ROOSEVELT'S IRE MADE THINGS HOT IN CHILE CAPITAL

The Colonel Heatedly Resents Some Remarks by Dr. Martinez in Regard to the Monroe Doctrine.

DEMONSTRATION MADE AGAINST THE COLONEL

Students Show Disapproval of Roosevelt Temper--His Speeches Edited by South American Legations.

Washington, December 21.—Members of the diplomatic corps, especially representatives from the South American countries, were greatly interested in a report reaching Washington today that former President Roosevelt and Dr. Marcial Martinez, at one time Chilean minister to the United States, had clashed at Santiago de Chile on account of divergent views on the Monroe doctrine. The Chilean is reported to have strongly dissented from the Roosevelt view that the much discussed doctrine still is a vital issue.

The reported debate attracted unusual interest here, because both of the prepared speeches were reviewed before delivery by the Chilean foreign officer. Dr. Martinez, it was said tonight at the Chilean legation, was selected as the spokesman of the Chilean government at the state reception given the American visitor recently at the University of Santiago because of his warm friendship for the United States. He is one of the oldest and most eminent Chilean diplomatists and made many lasting friendships during his tenure as minister here many years ago.

Aroused Ire of Colonel Roosevelt.

In his address at the Roosevelt reception, Dr. Martinez dealt with the Monroe doctrine, characterizing it as a dead issue, and arguing that the conditions which gave rise to its promulgation by President Monroe in 1823, have almost entirely disappeared.

This statement is said to have aroused the ire of Colonel Roosevelt, who replied with some heat, holding that the Monroe doctrine still was a vital principle of foreign policy of the United States. He is said, too, to have suggested to the Chilean diplomat, incidentally, that it was high time for such an occasion to inaugurate a controversy.

Colonel Roosevelt, according to report, stated that before leaving the United States the text of the addresses he proposed to deliver in Brazil, Argentina and Chile should be submitted to the diplomatic representatives of those nations in Washington to avoid the inclusion of anything that might prove offensive to his hosts.

To this Dr. Martinez is said to have replied that his own addresses had been submitted to the Chilean foreign office three days before Colonel Roosevelt's arrival, and that as no objection had been raised in that quarter he could see no reason why the discussion of the Monroe doctrine should be considered a dangerous issue.

Nothing official has reached the Chilean legation here concerning any phase of what diplomatists are inclined to consider a dastardly outrage.

Passed on Roosevelt's Speeches.

"It is true that the legation passed upon Colonel Roosevelt's Santiago speech," said Senor Don Eduardo Sauren, Chilean minister, tonight. "After reading the speech, I had it translated into Spanish and forwarded it to the foreign minister, Senor Enrique Villegas. I understood that Colonel Roosevelt's speeches in Rio De Janeiro and Buenos Ayres likewise were submitted to the Brazilian and Argentine foreign offices, as those addresses and the one delivered in Santiago were to be his principal utterances during the South American tour.

"I cannot understand how an issue could be raised between Colonel Roosevelt and Dr. Martinez, since the latter was selected to speak in behalf of Chile on account of his well-known sympathy with the ideals of the United States."

It is said that at the conclusion of the Roosevelt reception, a demonstration against the American visitor was made by a small clique of Central American students. The story goes that as the colonel left the university, the students shouted: "Viva, Colombia." This incidentn however, is understood in no way to have represented the general feeling of the populace.

ANOTHER ARISTOCRAT DOWNED BY A PLEBEIAN

Rome, Ga., December 21.—(Special.)—An expensive dinner was enjoyed by a dog of questionable pedigree this consumed a large peacock of rare plumage belonging to O. L. Stamps, a Rome merchant. The dog, on finishing this meal of fifteen pounds or more, stated in to devour a second peacock, which was on display in coop in front of Stamps' place of business, but was prevented from the consumation of this gastronomic feat by the arrival of a policeman, who drove the dog away.

BATTLESHIP OHIO TO BE FUMIGATED

Charleston, S. C., December 21.—Fumigation of the United States battleship Ohio, which early today arrived here from Cuban waters, will begin tomorrow at the quarantine station, off which the Ohio now is anchored. There still are two mild cases of smallpox on board. Several cases of smallpox developed on the Ohio during her voyage from the Mediterranean cruise and on her arrival at Guantanamo all but the mild cases were put ashore there. It was today stated that the fumigation of the ship probably would require several days, and that the Ohio then probably would sail for Mexican waters to relieve the battleship Michigan

MAYOR OF THE TOWN GIVES NIGHT DANCES AND GIVES LIQUOR

Salem, Ore., December 21.—Charging that there is little resemblance to law and order in the city, that the saloon element is in control of the municipal government, and that the lives of themselves and their families are in constant danger, fifty-five residents of Copperfield have appealed to Governor West for relief. One of the petitioners, in a letter to the governor, says:

"The mayor lives in a house with a saloon in connection. He gives Saturday night dances, sells and gives away liquor to minors and sells liquor to habitual drunkards.

"These people are going to have the relief they demand," said the governor tonight.

WIFE CONFESSES TO GIVING SAWS

Tells Police She Wanted Husband to Break Jail So Their Baby Might Enjoy Christmas.

Detective Bass Rosser yesterday arrested a pretty wife and mother of 18 years, who confessed, according to detectives, to having smuggled saws and prison breaking implements to her husband, W. F. Manley, in police headquarters, so that he might escape and play Santa Claus to their babe of six months this Christmas.

She was carried to headquarters and interrogated under a charge of disorderly conduct, in a cell on the second floor, directly above that of her boy husband. She carried the baby with her. Later in the afternoon, a kind-hearted professional bondsman gave bond of $100.75 for her freedom.

The husband, however, was kept in jail. Instead of being given liberty, his bond was raised to $1,000. He was uncommunicative last night, and would have nothing to say to reporters or the police. Since the arrest of his wife, he is in a nervous state, and spends all of his time pacing up and down the narrow confines of his cell.

Reported Robbery Caused Discovery.

The discovery of the prison delivery plot was made entirely by accident shortly before midnight Saturday, when Homer Leathers, a prisoner, reported at the station sergeant's desk that he had been robbed of $60. Assistant Chief Jett and a squad of men ordered ward No. 2 cleared and all its inmates searched.

There were thirty or more prisoners in the ward, all of whom were white. Leathers reported that he had fallen asleep in his cell, and that, upon awakening, had found his money missing.

The first man searched was a youthful prisoner, whose name is known of Louis South. He revealed, the police say, a saw blade hidden up the sleeve of his shirt.

Scenting an attempt to break prison, Chief Jett ordered that every inmate of ward No. 2 be searched, that all bunks and cells be thoroughly examined. Three saw blades and two saw handles were found in the back of Manley's shirt, the police say. He denied, it is said, that they were in his person when he was first put in the prison.

The police believe, however, that this statement was made purely in an effort to divert suspicion from his wife. The saws found on both prisoners were sharp and well-filed, and would have bitten through the ordinary prison bar within less than an hour. They will be produced as evidence when Recorder Broyles Monday morning, when both man and wife will be arraigned.

Married Only a Year.

Manley and his wife have been married only a little more than a year. Less than twelve months ago, he was arrested on a similar charge—"bad checks." When put in a cell at headquarters, the girl wife came and remained at the barred entrance to his prison until midnight, refusing to go home until her husband was released.

At midnight she grew sleepy and fatigued. A charitable turnkey offered her a bunk in Matron Bohnefeld's ward, which she accepted, asleep at headquarters until the following morning, when she awoke early and hied out to obtain Manley's bond.

When Manley was arrested Saturday afternoon, he had been behind the bars only a short time before the wife came to the station house. This time she carried a baby less than six months old. From early in the afternoon until late at night, she sat in a corner chair before the prison door, the babe in hersarms, a constant stream of underworld habitues flowing before her.

Shortly before midnight she left the baby in the arms of Policeman R. B. Hamlett, and stepped out on Decatur street, saying she was going to get the prisoner some lunch. Presently she returned, carrying a huge bundle, which she took to the cell door of her husband. No one suspected anything, as she had been given access to the prison all night.

Immediately she left the station-house. An hour later Leathers reported his loss. The inmates of ward 2 were turned out of their beds and shook up for the search. The saws and other implements were found, together with a bar of soap and a fine steel file, the latter two of which were discovered in Manley's shirt.

"Nobody gave them to me," he is said to have protested. "I had them on me when I came in."

Suspected the Wife.

Chief Jett, however, was not content with this explanation, and ordered the detective department to investigate Mrs. Manley. Detective Rosser was assigned to the case. He found that

DEATH IS DECREED BY GENERAL VILLA FOR ALL LOOTERS

Rebel Leader Issues Drastic Order for the Protection of the Property of Foreigners and Mexicans.

SIX LOOTERS MARCHED BEFORE FIRING SQUAD

All Stores Confiscated in Chihuahua Locked and Sealed—Many Huerta Soldiers Deserting to Rebels.

Chihuahua, Mexico, December 21.—"Anyone who hereafter loots or molests property of foreigners or Mexicans will be executed. The right to confiscate property will rest only with the constitutionalist government."

General Francisco Villa issued this order today as showing his intention to maintain strict military discipline. As an example he executed on the plaza a band of rebels who had been found guilty by court-martial of sacking the home of a wealthy Mexican. While the six rebels were marched before the firing squad the stolen goods were returned to the owner.

All stores confiscated from the expelled Spaniards today were closed and sealed. Orders were given that no more goods are to be taken from them. This action was believed to have resulted from the protest of the United States against the seizure of Spanish property. Already great quantities of the goods, valued at several million dollars, had been utilized by the rebels. The remainder of the property is to be held pending an investigation as to whether the owners aided the Huerta government.

General Villa proclaimed amnesty to federal soldiers who would surrender and give up their arms. Many federal troops are reported to have joined the rebels. Three hundred thousand rounds of rifle ammunition and 500,000 rounds of artillery ammunition were recovered from a lake east of Chihuahua, where they were hidden by General Mercado's evacuating federals.

Telegraphic and railroad communication has been extended as far west as Minaca, and as far south as Bermejillo. If there is no federal interference, General Villa expects soon to have the states of Chihuahua, Sonora and Cinaloa as freely open as in times of peace.

MANY OFFICERS SHOT ON TREASON CHARGE

Hermosillo, Sonora, Mexico, December 21.—The commissioned officers and many sergeants and corporals of the Tenth battalion of the federal garrison at Guaymas were executed at sunrise in that city, according to word brought here tonight. Officers and men of the Tenth were disarmed several days ago by General Ojeda, federal commandant, when he discovered they were plotting to desert to the insurgents.

Accompanied by three of the federal officers, who surrendered to the insurgents at Maytorena, General Ojeda, field commander of the constitutionalists in western Mexico, returned here last night to assist in rounding the scattered groups of federal soldiers who had deserted from the Guaymas garrison.

General Ojeda and his remaining troops are in Guaymas as far as could be learned, but insurgent sentries reported that one of the federal gunboats had disappeared. This was taken as an indication that at least a part of the federal garrison had departed for Mazatlan or Manzanillo, further down the coast.

It was announced last night that the services of neither officers nor privates of the deserting federals would be accepted in the constitutionalist army. This is in line with the policy of General Carranza that service would be accepted from only those federal army men who had taken the first opportunity to join the revolutionists.

REBELS WANT $250,000 TO RELEASE TERRAZAS

Juarez, December 21.—Although negotiations have been under way for the payment of $250,000 for his release, Luis Terrazas, Jr., today was still held prisoner by General Villa, Chihuahua. The father, whose vast estate, together with that of the Creels, was confiscated through a decree issued by Villa, attempted to procure the prisoner's release and fled across the border, first through an appeal to Washington, and now by the payment of ransom money to the rebels.

When Terrazas, Sr., accompanied the federal forces in their flight to the border, the women members of his family refused to leave. They are still in Chihuahua helping in the efforts to raise Terrazas.

Terrazas was not charged with any activity against the rebels, but was arrested because of his father's great wealth. The elder Terrazas was reported to have taken much of his cash and securities to the United States, and Villa is asking for the return of some of it. The division of the million of acres of Terrazas land among the people is one of the planks in the revolutionary platform.

FOREIGN SHIPS WARNED BY THE MEXICAN REBELS

Washington, December 21.—Roberta Pesqueira, confidential agent here of the Mexican constitutionalists, has instructed the agent of the party in London, Miguel Covarrubias, formerly Mexican minister to Russia, to advise Lloyds' Maritime Insurance agency that steamers of any nationality bringing munitions of war contracted for by the Mexican government will be fired on by the Mexican constitutionalists.

The agency here declined to say whether the constitutionalists expected to purchase any ships for the

It Really Doesn't Happen Exactly Like This, But the Men Buy the Stamps Just the Same

Miss Dorothy Wilhelm knows how to sell Red Cross stamps, and J. F. Gillfellan knows when to buy them.

Three thousand stamps in a day!

You don't mean it?

Why, that's almost as much as Uncle Sam dispenses any old day in the week!

But, it's a fact—as indisputable fact. Who'd want to dispute the word of such a pretty young lady as Miss Dorothy Wilhelm, of 212 Waverly way, who gave the government of any kind one better when it comes to stamp sales?

Miss Wilhelm is captain of the Red Cross Stamp team that is composed of herself, Miss Ruth Belk and Miss Theodora Warfield. Saturday was their first day at the business. By 3 o'clock in the afternoon they had made pedestrian Atlanta buy as many as 2,000 Red Cross seals.

The amount of money this represented was something in the aristocratic neighborhood of $50, which will go a long way toward helping along some unfortunate tubercular victim.

Miss Warfield and Miss Wilhelm and Miss Belk have such a captivating way about them that the moneyed passerby just can't help but stop and purchase. Captivating is rather mild, though. It should be "capturing," as is aptly shown by the attitude of one of the mere men who have been assailed by Miss Wilhelm.

All day long this trio of besieging misses besieged everybody who passed in front of Nunnally's and the Alcazar theater, where they had made pedestrian Atlanta buy as many as 2,000 Red Cross seals.

The amount of money this represented was something in the aristocratic no money and no prospects of annexing any, were publicly shown the depressing fact by the sticks of the three stamp-sellers.

A reporter and a photographer found them in front of the Piedmont hotel about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon and Miss Wilhelm agreed to pose.

"But there must be a man in the picture," said the reporter. "You've got to have a customer, you know."

"But where shall I get one?" she asked.

"Oh anywhere. Here comes one down the street. Hold him up and make him buy a stamp."

She did. J. F. Gillfellan chanced to be the man who came along and he was victimized to the tune of "four bits," and the click of a camera shutter.

SUNDAY WAS BIRTHDAY OF GENERAL OGLETHORPE

University Named After Georgia's Founder Assured Just 222 Years After His Birth.

Never in all history, perhaps, did Dame Chance exercise a whim more appropriately than when she ordained that Atlanta should know for a certainty on December 21 that her dream of Oglethorpe university should be realized for on that day, just 222 years ago, was born, in London, England, General James Edward Oglethorpe, founder of the colony of Georgia, and to whose honor and memory the people of Georgia are today building a great institution of learning, a more befitting memorial than which no man could wish or build.

General Oglethorpe was born December 21, 1691. In 1732 he saw the shores of Georgia for the first time, and one year later established the Georgia colony. He died in Essex, England, in 1785.

Through the two centuries that have elapsed since the days of General Oglethorpe's great work the people of Georgia have dreamed of a great memorial which should fittingly perpetuate his name, and on his birthday for the first time that dream became a reality.

More Land Promised.

Despite the fact that the Oglethorpe fund committees have ceased active campaigning, subscriptions are expected to come in to the leaders of the university fund movement during this week, which may, it is believed, oversubscribe the desired $250,000.

It is known that several of the banks will probably sign subscriptions, donating $1,000 each to the university cause as soon as the boards of directors meet and ratify the action of the bank officers. This was made known Sunday following the announcement Saturday by two banks that they had given $1,000 each.

One of the surprises of Sunday was the information reaching the fund-gatherers that a well-known Atlantan had made arrangements to deed over valuable property to the university. The donor of this property made a provision in his deed allowing the university fund-gatherers to convert the land into cash if they so desired.

There is still a book shortage of $25,000 in the fund, but it is declared that when the committee finally wind up the loose ends of their campaign at least $5,000 will be found on the books that has not as yet been reported.

CANNIBALS MASSACRE GERMAN SCIENTISTS

Brisbane, Australia, December 21.—Cannibals in Neumecklenb, an island in the Bismarck archipelago, have massacred Dr. Deiniger and another German scientist, together with fourteen natives who accompanied them.

BY MEANS OF WHIP HE FIRES SHOTGUN AND KILLS HIMSELF

Grovanla, Ga., December 21.—Steve F. Bivens, whose body was found here last night with the head blown off, came to his death by a shotgun wound at his own hands, according to a verdict of the coroner's jury today.

The whip had been broken in two and inserted between the trigger and the trigger guard so that by pushing down on the whip the gun could be discharged. As the whip was attached to the gun when found, this is given as the means by which the weapon was discharged.

Bivens' funeral was held at Perry today.

MAN IN CELL MAKES TWO SUICIDE ATTEMPTS

Turnkey Bayne Snatches Cup From Thomas Osborne and Later Puts Out Fire.

Thomas Osborne is alive today and the prison of police station still reeks with the scent of cremated burned mattress and other bunking, because Turnkey Tom Bayne stopped what is believed to be a suicide attempt.

Osborne came into headquarters Sunday afternoon on disorderly conduct charges, and was put in a city ward. Several minutes thereafter he begged of Turnkey Bayne a few matches, and Turnkey Bayne, being a kind-hearted turnkey, presented him with an assortment.

Presently Bayne heard a muffled cry from the remote regions of Osborne's cell, and went to investigate. He found the prisoner lifting a cup of water to his lips. Bayne didn't know what was contained in the vessel, but he wasn't taking chances.

Bang went the cup. Splash went its contents. All over the neighborhood went the wrath of the prisoner, who explained in a single language—profane—just what he thought of the interfering turnkey. Subsequently he was put in an isolated cell in ward No. 3.

Barely had Bayne reached the entrance to the prison on his way out than he detected the unmistakable scent of smoke. He turned and perceived a thin wreath of the stuff curling to the ceiling from ward No. 3. Then he had another hunch, forthwith following it to the cell of Osborne, where, he says, he found that disconsolate prisoner endeavoring to cremate himself in a bonfire of mattresses and blanket.

"You might think you're going to kill yourself," shouted Bayne as he extinguished the blaze, "but you'll have to get away with it on somebody else's watch beside mine."

500 NATIVES DIE IN MOLTEN LAVA

Terrible Details of Volcanic Eruptions on Ambrim Island--Flames Shot Thousand Feet in Air.

Sydney, N. S. W., December 21.—Incoming steamers bring terrible details of the recent volcanic eruptions on the island of Ambrim, in the New Hebrides group, in which 500 natives lost their lives. Witnesses of the disturbance describe it as having been so sudden and violent that they expected to see the whole western side of the island disappear.

With a terrific roar, which was followed with a rapid succession of artillery-like detonation, all the craters of the volcano seemed to belch forth spouting flames and lava and throwing out huge boulders.

Great streams of lava soon were rushing down the slopes, cutting off the villages from escape. In one instance two torrents of the molten mass joined and made an island of one entire section of a village. Here fifty or sixty persons perished.

The scenes at night were awe-inspiring. Flames shot into the air to a height of a thousand feet, illuminating the whole scene of destruction. The ocean seemed to boil as huge superheated masses of stone fell into the sea and streams of lava poured into the bay. Dust from the craters gradually formed a black cloud which blotted out the light of the stars.

The bay after the eruption was filled with dead fish and large numbers of dead turtles. The water in the river was hot.

The British hospital buildings were wiped out, but previous to their destruction the doctors pluckily removed all the patients to a launch and escaped with them.

WARDEN WILL NOT ANSWER CHARGES FROM HAWTHORNE

Warden William H. Moyer declared yesterday that he will treat Julian Hawthorne's writings of alleged mismanagement of the Atlanta federal penitentiary with silent contempt.

"I have nothing to say in reply to Hawthorne," Warden Moyer said. "I think so little of what he has to say that I have not taken the trouble to read it. If he makes any statement about which the public wishes to learn the truth, I'll take pleasure in showing anyone around the building and will let the facts be known."

CONFEREES PUSH MONEY MEASURE TO COMPLETION

Practically All Differences Smoothed Out in Conference, and Report Will Be Made to Congress Today.

INSURANCE OF DEPOSITS STRICKEN FROM MEASURE

Committee Worked All Sunday and Sunday Night, and Reached Agreement by Series of Compromises.

Washington, December 22.—At 1:30 o'clock this morning the joint conference committee on the Administration currency bill agreed to strike from the measure the senate provision for an insurance fund to guarantee deposits in national banks.

At that time but a single point of disagreement was still in dispute. That was the committee of the federal reserve board. The committee agreed to strike out the senate amendment which would allow the use of the new federal reserve notes as bank reserves.

Retirement of 2 Per Cents.

The conferees agreed on an entirely new provision to take care of the outstanding government 2 per cent bonds on which the present currency is based. They will be retired, running two years after the new system is installed, at the rate of $25,000,000 a year. This amount will be taken over from the present national banks by the new regional banks in proportion to their capital and surplus. One-half of their bonds regional banks will be allowed to issue currency similar to the present bank notes. The remainder will be retired by the substitution of twenty-year 2 per cent bonds or treasury gold notes with an agreement that the regional banks will renew the notes each four thirty years.

The bank reserve section as framed by the senate was accepted with but slight changes. They require the reserve of 18 per cent in central reserve city banks, 15 per cent in reserve city banks and 12 per cent in country banks.

The make-up of the federal reserve board was the last matter in dispute. The house members reluctantly agreed that the secretary of agriculture be removed, but insisted that the comptroller of currency remain a member.

All Day and All Night.

The conference committee had been in session all day Sunday and Sunday night.

Problems involving the reserve provisions, the size and character of the federal reserve board, the redemption of the 2 per cent government bonds and the retirement of the present national bank currency proved troublesome, but the conferees finally smoothed out the issues between house and senate. When the two branches of congress convene today the expected plans will be made for a long recess, beginning Tuesday.

Signed Today or Thursday.

It was predicted tonight that the currency bill could be completed and signed by the president late tomorrow or Tuesday; and congress has dropped all other problems in anticipation of the first actual recess that it will have enjoyed since April 7. It is planned to halt all but will the 13, and allow the legislators to enjoy as complete a rest as will President Wilson, who will leave Washington for Pass Christian, Miss., as soon as the currency bill is signed.

The currency conferees assembled early in the day and at the opening of the session had practically settled the controverted points. An analysis of the bill by Senator Owen and Representative Glass, chairmen of the conferees, showed 42 points of difference between the two houses; but many of these were of a minor character and were disposed of quickly.

Important Points Decided.

Among the more important decisions of the committee today were the following:

The minimum capital of each regional reserve bank was fixed at $4,000,000. A compromise between the $2,000,000 minimum of the senate bill and the $5,000,000 minimum of the house bill.

The senate's provision for "from right to privilege" regional banks was accepted by the house in place of the minimum of twelve fixed in the house bill.

The senate's provision that each "member bank" must subscribe for stock of the regional bank in its territory, equal to 6 per cent of the member-bank's capital and surplus, was accepted by the house in place of the provision, that the subscription must equal 5 per cent of the member-bank's capital.

The senate gave way on its provision that "no class B" director of a regional bank could be a stockholder in any member bank. This would permit the three directors who represent "agricultural, commercial or industrial interests" in the directorate of each regional reserve bank to own stock in local banks in their districts.

The Federal Reserve Board.

The attempt of the house conferees to have the secretary of agriculture and the comptroller of currency, as well as the secretary of treasury, made members of the organization committee to inaugurate the new system and also made permanent members of the federal reserve board, held the attention of the conference through much of the afternoon. The house bill included these three federal officers as members of the board, while the senate allowed only the secretary of treasury to remain on the board. House conferees insisted the experience and knowledge of the comptroller and the secretary of agriculture should be made available for the board that is to govern the new banking system.

After a lengthy argument the house conferees agreed to accept the reserve section written into the currency bill by the senate. Under the house bill a reserve of 33 1-3 per cent of gold was required behind the federal reserve notes which will constitute the new currency. The senate provision agreed to in conference provides only a 40 per cent gold reserve, with a tax of 1 per cent on depreciation down to 32½ per cent and a graduated tax below that point.

The senate receded from an amendment which would have admitted to rediscount by the regional banks acceptances based on domestic shipments of merchandise.

Discretion to Treasury Secretary.

The house conferees yielded to a senate amendment that would allow the secretary of treasury discretion in the depositing of government funds in the new regional banks.

A compromise was arranged as to the forcing of one regional bank to rediscount the paper of another, by which the vote of five members of the reserve board will be necessary to require such discounts, and the conference struck out a senate amendment under which member banks could have discounted with the regional banks their own direct obligations.

The conference agreed to retain a senate amendment providing that no member of congress shall accept any division of profit in the new system. The amendment providing that the secretary of the treasury, the assistant secretary of treasury and the comptroller of the currency should be ineligible for two years after leaving the government service for any position in a member bank also was accepted.

The house conferees finally succeeded in securing an agreement on a provision that the new system should be instituted by an organization committee and that the secretary of agriculture and the comptroller of currency should be members of that committee.

The composition of the federal reserve board was still in dispute, but the house conferees expected to be able to retain these two officials among its members.

A senate provision allowing national banks to act as trustees and executors of estates was agreed to, and several minor changes were made in the nature of compromises.

It was midnight when the committee settled down with the composition of the federal reserve board, the provision for the use of federal reserve notes as reserves in member banks, the bond refunding section and the guarantee of bank deposits provisions still in dispute.

The printing clerk of the senate was kept busy dashing backward and forward in an automobile between the capitol and the printing office, where a big force of printers was awaiting the draft of the bill as the conference report. It was apparent that the committee was determined to thresh out all the differences before adjournment for the night.

WILSON WANTS BIG MEN FOR THE BANKING BOARD

President Has James J. Hill in Mind—To Select Board at Pass Christian.

Washington, December 21.—President Wilson intends that his vacation at Pass Christian, Miss., shall be a complete rest from official activity, but in leisure moments he will apply himself to the task of choosing tentatively members of the federal reserve board to be created by the new currency law.

The president will see no visitors, will engage in no voluminous correspondence and will devote himself for three weeks of recreation and quiet thinking. He realizes that in the selection of the federal reserve board he will be confronted with one of the most important problems of his administration, and that the success or failure of the new currency law will depend to a great degree from any political pressure.

The president is determined to select the biggest men possible, versed alike in the details of business and finance. James J. Hill, formerly head of the Great Northern railroad, is known to be one of those most prominent in the president's mind.

The president is hoping to leave here Tuesday. He will not be accompanied by Secretary Tumulty, who will really be the acting president at the White house. Inasmuch as Secretaries Bryan and Garrison and Postmaster Burleson will be away for the holiday recess, Mr. Tumulty will keep both Secretary Bryan and the president informed on developments in Mexico and elsewhere.

What Matters Anything When the Windows Are Full of Christmas Things

What though Daysey Mayme did have a wee speck more rouge upon her cheeks than might be seemly for a maid of 19 summers, or how great a matter is it if the gold in Imogene's locks was part alloy, or what great matter if a crimson hat with a purple feather did not altogether harmonize with a brick brown tube skirt: there was a blue sky overhead, it was but four days till Christmas and their eyes were bright with adventurous intent.

The trolley laboriously rolled up to the Broad and Alabama crossing and Imogene and Daysey Mayme, in business of stopping—for, know ye, that it is a Walker-to-West View car—and out stepped Daysey Mayme and Imogene. That may or may not have been their real names, but neither dose that matter.

Whither bound? Where else upon a sunny Sunday afternoon before Christmas could anyone be bound but for the Whitehall store windows?

And so, quite in the mood of the hour that journeyed over the mountain, Daysey Mayme and Imogene held around the corner of Whitehall and Alabama "to see what they could see."

In front of a jewelry store Imogene arranged her golden tresses, using the plate glass window for a mirror, while Daysey Mayme, industriously chewing her gum the while, surveyed with a critical eye a dazzling array of lavalieres and diamond sunbursts.

"Are Diamonds Stylish?"

"Say, Imogene," she presently ventured, as she shifted her weight from one foot to the other and propped her body with a re-enforcing arm placed nimbly upon her hip, "do you think them things is stylish?"

Imogene gave a stray curl an approving pat and assumed an air of one about to render expert judgment.

"What you mean? Them there diamun brooches?"

"Uh huh."

"Gee, I should say they are. Why, a gent'mun friend of mine says to me the other night when me an him was at the show that diamuns was goin' to be wore more this year than ever."

"What does any feller of yours know about diamuns, I'd like to know?" inquired Miss Daysey Mayme.

"I guess he orter know, Miss Uppity," was the hot reply. "He clerks in one of the swellest jooltry stores on Peachtree street."

The question of jewels being thus authoritatively settled, the train proceeded.

A window full of candies and nuts was passed without further comment than the query from Imogene as to "how Daysey Mayme would like to get in the middle of it an' eat her way out," which question went unanswered, as Daysey Mayme was at that moment engaged in snubbin a "gent'mun friend" who had been so rude as to break a date with her some several nights since.

Before the windows of a department store the explorers again called a halt and gazed with mingled emotions of admiration and prudish resentment upon the bold creations which Dame Fashion spread before them.

"Lawsy That Purple Gown."

"O-oh, Imogene, would you lamp that there swell purple gown in the corner. Ain't that the swellest thing you ever saw? How'd you like I'd look rigged out in that?"

Imogene stepped back and looked at her companion with deepest disgust.

"Well, Daysey Mayme Winnerd'd Pendergrass, I'd like to see the nerve to stan' there an' tell me that you'd be caught with any dress what's split as high as that 'un? Ain't you had no sense at all?"

"Well, you needn't talk so big, Imogene Scruggs. If you'd seen them fellers watchin' you gettin' on that street car yesterday, I guess you'd a-felt ashamed of yourself. Besides, I mean a new up to date skirt."

"Well, you ain't got it yet. I reckon when it do git it, it'll be long enough to get out your needle and thread."

This parley was ended when Imogene discovered a set of "gent's" socks, necktie and handkerchief to match, the whole being neatly done up in a Christmas box and marked at seventy-five cents.

"Say, Daysey Mayme! How d'ye reckon he'll like that? Ain't it swell?"

"Believe me, that is some stylish, ain't it? Great Scott! Daysey Mayme, the two agreeing for the first time. "Why don't you get that, Imogene? I'm done got the present for my gent'mun friend out of the store at the next jooltry store. What you reckon it is?"

Imogene vowed that she could never guess in a thousand years, whereupon Daysey Mayme informed her that "the swellest gold-plated pearl mounted cuff buttons in town" could be had at the aforesaid "jooltry store" for the amount of half a dollar.

By this time they had gone as far as the art stores, where Venus of Milo and Apollo at the Bath vainly display their charms in cold marble without so much as the semblance of a blush.

"For goodness sakes, Daisy", said Imogene, "will you take a look at that there! If that ain't the shamefullest thing I ever saw."

Revenge is sweet, and Daysey Mayme gave her friend a look.

"Imogene Scruggs, don't you know nothin' about high art? I though you'd had a little schoolin', anyhow. Why, that there is high art, an' anybody that's got any class to 'em at all would know that. This here is the way over here lived in Greece or Paris or somewhere when they was in the height of their style like that. They call her 'Pe-sikey.'"

At this juncture two "gent'mun friends" came along and the quartet returned to the nearest soda fountain.

And, like Imogene and Daysey Mayme, there were thousands of others out Sunday afternoon viewing the marvels of the Christmas windows; some who knew more about what they saw and some, possibly, who knew less, but none who enjoyed the gorgeous displays more.

FROM WINDOW LEDGE TAFT MAKES SPEECH

While Ex-President Talked, Persons Behind Held to His Coattails.

New York, December 21.—Former President William Howard Taft stood on a window ledge in the Bedford branch of the Young Men's Christian association in Brooklyn today and told a crowd of 1,000 persons that he had "seen many good men go down to hell in the Philippines because they lacked home training and when they got a tired feeling" they found a dash of Scotch "reached the right spot."

While the former president carefully balanced himself just outside the window and talked, persons within held onto his coattails, for the ledge was only 12 inches wide and the flagstones were 15 feet below. Mr. Taft, however, showed no fear, and gesticulated as much as though he were standing on a stanchion bush fence.

Mr. Taft had intended to do all his speaking inside, after 2,500 had found seats or were standing room there were nearly 1,000 persons outside and suggested a talk from the window. Then he decided he could talk with more effect if he stepped outside, and did so against the advice of his friends.

Afterward he spoke to those within.

After he had referred to the liquor danger, the speaker said one great value of the Y. M. C. A. lies in the fact that it gives young manhood "no liquor and "reaches the right spot in them."

Famous For Her Cakes Recommends

Mrs. Wilson of Nashville, Tenn., is famed the world over for her wonderfully delicious cakes. They are shipped to all parts of the Globe for special affairs where the best of Cakes are demanded.

This year, as in former years, Mrs. Wilson enjoys the distinction of making the President's Christmas Cake, using Calumet Baking Powder.

Mrs. Wilson's Baking Motto is:

"To have complete success with no failures, there should be used in selection of Baking Powder."

CALUMET BAKING POWDER

Some little time ago I made a careful study and investigation of the baking powder subject and I feel fully repaid. I am firmly convinced from the results I have received that there is no baking powder to equal Calumet for wholesomeness and economy, and I also recommend Calumet Baking Powder for its never failing results.

December 9, 1913. Mrs. Betty Lyler Wilson.

Calumet also received the Highest Awards at the World's Pure Food Exposition, Chicago and Paris, France, 1912.

Buy a can of Calumet Baking Powder at once, and use it in your Holiday Bakings, making your Christmas Cakes as good as the President's.

Mad Dogs.

(From The Pittsburg Post.)

Here is the testimony of a dog catcher who has been in the business fifteen years and been bitten more than 125 times:

"Afraid of 'em? Not me. Haven't yet seen a mad dog. Maybe there are some. Maybe not. I don't know. All I know is that although I've been a squad of fighting dogs and been running around that pound mad, and I've been bitten goodness knows how many times, I've yet to see a real mad dog.

"I'm not afraid of rabies because I believe most of what you hear about mad dogs is just piffle. People get excited and go into a panic when a thirsty dog begins to froth at the mouth. He wants a drink. There ought to be drinking places for dogs. There are a few, but in some sections of the city there is no place a dog can get a drink, and he needs it on a hot day as bad as a man.

"I am a dog owner and I like dogs. I raised a few. There have been many great things said about dogs, but you cannot appreciate them until one of them becomes a friend of yours. Then only do you know how much of a friend you have."

GIVE BUSINESS A REST!

The attitude of business generally, on the passage of the currency measure by the senate, indicates the relief with which the nation hails the ending of a long uncertainty. The optimism expressed is an infallible sign of preparedness and willingness for splendid business activity—

Provided, that for the time being congress restricts its energies only to imperative legislation, undertakes for the present no more capital surgical operations on the economic fabric of the country, and gives business an earned rest.

Reforms of the tariff and currency were imperatively needed. The nation needed both and had made up its mind to have both.

Congress has responded, wisely and temperately. The tariff and the currency have each been readjusted. The operation was a healthful one.

But even healthful operations entail momentary shock. The aftermath requires recuperation. The poised physician would not perform two major surgical feats in quick succession, then set out upon others before the system had received unless those others were indispensably necessary.

That is the position in which congress now finds itself. Some legislation is, of course, constructive and should not be postponed. The interstate commerce commission, for example, has recommended that it be given supervision of stock and bond issues in the capitalization of railways. The commission should have that authority. Had it possessed that authority twenty years ago we should not have been visited by the spectacle of the New Haven, the Frisco and other scandals, the consequences of which today make it extremely difficult for the carriers to borrow enough money for actual up-keep, not to speak of improvements. Making the railroads a safe investment for capital is an inseparable part of the job of restoring confidence and prosperity. The country and the railroads would be worse off without than with legislation of this class.

But with that and possibly a few other exceptions, including the routine money bills, the call for imperative activity from congress ceases. Congress itself has done well, and earned a rest. Let it get through the current business after the holidays with a minimum of delay. Then let it go home and give business a breathing spell!

The foundations of prosperity in this country have stood direct and indirect hurrying ever since the first year of the Taft administration. Even the Taft administration inherited unrest from the Roosevelt regime.

Now, let up on the pressure! Let things swing back to normal. Give the patient a full chance to recuperate before another summons to the clinic.

GIVE BUSINESS A REST!

MEETING THE REGULATORS.

Governmental probes and the extension of federal supervision over interstate and other business would be robbed of most of its terrors if the business world followed the advice of Harry A. Wheeler, of Chicago, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. Addressing the annual banquet of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Wheeler counseled business of every description, including the railways, to meet federal regulation and investigation half way. He recited the many benefits that had accrued to business generally from federal protection as a strong argument why large business interests should court and not fight the activities of the federal government.

"Shall we always," he said, "object to regulation of this sort? Shall we always trail regulation, or shall we look out into the future and see the things that are bound to come and then meet them half way down the road, instead of waiting until they are forced upon us? These regulatory measures are not altogether bad, and they are necessary."

This is the voice of optimism and it is well worth heeding. It is true, of course, that a certain percentage of probes of national enterprises are based on the tendency to "bait" for political purposes. It is true, also, that many of them arise in ignorance which may easily leave its innocent status and run to destructive significance. But the great underlying fact of the prevalent era of unrest and adjustment is that business which is sufficiently pretentious in size and interstate in character cannot hope permanently to escape the vigilant eye of federal authority.

The railways, it will be remembered, put up a stiff and tragic protest when the scope of the interstate commerce commission was radically extended. Yet most of them today acknowledge that the change has been to their advantage, and offers them a refuge against ignorant prejudice and embattled demagogy. Big business will do well to take the same view. If regulation of some sort is inevitable, and it seems to be, it is much better that it come with the co-operation than against the hostility of those most intimately affected.

A feature which capitalizing is that resentment of regulation feeds public distrust and enmity. Willingness to co-operate half way disarms in advance every factor inimical to a fair and rational adjustment.

RUBBING IN A LESSON.

It has been a favorite recourse of those influences working for judicial reform in America to hold up the incomparable superiority of judicial procedure in England. Sentiment in this direction ought to be sensibly crystallized by the effort England is now making to still further simplify her court methods.

A recent Associated Press dispatch reports the following changes recommended in the British system by a royal commission that has been investigating the subject:

It is proposed to do away with grand juries, to reduce the long vacations to two months, to hold no assize unless there are three prisoners, and to have judges in London sit for longer hours. A "speedy trial court" is to be formed of cases where there is no defense.

Judges are to retire at the age of 72, or after six months' absence.

Judges are to be allowed to retire after ten years' service on the condition that they serve if called upon during such period as would make up fifteen years' service.

Pensions after five years' service or less are to be $7,500 with $1,000 a year extra for each year's service, the maximum being $17,500 for fifteen years' service.

Dealing with delays in London and lengthy trials, reference is made to the growing tendency to adjourn cases for the convenience of "fashionable counsel," who like to "spread themselves over a trial for a week."

With the exception of the abolition of the grand jury, which body will serve well enough if we amend the practice of making its hearings unfairly exparte, all these reforms might be with profit engrafted on the judicial system of America.

We have in this country many of the abuses outlined in the extract. Where we lack that element of lawyers who "like to spread themselves over a trial for a week," we have another class, who spread litigation over a series of years, either for personal profit or prestige.

We commend this English effort at advanced simplification to the legislatures of the American states. Congress might take cognizance of them. For while the federal procedure and statutes are immeasurably in advance of the patchwork maintained by the states, it leaves much to be desired in the directions of directness and speed.

It is also to be noted that while the British have a reputation the world over for expediting trials, without infringing the merits of the case, the greater part of the demand now is for even greater celerity. At every step, our English cousins make us apologetic for our remissness and our slowness in remedying it.

CRUELTY TO LANGUAGE.

Joseph Jastrow, of the University of Wisconsin, would found a society for the prevention of cruelty to the English language. Recently, he told delegates to the National Council of Teachers of English, at Chicago, that some such organization was fast becoming necessary. Of what avail, he urged, to drill grammar and rhetoric into the brains of children when on the outside powerful forces for disintegrating, represented in slang and loose idioms, nullified such teaching?

The English language is a pretty tough structure and it has survived many battering-rams and rumors of war, intact if not unscathed. By and large, the purity of English as spoken by the masses in this country has reached and still is reaching a higher level.

The trouble with most of our censors, is that they want to reduce language to a chill and mathematical formula. They balk at making allowance for flexibility and change in conditions. Take slang, for instance. Once people viewed it as an abomination without virtue, to be tabooed and sat down upon each time it showed a head. But now, "everybody's doing it." Why? For the simple reason that slang enriches and amplifies the powers for expression. And if language isn't made as a vehicle for expression, we are unable to find any other function for it.

It is, indeed, probable that the lordly disregard for the super-niceties of grammar, often observed in this country, has done more for the language than any other one influence. Certainly, it has given to the English tongue a breeziness, a vividness and a sledge-hammer force it never possessed before it crossed the water. Nor are the professional grammarians always the court of last resort. The people really possess that dignity. If they, over a stretch of years, give to a phrase or a formula a setting which the sticklers denounce, eventually the sticklers give in and the phrase, the formula or the word goes into the dictionary and into our every-day equipment.

The G. O. P. is always "getting together," but it doesn't recognize itself when it arrives.

Of course, congress will have the president's permission to spend the Christmas week-end with the home folks.

Life in the Country.

Correspondent C. H. Vance sends these notes of life in the country to The Dalton Citizen:

"Silas Helbert says that hypocrisy, superstition, ignorance and high taxes has might nigh runin his little town.

"The meetin' busted at Pisgah Sunday night, and was a howling success (accent on the howling). Several were turned into the straight and narrow trail, and it's to be hoped a lot of old debts will be settled now.

"Mrs. Jud Cavort was strangled while shouting at the Methodist meeting at Pisgah Sunday night. Buck Sology, the deacon, beat her in the back till she got use of her wind again. Thus far, no cause is given for her shouting.

"There will be a candy pullin' at Miss Josie Luffman's on Christmas eve night. All young men of the settlement are urged to come sober. There will be no turkey trottin' or tango monkey business, either, as old man Luffman says he will not tolerate such stuff."

Dad's Triumph.

I.

Glad the holidays are with us, joy on frosty
plain an' hill,
Daddy's comin' home from congress—
daddy's passed the money bill!
Seems just like we haven't seen him since about 'leven years ago—
Heard the jingle in his pockets that we loved and longed for so.

II.

Reckon that they'll fill his wallet when he goes to draw his pay,
Give him overtime for workin' for the country right an' day;
Band'll meet him at the station—people
cheerin' fit to kill;
Oh, it's great to have a daddy who can pass a money bill!

Powerful Poetry.

"There's money in the poetry business," says Tennyson J. Dell, in The Kansas City Star. "I have succeeded in keeping the wolf from the door by means of my poetry, and upon one occasion I caused a burglariously inclined wretch to leap from a second story window and break two of his own legs by merely reading to him an original ode."

He Never Resigns.

I.

Santa Claus—he lives forever; even where politicians shout.
Still they keep him in the office when they turn the others out;
Always from the snowy regions of the children's homes he's bound;
World is goin' like a race horse, but he keeps the same old ground.

II.

That's just what we like about him; he is what they call "true-blue;"
In the springtime—in the summer he's a-thinkin', thoughts of you;
With the same old smile he greets us in his overcoat of snow;
Young as when he filled the stockings of our daddies long ago!

The Family Animals.

Here is a good one from The Dundee Advertiser:

"Everybody in our family's some kind of an animal," said Bobby to the amazed lady visitor.

"What nonsense!" she exclaimed.

"Well," replied Bobby, "mother's a dear, my baby sister is mother's little lamb, I'm the kid and dad's the goat!"

* * * *

As Usual.

No hope for father—
They're tappin' the till,
The family's passed
The home currency bill.
He's in the minority—
Painfully still;
They securely reloaded
That currency bill!

A Story of the Moment

By WALT MASON.
The Famous Prose Poet.

FORBIDDEN THINGS.

"I am sorry to see a yellow-backed novel in your pocket," remarked the professor. "I have repeatedly invited you to come here and get good books, and you continue to waste your time on cheap novels. The taste for trashy literature is something I can't understand."

"Yet it's a simple matter, professor," replied the low-browed man. "Wherever I go I hear the same old song and dance about trashy literature. My Aunt Julia is getting to be a nuisance along that line, and I am going to ask the police to suppress her. When the cows have been milked and all the chores are done, I like to beat myself on three or four chairs by the stove in the kitchen and read Peter the Pirate or some other story that has snap to it. Then Aunt Julia comes ripsnorting into the kitchen and asks me why I don't read Spurgeon's Sermons or Baxter's Saints' Rest.

"I have always held that if our freedom really means anything, a man should be permitted to choose his own reading matter without any attention from the Buttinski family. I have tried to argue the matter with my aunt. I have endeavored to show her that I have a perfect right to corrupt my mind and ruin my moral character reading 10-cent novels, just as she has a perfect right to ossify her mind by reading The Life and Letters of Sylvia Pankhurst.'

"The fact that people are always nagging me is the reason why I read trashy literature. Human beings are much like cows, professor. You convince a cow that she oughtn't to eat a particular thing, and she won't eat or sleep until she has done it. If a man made a pile of excelsior or basswood shavings in his back yard, and then fenced it in carefully, his cows would break their fool necks to get at it and eat it. Any farmer will tell you that cattle will leave the finest hay or alfalfa to tear down a barb wire fence and get at corn on a rick of old moldy straw. It's the human nature in them that makes them do it. They want the forbidden things, just as ladies and gentlemen do. Everybody roasts me about the books I read, so I keep on reading them, just to show that I'm my own boss.

"I have been smoking ever since I was four feet high, and I often wish I had never learned the habit, for tobacco has ruined my digestion and given my heart the blind staggers. Some fine morning I'll keel over dead to my father, to see why I don't get up and milk the cows, and when she finds me lying there pale and cold, with my brier between my pulseless lips, perhaps she'll be sorry for all the falls she has taken out of me. I don't know why I ever learned smoking but for my father. He was always lecturing me on the evil effects of the habit. He used to take me into his office and tell me that tobacco would stunt my growth and undermine my intellect and make my whiskers come out yellow, and if he ever saw me with a pipe in my mouth he'd give me a whaling I'd remember a hundred years.

"He talked so much about it that I simply couldn't rest until I had sampled the tobacco. I had learned that it was the desirable things were jealously guarded. My mother restorted to all sorts of schemes to keep me from eating jam, and I figured that my father was trying to throw a scare into me so I wouldn't swipe his tobacco.

"If he had told me that tobacco was one of the great joys of life, and had invited me to take a pipe with him whenever I felt like it, I feel sure I'd never have become a smoker. If he'd tried it all to please him, but one good smoke would have been enough for his little Willie. But his policy made me determined to smoke at all hazards, and when once I got a pipe I persisted until I was one of the most accomplished smokers in the whole city. I bought and took the blue ribbon for plain and fancy smoking at the county fair. So you see, professor—"

"I see that if I remain here you'll talk me into a coma, so I'll go into the house."

FAVORITE RECIPES OF DISTINGUISHED WOMEN

By MRS. CHAMP CLARK,
Wife of the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

(Copyright, 1913, for The Constitution.)

Whether the turkey be cold, milk fed or just the plain, every day variety, there is very little difference in the way it is prepared, though opinions differ as to the merits of the dressing. My fancy clings to the old-fashioned dry dressing, which never becomes soggy or heavy like some of the wet ones do, but falls apart like well-cooked rice when served.

Roast Turkey With Plain Dry Dressing.

Select a plump young turkey and after it has been drawn and washed, stuff with the following dressing:

Take two quarts of stale bread crumbs and season with two level tablespoonfuls of salt, a heaping teaspoonful of pepper, two teaspoonfuls of sage, one teaspoonful of celery and minced parsley, and one of powdered sage. Rub a cupful of butter through the crumbs and if you have the day before Thanksgiving, cover with a damp cloth to keep fresh.

Fill the cavity in the turkey with this, sew up, push legs close to body and tie, and draw the wings back and confine with skewers.

Rub salt all over the bird, lay in a roasting pan, spread a tablespoonful of butter over the breast and place in a medium hot oven.

Baste every ten or fifteen minutes with own gravy and turn often until the turkey is a light brown on all sides. When about half done turn breast downward and allow it to remain so until bird is almost done. Thus the breast meat becomes juicy instead of dry.

Stew the giblets with salt and pepper and a little onion until tender, then chop and add to the gravy in the pan, which should be thickened with browned flour.

Remove skewers and strings, garnish with parsley and serve.

The Man in the Box.

(From The Cleveland Leader.)

One of the favorite publications of the country scores a point well worth attention when it declares that the manner in which jurymen are treated in the United States is nothing short of barbarous.

"In at least half the jurisdictions of this country," it says, "a man summoned as a juror in a criminal case is a calamity comparable to a fire, a flood or to the dangerous illness of a member of the family. For every hour a guilty felon spends in unwilling confinement the innocent juror spends at least 45 minutes in a more irksome confinement."

So far as provision for personal comfort goes, the conveniences of the courts are almost wholly for the judges and the lawyers. Here in Cleveland, in the splendid new courthouse, we have done much to ameliorate the condition of the unfortunate persons caught in a jury panel or involved in a test of rights before the law, but crying the juryman needs physical surroundings does not answer the whole purpose.

The average citizen is as anxious to evade jury duty as he is to escape the inquiries of the tax assessor or avoid smallpox. And all because there is no one to protect him and he has no power to protect himself.

Will Simplify Matters.

(From The Springfield Republican.)

If Mrs. Pankhurst remains in Paris, as it is now said she may do, it will greatly simplify matters both for the government and for her adherents, who have pledged themselves not to let her be put in jail again.

The World's Mysteries

WHO KILLED PRINCE ARTHUR?

Prince Arthur, the Duke of Brittany, who was a grandson of Henry II of England, met a violent death, but the historians have never been able to determine whether he was murdered by King John, whether he was drowned by orders of the English king, or whether he committed suicide. The prince was a nephew of Richard I, Coeur de Lion, who in 1190 declared him heir to the English throne. In support of Arthur, Philip of France took the field against John. Soon, however, Philip's unscrupulous conduct gave offense to the Angevin friends of Arthur, and in 1200 a peace was concluded between John and Philip.

Two years later, however, the war again was resumed and Arthur, who had marched to besiege the castle of Mirabeau, was taken prisoner. He was removed, it is said, a year later to Rouen, from which place he mysteriously disappeared. Hollinshed, the chronicler, is of the opinion that he was drowned in the Seine. Other chroniclers disagree with him.

One historian has it that he was confined in a castle at Rouen. It is said that the king ordered the governor of the castle, Hubert de Bourg, to slay the prince. This De Bourg refused to do, whereupon the King exclaimed: "We will soon see to this," and bursting out of the room in a transport of rage, he ordered his horse to be got ready and fifty of his own guards to attend him.

When he arrived at the castle he immediately ordered the governor into his presence. He approached with fear and trembling, and the king commanded him to lead him to where the prisoner was kept. "Threats have no influence on me, most gracious sire," replied Hubert. "Thou canst do with this poor body as thou wilt, when life has parted from it, but never will I be an accomplice to so unnatural a murder as that thou contemplatest."

King John found his way to the prince's chamber, and when he approached Arthur started with surprise. His first impulse was to rush upon John, but he was disarmed. "Arthur Plantagenet," said the king, in a hoarse voice, "thou art mine enemy; thou darest aspire to the crown; thou art my prisoner; thy liberty is at my disposal, thy life is mine. On one condition, and on one only, will I pardon thee. Wilt thou swear never to assert thy claim to the throne of England?"

"Sooner will I die," replied the intrepid prince, "than yield that which is my just inheritance. And dost thou come hither with thy sword drawn against thy brother's son; art thou turned murderer? Canst thou find none other to do thy hellish work?"

To the king replied: "Then die, thou traitor," and it is said, that "he plunged his sword full at the breast of the young prince. Arthur leaped hastily aside and avoided the thrust. Uttering a piercing shriek of horror, with one bound he gained the window that admitted light into his cell. It was full fifty feet to the earth, but he saw not the distance. He gave the fatal leap and the next moment was a mangled corpse on the stones below."

This is the story that was told by the English historians of the time. Was it done at the instigation of John, and to protect his memory as having been the murderer of his nephew? French historians take a different view of the matter, as a rule, and claim that the king killed his nephew and threw the body from the window.

The body was found by one of Hubert's followers and concealed, and though the murder was for a long time kept a secret, the people eventually learned the truth. All men were horrified at the deed, and from that moment King John, who was already detested by his subjects, retained but a precarious hold upon the hearts of nobles and barons in his dominions. Philip of France continued the war against him and took from him nearly all his continental possessions.

What eventually became of the body of the young prince has never been definitely settled. Other stories of his death are as follows: One to the effect that John, in a fit of frenzy, struck Arthur dead with a huge stone and flung his body into the Seine, and that it was recovered by fishermen and subsequently buried in the priory of Ste. Marie des Preas. Walter, of Coventry, in his "Memoriale," says that Arthur suddenly disappeared, and that his burial place is unknown. Matthew Paris and Thomas Wykes both assert that John had Arthur murdered. Nothing more definite is known of what became of the prince than that he suddenly disappeared in April, 1203, and that his disappearance was contrived by John.

EDINBURGH.

By George Fitch,
Author of "At Good Old Siwash."

Edinburgh, the capital of Scotland, is situated in a cold north wind, on the south side of the Firth of Forth. It has about 350,000 people, and has managed to get itself more talked about in literature than almost any other city of this size.

Edinburgh stumbles over three great hills, and has been built with great care and good taste. Even the railroads in Edinburgh are aesthetic. They have made a valley into a great park, and managed to make the city handsomer by passing through it. Many railroad presidents should be compelled by law to go to Edinburgh with a two quart notebook.

Edinburgh's origin is lost in the Scotch mists of antiquity. It contains some very ancient buildings, including the castle, tenements in the old town, and a number of prehistoric cab horses. The tenements of Edinburgh are the earliest known skyscrapers. They are from six to nine stories high, built of brick and propped up with flying buttresses and clothes drying poles. Now and then, one of these "lands," as they are called, falls down, but other improvements in them have been made for a generation.

Edinburgh is so strongly impregnated with history that there are few old buildings in which some person of eminence did not die with his boots on, during some persecution or other. Presbyterianism was introduced into Edinburgh by John Knox, and for many years was more unhealthy than cholera for those who cavorted it. Mary, Queen of Scots, was a popular resident of Edinburgh. Robert Burns belonged to several Edinburgh choral clubs. Climbing the 700 foot rock to attain Edinburgh castle was a favorite pastime six hundred years ago, but now the great local diversion is selling clan tartans to American visitors with Scotch ancestors.

Edinburgh is literary and aesthetic, and looks with scorn upon Glasgow, which is twice as big but has a comparatively few rickety buildings, and no history to speak of, few kings having been beheaded there.

O Little Town of Bethlehem.

O little town of Bethlehem,
How still we see thee lie!
Above thy deep and dreamless sleep
The silent stars go by;
Yet in thy dark streets shineth
The everlasting Light;
The hopes and fears of all the years
Are met in thee tonight.

For Christ is born of Mary,
And, gathered all above,
While mortals sleep, the angels keep
Their watch of wondering love.
O morning stars, together,
Proclaim the holy birth!
And praises sing to God the King,
And peace to men on earth.

How silently, how silently,
The wondrous gift is given!
So God imparts to human hearts
The blessings of His heaven.
No ear may hear His coming,
But in this world of sin,
Where meek souls will receive Him still,
The dear Christ enters in.

O holy Child of Bethlehem!
Descend to us, we pray;
Cast out our sin and enter in,
Be born in us today.
We hear the Christmas angels
The great glad tidings tell,
O come to us, abide with us,
Our Lord Emmanuel!

Efficient Housekeeping

By HENRIETTA D. GRAUEL,
Domestic Science Lecturer.

WHEN EGGS IS EGGS.

Housekeepers are voicing their surprise to learn that eggs that have been stored since last April, or for eight months, should be considered fit for food and their sale, at reasonable prices, indorsed by food experts.

Properly packed in layers of salt and kept in a low temperature, April eggs will be sweet and fresh as though new laid four months later and will not deteriorate greatly in six months.

It is the exorbitant prices we have paid for these eggs that rankles. Farmers sell their best April, May and June eggs to representatives of storage houses at extraordinarily low prices. Fourteen cents a dozen seems to be the average price paid in the middle states. But any farmer's wife will tell you that this is seldom paid in coin. These great storage houses ship cheap John wagons and load them with poorest quality of tinware and notions and send them into the country to barter for butter, eggs and lard. A profit is made it is in trade. Allowing a profit to the peddler for his merchandise, not 10 cents in actual value is received for the farmer's eggs per dozen.

It costs very little to store these eggs in the great warehouses until cold weather, so that an average retail price of 25 cents a dozen for prime cold storage eggs would give egg gamblers a splendid profit. Housekeepers, learning this, and knowing that for years they have paid 40 to 60 cents a dozen for these packed eggs, often paying the same for freshly laid ones, will quickly stop this unjust procedure. If we had a law that storage products should be dated when received and dated when released from storage, this deception could not be practiced.

It is better to tell fresh eggs in the store or on market, but a new laid one held to the light will show little or no air space at the small end. Eggs that are sold and kept in a low temperature will show about one-fourth of the egg is air space.

Just "eggs" may have served like sentences in storage warehouses without any commutation for good behavior, and these are light in the mouth for they are badly shrunken, and watery when broken. As the shell of an egg is porous, eggs absorb odors and impurities and lose their delicate and good qualities evaporate, so that stored eggs are not good and wholesome eating, unless carefully handled and used as soon as released from storage.

Some dealers do not know that eggs should be kept cool until used, and many housewives buy eggs that are sweet and good when packed eggs, often paying more for freshly laid ones, will quickly stop this unjust procedure. If we had a law that storage products should be dated when received and dated when released from storage, this deception could not be practiced.

The moment food is removed from cold storage decomposition sets in.

There are plenty of eggs in storage now; nearly 40,000,000 dozen, we are told, and the price is bound to come down for 700,000 organized housekeepers to have access to use eggs until they sell at 30 cents a dozen. The outlook for good mayonnaise, plenty of custards and cakes for Christmas is for the women who are working hard for justice to the farm women and to consumers.

Sublime Effrontery.

(From The London Opinion.)

Labouchere and Bleichroder, Baron Caesar, was one of Napoleon's brokers. On one occasion Fleischmann, a banker, went to Hope (his employer) to England to see Baron Caesar Baring on some business and fell in love with Sir Francis Baring's third daughter. Before leaving England he asked Sir Francis to permit him to become engaged to his daughter. Sir Francis replied: "I would rather said Sir Francis: "Would it make any difference to your decision if you knew that Mr. Hope and I were not business partners?" Sir Francis unhesitatingly admitted that it would. Pierre Caesar then went back to Holland and suggested to Mr. Hope that he might be taken into partnership. On Mr. Hope discouraging the idea, he said: "Would it make any difference to your decision if you knew that I was engaged to the daughter of Sir Francis Baring?" Mr. Hope replied: "Certainly." Whereupon the wily clerk said: "Well, I am engaged to Miss Dorothy Baring." That very day he was able to write to Sir Francis announcing the news of his admission to partnership in the house of Hope, and in the same letter he claimed the hand of his bride.

POTTLE ANNOUNCES PURPOSE TO RESIGN

The Judge Has Not Done So Yet, But Will at Early Date—Successor Not Decided On.

"I have not tendered my resignation to the governor as yet," said Judge J. R. Pottle, of the court of appeals, last night. "It is my intention, however, to offer my resignation at some date in the near future. As to just what time I will give up my position on the bench I have not yet decided."

As to the report that Sam S. Bennett, of Albany, had been selected to succeed Judge Pottle on the court of appeals bench, Governor Slaton said Sunday night:

"The report could not have had any authority from me, because I have not yet been in receipt of Judge Pottle's resignation, and have, of course, not selected his successor. I have not myself made up my mind whom I shall appoint in his place in the event Judge Pottle resigns."

Judge Pottle is the third judge to give up his place on the court of appeals since that court was organized some seven years ago, all of them practically for the same reason, namely, that they were in receipt of more lucrative offers than their judgeship salaries and that they could not live on the $4,000 per year which the state paid.

Will Practice Law.

Judge Pottle, it is said, will take up the practice of law in Albany, where he has received the offer of a lucrative partnership.

The first judge of the court of appeals to resign was Judge Arthur G. Powell, who was succeeded in office early in 1911 on appointment of Governor Slaton, at that time ad interim governor. In the succeeding primary, Judge Pottle was opposed by Judge Nash R. Broyles, recorder of Atlanta, who tied with him in the race, but who gave up in the interest of harmony, and in view of the fact that Judge Pottle had a larger number of the popular vote.

The second judge to resign was Judge Benjamin H. Hill, who left the court, two months ago, to accept a position on the superior court bench of Fulton county. He was succeeded by Judge L. S. Roan, of the Dublin circuit.

Three Places Open.

The resignation of Judge Pottle will make it necessary for all three members of the court of appeals to go before the people in the primary next year. Recorder Broyles has already announced his intention of opposing Judge Roan. That there will be a lively race for Judge Pottle's successor, entered into by a number of prominent lawyers from various parts of the state, is certain.

It has been an open secret in political circles for some time that Judge Pottle intended to resign. Just how soon he will give up his post not known, but it will probably be within the next five or six weeks. He stated Sunday that he regretted the unauthorized publication of his resignation, as he feared it might embarrass Governor Slaton.

MRS. JEROME JONES TO SELL RED CROSS STAMPS ON MONDAY

The sale of Red Cross stamps will be under the charge of Mrs. Jerome Jones today.

It is expected that before night a record sale will be made by the ladies under the direction of the energetic Mrs. Jones.

All of the down town stores and offices will be canvassed, as well as the hotels and apartment houses.

The sale of stamps during the year is expected to outdo that of the past several holiday seasons.

PROCTOR ASKS QUIET CHRISTMAS OF RACE

"Fireworks, firearms and firewater, these are three of the curses of our Christmas feast, which I pray you to put out," said Rev. H. H. Proctor at the First Congregational church, corner, on Sunday in a sermon on "The secret of a merry Christmas."

"Unselfishness is the secret. Forget yourself and be a child again by helping some child with an empty stocking. Expect nothing, and you will not be disappointed, except pleasure. There is more fun in giving than in receiving. Do not worship the babe of Bethlehem, and have no place for the birth of Christ in your heart."

BAPTISTS OF MACON NOT TO CONSOLIDATE

Macon, Ga., December 21.—(Special.) There will be no consolidation between the Tabernacle and Second Baptist churches, of Macon, though both congregations voted to take that step. Since the vote was taken considerable opposition has developed to the plan among the Second Baptist people, and today Rev. T. F. Callaway resigned his pastorate there, and next Sunday will become pastor of the Tabernacle. The Tabernacle plans to build a fine new church two blocks further out on Second street. It is also probable that the Second church will erect a new brick edifice.

AFTER SHOOTING MAN COOK GIVES SELF UP

Jesse Russell in Serious Condition—Was Shot in Fight From Petty Quarrel.

Shot and seriously wounded in a fight at the corner of Carroll and Shelton streets, Jesse C. Russell, of 46 Savannah street, was carried to Grady hospital yesterday afternoon in a precarious condition.

Less than an hour after the wounded man had been carried in an ambulance to Grady, George Cook, a young living at 18 Savannah street—only a few doors benw the Russell residence—appeared at police headquarters and surrendered, saying he had shot Russell in self-defense.

According to the police, Russell and Cook had become engaged in a slight altercation, when Russell is alleged to have thrown a rock at Cook. Blows resulted, and, as the two men fought, Cook is charged with having drawn his revolver and fired once.

The bullet took effect in the abdomen, passing through the intestines and penetrating the back. It was said by attaches that the wound is considered dangerous.

Cook was locked held at headquarters on a charge of disorderly conduct pending the condition of the wounded man.

DULL WEEK PROBABLE IN THE COTTON MARKET

New Orleans, December 21.—The coming week in the cotton market does not promise much activity, although unforseen developments may arise. The week will be broken by the holiday Thursday, the one day on which the American markets will close, but it is likely that the Friday and Saturday sessions will be dull, as Liverpool closes Wednesday night for the week and the American and markets are seldom normally active with no trading in the English market.

There will be no reports of any kind this week. The present ginning period does not end until December 31, and, therefore, there will not even be any excuse for forecasts from private business houses. There will have Saturday's report on ginning up to December 12 to serve as a basis for new crop calculations and as a check on the recent crop estimate by the government. It is rather likely that the results obtained from this figuring may not correspond with the total obtained by the government experts, and the chances are that the results may be given a fourth twist, partly because of the sentiment now prevailing in the market and partly because the crop is so nearly ginned that percentages of past seasons are apt to be misleading. It may be that prices will be adversely affected by this feature.

The trade will watch the spot situation very closely for any sudden influx of offerings. Such as are at times seen around the year end holidays, the granting of spots and the granting of concessions by sellers would have an immediate and strong effect on the price of contracts. Bears have been waiting for such an occurrence to help them out.

Should the situation will be also watched very closely for any signs of slowing down in consumption, such as many traders think is inevitable, because the pessimistic feeling ruling in many lines of business

COURT IN WHITFIELD CONVENES JANUARY 5

Dalton, Ga., December 21.—(Special.) The January term of Whitfield superior court will convene here on January 5, Judge Pitts presiding. This is not the term at which the grand jury meets, but owing to the fact that there are a number of men in jail here charged with felonies, it is probable that a grand jury will be impaneled.

There will be several murder cases, among them being that of Ira Fisher, charged with killing a young man in 1909. Fisher also figured as a postwitness in the Frank trials, which involved the old case here and resulted in his indictment; also the trial of William I. Umphrey, who awaits indictment and trial for the murder of Joseph S. Pritchett, November 17 last.

SPREAD OF TRICHINOSIS FOUGHT BY GOVERNMENT

Washington, December 21.—To prevent the spread of trichinosis the department of agriculture today started a warning against the consumption of raw or uncooked pork products, the declared source of the disease. In the southern sections of the country, particularly in sections with large foreign population, the statement said, large quantities of pork are consumed during the Christmas season, resulting frequently in serious illness, if not in fatalities.

The department asserts that during November and December, 1911, fifty-eight cases of trichinosis terminated fatally in one California community. In each instance the disease was traced to sausage made from uninspected condition. Other outbreaks of the disease with many fatalities are cited.

The disease caused by a parasite, microscopic in size, found in hog flesh and there is no known effective method of treatment.

Statistics based by government scientists during a period of nine years show that 16 per cent of the 8,000,000 hogs examined were infected with trichinosis.

EMBEZZLER CAPTURED AFTER A LONG CHASE

New York, December 21.—A fugitive for four months after jumping bail on embezzling $12,000 from W. C. Edmonds, a wholesale hardware dealer of Baltimore, James Ralph Hackett, confessed to the French consul today on the steamer Verdi from Buenos Ayres. He is in the custody of a detective.

At Bahai, at Rio de Janeiro, and again at Montevideo, the slip on which Hackett left New York last August was searched, but he was not discovered. Subsequently, however, he heard that friends had hidden him in a refrigerator car, but the search was in progress. He went ashore at Montevideo, where he was arrested.

BACOT IS TRAINMASTER ON SEABOARD RAILWAY

Americus, Ga., December 21.—(Special.)—D. N. Bacot has been appointed trainmaster for the Georgia Alabama division of the Seaboard railway, with headquarters in Americus, and arrived today from Savannah to assume his new duties. Trainmaster Bacot succeeds G. A. Bradley, who has gone to Norfolk as superintendent of the Norfolk and Southern railway. Mr. Bacot is well known in railway circles in the state, and the appointment is considered a very excellent one. For eight years he was superintendent of the Savannah and Statesboro railway, and has held other important positions as well.

Market Week in Troup.

Fitzgerald, Ga., December 21.—(Special.)—E. M. Washburn, of Troup county, in connection with E. K. Farmer, J. M. McDonald, J. L. Dorminy and others, will put in 200 acres of cantaloupes of the pink meat variety and George Drexler, with other members of the Truck Growers' association, have just received two carloads of Irish seed potatoes for spring planting. The farmers of this vicinity will plant more market truck than usual this year.

Savannah Bride Will Seek Divorce From Crook-Husband

Mrs. "Daval" Denounces the Forger Who Is Locked Up in a Cell in Philadelphia

Philadelphia, Pa., December 21.—(Special.)—Sobbing as she denounced her husband who courted her while he was playing the role of forger of high and society man by night, Mrs. Bertha Daval, a pretty young bride, formerly Miss Kent, of Savannah, Ga., announced today that she would seek to have her marriage annulled.

Mrs. Daval's husband, known to the police as John H. Davies, alias John Daval, was arrested last night in the Ritz Carlton, charged with forgery. He was playing the part of bridegroom spending their honeymoon at that hotel. Davies or Daval, under which names he is known to the police of more than a dozen cities, is charged with passing a worthless check to a physician in this city.

While the prisoner was locked up in a cell at the city hall his bride, whom he met at a charity ball in Savannah, where he arrived last night in the role of this city, today visited him. Trembling and speaking in a choking voice the young woman asked her husband why he had lured her to marriage. The prisoner begged his bride to forgive him and assured her that everything would turn out for the best.

"Why didn't you tell me that you were in prison and that you had committed other crimes?" sobbed Mrs. Daval.

"I loved you and thought if I told you the truth you wouldn't marry me," replied the prisoner.

Suddenly the young woman turned her back to her husband and exclaimed: "I never want to see your face again. I am going back to Savannah and will try and have my marriage annulled."

When Mrs. Daval, who was a widow before marrying Daval, resided in the Young Woman's Christian association she was engaged. She was taken to her room, where tonight she was being cared for by the matron and two young women.

Funds Sent by Mother.

Savannah, Ga., December 21.—(Special.)—How Mrs. Mattie McCoy, an attractive young widow of Savannah, lost her heart to a good looking, smooth-tongued stranger, who took her to Philadelphia on a honeymoon and there yielded to a temptation he had been resisting for years, was told today by the young woman's mother, Mrs. Annie Kent. The man went under the name of John Daval in Savannah.

He booked as John H. Anderson on the steamer and at the Ritz Carlton hotel in Philadelphia, registered as John Davis, which, it developed, is his real name. Funds for the bride's transportation back to Savannah have been sent by her mother.

Helen Keller Spent the Day Quietly With Her Mother

Helen Keller today is the most radiant, jubilant young girl in the world.

She is looking forward to next May when she will go to the home of the inventor, Alexander A. Bedell, in Short Orange, N. J., to experiment with him upon his invention which, it is hoped, will enable the helpless blind to read the print of ordinary book and newspaper type.

Helen Keller has the utmost faith in Edison's new theory.

It was just this feeling that grew on her during the first years she studied under Mrs. John A. Macy. When Miss Keller visited the laboratory of the great inventor some months ago he explained to her the principle of such a contrivance which enabled her to detect through vibration of the machine the notes which wafted from the wax disc of a phonograph. Since that visit to Edison's workshop, Miss Keller has practiced the detection of various sounds through feeling with the tips of her fingers. She is teaching herself to differentiate footsteps of the person she knows. She can detect, through the vibration, the footsteps of Mrs. Macy and other persons she has been frequently thrown in contact with.

Helen Keller and Edison.

"I shall never forget the day Helen and Mr. Edison met for the first time," said Mrs. Macy. "Both had longed for the meeting many years. Helen and I went to his home in East Orange, N. J., one day and we passed hours with the phonograph. It was wonderful to see how Helen fondled with the most wonderful persons in the world today. Mr. Edison played his best selections and horn of the phonograph and Helen was able to read the sound waves.

"His new invention, when complete, will be a great boon to the blind."

Miss Keller spent a quiet Sunday in Atlanta, remaining in her rooms at the Ansley hotel throughout the day. She conversed with her mother (Mrs. Macy) continually. More than one hundred persons called at the hotel to see her, but they were all denied because she expressed the wish that she be allowed to spend the entire morning with her mother.

Many Telephone Calls.

Telephone calls were so frequent that Mrs. Macy was forced to ask the hotel management not to allow anyone to ring.

For the first time in many weeks Helen and her mother, Mrs. Kate Adams Keller, spent many happy hours together. They have recovered the fatigue which she suffered following the excitement of her arrival in Atlanta. the visits of the ladies of the Daughters of the Confederacy, newspaper interviews, the hasty luncheon and the lecture at the auditorium before hundreds, Saturday night.

Miss Keller was forced to decline several invitations to church services and Sunday school. She explained that she was unable to attend W. F. Cunningham's Sunday school class at St. Mark's Methodist church for the deaf and dumb.

In the afternoon Miss Keller accompanied her mother and Mrs. Macy to the Forsyth theater to the Empty Stocking Fund entertainment.

Upon her return to the hotel orders were again given that she not be disturbed, and she retired early for a long rest preparatory to her departure for Montgomery, Ala., Monday morning.

Will Visit Old Home.

According to plans which Miss Keller and Mrs. Macy agreed upon before coming to Atlanta, Montgomery is only one of the many places which they will proceed to Tuscumbia for a visit to the Keller home.

Helen Keller will resume her lecture tours after the holidays. She will appear in Washington for a brief stay. The last entire week, going to the Edison laboratory will be in Worcester, Mass., early in May.

Helen Keller's farewell message to Atlanta was: "I enjoyed being in it and was thankful to those who assisted in making her stay so agreeable.

"I could not give my impression of the Atlanta spirit while I was there, being because I had not been in the city long enough," she said. "But I can now say that I think the Atlanta spirit is simply great."

PELHAM MARSHAL FREED MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE

Jury Justifies D. C. Campbell for Blow Which Killed Tom Simpson.

Thomasville, Ga., December 21.—(Special.)—D. C. Campbell, marshal of Pelham, on trial in the superior court here charged with manslaughter, was acquitted by the jury in the case. The case was the result of the killing of Tom Simpson, of Mitchell county, some time ago by a blow from the marshal when he was interfering with the arrest of his brother for misdemeanor.

The evidence for the defense showed that not only was the marshal justified in his action as an officer of the law, but that he had reason to fear that his life was in danger. The trial consumed a good part of the night, the jury giving a sealed verdict at midnight. The case was ably fought on both sides.

TOWN WILL BE GIVEN TRAIN FOR CHRISTMAS

Waycross, Ga., December 21.—(Special.)—What will probably be one of the biggest Christmas gifts of the state will be given by the Savannah, Florida & Western railroad to the people of Sirmans and the section of Clinch county surrounding. The road proposes now to give the people of that section a train that will be delivered Christmas eve, or first thing Christmas day, and will be a temporary one, for the road will operate passenger train regularly between Waycross and Sirmans. The line is now under the extension of the road, but it has been decided to withhold the operation of the schedule until the date named. Sirmans is 25 miles west of Waycross and will have in the city a lot of business. It is not yet known where the road will be built from Sirmans. Milltown people are anxious to get the road and have given a recent weeks subscribed liberally to the road's stock to secure the extension.

PLANS TO ADVERTISE SOUTHWEST GEORGIA

Bainbridge, Ga., December 21.—(Special.)—A plan for advertising southwest Georgia in which every section shall participate, is being formulated by a Decatur committee of Trade, with headquarters in this city. President W. A. Wheeler has proposed a scheme whereby the section shall secure the cooperation and publicity it deserves without imposing any heavy financial burden upon any one county.

"We all know," said he, "that the only reason why more people have not come to southwest Georgia is because more of them do not know of the unparalleled advantages we possess. Everybody knows about the climate and cropping possibilities of California and Texas, because those places have advertised. The thing to do is for us to follow suit. Each of our counties can do something, but unitedly we could conduct such a campaign as would awaken the entire country to our greatness."

Cotton in Dodge County.

Eastman, Ga., December 21.—(Special.)—The tabulations of returns from the ginners for the December 1 report shows that there were 31,215 bales of cotton ginned in Dodge county from the crop of 1913, prior to December 1, as compared with 30,491 bales ginned prior to December 1, 1912, or a gain of

OBSERVANCE OF XMAS ROASTED FROM PULPIT

Yuletide Is Called Season of Absurd and Wild Extravagance by Rev. Hubert.

Macon, Ga., December 21.—(Special.) Rev. T. S. Hubert, pastor of the East Macon Baptist church, created a sensation today when he preached a sermon against the present-day observance of Christmas.

"The observance of so-called holy days, such as Christmas and Easter, are without one word of warrant in the word of God," he said. "In other years European cities have had to protect themselves from Christmas revelling, but we do not need to go to Europe to see what Christmas stands for. Here are papers advertising special sales of whiskies and wines because Christmas is coming. Here is society busy with Christmas dances and other fandangoes. Here are stores loaded for the annual carnival of absurd and wild extravagance.

"How is it possible for this to honor the meek and lowly Jesus? Our indictment is not against that bearer the name of Christ are as astonishing as would be the sight of a man to embrace a painted harlot in the name of a sainted mother."

FAIL TO BLOW SAFE CONTAINING $7,500

Yeggs Leave Department Store After Using Nitro-Glycerin Twice Sunday Morning.

Thanks to the burglar-proof safe of Smith & Higgins department store at Peters and Walker streets, a yegg is today without his Christmas present of $7,500, which was the amount in the safe last night when an attempt to blast it open was made.

The yeggs made their way into the building through a rear window time after midnight, and made two attempts to blast the safe open with nitroglycerin, failing in both attempts. The burglars were then either frightened away or became disgusted with the job in disgust.

The safe had they been able to get the outer door open," says J. R. Smith, a member of the firm, "would have believed that they could have penetrated the steel vault within, beside and contained the money. Besides, the safe and its contents were insured."

OVER 1,500 DRAWN BY FREE CONCERT TO AUDITORIUM

The regular free organ concert held Sunday afternoon at the Auditorium drew an audience of over 1,500 people.

The organ program played by Charles A. Sheldon, Jr., was one of the best heard here in some time. The rendition of Handle's "Largo" was particularly pleasing.

One of the pleasing events of the afternoon concert was the appearance of Herr Wolfington sang Verdi's "Celeste Aida" with keenest regard for its expressed melody, and his voice technique in the number was but little less than magnificent. "The Earl King," Schubert, also sung by Herr Wolfington, was a pleasing number.

Herr Wolfington will next Sunday appear at the Auditorium concert as director of the Atlanta Musical Festival chorus. This will mark his initial appearance as a director in this city.

TABERNACLE LEADS.

Its Sunday School Now Tops First Christian.

The Tabernacle Baptist Sunday school forged to the top again in the weekly attendance report of the Atlanta Sunday schools for yesterday, having 616 present. Several months ago the Tabernacle had by far the biggest Sunday school in Atlanta, but for the past six months the First Christian has carried above the Tabernacle nearly every Sunday. The fact that the Tabernacle has again reached the top has caused much rejoicing in their ranks.

The average attendance of 410 is shown in the combined figures for the nine schools reporting to the city's report. For the same day last year these schools had an average of 311, showing an average gain of 99 over last year. The complete reports of the nine schools follow:

Church	Attendance	Attendance this year	Attendance last year
St. Paul Methodist	1,000	320	298
First Methodist	1,400	325	298

SHULER SAYS CHURCH MUST SOLVE PROBLEMS

Pastor Allen Shuler, of the East Side Tabernacle, speaking last night on "The workingman and his children," made a strong plea for "the kind of education of mind and heart that will lift the working class above the mere level of industrial slave to a plane of honor, integrity and efficiency that would challenge the respect of wealth and the admiration of kings."

"I don't mean by Christian education," said the pastor, merely a developed intellect, but a developed heart and mind as well. The greatest economic problem today is not the current question, but the real question, for one of the greatest problems before the world is different. Whether or not we voluntarily assumes a degree of responsibility or not, result is not free. The very nature of the case will soon or later force us to do something, either for better or worse."

DR. RIDLEY SPEAKS ON "THE STAR OF CHRIST"

Special Christmas services were held last night at the Central Baptist tabernacle, Rev. C. A. Ridley used as his text, "We have seen His star." He spoke on "The Star of the Christ-Child, showing how His birth was an honor to all children and how His star was the only one never covered by a cloud.

GIRL OF TWENTY TWICE A RUNAWAY

Miss Jewel Shockley Marries Roy Roberson in Same Manner as She Wed Other Man.

Just 20 years old and with a record of two runaway marriages and one divorce in her life already! That is the pace set by Miss Jewel Shockley, or rather Mrs. Roy Roberson, as she is now, who returned to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. K. Shockley, at 94 Stonewall street, yesterday afternoon with her new husband to claim parental forgiveness.

It is hardly necessary to add that this was readily granted, as there was no real objection to the bridegroom and the families had known each other all their lives. It was just that Miss Jewel could always be depended upon to do the unexpected, and it was the unexpected which she did when she stole away from her home Saturday night, and with her intended proceeded to the residence of Rev. Graham on Garnett street.

Had to Wait for Preacher.

From there they summoned the Rev. L. J. Ehrlich, a Christianized Jewish missionary, and after waiting an hour and a half for his coming they were at last made one, the groom, Roy Roberson, having provided himself with the license early in the afternoon.

The first romance of Miss Jewel, and still it could hardly be called the first one either, for she and Roy had been school sweethearts, but their first runaway marriage occurred about a year and a half ago, when she made the acquaintance in the telegraph office where she was one of a dozen stranger of attractive appearance and taking foreign air, named DeArmond.

Other Affair Was Brief.

Their acquaintance was brief when it culminated in the elopement and the removal of the married pair to Memphis. They had resided there but a short time, however, when the bride found out more about her foreign helpmeet, too much in fact, and her heart yearned for the sweetheart of her childhood days.

They quarreled and he sent her back to her parents in Georgia. She lost no time in securing a divorce and took back her maiden name, so her father said last night, and as soon as she was free she married her former sweetheart.

The bride was in the employ of the Western Union Telegraph company. The husband works for the Hightower Lumber company.

BOYS' AND GIRLS' CLUBS PUT SOUTH TO FRONT

Washington, December 21.—Commenting on the statement issued by the United States department of agriculture, showing the results attained by the boys and girls who won prizes in the boys' corn clubs and girls' canning clubs in their respective states in the season of 1913, President Harrison, of the Southern Railway company, said today:

"While the work done by the boys and girls in all of the states was remarkable, it is very gratifying to me to note that first honors, both in the boys' corn clubs and the girls' canning clubs, went to states traversed by the lines of the Southern railway system. The wonderful record made by Jerry Moore, of South Carolina, who grew 228.5 bushels of corn on a single acre in 1910, directed attention to the great advantages of the southeastern states as a corn-growing locality. Now comes Walker Lee Dunson, of Alabama, with a record of 222.7 bushels on a single acre, setting a new mark for the members of the boys' corn clubs throughout the United States. The superiority of the southeast for corn production is demonstrated not only by Walker Dunson's remarkable record, but also by the fact that the yields obtained by the prize winning boys in each of the states of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Tennessee exceeded the highest yield obtained by any boy in a northern or western states.

"No less remarkable than the record made by Walker Dunson in the corn club work was that made by Miss Clyde Sullivan, of Georgia, who grew 8,551 pounds of tomatoes on a tenth of an acre, surpassing by 1,374 pounds the highest record made by any girl in the north or west. Other southeastern girls did remarkably well, notably Miss Lizzie Kelley, of South Carolina, with a record of 4,374 pounds on a tenth of an acre.

"Taken as a whole, the records of the southeastern boys and girls demonstrate the superior agricultural and horticultural advantages of the southeastern states, not only for purely southern crops, such as cotton and early fruits and vegetables, but also for crops which are usually associated in the public mind with the north and west. They demonstrate that the states south of the Ohio and Potomac rivers and east of the Mississippi offer unsurpassed advantages for the man seeking to engage in profitable diversified agriculture."

DOCK YARD FIRE-SWEPT TWO MEN ARE BURNED

Portsmouth, England, December 21. A fire, involving damage variously estimated at from $1,250,000 to $2,500,000, devastated the famous dock, on Saturday night and resulted in the loss of two lives and the destruction of the century old semaphore tower, which in the pre-telegraph days was the great signalling station between the fleet and the admiralty.

An examination of the ruins today disclosed the fact that two of the three signal men who had remained in the tower to announce help when the fire broke out were burned to death. The third escaped through the smoke and flames to an adjoining roof and there fell unconscious. He subsequently was rescued.

Nothing is known as to how the fire originated. All the fire fighting apparatus in the dock yard rapidly was brought into action and the efforts of the men were directed to preventing the fire from reaching the main store at the end of the burning building, which was filled with 50,000 tons of heavy oil. For many hours of strenuous work the fire was gotten under control. It had then reached within 5 feet of these tanks. The flames were finally extinguished at 3 o'clock Sunday morning.

Many valuable models of old warships, records relating to Nelson and earlier periods and old naval relics were destroyed.

"THIRD DEGREE" SHOWN IN MOVING PICTURES

The Montgomery moving picture theater Sunday afternoon presented at private performance, Charles Klein's well-known play, "The Third Degree," in moving pictures. The Lubin company is the producer.

To say that the play holds the interest quite as closely in the "movies" as on the stage is, perhaps, not putting it too strongly. For what the play loses in the absence of the human voice is more than gained in the new freedom which the film affords for elaborate and realistic staging.

The film, or set of films, rather, for there are six reels of the play, is rife with color and detail, which, with the superb acting, place it in the class of moving picture classics.

MANY CHURCHES PLAN CHRISTMAS SERVICES

Attractive Music and Sermons. Mass in Catholic Churches for the Day.

At almost every church in Atlanta Sunday the sermons were on subjects seasonable for the Christmas time, and in many of them there was special Christmas music. A number of the churches will also have special Christmas services on Christmas day, with cantatas and other attractive music by the choirs and singers. At some of them candies, fruits and small remembrances for the members of the primary departments of the Sunday schools will be distributed Thursday morning; and the hearts of many little ones gladdened.

The customary Christmas services will be observed at all the Episcopal churches. At 7:30 o'clock Christmas morning there will be holy communion, followed by another holy communion and short sermon at 11 o'clock. At All Saints church the choir has prepared a special choral program for the morning services. All the churches have been beautifully decorated with evergreens and potted plants.

Christmas mass will be observed at the various Catholic churches, with special chants by the choirs.

Many of the other churches of the city will have short services. The First Methodist church will have a vesper service on Christmas eve night, but no services on Christmas day.

WHITMAN IS ATTACKED BY GOVERNOR GLYNN

Albany, Ga., December 21.—A request by District Attorney Whitman, of New York, that he be appointed a special deputy attorney general, that he might make a state-wide graft investigation, will not be granted by Governor Glynn. The governor in a statement which criticized Mr. Whitman sharply and questioned his motives in seeking the appointment, made this declaration tonight.

In addition to taking the ground that there is no warrant in the law for such action, and that it would be a severe reflection on the district attorneys of other counties, the governor said plainly that, in his opinion, Mr. Whitman's appeal was inspired by political motives.

"If Mr. Whitman thinks that playing politics in this way will embarrass me, he has reckoned without his host," said Mr. Glynn.

The governor declared that Mr. Whitman had promised to turn over any evidence of wrongdoing that he found outside of his jurisdiction, but none has come from him. Mr. Glynn added that if Mr. Whitman will surrender any evidence of this kind, which he has, prosecutions will be carried on by the various district attorneys or he will remove them from office.

MILTON SMITH TO BE BURIED AT WEST VIEW

The funeral of Milton A. Smith, who died Saturday, will be held this morning at 11 o'clock from the residence of St. Elmo Massengale, No. 42 Park street. Interment will be at West View.

Mr. Smith was one of Atlanta's most prominent business men, and was regarded as a man of rare judgment. He was interested in a number of real estate and lumber concerns, and was always a leader in anything pertaining to the welfare of Atlanta.

His death was entirely unexpected, as he had been ill only two days.

AT THE THEATERS

"The Quaker Girl."

(At the Atlanta.)

Tonight Oliver Morosco's company of sixty popular players will open at the Atlanta with The Quaker Girl, as the bill. This musical comedy has been nearly here some time by practically the same company and has a hold on the public in excess of anything played here in recent years. The music is pretty, lilting and of a charm difficult to describe, while the comedy hits hard and pleases all. The engagement of the company is for tonight, Saturday and Wednesday with a matinee Wednesday. The highest standard is maintained and a pleasing performance is assured.

"Within the Law."

(At the Atlanta.)

This morning at 9 o'clock the sale of seats for the engagement of "Within the Law," will commence and it is expected that a line of purchasers extending from Forsyth street corner will greet the treasurer when the box office opens. The play is said to be the sensation of the past year and all Atlanta will want to see it. The play is to be given by a fine cast, opening with a matinee Christmas day and continuing through the week with a second matinee Saturday. The players who will be seen here are thoroughly capable and pleasing in every respect and have won volumes of praise from the critics of Richmond, Memphis, Nashville, Knoxville and all the southern cities visited to this date. Seats for all performances go on sale tomorrow.

Keith Vaudeville.

(At the Forsyth.)

A genuine holiday week bill will be the attraction at the Forsyth for the week commencing with matinee today—the Christmas week of 1913. It promises to be a better than usual Forsyth offering. There are seven acts in the list of excellent quality and several features acts that will prove to be superior to the average run.

Irwin Cobb's "Sergeant Dagby," a player of the south written in Mr. Cobb's best manner, dramatized by Boardman Bulger, another southerner who has made good in New York, and staged by an expert, will be a leader. There are seven people in the cast of the comedy, each a thoroughly character type.

A great comedy feature will be the contribution of Jo Boganey's Lunatic Bakers, a combination of ten fun makers of all ages and descriptions. Rosa Crouch and George Welch, a very lively pair, promise a treat in "Broadway Throughout," and Count Sebastian, the wonder of nations, will display something new in this section. Miss Dagmar Dunevet and Anatol Friedland with dances and piano playing will be one of the special features. Burton Hahn and Cantwell promise a series of laughs that will stir enthusiasm. Burton and Lerner in a burlesque on opera and other features make up the bill.

"Happy Hooligan."

(At the Lyric.)

The Lyric announces for next week that success of years ago, "Happy Hooligan." A brand-new book and music have been prepared, with a big scenic production. An entire new cast of actors and singers is cast to that uproariously funny character. The popularity of "Happy Hooligan" as a play and the enduring qualities of the entertainment can best be judged by the fact that it has earned more than a million dollars in clear profits, and the appearance of the play in almost any corner of the country calls forth capacity business now as it did a decade ago. The play is a hodge-podge of funny doings and funny people. "Slaphappy" and his unconquerable "Chesty Gus" are always in evidence. "Happy" will have a complete new line of "funny stunts," as will also "Gloomy," not forgetting the "Hooligan Kids," who are as handsome as ever and not a whit bigger than when the cartoonist created them.

Jewell Kelley Stock.

(At the Bijou.)

One of the most interesting bills of the stock season at the Bijou will be inaugurated this afternoon by the Jewell Kelley Stock company in the presentation of Hal Reid's drama of New York life, "The Midnight Marriage." The story told is one of great human interest, one that grips the heart and holds the attention of an audience from start to finish. In selecting New York for the scene of his drama Hal Reid has pictured to theatergoers the wild scenes of revelry that take place in the dance halls of the Bowery and a great moral is pointed out. From a scenic standpoint the play will be one of the most pretentious offerings of the stock company, and the Bijou management is one of the most complete. The Bowery's dance halls and the miniature stage on the music halls are the most novel effect. Monday night ladies will be admitted free when accompanied by an escort holding a paid 30-cent ticket purchased before 6 o'clock.

CENTRAL RAISES WAGES AS CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

According to Agreement, All Employees of Maintenance Department Get Increase.

Macon, Ga., December 21.—(Special.) The Central of Georgia railway has granted an increase in wages to the employees of the maintenance department as a Christmas present. Through an agreement reached all section foremen, yard foremen, bridge foremen will get $2 more per month; the assistant bridge foremen $1 more and the section apprentices 10 cents more per hour.

Foremen on the Albany and Southwestern divisions will receive an increase of 50 cents per month and all extra gangs will get $2.50 more. The new schedule becomes effective January 1.

Caretaker Is Cremated.

Greensboro, N. C., December 21.—Robert E. Lee, caretaker for Joseph B. Sellars, of White Plains, N. Y., was burned to death last night at the Sellers place in Almance county, near here, when the house in which he lived alone was destroyed by fire of an unknown origin. Neighbors attracted to the scene attempted to rescue Mr. Lee, who was about 70 years old, by smashing in the window to his bed room, but the intense heat drove them back and the unfortunate man was cremated.

ARRESTS MAY FOLLOW BIG FIRE IN SAVANNAH

Capt. Joyner Believes Flames Were Due to Work of an Incendiary.

Savannah, Ga., December 21.—Evidence secured by an investigation made by State Fire Marshal W. R. Joyner may result in indictments being returned against a Savannah merchant whose place was destroyed in the fire of last Tuesday night.

Captain Joyner got more than a dozen affidavits that clearly show, he says, that the fire was of incendiary origin. He is positive from his investigation that the fire started in the store of S. Bernstein. The facts brought out by his investigation will be turned over to the state insurance commission. Prosecution is expected to follow. Property valued at over $130,000 was destroyed in the fire.

200 Passengers Escape.

Lorette, Manitoba, December 21.—Canadian Northern train from Duluth, Minn., was derailed near here today and five coaches and a baggage and dining car overturned into the ditch. The wreckage caught fire, but the 200 passengers escaped through broken windows, scratched and bruised, and helped extinguish the flames. A broken rail caused the accident. Three coaches were destroyed. A relief train took the passengers to Winnipeg.

AMERICUS CHIEF'S RAID UNEARTHS MUCH WHISKY

Americus, Ga., December 21.—(Special.)—Chief Johnson and a squad of policemen made a successful raid last night upon Charles Underwood's place on Cotton avenue, securing a considerable quantity of liquor in barrels and bottles, which was hauled to headquarters. Underwood's place has been raided upon a number of occasions in recent years, and generally with rich results in the way of harvesting whisky found there.

EXPRESS PEOPLE KEEPING AHEAD

At 6 O'Clock Sunday Night Officials Reported That Local Office Was Clear of All Packages.

Handling Christmas express parcels by the trainload. Sounds simple, doesn't it? But the sight of over 400 men, each busy at his place, not like the trained soldier, each obeying instructions to the letter, has enabled W. T. Elder, the Southern Express agent for Atlanta, to announce that the movement of express, both in and out of this city, "is just the same as if it were August, our dullest month."

Remarkable as it may sound, the express situation in Atlanta on Sunday night was just as if Christmas were not four days away. Officials reported that there wasn't a belated parcel at either of the three express stations in the city when 6 o'clock came.

However, this remarkable state of affairs is due primarily to the sense of organization in the express company, and secondly, to the "spirit" of the men who are handling the vast quantities of express, pouring in and out of this terminus every twelve hours.

Over 200 Extra Men.

There are over 200 extra men at work for the express company now. There are over twenty-five extra express wagons which have been pressed into service. And all of this atop the usual working force of the express company which totals over 200 men and over 50 wagons. To handle the outgoing express matter in the quickest possible manner, Agent Elder has employed several auto trucks which are being used with great success in the downtown districts where express packages are generally bulky.

Mr. Elder stated Sunday night that this year's business for the express company outdid any similar occasion in the history of the local agency.

"Our last year, we believed, would be the banner season for some time. But with three days still before Christmas, actually arrives, we are facing a total of business which far outruns last year.

"No Complaints Yet."

"The most remarkable part of this is the fact that I have yet to hear the first complaint as to our service. Everything is moving along most smoothly. My men have responded nobly to the extra task imposed on them by the holiday season, and we will hang up a record for efficiency this year that will be a world-beater.

"All of Sunday and, in fact, day and night, for the past week, we haven't closed shop for a moment. Our train crews have been short on sleep for a week, but they have been on the job and I am glad to say that we face this week with no worry, as we cheerfully everything last night at 6 o'clock, and it can't come too fast for me to remaining days before Christmas."

WITH SLIGHT DROP IN TEMPERATURE, DAY WILL BE FINE

Today will be a fair one—like yesterday—but there will be a drop in the temperature, according to the official forecast sent from Washington late Sunday afternoon.

Sunday afternoon was about as fine an example of beautiful weather as could be found in any spot in the United States. This may sound "some heated" to the uninitiated, but even the tourist, who probably smiles as he reads regular "boosts" for Atlanta, can take a straight tip and look over the weather files for the entire country during the past month, then give Atlanta the palm for fine winter weather.

Hundreds took advantage of the fine afternoon to take an airing. The downtown streets were crowded with pedestrians, and even the parks had a share of those who wanted a breath-ing space.

Even if the temperature should drop a trifle, the fairness of the sky and the sun's rays will make it a day well worth while.

Open Evenings until Christmas

MANY FARMERS PLAN TO TAKE SHORT COURSES

Athens, Ga., December 21.—(Special.) Judged by the number of reservations being made in Athens for accommodations of those who have decided to attend the short course for farmers at the State College of Agriculture, there will be between 200 and 300 in attendance January 5-16. It is stated that whether reservations are made in advance or not that accommodations will be provided for all who come, but that it is preferred that previous notice be given.

President Soule says that it certainly appears that the results of the course attendance is to be surpassed this time. All parts of the state are interested. Bankers are even taking a hand and are paying the railroad fares of farmers to and from Athens. More scholarships to the short courses were awarded at county, district and state fairs this year than ever before. These scholarships pay all expenses of railroad fare to and from college and board while there.

Five courses are offered: Cotton industry, cereal growing, animal husbandry, poultry raising and girls' club work. Poultry is strongly featured and veterinary principles are also stressed. A good deal of the time will be spent on the farm, in the barns and laboratories where demonstrations will be conducted.

SCOTS HOLD GEORGIA AS DEAR AS SCOTLAND

At the "between times" meeting of the Atlanta Scottish association, which met at the Burns cottage last Friday night, the Atlanta Scotch pledged to Georgia all the love and patriotism that burns in their hearts for "auld Scotia."

Of course, you know, the Atlanta Scottish association is one of the exclusive organizations in Atlanta, no one being eligible unless he be native born Scot, son of a Scot, or married to one who is a member of the Scottish association. Some of the members there going to Scotland by proxy. Scotch songs, Scotch tales, Scotch dialect, and last, but by no means least, Scotch ale, are the order of the day.

Bob McWhorter set the spirit of the meeting at times' meeting when he declared before the Scots assembled that "next to Scotland he would rather live under the blue skies of Georgia than any other country upon the face of the globe." There were cries of, "Hear, hear!" and the other members thoroughly indorsed his sentiments.

After this came a splendid proof of Scotch love for Georgia, a message from Harry Lauder was read by Arthur Craig, every fellow townsman present reference to which was received by Mrs. Craig and Mrs. Jack Chrichshank.

GRIFFIN'S BEST FALL IN QUARTER CENTURY

Griffin, Ga., December 21.—(Special.) Not within twenty-five years has this county and city enjoyed such a season of full prosperity as they are now experiencing. And not in many years has the outlook for another year been so bright.

During recent weeks the stores have been overrun with cash purchasers as well as with those who wished to settle their old accounts. Nearly a week before the holidays merchants had sold nearly all their holiday goods and, although wholesale houses in Atlanta, Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York had been importuned to make further shipments, they cannot replenish their stocks.

During the season some 20,000 bales of cotton have been marketed here, with the prevailing price highly satisfactory to the farmers. As a result, merchants declare collections were never better, in fact, practically a hundred per cent of the accounts have been paid off. In addition to caring for current accounts, a large number of old accounts carried over from other years have been canceled.

DOUBLE AUTO WEDDING OCCURS AT LAGRANGE

LaGrange, Ga., December 21.—(Special.)—A double runaway marriage took place at the LaGrange courthouse this morning just as citizens were wending their way to church. Two automobiles rolled up to the courthouse and, according to arrangement made in advance on Saturday with Justice of the Peace Robert M. Young, marriage obligations were solemnized between Lonnie T. Brown and Miss Fannie Lee McCarley, and Leo Kelley and Miss Eliza Bailey. All were from Roanoke, Ala., and left immediately after the ceremony for their homes.

On Saturday the two men came to Justice Young and told him they wanted to have the knots tied on Sunday about 10 o'clock, and asked that he have everything in readiness to do a good, quick job. He cordially agreed and was at his post of duty when they arrived and, after the ceremony, bid them all God-speed.

CHILDREN WILL SING CAROLS ON XMAS EVE

Milledgeville, Ga., December 21.—(Special.)—Milledgeville will have joyful Christmas carols ringing in the streets next Wednesday evening. Over ten children with many of their parents will go through the streets at 5 o'clock on Christmas eve singing yuletide songs.

Eastman, Ga., December 21.—(Special.)—The Colonel William Few chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution of this city, is training a class of about sixty school children, and they will march the streets of Eastman on Christmas eve from 12 until 2 o'clock singing Christmas carols. Wherever a light is seen in the windows of the homes the carolers will stop and sing. Mrs. A. L. Wilkins, regent of the Eastman chapter, is training the children.

NEGRO CORN GROWERS OF MORGAN CELEBRATE

Madison, Ga., December 21.—(Special.)—Richard D. Stinson, of the Atlanta Normal and Industrial Institute, addressed the public school and county teachers and many of their students who marched through the main streets Saturday celebrating the Colored Corn club of Morgan county. Both the county and town teachers organized their schools under the direction of Eliza Dunlap Morris, who visits the several schools, teaching corn-growing and common sewing. Negro teachers congregated from every section of the county and marched through the streets with stalks of corn, cane, fruit and other articles that the negroes had grown. Several hundred children and a band accompanied them.

STATE SANITARIUM TO HAVE TRUCK FARM

Milledgeville, Ga., December 21.—(Special.)—The state sanitarium is planning to add to the already extensive farming system in operation there and in addition to the large amount of farm products raised every year they are going to grow enough truck products to supply the needs of the institution. The undertaking will be a large one, as there are 4,000 people at the institution to be supplied and to produce a sufficient quantity will be a big task.

An experienced truck grower will be employed to supervise the work of supplying vegetables and all truck products throughout the year and it is hoped that the work can be begun in a few weeks.

Dr. Solomon to Speak.

Thomasville, Ga., December 21.—(Special.)—Dr. George Soloman, of Savannah, has accepted the invitation of Masonic lodge of Thomasville No. 365 to deliver an address at the public installation of officers on Thursday evening, January 8.

Eminent Scientists Gather Next Week for Convention

Over 2,000 Expected, Representing Nearly Every Branch of Scientific Research in America.

The last convention of the present year and the first convention of the coming year in Atlanta will be that of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, which meets here December 29 to January 3.

The local executive committee of the organization of scientists, of which M. L. Brittain, state superintendent of public instruction, is chairman, will meet in the chamber of commerce hall Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock to complete the final arrangements for this convention.

The convention will be one of the best that has been held in Atlanta this year, in point of the number of delegates, the importance of their work and the prominence of the members.

There will be in the neighborhood of 2,000 eminent scientists gathered in Atlanta for this convention, coming here from all parts of the United States. There will also be several scientists from abroad, it is understood.

The American Association for the Advancement of Science is composed of seven different scientific organizations and its convention here will in reality be not one convention, but the coincident meeting of eleven conventions.

The Piedmont hotel will be the general headquarters for the association, but each organization will meet from time to time separately and in different halls.

Nearly every available meeting place in the city will be used during the week that the scientists are here. Meetings will be held in the capitol, at Georgia Tech, at the Atlanta Medical college and in the convention halls of the various hotels.

Addresses Open to Public.

While the entire program of the meetings has not been completed, it is known that there will be several addresses open to the public. On Tuesday night of the convention, Dr. Charles Waddell Stiles, of the United States public health service, will speak upon "The Health of the Mother in the South." On Wednesday night Professor Charles E. Munroe, of George Washington university, will speak on "The Explosive Resources of the Confederacy During the War and Now." Other public addresses may be announced later. The place where these addresses will be delivered has not been selected.

The week also bids fair to be one of considerable social activity. The delegates attending the convention represent nearly every institution of learning in the country, and are among the nation's most brilliant men. A large number of the delegates will bring their wives with them.

Governor John M. Slaton has been asked chairman of an honorary reception committee, composed of a list of the most prominent men in the city.

Mrs. John K. Ottley heads a ladies' reception committee, including about thirty or forty of the leading society women of the city.

The first meeting of a social nature will be a reception in the Taft hall on the night of the opening of the convention. Other social activities will be announced later.

Show Minerals of South.

Many of the exhibits and lectures of the scientific societies will be intensely interesting even to a layman. One of the exhibits of Section E of the association, which is the department of geology and geography, will include a enormous map and chart, prepared by the United States geological survey, showing the great mineral resources of the southern states. This map and chart will be exhibited at the state capitol and will be accompanied by more than 100 typical specimens of the different kinds of mineral resources extensively worked in the south. The specimens will be labeled and so displayed as to be both interesting and instructive to all who examine the collection.

There will be fourteen samples of coal from ten southern states, and twelve samples of oil from four southern states. Samples of granite, marble and other stones from eight states, as well as sulphur, bauxite, phosphate rock, fullers earth and other mineral products, which are more unique, although found chiefly in the southern states.

Aids Practical Gardening.

Another feature of interest to the general public will be the great constructive work which is being done by the School Garden Association of America, which encourages the school children to learn to grow flowers, fruits and vegetables both for pleasure and profit by making the pursuit a part of the children's play. This association establishes little experimental gardens in vacant lots and in the school grounds or in adjacent vacant lots, as many instances children of families whose means are limited have been given the opportunity to add materially to the income by putting in cultivation small parcels of vacant land around their homes.

The School Garden association will give stereopticon views in Atlanta of the courses of this work in twenty different nations. This exhibit will be made in Wesley Memorial auditorium at 3 o'clock on the afternoon of December 31, and will be free to the public.

Many Affiliated Societies.

An idea of the vast scope of the work of the American Association for the Advancement of Science may be gained from the following list of affiliated societies:

American Chemical society, Geological Society of America, Botanical Society of America, American Physiological society, American Astronomical association, American Society of Naturalists, American Association of Economic Entomologists, American Anthropological association, Astronomical and Astrophysical Society of America, American Physical society, Society of American Bacteriologists, American Association of Anatomists, Society for Horticultural Science, Entomological Society of America, American Society of Mechanical Engineers, American Institute of Electrical Engineers, American Society of Civil Engineers, American Mining Engineers, American Medical association, American Federation of Teachers of the Mathematical and Natural Sciences, Association of American Geographers, American Society of Zoologists, American Phytopathological society.

TWO GIRLS ARE KILLED BY STOVE IN BATHROOM

Pittsburg, Pa., December 21.—Rose Rogow, 12 years old, and Bertha Supowitz, 14, were asphyxiated tonight by fumes from a gas stove in a bathroom in the home of Isaac Rogow, a brother of one of the victims. Rogow moved into the house yesterday. The girls today assisted in fixing up the house and went to the bathroom to wash for the evening meal when they were overcome.

Music Festival Chorus.

The Atlanta Music Festival association chorus, which will give a Christmas concert next Sunday afternoon, will rehearse with the organ at the Auditorium at 3 o'clock Monday night.

CLAYTON ORR IS KILLED ALIGHTING FROM TRAIN

Dalton, Ga., December 21.—(Special.) One of the first tragedies of the holidays was the death of Clayton Orr, who was instantly killed while attempting to alight from a Western and Atlantic train at Tunnel Hill, last night. Orr and several companions boarded the train here, some intending to go to Chattanooga, and others to get off at Tunnel Hills. His companions urged him to accompany them to Chattanooga, which he finally consented to do. Just as the train emerged from the tunnel, thinking that the station had been reached, and desiring to purchase a ticket and continue his journey, the unfortunate young man endeavored to alight and was thrown violently against an embankment and killed instantly from the injuries received.

The deceased was about 30 years of age, and an employee of the Crown Cotton mills. He is survived by two small children.

FIRED EMPLOYEE HELD FOR KIRKLAND'S DEATH

Assassin Shoots and Kills Coffee County Man at His Doorway.

Douglas, Ga., December 21.—James Kirkland, a middle-aged man, was killed last night at 7 o'clock at his home in Coffee county, near Kirkland station.

Mr. Kirkland was in the house when his wife went on the veranda for some water and heard a strange noise. She returned into the house and reported it to her husband and when he went out to investigate he was shot by some one from the darkness with a shotgun loaded with buckshot. Twelve shots entered his chest, producing instant death.

The coroner's jury found sufficient facts to order the arrest of Buster Carver, a young white man, who had been working for Kirkland and who had been living in the latter's house, but who was recently discharged. Carver has been arrested and placed in jail here.

Bainbridge Festivities.

Bainbridge, Ga., December 21.—(Special.)—The Christmas festivities were ushered in Friday night by the school children, who, under the leadership of Miss Margaret Hudson, teacher of the class of expression, gave a most delightful entertainment in which the Yuletide spirit was manifest. The playlet, "A Lion Among the Ladies," was cleverly put on and numerous recitations and music created a delightful evening. The class of expression is one of the things of which Bainbridge is most proud, and much praise is given the clever teacher.

WHIFFS

Watch Dodgers.

WILBERT ROBINSON, the new manager of the Brooklyn Trolley Dodgers, is going to tear considerable wampus during the coming campaign. The Tinker deal has just been consummated, and if the Dodgers purchase Second Baseman Dick Egan from the Reds, as is their intention, the Brooklyn outfit will have an infield that will make the best of the National league look like a set of set for their honors. Daubert on first, Egan on second, Tinker on short and Smith on third, is a mighty useful infield as infields go.

Develop Hurlers.

ROBINSON'S strong forte is developing twirlers, if he is successful in pounding into form the many promising young twirlers that the Dodgers have on their roster, the City of Churches is going to be represented by a pennant contender in 1914. This is a big task, but it may all pan out differently, but to our way of thinking the Brooklyn fans have every reason to feel optimistic.

Longer Season.

THE SOUTHERN league magnates will do a wise thing if they make the season longer, as was intimated at the annual meeting here a week ago, when they instituted their schedule committee to draft two schedules—one for 140 games and the other for 154. Instead of five days later than in 1913, if the 154-game schedule is adopted, the league will run well toward the latter part of September, and the splendid weather that the south has at that stage of the year will be very profitably instead of being wasted, as it has been in season gone by. We hope they adopt the 154-game schedule.

Another Frank Day.

NEW ORLEANS fans are not going to be outdone by Atlanta fans. Atlanta has planned a Charley Frank day, at which time the genial Dutchman will be presented with a loving cup as a token of the appreciation of the Dutchman's winning the pennant by defeating Mobile in the final game of the season. New Orleans is now planning a similar day to honor Frank and to show that some New Orleans fans do appreciate what he did for the city in the way of baseball in seasons past.

Rightly So.

BILL SCHWARTZ, the Nashville manager, is very peeved and Bill should be. President Hirsig pulled the trade sending Clayton Perry to Mobile in exchange for Heinie Berger without consulting the "Boy Manager." Wonder what "Allie" Hirsig will have for this bone, which is as bad as the one he permitted when he allowed the Crackers to fatten up to Harry Cochanour. Nashville gives a mighty useful infielder to the Gulls in exchange for a broken-down twirler.

May Quit.

VANDERBILT evidently does not like the one-year rule adopted by the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic association. There are rumblings from Nashville to the effect that the Commodores may quit the association on account of the ruling. Vandy was stung harder than any of the other schools, and Mc Guigan usually drafts several mighty good men from the varsity seven prep schools in Vanderbilt's territory, and not to have these available the first season is quite a hardship on the Commodores. But to our mind the rumblings will subside to just rumblings. Vanderbilt will hardly quit the association now, and will not until she has established herself in the front rank in football once more.

One Pleasure Gone.

CRACKER fans have lost one of their greatest pleasures. They will not have the opportunity to witness Bill Foxen during the campaign of 1914, something that occupied more than anything else during the visit of the Barons to Atlanta each year. Bill has been sold by Molesworth to the Wilkesbarre club. Wilkesbarreans in the league are mighty passing.

Not Official.

NO OFFICIAL announcement has been made as yet, but it seems to be a pretty safe gamble that Dave Bancroft will be owned by Charlie Somers, the Cleveland magnate, during the coming campaign, with A. J. Heinemann, the club's secretary, named as president, and Johnny Dobbs, formerly of Montgomery, as manager. When this announcement is officially made, keep your eye on the Dope. There is the nucleus for a mighty strong ball club next season.

In a Corner.

CHARLIE WHITE, the Chicago boxer, is liable to be at the top of the lightweight division before long, if these other lightweights do not keep close watch on him. Charley has been horning into the top-notch class of late by trouncing some of the best men in the division. In his last bout, Bill has been sold by Molesworth to the Wilkesbarre club. Wilkesbarreans in the league are mighty passing.

Local Quint Good.

THE ATLANTA athletic club basketball team is going to have a busy week-end with each succeeding game, and by the time they take the floor against Birmingham and Chattanooga they should be traveling at a break-neck clip. Up to date the club has not shown flashes of brilliancy, but as a whole have been consistent. The team can get them playing consistently, but is going to be a mighty hard club to handle before the season is over.

Hope He'll Stay.

CARL MORRIS has put one over on Christopher Columbus. Carl has discovered himself, and has developed to that as a white nope he is a splendid railroad engineer and has gone back to that job. We sincerely trust that he'll stay there, for some of our engineer friends might not wish a merry Christmas for wishing such a calamity on them. Anyhow Carl has got to have Carl, and they say engineers are a sturdy lot.

Pittsburg, Pa., December 21.—(Special)—Secretary Beddetto, of the Southwestern Amateur Athletic union, declares that the south will soon have a second champion to rival Jim Thorpe, of the Birmingham Athletic club, of Birmingham, Ala. He holds the southern individual all-around title.

According to Beddetto, who knows a good athlete when he sees one, Ritchie, a great, big boy, is yet to be developed. He is 22 years old, and gives promise of making one of two best all-around men in America. He is being groomed for a place on the American team that Uncle Sam will take to Berlin three years hence.

Watch Out for Him.

Although Ritchie's special seems to be in the weight events, he has developed enough in the last two years to be considered a leader in the prospects of sending him north and trying against the best that the country boasts of.

Jim and Fred C. Thompson, of Los Angeles, representing Princeton, scored a victory over a dandy field at the Chicago all-around, meet conducted last year by the Indian Thorpe, afterward disqualified as an amateur, won the title. Thorpe, the scribes commented, was the greatest all-around athlete the world has ever produced, but what will they say now of our Ritchie?

A glance at the records compiled shows that Ritchie is better than Thompson in the 100 yards; better than Thorpe in the half-mile walk; better than Thorpe and Thompson in the 56-pound hammer; better than Thompson in the pole vault; better than Thorpe and Thompson in the 56-pound weight and mile run.

Almost a Winner.

"Ritchie has been selected on two occasions to represent the south in national meets at Pittsburg and Chicago, and each time has come within an ace of winning junior events, and only last year was beaten in the 56-pound weight by a fraction of an inch by a Chicago boy.

"Ritchie is capable of doing much better in the 16-pound weight, shot and hammer, but the strenuous effort required in a pentathlon and decathlon is very great. With all this, Ritchie can do the mile in 5:17, which beat Thorpe's record of 5:26 and Thompson's record of 5:41.

"The records show that in Ritchie's first efforts in the southern all-around he won the mile in 5:26, and in 1911 he negotiated the mile in 5:27 1-5, and has never competed through with 5:17, which is indeed remarkable.

"If Ritchie could only improve in the high hurdle events, there would be no question as to his being even better than Thorpe."

"CHICK" EVANS WILL PLAY HERE THIS WEEK

Famous Chicago Amateur Will Arrive Christmas Day—To Visit George Adair.

Charles ("Chick") Evans, Jr., of Edgewater, Chicago, will be the guest of G. W. Adair, golf champion of the Atlanta Athletic club, this week.

"Chick" will arrive in Atlanta Christmas morning on his second visit to Atlanta.

One of the most likable characters playing the great Scottish pastime, Mr. Evans is one of the most popular visitors to the local course.

On his first visit to Atlanta, a couple of years ago, Mr. Evans was the recipient of many affairs in his honor.

Mr. Evans paid the club a compliment a splendid compliment by selecting it as the course to receive the initial French championship, which he won.

Mr. Evans' visit will be a source of pleasure to every one who met him on his last visit.

JIM BASKETTE WILL JOIN THE PELICANS

Chattanooga, Tenn., December 21.—(Special.)—"Big Jim" Baskette, the Chattanooga who has been pastoring for Charles W. Somers at Toledo and Cleveland for some four seasons, probably will join Johnny Dobbs, of New Orleans, next spring.

Baskette got "in bad" with Toledo and the Naps on account of his leisurely habits, and the Mud Hens were presented to the Naps by Charles Somers, another Nap farm. Dobbs, who started Baskette in baseball in this section, is confident that the big right-hander had some good baseball left in his system, and it is said that he will interede for him and have him relayed to the Pelicans.

"POP BOY" SMITH NOT LOOKOUT CERTAINTY

Chattanooga, Tenn., December 21.—(Special.)—President Andrews promises a thorough overhaul of the reported purchase of "Pop Boy" Smith, former Birmingham hurler, from the White Sox. He is also said to be interested in conducting all the correspondence of the club from New York during the year, as there is really a whole lot going on about which he knows nothing at present.

Of course, it would not be possible for Mr. Andrews to close a deal without the president's signature, however, and it is believed that the latter is pleased that the deal has been closed by Mc-Cormick, but sets matters up other formalities before it is officially announced.

The magnate states that he knows Callahan, White Sox manager, promised to help McCormick out and that the latter has been in conference with him.

CHEERING OF ROOTERS HELP TO TRACK MEN

London, December 21.—Walter Christie, the University of California track coach, who states that he is basing much on twenty-five years of observation, that one-fourth of the efficiency of track men comes directly from the rooters behind the scenes. The athlete, says, must have music and noise to keep him going. He will use this in the intercollegiate races on the coast, California rooters being much noisier in passing the rival rooters, but that upon reaching the stands of the grandstands they speed up because of the proximity to the rooters from their own school. The problem now is said to be one well known to psychologists as "crowd contagion," and it is combined factor in determining the strength of the contestants. It is stated that a man breaks quickly into his reserve of strength when a thousand throats are cheering on.

YALE IS ARRANGING FOOTBALL SCHEDULE

New Haven, Conn., December 21.—While the Yale football schedule cannot be formally announced until after New Year's, it was learned tonight that all the games but one have been tentatively decided upon. The schedule includes: University of Maine, Lehigh, Washington and Jefferson, University of Virginia, Colgate, Brown, Princeton and Harvard. All the games except that of Princeton will be played here.

"IRON MAN" COOMBS SAYS HE FEELS FINE

Sixteenth of Inch Shorter, But Ten Times Man He Was Six Months Ago.

Philadelphia, December 21.—John W. Coombs, the Philadelphia American league ace, pitcher who was unable to play with the team last season because of illness, left here tonight for his home at West Kennebunk, Maine. He plans to spend the winter on his farm and expects to join the Athletics in Philadelphia about June. He will not accompany the team on the spring training trip.

Coombs said he now feels fine. "As a result of my illness, I am one-sixteenth of an inch shorter, but I am ten times the man I was six months ago," he said.

Coombs' physician stated today that there was no reason why Coombs should not be as good a pitcher next year as he ever was.

ATHLETIC CLUB FIVE CLOSES WITH MERCER

Baptist Quintet Will Play Here on January 14—Schedule Nearly Complete.

Coach Joe Bean, of the Atlanta Athletic club basketball team, after a conference with Captain John Westmoreland, of Mercer university, closed for a basketball game between the two teams at the local club Saturday, January 14.

This practically completes the Atlanta Athletic club's schedule of dates for the year, only one more open date remaining, and this is practically closed.

LOU CASTRO NOT YET MEMBER OF LOOKOUTS

Chattanooga, Tenn. December 21.—(Special)—The reported signing of Lou Castro as coach and comedian for the Lookouts is in error to some extent. Castro has not been signed. The original funny man was a favorite with Chattanooga when he managed the locals early this city's brief stay in the Sally league, and it is believed that he would be a drawing card here.

He approached Andrews in Atlanta and the latter promised to refer the matter to Mr. Cormick, with his indorsement, if the manager should think that the club could afford to be with a utility player for the sake of a little "life."

WOMAN SUFFRAGE WINS IN ALLIANCE DEBATE

Joseph Frankel Gets Prize as Debater—Frankel and Eplan Win Team Prize.

Advocates of woman suffrage scored a decisive victory in the prize debate held under the auspices of the public speaking department of the Jewish Educational alliance last night before an audience of over five hundred people. Joseph Frankel was awarded the prize as the best individual debater, and the team prize was awarded to the suffragists, cam Eplan and Joseph Lee.

The debate was a contest among prize winners who had won preliminary contests in their respective clubs. The cause of the anti-suffragists was creditably presented by J. B. Brail and William Stein, arguments was the tense during the conference of the Judges.

Attorney Leonard J. Grossman, general counsel of the Georgia Woman's Suffrage association, presided over the evening. The judges were Judge Ben Tindall, Arthur Powell and Boyes M. Edens. Frank Lefkoff was chairman of the meeting.

Mrs. Amelia Woodall was called to the platform while the judges were in conference, and though offering no arguments pro or con, that wasn't necessary, as the ground had been well covered by the debaters. As a member of the Atlanta Equal Suffrage association she was called on to contribute to the stage again their debate in the parlors of Hotel Ansley at a suffrage meeting. The invitation was extended to all young men interested to affiliate themselves as members of the debating society, by Professor Joseph J. Grossman, director of the alliance department of public speaking. Meetings are held every Monday evening in the rooms of the alliance. The work includes practice debates, impromptu speaking, parliamentary law drills and practical public speaking.

BANKRUPTCY PETITION AGAINST J. P. ARMSTRONG

Augusta, Ga., December 21.—(Special.)—The J. P. White company, Incorporated, of Cordele, filed in the Hill Grocery company tonight filed an involuntary bankruptcy petition against James P. Armstrong, cashier of the Cordele Commercial bank. In the petition that on December 2 he gave the Cordele Commercial bank a deed to the city, a deed to all his property, which was in the name of his wife and other creditors. Besides being cashier of the Cordele Commercial bank, Mr. Armstrong was also secretary and treasurer of the Hill Grocery company, which went into voluntary bankruptcy in the federal court in Charleston the past week, and was owner of large tracts of real estate.

The deed made to the Citizens and Southern bank, recorded here December 2, conveys as security for $90,000, Armstrong's equity in the property of the Industrial Lumber company and its realty, the equity in a large tract of land on Eighteenth street, Augusta, and his equity in his home on the Hill. The entire federal court in Georgia is said to represent considerably more than $200,000.

J. C. DAVENPORT HEADS MASONS OF NORCROSS

Norcross, Ga., December 21.—(Special.)—Norcross lodge, No. 128, Free and Accepted Masons, held their regular meeting Saturday evening for the election of officers for the ensuing year 1914, most of the members being present. The officers elected were: J. C. Davenport, worshipful master; D. W. Wingo, senior deacon; Robert Nash, junior deacon; E. C. Settles, secretary; A. McDaniel, treasurer, and L. F. Letson, tyler.

PELICAN NUCLEUS SHOWS STRENGTH

Tail-Enders Are Going to Be in the Pennant Hunt During the Coming Campaign.

New Orleans, December 21.—(Special.)—"I'm not Knocking anybody when I say that New Orleans is going to have a better team and race for a better showing next season than last," quoth A. J. Heinemann last night. "Whether we purchase Mr. Somers' interest in the club or not, we're going to make a stronger fight for the pennant—and the pennant is what the fans want. We've gotten Northern, Higgins and Starr, three mighty good men, in the last few days, and am apt to get some more very soon. Take a look at our present outfit—the best of them not the rookies owned by the club, but not quite good enough for the team—and you'll find the outfit will compare favorably with any other."

"Heinie" said that in his opinion the alliance with Cleveland would not be broken without careful consideration. He thought that almost any minor league club would welcome the backing of a big major league club and such a wealthy magnate as Charles W. Somers. As for purchasing control of interest, he declared that three local financiers, Messrs. Bloom, Douden and Englehart, had expressed a desire to join him the backing, but he didn't care to assume the responsibility alone.

The line-up of the Pelicans for 1914, as Heinemann gave it, follows:

Catchers—Higgins, Adams and Yantz.

Pitchers—Benz, Wilson, Evans, Stevenson, Glavenich, O. Williams and Lush.

First Base—Kutina.

Second Base—McDowell, Atz and Starr.

Shortstop—Knaupp.

Third Base—Derrynx.

Outfielders—Northern, Kyle and McKileen.

"UNREASONABLE," SAYS ROBINSON TO TINKER

Brooklyn Manager Thinks the Shortstop Wants Too Much Salary.

Chicago, December 21.—The salary Joe Tinker demands from the Brooklyn Nationals was termed unreasonable by Robinson, present manager of the club, in a long-distance telephone conversation Robinson went to Brooklyn to meet Tinker, and will confer with the Brooklyn manager should he return. He did not leave Chicago.

Robinson immediately got into communication with Tinker here. After the latter had declared that he and differences between himself and the Brooklyn club could be adjusted despite the attitude of the club toward his salary.

"Robinson told me the $10,000 bonus was to be paid me if I signed, and wanted to know the salary I expected," Tinker said this morning. "I replied, when I told him. He promised to call me today.

Tinker would not name the salary figure he demands from the Brooklyn Nationals was formed unreasonable by Robinson, but declared that he would be satisfactory. He said he expected to meet Charles Ebbets, president of the club, today, but did not long.

Indianapolis, Ind., December 21.—Wilbert Robinson, manager of the Brooklyn National league club, was here today for a conference with Joe Tinker, shortstop, but the latter did not arrive. Robinson said he understood Tinker had not left Chicago, but he did not attach much importance to the shortstop's failure to come here to meet him. President Ebbets, Robinson said, would complete the deal with Tinker.

FEDERAL JUDGE DEFIED BY ATTORNEY GENERAL

Jefferson City, Mo., December 21.—Notwithstanding Federal Judge Smith McPherson, at Kansas City, yesterday afternoon suspended his decree of the state utilities commission reducing the railroad's injunction suits to restrain the state from filing restitution suits, Attorney General Barker today announced he would proceed with the filing of suits against all railroads operating in the state which exacted excess passenger and freight fares paid during the time the laws were in force in courts.

The attorney general contends he will not be in contempt of court on account of the action, inasmuch as he is the supreme court of the United States has refused to grant writs of error to the injunctions against him. Suits similar to the Kansas City suits, it is said, specific here yesterday will be filed against the other roads in various circuit courts of the state, it is said. Accordingly, Mr. Barker said.

In reference to Judge McPherson's action suspending "entering" of the decree, Attorney General Barker said he allow attorneys for the railroads time to confer with Judge McPherson before he would proceed with the filing of the suits. PARCEL POST SYSTEM ADDS TO CAR RENTAL

Postal Department to Cut Cost by Establishing Railway Terminal Postoffices.

Washington, December 21.—The report of Second Assistant Postmaster General Stewart, made public tonight, contained the fact that the postoffice department expects to reduce the increased expenditures for railway car service by establishing railway terminal postoffices and requiring a separation, by routes, of first and second-class mails of publishers.

More Car Space Required.

During the last year, says the report, a large amount of additional car space was required on mail trains because of the establishment of the parcel post system. That the extension of the service necessitated a considerable increase in the annual expenditure for railway mail service is the statement that from January 1 to November 1, 1913, there was a net increase of $451,072.69. Mr. Stewart expects, however, to reduce these expenditures by instituting the reported changes.

The report shows that the cost of operating rail, ocean, river, lake, street car, screen wagon, pneumatic tube and messenger service during the year ended June 30 last was $86,122,000. The only sum will be increase for the current year by approximately $10,000,000.

The number of all classes of domestic mail service routes was 32,376, the combined length of which was 474,584 miles.

Periodical Mail by Freight.

Considerable space in the report is taken to a discussion of the transportation of periodical matter by freight. Mr. Stewart says this method of transportation has been generally satisfactory to publishers, "as in most cases it has been practicable to overcome delay in movement in the freight trains by advancing the date of deposit of the postoffice at the point of origin. Some publishers, however, objected to the fast freight service, because of the character of the contents of their publications. In such instances, it has been the policy of the department, after adequate notice has been made, to transport the mail in regular mail trains.

Consideration is being given to the question of additional compensation for railroads carrying the mails, and a report will be made to congress by the commission appointed to consider the inquiry by or before March 4, 1914.

Mail by Aeroplane.

Such experiments as heretofore have been made in the carrying of mail by aeroplane have been conducted without expense to the government, it also, says the report, that mails thus transported were entrusted only to sworn carriers. The satisfactory performance of the service has induced a recommendation by Mr. Stewart for an appropriation of $50,000 for regular experimental aeroplane service.

MERRY XMAS PLANNED BY ASHEVILLE PEOPLE

C., December 21.—Under the direction of the Christmas tree, 80 feet high, brought from the Pisgah forests 12 miles away, Asheville will observe her first "municipal Christmas" next Thursday evening. The citizens of all denominations will gather around the tree for accompaniment and sing hymns appropriate to the day's program.

First proposed by Mayor Rankin, of this city, for the benefit of the poor and needy of this section, the plans for a municipal Christmas tree spread readily favor and the various committees representing the large donations of money, food and clothing are actively at work.

The celebration will open at 8 o'clock Christmas eve with the accompaniment of the city's fire bells. The united choirs of the city churches will also sing "Come, All Ye Faithful," "Joy to the World" and "Silent Night" and other appropriate hymns. The big tree will be illuminated by 1,000 colored electric globes, the whole being surmounted by a white star, which will come out with a dim light and gradually reach full brilliancy as the hymns are sung.

EUGENIC WEDDING LAW IS DECLARED USELESS

Milwaukee, Wis., December 21.—The Wisconsin eugenic marriage law which took effect January 1 and which it is said has created a state-wide discussion for months past, was announced useless by Horace B. Walmsley in leading members of the bar, in a statement given out today.

"No service is necessary and the physical examination required by the state law cannot be enforced.

"The attempt to stop Mr. Walmsley is based on a decision of the state supreme court in 1877 to the effect that any man or woman not married at the time may, by legal and valid contract, enter into marriage without any license, medical examination, priest, clergyman or magistrate. All that is required is that the parties shall take each other as man and wife and begin to live together in that relation.

LEAGUE IS FORMED TO AID THE CONVICTS

Auburn, N. Y., December 21.—Thomas Mott Osborne, chairman of the state commission for prison reform, announced today the formation recently, by himself and leading citizens here, among the convicts of Auburn prison, where it has been informally tried during the past seven weeks, plan to be known as "Mutual Welfare League." The name derived from the initials of the words.

The society is composed of men from outside penitentiary on board and men who, without sentimental impulses, endeavor to bring about the reforms in the isolated men, advising them in personal matters, and to give them every opportunities to obtain positions for their release. The plan will be extended to all state penal institutions, it is said.

Saint Etienne, France, December 21.—Aristide Briand, the former premier, began a campaign against the new French ministry here today. He charged that the ministry is in power only by splitting the country into warring factions. He called upon the people to endeavor to achieve republican ideals.

Minister of Justice Briand's opponent, M. Caillaux, now minister of finance, has been charged by foreign papers with his political ends, with consequences to the peace of Europe. Premier Poincaire, however, declared that Europe is now staggering.

ATTEMPT TO MURDER ANTI-SALOON PREACHER

Rev. Dr. McClure Is Slightly Wounded—Two Shots Fired at Him.

Blairsville, Pa., December 21.—What is believed to have been a deliberate attempt to assassinate Rev. Dr. R. E. McClure, pastor of the Blairsville United Presbyterian church, and president of the Indiana County Anti-Saloon league, failed late last night when a bullet fired at the minister penetrated a Bible, which he carried under his arm, and made a slight abrasion upon Dr. McClure's left side. The officers are searching for two men, one of whom fired two shots at the clergyman, and who dropped his hat in escaping.

Dr. McClure had made a call on a sick member of his church and was returning to his home when he visited his church to get his Bible. As the minister and the man were leading to his home, he saw two men some distance away, and the man fired two shots. As Dr. McClure approached them a whistle sounded and one of the men fired a revolver at him. The bullet went wide. The minister picked up a stone and hurled it at the men, running in the opposite direction.

As the assailants retreated, the man with the revolver fell. Dr. McClure and Clyde Cook, who had been with him, regained his feet and fired a second time, the bullet tearing through the minister's clothing. Both men then fled and the entire town turned out for home, from where he notified the police.

Dr. McClure has been pastor of the United Presbyterian church here for twenty-two years.

ROOT NOT FOR PEACE FOR SAKE OF PEACE.

Something About Senator Awarded the Nobel Peace Prize—For Peace to Prevent the Foolish Wastes of War.

By John Corrigan, Jr.

Washington, December 21.—(Special.) Senator Elihu Root, of New York, who has just been awarded the Nobel peace prize, is not an advocate of peace for the sake of peace. He believes in justice rather than force, and he is for peace to prevent the foolish and senseless waste of war.

I would like if I could to clear up some of the general misapprehension about this remarkable man. He has all the elements of greatness. President Theodore Roosevelt said he was "the brainiest man in public life in his own or any other country."

Andrew Carnegie, the friend of kinks and presidents, who has just nominated Mr. Root for president on the republican ticket, affirms that estimate. He quotes Lord Morley, of England, as the third man who cheerfully accords to Senator Root this preeminent place.

Believing in the honor of nations as well as men, Mr. Root would have us arbitrate the Panama canal tolls issue or repeal the exemption for American ships. He is consistent. While secretary of state he negotiated twenty-six treaties of peace and arbitration which the senate ratified. He would have this government observe its word in letter and spirit.

Disputes between nations he would submit to the calm dispassionate settlement of an international judicial body, just as domestic disputes are settled.

Peace Views of Root.

There could be no better exposition of the views of this great American toward international peace than his own words at the ceremonies laying of the Pan-American building in Washington on May 11, 1908. That speech followed his visit to South America in 1906, which students of American history and diplomacy credit with bringing about one of the greatest accomplishments in the realm of American diplomacy. He said:

"There are no international controversies so serious that they cannot be settled peaceably if both parties really desire peaceable settlement, while there are few causes of disputes so trifling that they cannot be made the occasion of war if either party really desires war. The true difference between nations are nothing; the spirit which they show is everything.

That speech turned the occasion into a personal triumph for Mr. Root. And his turn came to speak President Roosevelt quoted this extract with cheers in beginning his address, and referred to his secretary as the greatest man of his time.

When Mr. Root went to South America in 1906, there was some apprehension and the greatest interest as to what he was going to say. It is no secret that there was distrust of the United States from Mexico to Argentina. Our reluctance to the south of us did not feel that the United States was the favored smiles of the United States. The Monroe doctrine was viewed with suspicion as a sword rather than a shield. Even down there it was resentment at being ignored.

Mr. Root had been proclaimed as a cold man—a human iceberg. He was supposed to be intolerant of the intellects and of other points of view than his own. It was said that he never was cold and his bones were marrowless." Yet this man went on his mission to a hot-blooded and volatile people. Formerly the statesmen and statesmen of America had ignored the countries of South America. Literature, art and culture of their capitals was either unknown or little regarded. The advantages of friendly relations seemed not to be esteemed. Europe knew and profited.

On his arrival he was received with the scrupulously careful courtesy accorded a distinguished visitor, but it was as yet unfathomed. Judgment was suspended until he should state his mission. Millions of people in and out favored and of his mission, and on the instant won the affections of fifty millions of people.

"I bring from my country," he said, "a special greeting to her elder sisters in the civilization of America."

That appeal to pride and affection took the day. Themselves the "elder sisters" in civilization had another view of the young republic. Across the north that had grown so fast in pride and power. Peace was flashed over a continent, breaking down the barriers of distrust and suspicion as if by magic.

But he gave them further proof of the good will of the United States, and the desire of this country to see peace abound grow and prosper, for he holds that the prosperity of any country is a benefit to other countries, and that prosperity of all is a benefit to each.

"We wish for no vindictive triumphs of peace," he said. "Nor no territory except our own; for no advantage except the sovereignty over ourselves. We deem the independence and equal rights of the smallest and weakest member of the family of nations entitled to as much respect as those of the greatest empire, and we desire the observance of that respect the chief guaranty of the weak against the oppression of the strong. We neither claim nor desire any rights or privileges or powers that we do not freely concede to every American republic. We wish to increase our prosperity, to expand our trade, to grow in the wealth which comes from the development and use of the true way to accomplish this is not to pull down others, but to build up ourselves, but to help all friends to a common prosperity and a common growth, that we may all become greater and stronger together."

With no other force than that of honesty and sincerity and friendly feeling he had accomplished the conquest of South America. Of this achievement is ranked by students of American history with Benjamin Franklin's diplomatic victories in France and England, with President Jefferson's purchase of the Louisiana territory, with Seward's purchase of the Alaskan territory, and with John Hay's triumphs in China.

Has Written Three Constitutions.

The story is told by an acquaintance of Mr. Root that they were taking a railroad ride together one day when he remarked that his companion looked tired. Mr. Root replied that he thought he had a right to look tired, as he had written that week what would be virtually the constitutions of three governments. He referred to Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippine islands.

His letter as secretary of war to Major General Leonard Wood contained the outlines of the Cuban constitution, a statement of the relations that must exist between the two countries was afterward embodied in the Platt amendment to the Cuban treaty. It is of timely interest that the text of the Platt amendment has been incorporated into the treaty with Nicaragua negotiated by Mr. Bryan, secretary of state.

The communication from President McKinley to the Philippine commission, which was in reality drawn up by Root, then secretary of war.

Having served as secretary of war since August 1, 1899, when he was tendered by President McKinley, General Alger, Mr. Root retired on January 31, 1904. In July of next year he was called upon by President Roosevelt to accept the portfolio of secretary of state. He continued in the cabinet until January 27, 1909, when he resigned upon his election to the United States senate to succeed Thomas C. Platt.

While Mr. Root's world fame has largely been built up in the last eight years, since he became secretary of state, his work in connection with the department was a good index of his capacity. He was a skilful counsellor.

His legal ability has been recognized by his appointment as a member of the Alaskan boundary tribunal in 1903, his services as counsel for the United States in the North Atlantic fisheries arbitration of 1910, and by the honor in mentioned the permanent court of arbitration at The Hague.

Career as Secretary of State.

During his active and busy career as secretary of state, devoting all his time, great ability and unflagging energy to the duties of the office, he had the satisfaction of seeing that no did not feel that the United States was the favored smiles of the United States. The Monroe doctrine ceased to be with suspicion as a sword rather than a shield. Even down there it was resentment at being ignored.

"Elder Sisters" Won the Day.

It came in a speech at Rio Janeiro on July 23, 1906, at the third conference of American republics. He outlined the whole spirit of the mission:

"I bring from my country," he said, "a special greeting to her elder sisters in the civilization of America.

That appeal to pride and affection took the day. Themselves the "elder sisters" in civilization had another view of the young republic. Across the north that had grown so fast in pride and power. Career as Secretary of State.

During his active and busy career as secretary of state, devoting all his time, great ability and unflagging energy to the duties of the office, he had the satisfaction of seeing that no

The Newfoundland fisheries question, settled for years but constantly a source of annoyance and might have become serious if unsettled, in which Mr. Root was referred to The Hague. Mr. Root himself visited the United States. His supplies family affinity with Canada was gained by a quiet visit to Newfoundland before the case was argued. The Alaskan boundary, practically all disputes between Canada and the United States, and when he resigned as secretary of state to enter the senate.

He followed the policy of Secretary Hay with regard to the open door in China, and exchanges notes which signified entire agreement with his principles. He negotiated arbitration treaties with Japan and with France and other nations.

Probably no one is better qualified to speak of Mr. Root's work for peace than Andrew Carnegie, and Mr. Carnegie, James Brown Scott, solicitor for the state department and adviser to the state department of the Carnegie foundation for international justice. Mr. Root had been awarded the Nobel peace prize, I urgent Mr. Scott.

"The award is undoubtedly a well recognition of the services which this illustrious American publicist has rendered to the cause of international peace through judicial means," he said. "His policy as secretary of state and his views as a private citizen were clearly and unmistakably set forth in his declaration that 'the matters in dispute between nations are nothing; the spirit which deals with them is everything.'

"His experience as a member of the Alaskan boundary tribunal, in which he was to settle controversies between nations, had assumed political importance, and how great that importance is limited at the time of profound peace and friendship.

"Desiring to settle all disputes between Great Britain and the United States by the method of office, he took the first occasion to bring the entire question of the Alaskan fishing ground up for discussion. By the exercise of forbearance and the spirit of conciliation, he effected the arbitration of the case now pending by The Hague.

"As secretary of state, Mr. Root drafted the instructions to the American delegates to the second Hague conference, and urged upon them to work for the establishment of a permanent court of justice. He also directed them to work for the establishment of a court of arbitral justice, to meet at regular intervals without waiting for the special and specific initiation on the part of any one of the powers.

Treaties to Arbitration.

"The conference failed to adopt a general treaty of arbitration, but it manifested the influence of Mr. Root in the beneficent influence of such a course by negotiating twenty-five treaties of arbitration which were ratified by the senate. The permanent court of justice, which he advocated, was adopted in principle by The Hague conference, but awaits the appointment of judges through diplomatic difficulties.

"Thoroughly consistent in his support of arbitration, Mr. Root has applied this principle to the Panama canal tolls act. He held that it was the duty of United States to arbitrate the canal tolls controversy with Great Britain, in the arbitration treaty of 1908 to arbitrate all questions concerning treaties and existing treaties. This question of tolls was accordingly brought the Hay-Pauncefote treaty of 1901 under the terms of arbitration.

"Another practical application of the principle laid down in his speech on the Pan-American Union building was made in settling the difference between the United States and Japan over the question of immigration of Japanese laborers. Under the treaty of commerce we do not forbid Japanese laborers to come in, but enforce regulations which in effect exclude them. By having this effect, a solution equally honorable to Japan and factory to the amour-propre of both countries.

"Mr. Root has been a strong friend of Latin-America. He is the author of the principles for development in the relations of the United States with Latin-America. He was the only Latin-American country represented among the twenty-six nations present at the first Hague conference, he provided an invitation for it of them to attend the second conference.

"It is a matter of common knowledge that Mr. Root drafted the so-called Platt amendment, that he prepared Cuba for self-government. When the people of Cuba had adopted their constitution, incorporating in it the Platt amendment and were prepared to govern themselves, he, as secretary of war, withdrew the American troops from Cuba. He pacified the Philippines, drafted their organic law, and instituted the civil government of the islands.

As secretary of state he adopted the principle of President Lincoln that peace should be settled until it is settled right. He adopted the principle that peace should be settled until it is settled right. He adopted the principle that nations are as much bound by governments what we ourselves would not receive or grant under like circumstances. Hence the respect in which he is held by foreign governments and by foreign peoples."

Dr. Scott's tribute and his reference to Mr. Root's great sense of justice and desire to submit all disputes to the same legal test as domestic disputes, recalls one sentence in Senator Root's speech against the recall of judges. Expressing his abhorrence of making judicial awards susceptible of influencing and playing upon the baby awake, making him nervous and fretful.

You know mothers who spend hours sewing on lace and embroidering tiny frocks, yet who hurry through the process of bathing. This is a grave injustice to the child.

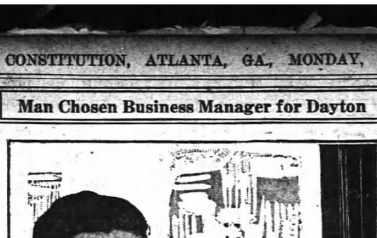
Man Chosen Business Manager for Dayton



HENRY M. WAITE.

The recently elected "business manager" of Dayton, Ohio, Henry M. Waite, has completed his plans for putting the new system of municipal government into effect. Waite has been engaged at a salary of $12,000 to direct municipal governing commission to run the municipal business of the city. This is distinctly a new political idea.

Little Talks on Babyology

By Anna Steese Richardson, Director of the Better Babies Bureau, of The Woman's Home Companion

CLEANLINESS FOR THE BABY.

Cleanliness is one of the foundation stones on which is reared the splendid structure of baby's good health and good temper. When it is neglected, all sorts of troubles, discomforts and irritations creep in.

Baby's bath is a delightful time and furnishes a lodging place for germs. Germs are baby's greatest enemy. But by being forfending through cleanliness forms cleanly habits which last through life.

Dr. Holt, of New York, tells me that she can't keep her 3 or 4-year-old baby clean. But simply accurate her dirt wherever it goes, whatever it does. I wonder how she sets it off at first. And I have noticed at the baby nurses that many of the minor defects, small ailments can be traced to carelessness on the part of nurse.

Preparations for keeping the baby clean include a little bowl of soft water, a little piece of soft, old linen, a sterilized absorbent cotton, a bottle of olive oil, a small package of boric acid, some purified talcum powder.

Every good nurse of long experience in maternity cases tells me that the greatest care must be taken that the baby's eyes are kept perfectly clean. Women who are blind owe the affliction in lack of care at birth. The eyes are easily infected at that time, and infection leads to blindness.

This nurse starts baby's career by washing out his eyes very gently with a piece of gauze, dipped in a weak solution of boric acid, directly she has applied the sterilized dressing to the eyes she turns baby's little head to rest with the oil mentioned above, rolls it up in the soft, old linen, and lays it in its right side and turns her attention to the mother, telling her that baby's eyes are safe from infection.

After she gives the baby its first sponge bath with warm water and pure castile soap she anoints baby's face to turb the dressing of the cord. After baby is dry she gives him a bath with gauze and a weak solution of boric acid and finishes by rubbing the skin with olive oil. Then she dusts him away for his first sleep in perfect cleanliness and perfect comfort. At first she uses sterilized gauze for all ward purposes, with old, soft linen for rubbing or drying. The gauze is then burned, and the linen washed and sterilized before it is used again.

Later baby, when a year old, gets a soft wash cloth of his own, which no one else is permitted to use, and these are washed after the baby's bath.

But a soft cloth is not used on baby's face, it must be cleaned scrupulously before baby is put into bed.

The skin of the new born baby is very tender and infection is always lurking in lack of care at birth. The results I heard more than one physician has declared that many of baby's ills are careless bathing or care of the tub, because the germs of baby's ills can be traced to an infected tub. Nurses are very careful to clean baby's tub, and so thoughtless as to leave it standing in the bath room, when after a superficial rinsing off with warm water, and a bit of soap, almost all of baby's clothing, in fact, should be soaked and washed apart as the utensils, never in the bath tub.

Baby's bath time each morning should be a systematic process, never done hastily or carelessly. There should be a thermometer for the room and one for the bath itself. The room thermometer should register from 75 degrees to 80 degrees Fahrenheit. For the first eight weeks of the baby's life, the bath thermometer should show that the water is 100 degrees Fahrenheit. From two months to six, the temperature should be 98 degrees Fahrenheit. From six months to twenty-four it should register from 95 degrees to 80 degrees Fahrenheit.

The mother who desires to insure her baby's health should not bathe baby at the temperature of the water, nor even by the "feel of the elbow" rule. She needs this thorough cleansing as much as baby does, and she should devote all that time on he is forming habits and feelings which demand cleanliness. There is such a thing as educating a child to endure dirt from sheer carelessness.

The baby should not be laid into the tub and hastily sponged off. The operation starts with baby laid comfortable on a warm blanket, spread on mother's knees. First the face and head are washed with clean gauze and soft water, a little sterilized boric acid or scales on the head, rub the head every day with sweet oil, vaseline or a steel tape line. The weighing of the cord is done by putting baby on more than 10 per cent moisture) shelled corn. Now, if you have a scale, shell the entire yield of an acre of corn, weigh it carefully, and at least the next thing to it, to weigh the entire yield of husks on the acre, and checked by shelling at least 10 pounds of husks, and you have the proper allowance for drying out of moisture—now if 10 pounds of husks per acre, as measured or weighed, contain 2 pounds of water, you should take the premium over a yield of 75 bushels of ordinary corn, by actual weighed, but containing only 10 per cent of moisture, or 80-bushel corn, because it contains only 8 pounds of water to the 10 per cent, the estimated 80 bushels would be reduced to 72 bushels. So, with the yield of cotton one pound of water does not pay for the cotton seed, this cotton seed, since early in the season, is only 25 per cent lint, while his competitor waits until the end of the season, when the cotton seed is of a higher grade, and is required to require that the percentage yield of lint shall be determined after the lint and seed be separately valued. A yield of 2,000 pounds of lint cotton per acre is a good deal better than 2,200 pounds of 33 per cent lint cotton.

The Shape of the Acre.

The shape of the acre is a material factor in cultivation. Other things being equal, if the acre has no continuous crop, it will pay it to be in the form of a square. If a square acre, to 4,356 feet around the square, then every 10 rows will be 10 rods feet long. It is manifest if the first and last rows of the field be planted on the very marginal line, the excess over an acre would be the extra length of each row all the way around the acre, or 2,178 feet in any 2 rows. Two rows will equal to 4,356 square feet, or exactly one-tenth of an acre.

Indeed, the correct shape of a continuous crop would approximate a perfect square very closely and there should be no plants grown on the land any time, all around, than one-half the width of the row. Where the most located competing acre would be a perfect square of 4,356 feet each way every side by a growing crop of the same kind. Where the land is not level, the guaranteed analysis claims less than 2 per cent available phosphoric acid, 1.5 per cent of nitrogen (equivalent to 2 per cent ammonia), and 2 per cent of potash, or a grade, or analysis of equal total commercial value. It further prescribes that "high grade" shall not appear on any bag of acid phosphate with potash mixed or be guaranteed to contain less than 13 per cent available phosphoric acid and 1 per cent of potash, and the word "standard" shall not be used on a mixture of acid phosphate and potash unless it is claimed to contain not less than 11 per cent phosphate acid and 1 per cent of potash, and that a "high grade," plain acid phosphate must contain not less than 14 per cent available phosphoric acid and a "standard" plain acid phosphate must contain not less than 12 per cent of available phosphoric acid. And finally that no fertilizer, either complete or plain phate with potash, or acid phosphate with nitrogen, shall be gathered and shipped containing less than 12 per cent of plant food.

The aim of the legislature in enacting the law was to prevent the use of contemptible, and yet some details are rather unreasonable, if not actually ridiculous.

A comparatively low-grade fertilizer, whether "complete" or acid phosphate with potash, or plain acid phosphate would be just as effective as a high grade one at a much higher grade and carrying the plant food in the same relative proportions, provided the quantity applied per acre of the lower grade to be much greater as the grade is lower. Of course, the cost, including freight and handling of the larger quantity required of the lower grade to be applied per acre, would be greater than the higher grade. To illustrate: Suppose a farmer has the option of two grades, say a high grade, analyzing 16 per cent and a low grade, analyzing 8—2—2. Of course, it will not be disputed that 1,000 pounds per acre of the low grade will be just as effective as 500 pounds per acre of the high grade, and if 1,000 pounds of the low grade costs one-fourth less than 500 pounds of the high grade, there is little room for choice.

The matter of fact, however, the low grades are often made low by adding to 500 pounds of make weight filler to the 500 pounds of 16—4—4 and the result is 1,000 pounds of 8—2—2. Now, if the manufacturers will charge perhaps $2 or $3 per ton for putting in the filler and the added freight and hauling will be the same as for the high grade. So if the high grade 16—4—4 fertilizer costs—freight and handling added—as a ton, the farmer would have to pay $16 or $18 per acre for the low grade, which is only half as good. If he uses 1,000 pounds per acre of the low grade to make the effect equal to that of 500 pounds of the high grade, he will pay the price suggested, pay $7.50 to $8 for the 1,000 pounds of low grade, while the 500 pounds of high grade will cost only $4.25, one-fourth or $2.25. So you pays your money and takes your choice." As a matter of fact, the farmer who uses cheaper per 100 pounds of plant food than the high grade, but ever always. Cotton seed meal is a low-grade fertilizer. So is kainit, so is the basic slag meal. So if the high grade 16—4—4 fertilizer costs—freight and handling added—as a ton, the farmer would have to pay $15 or $16

NEW AUTO LAW HAS STRIKING CHANGES

Motorcyclists Up in Arms Over Having to Pay $5 Each Year—Will Test the Law.

There is probably no act of the recent legislature which received such scanty public attention at the time of its passage and has aroused such general interest since, as has the automobile annual registration law, which goes into effect January 1.

The license tax is increased from $2 to $5, and is made an annual tax instead of being good for the life of the machine as heretofore. It is not a tax on the owners of machines as such, as a good many people writing to the secretary of state for information seem to think, but a tax on the machines themselves. The owner of two or three machines may not buy a single tag for all of them, but must furnish himself with a tag for each machine. However, if a machine changes ownership during the year, the new owner must purchase another name plate and furnish his name, address and a description of the machine to the secretary of state.

Applies to Motorcycles.

The tax covers all vehicles on dirt roads not impelled by animal power, and is, therefore, equally applicable to the cheapest motorcycle as well as to the high-priced 60-horse power touring car.

The tax is due on January 1, and every new car must be supplied with a properly dated number plate by that time. For the convenience of automobile owners and dealers, Secretary of State Phil Cook has had the 1914 number plates on sale since December 15, and he reported Saturday that he had already disposed of something over twelve hundred.

Owners of old machines, who have already paid their tags required by the existing law, will have until March 1 in which to supply themselves with 1914 tags. After that, if they have failed to secure the new name plates, they will be liable to prosecution as for a misdemeanor.

24,000 Cars Now Registered.

As to the revenue that may be collected under the operation of the new law, Mr. Cook reports that there are now registered in the state under the old law approximately 24,000 cars. He believes from reports which he has received from the various counties that there are at least 2,000 automobiles in the state the owners of which have evaded the payment of the tax.

Allowing for the owners who have heretofore failed to pay the tax, and also for the usual increase in the number of cars on a very conservative basis, Mr. Cook figures that there will be 28,000 vehicles subject to the tax during the year 1914. This should bring in a gross sum of $140,000, deducting for the expense of collecting the tax, including cost of name plates, etc., there should be about $120,000 turned over to the state's treasury.

How Money Is Expended.

In regard to the expenditure of this money by the state, the legislature passed the following law:

"Section 14. Be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that of the 16 to be paid for the certificate, a sufficient amount thereof shall be used in supervising the certificates and the remainder thereof shall be paid into the state treasury. The fund raised under this act shall be known as a state road fund and the same shall be apportioned among the several counties of the state by the state treasurer in proportion to the number of miles of rural route roads in the several counties, the same to be distributed upon United States government reports."

In the matter of distribution of the money is the feature of the law which has come in for the severest criticism. With the exception of the motorcyclists, who now feel that they have been taxed out of proportion to the amount of the investment and who have employed attorneys to contest the law, automobile owners and dealers generally do not object to the increase in the tax from $2 to $5.

An analysis of the way the money will be apportioned to the several counties under the law shows, however, that no one county will receive enough to accomplish any good, and that those counties which pay the bulk of the tax will receive scarcely any of the fund at all.

$3,986 Miles of Road.

According to a report on the public roads of the state published by the state geologist, Dr. W. S. Yeoll, in 1912, there were in the year 1911, $3,986 miles of rural route roads in the state improved and unimproved. Figuring the amount of money to be raised by the tax at $125,000, this would allow approximately $1.50 per mile of road.

According to the same report of Dr. McCallie, there in Fulton county 400 miles of public road, which would make Fulton county's share of the tax $600. Fulton county spent in the year 1911, which the report refers to, for road improvement $270,000.

This year, according to Secretary of State Phil Cook, Fulton county had registered, in round numbers, 4,100 automobiles. He figures that the registration for 1914 will be about 4,500 machines, which, at $5 each, would amount to $22,500. That is the amount which Fulton pays in, while she only gets back $600, less the amount to pay the salary of one of her convict guards.

How Distribution Works.

There are a number of counties in the state, particularly in the mountain section, some of which have a larger mileage than Fulton, which did not use convicts and which, according to the report of the state geologist already alluded to, did not spend a dollar for road improvement in 1911.

It is not announced as the intent of those who oppose the distribution of the tax under the 1913 law to spend these needs of these poorer counties or to ask for any appropriation by the state-at-large, it will simply be wasted, they claim. The counties which are provided with the road-building plants necessary to put the money to any advantageous use will not secure enough under the apportionment to make appreciably to what they are now spending, and the others will not be able to use it at all.

What Phil Cook Says.

Commenting on this feature of the law, Secretary of State Phil Cook says:

"It seems to me that under the method of appointment provided in the act, the money raised by the registration tax on automobiles will be practically wasted. If the state is not going to spend money for roads it should be some means devised of distributing it among the counties so that it would not be squandered.

"As for me, I believe in helping those who help themselves. I think the state, in the distribution of this fund, should give some consideration to what the counties themselves are spending for road improvement."

When asked for an opinion, George D. McCutcheon, manager of the Buick company, said:

"As to the increase of the tax from $2 to $5, we have no objection. There are other features of the law, however, that are amateurish, some that will be found impossible of enforcement, and others that are worthy of severe criticism. Why, under this law, for instance, I take an automobile out of the shop to demonstrate it and keep it out an hour, I would be required to pay a $5 registration fee and supply myself with a tag for that particular machine. There is no automobile dealer in Atlanta who could continue in business if that feature of the law should be enforced.

No Objection to Paying $5.

"Again, while we do not object to paying a tax of $5 per year, we do object to having it collected in such a way that it is to be appropriated to roads, as it should be, it should be spent in such a way as to build roads here and there scattered over the state so that there shall be nothing to show for it.

George W. Hanson, president of the Automobile Dealers' association and representa the Oakland car, had this to say:

"I do not think that there has been any objection made by members of our association to the increase in the tax. Automobile owners can well afford to pay a $5 tax about as easily as they can $2, and the increase in the license will certainly work no harm to the automobile business.

"As to the objection that has been raised that we would have to stop to pay a separate tax every time we took a new car out of the garage to demonstrate, that feature in the amended law is just the same as it was in the old one, and I think is entirely covered by an opinion we obtained from the attorney general who declared that the legislature had evidently made a mistake and that it never could have been the legislative intent to tax a dealer every time he demonstrated a new automobile."

Spend Money on Roads.

F. C. Greenhaw, of the firm of Steinhauer & Wigut, who handle the Cadillac machines, said:

"I have no objection at all to the increase in tax on automobiles from $2 to $5 and do not think the tax unusual. That is all right, if they will spend the money for giving us good roads. There may be some minor features of the law which are objectionable, but I believe they can be amended when brought to the legislature's attention. It does look pretty severe for the county commissioners that they are taxed the same as the owners of three-priced road machines."

As to the general attitude of motorcyclists toward the tax, that was expressed by Gus Castle, a local dealer, who has the southern agency for the Harley-Davidson Motorcycle company, of Milwaukee. He said:

Unfair to Motorcyclists.

"We do not think it fair that the owner of a motorcycle, which costs $285, should be compelled to pay identically the same license tax as the owner of a $10,000 limousine. As an instance of the unfairness of the law, I can cite you to the fact that there are 50 rural mail carriers in this state who use motorcycles in delivering the mail. All of these men are working for a living, while the owners of pleasure cars are compelled to pay a license tax of $5 per year each out of their own pockets.

"I have been in communication with motorcycle owners throughout the state and they are unanimous in their opinion that the law is unfair. Many of them have offered to join with the Atlanta Motorcycle club in contesting its validity in court. We have employed the law firm of Mayson & Johnson, and the intend to make a thorough legal fight before we will pay the tax.

EDISON AND HELEN KELLER FRIENDS

1. MISS HELEN KELLER; 2. THOMAS A. EDISON.

Thomas A. Edison, the great inventor, believes he can provide an apparatus that will remedy the deafness of Miss Helen Keller, the deaf and blind girl. She recently visited him at his laboratory for the first time. Miss Keller, who has learned to talk, had a pleasant interview with Mr. Edison, and he expressed great interest in her. He said he considered her one of the marvels of the age, greater in a human way than his own inventions. She left on a lecturing tour and on her return east will visit Mr. Edison again.

purpose of blockading ports held by federals, but it was made plain that attempts to land forces would not be tolerated hereafter to fire on foreign ships if they carried arms for the federal government. This course, according to the constitutionalists here, would be justified under international law. They say they intended their action chiefly for shipments that might come to the Pacific coast, where they are better able to prevent arms from being landed.

International complications are likely to arise if the constitutionalist land forces open fire with their mountain artillery upon foreign ships, but there seemed to be no immediate possibility of such a contingency, officials slapped down all rumors of the subject.

HUERTA AND BANKERS ARE UNABLE TO AGREE

Mexico City, December 21.—The government and bankers have not been able to agree on the solution of the financial question. The committee of bankers who have been attempting to devise a plan met again today with the sub-secretary of finance, but their suggestions were not accepted, chiefly because the bankers would not listen to the proposal that the guarantee fund should be deposited in the national bank. The bankers declare that it should be deposited in the national bank.

The management of the Bank of London and Mexico says that it has enough currency to meet the demands should the withdrawal of deposits continue.

Government officials express pleasure at the success of the negotiations for a loan in Europe, but the conservative element in the capital still profess to see in it little that will assist President Huerta in operating the government for any great length of time, since this loan is to meet interest payments on the bonds.

REBEL FORCES CROWD CLOSE IN TAMPICO

Mexico City, December 21.—The rebel forces are crowding close to Tampico and a formal attack may be expected soon. The report received by the government last night that the assault had begun was not questioned, as it was assumed at the palace that this was the rebel plan, but it has developed that the officer who made the report had become confused over a minor engagement at a point some miles from Tampico.

The war office has utilized the time since the last attack to strengthen the garrison at Tampico, and professes confidence in its ability to resist the rebels.

Forces under General Panfilo Natera are slowly advancing on Zacatecas, capital of the state of Zacatecas, and between Saltillo and San Luis Potosi, along the main line of the National railway, rebels again have appeared in large numbers. This region has been comparatively free of rebels for several days.

JAPAN MAKING ARMS FOR GENERAL HUERTA

Tokio, December 21.—The arsenal at Tokio is manufacturing a quantity of arms ordered by the Mexican government, which, it is expected, will be shipped at an early date. Japanese officials explain that this is merely a matter of business and is not indicative of any unfriendliness to the United States.

YOUNG MEN OFFERING FOR UNCLE SAM'S ARMY

Washington, December 21.—There has been a tremendous increase recently in the number of young men offering themselves to the army recruiting officers for military service. Last month there were 5,000 applications, 2,000 more than ever before recorded in time of peace. No longer is there any apprehension on the part of the army officers as to the possibility of obtaining all the recruits needed to fill the ranks to full authorized strength.

"MONA LISA" IS HANDED TO FRENCH AMBASSADOR

"Take Good Care of Her," Said Italian Official—Friends of Thief Arrested.

Rome, December 21.—With befitting ceremony the "Mona Lisa" brought here under guard from Florence was handed over to the French ambassador, M. Barrere, by the Italian officials at the ministry of instruction today. Among those present were Marquis Di San Giuliano, minister of foreign affairs; Signor Credaro, minister of public instruction; M. Besnard, director of the French school in Rome and other prominent personages, who signed the document of the transfer of the painting, which presently will be officially indentified by M. LePrieur, director of the painting section of the Louvre, by the aid of documents and detailed photographs.

The "Mona Lisa" was then placed in a rosewood box and Dr. Corrado Ricci, director general of fine arts in Rome handed the key to the second secretary of the French embassy, M. Olle-LaPrune, with the remark:

"There she is! Take good care of her!"

The painting was conveyed to the Farnese palace, where the French embassy is housed, and was viewed by the Queen Mother and others. It will be placed on exhibition in the Borghese gallery from Tuesday until Saturday.

Perugia's Friends Arrested.

Paris, December 21.—At the moment the "Mona Lisa" was officially delivered to France, Magistrate Drioux, who has had charge of the case since the painting disappeared from the Louvre here, issued warrants for the arrest of Vincenzo Lancelotti, Michele Lancelotti and Mme. Clamageran, friends of the crime, all of Perugia, especially as the confession telegraphed to Florence by the French police official, Vignol.

The Lancelotti brothers were denounced several days ago by another Italian as having been implicated with Peruggia, and they are now charged with receiving and concealing the masterpiece.

When the two men were interrogated by the police on December 16 they denied all knowledge of the crime, although they admitted they had met Peruggia frequently. Their homes were searched and a bundle of letters written in Italian were found.

According to the report from Vignol, Perugia, who is under arrest at Florence, has made a confession in the presence of an Italian magistrate. He declared Vincenzo Lancelotti was aware of the planning and execution of the theft, and that he had concealed the picture in his room for six weeks and had helped to conceal it in a secret box in which it was carried off.

Perugia and his friend came from the Louvre by the side door of the linen room, he says, without being seen, ad down the main staircase and through one of the principal gates.

Michele Lancelotti and Mme. Clamageran were also severely detained, but later Magistrate Drioux ordered them definitely held.

PANAMANS ARE WROTH AGAINST COLOMBIANS

Expulsion of All Colombians From the Isthmus Is Demanded.

Panama, December 21.—The anti-Colombian sentiment has grown to such an extent that an open letter has been addressed to President Forras, demanding the expulsion from the republic of the country's detractors and the dismissal of all Colombians holding government positions in Panama.

A further demand is made that the police corps shall be composed exclusively of Panamans. At present one-third of the teachers' staff in the schools of the republic is composed of Colombians, and there is a large sprinkling of them in the police department.

The leaders of the anti-Colombian movement express the opinion that if there are not enough Panaman teachers to supply the schools, teachers from Chile or Spain should be engaged.

It is reported that another anti-Colombian demonstration is being arranged for Thursday next, but the government promises to take steps to prevent a repetition of the scenes of last Thursday night, when Colombians were stoned. The editor of La Patria, a rival anti-administration paper, with Colombian leanings, has been the object of threats for several days.

FATHER IS MURDERED AIDING HIS DAUGHTER

Girl Beaten Unconscious and the House Searched for Hidden Money.

Fort Plain, N. Y., December 21.—Posses of deputy sheriffs and citizens with bloodhounds are searching the countryside tonight for the man or men who last night murdered John Barrett, aged 60, at his home near here, after they had beat his daughter, Katherine, 20 years old, into insensibility. The father was slain when he went to the aid of his daughter. The murderer or murderers were after Barrett's money, a considerable sum, but this was hidden behind a wall panel and was unfound.

Katherine Barrett was dosing beside the fire when she was struck from behind and rendered unconscious, being seriously injured. She did not see her assailants.

Her brother, Bruce, was upstairs with their father when the assault took place. He attempted to get down the front way, but could not because the stove had been tipped over against the door. He then went down the back way and found the house afire. He extinguished the fire, found his sister in the pantry, where she had been dragged, and then discovered the body of his father, who had gone to the girl's rescue. The father's skull had been crushed, and there was a gunshot wound in the neck. The authorities late tonight had obtained no clew to the slayers.

WIFE CONFESSES TO GIVING SAWS

little woman at her home, 127 Capitol avenue, where she and her husband have been living for some time. Manley is a clerk and is only 21 years old.

After much questioning, Rosser says he finally elicited the confession that she had smuggled the saws and soap and file to her husband because she couldn't stand to see him spend Christmas in jail here, because the child needed a Santa Claus.

She broke into tears when the detective told her she would have to go to prison and said that if she and her husband, too, were forced to stand trial the little fellow would have to do entirely without Christmas. She was carried weeping to prison.

Rosser, after a partnership on Decatur street, she is said by the police to have told, "I couldn't stand to see Jack in jail this Christmas. This is our first child, and we have no friends here. My husband had to have a Santa Claus. Without saws he could have nothing—there would be no Christmas. And we'd even be without something to eat. Nobody can blame me for what I've done. I was half wild—I hardly realized what I was doing. All that I had in mind was to get Jack home again, whether he had to break out of jail or not."

To Consider Copper Strike.

Houghton, Mich., December 21.—A state-wide special labor convention will be called by the Michigan Federation of Labor, to be held at Lansing within thirty days, to discuss ways and means of settling the copper strike. This information was given out by members of the executive board, who came here today to meet officials of the Western Federation of Miners.
