

These are drone hens which give many persons the idea that fat hens are useless. They are the exceptions that prove the rule.

Professor James Rice, of Cornell poultry department, says it has been his experience that hens will consume considerably more food a time before they begin to lay, another indication that they are preparing the system for the great strain to be put upon it.

Experiment Suggested.

Then did you ever notice how ravenously a hen taking care of chickens will eat in her endeavor to recoup herself, and how, as soon as she has fattened up, she will begin to lay?

For the sake of experimenting along that line just feed the hen with chickens just enough to keep her in moderate condition, but not nearly what she would like to have, and see how long she will be commencing to lay.

To sum up the matter, a hen must have a variety consisting of a great bulk of green stuff, together with the grain and a supply of meat in some form, in all a good, generous bill of fare at all times, that she may get her body in good condition with the extra for fat. On the farm range the hen will get much of her variety of greens, as well as bugs for the meat, so that grain is the real thing needed.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Several Big Deals Reported Wednesday

Announcement Soon of Interesting Transactions—Realty Looking Up. Marietta Street Lease.

Reports of big sales in realty circles have taken the place largely of news of the medium-sized transactions, and are proving infinitely more interesting. An investor, for instance, has bought an $80,000 parcel that he will hold for enhancement, and an owner has refused more than half a million on a downtown corner. Another dealer, it is reported, has sold a handsome dwelling on a North Side street between the Peachtrees, and has refused a flattering offer on central property wanted by a syndicate for improvement with a substantial building.

There are other signs of returning activity in real estate, and the dealers are very optimistic of a heavy fall business. Details of the above transactions are expected to come out in a week, when they will be ready for announcement. Other trades are in the contract stage.

Chamber Directors Meeting.

The directors of the Chamber of Commerce Realty Company met Tuesday afternoon at the Chamber of Commerce rooms in the Empire Building and decided to fix a price on the four top floors of the Chamber of Commerce Building so that this price could be submitted to the local committee of merchants and manufacturers. The directors are meeting again Wednesday afternoon to fix this price definitely, and a report to the other body is expected at once.

Marietta Street Lease.

Mr. Rankin, of the Smith, Ewing & Rankin Renting Agency, has announced the lease for a term of No. 164 Marietta street, a three-story and basement building, to the Atlanta Envelope Company for a client, at about $3,000 a year. The building contains about 20,000 square feet of floor space.

Meeting on Realty Loans.

A subcommittee of the State Legislature has taken hold of the bill to repeal the bill of 1910, which prohibits loans of State and municipal funds on real estate. Committees of the Atlanta Real Estate Board appeared at the Capitol Tuesday afternoon to present arguments in favor of the repeal, and they received a warm reception.

Certain bond dealers who are interested in having the bill remain as enacted also appeared. Speaking of their argument, Harris White, president of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, declared it was "weak."

Concrete Buildings Planned.

Two concrete buildings will soon be erected by the syndicate interested in the Walker street development. These structures will face on Walker street, where the new Southern Railway tracks will pass, and will be used for wholesale and manufacturing purposes. More than twenty applications for space have been received by the projectors. Among those in the syndicate are W. S. McKemie, Tom Stocks, W. J. Bialock and Ernest Duncan.

Judge Don A. Pardee recently approved a connection between the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic and the Southern at this point, and the work can start at once laying tracks from the Southern to Haynes street.

What You Can't Do NOW, You Can Never Do.

There Is No Such Thing as a To-morrow That Is to Do Wonders. To-morrow Means NEVER. It Is a Word of Failure.

(Copyright, 1913.)

Don't plan for anything to-morrow, unless you ARE WORKING AT THAT THING TO-DAY.

A picture on this page shows you one of a million young men who say "I will make a start to-morrow."

There is no such start, there is no such to-morrow.

If you can't work to-day, you can't work to-morrow.

If you can't begin the thing to-day, you can NEVER begin it.

To-morrow is a word that in every language means NEVER. It means self-deception, disappointment, idleness, lack of purpose.

When a thought comes to you, get at it.

Don't say to yourself, "I will do that sometime; perhaps to-morrow."

Make a note of the idea, think it over, plan for it, BEGIN IT.

If you can't start it now, you never can do it.

The thing to do is to work to-day, and to keep working to-morrow and every other day.

Keep your mind on to-day, devote the hours of to-day TO THE WORK OF TO-DAY.

Then when to-day's working hours are over, and you have actually done all that you can in those hours of work, permit yourself, if you choose, to think of plans and dreams for the future.

There is not a young man in the country without some good idea, some good plan, some earnest hope in his mind.

But the curse of a million is, that the plan, the idea, is to take form and become real TO-MORROW.

Get away from that to-morrow habit.

You need not take literally the advice, "Live as though this were to be your last day." A man who starts a house must believe that he has days in which to finish it.

The thing to do IS TO START THE HOUSE TO-DAY, and let the to-morrows take care of their work.

We print this picture because it seems, in the attitude of the man sitting under the tree, to typify the attitude of a great many American young men, and to give a needed rebuke.

If you are sitting like this boy, with your arms folded, your feet together and your head down, jump up, throw back your shoulders, take a long breath, and start now up that hill that leads to success.

Pity this poor "futurist" of failure. He is the futurist of to-morrow, the futurist of the plan that will never become real action. He is as dismal a failure in his way as those poor so-called "futurists" who invented what they call a new style of art, and have only succeeded in being unusually hideous.

Don't BAKE Your Baby--
Many Mothers Do It

Hese Is Common Sense Advice from the Chicago Health Department. Read It. Profit by It.

Copyright, 1913.

There are too many "BAKED" babies in this world. Everywhere you see unfortunate little babies suffering with the heat, dressed in woolen or in stiff, starched clothing that adds to their sorrow, babies better suited to the arctic regions than to a hot summer day in a hot city.

Many mothers need the advice which is given and reproduced here. The two pictures are from a bulletin issued by the Chicago Health Department.

This little tot is comfortable and happy when the Summer days are hot. He is dressed right to stand the heat.

This unhappy little codger is all fussed up and as a result he is hot and uncomfortable. He is dressed wrong for hot days.

THE BABY IN SUMMERTIME.

A baby can be more comfortable in hot weather than an adult, but few of them are.

The pernicious and senseless habit of dressing a baby in flannels and endless frills and fancies on hot summer days is such a common practice among mothers of certain nationalities that scores of babies are literally baked to death during the summer months.

During the very hot weather babies should wear only a diaper and a thin gauze shirt. If under six months of age, an abdominal binder of thin flannel and light-knitted booties may be worn, these being advisable only when ordered by your doctor.

These few clothes are all that are needed, but they must be kept clean, soiled garments being promptly removed.

Never replace a used diaper on a baby without first washing it. Wetted or soiled diapers must be washed with as little delay as possible, using hot water in which a little soda has been dissolved. Rinse well and see that they are perfectly dry before using again.

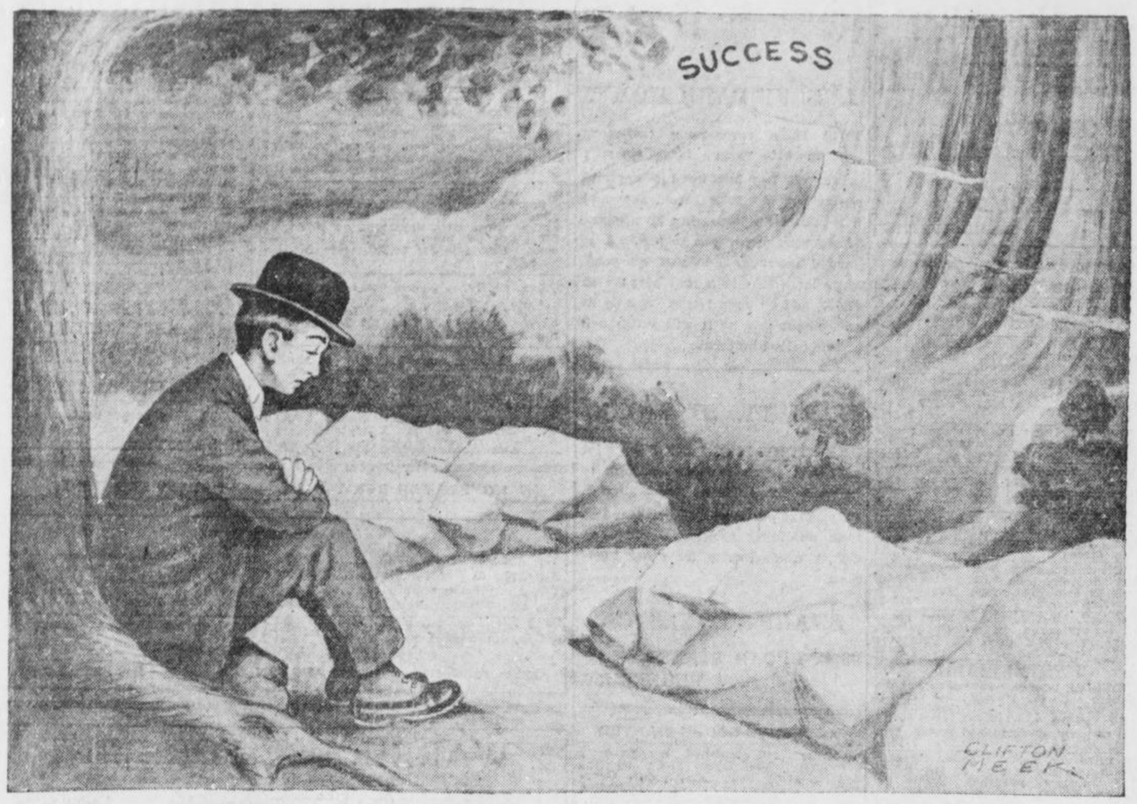
All clothing should be loose and so adjusted as to permit free motion of the legs and arms. Never put starched, stiff or uncomfortable clothes on a baby.

Having dressed your baby correctly, now see that you place the child where it will get fresh outdoor air. Put it in a shaded place on the porch and cover its resting place with mosquito netting to prevent flies from annoying and possibly infecting it. Never keep a baby in the kitchen when you are cooking or washing. When the child must be in the house keep it near an open window in the cleanest and coolest room.

In very hot weather give your baby a sponge bath two or three times a day, using lukewarm water in which a little salt has been dissolved, or you may use a little alcohol instead of the salt. Never give these baths immediately after feeding; better give them before feeding. Take especial care to cleanse the body creases and dry thoroughly. If you use talcum powder be sure it is the best and the unscented kind.

Rational dressing, fresh air and cleanliness will do much to keep your baby in good physical condition and will go a long ways toward enabling it to survive the summer dangers.

Demain, Morgen, Manana, Domani



All these words mean the same thing. They mean TO-MORROW, and they mean FAILURE.

This young man says, "I'll make a start to-morrow." And he never starts. There are a million like him sitting, waiting for the "to-morrow" that never comes. (SEE EDITORIAL.)

Ella Wheeler Wilcox
Writes on Culture

Women, No Matter How Highly Accomplished They May Be, She Says, Lack Real Culture if They Allow Evil Temper, Evil Speaking, Selfishness and Uncharitableness to Grow Into Their Nature.

Written for The Atlanta Georgian

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

PERHAPS there is no word more frequently misused than the word Culture.

We often hear a woman spoken of as highly cultured.

But in what does her culture consist?

She may speak several languages; she may play several instruments; she may be able to talk understandingly of the arts and sciences; she may kno much of the customs of many lands, but still she may LACK REAL CULTURE.

If she is allowing the weeds of evil temper, evil speaking, selfishness and uncharitableness to grow in her nature, she is not cultured.

That always means that the earth of that land is carefully tilled and that every weed is removed; every ugly thing banished, and every beautiful and useful and valuable thing is fertilized, dug about, encouraged and helped to grow.

So it is with the mind.

A Cultivated Person.

Unless ungracious and unlovely traits are removed, and all the virtues cultivated, mere education which comes from books and travel and the possession of money can never make a cultured person.

What constitutes a cultivated personality? What is it that uplifts character and beautifies conduct?

The answer to both questions can be found in the advice Buddha gave his pupils five hundred years before Christ was born: "Do nothing to another that you would not have done to you," and by Christ's improved rendition of the motto: "Do unto others as you would that they should do to you."

There is no higher phase of culture, and there is nothing which beautifies conduct and character like the practical and perpetual use of the Golden Rule in daily life.

The majority of people regard the keeping of the Ten Commandments as a literal fulfillment of that rule's obligations; but one who contemplates its entire meaning realizes that it applies to every trivial act of daily life and necessitates culture as well as morality.

The loud, jarring voice, the uncontrolled temper, the neglect of bodily cleanliness and disregard of dress—all these things break the Golden Rule, because they are not what we would wish others to do; therefore, we have no right to do them.

A "cultivated personality" includes cleanliness, neatness, a certain conformation to the customs of the day, or of art, in dress; a well modulated voice, an attentive manner in listening to others, a well poised body, a direct and easy carriage and walk, and a pleasant, agreeable expression of countenance.

Haughty, Cold Demeanor.

The haughty, disdainful and cold demeanor is incompatible with culture.

Only the vulgarian with an outward veneer of polish, "puts on airs." The really cultured, like the really great souls of earth, are always affable and simple and natural.

That quality which most uplifts and beautifies character is consideration of others and obeyance of one's own highest instincts.

The man who is considerate of his fellow men pays his debts promptly, does not endeavor to "beat" his neighbor in a bargain, does not haggle over prices, and is tolerant of others' political and religious ideas.

He is kind and affectionate in his family, appreciative of his wife and children, and patient and thoughtful with those in his employ.

All these homely virtues "uplift and beautify character." Without them the most heroic and brilliant deeds can not make an admirable human being.

"Cultivated Personality."

The woman who wishes to possess a "cultivated personality" and a beautiful character must keep her engagements, pay her social and financial obligations, shun gossip and harsh criticism, suit her dress and her amusements to her income, keep her home orderly and attractive, and herself a pleasure to the eye, ear and heart.

The path to character building is a long one; there is no short cut.

It requires continual watchfulness, continual self-control, to travel that path.

But it is a way which grows more beautiful, and the world seems more interesting and life sweeter each year as we advance, when the goal of a beautiful character is our aim.

Vocational Training Applied

By THOMAS TAPPER.

A FEUDIST is a gentleman with a gun on the lookout for another similarly equipped. He who shoots first lives longest.

Two horsemen riding over a mountain road in the Cumberlands came to an obstruction. They jumped down, picked it up and tossed it to one side.

The obstruction was a man who had been put out of business by a blow on the head with the butt of a gun.

When he came to he crept up among the trees and had it out with himself. Then he crawled back home cautiously. After a day or two he disappeared.

For ten months he went to school. After a while he added seven other months to these ten.

Equipped with seventeen months' education, he became the president of a college.

One day when his schooling was over he called a meeting of the feudists in the Cumberlands. One group sat, sullen and armed, at his right. Their enemies, just as sullen and as well armed, sat at his left.

He made a plea to them for the sake not of themselves, but of their children; a plea to give the little ones a chance to learn something, to forget the enmity of the feud spirit, and to be able to go out from the mountains as useful men and women.

It was a new idea to these feud followers, but the man's eloquence prevailed to the extent that the two leaders of the clans arose and shook hands.

With a bit of land and fifty dollars the man began to build the college with his own hands. There were plenty of heartaches and discouragements, but no want of trust. Then the college began to be a real thing, visible to the eyes of men.

That was ten or twelve years ago. To-day the college educates about six hundred people annually. Little children, young men and women, fathers and mothers come from all parts of the mountains, eager to get an education.

The man who has done all this has never taken a penny in pay. He does his work as a distributer, and therefore has no need to take an anxious thought.

Thirty cents a day will bring one of these mountain people to the college and will pay for board, lodging and education. Less than sixteen cents a day will pay for it all if the farm about the school can supply the student with an opportunity to work to the extent of fourteen cents.

The man who has done all this is J. A. Burns, of Oneida, Kentucky.

He was one of the first to see that the mountain problem was to be met only by the most practical form of Vocational Training, and and he has given a living demonstration of the truth of his idea.

He saw clearly that not only did these people need knowledge, but that they needed the kind of knowledge which they could apply in the daily work of their hands.

And he has wrought a remarkable transformation among them.

Educate a human being to do work well, to take pleasure in the doing of it, and efficiency is established.

FEMALE RAFFLES LOOTS PHONE GIRLS' CAMP

YOUNG THIEF IS TRAPPED BY RUSE

Girl, 14, Caught Stealing Purse, Freed on Plea of Victims in Series of Robberies.

Following a series of thefts at the summer camp of the employees of the Southern Bell Telephone Company in Lakewood Heights during the past two weeks, a 14-year-old girl was trapped and caught in the act of taking a purse by County Policeman R. E. Jackson Wednesday night.

Every effort was exerted to avoid publicity of the incident. When the girl was taken to the county police headquarters, Miss Katherine Tatum, superintendent of the camp, appeared and asked that no charge be made against her.

The miscreant returned the purse to Miss Tatum, declaring that she took it by mistake, thinking it to be her own. The money it contained, amounting to about $7, was intact. The girl was then released and Thursday morning was discharged from the employ of the telephone company.

Various Traps Set.

Since the first report that a Raffles was operating among the women at the camp, various traps have been set, but without success. The articles which disappeared ranged from portions of women's attire to small amounts of money and bits of jewelry. Almost nightly, it is said, something was stolen.

Wednesday night Miss Tatum called in County Policeman Jackson and informed him of the thefts. The officer got a woman's purse and, placing it upon a table in full view in one of the tents, concealed himself behind a trunk to wait developments.

A short time before the last car to the city was scheduled to leave, the policeman saw the girl enter the tent hastily, and after glancing about, snatch the purse from the table and depart.

Springing from his hiding place, Jackson placed her under arrest.

Pleads for Girl Thief.

Miss Tatum was informed and the girl taken to police headquarters. When Miss Tatum confronted her an hour later, the young prisoner's grief was pathetic. She protested her innocence of any intention at thievery and denied that she had perpetrated the other thefts.

Miss Tatum asked that no charge be lodged against her. The girl was permitted to return to her home.

Thursday morning Miss Tatum declared that the incident was closed.

"It was simply one of those cases of being unable to withstand temptation," she declared. "It was not so much the girl's fault, considering the circumstances. I pity her and hold no malice toward her, nor do any of the other girls in the camp. She just couldn't help it."

PRESIDENT IS BRANDED AS DICTATOR

Works Charges Executive With Usurping Legislative Power. Scores Tariff 'Influence.'

WASHINGTON, July 24.—On the floor of the Senate to-day Senator Works, of California, denounced President Wilson for influencing tariff legislation in the summing up of a speech on the tariff bill pending before the Senate.

"The tendency of latter-day politics is to exalt the executive at the expense of the legislative and judicial power of the Government, and make the President the master and ruler of them all, and the master and not the servant of the whole people," said the Senator.

"It is an unwarranted and dangerous tendency. Every public official, however exalted, is only the servant of the people, and should at all times be subject to their control and subservient to their will in conformity to the Constitution and laws of the country, and each department of the Government, if its institutions are to be preserved, must be kept within the limitations of its powers as fixed by the Constitution.

He Charges Tariff Coercion.

"If this bill is passed, it will not be by the willing and voluntary consent of a majority of this body. It will be the result, in part, of outside influence that should never enter into the deliberations or acts of Congress. The Constitution provides:

All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.

"The President is also made Commander-in-Chief of the army and navy. That instrument further provides that 'the executive power shall be vested in the President of the United States of America.' It is further provided: 'He shall from time to time give to the Congress information of the state of the Union and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient.'

No Warrant for Influence.

"This is the only power vested in the President in respect of the making of laws. There is no warrant in the Constitution for his participation in the formation or passage of laws or the exercise of any influence on legislation beyond that of recommending to the consideration of the lawmaking power such measures as he shall judge necessary or expedient."

Here the Senator said that his views coincided with those injected into the Democratic platform of 1904 and he quoted from the declaration of principles drawn by the Democratic party at that time.

In concluding his speech, Senator Works said:

"I have approached this subject with reluctance and purely from a sense of duty. I expressed similar views during the last administration. I have the greatest respect and esteem for the incumbent of the great office of President of the United States, as I had also for his predecessor.

Explains Causes of Alarm.

"I believe in the integrity and sincerity of his purpose to serve the people and the country to their very best interests. But, sir, this can not deter me from expressing my views on a question so serious and far-reaching in its consequences.

"It makes the situation only the more alarming that one of such high ideals and patriotic purposes should do anything that can reasonably be construed to be a usurpation of power or an infringement of the Constitution that may some time be appealed to as a precedent by one less conscientious and patriotic."

Lightning 'Scrubs' Tower at Terminal

One of the most freakish stunts ever performed by lightning in Atlanta was discovered Thursday as a result of the striking of one of the towers of the Terminal Station. The brick and fancy work on both towers had been stained black by smoke, but the lightning cleaned one as perfectly as though it had been scrubbed. The other, still black, presents a striking contrast.

The shock of the stroke was felt in the waiting room and almost caused a panic. Little damage was done to the tower, but electrical and chemical experts still are unable to solve the mystery of its magic cleaning.

Mann Stops Work of House by Filibuster

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Representative Mann again prevented the House from transacting any business to-day. Employing the same tactics he used yesterday—a point of no quorum—Mann demanded a roll call. Adjournment finally was ordered by a vote of 154 to 58.

The Mann filibuster is occasioned by the action of the Democrats in preventing a discussion last week of the Caminetti-Diggs white slave cases.

Headless Body of Girl Found at Sea

BOSTON, July 24.—The finding of the headless body of an apparently well-to-do young woman at sea, 35 miles east of the Georges Bank by Captain Charles White, of the Gloucester fishing schooner Jennie H. Gilbert, is believed to reveal a death by violence at sea, possibly on a trans-Atlantic liner.

The body was found ten miles south of the southerly track of trans-Atlantic steamers, about 170 miles out from Boston. Corsets of apparently expensive make, a black shirtwaist, portions of a dark green silk skirt and high button boots were on the body.

Currency Reform Not Likely to Pass

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Passage of a currency reform bill at this session of Congress was considered most doubtful to-day unless President Wilson brings peace between the warring factions of the House Banking and Currency Committee.

Chairman Glass to-day presented to the committe a draft of an amendment to his bill providing for a prohibition of interlocking directorates. Mr. Glass is against such a proposal by the committee by a vote of 7 to 5, forced him to draw up the amendment.

Eugenic Restaurant To Save Babies' Lives

NEW YORK, July 24.—"Thousands of children are brought into the world handicapped for life because their mothers were ill-nourished before they were born."

Miss Mabel A. Parker thus tersely explains why she has embarked on one of the most novel eugenic experiments that has yet been made in this country—a prenatal restaurant.

This restaurant, which will be conducted solely for women who are expected to give birth to a child within six months, will be opened in two weeks.

Love Affair Drives Mme. Curie from Paris

WARSAW, July 24.—Mme. Curie, discoverer, with her husband, of radium, will return to her home here soon to remain permanently. She will have charge of a radiological laboratory.

Another reason for her return is the gossip connecting her name with that of Prof. Langevin, of the College of France, whose wife sued him for separation. Letters between Mme. Curie and Prof. Langevin became public.

Ask Mayor to Light New Crematory Fire

It was announced Thursday that the new $260,000 crematory would be put into operation Friday, and to make assurance doubly sure that the row over this plant between Mayor Woodward and the Council has ended, Mayor Woodward was invited to light the fire.

Mayor Woodward was uncertain Thursday whether he would accept the invitation. He has never been down to look over the plant, which is located just back of Terminal Station.

JUDGE ANNOUNCES HE IS READY TO TRY CASE; 144 MEM EMPANELLED

Says He Has Not Even Been Asked for Postponement, and Sees No Reason Why Trial Should Not Begin On Date Fixed.

Jim Conley, the negro sweeper of the National Pencil Factory, was taken from the police station late Thursday afternoon by Detectives Starnes and Campbell to verify certain of his statements and to point out certain witnesses, who, he told the detectives, would be able to refute the affidavit of W. H. Mincey by showing that he was not at the point where Mincey swears the negro confessed he "had killed a girl" on the afternoon of the murder. The detectives would not divulge the location of the places to be visited.

Judge L. S. Roan, home from Covington, late Thursday, declared to a Georgian reporter that he saw no reason why the trial of Leo M. Frank, accused of the murder of Mary Phagan, should not begin Monday.

The Judge who had been reported ill said he felt fully able to go ahead and had not been asked for a postponement.

"I see no reason why the trial should not begin on the date fixed," he said. "As far as I am concerned everything is in readiness. I have not been asked to allow a delay."

Judge Roan added that he had informed Judge Penleton there was no objection on his part to going ahea with the drawing of twelve panels of 12 men each of prospective jurymen were drawn. Deputy Sheriff Plennie Miner had notified all the attorneys involved. It was expected that the defense would make its motion for the drawing of the jury from the Grand Jury panel before Judge Pendleton and there was no doubt Solicitor Dorsey would oppose it and very likely win his point.

"The prosecution was ready June 30 in the case of the State vs. Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of little Mary Phagan on April 26 last. We have subpenaed all the witnesses, expecting to try this case on Monday next. This date was set at the suggestion of Judge L. S. Roan at the instance of counsel for the defense.

"We are disappointed that the jury was not drawn this morning as Judge Roan stated it would be done.

"The State assuredly will be ready Monday unless something entirely unforeseen happens, and will ask trial of this man at that time."

Superior Judge John T. Pendleton declined to draw a jury for the Frank trial Thursday morning until he heard definitely from Judge L. S. Roan whether the case would be opened next Monday. Judge Pendleton announced he would know definitely by 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon whether the case would be called Monday, and he would draw the jury at that time if necessary.

Deputy Sheriff Plinnie Miner had instructions from Judge Roan to have one of the other judges draw the jury Thursday unless he was notified to the contrary. Miner heard nothing from Judge Roan and carried the jury box to Judge Pendleton to have the twelve panels drawn. He notified the attorneys for the State and the prosecution in ample time for them to be at the court. Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey and his assistant were the only attorneys to put in an appearance.

It developed Thursday morning that there were two rather ruffled chiefs at the police department the previous afternoon when Jim Conley was sneaked from his cell in the station over to the Tower without their permission and without their knowledge.

Chief Lanford said: "This will never happen again."

Chief Beavers would not talk of the incident, but is understood to have told the two detectives, Starnes and Campbell, that if the negro were taken from the police station again he (Beavers) proposed to be in on it.

There was a commotion at police headquarters Wednesday afternoon, when it was found that Conley had been spirited away to confront Newt Lee in the Tower. Chief Lanford knew nothing of the circumstance until he was informed by The Georgian.

Let the Frank Trial Go On

Leo Frank should be placed on trial Monday for the murder of Mary Phagan.

The crime was committed April 26; Frank was arrested April 28; he was indicted May 23 and his trial set for June 30.

At the suggestion of the judge in whose court the trial is to take place, a postponement was agreed on, and the date of the trial moved up to July 28.

Now attempts are being made to secure another postponement. The only reason given to the public is that the weather is hot and it would be disagreeable to hold the trial in the summer.

Of course it is hot, but it isn't any hotter in the court room than it is in jail.

Both the prosecution and the defense have had ample time to prepare their cases. If Frank is guilty, the State can prove his guilt as well now as later on; if he is innocent, the defense can prove his innocence as well in summer as in winter.

The public has taken a keen interest in the Phagan case and it will demand that the man who killed her be punished, whether that man is Frank or someone else. Furthermore, it is tired of delays.

Public sentiment is where it was on the date first set for Frank's trial and it will be at the same place if the trial is delayed for a year.

Atlantans are awaiting the trial with open minds. They are not holding themselves up as judges. They know the law is supreme and they want it to take its course. But they want that course taken without seemingly endless delays.

STATE DEMANDS TRIAL OF FRANK ON MONDAY

Solicitor Declares He Is Ready and Will Oppose Any Move for Delay.

Even then he insisted that Conley was in his cell.

Then Detectives Explain.

He went to Chief Beavers' office to see if permission had been given there for Conley's removal. Beavers said he did not know Conley was gone. Station Sergeant Holcomb was appealed to. He said he had not been notified that the prisoner was to be taken away. Turnkey Bayne, the last resort, was asked to explain the mysterious disappearance of Conley. He informed Chief Beavers that Detectives Starnes and Campbell had taken him about a half hour before.

The Chief, to satisfy himself that Conley was still in custody, made a personal visit to the jail.

When Starnes and Campbell later were in conference with the Chief they told him that they had said nothing about their intention because neither Chief Beavers nor Chief Lanford was in the station at the time.

Dr. Starnes to Play Great Symphony as Farewell to Atlanta

The whole of Tschaikowsky's "Symphonie Pathetique," regarded by many as the greatest piece of instrumental music ever composed, will be played at a free organ concert Thursday evening at the Auditorium-Armory under the Music Festival Association's auspices.

The presentation of such a work complete in one program is something new in the annals of music in the South. This concert will be somewhat in the nature of a farewell from Dr. Starnes, who will terminate his Atlanta engagement in the early fall. The playing of the "Symphonie Pathetique" is a monumental undertaking for one man.

Dr. Starnes said:

"In arranging this work I had no idea that its presentation by means of a concert organ should be as ideal as by an orchestra of 150 pieces, but not one person in 200 ever will have the opportunity to hear the symphony by a great orchestra."

The program also includes a short Bach fugue and Liszt's "Dream of Love."

SHANGHAI, July 24.—Foreign residents of this city are in grave danger as a result of the fighting between the loyal troops and the southern insurgents. A foreign naval brigade from the warships in the harbor is being held in readiness to land at a moment's notice should the situation become more acute.

The Government officials are charging that Japan is aiding the revolt and is lending all its strength to the citizens of the southern countries in the hope that the Republic may be disintegrated.

Firemen Plan Strike When Denied Outing

DALTON, July 24.—Cooler heads among members of the Dalton Fire Department saved the city from being without fire fighters when the department debated at length whether or not to resign.

The trouble arose over the City Council's failure to make an appropriation for the firemen's annual outing. Citizens have made up a fund for the outing, and the firemen will leave here on August 9 for St. Simons Island.

HOTEL ELEVATOR HIS SCHOOL OF AVIATION

Robert Pettit, 4, Who Declares He's Going to be "Airship Flyer."

"I Don't Like It," He Says, "But I Must Get Used to Being In the Air."

Robert Pettit, 4-year-old son of Mrs. Frances Pettit, of Denver, spends from six to eight hours every day in the elevator of Hotel Ansley, because he wants to be an aviator.

"I got a bank with 4 pennies and a dime. That ought to buy a good machine," he says.

Robert figures it this way: There isn't much use in buying and running an airship if you are going to get sick every time you get a few feet up in the air; the thing to do, therefore, is to get used to being off the ground—and then buy your airship.

"I don't like to ride in elevators," he says, "but I've got to. I'm going to be an airship flyer when I grow up, and I've got to get used to being off the ground. It is working fine, too. I can go up to the twelfth floor now without getting dizzy. I'll make a dandy aviator, I'll bet!"

The youngster has become a familiar figure to attaches and guests of the hotel. Every morning, as soon as he can slip away from Mrs. Pettit and his nurse, he drags his little chair into the elevator and sits solemnly behind the operator. He manifests great interest in the operation of the lift, and his greatest joy comes when he is allowed to hold the levers and make believe he is operating the car.

Robert says he is going to have an airship as soon as he is sure he can fly without getting sick.

"I've got a bank at home with four pennies and a dime in it," he said. "I guess that'll get a pretty good airship. If it ain't enough, Mama will give me as much more as I need."

PAROLE IS ASKED BY BOARD FOR HAWTHORNE

Paroles for Julian Hawthorne and Dr. William J. Morton, ex-Treasurer of the United States, who have been serving sentences in the Federal Penitentiary for misuse of the mails in a stock scheme, were recommended on Thursday in a report submitted by the Federal Pardon Board to Attorney General McReynolds.

The recommendation in respect to Hawthorne and Morton had been agreed upon by the Pardon Board since their meetings at the Federal prison some time ago, but they have withheld their report, as is the custom, until the prisoners named are eligible to parole.

The indorsement of the Attorney General is regarded as a formality and it is expected that the two will receive their freedom by Saturday. A telegram will be sent at the direction of the Attorney General and this will be followed by a letter containing the formal notice of the paroles.

"I am delighted that the recommendation is before Mr. McReynolds," said Hawthorne, when Deputy Warden Wilbur Hawk informed him of the action of the Pardon Board. "I was aware that the board had considered my case favorably and it pleases me that it requires only the signature of the Attorney General to make me a free man."

Mother's Lips Keep Baby Alive 10 Days

LOS ANGELES, CAL., July 24.—Determined that her baby boy should live, though three physicians declared he would die in 48 hours, Mrs. J. H. Spaulding, of Oklahoma City, kept the spark of life aglow ten days. It is considered the most remarkable case of artificial respiration on record.

Soon after birth the baby was seized with an affection of the heart. The mother placed her lips over the mouth of the child, exhausted the air in its lungs and allowed fresh air to pour back. The baby revived.

The mother repeated the operation on two mere occasions. Then the baby was taken to the hospital and died soon afterward.

SENATE DEFEATS NEW COUNTY MEASURE

Barrow Advocates Lose in Upper House After Long and Strenuous Fight.

The bill creating Barrow County, with Winder as the county seat, was defeated in the Senate Thursday afternoon after a long and strenuous fight. Advocates of the new county declared a strong effort would be made to reconsider the action.

A large number of people were down from Winder to witness the action of the Senate. The House had already acted favorably on the bill. Senator DuBose, of the Thirtieth District, led the fight for the new county.

While this bill passed the House with the indorsement of three of the six Representatives from the district affected, it is known that only one of the Senators of the three from the counties concerned to-day will vote for the bill. The other two, it is said, will actively oppose the bill when it comes up for passage.

Either the defeat or the passage of the Barrow County bill, it was argued by some, will mean an end of the consideration of new counties by the present Legislature. Others, however, claim the agitation will go on unabated, regardless of the verdict of the Senate, for strong delegations from the counties affected are on hand to wage their fight, and will not give up until the last card has been played.

Among the new counties which are to be voted on are Warner, Candler and Milledge.

Lamar, Hansell and Norwood Counties will be considered by the House committee Thursday afternoon.

Austell Thornton Funeral Thursday

The funeral of Austell Thornton, the prominent young Atlantan who died at Asheville, N. C., early Wednesday morning, will be conducted from the residence, No. 611 Peachtree street, at 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon. The interment will be private at Oakland Cemetery.

With the exception of his sister, Miss Janie Thornton, who is ill in Maine, the entire family will be present at the funeral. SENATOR WOULD ANNEX NORTH MEXICO

Hitchcock of Nebraska Also Favors Dividing Remainder of Country Into Small Nations.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The annexation of States in Northern Mexico by the United States and a division of the remainder of the country into separate governments was suggested to-day by Senator Hitchcock, of Nebraska, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, as a possible way of bringing about peace in that country.

"The cession of a portion of Northern Mexico to the United States in payment for the enormous indemnity which must be asked of that country for damage to American life and property seems to me to be a feasible way of settling these claims," said Hitchcock. "It will be impossible for Mexico to meet the demands of the United States in cash.

"These States also would serve as 'buffer' between the United States and the Mexican nations farther south.

"Inasmuch as Mexico is now torn between two conflicting factions, it is within the bounds of possibility that peace might be restored through the establishment of separate nations governed by the chief of the contending factions.

Sees Speedy Way to Peace.

"It would seem at present that this would be the most speedy way of bringing a cessation of hostilities to that war-ridden land. Of course, these suggestions are in no way to be taken as an authoritative statement as to the course the United States will pursue. They simply embody my own views on the subject."

President Wilson has not formulated a definite plan for dealing with the Mexican situation, he has not selected any of the alternatives suggested to him for escaping from the present tangle, nor will he do so before his conference with Ambassador Wilson at the White House, scheduled for Saturday.

This statement was made at the White House to-day and is understood to emanate directly from the President.

The proposal that the President should take the initiative in suggesting mediation to the warring factions south of the border is scouted at the White House.

Offer Sure To Be Rejected.

In the first place, it is unlikely that either side would consent to the United States acting as a peacemaker; secondly, the administration does not feel that it should offer its services when it is almost certain they would be declined with little ceremony.

Following a conference with President Wilson, Senator Bacon, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said that the United States, acting as mediator in Mexico, had been considered merely tentatively by the President.

"I do not believe that a policy of mediation will be adopted," said Senator Bacon. "The United States would have to be invited to act as a peacemaker and this, I think, will not occur.

Bacon Denies Intervention.

"The suggestion is only one of many now being considered by the President, who intends to take no active step until after he has had an opportunity to confer with Ambassador Wilson."

Senator Bacon said that all the energies of the United States Government would be devoted to settling the Mexican trouble without intervention, because the seriousness of this step is appreciated by all officials in Washington.

The Senator from Georgia also said that he could not conceive of any immediate developments which would force armed intervention and added that the protection of Americans and other foreigners in Mexico necessarily must devolve on the consuls and other Government agents now in the republic.

Senator Bacon refused to deny or confirm the rumor that Secretary of State Bryan was to head the Mexican commission of mediation and conciliation.

"As far as I know," said Bacon, "no man's name has been mentioned for this place."

Bryan Hurrying to Capital for Conference.

CHICAGO, July 24.—Secretary of State Bryan was in Chicago thirty minutes to-day. He arrived from Iowa, where he had been delivering chautauque lectures, and left at 12:40 o'clock for Washington. The only official who met him at the train was William L. O'Connell, Governor Dunne's political representative.

"I shall leave Washington again as soon as I feel I properly can," said Mr. Bryan. "I have several chautauqua engagements to fill during the summer."

Secretary Bryan declined to discuss his coming conference with Henry Lane Wilson, United States Ambassador to Mexico, who is on his way to Washington to meet President Wilson and the State Department chief.

Cardinal Gibbons Lauds Wilson's Mexico Policy.

WESTMINSTER, MD., July 24.—That Cardinal Gibbons is in sympathy with the Wilson administration's refusal to recognize the Huerta Government was clearly shown when, in an interview, the aged prelate said he thought the present Mexican Government is not well enough established to give it permanence, and, therefore, should not be recognized by the United States.

He said he sympathized with President Wilson in the delicate questions confronting him in the Mexican matter and thought he is doing his duty conscientiously in withholding recognition of the Huerta regime.

He thought that, while European nations were urging upon this country some action for the protection of their citizens and their property on Mexican soil, the consequences of American interference were of too serious character to justify hasty action.

He pointed out that it was by no means certain that the Huerta government would not soon be overthrown, the uncertainty being so grave that it could scarcely be reckoned a sound de facto power, to say nothing of its de jure authority. Under the circumstances President Wilson is acting wisely, the cardinal believes, in the course he has thus far pursued.

Praise for Elder Diaz.

Referring to the uncomfortable conditions American citizens on the Mexican border are enduring, the Cardinal said there was a possibility that this border might be pushed farther south for their relief. He alluded to the extreme discontent of the Mexican people in the State of Sonora and opposite El Paso, Tex., as giving rise to the impression of such a possibility.

The great mistake of the Mexican people, he said, was in their repudiation of Porfirio Diaz, who had given them a firm government, maintained peace, and had done more than any other man to develop the resources of the country and advance its prosperity.

Request for Rangers To Cross Border Denied.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The War Department to-ady formally denied the request of Representative Smith, of Texas, that a company of Texas Rangers be allowed to cross the border to rescue the Americans said to be in peril at Madera.

The department officials take the stand that no expeditionary movement of this kind could possibly be countenanced by the Government. Private raids engineered by filibusters would have no standing in the eyes of the world and the United States could not legally take steps to protect such rangers if they were surrounded by federalist troops in Mexico and slaughtered.

England Ready to Send Battleship to Mexico.

LONDON, July 24.—Great Britain is keeping a watchful eye on the situation in Mexico. In the House of Commons to-day Foreign Minister Grey, replying to a member's question, stated that the Government knew there was serious disturbance in various parts of Mexico and that British subjects were in danger. He declared that not only had citizens of the empire suffered, but that other foreigners had also suffered indignities at the hands of the Mexicans.

The Foreign Secretary stated that he was in communication with the Admiralty and in case it was decided advisable a British warship would be dispatched to Mexico.

Second Regiment Defending Island Against Invasion

ST. SIMONS ISLAND, July 24.—The Second Georgia Regiment left camp this morning for a trip across the island to a sawmill, where the sixth "battle" of the tour of duty is taking place to-day.

The battle plan is for the "enemy" to approach on a coastwise steamer and attempt to make a landing in the vicinity of the mill, which the regiment will attempt to prevent.

The entire regiment left camp at 7 o'clock in heavy marching order, carrying rations for three meals. After the battle pup tents will be pitched and the regiment will bivouac. Each man will cook his own food. The regiment will return to camp Friday morning.

Brigadier General Harris will arrive Friday, and dress parade will be given in his honor.

Allis, LL.L, of Wilwaukee, the Wisconsin champion, sprung a surprise this morning when he finished the first half of the third match round in the Western amateur golf championship here, when he finished with a lead of 3 up on Charles Evans, Jr., of Edgewater, the present title holder.

HOUSE VOTES TO GIVE SCHOOLS $2,600,000

Appropriation Made After Four-Hour Debate—One of Forty Amendments Passes.

After a four-hour debate the House Thursday morning, sitting as a Committee of the Whole, acted favorably on section 5 of the general appropriations bill, covering appropriations to colleges and the public school fund.

Despite the fact that more than 40 amendments were offered on it, but one change was made. This was an increase of $100,000 in the public school fund, making the total $2,600,000. The Appropriations Committee had recommended that $2,500,000 be appropriated, this being the exact amount paid out during the past year.

Scores of Speeches Made.

The amendment adopted was offered by Representative Stovall, and was carried by a vote of 80 to 45. The entire section was productive of debate, half a hundred speeches being made. The Stovall amendment came in the way of a compromise, a strenuous effort being made to make the appropriation $2,750,000.

It is believed the House will complete its work on the appropriations bill this week. Two days have already been consumed in it and if the House passes it this week a new record will have been set for expediency.

Quick Action Seems Sure.

It will be taken up by the Senate immediately and everything looks favorable for the sending of it to the Governor ten days before the expiration of the session. Governor Slaton has threatened to call an extra session unless the bill reaches him by this time.

An effort to limit the time of the consideration of the bill by the House as a Committee of the Whole to an hour for each section except the fifth caused an hour's hot debate. The resolution provided for five-minute speeches by eight members and twenty minutes for Chairman Wheatley, of the Appropriations Committee. This was killed by a 91 to 34 vote.

Asks Receiver After Tilt With Partner

George O. Speir, stockholder in the A. A. Smith Cotton Products Company in the Grant building, has filed a petition in the Superior Court asking for a receiver for the company on the grounds that disagreements between him and A. A. Smith have made it impossible for them to continue to do business together.

He declares that up to 30 days ago the company was earning $20,000 a year.

Loaded With Meals, He Defies the World

CHICAGO, July 24.—Impelled by five meals at once, Juluius Johnson to-day scaled the walls of a three-story flat building, armed himself with bricks pulled from the chimney and defied the world.

At the station Johnson's relatives came for him. They said he had purchased a 21-meal ticket at a restaurant and just before his escapade had eaten five meals, one after the other.

CONVICTS RIOT IN SING SING; SET PRISON AFIRE

Mutiny Follows Removal of Warden Liked by the Prisoners. Further Outbreak Feared.

OSSINNING, N. Y., July 24.—Mutinous convicts, in open rebellion against their keepers, to-day made an attempt to destroy the entire Sing Sing prison property by fire.

They set fire to the clothing manufacturing building, in which all the shoes, clothing and like articles are made. The fire was extinguished by the prison fire department after it had swept the shoeshop.

The entire penal population is being kept under lock in fear of further outbreaks.

Fire Laid to Trusties.

The attempt to burn the prison building came early to-day after a night of wild excitement in the prison.

When the warden, James H. Clancey, was told of the threats, he directed that no prisoners, excepting the trusties, should be allowed out of their cells. It is believed that some of the trusties, acting under orders of their imprisoned fellows, applied the match to the clothing factory building.

As the fire raged the criminals behind locked doors set up a terrific din. They shouted "fire," called vile names, beat their doors and made the prison hideous with noise.

"We want Kennedy," came the constant chant above the din.

Protest Warden's Removal.

This protest against the removal of the former warden, who was indicted by the Westchester County Grand Jury, was the keynote of the entire rebellion that for 36 hours has had the State's largest penal institution in a state of mutiny.

All night long the convicts kept up their riotous demonstration. They made the food the first basis of complaint. They contemptuously tossed away bits of food and went to their cells surly and disobedient.

Guards are on duty to-day all along the prison walls, the officers fearing that the sullen convicts may make a concerted effort to escape.

Seeking to relieve the perilous situation at the prison, Warden Clancey this afternoon made arrangements with the railroad to take 200 second and third term prisoners to Auburn to-morrow. With these riotous prisoners out of the way, the warden believes he can restore order in the institution.

CAMP LIFE INCREASES HELLO GIRLS' ABILITY

Here's Elsie Erd, a fair camper, at a little task that helps to break the monotony.

Swimming, Rambles in Woods, Auto Rides and Sleeping Outdoors Give New Lease on Life.

If you do not believe the simple life is conducive to better work, ask some of the heads of departments of the Bell Telephone Company. They'll tell you that since the establishment of Camp Wyanoke at Lakewood Heights, where the young women employees of the company spend their vacations and their week-ends, the work of the "hello girls," the stenographers and the other young women who work in the big building at Mitchell and Pryor streets, has greatly improved.

"The idea we had in mind when Camp Wyanoke was established," Miss Katherine Tatum, who is in charge of the camp, said, Thursday morning, "is working out splendidly. The girls come back to Atlanta after a few days or a week's stay at the camp invigorated and almost with a new lease on life. They have breathed pure, fresh air; they have worked about the camp, and they return to their work with a vim and a determination that is usually lacking during the hot summer months."

Simple Life Throughout.

The simple life is lived in all its phases at Camp Wyanoke. With the exception of the harder and unfamiliar work of cooking all the work is done by the girls. They wash dishes, wash their own clothing—or most of it—keep house, sew and do a hundred and one other tasks.

When work is done they go swimming and wading, or take long rides in the automobiles the company sends out to them several times a week.

Every Wednesday and Saturday nights there are dances and games of various kinds.

The practice of sleeping in the open air is considered by Miss Tatum one of the best features of the camp. It gives many girls who heretofore have been cooped up in tiny city rooms a chance to recuperate.

Sunday School in Camp.

Every girl employed by the company is given a chance to taste the joys of camp life. Those who had taken their vacations before the camp was installed have been given a leave of absence of three or four days, that they might visit the camp. Others spend their entire vacation there.

There are always about twenty girls at the camp, and on Saturday and Sunday this number is sometimes swelled to a hundred, by the girls who come out to spend Sunday. Sunday school is held in the open air under the trees, and is usually attended by about a hundred young women.

W. A. Hansel, assistant chief of construction, has announced that the Peachtree Creek sewage disposal plant will be ready for operation by September 1. With the completion of this plant Peachtree Creek, about which there has been much complaint, immediately will be purified.

The main part of the plant practically is complete, but the city has not yet been able to get sufficient stone for the filter beds.

MILAN, ITALY, July 24.—Damage is being inflicted throughout the entire Italian lake district, which is being swept by terrific hurricanes.

Lamar Indicted to Reach 'Higher Ups'

NEW YORK, July 24.—The Government's real object in secretly indicting David Lamar after his revelations before the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee was to frighten the "Wolf of Wall Street" into giving information in contemplated action against the men higher up in Lamar's impersonations. Men high in political and financial life are believed to have profited through Lamar's operations.

AGED MEN INJURED.

ELBERTON, July 24.—Martin Crawford, 62 years old, and James Bond, aged 60, came near losing their lives when Crawford's mule team backed off the bridge over Coldwater Creek. Two of Crawford's ribs and his breast bone were broken. Bond also had two ribs broken.

U. S. TO DIVORCE TRUSTS FROM RAILROADS

Government Plans End to Rebate Extortions Costing Lines $42,000,000 a Year.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The answer of the Interstate Commerce Commission to the application of the railroads east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers for permission to make a general increase of 5 per cent in freight rates, will be as follows:

1. The application will be denied.
2. All railroads will be ordered to discontinue making "allowances" to certain favored big industrial combinations.

This will save the general public from paying the additional $42,000,000 a year which the railroads are asking for and deprive certain big industrial corporations of a sum ranging between $50,000,000 and $100,000,000 annually.

The Commission during the past few months has secretly made an investigation to determine just the extent to which the practice of making "allowances" to industrial short line railroads, owned by manufacturing concerns, is prevalent.

His Names and Facts.

It is now in possession of the names of the concerns which receive these "allowances" or rebates, or discriminatory rates—and in addition it has the names of the railroads which pay them, the amounts received by the favored industrial corporations and something of the extent to which the practice injures the competing manufacturers, who are not in a position to enter into such arrangements.

In a large number of instances, it is claimed, the practice amounts to extortion. The railroads are compelled by the demands of competition to make allowances to the manufacturer for transferring his product over his own insignificant trackage to the junction where the regular railroad takes up his cars. Where several railroads are bidding for such a manufacturer's business the one which makes the most liberal allowance usually gets the freight.

To End the Extortion.

In view of this fact it is expected that the answer which the commission will give the railroads will meet with their approval and co-operation, and will do away with the most important of existing improper practices without the necessity of prosecution.

The railroads are asking for the five per cent increase on the ground that they must have increased revenue to pay their large operating expenses, and particularly to pay the higher wages demanded by their employees.

The recent demands for higher wages would take $17,000,000.

Can Pay Wage Advance.

Under the order which the Interstate Commerce Commission will issue the railroads will get more than $42,000,000 by simply cutting off an improper expense, and correspondingly, the favored trusts and combinations which have been mulcting them of the amount will be deprived of it.

The railroads will be placed in a position to pay their employees the living wage they demand, the danger of a huge strike will be avoided, and the whole thing will be accomplished without the shippers—and through them the general public—being required to pay more for the transportation of the necessities of life.

Board at Work to End Strike Deadlock

NEW YORK, July 24.—Hoping to end the deadlock and avoid the threatened strike of the 100,000 trainmen on the Eastern railroads, the Federal Board of Mediators to-day went into consultation with the men's representatives. Later the mediators will meet the railway managers.

The deadlock is the result of the insistence of the employers that their grievances also be arbitrated at the same time the men's demands are taken up.

Settlement Sought Of $14,000,000 Debt

WASHINGTON, July 24.—A debt of $14,000,000, probably the largest dispute of a financial nature in the United States, will be the subject of a conference in this city to-morrow. Virginia is trying to collect that amount from West Virginia and commissions representing the Legislatures of both States will meet here to-morrow and try to reach an agreement.

The debt arises out of West Virginia's withdrawing from Virginia a half century ago and since refusing to pay for improvements Virginia made.

Champ Clark Won't Let His Wife Fly

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The yearning of Mrs. Champ Clark, wife of the Speaker of the House, to engage in an aviation flight, while visiting Representative and Mrs. Baker, at Wildwood, N. J., received a setback when the Speaker flatly refused to let her go.

"I never talk back to Champ," she said. He is master of his own house and so I guess I won't fly just now."

Democrat Is Elected Arkansas Governor

LITTLE ROCK, July 24.—Latest returns to-day showed George W. Hays, Democrat, was elected Governor of Arkansas by a large majority. The Republican, Progressive and Socialist candidates were running far behind.

The surprise of the election was the failure of the Bull Moose faction to display any strength. Colonel George W. Murphy was a poor third.

Harry Meyers, Republican, carried the normal Republican counties. Both Democrats and Republicans before the election predicted heavy losses to the Progressives.

TEXTILE MAKERS SCORE COTTON TARIFF CUTS

Petition to Congress Asserts Democrats Forget Pledges and Industry Will Suffer.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—A petition signed by more than 60 leading cotton manufacturing and distributing firms in the United States, protesting against the cotton tariff rates in the bill now under consideration in the Senate, has been presented to both Houses of Congress. The petition reads as follows:

We herewith voice our protest against the enactment into law of the unequal provisions covering cotton textiles, as disclosed by the various proposed rates published July 11, 1913, embodied in the bill passed by the House of Representatives and amended by the Senate majority (Democratic) caucus.

The Democratic platform declared and promised:

"We recognize that our system of tariff taxation is intimately connected with the business of the country, and we favor the ultimate attainment of the principles we advocate by legislation that will not injure or destroy legitimate industry."

Say Business Will Suffer.

First. We can not reconcile this with the low rates now proposed, which in many instances must injure legitimate industry.

Second. We point out that we fairly represent the primary and other distributors of cotton textiles, handling productions of both North and South which go to every city, town and village in the United States.

Third. The rates generally are below what they should be. The amendments made are inadequate to fix competitive rates in accordance with the promises of the Democratic platform.

Fourth. As we understand it, the purposes of the tariff revision generally were to reduce duties, but not to disturb or inflict punishment on any branch of legitimate industry, and there has been no demand to overdo the reduction, especially in cotton textiles, as in many instances is the case.

Fifth. Some illustrations: Failure to provide higher adequate rates for cotton textiles made of combed yarns than if made of ordinary yarns, or higher adequate for finished plain woven or figured cloths than for grey; putting rates for jacquards on same basis as for ordinary cloths, and actually omitting jacquards in Senate amendments, etc., etc.

Offered Non-Destructive Rates.

Sixth. We indorse the effort of the Independent Manufacturers of New England, who have willingly accepted great reductions, but asked that consistent and non-destructive rates, if on a competitive basis, should prevail.

We believe that they have pointed out the lowest possible competitive rates which in operation would be consistent and fair to the different branches of the industry—North and South. We do not comprehend why their recommendations have not been received in the spirit given.

Seventh. We point out that it is better to err on the side or safety than to subject the industry at this time to the proposed rates more especially on productions of from medium to better grades of goods.

We deplore the discrimination that subjects the cotton textile trade to these needless hardships.

The time and meeting place of the next convention was referred to the executive committee.

RESINOL CURED AWFUL PIMPLES

Whole Face Covered, Now Clear.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I was troubled with two or three pimples coming out on my chin. In a week or so my whole face was covered with them. Friends advised me to use different lotions and salves. I tried them, but they did me little good, if any. I finally washed the pimples with Resinol Soap and applied Resinol Ointment before going to bed. In the morning I found the swelling going down, and the inflammation gone from the pimples. I tried this treatment for about a week, and found that most of the pimples had disappeared. I kept the treatment up for about a month, and then my face was clear of all pimples. I have used Resinol Soap since, and find that the pimples do not come back." (Signed) Walter A. Stenstrum, 54 Willoughby Ave., Oct. 9, 1912.

Resinol positively stops itching instantly and speedily heals eczema and other skin humors, dandruff, sores, burns and piles. Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap are sold by every druggist. Trial free; Dept. 11-P, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

SECRET OF ETERNAL YOUTH HELD BY GALAXY OF BEAUTIES IN CONTEST

MISS HELEN IRVING.

Predicted she will receive many votes for honor of having likeness placed on Booster Button.

Latest entrant in race has dark hair, blue eyes and pure cameo profile.

Ponce DeLeon Would Certainly Have Believed Their Loveliness Immortal.

If Ponce DeLeon were upon the earth to-day and should come to Atlanta in search of the fountain of youth he certainly would think he had found it in the galaxy of beauty in the booster button contest. A look through the photographs of the beauties who have been nominated would almost convince one that the loveliness is immortal.

Miss Helen Irving, of No. 385 Cherokee avenue, is the newest entrant. She is fair skinned, with dark hair, sea-blue eyes and a cameo profile. And it is predicted that she will get many votes in the remaining days of the contest.

Votes for the favorites are flowing in. The nominations have by no means ceased, but the contest has gone far enough for there to be favorites.

Do you remember the slogan for the "500,000 club" booster buttons that is to go under the picture of the girl voted the fairest? It is:

"Watch Atlanta—She'll Get You Yet. 500,000 by 1920."

Clip the coupon and nominate whom you think is Atlanta's prettiest girl, or vote for your favorite if she already has been nominated.

EDITORS LEAVE FOR OUTING AT SHORE

LA GRANGE, July 24.—Members of the Georgia Weekly Press Association left LaGrange this morning for Brunswick, still discussing Governor John Marshall Slaton's scathing arraignment of Georgia's tax system at the annual banquet of the association Wednesday night. The Governor appealed to the editors for aid in what he declared to be the most serious financial crisis in the history of the State. He said that Georgia's tax system and reckless spending by the Legislature have brought about present conditions, when the State finds itself unable to pay its school-teachers.

"We must admit it is indefensible to maintain a system that pays its teachers a year after their work has been performed," Governor Slaton said. "It is pleasant to spend money and hard to make it. We love to appropriate, yet shrink from the tax levy. In two years, the Treasurer says, we have spent nearly three-quarters of a million more than our income. The teachers—patient and hard-working—teaching during the day and working examinations at night—molding the characters and training the minds of those upon whom our civilization depends—under our system find no ray of hope from the injustice they suffer.

Recommends Special Taxes.

"While unpleasant to do, I have recommended a levy—an extra tax of 1 mill for 1915, and 1-2 mill in 1916, as the brave way to get relief. The taxpayer will find it the best trade he ever made. It would prevent the imposition of drastic taxing laws, the deficit in the treasury would be satisfied, the State could say to purchasers of her bonds that she is on a solid financial basis, her teachers would be paid, and the kiting policy, which is opposed to all sound principle, would be abolished."

Governor Slaton emphatically declared himself in favor of the plan of equalization of taxes that has been recommended by the Legislature.

Favors Tax Equalization.

"Is not equalization just that requires all to pay the same percentage?" he asked. "Is it right that one many pays on 16 per cent of the value of his property when another pays on 40? An increase of 20 per cent, by simply equalizing the burden, not increasing that of him who is already bearing his part, would produce an abundance of revenue for every legitimate purpose."

The editors will arrive at Brunswick this afternoon and enjoy an outing of several days in that city and at St. Simons Island, where the Second Georgia Infantry is in camp.

Capital Matrons Vie As Queens of Beauty

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Who is to be the beauty of the new administration is the much-discussed question here. Here are the leading aspirants:

Mrs. John E. Osborne, wife of the Second Assistant Secretary of State, dark eyes and hair, clear-cut features and a graceful, slender figure.

Mrs. Dudley Field Malone, wife of the Third Assistant Secretary of State, Irish type, black hair, blue eyes, sparkling with mirth.

Mrs. Timothy Ansberry, golden hair, oval contuor, large blue eyes and superb figure.

Boys Calmly Admit Killing a Policeman

CHICAGO, July 24.—Declaring he was not afraid to go to the gallows, Walter Novak, 19, to-day repeated his confession that he signaled for the shooting of Policeman Samuel Sowers, who was dying from a bullet wound. Bruno Klonowski, 18, who fired the shot, said: "I just felt like killing a cop. That's all. I should worry."

The two prisoners told the police to-day that they had been close friends of the four youths who were hanged in February, 1912, for slaying a gardener.

STREET CROWDS SEE STABBING AFFRAY

Real Estate Operator Accused of Knife Attack After Dispute Over a Bet.

While hundreds of pedestrians, many of them women and children, looked on, two men engaged in a stabbing affray on Peachtree street across from the Candler Building Thursday morning. One of the men received serious injuries.

The wounded man gave his name as Burnett Goodman. He said he was manager of a gum company and lived at No. 36 Moore street. His assailant gave his name as M. B. Ware, 41 years old, a real estate operator living at No. 30 Highland avenue. Ware is a one-armed man. He was released on bond of $100.

Goodman was slashed about the right side of the face and neck. He was taken to the Grady Hospital. After his injuries were attended to he was removed to the police station, where a charge of disorderly conduct was lodged against him.

Refuses to Explain Attack.

Ware, who voluntarily surrendered to Policeman Bostwick, declared that "he had cut him because he wanted to cut him." Other than that, he refused to give an explanation of his action.

Ware used a pocket knife as his weapon.

According to Goodman, Ware attacked him without provocation.

"I was walking down the street with a friend, when Ware came up to me and without a word began striking at me with a knife. I dodged his blows as well as I could and tried to run, but the knife caught me twice across the face. Then I got away and ran, but Ware followed me. If it had not been for someone stopping him he would have killed me, I believe."

Bet Given as Cause of Fight.

The affair is said to have been the result of an argument over a "book" on a baseball game. According to information given the police, Ware on Wednesday made a bet with Goodman of $125 on the game played that afternoon.

It was said that Goodman was accustomed to making "books" on baseball games, and that Ware, in lieu of the cash to put up, posted a $20 forfeit to cover his bet.

According to the report, Ware failed to put up the remaining $105 before the game was played, and when the team which he bet on won, and he attempted to collect the bet from Goodman, the bookmaker refused to pay.

The two are declared to have had some difficulty at that time, but refrained from violence. Thursday morning, however, when they met, the stabbing ensued.

CAROLINA YOUTH RICHEST TAR IN NAVY SLAIN

Anderson, S. C., Boy, Recently Heir to $250,000, Killed in Philadelphia Tenderloin.

PHILADELPHIA, July 24.—Wilbur Martin, the young sailor from Anderson, S. C., who was killed here recently in a tenderloin saloon, was worth more than $250,000 in his own right, according to information received here to-day. He was the richest enlisted man in the navy.

The fascination that the sea held for him and the adventures of a naval career led him to give up the enjoyment of his fortune to become a common seaman on the battleship Connecticut.

He inherited this fortune when his mother died last March. His relatives at once began to plead with him to give up his adventurous life and settle down in Anderson. The lure of the sea was too great, however, and he disregarded their pleadings and advice. In despair, his relatives appealed to Washington, but this last hope was without avail.

The mysterious circumstances surrounding the death of Martin are thought to have been explained by the discovery to-day of a bottle of heroin, which is supposed to have belonged to him.

Hospital physicians say drugs caused his death and it is believed he was the victim of "knockout drops."

THIRD CHAPTER IN PHAGAN MYSTERY

Arrests of Suspects in the Factory Slaying. Sensation as Leo Frank, Manager Was Taken Into Custody.

CHAPTER III.

Everything that occurred, trivial or important, during those first few days after the body of little Mary Phagan was discovered in the pencil factory basement took on a dramatic aspect. The people were keyed to so high a pitch by the revolting crime that for a time it seemed to require only a spark to fire them to violent deeds.

Let a strange person so much as appear at the police station to confer with Chief of Detectives Lanford and wild rumors spread about the whole city like magic. Let one of the detectives drop a careless remark and in a flash everyone mysteriously understood that a complete confession had been made to the police by the murderer.

So it was a sinister reception that the first catch in the detectives' dragnet received from the group of angry men when he was hurried to police headquarters Sunday night of the day after the factory girl had been slain.

All through the day crowds had hung about the police station, some of them merely morbidly curious, others having the mistaken impression that they were going to help the authorities in some manner. Since Newt Lee had been taken into custody in the morning, there had been no arrest, but now with the end of the day came the intelligence that the murderer of Mary Phagan had been captured and was being brought to a cell at the police station.

Smiles Defiantly at Crowd.

Eagerly the crowd awaited to learn the man's identity. On each side of the doors they lined themselves as he was walked, defiantly, toward them between two detectives. A smile curled his lips when he heard their sullen mutterings.

"I know that guy; it's Art Mullinax," came in a hoarse whisper from a roughly dressed youth.

The group of men and boys closed in behind the detectives and their captive, but officers barred their entrance to the police station. To Chief Lanford, Mullinax repeated his denial of the crime which he had made previously to the detectives when they placed him under arrest.

"It's a horrible mistake," he cried, dropping the bravado he had displayed before the crowd. "I don't even know Mary Phagan, except by sight, and the only time I can remember of seeing her was at a Christmas entertainment."

Despite his protestations of innocence, he was placed in solitary confinement and instructions were given that no one be permitted to see him or communicate with him. Sentell, the grocery clerk, insisted that Mullinax was the man he saw with Mary Phagan Saturday night at midnight, and he was so positive in his identification that there appeared to be little doubt of the circumstance.

Sentell Was Positive.

Sentell declared that he had known Mullinax for some time by sight and had met him frequently at the car barns, where both of them had worked at one time. He was certain he could not be mistaken. If it were possible, he was even more positive in his identification of Mary, for he had spoken to her, calling her by name, and she had replied, calling him Ed.

Monday's dawn found the detectives working feverishly on the hundred-and-one clews that had been presented to them. They had Mullinax in a cell, but they were confused by the maze of rumors which confronted them and which pointed the finger of suspicion at other persons as strongly as at Mullinax.

Early in the morning two of the detectives left the station. Chief Lanford was silent and no one else could be persuaded to tell of their mission. The newspaper men, however, jumped to an immediate conclusion and the next editions carried a story that search was being made for a discharged employee of the factory who was known to have been acquainted with the murdered girl.

A little later Chief Lanford admitted that it was J. M. Gantt, Mary's childhood playmate in Marietta and until three weeks before timekeeper at the pencil factory, who was the object of the search. He was known to have been at the factory the night before. His sister Mrs. F. C. Terrell, of No. 284 East Linden avenue, gave a strangely inaccurate account of his recent whereabouts.

Another Arrest Made.

She declared to the detectives and to Georgian reporters that Gantt had not been home for three weeks and that she understood he was on his way to California, when it was known that such was not the case.

Adding to the suspicion against him, he made the unfortunate move of leaving town at the very time the search was started for him, giving the impression that he was taking to flight. As it happened, he went only to Marietta and he was arrested as he stepped from a car there. He indignantly denied that he had any idea of flight. He did not have any idea that the officers were after him, he declared.

His story was that he went to Marietta to buy a crop and that he had notified his mother several days before that he was coming over Monday morning. A warrant charging that he was suspected of the murder of Mary Phagan was lodged against him and he was returned to Atlanta to be placed in a cell.

To add to the confusion and doubt and mystery of the crime, just at the moment when the detectives were positive that they had the criminal in Mullinax or Gantt, local handwriting experts came out with the declaration that the writing of the notes found by the boss of the Phagan girl unmistakably was that of the negro Newt Lee.

One of them qualified as an expert of more than twenty years' experience. He said that he was in the banking business and had made a special study of handwriting. After a careful examination of the notes and a comparison with the handwriting of Lee, he was as positive as he could be that the notes and the test writing were by the same hand.

Suspicion Turns to Another.

Tuesday started with the detectives and the public divided in opinion as to whether Lee, Gantt or Mullinax was the guilty man. It was not long before they were allowed to conjecture as to a fourth suspect. The day's developments came thick and fast, crowding on each other's heels. While the excited public was condemning each of the three prisoners to the gallows, the most startling rumor of all was taking form.

It was that a high official of the National Pencil Company was suspected of the brutal crime and that an arrest would take place within a short time. Through mysterious sources it became known that the police did not place much dependence on the seemingly positive indentifications that had been made of both Gantt and Mullinax.

It was learned at the same time that the theory that the little girl had been lured to the factory at night was being abandoned and that in its place the detectives were adopting the theory that she never left the factory after she entered it at noon to get her pay. They did not believe any of the stores that Mary Phagan had been seen on the street Saturday night.

This threw the suspicion on some one inside the factory. Shortly before noon Tuesday an automobile containing Detective Harry Scott, of the Pinkerton agency, which had been engaged by the pencil company, and Detective John Black, shot away from the police station and up to the pencil factory. Within ten minutes it had returned. With Scott and Black was Leo M. Frank.

Arrest Creates Sensation.

It was given out at first that Frank was not under arrest, but from that time to this he has not known an instant of actual freedom. This move of the detectives created a sensation. Public indignation, ready to vent itself on the newest object at hand, mounted to menacing heights even though nothing was known against Frank except that he freely admitted being in the factory at the time the Phagan girl came for her money and that the detectives interpreted some of his actions after the crime as highly suspicious.

His many friends rushed immediately to his defense. They proclaimed his arrest as a ridiculous blunder on the part of the police. They pointed to his career and to his reputation as the most potent indication that he would not descend to the fiendish deed that ended the innocent life of Mary Phagan.

But the detectives said:

He was the last one known to have seen Mary Phagan alive.

He was nervous and excited when Lee came to the factory at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

He was nervous and apparently fearful when Gantt came there at 6 o'clock and desired to enter the factory.

Actions Were Unusual.

He called Newt Lee in the evening, something he never had done before during Lee's employment.

There was no answer when Lee called his house early Sunday morning after finding the body and calling the police.

There was no answer when Call Officer Anderson attempted to get him on the telephone when the four policemen were in the factory early that morning.

He acted in a highly suspicious manner when the officers came to his house Sunday morning to take him to the police station for questioning.

All the time that the storm of accusation and bitterness was rising against the young factory superintendent, his attorney, Luther Z. Rosser, kept silence, except to say that Frank in the end would be found entirely innocent. Convinced of his client's innocence, Rosser worked quietly and faithfully in his behalf. Only once in the early days of the tragedy was he provoked to a show of his bulldog fighting qualities. This was when he reached the police station after Frank's arrest and was refused the privilege of seeing Frank.

"We'll see whether they can stop me from conferring with my own client," he shouted. A few minutes later he was in conversation with Frank.

From Frank's arrest until the next day, when the inquest was to begin, a dozen detectives were searching the factory rigidly from top to bottom for evidence. Practically every employee of the plant was quizzed and detectives were sent about the city running down fresh leads that came into the possession of the department.

On the eve of the inquest came the tragic funeral services of the young victim. The minister's prayer was as a stern, imperative invocation to the six men on the Coroner's Jury as well as a fervent plea to the Almighty.

"May God bring the man guilty of this terrible crime to justice," he implored, standing with closed eyes before the little white casket in the Marietta church where Mary, when a toddling child, had attended Sunday school.

Children who had played with her about her home in Marietta surrounded the grave and saw the body lowered into the earth. As the casket disappeared from sight the grief-stricken mother swooned.

The whole grewsome story of the finding of the body was repeated at the inquest, which began next day, but nothing was told which would throw any further light on the identity of the guilty person. Newt Lee told in his ignorant fashion of every move he had made during the fatal day and of his movements in the factory that night.

His story had every appearance of truthfulness. Coroner Donehoo was not able to trip him or catch him in any misstatements. He declared that he had no knowledge that the body was in the building until he went into the dark basement shortly before 3 o'clock that morning and saw the huddled form in the dim light of his lantern.

The officers who visited the factory that morning told their stories. Several of them were of the opinion that Lee knew much more than he had told and their testimony reflected this opinion, but the inquisition of the negro failed to elicit any admissions.

Conley Enters the Case.

Interest was centered in the testimony of Frank, which, it was thought, would be given when the jury resumed its session Thursday. The jurors, however, met and immediately adjourned until the following Monday, and another event took place which was thought to be of little consequence at the time, but which later assumed a vital bearing on the case.

E. F. Holloway day watchman at the factory, walking through the building early Thursday afternoon, came upon the negro sweeper, Jim Conley. Conley was washing a shirt and appeared strangely embarrassed when caught in the act by Holloway. The negro explained that he was washing the shirt in preparation for the inquest to which he had been summoned. Holloway notified the detectives of the suspicious circumstance and Conley was placed under arrest. That night the first formal charge was lodged against Frank and Lee. They were transferred from the police station to the Tower under commitments in which it was stated that they were suspected of the murder of Mary Phagan.

Apparently unafraid of the terrible charge that had been made against him, Frank appeared at the resumption of the inquest the next Monday seemingly the most unconcerned person in the whole assemblage. Only when he was forced to pass through the narrow lane out into the jam of humanity that filled the station house corridors did he display the slightest trace of nervousness. Looking straight ahead in an evident endeavor to avoid the sinister glances of the crowd, he hurried into the Commissioners' room with Chief Lanford's hand on his arm.

Once inside the room, his face assumed an expression of relief and he walked to the stand with an air of confidence. He answered the questions shot at him without hesitation. His utterance was distinct and his voice unfaltering. He appeared absolutely sure of himself and sure of his story.

He related freely Mary Phagan's visit to the factory. He recalled giving her the pay envelope. He said that she left his office and that he heard her talking with another girl, he thought, and then heard their footsteps dying away. He denied that he sent her to the rear of the factory to see if an expected shipment of metal had come.

No Incriminating Admission.

Every person in the crowded and stuffy little room hung on to each word of his testimony as it came clearly from his lips, but if anyone was expecting an incriminating admission he was disappointed, for it did not come.

Instead, the witness-defendant told a most remarkable and impressive story of his actions on the day of the crime, a story which since has been most strongly corroborated by the testimony of other persons.

Startling incidents followed in close succession until the next inquest hearing on Thursday of the same week. Paul P. Bowen, a former Atlanta boy, was arrested in Houston, Tex., on the suspicion of having fled there after the crime, and a day later the Pinkertons were trailing a Greek from Atlanta to Anniston, Ala., where he was supposed to have taken refuge after killing the girl.

Bowen was arrested on the strength of a story that a woman had heard him muttering wildly in his room in a Houston hotel.

"Why did I do it? Why did I do it?" she declared she heard him cry. Clippings telling of the murder were found in his trunk, but it was found that he had not been in Atlanta for a year. The clew in Anniston was discovered to be as worthless and the Pinkertons abandoned their theory that a Greek had anything to do with the crime.

One day one store advertises it at a certain price; another day a different store has another price. The result is, the glove has no staple price at all. Since we don't care to make a football of our merchandise, we shall discontinue handling this glove. Our price for to-morrow, therefore, is 39c.

Understand, please, that 39c in no wise represents the value of this glove. It has been advertised elsewhere as an 89c and $1 value; it is well worth 75c. Made of pure thread tricot silk—firm, wear-resisting and elastic. Full fashioned; finely finished. Double tipped fingers. All sizes in black, white, tan, champagne, lavender and navy. Selling starts at 8:30.

STANDING SHOWS PONY CONTEST PACE IS HOT

District No. 7 Only One Lagging. Positions May Change Quickly. Last Bonus On.

Standing of the contestants in The Georgian and American pony contest is published Thursday, and again is it possible to see what remarkable gains have been made by the busy contestants.

District No. 7, it seems, must "speed up" if it is to get anything except the last choice of the ponies, for George Melton, with 110,125 votes, is leading, and A. Morrison, with 106,000, is second.

On the other hand, Herbert Chapman in District No. 4 has rolled up 206,000 votes, and Fannie Mae Cook and Florence Greenoe, with 204,000 and 202,000, are close behind, pursued at no great interval by Eleanor Raoul, Nathaniel Kay and Oscar Eugene Cook.

Between these extremes are the leaders of the various other districts. In district No. 1 the leader, George Rosser, has 205,000 votes, and Helen Brantley is close behind with 201,000 votes. A field is closely bunched behind them.

Standing Can Change Quickly.

The city carriers and newsboys have been the most active, and Ross Greer has 208,000 votes, with Raymond Wilkinson, at 205,000, pushing him hard. In this race there are nine boys above the 100,000 mark.

Ben Steinberg, of Cartersville, is leading the Georgia boys and girls' race with 126,000 votes. Clifford Henry, of Carrollton, has 123,000 votes. Three more are within two years' subscription to The Georgian of the leader, which shows how quickly the relative standing of these contestants may change.

Lena Mae Smith, of Knoxville, Tenn., leads the race for the schoolboys and schoolgirls outside of Georgia, with 130,000 votes, but Fain E. Webb, Jr., of Piedmont, Ala.; McGee Hunt, of Westminster, S. C.; Robert Hyatt Brown and Elmer Cooper, of Greenville, all are in the running, and a little work will change the standings greatly.

Leaders All Bunched.

And so it goes through all the other districts—the four or five leaders are bunched close together. A few dollars spent for subscriptions to The Georgian or Sunday American by their friends will juggle the standings all around.

Subscriptions to The Sunday American make even more difference, for the Red Letter Ballots are in effect until Tuesday night, giving liberal amounts of extra votes for subscriptions to the Sunday paper.

One week from Thursday night the contest ends, and a Sunday intervenes. The time is short. Speed counts now.

Tipsy Monkey Kills Dog, Maims Master

SMITHERS, W. VA., July 24.—A drunken monkey belonging to George Smith, went on a rampage and after killing a bulldog, so severely chewed up Smith's hand that he was forced to have it amputated.

Smith gave a party and the monkey had come in for his share of refreshments. After the guests departed the monkey evinced a desire for another drink. Smith refused. The bulldog then sprang at the Simian, but the latter jumped on the dog's back and with his claws soon blinded him, then sank his teeth into the neck, killing him.

Smith suffered his injuries in his efforts to subdue his pet.

CHAMBER WILL BOOST INTERURBAN

Study of Lines in Other States To Be Made to Further Anderson-Atlanta Project.

Encouragement to the construction of the interurban line known as the Duke Line, from Anderson, S. C., to Atlanta, is promised as the result of a meeting at the Capital City Club of the Chamber of Commerce committee on interurban railways.

This committee, appointed by President Wilmer L. Moore to further interurban lines radiating from Atlanta, decided it would be best to deal with one project at a time, and as this one is most talked of, it is proposed by the committee to investigate to ascertain just what will be necessary to bring about its extension to Atlanta. The committee will make a report to the directors of the Chamber of Commerce with such recommendations as the situation appears to justify.

The committee will gather statistics and information relative to interurban railways, with a view to presenting the advantages which Atlanta will gather from their construction.

The members of the committee present were Chairman Hollins N. Randolph, Preston S. Arkwright, Frederic J. Paxon and Secretary Fred Lewis.

CHAINGANGS IN GEORGIA

Fined Forty-Five Dollars. The Man Could Not Pay. He Had to Die in Georgia.

Bridge at half cent a point.
Cold hands.
Penny-ante.
Jackpots.
Stud.
Straight poker.
DID YOU ever play one or all of them?
Ever play a game for money?
THIS MAN DID.
Detected, he was arrested.
Convicted in your Court, he heard this sentence:
"Forty-five dollars or eight months in the chaingang."
Speaking for you, your judge said in effect:
"Oh, moneyless man!
"You may go free if you pay forty-five dollars.
"You can not? You are poor?
"And yet, charged with gaming, you dare to stand in a Court of Justice?
"If you have not forty-five dollars—
"A ring of steel shall be riveted on your leg.
"A zebra suit upon your back shall proclaim your infamy.
"For eight months, a striped thing of horror to women and children, you shall go publicly to and from your work, shackled to other men.
"Since you do not pay—
"You shall work in chains.
"While others rest, when you try to sleep, you shall be chained in your bed to creatures as wretched and moneyless as yourself.
"Your fetters shall gall your skin night after night.
"And beware the guard! If you displease him, our lash is ready for your back.
"POOR FOOL, PAY—
"Forty-five dollars for the coffers of the great State of Georgia.
"Miserable, moneyless, man.
"Because of your poverty—
"Suffer.
"God may pity you.
"We will not, since you have no money."
The man is dead.
Stripes and chains were put upon him.
In the quarry of the forty-nine-pound hammers you drove him in the frightful heat.
There he fell.
HE DIED THAT DAY.
Remember—
His offense was only this: he played a game for money.
Nothing more.
You condemned him.
You demanded that he pay.
He could not.
You killed him; you did not intend it.
But ignorance is no excuse.
Paul wrote for you:
"Thou art inexcusable, oh, man."
And Jesus said:
"With what judgment you judge, you shall be judged,
"And with what measure you mete, it shall be measured to you again."
God wake you.
Men, women and children are being destroyed in the name of law in Georgia.
The guilt is yours and ours.

WANT AD RACE STARTS WITH REAL VIM

Contestants Begin Work Thursday and Hustle to Win That Automobile or Other Prize.

Enthusiastic young men and women started out early Thursday to win those prizes in The American and Georgian's big Want Ad Contest. They began to meet success from the very start, for the want ads came rolling in.

"It's going to be easy," said one youngster after his first hour's work. "I got three ads from the first four houses I visited. I'm going to win a motorcycle, at least."

Contestants were not simply turned loose with a pencil and paper and told to get busy. An experienced district manager, one who knows through long training how to suggest want ad possibilities, accompanied each contestant for a while, called with him at a number of homes and started him on the right track. The boys and girls were enthusiastic over their first morning's work.

Help Your Young Friends.

Atlanta folk or others who have a boy or girl friend in the contest are urged to either give their want ads to him or her, or else send the ads to the office with a request that they be credited to this contestant. A full list of the entrants in the race will be published Friday.

Contestants gathered early in the day at the four district offices and there met their respective managers. The districts are:

District No. 1—North of Marietta and west of Peachtree, Taylor Bros. drug store, 191 West Peachtree street.

District No. 2—North of Decatur street and east of peachtree, including Kirkwood, Decatur and eastern suburbs; Ponce DeLeon Pharmacy, corner Ponce DeLeon and North Boulevard.

District No. 3—South of Decatur street and east of Whitehall, Paragon Pharmacy, Capitol avenue and Georgia avenue.

District No. 4—South of Marietta street and west of Whitehall, including West End, College Park, East Point and Battle Hill; Medlock's Pharmacy, Gordon and Lee streets.

Not Too Late to Enter.

It isn't too late to enter the Want Ad Contest and win one of the big prizes. You might get a fine automobile, a piano, a trip to California. You might land a motorcycle, a bicycle, a watch or diamond. The prizes are well worth trying for.

There is a nomination blank in the full-page advertisement on another page of this issue. Clip it out, take it to the headquarters of the district in which you live and get a good start. The coupon will give you 1,000 votes, and ten votes will be given you for every cent turned in for paid want ads. You'll find the work a real practical course in salesmanship, too.

Girl Outwits Cupid; Wins Her Own Rival

WHEELING, W. VA., July 24.—War, or Sherman's equivalent for it, "hath no fury like a woman scorned," Harry Pendleton mournfully confides to his friends.

Pendleton had been engaged to Dessie McIntyre for two years, when he met Henrietta Aiken, a Bridgeport, Ohio, belle. He fell a willing conquest and Miss McIntyre was peeved, but not without hope. She went cupid one better by going to Bridgeport, cutting her hair short, donning the clothes of a modern Beau Brummel and "cutting out" Pendleton in masterly fashion. Then she doffed her masquerade.

Pendleton refuses to say whether or not Miss Aiken has permitted him to resume his courtship.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Bijou Show Pleases.

"Good Morning, Judge" as presented at the Bijou this week, seems to have struck a popular chord, as at each performance since the opening matinee the attendance has been unusually large. "Good Morning, Judge"is an ideal hot weather entertainment Interspersed throughout are a number of clever vaudeville specialties which alone would be sufficient to furnish an evening's entertainment.

"Les Miserables."

Great interest has evidenced itself in the presentation of "Les Miserables" at the Grand. Attendance since the introduction of the picture on Monday has grown wonderfully and many who have witnessed the two and a half hour exhibition of Victor Hugo's novel declare the photoplay to be superior to any that has been presented in Atlanta. The exhibition is in four complete acts. There are nine reels of more than 12,000 feet of the finest film, and the characters are played by the greatest actors of France.

Next week the Carnegie Museum Alaska-Siberian pictures will be exhibited, together with first-run motion pictures of the better quality.

Divers a Real Hit.

The standing room record continues at the Forsyth. The busy theater has been sold out at eight performances this week and the demand for seats for the rest of the week is great.

John F. Conroy, the famous lifesaver, who with his diving models is the star act of the program, presents the best novelty that has ever been seen on a local stage. He is a wonder in physical culture and as a diver.

For next week the headline feature will be Joe Welch, the character comedian, in his life study of the Hebrew. Mr. Welch has appeared here before and won a great hit. Robert L. Daily and company, in "Our Bob" will make his first local appearance.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

by JAMES B. NEVIN

Senator Bacon's inability to attend a sitting of the Georgia Legislature just now for the purpose of accepting an invitation to address that honorable body in joint session, generally is regretted among the members, and many have expressed themselves accordingly.

Senator Bacon's failure to see his way clear to leaving Washington just now seems to be thoroughly appreciated, however, and the fact that he declined the General Assembly's invitation to come down is understood and appreciated.

Senator Hoke Smith's recent address was greatly enjoyed by the General Assembly. He went very thoroughly into many things upon which the Legislature was not fully informed, and undoubtedly held his audience's profound interest and attention through the entire joint session.

Fortunately for the Legislature, Senator Smith's invitation came at a time when it was convenient for him to accept, and without in any way neglecting his duties in Washington.

Both Senators Bacon and Smith are eloquent and forceful speakers, although of late years Senator Bacon has spent very little of his time in Georgia and has been heard but infrequently, on the stump or otherwise.

Whatever the relations between these two Senators may be, whether they be cordial or not, the Georgia Legislature was impartial in extending its invitations to them, as both joint resolutions passed by a unanimous vote of each House.

Editor F. H. Sills, of The Metter Advertiser, whose heart strings are wrapped tight around the bill to create Candler County, was distressed, but not dismayed, that his bill failed of passage this year.

Sills, who has led a clean, manly and fair fight for his pet project, believes that Candler yet will be created—perhaps next session. And, anyway, he is not grieving over spilled milk or wishing he never had been born merely because of a temporary setback in his plans.

Sills is a newspaper man, and a good one, and therefore the newspaper men generally about the Capitol have felt a kindly interest in his proposal with respect to Candler.

His plucky little paper down in Metter has waged a long and honorable warfare for Candler County, and most everybody who knows him wishes him mighty well.

Sills admits ungrudgingly that the first round went against him, but he still is perfectly game and expects to win out in the end.

Hon. Alphabet Bowden, otherwise known as "Jet," because his initials are J. E. T. (business of "great laughter"), is being boomed for Mayor of Waycross.

Asked in the Kimball House lobby to-day, Why is Waycross? and Why should anybody want to be Mayor thereof? Mr. Bowden stated that he didn't particularly want to be, but that there was an uprising of the people on and nothing would satisfy them but Bowden for Mayor.

"Waycross is a great little town and they think I would make a great little Mayor—that's all!" said Bowden.

Representative N. F. Culpepper of Meriwether is one of the best lawyers in the House and one of its strongest men.

He is not at all showy, and seldom indulges in debate on the floor. In the committee rooms, however, where most of the real constructive work of the General Assembly is accomplished, he long ago came to be recognized as safe and sane and well worth following.

This is Mr. Culpepper's first term in the House of Representatives, but it is doubtful whether Meriwether, although it has sent to Atlanta many of the ablest and most forceful men in General Assemblies of the past, ever sent a stronger man than Culpepper.

It is evident enough that there is to be a bitter and perhaps prolonged fight in the House on the proposition to establish a State Board of Tax Equalizers.

It is but the truth to state that many of the smaller counties, now getting back from the State through the common school fund and the pensions much more money than they pay into the State Treasury, are aggressively averse to having themselves equalized, or anything like equalized!

Some of the counties pay into the State Treasury a tax on as little as 16 per cent of the valuation of their lands as set forth by the United States Government. Other counties pay as high as 300 per cent.

Manifestly, here is a situation that needs equalizing, at least partially.

If any person doubts the truth of the assertion herein made, he has but to apply to the United States Census Department to have the figures verified.

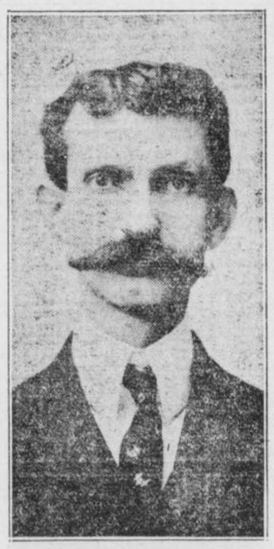
Between the two extremes of 16 per cent and 300, the various counties run from 20 to 250. The impression is that 65 per cent of the national valuation of real estate in Georgia would be little enough for the taxpayers to have assessed against them—but it may be set down as a dead sure thing that those counties now fattening at the expense of the others are going to balk at having a State board set up to equalize them.

The proposed State board is not to be given power to equalize individuals—it merely will undertake to equalize counties.

Will the board be created? Not if the get-more-than-we-pay-in counties can help it!

$55 SAVED ON FULL BUSINESS SCHOLARSHIPS

The Extraordinary Offer Made by The Southern Business College Will Soon Close.



L. W. ARNOLD,
Vice President Southern Shorthand and Business University.

The opportunity of securing the $55 complete shorthand course and the $55 complete bookkeeping course, both combined, for the price of one course, at the well-known Southern Shorthand and Business University, 10 West Mitchell Street, is rapidly passing away.

Only fifty scholarships were put on sale at this remarkably low rate and the number is diminishing rapidly.

"Reserve one of the special scholarships for my son," said a gentleman yesterday, as he was passing through the city from the North to his home in South Georgia, "and I will mail you a check for same as soon as I get home."

Another came in from a distance and secured a scholarship for his son; several mail applicants and a large number of city callers obtained scholarships for immediate and future entrance.

A club of six in one locality bought scholarships and clubs in other sections are now organizing.

Orders for scholarships came in today from Florida, South Carolina and Tennessee.

While the two $55 courses are being sold for the price of one course—$55—either course alone is offered for $40.

"This is the first time in three years that we have put on sale our scholarships at reduced rate," said Mr. L. W. Arnold, the vice president, to-day, "and we are doing this merely as a midsummer advertising proposition to invade new territory, the plan being to secure a large list of names of prospective pupils from those who obtain this low-priced scholarship. From this list we hope to escure many pupils at the regular rates, which will be in effect by August 1, and thus be reimbursed for the loss we are now sustaining by this advertising offer.

"The demand for stenographers and bookkeepers is very heavy just now; have received a dozen calls since Tuesday and placed several pupils."

Secure scholarship at once. Call, phone or write A. C. Briscoe, President, or L. W. Arnold, Vice President, Atlanta, Ga.

M'KEE SILENT ON RESIGNATION RUMORS

Postmastership in Doubt as Present Holder Confers in Capital With His Chiefs.

Speculation is rife in regard to the exact status of the postmastership in Atlanta pending the return of Postmaster Hugh McKee from Washington. Mr. McKee left Atlanta for the National Capital last week, after obtaining a leave of absence for ten days to lay certain questions before the Postoffice Department at Washington, it is claimed.

Dispatches from Washington indicate that conferences between the Atlanta postmaster and Third Assistant Postmaster General Roper have been held. These conferences, Mr. McKee's personal representatives say, were entirely satisfactory and had nothing whatever to do with a resignation.

Nevertheless guesses continue to be made and there are those who say that the bomb may drop at any time. Thus far, no intimation has been given by Mr. McKee as to the alleged request for his resignation.

Mr. McKee, accompanied by his daughter, probably will reach Atlanta by the end of this week. They are now in Atlantic City, according to latest information received in Atlanta.

BREAKFAST SENT THOMAS CAT BY POST

Mistress, in Atlanta on Visit, Can Not Trust Feline Aristocrat to Butcher Shop Diet.

Bricks and eggs and live stock have become common enough as mail matter within the past few months, but never until Miss Bessie Butler came to Atlanta had Uncle Sam's parcel post served as a dumb waiter for a cat!

Down at Madison, Ga., a big aristocratic Thomas cat—by name, "McCurry"—gets his breakfast every day by parcel post, all the way from 513 Peachtree street, where Miss Butler is visiting Mrs. A. Cunningham.

"McCurry" is Miss Butler's most priceless possession, and when she came to Atlanta she left instructions that the cat must be fed large, mansize pork chops each day. She gave this order to a butcher, with the inevitable result.

Poor "McCurry's" chops soon took on the appearance of a large piece of bone surrounded by a meaty atmosphere, and the cat got dyspepsia and developed a crabbed disposition. He lost his zest in life—all nine of him—and was peevish and poor company.

The sad news of "McCurry's" condition was written to Miss Butler by a friend. It seemed that unless something was done at once the cat would die—it was feared he would break all his teeth trying to eat the bones the butcher said were chops.

So Miss Butler has invoked the aid of Uncle Sam. She gathers up all the scraps of meat that are left when the Cunningham meal is over, and each night she packs them into a shoe box and forwards them to her friend in Madison, who feeds them to the cat the next morning.

The unique method of feeding her pet has been going on for several days now—and latest advices from the front are that the cat is doing well and taking on weight.

Better News of Laces Than We Have Told So Far This Season

The Selling Starts at Nine o'Clock

Take this as a matter of information---the laces below are wanted kinds, fashion-favored right now; the new prices are made arbitrarily, in spite of their worth---and be guided in your purchases accordingly.

The average woman's "love" of pretty laces is strong, stronger perhaps than the average woman's sense of thrift, especially when that sense of thrift would interfere with her possession of pretty laces.

But to-morrow—

A womans "love" of pretty laces and her sense of thrift urge her to attend this sale of laces.

Here are laces wanted right now, that will be wanted when the new dresses for fall are started, at prices that average a great deal less than half.

It is one of those events that happen but once-in-a-while.

Share its savings!

Here briefly is what you will find—

At 19c 35c to 85c a yd. Laces

Shadow and Venise bands and edges in cream, white and black. They are 3 to 5 inches wide.

At 59c $1 to $2 a yd. Laces

Shadow and Venise bands and edges in cream, white and black. These are 4 to 9 inches wide.

At 98c $2 to $3.50 a yd. Laces

Shadow and Venise edges, bands and medallions. The edges, some of them, are 18 inches wide.

Some twenty embroidered dress patterns---voiles and crepes---that were originally $12 to $18 each are now $6.75, because the clearance of them must be complete, despite the fact that all but these went in a recent sale at $9.50. Richly, beautifully embroidered, in light blue, pink, navy and lavender on white---many designs.

ONE WEEK FROM TO-NIGHT PONY CONTEST ENDS

No One Is Certain of Victory and the Lowest Candidate To-day May Be a Leader To-morrow—Only Seven More Days to Claim Prizes—Will You Be Among the Winners?—Success Is Within Your Grasp If You Will Only Realize the Fact and Prove Your Right to the Prizes By Your Efforts Now—"Dark Horses" Will Probably Come Fast During Last Days and Crowd Out the Too Certain Ones.

We have now entered the thick of the fight, the battle is on and when the smoke clears away on July 31, WHO WILL STAND FORTH AS VICTORS? Who knows? Victory is as liable to perch on the banner of one candidate as another and probably the candidate who is now hovering near the cellar championship, as the baseballists say, may be the one who will come so fast during the last few days that there will be no stopping him—he will sweep all before him and march triumphantly to his goal. This statement should be considered well by all candidates and especially those who may feel that there is no need for them to exert themselves during this time, as they are certain of victory. No one is certain of victory, and no one will be until all is over. You may be in the lead now and be reasonably sure in your own mind that no one can defeat you for the prize you want, but you do not know what efforts will be put forth before the close and while you rest apparently secure in the prospect of winning, your very nearest competitor will probably be working so energetically that the gap between you now will be closed up to allow victory snatched from your grasp when a little real effort during these seven days will win for you and any other candidate who fails to do his very best is liable to be without the charmed circle of winners on July 31, no matter how far in front he may be at present.

Present standings are not indicative of final results by a long way. Real effort NOW is going to swing the pendulum of victory or defeat and if you really desire one of those pony outfits or a pretty watch, now is your opportunity to win your selection.

Have you ever witnessed a horserace, where the favorite started out in front, passed the quarter and half poles away in front and then fell down during the last quarter, while the "rank outsider," now considered as a last place possibility, romped in ahead of the favorite? This illustrates perfectly what is just as liable as not to happen in the contest during these last few days. We don't say that it will happen, but such things have happened so often—the candidate is not given a chance to win by the "wise" ones—finally defeating all his rivals—that a similar occurrence in The American-Georgian campaign would not be surprising. Hence, we want to impress upon every candidate the necessity of doing his best before the finish overtakes you.

FIVE MORE DAYS OF THE RED LETTER BALLOTS.

Just five more days and the Red Letter Ballot, which is the last special vote offer of the contest, will draw to a close. The work being done by the great majority of candidates proves that they appreciate their opportunities and are going to die hard. Those who have as yet done but little on this offer should lose no time in getting started. There is still time to secure its advantages and every vote secured is a step nearer success. uTesday night at 10 o'clock this offer will close and those who have failed to take advantage of this offer and these will be but few, will have missed a chance that may mean final defeat. Votes are the only things that will win for you and without these necessary things you cannot hope to win. Hence every one is worth securing and essential to success.

ECZEMA DISFIGURED FACE BADLY

Also on Hands. Broke Out in Pimples. Itched Badly. Spread All Over Body. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

Hampton Springs, Fla.—"I had had eczema on my face and hands for about three years. My face was badly disfigured. The eczema broke out in pimples and itched so very badly I would scratch it all the time. It was the most irritating disease I have ever had. It started on my face and hands and it spread all over my body. I had great large sores all over me, caused from the eczema. It bothered me day and night so that I could not rest at all.

"I used three remedies for skin disease and they didn't give relief at all. I was almost terrified until a friend recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment to me. They helped me from the time I started to use them. I used the Cuticura Soap and warm water as a wash and then put the Cuticura Ointment on the sore places. I only used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and was cured." (Signed) Mrs. E. C. Parker, Dec. 7, 1912.

When you buy a fine toilet soap think of the advantages Cuticura Soap possesses over the most expensive toilet soap ever made. In addition to being absolutely pure and refreshingly fragrant, it is delicately yet effectively medicated, giving you two soaps in one, a toilet and a skin soap at one price. Sold throughout the world. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

Defense in Deaton Feudist Case Opens

WINCHESTER, KY., July 24.—The Commonwealth closed its evidence in the trial of Fletcher Deaton, charged with conspiracy to kill Ed Callahan, and the defense began its evidence. Sweeping denials to all charges against "Uncle Fletch," as he is known in the mountains, were made.

The Commonwealth sprang a surprise when a deputy sheriff of Breathitt County testified that Deaton told him shortly before the killing that he would have to have Callahan killed.

Poultry Gossip

By JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

Is there a difference between roup and sorehead? My neighbor tells me they are the same thing, only roup is sorehead in the fall and winter, and what we usually call sorehead is the same disease in hot weather. I would like to have your views upon the subject.—Mrs. J. R. C., Dallas, Ga.

These are two entirely different diseases, and come from different causes. Both are diseases of the blood, though the effect is quite different. Then at times the two troubles are found in the same specimen.

For example, a fowl having the sorehead and all broken out with the sores or bumps on its comb and head, will, by roosting in a hot, damp place, contract the roup. This will cause the air passages to become inflamed and fill with mucous, causing the fowl to breathe through its mouth.

Results in Loss of Eyes.

The breathing passage to the nostrils being stopped, the inflamed matter will be forced out through the eye duct, filling the space around the eye, causing it to water and swell. If it is not relieved the matter will harden and finally the eye will go blind and peel out.

While this is going on the sorehead trouble will wrinkle up the comb and if not checked will form a solid scab upon the head and comb and will so affect the general health of the specimen as to cause death in many cases.

It is only in rare cases, however, that the two are combined. Either one is sufficient in itself to cause enough trouble to do a world of damage to an otherwise thrifty flock. The sorehead comes on as a result of infection introduced by the sting of the mosquito. When once established in a flock it is transmitted from one to the other without the aid of the mosquito, by personal contact.

Coops Should be Netted.

Mosquitoes rarely bother them during the day, so that where a person will take the trouble to make his poultry coops mosquito proof with netting they will have but little trouble from sorehead. Where this is not done, a great preventive measure is the giving of Epsom salts freely in the drinking water during July and August. It must not be omitted for any length of time or the system allowed to get out of the influence of it or the sores will make their appearance.

When the sores do come up, it is a good plan to take any affected ones from the flock and treat them individually by dipping a feather in oil of tar and touching the sores. Another good remedy is a stick of caustic touched to soft water and then to the sore. Either one of these will have a tendency to kill the germs and dry up the sores. The salts should also be given. Everything should be spick and span about the premises in regard to water vessels, feed troughs and nests. Filth will spread the trouble faster than you can cure it.

Roup Like Common Cold.

Roup is to fowls what a bad cold is to people, and, as it is in the human family, it is liable to take various forms if not checked in its incipiency. It may become malignant, with an offensive odor, and often develop into swelled head and at times into a cankerous condition of the throat and mouth.

It will be observed by opening the beak wide that there is a thick, yellowish coating on the throat and tongue, like cheese. Some experts advise the removing of this coating with a feather quill and powdering the raw surface with powdered borax twice a day. A dose of castor oil every other day for three days; then follow it up with salts in the water. This is a constitutional treatment that will help rid the system of the poison.

The swelled head condition is best treated with kerosene oil. We have found nothing so handy to use as a spring-bottom sewing machine oil can, the small tip of which can be inserted into the nostril. With this the oil can be forced through the nostrils into the head.

Foam is First Symptom.

If the poultryman is alert and looks closely after his fowls he will notice a little foam collected in the corner of the eye. This is the first indication of roup and the closing of the air passages. This is the time to treat with the kerosene, which will usually, in about two or three applications, clear out the trouble entirely.

While roup usually is considered a cold weather disease, yet it very frequently makes its appearance in the very hottest times of the summer. At such times it is as the result of chickens being confined in hot, close quarters, not well ventilated and full of bad odors. At such times it is often more trouble to handle than in cold weather because of the difficulty in securing free fresh air.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

MISTER and Missus Riley was up to our house last nite, and thay had thare littel son Tommie with them. He was the freshest kid that I evver seen, and if I dident know so much moar about boxing than he knows, I wud have took him out in the yard & handed him a few hot wallops, & beesides, I felt kind of sorry for him beekaus his Pa & Ma kind of spoiled him. All that his Ma sed to him wen he spoak out of his turn was Now, Tommie, that isent nice.

I doant think we will move back to the city till skool beegins aggenn, sed Pa to the Rileys. We like it out here in the country & beesides, I want Bobbie to stay here as long as possibel. A boy is always better off in the country than he is in the city.

Oh, mercy, sed Missus Riley, how can you say that? Why, just think of the advantages that a boy has wen he is getting a city bringing up.

He Learns Things.

My husband doesn't think so, sed Ma. You see, he was born & brought up in a small town, & he says that a boy born & brought up in a small town has more all around training. He can learn to swim & hunt & fish & row a boat & hitch up a horse & a lot of other things that maiks a man out of him wen he grows up.

But a boy in the city can get such perfect manners, sed Missus Riley. Tommie has learned all he knows about manners by associating with nice little boys in the city that lern thare manners from thare private teechers, the little deers. You are always careful about yure manners, aint you, Tommie, sed Missus Riley.

I shud worry about manners, sed Tommie. What do I care about manners. People in Hoboken have all the manners, sed Tommie.

Now, Tommie, that isent nice, sed Missus Riley. See what a quiet little chap Bobbie is.

That is beekaus he is a bonehead & can't think of anything to say, sed Tommie Riley. He beelongs rite up here in the minor league whare he it, that kid.

I got pritty mad but I knew enuff to keep still. My Ma always told me not to start a quarl in the presens of older peepul.

I wuddent stay in this jay town any longer than I cud help, sed the Riley kid. The peepul here doant know they are alive.

You know a whole lot for a yung man, don't you, sed Pa. You will grow up to be a regular city feller, all rite, one of them clerks that rides to work & back home in the trolley & talks a ride on Sunday for a outing & then goes around telling what a wise fish he is.

Tommie will never be that kind of a braggart, sed Missus Riley, looking at Pa kind of hard. My littel son knows too much to be a braggart, doant you, Tommie?

Tell it to Sweeney, sed Tommie to his mother. Cheese on all that talk about me. Lay off on me and talk about sumbody that doesn't know anything.

Now, Tommie, that isent nice, sed his mother.

I shud fret and take a sweat, sed the Riley kid. I shud worry and git gray, he sed.

Pa Talks.

Tommie, sed Pa, as long as yure parents will not tell you the truth I am going to. You think you are a vary smart yung man bekaus sumbody taught you how to say, "I shud worry." You can say that & you can sing "Snooky Ookums" & part of "In my Harum," and that lets you out. & then you cum up here in the country & try to maik fun of grown up peepul that knew moar when thay was babies than you will evver know wen you grow up. You ought to be spanked, Tommie, & sent to bed to think it oaver.

Then Tommie looked at Pa kind of fresh & sed Say, this is a queer kind of a country.

I guess if he had stayed long I wud have had to soak Tommie, but his Pa & Ma got kind of mad wen they seen we dident like thare son, so thay took him hoam.

Where Riches Count.

The late Mr. Bradley Martin, who was himself a polished wit, used to recall with delight a conversation he overheard between two girls apropos of an aged millionaire's marriage to a debutante.

"I know he's rich," said one, "but isn't he too old to be considered eligible?"

"My dear," answered the other girl, "he's too eligible to be considered old."

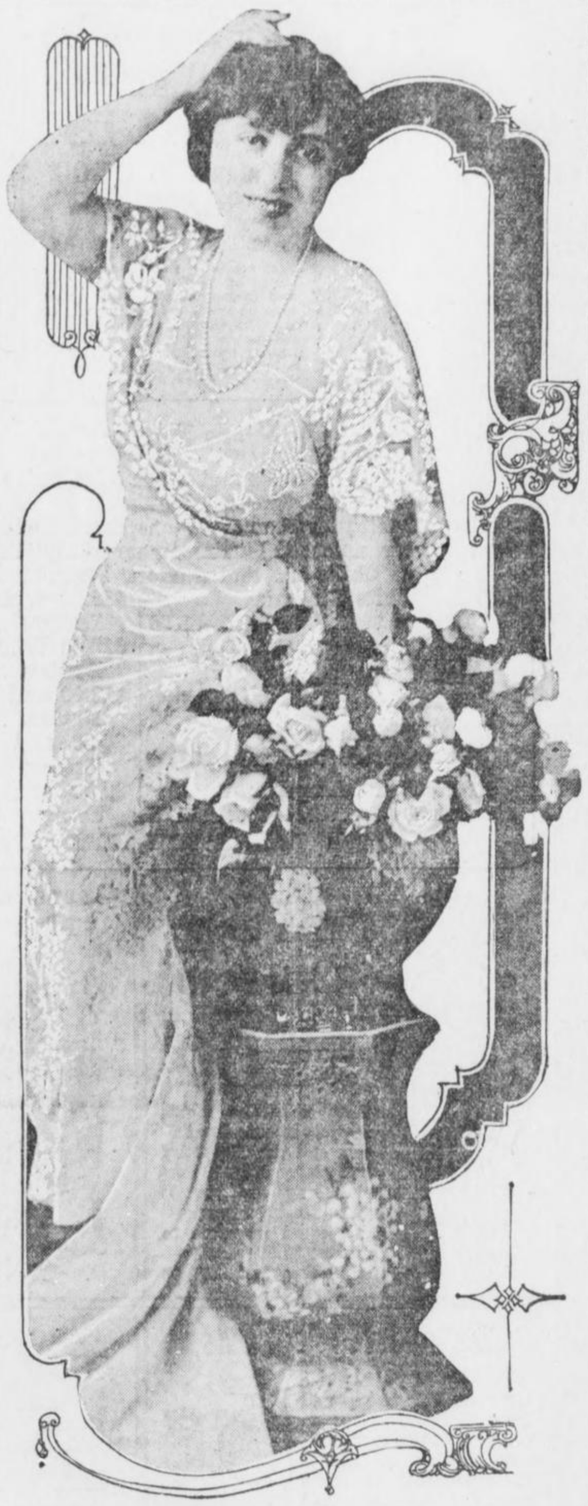
Stella Barre Tells of the Value of Voice Culture.



Miss Stella Barre.

"WHEN I began making vocal culture a serious study a few years ago—six, to be accurate," said Stella Barre in the most delightfully musical of voices, as we sipped cooling ices after the matinee, "no one except my teacher and myself believed I had a voice to train. We did believe, though—we worked hard to prove it—and now we have a few followers, haven't we?"

If you have heard Stella Barre's top note and a few others below it such as she renders at the performances of "All Aboard" in New York you will agree that she has triumphantly proved the existence of her voice. And a voice is, as we have been told, "an excellent thing in woman," be it low and sweet, or be it high and sweet; but heaven forefend that any one of us have the high-pitched nasal voice, or the husky, breathy croak that are an unfortunate tradition as the possessions of the American woman.

"No amount of study is too hard," said the charming singer, "if it gives you at last the goal of your dreams. But you have to work with your brain as well as your body. And the thing I would warn girls most earnestly against is overfatigue. It is so easy to think, 'Oh, I will just keep at this a bit longer,' and to use up so much energy and strength that you infringe on your reserve store. Now I really practice all afternoon long—but only about fifteen minutes at a time. I work a bit, and then I go off to something quite different, and then back to work. In this way, I probably put in three or four hours' work with less fatigue than two hours of steady application and overstrain would give.

"You read so many romances of how the fair telephone girl wins a millionaire husband by saying 'Hello!' very sweetly to his listening ear. There is something in every tale—fairy or otherwise—you hear, and whether a girl has a singing voice or not, a few singing lessons will vastly improve her speaking voice—and perhaps help to discover another prima donna.

A Suggestion.

"For the girl who can not afford singing lessons, I would suggest deep breathing at an open window morning and night, or whenever she has a chance to try it during the day. Then fill the lungs and hold the breath back of the voice while speaking a few words, gradually increasing the number until you have breath control and all the while keeping the voice as deep, clear and low as possible."

"But you don't think that voice alone is sufficient beauty for woman, do you?" I asked, for every line of Miss Barre's cool coral colored linen dress and white hat bespoke a careful attention to the mysteries of true becomingness in dress, with beauty and good taste duly commingled—and these mysteries become just plain everyday facts in the clever hands and brain of the woman who knows how to dress. "I am sure that you recognize the importance of dress and manner in the field of womanly charm."

"Yes," said Miss Barre, with the pleasing attention that she always gives to your part of the conversation; "I believe in dress and manner as adjuncts to beauty, and I have just four little pet theories for the first aids to beauty. Here they are: First and most important, KEEP UP. Keep up and ahead of what you are doing of events and happenings; just cultivate a habit of feeling light and buoyant and not weighted down or impeded by life.

"Next, BE PLEASANT. Friends are as easy to acquire as enemies, and a pleasant greeting to the people you meet won't harm them or you.

A Mental Picture.

"Of course, I believe in dressing as well and as becomingly as your means will allow. And to do that you must cultivate your imagination. Do you know, I can always see myself walking out of the front door and down the street in a dress just about the time I am having my first fitting. I picture myself in clothes, and as I don't like freak pictures, I don't get freak clothes. I make sure that my hats form a background for my face, although if I had a short neck I would be careful not to make it appear still shorter by wearing hats that would cut it off in the course of their down-droop in back. And I study the line of my throat. A neck is pretty generally becoming—except to the woman with an exceedingly long, narrow face. Square neck for her, and a round line that cuts off the throat should be generally taboo.

"It's a science, isn't it?" laughed Miss Barre. "Why, I believe taste in dress has as many branches and ramifications as the study of singing. But they are both worth while, aren't they?"

And we all agree, don't we, little sisters?

One Woman's :-: Story :-:

By Virginia T. Van de Water.

CHAPTER VII.

PERHAPS Mary Danforth did not acknowledge to herself why it was so hard for her to give her mind to her studies during the evening on which she received Craig's pansies. If she appreciated that the sender of the flowers was in her consciousness more than was the book of civics lying open in the glow of her student's lamp, she did not admit it even in her innermost thoughts. She tried to "concentrate," but her wits wandered, and, time and again, she found, with a guilty start, that for some minutes she had been gazing abstractedly at nothing. It was late when at last she put out her light, urged to this course by her mother, who insisted that she was wearing herself out studying so hard, and that she would be "good for nothing" in the morning.

When Mary awoke on the morrow she was forced to confess the accuracy of the final part of her mother's prediction, for she did feel "good for nothing." Her eyes smarted and her limbs ached as she busied herself with her toilet. A vague feeling of disappointment possessed her, depressing and, at the same time, irritating her, and she went to breakfast with her nerves and temper on edge. She had difficulty in controlling her feelings when Mrs. Danforth, in her desire to promote table talk, innocently introduced the subject of Craig—feeling that he would be an interesting topic of conversation.

Vexed at the Blush.

"I declare," announced the kind-hearted matron, amiably, "I have almost fallen in love myself with that tall Texan. He has such beautiful manners and is so considerate of elderly people. Don't you think he is delightful?"

As this remark was addressed to the table at large, Mary, vexed at the blush which she felt creeping to her forehead, busied herself with her grapefruit and made no reply.

"Don't you like him, daughter?" persisted her mother.

"I think that he's a presentable man, mother, if that's what you mean," responded the girl tartly and with tightening lips. "You can hardly expect me to say, as you just said, that I am 'almost in love with him' myself, can you?"

The words were sharp and the tone harsh. The speaker suddenly appreciated that this was the second time within a few days that she had been impatient with her mother. As before, she regretted her show of temper when she saw the wounded expression in her mother's eyes. She noted also that her father was looking at her in amazement.

"I did not mean to speak like that, mother," she said quickly and penitently. She pushed her chair back from the table and, going around to the elderly woman, laid her own flushed cheek against the wrinkled one. "I had no business to be so cross, and I am very sorry. I am as nervous as a cat this morning. Please forgive me."

Mrs. Danforth patted her daughter's hand, her face all smiles in an instant.

"That's all right, my darling," she soothed. "We all have our cranky spells. Now eat your breakfast, for it is getting late. I shall be glad when this dreadful grind is over and you have graduated," she added, with a sigh. "You are not like your dear self these days, and it is because you are overwrought and overtired."

Mary made no protest. She wondered secretly if the strain of work was entirely responsible for her vague sense of discontent and uncertainty. Breakfast over, she hurried to her room to collect her books, and, as she returned to the hall, ready to leave the house, she came upon her father. He was leaning against the wall, his hand to his head. His face was pale and his brow contracted as if he were suffering.

"Father!" exclaimed the girl in alarm, "what is the matter?"

"Nothing to worry about, pet," he insisted. "I was just a little dizzy and headachy for a minute. I'm better now. Don't look so frightened!"

"Dad," said Mary, anxiously, "you are not well. You've been overworking."

"Oh, I guess not," he replied with an attempt at raillery. "An old codger like me must expect such feelings this warm weather, that's all—but I find it hard to remember that I'm getting old."

"Won't you see a doctor?" urged Mary.

Mary Gets a Shock.

"Pshaw!" he laughed. "I'm all right, I tell you! Don't mention this little turn to your mother, for she makes a mountain of a molehill when I don't feel up to the scratch."

On the way to school Mary thought of her father with some perturbation, but the hurry and bustle of the day's work drove all other worries from her brain and she had forgotten the little episode by the time she boarded the subway train in the evening. She watched the express on which she rode draw away from a local train. As the lighted windows slid slowly backward she thought of how she had first seen Gordon Craig under circumstances like these. It was like a story book romance, and he looked not unlike a book hero, she said to herself with a contemptuous smile at her own silliness.

Her thoughts were still busy with him as she walked along toward her home. When she turned into her own street, several leather-lunged men, carrying bundles of papers, were shouting "Extra" at the other end of the block in the hollow, reverberating tones of the New York disaster harbinger. Still dreaming, she paid little heed to them, but went up to her apartment, her mind on the man she had known for such a little while. Strange, she mused, that he should have impressed her so strongly. Her father was standing in the drawing room as she entered her home. A glance at his face brought her to a comprehension of the news venders' cries as they were borne now to her ears through the open windows.

"Terrible accident on the Boston Express!" they were shouting.

Blindly the girl stretched her hands to her father as he came toward her.

"Dad," she asked hoarsely, "was that——"

She got no further, for her father put his arm quickly about her and drew her to him.

"Yes, little girl," he said, tremulously, "the Boston Express—Craig's train—has been wrecked, and, God help us! most of the Pullman passengers are dead!"

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Rusty raised his head and timidly put it out around the angle of the fireplace, where he had taken refuge.

"Wha is he?" he asked huskily.

His master straightened up, put the revolver back in its holster and pointed grimly to the trap.

"Water and a long drop," he said quietly. "There's another of the Duke's men gone."

Rusty got shakily to his feet. "I knowed them battleship boogies was spooks," he observed dolefully. The plural suggested something to Jarvis. He motioned Rusty to stay back, and, picking up the sword, advanced on the second figure. He made two or three feints to strike and got no response. Then he gave it a powerful push with the point. The armor toppled over and fell down the stairs with a hollow clash. It was empty.

"I guess he's harmless."

Rusty immediately began gathering up the pieces.

"I'll fix dis one so he won't jump no mo'!" he declared, savagely.

"What are you going to do?"

"I'm gonna sink this other battleship!"

"Hold on—wait a minute. I reckon we can use that," said Jarvis, smiling a little. "It takes a thief to catch a thief, they say. We'll just out-spook Mr. Ghost. Come on, Rusty," he went on impatiently, holding up the breastplate and back-piece like an undershirt, "get into this hardware as fast as you can."

Rusty drew back with violent headshakings.

"Marse Warren, I don' wanna be no spook."

"Listen!" commanded his master, sharply. "Somebody was working in this room. It's a cinch that the treasure is here and it's a bigger cinch he'll come back to get it when we are gone."

"You ain't gonna leave me heah alone!" protested the old darkey.

The Plan.

"Sure! I'm going to put you in this so you can watch. I'm going t make a bluff that we're both gone. You'll be as safe as a church in this. No one would ever think of looking for one of us in this armor. You watch, and when he starts to work—then yell your head off."

"I'll yell so loud they'll hear me in Kentucky," Rusty assured him, reluctantly permitting himself to be armored.

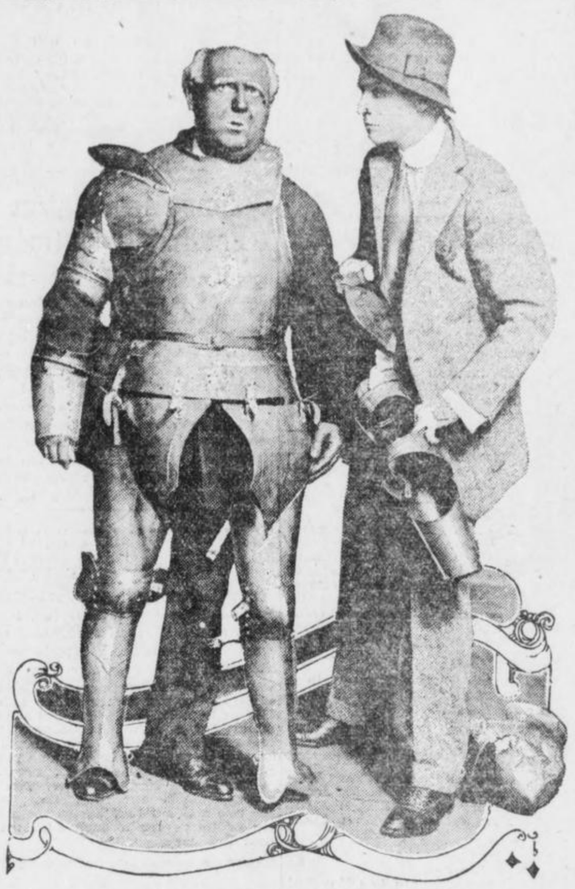
"You give your best yell and then I'll nail him."

Rusty sniffed doubtfully. "If you don't nail him he'll nail me!"

Jarvis grunted and fussed over the armor as the right valiant swashbuckler for whom it was constructed was less generously designed amidships than the rotund darky.

"Marse Warren," remarked Rusty, presently, "you mus' think a heap o' Miss Princess to go prowlin' and projec'ing 'roun' in dis boogy house in de dark."

"What makes you think that?" mumbled Jarvis, toiling with a rusty clasp.



"Get into this hardware as fast as you can."

"Marse Warren," said Rusty, solemnly, "I knowed you since you was a baby."

"What's that got to do with it? Pull in your breath a little bit."

"She gin you dat jew'lry you got 'roun' your neck, didn' she? She kind o' crazy 'bout you, too, ain't she?"

"How do you know?" inquired Jarvis, his eagerness concealed by the fact that he was bending over in the rear trying to joint the greaves to Rusty's ponderous calves.

"I knows, all right!" declared Rusty.

"But how do you know? Quit shifting around!"

"We-ell, I'm goin' to tell you, an' then you'll know how I knows. Jus' 'fore them horses jumped on me—when I was waitin' in de road—I heard a winder go up slap! An' dare was de Princess a-lookin' up at de moon, jes' like a picter. Jes' a-lookin' at de moon, an' she says—an' she says—"

"What did she say?" snapped Jarvis.

"'Ah,' she says, a-lookin' at de moon, she says, 'de world am begun all over ag'in fo' me.'"

Good News.

Warren started and was conscious of a singing in his ears that was not all due to the constant bending over required of a squire-at-arms. He held his tongue, knowing a darky's fondness for sentimental gossip, and Rusty went on:

"And den—and den—she go right on an' she says—she says, 'Gawd be with you, my American!'"

A steel thigh-piece slipped through Jarvis' fingers and clattered to the floor.

"An'," concluded Rusty, with invincible logic, "I'se de only American 'roun' heah 'cep' you, Marse Warren."

"God bless you, Rusty!" said his master, fervently, to himself. But aloud he said, holding up the heavy casque:

"Here—put your head in this Stetson. Gloves—here now! How do you feel?"

Jarvis surveyed him with a grin. Sancho Panza would have looked a courtly and sprightly cavalier by comparison.

"All in," was the glum response from the hollow depths of the helmet. "Do I look like a spook?"

"You're a wonderful sight!" declared his master, heartily. "Now, Rusty, get over here. Where's your sword?"

A cataclysmic sneeze caused the armor to rattle like a junk wagon.

"I never heard a ghost sneeze before," chided his master, reprovingly.

"Marse Warren, I'se catchin' cold," pleaded the knight, in the hope of pardon.

"Nonsense! Now, Rusty, keep your ears and eyes open—don't move a muscle. If anyone comes, yell your head off—but don't sneeze!"

"Marse Warren, I wanna go home!"

"We haven't any home, Rusty," was the sober response, as his master adjusted him on the pedestal. Rusty sighed till the clasps of the armor creaked complaint.

"Marse Warren, I don't evah 'spect to get out o' dis boogy house nohow."

"Well, Rusty, there are some things ——"

Jarvis broke off abruptly and threw back his head, motioning Rusty to be quiet. To his ears came a sound so faint and far-off that it was impossible to decide whether it was a stifled groan near at hand or a call from some distant part of the castle.

THE GEORGIAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"I AM 20," writes a young man, "have no bad habits, and for eight months have been in love with a girl of my own age. I have always given her as good a time as my salary would permit. One day I went to her place of employment, opened the door quietly to surprise her, and found her in the arms of a man who is known to have brought dishonor to at least two young girls.

"I have learned since that she has frequently gone to places of amusement with him. When I told her of his true character she admitted it, but said he was a good spender, and, as she was not engaged to me, I had no right to object. I love her with all my heart and would not see any trouble befall her. Should I stand aside and let her pay the price?"

No! That would be wrong were you only friends, and an unpardonable crime since you love her.

She pleads that she is not engaged to you, and you have no right to object. Seek an engagement, and give yourself the right!

The girl is going headlong to ruin, and a diverted interest may save her. She is not wicked; she is foolish. She is concerned only for the good times the present may bring. Make her, by the power of your love, see that there are better times in the future. Give her the interest that every girl longs for—the hopes, the dreams, the all-enveloping satisfaction with one's self and life that center around an engagement ring.

A Suggestion.

Induce her to change her place of employment; you surely have women friends whose amusements are unquestionable and whose influence is for good. See that they make her acquaintance, and that she is thrown in with them. Teach her the difference between the real and the shadowy. Never find fault with what she has done, or moralize on the degradation from which you hope to save her.

Treat her as if you trusted her. Appeal to her higher nature always, letting her see that you know she is too good to do the things other foolish girls do, and for whom life is never so long that they get through the paying.

Always keep in her mind the little home you are building for her, and when you take her through the air-castle of your dreams explain its needs and your means as if you were talking to an intelligent being. This will give her a sympathetic understanding of the limitations of your income, and the knowledge that you are saving for her will check any envious sighs for other men who are greater spenders, and cause her to insist on a greater economy than even you had advocated.

Try it! Every good woman is using her influence to redeem some man. If this were not so, humanity would retrograde instead of progress. With all these centuries of obligation heaped upon him, every man personally owes to every weak and willful woman all the influence and strength he can muster to save her.

The Best Way. 4

The strongest influence for a woman's good is that which appeals through the heart. All sighing for vanities of dress, position and person is stifled when she loves. Vanity is a stage of silliness that her heart sooner than her head helps her to outgrow.

If this girl loves you, it will not be impossible to rescue her. But, if she loves you or not, if she assents to an engagement or not, does not lessen your responsibility concerning her. If she will not heed you, and you know you are right concerning this man's dishonorable intentions, you owe it to all womankind to inform the girl's parents of what she is doing.

Help them build the protecting rail at the top of the cliff. That will show a greater Christianity than being content with contributing money or means to an ambulance to be stationed at its base.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Read about Mrs. Bender's experience:

I shall recommend your medicine to all my friends and you may publish this testimonial for the benefit of other suffering women."—Mrs. Anna Bender, St. James, Missouri.

Another Case.

Dixon, Iowa.—"I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for some time and it has done me much good. My back troubled me very much. It seemed weak. I had much pain and I was not as regular as I should have been. The Compound has cured these troubles and I recommend it to all my friends."—Mrs. Bertha Dierksen, Box 102, Dixon, Iowa.

How to Dance the "Tango-Classique"

Some Rules and Suggestions for the Up-to-Date Whirlers

By LILLIAN LAUFERTY.

THERE are as many rules for dancing as there are successful dancers now before our public—and that number is legion. But the one rule from which we can never get away if we want to really dance is: "Know your subject."

You can no more dance in a finished and attractive manner without all the ingredients that go to make a dance than you can bake a cherry pie without flour and butter and sugar and water and cherries. Learn this rule by heart before you get up at some giddy "The Dansant," and with one eye on a supposedly admiring gallery, whirl in the mazes of a breakneck awkwardness.

Up at the Ziegfeld "Follies of 1913," at the New Amsterdam Theater, in New York, Rose Dolly and Martin Brown are doing a fascinating combination of true "Tango" and modified Turkey Trot, that they

"You must keep exactly with the rythm of the music."

"Practice relaxing shoulders, knees and ankles."

call "classique excentrique," and for the benefit of all who have seen them and the other lovers of Terpsichore who have not, they formulated for me a few simple rules for dancing.

Little Rose Dolly is like a scarlet tangoer streaking across a Southern sky—or a dash of her own Hungarian Paprika in a prosaic salad; and Martin Brown is a typical, up-to-date American youth—with the tall, slender, thoroughbred look we are all beginning to strive for. And here is "How they do it."

How to Do It.

"If you are a beginner," said Miss Dolly, "take a clever dancer—or a clever national dance—as your pattern. Study the steps, make up your mind which ones you can imitate, and then practice them one at a time with music to help you and spur you on. Work and work till you can get up and do a step and have it look just like play."

"That is quite right," said Mr. Brown. "Expression when you are doing it. Don't look strained or anxious. Practice a step in private, and work at it so hard that when you do it publicly it will look like play.

"You must keep exactly with the rhythm of the music—keep time, in other words. Follow the music, do steps that you have mastered, and do not do freak steps that don't fit in with your own personality at all. And above all, keep your toes pointed out all the time. No matter how pretty a step is, it does not look attractive if you do it in pigeon-toed fashion." He illustrated—and the same step done with pointing toe and with turned ankle and inpointed toe became a very different movement.

"Toes are very important in dancing," cried Miss Dolly, "although the modern dancer does not have to stand on them like a ballet dancer, she must keep them out and down, and sway gracefully on the ball of the foot and get the habit of keeping the instep and heel raised.

A Good Way to Learn.

"A good way to learn the modern dances is to stand up and just practice relaxing shoulders, elbows, knees and ankles in a sort of gradual shuffle. Do this first standing firmly on your feet, then rise to the balls of the feet and try it again, then take a step or two with the body relaxed and swaying. Do this first without music and in front of a mirror, then add music, and do it again in front of the mirror. And finally do away with the mirror, and just yield as unconsciously as possible to the rythm of the dance. You will be surprised how easily it will come after you have learned to relax.

"Then you must add steps to your ingredients of knowing how to keep time, how to relax and how to express the feeling that music gives you," added Mr. Brown. "Master a quick, little, short step and a long glide, combine them in various ways, add a little ability to kick gracefully—not high necessarily—but with gracefully pointed toe and an appearance of ease—and watch clever dancers for suggestions as to steps. In this way, even without the aid of a teacher, you can learn to be a home-made turkey trotter."

:-: Helping Jimmy :-:

Today's Short Story---Complete

"I SAW Jimmy this morning," I mentionel casually.

"Yes?" answered Mrs. Veralour.

"Yes. I think we shall have to take to calling him James. The hand of time seems to have given him a sudden, fearful blow. He looked as if he had seen trouble through a microscope. Has anybody left him money, do you know?"

"Money? Good gracious, no!"

"Poor old chap. Then he must have lost his little all."

"What do you mean?" demanded Mrs. Veralour, tapping her foot impatiently. "Why must it be one or the other?"

"Well," I said, "anybody could see it was money trouble of some sort. He had the appearance of being a pauper trying to look like a millionaire, or else a millionaire disguised as a pauper. His clothes have aged frightfully during the last few days. In fact, you could hardly call them clothes; they were merely emblems of civilization."

Mrs. Veralour seemed about to speak, and then, changing her mind, put her hand in front of her mouth and converted her remark into a yawn.

"Or else it is love," I murmured, gazing dreamily into the fire.

Mrs. Veralour said nothing. Taking a cigarette from the box, she tapped it uncertainly on the back of her hand.

"Of course," she said at last, with somewhat superfluous frankness, "I—I make mistakes sometimes. You know Florence Appleton, don't you? Jimmy was frightfully gone on her. He used to come round here every afternoon and tell me how much he loved her."

"What a ridiculous thing to do. It would have been considerably more sensible for him to have gone round and told the girl how much he loved you."

Very Extraordinary.

"What?" ejaculated Mrs. Veralour, with a laugh that was nearly a shriek. "Mr. Blake, what an extraordinary thing to say."

"Well," I said, "isn't the next best thing to telling a girl you love her to tell her you don't? Especially a girl so sought after as Florence Appleton. She'd immediately begin to wonder what was the matter with him."

"M'yes," said Mrs. Veralour, "I suppose she is inclined to think that every man is in love with her; but then she's got such hordes of admirers it's really not the girl's fault."

"No," I agreed, "it's not her fault, it's her forune."

"Misfortune?" murmured Mrs. Veralour, who never by any chance listens to what I say, "well, I don't know about that. Still, as I was saying, Jimmy used to come round and tell me all about it, and I promised to help him."

"Mrs. Veralour," I said, indignantly, "you're always match-making. It's abominable. You don't deserve to be a widow."

"I promised to help him," repeated Mrs. Veralour, firmly, deaf to my remark. "He wanted rather a lot of helping," she added, reflectively; "he was so awfully shy. Fancy a man being shy."

"Why not? Somebody's got to be. What did you do? I suppose you praised him up to the skies to her."

Mrs. Veralour looked at me with an air of mild amusement.

"My dear Mr. Blake. Is your grandmother still alive?"

"Eh? Yes. Why?"

"Oh, I was only wondering where you got all your old-fashioned ideas from. Of course, I didn't praise him I ran him down. I used to go round and tell her most frightful stories of him. I warned her against him. Once you warn a girl against a man, you've wasted your time. It's like putting a 'dangerous' notice up on a sheet of ice; everybody goes to see why it was put there."

The Only Way.

"Oh," I said, weakly, "I have had many a ducking myself."

"The best reputation a man can have," she pursued, "is not to have one. The worst of it is Jimmy wouldn't live down to his reputation."

"That must be very disheartening," I said, sympathetically, "when you're doing your worst for a man."

"Yes, it was. Really, I think it was her money he was afraid of."

"Coward."

"M'yes. Still, I suppose it is humiliating for a rich girl to tell you she can never be a poor man's wife. However, I got him at last to promise that he would propose if I contrived a good opportunity for him."

She paused for a reflective moment.

"You know the summer house in the garden, don't you?"

"I do," I said, "and you know I do."

"Yes, you do, don't you," she smiled, I had a spring lock fixed on that door. You know, one of those that you can only open from the outside."

"I know. I begin to see the end of this story."

"M'm," she said. "That's the worst of being so bright—nothing comes as a surprise. Well, after I'd had the lock put on I invited them both round to lunch. Of course, I asked a lot of other people, so as not to arouse her suspicions. They all came; one or two girls and a lot of men—most of her horde, in fact. After lunch we all went out on the lawn."

"Do get on, Mrs. Veralour; you're like a writer on space rates. There are some things one takes for granted."

"I'd told Jimmy what he'd got to do."

"Get the girl in the summer house, and then you'd come along and snap the door on them?"

"Yes. Don't you think being locked in a summer house together was a good opportunity?"

"I think so. He could lead up to a proposal by saying how he wished they could never get out again. That's what you meant, isn't it?"

"Yes; only nothing quite so silly as that. I was going to give them half an hour to themselves, but after about ten minutes all the men commenced to drift away in search of her, and I was afraid they'd take her away from poor Jimmy. So I hurried along to the summer house at once."

"Go on," I urged. "Quicken the action."

"I listened for a minute to make sure they were really in there; as soon as I heard her voice I gave the door a push."

"Congratulations. A tip-top scheme, jolly well carried out."

"Well, I do think so," asserted Mrs. Veralour, in a tone curiously defensive. I—I still think so."

"Why, of course. You don't mean to say, when you opened the door later on, they weren't engaged?"

"Oh, no; they were engaged all right."

"Good," I paused for a moment, struck by a sudden thought. "But look here, what was old Jimmy looking so absolutely wretched about when I saw him this morning?"

Mrs. Veralour hesitated, and then pulled herself together.

"It wasn't he in the summer house with her, after all," she said.

Up-to-Date Jokes

The chief constable of a small town received by post six "Rogues' Gallery" photographs, taken in different positions, of an old offender wanted for burglary in a neighboring city. A fortnight later the city chief of police received this letter from the constable:

"Darling," she murmured, as she nestled against his shoulder, "do you know that horried people are saying that you are marrying me for my money?"

He leaped to his feet. "The miserable creatures!" he roared. "I won't stand it! Tell me who they are, and I'll horewhip them! I'll——"

"But, my dear," she objected, "you would create scandal, and the case would be made horribly public in the papers, and then I really could not marry you."

"What, then," he muttered, hopelessly, "can be done?"

"Darling, it is easy,' she replied. "I will make over my fortune to my brothers and sisters, and everybody shall know of it. Then no one shall be able to make horrible accusations against you."

But then he drew himself up proudly. His manliness had won a moral victory.

"Nay, Araminta!" he exclaimed. "Do not put thy sweet self to any trouble. Anthrobald Binks is proof against every slanderer!"

Ten Commandments of the Summer Visitor

By DOROTHY DIX.

Don't Stay Too Long.

INVITE not thyself to the house of another, oh, my daughter, for if so be thy friend hungereth and thirsteth for thy society she will arise and send to thee a writing bidding thee to come straightway to her abode. Yea, she will send for thee swiftly by means of the telegraph and the night letter, and if so be she holdeth her hand, take that for a sign which never falleth that she wanteth thee not.

2—Accept not an invitation from a man to tarry and stay at his house until it hath been O. K.'d by his wife, for verily I say unto thee that no man hath authority within his own home, no, not so much as to give a bone to a stray dog. It is the wife and the wife's people, and the wife's friends who have dominion over the spare bedroom.

3—When thou visiteth cast not the goo-goo eyes at thy hostess's son, nor upon her male relatives, nor upon her husband, for it is written that she that snareth the fancy of the men of the household shalt be invited there no more.

Praise Their Offspring.

4—Forget not to take in thy trunk thy curling iron, and thy sewing tools, and thy postage stamps, and thy script for letters, and all the things of which thou hast daily need, for a borrower is an abomination and worse than the pestilence that destroyeth by night.

5—Incline thy heart unto the amusements that hath been prepared for thee, and make thy countenance mirthful, though thy soul fainteth within thee when thy hostess sayeth, "Rejoice and be glad, for to-day we go forth to picnic in the woods, and to partake of squashed lemon pie flavored with ants." Likewise dissemble thy sorrow when she trotteth thee to the church sociable, or naileth thee to the card table until thy stomach turneth in despair and thy gorge riseth in rebellion.

Invite Not Thyself.

6—When thou visiteth cast veracity to the winds, for verily truth hath no place in a popular house guest. Say of thy hostess's house, "Truly, this is a palace, fit for a king. Tell me, I pray thee, what marvellous architect planned it?" Beat upon thy breast and call Heaven to witness that there was never such a view, though it be but as the view of a fly that is caught under a teacup. Praise the beauty and the wit and the way the offspring of thy hostess reciteth, and when thou departeth thy hostess shall say of thee, "Surely, here is a woman of discernment, and I will bid her return again."

7—Conform thy ways to the ways of the house that thou visiteth. Arise while it is yet night, if it be the custom of thy hosts, so that thou shalt breakfast with them, and give no trouble to the servants, for, behold, a hand-maiden in the suburbs is as precious as gold, yea, as fine gold, and as difficult to keep.

8—If thou followeth a diet and eateth of strange food prepared after an ungodly manner, visit not at all, but hie thee to an inn where thou canst pay for the trouble thou givest. Thus shalt thou save thyself from being hated by thy friends.

9—Forget not to tip the handmaiden who waiteth upon thee, for the button-her-up-in-the-back is worthy of her hire.

10—And if thou forgettest all of the other commandments of the Summer visitor, remember this, oh, my daughter: Make thy visit short. Tarry not long in thy friend's house lest she be weary of thee. Go while yet she entreateth thee to stay with her, for it is better that thy hostess should weep because thou goest than to shed tears because thou stayest.

Saving His Face

At a very convivial dinner a man with a preternaturally solemn face arose, wine glass in hand, to propose a toast.

"May we never," he said, in deep, measured tones, "drink any more of this stuff——"

He paused, and there was a horrified silence for several seconds—"than is good for us!"

:-: The Practice of Self-Control :-:

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED.
Author of "The Etiquette of New York To-day."

IN any sphere of life self-control is an important element toward success and happiness. Control of mind is a factor toward overcoming the tendency to be oversensitive, suspicious, or tormented by imaginary slights. Moping and brooding over fancied grievances will never achieve peace. Sensitive people, who take offense easily, are very difficult to get on with. We are never sure "where to find them," as the saying is. They are constantly making exactions of their friends, calling them to account for certain delinquencies.

Social life often requires the making of concessions, the common sense not to construe the thoughtlessness of a friend into an intentional slight, or absentmindedness into indifference. Naturally, we feel that something is due between intimate friends, but even in the case of intimates a margin of kindly concession must be made. The fear that one is not receiving sufficient attention from others is an unpleasant form of egotism.

Delay in Calling.

The many demands of social life oblige people not to hold one another too seriously to account for delay in calling, for instance. Among acquaintances delay in calling, or returning calls, need not be taken as an indication of a wish to be exclusive or an intention to be neglectful. Allowances have to be made for the failings of others on this score. When an acquaintance calls after a lengthy delay it is an important courtesy to welcome her cordially, not to allude to any misunderstanding, to hasten to accept, in the kindest spirit, any explanation which may be offered, not to dwell on the subject but pass on to other matters and to do this without permittin the shadow of a suggestion that she has been dilatory. It is wise for the person making a delayed call not to be too profuse in excuses.

Many reasons for delayed calls may be considered by the sensible person who is willing to make concessions toward friends. Absence from home, illness, engagements, various home duties, interests in charitable or other work very absorbing to one's time may be among the causes for delay. The wish to have some leisure to pursue personal tastes may be another reason.

Control of Temper.

While the casting out of fretful grievances is of importance in daily life, control of temper is a rule of life to be practiced by every well-bred person. It is well not to get too excited and to remember to close a door gently. "I never knew anyone who went about banging doors and playing whirlwind to possess any influence whatever," said a wise woman.

The practice of self-control and composure will have an immense effect on one's own manners and will be sure to make a pleasing impression everywhere. To sit quietly, to keep the hands still, to walk calmly, these little things lend a charm to the person who has acquired them.

It is salutary to take stock of ourselves and recognize our own shortcomings and try to remedy them. It is good to get out of ourselves, to stop being self-centered, to give up talking of ourselves and our grievances and to live in the sunshine of cheerfulness and the breeze of larger interests.

MIKE FINN WILL REMAIN AT HELM OF MOBILE CREW

MOBILE, July 23.—Mike Finn will remain as manager of the Mobile Baseball Club.

Such was the announcement of President Alfred Staples following a meeting of the directors of the Mobile club. "The trouble has been adjusted satisfactorily to everybody concerned," he said, "and Mr. Finn remains as manager of the club."

Further than the announcement that "matters has been settled satisfactorily to all concerned," President Staples would not go into the case, but from a reliable source, it is understood that Mike Desmond, employed at the ball park in the capacity of special officer, had tendered his resignation. It is understood that he took his action, following Manager Finn's statement that he would resign, rather than cause the club officials any embarrassment.

Manager Finn would not discuss the outcome of the case when seen, but stated that only one thing in connection with the entire affair had caused him any regret, and that was the statement that he had "insulted the Hibernians." The Gull leader denied that he ever offered offense to the Hibernians of any other organization of any kind in Mobile, and states that he has never made any remark that could be construed as an insult to any organization.

"Mike, you're too good an Irishman, yourself, to talk about the Hibernians; are you not?" he was asked.

"Sure," he responded, "and to tell the truth, I've made up my mind to join the Hibernians."

The announcement that Mike Finn will remain at the head of the club means that the players will hustle as they have in the past to keep the club in the running, and no one was more pleased when definite announcement was made that he would stay than the players now working for the Mobile club under him.

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

Leach Cross has the California "bug." He says that if he succeeds in defeating Matty Baldwin next week and it matched with either Willie Ritchie or Joe Rivers, he will try to arrange to practice his profession of dentistry in Los Angeles. He will have considerable idle time on his hands between bouts, and thinks he can do well.

Reports from the coast state that Tom McCarey is still awaiting word from Abe Attell in regard to a match with Jack White. There is some question in regard to the weight at which the two will box, and a wire from Abe will settle that question definitely.

* * *

Jack Payne is the latest to hurl a challenge at Eddie Hanlon. Payne says he will agree to box Eddie at catch-weights.

George Mason, Baltimore lightweight, who fought here about two months ago, is making a big hit in Memphis. Promoters there are trying to secure Johnny Lore to meet him some time in August.

* * *

Terry Nelson is far from discouraged over his defeat at the hands of Eddie Hanlon. Terry says that the latter outweighed him by nearly ten pounds, and will gladly meet Hanlon in another match, providing the latter will make 135 pounds.

Tom O'Rourke is now managing Carl Morris. O'Rourke hopes to send the Sapulpa heavyweight against the winner of the Flynn-Smith match scheduled to take place at New York on August 8.

* * *

Al Palzer is another heavyweight who is seeking a ring encounter. Palzer is at present in New York doing light work in an effort to get into fighting shape.

Jimmy Murphy, the Chicago lightweight, who recently stopped Danny Goodman, is anxious to come to Atlanta. Murphy would like to get on with either Eddie Hanlon, Mike Saul or Terry Nelson. Murphy also met Joe Thomas in an eight-round battle.

There are four brothers in the White family—Charlie and Jack fight best when weighing around the 126 mark; Billy Wagner, the youngest of the bunch, is best at 133, while Battling White can easily make 116 pounds ringside.

* * *

Mike Schreck signed articles yesterday to meet Dick Gilbert at the Valley Athletic Club in Elmwood on August 18. Schreck will go to West Baden, Ind., for a stay of two weeks before the scrap.

* * *

Johnny Creeley and "Knockout" Mars will don the gloves for a scheduled ten-round contest at New York on Thursday night. They have agreed to weigh 133 pounds at 3 o'clock.

BOXERS CLAMOR FOR CHANCE AT RITCHIE'S TITLE

LOS ANGELES, July 24.—And still they come! With enough boxers here to stage a carnival of fistic revels lasting until Christmas and managers and promoters clamoring over each others shoulders for a chance at a date and a trunk full of coin it appears that the end is not yet.

Joe Woodman is clamoring for dates for his two proteges, Sam Langford and Jack Read, the Australian lightweight champion, and bids fair to make a landing.

Ad Wolgast also wants to be remembered. He is right on the ground to press his claim with Champion Willie Ritchie for an early match. He figures that since Rivers lost out in his match on July 4 he is in direct line for another match in preference to the Mexican and probably his bout at the Vernon arena would be a good card.

ANOTHER challenger of Ritchie is Jimmy Duffy, whose record during the past year certainly gives him some right to consideration. His manager, Bert Finch, writes that Duffy is willing to meet any lightweight in the country with an expressed preference for Ritchie, Freddie Welch, Leach Cross or Joe Rivers.

Finch says that if Ritchie will concede Duffy a match for the championship he will post $5,000 as a side bet that Duffy will defeat him in twenty rounds and that he can fix the terms for the division of the purpose to suit himself.

In May of last year Duffy fought a ten-round bout to a draw with Freddie Welch and has defeated Leach Cross twice, once in New York and once in Buffalo.

"DUMB DAN" MORGAN, the "speechless" wonder from New York, has issued a statement offering to match Jack Britton with Champion Ritchie for a side bet of $10,000. There is no mention made in the letter of whether it is ten thousand cigars or toothpicks. He says this would be a real test for the champion and that Britton will box at any weight that suits the "champion."

Crackers in Real Test To-day

Pennant May Hang on Series

By O. B. Keeler.

NOW is the time to get out old friend Crucial Series and furbish him up for active duty the next three days—beginning today. Also, it is up to the Crackers, like the noble Romans getting an earful of M. Antony's oratory, that those who have base hits prepare to shed them now.

In other words, this is the well-known Critical Juncture, the Tide in the Affairs of Men, and (as set forth in the preamble) the Crucial Series.

There is no particular advantage to be gained by holding a post mortem in advance. It may be stated briefly that if the Crackers lose three straight games to the Billikens, the 1913 bunting will be in grave danger of wasting its fragrance on the desert air surrounding Montgomery, Ala.

If the Smithies win three, with the long home series in prospect, chances will be bright for fireworks at Ponce DeLeon.

A split series, with the Town Boys on the heavy end, will make things look the same way, only not so much so. And if the Billies get the odd game, our noble lads will have some Horatious-at-the-Viaduct work cut out for them the rest of the way.

Here's hoping!

We garner a tip
With a soul-stirring sentiment to it:
It's easy to crack

GILBERT PRICE'S little vacation didn't last long. He was ordered by Manager Billy Smith to start from Atlanta this morning to join the club at Montgomery, where he probably will work in the Saturday game.

Price said yesterday he couldn't figure out why he drew the suspension that became effective after his poor start against the Turtles in the opening contest of the recent series. "I just got bumped—that's all," said Gilbert. "That will happen to anybody once in a while; sometimes oftener."

Hang on Series

WITH a dozen games, more or less, dividing the Senators from the Athletics in the American League handicap, Walter Johnson, some Big Smoke, comes to bat with the offer to pitch half the remaining games for the Griffmen, beginning September 1, with this little stipulation:

"If Griffith thinks at that time we are close enough to the Athletics to make a fight for the pennant."

That's the point, by the way.

Walter goes on to remark that if Radbourne could do things like pitching every other day, so can he. And he adds that the slabmen who work in the meantime should be instructed to pitch their arms off every time they start.

It would be interesting to see Walter and the large and scintillant Mr. Boehling taking it turn about on the slab—and if the Athletics slump far from their dozen-game lead, we may have a chance to see that very thing.

AND Mordecai Brown just went in for the lowly Reds and saved both ends of a double bill with the Braves, shutting off a savage rally in the last inning of each game. Calls up memories of other days—what? You know.

LINES TO AN EX-CUB.

It may not be the same old Brown
That used to wallop Matty so;
The passing years have dimmed renown
That sparkled in the Long Ago.
But when the Final Pinch is there,
That three-clawed Cub's the same old Bear!

It's not the Cubs he's fighting for—
The Reds could never look the same;
He lacks the grim and bracing roar
That tuned his whip in every game.
But in the pinches—have a care—
That three-clawed Cub's the same old Bear!

J. PLUV WALKS ARM-IN-ARM WITH J. PRINCE

JACK PRINCE really gets sore when he is called "the Rainmaker."

But being well armed with a pair of perfectly good legs, we dare him to come forth for battle, and so here goes:

Jack Prince, you are a regular rainmaker!

For the second time in as many days the races carded for the Motordrome have been called off on account of rain. And to make sure that they will have plenty of time to get Jack out of town, the other backers in the saucer have decided that the next set of races will not be held until Friday night.

They want all of to-day to get Jack out of the city. And they guarantee that Prince will not be within fifty miles of here by sunrise to-morrow.

And with that promise, the local bugs may be assured that the big Marathon grind will come off to-morrow night. Also a number of other events that should prove corkers.

To-day all of the riders intend tuning up their machines a bit more. To-morrow night the record for the 26 miles, 385 yards is very likely to get an awful kick in the slats.

ATTELL COMES TO LIFE.

NEW YORK, July 24.—Abe Attell will be seen in action again to-night at Rockaway, where he will clash with Willie Beecher, the New York lightweight, for a ten-round bout.

Report That Cobb Is Slated for Chicago

CHICAGO, July 24.—Just before the White Sox pulled out for their Eastern invasion a report gained circulation to the effect that Ty Cobb, Tiger star, is to become a member of the South Side crew.

To get him, all this according to the report, Owner Comiskey must give up Pitcher "Red" Russell. Outfielder Chapuelle, for whom Comiskey recently paid $18,000, and a catcher.

It has been known for several months that Cobb has been anxious to break away from the Tiger band, but this is the first time that an offer was made for him.

LARNED-WRIGHT WIN FROM JOHNSON-WHITNEY

BOSTON, July 24.—W. A. Larned and B. C. Other matches in the doubles and singles were without striking features. The all-comers' tournament for the Longwood singles was advanced to the fourth round.

MARIST GIVES UP ATHLETICS; JOE BEAN OUT

MARIST College, known as the greatest athletic prep school south of the Mason and Dixon line, has decided to give up sports.

No, don't pinch yourself. You're not asleep. It is the real cold truth.

The school has decided that it can not afford athletics, yet the very one thing that has "made" it has been athletics.

Every schoolboy in Georgia knows Marist because of its ability to win in athletics. It has been the ambition of every youngster in the State to attend the foundry of learning on Ivy street.

Joe Bean made the announcement this morning that he had been discharged. Said Joseph:

"Father Rapier called me in and told me that my services were no longer needed. I nearly strangled to death from the shock. But Father Rapier says that the school can not afford to dally in athletics any more."

Marist is no longer on the athletic map.

But one J. Bean IS. He is going to make a corking instructor for one of these other prep schools. Already he has received two offers, and will probably close for one of them within the next week or ten days.

PROMOTER LOST MONEY STAGING RITCHIE FIGHT

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 24.—Lightweight Champion Willie Ritchie is quite willing to risk his laurels again. He says he is not particular against whom he is sent, so long as the price is right.

Ritchie is not naming the sum he thinks should be paid. He wants each of the promoters to make a bid, and he will accept the highest offer made.

It is no use mentioning "percentage" to the champion. He has thrashed it all out, and has discovered that flat offers are the best.

One of the charges Billy Nolan made against the champion was that Ritchie was "money mad." Nolan meant, of course, that money occupied Ritchie's thoughts to the exclusion of other things. There is nothing about Ritchie's actions when money is in question to suggest that his mind is unbalanced.

Having received something like $18,000 from Promoter Graney for the fight on July 4, Ritchie will probably expect as much or more when he boxes again. And the chances are very much against his getting it.

The fight between Ritchie and Rivers drew something more than $29,000. As "houses" go nowadays, it was a mighty good clean-up. But not for Graney, for if he broke even he is lucky.

Ritchie Received $18,000.

It is easily enough reckoned if Ritchie got $18,000, Rivers $7,000 and it cost $1,500 to hire Coffroth's arena, Graney had little more than $2,500 to meet all the expenses of advertising and help, and the chances are he had to dig down into his jeans.

It is an object lesson for fight promoters and for such as think there is money in handling affairs of that kind. Graney worked like a beaver and used every influence he could command to advertise his show.

And when it came off the boxers received nearly 90 per cent of the takings, and the promoter found himself on the wrong side of the ledger.

This is a matter that will have to be regulated, although it is not easy to see how it will be done. As matters stand, all a champion or near champion has to do is set the promoters bidding against one another, as Ritchie is doing right now, and prices will go soaring.

"What was I to do?" said Graney. "If I had not given Ritchie what he asked some one else would have given it to him."

Graney Has Good Lesson.

Probably, now that it's all over, Graney wishes he had not stood in the way of some other promoter. Of course, Graney will be chary of offering big money to Ritchie again, and this means that there will be one fool less among the promoters.

It looks, indeed, as if this theory of paying the fighters more than they are worth—and more than they draw—will only stop when each and every promoter in the country has had his fingers burned.

Jim Flynn Gets Chance at Title
Gunboat Smith Is His Opponent

By Ed W. Smith.

IT takes a good bit of managerial skill to boost Jim Flynn, of Pueblo, up from the depths into which he had been forced through successive defeats into a real match for a real belt which is to be emblematic of the heavyweight championship of the boxing world. That skill has been shown by one J. Curley, Flynn's manager, and the Pueblo man is to get his second chance to win a title—or is it the fourth or fifth?—in a bout in New York early next month when he faces Gunboat Smith, of Philadelphia and San Francisco. And the winner will be given a belt to replace the one that went out of commission when Luther McCarty died in Alberta the latter part of May.

FLYNN'S peculiar position in the boxing world is brought to mind now and then by a dispatch from Missouri telling of the progress the boxer is making in his automobile trip from Pueblo to New York. The other day the wires bore the news that Jim had been pinched in a small town for speeding, after having had his machine repaired. Flynn ever has been a thorn in the side of the aspirants for the white title, but unfortunately for the hardy fellow from the mountains he always has just failed of getting there. Jim is a trifle too small, in the general opinion of the critics, or rather he is too short to cope successfully with the tall men of the heavyweight division.

IF many of the fight fans do not like Jim for his brash ways and the overabundance of ego that he displays constantly, they nevertheless must admire the man for his sterling fighting qualities. Gameness is Jim's middle name, and he has proved in the last four or five years to be the grandest little trial horse the ring ever has known. As a matter of fact, a man never would be thoroughly tried in the ring until he had met Jim in a real encounter. If he could get by the Pueblo ringster, his future would be pretty well assured.

AS a matter of cold fact, it was never demonstrated that the late Luther McCarty was a real fighter until he had sent Jim into a crushing defeat. Then we all knew that Luther was the real thing, a demonstration that the poor fellow strengthened a short time later by whaling the stuffin' out of Al Palzer, one of the behemoths of the ring. Flynn got his chance at McCarty out on the coast after he had demonstrated that he couldn't do much with Jack Johnson, and figured that if he had whipped Luther he would have had little trouble with Palzer, who was sent in against the winner. But McCarty proved far too big and strong and lengthy in the reach for the squatty Flynn.

IN Gunboat Smith, Flynn will meet a man much more to his own measurements, though the Gunboat is a long, rangy chap. But he hasn't the weight that most of Flynn's opponents have possessed, and for that reason Flynn believes he has a royal chance of being returned the winner. The heavyweight class is a mysteriously weak division just now, and almost anybody has a chance of dragging down the honors.

* * *

OUT in Los Angeles, where Flynn has done some of his best fighting, they like him. As a matter of fact, they like the rough, tough fellow pretty much out there without losing sight of and giving free credit for his cleverness and skill. Both Battling Nelson and Ad Wolgast, former lightweight champions, were great favorites there. So were George Memsic, Rudy Unholz, Frankie Conley, Charley Dalton, Bud Anderson and other strong boys of the ring. They like the puncher out in Tom McCarey's town, and haven't a great deal of use for the fancy boxer.

WHY PITCHERS DIE YOUNG.

"That guy is there!" the rooter cried
who lingered at my side,
While Old Gil Price was going well
and many a batsman died.
"That guy is there!" the rooter cried
and rent the summer air,
And as another man went out he
yelled: "That guy is there!"

A youth came up and smote the ball
unto a distant spot.
Another youth came up and made
another swat,
And when another youth came up
and made another clout
The gent who sat beside me rose and
hollered: "Take him out!"

Oh, would I were a hunter on the trail of ivory!
I would not hunt where elephants
are roaming o'er the lea,
But I would buy a grand stand seat
and take my gun in hand,
For there are tons of ivory in every baseball stand.

Ban Johnson refuses to allow Messrs. Altrock and Schaefer to work their funny stuff while games are in progress, possibly on the theory that the players perpetrate enough comic stuff under the guise of baseball.

While Jack Knight has taken a fearful slump, we are forced to admit that he was a Knight for a day. Wretch! Don't you dare to strike muh!

As we diagnose it, Heine Zimmerman has the artistic temperament in his ankle.

Fuzzy Woodruff avers that Carl Morris is underrated, thereby establishing a reputation as the World's Greatest Kidder.

Walter Thornton, who was hit on the head while earning money for a baseball magnate, is now in a padded cell. You have noticed the rush of magnates to his assistance, have you not?

It is reported that Jack Coombs will be ready for work by August. Connie Mack is preparing to sing that popular ballad entitled, "Good-by, Everybody."

J. Evers evidently labors under the impression that it is impossible to manage a ball team with R. Bresnahan trying to run it from one end and C. Murphy trying to run it from the other. The heluvitis, he can't bench C. Murphy.

THE GREATEST PLAY I EVER SAW.

It was in the eighth inning. The Gulls were one run ahead, but Hogg had begun to wabble, and the bases were filled with one out. Tommy Long stepped to the plate, fouled off two and watched three wide ones go by. The next one was low, on the inside, and Long pulled a terrific drive toward right. Robertson started the moment the ball was hit, and a youth with a large basket on his arm stepped in front of me and remarked: "Peanuts! Five a bag!"

M'DONALD DEFEATS TAYLOR FOR CYCLE CHAMPIONSHIP

NEWARK, N. J., July 24.—Donald McDonald, the New York Athletic Club cycle crack, clinched the National Amateur championship when he defeated Aubrey Taylor, amateur champion of Australia, in the one mile race at the Velodrome here last night. Thorwald Ellegaard, the Danish rider and winner of six world's championships, was sent down to defeat by Jackie Clark, the speedy Australian, in two straight heats of a special one mile match race.

DELANEY VS. JULIAN.

NEW YORK, July 24.—Cal Delaney, of Cleveland, sparring partner of Johnny Kilbane, has been matched with Kid Julian, the Syracuse featherweight, to box twelve rounds at Put-in-Bay, Ohio, Saturday night.

Clarke Opens Against Billikens
Smith Orders Price to Join Club

By Joe Agler.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., July 24.—Unless Billy Smith changes his mind at the last moment those cocky Billikens will have Clarke shooting at them from the offside in the opening game of the series this afternoon. Chapman will catch.

The boys hooked the rattler out of Memphis last night, feeling pretty blue at losing the odd game to the Turtles, especially as the Billies were winning at the same time. But they packed their fighting togs and took them along, and they know one thing for certain—the Billies can't win game for game with the Crackers on this series, at least. Somebody is going to lose. And this bunch won't believe it will be the Crackers.

HARRELL was lucky yesterday in the first five innings, or we should have piled up some runs. At that, there is no accounting for the way Thompson exploded in the last two rounds. It was just one of those things that happen to the best pitchers once in awhile. And when we take a beating it might as well be a good one.

Clarke looks to me like a first-class pitcher in every way. He has everything a good pitcher needs, and after getting used to the going in this league he is bound to win a lot of ball games.

I UNDERSTAND Price has been ordered to rejoin us in Montgomery, although Billy hasn't said so outright. I hope that is the case, as he will come in mighty handy in the series, the way I see it.

POP-POPS IN RECORD RACE; 149 MILES IN TWO HOURS

NEW YORK, July 4.—Arthur Chappelle and Paul Ohne, of New York, established a new world's record for the two-hour motorcycle race when they captured the championship team race at the Brighton Beach Motordrome last night. The pair covered 149 miles and 1 lap. The former mark was 141 miles, made on the same track by Lockner and Shields last year.

Ray Veditz, of Philadelphia, and George Mercier, of New York, were second, with 146 miles and 2 laps, while Bert Sayer, of Newport, and George Sperl, of Brooklyn, rode third, with 144 miles and 2 laps. Charles Davis and Berf Fisher, the Brooklyn team, finished fourth, with 144 miles and 1 lap.

EVANS AND ALLIS TIE IN WESTERN TOURNEY TO-DAY

CHICAGO, July 24.—Interest in the amateur championship tournament of the Western Golf Association at the Homewood course to-day centered in the matches between Charles Evans, Jr., present Western champion, and E. P. Allis, of Milwaukee, who made a world's record on the first day of the meet by sending the ball off the first tee 306 yards into the cup in one shot.

Warren K. Wood, who came within one point of becoming champion last year, was matched with Frazer Hale to-day.

HAMMETT AND GALVAO IN WESTCHESTER FINALS

NEW YORK, July 24.—A. D. Hammett, winner of the trophy in 1911, and Maurice Galvao will meet to-day in the final round of the Westchester Country Club championship lawn tennis singles' tournament at Travers Island.

In a hotly contested three-set match yesterday Hammett defeated E. F. Leo, 6-1, 4-6, 6-2, while Galvao disposed of C. Roper in straight sets, 6-0, 6-2.

Miss Bessie Holden reached the final round in the women's singles by defeating Mrs. C. F. Porter in straight sets, 6-0, 6-2.

DELHI BACK IN MAJORS; PIRATES BUY TWIRLER

PITTSBURG, July 24.—L. W. "Flame" Delhi, the young giant right-hand pitcher, who was bought by the Chicago Americans from Los Angeles in 1911, and who went to Great Falls, Mont., of the Union Association, has been bought by the Pittsburg Pirates on Manager Clarke's belief that he has come back. Clarke likens him to George McQuillen, who has been pitching great ball since he was pulled out of the minors a few weeks ago.

Red Sox Owners Are On Verge of a Split

DETROIT, MICH., July 24.—That there is a ruction imminent in the Boston American League baseball club came to light here to-day through the reported attempt made by Boston to trade Speaker and some other player for Ty Cobb. President McAleer did not make the offer, but the offer came. It is understood that the other player included with Speaker was "Smoky Joe" Wood.

McAleer scouts the idea of any such trade. But John I. Taylor and his father, General W. S. Taylor, want to put it through over his head.

The importance of the offer lies in the indication that the Taylors are attempting to take the reins of management out of the hands of President McAleer and again become the active heads of the Boston club.

SANDPIPERS ARE VICTORS.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., July 24.—The Narragansett Sandpipers captured the first semi-final game in the Overture Cup series in the Point Judith polo tournament yesterday by defeating the Point Judith team 9 goals to 5. The Sandpipers received a handicap allowance of 7 goals at the start.

20-LB. LIMIT TO BOOST PARCEL POST HERE

Additional 1,000 Feet of Space Will Be Needed and Force Will Be Doubled.

Heads of the Railway Mail Department and United States postoffice inspectors in Atlanta have been engaged recently in an investigation to determine the extent of increased business as the direct result of the order which goes into effect August 15 increasing the limit of weight of parcel post packages from 11 to 20 pounds.

Postoffice Inspector Robert E. Barry; Mark Bunn, chief clerk of the Railway Mail Service, and G. A. Gardner, special agent from Washington, have been conducting the investigation. They declared Thursday that at the minimum to start with it would be necessary to obtain 1,000 square feet additional floor space at each terminal station to provide for the increased business.

Will Sort Mail at Terminals.

A unique system has been arranged by which all parcel post mail here after will be assorted at the terminal stations.

"Carloads of packages will now be shipped which it is impossible to assort on the roads," said Mr. Barry. "A carload of parcel post matter from Chicago or a distant point will come direct to Atlanta. Here it will be assorted at the terminal station, and as far as is possible this class of mail will hereafter travel by the carload. Parcel post carriers will receive their mail at the terminal, and thus eliminate carrying it to the postoffice.

"In the last week we have visited all the principal cities of the South where terminals will be established for this purpose. Atlanta is the largest of all Southern terminals, over sixty trains of mail of from three to eight cars each are assorted here daily.

"We have decided that at least 1,000 square feet additional floor space will be necessary to start with, but just how much more will be needed when in operation we are unable as yet to estimate.

"At every terminal the number of men now employed will be doubled. Atlanta now has ten assorting clerks. The parcel post system with its latest improvements has revolutionized the entire postal service. The benefits to be derived by the citizens of the United States are colossal."

HEAD OF MERCER TO BE LANDRUM OR O'KELLEY

Choice of University President Lies Between Louisville and Raleigh Ministers.

MACON, July 24.—The presidency of Mercer University lies between the Rev. W. W. Landrum, of Louisville, Ky., formerly of Atlanta, and the Rev. T. W. O'Kelley, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Raleigh, N. C., according to men in close touch with affairs at the institution.

The special committee appointed to choose a president has offered the office to one of sixteen ministers and educators who were under consideration, and they decline to state his name until he has either accepted or declined.

It is believed that Dr. Landrum, who is now with the Baptist Theological Seminary, is first choice, and that if he declines the place will be tendered to the Rev. Dr. O'Kelley

Guardsman Shoots Escaping Comrade

INDIANAPOLIS, July 24.—National Guardsman Walter Dowell, of Madison, Ind., is near death to-day from a bullet fired by Sergeant Edwin Ball, Company H, of Indianapolis, when Dowell attempted to escape after being arrested on suspicion of smuggling liquor into the National Guard camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison.

Ball is held by the police on a charge of assault with intent to kill, pending the result of Dowell's wound.

Convict Who Killed Grandfather Slain

MARIETTA, July 24.—Jasper Butler, a white convict, aged 21, sentenced for life from Heard County for killing his grandfather, was shot and instantly killed by Charles Carter, a guard. Butler escaped from the squad on the Kennesaw road and was recaptured in a nearby swamp. On the way to camp he broke away again. When ordered to stop he kept running. The guard fired, killing him instantly.

Carter is under arrest charged with involuntary manslaughter.

Henderson was a salesman for the tire company. He suddenly left Atlanta six months ago and since Pinkerton detectives have been trying to locate him. They traced him to Jacksonville and to Philadelphia, and there lost the trail.

However, his father-in-law lived in Philadelphia and by shadowing him they finally caught Henderson.

BLEASE IS ASKED FOR HELP BY MRS. ZACHRY

AUGUSTA, July 24.—Reports from Columbia, S. C., are that Mrs. Mary W. Zachry, of Augusta, appealed to Governor Blease yesterday to not allow her two children to be taken away from her in South Carolina, where she fled with her babies, Frances, aged 3, and Mildred, 9 months. It is understood the Governor did not commit himself.

Julian J. Zachry, the husband, was asked for a statement yesterday. He said that he had nothing to say about the kidnaping of the children by Mrs. Zachry.

Mrs. Zachry stated before leaving here that she would kill her husband or any other man who attempted to take her babies from her. She was frantic because of what she termed the law's injustice in awarding the children to Mr. Zachry's custody.

Mrs. Zachry was Miss Mary Wilcox and was Mr. Zachry's stenographer when they were married. Within a year the first child was born. It was a short time before the second child was born that an estrangement occurred.

Mrs. Zachry, it is charged, found letters alleged to show that her husband had been having secret meetings with another woman. This led to their separation, the court's order awarding the custody of the children to their father and the mother's defiance of the ruling as shown in her action in taking them to South Carolina.

Highest Active Volcano

The loftiest active volcano in the world is Popocatapetl, situated forty miles southeast of the City of Mexico.

It rises in the form of a cone to a height of 17,520 feet above sea level and its crater has a diameter of about 2,700 feet and a circumference of three miles.

About the period of the Spanish conquest it was very active, but to-day it emits nothing but fumes.

From time to time the volcano is exploited by mining engineers, the system being rather unique. Indians are employed, who ascend the mountain daily, fill sacks with sulphur in the crater and then slide down the precipitous snow side of the volcano on these improvised gas bags.

What You Can't Do NOW, You Can Never Do.

There Is No Such Thing as a To-morrow That Is to Do Wonders. To-morrow Means NEVER. It Is a Word of Failure.

(Copyright, 1913.)

Don't plan for anything to-morrow, unless you ARE WORKING AT THAT THING TO-DAY.

A picture on this page shows you one of a million young men who say "I will make a start to-morrow."

There is no such start, there is no such to-morrow.

If you can't work to-day, you can't work to-morrow.

If you can't begin the thing to-day, you can NEVER begin it.

To-morrow is a word that in every language means NEVER. It means self-deception, disappointment, idleness, lack of purpose.

When a thought comes to you, get at it.

Don't say to yourself, "I will do that sometime; perhaps to-morrow."

Make a note of the idea, think it over, plan for it, BEGIN IT.

If you can't start it now, you never can do it.

The thing to do is to work to-day, and to keep working to-morrow and every other day.

Keep your mind on to-day, devote the hours of to-day TO THE WORK OF TO-DAY.

Then when to-day's working hours are over, and you have actually done all that you can in those hours of work, permit yourself, if you choose, to think of plans and dreams for the future.

There is not a young man in the country without some good idea, some good plan, some earnest hope in his mind.

But the curse of a million is, that the plan, the idea, is to take form and become real TO-MORROW.

Get away from that to-morrow habit.

You need not take literally the advice, "Live as though this were to be your last day." A man who starts a house must believe that he has days in which to finish it.

The thing to do IS TO START THE HOUSE TO-DAY, and let the to-morrows take care of their work.

We print this picture because it seems, in the attitude of the man sitting under the tree, to typify the attitude of a great many American young men, and to give a needed rebuke.

If you are sitting like this boy, with your arms folded, your feet together and your head down, jump up, throw back your shoulders, take a long breath, and start now up that hill that leads to success.

Pity this poor "futurist" of failure. He is the futurist of to-morrow, the futurist of the plan that will never become real action. He is as dismal a failure in his way as those poor so-called "futurists" who invented what they call a new style of art, and have only succeeded in being unusually hideous.

Don't BAKE Your Baby-- Many Mothers Do It

Hese Is Common Sense Advice from the Chicago Health Department. Read It. Profit by It.

Copyright, 1913.

There are too many "BAKED" babies in this world. Everywhere you see unfortunate little babies suffering with the heat, dressed in woolen or in stiff, starched clothing that adds to their sorrow, babies better suited to the arctic regions than to a hot summer day in a hot city.

Many mothers need the advice which is given and reproduced here. The two pictures are from a bulletin issued by the Chicago Health Department.

This little tot is comfortable and happy when the Summer days are hot. He is dressed right to stand the heat.

This unhappy little codger is all fussed up and as a result he is hot and uncomfortable. He is dressed wrong for hot days.

THE BABY IN SUMMERTIME.

A baby can be more comfortable in hot weather than an adult, but few of them are.

The pernicious and senseless habit of dressing a baby in flannels and endless frills and fancies on hot summer days is such a common practice among mothers of certain nationalities that scores of babies are literally baked to death during the summer months.

During the very hot weather babies should wear only a diaper and a thin gauze shirt. If under six months of age, an abdominal binder of thin flannel and light-knitted booties may be worn, these being advisable only when ordered by your doctor.

These few clothes are all that are needed, but they must be kept clean, soiled garments being promptly removed.

Never replace a used diaper on a baby without first washing it. Wetted or soiled diapers must be washed with as little delay as possible, using hot water in which a little soda has been dissolved. Rinse well and see that they are perfectly dry before using again.

All clothing should be loose and so adjusted as to permit free motion of the legs and arms. Never put starched, stiff or uncomfortable clothes on a baby.

Having dressed your baby correctly, now see that you place the child where it will get fresh outdoor air. Put it in a shaded place on the porch and cover its resting place with mosquito netting to prevent flies from annoying and possibly infecting it. Never keep a baby in the kitchen when you are cooking or washing. When the child must be in the house keep it near an open window in the cleanest and coolest room.

In very hot weather give your baby a sponge bath two or three times a day, using lukewarm water in which a little salt has been dissolved, or you may use a little alcohol instead of the salt. Never give these baths immediately after feeding; better give them before feeding. Take especial care to cleanse the body creases and dry thoroughly. If you use talcum powder be sure it is the best and the unscented kind.

Rational dressing, fresh air and cleanliness will do much to keep your baby in good physical condition and will go a long ways toward enabling it to survive the summer dangers.

Demain, Morgen, Manana, Domani

All these words mean the same thing. They mean TO-MORROW, and they mean FAILURE.

This young man says, "I'll make a start to-morrow." And he never starts. There are a million like him sitting, waiting for the "to-morrow" that never comes. (SEE EDITORIAL.)

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Culture

Women, No Matter How Highly Accomplished They May Be, She Says, Lack Real Culture if They Allow Evil Temper, Evil Speaking, Selfishness and Uncharitableness to Grow Into Their Nature.

Written for The Atlanta Georgian

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

PERHAPS there is no word more frequently misused than the word Culture.

We often hear a woman spoken of as highly cultured.

But in what does her culture consist?

She may speak several languages; she may play several instruments; she may be able to talk understandingly of the arts and sciences; she may kno much of the customs of many lands, but still she may LACK REAL CULTURE.

If she is allowing the weeds of evil temper, evil speaking, selfishness and uncharitableness to grow in her nature, she is not cultured.

That always means that the earth of that land is carefully tilled and that every weed is removed; every ugly thing banished, and every beautiful and useful and valuable thing is fertilized, dug about, encouraged and helped to grow.

So it is with the mind.

A Cultivated Person.

Unless ungracious and unlovely traits are removed, and all the virtues cultivated, mere education which comes from books and travel and the possession of money can never make a cultured person.

What constitutes a cultivated personality? What is it that uplifts character and beautifies conduct?

The answer to both questions can be found in the advice Buddha gave his pupils five hundred years before Christ was born: "Do nothing to another that you would not have done to you," and by Christ's improved rendition of the motto: "Do unto others as you would that they should do to you."

There is no higher phase of culture, and there is nothing which beautifies conduct and character like the practical and perpetual use of the Golden Rule in daily life.

The majority of people regard the keeping of the Ten Commandments as a literal fulfillment of that rule's obligations; but one who contemplates its entire meaning realizes that it applies to every trivial act of daily life and necessitates culture as well as morality.

The loud, jarring voice, the uncontrolled temper, the neglect of bodily cleanliness and disregard of dress—all these things break the Golden Rule, because they are not what we would wish others to do; therefore, we have no right to do them.

A "cultivated personality" includes cleanliness, neatness, a certain conformation to the customs of the day, or of art, in dress; a well modulated voice, an attentive manner in listening to others, a well poised body, a direct and easy carriage and walk, and a pleasant, agreeable expression of countenance.

Haughty, Cold Demeanor.

The haughty, disdainful and cold demeanor is incompatible with culture.

Only the vulgarian with an outward veneer of polish, "puts on airs." The really cultured, like the really great souls of earth, are always affable and simple and natural.

That quality which most uplifts and beautifies character is consideration of others and obeyance of one's own highest instincts.

The man who is considerate of his fellow men pays his debts promptly, does not endeavor to "beat" his neighbor in a bargain, does not haggle over prices, and is tolerant of others' political and religious ideas.

He is kind and affectionate in his family, appreciative of his wife and children, and patient and thoughtful with those in his employ.

All these homely virtues "uplift and beautify character." Without them the most heroic and brilliant deeds can not make an admirable human being.

"Cultivated Personality."

The woman who wishes to possess a "cultivated personality" and a beautiful character must keep her engagements, pay her social and financial obligations, shun gossip and harsh criticism, suit her dress and her amusements to her income, keep her home orderly and attractive, and herself a pleasure to the eye, ear and heart.

The path to character building is a long one; there is no short cut.

It requires continual watchfulness, continual self-control, to travel that path.

But it is a way which grows more beautiful, and the world seems more interesting and life sweeter each year as we advance, when the goal of a beautiful character is our aim.

Vocational Training Applied

By THOMAS TAPPER.

A FEUDIST is a gentleman with a gun on the lookout for another similarly equipped. He who shoots first lives longest.

Two horsemen riding over a mountain road in the Cumberlands came to an obstruction. They jumped down, picked it up and tossed it to one side.

The obstruction was a man who had been put out of business by a blow on the head with the butt of a gun.

When he came to he crept up among the trees and had it out with himself. Then he crawled back home cautiously. After a day or two he disappeared.

For ten months he went to school. After a while he added seven other months to these ten.

Equipped with seventeen months' education, he became the president of a college.

One day when his schooling was over he called a meeting of the feudists in the Cumberlands. One group sat, sullen and armed, at his right. Their enemies, just as sullen and as well armed, sat at his left.

He made a plea to them for the sake not of themselves, but of their children; a plea to give the little ones a chance to learn something, to forget the enmity of the feud spirit, and to be able to go out from the mountains as useful men and women.

It was a new idea to these feud followers, but the man's eloquence prevailed to the extent that the two leaders of the clans arose and shook hands.

With a bit of land and fifty dollars the man began to build the college with his own hands. There were plenty of heartaches and discouragements, but no want of trust. Then the college began to be a real thing, visible to the eyes of men.

That was ten or twelve years ago. To-day the college educates about six hundred people annually. Little children, young men and women, fathers and mothers come from all parts of the mountains, eager to get an education.

The man who has done all this has never taken a penny in pay. He does his work as a distributer, and therefore has no need to take an anxious thought.

Thirty cents a day will bring one of these mountain people to the college and will pay for board, lodging and education. Less than sixteen cents a day will pay for it all if the farm about the school can supply the student with an opportunity to work to the extent of fourteen cents.

The man who has done all this is J. A. Burns, of Oneida, Kentucky.

He was one of the first to see that the mountain problem was to be met only by the most practical form of Vocational Training, and and he has given a living demonstration of the truth of his idea.

He saw clearly that not only did these people need knowledge, but that they needed the kind of knowledge which they could apply in the daily work of their hands.

And he has wrought a remarkable transformation among them.

Educate a human being to do work well, to take pleasure in the doing of it, and efficiency is established.

Female Raffles Loots Telephone Girls' Camp

YOUNG THIEF IS TRAPPED BY RUSE

Girl, 14, Caught Stealing Purse, Freed on Plea of Victims in Series of Robberies.

Following a series of thefts at the summer camp of the employees of the Southern Bell Telephone Company in Lakewood Heights during the past two weeks, a 14-year-old girl was trapped and caught in the act of taking a purse by County Policeman R. E. Jackson Wednesday night.

Every effort was exerted to avoid publicity of the incident. When the girl was taken to the county police headquarters, Miss Katherine Tatum, superintendent of the camp, appeared and asked that no charge be made against her.

The miscreant returned the purse to Miss Tatum, declaring that she took it by mistake, thinking it to be her own. The money it contained, amounting to about $7, was intact. The girl was then released and Thursday morning was discharged from the employ of the telephone company.

Various Traps Set.

Since the first report that a Raffles was operating among the women at the camp, various traps have been set, but without success. The articles which disappeared ranged from portions of women's attire to small amounts of money and bits of jewelry. Almost nightly, it is said, something was stolen.

Wednesday night Miss Tatum called in County Policeman Jackson and informed him of the thefts. The officer got a woman's purse and, placing it upon a table in full view in one of the tents, concealed himself behind a trunk to wait developments.

A short time before the last car to the city was scheduled to leave, the policeman saw the girl enter the tent hastily, and after glancing about, snatch the purse from the table and depart.

Springing from his hiding place, Jackson placed her under arrest.

Pleads for Girl Thief.

Miss Tatum was informed and the girl taken to police headquarters. When Miss Tatum confronted her an hour later, the young prisoner's grief was pathetic. She protested her innocence of any intention at thievery and denied that she had perpetrated the other thefts.

Miss Tatum asked that no charge be lodged against her. The girl was permitted to return to her home.

Thursday morning Miss Tatum declared that the incident was closed.

"It was simply one of those cases of being unable to withstand temptation," she declared. "It was not so much the girl's fault, considering the circumstances. I pity her and hold no malice toward her, nor do any of the other girls in the camp. She just couldn't help it."

Back From Liberia To Die in the South

PRESIDENT IS BRANDED AS DICTATOR

Works Charges Executive With Usurping Legislative Power. Scores Tariff 'Influence.'

WASHINGTON, July 24.—On the floor of the Senate to-day Senator Works, of California, denounced President Wilson for influencing tariff legislation in the summing up of a speech on the tariff bill pending before the Senate.

"The tendency of latter-day politics is to exalt the executive at the expense of the legislative and judicial power of the Government, and make the President the master and ruler of them all, and the master and not the servant of the whole people," said the Senator.

"It is an unwarranted and dangerous tendency. Every public official, however exalted, is only the servant of the people, and should at all times be subject to their control and subservient to their will in conformity to the Constitution and laws of the country, and each department of the Government, if its institutions are to be preserved, must be kept within the limitations of its powers as fixed by the Constitution.

He Charges Tariff Coercion.

"If this bill is passed, it will not be by the willing and voluntary consent of a majority of this body. It will be the result, in part, of outside influence that should never enter into the deliberations or acts of Congress. The Constitution provides:

All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.

"The President is also made Commander-in-Chief of the army and navy. That instrument further provides that 'the executive power shall be vested in the President of the United States of America.' It is further provided: 'He shall from time to time give to the Congress information of the state of the Union and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient.'

No Warrant for Influence.

"This is the only power vested in the President in respect of the making of laws. There is no warrant in the Constitution for his participation in the formation or passage of laws or the exercise of any influence on legislation beyond that of recommending to the consideration of the lawmaking power such measures as he shall judge necessary or expedient."

Here the Senator said that his views coincided with those injected into the Democratic platform of 1904 and he quoted from the declaration of principles drawn by the Democratic party at that time.

In concluding his speech, Senator Works said:

"I have approached this subject with reluctance and purely from a sense of duty. I expressed similar views during the last administration. I have the greatest respect and esteem for the incumbent of the great office of President of the United States, as I had also for his predecessor.

Explains Causes of Alarm.

"I believe in the integrity and sincerity of his purpose to serve the people and the country to their very best interests. But, sir, this can not deter me from expressing my views on a question so serious and far-reaching in its consequences.

"It makes the situation only the more alarming that one of such high ideals and patriotic purposes should do anything that can reasonably be construed to be a usurpation of power or an infringement of the Constitution that may some time be appealed to as a precedent by one less conscientious and patriotic."

BRIDE 20, BRIDEGROOM 74.

GADSDEN, July 24.—Daniel B. Fleming, aged 74, and Miss Jennie Rayburn, aged 20, were married at Guntersville, county seat of Marshall County, to-day. They will live on a farm.

Lightning 'Scrubs' Tower at Terminal

One of the most freakish stunts ever performed by lightning in Atlanta was discovered Thursday as a result of the striking of one of the towers of the Terminal Station. The brick and fancy work on both towers had been stained black by smoke, but the lightning cleaned one as perfectly as though it had been scrubbed. The other, still black, presents a striking contrast.

The shock of the stroke was felt in the waiting room and almost caused a panic. Little damage was done to the tower, but electrical and chemical experts still are unable to solve the mystery of its magic cleaning.

Fan Market Slumps; More Rain Forecast

A dealer in electrical supplies was offering regular $9 electric fans for $3.50 Thursday morning, but found no buyers even at that price. Atlantans evidently believe the weather man's prediction that the remainder of the summer will be cool and pleasant.

At 8 o'clock Thursday morning the official thermometer registered 72 degrees, and the mercury had only climbed 10 degrees higher at 1 o'clock.

Showers Thursday night or Friday is the forecast for Atlanta and vicinity.

Mann Stops Work of House by Filibuster

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Representative Mann again prevented the House from transacting any business to-day. Employing the same tactics he used yesterday—a point of no quorum—Mann demanded a roll call. Adjournment finally was ordered by a vote of 154 to 58.

The Mann filibuster is occasioned by the action of the Democrats in preventing a discussion last week of the Caminetti-Diggs white slave cases.

Snake Kills 3 Tots; Fourth One Drowns

KNOXVILLE, July 24.—Becoming alarmed at the continued absence of her three children who had gone into the barn to hunt eggs, Mrs. John Cooper, wife of a prosperous farmer of Blount County, instituted a search and found the three dying from the bites of a rattlesnake.

While the woman was gone her fourth child, a baby boy, fell into a creek and drowned.

Eugenic Restaurant To Save Babies' Lives

NEW YORK, July 24.—"Thousands of children are brought into the world handicapped for life because their mothers were ill-nourished before they were born."

Miss Mabel A. Parker thus tersely explains why she has embarked on one of the most novel eugenic experiments that has yet been made in this country—a prenatal restaurant.

This restaurant, which will be conducted solely for women who are expected to give birth to a child within six months, will be opened in two weeks.

Love Affair Drives Mme. Curie from Paris

WARSAW, July 24.—Mme. Curie, discoverer, with her husband, of radium, will return to her home here soon to remain permanently. She will have charge of a radiological laboratory.

Another reason for her return is the gossip connecting her name with that of Prof. Langevin, of the College of France, whose wife sued him for separation. Letters between Mme. Curie and Prof. Langevin became public.

Georgia Rhodes Man Calls Oxford 'Grind'

BOSTON, July 24.—Being a student at Oxford is strenuous work, according to the verdict of five Rhodes scholars who returned to-day on the White Star liner Arabic.

The five were Frank B. Bristow, son of Senator Bristow, of Kansas; Walter S. Bryan, of Georgia; C. B. Grosland, of Alabama; W. Lloyd Williams, of North Dakota, and W. A. Zeigler, of Iowa. The five have completed the four years' course at Oxford.

Charlton Dying Is Verdict of Doctors

JERSEY CITY, N. J., July 24.—Porter Charlton, who is in jail here awaiting extradition to Italy for trial for the murder of his bride at Lake Como, three years ago, is so ill he never will reach Italy alive, according to a statement by his physicians. He is a victim of pulmonary tuberculosis.

Two members of the Italian constabulary are expected to arrive in this country this week to take Charlton to Milan.

Headless Body of Girl Found at Sea

BOSTON, July 24.—The finding of the headless body of an apparently well-to-do young woman at sea, 35 miles east of the Georges Bank by Captain Charles White, of the Gloucester fishing schooner Jennie H. Gilbert, is believed to reveal a death by violence at sea, possibly on a trans-Atlantic liner.

The body was found ten miles south of the southerly track of trans-Atlantic steamers, about 170 miles out from Boston. Corsets of apparently expensive make, a black shirtwaist, portions of a dark green silk skirt and high button boots were on the body.

Currency Reform Not Likely to Pass

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Passage of a currency reform bill at this session of Congress was considered most doubtful to-day unless President Wilson brings peace between the warring factions of the House Banking and Currency Committee.

Chairman Glass to-day presented to the committe a draft of an amendment to his bill providing for a prohibition of interlocking directorates. Mr. Glass is against such a proposal by the committee by a vote of 7 to 5, forced him to draw up the amendment.

Ask Mayor to Light New Crematory Fire

It was announced Thursday that the new $260,000 crematory would be put into operation Friday, and to make assurance doubly sure that the row over this plant between Mayor Woodward and the Council has ended, Mayor Woodward was invited to light the fire.

Mayor Woodward was uncertain Thursday whether he would accept the invitation. He has never been down to look over the plant, which is located just back of Terminal Station.

JUDGE ANNOUNCES HE IS READY TO TRY CASE; BEGIN DRAWING JURY

Says He Has Not Even Been Asked for Postponement, and Sees No Reason Why Trial Should Not Begin On Date Fixed.

Judge L. S. Roan, home from Covington, late Thursday, declared to a Georgian reporter that he saw no reason why the trial of Leo M. Frank, accused of the murder of Mary Phagan, should not begin Monday.

The Judge who had been reported ill said he felt fully able to go ahead and had not been asked for a postponement.

"I see no reason why the trial should not begin on the date fixed," he said. "As far as I am concerned everything is in readiness. I have not been asked to allow a delay."

Judge Roan added that he had informed Judge Penleton there was no objection on his part to going ahea with the drawing of the jury venire and accordingly all arrangements were made to select twelve panels of prospective jurymen. Deputy Sheriff Plennie Miner had notified all the attorneys involved. It was expected that the defens would make its motion for the drawing of th jury from the Grand Jury panel before Judge Pendleton and there was no doubt Solicitor Dorsey would oppose it and very likely win his point.

"The prosecution was ready June 30 in the case of the State vs. Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of little Mary Phagan on April 26 last. We have subpenaed all the witnesses, expecting to try this case on Monday next. This date was set at the suggestion of Judge L. S. Roan at the instance of counsel for the defense.

"We are disappointed that the jury was not drawn this morning as Judge Roan stated it would be done.

"The State assuredly will be ready Monday unless something entirely unforeseen happens, and will ask trial of this man at that time."

Superior Judge John T. Pendleton declined to draw a jury for the Frank trial Thursday morning until he heard definitely from Judge L. S. Roan whether the case would be opened next Monday. Judge Pendleton announced he would know definitely by 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon whether the case would be called Monday, and he would draw the jury at that time if necessary.

Deputy Sheriff Plinnie Miner had instructions from Judge Roan to have one of the other judges draw the jury

PAROLE IS ASKED BY BOARD FOR HAWTHORNE

Paroles for Julian Hawthorne and Dr. William J. Morton, ex-Treasurer of the United States, who have been serving sentences in the Federal Penitentiary for misuse of the mails in a stock scheme, were recommended on Thursday in a report submitted by the Federal Pardon Board to Attorney General McReynolds.

The recommendation in respect to Hawthorne and Morton had been agreed upon by the Pardon Board since their meetings at the Federal prison some time ago, but they have withheld their report, as is the custom, until the prisoners named are eligible to parole.

The indorsement of the Attorney General is regarded as a formality and it is expected that the two will receive their freedom by Saturday. A telegram will be sent at the direction of the Attorney General and this will be followed by a letter containing the formal notice of the paroles.

"I am delighted that the recommendation is before Mr. McReynolds," said Hawthorne, when Deputy Warden Wilbur Hawk informed him of the action of the Pardon Board. "I was aware that the board had considered my case favorably and it pleases me that it requires only the signature of the Attorney General to make me a free man."

Let the Frank Trial Go On

Leo Frank should be placed on trial Monday for the murder of Mary Phagan.

The crime was committed April 26; Frank was arrested April 28; he was indicted May 23 and his trial set for June 30.

At the suggestion of the judge in whose court the trial is to take place, a postponement was agreed on, and the date of the trial moved up to July 28.

Now attempts are being made to secure another postponement. The only reason given to the public is that the weather is hot and it would be disagreeable to hold the trial in the summer.

Of course it is hot, but it isn't any hotter in the court room than it is in jail.

Both the prosecution and the defense have had ample time to prepare their cases. If Frank is guilty, the State can prove his guilt as well now as later on; if he is innocent, the defense can prove his innocence as well in summer as in winter.

The public has taken a keen interest in the Phagan case and it will demand that the man who killed her be punished, whether that man is Frank or someone else. Furthermore, it is tired of delays.

Public sentiment is where it was on the date first set for Frank's trial and it will be at the same place if the trial is delayed for a year.

Atlantans are awaiting the trial with open minds. They are not holding themselves up as judges. They know the law is supreme and they want it to take its course. But they want that course taken without seemingly endless delays.

Thursday unless he was notified to the contrary. Miner heard nothing from Judge Roan and carried the jury box to Judge Pendleton to have the twelve panels drawn. He notified the attorneys for the State and the prosecution in ample time for them to be at the court. Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey and his assistant were the only attorneys to put in an appearance.

It developed Thursday morning that there were two rather ruffled chiefs at the police department the previous afternoon when Jim Conley was sneaked from his cell in the station over to the Tower without their permission and without their knowledge.

Chief Lanford said: "This will never happen again."

Chief Beavers would not talk of the incident, but is understood to have told the two detectives, Starnes and Campbell, that if the negro were taken from the police station again he (Beavers) proposed to be in on it.

There was a commotion at police headquarters Wednesday afternoon, when it was found that Conley had been spirited away to confront Newt Lee in the Tower. Chief Lanford knew nothing of the circumstance until he was informed by The Georgian Even then he insisted that Conley was in his cell.

Then Detectives Explain.

He went to Chief Beavers' office to see if permission had been given there for Conley's removal. Beavers said he did not know Conley was gone. Station Sergeant Holcomb was appealed to. He said he had not been notified that the prisoner was to be taken away. Turnkey Bayne, the last resort, was asked to explain the mysterious disappearance of Conley. He informed Chief Beavers that Detectives Starnes and Campbell had taken him about a half hour before.

The Chief, to satisfy himself that Conley was still in custody, made a personal visit to the jail.

When Starnes and Campbell later were in conference with the Chief they told him that they had said nothing about their intention because neither Chief Beavers nor Chief Lanford was in the station at the time.

Firemen Plan Strike When Denied Outing

DALTON, July 24.—Cooler heads among members of the Dalton Fire Department saved the city from being without fire fighters when the department debated at length whether or not to resign.

The trouble arose over the City Council's failure to make an appropriation for the firemen's annual outing. Citizens have made up a fund for the outing, and the firemen will leave here on August 9 for St. Simons Island.

The Government officials are charging that Japan is aiding the revolt and is lending all its strength to the citizens of the southern countries in the hope that the Republic may be disintegrated.

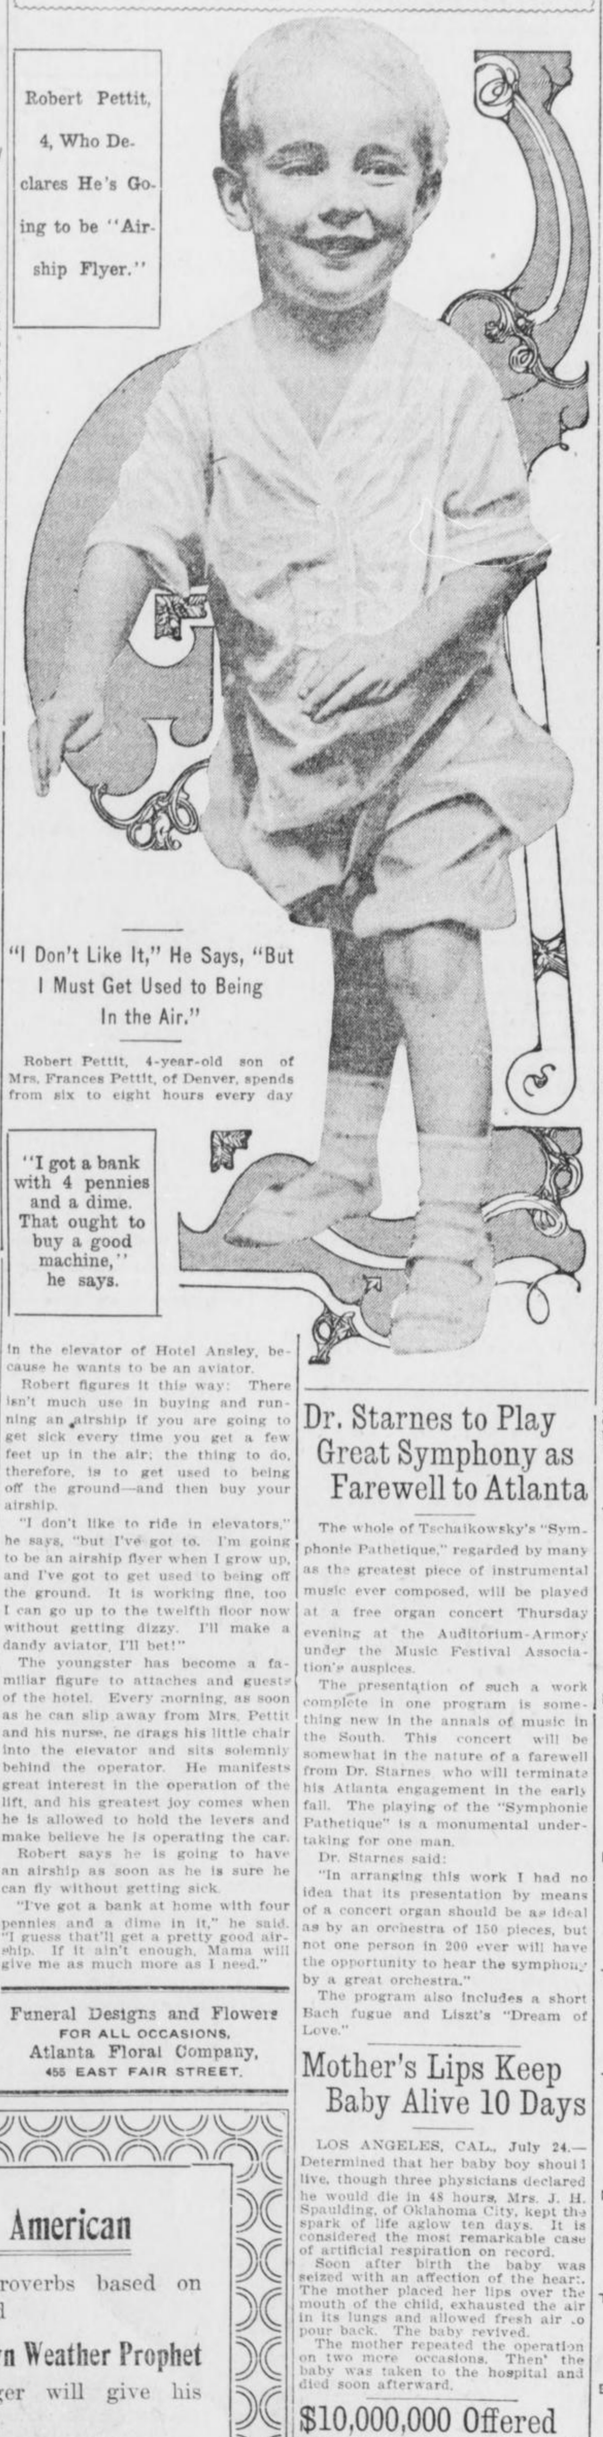
HOTEL ELEVATOR HIS SCHOOL OF AVIATION

Robert Pettit, 4, Who Declares He's Going to be "Airship Flyer."



"I Don't Like It," He Says, "But I Must Get Used to Being In the Air."

Robert Pettit, 4-year-old son of Mrs. Frances Pettit, of Denver, spends from six to eight hours every day in the elevator of Hotel Ansley, because he wants to be an aviator.

"I got a bank with 4 pennies and a dime. That ought to buy a good machine," he says.

Robert figures it this way: There isn't much use in buying and running an airship if you are going to get sick every time you get a few feet up in the air; the thing to do, therefore, is to get used to being off the ground—and then buy your airship.

"I don't like to ride in elevators," he says, "but I've got to. I'm going to be an airship flyer when I grow up, and I've got to get used to being off the ground. It is working fine, too I can go up to the twelfth floor now without getting dizzy. I'll make a dandy aviator, I'll bet!"

The youngster has become a familiar figure to attaches and guests of the hotel. Every morning, as soon as he can slip away from Mrs. Pettit and his nurse, he drags his little chair into the elevator and sits solemnly behind the operator. He manifests great interest in the operation of the lift, and his greatest joy comes when he is allowed to hold the levers and make believe he is operating the car.

Robert says he is going to have an airship as soon as he is sure he can fly without getting sick.

"I've got a bank at home with four pennies and a dime in it," he said. "I guess that'll get a pretty good airship. If it ain't enough, Mama will give me as much more as I need."

Dr. Starnes to Play Great Symphony as Farewell to Atlanta

The whole of Tschaikowsky's "Symphonie Pathetique," regarded by many as the greatest piece of instrumental music ever composed, will be played at a free organ concert Thursday evening at the Auditorium-Armory under the Music Festival Association's auspices.

The presentation of such a work complete in one program is something new in the annals of music in the South. This concert will be somewhat in the nature of a farewell from Dr. Starnes who will terminate his Atlanta engagement in the early fall. The playing of the "Symphonie Pathetique" is a monumental undertaking for one man.

Dr. Starnes said:

"In arranging this work I had no idea that its presentation by means of a concert organ should be as ideal as by an orchestra of 150 pieces, but not one person in 200 ever will have the opportunity to hear the symphony by a great orchestra."

The program also includes a short Bach fugue and Liszt's "Dream of Love."

Mother's Lips Keep Baby Alive 10 Days

LOS ANGELES, CAL., July 24.—Determined that her baby boy should live, though three physicians declared he would die in 48 hours, Mrs. J. H. Spaulding, of Oklahoma City, kept the spark of life aglow ten days. It is considered the most remarkable case of artificial respiration on record.

Soon after birth the baby was seized with an affection of the heart. The mother placed her lips over the mouth of the child, exhausted the air in its lungs and allowed fresh air to pour back. The baby revived.

The mother repeated the operation on two more occasions. Then the baby was taken to the hospital and died soon afterward.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Secretary of Agriculture Houston to-day told Southern Senators and Representatives at a conference that his department was doing everything possible to wipe out the boll weevil.

Senator Vardeman, of Mississippi, said Congress would appropriate $10,000,000 a year to fight the weevil if the department could show that this was necessary.

SENATE DEFEATS NEW COUNTY MEASURE

Barrow Advocates Lose in Upper House After Long and Strenuous Fight.

The bill creating Barrow County, with Winder as the county seat, was defeated in the Senate Thursday afternoon after a long and strenuous fight. Advocates of the new county declared a strong effort would be made to reconsider the action.

A large number of people were down from Winder to witness the action of the Senate. The House had already acted favorably on the bill. Senator DuBose, of the Thirtieth District, led the fight for the new county.

While this bill passed the House with the indorsement of three of the six Representatives from the district affected, it is known that only one of the Senators of the three from the counties concerned to-day will vote for the bill. The other two, it is said, will actively oppose the bill when it comes up for passage.

Either the defeat or the passage of the Barrow County bill, it was argued by some, will mean an end of the consideration of new counties by the present Legislature. Others, however, claim the agitation will go on unabated, regardless of the verdict of the Senate, for strong delegations from the counties affected are on hand to wage their fight, and will not give up until the last card has been played.

Among the new counties which are to be voted on are Warner, Candler and Milledge.

Lamar, Hansell and Norwood Counties will be considered by the House committee Thursday afternoon.

SENATOR WOULD ANNEX NORTH MEXICO

Hitchcock of Nebraska Also Favors Dividing Remainder of Country Into Small Nations.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The annexation of States in Northern Mexico by the United States and a division of the remainder of the country into separate governments was suggested to-day by Senator Hitchcock, of Nebraska, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, as a possible way of bringing about peace in that country.

"The cession of a portion of Northern Mexico to the United States in payment for the enormous indemnity which must be asked of that country for damage to American life and property seems to me to be a feasible way of settling these claims," said Hitchcock. "It will be impossible for Mexico to meet the demands of the United States in cash.

"These States also would serve as 'buffer' between the United States and the Mexican nations farther south.

"Inasmuch as Mexico is now torn between two conflicting factions, it is within the bounds of possibility that peace might be restored through the establishment of separate nations governed by the chief of the contending factions.

Sees Speedy Way to Peace.

"It would seem at present that this would be the most speedy way of bringing a cessation of hostilities to that war-ridden land. Of course, these suggestions are in no way to be taken as an authoritative statement as to the course the United States will pursue. They simply embody my own views on the subject."

President Wilson has not formulated a definite plan for dealing with the Mexican situation, he has not selected any of the alternatives suggested to him for escaping from the present tangle, nor will he do so before his conference with Ambassador Wilson at the White House, scheduled for Saturday.

This statement was made at the White House to-day and is understood to emanate directly from the President.

The proposal that the President should take the initiative in suggesting mediation to the warring factions south of the border is scouted at the White House.

Offer Sure To Be Rejected.

In the first place, it is unlikely that either side would consent to the United States acting as a peacemaker; secondly, the administration does not feel that it should offer its services when it is almost certain they would be declined with little ceremony.

Following a conference with President Wilson, Senator Bacon, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said that the United States, acting as mediator in Mexico, had been considered merely tentatively by the President.

"I do not believe that a policy of mediation will be adopted," said Senator Bacon. "The United States would have to be invited to act as a peacemaker and this, I think, will not occur.

Bacon Denies Intervention.

"The suggestion is only one of many now being considered by the President, who intends to take no active step until after he has had an opportunity to confer with Ambassador Wilson."

Senator Bacon said that all the energies of the United States Government would be devoted to settling the Mexican trouble without intervention, because the seriousness of this step is appreciated by all officials in Washington.

The Senator from Georgia also said that he could not conceive of any immediate developments which would force armed intervention and added that the protection of Americans and other foreigners in Mexico necessarily must devolve on the consuls and other Government agents now in the republic.

Senator Bacon refused to deny or confirm the rumor that Secretary of State Bryan was to head the Mexican commission of mediation and conciliation.

"As far as I know," said Bacon, "no man's name has been mentioned for this place."

Bryan Hurrying to Capital for Conference.

CHICAGO, July 24.—Secretary of State Bryan was in Chicago thirty minutes to-day. He arrived from Iowa, where he had been delivering chautauque lectures, and left at 12:40 o'clock for Washington. The only official who met him at the train was William L. O'Connell, Governor Dunne's political representative.

"I shall leave Washington again as soon as I feel I properly can," said Mr. Bryan. "I have several chautauqua engagements to fill during the summer."

Secretary Bryan declined to discuss his coming conference with Henry Lane Wilson, United States Ambassador to Mexico, who is on his way to Washington to meet President Wilson and the State Department chief.

Cardinal Gibbons Lauds Wilson's Mexico Policy.

WESTMINSTER, MD., July 24.—That Cardinal Gibbons is in sympathy with the Wilson administration's refusal to recognize the Huerta Government was clearly shown when, in an interview, the aged prelate said he thought the present Mexican Government is not well enough established to give it permanence, and, therefore, should not be recognized by the United States.

He said he sympathized with President Wilson in the delicate questions confronting him in the Mexican matter and thought he is doing his duty conscientiously in withholding recognition of the Huerta regime.

He thought that, while European nations were urging upon this country some action for the protection of their citizens and their property on Mexican soil, the consequences of American interference were of too serious character to justify hasty action.

He pointed out that it was by no means certain that the Huerta government would not soon be overthrown, the uncertainty being so grave that it could scarcely be reckoned a sound de facto power, to say nothing of its de jure authority. Under the circumstances President Wilson is acting wisely, the cardinal believes, in the course he has thus far pursued.

Praise for Elder Diaz.

Referring to the uncomfortable conditions American citizens on the Mexican border are enduring, the Cardinal said there was a possibility that this border might be pushed farther south for their relief. He alluded to the extreme discontent of the Mexican people in the State of Sonora and opposite El Paso, Tex., as giving rise to the impression of such a possibility.

The great mistake of the Mexican people, he said, was in their repudiation of Porfirio Diaz, who had given them a firm government, maintained peace, and had done more than any other man to develop the resources of the country and advance its prosperity.

Request for Rangers To Cross Border Denied.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The War Department to-ady formally denied the request of Representative Smith, of Texas, that a company of Texas Rangers be allowed to cross the border to rescue the Americans said to be in peril at Madera.

The department officials take the stand that no expeditionary movement of this kind could possibly be countenanced by the Government. Private raids engineered by filibusters would have no standing in the eyes of the world and the United States could not legally take steps to protect such rangers if they were surrounded by federalist troops in Mexico and slaughtered.

England Ready to Send Battleship to Mexico.

LONDON, July 24.—Great Britain is keeping a watchful eye on the situation in Mexico. In the House of Commons to-day Foreign Minister Grey, replying to a member's question, stated that the Government knew there was serious disturbance in various parts of Mexico and that British subjects were in danger. He declared that not only had citizens of the empire suffered, but that other foreigners had also suffered indignities at the hands of the Mexicans.

The Foreign Secretary stated that he was in communication with the Admiralty and in case it was decided advisable a British warship would be dispatched to Mexico.

HOUSE VOTES TO GIVE SCHOOLS $2,600,000

Appropriation Made After Four-Hour Debate—One of Forty Amendments Passes.

After a four-hour debate the House Thursday morning, sitting as a Committee of the Whole, acted favorably on section 5 of the general appropriations bill, covering appropriations to colleges and the public school fund.

Despite the fact that more than 40 amendments were offered on it, but one change was made. This was an increase of $100,000 in the public school fund, making the total $2,600,000. The Appropriations Committee had recommended that $2,500,000 be appropriated, this being the exact amount paid out during the past year.

Scores of Speeches Made.

The amendment adopted was offered by Representative Stovall, and was carried by a vote of 80 to 45. The entire section was productive of debate, half a hundred speeches being made. The Stovall amendment came in the way of a compromise, a strenuous effort being made to make the appropriation $2,750,000.

It is believed the House will complete its work on the appropriations bill this week. Two days have already been consumed in it and if the House passes it this week a new record will have been set for expediency.

Quick Action Seems Sure.

It will be taken up by the Senate immediately and everything looks favorable for the sending of it to the Governor ten days before the expiration of the session. Governor Slaton has threatened to call an extra session unless the bill reaches him by this time.

An effort to limit the time of the consideration of the bill by the House as a Committee of the Whole to an hour for each section except the fifth caused an hour's hot debate. The resolution provided for five-minute speeches by eight members and twenty minutes for Chairman Wheatley, of the Appropriations Committee. This was killed by a 91 to 34 vote.

CONVICTS RIOT IN SING SING; SET PRISON AFIRE

Mutiny Follows Removal of Warden Liked by the Prisoners. Further Outbreak Feared.

OSSINNING, N. Y., July 24.—Mutinous convicts, in open rebellion against their keepers, to-day made an attempt to destroy the entire Sing Sing prison property by fire.

They set fire to the clothing manufacturing building, in which all the shoes, clothing and like articles are made. The fire was extinguished by the prison fire department after it had swept the shoeshop.

The entire penal population is being kept under lock in fear of further outbreaks.

Fire Laid to Trusties.

The attempt to burn the prison building came early to-day after a night of wild excitement in the prison.

When the warden, James H. Clancey, was told of the threats, he directed that no prisoners, excepting the trusties, should be allowed out of their cells. It is believed that some of the trusties, acting under orders of their imprisoned fellows, applied the match to the clothing factory building.

As the fire raged the criminals behind locked doors set up a terrific din. They shouted "fire," called vile names, beat their doors and made the prison hideous with noise.

"We want Kennedy," came the constant chant above the din.

Protest Warden's Removal.

This protest against the removal of the former warden, who was indicted by the Westchester County Grand Jury, was the keynote of the entire rebellion that for 36 hours has had the State's largest penal institution in a state of mutiny.

All night long the convicts kept up their riotous demonstration. They made the food the first basis of complaint. They contemptuously tossed away bits of food and went to their cells surly and disobedient.

Guards are on duty to-day all along the prison walls, the officers fearing that the sullen convicts may make a concerted effort to escape.

Seeking to relieve the perilous situation at the prison, Warden Clancey this afternoon made arrangements with the railroad to take 200 second and third term prisoners to Auburn to-morrow. With these riotous prisoners out of the way, the warden believes he can restore order in the institution.

CAMP LIFE INCREASES HELLO GIRLS' ABILITY

Here's Elsie Erd, a fair camper, at a little task that helps to break the monotony.

Swimming, Rambles in Woods, Auto Rides and Sleeping Outdoors Give New Lease on Life.

If you do not believe the simple life is conducive to better work, ask some of the heads of departments of the Bell Telephone Company. They'll tell you that since the establishment of Camp Wyanoke at Lakewood Heights, where the young women employees of the company spend their vacations and their week-ends, the work of the "hello girls," the stenographers and the other young women who work in the big building at Mitchell and Pryor streets, has greatly improved.

"The idea we had in mind when Camp Wyanoke was established," Miss Katherine Tatum, who is in charge of the camp, said, Thursday morning, "is working out splendidly. The girls come back to Atlanta after a few days or a week's stay at the camp invigorated and almost with a new lease on life. They have breathed pure, fresh air; they have worked about the camp, and they return to their work with a vim and a determination that is usually lacking during the hot summer months."

Simple Life Throughout.

The simple life is lived in all its phases at Camp Wyanoke. With the exception of the harder and unfamiliar work of cooking all the work is done by the girls. They wash dishes, wash their own clothing—or most of it—keep house, sew and do a hundred and one other tasks.

When work is done they go swimming and wading, or take long rides in the automobiles the company sends out to them several times a week.

Every Wednesday and Saturday nights there are dances and games of various kinds.

The practice of sleeping in the open air is considered by Miss Tatum one of the best features of the camp. It gives many girls who heretofore have been cooped up in tiny city rooms a chance to recuperate.

Sunday School in Camp.

Every girl employed by the company is given a chance to taste the joys of camp life. Those who had taken their vacations before the camp was installed have been given a leave of absence of three or four days, that they might visit the camp. Others spend their entire vacation there.

There are always about twenty girls at the camp, and on Saturday and Sunday this number is sometimes swelled to a hundred, by the girls who come out to spend Sunday. Sunday school is held in the open air under the trees, and is usually attended by about a hundred young women.

Sewage Plant To Be Finished by Sept. 1

W. A. Hansel, assistant chief of construction, has announced that the Peachtree Creek sewage disposal plant will be ready for operation by September 1. With the completion of this plant Peachtree Creek, about which there has been much complaint, immediately will be purified.

The main part of the plant practically is complete, but the city has not yet been able to get sufficient stone for the filter beds.

ITALY HIT BY HURRICANES.

Special Cable to The American.

MILAN, ITALY, July 24.—Damage is being inflicted throughout the entire Italian lake district, which is being swept by terrific hurricanes.

Lamar Indicted to Reach 'Higher Ups'

NEW YORK, July 24.—The Government's real object in secretly indicting David Lamar after his revelations before the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee was to frighten the "Wolf of Wall Street" into giving information in contemplated action against the men higher up in Lamar's impersonations. Men high in political and financial life are believed to have profited through Lamar's operations.

AGED MEN INJURED.

ELBERTON, July 24.—Martin Crawford, 62 years old, and James Bond, aged 60, came near losing their lives when Crawford's mule team backed off the bridge over Coldwater Creek. Two of Crawford's ribs and his breast bone were broken. Bond also had two ribs broken.

U. S. TO DIVORCE TRUSTS FROM RAILROADS

Government Plans End to Rebate Extortions Costing Lines $42,000,000 a Year.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The answer of the Interstate Commerce Commission to the application of the railroads east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers for permission to make a general increase of 5 per cent in freight rates, will be as follows:

1. The application will be denied.
2. All railroads will be ordered to discontinue making "allowances" to certain favored big industrial combinations.

This will save the general public from paying the additional $42,000,000 a year which the railroads are asking for and deprive certain big industrial corporations of a sum ranging between $50,000,000 and $100,000,000 annually.

The Commission during the past few months has secretly made an investigation to determine just the extent to which the practice of making "allowances" to industrial short line railroads, owned by manufacturing concerns, is prevalent.

His Names and Facts.

It is now in possession of the names of the concerns which receive these "allowances" or rebates, or discriminatory rates—and in addition it has the names of the railroads which pay them, the amounts received by the favored industrial corporations and something of the extent to which the practice injures the competing manufacturers, who are not in a position to enter into such arrangements.

In a large number of instances, it is claimed, the practice amounts to extortion. The railroads are compelled by the demands of competition to make allowances to the manufacturer for transferring his product over his own insignificant trackage to the junction where the regular railroad takes up his cars. Where several railroads are bidding for such a manufacturer's business the one which makes the most liberal allowance usually gets the freight.

To End the Extortion.

In view of this fact it is expected that the answer which the commission will give the railroads will meet with their approval and co-operation, and will do away with the most important of existing improper practices without the necessity of prosecution.

The railroads are asking for the five per cent increase on the ground that they must have increased revenue to pay their large operating expenses, and particularly, to pay the higher wages demanded by their employees.

The recent demands for higher wages would take $17,000,000.

Can Pay Wage Advance.

Under the order which the Interstate Commerce Commission will issue the railroads will get more than $42,000,000 by simply cutting off an improper expense, and correspondingly, the favored trusts and combinations which have been mulcting them of the amount will be deprived of it.

The railroads will be placed in a position to pay their employees the living wage they demand, the danger of a huge strike will be avoided, and the whole thing will be accomplished without the shippers—and through them the general public—being required to pay more for the transportation of the necessities of life.

Board at Work to End Strike Deadlock

NEW YORK, July 24.—Hoping to end the deadlock and avoid the threatened strike of the 100,000 trainmen on the Eastern railroads, the Federal Board of Mediators to-day went into consultation with the men's representatives. Later the mediators will meet the railway managers.

The deadlock is the result of the insistence of the employers that their grievances also be arbitrated at the same time the men's demands are taken up.

Settlement Sought Of $14,000,000 Debt

WASHINGTON, July 24.—A debt of $14,000,000, probably the largest dispute of a financial nature in the United States, will be the subject of a conference in this city to-morrow. Virginia is trying to collect that amount from West Virginia and commissions representing the Legislatures of both States will meet here to-morrow and try to reach an agreement.

The debt arises out of West Virginia's withdrawing from Virginia a half century ago and since refusing to pay for improvements Virginia made.

Champ Clark Won't Let His Wife Fly

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The yearning of Mrs. Champ Clark, wife of the Speaker of the House, to engage in an aviation flight, while visiting Representative and Mrs. Baker, at Wildwood, N. J., received a setback when the Speaker flatly refused to let her go.

"I never talk back to Champ," she said. He is master of his own house and so I guess I won't fly just now."

Democrat Is Elected Arkansas Governor

LITTLE ROCK, July 24.—Latest returns to-day showed George W. Hays, Democrat, was elected Governor of Arkansas by a large majority. The Republican, Progressive and Socialist candidates were running far behind.

The surprise of the election was the failure of the Bull Moose faction to display any strength. Colonel George W. Murphy was a poor third.

Harry Meyers, Republican, carried the normal Republican counties. Both Democrats and Republicans before the election predicted heavy losses to the Progressives.

TEXTILE MAKERS SCORE COTTON TARIFF CUTS

Petition to Congress Asserts Democrats Forget Pledges and Industry Will Suffer.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—A petition signed by more than 60 leading cotton manufacturing and distributing firms in the United States, protesting against the cotton tariff rates in the bill now under consideration in the Senate, has been presented to both Houses of Congress. The petition reads as follows:

We herewith voice our protest against the enactment into law of the unequal provisions covering cotton textiles, as disclosed by the various proposed rates published July 11, 1913, embodied in the bill passed by the House of Representatives and amended by the Senate majority (Democratic) caucus.

The Democratic platform declared and promised:

"We recognize that our system of tariff taxation is intimately connected with the business of the country, and we favor the ultimate attainment of the principles we advocate by legislation that will not injure or destroy legitimate industry."

Say Business Will Suffer.

First. We can not reconcile this with the low rates now proposed, which in many instances must injure legitimate industry.

Second. We point out that we fairly represent the primary and other distributors of cotton textiles, handling productions of both North and South which go to every city, town and village in the United States.

Third. The rates generally are below what they should be. The amendments made are inadequate to fix competitive rates in accordance with the promises of the Democratic platform.

Fourth. As we understand it, the purposes of the tariff revision generally were to reduce duties, but not to disturb or inflict punishment on any branch of legitimate industry, and there has been no demand to overdo the reduction, especially in cotton textiles, as in many instances is the case.

Fifth. Some illustrations: Failure to provide higher adequate rates for cotton textiles made of combed yarns than if made of ordinary yarns, or higher adequate for finished plain woven or figured cloths than for grey; putting rates for jacquards on same basis as for ordinary cloths, and actually omitting jacquards in Senate amendments, etc., etc.

Offered Non-Destructive Rates.

Sixth. We indorse the effort of the Independent Manufacturers of New England, who have willingly accepted great reductions, but asked that consistent and non-destructive rates, if on a competitive basis, should prevail.

We believe that they have pointed out the lowest possible competitive rates which in operation would be consistent and fair to the different branches of the industry—North and South. We do not comprehend why their recommendations have not been received in the spirit given.

Seventh. We point out that it is better to err on the side or safety than to subject the industry at this time to the proposed rates more especially on productions of from medium to better grades of goods.

We deplore the discrimination that subjects the cotton textile trade to these needless hardships.

Hardy Elected Head Of Retail Merchants

At the meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association of Georgia, concluded Wednesday evening, the following were elected officers: J. W. S. Hardy, Waycross, president; W. P. Grantham, Thomasville, vice president; John Barten, Atlanta, re-elected secretary. The association is fighting for garnishment and fraudulent check laws.

The time and meeting place of the next convention was referred to the executive committee.

RESINOL CURED AWFUL PIMPLES

Whole Face Covered, Now Clear.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I was troubled with two or three pimples coming out on my chin. In a week or so my whole face was covered with them. Friends advised me to use different lotions and salves. I tried them, but they did me little good, if any. I finally washed the pimples with Resinol Soap and applied Resinol Ointment before going to bed. In the morning I found the swelling going down, and the inflammation gone from the pimples. I tried this treatment for about a week, and found that most of the pimples had disappeared. I kept the treatment up for about a month, and then my face was clear of all pimples. I have used Resinol Soap since, and find that the pimples do not come back." (Signed) Walter A. Stenstrum, 54 Willoughby Ave., Oct. 9, 1912.

Resinol positively stops itching instantly, and speedily heals eczema and other skin humors, dandruff, sores, burns and piles. Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap are sold by every druggist. Trial free; Dept. 11-P, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

SECRET OF ETERNAL YOUTH HELD BY GALAXY OF BEAUTIES IN CONTEST

Predicted she will receive many votes for honor of having likeness placed on Booster Button.

MISS HELEN IRVING.

Latest entrant in race has dark hair, blue eyes and pure cameo profile.

Ponce DeLeon Would Certainly Have Believed Their Loveliness Immortal.

If Ponce DeLeon were upon the earth to-day and should come to Atlanta in search of the fountain of youth he certainly would think he had found it in the galaxy of beauty in the booster button contest. A look through the photographs of the beauties who have been nominated would almost convince one that the loveliness is immortal.

Miss Helen Irving, of No. 385 Cherokee avenue, is the newest entrant. She is fair skinned, with dark hair, sea-blue eyes and a cameo profile. And it is predicted that she will get many votes in the remaining days of the contest.

Votes for the favorites are flowing in. The nominations have by no means ceased, but the contest has gone far enough for there to be favorites.

Do you remember the slogan for the "500,000 club" booster buttons that is to go under the picture of the girl voted the fairest? It is:

"Watch Atlanta—She'll Get You Yet. 500,000 by 1920."

Clip the coupon and nominate whom you think is Atlanta's prettiest girl, or vote for your favorite if she already has been nominated.

EDITORS LEAVE FOR OUTING AT SHORE

LA GRANGE, July 24.—Members of the Georgia Weekly Press Association left LaGrange this morning for Brunswick, still discussing Governor John Marshall Slaton's scathing arraignment of Georgia's tax system at the annual banquet of the association Wednesday night. The Governor appealed to the editors for aid in what he declared to be the most serious financial crisis in the history of the State. He said that Georgia's tax system and reckless spending by the Legislature have brought about present conditions, when the State finds itself unable to pay its school-teachers.

"We must admit it is indefensible to maintain a system that pays its teachers a year after their work has been performed," Governor Slaton said. "It is pleasant to spend money and hard to make it. We love to appropriate, yet shrink from the tax levy. In two years, the Treasurer says, we have spent nearly three-quarters of a million more than our income. The teachers—patient and hard-working—teaching during the day and working examinations at night—molding the characters and training the minds of those upon whom our civilization depends—under our system find no ray of hope from the injustice they suffer.

Recommends Special Taxes.

"While unpleasant to do, I have recommended a levy—an extra tax of 1 mill for 1915, and 1-2 mill in 1916, as the brave way to get relief. The taxpayer will find it the best trade he ever made. It would prevent the imposition of drastic taxing laws, the deficit in the treasury would be satisfied, the State could say to purchasers of her bonds that she is on a solid financial basis, her teachers would be paid, and the kiting policy, which is opposed to all sound principle, would be abolished."

Governor Slaton emphatically declared himself in favor of the plan of equalization of taxes that has been recommended by the Legislature.

Favors Tax Equalization.

"Is not equalization just that requires all to pay the same percentage?" he asked. "Is it right that one many pays on 16 per cent of the value of his property when another pays on 40? An increase of 20 per cent, by simply equalizing the burden, not increasing that of him who is already bearing his part, would produce an abundance of revenue for every legitimate purpose."

The editors will arrive at Brunswick this afternoon and enjoy an outing of several days in that city and at St. Simons Island, where the Second Georgia Infantry is in camp.

Capital Matrons Vie As Queens of Beauty

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Who is to be the beauty of the new administration is the much-discussed question here. Here are the leading aspirants:

Mrs. John E. Osborne, wife of the Second Assistant Secretary of State, dark eyes and hair, clear-cut features and a graceful, slender figure.

Mrs. Dudley Field Malone, wife of the Third Assistant Secretary of State, Irish type, black hair, blue eyes, sparkling with mirth.

Mrs. Timothy Ansberry, golden hair, oval contuor, large blue eyes and superb figure.

Plans To Be Made For 11 County Fairs

MACON, July 24.—The secretary-managers of eleven Georgia county fairs will meet in Macon next Thursday and outline plans for their exhibitions during the coming fall. They will be the guests while here of the officials of the Georgia State Fair Association.

Representatives will be here from Columbus, Dublin, Tifton, Carrollton, Griffin, Eatonton, Washington, Oglethorpe, Valdosta, Cartersville and Calhoun.

Boys Calmly Admit Killing a Policeman

CHICAGO, July 24.—Declaring he was not afraid to go to the gallows, Walter Novak, 19, to-day repeated his confession that he signaled for the shooting of Policeman Samuel Sowers, who was dying from a bullet wound. Bruno Klonowski, 18, who fired the shot, said: "I just felt like killing a cop. That's all. I should worry."

The two prisoners told the police to-day that they had been close friends of the four youths who were hanged in February, 1912, for slaying a gardener.

STREET CROWDS SEE STABBING AFFRAY

Real Estate Operator Accused of Knife Attack After Dispute Over a Bet.

While hundreds of pedestrians, many of them women and children, looked on, two men engaged in a stabbing affray on Peachtree street across from the Candler Building Thursday morning. One of the men received serious injuries.

The wounded man gave his name as Burnett Goodman. He said he was manager of a gum company and lived at No. 36 Moore street. His assailant gave his name as M. B. Ware, 41 years old, a real estate operator living at No. 30 Highland avenue. Ware is a one-armed man. He was released on bond of $100.

Goodman was slashed about the right side of the face and neck. He was taken to the Grady Hospital. After his injuries were attended to he was removed to the police station, where a charge of disorderly conduct was lodged against him.

Refuses to Explain Attack.

Ware, who voluntarily surrendered to Policeman Bostwick, declared that "he had cut him because he wanted to cut him." Other than that, he refused to give an explanation of his action.

Ware used a pocket knife as his weapon.

According to Goodman, Ware attacked him without provocation.

"I was walking down the street with a friend, when Ware came up to me and without a word began striking at me with a knife. I dodged his blows as well as I could and tried to run, but the knife caught me twice across the face. Then I got away and ran, but Ware followed me. If it had not been for someone stopping him he would have killed me, I believe."

Bet Given as Cause of Fight.

The affair is said to have been the result of an argument over a "book" on a baseball game. According to information given the police, Ware on Wednesday made a bet with Goodman of $125 on the game played that afternoon.

It was said that Goodman was accustomed to making "books" on baseball games, and that Ware, in lieu of the cash to put up, posted a $20 forfeit to cover his bet.

According to the report, Ware failed to put up the remaining $105 before the game was played, and when the team which he bet on won, and he attempted to collect the bet from Goodman, the bookmaker refused to pay.

The two are declared to have had some difficulty at that time, but refrained from violence. Thursday morning, however, when they met, the stabbing ensued.

OPTIMISTIC AT 110.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., July 24.—James Morgan, of Grundy County, has just celebrated his 110th birthday. He expects to live another decade.

CAROLINA YOUTH RICHEST TAR IN NAVY SLAIN

Anderson, S. C., Boy, Recently Heir to $250,000, Killed in Philadelphia Tenderloin.

PHILADELPHIA, July 24.—Wilbur Martin, the young sailor from Anderson, S. C., who was killed here recently in a tenderloin saloon, was worth more than $250,000 in his own right, according to information received here to-day. He was the richest enlisted man in the navy.

The fascination that the sea held for him and the adventures of a naval career led him to give up the enjoyment of his fortune to become a common seaman on the battleship Connecticut.

He inherited this fortune when his mother died last March. His relatives at once began to plead with him to give up his adventurous life and settle down in Anderson. The lure of the sea was too great, however, and he disregarded their pleadings and advice. In despair, his relatives appealed to Washington, but this last hope was without avail.

The mysterious circumstances surrounding the death of Martin are thought to have been explained by the discovery to-day of a bottle of heroin, which is supposed to have belonged to him.

Hospital physicians say drugs caused his death and it is believed he was the victim of "knockout drops."

Hearn, who presented it to the museum.

The Acquisition of Wealth

Small savings, slowly gathered, are the silent but sure means by which thousands of men have risen from humble positions to places of power and affluence.

Fortunate are those who profit by this knowledge and begin a course of systematic saving.

THIRD CHAPTER IN PHAGAN MYSTERY

Arrests of Suspects in the Factory Slaying. Sensation as Leo Frank, Manager Was Taken Into Custody.

CHAPTER III.

Everything that occurred, trivial or important, during those first few days after the body of little Mary Phagan was discovered in the pencil factory basement took on a dramatic aspect. The people were keyed to so high a pitch by the revolting crime that for a time it seemed to require only a spark to fire them to violent deeds.

Let a strange person so much as appear at the police station to confer with Chief of Detectives Lanford and wild rumors spread about the whole city like magic. Let one of the detectives drop a careless remark and in a flash everyone mysteriously understood that a complete confession had been made to the police by the murderer.

So it was a sinister reception that the first catch in the detectives' dragnet received from the group of angry men when he was hurried to police headquarters Sunday night of the day after the factory girl had been slain.

All through the day crowds had hung about the police station, some of them merely morbidly curious, others having the mistaken impression that they were going to help the authorities in some manner. Since Newt Lee had been taken into custody in the morning, there had been no arrest, but now with the end of the day came the intelligence that the murderer of Mary Phagan had been captured and was being brought to a cell at the police station.

Smiles Defiantly at Crowd.

Eagerly the crowd awaited to learn the man's identity. On each side of the doors they lined themselves as he was walked, defiantly, toward them between two detectives. A smile curled his lips when he heard their sullen mutterings.

"I know that guy; it's Art Mullinax," came in a hoarse whisper from a roughly dressed youth.

The group of men and boys closed in behind the detectives and their captive, but officers barred their entrance to the police station. To Chief Lanford, Mullinax repeated his denial of the crime which he had made previously to the detectives when they placed him under arrest.

"It's a horrible mistake," he cried, dropping the bravado he had displayed before the crowd. "I don't even know Mary Phagan, except by sight, and the only time I can remember of seeing her was at a Christmas entertainment."

Despite his protestations of innocence, he was placed in solitary confinment and instructions were given that no one be permitted to see him or communicate with him. Sentell, the grocery clerk, insisted that Mullinax was the man he saw with Mary Phagan Saturday night at midnight, and he was so positive in his identification that there appeared to be little doubt of the circumstance.

Sentell Was Positive.

Sentell declared that he had known Mullinax for some time by sight and had met him frequently at the car barns, where both of them had worked at one time. He was certain he could not be mistaken. If it were possible, he was even more positive in his identification of Mary, for he had spoken to her, calling her by name, and she had replied, calling him Ed.

Monday's dawn found the detectives working feverishly on the hundred-and-one clews that had been presented to them. They had Mullinax in a cell, but they were confused by the maze of rumors which confronted them and which pointed the finger of suspicion at other persons as strongly as at Mullinax.

Early in the morning two of the detectives left the station. Chief Lanford was silent and no one else could be persuaded to tell of their mission. The newspaper men, however, jumped to an immediate conclusion and the next editions carried a story that search was being made for a discharged employee of the factory who was known to have been acquainted with the murdered girl.

A little later Chief Lanford admitted that it was J. M. Gantt, Mary's childhood playmate in Marietta and until three weeks before timekeeper at the pencil factory, who was the object of the search. He was known to have been at the factory the night before. His sister Mrs. F. C. Terrell, of No. 284 East Linden avenue, gave a strangely inaccurate account of his recent whereabouts.

Another Arrest Made.

She declared to the detectives and to Georgian reporters that Gantt had not been home for three weeks and that she understood he was on his way to California, when it was known that such was not the case.

Adding to the suspicion against him, he made the unfortunate move of leaving town at the very time the search was started for him, giving the impression that he was taking to flight. As it happened, he went only to Marietta and he was arrested as he stepped from a car there. He indignantly denied that he had any idea of flight. He did not have any idea that the officers were after him, he declared.

His story was that he went to Marietta to buy a crop and that he had notified his mother several days before that he was coming over Monday morning. A warrant charging that he was suspected of the murder of Mary Phagan was lodged against him and he was returned to Atlanta to be placed in a cell.

To add to the confusion and doubt and mystery of the crime, just at the moment when the detectives were positive that they had the criminal in Mullinax or Gantt, local handwriting experts came out with the declaration that the writing of the notes found by the boss of the Phagan girl unmistakably was that of the negro Newt Lee.

One of them qualified as an expert of more than twenty years' experience. He said that he was in the banking business and had made a special study of handwriting. After a careful examination of the notes and a comparison with the handwriting of Lee, he was as positive as he could be that the notes and the test writing were by the same hand.

Suspicion Turns to Another.

Tuesday started with the detectives and the public divided in opinion as to whether Lee, Gantt or Mullinax was the guilty man. It was not long before they were allowed to conjecture as to a fourth suspect. The day's developments came thick and fast, crowding on each other's heels. While the excited public was condemning each of the three prisoners to the gallows, the most startling rumor of all was taking form.

It was that a high official of the National Pencil Company was suspected of the brutal crime and that an arrest would take place within a short time. Through mysterious sources it became known that the police did not place much dependence on the seemingly positive indentifications that had been made of both Gantt and Mullinax.

It was learned at the same time that the theory that the little girl had been lured to the factory at night was being abandoned and that in its place the detectives were adopting the theory that she never left the factory after she entered it at noon to get her pay. They did not believe any of the stores that Mary Phagan had been seen on the street Saturday night.

This threw the suspicion on some one inside the factory. Shortly before noon Tuesday an automobile containing Detective Harry Scott, of the Pinkerton agency, which had been engaged by the pencil company, and Detective John Black, shot away from the police station and up to the pencil factory. Within ten mintutes it had returned. With Scott and Black was Leo M. Frank.

Arrest Creates Sensation.

It was given out at first that Frank was not under arrest, but from that time to this he has not known an instant of actual freedom. This move of the detectives created a sensation. Public indignation, ready to vent itself on the newest object at hand, mounted to menacing heights even though nothing was known against Frank except that he freely admitted being in the factory at the time the Phagan girl came for her money and that the detectives interpreted some of his actions after the crime as highly suspicious.

His many friends rushed immediately to his defense. They proclaimed his arrest as a ridiculous blunder on the part of the police. They pointed to his career and to his reputation as the most potent indication that he would not descend to the fiendish deed that ended the innocent life of Mary Phagan.

But the detectives said:

He was the last one known to have seen Mary Phagan alive.

He was nervous and excited when Lee came to the factory at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

He was nervous and apparently fearful when Gantt came there at 6 o'clock and desired to enter the factory.

Actions Were Unusual.

He called Newt Lee in the evening, something he never had done before during Lee's employment.

There was no answer when Lee called his house early Sunday morning after finding the body and calling the police.

There was no answer when Call Officer Anderson attempted to get him on the telephone when the four policemen were in the factory early that morning.

He acted in a highly suspicious manner when the officers came to his house Sunday morning to take him to the police station for questioning.

All the time that the storm of accusation and bitterness was rising against the young factory superintendent, his attorney, Luther Z. Rosser, kept silence, except to say that Frank in the end would be found entirely innocent. Convinced of his client's innocence, Rosser worked quietly and faithfully in his behalf. Only once in the early days of the tragedy was he provoked to a show of his bulldog fighting qualities. This was when he reached the police station after Frank's arrest and was refused the privilege of seeing Frank.

"We'll see whether they can stop me from conferring with my own client," he shouted. A few minutes later he was in conversation with Frank.

From Frank's arrest until the next day, when the inquest was to begin, a dozen detectives were searching the factory rigidly from top to bottom for evidence. Practically every employee of the plant was quizzed and detectives were sent about the city running down fresh leads that came into the possession of the department.

On the eve of the inquest came the tragic funeral services of the young victim. The minister's prayer was as a stern, imperative invocation to the six men on the Coroner's Jury as well as a fervent plea to the Almighty.

"May God bring the man guilty of this terrible crime to justice," he implored, standing with closed eyes before the little white casket in the Marietta church where Mary, when a toddling child, had attended Sunday school.

Children who had played with her about her home in Marietta surrounded the grave and saw the body lowered into the earth. As the casket disappeared from sight the grief-stricken mother swooned.

The whole grewsome story of the finding of the body was repeated at the inquest, which began next day, but nothing was told which would throw any further light on the identity of the guilty person. Newt Lee told in his ignorant fashion of every move he had made during the fatal day and of his movements in the factory that night.

His story had every appearance of truthfulness. Coroner Donehoo was not able to trip him or catch him in any misstatements. He declared that he had no knowledge that the body was in the building until he went into the dark basement shortly before 3 o'clock that morning and saw the huddled form in the dim light of his lantern.

The officers who visited the factory that morning told their stories. Several of them were of the opinion that Lee knew much more than he had told and their testimony reflected this opinion, but the inquisition of the negro failed to elicit any admissions.

Conley Enters the Case.

Interest was centered in the testimony of Frank, which, it was thought, would be given when the jury resumed its session Thursday. The jurors, however, met and immediately adjourned until the following Monday, and another event took place which was thought to be of little consequence at the time, but which later assumed a vital bearing on the case.

E. F. Holloway, day watchman at the factory, walking through the building early Thursday afternoon, came upon the negro sweeper, Jim Conley. Conley was washing a shirt and appeared strangely embarrassed when caught in the act by Holloway. The negro explained that he was washing the shirt in preparation for the inquest to which he had been summoned. Holloway notified the detectives of the suspicious circumstance and Conley was placed under arrest. That night the first formal charge was lodged against Frank and Lee. They were transferred from the police station to the Tower under commitments in which it was stated that they were suspected of the murder of Mary Phagan.

Apparently unafraid of the terrible charge that had been made against him, Frank appeared at the resumption of the inquest the next Monday seemingly the most unconcerned person in the whole assemblage. Only when he was forced to pass through the narrow lane out into the jam of humanity that filled the station house corridors did he display the slightest trace of nervousness. Looking straight ahead in an evident endeavor to avoid the sinister glances of the crowd, he hurried into the Commissioners' room with Chief Lanford's hand on his arm.

Once inside the room, his face assumed an expression of relief and he walked to the stand with an air of confidence. He answered the questions shot at him without hesitation. His utterance was distinct and his voice unfaltering. He appeared absolutely sure of himself and sure of his story.

He related freely Mary Phagan's visit to the factory. He recalled giving her the pay envelope. He said that she left his office and that he heard her talking with another girl, he thought, and then heard their footsteps dying away. He denied that he sent her to the rear of the factory to see if an expected shipment of metal had come.

No Incriminating Admission.

Every person in the crowded and stuffy little room hung on to each word of his testimony as it came clearly from his lips, but if anyone was expecting an incriminating admission he was disappointed, for it did not come.

Instead, the witness-defendant told a most remarkable and impressive story of his actions on the day of the crime, a story which since has been most strongly corroborated by the testimony of other persons.

Startling incidents followed in close succession until the next inquest hearing on Thursday of the same week. Paul P. Bowen, a former Atlanta boy, was arrested in Houston, Tex., on the suspicion of having fled there after the crime, and a day later the Pinkertons were trailing a Greek from Atlanta to Anniston, Ala., where he was supposed to have taken refuge after killing the girl.

Bowen was arrested on the strength of a story that a woman had heard him muttering wildly in his room in a Houston hotel.

"Why did I do it? Why did I do it?" she declared she heard him cry. Clippings telling of the murder were found in his trunk, but it was found that he had not been in Atlanta for a year. The clew in Anniston was discovered to be as worthless and the Pinkertons abandoned their theory that a Greek had anything to do with the crime.

STANDING SHOWS PONY CONTEST PACE IS HOT

District No. 7 Only One Lagging. Positions May Change Quickly. Last Bonus On.

Standing of the coptestants in The Georgian and American pony contest is published Thursday, and again is it possible to see what remarkable gains have been made by the busy contestants.

District No. 7, it seems, must "speed up" if it is to get anything except the last choice of the ponies, for George Melton, with 110,125 votes, is leading, and A. Morrison, with 106,000, is second.

On the other hand, Herbert Chapman in District No. 4 has rolled up 206,000 votes, and Fannie Mae Cook and Florence Greenoe, with 204,000 and 202,000, are close behind, pursued at no great interval by Eleanor Raoul, Nathaniel Kay and Oscar Eugene Cook.

Between these extremes are the leaders of the various other districts. In district No. 1 the leader, George Rosser, has 205,000 votes, and Helen Brantley is close behind with 201,000 votes. A field is closely bunched behind them.

Standing Can Change Quickly.

The city carriers and newsboys have been the most active, and Ross Greer has 208,000 votes, with Raymond Wilkinson, at 205,000, pushing him hard. In this race there are nine boys above the 100,000 mark.

Ben Steinberg, of Cartersville, is leading the Georgia boys and girls' race with 126,000 votes. Clifford Henry, of Carrollton, has 123,000 votes. Three more are within two years' subscription to The Georgian of the leader, which shows how quickly the relative standing of these contestants may change.

Lena Mae Smith, of Knoxville, Tenn., leads the race for the schoolboys and schoolgirls outside of Georgia, with 130,000 votes, but Fain E. Webb, Jr., of Piedmont, Ala.; McGee Hunt, of Westminster, S. C.; Robert Hyatt Brown and Elmer Cooper, of Greenville, all are in the running, and a little work will change the standings greatly.

Leaders All Bunched.

And so it goes through all the other districts—the four or five leaders are bunched close together. A few dollars spent for subscriptions to The Georgian or Sunday American by their friends will juggle the standings all around.

Subscriptions to The Sunday American make even more difference, for the Red Letter Ballots are in effect until Tuesday night, giving liberal amounts of extra votes for subscriptions to the Sunday paper.

One week from Thursday night the contest ends, and a Sunday interviews. The time is short. Speed counts now.

The bulldog then sprang at the Simian, but the latter jumped on the dog's back and with his claws soon blinded him, then sank his teeth into the neck, killing him.

"If you have not forty-five dollars—
"A ring of steel shall be riveted on your leg.
"A zebra suit upon your back shall proclaim your infamy.
"For eight months, a striped thing of horror to women and children, you shall go publicly to and from your work, shackled to other men.
"Since you do not pay—
"You shall work in chains.
"While others rest, when you try to sleep, you shall be chained in your bed to creatures as wretched and moneyless as yourself.
"Your fetters shall gall your skin night after night.
"And beware the guard! If you displease him, our lash is ready for your back.
"POOR FOOL, PAY—
"Forty-five dollars for the coffers of the great State of Georgia.
"Miserable, moneyless, man.
"Because of your poverty—
"Suffer.
"God may pity you.
"We will not, since you have no money."
The man is dead.
Stripes and chains were put upon him.
In the quarry of the forty-nine-pound hammers you drove him in the frightful heat.
There he fell.
HE DIED THAT DAY.
Remember—
His offense was only this: he played a game for money.
Nothing more.
You condemned him.
You demanded that he pay.
He could not.
You killed him; you did not intend it.
But ignorance is no excuse.
Paul wrote for you:
"Thou art inexcusable, oh, man."
And Jesus said:
"With what judgment you judge, you shall be judged,
"And with what measure you mete, it shall be measured to you again."
God wake you.
Men, women and children are being destroyed in the name of law in Georgia.
The guilt is yours and ours.

WANT AD RACE STARTS WITH REAL VIM

Contestants Begin Work Thursday and Hustle to Win That Automobile or Other Prize.

Enthusiastic young men and women started out early Thursday to win those prizes in The American and Georgian's big Want Ad Contest. They began to meet success from the very start, for the want ads came rolling in.

"It's going to be easy," said one youngster after his first hour's work. "I got three ads from the first four houses I visited. I'm going to win a motorcycle, at least."

Contestants were not simply turned loose with a pencil and paper and told to get busy. An experienced district manager, one who knows through long training how to suggest want ad possibilities, accompanied each contestant for a while, called with him at a number of homes and started him on the right track. The boys and girls were enthusiastic over their first morning's work.

Help Your Young Friends.

Atlanta folk or others who have a boy or girl friend in the contest are urged to either give their want ads to him or her, or else send the ads to the office with a request that they be credited to this contestant. A full list of the entrants in the race will be published Friday.

Contestants gathered early in the day at the four district offices and there met their respective managers. The districts are:

District No. 1—North of Marietta and west of Peachtree, Taylor Bros. drug store, 191 West Peachtree street.

District No. 2—North of Decatur street and east of peachtree, including Kirkwood, Decatur and eastern suburbs; Ponce DeLeon Pharmacy, corner Ponce DeLeon and North Boulevard.

District No. 3—South of Decatur street and east of Whitehall, Paragon Pharmacy, Capitol avenue and Georgia avenue.

District No. 4—South of Marietta street and west of Whitehall, including West End, College Park, East Point and Battle Hill; Medlock's Pharmacy, Gordon and Lee streets.

Not Too Late to Enter.

It isn't too late to enter the Want Ad Contest and win one of the big prizes. You might get a fine automobile, a piano, a trip to California. You might land a motorcycle, a bicycle, a watch or diamond. The prizes are well worth trying for.

There is a nomination blank in the full-page advertisement on another page of this issue. Clip it out, take it to the headquarters of the district in which you live and get a good start. The coupon will give you 1,000 votes, and ten votes will be given you for every cent turned in for paid want ads. You'll find the work a real practical course in salesmanship, too.

Girl Outwits Cupid; Wins Her Own Rival

WHEELING, W. VA., July 24.—War, or Sherman's equivalent for it, "hath no fury like a woman scorned," Harry Pendleton mournfully confides to his friends.

Pendleton had been engaged to Dessie McIntyre for two years, when he met Henrietta Aiken, a Bridgeport, Ohio, belle. He fell a willing conquest and Miss McIntyre was peeved, but not without hope. She went cupid one better by going to Bridgeport, cutting her hair short, donning the clothes of a modern Beau Brummel and "cutting out" Pendleton in masterly fashion. Then she doffed her masquerade.

Pendleton refuses to say whether or not Miss Aiken has permitted him to resume his courtship.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Bijou Show Pleases.

"Good Morning, Judge" as presented at the Bijou this week, seems to have struck a popular chord, as at each performance since the opening matinee the attendance has been unusually large. "Good Morning, Judge"is an ideal hot weather entertainment interspersed throughout are a number of clever vaudeville specialties which alone would be sufficient to furnish an evening's entertainment.

"Les Miserables."

Great interest has evidenced itself in the presentation of "Les Miserables" at the Grand. Attendance since the introduction of the picture on Monday has grown wonderfully and many who have witnessed the two and a half hour exhibition of Victor Hugo's novel declare the photoplay to be superior to any that has been presented in Atlanta. The exhibition is in four complete acts. There are nine reels of more than 12,000 feet of the finest film, and the characters are played by the greatest actors of France.

Next week the Carnegie Museum Alaska-Siberian pictures will be exhibited, together with first-run motion pictures of the better quality.

Divers a Real Hit.

The standing room record continues at the Forsyth. The busy theater has been sold out at eight performances this week and the demand for seats for the rest of the week is great.

John F. Conroy, the famous lifesaver, who with his diving models is the star act of the program, presents the best novelty that has ever been seen on a local stage. He is a wonder in physical culture and as a diver.

For next week the headline feature will be Joe Welch, the character comedian, in his life study of the Hebrew. Mr. Welch has appeared here before and won a great hit. Robert L. Daily and company, in "Our Bob" will make his first local appearance.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

Senator Bacon's inability to attend a sitting of the Georgia Legislature just now for the purpose of accepting an invitation to address that honorable body in joint session, generally is regretted among the members, and many have expressed themselves accordingly.

Senator Bacon's failure to see his way clear to leaving Washington just now seems to be thoroughly appreciated, however, and the fact that he declined the General Assembly's invitation to come down is understood and appreciated.

Senator Hoke Smith's recent address was greatly enjoyed by the General Assembly. He went very thoroughly into many things upon which the Legislature was not fully informed, and undoubtedly held his audience's profound interest and attention through the entire joint session.

Fortunately for the Legislature, Senator Smith's invitation came at a time when it was convenient for him to accept, and without in any way neglecting his duties in Washington.

Both Senators Bacon and Smith are eloquent and forceful speakers, although of late years Senator Bacon has spent very little of his time in Georgia and has been heard but infrequently, on the stump or otherwise.

Whatever the relations between these two Senators may be, whether they be cordial or not, the Georgia Legislature was impartial in extending its invitations to them, as both joint resolutions passed by a unanimous vote of each House.

Editor F. H. Sills, of The Metter Advertiser, whose heart strings are wrapped tight around the bill to create Candler County, was distressed, but not dismayed, that his bill failed of passage this year.

Sills, who has led a clean, manly and fair fight for his pet project, believes that Candler yet will be created—perhaps next session. And, anyway, he is not grieving over spilled milk or wishing he never had been born merely because of a temporary setback in his plans.

Sills is a newspaper man, and a good one, and therefore the newspaper men generally about the Capitol have felt a kindly interest in his proposal with respect to Candler.

His plucky little paper down in Metter has waged a long and honorable warfare for Candler County, and most everybody who knows him wishes him mighty well.

Sills admits ungrudgingly that the first round went against him, but he still is perfectly game and expects to win out in the end.

Hon. Alphabet Bowden, otherwise known as "Jet," because his initials are J. E T. (business of "great laughter"), is being boomed for Mayor of Waycross.

Asked in the Kimball House lobby to-day, Why is Waycross? and Why should anybody want to be Mayor thereof? Mr. Bowden stated that he didn't particularly want to be, but that there was an uprising of the people on and nothing would satisfy them but Bowden for Mayor.

"Waycross is a great little town and they think I would make a great little Mayor—that's all!" said Bowden.

Representative N. F. Culpepper of Meriwether is one of the best lawyers in the House and one of its strongest men.

He is not at all showy, and seldom indulges in debate on the floor. In the committee rooms, however, where most of the real constructive work of the General Assembly is accomplished, he long ago came to be recognized as safe and sane and well worth following.

This is Mr. Culpepper's first term in the House of Representatives, but it is doubtful whether Meriwether, although it has sent to Atlanta many of the ablest and most forceful men in General Assemblies of the past, ever sent a stronger man than Culpepper.

It is evident enough that there is to be a bitter and perhaps prolonged fight in the House on the proposition to establish a State Board of Tax Equalizers.

It is but the truth to state that many of the smaller counties, now getting back from the State through the common school fund and the pensions much more money than they pay into the State Treasury, are aggressively averse to having themselves equalized, or anything like equalized!

Some of the counties pay into the State Treasury a tax on as little as 16 per cent of the valuation of their lands as set forth by the United States Government. Other counties pay as high as 300 per cent.

Manifestly, here is a situation that needs equalizing, at least partially.

If any person doubts the truth of the assertion herein made, he has but to apply to the United States Census Department to have the figures verified.

Between the two extremes of 16 per cent and 300, the various counties run from 20 to 250. The impression is that 65 per cent of the national valuation of real estate in Georgia would be little enough for the taxpayers to have assessed against them—but it may be set down as a dead sure thing that those counties now fattening at the expense of the others are going to balk at having a State board set up to equalize them.

The proposed state board is not to be given power to equalize individuals—it merely will undertake to equalize counties.

Will the board be created? Not if the get-more-than-we-pay-in counties can help it!

$55 SAVED ON FULL BUSINESS SCHOLARSHIPS

The Extraordinary Offer Made by The Southern Business College Will Soon Close.

L. W. ARNOLD,
Vice President Southern Shorthand and Business University.

The opportunity of securing the $55 complete shorthand course and the $55 complete bookkeeping course, both combined, for the price of one course, at the well-known Southern Shorthand and Business University, 10 West Mitchell Street, is rapidly passing away.

Only fifty scholarships were put on sale at this remarkably low rate and the number is diminishing rapidly.

"Reserve one of the special scholarships for my son," said a gentleman yesterday, as he was passing through the city from the North to his home in South Georgia, "and I will mail you a check for same as soon as I get home."

Another came in from a distance and secured a scholarship for his son; several mail applicants and a large number of city callers obtained scholarships for immediate and future entrance.

A club of six in one locality bought scholarships and clubs in other sections are now organizing.

Orders for scholarships came in today from Florida, South Carolina and Tennessee.

While the two $55 courses are being sold for the price of one course—$55—either course alone is offered for $40.

"This is the first time in three years that we have put on sale our scholarships at reduced rate," said Mr. L. W. Arnold, the vice president, to-day, "and we are doing this merely as a midsummer advertising proposition to invade new territory, the plan being to secure a large list of names of prospective pupils from those who obtain this low-priced scholarship. From this list we hope to secure many pupils at the regular rates, which will be in effect by August 1, and thus be reimbursed for the loss we are now sustaining by this advertising offer.

"The demand for stenographers and bookkeepers is very heavy just now; have received a dozen calls since Tuesday and placed several pupils."

Secure scholarship at once. Call, phone or write A. C. Briscoe, President, or L. W. Arnold, Vice President, Atlanta, Ga.

M'KEE SILENT ON RESIGNATION RUMORS

Postmastership in Doubt as Present Holder Confers in Capital With His Chiefs.

Speculation is rife in regard to the exact status of the postmastership in Atlanta pending the return of Postmaster Hugh McKee from Washington. Mr. McKee left Atlanta for the National Capital last week, after obtaining a leave of absence for ten days to lay certain questions before the Postoffice Department at Washington, it is claimed.

Dispatches from Washington indicate that conferences between the Atlanta postmaster and Third Assistant Postmaster General Roper have been held. These conferences, Mr. McKee's personal representatives say, were entirely satisfactory and had nothing whatever to do with a resignation.

Nevertheless guesses continue to be made and there are those who say that the bomb may drop at any time. Thus far, no intimation has been given by Mr. McKee as to the alleged request for his resignation.

Mr. McKee, accompanied by his daughter, probably will reach Atlanta by the end of this week. They are now in Atlantic City, according to latest information received in Atlanta.

BREAKFAST SENT THOMAS CAT BY POST

Mistress, in Atlanta on Visit, Can Not Trust Feline Aristocrat to Butcher Shop Diet.

Bricks and eggs and live stock have become common enough as mail matter within the past few months, but never until Miss Bessie Butler came to Atlanta had Uncle Sam's parcel post served as a dumb waiter for a cat!

Down at Madison, Ga., a big aristocratic Thomas cat—by name, "McCurry"—gets his breakfast every day by parcel post, all the way from 513 Peachtree street, where Miss Butler is visiting Mrs. A. Cunningham.

"McCurry" is Miss Butler's most priceless possession, and when she came to Atlanta she left instructions that the cat must be fed large, mansize pork chops each day. She gave this order to a butcher, with the inevitable result.

Poor "McCurry's" chops soon took on the appearance of a large piece of bone surrounded by a meaty atmosphere, and the cat got dyspepsia and developed a crabbed disposition. He lost his zest in life—all nine of him—and was peevish and poor company.

The sad news of "McCurry's" condition was written to Miss Butler by a friend. It seemed that unless something was done at once the cat would die—it was feared he would break all his teeth trying to eat the bones the butcher said were chops.

So Miss Butler has invoked the aid of Uncle Sam. She gathers up all the scraps of meat that are left when the Cunningham meal is over, and each night she packs them into a shoe box and forwards them to her friend in Madison, who feeds them to the cat the next morning.

The unique method of feeding her pet has been going on for several days now—and latest advices from the front are that the cat is doing well and taking on weight.

Better News of Laces Than We Have Told So Far This Season

The Selling Starts at Nine o'Clock

Take this as a matter of information---the laces below are wanted kinds, fashion-favored right now; the new prices are made arbitrarily, in spite of their worth---and be guided in your purchases accordingly.

The average woman's "love" of pretty laces is strong, stronger perhaps than the average woman's sense of thrift, especially when that sense of thrift would interfere with her possession of pretty laces.

But to-morrow—

A womans "love" of pretty laces and her sense of thrift urge her to attend this sale of laces.

Here are laces wanted right now, that will be wanted when the new dresses for fall are started, at prices that average a great deal less than half.

It is one of those events that happen but once-in-a-while.

Share its savings!

Here briefly is what you will find—

At 19c 35c to 85c a yd. Laces

Shadow and Venise bands and edges in cream, white and black. They are 3 to 5 inches wide.

At 59c $1 to $2 a yd. Laces

Shadow and Venise bands and edges in cream, white and black. These are 4 to 9 inches wide.

At 98c $2 to $3.50 a yd. Laces

Shadow and Venise edges, bands and medallions. The edges, some of them, are 18 inches wide.

Some twenty embroidered dress patterns---voiles and crepes---that were originally $12 to $18 each are now $6.75, because the clearance of them must be complete, despite the fact that all but these went in a recent sale at $9.50. Richly, beautifully embroidered, in light blue, pink, navy and lavender on white---many designs.

ONE WEEK FROM TO-NIGHT PONY CONTEST ENDS

No One Is Certain of Victory and the Lowest Candidate To-day May Be a Leader To-morrow—Only Seven More Days to Claim Prizes—Will You Be Among the Winners?—Success Is Within Your Grasp If You Will Only Realize the Fact and Prove Your Right to the Prizes By Your Efforts Now—"Dark Horses" Will Probably Come Fast During Last Days and Crowd Out the Too Certain Ones.

We have now entered the thick of the fight, the battle is on and when the smoke clears away on July 31, WHO WILL STAND FORTH AS VICTORS? Who knows? Victory is as liable to perch on the banner of one candidate as another and probably the candidate who is now hovering near the cellar championship, as the baseballists say, may be the one who will come so fast during the last few days that there will be no stopping him—he will sweep all before him and march triumphantly to his goal. This statement should be considered well by all candidates and especially those who may feel that there is no need for them to exert themselves during this time, as they are certain of victory. No one is certain of victory, and no one will be until all is over. You may be in the lead now and be reasonably sure in your own mind that no one can defeat you for the prize you want, but you do not know what efforts will be put forth before the close and while you rest apparently secure in the prospect of winning, your very nearest competitor will probably be working so energetically that the gap between you now will be closed up to allow victory snatched from your grasp when a little real effort during these seven days will win for you and any other candidate who fails to do his very best is liable to be without the charmed circle of winners on July 31, no matter how far in front he may be at present.

Present standings are not indicative of final results by a long way. Real effort NOW is going to swing the pendulum of victory or defeat and if you really desire one of those pony outfits or a pretty watch, now is your opportunity to win your selection.

Have you ever witnessed a horserace, where the favorite started out in front, passed the quarter and half poles away in front and then fell down during the last quarter, while the "rank outsider," now considered as a last place possibility, romped in ahead of the favorite? This illustrates perfectly what is just as liable as not to happen in the contest during these last few days. We don't say that it will happen, but such things have happened so often—the candidate is not given a chance to win by the "wise" ones—finally defeating all his rivals—that a similar occurrence in The American-Georgian campaign would not be surprising. Hence, we want to impress upon every candidate the necessity of doing his best before the finish overtakes you.

FIVE MORE DAYS OF THE RED LETTER BALLOTS.

Just five more days and the Red Letter Ballot, which is the last special vote offer of the contest, will draw to a close. The work being done by the great majority of candidates proves that they appreciate their opportunities and are going to die hard. Those who have as yet done but little on this offer, should lose no time in getting started. There is still time to secure its advantages and every vote secured is a step nearer success. uTesday night at 10 o'clock this offer will close and those who have failed to take advantage of this offer and these will be but few, will have missed a chance that may mean final defeat. Votes are the only things that will win for you and without these necessary things you cannot hope to win. Hence every one is worth securing and essential to success.

ECZEMA DISFIGURED FACE BADLY

Also on Hands. Broke Out in Pimples. Itched Badly. Spread All Over Body. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

Hampton Springs, Fla. — "I had had eczema on my face and hands for about three years. My face was badly disfigured.

The eczema broke out in pimples and itched so very badly I would scratch it all the time. It was the most irritating disease I have ever had. It started on my face and hands and it spread all over my body. I had great large sores all over me, caused from the eczema. It bothered me day and night so that I could not rest at all.

"I used three remedies for skin disease and they didn't give relief at all. I was almost terrified until a friend recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment to me. They helped me from the time I started to use them. I used the Cuticura Soap and warm water as a wash and then put the Cuticura Ointment on the sore places. I only used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and was cured." (Signed) Mrs. E. C. Parker, Dec. 7, 1912.

When you buy a fine toilet soap think of the advantages Cuticura Soap possesses over the most expensive toilet soap ever made. In addition to being absolutely pure and refreshingly fragrant, it is delicately yet effectively medicated, giving you two soaps in one, a toilet and a skin soap at one price. Sold throughout the world. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

Defense in Deaton Feudist Case Opens

The Commonwealth sprang a surprise when a deputy sheriff of Breathitt County testified that Deaton told him shortly before the killing that he would have to have Callahan killed.

Poultry Gossip

By JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

Is there a difference between roup and sorehead? My neighbor tells me they are the same thing, only roup is sorehead in the fall and winter, and what we usually call sorehead is the same disease in hot weather. I would like to have your views upon the subject.—Mrs. J. R. C., Dallas, Ga.

These are two entirely different diseases, and come from different causes. Both are diseases of the blood, though the effect is quite different. Then at times the two troubles are found in the same specimen.

For example, a fowl having the sorehead and all broken out with the sores or bumps on its comb and head, will, by roosting in a hot, damp place, contract the roup. This will cause the air passages to become inflamed and fill with mucous, causing the fowl to breathe through its mouth.

Results in Loss of Eyes.

The breathing passage to the nostrils being stopped, the inflamed matter will be forced out through the eye duct, filling the space around the eye, causing it to water and swell. If it is not relieved the matter will harden and finally the eye will go blind and peel out.

While this is going on the sorehead trouble will wrinkle up the comb and if not checked will form a solid scab upon the head and comb and will so affect the general health of the specimen as to cause death in many cases.

It is only in rare cases, however, that the two are combined. Either one is sufficient in itself to cause enough trouble to do a world of damage to an otherwise thrifty flock. The sorehead comes on as a result of infection introduced by the sting of the mosquito. When once established in a flock it is transmitted from one to the other, without the aid of the mosquito, by personal contact.

Coops Should be Netted.

Mosquitoes rarely bother them during the day, so that where a person will take the trouble to make his poultry coops mosquito proof with netting they will have but little trouble from sorehead. Where this is not done, a great preventive measure is the giving of Epsom salts freely in the drinking water during July and August. It must not be omitted for any length of time or the system allowed to get out of the influence of it or the sores will make their appearance.

When the sores do come up, it is a good plan to take any affected ones from the flock and treat them individually by dipping a feather in oil of tar and touching the sores. Another good remedy is a stick of caustic touched to soft water and then to the sore. Either one of these will have a tendency to kill the germs and dry up the sores. The salts should also be given. Everything should be spick and span about the premises in regard to water vessels, feed troughs and nests. Filth will spread the trouble faster than you can cure it.

Roup Like Common Cold.

Roup is to fowls what a bad cold is to people, and, as it is in the human family, it is liable to take various forms if not checked in its incipiency. It may become malignant, with an offensive odor, and often develop into swelled head and at times into a cankerous condition of the throat and mouth.

It will be observed by opening the beak wide that there is a thick, yellowish coating on the throat and tongue, like cheese. Some experts advise the removing of this coating with a feather quill and powdering the raw surface with powdered borax twice a day. A dose of castor oil every other day for three days; then follow it up with salts in the water. This is a constitutional treatment that will help rid the system of the poison.

The swelled head condition is best treated with kerosene oil. We have found nothing so handy to use as a spring-bottom sewing machine oil can, the small tip of which can be inserted into the nostril. With this the oil can be forced through the nostrils into the head.

Foam is First Symptom.

If the poultryman is alert and looks closely after his fowls he will notice a little foam collected in the corner of the eye. This is the first indication of roup and the closing of the air passages. This is the time to treat with the kerosene, which will usually, in about two or three applications, clear out the trouble entirely.

While roup usually is considered a cold weather disease, yet it very frequently makes its appearance in the very hottest times of the summer. At such times it is as the result of chickens being confined in hot, close quarters, not well ventilated and full of bad odors. At such times it is often more trouble to handle than in cold weather because of the difficulty in securing free fresh air.

I doant think we will move back to the city till skool beegins aggenn, sed Pa to the Rileys. We like it out here in the country & beesides, I want Bobbie to stay here as long as possibel. A boy is always better off in the country than he is in the city.

Oh, mercy, sed Missus Riley, how can you say that? Why, just think of the advantages that a boy has wen he is getting a city bringing up.

He Learns Things.

My husband doesn't think so, sed Ma. You see, he was born & brought up in a small town, & he says that a boy born & brought up in a small town has more all around training. He can learn to swim & hunt & fish & row a boat & hitch up a horse & a lot of other things that maiks a man out of him wen he grows up.

But a boy in the city can get such perfect manners, sed Missus Riley. Tommie has learned all he knows about manners by associating with nice little boys in the city that lern thare manners from thare private teechers, the little deers. You are always careful about yure manners, aint you, Tommie, sed Missus Riley.

I shud worry about manners, sed Tommie. What do I care about manners. People in Hoboken have all the manners, sed Tommie.

Now, Tommie, that isent nice, sed Missus Riley. See what a quiet little chap Bobbie is.

That is beekaus he is a bonehead & can't think of anything to say, sed Tommie Riley. He beelongs rite up here in the minor league whare he it, that kid.

I got pritty mad but I knew enuff to keep still. My Ma always told me not to start a quarl in the presens of older peepul.

I wuddent stay in this jay town any longer than I cud help, sed the Riley kid. The peepul here doant know they are alive.

You know a whole lot for a yung man, don't you, sed Pa. You will grow up to be a regular city feller, all rite, one of them clerks that rides to work & back home in the trolley & talks a ride on Sunday for a outing & then goes around telling what a wise fish he is.

Tommie will never be that kind of a braggart, sed Missus Riley, looking at Pa kind of hard. My littel son knows too much to be a braggart, doant you, Tommie?

Tell it to Sweeney, sed Tommie to his mother. Cheese on all that talk about me. Lay off on me and talk about sumbody that doesn't know anything.

Now, Tommie, that isent nice, sed his mother.

I shud fret and take a sweat, sed the Riley kid. I shud worry and git gray, he sed.

Pa Talks.

Tommie, sed Pa, as long as yure parents will not tell youthe truth, I am going to. You think you are a vary smart yung man bekaus sumbody taught you how to say, "I shud worry." You can say that & you can sing "Snooky Ookums" & part of "In my Harum," and that lets you out. & then you cum up here in the country & try to malk fun of grown up peepul that knew moar when thay was babies than you will evver know wen you grow up. You ought to be spanked, Tommie, & sent to bed to think it oaver.

Then Tommie looked at Pa kind of fresh & sed Say, this is a queer kind of a country.

& I guess if he had stayed long I wud have had to soak Tommie, but his Pa & Ma got kind of mad wen they seen we dident like thare son, so thay took him hoam.

Where Riches Count.

The late Mr. Bradley Martin, who was himself a polished wit, used to recall with delight a conversation he overheard between two girls apropos of an aged millionaire's marriage to a debutante.

"I know he's rich," said one, "but isn't he too old to be considered eligible?"

"My dear," answered the other girl, "he's too eligible to be considered old."

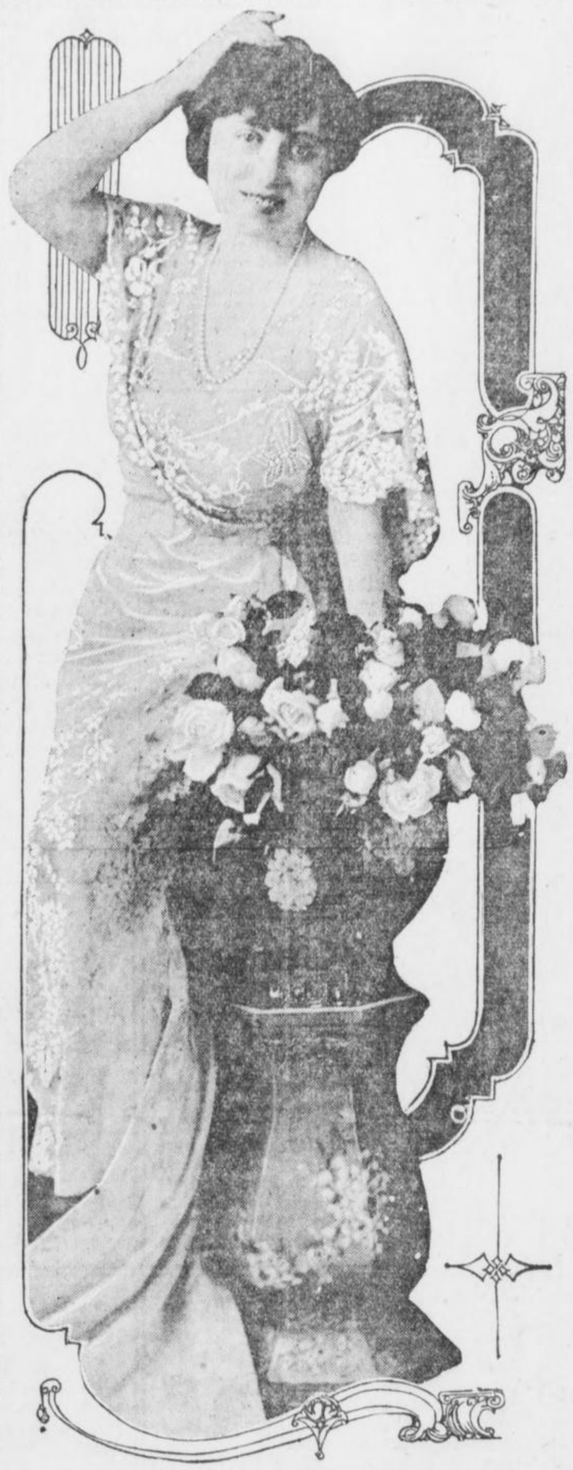
Stella Barre Tells of the Value of Voice Culture.



Miss Stella Barre.

"WHEN I began making vocal culture a serious study a few years ago—six, to be accurate," said Stella Barre in the most delightfully musical of voices, as we sipped cooling ices after the matinee, "no one except my teacher and myself believed I had a voice to train. We did believe, though—we worked hard to prove it—and now we have a few followers, haven't we?"

If you have heard Stella Barre's top note and a few others below it such as she renders at the performances of "All Aboard" in New York you will agree that she has triumphantly proved the existence of her voice. And a voice is, as we have been told, "an excellent thing in woman," be it low and sweet, or be it high and sweet; but heaven forefend that any one of us have the high-pitched nasal voice, or the husky, breathy croak that are an unfortunate tradition as the possessions of the American woman.

"No amount of study is too hard," said the charming singer, "if it gives you at last the goal of your dreams. But you have to work with your brain as well as your body. And the thing I would warn girls most earnestly gainst is overfatigue. It is so easy to think, 'Oh, I will just keep at this a bit longer,' and to use up so much energy and strength that you infringe on your reserve store. Now I really practice all afternoon long—but only about fifteen minutes at a time. I work a bit, and then I go off to something quite different, and then back to work. In this way, I probably put in three or four hours' work with less fatigue than two hours of steady application and overstrain would give.

"You read so many romances of how the fair telephone girl wins a millionaire husband by saying 'Hello!' very sweetly to his listening ear. There is something in every tale—fairy or otherwise—you hear, and whether a girl has a singing voice or not, a few singing lessons will vastly improve her speaking voice—and perhaps help to discover another prima donna.

A Suggestion.

"For the girl who can not afford singing lessons, I would suggest deep breathing at an open window morning and night, or whenever she has a chance to try it during the day. Then fill the lungs and hold the breath back of the voice while speaking a few words, gradually increasing the number until you have breath control and all the while keeping the voice as deep, clear and low as possible."

"But you don't think that voice alone is sufficient beauty for woman, do you?" I asked, for every line of Miss Barre's cool coral colored linen dress and white hat bespoke a careful attention to the mysteries of true becomingness in dress, with beauty and good taste duly commingled—and these mysteries become just plain everyday facts in the clever hands and brain of the woman who knows how to dress. "I am sure that you recognize the importance of dress and manner in the field of womanly charm."

"Yes," said Miss Barre, with the pleasing attention that she always gives to your part of the conversation; "I believe in dress and manner as adjuncts to beauty, and I have just four little pet theories for the first aids to beauty. Here they are: First and most important, KEEP UP. Keep up and ahead of what you are doing of events and happenings; just cultivate a habit of feeling light and buoyant and not weighted down or impeded by life.

"Next, BE PLEASANT. Friends are as easy to acquire as enemies, and a pleasant greeting to the people you meet won't harm them or you.

A Mental Picture.

"Of course, I believe in dressing as well and as becomingly as your means will allow. And to do that you must cultivate your imagination. Do you know, I can always see myself walking out of the front door and down the street in a dress just about the time I am having my first fitting. I picture myself in clothes, and as I don't like freak pictures, I don't get freak clothes. I make sure that my hats form a background for my face, although if I had a short neck I would be careful not to make it appear still shorter by wearing hats that would cut it off in the course of their down-droop in back. And I study the line of my throat. A neck is pretty generally becoming—except to the woman with an exceedingly long, narrow face. Square neck for her, and a round line that cuts off the throat should be generally taboo.

"It's a science, isn't it?" laughed Miss Barre. "Why, I believe taste in dress has as many branches and ramifications as the study of singing. But they are both worth while, aren't they?"

And we all agree, don't we, little sisters?

One Woman's :-: Story :-:

By Virginia T. Van de Water.

CHAPTER VII.

PERHAPS Mary Danforth did not acknowledge to herself why it was so hard for her to give her mind to her studies during the evening on which she received Craig's pansies. If she appreciated that the sender of the flowers was in her consciousness more than was the book of civics lying open in the glow of her student's lamp, she did not admit it even in her innermost thoughts. She tried to "concentrate," but her wits wandered, and, time and again, she found, with a guilty start, that for some minutes she had been gazing abstractedly at nothing. It was late when at last she put out her light, urged to this course by her mother, who insisted that she was wearing herself out studying so hard, and that she would be "good for nothing" in the morning.

When Mary awoke on the morrow she was forced to confess the accuracy of the final part of her mother's prediction, for she did feel "good for nothing." Her eyes smarted and her limbs ached as she busied herself with her toilet. A vague feeling of disappointment possessed her, depressing and, at the same time, irritating her, and she went to breakfast with her nerves and temper on edge. She had difficulty in controlling her feelings when Mrs. Danforth, in her desire to promote table talk, innocently introduced the subject of Craig—feeling that he would be an interesting topic of conversation.

Vexed at the Blush.

"I declare," announced the kind-hearted matron, amiably, "I have almost fallen in love myself with that tall Texan. He has such beautiful manners and is so considerate of elderly people. Don't you think he is delightful?"

As this remark was addressed to the table at large, Mary, vexed at the blush which she felt creeping to her forehead, busied herself with her grapefruit and made no reply.

"Don't you like him, daughter?" persisted her mother.

"I think that he's a presentable man, mother, if that's what you mean," responded the girl tartly and with tightening lips. "You can hardly expect me to say, as you just said, that I am 'almost in love with him' myself, can you?"

The words were sharp and the tone harsh. The speaker suddenly appreciated that this was the second time within a few days that she had been impatient with her mother. As before, she regretted her show of temper when she saw the wounded expression in her mother's eyes. She noted also that her father was looking at her in amazement.

"I did not mean to speak like that, mother," she said quickly and penitently. She pushed her chair back from the table and, going around to the elderly woman, laid her own flushed cheek against the wrinkled one. "I had no business to be so cross, and I am very sorry. I am as nervous as a cat this morning. Please forgive me."

Mrs. Danforth patted her daughter's hand, her face all smiles in an instant.

"That's all right, my darling," she soothed. "We all have our cranky spells. Now eat your breakfast, for it is getting late. I shall be glad when this dreadful grind is over and you have graduated," she added, with a sigh. "You are not like your dear self these days, and it is because you are overwrought and overtired."

Mary made no protest. She wondered secretly if the strain of work was entirely responsible for her vague sense of discontent and uncertainty. Breakfast over, she hurried to her room to collect her books, and, as she returned to the hall, ready to leave the house, she came upon her father. He was leaning against the wall, his hand to his head. His face was pale and his brow contracted as if he were suffering.

"Father!" exclaimed the girl in alarm, "what is the matter?"

"Nothing to worry about, pet," he insisted. "I was just a little dizzy and headachy for a minute. I'm better now. Don't look so frightened!"

"Dad," said Mary, anxiously, "you are not well. You've been overworking."

"Oh, I guess not," he replied with an attempt at raillery. "An old codger like me must expect such feelings this warm weather, that's all—but I find it hard to remember that I'm getting old."

"Won't you see a doctor?" urged Mary.

Mary Gets a Shock.

"Pshaw!" he laughed. "I'm all right, I tell you! Don't mention this little turn to your mother, for she makes a mountain of a molehill when I don't feel up to the scratch."

On the way to school Mary thought of her father with some perturbation, but the hurry and bustle of the day's work drove all other worries from her brain and she had forgotten the little episode by the time she boarded the subway train in the evening. She watched the express on which she rode draw away from a local train. As the lighted windows slid slowly backward she thought of how she had first seen Gordon Craig under circumstances like these. It was like a story book romance, and he looked not unlike a book hero, she said to herself with a contemptuous smile at her own silliness.

Her thoughts were still busy with him as she walked along toward her home. When she turned into her own street, several leather-lunged men, carrying bundles of papers, were shouting "Extra" at the other end of the block in the hollow, reverberating tones of the New York disaster harbinger. Still dreaming, she paid little heed to them, but went up to her apartment, her mind on the man she had known for such a little while. Strange, she mused, that he should have impressed her so strongly. Her father was standing in the drawing room as she entered her home. A glance at his face brought her to a comprehension of the news venders' cries as they were borne now to her ears through the open windows.

"Terrible accident on the Bosting Express!" they were shouting.

Blindly the girl stretched her hands to her father as he came toward her.

"Dad," she asked hoarsely, "was that——"

She got no further, for her father put his arm quickly about her and drew her to him.

"Yes, little girl," he said, tremulously, "the Boston Express—Craig's train—has been wrecked, and, God help us! most of the Pullman passengers are dead!"

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Rusty raised his head and timidly put it out around the angle of the fireplace, where he had taken refuge.

"Wha is he?" he asked huskily.

His master straightened up, put the revolver back in its holster and pointed grimly to the trap.

"Water and a long drop," he said quietly. "There's another of the Duke's men gone."

Rusty got shakily to his feet. "I knowed them battleship boogies was spooks," he observed dolefully. The plural suggested something to Jarvis. He motioned Rusty to stay back, and, picking up the sword, advanced on the second figure. He made two or three feints to strike and got no response. Then he gave it a powerful push with the point. The armor toppled over and fell down the stairs with a hollow clash. It was empty.

"I guess he's harmless."

Rusty immediately began gathering up the pieces.

"I'll fix dis one so he won't jump no mo'!" he declared, savagely.

"What are you going to do?"

"I'm gonna sink this other battleship!"

"Hold on—wait a minute. I reckon we can use that," said Jarvis, smiling a little. "It takes a thief to catch a thief, they say. We'll just out-spook Mr. Ghost. Come on, Rusty," he went on impatiently, holding up the breastplate and back-piece like an undershirt, "get into this hardware as fast as you can."

Rusty drew back with violent headshakings.

"Marse Warren, I don' wanna be no spook."

"Listen!" commanded his master, sharply. "Somebody was working in this room. It's a cinch that the treasure is here and it's a bigger cinch he'll come back to get it when we are gone."

"You ain't gonna leave me heah alone!" protested the old darkey.

The Plan.

"Sure! I'm going to put you in this so you can watch. I'm going t make a bluff that we're both gone. You'll be as safe as a church in this. No one would ever think of looking for one of us in this armor. You watch, and when he starts to work—then yell your head off!"

"I'll yell so loud they'll hear me in Kentucky," Rusty assured him, reluctantly permitting himself to be armored.

"You give your best yell and then I'll nail him."

Rusty sniffed doubtfully. "If you don't nail him he'll nail me!"

Jarvis grunted and fussed over the armor as the right valiant swashbuckler for whom it was constructed was less generously designed amidships than the rotund darky.

"Marse Warren," remarked Rusty, presently, "you mus' think a heap o' Miss Princess to go prowlin' and projecting 'roun' in dis boogy house in de dark."

"What makes you think that?" mumbled Jarvis, toiling with a rusty clasp.

"Marse Warren," said Rusty, solemnly, "I knowed you since you was a baby."

"What's that got to do with it? Pull in your breath a little bit."

"She gin you dat jew'lry you got 'roun' your neck, didn' she? She kind o' crazy 'bout you, too, ain't she?"

"How do you know?" inquired Jarvis, his eagerness concealed by the fact that he was bending over in the rear trying to joint the greaves to Rusty's ponderous calves.

"I knows, all right!" declared Rusty.

"But how do you know? Quit shifting around!"

"We-ell, I'm goin' to tell you, an' then you'll know how I knows. Jus' 'fore them horses jumped on me—when I was waitin' in de road—I heard a winder go up slap! An' dare was de Princess a-lookin' up at de moon, jes' like a picter. Jes' a-lookin' at de moon, an' she says—an' she says—"

"What did she say?" snapped Jarvis.

"'Ah,' she says, a-lookin' at de moon, she says, 'de world am begun all over ag'in fo' me.'"

Good News.

Warren started and was conscious of a singing in his ears that was not all due to the constant bending over required of a squire-at-arms. He held his tongue, knowing a darky's fondness for sentimental gossip, and Rusty went on:

"And den—and den—she go right on an' she says—she says, 'Gawd be with you, my American!'"

A steel thigh-piece slipped through Jarvis' fingers and clattered to the floor.

"An'," concluded Rusty, with invincible logic, "I'se de only American 'roun' heah 'cep' you, Marse Warren."

"God bless you, Rusty!" said his master, fervently, to himself. But aloud he said, holding up the heavy casque:

"Here—put your head in this Stetson. Gloves—here now! How do you feel?"

Jarvis surveyed him with a grin. Sancho Panza would have looked a courtly and sprightly cavalier by comparison.

"All in," was the glum response from the hollow depths of the helmet. "Do I look like a spook?"

"You're a wonderful sight!" declared his master, heartily. "Now, Rusty, get over here. Where's your sword?"

A cataclysmic sneeze caused the armor to rattle like a junk wagon.

"I never heard a ghost sneeze before," chided his master, reprovingly.

"Marse Warren, I'se catchin' cold," pleaded the knight, in the hope of pardon.

"Nonsense! Now, Rusty, keep your ears and eyes open—don't move a muscle. If anyone comes, yell your head off—but don't sneeze!"

"Marse Warren, I wanna go home!"

"We haven't any home, Rusty," was the sober response, as his master adjusted him on the pedestal. Rusty sighed till the clasps of the armor creaked complaint.

"Marse Warren, I don't evah 'spect to get out o' dis boogy house nonow."

"Well, Rusty, there are some things ——"

Jarvis broke off abruptly and threw back his head, motioning Rusty to be quiet. To his ears came a sound so faint and far-off that it was impossible to decide whether it was a stifled groan near at hand or a call from some distant part of the castle.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

Give Her a Chance

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"I AM 20," writes a young man, "have no bad habits, and for eight months have been in love with a girl of my own age. I have always given her as good a time as my salary would permit. One day I went to her place of employment, opened the door quietly to surprise her, and found her in the arms of a man who is known to have brought dishonor to at least two young girls.

"I have learned since that she has frequently gone to places of amusement with him. When I told her of his true character she admitted it, but said he was a good spender, and, as she was not engaged to me, I had no right to object. I love her with all my heart and would not see any trouble befall her. Should I stand aside and let her pay the price?"

No! That would be wrong were you only friends, and an unpardonable crime since you love her.

She pleads that she is not engaged to you, and you have no right to object. Seek an engagement, and give yourself the right!

The girl is going headlong to ruin, and a diverted interest may save her. She is not wicked; she is foolish. She is concerned only for the good times the present may bring. Make her, by the power of your love, see that there are better times in the future. Give her the interest that every girl longs for—the hopes, the dreams, the all-enveloping satisfaction with one's self and life that center around an engagement ring.

A Suggestion.

Induce her to change her place of employment; you surely have women friends whose amusements are unquestionable and whose influence is for good. See that they make her acquaintance, and that she is thrown in with them. Teach her the difference between the real and the shadowy. Never find fault with what she has done, or moralize on the degradation from which you hope to save her.

Treat her as if you trusted her. Appeal to her higher nature always, letting her see that you know she is too good to do the things other foolish girls do, and for whom life is never so long that they get through the paying.

Always keep in her mind the little home you are building for her, and when you take her through the air-castle of your dreams explain its needs and your means as if you were talking to an intelligent being. This will give her a sympathetic understanding of the limitations of your income, and the knowledge that you are saving for her will check any envious sighs for other men who are greater spenders, and cause her to insist on a greater economy than even you had advocated.

Try it! Every good woman is using her influence to redeem some man. If this were not so, humanity would retrograde instead of progress. With all these centuries of obligation heaped upon him, every man personally owes to every weak and willful woman all the influence and strength he can muster to save her.

The Best Way. 4

The strongest influence for a woman's good is that which appeals through the heart. All sighing for vanities of dress, position and person is stifled when she loves. Vanity is a stage of silliness that her heart sooner than her head helps her to outgrow.

If this girl loves you, it will not be impossible to rescue her. But, if she loves you or not, if she assents to an engagement or not, does not lessen your responsibility concerning her. If she will not heed you, and you know you are right concerning this man's dishonorable intentions, you owe it to all womankind to inform the girl's parents of what she is doing.

Help them build the protecting rail at the top of the cliff. That will show a greater Christianity than being content with contributing money or means to an ambulance to be stationed at its base.

Another Case.

Dixon, Iowa.—"I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for some time and it has done me much good. My back troubled me very much. It seemed weak. I had much pain and I was not as regular as I should have been. The Compound has cured these troubles and I recommend it to all my friends."—Mrs. Bertha Dierksen, Box 102, Dixon, Iowa.

How to Dance the "Tango-Classique"

Some Rules and Suggestions for the Up-to-Date Whirlers

By LILLIAN LAUFERTY.

THERE are as many rules for dancing as there are successful dancers now before our public—and that number is legion. But the one rule from which we can never get away if we want to really dance is: "Know your subject."

You can no more dance in a finished and attractive manner without all the ingredients that go to make a dance than you can bake a cherry pie without flour and butter and sugar and water and cherries. Learn this rule by heart before you get up at some giddy "The Dansant," and with one eye on a supposedly admiring gallery, whirl in the mazes of a breakneck awkwardness.

Up at the Ziegfeld "Follies of 1913," at the New Amsterdam Theater, in New York, Rose Dolly and Martin Brown are doing a fascinating combination of true "Tango" and modified Turkey Trot, that they call "classique excentrique," and for the benefit of all who have seen them and the other lovers of Terpsichore who have not, they formulated for me a few simple rules for dancing.

"You must keep exactly with the rythm of the music."

Little Rose Dolly is like a scarlet tangoer streaking across a Southern sky—or a dash of her own Hungarian Paprika in a prosaic salad; and Martin Brown is a typical, up-to-date American youth—with the tall, slender, thoroughbred look we are all beginning to strive for. And here is "How they do it."

How to Do It.

"If you are a beginner," said Miss Dolly, "take a clever dancer—or a clever national dance—as your pattern. Study the steps, make up your mind which ones you can imitate, and then practice them one at a time with music to help you and spur you on. Work and work till you can get up and do a step and have it look just like play."

"That is quite right," said Mr. Brown. "Expression when you are doing it. Don't look strained or anxious. Practice a step in private, and work at it so hard that when you do it publicly it will look like play.

"You must keep exactly with the rhythm of the music—keep time, in other words. Follow the music, do steps that you have mastered, and do not do freak steps that don't fit in with your own personality at all. And above all, keep your toes pointed out all the time. No matter how pretty a step is, it does not look attractive if you do it in pigeon-toed fashion." He illustrated—and the same step done with pointing toe and with turned ankle and inpointed toe became a very different movement.

"Toes are very important in dancing," cried Miss Dolly, "although the modern dancer does not have to stand on them like a ballet dancer, she must keep them out and down, and sway gracefully on the ball of the foot and get the habit of keeping the instep and heel raised.

"Practice relaxing shoulders, knees and ankles."

A Good Way to Learn.

"A good way to learn the modern dances is to stand up and just practice relaxing shoulders, elbows, knees and ankles in a sort of gradual shuffle. Do this first standing firmly on your feet, then rise to the balls of the feet and try it again, then take a step or two with the body relaxed and swaying. Do this first without music and in front of a mirror, then add music, and do it again in front of the mirror. And finally do away with the mirror, and just yield as unconsciously as possible to the rythm of the dance. You will be surprised how easily it will come after you have learned to relax.

"Then you must add steps to your ingredients of knowing how to keep time, how to relax and how to express the feeling that music gives you," added Mr. Brown. "Master a quick, little, short step and a long glide, combine them in various ways, add a little ability to kick gracefully—not high necessarily—but with gracefully pointed toe and an appearance of ease—and watch clever dancers for suggestions as to steps. In this way, even without the aid of a teacher, you can learn to be a home-made turkey trotter."

:-: Helping Jimmy :-:

Today's Short Story---Complete

"I SAW Jimmy this morning," I mentionel casually.

"Yes?" answered Mrs. Veralour.

"Yes. I think we shall have to take to calling him James. The hand of time seems to have given him a sudden, fearful blow. He looked as if he had seen trouble through a microscope. Has anybody left him money, do you know?"

"Money? Good gracious, no!"

"Poor old chap. Then he must have lost his little all."

"What do you mean?" demanded Mrs. Veralour, tapping her foot impatiently. "Why must it be one or the other?"

"Well," I said, "anybody could see it was money trouble of some sort. He had the appearance of being a pauper trying to look like a millionaire, or else a millionaire disguised as a pauper. His clothes have aged frightfully during the last few days. In fact, you could hardly call them clothes; they were merely emblems of civilization."

Mrs. Veralour seemed about to speak, and then, changing her mind, put her hand in front of her mouth and converted her remark into a yawn.

"Or else it is love," I murmured, gazing dreamily into the fire.

Mrs. Veralour said nothing. Taking a cigarette from the box, she tapped it uncertainly on the back of her hand.

"Of course," she said at last, with somewhat superfluous frankness, "I—I make mistakes sometimes. You know Florence Appleton, don't you? Jimmy was frightfully gone on her. He used to come round here every afternoon and tell me how much he loved her."

"What a ridiculous thing to do. It would have been considerably more sensible for him to have gone round and told the girl how much he loved you."

Very Extraordinary.

"What?" ejaculated Mrs. Veralour, with a laugh that was nearly a shriek, "Mr. Blake, what an extraordinary thing to say."

"Well," I said, "isn't the next best thing to telling a girl you love her to tell her you don't? Especially a girl so sought after as Florence Appleton. She'd immediately begin to wonder what was the matter with him."

"M'yes," said Mrs. Veralour, "I suppose she is inclined to think that every man is in love with her; but then she's got such hordes of admirers it's really not the girl's fault."

"No," I agreed, "it's not her fault, it's her forune."

"Misfortune?" murmured Mrs. Veralour, who never by any chance listens to what I say, "well, I don't know about that. Still, as I was saying, Jimmy used to come round and tell me all about it, and I promised to help him."

"Mrs. Veralour," I said, indignantly, "you're always match-making. It's abominable. You don't deserve to be a widow."

"I promised to help him," repeated Mrs. Veralour, firmly, deaf to my remark. "He wanted rather a lot of helping," she added, reflectively; "he was so awfully shy. Fancy a man being shy."

"Why not? Somebody's got to be. What did you do? I suppose you praised him up to the skies to her."

Mrs. Veralour looked at me with an air of mild amusement.

"My dear Mr. Blake. Is your grandmother still alive?"

"Eh? Yes. Why?"

"Oh, I was only wondering where you got all your old-fashioned ideas from. Of course, I didn't praise him I ran him down. I used to go round and tell her most frightful stories of him. I warned her against him. Once you warn a girl against a man, you've wasted your time. It's like putting a 'dangerous' notice up on a sheet of ice; everybody goes to see why it was put there."

The Only Way.

"Oh," I said, weakly, "I have had many a ducking myself."

"The best reputation a man can have," she pursued, "is not to have one. The worst of it is Jimmy wouldn't live down to his reputation."

"That must be very disheartening," I said, sympathetically, "when you're doing your worst for a man."

"Yes, it was. Really, I think it was her money he was afraid of."

"Coward."

"M'yes. Still, I suppose it is humiliating for a rich girl to tell you she can never be a poor man's wife. However, I got him at last to promise that he would propose if I contrived a good opportunity for him."

She paused for a reflective moment.

"You know the summer house in the garden, don't you?"

"I do," I said, "and you know I do."

"Yes, you do, don't you," she smiled. I had a spring lock fixed on that door. You know, one of those that you can only open from the outside."

"I know. I begin to see the end of this story."

"M'm," she said. "That's the worst of being so bright—nothing comes as a surprise. Well, after I'd had the lock put on I invited them both round to lunch. Of course, I asked a lot of other people, so as not to arouse her suspicions. They all came; one or two girls and a lot of men—most of her horde, in fact. After lunch we all went out on the lawn."

"Do get on, Mrs. Veralour; you're like a writer on space rates. There are some things one takes for granted."

"I'd told Jimmy what he'd got to do."

"Get the girl in the summer house, and then you'd come along and snap the door on them?"

"Yes. Don't you think being locked in a summer house together was a good opportunity?"

"I think so. He could lead up to a proposal by saying how he wished they could never get out again. That's what you meant, isn't it?"

"Yes; only nothing quite so silly as that. I was going to give them half an hour to themselves, but after about ten minutes all the men commenced to drift away in search of her, and I was afraid they'd take her away from poor Jimmy. So I hurried along to the summer house at once."

"Go on," I urged. "Quicken the action."

"I listened for a minute to make sure they were really in there; as soon as I heard her voice I gave the door a push."

"Congratulations. A tip-top scheme, jolly well carried out."

"Well, I do think so," asserted Mrs. Veralour, in a tone curiously defensive. I—I still think so."

"Why, of course. You don't mean to say, when you opened the door later on, they weren't engaged?"

"Oh, no; they were engaged all right."

"Good," I paused for a moment, struck by a sudden thought. "But look here, what was old Jimmy looking so absolutely wretched about when I saw him this morning?"

Mrs. Veralour hesitated, and then pulled herself together.

"It wasn't he in the summer house with her, after all," she said.

Up-to-Date Jokes

The chief constable of a small town received by post six "Rogues' Gallery" photographs, taken in different positions, of an old offender wanted for burglary in a neighboring city. A fortnight later the city chief of police received this letter from the constable:

"I have arrested five of the men, and am going after the sixth tonight."

"Darling," she murmured, as she nestled against his shoulder, "do you know that horried people are saying that you are marrying me for my money?"

He leaped to his feet. "The miserable creatures!" he roared. "I won't stand it! Tell me who they are, and I'll horewhip them! I'll——"

"But, my dear," she objected, "you would create scandal, and the case would be made horribly public in the papers, and then I really could not marry you."

"What, then," he muttered, hopelessly, "can be done?"

"Darling, it is easy,' she replied. "I will make over my fortune to my brothers and sisters, and everybody shall know of it. Then no one shall be able to make horrible accusations against you."

But then he drew himself up proudly. His manliness had won a moral victory.

"Nay, Araminta!" he exclaimed. "Do not put thy sweet self to any trouble. Anthrobald Binks is proof against every slanderer!"

Ten Commandments of the Summer Visitor

By DOROTHY DIX.

INVITE not thyself to the house of another, oh, my daughter, for if so be thy friend hungereth and thirsteth for thy society she will arise and send to thee a writing bidding thee to come straightway to her abode. Yea, she will send for thee swiftly by means of the telegraph and the night letter, and if so be she holdeth her hand, take that for a sign which never falleth that she wanteth thee not.

Don't Stay Too Long.

2—Accept not an invitation from a man to tarry and stay at his house until it hath been O. K.'d by his wife, for verily I say unto thee that no man hath authority within his own home, no, not so much as to give a bone to a stray dog. It is the wife and the wife's people, and the wife's friends who have dominion over the spare bedroom.

3—When thou visiteth cast not the goo-goo eyes at thy hostess's son, nor upon her male relatives, nor upon her husband, for it is written that she that snareth the fancy of the men of the household shalt be invited there no more.

Praise Their Offspring.

4—Forget not to take in thy trunk thy curling iron, and thy sewing tools, and thy postage stamps, and thy script for letters, and all the things of which thou hast daily need, for a borrower is an abomination and worse than the pestilence that destroyeth by night.

5—Incline thy heart unto the amusements that hath been prepared for thee, and make thy countenance mirthful, though thy soul fainteth within thee when thy hostess sayeth, "Rejoice and be glad, for to-day we go forth to picnic in the woods, and to partake of squashed lemon pie flavored with ants." Likewise dissemble thy sorrow when she trotteth thee to the church sociable, or naileth thee to the card table until thy stomach turneth in desapir and thy gorge riseth in rebellion.

Invite Not Thyself.

6—When thou visiteth cast veracity to the winds, for verily truth hath no place in a popular house guest. Say of thy hostess's house, "Truly, this is a palace, fit for a king. Tell me, I pray thee, what marvellous architect planned it?" Beat upon thy breast and call Heaven to witness that there was never such a view, though it be but as the view of a fly that is caught under a teacup. Praise the beauty and the wit and the way the offspring of thy hostess reciteth, and when thou departeth thy hostess shall say of thee, "Surely, here is a woman of discernment, and I will bid her return again."

7—Conform thy ways to the ways of the house that thou visiteth. Arise while it is yet night, if it be the custom of thy hosts, so that thou shalt breakfast with them, and give no trouble to the servants, for, behold, a hand-maiden in the suburbs is as precious as gold, yea, as fine gold, and as difficult to keep.

8—If thou followeth a diet and eateth of strange food prepared after an ungodly manner, visit not at all, but hie thee to an inn where thou canst pay for the trouble thou givest. Thus shalt thou save thyself from being hated by thy friends.

9—Forget not to tip the handmaiden who waiteth upon thee, for the button-her-up-in-the-back is worthy of her hire.

10—And if thou forgettest all of the other commandments of the Summer visitor, remember this, oh, my daughter: Make thy visit short. Tarry not long in thy friend's house lest she be weary of thee. Go while yet she entreateth thee to stay with her, for it is better that thy hostess should weep because thou goest than to shed tears because thou stayest. Selah!

Saving His Face

At a very convivial dinner a man with a preternaturally solemn face arose, wine glass in hand, to propose a toast.

"May we never," he said, in deep, measured tones, "drink any more of this stuff——"

He paused, and there was a horrified silence for several seconds—"than is good for us!"

:-: The Practice of Self-Control :-:

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED.
Author of "The Etiquette of New York To-day."

IN any sphere of life self-control is an important element toward success and happiness. Control of mind is a factor toward overcoming the tendency to be oversensitive, suspicious, or tormented by imaginary slights. Moping and brooding over fancied grievances will never achieve peace. Sensitive people, who take offense easily, are very difficult to get on with. We are never sure "where to find them," as the saying is. They are constantly making exactions of their friends, calling them to account for certain delinquencies.

Social life often requires the making of concessions, the common sense not to construe the thoughtlessness of a friend into an intentional slight, or absentmindedness into indifference. Naturally, we feel that something is due between intimate friends, but even in the case of intimates a margin of kindly concession must be made. The fear that one is not receiving sufficient attention from others is an unpleasant form of egotism.

Delay in Calling.

The many demands of social life oblige people not to hold one another too seriously to account for delay in calling, for instance. Among acquaintances delay in calling, or returning calls, need not be taken as an indication of a wish to be exclusive or an intention to be neglectful. Allowances have to be made for the failings of others on this score. When an acquaintance calls after a lengthy delay it is an important courtesy to welcome her cordially, not to allude to any misunderstanding, to hasten to accept, in the kindest spirit, any explanation which may be offered, not to dwell on the subject but pass on to other matters and to do this without permitting the shadow of a suggestion that she has been dilatory. It is wise for the person making a delayed call not to be too profuse in excuses.

Many reasons for delayed calls may be considered by the sensible person who is willing to make concessions toward friends. Absence from home, illness, engagements, various home duties, interests in charitable or other work very absorbing to one's time may be among the causes for delay. The wish to have some leisure to pursue personal tastes may be another reason.

Control of Temper.

While the casting out of fretful grievances is of importance in daily life, control of temper is a rule of life to be practiced by every well-bred person. It is well not to get too excited and to remember to close a door gently. "I never knew anyone who went about banging doors and playing whirlwind to possess any influence whatever," said a wise woman.

The practice of self-control and composure will have an immense effect on one's own manners and will be sure to make a pleasing impression everywhere. To sit quietly, to keep the hands still, to walk calmly, these little things lend a charm to the person who has acquired them.

It is salutary to take stock of ourselves and recognize our own shortcomings and try to remedy them. It is good to get out of ourselves, to stop being self-centered, to give up talking of ourselves and our grievances and to live in the sunshine of cheerfulness and the breeze of larger interests.

MIKE FINN WILL REMAIN AT HELM OF MOBILE CREW

MOBILE, July 23.—Mike Finn will remain as manager of the Mobile Baseball Club.

Such was the announcement of President Alfred Staples following a meeting of the directors of the Mobile club. "The trouble has been adjusted satisfactorily to everybody concerned," he said, "and Mr. Finn remains as manager of the club."

Further than the announcement that "matters has been settled satisfactorily to all concerned," President Staples would not go into the case, but from a reliable source, it is understood that Mike Desmond, employed at the ball park in the capacity of special officer, had tendered his resignation. It is understood that he took his action, following Manager Finn's statement that he would resign, rather than cause the club officials any embarrassment.

Manager Finn would not discuss the outcome of the case when seen, but stated that only one thing in connection with the entire affair had caused him any regret, and that was the statement that he had "insulted the Hibernians." The Gull leader denied that he ever offered offense to the Hibernians of any other organization of any kind in Mobile, and states that he has never made any remark that could be construed as an insult to any organization.

"Mike, you're too good an Irishman, yourself, to talk about the Hibernians; are you not?" he was asked.

"Sure," he responded, "and to tell the truth, I've made up my mind to join the Hibernians."

The announcement that Mike Finn will remain at the head of the club means that the players will hustle as they have in the past to keep the club in the running, and no one was more pleased when definite announcement was made that he would stay than the players now working for the Mobile club under him.

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

Leach Cross has the California "bug." He says that if he succeeds in defeating Matty Baldwin next week and it matched with either Willie Ritchie or Joe Rivers, he will try to arrange to practice his profession of dentistry in Los Angeles. He will have considerable idle time on his hands between bouts, and thinks he can do well.

Reports from the coast state that Tom McCarey is still awaiting word from Abe Attell in regard to a match with Jack White. There is some question in regard to the weight at which the two will box, and a wire from Abe will settle that question definitely.

* * *

Jack Payne is the latest to hurl a challenge at Eddie Hanlon. Payne says he will agree to box Eddie at catchweights.

George Mason, Baltimore lightweight, who fought here about two months ago, is making a big hit in Memphis. Promoters there are trying to secure Johnny Lore to meet him some time in August.

* * *

Terry Nelson is far from discouraged over his defeat at the hands of Eddie Hanlon. Terry says that the latter outweighed him by nearly ten pounds, and will gladly meet Hanlon in another match, providing the latter will make 135 pounds.

* * *

Tom O'Rourke is now managing Carl Morris. O'Rourke hopes to send the Sapulpa heavyweight against the winner of the Flynn-Smith match scheduled to take place at New York on August 8.

* * *

Al Palzer is another heavyweight who is seeking a ring encounter. Palzer is at present in New York doing light work in an effort to get into fighting shape.

Jimmy Murphy, the Chicago lightweight, who recently stopped Danny Goodman, is anxious to come to Atlanta. Murphy would like to get on with either Eddie Hanlon, Mike Saul or Terry Nelson. Murphy also met Joe Thomas in an eight-round battle.

There are four brothers in the White family—Charlie and Jack fight best when weighing around the 126 mark; Billy Wagner, the youngest of the bunch, is best at 133, while Battling White can easily make 116 pounds ringside.

* * *

Jimmy Duffy, the Buffalo lightweight, who holds decisions over Cross, Britton and Young Jack O'drien, is after a match here. He is particularly anxious to get on with Charlie White.

Mike Schreck signed articles yesterday to meet Dick Gilbert at the Valley Athletic Club in Elmwood on August 18. Schreck will go to West Baden, Ind., for a stay of two weeks before the scrap.

* * *

Johnny Creeley and "Knockout" Mars will don the gloves for a scheduled ten-round contest at New York on Thursday night. They have agreed to weigh 133 pounds at 3 o'clock.

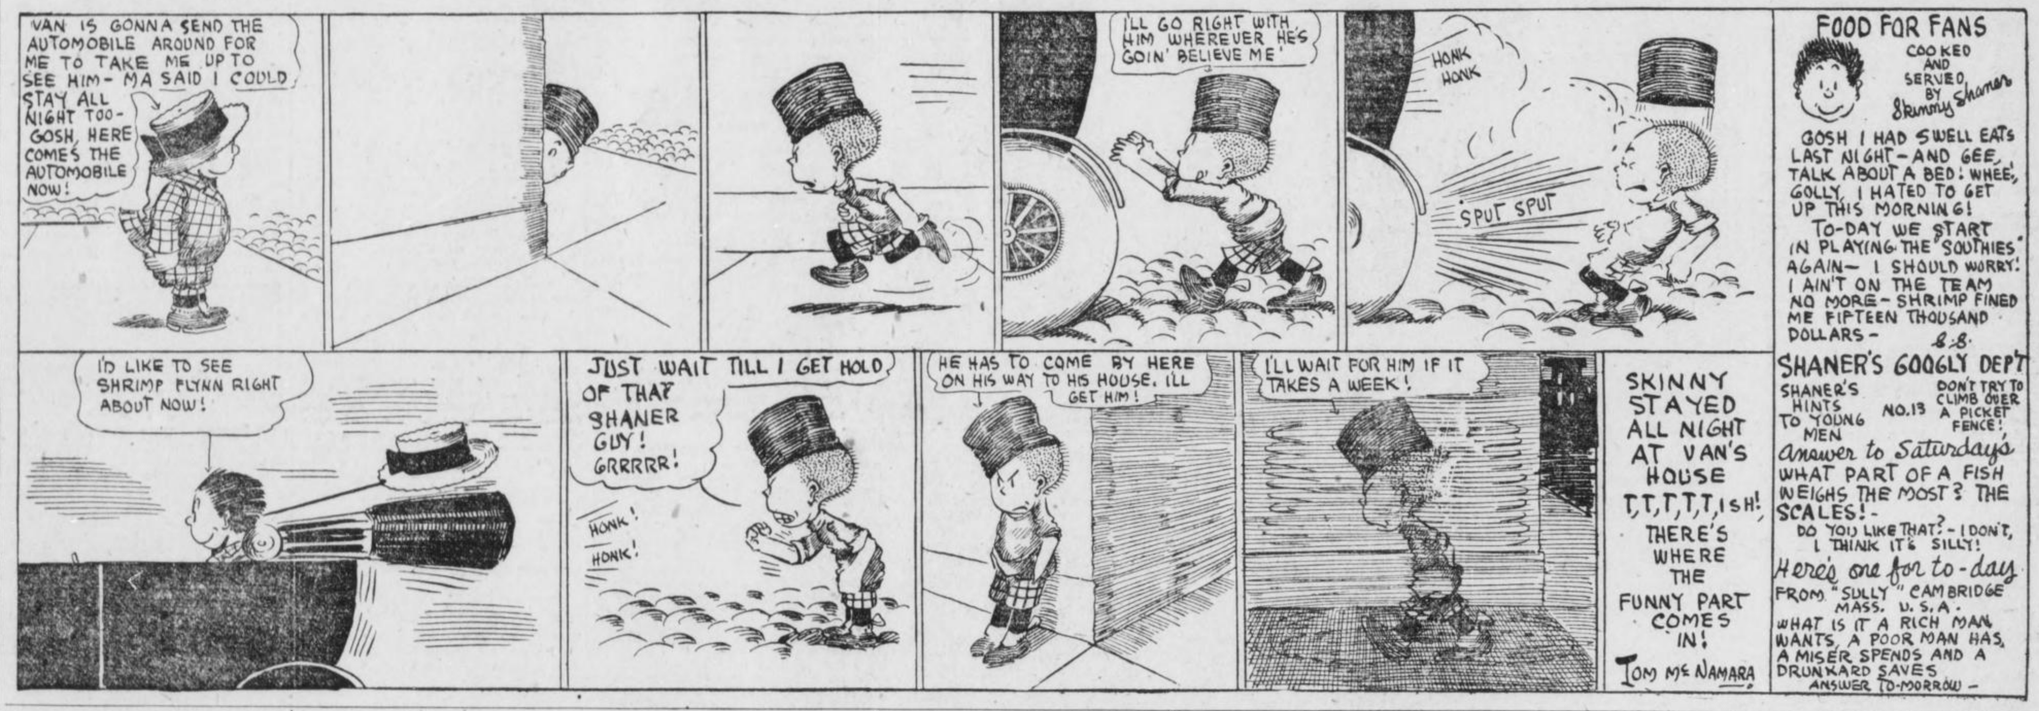
The Shades of Night Were Falling Fast



BOXERS CLAMOR FOR CHANCE AT RITCHIE'S TITLE

LOS ANGELES, July 24.—And still they come! With enough boxers here to stage a carnival of fistic revels lasting until Christmas and managers and promoters clamoring over each others shoulders for a chance at a date and a trunk full of coin it appears that the end is not yet.

Joe Woodman is clamoring for dates for his two proteges, Sam Langford and Jack Read, the Australian lightweight chamuion, and bids fair to make a landing.

Ad Wolgast also wants to be remembered. He is right on the ground to press his claim with Champion Willie Ritchie for an early match. He figures that since Rivers lost out in his match on July 4 he is in direct line for another match in preference to the Mexican and probably his bout at the Vernon arena would be a good card.

ANOTHER challenger of Ritchie is Jimmy Duffy, whose record during the past year certainly gives him some right to consideration. His manager, Bert Finch, writes that Duffy is willing to meet any lightweight in the country with an expressed preference for Ritchie, Freddie Welch, Leach Cross or Joe Rivers.

Finch says that if Ritchie will concede Duffy a match for the championship he will post $5,000 as a side bet that Duffy will defeat him in twenty rounds and that he can fix the terms for the division of the purpose to suit himself.

In May of last year Duffy fought a ten-round bout to a draw with Freddie Welch and has defeated Leach Cross twice, once in New York and once in Buffalo.

"DUMB DAN" MORGAN, the "speechless" wonder from New York, has issued a statement offering to match Jack Britton with Champion Ritchie for a side bet of $10,000. There is no mention made in the letter of whether it is ten thousand cigars or toothpicks. He says this would be a real test for the champion and that Britton will box at any weight that suits the "champion."

Crackers in Real Test To-day

Pennant May Hang on Series

By O. B. Keeler.

NOW is the time to get out old friend Crucial Series and furbish him up for active duty the next three days—beginning today. Also, it is up to the Crackers, like the noble Romans getting an earful of M. Antony's oratory, that those who have base hits prepare to shed them now.

In other words, this is the well-known Critical Juncture, the Tide in the Affairs of Men, and (as set forth in the preamble) the Crucial Series.

There is no particular advantage to be gained by holding a post mortem in advance. It may be stated briefly that if the Crackers lose three straight games to the Billikens, the 1913 bunting will be in grave danger of wasting its fragrance on the desert air surrounding Montgomery, Ala.

If the Smithies win three, with the long home series in prospect, chances will be bright for fireworks at Ponce DeLeon.

A split series, with the Town Boys on the heavy end, will make things look the same way, only not so much so. And if the Billies get the odd game, our noble lads will have some Horatious-at-the-Viaduct work cut out for them the rest of the way.

Here's hoping!

CHEERING NOTE.

In the thick of the trip
We garner a tip
With a soul-stirring sentiment to it:
It's easy to crack
The old Turtle's back—
A Dent on the rubber will do it!

GILBERT PRICE'S little vacation didn't last long. He was ordered by Manager Billy Smith to start from Atlanta this morning to join the club at Montgomery, where he probably will work in the Saturday game.

Price said yesterday he couldn't figure out why he drew the suspension that became effective after his poor start against the Turtles in the opening contest of the recent series. "I just got bumped—that's all," said Gilbert. "That will happen to anybody once in a while; sometimes oftener."

WITH a dozen games, more or less, dividing the Senators from the Athletics in the American League handicap, Walter Johnson, some Big Smoke, comes to bat with the offer to pitch half the remaining games for the Griffmen, beginning September 1, with this little stipulation:

"If Griffith thinks at that time we are close enough to the Athletics to make a fight for the pennant."

That's the point, by the way.

Walter goes on to remark that if Radbourne could do things like pitching every other day, so can he. And he adds that the slabmen who work in the meantime should be instructed to pitch their arms off every time they start.

It would be interesting to see Walter and the large and scintillant Mr. Boehling taking it turn about on the slab—and if the Athletics slump far from their dozen-game lead, we may have a chance to see that very thing.

AND Mordecai Brown just went in for the lowly Reds and saved both ends of a double bill with the Braves, shutting off a savage rally in the last inning of each game. Calls up memories of other days—what? You know.

That sparkled in the Long Ago.

It's not the Cubs he's fighting for—

MORRIS TO MEET BENEDICT.

JOPLIN, MO., July 24.—Negotiations have been completed, according to announcement here to-day, for a fifteen-round bout between Carl Morris, of Sapulpa, Okla., and Al Benedict, of New York, to be fought in Joplin Friday night.

J. PLUV WALKS ARM-IN-ARM WITH J. PRINCE

JACK PRINCE really gets sore when he is called "the Rainmaker."

But being well armed with a pair of perfectly good legs, we dare him to come forth for battle, and so here goes:

Jack Prince, you are a regular rainmaker!

For the second time in as many days the races carded for the Motordrome have been called off on account of rain. And to make sure that they will have plenty of time to get Jack out of town, the other backers in the saucer have decided that the next set of races will not be held until Friday night.

They want all of to-day to get Jack out of the city. And they guarantee that Prince will not be within fifty miles of here by sunrise to-morrow.

And with that promise, the local bugs may be assured that the big Marathon grind will come off to-morrow night. Also a number of other events that should prove corkers.

To-day all of the riders intend tuning up their machines a bit more. To-morrow night the record for the 26 miles, 385 yards is very likely to get an awful kick in the slats.

ATTELL COMES TO LIFE.

NEW YORK, July 24.—Abe Attell will be seen in action again to-night at Rockaway, where he will clash with Willie Beecher, the New York lightweight, for a ten-round bout.

Report That Cobb Is Slated for Chicago

CHICAGO, July 24.—Just before the White Sox pulled out for their Eastern invasion a report gained circulation to the effect that Ty Cobb, Tiger star, is to become a member of the South Side crew.

To get him, all this according to the report, Owner Comiskey must give up Pitcher "Red" Russell, Outfielder Chappelle, for whom Comiskey recently paid $18,000, and a catcher.

It has been known for several months that Cobb has been anxious to break away from the Tiger band, but this is the first time that an offer was made for him.

LARNED-WRIGHT WIN FROM JOHNSON-WHITNEY

BOSTON, July 24.—W. A. Larned and B. C. Wright, veteran tennis masters, worked their way into the fourth round of the Eastern doubles championship at the Longwood Cricket Club's courts yesterday by disposing of H. C. Johnson and E. H. Whitney, of Boston, in four sets. The scores were 6-3, 6-3, 2-6, 6-2.

Other matches in the doubles and singles were without striking features. The all-comers' tournament for the Longwood singles was advanced to the fourth round.

MARIST GIVES UP ATHLETICS; JOE BEAN OUT

MARIST College, known as the greatest athletic prep school south of the Mason and Dixon line, has decided to give up sports.

No, don't pinch yourself. You're not asleep. It is the real cold truth.

The school has decided that it can not afford athletics, yet the very one thing that has "made" it has been athletics.

Every schoolboy in Georgia knows Marist because of its ability to win in athletics. It has been the ambition of every youngster in the State to attend the foundry of learning on Ivy street.

Joe Bean made the announcement this morning that he had been discharged. Said Joseph:

"Father Rapier called me in and told me that my services were no longer needed. I nearly strangled to death from the shock. But Father Rapier says that the school can not afford to dally in athletics any more."

Marist is no longer on the athletic map.

But one J. Bean IS. He is going to make a corking instructor for one of these other prep schools. Already he has received two offers, and will probably close for one of them within the next week or ten days.

PROMOTER LOST MONEY STAGING RITCHIE FIGHT

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 24.—Lightweight Champion Willie Ritchie is quite willing to risk his laurels again. He says he is not particular against whom he is sent, so long as the price is right.

Ritchie is not naming the sum he thinks should be paid. He wants each of the promoters to make a bid, and he will accept the highest offer made.

It is no use mentioning "percentage" to the champion. He has thrashed it all out, and has discovered that flat offers are the best.

One of the charges Billy Nolan made against the champion was that Ritchie was "money mad." Nolan meant, of course, that money occupied Ritchie's thoughts to the exclusion of other things. There is nothing about Ritchie's actions when money is in question to suggest that his mind is unbalanced.

Having received something like $18,000 from Promoter Graney for the fight on July 4, Ritchie will probably expect as much or more when he boxes again. And the chances are very much against his getting it.

The fight between Ritchie and Rivers drew something more than $29,000. As "houses" go nowadays, it was a mighty good clean-up. But not for Graney, for if he broke even he is lucky.

Ritchie Received $18,000.

It is easily enough reckoned if Ritchie got $18,000, Rivers $7,000 and it cost $1,500 to hire Coffroth's arena. Graney had little more than $2,500 to meet all the expenses of advertising and help, and the chances are he had to dig down into his jeans.

It is an object lesson for fight promoters and for such as think there is money in handling affairs of that kind. Graney worked like a beaver and used every influence he could command to advertise his show.

And when it came off the boxers received nearly 90 per cent of the takings, and the promoter found himself on the wrong side of the ledger.

This is a matter that will have to be regulated, although it is not easy to see how it will be done. As matters stand, all a champion or near champion has to do is set the promoters bidding against one another, as Ritchie is doing right now, and prices will go soaring.

"What was I to do?" said Graney. "If I had not given Ritchie what he asked some one else would have given it to him."

Graney Has Good Lesson.

Probably, now that it's all over, Graney wishes he had not stood in the way of some other promoter. Of course, Graney will be chary of offering big money to Ritchie again, and this means that there will be one fool less among the promoters.

It looks, indeed, as if this theory of paying the fighters more than they are worth—and more than they draw—will only stop when each and every promoter in the country has had his fingers burned.

Jim Flynn Gets Chance at Title

Gunboat Smith Is His Opponent

By Ed W. Smith.

IT takes a good bit of managerial skill to boost Jim Flynn, of Pueblo, up from the depths into which he had been forced through successive defeats into a real match for a real belt which is to be emblematic of the heavyweight championship of the boxing world. That skill has been shown by one J. Curley, Flynn's manager, and the Pueblo man is to get his second chance to win a title—or is it the fourth or fifth?—in a bout in New York early next month when he faces Gunboat Smith, of Philadelphia and San Francisco. And the winner will be given a belt to replace the one that went out of commission when Luther McCarty died in Alberta the latter part of May.

FLYNN'S peculiar position in the boxing world is brought to mind now and then by a dispatch from Missouri telling of the progress the boxer is making in his automobile trip from Pueblo to New York. The other day the wires bore the news that Jim had been pinched in a small town for speeding, after having had his machine repaired. Flynn ever has been a thorn in the side of the aspirants for the white title, but unfortunately for the hardy fellow from the mountains he always has just failed of getting there. Jim is a trifle too small, in the general opinion of the critics, or rather he is too short to cope successfully with the tall men of the heavyweight division.

IF many of the fight fans do not like Jim for his brash ways and the overabundance of ego that he displays constantly, they nevertheless must admire the man for his sterling fighting qualities. Gameness is Jim's middle name, and he has proved in the last four or five years to be the grandest little trial horse the ring ever has known. As a matter of fact, a man never would be thoroughly tried in the ring until he had met Jim in a real encounter. If he could get by the Pueblo ringster, his future would be pretty well assured.

* * *

AS a matter of cold fact, it was never demonstrated that the late Luther McCarty was a real fighter until he had sent Jim into a crushing defeat. Then we all knew that Luther was the real thing, a demonstration that the poor fellow strengthened a short time later by whaling the stuffin' out of Al Palzer, one of the behemoths of the ring. Flynn got his chance at McCarty out on the coast after he had demonstrated that he couldn't do much with Jack Johnson, and figured that if he had whipped Luther he would have had little trouble with Palzer, who was sent in against the winner. But McCarty proved far too big and strong and lengthy in the reach for the squatty Flynn.

IN Gunboat Smith, Flynn will meet a man much more to his own measurements, though the Gunboat is a long, rangy chap. But he hasn't the weight that most of Flynn's opponents have possessed, and for that reason Flynn believes he has a royal chance of being returned the winner. The heavyweight class is a mysteriously weak division just now, and almost anybody has a chance of dragging down the honors.

* * *

OUT in Los Angeles, where Flynn has done some of his best fighting, they like him. As a matter of fact, they like the rough, tough fellow pretty much out there without losing sight of and giving free credit for his cleverness and skill. Both Battling Nelson and Ad Wolgast, former lightweight champions, were great favorites there. So were George Memsic, Rudy Unholz, Frankie Conley, Charley Dalton, Bud Anderson and other strong boys of the ring. They like the puncher out in Tom McCarey's town, and haven't a great deal of use for the fancy boxer.

WHY PITCHERS DIE YOUNG.

"That guy is there!" the rooter cried who lingered at my side,
While Old Gil Price was going well and many a batsman died.
"That guy is there!" the rooter cried and rent the summer air,
And as another man went out he yelled: "That guy is there!"

A youth came up and smote the ball unto a distant spot.
Another youth came up and made another swat,
And when another youth came up and made another clout
The gent who sat beside me rose and hollered: "Take him out!"

Oh, would I were a hunter on the trail of ivory!
I would not hunt where elephants are roaming o'er the lea,
But I would buy a grand stand seat and take my gun in hand,
For there are tons of ivory in every baseball stand.

Ban Johnson refuses to allow Messrs. Altrock and Schaefer to work their funny stuff while games are in progress, possibly on the theory that the players perpetrate enough comic stuff under the guise of baseball.

While Jack Knight has taken a fearful slump, we are forced to admit that he was a Knight for a day. Wretch! Don't you dare to strike muh!

As we diagnose it, Heine Zimmerman has the artistic temperament in his ankle.

Fuzzy Woodruff avers that Carl Morris is underrated, thereby establishing a reputation as the World's Greatest Kidder.

Walter Thornton, who was hit on the head while earning money for a baseball magnate, is now in a padded cell. You have noticed the rush of magnates to his assistance, have you not?

It is reported that Jack Coombs will be ready for work by August. Connie Mack is preparing to sing that popular ballad entitled, "Good-by, Everybody."

J. Evers evidently labors under the impression that it is impossible to manage a ball team with R. Bresnahan trying to run it from one end and C. Murphy trying to run it from the other. The heluvitis, he can't bench C. Murphy.

THE GREATEST PLAY I EVER SAW.

It was in the eighth inning. The Gulls were one run ahead, but Hogg had begun to wabble, and the bases were filled with one out. Tommy Long stepped to the plate, fouled off two and watched three wide ones go by. The next one was low, on the inside, and Long pulled a terrific drive toward right. Robertson started the moment the ball was hit, and a youth with a large basket on his arm stepped in front of me and remarked: "Peanuts! Five a bag!"

Clarke Opens Against Billikens

Smith Orders Price to Join Club

By Joe Agler.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., July 24.—Unless Billy Smith changes his mind at the last moment those cocky Billikens will have Clarke shooting at them from the offside in the opening game of the series this afternoon. Chapman will catch.

The boys hooked the rattler out of Memphis last night, feeling pretty blue at losing the odd game to the Turtles, especially as the Billies were winning at the same time. But they packed their fighting togs and took them along, and they know one thing for certain—the Billies can't win game for game with the Crackers on this series, at least. Somebody is going to lose. And this bunch won't believe it will be the Crackers.

HARRELL was lucky yesterday in the first five innings, or we should have piled up some runs. At that, there is no accounting for the way Thompson exploded in the last two rounds. It was just one of those things that happen to the best pitchers once in awhile. And when we take a beating it might as well be a good one.

Clarke looks to me like a first-class pitcher in every way. He has everything a good pitcher needs, and after getting used to the going in this league he is bound to win a lot of ball games.

* * *

I UNDERSTAND Price has been ordered to rejoin us in Montgomery, although Billy hasn't said so outright. I hope that is the case, as he will come in mighty handy in the series, the way I see it.

POP-POPS IN RECORD RACE; 149 MILES IN TWO HOURS

NEW YORK, July 4.—Arthur Chappelle and Paul Ohne, of New York, established a new world's record for the two-hour motorcycle race when they captured the championship team race at the Brighton Beach Motordrome last night. The pair covered 149 miles and 1 lap. The former mark was 141 miles, made on the same track by Lockner and Shields last year.

Ray Veditz, of Philadelphia, and George Mercier, of New York, were second, with 146 miles and 2 laps, while Bert Sayer, of Newport, and George Sperl, of Brooklyn, rode third, with 144 miles and 2 laps. Charles Davis and Bert Fisher, the Brooklyn team, finished fourth, with 144 miles and 1 lap.

EVANS AND ALLIS TIE IN WESTERN TOURNEY TO-DAY

CHICAGO, July 24.—Interest in the amateur championship tournament of the Western Golf Association at the Homewood course to-day centered in the matches between Charles Evans, Jr., present Western champion, and E. Warren K. Wood, who came within one point of becoming champion last year, was matched with Frazer Hale to-day.

HAMMETT AND GALVAO IN WESTCHESTER FINALS

NEW YORK, July 24.—A. D. Hammett, winner of the trophy in 1911, and Maurice Galvao will meet to-day in the final round of the Westchester Country Club championship lawn tennis singles' tournament at Travers Island.

In a hotly contested three-set match yesterday Hammett defeated E. F. Leo, 6-1, 4-6, 6-2, while Galvao disposed of C. Roper in straight sets, 6-0, 6-2.

Miss Bessie Holden reached the final round in the women's singles by defeating Mrs. C. F. Porter in straight sets, 6-0, 6-2.

Red Sox Owners Are On Verge of a Split

DETROIT, MICH., July 24.—That there is a ruction imminent in the Boston American League baseball club came to light here to-day through the reported attempt made by Boston to trade Speaker and some other player for Ty Cobb. McAleer scouts the idea of any such trade. But John I. Taylor and his father, General W. S. Taylor, want to put it through over his head.

The importance of the offer lies in the indication that the Taylors are attempting to take the reins of management out of the hands of President McAleer and again become the active heads of the Boston club.

20-LB. LIMIT TO BOOST PARCEL POST HERE

Additional 1,000 Feet of Space Will Be Needed and Force Will Be Doubled.

Heads of the Railway Mail Department and United States postoffice inspectors in Atlanta have been engaged recently in an investigation to determine the extent of increased business as the direct result of the order which goes into effect August 15 increasing the limit of weight of parcel post packages from 11 to 20 pounds.

Postoffice Inspector Robert E. Barry; Mark Bunn, chief clerk of the Railway Mail Service, and G. A. Gardner, special agent from Washington, have been conducting the investigation. They declared Thursday that at the minimum to start with it would be necessary to obtain 1,000 square feet additional floor space at each terminal station to provide for the increased business.

Will Sort Mail at Terminals.

A unique system has been arranged by which all parcel post mail here after will be assorted at the terminal stations.

"Carloads of packages will now be shipped which it is impossible to assort on the roads," said Mr. Barry. "A carload of parcel post matter from Chicago or a distant point will come direct to Atlanta. Here it will be assorted at the terminal station, and as far as is possible this class of mail will hereafter travel by the carload. Parcel post carriers will receive their mail at the terminal, and thus eliminate carrying it to the postoffice.

"In the last week we have visited all the principal cities of the South where terminals will be established for this purpose. Atlanta is the largest of all Southern terminals, over sixty trains of mail of from three to eight cars each are assorted here daily.

"We have decided that at least 1,000 square feet additional floor space will be necessary to start with, but just how much more will be needed when in operation we are unable as yet to estimate.

"At every terminal the number of men now employed will be doubled. Atlanta now has ten assorting clerks. The parcel post system with its latest improvements has revolutionized the entire postal service. The benefits to be derived by the citizens of the United States are colosal."

HEAD OF MERCER TO BE LANDRUM OR O'KELLEY

Choice of University President Lies Between Louisville and Raleigh Ministers.

MACON, July 24.—The presidency of Mercer University lies between the Rev. W. W. Landrum, of Louisville, Ky., formerly of Atlanta, and the Rev. T. W. O'Kelley, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Raleigh, N. C., according to men in close touch with affairs at the institution.

The special committee appointed to choose a president has offered the office to one of sixteen ministers and educators who were under consideration, and they decline to state his name until he has either accepted or declined.

It is believed that Dr. Landrum, who is now with the Baptist Theological Seminary, is first choice, and that if he declines the place will be tendered to the Rev. Dr. O'Kelley

Guardsman Shoots Escaping Comrade

INDIANAPOLIS, July 24.—National Guardsman Walter Dowell, of Madison, Ind., is near death to-day from a bullet fired by Sergeant Edwin Ball, Company H, of Indianapolis, when Dowell attempted to escape after being arrested on suspicion of smuggling liquor into the National Guard camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison.

Ball is held by the police on a charge of assault with intent to kill, pending the result of Dowell's wound.

Butler escaped from the squad on the Kennesaw road and was recaptured in a nearby swamp. On the way to camp he broke away again. When ordered to stop he kept running. The guard fired, killing him instantly.

Carter is under arrest charged with involuntary manslaughter.

POLICE IN NORTH NAB ATLANTAN FOR THEFT

C. E. Henderson, Accused of Embezzlement From Auto Firm, Taken in Philadelphia.

C. E. Henderson, wanted in Atlanta on a charge of embezzling $600 from the Imperial Tire and Tube Company, No. 349 Peachtree street, has been arrested in Philadelphia. An Atlanta police officer will leave Thursday to bring him here.

Henderson was a salesman for the tire company. He suddenly left Atlanta six months ago and since Pinkerton detectives have been trying to locate him. They traced him to Jacksonville and to Philadelphia, and there lost the trail.

However, his father-in-law lived in Philadelphia and by shadowing him they finally caught Henderson.

Slit Skirt Wearers Safe in Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE, July 24.—Wearers of clinging skirts with a slit to the knee will not be molested here, according to Police Chief Janssen, who says it is a question of public sentiment.

"What some people brand as improper, others call all right," he said.

Millionaire Youth Works for $9 a Week

BOSTON, July 24.—Elisha S. Converse, a 19-year-old boy with a million dollars in his own name, with a 50-foot sailing boat, saddle horses and a motor car, is working as an ordinary "hand" in a rubber shoe factory. He earns $9 per week.

BLEASE IS ASKED FOR HELP BY MRS. ZACHRY

AUGUSTA, July 24.—Reports from Columbia, S. C., are that Mrs. Mary W. Zachry, of Augusta, appealed to Governor Blease yesterday to not allow her two children to be taken away from her in South Carolina, where she fled with her babies, Frances, aged 3, and Mildred, 9 months. It is understood the Governor did not commit himself.

Julian J. Zachry, the husband, was asked for a statement yesterday. He said that he had nothing to say about the kidnaping of the children by Mrs. Zachry.

Mrs. Zachry stated before leaving here that she would kill her husband or any other man who attempted to take her babies from her. She was frantic because of what she termed the law's injustice in awarding the children to Mr. Zachry's custody.

Mrs. Zachry was Miss Mary Wilcox and was Mr. Zachry's stenographer when they were married. Within a year the first child was born. It was a short time before the second child was born that an estrangement occurred.

Mrs. Zachry, it is charged, found letters alleged to show that her husband had been having secret meetings with another woman. This led to their separation, the court's order awarding the custody of the children to their father and the mother's defiance of the ruling as shown in her action in taking them to South Carolina.

Gives Luncheon to Plucky Phone Girls

Night telephone operators at the Atlanta Telephone Exchange will be served with a dainty midnight lunch Thursday night by Michael Kelliff, who is grateful for their discovery of burglars breaking into his store Tuesday night, and the quick alarm they turned in to police headquarters.

Assistant Chief Jett has shown the appreciation of the police department for the quick work of the girls, addressing them a letter of thanks. Two of three burglars were caught by the police when they answered the alarm.

COTTON DROPS AS LONGS LIQUIDATE

Bulls Unload July-August When Liverpool Sells—Weather and Crop News Bearish.

NEW YORK, July 24.—The absence of rain in Texas and Oklahoma led to a steady opening in the cotton market today. Prices were net unchanged to 5 points higher on the old crop positions and unchanged to 4 points decline on distant months. Immediately after the opening scattered buying by shorts dominated the market, resulting in prices rallying some 3 to 6 points from the initial level. Later weakness developed in the old crop positions, due chiefly to liquidation of foreign accounts. The sudden wave of liquidation of long accounts by prominent brokers, including many spot interests, found the market too thin to take the load.

The price of old crops declined in sensational manner. With declines as high as 2, 3 and 5 points between sales, July soon dropped 20 points, while August lost 31 points from the previous close.

The weakness in the old crops had little effect on the new crop months, which only declined 3 to 6 points. It is now believed that a large short interest is existing in later positions.

The Government made additions to the weather maps, showing some rains overnight in Oklahoma and good prospects for more general rains in Texas and Oklahoma during the next 48 hours. The official records show temperature average in Oklahoma is 98 degrees and in Texas from 100 to 106 degrees. This brought active selling by those who purchased on the early map, failing to show rains in the West, and prevented a sharp advance in new crops, which was evident during the late forenoon. Late positions sympathized with the decline in old months.

Sentiment regarding the cotton market continues bearish and if further rains should come, which are predicted, a further decline should be looked for. It is purely a weather market and will be governed accordingly.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, July 24.—The map shows fair weather in central and south Texas and the Carolinas; cloudy elsewhere; some showers in northwest Texas and Oklahoma. Good rains in Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Tennessee and western Georgia. There are indications for rain in north Texas and Oklahoma and further showers in the central States; clearing in the Atlantics. Temperatures in north Texas rose as usual before a rainy spell and the weather is cooler.

Liverpool was poor at the first, but rallied on an unfavorable report on west Texas from a prominent traveling crop reporter. The report merely showed the need of rain, which need is about to be filled.

There was some buying here at the opening on Cordill's report, but the conspicuous weakness of August in New York, suggesting hedge selling, and a Government forecast for showers and thunderstorms and cooler in north Texas, soon caused easiness. October selling first to 11.37, later to 11.32.

Cuero, Texas, received four new bales to-day. Overnight rain in Oklahoma was shown on the Government official records.

The into-sight for the week looks around 30,000, against 30,428 bales last year. Mill takings last year for this week were 174,000. A favorable comparison is looked for.

COTTON GOSSIP

The leading feature of the market today was the weakness of August, which was said to be on selling by Liverpool undoing straddles, and liquidation in that month by scattered longs. Local professionals sold yesterday on predictions of rains over Western belt and the failure of rains to materialize, causing covering this morning, and prevented new crop from sympathizing more with the decline in the old. It is purely a weather market. Crop reports continue good and rains just now where they are needed would naturally increase the bearish feeling.—J. M. Anderson.

"I can not help but feel that the Government condition report will be bullish. A large crop of cotton is needed, with all information that I can get, I believe in higher prices before any material decline, and unless weather conditions show a great improvement in the next few weeks, cotton will sell much higher."—S. Tate.

* * *

The absence of rain in Texas was the incentive for buying around the opening. The feeling is that there were large lines of longs liquidated. Mitchell was apparently the best buyer on the advance, but later sold August. Wilson and Schill also sold August.

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas—Panhandle, cloudy in the south, clear in the west, partly cloudy; no rain. Oklahoma—Partly cloudy."

NEW ORLEANS, July 24.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map is favorable. It shows fair over the Carolinas and Central and South Texas. Cloudy over the rest of the belt. Fine rains in Arkansas, Central States, Alabama, Tennessee, parts of Georgia, and some showers in Northwest Texas yesterday and last night. Indications are more pronounced for more extensive rains in North Texas and Oklahoma. Showery weather in the central belt.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Liverpool reported smaller spot sales. Manchester cabled that cloths were dull and yarns hard to sell. The weather map revealed splendid rains east of the Mississippi River and the map reads unsettled conditions over the greater part of Texas. With these factors as a starter, the American ring prepared for a price recession on the day's trading and scored one in the natural course of events. July New Orleans again held the center of the stage, because all of the trailers on the long side had not liquidated. The result was a further sharp readjustment, LI which the spot article played a part.

"The talent as a whole now seems satisfied the crop is progressing toward a large yield. Rains in Texas in the near future will go a long way toward confirming such a belief. In that State, dry, hot weather has probably done far more good in the destruction of weevils than harm to the plant, which, as a rule, possesses a sturdy tap root and is well limbed.

"In recent years the Texas farmer has profited by the Government's experiments and has steadily improved his cultural methods."

Grain Notes

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "It was the gossip of the wheat trade last night that as long as the export business continues large prices are not likely to decline a great deal, if any, from present levels. In the last three days export sales aggregate more than 2,000,000 bushels, mostly hard winter.

"Corn continues to be a weather market."

Bartlett Frazier & Co.: "Wheat—We look for a comparatively narrow market.

"Corn—We are inclined to feel that anxious longs have liquidated and that the market should rule fairly steady today.

"Oats—As in corn, there was good deal of liquidation yesterday and considerable short selling by locals. Threshing returns on the whole continue to show poor out-turns.

"Provisions—Pork is holding steady. Shipments of lard and meats continue to exceed those of last year."

B. W. Snow wires from Fargo, N. D.: "Wheat cutting has begun in Northern counties. Crop through Grant and Roberts Counties above average in South part of Red River Valley; harvest will begin next week. Occasional plant with black rust can be found in nearly any field, but nothing more than is present each year. Weather and plant growth to date make it practically certain there would be no serious outbreak. Lots of wheat seen to-day will make 30 and 35 bushels and both Whetstone and Red Valleys will make better than average."

Rainfall and temperature: Canadian Northwest clear, 47 to 68; Minnesota, 01; Northwest, 50 to 60, clear; West, 55 to 65, part cloudy; Davenport, .04; Peoria, .02; Chicago, .11; Southwest, 62 to 82, part cloudy; Dodge City, .01; Kansas City, .60; Springfield, Mo., raining, 03; St. Louis, .12; Ohio Valley, cloudy, 70 to 74; Indianapolis, 12; Evansville, .42; Cincinnati, .15, raining.

INVESTORS' BUYING SENDS STOCKS UP

Strength of Coppers and Steel Has Stimulating Effect—Situation Getting Better.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 24.—Although news developments were of a favorable character, price movements were generally to lower levels at the opening of the stock market to-day. The copper stocks failed to respond to improved trade conditions, Amalgamated yielding ½ to 68¾ and about the same amount of loss was sustained in Reading and Union Pacific. New Haven declined ¾ to 99½, a new low record for the present movement.

Speculative liquidation caused a loss of a point in American Can. Canadian Pacific was off ¾; Mexican Petroleum, ⅝; American Smelting ws up ½, and Southern Pacific ¼. Selling pressure against Canadian Pacific was evident in the London market, where trading was irregular. American railway shares held above par, however.

The curb was steady.

The tone after the first few minutes bettered itself and was noticed especially in the copper shares and in several of the industrials. Amalgamated Copper advanced early one point to 69¼, and strength prevailed in New Haven, which recovered its early loss, selling again above 100. Fractional improvements were noted in Canadian Pacific, Steel, Reading, Union Pacific and Missouri Pacific. The tone a few minutes before midday continued strong. Call money loaning at 2¼.

STOCK GOSSIP

It is announced that the shareholders of the New Haven would be summoned to hold a special meeting on August 22 to authorize an issue of $67,552,400 20-year 6 per cent debentures with a convertible privilege. The new bonds will be convertible into stock at the rate of one share of stock for each $100 debenture at any time between 1918 and 1928.

* * *

The most important of the maturing obligations of the New Haven is the $40,000,000 of one-year 5 per cent notes sold last November and falling due December 1. These notes were issued for returning and equipment purposes. Next February the New Haven will have to redeem $5,000,000 of 4 per cent debentures. President Mellen said that the balance would be fresh capital to complete the electrification of the road and for equipment and improvements.

The New York Financial Bureau says: "The foreign situation is showing improvement. A. C. P. sells ex-div. tomorrow. Information channels are disposed to favor a trading position."

The stock market may be inclined to be reactionary this morning, but do not expect more than a moderate recession. Would buy stocks on any weakness. The copper situation looks as if the metal would sell higher and as if A. C. P. and the balance of coppers would advance.—T. D. Potter.

What You Can't Do NOW, You Can Never Do.

There Is No Such Thing as a To-morrow That Is to Do Wonders. To-morrow Means NEVER. It Is a Word of Failure.

(Copyright, 1913.)

Don't plan for anything to-morrow, unless you ARE WORKING AT THAT THING TO-DAY.

A picture on this page shows you one of a million young men who say "I will make a start to-morrow."

There is no such start, there is no such to-morrow.

If you can't work to-day, you can't work to-morrow.

If you can't begin the thing to-day, you can NEVER begin it.

To-morrow is a word that in every language means NEVER. It means self-deception, disappointment, idleness, lack of purpose.

When a thought comes to you, get at it.

Don't say to yourself, "I will do that sometime; perhaps to-morrow."

Make a note of the idea, think it over, plan for it, BEGIN IT.

If you can't start it now, you never can do it.

The thing to do is to work to-day, and to keep working to-morrow and every other day.

Keep your mind on to-day, devote the hours of to-day TO THE WORK OF TO-DAY.

Then when to-day's working hours are over, and you have actually done all that you can in those hours of work, permit yourself, if you choose, to think of plans and dreams for the future.

There is not a young man in the country without some good idea, some good plan, some earnest hope in his mind.

But the curse of a million is, that the plan, the idea, is to take form and become real TO-MORROW.

Get away from that to-morrow habit.

You need not take literally the advice, "Live as though this were to be your last day." A man who starts a house must believe that he has days in which to finish it.

The thing to do IS TO START THE HOUSE TO-DAY, and let the to-morrows take care of their work.

We print this picture because it seems, in the attitude of the man sitting under the tree, to typify the attitude of a great many American young men, and to give a needed rebuke.

If you are sitting like this boy, with your arms folded, your feet together and your head down, jump up, throw back your shoulders, take a long breath, and start now up that hill that leads to success.

Pity this poor "futurist" of failure. He is the futurist of to-morrow, the futurist of the plan that will never become real action. He is as dismal a failure in his way as those poor so-called "futurists" who invented what they call a new style of art, and have only succeeded in being unusually hideous.

Don't BAKE Your Baby-- Many Mothers Do It

Hese Is Common Sense Advice from the Chicago Health Department. Read It. Profit by It.

Copyright, 1913.

There are too many "BAKED" babies in this world. Everywhere you see unfortunate little babies suffering with the heat, dressed in woolen or in stiff, starched clothing that adds to their sorrow, babies better suited to the arctic regions than to a hot summer day in a hot city.

Many mothers need the advice which is given and reproduced here. The two pictures are from a bulletin issued by the Chicago Health Department.

This little tot is comfortable and happy when the Summer days are hot. He is dressed right to stand the heat.

This unhappy little codger is all fussed up and as a result he is hot and uncomfortable. He is dressed wrong for hot days.

THE BABY IN SUMMERTIME.

A baby can be more comfortable in hot weather than an adult, but few of them are.

The pernicious and senseless habit of dressing a baby in flannels and endless frills and fancies on hot summer days is such a common practice among mothers of certain nationalities that scores of babies are literally baked to death during the summer months.

During the very hot weather babies should wear only a diaper and a thin gauze shirt. If under six months of age, an abdominal binder of thin flannel and light-knitted booties may be worn, these being advisable only when ordered by your doctor.

These few clothes are all that are needed, but they must be kept clean, soiled garments being promptly removed.

Never replace a used diaper on a baby without first washing it. Wetted or soiled diapers must be washed with as little delay as possible, using hot water in which a little soda has been dissolved. Rinse well and see that they are perfectly dry before using again.

All clothing should be loose and so adjusted as to permit free motion of the legs and arms. Never put starched, stiff or uncomfortable clothes on a baby.

Having dressed your baby correctly, now see that you place the child where it will get fresh outdoor air. Put it in a shaded place on the porch and cover its resting place with mosquito netting to prevent flies from annoying and possibly infecting it. Never keep a baby in the kitchen when you are cooking or washing. When the child must be in the house keep it near an open window in the cleanest and coolest room.

In very hot weather give your baby a sponge bath two or three times a day, using lukewarm water in which a little salt has been dissolved, or you may use a little alcohol instead of the salt. Never give these baths immediately after feeding; better give them before feeding. Take especial care to cleanse the body creases and dry thoroughly. If you use talcum powder be sure it is the best and the unscented kind.

Rational dressing, fresh air and cleanliness will do much to keep your baby in good physical condition and will go a long ways toward enabling it to survive the summer dangers.

Demain, Morgen, Manana, Domani

All these words mean the same thing. They mean TO-MORROW, and they mean FAILURE.

This young man says, "I'll make a start to-morrow." And he never starts. There are a million like him sitting, waiting for the "to-morrow" that never comes. (SEE EDITORIAL.)

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Culture

Women, No Matter How Highly Accomplished They May Be, She Says, Lack Real Culture if They Allow Evil Temper, Evil Speaking, Selfishness and Uncharitableness to Grow Into Their Nature.

Written for The Atlanta Georgian

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

PERHAPS there is no word more frequently misused than the word Culture.

We often hear a woman spoken of as highly cultured.

But in what does her culture consist?

She may speak several languages; she may play several instruments; she may be able to talk understandingly of the arts and sciences; she may know much of the customs of many lands, but still she may LACK REAL CULTURE.

If she is allowing the weeds of evil temper, evil speaking, selfishness and uncharitableness to grow in her nature, she is not cultured.

That always means that the earth of that land is carefully tilled and that every weed is removed; every ugly thing banished, and every beautiful and useful and valuable thing is fertilized, dug about, encouraged and helped to grow.

So it is with the mind.

A Cultivated Person.

Unless ungracious and unlovely traits are removed, and all the virtues cultivated, mere education which comes from books and travel and the possession of money can never make a cultured person.

What constitutes a cultivated personality? What is it that uplifts character and beautifies conduct?

The answer to both questions can be found in the advice Buddha gave his pupils five hundred years before Christ was born: "Do nothing to another that you would not have done to you," and by Christ's improved rendition of the motto: "Do unto others as you would that they should do to you."

There is no higher phase of culture, and there is nothing which beautifies conduct and character like the practical and perpetual use of the Golden Rule in daily life.

The majority of people regard the keeping of the Ten Commandments as a literal fulfillment of that rule's obligations; but one who contemplates its entire meaning realizes that it applies to every trivial act of daily life and necessitates culture as well as morality.

The loud, jarring voice, the uncontrolled temper, the neglect of bodily cleanliness and disregard of dress—all these things break the Golden Rule, because they are not what we would wish others to do; therefore, we have no right to do them.

A "cultivated personality" includes cleanliness, neatness, a certain conformation to the customs of the day, or of art, in dress; a well modulated voice, an attentive manner in listening to others, a well poised body, a direct and easy carriage and walk, and a pleasant, agreeable expression of countenance.

Haughty, Cold Demeanor.

The haughty, disdainful and cold demeanor is incompatible with culture.

Only the vulgarian with an outward veneer of polish, "puts on airs." The really cultured, like the really great souls of earth, are always affable and simple and natural.

That quality which most uplifts and beautifies character is consideration of others and obeyance of one's own highest instincts.

The man who is considerate of his fellow men pays his debts promptly, does not endeavor to "beat" his neighbor in a bargain, does not haggle over prices, and is tolerant of others' political and religious ideas.

He is kind and affectionate in his family, appreciative of his wife and children, and patient and thoughtful with those in his employ.

All these homely virtues "uplift and beautify character." Without them the most heroic and brilliant deeds can not make an admirable human being.

"Cultivated Personality."

The woman who wishes to possess a "cultivated personality" and a beautiful character must keep her engagements, pay her social and financial obligations, shun gossip and harsh criticism, suit her dress and her amusements to her income, keep her home orderly and attractive, and herself a pleasure to the eye, ear and heart.

The path to character building is a long one; there is no short cut.

It requires continual watchfulness, continual self-control, to travel that path.

But it is a way which grows more beautiful, and the world seems more interesting and life sweeter each year as we advance, when the goal of a beautiful character is our aim.

Vocational Training Applied

By THOMAS TAPPER.

A FEUDIST is a gentleman with a gun on the lookout for another similarly equipped. He who shoots first lives longest.

Two horsemen riding over a mountain road in the Cumberlands came to an obstruction. They jumped down, picked it up and tossed it to one side.

The obstruction was a man who had been put out of business by a blow on the head with the butt of a gun.

When he came to he crept up among the trees and had it out with himself. Then he crawled back home cautiously. After a day or two he disappeared.

For ten months he went to school. After a while he added seven other months to these ten.

Equipped with seventeen months' education, he became the president of a college.

One day when his schooling was over he called a meeting of the feudists in the Cumberlands. One group sat, sullen and armed, at his right. Their enemies, just as sullen and as well armed, sat at his left.

He made a plea to them for the sake not of themselves, but of their children; a plea to give the little ones a chance to learn something, to forget the enmity of the feud spirit, and to be able to go out from the mountains as useful men and women.

It was a new idea to these feud followers, but the man's eloquence prevailed to the extent that the two leaders of the clans arose and shook hands.

With a bit of land and fifty dollars the man began to build the college with his own hands. There were plenty of heartaches and discouragements, but no want of trust. Then the college began to be a real thing, visible to the eyes of men.

That was ten or twelve years ago. To-day the college educates about six hundred people annually. Little children, young men and women, fathers and mothers come from all parts of the mountains, eager to get an education.

The man who has done all this has never taken a penny in pay. He does his work as a distributer, and therefore has no need to take an anxious thought.

Thirty cents a day will bring one of these mountain people to the college and will pay for board, lodging and education. Less than sixteen cents a day will pay for it all if the farm about the school can supply the student with an opportunity to work to the extent of fourteen cents.

The man who has done all this is J. A. Burns, of Oneida, Kentucky.

He was one of the first to see that the mountain problem was to be met only by the most practical form of Vocational Training, and and he has given a living demonstration of the truth of his idea.

He saw clearly that not only did these people need knowledge, but that they needed the kind of knowledge which they could apply in the daily work of their hands.

And he has wrought a remarkable transformation among them.

Educate a human being to do work well, to take pleasure in the doing of it, and efficiency is established.

What Dame Fashion Is Offering

For the Season.

ILLUSTRATED on the left-hand side is an attractive cornflower blue charmeuse gown very suitable for wearing at Hurlingham or Ranelagh. The skirt drapery is graceful, the charmeuse being combined with velvet-embroidered voile de soie. The sleeves are long, the wrists and neck being finished with lace frills. The central figure is carried out in a striking effect of blue and gold brocade. Lace falls from the high waist line to the center of the skirt and meets with the draped folds of the skirt. The corsage is of white lace over white chiffon. Japonica colored charmeuse is used for the right-hand model and makes a very useful gown for afternoon wear. The long sleeves are put into the shoulders with a piping; the cuffs are finished with five small buttons, the same decoration in a larger size being carried out on the bodice and skirt.

The charmeuse and ruffles are of white tulle.

One Woman's Story

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER VIII.

PRIDE and an instinctive stoicism kept Mary Danfroth's pale face impassive as she listened to her father's agitated announcement. An iron hand seemed to be gripping her throat and stifling her. She steadied herself and faced her parents as she drew away from her father's encircling arm. He still held the paper in his trembling hand. Beside him was his wife, aghast and silent, her thin fingers nervously twisting the handkerchief she held.

The girl spoke quietly and steadily: "Mr. Craig may not have been hurt, you know," she reminded her father. "The first reports of accidents are often exaggerated."

She turned away and went down the hall to her own room, closing her door behind her. She took off her hat and put it away, then lifted the books from her dressing table, on which she had just laid them, and arranged them on her desk. All these actions she performed with care, yet she moved as in a dream. She stood, looking about her as if searching for some other duty to perform, but, finding nothing, suddenly flung herself on her bed and lay there, silent, staring wide-eyed into the gathering dusk.

At the end of a half hour her mother knocked timidly at the door.

"May I come in, Mary?" she asked in a low voice. "Are you asleep?"

The girl drew herself to a sitting posture on the edge of her bed.

"Come in, mother," she said, dully. "No, I haven't been asleep. I was just lying down and—thinking."

"The parent laid a cool hand on her daughter's forehead.

"Poor little girl!" she murmured. "Poor little girl! I know this news was a terrible shock to you."

Mary stirred irritably under her mother's touch. "Of course, it was a shock," she said coldly. "It is always terrible to hear of accidents of that kind." She paused, then steeled herself to utter what she would not acknowledge was a deliberate falsehood. "But I have been thinking it might have been much worse. Suppose there had been on that train someone whom we really cared for."

Mrs. Danforth looked in silence at the speaker; then, bending over, kissed her and left the room. Mary sat for a moment longer motionless on the side of her bed. Then she bowed her face upon her hands and closed her eyes.

Dinner that night was a dismal affair. The gloom of the accident oppressed all minds. Mr. Danforth was nervous and talked of nothing but the wreck, inveighing against the carelessness of the railroad officials, the indifference corporations showed for human life, and explaining how the disaster might have been avoided—dwelling on the subject until Mary felt as if she could bear it no longer.

When the meal was at last over, Mary, remarking briefly that she must go back to her studying, went to her own room again. Her parents remained at the table, chatting, while the man of the house smoked his post prandial cigar.

"I am glad that Mary doesn't take this news any more deeply to heart," remarked the father with masculine obtuseness. "I was afraid that she was beginning to think too much of Craig and that if he was hurt or killed it must break her all up."

His wife shook her head with the scorn that a woman always shows for a man's lack of perception.

"She feels it more than she knows herself," she remarked enigmatically.

"Bosh!" exclaimed Mr. Danforth. "Mary isn't the kind to keep such a trouble as that to herself. Of course se liked the chap—and she is distressed to think that he may have been injured, or—worse. But you told me yesterday that you fancied she was beginning to care a good deal for him. She wouldn't be so calm if she did. She regards him only as a pleasant acquaintance."

In her own room Mary bent over her books and tried to study. She attacked the preparation for to-morrow's recitations with a determination to banish all other matters from her mind. "Anything to keep from thinking!" she whispered to herself. "This suspense is awful—but it may be better than to know the truth." A lump of ice seemed to be pressing upon her heart, but she worked on.

It was late when she extinguished her light, yet dawn was graying her windowpanes before she fell into a troubled slumber.

Her eyes were heavy when he dragged herself into the dining room that morning. Her father was opening the morning paper which lay beside his plate. With a sickening contraction of her throat the girl watched him scan the first page of the sheet. Suddenly he started to his feet.

"Hear this!" he exclaimed, excitedly, "'Texan Hero of Railroad Wreck; Gordon Craig Rescues Three Women From Burning Pullman; Is Himself Unhurt!'"

Mrs. Danforth uttered a low cry of alarm, and at the sound the reader dropped his paper and sprang forward. Mary had slipped quietly from her chair to the floor. She had fainted.

The parents' eyes met in a significant look as they both bent over the prostrate girl.

"I told you so!" said the mother gravely.

To Make a Hit With Women

By Dorothy Dix

A LOVELORN youth writes me a pathetic letter saying that he is persona non grata with the fair sex, that girls do not care for his society, and the ungrateful minxes turn their backs upon him and talk to other men in the very instant they are devouring the candy he brought them, and wearing the violets on which he squandered his good money. This state of affairs greatly distresses him, and he wants to know why he isn't popular, and how he may become a winner with women.

Let us see if we can help him.

Women differ from men in this respect, that looks do not count. It does not matter whether a man is handsome or not. Indeed, very few women care for beauty in the opposite sex. It is a poaching on their own preserves that they resent. Also it requires them to became flatterers instead of the flattered, for the vanity of the vainest woman that ever lived is as water unto wine compared to the vanity of a man who is a living picture, and who knows it—and expects to be told of it.

It is worth bearing in mind that almost without exception the men who were the great heart smashers of history were not only plain of face, but some of them grotesquely hideous. So no man need despair on account of his lack of pulchritude when he wants to take a hand at the game of hearts.

He Should Shave.

But where mere regularity of features in a man counts for little in attracting a woman's fancy, a man should pay much attention to his clothes and his grooming. Nothing on earth, but the grace of God, keeps a woman in love with a man with a two days' stubble of dirty beard on his face. Married women stand this because they can't help themselves; but no girl wants a slovenly, untidy man, who looks as if he needed to be run through the laundry, hanging about her. All the knocking about the word "dude" comes from masculine lips. No woman joins in that chorus. On the contrary, she feels that the man who comes into her presence ill-clothed, dirty, neglected looking, not only shows disrespect for her, but indicates that he lacks judgment, industry and progressiveness. For that is exactly what being ill-dressed now means.

Another thing that women like, and it is an attraction that any man can acquire, is a certain savoir faire that makes him equal to any situation. A woman likes a man to know how to offer her a chair, to help her on with her wraps, to order a little dinner. And she hates with unspeakable loathing the fellow who is always making scenes in public, who gets in rows with the theater usher over a mistake about the seats, or the street car conductor about the change, or who sits up like a graven image of wrath every time anybody drops in while he is calling.

"Chump," says the girl to herself, "he hasn't got enough sense to know only the ignorant have to fight to get their rights."

Women like generous men, but even girls have a contempt for men who spend more than they can afford. It is not the youths who waste all their substance on bonbons and theater tickets and violets who are the most popular with the fair sex. Every girl has what she calls her "candy beau," but she seldom marries him. The best way to touch a girl's heart is not by upsetting her digestion.

An important point to remember here is that the man who would curry favor by means of gifts must give discreetly. A woman would rather have a present that cost 5 cents if it represented some especial taste or fancy of hers than one that cost $50 if it was something that had no personal significance.

Don't Be a Clam.

In conversation, cultivate a happy medium. Be neither a continuous monologue performer nor yet a clam. Before you take the floor and devote hours to expatiating on how you can keep books or play ping-pong or take snapshots, be sure the girl is really interested in you. After a woman is in love, she can sit entranced for days listening to a man tell about the kind of collar button he wears, but if she isn't in love, a steady stream of personal reminiscences gets on her nerves, and she wants a change. Besides she desires to talk about herself.

For pity's sake, though, help out with the conversation. From the time a girl is old enough to understand anything she is taught that her chief end in life is to entertain man, and everywhere you go you can see her conscientiously at work trying to do it. Every mother's daughter of us knows what it is to labor, and perspire, and toil, trying to make conversation with some man who is just as unresponsive as a store dummy and as silent as the Sphinx. It isn't a fair division of labor, and if a man wants to see true gratitude let him chip in and help roll the conversation ball along.

"Be bold, be bold, be not too bold." Women hate a timid man, and they despise the one who takes it for granted that he has only to throw the handkerchief to have every girl scramble for it.

Learn how to pay compliments as if you mean them. Don't apply flattery with a trowel. Few women are fools. Don't tell a woman the first time you see her she is the ideal you have been seeking for many years. Seven hundred other idiots have told her that before.

Don't quote sentimental poetry to a girl. It always makes her want to giggle.

Don't give in too much to a woman. If she has good sense she won't want you to sacrifice your taste or principles, and, if she is unreasonable, she will respect you for mastering her.

Finally, beloved—and if you forget all the rest remember this—don't stay too long when you go to call. More men queer themselves right here than they do anywhere else. No living human being is entertaining for more than 30 minutes at a time or endurable for more than two hours at a stretch. In that time every man can say everything he has got to say worth hearing, and if he lingers along until the clock begins to yawn in his face, he is simply defying fate and inviting disaster. Many a good impression is spoiled by too much of it.

And when you get up to go, go as if you were fired out of a gun. Don't linger for tender farewells and last words. Most girls wear shoes three sizes too small for them, and when a man keeps one standing on the doorstep while he makes his adieus she isn't saying, like Juliet: "I could say good-by, good-by, 'til it be morning." On the contrary, she is regretting that all the stories about papa's boot and the swift waft out are fiction instead of fact, and she would be willing to pay out good money to anybody who would accelerate Romeo's descent of the steps.

Of course, no general rules can be laid down for winning the fancy of the fair sex. What has been said pretends to be no more than the most elementary facts, but a guarantee goes with each suggestion that it will work.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

I HAVEN'T quite made up my mind yet whether Bobbie shud lern a trade or a professhun, sed Ma to Pa yesterday. Sumtimes I think it wud be nice if he cud lern a trade, & aggenn I think a trade is kind of commonplace. A professhun is so professhunal, sumhow, so distinguished, sed Ma.

I guess there are a lot of yung lawyers in the big cities that doant see anything vary professhunal about a professhun, sed Pa. If I were a yung man aggenn, Pa sed, I wud a lot rather work steddy at a trade than profess at a professhun. Bobbie, what do you want to be?

I toald Pa thare was three things & I dident know wich one of the three I wanted to be the moast, a pitcher like Dent, or a elevator boy, or a poet.

Pitchers and poets are born, not made, sed Pa, & a elevator boy isent any kind of job for you wen you grow up. If I thought you cud be a post like me or a pitcher like Dent, sed Pa, I wud tell you by all means go ahed & try to be one or the other, but thare ain't many Dents & thare ain't many me's, sed Pa.

Dear me, sed Ma, & wen did you beecum grate?

Dident I rite that poem that I red at the bankwet the other nite wen I was toastmaster, sed Pa, and dident all the men thare say that it was the work of a geenyus?

The men was kind of enthused too much, I guess, sed Ma. I guess that a certain amount of champagne will make men stand for almost anything in liter-ature. Doant talk to me about that poem, sed Ma. If you call that art, you are a blacksmith. I found two of the verses in yure coat pocket after the bankwet, Ma sed, & I must say that you are no Milton.

I tell you the poem met with grate applause, sed Pa.

& you remember what I jest toald you about champane, sed Ma. Bobbie, she sed to me, if you think this is good poetry, you are a chip of the old block. Listen:

All brethren we stand together to-nite
Where all the lites are shining brite.
Met here in friendship's strong embrace
We can look each other in the face
& know that all of us is men,
Wich is a good thing now & then.
The world needs men like us to fight
For truth & the eternal right
& the reason eech one of us thrives
& supports ourselfs and our wives
Is beekaus of that brain power we possess
That is the cause of our grate success.
So all of us brethren gathered here
Have little if anything to fear,
Jest so we keep on working hard
& continued success will be our reward.

Now, Bobbie, sed Ma, I want you to be a honest littel boy. If you had yure choice between beeing a elevator boy & that kind of a poet, wich wud you be?

I wud be a elevator boy, I toald Ma. The hours is easier.

Superfluous Hair Truths

Stop Experimenting

There are but few depilatories sold. You think there are hundreds because you have used the same identical preparations under several different names. This is easily explained. Women stop using

So-Called Hair Removers

when they learn that they are harmful. Therefore, they can not be sold under the same name for any length of time. Then the identical, worthless, harmful concoctions are given new names and advertised again as totally different preparations to who innocently buy them over and over again under different names, and this will continue as long as women are so unwise as to experiment with unknown, so-called hair removers.

De Miracle

Has Stood the Test of Time

De Miracle has been sold as De Miracle for over eleven years, and its name has never been changed. It is acknowledged the world over by eminent authorities as the one safe, perfected hair remover, therefore it is the only depilatory you can use without experimenting.

Leaves No Tell-Tale Smell

If you use De Miracle it will be impossible for any curious person to know that you have used a hair remover because De Miracle evaporates immediately after accomplishing its work, therefore leaves no odor whatever. On the other hand, if you use any depilatory with a distinctive odor, an offensive, tell-tale smell will cling to your skin for hours.

Avoid Permanent Disfigurement

by refusing substitutes. If your dealer will not supply you send $1.00 direct. Free information how to determine which depilatories are harmful and worthless sent in plain, sealed envelope.

MIKE FINN WILL REMAIN AT HELM OF MOBILE CREW

MOBILE, July 23.—Mike Finn will remain as manager of the Mobile Baseball Club.

Such was the announcement of President Alfred Staples following a meeting of the directors of the Mobile club. "The trouble has been adjusted satisfactorily to everybody concerned," he said, "and Mr. Finn remains as manager of the club."

Further than the announcement that "matters has been settled satisfactorily to all concerned," President Staples would not go into the case, but from a reliable source, it is understood that Mike Desmond, employed at the ball park in the capacity of special officer, had tendered his resignation. It is understood that he took his action, following Manager Finn's statement that he would resign, rather than cause the club officials any embarrassment.

Manager Finn would not discuss the outcome of the case when seen, but stated that only one thing in connection with the entire affair had caused him any regret, and that was the statement that he had "insulted the Hibernians." The Gull leader denied that he ever offered offense to the Hibernians of any other organization of any kind in Mobile, and states that he has never made any remark that could be construed as an insult to any organization.

"Mike, you're too good an Irishman, yourself, to talk about the Hibernians; are you not?" he was asked.

"Sure," he responded, "and to tell the truth, I've made up my mind to join the Hibernians."

The announcement that Mike Finn will remain at the head of the club means that the players will hustle as they have in the past to keep the club in the running, and no one was more pleased when definite announcement was made that he would stay than the players now working for the Mobile club under him.

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

Leach Cross has the California "bug." He says that if he succeeds in defeating Matty Baldwin next week and it matched with either Willie Ritchie or Joe Rivers, he will try to arrange to practice his profession of dentistry in Los Angeles. He will have considerable idle time on his hands between bouts, and thinks he can do well.

Reports from the coast state that Tom McCarey is still awaiting word from Abe Attell in regard to a match with Jack White. There is some question in regard to the weight at which the two will box, and a wire from Abe will settle that question definitely.

* * *

Jack Payne is the latest to hurl a challenge at Eddie Hanlon. Payne says he will agree to box Eddie at catchweights.

* * *

George Mason, Baltimore lightweight, who fought here about two months ago, is making a big hit in Memphis. Promoters there are trying to secure Johnny Lore to meet him some time in August.

* * *

Terry Nelson is far from discouraged over his defeat at the hands of Eddie Hanlon. Terry says that the latter outweighed him by nearly ten pounds, and will gladly meet Hanlon in another match, providing the latter will make 135 pounds.

* * *

Tom O'Rourke is now managing Carl Morris. O'Rourke hopes to send the Sapulpa heavyweight against the winner of the Flynn-Smith match scheduled to take place at New York on August 8.

* * *

Al Palzer is another heavyweight who is seeking a ring encounter. Palzer is at present in New York doing light work in an effort to get into fighting shape.

* * *

Jimmy Murphy, the Chicago lightweight, who recently stopped Danny Goodman, is anxious to come to Atlanta. Murphy would like to get on with either Eddie Hanlon, Mike Saul or Terry Nelson. Murphy also met Joe Thomas in an eight-round battle.

* * *

There are four brothers in the White family—Charlie and Jack fight best when weighing around the 126 mark; Billy Wagner, the youngest of the bunch, is best at 133, while Battling White can easily make 116 pounds ringside.

* * *

Mike Schreck signed articles yesterday to meet Dick Gilbert at the Valley Athletic Club in Elmwood on August 18. Schreck will go to West Baden, Ind., for a stay of two weeks before the scrap.

* * *

Johnny Creeley and "Knockout" Mars will don the gloves for a scheduled ten-round contest at New York on Thursday night. They have agreed to weigh 133 pounds at 3 o'clock.

The Shades of Night Were Falling Fast

BOXERS CLAMOR FOR CHANCE AT RITCHIE'S TITLE

LOS ANGELES, July 24.—And still they come! With enough boxers here to stage a carnival of fistic revels lasting until Christmas and managers and promoters clamoring over each others shoulders for a chance at a date and a trunk full of coin it appears that the end is not yet.

Joe Woodman is clamoring for dates for his two proteges, Sam Langford and Jack Read, the Australian lightweight champion, and bids fair to make a landing.

Ad Wolgast also wants to be remembered. He is right on the ground to press his claim with Champion Willie Ritchie for an early match. He figures that since Rivers lost out in his match on July 4 he is in direct line for another match in preference to the Mexican, and probably his bout at the Vernon arena would be a good card.

ANOTHER challenger of Ritchie is Jimmy Duffy, whose record during the past year certainly gives him some right to consideration. His manager, Bert Finch, writes that Duffy is willing to meet any lightweight in the country, with an expressed preference for Ritchie, Freddie Welch, Leach Cross or Joe Rivers.

Finch says that if Ritchie will concede Duffy a match for the championship he will post $5,000 as a side bet that Duffy will defeat him in twenty rounds and that he can fix the terms for the division of the purse to suit himself.

In May of last year Duffy fought a ten-round bout to a draw with Freddie Welch and has defeated Leach Cross twice, once in New York and once in Buffalo.

"DUMB DAN" MORGAN, the "speechless" wonder from New York, has issued a statement offering to match Jack Britton with Champion Ritchie for a side bet of 10,000. There is no mention made in the letter of whether it is 10,000 ligars or 10,000 toothpirks. He says this would be a real test for the champion and that Britton will box at any weight that suits the "champion."

Jim Flynn Gets Chance at Title
Gunboat Smith Is His Opponent

By Ed W. Smith.

IT takes a good bit of managerial skill to boost Jim Flynn, of Pueblo, up from the depths into which he had been forced through successive defeats into a real match for a real belt which is to be emblematic of the heavyweight championship of the boxing world. That skill has been shown by one J. Curley, Flynn's manager, and the Pueblo man is to get his second chance to win a title—or is it the fourth or fifth?—in a bout in New York early next month when he faces Gunboat Smith, of Philadelphia and San Francisco. And the winner will be given a belt to replace the one that went out of commission when Luther McCarty died in Alberta the latter part of May.

* * *

FLYNN'S peculiar position in the boxing world is brought to mind now and then by a dispatch from Missouri telling of the progress the boxer is making in his automobile trip from Pueblo to New York. The other day the wires bore the news that Jim had been pinched in a small town for speeding, after having had his machine repaired. Flynn ever has been a thorn in the side of the aspirants for the white title, but unfortunately for the hardy fellow from the mountains he always has just failed of getting there. Jim is a trifle too small, in the general opinion of the critics, or rather he is too short to cope successfully with the tall men of the heavyweight division.

* * *

IF many of the fight fans do not like Jim for his brash ways and the overabundance of ego that he displays constantly, they nevertheless must admire the man for his sterling fighting qualities. Gameness is Jim's middle name, and he has proved in the last four or five years to be the grandest little trial horse the ring ever has known. As a matter of fact, a man never would be thoroughly tried in the ring until he had met Jim in a real encounter. If he could get by the Pueblo ringster, his future would be pretty well assured.

* * *

AS a matter of cold fact, it was never demonstrated that the late Luther McCarty was a real fighter until he had sent Jim into a crushing defeat. Then we all knew that Luther was the real thing, a demonstration that the poor fellow strengthened a short time later by whaling the stuffin' out of Al Palzer, one of the behemoths of the ring. Flynn got his chance at McCarty out on the coast after he had demonstrated that he couldn't do much with Jack Johnson, and figured that if he had whipped Luther he would have had little trouble with Palzer, who was sent in against the winner. But McCarty proved far too big and strong and lengthy in the reach for the squatty Flynn.

* * *

IN Gunboat Smith Flynn will meet a man much more to his own measurements, though the Gunboat is a long, rangy chap. But he hasn't the weight that most of Flynn's opponents have possessed, and for that reason Flynn believes he has a royal chance of being returned the winner. The heavyweight class is a mysteriously weak division just now, and almost anybody has a chance of dragging down the honors.

* * *

OUT in Los Angeles, where Flynn has done some of his best fighting, they like him. As a matter of fact, they like the rough, tough fellow pretty much out there without losing sight of and giving free credit for his cleverness and skill. Both Battling Nelson and Ad Wolgast, former lightweight champions, were great favorites there. So were George Memsic, Rudy Unholz, Frankie Conley, Charley Dalton, Bud Anderson and other strong boys of the ring. They like the puncher out in Tom McCarey's town, and haven't a great deal of use for the fancy boxer.

DELHI BACK IN MAJORS; PIRATES BUY TWIRLER

PITTSBURG, July 24.—L. W. "Flame" Delhi, the young giant right-hand pitcher, who was bought by the Chicago Americans from Los Angeles in 1911, and who went to Great Falls, Mont., of the Union Association, has been bought by the Pittsburg Pirates on Manager Clarke's belief that he has come back. Clarke likens him to George McQuillen, who has been pitching great ball since he was pulled out of the minors a few weeks ago.

J. PLUV WALKS ARM-IN-ARM WITH J. PRINCE

JACK PRINCE really gets sore when he is called "the Rainmaker."

But being well armed with a pair of perfectly good legs, we dare him to come forth for battle, and so here goes:

Jack Prince, you are a regular rainmaker!

For the second time in as many days the races carded for the Motordrome have been called off on account of rain. And to make sure that they will have plenty of time to get Jack out of town, the other backers in the saucer have decided that the next set of races will not be held until Friday night.

They want all of to-day to get Jack out of the city. And they guarantee that Prince will not be within fifty miles of here by sunrise to-morrow.

And with that promise, the local bugs may be assured that the big Marathon grind will come off to-morrow night. Also a number of other events that should prove corkers.

To-day all of the riders intend tuning up their machines a bit more. To-morrow night the record for the 26 miles, 385 yards is very likely to get an awful kick in the slats.

ATTELL COMES TO LIFE.

NEW YORK, July 24.—Abe Attell will be seen in action again to-night at Rockaway, where he will clash with Willie Beecher, the New York lightweight, for a ten-round bout.

Report That Cobb Is Slated for Chicago

CHICAGO, July 24.—Just before the White Sox pulled out for their Eastern invasion a report gained circulation to the effect that Ty Cobb, Tiger star, is to become a member of the South Side crew.

To get him, all this according to the report, Owner Comiskey must give up Pitcher "Red" Russell, Outfielder Chappelle, for whom Comiskey recently paid $18,000, and a catcher.

It has been known for several months that Cobb has been anxious to break away from the Tiger band, but this is the first time that an offer was made for him.

LARNED-WRIGHT WIN FROM JOHNSON-WHITNEY

BOSTON, July 24.—W. A. Larned and B. C. Wright, veteran tennis masters, worked their way into the fourth round of the Eastern doubles championship at the Longwood Cricket Club's courts yesterday by disposing of H. C. Johnson and E. H. Whitney, of Boston, in four sets. The scores were 6-3, 6-3, 2-6, 6-2.

Other matches in the doubles and singles were without striking features. The all-comers' tournament for the Longwood singles was advanced to the fourth round.

Georgian Wants--Use For Results

FANS REMEMBER HOLLIDAY AND H. CHAMPLIN

Only 55 Votes Separate First Four Players in Popularity Contest; Jordan Leads.

OTTO JORDAN, Dick Manchester, "Pat" Murphy and "Goat" Holliday, the "big four" in The Hearst Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian contest to decide the most popular player in the Empire State League, are still having a merry battle for the lead in this great race.

When the Baseball Popularity Editor totaled up the votes received by each of these players yesterday he found that but 55 votes separate Jordan, who is on top, and "Goat" Holliday, in fourth place. For the benefit of the fans the standing of each contestant, with the number of votes received up to date, has been printed below.

By taking a glance at these figures one can readily see what a wonderful race is going on to decide the Empire State League's most popular ball player. Never once since this contest was inaugurated has the leader been over 200 votes in the lead.

Jordan Heads List.

At present Otto Jordan, the Valdosta manager, heads the list. His margin is very small, though, and the next three following him, Manchester, Murphy and Holliday, are right on his heels. H. Champlin is holding on to fifty position and many are picking him to be the dark horse of the contest.

Whether some of the fans are holding their votes or not, the Baseball Popularity Editor is unable to state, but one fact is sure, and that is that those hanging on to their coupons are making one big mistake. The contest is so close now that a few hundred votes sent in now might put your player in first place. In fate, a great deal of hustling for any of the contestants would set the contest topsy turvy.

Holliday Receives Votes.

"Goat" Holliday and H. Champlin received the most votes yesterday by a good margin. For a time it looked as if these players were about ready to drop down in the race, but the large batch received for them yesterday has put them right back in the fight for the handsome loving cup being donated by this paper.

Get Busy Now.

The coupon appears in to-day's issue. All you have to do is to write the name of your favorite player on it and mail it to the Baseball Popularity Editor, Atlanta Georgian, Atlanta, Ga. Every vote counts, so get busy at once. Don't wait for to-morrow and also don't hang on to your coupons. Mail them in at once.

PROMOTER LOST MONEY STAGING RITCHIE FIGHT

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 24.—Lightweight Champion Willie Ritchie is quite willing to risk his laurels again. He says he is not particular against whom he is sent, so long as the price is right.

Ritchie is not naming the sum he thinks should be paid. He wants each of the promoters to make a bid, and he will accept the highest offer made.

It is no use mentioning "percentage" to the champion. He has thrashed it all out, and has discovered that flat offers are the best.

One of the charges Billy Nolan made against the champion was that Ritchie was "money mad." Nolan meant, of course, that money occupied Ritchie's thoughts to the exclusion of other things. There is nothing about Ritchie's actions when money is in question to suggest that his mind is unbalanced.

Having received something like $18,000 from Promoter Graney for the fight on July 4, Ritchie will probably expect as much or more when he boxes again. And the chances are very much against his getting it.

The fight between Ritchie and Rivers drew something more than $29,000. As "houses" go nowadays, it was a mighty good clean-up. But not for Graney, for if he broke even he is lucky.

Ritchie Received $18,000.

It is easily enough reckoned if Ritchie got $18,000, Rivers $7,000 and it cost $1,500 to hire Coffroth's arena, Graney had little more than $2,500 to meet all the expenses of advertising and help, and the chances are he had to dig down into his jeans.

It is an object lesson for fight promoters and for such as think there is money in handling affairs of that kind. Graney worked like a beaver and used every influence he could command to advertise his show.

And when it came off the boxers received nearly 90 per cent of the takings, and the promoter found himself on the wrong side of the ledger.

This is a matter that will have to be regulated, although it is not easy to see how it will be done. As matters stand, all a champion or near champion has to do is set the promoters bidding against one another, as Ritchie is doing right now, and prices will go soaring.

"What was I to do?" said Graney. "If I had not given Ritchie what he asked some one else would have given it to him."

Graney Has Good Lesson.

Probably, now that it's all over, Graney wishes he had not stood in the way of some other promoter. Of course, Graney will be chary of offering big money to Ritchie again, and this means that there will be one fool less among the promoters.

It looks, indeed, as if this theory of paying the fighters more than they are worth—and more than they draw—will only stop when each and every promoter in the country has had his fingers burned.

WHY PITCHERS DIE YOUNG.

"That guy is there!" the rooter cried
who lingered at my side,
While Old Gil Price was going well
and many a batsman died.
"That guy is there!" the rooter cried
and rent the summer air,
And as another man went out he
yelled: "That guy is there!"

A youth came up and smote the ball
unto a distant spot.
Another youth came up and made
another swat,
And when another youth came up
and made another clout
The gent who sat beside me rose and
hollered: "Take him out!"

Oh, would I were a hunter on the trail of ivory!
I would not hunt where elephants
are roaming o'er the lea,
But I would buy a grand stand seat
and take my gun in hand,
For there are tons of ivory in every
baseball stand.

Ban Johnson refuses to allow Messrs. Altrock and Schaefer to work their funny stuff while games are in progress, possibly on the theory that the players perpetrate enough comic stuff under the guise of baseball.

While Jack Knight has taken a fearful slump, we are forced to admit that he was a Knight for a day. Wretch! Don't you dare to strike muh!

As we diagnose it, Heine Zimmerman has the artistic temperament in his ankle.

Fuzzy Woodruff avers that Carl Morris is underrated, thereby establishing a reputation as the World's Greatest Kidder.

Walter Thornton, who was hit on the head while earning money for a baseball magnate, is now in a padded cell. You have noticed the rush of magnates to his assistance, have you not?

It is reported that Jack Coombs will be ready for work by August. Connie Mack is preparing to sing that popular ballad entitled, "Good-by, Everybody."

J. Evers evidently labors under the impression that it is impossible to manage a ball team with R. Bresnahan trying to run it from one end and C. Murphy trying to run it from the other. The heluvitis, he can't bench C. Murphy.

THE GREATEST PLAY I EVER SAW.

It was in the eighth inning. The Gulls were one run ahead, but Hogg had begun to wabble, and the bases were filled with one out. Tommy Long stepped to the plate, fouled off two and watched three wide ones go by. The next one was low, on the inside, and Long pulled a terrific drive toward right. Robertson started the moment the ball was hit, and a youth with a large basket on his arm stepped in front of me and remarked: "Peanuts! Five a bag!"

M'DONALD DEFEATS TAYLOR FOR CYCLE CHAMPIONSHIP

J., July 24.—Donald McDonald, the New York Athletic Club cycle crack, clinched the National Amateur championship when he defeated Aubrey Taylor, amateur champion of Australia, in the one mile race at the Velodrome here last night. Thorwald Ellegaard, the Danish rider and winner of six world's championships, was sent down to defeat by Jackie Clark, the speedy Australian, in two straight heats of a special one mile match race.

MARIST GIVES UP ATHLETICS; JOE BEAN OUT

MARIST College, known as the greatest athletic prep school south of the Mason and Dixon line, has decided to give up sports.

No, don't pinch yourself. You're not asleep. It is the real cold truth.

The school has decided that it can not afford athletics, yet the very one thing that has "made" it has been athletics.

Every schoolboy in Georgia knows Marist because of its ability to win in athletics. It has been the ambition of every youngster in the State to attend the foundry of learning on Ivy street.

Joe Bean made the announcement this morning that he had been discharged. Said Joseph:

"Father Rapier called me in and told me that my services were no longer needed. I nearly strangled to death from the shock. But Father Rapier says that the school can not afford to dally in athletics any more."

Marist is no longer on the athletic map.

But one J. Bean IS. He is going to make a corking instructor for one of these other prep schools. Already he has received two offers, and will probably close for one of them within the next week or ten days.

Red Sox Owners Are On Verge of a Split

DETROIT, MICH., July 24.—That there is a ruction imminent in the Boston American League baseball club came to light here to-day through the reported attempt made by Boston to trade Speaker and some other player for Ty Cobb. President McAleer did not make the offer, but the offer came. It is understood that the other player included with Speaker was "Smoky Joe" Wood.

McAleer scouts the idea of any such trade. But John I. Taylor and his father, General W. S. Taylor, want to put it through over his head.

The importance of the offer lies in the indication that the Taylors are attempting to take the reins of management out of the hands of President McAleer and again become the active heads of the Boston club.

SANDPIPERS ARE VICTORS.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., July 24.—The Narragansett Sandpipers captured the first semi-final game in the Overture Cup series in the Point Judith polo tournament yesterday by defeating the Point Judith team 9 goals to 5. The Sandpipers received a handicap allowance of 7 goals at the start.

MIKE FINN WILL REMAIN AT HELM OF MOBILE CREW

MOBILE, July 23.—Mike Finn will remain as manager of the Mobile Baseball Club.

Such was the announcement of President Alfred Staples following a meeting of the directors of the Mobile club. "The trouble has been adjusted satisfactorily to everybody concerned," he said, "and Mr. Finn remains as manager of the club."

Further than the announcement that "matters has been settled satisfactorily to all concerned," President Staples would not go into the case, but from a reliable source, it is understood that Mike Desmond, employed at the ball park in the capacity of special officer, had tendered his resignation. It is understood that he took his action, following Manager Finn's statement that he would resign, rather than cause the club officials any embarrassment.

Manager Finn would not discuss the outcome of the case when seen, but stated that only one thing in connection with the entire affair had caused him any regret, and that was the statement that he had "insulted the Hibernians." The Gull leader denied that he ever offered offense to the Hibernians of any other organization of any kind in Mobile, and states that he has never made any remark that could be construed as an insult to any organization.

"Mike, you're too good an Irishman, yourself, to talk about the Hibernians; are you not?" he was asked.

"Sure," he responded, "and to tell the truth, I've made up my mind to join the Hibernians."

The announcement that Mike Finn will remain at the head of the club means that the players will hustle as they have in the past to keep the club in the running, and no one was more pleased when definite announcement was made that he would stay than the players now working for the Mobile club under him.

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

Leach Cross has the California "bug." He says that if he succeeds in defeating Matty Baidwin next week and it matched with either Willie Ritchie or Joe Rivers, he will try to arrange to practice his profession of dentistry in Los Angeles. He will have considerable idle time on his hands between bouts, and thinks he can do well.

* * *

Reports from the coast state that Tom McCarey is still awaiting word from Abe Attell in regard to a match with Jack White. There is some question in regard to the weight at which the two will box, and a wire from Abe will settle that question definitely.

* * *

Jack Payne is the latest to hurl a challenge at Eddie Hanlon. Payne says he will agree to box Eddie at catchweights.

* * *

George Mason, Baltimore lightweight, who fought here about two months ago, is making a big hit in Memphis. Promoters there are trying to secure Johnny Lore to meet him some time in August.

* * *

Terry Nelson is far from discouraged over his defeat at the hands of Eddie Hanlon. Terry says that the latter outweighed him by nearly ten pounds, and will gladly meet Hanlon in another match, providing the latter will make 135 pounds.

* * *

Tom O'Rourke is now managing Carl Morris. O'Rourke hopes to send the Sapulpa heavyweight against the winner of the Flynn-Smith match scheduled to take place at New York on August 8.

* * *

Al Palzer is another heavyweight who is seeking a ring encounter. Palzer is at present in New York doing light work in an effort to get into fighting shape.

* * *

Jimmy Murphy, the Chicago lightweight, who recently stopped Danny Goodman, is anxious to come to Atlanta. Murphy would like to get on with either Eddie Hanlon, Mike Saul or Terry Nelson. Murphy also met Joe Thomas in an eight-round battle.

* * *

There are four brothers in the White family—Charlie and Jack fight best when weighing around the 126 mark; Billy Wagner, the youngest of the bunch, is best at 133, while Battling White can easily make 116 pounds ringside.

* * *

Mike Schreck signed articles yesterday to meet Dick Gilbert at the Valley Athletic Club in Elmwood on August 18. Schreck will go to West Baden, Ind., for a stay of two weeks before the scrap.

* * *

Johnny Creeley and "Knockout" Mars will don the gloves for a scheduled ten-round contest at New York on Thursday night. They have agreed to weigh 133 pounds at 3 o'clock.

BOXERS CLAMOR FOR CHANCE AT RITCHIE'S TITLE

LOS ANGELES, July 24.—And still they come! With enough boxers here to stage a carnival of fistic revels lasting until Christmas and managers and promoters clamoring over each others shoulders for a chance at a date and a trunk full of coin it appears that the end is not yet.

Joe Woodman is clamoring for dates for his two proteges, Sam Langford and Jack Read, the Australian lightweight champion, and bids fair to make a landing.

Ad Wolgast also wants to be remembered. He is right on the ground to press his claim with Champion Willie Ritchie for an early match. He figures that since Rivers lost out in his match on July 4 he is in direct line for another match in preference to the Mexican, and probably his bout at the Vernon arena would be a good card.

ANOTHER challenger of Ritchie is Jimmy Duffy, whose record during the past year certainly gives him some right to consideration. His manager, Bert Finch, writes that Duffy is willing to meet any lightweight in the country, with an expressed preference for Ritchie, Freddie Welch, Leach Cross or Joe Rivers.

Finch says that if Ritchie will concede Duffy a match for the championship he will post $5,000 as a side bet that Duffy will defeat him in twenty rounds and that he can fix the terms for the division of the purse to suit himself.

In May of last year Duffy fought a ten-round bout to a draw with Freddie Welch and has defeated Leach Cross twice, once in New York and once in Buffalo.

* * *

"DUMB DAN" MORGAN, the "speechless" wonder from New York, has issued a statement offering to match Jack Britton with Champion Ritchie for a side bet of 10,000. There is no mention made in the letter of whether it is 10,000 cigars or 10,000 toothpicks. He says this would be a real test for the champion and that Britton will box at any weight that suits the "champion."

Jim Flynn Gets Chance at Title
Gunboat Smith Is His Opponent

By Ed W. Smith.

IT takes a good bit of managerial skill to boost Jim Flynn, of Pueblo, up from the depths into which he had been forced through successive defeats into a real match for a real belt which is to be emblematic of the heavyweight championship of the boxing world. That skill has been shown by one J. Curley, Flynn's manager, and the Pueblo man is to get his second chance to win a title—or is it the fourth or fifth?—in a bout in New York early next month when he faces Gunboat Smith, of Philadelphia and San Francisco. And the winner will be given a belt to replace the one that went out of commission when Luther McCarty died in Alberta the latter part of May.

* * *

FLYNN'S peculiar position in the boxing world is brought to mind now and then by a dispatch from Missouri telling of the progress the boxer is making in his automobile trip from Pueblo to New York. The other day the wires bore the news that Jim had been pinched in a small town for speeding, after having had his machine repaired. Flynn ever has been a thorn in the side of the aspirants for the white title, but unfortunately for the hardy fellow from the mountains he always has just failed of getting there. Jim is a trifle too small, in the general opinion of the critics, or rather he is too short to cope successfully with the tall men of the heavyweight division.

* * *

IF many of the fight fans do not like Jim for his brash ways and the overabundance of ego that he displays constantly, they nevertheless must admire the man for his sterling fighting qualities. Gameness is Jim's middle name, and he has proved in the last four or five years to be the grandest little trial horse the ring ever has known. As a matter of fact, a man never would be thoroughly tried in the ring until he had met Jim in a real encounter. If he could get by the Pueblo ringster, his future would be pretty well assured.

* * *

AS a matter of cold fact, it was never demonstrated that the late Luther McCarty was a real fighter until he had sent Jim into a crushing defeat. Then we all knew that Luther was the real thing, a demonstration that the poor fellow strengthened a short time later by whaling the stuffin' out of Al Palzer, one of the behemoths of the ring. Flynn got his chance at McCarty out on the coast after he had demonstrated that he couldn't do much with Jack Johnson, and figured that if he had whipped Luther he would have had little trouble with Palzer, who was sent in against the winner. But McCarty proved far too big and strong and lengthy in the reach for the squatty Flynn.

* * *

IN Gunboat Smith Flynn will meet a man much more to his own measurements, though the Gunboat is a long, raney chap. But he hasn't the weight that most of Flynn's opponents have possessed, and for that reason Flynn believes he has a royal chance of being returned the winner. The heavyweight class is a mysteriously weak division just now, and almost anybody has a chance of dragging down the honors.

* * *

OUT in Los Angeles, where Flynn has done some of his best fighting, they like him. As a matter of fact, they like the rough, tough fellow pretty much out there without losing sight of and giving free credit for his cleverness and skill. Both Battling Nelson and Ad Wolgast, former lightweight champions, were great favorites there. So were George Memsic, Rudy Unholz, Frankie Conley, Charley Dalton, Bud Anderson and other strong boys of the ring. They like the puncher out in Tom McCarey's town, and haven't a great deal of use for the fancy boxer.

DELHI BACK IN MAJORS; PIRATES BUY TWIRLER

PITTSBURG, July 24.—L. W. "Flame" Delhi, the young giant right-hand pitcher, who was bought by the Chicago Americans from Los Angeles in 1911, and who went to Great Falls, Mont., of the Union Association, has been bought by the Pittsburg Pirates on Manager Clarke's belief that he has come back. Clarke likens him to George McQuillen, who has been pitching great ball since he was pulled out of the minors a few weeks ago.

J. PLUV WALKS ARM-IN-ARM WITH J. PRINCE

JACK PRINCE really gets sore when he is called "the Rainmaker."

But being well armed with a pair of perfectly good legs, we dare him to come forth for battle, and so here goes:

Jack Prince, you are a regular rainmaker!

For the second time in as many days the races carded for the Motordrome have been called off on account of rain. And to make sure that they will have plenty of time to get Jack out of town, the other backers in the saucer have decided that the next set of races will not be held until Friday night.

They want all of to-day to get Jack out of the city. And they guarantee that Prince will not be within fifty miles of here by sunrise to-morrow.

And with that promise, the local bugs may be assured that the big Marathon grind will come off to-morrow night. Also a number of other events that should prove corkers.

To-day all of the riders intend tuning up their machines a bit more. To-morrow night the record for the 26 miles, 385 yards is very likely to get an awful kick in the slats.

ATTELL COMES TO LIFE.

NEW YORK, July 24.—Abe Attell will be seen in action again to-night at Rockaway, where he will clash with Willie Beecher, the New York lightweight, for a ten-round bout.

Report That Cobb Is Slated for Chicago

CHICAGO, July 24.—Just before the White Sox pulled out for their Eastern invasion a report gained circulation to the effect that Ty Cobb, Tiger star, is to become a member of the South Side crew.

To get him, all this according to the report, Owner Comiskey must give up Pitcher "Red" Russell, Outfielder Chappelle, for whom Comiskey recently paid $18,000, and a catcher.

It has been known for several months that Cobb has been anxious to break away from the Tiger band, but this is the first time that an offer was made for him.

LARNED-WRIGHT WIN FROM JOHNSON-WHITNEY

BOSTON, July 24.—W. A. Larned and B. C. Wright, veteran tennis masters, worked their way into the fourth round of the Eastern doubles championship at the Longwood Cricket Club's courts yesterday by disposing of H. C. Johnson and E. H. Whitney, of Boston, in four sets. The scores were 6-3, 6-3, 2-6, 6-2.

Other matches in the doubles and singles were without striking features. The all-comers' tournament for the Longwood singles was advanced to the fourth round.

FANS REMEMBER HOLLIDAY AND H. CHAMPLIN

Only 55 Votes Separate First Four Players in Popularity Contest; Jordan Leads.

OTTO JORDAN, Dick Manchester, "Pat" Murphy and "Goat" Holliday, the "big four" in The Hearst Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian contest to decide the most popular player in the Empire State League, are still having a merry battle for the lead in this great race.

When the Baseball Popularity Editor totaled up the votes received by each of these players yesterday he found that but 55 votes separate Jordan, who is on top, and "Goat" Holliday, in fourth place. For the benefit of the fans the standing of each contestant, with the number of votes received up to date, has been printed below.

By taking a glance at these figures one can readily see what a wonderful race is going on to decide the Empire State League's most popular ball player. Never once since this contest was inaugurated has the leader been over 200 votes in the lead.

Jordan Heads List.

At present Otto Jordan, the Valdosta manager, heads the list. His margin is very small, though, and the next three following him, Manchester, Murphy and Holliday, are right on his heels. H. Champlin is holding on to fifty position and many are picking him to be the dark horse of the contest.

Whether some of the fans are holding their votes or not, the Baseball Popularity Editor is unable to state, but one fact is sure, and that is that those hanging on to their coupons are making one big mistake. The contest is so close now that a few hundred votes sent in now might put your player in first place. In fatc, a great deal of hustling for any of the contestants would set the contest topsy turvy.

Holliday Receives Votes.

"Goat" Holliday and H. Champlin received the most votes yesterday by a good margin. For a time it looked as if these players were about ready to drop down in the race, but the large batch received for them yesterday has put them right back in the fight for the handsome loving cup being donated by this paper.

Get Busy Now.

The coupon appears in to-day's issue. All you have to do is to write the name of your favorite player on it and mail it to the Baseball Popularity Editor, Atlanta Georgian, Atlanta, Ga. Every vote counts, so get busy at once. Don't wait for to-morrow and also don't hang on to your coupons. Mail them in at once.

PROMOTER LOST MONEY STAGING RITCHIE FIGHT

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 24.—Lightweight Champion Willie Ritchie is quite willing to risk his laurels again. He says he is not particular against whom he is sent, so long as the price is right.

Ritchie is not naming the sum he thinks should be paid. He wants each of the promoters to make a bid, and he will accept the highest offer made.

It is no use mentioning "percentage" to the champion. He has thrashed it all out, and has discovered that flat offers are the best.

One of the charges Billy Nolan made against the champion was that Ritchie was "money mad." Nolan meant, of course, that money occupied Ritchie's thoughts to the exclusion of other things. There is nothing about Ritchie's actions when money is in question to suggest that his mind is unbalanced.

Having received something like $18,000 from Promoter Graney for the fight on July 4, Ritchie will probably expect as much or more when he boxes again. And the chances are very much against his getting it.

The fight between Ritchie and Rivers drew something more than $29,000. As "houses" go nowadays, it was a mighty good clean-up. But not for Graney, for if he broke even he is lucky.

Ritchie Received $18,000.

It is easily enough reckoned if Ritchie got $18,000, Rivers $7,000 and it cost $1,500 to hire Coffroth's arena, Graney had little more than $2,500 to meet all the expenses of advertising and help, and the chances are he had to dig down into his jeans.

It is an object lesson for fight promoters and for such as think there is money in handling affairs of that kind. Graney worked like a beaver and used every influence he could command to advertise his show.

And when it came off the boxers received nearly 90 per cent of the takings, and the promoter found himself on the wrong side of the ledger.

This is a matter that will have to be regulated, although it is not easy to see how it will be done. As matters stand, all a champion or near champion has to do is set the promoters bidding against one another, as Ritchie is doing right now, and prices will go soaring.

"What was I to do?" said Graney. "If I had not given Ritchie what he asked some one else would have given it to him."

Graney Has Good Lesson.

Probably, now that it's all over, Graney wishes he had not stood in the way of some other promoter. Of course, Graney will be chary of offering big money to Ritchie again, and this means that there will be one fool less among the promoters.

It looks, indeed, as if this theory of paying the fighters more than they are worth—and more than they draw—will only stop when each and every promoter in the country has had his fingers burned.

WHY PITCHERS DIE YOUNG.

"That guy is there!" the rooter cried
who lingered at my side,
While Old Gil Price was going well
and many a batsman died.
"That guy is there!" the rooter cried
and rent the summer air,
And as another man went out he
yelled: "That guy is there!"

A youth came up and smote the ball
unto a distant spot.
Another youth came up and made
another swat,
And when another youth came up
and made another clout
The gent who sat beside me rose and
hollered: "Take him out!"

Oh, would I were a hunter on the trail of ivory!
I would not hunt where elephants
are roaming o'er the lea,
But I would buy a grand stand seat
and take my gun in hand,
For there are tons of ivory in every
baseball stand.

Ban Johnson refuses to allow Messrs. Altrock and Schaefer to work their funny stuff while games are in progress, possibly on the theory that the players perpetrate enough comic stuff under the guise of baseball.

While Jack Knight has taken a fearful slump, we are forced to admit that he was a Knight for a day. Wretch! Don't you dare to strike muh!

As we diagnose it, Heine Zimmerman has the artistic temperament in his ankle.

Fuzzy Woodruff avers that Carl Morris is underrated, thereby establishing a reputation as the World's Greatest Kidder.

Walter Thornton, who was hit on the head while earning money for a baseball magnate, is now in a padded cell. You have noticed the rush of magnates to his assistance, have you not?

It is reported that Jack Coombs will be ready for work by August. Connie Mack is preparing to sing that popular ballad entitled, "Good-by, Everybody."

J. Evers evidently labors under the impression that it is impossible to manage a ball team with R. Bresnahan trying to run it from one end and C. Murphy trying to run it from the other. The heluvitis, he can't bench C. Murphy.

THE GREATEST PLAY I EVER SAW.

It was in the eighth inning. The Gulls were one run ahead, but Hogg had begun to wabble, and the bases were filled with one out. Tommy Long stepped to the plate, fouled off two and watched three wide ones go by. The next one was low, on the inside, and Long pulled a terrific drive toward right. Robertson started the moment the ball was hit, and a youth with a large basket on his arm stepped in front of me and remarked: "Peanuts! Five a bag!"

POP-POPS IN RECORD RACE; 1 MILES IN TWO HOURS

NEW YORK, July 4.—Arthur Chappelle and Paul Ohne, of New York, established a new world's record for the two-hour motorcycle race when they captured the championship team race at the Brighton Beach Motordrome last night. The pair covered 149 miles and 1 lap. The former mark was 141 miles, made on the same track by Lockner and Shields last year.

Ray Veditz, of Philadelphia, and George Mercier, of New York, were second, with 146 miles and 2 laps, while Bert Sayer, of Newport, and George Sperl, of Brooklyn, rode third, with 144 miles and 2 laps. Charles Davis and Bert Fisher, the Brooklyn team, finished fourth, with 144 miles and 1 lap.

CHICAGO, July 24.—Interest in the amateur championship tournament of the Western Golf Association at the Homewood course to-day centered in the matches between Charles Evans, Jr., present Western champion, and E. Warren K. Wood, who came within one point of becoming champion last year, was matched with Frazer Hale to-day.

MARIST GIVES UP ATHLETICS; JOE BEAN OUT

MARIST College, known as the greatest athletic prep school south of the Mason and Dixon line, has decided to give up sports.

No, don't pinch yourself. You're not asleep. It is the real cold truth.

The school has decided that it can not afford athletics, yet the very one thing that has "made" it has been athletics.

Every schoolboy in Georgia knows Marist because of its ability to win in athletics. It has been the ambition of every youngster in the State to attend the foundry of learning on Ivy street.

Joe Bean made the announcement this morning that he had been discharged. Said Joseph:

"Father Rapier called me in and told me that my services were no longer needed. I nearly strangled to death from the shock. But Father Rapier says that the school can not afford to daily in athletics any more."

Marist is no longer on the athletic map.

But one J. Bean IS. He is going to make a corking instructor for one of these other prep schools. Already he has received two offers, and will probably close for one of them within the next week or ten days.

Red Sox Owners Are On Verge of a Split

DETROIT, MICH., July 24.—That there is a ruction imminent in the Boston American League baseball club came to light here to-day through the reported attempt made by Boston to trade Speaker and some other player for Ty Cobb. President McAleer did not make the offer, but the offer came. It is understood that the other player included with Speaker was "Smoky Joe" Wood.

McAleer scouts the idea of any such trade. But John I. Taylor and his father, General W. S. Taylor, want to put it through over his head.

The importance of the offer lies in the indication that the Taylors are attempting to take the reins of management out of the hands of President McAleer and again become the active heads of the Boston club.

SANDPIPERS ARE VICTORS.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., July 24.—The Narragansett Sandpipers captured the first semi-final game in the Overture Cup series in the Point Judith polo tournament yesterday by defeating the Point Judith team 9 goals to 5. The Sandpipers received a handicap allowance of 7 goals at the start.

20-LB. LIMIT TO BOOST PARCEL POST HERE

Additional 1,000 Feet of Space Will Be Needed and Force Will Be Doubled.

Heads of the Railway Mail Department and United States postoffice inspectors in Atlanta have been engaged recently in an investigation to determine the extent of increased business as the direct result of the order which goes into effect August 15 increasing the limit of weight of parcel post packages from 11 to 20 pounds.

Postoffice Inspector Robert E. Barry; Mark Bunn, chief clerk of the Railway Mail Service, and G. A. Gardner, special agent from Washington, have been conducting the investigation. They declared Thursday that at the minimum to start with it would be necessary to obtain 1,000 square feet additional floor space at each terminal station to provide for the increased business.

Will Sort Mail at Terminals.

A unique system has been arranged by which all parcel post mail here after will be assorted at the terminal stations.

"Carloads of packages will now be shipped which it is impossible to assort on the roads," said Mr. Barry. "A carload of parcel post matter from Chicago or a distant point will come direct to Atlanta. Here it will be assorted at the terminal station, and as far as is possible this class of mail will hereafter travel by the carload. Parcel post carriers will receive their mail at the terminal, and thus eliminate carrying it to the postoffice.

"In the last week we have visited all the principal cities of the South where terminals will be established for this purpose. Atlanta is the largest of all Southern terminals, over sixty trains of mail of from three to eight cars each are assorted here daily.

"We have decided that at least 1,000 square feet additional floor space will be necessary to start with, but just how much more will be needed when in operation we are unable as yet to estimate.

"At every terminal the number of men now employed will be doubled. Atlanta now has ten assorting clerks. The parcel post system with its latest improvements has revolutionized the entire postal service. The benefits to be derived by the citizens of the United States are colosal."

HEAD OF MERCER TO BE LANDRUM OR O'KELLEY

Choice of University President Lies Between Louisville and Raleigh Ministers.

MACON, July 24.—The presidency of Mercer University lies between the Rev. W. W. Landrum, of Louisville, Ky., formerly of Atlanta, and the Rev. T. W. O'Kelley, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Raleigh, N. C., according to men in close touch with affairs at the institution.

The special committee appointed to choose a president has offered the office to one of sixteen ministers and educators who were under consideration, and they decline to state his name until he has either accepted or declined.

It is believed that Dr. Landrum, who is now with the Baptist Theological Seminary, is first choice, and that if he declines the place will be tendered to the Rev. Dr. O'Kelley.

Guardsman Shoots Escaping Comrade

INDIANAPOLIS, July 24.—National Guardsman Walter Dowell, of Madison, Ind., is near death to-day from a bullet fired by Sergeant Edwin Ball, Company H, of Indianapolis, when Dowell attempted to escape after being arrested on suspicion of smuggling liquor into the National Guard camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison.

Ball is held by the police on a charge of assault with intent to kill, pending the result of Dowell's wound.

Convict Who Killed Grandfather Slain

MARIETTA, July 24.—Jasper Butler, a white convict, aged 21, sentenced for life from Heard County for killing his grandfather, was shot and instantly killed by Charles Carter, a guard. Butler escaped from the squad on the Kennesaw road and was recaptured in a nearby swamp. On the way to camp he broke away again. When ordered to stop he kept running. The guard fired, killing him instantly.

Carter is under arrest charged with involuntary manslaughter.

POLICE IN NORTH NAB ATLANTAN FOR THEFT

C. E. Henderson, Accused of Embezzlement From Auto Firm, Taken in Philadelphia.

C. E. Henderson, wanted in Atlanta on a charge of embezzling $600 from the Imperial Tire and Tube Company, No. 349 Peachtree street, has been arrested in Philadelphia. An Atlanta police officer will leave Thursday to bring him here.

Henderson was a salesman for the tire company. He suddenly left Atlanta six months ago and since Pinkerton detectives have been trying to locate him. They traced him to Jacksonville and to Philadelphia, and there lost the trail.

However, his father-in-law lived in Philadelphia and by shadowing him they finally caught Henderson.

Slit Skirt Wearers Safe in Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE, July 24.—Wearers of clinging skirts with a slit to the knee will not be molested here, according to Police Chief Janssen, who says it is a question of public sentiment.

"What some people brand as improper, others call all right," he said.

Millionaire Youth Works for $9 a Week

BOSTON, July 24.—Elisha S. Converse, a 19-year-old boy with a million dollars in his own name, with a 50-foot sailing boat, saddle horses and a motor car, is working as an ordinary "hand" in a rubber shoe factory. He earns $9 per week.

WAR FOR CLEAN BREAD.

CHICAGO, July 24.—Clean gloves must be worn by wagon drivers who handle bread, if an ordinance recommended by the Health Committee passes the Council. Alderman Pretzel is chairman of the committee.

BLEASE IS ASKED FOR HELP BY MRS. ZACHRY

AUGUSTA, July 24.—Reports from Columbia, S. C., are that Mrs. Mary W. Zachry, of Augusta, appealed to Governor Blease yesterday to not allow her two children to be taken away from her in South Carolina, where she fled with her babies, Frances, aged 3, and Mildred, 9 months. It is understood the Governor did not commit himself.

Julian J. Zachry, the husband, was asked for a statement yesterday. He said that he had nothing to say about the kidnaping of the children by Mrs. Zachry.

Mrs. Zachry stated before leaving here that she would kill her husband or any other man who attempted to take her babies from her. She was frantic because of what she termed the law's injustice in awarding the children to Mr. Zachry's custody.

Mrs. Zachry was Miss Mary Wilcox and was Mr. Zachry's stenographer when they were married. Within a year the first child was born. It was a short time before the second child was born that an estrangement occurred.

Mrs. Zachry, it is charged, found letters alleged to show that her husband had been having secret meetings with another woman. This led to their separation, the court's order awarding the custody of the children to their father and the mother's defiance of the ruling as shown in her action in taking them to South Carolina.

Gives Luncheon to Plucky Phone Girls

Night telephone operators at the Atlanta Telephone Exchange will be served with a dainty midnight lunch Thursday night by Michael Keliff, who is grateful for their discovery of burglars breaking into his store Tuesday night, and the quick alarm they turned in to police headquarters.

Assistant Chief Jett has shown the appreciation of the police department for the quick work of the girls, addressing them a letter of thanks. Two of three burglars were caught by the police when they answered the alarm.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Good Variety Shown In Realty Business

Two Buckhead Sales—$50,000 Mortgage Cancelled—Car Company's Obligation—Andrews Av. Home.

A wide range of transactions appeared on the real estate slate Thursday. There were several interesting sales, cancellation of a big loan deed, announcement of a new residence in the Pace's Ferry road, deeds to record in a large land deal and several loan deeds of consequence.

Big Supplemental Mortgage.

The Georgia Railway and Electric Company has given the American Trust Company, of Massachusetts, a supplemental mortgage on all its lines, conduits, ducts, poles and certain tracts of land on Simpson street, Decatur street and College avenue, Decatur, acquired or constructed since the execution of a principal indenture on January 1, 1909. The principal indenture was to secure an issue of $20,000,000 improvement mortgage sinking fund gold bonds.

Record of Previous Sale.

Papers have gone to record in the sale by J. F. Leary, of Alabama, to the Phoenix Planing Mill of a Sampson street property, 100 feet south of Highland avenue, and three parcels on Highland avenue, near the above, for $25,000.

North Moreland Sale.

J. H. Whisenant has sold to Mae and W. J. Denton a 50 by 221 foot lot on North Moreland avenue, 300 feet north of Walker street, for $5,500.

Two Sales at Buckhead.

Mrs. Anne H. Manson and Mrs. Rosalind C. Wright have bought from the L. S. Huntley Company a parcel on the east side of the Roswell road, 365 feet north of Peachtree, for $1,800, and Mrs. Cora P. M. Scott has bought from the same concern a lot 315 feet from Peachtree, 50 by 122 feet, for $1,500, or at the rate of $30 a front foot. The transactions were handled by the George P. Moore Real Estate Agency.

Deed to J. B. Frost.

Hugh Richardson has given a loan deed for $5,000 to J. B. Frost on 54 West Eleventh street, a handsome stone bungalow at the southwest corner of Columbia avenue.

Refused $1,500 Profit.

O. D. Gorman, Jr., of the Smith & Ewing Real Estate Agency, has refused a $1,500 profit on a North Side residence between the Peachtrees, which he bought several days ago. A would-be purchaser wanted to pay $5,000 cash and assume a good-sized loan.

Andrews Avenue Dwelling.

E. R. Kirk has started a handsome residence on the south side of Andrews avenue, 200 feet west of Peachtree and opposite the country place of Colonel Walter P. Andrews. The price of the house is not stated.

Andrews avenue is soon to be widened and worked out to Pace's Ferry road in front of acreage owned by John W. Grant and on which he will build.

Cheap North Fulton Acreage.

Mrs. Alma S. Kilpatrick, M. M. Reid and O. F. Feil have sold to Jacob Auerbach through H. W. Grant, of the B. O. Cochran Real Estate Agency, an 8-acre tract of land on the Peachtree-Dunwoody road, one mile north of Silver Lake, for $810, or at the rate of a little more $100 an acre.

Invite Local Architects.

Architects of Georgia and Florida have received invitations to attend the summer session of architects of the South Carolina Asociation at Charleston, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The meeting will be held at the Isle of Palms and a number of local architects are expected to attend.

COTTON DROPS AS LONGS LIQUIDATE

Bulls Unload July-August When Liverpool Sells—Weather and Crop News Bearish.

NEW YORK, July 24.—The absence of rain in Texas and Oklahoma led to a steady opening in the cotton market today. Prices were net unchanged to 5 points higher on the old crop positions and unchanged to 4 points decline on distant months. Immediately after the opening scattered buying by shorts dominated the market, resulting in prices rallying some 3 to 6 points from the initial level. Later weakness developed in the old crop positions, due chiefly to liquidation of foreign accounts. The sudden wave of liquidation of long accounts by prominent brokers, including many spot interests, found the market too thin to take the load.

The price of old crops declined in sensational manner. With declines as high as 2, 3 and 5 points between sales, July soon dropped 20 points, while August lost 31 points from the previous close.

The weakness in the old crops had little effect on the new crop months, which only declined 3 to 6 points. It is now believed that a large short interest is existing in later positions.

The Government made additions to the weather maps, showing some rains overnight in Oklahoma and good prospects for more general rains in Texas and Oklahoma during the next 48 hours. The official records show temperature average in Oklahoma is 98 degrees and in Texas from 100 to 106 degrees. This brought active selling by those who purchased on the early map, failing to show rains in the West, and prevented a sharp advance in new crops, which was evident during the late forenoon. Late positions sympathized with the decline in old months.

Sentiment regarding the cotton market continues bearish and if further rains should come, which are predicted, a further decline should be looked for. It is purely a weather market and will be governed accordingly.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, July 24.—The map shows fair weather in central and south Texas and the Carolinas; cloudy elsewhere; some showers in northwest Texas and Oklahoma. Good rains in Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Tennessee and western Georgia. There are indications for rain in north Texas and Oklahoma and further showers in the central States; clearing in the Atlantics. Temperatures in north Texas rose as usual before a rainy spell and the weather is cooler.

Liverpool was poor at the first, but rallied on an unfavorable report on west Texas from a prominent traveling crop reporter. The report merely showed the need of rain, which need is about to be filled.

There was some buying here at the opening on Cordill's report, but the conspicuous weakness of August in New York, suggesting hedge selling, and a Government forecast for showers and thunderstorms and cooler in north Texas, soon caused easiness. October selling first to 11.37, later to 11.32.

Cuero, Texas, received four new bales to-day. Overnight rain in Oklahoma was shown on the Government official records.

The into-sight for the week looks around 30,000, against 30,428 bales last year. Mill takings last year for this week were 174,000. A favorable comparison is looked for.

COTTON GOSSIP

The leading feature of the market today was the weakness of August, which was said to be on selling by Liverpool undoing straddles, and liquidation in that month by scattered longs. Local professionals sold yesterday on predictions of rains over Western belt and the failure of rains to materialize, causing covering this morning, and prevented new crop from sympathizing more with the decline in the old. It is purely a weather market. Crop reports continue good and rains just now where they are needed would naturally increase the bearish feeling.—J. M. Anderson.

"I can not help but feel that the Government condition report will be bullish. A large crop of cotton is needed, with all information that I can get. I believe in higher prices before any material decline, and unless weather conditions show a great improvement in the next few weeks, cotton will sell much higher."—S. Tate.

* * *

The absence of rain in Texas was the incentive for buying around the opening. The feeling is that there were large lines of longs liquidated. Mitchell was apparently the best buyer on the advance, but later sold August. Wilson and Schill also sold August.

* * *

Dallas wires: "Texas—Panhandle, cloudy in the south, clear in the west, partly cloudy; no rain. Oklahoma—Partly cloudy."

NEW ORLEANS, July 24.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map is favorable. It shows fair over the Carolinas and Central and South Texas. Cloudy over the rest of the belt. Fine rains in Arkansas, Central States, Alabama, Tennessee, parts of Georgia, and some showers in Northwest Texas yesterday and last night. Indications are more pronounced for more extensive rains in North Texas and Oklahoma. Showery weather in the central belt.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Liverpool reported smaller spot sales. Manchester cabled that cloths were dull and yarns hard to sell. The weather map revealed a splendid rains east of the Mississippi River and the map reads unsettled conditions over the greater part of Texas. With these factors as a starter, the American ring prepared for a price recession on the day's trading and scored one in the natural course of events. July New Orleans again held the center of the stage, because all of the traders on the long side had not liquidated. The result was a further sharp readjustment, in which the spot article played a part.

"The talent as a whole now seems satisfied the crop is progressing toward a large yield. Rains in Texas in the near future will go a long way toward confirming such a belief. In that State, dry, hot weather has probably done far more good in the destruction of weevils than harm to the plant, which, as a rule, possesses a sturdy tap root and is well limbed.

"In recent years the Texas farmer has profited by the Government's experiments and has steadily improved his cultural methods."

Grain Notes

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "It was the gossip of the wheat trade last night that as long as the export business continues large prices are not likely to decline a great deal, if any, from present levels. In the last three days' export sales aggregate more than 2,000,000 bushels, mostly hard winter.

"Corn continues to be a weather market."

Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: "Wheat—We look for a comparatively narrow market.

"Corn—We are inclined to feel that anxious longs have liquidated and that the market should rule fairly steady today.

"Oats—As in corn, there was good deal of liquidation yesterday and considerable short selling by locals. Threshing returns on the whole continue to show poor out-turns.

"Provisions—Pork is holding steady. Shipments of lard and meats continue to exceed those of last year."

B. W. Snow wires from Fargo, N. D.: "Wheat cutting has begun in Northern counties. Crop through Grant and Robertson Counties about ready. In South part of Red River Valley; harvest will begin next week. Occasional plant with black rust can be found in nearly any field, but nothing more than is present each year. Weather and plant growth in district make it practically certain there would be no serious outbreak. Lots of wheat seen to-day will make 30 and 35 bushels and both Whetstone and Red Valleys will make better than average."

* * *

Rainfall and temperature: Canadian Northwest clear, 48 to 68; Minnesota, 01; Northwest, 50 to 60, clear; West, 55 to 65, part cloudy; Davenport, .04; Peoria, .02; Chicago, 11; Southwest, 62 to 82, part cloudy; Dodge City, 01; Kansas City, .60; Springfield, Mo., raining, 05; St. Louis, .12; Ohio Valley, cloudy, 70 to 74; Indianapolis, 12; Evansville, .42; Cincinnati, .15, raining.

INVESTORS' BUYING SENDS STOCKS UP

Strength of Coppers and Steel Has Stimulating Effect—Situation Getting Better.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 24.—Although news developments were of a favorable character, price movements were generally to lower levels at the opening of the stock market to-day. The copper stocks failed to respond to improved trade conditions, Amalgamated yielding ⅛ to 68⅜ and about the same amount of loss was sustained in Reading and Union Pacific. New Haven declined ⅝ to 99½, a new low record for the present movement.

Speculative liquidation caused a loss of a point in American Can. Canadian Pacific was off ¾; Mexican Petroleum, ⅝; American Smelting ws up ½, and Southern Pacific ¼. Selling pressure against Canadian Pacific was evident in the London market, where trading was irregular. American railway shares held above par, however.

The curb was steady.

The tone after the first few minutes bettered itself and was noticed especially in the copper shares and in several of the industrials. Amalgamated Copper advanced early one point to 69½, and strength prevailed in New Haven, which recovered its early loss, selling again above 100. Fractional improvements were noted in Canadian Pacific, Steel, Reading, Union Pacific and Missouri Pacific. The tone a few minutes before midday continued strong. Call money loaning at 2¾.

STOCK GOSSIP

It is announced that the shareholders of the New Haven would be summoned to hold a special meeting on August 22 to authorize an issue of $67,552,400 20-year 6 per cent debentures with a convertible privilege. The new bonds will be convertible into stock at the rate of one share of stock for each $100 debenture at any time between 1918 and 1928.

* * *

The most important of the maturing obligations of the New Haven is the $40,000,000 of one-year 5 per cent notes sold last November and falling due December 1. These notes were issued for returning and equipment purposes. Next February the New Haven will have to redeem $5,000,000 of 4 per cent debentures. President Mellen said that the balance would be fresh capital to complete the electrification of the road and for equipment and improvements.

The New York Financial Bureau says: "The foreign situation is showing improvement. A. C. P. sells ex-div. tomorrow. Information channels are disposed to favor a trading position."

The stock market may be inclined to be reactionary this morning, but do not expect more than a moderate recession. Would buy stocks on any weakness. The copper situation looks as if the metal would sell higher and as if A. C. P. and the balance of coppers would advance.—T. D. Potter.

Life Costs More---AND LABOR MUST LIVE

Business Men Must Make Their Plans Based Upon Necessary, Inevitable, JUST and Steady Increase of Pay.

(Copyright, 1913.)

Following is an extract from a telegram sent from San Francisco by W. R. Hearst to the manager of his editorial department. The message is recommended to business men generally:

"I believe that the railroad men, and all laboring men, must positively get repeated increases in wages in order to enable them to maintain even their present standard of living, and that they should properly, in the development of our civilization, obtain an even higher standard of living. Business men must count upon increasing wages as one of the inevitable conditions of modern life, and must make their plans and form their enterprises accordingly.

"HEARST."

The opinion expressed in the above dispatch is that OF A MAN WHO PAYS OUT MILLIONS A YEAR IN WAGES, AND THE HIGHEST WAGES.

A man who pays millions annually in wages, and has constantly increased wages throughout his business career, has a right to be heard by employers as well as by workers.

In Congress, when Mr. Hearst appeared to argue in favor of the Eight-Hour law against manufacturers who opposed it, Mr. Hearst pointed out the fact that his opinion concerning the eight-hour day was not theory, but positive knowledge, inasmuch as he himself employed men on the eight-hour-day basis, had done so for years, intended to do so permanently, AND HAD MADE HIS BUSINESS PAY IN SPITE OF THAT HANDICAP, if it were a handicap.

Successful business men in the United States should give careful and open-minded attention to Mr. Hearst's telegram, which is a message from one business man to others, from one considerable employer of labor to other employers of labor.

It is not a hardship for the intelligent business man to pay good wages and work his men fair hours, IF OTHER BUSINESS MEN DO THE SAME.

The great thing is that business men shall have an understanding, that they shall realize that they and the workers are actually partners in national welfare, AND THAT THEY SHALL FIGHT AGAINST THE MEAN, NARROW AND HARMFUL MAN WHO REFUSES TO DO THE JUST AND HONORABLE THING.

If a thousand men employ a million workers in a certain line of effort, and if they all pay their men well and give them reasonable hours, THAT IS FAIR FOR EVERY EMPLOYER.

The trouble with our system is that the hard-hearted, narrow-minded, close-fisted man, who goes off by himself, shunning organization, refusing co-operation, and competing upon a basis of the lowest wages and the longest hours, has been allowed to enjoy his prosperity and his thrift through meanness without question.

Let the employers work on an even, just basis as to wages and hours, and then THE BEST MAN WILL WIN—the business man will win who has the best ideas, the highest intelligence and is able to render the greatest public service.

All that the good business man asks, all that the fair employer wants, is justice and the opportunity to compete for business success and prosperity on an even basis with other men of his own class.

The salvation and prosperity of this country, menaced now by half-baked ideas of half-baked Democrats at Washington, have been based very largely upon the fact that the United States through the tariff has been protected from the unfair competition of the unfair foreign employer and ill-treated foreign labor.

American business men, thanks to the tariff, have had to compete ONLY WITH AMERICAN BUSINESS MEN

The man who has made iron in this country, and who paid his puddlers as much as $8 a day and more, has not had to worry about the man in Belgium who was paying for the same labor less than one-quarter.

The man manufacturing goods in this country has manufactured in competition with AMERICAN employers, and need not keep his mind upon the problem of meeting the competition of some Chinese manufacturer able to get labor for five cents a day.

American industry has grown, American prosperity has grown, American wages have grown—AND THE COST OF LIVING, INCLUDING FARMERS' PROFITS, ALSO HAS GROWN, because over here we have kept our markets to ourselves, and competition has been among men living, working, manufacturing and competing on the same terms.

What will happen if Democrats who believe that they know all about business, manufactures and industry, BECAUSE THEY HAVE NEVER HAD ANYTHING TO DO WITH THOSE THINGS, are to have their way, if the tariff wall is to be torn down suddenly and the competition of the meanest foreign employers and the lowest paid foreign labor is to be met, is another story.

Fortunately, one election is followed by another election. It will not be difficult for workers and employers combined to have their way AT ANOTHER ELECTION and correct the threatening follies of this Administration.

The main thing is that those now working in this country, whether they work with their hands, as laborers and mechanics, or with their brains, as employers, should co-operate on a friendly basis, through the making of laws, for the establishment of minimum wage rates, especially as regards women, and in other sane, friendly and legal ways for the bettering of conditions.

It is time to get away from the days of strikes, of dynamite, of Homestead shootings by paid Pinkerton thugs, or Los Angeles explosions by degraded, depraved misrepresentatives of labor.

It is important that those who employ labor should recognize the truth of Mr. Hearst's statement in the above telegram, "that railroad men and all laboring men must positively get repeated increases in wages in order to enable them to maintain even their present standard of living, and that they should properly, in the development of our civilization, obtain an even higher standard of living."

The workingman to-day gets not twice, but three times, four times and five times what he got when this country was young.

McMaster, the historian, writes of a day when there was JUST ONE MECHANIC IN THE UNITED STATES ABLE TO MAKE A DOLLAR A DAY ALL THE YEAR ROUND.

One President of the United States, a well meaning man, was filled with gloom and thought the country was going to the dogs because when he spoke you could no longer hire a first-class man in this country for less than fifty cents a day.

If you had told an employer of those old days, even a George Washington, a Thomas Jefferson, or any other first-class old American, that one day in this country unskilled labor would demand and get two dollars a day and skilled mechanics three dollars, four dollars, five dollars a day and more, those old Americans would have said, "Well, the country must go to the dogs; the thing is impossible."

When you say to-day that wages, high as they seem to some, must be increased, and ought to be increased, the man of to-day, if he be shortsighted, will tell you that it is impossible, and that the country must go to the dogs.

BUT IT IS NOT IMPOSSIBLE, AND THE COUNTRY NEED NOT GO TO THE DOGS.

The American employer of to-day is better off, being richer, bigger in his enterprise, safer in his undertakings, than his predecessor who used to be able to hire a first-class man for fifty cents a day.

The men that own the street railways and pay $2.50 per day are better off than they were in the days when they got their labor for $1.00 or $1.10.

After all, what is the chief asset of the employer? Is it not the competent well-fed worker?

And far above the interest of the individual employer, what is the chief asset of the nation? Is it not a population of well-fed men, well paid, with time to rest, time for mental improvement, money enough to keep their children out of the mills and mines, and in school?

Not with hatred, bitterness and regret, but with pleasure as good citizens, the competent American business men, united, with laws to protect them, fighting the unfair competition of low wages and long hours, should gladly recognize that the purpose of a republic is not merely to make a few rich and protect them in their wealth, but to make the entire population happy, contented and prosperous.

Very gladly the employers of intelligence and power must, as Mr. Hearst says, "count upon increasing wages as one of the inevitable conditions of modern life, and make their plans and form their enterprises accordingly."

The employer should be reasonable and just.

And the workers should be reasonable, honest and fair.

We ought to be able to get away from an industrial system of fighting, hatred, battle and strikes.

The worker should be content to give a fair and full day's work for a fair day's wages and fair hours of work.

We should get away from these days when the employer does his best to get the most that he can out of the workman, and give him the least possible; and when the worker's thought and that of his leader is to get the most he can out of the employer and give the least possible.

Workers and employers should treat each other justly, combining as associates, friends and brothers, and GIVE TO THIS NATION AND TO THE FUTURE THE BEST POSSIBLE PRODUCT OF THEIR COMBINED BRAINS AND MUSCLE, ORGANIZED AND APPLIED IN SUCH A WAY AS NOT TO INTERFERE WITH THE HEALTH, THE HAPPINESS, THE MENTAL GROWTH OF THE PRESENT GENERATION, OR THE WELFARE OF THE GENERATIONS TO COME.

DR. PARKHURST

Writes on

Extravagance

It Is Both a Form of Lunacy and Immorality, He Declares.

Written For The Georgian

By the Rev. Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

THERE is such a thing as extravagance. The word stands for the wild use of money. It is barbarism expressing itself in the unreasoning scattering of dollars.

It is both a form of lunacy and a form of immorality—lunacy, because there is no sense in it; immorality, because it is a contemptuous waste of values.

Poor as Well as Rich.

No man has so much money as to warrant his expending it without a calculation of rational returns, returns accruing either to the enrichment of his own life or the life of someone else.

That is a principle which is being grossly disregarded, and the habits of people are tending more and more strongly in that direction.

This holds of the poor as well as of the rich, although in the case of the former it comes to less conspicuous expression and is therefore less thought of or commented upon.

The money that hundreds of thousands of poor people expend in whisky, beer and tobacco is both idiotic and wicked.

It is idiotic because it helps to keep them poor; it is wicked because it devotes to sheer animalism treasure that ought to go to higher ends, and which might be so utilized as to raise them to a higher level of human value.

"Stage of Vulgarity."

The poor man in Scripture who put his money where it would bring back to him no sensible return was cast into the outer darkness. That is the Bible's way of characterizing a senseless and vicious treatment of assets.

This silly extravagance of the poor is encouraged by the same habit practiced on a more stupendous scale by the rich.

The uncalculating and therefore iniquitous scattering of money by men with large fortunes is one of the features of the times.

As the late D. Willis James once remarked to me, "It has reached the stage of vulgarity."

Passion for luxury has been one of the causes assigned for the sinking of the Titanic; and now we have got the Imperator, and there are more coming.

A quarter of a century ago no one thought of a suite of rooms aboard ship costing above $500.

The figure has mounted now to $5,000. One can secure now, for $500, accommodations just as comfortable, just as well suited to personal and physical requirements, as were obtainable at that figure 25 years ago, and that would leave a margin of $4,500 expended without any rational or righteous return.

"Barbaric and Sinful."

Now, when we consider the wise and necessary uses to which money can be put, the beneficent institutions that need to be supported, the causes of every kind that languish for want of funds, the destitute women and children that go poorly clad and miserably fed and unfed, I say that, when such considerations are taken into account, for a man to lay out $5,000 or any considerable part of that for the sake of luxuries of six days' steamer travel is both barbaric and sinful.

And any man, no matter how much money he has, who has risen above the level of barbarism and sin ought to be ashamed to be publicly advertised as having sacrificed a sum so egregious on the altar of his own personal and animal comfort.

SECRET OF ETERNAL YOUTH HELD BY GALAXY OF BEAUTIES IN CONTEST

Predicted she will receive many votes for honor of having likeness placed on Booster Button.

Latest entrant in race has dark hair, blue eyes and pure cameo profile.

Ponce DeLeon Would Certainly Have Believed Their Loveliness Immortal.

If Ponce DeLeon were upon the earth to-day and should come to Atlanta in search of the fountain of youth he certainly would think he had found it in the galaxy of beauty in the booster button contest. A look through the photographs of the beauties who have been nominated would almost convince one that the loveliness is immortal.

Miss Helen Irving, of No. 385 Cherokee avenue, is the newest entrant. She is fair skinned, with dark hair, sea-blue eyes and a cameo profile. And it is predicted that she will get many votes in the remaining days of the contest.

Votes for the favorites are flowing in. The nominations have by no means ceased, but the contest has gone far enough for there to be favorites.

Do you remember the slogan for the "500,000 club" booster buttons that is to go under the picture of the girl voted the fairest? It is:

"Watch Atlanta—She'll Get You Yet. 500,000 by 1920."

PAROLE IS ASKED BY BOARD FOR HAWTHORNE

Paroles for Julian Hawthorne and Dr. William J. Morton, ex-Treasurer of the United States, who have been serving sentences in the Federal Penitentiary for misuse of the mails in a stock scheme, were recommended on Thursday in a report submitted by the Federal Pardon Board to Attorney General McReynolds.

The recommendation in respect to Hawthorne and Morton had been agreed upon by the Pardon Board since their meetings at the Federal prison some time ago, but they have withheld their report, as is the custom, until the prisoners named are eligible to parole.

The indorsement of the Attorney General is regarded as a formality and it is expected that the two will receive their freedom by Saturday. A telegram will be sent at the direction of the Attorney General and this will be followed by a letter containing the formal notice of the paroles.

"I am delighted that the recommendation is before Mr. McReynolds," said Hawthorne, when Deputy Warden Wilbur Hawk informed him of the action of the Pardon Board. "I was aware that the board had considered my case favorably and it pleases me that it requires only the signature of the Attorney General to make me a free man."

It was announced Thursday that the new $260,000 crematory would be put into operation Friday, and to make assurance doubly sure that the row over this plant between Mayor Woodward and the Council has ended, Mayor Woodward was invited to light the fire.

Mayor Woodward was uncertain Thursday whether he would accept the invitation. He has never been down to look over the plant, which is located just back of Terminal Station.

MACON, July 24.—W. M. Herring, an engineer, whose father was buried yesterday, was arrested to-day by the sheriff, upon affidavit made by his divorced wife that alimony had not been paid.

Since the divorce both Herring and his former wife have married again, and it is for that reason that he refuses to pay her alimony, notwithstanding the order of the court. His case is going to the Supreme Court for decision.

YOUNG THIEF IS TRAPPED BY RUSE

Girl, 14, Caught Stealing Purse, Freed on Plea of Victims in Series of Robberies.

Following a series of thefts at the summer camp of the employees of the Southern Bell Telephone Company in Lakewood Heights during the past two weeks, a 14-year-old girl was trapped and caught in the act of taking a purse by County Policeman R. E. Jackson Wednesday night.

Every effort was exerted to avoid publicity of the incident. When the girl was taken to the county police headquarters, Miss Katherine Tatum, superintendent of the camp, appeared and asked that no charge be made against her.

The miscreant returned the purse to Miss Tatum, declaring that she took it by mistake, thinking it to be her own. The money it contained, amounting to about $7, was intact. The girl was then released and Thursday morning was discharged from the employ of the telephone company.

Various Traps Set.

Since the first report that a Raffles was operating among the women at the camp, various traps have been set, but without success. The articles which disappeared ranged from portions of women's attire to small amounts of money and bits of jewelry. Almost nightly, it is said, something was stolen.

Wednesday night Miss Tatum called in County Policeman Jackson and informed him of the thefts. The officer got a woman's purse and, placing it upon a table in full view in one of the tents, concealed himself behind a trunk to wait developments.

A short time before the last car to the city was scheduled to leave, the policeman saw the girl enter the tent hastily, and after glancing about, snatch the purse from the table and depart.

Springing from his hiding place, Jackson placed her under arrest.

Pleads for Girl Thief.

Miss Tatum was informed and the girl taken to police headquarters. When Miss Tatum confronted her an hour later, the young prisoner's grief was pathetic. She protested her innocence of any intention at thievery and denied that she had perpetrated the other thefts.

Miss Tatum asked that no charge be lodged against her. The girl was permitted to return to her home.

Thursday morning Miss Tatum declared that the incident was closed.

"It was simply one of those cases of being unable to withstand temptation," she declared. "It was not so much the girl's fault, considering the circumstances. I pity her and hold no malice toward her, nor do any of the other girls in the camp. She just couldn't help it."

Snake Kills 3 Tots; Fourth One Drowns

KNOXVILLE, July 24.—Becoming alarmed at the continued absence of her three children who had gone into the barn to hunt eggs, Mrs. John Cooper, wife of a prosperous farmer of Blount County, instituted a search and found the three dying from the bites of a rattlesnake.

While the woman was gone her fourth child, a baby boy, fell into a creek and drowned.

Headless Body of Girl Found at Sea

BOSTON, July 24.—The finding of the headless body of an apparently well-to-do young woman at sea, 35 miles east of the Georges Bank by Captain Charles White, of the Gloucester fishing schooner Jennie H. Gilbert, is believed to reveal a death by violence at sea, possibly on a trans-Atlantic liner.

The body was found ten miles south of the southerly track of trans-Atlantic steamers, about 170 miles out from Boston. Corsets of apparently expensive make, a black shirtwaist, portions of a dark green silk skirt and high button boots were on the body.

Back From Liberia To Die in the South

NEW YORK, July 24.—Pauline Woodson, a 69-year-old negress, was permitted yesterday to land in this country on the assurance of her son-in-law, David Robertson, that he would care for her in his home at Charleston, S. C.

Fifteen years ago Pauline, her husband and daughter went to Liberia and built a hut in the woods. They thought the life of a semi-civilized African superior to the drudgery of their Southern home. Her husband and daughter died in Liberia, and she came back to die in South Carolina.

Eugenic Restaurant To Save Babies' Lives

NEW YORK, July 24.—"Thousands of children are brought into the world handicapped for life because their mothers were ill-nourished before they were born."

Miss Mabel A. Parker thus tersely explains why she has embarked on one of the most novel eugenic experiments that has yet been made in this country—a prenatal restaurant.

This restaurant, which will be conducted solely for women who are expected to give birth to a child within six months, will be opened in two weeks.

Currency Reform Not Likely to Pass

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Passage of a currency reform bill at this session of Congress was considered most doubtful to-day unless President Wilson brings peace between the warring factions of the House Banking and Currency Committee.

Chairman Glass to-day presented to the committe a draft of an amendment to his bill providing for a prohibition of interlocking directorates. Mr. Glass is against such a proposal by the committee by a vote of 7 to 5, forced him to draw up the amendment.

Love Affair Drives Mme. Curie from Paris

WARSAW, July 24.—Mme. Curie, discoverer, with her husband, of radium, will return to her home here soon to remain permanently. She will have charge of a radiological laboratory.

Another reason for her return is the gossip connecting her name with that of Prof. Langevin, of the College of France, whose wife sued him for separation. Letters between Mme. Curie and Prof. Langevin became public.

Screaming Militant Bombards Premier

MORLEY, YORKSHIRE, ENGLAND, July 24.—Premier Asquith was again attacked by suffragettes to-day. While he was proceeding to the town hall to receive the freedom of the borough a woman ran screaming to his automobile and threw package after package of papers at the Premier.

The police rushed to the Premier's rescue and after a desperate struggle the woman was arrested. She was Miss Hey Jones, a well-known sympathizer with the cause.

GADSDEN, July 24.—Daniel B. Fleming, aged 74, and Miss Jennie Rayburn, aged 20, were married at Guntersville, county seat of Marshall County, to-day. They will live on a farm.

PRESIDENT IS BRANDED AS DICTATOR

Works Charges Executive With Usurping Legislative Power. Scores Tariff 'Influence.'

WASHINGTON, July 24.—On the floor of the Senate to-day Senator Works, of California, denounced President Wilson for influencing tariff legislation in the summing up of a speech on the tariff bill pending before the Senate.

"The tendency of latter-day politics is to exalt the executive at the expense of the legislative and judicial power of the Government, and make the President the master and ruler of them all, and the master and not the servant of the whole people," said the Senator.

"It is an unwarranted and dangerous tendency. Every public official, however exalted, is only the servant of the people, and should at all times be subject to their control and subservient to their will in conformity to the Constitution and laws of the country, and each department of the Government, if its institutions are to be preserved, must be kept within the limitations of its powers as fixed by the Constitution.

He Charges Tariff Coercion.

"If this bill is passed, it will not be by the willing and voluntary consent of a majority of this body. It will be the result, in part, of outside influence that should never enter into the deliberations or acts of Congress. The Constitution provides:

> All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.

"The President is also made Commander-in-Chief of the army and navy. That instrument further provides that 'the executive power shall be vested in the President of the United States of America.' It is further provided: 'He shall from time to time give to the Congress information of the state of the Union and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient.'

No Warrant for Influence.

"This is the only power vested in the President in respect of the making of laws. There is no warrant in the Constitution for his participation in the formation or passage of laws or the exercise of any influence on legislation beyond that of recommending to the consideration of the lawmaking power such measures as he shall judge necessary or expedient."

Here the Senator said that his views coincided with those injected into the Democratic platform of 1904 and he quoted from the declaration of principles drawn by the Democratic party at that time.

In concluding his speech, Senator Works said:

"I have approached this subject with reluctance and purely from a sense of duty. I expressed similar views during the last administration. I have the greatest respect and esteem for the incumbent of the great office of President of the United States, as I had also for his predecessor.

Explains Causes of Alarm.

"I believe in the integrity and sincerity of his purpose to serve the people and the country to their very best interests. But, sir, this can not deter me from expressing my views on a question so serious and far-reaching in its consequences.

"It makes the situation only the more alarming that one of such high ideals and patriotic purposes should do anything that can reasonably be construed to be a usurpation of power or an infringement of the Constitution that may some time be appealed to as a precedent by one less conscientious and patriotic."

THE WEATHER.

Forecast for Atlanta and Georgia—Thundershowers Thursday and Friday.

Lightning 'Scrubs' Tower at Terminal

One of the most freakish stunts ever performed by lightning in Atlanta was discovered Thursday as a result of the striking of one of the towers of the Terminal Station. The brick and fancy work on both towers had been stained black by smoke, but the lightning cleaned one as perfectly as though it had been scrubbed. The other, still black, presents a striking contrast.

The shock of the stroke was felt in the waiting room and almost caused a panic. Little damage was done to the tower, but electrical and chemical experts still are unable to solve the mystery of its magic cleaning.

Fan Market Slumps; More Rain Forecast

A dealer in electrical supplies was offering regular $9 electric fans for $3.50 Thursday morning, but found no buyers even at that price. Atlantans evidently believe the weather man's prediction that the remainder of the summer will be cool and pleasant.

At 8 o'clock Thursday morning the official thermometer registered 72 degrees, and the mercury had only climbed 10 degrees higher at 1 o'clock.

Showers Thursday night or Friday is the forecast for Atlanta and vicinity.

Mann Stops Work of House by Filibuster

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Representative Mann again prevented the House from transacting any business to-day. Employing the same tactics he used yesterday—a point of no quorum—Mann demanded a roll call. Adjournment finally was ordered by a vote of 154 to 58.

The Mann filibuster is occasioned by the action of the Democrats in preventing a discussion last week of the Caminetti-Diggs white slave cases.

Georgia Rhodes Man Calls Oxford 'Grind'

BOSTON, July 24.—Being a student at Oxford is strenuous work, according to the verdict of five Rhodes scholars who returned to-day on the White Star liner Arabic.

The five were Frank B. Bristow, son of Senator Bristow, of Kansas; Walter S. Bryan, of Georgia; C. B. Grosland, of Alabama; W. Lloyd Williams, of North Dakota, and W. A. Zeigler, of Iowa. The five have completed the four years' course at Oxford.

CARRY CANES FOR MASHERS.

BOSTON, July 24.—Members of the Women's Homestead Association here carry canes and whistles as protection against mashers. The whistles are to attract attention.

STATE READY AND WILL FIGHT A DELAY

Solicitor Disappointed When Court Fails to Draw Jury Panels at Time Planned.

With the belief growing that a serious effort is being made to delay the trial of Leo Frank, set for next Monday, Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey Thursday renewed his protest against further postponement in a vigorous statement, declaring the prosecution is ready with a complete case against the National Pencil Company factory head, accused of killing Mary Phagan.

The trial date rests entirely with Judge Roan, who is in Covington. The drawing of the jury venire awaited word from him, expected some time during the afternoon. At his home it was said the Judge would not return until to-morrow.

Reuben R. Arnold, of counsel for Frank, was said to have consulted with Judge Roan in Covington and presented arguments for delay, but the truth of this report could not be established.

Judge Leaves for Atlanta.

Judge Pendleton, who will conduct the drawing of the jury, said Thursday afternoon that he had received no word from Judge Roan and would proceed unless he did.

A long distance message from Covington had it that Judge Roan left shortly before 2 o'clock for Atlanta and the indications were that it would be known definitely before Thursday night whether the long-awaited trial will begin Monday or be delayed once more.

In a statement to The Georgian, Solicitor Dorsey said:

"The prosecution was ready June 30 in the case of the State vs. Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of little Mary Phagan on April 26 last. We have subpenaed all the witnesses, expecting to try this case on Monday next. This date was set at the suggestion of Judge L. S. Roan at the instance of counsel for the defense.

"We are disappointed that the jury

Let the Frank Trial Go On

Leo Frank should be placed on trial Monday for the murder of Mary Phagan.

The crime was committed April 26; Frank was arrested April 28; he was indicted May 23 and his trial set for June 30.

At the suggestion of the judge in whose court the trial is to take place, a postponement was agreed on, and the date of the trial moved up to July 28.

Now attempts are being made to secure another postponement. The only reason given to the public is that the weather is hot and it would be disagreeable to hold the trial in the summer.

Of course it is hot, but it isn't any hotter in the court room than it is in jail.

Both the prosecution and the defense have had ample time to prepare their cases. If Frank is guilty, the State can prove his guilt as well now as later on; if he is innocent, the defense can prove his innocence as well in summer as in winter.

The public has taken a keen interest in the Phagan case and it will demand that the man who killed her be punished, whether that man is Frank or someone else. Furthermore, it is tired of delays.

Public sentiment is where it was on the date first set for Frank's trial and it will be at the same place if the trial is delayed for a year.

Atlantans are awaiting the trial with open minds. They are not holding themselves up as judges. They know the law is supreme and they want it to take its course. But they want that course taken without seemingly endless delays.

STATE DEMANDS TRIAL OF FRANK ON MONDAY

Solicitor Declares He Is Ready and Will Oppose Any Move for Delay.

was not drawn this morning as Judge Roan stated it would be done.

"The State assuredly will be ready Monday unless something entirely unforeseen happens, and will ask trial of this man at that time."

Jury Not Drawn.

Superior Judge John T. Pendleton declined to draw a jury for the Frank trial Thursday morning until he heard definitely from Judge L. S. Roan whether the case would be opened next Monday. Judge Pendleton announced he would know definitely by 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon whether the case would be called Monday, and he would draw the jury at that time if necessary.

Deputy Sheriff Plinnie Miner had instructions from Judge Roan to have one of the other judges draw the jury Thursday unless he was notified to the contrary. Miner heard nothing from Judge Roan and carried the jury box to Judge Pendleton to have the twelve panels drawn. He notified the attorneys for the State and the prosecution in ample time for them to be at the court. Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey and his assistant were the only attorneys to put in an appearance.

It developed Thursday morning that there were two rather ruffled chiefs at the police department the previous afternoon when Jim Conley was sneaked from his cell in the station over to the Tower without their permission and without their knowledge.

Chief Lanford said: "This will never happen again."

Chief Beavers would not talk of the incident, but is understood to have told the two detectives, Starnes and Campbell, that if the negro were taken from the police station again he (Beavers) proposed to be in on it.

There was a commotion at police headquarters Wednesday afternoon, when it was found that Conley had been spirited away to confront Newt Lee in the Tower. Chief Lanford knew nothing of the circumstance until he was informed by The Georgian. Even then he insisted that Conley was in his cell.

Then Detectives Explain.

He went to Chief Beavers' office to see if permission had been given there for Conley's removal. Beavers said he did not know Conley was gone. Station Sergeant Holcomb was appealed to. He said he had not been notified that the prisoner was to be taken away. Turnkey Bayne, the last resort, was asked to explain the mysterious disappearance of Conley. He informed Chief Beavers that Detectives Starnes and Campbell had taken him about a half hour before.

The Chief, to satisfy himself that Conley was still in custody, made a personal visit to the jail.

When Starnes and Campbell later were in conference with the Chief they told him that they had said nothing about their intention because neither Chief Beavers nor Chief Lanford was in the station at the time.

Firemen Plan Strike When Denied Outing

DALTON, July 24.—Cooler heads among members of the Dalton Fire Department saved the city from being without fire fighters when the department debated at length whether or not to resign.

The trouble arose over the City Council's failure to make an appropriation for the firemen's annual outing. Citizens have made up a fund for the outing, and the firemen will leave here on August 9 for St. Simons Island.

HOTEL ELEVATOR HIS SCHOOL OF AVIATION

Robert Pettit, 4, Who Declares He's Going to be "Airship Flyer."

"I Don't Like It," He Says, "But I Must Get Used to Being In the Air."

Robert Pettit, 4-year-old son of Mrs. Frances Pettit, of Denver, spends from six to eight hours every day in the elevator of Hotel Ansley, because he wants to be an aviator.

"I got a bank with 4 pennies and a dime. That ought to buy a good machine," he says.

Robert figures it this way: There isn't much use in buying and running an airship if you are going to get sick every time you get a few feet up in the air; the thing to do, therefore, is to get used to being off the ground—and then buy your airship.

"I don't like to ride in elevators," he says, "but I've got to. I'm going to be an airship flyer when I grow up, and I've got to get used to being off the ground. It is working fine, too I can go up to the twelfth floor now without getting dizzy. I'll make a dandy aviator, I'll bet!"

The youngster has become a familiar figure to attaches and guests of the hotel. Every morning, as soon as he can slip away from Mrs. Pettit and his nurse, he drags his little chair into the elevator and sits solemnly behind the operator. He manifests great interest in the operation of the lift, and his greatest joy comes when he is allowed to hold the levers and make believe he is operating the car.

Robert says he is going to have an airship as soon as he is sure he can fly without getting sick.

"I've got a bank at home with four pennies and a dime in it," he said. "I guess that'll get a pretty good airship. If it ain't enough, Mama will give me as much more as I need."

TWO ARSONETTES HELD.

GLASGOW, July 24.—Charged with an attempt to fire a large building belonging to the postoffice, two women were arrested here to-day. They are believed to be suffragettes.

Dr. Starnes to Play Great Symphony as Farewell to Atlanta

The whole of Tschaikowsky's "Symphonie Pathetique," regarded by many as the greatest piece of instrumental music ever composed, will be played at a free organ concert Thursday evening at the Auditorium-Armory under the Music Festival Association's auspices.

The presentation of such a work complete in one program is something new in the annals of music in the South. This concert will be somewhat in the nature of a farewell from Dr. Starnes, who will terminate his Atlanta engagement in the early fall. The playing of the "Symphonie Pathetique" is a monumental undertaking for one man.

Dr. Starnes said:

"In arranging this work I had no idea that its presentation by means of a concert organ should be as ideal as by an orchestra of 150 pieces, but not one person in 200 ever will have the opportunity to hear the symphony by a great orchestra."

The program also includes a short Bach fugue and Liszt's "Dream of Love."

$10,000,000 Offered To Fight Boll Weevil

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Secretary of Agriculture Houston to-day told Southern Senators and Representatives at a conference that his department was doing everything possible to wipe out the boll weevil.

Senator Vardeman, of Mississippi, said Congress would appropriate $10,000,000 a year to fight the weevil if the department could show that this was necessary.

Counterfeiter Given Freedom by Wilson

Charles L. Cunningham, convicted at Gadsden, Ala., in October, 1908, of counterfeiting coins and sentenced to the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary for five years, Thursday was pardoned by President Woodrow Wilson.

Cunningham was in jail five months before his conviction, and had but a few months more of his five years to serve.

SENATE DEFEATS NEW COUNTY MEASURE

Barrow Advocates Lose in Upper House After Long and Strenuous Fight.

The bill creating Barrow County, with Winder as the county seat, was defeated in the Senate Thursday afternoon after a long and strenuous fight. Advocates of the new county declared a strong effort would be made to reconsider the action.

A large number of people were down from Winder to witness the action of the Senate. The House had already acted favorably on the bill. Senator DuBose, of the Thirtieth District, led the fight for the new county.

While this bill passed the House with the indorsement of three of the six Representatives from the district affected, it is known that only one of the Senators of the three from the counties concerned to-day will vote for the bill. The other two, it is said, will actively oppose the bill when it comes up for passage.

Either the defeat or the passage of the Barrow County bill, it was argued by some, will mean an end of the consideration of new counties by the present Legislature. Others, however, claim the agitation will go on unabated, regardless of the verdict of the Senate, for strong delegations from the counties affected are on hand to wage their fight, and will not give up until the last card has been played.

Among the new counties which are to be voted on are Warner, Candler and Milledge.

Lamar, Hansell and Norwood Counties will be considered by the House committee Thursday afternoon.

Foreign Colony in Shanghai in Peril

Special Cable to The Georgian.

SHANGHAI, July 24.—Foreign residents of this city are in grave danger as a result of the fighting between the loyal troops and the southern insurgents. A foreign naval brigade from the warships in the harbor is being held in readiness to land at a moment's notice should the situation become more acute.

The Government officials are charging that Japan is aiding the revolt and is lending all its strength to the citizens of the southern countries in the hope that the Republic may be disintegrated.

Factory Supplants Farm as Exporter

WASHINGTON, July 24.—How the United States is changing from great exporter in foodstuffs to manufactures is shown in every report issued nowadays by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

The bureau's latest figures show a growth in exports of manufactures from $468,00,000 in 1903 to $1,200,000,000 in the fiscal year just closed and in manufacturers' materials from $409,000,000 to $740,000,000, while the exports of foodstuffs remained at a standstill, $510,000,000 having been the value of the exports in that line both in 1913 and 1903.

Missing Expressman Accused of Forgery

CORDELE, July 24.—Detectives in the employ of the Southern Express Company seeking S. J. Smith, missing agent of the company at Warwick, have gained no clew as to his present whereabouts.

It is alleged that on the same night that it is charged Smith misappropriated all of the funds on hand, including the receipts of the office for several days, he forged two express money orders amounting to $60. A book of $100 blank orders is missing from the office.

Veterans Had Great Time at Brunswick

Confederate veterans returning from the State reunion, held July 16 and 17 at Brunswick, are enthusiastic over the hospitality tendered them. About ten veterans from Atlanta were present and the total attendance was nearly 500.

Colonel J. Jefferson Thomas reports the reunion one of the most enjoyable he ever attended. The Daughters of the Confederacy served coffee and sandwiches at their headquarters and barbecue and Brunswick stew was provided by the city of Brunswick. A chartered steamer took the veterans to St. Simons Island for a watermelon cutting.

Three old Worcester hexagonal vases and covers brought $655. A bronze group of St. George and the dragon was sold for $1,110.

SENATOR WOULD ANNEX NORTH MEXICO

Hitchcock of Nebraska Also Favors Dividing Remainder of Country Into Small Nations.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The annexation of States in Northern Mexico by the United States and a division of the remainder of the country into separate governments was suggested to-day by Senator Hitchcock, of Nebraska, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, as a possible way of bringing about peace in that country.

"The cession of a portion of Northern Mexico to the United States in payment for the enormous indemnity which must be asked of that country for damage to American life and property seems to me to be a feasible way of settling these claims," said Hitchcock. "It will be impossible for Mexico to meet the demands of the United States in cash.

"These States also would serve as 'buffer' between the United States and the Mexican nations farther south.

"Inasmuch as Mexico is now torn between two conflicting factions, it is within the bounds of possibility that peace might be restored through the establishment of separate nations governed by the chief of the contending factions.

Sees Speedy Way to Peace.

"It would seem at present that this would be the most speedy way of bringing a cessation of hostilities to that war-ridden land. Of course, these suggestions are in no way to be taken as an authoritative statement as to the course the United States will pursue. They simply embody my own views on the subject."

President Wilson has not formulated a definite plan for dealing with the Mexican situation, he has not selected any of the alternatives suggested to him for escaping from the present tangle, nor will he do so before his conference with Ambassador Wilson at the White House, scheduled for Saturday.

This statement was made at the White House to-day and is understood to emanate directly from the President.

The proposal that the President should take the initiative in suggesting mediation to the warring factions south of the border is scouted at the White House.

Offer Sure To Be Rejected.

In the first place, it is unlikely that either side would consent to the United States acting as a peacemaker; secondly, the administration does not feel that it should offer its services when it is almost certain they would be declined with little ceremony.

Following a conference with President Wilson, Senator Bacon, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said that the United States, acting as mediator in Mexico, had been considered merely tentatively by the President.

"I do not believe that a policy of mediation will be adopted," said Senator Bacon. "The United States would have to be invited to act as a peacemaker and this, I think, will not occur.

Bacon Denies Intervention.

"The suggestion is only one of many now being considered by the President, who intends to take no active step until after he has had an opportunity to confer with Ambassador Wilson."

Senator Bacon said that all the energies of the United States Government would be devoted to settling the Mexican trouble without intervention, because the seriousness of this step is appreciated by all officials in Washington.

The Senator from Georgia also said that he could not conceive of any immediate developments which would force armed intervention and added that the protection of Americans and other foreigners in Mexico necessarily must devolve on the consuls and other Government agents now in the republic.

Senator Bacon refused to deny or confirm the rumor that Secretary of State Bryan was to head the Mexican commission of mediation and conciliation.

"As far as I know," said Bacon, "no man's name has been mentioned for this place."

Bryan Hurrying to Capital for Conference.

CHICAGO, July 24.—Secretary of State Bryan was in Chicago thirty minutes to-day. He arrived from Iowa, where he had been delivering chautauque lectures, and left at 12:40 o'clock for Washington. The only official who met him at the train was William L. O'Connell, Governor Dunne's political representative.

"I shall leave Washington again as soon as I feel I properly can," said Mr. Bryan. "I have several chautauqua engagements to fill during the summer."

Secretary Bryan declined to discuss his coming conference with Henry Lane Wilson, United States Ambassador to Mexico, who is on his way to Washington to meet President Wilson and the State Department chief.

Cardinal Gibbons Lauds Wilson's Mexico Policy.

WESTMINSTER, MD., July 24.—That Cardinal Gibbons is in sympathy with the Wilson administration's refusal to recognize the Huerta Government was clearly shown when, in an interview, the aged prelate said he thought the present Mexican Government is not well enough established to give it permanence, and, therefore, should not be recognized by the United States.

He said he sympathized with President Wilson in the delicate questions confronting him in the Mexican matter and thought he is doing his duty conscientiously in withholding recognition of the Huerta regime.

He thought that, while European nations were urging upon this country some action for the protection of their citizens and their property on Mexican soil, the consequences of American interference were of too serious character to justify hasty action.

He pointed out that it was by no means certain that the Huerta government would not soon be overthrown, the uncertainty being so grave that it could scarcely be reckoned a sound de facto power, to say nothing of its de jure authority. Under the circumstances President Wilson is acting wisely, the cardinal believes, in the course he has thus far pursued.

Praise for Elder Diaz.

Referring to the uncomfortable conditions American citizens on the Mexican border are enduring, the Cardinal said there was a possibility that this border might be pushed farther south for their relief. He alluded to the extreme discontent of the Mexican people in the State of Sonora and opposite El Paso, Tex., as giving rise to the impression of such a possibility.

The great mistake of the Mexican people, he said, was in their repudiation of Porfirio Diaz, who had given them a firm government, maintained peace, and had done more than any other man to develop the resources of the country and advance its prosperity.

Request for Rangers To Cross Border Denied.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The War Department to-ady formally denied the request of Representative Smith, of Texas, that a company of Texas Rangers be allowed to cross the border to rescue the Americans said to be in peril at Madera.

The department officials take the stand that no expeditionary movement of this kind could possibly be countenanced by the Government. Private raids engineered by filibusters would have no standing in the eyes of the world and the United States could not legally take steps to protect such rangers if they were surrounded by federalist troops in Mexico and slaughtered.

England Ready to Send Battleship to Mexico.

LONDON, July 24.—Great Britain is keeping a watchful eye on the situation in Mexico. In the House of Commons to-day Foreign Minister Grey, replying to a member's question, stated that the Government knew there was serious disturbance in various parts of Mexico and that British subjects were in danger. He declared that not only had citizens of the empire suffered, but that other foreigners had also suffered indignities at the hands of the Mexicans.

The Foreign Secretary stated that he was in communication with the Admiralty and in case it was decided advisable a British warship would be dispatched to Mexico.

HOUSE VOTES TO GIVE SCHOOLS $2,600,000

Appropriation Made After Four-Hour Debate—One of Forty Amendments Passes.

After a four-hour debate the House Thursday morning, sitting as a committee of the whole, acted favorably on section 5 of the general appropriations bill, covering appropriations to colleges and the public school fund.

Despite the fact that more than 40 amendments were offered on it, but one change was made. This was an increase of $100,000 in the public school fund, making the total $2,600,000. The Appropriations Committee had recommended that $2,500,000 be appropriated, this being the exact amount paid out during the past year.

Scores of Speeches Made.

The amendment adopted was offered by Representative Stovall, and was carried by a vote of 80 to 45. The entire section was productive of debate, half a hundred speeches being made. The Stovall amendment came in the way of a compromise, a strenuous effort being made to make the appropriation $2,750,000.

It is believed the House will complete its work on the appropriations bill this week. Two days have already been consumed in it and if the House passes it this week a new record will have been set for expediency.

Quick Action Seems Sure.

It will be taken up by the Senate immediately and everything looks favorable for the sending of it to the Governor ten days before the erpiration of the session. Governor Slaton has threatened to call an extra session unless the bill reaches him by this time.

An effort to limit the time of the consideration of the bill by the House as a committee of the whole to an hour for each section except the fifth caused an hour's hot debate. The resolution provided for five-minute speeches by eight members and twenty minutes for Chairman Wheatley, of the Appropriations Committee. This was killed by a 91 to 34 vote.

Smith Cotton Products Company in the Grant building, has filed a petition in the Superior Court asking for a receiver for the company on the grounds that disagreements between him and A. A. He declares that up to 30 days ago the company was earning $20,000 a year.

Loaded With Meals, He Defies the World

CHICAGO, July 24.—Impelled by five meals at once, Juluius Johnson to-day scaled the walls of a three-story flat building, armed himself with bricks pulled from the chimney and defied the world.

At the station Johnson's relatives came for him. They said he had purchased a 21-meal ticket at a restaurant and just before his escapade had eaten five meals, one after the other.

CONVICTS RIOT IN SING SING; SET PRISON AFIRE

Mutiny Follows Removal of Warden Liked by the Prisoners. Further Outbreak Feared.

OSSINNING, N. Y., July 24.—Mutinous convicts, in open rebellion against their keepers, to-day made an attempt to destroy the entire Sing Sing prison property by fire.

They set fire to the clothing manufacturing building, in which all the shoes, clothing and like articles are made. The fire was extinguished by the prison fire department after it had swept the shoeshop.

The entire penal population is being kept under lock in fear of further outbreaks.

Fire Laid to Trusties.

The attempt to burn the prison building came early to-day after a night of wild excitement in the prison.

When the warden, James H. Clancey, was told of the threats, he directed that no prisoners, excepting the trusties, should be allowed out of their cells. It is believed that some of the trusties, acting under orders of their imprisoned fellows, applied the match to the clothing factory building.

As the fire raged the criminals behind locked doors set up a terrific din. They shouted "fire," called vile names, beat their doors and made the prison hideous with noise.

"We want Kennedy," came the constant chant above the din.

Protest Warden's Removal.

This protest against the removal of the former warden, who was indicted by the Westchester County Grand Jury, was the keynote of the entire rebellion that for 36 hours has had the State's largest penal institution in a state of mutiny.

All night long the convicts kept up their riotous demonstration. They made the food the first basis of complaint. They contemptuously tossed away bits of food and went to their cells surly and disobedient.

Guards are on duty to-day all along the prison walls, the officers fearing that the sullen convicts may make a concerted effort to escape.

Seeking to relieve the perilous situation at the prison, Warden Clancey this afternoon made arrangements with the railroad to take 200 second and third term prisoners to Auburn to-morrow. With these riotous prisoners out of the way, the warden believes he can restore order in the institution.

CAMP LIFE INCREASES HELLO GIRLS' ABILITY

Here's Elsie Erd, a fair camper, at a little task that helps to break the monotony.

Swimming, Rambles in Woods, Auto Rides and Sleeping Outdoors Give New Lease on Life.

If you do not believe the simple life is conducive to better work, ask some of the heads of departments of the Bell Telephone Company. They'll tell you that since the establishment of Camp Wyanoke at Lakewood Heights, where the young women employees of the company spend their vacations and their week-ends, the work of the "hello girls," the stenographers and the other young women who work in the big building at Mitchell and Pryor streets, has greatly improved.

"The idea we had in mind when Camp Wyanoke was established," Miss Katherine Tatum, who is in charge of the camp, said, Thursday morning, "is working out splendidly. The girls come back to Atlanta after a few days or a week's stay at the camp invigorated and almost with a new lease on life. They have breathed pure, fresh air; they have worked about the camp, and they return to their work with a vim and a determination that is usually lacking during the hot summer months."

Simple Life Throughout.

The simple life is lived in all its phases at Camp Wyanoke. With the exception of the harder and unfamiliar work of cooking all the work is done by the girls. They wash dishes, wash their own clothing—or most of it—keep house, sew and do a hundred and one other tasks.

When work is done they go swimming and wading, or take long rides in the automobiles the company sends out to them several times a week.

Every Wednesday and Saturday nights there are dances and games of various kinds.

The practice of sleeping in the open air is considered by Miss Tatum one of the best features of the camp. It gives many girls who heretofore have been cooped up in tiny city rooms a chance to recuperate.

Sunday School in Camp.

Every girl employed by the company is given a chance to taste the joys of camp life. Those who had taken their vacations before the camp was installed have been given a leave of absence of three or four days, that they might visit the camp. Others spend their entire vacation there.

There are always about twenty girls at the camp, and on Saturday and Sunday this number is sometimes swelled to a hundred, by the girls who come out to spend Sunday. Sunday school is held in the open air under the trees, and is usually attended by about a hundred young women.

Sewage Plant To Be Finished by Sept. 1

W. A. Hansel, assistant chief of construction, has announced that the Peachtree Creek sewage disposal plant will be ready for operation by September 1. With the completion of this plant Peachtree Creek, about which there has been much complaint, immediately will be purified.

The main part of the plant practically is complete, but the city has not yet been able to get sufficient stone for the filter beds.

Lamar Indicted to Reach 'Higher Ups'

NEW YORK, July 24.—The Government's real object in secretly indicting David Lamar after his revelations before the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee was to frighten the "Wolf of Wall Street" into giving information in contemplated action against the men higher up in Lamar's impersonations. Men high in political and financial life are believed to have profited through Lamar's operations.

AGED MEN INJURED.

ELBERTON, July 24.—Martin Crawford, 62 years old, and James Bond, aged 60, came near losing their lives when Crawford's mule team backed off the bridge over Coldwater Creek. Two of Crawford's ribs and his breast bone were broken. Bond also had two ribs broken.

U. S. TO DIVORCE TRUSTS FROM RAILROADS

Government Plans End to Rebate Extortions Costing Lines $42,000,000 a Year.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The answer of the Interstate Commerce Commission to the application of the railroads east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers for permission to make a general increase of 5 per cent in freight rates, will be as follows:

1. The application will be denied.
2. All railroads will be ordered to discontinue making "allowances" to certain favored big industrial combinations.

This will save the general public from paying the additional $42,000,000 a year which the railroads are asking for and deprive certain big industrial corporations of a sum ranging between $50,000,000 and $100,000,000 annually.

The Commission during the past few months has secretly made an investigation to determine just the extent to which the practice of making "allowances" to industrial short line railroads, owned by manufacturing concerns, is prevalent.

His Names and Facts.

It is now in possession of the names of the concerns which receive these "allowances" or rebates, or discriminatory rates—and in addition it has the names of the railroads which pay them, the amounts received by the favored industrial corporations and something of the extent to which the practice injures the competing manufacturers, who are not in a position to enter into such arrangements.

In a large number of instances, it is claimed, the practice amounts to extortion. The railroads are compelled by the demands of competition to make allowances to the manufacturer for transferring his product over his own insignificant trackage to the junction where the regular railroad takes up his cars. Where several railroads are bidding for such a manufacturer's business the one which makes the most liberal allowance usually gets the freight

To End the Extortion.

In view of this fact it is expected that the answer which the commission will give the railroads will meet with their approval and co-operation, and will do away with the most important of existing improper practices without the necessity of prosecution.

The railroads are asking for the five per cent increase on the ground that they must have increased revenue to pay their large operating expenses, and particularly, to pay the higher wages demanded by their employees.

The recent demands for higher wages would take $17,000,000.

Can Pay Wage Advance.

Under the order which the Interstate Commerce Commission will issue the railroads will get more than $42,000,000 by simply cutting off an improper expense, and correspondingly, the favored trusts and combinations which have been mulcting them of the amount will be deprived of it.

The railroads will be placed in a position to pay their employees the living wage they demand, the danger of a huge strike will be avoided, and the whole thing will be accomplished without the shippers—and through them the general public—being required to pay more for the transportation of the necessities of life.

Board at Work to End Strike Deadlock

NEW YORK, July 24.—Hoping to end the deadlock and avoid the threatened strike of the 100,000 trainmen on the Eastern railroads, the Federal Board of Mediators to-day went into consultation with the men's representatives. Later the mediators will meet the railway managers.

The deadlock is the result of the insistence of the employers that their grievances also be arbitrated at the same time the men's demands are taken up.

Settlement Sought Of $14,000,000 Debt

WASHINGTON, July 24.—A debt of $14,000,000, probably the largest dispute of a financial nature in the United States, will be the subject of a conference in this city to-morrow. Virginia is trying to collect that amount from West Virginia and commissions representing the Legislatures of both States will meet here to-morrow and try to reach an agreement.

The debt arises out of West Virginia's withdrawing from Virginia a half century ago and since refusing to pay for improvements Virginia made.

Champ Clark Won't Let His Wife Fly

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The yearning of Mrs. Champ Clark, wife of the Speaker of the House, to engage in an aviation flight, while visiting Representative and Mrs. Baker, at Wildwood, N. J., received a setback when the Speaker flatly refused to let her go.

"I never talk back to Champ," she said. He is master of his own house and so I guess I won't fly just now."

Democrat Is Elected Arkansas Governo

LITTLE ROCK, July 24.—Late returns to-day showed George W. Hays, Democrat, was elected Governor of Arkansas by a large majority. The Republican, Progressive and Socialist candidates were running far behind.

The surprise of the election was the failure of the Bull Moose faction to display any strength. Colonel George W. Murphy was a poor third.

Harry Meyers, Republican, carried the normal Republican counties. Both Democrats and Republicans before the election predicted heavy losses to the Progressives.

TEXTILE MAKERS SCORE COTTON TARIFF CUTS

Petition to Congress Asserts Democrats Forget Pledges and Industry Will Suffer.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—A petition signed by more than 60 leading cotton manufacturing and distributing firms in the United States, protesting against the cotton tariff rates in the bill now under consideration in the Senate, has been presented to both Houses of Congress. The petition reads as follows:

We herewith voice our protest against the enactment into law of the unequal provisions covering cotton textiles, as disclosed by the various proposed rates published July 11, 1913, embodied in the bill passed by the House of Representatives and amended by the Senate majority (Democratic) caucus.

The Democratic platform declared and promised:

"We recognize that our system of tariff taxation is intimately connected with the business of the country, and we favor the ultimate attainment of the principles we advocate by legislation that will not injure or destroy legitimate industry."

Say Business Will Suffer.

First. We can not reconcile this with the low rates now proposed, which in many instances must injure legitimate industry.

Second. We point out that we fairly represent the primary and other distributors of cotton textiles, handling productions of both North and South which go to every city, town and village in the United States.

Third. The rates generally are below what they should be. The amendments made are inadequate to fix competitive rates in accordance with the promises of the Democratic platform.

Fourth. As we understand it, the purposes of the tariff revision generally were to reduce duties, but not to disturb or inflict punishment on any branch of legitimate industry, and there has been no demand to overdo the reduction, especially in cotton textiles, as in many instances is the case.

Fifth. Some illustrations: Failure to provide higher adequate rates for cotton textiles made of combed yarns than if made of ordinary yarns, or higher adequate for finished plain woven or figured cloths than for grey; putting rates for jacquards on same basis as for ordinary cloths, and actually omitting jacquards in Senate amendments, etc., etc.

Offered Non-Destructive Rates.

Sixth. We indorse the effort of the Independent Manufacturers of New England, who have willingly accepted great reductions, but asked that consistent and non-destructive rates, if on a competitive basis, should prevail.

We believe that they have pointed out the lowest possible competitive rates which in operation would be consistent and fair to the different branches of the industry—North and South. We do not comprehend why their recommendations have not been received in the spirit given.

Seventh. We point out that it is better to err on the side or safety than to subject the industry at this time to the proposed rates more especially on productions of from medium to better grades of goods.

We deplore the discrimination that subjects the cotton textile trade to these needless hardships.

Hardy Elected Head Of Retail Merchants

At the meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association of Georgia, concluded Wednesday evening, the following were elected officers: J. W. S. Hardy, Waycross, president; W. P. Grantham, Thomasville, vice president; John Barten, Atlanta, re-elected secretary. The association is fighting for garnishment and fraudulent check laws.

The time and meeting place of the next convention was referred to the executive committee.

RESINOL CURED AWFUL PIMPLES

Whole Face Covered, Now Clear.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I was troubled with two or three pimples coming out on my chin. In a week or so my whole face was covered with them. Friends advised me to use different lotions and salves. I tried them, but they did me little good, if any. I finally washed the pimples with Resinol Soap and applied Resinol Ointment before going to bed. In the morning I found the swelling going down, and the inflammation gone from the pimples. I tried this treatment for about a week, and found that most of the pimples had disappeared. I kept the treatment up for about a month, and then my face was clear of all pimples. I have used Resinol Soap since, and find that the pimples do not come back." (Signed) Walter A. Stenstrum, 54 Willoughby Ave., Oct. 9, 1912.

Resinol positively stops itching instantly and speedily heals eczema and other skin humors, dandruff, sores, burns and piles. Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap are sold by every druggist. Trial free. Dept. 11-P, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

EDITORS OFF FOR SEASHORE OUTING

Leave LaGrange Discussing Governor's Arraignment of Georgia's Antiquated Tax System.

LA GRANGE, July 24.—Members of the Georgia Weekly Press Association left LaGrange this morning for Brunswick, still discussing Governor John Marshall Slaton's scathing arraignment of Georgia's tax system at the annual banquet of the association Wednesday night. The Governor appealed to the editors for aid in what he declared to be the most serious financial crisis in the history of the State. He said that Georgia's tax system and reckless spending by the Legislature have brought about present conditions, when the State finds itself unable to pay its school-teachers.

"We must admit it is indefensible to maintain a system that pays its teachers a year after their work has been performed," Governor Slaton said. "It is pleasant to spend money and hard to make it. We love to appropriate, yet shrink from the tax levy. In two years, the Treasurer says, we have spent nearly three-quarters of a million more than our income. The teachers—patient and hard-working—teaching during the day and working examinations at night—molding the characters and training the minds of those upon whom our civilization depends—under our system find no ray of hope from the injustice they suffer.

Recommends Special Taxes.

"While unpleasant to do, I have recommended a levy—an extra tax of 1 mill for 1913, and 1-2 mill in 1916, as the brave way to get relief. The taxpayer will find it the best trade he ever made. It would prevent the imposition of drastic taxing laws, the deficit in the treasury would be satisfied, the State could say to purchasers of her bonds that she is on a solid financial basis, her teachers would be paid, and the kiting policy, which is opposed to all sound principle, would be abolished."

Governor Slaton emphatically declared himself in favor of the plan of equalization of taxes that has been recommended by the Legislature.

Favors Tax Equalization.

"Is not equalization just that requires all to pay the same percentage?" he asked. "Is it right that one many pays on 16 per cent of the value of his property when another pays on 40? An increase of 20 per cent, by simply equalizing the burden, not increasing that of him who is already bearing his part, would produce an abundance of revenue for every legitimate purpose."

The editors will arrive at Brunswick this afternoon and enjoy an outing of several days in that city and at St. Simons Island, where the Second Georgia Infantry is in camp.

Boys Calmly Admit Killing a Policeman

CHICAGO, July 24.—Declaring he was not afraid to go to the gallows, Walter Novak, 19, to-day repeated his confession that he signaled for the shooting of Policeman Samuel Sowers, who was dying from a bullet wound. Bruno Klonowski, 18, who fired the shot, said: "I just felt like killing a cop. That's all. I should worry."

The two prisoners told the police to-day that they had been close friends of the four youths who were hanged in February, 1912, for slaying a gardener.

Plans To Be Made For 11 County Fairs

MACON, July 24.—The secretary-managers of eleven Georgia county fairs will meet in Macon next Thursday and outline plans for their exhibitions during the coming fall. They will be the guests while here of the officials of the Georgia State Fair Association.

Representatives will be here from Columbus, Dublin, Tifton, Carrollton, Griffin, Eatonton, Washington, Oglethorpe, Valdosta, Cartersville and Calhoun.

Capital Matrons Vie As Queens of Beauty

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Who is to be the beauty of the new administration is the much-discussed question here. Here are the leading aspirants:

Mrs. John E. Osborne, wife of the Second Assistant Secretary of State, dark eyes and hair, clear-cut features and a graceful, slender figure.

Mrs. Dudley Field Malone, wife of the Third Assistant Secretary of State, Irish type, black hair, blue eyes, sparkling with mirth.

Mrs. Timothy Ansberry, golden hair, oval contuor, large blue eyes and superb figure.

Mother's Lips Keep Baby Alive 10 Days

LOS ANGELES, CAL., July 24.—Determined that her baby boy should live, though three physicians declared he would die in 48 hours, Mrs. J. H. Spaulding, of Oklahoma City, kept the spark of life aglow ten days. It is considered the most remarkable case of artificial respiration on record.

Soon after birth the baby was seized with an affection of the heart. The mother placed her lips over the mouth of the child, exhausted the air in its lungs and allowed fresh air to pour back. The baby revived.

The mother repeated the operation on two more occasions. Then the baby was taken to the hospital and died soon afterward.

Macon Will Invite Veterans Next Year

MACON, July 24.—It is very likely that Macon will invite the Confederate veterans of Georgia to hold their 1914 reunion here. There was no invitation extended at the recent reunion in Brunswick, and this fact has prompted the local veterans to arouse an interest in the matter.

A meeting of Camp R. A. Smith will be held next week for the purpose of formally preparing an invitation.

Sons to Seek Pardon For Aged Wife Slayer

MACON, July 24.—Sons of Roger McCall, a 75-year-old Macon man, who shot and killed his wife two years ago while intoxicated, and who is now serving a life sentence at the State Farm, will apply shortly to the Prison Commission for a recommendation for a pardon.

A petition is now being circulated in this city.

SENTENCE GUYTON MERCHANT.

GUYTON.—Convicted of violation of the prohibition law, H. W. Orvine, a Guyton merchant, was sentenced to twelve months on the county chain-gang or pay a fine of $1,000 in City Court at Springfield. He is under bond in a similar case in Superior Court.

STREET CROWDS SEE STABBING AFFRAY

Real Estate Operator Accused of Knife Attack After Dispute Over a Bet.

While hundreds of pedestrians, many of them women and children, looked on, two men engaged in a stabbing affray on Peachtree street across from the Candler Building Thursday morning. One of the men received serious injuries.

The wounded man gave his name as Burnett Goodman. He said he was manager of a gum company and lived at No. 36 Moore street. His assailant gave his name as M. B. Ware, 41 years old, a real estate operator living at No. 30 Highland avenue. Ware is a one-armed man. He was released on bond of $100.

Goodman was slashed about the right side of the face and neck. He was taken to the Grady Hospital. After his injuries were attended to he was removed to the police station, where a charge of disorderly conduct was lodged against him.

Refuses to Explain Attack.

Ware, who voluntarily surrendered to Policeman Bostwick, declared that "he had cut him because he wanted to cut him." Other than that, he refused to give an explanation of his action.

Ware used a pocket knife as his weapon.

According to Goodman, Ware attacked him without provocation.

"I was walking down the street with a friend, when Ware came up to me and without a word began striking at me with a knife. I dodged his blows as well as I could and tried to run, but the knife caught me twice across the face. Then I got away and ran, but Ware followed me. If it had not been for someone stopping him he would have killed me, I believe."

Bet Given as Cause of Fight.

The affair is said to have been the result of an argument over a "book" on a baseball game. According to information given the police, Ware on Wednesday made a bet with Goodman of $125 on the game played that afternoon.

It was said that Goodman was accustomed to making "books" on baseball games, and that Ware, in lieu of the cash to put up, posted a $20 forfeit to cover his bet.

According to the report, Ware failed to put up the remaining $105 before the game was played, and when the team which he bet on won, and he attempted to collect the bet from Goodman, the bookmaker refused to pay.

The two are declared to have had some difficulty at that time, but refrained from violence. Thursday morning, however, when they met, the stabbing ensued.

CAROLINA YOUTH RICHEST TAR IN NAVY SLAIN

Anderson, S. C., Boy, Recently Heir to $250,000, Killed in Philadelphia Tenderloin.

PHILADELPHIA, July 24.—Wilbur Martin, the young sailor from Anderson, S. C., who was killed here recently in a tenderloin saloon, was worth more than $250,000 in his own right, according to information received here to-day. He was the richest enlisted man in the navy.

The fascination that the sea held for him and the adventures of a naval career led him to give up the enjoyment of his fortune to become a common seaman on the battleship Connecticut.

He inherited this fortune when his mother died last March. His relatives at once began to plead with him to give up his adventurous life and settle down in Anderson. The lure of the sea was too great, however, and he disregarded their pleadings and advice. In despair, his relatives appealed to Washington, but this last hope was without avail.

The mysterious circumstances surrounding the death of Martin are thought to have been explained by the discovery to-day of a bottle of heroin, which is supposed to have belonged to him.

Hospital physicians say drugs caused his death and it is believed he was the victim of "knockout drops."

THIRD CHAPTER IN PHAGAN MYSTERY

Arrests of Suspects in the Factory Slaying. Sensation as Leo Frank, Manager Was Taken Into Custody.

CHAPTER III.

Everything that occurred, trivial or important, during those first few days after the body of little Mary Phagan was discovered in the pencil factory basement took on a dramatic aspect. The people were keyed to so high a pitch by the revolting crime that for a time it seemed to require only a spark to fire them to violent deeds.

Let a strange person so much as appear at the police station to confer with Chief of Detectives Lanford and wild rumors spread about the whole city like magic. Let one of the detectives drop a careless remark and in a flash everyone mysteriously understood that a complete confession had been made to the police by the murderer.

So it was a sinister reception that the first catch in the detectives' dragnet received from the group of angry men when he was hurried to police headquarters Sunday night of the day after the factory girl had been slain.

All through the day crowds had hung about the police station, some of them merely morbidly curious, others having the mistaken impression that they were going to help the authorities in some manner. Since Newt Lee had been taken into custody in the morning, there had been no arrest, but now with the end of the day came the intelligence that the murderer of Mary Phagan had been captured and was being brought to a cell at the police station.

Smiles Defiantly at Crowd.

Eagerly the crowd awaited to learn the man's identity. On each side of the doors they lined themselves as he was walked, defiantly, toward them between two detectives. A smile curled his lips when he heard their sullen mutterings.

"I know that guy; it's Art Mullinax," came in a hoarse whisper from a roughly dressed youth.

The group of men and boys closed in behind the detectives and their captive, but officers barred their entrance to the police station. To Chief Lanford, Mullinax repeated his denial of the crime which he had made previously to the detectives when they placed him under arrest.

"It's a horrible mistake," he cried, dropping the bravado he had displayed before the crowd. "I don't even know Mary Phagan, except by sight, and the only time I can remember of seeing her was at a Christmas entertainment."

Despite his protestations of innocence, he was placed in solitary confinement and instructions were given that no one be permitted to see him or communicate with him. Sentell, the grocery clerk, insisted that Mullinax was the man he saw with Mary Phagan Saturday night at midnight, and he was so positive in his identification that there appeared to be little doubt of the circumstance.

Sentell Was Positive.

Sentell declared that he had known Mullinax for some time by sight and had met him frequently at the car barns, where both of them had worked at one time. He was certain he could not be mistaken. If it were possible, he was even more positive in his identification of Mary, for he had spoken to her, calling her by name, and she had replied, calling him Ed.

Monday's dawn found the detectives working feverishly on the hundred-and-one clews that had been presented to them. They had Mullinax in a cell, but they were confused by the maze of rumors which confronted them and which pointed the finger of suspicion at other persons as strongly as at Mullinax.

Early in the morning two of the detectives left the station. Chief Lanford was silent and no one else could be persuaded to tell of their mission. The newspaper men, however, jumped to an immediate conclusion and the next editions carried a story that search was being made for a discharged employee of the factory who was known to have been acquainted with the murdered girl.

A little later Chief Lanford admitted that it was J. M. Gantt, Mary's childhood playmate in Marietta and until three weeks before timekeeper at the pencil factory, who was the object of the search. He was known to have been at the factory the night before. His sister Mrs. F. C. Terrell, of No. 284 East Linden avenue, gave a strangely inaccurate account of his recent whereabouts.

Another Arrest Made.

She declared to the detectives and to Georgian reporters that Gantt had not been home for three weeks and that she understood he was on his way to California, when it was known that such was not the case.

Adding to the suspicion against him, he made the unfortunate move of leaving town at the very time the search was started for him, giving the impression that he was taking to flight. As it happened, he went only to Marietta and he was arrested as he stepped from a car there. He indignantly denied that he had any idea of flight. He did not have any idea that the officers were after him, he declared.

His story was that he went to Marietta to buy a crop and that he had notified his mother several days before that he was coming over Monday morning. A warrant charging that he was suspected of the murder of Mary Phagan was lodged against him and he was returned to Atlanta to be placed in a cell.

To add to the confusion and doubt and mystery of the crime, just at the moment when the detectives were positive that they had the criminal in Mullinax or Gantt, local handwriting experts came out with the declaration that the writing of the notes found by the boss of the Phagan girl unmistakably was that of the negro Newt Lee.

One of them qualified as an expert of more than twenty years' experience. He said that he was in the banking business and had made a special study of handwriting. After a careful examination of the notes and a comparison with the handwriting of Lee, he was as positive as he could be that the notes and the test writing were by the same hand.

Suspicion Turns to Another.

Tuesday started with the detectives and the public divided in opinion as to whether Lee, Gantt or Mullinax was the guilty man. It was not long before they were allowed to conjecture as to a fourth suspect. The day's developments came thick and fast, crowding on each other's heels. While the excited public was condemning each of the three prisoners to the gallows, the most startling rumor of all was taking form.

It was that a high official of the National Pencil Company was suspected of the brutal crime and that an arrest would take place within a short time. Through mysterious sources it became known that the police did not place much dependence on the seemingly positive indentifications that had been made of both Gantt and Mullinax.

It was learned at the same time that the theory that the little girl had been lured to the factory at night was being abandoned and that in its place the detectives were adopting the theory that she never left the factory after she entered it at noon to get her pay. They did not believe any of the stores that Mary Phagan had been seen on the street Saturday night.

This threw the suspicion on some one inside the factory. Shortly before noon Tuesday an automobile containing Detective Harry Scott, of the Pinkerton agency, which had been engaged by the pencil company, and Detective John Black, shot away from the police station and up to the pencil factory. Within ten mintutes it had returned. With Scott and Black was Leo M. Frank.

Arrest Creates Sensation.

It was given out at first that Frank was not under arrest, but from that time to this he has not known an instant of actual freedom. This move of the detectives created a sensation. Public indignation, ready to vent itself on the newest object at hand, mounted to menacing heights even though nothing was known against Frank except that he freely admitted being in the factory at the time the Phagan girl came for her money and that the detectives interpreted some of his actions after the crime as highly suspicious.

His many friends rushed immediately to his defense. They proclaimed his arrest as a ridiculous blunder on the part of the police. They pointed to his career and to his reputation as the most potent indication that he would not descend to the fiendish deed that ended the innocent life of Mary Phagan.

But the detectives said:

He was the last one known to have seen Mary Phagan alive.

He was nervous and excited when Lee came to the factory at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

He was nervous and apparently fearful when Gantt came there at 6 o'clock and desired to enter the factory.

Actions Were Unusual.

He called Newt Lee in the evening, something he never had done before during Lee's employment.

There was no answer when Lee called his house early Sunday morning after finding the body and calling the police.

There was no answer when Call Officer Anderson attempted to get him on the telephone when the four policemen were in the factory early that morning.

He acted in a highly suspicious manner when the officers came to his house Sunday morning to take him to the police station for questioning.

All the time that the storm of accusation and bitterness was rising against the young factory superintendent, his attorney, Luther Z. Rosser, kept silence, except to say that Frank in the end would be found entirely innocent. Convinced of his client's innocence, Rosser worked quietly and faithfully in his behalf. Only once in the early days of the tragedy was he provoked to a show of his bulldog fighting qualities. This was when he reached the police station after Frank's arrest and was refused the privilege of seeing Frank.

"We'll see whether they can stop me from conferring with my own client," he shouted. A few minutes later he was in conversation with Frank.

From Frank's arrest until the next day, when the inquest was to begin, a dozen detectives were searching the factory rigidly from top to bottom for evidence. Practically every employee of the plant was quizzed and detectives were sent about the city running down fresh leads that came into the possession of the department.

On the eve of the inquest came the tragic funeral services of the young victim. The minister's prayer was as a stern, imperative invocation to the six men on the Coroner's Jury as well as a fervent plea to the Almighty.

"May God bring the man guilty of this terrible crime to justice," he implored, standing with closed eyes before the little white casket in the Marietta church where Mary, when a toddling child, had attended Sunday school.

Children who had played with her about her home in Marietta surrounded the grave and saw the body lowered into the earth. As the casket disappeared from sight the grief-stricken mother swooned.

The whole grewsome story of the finding of the body was repeated at the inquest, which began next day, but nothing was told which would throw any further light on the identity of the guilty person. Newt Lee told in his ignorant fashion of every move he had made during the fatal day and of his movements in the factory that night.

His story had every appearance of truthfulness. Coroner Donehoo was not able to trip him or catch him in any misstatements. He declared that he had no knowledge that the body was in the building until he went into the dark basement shortly before 3 o'clock that morning and saw the huddled form in the dim light of his lantern.

The officers who visited the factory that morning told their stories. Several of them were of the opinion that Lee knew much more than he had told and their testimony reflected this opinion, but the inquisition of the negro failed to elicit any admissions.

Conley Enters the Case.

Interest was centered in the testimony of Frank, which, it was thought, would be given when the jury resumed its session Thursday. The jurors, however, met and immediately adjourned until the following Monday, and another event took place which was thought to be of little consequence at the time, but which later assumed a vital bearing on the case.

E. F. Holloway day watchman at the factory, walking through the building early Thursday afternoon, came upon the negro sweeper, Jim Conley. Conley was washing a shirt and appeared strangely embarrassed when caught in the act by Holloway. The negro explained that he was washing the shirt in preparation for the inquest to which he had been summoned. Holloway notified the detectives of the suspicious circumstance and Conley was placed under arrest. That night the first formal charge was lodged against Frank and Lee. They were transferred from the police station to the Tower under commitments in which it was stated that they were suspected of the murder of Mary Phagan.

Apparently unafraid of the terrible charge that had been made against him, Frank appeared at the resumption of the inquest the next Monday seemingly the most unconcerned person in the whole assemblage. Only when he was forced to pass through the narrow lane out into the jam of humanity that filled the station house corridors did he display the slightest trace of nervousness. Looking straight ahead in an evident endeavor to avoid the sinister glances of the crowd, he hurried into the Commissioners' room with Chief Lanford's hand on his arm.

Once inside the room, his face assumed an expression of relief and he walked to the stand with an air of confidence. He answered the questions shot at him without hesitation. His utterance was distinct and his voice unfaltering. He appeared absolutely sure of himself and sure of his story.

He related freely Mary Phagan's visit to the factory. He recalled giving her the pay envelope. He said that she left his office and that he heard her talking with another girl, he thought, and then heard their footsteps dying away. He denied that he sent her to the rear of the factory to see if an expected shipment of metal had come.

No Incriminating Admission.

Every person in the crowded and stuffy little room hung on to each word of his testimony as it came clearly from his lips, but if anyone was expecting an incriminating admission he was disappointed, for it did not come.

Instead, the witness-defendant told a most remarkable and impressive story of his actions on the day of the crime, a story which since has been most strongly corroborated by the testimony of other persons.

Startling incidents followed in close succession until the next inquest hearing on Thursday of the same week. Paul P. Bowen, a former Atlanta boy, was arrested in Houston, Tex., on the suspicion of having fled there after the crime, and a day later the Pinkertons were trailing a Greek from Atlanta to Anniston, Ala., where he was supposed to have taken refuge after killing the girl.

Bowen was arrested on the strength of a story that a woman had heard him muttering wildly in his room in a Houston hotel.

"Why did I do it? Why did I do it?" she declared she heard him cry. Clippings telling of the murder were found in his trunk, but it was found that he had not been in Atlanta for a year. The clew in Anniston was discovered to be as worthless and the Pinkertons abandoned their theory that a Greek had anything to do with the crime.

STANDING SHOWS PONY CONTEST PACE IS HOT

District No. 7 Only One Lagging. Positions May Change Quickly. Last Bonus On.

Standing of the contestants in The Georgian and American pony contest is published Thursday, and again is it possible to see what remarkable gains have been made by the busy contestants.

District No. 7, it seems, must "speed up" if it is to get anything except the last choice of the ponies, for George Melton, with 110,125 votes, is leading, and A. Morrison, with 106,000, is second.

On the other hand, Herbert Chapman in District No. 4 has rolled up 206,000 votes, and Fannie Mae Cook and Florence Greenoe, with 204,000 and 202,000, are close behind, pursued at no great interval by Eleanor Raoul, Nathaniel Kay and Oscar Eugene Cook.

Between these extremes are the leaders of the various other districts. In district No. 1 the leader, George Rosser, has 205,000 votes, and Helen Brantley is close behind with 201,000 votes. A field is closely bunched behind them.

Standing Can Change Quickly.

The city carriers and newsboys have been the most active, and Ross Greer has 208,000 votes, with Raymond Wilkinson, at 205,000, pushing him hard. In this race there are nine boys above the 100,000 mark.

Ben Steinberg, of Cartersville, is leading the Georgia boys and girls' race with 126,000 votes. Clifford Henry, of Carrollton, has 123,000 votes. Three more are within two years' subscription to The Georgian of the leader, which shows how quickly the relative standing of these contestants may change.

Lena Mae Smith, of Knoxville, Tenn., leads the race for the schoolboys and schoolgirls outside of Georgia, with 130,000 votes, but Elin E. Webb, Jr., of Piedmont, Ala.; McGee Hunt, of Westminster, S. C.; Robert Hyatt Brown and Elmer Cooper, of Greenville, all are in the running, and a little work will change the standings greatly.

Leaders All Bunched.

And so it goes through all the other districts—the four or five leaders are bunched close together. A few dollars spent for subscriptions to The Georgian or Sunday American by their friends will juggle the standings all around.

Subscriptions to The Sunday American make even more difference, for the Red Letter Ballots are in effect until Tuesday night, giving liberal amounts of extra votes for subscriptions to the Sunday paper.

One week from Thursday night the contest ends, and a Sunday intervenes. The time is short. Speed counts now.

Tipsy Monkey Kills Dog, Maims Master

SMITHERS, W. VA., July 24.—A drunken monkey belonging to George Smith, went on a rampage and after killing a bulldog, so severely chewed up Smith's hand that he was forced to have it amputated.

Smith gave a party and the monkey had come in for his share of refreshments. After the guests departed the monkey evinced a desire for another drink. Smith refused. The bulldog then sprang at the Simian, but the latter jumped on the dog's back and with his claws soon blinded him, then sank his teeth into the neck, killing him.

Smith suffered his injuries in his efforts to subdue his pet.

ASK YOUR DRUGGIST ABOUT IT

There Is a New Remedy That Takes the Place of Calomel. Recommended and Guaranteed by the Druggists.

Your drug store never sold a remedy that gave more complete satisfaction than Dodson's Liver Tone—a mild vegetable remedy for constipation, sour stomach and lazy liver.

CHAMBER WILL BOOST INTERURBAN

Study of Lines in Other States To Be Made to Further Anderson-Atlanta Project.

Encouragement to the construction of the interurban line known as the Duke Line, from Anderson, S. C., to Atlanta, is promised as the result of a meeting at the Capital City Club of the Chamber of Commerce committee on interurban railways.

This committee, appointed by President Wilmer L. Moore to further interurban lines radiating from Atlanta, decided it would be best to deal with one project at a time, and as this one is most talked of, it is proposed by the committee to investigate to ascertain just what will be necessary to bring about its extension to Atlanta. The committee will make a report to the directors of the Chamber of Commerce with such recommendations as the situation appears to justify.

The committee will gather statistics and information relative to interurban railways, with a view to presenting the advantages which Atlanta will gather from their construction.

The members of the committee present were Chairman Hollins N. Randolph, Preston S. Arkwright, Frederic J. Paxon and Secretary Fred Lewis.

CHAINGANGS IN GEORGIA

Fined Forty-Five Dollars.
The Man Could Not Pay.
He Had to Die in Georgia.

Bridge at half cent a point.
Cold hands.
Penny-ante.
Jackpots.
Stud.
Straight poker.
DID YOU ever play one or all of them?
Ever play a game for money?
THIS MAN DID.
Detected, he was arrested.
Convicted in your Court, he heard this sentence:
"Forty-five dollars or eight months in the chaingang."
Speaking for you, your judge said in effect:
"Oh, moneyless man!
"You may go free if you pay forty-five dollars.
"You can not? You are poor?
"And yet, charged with gaming, you dare to stand in a Court of Justice?
"If you have not forty-five dollars—
"A ring of steel shall be riveted on your leg.
"A zebra suit upon your back shall proclaim your infamy.
"For eight months, a striped thing of horror to women and children, you shall go publicly to and from your work, shackled to other men.
"Since you do not pay—
"You shall work in chains.
"While others rest, when you try to sleep, you shall be chained in your bed to creatures as wretched and moneyless as yourself.
"Your fetters shall gall your skin night after night.
"And beware the guard! If you displease him, our lash is ready for your back.
"POOR FOOL, PAY—
"Forty-five dollars for the coffers of the great State of Georgia.
"Miserable, moneyless, man.
"Because of your poverty—
"Suffer.
"God may pity you.
"We will not, since you have no money."
The man is dead.
Stripes and chains were put upon him.
In the quarry of the forty-nine-pound hammers you drove him in the frightful heat.
There he fell.
HE DIED THAT DAY.
Remember—
His offense was only this: he played a game for money.
Nothing more.
You condemned him.
You demanded that he pay.
He could not.
You killed him; you did not intend it.
But ignorance is no excuse.
Paul wrote for you:
"Thou art inexcusable, oh, man."
And Jesus said:
"With what judgment you judge, you shall be judged,
"And with what measure you mete, it shall be measured to you again."
God wake you.
Men, women and children are being destroyed in the name of law in Georgia.
The guilt is yours and ours.

WANT AD RACE STARTS WITH REAL VIM

Contestants Begin Work Thursday and Hustle to Win That Automobile or Other Prize.

Enthusiastic young men and women started out early Thursday to win those prizes in The American and Georgian's big Want Ad Contest. They began to meet success from the very start, for the want ads came rolling in.

"It's going to be easy," said one youngster after his first hour's work. "I got three ads from the first four houses I visited. I'm going to win a motorcycle, at least."

Contestants were not simply turned loose with a pencil and paper and told to get busy. An experienced district manager, one who knows through long training how to suggest want ad possibilities, accompanied each contestant for a while, called with him at a number of homes and started him on the right track. The boys and girls were enthusiastic over their first morning's work.

Help Your Young Friends.

Atlanta folk or others who have a boy or girl friend in the contest are urged to either give their want ads to him or her, or else send the ads to the office with a request that they be credited to this contestant. A full list of the entrants in the race will be published Friday.

Contestants gathered early in the day at the four district offices and there met their respective managers. The districts are:

District No. 1—North of Marietta and west of Peachtree, Taylor Bros. drug store, 191 West Peachtree street.

District No. 2—North of Decatur street and east of peachtree, including Kirkwood, Decatur and eastern suburbs; Ponce DeLeon Pharmacy, corner Ponce DeLeon and North Boulevard.

District No. 3—South of Decatur street and east of Whitehall, Paragon Pharmacy, Capitol avenue and Georgia avenue.

District No. 4—South of Marietta street and west of Whitehall, including West End, College Park, East Point and Battle Hill; Medlock's Pharmacy, Gordon and Lee streets.

Not Too Late to Enter.

It isn't too late to enter the Want Ad Contest and win one of the big prizes. You might get a fine automobile, a piano, a trip to California. You might land a motorcycle, a bicycle, a watch or diamond. The prizes are well worth trying for.

There is a nomination blank in the full-page advertisement on another page of this issue. Clip it out, take it to the headquarters of the district in which you live and get a good start. The coupon will give you 1,000 votes, and ten votes will be given you for every cent turned in for paid want ads. You'll find the work a real practical course in salesmanship, too.

Girl Outwits Cupid; Wins Her Own Rival

WHEELING, W. VA., July 24.—War, or Sherman's equivalent for it, "hath no fury like a woman scorned." Harry Pendleton mournfully confides to his friends.

Pendleton had been engaged to Dessie McIntyre for two years, when he met Henrietta Aiken, a Bridgeport, Ohio, belle. He fell a willing conquest and Miss McIntyre was peeved, but not without hope. She went cupid one better by going to Bridgeport, cutting her hair short, donning the clothes of a modern Beau Brummel and "cutting out" Pendleton in masterly fashion. Then she doffed her masquerade.

Pendleton refuses to say whether or not Miss Aiken has permitted him to resume his courtship.

THE PLAY THIS WEEK

Bijou Show Pleases.

"Good Morning, Judge" as presented at the Bijou this week, seems to have struck a popular chord, as at each performance since the opening matinee the attendance has been unusually large. "Good Morning, Judge"is an ideal hot weather entertainment Interspersed throughout are a number of clever vaudeville specialties which alone would be sufficient to furnish an evening's entertainment.

"Les Miserables."

Great interest has evidenced itself in the presentation of "Les Miserables" at the Grand. Attendance since the introduction of the picture on Monday has grown wonderfully and many who have witnessed the two and a half hour exhibition of Victor Hugo's novel declare the photoplay to be superior to any that has been presented in Atlanta. The exhibition is in four complete acts. There are nine reels of more than 12,000 feet of the finest film, and the characters are played by the greatest actors of France.

Next week the Carnegie Museum Alaska-Siberian pictures will be exhibited, together with first-run motion pictures of the better quality.

Divers a Real Hit.

The standing room record continues at the Forsyth. The busy theater has been sold out at eight performances this week and the demand for seats for the rest of the week is great.

John F. Conroy, the famous lifesaver, who with his diving models is the star act of the program, presents the best novelty that has ever been seen on a local stage. He is a wonder in physical culture and as a diver.

For next week the headline feature will be Joe Welch, the character comedian, in his life study of the Hebrew. Mr. Welch has appeared here before and won a great hit. Robert L. Daily and company, in "Our Bob" will make his first local appearance.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

Senator Bacon's inability to attend a sitting of the Georgia Legislature just now for the purpose of accepting an invitation to address that honorable body in joint session, generally is regretted among the members, and many have expressed themselves accordingly.

Senator Bacon's failure to see his way clear to leaving Washington just now seems to be thoroughly appreciated, however, and the fact that he declined the General Assembly's invitation to come down is understood and appreciated.

Senator Hoke Smith's recent address was greatly enjoyed by the General Assembly. He went very thoroughly into many things upon which the Legislature was not fully informed, and undoubtedly held his audience's profound interest and attention through the entire joint session.

Fortunately for the Legislature, Senator Smith's invitation came at a time when it was convenient for him to accept, and without in any way neglecting his duties in Washington.

Both Senators Bacon and Smith are eloquent and forceful speakers, although of late years Senator Bacon has spent very little of his time in Georgia and has been heard but infrequently, on the stump or otherwise.

Whatever the relations between these two Senators may be, whether they be cordial or not, the Georgia Legislature was impartial in extending its invitations to them, as both joint resolutions passed by a unanimous vote of each House.

Editor F. H. Sills, of The Metter Advertiser, whose heart strings are wrapped tight around the bill to create Candler County, was distressed, but not dismayed, that his bill failed of passage this year.

Sills, who has led a clean, manly and fair fight for his pet project, believes that Candler yet will be created—perhaps next session. And, anyway, he is not grieving over spilled milk or wishing he never had been born merely because of a temporary setback in his plans.

Sills is a newspaper man, and a good one, and therefore the newspaper men generally about the Capitol have felt a kindly interest in his proposal with respect to Candler.

His plucky little paper down in Metter has waged a long and honorable warfare for Candler County, and most everybody who knows him wishes him mighty well.

Sills admits ungrudgingly that the first round went against him, but he still is perfectly game and expects to win out in the end.

Hon. Alphabet Bowden, otherwise known as "Jet," because his initials are J. E. T. (business of "great laughter"), is being boomed for Mayor of Waycross.

Asked in the Kimball House lobby to-day, Why is Waycross? and Why should anybody want to be Mayor thereof? Mr. Bowden stated that he didn't particularly want to be, but that there was an uprising of the people on and nothing would satisfy them but Bowden for Mayor.

"Waycross is a great little town and they think I would make a great little Mayor—that's all!" said Bowden.

Representative N. F. Culpepper of Meriwether is one of the best lawyers in the House and one of its strongest men.

He is not at all showy, and seldom indulges in debate on the floor. In the committee rooms, however, where most of the real constructive work of the General Assembly is accomplished, he long ago came to be recognized as safe and sane and well worth following.

This is Mr. Culpepper's first term in the House of Representatives, but it is doubtful whether Meriwether, although it has sent to Atlanta many of the ablest and most forceful men in General Assemblies of the past, ever sent a stronger man than Culpepper.

It is evident enough that there is to be a bitter and perhaps prolonged fight in the House on the proposition to establish a State Board of Tax Equalizers.

It is but the truth to state that many of the smaller counties, now getting back from the State through the common school fund and the pensions much more money than they pay into the State Treasury, are aggressively averse to having themselves equalized, or anything like equalized!

Some of the counties pay into the State Treasury a tax on as little as 16 per cent of the valuation of their lands as set forth by the United States Government. Other counties pay as high as 300 per cent.

Manifestly, here is a situation that needs equalizing, at least partially.

If any person doubts the truth of the assertion herein made, he has but to apply to the United States Census Department to have the figures verified.

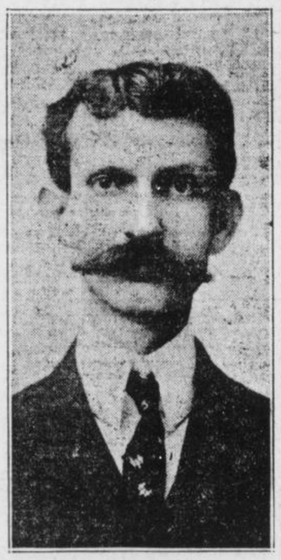
Between the two extremes of 16 per cent and 300, the various counties run from 20 to 250. The impression is that 65 per cent of the national valuation of real estate in Georgia would be little enough for the taxpayers to have assessed against them—but it may be set down as a dead sure thing that those counties now fattening at the expense of the others are going to balk at having a State board set up to equalize them.

The proposed State board is not to be given power to equalize individuals—it merely will undertake to equalize counties.

Will the board be created? Not if the get-more-than-we-pay-in counties can help it!

$55 SAVED ON FULL BUSINESS SCHOLARSHIPS

The Extraordinary Offer Made by The Southern Business College Will Soon Close.



L. W. ARNOLD,
Vice President Southern Shorthand and Business University.

The opportunity of securing the $55 complete shorthand course and the $55 complete bookkeeping course, both combined, for the price of one course, at the well-known Southern Shorthand and Business University, 10 West Mitchell Street, is rapidly passing away.

Only fifty scholarships were put on sale at this remarkably low rate and the number is diminishing rapidly.

"Reserve one of the special scholarships for my son," said a gentleman yesterday, as he was passing through the city from the North to his home in South Georgia, "and I will mail you a check for same as soon as I get home."

Another came in from a distance and secured a scholarship for his son; several mail applicants and a large number of city callers obtained scholarships for immediate and futtre entrance.

A club of six in one locality bought scholarships and clubs in other sections are now organizing.

Orders for scholarships came in today from Florida, South Carolina and Tennessee.

While the two $55 courses are being sold for the price of one course—$55—either course alone is offered for $40.

"This is the first time in three years that we have put on sale our scholarships at reduced rate," said Mr. L. W. Arnold, the vice president, to-day, "and we are doing this merely as a midsummer advertising proposition to invade new territory, the plan being to secure a large list of names of prospective pupils from those who obtain this low-priced scholarship. From this list we hope to escure many pupils at the regular rates, which will be in effect by August 1, and thus be reimbursed for the loss we are now sustaining by this advertising offer.

"The demand for stenographers and bookkeepers is very heavy just now; have received a dozen calls since Tuesday and placed several pupils."

Secure scholarship at once. Call, phone or write A. C. Briscoe, President, or L. W. Arnold, Vice President, Atlanta, Ga.

M'KEE SILENT ON RESIGNATION RUMORS

Postmastership in Doubt as Present Holder Confers in Capital With His Chiefs.

Speculation is rife in regard to the exact status of the postmastership in Atlanta pending the return of Postmaster Hugh McKee from Washington. Mr. McKee left Atlanta for the National Capital last week, after obtaining a leave of absence for ten days to lay certain questions before the Postoffice Department at Washington, it is claimed.

Dispatches from Washington indicate that conferences between the Atlanta postmaster and Third Assistant Postmaster General Roper have been held. These conferences, Mr. McKee's personal representatives say, were entirely satisfactory and had nothing whatever to do with a resignation.

Nevertheless guesses continue to be made and there are those who say that the bomb may drop at any time. Thus far, no intimation has been given by Mr. McKee as to the alleged request for his resignation.

Mr. McKee, accompanied by his daughter, probably will reach Atlanta by the end of this week. They are now in Atlantic City, according to latest information received in Atlanta.

BREAKFAST SENT THOMAS CAT BY POST

Mistress, in Atlanta on Visit, Can Not Trust Feline Aristocrat to Butcher Shop Diet.

Bricks and eggs and live stock have become common enough as mail matter within the past few months, but never until Miss Bessie Butler came to Atlanta had Uncle Sam's parcel post served as a dumb waiter for a cat!

Down at Madison, Ga., a big aristocratic Thomas cat—by name, "McCurry"—gets his breakfast every day by parcel post, all the way from 513 Peachtree street, where Miss Butler is visiting Mrs. A. Cunningham.

"McCurry" is Miss Butler's most priceless possession, and when she came to Atlanta she left instructions that the cat must be fed large, mansize pork chops each day. She gave this order to a butcher, with the inevitable result.

Poor "McCurry's" chops soon took on the appearance of a large piece of bone surrounded by a meaty atmosphere, and the cat got dyspepsia and developed a crabbed disposition. He lost his zest in life—all nine of him—and was peevish and poor company.

The sad news of "McCurry's" condition was written to Miss Butler by a friend. It seemed that unless something was done at once the cat would die—it was feared he would break all his teeth trying to eat the bones the butcher said were chops.

So Miss Butler has invoked the aid of Uncle Sam. She gathers up all the scraps of meat that are left when the Cunningham meal is over, and each night she packs them into a shoe box and forwards them to her friend in Madison, who feeds them to the cat the next morning.

The unique method of feeding her pet has been going on for several days now—and latest advices from the front are that the cat is doing well and taking on weight.

Better News of Laces Than We Have Told So Far This Season

The Selling Starts at Nine o'Clock

Take this as a matter of information---the laces below are wanted kinds, fashion-favored right now; the new prices are made arbitrarily, in spite of their worth---and be guided in your purchases accordingly.

The average woman's "love" of pretty laces is strong, stronger perhaps than the average woman's sense of thrift, especially when that sense of thrift would interfere with her possession of pretty laces.

But to-morrow—

A womans "love" of pretty laces and her sense of thrift urge her to attend this sale of laces.

Here are laces wanted right now, that will be wanted when the new dresses for fall are started, at prices that average a great deal less than half.

It is one of those events that happen but once-in-a-while.

Share its savings!

Here briefly is what you will find—

At 19c 35c to 85c a yd. Laces

Shadow and Venise bands and edges in cream, white and black. They are 3 to 5 inches wide.

At 59c $1 to $2 a yd. Laces

Shadow and Venise bands and edges in cream, white and black. These are 4 to 9 inches wide.

At 98c $2 to $3.50 a yd. Laces

Shadow and Venise edges, bands and medallions. The edges, some of them, are 18 inches wide.

Some twenty embroidered dress patterns---voiles and crepes---that were originally $12 to $18 each are now $6.75, because the clearance of them must be complete, despite the fact that all but these went in a recent sale at $9.50. Richly, beautifully embroidered, in light blue, pink, navy and lavender on white---many designs.

ONE WEEK FROM TO-NIGHT PONY CONTEST ENDS

No One Is Certain of Victory and the Lowest Candidate To-day May Be a Leader To-morrow—Only Seven More Days to Claim Prizes—Will You Be Among the Winners?—Success Is Within Your Grasp If You Will Only Realize the Fact and Prove Your Right to the Prizes By Your Efforts Now—"Dark Horses" Will Probably Come Fast During Last Days and Crowd Out the Too Certain Ones.

We have now entered the thick of the fight, the battle is on and when the smoke clears away on July 31, WHO WILL STAND FORTH AS VICTORS? Who knows? Victory is as liable to perch on the banner of one candidate as another and probably the candidate who is now hovering near the cellar championship, as the baseballists say, may be the one who will come so fast during the last few days that there will be no stopping him—he will sweep all before him and march triumphantly to his goal. This statement should be considered well by all candidates and especially those who may feel that there is no need for them to exert themselves during this time, as they are certain of victory. No one is certain of victory, and no one will be until all is over. You may be in the lead now and be reasonably sure in your own mind that no one can defeat you for the prize you want, but you do not know what efforts will be put forth before the close and while you rest apparently secure in the prospect of winning, your very nearest competitor will probably be working so energetically that the gap between you now will be closed up to allow victory snatched from your grasp when a little real effort during these seven days will win for you and any other candidate who fails to do his very best is liable to be without the charmed circle of winners on July 31, no matter how far in front he may be at present.

Present standings are not indicative of final results by a long way. Real effort NOW is going to swing the pendulum of victory or defeat and if you really desire one of those pony outfits or a pretty watch, now is your opportunity to win your selection.

Have you ever witnessed a horserace, where the favorite started out in front, passed the quarter and half poles away in front and then fell down during the last quarter, while the "rank outsider," now considered as a last place possibility, romped in ahead of the favorite? This illustrates perfectly what is just as liable as not to happen in the contest during these last few days. We don't say that it will happen, but such things have happened so often—the candidate is not given a chance to win by the "wise" ones—finally defeating all his rivals—that a similar occurrence in The American-Georgian campaign would not be surprising. Hence, we want to impress upon every candidate the necessity of doing his best before the finish overtakes you.

FIVE MORE DAYS OF THE RED LETTER BALLOTS.

Just five more days and the Red Letter Ballot, which is the last special vote offer of the contest, will draw to a close. The work being done by the great majority of candidates proves that they appreciate their opportunities and are going to die hard. Those who have as yet done but little on this offer should lose no time in getting started. There is still time to secure its advantages and every vote secured is a step nearer success. uTesday night at 10 o'clock this offer will close and those who have failed to take advantage of this offer and these will be but few, will have missed a chance that may mean final defeat. Votes are the only things that will win for you and without these necessary things you cannot hope to win. Hence every one is worth securing and essential to success.

STANDING OF CONTESTANTS IN PONY CONTEST

District Number One.

To the candidate in this district having the highest number of votes will be awarded a Shetland pony, cart and harness complete, valued at $300.

To the candidate in this district having second highest number of votes will be awarded a Shetland pony, saddle and bridle complete, valued at $200.

To the candidate in this district having third highest number of votes will be awarded a pretty gold watch, valued at $15

To the candidate in this district having fourth highest number of votes will be given a silver watch, valued at $7.50.

ECZEMA DISFIGURED FACE BADLY

Also on Hands. Broke Out in Pimples. Itched Badly. Spread All Over Body. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

Hampton Springs, Fla. — "I had had eczema on my face and hands for about three years. My face was badly disfigured. The eczema broke out in pimples and itched so very badly I would scratch it all the time. It was the most irritating disease I have ever had. It started on my face and hands and it spread all over my body. I had great large sores all over me, caused from the eczema. It bothered me day and night so that I could not rest at all.

"I used three remedies for skin disease and they didn't give relief at all. I was almost terrified until a friend recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment to me. They helped me from the time I started to use them. I used the Cuticura Soap and warm water as a wash and then put the Cuticura Ointment on the sore places. I only used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and was cured." (Signed) Mrs. E. C. Parker, Dec. 7, 1912.

When you buy a fine toilet soap think of the advantages Cuticura Soap possesses over the most expensive toilet soap ever made. In addition to being absolutely pure and refreshingly fragrant, it is delicately yet effectively medicated, giving you two soaps in one, a toilet and a skin soap at one price. Sold throughout the world. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

The Commonwealth sprang a surprise when a deputy sheriff of Breathitt County testified that Deaton told him shortly before the killing that he would have to have Callahan killed.

Poultry Gossip

By JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

Is there a difference between roup and sorehead? My neighbor tells me they are the same thing, only roup is sorehead in the fall and winter, and what we usually call sorehead is the same disease in hot weather. I would like to have your views upon the subject.—Mrs. J. R. C., Dallas, Ga.

These are two entirely different diseases, and come from different causes. Both are diseases of the blood, though the effect is quite different. Then at times the two troubles are found in the same specimen.

For example, a fowl having the sorehead and all broken out with the sores or bumps on its comb and head, will, by roosting in a hot, damp place, contract the roup. This will cause the air passages to become inflamed and fill with mucous, causing the fowl to breathe through its mouth.

Results in Loss of Eyes.

The breathing passage to the nostrils being stopped, the inflamed matter will be forced out through the eye duct, filling the space around the eye, causing it to water and swell. If it is not relieved the matter will harden and finally the eye will go blind and peel out.

While this is going on the sorehead trouble will wrinkle up the comb and if not checked will form a solid scab upon the head and comb and will so affect the general health of the specimen as to cause death in many cases.

It is only in rare cases, however, that the two are combined. Either one is sufficient in itself to cause enough trouble to do a world of damage to an otherwise thrifty flock. The sorehead comes on as a result of infection introduced by the sting of the mosquito. When once established in a flock it is transmitted from one to the other, without the aid of the mosquito, by personal contact.

Coops Should be Netted.

Mosquitoes rarely bother them during the day, so that where a person will take the trouble to make his poultry coops mosquito proof with netting they will have but little trouble from sorehead. Where this is not done, a great preventive measure is the giving of Epsom salts freely in the drinking water during July and August. It must not be omitted for any length of time or the system allowed to get out of the influence of it or the sores will make their appearance.

When the sores do come up, it is a good plan to take any affected ones from the flock and treat them individually by dipping a feather in oil of tar and touching the sores. Another good remedy is a stick of caustic touched to soft water and then to the sore. Either one of these will have a tendency to kill the germs and dry up the sores. The salts should also be given. Everything should be spick and span about the premises in regard to water vessels, feed troughs and nests. Filth will spread the trouble faster than you can cure it.

Roup Like Common Cold.

Roup is to fowls what a bad cold is to people, and, as it is in the human family, it is liable to take various forms if not checked in its incipiency. It may become malignant, with an offensive odor, and often develop into swelled head and at times into a cankerous condition of the throat and mouth.

It will be observed by opening the beak wide that there is a thick, yellowish coating on the throat and tongue, like cheese. Some experts advise the removing of this coating with a feather quill and powdering the raw surface with powdered borax twice a day. A dose of castor oil every other day for three days; then follow it up with salts in the water. This is a constitutional treatment that will help rid the system of the poison.

The swelled head condition is best treated with kerosene oil. We have found nothing so handy to use as a spring-bottom sewing machine oil can, the small tip of which can be inserted into the nostril. With this the oil can be forced through the nostrils into the head.

Foam is First Symptom.

If the poultryman is alert and looks closely after his fowls he will notice a little foam collected in the corner of the eye. This is the first indication of roup and the closing of the air passages. This is the time to treat with the kerosene, which will usually, in about two or three applications, clear out the trouble entirely.

While roup usually is considered a cold weather disease, yet it very frequently makes its appearance in the very hottest times of the summer. At such times it is as the result of chickens being confined in hot, close quarters, not well ventilated and full of bad odors. At such times it is often more trouble to handle than in cold weather because of the difficulty in securing free fresh air.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

MISTER and Missus Riley was up to our house last nite, and thay had thare littel son Tommie with them. He was the freshest kid that I evver seen, and if I dident know so much moar about boxing than he knows, I wud have took him out in the yard & handed him a few hot wallops, & beesides, I felt kind of sorry for him beekaus his Pa & Ma kind of spoiled him. All that his Ma sed to him wen he spoak out of his turn was Now, Tommie, that isent nice.

I doant think we will move back to the city till skool beegins aggenn, sed Pa to the Rileys. We like it out here in the country & beesides, I want Bobbie to stay here as long as possibel. A boy is always better off in the country than he is in the city.

Oh, mercy, sed Missus Riley, how can you say that? Why, just think of the advantages that a boy has wen he is getting a city bringing up.

He Learns Things.

My husband doesn't think so, sed Ma. You see, he was born & brought up in a small town, & he says that a boy born & brought up in a small town has more all around training. He can learn to swim & hunt & fish & row a boat & hitch up a horse & a lot of other things that maiks a man out of him wen he grows up.

But a boy in the city can get such perfect manners, sed Missus Riley. Tommie has learned all he knows about manners by associating with nice little boys in the city that lern thare manners from thare private teechers, the little deers. You are always careful about yure manners, aint you, Tommie, sed Missus Riley.

I shud worry about manners, sed Tommie. What do I care about manners. People in Hoboken have all the manners, sed Tommie.

Now, Tommie, that isent nice, sed Missus Riley. See what a quiet little chap Bobbie is.

That is beekaus he is a bonehead & can't think of anything to say, sed Tommie Riley. He beelongs rite up here in the minor league whare he it, that kid.

I got pritty mad but I knew enuff to keep still. My Ma always told me not to start a quarl in the presens of older peepul.

I wuddent stay in this jay town any longer than I cud help, sed the Riley kid. The peepul here doant know they are alive.

You know a whole lot for a yung man, don't you, sed Pa. You will grow up to be a regular city feller all rite, one of them clerks that rides to work & back home in the trolley & talks a ride on Sunday for a outing & then goes around telling what a wise fish he is.

Tommie will never be that kind of a braggart, sed Missus Riley, looking at Pa kind of hard. My littel son knows toe much to be a braggart, doant you, Tommie?

Tell it to Sweeney, sed Tommie to his mother. Cheese on all that talk about me. Lay off on me and talk about sumbody that doesn't know anything.

Now, Tommie, that isent nice, sed his mother.

I shud fret and take a sweat, sed the Riley kid. I shud worry and git gray, he sed

Pa Talks.

Tommie, sed Pa, as long as yure parents will not tell you the truth I am going to. You think you are a vary smart yung man bekaus sumbody taught you how to say, "I shud worry." You can say that & you can sing "Snooky Ookums" & part of "In my Harum," and that lets you out. & then you cum up here in the country & try to malk fun of grown up peepul that knew moar when thay was babies than you will evver know wen you grow up. You ought to be spanked, Tommie, & sent to bed to think it oaver.

Then Tommie looked at Pa kind of fresh & sed Say, this is a queer kind of a country.

I guess if he had stayed long I wud have had to soak Tommie, but his Pa & Ma got kind of mad wen they seen we dident like thare son, so thay took him hoam.

Where Riches Count.

The late Mr. Bradley Martin, who was himself a polished wit, used to recall with delight a conversation he overheard between two girls apropos of an aged millionaire's marriage to a debutante.

"I know he's rich," said one, "but isn't he too old to be considered eligible?"

"My dear," answered the other girl, "he's too eligible to be considered old."

Stella Barre Tells of the Value of Voice Culture.

Miss Stella Barre.

"WHEN I began making vocal culture a serious study a few years ago—six, to be accurate," said Stella Barre in the most delightfully musical of voices, as we sipped cooling ices after the matinee, "no one except my teacher and myself believed I had a voice to train. We did believe, though—we worked hard to prove it—and now we have a few followers, haven't we?"

If you have heard Stella Barre's top note and a few others below it such as she renders at the performances of "All Aboard" in New York you will agree that she has triumphantly proved the existence of her voice. And a voice is, as we have been told, "an excellent thing in woman," be it low and sweet, or be it high and sweet; but heaven forefend that any one of us have the high-pitched nasal voice, or the husky, breathy croak that are an unfortunate tradition as the possessions of the American woman.

"No amount of study is too hard," said the charming singer, "if it gives you at last the goal of your dreams. But you have to work with your brain as well as your body. And the thing I would warn girls most earnestly against is overfatigue. It is so easy to think, 'Oh, I will just keep at this a bit longer,' and to use up so much energy and strength that you infringe on your reserve store. Now I really practice all afternoon long—but only about fifteen minutes at a time. I work a bit, and then I go off to something quite different, and then back to work. In this way, I probably put in three or four hours' work with less fatigue than two hours of steady application and overstrain would give.

"You read so many romances of how the fair telephone girl wins a millionaire husband by saying 'Hello!' very sweetly to his listening ear. There is something in every tale—fairy or otherwise—you hear, and whether a girl has a singing voice or not, a few singing lessons will vastly improve her speaking voice—and perhaps help to discover another prima donna.

A Suggestion.

"For the girl who can not afford singing lessons, I would suggest deep breathing at an open window morning and night, or whenever she has a chance to try it during the day. Then fill the lungs and hold the breath back of the voice while speaking a few words, gradually increasing the number until you have breath control and all the while keeping the voice as deep, clear and low as possible."

"But you don't think that voice alone is sufficient beauty for woman, do you?" I asked, for every line of Miss Barre's cool coral colored linen dress and white hat bespoke a careful attention to the mysteries of true becomingness in dress, with beauty and good taste duly commingled—and these mysteries become just plain everyday facts in the clever hands and brain of the woman who knows how to dress. "I am sure that you recognize the importance of dress and manner in the field of womanly charm."

"Yes," said Miss Barre, with the pleasing attention that she always gives to your part of the conversation; "I believe in dress and manner as adjuncts to beauty, and I have just four little pet theories for the first aids to beauty. Here they are: First and most important, KEEP UP. Keep up and ahead of what you are doing of events and happenings; just cultivate a habit of feeling light and buoyant and not weighted down or impeded by life.

"Next, BE PLEASANT. Friends are as easy to acquire as enemies, and a pleasant greeting to the people you meet won't harm them or you.

A Mental Picture.

"Of course, I believe in dressing as well and as becomingly as your means will allow. And to do that you must cultivate your imagination. Do you know, I can always see myself walking out of the front door and down the street in a dress just about the time I am having my first fitting. I picture myself in clothes, and as I don't like freak pictures, I don't get freak clothes. I make sure that my hats form a background for my face, although if I had a short neck I would be careful not to make it appear still shorter by wearing hats that would cut it off in the course of their down-droop in back. And I study the line of my throat. A neck is pretty generally becoming—except to the woman with an exceedingly long, narrow face. Square neck for her, and a round line that cuts off the throat should be generally taboo.

"It's a science, isn't it?" laughed Miss Barre. "Why, I believe taste in dress has as many branches and ramifications as the study of singing. But they are both worth while, aren't they?"

And we all agree, don't we, little sisters?

One Woman's :-: Story :-:

By Virginia T. Van de Water.

CHAPTER VII.

PERHAPS Mary Danforth did not acknowledge to herself why it was so hard for her to give her mind to her studies during the evening on which she received Craig's pansies. If she appreciated that the sender of the flowers was in her consciousness more than was the book of civics lying open in the glow of her student's lamp, she did not admit it even in her innermost thoughts. She tried to "concentrate," but her wits wandered, and, time and again, she found, with a guilty start, that for some minutes she had been gazing abstractedly at nothing. It was late when at last she put out her light, urged to this course by her mother, who insisted that she was wearing herself out studying so hard, and that she would be "good for nothing" in the morning.

When Mary awoke on the morrow she was forced to confess the accuracy of the final part of her mother's prediction, for she did feel "good for nothing." Her eyes smarted and her limbs ached as she busied herself with her toilet. A vague feeling of disappointment possessed her, depressing and, at the same time, irritating her, and she went to breakfast with her nerves and temper on edge. She had difficulty in controlling her feelings when Mrs. Danforth, in her desire to promote table talk, innocently introduced the subject of Craig—feeling that he would be an interesting topic of conversation.

Vexed at the Blush.

"I declare," announced the kind-hearted matron, amiably, "I have almost fallen in love myself with that tall Texan. He has such beautiful manners and is so considerate of elderly people. Don't you think he is delightful?"

As this remark was addressed to the table at large, Mary, vexed at the blush which she felt creeping to her forehead, busied herself with her grapefruit and made no reply.

"Don't you like him, daughter?" persisted her mother.

"I think that he's a presentable man, mother, if that's what you mean," responded the girl tartly and with tightening lips. "You can hardly expect me to say, as you just said, that I am 'almost in love with him' myself, can you?"

The words were sharp and the tone harsh. The speaker suddenly appreciated that this was the second time within a few days that she had been impatient with her mother. As before, she regretted her show of temper when she saw the wounded expression in her mother's eyes. She noted also that her father was looking at her in amazement.

"I did not mean to speak like that, mother," she said quickly and penitently. She pushed her chair back from the table and, going around to the elderly woman, laid her own flushed cheek against the wrinkled one. "I had no business to be so cross, and I am very sorry. I am as nervous as a cat this morning. Please forgive me."

Mrs. Danforth patted her daughter's hand, her face all smiles in an instant.

"That's all right, my darling," she soothed. "We all have our cranky spells. Now eat your breakfast, for it is getting late. I shall be glad when this dreadful grind is over and you have graduated," she added, with a sigh. "You are not like your dear self these days, and it is because you are overwrought and overtired."

Mary made no protest. She wondered secretly if the strain of work was entirely responsible for her vague sense of discontent and uncertainty. Breakfast over, she hurried to her room to collect her books, and, as she returned to the hall, ready to leave the house, she came upon her father. He was leaning against the wall, his hand to his head. His face was pale and his brow contracted as if he were suffering.

"Father!" exclaimed the girl in alarm, "what is the matter?"

"Nothing to worry about, pet," he insisted. "I was just a little dizzy and headachy for a minute. I'm better now. Don't look so frightened!"

"Dad," said Mary, anxiously, "you are not well. You've been overworking."

"Oh, I guess not," he replied with an attempt at raillery. "An old codger like me must expect such feelings this warm weather, that's all—but I find it hard to remember that I'm getting old."

"Won't you see a doctor?" urged Mary.

Mary Gets a Shock.

"Pshaw!" he laughed. "I'm all right, I tell you! Don't mention this little turn to your mother, for she makes a mountain of a molehill when I don't feel up to the scratch."

On the way to school Mary thought of her father with some perturbation but the hurry and bustle of the day's work drove all other worries from her brain and she had forgotten the little episode by the time she boarded the subway train in the evening. She watched the express on which she rode draw away from a local train. As the lighted windows slid slowly backward she thought of how she had first seen Gordon Craig under circumstances like these. It was like a story book romance, and he looked not unlike a book hero, she said to herself with a contemptuous smile at her own silliness.

Her thoughts were still busy with him as she walked along toward her home. When she turned into her own street, several leather-lunged men, carrying bundles of papers, were shouting "Extra" at the other end of the block in the hollow, reverberating tones of the New York disaster harbinger. Still dreaming, she paid little heed to them, but went up to her apartment, her mind on the man she had known for such a little while. Strange, she mused, that he should have impressed her so strongly. Her father was standing in the drawing room as she entered her home. A glance at his face brought her to a comprehension of the news venders' cries as they were borne now to her ears through the open windows.

"Terrible accident on the Bosting Express!" they were shouting.

Blindly the girl stretched her hands to her father as he came toward her.

"Dad," she asked hoarsely, "was that——"

She got no further, for her father put his arm quickly about her and drew her to him.

"Yes, little girl," he said, tremulously, "the Boston Express—Craig's train—has been wrecked, and, God help us! most of the Pullman passengers are dead!"

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Rusty raised his head and timidly put it out around the angle of the fireplace, where he had taken refuge.

"Wha is he?" he asked huskily.

His master straightened up, put the revolver back in its holster and pointed grimly to the trap.

"Water and a long drop," he said quietly. "There's another of the Duke's men gone."

Rusty got shakily to his feet. "I knowed them battleship boogies was spooks," he observed dolefully. The plural suggested something to Jarvis. He motioned Rusty to stay back, and, picking up the sword, advanced on the second figure. He made two or three feints to strike and got no response. Then he gave it a powerful push with the point. The armor toppled over and fell down the stairs with a hollow clash. It was empty.

"I guess he's harmless."

Rusty immediately began gathering up the pieces.

"I'll fix dis one so he won't jump no mo'!" he declared, savagely.

"What are you going to do?"

"I'm gonna sink this other battleship!"

"Hold on—wait a minute. I reckon we can use that," said Jarvis, smiling a little. "It takes a thief to catch a thief, they say. We'll just out-spook Mr. Ghost. Come on, Rusty," he went on impatiently, holding up the breastplate and back-piece like an undershirt, "get into this hardware as fast as you can."

Rusty drew back with violent headshakings.

"Marse Warren, I don' wanna be no spook."

"Listen!" commanded his master, sharply. "Somebody was working in this room. It's a cinch that the treasure is here and it's a bigger cinch he'll come back to get it when we are gone."

"You ain't gonna leave me heah alone!" protested the old darkey.

The Plan.

"Sure! I'm going to put you in this so you can watch. I'm going t make a bluff that we're both gone. You'll be as safe as a church in this. No one would ever think of looking for one of us in this armor. You watch, and when he starts to work—then yell your head off!"

"I'll yell so loud they'll hear me in Kentucky," Rusty assured him, reluctantly permitting himself to be armored.

"You give your best yell and then I'll nail him."

Rusty sniffed doubtfully. "If you don't nail him he'll nail me!"

Jarvis grunted and fussed over the armor as the right valiant swashbuckler for whom it was constructed was less generously designed amidships than the rotund darky.

"Marse Warren," remarked Rusty, presently, "you mus' think a heap o' Miss Princess to go prowlin' and projec'ing 'roun' in dis boogy house in de dark."

"What makes you think that?" mumbled Jarvis, tolling with a rusty clasp.

"Marse Warren," said Rusty, solemnly, "I knowed you since you was a baby."

"What's that got to do with it? Pull in your breath a little bit."

"She gin you dat jew'lry you got 'roun' your neck, didn' she? She kind o' crazy 'bout you, too, ain't she?"

"How do you know?" inquired Jarvis, his eagerness concealed by the fact that he was bending over in the rear trying to joint the greaves to Rusty's ponderous calves.

"I knows, all right!" declared Rusty.

"But how do you know? Quit shifting around!"

"We-ell, I'm goin' to tell you, an' then you'll know how I knows. Jus' 'fore them horses jumped on me—when I was waitin' in de road—I heard a winder go up slap! An' dare was de Princess a-lookin' up at de moon, jes' like a picter. Jes' a-lookin' at de moon, an' she says—an' she says—"

"What did she say?" snapped Jarvis.

"'Ah,' she says, a-lookin' at de moon, she says, 'de world am begun all over ag'in fo' me.'"

"Get into this hardware as fast as you can."

Good News.

Warren started and was conscious of a singing in his ears that was not all due to the constant bending over required of a squire-at-arms. He held his tongue, knowing a darky's fondness for sentimental gossip, and Rusty went on:

"An' den—and den—she go right on an' she says—she says, 'Gawd be with you, my American!'"

A steel thigh-piece slipped through Jarvis' fingers and clattered to the floor.

"An'," concluded Rusty, with invincible logic, "I'se de only American 'roun' heah 'cep' you, Marse Warren."

"God bless you, Rusty!" said his master, fervently, to himself. But aloud he said, holding up the heavy casque:

"Here—put your head in this Stetson. Gloves—here now! How do you feel?"

Jarvis surveyed him with a grin. Sancho Panza would have looked a courtly and sprightly cavalier by comparison.

"All in," was the glum response from the hollow depths of the helmet. "Do I look like a spook?"

"You're a wonderful sight!" declared his master, heartily. "Now, Rusty, get over here. Where's your sword?"

A cataclysmic sneeze caused the armor to rattle like a junk wagon.

"I never heard a ghost sneeze before," chided his master, reprovingly.

"Marse Warren, I'se catchin' cold," pleaded the knight, in the hope of pardon.

"Nonsense! Now, Rusty, keep your ears and eyes open—don't move a muscle. If anyone comes, yell your head off—but don't sneeze!"

"Marse Warren, I wanna go home!"

"We haven't any home, Rusty," was the sober response, as his master adjusted him on the pedestal. Rusty sighed till the clasps of the armor creaked complaint.

"Marse Warren, I don't evah 'spect to get out o' dis boogy house nohow."

"Well, Rusty, there are some things ——"

Jarvis broke off abruptly and threw back his head, motioning Rusty to be quiet. To his ears came a sound so faint and far-off that it was impossible to decide whether it was a stifled groan near at hand or a call from some distant part of the castle.

Give Her a Chance

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"I AM 20," writes a young man, "have no bad habits, and for eight months have been in love with a girl of my own age. I have always given her as good a time as my salary would permit. One day I went to her place of employment, opened the door quietly to surprise her, and found her in the arms of a man who is known to have brought dishonor to at least two young girls.

"I have learned since that she has frequently gone to places of amusement with him. When I told her of his true character she admitted it, but said he was a good spender, and, as she was not engaged to me, I had no right to object. I love her with all my heart and would not see any trouble befall her. Should I stand aside and let her pay the price?"

No! That would be wrong were you only friends, and an unpardonable crime since you love her.

She pleads that she is not engaged to you, and you have no right to object. Seek an engagement, and give yourself the right!

The girl is going headlong to ruin, and a diverted interest may save her. She is not wicked; she is foolish. She is concerned only for the good times the present may bring. Make her, by the power of your love, see that there are better times in the future. Give her the interest that every girl longs for—the hopes, the dreams, the all-enveloping satisfaction with one's self and life that center around an engagement ring.

A Suggestion.

Induce her to change her place of employment; you surely have women friends whose amusements are unquestionable and whose influence is for good. See that they make her acquaintance, and that she is thrown in with them. Teach her the difference between the real and the shadowy. Never find fault with what she has done, or moralize on the degradation from which you hope to save her.

Treat her as if you trusted her. Appeal to her higher nature always, letting her see that you know she is too good to do the things other foolish girls do, and for whom life is never so long that they get through the paying.

Always keep in her mind the little home you are building for her, and when you take her through the air-castle of your dreams explain its needs and your means as if you were talking to an intelligent being. This will give her a sympathetic understanding of the limitations of your income, and the knowledge that you are saving for her will check any envious sighs for other men who are greater spenders, and cause her to insist on a greater economy than even you had advocated.

Try it! Every good woman is using her influence to redeem some man. If this were not so, humanity would retrograde instead of progress. With all these centuries of obligation heaped upon him, every man personally owes to every weak and willful woman all the influence and strength he can muster to save her.

The Best Way. 4

The strongest influence for a woman's good is that which appeals through the heart. All sighing for vanities of dress, position and person is stifled when she loves. Vanity is a stage of silliness that her heart sooner than her head helps her to outgrow.

If this girl loves you, it will not be impossible to rescue her. But, if she loves you or not, if she assents to an engagement or not, does not lessen your responsibility concerning her. If she will not heed you, and you know you are right concerning this man's dishonorable intentions, you owe it to all womankind to inform the girl's parents of what she is doing.

Help them build the protecting rail at the top of the cliff. That will show a greater Christianity than being content with contributing money or means to an ambulance to be stationed at its base.

BACKACHE A SYMPTOM

Of More Serious Illness Approaching. Mrs. Bender's Case.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Read about Mrs. Bender's experience:

St. James, Mo.—"About a year ago I was irregular, had cramps every month, headache and constant backache. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used the Sanative Wash and I am relieved of all my troubles and am in perfect health. I shall recommend your medicine to all my friends and you may publish this testimonial for the benefit of other suffering women."—Mrs. Anna Bender, St. James, Missouri.

Another Case.

Dixon, Iowa.—"I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for some time and it has done me much good. My back troubled me very much. It seemed weak. I had much pain and I was not as regular as I should have been. The Compound has cured these troubles and I recommend it to all my friends."—Mrs. Bertha Dierksen, Box 102, Dixon, Iowa.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

How to Dance the "Tango-Classique"

Some Rules and Suggestions for the Up-to-Date Whirlers

By LILLIAN LAUFERTY.

THERE are as many rules for dancing as there are successful dancers now before our public—and that number is legion. But the one rule from which we can never get away if we want to really dance is: "Know your subject."

You can no more dance in a finished and attractive manner without all the ingredients that go to make a dance than you can bake a cherry pie without flour and butter and sugar and water and cherries. Learn this rule by heart before you get up at some giddy "The Dansant," and with one eye on a supposedly admiring gallery, whirl in the mazes of a breakneck awkwardness.

Up at the Ziegfeld "Follies of 1913," at the New Amsterdam Theater, in New York, Rose Dolly and Martin Brown are doing a fascinating combination of true "Tango" and modified Turkey Trot, that they

"You must keep exactly with the rythm of the music."

"Practice relaxing shoulders, knees and ankles."

call "classique excentrique," and for the benefit of all who have seen them and the other lovers of Terpsichore who have not, they formulated for me a few simple rules for dancing.

Little Rose Dolly is like a scarlet tangoer streaking across a Southern sky—or a dash of her own Hungarian Paprika in a prosaic salad; and Martin Brown is a typical, up-to-date American youth—with the tall, slender, thoroughbred look we are all beginning to strive for. And here is "How they do it."

How to Do It.

"If you are a beginner," said Miss Dolly, "take a clever dancer—or a clever national dance—as your pattern. Study the steps, make up your mind which ones you can imitate, and then practice them one at a time with music to help you and spur you on. Work and work till you can get up and do a step and have it look just like play."

"That is quite right," said Mr. Brown. "Expression when you are doing it. Don't look strained or anxious. Practice a step in private, and work at it so hard that when you do it publicly it will look like play.

"You must keep exactly with the rhythm of the music—keep time, in other words. Follow the music, do steps that you have mastered, and do not do freak steps that don't fit in with your own personality at all. And above all, keep your toes pointed out all the time. No matter how pretty a step is, it does not look attractive if you do it in pigeon-toed fashion." He illustrated—and the same step done with pointing toe and with turned ankle and inpointed toe became a very different movement.

"Toes are very important in dancing," cried Miss Dolly, "although the modern dancer does not have to stand on them like a ballet dancer, she must keep them out and down, and sway gracefully on the ball of the foot and get the habit of keeping the instep and heel raised.

A Good Way to Learn.

"A good way to learn the modern dances is to stand up and just practice relaxing shoulders, elbows, knees and ankles in a sort of gradual shuffle. Do this first standing firmly on your feet, then rise to the balls of the feet and try it again, then take a step or two with the body relaxed and swaying. Do this first without music and in front of a mirror, then add music, and do it again in front of the mirror. And finally do away with the mirror, and just yield as unconsciously as possible to the rythm of the dance. You will be surprised how easily it will come after you have learned to relax.

"Then you must add steps to your ingredients of knowing how to keep time, how to relax and how to express the feeling that music gives you," added Mr. Brown. "Master a quick, little, short step and a long glide, combine them in various ways, add a little ability to kick gracefully—not high necessarily—but with gracefully pointed toe and an appearance of ease—and watch clever dancers for suggestions as to steps. In this way, even without the aid of a teacher, you can learn to be a home-made turkey trotter."

:-: Helping Jimmy :-:

Today's Short Story---Complete

"I SAW Jimmy this morning," I mentionel casually.

"Yes?" answered Mrs. Veralour.

"Yes. I think we shall have to take to calling him James. The hand of time seems to have given him a sudden, fearful blow. He looked as if he had seen trouble through a microscope. Has anybody left him money, do you know?"

"Money? Good gracious, no!"

"Poor old chap. Then he must have lost his little all."

"What do you mean?" demanded Mrs. Veralour, tapping her foot impatiently. "Why must it be one or the other?"

"Well," I said, "anybody could see it was money trouble of some sort. He had the appearance of being a pauper trying to look like a millionaire, or else a millionaire disguised as a pauper. His clothes have aged frightfully during the last few days. In fact, you could hardly call them clothes; they were merely emblems of civilization."

Mrs. Veralour seemed about to speak, and then, changing her mind, put her hand in front of her mouth and converted her remark into a yawn.

"Or else it is love," I murmured, gazing dreamily into the fire.

Mrs. Veralour said nothing. Taking a cigarette from the box, she tapped it uncertainly on the back of her hand.

"Of course," she said at last, with somewhat superfluous frankness, "I—I make mistakes sometimes. You know Florence Appleton, don't you? Jimmy was frightfully gone on her. He used to come round here every afternoon and tell me how much he loved her."

"What a ridiculous thing to do. It would have been considerably more sensible for him to have gone round and told the girl how much he loved you."

Very Extraordinary.

"What?" ejaculated Mrs. Veralour, with a laugh that was nearly a shriek. "Mr. Blake, what an extraordinary thing to say."

"Well," I said, "isn't the next best thing to telling a girl you love her to tell her you don't? Especially a girl so sought after as Florence Appleton. She'd immediately begin to wonder what was the matter with him."

"M'yes," said Mrs. Veralour. "I suppose she is inclined to think that every man is in love with her; but then she's got such hordes of admirers it's really not the girl's fault."

"No," I agreed, "it's not her fault, it's her forune."

"Misfortune?" murmured Mrs. Veralour, who never by any chance listens to what I say, "well, I don't know about that. Still, as I was saying, Jimmy used to come round and tell me all about it, and I promised to help him."

"Mrs. Veralour," I said, indignantly, "you're always match-making. It's abominable. You don't deserve to be a widow."

"I promised to help him," repeated Mrs. Veralour, firmly, deaf to my remark. "He wanted rather a lot of helping," she added, reflectively; "he was so awfully shy. Fancy a man being shy."

"Why not? Somebody's got to be. What did you do? I suppose you praised him up to the skies to her."

Mrs. Veralour looked at me with an air of mild amusement.

"My dear Mr. Blake. Is your grandmother still alive?"

"Eh? Yes. Why?"

"Oh, I was only wondering where you got all your old-fashioned ideas from. Of course, I didn't praise him. I ran him down. I used to go round and tell her most frightful stories of him. I warned her against him. Once you warn a girl against a man, you've wasted your time. It's like putting a 'dangerous' notice up on a sheet of ice; everybody goes to see why it was put there."

The Only Way.

"Oh," I said, weakly, "I have had many a ducking myself."

"The best reputation a man can have," she pursued, "is not to have one. The worst of it is Jimmy wouldn't live down to his reputation."

"That must be very disheartening," I said, sympathetically, "when you're doing your worst for a man."

"Yes, it was. Really, I think it was her money he was afraid of."

"Coward."

"M'yes. Still, I suppose it is humiliating for a rich girl to tell you she can never be a poor man's wife. However, I got him at last to promise that he would propose if I contrived a good opportunity for him."

She paused for a reflective moment.

"You know the summer house in the garden, don't you?"

"I do," I said, "and you know I do."

"Yes, you do, don't you," she smiled. I had a spring lock fixed on that door. You know, one of those that you can only open from the outside."

"I know. I begin to see the end of this story."

"M'm," she said. "That's the worst of being so bright—nothing comes as a surprise. Well, after I'd had the lock put on I invited them both round to lunch. Of course, I asked a lot of other people, so as not to arouse her suspicions. They all came; one or two girls and a lot of men—most of her horde, in fact. After lunch we all went out on the lawn."

"Do get on, Mrs. Veralour; you're like a writer on space rates. There are some things one takes for granted."

"I'd told Jimmy what he'd got to do."

"Get the girl in the summer house, and then you'd come along and snap the door on them?"

"Yes. Don't you think being locked in a summer house together was a good opportunity?"

"I think so. He could lead up to a proposal by saying how he wished they could never get out again. That's what you meant, isn't it?"

"Yes; only nothing quite so silly as that. I was going to give them half an hour to themselves, but after about ten minutes all the men commenced to drift away in search of her, and I was afraid they'd take her away from poor Jimmy. So I hurried along to the summer house at once."

"Go on," I urged. "Quicken the action."

"I listened for a minute to make sure they were really in there; as soon as I heard her voice I gave the door a push."

"Congratulations. A tip-top scheme, jolly well carried out."

"Well, I do think so," asserted Mrs. Veralour, in a tone curiously defensive. I—I still think so."

"Why, of course. You don't mean to say, when you opened the door later on, they weren't engaged?"

"Oh, no; they were engaged all right."

"Good," I paused for a moment, struck by a sudden thought. "But look here, what was old Jimmy looking so absolutely wretched about when I saw him this morning?"

Mrs. Veralour hesitated, and then pulled herself together.

"It wasn't he in the summer house with her, after all," she said.

Up-to-Date Jokes

The chief constable of a small town received by post six "Rogues' Gallery" photographs, taken in different positions, of an old offender wanted for burglary in a neighboring city. A fortnight later the city chief of police received this letter from the constable:

"Darling," she murmured, as she nestled against his shoulder, "do you know that horried people are saying that you are marrying me for my money?"

He leaped to his feet. "The miserable creatures!" he roared. "I won't stand it! Tell me who they are, and I'll horewhip them! I'll——"

"But, my dear," she objected, "you would create scandal, and the case would be made horribly public in the papers, and then I really could not marry you."

"What, then," he muttered, hopelessly, "can be done?"

"Darling, it is easy,' she replied. "I will make over my fortune to my brothers and sisters, and everybody shall know of it. Then no one shall be able to make horrible accusations against you."

But then he drew himself up proudly. His manliness had won a moral victory.

"Nay, Araminta!" he exclaimed. "Do not put thy sweet self to any trouble. Anthrobald Binks is proof against every slanderer!"

Ten Commandments of the Summer Visitor

By DOROTHY DIX.

INVITE not thyself to the house of another, oh, my daughter, for if so be thy friend hungereth and thirsteth for thy society she will arise and send to thee a writing bidding thee to come straightway to her abode. Yea, she will send for thee swiftly by means of the telegraph and the night letter, and if so be she holdeth her hand, take that for a sign which never faileth that she wanteth thee not.

2—Accept not an invitation from a man to tarry and stay at his house until it hath been O. K.'d by his wife, for verily I say unto thee that no man hath authority within his own home, no, not so much as to give a bone to a stray dog. It is the wife and the wife's people, and the wife's friends who have dominion over the spare bedroom.

3—When thou visiteth cast not the goo-goo eyes at thy hostess's son, nor upon her male relatives, nor upon her husband, for it is written that she that snareth the fancy of the men of the household shalt be invited there no more.

Don't Stay Too Long.

4—Forget not to take in thy trunk thy curling iron, and thy sewing tools, and thy postage stamps, and thy script for letters, and all the things of which thou hast daily need, for a borrower is an abomination and worse than the pestilence that destroyeth by night.

Praise Their Offspring.

5—Incline thy heart unto the amusements that hath been prepared for thee, and make thy countenance mirthful, though thy soul fainteth within thee when thy hostess sayeth, "Rejoice and be glad, for to-day we go forth to picnic in the woods, and to partake of squashed lemon pie flavored with ants." Likewise dissemble thy sorrow when she trotteth thee to the church sociable, or natteth thee to the card table until thy stomach turneth in desapir and thy gorge riseth in rebellion.

Invite Not Thyself.

6—When thou visiteth cast veracity to the winds, for verily truth hath no place in a popular house guest. Say of thy hostess's house, "Truly, this is a palace, fit for a king. Tell me, I pray thee, what marvellous architect planned it?" Beat upon thy breast and call Heaven to witness that there was never such a view, though it be but as the view of a fly that is caught under a teacup. Praise the beauty and the wit and the way the offspring of thy hostess reciteth, and when thou departeth thy hostess shall say of thee, "Surely, here is a woman of discernment, and I will bid her return again."

7—Conform thy ways to the ways of the house that thou visiteth. Arise while it is yet night, if it be the custom of thy hosts, so that thou shalt breakfast with them, and give no trouble to the servants, for, behold, a hand-maiden in the suburbs is as precious as gold, yea, as fine gold, and as difficult to keep.

8—If thou followeth a diet and eateth of strange food prepared after an ungodly manner, visit not at all, but hie thee to an inn where thou canst pay for the trouble thou givest. Thus shalt thou save thyself from being hated by thy friends.

9—Forget not to tip the hand-maiden who waiteth upon thee, for the button-her-up-in-the-back is worthy of her hire.

10—And if thou forgettest all of the other commandments of the Summer visitor, remember this, oh, my daughter: Make thy visit short. Tarry not long in thy friend's house lest she be weary of thee. Go while yet she entreateth thee to stay with her, for it is better that thy hostess should weep because thou goest than to shed tears because thou stayest.

Saving His Face

At a very convivial dinner a man with a preternaturally solemn face arose, wine glass in hand, to propose a toast.

"May we never," he said, in deep, measured tones, "drink any more of this stuff—"

He paused, and there was a horrified silence for several seconds—"than is good for us!"

:-: The Practice of Self-Control :-:

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED.
Author of "The Etiquette of New York To-day."

IN any sphere of life self-control is an important element toward success and happiness. Control of mind is a factor toward overcoming the tendency to be oversensitive, suspicious, or tormented by imaginary slights. Moping and brooding over fancied grievances will never achieve peace. Sensitive people, who take offense easily, are very difficult to get on with. We are never sure "where to find them," as the saying is. They are constantly making exactions of their friends, calling them to account for certain delinquencies.

Social life often requires the making of concessions, the common sense not to construe the thoughtlessness of a friend into an intentional slight, or absentmindedness into indifference. Naturally, we feel that something is due between intimate friends, but even in the case of intimates a margin of kindly concession must be made. The fear that one is not receiving sufficient attention from others is an unpleasant form of egotism.

Delay in Calling.

The many demands of social life oblige people not to hold one another too seriously to account for delay in calling, for instance. Among acquaintances delay in calling, or returning calls, need not be taken as an indication of a wish to be exclusive or an intention to be neglectful. Allowances have to be made for the failings of others on this score. When an acquaintance calls after a lengthy delay it is an important courtesy to welcome her cordially, not to allude to any misunderstanding, to hasten to accept, in the kindest spirit, any explanation which may be offered, not to dwell on the subject but pass on to other matters and to do this without permittin the shadow of a suggestion that she has been dilatory. It is wise for the person making a delayed call not to be too profuse in excuses.

Many reasons for delayed calls may be considered by the sensible person who is willing to make concessions toward friends. Absence from home, illness, engagements, various home duties, interests in charitable or other work very absorbing to one's time may be among the causes for delay. The wish to have some leisure to pursue personal tastes may be another reason.

Control of Temper.

While the casting out of fretful grievances is of importance in daily life, control of temper is a rule of life to be practiced by every well-bred person. It is well not to get too excited and to remember to close a door gently. "I never knew anyone who went about banging doors and playing whirlwind to possess any influence whatever," said a wise woman.

The practice of self-control and composure will have an immense effect on one's own manners and will be sure to make a pleasing impression everywhere. To sit quietly, to keep the hands still, to walk calmly, these little things lend a charm to the person who has acquired them.

It is salutary to take stock of ourselves and recognize our own shortcomings and try to remedy them. It is good to get out of ourselves, to stop being self-centered, to give up talking of ourselves and our grievances and to live in the sunshine of cheerfulness and the breeze of larget interests.

MIKE FINN WILL REMAIN AT HELM OF MOBILE CREW

MOBILE, July 23.—Mike Finn will remain as manager of the Mobile Baseball Club.

Such was the announcement of President Alfred Staples following a meeting of the directors of the Mobile club. "The trouble has been adjusted satisfactorily to everybody concerned," he said, "and Mr. Finn remains as manager of the club."

Further than the announcement that "matters has been settled satisfactorily to all concerned," President Staples would not go into the case, but from a reliable source, it is understood that Mike Desmond, employed at the ball park in the capacity of special officer, had tendered his resignation. It is understood that he took his action, following Manager Finn's statement that he would resign, rather than cause the club officials any embarrassment.

Manager Finn would not discuss the outcome of the case when seen, but stated that only one thing in connection with the entire affair had caused him any regret, and that was the statement that he had "insulted the Hibernians." The Gull leader denied that he ever offered offense to the Hibernians of any other organization of any kind in Mobile, and states that he has never made any remark that could be construed as an insult to any organization.

"Mike, you're too good an Irishman, yourself, to talk about the Hibernians; are you not?" he was asked.

"Sure," he responded, "and to tell the truth, I've made up my mind to join the Hibernians."

The announcement that Mike Finn will remain at the head of the club means that the players will hustle as they have in the past to keep the club in the running, and no one was more pleased when definite announcement was made that he would stay than the players now working for the Mobile club under him.

BOXERS CLAMOR FOR CHANCE AT RITCHIE'S TITLE

LOS ANGELES, July 24.—And still they come! With enough boxers here to stage a carnival of fistic revels lasting until Christmas and managers and promoters clamoring over each others shoulders for a chance at a date and a trunk full of coin it appears that the end is not yet.

Joe Woodman is clamoring for dates for his two proteges, Sam Langford and Jack Read, the Australian lightweight chamuion, and bids fair to make a landing.

Ad Wolgast also wants to be remembered. He is right on the ground to press his claim with Champion Willie Ritchie for an early match. He figures that since Rivers lost out in his match on July 4 he is in direct line for another match in preference to the Mexican and probably his bout at the Vernon arena would be a good card.

* * *

ANOTHER challenger of Ritchie is Jimmy Duffy, whose record during the past year certainly gives him some right to consideration. His manager, Bert Finch, writes that Duffy is willing to meet any lightweight in the country with an expressed preference for Ritchie, Freddie Welch, Leach Cross or Joe Rivers.

Finch says that if Ritchie will concede Duffy a match for the championship he will post $5,000 as a side bet that Duffy will defeat him in twenty rounds and that he can fix the terms for the division of the purpose to suit himself.

In May of last year Duffy fought a ten-round bout to a draw with Freddie Welch and has defeated Leach Cross twice, once in New York and once in Buffalo.

* * *

"DUMB DAN" MORGAN, the "speechless" wonder from New York, has issued a statement offering to match Jack Britton with Champion Ritchie for a side bet of $10,000. There is no mention made in the letter of whether it is ten thousand cigars or toothpicks. He says this would be a real test for the champion and that Britton will box at any weight that suits the "champion."

Pennant May Hang on Series

By O. B. Keeler.

NOW is the time to get out old friend Crucial Series and furbish him up for active duty the next three days—beginning today. Also, it is up to the Crackers, like the noble Romans getting an earful of M. Antony's oratory, that those who have base hits prepare to shed them now.

In other words, this is the well-known Critical Juncture, the Tide in the Affairs of Men, and (as set forth in the preamble) the Crucial Series.

There is no particular advantage to be gained by holding a post mortem in advance. It may be stated briefly that if the Crackers lose three straight games to the Billikens, the 1913 bunting will be in grave danger of wasting its fragrance on the desert air surrounding Montgomery, Ala.

If the Smithies win three, with the long home series in prospect, chances will be bright for fireworks at Ponce DeLeon.

A split series, with the Town Boys on the heavy end, will make things look the same way, only not so much so. And if the Billies get the odd game, our noble lads will have some Horatious-at-the-Viaduct work cut out for them the rest of the way.

Here's hoping!

CHEERING NOTE.

In the thick of the trip
We garner a tip
With a soul-stirring sentiment to it:
It's easy to crack
The old Turtle's back—
A Dent on the rubber will do it!

GILBERT PRICE'S little vacation didn't last long. He was ordered by Manager Billy Smith to start from Atlanta this morning to join the club at Montgomery, where he probably will work in the Saturday game.

Price said yesterday he couldn't figure out why he drew the suspension that became effective after his poor start against the Turtles in the opening contest of the recent series.

"I just got bumped—that's all," said Gilbert. "That will happen to anybody once in a while; sometimes oftener."

WITH a dozen games, more or less, dividing the Senators from the Athletics in the American League handicap, Walter Johnson, some Big Smoke, comes to bat with the offer to pitch half the remaining games for the Griffmen, beginning September 1, with this little stipulation:

"If Griffith thinks at that time we are close enough to the Athletics to make a fight for the pennant."

That's the point, by the way.

Walter goes on to remark that if Radbourne could do things like pitching every other day, so can he. And he adds that the slabmen who work in the meantime should be instructed to pitch their arms off every time they start.

It would be interesting to see Walter and the large and scintillant Mr. Boehling taking it turn about on the slab—and if the Athletics slump far from their dozen-game lead, we may have a chance to see that very thing.

AND Mordecai Brown just went in for the lowly Reds and saved both ends of a double bill with the Braves, shutting off a savage rally in the last inning of each game. Calls up memories of other days—what? You know.

LINES TO AN EX-CUB.

It may not be the same old Brown
That used to wallop Matty so;
The passing years have dimmed renown
That sparkled in the Long Ago.
But when the Final Pinch is there,
That three-clawed Cub's the same old Bear!

It's not the Cubs he's fighting for—
The Reds could never look the same;
He lacks the grim and bracing roar
That tuned his whip in every game.
But in the pinches—have a care—
That three-clawed Cub's the same old Bear!

MORRIS TO MEET BENEDICT.

J. PLUV WALKS ARM-IN-ARM WITH J. PRINCE

JACK PRINCE really gets sore when he is called "the Rainmaker."

But being well armed with a pair of perfectly good legs, we dare him to come forth for battle, and so here goes:

Jack Prince, you are a regular rainmaker!

For the second time in as many days the races carded for the Motordrome have been called off on account of rain. And to make sure that they will have plenty of time to get Jack out of town, the other backers in the saucer have decided that the next set of races will not be held until Friday night.

They want all of to-day to get Jack out of the city. And they guarantee that Prince will not be within fifty miles of here by sunrise to-morrow.

And with that promise, the local bugs may be assured that the big Marathon grind will come off to-morrow night. Also a number of other events that should prove corkers.

To-day all of the riders intend tuning up their machines a bit more. To-morrow night the record for the 24 miles, 385 yards is very likely to get an awful kick in the slats.

ATTELL COMES TO LIFE.

NEW YORK, July 24.—Abe Attell will be seen in action again to-night at Rockaway, where he will clash with Willie Beecher, the New York lightweight, for a ten-round bout.

Report That Cobb Is Slated for Chicago

CHICAGO, July 24.—Just before the White Sox pulled out for their Eastern invasion a report gained circulation to the effect that Ty Cobb, Tiger star, is to become a member of the South Side crew.

To get him, all this according to the report, Owner Comiskey must give up Pitcher "Red" Russell, Outfielder Chappelle, for whom Comiskey recently paid $18,000, and a catcher.

It has been known for several months that Cobb has been anxious to break away from the Tiger band, but this is the first time that an offer was made for him.

LARNED-WRIGHT WIN FROM JOHNSON-WHITNEY

BOSTON, July 24.—W. A. Larned and B. C. Wright, veteran tennis masters, worked their way into the fourth round of the Eastern doubles championship at the Longwood Cricket Club's courts yesterday by disposing of H. C. Johnson and E. H. Whitney, of Boston, in four sets. The scores were 6-3, 6-3, 2-6, 6-2.

Other matches in the doubles and singles were without striking features. The all-comers' tournament for the Longwood singles was advanced to the fourth round.

MARIST GIVES UP ATHLETICS; JOE BEAN OUT

MARIST College, known as the greatest athletic prep school south of the Mason and Dixon line, has decided to give up sports.

No, don't pinch yourself. You're not asleep. It is the real cold truth.

The school has decided that it can not afford athletics, yet the very one thing that has "made" it has been athletics.

Every schoolboy in Georgia knows Marist because of its ability to win in athletics. It has been the ambition of every youngster in the State to attend the foundry of learning on Ivy street.

Joe Bean made the announcement this morning that he had been discharged. Said Joseph:

"Father Rapier called me in and told me that my services were no longer needed. I nearly strangled to death from the shock. But Father Rapier says that the school can not afford to dally in athletics any more."

Marist is no longer on the athletic map.

But one J. Bean IS. He is going to make a corking instructor for one of these other prep schools. Already he has received two offers, and will probably close for one of them within the next week or ten days.

PROMOTER LOST MONEY STAGING RITCHIE FIGHT

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 24.—Lightweight Champion Willie Ritchie is quite willing to risk his laurels again. He says he is not particular against whom he is sent, so long as the price is right.

Ritchie is not naming the sum he thinks should be paid. He wants each of the promoters to make a bid, and he will accept the highest offer made.

It is no use mentioning "percentage" to the champion. He has thrashed it all out, and has discovered that flat offers are the best.

One of the charges Billy Nolan made against the champion was that Ritchie was "money mad." Nolan meant, of course, that money occupied Ritchie's thoughts to the exclusion of other things. There is nothing about Ritchie's actions when money is in question to suggest that his mind is unbalanced.

Having received something like $18,000 from Promoter Graney for the fight on July 4, Ritchie will probably expect as much or more when he boxes again. And the chances are very much against his getting it.

The fight between Ritchie and Rivers drew something more than $29,000. As "houses" go nowadays, it was a mighty good clean-up. But not for Graney, for if he broke even he is lucky.

Ritchie Received $18,000.

It is easily enough reckoned if Ritchie got $18,000, Rivers $7,000 and it cost $1,500 to hire Coffroth's arena, Graney had little more than $2,500 to meet all the expenses of advertising and help, and the chances are he had to dig down into his jeans.

It is an object lesson for fight promoters and for such as think there is money in handling affairs of that kind. Graney worked like a beaver and used every influence he could command to advertise his show.

And when it came off the boxers received nearly 90 per cent of the takings, and the promoter found himself on the wrong side of the ledger.

This is a matter that will have to be regulated, although it is not easy to see how it will be done. As matters stand, all a champion or near champion has to do is set the promoters bidding against one another, as Ritchie is doing right now, and prices will go soaring.

"What was I to do?" said Graney. "If I had not given Ritchie what he asked some one else would have given it to him."

Graney Has Good Lesson.

Probably, now that it's all over, Graney wishes he had not stood in the way of some other promoter. Of course, Graney will be chary of offering big money to Ritchie again, and this means that there will be one fool less among the promoters.

It looks, indeed, as if this theory of paying the fighters more than they are worth—and more than they draw—will only stop when each and every promoter in the country has had his fingers burned.

Jim Flynn Gets Chance at Title
Gunboat Smith Is His Opponent

By Ed W. Smith.

IT takes a good bit of managerial skill to boost Jim Flynn, of Pueblo, up from the depths into which he had been forced through successive defeats into a real match for a real belt which is to be emblematic of the heavyweight championship of the boxing world. That skill has been shown by one J. Curley, Flynn's manager, and the Pueblo man is to get his second chance to win a title—or is it the fourth or fifth?—in a bout in New York early next month when he faces Gunboat Smith, of Philadelphia and San Francisco. And the winner will be given a belt to replace the one that went out of commission when Luther McCarty died in Alberta the latter part of May.

* * *

FLYNN'S peculiar position in the boxing world is brought to mind now and then by a dispatch from Missouri telling of the progress the boxer is making in his automobile trip from Pueblo to New York. The other day the wires bore the news that Jim had been pinched in a small town for speeding, after having had his machine repaired. Flynn ever has been a thorn in the side of the aspirants for the white title, but unfortunately for the hardy fellow from the mountains he always has just failed of getting there. Jim is a trifle too small, in the general opinion of the critics, or rather he is too short to cope successfully with the tall men of the heavyweight division.

* * *

IF many of the fight fans do not like Jim for his brash ways and the overabundance of ego that he displays constantly, they nevertheless must admire the man for his sterling fighting qualities. Gameness is Jim's middle name, and he has proved in the last four or five years to be the grandest little trial horse the ring ever has known. As a matter of fact, a man never would be thoroughly tried in the ring until he had met Jim in a real encounter. If he could get by the Pueblo ringster, his future would be pretty well assured.

* * *

AS a matter of cold fact, it was never demonstrated that the late Luther McCarty was a real fighter until he had sent Jim into a crushing defeat. Then we all knew that Luther was the real thing, a demonstration that the poor fellow strengthened a short time later by whaling the stuffin' out of Al Palzer, one of the behemoths of the ring. Flynn got his chance at McCarty out on the coast after he had demonstrated that he couldn't do much with Jack Johnson, and figured that if he had whipped Luther he would have had little trouble with Palzer, who was sent in against the winner. But McCarty proved far too big and strong and lengthy in the reach for the squatty Flynn.

* * *

IN Gunboat Smith, Flynn will meet a man much more to his own measurements, though the Gunboat is a long, rangy chap. But he hasn't the weight that most of Flynn's opponents have possessed, and for that reason Flynn believes he has a royal chance of being returned the winner. The heavyweight class is a mysteriously weak division just now, and almost anybody has a chance of dragging down the honors.

* * *

OUT in Los Angeles, where Flynn has done some of his best fighting, they like him. As a matter of fact, they like the rough, tough fellow pretty much out there without losing sight of and giving free credit for his cleverness and skill. Both Battling Nelson and Ad Wolgast, former lightweight champions, were great favorites there. So were George Memsic, Rudy Unholz, Frankie Conley, Charley Dalton, Bud Anderson and other strong boys of the ring. They like the puncher out in Tom McCarey's town, and haven't a great deal of use for the fancy boxer.

WHY PITCHERS DIE YOUNG.

"That guy is there!" the rooter cried
who lingered at my side,
While Old Gil Price was going well
and many a batsman died.
"That guy is there!" the rooter cried
and rent the summer air,
And as another man went out he
yelled: "That guy is there!"

A youth came up and smote the ball
unto a distant spot.
Another youth came up and made
another swat,
And when another youth came up
and made another clout
The gent who sat beside me rose and
hollered: "Take him out!"

Oh, would I were a hunter on the trail of ivory!
I would not hunt where elephants
are roaming o'er the lea,
But I would buy a grand stand seat
and take my gun in hand,
For there are tons of ivory in every
baseball stand.

Ban Johnson refuses to allow Messrs. Altrock and Schaefer to work their funny stuff while games are in progress, possibly on the theory that the players perpetrate enough comic stuff under the guise of baseball.

While Jack Knight has taken a fearful slump, we are forced to admit that he was a Knight for a day. Wretch! Don't you dare to strike muh!

As we diagnose it, Heine Zimmerman has the artistic temperament in his ankle.

Fuzzy Woodruff avers that Carl Morris is underrated, thereby establishing a reputation as the World's Greatest Kidder.

It is reported that Jack Coombs will be ready for work by August. Connie Mack is preparing to sing that popular ballad entitled, "Good-by, Everybody."

J. Evers evidently labors under the impression that it is impossible to manage a ball team with R. Bresnahan trying to run it from one end and C. Murphy trying to run it from the other. The heluvitis, he can't bench C. Murphy.

THE GREATEST PLAY I EVER SAW.

It was in the eighth inning. The Gulls were one run ahead, but Hogg had begun to wabble, and the bases were filled with one out. Tommy Long stepped to the plate, fouled off two and watched three wide ones go by. The next one was low, on the inside, and Long pulled a terrific drive toward right. Robertson started the moment the ball was hit, and a youth with a large basket on his arm stepped in front of me and remarked: "Peanuts! Five a bag!"

Clarke Opens Against Billikens
Smith Orders Price to Join Club

By Joe Agler.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., July 24.—Unless Billy Smith changes his mind at the last moment those cocky Billikens will have Clarke shooting at them from the offside in the opening game of the series this afternoon. Chapman will catch.

The boys hooked the rattler out of Memphis last night, feeling pretty blue at losing the odd game to the Turtles, especially as the Billies were winning at the same time. But they packed their fighting togs and took them along, and they know one thing for certain—the Billies can't win game for game with the Crackers on this series, at least. Somebody is going to lose. And this bunch won't believe it will be the Crackers.

HARRELL was lucky yesterday in the first five innings, or we should have piled up some runs. At that, there is no accounting for the way Thompson exploded in the last two rounds. It was just one of those things that happen to the best pitchers once in awhile. And when we take a beating it might as well be a good one.

Clarke looks to me like a first-class pitcher in every way. He has everything a good pitcher needs, and after getting used to the going in this league he is bound to win a lot of ball games.

* * *

I UNDERSTAND Price has been ordered to rejoin us in Montgomery, although Billy hasn't said so outright. I hope that is the case, as he will come in mighty handy in the series, the way I see it.

Red Sox Owners Are On Verge of a Split

DETROIT, MICH., July 24.—That there is a ruction imminent in the Boston American League baseball club came to light here to-day through the reported attempt made by Boston to trade Speaker and some other player for Ty Cobb. President McAleer did not make the offer, but the offer came. It is understood that the other player included with Speaker was "Smoky Joe" Wood.

McAleer scouts the idea of any such trade. But John I. Taylor and his father, General W. S. Taylor, want to put it through over his head.

The importance of the offer lies in the indication that the Taylors are attempting to take the reins of management out of the hands of President McAleer and again become the active heads of the Boston club.

20-LB. LIMIT TO BOOST PARCEL POST HERE

Additional 1,000 Feet of Space Will Be Needed and Force Will Be Doubled.

Heads of the Railway Mail Department and United States postoffice inspectors in Atlanta have been engaged recently in an investigation to determine the extent of increased business as the direct result of the order which goes into effect August 15 increasing the limit of weight of parcel post packages from 11 to 20 pounds.

Postoffice Inspector Robert E. Barry; Mark Bunn, chief clerk of the Railway Mail Service, and G. A. Gardner, special agent from Washington, have been conducting the investigation. They declared Thursday that at the minimum to start with it would be necessary to obtain 1,000 square feet additional floor space at each terminal station to provide for the increased business.

Will Sort Mail at Terminals.

A unique system has been arranged by which all parcel post mail hereafter will be assorted at the terminal stations.

"Carloads of packages will now be shipped which it is impossible to assort on the roads," said Mr. Barry. "A carload of parcel post matter from Chicago or a distant point will come direct to Atlanta. Here it will be assorted at the terminal station, and as far as is possible this class of mail will hereafter travel by the carload. Parcel post carriers will receive their mail at the terminal, and thus eliminate carrying it to the postoffice.

"In the last week we have visited all the principal cities of the South where terminals will be established for this purpose. Atlanta is the largest of all Southern terminals, over sixty trains of mail of from three to eight cars each are assorted here daily.

"We have decided that at least 1,000 square feet additional floor space will be necessary to start with, but just how much more will be needed when in operation we are unable as yet to estimate.

"At every terminal the number of men now employed will be doubled. Atlanta now has ten assorting clerks. The parcel post system with its latest improvements has revolutionized the entire postal service. The benefits to be derived by the citizens of the United States are colosal."

HEAD OF MERCER TO BE LANDRUM OR O'KELLEY

Choice of University President Lies Between Louisville and Raleigh Ministers.

MACON, July 24.—The presidency of Mercer University lies between the Rev. W. W. Landrum, of Louisville, Ky., formerly of Atlanta, and the Rev. T. W. O'Kelley, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Raleigh, N. C., according to men in close touch with affairs at the institution.

The special committee appointed to choose a president has offered the office to one of sixteen ministers and educators who were under consideration, and they decline to state his name until he has either accepted or declined.

It is believed that Dr. Landrum, who is now with the Baptist Theological Seminary, is first choice, and that if he declines the place will be tendered to the Rev. Dr. O'Kelley.

Guardsman Shoots Escaping Comrade

INDIANAPOLIS, July 24.—National Guardsman Walter Dowell, of Madison, Ind., is near death to-day from a bullet fired by Sergeant Edwin Ball, Company H, of Indianapolis, when Dowell attempted to escape after being arrested on suspicion of smuggling liquor into the National Guard camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison.

Ball is held by the police on a charge of assault with intent to kill, pending the result of Dowell's wound.

Convict Who Killed Grandfather Slain

MARIETTA, July 24.—Jasper Butler, a white convict, aged 21, sentenced for life from Heard County for killing his grandfather, was shot and instantly killed by Charles Carter, a guard. Butler escaped from the squad on the Kennesaw road and was recaptured in a nearby swamp. On the way to camp he broke away again. When ordered to stop he kept running. The guard fired, killing him instantly.

Carter is under arrest charged with involuntary manslaughter.

POLICE IN NORTH NAB ATLANTAN FOR THEFT

C. E. Henderson, Accused of Embezzlement From Auto Firm, Taken in Philadelphia.

C. E. Henderson, wanted in Atlanta on a charge of embezzling $600 from the Imperial Tire and Tube Company, No. 349 Peachtree street, has been arrested in Philadelphia. An Atlanta police officer will leave Thursday to bring him here.

Henderson was a salesman for the tire company. He suddenly left Atlanta six months ago and since Pinkerton detectives have been trying to locate him. They traced him to Jacksonville and to Philadelphia, and there lost the trail.

However, his father-in-law lived in Philadelphia and by shadowing him they finally caught Henderson.

Slit Skirt Wearers Safe in Milwaukee

BOSTON, July 24.—Elisha S. Converse, a 19-year-old boy with a million dollars in his own name, with a 50-foot sailing boat, saddle horses and a motor car, is working as an ordinary "hand" in a rubber shoe factory. He earns $9 per week.

BLEASE IS ASKED FOR HELP BY MRS. ZACHRY

AUGUSTA, July 24.—Reports from Columbia, S. C., are that Mrs. Mary W. Zachry, of Augusta, appealed to Governor Blease yesterday to not allow her two children to be taken away from her in South Carolina, where she fled with her babies, Frances, aged 3, and Mildred, 9 months. It is understood the Governor did not commit himself.

Julian J. Zachry, the husband, was asked for a statement yesterday. He said that he had nothing to say about the kidnaping of the children by Mrs. Zachry.

Mrs. Zachry stated before leaving here that she would kill her husband or any other man who attempted to take her babies from her. She was frantic because of what she termed the law's injustice in awarding the children to Mr. Zachry's custody.

Mrs. Zachry was Miss Mary Wilcox and was Mr Zachry's stenographer when they were married. Within a year the first child was born. It was a short time before the second child was born that an estrangement occurred.

Mrs. Zachry, it is charged, found letters alleged to show that her husband had been having secret meetings with another woman. This led to their separation, the court's order awarding the custody of the children to their father and the mother's defiance of the ruling as shown in her action in taking them to South Carolina.

Gives Luncheon to Plucky Phone Girls

COTTON DROPS AS LONGS LIQUIDATE

Longs Unload July-August When Liverpool Sells—Weather and Crop News Bearish.

NEW YORK, July 24.—The absence of rain in Texas and Oklahoma led to a steady opening in the cotton market today. Prices were net unchanged to 5 points higher on the old crop positions and unchanged to 4 points decline on distant months. Immediately after the opening scattered buying by shorts dominated the market, resulting in prices rallying some 3 to 6 points from the initial level. Later weakness developed in the old crop positions, due chiefly to liquidation of foreign accounts. The sudden wave of liquidation of long accounts by prominent brokers, including many spot interests, found the market too thin to take the load.

The price of old crops declined in sensational manner. With declines as high as 2, 3 and 5 points between sales, July soon dropped 20 points, while August lost 31 points from the previous close.

The weakness in the old crops had little effect on the new crop months, which only declined 3 to 6 points. It is now believed that a large short interest is existing in later positions.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: July, 11.88; August, 11.65; October, 11.33; January, 11.22.

HAYWARD & CLARK'S DAILY COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, July 24.—The map shows fair weather in central and south Texas and the Carolinas; cloudy elsewhere; some showers in northwest Texas and Oklahoma. Good rains in Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Tennessee and western Georgia. There are indications for rain in north Texas and Oklahoma and further showers in the central States; clearing in the Atlantics. Temperatures in north Texas rose as usual before a rainy spell and the weather is cooler.

Liverpool was poor at the first, but rallied on an unfavorable report on west Texas from a prominent traveling crop reporter. The report merely showed the need of rain, which need is about to be filled.

There was some buying here at the opening on Cordill's report, but the conspicuous weakness of August in New York, suggesting hedge selling, and a Government forecast for showers and thunderstorms and cooler in north Texas, soon caused easiness, October selling first to 11.37, later to 11.32.

Cuero, Texas, received four new bales today. Overnight rain in Oklahoma was shown on the Government official records.

The into-sight for the week looks around 30,000, against 30,428 bales last year. Mill takings last year for this week were 174,000. A favorable comparison is looked for.

MILLER-COTTER COTTON LETTER.

MEMPHIS, July 24.—Apprehensions of drouth are now effectually relieved, except as to portion of central and western Texas. This means that the crop will enter August in excellent condition.

Weakness in the market is due to absence of buyers when sellers appear, as few are willing to go long in the face of excellent prospects, while recent scare on drouths eliminated the short interest and removed buying from the market. General rains in the Southwest would probably be the signal for a further break.

COTTON GOSSIP

The leading feature of the market today was the weakness of August, which was said to be on selling by Liverpool undoing straddles, and liquidation in that month by scattered longs. Local professionals sold yesterday on predictions of rains over Western belt and the failure of rains to materialize, causing covering this morning, and prevented new crop from sympathizing more with the decline in the acid. It is purely a weather market. Crop reports continue good and rains just now where they are needed would naturally increase the bearish feeling.—J. M. Anderson.

"I can not help but feel that the Government condition report will be bullish. A large crop of cotton is needed, with all information that I can get, I believe in higher prices before any material decline, and unless weather conditions show a great improvement in the next few weeks, cotton will sell much higher."—S. Tate.

* * *

The absence of rain in Texas was the incentive for buying around the opening. The feeling is that there were large lines of longs liquidated. Mitchell was apparently the best buyer on the advance, but later sold August. Wilson and Schill also sold August.

* * *

"Dallas wires: "Texas—Panhandle, cloudy in the south, clear in the west, partly cloudy; no rain. Oklahoma—Partly cloudy."

NEW ORLEANS, July 24.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map is favorable. It shows fair over the Carolinas and Central and South Texas, cloudy over the rest of the belt. Fine rains in Arkansas, Central States, Alabama, Tennessee, parts of Georgia, and some showers in Northwest Texas yesterday and last night. Indications are more pronounced for more extensive rains in North Texas and Oklahoma. Showery weather in the central belt.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Liverpool reported smaller spot sales. Manchester cabled that cloths were dull and yarns hard to sell. The weather map revealed fine rains east of the Mississippi River and the map reads unsettled conditions over the greater part of Texas. With these factors as a starter, the American ring prepared for a price recession on the day's trading and scored one in the natural course of events. July New Orleans again held the center of the stage, because all of the trailers on the long side had not liquidated. The result was a further sharp readjustment, in which the spot article played a part.

"The talent as a whole now seems satisfied the crop is progressing toward a large yield. Rains in Texas in the near future will go a long way toward confirming such a belief. In that State, dry, hot weather has probably done far more good in the destruction of weevils than harm to the plant, which, as a rule, possesses a sturdy tap root and is well limbed.

"In recent years the Texas farmer has profited by the Government's experiments and has steadily improved his cultural methods."

The Government made additions to the weather maps, showing some rains overnight in Oklahoma and good prospects for more general rains in Texas and Oklahoma during the next 48 hours. The official records show temperature average in Oklahoma is 98 degrees and in Texas from 100 to 106 degrees. This brought active selling by those who purchased on the early map, failing to show rains in the West, and prevented a sharp advance in new crop, which was evident during the late forenoon. Late positions sympathized with the decline in old months.

Sentiment regarding the cotton market continues bearish and if further rains should come, which are predicted, a further decline should be looked for. It is purely a weather market and will be governed accordingly.

Grain Notes

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "It was the gossip of the wheat trade last night that as long as the export business continues large prices are not likely to decline a great deal, if any, from present levels. In the last three days export sales aggregate more than 2,000,000 bushels, mostly hard winter.

"Corn continues to be a weather market."

Bartlett Frazier & Co.: "Wheat—We look for a comparatively narrow market.

"Corn—We are inclined to feel that anxious longs have liquidated and that the market should rule fairly steady today.

"Oats—As in corn, there was good deal of liquidation yesterday and considerable short selling by locals. Threshing returns on the whole continue to show poor out-turns.

"Provisions—Pork is holding steady. Shipments of lard and meats continue to exceed those of last year."

B. W. Snow wires from Fargo, N. D.: "Wheat cutting has begun in Northern counties. Crop through Grant and Roberts Counties above average in South part of Red River Valley; harvest will begin next week. Occasional plant with black rust can be found in nearly any field, but nothing more than is present each year. Weather and plant growth to date make it practically certain there would be no serious outbreak. Lots of wheat seen to-day will make 30 and 35 bushels and both Whetstone and Red Valleys will make better than average."

Lyle wires Chapin & Co. from Newton, Kans., July 23: "After hearing funeral sermons in Kansas City over the Kansas corn crop, I was not much surprised on coming over here to find the corpses very much alive, judging from observation. With early relief it is possible for Kansas to raise 75 per cent. Damage very much exaggerated; may be worse where I have not been. Corn wants water to make growth; nearly at standstill for want of rain."

* * *

Rainfall and temperature: Canadian Northwest clear, 48 to 68; Minnesota, 01; Northwest, 50 to 60, clear; West, 55 to 65, part cloudy; Davenport, .04; Peoria, .02; Chicago, 11; Southwest, 62 to 82, part cloudy; Dodge City, .01; Kansas City, .60; Springfield, Mo., raining, .05; St. Louis, .12; Ohio Valley, cloudy, 70 to 74; Indianapolis, 12; Evansville, .42; Cincinnati, .15, raining.

* * *

Kansas City wires: "You may count on Kansas corn as a practical failure. The crop is the worst in ten years, if not worse than 1910. South Missouri and Northern Oklahoma also very bad. Kansas City territory will buy corn instead of shipping."

* * *

Springfield, Ill., wires: "Very dry and unless rain soon will have plenty of complaints on corn in this section. All reports on oats are bad."

Strength of Coppers and Steel Has Stimulating Effect—Situation Getting Better.

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 24.—Although news developments were of a favorable character, price movements were generally to lower levels at the opening of the stock market to-day. The copper stocks failed to respond to improved trade conditions, Amalgamated yielding ½ to 68¾ and about the same amount of loss was sustained in Reading and Union Pacific. New Haven declined ¾ to 99½, a new low record for the present movement.

Speculative liquidation caused a loss of a point in American Can. Canadian Pacific was off ¾; Mexican Petroleum, ⅝; American Smelting ws up ⅛, and Southern Pacific ¼. Selling pressure against Canadian Pacific was evident in the London market, where trading was irregular. American railway shares held above par, however.

The curb was steady.

The tone after the first few minutes bettered itself and was noticed especially in the copper shares and in several of the industrials. Amalgamated Copper advanced early one point to 69½, and strength prevailed in New Haven, which recovered its early loss, selling again above 100. Fractional improvements were noted in Canadian Pacific, Steel, Reading, Union Pacific and Missouri Pacific. The tone a few minutes before midday continued strong. Call money loaning at 2¼.

STOCK GOSSIP

It is announced that the shareholders of the New Haven would be summoned to hold a special meeting on August 22 to authorize an issue of $67,552,400 20-year 6 per cent debentures with a convertible privilege. The new bonds will be convertible into stock at the rate of one share of stock for each $100 debenture at any time between 1918 and 1928.

* * *

The most important of the maturing obligations of the New Haven is the $40,000,000 of one-year 5 per cent notes sold last November and falling due December 1. These notes were issued for returning and equipment purposes. Next February the New Haven will have to redeem $5,000,000 of 4 per cent debentures. President Mellen said that the balance would be fresh capital to complete the electrification of the road and for equipment and improvements.

The New York Financial Bureau says: "The foreign situation is showing improvement. A. C. P. sells ex-div. tomorrow. Information channels are disposed to favor a trading position."

The stock market may be inclined to be reactionary this morning, but do not expect more than a moderate recession. Would buy stocks on any weakness. The copper situation looks as if the metal would sell higher and as if A. C. P. and the balance of coppers would advance.—T. D. Potter.

The market is getting broader and there is a gradual increase in public participation. The situation is getting better and investors are beginning to accumulate stocks. What You Can't Do NOW, You Can Never Do.

There Is No Such Thing as a To-morrow That Is to Do Wonders. To-morrow Means NEVER. It Is a Word of Failure.

(Copyright, 1913.)

Don't plan for anything to-morrow, unless you ARE WORKING AT THAT THING TO-DAY.

A picture on this page shows you one of a million young men who say "I will make a start to-morrow."

There is no such start, there is no such to-morrow.

If you can't work to-day, you can't work to-morrow.

If you can't begin the thing to-day, you can NEVER begin it.

To-morrow is a word that in every language means NEVER. It means self-deception, disappointment, idleness, lack of purpose.

When a thought comes to you, get at it.

Don't say to yourself, "I will do that sometime; perhaps to-morrow."

Make a note of the idea, think it over, plan for it, BEGIN IT.

If you can't start it now, you never can do it.

The thing to do is to work to-day, and to keep working to-morrow and every other day.

Keep your mind on to-day, devote the hours of to-day TO THE WORK OF TO-DAY.

Then when to-day's working hours are over, and you have actually done all that you can in those hours of work, permit yourself, if you choose, to think of plans and dreams for the future.

There is not a young man in the country without some good idea, some good plan, some earnest hope in his mind.

But the curse of a million is, that the plan, the idea, is to take form and become real TO-MORROW.

Get away from that to-morrow habit.

You need not take literally the advice, "Live as though this were to be your last day." A man who starts a house must believe that he has days in which to finish it.

The thing to do IS TO START THE HOUSE TO-DAY, and let the to-morrows take care of their work.

We print this picture because it seems, in the attitude of the man sitting under the tree, to typify the attitude of a great many American young men, and to give a needed rebuke.

If you are sitting like this boy, with your arms folded, your feet together and your head down, jump up, throw back your shoulders, take a long breath, and start now up that hill that leads to success.

Pity this poor "futurist" of failure. He is the futurist of to-morrow, the futurist of the plan that will never become real action. He is as dismal a failure in his way as those poor so-called "futurists" who invented what they call a new style of art, and have only succeeded in being unusually hideous.

Don't BAKE Your Baby-- Many Mothers Do It

Hese Is Common Sense Advice from the Chicago Health Department. Read It. Profit by It.

Copyright, 1913.

There are too many "BAKED" babies in this world. Everywhere you see unfortunate little babies suffering with the heat, dressed in woolen or in stiff, starched clothing that adds to their sorrow, babies better suited to the arctic regions than to a hot summer day in a hot city.

Many mothers need the advice which is given and reproduced here. The two pictures are from a bulletin issued by the Chicago Health Department.

This little tot is comfortable and happy when the Summer days are hot. He is dressed right to stand the heat.

This unhappy little codger is all fussed up and as a result he is hot and uncomfortable. He is dressed wrong for hot days.

THE BABY IN SUMMERTIME.

A baby can be more comfortable in hot weather than an adult, but few of them are.

The pernicious and senseless habit of dressing a baby in flannels and endless frills and fancies on hot summer days is such a common practice among mothers of certain nationalities that scores of babies are literally baked to death during the summer months.

During the very hot weather babies should wear only a diaper and a thin gauze shirt. If under six months of age, an abdominal binder of thin flannel and light-knitted booties may be worn, these being advisable only when ordered by your doctor.

These few clothes are all that are needed, but they must be kept clean, soiled garments being promptly removed.

Never replace a used diaper on a baby without first washing it. Wetted or soiled diapers must be washed with as little delay as possible, using hot water in which a little soda has been dissolved. Rinse well and see that they are perfectly dry before using again.

All clothing should be loose and so adjusted as to permit free motion of the legs and arms. Never put starched, stiff or uncomfortable clothes on a baby.

Having dressed your baby correctly, now see that you place the child where it will get fresh outdoor air. Put it in a shaded place on the porch and cover its resting place with mosquito netting to prevent flies from annoying and possibly infecting it. Never keep a baby in the kitchen when you are cooking or washing. When the child must be in the house keep it near an open window in the cleanest and coolest room.

In very hot weather give your baby a sponge bath two or three times a day, using lukewarm water in which a little salt has been dissolved, or you may use a little alcohol instead of the salt. Never give these baths immediately after feeding; better give them before feeding. Take especial care to cleause the body creases and dry thoroughly. If you use talcum powder be sure it is the best and the unscented kind.

Rational dressing, fresh air and cleanliness will do much to keep your baby in good physical condition and will go a long ways toward enabling it to survive the summer dangers.

Demain, Morgen, Manana, Domani

All these words mean the same thing. They mean TO-MORROW, and they mean FAILURE.

This young man says, "I'll make a start to-morrow." And he never starts. There are a million like him sitting, waiting for the "to-morrow" that never comes. (SEE EDITORIAL.)

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Culture

Women, No Matter How Highly Accomplished They May Be, She Says, Lack Real Culture if They Allow Evil Temper, Evil Speaking, Selfishness and Uncharitableness to Grow Into Their Nature.

Written for The Atlanta Georgian

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

PERHAPS there is no word more frequently misused than the word Culture.

We often hear a woman spoken of as highly cultured.

But in what does her culture consist?

She may speak several languages; she may play several instruments; she may be able to talk understandingly of the arts and sciences; she may know much of the customs of many lands, but still she may LACK REAL CULTURE.

If she is allowing the weeds of evil temper, evil speaking, selfishness and uncharitableness to grow in her nature, she is not cultured.

That always means that the earth of that land is carefully tilled and that every weed is removed; every ugly thing banished, and every beautiful and useful and valuable thing is fertilized, dug about, encouraged and helped to grow.

So it is with the mind.

A Cultivated Person.

Unless ungracious and unlovely traits are removed, and all the virtues cultivated, mere education which comes from books and travel and the possession of money can never make a cultured person.

What constitutes a cultivated personality? What is it that uplifts character and beautifies conduct?

The answer to both questions can be found in the advice Buddha gave his pupils five hundred years before Christ was born: "Do nothing to another that you would not have done to you," and by Christ's improved rendition of the motto: "Do unto others as you would that they should do to you."

There is no higher phase of culture, and there is nothing which beautifies conduct and character like the practical and perpetual use of the Golden Rule in daily life.

The majority of people regard the keeping of the Ten Commandments as a literal fulfillment of that rule's obligations; but one who contemplates its entire meaning realizes that it applies to every trivial act of daily life and necessitates culture as well as morality.

The loud, jarring voice, the uncontrolled temper, the neglect of bodily cleanliness and disregard of dress—all these things break the Golden Rule, because they are not what we would wish others to do; therefore, we have no right to do them.

A "cultivated personality" includes cleanliness, neatness, a certain conformation to the customs of the day, or of art, in dress; a well modulated voice, an attentive manner in listening to others, a well poised body, a direct and easy carriage and walk, and a pleasant, agreeable expression of countenance.

Haughty, Cold Demeanor.

The haughty, disdainful and cold demeanor is incompatible with culture.

Only the vulgarian with an outward veneer of polish, "puts on airs." The really cultured, like the really great souls of earth, are always affable and simple and natural.

That quality which most uplifts and beautifies character is consideration of others and obeyance of one's own highest instincts.

The man who is considerate of his fellow men pays his debts promptly, does not endeavor to "beat" his neighbor in a bargain, does not haggle over prices, and is tolerant of others' political and religious ideas.

He is kind and affectionate in his family, appreciative of his wife and children, and patient and thoughtful with those in his employ.

All these homely virtues "uplift and beautify character." Without them the most heroic and brilliant deeds can not make an admirable human being.

"Cultivated Personality."

The woman who wishes to possess a "cultivated personality" and a beautiful character must keep her engagements, pay her social and financial obligations, shun gossip and harsh criticism, suit her dress and her amusements to her income, keep her home orderly and attractive, and herself a pleasure to the eye, ear and heart.

The path to character building is a long one; there is no short cut.

It requires continual watchfulness, continual self-control, to travel that path.

But it is a way which grows more beautiful, and the world seems more interesting and life sweeter each year as we advance, when the goal of a beautiful character is our aim.

Vocational Training Applied

By THOMAS TAPPER.

A FEUDIST is a gentleman with a gun on the lookout for another similarly equipped. He who shoots first lives longest.

Two horsemen riding over a mountain road in the Cumberlands came to an obstruction. They jumped down, picked it up and tossed it to one side.

The obstruction was a man who had been put out of business by a blow on the head with the butt of a gun.

When he came to he crept up among the trees and had it out with himself. Then he crawled back home cautiously. After a day or two he disappeared.

For ten months he went to school. After a while he added seven other months to these ten.

Equipped with seventeen months' education, he became the president of a college.

One day when his schooling was over he called a meeting of the feudists in the Cumberlands. One group sat, sullen and armed, at his right. Their enemies, just as sullen and as well armed, sat at his left.

He made a plea to them for the sake not of themselves, but of their children; a plea to give the little ones a chance to learn something, to forget the enmity of the feud spirit, and to be able to go out from the mountains as useful men and women.

It was a new idea to these feud followers, but the man's eloquence prevailed to the extent that the two leaders of the clans arose and shook hands.

With a bit of land and fifty dollars the man began to build the college with his own hands. There were plenty of heartaches and discouragements, but no want of trust. Then the college began to be a real thing, visible to the eyes of men.

That was ten or twelve years ago. To-day the college educates about six hundred people annually. Little children, young men and women, fathers and mothers come from all parts of the mountains, eager to get an education.

The man who has done all this has never taken a penny in pay. He does his work as a distributer, and therefore has no need to take an anxious thought.

Thirty cents a day will bring one of these mountain people to the college and will pay for board, lodging and education. Less than sixteen cents a day will pay for it all if the farm about the school can supply the student with an opportunity to work to the extent of fourteen cents.

The man who has done all this is J. A. Burns, of Oneida, Kentucky.

He was one of the first to see that the mountain problem was to be met only by the most practical form of Vocational Training, and and he has given a living demonstration of the truth of his idea.

He saw clearly that not only did these people need knowledge, but that they needed the kind of knowledge which they could apply in the daily work of their hands.

And he has wrought a remarkable transformation among them.

Educate a human being to do work well, to take pleasure in the doing of it, and efficiency is established.

CAMP LIFE INCREASES HELLO GIRLS' ABILITY

Here's Elsie Erd, a fair camper, at a little task that helps to break the monotony.

Swimming, Rambles in Woods, Auto-Rides and Sleeping Outdoors Give New Lease on Life.

If you do not believe the simple life is conducive to better work, ask some of the heads of departments of the Bell Telephone Company. They'll tell you that since the establishment of Camp Wyanoke at Lakewood Heights, where the young women employees of the company spend their vacations and their week-ends, the work of the "hello girls," the stenographers and the other young women who work in the big building at Mitchell and Pryor streets, has greatly improved.

"The idea we had in mind when Camp Wyanoke was established," Miss Katherine Tatum, who is in charge of the camp, said, Thursday morning, "is working out splendidly. The girls come back to Atlanta after a few days or a week's stay at the camp invigorated and almost with a new lease on life. They have breathed pure, fresh air; they have worked about the camp, and they return to their work with a vim and a determination that is usually lacking during the hot summer months."

Simple Life Throughout.

The simple life is lived in all its phases at Camp Wyanoke. With the exception of the harder and unfamiliar work of cooking all the work is done by the girls. They wash dishes, wash their own clothing—or most of it—keep house, sew and do a hundred and one other tasks.

When work is done they go swimming and wading, or take long rides in the automobiles the company sends out to them several times a week.

Every Wednesday and Saturday nights there are dances and games of various kinds.

The practice of sleeping in the open air is considered by Miss Tatum one of the best features of the camp. It gives many girls who heretofore have been cooped up in tiny city rooms a chance to recuperate.

Sunday School in Camp.

Every girl employed by the company is given a chance to taste the joys of camp life. Those who had taken their vacations before the camp was installed have been given a leave of absence of three or four days, that they might visit the camp. Others spend their entire vacation there.

There are always about twenty girls at the camp, and on Saturday and Sunday this number is sometimes swelled to a hundred, by the girls who come out to spend Sunday. Sunday school is held in the open air under the trees, and is usually attended by about a hundred young women.

PRISON FIRED IN CONVICT MUTINY

OSSINNING, N. Y., July 24.—Mutinous convicts, in open rebellion against their keepers, to-day made an attempt to destroy the entire Sing Sing prison property by fire.

They set fire to the clothing manufacturing building, in which all the shoes, clothing and like articles are made. The fire was extinguished by the prison fire department after it had swept the shoeshop.

The entire penal population is being kept under lock in fear of further outbreaks.

Fire Laid to Trusties.

The attempt to burn the prison building came early to-day after a night of wild excitement in the prison.

When the warden, James H. Clancey, was told of the threats, he directed that no prisoners, excepting the trusties, should be allowed out of their cells. It is believed that some of the trusties, acting under orders of their imprisoned fellows, applied the match to the clothing factory building.

As the fire raged the criminals behind locked doors set up a terrific din. They shouted "fire," called vile names, beat their doors and made the prison hideous with noise.

"We want Kennedy," came the constant chant above the din.

Protest Warden's Removal.

This protest against the removal of the former warden, who was indicted by the Westchester County Grand Jury, was the keynote of the entire rebellion that for 36 hours has had the State's largest penal institution in a state of mutiny.

All night long the convicts kept up their riotous demonstration. They made the food the first basis of complaint. They contemptuously tossed away bits of food and went to their cells surly and disobedient.

Guards are on duty to-day all along the prison walls, the officers fearing that the sullen convicts may make a concerted effort to escape.

Seeking to relieve the perilous situation at the prison, Warden Clancey this afternoon made arrangements with the railroad to take 200 second and third term prisoners to Auburn to-morrow. With these riotous prisoners out of the way, the warden believes he can restore order in the institution.

CORDELE, July 24.—Detectives in the employ of the Southern Express Company seeking S. J. Smith, missing agent of the company at Warwick, have gained no clew as to his present whereabouts.

It is alleged that on the same night that it is charged Smith misappropriated all of the funds on hand, including the receipts of the office for several days, he forged two express money orders amounting to $60. A book of $100 blank orders is missing from the office.

Two members of the Italian constabulary are expected to arrive in this country this week to take Charlton to Milan.

PRESIDENT IS BRANDED AS DICTATOR

Works Charges Executive With Usurping Legislative Power. Scores Tariff 'Influence.'

WASHINGTON, July 24.—On the floor of the Senate to-day Senator Works, of California, denounced President Wilson for influencing tariff legislation in the summing up of a speech on the tariff bill pending before the Senate.

"The tendency of latter-day politics is to exalt the executive at the expense of the legislative and judicial power of the Government, and make the President the master and ruler of them all, and the master and not the servant of the whole people," said the Senator.

"It is an unwarranted and dangerous tendency. Every public official, however exalted, is only the servant of the people, and should at all times be subject to their control and subservient to their will in conformity to the Constitution and laws of the country, and each department of the Government, if its institutions are to be preserved, must be kept within the limitations of its powers as fixed by the Constitution.

He Charges Tariff Coercion.

"If this bill is passed, it will not be by the willing and voluntary consent of a majority of this body. It will be the result, in part, of outside influence that should never enter into the deliberations or acts of Congress. The Constitution provides:

> All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives.

"The President is also made Commander-in-Chief of the army and navy. That instrument further provides that 'the executive power shall be vested in the President of the United States of America.' It is further provided: 'He shall from time to time give to the Congress information of the state of the Union and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient.'

No Warrant for Influence.

"This is the only power vested in the President in respect of the making of laws. There is no warrant in the Constitution for his participation in the formation or passage of laws or the exercise of any influence on legislation beyond that of recommending to the consideration of the lawmaking power such measures as he shall judge necessary or expedient."

Here the Senator said that his views coincided with those injected into the Democratic platform of 1904 and he quoted from the declaration of principles drawn by the Democratic party at that time.

In concluding his speech, Senator Works said:

"I have approached this subject with reluctance and purely from a sense of duty. I expressed similar views during the last administration. I have the greatest respect and esteem for the incumbent of the great office of President of the United States, as I had also for his predecessor.

Explains Causes of Alarm.

"I believe in the integrity and sincerity of his purpose to serve the people and the country to their very best interests. But, sir, this can not deter me from expressing my views on a question so serious and far-reaching in its consequences.

"It makes the situation only the more alarming that one of such high ideals and patriotic purposes should do anything that can reasonably be construed to be a usurpation of power or an infringement of the Constitution that may some time be appealed to as a precedent by one less conscientious and patriotic."

CROWD SEES SALESMAN STABBED

Real Estate Operator Accused of Knife Attack After Dispute Over a Bet.

While hundreds of pedestrians, many of them women and children, looked on, two men engaged in a stabbing affray on Peachtree street across from the Candler Building Thursday morning. One of the men received serious injuries.

The wounded man gave his name as Burnett Goodman. He said he was manager of the gum company and lived at No. 36 Moore street. His assailant gave his name as M. B. Ware, 41 years old, a real estate operator living at No. 30 Highland avenue. Ware is a one-armed man. He was released on bond of $100.

Goodman was slashed about the right side of the face and neck. He was taken to the Grady Hospital. After his injuries were attended to he was removed to the police station, where a charge of disorderly conduct was lodged against him.

Refuses to Explain Attack.

Ware, who voluntarily surrendered to Policeman Bostwick, declared that "he had cut him because he wanted to cut him." Other than that, he refused to give an explanation of his action.

Ware used a pocket knife as his weapon.

According to Goodman, Ware attacked him without provocation.

"I was walking down the street with a friend, when Ware came up to me and without a word began striking at me with a knife. I dodged his blows as well as I could and tried to run, but the knife caught me twice across the face. Then I got away and ran, but Ware followed me. If it had not been for someone stopping him he would have killed me, I believe."

Bet Given as Cause of Fight.

The affair is said to have been the result of an argument over a "book" on a baseball game. According to information given the police, Ware on Wednesday made a bet with Goodman of $125 on the game played that afternoon.

It was said that Goodman was accustomed to making "books" on baseball games, and that Ware, in lieu of the cash to put up, posted a $20 forfeit to cover his bet.

According to the report, Ware failed to put up the remaining $105 before the game was played, and when the team which he bet on won, and he attempted to collect the bet from Goodman, the bookmaker refused to pay.

The two are declared to have had some difficulty at that time, but refrained from violence. Thursday morning, however, when they met, the stabbing ensued.

This restaurant, which will be conducted solely for women who are expected to give birth to a child within six months, will be opened in two weeks.

Settlement Sought Of $14,000,000 Debt

WASHINGTON, July 24.—A debt of $14,000,000, probably the largest dispute of a financial nature in the United States, will be the subject of a conference in this city to-morrow. Virginia is trying to collect that amount from West Virginia and commissions representing the Legislatures of both States will meet here to-morrow and try to reach an agreement.

The debt arises out of West Virginia's withdrawing from Virginia a half century ago and since refusing to pay for improvements Virginia made.

Currency Reform Not Likely to Pass

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Passage of a currency reform bill at this session of Congress was considered most doubtful to-day unless President Wilson brings peace between the warring factions of the House Banking and Currency Committee.

Chairman Glass to-day presented to the Committee a draft of an amendment to his bill providing for a prohibition of interlocking directorates. Mr. Glass is against such a proposal, but the committe, by a vote of 7 to 5, forced him to draw up the amendment.

STATE READY TO OPPOSE PLEA FOR DELAY

Solicitor Disappointed When Court Fails to Draw Jury Panels at Time Planned.

A demand for trial of Leo M. Frank, accused of the slaying of Mary Phagan, without further delay, was made Thursday by Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey. In a statement to The Georgian he said:

"The prosecution was ready June 30 in the case of the State vs. Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of little Mary Phagan on April 26 last. We have served all the witnesses expecting to try this case on Monday next. This date was set at the suggestion of Judge L. S. Roan at the instance of counsel for the defense.

"We are disappointed that the jury was not drawn this morning as Judge Roan stated it would be done.

"The State assuredly will be ready Monday unless something entirely unforeseen happens, and will ask trial of this man at that time."

Jury Not Drawn.

Superior Judge John T. Pendleton declined to draw a jury for the Frank trial Thursday morning until he heard definitely from Judge L. S. Roan whether the case would be opened next Monday. Judge Pendleton announced he would know definitely by 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon whether the case would be called Monday, and he would draw the jury at that time if necessary.

Deputy Sheriff Plinnie Miner had instructions from Judge Roan to have one of the other judges draw the jury Thursday morning unless he was notified to the contrary. Miner heard nothing from Judge Roan and carried the jury box to Judge Pendleton to have the twelve panels drawn. He notified the attorneys for the State and the prosecution in ample time for them to be at the court. Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey and his assistant were the only attorneys to put in an appearance.

Attorney Reuben Arnold, according to Judge Pendleton, had gone to Covington to confer with Judge Roan, and the Judge was expected to return to the city before 4 o'clock, when it is possible the attorneys will confer with him and definitely settle the question.

Dorsey Must Be Consulted.

Prosecuting Attorney Hugh M. Dorsey announced he would fight vigorously any move to postpone the trial without first giving him a hearing on the subject.

It developed Thursday morning that there were two rather ruffled chiefs at the police department the previous afternoon when Jim Conley was sneaked from his cell in the station over to the Tower without their permission and without their knowledge.

Chief Lanford said: "This will never happen again."

Chief Beavers would not talk of the incident, but is understood to have told the two detectives, Starnes and Campbell, that if the negro were taken from the police station again he (Beavers) proposed to be in on it.

There was a commotion at police headquarters Wednesday afternoon, when it was found that Conley had been spirited away to confront Newt Lee in the Tower. Chief Lanford knew nothing of the circumstance until he was informed by The Georgian. Even then he insisted that Conley was in his cell.

Then Detectives Explain.

He went to Chief Beavers' office to see if permission had been given there for Conley's removal. Beavers said he did not know Conley was gone. Station Sergeant Holcomb was appealed to. He said he had not been notified that the prisoner was to be taken away. Turnkey Bayne, the last resort, was asked to explain the mys-

Factory Supplants Farm as Exporter

The bureau's latest figures show growth in exports of manufactures from $468,00,000 in 1903 to $1,200,000,000 in the fiscal year just closed and in manufacturers' materials from $409,000,000 to $740,000,000, while the exports of foodstuffs remained at a standstill, $510,000,000 having been the value of the exports in that line both in 1913 and 1903.

Headless Body of Girl Found at Sea

BOSTON, July 24.—The finding of the headless body of an apparently well-to-do young woman at sea, 35 miles east of the Georges Bank by Captain Charles White, of the Gloucester fishing schooner Jennie H. Gilbert, is believed to reveal a death by violence at sea, possibly on a trans-Atlantic liner.

The body was found ten miles south of the southerly track of trans-Atlantic steamers, about 170 miles out from Boston. Corsets of apparently expensive make, a black shirtwaist, portions of a dark green silk skirt and high button boots were on the body.

terious disappearance of Conley. He informed Chief Beavers that Detectives Starnes and Campbell had taken him about a half hour before.

The Chief, to satisfy himself that Conley was still in custody, made a personal visit to the jail.

When Starnes and Campbell later were in conference with the Chief they told him that they had said nothing about their intention because neither Chief Beavers nor Chief Lanford was in the station at the time.

RESINOL CURED AWFUL PIMPLES

Whole Face Covered, Now Clear.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I was troubled with two or three pimples coming out on my chin. In a week or so my whole face was covered with them. Friends advised me to use different lotions and salves. I tried them, but they did me little good, if any. I finally washed the pimples with Resinol Soap and applied Resinol Ointment before going to bed. In the morning I found the swelling going down, and the inflammation gone from the pimples. I tried this treatment for about a week, and found that most of the pimples had disappeared. I kept the treatment up for about a month, and then my face was clear of all pimples. I have used Resinol Soap since, and find that the pimples do not come back." (Signed) Walter A. Stenstrum, 54 Willoughby Ave., Oct. 9, 1912.

Resinol positively stops itching instantly and speedily heals eczema and other skin humors, dandruff, sores, burns and piles. Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap are sold by every druggist. Trial free; Dept. 11-P, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

EDITORS OFF FOR SEASHORE OUTING

Leave LaGrange Discussing Governor's Arraignment of Georgia's Antiquated Tax System.

LA GRANGE, July 24.—Members of the Georgia Weekly Press Association left LaGrange this morning for Brunswick, still discussing Governor John Marshall Slaton's scathing arraignment of Georgia's tax system at the annual banquet of the association Wednesday night. The Governor appealed to the editors for aid in what he declared to be the most serious financial crisis in the history of the State. He said that Georgia's tax system and reckless spending by the Legislature have brought about present conditions, when the State finds itself unable to pay its school-teachers.

"We must admit it is indefensible to maintain a system that pays its teachers a year after their work has been performed," Governor Slaton said. "It is pleasant to spend money and hard to make it. We love to appropriate, yet shrink from the tax levy. In two years, the Treasurer says, we have spent nearly three-quarters of a million more than our income. The teachers—patient and hard-working—teaching during the day and working examinations at night—molding the characters and training the minds of those upon whom our civilization depends—under our system find no ray of hope from the injustice they suffer."

Recommends Special Taxes.

"While unpleasant to do, I have recommended a levy—an extra tax of 1 mill for 1915, and 1-2 mill in 1916, as the brave way to get relief. The taxpayer will find it the best trade he ever made. It would prevent the imposition of drastic taxing laws, the deficit in the treasury would be satisfied, the State could say to purchasers of her bonds that she is on a solid financial basis, her teachers would be paid, and the kiting policy, which is opposed to all sound principle, would be abolished."

Governor Slaton emphatically declared himself in favor of the plan of equalization of taxes that has been recommended by the Legislature.

Favors Tax Equalization.

"Is not equalization just that requires all to pay the same percentage?" he asked. "Is it right that one many pays on 16 per cent of the value of his property when another pays on 40? An increase of 20 per cent, by simply equalizing the burden, not increasing that of him who is already bearing his part, would produce an abundance of revenue for every legitimate purpose."

The editors will arrive at Brunswick this afternoon and enjoy an outing of several days in that city and at St. Simons Island, where the Second Georgia Infantry is in camp.

Dr. Starnes to Play Great Symphony as Farewell to Atlanta

The whole of Tschaikowsky's "Symphonie Pathetique," regarded by many as the greatest piece of instrumental music ever composed, will be played at a free organ concert Thursday evening at the Auditorium-Armory under the Music Festival Association's auspices.

The presentation of such a work complete in one program is something new in the annals of music in the South. This concert will be somewhat in the nature of a farewell from Dr. Starnes, who will terminate his Atlanta engagement in the early fall. The playing of the "Symphonie Pathetique" is a monumental undertaking for one man.

Dr. Starnes said:

"In arranging this work I had no idea that its presentation by means of a concert organ should be as ideal as by an orchestra of 150 pieces, but not one person in 200 ever will have the opportunity to hear the symphony by a great orchestra."

The program also includes a short Bach fugue and Liszt's "Dream of Love."

Boys Calmly Admit Killing a Policeman

CHICAGO, July 24.—Declaring he was not afraid to go to the gallows, Walter Novak, 19, to-day repeated his confession that he signaled for the shooting of Policeman Samuel Sowers, who was dying from a bullet wound. Bruno Klonowski, 18, who fired the shot, said: "I just felt like killing a cop. That's all. I should worry."

The two prisoners told the police to-day that they had been close friends of the four youths who were hanged in February, 1912, for slaying a gardener.

Macon Will Invite Veterans Next Year

MACON, July 24.—It is very likely that Macon will invite the Confederate veterans of Georgia to hold their 1914 reunion here. There was no invitation extended at the recent reunion in Brunswick, and this fact has prompted the local veterans to arouse an interest in the matter.

A meeting of Camp R. A. Smith will be held next week for the purpose of formally preparing an invitation.

BREAKFAST SENT THOMAS CAT BY POST

Mistress, in Atlanta on Visit, Can Not Trust Feline Aristocrat to Butcher Shop Diet.

Bricks and eggs and live stock have become common enough as mail matter within the past few months, but never until Miss Bessie Butler came to Atlanta had Uncle Sam's parcel post served as a dumb waiter for a cat!

Down at Madison, Ga., a big aristocratic Thomas cat—by name, "McCurry"—gets his breakfast every day by parcel post, all the way from 513 Peachtree street, where Miss Butler is visiting Mrs. A. Cunningham.

"McCurry" is Miss Butler's most priceless possession, and when she came to Atlanta she left instructions that the cat must be fed large, mansize pork chops each day. She gave this order to a butcher, with the inevitable result.

Poor "McCurry's" chops soon took on the appearance of a large piece of bone surrounded by a meaty atmosphere, and the cat got dyspepsia and developed a crabbed disposition. He lost his zest in life—all nine of him—and was peevish and poor company.

The sad news of "McCurry's" condition was written to Miss Butler by a friend. It seemed that unless something was done at once the cat would die—it was feared he would break all his teeth trying to eat the bones the butcher said were chops.

So Miss Butler has invoked the aid of Uncle Sam. She gathers up all the scraps of meat that are left when the Cunningham meal is over, and each night she packs them into a shoe box and forwards them to her friend in Madison, who feeds them to the cat the next morning.

The unique method of feeding her pet has been going on for several days now—and latest advices from the front are that the cat is doing well and taking on weight.

Girl Outwits Cupid; Wins Her Own Rival

WHEELING, W. VA., July 24.—War, or Sherman's equivalent for it, "hath no fury like a woman scorned," Harry Pendleton mournfully confides to his friends.

Pendleton had been engaged to Dessie McIntyre for two years, when he met Henrietta Aiken, a Bridgeport, Ohio, belle. He fell a willing conquest and Miss McIntyre was peeved, but not without hope. She went cupid one better by going to Bridgeport, cutting her hair short, donning the clothes of a modern Beau Brummel and "cutting out" Pendleton in masterly fashion. Then she doffed her masquerade.

Pendleton refuses to say whether or not Miss Aiken has permitted him to resume his courtship.

Tipsy Monkey Kills Dog, Maims Master

SMITHERS, W. VA., July 24.—A drunken monkey belonging to George Smith, went on a rampage and after killing a bulldog, so severely chewed up Smith's hand that he was forced to have it amputated.

Smith gave a party and the monkey had come in for his share of refreshments. After the guests departed the monkey evinced a desire for another drink. Smith refused. The bulldog then sprang at the Simian, but the latter jumped on the dog's back and with his claws soon blinded him, then sank his teeth into the neck, killing him.

Smith suffered his injuries in his efforts to subdue his pet.

Balkan Peace Sure; Armistice in Effect

Special Cable to The Atlanta Georgian.

BUCHAREST, July 24.—Peace virtually is now assured in the Balkan States. Roumania's program for the immediate settlement of hostilities has been approved by all the belligerents. To-day the delegates at Nish arranged an armistice to go into effect immediately. The peace conferees will meet in Bucharest.

Convict Who Killed Grandfather Slain

MARIETTA, July 24.—Jasper Butler, a white convict, aged 21, sentenced for life from Heard County for killing his grandfather, was shot and instantly killed by Charles Carter, a guard. Butler escaped from the squad on the Kennesaw road and was recaptured in a nearby swamp. On the way to camp he broke away again. When ordered to stop he kept running. The guard fired, killing him instantly.

Carter is under arrest charged with involuntary manslaughter.

MRS. ZACHRY ASKS AID FROM BLEASE

AUGUSTA, July 24.—Reports from Columbia, S. C., are that Mrs. Mary W. Zachry, of Augusta, appealed to Governor Blease yesterday to not allow her two children to be taken away from her in South Carolina, where she fled with her babies, Frances, aged 3, and Mildred, 9 months. It is understood the Governor did not commit himself.

Julian J. Zachry, the husband, was asked for a statement yesterday. He said that he had nothing to say about the kidnaping of the children by Mrs. Zachry.

Mrs. Zachry stated before leaving here that she would kill her husband or any other man who attempted to take her babies from her. She was frantic because of what she termed the law's injustice in awarding the children to Mr. Zachry's custody.

Mrs. Zachry was Miss Mary Wilcox and was Mr. Zachry's stenographer when they were married. Within a year the first child was born. It was a short time before the second child was born that an estrangement occurred.

Mrs. Zachry, it is charged, found letters alleged to show that her husband had been having secret meetings with another woman. This led to their separation, the court's order awarding the custody of the children to their father and the mother's defiance of the ruling as shown in her action in taking them to South Carolina.

Firemen Plan Strike When Denied Outing

DALTON, July 24.—Cooler heads among members of the Dalton Fire Department saved the city from being without fire fighters when the department debated at length whether or not to resign.

The trouble arose over the City Council's failure to make an appropriation for the firemen's annual outing. Citizens have made up a fund for the outing, and the firemen will leave here on August 9 for St. Simons Island.

CHAMBER WILL BOOST INTERURBAN

Study of Lines in Other States To Be Made to Further Anderson-Atlanta Project.

Encouragement to the construction of the interurban line known as the Duke Line, from Anderson, S. C., to Atlanta, is promised as the result of a meeting at the Capital City Club of the Chamber of Commerce committee on interurban railways.

This committee, appointed by President Wilmer L. Moore to further interurban lines radiating from Atlanta, decided it would be best to deal with one project at a time, and as this one is most talked of, it is proposed by the committee to investigate to ascertain just what will be necessary to bring about its extension to Atlanta. The committee will make a report to the directors of the Chamber of Commerce with such recommendations as the situation appears to justify.

The committee will gather statistics and information relative to interurban railways, with a view to presenting the advantages which Atlanta will gather from their construction.

The members of the committee present were Chairman Hollins N. Randolph, Preston S. Arkwright, Frederic J. Paxon and Secretary Fred Lewis.

Gives Luncheon to Plucky Phone Girls

Night telephone operators at the Atlanta Telephone Exchange will be served with a dainty midnight lunch Thursday night by Michael Keliff, who is grateful for their discovery of burglars breaking into his store Tuesday night, and the quick alarm they turned in to police headquarters.

Assistant Chief Jett has shown the appreciation of the police department for the quick work of the girls, addressing them a letter of thanks. Two of three burglars were caught by the police when they answered the alarm.

WANT AD RACE STARTS WITH REAL VIM

Contestants Begin Work Thursday and Hustle to Win That Automobile or Other Prize.

Enthusiastic young men and women started out early Thursday to win those prizes in The American and Georgian's big Want Ad Contest. They began to meet success from the very start, for the want ads came rolling in.

"It's going to be easy," said one youngster after his first hour's work. "I got three ads from the first four houses I visited. I'm going to win a motorcycle, at least."

Contestants were not simply turned loose with a pencil and paper and told to get busy. An experienced district manager, one who knows through long training how to suggest want ad possibilities, accompanied each contestant for a while, called with him at a number of homes and started him on the right track. The boys and girls were enthusiastic over their first morning's work.

Help Your Young Friends.

Atlanta folk or others who have a boy or girl friend in the contest are urged to either give their want ads to him or her, or else send the ads to the office with a request that they be credited to this contestant. A full list of the entrants in the race will be published Friday.

Contestants gathered early in the day at the four district offices and there met their respective managers. The districts are:

District No. 1—North of Marietta and west of Peachtree, Taylor Bros. drug store, 191 West Peachtree street.

District No. 2—North of Decatur street and east of peachtree, including Kirkwood, Decatur and eastern suburbs; Ponce DeLeon Pharmacy, corner Ponce DeLeon and North Boulevard.

District No. 3—South of Decatur street and east of Whitehall, Paragon Pharmacy, Capitol avenue and Georgia avenue.

District No. 4—South of Marietta street and west of Whitehall, including West End, College Park, East Point and Battle Hill; Medlock's Pharmacy, Gordon and Lee streets.

Not Too Late to Enter.

It isn't too late to enter the Want Ad Contest and win one of the big prizes. You might get a fine automobile, a piano, a trip to California. You might land a motorcycle, a bicycle, a watch or diamond. The prizes are well worth trying for.

There is a nomination blank in the full-page advertisement on another page of this issue. Clip it out, take it to the headquarters of the district in which you live and get a good start. The coupon will give you 1,000 votes, and ten votes will be given you for every cent turned in for paid want ads. You'll find the work a real practical course in salesmanship, too.

Troops Asked in Copper Strike Belt

MARQUETTE, MICH., July 24.—James A. Crune, Sheriff of Houghton County, wired Governor Ferris today asking that 2,000 State troops be sent to the district in which the great copper strike is located.

The strike takes in territory 28 miles.

The Sheriff declares the strikers have begun to destroy property and that the lives of men who are not in sympathy with the strike have been threatened.

PRESIDENT STILL IS UNDECIDED ON MEXICO

Stand of U. S. Will Not Be Fixed Until He Sees Recalled Ambassador.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—President Wilson has not formulated a definite plan for dealing with the Mexican situation, he has not selected any of the alternatives suggested to him for escaping from the present tangle, nor will he do so before his conference with Ambassador Wilson at the White House, scheduled for Saturday.

This statement was made at the White House to-day and is understood to emanate directly from the President.

The proposal that the President should take the initiative in suggesting mediation to the warring factions south of the border is scouted at the White House.

In the first place, it is unlikely that either side would consent to the United States acting as a peacemaker; secondly, the administration does not feel that it should offer its services when it is almost certain they would be declined with little ceremony.

Cardinal Gibbons Lauds Wilson's Mexico Policy.

WESTMINSTER, MD., July 24.—That Cardinal Gibbons is in sympathy with the Wilson administration's refusal to recognize the Huerta Government was clearly shown when, in an interview, the aged prelate said he thought the present Mexican Government is not well enough established to give it permanence, and, therefore, should not be recognized by the United States.

He said he sympathized with President Wilson in the delicate questions confronting him in the Mexican matter and thought he is doing his duty conscientiously in withholding recognition of the Huerta regime.

Intervention Too Risky.

He thought that, while European nations were urging upon this country some action for the protection of their citizens and their property on Mexican soil, the consequences of American interference were of too serious character to justify hasty action.

He pointed out that it was by no means certain that the Huerta government would not soon be overthrown, the uncertainty being so grave that it could scarcely be reckoned a sound de facto power, to say nothing of its de jure authority. Under the circumstances President Wilson is acting wisely, the cardinal believes, in the course he has thus far pursued.

Praise for Elder Diaz.

Referring to the uncomfortable conditions American citizens on the Mexican border are enduring, the Cardinal said there was a possibility that this border might be pushed farther south for their relief. He alluded to the extreme discontent of the Mexican people in the State of Sonora and opposite El Paso, Tex., as giving rise to the impression of such a possibility.

The great mistake of the Mexican people, he said, was in their repudiation of Porfirio Diaz, who had given them a firm government, maintained peace, and had done more than any other man to develop the resources of the country and advance its prosperity.

Would Cost Millions To Stop Boll Weevil

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Federal experts estimate that a loss of almost $108,000,000 a year to cotton growers in Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee, and Florida, would result from the adoption of the plan proposed recently by Senator Smith, of South Carolina, which contemplated the establishment of a belt in which the growth of cotton should be prohibited by law in an effort to keep the cotton boll weevil from spreading eastward into the Atlantic Coast States.

This conclusion has been reached by the Department of Agriculture from a consideration of the proposed prohibition in a strip about 100 miles wide through Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, and Florida.

Western Pacific to Extend Its Tap Lines

SAN FRANCISCO, July 24.—The Gould lines will be extended into territory covered by competitors' lines within the next few months, according to definite plans announced by B. F. Bush, the new president of the Western Pacific.

The Western Pacific will push its lines from Niles to San Jose, 18 miles; from Orville to Chico; from Stockton down the San Joaquin valley, paralleling the Southern Pacific into the Bakersfield oil district, and a line from the main road to Reno, Nev.

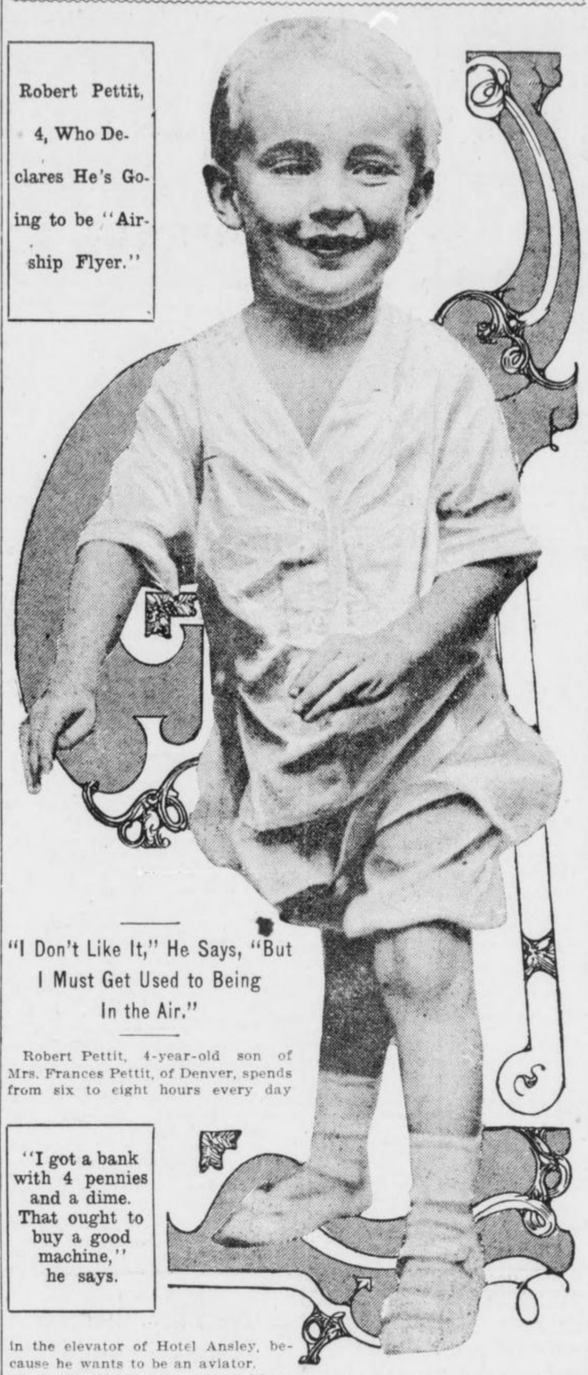
Job Hunter Pushes Baby Cab to Gotham

NEW YORK, July 24.—Mr. and Mrs. Lockwood, trundling a baby carriage in which lay their two-year-old daughter, limped into this city hungry and penniless. Lockwood said a stranger induced him to leave his home in Bangor, Pa., promising him a job and a home.

The stranger secured Lockwood's baggage and disappeared. The Salvation Army took care of the couple.

HOTEL ELEVATOR HIS SCHOOL OF AVIATION

Robert Pettit, 4, Who Declares He's Going to be "Airship Flyer."



"I Don't Like It," He Says, "But I Must Get Used to Being In the Air."

Robert Pettit, 4-year-old son of Mrs. Frances Pettit, of Denver, spends from six to eight hours every day in the elevator of Hotel Ansley, because he wants to be an aviator.

"I got a bank with 4 pennies and a dime. That ought to buy a good machine," he says.

Robert figures it this way: There isn't much use in buying and running an airship if you are going to get sick every time you get a few feet up in the air; the thing to do, therefore, is to get used to being off the ground—and then buy your airship.

"I don't like to ride in elevators," he says, "but I've got to. I'm going to be an airship flyer when I grow up, and I've got to get used to being off the ground. It is working fine, too I can go up to the twelfth floor now without getting dizzy. I'll make a dandy aviator, I'll bet!"

The youngster has become a familiar figure to attaches and guests of the hotel. Every morning, as soon as he can slip away from Mrs. Pettit and his nurse, he drags his little chair into the elevator and sits solemnly behind the operator. He manifests great interest in the operation of the lift, and his greatest joy comes when he is allowed to hold the levers and make believe he is operating the car.

Robert says he is going to have an airship as soon as he is sure he can fly without getting sick.

"I've got a bank at home with four pennies and a dime in it," he said. "I guess that'll get a pretty good airship. If it ain't enough, Mama will give me as much more as I need."

U. S. TO DIVORCE TRUSTS FROM RAILROADS

Government Plans End to Rebate Extortions Costing Lines $42,000,000 a Year.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The answer of the Interstate Commerce Commission to the application of the railroads east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers for permission to make a general increase of 5 per cent in freight rates, will be as follows:

1. The application will be denied.

2. All railroads will be ordered to discontinue making "allowances" to certain favored big industrial combinations.

This will save the general public from paying the additional $42,000,000 a year which the railroads are asking for and deprive certain big industrial corporations of a sum ranging between $50,000,000 and $100,000,000 annually.

The Commission during the past few months has secretly made an investigation to determine just the extent to which the practice of making "allowances" to industrial short line railroads, owned by manufacturing concerns, is prevalent.

His Names and Facts.

It is now in possession of the names of the concerns which receive these "allowances" or rebates, or discriminatory rates—and in addition it has the names of the railroads which pay them, the amounts received by the favored industrial corporations and something of the extent to which the practice injures the competing manufacturers, who are not in a position to enter into such arrangements.

In a large number of instances, it is claimed, the practice amounts to extortion. The railroads are compelled by the demands of competition to make allowances to the manufacturer for transferring his product over his own insignificant trackage to the junction where the regular railroad takes up his cars. Where several railroads are bidding for such a manufacturer's business the one which makes the most liberal allowance usually gets the freight.

To End the Extortion.

In view of this fact it is expected that the answer which the commission will give the railroads will meet with their approval and co-operation, and will do away with the most important of existing improper practices without the necessity of prosecution.

The railroads are asking for the five per cent increase on the ground that they must have increased revenue to pay their large operating expenses, and particularly, to pay the higher wages demanded by their employees.

The recent demands for higher wages would take $17,000,000.

Can Pay Wage Advance.

Under the order which the Interstate Commerce Commission will issue the railroads will get more than $42,000,000 by simply cutting off an improper expense, and correspondingly, the favored trusts and combinations which have been mulcting them of the amount will be deprived of it.

The railroads will be placed in a position to pay their employees the living wage they demand, the danger of a huge strike will be avoided, and the whole thing will be accomplished without the shippers—and through them the general public—being required to pay more for the transportation of the necessities of life.

STANDING SHOWS PONY CONTEST PACE IS HOT

District No. 7 Only One Lagging. Positions May Change Quickly. Last Bonus On.

Standing of the contestants in The Georgian and American pony contest is published Thursday, and again is it possible to see what remarkable gains have been made by the busy contestants.

District No. 7, it seems, must "speed up" if it is to get anything except the last choice of the ponies, for George Melton, with 110,125 votes, is leading, and A. Morrison, with 106,000, is second.

On the other hand, Herbert Chapman in District No. 4 has rolled up and Florence Greenoe, with 204,000 206,000 votes, and Fannie Mae Cook and 202,000, are close behind, pursued at no great interval by Eleanor Raoul, Nathaniel Kay and Oscar Eugene Cook.

Between these extremes aer the leaders of the various other districts. In district No. 1 the leader, George Rosser, has 205,000 votes, and Helen Brantley is close behind with 201,000 hind them.

DEATH IN BRAWL ROBS DIXIE TAR OF A FORTUNE

Anderson, S. C., Youth, Heir to Mother's $250,000 Estate, Slain in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, July 24.—Wilbur Martin, the young sailor from Anderson, S. C., who was killed here recently in a brawl in a tenderloin saloon, was worth more than $250,000 in his own right, according to information received here to-day.

The fascination that the sea held for him and the adventures of a naval career led him to give up the enjoyment of his fortune to become a common seaman on the battleship Connecticut.

He inherited this fortune when his mother died last March. His relatives at once began to plead with him to give up his adventurous life and settle down in Anderson. The lure of the sea was too great, however, and he disregarded their pleadings and advice. In despair, his relatives appealed to Washington, but this last hope was without avail.

The Connecticut has been at the League Island Navy Yard several weeks. With the rest of the sailors, Martin was in the habit of coming ashore and visiting the places of amusement. He was in a saloon in the old tenderloin district the other night when he became involved in a quarrel with a stranger.

Words led to blows and a general brawl resulted. Suddenly a weapon was drawn and Martin sank to the floor. A hurry was sent to the police and to a nearby hospital. Martin was unconscious and died within a few minutes.

Before her death his mother had argued with him to leave the navy and come home, where he could have every luxury that he desired. His invariable reply was that he loved the service too well and would stay in it all his life.

HEAD OF MERCER TO BE LANDRUM OR O'KELLEY

Choice of University President Lies Between Louisville and Raleigh Ministers.

MACON, July 24.—The presidency of Mercer University lies between the Rev. W. W. Landrum, of Louisville, Ky., formerly of Atlanta, and the Rev. T. W. O'Kelley, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Raleigh, N. C., according to men in close touch with affairs at the institution.

The special committee appointed to choose a president has offered the office to one of sixteen ministers and educators who were under consideration, and they decline to state his name until he has either accepted or declined.

It is believed that Dr. Landrum, who is now with the Baptist Theological Seminary, is first choice, and that if he declines the place will be tendered to the Rev. Dr. O'Kelley. The latter delivered the commencement address here this year.

ECZEMA DISFIGURED FACE BADLY

Also on Hands. Broke-Out in Pimples. Itched Badly. Spread All Over Body. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

Hampton Springs, Fla. — "I had had eczema on my face and hands for about three years. My face was badly disfigured. The eczema broke out in pimples and itched so very badly I would scratch it all the time. It was the most irritating disease I have ever had. It started on my face and hands and it spread all over my body. I had great large sores all over me, caused from the eczema. It bothered me day and night so that I could not rest at all.

"I used three remedies for skin disease and they didn't give relief at all. I was almost terrified until a friend recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment to me. They helped me from the time I started to use them. I used the Cuticura Soap and warm water as a wash and then put the Cuticura Ointment on the sore places. I only used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and was cured." (Signed) Mrs. E. C. Parker, Dec. 7, 1912.

TEXTILE MAKERS SCORE COTTON TARIFF CUTS

Petition to Congress Asserts Democrats Forget Pledges and Industry Will Suffer.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—A petition signed by more than 60 leading cotton manufacturing and distributing firms in the United States, protesting against the cotton tariff rates in the bill now under consideration in the Senate, has been presented to both Houses of Congress. The petition reads as follows:

We herewith voice our protest against the enactment into law of the unequal provisions covering cotton textiles, as disclosed by the various proposed rates published July 11, 1913, embodied in the bill passed by the House of Representatives and amended by the Senate majority (Democratic) caucus.

The Democratic platform declared and promised:

"We recognize that our system of tariff taxation is intimately connected with the business of the country, and we favor the ultimate attainment of the principles we advocate by legislation that will not injure or destroy legitimate industry."

Say Business Will Suffer.

First. We can not reconcile this with the low rates now proposed, which in many instances must injure legitimate industry.

Second. We point out that we fairly represent the primary and other distributors of cotton textiles, handling productions of both North and South which go to every city, town and village in the United States.

Third. The rates generally are below what they should be. The amendments made are inadequate to fix competitive rates in accordance with the promises of the Democratic platform.

Fourth. As we understand it, the purposes of the tariff revision generally were to reduce duties, but not to disturb or inflict punishment on any branch of legitimate industry, and there has been no demand to overdo the reduction, especially in cotton textiles, as in many instances is the case.

Fifth. Some illustrations: Failure to provide higher adequate rates for cotton textiles made of combed yarns than if made of ordinary yarns, or higher adequate for finished plain woven or figured cloths than for grey; putting rates for jacquards on same basis as for ordinary cloths, and actually omitting jacquards in Senate amendments, etc., etc.

Offered Non-Destructive Rates.

Sixth. We indorse the effort of the Independent Manufacturers of New England, who have willingly accepted great reductions, but asked that consistent and non-destructive rates, if on a competitive basis, should prevail.

We believe that they have pointed out the lowest possible competitive rates which in operation would be consistent and fair to the different branches of the industry—North and South. We do not comprehend why their recommendations have not been received in the spirit given.

Seventh. We point out that it is better to err on the side or safety than to subject the industry at this time to the proposed rates more especially on productions of from medium to better grades of goods.

We deplore the discrimination that subjects the cotton textile trade to these needless hardships.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

Senator Bacon's inability to attend a sitting of the Georgia Legislature just now for the purpose of accepting an invitation to address that honorable body in joint session, generally is regretted among the members, and many have expressed themselves accordingly.

Senator Bacon's failure to see his way clear to leaving Washington just now seems to be thoroughly appreciated, however, and the fact that he declined the General Assembly's invitation to come down is understood and appreciated.

Senator Hoke Smith's recent address was greatly enjoyed by the General Assembly. He went very thoroughly into many things upon which the Legislature was not fully informed, and undoubtedly held his audience's profound interest and attention through the entire joint session.

Fortunately for the Legislature, Senator Smith's invitation came at a time when it was convenient for him to accept, and without in any way neglecting his duties in Washington.

Both Senators Bacon and Smith are eloquent and forceful speakers, although of late years Senator Bacon has spent very little of his time in Georgia and has been heard but infrequently, on the stump or otherwise.

Whatever the relations between these two Senators may be, whether they be cordial or not, the Georgia Legislature was impartial in extending its invitations to them, as both joint resolutions passed by a unanimous vote of each House.

Editor F. H. Sills, of The Metter Advertiser, whose heart strings are wrapped tight around the bill to create Candler County, was distressed, but not dismayed, that his bill failed of passage this year.

Sills, who has led a clean, manly and fair fight for his pet project, believes that Candler yet will be created—perhaps next session. And, anyway, he is not grieving over spilled milk or wishing he never had been born merely because of a temporary setback in his plans.

Sills is a newspaper man, and a good one, and therefore the newspaper men generally about the Capitol have felt a kindly interest in his proposal with respect to Candler.

His plucky little paper down in Metter has waged a long and honorable warfare for Candler County, and most everybody who knows him wishes him mighty well.

Sills admits ungrudgingly that the first round went against him, but he still is perfectly game and expects to win out in the end.

Hon. Alphabet Bowden, otherwise known as "Jet," because his initials are J. E. T. (business of "great laughter"), is being boomed for Mayor of Waycross.

Asked in the Kimball House lobby to-day, Why is Waycross? and Why should anybody want to be Mayor thereof? Mr. Bowden stated that he didn't particularly want to be, but that there was an uprising of the people on and nothing would satisfy them but Bowden for Mayor.

"Waycross is a great little town, and they think I would make a great little Mayor—that's all!" said Bowden.

Representative N. F. Culpepper of Meriwether is one of the best lawyers in the House and one of its strongest men.

He is not at all showy, and seldom indulges in debate on the floor. In the committee rooms, however, where most of the real constructive work of the General Assembly is accomplished, he long ago came to be recognized as safe and sane and well worth following.

This is Mr. Culpepper's first term in the House of Representatives, but it is doubtful whether Meriwether, although it has sent to Atlanta many of the ablest and most forceful men in General Assemblies of the past, ever sent a stronger man than Culpepper.

It is evident enough that there is to be a bitter and perhaps prolonged fight in the House on the proposition to establish a State Board of Tax Equalizers.

It is but the truth to state that many of the smaller counties, now getting back from the State through the common school fund and the pensions much more money than they pay into the State Treasury, are aggressively averse to having themselves equalized, or anything like equalized!

Some of the counties pay into the State Treasury a tax on as little as 16 per cent of the valuation of their lands as set forth by the United States Government. Other counties pay as high as 300 per cent.

Manifestly, here is a situation that needs equalizing, at least partially.

If any person doubts the truth of the assertion herein made, he has but to apply to the United States Census Department to have the figures verified.

Between the two extremes of 16 per cent and 300, the various counties run from 20 to 250. The impression is that 65 per cent of the national valuation of real estate in Georgia would be little enough for the taxpayers to have assessed against them—but it may be set down as a dead sure thing that those counties now fattening at the expense of the others are going to balk at having a State board set up to equalize them.

The proposed State board is not to be given power to equalize individuals—it merely will undertake to equalize counties.

Will the board be created? Not if the get-more-than-we-pay-in counties can help it!

The movement to hold afternoon sessions in the House of Representatives, beginning right away, was defeated, and most members think it should have been.

Later along, afternoon sessions will, perhaps, be necessary. Now they would be positively a menace to progress in the Legislature.

Unless committee meetings were neglected, there never would be a quorum of the House present in the afternoons now, and if committee meetings were neglected, of course the work of the House would lag.

It is hardly probable, therefore, that afternoon sessions will be called until the committees are much further along with their work—which may mean the last week of the session.

SENATE TO DECIDE ON NEW COUNTIES

Vote of Upper House on Barrow Bill Expected to Settle Other Measures' Fate.

The crisis for new county measures will be reached to-day when the Senate votes on the bill creating Barrow County. A sharp fight will be made for and against the bill.

While this bill passed the House with the indorsement of three of the six Representatives from the district affected, it is known that only one of the Senators of the three from the counties concerned to-day will vote for the bill. The other two, it is said, will actively oppose the bill when it comes up for passage.

Either the defeat or the passage of the Barrow County bill, it is argued by some, will mean an end of the consideration of new counties by the present Legislature. Others, however, claim the agitation will go on unabated, regardless of the verdict of the Senate, for strong delegations from the counties affected are on hand to wage their fight, and will not give up until the last card has been played.

Among the new counties which are to be voted on are Warner, Candler and Milledge.

Lamar, Hansell and Norwood Counties will be considered by the House committee Thursday afternoon.

Mother's Lips Keep Baby Alive 10 Days

LOS ANGELES, CAL., July 24.—Determined that her baby boy should live, though three physicians declared he would die in 48 hours, Mrs. J. H. Spaulding, of Oklahoma City, kept the spark of life aglow ten days. It is considered the most remarkable case of artificial respiration on record.

Soon after birth the baby was seized with an affection of the heart. The mother placed her lips over the mouth of the child, exhausted the air in its lungs and allowed fresh air to pour back. The baby revived.

The mother repeated the operation on two more occasions. Then the baby was taken to the hospital and died soon afterward.

Plans To Be Made For 11 County Fairs

MACON, July 24.—The secretary-managers of eleven Georgia county fairs will meet in Macon next Thursday and outline plans for their exhibitions during the coming fall. They will be the guests while here of the officials of the Georgia State Fair Association.

20-LB. LIMIT TO BOOST PARCEL POST HERE

Additional 1,000 Feet of Space Will Be Needed and Force Will Be Doubled.

Heads of the Railway Mail Department and United States postoffice inspectors in Atlanta have been engaged recently in an investigation to determine the extent of increased business as the direct result of the order which goes into effect August 15 increasing the limit of weight of parcel post packages from 11 to 20 pounds.

Postoffice Inspector Robert E. Barry; Mark Bunn, chief clerk of the Railway Mail Service, and G. A. Gardner, special agent from Washington, have been conducting the investigation. They declared Thursday that at the minimum to start with it would be necessary to obtain 1,000 square feet additional floor space at each terminal station to provide for the increased business.

Will Sort Mail at Terminals.

A unique system has been arranged by which all parcel post mail here after will be assorted at the terminal stations.

"Carloads of packages will now be shipped which it is impossible to assort on the roads," said Mr. Barry. "A carload of parcel post matter from Chicago or a distant point will come direct to Atlanta. Here it will be assorted at the terminal station, and as far as is possible this class of mail will hereafter travel by the carload. Parcel post carriers will receive their mail at the terminal, and thus eliminate carrying it to the postoffice.

"In the last week we have visited all the principal cities of the South where terminals will be established for this purpose. Atlanta is the largest of all Southern terminals, over sixty trains of mail of from three to eight cars each are assorted here daily.

Will Double Force of Men.

"We have decided that at least 1,000 square feet additional floor space will be necessary to start with, but just how much more will be needed when in operation we are unable as yet to estimate.

"At every terminal the number of men now employed will be doubled. Atlanta now has ten assorting clerks. The parcel post system with its latest improvements has revolutionized the entire postal service. The benefits to be derived by the citizens of the United States are colosal."

M'KEE SILENT ON RESIGNATION RUMORS

Postmastership in Doubt as Present Holder Confers in Capital With His Chiefs.

Speculation is rife in regard to the exact status of the postmastership in Atlanta pending the return of Postmaster Hugh McKee from Washington. Mr. McKee left Atlanta for the National Capital last week, after obtaining a leave of absence for ten days to lay certain questions before the Postoffice Department at Washington, it is claimed.

Dispatches from Washington indicate that conferences between the Atlanta postmaster and Third Assistant Postmaster General Roper have been held. These conferences, Mr. McKee's personal representatives say, were entirely satisfactory and had nothing whatever to do with a resignation.

Nevertheless guesses continue to be made and there are those who say that the bomb may drop at any time. Thus far, no intimation has been given by Mr. McKee as to the alleged request for his resignation.

Mr. McKee, accompanied by his daughter, probably will reach Atlanta by the end of this week. They are now in Atlantic City, according to latest information received in Atlanta.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

MISTER and Missus Riley was up to our house last nite, and thay had thare littel son Tommie with them. He was the freshest kid that I evver seen, and if I dident know so much moar about boxing than he knows, I wud have took him out in the yard & handed him a few hot wallops, & beesides, I felt kind of sorry for him beekaus his Pa & Ma kind of spoiled him. All that his Ma sed to him wen he spoak out of his turn was Now, Tommie, that isent nice.

I doant think we will move back to the city till skool beegins aggenn, sed Pa to the Rileys. We like it out here in the country & beesides, I want Bobbie to stay here as long as possibel. A boy is always better off in the country than he is in the city.

Oh, mercy, sed Missus Riley, how can you say that? Why, just think of the advantages that a boy has wen he is getting a city bringing up.

He Learns Things.

My husband doesn't think so, sed Ma. You see he was born & brought up in a small town, & he says that a boy born & brought up in a small town has more all around training. He can learn to swim & hunt & fish & row a boat & hitch up a horse & a lot of other things that maiks a man out of him wen he grows up.

But a boy in the city can get such perfect manners, sed Missus Riley. Tommie has learned all he knows about manners by associating with nice little boys in the city that lern thare manners from thare private teechers, the little dears. You are always careful about yure manners, aint you, Tommie, sed Missus Riley.

I shud worry about manners, sed Tommie. What do I care about manners. People in Hoboken have all the manners, sed Tommie.

Now, Tommie, that isent nice, sed Missus Riley. See what a quiet little chap Bobbie is.

That is beekaus he is a bonehead & can't think of anything to say, sed Tommie Riley. He beelongs rite up here in the minor league whare he it, that kid.

I got pritty mad but I knew enuff to keep still. My Ma always told me not to start a quarl in the presens of older peepul.

I wuddent stay in this jay town any longer than I cud help, sed the R kid. The peepul here doant know they are alive.

You know a whole lot for a yung man, don't you, sed Pa. You will grow up to be a regular city feller, all rite, one of them clerks that rides to work & back home in the trolley & talks a ride on Sunday for a outing & then goes around telling what a wise fish he is.

Tommie will never be that kind of a braggart, sed Missus Riley, looking at Pa kind of hard. My littel son knows too much to be a braggart, doant you, Tommie?

Tell it to Sweeney, sed Tommie to his mother. Cheese on all that talk about me. Lay off on me and talk about sumbody that doesn't know anything.

Now, Tommie, that isent nice, sed his mother.

I shud fret and take a sweat, sed Riley kid. I shud worry and git gray, he sed.

Pa Talks.

Tommie, sed Pa, as long as yure parents will not tell you the truth I am going to. You think you are a vary smart yung man bekaus sumbody taught you how to say, "I shud worry." You can say that & you can sing "Snooky Ookums" & part of "In my Harum," and that lets you out. & then you cum up here in the country & try to maik fun of grown up peepul that knew moar when thay was babies than you will evver know wen you grow up. You ought to be spanked, Tommie, & sent to bed to think it oaver.

Then Tommie looked at Pa kind of fresh & sed Say, this is a queer kind of a country.

I guess if he had stayed long I wud have had to soak Tommie, but his Pa & Ma got kind of mad wen they seen we dident like thare son, so thay took him hoam.

Where Riches Count.

The late Mr. Bradley Martin, who was himself a polished wit, used to recall with delight a conversation he overheard between two girls apropos of an aged millionaire's marriage to a debutante.

"I know he's rich," said one, "but isn't he too old to be considered eligible?"

"My dear," answered the other girl, "he's too eligible to be considered old."

Stella Barre Tells of the Value of Voice Culture.

Miss Stella Barre.

"WHEN I began making vocal culture a serious study a few years ago—six, to be accurate," said Stella Barre in the most delightfully musical of voices, as we sipped cooling ices after the matinee, "no one except my teacher and myself believed I had a voice to train. We did believe, though—we worked hard to prove it—and now we have a few followers, haven't we?"

If you have heard Stella Barre's top note and a few others below it such as she renders at the performances of "All Aboard" in New York you will agree that she has triumphantly proved the existence of her voice. And a voice is, as we have been told, "an excellent thing in woman," be it low and sweet, or be it high and sweet; but heaven forefend that any one of us have the high-pitched nasal voice, or the husky, breathy croak that are an unfortunate tradition as the possessions of the American woman.

"No amount of study is too hard," said the charming singer, "if it gives you at last the goal of your dreams. But you have to work with your brain as well as your body. And the thing I would warp girls most earnestly against is overfatigue. It is so easy to think, 'Oh, I will just keep at this bit longer,' and to use up so much energy and strength that you infringe on your reserve store. Now I really practice all afternoon long—but only about fifteen minutes at a time. I work a bit, and then I go off to something quite different, and then back to work. In this way, I probably put in three or four hours' work with less fatigue than two hours of steady application and overstrain would give.

"You read so many romances of how the fair telephone girl wins a millionaire husband by saying 'Hello!' very sweetly to his listening ear. There is something in every tale—fairy or otherwise—you hear, and whether a girl has a singing voice or not, a few singing lessons will vastly improve her speaking voice—and perhaps help to discover another prima donna."

A Suggestion.

"For the girl who can not afford singing lessons, I would suggest deep breathing at an open window morning and night, or whenever she has a chance to try it during the day. Then fill the lungs and hold the breath back of the voice while speaking a few words, gradually increasing the number until you have breath control and all the while keeping the voice as deep, clear and low as possible."

"But you don't think that voice alone is sufficient beauty for woman, do you?" I asked, for every line of Miss Barre's cool coral colored linen dress and white hat bespoke a careful attention to the mysteries of true becomingness in dress, with beauty and good taste duly commingled—and these mysteries become just plain everyday facts in the clever hands and brain of the woman who knows how to dress. "I am sure that you recognize the importance of dress and manner in the field of womanly charm."

"Yes," said Miss Barre, with the pleasing attention that she always gives to your part of the conversation; "I believe in dress and manner as adjuncts to beauty, and I have just four little pet theories for the first aids to beauty. Here they are: First and most important, KEEP UP. Keep up and ahead of what you are doing of events and happenings; just cultivate a habit of feeling light and buoyant and not weighted down or impeded by life.

"Next, BE PLEASANT. Friends are as easy to acquire as enemies, and a pleasant greeting to the people you meet won't harm them or you.

A Mental Picture.

"Of course, I believe in dressing as well and as becomingly as your means will allow. And to do that you must cultivate your imagination. Do you know, I can always see myself walking out of the front door and down the street in a dress just about the time I am having my first fitting. I picture myself in clothes, and as I don't like freak pictures, I don't get freak clothes. I make sure that my hats form a background for my face, although if I had a short neck I would be careful not to make it appear still shorter by wearing hats that would cut it off in the course of their down-droop in back. And I study the line of my throat. A neck is pretty generally becoming—except to the woman with an exceedingly long, narrow face. Square neck for her, and a round line that cuts off the throat should be generally taboo.

"It's a science, isn't it?" laughed Miss Barre. "Why, I believe taste in dress has as many branches and ramifications as the study of singing. But they are both worth while, aren't they?"

And we all agree, don't we, little sisters?

One Woman's :-: Story :-:

By Virginia T. Van de Water.

CHAPTER VII.

PERHAPS Mary Danforth did not acknowledge to herself why it was so hard for her to give her mind to her studies during the evening on which she received Craig's pansies. If she appreciated that the sender of the flowers was in her consciousness more than was the book of civics lying open in the glow of her student's lamp, she did not admit it even in her innermost thoughts. She tried to "concentrate," but her wits wandered, and, time and again, she found, with a guilty start, that for some minutes she had been gazing abstractedly at nothing. It was late when at last she put out her light, urged to this course by her mother, who insisted that she was wearing herself out studying so hard, and that she would be "good for nothing" in the morning.

When Mary awoke on the morrow she was forced to confess the accuracy of the final part of her mother's prediction, for she did feel "good for nothing." Her eyes smarted and her limbs ached as she busied herself with her toilet. A vague feeling of disappointment possessed her, depressing and, at the same time, irritating her, and she went to breakfast with her nerves and temper on edge. She had difficulty in controlling her feelings when Mrs. Danforth, in her desire to promote table talk, innocently introduced the subject of Craig—feeling that he would be an interesting topic of conversation.

Vexed at the Blush.

"I declare," announced the kind-hearted matron, amiably, "I have almost fallen in love myself with that tall Texan. He has such beautiful manners and is so considerate of elderly people. Don't you think he is delightful?"

As this remark was addressed to the table at large, Mary, vexed at the blush which she felt creeping to her forehead, busied herself with her grapefruit and made no reply.

"Don't you like him, daughter?" persisted her mother.

"I think that he's a presentable man, mother, if that's what you mean," responded the girl tartly and with tightening lips. "You can hardly expect me to say, as you just said, that I am 'almost in love with him' myself, can you?"

The words were sharp and the tone harsh. The speaker suddenly appreciated that this was the second time within a few days that she had been impatient with her mother. As before, she regretted her show of temper when she saw the wounded expression in her mother's eyes. She noted also that her father was looking at her in amazement.

"I did not mean to speak like that, mother," she said quickly and penitently. She pushed her chair back from the table and, going around to the elderly woman, laid her own flushed cheek against the wrinkled one. "I had no business to be so cross, and I am very sorry. I am as nervous as a cat this morning. Please forgive me."

Mrs. Danforth patted her daughter's hand, her face all smiles in an instant.

"That's all right, my darling," she soothed. "We all have our cranky spells. Now eat your breakfast, for it is getting late. I shall be glad when this dreadful grind is over and you have graduated," she added, with a sigh, "You are not like your dear self these days, and it is because you are overwrought and overtired."

Mary made no protest. She wondered secretly if the strain of work was entirely responsible for her vague sense of discontent and uncertainty. Breakfast over, she hurried to her room to collect her books, and, as she returned to the hall, ready to leave the house, she came upon her father. He was leaning against the wall, his hand to his head. His face was pale and his brow contracted as if he were suffering.

"Father!" exclaimed the girl in alarm, "what is the matter?"

"Nothing to worry about, pet," he insisted. "I was just a little dizzy and headachy for a minute. I'm better now. Don't look so frightened!"

"Dad," said Mary, anxiously, "you are not well. You've been overworking."

"Oh, I guess not," he replied with an attempt at raillery. "An old codger like me must expect such feelings this warm weather, that's all—but I find it hard to remember that I'm getting old."

"Won't you see a doctor?" urged Mary.

Mary Gets a Shock.

"Pshaw!" he laughed. "I'm all right, I tell you! Don't mention this little turn to your mother, for she makes a mountain of a molehill when I don't feel up to the scratch."

On the way to school Mary thought of her father with some perturbation but the hurry and bustle of the day's work drove all other worries from her brain and she had forgotten the little episode by the time she boarded the subway train in the evening. She watched the express on which she rode draw away from a local train. As the lighted windows slid slowly backward she thought of how she had first seen Gordon Craig under circumstances like these. It was like a story book romance, and he looked not unlike a book hero, she said to herself with a contemptuous smile at her own silliness.

Her thoughts were still busy with him as she walked along toward her home. When she turned into her own street, several leather-lunged men, carrying bundles of papers, were shouting "Extra" at the other end of the block in the hollow, reverberating tones of the New York disaster harbinger. Still dreaming, she paid little heed to them, but went up to her apartment, her mind on the man she had known for such a little while. Strange, she mused, that he should have impressed her so strongly. Her father was standing in the drawing room as she entered her home. A glance at his face brought her to a comprehension of the news venders' cries as they were borne now to her ears through the open windows.

"Terrible accident on the Bosting Express!" they were shouting.

Blindly the girl stretched her hands to her father as he came toward her.

"Dad," she asked hoarsely, "was that——"

She got no further, for her father put his arm quickly about her and drew her to him.

"Yes, little girl," he said, tremulously, "the Boston Express—Craig's train—has been wrecked, and, God help us! most of the Pullman passengers are dead!"

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Rusty raised his head and timidly put it out around the angle of the fireplace, where he had taken refuge.

"Wha is he?" he asked huskily.

His master straightened up, put the revolver back in its holster and pointed grimly to the trap.

"Water and a long drop," he said quietly. "There's another of the Duke's men gone."

Rusty got shakily to his feet. "I knowed them battleship boogies was spooks," he observed dolefully. "The plural suggested something to Jarvis. He motioned Rusty to stay back, and, picking up the sword, advanced on the second figure. He made two or three feints to strike and got no response. Then he gave it a powerful push with the point. The armor toppled over and fell down the stairs with a hollow clash. It was empty.

"I guess he's harmless."

Rusty immediately began gathering up the pieces.

"I'll fix dis one so he won't jump no mo'!" he declared, savagely.

"What are you going to do?"

"I'm gonna sink this other battleship!"

"Hold on—wait a minute. I reckon we can use that," said Jarvis, smiling a little. "It takes a thief to catch a thief, they say. We'll just out-spook Mr. Ghost. Come on, Rusty," he went on impatiently, holding up the breastplate and back-piece like an undershirt, "get into this hardware as fast as you can."

Rusty drew back with violent head-shakings.

"Marse Warren, I don' wanna be no spook."

"Listen!" commanded his master, sharply. "Somebody was working in this room. It's a cinch that the treasure is here and it's a bigger cinch he'll come back to get it when we are gone."

"You ain't gonna leave me heah alone!" protested the old darkey.

The Plan.

"Sure! I'm going to put you in this so you can watch. I'm going t make a bluff that we're both gone. You'll be as safe as a church in this. No one would ever think of looking for one of us in this armor. You watch, and when he starts to work—then yell your head off!"

"I'll yell so loud they'll hear me in Kentucky," Rusty assured him, reluctantly permitting himself to be armored.

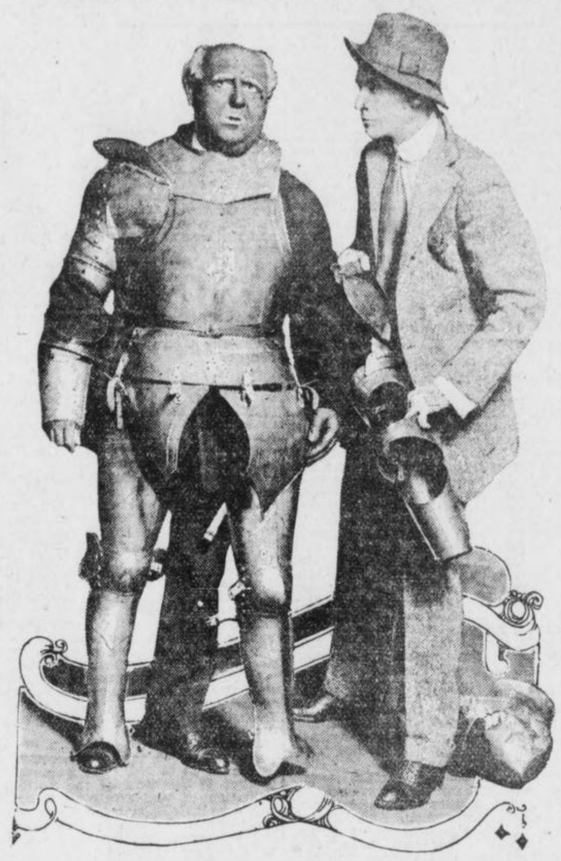
"You give your best yell and then I'll nail him."

Rusty sniffed doubtfully. "If you don't nail him he'll nail me!"

Jarvis grunted and fussed over the armor as the right valiant swashbuckler for whom it was constructed was less generously designed amidships than the rotund darky.

"Marse Warren," remarked Rusty, presently, "you mus' think a heap o' Miss Princess to go prowlin' and projec'ing 'roun' in dis boogy house in de dark."

"What makes you think that?" mumbled Jarvis, toiling with a rusty clasp.



"Get into this hardware as fast as you can."

"Marse Warren," said Rusty, solemnly, "I knowed you since you was a baby."

"What's that got to do with it? Pull in your breath a little bit."

"She gin you dat jew'lry you got 'roun' your neck, didn' she? She kind o' crazy 'bout you, too, ain't she?"

"How do you know?" inquired Jarvis, his eagerness concealed by the fact that he was bending over in the rear trying to joint the greaves to Rusty's ponderous calves.

"I knows, all right!" declared Rusty.

"But how do you know? Quit shifting around!"

"We-ell, I'm goin' to tell you, an' then you'll know how I knows. Jus' 'fore them horses jumped on me—when I was waitin' in de road—I heard a winder go up slap! An' dare was de Princess a-lookin' up at de moon, jes' like a picter. Jes' a-lookin' at de moon, an' she says—an' she says—"

"What did she say?" snapped Jarvis.

"'Ah,' she says, a-lookin' at de moon, she says, 'de world am begun all over ag'in fo' me.'"

Good News.

Warren started and was conscious of a singing in his ears that was not all due to the constant bending over required of a squire-at-arms. He held his tongue, knowing a darky's fondness for sentimental gossip, and Rusty went on:

"And den—and den—she go right on an' she says—she says, 'Gawd be with you, my American!'"

A steel thigh-piece slipped through Jarvis' fingers and clattered to the floor.

"An'," concluded Rusty, with invincible logic, "I'se de only American 'roun' heah 'cep' you, Marse Warren."

"God bless you, Rusty!" said his master, fervently, to himself. But aloud he said, holding up the heavy casque:

"Here—put your head in this Stetson. Gloves—here now! How do you feel?"

Jarvis surveyed him with a grin. Sancho Panza would have looked a courtly and sprightly cavalier by comparison.

"All in," was the glum response from the hollow depths of the helmet. "Do I look like a spook?"

"You're a wonderful sight!" declared his master, heartily. "Now, Rusty, get over here. Where's your sword?"

A cataclysmic sneeze caused the armor to rattle like a junk wagon.

"I never heard a ghost sneeze before," chided his master, reprovingly.

"Marse Warren, I'se catchin' cold," pleaded the knight, in the hope of pardon.

"Nonsense! Now, Rusty, keep your ears and eyes open—don't move a muscle. If anyone comes, yell your head off—but don't sneeze!"

"Marse Warren, I wanna go home!"

"We haven't any home, Rusty," was the sober response, as his master adjusted him on the pedestal. Rusty sighed till the clasps of the armor creaked complaint.

"Marse Warren, I don't evah 'spect to get out o' dis boogy house nohow."

"Well, Rusty, there are some things ——"

Jarvis broke off abruptly and threw back his head, motioning Rusty to be quiet. To his ears came a sound so faint and far-off that it was impossible to decide whether it was a stifled groan near at hand or a call from some distant part of the castle.

Give Her a Chance

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"I AM 20," writes a young man, "have no bad habits, and for eight months have been in love with a girl of my own age. I have always given her as good a time as my salary would permit. One day I went to her place of employment, opened the door quietly to surprise her, and found her in the arms of a man who is known to have brought dishonor to at least two young girls.

"I have learned since that she has frequently gone to places of amusement with him. When I told her of his true character she admitted it, but said he was a good spender, and, as she was not engaged to me, I had no right to object. I love her with all my heart and would not see any trouble befall her. Should I stand aside and let her pay the price?"

No! That would be wrong were you only friends, and an unpardonable crime since you love her.

She pleads that she is not engaged to you, and you have no right to object. Seek an engagement, and give yourself the right!

The girl is going headlong to ruin, and a diverted interest may save her. She is not wicked; she is foolish. She is concerned only for the good times the present may bring. Make her, by the power of your love, see that there are better times in the future. Give her the interest that every girl longs for—the hopes, the dreams, the all-enveloping satisfaction with one's self and life that center around an engagement ring.

A Suggestion.

Induce her to change her place of employment; you surely have women friends whose amusements are unquestionable and whose influence is for good. See that they make her acquaintance, and that she is thrown in with them. Teach her the difference between the real and the shadowy. Never find fault with what she has done, or moralize on the degradation from which you hope to save her.

Treat her as if you trusted her. Appeal to her higher nature always, letting her see that you know she is too good to do the things other foolish girls do, and for whom life is never so long that they get through the paying.

Always keep in her mind the little home you are building for her, and when you take her through the air-castle of your dreams explain its needs and your means as if you were talking to an intelligent being. This will give her a sympathetic understanding of the limitations of your income, and the knowledge that you are saving for her will check any envious sighs for other men who are greater spenders, and cause her to insist on a greater economy than even you had advocated.

Try it! Every good woman is using her influence to redeem some man. If this were not so, humanity would retrograde instead of progress. With all these centuries of obligation heaped upon him, every man personally owes to every weak and willful woman all the influence and strength he can muster to save her.

The Best Way. 4

The strongest influence for a woman's good is that which appeals through the heart. All sighing for vanities of dress, position and person is stifled when she loves. Vanity is a stage of silliness that her heart sooner than her head helps her to outgrow.

If this girl loves you, it will not be impossible to rescue her. But, if she loves you or not, if she assents to an engagement or not, does not lessen your responsibility concerning her. If she will not heed you, and you know you are right concerning this man's dishonorable intentions, you owe it to all womankind to inform the girl's parents of what she is doing.

Help them build the protecting rail at the top of the cliff. That will show a greater Christianity than being content with contributing money or means to an ambulance to be stationed at its base.

Another Case.

Dixon, Iowa.—"I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for some time and it has done me much good. My back troubled me very much. It seemed weak. I had much pain and I was not as regular as I should have been. The Compound has cured these troubles and I recommend it to all my friends."—Mrs. Bertha Dierksen, Box 102, Dixon, Iowa.

How to Dance the "Tango-Classique"

Some Rules and Suggestions for the Up-to-Date Whirlers

By LILLIAN LAUFERTY.

THERE are as many rules for dancing as there are successful dancers now before our public—and that number is legion. But the one rule from which we can never get away if we want to really dance is: "Know your subject."

You can no more dance in a finished and attractive manner without all the ingredients that go to make a dance than you can bake a cherry pie without flour and butter and sugar and water and cherries. Learn this rule by heart before you get up at some giddy "The Dansant," and with one eye on a supposedly admiring gallery, whirl in the mazes of a breakneck awkwardness.

Up at the Ziegfeld "Follies of 1913," at the New Amsterdam Theater, in New York, Rose Dolly and Martin Brown are doing a fascinating combination of true "Tango" and modified Turkey Trot, that they

"You must keep exactly with the rythm of the music."

"Practice relaxing shoulders, knees and ankles."

call "classique excentrique," and for the benefit of all who have seen them and the other lovers of Terpsichore who have not, they formulated for me a few simple rules for dancing.

Little Rose Dolly is like a scarlet tangoer streaking across a Southern sky—or a dash of her own Hungarian Paprika in a prosaic salad; and Martin Brown is a typical, up-to-date American youth—with the tall, slender, thoroughbred look we are all beginning to strive for. And here is "How they do it."

How to Do It.

"If you are a beginner," said Miss Dolly, "take a clever dancer—or a clever national dance—as your pattern. Study the steps, make up your mind which ones you can imitate, and then practice them one at a time with music to help you and spur you on. Work and work till you can get up and do a step and have it look just like play."

"That is quite right," said Mr. Brown. "Expression when you are doing it. Don't look strained or anxious. Practice a step in private, and work at it so hard that when you do it publicly it will look like play.

"You must keep exactly with the rhythm of the music—keep time, in other words. Follow the music, do steps that you have mastered, and do not do freak steps that don't fit in with your own personality at all. And above all, keep your toes pointed out all the time. No matter how pretty a step is, it does not look attractive if you do it in pigeon-toed fashion." He illustrated—and the same step done with pointing toe and with turned ankle and inpointed toe became a very different movement.

"Toes are very important in dancing," cried Miss Dolly, "although the modern dancer does not have to stand on them like a ballet dancer, she must keep them out and down, and sway gracefully on the ball of the foot and get the habit of keeping the instep and heel raised.

A Good Way to Learn.

"A good way to learn the modern dances is to stand up and just practice relaxing shoulders, elbows, knees and ankles in a sort of gradual shuffle. Do this first standing firmly on your feet, then rise to the balls of the feet and try it again, then take a step or two with the body relaxed and swaying. Do this first without music and in front of a mirror, then add music, and do it again in front of the mirror. And finally do away with the mirror, and just yield as unconsciously as possible to the rythm of the dance. You will be surprised how easily it will come after you have learned to relax.

"Then you must add steps to your ingredients of knowing how to keep time, how to relax and how to express the feeling that music gives you," added Mr. Brown. "Master a quick, little, short step and a long glide, combine them in various ways, add a little ability to kick gracefully—not high necessarily—but with gracefully pointed toe and an appearance of ease—and watch clever dancers for suggestions as to steps. In this way, even without the aid of a teacher, you can learn to be a home-made turkey trotter."

:-: The Practice of Self-Control :-:

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED.

Author of "The Etiquette of New York To-day."

IN any sphere of life self-control is an important element toward success and happiness. Control of mind is a factor toward overcoming the tendency to be oversensitive, suspicious, or tormented by imaginary slights. Moping and brooding over fancied grievances will never achieve peace. Sensitive people, who take offense easily, are very difficult to get on with. We are never sure "where to find them," as the saying is. They are constantly making exactions of their friends, calling them to account for certain delinquencies.

Social life often requires the making of concessions, the common sense not to construe the thoughtlessness of a friend into an intentional slight, or absentmindedness into indifference. Naturally, we feel that something is due between intimate friends, but even in the case of intimates a margin of kindly concession must be made. The fear that one is not receiving sufficient attention from others is an unpleasant form of egotism.

Delay in Calling.

The many demands of social life oblige people not to hold one another too seriously to account for delay in calling, for instance. Among acquaintances delay in calling, or returning calls, need not be taken as an indication of a wish to be exclusive or an intention to be neglectful. Allowances have to be made for the failings of others on this score. When an acquaintance calls after a lengthy delay it is an important courtesy to welcome her cordially, not to allude to any misunderstanding, to hasten to accept, in the kindest spirit, any explanation which may be offered, not to dwell on the subject but pass on to other matters and to do this without permittin the shadow of a suggestion that she has been dilatory. It is wise for the person making a delayed call not to be too profuse in excuses.

Many reasons for delayed calls may be considered by the sensible person who is willing to make concessions toward friends. Absence from home, illness, engagements, various home duties, interests in charitable or other work very absorbing to one's time may be among the causes for delay. The wish to have some leisure to pursue personal tastes may be another reason.

Control of Temper.

While the casting out of fretful grievances is of importance in daily life, control of temper is a rule of life to be practiced by every well-bred person. It is well not to get too excited and to remember to close a door gently. "I never knew anyone who went about banging doors and playing whirlwind to possess any influence whatever," said a wise woman.

The practice of self-control and composure will have an immense effect on one's own manners and will be sure to make a pleasing impression everywhere. To sit quietly, to keep the hands still, to walk calmly, these little things lend a charm to the person who has acquired them.

It is salutary to take stock of ourselves and recognize our own shortcomings and try to remedy them. It is good to get out of ourselves, to stop being self-centered, to give up talking of ourselves and our grievances and to live in the sunshine of cheerfulness and the breeze of larger interests.

:-: Helping Jimmy :-:

Today's Short Story---Complete

"I SAW Jimmy this morning," I mentionel casually.

"Yes?" answered Mrs. Veralour.

"Yes. I think we shall have to take to calling him James. The hand of time seems to have given him a sudden, fearful blow. He looked as if he had seen trouble through a microscope. Has anybody left him money, do you know?"

"Money? Good gracious, no!"

"Poor old chap. Then he must have lost his little all."

"What do you mean?" demanded Mrs. Veralour, tapping her foot impatiently. "Why must it be one or the other?"

"Well," I said, "anybody could see it was money trouble of some sort. He had the appearance of being a pauper trying to look like a millionaire, or else a millionaire disguised as a pauper. His clothes have aged frightfully during the last few days. In fact, you could hardly call them clothes; they were merely emblems of civilization."

Mrs. Veralour seemed about to speak, and then, changing her mind, put her hand in front of her mouth and converted her remark into a yawn.

"Or else it is love," I murmured, gazing dreamily into the fire.

Mrs. Veralour said nothing. Taking a cigarette from the box, she tapped it uncertainly on the back of her hand.

"Of course," she said at last, with somewhat superfluous frankness, "I—I make mistakes sometimes. You know Florence Appleton, don't you? Jimmy was frightfully gone on her. He used to come round here every afternoon and tell me how much he loved her."

"What a ridiculous thing to do. It would have been considerably more sensible for him to have gone round and told the girl how much he loved you."

Very Extraordinary.

"What?" ejaculated Mrs. Veralour, with a laugh that was nearly a shriek. "Mr. Blake, what an extraordinary thing to say."

"Well," I said, "isn't the next best thing to telling a girl you love her to tell her you don't? Especially a girl so sought after as Florence Appleton. She'd immediately begin to wonder what was the matter with him."

"M'yes," said Mrs. Veralour, "I suppose she is inclined to think that every man is in love with her; but then she's got such hordes of admirers it's really not the girl's fault."

"No," I agreed, "it's not her fault, it's her forune."

"Misfortune?" murmured Mrs. Veralour, who never by any chance listens to what I say, "well, I don't know about that. Still, as I was saying, Jimmy used to come round and tell me all about it, and I promised to help him."

"Mrs. Veralour," I said, indignantly, "you're always match-making. It's abominable. You don't deserve to be a widow."

"I promised to help him," repeated Mrs. Veralour, firmly, deaf to my remark. "He wanted rather a lot of helping," she added, reflectively; "he was so awfully shy. Fancy a man being shy."

"Why not? Somebody's got to be. What did you do? I suppose you praised him up to the skies to her."

Mrs. Veralour looked at me with an air of mild amusement.

"My dear Mr. Blake. Is your grandmother still alive?"

"Eh? Yes. Why?"

"Oh, I was only wondering where you got all your old-fashioned ideas from. Of course, I didn't praise him. I ran him down. I used to go round and tell her most frightful stories of him. I warned her against him. Once you warn a girl against a man, you've wasted your time. It's like putting a 'dangerous' notice up on a sheet of ice; everybody goes to see why it was put there."

The Only Way.

"Oh," I said, weakly, "I have had many a ducking myself."

"The best reputation a man can have," she pursued, "is not to have one. The worst of it is Jimmy wouldn't live down to his reputation."

"That must be very disheartening," I said, sympathetically, "when you're doing your worst for a man."

"Yes, it was. Really, I think it was her money he was afraid of."

"Coward."

"M'yes. Still, I suppose it is humiliating for a rich girl to tell you she can never be a poor man's wife. However, I got him at last to promise that he would propose if I contrived a good opportunity for him."

She paused for a reflective moment.

"You know the summer house in the garden, don't you?"

"I do," I said, "and you know I do."

"Yes, you do, don't you," she smiled, I had a spring lock fixed on that door. You know, one of those that you can only open from the outside."

"I know. I begin to see the end of this story."

"M'm," she said. "That's the worst of being so bright—nothing comes as a surprise. Well, after I'd had the lock put on I invited them both round to lunch. Of course, I asked a lot of other people, so as not to arouse her suspicions. They all came; one or two girls and a lot of men—most of her horde, in fact. After lunch we all went out on the lawn."

"Do get on, Mrs. Veralour; you're like a writer on space rates. There are some things one takes for granted."

"I'd told Jimmy what he'd got to do."

"Get the girl in the summer house, and then you'd come along and snap the door on them?"

"Yes. Don't you think being locked in a summer house together was a good opportunity?"

"I think so. He could lead up to a proposal by saying how he wished they could never get out again. That's what you meant, isn't it?"

"Yes; only nothing quite so silly as that. I was going to give them half an hour to themselves, but after about ten minutes all the men commenced to drift away in search of her, and I was afraid they'd take her away from poor Jimmy. So I hurried along to the summer house at once."

"Go on," I urged. "Quicken the action."

"I listened for a minute to make sure they were really in there; as soon as I heard her voice I gave the door a push."

"Congratulations. A tip-top scheme, jolly well carried out."

"Well, I do think so," asserted Mrs. Veralour, in a tone curiously defensive. I—I still think so."

"Why, of course. You don't mean to say, when you opened the door later on, they weren't engaged?"

"Oh, no; they were engaged, all right."

"Good," I paused for a moment, struck by a sudden thought. "But look here, what was old Jimmy looking so absolutely wretched about when I saw him this morning?"

Mrs. Veralour hesitated, and then pulled herself together.

"It wasn't he in the summer house with her, after all," she said.

Up-to-Date Jokes

The chief constable of a small town received by post six "Rogues' Gallery" photographs, taken in different positions, of an old offender wanted for burglary in a neighboring city. A fortnight later the city chief of police received this letter from the constable:

"Darling," she murmured, as she nestled against his shoulder, "do you know that horried people are saying that you are marrying me for my money?"

He leaped to his feet. "The miserable creatures!" he roared. "I won't stand it! Tell me who they are, and I'll horewhip them! I'll——"

"But, my dear," she objected, "you would create scandal, and the case would be made horribly public in the papers, and then I really could not marry you."

"What, then," he muttered, hopelessly, "can be done?"

"Darling, it is easy,' she replied. "I will make over my fortune to my brothers and sisters, and everybody shall know of it. Then no one shall be able to make horrible accusations against you."

But then he drew himself up proudly. His manliness had won a moral victory.

"Nay, Araminta!" he exclaimed. "Do not put thy sweet self to any trouble. Anthrobald Binks is proof against every slanderer!"

Ten Commandments of the Summer Visitor

By DOROTHY DIX.

INVITE not thyself to the house of another, oh, my daughter, for if so be thy friend hungereth and thirsteth for thy society she will arise and send to thee a writing bidding thee to come straightway to her abode. Yea, she will send for thee swiftly by means of the telegraph and the night letter, and if so be she holdeth her hand, take that for a sign which never faileth that she wanteth thee not.

2—Accept not an invitation from a man to tarry and stay at his house until it hath been O. K.'d by his wife, for verily I say unto thee that no man hath authority within his own home, no, not so much as to give a bone to a stray dog. It is the wife and the wife's people, and the wife's friends who have dominion over the spare bedroom.

3—When thou visiteth cast not the goo-goo eyes at thy hostess's son, nor upon her male relatives, nor upon her husband, for it is written that she that snareth the fancy of the men of the household shalt be invited there no more.

Don't Stay Too Long.

4—Forget not to take in thy trunk thy curling iron, and thy sewing tools, and thy postage stamps, and thy script for letters, and all the things of which thou hast daily need, for a borrower is an abomination and worse than the pestilence that destroyeth by night.

Praise Their Offspring.

5—Incline thy heart unto the amusements that hath been prepared for thee, and make thy countenance mirthful, though thy soul fainteth within thee when thy hostess sayeth, 'Rejoice and be glad, for to-day we go forth to picnic in the woods, and to partake of squashed lemon pie flavored with ants." Likewise dissemble thy sorrow when she trotteth thee to the church sociable, or naileth thee to the card table until thy stomach turneth in desapir and thy gorge riseth in rebellion.

Invite Not Thyself.

6—When thou visiteth cast veracity to the winds, for verily truth hath no place in a popular house guest. Say of thy hostess's house, "Truly, this is a palace, fit for a king. Tell me, I pray thee, what marvellous architect planned it?" Beat upon thy breast and call Heaven to witness that there was never such a view, though it be but as the view of a fly that is caught under a teacup. Praise the beauty and the wit and the way the offspring of thy hostess reciteth, and when thou departeth thy hostess shall say of thee, "Surely, here is a woman of discernment, and I will bid her return again."

7—Conform thy ways to the ways of the house that thou visiteth. Arise while it is yet night, if it be the custom of thy hosts, so that thou shalt breakfast with them, and give no trouble to the servants, for, behold, a hand-maiden in the suburbs is as precious as gold, yea, as fine gold, and as difficult to keep.

8—If thou followeth a diet and eateth of strange food prepared after an ungodly manner, visit not at all, but hie thee to an inn where thou canst pay for the trouble thou givest. Thus shalt thou save thyself from being hated by thy friends.

9—Forget not to tip the handmaiden who waiteth upon thee, for the button-her-up-in-the-back is worthy of her hire.

10—And if thou forgettest all of the other commandments of the Summer visitor, remember this, oh, my daughter: Make thy visit short. Tarry not long in thy friend's house lest she be weary of thee. Go while yet she entreateth thee to stay with her, for it is better that thy hostess should weep because thou goest than to shed tears because thou stayest. Selah!

Saving His Face

At a very convivial dinner a man with a preternaturally solemn face arose, wine glass in hand, to propose a toast.

"May we never," he said, in deep, measured tones, "drink any more of this stuff—"

He paused, and there was a horrified silence for several seconds—"than is good for us!"

THE ATLANTA GEORGIAN AND NEWS.

MIKE FINN WILL REMAIN AT HELM OF MOBILE CREW

MOBILE, July 23.—Mike Finn will remain as manager of the Mobile Baseball Club.

Such was the announcement of President Alfred Staples following a meeting of the directors of the Mobile club. "The trouble has been adjusted satisfactorily to everybody concerned," he said, "and Mr. Finn remains as manager of the club."

Further than the announcement that "matters has been settled satisfactorily to all concerned," President Staples would not go into the case, but from a reliable source it is understood that Mike Desmond, employed at the ball park in the capacity of special officer, had tendered his resignation. It is understood that he took his action, following Manager Finn's statement that he would resign, rather than cause the club officials any embarrassment.

Manager Finn would not discuss the outcome of the case when seen, but stated that only one thing in connection with the entire affair had caused him any regret, and that was the statement that he had "insulted the Hibernians." The Gull leader denied that he ever offered offense to the Hibernians of any other organization of any kind in Mobile, and states that he has never made any remark that could be construed as an insult to any organization.

"Mike, you're too good an Irishman, yourself, to talk about the Hibernians; are you not?" he was asked.

"Sure," he responded, "and to tell the truth, I've made up my mind to join the Hibernians."

The announcement that Mike Finn will remain at the head of the club means that the players will hustle as they have in the past to keep the club in the running, and no one was more pleared when definite announcement was made that he would stay than the players now working for the Mobile club under him.

BOXING
News of the Ring Game

Leach Cross has the California "bug." He says that if he succeeds in defeating Matty Baldwin next week and it matched with either Willie Ritchie or Joe Rivers, he will try to arrange to practice his profession of dentistry in Los Angeles. He will have considerable idle time on his hands between bouts, and thinks he can do well.

* * *

Reports from the coast state that Tom McCarey is still awaiting word from Abe Attell in regard to a match with Jack White. There is some question in regard to the weight at which the two will box, and a wire from Abe will settle that question definitely.

* * *

Jack Payne is the latest to hurl a challenge at Eddie Hanlon. Payne says he will agree to box Eddie at catch-weights.

* * *

George Mason, Baltimore lightweight, who fought here about two months ago, is making a big hit in Memphis. Promoters there are trying to secure Johnny Lore to meet him some time in August.

* * *

Terry Nelson is far from discouraged over his defeat at the hands of Eddie Hanlon. Terry says that the latter outweighed him by nearly ten pounds, and will gladly meet Hanlon in another match, providing the latter will make 135 pounds.

* * *

Tom O'Rourke is now managing Carl Morris. O'Rourke hopes to send the Sapulpa heavyweight against the winner of the Flynn-Smith match scheduled to take place at New York on August 8.

* * *

Al Palzer is another heavyweight who is seeking a ring encounter. Palzer is at present in New York doing light work in an effort to get into fighting shape.

* * *

Jimmy Murphy, the Chicago lightweight, who recently stopped Danny Goodman, is anxious to come to Atlanta. Murphy would like to get on with either Eddie Hanlon, Mike Saul or Terry Nelson. Murphy also met Joe Thomas in an eight-round battle.

* * *

There are four brothers in the White family—Charlie and Jack fight best when weighing around the 126 mark; Billy Wagner, the youngest of the bunch, is best at 133, while Battling White can easily make 116 pounds ringside.

* * *

* * *

Mike Schreck signed articles yesterday to meet Dick Gilbert at the Valley Athletic Club in Elmwood on August 18. Schreck will go to West Baden, Ind., for a stay of two weeks before the scrap.

* * *

Johnny Creeley and "Knockout" Mars will don the gloves for a scheduled ten-round contest at New York on Thursday night. They have agreed to weigh 133 pounds at 3 o'clock.

BOXERS CLAMOR FOR CHANCE AT RITCHIE'S TITLE

LOS ANGELES, July 24.—And still they come! With enough boxers here to stage a carnival of fistic revels lasting until Christmas and managers and promoters clamoring over each others shoulders for a chance at a date and a trunk full of coin it appears that the end is not yet.

Joe Woodman is clamoring for dates for his two proteges, Sam Langford and Jack Read, the Australian lightweight chamuion, and bids fair to make a landing.

Ad Wolgast also wants to be remembered. He is right on the ground to press his claim with Champion Willie Ritchie for an early match. He figures that since Rivers lost out in his match on July 4 he is in direct line for another match in preference to the Mexican and probably his bout at the Vernon arena would be a good card.

* * *

ANOTHER challenger of Ritchie is Jimmy Duffy, whose record during the past year certainly gives him some right to consideration. His manager, Bert Finch, writes that Duffy is willing to meet any lightweight in the country with an expressed preference for Ritchie, Freddie Welch, Leach Cross or Joe Rivers.

Finch says that if Ritchie will concede Duffy a match for the championship he will post $5,000 as a side bet that Duffy will defeat him in twenty rounds and that he can fix the terms for the division of the purpose to suit himself.

In May of last year Duffy fought a ten-round bout to a draw with Freddie Welch and has defeated Leach Cross twice, once in New York and once in Buffalo.

* * *

"DUMB DAN" MORGAN, the "speechless" wonder from New York, has issued a statement offering to match Jack Britton with Champion Ritchie for a side bet of $10,000. There is no mention made in the letter of whether it is ten thousand cigars or toothpicks. He says this would be a real test for the champion and that Britton will box at any weight that suits the "champion."

Crackers in Real Test To-day

Pennant May Hang on Series

By O. B. Keeler.

NOW is the time to get out old friend Crucial Series and furbish him up for active duty the next three days—beginning today. Also, it is up to the Crackers, like the noble Romans getting an earful of M. Antony's oratory, that those who have base hits prepare to shed them now.

In other words, this is the well-known Critical Juncture, the Tide in the Affairs of Men, and (as set forth in the preamble) the Crucial Series.

There is no particular advantage to be gained by holding a post mortem in advance. It may be stated briefly that if the Crackers lose three straight games to the Billikens, the 1913 bunting will be in grave danger of wasting its fragrance on the desert air surrounding Montgomery, Ala.

If the Smithies win three, with the long home series in prospect, chances will be bright for fireworks at Ponce DeLeon.

A split series, with the Town Boys on the heavy end, will make things look the same way, only not so much so. And if the Billies get the odd game, our noble lads will have some Horatious-at-the-Viaduct work cut out for them the rest of the way.

Here's hoping!

CHEERING NOTE.

We garner a tip
With a soul-stirring sentiment to it:
It's easy to crack
The old Turtle's back—
A Dent on the rubber will do it!

GILBERT PRICE'S little vacation didn't last long. He was ordered by Manager Billy Smith to start from Atlanta this morning to join the club at Montgomery, where he probably will work in the Saturday game.

Price said yesterday he couldn't figure out why he drew the suspension that became effective after his poor start against the Turtles in the opening contest of the recent series.

"I just got bumped—that's all," said Gilbert. "That will happen to anybody once in a while; sometimes oftener."

WITH a dozen games, more or less, dividing the Senators from the Athletics in the American League handicap, Walter Johnson, some Big Smoke, comes to bat with the offer to pitch half the remaining games for the Griffmen, beginning September 1, with this little stipulation:

"If Griffith thinks at that time we are close enough to the Athletics to make a fight for the pennant."

That's the point, by the way.

Walter goes on to remark that if Radbourne could do things like pitching every other day, so can he. And he adds that the slabmen who work in the meantime should be instructed to pitch their arms off every time they start.

It would be interesting to see Walter and the large and scintillant Mr. Boehling taking it turn about on the slab—and if the Athletics slump far from their dozen-game lead, we may have a chance to see that very thing.

AND Mordecai Brown just went in for the lowly Reds and saved both ends of a double bill with the Braves, shutting off a savage rally in the last inning of each game. Calls up memories of other days—what? You know.

LINES TO AN EX-CUB.

It may not be the same old Brown
That used to wallop Matty so;
The passing years have dimmed renown
That sparkled in the Long Ago.
But when the Final Pinch is there,
That three-clawed Cub's the same old Bear!

It's not the Cubs he's fighting for—
The Reds could never look the same;
He lacks the grim and bracing roar
That tuned his whip in every game.
But in the pinches—have a care—
That three-clawed Cub's the same old Bear!

MORRIS TO MEET BENEDICT.

JOPLIN, MO., July 24.—Negotiations have been completed, according to announcement here to-day, for a fifteen-round bout between Carl Morris, of Sapulpa, Okla., and Al Benedict, of New York, to be fought in Joplin Friday night.

J. PLUV WALKS ARM-IN-ARM WITH J. PRINCE

JACK PRINCE really gets sore when he is called "the Rainmaker."

But being well armed with a pair of perfectly good legs, we dare him to come forth for battle, and so here goes:

Jack Prince, you are a regular rainmaker!

For the second time in as many days the races carded for the Motordrome have been called off on account of rain. And to make sure that they will have plenty of time to get Jack out of town, the other backers in the saucer have decided that the next set of races will not be held until Friday night.

They want all of to-day to get Jack out of the city. And they guarantee that Prince will not be within fifty miles of here by sunrise to-morrow.

And with that promise, the local bugs may be assured that the big Marathon grind will come off to-morrow night. Also a number of other events that should prove corkers.

To-day all of the riders intend tuning up their machines a bit more. To-morrow night the record for the 26 miles, 385 yards is very likely to get an awful kick in the slats.

ATTELL COMES TO LIFE.

NEW YORK, July 24.—Abe Attell will be seen in action again to-night at Rockaway, where he will clash with Willie Beecher, the New York lightweight, for a ten-round bout.

Report That Cobb Is Slated for Chicago

CHICAGO, July 24.—Just before the White Sox pulled out for their Eastern invasion a report gained circulation to the effect that Ty Cobb, Tiger star, is to become a member of the South Side crew.

To get him, all this according to the report, Owner Comiskey must give up Pitcher "Red" Russell, Outfielder Chappelle, for whom Comiskey recently paid $18,000, and a catcher.

It has been known for several months that Cobb has been anxious to break away from the Tiger band, but this is the first time that an offer was made for him.

LARNED-WRIGHT WIN FROM JOHNSON-WHITNEY

BOSTON, July 24.—W. A. Larned and B. C. Wright, veteran tennis masters, worked their way into the fourth round of the Eastern doubles championship at the Longwood Cricket Club's courts yesterday by disposing of H. C. Johnson and E. H. Whitney, of Boston, in four sets. The scores were 6-3, 6-3, 2-6, 6-2.

Other matches in the doubles and singles were without striking features. The all-comers' tournament for the Longwood singles was advanced to the fourth round.

MARIST GIVES UP ATHLETICS; JOE BEAN OUT

MARIST College, known as the greatest athletic prep school south of the Mason and Dixon line, has decided to give up sports.

No, don't pinch yourself. You're not asleep. It is the real cold truth.

The school has decided that it can not afford athletics, yet the very one thing that has "made" it has been athletics.

Every schoolboy in Georgia knows Marist because of its ability to win in athletics. It has been the ambition of every youngster in the State to attend the foundry of learning on Ivy street.

Joe Bean made the announcement this morning that he had been discharged. Said Joseph:

"Father Rapier called me in and told me that my services were no longer needed. I nearly strangled to death from the shock. But Father Rapier says that the school can not afford to dally in athletics any more."

Marist is no longer on the athletic map.

But one J. Bean IS. He is going to make a corking instructor for one of these other prep schools. Already he has received two offers, and will probably close for one of them within the next week or ten days.

KRAZY KAT

Ignatz and Krazy Are Not Speaking To-day

PROMOTER LOST MONEY STAGING RITCHIE FIGHT

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 24.—Lightweight Champion Willie Ritchie is quite willing to risk his laurels again. He says he is not particular against whom he is sent, so long as the price is right.

Ritchie is not naming the sum he thinks should be paid. He wants each of the promoters to make a bid, and he will accept the highest offer made.

It is no use mentioning "percentage" to the champion. He has thrashed it all out, and has discovered that flat offers are the best.

One of the charges Billy Nolan made against the champion was that Ritchie was "money mad." Nolan meant, of course, that money occupied Ritchie's thoughts to the exclusion of other things. There is nothing about Ritchie's actions when money is in question to suggest that his mind is unbalanced.

Having received something like $18,000 from Promoter Graney for the fight on July 4, Ritchie will probably expect as much or more when he boxes again. And the chances are very much against his getting it.

The fight between Ritchie and Rivers drew something more than $29,000. As "houses" go nowadays, it was a mighty good clean-up. But not for Graney, for if he broke even he is lucky.

Ritchie Received $18,000.

It is easily enough reckoned if Ritchie got $18,000, Rivers $7,000 and it cost $1,500 to hire Coffroth's arena, Graney had little more than $2,500 to meet all the expenses of advertising and help, and the chances are he had to dig down into his jeans.

It is an object lesson for fight promoters and for such as think there is money in handling affairs of that kind. Graney worked like a beaver and used every influence he could command to advertise his show.

And when it came off the boxers received nearly 90 per cent of the takings, and the promoter found himself on the wrong side of the ledger.

This is a matter that will have to be regulated, although it is not easy to see how it will be done. As matters stand, all a champion or near champion has to do is set the promoters bidding against one another, as Ritchie is doing right now, and prices will go soaring.

"What was I to do?" said Graney. "If I had not given Ritchie what he asked some one else would have given it to him."

Graney Has Good Lesson.

Probably, now that it's all over, Graney wishes he had not stood in the way of some other promoter. Of course, Graney will be chary of offering big money to Ritchie again, and this means that there will be one fool less among the promoters.

It looks, indeed, as if this theory of paying the fighters more than they are worth—and more than they draw—will only stop when each and every promoter in the country has had his fingers burned.

Jim Flynn Gets Chance at Title
Gunboat Smith Is His Opponent

By Ed W. Smith.

IT takes a good bit of managerial skill to boost Jim Flynn, of Pueblo, up from the depths into which he had been forced through successive defeats into a real match for a real belt which is to be emblematic of the heavyweight championship of the boxing world. That skill has been shown by one J. Curley, Flynn's manager, and the Pueblo man is to get his second chance to win a title—or is it the fourth or fifth?—in a bout in New York early next month when he faces Gunboat Smith, of Philadelphia and San Francisco. And the winner will be given a belt to replace the one that went out of commission when Luther McCarty died in Alberta the latter part of May.

* * *

FLYNN'S peculiar position in the boxing world is brought to mind now and then by a dispatch from Missouri telling of the progress the boxer is making in his automobile trip from Pueblo to New York. The other day, the wires bore the news that Jim had been pinched in a small town for speeding, after having had his machine repaired. Flynn ever has been a thorn in the side of the aspirants for the white title, but unfortunately for the hardy fellow from the mountains he always has just failed of getting there. Jim is a trifle too small, in the general opinion of the critics, or rather he is too short to cope successfully with the tall men of the heavyweight division.

* * *

IF many of the fight fans do not like Jim for his brash ways and the overabundance of ego that he displays constantly, they nevertheless must admire the man for his sterling fighting qualities. Gameness is Jim's middle name, and he has proved in the last four or five years to be the grandest little trial horse the ring ever has known. As a matter of fact, a man never would be thoroughly tried in the ring until he had met Jim in a real encounter. If he could get by the Pueblo ringster, his future would be pretty well assured.

* * *

AS a matter of cold fact, it was never demonstrated that the late Luther McCarty was a real fighter until he had sent Jim into a crushing defeat. Then we all knew that Luther was the real thing, a demonstration that the poor fellow strengthened a short time later by whaling the stuffin' out of Al Palzer, one of the behemoths of the ring. Flynn got his chance at McCarty out on the coast after he had demonstrated that he couldn't do much with Jack Johnson, and figured that if he had whipped Luther he would have had little trouble with Palzer, who was sent in against the winner. But McCarty proved far too big and strong and lengthy in the reach for the squatty Flynn.

* * *

IN Gunboat Smith, Flynn will meet a man much more to his own measurements, though the Gunboat is a long, rangy chap. But he hasn't the weight that most of Flynn's opponents have possessed, and for that reason Flynn believes he has a royal chance of being returned the winner. The heavyweight class is a mysteriously weak division just now, and almost anybody has a chance of dragging down the honors.

* * *

OUT in Los Angeles, where Flynn has done some of his best fighting, they like him. As a matter of fact, they like the rough, tough fellow pretty much out there without losing sight of and giving free credit for his cleverness and skill. Both Battling Nelson and Ad Wolgast, former lightweight champions, were great favorites there. So were George Memsic, Rudy Unholz, Frankie Conley, Charley Dalton, Bud Anderson and other strong boys of the ring. They like the puncher out in Tom McCarey's town, and haven't a great deal of use for the fancy boxer.

WHY PITCHERS DIE YOUNG.

"That guy is there!" the rooter cried
who lingered at my side,
While Old Gil Price was going well
and many a batsman died.
"That guy is there!" the rooter cried
and rent the summer air,
And as another man went out he
yelled: "That guy is there!"

A youth came up and smote the ball
unto a distant spot.
Another youth came up and made
another swat,
And when another youth came up
and made another clout
The gent who sat beside me rose and
hollered: "Take him out!"

Oh, would I were a hunter on the trail of ivory!
I would not hunt where elephants
are roaming o'er the lea,
But I would buy a grand stand seat
and take my gun in hand,
For there are tons of ivory in every
baseball stand.

Ban Johnson refuses to allow Messrs. Altrock and Schaefer to work their funny stuff while games are in progress, possibly on the theory that the players perpetrate enough comic stuff under the guise of baseball.

While Jack Knight has taken a fearful slump, we are forced to admit that he was a Knight for a day. Wretch! Don't you dare to strike muh!

As we diagnose it, Heine Zimmerman has the artistic temperament in his ankle.

Fuzzy Woodruff avers that Carl Morris is underrated, thereby establishing a reputation as the World's Greatest Kidder.

Walter Thornton, who was hit on the head while earning money for a baseball magnate, is now in a padded cell. You have noticed the rush of magnates to his assistance, have you not?

It is reported that Jack Coombs will be ready for work by August. Connie Mack is preparing to sing that popular ballad entitled, "Good-by, Everybody."

J. Evers evidently labors under the impression that it is impossible to manage a ball team with R. Bresnahan trying to run it from one end and C. Murphy trying to run it from the other. The heluvitis, he can't bench C. Murphy.

THE GREATEST PLAY I EVER SAW.

It was in the eighth inning. The Gulls were one run ahead, but Hogg had begun to wabble, and the bases were filled with one out. Tommy Long stepped to the plate, fouled off two and watched three wide ones go by. The next one was low, on the inside, and Long pulled a terrific drive toward right. Robertson started the moment the ball was hit, and a youth with a large basket on his arm stepped in front of me and remarked: "Peanuts! Five a bag!"

M'DONALD DEFEATS TAYLOR FOR CYCLE CHAMPIONSHIP

NEWARK, N. J., July 24.—Donald McDonald, the New York Athletic Club cycle crack, clinched the National Amateur championship when he defeated Aubrey Taylor, amateur champion of Australia, in the one mile race at the Velodrome here last night. Thorwald Ellegaard, the Danish rider and winner of six world's championships, was sent down to defeat by Jackie Clark, the speedy Australian, in two straight heats of a special one mile match race.

DELANEY VS. JULIAN.

NEW YORK, July 24.—Cal Delaney, of Cleveland, sparring partner of Johnny Kilbane, has been matched with Kid Julian, the Syracuse featherweight, to box twelve rounds at Put-in-Bay, Ohio, Saturday night.

DON'T SCRATCH

If you only knew how quickly and easily Tetterine cures eczema, even where everything else fails, you wouldn't suffer and scratch.

Tetterine Cures Eczema

Read what Mrs. Thomas Thompson, Clarksville, Ga., says:

I suffered fifteen years with tormenting eczema. Had the best doctors, but nothing did me any good until I got Tetterine. It cured me. I am so thankful.

Ringworm, ground itch, itching piles and other skin troubles yield as readily. Get it today—Tetterine.

Clarke Opens Against Billikens
Smith Orders Price to Join Club

By Joe Agler.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., July 24.—Unless Billy Smith changes his mind at the last moment those cocky Billikens will have Clarke shooting at them from the offside in the opening game of the series this afternoon. Chapman will catch.

The boys hooked the rattler out of Memphis last night, feeling pretty blue at losing the odd game to the Turtles, especially as the Billies were winning at the same time. But they packed their fighting togs and took them along, and they know one thing for certain—the Billies can't win game for game with the Crackers on this series, at least. Somebody is going to lose. And this bunch won't believe it will be the Crackers.

HARRELL was lucky yesterday in the first five innings, or we should have piled up some runs. At that, there is no accounting for the way Thompson exploded in the last two rounds. It was just one of those things that happen to the best pitchers once in awhile. And when we take a beating it might as well be a good one.

Clarke looks to me like a first-class pitcher in every way. He has everything a good pitcher needs, and after getting used to the going in this league he is bound to win a lot of ball games.

* * *

I UNDERSTAND Price has been ordered to rejoin us in Montgomery, although Billy hasn't said so outright. I hope that is the case, as he will come in mighty handy in the series, the way I see it.

POP-POPS IN RECORD RACE; 149 MILES IN TWO HOURS

NEW YORK, July 4.—Arthur Chappelle and Paul Ohne, of New York, established a new world's record for the two-hour motorcycle race when they captured the championship team race at the Brighton Beach Motordrome last night. The pair covered 149 miles and 1 lap. The former mark was 141 miles, made on the same track by Lockner and Shields last year.

Ray Veditz, of Philadelphia, and George Mercier, of New York, were second, with 146 miles and 2 laps, while Bert Sayer, of Newport, and George Sperl, of Brooklyn, rode third, with 144 miles and 2 laps. Charles Davis and Bert Fisher, the Brooklyn team, finished fourth, with 144 miles and 1 lap.

EVANS AND ALLIS TIE IN WESTERN TOURNEY TO-DAY

CHICAGO, July 24.—Interest in the amateur championship tournament of the Western Golf Association at the Homewood course to-day centered in the matches between Charles Evans, Jr., present Western champion, and E. P. Allis, of Milwaukee, who made a world's record on the first day of the meet by sending the ball off the first tee 306 yards into the cup in one shot.

Warren K. Wood, who came within one point of becoming champion last year, was matched with Frazer Hale to-day.

HAMMETT AND GALVAO IN WESTCHESTER FINALS

NEW YORK, July 24.—A. D. Hammett, winner of the trophy in 1911, and Maurice Galvao will meet to-day in the final round of the Westchester Country Club championship lawn tennis singles' tournament at Travers Island.

In a hotly contested three-set match yesterday Hammett defeated E. F. Leo, 6-1, 4-6, 6-3, while Galvao disposed of C. Roper in straight sets, 6-0, 6-2.

Miss Bessie Holden reached the final round in the women's singles by defeating Mrs. C. F. Porter in straight sets, 6-0, 6-2.

Red Sox Owners Are On Verge of a Split

DETROIT, MICH., July 24.—That there is a ruction imminent in the Boston American League baseball club came to light here to-day through the reported attempt made by Boston to trade Speaker and some other player for Ty Cobb. President McAleer did not make the offer, but the offer came. It is understood that the other player included with Speaker was "Smoky Joe" Wood.

McAleer scouts the idea of any such trade. But John I. Taylor and his father, General W. S. Taylor, want to put it through over his head.

The importance of the offer lies in the indication that the Taylors are attempting to take the reins of management out of the hands of President McAleer and again become the active heads of the Boston club.

SANDPIPERS ARE VICTORS.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., July 24.—The Narragansett Sandpipers captured the first semi-final game in the Overture Cup series in the Point Judith polo tournament yesterday by defeating the Point Judith team 9 goals to 5. The Sandpipers received a handicap allowance of 7 goals at the start.

DELHI BACK IN MAJORS; PIRATES BUY TWIRLER

PITTSBURG, July 24.—L. W. "Flame" Delhi, the young giant right-hand pitcher, who was bought by the Chicago Americans from Los Angeles in 1911, and who went to Great Falls, Mont., of the Union Association, has been bought by the Pittsburg Pirates on Manager Clarke's belief that he has come back. Clarke likens him to George McQuillen, who has been pitching great ball since he was pulled out of the minors a few weeks ago.

VOLS SIGN SPRATT.

MOBILE, ALA., July 24.—Spratt, who started the season with Montgomery and later went to Selma, Cotton States League, has been purchased by Manager Schwartz, of the Nashville club, announcement being made to-night. He will report at New Orleans. Baumgardner will be benched.

ONE WEEK FROM TO-NIGHT PONY CONTEST ENDS

No One Is Certain of Victory and the Lowest Candidate To-day May Be a Leader To-morrow—Only Seven More Days to Claim Prizes—Will You Be Among the Winners?—Success Is Within Your Grasp If You Will Only Realize the Fact and Prove Your Right to the Prizes By Your Efforts Now—"Dark Horses" Will Probably Come Fast During Last Days and Crowd Out the Too Certain Ones.

We have now entered the thick of the fight, the battle is on and when the smoke clears away on July 31, WHO WILL STAND FORTH AS VICTORS? Who knows? Victory is as liable to perch on the banner of one candidate as another and probably the candidate who is now hovering near the cellar championship, as the baseballists say, may be the one who will come so fast during the last few days that there will be no stopping him—he will sweep all before him and march triumphantly to his goal. This statement should be considered well by all candidates and especially those who may feel that there is no need for them to exert themselves during this time, as they are certain of victory. No one is certain of victory, and no one will be until all is over. You may be in the lead now and be reasonably sure in your own mind that no one can defeat you for the prize you want, but you do not know what efforts will be put forth before the close and while you rest apparently secure in the prospect of winning, your very nearest competitor will probably be working so energetically that the gap between you now will be closed up to allow victory snatched from your grasp when a little real effort during these seven days will win for you and any other candidate who fails to do his very best is liable to be without the charmed circle of winners on July 31, no matter how far in front he may be at present.

Present standings are not indicative of final results by a long way. Real effort NOW is going to swing the pendulum of victory or defeat and if you really desire one of those pony outfits or a pretty watch, now is your opportunity to win your selection.

Have you ever witnessed a horserace, where the favorite started out in front, passed the quarter and half poles away in front and then fell down during the last quarter, while the "rank outsider," now considered as a last place possibility, romped in ahead of the favorite? This illustrates perfectly what is just as liable as not to happen in the contest during these last few days. We don't say that it will happen, but such things have happened so often—the candidate is not given a chance to win by the "wise" ones—finally defeating all his rivals—that a similar occurrence in The American-Georgian campaign would not be surprising. Hence, we want to impress upon every candidate the necessity of doing his best before the finish overtakes you.

FIVE MORE DAYS OF THE RED LETTER BALLOTS.

Just five more days and the Red Letter Ballot, which is the last special vote offer of the contest, will draw to a close. The work being done by the great majority of candidates proves that they appreciate their opportunities and are going to die hard. Those who have as yet done but little on this offer should lose no time in getting started. There is still time to secure its advantages and every vote secured is a step nearer success. uTesday night at 10 o'clock this offer will close and those who have failed to take advantage of this offer and these will be but few, will have missed a chance that may mean final defeat. Votes are the only things that will win for you and without these necessary things you cannot hope to win. Hence every one is worth securing and essential to success.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, July 24.—The absence of rain in Texas and Oklahoma led to a steady opening in the cotton market today. Prices were net unchanged to 5 points higher on the old crop positions and unchanged to 4 points decline on distant months. Immediately after the opening scattered buying by shorts dominated the market, resulting in prices rallying some 3 to 6 points from the initial level. Later weakness developed in the old crop positions, due chiefly to liquidation of foreign accounts. The sudden wave of liquidation of long accounts by prominent brokers, including many spot interests, found the market too thin to take the load.

The price of old crops declined in sensational manner. With declines as high as 2, 3 and 5 points between sales, July soon dropped 20 points, while August lost 31 points from the previous close.

The weakness in the old crops had little effect on the new crop months, which only declined 3 to 6 points. It is now believed that a large short interest is existing in later positions.

Following are 11 a. m. bids in New York: July, 11.88; August, 11.65; October, 11.33; January, 11.22.

COTTON GOSSIP

Dallas wires: "Texas—Panhandle, cloudy in the south, clear in the west, partly cloudy; no rain. Oklahoma—Partly cloudy."

* * *

NEW ORLEANS, July 24.—Hayward & Clark: The weather map is favorable. It shows fair over the Carolinas and Central and South Texas. Cloudy over the rest of the belt. Fine rains in Arkansas, Central States, Alabama, Tennessee, parts of Georgia, and some showers in Northwest Texas yesterday and last night. Indications are more pronounced for more extensive rains in North Texas and Oklahoma. Showery weather in the central belt.

The New Orleans Times-Democrat says: "Liverpool reported smaller spot sales. Manchester cabled that cloths were dull and yarns hard to sell. The weather map revealed splendid rains east of the Mississippi River and the map reads unsettled conditions over the greater part of Texas. With these factors as a starter, the American ring prepared for a price recession on the day's trading and scored one in the natural course of events. July New Orleans again held the center of the stage, because all of the trailers on the long side had not liquidated. The result was a further sharp readjustment, in which the spot article played a part.

"The talent as a whole now seems satisfied the crop is progressing toward a large yield. Rains in Texas in the near future will go a long way toward confirming such a belief. In that State, dry, hot weather has probably done far more good in the destruction of weevils than harm to the plant, which, as a rule, possesses a sturdy tap root and is well limbed.

"In recent years the Texas farmer has profited by the Government's experiments and has steadily improved his cultural methods."

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, July 24.—Weaker cables and favorable weather in the spring wheat country were the influences, which forced wheat ¾ to ¼c lower at the opening. Liverpool showed a fractional decline and rains were reported in Russia and Argentine. Northwestern receipts were moderate, but they exceeded those of last year.

Offerings of corn in the pit were smaller at the opening and values had an advance of ¼ to ⅜.

Oats followed in the footsteps of corn, showing a gain of ¼c to c at the opening.

The advance of 5c in the price of hogs at the yards had little effect on provision values early in the day, the feeling and the trend of values being somewhat easier. Trade was light and uninteresting.

Roup and Sorehead Different Diseases

Both Can Be Prevented, Both Eradicated From Flock, by Easily Applied Remedies.

By JUDGE F. J. MARSHALL.

Is there a difference between roup and sorehead? My neighbor tells me they are the same thing, only roup is sorehead in the fall and winter, and what we usually call sorehead is the same disease in hot weather. I would like to have your views upon the subject.—Mrs. J. R. C., Dallas, Ga.

These are two entirely different diseases, and come from different causes. Both are diseases of the blood, though the effect is quite different. Then at times the two troubles are found in the same specimen.

For example, a fowl having the sorehead and all broken out with the sores or bumps on its comb and head, will, by roosting in a hot, damp place, contract the roup. This will cause the air passages to become inflamed and fill with mucous, causing the fowl to breathe through its mouth.

Results in Loss of Eyes.

The breathing passage to the nostrils being stopped the inflamed matter will be forced out through the eye duct, filling the space around the eye, causing it to water and swell. If it is not relieved the matter will harden and finally the eye will go blind and peel out.

While this is going on the sorehead trouble will wrinkle up the comb and if not checked will form a solid scab upon the head and comb and will so affect the general health of the specimen as to cause death in many cases.

It is only in rare cases, however, that the two are combined. Either one is sufficient in itself to cause enough trouble to do a world of damage to an otherwise thrifty flock. The sorehead comes on as a result of infection introduced by the sting of the mosquito. When once established in a flock it is transmitted from one to the other, without the aid of the mosquito, by personal contact.

Coops Should be Netted.

Mosquitoes rarely bother them during the day, so that where a person will take the trouble to make his poultry coops mosquito proof with netting they will have but little trouble from sorehead. Where this is not done, a great preventive measure is the giving of Epsom salts freely in the drinking water during July and August. It must not be omitted for any length of time or the system allowed to get out of the influence of it or the sores will make their appearance.

When the sores do come up, it is a good plan to take any affected ones from the flock and treat them individually by dipping a feather in oil of tar and touching the sores. Another good remedy is a stick of caustic touched to soft water and then to the sore. Either one of these will have a tendency to kill the germs and dry up the sores. The salts should also be given. Everything should be spick and span about the premises in regard to water vessels, feed troughs and nests. Filth will spread the trouble faster than you can cure it.

Roup Like Common Cold.

Roup is to fowls what a bad cold is to people, and, as it is in the human family, it is liable to take various forms if not checked in its incipiency. It may become malignant, with an offensive odor, and often develop into swelled head and at times into a cankerous condition of the throat and mouth.

It will be observed by opening the beak wide that there is a thick, yellowish coating on the throat and tongue, like cheese. Some experts advise the removing of this coating with a feather quill and powdering the raw surface with powdered borax twice a day. A dose of castor oil every other day for three days; then follow it up with salts in the water. This is a constitutional treatment that will help rid the system of the poison.

The swelled head condition is best treated with kerosene oil. We have found nothing so handy to use as a spring-bottom sewing machine oil can, the small tip of which can be inserted into the nostril. With this the oil can be forced through the nostrils into the head.

Foam is First Symptom.

If the poultryman is alert and looks closely after his fowls he will notice a little foam collected in the corner of the eye. This is the first indication of roup and the closing of the air passages. This is the time to treat with the kerosene, which will usuallly, in about two or three applications, clear out the trouble entirely.

While roup usually is considered a cold weather disease, yet it very frequently makes its appearance in the very hottest times of the summer. At such times it is as the result of chickens being confined in hot, close quarters, not well ventilated and full of bad odors. At such times it is often more trouble to handle than in cold weather because of the difficulty in securing free fresh air.

STOCK MARKET

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, July 24.—Although news developments were of a favorable character, price movements were generally to lower levels at the opening of the stock market to-day. The copper stocks failed to respond to improve trade conditions, Amalgamated yielding ⅛ to 68¾ and about the same amount of loss was sustained in Reading and Union Pacific. New Haven declined ⅜ to 99½, a new low record for the present movement.

Speculative liquidation caused a loss of a point in American Can. Canadian Pacific was off ¾; Mexican Petroleum, ⅝; American Smelting ws up ½, and Southern Pacific ¼. Selling pressure against Canadian Pacific was evident in the London market, where trading was irregular. American railway shares held above par, however.

The curb was steady.

STOCK GOSSIP

It is announced that the shareholders of the New Haven would be summoned to hold a special meeting on August 22 to authorize an issue of $67,552,400 20-year 6 per cent debentures with a convertible privilege. The new bonds will be convertible into stock at the rate of one share of stock for each $100 debenture at any time between 1918 and 1928.

* * *

The most important of the maturing obligations of the New Haven is the $40,000,000 of one-year 5 per cent notes sold last November and falling due December 1. These notes were issued for returning and equipment purposes. Next February the New Haven will have to redeem $5,000,000 of 4 per cent debentures. President Mellen said that the balance would be fresh capital to complete the electrification of the road and for equipment and improvements.

* * *

The New York Financial Bureau says: "The foreign situation is showing improvement. A. C. P. sells ex-div. tomorrow. Information channels are disposed to favor a trading position."

* * *

The stock market may be inclined to be reactionary this morning, but do not expect more than a moderate recession. Would buy stocks on any weakness. The copper situation looks as if the metal would sell higher and as if A. C. P. and the balance of coppers would advance.—T. D. Potter.

The Chicago Inter Ocean says: "It was the gossip of the wheat trade last night that as long as the export business continues large prices are not likely to decline a great deal, if any, from present levels. Fat Hens Declared To Be Best Layers

Grain Feeding Gives Desired Result. Expert Tells When Fowl Is Useless.

By JUDGE J. F. MARSHALL.

It is no secret with a great many poultrymen and farmers that a well-fed, fat hen is a good egg producer, in spite of the hue and cry by a certain class warning us not to get our hens fat.

I believe these people are honest in their opinions. I think they have been governed almost wholly by the fact that at times they have killed an old hen that had passed her usefulness and quit producing eggs, and the hen in question was filled with fat and no signs of eggs.

Putting two and two together, they decided that the reason she was not producing eggs was on account of her fat, while the real truth in the matter is she was too old to produce eggs. And her fatness is explained by lack of exercise.

Observation covering a period of nearly 40 years, during which I have made a study of the hen, her laying times, her condition during that time, and in fact everything pertaining to egg production, has brought me to the conclusion that it is the fat but energetic hen that gives us the eggs.

Corn Not a Bad Feed.

I have seen hundreds of hens dressed for the table, and it has been almost a universal rule that the hen that was full of eggs in various stages of formation was also full of layers of fat. I have observed hundreds of farmers who would feed their hens corn almost exclusively the year round and market eggs by the bushel all the time. They were stock farmers who had more corn to spare than any other kind of grain, and they made use of it.

How often you have heard corn condemned? Some go so far as to assert that it should not be fed to hens at all in any considerable quantity.

Did you ever stop to think that the yolk of the egg is about 60 per cent fat, while the white and shell contain no fat? The yolk being the first part of the egg to form must necessarily have, as the Irishman said, the wherewithal to form it from. The fat must be there ready for the work.

Surplus Energy Gives Eggs.

We must remember that the egg is manufactured from the surplus energy the hen has over and above that necessary to maintain her body in a good, healthy condition. As soon as that point is reached she begins to lay on the reserve, which is fat out of which the egg is made.

There may be an occasional hen that will take on fat abnormally and get filled up so as to retard egg production, but we must take the chances on that if we are working for heavy egg production. Such hens usually are not worth much for eggs in any event.

There is a class of hens that tend to take on fat outside of the digestive tract on the lower part of the abdomen. They get so fat that it is difficult for them to walk. As a rule such hens had just as well be disposed of as soon as found in that condition, for the fat is in such a position that it can not be utilized in egg formation. These are drone hens which give many persons the idea that fat hens are useless. They are the exceptions that prove the rule.

Professor James Rice, of Cornell poultry department, says it has been his experience that hens will consume considerably more food a time before they begin to lay, another indication that they are preparing the system for the great strain to be put upon it.

Experiment Suggested.

Then did you ever notice how ravenously a hen taking care of chickens will eat in her endeavor to recoup herself, and how, as soon as she has fattened up, she will begin to lay?

For the sake of experimenting along that line just feed the hen with chickens just enough to keep her in moderate condition, but not nearly what she would like to have, and see how long she will be commencing to lay.

To sum up the matter, a hen must have a variety consisting of a great bulk of green stuff, together with the grain and a supply of meat in some form, in all a good, generous bill of fare at all times, that she may get her body in good condition with the extra for fat. On the farm range the hen will get much of her variety of greens, as well as bugs for the meat, so that grain is the real thing needed.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Several Big Deals Reported Wednesday

Announcement Soon of Interesting Transactions—Realty Looking Up. Marietta Street Lease.

Reports of big sales in realty circles have taken the place largely of news of the medium-sized transactions, and are proving infinitely more interesting. An investor, for instance, has bought an $80,000 parcel that he will hold for enhancement, and an owner has refused more than half a million on a downtown corner. Another dealer, it is reported, has sold a handsome dwelling on a North Side street between the Peachtrees, and has refused a flattering offer on central property wanted by a syndicate for improvement with a substantial building.

There are other signs of returning activity in real estate, and the dealers are very optimistic of a heavy fall business. Details of the above transactions are expected to come out in a week, when they will be ready for announcement. Other trades are in the contract stage.

Chamber Directors Meeting.

The directors of the Chamber of Commerce Realty Company met Tuesday afternoon at the Chamber of Commerce rooms in the Empire Building and decided to fix a price on the four top floors of the Chamber of Commerce Building so that this price could be submitted to the local committee of merchants and manufacturers. The directors are meeting again Wednesday afternoon to fix this price definitely, and a report to the other body is expected at once.

Marietta Street Lease.

Mr. Rankin, of the Smith, Ewing & Rankin Renting Agency, has announced the lease for a term of No. 164 Marietta street, a three-story and basement building, to the Atlanta Envelope Company for a client, at about $3,000 a year. The building contains about 20,000 square feet of floor space.

Meeting on Realty Loans.

A subcommittee of the State Legislature has taken hold of the bill to repeal the bill of 1910, which prohibits loans of State and municipal funds on real estate. Committees of the Atlanta Real Estate Board appeared at the Capitol Tuesday afternoon to present arguments in favor of the repeal, and they received a warm reception.

Certain bond dealers who are interested in having the bill remain as enacted also appeared. Speaking of their argument, Harris White, president of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, declared it was "weak."

Concrete Buildings Planned.

Two concrete buildings will soon be erected by the syndicate interested in the Walker street development. These structures will face on Walker street, where the new Southern Railway tracks will pass, and will be used for wholesale and manufacturing purposes. More than twenty applications for space have been received by the projectors. Among those in the syndicate are W. S. McKemie, Tom Stocks, W. J. Blalock and Ernest Duncan.

Judge Don A. Pardee recently approved a connection between the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic and the Southern at this point, and the work can start at once laying tracks from the Southern to Haynes street.

What You Can't Do NOW, You Can Never Do.

There Is No Such Thing as a To-morrow That Is to Do Wonders. To-morrow Means NEVER. It Is a Word of Failure.

(Copyright, 1913.)

Don't plan for anything to-morrow, unless you ARE WORKING AT THAT THING TO-DAY.

A picture on this page shows you one of a million young men who say "I will make a start to-morrow."

There is no such start, there is no such to-morrow.

If you can't work to-day, you can't work to-morrow.

If you can't begin the thing to-day, you can NEVER begin it.

To-morrow is a word that in every language means NEVER. It means self-deception, disappointment, idleness, lack of purpose.

When a thought comes to you, get at it.

Don't say to yourself, "I will do that sometime; perhaps to-morrow."

Make a note of the idea, think it over, plan for it, BEGIN IT.

If you can't start it now, you never can do it.

The thing to do is to work to-day, and to keep working to-morrow and every other day.

Keep your mind on to-day, devote the hours of to-day TO THE WORK OF TO-DAY.

Then when to-day's working hours are over, and you have actually done all that you can in those hours of work, permit yourself, if you choose, to think of plans and dreams for the future.

There is not a young man in the country without some good idea, some good plan, some earnest hope in his mind.

But the curse of a million is, that the plan, the idea, is to take form and become real TO-MORROW.

Get away from that to-morrow habit.

You need not take literally the advice, "Live as though this were to be your last day." A man who starts a house must believe that he has days in which to finish it.

The thing to do IS TO START THE HOUSE TO-DAY, and let the to-morrows take care of their work.

We print this picture because it seems, in the attitude of the man sitting under the tree, to typify the attitude of a great many American young men, and to give a needed rebuke.

If you are sitting like this boy, with your arms folded, your feet together and your head down, jump up, throw back your shoulders, take a long breath, and start now up that hill that leads to success.

Pity this poor "futurist" of failure. He is the futurist of to-morrow, the futurist of the plan that will never become real action. He is as dismal a failure in his way as those poor so-called "futurists" who invented what they call a new style of art, and have only succeeded in being unusually hideous.

Demain, Morgen, Manana, Domani

All these words mean the same thing. They mean TO-MORROW, and they mean FAILURE.

This young man says, "I'll make a start to-morrow." And he never starts. There are a million like him sitting, waiting for the "to-morrow" that never comes. (SEE EDITORIAL.)

Don't BAKE Your Baby-- Many Mothers Do It

Hese Is Common Sense Advice from the Chicago Health Department. Read It. Profit by It.

Copyright, 1913.

There are too many "BAKED" babies in this world. Everywhere you see unfortunate little babies suffering with the heat, dressed in woolen or in stiff, starched clothing that adds to their sorrow, babies better suited to the arctic regions than to a hot summer day in a hot city.

Many mothers need the advice which is given and reproduced here. The two pictures are from a bulletin issued by the Chicago Health Department.

This little tot is comfortable and happy when the Summer days are hot. He is dressed right to stand the heat.

This unhappy little codger is all fussed up and as a result he is hot and uncomfortable. He is dressed wrong for hot days.

THE BABY IN SUMMERTIME.

A baby can be more comfortable in hot weather than an adult, but few of them are.

The pernicious and senseless habit of dressing a baby in flannels and endless frills and fancies on hot summer days is such a common practice among mothers of certain nationalities that scores of babies are literally baked to death during the summer months.

During the very hot weather babies should wear only a diaper and a thin gauze shirt. If under six months of age, an abdominal binder of thin flannel and light-knitted booties may be worn, these being advisable only when ordered by your doctor.

These few clothes are all that are needed, but they must be kept clean, soiled garments being promptly removed.

Never replace a used diaper on a baby without first washing it. Wetted or soiled diapers must be washed with as little delay as possible, using hot water in which a little soda has been dissolved. Rinse well and see that they are perfectly dry before using again.

All clothing should be loose and so adjusted as to permit free motion of the legs and arms. Never put starched, stiff or uncomfortable clothes on a baby.

Having dressed your baby correctly, now see that you place the child where it will get fresh outdoor air. Put it in a shaded place on the porch and cover its resting place with mosquito netting to prevent flies from annoying and possibly infecting it. Never keep a baby in the kitchen when you are cooking or washing. When the child must be in the house keep it near an open window in the cleanest and coolest room.

In very hot weather give your baby a sponge bath two or three times a day, using lukewarm water in which a little salt has been dissolved, or you may use a little alcohol instead of the salt. Never give these baths immediately after feeding; better give them before feeding. Take especial care to cleanse the body creases and dry thoroughly. If you use talcum powder be sure it is the best and the unscented kind.

Rational dressing, fresh air and cleanliness will do much to keep your baby in good physical condition and will go a long ways toward enabling it to survive the summer dangers.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Writes on Culture

Women, No Matter How Highly Accomplished They May Be, She Says, Lack Real Culture if They Allow Evil Temper, Evil Speaking, Selfishness and Uncharitableness to Grow Into Their Nature.

Written for The Atlanta Georgian

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

PERHAPS there is no word more frequently misused than the word Culture.

We often hear a woman spoken of as highly cultured.

But in what does her culture consist?

She may speak several languages; she may play several instruments; she may be able to talk understandingly of the arts and sciences; she may know much of the customs of many lands, but still she may LACK REAL CULTURE.

If she is allowing the weeds of evil temper, evil speaking, selfishness and uncharitableness to grow in her nature, she is not cultured.

That always means that the earth of that land is carefully tilled and that every weed is removed; every ugly thing banished, and every beautiful and useful and valuable thing is fertilized, dug about, encouraged and helped to grow.

So it is with the mind.

A Cultivated Person.

Unless ungracious and unlovely traits are removed, and all the virtues cultivated, mere education which comes from books and travel and the possession of money can never make a cultured person.

What constitutes a cultivated personality? What is it that uplifts character and beautifies conduct?

The answer to both questions can be found in the advice Buddha gave his pupils five hundred years before Christ was born: "Do nothing to another that you would not have done to you," and by Christ's improved rendition of the motto: "Do unto others as you would that they should do to you."

There is no higher phase of culture, and there is nothing which beautifies conduct and character like the practical and perpetual use of the Golden Rule in daily life.

The majority of people regard the keeping of the Ten Commandments as a literal fulfillment of that rule's obligations; but one who contemplates its entire meaning realizes that it applies to every trivial act of daily life and necessitates culture as well as morality.

The loud, jarring voice, the uncontrolled temper, the neglect of bodily cleanliness and disregard of dress—all these things break the Golden Rule, because they are not what we would wish others to do; therefore, we have no right to do them.

A "cultivated personality" includes cleanliness, neatness, a certain conformation to the customs of the day, or of art, in dress; a well modulated voice, an attentive manner in listening to others, a well poised body, a direct and easy carriage and walk, and a pleasant, agreeable expression of countenance.

Haughty, Cold Demeanor.

The haughty, disdainful and cold demeanor is incompatible with culture.

Only the vulgarian with an outward veneer of polish, "puts on airs." The really cultured, like the really great souls of earth, are always affable and simple and natural.

That quality which most uplifts and beautifies character is consideration of others and obeyance of one's own highest instincts.

The man who is considerate of his fellow men pays his debts promptly, does not endeavor to "beat" his neighbor in a bargain, does not haggle over prices, and is tolerant of others' political and religious ideas.

He is kind and affectionate in his family, appreciative of his wife and children, and patient and thoughtful with those in his employ.

All these homely virtues "uplift and beautify character." Without them the most heroic and brilliant deeds can not make an admirable human being.

"Cultivated Personality."

The woman who wishes to possess a "cultivated personality" and a beautiful character must keep her engagements, pay her social and financial obligations, shun gossip and harsh criticism, suit her dress and her amusements to her income, keep her home orderly and attractive, and herself a pleasure to the eye, ear and heart.

The path to character building is a long one; there is no short cut.

It requires continual watchfulness, continual self-control, to travel that path.

But it is a way which grows more beautiful, and the world seems more interesting and life sweeter each year as we advance, when the goal of a beautiful character is our aim.

Vocational Training Applied

By THOMAS TAPPER.

A FEUDIST is a gentleman with a gun on the lookout for another similarly equipped. He who shoots first lives longest.

Two horsemen riding over a mountain road in the Cumberlands came to an obstruction. They jumped down, picked it up and tossed it to one side.

The obstruction was a man who had been put out of business by a blow on the head with the butt of a gun.

When he came to he crept up among the trees and had it out with himself. Then he crawled back home cautiously. After a day or two he disappeared.

For ten months he went to school. After a while he added seven other months to these ten.

Equipped with seventeen months' education, he became the president of a college.

One day when his schooling was over he called a meeting of the feudists in the Cumberlands. One group sat, sullen and armed, at his right. Their enemies, just as sullen and as well armed, sat at his left.

He made a plea to them for the sake not of themselves, but of their children; a plea to give the little ones a chance to learn something, to forget the enmity of the feud spirit, and to be able to go out from the mountains as useful men and women.

It was a new idea to these feud followers, but the man's eloquence prevailed to the extent that the two leaders of the clans arose and shook hands.

With a bit of land and fifty dollars the man began to build the college with his own hands. There were plenty of heartaches and discouragements, but no want of trust. Then the college began to be a real thing, visible to the eyes of men.

That was ten or twelve years ago. To-day the college educates about six hundred people annually. Little children, young men and women, fathers and mothers come from all parts of the mountains, eager to get an education.

The man who has done all this has never taken a penny in pay. He does his work as a distributer, and therefore has no need to take an anxious thought.

Thirty cents a day will bring one of these mountain people to the college and will pay for board, lodging and education. Less than sixteen cents a day will pay for it all if the farm about the school can supply the student with an opportunity to work to the extent of fourteen cents.

The man who has done all this is J. A. Burns, of Oneida, Kentucky.

He was one of the first to see that the mountain problem was to be met only by the most practical form of Vocational Training, and and he has given a living demonstration of the truth of his idea.

He saw clearly that not only did these people need knowledge, but that they needed the kind of knowledge which they could apply in the daily work of their hands.

And he has wrought a remarkable transformation among them.

Educate a human being to do work well, to take pleasure in the doing of it, and efficiency is established.

12 JURY PANELS READY FOR FRANK TRIAL

GOVERNMENT TO DIVORCE RAILROADS FROM TRUSTS

EXTORTIONS IN REBATES TO END

Interstate Commerce Commission to Halt "Allowances" Costing Lines $42,000,000 a Year.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The answer of the Interstate Comerce Commission to the aplication of the railroads east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers for permission to make a general increase of 5 per cent in freight rates, will be as follows:

1. The application will be denied.

2. All railroads will be ordered to discontinue making "allowances" to certain favored big industrial combinations.

This will save the general public from paying the aditional $42,000,000 year which the railroads are asking for and deprive certain big industrial corporations of a sum ranging between $50,000,000 and $100,000,000 annually.

The Commission during the past few months has secretly made an investigation to determine just the extent to which the practice of making "allowances" to industrial short line railroads, owned by manufacturing concerns, is prevalent.

His Names and Facts.

It is now in possession of the names of the concerns which receive these "allowances" or rebates, or discriminatory rates—and in addition it has the names of the railroads which pay them, the amounts received by the favored industrial corporations and something of the extent to which the practice injures the competing manufacturers, who are not in a position to enter into such arrangements.

In a large number of instances, it is claimed, the practice amounts to extortion. The railroads are compelled by the demands of competition to make allowances to the manufacturer for transferring his product over his own insignificant trackage to the junction where the regular railroad takes up his cars. Where several railroads are bidding for such a manufacturer's business the one which makes the most liberal allowance usually gets the freight.

To End the Extortion.

In view of this fact it is expected that the answer which the commission will give the railroads will meet with their approval and co-operation, and will do away with the most important of existing improper practices without the necessity of prosecution.

The railroads are asking for the five per cent increase on the ground that they must have increased revenue to pay their large operating expenses, and particularly, to pay the higher wages demanded by their employees.

The recent demands for higher wages would take $17,000,000.

Can Pay Wage Advance.

Under the order which the Interstate Commerce Commission will issue the railroads will get more than $42,000,000 by simply cutting off an improper expense, and correspondingly, the favored trusts and combinations which have been mulcting them of the amount will be deprived of it. The railroads will be placed in a position to pay their employees the living wage they demand, the danger of a huge strike will be avoided, and the whole thing will be accomplished without the shippers—and through them the general public—being required to pay more for the transportation of the necessities of life.

Girl Outwits Cupid; Wins Her Own Rival

WHEELING, W. VA., July 24.—War, or Sherman's equivalent for it, "hath no fury like a woman scorned." Harry Pendleton mournfully confides to his friends.

Pendleton had been engaged to Dessie McIntyre for two years, when he met Henrietta Aiken, a Bridgeport, Ohio, belle. He fell a willing conquest and Miss McIntyre was peeved, but not without hope. She went cupid one better by going to Bridgeport, cutting her hair short, donning the clothes of a modern Beau Brummel and "cutting out" Pendleton in masterly fashion. Then she doffed her masquerade.

Pendleton refuses to say whether or not Miss Aiken has permitted him to resume his courtship.

Tipsy Monkey Kills Dog, Maims Master

SMITHERS, W. VA., July 24.—A drunken monkey belonging to George Smith, went on a rampage and after killing a bulldog, so severely chewed up Smith's hand that he was forced to have it amputated.

Smith gave a party and the monkey had come in for his share of refreshments. After the guests departed the monkey evinced a desire for another drink. Smith refused. The bulldog then sprang at the Simian, but the latter jumped on the dog's back and with his claws soon blinded him, then sank his teeth into the neck, killing him.

Smith suffered his injuries in his efforts to subdue his pet.

Back From Liberia To Die in the South

NEW YORK, July 24.—Pauline Woodson, a 69-year-old negress, was permitted yesterday to land in this country on the assurance of her son-in-law, David Robertson, that he would care for her in his home at Charleston, S. C.

Fifteen years ago Pauline, her husband and daughter went to Liberia and built a hut in the woods. They thought the life of a semi-civilized African superior to the drudgery of their Southern home. Her husband and daughter died in Liberia, and she came back to die in South Carolina.

DEATH ROBS DIXIE TAR OF RICHES

Anderson Youth, Heir to Mother's $250,000 Estate, Killed in Brawl.

PHILADELPHIA, July 24.—Wilbur Martin, the young sailor from Anderson, S. C., who was killed here recently in a brawl in a tenderloin saloon, was worth more than $250,000 in his own right, according to information received here to-day.

The fascination that the sea held for him and the adventures of a naval career led him to give up the enjoyment of his fortune to become a common seaman on the battleship Connecticut.

He inherited this fortune when his mother died last March. His relatives at once began to plead with him to give up his adevtnurous life and settle down in Anderson. The lure of the sea was too great, however, and he disregarded their pleadings and advice. In despair, his relatives appealed to Washington, but this last hope was without avail.

The Connecticut has been at the League Island Navy Yard several weeks. With the rest of the sailors, Martin was in the habit of coming ashore and visiting the places of amusement. He was in a saloon in the old tenderloin district the other night when he became involved in a quarrel with a stranger.

Words led to blows and a general brawl resulted. Suddenly a weapon was drawn and Martin sank to the floor. A hurry was sent to the police and to a nearby hospital. Martin was unconscious and died within a few minutes.

Before her death his mother had argued with him to leave the navy and come home, where he could have every luxury that he desired. His invariable reply was that he loved the service too well and would stay in it all his life.

Factory Supplants Farm as Exporter

The bureau's latest figures show a growth in exports of manufactures from $468,00,000 in 1903 to $1,200,000,000 in the fiscal year just closed and in manufacturers' materials from $409,000,000 to $740,000,000, while the exports of foodstuffs remained at a standstill, $510,000,000 having been the value of the exports in that line both in 1913 and 1903.

STAND OF U.S. IN MEXICO NEUTRAL

Ban Goes On the Shipping of Arms to Either Huerta or His Foes.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—President Wilson has determined that no faction in the present Mexican revolution shall obtain arms or ammunition from the United States and that neutrality must be observed in its strictest sense. This was the interpretation of the neutrality laws decided upon by the President after conferences with Senator Bacon and Representative Flood, chairman of the two Congressional committees on foreign relations.

While the Mexican rebels have been getting no arms heretofore, these developments mean that the Huerta administration will be deprived of the privilege previously accorded the Madero Government and that the United States will treat all sides alike in the present dispute.

The situation was precipitated by the repeated complaints of constitutionalists and their sympathizers in this country that if the United States did not virtually assist the Huerta Government by selling it munitions of war, a termination of hostilities would be possible.

Both Houses Favorable.

Sentiment in favor of a new policy grew in Congress to such extent that to-day a canvass was made of the committees in both Houses dealing with foreign relations.

It was found there would be little objection to repealing the joint resolution of March 14, 1912, which gives the President discretionary power to prohibit exportations of arms or munitions of war to countries where domestic violence existed, but permits him to allow the legally constituted Government of any country to buy war supplies as usual.

Senator Bacon, however, reiterated as he left the White House that the Huerta administration could not be considered a legitimate successor of the Madero regime or a legally constituted government.

To Treat Both Sides Alike.

The constitutionalists representatives here had protested to the State Department that inasmuch as the Huerta government had not been recognized, it ought not to obtain arms. This construction of the case found favor in official circles, and while the repeal of the resolution of March 14, 1912, was considered by administration officials as one way of equalizing conditions, it was decided that the same purpose could be observed by denying ammunition to all factions.

There nevertheless is a firm feeling in Congress in favor of lifting the embargo on arms and giving both sides an equal opportunity to equip themselves. This sentiment finds favor especially among those who believe that the Carranza rebels have public opinion behind them in Mexico, and if given the arms with which to supply their large unequipped forces, the revolution would end speedily in their favor.

For the present, however, the administration wil issue orders to its agents everywhere to kep arms from entering the rebellion?torn country.

HOTEL ELEVATOR HIS SCHOOL OF AVIATION

Robert Pettit, 4, Who Declares He's Going to be "Airship Flyer."

"I Don't Like It," He Says, "But I Must Get Used to Being In the Air."

Robert Pettit, 4-year-old son of Mrs. Frances Pettit, of Denver, spends from six to eight hours every day in the elevator of Hotel Ansley, because he wants to be an aviator.

"I got a bank with 4 pennies an da dime. That ought to buy a good machine," he says.

Robert figures it this way: There isn't much use in buying and running an airship if you are going to get sick every time you get a few feet up in the air; the thing to do, therefore, is to get used to being off the ground—and then buy your airship.

"I don't like to ride in elevators," he says, "but I've got to. I'm going to be an airship flyer when I grow up, and I've got to get used to being off the ground. It is working fine, too I can go up to the twelfth floor now without getting dizzy. I'll make a dandy aviator, I'll bet!"

The youngster has become a familiar figure to attaches and guests of the hotel. Every morning, as soon as he can slip away from Mrs. Pettit and his nurse, he drags his little chair into the elevator and sits solemnly behind the operator. He manifests great interest in the operation of the lift, and his greatest joy comes when he is allowed to hold the levers and make believe he is operating the car.

Robert says he is going to have an airship as soon as he is sure he can fly without getting sick.

"I've got a bank at home with four pennies and a dime in it," he said. "I guess that'll get a pretty good airship. If it ain't enough, Mama will give me as much more as I need."

Champ Clark Won't Let His Wife Fly

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The yearning of Mrs. Champ Clark, wife of the Speaker of the House, to engage in an aviation flight, while visiting Representative and Mrs. Baker, at Wildwood, N. J., received a setback when the Speaker flatly refused to let her go.

"I never talk back to Champ," she said. He is master of his own house and so I guess I won't fly just now."

ATTEMPT TO POSTPONE CASE IS SEEN

Arnold Believed to Be Conferring With Judge Roan Regarding Delay Until Fall.

Jury panels for the trial of Leo M. Frank, charged with the murder of Mary Phagan, were to be drawn by Superior Judge John T. Pendelton Thursday morning, according to all indications. Deputy Sheriff Plennie Miner, who was instructed by Judge L. S. Roan to have the jury drawn Thursday morning unless he received instructions to the contrary, stated that he would take the jury boxes before Judge Pendleton and ask him to draw 144 names—12 panels.

Although Judge Roan had not decided to postpone the trial Thursday morning it was by no means certain that some move in this direction would not be made during the day. Reuben R. Arnold, Frank's attorney, asked Judge Pendleton to defer drawing the jury until he heard from him Thursday morning after he had conferred with Judge Roan. Attorney Arnold could not be located in the city and it was understood he had gone to Covington, where Judge Roan was holding court, to orge that the trial be postponed until the cooler months of fall.

Dorsey Must Be Consulted.

Prosecuting Attorney Hugh M. Dorsey announced he would fight vigorously any move to postpone the trial without first giving him a hearing on the subject.

It developed Thursday morning that there were two rather ruffled chiefs at the police department the previous afternoon when Jim Conley was sneaked from his cell in the station over to the Tower without their permission and without their knowledge.

Chief Lanford said: "This will never happen again."

Chief Beavers would not talk of the incident, but is understood to have told the two detectives, Starnes and Campbell, that if the negro was taken from the police station again he (Beavers) proposed to be in on it.

There was a commotion at police headquarters Wednesday afternoon, when it was found that Conley had been spirited away to confront Newt Lee in the Tower. Chief Lanford knew nothing of the circumstance until he was informed by The Georgian. Even then he insisted that Conley was in his cell.

Then Detectives Explain.

He went to Chief Beavers' office to see if permission had been given there for Conley's removal. Beavers said he did not know Conley was gone. Station Sergeant Holcomb was appealed to. He said he had not been notified that the prisoner was to be taken away. Turnkey Bayne, the last resort, was asked to explain the mysterious disappearance of Conley." He informed Chief Beavers that Detectives Starnes and Campbell had taken him about a half hour before.

The Chief, to satisfy himself that Conley was still in custody, made a personal visit to the jail.

When Starnes and Campbell later were in conference with the Chief they told him that they had said nothing about their intention because neither Chief Beavers nor Chief Lanford were in the station at the time.

TROOPS ASKED IN COPPER STRIKE DISTRICT

MARQUETTE, MICH., July 24.—James A. Crune, Sheriff of Houghton County, wired Governor Ferris today asking that 2,000 State troops be sent to the district in which the great copper strike is located.

He says he is unable to cope with the situation because of the wide area included.

The strike takes in territory 28 miles.

The Sheriff declares the strikers have begun to destroy property and that the lives of men who are not in sympathy with the strike have been threatened.

No violence, however, has been reported.

Choice of University President Lies Between Louisville and Raleigh Ministers.

MACON, July 24.—The presidency of Mercer University lies between the Rev. W. W. Landrum, of Louisville, Ky., formerly of Atlanta, and the Rev. T. W. O'Kelley, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Raleigh, N. C., according to men in close touch with affairs at the institution.

The special committee appointed to choose a president has offered the office to one of sixteen ministers and educators who were under consideration, and they decline to state his name until he has either accepted or declined.

It is believed that Dr. Landrum, who is now with the Baptist Theological Seminary, is first choice, and that if he declines the place will be tendered to the Rev. Dr. O'Kelley. The latter delivered the commencement address here this year.

Leave LaGrange Discussing Governor's Arraignment of Georgia's Antiquated Tax System.

LA GRANGE, July 24.—Members of the Georgia Weekly Press Association left LaGrange this morning for Brunswick, still discussing Governor John Marshall Slaton's scathing arraignment of Georgia's tax system at the annual banquet of the association Wednesday night. The Governor appealed to the editors for aid in what he declared to be the most serious financial crisis in the history of the State. He said that Georgia's tax system and reckless spending by the Legislature have brought about present conditions, when the State finds itself unable to pay its school-teachers.

"We must admit it is indefensible to maintain a system that pays its teachers a year after their work has been performed," Governor Slaton said. "It is pleasant to spend money and hard to make it. We love to appropriate, yet shrink from the tax levy. In two years, the Treasurer says, we have spent nearly three-quarters of a million more than our income. The teachers—patient and hard-working—teaching during the day and working examinations at night—molding the characters and training the minds of those upon whom our civilization depends—under our system find no ray of hope from the injustice they suffer.

Recommends Special Taxes.

"While unpleasant to do, I have recommended a levy—an extra tax of 1 mill for 1915, and 1-2 mill in 1916, as the brave way to get relief. The taxpayer will find it the best trade he ever made. It would prevent the imposition of drastic taxing laws, the deficit in the treasury would be satisfied, the State could say to purchasers of her bonds that she is on a solid financial basis, her teachers would be paid, and the kiting policy, which is opposed to all sound principle, would be abolished."

Governor Slaton emphatically declared himself in favor of the plan of equalization of taxes that has been recommended by the Legislature.

Favors Tax Equalization.

"Is not equalization just that requires all to pay the same percentage?" he asked. "Is it right that one many pays on 16 per cent of the value of his property when another pays on 40? An increase of 20 per cent, by simply equalizing the burden, not increasing that of him who is already bearing his part, would produce an abundance of revenue for every legitimate purpose."

The editors will arrive at Brunswick this afternoon and enjoy an outing of several days in that city and at St. Simons Island, where the Second Georgia Infantry is in camp.

Boys Calmly Admit Killing a Policeman

CHICAGO, July 24.—Declaring he was not afraid to go to the gallows, Walter Novak, 19, to-day repeated his confession that he signaled for the shooting of Policeman Samuel Sowers, who was dying from a bullet wound. Bruno Klonowski, 18, who fired the shot, said: "I just felt like killing a copy. That's all. I should worry."

The two prisoners told the police to-day that they had been close friends of the four youths who were hanged in February, 1912, for slaying a gardener.

Macon Will Invite Veterans Next Year

MACON, July 24.—It is very likely that Macon will invite the Confederate veterans of Georgia to hold their 1914 reunion here. There was no invitation extended at the recent reunion in Brunswick, and this fact has prompted the local veterans to arouse an interest in the matter.

A meeting of Camp R. A. Smith will be held next week for the purpose of formally preparing an invitation.

SIDELIGHTS on GEORGIA POLITICS

By JAMES B. NEVIN

Senator Bacon's inability to attend a sitting of the Georgia Legislature just now for the purpose of accepting an invitation to address that honorable body in joint session, generally is regretted among the members, and many have expressed themselves accordingly.

Senator Bacon's failure to see his way clear to leaving Washington just now seems to be thoroughly appreciated, however, and the fact that he declined the General Assembly's invitation to come down is understood and appreciated.

Senator Hoke Smith's recent address was greatly enjoyed by the General Assembly. He went very thoroughly into many things upon which the Legislature was not fully informed, and undoubtedly held his audience's profound interest and attention through the entire joint session.

Fortunately for the Legislature, Senator Smith's invitation came at a time when it was convenient for him to accept, and without in any way neglecting his duties in Washington.

Both Senators Bacon and Smith are eloquent and forceful speakers, although of late years Senator Bacon has spent very little of his time in Georgia and has been heard but infrequently, on the stump or otherwise.

Whatever the relations between these two Senators may be, whether they be cordial or not, the Georgia Legislature was impartial in extending its invitations to them, as both joint resolutions passed by a unanimous vote of each House.

Editor F. H. Sills, of The Metter Advertiser, whose heart strings are wrapped tight around the bill to create Candler County, was distressed, but not dismayed, that his bill failed of passage this year.

Sills, who has led a clean, manly and fair fight for his pet project, believes that Candler yet will be created—perhaps next session. And, anyway, he is not grieving over spilled milk or wishing he never had been born merely because of a temporary setback in his plans.

Sills is a newspaper man, and a good one, and therefore the newspaper men generally about the Capitol have felt a kindly interest in his proposal with respect to Candler.

His plucky little paper down in Metter has waged a long and honorable warfare for Candler County, and most everybody who knows him wishes him mighty well.

Sills admits ungrudgingly that the first round went against him, but he still is perfectly game and expects to win out in the end.

Hon. Alphabet Bowden, otherwise known as "Jet," because his initials are J. E. T. (business of "great laughter"), is being boomed for Mayor of Waycross.

Asked in the Kimball House lobby to-day, Why is Waycross? and Why should anybody want to be Mayor thereof? Mr. Bowden stated that he didn't particularly want to be, but that there was an uprising of the people on and nothing would satisfy them but Bowden for Mayor.

"Waycross is a great little town and they think I would make a great little Mayor—that's all!" said Bowden.

Representative N. F. Culpepper of Meriwether is one of the best lawyers in the House and one of its strongest men.

He is not at all showy, and seldom indulges in debate on the floor. In the committee rooms, however, where most of the real constructive work of the General Assembly is accomplished, he long ago came to be recognized as safe and sane and well worth following.

This is Mr. Culpepper's first term in the House of Representatives, but it is doubtful whether Meriwether, although it has sent to Atlanta many of the ablest and most forceful men in General Assemblies of the past, ever sent a stronger man than Culpepper.

It is evident enough that there is to be a bitter and perhaps prolonged fight in the House on the proposition to establish a State Board of Tax Equalizers.

It is but the truth to state that many of the smaller counties, now getting back from the State through the common school fund and the pensions much more money than they pay into the State Treasury, are aggressively averse to having themselves equalized, or anything like equalized!

Some of the counties pay into the State Treasury a tax on as little as 16 per cent of the valuation of their lands as set forth by the United States Government. Other counties pay as high as 300 per cent.

Manifestly, here is a situation that needs equalizing, at least partially.

If any person doubts the truth of the assertion herein made, he has but to apply to the United States Census Department to have the figures verified.

Between the two extremes of 16 per cent and 300, the various counties run from 20 to 250. The impression is that 65 per cent of the national valuation of real estate in Georgia would be little enough for the taxpayers to have assessed against them—but it may be set down as a dead sure thing that those counties now fattening at the expense of the others are going to balk at having a State board set up to equalize them.

The proposed State board is not to be given power to equalize individuals—it merely will undertake to equalize counties.

Will the board be created? Not if the get-more-than-we-pay-in counties can help it!

The movement to hold afternoon sessions in the House of Representatives, beginning right away, was defeated, and most members think it should have been.

Later along, afternoon sessions will, perhaps, be necessary. Now they would be positively a menace to progress in the Legislature.

Unless committee meetings were neglected, there never would be a quorum of the House present in the afternoons now, and if committee meetings were neglected, of course the work of the House would lag.

It is hardly probable, therefore, that afternoon sessions will be called until the committees are much further along with their work—which may mean the last week of the session.

BREAKFAST SENT THOMAS CAT BY POST

Mistress, in Atlanta on Visit, Can Not Trust Feline Aristocrat to Butcher Shop Diet.

Bricks and eggs and live stock have become common enough as mail matter within the past few months, but never until Miss Bessie Butler came to Atlanta had Uncle Sam's parcel post served as a dumb waiter for a cat!

Down at Madison, Ga., a big aristocratic Thomas cat—by name, "McCurry"—gets his breakfast every day by parcel post, all the way from 513 Peachtree street, where Miss Butler is visiting Mrs. A. Cunningham.

"McCurry" is Miss Butler's most priceless possession, and when she came to Atlanta she left instructions that the cat must be fed large, mansize pork chops each day. She gave this order to a butcher, with the inevitable result.

Poor "McCurry's" chops soon took on the appearance of a large piece of bone surrounded by a meaty atmosphere, and the cat got dyspepsia and developed a crabbed disposition. He lost his zest in life—all nine of him—and was peevish and poor company.

The sad news of "McCurry's" condition was written to Miss Butler by a friend. It seemed that unless something was done at once the cat would die—it was feared he would break all his teeth trying to eat the bones the butcher said were chops.

So Miss Butler has invoked the aid of Uncle Sam. She gathers up all the scraps of meat that are left when the Cunningham meal is over, and each night she packs them into a shoe box and forwards them to her friend in Madison, who feeds them to the cat the next morning.

The unique method of feeding her pet has been going on for several days now—and latest advices from the front are that the cat is doing well and taking on weight.

20-LB. LIMIT TO BOOST PARCEL POST HERE

Additional 1,000 Feet of Space Will Be Needed and Force Will Be Doubled.

Heads of the Railway Mail Department and United States postoffice inspectors in Atlanta have been engaged recently in an investigation to determine the extent of increased business as the direct result of the order which goes into effect August 15 increasing the limit of weight of parcel post packages from 11 to 20 pounds.

Postoffice Inspector Robert E. Barry; Mark Bunn, chief clerk of the Railway Mail Service, and G. A. Gardner, special agent from Washington, have been conducting the investigation. They declared Thursday that at the minimum to start with it would be necessary to obtain 1,000 square feet additional floor space at each terminal station to provide for the increased business.

Will Sort Mail at Terminals.

A unique system has been arranged by which all parcel post mail here after will be assorted at the terminal stations.

"Carloads of packages will now be shipped which it is impossible to assort on the roads," said Mr. Barry. "A carload of parcel post matter from Chicago or a distant point will come direct to Atlanta. Here it will be assorted at the terminal station, and as far as is possible this class of mail will hereafter travel by the carload. Parcel post carriers will receive their mail at the terminal, and thus eliminate carrying it to the postoffice.

"In the last week we have visited all the principal cities of the South where terminals will be established for this purpose. Atlanta is the largest of all Southern terminals, over sixty trains of mail of from three to eight cars each are assorted here daily.

Will Double Force of Men.

"We have decided that at least 1,000 square feet additional floor space will be necessary to start with, but just how much more will be needed when in operation we are unable as yet to estimate.

"At every terminal the number of men now employed will be doubled. Atlanta now has ten assorting clerks. The parcel post system with its latest improvements has revolutionized the entire postal service. The benefits to be derived by the citizens of the United States are colosal."

RESINOL CURED AWFUL PIMPLES

Whole Face Covered, Now Clear.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I was troubled with two or three pimples coming out on my chin. In a week or so my whole face was covered with them. Friends advised me to use different lotions and salves. I tried them, but they did me little good, if any. I finally washed the pimples with Resinol Soap and applied Resinol Ointment before going to bed. In the morning I found the swelling going down, and the inflammation gone from the pimples. I tried this treatment for about a week, and found that most of the pimples had disappeared. I kept the treatment up for about a month, and then my face was clear of all pimples. I have used Resinol Soap since, and find that the pimples do not come back." (Signed) Walter A. Stenstrum, 54 Willoughby Ave., Oct. 9, 1912.

Resinol positively stops itching instantly and speedily heals eczema and other skin humors, dandruff, sores, burns and piles. Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap are sold by every druggist. Trial free; Dept. 11-P, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

CAMP LIFE INCREASES HELLO GIRLS' ABILITY

Here's Elsie Erd, a fair camper, at a little task that helps to break the monotony.

Swimming, Rambles in Woods, Auto Rides and Sleeping Outdoors Give New Lease on Life.

If you do not believe the simple life is conducive to better work, ask some of the heads of departments of the Bell Telephone Company. They'll tell you that since the establishment of Camp Wyanoke at Lakewood Heights, where the young women employees of the company spend their vacations and their week-ends, the work of the "hello girls," the stenographers and the other young women who work in the big building at Mitchell and Pryor streets, has greatly improved.

"The idea we had in mind when Camp Wyanoke was established," Miss Katherine Tatum, who is in charge of the camp, said, Thursday morning, "is working out splendidly. The girls come back to Atlanta after a few days or a week's stay at the camp invigorated and almost with a new lease on life. They have breathed pure, fresh air; they have worked about the camp, and they return to their work with a vim and a determination that is usually lacking during the hot summer months."

Simple Life Throughout.

The simple life is lived in all its phases at Camp Wyanoke. With the exception of the harder and unfamiliar work of cooking all the work is done by the girls. They wash dishes, wash their own clothing—or most of it—keep house, sew and do a hundred and one other tasks.

When work is done they go swimming and wading, or take long rides in the automobiles the company sends out to them several times a week.

Every Wednesday and Saturday nights there are dances and games of various kinds.

The practice of sleeping in the open air is considered by Miss Tatum one of the best features of the camp. It gives many girls who heretofore have been cooped up in tiny city rooms a chance to recuperate.

Sunday School in Camp.

Every girl employed by the company is given a chance to taste the joys of camp life. Those who had taken their vacations before the camp was installed have been given a leave of absence of three or four days, that they might visit the camp. Others spend their entire vacation there.

There are always about twenty girls at the camp, and on Saturday and Sunday this number is sometimes swelled to a hundred, by the girls who come out to spend Sunday. Sunday school is held in the open air under the trees, and is usually attended by about a hundred young women.

Mother's Lips Keep Baby Alive 10 Days

LOS ANGELES, CAL., July 24.—Determined that her baby boy should live, though three physicians declared he would die in 48 hours, Mrs. J. H. Spaulding, of Oklahoma City, kept the spark of life aglow ten days. It is considered the most remarkable case of artificial respiration on record.

Soon after birth the baby was seized with an affection of the heart. The mother placed her lips over the mouth of the child, exhausted the air in its lungs and allowed fresh air to pour back. The baby revived.

The mother repeated the operation on two more occasions. Then the baby was taken to the hospital and died soon afterward.

MILITIAMEN HOLD 'ENEMY' AT BAY

Sham Battle at St. Simons at Its Height—Second Regiment in Rigid Maneuvers.

BRUNSWICK, GA., July 24.—With the old sawmill on St. Simons Island as the center of the battle line, heavy fighting is in progress this morning between the Second Regiment, Georgia National Guard, and the "enemy." The regiment is intrenched along the coast to prevent the enemy landing a large force, represented by a coastwise steamer and a number of rowboats.

The approach of the enemy was reported to the commanding officers of the Second by scouts late Wednesday night. The movements of the ships indicated that an attempt would be made to land in the vicinity of the old sawmill, throw up fortifications and capture the island.

At 7 o'clock the Second Regiment, under heavy marching orders, crossed to the island. The steamer bearing the enemy is maneuvering about the coast, trying to land an attacking force, and the Second Regiment is operating to checkmate the move. The battle is expected to continue throughout the day—with time off for lunch.

The guardsmen carried rations for three meals when they left camp Thursday morning, and after the battle pup tents will be pitched and they will bivouac for the night. The regiment will return to camp Friday morning. General Harris is expected to arrive some time Friday, and a dress parade will be held in his honor.

SENATE TO DECIDE ON NEW COUNTIES

Vote of Upper House on Barrow Bill Expected to Settle Other Measures' Fate.

The crisis for new county measures will be reached to-day when the Senate votes on the bill creating Barrow County. A sharp fight will be made for and against the bill.

While this bill passed the House with the indorsement of three of the six Representatives from the district affected, it is known that only one of the Senators of the three from the counties concerned to-day will vote for the bill. The other two, it is said, will actively oppose the bill when it comes up for passage.

Either the defeat or the passage of the Barrow County bill, it is argued by some, will mean an end of the consideration of new counties by the present Legislature. Others, however, claim the agitation will go on unabated, regardless of the verdict of the Senate, for strong delegations from the counties affected are on hand to wage their fight, and will not give up until the last card has been played.

Among the new counties which are to be voted on are Warner, Candler and Milledge.

Lamar, Hansell and Norwood Counties will be considered by the House committee Thursday afternoon.

ECZEMA DISFIGURED FACE BADLY

Also on Hands. Broke Out in Pimples. Itched Badly. Spread All Over Body. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

Hampton Springs, Fla. — "I had had eczema on my face and hands for about three years. My face was badly disfigured. The eczema broke out in pimples and itched so very badly I would scratch it all the time. It was the most irritating disease I have ever had. It started on my face and hands and it spread all over my body. I had great large sores all over me, caused from the eczema. It bothered me day and night so that I could not rest at all.

"I used three remedies for skin disease and they didn't give relief at all. I was almost terrified until a friend recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment to me. They helped me from the time I started to use them. I used the Cuticura Soap and warm water as a wash and then put the Cuticura Ointment on the sore places. I only used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and was cured." (Signed) Mrs. E. C. Parker, Dec. 7, 1912.

When you buy a fine toilet soap think of the advantages Cuticura Soap possesses over the most expensive toilet soap ever made. In addition to being absolutely pure and refreshingly fragrant, it is delicately yet effectively medicated, giving you two soaps in one, a toilet and a skin soap at one price. Sold throughout the world. Sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

MISTER and Missus Riley was up to our house last nite, and thay had thare littel son Tommie with them. He was the freshest kid that I ever seen, and if I dident know so much moar about boxing than he knows, I wud have took him out in the yard & handed him a few hot wallops, & beesides, I felt kind of sorry for him beekaus his Pa & Ma kind of spoiled him. All that his Ma sed to him wen he spoak out of his turn was Now, Tommie, that isent nice.

I doant think we will move back to the city till skool beegins aggenn, sed Pa to the Rileys. We like it out here in the country & beesides, I want Bobbie to stay here as long as possibel. A boy is always better off in the country than he is in the city.

Oh, mercy, sed Missus Riley, how can you say that? Why, just think of the advantages that a boy has wen he is getting a city bringing up.

He Learns Things.

My husband doesn't think so, sed Ma. You see, he was born & brought up in a small town, & he says that a boy born & brought up in a small town has more all around training. He can learn to swim & hunt & fish & row a boat & hitch up a horse & a lot of other things that maiks a man out of him wen he grows up.

But a boy in the city can get such perfect manners, sed Missus Riley. Tommie has learned all he knows about manners by associating with nice little boys in the city that lern thare manners from thare private teechers, the little deers. You are always careful about yure manners, aint you, Tommie, sed Missus Riley.

I shud worry about manners, sed Tommie. What do I care about manners. People in Hoboken have all the manners, sed Tommie.

Now, Tommie, that isent nice, sed Missus Riley. See what a quiet little chap Bobbie is.

That is beekaus he is a bonehead & can't think of anything to say, sed Tommie Riley. He beelongs rite up here in the minor league whare he it, that kid.

I got pritty mad but I knew enuff to keep still. My Ma always told me not to start a quarl in the presens of older peepul.

I wudden't stay in this jay town any longer than I cud help, sed the Riley kid. The peepul here doant know they are alive.

You know a whole lot for a yung man, don't you, sed Pa. You will grow up to be a regular city feller all rite, one of them clerks that rides to work & back home in the trolley & talks a ride on Sunday for a outing & then goes around telling what a wise fish he is.

Tommie will never be that kind of a braggart, sed Missus Riley, looking at Pa kind of hard. My littel son knows too much to be a braggart, doant you, Tommie?

Tell it to Sweeney, sed Tommie to his mother. Cheese on all that talk about me. Lay off on me and talk about sumbody that doesn't know anything.

Now, Tommie, that isent nice, sed his mother.

I shud fret and take a sweat, sed the Riley kid. I shud worry and git gray, he sed.

Pa Talks.

Tommie, sed Pa, as long as yure parents will not tell you the truth I am going to. You think you are a vary smart yung man beKaus sumbody taught you how to say, "I shud worry." You can say that & you can sing "Snooky Ookums" & part of "In my Harum," and that let's you out. & then you cum up here in the country & try to maik fun of grown up peepul that knew moar when thay was babies than you will ever know wen you grow up. You ought to be spanked, Tommie, & sent to bed to think it oaver.

Then Tommie looked at Pa kind of fresh & sed Say, this is a queer kind of a country.

I guess if he had stayed long I wud have had to soak Tommie, but his Pa & Ma got kind of mad wen they seen we dident like thare son, so thay took him hoam.

Where Riches Count.

The late Mr. Bradley Martin, who was himself a polished wit, used to recall with delight a conversation he overheard between two girls apropos of an aged millionaire's marriage to a debutante.

"I know he's rich," said one, "but isn't he too old to be considered eligible?"

"My dear," answered the other girl, "he's too eligible to be considered old."

Stella Barre Tells of the Value of Voice Culture.

Miss Stella Barre.

"WHEN I began making vocal culture a serious study a few years ago—six, to be accurate," said Stella Barre in the most delightfully musical of voices, as we sipped cooling ices after the matinee, "no one except my teacher and myself believed I had a voice to train. We did believe, though—we worked hard to prove it—and now we have a few followers, haven't we?"

If you have heard Stella Barre's top note and a few others below it such as she renders at the performances of "All Aboard" in New York you will agree that she has triumphantly proved the existence of her voice. And a voice is, as we have been told, "an excellent thing in woman," be it low and sweet, or be it high and sweet; but heaven forefend that any one of us have the high-pitched nasal voice, or the husky, breathy croak that are an unfortunate tradition as the possessions of the American woman.

"No amount of study is too hard," said the charming singer, "if it gives you at last the goal of your dreams. But you have to work with your brain as well as your body. And the thing would warp girls most earnestly aimst is overfatigue. It is so easy to think, 'Oh, I will just keep at this bit longer,' and to use up so much energy and strength that you infringe on your reserve store. Now I really practice all afternoon long—but only about fifteen minutes at a time. I work a bit, and then I go off to something quite different, and then back to work. In this way, I probably put in three or four hours' work with less fatigue than two hours of steady application and overstrain would give.

"You read so many romances of how the fair telephone girl wins a millionaire husband by saying 'Hello!' very sweetly to his listening ear. There is something in every tale—fairy or otherwise—you hear, and whether a girl has a singing voice or not, a few singing lessons will vastly improve her speaking voice—and perhaps help to discover another prima donna.

A Suggestion.

"For the girl who can not afford singing lessons, I would suggest deep breathing at an open window morning and night, or whenever she has a chance to try it during the day. Then fill the lungs and hold the breath back of the voice while speaking a few words, gradually increasing the number until you have breath control and all the while keeping the voice as deep, clear and low as possible."

"But you don't think that voice alone is sufficient beauty for woman, do you?" I asked, for every line of Miss Barre's cool coral colored linen dress and white hat bespoke a careful attention to the mysteries of true becomingness in dress, with beauty and good taste duly commingled—and these mysteries become just plain everyday facts in the clever hands and brain of the woman who knows how to dress. "I am sure that you recognize the importance of dress and manner in the field of womanly charm."

"Yes," said Miss Barre, with the pleasing attention that she always gives to your part of the conversation; "I believe in dress and manner as adjuncts to beauty, and I have just four little pet theories for the first aids to beauty. Here they are: First and most important, KEEP UP. Keep up and ahead of what you are doing of events and happenings; just cultivate a habit of feeling light and buoyant and not weighted down or impeded by life.

"Next, BE PLEASANT. Friends are as easy to acquire as enemies, and a pleasant greeting to the people you meet won't harm them or you.

A Mental Picture.

"Of course, I believe in dressing as well and as becomingly as your means will allow. And to do that you must cultivate your imagination. Do you know, I can always see myself walking out of the front door and down the street in a dress just about the time I am having my first fitting. I picture myself in clothes, and as I don't like freak pictures, I don't get freak clothes. I make sure that my hats form a background for my face, although if I had a short neck I would be careful not to make it appear still shorter by wearing hats that would cut it off in the course of their down-droop in back. And I study the line of my throat. A neck is pretty generally becoming—except to the woman with an exceedingly long, narrow face. Square neck for her, and a round line that 'cuts off' the throat should be generally taboo.

"It's a science, isn't it?" laughed Miss Barre. "Why, I believe taste in dress has as many branches and ramifications as the study of singing. But they are both worth while, aren't they?"

And we all agree, don't we, little sisters?

One Woman's :-: Story :-:

By Virginia T. Van de Water.

CHAPTER VII.

PERHAPS Mary Danforth did not acknowledge to herself why it was so hard for her to give her mind to her studies during the evening on which she received Craig's pansies. If she appreciated that the sender of the flowers was in her consciousness more than was the book of civics lying open in the glow of her student's lamp, she did not admit it even in her innermost thoughts. She tried to "concentrate," but her wits wandered, and, time and again, she found, with a guilty start, that for some minutes she had been gazing abstractedly at nothing. It was late when at last she put out her light, urged to this course by her mother, who insisted that she was wearing herself out studying so hard, and that she would be "good for nothing" in the morning.

When Mary awoke on the morrow she was forced to confess the accuracy of the final part of her mother's prediction, for she did feel "good for nothing." Her eyes smarted and her limbs ached as she busied herself with her toilet. A vague feeling of disappointment possessed her, depressing and, at the same time, irritating her, and she went to breakfast with her nerves and temper on edge. She had difficulty in controlling her feelings when Mrs. Danforth, in her desire to promote table talk, innocently introduced the subject of Craig—feeling that he would be an interesting topic of conversation.

Vexed at the Blush.

"I declare," announced the kind-hearted matron, amiably, "I have almost fallen in love myself with that tall Texan. He has such beautiful manners and is so considerate of elderly people. Don't you think he is delightful?"

As this remark was addressed to the table at large, Mary, vexed at the blush which she felt creeping to her forehead, busied herself with her grapefruit and made no reply.

"Don't you like him, daughter?" persisted her mother.

"I think that he's a presentable man, mother, if that's what you mean," responded the girl tartly and with tightening lips. "You can hardly expect me to say, as you just said, that I am 'almost in love with him myself,' can you?"

The words were sharp and the tone harsh. The speaker suddenly appreciated that this was the second time within a few days that she had been impatient with her mother. As before, she regretted her show of temper when she saw the wounded expression in her mother's eyes. She noted also that her father was looking at her in amazement.

"I did not mean to speak like that, mother," she said quickly and penitently. She pushed her chair back from the table and, going around to the elderly woman, laid her own flushed cheek against the wrinkled one. "I had no business to be so cross, and I am very sorry. I am as nervous as a cat this morning. Please forgive me."

Mrs. Danforth patted her daughter's hand, her face all smiles in an instant.

"That's all right, my darling," she soothed. "We all have our cranky spells. Now eat your breakfast, for it is getting late. I shall be glad when this dreadful grind is over and you have graduated," she added, with a sigh. "You are not like your dear self these days, and it is because you are overwrought and overtired."

Mary made no protest. She wondered secretly if the strain of work was entirely responsible for her vague sense of discontent and uncertainty. Breakfast over, she hurried to her room to collect her books, and, as she returned to the hall, ready to leave the house, she came upon her father. He was leaning against the wall, his hand to his head. His face was pale and his brow contracted as if he were suffering.

"Father!" exclaimed the girl in alarm, "what is the matter?"

"Nothing to worry about, pet," he insisted. "I was just a little dizzy and headachy for a minute. I'm better now. Don't look so frightened!"

"Dad," said Mary, anxiously, "you are not well. You've been overworking."

"Oh, I guess not," he replied with an attempt at raillery. "An old codger like me must expect such feelings this warm weather, that's all—but I find it hard to remember that I'm getting old."

"Won't you see a doctor?" urged Mary.

Mary Gets a Shock.

"Pshaw!" he laughed. "I'm all right, I tell you! Don't mention this little turn to your mother, for she makes a mountain of a molehill when I don't feel up to the scratch."

On the way to school Mary thought of her father with some perturbation but the hurry and bustle of the day's work drove all other worries from her brain and she had forgotten the little episode by the time she boarded the subway train in the evening. She watched the express on which she rode draw away from a local train. As the lighted windows slid slowly backward she thought of how she had first seen Gordon Craig under circumstances like these. It was like a story book romance, and he looked not unlike a book hero, she said to herself with a contemptuous smile at her own silliness.

Her thoughts were still busy with him as she walked along toward her home. When she turned into her own street, several leather-lunged men, carrying bundles of papers, were shouting "Extra" at the other end of the block in the hollow, reverberating tones of the New York disaster harbinger. Still dreaming, she paid little heed to them, but went up to her apartment, her mind on the man she had known for such a little while. Strange, she mused, that he should have impressed her so strongly. Her father was standing in the drawing room as she entered her home. A glance at his face brought her to a comprehension of the news venders' cries as they were borne now to her ears through the open windows.

"Terrible accident on the Bosting Express!" they were shouting.

Blindly the girl stretched her hands to her father as he came toward her.

"Dad," she asked hoarsely, "was that——"

She got no further, for her father put his arm quickly about her and drew her to him.

"Yes, little girl," he said, tremulously, "the Boston Express—Craig's train—has been wrecked, and, God help us! most of the Pullman passengers are dead!"

TO-DAY'S INSTALLMENT.

Rusty raised his head and timidly put it out around the angle of the fireplace, where he had taken refuge.

"Wha is he?" he asked huskily.

His master straightened up, put the revolver back in its holster and pointed grimly to the trap.

"Water and a long drop," he said quietly. "There's another of the Duke's men gone."

Rusty got shakily to his feet. "I knowed them battleship boogies was spooks," he observed dolefully. The plural suggested something to Jarvis. He motioned Rusty to stay back, and, picking up the sword, advanced on the second figure. He made two or three feints to strike and got no response. Then he gave it a powerful push with the point. The armor toppled over and fell down the stairs with a hollow clash. It was empty.

"I guess he's harmless."

Rusty immediately began gathering up the pieces.

"I'll fix dis one so he won't jump no mo'!" he declared, savagely.

"What are you going to do?"

"I'm gonna sink this other battleship!"

"Hold on—wait a minute. I reckon we can use that," said Jarvis, smiling a little. "It takes a thief to catch a thief, they say. We'll just out-spook Mr. Ghost. Come on, Rusty," he went on impatiently, holding up the breastplate and back-piece like an undershirt, "get into this hardware as fast as you can."

Rusty drew back with violent headshakings.

"Marse Warren, I don' wanna be no spook."

"Listen!" commanded his master, sharply. "Somebody was working in this room. It's a cinch that the treasure is here and it's a bigger cinch he'll come back to get it when we are gone."

"You ain't gonna leave me heah alone!" protested the old darkey.

The Plan.

"Sure! I'm going to put you in this so you can watch. I'm going t make a bluff that we're both gone. You'll be as safe as a church in this. No one would ever think of looking for one of us in this armor. You watch, and when he starts to work—then yell your head off!"

"I'll yell so loud they'll hear me in Kentucky," Rusty assured him, reluctantly permitting himself to be armored.

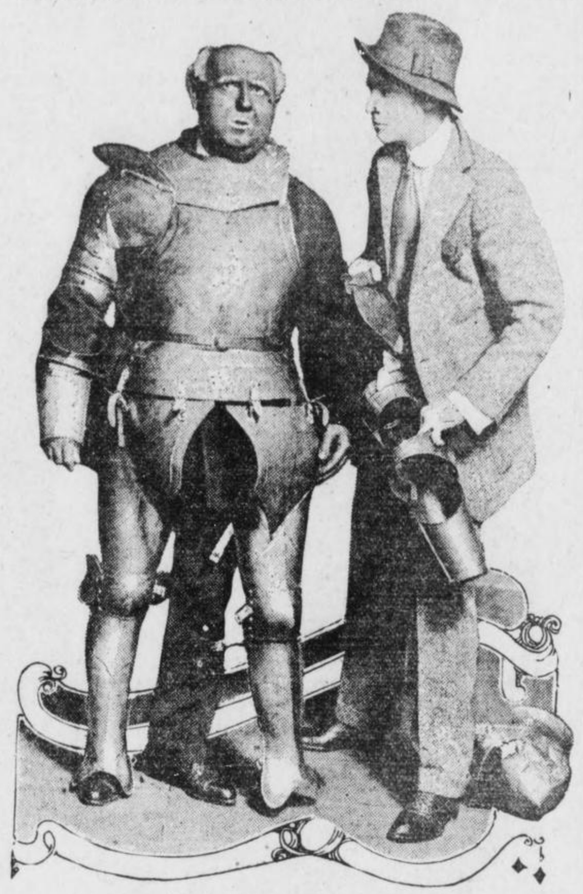
"You give your best yell and then I'll nail him."

Rusty sniffed doubtfully. "If you don't nail him he'll nail me!"

Jarvis grunted and fussed over the armor as the right valiant swashbuckler for whom it was constructed was less generously designed amidships than the rotund darky.

"Marse Warren," remarked Rusty, presently, "you mus' think a heap o' Miss Princess to go prowlin' and prowlin' 'roun' in dis boogy house in de dark."

"What makes you think that?" mumbled Jarvis, toiling with a rusty clasp.



"Get into this hardware as fast as you can."

"Marse Warren," said Rusty, solemnly, "I knowed you since you was a baby."

"What's that got to do with it? Pull in your breath a little bit."

"She gin you dat jew'lry you got 'roun' your neck, didn' she? She kind o' crazy 'bout you, too, ain't she?"

"How do you know?" inquired Jarvis, his eagerness concealed by the fact that he was bending over in the rear trying to joint the greaves to Rusty's ponderous calves.

"I knows, all right!" declared Rusty.

"But how do you know? Quit shifting around!"

"We-ell, I'm goin' to tell you, an' then you'll know how I knows. Jus' 'fore them horses jumped on me—when I was waitin' in de road—I heard a winder go up slap! An' dare was de Princess a-lookin' up at de moon, jes' like a picter. Jes' a-lookin' at de moon, an' she says—an' she says—"

"What did she say?" snapped Jarvis.

"'Ah,' she says, a-lookin' at de moon, she says, 'de world am begun all over ag'in fo' me.'"

Good News.

Warren started and was conscious of a singing in his ears that was not all due to the constant bending over required of a squire-at-arms. He held his tongue, knowing a darky's fondness for sentimental gossip, and Rusty went on:

"And den—and den—she go right on an' she says—she says, 'Gawd be with you, my American!'"

A steel thigh-piece slipped through Jarvis' fingers and clattered to the floor.

"An'," concluded Rusty, with invincible logic, "I'se de only American 'roun' heah 'cep' you, Marse Warren."

"God bless you, Rusty!" said his master, fervently, to himself. But aloud he said, holding up the heavy casque:

"Here—put your head in this Stetson. Gloves—here; now! How do you feel?"

Jarvis surveyed him with a grin. Sancho Panza would have looked a courtly and sprightly cavalier by comparison.

"All in," was the glum response from the hollow depths of the helmet. "Do I look like a spook?"

"You're a wonderful sight!" declared his master, heartily. "Now, Rusty, get over here. Where's your sword?"

A cataclysmic sneeze caused the armor to rattle like a junk wagon.

"I never heard a ghost sneeze before," chided his master, reprovingly.

"Marse Warren, I'se catchin' cold," pleaded the knight, in the hope of pardon.

"Nonsense! Now, Rusty, keep your ears and eyes open—don't move a muscle. If anyone comes, yell your head off—but don't sneeze!"

"Marse Warren, I wanna go home!"

"We haven't any home, Rusty," was the sober response, as his master adjusted him on the pedestal. Rusty sighed till the clasps of the armor creaked complaint.

"Marse Warren, I don't evah 'spect to get out o' dis boogy house nohow."

"Well, Rusty, there are some things ——"

Jarvis broke off abruptly and threw back his head, motioning Rusty to be quiet. To his ears came a sound so faint and far-off that it was impossible to decide whether it was a stifled groan near at hand or a call from some distant part of the castle.

Give Her a Chance

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

"I AM 20," writes a young man, "have no bad habits, and for eight months have been in love with a girl of my own age. I have always given her as good a time as my salary would permit. One day I went to her place of employment, opened the door quietly to surprise her, and found her in the arms of a man who is known to have brought dishonor to at least two young girls.

"I have learned since that she has frequently gone to places of amusement with him. When I told her of his true character she admitted it, but said he was a good spender, and, as she was not engaged to me, I had no right to object. I love her with all my heart and would not see any trouble befall her. Should I stand aside and let her pay the price?"

No! That would be wrong were you only friends, and an unpardonable crime since you love her.

She pleads that she is not engaged to you, and you have no right to object. Seek an engagement, and give yourself the right!

The girl is going headlong to ruin, and a diverted interest may save her. She is not wicked; she is foolish. She is concerned only for the good times the present may bring. Make her, by the power of your love, see that there are better times in the future. Give her the interest that every girl longs for—the hopes, the dreams, the all-enveloping satisfaction with one's self and life that center around an engagement ring.

A Suggestion.

Induce her to change her place of employment; you surely have women friends whose amusements are unquestionable and whose influence is for good. See that they make her acquaintance, and that she is thrown in with them. Teach her the difference between the real and the shadowy. Never find fault with what she has done, or moralize on the degradation from which you hope to save her.

Treat her as if you trusted her. Appeal to her higher nature always, letting her see that you know she is too good to do the things other foolish girls do, and for whom life is never so long that they get through the paying.

Always keep in her mind the little home you are building for her, and when you take her through the air-castle of your dreams explain its needs and your means as if you were talking to an intelligent being. This will give her a sympathetic understanding of the limitations of your income, and the knowledge that you are saving for her will check any envious sighs for other men who are greater spenders, and cause her to insist on a greater economy than even you had advocated.

Try it! Every good woman is using her influence to redeem some man. If this were not so, humanity would retrograde instead of progress. With all these centuries of obligation heaped upon him, every man personally owes to every weak and willful woman all the influence and strength he can muster to save her.

The Best Way. 4

The strongest influence for a woman's good is that which appeals through the heart. All sighing for vanities of dress, position and person is stifled when she loves. Vanity is a stage of silliness that her heart sooner than her head helps her to outgrow.

If this girl loves you, it will not be impossible to rescue her. But, if she loves you or not, if she assents to an engagement or not, does not lessen your responsibility concerning her. If she will not heed you, and you know you are right concerning this man's dishonorable intentions, you owe it to all womankind to inform the girl's parents of what she is doing.

Help them build the protecting rail at the top of the cliff. That will show a greater Christianity than being content with contributing money or means to an amoulance to be stationed at its base.

BACKACHE A SYMPTOM

Of More Serious Illness Approaching. Mrs. Bender's Case.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Read about Mrs. Bender's experience:

St. James, Mo.—"About a year ago I was irregular, had cramps every month, headache and constant backache. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used the Sanative Wash and I am relieved of all my troubles and am in perfect health. I shall recommend your medicine to all my friends and you may publish this testimonial for the benefit of other suffering women."—Mrs. Anna Bender, St. James, Missouri.

Another Case.

Dixon, Iowa.—"I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for some time and it has done me much good. My back troubled me very much. It seemed weak. I had much pain and I was not as regular as I should have been. The Compound has cured these troubles and I recommend it to all my friends."—Mrs. Bertha Dierksen, Box 102, Dixon, Iowa.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

How to Dance the "Tango-Classique"

Some Rules and Suggestions for the Up-to-Date Whirlers

By LILLIAN LAUFERTY.

THERE are as many rules for dancing as there are successful dancers now before our public—and that number is legion. But the one rule from which we can never get away if we want to really dance is: "Know your subject."

You can no more dance in a finished and attractive manner without all the ingredients that go to make a dance than you can bake a cherry pie without flour and butter and sugar and water and cherries. Learn this rule by heart before you get up at some giddy "The Dansant," and with one eye on a supposedly admiring gallery, whirl in the mazes of a breakneck awkwardness.

Up at the Ziegfeld "Follies of 1913," at the New Amsterdam Theater, in New York, Rose Dolly and Martin Brown are doing a fascinating combination of true "Tango" and modified Turkey Trot, that they call "classique excentrique," and for the benefit of all who have seen them and the other lovers of Terpsichore who have not, they formulated for me a few simple rules for dancing.

"You must keep exactly with the rythm of the music."

"Practice relaxing shoulders, knees and ankles."

Little Rose Dolly is like a scarlet tangoer streaking across a Southern sky—or a dash of her own Hungarian Paprika in a prosaic salad: and Martin Brown is a typical, up-to-date American youth—with the tall, slender, thoroughbred look we are all beginning to strive for. And here is "How they do it."

How to Do It.

"If you are a beginner," said Miss Dolly, "take a clever dancer—or a clever national dance—as your pattern. Study the steps, make up your mind which ones you can imitate, and then practice them one at a time with music to help you and spur you on. Work and work till you can get up and do a step and have it look just like play."

"That is quite right," said Mr. Brown. "Expression when you are doing it. Don't look strained or anxious. Practice a step in private, and work at it so hard that when you do it publicly it will look like play.

"You must keep exactly with the rhythm of the music—keep time, in other words. Follow the music, do steps that you have mastered, and do not do freak steps that don't fit in with your own personality at all. And above all, keep your toes pointed out all the time. No matter how pretty a step is, it does not look attractive if you do it in pigeon-toed fashion." He illustrated—and the same step done with pointing toe and with turned ankle and inpointed toe became a very different movement.

"Toes are very important in dancing," cried Miss Dolly, "although the modern dancer does not have to stand on them like a ballet dancer, she must keep them out and down, and sway gracefully on the ball of the foot and get the habit of keeping the instep and heel raised.

A Good Way to Learn.

"A good way to learn the modern dances is to stand up and just practice relaxing shoulders, elbows, knees and ankles in a sort of gradual shuffle. Do this first standing firmly on your feet, then rise to the balls of the feet and try it again, then take a step or two with the body relaxed and swaying. Do this first without music and in front of a mirror, then add music, and do it again in front of the mirror. And finally do away with the mirror, and just yield as unconsciously as possible to the rythm of the dance. You will be surprised how easily it will come after you have learned to relax.

"Then you must add steps to your ingredients of knowing how to keep time, how to relax and how to express the feeling that music gives you," added Mr. Brown. "Master a quick, little, short step and a long glide, combine them in various ways, add a little ability to kick gracefully—not high necessarily—but with gracefully pointed toe and an appearance of ease—and watch clever dancers for suggestions as to steps. In this way, even without the aid of a teacher, you can learn to be a home-made turkey trotter."

:-: The Practice of Self-Control :-:

By MRS. FRANK LEARNED.
Author of "The Etiquette of New York To-day."

IN any sphere of life self-control is an important element toward success and happiness. Control of mind is a factor toward overcoming the tendency to be oversensitive, suspicious, or tormented by imaginary slights. Moping and brooding over fancied grievances will never achieve peace. Sensitive people, who take offense easily, are very difficult to get on with. We are never sure "where to find them," as the saying is. They are constantly making exactions of their friends, calling them to account for certain delinquencies.

Social life often requires the making of concessions, the common sense not to construe the thoughtlessness of a friend into an intentional slight, or absentmindedness into indifference. Naturally, we feel that something is due between intimate friends, but even in the case of intimates a margin of kindly concession must be made. The fear that one is not receiving sufficient attention from others is an unpleasant form of egotism.

Delay in Calling.

The many demands of social life oblige people not to hold one another too seriously to account for delay in calling, for instance. Among acquaintances delay in calling, or returning calls, need not be taken as an indication of a wish to be exclusive or an intention to be neglectful. Allowances have to be made for the failings of others on this score. When an acquaintance calls after a lengthy delay it is an important courtesy to welcome her cordially, not to allude to any misunderstanding, to hasten to accept, in the kindest spirit, any explanation which may be offered, not to dwell on the subject but pass on to other matters and to do this without permitting the shadow of a suggestion that she has been dilatory. It is wise for the person making a delayed call not to be too profuse in excuses.

Many reasons for delayed calls may be considered by the sensible person who is willing to make concessions toward friends. Absence from home, illness, engagements, various home duties, interests in charitable or other work very absorbing to one's time may be among the causes for delay. The wish to have some leisure to pursue personal tastes may be another reason.

Control of Temper.

While the casting out of fretful grievances is of importance in daily life, control of temper is a rule of life to be practiced by every well-bred person. It is well not to get too excited and to remember to close a door gently. "I never knew anyone who went about banging doors and playing whirlwind to possess any influence whatever," said a wise woman.

The practice of self-control and composure will have an immense effect on one's own manners and will be sure to make a pleasing impression everywhere. To sit quietly, to keep the hands still, to walk calmly, these little things lend a charm to the person who has acquired them.

It is salutary to take stock of ourselves and recognize our own shortcomings and try to remedy them. It is good to get out of ourselves, to stop being self-centered, to give up talking of ourselves and our grievances and to live in the sunshine of cheerfulness and the breeze of larger interests.

:-: Helping Jimmy :-:

Today's Short Story---Complete

"I SAW Jimmy this morning," I mentionel casually.

"Yes?" answered Mrs. Veralour.

"Yes. I think we shall have to take to calling him James. The hand of time seems to have given him a sudden, fearful blow. He looked as if he had seen trouble through a microscope. Has anybody left him money, do you know?"

"Money? Good gracious, no!"

"Poor old chap. Then he must have lost his little all."

"What do you mean?" demanded Mrs. Veralour, tapping her foot impatiently. "Why must it be one or the other?"

"Well," I said, "anybody could see it was money trouble of some sort. He had the appearance of being a pauper trying to look like a millionaire, or else a millionaire disguised as a pauper. His clothes have aged frightfully during the last few days. In fact, you could hardly call them clothes; they were merely emblems of civilization."

Mrs. Veralour seemed about to speak, and then, changing her mind, put her hand in front of her mouth and converted her remark into a yawn.

"Or else it is love," I murmured, gazing dreamily into the fire.

Mrs. Veralour said nothing. Taking a cigarette from the box, she tapped it uncertainly on the back of her hand.

"Of course," she said at last, with somewhat superfluous frankness, "I—I make mistakes sometimes. You know Florence Appleton, don't you? Jimmy was frightfully gone on her. He used to come round here every afternoon and tell me how much he loved her."

"What a ridiculous thing to do. It would have been considerably more sensible for him to have gone round and told the girl how much he loved you."

Very Extraordinary.

"What?" ejaculated Mrs. Veralour, with a laugh that was nearly a shriek. "Mr. Blake, what an extraordinary thing to say."

"Well," I said, "isn't the next best thing to telling a girl you love her to tell her you don't? Especially a girl so sought after as Florence Appleton. She'd immediately begin to wonder what was the matter with him."

"M'yes," said Mrs. Veralour, "I suppose she is inclined to think that every man is in love with her; but then she's got such hordes of admirers it's really not the girl's fault."

"No," I agreed, "it's not her fault, it's her forune."

"Misfortune?" murmured Mrs. Veralour, who never by any chance listens to what I say, "well, I don't know about that. Still, as I was saying, Jimmy used to come round and tell me all about it, and I promised to help him."

"Mrs. Veralour," I said, indignantly, "you're always match-making. It's abominable. You don't deserve to be a widow."

"I promised to help him," repeated Mrs. Veralour, firmly, deaf to my remark. "He wanted rather a lot of helping," she added, reflectively; "he was so awfully shy. Fancy a man being shy."

"Why not? Somebody's got to be. What did you do? I suppose you praised him up to the skies to her."

Mrs. Veralour looked at me with an air of mild amusement.

"My dear Mr. Blake. Is your grandmother still alive?"

"Eh? Yes. Why?"

"Oh, I was only wondering where you got all your old-fashioned ideas from. Of course, I didn't praise him I ran him down. I used to go round and tell her most frightful stories of him. I warned her against him. Once you warn a girl against a man, you've wasted your time. It's like putting a 'dangerous' notice up on a sheet of ice; everybody goes to see why it was put there."

The Only Way.

"Oh," I said, weakly, "I have had many a ducking myself."

"The best reputation a man can have," she pursued, "is not to have one. The worst of it is Jimmy wouldn't live down to his reputation."

"That must be very disheartening," I said, sympathetically, "when you're doing your worst for a man."

"Yes, it was. Really, I think it was her money he was afraid of."

"Coward."

"M'yes. Still, I suppose it is humiliating for a rich girl to tell you she can never be a poor man's wife. However, I got him at last to promise that he would propose if I contrived a good opportunity for him."

She paused for a reflective moment.

"You know the summer house in the garden, don't you?"

"I do," I said, "and you know I do."

"Yes, you do, don't you," she smiled. I had a spring lock fixed on that door. You know, one of those that you can only open from the outside."

"I know. I begin to see the end of this story."

"M'm," she said. "That's the worst of being so bright—nothing comes as a surprise. Well, after I'd had the lock put on I invited them both round to lunch. Of course, I asked a lot of other people, so as not to arouse her suspicions. They all came; one or two girls and a lot of men—most of her horde, in fact. After lunch we all went out on the lawn."

"Do get on, Mrs. Veralour; you're like a writer on space rates. There are some things one takes for granted."

"I'd told Jimmy what he'd got to do."

"Get the girl in the summer house, and then you'd come along and snap the door on them?"

"Yes. Don't you think being locked in a summer house together was a good opportunity?"

"I think so. He could lead up to a proposal by saying how he wished they could never get out again. That's what you meant, isn't it?"

"Yes; only nothing quite so silly as that. I was going to give them half an hour to themselves, but after about ten minutes all the men commenced to drift away in search of her, and I was afraid they'd take her away from poor Jimmy. So I hurried along to the summer house at once."

"Go on," I urged. "Quicken the action."

"I listened for a minute to make sure they were really in there; as soon as I heard her voice I gave the door a push."

"Congratulations. A tip-top scheme, jolly well carried out."

"Well, I do think so," asserted Mrs. Veralour, in a tone curiously defensive. I—I still think so."

"Why, of course. You don't mean to say, when you opened the door later on, they weren't engaged?"

"Oh, no; they were engaged all right."

"Good," I paused for a moment, struck by a sudden thought. "But look here, what was old Jimmy looking so absolutely wretched about when I saw him this morning?"

Mrs. Veralour hesitated, and then pulled herself together.

"It wasn't he in the summer house with her, after all," she said.

"Darling," she murmured, as she nestled against his shoulder, "do you know that horried people are saying that you are marrying me for my money?"

He leaped to his feet. "The miserable creatures!" he roared. "I won't stand it! Tell me who they are, and I'll horewhip them! I'll——"

"But, my dear," she objected, "you would create scandal, and the case would be made horribly public in the papers, and then I really could not marry you."

"What, then," he muttered, hopelessly, "can be done?"

"Darling, it is easy,' she replied. "I will make over my fortune to my brothers and sisters, and everybody shall know of it. Then no one shall be able to make horrible accusations against you."

But then he drew himself up proudly. His manliness had won a moral victory.

"Nay, Araminta!" he exclaimed. "Do not put thy sweet self to any trouble. Anthrobald Binks is proof against every slanderer!"

Ten Commandments of the Summer Visitor

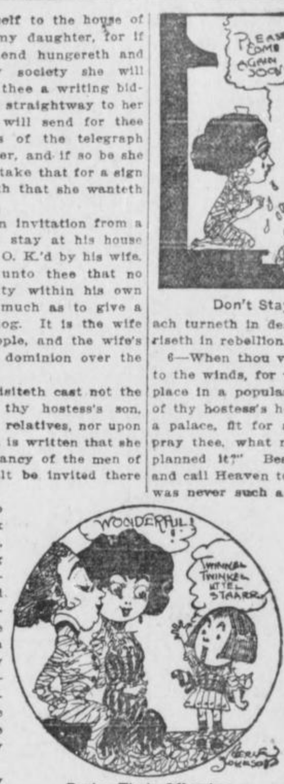
By DOROTHY DIX.

INVITE not thyself to the house of another, oh, my daughter, for if so be thy friend hungereth and thirsteth for thy society she will arise and send to thee a writing bidding thee to come straightway to her abode. Yea, she will send for thee swiftly by means of the telegraph and the night letter, and if so be she holdeth her hand, take that for a sign which never faileth that she wanteth thee not.

2—Accept not an invitation from a man to tarry and stay at his house until it hath been O. K.'d by his wife, for verily I say unto thee that no man hath authority within his own home, no, not so much as to give a bone to a stray dog. It is the wife and the wife's people, and the wife's friends who have dominion over the spare bedroom.

3—When thou visiteth cast not the goo-goo eyes at thy hostess's son, nor upon her male relatives, nor upon her husband, for it is written that she that snareth the fancy of the men of the household shalt be invited there no more.

4—Forget not to take in thy trunk thy curling iron, and thy sewing tools, and thy postage stamps, and thy script for letters, and all the things of which thou hast daily need, for a borrower is an abomination and worse than the pestilence that destroyeth by night.



Don't Stay Too Long.

5—Incline thy heart unto the amusements that hath been prepared for thee, and make thy countenance mirthful, though thy soul fainteth within thee when thy hostess sayeth, 'Rejoice and be glad, for to-day we go forth to picnic in the woods, and to partake of squashed lemon pie flavored with ants." Likewise dissemble thy sorrow when she trotteth thee to the church sociable, or naileth thee to the card table until thy stomach turneth in desapir and thy gorge riseth in rebellion.

Praise Their Offspring.

6—When thou visiteth cast veracity to the winds, for verily truth hath no place in a popular house guest. Say of thy hostess's house, "Truly, this is a palace, fit for a king. Tell me, I pray thee, what marvellous acchitect planned it?" Beat upon thy breast and call Heaven to witness that there was never such a view, though it be but as the view of a fly that is caught under a teacup. Praise the beauty and the wit and the way the offspring of thy hostess reciteth, and when thou departeth thy hostess shall say of thee, "Surely, here is a woman of discernment, and I will bid her return again."

7—Conform thy ways to the ways of the house that thou visiteth. Arise while it is yet night, if it be the custom of thy hosts, so that thou shalt breakfast with them, and give no trouble to the servants, for, behold, a hand-maiden in the suburbs is as precious as gold, yea, as fine gold, and as difficult to keep.

8—If thou followeth a diet and eateth of strange food prepared after an ungodly manner, visit not at all, but hie thee to an inn where thou canst pay for the trouble thou givest. Thus shalt thou save thyself from being hated by thy friends.

9—Forget not to tip the handmaiden who watteth upon thee, for the button-her-up-in-the-back is worthy of her hire.

10—And if thou forgettest all of the other commandments of the Summer visitor, remember this, oh, my daughter: Make thy visit short. Tarry not long in thy friend's house lest she be weary of thee. Go while yet she entreateth thee to stay with her, for it is better that thy hostess should weep because thou goest than to shed tears because thou stayest.

Selah!

Invite Not Thyself.

Saving His Face

At a very convivial dinner a man with a preternaturally solemn face arose, wine glass in hand, to propose a toast.

"May we never," he said, in deep, measured tones, "drink any more of this stuff—"

He paused, and there was a horrified silence for several seconds—"than is good for us!"

6 THE ATLANTA GEORGIAN AND NEWS.

MIKE FINN WILL REMAIN AT HELM OF MOBILE CREW

MOBILE, July 23.—Mike Finn will remain as manager of the Mobile Baseball Club.

Such was the announcement of President Alfred Staples following a meeting of the directors of the Mobile club. "The trouble has been adjusted satisfactorily to everybody concerned," he said, "and Mr. Finn remains as manager of the club."

Further than the announcement that "matters has been settled satisfactorily to all concerned," President Staples would not go into the case, but from a reliable source, it is understood that Mike Desmond, employed at the ball park in the capacity of special officer, had tendered his resignation. It is understood that he took his action, following Manager Finn's statement that he would resign, rather than cause the club officials any embarrassment.

Manager Finn would not discuss the outcome of the case when seen, but stated that only one thing in connection with the entire affair had caused him any regret, and that was the statement that he had "insulted the Hibernians." The Gull leader denied that he ever offered offense to the Hibernians of any other organization of any kind in Mobile, and states that he has never made any remark that could be construed as an insult to any organization.

"Mike, you're too good an Irishman, yourself, to talk about the Hibernians; are you not?" he was asked.

"Sure," he responded, "and to tell the truth, I've made up my mind to join the Hibernians."

The announcement that Mike Finn will remain at the head of the club means that the players will hustle as they have in the past to keep the club in the running, and no one was more pleased when definite announcement was made that he would stay than the players now working for the Mobile club under him.

BOXERS CLAMOR FOR CHANCE AT RITCHIE'S TITLE

LOS ANGELES, July 24.—And still they come! With enough boxers here to stage a carnival of fistic revels lasting until Christmas and managers and promoters clamoring over each others shoulders for a chance at a date and a trunk full of coin it appears that the end is not yet.

Joe Woodman is clamoring for dates for his two proteges, Sam Langford and Jack Read, the Australian lightweight chamuion, and bids fair to make a landing.

Ad Wolgast also wants to be remembered. He is right on the ground to press his claim with Champion Willie Ritchie for an early match. He figures that since Rivers lost out in his match on July 4 he is in direct line for another match in preference to the Mexican and probably his bout at the Vernon arena would be a good card.

ANOTHER challenger of Ritchie is Jimmy Duffy, whose record during the past year certainly gives him some right to consideration. His manager, Bert Finch, writes that Duffy is willing to meet any lightweight in the country with an expressed preference for Ritchie, Freddie Welch, Leach Cross or Joe Rivers.

Finch says that if Ritchie will concede Duffy a match for the championship he will post $5,000 as a side bet that Duffy will defeat him in twenty rounds and that he can fix the terms for the division of the purpose to suit himself.

In May of last year Duffy fought a ten-round bout to a draw with Freddie Welch and has defeated Leach Cross twice, once in New York and once in Buffalo.

* * *

"DUMB DAN" MORGAN, the "speechless" wonder from New York, has issued a statement offering to match Jack Britton with Champion Ritchie for a side bet of $10,000. There is no mention made in the letter of whether it is ten thousand cigars or toothpicks. He says this would be a real test for the champion and that Britton will box at any weight that suits the "champion."

Crackers in Real Test To-day

Pennant May Hang on Series

By O. B. Keeler.

NOW is the time to get out old friend Crucial Series and furbish him up for active duty the next three days—beginning today. Also, it is up to the Crackers, like the noble Romans getting an earful of M. Antony's oratory, that those who have base hits prepare to shed them now.

In other words, this is the well-known Critical Juncture, the Tide in the Affairs of Men, and (as set forth in the preamble) the Crucial Series.

There is no particular advantage to be gained by holding a post mortem in advance. It may be stated briefly that if the Crackers lose three straight games to the Billikens, the 1913 bunting will be in grave danger of wasting its fragrance on the desert air surrounding Montgomery, Ala.

If the Smithies win three, with the long home series in prospect, chances will be bright for fireworks at Ponce DeLeon.

A split series, with the Town Boys on the heavy end, will make things look the same way, only not so much so. And if the Billies get the odd game, our noble lads will have some Horatious-at-the-Viaduct work cut out for them the rest of the way.

Here's hoping!

GILBERT PRICE'S little vacation didn't last long. He was ordered by Manager Billy Smith to start from Atlanta this morning to join the club at Montgomery, where he probably will work in the Saturday game.

Price said yesterday he couldn't figure out why he drew the suspension that became effective after his poor start against the Turtles in the opening contest of the recent series.

"I just got bumped—that's all," said Gilbert. "That will happen to anybody once in a while; sometimes oftener."

WITH a dozen games, more or less, dividing the Senators from the Athletics in the American League handicap, Walter Johnson, some Big Smoke, comes to bat with the offer to pitch half the remaining games for the Griffmen, beginning September 1, with this little stipulation:

"If Griffith thinks at that time we are close enough to the Athletics to make a fight for the pennant."

That's the point, by the way.

Walter goes on to remark that if Radbourne could do things like pitching every other day, so can he. And he adds that the slabmen who work in the meantime should be instructed to pitch their arms off every time they start.

It would be interesting to see Walter and the large and sciatillant Mr. Boehling taking it turn about on the slab—and if the Athletics slump far from their dozen-game lead, we may have a chance to see that very thing.

AND Mordecai Brown just went in for the lowly Reds and saved both ends of a double bill with the Braves, shutting off a savage rally in the last inning of each game. Calls up memories of other days—what? You know.

LINES TO AN EX-CUB.

It may not be the same old Brown
That used to wallop Matty so;
The passing years have dimmed renown
That sparkled in the Long Ago.
But when the Final Pinch is there,
That three-clawed Cub's the same old Bear!

It's not the Cubs he's fighting for—
The Reds could never look the same;
He lacks the grim and bracing roar
That tuned his whip in every game.
But in the pinches—have a care—
That three-clawed Cub's the same old Bear!

J. PLUV WALKS ARM-IN-ARM WITH J. PRINCE

JACK PRINCE really gets sore when he is called "the Rainmaker."

But being well armed with a pair of perfectly good legs, we dare him to come forth for battle, and so here goes:

Jack Prince, you are a regular rainmaker!

For the second time in as many days the races carded for the Motordrome have been called off on account of rain. And to make sure that they will have plenty of time to get Jack out of town, the other backers in the saucer have decided that the next set of races will not be held until Friday night.

They want all of to-day to get Jack out of the city. And they guarantee that Prince will not be within fifty miles of here by sunrise to-morrow.

And with that promise, the local bugs may be assured that the big Marathon grind will come off to-morrow night. Also a number of other events that should prove corkers.

To-day all of the riders intend tuning up their machines a bit more. To-morrow night the record for the 86 miles, 385 yards is very likely to get an awful kick in the slats.

ATTELL COMES TO LIFE.

NEW YORK, July 24.—Abe Attell will be seen in action again to-night at Rockaway, where he will clash with Willie Beecher, the New York lightweight, for a ten-round bout.

Report That Cobb Is Slated for Chicago

CHICAGO, July 24.—Just before the White Sox pulled out for their Eastern invasion a report gained circulation to the effect that Ty Cobb, Tiger star, is to become a member of the South Side crew.

To get him, all this according to the report, Owner Comiskey must give up Pitcher "Red" Russell, Outfielder Chappelle, for whom Comiskey recently paid $18,000, and a catcher.

It has been known for several months that Cobb has been anxious to break away from the Tiger band, but this is the first time that an offer was made for him.

LARNED-WRIGHT WIN FROM JOHNSON-WHITNEY

BOSTON, July 24.—W. A. Larned and B. C. Wright, veteran tennis masters, worked their way into the fourth round of the Eastern doubles championship at the Longwood Cricket Club's courts yesterday by disposing of H. C. Johnson and E. H. Whitney, of Boston, in four sets. The scores were 6-3, 6-3, 2-6, 6-2.

Other matches in the doubles and singles were without striking features. The all-comers' tournament for the Longwood singles was advanced to the fourth round.

MARIST GIVES UP ATHLETICS; JOE BEAN OUT

MARIST College, known as the greatest athletic prep school south of the Mason and Dixon line, has decided to give up sports.

No, don't pinch yourself. You're not asleep. It is the real cold truth.

The school has decided that it can not afford athletics, yet the very one thing that has "made" it has been athletics.

Every schoolboy in Georgia knows Marist because of its ability to win in athletics. It has been the ambition of every youngster in the State to attend the foundry of learning on Ivy street.

Joe Bean made the announcement this morning that he had been discharged. Said Joseph:

"Father Rapier called me in and told me that my services were no longer needed. I nearly strangled to death from the shock. But Father Rapier says that the school can not afford to dally in athletics any more."

Marist is no longer on the athletic map.

But one J. Bean IS. He is going to make a corking instructor for one of these other prep schools. Already he has received two offers, and will probably close for one of them within the next week or ten days.

PROMOTER LOST MONEY STAGING RITCHIE FIGHT

By W. W. Naughton.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., July 24.—Lightweight Champion Willie Ritchie is quite willing to risk his laurels again. He says he is not particular against whom he is sent, so long as the price is right.

Ritchie is not naming the sum he thinks should be paid. He wants each of the promoters to make a bid, and he will accept the highest offer made.

It is no use mentioning "percentage" to the champion. He has thrashed it all out, and has discovered that flat offers are the best.

One of the charges Billy Nolan made against the champion was that Ritchie was "money mad." Nolan meant, of course, that money occupied Ritchie's thoughts to the exclusion of other things. There is nothing about Ritchie's actions when money is in question to suggest that his mind is unbalanced.

Having received something like $18,000 from Promoter Graney for the fight on July 4, Ritchie will probably expect as much or more when he boxes again. And the chances are very much against his getting it.

The fight between Ritchie and Rivers drew something more than $29,000. As "houses" go nowadays, it was a mighty good clean-up. But not for Graney, for if he broke even he is lucky.

Ritchie Received $18,000.

It is easily enough reckoned if Ritchie got $18,000, Rivers $7,000 and it cost $1,500 to hire Coffroth's arena, Graney had little more than $2,500 to meet all the expenses of advertising and help, and the chances are he had to dig down into his jeans.

It is an object lesson for fight promoters and for such as think there is money in handling affairs of that kind. Graney worked like a beaver and used every influence he could command to advertise his show.

And when it came off the boxers received nearly 90 per cent of the takings, and the promoter found himself on the wrong side of the ledger.

This is a matter that will have to be regulated, although it is not easy to see how it will be done. As matters stand, all a champion or near champion has to do is set the promoters bidding against one another, as Ritchie is doing right now, and prices will go soaring.

"What was I to do?" said Graney. "If I had not given Ritchie what he asked some one else would have given it to him."

Graney Has Good Lesson.

Probably, now that it's all over, Graney wishes he had not stood in the way of some other promoter. Of course, Graney will be chary of offering big money to Ritchie again, and this means that there will be one fool less among the promoters.

It looks, indeed, as if this theory of paying the fighters more than they are worth—and more than they draw—will only stop when each and every promoter in the country has had his fingers burned.

Jim Flynn Gets Chance at Title
Gunboat Smith Is His Opponent

By Ed W. Smith.

IT takes a good bit of managerial skill to boost Jim Flynn, of Pueblo, up from the depths into which he had been forced through successive defeats into a real match for a real belt which is to be emblematic of the heavyweight championship of the boxing world. That skill has been shown by one J. Curley, Flynn's manager, and the Pueblo man is to get his second chance to win a title—or is it the fourth or fifth?—in a bout in New York early next month when he faces Gunboat Smith, of Philadelphia and San Francisco. And the winner will be given a belt to replace the one that went out of commission when Luther McCarty died in Alberta the latter part of May.

* * *

FLYNN'S peculiar position in the boxing world is brought to mind now and then by a dispatch from Missouri telling of the progress the boxer is making in his automobile trip from Pueblo to New York. The other day the wires bore the news that Jim had been pinched in a small town for speeding, after having had his machine repaired. Flynn ever has been a thorn in the side of the aspirants for the white title, but unfortunately for the hardy fellow from the mountains he always has just failed of getting there. Jim is a trifle too small, in the general opinion of the critics, or rather he is too short to cope successfully with the tall men of the heavyweight division.

* * *

IF many of the fight fans do not like Jim for his brash ways and the overabundance of ego that he displays constantly, they nevertheless must admire the man for his sterling fighting qualities. Gameness is Jim's middle name, and he has proved in the last four or five years to be the grandest little trial horse the ring ever has known. As a matter of fact, a man never would be thoroughly tried in the ring until he had met Jim in a real encounter. If he could get by the Pueblo ringster, his future would be pretty well assured.

* * *

AS a matter of cold fact, it was never demonstrated that the late Luther McCarty was a real fighter until he had sent Jim into a crushing defeat. Then we all knew that Luther was the real thing, a demonstration that the poor fellow strengthened a short time later by whaling the stuffin' out of Al Palzer, one of the behemoths of the ring. Flynn got his chance at McCarty out on the coast after he had demonstrated that he couldn't do much with Jack Johnson, and figured that if he had whipped Luther he would have had little trouble with Palzer, who was sent in against the winner. But McCarty proved far too big and strong and lengthy in the reach for the squatty Flynn.

* * *

IN Gunboat Smith, Flynn will meet a man much more to his own measurements, though the Gunboat is a long, rangy chap. But he hasn't the weight that most of Flynn's opponents have possessed, and for that reason Flynn believes he has a royal chance of being returned the winner. The heavyweight class is a mysteriously weak division just now, and almost anybody has a chance of dragging down the honors.

* * *

OUT in Los Angeles, where Flynn has done some of his best fighting, they like him. As a matter of fact, they like the rough, tough fellow pretty much out there without losing sight of and giving free credit for his cleverness and skill. Both Battling Nelson and Ad Wolgast, former lightweight champions, were great favorites there. So were George Memsic, Rudy Unholz, Frankie Conley, Charley Dalton, Bud Anderson and other strong boys of the ring. They like the puncher out in Tom McCarey's town, and haven't a great deal of use for the fancy boxer.

WHY PITCHERS DIE YOUNG.

"That guy is there!" the rooter cried who lingered at my side,
While Old Gil Price was going well and many a batsman died.
"That guy is there!" the rooter cried and rent the summer air,
And as another man went out he yelled: "That guy is there!"

A youth came up and smote the ball unto a distant spot.
Another youth came up and made another swat,
And when another youth came up and made another clout
The gent who sat beside me rose and hollered: "Take him out!"

Oh, would I were a hunter on the trail of ivory!
I would not hunt where elephants are roaming o'er the lea,
But I would buy a grand stand seat and take my gun in hand,
For there are tons of ivory in every baseball stand.

Ban Johnson refuses to allow Messrs. Altrock and Schaefer to work their funny stuff while games are in progress, possibly on the theory that the players perpetrate enough comic stuff under the guise of baseball.

While Jack Knight has taken a fearful slump, we are forced to admit that he was a Knight for a day. Wretch! Don't you dare to strike muh!

As we diagnose it, Heine Zimmerman has the artistic temperament in his ankle.

Fuzzy Woodruff avers that Carl Morris is underrated, thereby establishing a reputation as the World's Greatest Kidder.

Walter Thornton, who was hit on the head while earning money for a baseball magnate, is now in a padded cell. You have noticed the rush of magnates to his assistance, have you not?

It is reported that Jack Coombs will be ready for work by August. Connie Mack is preparing to sing that popular ballad entitled, "Good-by, Everybody."

J. Evers evidently labors under the impression that it is impossible to manage a ball team with R. Bresnahan trying to run it from one end and C. Murphy trying to run it from the other. The heluvitis, he can't bench C. Murphy.

THE GREATEST PLAY I EVER SAW.

It was in the eighth inning. The Gulls were one run ahead, but Hogg had begun to wabble, and the bases were filled with one out. Tommy Long stepped to the plate, fouled off two and watched three wide ones go by. The next one was low, on the inside, and Long pulled a terrific drive toward right. Robertson started the moment the ball was hit, and a youth with a large basket on his arm stepped in front of me and remarked: "Peanuts! Five a bag!"

M'DONALD DEFEATS TAYLOR FOR CYCLE CHAMPIONSHIP

NEWARK, N. J., July 24.—Donald McDonald, the New York Athletic Club cycle crack, clinched the National Amateur championship when he defeated Aubrey Taylor, amateur champion of Australia, in the one mile race at the Velodrome here last night. Thorwald Ellegaard, the Danish rider and winner of six world's championships, was sent down to defeat by Jackie Clark, the speedy Australian, in two straight heats of a special one mile match race.

Clarke Opens Against Billikens
Smith Orders Price to Join Club

By Joe Agler.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., July 24.—Unless Billy Smith changes his mind at the last moment those cocky Billikens will have Clarke shooting at them from the offside in the opening game of the series this afternoon. Chapman will catch.

The boys hooked the rattler out of Memphis last night, feeling pretty blue at losing the odd game to the Turtles, especially as the Billies were winning at the same time. But they packed their fighting togs and took them along, and they know one thing for certain—the Billies can't win game for game with the Crackers on this series, at least. Somebody is going to lose. And this bunch won't believe it will be the Crackers.

HARRELL was lucky yesterday in the first five innings, or we should have piled up some runs. At that, there is no accounting for the way Thompson exploded in the last two rounds. It was just one of those things that happen to the best pitchers once in awhile. And when we take a beating it might as well be a good one.

Clarke looks to me like a first-class pitcher in every way. He has everything a good pitcher needs, and after getting used to the going in this league he is bound to win a lot of ball games.

* * *

I UNDERSTAND Price has been ordered to rejoin us in Montgomery, although Billy hasn't said so outright. I hope that is the case, as he will come in mighty handy in the series, the way I see it.

POP-POPS IN RECORD RACE; 149 MILES IN TWO HOURS

NEW YORK, July 4.—Arthur Chappelle and Paul Ohne, of New York, established a new world's record for the two-hour motorcycle race when they captured the championship team race at the Brighton Beach Motordrome last night. The pair covered 149 miles and 1 lap. The former mark was 141 miles, made on the same track by Lockner and Shields last year.

Ray Veditz, of Philadelphia, and George Mercier, of New York, were second, with 146 miles and 2 laps, while Bert Sayer, of Newport, and George Sperl, of Brooklyn, rode third, with 144 miles and 2 laps. Charles Davis and Bert Fisher, the Brooklyn team, finished fourth, with 144 miles and 1 lap.

EVANS AND ALLIS TIE IN WESTERN TOURNEY TO-DAY

CHICAGO, July 24.—Interest in the amateur championship tournament of the Western Golf Association at the Homewood course to-day centered in the matches between Charles Evans, Jr., present Western champion, and E. P. Allis, of Milwaukee, who made a world's record on the first day of the meet by sending the ball off the first tee 306 yards into the cup in one shot.

Warren K. Wood, who came within one point of becoming champion last year, was matched with Frazer Hale to-day.

HAMMETT AND GALVAO IN WESTCHESTER FINALS

NEW YORK, July 24.—A. D. Hammett, winner of the trophy in 1911, and Maurice Galvao will meet to-day in the final round of the Westchester Country Club championship lawn tennis singles' tournament at Travers Island.

In a hotly contested three-set match yesterday Hammett defeated E. F. Leo, 6-1, 4-6, 6-3, while Galvao disposed of C. Roper in straight sets, 6-0, 6-2.

Miss Bessie Holden reached the final round in the women's singles by defeating Mrs. C. F. Porter in straight sets, 6-0, 6-2.

DELHI BACK IN MAJORS; PIRATES BUY TWIRLER

PITTSBURG, July 24.—L. W. "Flame" Delhi, the young giant right-hand pitcher, who was bought by the Chicago Americans from Los Angeles in 1911, and who went to Great Falls, Mont., of the Union Association, has been bought by the Pittsburg Pirates on Manager Clarke's belief that he has come back. Clarke likens him to George McQuillen, who has been pitching great ball since he was pulled out of the minors a few weeks ago.

VOLS SIGN SPRATT.

MOBILE, ALA., July 24.—Spratt, who started the season with Montgomery and later went to Selma, Cotton States League, has been purchased by Manager Schwartz, of the Nashville club, announcement being made to-night. He will report at New Orleans. Baumgardner will be benched.

Red Sox Owners Are On Verge of a Split

DETROIT, MICH., July 24.—That there is a ruction imminent in the Boston American League baseball club came to light here to-day through the reported attempt made by Boston to trade Speaker and some other player for Ty Cobb. President McAleer did not make the offer, but the offer came. It is understood that the other player included with Speaker was "Smoky Joe" Wood.

McAleer scouts the idea of any such trade. But John I. Taylor and his father, General W. S. Taylor, want to put it through over his head.

The importance of the offer lies in the indication that the Taylors are attempting to take the reins of management out of the hands of President McAleer and again become the active heads of the Boston club.

SANDPIPERS ARE VICTORS.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., July 24.—The Narragansett Sandpipers captured the first semi-final game in the Overture Cup series in the Point Judith polo tournament yesterday by defeating the Point Judith team 9 goals to 5. The Sandpipers received a handicap allowance of 7 goals at the start.

Augusta Mother Defies Superior Court Order Awarding Two Children to Husband.

AUGUSTA, July 23.—Taking the law into her own hands after two courts decided she should not have possession of her two little girls, Mrs. Mary W. Zachry, wife of Julian J. Zachry, of Augusta and Harlem, left this city with the two children Tuesday afternoon in an automobile. Her destination was not known here.

The Zachrys have been separated several months, the husband living in Harlem with his parents and the wife in Augusta with her mother and sisters.

When the pair separated Mrs. Zachry took the two children, Frances, aged 2 1-2 years, and Mildred, aged 9 months, to live with her. About six weeks ago, Zachry brought habeas corpus proceedings before Ordinary Walton and obtained possession of the children.

Fat Hens Declared To Be Best Layers

Grain Feeding Gives Desired Result. Expert Tells When Fowl Is Useless.

By JUDGE J. F. MARSHALL.

It is no secret with a great many poultrymen and farmers that a well-fed, fat hen is a good egg producer, in spite of the hue and cry by a certain class warning us not to get our hens fat.

I believe these people are honest in their opinions. I think they have been governed almost wholly by the fact that at times they have killed an old hen that had passed her usefulness and quit producing eggs, and the hen in question was filled with fat and no signs of eggs.

Putting two and two together, they decided that the reason she was not producing eggs was on account of her fat, while the real truth in the matter is she was too old to produce eggs. And her fatness is explained by lack of exercise.

Observation covering a period of nearly 40 years, during which I have made a study of the hen, her laying times, her condition during that time, and in fact everything pertaining to egg production, has brought me to the conclusion that it is the fat but energetic hen that gives us the eggs.

Corn Not a Bad Feed.

I have seen hundreds of hens dressed for the table, and it has been almost a universal rule that the hen that was full of eggs in various stages of formation was also full of layers of fat. I have observed hundreds of farmers who would feed their hens corn almost exclusively the year round and market eggs by the bushel all the time. They were stock farmers who had more corn to spare than any other kind of grain, and they made use of it.

How often you have heard corn condemned? Some go so far as to assert that it should not be fed to hens at all in any considerable quantity.

Did you ever stop to think that the yolk of the egg is about 60 per cent fat, while the white and shell contain no fat? The yolk being the first part of the egg to form must necessarily have, as the Irishman said, the wherewithal to form it from. The fat must be there ready for the work.

Surplus Energy Gives Eggs.

We must remember that the egg is manufactured from the surplus energy the hen has over and above that necessary to maintain her body in a good, healthy condition. As soon as that point is reached she begins to lay on the reserve, which is fat out of which the egg is made.

There may be an occasional hen that will take on fat abnormally and get filled up so as to retard egg production, but we must take the chances on that if we are working for heavy egg production. Such hens usually are not worth much for eggs in any event.

There is a class of hens that tend to take on fat outside of the digestive tract on the lower part of the abdomen. They get so fat that it is difficult for them to walk. As a rule such hens had just as well be disposed of as soon as found in that condition, for the fat is in such a position that it can not be utilized in egg formation.

These are drone hens which give many persons the idea that fat hens are useless. They are the exceptions that prove the rule.

Professor James Rice, of Cornell poultry department, says it has been his experience that hens will consume considerably more food a time before they begin to lay, another indication that they are preparing the system for the great strain to be put upon it.

Experiment Suggested.

Then did you ever notice how ravenously a hen taking care of chickens will eat in her endeavor to recoup herself, and how, as soon as she has fattened up, she will begin to lay?

For the sake of experimenting along that line just feed the hen with chickens just enough to keep her in moderate condition, but not nearly what she would like to have, and see how long she will be commencing to lay.

To sum up the matter, a hen must have a variety consisting of a great bulk of green stuff, together with the grain and a supply of meat in some form, in all a good, generous bill of fare at all times, that she may get her body in good condition with the extra for fat. On the farm range the hen will get much of her variety of greens as well as bugs for the meat, so that grain is the real thing needed.

REAL ESTATE AND CONSTRUCTION NEWS

Several Big Deals Reported Wednesday

Announcement Soon of Interesting Transactions—Realty Looking Up. Marietta Street Lease.

Reports of big sales in realty circles have taken the place largely of news of the medium-sized transactions, and are proving infinitely more interesting. An investor, for instance, has bought an $80,000 parcel that he will hold for enhancement, and an owner has refused more than half a million on a downtown corner. Another dealer, it is reported, has sold a handsome dwelling on a North Side street between the Peachtrees, and has refused a flattering offer on central property wanted by a syndicate for improvement with a substantial building.

There are other signs of returning activity in real estate, and the dealers are very optimistic of a heavy fall business. Details of the above transactions are expected to come out in a week, when they will be ready for announcement. Other trades are in the contract stage.

Chamber Directors Meeting.

The directors of the Chamber of Commerce Realty Company met Tuesday afternoon at the Chamber of Commerce rooms in the Empire Building and decided to fix a price on the four top floors of the Chamber of Commerce Building so that this price could be submitted to the local committee of merchants and manufacturers. The directors are meeting again Wednesday afternoon to fix this price definitely, and a report to the other body is expected at once.

Marietta Street Lease.

Mr. Rankin, of the Smith, Ewing & Rankin Renting Agency, has announced the lease for a term of No. 164 Marietta street, a three-story and basement building, to the Atlanta Envelope Company for a client, at about $3,000 a year. The building contains about 20,000 square feet of floor space.

Meeting on Realty Loans.

A subcommittee of the State Legislature has taken hold of the bill to repeal the bill of 1910, which prohibits loans of State and municipal funds on real estate. Committees of the Atlanta Real Estate Board appeared at the Capitol Tuesday afternoon to present arguments in favor of the repeal, and they received a warm reception.

Certain bond dealers who are interested in having the bill remain as enacted also appeared. Speaking of their argument, Harris White, president of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, declared it was "weak."

Concrete Buildings Planned.

Two concrete buildings will soon be erected by the syndicate interested in the Walker street development. These structures will face on Walker street, where the new Southern Railway tracks will pass, and will be used for wholesale and manufacturing purposes. More than twenty applications for space have been received by the projectors. Among those in the syndicate are W. S. McKemie, Tom Stocks, W. J. Blalock and Ernest Duncan.

Judge Dorf A. Pardee recently approved a connection between the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic and the Southern at this point, and the work can start at once laying tracks from the Southern to Haynes street.

What You Can't Do NOW, You Can Never Do.

There Is No Such Thing as a To-morrow That Is to Do Wonders. To-morrow Means NEVER. It Is a Word of Failure.

(Copyright, 1913.)

Don't plan for anything to-morrow, unless you ARE WORKING AT THAT THING TO-DAY.

A picture on this page shows you one of a million young men who say "I will make a start to-morrow."

There is no such start, there is no such to-morrow.

If you can't work to-day, you can't work to-morrow.

If you can't begin the thing to-day, you can NEVER begin it.

To-morrow is a word that in every language means NEVER. It means self-deception, disappointment, idleness, lack of purpose.

When a thought comes to you, get at it.

Don't say to yourself, "I will do that sometime; perhaps to-morrow."

Make a note of the idea, think it over, plan for it, BEGIN IT.

If you can't start it now, you never can do it.

The thing to do is to work to-day, and to keep working to-morrow and every other day.

Keep your mind on to-day, devote the hours of to-day TO THE WORK OF TO-DAY.

Then when to-day's working hours are over, and you have actually done all that you can in those hours of work, permit yourself, if you choose, to think of plans and dreams for the future.

There is not a young man in the country without some good idea, some good plan, some earnest hope in his mind.

But the curse of a million is, that the plan, the idea, is to take form and become real TO-MORROW.

Get away from that to-morrow habit.

You need not take literally the advice, "Live as though this were to be your last day." A man who starts a house must believe that he has days in which to finish it.

The thing to do IS TO START THE HOUSE TO-DAY, and let the to-morrows take care of their work.

We print this picture because it seems, in the attitude of the man sitting under the tree, to typify the attitude of a great many American young men, and to give a needed rebuke.

If you are sitting like this boy, with your arms folded, your feet together and your head down, jump up, throw back your shoulders, take a long breath, and start now up that hill that leads to success.

Pity this poor "futurist" of failure. He is the futurist of to-morrow, the futurist of the plan that will never become real action. He is as dismal a failure in his way as those poor so-called "futurists" who invented what they call a new style of art, and have only succeeded in being unusually hideous.

Don't BAKE Your Baby-- Many Mothers Do It

Hese Is Common Sense Advice from the Chicago Health Department. Read It. Profit by It.

Copyright, 1913.

There are too many "BAKED" babies in this world. Everywhere you see unfortunate little babies suffering with the heat, dressed in woolen or in stiff, starched clothing that adds to their sorrow, babies better suited to the arctic regions than to a hot summer day in a hot city.

Many mothers need the advice which is given and reproduced here. The two pictures are from a bulletin issued by the Chicago Health Department.

This little tot is comfortable and happy when the Summer days are hot. He is dressed right to stand the heat.

This unhappy little codger is all fussed up and as a result he is hot and uncomfortable. He is dressed wrong for hot days.

THE BABY IN SUMMERTIME.

A baby can be more comfortable in hot weather than an adult, but few of them are.

The pernicious and senseless habit of dressing a baby in flannels and endless frills and fancies on hot summer days is such a common practice among mothers of certain nationalities that scores of babies are literally baked to death during the summer months.

During the very hot weather babies should wear only a diaper and a thin gauze shirt. If under six months of age, an abdominal binder of thin flannel and light-knitted booties may be worn, these being advisable only when ordered by your doctor.

These few clothes are all that are needed, but they must be kept clean, soiled garments being promptly removed.

Never replace a used diaper on a baby without first washing it. Wetted or soiled diapers must be washed with as little delay as possible, using hot water in which a little soda has been dissolved. Rinse well and see that they are perfectly dry before using again.

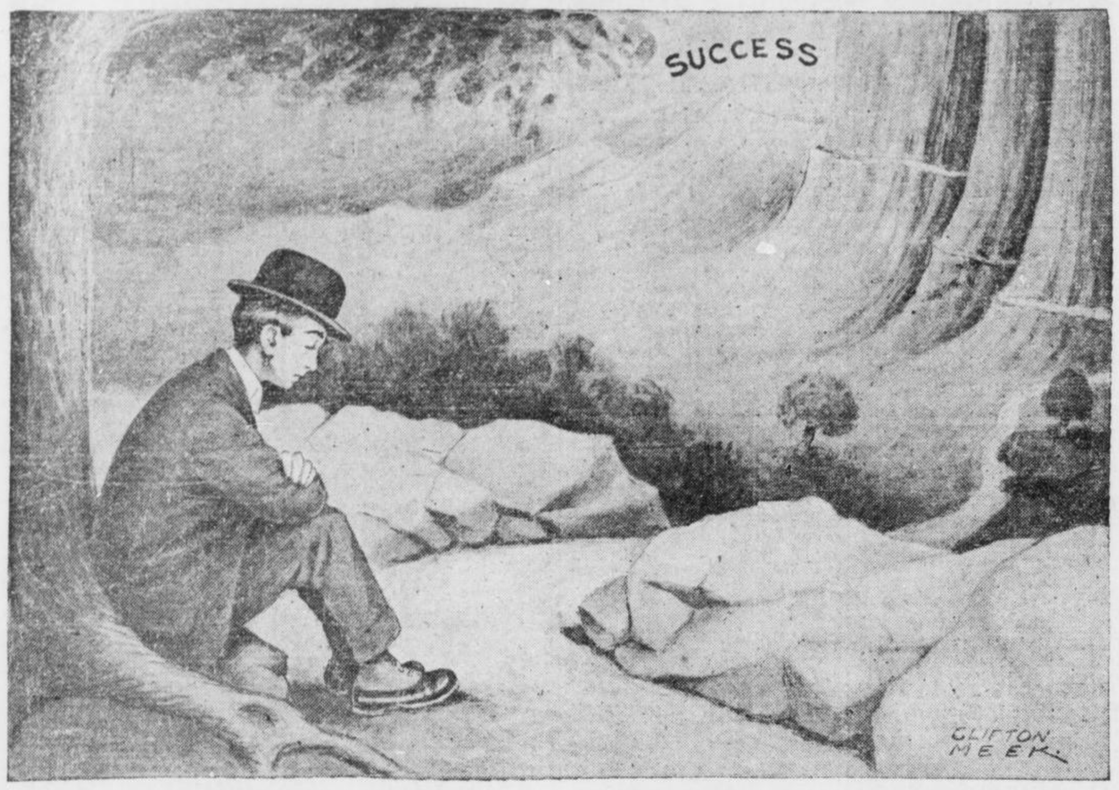
All clothing should be loose and so adjusted as to permit free motion of the legs and arms. Never put starched, stiff or uncomfortable clothes on a baby.

Having dressed your baby correctly, now see that you place the child where it will get fresh outdoor air. Put it in a shaded place on the porch and cover its resting place with mosquito netting to prevent flies from annoying and possibly infecting it. Never keep a baby in the kitchen when you are cooking or washing. When the child must be in the house keep it near an open window in the cleanest and coolest room.

In very hot weather give your baby a sponge bath two or three times a day, using lukewarm water in which a little salt has been dissolved, or you may use a little alcohol instead of the salt. Never give these baths immediately after feeding; better give them before feeding. Take especial care to cleanse the body creases and dry thoroughly. If you use talcum powder be sure it is the best and the unscented kind.

Rational dressing, fresh air and cleanliness will do much to keep your baby in good physical condition and will go a long ways toward enabling it to survive the summer dangers.

Demain, Morgen, Manana, Domani



All these words mean the same thing. They mean TO-MORROW, and they mean FAILURE.

This young man says, "I'll make a start to-morrow." And he never starts. There are a million like him sitting, waiting for the "to-morrow" that never comes. (SEE EDITORIAL.)

PERHAPS there is no word more frequently misused than the word Culture.

We often hear a woman spoken of as highly cultured.

But in what does her culture consist?

She may speak several languages; she may play several instruments; she may be able to talk understandingly of the arts and sciences; she may know much of the customs of many lands, but still she may LACK REAL CULTURE.

If she is allowing the weeds of evil temper, evil speaking, selfishness and uncharitableness to grow in her nature, she is not cultured.

That always means that the earth of that land is carefully tilled and that every weed is removed; every ugly thing banished, and every beautiful and useful and valuable thing is fertilized, dug about, encouraged and helped to grow.

So it is with the mind.

A Cultivated Person.

Unless ungracious and unlovely traits are removed, and all the virtues cultivated, mere education which comes from books and travel and the possession of money can never make a cultured person.

What constitutes a cultivated personality? What is it that uplifts character and beautifies conduct?

The answer to both questions can be found in the advice Buddha gave his pupils five hundred years before Christ was born: "Do nothing to another that you would not have done to you," and by Christ's improved rendition of the motto: "Do unto others as you would that they should do to you."

There is no higher phase of culture, and there is nothing which beautifies conduct and character like the practical and perpetual use of the Golden Rule in daily life.

The majority of people regard the keeping of the Ten Commandments as a literal fulfillment of that rule's obligations; but one who contemplates its entire meaning realizes that it applies to every trivial act of daily life and necessitates culture as well as morality.

The loud, jarring voice, the uncontrolled temper, the neglect of bodily cleanliness and disregard of dress—all these things break the Golden Rule, because they are not what we would wish others to do; therefore, we have no right to do them.

A "cultivated personality" includes cleanliness, neatness, a certain conformation to the customs of the day, or of art, in dress; a well modulated voice, an attentive manner in listening to others, a well poised body, a direct and easy carriage and walk, and a pleasant, agreeable expression of countenance.

Haughty, Cold Demeanor.

The haughty, disdainful and cold demeanor is incompatible with culture.

Only the vulgarian with an outward veneer of polish, "puts on airs." The really cultured, like the really great souls of earth, are always affable and simple and natural.

That quality which most uplifts and beautifies character is consideration of others and obeyance of one's own highest instincts.

The man who is considerate of his fellow men pays his debts promptly, does not endeavor to "beat" his neighbor in a bargain, does not haggle over prices, and is tolerant of others' political and religious ideas.

He is kind and affectionate in his family, appreciative of his wife and children, and patient and thoughtful with those in his employ.

All these homely virtues "uplift and beautify character." Without them the most heroic and brilliant deeds can not make an admirable human being.

"Cultivated Personality."

The woman who wishes to possess a "cultivated personality" and a beautiful character must keep her engagements, pay her social and financial obligations, shun gossip and harsh criticism, suit her dress and her amusements to her income, keep her home orderly and attractive, and herself a pleasure to the eye, ear and heart.

The path to character building is a long one; there is no short cut.

It requires continual watchfulness, continual self-control, to travel that path.

But it is a way which grows more beautiful, and the world seems more interesting and life sweeter each year as we advance, when the goal of a beautiful character is our aim.

Vocational Training Applied

By THOMAS TAPPER.

A FEUDIST is a gentleman with a gun on the lookout for another similarly equipped. He who shoots first lives longest.

Two horsemen riding over a mountain road in the Cumberlands came to an obstruction. They jumped down, picked it up and tossed it to one side.

The obstruction was a man who had been put out of business by a blow on the head with the butt of a gun.

When he came to he crept up among the trees and had it out with himself. Then he crawled back home cautiously. After a day or two he disappeared.

For ten months he went to school. After a while he added seven other months to these ten.

Equipped with seventeen months' education, he became the president of a college.

One day when his schooling was over he called a meeting of the feudists in the Cumberlands. One group sat, sullen and armed, at his right. Their enemies, just as sullen and as well armed, sat at his left.

He made a plea to them for the sake not of themselves, but of their children; a plea to give the little ones a chance to learn something, to forget the enmity of the feud spirit, and to be able to go out from the mountains as useful men and women.

It was a new idea to these feud followers, but the man's eloquence prevailed to the extent that the two leaders of the clans arose and shook hands.

With a bit of land and fifty dollars the man began to build the college with his own hands. There were plenty of heartaches and discouragements, but no want of trust. Then the college began to be a real thing, visible to the eyes of men.

That was ten or twelve years ago. To-day the college educates about six hundred people annually. Little children, young men and women, fathers and mothers come from all parts of the mountains, eager to get an education.

The man who has done all this has never taken a penny in pay. He does his work as a distributer, and therefore has no need to take an anxious thought.

Thirty cents a day will bring one of these mountain people to the college and will pay for board, lodging and education. Less than sixteen cents a day will pay for it all if the farm about the school can supply the student with an opportunity to work to the extent of fourteen cents.

The man who has done all this is J. A. Burns, of Oneida, Kentucky.

He was one of the first to see that the mountain problem was to be met only by the most practical form of Vocational Training, and and he has given a living demonstration of the truth of his idea.

He saw clearly that not only did these people need knowledge, but that they needed the kind of knowledge which they could apply in the daily work of their hands.

And he has wrought a remarkable transformation among them.

Educate a human being to do work well, to take pleasure in the doing of it, and efficiency is established.
