You do not become wholly unfeminine even if you are a newspaper woman. I was tired of seeing the black spot where the inkwell had overturned. I did not like the white mark where a glass of ice water had stood. All at once I had a hunch that I could do my work better if a marred place did not constantly remind me of a loss of temper and consequent lowering of self-respect and dignity. The refinishing of my desk became an obsession.

I read advertisements. Fortunately I am influenced by them. When I saw an advertisement of a varnish which a woman could apply with a cloth just as a furniture polish is applied, I resolved to investigate the novel preparation.

I went to the sixth floor of the Forsyth Building and entered the offices of The Amber Chemical Company. There I almost breathlessly inquired for Tacco, the water-proof, dust-proof and heat-proof varnish. (To tell the truth, I did not much mind about the heat-proof feature, for most of the heat in our office is caused by irritable nerves, and not by the weather. I am no exception.)

A bottle of Tacco was put into my hand, and I grasped a piece of cheesecloth and went energetically to work. I used just as much muscle as three years of typewriting will produce in a feminine arm. I worked as hard as any furniture polisher ever dreamed of doing in his worst nightmare. I thought I was doing well.

Imagine my chagrin and the expression on my face when the cloth was quietly taken from my vigorous grasp and I was shown that Tacco requires no rubbing. You do not have to use as much energy as I do in ordinary dusting.

Dust the article first. If it is much stained you might well apply a little soap and water. Then apply your Tacco to the dry surface. A piece of cheesecloth is the best medium, and a firm, gentle movement like that of dusting will put the varnish on in the best form. Then let it dry. At the end of five hours view the result and feel proud of your work which is really but a pastime.

Have a Tacco day. Take the breakfast cloth off when husband has departed for the office. Apply Tacco according to the directions on the box, and the dining table will be ready for use at lunch time. Of course if husband is a capitalist and breakfasts at 10:30 instead of at 7 you will probably not have the pleasure of using Tacco yourself. Let us hope that you are one of those domestic little housewives who just "loves" to make your home pretty with your personal effort, and that husband has not outgrown his appreciation of the little touches which you can give just a bit better than any hired help.

The table in the living room has played an important part in the happiness of the household. You could not think of home without that table, and the ones you see in the store windows never look quite as hospitable or nearly so homelike. Here Jack has read his paper and graciously explained politics to your bewildered self as you stitched on little frocks which were to go to Kindergarten with Little Girl. It has held Big Brother's school books and his drawing instruments. (Said drawing instruments are responsible for the big unsightly gash at the end.) All in all, you feel as you begin to apply Tacco with a gentle hand that this table has many dear memories. You would like to see it as fresh and pretty as it was when you and Jack picked it out. It seemed the finest table in the world on that day. How you blushed, and how manly Jack looked as he quietly drew the money from his pocket and ordered it sent to your new home.

When the table is finished the big chair will seem more worn and bruised than ever. You never realized how shabby the living room was getting. It seems but a day or two ago that you decided to surprise Jack with that comfortable chair on his birthday. You saved from your housekeeping money bit by bit and grew anxious toward the last for fear the fund would not be large enough. You grow tender toward that big chair as you remember Jack's eyes when he first espied it and then quickly gazed at you. The lovelight was there, even if you had been married a half-dozen years, and had but recently lost many hours of sleep with Little Girl's teething episode

The tender feelings do not interfere with the application of Tacco. Let retrospection have its sway, and when you have had the pleasure of many happy memories look at the result. The table will shine like new. The gash made by Big Brother's steel ruler will not show. Tacco has acted as a filler and made the surface smooth as glass. Dusting will be a light task now. You may even scrub the table, for it has a water-proof finish now. The chair will bring the lovelight to Jack's eyes anew, for he, too, will remember the day your love made the gift.

If you are a housekeeper, you will welcome Tacco as a means of making your home brighter and more cheerful. You need never wish for an opportunity to send shabby furniture away to be refinished. You can buy a bottle of Tacco for only 50 cents. The economy of it will be demonstrated by its first use, and you will be ready to purchase a quart, half-gallon or gallon can before many days.

When I like anything I never take my liking for granted. I analyze my appreciation. Here is my analysis of my fondness for Tacco:

It requires absolutely no rubbing.
It dries in from two to five hours.
It is water-proof as well as dust and heat proof.
It is economical in time and money.

Well, my desk at The American office has had its Tacco treatment. Come in to see it, if you like. Then investigate Tacco as I did, if you like, or better still, benefit by my written experience and buy a bottle or can at any good drug or hardware store.

Do you live out of town? If you do, you would like to hear about a splendid proposition for out-of-town dealers. Write to-day for information and do not risk the loss of the agency in your town. Write and see what The Amber Chemical Company has to tell you.

CARPENTER'S 'JULIEN' CALLED SOUL TRAGEDY

Part Is Dream and Part Reality, Revealing the Secret Genius of the Composer.

By CHARLES HENRY MELTZER.
Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, June 28.—I came away from the dress rehearsal of Charpentier's "Julien" shaking with emotion. The last episode in the new work of the composer who evolved "Louise" had been tremendous in effect.

The tones in which Charpentier had expressed the destruction of a poet's faith and dreams had been too eloquent. His harmonies, his discords and his rhythms racked one's nerves. And what they meant was a soul-tragedy.

The ultra-modern men here—of the Debussy, Florent Schmidt and Ravel groups—smiled as they listened to some parts of the new "opera." To some it seemed as old as Richard Wagner. Nor were they wholly wrong. For, though it is of striking power and full of beauty, it was by no means "up to date."

Stooped to Copy No One.

Charpentier had, of course, not stooped to copy either Wagner or the Italian Veritists. To all he does he gives his own distinctive character. He gave it to "Louise," his first success.

He has put it into "Julien." Wagner, Mascagni and, perhaps, also Berlioz had been remembered in "La Vie du Poete" and were suggested here and there, of course, in "Julien." And yet the work which thrilled the audience at the Opera Comique a few days ago was painfully "personal." It seemed the expression of its creator's very life, the appeal of his unhappy, complex soul, the confession of his faith and doubt and dread.

There are literary parallels to the case of "Julien," in the "Manfred" of Byron, the "Faust" of Goethe and the Heinrich of Hauptmann. Those poems all described the eternal tragedy of man, with his aspirations, his ideals and his impotence.

"He who has flown so high, as thou has flown,
Must perish if he once fall back to earth,"

says the Wise Woman to Hauptmann's Heinrich in "The Sunken Bell."

And at the outset Julien soars, as Heinrich soared, on the highway to the sun.

In the opening act of Charpentier's "opera," or dramatic poem, the music voices—rather conventionally now and then—the hero's idealism. By slow degrees we find him sinking into doubt. For he soon loses the Louise who inspires his dreams. Not the mere workgirl of his early opera, but a symbol, with the externals of a woman—his Muse, his Higher Self, his Power, his Dream.

When in the closing episode of "Julien" the poet again finds—or thinks he finds—Louise, she has changed to a street walker, a trull, a pitiful wreck, known to Montmartre as "Casque d'Oignon." So in the final movement of the "Fantastic" the nobility of the leading theme, which suggests Berlioz's love, is changed to an ignoble melody.

Part of the Opera Dream.

Part of Charpentier's "Julien" is dream, part is reality. There is, as I said in my first review of the "opera," a lack of unity in the composer's style. But the construction of the work is clear. It shows the tragedy of poets—and of humanity.

To come to earth—the score of "Julien" has much in common with that of "Louise." Echoes of that opera, as suggestions of its heroine, occur in the second and last acts. The tumult of the orgy at the Montmartre fair in the last episode has the spirit of the third act of "Louise" transformed—as a prayer may be transformed into a blasphemy. It was the fourth and last act that most moved me—not because it was the most beautiful.

Solo of Julien Exquisite.

The solo of Julien in the second act, the act of "Doubt," is by long odds the most exquisite incident, musically, of the work; and the cavatina of the purely symbolical Louise in the first act is almost as charming. But because it told the tragedy of poets (and, if you will, of man) so painfully.

No one who is intelligent need be shocked by the apparent crudity of the prologue, which shows us a figure—called Louise—in bed, at the Villa Medici, while her poet dreams. For, I repeat, in the composer's mind his mistress is not flesh, but inspiration. If Mr. Gatti-Casazza has not the courage to copy the Paris production he can draw the curtains of the alcove in which Louise lies. Or he can let her rest upon a couch. It does not matter.

I fear that Mr. Gatti-Casazza and the plain New York public would faint at the stark, realistic frankness of the dances in the orgy at Montmartre. Well—they are not essential, though they emphasize the composer's thought.

PARIS, June 28.—Surgical research has proved that operations in the thoradic cavity can be performed as easily as in the abdomen, according to Dr. Alexis Carrel, of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, New York.

In a lecture at the Beaujon Hospital the Nobel prize winner declared that experiments on animals had demonstrated the heart to be an organ of very great resistance, and that it does not suffer harm if the circulation is interrupted for five or even [illegible] minutes.

Gowns of Lady Newborough and Mrs. Cecil Bingham, Formerly of Ky., Charm Royal Pair.

Special Cable to The American.

WINDSOR, June 28.—Not even the royalty, the winning jockeys or the best thoroughbreds attracted the attention during Ascot Week that was accorded two Southern belles, Lady Newborough, former Louisville, Ky., girl, and Mrs. Cecil Bingham, whose superb gowns were the cynosure of all eyes through the gay period.

Lady Newborough, who was Miss Grace Carr, a sister of Mrs. Bingham, would be worth a fortune to any Parisian modiste, the English society people are saying, because of her ability in showing off her clothes and hats to fascinating advantage.

During the meet she was frequently invited to the royal box, while Mrs. Bingham was personally complimented by the Queen.

Her costume was entirely of black, the moire skirt kilted in wide kilts and all around pannier draperies in voluminous billows reaching from the waist almost to the knees. Her bodice was tight-fitting, with only a touch of lace, and there was a single red rose at the waist.

She carried her usual pagoda parasol, a fashion started by her two months ago, but not taken up until race week. She lunched with an interesting party, including Lady Alastair Innesker (Anne Breese, of New York), who wore black charmeuse draped about the feet, the upper part of the gown being entirely of fine lace.

Mrs. Bingham is now seen everywhere with Mrs. George Keppel, the two having become fast friends during the past few months.

Lady Newborough was the greatest "costume success" of the meeting. Her gown was of oyster satin, draped with rare old black lace in points reaching below the knees, with a large emerald clasp holding the gold belt and yellow, white and red roses on one shoulder.

Her hat was of the bonnet variety and weighted with a dozen or more large roses of the same shades. Her shoes and stockings were rose color. She was in the inclosure with Prince Alexander of Teck, Count Albert Mensdorff, the Austrian Ambassador, and Mr. Marshall Field. She lunched with Countess Pappenheim (May Wheeler, of Philadelphia), whose party also included Lady Diana Manners and Mrs. William Northrup McMillin of St. Louis.

King George Loath to Name Poet Laureate

Pay of Official Songster, Including "A Butt of Sack" Called Wasteful by Captain Lynch.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—King George has no wish to fill the post of Poet Laureate left vacant by the death of Alfred Austin, whose muse was less charming than himself.

The other day in the House of Commons Captain Arthur Lynch, the Member from West Claire, who fought with the Boers, asked politely what were the perquisites, privileges and salary of the Poet Laureate. Premier Asquith replied $350 a year and $150 in lieu of the ancient "butt of sack."

Two members suggested that the office of King's jester be revived.

Captain Lynch wound up the discussion by remarking dryly, as one who speaks of sack, that it seemed to be wasteful to give a butt of sack for a ha'porth of poetry.

LONDON, June 28.—That the woman should promise to "obey" when she marries is repugnant to the women of the Spiritual Militancy League. More—when the announcement of an engagement to marry is published these promoters of spinsterhood write to the fluttering maiden particularly interested and ask her if she would make herself a slave.

PRINCES ANGRY AS REICHSTAG INSISTS ON TAX

Imperial Government Argues in Vain to Prevent Their Paying Part of Great Appropriation.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, June 28.—The Finance Committee of the Reichstag has severely shocked the feelings of the Imperial Government by maintaining that the Federal Princes of the empire will have to submit to taxation in order to raise the enormous amount at once to cover the increased military and naval expenses.

In vain did the Imperial Government argue that the Federal Princes are sovereigns, who dare not be taxed like ordinary human beings. It was said that while they were willing to come forward with voluntary contributions, as their patriotism prompted them, it would be a mortal insult if the Reichstag tried to tell them how much they must pay.

Princes Ordered to Pay.

The majority within the committee, however, consisting or representatives of the Left, the Socialists and the Center, stuck to their guns manfully and maintained that there was nothing in the constitution granting the reigning Princes freedom from taxation and a paragraph was accordingly added to the bill ordering all Princes of the empire to pay taxes in accordance with the rules applying to the common herd.

The only consideration shown these hitherto privileged personages was that it was left to the "Bundesrat" (Council of the Empire) to select the officials that are to collect the taxes from the members of the sovereign houses.

There is every reason to believe that the Reichstag as a whole will adopt the measure recommended by the committee, and when this happens, the Bundesrat has no choice but to accept the principle of sovereign Princes' liability to taxation or to refuse to accept the law.

Appealed in Empire's Name.

The latter alternative however seems entirely out of the question, since it was in the name of the Bundesrat and the sovereign Princes that the Imperial Government appealed to the patriotism of the people and emphasized the absolute necessity of the law.

It would be impossible to refuse to accept the law merely because it compels the Princes to pay their share of the extraordinary military expenses. At any rate, the Imperial Government has rendered the sovereign Princes a very poor service by maintaining the theory of their freedom from taxation.

ROME, June 28.—Marchioness San Germano, American born and bred, is awaiting the final decree of divorce for which her husband, Italian aristocrat, millionaire and distinguished, sued in Hungary after she had obtained legal separation under the Italian law, which does not recognize absolute divorce. When her legal affairs are settled she will sing in opera.

Father a Minister.

Virginia Hoge, Marchioness San Germano, comes of the oldest and best stock to be found in the Southern States. Charters to her ancestors from the Stuart kings are still preserved in the family records. Her father, the Rev. Dr. Peyton H. Hoge, was pastor of the Warren Memorial Church at Louisville. His father was co-pastor with the Rev. Dr. Springer, of the Brick Church, New York.

"We were desperately in love," the Marchioness began. "I needn't go into our courtship beyond saying that I first met my husband when I came to study voice production in Rome, nearly eight years ago. We met casually at the house of a friend, and it was a case of love at first sight. After a brief honeymoon we returned to Italy to settle in the castle which my husband owns at Arpino in Caserta.

"After a while my husband began to be much away from home on business and I got very lonely. But it was only after three years of married life that the crash came which so often happened much earlier in international marriages.

"We went to the seaside for my little daughter's health. It was the old story on his part—'the woman tempted me, and I did eat.'

Saw Woman in Case.

"No sooner had we got to the seaside than I saw the cause of all the mischief. The 'other woman' had followed him there. I chose to shut my eyes and accept her false advances under the cloak of friendship. But if ever a woman played the serpent it was she. How much kinder to stab a wife openly than to murder what she holds dearest—her husband's love.

"At that time I received word that my father was ill, and I wanted to be near him. The result can easily be guessed. When I returned there was no attempt to conceal the truth. This woman was determined to get him—to marry him; partly from a blind passion, but chiefly for his money and his position. And I felt that with my best jewel gone and my pride outraged I had nothing to do but to accept the situation. So I decided on suing for a separation."

MOSCOW, June 28.—General Stoessel, the defender of Port Arthur, who for some time has been partly paralyzed, has now nearly lost the power of speech.

To add to these physical afflictions, his financial position has gone from bad to worse. He lately sold his country mansion and estate, but an officer who served as an adjutant to General Stoessel during the siege of Port Arthur, has offered his former chief shelter and maintenance for the rest of his life.

To Regain a Healthy, Girlish Complexion

(From the Feminine World.)

If you would have a clear, fresh, girlish complexion, one ounce of ordinary mercolized wax will aid you in this direction more than shelves full of cosmetics. It produces a natural beauty. This wax, procurable at any drug store, completely absorbs a bad complexion, revealing the healthy young skin underneath. Its work is done so gradually, day by day, that no inconvenience is caused. The wax is applied at night, like cold cream, and removed in the morning with soap and water.

Another valuable rejuvenating treatment—this for wrinkles—is to bathe your face in a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in ½-pt. witch hazel. This has a remarkable action in smoothing out the lines and "firming up" the loose tissue.

Stonemason Forced To Wall Up Girl in Old House, He Says

Spaniard Informs Police of Hair-raising Experience Near Madrid Recently.

Special Cable to The American.

MADRID, June 28.—The police of Barcelona are investigating the story of Esteban Gutierrez, a stonemason, who declare that he was forced to wall up a young girl in a building near the city.

Gutierrez says that two well-dressed men called at his home with a motor car and asked him to accompany them a short distance into the country to carry out some urgent repairs.

When they were outside the city the men seized Gutierrez, bound and blindfolded him. A few minutes later the car stopped in front of a lonely house.

The mason says he was led inside and ordered to wall up a narrow aperture. He heard someone sobbing, and, tearing the bandage from his eyes, he saw a young girl, bound with ropes and wedged in the aperture.

His captors ordered him to build a wall so as to inclose the unfortunate girl, and when Gutierrez refused they threatened him with revolvers. He says that he was forced to comply with their commands, after which the car conveyed him to a wood several miles away.

Before leaving him in the woods the men gave Gutierrez $20 in silver, and warned him not to speak of the incident. He was found by a woodman and he went at once to the police.

PARIS, June 28.—A tragic sequel to the Titanic disaster is reported here. Among the passengers was a Frenchwoman named Mme. Breyns, who lived at Bethune. Her husband, a Belgian, aged 30, read her name among the list of dead. After a time he sought consolation with another young woman, with whom he lived at a place 20 miles from Bethune.

A few days ago he learned that his wife was among the rescued and that she was in France searching for him. This so upset him that he shot and killed his companion and then fired two shots at his own head. These did not prove fatal, and he was on the point of hanging himself when the police appeared and took him to the hospital.

QUEEN WILL GIVE BALL TO EXHIBIT HOME-MADE HAT

So Delighted With Fancy Dress Affair She Recently Attended, She'll Give One Herself.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—Queen Mary was so delighted with the Versailles fete at Albert Hall, which she attended the other day, that she has decided to give a big fancy dress ball herself next year, probably at Buckingham Palace.

She wishes all dresses to be of one period, and this is rather difficult, for nearly every period except the prehistoric has been used. But some one has a bright idea of a VanDyke ball, and this for the moment is favored.

Queen Mary, as a young woman, was always very fond of dressing up and liked nothing better than to take part in amateur theatricals. King George was rather an obstacle. But on hearing his wife's eloquent description of the Versailles ball he yielded to her desire.

The Queen is regaining some of the merriment which first endeared her to the English nation as Princess Mary. A royal fancy dress ball will give a great fillip to fancy dress.

There have been so many of these big affairs lately that people are becoming rather tired of them, but there is keen competition already among London costumers to get the deal going and carrying out of the costumes.

Queen Mary has directly inspired the fashion of home-made millinery, which now is much to the fore in the less go-ahead sections of society, and will wear one of her own creations at the ball. All her majesty's hats are of her own designs, and many of them are partially carried out by her own fingers. She makes no bones about her disapproval of extravagant sums spent on millinery by many women of fashion.

KING'S DIVORCE VIEWS ARE NOW MORE LIBERAL

Aristocratic Clubs Heave Sigh of Relief When Separated Courtier Is Buckingham Guest.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—A certain peer who was formerly a Lord-in-Waiting to His Majesty and who figured in the divorce court recently, was commanded to a dinner at Buckingham Palace this week. This, the Court Circular reveals.

A great sigh of relief is wafted out of the windows of the aristocratic clubs. The King's command—his invitation to dinner—is taken to mean that his majesty is inclined to tolerate marital peccadillos, although he frowns on such sins. In this he follows the example of his father.

This liberality of view was scarcely expected of King George, who has the sincerest respect for the opinion of his spouse in such unhappy affairs.

Queen Mary is called "prim." So if anything were needed to establish a woman who has not found her husband her ideal it is the stamp of Queen Mary's womanly approval. Her majesty has set that stamp on several Americans, the Duchess of Marlborough, who was Consuelo Vanderbilt; Mrs. Cornwallis-West, born Jerome, and Mrs. John Astor.

FOR MILADY'S WARDROBE

By MME. HAUTE MONDE.

THE vogue of the double skirt seems to be increasing. The under one generally of supple satin, is often draped and drawn in around the ankles. Over this a contrasting material is draped or pleated. In the latter case it might pass for an elongated tunic, especially as it is often of taffeta. The fancy for these double skirts finds a better medium of expression in the sheer summer materials. Through the upper one, which is transparent, one sees the colored garniture of the under one and the effect is very soft and pretty.

* * *

Hawthorn, sweet peas and hedge roses are reported as being in favor in Paris for summer millinery. A novelty which has been introduced there is the cretonne flower for trimming straw "sport hats." This isn't a bad idea, as the regular muslin and silk flowers are generally inappropriate and always are unsatisfactory garniture for outing hats.

* * *

The black velvet neckbands show great originality and variety. One has a tab about three inches long hanging directly in front, the end of the tab being weighted with a "motif" of brilliants set in platinum. Some are tied in a spreading bow at one side; others in a tignt little bow at the back. One that I saw was tied in a butterfly cravat bow directly in front.

* * *

For the summer hats, which are now the most important millinery concern, flowers, tulle, lace, and ribbon monopolize the attention. An attractive garden party hat seen the other day was a typical broad leghorn with a standing ruche of black tulle encircling the crown, and another lying flat on the brim. Between the two, at one side toward the front, was a great pink rose with its green foliage, while a little sheaf of pale blue wheat, with very long "spears" thrust out toward the front and another to the back.

* * *

Salmon is a tone that has but recently arrived. It has become popular because of its vivid tone, pink itself being too dull to suit the exigencies of the moment. Shrimp is a dye, too, that is popular. But, like all the rest, it must be in supple rich silk or satin, or in mousseline de soie. The big sashes that are known as the "Directoire," (though they are not really so,) from a kind of draping at the side or back.

* * *

The best dressy tailor-mades are now in moire, either in black or in one of the new shades. It is like supple silk, and is rich and effective, being manufactured with special care. The weave which has been fashionable, or rather has been a candidate for popularity during the last year, was handsome enough, but stiff and hard. Now the makers have brought out a superfine material which is bound to be fashionable for a long time to come. Moire is inclined to be oldish; but this new variety is quite flirtatious, though serious enough to gown a grande dame. Moire is well used in combination with satin, taffetas, or even cloth.

* * *

A novelty in parasols has a ferrule end which is an exact reproduction of the top of the Directoire walking sticks carried by the beauties of that period. The handle end of this parasol is slim and plain. When closed it is reserved in position, the ferrule end—which is quite long—being held as if the parasol were really a Directoire staff.

* * *

A beautiful example of color blending was exemplified in a pretty dress in Japanese blue silk, printed with small violet roses. One side of the skirt formed a pannier, whereas the front and back widths crossed one another at the knee beneath a pink and mauve velvet rose with dark violet foliage. A similar flower fastened the violet velvet belt in front. Handsome "New-Art" guipure, dyed a warm ivory, in a design of plums and leaves, trimmed the bodice and the Venetian undersleeves in white mousseline de soie.

* * *

Elaborate lingerie dresses this season are almost exclusively of embroidered batiste combined with real laces of the heavier varieties, such as coarse filet, Cluny, Venise and Alencon. Or they are of net, with shadow lace or other fine weaves combined with the embroidered batiste. English eyelet embroidery, which early in the season appeared to have suffered a setback, has been coming into favor again in Paris and here. It is now shown more frequently in batiste than in linen and is elaborately embroidered as well as "eyeleted."

The sashes for summer gowns grow in numbers and popularity. A useful sash for wearing with light summer gowns is that composed of printed gauze, with the ends traced over with metallic threads. Some of the new printed gauzes are rarely beautiful in color and design. In dull blue with a pattern of blurred roses one of these sashes would look well if traced over with dull silver threads; or again, in invisible green with a design of Japanese flowers in faded tints and a traced pattern on the borders done in copper threads.

The sashes are always heavily fringed and they add considerable grace to the figure, for when correctly arranged they mould the hips and vaguely outline the waist. The fringed ends may be arranged in a loose knot at one side, or they may be passed round to the back and tied in a large bow.

Fashions in motor apparel receive more attention every season. In buying motor apparel the custom usually followed is that of matching up the costume. Not that all the things should be the same colors, but they must look as though they had been bought to be worn together. This certainly is a fashion which commends itself from one point of view. It shows that the garments belong to the wearer, and are not borrowed from a friend in need or from one's hostess.

* * *

Picot ribbon lends itself so charmingly to the making of girdles and neck bows and hat trimmings that its popularity increases every day—and so every day the colors and designs in which it is shown likewise increase. An attractive girdle with ends at the back and a big, flat bow at the side, is made of wide Chinese blue picot ribbon trimmed with tiny pink and blue chiffon roses, applied as bands across the bottom of the sash ends, and as a buckle in the center of the bow.

* * *

One of the loveliest materials for the somewhat formal frock of daytime wear in the summer is Bulgarian printed Canton crepe. A charming design is light brown crepe printed with blue and lavender in a small formal pattern with a groundwork tracery of black all over the brown crepe.

* * *

A sensible bathing suit for a little girl consists of mohair bloomers and a knitted woolen sweater matching in color. The sweaters worn for bathing are made with sailor collars and worn with a tie. For the smaller child, both boy and girl, the one which is taking its first dip in the water, knitted woolen bathing suits, all in one piece and buttoned on the shoulders, are the most comfortable and durable. They are made in white, with blue bands around neck and sleeves, in red with white bands and in blue with red bands.

* * *

So entirely satisfactory have gold and silver cloth slippers become that they are adopted as the one neutral kind of footwear by all those who for reasons economical and otherwise do not indulge in slippers to match every evening gown. The hosiery people have made a decided success of matching silk stockings to these slippers, and heretofore no other kind of stocking was tolerated, but this spring it became the fashion to match the stocking to the skirt and then add metal cloth slippers. The effect is much better.

Simplicity Rules In New Paris Hats and Gowns

These pictures show examples of the latest Parisian millinery creations for summer wear, and a fetching gown, also intended for the summer girl. The dominant note in both hats and dress is simplicity, and it is surprising what beautiful effects are obtained without the use of complex materials or a variety of colors.

No wonder Parisian women are famed the world over for the beauty of their hats and gowns. Just glance at these examples of the latest creations of the famous designers of confections for the adornment of milady's head and draperies for her form which have just come from the French capital.

Simplicity is the dominant note of up-to-the-minute fashions in Paris. Milliners and gownmakers now and then return to their sober senses after a protracted debauch in violent color effects and discover that beauty often lies in simplicity.

There is nothing complicated about the hat of old saxe blue with the lace frill edging its brim and a paradise plume in front, but the whole effect is unmistakably beautiful. The plume curls entirely around the base of the hat's crown, and then takes a graceful upward sweep, with a slight droop at the end.

Another striking but simple bit of millinery is the hat of brown straw with paradise plumes in the shade of red brown massed along one side of the crown.

Another charming hat is the black sailor shape, of straw and ribbon, bearing a single high aigrette at the front of the crown. The effect is amazingly chic.

The gown shown in the accompanying cut is a sartorial idyll of almost pastoral simplicity, yet possessing beauty that might evoke praise from the most jaded connoisseur. The base of the costume is white taffetas. The upper part is executed in Russian blouse fashion, with a bouquet of flowers laid on the belt. Sounds very simple, doesn't it? Yet the effect is remarkably charming.

Tight Skirts Held Bar to Matrimony

Ben Greet, Veteran Shakespearean Actor, Declares That Men Will Not Wed Wearers of Hobbles.

BLOOMSBURG, PA., June 28.—"Marriages will be fewer unless the women quit wearing the hideous hats and frightful dresses we see, and which are having a vogue like the unpleasant plays," remarked Ben Greet, the veteran Shakespearean actor, in an interview here.

"The women have only to look in the mirrors to see how they look, and men won't walk out with such dresses."

Then he told of an actress in his party with a skirt so hobbled that she could not kneel, and what happened to the skirt so that the girl could go on acting.

Women Taught to Save Million a Year

Kansas Garbage Cans Are Cheated of Immense Amount by Domestic Science Instruction at School.

TOPEKA, KAN., June 28.—Kansas cheated the garbage cans of the State out of $1,000,000 last year, and the amount will be increased at the rate of $500,000 a year until there will be virtually no wasted foods in the entire State.

That is the aim of the Kansas Agricultural College, and the State is spending $40,000 a year to help.

Seven hundred girls completed the domestic science courses at the agricultural college this week, and the college has just closed its movable cooking schools, which were attended by 11,000 women in the ten weeks in which they were operated.

Cupid Moves to Vancouver, Wash.

Oregon's New Law Requiring Health Certificates Held Responsible.

VANCOUVER, WASH., June 28.—The record for marriage licenses issued in one day during the 60 years in which records have been kept was broken here when ten couples secured marriage licenses. Nor is this all.

At the present rate, in fifteen days the greatest month's record will be broken in one-half the time and all because Oregon passed a law requiring certificates of health from men making application for marriage licenses. Already 58 licenses have been issued this month, the record being 65 for any entire month.

SUFFRAGIST TO PAY TAX WHEN VOTE BILL IS SIGNED

CHICAGO, June 28.—"Mrs." Belle Squire, the defiant suffragist who, as head of the No-Vote-No-Tax League, has refused to pay taxes for five years, will square her account with the County as soon as Governor Dunne signs the limited woman suffrage bill.

"When the bill is signed and I am no longer a citizen in name only I will be found to be a prompt taxpayer," she asserted.

Policewomen Carry Parasols on Duty

Newport Guardians of Peace Appear on Beach Armed With Mesh Bags and Sunshades.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 28.—For the first time in the history of the famous Newport beach, two women policemen were placed on duty there yesterday. They wore as uniforms blue blouses with brass buttons, blue skirts and sailor straw hats. They were appointed at the request of the Newport Civic League, and will be on duty all summer.

Their duties were nominal and they made no arrests. One promenaded the beach with a parasol, partly concealing her brass buttons, while the other swung a mesh bag as she walked along.

Minister Refused Big Marrying Fee

Twenty-five Dollars Did Not Shake Dr. Pennewell's Determination.

CHICAGO, June 28.—The Rev. Almer Pennewell, of the Euclid Avenue M. E. Church, in Oak Park, announced recently that marriage fees were graft. He would marry persons, he said, for nothing. Recently he was put to the test.

Miss Dorothy Naize, of Oak Park, and Clifton Hunt, of Cincinnati, were married at his church. The affair was a big one socially, and the bride's father, not liking the "charity" plan of the pastor, decided that he should receive some remuneration for his services.

So Mr. Naize put $25 in new, clean bills in an envelope and handed the envelope to Mr. Pennewell offhand. The pastor was wide awake and rejected it. Mr. Naize then sought the pastor's wife. She, too, refused it.

FRECKLE-FACE

Sun and Wind Bring Out Ugly Spots—How to Remove Easily.

Here's a chance, Miss Freckle-face, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable dealer that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles; while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from Jacobs' Pharmacy and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine, as this is the prescription sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

ALL WOMEN TO VOTE IN TIME IS SENATE'S IDEA

Even the Most Conservative Members Believe the Fair Sex Will Cast Ballot the World Over.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—That women in all civilized countries will be permitted to vote is regarded as inevitable by the most conservative Senators and Representatives.

It is their opinion that steady progress is being made and that Great Britain, the United States and other leading nations will eventually recognize that further delay is useless.

Two-Thirds Vote Needed.

The resolution proposing an amendment to the Federal constitution under which women would be given the ballot, now awaiting consideration by the Senate, is expected to be passed on at the next session. A two-thirds vote would be necessary for its adoption.

It would require the appoval of sixty-four Senators to make women suffrage operative for submission to the States, so far as the upper branch of Congress is concerned.

The chief handicap preventing woman suffrage lies in the opposition of Southern Congressmen. The votes for the women's movement have made headway in the South. A bitter struggle is in progress in Alabama, where Representative Hobson is seeking the Senatorship, as against Mr. Johnston, on a platform favoring woman suffrage and temperance. Senator Johnston says he will achieve re-election without difficulty.

Have Twenty-Four Votes.

It is figured that these Senators will certainly support the Chamberlain resolution providing for a constitutional amendment permitting women to vote; Ashurst and Smith, of Arizona; Thomas and Shafroth, of Colorado; Borah and Brady, of Idaho; Myers and Walsh, of Montana; Gallinger and Hollis, of New Hampshire; Chamberlain and Lane, of Oregon; Smoot and Sutherland, of Utah; Jones and Poindexter, of Washington; Clark and Warren, of Wyoming; Gore and Owens, of Oklahoma; Ransdell and Thornton, of Louisiana.

This totals but twenty-four of the sixty-four votes necessary in the Senate. In view of recent action in Iowa, Illinois and Kansas it is possible that Senators Cummins, Kenyon, Sherman, Lewis, Bristow and Thompson may be added to the list, making thirty in all. It is claimed that two or three additional votes may come from New England, but no names are suggested.

Modistes Run Out of Ideas, Now Use Century Old Styles

By LaPACONTEUSE

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, June 28.—Having invented new fashions for women year after year without a single stop, it now seems as if the brains of the kings and creators of modes in Rue de la Paix are at last played out and unable to conceive new ideas. As a matter of fact, none of the fashions they have launched during the last two years have made a hit.

It is not long since the harem skirt was talked of by everyone; before that it was the hobble skirt and the directoire period. At the present moment there is a definite tendency to clothe women in the gowns and accessories of a hundred years ago. As yet the tendency is not very far developed; but it is none the less noticeable.

Old Styles Come Back.

To take the gown itself, the draperies can often be seen on dresses of a hundred years ago, and even the plain gowns, particularly evening evening gowns, have their prototypes at a similar period.

At the Opera Comique, in "La Tosca" the other night, the scene of which is laid in 1800, Floria was wearing a gown which would have attracted not the slightest attention in a drawing room to-day, unless for its beauty.

It was of deep blue silk, with a high waist line. The skirt was absolutely plain and straight, and without any appearance of fulness, although there was ample freedom. The gown had a short train. The decolletage was V shaped, and unadorned.

Tosca, then, could have walked into any Paris drawing room in 1913 and not have attracted a single questioning look. In the day gown she wore in the first act she could have attended a fashionable tea with equal success. The only thing which made the gown different from a modern one was the large flowered pattern, which is not seen nowadays.

Century Old Touches.

Thers are several other century-old touches in woman's toilette to-day. Several women have been seen carrying the long gold-knobbed walking sticks, held near the top, and tied with a bow of ribbon, which you may see in hundreds of old portraits in almost any gallery. High Louis heels, of course, have been worn for some time, but they fit admirably into the present picture.

Nowadays the old custom of studding them with jewels has been revived. You buy your shoes at one shop and cross the road to a jeweler's to buy heels separately for them. I have seen such heels in the Rue de la Paix at $100 each, and that is not a top price.

Society Women Sound Knell for Mourning

Boston Leaders Declare That Custom of Donning Black for Dead Is Relic of Barbarism.

BOSTON, June 28.—Society women of Boston have answered the question, "How long should society women wear mourning for their dead relatives?" by saying in substance that mourning should not be worn. It was the consensus of opinion that it is a survival of barbarian days.

Mrs. Charles P. Putnam, wife of Dr. Putnam, said, "It seems to me that there is altogether too much mourning worn considering our present enlightened state of civilization. The world is dark enough as it is without women wearing crepe to make it any more gloomy.

Woman Makes Eight Trips Around Globe

Champion Female World Girdler Finishes 8 Years' Journey With 381,000 Miles Covered.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Miss Jessie Ackerman, the woman champion globe-trotter, arrived here to-day from an eight years' tour around the world, her eighth globe-girdling trip in twenty years. She has broken the woman's record, with 381,000 miles to her credit.

On this trip she visited fifty-two countries and experienced every kind of ancient and modern travel.

Miss Ackerman said the happiest and most professional women are in Australia.

Valeska Suratt's Beauty Secrets. Removing Superfluous Hair

Miss Valeska Suratt

By Miss Valeska Suratt

Secrets Few People Know. Valeska Suratt, the Famous Self-Made Beauty Actress, Reveals Some of Her Treasured Experiences.

REMOVING superfluous hair is a problem to many women. On the stage the continued use of a hair remover is necessary. Therefore it should be quickly efficacious and absolutely harmless to the skin. The formula I have perfected I believe solves the problem as nothing else has ever done. That is why it has become so tremendously popular. This formula never irritates, reddens or spots the skin. It dissolves the hair as by magic. Try it and you will be convinced. Hundreds of women could beautify themselves to a remarkable degree if they would remove not only the heavy hairs that appear on the face, but the soft down that is so frequently seen on the arms and face. This down is seen more often on those whose complexion is very light or very dark.

Get one ounce of simple sulfo solution. This you can get at the drug store for $1. Apply it with the finger tips to the superfluous hair, keeping the hair moist with it for two or three minutes until it has been dissolved. Then wipe it off with a damp cloth and wash the skin.

* * *

TAUNTED—You can stop your hair falling in a few days' time. My modesty will not prevent me from saying that I am known as the only woman on the American stage who wears no switches, puffs or other hair makeshifts. All the hair I have is my own. I grew it all through my own efforts. Here is the formula which is doing the same for hundreds of my readers and friends as for me:

Mix a half pint of alcohol with a half pint of water. To this add one ounce of beta-quinol. Shake thoroughly and then it will be ready for use. If you prefer, you can use imported bay rum instead of the water and alcohol. The beta-quinol you can get at almost any drug store for not more than 50 cents. This formula should be applied very freely to the scalp after brushing it generously for a few minutes all over. Rub the tonic thoroughly into the scalp with the finger tips.

Any head of hair needs a shampoo to keep the scalp free from scurf, and let the roots breathe. Do not use soap. Use eggol, which you can get at any good drug store for 25c. It has no equal as a shampoo.

* * *

STELLA S.—It is no uncommon thing for a woman to develop her bust several inches in a few weeks' time, naturally and safely, by using the following formula:

In a half pint of cold water, dissolve two ounces ruetone and a half cup of sugar, all well mixed together. Of this, take two teaspoonfuls three or four times a day in a wine glass of water, after your meals. The ruetone will cost you $1 at the drug store.

* * *

ERUPTIONS—I do not wonder that ordinary tonics have not driven away your pimples. Here is a very effective, safe blood cleanser:

Dissolve 12 ounces granulated sugar in one-half pint of water, add 1 ounce of sarsene, and mix the whole together thoroughly, then add more water to make a pint. Sarsene is a liquid which you can get at the drug store by the ounce. Get it in the original package. Take one or two teaspoonfuls of this mixture three or four times a day, with a little water if desired.

* * *

MISS S. R. B.—Blackheads should not be pinched out. It injures and spots the skin. To get rid of them permanently first wash the face with hot water and soap. Then sprinkle some neroxin generously upon a sponge made wet with hot water. Then rub well for a few minutes on the parts of the skin which are affected with blackheads. You should be able to secure the neroxin at any druggist's for 50c.

* * *

UGLY—Every spot, every freckle, every blemish on the skin of the face, hands and arms will vanish by using this mixture:

Let half a pint of water come almost to a boil. Add two tablespoonfuls of glycerine. Keep stirring while adding 1 ounce of zintone, until it is all dissolved. Then let it cool. If the cream is too thick to pour easily from a bottle, thin it down a little with more hot water. The cream will be white and satiny. Hold a wet towel to the face several times for several minutes. Rub this cream on the entire face. Then wipe off with a soft, dry cloth. Then apply again and let it dry on the face. Repeat this again at night. Any good druggist will let you have zintone for about 50c.

* * *

OLD LOOKING—I never have known anything to rejuvenate the skin as splendidly as this. I have seen deep wrinkles leave entirely in a very short time by its use, as well as crows' feet and sagging of cheeks. It will make you look years younger. Pour a half pint of hot water in a bowl and place the bowl in a pan of water over a slow fire. To this add 2 ounces of eptol. Stir until it is dissolved and starts to cream. Then remove from the fire, slowly add two tablespoonfuls of glycerine, and continue to stir until it is cold. Eptol may be obtained for no more than 50 cents at any good drug store. This cream should be applied very liberally and thoroughly rubbed into the skin until it has disappeared. The cream will not grow hair on the face. Keep the cream in an air-tight jar or bottle.

BOXERS DEVELOP THEIR PUNCH BY GRUELING WORK

Owen Moran Trained Years Building Up His Famous Left Hand Wallop.

NEW YORK, June 28.—A sporting writer got Mike Donovan up in a corner last week and learned a lot about the fighting game from the veteran pugilist and teacher of boxing. Donovan is responsible for a lot of the finer points of boxing as they are practiced by modern glove men. He is credited with being the first man to use the shift, the blow that Bob Fitzsimmons practiced till he made it almost as deadly as a rifle bullet when he sent it to a man's jaw or stomach, and Fitz could hit a man so hard with it that many times he sent it to the stomach instead of the jaw fearing if it landed on the jaw he might kill his opponent and it is reported that it was Donovan who encouraged Bob to use it on the body instead of the jaw.

Fighters Are Born.

In his talk the other day, Mike stated that a good tacher could make a boxer, but that a fighter had to be born, that no one could make a fighter. The necessary aggressiveness and courage had to be born in a man.

"But," said the old-time bareknuckle fighter, one of the best boxers himself in the country in his palmy days, "a teacher can improve a fighter's methods, for there is a right and a wrong of fighting.

Hard Practice Needed.

Following up Donovan's thought, there is a lot that the young boxer of to-day rarely knows about the manly art. All the blows used in boxing have been catalogued or named by old-time boxing teachers. All the guards of counter blows that can be used to ward off such blows have also been tagged, so that when a blow or guard is mentioned the man who is familiar with boxing knows exactly what is meant. In teaching boxing a man was shown how to hit a certain blow and then how to defend himself from the same blow when used by an opponent.

Some pugilists always seem to have a fondness for certain punches which they can use better than they can any others in the list. It is also a fact that some boxers seem to be able to defend themselves better from some blows than from others. Blows that a fighter can land on one man he can't get over on some other fellow. Now, when the boxer learns the most effective blows, and how to use them properly, it is up to him to practice such punches till they become like second nature to him.

Moran Develops Punch.

Owen Moran was asked once how he developed such a terrific straight left hand punch, and he replied that often he had punched a bag with his left hand, hitting straight for over an hour and a half at a time. Sometimes he had punched the bag so hard with his left hand that his arm would drop to his side exhausted. Now, any other boxer can develop just as good a punch as Moran if he would first learn to use his left hand straight and then work every day for an hour or two on the bag. There is where the youngster nowadays falls down, for none of them can be gotten to do that sort of thing, and that is why there are no Owen Morans or Jim Driscolls among the young American boxers.

"KNOCKOUT" BROWN TRAINS HARD FOR HOWARD BOUT

CHICAGO, ILL., June 28.—George "Knockout" Brown, the Greek middleweight, is down to hard training for his twenty-round engagement with Jimmy Howard at Butte, Mont., on July 4. Brown is boxing from six to ten rounds daily and is getting into grand shape.

Brown has always claimed that he is best over the derby route and fans here are anxiously awaiting the result of the scrap. Brown rules a 10 to 7 favorite in the betting that has been done. Both boys hail from Chicago.

ROLLER SIGNS FOR RETURN MAT BOUT WITH CUTLER

CHICAGO, ILL., June 28.—Dr. B. F. Roller, one of the fastest, cleverest and most scientific wrestlers in the business, has signed to meet Charlie Cutler in a finish match, the battle to be waged in a ring at Benton Harbor, Mich., July 4. Floyd Fitzsimmons, of Benton Harbor, is promoting the show. It will be an open air affair in the ball park adjoining the house of David Field. Roller recently lost two falls to Cutler, after being thrown from the ring, and wants to retrieve himself. He asks Cutler for a side bet.

HAL CHASE PUTS GINGER AND PEP INTO WHITE SOX

Former Yankee Is Playing Star Ball for Callahan's Nine; Works Great With Lord.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 28.—Hal Chase, former Yankee, now a member of the Sox team, has certainly done much to aid the Chicago American League team. Hal has gingered up the bunch in great style and taught the boys some new tricks.

Chase is surely out to make good. There isn't a man on the South Side squad who is displaying more pepper, more ginger, more determination. There isn't one of the Sox players who is more enthusiastic.

Some one said that Chase had remained in New York three years too long. It may have been only one or two. But that fellow had the right angle.

* * *

IT was of Chase that we intended to speak. You know he has made a tremendous hit, not only with Manager Callahan but with every fellow on the team. The stories which preceded the first sacker were none too reassuring. The New York papers were panning him. But when Hal got in action the fellows began to suspect that maybe there might be some defense.

One thing was certain. That was that he wanted to make good. And then another quality asserted itself. That was that he had the ability to make good his ambition. And when desire and ability spur on he's likely to land.

* * *

CHASE and Lord are of a kind. There isn't anything conservative about either. Let them play the game as they will and they'll play hit and run ninety-nine times out of a hundred and kick because the conditions demand a bunt on the last.

Any time that Rath gets on, it's hit and run. And if Lord comes through then the Sox are in a position to score some runs. Because it's pretty much of a cinch that Chase and Lord also will play that game.

It's the dashing game when Lord and Chase work together and they succeed because Hal is credited with being as sure to hit when he once gives the sign as any man in the American League.

Ball Made of Soap Gets Golfer's Goat

BOSTON, MASS., June 28.—Golfers delight in practical jokes and at the head of the list is one that was original with L. A. Hamilton of New York.

Before remade balls were looked upon with scorn by players, small molds were owned by many professionals, so that it was possible with a little heat to remodel or remake a ball after it had been cut or knocked out of shape. Hamilton conceived the idea that he could make a golf ball out of soft soap and get a rise out of one of the bunch.

The ball was formed, allowed to harden, painted, enameled and shellacked to the queen's taste.

It was agreed to allow Lou to tee each ball for the foursome as it started out. Two players whacked out nice long balls with an admiring throng looking on. Then came No. 3 in all his glory. A terrific swing and a thud. Small pieces of soap flew in all directions, evoking plaudits from the gallery.

JOHNSON WILL OUTLAST WOOD, DECLARE EXPERTS

BOSTON, MASS., June 28.—Ever since Joe Wood attracted attention to himself by his splendid work, judges of ball players have predicted a short career for him, for the reason that his style of delivery is decidedly wearing on the pitching arm. That snappy elbow movement which Wood employs, it was predicted, would put him out of the game much sooner than would ordinarily be the case, and this prediction seems to have come true, or Wood is finding it no easy matter to get the stuff on the ball that he formerly had.

On the other hand, it is predicted that Johnson will outlast all the present crop of pitching stars, for there is not the slightest strain on his arm when he works. He has a free, easy motion and gets the full benefit of his entire body behind every delivery he makes. This saves his arm, and good judges believe that because of this Johnson will be a star pitcher for many years.

Dillon Claims 158 Pound Title Would Give Klaus Return Match

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., June 28.—Jack Dillon, who by virtue of his victory over Frank Klaus last month contends he has clinched not only the American middleweight championship, but the championship of the world, does not intend to rest on his laurels even during the heated summer months. While Dillon asserts that his title to the middleweight crown is clear, he says he will not exercise the champion's prerogative and fight only once in six months.

"I fought my way to the top," said Dillon to-day, "and now that I have gained the championship I'm not going to sit back like a dictator and sidestep matches. Whenever the public demands it I will fight any man of my weight at any time, any place and over any route. That ought to be fair enough. That's where I stand. I never was very strong on this talk stuff. My way of forcing recognition as a championship contender was by fighting every one that was trotted out for me. Now since I have climbed to the top I'm not going to change my policy."

AND Dillon has backed up this statement by going right ahead with a busy fighting program. He will meet Bill McKinnon, the Eastern middleweight, in a ten-round bout at Indianapolis on July 3, and will take on Jimmy Clabby at a later date.

"These clever boys are just right for Jack," asserts Sam Marburger, manager of Dillon. "I see Clabby is claiming the championship since he beat Eddie McGoorty, out in Montana. Well, that makes it all the better. But before Clabby can grab any such title he will have to defeat the real champion. When Jack beat Frank Klaus he became the world's champion and that's all there is to it. Klaus and his manager have made a big holler, but they can't lay Klaus' defeat to local favoritism. I intend to ignore Klaus' complaint of undue favoritism, because I felt it was too foolish to reply to. More than twelve thousand people saw that contest and at least half of them came from distant points. Not one of the twelve thousand can say Dillon didn't win and by a good margin, and if any one has I haven't heard about it.

* * *

"KLAUS has tried to make capital of the fact that Tom Dillon was the referee, leaving the inference that Tom Dillon is Tommy Dillon, Jack's brother. Now Klaus knows that Jack Dillon's real name is Ernest Cutler Price. Tom Dillon is a business man and a politician who has a mighty good reputation in Indianapolis. It is true that Tom was big enough to break the boxers apart when Klaus held on until the big crowd began to hiss in the third round. Klaus was beaten and he ought to take his medicine. Jack gave him two pounds in weight and even then turned the trick. Now Klaus needn't worry about a return match. Jack will meet him whenever the public demands it and a suitable purse is offered."

WILLARD AND WILLIAMS TO CLASH IN RENO BOUT

SAN FRANCISCO, June 28.—Manager Tom Jones announced last night that he had matched Jess Willard for a 10-round fight with Al Williams of Cleveland, Ohio, at Reno, Nev., July 4.

UMPIRE BUSH EXONERATED.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 28.—Members of the San Francisco Coast League team who charged Umpire Garnett Bush recently with being under the influence of liquor during the game, failed to appear before President A. T. Baum to substantiate their charges.

President Baum gave out a statement to the effect that a thorough investigation had convinced him that the charges were groundless.

BIG MEET AT LOS ANGELES; THOMSON WILL COMPETE

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 28.—The Amateur Athletic Union all-round championship to be staged at the University of Southern California field on Saturday, July 12, will give Fred Thomson another opportunity to set world figures for this competition. Fred Kelly and Jim Donohue are expected to be among the contestants. Thomson has twice won the all-round championship.

MARANVILLE IS CONFIDENT.

BOSTON, MASS., June 28.—Little Maranville, the Boston shortstop, is a fighter from the head waters. He believes the Braves can beat any team in the league. Manager Stallings is not doing anything to discourage this belief of his great shortstop.

St. Louis Browns Real Iconoclasts

WHEN the St. Louis Browns trimmed the Philadelphia Athletics, 5 to 2, and ended the winning streak of the Mackites, which totalled fifteen successive triumphs, another chapter was added to the sensational feats in breaking records which has featured the American League for the past several years.

Not a first division team since 1908, still the Browns have compiled a peculiar record of being able to wreck records of the enemy, and stopping the athletics brings to memory a few of the incidents which have happened. Look at this list:

In 1908 beat the Naps in the game that prevented Cleveland from winning the pennant and allowed the Tigers to win by half a game.

In 1910 took five out of eight games in a series from the Tigers and put Detroit out of the pennant race.

In 1910 beat Southpaw Krause, who had started with ten successive victories.

In 1912 beat Walter Johnson when the star had won sixteen in a row and was after Marquard's record of nineteen.

In 1913 stopped the Naps after they had won ten straight.

In 1913 scored on Walter Johnson after he pitched fifty-six successive scoreless innings.

In 1913 beat the Athletics after they won fifteen stright.

Not a team of record-breakers themselves, but a breaker of almost all records, the Browns have caused havoc and fear among the teams who are in the way of becoming famous in the dope book of baseball.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

WRESTLING STILL.

Fake, fake, fake,
While the common folk pay to see,
And I would that my tongue could utter
The thoughts that arise in me.

Oh, well for the Turkish lad
As he gobbles his curds and whey;
He knows in the nation across the sea
He will gather the kale some day.

And the stately ship rolls on
Till it pauses at Quarantine,
And they slip the noose and the Turk gets loose
In the chase of the long, long green.

Fake, fake, fake,
And they do it with ghoulish glee,
And away they sail with a bunch of kale
From the land of the brave and free.

For approximately one buck per throw, the citizens of Benton Harbor, Mich., will celebrate the Fourth by watching Doc Roller and Charlie Cutler, two of the world's keenest business men, in the act of making money.

Hamid Kalla Pasha, the Teutonic Turk, is making a hit in the East, demonstrating that P. T. Barnum was not a rummy.

One reads in the newspapers that Connie Mack will hand a regular outfielder to Frank Chance. The said transaction will take place when the said Frank Chance is handed some regular money by the gent who once owned him.

One might be interested in the report that Chicago beat St. Louis in a motorcycle race if one were connected with the Coroner's office.

We note that another person has attempted to swim the English Channel and failed. The reason we noted it is that it reminded us of our attempts to stick the barkeep in a dice game.

Once upon a time baseball was our national pastime. But that was before our citizens began taking bichloride of mercury by mistake.

THE NATIONAL PASTIME.

My pastime, 'tis of thee,
Sweet game of sluggery,
Of thee I sing.
Game where the pitchers clout
The shortstops on the snout
And knock each other out
With hook and swing.

I love the gladsome sight
Of ath-a-letes who smite
The horschide ball,
But though the hitting fills
My soul with happy thrills,
I love the boxing mills

RICH IS SYRACUSE CAPTAIN.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., June 28.—J. Harry Rich, of Canton, N. Y., has been elected captain of the Syracuse University crews for the coming year. He rowed at No. 6 in the victorious shell at Poughkeepsie.

ST. PAUL MAY DROP OUT.

ST. PAUL, June 28.—St. Paul probably will withdraw from the Northern League, according to an announcement by H. T. Conrad, owner of the local team.

Bonehead Playing Spoils Good Athletes

DENVER, June 28.—The "solid ivory" seems to keep more players from reaching great distinction on the ball field than anything else. We want no better example of this than "Ping" Bodie of the White Sox. He is one of the greatest natural hitters in the game, but he spoils it all by constantly pulling "bonehead" plays.

It is because of this that Manager Callahan has him warming the bench two-thirds of the season. In a recent game in New York Bodie was caught twice "flat-footed." With the slightest use of his think tank he would have scored two runs instead of being put out twice.

What thoughts can be flitting through the domes of these players when they are on the base lines? Bodie must be getting a glimpse of an aviation meet somewhere off in the distant regions. Surely his mind is miles away from the game in which he is engaged.

Is it any wonder that players like Ty Cobb, Wagner, Eddie Collins, Johnny Evers, Larry Doyle, Tris Speaker and others we could mention are at the top of their profession? Not a bit of it. They use brains.

THOMPSON IS BACK AGAIN; TO MEET O'NEIL ON JULY 4

HAMMOND, IND., June 28.—"Cyclone" Johnny Thompson, the veteran ringman, will enter the ring for the first time in over a year when he takes on Tom O'Neil in a ten-round set-to here on July 4. O'Neil is one of the toughest middleweights around these parts and is expected to give Thompson a tough argument.

Both boys are already down to hard work for the mill. The winner has been promised a match with Jimmy Clabby. They have agreed to fight at catchweights.

The Biggest Motor Truck Order Ever Placed

80 Alcos for the U. S. Mail—A $225,000 Sale

THE Postal Transfer Service, Inc. has just placed the largest order for motor trucks on record—an order for 80 Alco trucks to haul U.S. mail—a sale approximating $225,000.

This marks the greatest tribute ever paid to any motor truck. For the contract was awarded to the Alco over leading makes of motor trucks, gasoline and electric, after exacting tests by Government inspectors.

Consider for a moment these facts:

These 80 Alco trucks in a year will be required to cover 1,000,000 miles; to haul 1,550,000 tons—157,680,000 cubic feet—of United States postal matter. End against end, this fleet of 80 Alco trucks extends 1310 feet—a quarter of a mile.

Great are the proportions of these figures. But more important is the nature of the service. It is day in and day out, running on railroad schedule, making trains, operating nights as well as days—24 hours a day at times—over all sorts of roads, in the sizzling heat of summer, in the winter blizzards—and always the necessity of clocklike regularity.

None but a superior truck could qualify for tasks such as these.

The Alco truck is no experiment in this type of service—it has been proven in the service of express companies. The American Express Company has 36, the Long Island Express 20 and so on.

And no type of duty is more severe than express service. Further, it is only natural that the verdict should fall to a product of the American Locomotive Company. 51,000 of its locomotives have hauled you, your families, the things you eat and things you wear—safely and on time; in high altitudes; in low altitudes; and in many latitudes.

This is going to be a hot summer. It will cause many millions of dollars loss in horse flesh. Better anticipate by looking into Alco trucks for your business.

KID ELBERFELD PROVES TO BE SHARP TRADER

Club Cost Little Money but It Is Making Better Fight for Rag Than Some Which Cost More.

CHATTANOOGA, June 28.—As an humble, unlettered guy once remarked, "it's a long lane that ain't got no turn in it."

For three years Chattanooga magnates have rolled out money into the strong boxes of other magnates in great sickening cloudbursts.

The turn of the lane has come this year.

Kid Elberfeld has tried out a world of ball players. Those who are acquainted with the facts in each deal might think from the number that the Chattanooga club had spent a small fortune for playing material. Not that the club hasn't been willing, and it has spent more than the average, but the player business has been well manipulated. Following is a list of the players "inherited" by the Kid and those whom he has purchased or signed for trial:

Inherited.

Pitchers—More, Chappelle, Coveleskie, Ware, Allen, Grover.
Catchers—Hannah, Noyes, Giddo.
First Baseman—Coyle.
Second Baseman—Jordan.
Outfielders — Tutweiler, Cruise, Gray, Wasem.
Total—Thirteen.
Some bunch to inherit, wasn't it?

Purchased or Signed.

Pitchers—Stark, Troy, Golden, Merchant, Grimes, Howell, Sommers, Dygert.
Catchers—Street, Moran, Breaux, Fitzgerald.
Second Baseman—Flick.
Third Basemen—Gillespie, Harbison, Graff.
Outfielders—King, Massey, Elston, Johnson, Williams, Thrasher, Betcher.
Total—Twenty-three.

Omitting Tutweiler, Gray, Wasem and Allen, who were released in the winter, the Kid has tried 32 men in all for the Chattanooga team. Twenty-three of these were purchased, signed or traded for. That sounds like a whole lot of money spent, doesn't it? But 'tis not so.

* * *

STARK cost the draft price from a Class D League and was sold for not more than $150 under that, he is still Chattanooga property. Troy cost nothing, going back to Detroit. Same for Golden, to St. Louis Nationals. Merchant cost what Stark did and was similarly disposed of to Evansville. Grimes was sent down by Detroit, as was Howell, who was picked up from the college diamonds by a Detroit scout. Dygert was a free agent.

The pitching staff cost less than $2,000. And More brought $1,000, Chappelle $500, Ware $250, while Grover is still the property of the club. That doesn't sound like a big investment, does it?

We are not possessed of the figures in the purchase of Street, Elston and Gillespie from Providence; inasmuch as they all made good the money wasn't wasted and it was no fault of managerial judgment that Gillespie was "beaned" out of the league.

Of the other catchers tried out, Giddo still belongs to the club. Moran was picked up as a free agent. Breaux cost $500 and Fitzgerald a reasonable amount from Providence. Hannah brought a nominal sum from Spokane.

* * *

CARL FLICK set the club back $1,500. We hardly think there'll be the slightest whisper that this was money wasted. Graff will go back to the Browns this fall, costing little more than "rent."

The club came near making one disastrous blunder in paying out $1,500 for Harbison, but they more than atoned for it when they traded Harbison for Johnson.

In the outfield, King virtually came to the club for Eddie Noyes and a small amount, said to be about $750. Noyes was traded to Nashville for Storch, Storch and cash to Houston for Forsythe and the latter to Topeka for King. Elston was bought in the "Big Three" deal from Providence. Williams was bought from Buffalo for a small amount, said to be $750, which was certainly money well spent. Both Betcher and Thrasher came on trial and neither cost the club anything at all.

From all this dickering, and in spite of the fact that men touted to be stars, Kid Elberfeld has developed a ball club that is bidding for the Southern League pennant, and at a cost at least 25 per cent less than that of the 1910, 1911 or 1912 aggregations.

CHANCE WOULD QUIT IF HIS HEALTH GAVE WAY

NEW YORK, June 28.—Frank Chance will make good with the New York Yankees if his health doesn't go back on him.

Chance is no quitter. He undertook a big task in New York, but he'll get away with it unless his nervous system fails him. The least little thing would upset him last fall. They say he is doing better this year. He should stick with the Yanks and produce a winning club next year. If his health bothers him, however, he'll jump the club overnight and go back to his orange ranch in California.

JIM M'GUIRE FAILS.

STOCKTON, CAL., June 28.—James McGuire, scouting for the Detroit American League team, to-day failed in an attempt to induce the Stockton team, of the California League, to part with Shortstop Butler and Outfielder Wilhoit. McGuire offered $8,000 for the two players.

Yes, but Where Can They Find Such a Pill? :: :: :: :: :: By 'Bud' Fisher

MUTT and JEFF COLUMN

MANAGER BILLY SMITH received a letter from a young ball player who wanted a job. The young applicant wrote such a nice letter that Smith was impressed and answered it.

"You forgot to tell me in what position you play," wrote Manager Smith. "Let me know."

The applicant replied immediately, and in his letter enclosed a photograph of himself posed at second base ready to receive a grounder.

"You can see from the enclosed photo," he explained, "that I play in a stooping position."

FASHIONABLE England, especially that part which goes in for outdoor sports, is reeling and staggering to-day under the weight of another American innovation. One of the American competitors in the open golf championship at Hoy lake appeared on the links before a fashionable gallery in his shirt sleeves and the shock was so staggering that a couple of venerable colonels nearly dropped the teacups from which they were drinking.

Letters are being written to the press, sartorial experts are being interviewed, and the suffragette outrages are nearly forgotten for the time being.

WE are in receipt of the following, interesting article from the well-known Caucasian expectancy, Mr. Daniel Dixon, of Ty Ty, Ga.:

Mr. Farnsworth, Sportin Editor Sunday American:

I have cut out rowing a boat after findin out about draggin that anker all day along the bottom of the Chattahoochee River, no wonder my hands was calluced, my trainer said that it was all a mistake but I said no more rowin for mine. I also cut out the Pluto water, the city water may not agree with me but if I stick to that pluto stuff there would be no Bitin Dan at the next fite, so my trainer has changed to hun yada water and I have been takin it for three days now but I can't see much change for the better, it looks like water all right but it dont act like it, and I aint crazy over the vegetable diet either I got to have somethin more solid as I am near starved to death, I already lost fifteen pounds and I told my trainer that I must have more to eat if I am to do such hard trainin.

with my other work I run fifteen miles every morning now and I am no chickin hearted guy but honestly mr Farnsworth I cant stand it on the stuff I am eatin and drinkin, I'll stick it out this week and if my new trainer dont give something to eat that is more solid it's a new manager for me. I got to new sparrin partners named Ernie Goat and Billy Lamm, I don't know how long they will last caws they aint very husky. I heard that CyClops Sam is helpin train Gyp the Gouger for his fite with me, he is trainin him how to avoid my feet.

Sam says that my big feet was the caws of his loosing his fite with me, he wants another chance with me.

My injunctions suits aint come of yet but it looks as though I was goin to beat all these bum lawyers caws my lawyer tells me that no jury in the world will believe that I ever ate any $40. worth of beans in so short a time. or drank any $10 worth of slippery elm tea. he said it would kill any man to do it, it perty near killed me at that but never again.

By the way Bud is back on the police force, (Bud is the force) in Joshua. they got bud to sign the pledge and Judge Scriby put him back. dont pay any atention to any letters you may get from my folks caws they are dead set on my fitin and are doin all they can to stop my fitin, they are afraid that i will get my eyes put out. there will be some putin out but it will be Gyp that goes out.

yours truly.

THEY were talking about hurdling.

"Did you ever see a horse jump five feet over a fence?" asked Joe Agler.

"I've seen 'em jump four feet over," replied Whitey Alperman. "I didn't know that a horse ever had five."

BASEBALL very nearly lost Frank Chance. The peerless leader's first leanings were toward the ring, and in his early day he was a noted amateur.

There came to Fresno a giant from the Middle West. He weighed about 220. He had a record as a scrapper and on the strength of it was made a constable. He had hardly gotten into town before Frank's friends got busy with a challenge. A purse was made up and the bout arranged.

The big constable made Chance look like a baby. But they mixed it hard from the gong and for four rounds the milling was fierce and even.

In the fifth the constable swung for the jaw and missed. Frank shot in one that took his opponent on the point of the jaw. Nobody counted. The referee yelled for a doctor and the physician, the referee and the second worked two hours bringing Mr. Constable to. When the constable showed signs of life and was dragged from the ring, Chance quit the boxing game.

WOULD-be betters who lose the peanuts on plays and plays might have better luck by taking a tip from the bookies in Pittsburg and Boston and giving the following odds:

Even money that the winning team makes as many runs in one inning as the loser does in all nine.

Even money that a runner does not score after reaching third with only one out.

Two to one that a runner does not score from second when he reaches there with one out.

Three to one that an ordinary batter does not get to first.

Two to one that Cobb, Wagner, Jackson, Baker, Meyers and batters of that class do not get to first in one time at bat.

Two to one that a team does not score in any given inning. This price sometimes goes as high as four to one, according to the pitcher.

GERMANY Schaefer rises to remark that opposing clubs which believe Ty Cobb has lost his throwing arm completely will some day wake up and find that the Georgia Peach has been slipping somebody a surprise package.

"It is true that Cobb's arm is not as strong now as it was four or five years ago, but Ty can still use it to take off his hat or handle a soup spoon," said Schaefer.

"I have watched him this season. Cobb just loops the ball in from the outfield, giving everybody the impression that he cannot throw farther than second base," he added.

"I think Ty is just figuring on upsetting a lot of dope. He wants to give opposing teams the idea that he cannot throw a lick, and is carefully nursing that old arm of his along, so that by the time we run into hot weather he will be able to cut loose."

ANDY McSwatson is working for Karl Brittain of the City Engineer Department. Yesterday Brittain noticed a street workman leaving an unsightly pile of dirt and gravel at the side of the road. "Come, now, you can't leave that heap there!"

"Well, I've no place to put it," said the workman.

"You can't leave it there!" persisted Mr. Brittain.

"What'll I do with it then?" asked the workman, sullenly.

"Do with it!" echoed Karl. "Dig a hole in the road, to be sure, man, and bury it!"

"TWO gentlemen entered a near beer headquarters and they could not agree as to who should treat," explains Jim Fuller. "To decide the argument they tossed a coin—naturally one of them lost and paid. The next day they got into a discussion as to who had bought the last drink, and in the course of the argument they made a wager, one contending that the man who won the toss was the purchaser, and the other contending that the loser had bought. Now, who in your opinion bought the drink—the man who lost and paid or the man who won?"

WITH two men on the bases and the star batter at the plate, an unknown minister attempted to interrupt a Sunday baseball game in Denver last week.

The minister stepped to the plate and, raising his hands in the air, started to sing a hymn. The umpire called for the continuance of the game. The ball sped from the pitcher's hand, a hit was made and the runner from third slid over the home plate between the minister's legs.

MACKMEN STEAL SIGNALS, SAYS BIRMINGHAM

Naps' Leader Is Latest to Accuse Connie Mack of Getting Other Teams' Signs.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 28.—Manager Joe Birmingham, of Naps, is the latest person to tell why the Athletics are leading the American League. "Connie Mack and his men have stolen the opposing team's signs," says Birmy. All of which puts him in bad with all lovers of clean sports. The chances are that the Athletics haven't stolen any club's signs; neither have they played unfair in any way. They are winning games solely on their merits and deserve all the honor that goes with victory. The Mackmen have proved themselves to be the class in the junior organization, and it's about 10 to 1 bet now that they will play in the world's series next fall.

Many fans believe that not only will the Athletics come back after a year's reversal of form, but that their opponents next October will be none other than the Giants. If such is the case it will be the third time that McGraw and Mack have locked horns in a world's series. The count to date stands even, McGraw beating Connie worse than six-love back in 1905 and Mack gaining the upper hand in 1911 nearly as easily.

* * *

ONE player on the Athletics who is seldom mentioned in connection with the team's success is nevertheless one of the strongest factors of that aggregation. He is Amos Strunk, the speedy outfielder of the Mackmen. Strunk has developed remarkably since last season, and he is today one of the most valuable men Mack has on his team. Not only is he one of the greatest fielders in the league, but he is a fast base runner and is hitting at a .340 clip this season. Strunk gets little credit for the important part he has played in the success of his team. He is seldom mentioned as having distinguished himself, and yet he has done as much as any other member of the team to make possible its remarkable winning streak. On any other team Strunk would be a sensation, but he is lost among the numerous stars which Mack has.

* * *

IT is doubtful if there is another instance in baseball where a player has developed as fast as he. Two years ago Strunk was an ordinary player, who was in the game but seldom. Mack farmed him out a whole season to Milwaukee, and it was while there that Strunk developed into a real star.

Cheney Tells How to Fool Wagner

Says Hans is Weak on Fast Ball

CHICAGO, ILL., June 28.—It is time for the pitchers of the National League to sit up, take notice and listen. Larry Cheney, the star twirler of the Chicago Cub team, reveals a most astonishing and important fact, one that not even the wonderful Christy Mathewson has disclosed since he started hurling in the parent major league organization.

It is information concerning the batting of Hans Wagner, of Pittsburg, who has the remarkable average of .324 for seventeen consecutive years. Cheney says the "flying Dutchman," as he is sometimes called, has a weakness at the plate, which is something no other pitcher has dared to venture since Wagner began his career in the National League.

Mathewson and Mordecai Brown, two of the great flingers of the game, have declared that the Pittsburg slugger is one of the most puzzling batters to pitch to, and particularly in a pinch, because of his ability to hit a curve as well as a fast ball. These two stars have worked hook balls to death trying to fool Wagner.

Brown acknowledged only last winter that most of his success in deceiving the Pirate shortstop was due to his sharp-breaking curve ball, which he invariably broke over the outside corner of the plate. He used this bender in this way because Wagner stands on the outer edge of the batter's box and steps into a curve that is pitched to break toward him or over the plate. Mathewson, like Brown, has depended on his fade-away ball when facing the shortstop.

Fast Ball Against Wagner.

Cheney according to his own "dope," practically abandons his twister while Wagner is at the plate. Of course he resorts to his moist ball considerably, but his strongest point of deception against the famous walloper of extra base hits is his fast ball. Cheney mingles it discreetly with the rest of his assortment. In addition to giving the information that Wagner has a weakness, Cheney also declares that he is easily fooled and crossed after he has two strikes called on him.

"I have fooled Wagner time and again on that fast ball," said Cheney. "As long as I have been pitching against him he has been easy for me. I do not think he secured more than one hit off me all last season, and I appeared in eight games against the Pirates. I do not mean to say that on him he always looks for that curve and generally is set to wallop it. I discovered that in the first game I pitched against him. I believe he expects a curve most of the time because he is under the impression the twirlers believe that is his weakness. I struck him out several times with that fast ball inside and on several occasions had him take it.

Must Change Pace.

"It would not do to shoot your speed at him all the time, for he would be knocking rome runs over the left field fences. And it would not do to pitch curves to him either, for he hits into every field.

"In pitching to Wagner a fellow has to think all the time and try to outguess him. Still, I think him weak on a fast ball inside on account of the way he steps toward the plate when he swings. You remember 'King' Cole achieved a lot of fame in 1911 when he fanned Wagner three times in one game in Chicago. After the contest Joe Tinker asked him what he handed to Hans, and he said he did not know, but I learned from Archer that Cole had set him down on that fast one inside."

International Race Meeting Suggested

Plan Outlined for Bringing Best Horses of Europe and America Together.

NEW YORK, June 28.—The success which attended the recent international polo matches suggested to horsemen that racing and trotting might be the mediums for bringing together the chosen representatives of the Old World and the New in somewhat similar contests.

Who can estimate the benefit to horse racing and horse breeding which might follow a series of international matches of like importance, if they could be arranged, for the best runners and the best trotters of Europe and America, perhaps ridden or driven by amateurs?

The great sectional matches between the North and the South which marked the beginning and the end of a golden era on the running turf in America afford an indication of what might be expected.

The whole country was ablaze with interest and excitement when Eclipse and Henry met in 1823 on Long Island. The race continued to be an absorbing subject of discussion for years after it was run, and led to the building of new tracks, the establishment of new studs and the advent of new supporters and patrons of the turf throughout all sections of the country.

It is the unit molding of Goodrich Tires that adds wear to the purest rubber, compounded as our 43 years of experience proves is the best way to give it durability and toughness and to hold its resiliency and life. Each Goodrich Tire is made and molded as a unit. The thick, tough tread being actually of the tire and not simply on it, naturally does not peel or slip. The whole tire, being an integral structure, naturally wears long and uniformly because the life of the rubber has not been cooked out by extra vulcanization.

Your tire dealer will supply you with whatever style of Goodrich Tire is best for your needs, and we will send you, for the asking, our free folders which tell you how to get the best service from your tires.

Plant Breeding Wonders Teach Farmers of South Importance Of Care in the Selection of Seed

Scientists of Georgia Are Among Modern Wizards Who Are Redirecting Plant Life Into Interesting and More Profitable Processes—Many Yields Are Doubled.

By CHARLES A. WHITTLE.
Georgia State College of Agriculture.

Since Burbank has made blackberries white, plums without stones, cactus without spines, briers without prickles, applies without seeds, conferred fragrance where none belonged, changed flavor and increased sizes and yields; since Nilsson has enlarged the heads, strengthened the straw and rendered oats, wheat and barley resistant to disease; since numerous plant breeders have greatly increased the yielding quality of corn, cotton, etc., no intelligent farmer should longer be unmindful of the pedigree of his plants.

Plants can be bred up just as animals. Some of the very same laws of heredity apply in both. To the observing, it has always been a wonder how so many varieties of corn, wheat, oats, cotton and other plants came to exist. Probably it will always be a wonder, for after all the origin of species is inexplicable except on the hypothesis that a supreme intelligence just made it that way.

No Distinct Species Produced.

Scientists have tried to explain the origin of species and the existence of varieties by saying that they were brought about by mutation or sports—that is, by sudden, sportive changes whereby a plant got out of the groove of its native ways. But why the plant had the sportive inclination and why it should attain distinct characteristics by reason of the same remains a mystery.

No one has ever produced a distinct species and no one has ever witnessed the production of one. All that has apparently been observed is the results of crossing different species and varieties.

At any rate it is certain that there are many distinct species in the world which have fixed habits and produce faithfully after their kind with only limited variations. Cross-breeding alone has been found the only effective method for changing a variety. After the crossing has been done if care is not taken to maintain it, the variety splits up and reverts to its original components.

Probers into the deep things of science formerly believed with Darwin that the origin of species was far back and that it took vast centuries of natural selection and a survival of the fittest to produce species and create a change in a variety. But now Prof. Burbank accomplishes in a summer what Darwin thought would take a millennium.

Only Accidental Crossings.

What was formerly considered the mysterious mutations are after all only accidental crossings or cross-breedings. The head of wheat that grew up amongst its brethren and became larger and different was formerly thought to be a sudden mysterious mutation, but now it is certain that most of these so-called mutations have resulted from a sportive wind or a sportive insect which brought to the flower the fertilizing pollen from a neighboring field, perhaps from another variety of the same kind of grain, perhaps from a different species.

It is the introduction of a strange breed that excited the plant to extra production. Thereby has been unfolded a wonderful secret looking to increasing the harvests.

After many years of painstaking experiments in selection and trying to average up a whole field of grain to a little higher each year, and after pursuing other wrong quests, plant breeders everywhere are now giving more attention to cross-breeding of varieties than to any other one thing.

In this Burbank has led the world, and, more than any one else, has advanced the new movement of cross-breeding. In fact, very little can be said to have been accomplished in improving plant life by man save by this method.

Advises Planting Hybrid.

Enough has been discovered about the benefits of cross-breeding to have induced the United States Bureau of Agriculture to advise planting the hybrid for the field crop; that is, to produce a single crop. A hybrid, of course, is a cross between two varieties. It has been long recognized as a principle that the mixture of varieties adds at least temporary strength and development to the offspring. Burbank has developed from two species of the English walnut a tree of extraordinary size and productivity.

But while the hybrid crop is good, the hybrid seeds are not. As previously indicated there is a strong tendency for the hybrid to split up and revert to original types. Good producing seed must be obtained in another way. The seed stock must be kept pure and strong. It can be kept pure by keeping it removed from similar crops. It can be kept strong by selecting only the best seed.

The farmer must, therefore, return to the original strain each year to obtain a foundation for a good yield. It is for this reason that the plant breeder maintains his well cared for seed plats where only the pure strain is developed. It is to these plats he must go each year to get a potentially strong seed to mix with another potentially strong seed from another such plat to obtain a heavy yielding hybrid.

Doubtless many farmers have wondered why they have not obtained big yields by planting seed obtained from a field of heavy yielding grain. The explanation is that the seed taken from the field were hybrids. What he actually gets from hybrid seed, in the way of a variety of corn, is doubtless surprising to him.

Farmer Can Grow Pure Seed.

It is any easy matter for a farmer to grow his own seed, and thus be sure that he is not getting a weak hybrid. Having obtained what can be reasonably expected to be a pure strain, he should pursue the plant-to-row method—that is, plant each row in his seed plat from grain obtained from a single ear or head.

Before planting he should be sure that he is putting into the ground seeds that are vigorous. He can determine this by conducting germinating tests. Taking grains from a selected ear, he can plant these in a sand box, apply moisture and observe how many of the seed planted germinate. If nearly 100 per cent of the grains germinate, the ear is not discarded. Only those showing the best germination should be reserved to plant in the seed plat. Some breeders go further and investigate the rootlets that first develop and discard even good germinating ears that do not also show good root development.

Having ascertained which are the good ears, the next step of the seed breeder is to plant each ear to a row so as to keep check on the history and accomplishment of each ear. All this can be done with little trouble by the farmer. Breeders favor detasseling every other stalk of corn in a breeding plat before it has pollenized itself.

Other Plant as Fertilizer.

This leaves the stalk to be fertilized by another plant, which is considered to make for a stronger breed than when self-fertilized. When the gathering time comes only those ears which have grown on the detasseled stalks are taekn for seed to be used in planting the seed plat the next year. The ears from such stalks which are not reserved for future seed plats, together with those from the stalks not detasseled, can be planted in the field. This, of course, applies to corn, and no such close manipulation can be worked with other grains, but the same general principles apply. The main point is to take care that the selected strains of corn, wheat, oats or whatever else are kept put and free from the invasion of rovers and that the strain is kept as strong as possible by seed selection, which includes the germination test.

An interesting development in corn breeeding which has been pursued by Professor P. O. Vanaitar, of the Georgia State College of Agriculture, is that which has to do with "suckers" or "stools" on corn. Instead of discarding corn with "suckers" he has developed and watched it. His conclusions are that corn that suckers is the corn that germinates strongest, produces the biggest yield, has the best stover, stands strongest against winds; in fact, is the best corn. Breeders generally have overlooked this fact.

Farmer Benefits From Science.

These and other important contributions are being constantly made to the aggregate of knowledge of how to enlarge the yields of not only corn, but other crops. It is a part which the scientists and experimenter can do for the benefit of the farmer, giving the farmer the fruits of his study in the shape of increased harvests.

No field of agricultural work is fraught with more fascination and wonder than this of plant breeding, and, without doubt, some marvelous discoveries will be made in the next few years which will not only set botanists agog, but will rejoice a whole world that other discoveries have been made whereby two stalks can be grown where one has heretofore been grown.

The history of plant development reads like romance, but back of it, of course, was long years of careful toil that was unromantic enough. As many as 100 years ago plants that were extra well developed were taken from the field and propagated carefully and were gradually developed into varieties which became broadly adopted instead of old varieties, because of their greater yielding power.

Reverted to Old Types.

While occasionally something was accomplished by such methods in after years, in the main there was disappointment, for the reason that the exceptional plants were hybrids and soon reverted to original types.

In Germany and Sweden the investigators began on the Darwinian basis and tried to improve by selecting a number of best plants, sowing them together and attempting to advance the whole. It was known as mass selection. Finally Dr. Hjalmar Nilsson, of Sweden, fell upon the single plant or ear-to-row as the basis for establishing pure breeds and maintaining the purity. Since then the ear or the single head has been the basis of all successful breeding.

One of the points emphasized in the boys' corn club work is seed selection. What has been learned from these various seed-breeding experiments the world over the Government and the educational authorities of the State carry to the boys in practical, simple form. The boys are told how to determine the best seed.

Without planting strong seed, of course, the corn-club boy is not in the race.

Seed Selection Necessary.

Such as have been careless about selecting good seed can never win though he have the richest land and put on it all the fertilizer that can possibly be used. Nothing can make up for the shortage inhering in the nature of the seed itself.

In view of this, how important it is that one knows that he is dealing with a reliable firm when he buys from a seed house. If the firm is honest but ignorant, how unfortunate for the buyer!

One of these days no person will be permitted to grow and market seeds who has not first passed a rigid examination to determine whether or not he knows how to produce good seed; and, second, no seed will be permitted to be sold the quality of which is not known to be backed by right cultivation and care. Of course, there is no way of knowing how much the loss to the farmer annually occurs by reason of having been sold poor seed when he had a right to expect good seed.

When the difference in the yield of good seed and bad is equal to 50 per cent, as it often is, what a public calamity! Poor seed needs not only to be guarded against for the sake of the planter, but for the public at large, which looks to the planter for a food supply.

Plants Bred From Disease.

Not only are seed to be provided which are high in yielding quality, but one of the very interesting features of plant improvement is that the better the plant the more it resists plant disease and insect dangers. Professor S. M. Bain, of the University of Tennessee, found that red clover had come to be almost a complete failure in that State, by reason of a disease known as anthracnose of clover.

Starting with a few plants in a patch that had resisted the disease, he bred from these. Each season he subjected the patch to the disease, even to spraying the plants with the spores of the disease, saving out of each patch those that resisted the disease. Thus each year he increased his disease resistant seed until now it is being grown quite widely over the State.

A similar work has been done with reference to anthracnose in cotton by Professor R. J. H. DeLoach, director of the State Experiment Station of Georgia. A similar work is being done with reference to black root and wilt by Professor E. L. Worsham, State Entomologist of Georgia. In other lines, but by the same process, plants are being bred away from disease by right selection.

What with plant breeding and plant selection, no magician will have ever worked greater wonders than the men who are taking care of the plant life of the country.

These modern wizards are men whom farmers sometimes are inclined to look upon as bookworms, theorists, potterers, impractical adventurers; but it is these who are doing more farming than the farmer, who create bigger crops than anybody else, who save the plants from greatest loss.

Needs Legislative Support.

When the Legislatures are called upon for an appropriation for these workers in the colleges and laboratories, these lawmaking bodies will not be asked for money that will go further toward conferring real public welfare. In the South where the diversification of farming is the paramount issue and where there is a constant thirst for information as to how to do this and that other thing to get out of the single crop bondage and the afflictions of the boll weevil, it would be no less than a shame not to provide all the men and means necessary to render the required assistance; also to provide for carrying on the experiments and investigations for soil and plant improvement, and for training young men for agricultural leadership at the institutions of learning devoted to the cause.

FARMERS USING FLOOD WATERS TO MAKE MONEY

Tax Exemption Granted On Each Dam Built For Irrigation—Many Acres Corn Land Added.

TOPEKA, June 28.—Western Kansas has discovered that 80 per cent of the water that falls in that section runs away and does no good. As Kansas usually does when something needs fixing, the western Kansas farmers have decided to stop this waste. Thousands of artificial lakes, from one to five and ten acres in extent, are being built to hold this waste water.

It is estimated by the Kansas Agricultural College that 20,000 acres will be covered with water in western Kansas this summer, the water to be used in irrigation during the hot months, when the rains do not come.

Kansas is a rolling prairie, and it is cut up with thousands of miles of gullies. As soon as the water was carried away and into the streams the gullies became dry.

Thousands of these gullies have been dammed by the farmers this year, and hundreds have planted small fields of corn just below these dams on ground that never grew a stalk of corn before.

July and August often pass without a single drop of rain falling in the western part of the State, and those are the months when the corn matures.

Many farmers have built from two to five dams. They can irrigate with little or no expense, as the ground is rolling enough for the water to be carried to the fields without pumping and without elaborate engineering problems.

Prizes Are Offered.

Otis L. Benton, a banker at Oberlin, and J. C. Hooper, a banker at Ness City, offered prizes to the farmers who built the dams and who raised the best crops by irrigation. Both are big landowners, and they have constructed several hundred dams on their own lands and on the lands owned by Eastern people, but leased to them for farming.

They obtained from the Kansas Legislature a tax exemption on lands where the flood waters are conserved. For every dam built on a farm, half the tax on twenty acres is returned to the farmer by the county.

Hail Does Damage To Georgia Tobacco

Fancy Grades Reported Hurt—Holes in Leaves Cut Values—Crop 2,000,000 Pounds Yearly.

Hail has done considerable damage to the tobacco crop in South Georgia, according to advices received by the Swint-Davis Leaf Tobacco Company.

Hail is the bane of the tobacco planter who produces fancy grades. Tiny holes in the leaves now are made larger as the plant grows, and at marketing time it may be found that the leaves around the bud, from which come the finest wrappers, have been ruined except for fillers.

In a forty-mile belt on both sides of the Georgia-Florida line, perhaps 2,000,000 pounds of cigar wrappers are grown yearly. Fine wrappers bring 85 cents per pound to the farmer, while filler tobacco is worth perhaps 12 cents.

INDIANA HUCKSTER DIES, LEAVING $30,000 ESTATE

TERRE HAUTE, IND., June 28.—William E. Stevenson, a huckster, who died last week, left an estate of $30,000, which his widow says was accumulated by selling vegetables to residents of the city. She says he arose at 2 o'clock in the morning to be early in market row to buy from farmers. He was known by his customers for his punctuality.

POULTRY

Too ambitious start is greatest danger to the poultry raiser.

Success with chicken farming can only be attained by hard, systematic work and every care for minute detail. Thoroughbred stock is necessary.

By Judge F. J. MARSHALL.

Hundreds of people in all parts of the country are beginning to take up the breeding of poultry in earnest. They are easy to locate because they are after information of all kinds from all sources. Naturally they are anxious to get started right.

We get any number of these letters asking us for information as to how to start a poultry plant. The majority of them are not explicit enough as to their intentions. They usually ask us how many and what kind of chickens should a person keep in order to be able to make a comfortable living from them.

As a rule they do not tell us which branch of the business they have in mind. They do not tell us what their qualifications are.

Many Too Ambitious.

Many people want to start into the poultry business upon too large a scale. In other words, they do not seem to realize how important it is to have some experience before embarking in too big a craft. They do not seem to think that experience counts as it does in all other branches of business. What other lines of trade are there where a man or woman would undertake to do as much business at the start as their competitors are doing after a decade of experience? And yet with poultry they will ask the question as to how many fowls or laying hens a person should start with to be able to make a good living.

Now if they would turn it about and ask a question something like this, "How many hens should a person keep the first year of his experience to insure making a failure of it?" it would be a little more reasonable to the poultryman who has been through the rounds.

From what we have been able to gather from our rounds of nearly all the poultry plants of this country, the successful ones started at the bottom of the ladder. In fact, those that started at the top, thinking that they were taking a short cut, always had to drop back for a fresh start after a year or two of failures.

Experience Is Necessary.

Some one must have the experience. It is a matter of history that there have been a number of large poultry plants established in this country that have been failures from the start for the reason that their promoters started in at the wrong end of the line.

It has been the plodding fellows who have built to stand. It has looked like a slow business. So it is with the growth of the oak. It does not grow like the gourd vine, neither does it wither and die at the end of one season.

When it is fully matured it commands admiration and respect from all comers. As to the amount of capital required, much depends upon the size and character of the buildings to be erected, the number and quality of fowls to be purchased the first season.

The main thing in building is comfort and convenience. The plainer building is really the better, as it is more easy to keep clean, and cleanliness is absolutely essential to success.

Of course, the man with unlimited means can do as he pleases about expensive houses. In fact, that kind ask but few questions; as a rule, they push ahead and build, doing the considering afterward.

Cheap Houses the Best.

A very good cheap house can be built from the cheaper grades of lumber, creosoted with a gas-house product that is very cheap and will last for years. This is a very healthy product to have about to dilute with kerosene and use as a spray on the inside for the destroying of mites and lice. Perhaps the most economical all around house is one that will accommodate about 100 hens. This number can be housed, fed and cared for with the same work that one-fourth that number could. As you increase the number you multiply the risk of disease and the difficulty of handling it.

Of course, in our most extensive commercial poultry plants larger houses are used with comparative success.

A house for 100 fowls would have to be about 16 by 30. In a mild climate where there is but little severe winter weather such a house can be utilized as a roosting house and a scratching shed combined during the really bad weather.

The roosts should be placed in the rear of the house, and when it is desired to use the front for scratching a 12-inch board should be placed on edge to divide the roosting section from the scratch. In that way the scratching part will be kept free from the dropping. These houses should be about 8 feet in front to the south, slanting back to 6 feet at the eaves.

Boarding Is Necessary.

The front yard should be boarded down three feet from the roof to prevent beating rains from wetting too far in. The rest of the way down should be covered with poultry netting to allow a free circulation of air and let the sun in, as the sun means health to any place.

True, such houses will get hot in the summer, but the fowls will only be in there at night. Any carpenter under proper direction can easily build such a house. The roost poles should be not high from the ground or floor, as flying from high perches causes much trouble in the way of bruised heels. The nest boxes should be separate and not nailed to anything, in order that they may be taken out for cleaning and disinfecting at any time. A good place for them is on a board along the rear wall just above the roosts, with a small piece of netting stretched above them to prevent them from roosting upon them, still making them easily accessible from the roosts for laying purposes. The roost poles should all be loose and should not touch the walls of the house in any way. They will then be easily cleaned and kept free from lice and mites.

Pure Bred Stock Best.

We would advise beginners to start with pure bred stock, no matter what the character of the business is to be. True, it costs a little more to make the start, but the results are so much better that there should be no comparisons made.

All poultry plants of any consequence use this kind of stock. Whether for eggs or stock, for market, or both, it will pay. In marketing a lot of fowls that are of the same size, color and shape they will always bring a little more per pound than will the hit-or-miss type of all sizes and colors.

Then the eggs from thoroughbred stock of any one variety will be uniform in color, and as a general rule in shape, all of which goes a long way toward obtaining better prices.

The thoroughbred hen can be depended upon for uniformity in egg production. For example, if ten hens in a flock of 100 lay every other day the chances are that very soon approximately 90 per cent will soon be doing the same thing, while in a flock of odds and ends of the scrub kind you can make no estimate.

Thoroughbreds Like Machines.

The thoroughbreds have been bred to type and for laying purposes for so many generations that they are really like machines. No one should go into the poultry business with the notion in his head that he is going to make big money right from the start, or even a good living. It takes time to get things in running order. If you have a little knowledge of the work and have been raising and keeping 100 hens you may easily double your capacity the first year and again double it the second year if you have had success.

Keep a record of everything, that you may really know what you are getting out of the business. So many get the big head at the start and are like the man who was successful in running the little dry goods store on the corner, thinking that he was really fitted to manage a department store until he tried it and failed. There is no question that there are great possibilities in the poultry business in its various branches, but we desire to impress upon the minds of the overzealous that it is like all other kinds of business, success is only reached through well-directed hard work.

It must be remembered that the hen to give us her best efforts must be well cared for every day in the year. The hen in her natural or native conditon laid but about two dozen eggs a year. It takes about five or six dozen to pay for her year's keep. It must be born in mind that each individual poultry raiser must, to a great extent, solve his own problems. He can pick up pointers here and there that will help him greatly to avoid the ruts and pitfalls, but, after all, he must for himself "prove all things and hold fast to that which is good."

EVERY MALE CITIZEN OF COUNTY TO FIGHT LOCUSTS

KANSAS CITY, June 28.—Every able-bodied man and boy in Wyandotte County between the ages of 18 and 65 may be ordered out to fight locusts if the ravages of these insects on the crops and orchards continue. This action has been proposed by farmers familiar with the grasshopper plague of 1877 after the famous "grasshopper year."

Persons failing to answer the call for service are liable to fines of $3 for each day.

1912 COTTON CROP SECOND IN SIZE AND VALUE, SAYS CENSUS BUREAU REPORT

South Gets $920,630,000 for Producing Total of 14,313,015 Standard Bales—Only One Acre Out of Every Eleven in Belt Is Planted—Oil Mills Take 75 Per Cent of All Seed.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Statistics for the cotton crop in the United States for the year 1912 are given in detail in a bulletin soon to be issued by Director Durand of the Bureau of the Census. It was prepared under the supervision of William M. Steuart, chief statistician.

The quantity of cotton reported for the crop of 1912, with linters included and round bales counted as half bales, is 14,090,863 running bales. With the exception of that of 1911 this is the largest crop the United States ever produced. Expressed in gross 500-pound bales, the crop amounted to 14,313,015 bales, being 1,937,261 bales, or 11.9 per cent, less than that of 1911, but exceeding that of 1910 by 2,307,327 bales, or 19.2 per cent; that of 1909 by 3,997,633 bales, or 38.8 per cent, and that of 1904, the third largest crop, by 633,061 bales, or 4.6 per cent.

The average annual production of cotton for the years 1899-1903 was 10,055,003 bales, and for the years 1908-1912, 13,294,333 bales; the increase in the average annual production being 3,239,330 bales, or 32.2 per cent. When it is considered that of the total area of the counties from which returns of cotton ginned were made only about one-eleventh was devoted to the production of cotton in 1911 and 1912, the figures afford some idea of the possibilities of cotton production in the United States.

Practically the entire production of cotton in the United States is upland, which includes a number of long-staple varieties. Only about one-half of 1 per cent of the total cotton production in 1912 was of the sea island variety, and only 4.3 per cent was linters.

The Sea Island Crop.

The sea island crop of 1912 amounted to 73,777 bales, or 28,180,000 pounds gross weight, and was less than that of 1911 by 45,516 bales, or 38.2 per cent. With the exception of the crop of 1906, the crop of 1912 was the smallest produced since the inauguration of the ginning reports of the Census Bureau in 1899. A very severe storm proved disastrous to the crop in South Carolina in 1911, and the production of that State decreased from 13,016 bales in 1910 to 5,119 in 1911, but increased to 7,707 bales in 1912.

While production of sea island cotton shows variations from 57,550 running bales in 1906 to 119,293 in 1911, there has been no general tendency toward an increase or a decrease in the production of this variety, the amount in 1912 being 73,777 running bales.

The production of linters shows a marked increase from 114,544 running bales in 1899 to 602,324 bales in 1912. This gain is due in part to the increase in the production of cotton and hence of cotton seed available for delinting, and in part to the marked development since 1899 of the cotton-seed products industry, resulting in an increase in the proportion of the total seed supply reginned, and particularly in the closer delinting of the seed for the better separation of the meat from the hulls.

The estimated quantity of cotton seed produced from the crop of 1912 was 6,104,000 tons, which compares with 6,997,000 tons from the crop of 1911. Of the total for 1912, 4,579,508 tons, or 75 per cent, were taken by the oil mills, thus leaving 1,524,482 tons, or 25 per cent, for planting, export, feeding and other purposes. The proportion of the seed taken by the oil mills from the crop of 1911 was 70 per cent, a somewhat smaller proportion than in 1912.

Crop Worth $920,630,000.

The estimated value of the crop of 1912 is $920,630,000, as compared with $859,840,000 for 1911, $963,180,000 for 1910, $812,090,000 for 1909, $681,630,000 for 1908 and $700,960,000 for 1907.

Thus the value of the crop of 1912, as estimated, was $60,790,000, or 7 per cent more than the estimate for 1911, notwithstanding the fact that the quantity of lint cotton was 12.7 per cent less. While the crop of 1911 was the largest ever produced, and that of 1912 the second in size, the crop of 1910 was the most valuable.

The estimated value of the cotton crops of the five-year period ending with 1912 is $4,236,790,000, while the corresponding value for the five-year period ending with 1899 was $1,529,500,000. During the last five years the price of upland lint cotton has averaged about 11.7 cents per pound, or nearly $60 per bale.

The crop of 1912 graded "middling to strict middling." The average price of upland cotton, which has been computed from the New Orleans market reports, has ranged from 8.20 cents in 1912 to 14.69 in 1910. For the crop of 1912 it was 12.05 cents, which is 2.32 cents more than the average for 1911 and 2.64 cents less than for 1910.

The average bale weight for the crop of 1912, counting round as half bales and including linters, is 507.9 pounds gross, as compared with 504.4 pounds for 1911, 501.7 pounds for 1910 and 496.6 pounds for 1909. The variation in the average weight of bale for upland cotton put up in square packages is pronounced throughout the cotton belt, the averages ranging from less than 430 pounds for a number of counties in Georgia and North Carolina to 560 pounds for counties in Mississippi, Oklahoma and Texas.

Texas Crop Phenomenal.

The cotton crop of 1912, as compared with that of 1911, shows a loss in each of the States, with the exception of Texas and Oklahoma, in which States it was the largest ever produced. Alabama, North Carolina and South Carolina, however, all show an increase over every other year except 1911.

The crop of 1912 in Texas was phenomenal, being almost twice as large as that of 1909. Texas alone produced almost one-fourth of the total commercial crop of the world in 1912.

A large part of the increased production of cotton in recent years has been due to the large crops in Georgia and in the Carolinas, the net increase since 1906 for the three States combined being 844,449 bales, or 27.1 per cent.

The production of cotton in Louisiana decreased steadily from 1906 to 1910, though the crops of 1911 and 1912 show an increase over that of 1910. In 1906 the production of the State amounted to 1,012,573 bales, while in 1910 the amount was only 255,733 bales. This rapid decline was due largely to the ravages of the boll weevil and to the consequent diversion of cotton lands to the cultivation of sugarcane, rice and other crops.

The boll weevil was also largely responsible for the decrease in the production in Mississippi, in which State the crop of 1912 was the smallest for five years.

The Acreage Large.

According to the revised estimate of the Department of Agriculture, the area planted in cotton in 1912 was 34,766,000 acres, of which 483,000 acres, or 1.4 per cent, were abandoned, leaving 34,283,000 acres as the area from which the crop was harvested. This is a reduction of 1,762,000 acres, as compared with 1911. With this exception, the acreage both that planted and that harvested, was the largest for any year. Mississippi, Arkansas and Oklahoma all show material reductions, as compared with 1911, while Texas shows an increase of 395,000 acres. The average production of lint per acre in 1912, as estimated by the Department of Agriculture, was 191 pounds, as compared with 208 pounds in 1911, and 171 pounds in 1910.

There were 8,215 bales reported as ginned in California in 1912, as compared with 9,790 bales in 1911, and 5,986 bales in 1910. These amounts include some foreign cotton grown in Mexico (Lower California) and ginned in California.

Cotton Insect Pests.

The cotton crop of 1912 was seriously affected by insect pests. The growers in a large section of the cotton belt had to contend with the boll weevil, while in some sections the crop suffered damage from cotton caterpillars, grass worms and other pests to a greater extent than in former years. Drouths in 1909 and 1910, particularly in Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana, checked the development of the boll weevils in their early stages, and killing frost followed by warm weather in the latter year greatly reduced their numbers. These conditions resulted in a great reduction in the number of weevils in 1911. The season of 1912, however, again was favorable to the weevil, and there was a considerable extension of the area subject to this pest. Owing to the general dissemination of the information obtained by the Federal and State Departments of Agriculture, the destructiveness of the boll weevil is being greatly reduced.

The quantity of cotton ginned from the crop of 1912 prior to September 1 was 730,935 bales, the largest amount for any year since the inauguration of these reports by the Census Bureau, with the single exception of 1911, when the number of bales was 771,297. By October 18, 1912, 51 per cent of the crop had been ginned, as compared with 49.9 per cent in 1911, 46.9 per cent in 1910, 54.9 per cent in 1909, 48.1 per cent in 1908, and 40 per cent in 1907.

By November 14 slightly more than three-fourths of the crop had been ginned. There was considerable difference, however, among the several States in the proportion of the total amount ginned to specific dates. More than two-thirds of the total crop of Texas had been ginned by October 18, while Tennessee showed less than one-third.

Crop's Economic Status.

Some idea of the importance of cotton production in the United States from an economic standpoint may be had when it is considered that, next to corn, cotton is the most valuable crop grown in the country, and that raw cotton is the largest single item of export. The value of the cotton crop of 1909 represented 15 per cent of the total value of all the crops of the country. The value of cotton exported during the fiscal year 1912 amounted to $565,849,271, or 26.1 per cent of the total value of all articles of domestic merchandise exported during the year. It exceeded the amounts for iron and steel manufactures, meat and dairy products and breadstuffs combined, these three groups ranking next in importance among articles exported. These large exports, combined with the more than 5,000,000 bales consumed in domestic manufacture, strikingly indicate the importance of cotton in the economic affairs of the nation.

Altogether, the greatest cotton-growing section in the world, both in extent and in production, is located in the south-central and southeastern parts of the United States. It includes small portions of Virginia, Kentucky, Missouri, Kansas and New Mexico, and the States lying to the south. This cotton-producing area is about 1,500 miles long, from east to west, and about 500 miles wide. Within the past few years the cultivation of cotton has been undertaken in Arizona and California on irrigated land with considerable success, especially in the latter State. The growing of more valuable crops, however, will likely prevent any appreciable increase in the production in these States.

Production Can Be Increased.

Numerous efforts have been made in recent years to introduce the cultivation of cotton in new countries and to increase the production in others. In some instances failure has attended these efforts, and in only a few cases does there seem a probability of making a material addition to the world supply of commercial cotton.

GEORGIAN BIDS JULY OPTIONS TO HIGH LEVEL

Athens Spot Dealer Leads on New Orleans Exchange Floor, Bulling Near Month.

NEW ORLEANS, June 28.—The July deal in this market is now attracting more attention. There had been so little talk here about the July position that many of the trade had formed the opinion that there would be no advance of consequence in July in this market. Consequently, not a few sold out their July longs at a much lower level and bought the distant deliveries at somewhat narrower differences than now prevail.

The situation in July changed when a wealthy merchant and spot man from Athens, Ga., appeared on the floor and announced his intention of taking up July contracts in this market. He backed up this announcement with good supporting orders for July, and has been a persistent buyer of July contracts on every decline recently. The result has been a decided strengthening of that month, which has increased its premium over the rest of the list, and is now maintaining a level somewhat in keeping with the price of actual cotton, basis middling.

Within the last day or two it has also become apparent that Frank B. Hayne has a large interest in the July position here. The July shorts, therefore, finding that position so strongly supported, have become decidedly uneasy, and have been covering to the best advantage as the opportunity offered. The covering thus far has been of a scattered character, but sufficient to enhance the premium on July over October, which has been running within the last day or two at about 87 points. It is predicted by some of the brokers that July will go to a premium of 100 points over October before the July position is finally liquidated.

Several private crop reports have been issued this week. From a bearish standpoint, they have not been very encouraging, showing an improvement during June of only 2 1-2 per cent in the condition of the crop as compared with last month. It is asked, "If the crop has not improved more than that during June, always a good month for crop development, what will happen during July and August, critical crop months, during which deterioration as a rule takes place?"

The talent is closely watching the crop situation, which does not appear any too promising at present, and should there be any change for the worse in the condition, heavy speculative buying would probably be witnessed in the cotton market.

Some of the more sanguine bulls are already predicting 13 cents by the end of July. If market history repeats itself, this level will be seen, as cotton sold above 13 cents in the summer of both 1912 and 1911.

Frisco Case Similar To Many Preceding

If Winchell Is Ousted as Receiver it Will Not Be First Instance of Kind.

NEW YORK, June 28.—If B. F. Winchell should resign as one of the Frisco receivers it will not be the first time that the president of a railroad has met with such an experience.

In January of 1893, the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, supposedly in a sound financial condition, sold a block of $5,000,000 bonds without any difficulty, and on February 1 the company distributed its regular $3,000,000 dividend. On February 20, or three weeks later, A. A. McLeod, president of the company, was appointed receiver, after having confessed to the court that an unwieldy floating debt had been incurred.

In reply to that announcement the surprised bondholders appointed an investigating committee which resulted in the discovery that the company was a hopeless bankrupt, because of the reckless policy which had been pursued by its president. McLeod, it was found, had not only secured control of the Jersey Central, the Lehigh Valley, and several coal companies, and vast coal land holdings in the anthracite district, but he had bought up the Poughkeepsie bridge and acquired control of the New England, the Boston & Maine, and several smaller New England railroads on a margin. As a result of these disclosures McLeod resigned as president and receiver. He was succeeded by Joseph J. Harris, representing the bondholders.

European Investors Sell Old Holdings

Stocks Returning to Wall Street Bought Years Ago as Shown by Transfer Dates.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Stocks thrown over by Europe are beginning to turn up on this side. Brokers to whom delivery is made express surprise at the antiquity of the transfer dates on many of these securities. These dates show that we are getting stock back sold to European investors five, ten and even a dozen years back.

It is inferred from this fact that the European investor is going deep down in his strong boxes and that the quantity of American stocks carried abroad must be the smallest in a very long time. Whenever foreign investments in our securities are considered there is always a difference of opinion as to whether the foreigner makes money on them or not.

Some people imagine that the European always takes advantage of our misfortunes and buys stock from us cheap, only to sell them back higher up, but there are just as many who express surprise that Europe should grow rich buying stocks from us at top prices and selling at an obvious loss, just as it is customary on frequent occasions to deplore the shocking losses of the London option dealers in Americans.

UNDERSIZED PLANT CAUSES COMPLAINT

Soaking Rains Needed to Hasten Growth Before Fruiting Season Begins—Spots Firm.

MEMPHIS, June 28.—An undersized plant continues the chief complaint from the cotton fields. To offset this there is almost unequaled cultivation, stands that, as a rule, are satisfactory and, except for the presence of the weevil in some sections, an absence of pests. The tardiness of the crop ruling over the larger portion of the belt, and amounting to from one to two weeks, is expressed in the initial statement of condition, and until it is overcome there seems likelihood of concern over the yield proving sufficient to fill the promised requirements.

It is admitted that so far the late start is not serious enough to prove an insurmountable barrier to a very large crop, but each week it exists will increase the probabilities of it proving one. It is generally felt that the excellent cultivation, reports from everywhere saying the fields are as clean as a garden and the soil in fine tilth, decreases the danger of drouth injury and has resulted in development of a good tap root, but the time is near when soaking rains will be necessary. There have been complaints already of suffering because they are lacking and they will increase until they are forthcoming.

During the past week or so some showers have been received in scattered sections, partially relieving needs, but prospects of overcoming the crop's handicaps as yet are none too good. Things are in first class shape to make quick response to a plentiful supply of moisture, but without it in the course of a week or two there will probably be some revision of ideas as to yield.

Make War on Weevils.

The effort to minimize the ravages of the boll weevil in the affected territories continues with varying success, depending largely on the energy shown in picking the pests from the plant and thus reducing their number. It will be some time before any definite idea can be obtained as to the probable extent of their work, for the blooming season is only beginning and they do no injury until the fruiting stage of the crop. Advices reaching here tell of them being numerous over an increasing area.

"First" blooms at this center have been plentiful, averaging about the usual time, although that is not always a safe index to the advancement of the crop. It is argued by close students of the crop situation that if the plant does not soon attain its proper size for this time of the season there will be less likelihood of fruiting sufficiently heavy to afford promise of a heavy yield.

Expects Bullish Report.

The Government's bureau condition report that is to be issued July 3 conjointly with the acreage estimate is being discussed, and private estimates are already being received. The failure of the plant to attain its normal size during the past few weeks has caused some revision of expectations, but the presumption is that the report will come a point or two, perhaps more, over the June report of 79.1. The acreage figures are expected to show a gain of around 3 per cent over last year's final figures, Wednesday of the past week was the final day to be included in the report, and to that time there had been no soaking rains in the sections most needing them.

The spot situation continues steady and the tendency of prices has been to a higher level. The speculative spot situation, reflected chiefly through the July position in New York, has remained in the control of the bulls, and stock in that center has been only slightly increased over the minimum. Quotations for spots in the belt have been advanced until middling ranges from 12 cents to 12¾. Business has not been large, but this is due as much to paucity of offering as to anything else.

Spinners Buy Steadily.

Movement has been moderate, but at ports ahead of a year ago at this time, indicating that exports will, for a while at least, run larger. There continues evidence of large consumption and one source of strength in the contract market has been the quiet absorption of offerings by spinners against their needs of the actual in the fall.

It yet remains to be proven that the early movement will be heavy, which adds to the uncertainty of the spinners' position. In the meantime the world is coming to the opinion that if the coming crop is not 15,000,000 or more bales, some very high prices will be witnessed.

Banks Prove Adroit In Phrasing Opinion

Resolutions on Currency Reform Make No Reference to Measure Now Before Congress.

By M. A. ROSE.

Nothing more adroit than the Atlanta Clearing House Association's resolutions on the currency bill has been phrased in many a day.

It bears reading twice. At first glance, the hurried builder of headlines would be inclined to write "Currency Bill Warmly Indorsed" or something to that effect.

Which is far from the truth.

Careful examination shows that nowhere do the Atlanta bankers say they think the measure now before Congress is what they want. On the other hand, there is no criticism.

In straightaway terms the resolutions mean: "We, the bankers of Atlanta, think currency reform is a necessity. We commend President Wilson unreservedly for attempting the task so promptly. We think that if President Wilson, the House and the Senate will seek a little advice from those qualified to give it they probably will be able to work out a satisfactory plan.

There is studied avoidance of any reference to the present bill.

Sure To Be Passed.

Atlanta bankers have been assured that a currency measure is certain to pass at this session. News from Washington is that the President has enough votes pledged to its support to make a money bill a certainty.

If this is the case, and if twelve regional banks are to be established, Atlanta wants one of them, and thinks it is her right to be recognized in this way.

New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Kansas City, Cincinnati, Louisville, New Orleans, Denver and Baltimore seem pretty sure to get regional banks. This leaves one vacancy on the list, and one section of the country unprovided for, the Southeast.

Three Cities Contenders.

Atlanta and Birmingham and possibly Savannah will do battle for this place. Birmingham and Savannah are reserve cities. Atlanta is not. Birmingham has also the advantage of the prestige and influence wielded by the redoubtable Oscar Underwood.

Against this Atlanta will urge its willingness to comply with the requirements to make itself a reserve city, and its supreme importance in its territory, as the natural center of finances and commerce for the Southeast.

It promises to be an interesting contest, and Atlanta at least has made a good beginning by expressing its belief in the President and in the need of monetary reform.

At present the thing looks like an expensive and unprofitable game for the national banks.

Bankers Hold Bag.

All profits above 5 per cent go to the Government; there is a very low limit on the rediscounting privilege; heavy liability is entailed; no interest is allowed on reserve funds, but the Government gets interest on its deposits, and, to cap the climax, the banks, who own all the stock, are in the minority on the directorate.

Letters to Atlanta indicate that some of the largest national banks in the United States will apply for Sate charters if the present act becomes a law.

Believing that wiser counsel will prevail before the bill is passed, Atlanta bankers still are hopeful.

CAN NOT CHECK WASTE.

According to a Government report, the American slate industry is hampered by the continually increasing quantity of waste in the large quarries. This waste now ranges from 60 to 90 per cent of the material quarried. No practical use for this waste slate has yet been found. Marketable slate quarried in this country in 1912 was valued at $6,943,318.

Va.-Carolina Common To Pay No Dividend

Fertilizer Company Suffers From Dull Times in Its Cotton Oil Department.

It is accepted as pretty well determined that Virginia-Carolina Chemical will pass the 3 per cent dividend on its $27,984,000 common stock.

During the 1911 and 1912 years the company maintained the 3 per cent dividend although in neither year was the balance above the preferred sufficient to make a common dividend entirely conservative. In 1911 the company earned 3.11 per cent for its common, and in 1912 3.18 per cent, so that in paying 3 per cent it was practically distributing its entire balance of profits to stockholders.

Had earnings come back strong this year with a showing of 8 per cent to 10 per cent for the common, continuance of the 3 per cent rate would probably have been assured.

But the fiscal year is panning out indifferently. The company will in fact hardly earn even 3 per cent on its common. There has been some recovery in fertilizer net this year but a considerable recession in profits from the cotton oil department. Taking the business as whole profits will fall somewhat below the 1912 total of $3,557,452.

Tonnage of fertilizers has done very well this year. The gain in tonnage moved will vary between 7 per cent and 10 per cent over 1912 showing, putting the aggregate back close to the 1911 record. But there has not been nearly the net money in fertilizer sales that existed three or four years ago and for reasons for which the Virginia-Carolina Chemical is not at all to blame.

There have been rumors in New York that Virginia-Carolina had a big bulk of bad debts which it must charge off its books and that it was the existence of some such secret account that was causing the antics of the stocks in the market. This is denied.

As a matter of fact the company regularly sets up a certain percentage of gross as reserve for bad debts and it has rarely ever been obliged to use this entire year's set up for that purpose. For the last 10 years bad debts have averaged less than 1 per cent per annum, which is creditable, considering the long credits which are given in the fertilizer industry.

James J. Hill Plans Californian Invasion

Gets Terminal Facilities in San Francisco Bay—Rail and Water Lines Contemplated.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 28.—Latest developments establish the fact that a recent acquisition by the Hill Railroad interests of terminal facilities in San Francisco Bay was for the accommodation not of a new transcontinental rail service, but of a steamship line between this city and Portland. Plans for this line have been completed and the establishment of the service awaits only the putting of these terminals in shape for business and the completion of the building of three steamships, each with a capacity of 1,000 passengers, which are now on the stocks in Eastern shipyards. Service is expected from both Portland and San Francisco through the canal to Atlantic seaports as soon as the waterway is opened.

It is natural to assume that invasion into California by means of a steamship line may be considered but a temporary expedient on the part of the Hill lines; and that very shortly plans for a railroad invasion from the North will probably be announced. Operations carried on by the Hill people freely indicate an intention to extend their network of railroads in California.

WHAT ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS AND JOBBERS ARE DOING

MANUFACTURES DINNER PLANNED FOR EVE OF 4TH

New Ansley Hotel Will Serve Atlanta Factory Owners to the Number of 200.

HOME EXHIBIT PLANS TOPIC

Brooks Morgan Has Definite Proposals for Acceptance or Rejection—Pledges Desired.

Atlanta manufacturers, to the probable number of 200, will gather on the evening of July 3 at the Ansley Hotel for a dinner.

The object of the dinner is to discuss the proposed permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods, and at the same time, to discuss the advisability of holding the annual temporary exhibit, such as was held last year at the time of the Southern Merchants' Convention.

The dinner had been set for June 24, but the unavoidable absence from the city of Brooks Morgan necessitated a postponement.

The new date was set at an informal conference of Mr. Morgan, Wilmer L. Moore and Walter G. Cooper held Wednesday.

Invitations to the big "Manufacturers' Dinner" will be sent out at once, and a general response is expected.

At the dinner, Mr. Morgan will lay before the manufacturers definite proposals for lease or purchase of buildings suitable for the installation of a manufacturers' exhibit. It will, in brief, be a "show down." The permanent exhibit project has been gone over thoroughly. The manufacturers have seen Chattanooga's display, and they have learned in detail of New Haven's success. There has been plenty of time for them to make up their minds. At this dinner they are expected to signify what they intend doing.

If, as is expected, the will of the manufacturers is seen unanimously in favor of the exhibit, a start will be made. But the backers of the project do not wish to start unless they have assurance of 200 exhibitors and 40,000 or 50,000 feet of floor space.

Strenuous Work Done Preparing for Convention.

When the four or five thousand merchants from all over the South gather in Atlanta for their convention, during the first two weeks of August, it is doubtful if any of them will be able to realize the care and effort that has been expended to make their meeting a success.

For instance, one energetic committee has been toiling throughout the hot week in an effort to raise funds for the entertainment of the visitors. As a result of their conscientious endeavor, the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association sees its way clear, as to finances, to play host to the gathering.

Another committee has been hard at work preparing the program. The program is to be an elaborate affair. Three or four topics a day will be discussed, and most of the discussion will be in the shape of five-minute addresses. The traveling men are doing yeoman's work in finding the good speakers scattered throughout the territory, men who have opinions worth hearing and experience likely to be helpful to other merchants in their lines.

Still more hard workers are preparing the invitation list. This in itself is a stupendous task. And the invitations are to go out early in July.

Altogether, prospects are bright for the most interesting and largest convention of the kind ever held in the South.

Men's Hats For Next Fall Pert Affairs, Blue and Green

Styles Show Predominance of Velours With Bows in Back—New Effects Noted.

Fall, 1913, hats for men are being shown by jobbers in Atlanta.

Take them big and large, they deserve the name the women give their headgear—they are "creations."

One "creation," for instance, is green velour, with a little bow at the back, and a button-hole stitched edge.

Brown-Perryman-Greene Company say velours, particularly in blue and green, are "the thing" for fall. Velours retail from $3.50 to $7.50.

The "Trooper" shape is proper. To make a "Trooper" shape, punch out a crown, then strike it with the edge of the hand, lengthwise. That's all.

Another "creation" particularly fetching is blue, with red, white and blue stitching which runs up and down the crown and around and around the brim. A button is in the geometrical center of the crown.

Perhaps the best of the bunch, to many tastes, is a green felt hat, "Trooper" shape, of course, with "zebra" finish. "Zebra" finish means that it is 'self-striped." Alternate stripes are smooth, the others are unfinished—fuzzy, in a word. The stripes are something less than half an inch wide, and run vertically on the crown. The hat really is not "freaky." It is attractive.

Other soft hats are lined with gay silk, have welt edges, or are otherwise adorned.

Brand-new is a chinchilla hat. Corduroy and cloth of all kinds will be much in vogue this autumn.

Caps promise to continue their unprecedented popularity. They come in all patterns—one, for instance, a "cubist" design in maroon and tan.

For the man who will wear a derby, regardless, it may be news to know that the derby crowns will be a bit higher this fall, the brims about the same. Crowns seem to be working back from the flat effect of a year back to the old-fashioned high crown. They change a bit each year.

Boys—the little fellows—wear telescope shape hats, while you can't give them to their elders.

Of course, this takes no account of the "staples"—the conservative styles which never change.

Auto Sales Gaining Over Last Season

Business Gradually Working to Credit Basis—Men Buy Cars as They Buy Homes.

"So far as we are able to judge from the business done by our clients, automobile sales in Atlanta have been exceptionally good for the period which began January 1," says Joseph N. Moody, of the Auto Credit Sales Company.

"The automobile firms whom we represent as a credit clearing house report an increase over last season.

"Sales probably would be larger yet if we did not check them. Amusing as the idea may seem, we are in a sense philanthropists, for we are saving the people from themselves, in this way: Suppose a man with moderate income tries to buy an auto on time. We investigate carefully. If he has a family of girls, let us say, all living at home, and no income but his salary, we turn him down. If he had a family of boys, all working and able to help purchase a car, all well and good.

"The automobile business is working more and more toward a time basis. A man buys his motor car now just as he would buy his home—on payments. I believe the future will see 90 per cent of the business done in that way."

Moving Big Concern Takes Almost Week

Dougherty-Little-Redwine Co. Get to Temporary Quarters by Dint of Hard Work.

Almost a week has been required for moving the Dougherty-Little-Redwine Company from its old home in North Pryor Street to temporary quarters at 30-32 South Pryor Street.

It is estimated that about forty boxcar loads of goods were moved, the stock being valued at $150,000.

"That amount of silks would not make much of a showing, but when it comes to underwear, it is a different story," remarked J. Little.

By a peculiar freak of circumstance, buyers thronged into the establishment the very day the moving began, and members of the firm had one of their best day's sales while trying to manage loading the four trucks which kept plying between the old store and the new quarters.

The firm will have its own building at 90-92 South Pryor by November 1.

Aluminum Pleases Atlanta Housewives

High-Grade Kitchenware, Which Is Indestructible Being Sold Rapidly in the South.

Aluminum kitchenware is taking hold with Atlanta housewives and with women all over the South generally. The Standard Aluminum Company, which entered the field not long ago, finds this the case.

Hotels and restaurants do not take so well to the aluminum ware, because of the difficulty of getting negro help to keep it in proper shape.

About 100 different articles for use in the kitchen now are made of aluminum, each with a ten-year guarantee. The stuff cannot peel, crack or blister, and, all in all, is regarded as the ideal material for use in cooking. During a recent test, a pan of aluminum was set on a gas stove and left for five hours with the flame burning beneath it, and no water in the pan. At the end of that time nothing had happened.

J. M. Jenkins is manager for the South of the concern. An extensive sales organization is maintained.

City Salesmen Take Outing; Truce Kept

Jobbers Agree Not to Scout for Business During Absence of Their Representatives.

City salesmen will be conspicuous by their absence this week. The grocer or dry goods merchant who needs to replenish his stock must telephone to his jobber. The jobbers have agreed not to solicit business for the week, but just to take what comes to them in the natural course of events.

The reason for this strange pact is that the jobbers are on their annual outing at the Isle of Palms, near Charleston, S. C.

In order not to take advantage of their absence, fifty or more jobbers signed a formal agreement of neutrality for the week, and O. T. Camp, president of the Retail Grocers' and Butchers' Association, sent a letter to all members of his organization acquainting them with the state of affairs, and asking that they fill urgent needs only, by using the telephone.

LUMBER SALES SHOW BUILDING KEEPS UP WELL

Dealers in Supplies Tell of Big Things in Prospect for the Coming Autumn.

Dealers in lumber, brick, cement, plaster and building supplies report that Atlanta is going straight ahead in its expansion.

Unanimously they report good trade. One particularly encouraging feature, according to their expressions, is the steady increase in the number of small residences, homes costing between $3,000 and $4,000, seeming to predominate.

Furthermore, building supplies dealers are unanimous in saying that there are great plans in store for fall. If all rumors are to be believed, property owners are contemplating improvements at almost a "boom" rate as soon as summer is past.

Paint dealers also are cheerful. They report contractors figuring on work far ahead, and also general activity in refurnishing buildings which are not new, but which are being remodeled to meet the city's growing needs.

Expressions from dealers in these lines follow:

V. H. Kriegshaber: "Our observation is that there is a good deal of building contemplated—in the wind, so to speak. When conditions settle down this fall, we look for an excellent trade in building supplies."

Randall Bros.: "Our business is better than it ever has been in lumber and building material. The increase has come from the increase in medium priced houses, residences to cost between $3,000 and $4,000.

"It is hard to tell about the fall, but we look for a good trade. Prices are a little lower. This always is the case in June and July. There will be a reaction in August and September, and quotations will be stronger. This is the history of every year."

Willingham-Tift Lumber Co.: "Business has been quite brisk up to the present time, with particular activity in the erection of small houses. This looks to us like the right time to build, for prices, in our opinion, are at the bottom."

Sciple Sons: "Business is fairly good at the present time, and it is picking up rapidly. We look for a very good trade for the rest of the year. The market is steady, still prices are reasonable and it is a good time to build. We notice a revival particularly in the erection of small houses."

Dozier & Gay: "From the number of contractors who are figuring on painting to be done between now and fall, we look for a big business.

"Every indication is that a large number of new homes are to be built, and there are rumors of several large buildings for wholesale houses and small factories.

"Of course, we are but fifteen months old in Atlanta, so we have only the figures for that period by which to judge. But from these, we are able to show an increase of almost 100 per cent in our trade.

"One remarkable feature has been the great amount of painting done on buildings which are not new. Contractors tell us this class of work exceeds the record of several years."

A. B. & A. CERTIFICATES DUE JULY 1 TO BE REFUNDED

The Atlanta, Birmingham & Atlantic, a property largely owned in New England and into which nearly $10,000,000 of Boston and New England money has been poured, has maturing on July 1 an issue of $4,700,000 one-year 5 per cent receivers' certificates. It is understood that plans are already under way to refund these certificates with a new issue, bearing probably a higher rate of interest. The new issue will probably be placed in New York.

The time for making the reorganization plan also expires on July 1, but this will be extended for another two or three years. The property has been in receivers' hands since January, 1909, over four years, and a practical solution of its financial troubles has not yet developed.

Jordan Thinks Europe's Land Banks Ideal for South

Cheap Loans on Farm Lands Spell Financial Independence for Cotton Grower, He Says.

Special Cable to The American.

By COLONEL HARVIE JORDAN.

(Member of the American Farm Credits Commission and President of the Southern Cotton Association)

OLDENBERG, GERMANY, June 28.—The capitalization of Southern cotton growers through the mortgage bank system, giving them mortgage loans at low interest with easy payments, would completely reorganize the cotton-growing industry of the South. I am convinced that the land mortgage business in America can be systematized along the lines of similar mortgage systems in Europe.

If this is done it will bring a new era of prosperity to the South and greatly increase the cash returns from cotton, which now represent practically the entire balance of trade of the United States.

Southern cotton growers to-day are just one year behind financially. They have been behind since the Civil War.

The curse of the cotton farmers is the store lien system, under which they are obliged each spring to purchase their supplies on credit from the supply merchants. Frequently farmers pay 50 per cent or more in excess of the cash price of goods for the privilege of this credit. Moreover, the supply merchants secure absolute control over the farmers.

Marketing Is Hurried.

The cotton crop has to be marketed as soon as harvested. Farmers have practically no control over the marketing. This is because they have no financial independence. The American commission has studied the mortgage systems which place European farmers in far stronger positions as borrowers than our own farmers. In America we still are clinging to the antiquated practice of forcing short-time loans on the agriculturist.

European farmers borrow through an intermediary society and enjoy as strong positions as any railroad or municipality. If our Southern farmers mortgage their land they must pay back the entire principal in lump sum in a few years, else pay a costly commission for renewal. So long as this is true naturally the farmers won't mortgage their land until actually pressed to the wall.

In contrast to this European farmers repay their loans in small annual installments. So long as they meet their interest payments they can never be sold out. Their entire payments for both interest and principal amount to less than our farmers frequently are required to pay for interest alone.

Cash Basis Possible.

If Southern farmers can get a device to act as their agent in borrowing and can capitalize their land holdings on terms that will permit them to repay little by little, we can put the cotton-growing industry of the South on a cash basis. This would enable our farmers to buy on a cash basis and secure financial independence. It would break the power of the supply merchants. It would be the surest way to a New South. A New South would mean prosperity to the nation.

There is no theory in this proposition. I have studied these mortgage systems here. They are straight business enterprises that we Americans can adopt perhaps improve upon. The Legislature of every State in the Union should take this matter under consideration.

When currency reform is enacted in the United States this should form part of the program. Farmers never up to this time had any consideration whatsoever given their requirements as borrowers. In currency or banking legislation they have been left to get along as well as they could. This has been largely responsible for the financial positions of the Southern farmers to-day.

The American commission will return to the United States with definite ideas concerning the credit problem, particularly in the mortgage field. Their recommendations should receive the attention of every banker, farmer and consumer in the nation, for the financial position of our farmers is a matter of vital interest to every individual in the United States.

Trained Men Great Need Of Business World To-day

Germany and other European countries are far ahead of the United States in the matter of commercial education. This point was brought out in a speech before the annual convention of the National Association of Credit Men at Cincinnati.

"The annual losses by reason of failures in the United States amount now to some $200,000,000," said Mr. Gaehr, "or over $2 per capita. To put it concreately, the national annual loss from bad debts equals one-half the estimate cost of the Panama Canal.

"Professor Munsterberg of Harvard University observes that a great difficulty of our educational system has been that it does not teach a man to find himself, and when he learns his strong and his weak points, his real inclinations toward and qualifications for a pursuit in life, it is usually too late.

"We find the highway of commerce and life marked with sad monuments of men crushed under the wheels of progress who would have made a success in life had they had the proper direction and counsel and had they been taught to fashion their thoughts to fruitful issues, men who could and should have been helped to usefulness.

"A further difficulty is that the vocational demands are not sufficiently fixed and brought to the attention of the younger generations. They know comparatively little of the inner labors, the inner values, and inner difficulties of various professions and callings.

"Then, too, in many cases trivial chance influences decide the choice of a vocation. Young men often drop into a place, rather than deliberately choosing business as a life vocation.

"The need of better trained men, especially commercially, made itself felt several years ago, and as a result a number of universities and colleges of high standing organized schools of commerce. Harvard University ranking its School of Business Administration as one of the graduate schools. Several cities have established high schools of commerce, yet the schoolmaster and the business man are still too far apart.

COLORED LINEN IN BIG DEMAND, MAY BE SHORT

Available Supply Likely to be Exhausted Soon, Importers Believe—Market Dull.

The shortage of several popular lines of wash fabrics for the current summer season has brought out a much stronger demand for colored dress linens and ramies. Colored ratines, which did not sell well earlier in the season, are also good property at the present time. Several prominent importers in the linen trade predict that before the month is over there will be a shortage of colored dress linens, and that within the next 30 days buyers will find stocks completely exhausted.

Summer weather of the real sort has brought out an unexpectedly large share of the business. The setback suffered earlier in the season through the remarkable popularity of ratines is being rapidly overcome.

Importers are not doing very much at the present time in the way of new business except in a few cases where goods are available for spot or early delivery.

Stock lots of colored linens and linen ramies have been sought for, and have found a ready market. Goods on fall order are being charged up as delivery dates fall due, and in a good many cases shipments sent out would be considerably heavier if the goods were available. Shipments from abroad are not prompt, and importing houses are forced to wait until goods arrive even where they are past due on old contracts.

Women who buy dress linens know that these goods have now become an all-the-year-around article, and the linen gown made up for summer wear gives excellent satisfaction as a house dress during the cool months. Advices from abroad state that buyers are hesitating over paying prices current for forward contracts, and are not placing many contracts at present. Yarns hold strong and the chances of seeing lower prices on the finished goods in the near future is very remote.

Mail advices from Belfast state that the market has been quiet but steady, and there has been little in the way of quotable change compared with previous weeks. Buyers hesitate to pay the prices current for forward contracts, and consequently are only operating in a hand-to-mouth fashion, as necessity compels them. There is, however, a hopeful feeling.

Notes on Selling

The heavy demand for sport coats this season is helping the dress goods trade over some rough spots. Chinchillas and eponges are used principally in the manufacture of these garments, and makers and wholesalers of these fabrics are doing a good business in them.

A thing that is regarded as a good omen for the future of the men's wear fabrics trade is the promptness with which the manufacturing clothiers are settling up their accounts with the mill agents. In view of losses sustained by the clothiers as a result of the strike earlier in the year this action on their part is said to indicate the thorough soundness of the clothing industry.

The firmness of 39-inch, 80 squares, is one of the features of the print cloth market at the moment. Printers have taken this construction in good quantities, and as a result of curtailed production by the mills the supply has fallen somewhat behind the demand.

RUTS AND THE FOLKS IN 'EM

The longer a fellow squats down and satisfies himself with his little rut, the more hopeless he is. The rut gets bigger and deeper all the time. Soon he'll get buried in it.

Best way in the world to keep on top and ahead is to forswear the rut. Get clean away from it. Don't get stale. Don't squat. Don't think you know it all. It's deadly.

You can't rest on your laurels and keep 'em fresh. You've got something to learn all the time.

TARIFF CUTS IN SENATE TO AID NATION'S DINING ROOM

Many House Figures Lowered and Free List Increased — Despite Cuts, Bill Is Expected to Produce $5,000,000 More Cash.

Atlanta's Need for Help to Reduce the High Cost of Living Is Shown by Figures Indicating Soaring Price of Foodstuffs.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The revised tariff bill laid before the Senate Democratic caucus by Mr. Simmons, chairman of the finance committee, carries important reductions in the Underwood tariff bill rates on iron, steel and other metal products. It added cattle, wheat, pig iron, Angora wool, and many other articles to the free list, and increased rates on many classes of cotton goods and some silk products.

President Wilson's desires as to free sugar in 1916 and free wool at once, prevailed in the redraft of the bill. To the list of "market basket" reductions the Underwood bill contained, the Senate committee added many important items.

In the general level of its rates the "Simmons bill" represents a heavier cut from the present Payne-Aldrich rates than the House bill.

Senator Simmons believes the caucus will discuss the bill not longer than a week.

Simmons' Statement.

The bill probably will come to a vote in the Senate by September 1.

In a statement Chairman Simmons said:

"The revenues of the Government will be increased approximately $5,000,000, laid in hand with a reduction of the taxation following the reductions already made in the House bill. These increases in revenues will be made up by a tariff on bananas and restoration of the full internal duty of $1.10 per gallon on brandies used in fortifying wines.

"With regard to the sugar schedule no change was made from the provision of the Underwood bill except to strike out 'sugars tinctured and colored,' for fear that ultramarine blue used in bleaching sugar might be regarded as colored matter and thereby refined sugar become subject to a duty of 2 cents a pound.

"With regard to cigars and other tobacco products from the Philippines the provision of the Underwood bill permitting cigars with 80 per cent of tobacco the product of the Philippine Islands and 20 per cent the produce of foreign countries to be admitted into the United States free of duty, was stricken out of the bill. Only cigars and tobacco products exclusively of Philippine tobacco to be admitted free of duty into the United States."

The Liquor Schedule.

Of the amendment to the liquor schedule, the statement said:

"An additional section is added repealing so much of the act approved October 1, 1890, and acts amendatory thereto, so far as they relate to the use free of tax of spirits for the fortification of sweet wines, and providing that hereafter all wine spirits, grape brandy and alcohol so used shall be subject to the same tax as in other cases.

"It is intimated that this tax will result in an increase of revenue of approximately $7,000,000 per annum.

"The Senate Finance Committee followed the House and treated the cotton yarns as the House bill treated cotton cloth," the statement continued, "by adding a duty of two and one-half per cent upon cotton cloth when combed, bleached, dyed, mercerized or colored. This is the most important change that the Senate committee made in the House cotton schedule."

Retaliatory Clause.

The amendment permitting the President to proclaim special rates when foreign nations discriminate against the United States provides that he shall exercise this authority on certain articles, as follows:

"Fish, fresh, smoked and dried, pickled or otherwise prepared, 1 cent per pound; on wheat, 10 cents per bushel; on wheat flour, 45 cents per barrel; on coffee, 3 cents per pound; on tea, 10 cents per pound.

"On the following articles a duty

RUSSIA SEEKING U. S. FRIENDSHIP IN NEW TREATY

Renewal of Pact Abrogated by Congress Is Proposed by Diplomats of Czar.

JEWISH QUESTION RISES

Washington Is Silent, but Understanding Is That Bryan Is Willing to Renew Negotiations.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Russia has asked the United States Government to take up the question of a renewal of a treaty of amity and commerce. The treaty of 1832 on that subject was abrogated out of hand by the Congress of the United States.

Secretary of State Bryan said today that the question of renewing negotiations had been discussed with the President, but that there was nothing yet to state in the way of detail.

It has been stated to Russia, however, that the United States is willing to resume negotiations which had been commenced during the administration of the office of Secretary of State by Mr. Knox.

Two Diplomats Suggested.

The President is soon to appoint an Ambassador to the Court of St. Petersburg and the report is that a selection will be made between Charles R. Crane and Frederick Penfield, of Philadelphia and New York.

The administration will have to meet the question of the Jewish passport and the recognition of the Jews as American citizens without regard to race or religion in the new negotiations. It is well known that Russia was anxious to renew negotiations very soon after the affront to the Jewish race under the old treaty or by Russia's construction of the old treaty was wiped out by the joint resolution of Congress which abrogated the treaty of 1832. This action of Congress was unequivocally an act to rebuke Russia for her treatment of the Jews generally and specifically for her continued refusal to recognize passports issued to Jews.

Knox Charges Discrimination.

Secretary of State Knox held that the question of Jews should not enter into the matter at all, and that the real question was that the treaty of 1832 discriminated against American citizens.

It was stated during the last administration that Russia was trying to separate the Jewish passport question from all other questions which would enter into a treaty of amity and commerce, such as is made with all enlightened nations.

The statement was made at the time that the old administration frowned on this none too subtle suggestion of Russia and held that there should be no treaty except one that would do full justice to all Americans—Jews, Irish, English, Germans—no matter what their origin if they were citizens of the United States.

White House Silent.

The State Department at that time knew that if a treaty was sent to the Senate which did not include a solution of the passport question it could not be ratified. It is said that the present administration understands the situation thoroughly and will endeavor to get a treaty which will cover all American interests favorably or none at all.

At the White House no expression of opinion is yet obtainable from any official reflecting the views of the President. There is no question, however, that the Ambassador to be appointed by the President will be fully instructed on the passport question before he goes to St. Petersburg.

Pullman Berths to be Made Wider

Patent Rights Are Obtained on Device, Giving Full Sized Beds in Compartment Coaches.

CHICAGO, June 28.—The Pullman Company has just become possessed of the patent right of a new device for the purpose of making berths wider.

In compartment cars where there is a separate passageway through the car outside the compartments there is no objection to using the aisle for extending the berths and some of the compartment sleeping cars are equipped with a device for this purpose.

The seat ends are hinged so that they can be swung down and supported by an angle brace and form a horizontal extension of the seat. When two seats are pulled out, as is ordinarily done on making up the lower berth, a filler is placed between the two ends after they have been lowered, thus forming a full size bed.

Honeymoon Spoiled When Bridegroom Is Kidnaped in Taxi

Wedding Guests Form Football Rush Line and Hurry Him Away From Newly Made Wife.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 28.—Charles R. Mason and Miss Louise Nance were married and were expecting a taxicab to take them to a train for their wedding journey when several young men, friends of the bridegroom, kidnaped him and carried him about the city in an automobile until the train had left.

The guests gathered at the home of the bride's mother had enjoyed an elaborate wedding supper when one of the young men shouted, "Here's your machine, Charlie!"

Mason rushed out to make sure his ordered car was there, and as he peered into the face of the driver a football rush caught him from behind and carried him into the tonneau. Six husky youths held him down and the auto dashed away.

They took Mason, now laughing and now raging, a wild ride about the city, and to downtown places of liquid refreshments, where he paid the bills, and only returned with him after two hours of automobiling which he did not in the least appreciate.

Publisher Says They Outnumber Best Sellers Carloads to Volumes.

CHICAGO, June 28.—For every volume of the six best sellers issued each year a carload of Bibles is manufactured. This information was gleaned at the annual book fair which opened at the Palmer House.

"The public taste changes from time to time," said Arthur J. Saalfield, president of the Saalfield Publishing Company, of New York, "but the Bible continues to be the most popular book printed. Where other books are turned out by the volume it is turned out by the carload. One of the puzzles of the Bible publishers is what becomes of his product. Bibles seem to disappear."

According to Saalfield, "Robinson Crusoe" and "The Swiss Family Robinson" will live as long as the Bible itself. They constitute the two most popular volumes, he says.

Welshmen Gather For Song Contest

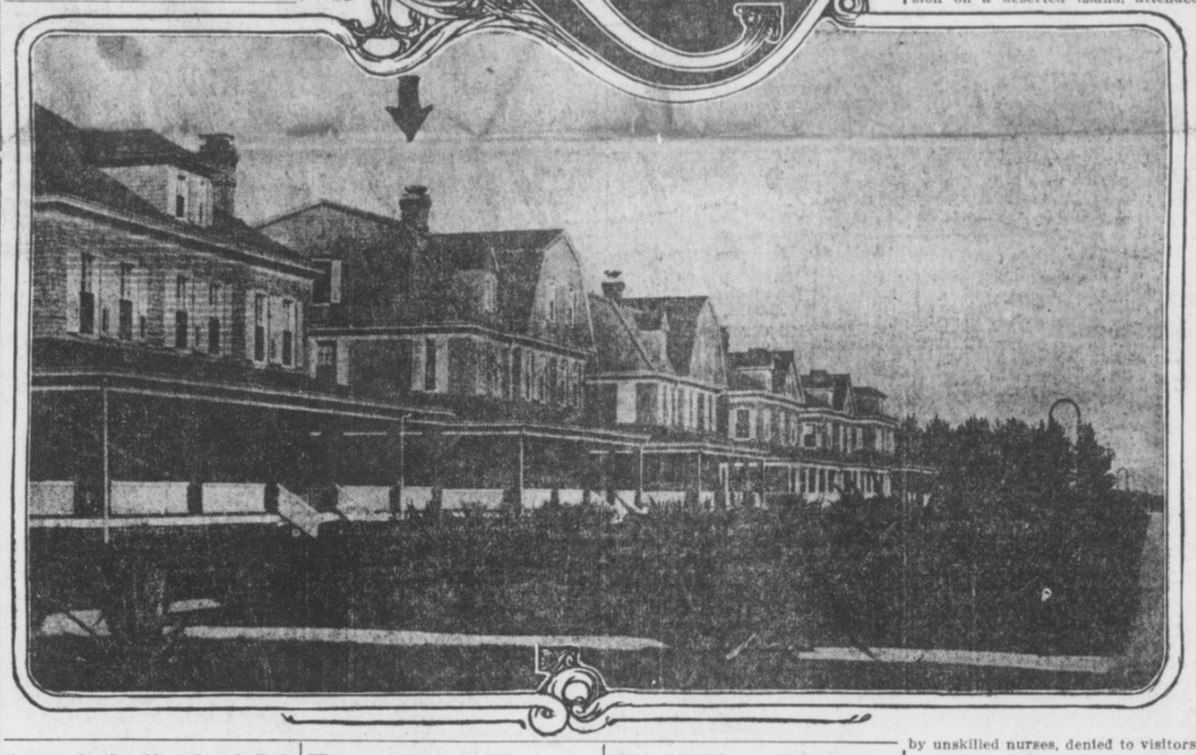
International Festival Will Be Held in Pittsburg for Festival of Folk Chorals.

PITTSBURG, PA., June 28.—Pittsburg is preparing to receive vast numbers of Welshman, who will congregate here next week for the Welsh Eisteddfod, an international festival of extraordinary scope, resembling in its nature the better known Singerfests of the German Turnverein. While there are to be competitions in the various departments of the art, the main interest in the festival will center in the choral contest, in which choirs from all over the United States and Europe will take part. At the close of the festival all the competing choirs will unite in a performance of Sir Edward Elgar's "King Olaf."

H. M. Flagler's Will Unchanged

Relative's Hints of Conspiracy Fall

Amasa Flagler, who hinted at plot to influence Henry M. Flagler in making will, is shown in the top picture, while in the lower photograph the arrow indicates the cottage in which the railroad magnate died. This cottage was referred to as a "lonely hut" by Amasa Flagler in his first statements.



Builder of Empire Died in Secluded Cottage Attended Only by Palm Beach Boy — Son Gets Little of Huge Fortune.

By TARLETON COLLIER.

WEST PALM BEACH, June 28.—While a number of the charges made by Amasa Flagler, of California, regarding strange circumstances surrounding the death of Henry M. Flagler to-day are found to be substantial, the principal accusations that codicils were added to the Flagler will, completely changing its effect, and that the dying man was given insufficient medical attention, appear to fall without support.

Seven codicils to the will are not significant. Investigation into the charges by Amasa Flagler that dark work accompanied the end of his kinsman was conducted by The Sunday American. The stories of the California man that Henry M. Flagler was kept in deep seclusion until the end; that visitors, including himself, were refused admittance; that the most rigid privacy shrouded every detail of the railroad king's illness—all are found to possess a substantial basis of fact.

Palm Beach, deserted, boarded up, uncanny in its summer desolation, today furnishes the setting for a belated story of tragedy—the tragedy in the death of Henry M. Flagler, the Florida railroad king, who died May 20, 84 years old, his brain worn out.

Built Empire; Dies in Seclusion.

The story is how a man who had built an empire came to die in seclusion on a deserted island, attended by unskilled nurses, denied to visitors—and some of them his kinsmen—and with never a word given out as to his condition, from time to time.

Amasa P. Flagler, of California, who says he is the closest male relative of Henry M. Flagler, except for Harry Harkness Flagler, a son, came to Palm Beach while the financier was dying, and was refused a sight of him. To-day he is talking freely to newspaper men, hinting at mystery in the death of Henry M. Flagler, charging that the great railroad man was not given the proper treatment or care, and that Mrs. Flagler, J. B. Parrott and Dr. W. R. Keenan, the three who were practically alone with him toward the end, and who, he points out, were the beneficiaries under the will, kept visitors away purposely.

Amasa P. Flagler, according to the variety of opinions maintained by residents of Palm Beach, is anything from a faker to a justly aggrieved person. The fact remains, however, revealed as a result of investigations by The Sunday American, that Henry M. Flagler died in loneliness and in enforced seclusion.

He died in a small room of a frame cottage on the Atlantic beach, to which he had been moved some time before the end. From one window is to be seen "The Breakers," his own great hotel. It has been locked and deserted since March. Through the other window there is the sight of a stretch of parched grass, the beach and the ocean.

George Conway, a boy who waited on Mr. Flagler during his illness, said to-day that the dying man kept his eyes always on the ocean.

"He loved it," said Conway. "One

Kentuckians Form A Candidate Trust

Twenty-five Men Seeking Offices Pledge to No-Treat Campaign in Primary.

GEORGETOWN, KY., June 28.—All of the 25 Democratic candidates for offices in this (Scott) county have pledged themselves in resolutions neither to "treat" nor to use money in efforts to influence the voters in their favor at the primary to be held in August.

They agreed to meet again on the eve of the election, providing that anyone who could not then make oath that he had kept the pledge should withdraw from the race.

New Mexico After Jap Immigration

State Commercial Organization Wants Nipponese to Till Soil of the Pecos Valley.

ARTESIA, N. MEX., June 28.—The Chamber of Commerce of Arizona evidently has no fear of a war between the United States and Japan. Acting on advices from F. J. Lukins, who has been investigating the character of the Japanese in California, this organization issued a general invitation to citizens of Japan who desire to come to New Mexico to till the soil.

They are wanted especially in the Pecos Valley. There are a few Japs at Lakewood, N. Mex., who are making record-breaking crops of melons and onions.

Would Move Father From Hall of Fame

Son of Late Senator Ingalls Declares Statues in Washington Have Become National Joke.

TOPEKA, June 28.—Sheffield Ingalls, Lieutenant Governor of Kansas, and a son of the late Senator John J. Ingalls, announced to-day that he would ask the next State Legislature to request Congress to return to Kansas the statue of his father now in the Hall of Fame.

The alleged humorous remarks of public men about the statues, the reference of artists to the statuary hall as the "chamber of horrors," and the remarks of Capitol guides to visitors referring to the statues as "them guys" are the reasons for the proposed action.

TUBERCULOSIS RAVAGES FRENCH POSTAL SERVICE

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, June 28.—According to statistics just published the French postal employees pay a terribly heavy death tribute to tuberculosis.

Professor Landouzy has shown that of 100 deaths of postal employees in 1902, 15 were due to tuberculosis, in 1903 the percentage rose to 17, in 1904 to 21, and it is to-day estimated at over 30.

It is stated that the scourge is spreading rapidly, owing to the lack of air in the postoffices, and to the fact that the offices are scarcely ever cleaned out properly on account of the non-provision of funds to pay cleaners.

SLATON TAKES OFFICE WITH DEMOCRATIC SIMPLICITY

New Governor Breaks Precedent by Delivering Address Without Referring to Copy—Brilliant Gallery Sees Simple Ceremony.

Ringing Note for More Regard for State's Finances in Passing Appropriation Bills Is Sounded. Brown Dines His Successor.

Jefferson could not have done it more simply, nor even Woodrow Wilson. John Marshall Slaton's inauguration as Governor of Georgia, taking place Saturday at noon, was a model of Democratic dignity and lack of affectation.

It was not at all a drab affair, however. It was merely natural. There was color enough and spirit enough to the occasion, without its being elaborate—gay, shimmering colors of summer gowns in the galleries, from which hundreds of brilliantly costumed women looked down. Distinguished, slightly flushed with the pride of it all, her bearing betokening plainly that here was the first lady of the State, sat Mrs. Slaton, in the center. Surrounding her were women who are the most prominent figures in Georgia's social life. The gallery audience was representative of the State's society.

Becoming Governor, Mr. Slaton departed from precedent by the oral delivery of his inaugural address. From time immemorial, the keynote speech of the State's chief executive, formally printed and presented beforehand to each member of the State Legislature, has been read, line for line, by that official. But Governor Slaton decided to take a different course. President Wilson had done it before him, but never a Governor of Georgia. He talked without regard for the printed page.

Demagogues Denounced.

His address was altogether one of appeal for conservative administration of the State's finances, embodying most prominently of all a denunciation of demagogic legislation which will blindly curry favor with the voters by indiscreet appropriations, beyond the limit of revenues.

The inauguration was held, according to custom, at noon, before a joint session of the Senate and House of Representatives of the State Legislature. At 11:45 the two bodies met in joint session, organizing in short order by call of the roll, with elimination of other formalities. They met in the hall of the House.

At 11:55 the session was organized. The members settled closer in anticipation of the ceremony that was to come. A new Governor soon would be hailed. The name of Brown, for long significant in the State's affairs, even a generation ago, would no longer be hailed as that of Georgia's Governor.

Governor Escorted to House.

A joint committee of Senators and Representatives went to the Governor's office to meet the new official and the retiring Governor as well, and soon returned with its convoy. Without ceremony, the inaugural exercises began.

A rap of the gavel of President of the Senate Anderson quieted the hum of conversation in the big hall. Nodding plumes were stilled, fans ceased their busy waving against the heat. Everybody looked down on the little group standing there on the platform.

Rev. J. B. Robins, of the Trinity Methodist Church of Atlanta, delivered the prayer for the State's good and its new executive's good guidance. The new executive stood with his head bowed. Once his own lips moved in unison with the clergyman's.

The prayer over, the waving fans and the nodding plumes again began their work. It was warm within the crowded hall, and even so interesting a ceremony as the inauguration of a Governor of Georgia was not to bring to an end such necessary operations as fanning and as shifting from side to side in the hot seats.

The simple inauguration ceremony of the State was continued. Secretary of State Phil Cook arose, bearing in his hand the Great Seal of the State. With a word or two of official presentation, he gave it to Governor Brown, who turned to hand it to his successor.

With the seal in his hands, John M. Slaton became Governor. He repeated the oath of office after Chief Justice Fish, of the State Supreme Court, and half turned, facing the big crowd, the new Governor.

Applause Greets Governor.

Heavy applause greeted him, an applause in which the women in the balcony joined, with the deplorable destruction of gloves and dainty fans. It was a spontaneous patter of hands that greeted Governor Slaton, a demonstration that was sincere, and that, showing signs of lagging at times, was lifted and revived by an enthusiastic yell from the throat of a loyal Slaton man in the hall. There was no dignity or regard for the summer heat at that moment, but a very evident desire to pay tribute to the big, smiling man who was the new Governor.

The applause subsided, Governor Slaton launched into the delivery of his inaugural address. He held the typewritten manuscript in his hands, but did not once refer to it. At this there was a murmur of comment. John M. Slaton was doing something different.

The address was of considerable length, but, delivered in the clear, forcible method that is Governor Slaton's, it was followed with the silent interest of everyone. It was a wholesome appeal for sane administration of the State's affairs—wholesome and cherry.

"The progress of the world has been accomplished by the optimist," was the typical utterance with which it began.

Slaton Sounds Warning.

Recounting the advantages that Georgia has to offer, and the institutions which have been established by the State government, the new Governor sounded a warning, which became the keynote of his address.

"In the enjoyment of all these benefits," he said, "we have failed to bear in mind that for these blessings enjoyed by our citizens for the first time, money must be paid, and we have overlooked the fundamental principle, the disregard of which means financial dishonor, that our appropriations must not exceed our revenue.

"I desire to impress upon you with all the force at my command that it is imperative for you to make an investigation into the financial condition of the State, to consider the reasons occasioning the present situation, and to take steps for the immediate correction of the evil."

Governor Slaton outlined the financial progress of the State since the days of Reconstruction. It remained for recent Legislatures, he declared, to burn the candle of the State's revenues at both ends.

"The appropriations of 1911 exceeded the revenues," he said, "and you will observe that while appropriations were being increased, sources of revenue were being lessened, and no provision was being made to supply the deficit."

He denounced the system under which the legislator is influenced, by a desire to maintain public favor, to vote for appropriation bills for which he sees little revenue.

State's Credit Suffers.

"Woe to him," he said, "who, in connection with a popular appropriation, makes the promise suggestion that the State has not the money. He is stamped in the Legislature and at home as an enemy of the people. The system is wrong.

"The legislator has made himself a favorite with his constituency by voting for every popular appropriation, and nothing suffers but the State's credit. When the crisis arrives no one can put his hand upon the one who caused it. He has yielded to the insistence of those who have pressed upon him the necessity of each appropriation, and has escaped the condemnation and misconstruction of an unpleasant refusal. The situation is unfair to the legislator and to the State."

The Governor suggested remedies. One was the proposal of a constitutional amendment for an extra assessment of one mill for one year, and half a mill for each succeeding year, in order that school teachers be paid with promptness. The delay in the payment of teachers' salaries, he said, was a crying shame. A direct tax of one and one-half mills will provide pensions allowed for 1913, he said.

"I recommend that you propose constitutional amendments which shall provide that the appropriation for schools shall not exceed two and one-half mills in addition to the constitutional appropriation," he said, "and shall not exceed one and one-half mills, or exceed $1,180,000 annually for pensions."

Suggests Inheritance Tax.

He suggested an innovation in revenue-getting, in the shape of an inheritance tax, claiming that four-fifths of the States derive revenue from this source, and that it is operating with success.

A maximum occupation tax of $200 for corporations of capital stock more than $1,000,000, he suggested, with the tax on corporations of less capital adjusted accordingly. The rational equalization of taxes he indorsed, too, as a means for the production of a more substantial revenue.

Other indorsements made by him were: Consideration by the Legislature of the matter of refunding the State's bonded indebtedness, a law for permanent registration of voters, the appointment of a highway commission, consideration by a commission of the Western and Atlantic Railroad problem, and the recommendation of a law abolishing the defendant's statement in criminal procedure, and providing in its place that he be sworn as a witness, if he desires, but that his failure to be so sworn be not subject to adverse comment by the prosecuting counsel.

Laws against pistol-carrying, laws insuring bank depositors against improvident management, the creation of the position of State auditor, a more comprehensive form of presenting the question of constitutional amendments, the investigation of the condition of agricultural schools, the early presentation of a general appropriation bill, were other recommendations to the Legislature.

New First Lady Congratulated.

The address in delivery consumed something more than an hour, but never for once did the big audience reveal signs of impatience or restlessness. At its conclusion another demonstration came, and the Slaton administration thus was launched auspiciously.

The session of the Legislature was adjourned, and the hall became immediately the scene of a big impromptu reception. Mrs. Slaton and her friends were surrounded by a throng of congratulatory admirers, as eager as were those who pressed to the front to shake the hand of the new Governor. After a while the two groups were drawn together, and Governor and Mrs. Slaton stood side by side to shake hands and to respond to every smiling greeting.

A dinner was given the new Governor by former Governor and Mrs. Joseph M. Brown Saturday night, at the mansion on Peachtree Street, following which Governor and Mrs. Slaton took formal charge of their official home.

Busch Loses $10,000 Wager on Wedding

Famous Brewer Didn't Think Grandson Was in Love With Mrs. Lambert

ST. LOUIS, June 28.—Adolphus Busch will lose a wager of $10,000 on the day his grandson, Adolphus Busch III, becomes the husband of Mrs. Florence Parker Lambert, according to a close relative.

Several months ago, when young Busch and the divorcee first betrayed particular fondness for each other's company, Mrs. Edward A. Faust remarked in the presence of her father, Adolphus Busch, that they would be married some day.

The wealthy brewer thought the prediction so preposterous that he made a wager with his daughter of $10,000 to $1,000 her prophecy would not prove correct. With the announcement of the engagement, the grandfather is conceded to have lost.

Mrs. Faust, with her husband, is accompanying her father on a trip to Europe.

Referendum Vote On Dogs and Dog Tax

Citizens of Iola Indignant Over Law Regulating Freedom of Pets.

IOLA, KANS., June 28.—The right of a dog to run at large will be the subject of a referendum election to be held in Iola within twenty days.

Some time ago the City Commissioners passed an ordinance providing that no dog harbored within the city limits should be permitted to run at large or use the streets of the town except for a few weeks in winter. The commissioners also imposed a heavy dog tax.

Owners of dogs appealed to the commissioners without effect. At a recent mass meeting a petition for a referendum on the ordinance was drawn up. Yesterday it was returned with 800 signers, more than 25 per cent of the voters. Under the law, the commissioners are compelled to call an election within 30 days.

Grandmother-in-law Sued for Alienation

Educator Declares Aged Woman Made His Married Life Unhappy and Finally Took Wife.

WARRENSBURG, MO., June 28.—George J. Peck, principal of one of the schools of Warrensburg, to-day filed a suit against Mrs. Narcissa Owings, the grandmother of Peck's wife, for $25,000 damages, alleging alienation of his wife's affections.

Peck alleges in his petition that during all his married life the grandmother has interfered in his domestic affairs, and that several months ago she induced his wife to leave him, taking their infant daughter, and that she has not since allowed him either to see or communicate with either wife or child.

RUTGERS BESTOWS DEGREE ON GRADUATE OF '34, AGE 100

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., June 21. Among the honorary degrees conferred by Rutgers College at its one hundred and forty-seventh annual commencement was that of doctor of laws upon the Rev. John Fryer Mesick, a graduate of Rutgers, class of 1834, the oldest living college graduate in the United States. To-day was his hundredth anniversary.

Church Bars Wedding And Girl Files Suit

Breach of Promise Action Started, Though Both Parties Declare They Are Ready for Ceremony.

ATCHISON, KANS., June 28.—Although both parties to a $25,000 breach of marriage contract suit filed here recently say they are willing to wed, the suit will go on.

Miss Mary Falk, of Purcell, alleges that she entered into a verbal contract to marry William Burke, of Troy, a few months ago.

Church officers say they will not marry Burke because he is unable to procure a sworn statement from his mother in Ireland certifying to the time of his baptism in the Catholic Church. Burke says he will marry Miss Mary Falk any time, and, in her petition for the suit Miss Falk says she is still willing to marry Burke.

But as a priest will not marry them, as both are unwilling to forsake their religion, Miss Falk says she can not consistently dismiss the suit, although she still loves Burke. Miss Falk's petition alleges that Burke is wealthy.

Indian Girl Writes Opera on Sioux Life

Zitkala Sa Composed "The Sun Dance"—Gave It on Reservation.

SALT LAKE CITY, June 28.—On the Uintah reservation at Vernal, Utah, nearly 100 miles from a railroad, an Indian girl has written an opera, with her people as the theme and motif. It is one thing to write an opera and another to have it produced. Zitkala Sa, a full-blooded Sioux, has accomplished both these things.

When "The Sun Dance" was sung in Vernal, Indians and whites drove in from 40 miles around to hear it; and, having heard it, they pronounced it a triumph. Efforts are being made to have the opera sung in Salt Lake City during the week of the National Education Association, July 5 to 11.

"The Sun Dance," as it was produced at Vernal in March, was not altogether the work of Kitkala Sa and her copper-hued brethren of the Uintah reservation. Professor William F. Hansen, of the faculty, and white as well as Indian students of Uintah Academy played important roles in the preparation and singing of the piece. It was, in fact, part of the academy work.

Horsewhips Teacher Who Lashed Her Son

Angry Mother Purchases Rawhide From Harness Shop When Boy Exhibits Marks of Punishment.

OXNARD, CAL., June 28.—Angered because Principal C. A. Marcey, of the Filmore Grammar School, inflicted corporal punishment on her small son, Mrs. E. M. Taylor horsewhipped him on the street of the town.

The boy exhibited the marks of punishment to his mother.

Mrs. Taylor went to a harness shop and purchased a blacksnake whip. Concealing the weapon in a piece of paper she stole upon Principal Marcey as he was engaged in conversation on the street. Without warning she dealt him a blow and continued to apply the lash.

SWEETPEAS IMPORTED BY AUSTRIAN EMPEROR

Special Cable to The American.

VIENNA, June 28.—Sweetpeas, which were practically unknown in Austria only a few years ago, are now prominent in the Imperial Gardens at Schonbrunn.

The aged Emperor Francis Joseph is the first in Austria to "take up" the sweetpea. The director of the Imperial Gardens was sent to London and brought specimen plants back with him. Now the tables at the castle at Schonbrunn are decorated with sweetpeas in one color or at most two. The Emperor prefers pink and white to other combinations.

Babies Saved From Bolt by Feather Bed

Children Are Found Unhurt in Mattress After Room Is Wrecked by Lightning.

NEW YORK, June 28.—A feather mattress saved two children of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Johnson on the Peter Cortelyou farm, at Franklin Park, near New Brunswick, N. J., when a bolt of lightning struck their bed. The parents were awakened by a tremendous crash and a shriek from the children in an adjoining room. A flash of lightning just as they reached the room revealed a big hole in the roof and one in the floor.

The father obtained a lamp and found the bedstead shattered to pieces. Securely rolled up in the feather mattress, however, were the two little ones, almost suffocated with heat but unhurt.

Oregon Governor Opposed to Autos

Declares State Appropriation Would Have Made Him Travel Like 'Piker.'

SALEM, OREG., June 28.—Despite rumors to the effect that he would be a candidate for re-election, Governor West positively announces that he will not be a candidate.

The Governor said that the financial drain on him was large, particularly his traveling expenses. The State now provides $1,000 for the traveling expenses of the Governor when on the State's business, but until two years ago only $500 a year was provided. The Governor declared that he could not live like a "piker" when away from home, and the expenses of many of his trips were paid by himself.

Governor West said that he had never bought an automobile because he did not want one, wouldn't have one if somebody would make him a present of it, couldn't operate it if he had it, and, above all, could not afford a machine.

DIVA BELIEVES BABIES BEST, FARM LIFE NEXT

Schumann-Heink, Who Has Just Passed Her Fifty-second Birthday, Purchases Big Tract.

SAN DIEGO, CAL., June 28.—"Yes, now I am a farmer; also I am a mother, and I have just had my fifty-second birthday."

It was Mme. Schumann-Heink who spoke. Wreathed in smiles and radiating health—the great artist, accompanied by her youngest child and most beautiful daughter, descended from an incoming train to begin a six-month vacation here.

She had just completed her longest American tour and returns with the greatest profits made by any artist in concert this season.

Last year Mme. Schumann-Heink bought 3,000 acres here. She plans to make ranches with gardens, barren wastes into orchards and her rancho the garden spot of America.

"Farming," enthused Madame, "next to the rearing of babies, is the most interesting work in the world."

"But the farming, madame, surely you will not hoe?"

"Look at these two hands. I ask you, do they not appear capable? I have raised and worked for my children and they are yet strong—nicht?" Madame held her pink palms upward. One of the most convincing proofs of what she said was their appearance. The fingers are long and slender and young and strong enough to be envied by any woman half the diva's age.

And this can also be said truthfully of her face and form. Mme. Schumann's flamed with health.

"Yes, I shall be getting out and digging like a regular farmer. Oh, that is nothing to dig," she stated. "Once I made a garden at my New York home.

"Ach, yes, it is good to grow fruit, but it is better to be the mother of babies."

LIQUOR NOW BARRED ON TRANSCONTINENTAL LINES

SPOKANE, WASH., June 28.—All transcontinental railroad lines operating in this State have discontinued the sale of intoxicating liquor on their trains. This ends the "buffet service" on the Oriental Limited of the Great Northern, the Columbia and Olympian of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, and the North Coast Limited of the Northern Pacific.

Luncheon Lurch Aid to Digestion

Pre-Prandial Prance Society Fad

Variation of Tango Brings Dancers One Step Nearer Dining Each Step They Take.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The Luncheon Lurch, the latest variation of the Tango and the Turkey Trot, which has seized the society of the Capital, is declared by experts on gastronomy to be the greatest known appetizer and first aid to digestion.

So effective has it been found along these lines that the Martini is now almost unknown on the boards of Washington hosts, while the pepsin tablet supply of the druggists is practically considered worthless stock.

There is a deep method in the Luncheon Lurch. Contrary to the Tango, which is danced after tea, the Lurch is a preprandian pastime. At a given time before the viands are to be served the orchestra strikes up something syncopated.

Guests immediately begin lurching and continue the dance until they have worked up an appetite considered commensurate with the feast about to be served.

Each step carries the dancers nearer the dining room, and observant ones declare that it is an invariable rule that the best trenchermen always dance with a remarkable celerity, while the dyspeptics lurch so slowly that they are to all appearances posing in tableau.

Among the prominent lurchers are Miss Katherine Elkins, Miss Dorothy Williams, Miss Sally Williams, Miss Katherine Britton, Miss Marguerite Barbour and Mrs. James F. Curtis.

Chief's Gold Badge Found to be Nickel

New Head of Police Department Finds That Predecessors Had Worn Base Metal Insignia.

PASADENA, June 28.—"Silver Threads Among the Gold," merrily whistled newly appointed Chief of Police W. S. McIntire as he scraped off the gold from the badge that was turned over to him by his predecessor, W. F. Wood, who resigned from the office.

When Wood resigned he presented his successor with the badge containing the words, "Chief of Police, Pasadena." On making a close inspection of the badge, which had long borne a reputation of being solid gold, the new chief observed that it was somewhat tarnished.

A cleanser was then applied, with the result that the badge in a few minutes was a shining nickel-plated star and greatly similar to the other badges worn by the balance of the police department.

Seeks Kidd's Gold On Seer's Advice

Patron of Fortune Teller Leaves for West to Dig for Pirate's Buried Treasure.

OREGON CITY, OREG., June 28.—Declaring that he has received an inspiration from a gypsy fortuneteller which will lead him to discover the famous treasure of Captain Kidd, which has been sought for centuries, I. W. Rivers, a prominent Willamette rancher, will start from this city in about two weeks for the Oregon coast.

Rivers states that several years ago while he and his wife were visiting at the Oaks they consulted a fortuneteller, who told them that they would discover the treasure. She stated that it would be found in a cave in a rock which is a prominent feature of the coast scenery near Nestucca Beach.

USE OF SCHOOLS AS AID TO LOVE MAKING URGED

Peace Executive Would Make Social Centers of Houses of Instruction in Big Cities.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Arthur Deering Call, executive director of the American Peace Society, has undertaken to win for the young men and women of America the right to make love to each other.

Said he:

"One of the nation's greatest needs is the promotion of acquaintance between young men and women, the fathers and mothers of the next generation, under free, attractive and wholesome conditions. We need more wholesome conditions for 'courting.'

"I can think of nothing so important to this generation as the lifemates of its various individuals, or so vital to the next as its fathers and mothers and home life generally.

Would Use Schools.

"I propose a wider use of school buildings for social and neighborhood purposes. I do not want love-making a part of the school curriculum, but I think that the same lips that recite the multiplication table or decline a noun in the class room in the garish light of day might just as well whisper tender nothings while the moon peeks in at the window later on.

"For a great majority of our young people in the cities the dance halls provide the only regular amusement they can afford, where any man who has the price can step up to any young woman and ask her to dance. No wonder such places become recruiting places for vice.

No Instruction Needed.

"Why not let the school be a cross between the church and the saloon? Every school should be arranged so that in the evening the young folks could gather there for games, folk-dancing classes, music, athletics, sewing classes and moving pictures.

"All the young folks want is opportunity to meet under proper environment. We don't have to teach the men how to make love, or young women how to listen to them, but we owe it to the race not to hinder or pervert their natural tendencies by improper environment."

CONVICTS DINE IN HOTEL THEN SEE MOVING PICTURE

COLUMBUS, O., June 28.—Five penitentiary prisoners, serving sentences ranging from manslaughter to pocket picking, were taken from their cells by an official of the State Board of Administration and treated to a banquet at one of the large hotels. Following the banquet the prisoners were taken to moving picture shows and given an entertainment which they will long remember.

TROOPS TO MAKE CAVALRY RAID OF THE SHENANDOAH

Realistic Advance Next Month Into the Historic Valley May Mean New System.

70 MILES FROM CAPITAL

Reorganization Plans Will Be Put to Severe Test During the Strenuous Campaign.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Troopers at Fort Myer have begun preparations for their 70-mile march into the Shenandoah Valley next month to participate in maneuvers expected to result in reorganization of the mounted forces of the army.

The Shenandoah Valley, where "Phil" Sheridan made his famous ride 50 years ago, has been chosen as the bloodless battle ground for the test. For two months this summer a full brigade of cavalry and a battery of horse artillery will maneuver and "fight" over the red roads, the green hills, and fields near Winchester.

The department has leased a tract of ground one mile broad and two miles long in the heart of the Shenandoah, 70 miles away, and orders were issued to the troops some time ago.

Oglethorpe Troopers on March.

Two regiments of the brigade, those from Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., and Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., must ride 700 dusty miles under a summer sun before they can reach the valley, and they must report July 20. The First Squadron from Fort Myer will have only 70 miles to go, and the horse battery from Fort Riley, Kans., will be sent by rail.

Secretary Garrison will be a frequent spectator. Major General Wood, chief of staff, United States Army, probably will spend much time there, and President Wilson may make the trip.

The necessity for a rehabilitation of the cavalry was disclosed when the general staff some time ago made ambitious plans for the reorganization of the army so as to prepare it for the defense of the country against attack by any great military power. This resulted in the sending to Europe last year of a board of six cavalry officers, who studied the German, Russian, Austro-Hungarian, French and English organizations.

Officers Study Abroad.

Four months were spent abroad by these officers, and since their return they have prepared plans for radical changes in the organization and use of cavalry of the American army.

The tests will take place under the direction of Colonel C. H. Murray, of the Twelfth Cavalry, as Brigadier General E. J. McClernand, the head of the cavalry board, is prohibited from exercising actual command by virtue of his retirement. General McClernand, however, with Lieutenant Colonels J. T. Dickmann and Fred S. Foltz, Major Jesse McI. Carter and Captain Frank Parker, all members of the board which studied the European systems, will be present.

Some of the practical questions to be worked out are:

How large a command can a captain handle successfully?

How many such units can a colonel handle to the best advantage under conditions approximating hostilities?

The new formation of the cavalry into double ranks also will be tried out on a large scale, a practical test by Captain Parker, of the Eleventh Cavalry, at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., with an experimental squadron having been pronounced a complete success by General H. L. Scott.

Saharet Ends Her Dancing Days

Grace Only For Banker Husband

Picture of Saharet, which won heart of Fritz von Frantzius, wealthy banker and broker of Chicago. The work is in his famous collection.

Former Terpsichorean, With Whose Picture Wealthy Broker Fell in Love Declares She Has Forsaken Stage.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Toes of Saharet that have twinkled for thousands of admirers on three continents will twinkle no more, though Saharet still loves her art. For her dancing days are done. Her husband has said so and she promised to obey no later than Monday.

When the dancer became the wife of Fritz von Frantzius he had but one order. It was an edict against the dancing that so many have paid out real dollars to see and which did much toward winning the heart of the Chicago banker, who is now her husband.

May Dance in Privte.

She may trip a few steps as she steps from budoir to dining room. She may assume a classic pose every now and then when she asks the janitor why the heat isn't turned on. But these performances will be for the home circle. To the general public Saharet has ceased to exist.

To-day Mrs. von Frantzius was very much at home in her suite at the Plaza Hotel, but she had not forgotten her stage life so completely as to refuse to pose for photographers. But she wouldn't pose in dancing posture.

"I am going to give up dancing, at least in public," she declared. "I am giving it up because my husband has asked it. If I dance it will be for my husband. I am going to be a devoted wife and will be gloriously happy. Right this minute I am the happiest woman in the world."

But just a moment later she declared: "I feel after three days of married life that I have drawn a 13-13 in the lottery of life."

A "double thirteen," explained the dancer, is considered the luckiest of number combinations in lotteries of the Continent.

"We leave for Atlantic City tonight to continue our honeymoon," added the young woman gayly. "At the end of six more days I shall tell Fritzie whether or not I'll go to Chicago with him and settle down to the staid life of a Western matron or whether I'll return to the stage. At present I am rather inclined to try the former."

Fell in Love With Picture.

Saharet, whose name was Saharet Rose, and the banker met several years ago, after he had fallen in love with a painting of her by Franz von Stuck.

Shortly after he was divorced by his first wife and since then has woed the dancer ardently.

She came to the United States Monday from Europe to wed him, but declared that she had not fully made up her mind in reference to the step until the liner touched the pier.

They possibly possess the honor of being the only grandfather and grandmother to complete a college course in the presence of their grandchild.

Mr. and Mrs. William Porter received their sheepskins while in the audience were Leeland Rook, of Bosqueville, their grandson, and Mrs. Matilda Porter, of Waco, Mrs. Porter's mother.

NEGRO GIVES FOUR PENNIES FOR FIVE DOLLAR BILLS

INDIANAPOLIS, June 28.—While Miss Stella Koch was busy tending a stand on the city market last night, a well dressed negro asked if she could give him some paper money for gold.

"I have four $5 gold pieces," he explained, "and I would like to get some paper money in exchange for them, as I do not like to carry gold in my pocket."

The girl said she could accommodate him, and going to the cash drawer produced four $5 bills. She handed the bills to the negro, and he dropped four bright, shining pennies into her oustretched hand.

Skylarkers Mobbed By Throng of Women

Man Falls in Baby Carriage While He Plays on Sidewalk and Starts Small Iot.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Several hundred persons, most of them women attacked Frederick Mochson and Raymond Dragoni, last night when one of the men, as a result of skylarking, fell in the baby carriage of the 18-months-old son of Joseph Bilon in front of the Billon home, at 57 East One Hundred and Eleventh Street.

The baby carriage rolled off the sidewalk. Then the crowd got active. Mochson and Dragoni were dragged in the gutter and kicked and pummelled. Stones and garbage were thrown at them. When the reserves learned what had started the affair they locked up the two men on charges of disorderly conduct.

Mashers Told to Think of Sisters

Pastor Says That Presuming on Feminine Acquaintance Is Greatest Aid to White Slavery.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 28.—"A spendthrift sweetheart and an extravagant wife have ruined many lives," said the Rev. T. W. Stout in a sermon at Calvary Methodist Church. "Young women can help to form high moral standards among the boys by not permitting great expenditures upon themselves."

He illustrated how laziness makes a weak character that falls in the crisis of life by knocking the prop from under a three-legged chair. "White slavery begins with presuming on feminine acquaintance and bold advances to clerks," he said. "It ends in blood money and lost souls. Every young man should ask himself in dealing with girls: 'Suppose my sister were in her place—what would I want done?'"

HEIRS TO RICHES LEFT BY TITANIC VICTIM SOUGHT

J. Montague Smart, Prominent Business Man, Left Fortune. No Trace of Beneficiaries.

NEW YORK, June 28.—During his active life J. Montgomery Smart was a man of mystery. Now that his bones lie in the sunken Titanic, his past is a greater puzzle than ever, and so far it is unsolved. Usually when a man dies, even though he may have been of distinction, his hidden history is buried with him. But Smart was a man of wealth, and it became necessary to try to discover vital facts of his intimate personal life.

Thus began a world-wide search that has served only to make the case of J. Montgomery Smart all the stranger. He was an honored and successful man of business, whose transactions were international in scope, even extending from New York to Australia.

Necessary to Find Heirs.

Having left money, it became necessary to find his heirs. It was remembered that this man of silence never described his family. It was known that he had been married and that his wife had died ten years before. Vague words dropped here and there were gathered and it became apparent that Smart had two children, a boy of 20 and a girl of 18.

But no one could be found who had any definite idea of their whereabouts.

Into three countries of Europe the filaments of inquiry extended. The American consuls of many ports were asked to aid in the hunt. That was in May, 1912.

One fact was discovered in the course of the Belgian hunt. It was asserted that the children were in charge of a Mrs. Cook, who was a great friend of Mrs. Smart, and that Smart was paying her liberally to care for them. But who was Mrs. Cook? Her identity was also impossible to discover, and the hunt settled down into a hope that the guardian would write for funds, thus solving the riddle. But she has been swallowed in silence.

Had Many Acquaintances.

As president of the American Cold Storage and Shipping Company, Smart had made many acquaintances among prominent business men of New York, London, Berlin, Paris and many other cities throughout the world. Many believed that they knew him well. But when the test came, they were surprised to find that only the barest information was obtainable about his personal affairs.

Smart was a hermit in a great city, and he was a hermit in his many voyages and travels in foreign countries.

Husband Will Woo Wife if He's Divorced

Tells Judge He Will Renew Methods of Courting Days if Decree Is Granted.

KANSAS CITY, June 28.—"If my wife succeeds in getting a divorce from me I am going to begin all over with my courting days and try to win back her love," Andrew Mathers said in Judge Johnson's court. "Her charges in this case do not in any way affect my devotion and admiration for her."

Mathers is a wealthy building contractor and lives at 4403 Virginia Avenue. He has been contesting the suit of his wife, Louise Mathers. They were married in 1896 and have three children.

Mrs. Mathers charges that her husband became intoxicated frequently.

Victim of Ohio Flood Travels to California on Freight Train to Become Wife.

VENICE, CAL., June 28.—Miss Ethel Johnston, a young woman from Dayton, Ohio, arrived here in begrimed and torn boy's costume to join her fiance. Miss Johnston and J. L. Perry had been sweethearts in Dayton. The youth moved West a short time ago to prepare a home for his sweetheart.

When the flood came Miss Johnston, who was living with her aunt, lost her home, as well as her only relatives. She cut her hair short, donned boys' clothing and struck out with but a few dollars for the coast. She traveled almost the entire distance on freight trains.

Dog Rescues Girl With Dress Aflame

Shepherd Leaps Into Brook and Then Shakes His Dripping Body on Blazing Skirt

NEW YORK, June 28.—The remarkable intelligence and devotion of a Shepherd dog saved Miss Florence Sheldon, of 4 Llewellyn road, Montclair, from serious injury yesterday when her dress was accidentally set on fire.

Unconscious of the smouldering fire, the girl sat on the bank of a brook throwing sticks into the stream. Suddenly the dog began to bark furiously. He dashed into the brook, and returning, threw his dripping body on the now blazing skirt and extinguished the fire. A square foot of the garment was burned.

COMMISSION FINDS $4 FAMILY'S DAILY NEED

LOS ANGELES, June 28.—Four dollars a day is the minimum wage on which a family can be supported in this city, according to the report today of the Municipal Industrial Investigating Committee. Of nearly 50,000 cases covered by the inquiry, more than 6,000 men and considerably more than half of all the women employed received less than $2 a day. A permanent wage commission is urged.

Asks Divorce When Husband Denied Her Right to Comb Hair

Wife Tells Court That Inasmuch as Suffrage Is Given Woman She Should Care for Tresses.

LOS ANGELES, June 28.—"Suffrage has been accorded to women; why then can I not comb my hair when and where I want to?"

This question, addressed to Judge Monroe by Mrs. Lucile Evarts, raised one of the most vexing points he had been confronted with in the divorce court. Mrs. Evarts demands a divorce from Eugene B. Evarts for the above cause. To think it over, Judge Monroe continued the case.

"Wouldn't he let you comb your hair?" the Judge had asked.

"Not only that, but the way he made me stop was anything but that of a gentleman," asserted the plaintiff.

"I will say," continued Judge Monroe, "that every woman has a right to comb her hair, in fact it is a highly commendable trait when a woman will insist on being undisturbed while doing so."

Mrs. Evarts tripped out of court evidently highly pleased with the case she had made out.

"He cannot deny he inteferred," was her parting comment.

Three of One Family Wed in Six Months

College Graduate Takes Wife Shortly After Nuptials of His Brother and Sister.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, June 28.—When Ralph Raymond, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Beal, of Palo Alto, and who graduated from the electrical engineering department of Stanford University last year, wedded Miss Merle Bertsche, of Palo Alto, the third real romance of the last six months was in full swing.

Last fall his sister, Leona Beal, traveled all the way to Cleveland, Ohio, to become the bride of John Howard Payne. Carl Beal, who rowed in two varsity regattas, left college during the spring to pull an oar in the matrimonial sea, and the present romance gives Cupid a record of three in six months in one family.

State Won't Pay for Mark Twain Statue

Missouri Refuses to Honor Warrant of Sculptor and Monument Will Have to Stay Covered.

HANNIBAL, MO., June 28.—There will be no dedication of the Mark Twain Monument in Hannibal this year, although arrangements had been about completed to have the dedication in October in connection with a fall celebration. Judge F. L. Schofield, a member of the monument commission, made public this report:

"The Legislature appropriated $10,000 for a monument to Samuel L. Clemens. A commission was appointed to contract for the erection of the monument.

"We forwarded a warrant for $2,000 to Mr. Hibbert, who has the contract for making the statue. To my astonishment he informed the commission that the State Auditor refused to honor the warrant."

Finds Watch Indian Took From Father

Surveyor Recovers Timepiece of Parent Slain in Massacre of Thornburg's Troop.

CRAIG, COLO., June 28.—D. W. Grams, Government surveyor, returned from a few days spent in the White Rock reservation in Utah. While there he recovered a gold watch from one of the Indians which had evidently been removed by one of the braves from the body of his father following a battle with the red men during the early days.

The elder Grams was a sergeant in Major Thornburg's troop, which was ambushed and almost annihilated while marching from Rawlins to the relief of the Indian agency at Meeker, and he was among those killed.

John Bunyan's Anvil Found in Junk Pile

Relic Bears Name of Author of "Pilgrim's Progress," and Is Dated 1647.

PASADENA, CAL., June 28.—Bearing the name of J. Bunyan, the date 1647, and the word Helstowe, an ancient anvil, the original property of the author of "Pilgrim's Progress," is now in the possession of Maurice Beagarie, of 57 Green Street.

The relic was discovered in a junk heap in St. Neots, near the town of Elstowe, or Helstowe, where Bunyan lived, by Beagarie's father, about 30 years ago, and was presented by him to his son ten years ago.

EQUINE TRAMP FALLS THROUGH TIES OF TRESTLE

Horse Fares Forth to See World But Comes to Grief on Bridge. Firemen Rescue Him.

ST. PAUL, June 28.—Bent on seeing the world, a horse belonging to Roland Foix, 813 Jackson Street, forsook his stall and "hit the ties" on the Soo line tracks leading eastward out of St. Paul. He had reached the middle of the long trestle near Cortland and Maryland Streets when his feet missed the ties and he found himself struggling for freedom without avail.

Before he was freed he had succeeded in tying up traffic in both directions for nearly an hour, and the Soo passenger train from Chicago, with more than 300 passengers on board, was compelled to wait.

His predicament was first discovered by a section crew passing over the bridge. The men worked over the horse for nearly half an hour before they called upon John A. Moak, animal agent of the humane society. He used all devices at his command to no avail. Meanwhile the 300 passengers on the train, as well as the engineer and conductor, were getting somewhat impatient.

Then some one suggested that the fire department might be called to help the horse down. Hook and Ladder Company No. 9 responded to the call. Raising their ladders to the trestle with the aid of a few ropes and a large squad of volunteers, the firemen soon had him bound and let him down safely to the ground below. The train then proceeded.

COLLEGE GIRLS DECLARED BEST HOME MAKERS

Speakers Say University Training Equips Women for the Various Duties of Family Life.

IOWA CITY, IOWA, June 28.—University girls are not spoiled as homemakers by their college education, according to Mrs. James Swan, of 2216 Kenwood Parkway, Minneapolis, who responded to the toast, "The Lady and the Ginger Jar," at the University of Iowa banquet, the social feature of the fifty-third annual commencement exercises at Iowa City. Mrs. Swan was Miss Ethel A. Elliott, of the class of 1906, Iowa University.

Mrs. Swan declared:

"It is all folly to say that university girls do not make good homes. The woman who has a complete four-year course in the university is fully equipped for her place in the home.

"When a girl is given all the advantages that a great State university can well afford to give her through its university course; when her mind is trained to quick and sensible action so she can with womanly grace adjust herself to the different and varied demands upon the present-day matron; when she is on an intellectual equality with her 'better half;' when she has a trained imagination to grasp and understand a view different from her own, then will the home be a success."

Mrs. Maugherman was an inveterate smoker, acquiring the tobacco habit when as a child, she filled her mothe's pipe.

PIGEONS FIGHT, DOG EATS CORN, ALL IN ONE DAY

Another Canine Hooks Two Great Sea Bass and Lands Them in the Ocean.

BIG FROG SILENCES TRAIN

Engine Crew Declares His Croak Is Louder Than Mogul Whistle, Eyes Bigger Than Saucers.

There still exist persons bold enough to brave Rooseveltian anger despite recent results in the Michigan suit that made brandy and milk America's national beverage.

For, despite the Colonel's ceaseless warfare, the nature fakers still exist, and they don't stop at existing. They are growing like the green bay tree and summer fish stories.

In one day the public prints carried the following items of news and papers protest their accuracy:

Went for Buttermilk.

From little old New York comes the yarn that John Elliott left the dock at Mariner harbor, Staten Island, to get a glass of buttermilk. He had also left his fish line in the water and his faithful dog to guard it. When he returned, dog and line had disappeared. A search disclosed the dog swimming with the line in his mouth. When he was rescued, it was found that he had hooked two big sea bass and was being towed out to the ocean. The story is easily believable if the buttermilk is forgotten.

Wheeling, W. Va., is not to be outdone. The Wheeling chronicler relates that Howard Wilkinson, an express messenger, dropped a purse containing $115 in bills and silver. It was seized by a hungry dog, and before it could be recovered, the canine had chewed the bills into an irredeemable mess, while he had swallowed $40 in coins.

Pigeons Aid Sparrows.

Chester, Pa., advices tell that workmen repairing the steeple of St. Paul's Episcopal Church were attacked and placed in peril of death by a horde of sparrows, who had made the belfry their home. The writer doesn't stop with the notoriously combative sparrow, though, but insists that they had formed an offensive and defensive alliance with a flock of meek and lowly pigeons, who joined the fray with considerable effectiveness.

But at last comes Hyndman, Pa., on the line of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, with the story that trainmen have been perturbed by a gigantic frog, whose voice is an exact duplicate of the whistle of a mogul engine. Wrecks have been narrowly averted when flagmen returned to their trains on mistaking his croak for a signal from the engineer. Trainmen assert they have seen the frog, which is two feet high and has eyes as large as ordinary tea saucers.

Woes of Corset Lacers Revealed

Stricken Maids Organize Union

Two Hundred and Fifty Pound Matrons in 120-Pound Dresses Make Too Much Exercise.

Two hundred maids have formed a union and threaten to strike because they are getting "lacer's arm" from harnessing 250-pound matrons in gowns and corsets designed for the 120-pound brand. The symptoms of "lacer's arm" are swelling of muscles of the upper arm near the shoulder, followed by lameness.—News item.

The lady slavery tossed her head—it was a fiery red—
She stamped her dainty little foot and then in anger said:
I've washed the pup
And all dolled up
The pete canary, too.
I've made the beds
And marceled heads
Where curly locks ne'er grew.
BUT—
The time has come for me to go upon a general strike,
And, listen, can you blame me, for the love of Mike?

My right arm's dead.
My left, instead
Of being fit for use,
Hangs limp and weak—
Redress I seek
Against this long abuse.
My arm is knotty, where it once was pretty, plump and round,
With squeezing missus in a frame built for one hundred pound.
If her fat figure must be wedged into a small corset
She'll have to get a windlass, for I am done, you bet.

JAP EMIGRANTS NOW COLONIZING BRAZILIAN LANDS

1,500 Arrivals But Vanguard of Orientals to Be Sent to South America.

SEATTLE, WASH., June 28.—How Japan is colonizing Brazil was given in detail here with the arrival of the Japanese steamship Sanuki Maru.

Fifteen hundred Japanese emigrants were landed at Santos, Brazil, May 15. They are the vanguard of a great population to be sent to South America to become a part of the first permanent Japanese colony in Brazil under the Sao Paulo colonization agreement recently entered into between Japan and Brazil.

The first award of territory comprises approximately 150,000 acres of agricultural land.

Another Japanese Brazilian colonization enterprise has been completed and passengers of the Sanuki say that the two Governments have arranged for the concession of a considerable area of fertile country which will be settled by Japanese. Settlers for this colony will leave Japan about the end of the present year.

Japanese contract labor is now being sent into South Africa and both Brazil and Peru are being supplied with coolies, who leave Japan under contract with various South American industrial organizations.

COAL OIL JOHN, SPENDTHRIFT, OLD AND BROKE

Threw Away Millions Like Sawdust, but Tells Home People He Doesn't Regret Past.

YARREN, PA., June 28.—A personage of the long ago, one whom many believed to be dead, "Coal Oil Johnny" Steele, greatest spendthrift of his day, has returned to the town that knew him as a coal oil wagon driver when he earned $2 a day and was glad to get it. Afterward he was known to throw thousands and hundreds of thousands of dollars around Broadway and Philadelphia, and by his reckless extravagance became a national figure.

Once a cabman told him his wife wanted a diamond ring. "Coal Oil Johnny" said: "I'll give you $300 for your cab."

"You're on," said the cabman.

"Ride me around the block," said John, and when the trip had been completed and he was dumped again at the entrance of the Girard House, in Philadelphia, he said: "Now, Conway, me boy, you can have your cab back and keep the $300 and get your wife that diamond ring."

As the adopted son of the "Widow" McClintock, on whose farm an oil well gushed every time a drill was sunk, he came into a huge fortune in 1875, and "Coal Oil Johnny's" spendthrift race was run in three years.

The farm still yielded oil, but men sharper in business than he acquired the "gold mine" and Johnny went to Nebraska, after confessing himself a bankrupt for $32,789. He owed nearly $20,000 to the Girard House in Philadelphia, $10,000 to a lawyer, $5,800 to a firm of jewelers where he had formerly spent at least $200,000, more than $2,000 for liquors, the same for an oil painting, and $300 for bats, to say nothing of $1,500 for billiard tables.

"Coal Oil Johnny" is now 70. He likes to recall some of his past delights, especially that when he bought a whole minstrel company and had it assemble at a hall and give an entertainment to his friends.

THE appropriations passed by the Legislatures that have so far taken action for participation at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition total nineteen hundred and fifteen thousand dollars.

"1915" is the year in which the exposition will be held, and it is the exposition's slogan. The Legislatures of thirteen States have already made appropriations. Thirty-four States have already accepted invitations to participate, and 24 have dedicated their sites.

Indications are that every State in the Union will be represented through legislative action and that of the commercial bodies in the different States.

The States that have made appropriations, that in thousands total nineteen fifteen, are as follows:

SOUTH AMERICA WELL TO FRONT FOR 1915 FAIR

Two Republics Are Scheduled to Dedicate Their Sites Within the Next Week.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 28.—Within the next week two South American republics will dedicate their sites for participation in the Panama-Pacific International Exposition.

Romulo S. Naon, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the Argentine Republic to the United States, will arrive in this city tomorrow, June 15, to dedicate a site for the exposition, and on Monday the New Jersey Exposition Commissioners will reach this city for the purpose of dedicating New Jersey's site.

On June 19 Joaquin Mendez, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of Guatemala to this country, will dedicate Guatemala's site.

Minister Knowles, in a recent statement, declared that competition had been started in Bolivia to select musicians for a crack military band that will visit the exposition.

He proposes also to have at the exposition a small colony of Indians from Lake Titicaca in their native costumes and plying their balsas or native boats. He also strongly advocates a replica of Potosi Hill, where the Spaniards took out hundreds of millions of dollars in gold and silver.

Youth Likes Books On Heavy Subjects

Oregon Freshman Reads of Social Science, Philosophy and Religion.

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, EUGENE, June 28.—Max H. Sommer, a freshman in the University of Oregon, registered from Portland, has a record for assiduous reading during the past collegiate year. According to the report of Librarian Douglass, Sommer's card shows that he has taken out 89 volumes, the majority of which would be classed as "heavy reading."

Of the 89 volumes perused by this freshman, 47 are devoted to social science, 28 are classed as pure literature, 5 are works of history and biography, 5 are of a philosophical and religious nature and 4 deal with journalism.

'MOTHER SHIP' IS BUILT TO GUARD U.S. SUBMARINES

New Craft Is Designed to Protect Fleet of Smaller Boats—Cost Is $1,000,000.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Plans for the submarine tender Bushnell, made public at the Navy Department to-day, disclose the fact that the vessel not only is to be an entirely new type in the navy, but will be altogether unique as a war craft. The contract was awarded to a shipbuilding concern in Seattle. Her cost will be close to $1,000,000, and she is to be completed within twenty-one months.

The Bushnell is designed as a "mother ship" for the squadron of submarines, and many roomy staterooms will be provided for the officers and crews of the submarines when they are not actually cruising. Powerful hoisting apparatus will be installed, wherewith a submarine damaged can speedily be lifted to the surface of the sea, and a towing machine will enable the "mother boat" to tow five of her brood at one time.

The little fleet will be independent of a home station, for a well-equipped machine shop aboard the Bushnell will permit of speedy repairs.

FLAGLER'S SON IS PRACTICALLY CUT OFF

time, not long before the end, he said to me: 'George, there is the greatest thing in the world,' pointing out at the sea. 'If there ever comes a time when you would be proud of yourself and of what you have done, think about that ocean. There is something greater, more wonderful than anything a man can ever make or become. Railroads and cities are nothing.' But a lot of the times he was not conscious to what went on."

Mr. Flagler was moved to the beach cottage from his mansion, "Whitehall," when summer began to set in at Palm Beach. He was moved at the combined orders of his physician, Dr. W. R. Keenan, and Mrs. Flagler. Dr. Keenan is Mrs. Flagler's brother. Because has was moved Amasa P. Flagler finds the basis for a denunciation of those who took care of him, declaring that his kinsman was taken to the empty beach cottage that he might be more securely isolated.

Joe Jefferson Died In Same Cottage.

Investigation reveals that many of the statements made by Amasa P. Flagler in his interviews regarding the death of his relative are exaggerations. He is said to have declared that the beach cottage in which Henry M. Flagler died was old and dilapidated and isolated from the community. It is, however, "The Nautilus," one of a colony of seven cottages on the beach, and is within 200 feet of "The Breakers." It is leased for $5,000 a season of three months to the winter visitors from the North, and last season was occupied by "Fingy" Conners, the Buffalo politician. Joseph Jefferson, the actor, according to the beach traditions, died in the same cottage.

Local physicians, although none of them was called in to assist Dr. Keenan and Dr. Castleberry, watched the case as well as possible in view of the privacy attached to it. Several te-day said that they would have indorsed the move from Whitehall to the beach cottage, considering more desirable the sea breeze and the relief from the sultriness that is always the lot of Whitehall in the early summer.

West Palm Beach is divided into two hostile camps on the question of the treatment of Henry M. Flagler, many contending that the charges of a deliberate isolation and of inadequate care of the dying man may be substantiated by a chain of circumstances, and others laughing at the scandal that Amasa Flagler has sprung.

Trained Nurses Succeeded by Boy.

The rapid decline of the railroad king began about March 1, when, already ill, he was injured by a fall in the reception hall of "Whitehall." He took to bed at that time, and never left it until the day of his death, May 20. After several weeks in his room at "Whitehall," he was moved to the beach cottage.

Trained nurses who had been engaged were turned away, to be succeeded by George Conway, a young English boy, who is the nephew of Mrs. Cooper, the housekeeper at "Whitehall," and by Tom Lynch, a young man employed on the estate. Conway watched by day, and the other by night.

Conway is one of the few Flagler employees remaining on deserted Palm Beach. To-day he said the nurses were discharged because they could not manage the sick man so well as could he and the other boy, of whom Mr. Flagler was fond. The nurses, he continued, did not get on well with the Doctor, either.

Dr. Keenan, the brother of Mrs. Flagler, for years house physician at "The Breakers," and more recently at the "Royal Ponciana" as well, attended Mr. Flagler. To aid him, Dr. Castleberry, a guest in the winter hotel, from Harrisburg, Pa., remained. Dr. Castleberry is a kinsman of Mrs. H. E. Bemis, wife of the manager of the "Royal Ponciana."

From the fact that the attending physicians are related to beneficiaries under Flagler's will, and that one, Dr. Keenan, is himself a beneficiary, Amasa Flagler has drawn evidence of irregular conduct in the care of Henry M. Flagler.

Little Told From Bedside.

During the period of the financier's illness little definite news came from his bedside. Newspaper men of West Palm Beach and of Jacksonville declare that no bulletins were issued, and that inquiries were met always with indefiniteness.

For weeks Flagler lay thus. No one was admitted. The gossip of servants has lingered in West Palm Beach, declaring that the dying man in his delirium called frequently for his son, and frequently also for William Fremd, his gardener. The son, Harry Harkness Flagler, who has been estranged from his father for 21 years, was not summoned until by Amasa P. Flagler. Fremd, another for whom Mr. Flagler called, lived on the grounds, within a half a mile of the cottage, but was never taken to the sick room.

The same gossip has recorded that J. A. McDonald, of Miami, an old friend of Mr. Flagler, and Father McLoughlin, a Catholic priest of Miami, were others who could not see the sick man.

Along toward the end came Amasa Flagler. According to his own story, he had sent a telegram to herald his visit. Reaching Palm Beach, he was informed that he could not see the sick man. He declares that he virtually was ordered from the grounds by J. B. Parrott, vice president and general manager of Flagler's railroad, who became president by the express terms of the Flagler will.

Incensed, Amasa Flagler went to the citizens of West Palm Beach with his story. He had telegraphed ahead for a room in "The Breakers," but these were denied him. "The Breakers," he was informed, was closed for the season.

Telegram Sent To Flagler's Son.

Amasa Flagler found quarters in "The Gables," a less pretentious hotel in West Palm Beach, whose proprietor, R. C. McGriff, listened to his story and to this day believes in him. Amasa Flagler was the first to send a telegram to Harry Harkness Flagler.

"Your father is calling for you," is the message he sent.

According to the statement to McGriff, Parrott, over in Palm Beach, heard that Harry Flagler was coming to his father's side, and came across to "The Gables" to engaged a room and bath for the financier's son. There was no room for Harry Flagler, either, it seems, on Palm Beach.

No room and bath was available in McGriff's establishment, and Amasa Flagler offered to give up his suite to Harry Harkness Flagler. But Harry Flagler, when he arrived, stayed with an old friend in the town. He arrived in time to see his father alive.

Amasa Flagler declares that he was not allowed to see the body of Henry M. Flagler after death. The Tropical Sun, the daily paper of West Palm Beach, bears a story of how Amasa Flagler was leaving the town, full of wrath at his treatment. At the station, according to the story, he could obtain no information about his trains.

The employees at the railroad station, the Flagler railroad station, would tell him nothing. He asked information regarding a special train, and was met with an indefinite answer. Finally he called a boy and commissioned him to obtain the information. The boy did. Upon his return with the message, Mr. Flagler is said to have given him $50.

"You are the only person connected with this road who has exhibited the slightest consideration or courtesy toward me," he told the boy, according to the story.

Undertaker Imported To Conduct Funeral.

The body of the dead millionaire was taken in hand by an undertaker imported from Miami. Undertaker McGinley, in West Palm Beach, was not consulted. Citizens of the town believe this to be the case because Henry M. Flagler and the city of West Palm Beach had little in common. The two have been antagonistic of late years, in spite of the work of development which Flagler has done for East Florida, and a number of local ordinances and regulations were passed inimical to the Flagler interests.

Residents of West Palm Beach now declare that the feeling that grew up was not personal to Flagler himself, but was occasioned by actions of other officials of the Florida East Coast Railroad.

Flagler's funeral was held in St. Augustine, and his body placed in an elaborate vault which he had built in connection with the Memorial Presbyterian Church. St. Augustine he made his home, it is said here, because he was repelled by the attitude of West Palm Beach citizens.

Makes Charges Against Beneficiaries.

According to his story, Amasa Flagler was denied a part in the funeral. He went on his way North, where he has made his sensational charges that Mrs. Flagler, Dr. Keenan and J. B. Parrott kept the dying financier secluded, denying all admission that they might maintain an influence over him.

The three are the principal beneficiaries under the will, and it is Amasa's inference that because they were with him continually, to the seclusion of others, their claims were made secure. He hints, in his interviews, that codicils to the original Flagler will were made under their domination, cutting out other legatees, particularly Harry Harkness Flagler, the son of the financier.

However, an examination of the will and codicils proves this accusation to be without foundation. There are seven codicils, but none materially effective.

The documents are in the court house in St. Augustine, where they have reposed since being made. The original will was drafted February 1, 1902, and names W. H. Beardsley, of New York; Dr. William R. Keenan, of Lockport, N. Y., the physician who was with him at his death, and J. R. Parrott, of Jacksonville, another of the little party with him most of the time during his last illness, as his executors and trustees. His wife, Mrs. Mary Lillie Flagler, he names as the residuary legatee, and his son Harry Harkness Flagler, he cut off with the relatively small legacy of 5,000 shares of Standard Oil stock. This, at the time of Flagler's death, was worth $642 a share.

Declares Son Didn't Show Filial Regard.

"I have already given my son securities sufficient to bring him an income of $75,000 a year," the will stated. "My son has not shown for me the filial regard that would make me inclined to do more for him than is done by this item of my will."

No beneficiary will profit by the will, however, for at least five years. By its terms, a trust is created, the testator declaring:

"It is my intention in the future to foster, protect and properly develop such properties; and to provide against my decease while such properties are in process of development, and to relieve my beloved wife from the immediate cares and responsibilities of so varied and extensive interests, I hereby declare a trust for all my properties. From this trust is excepted $60,000 to the Stetson University and $20,000 to the Florida Agricultural College for the construction of a gymnasium.

The trust is to last five years, according to the will, and if the Florida East Coast Railway, or the Florida East Coast Hotel Company, at that time should require financial aid, then it is to continue as long as is necessary. Until the expiration of trust, Mrs. Flagler is to receive $100,000 a year and the Memorial Presbyterian Church of St. Augustine $3,000 a year.

Many Legacies Left by Will.

Other legatees mentioned in the original will are: To receive $5,000, Miss Annie C. McKay, Mrs. Ella Green, Stephen A. Brave, John P. Beckwith, William H. Chambliss, Ed J. Triay, George W. Wilson, Bernard O'Brien, his coachman; George Holland, his butler, and Ida Scheiffer, his housekeeper; to receive $10,000, James A. McGuire, R. T. Goff, John Anderson, Fred Sterry, Joseph D. Price, Henry W. Merrill, J. A. McDonald, William H. Beardsley and Jasper G. Salter; to J. E. Ingraham, $20,000; to J. R. Parrott, $100,000; to C. D. Boice and L. C. Hayes, $2,500; to the Florida Agricultural College, $80,000; to the John B. Stetson University, $40,000; to Hamilton College, New York, $100,000; to the Memorial Presbyterian Church Society, $75,000.

By the terms of the will J. R. Parrott is to continue in the same relation to the Flagler interests as he maintained during the lifetime of the testator.

There are seven codicils to the will, made, respectively, February 17, 1903; April 28, 1904; January 8, 1906; April 7, 1908; December 22, 1910; January 10, 1912, and September 13, 1912.

It is these, Amasa Flagler declares, which are damaging to the original document, but none of them seem materially to affect it. The first codicil gives his trustees the power to complete the southern extension of the Florida East Coast Railroad, which he denied them in the will.

The second codicil defines the meaning of the term "expiration of trust," which occurred frequently in the will, and provides that if Harry Harkness Flagler is not living at the end of the "expiration of trust" then the 5,000 shares of oil stock lapse to the estate. In this codicil also he revoked the legacies of $80,000 to the Florida University and $40,000 to the John B. Stetson University, and provided for bequests of $10,000 to J. P. Greaves, Robert Murray and Leland Sterry, and giving W. H. Beardsley $50,000 instead of $10,000. If he survived his wife, Flagler specified in this codicil, the residue of his estate is to be divided among Roy H. York, W. L. Harkness and Mrs. John D. McLennan, of Cleveland; W. R. Keenan, Jr., J. K. Wise and Sarah G. Keenan, of Wilmington; J. R. Parrott, of Jacksonville, and W. H. Beardsley, of New York.

No Increase for Son's Share of Estate.

The third codicil announces that upon consideration the testator found incorrect the statement in the will that he had given his son securities netting $75,000 a year. However, he said, this mistake did not warrant an increase in the legacy to Harry Harkness Flagler.

The codicil also provides for a legacy of $10,000 to Harry E. Bemis, and empowers his trustees to borrow money for the extension of his railroad to Key West.

Codicil four specifies that the smaller legatees are not to receive the amounts provided unless at the time of his death they are in the employ of the Flagler railroad or hotel interests.

Codicil five empowers his trustees to continue to pay to Horace H. Flagler, of St. Augustine, the dividends on 50 shares of Standard Oil stock. It provides, too, that the legacy to the Memorial Presbyterian Church Society apply only if the church remain in the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America.

No Palm Beach Persons Remembered.

Codicil six makes provision for the maintenance of his mausoleum by the expenditure of a portion of the income from the $75,000 which he bequeathed to the church in St. Augustine.

The last codicil, drafted September 13, 1912, provides that the legacy of 5,000 shares of oil stock to his son be effective in spite of the change in the form of Standard Oil stock. This was drafted soon after the dissolution of the Standard Oil Company, apparently looking to safe-guarding Harry Harkness Flagler against losing his inheritance on technical grounds. The last provision is the revocation of his previous bequest to Horace H. Flagler, substituting therefor an annuity of $2,000.

No resident of West Palm Beach or its vicinity was mentioned in the will, although common gossip had named several as likely legatees.

Flagler's Isolation Necessary, Says Doctor.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Dr. Owen Kenan, brother of Mrs. Henry M. Flagler, to-day issued a vigorous denial of the charges of Amasa Plummer Flagler regarding the circumstances which surrounded the death of his patient at West Palm Beach.

"There isn't a word of truth in the whole thing," he said. "The only explantation is that these so-called 'charges' originated in the brain of some cunning adventurer with an ax to grind. Publication of these unfounded rumors have annoyed us greatly, and Mrs. Flagler is in no condition to be interviewed, so that I can speak for her.

"So far as I can make out, the greatest objection to conditions this Amasa Flagler found at the Beach was the isolation of the sick man. That was natural. Mr. Flagler was old, his illness was serious and he needed quiet. The cottage in which he died is not dilapidated. It rents for an enormous sum every season, and some prominent Boston society people had it last winter.

"If Amasa Flagler's object is to induce Harry H. Flagler to contest the will it will fail. Harry Flagler is a gentleman, although he had not spoken to his father but once in the last seventeen years. He was left $5,000,000 and each of his children gets $4,000,000. That seems to me to be eminently fair.

"As to our conduct of the case, Dr. Castlebury and I did the best we could. Henry M. Flagler had as tender and loving care as any man ever had up to the moment of his death. There was no secrecy other than that was absolutely necessary, and nothing to be concealed."

HUTCHINSON, KANS., June 28.—A bag of gold nuggets and gold dust worth $10,000 awaits any heirs who may be found to the estate of Mrs. Ann M. Bernhart, who died recently in Davenport, Iowa, according to the announcement of G. M. Duckworth, administrator.

Several years ago Mrs. Bernhart was adjudged of unsound mind. Duckworth was named her guardian. The cottage here where she lived alone was closed and she went to an asylum. Upon her death Duckworth thoroughly searched her cottage. The nuggets and dust in small bags were found secreted in the dwelling.

UNCLE SAM IS NOW GREATEST HORSE BREEDER

Supplies Mounts for the Army From His Virginia Farm and Turns Out Thoroughbreds.

FARMERS ARE HIS PARTNERS

System So Successful That Other Large Studs Will Be Established in the West.

FRONT ROYAL, VA., June 28.—Uncle Sam has recently embarked in the horse business on a gigantic scale. He has started here what is probably the largest horse farm in the world, 5,500 acres, only a few hours' ride from the capital. And this is only the first of his farms. He intends to start several and turn out thoroughbreds by the tens of thousands.

To-day the farm is supplying practically the entire United States Army with its mounts. A short time hence and it will be supplying civilians, and soon, according to Captain Caspar H. Conrad, in charge, and generally acknowledged one of the greatest experts in horse flesh in America, it will be suppyling most of the civilized nations of Europe. And the price—now $144.15—may become even cheaper for Americans.

The farm represents an expenditure of more than $600,000, with some $400,000 to be spent within the next year.

Horses Have Everything.

On the farm are all sorts of buildings, sanitary baths, swimming pools, drinking fountains, resting sheds, pleasure paths and even a gigantic hospital—all for horses. Here and there are huge houses wherein reside men. These men look out for the horses.

They talk of little else. Indeed, it would be strange if the case were otherwise, for there are only 100 of these men, and daily they have to look after from 1,500 to 2,000 horses.

It took a long time to start the horse farm—more than half a century.

One day a few years ago a number of high staff officers of the army, watching a cavalry review, made some rather disparaging remarks concerning the appearance of the horses.

"Some of 'em look like mountain goats, and the rest like buffaloes," said one of the officers, and the remark got to the ears of Captain Conrad, and set him to thinking.

After that Captain Conrad had the approval of the War Department to start the farm. August Belmont made Uncle Sam a present of his six best stallions. Those stallions are known the racing world over, as Henry of Navarre, Octagon, Footprint, Belfry II, Vestibule and Marshall King. The six of them, when but two years old, cost $100,000.

Two More Horses Given.

James Camden, millionaire horseman of Versailles, Ky., heard of Belmont's gift and made Uncle Sam a present of his two famous stallions, Boola Boola and Wheelwright, worth about $25,000. Thus the farm was started.

But even with fifty stallions and mares by the hundred breeding on the farm was too slow. Something had to be done to increase the scope of the work—and the answer was found in a scheme to have Uncle Sam take every farmer in the South into partnership. This was done.

The ultimate plan is to sell the horses at a gigantic auction sale, with an army officer as auctioneer, knocking down the animals to the highest bidder.

Uncle Sam's horse farm is probably the only place in the country where no matter what animal you buy you may rest assured of getting a horse that is perfect. If the animal has the slightest blemish it will not be sold.

"Of course," said Captain Conrad, "we know that in this particular case the scar was due entirely to accident. But the farmer doesn't know it. He might have a mare scarred up purely by accident, but we wouldn't take his word for. We demand perfect mares and colts, so we give perfect stallions."

One Word to Decide Estate Ownership

Will Filed for Probate Causes Legal Discussion of "And" and "Or."

WOODBURY, N. J., June 25.—The will of the late Aaron Knisell, of Sewell, was offered for probate in the Surrogate's office. This instrument has raised a contention among the heirs. The will left the entire estate to Mrs. Knisell, who died two weeks before her husband, and it is claimed that its provisions lapsed with her death.

The property was left to Mrs. Knisell "and her heirs." Had it read "or" heirs, it is claimed, the estate would go to her heirs; but, as it says "and" heirs, Knisell's brothers claim the estate. A ruling by the court will be necessary to interpret the instrument.

Evelyn Thaw in the days she took New York by storm.

Evelyn Thaw as she is to-day.

As Miss Nesbit, Now Dancing at the Hippodrome, and Booked for Paris and Vienna.

By ALAN DALE.
Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—It was "Hullo, Rag-Time," at the Hippodrome that brought Evelyn Thaw within my jurisdiction, as it has brought many others who I never expected to meet.

So, with the open sesame of elusive art as a go-between, "Miss Nesbit," as she is programed here, received me without hesitancy in her rooms at the St. James Hotel, off Piccadilly, and our art robbed me of qualms. It was quite early morning.

Evelyn Thaw wore a loose peignoire of a black, shiny something, slashed at the back with yellow. Her hair was loosely fluffed out; she was devoid of the slightest effort at make-up, her ivory-white face and her unreddened lips looking quite startlingly natural. She was as pretty as any picture of—herself, and though the edge of reluctant youth may have frayed a little, there isn't a shadow of a doubt on the score of Evelyn Nesbit's charm. Never in all the ladies I have professionally met have I found more self-possession, a keener poise and less self-consciousness than in Evelyn Thaw. She made me wonder. She spoke easily, gracefully, reassuringly, without a trace of hesitation or nervousness.

On the Spur of the Moment.

"It was awfully sudden," she said, as we sat opposite each other. "I had no idea of going back to the stage after all these years."

"How many?" I asked. "You need not answer."

"Oh, I'm not like that," she said, with the first wistful smile; "I don't mind recalling anything. The last previous time I appeared on the stage was in 1904 in 'The Wild Rose.'

"Well, on the Olympic, coming over, I met a lot of theatrical people, among them Lee Shubert, Martin Beck and Albert DeCourville. They all advised me to make the break, especially DeCourville, who is manager of the Hippodrome.

"He has just married Shirley Kellogg, by the bye. I thought it over carefully, for I was a bit afraid, you know." She seemed to take it for granted that I knew. I did; I quite understood. "If I had made the break in New York I should have been a 'freak,'" she said. "Oh, there have been other women who have been through trials like mine who first tried New York, and it was hopeless. So when DeCourville telegraphed me at Paris to come at once to London and appear I realized that it was up to me, and I went, afraid, of course, but you know I'm no novice at harrowing experiences."

A Wild Turkey Trot.

"I was determined that nothing should force any attention from me to that sort of thing." She was now an artist before the public, and I was—me.

"I had to do a wild turkey trot with a dancer, and he was hard to find. I had seen Jack Clifford at the Cafe De Paris, and I remembered that he used to dance with Irene Weston, so we engaged him and rehearsed for one week only at the Irish Club, opposite the Hippodrome. Oh! it was terrible work. He throws me around—I am tossed up in the air and I see my heels at an angle I never expected to view them. And I'm an old married woman, with stiff joints."

Evelyn Nesbit laughed. So did I. She was as simple and unaffected as the inevitable school girl. It was impossible not to like her. She amused me a lot.

"They sneaked us on at a Saturday matinee without announcement," she said, "and luck favored me. The turn went well, and we are a hit.

"I'm engaged for six weeks, with an option, and then I go to Paris, Berlin, Vienna, St. Petersburg, Moscow, Copenhagen——"

"And New York?" I asked.

"New York, surely," she replied, smiling, "when I feel that I've put it over, but not until then. Oh, I do want to earn my own living, and the stage is good, and I don't mind hard work. In the old days, when I had nothing on my mind but my hair, I used to shirk rehearsals. Now, I'm Johnny-on-the-spot. I don't mind how much we rehearse. In fact, I rehearse every day. I've always loved dancing, and have studied all the successful dancers. If only I don't get fat like Ethel Barrymore and others."

She Won't Get Fat.

"You couldn't," I opined, for she didn't look the part.

"I won't," she retorted; "it would be a great pity, and I have another ambition that I'll tell you, for it may surprise you. Do you remember what Jerome said about me?"

Again I refused to remember anything.

"Well, he said that there were four great actresses—Sarah Bernhardt, Eleanora Duse, Mrs. Fiske and myself. I don't forget that. Some day I may try to act—to do something worth while, something serious, something emotional. So there you are! You will laugh, because I know you are funny.

"Theatrical people take themselves very seriously, and they can't understand why you don't do the same, but you don't—you can be as funny as you like about me. I shan't mind a bit, for I really have a sense of humor, and I'm not very serious." She laughed again, and I was quite disarmed. Evelyn Nesbit had impressed me as I didn't believe I was going to be impressed.

"All I do in London," she said, "is to work and eat good food. I love the food in London. Do go to the Cheshire Cheese and taste the chops. I was there yesterday, and I sat in Dr. Johnson's chair and enjoyed myself hugely. I'm going to get on, and I'm going to surprise everybody. One must have a beginning. Look at Elsie Ferguson. She was the stupidest chorus girl I ever met, but she had big moments, and now she is a very charming actress. Don't forget to write something funny about me, for I shall enjoy it."

But, somehow or other, Evelyn Nesbit hadn't appealed to my sense of humor. She was, at least, spontaneous and natural.

BOY, NOT YET 8, TO ENTER HIGH SCHOOL IN FALL

New Mexican Prodigy Received All His Training From Mother. Wonderful Memory.

ROSWELL, N. MEX., June 28.—When the public schools open next fall there will be a new student in the high school department, a boy who has never been to school a single day and who will not at that time have reached his eighth birthday.

This is the boy who, at the age of eighteen months, startled the city of Denver by repeating the names of the Presidents of the United States, and who at the age of five recited several pages from Hiawatha in a school entertainment in Artesia, N. Mex. His name is Raymond Ray. He is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. G. F. Ray, of Roswell.

The mother of this boy, who has been his only tutor since the very earliest day that he could learn, attributes to him none of the characteristics of a prodigy or perhaps of a genius. He has been taught to think, to concentrate his mind, and this training has enabled him to develop a remarkable memory.

He seldom reads an interesting topic more than once in order to commit it to memory, and he studies physiology, arithmetic, grammar, civil government and literature with little aid from his mother. When he enters high school he will take up the study of Latin, algebra, rhetoric, physical geography and ancient history.

Raymond is now studying Spanish, elocution and vocal music. He has some excellent talent in music, and sings with real melody, spirit and understanding.

Health Board Posts Weekly Bath Order

Canton, Ohio, Folks Must Get in Tub at Least Once a Week Authorities Declare.

CANTON, O., June 28.—Canton folks must bathe at least once a week, and "all over," at that. The board of health has said so.

In order that none can misunderstand, the board has arranged to post in every home where soap and water are believed to be at a premium a set of rules printed in five languages and specifying $25 and costs as punishment of any one who neglects the weekly cleanup.

INDIAN GIRLS WILL TRY SKILL AT HAT-MAKING

CARLISLE, PA., June 28.—Indian art will now show itself in hats. At least that is the natural conclusion drawn from an announcement made by the Carlisle Indian School that a course in millinery has been established for aborigines.

Indian art, the absolutely original gift of America to the world, has expressed itself in pottery, in rugs, in a dozen other ways, but it has never before entered the field of headgear, and it is expected that this new innovation may yet oust the chic French models into the deep shadows.

PET CANARY OF PRETTY WOMAN HALTS VESSEL

Captain of Liner Agrees to Delay Voyage Until She Can Send Home for Bird.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Mrs. Green is young and very charming. That is why the officers of the Vestris, of the Lamport and Holt line, gave her their fullest attention when she announced in plaintive but positive tones that she had lost her Rickey.

"I forgot to bring Rickey," she exclaimed.

"Who's Rickey?" demanded the second officer.

"Rickey's our pet canary," she said, "and I am taking him to South America to my husband. I mean I was to have taken him, but I left him at home."

Brought Food, Forgot Bird.

"It's too late now to get him," said the officer, "for we leave in thirty minutes."

"But I wouldn't dare go without him. I've brought the seed and the cuttlefish and everything, but I forgot the bird."

"Where do you live?" asked the officer.

"Mrs. G. F. Green, 59 West Fifty-third Street," was the reply, and the officer solicited the assistance of H. S. Damage, the line's passenger agent. After consultation with the Vestris captain it was agreed to hold the vessel until ten minutes after five o'clock—ten minutes later than her schedule called for—and Mr. Damage and Mrs. Green sought a telephone.

Bird's Owner In Hysterics.

To an agent of a taxicab company the young woman explained that she wanted to go to the Fifty-third Street number and get a canary bird.

But no canary bird bearing taxicab arrived at the pier by ten minutes after five o'clock, and Mrs. Queen was in a state of hysteria as she watched the sailors haul off the gang plank.

Just as the Vestris was swinging at the end of the pier and before the last spring line was cast off the taxicab arrived. With the bewildered canary in its cage one of Mrs. Green's friends ran to the end of the pier and fastened the cage to a piece of rope. Then, very slowly and with due reverence—for Mrs. Green's brimming eyes were upon him—a sailor hauled the line with the cage attached over the side.

Anything Shocking Police, Called Bad

Criticism of Chiefs of Present Styles Declared Cause for Women of Country to Act

JOHNSTOWN, PA., June 28.—Attacking immodesty in women's dress, Mrs. H. W. Black, of Riverdale, today stirred the delegates and visitors gathered at the annual convention of the Cambria County Sabbath School Association, in session here.

"Christian women should not wear clothes that cause people to turn and look at them after they pass," declared Mrs. Black.

"The police chiefs in convention at Washington have gone on record demanding a reform in women's dress. When it gets so bad that the police have to ask such a thing, I think it is time Christian women should act."

Child Offered Home For Looking Pleasant

Smiling Face of Orphan in Photographed Group Wins Hearts of Couple Who Lost Baby.

POCAHONTAS, ILL., June 28.—In Pocahontas there may be a home for a little girl because she "looked pleasant" when a photographer took the picture of a group of children waiting for an automobile ride. Children in the orphan asylums on that day were given an outing by the Automobile Club of St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Miles, of Pocahontas, adopted a little girl several years ago. She died. Something about two of the little girls whose pictures appeared in the newspaper reminded them of the little one who died, and they have written for information about the children.

Millionaire Gives Free Circus to Pay Pledge of Boyhood

Packer Leaves Home as Child to Make Fortune After Missing Show for Lack of Money.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Edward Tilden, millionaire packer, produced a circus to-day for "all the children within walking or riding distance" of the Tilden estate at Lake Delavan, Wis.

The huge entertainment cost $10,000 and had been planned for 25 years by the host. It grew out of a painfully vivid recollection of a circus that had come to town and gone away again without his getting inside the tent. It was fresh in his mind when he left Delavan a quarter of a century ago to come to Chicago to "make his fortune." At the train Edward Tilden told friends:

"I'm coming back some day and buy the town and give everyone a good time, and let every boy here see a circus."

A special carload of entertainers left Chicago for Delavan this morning. A dog and pony show and a band of 40 pieces left last night. The children also saw an aeroplane flight, had automobile rides and a big dinner.

Woman Jury Awards Verdict in Oregon

Plaintiff Is Awarded Damages of $5 in Legal Fight Over Cut of a Skirt.

ST. JOHNS, ORE., June 28.—The first regularly called woman's jury to serve in the State of Oregon tried a case in Justice Williams' court here and, after twenty minutes' conference, returned a verdict of $5 for the plaintiff. The jury was drawn in the regular form from a list of fifty women who have been chosen as liable for jury service during the year.

The case was one involving the price of a skirt. The plaintiff averred that a skirt which she had made by a local seamstress did not fit. She brought suit to recover the price of the skirt.

The fair jurors fixed the damages at $5.

12,000 Drinks in Five Years Basis of Suit

Wife Declares Husband Protected Himself With Walking Stick in Driving Rain Storm.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Twelve thousand drinks, ranging from simple mixed potations to fancy concoctions, is the record which Mrs. John Barry Sears posts up against her husband in five years of married life.

Mrs. Sears, who is suing for divorce, said Mr. Sears started his career of conviviality during his honeymoon and has kept it up.

In one instance, according to Mrs. Sears, her husband had come home in a driving rain.

"He carried his walking stick elevated above his head," she testified "and held his umbrella closed in his hand. He was soaking wet, but did not know it."

Prehistoric Flying Reptile Discovered

Skeleton of Pterodactyl Monster Is Found in Wyoming Fossil Bed by Geologists.

CASPER, WYO., June 28.—Dr. F. Salathe and D. VanWagener, geologists, who are prospecting this vicinity for oil, reported the discovery eighteen miles from Casper of a fossil bed, conspicuously visible in which is the almost perfect silicified skeleton of a flying reptile, probably of the pterodactyli, which measures at least sixty feet in length. The creature in life must have had a wing expansion of eighty feet.

BOY CONFESSES KILLING MOTHER AND BROTHER

Berkley Fleming, 19, of Ironton, Mo., Appears Unconcerned When Accused of Crime.

IRONTON, O., June 28.—Berkley Fleming, 19, has confessed to shooting his half-brother, Culbertson Stewart, almost three years ago, and his mother a few days ago.

The police took the boy to his grandfather's farm, where he pointed out the grave of his mother and stood by unconcerned as the body was removed. He was not impressed when the skeleton of Culbertson was exhumed.

Believe Boy Degenerate.

Chief of Police King, Dr. Wells and the Rev. W. H. Hampton, who have suspected for several months that Berkeley killed Culbertson, believe Berkeley a degenerate of the worst type.

Their theory is that he killed Culbertson because of jealousy and that he had worked out his carefull arranged plan of concealing the crime before he shot his brother.

The murder of the mother, they believe, was a part of his plan to keep her from exposing his former murder. A bullet hole in the back of the head of each victim and the mother's bruised face, say these men, destroy any accident theory.

Mother Is Suspicious.

Culbertson Stewart disappeared July 14, 1910, Berkeley's 17th birthday. The other brother afterward wrote letters to his mother purporting to come from Culbertson. She became suspicious, and he decided to kill her also.

After the crime he was found at a hotel waiting for dinner. He had gone there in a buggy to take his sweetheart riding. He made no objection to going to the police station, where he confessed.

SCHOOL ROLLS FAIL TO KEEP UP WITH BIRTHS

Wide Discrepancy Is Shown in Number of Pupils and Increase of Children.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Chapters on "Roman Catholic Schools," "Typical Health Teaching Agencies of the United States," and "Parent-Teacher Associations" are special features of the annual report of the United States Commissioner of Education, just issued.

In addition to these the report contains substantial chapters on the following subjects: General survey of the year; educational legislation during 1912; higher education; city school systems; rural education; recent movements in negro education; a review of agricultural education; progress in vocational education; library development; education in Alaska, the Philippines, Hawaii, Porto Rico, and other dependencies; Indian education; educational activities in Canada, Latin-America, Great Britain, Northern Europe, France and Switzerland, Germany, Southern Europe and Russia; together with a general view of conditions in Asia, Africa, Australia and New Zealand.

In his introduction to the report the commissioner discusses the wide discrepancy between the increase in the number of children of school age and the actual enrollment; an apparent reduction in teachers' salaries during the year; the remarkable increase in high schools and high school enrollment throughout the country; the decrease in professional schools, due to the enforcement of higher standards, lack of preparation of teachers, which Dr. Claxton characterizes as "one of the greatest evils of our school systems;" the shortness of the school term in the United States as compared with other civilized nations; and the abnormally large percentage of illiteracy in the rural districts.

CONTESTANTS WORKING HARD FOR MORE VOTES

Manager of Pony Race Advises Girls and Boys to Use Follow-Up System.

SYSTEMATIC WORK WINS

Shetlands Are Growing Fat and Strong at Loomis Avenue Stable Where They Are Kept.

The last week of the "clubs of five" bonus offer in The Georgian and American pony contest begins with all contestants straining hard to take advantage of the benefit to be gained by getting subscriptions before the time limit is up.

Standings published in The American show great gains, but they are small compared with the leaps forward which will be shown when the bonus votes are reckoned up for publication in next Wednesday's Georgian. The contest manager believes it will take the office force all of the night of July 5 to make the proper entries.

There also is a bonus of 50,000 votes for the first $30 turned in for subscriptions by any of the contestants. This offer may be withdrawn at any time.

Use Follow-Up System.

The contest manager wishes to repeat his suggestion that contestants take a leaf from the books of the successful business man and institute a "follow-up" system. A list of those whose subscriptions expire soon should be made, and all such subscribers visited with a request for a renewal. Nine times out of ten, a renewal is easier to get than the first subscription, for at the end of a short trial the subscriber generally gets to like The Georgian and American so well that he wants to continue.

It is systematic work of this sort which counts for more than the spurts of a day or two, which, while they may yield remarkable results, are not frequent enough to build up totals to the point where the contestant can feel sure of a pony.

None Sure of Winning.

No contestant has a right to feel sure of winning as yet. There is not a boy or girl in the race who can not be passed by an energetic rival, and some who are leading now have a very poor start, indeed.

Meanwhile, the ponies are "eating their heads off" at 55 Loomis Avenue, where their future owners are invited to call and see them. All are rounding into great shape, and they are prettier every day. It is going to be a hard task for the winners to pick the ponies they like best from the splendid bunch The Georgian and American have bought.

"I subscribed to The Georgian and American a week ago, and the paper has not begun to come to my home yet," is a complaint heard every now and then.

Usually it develops that the subscriber gave his money to one of the contestants, and that the contestant is "holding back."

This is poor policy, particularly if it is a short-term subscription, for when a contestant treats a subscriber in this way the man is not going to be as willing to give the contestant his renewal.

"Don't hold back," is the advice of the contest manager—and he knows best.

Defaulter Hired to Audit Bank's Books

Man Who Wrecked Financial Institution, Will Go to Work to Untangle Its Affairs.

CARUTHERSVILLE, MO., June 28.—A. B. Tindle, cashier of the Pemiscot County Bank, which closed, its doors following the discovery that he was short in his accounts, will be retained by the reorganizers to aid in straightening out its affairs.

"There is no desire on the part of the directors of the bank to prosecute Tindle," one of the directors said to-day. "He has turned over all his property and has been punished enough by his sudden fall from a position of trust and respect in the community."

Tindle's personal fortune is estimated at $200,000.

The action of the directors of the bank in retaining him in the task of straightening out the confusion caused by his shortage meets with the approval of a majority of the citizens it is said.

Verses Tell How 'Imperator' Ought to be Pronounced

Great Trouble Found With Largest Liner Is That Everyone Gives Her a Different Name.

NEW YORK, June 28.—There is one fault already found with the Imperator, the giant vessel of the Hamburg-American line, which has just made her maiden voyage as the biggest ship afloat. The trouble is no one knows how to pronounce her name.

Many think they do, and as a result, she is called many things as Amerson Hough, the author, who answers to Huff, How, Hoe, Huge and a few other things.

In reply to inquiries as to the pronunciation the publicity agent says that the German pronunciation which is sanctioned by the modern Latinists makes the "a" in Imperator sound like the "a" in father. The accent is on the next syllable to the last. The poet laureate of the line has been so much puzzled by the variety of pronunciations that he has celebrated them in verse. Here are some of the couplets:

Biggest ship upon the water,
Gorgeous, quetnly Imperator.

If you do not like that style of calling the ship, perhaps the poet laureate remarked, you may take this:

In the finest class we slate her,
Peerless, German Imperator.

"And please," the poet said, "do not make peerless "beerless." Then, after running his fingers through his hair, the poet emitted and submitted this:

Vastness!—making senses totter!
Sea Collossus, Imperator!

"To the tune of 'Dixie,'" said the poet, we might get still another line on the pronunciation by singing:

Buckwheat cakes and a little batter
Taste quite good on the Imperator!

Greatest Salmon Run in Puget Sound

Quadrennial Migration of Horde of Fish From Fraser River Begins on Pacific Coast.

SEATTLE, June 28.—Steamship men report the approach of the annual Sockeye salmon run, which this year is the quadrennial big run, the greatest fish migration in the world. The fish now entering the Sound were born four years ago.

When the first white men came to the Northwest the Indians told them of this periodical big run, which had been regular as far back as their tribal legends went. It is the Canadian theory that the fish making up the big run are hatched in Fraser River and grow to maturity off the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Four years ago so many traps were set for the mature fish that few were able to enter the Fraser, and the Canadians have insisted that the big run of 1913 would be a failure. Hence there is international interest in the size of the approaching swarms of salmon.

Aged Pair Perform Own Marriage Rites

Bridegroom, 75 Years Old, Declares It Was His Sixth Experience With Such Ceremony

BEAVER, PA., June 28.—Dr. Akkelon Mercer, seventy-five years old of Beaver Falls, and Sarah L. Calgrove, sixty-five years old, of Wetzel county, West Virginia, performed their own marriage ceremony here.

When the pair obtained their license they informed Hamilton, the clerk, that all they needed was a license, as they could dispense with all bridal attendants and the minister.

Doctor Mercer and Mrs. Calgrove to Hamilton issued the license for marry themselves in the presence of witnesses. Doctor Mercer stated that he had been married five times, and in each instance he and his bride had performed their own ceremony, always in the presence of two witnesses.

You Can't Be Well When Constipated

"Keep Your Bowels Open"—Doctors Estimate 75 Per Cent of Sickness Due to Torpid Liver.

Some undigested food is left in the stomach daily, which the liver should clear away. A heavy or unusual diet, or a change in water, may cause the liver to leave a few particles to press and clog, and the next day more are left over. So this waste accumulates, clogging stomach and intestines, and causing constipation.

That is not all. If the waste is not eliminated it ferments and generates uric acid, a poison which gets into the blood and through the system.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT immediately flushes the stomach and intestinal tract and washes away every particle of waste and fermentation; it purifies the blood by dissolving what uric acid has accumulated and passing it off in the urine.

JACOBS' LIVER SALT is much better than calomel; no danger of salivation, no need of an after-cleansing dose of oil. It acts quickly and mildly; never forces, gripes or nauseates. It effervesces agreeably. Take it before breakfast and in an hour you'll feel splendid.

Don't take an inferior substitute; some closely imitate the name, but none produces the same result. All druggists should have the genuine JACOBS' LIVER SALT, 25c. If yours cannot supply you, full size jar mailed upon receipt of price, postage free. Made and guaranteed by Jacobs' Pharmacy Co., Atlanta.—(Advt.)

My Experience With Tacco --The New Handy Varnish

By EVELYN WREN

HOUSEWIVES realize that a coat of varnish is often more satisfactory than a new piece of furniture. It is a gratification to see the marred chair which belonged to the first parlor suit look like new. The dining table has held many simple breakfasts, many delightful luncheons and many bountiful dinners, and the steaming dishes have left ugly marks upon its once shining surface. To see it emerge from its varnish treatment is like welcoming back an old friend.

Varnishing seems like tiresome, dirty work, and a task suitable for men attired in overalls. I had always associated it with laborers' muscles and rough clothing until one day when I decided my desk at The American office needed some attention.

You do not become wholly unfeminine even if you are a newspaper woman. I was tired of seeing the black spot where the inkwell had overturned. I did not like the white mark where a glass of ice water had stood. All at once I had a hunch that I could do my work better if a marred place did not constantly remind me of a loss of temper and consequent lowering of self-respect and dignity. The refinishing of my desk became an obsession.

I read advertisements. Fortunately I am influenced by them. When I saw an advertisement of a varnish which a woman could apply with a cloth just as a furniture polish is applied, I resolved to investigate the novel preparation.

I went to the sixth floor of the Forsyth Building and entered the offices of The Amber Chemical Company. There I almost breathlessly inquired for Tacco, the water-proof, dust-proof and heat-proof varnish. (To tell the truth, I did not much mind about the heat-proof feature, for most of the heat in our office is caused by irritable nerves, and not by the weather. I am no exception.)

A bottle of Tacco was put into my hand, and I grasped a piece of cheesecloth and went energetically to work. I used just as much muscle as three years of typewriting will produce in a feminine arm. I worked as hard as any furniture polisher ever dreamed of doing in his worst nightmare. I thought I was doing well.

Imagine my chagrin and the expression on my face when the cloth was quietly taken from my vigorous grasp and I was shown that Tacco requires no rubbing. You do not have to use as much energy as I do in ordinary dusting.

Dust the article first. If it is much stained you might well apply a little soap and water. Then apply your Tacco to the dry surface. A piece of cheesecloth is the best medium, and a firm, gentle movement like that of dusting will put the varnish on in the best form. Then let it dry. At the end of five hours view the result and feel proud of your work which is really but a pastime.

Have a Tacco day. Take the breakfast cloth off when husband has departed for the office. Apply Tacco according to the directions on the box, and the dining table will be ready for use at lunch time. Of course if husband is a capitalist and breakfasts at 10:30 instead of at 7 you will probably not have the pleasure of using Tacco yourself. Let us hope that you are one of those domestic little housewives who just "loves" to make your home pretty with your personal effort, and that husband has not outgrown his appreciation of the little touches which you can give just a bit better than any hired help.

The table in the living room has played an important part in the happiness of the household. You could not think of home without that table, and the ones you see in the store windows never look quite as hospitable or nearly so homelike. Here Jack has read his paper and graciously explained politics to your bewildered self as you stitched on little frocks which were to go to Kindergarten with Little Girl. It has held Big Brother's school books and his drawing instruments. (Said drawing instruments are responsible for the big unsightly gash at the end.) All in all, you feel as you begin to apply Tacco with a gentle hand that this table has many dear memories. You would like to see it as fresh and pretty as it was when you and Jack picked it out. It seemed the finest table in the world on that day. How you blushed, and how manly Jack looked as he quietly drew the money from his pocket and ordered it sent to your new home.

When the table is finished the big chair will seem more worn and bruised than ever. You never realized how shabby the living room was getting. It seems but a day or two ago that you decided to surprise Jack with that comfortable chair on his birthday. You saved from your housekeeping money bit by bit and grew anxious toward the last for fear the fund would not be large enough. You grow tender toward that big chair as you remember Jack's eyes when he first espied it and then quickly gazed at you. The lovelight was there, even if you had been married a half-dozen years, and had but recently lost many hours of sleep with Little Girl's teething episode

The tender feelings do not interfere with the application of Tacco. Let retrospection have its sway, and when you have had the pleasure of many happy memories look at the result. The table will shine like new. The gash made by Big Brother's steel ruler will not show. Tacco has acted as a filler and made the surface smooth as glass. Dusting will be a light task now. You may even scrub the table, for it has a water-proof finish now. The chair will bring the lovelight to Jack's eyes anew, for he, too, will remember the day your love made the gift.

If you are a housekeeper, you will welcome Tacco as a means of making your home brighter and more cheerful. You need never wish for an opportunity to send shabby furniture away to be refinished. You can buy a bottle of Tacco for only 50 cents. The economy of it will be demonstrated by its first use, and you will be ready to purchase a quart, half-gallon or gallon can before many days.

When I like anything I never take my liking for granted. I analyze my appreciation. Here is my analysis of my fondness for Tacco:

It requires absolutely no rubbing.
It dries in from two to five hours.
It is water-proof as well as dust and heat proof.
It is economical in time and money.

Well, my desk at The American office has had its Tacco treatment. Come in to see it, if you like. Then investigate Tacco as I did, if you like, or better still, benefit by my written experience and buy a bottle or can at any good drug or hardware store.

CARPENTER'S 'JULIEN' CALLED SOUL TRAGEDY

Part Is Dream and Part Reality, Revealing the Secret Genius of the Composer.

By CHARLES HENRY MELTZER.
Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, June 28.—I came away from the dress rehearsal of Charpentier's "Julien" shaking with emotion. The last episode in the new work of the composer who evolved "Louise" had been tremendous in effect.

The tones in which Charpentier had expressed the destruction of a poet's faith and dreams had been too eloquent. His harmonies, his discords and his rhythms racked one's nerves. And what they meant was a soul-tragedy.

The ultra-modern men here—of the Debussy, Florent Schmidt and Ravel groups—smiled as they listened to some parts of the new "opera." To some it seemed as old as Richard Wagner. Nor were they wholly wrong. For, though it is of striking power and full of beauty, it was by no means "up to date."

Stooped to Copy No One.

Charpentier had, of course, not stooped to copy either Wagner or the Italian Veritists. To all he does he gives his own distinctive character. He gave it to "Louise," his first success.

He has put it into "Julien." Wagner, Mascagni and, perhaps, also Berlioz had been remembered in "La Vie du Poete" and were suggested here and there, of course, in "Julien." And yet the work which thrilled the audience at the Opera Comique a few days ago was painfully "personal." It seemed the expression of its creator's very life, the appeal of his unhappy, complex soul, the confession of his faith and doubt and dread.

There are literary parallels to the case of "Julien," in the "Manfred" of Byron, the "Faust" of Goethe and the Heinrich of Hauptmann. Those poems all described the eternal tragedy of man, with his aspirations, his ideals and his impotence.

"He who has flown so high, as thou has flown,
Must perish if he once fall back to earth,"

says the Wise Woman to Hauptmann's Heinrich in "The Sunken Bell."

And at the outset Julien soars, as Heinrich soared, on the highway to the sun.

In the opening act of Charpentier's "opera," or dramatic poem, the music voices—rather conventionally now and then—the hero's idealism. By slow degrees we find him sinking into doubt. For he soon loses the Louise who inspires his dreams. Not the mere workgirl of his early opera, but a symbol, with the externals of a woman—his Muse, his Higher Self, his Power, his Dream.

When in the closing episode of "Julien" the poet again finds—or thinks he finds—Louise, she has changed to a street walker, a trull, a pitiful wreck, known to Montmartre as "Casque d'Oignon." So in the final movement of the "Fantastic" the nobility of the leading theme, which suggests Berlioz's love, is changed to an ignoble melody.

Part of the Opera Dream.

Part of Charpentier's "Julien" is dream, part is reality. There is, as I said in my first review of the "opera," a lack of unity in the composer's style. But the construction of the work is clear. It shows the tragedy of poets—and of humanity.

To come to earth—the score of "Julien" has much in common with that of "Louise." Echoes of that opera, as suggestions of its heroine, occur in the second and last acts. The tumult of the orgy at the Montmartre fair in the last episode has the spirit of the third act of "Louise" transformed—as a prayer may be transformed into a blasphemy. It was the fourth and last act that most moved me—not because it was the most beautiful.

Solo of Julien Exquisite.

The solo of Julien in the second act, the act of "Doubt," is by long odds the most exquisite incident, musically, of the work; and the cavatina of the purely symbolical Louise in the first act is almost as charming. But because it told the tragedy of poets (and, if you will, of man) so painfully.

No one who is intelligent need be shocked by the apparent crudity of the prologue, which shows us a figure—called Louise—in bed, at the Villa Medici, while her poet dreams. For, I repeat, in the composer's mind his mistress is not flesh, but inspiration. If Mr. Gatti-Casazza has not the courage to copy the Paris production he can draw the curtains of the alcove in which Louise lies. Or he can let her rest upon a couch. It does not matter.

I fear that Mr. Gatti-Casazza and the plain New York public would faint at the stark, realistic frankness of the dances in the orgy at Montmartre. Well—they are not essential, though they emphasize the composer's thought.

Lecturer Tells Students at Paris Hospital That Organ Will Not Suffer From Pause.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, June 28.—Surgical research has proved that operations in the thoracic cavity can be performed as easily as in the abdomen, according to Dr. Alexis Carrel, of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, New York.

In a lecture at the Beaujon Hospital the Nobel prize winner declared that experiments on animals had demonstrated the heart to be an organ of very great resistance, and that it does not suffer harm if the circulation is interrupted for five or even [illegible] minutes.

Gowns of Lady Newborough and Mrs. Cecil Bingham, Formerly of Ky., Charm Royal Pair.

Special Cable to The American.

WINDSOR, June 28.—Not even the royalty, the winning jockeys or the best thoroughbreds attracted the attention during Ascot Week that was accorded two Southern belles, Lady Newborough, former Louisville, Ky., girl, and Mrs. Cecil Bingham, whose superb gowns were the cynosure of all eyes through the gay period.

Lady Newborough, who was Miss Grace Carr, a sister of Mrs. Bingham, would be worth a fortune to any Parisian modiste, the English society people are saying, because of her ability in showing off her clothes and hats to fascinating advantage.

During the meet she was frequently invited to the royal box, while Mrs. Bingham was personally complimented by the Queen.

Her costume was entirely of black, the moire skirt kilted in wide kilts and all around pannier draperies in voluminous billows reaching from the waist almost to the knees. Her bodice was tight-fitting, with only a touch of lace, and there was a single red rose at the waist.

She carried her usual pagoda parasol, a fashion started by her two months ago, but not taken up until race week. She lunched with an interesting party, including Lady Alastair Innesker (Anne Breese, of New York), who wore black charmeuse draped about the feet, the upper part of the gown being entirely of fine lace.

Mrs. Bingham is now seen everywhere with Mrs. George Keppel, the two having become fast friends during the past few months.

Lady Newborough was the greatest "costume success" of the meeting. Her gown was of oyster satin, draped with rare old black lace in points reaching below the knees, with a large emerald clasp holding the gold belt and yellow, white and red roses on one shoulder.

Her hat was of the bonnet variety and weighted with a dozen or more large roses of the same shades. Her shoes and stockings were rose color. She was in the inclosure with Prince Alexander of Teck, Count Albert Mensdorff, the Austrian Ambassador, and Mr. Marshall Field. She lunched with Countess Pappenheim (May Wheeler, of Philadelphia), whose party also included Lady Diana Manners and Mrs. William Northrup McMillan of St. Louis.

King George Loath to Name Poet Laureate

Pay of Official Songster, Including "A Butt of Sack" Called Wasteful by Captain Lynch.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—King George has no wish to fill the post of Poet Laureate left vacant by the death of Alfred Austin, whose muse was less charming than himself.

The other day in the House of Commons Captain Arthur Lynch, the Member from West Claire, who fought with the Boers, asked politely what were the perquisites, privileges and salary of the Poet Laureate. Premier Asquith replied $350 a year and $150 in lieu of the ancient "butt of sack."

Two members suggested that the office of King's jester be revived.

Captain Lynch wound up the discussion by remarking dryly, as one who speaks of sack, that it seemed to be wasteful to give a butt of sack for a ha'porth of poetry.

LONDON, June 28.—That the woman should promise to "obey" when she marries is repugnant to the women of the Spiritual Militancy League. They sent a very plainly worded letter to every clergyman of the Established Church to-day, emphasizing the "moral indignity" imposed on the woman who makes the promise.

More—when the announcement of an engagement to marry is published these promoters of spinsterhood write to the fluttering maiden particularly interested and ask her if she would make herself a slave.

PRINCES ANGRY AS REICHSTAG INSISTS ON TAX

Imperial Government Argues in Vain to Prevent Their Paying Part of Great Appropriation.

Special Cable to The American.

BERLIN, June 28.—The Finance Committee of the Reichstag has severely shocked the feelings of the Imperial Government by maintaining that the Federal Princes of the empire will have to submit to taxation in order to raise the enormous amount at once to cover the increased military and naval expenses.

In vain did the Imperial Government argue that the Federal Princes are sovereigns, who dare not be taxed like ordinary human beings. It was said that while they were willing to come forward with voluntary contributions, as their patriotism prompted them, it would be a mortal insult if the Reichstag tried to tell them how much they must pay.

Princes Ordered to Pay.

The majority within the committee, however, consisting of representatives of the Left, the Socialists and the Center, stuck to their guns manfully and maintained that there was nothing in the constitution granting the reigning Princes freedom from taxation and a paragraph was accordingly added to the bill ordering all Princes of the empire to pay taxes in accordance with the rules applying to the common herd.

The only consideration shown these hitherto privileged personages was that it was left to the "Bundesrat" (Council of the Empire) to select the officials that are to collect the taxes from the members of the sovereign houses.

There is every reason to believe that the Reichstag as a whole will adopt the measure recommended by the committee, and when this happens, the Bundesrat has no choice but to accept the principle of sovereign Princes' liability to taxation or to refuse to accept the law.

Appealed in Empire's Name.

The latter alternative however seems entirely out of the question, since it was in the name of the Bundesrat and the sovereign Princes that the Imperial Government appealed to the patriotism of the people and emphasized the absolute necessity of the law.

It would be impossible to refuse to accept the law merely because it compels the Princes to pay their share of the extraordinary military expenses. At any rate, the Imperial Government has rendered the sovereign Princes a very poor service by maintaining the theory of their freedom from taxation.

AMERICAN GIRL SUES HUSBAND, ITALIAN COUNT

Marchioness San Germano Tells Tragedy of Her Life—Plans To Go on Operatic Stage.

Special Cable to The American.

ROME, June 28.—Marchioness San Germano, American born and bred, is awaiting the final decree of divorce for which her husband, Italian aristocrat, millionaire and distinguished, sued in Hungary after she had obtained legal separation under the Italian law, which does not recognize absolute divorce. When her legal affairs are settled she will sing in opera.

Father a Minister.

Virginia Hoge, Marchioness San Germano, comes of the oldest and best stock to be found in the Southern States. Charters to her ancestors from the Stuart kings are still preserved in the family records. Her father, the Rev. Dr. Peyton H. Hoge, was pastor of the Warren Memorial Church at Louisville. His father was co-pastor with the Rev. Dr. Springer, of the Brick Church, New York.

"We were desperately in love," the Marchioness began. "I needn't go into our courtship beyond saying that I first met my husband when I came to study voice production in Rome, nearly eight years ago. We met casually at the house of a friend, and it was a case of love at first sight. After a brief honeymoon we returned to Italy to settle in the castle which my husband owns at Arpino in Caserta.

"After a while my husband began to be much away from home on business and I got very lonely. But it was only after three years of married life that the crash came which so often happened much earlier in international marriages.

"We went to the seaside for my little daughter's health. It was the old story on his part—'the woman tempted me, and I did eat.'

Saw Woman in Case.

"No sooner had we got to the seaside than I saw the cause of all the mischief. The 'other woman' had followed him there. I chose to shut my eyes and accept her false advances under the cloak of friendship. But if ever a woman played the serpent it was she. How much kinder to stab a wife openly than to murder what she holds dearest—her husband's love.

"At that time I received word that my father was ill, and I wanted to be near him. The result can easily be guessed. When I returned there was no attempt to conceal the truth. This woman was determined to get him—to marry him; partly from a blind passion, but chiefly for his money and his position. And I felt that with my best jewel gone and my pride outraged I had nothing to do but to accept the situation. So I decided on suing for a separation."

Defender of Port Arthur Partly Paralyzed and Has Nearly Lost Power of Speech.

MOSCOW, June 28.—General Stoessel, the defender of Port Arthur, who for some time has been partly paralyzed, has now nearly lost the power of speech.

To add to these physical afflictions, his financial position has gone from bad to worse. He lately sold his country mansion and estate, but an officer who served as an adjutant to General Stoessel during the siege of Port Arthur, has offered his former chief shelter and maintenance for the rest of his life.

To Regain a Healthy, Girlish Complexion

(From the Feminine World.)

If you would have a clear, fresh, girlish complexion, one ounce of ordinary mercolized wax will aid you in this direction more than shelves full of cosmetics. It produces a natural beauty. This wax, procurable at any drug store, completely absorbs a bad complexion, revealing the healthy young skin underneath. Its work is done so gradually, day by day, that no inconvenience is caused. The wax is applied at night, like cold cream, and removed in the morning with soap and water.

Another valuable rejuvenating treatment—this for wrinkles—is to bathe your face in a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in ½-pt. witch hazel. This has a remarkable action in smoothing out the lines and "firming up" the loose tissue.

Stonemason Forced To Wall Up Girl in Old House, He Says

Spaniard Informs Police of Hair-raising Experience Near Madrid Recently.

Special Cable to The American.

MADRID, June 28.—The police of Barcelona are investigating the story of Esteban Gutierrez, a stonemason, who declare that he was forced to wall up a young girl in a building near the city.

Gutierrez says that two well-dressed men called at his home with a motor car and asked him to accompany them a short distance into the country to carry out some urgent repairs.

When they were outside the city the men seized Gutierrez, bound and blindfolded him. A few minutes later the car stopped in front of a lonely house.

The mason says he was led inside and ordered to wall up a narrow aperture. He heard someone sobbing, and, tearing the bandage from his eyes, he saw a young girl, bound with ropes and wedged in the aperture.

His captors ordered him to build a wall so as to inclose the unfortunate girl, and when Gutierrez refused they threatened him with revolvers. He says that he was forced to comply with their commands, after which the car conveyed him to a wood several miles away.

Before leaving him in the woods the men gave Gutierrez $20 in silver, and warned him not to speak of the incident. He was found by a woodman and he went at once to the police.

Frenchman Shoots Companion and Tries to Slay Himself When Mistake Is Discovered.

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, June 28.—A tragic sequel to the Titanic disaster is reported here. Among the passengers was a Frenchwoman named Mme. Breyns, who lived at Bethune. Her husband, a Belgian, aged 30, read her name among the list of dead. After a time he sought consolation with another young woman, with whom he lived at a place 20 miles from Bethune.

A few days ago he learned that his wife was among the rescued and that she was in France searching for him. This so upset him that he shot and killed his companion and then fired two shots at his own head. These did not prove fatal, and he was on the point of hanging himself when the police appeared and took him to the hospital.

Other miners sounded the alarm gong of the mine and the survivors were arrested.

QUEEN WILL GIVE BALL TO EXHIBIT HOME-MADE HAT

So Delighted With Fancy Dress Affair She Recently Attended, She'll Give One Herself.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—Queen Mary was so delighted with the Versailles fete at Albert Hall, which she attended the other day, that she has decided to give a big fancy dress ball herself next year, probably at Buckingham Palace.

She wishes all dresses to be of one period, and this is rather difficult, for nearly every period except the prehistoric has been used. But some one has a bright idea of a VanDyke ball, and this for the moment is favored.

Queen Mary, as a young woman, was always very fond of dressing up and liked nothing better than to take part in amateur theatricals. King George was rather an obstacle. But on hearing his wife's eloquent description of the Versailles ball he yielded to her desire.

The Queen is regaining some of the merriment which first endeared her to the English nation as Princess Mary. A royal fancy dress ball will give a great fillip to fancy dress.

There have been so many of these big affairs lately that people are becoming rather tired of them, but there is keen competition already among London costumers to get the deal going and carrying out of the costumes.

Queen Mary has directly inspired the fashion of home-made millinery, which now is much to the fore in the less go-ahead sections of society, and will wear one of her own creations at the ball. All her majesty's hats are of her own designs, and many of them are partially carried out by her own fingers. She makes no bones about her disapproval of extravagant sums spent on millinery by many women of fashion.

KING'S DIVORCE VIEWS ARE NOW MORE LIBERAL

Aristocratic Clubs Heave Sigh of Relief When Separated Courtier Is Buckingham Guest.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—A certain peer who was formerly a Lord-in-Waiting to His Majesty and who figured in the divorce court recently, was commanded to a dinner at Buckingham Palace this week. This the Court Circular reveals.

A great sigh of relief is wafted out of the windows of the aristocratic clubs. The King's command—his invitation to dinner—is taken to mean that his majesty is inclined to tolerate marital peccadillos, although he frowns on such sins. In this he follows the example of his father.

This liberality of view was scarcely expected of King George, who has the sincerest respect for the opinion of his spouse in such unhappy affairs.

Queen Mary is called "prim." So if anything were needed to establish a woman who has not found her husband her ideal it is the stamp of Queen Mary's womanly approval. Her majesty has set that stamp on several Americans, the Duchess of Marlborough, who was Consuelo Vanderbilt; Mrs. Cornwallis-West, born Jerome, and Mrs. John Astor.

FOR MILADY'S WARDROBE

By MME. HAUTE MONDE.

THE vogue of the double skirt seems to be increasing. The under one generally of supple satin, is often draped and drawn in around the ankles. Over this a contrasting material is draped or pleated. In the latter case it might pass for an elongated tunic, especially as it is often of taffeta. The fancy for these double skirts finds a better medium of expression in the sheer summer materials. Through the upper one, which is transparent, one sees the colored garniture of the under one and the effect is very soft and pretty.

* * *

Hawthorn, sweet peas and hedge roses are reported as being in favor in Paris for summer millinery. A novelty which has been introduced there is the cretonne flower for trimming straw "sport hats." This isn't a bad idea, as the regular muslin and silk flowers are generally inappropriate and always are unsatisfactory garniture for outing hats.

* * *

The black velvet neckbands show great originality and variety. One has a tab about three inches long hanging directly in front, the end of the tab being weighted with a "motif" of brilliants set in platinum. Some are tied in a spreading bow at one side; others in a tight little bow at the back. One that I saw was tied in a butterfly cravat bow directly in front.

* * *

For the summer hats, which are now the most important millinery concern, flowers, tulle, lace, and ribbon monopolize the attention. An attractive garden party hat seen the other day was a typical broad legHorn with a standing ruche of black tulle encircling the crown, and another lying flat on the brim. Between the two, at one side toward the front, was a great pink rose with its green foliage, while a little sheaf of pale blue wheat, with very long "spears" thrust out toward the front and another to the back.

* * *

Salmon is a tone that has but recently arrived. It has become popular because of its vivid tone, pink itself being too dull to suit the exigencies of the moment. Shrimp is a dye, too, that is popular. But, like all the rest, it must be in supple rich silk or satin, or in mousseline de sole. The big sashes that are known as the "Directoire," (though they are not really so) from a kind of draping at the side or back.

* * *

The best dressy tailor-mades are now in moire, either in black or in one of the new shades. It is like supple silk, and is rich and effective, being manufactured with special care. The weave which has been fashionable, or rather has been a candidate for popularity during the last year, was handsome enough, but stiff and hard. Now the makers have brought out a superfine material which is bound to be fashionable for a long time to come. Moire is inclined to be oldish; but this new variety is quite flirtatious, though serious enough to gown a grande dame. Moire is well used in combination with satin, taffetas, or even cloth.

* * *

A novelty in parasols has a ferrule end which is an exact reproduction of the top of the Directoire walking sticks carried by the beauties of that period. The handle end of this parasol is slim and plain. When closed it is reserved in position, the ferrule end—which is quite long—being held as if the parasol were ready a Directoire staff.

* * *

A beautiful example of color blending was exemplified in a pretty dress in Japanese blue silk, printed with small violet roses. One side of the skirt formed a pannier, whereas the front and back widths crossed one another at the knee beneath a pink and mauve velvet rose with dark violet foliage. A similar flower fastened the violet velvet belt in front. Handsome "New-Art" guipure, dyed a warm ivory, in a design of plums and leaves, trimmed the bodice and the Venetian undersleeves in white mousseline de soie.

* * *

Elaborate lingerie dresses this season are almost exclusively of embroidered batiste combined with real laces of the heavier varieties, such as coarse filet, Cluny, Venise and Alencon. Or they are of net, with shadow lace or other fine weaves combined with the embroidered batiste. English eyelet embroidery, which early in the season appeared to have suffered a setback, has been coming into favor again in Paris and here. It is now shown more frequently in batiste than in linen and is elaborately embroidered as well as "eyeleted."

The sashes for summer gowns grow in numbers and popularity. A useful sash for wearing with light summer gowns is that composed of printed gauze, with the ends traced over with metallic threads. Some of the new printed gauzes are rarely beautiful in color and design. In dull blue with a pattern of blurred roses one of these sashes would look well if traced over with dull silver threads; or again, in invisible green with a design of Japanese flowers in faded tints and a traced pattern on the borders done in copper threads.

The sashes are always heavily fringed and they add considerable grace to the figure, for when correctly arranged they mould the hips and vaguely outline the waist. The fringed ends may be arranged in a loose knot at one side, or they may be passed round to the back and tied in a large bow.

* * *

Fashions in motor apparel receive more attention every season. In buying motor apparel the custom usually followed is that of matching up the costume. Not that all the things should be the same colors, but they must look as though they had been bought to be worn together. This certainly is a fashion which commends itself from one point of view. It shows that the garments belong to the wearer, and are not borrowed from a friend in need or from one's hostess.

* * *

Picot ribbon lends itself so charmingly to the making of girdles and neck bows and hat trimmings that its popularity increases every day—and so every day the colors and designs in which it is shown likewise increase. An attractive girdle with ends at the back and a big, flat bow at the side, is made of wide Chinese blue picot ribbon trimmed with tiny pink and blue chiffon roses, applied as bands across the bottom of the sash ends, and as a buckle in the center of the bow.

* * *

One of the loveliest materials for the somewhat formal frock of daytime wear in the summer is Bulgarian printed Canton crepe. A charming design is light brown crepe printed with blue and lavender in a small formal pattern with a groundwork tracery of black all over the brown crepe.

* * *

A sensible bathing suit for a little girl consists of mohair bloomers and a knitted woolen sweater matching in color. The sweaters worn for bathing are made with sailor collars and worn with a tie. For the smaller child, both boy and girl, the one which is taking its first dip in the water, knitted woolen bathing suits, all in one piece and buttoned on the shoulders, are the most comfortable and durable. They are made in white, with blue bands around neck and sleeves, in red with white bands and in blue with red bands.

* * *

So entirely satisfactory have gold and silver cloth slippers become that they are adopted as the one neutral kind of footwear by all those who for reasons economical and otherwise do not indulge in slippers to match every evening gown. The hosiery people have made a decided success of matching silk stockings to these slippers and heretofore no other kind of stocking was tolerated, but this spring it became the fashion to match the stocking to the skirt and then add metal cloth slippers. The effect is much better.

Simplicity Rules In New Paris Hats and Gowns

These pictures show examples of the latest Parisian millinery creations for summer wear, and a fetching gown, also intended for the summer girl. The dominant note in both hats and dress is simplicity, and it is surprising what beautiful effects are obtained without the use of complex materials or a variety of colors.

No wonder Parisian women are famed the world over for the beauty of their hats and gowns. Just glance at these examples of the latest creations of the famous designers of confections for the adornment of milady's head and draperies for her form which have just come from the French capital.

Simplicity is the dominant note of up-to-the-minute fashions in Paris. Milliners and gownmakers now and then return to their sober senses after a protracted debauch in violent color effects and discover that beauty often lies in simplicity.

There is nothing complicated about the hat of old saxe blue with the lace frill edging its brim and a paradise plume in front, but the whole effect is unmistakably beautiful. The plume curls entirely around the base of the hat's crown, and then takes a graceful upward sweep, with a slight droop at the end.

Another striking but simple bit of millinery is the hat of brown straw with paradise plumes in the shade of red brown massed along one side of the crown.

Another charming hat is the black sailor shape, of straw and ribbon, bearing a single high aigrette at the front of the crown. The effect is amazingly chic.

The gown shown in the accompanying cut is a sartorial idyll of almost pastorial simplicity, yet possessing beauty that might evoke praise from the most jaded connoisseur. The base of the costume is white taffetas. The upper part is executed in Russian blouse fashion, with a bouquet of flowers laid on the belt. Sounds very simple, doesn't it? Yet the effect is remarkably charming.

Tight Skirts Held Bar to Matrimony

Ben Greet, Veteran Shakespearean Actor, Declares That Men Will Not Wed Wearers of Hobbles.

BLOOMSBURG, PA., June 28.—"Marriages will be fewer unless the women quit wearing the hideous hats and frightful dresses we see, and which are having a vogue like the unpleasant plays," remarked Ben Greet, the veteran Shakespearean actor, in an interview here.

"The women have only to look in the mirrors to see how they look, and men won't walk out with such dresscs."

Then he told of an actress in his party with a skirt so hobbled that she could not kneel, and what happened to the skirt so that the girl could go on acting.

Women Taught to Save Million a Year

Kansas Garbage Cans Are Cheated of Immense Amount by Domestic Science Instruction at School.

TOPEKA, KAN., June 28.—Kansas cheated the garbage cans of the State out of $1,000,000 last year, and the amount will be increased at the rate of $500,000 a year until there will be virtually no wasted foods in the entire State.

That is the aim of the Kansas Agricultural College, and the State is spending $40,000 a year to help.

Seven hundred girls completed the domestic science courses at the agricultural college this week, and the college has just closed its movable cooking schools, which were attended by 11,000 women in the ten weeks in which they were operated.

Cupid Moves to Vancouver, Wash.

Oregon's New Law Requiring Health Certificates Held Responsible.

VANCOUVER, WASH., June 28.—The record for marriage licenses issued in one day during the 60 years in which records have been kept was broken here when ten couples secured marriage licenses. Nor is this all.

At the present rate, in fifteen days the greatest month's record will be broken in one-half the time—and all because Oregon passed a law requiring certificates of health from men making application for marriage licenses. Already 58 licenses have been issued this month, the record being 65 for any entire month.

SUFFRAGIST TO PAY TAX WHEN VOTE BILL IS SIGNED

CHICAGO, June 28.—"Mrs." Belle Squire, the defiant suffragist who, as head of the No-Vote-No-Tax League, has refused to pay taxes for five years, will square her account with the County as soon as Governor Dunne signs the limited woman suffrage bill.

"When the bill is signed and I am no longer a citizen in name only I will be found to be a prompt taxpayer," she asserted.

Policewomen Carry Parasols on Duty

Newport Guardians of Peace Appear on Beach Armed With Mesh Bags and Sunshades.

NEWPORT, R. I., June 28.—For the first time in the history of the famous Newport beach, two women policemen were placed on duty there yesterday. They wore as uniforms blue blouses with brass buttons, blue skirts and sailor straw hats. They were appointed at the request of the Newport Civic League, and will be on duty all summer.

Their duties were nominal and they made no arrests. One promenaded the beach with a parasol, partly concealing her brass buttons, while the other swung a mesh bag as she walked along.

Minister Refused Big Marrying Fee

Twenty-five Dollars Did Not Shake Dr. Pennewell's Determination.

CHICAGO, June 28.—The Rev. Almer Pennewell, of the Euclid Avenue M. E. Church, in Oak Park, announced recently that marriage fees were graft. He would marry persons, he said, for nothing. Recently he was put to the test.

Miss Dorothy Naize, of Oak Park, and Clifton Hunt, of Cincinnati, were married at his church. The affair was a big one socially, and the bride's father, not liking the "charity" plan of the pastor, decided that he should receive some remuneration for his services.

So Mr. Naize put $25 in new, clean bills in an envelope and handed the envelope to Mr. Pennewell offhand. The pastor was wide awake and rejected it. Mr. Naize then sought the pastor's wife. She, too, refused it.

FRECKLE-FACE

Sun and Wind Bring Out Ugly Spots—How to Remove Easily.

Here's a chance, Miss Freckleface, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable dealer that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles; while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from Jacobs' Pharmacy and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine, as this is the prescription sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

ALL WOMEN TO VOTE IN TIME IS SENATE'S IDEA

Even the Most Conservative Members Believe the Fair Sex Will Cast Ballot the World Over.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—That women in all civilized countries will be permitted to vote is regarded as inevitable by the most conservative Senators and Representatives.

It is their opinion that steady progress is being made and that Great Britain, the United States and other leading nations will eventually recognize that further delay is useless.

Two-Thirds Vote Needed.

The resolution proposing an amendment to the Federal constitution under which women would be given the ballot, now awaiting consideration by the Senate, is expected to be passed on at the next session. A two-thirds vote would be necessary for its adoption.

It would require the appoval of sixty-four Senators to make women suffrage operative for submission to the States, so far as the upper branch of Congress is concerned.

The chief handicap preventing woman suffrage lies in the opposition of Southern Congressmen. The votes for the women's movement have made headway in the South. A bitter struggle is in progress in Alabama, where Representative Hobson is seeking the Senatorship, as against Mr. Johnston, on a platform favoring woman suffrage and temperance. Senator Johnston says he will achieve re-election without difficulty.

Have Twenty-Four Votes.

It is figured that these Senators will certainly support the Chamberlain resolution providing for a constitutional amendment permitting women to vote; Ashurst and Smith, of Arizona; Thomas and Shafroth, of Colorado; Borah and Brady, of Idaho; Myers and Walsh, of Montana; Gallinger and Hollis, of New Hampshire; Chamberlain and Lane, of Oregon; Smoot and Sutherland, of Utah; Jones and Poindexter, of Washington; Clark and Warren, of Wyoming; Gore and Owens, of Oklahoma; Ransdell and Thornton, of Louisiana.

This totals but twenty-four of the sixty-four votes necessary in the Senate. In view of recent action in Iowa, Illinois and Kansas it is possible that Senators Cummins, Kenyon, Sherman, Lewis, Bristow and Thompson may be added to the list, making thirty in all. It is claimed that two or three additional votes may come from New England, but no names are suggested.

Modistes Run Out of Ideas, Now Use Century Old Styles

By LaPACONTEUSE

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, June 28.—Having invented new fashions for women year after year without a single stop, it now seems as if the brains of the kings and creators of modes in Rue de la Paix are at last played out and unable to conceive new ideas. As a matter of fact, none of the fashions they have launched during the last two years have made a hit.

It is not long since the harem skirt was talked of by everyone; before that it was the hobble skirt and the directoire period. At the present moment there is a definite tendency to clothe women in the gowns and accessories of a hundred years ago. As yet the tendency is not very far developed; but it is none the less noticeable.

Old Styles Come Back.

To take the gown itself, the draperies can often be seen on dresses of a hundred years ago, and even the plain gowns, particularly evening gowns, have their prototypes at a similar period.

At the Opera Comique, in "La Tosca" the other night, the scene of which is laid in 1800, Floria was wearing a gown which would have attracted not the slightest attention in a drawing room to-day, unless for its beauty.

It was of deep blue silk, with a high waist line. The skirt was absolutely plain and straight, and without any appearance of fulness, although there was ample freedom. The gown had a short train. The decolletage was V shaped, and unadorned.

Tosca, then, could have walked into any Paris drawing room in 1913 and not have attracted a single questioning look. In the day gown she wore in the first act she could have attended a fashionable tea with equal success. The only thing which made the gown different from a modern one was the large flowered pattern, which is not seen nowadays.

Century Old Touches.

There are several other century-old touches in woman's toilette to-day. Several women have been seen carrying the long gold-knobbed walking sticks, held near the top, and tied with a bow of ribbon, which you may see in hundreds of old portraits in almost any gallery. High Louis heels, of course, have been worn for some time, but they fit admirably into the present picture.

Nowadays the old custom of studding them with jewels has been revived. You buy your shoes at one shop and cross the road to a jeweler's to buy heels separately for them. I have seen such heels in the Rue de la Paix at $100 each, and that is not a top price.

Society Women Sound Knell for Mourning

Boston Leaders Declare That Custom of Donning Black for Dead Is Relic of Barbarism.

BOSTON, June 28.—Society women of Boston have answered the question, "How long should society women wear mourning for their dead relatives?" by saying in substance that mourning should not be worn. It was the consensus of opinion that it is a survival of barbarian days.

Mrs. Charles P. Putnam, wife of Dr. Putnam, said, "It seems to me that there is altogether too much mourning worn considering our present enlightened state of civilization. The world is dark enough as it is without women wearing crepe to make it any more gloomy.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Miss Jessie Ackerman, the woman champion globe-trotter, arrived here to-day from an eight years' tour around the world, her eighth globe-girdling trip in twenty years. She has broken the woman's record, with 381,000 miles to her credit.

On this trip she visited fifty-two countries and experienced every kind of ancient and modern travel.

Miss Ackerman said the happiest and most professional women are in Australia.

Valeska Suratt's Beauty Secrets. Removing Superfluous Hair

Miss Valeska Suratt

By Miss Valeska Suratt

Secrets Few People Know. Valeska Suratt, the Famous Self-Made Beauty Actress, Reveals Some of Her Treasured Experiences.

REMOVING superfluous hair is a problem to many women. On the stage the continued use of a hair remover is necessary. Therefore it should be quickly efficacious and absolutely harmless to the skin. The formula I have perfected I believe solves the problem as nothing else has ever done. That is why it has become so tremendously popular. This formula never irritates, reddens or spots the skin. It dissolves the hair as by magic. Try it and you will be convinced. Hundreds of women could beautify themselves to a remarkable degree if they would remove not only the heavy hairs that appear on the face, but the soft down that is so frequently seen on the arms and face. This down is seen more often on those whose complexion is very light or very dark.

Get one ounce of simple sulfo solution. This you can get at the drug store for $1. Apply it with the finger tips to the superfluous hair, keeping the hair moist with it for two or three minutes until it has been dissolved. Then wipe it off with a damp cloth and wash the skin.

* * *

TAUNTED—You can stop your hair falling in a few days' time. My modesty will not prevent me from saying that I am known as the only woman on the American stage who wears no switches, puffs or other hair makeshifts. All the hair I have is my own. I grew it all through my own efforts. Here is the formula which is doing the same for hundreds of my readers and friends as for me:

Mix a half pint of alcohol with a half pint of water. To this add one ounce of beta-quinol. Shake thoroughly and then it will be ready for use. If you prefer, you can use imported bay rum instead of the water and alcohol. The beta-quinol you can get at almost any drug store for not more than 50 cents. This formula should be applied very freely to the scalp after brushing it generously for a few minutes all over. Rub the tonic thoroughly into the scalp with the finger tips.

Any head of hair needs a shampoo to keep the scalp free from scurf, and let the roots breathe. Do not use soap. Use eggol, which you can get at any good drug store for 25c. It has no equal as a shampoo.

* * *

STELLA S.—It is no uncommon thing for a woman to develop her bust several inches in a few weeks' time, naturally and safely, by using the following formula:

In a half pint of cold water, dissolve two ounces ruetone and a half cup of sugar, all well mixed together. Of this, take two teaspoonfuls three or four times a day in a wine glass of water, after your meals. The ruetone will cost you $1 at the drug store.

* * *

ERUPTIONS—I do not wonder that ordinary tonics have not driven away your pimples. Here is a very effective, safe blood cleanser:

Dissolve 12 ounces granulated sugar in one-half pint of water, add 1 ounce of sarsene, and mix the whole together thoroughly, then add more water to make a pint. Sarsene is a liquid which you can get at the drug store by the ounce. Get it in the original package. Take one or two teaspoonfuls of this mixture three or four times a day, with a little water if desired.

* * *

MISS S. R. B.—Blackheads should not be pinched out. It injures and spots the skin. To get rid of them permanently first wash the face with hot water and soap. Then sprinkle some neroxin generously upon a sponge made wet with hot water. Then rub well for a few minutes on the parts of the skin which are affected with blackheads. You should be able to secure the neroxin at any druggist's for 50c.

* * *

UGLY—Every spot, every freckle, every blemish on the skin of the face, hands and arms will vanish by using this mixture:

Let half a pint of water come almost to a boil. Add two tablespoonfuls of glycerine. Keep stirring while adding 1 ounce of zintone, until it is all dissolved. Then let it cool. If the cream is too thick to pour easily from a bottle, thin it down a little with more hot water. The cream will be white and satiny. Hold a wet towel to the face several times for several minutes. Rub this cream on the entire face. Then wipe off with a soft, dry cloth. Then apply again and let it dry on the face. Repeat this again at night. Any good druggist will let you have zintone for about 50c.

* * *

OLD LOOKING—I never have known anything to rejuvenate the skin as splendidly as this. I have seen deep wrinkles leave entirely in a very short time by its use, as well as crows' feet and sagging of cheeks. It will make you look years younger. Pour a half pint of hot water in a bowl and place the bowl in a pan of water over a slow fire. To this add 2 ounces of eptol. Stir until it is dissolved and starts to cream. Then remove from the fire, slowly add two tablespoonfuls of glycerine, and continue to stir until it is cold. Eptol may be obtained for no more than 50 cents at any good drug store. This cream should be applied very liberally and thoroughly rubbed into the skin until it has disappeared. The cream will not grow hair on the face. Keep the cream in an air-tight jar or bottle.

BOXERS DEVELOP THEIR PUNCH BY GRUELING WORK

Owen Moran Trained Years Building Up His Famous Left Hand Wallop.

NEW YORK, June 28.—A sporting writer got Mike Donovan up in a corner last week and learned a lot about the fighting game from the veteran pugilist and teacher of boxing. Donovan is responsible for a lot of the finer points of boxing as they are practiced by modern glove men. He is credited with being the first man to use the shift, the blow that Bob Fitzsimmons practiced till he made it almost as deadly as a rifle bullet when he sent it to a man's jaw or stomach, and Fitz could hit a man so hard with it that many times he sent it to the stomach instead of the jaw fearing if it landed on the jaw he might kill his opponent and it is reported that it was Donovan who encouraged Bob to use it on the body instead of the jaw.

Fighters Are Born.

In his talk the other day, Mike stated that a good tacher could make a boxer, but that a fighter had to be born, that no one could make a fighter. The necessary aggressiveness and courage had to be born in a man.

"But," said the old-time bareknuckle fighter, one of the best boxers himself in the country in his palmy days, "a teacher can improve a fighter's methods, for there is a right and a wrong of fighting.

Hard Practice Needed.

Following up Donovan's thought, there is a lot that the young boxer of to-day rarely knows about the manly art. All the blows used in boxing have been catalogued or named by old-time boxing teachers. All the guards of counter blows that can be used to ward off such blows have also been tagged, so that when a blow or guard is mentioned the man who is familiar with boxing knows exactly what is meant. In teaching boxing a man was shown how to hit a certain blow and then how to defend himself from the same blow when used by an opponent.

Some pugilists always seem to have a fondness for certain punches which they can use better than they can any others in the list. It is also a fact that some boxers seem to be able to defend themselves better from some blows than from others. Blows that a fighter can land on one man he can't get over on some other fellow. Now, when the boxer learns the most effective blows, and how to use them properly, it is up to him to practice such punches till they become like second nature to him.

Moran Develops Punch.

Owen Moran was asked once how he developed such a terrific straight left hand punch, and he replied that often he had punched a bag with his left hand, hitting straight for over an hour and a half at a time. Sometimes he had punched the bag so hard with his left hand that his arm would drop to his side exhausted. Now, any other boxer can develop just as good a punch as Moran if he would first learn to use his left hand straight and then work every day for an hour or two on the bag. There is where the youngster nowadays falls down, for none of them can be gotten to do that sort of thing, and that is why there are no Owen Morans or Jim Driscolls among the young American boxers.

"KNOCKOUT" BROWN TRAINS HARD FOR HOWARD BOUT

Floyd Fitzsimmons, of Benton Harbor, is promoting the show. It will be an open air affair in the ball park adjoining the house of David Field. Roller recently lost two falls to Cutler, after being thrown from the ring, and wants to retrieve himself. He asks Cutler for a side bet.

HAL CHASE PUTS GINGER AND PEP INTO WHITE SOX

Former Yankee Is Playing Star Ball for Callahan's Nine; Works Great With Lord.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 28.—Hal Chase, former Yankee, now a member of the Sox team, has certainly done much to aid the Chicago American League team. Hal has gingered up the bunch in great style and taught the boys some new tricks.

Chase is surely out to make good. There isn't a man on the South Side squad who is displaying more pepper, more ginger, more determination. There isn't one of the Sox players who is more enthusiastic.

Some one said that Chase had remained in New York three years too long. It may have been only one or two. But that fellow had the right angle.

* * *

IT was of Chase that we intended to speak. You know he has made a tremendous hit, not only with Manager Callahan but with every fellow on the team. The stories which preceded the first sacker were none too reassuring. The New York papers were panning him. But when Hal got in action the fellows began to suspect that maybe there might be some defense.

One thing was certain. That was that he wanted to make good. And then another quality asserted itself. That was that he had the ability to make good his ambition. And when desire and ability spur on he's likely to land.

* * *

CHASE and Lord are of a kind. There isn't anything conservative about either. Let them play the game as they will and they'll play hit and run ninety-nine times out of a hundred and kick because the conditions demand a bunt on the last.

Any time that Rath gets on, it's hit and run. And if Lord comes through then the Sox are in a position to score some runs. Because it's pretty much of a cinch that Chase and Lord also will play that game.

It's the dashing game when Lord and Chase work together and they succeed because Hal is credited with being as sure to hit when he once gives the sign as any man in the American League.

Ball Made of Soap Gets Golfer's Goat

BOSTON, MASS., June 28.—Golfers delight in practical jokes and at the head of the list is one that was original with L. A. Hamilton of New York.

Before remade balls were looked upon with scorn by players, small molds were owned by many professionals, so that it was possible with a little heat to remodel or remake a ball after it had been cut or knocked out of shape. Hamilton conceived the idea that he could make a golf ball out of soft soap and get a rise out of one of the bunch.

The ball was formed, allowed to harden, painted, enameled and shellacked to the queen's taste.

It was agreed to allow Lou to tee each ball for the foursome as it started out. Two players whacked out nice long balls with an admiring throng looking on. Then came No. 3 in all his glory. A terrific swing and a thud. Small pieces of soap flew in all directions, evoking plaudits from the gallery.

JOHNSON WILL OUTLAST WOOD, DECLARE EXPERTS

BOSTON, MASS., June 28.—Ever since Joe Wood attracted attention to himself by his splendid work, judges of ball players have predicted a short career for him, for the reason that his style of delivery is decidedly wearing on the pitching arm. That snappy elbow movement which Wood employs, it was predicted, would put him out of the game much sooner than would ordinarily be the case, and this prediction seems to have come true, or Wood is finding it no easy matter to get the stuff on the ball that he formerly had.

On the other hand, it is predicted that Johnson will outlast all the present crop of pitching stars, for there is not the slightest strain on his arm when he works. He has a free, easy motion and gets the full benefit of his entire body behind every delivery he makes. This saves his arm, and good judges believe that because of this Johnson will be a star pitcher for many years.

Dillon Claims 158 Pound Title

Would Give Klaus Return Match

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., June 28.—Jack Dillon, who by virtue of his victory over Frank Klaus last month contends he has clinched not only the American middleweight championship, but the championship of the world, does not intend to rest on his laurels even during the heated summer months. While Dillon asserts that his title to the middleweight crown is clear, he says he will not exercise the champion's prerogative and fight only once in six months.

"I fought my way to the top," said Dillon to-day, "and now that I have gained the championship I'm not going to sit back like a dictator and sidestep matches. Whenever the public demands it I will fight any man of my weight at any time, any place and over any route. That ought to be fair enough. That's where I stand. I never was very strong on this talk stuff. My way of forcing recognition as a championship contender was by fighting every one that was trotted out for me. Now since I have climbed to the top I'm not going to change my policy."

* * *

AND Dillon has backed up this statement by going right ahead with a busy fighting program. He will meet Bill McKinnon, the Eastern middleweight, in a ten-round bout at Indianapolis on July 3, and will take on Jimmy Clabby at a later date.

"These clever boys are just right for Jack," asserts Sam Marburger, manager of Dillon. "I see Clabby is claiming the championship since he beat Eddie McGoorty, out in Montana. Well, that makes it all the better. But before Clabby can grab any such title he will have to defeat the real champion. When Jack beat Frank Klaus he became the world's champion and that's all there is to it. Klaus and his manager have made a big holler, but they can't lay Klaus' defeat to local favoritism. I intend to ignore Klaus' complaint of undue favoritism, because I felt it was too foolish to reply to. More than twelve thousand people saw that contest and at least half of them came from distant points. Not one of the twelve thousand can say Dillon didn't win and by a good margin, and if any one has I haven't heard about it.

* * *

"KLAUS has tried to make capital of the fact that Tom Dillon was the referee, leaving the inference that Tom Dillon is Tommy Dillon, Jack's brother. Now Klaus knows that Jack Dillon's real name is Ernest Cutler Price. Tom Dillon is a business man and a politician who has a mighty good reputation in Indianapolis. It is true that Tom was big enough to break the boxers apart when Klaus held on until the big crowd began to hiss in the third round. Klaus was beaten and he ought to take his medicine. Jack gave him two pounds in weight and even then turned the trick. Now Klaus needn't worry about a return match. Jack will meet him whenever the public demands it and a suitable purse is offered."

WILLARD AND WILLIAMS TO CLASH IN RENO BOUT

SAN FRANCISCO, June 28.—Manager Tom Jones announced last night that he had matched Jess Willard for a 10-round fight with Al Williams of Cleveland, Ohio, at Reno, Nev., July 4.

UMPIRE BUSH EXONERATED.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 28.—Members of the San Francisco Coast League team who charged Umpire Garnett Bush recently with being under the influence of liquor during the game, failed to appear before President A. T. Baum to substantiate their charges.

President Baum gave out a statement to the effect that a thorough investigation had convinced him that the charges were groundless.

BIG MEET AT LOS ANGELES; THOMSON WILL COMPETE

LOS ANGELES, CAL., June 28.—The Amateur Athletic Union all-round championship to be staged at the University of Southern California field on Saturday, July 12, will give Fred Thomson another opportunity to set world figures for this competition. Fred Kelly and Jim Donohue are expected to be among the contestants. Thomson has twice won the all-round championship.

MARANVILLE IS CONFIDENT.

BOSTON, MASS., June 28.—Little Maranville, the Boston shortstop, is a fighter from the head waters. He believes the Braves can beat any team in the league. Manager Stallings is not doing anything to discourage this belief of his great shortstop.

St. Louis Browns Real Iconoclasts

WHEN the St. Louis Browns trimmed the Philadelphia Athletics, 5 to 2, and ended the winning streak of the Mackites, which totalled fifteen successive triumphs, another chapter was added to the sensational feats in breaking records which has featured the American League for the past several years.

Not a first division team since 1908, still the Browns have compiled a peculiar record of being able to wreck records of the enemy, and stopping the athletics brings to memory a few of the incidents which have happened. Look at this list:

In 1908 beat the Naps in the game that prevented Cleveland from winning the pennant and allowed the Tigers to win by half a game.

In 1910 took five out of eight games in a series from the Tigers and put Detroit out of the pennant race.

In 1910 beat Southpaw Krause, who had started with ten successive victories.

In 1912 beat Walter Johnson when the star had won sixteen in a row and was after Marquard's record of nineteen.

In 1913 stopped the Naps after they had won ten straight.

In 1913 scored on Walter Johnson after he pitched fifty-six successive scoreless innings.

In 1913 beat the Athletics after they won fifteen stright.

Not a team of record-breakers themselves, but a breaker of almost all records, the Browns have caused havoc and fear among the teams who are in the way of becoming famous in the dope book of baseball.

FOOD FOR SPORT FANS

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

WRESTLING STILL.

Fake, fake, fake,
While the common folk pay to see,
And I would that my tongue could utter
The thoughts that arise in me.

Oh, well for the Turkish lad
As he gobbles his curds and whey;
He knows in the nation across the sea
He will gather the kale some day.

And the stately ship rolls on
Till it pauses at Quarantine,
And they slip the noose and the Turk gets loose
In the chase of the long, long green.

Fake, fake, fake,
And they do it with ghoulish glee,
And away they sail with a bunch of kale
From the land of the brave and free.

For approximately one buck per throw, the citizens of Benton Harbor, Mich., will celebrate the Fourth by watching Doc Roller and Charlie Cutler, two of the world's keenest business men, in the act of making money.

Hamid Kalla Pasha, the Teutonic Turk, is making a hit in the East, demonstrating that P. T. Barnum was not a rummy.

One reads in the newspapers that Connie Mack will hand a regular outfielder to Frank Chance. The said transaction will take place when the said Frank Chance is handed some regular money by the gent who once owned him.

One might be interested in the report that Chicago beat St. Louis in a motorcycle race if one were connected with the Coroner's office.

We note that another person has attempted to swim the English Channel and failed. The reason we noted it is that it reminded us of our attempts to stick the barkeep in a dice game.

Once upon a time baseball was our national pastime. But that was before our citizens began taking bichloride of mercury by mistake.

THE NATIONAL PASTIME.

My pastime, 'tis of thee,
Sweet game of sluggery,
Of thee I sing.
Game where the pitchers clout
The shortstops on the snout
And knock each other out
With hook and swing.

I love the gladsome sight
Of ath-a-letes who smite
The horsehide ball,
But though the hitting fills
My soul with happy thrills,
I love the boxing mills

ST. PAUL, June 28.—St. Paul probably will withdraw from the Northern League, according to an announcement by H. T. Conrad, owner of the local team.

Bonehead Playing Spoils Good Athletes

DENVER, June 28.—The "solid ivory" seems to keep more players from reaching great distinction on the ball field than anything else. We want no better example of this than "Ping" Bodie of the White Sox. He is one of the greatest natural hitters in the game, but he spoils it all by constantly pulling "bonehead" plays.

It is because of this that Manager Callahan has him warming the bench two-thirds of the season. In a recent game in New York Bodie was caught twice "flat-footed." With the slightest use of his think tank he would have scored two runs instead of being put out twice.

What thoughts can be flitting through the domes of these players when they are on the base lines? Bodie must be getting a glimpse of an aviation meet somewhere off in the distant regions. Surely his mind is miles away from the game in which he is engaged.

Is it any wonder that players like Ty Cobb, Wagner, Eddie Collins, Johnny Evers, Larry Doyle, Tris Speaker and others we could mention are at the top of their profession? Not a bit of it. They use brains.

THOMPSON IS BACK AGAIN; TO MEET O'NEIL ON JULY 4

HAMMOND, IND., June 28.—"Cyclone" Johnny Thompson, the veteran ringman, will enter the ring for the first time in over a year when he takes on Tom O'Neil in a ten-round set-to here on July 4. O'Neil is one of the toughest middleweights around these parts and is expected to give Thompson a tough argument.

Both boys are already down to hard work for the mill. The winner has been promised a match with Jimmy Clabby. They have agreed to fight at catchweights.

The Biggest Motor Truck Order Ever Placed

80 Alcos for the U. S. Mail—A $225,000 Sale

THE Postal Transfer Service, Inc. has just placed the largest order for motor trucks on record—an order for 80 Alco trucks to haul U. S. mail—a sale approximating $225,000.

This marks the greatest tribute ever paid to any motor truck. For the contract was awarded to the Alco over leading makes of motor trucks, gasoline and electric, after exacting tests by Government inspectors.

Consider for a moment these facts:

These 80 Alco trucks in a year will be required to cover 1,000,000 miles; to haul 1,550,000 tons—157,680,000 cubic feet—of United States postal matter. End against end, this fleet of 80 Alco trucks extends 1310 feet—a quarter of a mile.

Great are the proportions of these figures. But more important is the nature of the service. It is day in and day out, running on railroad schedule, making trains, operating nights as well as days—24 hours a day at times—over all sorts of roads, in the sizzling heat of summer, in the winter blizzards—and always the necessity of clocklike regularity.

None but a superior truck could qualify for tasks such as these.

The Alco truck is no experiment in this type of service—it has been proven in the service of express companies. The American Express Company has 86, the Long Island Express 20 and so on.

And no type of duty is more severe than express service. Further, it is only natural that the verdict should fall to a product of the American Locomotive Company. 51,000 of its locomotives have hauled you, your families, the things you eat and things you wear—safely and on time; in high altitudes; in low altitudes; and in many latitudes.

This is going to be a hot summer. It will cause many millions of dollars loss in horse flesh. Better anticipate by looking into Alco trucks for your business.

KID ELBERFELD PROVES TO BE SHARP TRADER

Club Cost Little Money but It Is Making Better Fight for Rag Than Some Which Cost More.

CHATTANOOGA, June 28.—As an humble, unlettered guy once remarked, "it's a long lane that ain't got no turn in it."

For three years Chattanooga magnates have rolled out money into the strong boxes of other magnates in great sickening cloudbursts.

The turn of the lane has come this year.

Kid Elberfeld has tried out a world of ball players. Those who are acquainted with the facts in each deal might think from the number that the Chattanooga club had spent a small fortune for playing material. Not that the club hasn't been willing, and it has spent more than the average, but the player business has been well manipulated. Following is a list of the players "inherited" by the Kid and those whom he has purchased or signed for trial:

Inherited.

Pitchers—More, Chappelle, Coveleskie, Ware, Allen, Grover.
Catchers—Hannah, Noyes, Giddo.
First Baseman—Coyle.
Second Baseman—Jordan.
Outfielders — Tutweiler, Cruise, Gray, Wasem.
Total—Thirteen.
Some bunch to inherit, wasn't it?

Purchased or Signed.

Pitchers—Stark, Troy, Golden, Merchant, Grimes, Howell, Sommers, Dygert.
Catchers—Street, Moran, Breaux, Fitzgerald.
Second Baseman—Flick.
Third Basemen—Gillespie, Harbison, Graff.
Outfielders—King, Massey, Elston, Johnson, Williams, Thrasher, Betcher.
Total—Twenty-threee.

Omitting Tutweiler, Gray, Wasem and Allen, who were released in the winter, the Kid has tried 32 men in all for the Chattanooga team. Twenty-three of these were purchased, signed or traded for. That sounds like a whole lot of money spent, doesn't it? But 'tis not so.

* * *

STARK cost the draft price from a Class D League and was sold for not more than $150 under that, he is still Chattanooga property. Troy cost nothing, going back to Detroit. Same for Golden, to St. Louis Nationals. Merchant cost what Stark did and was similarly disposed of to Evansville. Grimes was sent down by Detroit, as was Howell, who was picked up from the college diamonds by a Detroit scout. Dygert was a free agent.

The pitching staff cost less than $2,000. And More brought $1,000, Chappelle $500, Ware $250, while Grover is still the property of the club. That doesn't sound like a big investment, does it?

We are not possessed of the figures in the purchase of Street, Elston and Gillespie from Providence; inasmuch as they all made good the money wasn't wasted and it was no fault of managerial judgment that Gillespie was "beaned" out of the league.

Of the other catchers tried out, Giddo still belongs to the club. Moran was picked up as a free agent. Breaux cost $500 and Fitzgerald a reasonable amount from Providence. Hannah brought a nominal sum from Spokane.

* * *

CARL FLICK set the club back $1,500. We hardly think there'll be the slightest whisper that this was money wasted. Graff will go back to the Browns this fall, costing little more than "rent."

The club came near making one disastrous blunder in paying out $1,500 for Harbison, but they more than atoned for it when they traded Harbison for Johnson.

In the outfield, King virtually came to the club for Eddie Noyes and a small amount, said to be about $750. Noyes was traded to Nashville for Storch, Storch and cash to Houston for Forsythe and the latter to Topeka for King. Elston was bought in the "Big Three" deal from Providence. Williams was bought from Buffalo for a small amount, said to be $750, which was certainly money well spent. Both Betcher and Thrasher came on trial and neither cost the club anything at all.

From all this dickering, and in spite of the fact that men touted to be stars, Kid Elberfeld has developed a ball club that is bidding for the Southern League pennant, and at a cost at least 25 per cent less than that of the 1910, 1911 or 1912 aggregations.

CHANCE WOULD QUIT IF HIS HEALTH GAVE WAY

NEW YORK, June 28.—Frank Chance will make good with the New York Yankees if his health doesn't go back on him.

Chance is no quitter. He undertook a big task in New York, but he'll get away with it unless his nervous system fails him. The least little thing would upset him last fall. They say he is doing better this year. He should stick with the Yanks and produce a winning club next year. If his health bothers him, however, he'll jump the club overnight and go back to his orange ranch in California.

JIM M'GUIRE FAILS.

STOCKTON, CAL., June 28.—James McGuire, scouting for the Detroit American League team, to-day failed in an attempt to induce the Stockton team, of the California League, to part with Shortstop Butler and Outfielder Wilhoit. McGuire offered $8,000 for the two players.

Yes, but Where Can They Find Such a Pill? :: :: :: :: :: By 'Bud' Fisher

MUTT and JEFF COLUMN

MANAGER BILLY SMITH received a letter from a young ball player who wanted a job. The young applicant wrote such a nice letter that Smith was impressed and answered it.

"You forgot to tell me in what position you play," wrote Manager Smith. "Let me know."

The applicant replied immediately, and in his letter enclosed a photograph of himself posed at second base ready to receive a grounder.

"You can see from the enclosed photo," he explained, "that I play in a stooping position."

FASHIONABLE England, especially that part which goes in for outdoor sports, is reeling and staggering to-day under the weight of another American innovation. One of the American competitors in the open golf championship at Hoy lake appeared on the links before a fashionable gallery in his shirt sleeves and the shock was so staggering that a couple of venerable colonels nearly dropped the teacups from which they were drinking.

Letters are being written to the press, sartorial experts are being interviewed, and the suffragette outrages are nearly forgotten for the time being.

WE are in receipt of the following, interesting article from the well-known Caucasian expectancy, Mr. Daniel Dixon, of Ty Ty, Ga.:

Mr. Farnsworth, Sportin Editor Sunday American:

I have cut out rowing a boat after findin out about draggin that anker all day along the bottom of the Chattahoochee River, no wonder my hands was calluced, my trainer said that it was all a mistake but I said no more rowin for mine. I also cut out the Pluto water, the city water may not agree with me but if I stick to that pluto stuff there would be no Bitin Dan at the next fite, so my trainer has changed to hun yada water and I have been takin it for three days now but I can't see much change for the better, it looks like water all right but it dont act like it, and I aint crazy over the vegetable diet either I got to have somethin more solid as I am near starved to death, I already lost fifteen pounds and I told my trainer that I must have more to eat if I am to do such hard trainin.

with my other work I run fifteen miles every morning now and I am no chickin hearted guy but honestly mr Farnsworth I cant stand it on the stuff I am eatin and drinkin, I'll stick it out this week and if my new trainer dont give something to eat that is more solid it's a new manager for me. I got to new sparrin partners named Ernie Goat and Billy Lamm. I don't know how long they will last caws they aint very husky. I heard that CyClops Sam is helpin train Gyp the Gouger for his fite with me, he is trainin him how to avoid my feet.

Sam says that my big feet was the caws of his loosing his fite with me, he wants another chance with me.

My injunctions suits aint come of yet but it looks as though I was goin to beat all these bum lawyers caws my lawyer tells me that no jury in the world will believe that I ever ate any $40. worth of beans in so short a time, or drank any $10 worth of slippery elm tea, he said it would kill any man to do it, it perty near killed me at that but never again.

By the way Bud is back on the police force, (Bud is the force) in Joshua, they got bud to sign the pledge and Judge Scriby put him back, dont pay any atention to any letters you may get from my folks caws they are dead set on my fitin and are doin all they can to stop my fitin, they are afraid that i will get my eyes put out, there will be some putin out but it will be Gyp that goes out.

yours truly,
BITIN DAN DIXON,

THEY were talking about hurdling.

"Did you ever see a horse jump five feet over a fence?" asked Joe Agler.

"I've seen 'em jump four feet over," replied Whitey Alperman. "I didn't know that a horse ever had five."

BASEBALL very nearly lost Frank Chance. The peerless leader's first leanings were toward the ring, and in his early day he was a noted amateur.

There came to Fresno a giant from the Middle West. He weighed about 220. He had a record as a scrapper and on the strength of it was made a constable. He had hardly gotten into town before Frank's friends got busy with a challenge. A purse was made up and the bout arranged.

The big constable made Chance look like a baby. But they mixed it hard from the gong and for four rounds the milling was fierce and even.

In the fifth the constable swung for the jaw and missed. Frank shot in one that took his opponent on the point of the jaw. Nobody counted. The referee yelled for a doctor and the physician, the referee and the second worked two hours bringing Mr. Constable to. When the constable showed signs of life and was dragged from the ring, Chance quit the boxing game.

WOULD-be betters who lose the peanuts on plays and plays might have better luck by taking a tip from the bookies in Pittsburg and Boston and giving the following odds:

Even money that the winning team makes as many runs in one inning as the loser does in all nine.

Even money that a runner does not score after reaching third with only one out.

Two to one that a runner does not score from second when he reaches there with one out.

Three to one that an ordinary batter does not get to first.

Two to one that Cobb, Wagner, Jackson, Baker, Meyers and batters of that class do not get to first in one time at bat.

Two to one that a team does not score in any given inning. This price sometimes goes as high as four to one, according to the pitcher.

GERMANY Schaefer rises to remark that opposing clubs which believe Ty Cobb has lost his throwing arm completely will some day wake up and find that the Georgia Peach has been slipping somebody a surprise package.

"It is true that Cobb's arm is not as strong now as it was four or five years ago, but Ty can still use it to take off his hat or handle a soup spoon," said Schaefer.

"I have watched him this season. Cobb just loops the ball in from the outfield, giving everybody the impression that he cannot throw farther than second base," he added.

"I think Ty is just figuring on upsetting a lot of dope. He wants to give opposing teams the idea that he cannot throw a lick, and is carefully nursing that old arm of his along, so that by the time we run into hot weather he will be able to cut loose."

ANDY McSwatson is working for Karl Brittain of the City Engineer Department. Yesterday Brittain noticed a street workman leaving an unsightly pile of dirt and gravel at the side of the road. "Come, now, you can't leave that heap there!"

"Well, I've no place to put it," said the workman.

"You can't leave it there!" persisted Mr. Brittain.

"What'll I do with it then?" asked the workman, sullenly.

"Do with it!" echoed Karl. "Dig a hole in the road, to be sure, man, and bury it!"

"TWO gentlemen entered a near beer headquarters and they could not agree as to who should treat," explains Jim Fuller. "To decide the argument they tossed a coin—naturally one of them lost and paid. The next day they got into a discussion as to who had bought the last drink, and in the course of the argument they made a wager, one contending that the man who won the toss was the purchaser, and the other contending that the loser had bought. Now, who in your opinion bought the drink—the man who lost and paid or the man who won?"

WITH two men on the bases and the star batter at the plate, an unknown minister attempted to interrupt a Sunday baseball game in Denver last week.

The minister stepped to the plate and, raising his hands in the air, started to sing a hymn. The umpire called for the continuance of the game. The ball sped from the pitcher's hand, a hit was made and the runner from third slid over the home plate between the minister's legs.

MACKMEN STEAL SIGNALS, SAYS BIRMINGHAM

Naps' Leader Is Latest to Accuse Connie Mack of Getting Other Teams' Signs.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 28.—Manager Joe Birmingham, of Naps, is the latest person to tell why the Athletics are leading the American League. "Connie Mack and his men have stolen the opposing team's signs," says Birmy. All of which puts him in bad with all lovers of clean sports. The chances are that the Athletics haven't stolen any club's signs; neither have they played unfair in any way. They are winning games solely on their merits and deserve all the honor that goes with victory. The Mackmen have proved themselves to be the class in the junior organization, and it's about 10 to 1 bet now that they will play in the world's series next fall.

Many fans believe that not only will the Athletics come back after a year's reversal of form, but that their opponents next October will be none other than the Giants. If such is the case it will be the third time that McGraw and Mack have locked horns in a world's series. The count to date stands even, McGraw beating Connie worse than six-love back in 1905 and Mack gaining the upper hand in 1911 nearly as easily.

* * *

ONE player on the Athletics who is seldom mentioned in connection with the team's success is nevertheless one of the strongest factors of that aggregation. He is Amos Strunk, the speedy outfielder of the Mackmen. Strunk has developed remarkably since last season, and he is today one of the most valuable men Mack has on his team. Not only is he one of the greatest fielders in the league, but he is a fast base runner and is hitting at a .340 clip this season. Strunk gets little credit for the important part he has played in the success of his team. He is seldom mentioned as having distinguished himself, and yet he has done as much as any other member of the team to make possible its remarkable winning streak. On any other team Strunk would be a sensation, but he is lost among the numerous stars which Mack has.

* * *

IT is doubtful if there is another instance in baseball where a player has developed as fast as he. Two years ago Strunk was an ordinary player, who was in the game but seldom. Mack farmed him out a whole season to Milwaukee, and it was while there that Strunk developed into a real star.

Cheney Tells How to Fool Wagner

Says Hans is Weak on Fast Ball

CHICAGO, ILL., June 28.—It is time for the pitchers of the National League to sit up, take notice and listen. Larry Cheney, the star twirler of the Chicago Cub team, reveals a most astonishing and important fact, one that not even the wonderful Christy Mathewson has disclosed since he started hurling in the parent major league organization.

It is information concerning the batting of Hans Wagner, of Pittsburg, who has the remarkable average of .324 for seventeen consecutive years. Cheney says the "flying Dutchman," as he is sometimes called, has a weakness at the plate, which is something no other pitcher has dared to venture since Wagner began his career in the National League.

Mathewson and Mordecai Brown, two of the great flingers of the game, have declared that the Pittsburg slugger is one of the most puzzling batters to pitch to, and particularly in a pinch, because of his ability to hit a curve as well as a fast ball. These two stars have worked hook balls to death trying to fool Wagner.

Brown acknowledged only last winter that most of his success in deceiving the Pirate shortstop was due to his sharp-breaking curve ball, which he invariably broke over the outside corner of the plate. He used this bender in this way because Wagner stands on the outer edge of the batter's box and steps into a curve that is pitched to break toward him or over the plate. Mathewson, like Brown, has depended on his fadeaway ball when facing the shortstop.

Fast Ball Against Wagner.

Cheney according to his own "dope," practically abandons his twister while Wagner is at the plate. Of course he resorts to his moist ball considerably, but his strongest point of deception against the famous walloper of extra base hits is his fast ball. Cheney mingles it discreetly with the rest of his assortment. In addition to giving the information that Wagner has a weakness, Cheney also declares that he is easily fooled and crossed after he has two strikes called on him.

"I have fooled Wagner time and again on that fast ball," said Cheney. "As long as I have been pitching against him he has been easy for me. I do not think he secured more than one hit off me all last season, and I appeared in eight games against the Pirates. I do not mean to say that he is a mark at the plate, for he is far from being one, but what I mean is this: I have prevented Wagner from fattening his average off me just through my ability to cross him with a fast ball.

"When a pitcher gets two strikes on him he always looks for that curve and generally is set to wallop it. I discovered that in the first game I pitched against him. I believe he expects a curve most of the time because he is under the impression the twirlers believe that is his weakness. I struck him out several times with that fast ball inside and on several occasions had him take it.

Must Change Pace.

"It would not do to shoot your speed at him all the time, for he would be knocking rome runs over the left field fences. And it would not do to pitch curves to him either, for he hits into every field.

"In pitching to Wagner a fellow has to think all the time and try to outguess him. Still, I think him weak on a fast ball inside on account of the way he steps toward the plate when he swings. You remember 'King' Cole achieved a lot of fame in 1911 when he fanned Wagner three times in one game in Chicago. After the contest Joe Tinker asked him what he handed to Hans, and he said he did not know, but I learned from Archer that Cole had set him down on that fast one inside."

International Race Meeting Suggested

Plan Outlined for Bringing Best Horses of Europe and America Together.

NEW YORK, June 28.—The success which attended the recent international polo matches suggested to horsemen that racing and trotting might be the mediums for bringing together the chosen representatives of the Old World and the New in somewhat similar contests.

Who can estimate the benefit to horse racing and horse breeding which might follow a series of international matches of like importance, if they could be arranged, for the best runners and the best trotters of Europe and America, perhaps ridden or driven by amateurs?

The great sectional matches between the North and the South which marked the beginning and the end of a golden era on the running turf in America afford an indication of what might be expected.

The whole country was ablaze with interest and excitement when Eclipse and Henry met in 1823 on Long Island. The race continued to be an absorbing subject of discussion for years after it was run, and led to the building of new tracks, the establishment of new studs and the advent of new supporters and patrons of the turf throughout all sections of the country.

This is another Goodrich Year

Goodrich Unit Molded Tires have never had a "bad" season.

Year in and year out, since the automobile came into use and we made the first American clincher tire, they have more than satisfied every user with their long, uniform wear and their remarkably resilient qualities which increase the comfort and luxury of motoring.

Goodrich Tires are an added value and advantage to your car.

With Goodrich branches, service stations and dealers located everywhere the user of Goodrich Tires knows he will always be taken care of.

It is the unit molding of Goodrich Tires that adds wear to the purest rubber, compounded as our 43 years of experience proves is the best way to give it durability and toughness and to hold its resiliency and life. Each Goodrich Tire is made and molded as a unit. The thick, tough tread being actually of the tire and not simply on it, naturally does not peel or slip. The whole tire, being an integral structure, naturally wears long and uniformly because the life of the rubber has not been cooked out by extra vulcanization.

Your tire dealer will supply you with whatever style of Goodrich Tire is best for your needs, and we will send you, for the asking, our free folders which tell you how to get the best service from your tires.

Plant Breeding Wonders Teach Farmers of South Importance Of Care in the Selection of Seed

Scientists of Georgia Are Among Modern Wizards Who Are Redirecting Plant Life Into Interesting and More Profitable Processes—Many Yields Are Doubled.

By CHARLES A. WHITTLE.
Georgia State College of Agriculture.

Since Burbank has made blackberries white, plums without stones, cactus without spines, briers without prickles, apples without seeds, conferred fragrance where none belonged, changed flavor and increased sizes and yields; since Nilsson has enlarged the heads, strengthened the straw and rendered oats, wheat and barley resistant to disease; since numerous plant breeders have greatly increased the yielding quality of corn, cotton, etc., no intelligent farmer should longer be unmindful of the pedigree of his plants.

Plants can be bred up just as animals. Some of the very same laws of heredity apply in both. To the observing, it has always been a wonder how so many varieties of corn, wheat, oats, cotton and other plants came to exist. Probably it will always be a wonder, for after all the origin of species is inexplicable except on the hypothesis that a supreme intelligence just made it that way.

No Distinct Species Produced.

Scientists have tried to explain the origin of species and the existence of varieties by saying that they were brought about by mutation or sports—that is, by sudden, sportive changes whereby a plant got out of the groove of its native ways. But why the plant had the sportive inclination and why it should attain distinct characteristics by reason of the same remains a mystery.

No one has ever produced a distinct species and no one has ever witnessed the production of one. All that has apparently been observed is the results of crossing different species and varieties.

At any rate it is certain that there are many distinct species in the world which have fixed habits and produce faithfully after their kind with only limited variations. Cross-breeding alone has been found the only effective method for changing a variety. After the crossing has been done if care is not taken to maintain it, the variety splits up and reverts to its original components.

Frobers into the deep things of science formerly believed with Darwin that the origin of species was far back and that it took vast centuries of natural selection and a survival of the fittest to produce species and create a change in a variety. But now Prof. Burbank accomplishes in a summer what Darwin thought would take a millennium.

Only Accidental Crossings.

What was formerly considered the mysterious mutations are after all only accidental crossings of cross-breedings. The head of wheat that grew up amongst its brethren and became larger and different was formerly thought to be a sudden mysterious mutation, but now it is certain that most of these so-called mutations have resulted from a sportive wind or a sportive insect which brought to the flower the fertilizing pollen from a neighboring field, perhaps from another variety of the same kind of grain, perhaps from a different species.

It is the introduction of a strange breed that excited the plant to extra production. Thereby has been unfolded a wonderful secret looking to increasing the harvests.

After many years of painstaking experiments in selection and trying to average up a whole field of grain to a little higher each year, and after pursuing other wrong quests, plant breeders everywhere are now giving more attention to cross-breeding of varieties than to any other one thing.

In this Burbank has led the world, and, more than any one else, has advanced the new movement of cross-breeding. In fact, very little can be said to have been accomplished in improving plant life by man save by this method.

Advises Planting Hybrid.

Enough has been discovered about the benefits of cross-breeding to have induced the United States Bureau of Agriculture to advise planting the hybrid for the field crop; that is, to produce a single crop. A hybrid, of course, is a cross between two varieties. It has been long recognized as a principle that the mixture of varieties adds at least temporary strength and development to the offspring. Burbank has developed from two species of the English walnut a tree of extraordinary size and productivity.

But while the hybrid crop is good, the hybrid seeds are not. As previously indicated there is a strong tendency for the hybrid to split up and revert to original types. Good producing seed must be obtained in another way. The seed stock must be kept pure and strong. It can be kept pure by keeping it removed from similar crops. It can be kept strong by selecting only the best seed.

The farmer must, therefore, return to the original strain each year to obtain a foundation for a good yield. It is for this reason that the plant breeder maintains his well cared for seed plats where only the pure strain is developed. It is to these plats he must go each year to get a potentially strong seed to mix with another potentially strong seed from another such plat to obtain a heavy yielding hybrid.

Doubtless many farmers have wondered why they have not obtained big yields by planting seed obtained from a field of heavy yielding grain. The explanation is that the seed taken from the field were hybrids. What he actually gets from hybrid seed, in the way of a variety of corn, is doubtless surprising to him.

Farmer Can Grow Pure Seed.

It is any easy matter for a farmer to grow his own seed, and thus be sure that he is not getting a weak hybrid. Having obtained what can be reasonably expected to be a pure strain, he should pursue the plant-to-row method—that is, plant each row in his seed plat from grain obtained from a single ear or head.

Before planting he should be sure that he is putting into the ground seeds that are vigorous. He can determine this by conducting germinating tests. Taking grains from a selected ear, he can plant these in a sand box, apply moisture and observe how many of the seed planted germinate. If nearly 100 per cent of the grains germinate, the ear is not discarded. Only those showing the best germination should be reserved to plant in the seed plat. Some breeders go further and investigate the rootlets that first develop and discard even good germinating ears that do not also show good root development.

Having ascertained which are the good ears, the next step of the seed breeder is to plant each ear to a row so as to keep check on the history and accomplishment of each ear. All this can be done with little trouble by the farmer. Breeders favor detasseling every other stalk of corn in a breeding plat before it has pollenized itself.

Other Plant as Fertilizer.

This leaves the stalk to be fertilized by another plant, which is considered to make for a stronger breed than when self-fertilized. When the gathering time comes only those ears which have grown on the detasseled stalks are taekn for seed to be used in planting the seed plat the next year. The ears from such stalks which are not reserved for future seed plats, together with those from the stalks not detasseled, can be planted in the field. This, of course, applies to corn, and no such close manipulation can be worked with other grains, but the same general principles apply. The main point is to take care that the selected strains of corn, wheat, oats or whatever else are kept put and free from the invasion of rovers and that the strain is kept as strong as possible by seed selection, which includes the germination test.

An interesting development in corn breeeding which has been pursued by Professor P. O. Vanattar, of the Georgia State College of Agriculture is that which has to do with "suckers" or "stools" on corn. Instead of discarding corn with "suckers" he has developed and watched it. His conclusions are that corn that suckers is the corn that germinates strongest, produces the biggest yield, has the best stover, stands strongest against winds; in fact, is the best corn. Breeders generally have overlooked this fact.

Farmer Benefits From Science.

These and other important contributions are being constantly made to the aggregate of knowledge of how to enlarge the yields of not only corn, but other crops. It is a part which the scientists and experimenter can do for the benefit of the farmer, giving the farmer the fruits of his study in the shape of increased harvests.

No field of agricultural work is fraught with more fascination and wonder than this of plant breeding, and, without doubt, some marvelous discoveries will be made in the next few years which will not only set botanists agog, but will rejoice a whole world that other discoveries have been made whereby two stalks can be grown where one has heretofore been grown.

The history of plant development reads like romance, but back of it, of course, was long years of careful toil that was unromantic enough. As many as 100 years ago plants that were extra well developed were taken from the field and propagated carefully and were gradually developed into varieties which became broadly adopted instead of old varieties, because of their greater yielding power.

Reverted to Old Types.

While occasionally something was accomplished by such methods in after years, in the main there was disappointment, for the reason that the exceptional plants were hybrids and soon reverted to original types.

In Germany and Sweden the investigators began on the Darwinian basis and tried to improve by selecting a number of best plants, sowing them together and attempting to advance the whole. It was known as mass selection. Finally Dr. Hjalmar Nilsson, of Sweden, fell upon the single plant or ear-to-row as the basis for establishing pure breeds and maintaining the purity. Since then the ear or the single head has been the basis of all successful breeding.

One of the points emphasized in the boys' corn club work is seed selection. What has been learned from these various seed-breeding experiments the world over the Government and the educational authorities of the State carry to the boys in practical, simple form. The boys are told how to determine the best seed.

Without planting strong seed, of course, the corn-club boy is not in the race.

Seed Selection Necessary.

Such as have been careless about selecting good seed can never win though he have the richest land and put on it all the fertilizer that can possibly be used. Nothing can make up for the shortage inhering in the nature of the seed itself.

In view of this, how important it is that one knows that he is dealing with a reliable firm when he buys from a seed house. If the firm is honest but ignorant, how unfortunate for the buyer!

One of these days no person will be permitted to grow and market seeds who has not first passed a rigid examination to determine whether or not he knows how to produce good seed, and, second, no seed will be permitted to be sold the quality of which is not known to be backed by right cultivation and care. Of course, there is no way of knowing how much the loss to the farmer annually occurs by reason of having been sold poor seed when he had a right to expect good seed.

When the difference in the yield of good seed and bad is equal to 50 per cent, as it often is, what a public calamity! Poor seed needs not only to be guarded against for the sake of the planter, but for the public at large, which looks to the planter for a food supply.

Plants Bred From Disease.

Not only are seed to be provided which are high in yielding quality, but one of the very interesting features of plant improvement is that the better the plant the more it resists plant disease and insect dangers. Professor S. M. Bain, of the University of Tennessee, found that red clover had come to be almost a complete failure in that State, by reason of a disease known as anthracnose of clover.

Starting with a few plants in a patch that had resisted the disease, he bred from these. Each season he subjected the patch to the disease, even to spraying the plants with the spores of the disease, saving out of each patch those that resisted the disease. Thus each year he increased his disease resistant seed until now it is being grown quite widely over the State.

A similar work has been done with reference to anthracnose in cotton by Professor E. J. H. DeLoach, director of the State Experiment Station of Georgia. A similar work is being done with reference to black root and wilt by Professor E. L. Worsham, State Entomologist of Georgia. In other lines, but by the same process, plants are being bred away from disease by right selection.

What with plant breeding and plant selection, no magician will have ever worked greater wonders than the men who are taking care of the plant life of the country.

These modern wizards are men whom farmers sometimes are inclined to look upon as bookworms, theorists, potterers, impractical adventurers; but it is these who are doing more farming than the farmer, who create bigger crops than anybody else, who save the plants from greatest loss.

Needs Legislative Support.

When the Legislatures are called upon for an appropriation for these workers in the colleges and laboratories, these lawmaking bodies will not be asked for money that will go further toward conferring real public welfare. In the South where the diversification of farming is the paramount issue and where there is a constant thirst for information as to how to do this and that other thing to get out of the single crop bondage and the afflictions of the boll weevil, it would be no less than a shame not to provide all the men and means necessary to render the required assistance; also to provide for carrying on the experiments and investigations for soil and plant improvement, and for training young men for agricultural leadership at the institutions of learning devoted to the cause.

FARMERS USING FLOOD WATERS TO MAKE MONEY

Tax Exemption Granted On Each Dam Built For Irrigation—Many Acres Corn Land Added.

TOPEKA, June 28.—Western Kansas has discovered that 80 per cent of the water that falls in that section runs away and does no good. As Kansas usually does when something needs fixing, the western Kansas farmers have decided to stop this waste. Thousands of artificial lakes, from one to five and ten acres in extent, are being built to hold this waste water.

It is estimated by the Kansas Agricultural College that 20,000 acres will be covered with water in western Kansas this summer, the water to be used in irrigation during the hot months, when the rains do not come.

Kansas is a rolling prairie, and it is cut up with thousands of miles of gullies. As soon as the water was carried away and into the streams the gullies became dry.

Thousands of these gullies have been dammed by the farmers this year, and hundreds have planted small fields of corn just below these dams on ground that never grew a stalk of corn before.

July and August often pass without a single drop of rain falling in the western part of the State, and those are the months when the corn matures.

Many farmers have built from two to five dams. They can irrigate with little or no expense, as the ground is rolling enough for the water to be carried to the fields without pumping and without elaborate engineering problems.

Prizes Are Offered.

Otis L. Benton, a banker at Oberlin, and J. C. Hooper, a banker at Ness City, offered prizes to the farmers who built the dams and who raised the best crops by irrigation. Both are big landowners, and they have constructed several hundred dams on their own lands and on the lands owned by Eastern people, but leased to them for farming.

They obtained from the Kansas Legislature a tax exemption on lands where the flood waters are conserved. For every dam built on a farm, half the tax on twenty acres is returned to the farmer by the county.

Hail Does Damage To Georgia Tobacco

Fancy Grades Reported Hurt—Holes in Leaves Cut Values—Crop 2,000,000 Pounds Yearly.

Hail has done considerable damage to the tobacco crop in South Georgia, according to advices received by the Swint-Davis Leaf Tobacco Company.

Hail is the bane of the tobacco planter who produces fancy grades. Tiny holes in the leaves now are made larger as the plant grows, and at marketing time it may be found that the leaves around the bud, from which come the finest wrappers, have been ruined except for fillers.

In a forty-mile belt on both sides of the Georgia-Florida line, perhaps 2,000,000 pounds of cigar wrappers are grown yearly. Fine wrappers bring 85 cents per pound to the farmer, while filler tobacco is worth perhaps 12 cents.

INDIANA HUCKSTER DIES, LEAVING $30,000 ESTATE

TERRE HAUTE, IND., June 28.—William E. Stevenson, a huckster, who died last week, left an estate of $30,000, which his widow says was accumulated by selling vegetables to residents of the city. She says he arose at 2 o'clock in the morning to be early in market row to buy from farmers. He was known by his customers for his punctuality.

POULTRY

Too ambitious start is greatest danger to the poultry raiser. Success with chicken farming can only be attained by hard, systematic work and every care for minute detail. Thoroughbred stock is necessary.

By Judge F. J. MARSHALL.

Hundreds of people in all parts of the country are beginning to take up the breeding of poultry in earnest. They are easy to locate because they are after information of all kinds from all sources. Naturally they are anxious to get started right.

We get any number of these letters asking us for information as to how to start a poultry plant. The majority of them are not explicit enough as to their intentions. They usually ask us how many and what kind of chickens should a person keep in order to be able to make a comfortable living from them.

As a rule they do not tell us which branch of the business they have in mind. They do not tell us what their qualifications are.

Many Too Ambitious.

Many people want to start into the poultry business upon too large a scale. In other words, they do not seem to realize how important it is to have some experience before embarking in too big a craft. They do not seem to think that experience counts as it does in all other branches of business. What other lines of trade are there where a man or woman would undertake to do as much business at the start as their competitors are doing after a decade of experience? And yet with poultry they will ask the question as to how many fowls or laying hens a person should start with to be able to make a good living.

Now if they would turn it about and ask a question something like this, "How many hens should a person keep the first year of his experience to insure making a failure of it?" it would be a little more reasonable to the poultryman who has been through the rounds.

From what we have been able to gather from our rounds of nearly all the poultry plants of this country, the successful ones started at the bottom of the ladder. In fact, those that started at the top, thinking that they were taking a short cut, always had to drop back for a fresh start after a year or two of failures.

Experience Is Necessary.

Some one must have the experience. It is a matter of history that there have been a number of large poultry plants established in this country that have been failures from the start for the reason that their promoters started in at the wrong end of the line.

It has been the plodding fellows who have built to stand. It has looked like a slow business. So it is with the growth of the oak. It does not grow like the gourd vine, neither does it wither and die at the end of one season.

When it is fully matured it commands admiration and respect from all comers. As to the amount of capital required, much depends upon the size and character of the buildings to be erected, the number and quality of fowls to be purchased the first season.

The main thing in building is comfort and convenience. The plainer building is really the better, as it is more easy to keep clean, and cleanliness is absolutely essential to success.

Of course, the man with unlimited means can do as he pleases about expensive houses. In fact, that kind ask but few questions; as a rule, they push ahead and build, doing the considering afterward.

Cheap Houses the Best.

A very good cheap house can be built from the cheaper grades of lumber, creosoted with a gas-house product that is very cheap and will last for years. This is a very healthy product to have about to dilute with kerosene and use as a spray on the inside for the destroying of mites and lice. Perhaps the most economical all around house is one that will accommodate about 100 hens. This number can be housed, fed and cared for with the same work that one-fourth that number could. As you increase the number you multiply the risk of disease and the difficulty of handling it.

Of course, in our most extensive commercial poultry plants larger houses are used with comparative success.

A house for 100 fowls would have to be about 16 by 30. In a mild climate where there is but little severe winter weather such a house can be utilized as a roosting house and a scratching shed combined during the really bad weather.

The roosts should be placed in the rear of the house, and when it is desired to use the front for scratching a 12-inch board should be placed on edge to divide the roosting section from the scratch. In that way the scratching part will be kept free from the dropping. These houses should be about 8 feet in front to the south, slanting back to 6 feet at the eaves.

Boarding Is Necessary.

The front yard should be boarded down three feet from the roof to prevent beating rains from wetting too far in. The rest of the way down should be covered with poultry netting to allow a free circulation of air and let the sun in, as the sun means health to any place.

True, such houses will get hot in the summer, but the fowls will only be in there at night. Any carpenter under proper direction can easily build such a house. The roost poles should be not high from the ground or floor, as flying from high perches causes much trouble in the way of bruised heels. The nest boxes should be separate and not nailed to anything, in order that they may be taken out for cleaning and disinfecting at any time. A good place for them is on a board along the rear wall just above the roosts, with a small piece of netting stretched above them to prevent them from roosting upon them, still making them easily accessible from the roosts for laying purposes. The roost poles should all be loose and should not touch the walls of the house in any way. They will then be easily cleaned and kept free from lice and mites.

Pure Bred Stock Best.

We would advise beginners to start with pure bred stock, no matter what the character of the business is to be. True, it costs a little more to make the start, but the results are so much better that there should be no comparisons made.

All poultry plants of any consequence use this kind of stock. Whether for eggs or stock, for market, or both, it will pay. In marketing a lot of fowls that are of the same size, color and shape they will always bring a little more per pound than will the hit-or-miss type of all sizes and colors.

Then the eggs from thoroughbred stock of any one variety will be uniform in color, and as a general rule in shape, all of which goes a long way toward obtaining better prices.

The thoroughbred hen can be depended upon for uniformity in egg production. For example, if ten hens in a flock of 100 lay every other day the chances are that very soon approximately 90 per cent will soon be doing the same thing, while in a flock of odds and ends of the scrub kind you can make no estimate.

Thoroughbreds Like Machines.

The thoroughbreds have been bred to type and for laying purposes for so many generations that they are really like machines. No one should go into the poultry business with the notion in his head that he is going to make big money right from the start, or even a good living. It takes time to get things in running order. If you have a little knowledge of the work and have been raising and keeping 100 hens you may easily double your capacity the first year and again double it the second year if you have had success.

Keep a record of everything, that you may really know what you are getting out of the business. So many get the big head at the start and are like the man who was successful in running the little dry goods store on the corner, thinking that he was really fitted to manage a department store until he tried it and failed. There is no question that there are great possibilities in the poultry business in its various branches, but we desire to impress upon the minds of the overzealous that it is like all other kinds of business, success is only reached through well-directed hard work.

It must be remembered that the hen to give us her best efforts must be well cared for every day in the year. The hen in her natural or native condition laid but about two dozen eggs a year. It takes about five or six dozen to pay for her year's keep. It must be born in mind that each individual poultry raiser must, to a great extent, solve his own problems. He can pick up pointers here and there that will help him greatly to avoid the ruts and pitfalls, but, after all, he must for himself "prove all things and hold fast to that which is good."

EVERY MALE CITIZEN OF COUNTY TO FIGHT LOCUSTS

KANSAS CITY, June 28.—Every able-bodied man and boy in Wyandotte County between the ages of 18 and 45 may be ordered out to fight locusts if the ravages of these insects on the crops and orchards continue. This action has been proposed by farmers familiar with the grasshopper plague of 1877 after the famous "grasshopper year."

Persons failing to answer the call for service are liable to fines of $3 for each day.

1912 COTTON CROP SECOND IN SIZE AND VALUE, SAYS CENSUS BUREAU REPORT

South Gets $920,630,000 for Producing Total of 14,313,015 Standard Bales—Only One Acre Out of Every Eleven in Belt Is Planted—Oil Mills Take 75 Per Cent of All Seed.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Statistics for the cotton crop in the United States for the year 1912 are given in detail in a bulletin soon to be issued by Director Durand of the Bureau of the Census. It was prepared under the supervision of William M. Steuart, chief statistician.

The quantity of cotton reported for the crop of 1912, with linters included and round bales counted as half bales, is 14,090,863 running bales. With the exception of that of 1911, this is the largest crop the United States ever produced. Expressed in gross 500-pound bales, the crop amounted to 14,313,015 bales, being 1,937,261 bales, or 11.9 per cent, less than that of 1911, but exceeding that of 1910 by 2,307,327 bales, or 19.2 per cent; that of 1909 by 3,997,633 bales, or 38.8 per cent, and that of 1904, the third largest crop, by 633,061 bales, or 4.6 per cent.

The average annual production of cotton for the years 1899-1903 was 10,055,003 bales, and for the years 1908-1912, 13,294,333 bales; the increase in the average annual production being 3,239,330 bales, or 32.2 per cent. When it is considered that of the total area of the counties from which returns of cotton ginned were made only about one-eleventh was devoted to the production of cotton in 1911 and 1912, the figures afford some idea of the possibilities of cotton production in the United States.

Practically the entire production of cotton in the United States is upland, which includes a number of long-staple varieties. Only about one-half of 1 per cent of the total cotton production in 1912 was of the sea island variety, and only 4.3 per cent was linters.

The Sea Island Crop.

The sea island crop of 1912 amounted to 73,777 bales, or 28,180,000 pounds gross weight, and was less than that of 1911 by 45,516 bales, or 38.2 per cent. With the exception of the crop of 1906, the crop of 1912 was the smallest produced since the inauguration of the ginning reports of the Census Bureau in 1899. A very severe storm proved disastrous to the crop in South Carolina in 1911, and the production of that State decreased from 13,016 bales in 1910 to 5,119 in 1911, but increased to 7,707 bales in 1912.

While production of sea island cotton shows variations from 57,550 running bales in 1906 to 119,293 in 1911, there has been no general tendency toward an increase or a decrease in the production of this variety, the amount in 1912 being 73,777 running bales.

The production of linters shows a marked increase from 114,544 running bales in 1899 to 602,324 bales in 1912. This gain is due in part to the increase in the production of cotton and hence of cotton seed available for delinting, and in part to the marked development since 1899 of the cotton-seed products industry, resulting in an increase in the proportion of the total seed supply reginned, and particularly in the closer delinting of the seed for the better separation of the meat from the hulls.

The estimated quantity of cotton seed produced from the crop of 1912 was 6,104,000 tons, which compares with 6,997,000 tons from the crop of 1911. Of the total for 1912, 4,579,508 tons, or 75 per cent, were taken by the oil mills, thus leaving 1,524,482 tons, or 25 per cent, for planting, export, feeding and other purposes. The proportion of the seed taken by the oil mills from the crop of 1911 was 70 per cent, a somewhat smaller proportion than in 1912.

The estimated value of the crop of 1912 is $920,630,000, as compared with $859,840,000 for 1911, $963,180,000 for 1910, $812,090,000 for 1909, $681,630,000 for 1908 and $700,960,000 for 1907.

Thus the value of the crop of 1912, as estimated, was $60,790,000, or 7 per cent more than the estimate for 1911, notwithstanding the fact that the quantity of lint cotton was 12.7 per cent less. While the crop of 1911 was the largest ever produced, and that of 1912 the second in size, the crop of 1910 was the most valuable.

The estimated value of the cotton crops of the five-year period ending with 1912 is $4,236,790,000, while the corresponding value for the five-year period ending with 1899 was $1,529,500,000. During the last five years the price of upland lint cotton has averaged about 11.7 cents per pound, or nearly $60 per bale.

The crop of 1912 graded "middling to strict middling." The average price of upland cotton, which has been computed from the New Orleans market reports, has ranged from 8.20 cents in 1912 to 14.69 in 1910. For the crop of 1912 it was 12.05 cents, which is 2.32 cents more than the average for 1911 and 2.64 cents less than for 1910.

The average bale weight for the crop of 1912, counting round as half bales and including linters, is 507.9 pounds gross, as compared with 504.4 pounds for 1911, 501.7 pounds for 1910 and 496.6 pounds for 1909. The variation in the average weight of bale for upland cotton put up in square packages is pronounced throughout the cotton belt, the averages ranging from less than 420 pounds for a number of counties in Georgia and North Carolina to 560 pounds for counties in Mississippi, Oklahoma and Texas.

Texas Crop Phenomenal.

The cotton crop of 1912, as compared with that of 1911, shows a loss in each of the States, with the exception of Texas and Oklahoma, in which States it was the largest ever produced. Alabama, North Carolina and South Carolina, however, all show an increase over every other year except 1911.

The crop of 1912 in Texas was phenomenal, being almost twice as large as that of 1909. Texas alone produced almost one-fourth of the total commercial crop of the world in 1912.

A large part of the increased production of cotton in recent years has been due to the large crops in Georgia and in the Carolinas, the net increase since 1906 for the three States combined being 844,449 bales, or 27.1 per cent.

The production of cotton in Louisiana decreased steadily from 1906 to 1910, though the crops of 1911 and 1912 show an increase over that of 1910. In 1906 the production of the State amounted to 1,012,573 bales, while in 1910 the amount was only 255,733 bales. This rapid decline was due largely to the ravages of the boll weevil and to the consequent diversion of cotton lands to the cultivation of sugarcane, rice and other crops.

The boll weevil was also largely responsible for the decrease in the production in Mississippi, in which State the crop of 1912 was the smallest for five years.

The Acreage Large.

According to the revised estimate of the Department of Agriculture, the area planted in cotton in 1912 was 34,766,000 acres, of which 483,000 acres, or 1.4 per cent, were abandoned, leaving 34,283,000 acres as the area from which the crop was harvested. This is a reduction of 1,762,000 acres, as compared with 1911. With this exception, the acreage both that planted and that harvested, was the largest for any year. Mississippi, Arkansas and Oklahoma all show material reductions, as compared with 1911, while Texas shows an increase of 395,000 acres. The average production of lint per acre in 1912, as estimated by the Department of Agriculture, was 191 pounds, as compared with 208 pounds in 1911, and 171 pounds in 1910.

There were 8,215 bales reported as ginned in California in 1912, as compared with 9,790 bales in 1911, and 5,986 bales in 1910. These amounts include some foreign cotton grown in Mexico (Lower California) and ginned in California.

Cotton Insect Pests.

The cotton crop of 1912 was seriously affected by insect pests. The growers in a large section of the cotton belt had to contend with the boll weevil, while in some sections the crop suffered damage from cotton caterpillars, grass worms and other pests to a greater extent than in former years. Drouths in 1909 and 1910, particularly in Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana, checked the development of the boll weevils in their early stages, and killing frost followed by warm weather in the latter year greatly reduced their numbers. These conditions resulted in a great reduction in the number of weevils in 1911. The season of 1912, however, again was favorable to the weevil, and there was a considerable extension of the area subject to this pest. Owing to the general dissemination of the information obtained by the Federal and State Departments of Agriculture, the destructiveness of the boll weevil is being greatly reduced.

The quantity of cotton ginned from the crop of 1912 prior to September 1 was 730,935 bales, the largest amount for any year since the inauguration of these reports by the Census Bureau, with the single exception of 1911, when the number of bales was 771,297. By October 18, 1912, 51 per cent of the crop had been ginned, as compared with 49.9 per cent in 1911, 46.9 per cent in 1910, 54.9 per cent in 1909, 48.1 per cent in 1908, and 40 per cent in 1907.

By November 14 slightly more than three-fourths of the crop had been ginned. There was considerable difference, however, among the several States in the proportion of the total amount ginned to specific dates. More than two-thirds of the total crop of Texas had been ginned by October 18, while Tennessee showed less than one-third.

Crop's Economic Status.

Some idea of the importance of cotton production in the United States from an economic standpoint may be had when it is considered that, next to corn, cotton is the most valuable crop grown in the country, and that raw cotton is the largest single item of export. The value of the cotton crop of 1909 represented 15 per cent of the total value of all the crops of the country. The value of cotton exported during the fiscal year 1912 amounted to $565,849,271, or 26.1 per cent of the total value of all articles of domestic merchandise exported during the year. It exceeded the amounts for iron and steel manufactures, meat and dairy products and breadstuffs combined, these three groups ranking next in importance among articles exported. These large exports, combined with the more than 5,000,000 bales consumed in domestic manufacture, strikingly indicate the importance of cotton in the economic affairs of the nation.

Altogether, the greatest cotton-growing section in the world, both in extent and in production, is located in the south-central and southeastern parts of the United States. It includes small portions of Virginia, Kentucky, Missouri, Kansas and New Mexico, and the States lying to the south. This cotton-producing area is about 1,500 miles long, from east to west, and about 500 miles wide. Within the past few years the cultivation of cotton has been undertaken in Arizona and California on irrigated land with considerable success, especially in the latter State. The growing of more valuable crops, however, will likely prevent any appreciable increase in the production in these States.

Production Can Be Increased.

Numerous efforts have been made in recent years to introduce the cultivation of cotton in new countries and to increase the production in others. In some instances failure has attended these efforts, and in only a few cases does there seem a probability of making a material addition to the world supply of commercial cotton.

GEORGIAN BIDS JULY OPTIONS TO HIGH LEVEL

Athens Spot Dealer Leads on New Orleans Exchange Floor, Bulling Near Month.

NEW ORLEANS, June 28.—The July deal in this market is now attracting more attention. There had been so little talk here about the July position that many of the trade had formed the opinion that there would be no advance of consequence in July in this market. Consequently, not a few sold out their July longs at a much lower level and bought the distant deliveries at somewhat narrower differences than now prevail.

The situation in July changed when a wealthy merchant and spot man from Athens, Ga., appeared on the floor and announced his intention of taking up July contracts in this market. He backed up this announcement with good supporting orders for July, and has been a persistent buyer of July contracts on every decline recently. The result has been a decided strengthening of that month, which has increased its premium over the rest of the list, and is now maintaining a level somewhat in keeping with the price of actual cotton, basis middling.

Within the last day or two it has also become apparent that Frank B. Hayne has a large interest in the July position here. The July shorts, therefore, finding that position so strongly supported, have become decidedly uneasy, and have been covering to the best advantage as the opportunity offered. The covering thus far has been of a scattered character, but sufficient to enhance the premium on July over October, which has been running within the last day or two at about 87 points. It is predicted by some of the brokers that July will go to a premium of 100 points over October before the July position is finally liquidated.

Several private crop reports have been issued this week. From a bearish standpoint, they have not been very encouraging, showing an improvement during June of only 2 1-2 per cent in the condition of the crop as compared with last month. It is asked, "If the crop has not improved more than that during June, always a good month for crop development, what will happen during July and August, critical crop months, during which deterioration as a rule takes place?"

The talent is closely watching the crop situation, which does not appear any too promising at present, and should there be any change for the worse in the condition, heavy speculative buying would probably be witnessed in the cotton market.

Some of the more sanguine bulls are already predicting 13 cents by the end of July. If market history repeats itself, this level will be seen, as cotton sold above 13 cents in the summer of both 1912 and 1911.

Frisco Case Similar To Many Preceding

If Winchell Is Ousted as Receiver it Will Not Be First Instance of Kind.

NEW YORK, June 28.—If B. F. Winchell should resign as one of the Frisco receivers it will not be the first time that the president of a railroad has met with such an experience.

In January of 1893, the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, supposedly in a sound financial condition, sold a block of $5,000,000 bonds without any difficulty, and on February 1 the company distributed its regular $3,000,000 dividend. On February 20, or three weeks later, A. A. McLeod, president of the company, was appointed receiver, after having confessed to the court that an unwieldy floating debt had been incurred.

In reply to that announcement the surprised bondholders appointed an investigating committee which resulted in the discovery that the company was a hopeless bankrupt, because of the reckless policy which had been pursued by its president. McLeod, it was found, had not only secured control of the Jersey Central, the Lehigh Valley, and several coal companies, and vast coal land holdings in the anthracite district, but he had bought up the Poughkeepsie bridge and acquired control of the New England, the Boston & Maine, and several smaller New England railroads on a margin. As a result of these disclosures McLeod resigned as president and receiver. He was succeeded by Joseph J. Harris, representing the bondholders.

European Investors Sell Old Holdings

NEW YORK, June 28.—Stocks thrown over by Europe are beginning to turn up on this side. Brokers to whom delivery is made express surprise at the antiquity of the transfer dates on many of these securities. These dates show that we are getting stock back sold to European investors five, ten and even a dozen years back.

It is inferred from this fact that the European investor is going deep down in his strong boxes and that the quantity of American stocks carried abroad must be the smallest in a very long time. Whenever foreign investments in our securities are considered there is always a difference of opinion as to whether the foreigner makes money on them or not.

Some people imagine that the European always takes advantage of our misfortunes and buys stock from us cheap, only to sell them back higher up, but there are just as many who express surprise that Europe should grow rich buying stocks from us at top prices and selling at an obvious loss, just as it is customary on frequent occasions to deplore the shocking losses of the London option dealers in Americans.

UNDERSIZED PLANT CAUSES COMPLAINT

Soaking Rains Needed to Hasten Growth Before Fruiting Season Begins—Spots Firm.

MEMPHIS, June 28.—An undersized plant continues the chief complaint from the cotton fields. To offset this there is almost unequaled cultivation, stands that, as a rule, are satisfactory and, except for the presence of the weevil in some sections, an absence of pests. The tardiness of the crop ruling over the larger portion of the belt, and amounting to from one to two weeks, is expressed in the initial statement of condition, and until it is overcome there seems likelihood of concern over the yield proving sufficient to fill the promised requirements.

It is admitted that so far the late start is not serious enough to prove an insurmountable barrier to a very large crop, but each week it exists will increase the probabilities of it proving one. It is generally felt that the excellent cultivation, reports from everywhere saying the fields are as clean as a garden and the soil in fine tilth, decreases the danger of drouth injury and has resulted in development of a good tap root, but the time is near when soaking rains will be necessary. There have been complaints already of suffering because they are lacking and they will increase until they are forthcoming.

During the past week or so ,some showers have been received in scattered sections, partially relieving needs, but prospects of overcoming the crop's handicaps as yet are none too good. Things are in first class shape to make quick response to a plentiful supply of moisture, but without it in the course of a week or two there will probably be some revision of ideas as to yield.

Make War on Weevils.

The effort to minimize the ravages of the boll weevil in the affected territories continues with varying success, depending largely on the energy shown in picking the pests from the plant and thus reducing their number. It will be some time before any definite idea can be obtained as to the probable extent of their work, for the blooming season is only beginning and they do no injury until the fruiting stage of the crop. Advices reaching here tell of them being numerous over an increasing area.

"First" blooms at this center have been plentiful, averaging about the usual time, although that is not always a safe index to the advancement of the crop. It is argued by close students of the crop situation that if the plant does not soon attain its proper size for this time of the season there will be less likelihood of fruiting sufficiently heavy to afford promise of a heavy yield.

Expects Bullish Report.

The Government's bureau condition report that is to be issued July 3 conjointly with the acreage estimate is being discussed, and private estimates are already being received. The failure of the plant to attain its normal size during the past few weeks has caused some revision of expectations, but the presumption is that the report will come a point or two, perhaps more, over the June report of 79.1. The acreage figures are expected to show a gain of around 3 per cent over last year's final figures. Wednesday of the past week was the final day to be included in the report, and to that time there had been no soaking rains in the sections most needing them.

The spot situation continues steady and the tendency of prices has been to a higher level. The speculative spot situation, reflected chiefly through the July position in New York, has remained in the control of the bulls, and stock in that center has been only slightly increased over the minimum. Quotations for spots in the belt have been advanced until middling ranges from 12 cents to 12⅝. Business has not been large, but this is due as much to paucity of offering as to anything else.

Spinners Buy Steadily.

Movement has been moderate, but at ports ahead of a year ago at this time, indicating that exports will, for a while at least, run larger. There continues evidence of large consumption and one source of strength in the contract market has been the quiet absorption of offerings by spinners against their needs of the actual in the fall.

It yet remains to be proven that the early movement will be heavy, which adds to the uncertainty of the spinners' position. In the meantime the world is coming to the opinion that if the coming crop is not 15,000,000 or more bales, some very high prices will be witnessed.

Banks Prove Adroit In Phrasing Opinion

Resolutions on Currency Reform Make No Reference to Measure Now Before Congress.

By M. A. ROSE.

Nothing more adroit than the Atlanta Clearing House Association's resolutions on the currency bill has been phrased in many a day.

It bears reading twice. At first glance, the hurried builder of headlines would be inclined to write "Currency Bill Warmly Indorsed" or something to that effect.

Which is far from the truth.

Careful examination shows that nowhere do the Atlanta bankers say they think the measure now before Congress is what they want. On the other hand, there is no criticism.

In straightaway terms the resolutions mean: "We, the bankers of Atlanta, think currency reform is a necessity. We commend President Wilson unreservedly for attempting the task so promptly. We think that if President Wilson, the House and the Senate will seek a little advice from those qualified to give it they probably will be able to work out a satisfactory plan.

There is studied avoidance of any reference to the present bill.

Sure To Be Passed.

Atlanta bankers have been assured that a currency measure is certain to pass at this session. News from Washington is that the President has enough votes pledged to its support to make a money bill a certainty.

If this is the case, and if twelve regional banks are to be established, Atlanta wants one of them, and thinks it is her right to be recognized in this way.

New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Kansas City, Cincinnati, Louisville, New Orleans, Denver and Baltimore seem pretty sure to get regional banks. This leaves one vacancy on the list, and one section of the country unprovided for, the Southeast.

Three Cities Contenders.

Atlanta and Birmingham and possibly Savannah will do battle for this place. Birmingham and Savannah are reserve cities. Atlanta is not. Birmingham has also the advantage of the prestige and influence wielded by the redoubtable Oscar Underwood.

Against this Atlanta will urge its willingness to comply with the requirements to make itself a reserve city, and its supreme importance in its territory, as the natural center of finances and commerce for the Southeast.

It promises to be an interesting contest, and Atlanta at least has made a good beginning by expressing its belief in the President and in the need of monetary reform.

At present the thing looks like an expensive and unprofitable game for the national banks.

Bankers Hold Bag.

All profits above 5 per cent go to the Government; there is a very low limit on the rediscounting privilege; heavy liability is entailed; no interest is allowed on reserve funds, but the Government gets interest on its deposits, and, to cap the climax, the banks, who own all the stock, are in the minority on the directorate.

Letters to Atlanta indicate that some of the largest national banks in the United States will apply for Sate charters if the present act becomes a law.

Believing that wiser counsel will prevail before the bill is passed, Atlanta bankers still are hopeful.

CAN NOT CHECK WASTE.

According to a Government report, the American slate industry is hampered by the continually increasing quantity of waste in the large quarries. This waste now ranges from 60 to 90 per cent of the material quarried. No practical use for this waste slate has yet been found. Marketable slate quarried in this country in 1912 was valued at $6,043,318.

Va.-Carolina Common To Pay No Dividend

Fertilizer Company Suffers From Dull Times in Its Cotton Oil Department.

It is accepted as pretty well determined that Virginia-Carolina Chemical will pass the 3 per cent dividend on its $27,984,000 common stock.

During the 1911 and 1912 years the company maintained the 3 per cent dividend although in neither year was the balance above the preferred sufficient to make a common dividend entirely conservative. In 1911 the company earned 3.11 per cent for its common, and in 1912 3.18 per cent, so that in paying 3 per cent it was practically distributing its entire balance of profits to stockholders.

Had earnings come back strong this year with a showing of 8 per cent to 10 per cent for the common, continuance of the 3 per cent rate would probably have been assured.

But the fiscal year is panning out indifferently. The company will in fact hardly earn even 3 per cent on its common. There has been some recovery in fertilizer net this year but a considerable recession in profits from the cotton oil department. Taking the business as whole profits will fall somewhat below the 1912 total of $3,557,452.

Tonnage of fertilizers has done very well this year. The gain in tonnage moved will vary between 7 per cent and 10 per cent over 1912 showing, putting the aggregate back close to the 1911 record. But there has not been nearly the net money in fertilizer sales that existed three or four years ago and for reasons for which the Virginia-Carolina Chemical is not at all to blame.

There have been rumors in New York that Virginia-Carolina had a big bulk of bad debts which it must charge off its books and that it was the existence of some such secret account that was causing the antics of the stocks in the market. This is denied.

As a matter of fact the company regularly sets up a certain percentage of gross as reserve for bad debts and it has rarely ever been obliged to use this entire year's set up for that purpose. For the last 10 years bad debts have averaged less than 1 per cent per annum, which is creditable, considering the long credits which are given in the fertilizer industry.

James J. Hill Plans Californian Invasion

Gets Terminal Facilities in San Francisco Bay—Rail and Water Lines Contemplated.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 28.—Latest developments establish the fact that a recent acquisition by the Hill Railroad interests of terminal facilities in San Francisco Bay was for the accommodation not of a new transcontinental service, but of a steamship line between this city and Portland. Plans for this line have been completed and the establishment of the service awaits only the putting of these terminals in shape for business and the completion of the building of three steamships, each with a capacity of 1,000 passengers, which are now on the stocks in Eastern shipyards. Service is expected from both Portland and San Francisco through the canal to Atlantic seaports as soon as the waterway is opened.

It is natural to assume that invasion into California by means of a steamship line may be considered but a temporary expedient on the part of the Hill lines; and that very shortly plans for a railroad invasion from the North will probably be announced. Operations carried on by the Hill people freely indicate an intention to extend their network of railroads in California.

WHAT ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS AND JOBBERS ARE DOING

MANUFACTURES DINNER PLANNED FOR EVE OF 4TH

New Ansley Hotel Will Serve Atlanta Factory Owners to the Number of 200.

HOME EXHIBIT PLANS TOPIC

Brooks Morgan Has Definite Proposals for Acceptance or Rejection—Pledges Desired.

Atlanta manufacturers, to the probable number of 200, will gather on the evening of July 3 at the Ansley Hotel for a dinner.

The object of the dinner is to discuss the proposed permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods, and at the same time, to discuss the advisability of holding the annual temporary exhibit, such as was held last year at the time of the Southern Merchants' Convention.

The dinner had been set for June 24, but the unavoidable absence from the city of Brooks Morgan necessitated a postponement.

The new date was set at an informal conference of Mr. Morgan, Wilmer L. Moore and Walter G. Cooper held Wednesday.

Invitations to the big "Manufacturers' Dinner" will be sent out at once, and a general response is expected.

At the dinner, Mr. Morgan will lay before the manufacturers definite proposals for lease or purchase of buildings suitable for the installation of a manufacturers' exhibit. It will, in brief, be a "show down." The permanent exhibit project has been gone over thoroughly. The manufacturers have seen Chattanooga's display, and they have learned in detail of New Haven's success. There has been plenty of time for them to make up their minds. At this dinner they are expected to signify what they intend doing.

If, as is expected, the will of the manufacturers is seen unanimously in favor of the exhibit, a start will be made. But the backers of the project do not wish to start unless they have assurance of 200 exhibitors and 40,000 or 50,000 feet of floor space.

Strenuous Work Done Preparing for Convention.

When the four or five thousand merchants from all over the South gather in Atlanta for their convention, during the first two weeks of August, it is doubtful if any of them will be able to realize the care and effort that has been expended to make their meeting a success.

For instance, one energetic committee has been toiling throughout the hot week in an effort to raise funds for the entertainment of the visitors. As a result of their conscientious endeavor, the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association sees its way clear, as to finances, to play host to the gathering.

Another committee has been hard at work preparing the program. The program is to be an elaborate affair. Three or four topics a day will be discussed, and most of the discussion will be in the shape of five-minute addresses. The traveling men are doing yeoman's work in finding the good speakers scattered throughout the territory, men who have opinions worth hearing and experience likely to be helpful to other merchants in their lines.

Still more hard workers are preparing the invitation list. This in itself is a stupendous task. And the invitations are to go out early in July.

Altogether, prospects are bright for the most interesting and largest convention of the kind ever held in the South.

Men's Hats For Next Fall Pert Affairs, Blue and Green

Styles Show Predominance of Velours With Bows in Back—New Effects Noted.

Fall, 1913, hats for men are being shown by jobbers in Atlanta.

Take them big and large, they deserve the name the women give their headgear—they are "creations."

One "creation," for instance, is green velour, with a little bow at the back, and a button-hole stitched edge.

Brown-Perryman-Greene Company say velours, particularly in blue and green, are "the thing" for fall. Velours retail from $3.50 to $7.50.

The "Trooper" shape is proper. To make a "Trooper" shape, punch out a crown, then strike it with the edge of the hand, lengthwise. That's all.

Another "creation" particularly fetching is blue, with red, white and blue stitching which runs up and down the crown and around and around the brim. A button is in the geometrical center of the crown.

Perhaps the best of the bunch, to many tastes, is a green felt hat, "Trooper" shape, of course, with "zebra" finish. "Zebra" finish means that it is 'self-striped." Alternate stripes are smooth, the others are unfinished—fuzzy, in a word. The stripes are something less than half an inch wide, and run vertically on the crown. The hat really is not "freaky." It is attractive.

Other soft hats are lined with gay silk, have welt edges, or are otherwise adorned.

Brand-new is a chinchilla hat. Corduroy and cloth of all kinds will be much in vogue this autumn.

Caps promise to continue their unprecedented popularity. They come in all patterns—one, for instance, a "cubist" design in maroon and tan.

For the man who will wear a derby, regardless, it may be news to know that the derby crowns will be a bit higher this fall, the brims about the same. Crowns seem to be working back from the flat effect of a year back to the old-fashioned high crown. They change a bit each year.

Boys—the little fellows—wear telescope shape hats, while you can't give them to their elders.

Of course, this takes no account of the "staples"—the conservative styles which never change.

Auto Sales Gaining Over Last Season

Business Gradually Working to Credit Basis—Men Buy Cars as They Buy Homes.

"So far as we are able to judge from the business done by our clients, automobile sales in Atlanta have been exceptionally good for the period which began January 1," says Joseph N. Moody, of the Auto Credit Sales Company.

"The automobile firms whom we represent as a credit clearing house report an increase over last season.

"Sales probably would be larger yet if we did not check them. Amusing as the idea may seem, we are in a sense philanthropists, for we are saving the people from themselves, in this way: Suppose a man with moderate income tries to buy an auto on time. We investigate carefully. If he has a family of girls, let us say, all living at home, and no income but his salary, we turn him down. If he had a family of boys, all working and able to help purchase a car, all well and good.

"The automobile business is working more and more toward a time basis. A man buys his motor car now just as he would buy his home—on payments. I believe the future will see 90 per cent of the business done in that way."

Moving Big Concern Takes Almost Week

Dougherty-Little-Redwine Co. Get to Temporary Quarters by Dint of Hard Work.

Almost a week has been required for moving the Dougherty-Little-Redwine Company from its old home in North Pryor Street to temporary quarters at 30-32 South Pryor Street.

It is estimated that about forty boxcar loads of goods were moved, the stock being valued at $150,000.

"That amount of silks would not make much of a showing, but when it comes to underwear, it is a different story," remarked J. Little.

By a peculiar freak of circumstance, buyers thronged into the establishment the very day the moving began, and members of the firm had one of their best day's sales while trying to manage loading the four trucks which kept plying between the old store and the new quarters.

The firm will have its own building at 90-92 South Pryor by November 1.

Aluminum Pleases Atlanta Housewives

High-Grade Kitchenware, Which Is Indestructible Being Sold Rapidly In the South.

Aluminum kitchenware is taking hold with Atlanta housewives and with women all over the South generally. The Standard Aluminum Company, which entered the field not long ago, finds this the case.

Hotels and restaurants do not take so well to the aluminum ware, because of the difficulty of getting negro help to keep it in proper shape.

About 100 different articles for use in the kitchen now are made of aluminum, each with a ten-year guarantee. The stuff cannot peel, crack or blister, and, all in all, is regarded as the ideal material for use in cooking. During a recent test, a pan of aluminum was set on a gas stove and left for five hours with the flame burning beneath it, and no water in the pan. At the end of that time nothing had happened.

City Salesmen Take Outing; Truce Kept

Jobbers Agree Not to Scout for Business During Absence of Their Representatives.

City salesmen will be conspicuous by their absence this week. The grocer or dry goods merchant who needs to replenish his stock must telephone to his jobber. The jobbers have agreed not to solicit business for the week, but just to take what comes to them in the natural course of events.

The reason for this strange pact is that the jobbers are on their annual outing at the Isle of Palms, near Charleston, S. C.

In order not to take advantage of their absence, fifty or more jobbers signed a formal agreement of neutrality for the week, and O. T. Camp, president of the Retail Grocers' and Butchers' Association, sent a letter to all members of his organization acquainting them with the state of affairs, and asking that they fill urgent needs only, by using the telephone.

LUMBER SALES SHOW BUILDING KEEPS UP WELL

Dealers in Supplies Tell of Big Things in Prospect for the Coming Autumn.

Dealers in lumber, brick, cement, plaster and building supplies report that Atlanta is going straight ahead in its expansion.

Unanimously they report good trade. One particularly encouraging feature, according to their expressions, is the steady increase in the number of small residences, homes costing between $3,000 and $4,000, seeming to predominate.

Furthermore, building supplies dealers are unanimous in saying that there are great plans in store for fall. If all rumors are to be believed, property owners are contemplating improvements at almost a "boom" rate as soon as summer is past.

Paint dealers also are cheerful. They report contractors figuring on work far ahead, and also general activity in refurnishing buildings which are not new, but which are being remodeled to meet the city's growing needs.

Expressions from dealers in these lines follow:

V. H. Kriegshaber: "Our observation is that there is a good deal of building contemplated—in the wind, so to speak. When conditions settle down this fall, we look for an excellent trade in building supplies."

Randall Bros.: "Our business is better than it ever has been in lumber and building material. The increase has come from the increase in medium priced houses, residences to cost between $3,000 and $4,000.

"It is hard to tell about the fall, but we look for a good trade. Prices are a little lower. This always is the case in June and July. There will be a reaction in August and September, and quotations will be stronger. This is the history of every year."

Willingham-Tift Lumber Co.: "Business has been quite brisk up to the present time, with particular activity in the erection of small houses. This looks to us like the right time to build, for prices, in our opinion, are at the bottom."

Seiple Sons: "Business is fairly good at the present time, and it is picking up rapidly. We look for a very good trade for the rest of the year. The market is steady, still prices are reasonable and it is a good time to build. We notice a revival particularly in the erection of small houses."

Dozier & Gay: "From the number of contractors who are figuring on painting to be done between now and fall, we look for a big business.

"Every indication is that a large number of new homes are to be built, and there are rumors of several large buildings for wholesale houses and small factories.

"Of course, we are but fifteen months old in Atlanta, so we have only the figures for that period by which to judge. But from these, we are able to show an increase of almost 100 per cent in our trade.

"One remarkable feature has been the great amount of painting done on buildings which are not new. Contractors tell us this class of work exceeds the record of several years."

A. B. & A. CERTIFICATES DUE JULY 1 TO BE REFUNDED

The Atlanta, Birmingham & Atlantic, a property largely owned in New England and into which nearly $16,000,000 of Boston and New England money has been poured, has maturing on July 1 an issue of $4,700,000 one-year 5 per cent receivers' certificates. It is understood that plans are already under way to refund these certificates with a new issue, bearing probably a higher rate of interest. The new issue will probably be placed in New York.

The time for making the reorganization plan also expires on July 1, but this will be extended for another two or three years. The property has been in receivers' hands since January, 1909, over four years, and a practical solution of its financial troubles has not yet developed.

Jordan Thinks Europe's Land Banks Ideal for South

Cheap Loans on Farm Lands Spell Financial Independence for Cotton Grower, He Says.

Special Cable to The American.

By COLONEL HARVIE JORDAN.

(Member of the American Farm Credits Commission and President of the Southern Cotton Association)

OLDENBERG, GERMANY, June 28.—The capitalization of Southern cotton growers through the mortgage bank system, giving them mortgage loans at low interest with easy payments, would completely reorganize the cotton-growing industry of the South. I am convinced that the land mortgage business in America can be systematized along the lines of similar mortgage systems in Europe.

If this is done it will bring a new era of prosperity to the South and greatly increase the cash returns from cotton, which now represent practically the entire balance of trade of the United States.

Southern cotton growers to-day are just one year behind financially. They have been behind since the Civil War.

The curse of the cotton farmers is the store lien system, under which they are obliged each spring to purchase their supplies on credit from the supply merchants. Frequently farmers pay 50 per cent or more in excess of the cash price of goods for the privilege of this credit. Moreover, the supply merchants secure absolute control over the farmers.

Marketing Is Hurried.

The cotton crop has to be marketed as soon as harvested. Farmers have practically no control over the marketing. This is because they have no financial independence. The American commission has studied the mortgage systems which place European farmers in far stronger positions as borrowers than our own farmers. In America we still are clinging to the antiquated practice of forcing short-time loans on the agriculturist.

European farmers borrow through an intermediary society and enjoy as strong positions as any railroad or municipality. If our Southern farmers mortgage their land they must pay back the entire principal in lump sum in a few years, else pay a costly commission for renewal. So long as this is true naturally the farmers won't mortgage their land until actually pressed to the wall.

In contrast to this European farmers repay their loans in small annual installments. So long as they meet their interest payments they can never be sold out. Their entire payments for both interest and principal amount to less than our farmers frequently are required to pay for interest alone.

Cash Basis Possible.

If Southern farmers can get a device to act as their agent in borrowing and can capitalize their land holdings on terms that will permit them to repay little by little, we can put the cotton-growing industry of the South on a cash basis. This would enable our farmers to buy on a cash basis and secure financial independence. It would break the power of the supply merchants. It would be the surest way to a New South. A New South would mean prosperity to the nation.

There is no theory in this proposition. I have studied these mortgage systems here. They are straight business enterprises that we Americans can adopt perhaps improve upon. The Legislature of every State in the Union should take this matter under consideration.

When currency reform is enacted in the United States this should form part of the program. Farmers never up to this time had any consideration whatsoever given their requirements as borrowers. In currency or banking legislation they have been left to get along as well as they could. This has been largely responsible for the financial positions of the Southern farmers to-day.

The American commission will return to the United States with definite ideas concerning the credit problem, particularly in the mortgage field. Their recommendations should receive the attention of every banker, farmer and consumer in the nation, for the financial position of our farmers is a matter of vital interest to every individual in the United States.

Trained Men Great Need Of Business World To-day

Germany and other European countries are far ahead of the United States in the matter of commercial education. This point was brought out in a speech before the annual convention of the National Association of Credit Men at Cincinnati.

"The annual losses by reason of failures in the United States amount now to, some $200,000,000," said Mr. Gaehr, "or over $2 per capita. To put it concreately, the national annual loss from bad debts equals one-half the estimate cost of the Panama Canal.

"Professor Munsterberg of Harvard University observes that a great difficulty of our educational system has been that it does not teach a man to find himself, and when he learns his strong and his weak points, his real inclinations toward and qualifications for a pursuit in life, it is usually too late.

"We find the highway of commerce and life marked with sad monuments of men crushed under the wheels of progress who would have made a success in life had they had the proper direction and counsel and had they been taught to fashion their thoughts to fruitful issues, men who could and should have been helped to usefulness.

"A further difficulty is that the vocational demands are not sufficiently fixed and brought to the attention of the younger generations. They know comparatively little of the inner labors, the inner values, and inner difficulties of various professions and callings.

"Then, too, in many cases trivial chance influences decide the choice of a vocation. Young men often drop into a place, rather than deliberately choosing business as a life vocation.

"The need of better trained men, especially commercially, made itself felt several years ago, and as a result a number of universities and colleges of high standing organized schools of commerce. Harvard University ranking its School of Business Administration as one of the graduate schools. Several cities have established high schools of commerce, yet the schoolmaster and the business man are still too far apart.

COLORED LINEN IN BIG DEMAND, MAY BE SHORT

Available Supply Likely to be Exhausted Soon, Importers Believe—Market Dull.

The shortage of several popular lines of wash fabrics for the current summer season has brought out a much stronger demand for colored dress linens and ramies. Colored ratines, which did not sell well earlier in the season, are also good property at the present time. Several prominent importers in the linen trade predict that before the month is over there will be a shortage of colored dress linens, and that within the next 30 days buyers will find stocks completely exhausted.

Summer weather of the real sort has brought out an unexpectedly large share of the business. The setback suffered earlier in the season through the remarkable popularity of ratines is being rapidly overcome.

Importers are not doing very much at the present time in the way of new business except in a few cases where goods are available for spot or early delivery.

Stock lots of colored linens and linen ramies have been sought for, and have found a ready market. Goods on fall order are being charged up as delivery dates fall due, and in a good many cases shipments sent out would be considerably heavier if the goods were available. Shipments from abroad are not prompt, and importing houses are forced to wait until goods arrive even where they are past due on old contracts.

Women who buy dress linens know that these goods have now become an all-the-year-around article, and the linen gown made up for summer wear gives excellent satisfaction as a house dress during the cool months. Advices from abroad state that buyers are hesitating over paying prices current for forward contracts, and are not placing many contracts at present. Yarns hold strong and the chances of seeing lower prices on the finished goods in the near future is very remote.

Mail advices from Belfast state that the market has been quiet but steady, and there has been little in the way of quotable change compared with previous weeks. Buyers hesitate to pay the prices current for forward contracts, and consequently are only operating in a hand-to-mouth fashion, as necessity compels them. There is, however, a hopeful feeling.

Notes on Selling

The heavy demand for sport coats this season is helping the dress goods trade over some rough spots. Chinchillas and eponges are used principally in the manufacture of these garments, and makers and wholesalers of these fabrics are doing a good business in them.

A thing that is regarded as a good omen for the future of the men's wear fabrics trade is the promptness with which the manufacturing clothiers are settling up their accounts with the mill agents. In view of losses sustained by the clothiers as a result of the strike earlier in the year this action on their part is said to indicate the thorough soundness of the clothing industry.

The firmness of 39-inch, 80 squares, is one of the features of the print cloth market at the moment. Printers have taken this construction in good quantities, and as a result of curtailed production by the mills the supply has fallen somewhat behind the demand.

RUTS AND THE FOLKS IN 'EM

The longer a fellow squats down and satisfies himself with his little rut, the more hopeless he is. The rut gets bigger and deeper all the time. Soon he'll get buried in it.

Best way in the world to keep on top and ahead is to forswear the rut. Get clean away from it. Don't get stale. Don't squat. Don't think you know it all. It's deadly.

You can't rest on your laurels and keep 'em fresh. You've got something to learn all the time.

TARIFF CUTS IN SENATE TO AID NATION'S DINING ROOM

Many House Figures Lowered and Free List Increased — Despite Cuts, Bill Is Expected to Produce $5,000,000 More Cash.

Atlanta's Need for Help to Reduce the High Cost of Living Is Shown by Figures Indicating Soaring Price of Foodstuffs.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The revised tariff bill laid before the Senate Democratic caucus by Mr. Simmons, chairman of the finance committee, carries important reductions in the Underwood tariff bill rates on iron, steel and other metal products. It added cattle, wheat, pig iron, Angora wool, and many other articles to the free list, and increased rates on many classes of cotton goods and some silk products.

President Wilson's desires as to free sugar in 1916 and free wool at once, prevailed in the redraft of the bill. To the list of "market basket" reductions the Underwood bill contained, the Senate committee added many important items.

In the general level of its rates the "Simmons bill" represents a heavier cut from the present Payne-Aldrich rates than the House bill.

Senator Simmons believes the caucus will discuss the bill not longer than a week.

Simmons' Statement.

The bill probably will come to a vote in the Senate by September 1.

In a statement Chairman Simmons said:

"The revenues of the Government will be increased approximately $5,000,000, laid in hand with a reduction of the taxation following the reductions already made in the House bill. These increases in revenues will be made up by a tariff on bananas and restoration of the full internal duty of $1.10 per gallon on brandies used in fortifying wines.

"With regard to the sugar schedule no change was made from the provision of the Underwood bill except to strike out 'sugars tinctured and colored,' for fear that ultramarine blue used in bleaching sugar might be regarded as colored matter and thereby refined sugar become subject to a duty of 2 cents a pound.

"With regard to cigars and other tobacco products from the Philippines the provision of the Underwood bill permitting cigars with 80 per cent of tobacco the product of the Philippine Islands and 20 per cent the produce of foreign countries to be admitted into the United States free of duty, was stricken out of the bill. Only cigars and tobacco products exclusively of Philippine tobacco to be admitted free of duty into the United States."

The Liquor Schedule.

Of the amendment to the liquor schedule, the statement said:

"An additional section is added repealing so much of the act approved October 1, 1890, and acts amendatory thereto, so far as they relate to the use free of tax of spirits for the fortification of sweet wines, and providing that hereafter all wine spirits, grape brandy and alcohol so used shall be subject to the same tax as in other cases.

"It is intimated that this tax will result in an increase of revenue of approximately $7,000,000 per annum.

"The Senate Finance Committee followed the House and treated the cotton yarns as the House bill treated cotton cloth," the statement continued, "by adding a duty of two and one-half per cent upon cotton cloth when combed, bleached, dyed, mercerized or colored. This is the most important change that the Senate committee made in the House cotton schedule."

Retaliatory Clause.

The amendment permitting the President to proclaim special rates when foreign nations discriminate against the United States provides that he shall exercise this authority on certain articles, as follows:

"Fish, fresh, smoked and dried, pickled or otherwise prepared, 1 cent per pound; on wheat, 10 cents per bushel; on wheat flour, 45 cents per barrel; on coffee, 3 cents per pound; on tea, 10 cents per pound.

"On the following articles a duty

Pigeons to Keep City Sane, Says Expert

Dr. B. Chester King, of Atlanta, Tells Chicago That Its Safety Rests With Doves.

CHICAGO, June 28.—If Chicagoans are to be saved from the mad house at all it will be by the pigeons.

Dr. B. Chester King, an Atlanta alienist, finds hope for the city's sanity in the pigeons that flutter about the Loop all day.

"Several times each day," says the doctor, "the man who works in an office building should go to a window with the expectation of seeing one or more doves. Should he spy them, I suggest that he forget all else. There is something in just the name 'dove' that has a soothing effect upon the nerves."

Pastor Gets Town To Give Day to Ball

All Girard Suspends Business to Attend Games, but There Is No Playing on Sunday.

GIRARD, KANS., June 28.—Girard has found a happy solution to the problem of Sunday baseball by setting out one day in the week when everybody suspends business operations and goes to the ball game.

This arrangement came through the suggestion of the Rev. M. L. Morrison, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, after considerable wrangling early in the summer between people who wanted ball games on Sunday and those who did not. The new arrangement was tried yesterday for the second time. Everyone is pleased and the blue laws are enforced.

Federal Soldiers and Civilians Shot Down in Cold Blood at Durango.

CAPTIVES PUT TO TORTURE

Atrocities Practiced to Force Citizens to Reveal Hiding Places of Wealth.

MEXICO CITY, June 28.—One thousand soldiers and civilians were slaughtered by rebels when the city of Durango, capital of the State of the same name, fell into the insurgents' hands, according to word received here to-day from that city. Many of the victims were members of prominent families.

Men and women were tortured to death when they did not produce wealth at the bidding of the rebels.

Ortega, who has 500 men, may cooperate with Villa. If Juarez falls, it will remove the most important Mexican port of entry on the United States border from Huerta and may result in the downfall of the Huerta government.

Prince of Wales Spends $1.25 a Week

Writes Home for More Money, but Mother Considers That This Amount Is Ample.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—The amount allotted to the Prince of Wales for pocket money has just become known. Every Saturday he receives just $1.25, which he terms his "old age pension." He is occasionally a trifle extravagant and mortgages his money in advance.

Toward the end of the last term at Oxford he was asked by a friend to join a party to visit the theater.

The Prince's reply was, "Sorry, old man, but I am clean broke."

"Why don't you write home for some more?" asked the friend.

"I did," replied the Prince, "but mother said I was too extravagant."

Mrs. Marshall Finds $2,000 House at Last

Wife of Vice President Refuses to Pay More, Wishing to Live Within Husband's Salary.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The long house hunt of Mrs. Marshall, wife of the Vice President, is probably over, as she has found a suitable house on Columbia Road, Northwest. Her hunt was prolonged owing to the fact that she set $2,000 yearly as the price they would pay. The Marshalls have said they must live within their salary, and Washington society is eagerly watching to see how they will manage with the many social and financial demands upon them. Mrs. Marshall wanted to go to the country, but feared it would be too far for the Congressional wives to visit.

Congress to Force White Slave Inquiry

Reasons for Postponement of Diggs-Caminetta Case by Department of Justice To Be Bared.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Investigation of the postponement of the Diggs-Caminetti white slave case by the Department of Justice must go on, is the edict of the Congressmen behind the resolutions.

They are determined to bare the entire correspondence between McNab and the Attorney General and uncover the influences behind the white slave and Western Fuel cases.

If the House for any reason fails to take up the investigation Tuesday, the Senate is determined to dig to the bottom of the matter itself. No "pull" or influence can block this inquiry, it is declared.

King George Finds Platonic Romance With Fair Countess

Monarch Pays Marked Attention to Wife of Lord Mar While Queen Mary Is Absent.

Special Cable to The Sunday American.

LONDON, June 28—Every one thought King George so extremely domestic and conventional that it has come as rather a shock to people outside court circles to find him paying marked attention to the beautiful Countess of Mar and Killie.

The lovely countess, who is in her prime and a favorite of King Edward, is to be found wherever the King is.

Lord Mar goes about very little, but it was noticed that he and his wife were included in the royal house party at Windsor Castle for the Ascot races.

When Queen Mary was absent from the races, Lady Mar was always at the King's side, but when Her Majesty was present Lady Mar mixed with the general crowd in the royal inclosure.

Lady Mar is very sympathetic and attractive. The inner circle at the court is intensely amused at this mild platonic flirtation.

Mrs. Astor Bars Too Fervid Trotting

Society Youth Comes to Grief When He Disregards Rules of Conduct Fixed by Hostess.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—Mrs. John Astor is becoming known in social circles as a hostess whose rules of conduct must be obeyed by her guests. One young man who, until recently, doubted this, is now lamenting his mistake. Mrs. Astor permits the "tango" and "turkey trot" at her dances, but insists that they be danced in moderation. When this guest so far forgot himself as to verge on to the vulgar, he was quickly shown the door.

Mrs. Astor's example is not followed by all of London's hostesses. At the entertainments of a certain duchess the ragtime is accompanied by a great deal of roughness, being usually danced with the lights out.

Early Cold Injures Crops of Michigan

Wheat Promises but Half a Crop, Hay One-third, and Fruit Outlook Is Poor.

LANSING, MICH., June 28.—Michigan Agricultural College field men and district supervisors report crop prospects of the State the poorest in years, due to the early cold, wet season and late frosts, followed by the present hot, dry weather.

Wheat promises little better than half a crop, hay one-third, oats one-half. Early potatoes have been badly frosted in sections and will not produce over one-quarter crop without rain.

Fruit is equally poor. Plums and grapes are expected to be about 30 or 40 per cent of a crop.

Baroness Will Wed Man Hurled in Auto

St. Louis Tourist Unexpectedly Finds Self in Noblewoman's Car and Romance Ripens.

NEW YORK, June 28.—James Hurley, a railroad man of St. Louis, while automobiling in Paris a year ago, ran his car into that of the Baroness Barbara Ursula Kalinowski of Welsbaden and was hurled into the tonneau, where the Baroness was sitting. He gave her his card and later offered her his heart.

Arriving here by the Hamburg-American liner Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, she left for St. Louis, where the Baroness will be married to Mr. Hurley.

Gatun Gates Stand Their Supreme Test

Atlantic Waters Reach Sea Level and Locks Must Hold Against Full Pressure of Water.

PANAMA, June 28.—The Atlantic waters which have been allowed to run slowly against the lower gates at Gatun are at sea level to-day. The large gates are being put to the actual test of full pressure for the first time.

The engineers are watching the rise of the water with interest, and they report that the gates are watertight. The water is at the 50-foot stage.

PRICES TO STAY AS THEY ARE NOW, SAYS SULZBERGER

NEW YORK, June 28.—"Meat will never be any cheaper in the United States than it is now," declared G. F. Sulzberger, of Sulzberger & Schwarzchild, on his arrival from Europe on the Mauretania. "The only effect the change in the tariff will cause will be to keep prices where they are. Without this revision in the tariff, there would undoubtedly have been a big jump in prices."

SLATON'S BILLS READY TO PASS

Inaugurated With Utmost Simplicity

Inaugural Address of Slaton Urges New Taxation System

SWEEPING legislative reforms are urged by Governor John M. Slaton in his inaugural address and message delivered to the Legislature Saturday. Following are the ten most important reforms he urges:

1. An occupation tax on corporations, with the maximum $200 per annum on corporations of more than $1,000,000 capital; the tax on smaller corporations to be adjusted accordingly.

2. Changes in the registration laws. He says: "The present registration law should be so amended that when a voter has once proven his qualification by registering and being enrolled, he shall remain a registered voter unless disqualified for some cause due himself."

3. The need for good roads, with a highway commissioner or a commission. The message says: "An intelligent highway commission, or commissioner, clothed with the proper authority, could be the means of untold benefit in suggesting the proper methods of building roads."

4. A declaration that the sale of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the State's property, should not be considered. The problem of its disposal should be considered by a commission, with directions to report its recommendations and its reasons therefor.

5. The passage of a law abolishing the defendant's statement in criminal trials, and providing in its place that he be sworn as a witness, if he so desires.

6. The Legislature is urged to consider legislation making the carrying of concealed weapons a felony, subject to reduction to a misdemeanor by either judge or jury.

7. Consideration of proper and remedial banking laws. "The banks of a State perform public functions, and as such are properly subjected to governmental supervision," says the message.

8. The creation of a new office, to be known as State Auditor.

9. Sweeping reforms in the tax system of Georgia. The system in vogue in this State is wrong, and the equalization of taxation, either through enforcement of present laws or new correctives, is urged.

10. That the Legislature investigate the decline of the agricultural schools and take steps to apply the proper remedies.

Georgia Bankers to Urge Laws at This Legislative Session

One Provides Larger Salary for State Treasurer—Banking Department Considered.

The Georgia Bankers' Association, of which L. P. Hillyer, of Macon, is president and Haynes McFadden, of Atlanta, secretary, will urge new laws in the present session of the Legislature, according to announcement Saturday.

The association now has under advisement several bills, including one for a constitutional amendment providing larger appropriations for the State Treasurer, who supervises $6,000,000, it is said, on a salary fund of $3,100.

The amendment, though, is being considered only by the association thus far. It has not been acted on. Haynes McFadden Saturday said a bill creating a banking department probably would not come up at this session of the Legislature.

New Executive Plans To Be at Work Early Each Day and to Devote Entire Time to State.

Inducted into office with a simplicity that harked back to the days of Thomas Jefferson, John Marshall Slaton will enter the Capitol Monday morning for the first time as Governor of the State of Georgia. Eager to begin work for the State and the people, Governor Slaton plans to be at his office at an unusually early hour, and will plunge into the affairs of the State of Georgia with the energy and ability that has made him a leading figure among the attorneys and citizens of Atlanta.

Backed by his dominant personality and with the support of practically every member of the Senate and the House of Representatives, Governor Slaton's administration promises to be as harmonious and productive of good as that of any Governor the State has ever had.

Gossip heard among the legislators gathered for the sessions of the General Assembly indicate that every reform urged by the new Governor will meet with the approval of the majority of the members of both Houses.

Bills Are Now Ready.

It is regarded as significant, and indicative of the success of Governor Slaton's administration, that many bills embodying the recommendations and suggestions made in his inaugural address have been prepared and will be introduced and action taken on them during the present session. Several already have been introduced, both in the House and Senate.

It is generally understood, though it has never been officially confirmed, that Governor Slaton will send no more messages to the General Assembly during the present session unless some unforeseen emergency should arise that demands immediate attention. He has given his views on the sort of legislation that is needed, and has often expressed his complete confidence in the ability and the willingness of the Legislature to do what was right and necessary without any prompting from the head of the State Government.

The respect and confidence that Governor Slaton feels in ex-Governor Brown is shown by the fact that almost without exception the men who served the latter during the four years of his incumbency will also hold office during the Slaton administration.

Jesse G. Perry, who has served Governor Brown as private secretary, will fill the same position under Governor Slaton.

Ulm Is Executive Secretary.

Hardy Ulm is also retained as Executive Secretary. The knowledge these men have, gained through their connection with Governor Brown, is expected to be one of inestimable benefit to Governor Slaton during the first few weeks of his incumbency.

That Governor Slaton intends to give all his time to the business of the State and serve them to the utmost of his ability is shown by the fact that though he owns a handsome home on Peachtree Street, and a country home on Peachtree Road, he has moved his family into the ancient executive mansion on Peachtree Street, and will occupy the building as his home during his term as Governor. He took possession of the mansion Saturday afternoon within an hour after his inauguration as Governor of the State.

After a short stay in the reception room of the Governor's office at the capitol, where Governor Slaton and ex-Governor Brown greeted their friends,. Governor and Mrs. Slaton and Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mrs. Slaton's mother, were entertained at luncheon by ex-Governor and Mrs. Brown, at the executive mansion. After the luncheon Mr. Brown turned over to Governor Slaton the mansion that had been his home, and with Mrs. Brown boarded a train for Marietta.

Marietta Greets Brown.

They were given a tremendous reception by the citizens of the Cobb County capitol. Practically two-thirds of the population of Marietta, headed by a reception committee of prominent citizens, met them at the depot and welcomed them to the town that had been their home for many years before Mr. Brown became Governor. Mr. and Mrs. Brown plan to spend the coming week in Marietta, and will then retire for the summer to their Cherokee County farm.

Though the inauguration of Governor Slaton was simple, it is not thought that his home life will follow the same plan. Mrs. Slaton is recognized as one of the most brilliant hostesses in Atlanta, and society folk are all agog over the rumored plans of a brilliant social campaign which it is generally understood Mrs. Slaton will inaugurate as soon as she has completed her establishment as the first lady of the State. An inaugural reception will be held July 2.

The precedent set by Governor Brown and continued by Governor Slaton of eliminating all pomp and display from the inaugural ceremonies has aroused considerable favorable comment throughout the State, especially among the members of the Legislature, and it is probable that Georgia will never see a return to the "brass band" inaugurals of former years. The inauguration of Governor Slaton was, if anything, just a little more simple than the last inauguration of Governor Brown. There was no display of any sort, and the very absence of elaborate ceremony added to the strength and impressiveness of the occasion.

Sweeping Reform in System Of Taxation Urged by Slaton

Laws to aid the finances of Georgia and sweeping reforms of the tax system of the State are stressed in the inaugural message of Governor Slaton.

In part, Governor Slaton said:

Our system is wrong. The Legislature can appropriate what it pleases, and the tax rate remains the same. The Legislator has made himself a favorite with his constituency by voting for every popular appropriations and nothing suffers but the State's credit.

Unless some check be made, an increase of revenue will be of no avail in preventing the financial embarrassment of the State. Under the enthusiasm of the moment one appropriation bill may exhaust it.

More than four-fifths of the States of the Union derive revenue from what is known as an inheritance tax. I am informed that this tax is the subject of least complaint.

This form of tax has been approved by the highest authorities and is one of the easiest borne and subject to fewest hardships than any other. The inheritance tax is to some extent a corrective.

Corporation Taxation.

Prior to the year 1905, many efforts were made to collect an occupation tax from corporations. Governor Terrell, in his message of the year 1906, recommended a tentative privilege tax based on capital stock of $100,000 per year on corporations having a capital of $1,000,000, or over. He anticipated from this source more than $100,000 a year, and thought that such sum could reasonably be expected without a hardship. The State, however, has not received one-half this sum, and during the year 1913 the estimated revenue from this source is $48,000.

I recommend that the maximum occupation tax on corporations having $1,000,000 capital and over be $200 per annum, and the tax on corporations of less capital be adjusted accordingly.

Equalization of taxes, either through the enforcement of present laws, or new correctives, so that each may bear his proportionate burden, would not mean the increase of taxes now borne, but now performing his duty, but would rather mean the lightening of his unfair portion of the load. I commend this subject to your attention.

Bonded Debt To Be Refunded.

An additional reason for establishing and maintaining the State's finances on a sound basis is the necessity of making provision for more than one-half of the entire bonded debt of the State, maturing in 1915. This is an imperative duty resting on this Legislature.

No sinking fund was provided by law to retire the bonds aggregating $3,679,000 which are due in 1915. The entire State's debt is $6,452,500, which does not include the obligations to the University, amounting to $291,500, and the landscrip fund of $90,000.

All the debt of $6,452,500 is provided for, or will be provided for, by the sinking fund required to be raised annually until the debt is paid off, except the $3,679,000 which falls due in May and July, 1915.

If refunding bonds were issued in 1915, making the first $100,000 fall due in 1935, then the sinking fund could be made to run continuously and retire each year, until paid, $100,000 of this series of 1915 refunding bonds.

This plan would seem advisable in order to relieve the treasury and the people of the increased burden at this time, unless financial conditions at the time of the sale of the bonds should demand that their redemption begin at an earlier period in order to effectuate their more satisfactory disposition.

Registration of Voters.

We believe the present registration law should be so amended that when a voter has once proven his qualification by registering and being enrolled, he shall remain a registered voter unless disqualified for cause due to himself.

The foregoing extract from the last platform upon which I was elected, expresses a principle which deserves universal acceptance. It contemplates no change of the constitution which provides for the qualification of the voter.

I recommend that the present registration law be amended to correct the injustice indicated. It would always be provided that the voter must have paid his taxes and not subjected himself to any of the disqualifications provided by law.

Highways.

It is needless to impress upon you the importance of our highways. Their value is an asset of the entire State. An intelligent Highway Commission, or Commissioner, clothed with proper authority, could be the means of untold benefit in suggesting proper methods of building the road adapted to the locality, or in solving the problems of engineering which might arise in various sections.

I call your attention to the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the lease of which terminates in 1919. No one, I apprehend, would or should consider its sale, but the problem of its disposition should be considered by a commission with directions to report its recommendations and its reasons therefor.

To delay this matter will mean to put the State at the inexcusable disadvantage of unpreparedness when the time arrives for imperative action.

The Criminal Code.

One of the fundamental purposes of government is the protection of life and safety of the citizen. If the rules of evidence are so shaped as to prevent the discovery of the truth, and if the State is deprived of the means of sifting the facts, the judges and juries are not to be blamed if crimes are allowed to go unpunished.

It is an anomaly that a defendant should take the stand, make any statement that he sees fit, or that his shrewd lawyer has prepared, and being immune from cross-examination, demand that the judge shall charge the jury that they may accept his unsworn statement in preference to all the evidence in the case.

I, therefore, recommend that a law be passed abolishing the defendant's statement, and providing in its place that he be sworn as a witness, if he desires, but his failure to be so sworn be not subject to adverse comment by prosecuting counsel. This is in accordance with current Federal and State law.

The legislation in Georgia against carrying concealed weapons has in recent years been conspicuous. It has been suggested by the law of self-preservation. Daily we read of men who have shot others, and have been acquitted on the old statement that the deceased threw his hand on his hip pocket, and the defendant shot in fear of his life. When searched, the dead man was found generally unarmed.

If the carrying of concealed weapons were made a felony, subject to be reduced to a misdemeanor by either judge or jury, the deterrent effect of such a law would be the saving of many a life. I earnestly recommend to you the consideration of this question.

Banking Laws.

The banks of a State perform public functions, and as such are properly subjected to governmental supervision. The bankers of the State, with the desire of maintaining a high standard of responsibility and of affording guarantees against improvident management, that imperil the money of the people, recommend legislation looking to the accomplishment of these objects. I commend this subject as one worthy of your serious consideration.

My predecessors have recommended the creation of the position of State Auditor, and in this recommendation I heartily concur. His services could be utilized in checking the cost of new buildings for which requests may be made by the various institutions. Those who have served on the appropriations committees are aware of the inadequate facilities of the State in arriving at the amount of the necessary expenditures.

The Constitution.

The Constitution is the expression of the supreme law of the land. It can only be changed by the people speaking in their sovereign capacity. In order that they may vote intelligently on any proposition it is essential that they understand it. I recommend that in proposing Constitutional amendments, you plainly indicate the proposition to the voter in such language that he may understand the meaning of the question submitted.

My predecessor has called attention to the fact that some of the agricultural schools are well attended, while others receive little patronage, whether due to the matter of location or lack of interest, or from what cause, I am unable to say. Each obtains the same appropriation from the State for maintenance. I recommend that you investigate their condition, and apply the proper remedies.

Slaton is Inaugurated With Simple Ceremonies.

With ceremonies that gained in strength and impressiveness through their very simplicity, John Marshall Slaton to-day became Governor of the State of Georgia, succeeding Joseph M. Brown. The oath of office was administered by Judge William H. Fish, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, at 12:02 o'clock.

Governor Slaton was inducted into office in the presence of a brilliant assemblage of Georgia men and women, including his own and the retiring Governor's family and intimate friends, members of the State Legislature and prominent jurists. For the first time in the history of the State the United States was represented by Judge William T. Newman and Judge Don A. Pardee, of the Federal Court. They occupied seats directly in front of the Speaker's stand.

Galleries and the floor of the House were filled with spectators. By 10 o'clock virtually every seat in the visitors' gallery was taken and room had been provided for a large number on the floor. In the corridors another crowd, unable to gain entrance into the hall, waited patiently for a glimpse of the new executive.

Joint Session Held.

Neither the House nor the Senate transacted any business, convening at 11 o'clock and immediately taking a recess. At 11:45 o'clock both Houses again convened, and the Senate at once adjourned and marched to the House, where members took seats in a semi-circle about the speaker's stand. In the front row of seats about the speakers' stand sat the intimate friends and relatives of Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton. Twenty-eight chairs had been reserved for members of Governor Slaton's family and eight for the family and friends of Governor Brown.

In Governor Slaton's party were Major William F. Slaton, father of the Governor; Mrs. John M. Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Slaton, Justice and Mrs. S. C. Atkinson, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Waldo, Mrs. W. H. Blanchard, Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant, John M. Slaton, Jr., W. F. Slaton, Jr., Slaton Waldo, Albie Waldo, William D. Grant, Miss Margaret Grant, James Jackson Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Phillips and Miss Robinson. In Governor Brown's party were Mrs. Joseph M. Brown, Miss Cora Brown, Charles Brown, Miss Sally Brown, Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Connolly, Mrs. Frances Connolly and Thomas W. Connolly.

Governor Brown Receives Friends.

Governor Brown arrived at the Capitol shortly before 11 o'clock, and went at once into his private office, where he received a number of friends and visitors.

Governor-elect Slaton drove up in his automobile to the Washington Street entrance of the Capitol, accompanied by Mrs. Slaton and his father, Major William F. Slaton. They proceeded to the reception room of the Governor's office, where the inaugural procession formed.

Promptly at 11:45 o'clock Speaker Burwell called the House to order, and immediately thereafter members of the Senate arrived.

The inaugural procession moved from the Governor's office on the first floor. The procession was led by Governor-elect Slaton and Governor Brown. After them came ex-Governor Henry D. McDaniel, and then followed the Justices of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals, the Federal Judges, the State House officers, the members of the joint legislative committee on inauguration, and the immediate families of Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton.

Governor Slaton Presented.

Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton took their places on the Speaker's stand, the first standing to the left of Senator Randolph Anderson and Speaker Burwell and the latter to the right. Rev. James B. Robbins, of the Trinity Methodist Church, opened the ceremonies with prayer, in which he invoked Divine aid for Governor Slaton in the conduct of the aqairs of the State.

Randolph Anderson, President of the Senate, presented Governor-elect Slaton to the people of Georgia and the Legislature, and immediately thereafter Justice Fish administered the oath of office. In a speech expressing great confidence in the ability of the incoming executive, Governor Brown presented Governor Slaton with the Great Seal of the State of Georgia.

After the inaugural ceremonies Governor and Mrs. Slaton and ex-Governor and Mrs. Brown lunched at the Executive Mansion. Ex-Governor and Mrs. Brown retired to their farm near Marietta, and Governor Slaton took possession of the mansion in the afternoon.

Church Bars Wedding And Girl Files Suit

Breach of Promise Action Started, Though Both Parties Declare They Are Ready for Ceremony.

ATCHISON, KANS., June 28.—Although both parties to a $25,000 breach of marriage contract suit filed here recently say they are willing to wed, the suit will go on.

Miss Mary Falk, of Purcell, alleges that she entered into a verbal contract to marry William Burke, of Troy, a few months ago.

Church officers say they will not marry Burke because he is unable to procure a sworn statement from his mother in Ireland certifying to the time of his baptism in the Catholic Church. Burke says he will marry Miss Mary Falk any time, and, in her petition for the suit Miss Falk says she is still willing to marry Burke.

But as a priest will not marry them, as both are unwilling to forsake their religion, Miss Falk says she can not consistently dismiss the suit, although she still loves Burke. Miss Falk's petition alleges that Burke is wealthy.

Atlanta Medical Schools Unite to Make Big College

National Recognition Will Be Obtained Through Merger—Officers and Faculty of Institution Are Unanimous.

A union of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons and the Atlanta Medical College has been effected, and as a result an institution to be known as the Atlanta Medical College has been formed. Details of the consolidation were announced Saturday by representative committees from both colleges.

Ambitious plans for the new college are outlined. The immediate effect of the consolidation will be the placing of the Atlanta Medical College in Class A by the American Medical Association. It renders the newly formed college eligible to membership in the Association of American Medical Colleges, admitting its graduates to practice anywhere in the world. Its doors open with the new college year in September.

The consolidation will force the abandonment of the property of the Atlanta School of Medicine on Luckie and Bartow Streets and the establishment of a considerable plant in connection with the present equipment of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons on Butler and Armstrong Streets.

Officers Are Announced.

The new college will be officered by W. S. Elkin, dean, and W. F. Westmoreland, president, of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons, and by two officers to be nominated by the Atlanta School of Medicine.

All these plans were announced by a committee from the Atlanta School of Medicine, consisting of George H. Noble, L. C. Fischer and Edward G. Jones, and a committee from the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons, whose members are W. S. Elkin, W. F. Westmoreland and C. W. Strickler.

Consideration of the proposition has been under way for some time, stated the committee members.

"It has been the one object of these deliberations," they announced, "to organize an institution of dignity and of permanent promise, whose graduates will receive general recognition throughout the United States—an institution so constituted as to make it a real public asset, and so conducted as to expect and to deserve the heartiest popular commendation."

So complete have been the preliminary deliberations that before word of the union had been breathed every plan was worked out, even to the appointment of a faculty and of a board of trustees.

The faculty proper will consist of the following physicians:

Department of Medicine—W. S. Kendrick, C. W. Strickler, R. T. Dorsey, J. C. Johnson, J. C. Olmsted, E. C. Thrash, E. B. Block, C. E. Boynton, L. B. Clarke, George M. Niles, L. M. Gaines, S. R. Roberts and B. Wolff.

Department of Surgery—W. F. Westmoreland, F. W. McRae, E. G. Jones, W. S. Goldsmith, F. K. Boland, J. L. Campbell, L. C. Fischer, M. Hoke and A. L. Fowler.

Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology—George H. Noble, W. S. Elkin, E. C. Davis and S. T. Barnett.

Department of Materia Medica and Therapeutics—M. M. Hull, L. B. Clarke (with other salaried associates).

Department of Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat—F. P. Calhoun, Dunbar Roy and J. M. Crawford.

Department of Physiology—George Bachman (with other salaried associates).

Department of Anatomy—J. W. Papez (with other salaried associates).

Department of Pathology—John Funke (with other salaried associates).

Department of Chemistry—Edgar Everhart (with other salaried associates).

Associate Faculty Not Named.

The associate faculty has not yet been completed. It will embrace the names of 50 or 75 additional physicians of prominence in the city.

The probable board of trustees of the Atlanta Medical College will be Reuben R. Arnold, H. M. Dorsey, Judge George Hillyer, G. S. Lowndes, E. W. Martin, F. J. Paxon, Judge T. P. Westmoreland, H. H. Cabaniss, John J. Eagan, John H. James, H. J. Lowry, Wilmer L. Moore, J. Carroll Payne, C. E. Currier, T. A. Hammond, Marion M. Jackson, R. F. Maddox, Bishop C. K. Nelson, J. S. Prather and W. S. Witham.

The union of the two colleges is significant as a historical event. The name of the first medical college founded in Atlanta was that of the consolidated school—the Atlanta Medical College. This institution was formed in 1854, was suspended during the war and its building used as a hospital. It was merged in 1898 with the Southern Medical College, which was organized in 1878, to form the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons.

The Atlanta School of Medicine was organized 1905. Both the colleges erected new buildings in 1906, Andrew Carnegie having given $25,000 and Dr. A. W. Calhoun $15,000 to the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons for this purpose, other citizens giving various sums. The Atlanta School of Medicine has also operated a hospital in connection with the college.

Sell Luckie Property.

It is the present plan to put on sale the Luckie Street property of the Atlanta School of Medicine, and to provide for the college work to be carried on entirely at the Butler Street plant, ample room being there for additional buildings and extensions. The proximity of the Grady Hospital is an additional reason for transferring everything to that locality.

The total enrollment in the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons last session was 334, and in the Atlanta School of Medicine 218. The announcement by the joint committee declares:

"It will not be the future intention to increase the enrollment so much as to elevate the standard of professional instruction. After January, 1914, one or more years of work in a literary college will be required for entrance, the minimum requirement this fall being a high school education."

Committee Tells Hopes.

The committee, in a statement to the public, tells of its purposes and hopes, saying:

"The recent awakening of the public mind to a knowledge of the past shortcomings of medical education, the evident cordial interest in plans, wherever launched, to invest medical education with a degree of excellence which will protect the public as it ought to be protected; the late tendency of private philanthropy to recognize properly organized medical colleges as deserving of its bounty; the recognition promised abroad to the proposed institution, which recognition could not have been obtained as long as the colleges remained separate; the strategic advantages of Atlanta as the site for a medical college of superlative merit; the excellence of the professional talent in the city; the immense momentum implied in a united instead of a divided professional energy—all these and other considerations alike of sentiment and of common sense, have seemed to us to constitute a responsibility whch it would discredit us to neglect, and an opportunity which it would distinguish us to embrace."

MOVE BEATEN FOR FREE WOOL GOODS

Clothing Duty Under New Tariff Schedule Will Be From 20 to 35 Per Cent.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The question of dutiable wool manufactures in the tariff bill was raised in the Senate Democratic caucus to-day and brought a lengthy debate. Senator Chamberlain, of Oregon, favored the free listing of these commodities, arguing this was only fair to the public and the manufacturers with raw wool on the free list.

The goods affected are stockings, socks and blankets, women's and children's dress goods, ready-made clothing and other articles of wearing apparel. Ad valorem rates, ranging from 20 per cent on stockings to 35 per cent on ready-made clothing are in the bill as reported to the caucus.

At the recess of the caucus Senator Simmons announced that the proposition to free list wool manufactures was beaten by a close vote.

"We expect to finish the hemp, silk, paper and sundries schedules to-night," said Senator Simmons, "and take up the administrative and income tax features of the Underwood bill Monday."

FLAGLER WILL UNCHANGED AND RELATIVE'S HINTS OF A CONSPIRACY FALL

By TARLETON COLLIER.

WEST PALM BEACH, June 28.—While a number of the charges made by Amasa Flagler, of California, regarding strange circumstances surrounding the death of Henry M. Flagler to-day are found to be substantial, the principal accusations that codicils were added to the Flagler will, completely changing its effect, and that the dying man was given insufficient medical attention, appear to fall without support.

Seven codicils to the will are not significant. Investigation into the charges by Amasa Flagler that dark work accompanied the end of his kinsman was conducted by The Sunday American. The stories of the California man that Henry M. Flagler was kept in deep seclusion until the end; that visitors, including himself, were refused admittance; that the most rigid privacy shrouded every detail of the railroad king's illness—all are found to possess a substantial basis of fact.

Palm Beach, deserted, boarded up, uncanny in its summer desolation, today furnishes the setting for a belated story of tragedy—the tragedy in the death of Henry M. Flagler, the Florida railroad king, who died May 20, 84 years old, his brain worn out.

Built Empire;
Dies in Seclusion.

The story is how a man who had built an empire came to die in seclusion on a deserted island, attended by unskilled nurses, denied to visitors—and some of them his kinsmen—and with never a word given out as to his condition, from time to time.

Amasa P. Flagler, of California, who says he is the closest male relative of Henry M. Flagler, except for Harry Harkness Flagler, a son, came to Palm Beach while the financier was dying and was refused a sight of him. To-day he is talking freely to newspaper men, hinting at mystery in the death of Henry M. Flagler, charging that the great railroad man was not given the proper treatment or care, and that Mrs. Flagler, J. B. Parrott and Dr. W. R. Keenan, the three who were practically alone with him toward the end, and who, he points out, were the beneficiaries under the will, kept visitors away purposely.

Amasa P. Flagler, according to the variety of opinions maintained by residents of Palm Beach, is anything from a faker to a justly aggrieved person. The fact remains, however, revealed as a result of investigations by The Sunday American, that Henry M. Flagler died in loneliness and in enforced seclusion.

He died in a small room of a frame cottage on the Atlantic beach, to which he had been moved some time before the end. From one window is to be seen "The Breakers," his own great hotel. It has been locked and deserted since March. Through the other window there is the sight of a stretch of parched grass, the beach and the ocean.

George Conway, a boy who waited on Mr. Flagler during his illness, said to-day that the dying man kept his eyes always on the ocean.

"He loved it," said Conway. "One time, not long before the end, he said to me: 'George, there is the greatest thing in the world,' pointing out at the sea. 'If there ever comes a time when you would be proud of yourself and of what you have done, think about that ocean. There is something greater, more wonderful than anything a man can ever make or become. Railroads and cities are nothing.' But a lot of the times he was not conscious to what went on."

Mr. Flagler was moved to the beach cottage from his mansion, "Whitehall," when summer began to set in at Palm Beach. He was moved at the combined orders of his physician, Dr. W. R. Keenan, and Mrs. Flagler. Dr. Keenan is Mrs. Flagler's brother. Because has was moved Amasa P. Flagler finds the basis for a denunciation of those who took care of him, declaring that his kinsman was taken to the empty beach cottage that he might be more securely isolated.

Joe Jefferson Died In Same Cottage.

Investigation reveals that many of the statements made by Amasa P. Flagler in his interviews regarding the death of his relative are exaggerations. He is said to have declared that the beach cottage in which Henry M. Flagler died was old and dilapidated and isolated from the community. It is, however, "The Nautilus," one of a colony of seven cottages on the beach, and is within 200 feet of "The Breakers." It is leased for $5,000 a season of three months to the winter visitors from the North, and last season was occupied by "Fingy" Conners, the Buffalo politician. Joseph Jefferson, the actor, according to the beach traditions, died in the same cottage.

Local physicians, although none of them was called in to assist Dr. Keenan and Dr. Castleberry, watched the case as well as possible in view of the privacy attached to it. Several to-day said that they would have indorsed the move from Whitehall to the beach cottage, considering more desirable the sea breeze and the relief from the sultriness that is always the lot of Whitehall in the early summer.

West Palm Beach is divided into two hostile camps on the question of the treatment of Henry M. Flagler, many contending that the charges of a deliberate isolation and of inadequate care of the dying man may be substantiated by a chain of circumstances, and others laughing at the scandal that Amasa Flagler has sprung.

Trained Nurses Succeeded by Boy.

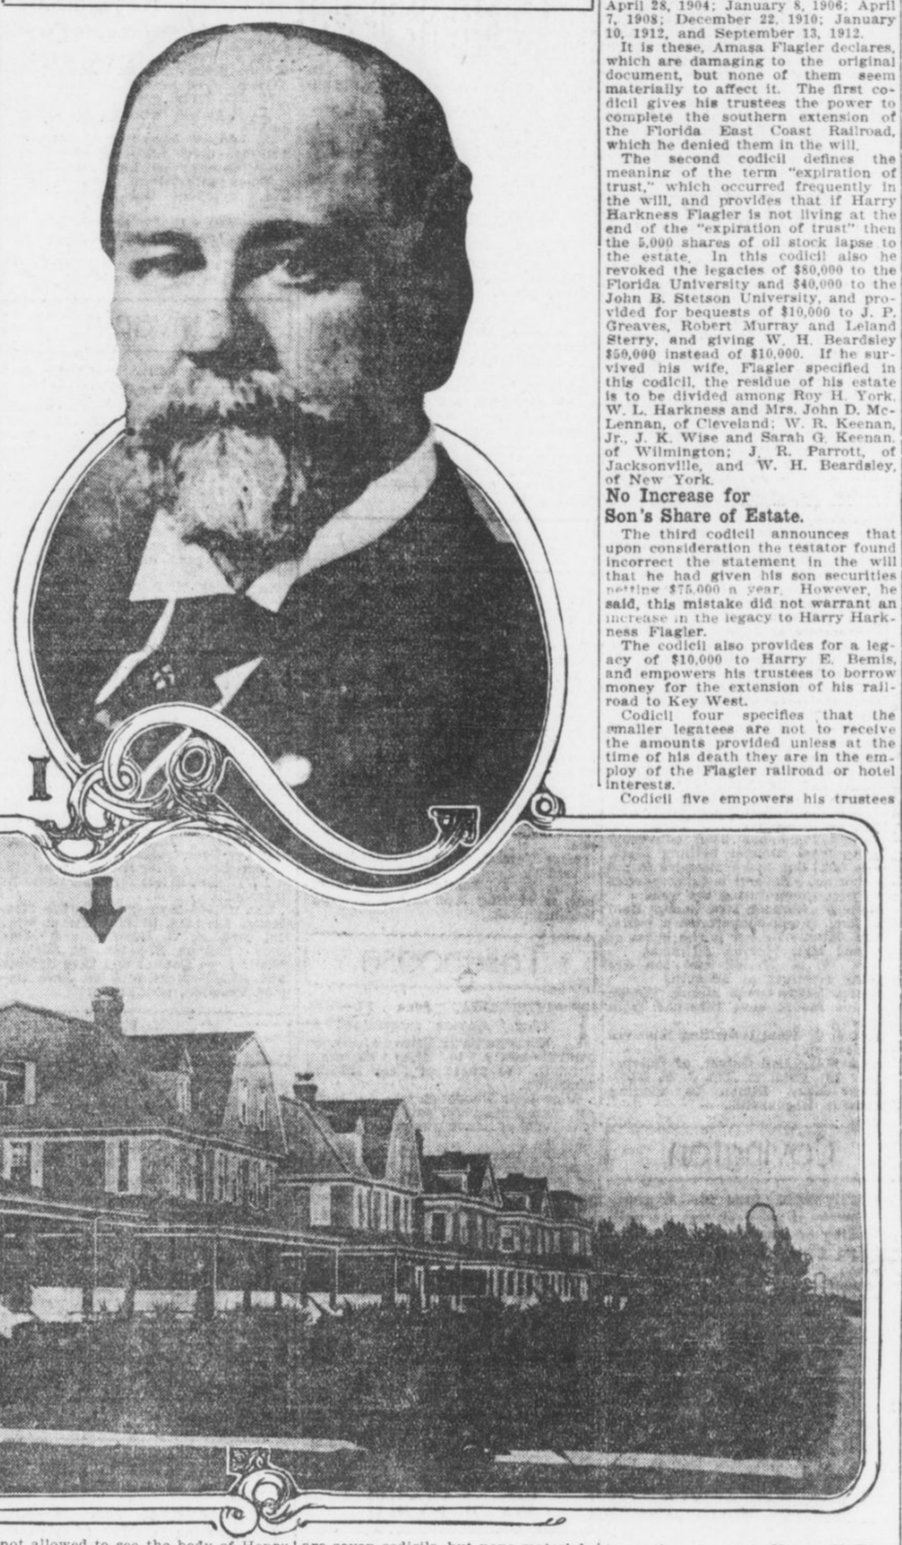
The rapid decline of the railroad king began about March 1, when, already ill, he was injured by a fall in the reception hall of "Whitehall." He took to bed at that time, and never left it until the day of his death, May 20. After several weeks in his room at "Whitehall," he was moved to the beach cottage.

Trained nurses who had been engaged were turned away, to be succeeded by George Conway, a young English boy, who is the nephew of Mrs. Cooper, the housekeeper at "Whitehall," and by Tom Lynch, a young man employed on the estate. Conway watched by day, and the other by night.

Conway is one of the few Flagler employees remaining on deserted Palm Beach. To-day he said the nurses were discharged because they could not manage the sick man so well as could he and the other boy, of whom Mr. Flagler was fond. The nurses, he continued, did not get on well with the Doctor, either.

Dr. Keenan, the brother of Mrs. Flagler, for years house physician at "The Breakers," and more recently at the "Royal Ponciana" as well, attended Mr. Flagler. To aid him, Dr. Castleberry, a guest in the winter hotel, from Harrisburg, Pa., remained. Dr. Castleberry is a kinsman of Mrs.

AMASA FLAGLER, who hinted at plot to influence Henry M. Flagler in making will, is shown in the top picture, while in the lower photograph the arrow indicates the cottage in which the railroad magnate died. This cottage was referred to as a "lonely hut" by Amasa Flagler in his first statements.



physicians are related to beneficiaries under Flagler's will, and that one, Dr. Keenan, is himself a beneficiary. Amasa Flagler has drawn evidence of irregular conduct in the care of Henry M. Flagler.

Little Told From Bedside.

During the period of the financier's illness little definite news came from his bedside. Newspaper men of West Palm Beach and of Jacksonville declare that no bulletins were issued, and that inquiries were met always with indefiniteness.

For weeks Flagler lay thus. No one was admitted. The gossip of servants has lingered in West Palm Beach, declaring that the dying man in his delirium called frequently for his son, and frequently also for William Fremd, his gardener. The son, Harry Harkness Flagler, who has been estranged from his father for 21 years, was not summoned until by Amasa P. Flagler. Fremd, another for whom Mr. Flagler called, lived on the grounds, within a half a mile of the cottage, but was never taken to the sick room.

The same gossip has recorded that J. A. McDonald, of Miami, an old friend of Mr. Flagler, and Father McLoughlin, a Catholic priest of Miami, were others who could not see the sick man.

Along toward the end came Amasa Flagler. According to his own story, he had sent a telegram to herald his visit. Reaching Palm Beach, he was informed that he could not see the sick man. He declares that he virtually was ordered from the grounds by J. B. Parrott, vice president and general manager of Flagler's railroad, who became president by the express terms of the Flagler will.

Incensed, Amasa Flagler went to the citizens of West Palm Beach with his story. He had telegraphed ahead for a room in "The Breakers," but these were denied him. "The Breakers," he was informed, was closed for the season.

Telegram Sent To Flagler's Son.

Amasa Flagler found quarters in "The Gables," a less pretentious hotel in West Palm Beach, whose proprietor, R. C. McGriff, listened to his story and to this day believes in him. Amasa Flagler was the first to send a telegram to Harry Harkness Flagler.

"Your father is calling for you," is the message he sent.

According to the statement to McGriff Parrott, over in Palm Beach, heard that Harry Flagler was coming to his father's side, and came across to "The Gables" to engaged a room and bath for the financier's son. There was no room for Harry Flagler, either, it seems, on Palm Beach.

No room and bath was available in McGriff's establishment, and Amasa Flagler offered to give up his suite to Harry Harkness Flagler. But Harry Flagler, when he arrived, stayed with an old friend in the town. He arrived in time to see his father alive.

Amasa Flagler declares that he was not allowed to see the body of Henry M. Flagler after death. The Tropical Sun, the daily paper of West Palm Beach, bears a story of how Amasa Flagler was leaving the town, full of wrath at his treatment. At the station, according to the story, he could obtain no information about his trains.

The employees at the railroad station, the Flagler railroad station, would tell him nothing. He asked information regarding a special train, and was met with an indefinite answer. Finally, he called a boy and commissioned him to obtain the information. The boy did. Upon his return with the message, Mr. Flagler is said to have given him $50.

"You are the only person connected with this road who has exhibited the slightest consideration or courtesy toward me," he told the boy, according to the story.

Undertaker Imported To Conduct Funeral.

The body of the dead millionaire was taken in hand by an undertaker imported from Miami. Undertaker McGinley, in West Palm Beach, was not consulted. Citizens of the town believe this to be the case because Henry M. Flagler and the city of West Palm Beach had little in common. The two have been antagonistic of late years, in spite of the work of development which Flagler has done for East Florida, and a number of local ordinances and regulations were passed inimical to the Flagler interests.

Residents of West Palm Beach now declare that the feeling that grew up was not personal to Flagler himself, but was occasioned by actions of other officials of the Florida East Coast Railroad.

Flagler's funeral was held in St. Augustine, and his body placed in an elaborate vault which he had built in connection with the Memorial Presbyterian Church. St. Augustine he made his home, it is said here, because he was repelled by the attitude of West Palm Beach citizens.

Makes Charges Against Beneficiaries.

According to his story, Amasa Flagler was denied a part in the funeral. He went on his way North, where he has made his sensational charges that Mrs. Flagler, Dr. Keenan and J. B. Parrott kept the dying financier secluded, denying all admission that they might maintain an influence over him.

The three are the principal beneficiaries under the will, and it is Amasa's inference that because they were with him continually, to the seclusion of others, their claims were made secure. He hints, in his interviews, that codicils to the original Flagler will were made under their domination, cutting out other legatees, particularly Harry Harkness Flagler, the son of the financier.

However, an examination of the will and codicils proves this accusation to be without foundation. There are seven codicils, but none materially effective.

The documents are in the court house in St. Augustine, where they have reposed since being made. The original will was drafted February 1, 1902, and names W. H. Beardsley, of New York; Dr. William R. Keenan, of Lockport, N. Y., the physician who was with him at his death, and J. R. Parrott, of Jacksonville, another of the little party with him most of the time during his last illness, as his executors and trustees. His wife, Mrs. Mary Lillie Flagler, he names as the residuary legatee, and his son Harry Harkness Flagler, he cut off with the relatively small legacy of 5,000 shares of Standard Oil stock. This, at the time of Flagler's death, was worth $642 a share.

Declares Son Didn't Show Filial Regard.

"I have already given my son securities sufficient to bring him an income of $75,000 a year," the will stated. "My son has not shown for me the filial regard that would make me inclined to do more for him than is done by this item of my will."

No beneficiary will profit by the will, however, for at least five years. By its terms, a trust is created, the testator declaring:

"It is my intention in the future to foster, protect and properly develop such properties; and to provide against my decease while such properties are in process of development, and to relieve my beloved wife from the immediate cares and responsibilities of so varied and extensive interests, I hereby declare a trust for all my properties. From this trust is excepted $60,000 to the Stetson University and $20,000 to the Florida Agricultural College for the construction of a gymnasium.

The trust is to last five years, according to the will, and if the Florida East Coast Railway, or the Florida East Coast Hotel Company, at that time should require financial aid, then it is to continue as long as is necessary. Until the expiration of trust, Mrs. Flagler is to receive $100,000 a year and the Memorial Presbyterian Church of St. Augustine $3,000 a year.

Many Legacies Left by Will.

Other legatees mentioned in the original will are: To receive $5,000, Miss Annie C. McKay, Mrs. Ella Green, Stephen A. Brave, John P. Beckwith, William H. Chambliss, Ed J. Triay, George W. Wilson, Bernard O'Brien, his coachman; George Holland, his butler, and Ida Scheiffer, his housekeeper; to receive $10,000, James A. McGuire, R. T. Goff, John Anderson, Fred Sterry, Joseph D. Price, Henry W. Merrill, J. A. McDonald, William H. Beardsley and Jasper G. Salter; to J. E. Ingraham, $20,000; to J. R. Parrott, $100,000; to C. D. Boice and L. C. Hayes, $2,500; to the Florida Agricultural College, $30,000; to the John B. Stetson University, $40,000; to Hamilton College, New York, $100,000; to the Memorial Presbyterian Church Society, $75,000.

By the terms of the will J. R. Parrott is to continue in the same relation to the Flagler interests as he maintained during the lifetime of the testator.

There are seven codicils to the will, made, respectively, February 17, 1903; April 28, 1904; January 8, 1906; April 7, 1908; December 22, 1910; January 10, 1912, and September 13, 1912.

It is these, Amasa Flagler declares, which are damaging to the original document, but none of them seem materially to affect it. The first codicil gives his trustees the power to complete the southern extension of the Florida East Coast Railroad, which he denied them in the will.

The second codicil defines the meaning of the term "expiration of trust," which occurred frequently in the will, and provides that if Harry Harkness Flagler is not living at the end of the "expiration of trust" then the 5,000 shares of oil stock lapse to the estate. In this codicil also he revoked the legacies of $80,000 to the Florida University and $40,000 to the John B. Stetson University, and provided for bequests of $10,000 to J. P. Greaves, Robert Murray and Leland Sterry, and giving W. H. Beardsley $50,000 instead of $10,000. If he survived his wife, Flagler specified in this codicil, the residue of his estate is to be divided among Roy H. York, W. L. Harkness and Mrs. John D. McLennan, of Cleveland; W. R. Keenan, Jr., J. K. Wise and Sarah G. Keenan, of Wilmington; J. R. Parrott, of Jacksonville, and W. H. Beardsley, of New York.

No Increase for Son's Share of Estate.

The third codicil announces that upon consideration the testator found incorrect the statement in the will that he had given his son securities netting $75,000 a year. However, he said, this mistake did not warrant an increase in the legacy to Harry Harkness Flagler.

The codicil also provides for a legacy of $10,000 to Harry E. Bemis, and empowers his trustees to borrow money for the extension of his railroad to Key West.

Codicil four specifies that the smaller legatees are not to receive the amounts provided unless at the time of his death they are in the employ of the Flagler railroad or hotel interests.

Codicil five empowers his trustees to continue to pay to Horace H. Flagler, of St. Augustine, the dividends on 50 shares of Standard Oil stock. It provides, too, that the legacy to the Memorial Presbyterian Church Society apply only if the church remain in the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America.

Codicil six makes provision for the maintenance of his mausoleum by the expenditure of a portion of the income from the $75,000 which he bequeathed to the church in St. Augustine.

The last codicil, drafted September 13, 1912, provides that the legacy of 5,000 shares of oil stock to his son be effective in spite of the change in the form of Standard Oil stock. This was drafted soon after the dissolution of the Standard Oil Company, apparently looking to safe-guarding Harry Harkness Flagler against losing his inheritance on technical grounds. The last provision is the revocation of his previous bequest to Horace H. Flagler, substituting therefor an annuity of $2,000.

No resident of West Palm Beach or its vicinity was mentioned in the will, although common gossip had named several as likely legatees.

Flagler's Isolation Necessary, Says Doctor.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Dr. Owen Kenan, brother of Mrs. Henry M. Flagler, to-day issued a vigorous denial of the charges of Amasa Plummer Flagler regarding the circumstances which surrounded the death of his patient at West Palm Beach.

"There isn't a word of truth in the whole thing," he said. "The only explanation is that these so-called 'charges' originated in the brain of some cunning adventurer with an ax to grind. Publication of these unfounded rumors have annoyed us greatly, and Mrs. Flagler is in no condition to be interviewed, so that I can speak for her.

"So far as I can make out, the greatest objection to conditions this Amasa Flagler found at the Beach was the isolation of the sick man. That was natural. Mr. Flagler was old, his illness was serious and he needed quiet. The cottage in which he died is not dilapidated. It rents for an enormous sum every season, and some prominent Boston society people had it last winter.

"If Amasa Flagler's object is to induce Harry H. Flagler to contest the will it will fail. Harry Flagler is a gentleman, although he had not spoken to his father but once in the last seventeen years. He was left $5,000,000 and each of his children gets $4,000,000. That seems to me to be eminently fair.

"As to our conduct of the case, Dr. Castlebury and I did the best we could. Henry M. Flagler had as tender and loving care as any man ever had up to the moment of his death. There was no secrecy other than that was absolutely necessary, and nothing to be concealed."

HEIRS TO RICHES LEFT BY TITANIC VICTIM SOUGHT

J. Montague Smart, Prominent Business Man, Left Fortune. No Trace of Beneficiaries.

NEW YORK, June 28.—During his active life J. Montgomery Smart was a man of mystery. Now that his bones lie in the sunken Titanic, his past is a greater puzzle than ever, and so far it is unsolved. Usually when a man dies, even though he may have been of distinction, his hidden history is buried with him. But Smart was a man of wealth, and it became necessary to try to discover vital facts of his intimate personal life.

Thus began a world-wide search that has served only to make the case of J. Montgomery Smart all the stranger. He was an honored and successful man of business, whose transactions were international in scope, even extending from New York to Australia.

Necessary to Find Heirs.

Having left money, it became necessary to find his heirs. It was remembered that this man of silence never described his family. It was known that he had been married and that his wife had died ten years before. Vague words dropped here and there were gathered and it became apparent that Smart had two children, a boy of 20 and a girl of 18.

But no one could be found who had any definite idea of their whereabouts.

Into three countries of Europe the filaments of inquiry extended. The American consuls of many ports were asked to aid in the hunt. That was in May, 1912.

One fact was discovered in the course of the Belgian hunt. It was asserted that the children were in charge of a Mrs. Cook, who was a great friend of Mrs. Smart, and that Smart was paying her liberally to care for them. But who was Mrs. Cook? Her identity was also impossible to discover, and the hunt settled down into a hope that the guardian would write for funds, thus solving the riddle. But she has been swallowed in silence.

Had Many Acquaintances.

As president of the American Cold Storage and Shipping Company, Smart had made many acquaintances among prominent business men of New York, London, Berlin, Paris and many other cities throughout the world. Many believed that they knew him well. But when the test came, they were surprised to find that only the barest information was obtainable about his personal affairs.

Smart was a hermit in a great city, and he was a hermit in his many voyages and travels in foreign countries.

Tells Judge He Will Renew Methods of Courting Days if Decree Is Granted.

KANSAS CITY, June 28.—"If my wife succeeds in getting a divorce from me I am going to begin all over with my courting days and try to win back her love," Andrew Mathers said in Judge Johnson's court. "Her charges in this case do not in any way affect my devotion and admiration for her."

Mathers is a wealthy building contractor and lives at 4403 Virginia Avenue. He has been contesting the suit of his wife, Louise Mathers. They were married in 1896 and have three children.

Mrs. Mathers charges that her husband became intoxicated frequently.

Victim of Ohio Flood Travels to California on Freight Train to Become Wife.

VENICE, CAL., June 28.—Miss Ethel Johnston, a young woman from Dayton, Ohio, arrived here in begrimed and torn boy's costume to join her fiance. Miss Johnston and J. L. Perry had been sweethearts in Dayton. The youth moved West a short time ago to prepare a home for his sweetheart.

When the flood came Miss Johnston, who was living with her aunt, lost her home, as well as her only relatives. She cut her hair short, donned boys' clothing and struck out with but a few dollars for the coast. She traveled almost the entire distance on freight trains.

Dog Rescues Girl With Dress Aflame

Shepherd Leaps Into Brook and Then Shakes His Dripping Body on Blazing Skirt

NEW YORK, June 28.—The remarkable intelligence and devotion of a Shepherd dog saved Miss Florence Sheldon, of 4 Llewellyn road, Montclair, from serious injury yesterday when her dress was accidentally set on fire.

Unconscious of the smouldering fire, the girl sat on the bank of a brook throwing sticks into the stream. Suddenly the dog began to bark furiously. He dashed into the brook, and returning, threw his dripping body on the now blazing skirt and extinguished the fire. A square foot of the garment was burned.

LOS ANGELES, June 28.—Four dollars a day is the minimum wage on which a family can be supported in this city, according to the report today of the Municipal Industrial Investigating Committee. Of nearly 50,000 cases covered by the inquiry, more than 6,000 men and considerably more than half of all the women employed received less than $2 a day. A permanent wage commission is urged.

Mashers Told to Think of Sisters

Pastor Says That Presuming on Feminine Acquaintance Is Greatest Aid to White Slavery.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 28.—"A spendthrift sweetheart and an extravagant wife have ruined many lives," said the Rev. T. W. Stout in a sermon at Calvary Methodist Church. "Young women can help to form high moral standards among the boys by not permitting great expenditures upon themselves."

He illustrated how laziness makes a weak character that falls in the crisis of life by knocking the prop from under a three-legged chair. "White slavery begins with presuming on feminine acquaintance and bold advances to clerks," he said. "It ends in blood money and lost souls. Every young man should ask himself in dealing with girls: 'Suppose my sister were in her place—what would I want done?'"

Skylarkers Mobbed By Throng of Women

Man Falls in Baby Carriage While He Plays on Sidewalk and Starts Small lot.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Several hundred persons, most of them women attacked Frederick Mochson and Raymond Dragoni, last night when one of the men, as a result of skylarking, fell in the baby carriage of the 18-months-old son of Joseph Bilon in front of the Bilon home, at 57 East One Hundred and Eleventh Street.

The baby carriage rolled off the sidewalk. Then the crowd got active. Mochson and Dragoni were dragged in the gutter and kicked and pummelled. Stones and garbage were thrown at them. When the reserves learned what had started the affair they locked up the two men on charges of disorderly conduct.

Surveyor Recovers Timepiece of Parent Slain in Massacre of Thornburg's Troop.

CRAIG, COLO., June 28.—D. W. Grams, Government surveyor, returned from a few days spent in the White Rock reservation in Utah. While there he recovered a gold watch from one of the Indians which had evidently been removed by one of the braves from the body of his father following a battle with the red men during the early days.

The elder Grams was a sergeant in Major Thornburg's troop, which was ambushed and almost annihilated while marching from Rawlins to the relief of the Indian agency at Meeker, and he was among those killed.

John Bunyan's Anvil Found in Junk Pile

Relic Bears Name of Author of "Pilgrim's Progress," and Is Dated 1647.

PASADENA, CAL., June 28.—Bearing the name of J. Bunyan, the date 1647, and the word Helstowe, an ancient anvil, the original property of the author of "Pilgrim's Progress," is now in the possession of Maurice Beagarie, of 57 Green Street.

The relic was discovered in a junk heap in St. Neots, near the town of Elstowe, or Helstowe, where Bunyan lived, by Beagarie's father, about 30 years ago, and was presented by him to his son ten years ago.

Angry Mother Purchases Rawhide From Harness Shop When Boy Exhibits Marks of Punishment.

OXNARD, CAL., June 28.—Angered because Principal C. A. Marcey, of the Filmore Grammar School, inflicted corporal punishment on her small son, Mrs. E. M. Taylor horsewhipped him on the street of the town.

The boy exhibited the marks of punishment to his mother.

Mrs. Taylor went to a harness shop and purchased a blacksnake whip.

Concealing the weapon in a piece of paper she stole upon Principal Marcey as he was engaged in conversation on the street. Without warning she dealt him a blow and continued to apply the lash.

TROOPS TO MAKE CAVALRY RAID OF THE SHENANDOAH

Realistic Advance Next Month Into the Historic Valley May Mean New System.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Troopers at Fort Myer have begun preparations for their 70-mile march into the Shenandoah Valley next month to participate in maneuvers expected to result in reorganization of the mounted forces of the army.

The Shenandoah Valley, where "Phil" Sheridan made his famous ride 50 years ago, has been chosen as the bloodless battle ground for the test. For two months this summer a full brigade of cavalry and a battery of horse artillery will maneuver and "fight" over the red roads, the green hills, and fields near Winchester.

The department has leased a tract of ground one mile broad and two miles long in the heart of the Shenandoah, 70 miles away, and orders were issued to the troops some time ago.

Oglethorpe Troopers on March.

Two regiments of the brigade, those from Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., and Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., must ride 700 dusty miles under a summer sun before they can reach the valley, and they must report July 20. The First Squadron from Fort Myer will have only 70 miles to go, and the horse battery from Fort Riley, Kans., will be sent by rail.

Secretary Garrison will be a frequent spectator. Major General Wood, chief of staff, United States Army, probably will spend much time there, and President Wilson may make the trip.

The necessity for a rehabilitation of the cavalry was disclosed when the general staff some time ago made ambitious plans for the reorganization of the army so as to prepare it for the defense of the country against attack by any great military power. This resulted in the sending to Europe last year of a board of six cavalry officers, who studied the German, Russian, Austro-Hungarian, French and English organizations.

Officers Study Abroad.

Four months were spent abroad by these officers, and since their return they have prepared plans for radical changes in the organization and use of cavalry of the American army.

The tests will take place under the direction of Colonel C. H. Murray, of the Twelfth Cavalry, as Brigadier General E. J. McClernand, the head of the cavalry board, is prohibited from exercising actual command by virtue of his retirement. General McClernand, however, with Lieutenant Colonels J. T. Dickmann and Fred S. Foltz, Major Jesse McI. Carter and Captain Frank Parker, all members of the board which studied the European systems, will be present.

Some of the practical questions to be worked out are:

How large a command can a captain handle successfully?

How many such units can a colonel handle to the best advantage under conditions approximating hostilities?

The new formation of the cavalry into double ranks also will be tried out on a large scale, a practical test by Captain Parker, of the Eleventh Cavalry, at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., with an experimental squadron having been pronounced a complete success by General H. L. Scott.

W. Rivers, a prominent Willamette rancher, will start from this city in about two weeks for the Oregon coast.

Rivers states that several years ago while he and his wife were visiting at the Oaks they consulted a fortuneteller, who told them that they would discover the treasure. She stated that it would be found in a cave in a rock which is a prominent feature of the coast scenery near Nestucca Beach.

Peck alleges in his petition that during all his married life the grandmother has interfered in his domestic affairs, and that several months ago she induced his wife to leave him, taking their infant daughter, and that she has not since allowed him either to se or communicate with either wife or child.

PROPOSITION TO TURN NAVY INTO FLOATING FAIR

Arkansas Congressman Would Have Battleships Carry Pumpkins Instead of Sshells.

DEWEY AS A BUSINESS MAN

All Tars To Be Taught Salesmanship and Spread Commercial Fame of the Nation.

By JONATHAN WINFIELD.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Representative Goodwin of Arkansas has risen to dispute the wisdom of Secretary of State William J. Bryan, though Representative Goodwin is a Democrat and has cast his free and untrammeled ballot some several times for the Nebraskan for President.

But when he read that the Secretary of State had declared that the United States Navy is useless and the army nearly so, he rose to protest. The navy can be useful, he insists. It can readily be converted into a floating exposition of the products of American farms and factories, and this show can be of untold value in making foreign tours.

Nations to See Show.

Upon this theory Representative Goodwin got to work. If his enthusiasm should sweep Congress off its feet, England, France, Germany, Japan and the Latin-American republics will be edified by the sight of piles of Iowa pumpkins in the magazines of Uncle Sam's battleships, instead of 14-inch shells.

When a battleship is dressed, instead of flags flying from the twisted iron mastheads and lookout towers, there will be suspended from stem to stern strings of shoes from the Massachusetts factories. On the armor belt, just above the water line, will be painted in large white letters, "Made by the United States Steel Corporation."

Instead of smokeless powder and torpedoes, the battleships will be equipped with wheat and flour from Minnesota and Wisconsin, and cornmeal from the "corn belt."

From Admiral Dewey down the line to the youngest midshipman the officers will be sent to special business schools which Uncle Sam will have to open. Enlisted men, in addition to their other duties, will take courses in the practice of the warehousemen. Then, after having sufficient knowledge in the premises, Uncle Sam will become an efficient traveling salesman, visiting every port in the world and exploiting American merchandise, commodities and staples.

Asks Redfield for Figures.

As Mr. Goodwin put it:

"I see no reason why the American Navy should not be put to good use. Opposed to senseless multiplication of useless battleships, I can see no reason why those we have built at so great expense should not be used in advancing trade before they rot and become junk."

Mr. Goodwin proposed to direct Secretary Daniels of the Navy Department to report within 60 days to Secretary Redfield "the extent and character of all space on all ships of the United States Navy which might reasonably be temporarily used for the purpose of exhibiting American manufactured articles and other articles of commerce." He proposes that the Secretary of Commerce shall allot space on American ships to American manufacturers, merchants, exporters, boards of trade or other commercial organizations for use in exhibiting their wares.

Wife's Flirting With Car Men Suit's Basis

On numerous occasions, according to Marmie, he was compelled to remain at home with his wife to prevent her from spending the day riding back and forth on street cars.

Doctors Trying to Photograph Thought

Experiments Are Made to Prove Theory of Dead Surgeon That Mental Action Is Recorded.

Richardson, the famous Harvard surgeon, is being completed in a private laboratory at the Harvard Medical School in an effort to prove Dr. Richardson's theory that thoughts are recorded and should be visible on the outer walls of the cerebrum.

Edna Goodrich Finds a Descendant of the Acadians

Also Norman Woman Who Never Heard of Evangeline

Actress Makes Discovery While Seeking Local Color to Aid Her to Take Chief Part in Dramatization of Longfellow Poem.

Edna Goodrich, famous as an actress and one of Nat Goodwin's wives, is now in Normandy studying local atmosphere the better to fit herself for the chief part in "Evangeline," the dramatization of Longfellow's poem which is to be staged in this city in the fall.

From France she will go, in July, to Nova Scotia to continue her observations.

She writes in an interesting and original way of her search for a descendant of the old Acadians.

FALAISE, NORMANDY, June 28.—After several weeks of surfeiting myself with the theater of Paris and Berlin, I set out for Normandy, from whence the Acadians came and where, doubtless, the ancestors of the glorious wanderers had steeped themselves in the religion and faith immortalized by Longfellow—for I sought for communion with Evangeline.

I admit I had a faint hope that somewhere I might find a descendant of a returned Acadian, with tale or relic of Acadian days.

After consulting Baedecker, I decided to go to Caen, only four hours from Paris.

I landed in Caen and called upon the British Consul, there being no American representative in the town. He was located in a little side street. Conspicuous on his side door was a sign reading, "Office hours from 2 to 3." It was but 1:45, but I had the temerity to ring.

Points Pointedly To Sign.

I was greeted by a sort of faded red edition of Lawrence D'Orsay, carrying a red cotton print napkin and a red gleam in his eye, which informed me that I had disturbed the statesman at his lunch. With the unoccupied index finger he pointed at the office hour sign.

"I saw it," I replied, "and I apologize; but I am rather in a hurry, and"— "Oh, you're an American?" he interrupted with mingled tone of discovery and accusation.

"Yes," I replied.

"Well, I cannot talk to you now," accompanied by an embracing of the long red mustache with the long red napkin.

"I am sure you can tell me what I want to know," I persisted. "Do you know anything of the Acadians?"

"Of what?" he rejoined.

"You have read 'Evangeline?'" I volunteered.

"Cannot say I ever heard of it," he replied.

"It's a rather well-known poem," I ventured, "written by a Henry W. Longfellow."

Gives a O'Orsay Laugh.

"Ha! Ha! Ha!" he guffawed in D'Orsay's most aproved guttural, "I've far too much to do to bother my head with that sort of rot. Really, you know, I don't think I'm the person you're seeking at all."

I looked at him, as he again tried to suspend himself on the mustache, had one good laugh and agreed. "I guess, possibly, you're not."

Twenty miles from Caen is Bayon, a Norman village, where the old Norman spirit and surroundings have been practically untouched by time. At 4 o'clock in a mid-week afternoon the villagers, neatly dressed, were turning out of their homes at every side and all filing to church, fine old cathedral built in the eleventh century. I never witnessed so unanimous a reply to the call of a church bell.

There, indeed, was the spirit of Evangeline, as Longfellow breathed it into the life in Acadia. There were the people who looked only to their priest for guidance and stayed their hands at his command when their all was taken from them. I stood near the cathedral as these pious people entered, and I know from the faces, some spiritual, others deeply reposeful, that religion was something more than a form.

Found No Acadians

I sought for a trace of a descendant of a returned Acadian, but my search was in vain, except that I found the clew which later led to an interesting meeting in this place.

Finally I gave up Caen for this place, and on the oldest street (the Rue Val d'Ante) I found an Acadian descendant. She is ninety-four and her name is Arlette La Croix—named, as were so many Norman girls, after the fair Arlette, the tanner's daughter who fascinated Robert the Devil, became his wife, and later the mother of William the Conqueror.

This old, sunny-faced, toothless woman lives all alone in one of the tiny stone ruins that line this most picturesque old street.

Her husband and children died years ago, and, so far as that part of Normandy is concerned, she is the last of the Acadians. Her great-grandfather, Pierre Archambault, she told me, was driven from Grand Pre and landed in Louisiana.

After long suffering he gathered enough money to return with his children to Falaise. His eldest boy, her grandfather, had frequently related to her tales of wild America and the Indians.

Never Heard Longfellow Legend.

She had never heard of the legend of Evangeline and, of course, had never read the poem. I gave her a copy. It was bound in red, and I am sure the cover delighted her. As best I could I told her some of the story. She was entranced and assured me that she would find some one who knew English to translate it.

There was a lightful freshness about this old woman. She was wrinkled, weather-beaten and growing feeble, but her eyes twinkled and she laughed with the spontaneity of a child.

In her tiny room was a very old Bible, a well-thumbed missle, and on the wall a rude crucifix. They seemed her only companions, yet this lovable old soul had found that magic "something" in these mute companions which make the old, unquestioning, unchallenging faith a glorious blessing.

Again I saw what Longfellow had meant in his perfect delineation of Acadian character. Before me sat its embodiment, a worn-out, overworked old woman, who had none of the material blessings, who never had known any of the world's modern luxuries, yet who could set near the end of her journey blessing all who came near her with a smile that arises only from a beautiful soul.

Edna Goodrich in Falaise, Normandy, on the street where the women do their washing as in the time of Robert the Devil and on which she found a description of the wonderful people Longfellow has immortalized.

And after all the final test of a man's life is the smile he ends it with. Be it absent or grave or imbecillic, or fawning, or sardonic, it is his record.

Dear old Arlette La Croix's smile was one of the rare sights that I shall treasure long after I have forgotten many imposing spectacles. As one of the last of the Acadians she is a glorious example of a people who believed in God and were blessed by their faith.

My journeys in Normandy had brought their reward. It was said with a better understanding of and a still greater reverence for the Acadian character that I approached my study of Evangeline. In secluded Normandy I buried myself.

As I sat the first evening contemplating the glorious character of Evangeline, I picked up a week-old English paper. The featured story dealt with fresh outrages committed by suffragettes, and immediately I realized what Evangeline was not. She was not a suffragetter. Instead of making demands she made sacrifices; instead of asking what she could get she asked what she could give. All reasonable people must agree that women are entitled to additional rights, yet I wonder if the struggle for the winning of them will compensate us for what we must lose of those fine feminine qualities of which Evangeline was the supreme example.

I learned, too, another theory in Normandy: It had never occurred to me that there could be a spot in the civilized world where the dollar would beckon in vain—certainly not in Europe, since in all my previous European experiences I had never seen anything but a highly organized dollar-trapping system, baited mainly for Americans.

Undoubtedly we Americans are largely to blame for this foreign degredation since we seem to have lost all sense of values when we are removed eight days from our bank balance.

The ocean trip is agreed to be narcotic. The eastward trip on the Atlantic is even more—it is opiate-dream producing. We embark with a fair sense of value. We disembark with the hallucination that there never will be an end to our money, and this hallucination persists until we embark on the westward trip, when the awakening process begins.

Question for Psychologist.

I should like some psychologist to explain the difference in the effect of eastward and westward ocean travel.

But to return to my startling discovery; I did find a place where no laps were spread for dollars, and it was only four hours from Paris, that Queen of the European Mercenaries, which would sell anything she possesses, including her president's beautiful beard.

My discovery came in Caen on my second day in Normandy; stirred by a desire to photograph interesting places I determined to engage a photographer.

To the first photographer I explained what I wanted. He had me tell him many times, then he told it back to me several times. When we understood each other I thought it only remained to settle terms, and I inquired his charge. It was most reasonable. We agreed and I then told him I had a motor boat outside and was ready.

"Oh, that was quite impossible. He could not go to-day—no—no—nor yet to-morrow—and the day after, too, was impossible, and it would be at least four days before he could make up his mind to go away on a long three-hour trip."

Money Didn't Move Him.

I pointed out to him how soon we could have it done with. "No—no—it was impossible."

I suggested that we start out very early the following morning so that he might be back in his studio before the commencement of business.

It was not to be thought of—he had never done such a thing. I then offered more money; he was unmoved.

Being obsessed with a determination to have the photographs I continued offering more till I reached five times the price. I might as well have offered a subway ticket. He was not interested. If I could not wait he was sorry, but he knew of another photographer. He might be willing.

Defeated in my first experience with Norman commercial indifference I sought the second photographer. He listened and talked for a very long time, made quite sure he understood what I wanted, was very glad to accept the work, settled terms with me, and when he said the terrible word "When" I lost courage.

I answered "To-morrow." It was just as impossible, he must have five days. I argued and coaxed, and now in desperation raised the price to a ridiculous point, but he was not interested.

In desperation I went to a camera store presided over by a man and his wife. I tried to persuade either one of them to come with me, bringing a camera and getting snap-shots.

Wealth Is Helpless.

It was just as hopeless. They volunteered to teach me how to use the camera—that was all. I offered them more money than their little store earned in several good days in vain. Money was not the slightest argument. Crestfallen, I left them, gazing at my money and wondering how it had so suddenly lost its power. It was the first time I had ever seen it so helpless.

I drove 20 miles to Bayon, where there was one photographer. If was a thing he might do some fine day—if I could call again.

Disappointed and discouraged, I returned to Caen. It was finally in this town that I secured my photographer. He began just as the other had, but now grim determination had seized me. He wanted the usual time of four or five days. I told him that he was going to do it NOW. He got excited, but I fastened a steely glare upon him and told him he was. I kept telling him he was until out of sheer exhaustion he succumbed.

At the foot of Rue Val D'Ante in Falaise is the famous little stream, the Ante, where Norman women for many centuries past have done the family washing and where the laundry work of Falaise is still disposed of.

Romance of Robert.

Just around the turn at the top of the hill is the old castle of Robert, the Devil. Robert used to watch the Falaise maidens washing at the stream. It was there he beheld Arlette and fell in love with her.

Arlette became his wife and later the mother of William, the Conqueror. Her blood had its effect on the history of Europe. Her lily white feet tripped up many a future aspirant.

At the point where Arlette was courting, the Falaise maidens are still washing clothes, perhaps in the hope that another Robert may appear. This was one of the scenes I wanted photographer. We secured some interesting photographs of the old houses and a picture of Arlette La Croix, the only descendant of the returned Acadians that I had been able to find in Normandy.

The Norman disregard of money led me to inquire into their finances. I concluded people so indifferent must be poor. To my amazement I learned that Normandy is much the richest province in Europe; French bankers sell more investment securities there than in any other part of France.

These seemingly indifferent people are shareholders in practically all of the world's large enterprises. The secret of Norman wealth is thrift. A franc which finds no way into a Norman coffer is doomed to darkness and inertia. The Norman will not spend for anything.

They like money, but money has made them independent. If one has the temerity to find fault with anything a Norman merchant sells him, he is asked to leave the place never to return. Guests in Norman hotels who criticized the service have had their rooms taken from them. If there ever was a land of independence it is Normandy.

Garage for Baby Carriages in Church

Plans for Philadelphia House of Worship Include Place for Vehicles of Infants.

PHILADELPHIA, June 28.—Many new ideas have been advanced from time to time by the builders of modern Sunday schools, but it remains for the board of trustees of the Henry Disston Methodist Episcopal Church to conceive a new thought that will materially assist in the conveniences of their members.

According to the plans of the builders a garage for baby carriages is to be included in the equipment in the new edifice that is now under construction.

SQUAW SWAPS FORBIDDEN BY UNCLE SAM

Wholesale Marriage of Winnebago Indians Prohibited by Government Order.

WINNEBAGO INDIAN RESERVATION, NEBR., June 28.—The Winnebagoes are mad. They think they have been bunkoed. They were promised a big powwow, in which every Indian buck was to be married to one squaw according to the white man's laws, and now the Government has held up this order, and the great marriage ceremony, which was to join every brave to a squaw, and incidentally rid the brave of any superfluous squaws he may have accumulated, is not to be performed until the arrival of the new Indian agent.

The Winnebagoes had sent invitations to all their friends in Oklahoma, South Dakota and Montana, and they were expecting gifts in such quantities as were never before lavished upon an Indian tribe. But they have been forced to cancel these invitations and to forego the wedding presents for the time being.

No Swapping of Squaws.

And what is equally bad is an order which has gone forth from the Government authorities: There shall be no more swapping of wives by the Indian bucks. Every man must continue with the partner with whom he is now living. And when the time of the big wedding comes around, every Indian must get married to his present squaw.

The Winnebagoes were not ready for this. The big wedding was not scheduled for a month yet and many of the bucks intended swapping or selling their present squaws and taking new ones.

Marriage Laws Lax.

Winnebago tribal laws concerning marriage and divorce were rather lax, to say the least. Marriage consisted in securing the consent of the squaw to come over to the home of the buck and live. And divorce was consummated when the buck kicked his squaw out of the house and went out to find a new one, or when the squaw got tired of her husband and left him to take up her abode with some other red man.

According to Indian officials, very few of the Winnebago women had been "married" less than a dozen times, and some boasted of having had as many as twenty "husbands." And many of the bucks said they had been "married" as high as fifty times—and no one denied it.

Commission to Rule Canal Concessions

Appointment of Anglo-American Body Will be Announced In a Few Days.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—The appointment of a joint Anglo-American Commission will be announced at an early date to examine the question of sites and concessions along the Panama Canal for business houses, stores and other buildings.

Apparently it has yet to be determined in fact, as apart from principle, how far the United States Government, as distinct from that of Colombia, may grant concessions for land in perpetuity, and further, how far the title to such concessions made to foreign firms can be secured.

100 College Men in Dishwashers' Union

Greatest Proportion of Graduates in Any Trade Found in Organization in San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 28.—Of the 700 members of the San Francisco Dishwashers' Union 100 are college graduates. This, it is said, is a greater proportion of college men than can be found in any other labor organization in the country.

The statistics were compiled by two members of the union, one of whom says he is a former instructor in mathematics in an Eastern college.

POSTMASTER TRIES IN VAIN TO RESIGN PLACE

Aged Official Has But Three Mails a Week But Patrons Muddy Her Parlor Floor.

BACKUS, MINN., June 28.—The postmaster of the smallest postoffice in the United States wants to quit and she can't. The Government ignores her resignation.

Her name is Mrs. Mary Armstrong, of Wicklow. She is 71 and her husband, James, was a veteran of the Civil War. Fourten persons get their mail at her log cabin, among towering pines, 12 miles from the nearest station.

Tries to Resign Post.

For more than two years she has been trying to persuade the Postoffice authorities to give the postoffice to some one else.

Telling her experiences, Mrs. Armstrong said:

"I had to turn my best front room into a place for the accommodation of the office patrons. I had to set up a letter rack where my best rocker was to sit alongside the front window, and the mail bags occupy the place I had picked out for the lounge.

"Men come wading through the snow in winter and mud in summer and track my front room all up, and, between them and Ed—that's my grandson—it kept me busy with the broom and dustpan.

Three Mails a Week.

"The official duties in a big town must be simply awful," continued Mrs. Armstrong. "We have three mails a week and I have to sort the letters and papers for 12 persons and put them in the rural delivery sacks. Two other patrons call at the office for their mail. The red tape causes me to lose sleep. Reports have to be made to the Postoffice Department as if the office were doing $1,000 worth of business daily."

TAKES PICTURE OF WRECK BEFORE RESCUING INJURED

Special Cable to The American.

PARIS, June 28.—M. Briand, the French ex-Premier, who was seriously injured in a motor car accident recently, said that he and his companion, M. Willen, were pinned down by the wreckage.

"I told M. Willen to hurry up and get free," said M. Briand, "and what do you think he did first when he had got free? Instead of trying to get me out he took his camera, begged me to keep steady and then took a snapshot of the scene, which he considered historic.

BRILLIANT BATTLE SURE IN FRANK TRIAL IN CLASH OF HOOPER AND ARNOLD

Order Has at Last Been Rested and Indications Are That Struggle of Attorneys Will Be Waged in the Most Ethical Manner.

By AN OLD POLICE REPORTER.

As deplorable as the Phagan case is, in all its melancholy details, it already is evident enough that there will come of it eventually much that the community may be thankful for.

In the first place, Atlanta and Georgia, and incidentally the entire South will have learned a good lesson in law and order, justice and fair play, and to that extent may be the better prepared for the next case of the kind that comes to their attention.

In the second place, there will be in the future no such wretched bungling and frenzied appeal in and from police headquarters, as for a time marked the Phagan case unique among its kind.

It looks now as if the decks have been pretty well cleared for action and that Leo Frank's trial may be expected to proceed in dignity and order, and that in its final analysis the truth of Mary Phagan's murder may be established, at least to the extent of Frank's real or suspected participation therein.

If Frank should be convicted, that would mean the subsequent indictment and conviction of the negro Conley, as an accessory after the fact.

Conley Indictment May Follow.

If Frank should be found not guilty, that would mean the indictment of Conley, as principal to the murder, in all human probability.

It evidently is the purpose of the State to hold Conley free of indictment, pending the disposition of the charges against Frank. His status as a material witness depends much upon this, of course.

There always is a chance, however, that a Grand Jury may take up a thing of this sort of its own motion, and to that extent there remains the possibility of prior indictment hanging over Conley.

It seems more likely, however, that the case will go to trial about as it shapes up now.

I do not incline to think the State really has any further sensational or particularly effective thing up its sleeve. Neither do I think the defense has.

There may be, on both sides, bits of corroborated evidence or evidence to offset this, that, or the other to come, but in the main I think the public is in possession of all the essential facts in the Phagan case to date.

The public must remember, however, that not all the things it has read in the newspapers, not yet one-half the things, ever will go before the jury trying Leo Frank as competent evidence.

And it is upon the COMPETENT evidence alone that the court will permit Leo Frank to be judged.

For instance, nothing that Mrs. Frank has said in the public prints will go before the jury. A wife is estopped in law from testifying either for or against her husband.

Fomby Woman Rejected.

The Fomby woman already has been rejected as a possible witness against Frank. Her story admittedly is too preposterous even for the State to bother with it further.

How much of Conley's story the jury will hear is entirely problematical.

He will be warned that he need not testify to anything calculated to incriminate himself, and even if he elects to disregard this warning there is much in his statement that likely will go down and out as incompetent or irrelevant.

The ponderous assurances of Frank's guilt, so frequently thundered from police headquarters by Detective Lanford, will, so far as the jury is concerned, not be there. Detective Lanford will not be on the jury—and his opinion as to the innocence or guilt of Frank will not be immediately valuable, therefore.

Frank's own statement, it must be rembered, will be delivered to the jury, not under oath.

The jury will be instructed by the court that it may accept the defendant's statement as the truth in its entirety, and to the exclusion of ALL the sworn testimony, if it sees fit; or it may accept it in part and reject it in part; or it may reject the statement as a whole.

The jury, and the jury ALONE, will be the judge of the facts.

The law—the impersonal law—that the jury will be required to apply to those facts it will get from the court.

It looks, then, as if the Phagan case, getting down to brass tacks, will revolve finally about these persons:

Leo Frank, the defendant; Solicitor Dorsey and Attorney Frank Hooper, representing the State; Luther Z. Rosser and Reuben Arnold, representing the defendant; the judge, the jury and a dozen or so competent and material witnesses.

Order at Last Comes.

So, at last, has order been brought out of chaos, after weeks and weeks of hysteria, stuff and nonsense, passion and prejudice, facts and near-facts, truth and lies, impatience and intolerance—all jumbled into about the worst mess I ever undertook, in my way, to analyze and unravel, in seeking the truth!

Leo Frank will receive a fair trial, and the written and recorded verdict, whatever it may be, will be accepted generally as the truth.

If the jury agrees that Frank is guilty, that verdict will be taken to be a just one. Nothing short of the most sensational and revolutionary new evidence likely would serve to re-establish his good name, once he is convicted in the Superior Court.

On the other hand, if the jury shall agree that Frank is not guilty, I think he will be taken back into the friendly and fair-minded good will of the people of Atlanta, a free and untarnished man, and there likely will come a revulsion of popular feeling in his behalf, that will go far toward offsetting and reconciling him to the horrible ordeal he passed through.

The approaching trial likely will be one of the greatest legal battles ever fought in Georgia.

On the one hand—that of the State—Hugh Dorsey, the Solicitor General, has done the drudgery, and Frank Hooper is to handle the picturesque. Hooper likely will figure much more in the public eye hereafter than Dorsey will, for it will be Hooper's business to paint the rainbow, snatch the stars from the heavens, and open the floodgates of tears—if he can!

On the other hand—that of the defense—Luther Z. Rosser has done the drudgery, and Reuben Arnold will have the delicate task of leading the jury along the primrose path that leads to Frank's acquittal.

All Have Big Reputations.

All of these men are great lawyers, with reputations to sustain, and each one may be depended upon to act a part entirely in keeping with the honorable profession of the law. I do not believe there is sufficient money in Atlanta to secure the services of any one of these men in an unworthy undertaking.

Each one of these men may be depended upon to do his best by his client, and as each one is of the quality I note, a fair trial seems assured.

It is a happy and a consoling circumstance that the trial of Leo Frank is to be presided over by an upright and just judge, argued by upright and honorable attorneys, and a verdict written by twelve "good men and true," as the law—the LAW in all its majesty—directs!

While by no means as spectacular a thing to say as something else might be, it is a matter of deep and abiding significance that Leo Frank, with his life, his good name, and all that he holds most dear at stake, is assured of a fair trial and a just verdict, notwithstanding all the frenzied and sinister detail of irrelevant and incoherent "testimony" and "evidence" set forth here and there, as time has run on since Mary Phagan was slain.

Victory for Society.

In the trial of Leo Frank THE SUPREMACY OF THE LAW will be vindicated beyond carping or cavil—and therein the most tremendous victory to society will be achieved.

Frank Hooper is one of the most experienced prosecuting attorneys in the State. He has served as Solicitor General on one of the most important circuits in Georgia, and his career thereon was entirely to his credit.

He is suave, incisive, deliberate, calm in action and eagle-eyed in seeing a point that may be turned to his client's advantage.

In summing up the case of the State against Leo Frank, Hooper will be at his best. He is a master in presenting his case to the jury for its consideration. I understand he is to be associated soon with Judge Arthur Powell and John D. Little, in Atlanta, in the practice of law. They will make a great team. Hooper is an attorney of the same class and caliber as Powell and Little.

But there to combat the best efforts that Hooper may put forth will stand that remarkable lawyer, Reuben Arnold.

Whatever qualms Frank may feel when he thinks of Hooper, doubtless they are relieved in large measure when he turns his thoughts to Arnold.

Reuben Arnold is a lawyer of constant surprises. Age can not wither him nor custom stale his infinite variety. Frank's case will be presented to the jury as few men could present it, when Arnold undertakes the work.

Convinced of Innocence.

Arnold says he never entered the case until he had convinced himself of Frank's innocence, and I quite believe he speaks the truth. I do not think there is the shadow of doubt either in Arnold's or Rosser's mind that Frank is entirely guiltless of the killing of Mary Phagan.

That Hooper may have some doubts as to the full strength of the State's case against Frank seems likely, for soon after entering the case he said this:

I have not been employed in the case to prosecute Leo M. Frank, but to help find and convict the murderer of Mary Phagan. If the trial proves we are wrong, we will begin work on another angle. We have but one object and idea. It is that justice and the law be vindicated. We are, however, convinced we have a strong case against the accused.

Now, I do not think a manlier thing has been said in all the mass of things that have been said in the Phagan case than the foregoing.

If any person who does not know Frank Hooper has any doubts as to his complete integrity and lofty ideals the statement credited to him herein should remove them. Only a man who wishes to do right could or would say what Hooper said, soon after taking up the State's end of the Phagan case.

The most ardent, if honest, extremes of opinion well may meet on the platform Hooper sets up!

And if everybody in Atlanta will say, as he says, "I want to help find and convict the murderer of Mary Phagan, regardless of whom that murderer may be," everybody will find himself on a platform of decency and fair play—and that's where he ought to wish to find himself.

I have sought, in these articles, neither to prosecute nor to defend Frank. I have sought, in such manner as I might, to help find the murderer of Mary Phagan. I want to see him found and convicted.

I, like Hooper, have desired, above all things, to see JUSTICE AND THE LAW VINDICATED, and I indorse and agree with Hooper's expressed desire that both may be.

Search Will Continue.

If the State fails to convict Frank—the State will turn its eyes elsewhere.

Could any man ask a fairer or squarer promise from Hooper than that?

It merely means that Hooper WILL ACCEPT THE FINDINGS OF THE COURT, after orderly and prescribed procedure, frankly and unquestioningly, as the TRUTH of the matter.

If Frank is guilty, then the law will take its course.

If he is not guilty, he will take his place once more among his fellowmen, as free of stain as any of them.

That's where Hooper stands, and that's where I am satisfied to stand also!

And if somebody, early in the investigation of the Phagan case, had calmed the mad scramble for "clews," "evidence," "testimony" and what not, with the deliberate and convincing words of Frank Hooper, some of the utterly ridiculous theories would never have been evolved and the entire case would have rested upon a basis of sanity, which would have eliminated many of the ugly features.

Happily, however, the chatterboxes and the human phonographs have been given most effective pause in their wild riot of talk, and if the Society for the Suppression of Unnecessary Noises has rounded them up for good and all, so be it, and praise forevermore!

Sanity and THE LAW OF THE LAND have taken the Phagan case in hand, and through these agencies will the truth of the murder of Mary Phagan be set up eventually.

Luncheon Lurch Aid to Digestion

Pre-Prandial Prance Society Fad

Variation of Tango Brings Dancers One Step Nearer Dining Each Step They Take.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The Luncheon Lurch, the latest variation of the Tango and the Turkey Trot, which has seized the society of the Capital, is declared by experts on gastronomy to be the greatest known appetizer and first aid to digestion.

So effective has it been found along these lines that the Martini is now almost unknown on the boards of Washington hosts, while the pepsin tablet supply of the druggists is practically considered worthless stock.

There is a deep method in the Luncheon Lurch. Contrary to the Tango, which is danced after tea, the Lurch is a prepandian pastime. At a given time before the viands are to be served the orchestra strikes up something syncopated.

Guests immediately begin lurching and continue the dance until they have worked up an appetite considered commensurate with the feast about to be served.

Each step carries the dancers nearer the dining room, and observant ones declare that it is an invariable rule that the best trenchermen always dance with a remarkable celerity, while the dyspeptics lurch so slowly that they are to all appearances posing in tableau.

Among the prominent lurchers are Miss Katherine Elkins, Miss Dorothy Williams, Miss Sally Williams, Miss Katherine Britton, Miss Marguerite Barbour and Mrs. James F. Curtis.

ALL WOMEN TO VOTE IN TIME IS SENATE'S IDEA

Even the Most Conservative Members Believe the Fair Sex Will Cast Ballot the World Over.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—That women in all civilized countries will be permitted to vote is regarded as inevitable by the most conservative Senators and Representatives.

It is their opinion that steady progress is being made and that Great Britain, the United States and other leading nations will eventually recognize that further delay is useless.

Two-Thirds Vote Needed.

The resolution proposing an amendment to the Federal constitution under which women would be given the ballot, now awaiting consideration by the Senate, is expected to be passed on at the next session. A two-thirds vote would be necessary for its adoption.

It would require the appoval of sixty-four Senators to make women suffrage operative for submission to the States, so far as the upper branch of Congress is concerned.

The chief handicap preventing woman suffrage lies in the opposition of Southern Congressmen. The votes for the women's movement have made headway in the South. A bitter struggle is in progress in Alabama, where Representative Hobson is seeking the Senatorship, as against Mr. Johnston, on a platform favoring woman suffrage and temperance. Senator Johnston says he will achieve re-election without difficulty.

Have Twenty-Four Votes.

It is figured that these Senators will certainly support the Chamberlain resolution providing for a constitutional amendment permitting women to vote; Ashurst and Smith, of Arizona; Thomas and Shafroth, of Colorado; Borah and Brady, of Idaho; Myers and Walsn, of Montana; Gallinger and Hollis, of New Hampshire; Chamberlain and Lane, of Oregon; Smoot and Sutherland, of Utah; Jones and Poindexter, of Washington; Clark and Warren, of Wyoming; Gore and Owens, of Oklahoma; Ransdell and Thornton, of Louisiana.

This totals but twenty-four of the sixty-four votes necessary in the Senate. In view of recent action in Iowa, Illinois and Kansas it is possible that Senators Cummins, Kenyon, Sherman, Lewis, Bristow and Thompson may be added to the list, making thirty in all. It is claimed that two or three additional votes may come from New England, but no names are suggested.

Oregon's New Law Requiring Health Certificates Held Responsible.

VANCOUVER, WASH., June 28.—The record for marriage licenses issued in one day during the 60 years in which records have been kept was broken here when ten couples secured marriage licenses. Nor is this all.

At the present rate, in fifteen days the greatest month's record will be broken in one-half the time—and all because Oregon passed a law requiring certificates of health from men making application for marriage licenses. Already 58 licenses have been issued this month, the record being 65 for any entire month.

BURN ATLANTA CLEAN, PLAN OF SANITAR YCHIEF

Settlement of Crematory Row Leaves Mayor, Council and Everybody Pleased.

John Jentzen, Sanitary Chief, is the happiest man in Atlanta as a result of the settlement Saturday of the crematory row. Operating his department without an incinerator, he said, was like trying to sail a ship on dry land, and that he had had to bear the brunt of complaints against the situation from thousands of exasperated citizens.

"That decision in the Mayor's office marks a new era in Atlanta," he said. "We shall begin a general clean-up the day the crematory is completed. I understand that that will not be longer than ten days. We shall burn Atlanta pure.

"Let the people take note of these instructions:

Gives Sanitary Rules.

"Keep the lids on garbage cans.

"Pile up the trash in yards and notify the sanitary department to come and get it.

"Don't throw things into streets and alleys.

"Help us put an end to the flies and musquitoes. You know trash breeds them."

The Chief said the new crematory would increase greatly the efficiency of his department and that it would shorten hauls and allow sanitary wagons to make more frequent visits.

He declared it would reduce the death rate and make Atlanta a more pleasant place to live in.

Mayor Well Pleased.

Although Mayor Woodward has been almost unanimously opposed in his attitude by the Council and brought most bitter criticism on himself, he smiled and said he was well satisfied over the outcome.

The Mayor's victory in the Supreme Court caused the price of the incinerator to be reduced from $276,000 to $260,000. His recent firm stand caused him to gain a point of honor.

Council endeavored to avoid allowing him to execute the contract. The concession is that he will execute it, following a special meeting of the Council Tuesday. That point has been the whole cause of the last controversy.

Turkish Bath Cures Rheumatism at Home

Costs But 2c a Bath.

Quickly Cures Kidney Trouble, Nervous Prostration and All Skin Diseases.

The Robinson Thermal or Turkish bath, taken at home, is becoming a rage. Those who have used the bath have been completely carried away with enthusiasm because of the astonishing results obtained.

Well known physicians say that the Robinson Thermal Bath at home is about to become an almost universal conqueror of disease. This is not an exaggeration. Any man or woman can prove its results inside of 24 hours, in some cases 30 minutes.

In cases of rheumatism, especially, the uric acid poison is extracted from the system through the pores, almost as liquids are sucked up through a straw. Drugs merely smother the poison or ease the pain. They do not extract the poison from the body.

Just read this letter:

"I loaned my cabinet to an old friend all crippled up with rheumatism, last May. Feet, legs and hands badly swollen. He had spent some time at different Hot Springs without relief. A week ago he started in to use the cabinet, taking the steam heat in the morning and the dry heat at night, before going to bed. He kept this up a week, and yesterday and to-day he was as well as ever.

"GEORGE A. FREEMAN,
"Mgr. Temptation Mining and Milling Company, Silverton, Colo."

Anyone can now take Robinson Thermal baths at home and at a cost of only about 2c a bath. They make the thick, sluggish blood normal, take out the impurities and cure "spring fever" right off. The only way to take these baths is by the use of the Robinson Thermal Bath Cabinet, which is a unique and marvelous invention.

That great book, "The Philosophy of Health and Beauty," retail price $2.00, free at our Main Store upon request for a limited time only. Be sure to get a copy. Also see the interesting demonstration of the Robinson Thermal Bath Cabinets; no obligation to purchase. Jacobs' Pharmacy, Main Store and Laboratory, 8-10 Marietta Street.—Adv.

$2,000,000 TAX GAIN EXPECTED IN CHATHAM

SAVANNAH, June 28.—That the total tax returns of Chatham County will show an increase for 1913 of close to $2,000,000 is the opinion of Tax Assessor Marcus S. Baker. This will make the total returns for the year over $40,600,000—a new record for Chatham County.

But this increase will have no effect on the tax rate, says Judge Oliver T. Bacon, chairman of the board of county commissioners. The net income from this estimated increase at 77½ cents a thousand is only about $14,000.

UNCLE SAM IS NOW GREATEST HORSE BREEDER

Supplies Mounts for the Army From His Virginia Farm and Turns Out Thoroughbreds.

FARMERS ARE HIS PARTNERS

System So Successful That Other Large Studs Will Be Established in the West.

FRONT ROYAL, VA., June 28.—Uncle Sam has recently embarked in the horse business on a gigantic scale. He has started here what is probably the largest horse farm in the world, 5,500 acres, only a few hours' ride from the capital. And this is only the first of his farms. He intends to start several and turn out thoroughbreds by the tens of thousands.

To-day the farm is supplying practically the entire United States Army with its mounts. A short time hence and it will be supplying civilians, and soon, according to Captain Caspar H. Conrad, in charge, and generally acknowledged one of the greatest experts in horse flesh in America, it will be suppyling most of the civilized nations of Europe. And the price—now $144.15—may become even cheaper for Americans.

The farm represents an expenditure of more than $600,000, with some $400,000 to be spent within the next year.

Horses Have Everything.

On the farm are all sorts of buildings, sanitary baths, swimming pools, drinking fountains, resting sheds, pleasure paths and even a gigantic hospital—all for horses. Here and there are huge houses wherein reside men. These men look out for the horses.

They talk of little else. Indeed, it would be strange if the case were otherwise, for there are only 100 of these men, and daily they have to look after from 1,500 to 2,000 horses.

It took a long time to start the horse farm—more than half a century.

One day a few years ago a number of high staff officers of the army, watching a cavalry review, made some rather disparaging remarks concerning the appearance of the horses.

"Some of 'em look like mountain goats, and the rest like buffaloes," said one of the officers, and the remark got to the ears of Captain Conrad, and set him to thinking.

After that Captain Conrad had the approval of the War Department to start the farm. August Belmont made Uncle Sam a present of his six best stallions. Those stallions are known the racing world over, as Henry of Navarre, Octagon, Footprint, Belfry II, Vestibule and Marshall King. The six of them, when but two years old, cost $100,000.

Two More Horses Given.

James Camden, millionaire horseman of Versailles, Ky., heard of Belmont's gift and made Uncle Sam a present of his two famous stallions, Boola Boola and Wheelwright, worth about $25,000. Thus the farm was started.

But even with fifty stallions and mares by the hundred breeding on the farm was too slow. Something had to be done to increase the scope of the work—and the answer was found in a scheme to have Uncle Sam take every farmer in the South into partnership. This was done.

The ultimate plan is to sell the horses at a gigantic auction sale, with an army officer as auctioneer, knocking down the animals to the highest bidder.

Uncle Sam's horse farm is probably the only place in the country where no matter what animal you buy you may rest assured of getting a horse that is perfect. If the animal has the slightest blemish it will not be sold.

"Of course," said Captain Conrad, "we know that in this particular case the scar was due entirely to accident. But the farmer doesn't know it. He might have a mare scarred up purely by accident, but we wouldn't take his word for. We demand perfect mares and colts, so we give perfect stallions."

One Word to Decide Estate Ownership

Will Filed for Probate Causes Legal Discussion of Meaning of "And" and "Or."

WOODBURY, N. J., June 25.—The will of the late Aaron Knisell, of Sewell, was offered for probate in the Surrogate's office. This instrument has raised a contention among the heirs. The will left the entire estate to Mrs. Knisell, who died two weeks before her husband, and it is claimed that its provisions lapsed with her death.

The property was left to Mrs. Knisell "and her heirs." Had it read "or" heirs, it is claimed, the estate would go to her heirs; but, as it says "and" heirs, Knisell's brothers claim the estate. A ruling by the court will be necessary to interpret the instrument.

Evelyn Thaw Tells Her Ambition Will Try Something Worth While Reveals Her Plans to Alan Dale

Evelyn Thaw in the days she took New York by storm.

Evelyn Thaw as she is to-day.

As Miss Nesbit, Now Dancing at the Hippodrome, and Booked for Paris and Vienna.

By ALAN DALE.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—It was "Hullo, Rag-Time," at the Hippodrome that brought Evelyn Thaw within my jurisdiction, as it has brought many others who I never expected to meet.

So, with the open sesame of elusive art as a go-between, "Miss Nesbit," as she is programed here, received me without hesitancy in her rooms at the St. James Hotel, off Piccadilly, and our art robbed me of qualms. It was quite early morning.

Evelyn Thaw wore a loose peignoire of a black, shiny something, slashed at the back with yellow. Her hair was loosely fluffed out; she was devoid of the slightest effort at make-up, her ivory-white face and her unreddened lips looking quite startlingly natural. She was as pretty as any picture of—herself, and though the edge of reluctant youth may have frayed a little, there isn't a shadow of a doubt on the score of Evelyn Nesbit's charm. Never in all the ladies I have professionally met have I found more self-possession, a keener poise and less self-consciousness than in Evelyn Thaw. She made me wonder. She spoke easily, gracefully, reassuringly, without a trace of hesitation or nervousness.

On the Spur of the Moment.

"It was awfully sudden," she said, as we sat opposite each other. "I had no idea of going back to the stage after all these years."

"How many?" I asked. "You need not answer."

"Oh, I'm not like that," she said, with the first wistful smile; "I don't mind recalling anything. The last previous time I appeared on the stage was in 1904 in 'The Wild Rose.'

"Well, on the Olympic, coming over, I met a lot of theatrical people, among them Lee Shubert, Martin Beck and Albert DeCourville. They all advised me to make the break, especially DeCourville, who is manager of the Hippodrome.

"He has just married Shirley Kellogg, by the bye. I thought it over carefully, for I was a bit afraid, you know." She seemed to take it for granted that I knew. I did; I quite understood. "If I had made the break in New York I should have been a 'freak,'" she said. "Oh, there have been other women who have been through trials like mine who first tried New York, and it was hopeless. So when DeCourville telegraphed me at Paris to come at once to London and appear I realized that it was up to me, and I went, afraid, of course, but you know I'm no novice at harrowing experiences."

A Wild Turkey Trot.

"I was determined that nothing should force any attention from me to that sort of thing." She was now an artist before the public, and I was—me.

"I had to do a wild turkey trot with a dancer, and he was hard to find. I had seen Jack Clifford at the Cafe De Paris, and I remembered that he used to dance with Irene Weston, so we engaged him and rehearsed for one week only at the Irish Club, opposite the Hippodrome. Oh! it was terrible work. He throws me around—I am tossed up in the air and I see my heels at an angle I never expected to view them. And I'm an old married woman, with stiff joints."

Evelyn Nesbit laughed. So did I. She was as simple and unaffected as the inevitable school girl. It was impossible not to like her. She amused me a lot.

"They sneaked us on at a Saturday matinee without announcement," she said, "and luck favored me. The turn went well, and we are a hit.

"I'm engaged for six weeks, with an option, and then I go to Paris, Berlin, Vienna, St. Petersburg, Moscow, Copenhagen——"

"And New York?" I asked.

"New York, surely," she replied, smiling, "when I feel that I've put it over, but not until then. Oh, I do want to earn my own living, and the stage is good, and I don't mind hard work. In the old days, when I had nothing on my mind but my hair, I used to shirk rehearsals. Now, I'm Johnny-on-the-spot. I don't mind how much we rehearse. In fact, I rehearse every day. I've always loved dancing, and have studied all the successful dancers. If only I don't get fat like Ethel Barrymore and others."

She Won't Get Fat.

"You couldn't," I opined, for she didn't look the part.

"I won't," she retorted; "it would be a great pity, and I have another ambition that I'll tell you, for it may surprise you. Do you remember what Jerome said about me?"

Again I refused to remember anything.

"Well, he said that there were four great actresses—Sarah Bernhardt, Eleanora Duse, Mrs. Fiske and myself. I don't forget that. Some day I may try to act—to do something worth while, something serious, something emotional. So there you are! You will laugh, because I know you are funny.

"Theatrical people take themselves very seriously, and they can't understand why you don't do the same, but you don't—you can be as funny as you like about me. I sha'n't mind a bit, for I really have a sense of humor, and I'm not very serious." She laughed again, and I was quite disarmed. Evelyn Nesbit had impressed me as I didn't believe I was going to be impressed.

"All I do in London," she said, "is to work and eat good food. I love the food in London. Do go to the Cheshire Cheese and taste the chops. I was there yesterday, and I sat in Dr. Johnson's chair and enjoyed myself hugely. I'm going to get on, and I'm going to surprise everybody. One must have a beginning. Look at Elsie Ferguson. She was the stupidest chorus girl I ever met, but she had big moments, and now she is a very charming actress. Don't forget to write something funny about me, for I shall enjoy it."

But, somehow or other, Evelyn Nesbit hadn't appealed to my sense of humor. She was, at least, spontaneous and natural.

She has been his only tutor since the very earliest day that he could learn, attributes to him none of the characteristics of a prodigy or perhaps of a genius. He has been taught to think, to concentrate his mind, and this training has enabled him to develop a remarkable memory.

He seldom reads an interesting topic more than once in order to commit it to memory, and he studies physiology, arithmetic, grammar, civil government and literature with little aid from his mother. When he enters high school he will take up the study of Latin, algebra, rhetoric, physical geography and ancient history.

Raymond is now studying Spanish, elocution and vocal music. He has some excellent talent in music, and sings with real melody, spirit and understanding.

WHY 200,000 PEOPLE NOW BATHE INTERNALLY

When you are ill, the first step your Physician takes is to clean out the Large Intestine.

He does this because the chances are ten to one that if you had no accumulated waste in the Large Intestine you would not have been ill at all.

The new process of Internal Bathing by means of the "J. B. L. Cascade" thoroughly cleanses the Lower Intestine, removes all waste and poisonous matter, and keeps it as pure as Nature demands it to be for perfect health.

It is Nature's own way of curing Constipation—simply warm water properly applied.

Enlightened physicians everywhere are using and prescribing it—

And instead of waiting to be ill, over 200,000 delighted Americans are warding off disease and increasing their efficiency and energy by its use.

Until recently the "J. B. L. Cascade" has been obtainable only by sending to its inventor, Charles A. Tyrrell, M. D., of New York City.

The demand for it now, however, has become universal, through the recommendations of those who are using it. Call at our main store and we will be glad to show you the "J. B. L. Cascade" and explain it in detail.

We are also distributing a very interesting booklet on internal bathing, called "Why Man of To-day Is Only 50 Per Cent Efficient," which can be obtained on request, without cost. Ask us for it to-day and inform yourself about this safe and sane method of curing constipation without drugs.

BOY, NOT YET 8, TO ENTER HIGH SCHOOL IN FALL

New Mexican Prodigy Received All His Training From Mother. Wonderful Memory.

ROSWELL, N. MEX., June 28.—When the public schools open next fall there will be a new student in the high school department, a boy who has never been to school a single day and who will not at that time have reached his eighth birthday.

This is the boy who, at the age of eighteen months, startled the city of Denver by repeating the names of the Presidents of the United States, and who at the age of five recited several pages from Hiawatha in a school entertainment in Artesia, N. Mex. His name is Raymond Ray. He is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. G. F. Ray, of Roswell.

The mother of this boy, who has

Wife Refuses to Stop Husband and Daughter's Eloping

Declares to Humane Society That She Tolerated Act to Preserve Happiness of Her Child.

LOS ANGELES, June 28.—Telling a most unusual story, filled with peculiar complications, in which she accuses her husband of eloping with and marrying his own stepdaughter and then stealing her two children in order to secure property belonging to her, Mrs. Ruella Nicholson has appealed to the police, the humane society and the county officers to help her in locating her husband, Edward Nicholson, and thus get back her children.

How she learned of the fact that her daughter had married her own stepfather, and did not interfere with the marriage because she wanted her child to be happy was a part of the strange story alleged by the woman.

Tired, hungry and practically penniless, the elderly woman appealed to the humane society.

Society Women Sound Knell for Mourning

Boston Leaders Declare That Custom of Donning Black for Dead Is Relic of Barbarism.

BOSTON, June 28.—Society women of Boston have answered the question, "How long should society women wear mourning for their dead relatives?" by saying in substance that mourning should not be worn. It was the consensus of opinion that it is a survival of barbarian days.

Mrs. Charles P. Putnam, wife of Dr. Putnam, said, "It seems to me that there is altogether too much mourning worn considering our present enlightened state of civilization. The world is dark enough as it is without women wearing crepe to make it any more gloomy.

Women Taught to Save Million a Year

Kansas Garbage Cans Are Cheated of Immense Amount by Domestic Science Instruction at School.

TOPEKA, KAN., June 28.—Kansas cheated the garbage cans of the State out of $1,000,000 last year, and the amount will be increased at the rate of $500,000 a year until there will be virtually no wasted foods in the entire State.

That is the aim of the Kansas Agricultural College, and the State is spending $40,000 a year to help.

Seven hundred girls completed the domestic science courses at the agricultural college this week, and the college has just closed its movable cooking schools, which were attended by 11,000 women in the ten weeks in which they were operated.

PET CANARY OF PRETTY WOMAN HALTS VESSEL

Captain of Liner Agrees to Delay Voyage Until She Can Send Home for Bird.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Mrs. Green is young and very charming. That is why the officers of the Vestris, of the Lamport and Holt line, gave her their fullest attention when she announced in plaintive but positive tones that she had lost her Rickey.

"I forgot to bring Rickey," she exclaimed.

"Who's Rickey?" demanded the second officer.

"Rickey's our pet canary," she said, "and I am taking him to South America to my husband. I mean I was to have taken him, but I left him at home."

Brought Food, Forgot Bird.

"It's too late now to get him," said the officer, "for we leave in thirty minutes."

"But I wouldn't dare go without him. I've brought the seed and the cuttlefish and everything, but I forgot the bird."

"Where do you live?" asked the officer.

"Mrs. G. F. Green, 59 West Fifty-third Street," was the reply, and the officer solicited the assistance of H. S. Damage, the line's passenger agent. After consultation with the Vestris captain it was agreed to hold the vessel until ten minutes after five o'clock—ten minutes later than her schedule called for—and Mr. Damage and Mrs. Green sought a telephone.

Bird's Owner In Hysterics.

To an agent of a taxicab company the young woman explained that she wanted to go to the Fifty-third Street number and get a canary bird.

But no canary bird bearing taxicab arrived at the pier by ten minutes after five o'clock, and Mrs. Queen was in a state of hysteria as she watched the sailors haul off the gang plank.

Just as the Vestris was swinging at the end of the pier and before the last spring line was cast off the taxicab arrived. With the bewildered canary in its cage one of Mrs. Green's friends ran to the end of the pier and fastened the cage to a piece of rope. Then, very slowly and with due reverence—for Mrs. Green's brimming eyes were upon him—a sailor hauled the line with the cage attached over the side.

Woman Loves Mouse; Eats Meals With Him

Pet Comes Daily to Dine With Hotel Employees, and Girl Feeds Him From Hand.

CINCINNATI, June 28.—It is an old saying that all women are afraid of mice, but one has at last been found who is not afraid, and even says she likes them.

She is Miss Ella Eversfield, an operator at the Grand Hotel, who takes her meals with her favorite mouse every day. The employees of the hotel have a private dining room, and some time ago a mouse was discovered there. At the time Miss Eversfield had not learned to love mice and she probably screamed, but the mouse was game and stuck it out, and, having learned the meal hours, he insisted on putting in his appearance every day, until finally the employees learned to consider him as one of their number, and now he eats his meals from the hand of Miss Eversfield.

NEW ANSLEY HOTEL GIVES MOST MODERN HOSTELRY OF SOUTH TO ATLANTA

No Detail Has Been Spared to Make It Unsurpassed for the Traveling Public and People of City—Formal Opening Monday.

Machinery and Equipment Latest Devices for Aid of Sanitation and Comfort—Mural Decorations Picture Events of Georgia.

Only to those who "put up" after Monday at the Hotel Ansley will it be given in fullest measure to say, with Shenstone, that they have "found life's warmest welcome at an inn."

At least, the builder and the lessee and the press agent have endeavored to make it even so, and the very few favored persons permitted to inspect the building and its appointments in advance of the opening agree they planned wisely and builded well.

When the Ansley, Atlanta's newest hostelry, opens its doors to guests on Monday, it will be unexcelled among the inns of the country for efficiency, service, accommodations, equipment and modernity of its appointments. No detail was overlooked in the planning; no expense was spared in the building.

Banquet Hall Seats 500.

With its banquet room seating 500, its rathskeller accommodating 300 and its hundreds of rooms supplied with fresh filtered air continuously; with its costly historical mural decorations, each a work of art, the sumptuous furnishings of its rooms and suites and its perfect service system, the Ansley will be without a superior for business, conveniences and safety.

As "Marse" Henry Watterson expressed it, at no place "on the Rambla and in the Ring, in Piccadilly and the Corso, beneath the colonnades of the Rue de Rivoli of Paris and 'Unter den Linden' of Berlin—indeed, all the way between Chicago and Cannebiere, including many nooks and corners of little old New York," can the man or woman with a trunk and a handbag live higher, sleep safer and spend less than at the Hotel Ansley.

Two well-known quotations imprinted on the tapestry will greet the eye of all who pass the portals of the Hotel Ansley. The first one is the hotel man's favorite verse, from Shenstone, as follows:

Whoe'er has traveled life's dull round,
Where'er his stages may have been,
May sigh to think he still has found
Life's warmest welcome at an inn.

The next is a Scriptural quotation, taken from Hebrews, and the Ansley management promises to apply the precept and the compliment to every guest alike. Here it is:

"Forget not to show love unto strangers, for thereby some have entertained angels unawares."

Indicate Spirit of Hotel.

These two familiar quotations are printed across the underbeam of the winding marble stairways in the Ansley foyer. They are intended to indicate the spirit in which guests should apply and expect to be received.

Appearance of the lobby is enhanced by three historical paintings on tapestry, each 12 by 10 feet, situated on the upper mezzanine floor and facing the Forsyth Street entrance. The paintings recall important historical happenings in Georgia.

The first panel depicts the meeting of General Oglethorpe and Tomochichi at Savannah, May 21, 1733. The next represents John Wesley teaching the Indians under the oaks of St. Simons, and the third shows the burning of the Yazoo fraud papers at the state house in Louisville, Jefferson County, in the year 1796.

The papers were ignited by means of a magnifying glass and the sun's rays, showing that the fire which destroyed such an infamy should come from Heaven.

On the ground floor are a dozen or more other paintings of historical interest.

Dining Room Is Italian.

The dining room of the Ansley is known as the Italian room, on account of its architecture and mural paintings. The latter consist of the Vatican gardens, showing the cupola of St. Peter's in the distance; the garden of Villa Borghese in Florence, the garden of Villa Lante, the Hercules fountain in the garden of Villa Reale of Florence, and a view of Venice canals, all of which are painted on canvases, each 12 by 10 feet.

The rathskeller, one of the largest and most luxurious in the South, is reminiful of college life. Its walls are decorated with portraits of the seals of the leading Georgia colleges, interlaced with varicolored bands waving over a golden background.

The waiting room is trimmed and wainscoted with Georgia sycamore. A distinctive feature of this room, indeed, of the hotel is a full size true-to-life portrait of Lieutenant General William Tecumseh Sherman, beneath which is the following inscription:

"Under whose orders Atlanta was burned, and who said war is hell."

Old Photographs Reproduced.

Actual 1865 photographs are reproduced, showing Atlanta before and after the famous conflagration. On other panels of the writing room are the Great Seals of Atlanta and the State of Georgia. Those who have seen this room are unstinted in their praise of its historical interest and value.

The Ansley equipment for cleaning silverware and dishes is unexcelled. The silverware will be cleaned by chemically generated electricity, made by water, soda and salt.

Dishes will be cleansed and sterilized by powerful streams of hot water thrown against them while incased in a metal washing machine.

The kitchen of the Ansley is replete with modern machinery and other implements for prompt and efficient service. Its appointments are products of as great attention to detail as was given the office, the rathskeller or any other part of the hostelry.

Five Lang ranges form a battery kept at even temperature by a single furnace. The bake ovens are built on the skyscraper plan—four stories high—thus utilizing space and insuring uniform results. The meat department is equipped with a slicing machine, insuring uniform-sized slices without rough edges.

Has Own Ice Plant.

The Ansley has the best equipped ice and refrigerating plant in Atlanta, it is a duplicate affair with a capacity of fourteen tons a day. The cold storage room could accommodate a carload of meat.

From a service bar in the basement all orders will be filled for the rathskeller, private dining rooms and guests' apartments, thus keeping the waiters out of the main buffet, which opens on Forsyth Street.

Distinctively a unique feature for any hotel is the sanitary bathing subbasement for the hotel's servants. Each compartment is equipped with lockers, and all waiters, cooks, bellboys, porters, etc., will be required to take a shower bath before starting each day's work.

Not the least attraction of the Ansley is its contemplated scale of charges. Rooms with running water and private toilet will cost $1 a day, rooms with connecting bath $1.50, with private bath $2, $2.50 and $3. Club breakfasts will be served for 25 cents and up, lunch for 50 cents from 12 till 2 o'clock, and 6 to 8 o'clock dinner for $1.

Indian Girl Writes Opera on Sioux Life

Zitkala Sa Composed "The Sun Dance"—Gave It on Reservation.

SALT LAKE CITY, June 28.—On the Uintah reservation at Vernal, Utah, nearly 100 miles from a railroad, an Indian girl has written an opera, with her people as the theme and motif. It is one thing to write an opera and another to have it produced. Zitkala Sa, a full-blooded Sioux, has accomplished both these things.

When "The Sun Dance" was sung in Vernal, Indians and whites drove in from 40 miles around to hear it; and, having heard it, they pronounced it a triumph. Efforts are being made to have the opera sung in Salt Lake City during the week of the National Education Association, July 5 to 11.

"The Sun Dance," as it was produced at Vernal in March, was not altogether the work of Kitkala Sa and her copper-hued brethren of the Uintah reservation. Professor William F. Hansen, of the faculty, and white as well as Indian students of Uintah Academy played important roles in the preparation and singing of the piece. It was, in fact, part of the academy work.

12,000 Drinks in Five Years Basis of Suit

Wife Declares Husband Protected Himself With Walking Stick in Driving Rain Storm.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Twelve thousand drinks, ranging from simple mixed potations to fancy concoctions, is the record which Mrs. John Barry Sears posts up against her husband in five years of married life.

Mrs. Sears, who is suing for divorce, said Mr. Sears started his career of conviviality during his honeymoon and has kept it up.

In one instance, according to Mrs. Sears, her husband had come home in a driving rain.

"He carried his walking stick elevated above his head," she testified, "and held his umbrella closed in his hand. He was soaking wet, but did not know it."

Oregon Freshman Reads of Social Science, Philosophy and Religion.

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, EUGENE, June 28.—Max H. Sommer, a freshman in the University of Oregon, registered from Portland, has a record for assiduous reading during the past collegiate year. According to the report of Librarian Douglas, Sommer's card shows that he has taken out 89 volumes, the majority of which would be classed as "heavy reading."

Of the 89 volumes perused by this freshman, 47 are devoted to social science, 28 are classed as pure literature, 5 are works of history and biography, 5 are of a philosophical and religious nature and 4 deal with journalism.

Oregon Governor Opposed to Autos

Declares State Appropriation Would Have Made Him Travel Like 'Piker.'

SALEM, OREG., June 28.—Despite rumors to the effect that he would be a candidate for re-election, Governor West positively announces that he will not be a candidate.

The Governor said that the financial drain on him was large, particularly his traveling expenses. The State now provides $1,000 for the traveling expenses of the Governor when on the State's business, but until two years ago only $500 a year was provided. The Governor declared that he could not live like a "piker" when away from home, and the expenses of many of his trips were paid by himself.

Governor West said that he had never bought an automobile because he did not want one, wouldn't have one if somebody would make him a present of it, couldn't operate it if he had it, and, above all, could not afford a machine.

DANCING MASTERS DECLARE TURKEY TROT IS IMMORAL

ASBURY PARK, June 28.—The "turkey trot" is an immoral dance in the opinion of members of the American National Association, masters of dancing, in session here, and at today's meeting the delegates were urged to co-operate with local authorities in banishing the figure that is fast becoming the rage.

The "tango" was not treated so severely. If properly taught, the masters believe, it may be danced.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Miss Jessie Ackerman, the woman champion globe-trotter, arrived here to-day from an eight years' tour around the world, her eighth globe-girdling trip in twenty years. She has broken the woman's record, with 381,000 miles to her credit.

On this trip she visited fifty-two countries and experienced every kind of ancient and modern travel.

Miss Ackerman said the happiest and most professional women are in Australia.

Health Board Posts Weekly Bath Order

Canton, Ohio, Folks Must Get in Tub at Least Once a Week Authorities Declare.

CANTON, O., June 28.—Canton folks must bathe at least once a week, and "all over," at that. The board of health has said so.

In order that none can misunderstand, the board has arranged to post in every home where soap and water are believed to be at a premium a set of rules printed in five languages and specifying $25 and costs as punishment of any one who neglects the weekly cleanup.

DIVA BELIEVES BABIES BEST, FARM LIFE NEXT

Schumann-Heink, Who Has Just Passed Her Fifty-second Birthday, Purchases Big Tract.

SAN DIEGO, CAL., June 28.—"Yes, now I am a farmer; also I am a mother, and I have just had my fifty-second birthday."

It was Mme. Schumann-Heink who spoke. Wreathed in smiles and radiating health—the great artist, accompanied by her youngest child and most beautiful daughter, descended from an incoming train to begin a six-month vacation here.

She had just completed her longest American tour and returns with the greatest profits made by any artist in concert this season.

Last year Mme. Schumapn-Heink bought 3,000 acres here. She plans to make ranches with gardens, barren wastes into orchards and her rancho the garden spot of America.

"Farming," enthused Madame, "next to the rearing of babies, is the most interesting work in the world."

"But the farming, madame, surely you will not hoe?"

"Look at these two hands. I ask you, do they not appear capable? I have raised and worked for my children and they are yet strong—nicht?" Madame held her pink palms upward. One of the most convincing proofs of what she said was their appearance. The fingers are long and slender and young and strong enough to be envied by any woman half the diva's age.

And this can also be said truthfully of her face and form. Mme. Schumann's flamed with health.

"Yes, I shall be getting out and digging like a regular farmer. Oh, that is nothing to dig," she stated. "Once I made a garden at my New York home.

"Ach, yes, it is good to grow fruit, but it is better to be the mother of babies."

Babies Saved From Bolt by Feather Bed

Children Are Found Unhurt in Mattress After Room Is Wrecked by Lightning.

NEW YORK, June 28.—A feather mattress saved two children of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Johnson on the Peter Cortelyou farm, at Franklin Park, near New Brunswick, N. J., when a bolt of lightning struck their bed. The parents were awakened by a tremendous crash and a shriek from the children in an adjoining room. A flash of lightning just as they reached the room revealed a big hole in the roof and one in the floor.

The father obtained a lamp and found the bedstead shattered to pieces. Securely rolled up in the feather mattress, however, were the two little ones, almost suffocated with heat but unhurt.

SWEETPEAS IMPORTED BY AUSTRIAN EMPEROR

Special Cable to The American.

VIENNA, June 28.—Sweetpeas, which were practically unknown in Austria only a few years ago, are now prominent in the Imperial Gardens at Schonbrunn.

The aged Emperor Francis Joseph is the first in Austria to "take up" the sweetpea. The director of the Imperial Gardens was sent to London and brought specimen plants back with him. Now the tables at the castle at Schonbrunn are decorated with sweetpeas in one color or at most two. The Emperor prefers pink and white to other combinations.

Chief's Gold Badge Found to be Nickel

New Head of Police Department Finds That Predecessors Had Worn Base Metal Insignia.

PASADENA, June 28.—"Silver Threads Among the Gold," merrily whistled newly appointed Chief of Police W. S. McIntire as he scraped off the gold from the badge that was turned over to him by his predecessor, W. F. Wood, who resigned from the office.

When Wood resigned he presented his successor with the badge containing the words, "Chief of Police, Pasadena." On making a close inspection of the badge, which had long borne a reputation of being solid gold, the new chief observed that it was somewhat tarnished.

A cleanser was then applied, with the result that the badge in a few minutes was a shining nickel-plated star and greatly similar to the other badges worn by the balance of the police department.

Free Market Starts To Cut Cost of Living

San Jose, Cal., Plans To Do Away With Profit Made by Middle Man.

SAN POSE, CAL., June 28.—San Jose hit the high cost of living a solar plexus blow to-day when, under the direction of the city administration, a free market was opened in South Market Street at the City Hall Park.

A score of produce wagons came for the opening, and long before the selling day was over every scrap of salable goods had been disposed of and a crowd clamored for a chance to purchase.

Market Master Joseph Napoli declares that the first day's business demonstrated that producers received 25 per cent more for their sales than they could get from the middle man and that buyers saved a minimum of 25 per cent by doing business directly with the producers.

CONVICTS DINE IN HOTEL THEN SEE MOVING PICTURE

COLUMBUS, O., June 28.—Five penitentiary prisoners, serving sentences ranging from manslaughter to pocket picking, were taken from their cells by an official of the State Board of Administration and treated to a banquet at one of the large hotels. Following the banquet the prisoners were taken to moving picture shows and given an entertainment which they will long remember.

PREACHER DIVORCES HIS WIFE.

OMAHA, NEBR., June 28.—The Rev. F. P. Jolly, formerly of Joliet, Ill., was granted a divorce from his wife, the grounds being extreme cruelty. Mrs. Jolly is now living in Joliet.

JAP EMIGRANTS NOW COLONIZING BRAZILIAN LANDS

1,500 Arrivals But Vanguard of Orientals to Be Sent to South America.

SEATTLE, WASH., June 28.—How Japan is colonizing Brazil was given in detail here with the arrival of the Japanese steamship Sanuki Maru.

Fifteen hundred Japanese emigrants were landed at Santos, Brazil, May 15. They are the vanguard of a great population to be sent to South America to become a part of the first permanent Japanese colony in Brazil under the Sao Paulo colonization agreement recently entered into between Japan and Brazil.

The first award of territory comprises approximately 150,000 acres of agricultural land.

Another Japanese Brazilian colonization enterprise has been completed and passengers of the Sanuki say that the two Governments have arranged for the concession of a considerable area of fertile country which will be settled by Japanese. Settlers for this colony will leave Japan about the end of the present year.

Japanese contract labor is now being sent into South Africa and both Brazil and Peru are being supplied with coolies, who leave Japan under contract with various South American industrial organizations.

CONTESTANTS WORKING HARD FOR MORE VOTES

Manager of Pony Race Advises Girls and Boys to Use Follow-Up System.

SYSTEMATIC WORK WINS

Shetlands Are Growing Fat and Strong at Loomis Avenue Stable Where They Are Kept.

The last week of the "clubs of five" bonus offer in The Georgian and American pony contest begins with all contestants straining hard to take advantage of the benefit to be gained by getting subscriptions before the time limit is up.

Standings published in The American show great gains, but they are small compared with the leaps forward which will be shown when the bonus votes are reckoned up for publication in next Wednesday's Georgian. The contest manager believes it will take the office force all of the night of July 5 to make the proper entries.

There also is a bonus of 50,000 votes for the first $30 turned in for subscriptions by any of the contestants. This offer may be withdrawn at any time.

Use Follow-Up System.

The contest manager wishes to repeat his suggestion that contestants take a leaf from the books of the successful business man and institute a "follow-up" system. A list of those whose subscriptions expire soon should be made, and all such subscribers visited with a request for a renewal. Nine times out of ten, a renewal is easier to get than the first subscription, for at the end of a short trial the subscriber generally gets to like The Georgian and American so well that he wants to continue.

It is systematic work of this sort which counts for more than the spurts of a day or two, which, while they may yield remarkable results, are not frequent enough to build up totals to the point where the contestant can feel sure of a pony.

None Sure of Winning.

No contestant has a right to feel sure of winning as yet. There is not a boy or girl in the race who can not be passed by an energetic rival, and some who are leading now have a very poor start, indeed.

Meanwhile, the ponies are "eating their heads off" at 55 Loomis Avenue, where their future owners are invited to call and see them. All are rounding into great shape, and they are prettier every day. It is going to be a hard task for the winners to pick the ponies they like best from the splendid bunch The Georgian and American have bought.

"I subscribed to The Georgian and American a week ago, and the paper has not begun to come to my home yet," is a complaint heard every now and then.

Usually it develops that the subscriber gave his money to one of the contestants, and that the contestant is "holding back."

This is poor policy, particularly if it is a short-term subscription, for when a contestant treats a subscriber in this way the man is not going to be as willing to give the contestant his renewal.

"Don't hold back," is the advice of the contest manager—and he knows best.

BONUS OFFER IN PONY CONTEST GIVES 1 WEEK MORE OF OPPORTUNITY

Wanting to win and working to win differ widely. Working to win is what counts, and working to win now, while the special bonus vote offers are in effect in The Georgian and American pony contest.

July 4 means more than cannon crackers, picnics and general celebrations to the pony contestants. It means, to them, the end of one of the bonus offers, and July 4 is little more than a week away.

Clubs of five subscriptions, yearly, half-yearly, or for three months, bring great rewards until the expiration of the period thus limited. And "when the polls close" for these club bonus votes the office force of the contest manager expects an all-night session reckoning up the strength of the many candidates.

Some have brought in five subscriptions at a time to take advantage of the bonus. Others have brought them in one, two or three at a time. In either case, the clubs will be credited accurately. And overnight the standings will seem to have doubled, though the bonus votes represent weeks of work.

The ponies now are at 55 Loomis Avenue, where contestants are welcome. If they arrive at the right time they will see the ponies being exercised.

Fortune in Gold Awaits Claimants

Insane Kansas Woman Leaves Bag of Nuggets and Dust Worth $10,000.

HUTCHINSON, KANS., June 28.—A bag of gold nuggets and gold dust worth $10,000 awaits any heirs who may be found to the estate of Mrs. Ann M. Bernhart, who died recently in Davenport, Iowa, according to the announcement of G. M. Duckworth, administrator.

Several years ago Mrs. Bernhart was adjudged of unsound mind. Duckworth was named her guardian. The cottage here where she lived alone was closed and she went to an asylum. Upon her death Duckworth thoroughly searched her cottage. The nuggets and dust in small bags were found secreted in the dwelling.

WHAT ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS AND JOBBERS ARE DOING

MANUFACTURES DINNER PLANNED FOR EVE OF 4TH

New Ansley Hotel Will Serve Atlanta Factory Owners to the Number of 200.

HOME EXHIBIT PLANS TOPIC

Brooks Morgan Has Definite Proposals for Acceptance or Rejection—Pledges Desired.

Atlanta manufacturers, to the probable number of 200, will gather on the evening of July 3 at the Ansley Hotel for a dinner.

The object of the dinner is to discuss the proposed permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods, and at the same time, to discuss the advisability of holding the annual temporary exhibit, such as was held last year at the time of the Southern Merchants' Convention.

The dinner had been set for June 24, but the unavoidable absence from the city of Brooks Morgan necessitated a postponement.

The new date was set at an informal conference of Mr. Morgan, Wilmer L. Moore and Walter G. Cooper held Wednesday.

Invitations to the big "Manufacturers' Dinner" will be sent out at once, and a general response is expected.

At the dinner, Mr. Morgan will lay before the manufacturers definite proposals for lease or purchase of buildings suitable for the installation of a manufacturers' exhibit. It will, in brief, be a "show down." The permanent exhibit project has been gone over thoroughly. The manufacturers have seen Chattanooga's display, and they have learned in detail of New Haven's success. There has been plenty of time for them to make up their minds. At this dinner they are expected to signify what they intend doing.

If, as is expected, the will of the manufacturers is seen unanimously in favor of the exhibit, a start will be made. But the backers of the project do not wish to start unless they have assurance of 200 exhibitors and 40,000 or 50,000 feet of floor space.

Strenuous Work Done Preparing for Convention.

When the four or five thousand merchants from all over the South gather in Atlanta for their convention, during the first two weeks of August, it is doubtful if any of them will be able to realize the care and effort that has been expended to make their meeting a success.

For instance, one energetic committee has been toiling throughout the hot week in an effort to raise funds for the entertainment of the visitors. As a result of their conscientious endeavor, the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association sees its way clear, as to finances, to play host to the gathering.

Another committee has been hard at work preparing the program. The program is to be an elaborate affair. Three or four topics a day will be discussed, and most of the discussion will be in the shape of five-minute addresses. The traveling men are doing yeoman's work in finding the good speakers scattered throughout the territory, men who have opinions worth hearing and experience likely to be helpful to other merchants in their lines.

Moving Big Concern Takes Almost Week

Dougherty-Little-Redwine Co. Get to Temporary Quarters by Dint of Hard Work.

Almost a week has been required for moving the Dougherty-Little-Redwine Company from its old home in North Pryor Street to temporary quarters at 30-32 South Pryor Street.

It is estimated that about forty boxcar loads of goods were moved, the stock being valued at $150,000.

"That amount of silks would not make much of a showing, but when it comes to underwear, it is a different story," remarked J. Little.

Jordan Thinks Europe's Land Banks Ideal for South

Cheap Loans on Farm Lands Spell Financial Independence for Cotton Grower, He Says.

Special Cable to The American.

By COLONEL HARVIE JORDAN.

(Member of the American Farm Credits Commission and President of the Southern Cotton Association)

OLDENBERG, GERMANY, June 28.—The capitalization of Southern cotton growers through the mortgage bank system, giving them mortgage loans at low interest with easy payments, would completely reorganize the cotton-growing industry of the South. I am convinced that the land mortgage business in America can be systematized along the lines of similar mortgage systems in Europe.

If this is done it will bring a new era of prosperity to the South and greatly increase the cash returns from cotton, which now represent practically the entire balance of trade of the United States.

Southern cotton growers to-day are just one year behind financially. They have been behind since the Civil War.

The curse of the cotton farmers is the store lien system, under which they are obliged each spring to purchase their supplies on credit from the supply merchants. Frequently farmers pay 50 per cent or more in excess of the cash price of goods for the privilege of this credit. Moreover, the supply merchants secure absolute control over the farmers.

Marketing Is Hurried.

The cotton crop has to be marketed as soon as harvested. Farmers have practically no control over the marketing. This is because they have no financial independence. The American commission has studied the mortgage systems which place European farmers in far stronger positions as borrowers than our own farmers. In America we still are clinging to the antiquated practice of forcing short-time loans on the agriculturist.

European farmers borrow through an intermediary society and enjoy as strong positions as any railroad or municipality. If our Southern farmers mortgage their land they must pay back the entire principal in lump sum in a few years, else pay a costly commission for renewal. So long as this is true naturally the farmers won't mortgage their land until actually pressed to the wall.

In contrast to this European farmers repay their loans in small annual installments. So long as they meet their interest payments they can never be sold out. Their entire payments for both interest and principal amount to less than our farmers frequently are required to pay for interest alone.

Cash Basis Possible.

If Southern farmers can get a device to act as their agent in borrowing and can capitalize their land holdings on terms that will permit them to repay little by little, we can put the cotton-growing industry of the South on a cash basis. This would enable our farmers to buy on a cash basis and secure financial independence. It would break the power of the supply merchants. It would be the surest way to a New South. A New South would mean prosperity to the nation.

There is no theory in this proposition. I have studied these mortgage systems here. They are straight business enterprises that we Americans can adopt perhaps improve upon. The Legislature of every State in the Union should take this matter under consideration.

When currency reform is enacted in the United States this should form part of the program. Farmers never up to this time had any consideration whatsoever given their requirements as borrowers. In currency or banking legislation they have been left to get along as well as they could. This has been largely responsible for the financial positions of the Southern farmers to-day.

Men's Hats For Next Fall Pert Affairs, Blue and Green

Fall, 1913, hats for men are being shown by jobbers in Atlanta.

Take them big and large, they deserve the name the women give their headgear—they are "creations."

One "creation," for instance, is green velour, with a little bow at the back, and a button-hole stitched edge.

Brown-Perryman-Greene Company say velours, particularly in blue and green, are "the thing" for fall. Velours retail from $3.50 to $7.50.

The "Trooper" shape is proper. To make a "Trooper" shape, punch out a crown, then strike it with the edge of the hand, lengthwise. That's all.

Another "creation" particularly fetching is blue, with red, white and blue stitching which runs up and down the crown and around and around the brim. A button is in the geometrical center of the crown.

Perhaps the best of the bunch, to many tastes, is a green felt hat, "Trooper" shape, of course, with "zebra" finish. "Zebra" finish means that it is 'self-striped." Alternate stripes are smooth, the others are unfinished—fuzzy, in a word. The stripes are something less than half an inch wide, and run vertically on the crown. The hat really is not "freaky." It is attractive.

Other soft hats are lined with gay silk, have welt edges, or are otherwise adorned.

Brand-new is a chinchilla hat. Corduroy and cloth of all kinds will be much in vogue this autumn.

Caps promise to continue their unprecedented popularity. They come in all patterns—one, for instance, a "cubist" design in maroon and tan.

For the man who will wear a derby, regardless, it may be news to know that the derby crowns will be a bit higher this fall, the brims about the same. Crowns seem to be working back from the flat effect of a year back to the old-fashioned high crown. They change a bit each year.

Boys—the little fellows—wear telescope shape hats, while you can't give them to their elders.

Of course, this takes no account of the "staples"—the conservative styles which never change.

LUMBER SALES SHOW BUILDING KEEPS UP WELL

Dealers in Supplies Tell of Big Things in Prospect for the Coming Autumn.

Dealers in lumber, brick, cement, plaster and building supplies report that Atlanta is going straight ahead in its expansion.

Unanimously they report good trade. One particularly encouraging feature, according to their expressions, is the steady increase in the number of small residences, homes costing between $3,000 and $4,000, seeming to predominate.

Furthermore, building supplies dealers are unanimous in saying that there are great plans in store for fall. If all rumors are to be believed, property owners are contemplating improvements at almost a "boom" rate as soon as summer is past.

Paint dealers also are cheerful. They report contractors figuring on work far ahead, and also general activity in refurnishing buildings which are not new, but which are being remodeled to meet the city's growing needs.

Expressions from dealers in these lines follow:

V. H. Kriegshaber: "Our observation is that there is a good deal of building contemplated—in the wind, so to speak. When conditions settle down this fall, we look for an excellent trade in building supplies."

Randall Bros.: "Our business is better than it ever has been in lumber and building material. The increase has come from the increase in medium priced houses, residences to cost between $3,000 and $4,000.

"It is hard to tell about the fall, but we look for a good trade. Prices are a little lower. This always is the case in June and July. There will be a reaction in August and September, and quotations will be stronger. This is the history of every year."

Willingham-Tift Lumber Co.: "Business has been quite brisk up to the present time, with particular activity in the erection of small houses. This looks to us like the right time to build, for prices, in our opinion, are at the bottom."

Sciple Sons: "Business is fairly good at the present time, and it is picking up rapidly. We look for a very good trade for the rest of the year. The market is steady, still prices are reasonable and it is a good time to build. We notice a revival particularly in the erection of small houses."

Dozier & Gay: "From the number of contractors who are figuring on painting to be done between now and fall, we look for a big business.

"Every indication is that a large number of new homes are to be built, and there are rumors of several large buildings for wholesale houses and small factories.

Trained Men Great Need Of Business World To-day

Germany and other European countries are far ahead of the United States in the matter of commercial education. This point was brought out in a speech before the annual convention of the National Association of Credit Men at Cincinnati.

"The annual losses by reason of failures in the United States amount now to some $200,000,000," said Mr. Gaehr, "or over $2 per capita. To put it concreately, the national annual loss from bad debts equals one-half the estimate cost of the Panama Canal.

"Professor Munsterberg of Harvard University observes that a great difficulty of our educational system has been that it does not teach a man to find himself, and when he learns his strong and his weak points, his real inclinations toward and qualifications for a pursuit in life, it is usually too late.

"We find the highway of commerce and life marked with sad monuments of men crushed under the wheels of progress who would have made a success in life had they had the proper direction and counsel and had they been taught to fashion their thoughts to fruitful issues, men who could and should have been helped to usefulness.

"A further difficulty is that the vocational demands are not sufficiently fixed and brought to the attention of the younger generations. They know comparatively little of the inner labors, the inner values, and inner difficulties of various professions and callings.

"Then, too, in many cases trivial chance influences decide the choice of a vocation. Young men often drop into a place, rather than deliberately choosing business as a life vocation.

"The need of better trained men, especially commercially, made itself felt several years ago, and as a result a number of universities and colleges of high standing organized schools of commerce, Harvard University ranking its School of Business Administration as one of the graduate schools. Several cities have established high schools of commerce, yet the schoolmaster and the business man are still too far apart.

Auto Sales Gaining Over Last Season

Business Gradually Working to Credit Basis—Men Buy Cars as They Buy Homes.

"So far as we are able to judge from the business done by our clients, automobile sales in Atlanta have been exceptionally good for the period which began January 1," says Joseph N. Moody, of the Auto Credit Sales Company.

"The automobile firms whom we represent as a credit clearing house report an increase over last season.

"Sales probably would be larger yet if we did not check them. Amusing as the idea may seem, we are in a sense philanthropists, for we are saving the people from themselves, in this way: Suppose a man with moderate income tries to buy an auto on time. We investigate carefully. If he has a family of girls, let us say, all living at home, and no income but his salary, we turn him down. If he had a family of boys, all working and able to help purchase a car, all well and good.

"The automobile business is working more and more toward a time basis. A man buys his motor car now just as he would buy his home—on payments. I believe the future will see 90 per cent of the business done in that way."

City Salesmen Take Outing; Truce Kept

Jobbers Agree Not to Scout for Business During Absence of Their Representatives.

City salesmen will be conspicuous by their absence this week. The grocer or dry goods merchant who needs to replenish his stock must telephone to his jobber. The jobbers have agreed not to solicit business for the week, but just to take what comes to them in the natural course of events.

The reason for this strange pact is that the jobbers are on their annual outing at the Isle of Palms, near Charleston, S. C.

In order not to take advantage of their absence, fifty or more jobbers signed a formal agreement of neutrality for the week, and O. T. Camp, president of the Retail Grocers' and Butchers' Association, sent a letter to all members of his organization acquainting them with the state of affairs, and asking that they fill urgent needs only, by using the tele-

SELLING NOTES.

The heavy demand for sport coats this season is helping the dress goods trade over some rough spots. Chinchillas and eponges are used principally in the manufacture of these garments, and makers and wholesalers of these fabrics are doing a good business in them.

The firmness of 39-inch, 80 squares, is one of the features of the print cloth market at the moment. Printers have taken this construction in good quantities, and as a result of curtailed production by the mills the supply has fallen somewhat behind the demand.

A thing that is regarded as a good omen for the future of the men's wear fabrics trade is the promptness with which the manufacturing clothiers are settling up their accounts with the mill agents. In view of losses sustained by the clothiers as a result of the strike earlier in the year this action on their part is said to indicate the thorough soundness of the clothing industry.

WHAT DOES IT OFFER?

That's the question every wise merchant mostly considers in selecting his shoe market.

Briefly, here are the advantages offered by the RED SEAL Shoe Factory, located right here in Georgia, to the merchants of the South:

1st. The quickest and most convenient service. Our mail order system will enable you to keep your stock sized up from week to week, to do a bigger business on a smaller stock. It eliminates any accumulation of dead styles, and our nearness to you means quite a saving in freights.

2nd. RED SEAL Shoes are the best advertised in the South. Buying a well-advertised line is the next thing to buying a well-established business.

3rd. Style and Values. It would be easy to say right here "they're the best in the world." Any manufacturer can and most of them do modestly claim that about their goods. It doesn't prove anything. We simply invite comparison on style, quality and value between RED SEAL Shoes and any competitive line on the market.

Thousands of money-making Red Seal dealers and millions of satisfied wearers make us confident of your verdict.

A postal will bring catalog or salesman without obligation on your part.

Suppose you got only one revolutionizing idea out of the Merchants' Convention. Suppose you carried that idea home under your hat and dropped it into the part of your business that most needed it.

And suppose that from that one idea came a new development in your merchandising that made two profits grow where only one grew before---

Wouldn't it pay you pretty well to have come to the New Idea plant?

That's exactly what the SOUTHERN MERCHANTS' CONVENTION is going to be---a New Idea plant.

You can see, hear, observe, study at close range the ideas and the methods of the merchants and the thinkers who have done Big Jobs.

And incidentally you can have the best social time that the Best Social Committee in the world can get up for your pleasure.

RUSSIA SEEKING U. S. FRIENDSHIP IN NEW TREATY

Renewal of Pact Abrogated by Congress Is Proposed by Diplomats of Czar.

JEWISH QUESTION RISES

Washington Is Silent, but Understanding Is That Bryan Is Willing to Renew Negotiations.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Russia has asked the United States Government to take up the question of a renewal of a treaty of amity and commerce. The treaty of 1832 on that subject was abrogated out of hand by the Congress of the United States.

Secretary of State Bryan said today that the question of renewing negotiations had been discussed with the President, but that there was nothing yet to state in the way of detail.

It has been stated to Russia, however, that the United States is willing to resume negotiations which had been commenced during the administration of the office of Secretary of State by Mr. Knox.

Two Diplomats Suggested.

The President is soon to appoint an Ambassador to the Court of St. Petersburg and the report is that a selection will be made between Charles R. Crane and Frederick Penfield, of Philadelphia and New York.

The administration will have to meet the question of the Jewish passport and the recognition of the Jews as American citizens without regard to race or religion in the new negotiations. It is well known that Russia was anxious to renew negotiations very soon after the affront to the Jewish race under the old treaty or by Russia's construction of the old treaty was wiped out by the joint resolution of Congress which abrogated the treaty of 1832. This action of Congress was unequivocally an act to rebuke Russia for her treatment of the Jews generally and specifically for her continued refusal to recognize passports issued to Jews.

Knox Charges Discrimination.

Secretary of State Knox held that the question of Jews should not enter into the matter at all, and that the real question was that the treaty of 1832 discriminated against American citizens.

It was stated during the last administration that Russia was trying to separate the Jewish passport question from all other questions which would enter into a treaty of amity and commerce, such as is made with all enlightened nations.

The statement was made at the time that the old administration frowned on this none too subtle suggestion of Russia and held that there should be no treaty except one that would do full justice to all Americans—Jews, Irish, English, Germans—no matter what their origin if they were citizens of the United States.

White House Silent.

The State Department at that time knew that if a treaty was sent to the Senate which did not include a solution of the passport question it could not be ratified. It is said that the present administration understands the situation thoroughly and will endeavor to get a treaty which will cover all American interests favorably or none at all.

At the White House no expression of opinion is yet obtainable from any official reflecting the views of the President. There is no question, however, that the Ambassador to be appointed by the President will be fully instructed on the passport question before he goes to St. Petersburg.

SOCIETY WOMAN GOES TO WORK IN BIG STORE

LOS ANGELES, June 28.—Miss Florence Lord, a graduate of Smith College, prominent socially in Chicago, New York and many other Eastern cities, and influential in suffrage clubs, has been working for a week or more in a Los Angeles department store, "to study the sociological conditions" at first hand, in order "to get away with her stunt."

Verses Tell How 'Imperator' Ought to be Pronounced

Great Trouble Found With Largest Liner Is That Everyone Gives Her a Different Name.

NEW YORK, June 28.—There is one fault already found with the Imperator, the giant vessel of the Hamburg-American line, which has just made her maiden voyage as the biggest ship afloat. The trouble is no one knows how to pronounce her name.

Many think they do, and as a result, she is called many things as Amerson Hough, the author, who answers to Huff, How, Hoe, Huge and a few other things.

In reply to inquiries as to the pronunciation the publicity agent says that the German pronunciation which is sanctioned by the modern Latinists makes the "a" in Imperator sound like the "a" in father. The accent is on the next syllable to the last. The poet laureate of the line has been so much puzzled by the variety of pronunciations that he has celebrated them in verse. Here are some of the couplets:

Biggest ship upon the water,
Gorgeous, quetnly Imperator.

If you do not like that style of calling the ship, perhaps the poet laureate remarked, you may take this:

In the finest class we slate her,
Peerless, German Imperator.

"And please," the poet said, "do not make peerless "beerless." Then, after running his fingers through his hair, the poet emitted and submitted this:

Vastness!—making senses totter!
Sea Collossus, Imperator!

"To the tune of 'Dixie,'" said the poet, we might get still another line on the pronunciation by singing:

Buckwheat cakes and a little batter
Taste quite good on the Imperator!

Greatest Salmon Run in Puget Sound

Quadrennial Migration of Horde of Fish From Fraser River Begins on Pacific Coast.

SEATTLE, June 28.—Steamship men report the approach of the annual Sockeye salmon run, which this year is the quadrennial big run, the greatest fish migration in the world. The fish now entering the Sound were born four years ago.

When the first white men came to the Northwest the Indians told them of this periodical big run, which had been regular as far back as their tribal legends went. It is the Canadian theory that the fish making up the big run are hatched in Fraser River and grow to maturity off the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Four years ago so many traps were set for the mature fish that few were able to enter the Fraser, and the Canadians have insisted that the big run of 1913 would be a failure. Hence there is international interest in the size of the approaching swarms of salmon.

Anything Shocking Police, Called Bad

Criticism of Chiefs of Present Styles Declared Cause for Women of Country to Act

JOHNSTOWN, PA., June 28.—Attacking immodesty in women's dress, Mrs. H. W. Black, of Riverdale, today stirred the delegates and visitors gathered at the annual convention of the Cambria County Sabbath School Association, in session here.

"Christian women should not wear clothes that cause people to turn and look at them after they pass," declared Mrs. Black.

"The police chiefs in convention at Washington have gone on record demanding a reform in women's dress. When it gets so bad that the police have to ask such a thing, I think it is time Christian women should act."

My Experience With Tacco ---The New Handy Varnish

By EVELYN WREN

HOUSEWIVES realize that a coat of varnish is often more satisfactory than a new piece of furniture. It is a gratification to see the marred chair which belonged to the first parlor suit look like new. The dining table has held many simple breakfasts, many delightful luncheons and many bountiful dinners, and the steaming dishes have left ugly marks upon its once shining surface. To see it emerge from its varnish treatment is like welcoming back an old friend.

Varnishing seems like tiresome, dirty work, and a task suitable for men attired in overalls. I had always associated it with laborers' muscles and rough clothing until one day when I decided my desk at The American office needed some attention.

You do not become wholly unfeminine even if you are a newspaper woman. I was tired of seeing the black spot where the inkwell had overturned. I did not like the white mark where a glass of ice water had stood. All at once I had a hunch that I could do my work better if a marred place did not constantly remind me of a loss of temper and consequent lowering of self-respect and dignity. The refinishing of my desk became an obsession.

I read advertisements. Fortunately I am influenced by them. When I saw an advertisement of a varnish which a woman could apply with a cloth just as a furniture polish is applied, I resolved to investigate the novel preparation.

I went to the sixth floor of the Forsyth Building and entered the offices of The Amber Chemical Company. There I almost breathlessly inquired for Tacco, the water-proof, dust-proof and heat-proof varnish. (To tell the truth, I did not much mind about the heat-proof feature, for most of the heat in our office is caused by irritable nerves, and not by the weather. I am no exception.)

A bottle of Tacco was put into my hand, and I grasped a piece of cheesecloth and went energetically to work. I used just as much muscle as three years of typewriting will produce in a feminine arm. I worked as hard as any furniture polisher ever dreamed of doing in his worst nightmare. I thought I was doing well.

Imagine my chagrin and the expression on my face when the cloth was quietly taken from my vigorous grasp and I was shown that Tacco requires no rubbing. You do not have to use as much energy as I do in ordinary dusting.

Dust the article first. If it is much stained you might well apply a little soap and water. Then apply your Tacco to the dry surface. A piece of cheesecloth is the best medium, and a firm, gentle movement like that of dusting will put the varnish on in the best form. Then let it dry. At the end of five hours view the result and feel proud of your work which is really but a pastime.

Have a Tacco day. Take the breakfast cloth off when husband has departed for the office. Apply Tacco according to the directions on the box, and the dining table will be ready for use at lunch time. Of course if husband is a capitalist and breakfasts at 10:30 instead of at 7 you will probably not have the pleasure of using Tacco yourself. Let us hope that you are one of those domestic little housewives who just "loves" to make your home pretty with your personal effort, and that husband has not outgrown his appreciation of the little touches which you can give just a bit better than any hired help.

The table in the living room has played an important part in the happiness of the household. You could not think of home without that table, and the ones you see in the store windows never look quite as hospitable or nearly so homelike. Here Jack has read his paper and graciously explained politics to your bewildered self as you stitched on little frocks which were to go to Kindergarten with Little Girl. It has held Big Brother's school books and his drawing instruments. (Said drawing instruments are responsible for the big unsightly gash at the end.) All in all, you feel as you begin to apply Tacco with a gentle hand that this table has many dear memories. You would like to see it as fresh and pretty as it was when you and Jack picked it out. It seemed the finest table in the world on that day. How you blushed, and how manly Jack looked as he quietly drew the money from his pocket and ordered it sent to your new home.

When the table is finished the big chair will seem more worn and bruised than ever. You never realized how shabby the living room was getting. It seems but a day or two ago that you decided to surprise Jack with that comfortable chair on his birthday. You saved from your housekeeping money bit by bit and grew anxious toward the last for fear the fund would not be large enough. You grow tender toward that big chair as you remember Jack's eyes when he first espied it and then quickly gazed at you. The lovelight was there, even if you had been married a half-dozen years, and had but recently lost many hours of sleep with Little Girl's teething episode.

GET THE WORD THEN GET THE MEANING
TRADE MARK
TACCO
A HINT TO THE WISE

The tender feelings do not interfere with the application of Tacco. Let retrospection have its sway, and when you have had the pleasure of many happy memories look at the result. The table will shine like new. The gash made by Big Brother's steel ruler will not show. Tacco has acted as a filler and made the surface smooth as glass. Dusting will be a light task now. You may even scrub the table, for it has a water-proof finish now. The chair will bring the lovelight to Jack's eyes anew, for he, too, will remember the day your love made the gift.

If you are a housekeeper, you will welcome Tacco as a means of making your home brighter and more cheerful. You need never wish for an opportunity to send shabby furniture away to be refinished. You can buy a bottle of Tacco for only 50 cents. The economy of it will be demonstrated by its first use, and you will be ready to purchase a quart, half-gallon or gallon can before many days.

When I like anything I never take my liking for granted. I analyze my appreciation. Here is my analysis of my fondness for Tacco:

It requires absolutely no rubbing.
It dries in from two to five hours.
It is water-proof as well as dust and heat proof.
It is economical in time and money.

Well, my desk at The American office has had its Tacco treatment. Come in to see it, if you like. Then investigate Tacco as I did, if you like, or better still, benefit by my written experience and buy a bottle or can at any good drug or hardware store.

Do you live out of town? If you do, you would like to hear about a splendid proposition for out-of-town dealers. Write to-day for information and do not risk the loss of the agency in your town. Write and see what The Amber Chemical Company has to tell you.

BOY CONFESSES KILLING MOTHER AND BROTHER

Berkley Fleming, 19, of Ironton, Mo., Appears Unconcerned When Accused of Crime.

IRONTON, O., June 28.—Berkley Fleming, 19, has confessed to shooting his half-brother, Culbertson Stewart, almost three years ago, and his mother a few days ago.

The police took the boy to his grandfather's farm, where he pointed out the grave of his mother and stood by unconcerned as the body was removed. He was not impressed when the skeleton of Culbertson was exhumed.

Believe Boy Degenerate.

Chief of Police King, Dr. Wells and the Rev. W. H. Hampton, who have suspected for several months that Berkeley killed Culbertson, believe Berkeley a degenerate of the worst type.

Their theory is that he killed Culbertson because of jealousy and that he had worked out his carefull arranged plan of concealing the crime before he shot his brother.

The murder of the mother, they believe, was a part of his plan to keep her from exposing his former murder. A bullet hole in the back of the head of each victim and the mother's bruised face, say these men, destroy any accident theory.

Mother Is Suspicious.

Culbertson Stewart disappeared July 14, 1910, Berkeley's 17th birthday. The other brother afterward wrote letters to his mother purporting to come from Culbertson. She became suspicious, and he decided to kill her also.

After the crime he was found at a hotel waiting for dinner. He had gone there in a buggy to take his sweetheart riding. He made no objection to going to the police station, where he confessed.

Aged Pair Perform Own Marriage Rites

Bridegroom, 75 Years Old, Declares It Was His Sixth Experience With Such Ceremony

BEAVER, PA., June 28.—Dr. Akelon Mercer, seventy-five years old of Beaver Falls, and Sarah L. Calgrove, sixty-five years old, of Wetzel county, West Virginia, performed their own marriage ceremony here.

When the pair obtained their license they informed Hamilton, the clerk, that all they needed was a license, as they could dispense with all bridal attendants and the minister.

Doctor Mercer and Mrs. Calgrove to Hamilton issued the license for marry themselves in the presence of witnesses. Doctor Mercer stated that he had been married five times, and in each instance he and his bride had performed their own ceremony, always in the presence of two witnesses.

Defaulter Hired to Audit Bank's Books

Man Who Wrecked Financial Institution, Will Go to Work to Untangle Its Affairs.

CARUTHERSVILLE, MO., June 28.—A. B. Tindle, cashier of the Pemiscot County Bank, which closed its doors following the discovery that he was short in his accounts, will be retained by the reorganizers to aid in straightening out its affairs.

"There is no desire on the part of the directors of the bank to prosecute Tindle," one of the directors said to-day. "He has turned over all his property and has been punished enough by his sudden fall from a position of trust and respect in the community."

Tindle's personal fortune is estimated at $200,000.

The action of the directors of the bank in retaining him in the task of straightening out the confusion caused by his shortage meets with the approval of a majority of the citizens it is said.

Prehistoric Flying Reptile Discovered

Skeleton of Pterodactyl Monster Is Found in Wyoming Fossil Bed by Geologists.

CASPER, WYO., June 28.—Dr. F. Salathe and D. VanWagener, geologists, who are prospecting this vicinity for oil, reported the discovery eighteen miles from Casper of a fossil bed, conspicuously visible in which is the almost perfect silicified skeleton of a flying reptile, probably of the pterodactyli, which measures at least sixty feet in length. The creature in life must have had a wing expansion of eighty feet.

Millionaire Gives Free Circus to Pay Pledge of Boyhood

Packer Leaves Home as Child to Make Fortune After Missing Show for Lack of Money.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Edward Tilden, millionaire packer, produced a circus to-day for "all the children within walking or riding distance" of the Tilden estate at Lake Delavan, Wis.

The huge entertainment cost $10,000 and had been planned for 25 years by the host. It grew out of a painfully vivid recollection of a circus that had come to town and gone away again without his getting inside the tent. It was fresh in his mind when he left Delavan a quarter of a century ago to come to Chicago to "make his fortune." At the train Edward Tilden told friends:

"I'm coming back some day and buy the town and give everyone a good time, and let every boy here see a circus."

A special carload of entertainers left Chicago for Delavan this morning. A dog and pony show and a band of 40 pieces left last night. The children also saw an aeroplane flight, had automobile rides and a big dinner.

Child Offered Home For Looking Pleasant

Smiling Face of Orphan in Photographed Group Wins Hearts of Couple Who Lost Baby.

POCAHONTAS, ILL., June 28.—In Pocahontas there may be a home for a little girl because she "looked pleasant" when a photographer took the picture of a group of children waiting for an automobile ride. Children in the orphan asylums on that day were given an outing by the Automobile Club of St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Miles, of Pocahontas, adopted a little girl several years ago. She died. Something about two of the little girls whose pictures appeared in the newspaper reminded them of the little one who died, and they have written for information about the children.

INDIAN GIRLS WILL TRY SKILL AT HAT-MAKING

CARLISLE, PA., June 28.—Indian art will now show itself in hats. At least that is the natural conclusion drawn from an announcement made by the Carlisle Indian School that a course in millinery has been established for aborigines.

Indian art, the absolutely original gift of America to the world, has expressed itself in pottery, in rugs, in a dozen other ways, but it has never before entered the field of headgear, and it is expected that this new innovation may yet cast the chic French models into the deep shadows.

SCHOOL ROLLS FAIL TO KEEP UP WITH BIRTHS

Wide Discrepancy Is Shown in Number of Pupils and Increase of Children.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Chapters on "Roman Catholic Schools," "Typical Health Teaching Agencies of the United States," and "Parent-Teacher Associations" are special features of the annual report of the United States Commissioner of Education, just issued.

In addition to these the report contains substantial chapters on the following subjects: General survey of the year; educational legislation during 1912; higher education; city school systems; rural education; recent movements in negro education; a review of agricultural education; progress in vocational education; library development; education in Alaska, the Philippines, Hawaii, Porto Rico, and other dependencies; Indian education; educational activities in Canada, Latin-America, Great Britain, Northern Europe, France and Switzerland, Germany, Southern Europe and Russia; together with a general view of conditions in Asia, Africa, Australia and New Zealand.

In his introduction to the report the commissioner discusses the wide discrepancy between the increase in the number of children of school age and the actual enrollment; an apparent reduction in teachers' salaries during the year; the remarkable increase in high schools and high school enrollment throughout the country; the decrease in professional schools, due to the enforcement of higher standards, lack of preparation of teachers, which Dr. Claxton characterizes as "one of the greatest evils of our school systems;" the shortness of the school term in the United States as compared with other civilized nations; and the abnormally large percentage of illiteracy in the rural districts.

Woman Jury Awards Verdict in Oregon

Plaintiff Is Awarded Damages of $5 in Legal Fight Over Cut of a Skirt.

ST. JOHNS, ORE., June 28.—The first regularly called woman's jury to serve in the State of Oregon tried a case in Justice Williams' court here and, after twenty minutes' conference, returned a verdict of $5 for the plaintiff. The jury was drawn in the regular form from a list of fifty women who have been chosen as liable for jury service during the year.

The case was one involving the price of a skirt. The plaintiff averred that a skirt which she had made by a local seamstress did not fit. She brought suit to recover the price of the skirt.

The fair jurors fixed the damages at $5.

FINDS COIN BEHIND PANEL; DIVIDES WITH FRIENDS

SHARON, PA., June 28.—As six carpenters were tearing down a house near the Leesburg coal mines, one found a false panel in a wall of the dining room from which he took a powder can containing $1,500.

The finder kept $500 as his share and each of his fellow workmen was given $200.

USE OF SCHOOLS AS AID TO LOVE MAKING URGED

Peace Executive Would Make Social Centers of Houses of Instruction in Big Cities.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Arthur Deering Call, executive director of the American Peace Society, has undertaken to win for the young men and women of America the right to make love to each other.

Said he:

"One of the nation's greatest needs is the promotion of acquaintance between young men and women, the fathers and mothers of the next generation, under free, attractive and wholesome conditions. We need more wholesome conditions for 'courting.'

"I can think of nothing so important to this generation as the lifemates of its various individuals, or so vital to the next as its fathers and mothers and home life generally.

Would Use Schools.

"I propose a wider use of school buildings for social and neighborhood purposes. I do not want love-making a part of the school curriculum, but I think that the same lips that recite the multiplication table or decline a noun in the class room in the garish light of day might just as well whisper tender nothings while the moon peeks in at the window later on.

"For a great majority of our young people in the cities the dance halls provide the only regular amusement they can afford, where any man who has the price can step up to any young woman and ask her to dance. No wonder such places become recruiting places for vice.

No Instruction Needed.

"Why not let the school be a cross between the church and the saloon? Every school should be arranged so that in the evening the young folks could gather there for games, folk-dancing classes, music, athletics, sewing classes and moving pictures.

"All the young folks want is opportunity to meet under proper environment. We don't have to teach the men how to make love, or young women how to listen to them, but we owe it to the race not to hinder or pervert their natural tendencies by improper environment."

NEGRO GIVES FOUR PENNIES FOR FIVE DOLLAR BILLS

INDIANAPOLIS, June 28.—While Miss Stella Koch was busy tending a stand on the city market last night, a well dressed negro asked if she could give him some paper money for gold.

"I have four $5 gold pieces," he explained, "and I would like to get some paper money in exchange for them, as I do not like to carry gold in my pocket."

The girl said she could accommodate him, and going to the cash drawer produced four $5 bills. She handed the bills to the negro, and he dropped four bright, shining pennies into her oustretched hand.

T. R. AIDE MAY THROW LIGHT ON SENATE'S STEEL LOBBY

Investigators Want Perkins to Tell of Telephone Conversation in Which Man Claimed He Knew Court Ruling in Advance.

Evidence Is Sought of David Lamar, Who Informed Wall Street That the Inquiry Was Bogus Movement Started by Him.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—George W. Perkins may be called by the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee when it reassembles after the Fourth of July to tell of an interesting telephone conversation which he had on one occasion with David Lamar, of New York, who is now being sought by subpena servers.

Information reached the committee to-day that several years ago, when an important case in which the United States Steel Corporation was concerned was pending before the Supreme Court of New Jersey, a person who claimed to be Lamar called up Perkins and made some interesting statements relative to the action of the court.

According to the story, Perkins had the then Governor of New Jersey linked upon the telephone the next time the alleged Lamar called, and what transpired was heard also by that official, who may also be asked to come to Washington and testify.

If Lamar has requested an immediate hearing by the committee no one in Washington is aware of it. In due time, however, he will have his chance. All of the majority members of the committee were busy in the Senate tariff caucus to-day. Chairman Overman, of the committee was asked point blank if Lamar was the man who had used the names of Congressmen Riordan and Palmer over the telephone.

Overman Evades Questions.

"I don't know," was the reply. "Then his name isn't mentioned in the letter from Mr. Ledyard to Congressman Palmer, which Mr. Palmer handed over to you?"

"Oh, I shall not say anything about what is in that letter," said the Senator. "That letter will come out in due course of the investigation."

Chairman Stanley, of the Steel Investigating Committee, declared to-day that he did not know Lamar, and never, so far as he could remember, had he ever met him. It will be recalled that Lamar, while the steel committee was at work, felt impelled to issue a statement denying reports that he had said he could control the report of that body.

An interesting sidelight on the man comes out in this connection. It is true that few, if any, of the members of the committee know Lamar, just as Congressman Palmer, at least, does not know him. But during the sessions of the committee Lamar managed to be seen in company with several of the investigators who had been engaged by Chairman Stanley.

One day Stanley sent an investigator into Wall Street to look up some information in connection with the inquiry. The investigator went to half a dozen places and in each he was met with substantially this reply: "Oh, you fellows are not going to conduct a sincere investigation. This is merely a bull movement started by David Lamar, who has started this whole investigation."

Riordan To Be Recalled.

Congressman Daniel J. Riordan will, in all probability, be recalled by the committee when it reassembles. Attention has been attracted here to the fact that when Lamar and Monk Eastman were on trial at Freehold, in October, 1903, on charges of conspiracy and attempted murder, a D. J Riordan was called by Lamar's lawyers to prove the good character of Eastman, the gunman. He represented Eastman as being a man of good character and repute, though the "Monk" was at that time one of the most notorious characters in the East Side.

The committee is desirous of knowing if the D. J. Riordan who testified at that time in the interests of Lamar and Eastman is the same whose name the mysterious unknown has been using over the telephone in questionable ways. The committee will resume taking testimony July 7.

Poor of South Are Dumped on Atlanta, Says Depot Matron

Mrs. Payne Asserts Her Most Disagreeable Task Is to Turn Back Needy Ones.

Atlanta is being used as a dumping ground for the paupers and helpless invalids of other Southern cities and towns, according to Mrs. J. W. Payne, matron at the Terminal Station.

"When the people of other towns get tired of keeping up their old and helpless poor they buy them a ticket and send them to Atlanta, often telling them that they will be better taken care of here," Mrs. Payne said.

"Often a woman with a family of small children will arrive in the city penniless, and the woman will come to me with the tale that she has been told that there are charitable institutions here that will take care of her children and help her to get work.

"Of course I have to tell the poor people that we can not help them, and one of the hardest tasks I have is to tell them that they will have to return to the town they came from."

Troops Break Camp At St. Simon's; Take Trains for Atlanta

Next Detachment Pitches Tents July 10—Hard Drills Abolished by Adjutant General's Orders.

BRUNSWICK, June 28.—After a stay of one week on St. Simons Island, the five troops of the Second Squadron of cavalry, under command of Major Seamans, and the Third Battalion, under command of Major Hunter, entrained late this afternoon for Atlanta, bringing to a close the first encampment of State troops for 1913.

t was a success in every way. The hard drilling and duties of the regulars were abolished, following out the idea of Adjutant General Nash that this should be a vacation camp as a reward to the boys for past services.

A short time before the troops boarded the trains a dress parade was given by the Third Battalion. The next detachment comes July 10, when the Fifth Regiment will go into camp.

U. S. Bars Chicago Man and Fiancee

Canada Holds Brewer and Girl He Met in Romance on Immorality Charge.

SARNIA, ONTARIO, June 28.—Carl L. Brandt, a Chicago brewer, and Miss Ida Maria Spitzner, of Chemnitz, Saxony, are in jail here on a charge of immorality under the white slave act.

The couple met and became engaged en route from Germany to New York. The wedding was arranged for June 12, and they left, presumably for Chicago, but purchased tickets for Montreal, where, it is alleged, they lived as husband and wife for five days.

Leaving for Chicago, they encountered United States immigration officers, who declined to admit them. Brandt declared he would shoot himself before he would marry the girl, but relented and sought a marriage license, which was declined, as neither had been a resident of the municipality fifteen days.

Pastor Gets Town To Give Day to Ball

All Girard Suspends Business to Attend Games, but There Is No Playing on Sunday.

GIRARD, KANS., June 28.—Girard has found a happy solution to the problem of Sunday baseball by setting out one day in the week when everybody suspends business operations and goes to the ball game.

This arrangement came through the suggestion of the Rev. M. L. Morrison, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, after considerable wrangling early in the summer between people who wanted ball games on Sunday and those who did not. The new arrangement was tried yesterday for the second time. Everyone is pleased and the blue laws are enforced.

Baroness Will Wed Man Hurled in Auto

St. Louis Tourist Unexpectedly Finds Self in Noblewoman's Car and Romance Ripens.

NEW YORK, June 28.—James Hurley, a railroad man of St. Louis, while automobiling in Paris a year ago, ran his car into that of the Baroness Barbara Ursula Kalinowski of Weisbaden and was hurled into the tonneau, where the Baroness was sitting. He gave her his card and later offered her his heart.

Arriving here by the Hamburg-American liner Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, she left for St. Louis, where the Baroness will be married to Mr. Hurley.

FOSTER EXPLAINS PRISON MEASURE

Its Intent Not to Abolish Chaingangs, Author Says—Would Reform Convict System.

Senator A. H. Foster, author of a bill to reform the Georgia convict system, issued a statement Saturday explaining the object of the measure.

"The phrase, 'abolish chaingangs,' has been misleading," Mr. Foster said. "In the first place, this measure does not contemplate taking the convicts off the roads at all. Its purpose is to increase the efficiency of convicts as road workers. It will continue to allow counties to work their convicts, and the phrase, 'abolish chaingangs,' is true only in a technical sense.

"The bill provides for reforms and changes I believe are necessary. They are practical and efficient. The provision to abolish stripes and chains means a gradual abolition, to be carried only as far as is practical. The proposal to separate youthful offenders from hardened criminals is one the value of which I believe no one will dispute.

"One of the features of the measure I believe will commend itself to everybody will make possible the segregation of whites and blacks, which is now not always possible. Under the present law, when a white man is convicted for a misdemeanor in a county which has only a negro chaingang, the white man must work on the gang with the negroes. This law gives the Prison Commission the right to move the white man in such a case to another camp.

Catholic Fraternity To Initiate 30 Men

Chicago Knights of Columbus to Aid—Lodge and Candidates to Attend Mass.

More than 30 candidates will be initiated into Atlanta Lodge No. 660 Knights of Columbus, Sunday. Three degrees will be given. The major degree will be conferred by a team from Chicago, and the two minor degrees will be given under the direction of Georgia officers of the order.

The day's program will begin at 8:30 o'clock, when the members of the lodge and the candidates will assemble at the new hall of the order, 18 East Pine Street, and march to the Sacred Heart Church for 10 o'clock mass. Special seats will be reserved for them.

The procession will form again at 12 o'clock and march to the old quarters of the order at 26 1-2 East Alabama Street, where the candidates will be prepared for the initiation ceremonies, which are scheduled to begin at 1 o'clock.

'DRYS' DETERMINE ON VIGOROUS FIGHT

Neither Money Nor Effort Will Be Spared to Push Anti-Liquor Shipping Bill.

"We shall not fight the devil with his own weapons, but intend to fight in the open," declared Dr. C. H. Young, secretray of the Georgia Anti-Saloon League, which is pushing a bill in the Legislature to prohibit the shipment of liquor into Georgia.

The bill was presented in the House by Representative Evans, of Screven. It is being urged by Mr. Evans, Representative Henry Fullbright, of Burke County, and other well-known prohibition legislators.

The Anti-Saloon League will wage an aggressive campaign, according to statements at League headquarters. If necessary, it is said, petitions will be circulated throughout the State in the last prohibition fight. Neither money nor effort will be spared to put the bill through, leaders say.

The "devil," as Dr. Young characterizes the alleged liquor lobby, will be forced to fight Anti-Saloon Leaguers, churchmen and ministers for the most part with their weapons if they want to meet them on common ground, he says.

"I don't believe in the old adage that you must fight the devil with his own weapons," said Dr. Young. "The devil's fire will burn you up. It certainly will burn us ministers up."

Woman Bound Over On Charge of Theft

Man Who Accused Hotel Companion Is Held Under $500 Bond.

Mrs. Ella McRae was held for the Grand Jury under $1,000 bond by Recorder Pro Tem Preston Saturday afternoon, charged with robbing R. L. Bates, of Etowah, Tenn., of a $50 bill at the Empire Hotel Friday night. Bates was held on $500 bond on a statutory charge.

The management of the hotel declared McRae and the woman registered there as Mr. and Mrs. Vance and represented themselves to be piano agents. They were ordered to leave the hotel after the trouble.

Few Battleflags Are Carried by Wearers of Grey, but Have Fine Spirit for Reunion.

Atlanta's delegation of 75 Confederate veterans, together with several hundred from other points in the State, this morning is nearing Gettysburg, the scene of one of the Civil War's greatest battles and the place selected for the great national reunion of the Blue and the Gray July 1, 2 and 3, the semi-centennial anniversary of the engagement.

General A. J. West, commissioner from Georgia, is in command of the veterans. Through his efforts Georgia has obtained a particularly advantageous camping ground facing Confederate Avenue, the principal street of the reunion city.

Few Battle Flags Carried.

Too precious to trust to the possibilities of loss or damage, few of the old battle flags were in evidence when the soldiers of '61 boarded the train for the North at 11 o'clock Saturday forenoon. The veterans appreciated, however, the spirit of those in charge of the celebration in extending permission for the carrying of the battle trophies and started on their journey with the certainty that they would have one of the most enjoyable experiences of their life in exchanging reminiscences with their one-time enemies on the other side of the Mason and Dixon line.

If Atlanta's veterans are hoping to find cooler weather in the North they appear doomed to disappointment in this particular. Reports are that Gettysburg is sweltering in the heat wave, but the weatherman has held out hope that the temperature will moderate by the time the actual celebration begins.

Old Confederate Coin Carried.

One of the most interesting relics belonging to the time of the conflict between the North and the South is that taken to the reunion by General West. It is a Confederate half dollar said to be one of four coined before the die was broken. Its value is set at $10,000, and it was presented to General West by David H. Keefer.

9th Ward Citizens Urge L. J. Daniel to Enter Council Race

Agrees to Consider Request—Would Advance Business Administration as Platform.

L. J. Daniel, member of the firm of Daniel Brothers, has been urged by various Ninth Ward citizens to become a candidate for the General Council in the interests of a business administration.

So insistent were their overtures that Mr. Daniel, although strongly averse to entering politics, has agreed to give the request serious consideration.

The term of C. W. Smith as Councilman from the Ninth Ward expires next January, and Mr. Daniel, if he runs, will be a candidate to fill this vacancy.

Georgia Bankers to Urge Laws at This Legislative Session

One Provides Larger Salary for State Treasurer—Banking Department Considered.

The Georgia Bankers' Association, of which L. P. Hillyer, of Macon, is president and Haynes McFadden, of Atlanta, secretary, will urge new laws in the present session of the Legislature, according to announcement Saturday.

The association now has under advisement several bills, including one for a constitutional amendment providing larger appropriations for the State Treasurer, who supervises $6,000,000, it is said, on a salary fund of $3,100.

The amendment, though, is being considered only by the association thus far. It has not been acted on. Haynes McFadden Saturday said a bill creating a banking department probably would not come up at this session of the Legislature.

DANIEL HUGHES PRICE'S ASSISTANT

New State Agriculture Head Says He Chose Twiggs County Man Because He Fits.

Commissioner of Agriculture James D. Price, who will be sworn in Monday morning, has announced the appointment of Daniel Hughes, of Twiggs County, to be Assistant Commissioner.

Mr. Hughes is a son of Congressman Dudley Hughes, of the Twelfth District, is a practical farmer, and well known throughout Georgia. He is 35 years of age.

In making the announcement of Mr Hughes' appointment, Commissioner Price said:

"I have appointed Dan Hughes Assistant Commissioner of Agriculture because he fits the place. I have determined to bring the department and the farmers as close together as I can, and realize that Mr. Hughes can be of great assistance to me in this. I had to choose him, however, from among several other heavily indorsed gentlemen, which was embarrassing, but his indorsements were the heaviest and best I think I ever saw. I believe he will be a credit to the department."

Mr. Hughes, who resides in Danville, Twiggs County, will come to Atlanta Monday and will assume office immediately after his chief is commissioned.

Asked concerning other changes in the Department of Agriculture, Mr. Price said he had no announcements to make with respect to that yet, but would give out his appointments this week.

He did not say whether he contemplated any changes in the present force.

SUNDAY CONCERTS AT PARKS.

FLAGLER WILL UNCHANGED AND HINTS OF PLOT FALL

Relative's Charges That He Was Influence to Change Bequests and Died in Hut Found To Be Largely Without Foundation.

Only Son Left but Small Share of Fortune of Florida Multi-Millionaire Railroad King. His Brother-in-Law Benefits.

By TARLETON COLLIER.

WEST PALM BEACH, June 28.—While a number of the charges made by Amasa Flagler, of California, regarding strange circumstances surrounding the death of Henry M. Flagler to-day are found to be substantial, the principal accusations that codicils were added to the Flagler will, completely changing its effect, and that the dying man was given insufficient medical attention, appear to fall without support.

Seven codicils to the will are not significant. Investigation into the charges by Amasa Flagler that dark work accompanied the end of his kinsman was conducted by The Sunday American. The stories of the California man that Henry M. Flagler was kept in deep seclusion until the end; that visitors, including himself, were refused admittance; that the most rigid privacy shrouded every detail of the railroad king's illness—all are found to possess a substantial basis of fact.

Amasa P. Flagler, of California, who says he is the closest male relative of Henry M. Flagler, except for Harry Harkness Flagler, a son, came to Palm Beach while the financier was dying, and was refused a sight of him. To-day he is talking freely to newspaper men, hinting at mystery in the death of Henry M. Flagler, charging that the great railroad man was not given the proper treatment or care, and that Mrs. Flagler, J. B. Parrott and Dr. W. R. Keenan, the three who were practically alone with him toward the end, and who, he points out, were the beneficiaries under the will, kept visitors away purposely.

He died in a small room of a frame cottage on the Atlantic beach, to which he had been moved some time before the end. From one window is to be seen "The Breakers," his own great hotel. It has been locked and deserted since March. Through the other window there is the sight of a stretch of parched grass, the beach and the ocean.

Mr. Flagler was moved to the beach cottage from his mansion, "Whitehall," when summer began to set in at Palm Beach. He was moved at the combined orders of his physician, Dr. W. R. Keenan, and Mrs. Flagler. Dr. Keenan is Mrs. Flagler's brother. Because has was moved Amasa P. Flagler finds the basis for a denunciation of those who took care of him, declaring that his kinsman was taken to the empty beach cottage that he might be more securely isolated.

Joe Jefferson Died In Same Cottage.

Investigation reveals that many of the statements made by Amasa P. Flagler in his interviews regarding the death of his relative are exaggerations. He is said to have declared that the beach cottage in which Henry M. Flagler died was old and dilapidated and isolated from the community. It is, however, "The Nautilus," one of a colony of seven cottages on the beach, and is within 200 feet of "The Breakers." It is leased for $5,000 a season of three months to the winter visitors from the North, and last season was occupied by "Fingy" Conners, the Buffalo politician. Joseph Jefferson, the actor, according to the beach traditions, died in the same cottage.

Trained Nurses Succeeded by Boy.

The rapid decline of the railroad king began about March 1, when, already ill, he was injured by a fall in the reception hall of "Whitehall." He took to bed at that time, and never H. E. Bemis, wife of the manager of the "Royal Ponciana."

From the fact that the attending left it until the day of his death, May 20. After several weeks in his room at "Whitehall," he was moved to the beach cottage.

Trained nurses who had been engaged were turned away, to be succeeded by George Conway, a young

Lack of Filial Respect Is Charged to Him in Codicil of Father's Will.

English boy, who is the nephew of Mrs. Cooper, the housekeeper at "Whitehall," and by Tom Lynch, a young man employed on the estate. Conway watched by day, and the other by night.

Dr. Keenan, the brother of Mrs. Flagler, for years house physician at "The Breakers," and more recently at the "Royal Ponciana" as well, attended Mr. Flagler. To aid him, Dr. Castleberry, a guest in the winter hotel, from Harrisburg, Pa., remained. Dr. Castleberry is a kinsman of Mrs. physicians are related to beneficiaries under Flagler's will, and that one, Dr. Keenan, is himself a beneficiary. Amasa Flagler has drawn evidence of irregular conduct in the care of Henry M. Flagler.

Little Told From Bedside.

During the period of the financier's illness little definite news came from his bedside. Newspaper men of West Palm Beach and of Jacksonville declare that no bulletins were issued, and that inquiries were met always with indefiniteness.

Along toward the end came Amasa Flagler. According to his own story, he had sent a telegram to herald his visit. Reaching Palm Beach, he was informed that he could not see the sick man. He declares that he virtually was ordered from the grounds by J. B. Parrott, vice president and general manager of Flagler's railroad, who became president by the express terms of the Flagler will.

Incensed, Amasa Flagler went to the citizens of West Palm Beach with his story. He had telegraphed ahead for a room in "The Breakers," but these were denied him. "The Breakers," he was informed, was closed for the season.

Amasa Flagler found quarters in "The Gables," a less pretentious hotel in West Palm Beach, whose proprietor, R. C. McGriff, listened to his story and to this day believes in him. Amasa Flagler was the first to send a telegram to Harry Harkness Flagler.

"Your father is calling for you," is the message he sent.

According to the statement to McGriff, Parrott, over in Palm Beach, heard that Harry Flagler was coming to his father's side, and came across to "The Gables" to engaged a room and bath for the financier's son.

No room and bath was available in McGriff's establishment, and Amasa Flagler offered to give up his suite to Harry Harkness Flagler. But Harry Flagler, when he arrived, stayed with an old friend in the town. He arrived in time to see his father alive.

Makes Charges Against Beneficiaries.

According to his story, Amasa Flagler was denied a part in the funeral. He went on his way North, where he has made his sensational charges that Mrs. Flagler, Dr. Keenan and J. B. Parrott kept the dying financier secluded, denying all admission that they might maintain an influence over him.

The three are the principal beneficiaries under the will, and it is Amasa's inference that because they were with him continually, to the seclusion of others, their claims were made secure. He hints, in his interviews, that codicils to the original Flagler will were made under their domination, cutting out other legatees, particularly Harry Harkness Flagler, the son of the financier.

However, an examination of the will and codicils proves this accusation to be without foundation. There are seven codicils, but none materially effective.

The documents are in the court house in St. Augustine, where they have reposed since being made. The original will was drafted February 1, 1902, and names W. H. Beardsley, of New York; Dr. William R. Keenan, of Lockport, N. Y., the physician who was with him at his death, and J. R. Parrott, of Jacksonville, another of the little party with him most of the time during his last illness, as his executors and trustees. His wife, Mrs. Mary Lillie Flagler, he names as the residuary legatee, and his son Harry Harkness Flagler, he cut off with the relatively small legacy of 5,000 shares of Standard Oil stock. This, at the time of Flagler's death, was worth $642 a share.

Declares Son Didn't Show Filial Regard.

"I have already given my son securities sufficient to bring him an income of $75,000 a year," the will stated. "My son has not shown for me the filial regard that would make me inclined to do more for him than is done by this item of my will."

There are seven codicils to the will, made, respectively, February 17, 1903; April 28, 1904; January 8, 1906; April 1, 1908; December 22, 1910; January 19, 1912, and September 13, 1912.

It is these, Amasa Flagler declares, which are damaging to the original document, but none of them seem materially to affect it. The first codicil gives his trustees the power to complete the southern extension of the Florida East Coast Railroad, which he denied them in the will.

The second codicil defines the meaning of the term "expiration of trust," which occurred frequently in the will, and provides that if Harry Harkness Flagler is not living at the end of the "expiration of trust" then the 5,000 shares of oil stock lapse to the estate. In this codicil also he revoked the legacies of $80,000 to the Florida University and $40,000 to the John B. Stetson University, and provided for bequests of $10,000 to J. P. Greaves, Robert Murray and Leland Sterry, and giving W. H. Beardsley $50,000 instead of $10,000. If he survived his wife, Flagler specified in this codicil, the residue of his estate is to be divided among Roy H. York, W. L. Harkness and Mrs. John D. McLennan, of Cleveland; W. R. Keenan, Jr., J. K. Wise and Sarah G. Keenan, of Wilmington; J. R. Parrott, of Jacksonville, and W. H. Beardsley, of New York.

No Increase for Son's Share of Estate.

The third codicil announces that upon consideration the testator found incorrect the statement in the will that he had given his son securities netting $75,000 a year. However, he said, this mistake did not warrant an increase in the legacy to Harry Harkness Flagler.

Flagler's Isolation Necessary, Says Doctor.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Dr. Owen Kenan, brother of Mrs. Henry M. Flagler, to-day issued a vigorous denial of the charges of Amasa Plummer Flagler regarding the circumstances which surrounded the death of his patient at West Palm Beach.

"There isn't a word of truth in the whole thing," he said. "The only explantation is that these so-called 'charges' originated in the brain of some cunning adventurer with an ax to grind. Publication of these unfounded rumors have annoyed us greatly, and Mrs. Flagler is in no condition to be interviewed, so that I can speak for her.

"So far as I can make out, the greatest objection to conditions this Amasa Flagler found at the Beach was the isolation of the sick man. That was natural. Mr. Flagler was old, his illness was serious and he needed quiet. The cottage in which he died is not dilapidated. It rents for an enormous sum every season, and some prominent Boston society people had it last winter.

"If Amasa Flagler's object is to induce Harry H. Flagler to contest the will it will fail. Harry Flagler is a gentleman, although he had not spoken to his father but once in the last seventeen years. He was left $5,000,000 and each of his children gets $4,000,000. That seems to me to be eminently fair.

"As to our conduct of the case, Dr. Castlebury and I did the best we could. Henry M. Flagler had as tender and loving care as any man ever had up to the moment of his death. There was no secrecy other than that was absolutely necessary, and nothing to be concealed."

AMASA FLAGLER, relative of dead railroad king, who hinted of plot to influence him in making will favorable to kin of his wife.

BURN ATLANTA CLEAN, PLAN OF SANITAR YCHIEF

Settlement of Crematory Row Leaves Mayor, Council and Everybody Pleased.

John Jentzen, Sanitary Chief, is the happiest man in Atlanta as a result of the settlement Saturday of the crematory row. Operating his department without an incinerator, he said, was like trying to sail a ship on dry land, and that he had had to bear the brunt of complaints against the situation from thousands of exasperated citizens.

"That decision in the Mayor's office marks a new era in Atlanta," he said. "We shall begin a general clean-up the day the crematory is completed. I understand that that will not be longer than ten days. We shall burn Atlanta pure.

"Let the people take note of these instructions:

Gives Sanitary Rules.

"Keep the lids on garbage cans.

"Pile up the trash in yards and notify the sanitary department to come and get it.

"Don't throw things into streets and alleys.

"Help us put an end to the flies and musquitoes. You know trash breeds them."

The Chief said the new crematory would increase greatly the efficiency of his department and that it would shorten hauls and allow sanitary wagons to make more frequent visits.

He declared it would reduce the death rate and make Atlanta a more pleasant place to live in.

Mayor Well Pleased.

Although Mayor Woodward has been almost unanimously opposed in his attitude by the Council and brought most bitter criticism on himself, he smiled and said he was well satisfied over the outcome.

The Mayor's victory in the Supreme Court caused the price of the incinerator to be reduced from $276,000 to $260,000. His recent firm stand caused him to gain a point of honor.

Council endeavored to avoid allowing him to execute the contract. The concession is that he will execute it, following a special meeting of the Council Tuesday. That point has been the whole cause of the last controversy.

New Mexico After Jap Immigration

State Commercial Organization Wants Nipponese to Till Soil of the Pecos Valley.

ARTESIA, N. MEX., June 28.—The Chamber of Commerce of Arizona evidently has no fear of a war between the United States and Japan. Acting on advices from F. J. Lukins, who has been investigating the character of the Japanese in California, this organization issued a general invitation to citizens of Japan who desire to come to New Mexico to till the soil.

They are wanted especially in the Pecos Valley. There are a few Japs at Lakewood, N. Mex., who are making record-breaking crops of melons and onions.

Pullman Berths to be Made Wider

Patent Rights Are Obtained on Device, Giving Full Sized Beds in Compartment Coaches.

CHICAGO, June 28.—The Pullman Company has just become possessed of the patent right of a new device for the purpose of making berths wider.

In compartment cars where there is a separate passageway through the car outside the compartments there is no objection to using the aisle for extending the berths and some of the compartment sleeping cars are equipped with a device for this purpose.

The seat ends are hinged so that they can be swung down and supported by an angle brace and form a horizontal extension of the seat. When two seats are pulled out, as is ordinarily done on making up the lower berth, a filler is placed between the two ends after they have been lowered, thus forming a full size bed.

A CARD OF THANKS.

I wish to express my deepest appreciation of the many kindnesses and words of condolence from our many friends in our recent bereavement.

More Bibles Printed Than All Other Books

Publisher Says They Outnumber Best Sellers Carloads to Volumes.

CHICAGO, June 28.—For every volume of the six best sellers issued each year a carload of Bibles is manufactured. This information was gleaned at the annual book fair which opened at the Palmer House.

"The public taste changes from time to time," said Arthur J. Saalfield, president of the Saalfield Publishing Company, of New York, "but the Bible continues to be the most popular book printed. Where other books are turned out by the volume it is turned out by the carload. One of the puzzles of the Bible publishers is what becomes of his product. Bibles seem to disappear."

According to Saalfield, "Robinson Crusoe" and "The Swiss Family Robinson" will live as long as the Bible itself. They constitute the two most popular volumes, he says.

"The best show in town," is the verdict of those who have seen it.

The Arcade at Cox College and Conservatory, College Park, Ga.

The above view is taken from a beautiful book called "Environs of Cox College," which has recently been issued from the press.

Here is given a good view of the grand stairway and spacious elevator. This elevator service is more appreciated by young ladie sthan the general public may realise, since its use is a wonderful saving of time, physical exertion and health.

This is but one of the many features of Cox College which adds to the efficiency of the college work, among which figure largely modern laboratories, commodious lecture rooms, museum and a mounted telescope. The Academy furnishes splendid preparation for college work. For college entrance 15 units are required. High standards are maintained and a strong faculty is in charge. In the Conservatory department are found many pianos, pipe organs, orchestral outfit, a large concert hall, and most important of all, a faculty of artists of national and international fame.

Cox College offers a free literary scholarship in each congressional district of Georgia. Those who wish to avail themselves of these scholarships, should apply at once.

FUND FOR CORN SHOW IS $3,515; STILL GROWING

Chamber of Commerce Confident Entire Amount Needed for Display Will Be Raised.

The 1913 corn show fund is climbing. It now aggregates $3,515, and definite promises have been made that will materially increase the list before noon Monday. The total desired is $7,500, and the Chamber of Commerce is confident that the sum will be realized. The principal items so far as reported are:

Committee on banks, W. L. Peel, chairman	$ 750
Committee on retail trade, Ivan E. Allen, chairman	600
Committee on wholesale trade, Lynn Fort, chairman	272
H. G. Hastings, through Ivan E. Allen's committee	500
Capitalists, Robert F. Maddox, chairman	145
Hardware, R. W. Peeples, chairman	300
Live stock, W. H. White, Jr., chairman	218
Telephones and telegraphs, W. T. Gentry, chairman	100
Real estate, Charles P. Glover, chairman	80
Southern States Life Insurance Company	100
Norris, Inc., W. J. Lowenstein	100
Other subscriptions not yet announced	350
Total	$3,515

Information comes to Secretary Walter Cooper that interest all over the State in the 1913 show is just as keen as that being shown in Atlanta. There is definite talk of spreading the corn club work principle into other fields.

State Agent Phil Campbell says in the course of a letter to Mr. Cooper: "We expect also to organize the boys' oats, hay and pig clubs this fall."

Miss Creswell, who has charge of the girls' canning clubs, has written to inform Mr. Cooper that there will be a splendid exhibit of these clubs in connection with the corn show in December.

The work has aroused the interest of the Legislature and bills have been introduced in both the House and Senate providing for the creation of a commission to take up the question of applying the principles now at work in the corn clubs to the whole problem of raising Georgia's foodstuffs and diversifying the crops.

The Georgia Dry Mixers' Association, composed of the leading fertilizer men, will hold a special meeting Monday to take definite steps toward helping the corn show.

Legislators Asked To Attend Church

Trinity Methodists Extend Warm Invitation to All Members of the General Assembly.

Members of the Georgia Legislature are invited to go to church. The invitation came Saturday from the Young Men Helpers Class of the Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, announcing that the legislators will be welcome at that institution.

The invitation was as follows:

"The members of Trinity M. E. Church South, corner of Washington Street and Trinity Avenue, one olock from the Capitol, extend a cordial invitation to members of the House and Senate to worship with them while in Atlanta. Sunday school at 9:30 a. m., divine worship at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. every Sunday; prayer meeting every Wednesday night. Come, you will be welcome."

"Grab First Man," Girl's Sage Advice

Young Woman Tells Bridesmaids That by This Method They Can Be Sure of Matrimony.

WINSTED, CONN., June 28.—The most concise, clear and probably the most efficacious method of getting a husband is that which Miss Ida Madrah, of this city, declares she will use. At a "shower" given for Miss Maud Shepard, who is to marry William A. Twining, of Tacoma, 24 of Miss Shepard's friends gave their ideas of the best manner to get a husband or wife. Miss Madrah's declaration follows:

"The best way to get a husband is to go out on the street corners and grab the first man you see. Then you are sure of getting something."

Societies Opposed To Plumage Imports

Women and National Authorities Join In Fight on Amendment to Tariff.

Replying to inquiries as to who is opposing the Clapp amendment to the bird clause in the new tariff law, Miss Nina Hornady, president of the National Society U. S. D. 1812, said Saturday night:

"The view of the deadliness of the feather trade's amendment is maintained by the New York Zoological Society, the National Association of Audubon Societies, Edward Howe Forbush, State Ethnologist of Massachusetts, and Henry Oldys, formerly of the Biological Survey, Washington, D. C.

"These organizations and individuals strongly assert that the amendment, if passed, will enable the feather trade to import the feathers of any bird which the trade wishes to import merely by submitting affidavits that the birds were killed for 'food' or as 'pests,' a perfectly simple and easy proceeding."

My Experience With Tacco ---The New Handy Varnish

By EVELYN WREN

HOUSEWIVES realize that a coat of varnish is often more satisfactory than a new piece of furniture. It is a gratification to see the marred chair which belonged to the first parlor suit look like new. The dining table has held many simple breakfasts, many delightful luncheons and many bountiful dinners, and the steaming dishes have left ugly marks upon its once shining surface. To see it emerge from its varnish treatment is like welcoming back an old friend.

Varnishing seems like tiresome, dirty work, and a task suitable for men attired in overalls. I had always associated it with laborers' muscles and rough clothing until one day when I decided my desk at The American office needed some attention.

You do not become wholly unfeminine even if you are a newspaper woman. I was tired of seeing the black spot where the inkwell had overturned. I did not like the white mark where a glass of ice water had stood. All at once I had a hunch that I could do my work better if a marred place did not constantly remind me of a loss of temper and consequent lowering of self-respect and dignity. The refinishing of my desk became an obsession.

I read advertisements. Fortunately I am influenced by them. When I saw an advertisement of a varnish which a woman could apply with a cloth just as a furniture polish is applied, I resolved to investigate the novel preparation.

I went to the sixth floor of the Forsyth Building and entered the offices of The Amber Chemical Company. There I almost breathlessly inquired for Tacco, the water-proof, dust-proof and heat-proof varnish. (To tell the truth, I did not much mind about the heat-proof feature, for most of the heat in our office is caused by irritable nerves, and not by the weather. I am no exception.)

A bottle of Tacco was put into my hand, and I grasped a piece of cheesecloth and went energetically to work. I used just as much muscle as three years of typewriting will produce in a feminine arm. I worked as hard as any furniture polisher ever dreamed of doing in his worst nightmare. I thought I was doing well.

Imagine my chagrin and the expression on my face when the cloth was quietly taken from my vigorous grasp and I was shown that Tacco requires no rubbing. You do not have to use as much energy as I do in ordinary dusting.

Dust the article first. If it is much stained you might well apply a little soap and water. Then apply your Tacco to the dry surface. A piece of cheesecloth is the best medium, and a firm, gentle movement like that of dusting will put the varnish on in the best form. Then let it dry. At the end of five hours view the result and feel proud of your work which is really but a pastime.

Have a Tacco day. Take the breakfast cloth off when husband has departed for the office. Apply Tacco according to the directions on the box, and the dining table will be ready for use at lunch time. Of course if husband is a capitalist and breakfasts at 10:30 instead of at 7 you will probably not have the pleasure of using Tacco yourself. Let us hope that you are one of those domestic little housewives who just "loves" to make your home pretty with your personal effort, and that husband has not outgrown his appreciation of the little touches which you can give just a bit better than any hired help.

The table in the living room has played an important part in the happiness of the household. You could not think of home without that table, and the ones you see in the store windows never look quite as hospitable or nearly so homelike. Here Jack has read his paper and graciously explained politics to your bewildered self as you stitched on little frocks which were to go to Kindergarten with Little Girl. It has held Big Brother's school books and his drawing instruments. (Said drawing instruments are responsible for the big unsightly gash at the end.) All in all, you feel as you begin to apply Tacco with a gentle hand that this table has many dear memories. You would like to see it as fresh and pretty as it was when you and Jack picked it out. It seemed the finest table in the world on that day. How you blushed, and how manly Jack looked as he quietly drew the money from his pocket and ordered it sent to your new home.

When the table is finished the big chair will seem more worn and bruised than ever. You never realized how shabby the living room was getting. It seems but a day or two ago that you decided to surprise Jack with that comfortable chair on his birthday. You saved from your housekeeping money bit by bit and grew anxious toward the last for fear the fund would not be large enough. You grow tender toward that big chair as you remember Jack's eyes when he first espied it and then quickly gazed at you. The lovelight was there, even if you had been married a half-dozen years, and had but recently lost many hours of sleep with Little Girl's teething episode.

The tender feelings do not interfere with the application of Tacco. Let retrospection have its sway, and when you have had the pleasure of many happy memories look at the result. The table will shine like new. The gash made by Big Brother's steel ruler will not show. Tacco has acted as a filler and made the surface smooth as glass. Dusting will be a light task now. You may even scrub the table, for it has a waterproof finish now. The chair will bring the lovelight to Jack's eyes anew, for he, too, will remember the day your love made the gift.

If you are a housekeeper, you will welcome Tacco as a means of making your home brighter and more cheerful. You need never wish for an opportunity to send shabby furniture away to be refinished. You can buy a bottle of Tacco for only 50 cents. The economy of it will be demonstrated by its first use, and you will be ready to purchase a quart, half-gallon or gallon can before many days.

When I like anything I never take my liking for granted. I analyze my appreciation. Here is my analysis of my fondness for Tacco:

It requires absolutely no rubbing.
It dries in from two to five hours.
It is water-proof as well as dust and heat proof.
It is economical in time and money.

Well, my desk at The American office has had its Tacco treatment. Come in to see it, if you like. Then investigate Tacco as I did, if you like, or better still, benefit by my written experience and buy a bottle or can at any good drug or hardware store.

Do you live out of town? If you do, you would like to hear about a splendid proposition for out-of-town dealers. Write to-day for information and do not risk the loss of the agency in your town. Write and see what The Amber Chemical Company has to tell you.

FOLLOW-UP SYSTEM WINS PONY VOTES

CONTESTANTS HARD AT WORK FOR BALLOTS

Shetlands Are Growing Fat and Strong at Loomis Avenue Stable Where They Are Kept.

The last week of the "clubs of five" bonus offer in The Georgian and American pony contest begins with all contestants straining hard to take advantage of the benefit to be gained by getting subscriptions before the time limit is up.

Standings published in The American show great gains, but they are small compared with the leaps forward which will be shown when the bonus votes are reckoned up for publication in next Wednesday's Georgian. The contest manager believes it will take the office force all of the night of July 5 to make the proper entries.

There also is a bonus of 50,000 votes for the first $30 turned in for subscriptions by any of the contestants. This offer may be withdrawn at any time.

Use Follow-Up System.

The contest manager wishes to repeat his suggestion that contestants take a leaf from the books of the successful business man and institute a "follow-up" system. A list of those whose subscriptions expire soon should be made, and all such subscribers visited with a request for a renewal. Nine times out of ten, a renewal is easier to get than the first subscription, for at the end of a short trial the subscriber generally gets to like The Georgian and American so well that he wants to continue.

It is systematic work of this sort which counts for more than the spurts of a day or two, which, while they may yield remarkable results, are not frequent enough to build up totals to the point where the contestant can feel sure of a pony.

None Sure of Winning.

No contestant has a right to feel sure of winning as yet. There is not a boy or girl in the race who can not be passed by an energetic rival, and some who are leading now have a very poor start, indeed.

Meanwhile, the ponies are "eating their heads off" at 55 Loomis Avenue, where their future owners are invited to call and see them. All are rounding into great shape, and they are prettier every day. It is going to be a hard task for the winners to pick the ponies they like best from the splendid bunch The Georgian and American have bought.

"I subscribed to The Georgian and American a week ago, and the paper has not begun to come to my home yet," is a complaint heard every now and then.

Usually it develops that the subscriber gave his money to one of the contestants, and that the contestant is "holding back."

This is poor policy, particularly if it is a short-term subscription, for when a contestant treats a subscriber in this way the man is not going to be as willing to give the contestant his renewal.

"Don't hold back," is the advice of the contest manager—and he knows best.

BONUS OFFER IN PONY CONTEST GIVES 1 WEEK MORE OF OPPORTUNITY

Wanting to win and working to win differ widely. Working to win is what counts, and working to win now, while the special bonus vote offers are in effect in The Georgian and American pony contest.

July 4 means more than cannon crackers, picnics and general celebrations to the pony contestants. It means, to them, the end of one of the bonus offers, and July 4 is little more than a week away.

Clubs of five subscriptions, yearly, half-yearly, or for three months, bring great rewards until the expiration of the period thus limited. And "when the polls close" for these club bonus votes the office force of the contest manager expects an all-night session reckoning up the strength of the many candidates.

Some have brought in five subscriptions at a time to take advantage of the bonus. Others have brought them in one, two or three at a time. In either case, the clubs will be credited accurately. And overnight the standings will seem to have doubled, though the bonus votes represent weeks of work.

The ponies now are at 55 Loomis Avenue, where contestants are welcome. If they arrive at the right time they will see the ponies being exercised.

PRICES TO STAY AS THEY ARE NOW, SAYS SULZBERGER

NEW YORK, June 28.—"Meat will never be any cheaper in the United States than it is now," declared G. F. Sulzberger, of Sulzberger & Schwarzchild, on his arrival from Europe on the Mauretania. "The only effect the change in the tariff will cause will be to keep prices where they are. Without this revision in the tariff, there would undoubtedly have been a big jump in prices."

NEW ANSLEY HOTEL GIVES MOST MODERN HOSTELRY OF SOUTH TO ATLANTA

No Detail Has Been Spared to Make It Unsurpassed for the Traveling Public and People of City—Formal Opening Monday.

Machinery and Equipment Latest Devices for Aid of Sanitation and Comfort—Mural Decorations Picture Events of Georgia.

Only to those who "put up" after Monday at the Hotel Ansley will it be given in fullest measure to say, with Shenstone, that they have "found life's warmest welcome at an inn."

At least, the builder and the lessee and the press agent have endeavored to make it even so, and the very few favored persons permitted to inspect the building and its appointments in advance of the opening agree they planned wisely and builded well.

When the Ansley, Atlanta's newest hostelry, opens its doors to guests on Monday, it will be unexcelled among the inns of the country for efficiency, service, accommodations, equipment and modernity of its appointments. No detail was overlooked in the planning; no expense was spared in the building.

Banquet Hall Seats 500.

With its banquet room seating 500, its rathskeller accommodating 300 and its hundreds of rooms supplied with fresh filtered air continuously; with its costly historical mural decorations, each a work of art, the sumptuous furnishings of its rooms and suites and its perfect service system, the Ansley will be without a superior for business, conveniences and safety.

As "Marse" Henry Watterson expressed it, at no place "on the Rambla and in the Ring, in Piccadilly and the Corso, beneath the colonnades of the Rue de Rivoli of Paris and 'Unter den Linden' of Berlin—indeed, all the way between Chicago and Cannebiere, including many nooks and corners of little old New York," can the man or woman with a trunk and a handbag live higher, sleep safer and spend less than at the Hotel Ansley.

Two well-known quotations imprinted on the tapestry will greet the eye of all who pass the portals of the Hotel Ansley. The first one is the hotel man's favorite verse, from Shenstone, as follows:

Whoe'er has traveled life's dull round,
Where'er his stages may have been,
May sigh to think he still has found
Life's warmest welcome at an inn.

The next is a Scriptural quotation, taken from Hebrews, and the Ansley management promises to apply the precept and the compliment to every guest alike. Here it is:

"Forget not to show love unto strangers, for thereby some have entertained angels unawares."

Indicate Spirit of Hotel.

These two familiar quotations are printed across the underbeam of the winding marble stairways in the Ansley foyer. They are intended to indicate the spirit in which guests should apply and expect to be received.

Appearance of the lobby is enhanced by three historical paintings on tapestry, each 12 by 10 feet, situated on the upper mezzanine floor and facing the Forsyth Street entrance. The paintings recall important historical happenings in Georgia.

The first panel depicts the meeting of General Oglethorpe and Tomochichi at Savannah, May 21, 1733. The next represents John Wesley teaching the Indians under the oaks of St. Simons, and the third shows the burning of the Yazoo fraud papers at the state house in Louisville, Jefferson County, in the year 1796.

The papers were ignited by means of a magnifying glass and the sun's rays, showing that the fire which destroyed such an infamy should come from Heaven.

On the ground floor are a dozen or more other paintings of historical interest.

Dining Room Is Italian.

The dining room of the Ansley is known as the Italian room, on account of its architecture and mural paintings. The latter consist of the Vatican gardens, showing the cupola of St. Peter's in the distance; the garden of Villa Borghese in Florence, the garden of Villa Lante, the Hercules fountain in the garden of Villa Reale of Florence, and a view of Venice canals, all of which are painted on canvases, each 12 by 10 feet.

The rathskeller, one of the largest and most luxurious in the South, is remindful of college life. Its walls are decorated with portraits of the seals of the leading Georgia colleges, interlaced with varicolored bands waving over a golden background.

The waiting room is trimmed and wainscoted with Georgia sycamore. A distinctive feature of this room, indeed, of the hotel is a full size true-to-life portrait of Lieutenant General William Tecumseh Sherman, beneath which is the following inscription:

"Under whose orders Atlanta was burned, and who said war is hell."

Old Photographs Reproduced.

Actual 1865 photographs are reproduced, showing Atlanta before and after the famous conflagration. On other panels of the writing room are the Great Seals of Atlanta and the State of Georgia. Those who have seen this room are unstinted in their praise of its historical interest and value.

The Ansley equipment for cleaning silverware and dishes is unexcelled. The silverware will be cleaned by chemically generated electricity, made by water, soda and salt.

Dishes will be cleansed and sterilized by powerful streams of hot water thrown against them while incased in a metal washing machine.

The kitchen of the Ansley is replete with modern machinery and other implements for prompt and efficient service. Its appointments are products of as great attention to detail as was given the office, the rathskeller or any other part of the hostelry.

Five Lang ranges form a battery kept at even temperature by a single furnace. The bake ovens are built on the skyscraper plan—four stories high—thus utilizing space and insuring uniform results. The meat department is equipped with a slicing machine, insuring uniform-sized slices without rough edges.

Has Own Ice Plant.

The Ansley has the best equipped ice and refrigerating plant in Atlanta. It is a duplicate affair with a capacity of fourteen tons a day. The cold storage room could accommodate a carload of meat.

From a service bar in the basement all orders will be filled for the rathskeller, private dining rooms and guests' apartments, thus keeping the waiters out of the main buffet, which opens on Forsyth Street.

Distinctively a unique feature for any hotel is the sanitary bathing subbasement for the hotel's servants. Each compartment is equipped with lockers, and all waiters, cooks, bellboys, porters, etc., will be required to take a shower bath before starting each day's work.

Not the least attraction of the Ansley is its contemplated scale of charges. Rooms with running water and private toilet will cost $1 a day, rooms with connecting bath $1.50, with private bath $2, $2.50 and $3. Club breakfasts will be served for 25 cents and up, lunch for 50 cents from 12 till 2 o'clock, and 6 to 8 o'clock dinner for $1.

Early Cold Injures Crops of Michigan

Wheat Promises but Half a Crop, Hay One-third, and Fruit Outlook Is Poor.

LANSING, MICH., June 28.—Michigan Agricultural College field men and district supervisors report crop prospects of the State the poorest in years, due to the early cold, wet season and late frosts, followed by the present hot, dry weather.

Wheat promises little better than half a crop, hay one-third, oats one-half. Early potatoes have been badly frosted in sections and will not produce over one-quarter crop without rain.

Fruit is equally poor. Plums and grapes are expected to be about 30 or 40 per cent of a crop.

Two More in Eighth Enter Council Race

H. M. Patterson Runs for Lower House, A. H. Davis for Aldermanic Seat.

Two new announcements for Council from the Eighth Ward were made Saturday. H. M. Patterson will run for the lower branch and Archibald H. Davis will seek an Aldermanic seat.

These make three candidates for the offices to be vacated by Alderman A. H. VanDyke. Frank H. Reynolds and Charles Harman are the other councilmanic candidates, and John S. Owens and W. A. Hancock are the aspirants for Alderman.

Ex-Mayor Courtland S. Winn, who was urged to enter the race for Council, has positively refused. He said he was absolutely out of politics.

Affirmative speakers are William Close, Fred McManus and H. T. Bullard; negative, J. H. Harrison, S. A. Hallum and John E. White, Jr.

President in Linen, Keeps Cool Golfing

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Neither intense heat to-day nor the exigencies of the Union Pacific Railroad case prevented President Wilson from enjoying his usual Saturday round of golf. The President motored to the links immediately after breakfast and remained until luncheon.

The Chief Executive, attired in a linen suit, said he did not feel the hot weather at all, even when tramping over the golf course.

MOTHERS WAR FOR HEALTH OF BABIES

Appeal for Aid in Establishing Milk Distributing Stations Under Trained Instructors.

The crusade against needless infant deaths being waged in many States by the Mothers' Congress has spread to Atlanta.

Greatest factor in the fight is the supplying of pure milk for infants in poverty stricken quarters. "If a baby is worth having it is worth saving," is the slogan of the Mothers' Congress. In the appeal for help the person appealed to is urged to "think of the object, and think of the need, and remember while you are procrastinating some little baby is suffering."

It is the intention of women behind the movement to establish milk distributing stations in districts where the greatest need is manifest, and to have these stations under the direction of a trained worker, from whom mothers can receive instruction as to the feeding and care of their babies. These stations will be opened each day as many hours as the locality justifies.

All willing to aid by contributing a quart of milk a day should send their names to Mrs. John Rowlett.

2 Governors Guests At Ansley Opening

Slatons Will Be Given Reception by Management in Ball Room Monday Night.

General Manager John F. Levett of the Ansley Hotel, has struck on a happy idea in connection with the formal opening of Atlanta's newest hostelry Monday night. This is the giving of the first public reception to Governor and Mrs. Slaton. Governor and Mrs. Brown also will be present.

The Governor's reception will begin formal affair. It will be held at 9:30 o'clock in the ball room, which will be opened for the first time for the inspection of the public.

Poet to Paddle Boat From N. Y. to Pacific

"Reckless Jack" Sullivan Leaves in Sixteen-Foot Canoe on Voyage to Panama Fair.

NEW YORK, June 28.—"Reckless Jack" Sullivan, broncho buster, auto racer, poet and self-styled "everlasting adventurer," paddled out of New York waters to-day on his all-water journey to San Francisco by way of the Panama Canal in a sixteen-foot cedar canoe. He bears a message from the Mayor of New York to the Chief Executive of San Francisco.

In his canoe Sullivan carries a tent, a rifle, a supply of water, color paper (for Jack is an artist, too), a stock of rice, cornmeal, bacon, plenty of fishing tackle, lariats, a volume of his verse and a cornet.

ATLANTA-MADE GOODS EXHIBIT URGED FOR CITY

Manufacturers Move to Establish Permanent Exposition of Products of Their Factories.

The movement to establish a permanent manufacturers' exhibit in Atlanta will take definite shape this week at a dinner to be given Thursday evening by the Chamber of Commerce to leading local manufacturers. The dinner will be the first public function held in the banquet hall of the Ansley Hotel. It will be entirely informal.

Brooks Morgan, vice president of the Chamber of Commerce and chairman of the manufacturers' committee, has just returned from a business trip to Cleveland and Cincinnati, where he studied the manufacturers' exhibits and is convinced that a permanent exhibit in Atlanta will be of value, not only to manufacturers directly interested, but in promoting the general growth and fame of Atlanta.

Both Cleveland and Cincinnati, says Mr. Morgan, have permanent buildings where these manufacturers' exhibits are placed. They are surrounded with so many interesting features that they are always crowded with people.

"In the Cleveland exhibit," said Mr. Morgan, "I found they had many copies of well-known works of art hanging around on the walls. In certain seasons they have music and other attractions. In many cases the products are manufactured in booths right before the visitors' eyes.

"Such a permanent exhibit in Atlanta would be the most effective and the cheapest advertising that Atlanta and individual Atlantans could possibly have. To meet the major part of the expense we could get a certain number of manufacturers to take space at $200 a year, others at $300 and a few at $450. The proper kind of exhibit would add a new point of interest in Atlanta to all visitors and would unquestionably be visited by every merchant who came to Atlanta to buy goods at wholesale. Merchants who came to buy two or three lines would buy a dozen. It could be made instructive and educational as well as entertaining. Few Atlantans, young or old, now realize that 1,000 different articles are being manufactured in this city.

"It is proposed to place a man with the title of sales manager in charge of the building. He will be given the price lists of the various manufacturers which he can furnish on request, and in addition will put the merchants in direct touch with the factories. He can even take orders when necessary.

"It would be a good idea to have office space available for rent to manufacturers who want to have their own representatives in the building. When big conventions come to Atlanta or when the town is crowded with people for other reasons, we could attract people to the building with music, vaudeville or some other form of entertainment."

Dinner Dance Given At Driving Club

One of Largest Affairs of Week Is Given at Piedmont—Many Parties Entertained.

The dinner dance given Saturday evening at the Piedmont Driving Club was one of the largest in the series of week-end dinner dances given at the club house.

The tables, each decorated in pink gladioli or sweetpeas, were placed on the terrace, an orchestra playing throughout the evening. Later there was dancing in the ball room.

A number of large parties were given. Mr. and Mrs. John Grant entertained eighteen guests. Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Sciple had a party of eight, as did Mr. and Mrs. Lowry Arnold. Mr. and Mrs. John King Ottley entertained six guests, and Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Calhoun entertained several friends.

Other hosts were L. Smith, J. Hall Miller, Lamar Hill, Jesse Draper, Lynn Werner, Ralph Ragan, F. A. Hoyt, L. M. McClesky, W. R. Crandall, James O. Harris and Clarence Knowles.

NEW STOCK FOR OLD SHARES IN DEFUNCT FIRM

Trust Company Seeks to Take Over Bankrupt Cotton States Insurance Organization.

Stockholders in the defunct Cotton States Fire Insurance Company are being offered stock in the Georgia-Florida Trust Company in exchange, basis par.

J. J. Murphy, with offices in the Third National Bank Building, is conducting the negotiations, and according to his statement, more than half of the Cotton States stockholders have agreed to the exchange.

Subscriptions to the insurance company stock were on a basis of $200 for each $100 share, the extra $100 going to surplus. The Georgia-Florida Trust Company, therefore, is offering a $100 share of its stock for stock which cost the insurance company subscribers $200 when they paid in full.

Think Exchange Attractive.

Ben F. Perry, Sr., receiver for the Cotton States Fire Insurance Company, says he does not believe stockholders will get more than $30 if the case goes through the courts. On this basis many have thought the exchange attractive.

The Georgia-Florida Trust Company was organized April 26. Its purpose is avowed to be purchase of large tracts of Georgia and Florida lands, later to be sold in small parcels. Stock is being given in exchange for lands.

John N. McClure, of Norcross, is president; Charles F. Blount, of Atlanta, and J. H. Roberts, of Eastman, are vice presidents; Stephen Bolles is secretary-treasurer, and Dr. George Brown, J. J. Murphy and L. J. Boswell are trustees.

Notes for Stock Excepted.

Authorized capital is $100,000 common and $500,000 preferred. Assets of the Cotton States Fire Insurance Company are given by the receiver as $36,000 farm loans, $4,000 cash, $7,000 certificates of deposit and $2,000 furniture. This takes no account of notes given in payment for stock. Fully paid in were 424 shares at $200, making a total of $85,000.

Harvey Jordan was president of the company, W. L. Reynolds, since deceased, was secretary, and D. H. Kirkland was treasurer.

If the deal goes through the Georgia-Florida Trust Company plans to operate the insurance company.

'Backwoods Natives' To Perpetuate Their Old-Time Traditions

Society Is Planned to Fit Out Replica of Ante-Bellum Cabin in Grant Park.

The old-timers in and around Atlanta who were reared in the back country and "washed their faces with lye soap and wiped them on salt-sack towels" are pushing their plans for a society to perpetuate the traditions and associations of ante-bellum Dixie.

A meeting will be held at Grant Park Wednesday afternoon, July 2, and anyone who was reared in the country and is over 40 years old is eligible to membership in the society. The details of the organization will be perfected at the meeting. Old-fashioned lye hominy and lemonade will be served. More than 100 have promised to attend.

It is proposed to erect a log cabin, with stick-and-dirt chimney, at Grant Park, and furnish it with genuine antique furniture, an exact replica of a country cabin "fo' de wah." A spinning wheel, four-poster bed, hide-bottom chairs, brass firedogs, a candle snuffer and other ancient articles have been promised for the furnishing of the cabin, and coon and possum hides will be tacked up over the door.

WHAT ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS AND JOBBERS ARE DOING

MANUFACTURES DINNER PLANNED FOR EVE OF 4TH

New Ansley Hotel Will Serve Atlanta Factory Owners to the Number of 200.

HOME EXHIBIT PLANS TOPIC

Brooks Morgan Has Definite Proposals for Acceptance or Rejection—Pledges Desired.

Atlanta manufacturers, to the probable number of 200, will gather on the evening of July 3 at the Ansley Hotel for a dinner.

The object of the dinner is to discuss the proposed permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods, and at the same time, to discuss the advisability of holding the annual temporary exhibit, such as was held last year at the time of the Southern Merchants' Convention.

The dinner had been set for June 24, but the unavoidable absence from the city of Brooks Morgan necessitated a postponement.

The new date was set at an informal conference of Mr Morgan, Wilmer L. Moore and Walter G. Cooper held Wednesday.

Invitations to the big "Manufacturers' Dinner" will be sent out at once, and a general response is expected.

At the dinner, Mr. Morgan will lay before the manufacturers definite proposals for lease or purchase of buildings suitable for the installation of a manufacturers' exhibit. It will, in brief, be a "show down." The permanent exhibit project has been gone over thoroughly. The manufacturers have seen Chattanooga's display, and they have learned in detail of New Haven's success. There has been plenty of time for them to make up their minds. At this dinner they are expected to signify what they intend doing.

If, as is expected, the will of the manufacturers is seen unanimously in favor of the exhibit, a start will be made. But the backers of the project do not wish to start unless they have assurance of 200 exhibitors and 40,000 or 50,000 feet of floor space.

Strenuous Work Done Preparing for Convention.

When the four or five thousand merchants from all over the South gather in Atlanta for their convention, during the first two weeks of August, it is doubtful if any of them will be able to realize the care and effort that has been expended to make their meeting a success.

For instance, one energetic committee has been toiling throughout the hot week in an effort to raise funds for the entertainment of the visitors. As a result of their conscientious endeavor, the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association sees its way clear, as to finances, to play host to the gathering.

Another committee has been hard at work preparing the program. The program is to be an elaborate affair. Three or four topics a day will be discussed, and most of the discussion will be in the shape of five-minute addresses. The traveling men are doing yeoman's work in finding the good speakers scattered through out the territory, men who have opinions worth hearing and experiences likely to be helpful to other merchants in their lines.

Moving Big Concern Takes Almost Week

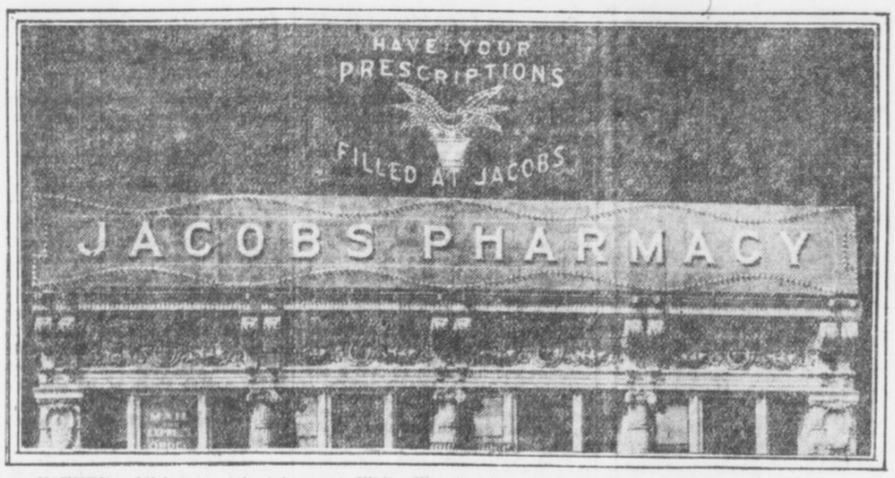
Dougherty-Little-Redwine Co. Get to Temporary Quarters by Dint of Hard Work.

Almost a week has been required for moving the Dougherty-Little-Redwine Company from its old home in North Pryor Street to temporary quarters at 30-32 South Pryor Street.

It is estimated that about forty boxcar loads of goods were moved, the stock being valued at $150,000.

"That amount of silks would not make much of a showing, but when it comes to underwear, it is a different story," remarked J. Little.

New and Brilliant Star Is Added to The Great White Way of Atlanta



ANOTHER addition to Atlanta's great White Way has been made by Jacobs' Pharmacy at the main store by the erection of a large electric sign on the top of the building.

The name "Jacobs' Pharmacy" is spelled out in huge letters with six hundred or more electric bulbs, while around the entire side is an attractive flashing border. The sign is 72 feet long and 9 feet high, and it is one of the largest in Atlanta. The Jacobs' Pharmacy "flashing eagle" sign, one of the most attractive in the city, created much comment when originally installed, but the new display is certain to cause everybody to stop and gaze in wonder.

Men's Hats For Next Fall Pert Affairs, Blue and Green

Fall, 1913, hats for men are being shown by jobbers in Atlanta.

Take them big and large, they deserve the name the women give their headgear—they are "creations."

One "creation," for instance, is green velour, with a little bow at the back, and a button-hole stitched edge.

Brown-Perryman-Greene Company say velours, particularly in blue and green, are "the thing" for fall. Velours retail from $3.50 to $7.50.

The "Trooper" shape is proper. To make a "Trooper" shape, punch out a crown, then strike it with the edge of the hand, lengthwise. That's all.

Another "creation" particularly fetching is blue, with red, white and blue stitching which runs up and down the crown and around and around the brim. A button is in the geometrical center of the crown.

Perhaps the best of the bunch, to many tastes, is a green felt hat, "Trooper" shape, of course, with "zebra" finish. "Zebra" finish means that it is 'self-striped." Alternate stripes are smooth, the others are unfinished—fuzzy, in a word. The stripes are something less than half an inch wide, and run vertically on the crown. The hat really is not "freaky." It is attractive.

Other soft hats are lined with gay silk, have welt edges, or are otherwise adorned.

Brand-new is a chinchilla hat. Corduroy and cloth of all kinds will be much in vogue this autumn.

Caps promise to continue their unprecedented popularity. They come in all patterns—one, for instance, a "cubist" design in maroon and tan.

For the man who will wear a derby, regardless, it may be news to know that the derby crowns will be a bit higher this fall, the brims about the same. Crowns seem to be working back from the flat effect of a year back to the old-fashioned high crown. They change a bit each year.

Boys—the little fellows—wear telescope shape hats, while you can't give them to their elders.

Of course, this takes no account of the "staples"—the conservative styles which never change.

City Salesmen Take Outing; Truce Kept

City salesmen will be conspicuous by their absence this week. The grocer or dry goods merchant who needs to replenish his stock must telephone to his jobber. The jobbers have agreed not to solicit business for the week, but just to take what comes to them in the natural course of events.

The reason for this strange pact is that the jobbers are on their annual outing at the Isle of Palms, near Charleston, S. C.

In order not to take advantage of their absence, fifty or more jobbers signed a formal agreement of neutrality for the week, and O. T. Camp, president of the Retail Grocers' and Butchers' Association, sent a letter to all members of his organization acquainting them with the state of affairs, and asking that they fill urgent needs only, by using the teleers have taken this construction in good quantities, and as a result of curtailed production by the mills the supply has fallen somewhat behind the demand.

Auto Sales Gaining Over Last Season

Business Gradually Working to Credit Basis—Men Buy Cars as They Buy Homes.

"So far as we are able to judge from the business done by our clients, automobile sales in Atlanta have been exceptionally good for the period which began January 1," says Joseph N. Moody, of the Auto Credit Sales Company.

"The automobile firms whom we represent as a credit clearing house report an increase over last season.

"Sales probably would be larger yet if we did not check them. Amusing as the idea may seem, we are in a sense philanthropists, for we are saving the people from themselves, in this way: Suppose a man with moderate income tries to buy an auto on time. We investigate carefully. If he has a family of girls, let us say, all living at home, and no income but his salary, we turn him down. If he had a family of boys, all working and able to help purchase a car, all well and good.

"The automobile business is working more and more toward a time basis. A man buys his motor car now just as he would buy his home—on payments. I believe the future will see 90 per cent of the business done in that way."

JORDAN THINKS SOUTH IN NEED OF LAND BANKS

Cheap Loans on European Model Spell Financial Independence for Cotton Growers, He Says.

Special Cable to The American.
By COLONEL HARVIE JORDAN.
(Member of the American Farm Credits Commission and President of the Southern Cotton Association)

OLDENBERG, GERMANY, June 28.—The capitalization of Southern cotton growers through the mortgage bank system, giving them mortgage loans at low interest with easy payments, would completely reorganize the cotton-growing industry of the South. I am convinced that the land mortgage business in America can be systematized along the lines of similar mortgage systems in Europe.

If this is done it will bring a new era of prosperity to the South and greatly increase the cash returns from cotton, which now represent practically the entire balance of trade of the United States.

Southern cotton growers to-day are just one year behind financially. They have been behind since the Civil War.

The curse of the cotton farmers is the store lien system, under which they are obliged each spring to purchase their supplies on credit from the supply merchants. Frequently farmers pay 50 per cent or more in excess of the cash price of goods for the privilege of this credit. Moreover, the supply merchants secure absolute control over the farmers.

The cotton crop has to be marketed as soon as harvested. Farmers have practically no control over the marketing. This is because they have no financial independence. The American commission has studied the mortgage systems which place European farmers in far stronger positions as borrowers than our own farmers. In America we still are clinging to the antiquated practice of forcing short-time loans on the agriculturist.

European farmers borrow through an intermediary society and enjoy as strong positions as any railroad or municipality. If our Southern farmers mortgage their land they must pay back the entire principal in lump sum in a few years, else pay a costly commission for renewal. So long as this is true naturally the farmers won't mortgage their land until actually pressed to the wall.

In contrast to this European farmers repay their loans in small annual installments. So long as they meet their interest payments they can never be sold out. Their entire payments for both interest and principal amount to less than our farmers frequently are required to pay for interest alone

LUMBER SALES SHOW BUILDING KEEPS UP WELL

Dealers in Supplies Tell of Big Things in Prospect for the Coming Autumn.

Dealers in lumber, brick, cement, plaster and building supplies report that Atlanta is going straight ahead in its expansion.

Unanimously they report good trade. One particularly encouraging feature, according to their expressions, is the steady increase in the number of small residences, homes costing between $3,000 and $4,000, seeming to predominate.

Furthermore, building supplies dealers are unanimous in saying that there are great plans in store for fall. If all rumors are to be believed, property owners are contemplating improvements at almost a "boom" rate as soon as summer is past.

Paint dealers also are cheerful. They report contractors figuring on work far ahead, and also general activity in refurnishing buildings which are not new, but which are being remodeled to meet the city's growing needs.

Expressions from dealers in these lines follow:

V. H. Kriegshaber: "Our observation is that there is a good deal of building contemplated—in the wind, so to speak. When conditions settle down this fall, we look for an excellent trade in building supplies."

Randall Bros.: "Our business is better than it ever has been in lumber and building material. The increase has come from the increase in medium priced houses, residences to cost between $3,000 and $4,000.

"It is hard to tell about the fall, but we look for a good trade. Prices are a little lower. This always is the case in June and July. There will be a reaction in August and September, and quotations will be stronger. This is the history of every year."

Willingham-Tift Lumber Co.: "Business has been quite brisk up to the present time, with particular activity in the erection of small houses. This looks to us like the right time to build, for prices, in our opinion, are at the bottom."

Scipio Sons: "Business is fairly good at the present time, and it is picking up rapidly. We look for a very good trade for the rest of the year. The market is steady, still prices are reasonable and it is a good time to build. We notice a revival particularly in the erection of small houses."

Dozier & Gay: "From the number of contractors who are figuring on painting to be done between now and fall, we look for a big business.

"Every indication is that a large number of new homes are to be built, and there are rumors of several large buildings for wholesale houses and small factories."

NEW AND RETIRING GOVERNORS THANK HEARST PAPERS FOR AID AND GOOD WILL

I SHALL endeavor to be the Governor of all the people of Georgia. I have entered upon my duties with a full realization, I hope, of the great confidence and trust reposed in me by the people. Naturally I have been moved by the many assurances of good will that have come to me from all quarters in this, the beginning of my administration.

I shall hope to carry forward much of the fine work my distinguished predecessor has inaugurated. I shall hope, on my own behalf, to demonstrate those qualities in an executive that the people approve. I thank the Sunday American and The Georgian for their expressions of confidence and friendliness. Both papers can, and I feel sure will, be towers of strength to me in working for Georgia.

John M. Slaton

Governor of Georgia.

IN retiring from the Executive Office, I do so with a feeling of ever-increasing confidence in the people. If my administration has stood for law and order, for the greatest good to the greatest number, I am satisfied. I have insisted upon law enforcement, and I believe in the supremacy of the law. I love and respect the people—in them and in their firmness to do the right I have abiding and continuing faith.

Through The Sunday American, I return thanks to all my friends for their many assurances of esteem and good will. I thank The American and The Georgian for the help they have given me in carrying forward such works as I have deemed essential to the welfare of our beloved State. The people have honored me very highly.

SUSPENSION OF EIGHT MEN ONLY START, SAYS CHIEF

Beavers Declares That Inquiry Will Follow Revelations of Police Conduct in Auburn Avenue Dive—Promises Clean Sweep.

With eight policemen suspended on the charge of having visited and having taken liquor in the disorderly house of a negro at 127 Auburn Avenue, Chief of Police Beavers Saturday afternoon declared that this action was but the launching of an exhaustive inquiry into police conditions which would include the entire department.

Chief Beavers admitted that the sensational exposures of Friday and Saturday were a sad blow to him, but declared that every officer who was found guilty of visiting a questionable place except in the performance of his duty would be discharged.

"Startling" Says Chief.

"The result of the investigation which I have started is startling," said the Chief. "It has revealed the fact that some of the men have not done their duty. Eight officers have been reported and their cases are already under investigation.

"Rumors are that others have also been guilty of misconduct in this respect. It may be some time before these men are caught in their guilt, but if they do stray we will get them. Not until we are satisfied that there is no corruption in the department will this investigation be closed."

The negro blind tiger at 127 Auburn Avenue, which, it is asserted, has been receiving protection from certain members of the police force, was ordered closed by Police Chief James L. Beavers Saturday afternoon. Ola Bradley, the negro woman who operates the place, and who has appealed to the higher courts the decision rendered against her in police court, was given five days in which to vacate.

In issuing his order to the Bradley woman, Chief Beavers told her that

Carolina Family of Six Dead in Ruins of Lonely Farmhouse

Bodies Discovered When Milkman Passes—Sheriff Is Investigating Rumors of Foul Play.

LEXINGTON, S. C., June 28.—Six bodies, two hand in hand, were found this morning in the charred ruins of the home of John Jacobs. The farmer, his wife and their four children met death when the farmhouse burned.

The Sheriff, M. J. Miller, is investigating rumors of foul play, though the most general theory is that the house was struck by lightning.

The discovery was made by a milkman driving along the road between Little Mountain and Peak Station. He saw a pillar of smoke and turned in. Nearing the ruins he saw the body of a child near the doorstep. Inside were five more bodies.

One of the daughters was a teacher in the little mountain school nearby. One son was 18 years old. The other two children were small.

Heat Affects Blondes More Than Brunettes

As an Offset, Orange or Blue Underwear Should Be Worn.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Blondes should beware of heat prostration these days, because the public health service says they are more susceptible to the heat than brunettes. As an offset to this susceptibility, blondes should wear orange or blue undearwear and orange-lined hats.

Among other hints for keeping cool issued by the public health service are:

Don't keep thinking how hot it is.
Keep still.

Prince of Wales Spends $1.25 a Week

Writes Home for More Money, but Mother Considers That This Amount Is Ample.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—The amount allotted to the Prince of Wales for pocket money has just become known. Every Saturday he receives just $1.25, which he terms his "old age pension." He is occasionally a trifle extravagant and mortgages his money in advance.

Toward the end of the last term at Oxford he was asked by a friend to join a party to visit the theater.

The Prince's reply was, "Sorry, old man, but I am clean broke."

"Why don't you write home for some more?" asked the friend.

"I did," replied the Prince, "but mother said I was too extravagant."

Mrs. Astor Bars Too Fervid Trotting

Society Youth Comes to Grief When He Disregards Rules of Conduct Fixed by Hostess.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—Mrs. John Astor is becoming known in social circles as a hostess whose rules of conduct must be obeyed by her guests. One young man who, until recently, doubted this, is now lamenting his mistake. Mrs. Astor permits the "tango" and "turkey trot" at her dances, but insists that they be danced in moderation. When this guest so far forgot himself as to verge on to the vulgar, he was quickly shown the door.

Mrs. Astor's example is not followed by all of London's hostesses. At the entertainments of a certain duchess the ragtime is accompanied by a great deal of roughness, being usually danced with the lights out.

DR. STARNES IS ASSAULTED BY ORGAN TENDER

George LaMarche Inflicts Black Eye on Musician at Close of Auditorium Rehearsal.

MISS LALLA CANNON WITNESS

Assailant Declares the Musician Called His Wife 'Liar' in Phone Conversation.

Dr. Percy L. Starnes, whose genius as a musician has brought joy to thousands, and who announced yesterday his resignation as city organist, figured in a sensational fight in the Auditorium late Saturday afternoon, which was witnessed by Miss Lalla B. Cannon, the Atlanta girl who won an operatic prize of $3,000 a year in New York, and has been hailed as the possessor of the "great American voice."

The fight—although as a matter of fact, all the fighting seems to have been on one side—is shrouded in some mystery. The noted organist claims it was precipitated solely by the fact that he had reported George E. LaMarche, organ tender, for failure to perform his work properly.

LaMarche it was, according to the Doctor, who did all the battling, giving the organist a souvenir in the shape of a badly cut right eye that he will wear almost until the day his resignation takes effect, which is August 1.

Twelve Blows Land.

Dr. Starnes said he had just finished rehearsing with Miss Cannon at the Auditorium to-day for the recital and was about to enter his office when LaMarche jumped on him from behind, hitting him about twelve blows. One of them landed on the Doctor's right eye and it took electrical treatment from a medical attendant to make it at all presentable.

The musician said he did not retaliate, merely doing his best to protect himself, and the attack was ended by Auditorium attaches, while Miss Cannon loked on, horrified.

Later in the evening, Dr. Starnes proceeded to police station, laid his case before Chief of Police Beavers and preferred charges against the organ tender.

He insisted that the attack was entirely unprovoked, and was caused probably by the fact that he had reported LaMarche not only to the Atlanta Music Festival Association, but to the organ company as well for failure to properly care for the magnificent instrument.

LaMarche's Story Differs.

He expressed the opinion that LaMarche was evidently not in full possession of his mental faculties—at least at the time of the battle.

LaMarche late Saturday night told a much different story of the cause of the affray.

"About a week ago Dr. Starnes called my wife up over the telephone, and in the course of the conversation practically called her a liar," declared LaMarche. "I was out of town at the time, but when I returned Mrs. LaMarche acquainted me with Starnes' action, and I at once made an appointment with him to meet me at the Auditorium.

"When I met Starnes I demanded that he apologize to my wife. He told me that if I claimed that he had said such a thing to my wife that I was a liar. He said it in the presence of several witnesses in the lobby of the Auditorium. We were facing each other at the time.

"I said:

"'You have insulted a lady, and it is more than I can stand for.'

"I struck him and knocked him down. That was all there was to the difficulty. I hope that I did not injure Starnes seriously, but my action was the only one that a gentleman could take under the circumstances."

'Land Sake! As I Live, It's John,' Greeting of John D. at Old Home

Mrs. Beecher, 84, Shows Rockefeller Her Sweetpeas and Gives Him Drink From Well.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 28.—"Land sake! As I live, it's John Rockefeller! Sit down, John," and Mrs. M. A. Beecher, aged 84, placed a chair under a big shade tree in her farm yard for John D. Rockefeller, aged 73. Rockefeller motored to Mrs. Beecher's farm near Chagrin Falls this afternoon.

"How are you Mary, well?" asked Rockefeller. "Yes, I'm feeling pretty well," answered Mrs. Beecher.

"And how are you and Laura?"

"Oh, just about the same."

"Won't you have a drink, John? It's pretty warm to-day."

"Yes, please."

Then Mrs. Beecher's daughter brought water freshly drawn from the deep well beside the house and the guest slowly drank a glassful.

"I just want you to see my sweetpeas, John," said Mrs. Beecher, as she led the way to the fence, where a row of perennial sweetpeas made a brilliant border for the lawn.

Then the two returned to their chairs and talked of "old time."

King George Finds Platonic Romance With Fair Countess

Monarch Pays Marked Attention to Wife of Lord Mar While Queen Mary Is Absent.

Special Cable to The Sunday American.

LONDON, June 28—Every one thought King George so extremely domestic and conventional that it has come as rather a shock to people outside court circles to find him paying marked attention to the beautiful Countess of Mar and Killie.

The lovely countess, who is in her prime and a favorite of King Edward, is to be found wherever the King is.

Lord Mar goes about very little, but it was noticed that he and his wife were included in the royal house party at Windsor Castle for the Ascot races.

When Queen Mary was absent from the races, Lady Mar was always at the King's side, but when Her Majesty was present Lady Mar mixed with the general crowd in the royal inclosure.

Lady Mar is very sympathetic and attractive. The inner circle at the court is intensely amused at this mild platonic flirtation.

Gatun Gates Stand Their Supreme Test

PANAMA, June 28.—The Atlantic waters which have been allowed to run slowly against the lower gates at Gatun are at sea level to-day. The large gates are being put to the actual test of full pressure for the first time.

The engineers are watching the rise of the water with interest, and they report that the gates are watertight. The water is at the 50-foot stage.

Before sailing, Mr. Vanderbilt stated he proposed to build a cup defender, which means he will be at the head of the syndicate and as he is one of the leading yachtsmen of America and formerly commodore of the New York Yacht Club, he is in a position well fitted as the managing director to take hold of the matter.

Mrs. Marshall Finds $2,000 House at Last

Wife of Vice President Refuses to Pay More, Wishing to Live Within Husband's Salary.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The long house hunt of Mrs. Marshall, wife of the Vice President, is probably over, as she has found a suitable house on Columbia Road, Northwest. Her hunt was prolonged owing to the fact that she set $2,000 yearly as the price they would pay. The Marshalls have said they must live within their salary, and Washington society is eagerly watching to see how they will manage with the many social and financial demands upon them. Mrs. Marshall wanted to go to the country, but feared it would be too far for the Congressional wives to visit.

Wilson in Club of Summer Widowers

"My Wife's Gone to the Country, Tut Tut," Official Song of Select Organization.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—A summer widowers' club has been organized in the capital. President Wilson is its head. The club will meet in the White House every day during the extra session of Congress, and its membership is limited to three—Woodrow Wilson, Joseph Patrick Tumulty and Dr. Cary Grayson, who is a summer widower in name only, really a bachelor.

The club song is "My Wife's Gone to the Country," omitting the "hurrah" and inserting "tut tut."

Vice President Marshall and Speaker Clark are more fortunate, as their wives remain in Washington until the adjournment of Congress.

Gallery of Brilliantly Gowned Women See Induction of Young Executive.

To-day Georgia has a new Governor. A new lady rules in the mansion on Peachtree Street. The name of Brown, for two generations significant in the State's affairs, is no longer to be hailed as that of the State's chief executive.

John Marshall Slaton was inaugurated Governor of Georgia Saturday at noon with a ceremony that was a model of Democratic dignity and lack of ostentation. Thomas Jefferson himself could not have done it more simply.

A quiet procession of State officials into the hall of the House of Representatives, a simple, sincere tribute from Joseph M. Brown to his successor, a clear-cut appeal for commonsense methods in government, a few solemn words repeated after Chief Justice Fish—and John Marshall Slaton was Governor of Georgia. His inauguration was the last word in simplicity.

It was by no means a drab affair, however. There was color and spirit enough to the occasion, even if the ceremony was not elaborate—gay, shimmering, summer colors in the galleries, from which hundreds of brilliantly gowned women looked down. In the gallery audience were women who are the most prominent figures in Georgia's social life, coming out of tribute to the new Governor and his lady, who are their favorites.

MRS. SLATON SEES CEREMONIES.

Distinguished, slightly flushed with the pride of it all, her bearing betokening plainly that here was the first lady of the State, sat Mrs. Slaton, in the center of a gay throng which sat in the post of honor, just in front of the speaker's stand.

Pride was stamped no less plainly on the faces of at least two other members of the party. One was Major William F. Slaton, father of the Governor, and the other was Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mrs. Slaton's mother.

Other members of the party were Mr. and Mrs. William M. Slaton, Justice and Mrs. S. C. Atkinson, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Waldo, Mrs. W. H. Blanchard, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant, John

Mrs. Joseph M. Brown sat facing the Speaker's stand, just opposite the Slaton party. With Mrs. Brown were Miss Cora Brown, Charles Brown, Miss Sally Brown, Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Connally, Miss Frances Connally and Thomas W. Connally.

New Governor Applauded.

The vivacity of the scene was quieted when, a few minutes before 12 o'clock, the official procession filed into the hall—the new Governor and the retiring Governor, former Governor H. D. McDaniel, Federal Judges Newman and Pardee, judges of the State Supreme Court and of the Appellate Court, the departmental officers of the State and an escorting corps of legislators. There was a moment or two of silent inspection of the procession, and then applause began.

The applause was suspended for a moment at the rap of the gavel of Senate President Anderson, who introduced the new Governor to the Assembly. Then the cheering came with a will.

In the heavy applause the women in the balconies joined most enthusiastically, with a deplorable destruction of gloves and dainty fans. It was a wild applause that greeted Governor Slaton, a demonstration that was sincere and that, showing signs of lagging at times, was lifted and revived by enthusiastic yells from the throats of loyal Slaton men. There was no regard for the summer heat at the moment, but a very evident desire to pay tribute to the big, smiling, young man who was the new Governor.

The applause that greeted Joseph M. Brown, retiring Governor, a little later, was hardly less vociferous. And when he voiced his tender tribute to Governor Slaton the cheering was deafening.

The inauguration ceremony of Georgia is simple, as carried out Saturday. Chief Justice W. H. Fish, of the State Supreme Court, administered the oath of office, and then there was a little ceremony symbolic of the entrance of a new official.

Phil H. Cook, Secretary of State, presented the Great Seal of the State to the retiring Governor, who in turn gave it to the new Governor. This done, Governor Slaton launched into his inaugural address. He departed from precedent by the oral delivery of his address. From time immemorial the keynote speech of the State's Chief Executive has been read, but this time Governor Slaton talked without regard for the manuscript which he held.

New Governor's Address.

The address was altogether one of appeal for conservative administration of the State's finances, embodying a denunciation of demagogic legislation which will blindly curry favor with the voters by indiscreet appropriations beyond the limit of revenues. Action toward the rejuvenation and correction of Georgia's laws, especially taxation and the criminal code, were recommendations.

The address in its delivery took up more than an hour, but never for once did the big audience reveal signs of restlessness or impatience. At its conclusion came another demonstration, and the Slaton administration thus was launched auspiciously.

The hall became immediately the scene of a great impromptu reception. Mrs. Slaton and her friends were surrounded by a throng of congratulatory admirers. After a while the two groups were drawn together, and Governor and Mrs. Slaton, former Governor and Mrs. Brown stood side by side to shake hands and to respond to every smiling greeting.

Informality was evident at the Executive Mansion on Peachtree Street, where the Slatons received their friends in intimate, cheery fashion all Saturday afternoon. There was no reserve.

A friendly group was that which gathered at the Governor's Mansion for luncheon after the inauguration. It was composed of Governor and Mrs. Slaton and Governor and Mrs. Brown, all of whom are the warmest of friends.

And as informality marked the advent of Governor John M. Slaton, informality as well attended the departure of Governor Joseph M. Brown, who planned to become plain Mr. Brown without ceremony. But the people of Marietta, his home, would not let him come back to them without some welcoming demonstration, and most of the residents greeted him and Mrs. Brown when they returned.

Slaton to Begin Work Monday.

Governor Slaton will be at his office early Monday morning, he said Saturday. Eager to begin work for the State and the people, he will plunge into the affairs of the State with the energy and ability that has made him a leading figure among the attorneys and citizens of Atlanta.

That Governor Slaton intends to give all his time to the business of the State is evident in the fact that he and Mrs. Slaton have closed their beautiful homes, the one at the corner of Peachtree and Pine Streets, the other on Peachtree Road, and have moved into the ancient mansion at the corner of Peachtree and Cain Streets, with the announced intention of living there during the Slaton administration, except for a few weeks of the warm season, when they will go to the country home on Peachtree Road.

The regular inaugural reception of the Governor to the members of the General Assembly will be held July 2, according to an announcement made by Mrs. Slaton Saturday.

2,000 'Home Folks' Greet Ex-Gov. Brown

Marietta Welcomes Former Executive

Citizens and Old Friends Unite in Royal Reception to Beloved Couple.

FORMER Governor Joseph M. Brown and wife waving farewell to Atlanta friends as they left the Capital for their old home in Marietta, where they were given a warm welcome by their old friends.

More than 2,000 citizens of Marietta and Cobb County and a band welcomed ex-Governor Joseph M. Brown and his family upon their return to their old home, following the inaugural ceremonies in Atlanta Saturday afternoon, and accorded them one of the most hearty demonstrations witnessed in the town since the election of its distinguished citizen to the gubernatorial office.

The Brown party arrived at 5 o'clock. Banked on either side of the car line for hundreds of yards was the welcoming party, sending up cheer after cheer as the car passed down the line. Accompanying the ex-Governor were Mrs. Brown, Misses Cora and Sallie Brown and Charles Brown.

When they alighted from the car they were greeted by a reception committee of citizens, including L. C. Baldwin, Dr. F. D. Rambo and M. M. Sessions, and escorted to the public park, where speeches were made. W. P. Powell acted as master of ceremonies. Representative John P. Chaney, in an address of welcome, voiced the entire citizenry of Marietta in praise of Mr. Brown's work as Chief Executive of the State. Hon. S. A. Anderson, former Representative, also spoke.

A shower interrupted the park ceremony, and ex-Governor Brown was forced to make his answer in the courthouse, to which the crowds retired.

Mr. Brown spoke briefly. He reviewed his record in the gubernatorial office slightly, and declared that nothing which he had done was regretted by him. He stated that he was glad to return to private life, and was resuming his residence in Cobb County with pleasure.

Following his address, ex-Governor Brown and his family retired to their home, where an informal reception was tendered to a few friends.

SLATONS OPEN MANSION REIGN WITH LUNCHEON

Dinner and Dance at Driving Club Follow First Society Event of New Administration.

A round of social festivities, starting with a luncheon at the Governor's Mansion and closing with a dinner and dance at the Piedmont Driving Club, opened what is prophesied will be a brilliant reign of Governor and Mrs. John Marshall Slaton Saturday, following the inauguration of the former as chief executive of the State.

The luncheon formed the usual feature of entertainment accorded the incoming Governor by the retiring one at the mansion on Peachtree Street. Seated at the table with Governor and Mrs. Slaton and Mr. and Mrs. Brown were Misses Cora and Sallie Brown, Mrs. W. D. Grant, mother of Mrs. Slaton, Charles Brown and Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Connally.

The dinner at the driving club was a brilliant one, tendered the new chief executive and the new first lady of Georgia by Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant. Those present besides the host and hostess and guests of honor were Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Dickey, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Brandon, Mrs. John A. Pardee and Edward Inman.

In honor of the occasion an elaborate dinner was served. The menu was:

Rocky Ford Cantelope
Salted Almonds Heart of Celery
Queen Olives
Lettuce Sandwiches Saratoga Chips
Smothered Breast of Milk-Fed Chickens
Fried Eddplant Stewed New Corn
Heart of Head Lettuce with Russian Sauce
Peache Ice Cream with Assorted Cakes
Demi Tasse

At the close of the dinner the party retired to the ballroom and joined the throng of more than 200 dancers.

Pigeons to Keep City Sane, Says Expert

Dr. B. Cheston King, of Atlanta, Tells Chicago That Its Safety Rests With Doves.

CHICAGO, June 28.—If Chicagoans are to be saved from the mad house at all it will be by the pigeons.

Dr. B. Preston King, an Atlanta alienist, finds hope for the city's sanity in the pigeons that flutter about the Loop all day.

"Several times each day," says the doctor, "the man who works in an office building should go to a window with the expectation of seeing one or more doves. Should he spy them, I suggest that he forget all else. There is something in just the name 'dove' that has a soothing effect upon the nerves."

NAPLES, June 28.—Mount Vesuvius to-day, for the first time since 1906, showed signs of eruption. Flames were observed shooting from the main crater and three slight earthquake shocks were felt.

Professor Mercalli, director in charge of the observatory, says the eruption is due to the heavy rains filtering through cracks in the crater.

Police Chief Places Ban on Split Skirts

Former Philippine Officer Thinks Underskirts Are Necessary in America—Orders Arrests.

LOUISVILLE, KY., June 28.—Chief of Police Watson Lindsey, who was an officer in the Philippines under Taft, has placed his official ban against the existing fashions as typified by the split skirt.

In an order issued to-day, Chief Lindsey orders the arrest of all wearers of split skirts who are minus protecting underskirts.

Governor and Mrs. Slaton Move Into State Mansion

"Of course, I naturally feel regret at leaving the Executive Mansion—for I have spent so many happy days here—but it will be so good to get home again."—Mrs. Joseph Brown.

"I know just one thing—pride in coming into the mansion and a desire to fill the position of the Governor's wife just as simply and as well as I can."—Mrs. John Slaton.

That's the way the wife of the ex-Governor and the new Governor's wife said they felt—the one on leaving and the other on entering Georgia's "White House."

Just from a luncheon party at which ex-Governor Brown and Mrs. Brown had entertained the Slatons at a "house warming," the two first ladies of the State were having a sort of housewifely tete-a-tete on the front porch.

"You're going to like the place, I think," said Mrs. Brown, explaining all of its little details to Mrs. Slaton. "It's cool in the summer, and in the winter it is just as pleasant. You really have to be careful that it doesn't get too warm. You'll find the little room at the head of the stairs very convenient, I think, and in the kitchen——"

And Mrs. Slaton didn't miss a point.

"I am going home to Marietta," Mrs. Brown told The Sunday American reporter. "We have a big old-fashioned house out there, and I'm going to live in the shade of a four-acre front yard and keep cool—that's going to be my principal job for a while. But you watch—I'll be running in on Mrs. Slaton all the time and making myself at home——"

She laughed while Mrs. Slaton was busy telling her that was what she expected her to do—and got her promise.

The Slatons moved their trunks to the mansion Saturday—and a servant or two—as well as the chauffeur.

"Our other baggage is yet to arrive," Mrs. Slaton laughed.

And then: "I actually feel at home already—things look so comfortable, and I like the high ceilings. But, of course——" pause "——if I feel homesick for my other home sometimes I'll just go out and spend a day. It's nice to have two homes, anyhow—sort of variety."

Those who enjoyed the hospitality of the Browns' house-warming luncheon were, besides the Slatons, Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mrs. Slaton's mother, who it is expected, will make her home at the mansion; Colonel and Mrs. Paxon, Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Connally, and Misses Sallie and Cora Brown, sisters of the ex-Governor.

Sweeping Reform in System Of Taxation Urged by Slaton

Laws to aid the finances of Georgia and sweeping reforms of the tax system of the State are stressed in the inaugural message of Governor Slaton.

In part, Governor Slaton said:

Our system is wrong. The Legislature can appropriate what it pleases, and the tax rate remains the same. The Legislator has made himself a favorite with his constituency by voting for every popular appropriations and nothing suffers but the State's credit.

Unless some check be made, an increase of revenue will be of no avail in preventing the financial embarrassment of the State. Under the enthusiasm of the moment one appropriation bill may exhaust it.

More than four-fifths of the States of the Union derive revenue from what is known as an inheritance tax. I am informed that this tax is the subject of least complaint.

This form of tax has been approved by the highest authorities and is one of the easiest borne and subject to fewer hardships than any other. The inheritance tax is to some extent a corrective.

Corporation Taxation.

Prior to the year 1905, many efforts were made to collect an occupation tax from corporations. Governor Terrell, in his message of the year 1905, recommended a tentative privilege tax based on capital stock of $100,000 per year on corporations having a capital of $1,000,000, or over. He anticipated from this source more than $100,000 a year, and thought that such sum could reasonably be expected without a hardship. The State, however, has not received one-half this sum, and during the year 1913 the estimated revenue from this source is $48,000.

I recommend that the maximum occupation tax on corporations having $1,000,000 capital and over be $200 per annum, and the tax on corporations of less capital be adjusted accordingly.

Equalization of taxes, either through the enforcement of present laws, or new correctives, so that each may bear his proportionate burden, would not mean the increase of taxes upon any one now performing his duty, but would rather mean the lightening of his unfair portion of the load. I commend this subject to your attention.

Bonded Debt To Be Refunded.

An additional reason for establishing and maintaining the State's finances on a sound basis is the necessity of making provision for more than one-half of the entire bonded debt of the State, maturing in 1915. This is an imperative duty resting on this Legislature.

No sinking fund was provided by law to retire the bonds aggregating $3,679,000 which are due in 1915. The entire State's debt is $6,452,500, which does not include the obligations to the University, amounting to $291,500, and the landscrip fund of $90,000.

All the debt of $6,452,500 is provided for, or will be provided for, by the sinking fund required to be raised annually until the debt is paid off, except the $3,679,000 which falls due in May and July, 1915.

If refunding bonds were issued in 1915, making the first $100,000 fall due in 1935, then the sinking fund could be made to run continuously and retire each year, until paid, $100,000 of this series of 1915 refunding bonds.

This plan would seem advisable in order to relieve the treasury and the people of the increased burden at this time, unless financial conditions at the time of the sale of the bonds should demand that their redemption begin at an earlier period in order to effectuate their more satisfactory disposition.

Registration of Voters.

We believe the present registration law should be so amended that when a voter has once proven his qualification by registering and being enrolled, he shall remain a registered voter unless disqualified for cause due to himself.

The foregoing extract from the last platform upon which I was elected, expresses a principle which deserves universal acceptance. It contemplates no change of the constitution which provides for the qualification of the voter.

I recommend that the present registration law be amended to correct the injustice indicated. It would always be provided that the voter must have paid his taxes and not subjected himself to any of the disqualifications provided by law.

Highways.

It is needless to impress upon you the importance of our highways. Their value is an asset of the entire State. An intelligent Highway Commission, or Commissioner, clothed with proper authority, could be the means of untold benefit in suggesting proper methods of building the road adapted to the locality, or in solving the problems of engineering which might arise in various sections.

I call your attention to the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the lease of which terminates in 1919. No one, I apprehend, would or should consider its sale, but the problem of its disposition should be considered by a commission with directions to report its recommendations and its reasons therefor.

To delay this matter will mean to put the State at the inexcusable disadvantage of unpreparedness when the time arrives for imperative action.

The Criminal Code.

One of the fundamental purposes of government is the protection of life and safety of the citizen. If the rules of evidence are so shaped as to prevent the discovery of the truth, and if the State is deprived of the means of sifting the facts, the judges and juries are not to be blamed. If crimes are allowed to go unpunished.

It is an anomaly that a defendant should take the stand, make any statement that he sees fit or that his shrewd lawyer has prepared, and being immune from cross-examination, demand that the judge shall charge the jury that they may accept his unsworn statement in preference to all the evidence in the case.

I, therefore, recommend that a law be passed abolishing the defendant's statement, and providing in its place that he be sworn as a witness if he desires, but his failure to be so sworn be not subject to adverse comment by prosecuting counsel. This is in accordance with current Federal and State law.

The legislation in Georgia against carrying concealed weapons has in recent years been conspicuous. It has been suggested by the law of self-preservation. Daily we read of men who have shot others, and have been acquitted on the old statement that the deceased threw his hand on his hip pocket, and the defendant shot in fear of his life. When searched, the dead man was found generally unarmed.

If the carrying of concealed weapons were made a felony, subject to be reduced to a misdemeanor by either judge or jury, the deterrent effect of such a law would be the saving of many a life. I earnestly recommend to you the consideration of this question.

Banking Laws.

The banks of a State perform public functions, and as such are properly subjected to governmental supervision. The bankers of the State, with the desire of maintaining a high standard of responsibility and of affording guarantees against improvident management, that imperil the money of the people, recommend legislation looking to the accomplishment of these objects. I commend this subject as one worthy of your serious consideration.

My predecessors have recommended the creation of the position of State Auditor, and in this recommendation I heartily concur. His services could be utilized in checking the cost of new buildings for which requests may be made by the various institutions. Those who have served on the appropriations committees are aware of the inadequate facilities of the State in arriving at the amount of the necessary expenditures.

The Constitution.

The Constitution is the expression of the supreme law of the land. It can only be changed by the people speaking in their sovereign capacity. In order that they may vote intelligently on any proposition it is essential that they understand it. I recommend that in proposing Constitutional amendments, you plainly indicate the proposition to the voter in such language that he may understand the meaning of the question submitted.

My predecessor has called attention to the fact that some of the agricultural schools are well attended, while others receive little patronage, whether due to the matter of location or lack of interest, or from what cause, I am unable to say. Each obtains the same appropriation from the State for maintenance. I recommend that you investigate their condition, and apply the proper remedies.

Slaton Retains All Brown's Secretaries

Jesse Perry Will Be Personal Clerk of New Governor and Hardy Ulm Executive.

Most striking is the entire unanimity of opinion and purposes that existed between Governor Slaton and Governor Brown. No radical changes and no lost motion incident to a reversal of policies will come about. Almost without exception the men who served Governor Brown will also hold office under the Slaton administration.

Jesse Perry, who served Governor Brown as private secretary, will fill the same position under Governor Slaton. Hardy Ulm also is retained as executive secretary.

OBSCURE PAINTING SAID TO BE NEW HOLBEIN

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—It is rumored that a hitherto unknown picture by Hans Holbein, the younger, has been discovered here. The picture was sold recently in a London auction room in ignorance that it was Holbein's work. The signature was found when it was cleaned.

If genuine, the painting, which is a small portrait of a man, probably will be acquired by the National Gallery, which recently gave the Duke of Norfolk $350,000 for Holbein's "Duchess of Milan."

WILSONS REACH SUMMER HOME WITH 41 TRUNKS

Thirty Servants and Secret Service Men Accompany President's Wife to Churchill Estate.

CROWD FORGETS TO CHEER

Five Automobiles Carry Party at Fast Clip, but Speed Sign on Bridge is Rigidly Obeyed.

CORNISH, N. H., June 28.—Mrs. Woodrow Wilson arrived here to-day with her daughter, Eleanor, 41 trunks, 5 automobiles and a train of more than 30 servants and secret service men. Three hundred women and girls from this town and Windsor, Vt., across the Connecticut River, were at the railroad station to welcome the President's wife and daughter.

S. A. Reed, of the Windsor Board of Trade extended the official greetings to Mrs. Wilson. After the Wilson party had driven away in their automobiles the awe-stricken women suddenly remembered they had forgotten to cheer and were forced to yell their greetings toward the fast disappearing automobiles.

Eight Cars in Procession.

There were eight automobiles in the procession that took Mrs. Wilson to Winston Churchill's home, where she will spend the summer. She, Miss Eleanor and Miss Bones, her secretary, with the chauffeur and the footmen were in the first machine. Behind them came secret service men, moving picture men, photographers, reporters and servants.

They shot down the river and came to the Windsor toll bridge with its brand new sign, "$2 fine for autos running over five miles an hour," and the chauffeurs obediently slowed down. O. W. Dunsmore is tollkeeper, but when he saw the Wilson automobile he swung up the gate and they passed through without paying.

The women of Cornish and Windsor were anxious to get the latest information in Washington fashions. They were all delighted with Mrs. Wilson's costume, which consisted of a taupe suit, chiffon waist and a taupe straw with a purple aigrette. Miss Eleanor wore a dark blue suit and a corn straw. Miss Bones was in drab gray.

Entourage Greets Party.

It is four miles from the Windsor station to the great stone gates that mark the entrance to Harlakendon. The line of automobiles made the run in less than fifteen minutes. The Wilson special car had been attached to a train which arrived at 1:12, five minutes late. At exactly 1:31 the automobiles with Mrs. Wilson and her daughter swept through the stone arch and into the Churchill Estate.

A housekeeper, seven servants, four butlers and a head chauffeur were to welcome them. The secret service men barred all reporters and photographers at the gates, a quarter a mile away. Perfect June weather prevails here now.

There is talk among the local loyal Democrats of giving the President a suitable reception when once he is settled with his family, an event toward which the whole countryside looks with great anticipation.

Chief, Negro Was Burned For, Dead

Head of Americus Police Succumbs to Wounds He Received Week Ago—City Pays Respects.

AMERICUS, June 28.—William C. Barrow, Americus veteran Police Chief, passed away at midnight, death having resulted from the bullet wound inflicted last Saturday by the negro Redding, whose arrest Chief Barrow had effected, and who was afterward burned by an Americus mob.

Chief Barrow was 68 years old. He had been in the Police Department nearly a quarter of a century, and for ten years at its head.

As a mark of respect the county and municipal departments will close during the funeral hours this afternoon.

David Keefer Under Peace Bond

Halt Comes in Marital Troubles

Wife May Drop Disorderly Charge

Children of Mrs. David Keefer, who is involved in new marital troubles.

Stepson Who Fought With Mother's Husband Over Auto Pleased With Progress of Case.

The Keefer marital relations again are in statuo quo following the sensational turn of affairs Saturday afternoon, when David H. Keefer was placed under $500 peace bond on charges preferred in Justice Girardeau's court by Mrs. Keefer. The matter, for the time being, at least, probably will end here, as neither Mr. Keefer nor Mrs. Keefer has indicated that the controversy will be renewed.

Mr. Keefer made bond Saturday afternoon only after some difficulty—in fact, not until the bond had been reduced from $1,000 to $500. Mrs. Keefer made no objection to the cut, however, and every member of the family, including Jack Macy, Mrs. Keefer's son, as well as Eleanor Macy, her daughter, left the stuffy little court apparently well pleased with the decision. The charge of disorderly conduct was docketed against Mr. Keefer as a result of the difficulty at the Piedmont Driving Club Friday night, in which Keefer and young Macy exchanged blows following a quarrel over the ownership of an automobile.

The charge may be withdrawn by Mrs. Keefer if the peace bond which she secured against her husband is not violated, after a reasonable time.

In the meantime, both Mr. and Mrs. Keefer have returned to their respective homes—the husband to the home of his mother on Peachtree Street, the wife to their beautiful home on East Fourteenth near the Driving Club.

Mrs. Keefer intends to remain here temporarily, however, as she is even now personally superintending the construction of an apartment on Peachtree Street, which, she says, will be a home for women who have had just such trouble in marital relations as she.

Here, she says, she will live the simple life—the ideal life, in her opinion—surrounded by her little family, a son and a daughter, both still well in their 'teens. Mrs. Keefer takes sharp exception to the term of debutante applied to her daughter.

"I don't have such things in my family," she said, "and I never intend to, for I like the dishpans better than the drawing room. In other words, I am a Socialist."

MRS. EDDY NOT DEAD, DECLARES MRS. STETSON

Proclaims Herself Reincarnation of Christian Science Founder. Plans Warfare Control.

NEW YORK, June 28.—On the eve of what almost certainly will be one of the bitterest struggles in the history of the Christian Science Church Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson granted a remarkable interview to-day to the International News Service.

Though she was not prepared to make definite announcement, Mrs. Stetson, who in her newly issued book has proclaimed herself the successor and practically the reincarnation of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, made it plain that she does not intend to yield control of the church to the Boston and New York group of men who seized the official and financial reins immediately after the passing of Mrs. Eddy.

In the interview Mrs. Stetson asserted confidently that Mrs. Eddy is not dead and that she has the same power that Christ had to manifest Himself to the world.

Mrs. Stetson spoke in the library of the magnificent home she constructed in West Ninety-sixth Street, immediately adjoining the splendid church which she founded. It was apparent that she is ready physically for the fight, whether it comes now or is postponed until autumn.

Seems in Good Health.

Despite reports of her poor health, which have been industriously circulated, her grips was firm, her manner vivacious and her health apparently excellent. During a conversation that continued for more than two hours she showed no signs of fatigue, physically or mentally.

At the conclusion of the conversation she expressed her readiness to dictate replies to questions.

"Do you believe that Mrs. Eddy will appear again on earth?" was the first question.

"I do," was the emphatic reply. "I believe that what was possible for man—his reappearance to the world after seeming death—can be possible to woman. For a time Jesus was not visible. But He rose to a demonstration over the human thought which embodied itself in flesh, and through the power of His Christ-consciousness, manifested Himself. Would you deny a woman who has learned Jesus' method of destroying the false thoughts which caused disease and death the spiritual ability to prove her teachings as Jesus proved His by manifesting herself to the world?"

Representative of Deity.

"Do you regard Mrs. Eddy as the female representative of God?" was the next question.

"I do," replied Mrs. Stetson. "God must manifest Himself through woman as He once manifested Himself through man. Our premise upon which we base our faith is: 'God is spirit, the only Creator, mind, or the Great Thought consciousness.' We believe that spirit and its creations, spiritual man and the spiritual universe, are the only realities of being. God made man in His own image and likeness. Therefore, man is not material—he is spiritual.

"When I state that Mrs. Eddy never died, I refer to her divine selfhood. If you refer to the human material personality, that has disappeared from our material view. For a time Jesus was not visible. But He manifested Himself. Mrs. Eddy's manifestation is the beginning of a new era."

Is Spiritual Suffragette.

The next question brought in response an interesting discussion of the woman question, during which Mrs. Stetson revealed for the first time that she is an ardent suffragist. Here is the question:

"Do you believe that Mrs. Eddy's teaching of eternal life and her great spiritual reflection of good is an animus in this hour of progress which is moving humanity—particularly—to demand recognition and her equal rights with man?"

"I think you are asking me if I am a spiritual suffragette," responded Mrs. Stetson. "I noticed an article to-day in which I was honored by that classification.

"If woman is animated by the Christ mind she will have the Christ power to convince by demonstration the men who are now only waiting to see her prove her claim to equal intelligence and ability."

Miss Cannon, Dixie Nightingale, to Sing For Atlanta, Free

Wonderful Soprano Will Be Center of Interest at Concert in Auditorium-Armory.

At the free concert this afternoon at the Auditorium-Armory Atlantans will have their first opportunity to hear the wonderful soprano voice of Miss Eulalia Bright Cannon, the 18-year-old Atlanta girl who won the $3,000 grand opera prize for having the most promising voice in America. A wealthy New York woman, hidden behind a mantle of mystery, was the generous donor of the prize, which aroused national interest.

Miss Cannon will sing two big operatic numbers and probably some simple English songs as encores. The program is as follows:

Overture to the music-Drama, "Rosamunde," Schubert.

Improvisation upon Schubert's song, "Hark, Hark, the Lark," Starnes.

Aria, "O Don Fatale" (Don Carlos), Verdi—Miss Cannon.

Three Dances from "Henry VIII," German.

Aria, "Lieti Signor, Les Huguenots," Meyerbeer—Miss Cannon.

Grand March, "Alexandrina," Starnes.

FELDER TO ASK NEW TRIAL FOR J. N. BATEMAN

Attorney for Plaintiff Declares Jurors in the Case Have Expressed Opinions.

Colonel Thomas B. Felder, attorney for Frank Rothleutner, plaintiff in the trial of Judge J. N. Bateman, declared Saturday afternoon that he will apply for a new trial on the grounds that opinions regarding the value of the evidence submitted have been expressed by membrs of the jury.

One juror, J. W. Hughes, was excused late Friday afternoon by the presiding judge, and afterward expressed an opinion regarding the value of certain evidence that had been introduced. This, Colonel Felder declares, is contempt of court.

Thieves Get $100,000 From Blazing Store

Under Cover of Fire They Probably Started Themselves, Gang Loots New York Jewelry Shop.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Under cover of a fire which they probably set themselves robbers took $100,000 worth of jewelry from the establishment of Udall & Ballou, 574 Fifth Avenue, last night.

The thieves were as subtle as they were bold and elusive. The safe was not blown. It was unlocked. The wired and barred doors and "cages" were not torn down, but were opened with keys. Suspicion has attached to some employees of the company because of the fact. But those who left the building last after closing it were the most trusted—persons above suspicion.

TRIES TO KILL HIMSELF BECAUSE WIFE LEFT HIM

MOBILE, June 28.—George Blackman, age about 55 years, a painter and paperhanger, was brought to Mobile to-night with a self-inflicted bullet wound in the temple, from which he has no possible chance to recover. He is at the City Hospital. Remorse over his wife leaving him is given as the cause of the attempt to kill himself.

Falls 95 Feet From Cross; Able to Walk

Man Suffers Only One Bruise in Long Plunge From a Church Spire.

ST. LOUIS, June 28.—Benjamin Jordan fell from the top of the cross on St. Mary's Catholic Church in Edwardsville, Ill., Ill., to-day and landed on the ground 90 feet below. Apparently he was uninjured, save a bruise in his side where he struck a cornice while falling.

The cornice was at the bottom of the spire. From this he bounded into a maple tree near the church and crashed through the branches to the ground. The tree broke the force of the fall.

After being examined by physicians Jordan walked about the churchyard, saying that he felt no pain except in the bruised side.

RUNS OVER GIRL WITH AUTO; HELD ON SLAYING CHARGE

DENVER, COLO., June 28.—Julius Brand was arrested to-day on a warrant charging him with the murder of Anna Bell Spencer, 10 years old, whom Brand ran over with his automobile Tuesday afternoon. The Coroner's Jury held Brand criminally responsible.

MANY EXPERTS TO TAKE STAND IN FRANK TRIAL

Great Array of Finger-Print and Blood-Stain Students Will Give Their Views.

The trial of Leo M. Frank will bring forth the most prominent array of criminal and medical experts ever grouped in a Southern court room.

This became known Saturday when Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey began making preparations to have the skilled investigators who have worked in the Phagan case return to Atlanta for the trial, July 28.

The defense has not been idle and is prepared to have an expert on almost every conceivable angle to introduce in rebuttal.

Fingerprint experts were brought into the case almost immediately after it was taken from the hands of the police by Solicitor Dorsey. One of the most prominent of these, who has figured in solving many New York mysteries, was the first to be brought South. He spent several days in a minute investigation of the scene of the crime, articles of clothing and the fingerprints of every suspect in the case. Other experts in the same line followed him.

Solicitor Dorsey did not trust wholly to the examination of Dr. Hurt, the Coroner's physician, who could not qualify as an expert in the Appelbaum trial, but sent with him some of the most prominent of the Atlanta medical men.

Blood Stains Important.

Important roles will be played by the experts on blood stains.

The state's case rests almost entirely on its ability to prove the blood found on the second floor of the pencil factory was the blood of Mary Phagan. It is conceded the evidence of the negro, Jim Conley, that he found the body on this floor may be found weak when he goes before a jury.

The blood-stained floor was chipped up and the examination made by the State's experts. This is an advantage for the prosecution.

Another point on which experts will be asked to testify will be as to the flow of blood after the heart stops beating. Blood was found in two places on the factory floor where Conley said he dropped the body of the murdered girl in carrying it to the basement, and yet there were no stains where she was said to have been first found by him. Experts have testified that blood would not necessarily flow from a wound that produced death, but that if the body was lifted or moved so as to place the wound below the level of the rest of the body blood would flow from it.

Cite Appelbaum Case.

In the recent Appelbaum trial, the defense proved by several local physicians that had Appelbaum shot himself, or been shot, while he was standing, the blood would have spurted several feet from where the body was found, while if the wound was inflicted when he was lying down the flow would have been very nominal.

Many other experts, not a few of them prominent physicians here, and some from the great hospitals of the East, are to testify.

The State has changed its theory in some small detail, but the Solicitor would not discuss it.

MACON SUBURB WOULD BE INCORPORATED IN CITY

MACON, June 28.—Residents of Cherokee Heights, now one of the most fashionable suburban residential sections, are planning to be incorporated as a part of the city of Macon. Robert W. Barnes, an attorney, is circulating a petition, asking Council to call an annexation election.

Brilliant Legal Battle Is Sure as Hooper And Arnold Clash in Trial of Leo Frank

By An Old Police Reporter.

As deplorable as the Phagan case is, in all its melancholy details, it already is evident enough that there will come of it eventually much that the community may be thankful for.

In the first place, Atlanta and Georgia, and incidentally the entire South will have learned a good lesson in law and order, justice and fair play, and to that extent may be the better prepared for the next case of the kind that comes to their attention.

In the second place, there will be in the future no such wretched bungling and frenzied appeal in and from police headquarters, as for a time marked the Phagan case unique among its kind.

It looks now as if the decks have been pretty well cleared for action and that Leo Frank's trial may be expected to proceed in dignity and order, and that in its final analysis the truth of Mary Phagan's murder may be established, at least to the extent of Frank's real or suspected participation therein.

If Frank should be convicted, that would mean the subsequent indictment and conviction of the negro Conley, as an accessory after the fact.

Conley Indictment May Follow.

If Frank should be found not guilty, that would mean the indictment of Conley, as principal to the murder, in all human probability.

It evidently is the purpose of the State to hold Conley free of indictment, pending the disposition of the charges against Frank. His status as a material witness depends much upon this, of course.

There always is a chance, however, that a Grand Jury may take up a thing of this sort of its own motion, and to that extent there remains the possibility of prior indictment hanging over Conley.

It seems more likely, however, that the case will go to trial about as it shapes up now.

I do not incline to think the State really has any further sensational or particularly effective thing up its sleeve. Neither do I think the defense has.

There may be, on both sides, bits of corroborated evidence or evidence to offset this, that, or the other to come, but in the main I think the public is in possession of all the essential facts in the Phagan case to date.

The public must remember, however, that not all the things it has read in the newspapers, not yet one-half the things, ever will go before the jury trying Leo Frank as competent evidence.

And it is upon the COMPETENT evidence alone that the court will permit Leo Frank to be judged.

For instance, nothing that Mrs. Frank has said in the public prints will go before the jury. A wife is estopped in law from testifying either for or against her husband.

Fomby Woman Rejected.

The Fomby woman already has been rejected as a possible witness against Frank. Her story admittedly is too preposterous even for the State to bother with it further.

How much of Conley's story the jury will hear is entirely problematical.

He will be warned that he need not testify to anything calculated to incriminate himself, and even if he elects to disregard this warning there is much in his statement that likely will go down and out as incompetent or irrelevant.

The ponderous assurances of Frank's guilt, so frequently thundered from police headquarters by Detective Lanford, will, so far as the jury is concerned, not be there. Detective Lanford will not be on the jury—and his opinion as to the innocence or guilt of Frank will not be immediately valuable, therefore.

Frank's own statement, it must be rembered, will be delivered to the jury, not under oath.

The jury will be instructed by the court that it may accept the defendant's statement as the truth in its entirety, and to the exclusion of ALL the sworn testimony, if it sees fit; or it may accept it in part and reject it in part; or it may reject the statement as a whole.

The jury, and the jury ALONE, will be the judge of the facts.

The law—the impersonal law—that the jury will be required to apply to those facts it will get from the court.

It looks, then, as if the Phagan case, getting down to brass tacks, will revolve finally about those persons:

Leo Frank, the defendant; Solicitor Dorsey and Attorney Frank Hooper, representing the State; Luther Z. Rosser and Reuben Arnold, representing the defendant; the judge, the jury and a dozen or so competent and material witnesses.

Order at Last Comes.

So, at last, has order been brought out of chaos, after weeks and weeks of hysteria, stuff and nonsense, passion and prejudice, facts and near-facts, truth and lies, impatience and intolerance—all jumbled into about the worst mess I ever undertook, in my way, to analyze and unravel, in seeking the truth!

Leo Frank will receive a fair trial, and the written and recorded verdict, whatever it may be, will be accepted generally as the truth.

If the jury agrees that Frank is guilty, that verdict will be taken to be a just one. Nothing short of the most sensational and revolutionary new evidence likely would serve to re-establish his good name, once he is convicted in the Superior Court.

On the other hand, if the jury shall agree that Frank is not guilty, I think he will be taken back into the friendly and fair-minded good will of the people of Atlanta, a free and untarnished man, and there likely will come a revulsion of popular feeling in his behalf, that will go far toward offsetting and reconciling him to the horrible ordeal he passed through.

The approaching trial likely will be one of the greatest legal battles ever fought in Georgia.

On the one hand—that of the State—Hugh Dorsey, the Solicitor General, has done the drudgery, and Frank Hooper is to handle the picturesque. Hooper likely will figure much more in the public eye hereafter than Dorsey will, for it will be Hooper's business to paint the rainbow, snatch the stars from the heavens, and open the floodgates of tears—if he can!

On the other hand—that of the defense—Luther Z. Rosser has done the drudgery, and Reuben Arnold will have the delicate task of leading the jury along the primrose path that leads to Frank's acquittal.

All Have Big Reputations.

All of these men are great lawyers, with reputations to sustain, and each one may be depended upon to act a part entirely in keeping with the honorable profession of the law. I do not believe there is sufficient money in Atlanta to secure the services of any one of these men in an unworthy undertaking.

Each one of these men may be depended upon to do his best by his client, and as each one is of the quality I note, a fair trial seems assured.

It is a happy and a consoling circumstance that the trial of Leo Frank is to be presided over by an upright and just judge, argued by upright and honorable attorneys, and a verdict written by twelve "good men and true," as the law—the LAW in all its majesty—directs!

While by no means as spectacular a thing to say as something else might be, it is a matter of deep and abiding significance that Leo Frank, with his life, his good name, and all that he holds most dear at stake, is assured of a fair trial and a just verdict, notwithstanding all the frenzied and sinister detail of irrelevant and incoherent "testimony" and "evidence" set forth here and there, as time has run on since Mary Phagan was slain.

Victory for Society.

In the trial of Leo Frank THE SUPREMACY OF THE LAW will be vindicated beyond carping or cavil—and therein the most tremendous victory to society will be achieved.

Frank Hooper is one of the most experienced prosecuting attorneys in the State. He has served as Solicitor General on one of the most important circuits in Georgia, and his career thereon was entirely to his credit.

He is suave, incisive, deliberate, calm in action and eagle-eyed in seeing a point that may be turned to his client's advantage.

In summing up the case of the State against Leo Frank, Hooper will be at his best. He is a master in presenting his case to the jury for its consideration. I understand he is to be associated soon with Judge Arthur Powell and John D. Little, in Atlanta, in the practice of law. They will make a great team. Hooper is an attorney of the same class and caliber as Powell and Little.

But there to combat the best efforts that Hooper may put forth will stand that remarkable lawyer, Reuben Arnold.

Whatever qualms Frank may feel when he thinks of Hooper, doubtless they are relieved in large measure when he turns his thoughts to Arnold.

Reuben Arnold is a lawyer of constant surprises. Age can not wither him nor custom stale his infinite variety. Frank's case will be presented to the jury as few men could present it, when Arnold undertakes the work.

Convinced of Innocence.

Arnold says he never entered the case until he had convinced himself of Frank's innocence, and I quite believe he speaks the truth. I do not think there is the shadow of doubt either in Arnold's or Rosser's mind that Frank is entirely guiltless of the killing of Mary Phagan.

That Hooper may have some doubts as to the full strength of the State's case against Frank seems likely, for soon after entering the case he said this:

I have not been employed in the case to prosecute Leo M. Frank, but to help find and convict the murderer of Mary Phagan. If the trial proves we are wrong, we will begin work on another angle. We have but one object and idea. It is that justice and the law be vindicated. We are, however, convinced we have a strong case against the accused.

Now, I do not think a manlier thing has been said in all the mass of things that have been said in the Phagan case than the foregoing.

If any person who does not know Frank Hooper has any doubts as to his complete integrity and lofty ideals the statement credited to him herein of sanity, which would have eliminated many of the ugly features.

Happily, however, the chatterboxes and the human phonographs have been given most effective pause in their wild riot of talk, and if the Society for the Suppression of Unnecessary Noises has rounded them up for good and all, so be it, and praise forevermore!

Sanity and THE LAW OF THE LAND have taken the Phagan case in hand, and through these agencies will the truth of the murder of Mary Phagan be set up eventually.

Search Will Continue.

If the State fails to convict Frank—the State will turn its eyes elsewhere.

Could any man ask a fairer or squarer promise from Hooper than that?

It merely means that Hooper WILL ACCEPT THE FINDINGS OF THE COURT, after orderly and prescribed procedure, frankly and unquestioningly, as the TRUTH of the matter.

If Frank is guilty, then the law will take its course.

If he is not guilty, he will take his place once more among his fellowmen, as free of stain as any of them.

That's where Hooper stands, and that's where I am satisfied to stand also!

And if somebody, early in the investigation of the Phagan case, had calmed the mad scramble for "clews," "evidence," "testimony" and what not, with the deliberate and convincing words of Frank Hooper, some of the utterly ridiculous theories would never have been evolved and the entire case would have rested upon a basis say what Hooper said, soon after taking up the State's end of the Phagan case.

The most ardent, if honest, extremes of opinion well may meet on the platform Hooper sets up!

And if everybody in Atlanta will say, as he says, "I want to help find and convict the murderer of Mary Phagan, regardless of whom that murderer may be," everybody will find himself on a platform of decency and fair play—and that's where he ought to wish to find himself.

I have sought, in these articles, neither to prosecute nor to defend Frank. I have sought, in such manner as I might, to help find the murderer of Mary Phagan. I want to see him found and convicted.

I, like Hooper, have desired, above all things, to see JUSTICE AND THE LAW VINDICATED, and I indorse and agree with Hooper's expressed desire that both may be.

Search Will Continue.

'Everywoman' Star Seeking a Divorce

Actor-Preacher Husband of Miss Adele Blood Named as Corespondent in Another Suit.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 28.—Miss Adele Blood, playing the leading role in "Everywoman," has instituted divorce proceedings against Edward S. Davis, sometimes known as Cedar Russell Davis, actor-preacher, who left his Oakland pulpit ten years ago for a career on the stage. Miss Blood, who is at the St. Francis Hotel, filed the suit three days ago in New York.

"I don't care to discuss the case," said Miss Blood to-day. "You can depend upon Mr. Davis saying something worthy of publication."

Closely following the news that Miss Blood has filed divorce proceedings, came information from New York that Frederick Smolton Bryant, actor-manager, had sued Mrs. Bryant for divorce and named Davis. Mrs. Bryant is known on the stage as Jule Power.

ONWENTSIA POLOISTS WIN.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Experience met inexperience at the Onwentsia polo field to-day with the usual result. The young and unseasoned men on the Cincinnati club were no match for the older and more seasoned players of the Lake Forest four. The score: Onwentsia, 11; Cincinnati, 2 3-4.

FIGHT BREWING IN MACON OVER MAYOR'S OFFICE

Bridges Smith, City Clerk, or John R. L. Smith, Lawyer, Are Likely To Be Chosen.

DASHER FIRST CANDIDATE

Executive Committee Chairman Takes His Own Time About Calling Meeting.

MACON, June 28.—The approaching mayoralty campaign is featured by a seeming lack of interest. With the election less than ten weeks off, the candidates are still in their shells, and local politics seem to be stagnated.

Alderman A. L. Dasher, Sr., for years one of the strongest adherents of the administration party, is the only candidate so far in the field. He announced in December on an anti-administration platform. On account of this complete reversal of form, the citizens have been at a loss as to how to take him, and his campaign has made little progress. It is understood that Mr. Dasher is arranging an aldermanic ticket, which will be announced in a few weeks.

The administration will offer either Bridges Smith, the present City Clerk, or J. Ross Bowdre, the present Mayor Pro Tem and administration leader in Council.

Mr. Smith was Mayor for nine years, and retired only to let his friend, John T. Moore, run. Mr. Moore was defeated by Judge A. L. Miller. Next time he beat Judge Miller by less than 200 votes. Two years ago he defeated N. I. Brunner an Alderman, by a safe majority.

Mayor Moore Ineligible.

Under Macon's present charter rule, Mayor Moore is ineligible for a third successive term. Consequently, Mr. Smith, as the strongest man of the administration faction, is looked upon to maintain the party in office.

Mr. Bowdre is in line for the nomination, but he insists that he would rather not be Mayor, and it is not lively that he will get in the race.

The Moore administration has done many things to arouse criticism and cause enemies, while at the same time making a progressive record along other lines. The chief complaint is that it has been too open. The prohibition law is discounted in the city. The administration has established a wide-open restricted district and the police department has been subject to unenviable criticism.

"Law and Order" Movement.

Just now "law and order" leaders are talking of John R. L. Smith, a prominent Macon lawyer, for Mayor on an independent ticket. Mr. Smith has never been in politics, and in that respect he has an absolutely unblemished record. It is said that no one knows how he has ever voted on any issue, local or State. He is a successful business man, a great believer in the enforcement of law, and at the same time a man of rather liberal tendencies. A movement is on foot to ask him to run. Unless this movement crystallizes, it is probable that Bridges Smith will be the next Mayor.

Bridges Smith was originally a painter, and then a newspaper reporter. Incidentally he was a minstrel and has also engaged in various business enterprises. About 25 years ago he became Clerk of Council, and held that place until Mayor Daisy Price died in office. Then he was elected to fill the vacancy. Afterwards he was re-elected for four successive times. Just as soon as Smith got out of office a legislative act was secured, restricting the Mayor's tenure to not more than four successive years.

Aldermanic Probabilities.

As to an aldermanic ticket, at least seven of the present Council will run on the administration ticket, they being Aldermen Chestney, Bowdre, McKenna, Happ, Hines, Adamson and Bernd. Alderman P. L. Hay will run on an independent platform. L. J. Kilburn, a labor leader and former Representative in the Legislature; L. A. Mitchell, R. C. Hazlehurst and two other successful business men are also expected to be administration candidates for Council.

The primary will be held about September 15. The regular election takes place in October, and the Mayor and Council change in November.

Just now there is an agitation to secure a new executive committee. The present committee was elected three years ago, and served its purpose. However, it has simply remained in office, because the chairman, W. D. Nottingham, forgot all about calling a meeting. This week a demand was made upon Mr. Nottingham to call the committee together so that it could arrange for a mass meeting by which a new committee will be named. The point was made that the new committee should be chosen before the citizens are rent by factional politics. But Judge Nottingham—he was once Judge of the City Court—is obdurate. He says that he is going to call the committee whenever he gets good and ready. A number of the committeemen have publicly criticised Chairman Nottingham for his attitude, and eight of the ten members have requested him in writing to call the committee.

Macon Judge Ends Feeless Marriages

Justice Hugh McKervey Victim of His Own Generous Customs, Calls a Halt.

MACON, June 28.—Justice of the Peace Hugh McKervey, who has been a judge for five years and never charged a fee, says now that he is going to break this rule.

Recently his constable picked up a cow, and after keeping it the required period sold it to the highest bidder. The owner of the cow then brought suit and recovered his cow. The man who had bought it at auction then sued Judge McKervey for the $11 he had paid for the cow at public sale. And the justice, although he has never taken in a fee, had to pay out $11, his constable not being financially able to pay it.

"This experience means the end of feeless marriages in Bibb County," says Judge McKervey.

COUNCIL AGAINST THE SPARKS PARK SCHEME

MACON, June 28.—Macon's Council is against the proposition to buy a site of 300 acres for a park four miles up the river. This offer was made to the city by W. B. Sparks, and it received the indorsement of scores of prominent citizens. Council personally inspected the proposed site for the park, and the Aldermen were not impressed with it at the price asked.

Macon Likely to Get Baraca Meet

World Convention of Church Society Almost Assured—Usual Attendance Is 4,000.

MACON, June 28.—There is no doubt that Macon will be awarded the 1914 annual convention of the Baraca and Philathea societies of the world. The Macon delegation, which has returned from Nashville, Tenn., say that the executive committee is practically unanimous for Macon, although several other larger cities made bids for the next meeting.

Macon was awarded the office of world-wide secrtary, this being given to D. S. Wagnon, of this city, and it is the custom to place the succeeding convention in the home city of the newly elected secretary. About 4,000 delegates attend the convention.

Crawford, Ala., Masons Confer Unusual Honor on Prince Family. Public Installation.

COLUMBUS, June 28.—B. F. Prince, a well-known citizen of Crawford, Ala., and his seven sons were installed as officers in Huckabatchee Lodge of Masons this afternoon. A public installation was conducted, followed by an old-fashioned country barbecue. Several hundred invitations were sent out and Masons throughout this section attended.

The Prince family is one of the most highly respected in East Alabama, and the fact that all have been elected to offices in the same lodge is an indication of their popularity in the community. The father, who is past 70 years of age, is worshipful master; B. C. Prince, senior warden; R. R. Prince, junior warden; J. E. Prince, treasurer; W. R. Prince, secretary; Sidney Prince, senior deacon; C. H. Prince, junior deacon, and S. F. Prince, tyler.

FOOTBALL STAR ENTERS PROFESSIONAL BASEBALL

ATHENS, June 28.—The University of Georgia football team suffered a heavy loss this week when Halfback Bowden entered the list of professionals and became a member of the Cordele Empire State League team. Bowden was considered one of the greatest halfbacks in the South and was being counted on as a great running mate for McWhorter next fall. He is a good baseball player, being awarded all-Southern catcher in 1912. An injured shoulder kept him out of most of the games this year.

LANDS IN JAIL BECAUSE HE POSED AS DETECTIVE

ROME, June 28.—Because he tried to play detective and search negro homes, Gus Harris, a young white man, is in the county jail. Harris armed himself with a pistol and a badge and with these convinced a number of blacks that he was an officer of the law. In most instances he secured whisky, and this he carried to a confederate. They drank it and disposed of it in other ways. He was arrested and bound over.

UNIQUE PRISON BUILT FOR CONVICTS IN HALL

GAINESVILLE, June 28.—Hall County has a most ingeniously built house for the accommodation of the inmates of the convict camp. It is 50 by 80 feet, of roomy proportions, built of wood, containing not a single nail, but put together by bolts and capable of being taken down and moved from place to place. Edwin Smith, son of John A. Smith, supervisor of county road work, built the prison at a cost less than a tent the same size. Road men from other counties have seen the building, and it is said that others may adopt the same plan.

Finds $500 Diamonds By Means of 'Lost' Ad

Columbus Woman Recovers Five Rings Dropped on Street Car Two Months Ago.

COLUMBUS, June 28.—Through the means of a small "lost ad," diamond rings valued at $500 have been recovered by Mrs. S. J. Guined, of this city, after she had about given up all hope of finding them.

On April 10, Mrs. Guined rode up town on a street car. In a chatelaine purse she carried she had five rings valued at $100 each. The rings slipped out of the purse. She did not discover her loss until that night. She advertised for them.

A day or two ago a man learned the whereabouts of the rings, and, remembering the ad, notified police headquarters. Conductor J. A. Duffey and Motorman Ed Gurley, who were in charge of the car on which she had ridden, were arrested and the diamonds recovered. Mrs. Guined refused to prosecute the men and they were released. The Traction Company discharged them.

To Stand Trial for Attack on Reporter

James Randall, Augusta Barber, Will Be Arraigned in City Court.

AUGUSTA, June 28.—The most interesting case to be tried in the City Court next week is that against James Randall, a white barber, charged with assaulting M. J. Mabry, a newspaper reporter.

Randall is a well-known police character, having been in trouble several times and he is also somewhat notorious as the hangman of Arthur Glover, a white man executed here several years ago. Neither the Sheriff, the jailer nor any of the deputies would spring the trap to send Glover into eternity, so Randall was paid $10 for the work.

Some time ago Randall was arrested on the charge of gambling, and Mabry, accompanying the officers who made the raid, found some poker chips which the officers had overlooked. Randall threatened him at the time and in the City Court room a short time afterward he attacked Mabry.

$50,000 POWER LAND SUIT TO BE ARGUED ON JULY 7

AUGUSTA, June 28.—A petition for a permanent injunction to prevent the Georgia-Carolina Power Company from using the lands of the petitioners will be heard July 7, in Charleston, before Judge Smith, of the United States Court, when the case of W. H. Fleming, H. C. Middleton, E. F. Verdery and E. W. Andrews against the power company will be argued.

COLUMBUS CITY OFFICIAL HOLDS PLACE 50 YEARS

Another Week Will Complete Half Century of Service for M. M. Moore.

COLUMBUS, June 28.—A half century's service for the same municipality is something rarely seen, yet if City Clerk M. M. Moore, of Columbus, lives until July 6 he will have completed 50 years in the same office.

At a meeting of the City Council of Columbus on July 6, 1863, Mr. Moore, then hardly 26 years of age, but known as a successful business man and one faithful and upright in all of his dealings, was chosen City Clerk. He was elected over two strong competitors, and took immediate charge of the office, serving through the closing days of the war between the States and continuously since.

Through all these years of service he has rendered the city there have been but few times when anyone sought to take the office from him.

For many years past there has been no one to offer opposition to him, and he has been elected term after term by Councils which change more or less every two years.

Mr. Moore will be 76 years of age November 15, and the fact that he has given 50 years of his life to the discharge of his duties as a city official is evidence of his popularity with all the people. While Mr. Moore has never been robust physically, he has been blessed with average health. He is a native of Columbus and has lived here all his life, except for a very few years when he was a child, and then he lived just across the river in Girard. In 1868 he married Miss Sallie Peabody, a member of one of the most prominent families of this section. To them were born five children, four of whom are now living. They are James M. Moore, John P. Moore, Miss Lula Moore and Mrs. W. R. Hester, all of whom now reside in this city. His wife died last year.

COLUMBUS BURGLARS ROB CATHOLIC CHURCH

COLUMBUS, June 28.—Not content with robbing undertaking establishments and the Muscogee County court house, burglars have now turned their attention to churches in Columbus, and as a result the Church of the Holy Family has been looted of a number of valuables.

Gaining an entrance through a window the burglars stole small marble slabs, scarfs and other adornment. The convent was not disturbed.

Wimberly Explains Opposition to Depot

Refutes Imputation That Connection With Railroad Prompts His Fight Against Station.

MACON, June 28.—Representative Minter Wimberly, whose opposition to the erection of a union passenger station at Fifth and Cherry Streets will probably delay Macon's new depot project for this year at least, today stated his position, answering those who have criticised him. He indignantly denounces as "a grave, cruel and unworthy injustice the charge that I am opposed to the Cherry Street site because of my connection with the Macon, Dublin and Savannah Railroad as general counsel."

Mr. Wimberly says that Council is giving too much to the Central of Georgia for what it receives in return, and by allowing the Central to close up five streets the city will permanently and absolutely impair the value of all of the land within the city limits on the other side of the closed section. He is for the Cherry Street site for the depot provided the streets are not closed. As it will take legislative enactment to close the streets, Mr. Wimberly's opposition is likely to defeat the project.

BIG MEDICAL SCHOOL HERE IN UNION OF 2 COLLEGES

Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons Is Merged With the Atlanta Medical College by the Heads of Both the Institutions.

Planned That It Assume National Importance---Luckie St. Property Will Be Offered for Sale by the Board of Trustees.

A union of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons and the Atlanta Medical College has been effected, and as a result an institution to be known as the Atlanta Medical College has been formed. Details of the consolidation were announced Saturday by representative committees from both colleges.

Ambitious plans for the new college are outlined. The immediate effect of the consolidation will be the placing of the Atlanta Medical College in Class A by the American Medical Association. It renders the newly formed college eligible to membership in the Association of American Medical Colleges, admitting its graduates to practice anywhere in the world. Its doors open with the new college year in September.

The consolidation will force the abandonment of the property of the Atlanta School of Medicine on Luckie and Bartow Streets and the establishment of a considerable plant in connection with the present equipment of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons on Butler and Armstrong Streets.

Officers Are Announced.

The new college will be officered by W. S. Elkin, dean, and W. F. Westmoreland, president, of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons, and by two officers to be nominated by the Atlanta School of Medicine.

All these plans were announced by a committee from the Atlanta School of Medicine, consisting of George H. Noble, L. C. Fischer and Edward G. Jones, and a committee from the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons, whose members are W. S. Elkin, W. F. Westmoreland and C. W. Strickler.

Consideration of the proposition has been under way for some time, stated the committee members.

"It has been the one object of these deliberations," they announced, "to organize an institution of dignity and of permanent promise, whose graduates will receive general recognition throughout the United States—an institution so constituted as to make it a real public asset, and so conducted as to expect and to deserve the heartiest popular commendation."

So complete have been the preliminary deliberations that before word of the union had been breathed every plan was worked out, even to the appointment of a faculty and of a board of trustees.

The faculty proper will consist of the following physicians:

Department of Medicine—W. S. Kendrick, C. W. Strickler, R. T. Dorsey, J. C. Johnson, J. C. Olmsted, E. C. Thrash, E. B. Block, C. E. Boynton, L. B. Clarke, George M. Niles, L. M. Gaines, S. R. Roberts and B. Wolff.

The probable board of trustees of the Atlanta Medical College will be Reuben R. Arnold, H. M. Dorsey, Judge George Hillyer, G. S. Lowndes, E. W. Martin, F. J. Paxon, Judge T. P. Westmoreland, H. H. Cabaniss, John J. Eagan, John H. James, H. J. Lowry, Wilmer L. Moore, J. Carroll Payne, C. E. Currier, T. A. Hammond, Marion M. Jackson, R. F. Maddox, Bishop C. K. Nelson, J. S. Prather and W. S. Witham.

The union of the two colleges is significant as a historical event. The name of the first medical college founded in Atlanta was that of the consolidated school—the Atlanta Medical College. This institution was formed in 1854, was suspended during the war and its building used as a hospital. It was merged in 1898 with the Southern Medical College, which was organized in 1878, to form the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons.

The Atlanta School of Medicine was organized 1905. Both the colleges erected new buildings in 1906, Andrew Carnegie having given $25,000 and Dr. A. W. Calhoun $15,000 to the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons for this purpose, other citizens giving various sums. The Atlanta School of Medicine has also operated a hospital in connection with the college.

Sell Luckie Property.

It is the present plan to put on sale the Luckie Street property of the Atlanta School of Medicine, and to provide for the college work to be carried on entirely at the Butler Street plant, ample room being there for additional buildings and extensions. The proximity of the Grady Hospital is an additional reason for transferring everything to that locality.

The total enrollment in the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons last session was 334, and in the Atlanta School of Medicine 218. The announcement by the joint committee declares:

"It will not be the future intention to increase the enrollment so much as to elevate the standard of professional instruction. After January, 1914, one or more years of work in a literary college will be required for entrance, the minimum requirement this fall being a high school education."

Committee Tells Hopes.

The committee, in a statement to the public, tells of its purposes and hopes, saying:

"The recent awakening of the public mind to a knowledge of the past shortcomings of medical education, the evident cordial interest in plans, wherever launched, to invest medical education with a degree of excellence which will protect the public as it ought to be protected; the late tendency of private philanthropy to recognize properly organized medical colleges as deserving of its bounty; the recognition promised abroad to the proposed institution, which recognition could not have been obtained as long as the colleges remained separate; the strategic advantages of Atlanta as the site for a medical college of superlative merit; the excellence of the professional talent in the city; the immense momentum implied in a united instead of a divided professional energy—all these and other considerations alike of sentiment and of common sense, have seemed to us to constitute a responsibility which it would discredit us to neglect, and an opportunity which it would distinguish us to embrace."

Luncheon Lurch Aid to Digestion

Pre-Prandial Prance Society Fad

Variation of Tango Brings Dancers One Step Nearer Dining Each Step They Take.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The Luncheon Lurch, the latest variation of the Tango and the Turkey Trot, which has seized the society of the Capital, is declared by experts on gastronomy to be the greatest known appetizer and first aid to digestion.

So effective has it been found along these lines that the Martini is now almost unknown on the boards of Washington hosts, while the pepsin tablet supply of the druggists is practically considered worthless stock.

There is a deep method in the Luncheon Lurch. Contrary to the Tango, which is danced after tea, the Lurch is a preprandial pastime. At a given time before the viands are to be served the orchestra strikes up something syncopated.

Guests immediately begin lurching and continue the dance until they have worked up an appetite considered commensurate with the feast about to be served.

Each step carries the dancers nearer the dining room, and observant ones declare that it is an invariable rule that the best trenchermen always dance with a remarkable celerity, while the dyspeptics lurch so slowly that they are to all appearances posing in tableau.

Among the prominent lurchers are Miss Katherine Elkins, Miss Dorothy Williams, Miss Sally Williams, Miss Katherine Britton, Miss Marguerite Barbour and Mrs. James F. Curtis.

RAIN IS DUE TO BREAK TORRID SPELL TO-DAY

Weather Bureau Expects Showers to Reduce Temperature Which Caused Prostrations.

Thundershowers scheduled by the weather man for Sunday afternoon bring promise of relief from the sweltering heat from which Atlanta has been suffering for the past few days. The morning will be clear and continued warm.

Two prostrations were wrought by the heat wave Saturday when the thermometer passed the 92-degree mark. The persons affected were men who stumbled into the United Cigar Company's store at Decatur and Peachtree Street and fell over unconscious.

While a thundershower will alleviate heat conditions temporarily, Forecaster C. V. VonHerrmann, of the United States Weather Bureau, declared that record-breaking rises in temperature were likely throughout the week to come.

Death List From Heat Grows Through West.

CHICAGO, June 28.—There was no relief from the intense heat blanketing the Middle West and extending eastward to-day. Temperatures continued to hug the 100 mark, and reports of deaths and prostrations continued to come from all directions.

Official high temperaturese reported to the Weather Bureau were as follows: Cincinnati, Evansville, Ind., Peoria, Ill., Springfield, Ill., and St. Louis, 98.

Two deaths and several prostrations were reported from Milwaukee.

Spreading rails as a result of the heat caused the derailing of an interurban street car bound from Milwaukee to Kenosha. The passengers were shaken up, but none was seriously injured. Cincinnati reported the hottest June day in the history of the weather bureau there. The official temperature was 97½ degrees, while street thermometers were almost 10 degrees higher. One suicide resulted from the heat, while there were a dozen prostrations. A store window full of fireworks was fired when the heat caused a premature explosion.

Thermometer Registers 101.

The thermometer in the Government kiosk on the public square registered 101. Thirteen died from the heat. Three were driven insane, two were killed and five seriously injured by lightning and 38 prostrations were reported to hospitals. The intense heat of the summer in Cleveland has caused the deaths of 148 babies and 12 adults.

Hammond, Ind., reported four deaths from the heat in that vicinity.

One hundred icemen in Grand Rapids picked out to-day, the hottest of the year, to strike for a raise. They got it.

Dayton, Ohio; Fort Wayne, Ind.; Davenport, Iowa; Cairo, Ill., and Concordia, Kans., showed temperatures of 96.

All business was suspended for three hours in Centralia, Ill., during the afternoon because of the heat. It was the hottest day in twenty years. Sycamore, Ill., reported an official temperature of 101 1-2.

Furs Reported Farther West.

A ray of hope was seen in reports from Salt Lake City and Duluth, where furs and overcoats were much in evidence, but the chilly winds so far have failed to reach the heat-swept belt.

Local Forecaster Henry J. Cox can see no immediate relief in sight. In fact, he is inclined to think still hotter weather is ahead.

A lake breeze came to the relief of Chicago during the afternoon, but it was confined to a narrow zone along the lake shore.

Babies Suffer Most.

The two days' heat wave already has increased infant mortality. Twenty-one deaths of infants were reported and according to the Health Department, this number is expected to increase daily unless there is a general and sudden drop in the temperature.

The heat had no effect on the grist of the divorce mill in Chicago. Seventy-five cases were heard, despite the fact that the judicial force was short.

Reports of almost unprecedented heat continued to come from the South and West.

Missouri and Kansas still were in the grip of the hot wave. The maximum temperature at Kansas City was 95 degrees, but the humidity was great. Only one case of prostration was reported. Southeastern Kansas got some slight relief during the day, but the rest of the State sizzled, and in many sections work in the harvest fields was stopped.

Record in St. Louis.

St. Louis reported the hottest day of the year, the thermometer reaching 98 1-2 degrees. Despite the high temperature but one heat prostration was reported.

In Omaha, the official Government temperature was 98, but unofficial thermometers went as high as 102. Higher temperatures ruled throughout the State of Nebraska, Valentine reporting 104. No deaths were reported in Omaha, although there were many prostrations. Lincoln reported four prostrations, and scattering reports from the State at large bring the total prostration up to 20. The weather forecaster at Omaha holds out no hope of relief.

Practically all public work was suspended in Dubuque, Iowa, because of the heat. The thermometer was 96. One death resulted.

Judge Discards Coat.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 28.—"There is no use sitting here in the heat suffering," announced Judge James A. Collins, as he went on the bench in police court to-day with his coat off. "The order of coatless license will continue in effect during the present game with the temperature."

The entire audience in the courtroom soon was coatless. The thermometer reached 94 degrees at 2 o'clock this afternoon. No serious prostrations were reported.

ARKANSAS 'BLUE SKY' LAW TO BE APPLIED WITH VIGOR

LITTLE ROCK, June 28.—State Auditor Coffman to-day announced he would vigorously enforce the "blue sky" law covering operations of stock companies in Arkansas, now that the courts have upheld the validity of the statute. The law forbids the sale of corporation stock until sufficient bond is given to indemnify purchasers.

Taylor Warns Agin' Dog Day Squabbles

Tempers Run High Then and Consequences Are Serious, City Clerk Declares.

Walter Taylor, City Clerk and philosopher of the City Hall, Saturday strongly advised that all political rows and police scandals be cleared up and settled before the beginning of dog days. He explained that then men's tempers ran higher and that serious trouble would develop.

"People are just naturally mad in dog days," he said. "The period begins with the rising of the dog star about July 28, and ends with its setting, about September 5. The compelling motives we now have in political circles for fighting must be eliminated before that time."

Shrieks of Parrot Cause Police Raid

Threats Shouted From Locked Room in Lodging House Prove Only Maunderings of Bird.

JOPLIN, MO., June 28.—"Come out of there or I'll beat your brains out," was the shout which sent Charles McManamy, a policeman, hurrying up a stairway on Main Street to-day while an excited crowd thronged the street below.

The threatening shriek emerged from a room in a lodging house, and the policeman had to kick in the door. He found only a parrot perched on a dresser.

8 SUSPENDED POLICEMEN ALL DENY CHARGES

Declare They Visited Auburn Avenue Resort Only to Catch Woman Selling Whisky.

during the five days she can not receive any roomers or boarders. The woman, it is asserted, has been calling the place a rooming house. Information has come to Chief Beavers, it is reported, that certain police officers have not only been seen drinking liquor in the place, but that they have been drinking in company with the negro inmates.

Born Has Complete Denial.

The four policemen who were suspended Saturday, J. P. Born, Max C. Folds, J. E. McDaniel and J. J. Jackson, conferred with Chief Beavers Saturday afternoon. Born, who is accused of frequenting the place in company with Policeman Folds, declared he had never been in the house.

Folds admitted to Chief Beavers that he had visited the place six or seven times, but said he was alone, and that he did not drink. He went there to get evidence, he told the chief.

Policeman Jackson admitted that he had visited the house, but said he went there on police business. He denied participating in the drinking bouts.

McDaniel Reported Drinking.

J. E. McDaniel told Chief Beavers that he had gone there, but that he had never seen Jackson drinking. The information the chief had was that Jackson had drunk liquor there while in company with McDaniel. McDaniel said he had told his sergeant that he thought perhaps Jackson drank while on duty. McDaniel was not charged with drinking. It is asserted he knew of the place and failed to report it.

Chief Beavers declared Saturday that Ola Bradley, the keeper of the house, has been arrested six times since 1910 for disorderly conduct at the Auburn Street joint. On the night of May 19 two negro men entered and engaged in a fight in her place, and one of them was shot and killed.

Turkish Bath Cures Rheumatism at Home

Costs But 2c a Bath.

Quickly Cures Kidney Trouble, Nervous Prostration and All Skin Diseases.

The Robinson Thermal or Turkish bath, taken at home, is becoming a rage. Those who have used the bath have been completely carried away with enthusiasm because of the astonishing results obtained.

Well known physicians say that the Robinson Thermal Bath at home is about to become an almost universal conqueror of disease. This is not an exaggeration. Any man or woman can prove its results inside of 24 hours, in some cases 30 minutes.

In cases of rheumatism, especially, the uric acid poison is extracted from the system through the pores, almost as liquids are sucked up through a straw. Drugs merely smother the poison or ease the pain. They do not extract the poison from the body.

Just read this letter:

"I loaned my cabinet to an old friend all crippled up with rheumatism, last May. Feet, legs, and hands badly swollen. He had spent some time at different Hot Springs without relief. A week ago he started in to use the cabinet, taking the steam heat in the morning and the dry heat at night, before going to bed. He kept this up a week, and yesterday and to-day he was as well as ever.

"GEORGE A. FREEMAN,
"Mgr. Temptation Mining and Milling Company, Silverton, Colo."

Anyone can now take Robinson Thermal baths at home and at a cost of only about 2c a bath. They make the thick, sluggish blood normal, take out the impurities and cure "spring fever" right off. The only way to take these baths is by the use of the Robinson Thermal Bath Cabinet, which is a unique and marvelous invention.

That great book, "The Philosophy of Health and Beauty," retail price $2.00, free at our Main Store upon request for a limited time only. Be sure to get a copy. Also see the interesting demonstration of the Robinson Thermal Bath Cabinets; no obligation to purchase. Jacobs' Pharmacy, Main Store and Laboratory, 8-10 Marietta Street.—Adv.

MISS FRANCIS MADE BRIDE OF CLAUDE DOUTHIT

Prominent Young Couple Married With Brilliant Ceremony. Many Visitors See Nuptials.

The marriage of Miss Martha Francis and Claude Douthit took place Saturday evening at 8:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery Francis, on Juniper Street. The bridal party included a matron of honor, Mrs. Charles Shelton, and best man, William Schroder. The bride entered with her father, the ceremony being performed in a beautifully decorated drawing room before an altar of palms and tall, white lilies.

On either side of the white satin priedieu were clusters of valley lilies. The windows and doorways were wreathed in smilax, and palms were banked in the corners of the apartment, the mantel covered in small ferns and green baskets of valley lilies.

Bride Wears White Crepe.

The bride, a talented and beautiful young woman, wore a gown of white Parma crepe, with corsage of princess lace, which was draped over the skirt also, the draperies caught in front with a pearl ornament and orange blossoms.

A little bolero of lace extended to the back in cape effect, from which flowed the long court train of satin, tulle and princess lace. The veil was arranged in cap effect, frills of soft princess lace caught with clusters of orange blossoms around the face of the bride, who carried a bouquet of bride roses and valley lilies.

The matron of honor, who was recently married, wore her wedding toilet and carried pink roses. Mrs. Frances, mother of the bride, was gowned in white chiffon, hand painted, and draped over white satin, a garniture of heavy lace and touches of pink finishing the toilet.

Mrs. Dan Lyle wore white satin and lace. Mrs. Joseph Douthit and Miss Gertrude Douthit, of South Carolina, mother and sister of the bridegroom, were present.

Apartments Are Decorated.

The apartments were handsomely decorated for the wedding. In the library the Dutch window was adorned with potted tulips, and the mantel was banked in tulips and ferns. In the dining room pink roses and valley lilies filled a long floral basket in the center of the bride's table, which was surrounded by pink shaded tapers, an outlining of maidenhair fern and smilax reaching nearly to the end of the table.

On the canvas inclosed porch, draped in smilax and adorned with potted plants, the punch bowl was presided over by Misses Passie May Ottley and Lula Dean Jones.

The young couple left after the reception for an extended stay in the East, going first to Atlantic City. They will live in Memphis. The bride's going away costume was a smart tailored model in dark blue, worn with a white crepe blouse, and a dark blue hat, faced with white chiffon and adorned in white wings.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Wallace McCaw, of Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Halligan of Savannah; Henry Machiel, of Augusta; John B. Watkins, of Greenville, S. C.

Evelyn Thaw Tells Her Ambition Will Try Something Worth While Reveals Her Plans to Alan Dale

Evelyn Thaw in the days she took New York by storm.

Evelyn Thaw as she is to-day.

As Miss Nesbit, Now Dancing at the Hippodrome, and Booked for Paris and Vienna.

By ALAN DALE.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—It was "Hullo, Rag-Time," at the Hippodrome that brought Evelyn Thaw within my jurisdiction, as it has brought many others who I never expected to meet.

So, with the open sesame of elusive art as a go-between, "Miss Nesbit," as she is programed here, received me without hesitancy in her rooms at the St. James Hotel, off Piccadilly, and our art robbed me of qualms. It was quite early morning.

Evelyn Thaw wore a loose peignoire of a black, shiny something, slashed at the back with yellow. Her hair was loosely fluffed out; she was devoid of the slightest effort at make-up, her ivory-white face and her unreddened lips looking quite startlingly natural. She was as pretty as any picture of—herself, and though the edge of reluctant youth may have frayed a little, there isn't a shadow of a doubt on the score of Evelyn Nesbit's charm. Never in all the ladies I have professionally met have I found more self-possession, a keener poise and less self-consciousness than in Evelyn Thaw. She made me wonder. She spoke easily, gracefully, reassuringly, without a trace of hesitation or nervousness.

On the Spur of the Moment.

"It was awfully sudden," she said, as we sat opposite each other. "I had no idea of going back to the stage after all these years."

"How many?" I asked. "You need not answer."

"Oh, I'm not like that," she said, with the first wistful smile; "I don't mind recalling anything. The last previous time I appeared on the stage was in 1904 in 'The Wild Rose.'

"Well, on the Olympic, coming over, I met a lot of theatrical people, among them Lee Shubert, Martin Beck and Albert DeCourville. They all advised me to make the break, especially DeCourville, who is manager of the Hippodrome.

"He has just married Shirley Kellogg, by the bye. I thought it over carefully, for I was a bit afraid, you know." She seemed to take it for granted that I knew. I did; I quite understood. "If I had made the break in New York I should have been a 'freak,'" she said. "Oh, there have been other women who have been through trials like mine who first tried New York, and it was hopeless. So when DeCourville telegraphed me at Paris to come at once to London and appear I realized that it was up to me, and I went, afraid, of course, but you know I'm no novice at harrowing experiences."

"I was determined that nothing should force any attention from me to that sort of thing." She was now an artist before the public, and I was—me.

A Wild Turkey Trot.

"I had to do a wild turkey trot with a dancer, and he was hard to find. I had seen Jack Clifford at the Cafe De Paris, and I remembered that he used to dance with Irene Weston, so we engaged him and rehearsed for one week only at the Irish Club, opposite the Hippodrome. Oh! it was terrible work. He throws me around—I am tossed up in the air and I see my heels at an angle I never expected to view them. And I'm an old married woman, with stiff joints."

Evelyn Nesbit laughed. So did I. She was as simple and unaffected as the inevitable school girl. It was impossible not to like her. She amused me a lot.

"They sneaked us on at a Saturday matinee without announcement," she said, "and luck favored me. The turn went well, and we are a hit.

"I'm engaged for six weeks, with an option, and then I go to Paris, Berlin, Vienna, St. Petersburg, Moscow, Copenhagen——"

"And New York?" I asked.

"New York, surely," she replied, smiling, "when I feel that I've put it over, but not until then. Oh, I do want to earn my own living, and the stage is good, and I don't mind hard work. In the old days, when I had nothing on my mind but my hair, I used to shirk rehearsals. Now, I'm Johnny-on-the-spot. I don't mind how much we rehearse. In fact, I rehearse every day. I've always loved dancing, and have studied all the successful dancers. If only I don't get fat like Ethel Barrymore and others."

She Won't Get Fat.

"You couldn't," I opined, for she didn't look the part.

"I won't," she retorted; "it would be a great pity, and I have another ambition that I'll telf you, for it may surprise you. Do you remember what Jerome said about me?"

Again I refused to remember anything.

"Well, he said that there were four great actresses—Sarah Bernhardt, Eleanora Duse, Mrs. Fiske and myself. I don't forget that. Some day I may try to act—to do something worth while, something serious, something emotional. So there you are! You will laugh, because I know you are funny.

"Theatrical people take themselves very seriously, and they can't understand why you don't do the same, but you don't—you can be as funny as you like about me. I sha'n't mind a bit, for I really have a sense of humor, and I'm not very serious." She laughed again, and I was quite disarmed. Evelyn Nesbit had impressed me as I didn't believe I was going to be impressed.

Fickle Chief Slain By Mexican Rebels

Leader of Both Federal and Rebel Forces Is Ordered Shot by Court.

DOUGLAS, ARIZ., June 28.—Colonel Francisco Chiapa, alternately leader of administration and rebel forces in Mexico since the beginning of the original uprising against Perfirio Diaz, has been executed by rebel state troops near Guaymas.

He was taken prisoner by General Obregon, who won the battle at Oritz. An insurgent court martial ordered him shot.

Mobile Man Guilty Of Embezzlement

Hardaway Young, Wealthy, Former Hardware Company Head, Convicted in 1 of 4 Charges.

MOBILE, June 28.—Hardaway Young, prominent in business circles and wealthy, former president of the Southern Hardware and Supply Company, now bankrupt, was convicted here to-night of embezzlement and remanded to jail to await sentence, when he will appeal his case. Young was convicted of embezzling $125 of the firm's money before the bankruptcy. Two additional cases, charging embezzlement amounting to $25,000 in one case and $165 in another, and one charging forgery are yet to be tried.

Young disappeared last January, and it was then that the firm's affairs were found to be muddled and he was later indicted. Young is well known all over the South and in New York and Chicago.

WHY 200,000 PEOPLE NOW BATHE INTERNALLY

When you are ill, the first step your Physician takes is to clean out the Large Intestine.

He does this because the chances are ten to one that if you had no accumulated waste in the Large Intestine you would not have been ill at all.

The new process of Internal Bathing by means of the "J. B. L. Cascade" thoroughly cleanses the Lower Intestine, removes all waste and poisonous matter, and keeps it as pure as Nature demands it to be for perfect health.

It is Nature's own way of curing Constipation—simply warm water properly applied.

Enlightened physicians everywhere are using and prescribing it—

And instead of waiting to be ill, over 200,000 delighted Americans are warding off disease and increasing their efficiency and energy by its use.

Until recently the "J. B. L. Cascade" has been obtainable only by sending to its inventor, Charles A. Tyrrell, M. D., of New York City.

The demand for it now, however, has become universal, through the recommendations of those who are using it.

All at our main store and we will be glad to show you the "J. B. L. Cascade" and explain it in detail.

We are also distributing a very interesting booklet on internal bathing, called "Why Man of To-day Is Only 50 Per Cent Efficient," which can be obtained on request, without cost. Ask us for it to-day and inform yourself about this safe and sane method of curing constipation without drugs.

LOBBYISTS WAR ON TARIFF CHILD LABOR CLAUSE

Caucus May End by Thursday. Bill Will Go to Senate Next Week.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The same interests that attempted to prevent the enactment of a child labor law are now bending their energies to prevent the inclusion in the tariff bill of the amendment prohibiting the import of goods made either in whole or in part by child labor and convicts.

Senator Borah, who is watching the situation, says the Democrats will not yield to the importunities of importers who are attempting to nullify this important amendment.

Chairman Simmons said to-night that he expects to be able to report the tariff bill to the Senate by the latter part of next week. The caucus may conclude its deliberations by the middle of the week.

Senator Ashurst to-day offered an amendment putting woolen cloths, stockings, blankets and flannels, women's and children's dress goods, ready-made clothing and articles of wearing apparel generally on the free list.

This sweeping amendment led to a lively debate that ran the gamut of free trade, tariff for revenue only and protection. In the end the majority decided the amendment would be too far-reaching and it was voted down.

Senator Hoke Smith, explaining the action of the caucus in keeping countervailing duties on wheat and flour, said it was not the intention to make these countervailing duties general.

The attempt to reconsider the action of last night putting spool thread on the free list was not made.

CAROLINAN CONSIDERED FOR ARKANSAS VARSITY

LITTLE ROCK, June 28.—The board of trustees of the University of Arkansas to-day elected Professor J. C. Futrell acting president for ensuing year and named Professor Martin Nelson acting dean of State Agricultural College at Fayetteville.

The name of President Snyder of Wofford College, Spartanburg, S. C., was before the board in connection with the presidency of the university. Professor Futrell is head of the department of Latin and Greek.

BRYAN CONFERS WITH JAP ENVOY ON HEMET RAID

California Incident Said to Have Caused Setback to Amicable Adjustment of Differences.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The Japanese Ambassador, Viscount Chinda, called at the State Department today after the close of business hours, and had a conference with the Secretary of State on the alleged outrages against Japanese and Koreans at Hemet, Cal., and on the reply of the United States to the last protest of Japan.

At the Japanese Embassy it was said that the Ambassador had received a report from the Consul General at San Francisco and that it was laid before the Secretary of State. The embassy also stated that the Consul General had been instructed to make further investigation and a further report. Fresh instructions from Japan ask full explanation of the Hemet affair.

It is understood that the Japanese Foreign Office has been forced, because of the outbreak at Hemet, to show a firm hand again in order to square itself with public opinion in Japan. In other words, "the incident" at Hemet has apparently put back very seriously the plan of settlement, which had been substantially agreed upon.

It has been stated within the past ten days that the President and Secretary of State had the matter in shape and that it would require only some little further consideration by the President before the answer would be formally handed to Viscount Chinda.

Rattlesnake Cactus Blooms in Atlanta

Flower Opens Late In Afternoon and Wilts at Midnight, Like Cousin, the Cereus.

Many Atlantans had their first glimpse Saturday evening of a fantastic night flower, with delacate, fairy structure, that is the bloom of the Mexican Rattlesnake Cactus, a plant almost unknown to this section. The flower was in the garden of Miss M. B. Word, 601 Sells Avenue.

Like the Night-blooming Cereus, to which it is related, this exotic bloom of great beauty is short lived. Opening late in the afternoon, it closed before midnight, and its term of life was ended. The flower was large, fully twelve inches in greatest circumference, with fraglie white petals and with a bushy, yellow-tipped plume rising from the center. The cactus which bore the flower is sinuous and twining as a snake, hence its name.

TARIFF CUTS IN SENATE TO AID NATION'S DININGROOM

Many House Figures Lowered and Free List Increased — Despite Cuts, Bill Is Expected to Produce $5,000,000 More Cash.

Atlanta's Need for Help to Reduce the High Cost of Living Is Shown by Figures Indicating Soaring Price of Foodstuffs.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The revised tariff bill laid before the Senate Democratic caucus by Mr. Simmons, chairman of the finance committee, carries important reductions in the Underwood tariff bill rates on iron, steel and other metal products. It added cattle, wheat, pig iron, Angora wool, and many other articles to the free list, and increased rates on many classes of cotton goods and some silk products.

President Wilson's desires as to free sugar in 1916 and free wool at once, prevailed in the redraft of the bill. To the list of "market basket" reductions the Underwood bill contained, the Senate committee added many important items.

In the general level of its rates the "Simmons bill" represents a heavier cut from the present Payne-Aldrich rates than the House bill.

Senator Simmons believes the caucus will discuss the bill not longer than a week.

Simmons' Statement.

The bill probably will come to a vote in the Senate by September 1.

In a statement Chairman Simmons said:

"The revenues of the Government will be increased approximately $5,000,000, laid in hand with a reduction of the taxation following the reductions already made in the House bill. These increases in revenues will be made up by a tariff on bananas and restoration of the full internal duty of $1.10 per gallon on brandies used in fortifying wines.

"With regard to the sugar schedule no change was made from the provision of the Underwood bill except to strike out 'sugars tinctured and colored,' for fear that ultramarine blue used in bleaching sugar might be regarded as colored matter and thereby refined sugar become subject to a duty of 2 cents a pound.

"With regard to cigars and other tobacco products from the Philippines the provision of the Underwood bill permitting cigars with 80 per cent of tobacco the product of the Philippine Islands and 20 per cent the produce of foreign countries to be admitted into the United States free of duty, was stricken out of the bill. Only cigars and tobacco products exclusively of Philippine tobacco to be admitted free of duty into the United States."

The Liquor Schedule.

Of the amendment to the liquor schedule, the statement said:

"An additional section is added repealing so much of the act approved October 1, 1890, and acts amendatory thereto, so far as they relate to the use free of tax of spirits for the fortification of sweet wines, and providing that hereafter all wine spirits, grape brandy and alcohol so used shall be subject to the same tax as in other cases.

"It is intimated that this tax will result in an increase of revenue of approximately $7,000,000 per annum.

"The Senate Finance Committee followed the House and treated the cotton yarns as the House bill treated cotton cloth," the statement continued, "by adding a duty of two and one-half per cent upon cotton cloth when combed, bleached, dyed, mercerized or colored. This is the most important change that the Senate committee made in the House cotton schedule."

Retaliatory Clause.

The amendment permitting the President to proclaim special rates when foreign nations discriminate against the United States provides that he shall exercise this authority on certain articles, as follows:

"Fish, fresh, smoked and dried, pickled or otherwise prepared, 1 cent per pound; on wheat, 10 cents per bushel; on wheat flour, 45 cents per barrel; on coffee, 3 cents per pound; on tea, 10 cents per pound.

"On the following articles a duty not to exceed one and one-fourth times that specified: Earthen, stone and chinaware; lemons, cheese, wines of all kinds, malt liquors, knitted goods, silk dress and piece goods, leather gloves, laces and embroideries of whatever material composed, and articles made wholly or in part of same; toys, jewelry and precious, semi-precious and imitation precious stones."

Following are the principal changes made by the Senate Committee in the House bill:

Added to the free list:

Alizarin, single jute yarns, school books, cement, creosote oil, anthracene and anthracene oil, glaziers' and engravers' diamonds, not cut; miners' diamonds and diamond dust, crude artificial abrasives, flax and hemp tow; amber gum, valued at not more than 50 cents a pound; indigo colors, pig iron, wrought and scrap iron; ferro manganese and iron in slabs, blooms, loops or other forms less finished than iron bars, except castings; leather, including patent leather for shoes, harness and saddle leather; asphaltum, limestone rock asphalt, needles for shoe machines, photographic films and moving picture films, cyanide of potash; steel ingots, etc., not containing alloy; cattle, sheep and all other domestic live animals suitable for human food; wool of the angora goat and alpaca; paintings, etchings, sculptures, etc., of a "professional character."

Wheat on Free List.

Wheat, 10 cents per bushel in the Underwood bill, was added to the free list, but the Senate committee retained a retaliatory provision for a duty of 10 cents a bushel on wheat, 45 cents a barrel on flour and 10 per cent ad valorem on other wheat products when imported from a country that imposes duty on American wheat or wheat products.

A retaliatory duty of 10 per cent upon potatoes imported from countries imposing duties against the United States also was inserted. Potatoes were unreservedly on the free list in the Underwood bill.

Other changes affecting living cost were as follows, the new Senate rate being stated first in each instance:

Agricultural Products—Oats, 6 cents a bushel; House, 10 cents; oatmeal and rolled oats, 33 cents per hundred pounds, and oat feed, 9 cents per hundred; House, free list; cheese, 2 1-2 cents per pound; House 20 per cent; butter and butter substitutes 2 1-2 cents per pound; House, 3 cents; beets, 5 per cent; House, 10 per cent; eggs, frozen or othewise prepared, 2 cents a pound, House 2 1-2 cents; frozen or liquid egg albumen, 1 cent per pound. House, free list; peas, green or dried, 10 cents a bushel; House, 15 cents; flaxseed, linseed and other oil seeds, 15 cents a bushel; House, 20 cents; all other seeds, 5 cents pound; House, 10 per cent ad valorem; zante and all other seeds, 5 cents per pound; House, 10 per cent ad valorem; zante currants, 1 cent pound; House, 2 cents.

Fish, except shellfish, 25 per cent; House, 20 per cent; lemons, limes, oranges, grapefruit, shaddock and pomelos, 1-2 of 1 cent per pound; House rates ranged from 18 cents to 20 cents per package, according to size; bananas, 5 cents per bunch; House, free list.

Oils—Alizarin assistants, soaps, containing castor oil, all other alizarin and all soluble greases used in dyeing, softening, finishing, not specially provided for, 25 per cent ad valorem; House, 15 per cent.

Flaxseed and linseed oil, raw, boiled or oxydized, 10 cents per gallon; House, 12.

Olive oil, not specially provided for, 20 cents a gallon; House, 20 per cent ad valorem.

LOBBIES FIGHT REFORM BILLS IN LEGISLATURE

Child Labor Measure Opposed. Proposer Legislation Includes Many Improvements.

A lobby is already at work in the Legislature against the adoption of the child labor bill, which was filed in the Senate and House simultaneously, and the fight is said to be waged by labor sympathizers.

The bill, which provides for a low limit of 12 years in 1913, 13 years in 1914 and 14 years in 1915, has met with the approval of textile interests and has been predicted for a smooth passage through both houses. The objection of labor interests is not known.

While there have been intimations of a liquor lobby, the real general of the liquor interests, "Cousin Chawles" M. Lewis, is not on the scene. As a matter of fact, the efforts of the liquor interests are being centered on the fight being carried on in the Federal courts against the constitutionality of the Webb bill, and until this matter is settled, only a light campaign will be waged in the State Legislatures.

A method for providing the immediate payment of delinquent salaries for school teachers is expected to be one of the first matters to be disposed of. Governor Slaton's suggestion of a special tax has the approval of a large number of the members of both houses.

This follows the general tax reform, while other educational matters will also be brought up. The most important one will be the effort to have the State publish its own text books. A lobby against this bill by book publishers is also said to be at work.

Representative S. E. Berry, of Whitfield, will introduce a bill requiring all municipal and county school systems drawing money from the State to use the same text books. His fight was prompted by the conditions in his own county, where the town of Dalton uses different books from those in the county schools.

The compulsory education bill introduced by Representative Fullbright will be backed also by a strong fight. This bill requires the attendance at school of children under 12 years for at least 60 days in the year.

One of the most important matters during the week will be the question of an appointment of a commission to handle the Western and Atlantic Railroad proposition. That this will be so worked that the appointment of a commission will be made by the Governor is the belief of many.

DISSOLUTION OF HARRIMAN LINES APPROVED BY U.S.

Wilson and McReynolds Agree on Plans to Separate Southern and Central Pacific.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Attorney General McReynolds has approved the plan for a dissolution of the Harriman Railroad lines. It was announced to-day that President Wilson has approved the plan, but agreed with Mr. McReynolds that the courts should be asked to allow the Government time to see how it worked out in order that changes might be made should it not prove successful.

The District Court at St. Paul will be asked to sit next Monday to consider and accept the plan as conforming to the Supreme Court order of dissolution. Attorney General McReynolds has sent as his representative to St. Paul to take charge of legal matters there, G. Carroll Todd, special assistant, who has been working with him on the dissolution plan.

Officials of the Government say that it is the purpose of the Government to bring civil anti-trust suits for the dissolution of the Southern and Central Pacific Railroads, which was not provided in the general dissolution order of the Supreme Court.

Official announcement of the plan agreed upon is expected to-morrow for release when filed with the Federal Court. Unofficially, it is said the Pennsylvania Railroad is to give its interest in the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad for $38,000,000 of the shares of the Southern Pacific Railroad which are now held by the Union Pacific.

This leaves $88,000,000 worth of Southern Pacific stock which is to be sold by a trust company in such a way as to prevent control of the Southern Pacific by either the Union Pacific or its stockholders.

The effect is to give the Union Pacific practical control of the Baltimore and Ohio and the Pennsylvania practical control of the Southern Pacific.

MOVABLE CONVICT CAMPS TO BE USED BY BIBB COUNTY

MACON, June 28.—The Bibb County Road Board to-day decided to purchase movable camps for use of the convicts who are worked on the roads. Each wagon prison will accommodate 24 men. The Road Board figures that the time saved in taking the convicts to and from the stationary camps will be better utilized on the roads.

Son-in-Law Can Oust Mother-in-Law

Macon Justice Decides Wife's Parent Has No Place in Man's Home.

MACON, June 28.—The status of the mother-in-law was a question that figured in the Justice Court of Judge R. F. McCowen to-day. The Judge decided that the mother-in-law has no legal place in her son-in-law's home.

D. B. Branam owns two stores, and his wife has been in charge of one of them. She went to the country this week, and gave the keys to the store to her mother, Mrs. L. McCook. Mr. Branam demanded the keys of his store from his mother-in-law, but she refused to yield them. He then sued out a possessory warrant, and the Justice agreed with him. Mrs. McCook was obliged to return the keys.

After losing in court, Mrs. McCook wanted her son-in-law to settle the matter in a fist fight with her son, but the son-in-law declined.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY TO VIEW WORK OF EXPERT

MACON, June 28.—The Bibb County Agricultural Society will meet next Saturday morning and determine whether to make a visit to the experiment station at Griffin or to go to Athens and view the work of the State College of Agriculture. The members of the society have engaged a special train for the purpose of making a visit of this character.

Pigeons to Keep City Sane, Says Expert

Dr. B. Chester King, of Atlanta, Tells Chicago That Its Safety Rests With Doves.

CHICAGO, June 28.—If Chicagoans are to be saved from the mad house at all it will be by the pigeons.

Dr. B. Chester King, an Atlanta alienist, finds hope for the city's sanity in the pigeons that flutter about the Loop all day.

"Several times each day," says the doctor, "the man who works in an office building should go to a window with the expectation of seeing one or more doves. Should he spy them, I suggest that he forget all else. There is something in just the name 'dove' that has a soothing effect upon the nerves."

Pastor Gets Town To Give Day to Ball

All Girard Suspends Business to Attend Games, but There Is No Playing on Sunday.

GIRARD, KANS., June 28.—Girard has found a happy solution to the problem of Sunday baseball by setting out one day in the week when everybody suspends business operations and goes to the ball game.

This arrangement came through the suggestion of the Rev. M. L. Morrison, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, after considerable wrangling early in the summer between people who wanted ball games on Sunday and those who did not. The new arrangement was tried yesterday for the second time. Everyone is pleased and the blue laws are enforced.

REBELS STORM MEXICAN TOWN; MASSACRE 1,000

Federal Soldiers and Civilians Shot Down in Cold Blood at Durango.

CAPTIVES PUT TO TORTURE

Atrocities Practiced to Force Citizens to Reveal Hiding Places of Wealth.

MEXICO CITY, June 28.—One thousand soldiers and civilians were slaughtered by rebels when the city of Durango, capital of the State of the same name, fell into the insurgents' hands, according to word received here to-day from that city. Many of the victims were members of prominent families.

Men and women were tortured to death when they did not produce wealth at the bidding of the rebels.

Fighting between federals and insurgents is going on at Uruapam in the State of Michocan. Cuquio, in the State of Jalisco, was taken by rebels yesterday and the garrison put to the sword.

Rebels Advance on Juarez; Fight Nearer.

EL PASO, TEXAS, June 28.—Pancho Villa, Mexican rebel leader, who has announced his intention of taking Juarez and executing General Salazar, commander of the garrison, in the bull ring, established outposts within three miles of the town.

Ortega, who has 500 men, may cooperate with Villa. If Juarez falls, it will remove the most important Mexican port of entry on the United States border from Huerta and may result in the downfall of the Huerta government.

Prince of Wales Spends $1.25 a Week

Writes Home for More Money, but Mother Considers That This Amount Is Ample.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—The amount allotted to the Prince of Wales for pocket money has just become known. Every Saturday he receives just $1.25, which he terms his "old age pension." He is occasionally a trifle extravagant and mortgages his money in advance.

Toward the end of the last term at Oxford he was asked by a friend to join a party to visit the theater.

The Prince's reply was, "Sorry, old man, but I am clean broke."

"Why don't you write home for some more?" asked the friend.

"I did," replied the Prince, "but mother said I was too extravagant."

Mrs. Marshall Finds $2,000 House at Last

Wife of Vice President Refuses to Pay More, Wishing to Live Within Husband's Salary.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The long house hunt of Mrs. Marshall, wife of the Vice President, is probably over, as she has found a suitable house on Columbia Road, Northwest. Her hunt was prolonged owing to the fact that she set $2,000 yearly as the price they would pay. The Marshalls have said they must live within their salary, and Washington society is eagerly watching to see how they will manage with the many social and financial demands upon them. Mrs. Marshall wanted to go to the country, but feared it would be too far for the Congressional wives to visit.

Congress to Force White Slave Inquiry

Reasons for Postponement of Diggs-Caminetta Case by Department of Justice To Be Bared.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Investigation of the postponement of the Diggs-Caminetti white slave case by the Department of Justice must go on, is the edict of the Congressmen behind the resolutions.

They are determined to bare the entire correspondence between McNab and the Attorney General and uncover the influences behind the white slave and Western Fuel cases.

If the House for any reason fails to take up the investigation Tuesday, the Senate is determined to dig to the bottom of the matter itself. No "puff" or influence can block this inquiry, it is declared.

King George Finds Platonic Romance With Fair Countess

Monarch Pays Marked Attention to Wife of Lord Mar While Queen Mary Is Absent.

Special Cable to The Sunday American.

LONDON, June 28—Every one thought King George so extremely domestic and conventional that it has come as rather a shock to people outside court circles to find him paying marked attention to the beautiful Countess of Mar and Killie.

The lovely countess, who is in her prime and a favorite of King Edward, is to be found wherever the King is.

Lord Mar goes about very little, but it was noticed that he and his wife were included in the royal house party at Windsor Castle for the Ascot races.

When Queen Mary was absent from the races, Lady Mar was always at the King's side, but when Her Majesty was present Lady Mar mixed with the general crowd in the royal inclosure.

Lady Mar is very sympathetic and attractive. The inner circle at the court is intensely amused at this mild platonic flirtation.

Mrs. Astor Bars Too Fervid Trotting

Society Youth Comes to Grief When He Disregards Rules of Conduct Fixed by Hostess.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—Mrs. John Astor is becoming known in social circles as a hostess whose rules of conduct must be obeyed by her guests. One young man who, until recently, doubted this, is now lamenting his mistake. Mrs. Astor permits the "tango" and "turkey trot" at her dances, but insists that they be danced in moderation. When this guest so far forgot himself as to verge on to the vulgar, he was quickly shown the door.

Mrs. Astor's example is not followed by all of London's hostesses. At the entertainments of a certain duchess the ragtime is accompanied by a great deal of roughness, being usually danced with the lights out.

Early Cold Injures Crops of Michigan

Wheat Promises but Half a Crop, Hay One-third, and Fruit Outlook Is Poor.

LANSING, MICH., June 28.—Michigan Agricultural College field men and district supervisors report crop prospects of the State the poorest in years, due to the early cold, wet season and late frosts, followed by the present hot, dry weather.

Wheat promises little better than half a crop, hay one-third, oats one-half. Early potatoes have been badly frosted in sections and will not produce over one-quarter crop without rain.

Fruit is equally poor. Plums and grapes are expected to be about 30 or 40 per cent of a crop.

St. Louis Tourist Unexpectedly Finds Self in Noblewoman's Car and Romance Ripens.

NEW YORK, June 28.—James Hurley, a railroad man of St. Louis, while automobiling in Paris a year ago, ran his car into that of the Baroness Barbara Ursula Kalinowski of Welsbaden and was hurled into the tonneau, where the Baroness was sitting. He gave her his card and later offered her his heart.

Arriving here by the Hamburg-American liner Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, she left for St. Louis, where the Baroness will be married to Mr. Hurley.

Gatun Gates Stand Their Supreme Test

Atlantic Waters Reach Sea Level and Locks Must Hold Against Full Pressure of Water.

PANAMA, June 28.—The Atlantic waters which have been allowed to run slowly against the lower gates at Gatun are at sea level to-day. The large gates are being put to the actual test of full pressure for the first time.

The engineers are watching the rise of the water with interest, and they report that the gates are watertight. The water is at the 50-foot stage.

PRICES TO STAY AS THEY ARE NOW, SAYS SULZBERGER

NEW YORK, June 28.—"Meat will never be any cheaper in the United States than it is now," declared G. F. Sulzberger, of Sulzberger & Schwarzchild, on his arrival from Europe on the Mauretania. "The only effect the change in the tariff will cause will be to keep prices where they are. Without this revision in the tariff, there would undoubtedly have been a big jump in prices."

SLATON'S BILLS READY TO PASS

Inaugurated With Utmost Simplicity

Legislature Wants to Aid Governor

Inaugural Address of Slaton Urges New Taxation System

SWEEPING legislative reforms are urged by Governor John M. Slaton in his inaugural address and message delivered to the Legislature Saturday. Following are the ten most important reforms he urges:

1. An occupation tax on corporations, with the maximum $200 per annum on corporations of more than $1,000,000 capital; the tax on smaller corporations to be adjusted accordingly.
2. Changes in the registration laws. He says: "The present registration law should be so amended that when a voter has once proven his qualification by registering and being enrolled, he shall remain a registered voter unless disqualified for some cause due himself."
3. The need for good roads, with a highway commissioner or a commission. The message says: "An intelligent highway commission, or commissioner, clothed with the proper authority, could be the means of untold benefit in suggesting the proper methods of building roads."
4. A declaration that the sale of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the State's property, should not be considered. The problem of its disposal should be considered by a commission, with directions to report its recommendations and its reasons therefor.
5. The passage of a law abolishing the defendant's statement in criminal trials, and providing in its place that he be sworn as a witness, if he so desires.
6. The Legislature is urged to consider legislation making the carrying of concealed weapons a felony, subject to reduction to a misdemeanor by either judge or jury.
7. Consideration of proper and remedial banking laws. "The banks of a State perform public functions, and as such are properly subjected to governmental supervision," says the message.
8. The creation of a new office, to be known as State Auditor.
9. Sweeping reforms in the tax system of Georgia. The system in vogue in this State is wrong, and the equalization of taxation, either through enforcement of present laws or new correctives, is urged.
10. That the Legislature investigate the decline of the agricultural schools and take steps to apply the proper remedies.

Gainesville Naval Academy to Hold a Regatta on July 4

Riverside Cadets Expect Hundreds of Visitors to See Sports on the Chattahoochee.

GAINESVILLE, June 28.—The first regatta of the Riverside Summer Naval School and Camp, which was opened here Thursday, will be held on July 4. Hundreds of visitors are expected to be on hand to see the sports.

The naval school and camp has a large enrollment this year, students being registered from practically all of the Southern States, including Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana, Tennessee, South Carolina, North Carolina, North Carolina, Kentucky and Virgina.

Captain Patterson, of the Culver Ind., Military Academy, will have charge of the naval and swimming departments this year, while Professor R. E. Brooks, superintendent of the Dublin public schools, will assist in the academic department.

Georgia Bankers to Urge Laws at This Legislative Session

One Provides Larger Salary for State Treasurer—Banking Department Considered.

The Georgia Bankers' Association, of which L. P. Hillyer, of Macon, is president and Haynes McFadden, of Atlanta, secretary, will urge new laws in the present session of the Legislature, according to announcement Saturday.

The association now has under advisement several bills including one for a constitutional amendment providing larger appropriations for the State Treasurer, who supervises $6,000,000, it is said, on a salary fund of $3,100.

The amendment, though, is being considered only by the association thus far. It has not been acted on. Haynes McFadden Saturday said a bill creating a banking department probably would not come up at this session of the Legislature.

New Executive Plans To Be at Work Early Each Day and to Devote Entire Time to State.

Inducted into office with a simplicity that harked back to the days of Thomas Jefferson, John Marshall Slaton will enter the Capitol Monday morning for the first time as Governor of the State of Georgia. Eager to begin work for the State and the people, Governor Slaton plans to be at his office at an unusually early hour, and will plunge into the affairs of the State of Georgia with the energy and ability that has made him a leading figure among the attorneys and citizens of Atlanta.

Backed by his dominant personality and with the support of practically every member of the Senate and the House of Representatives, Governor Slaton's administration promises to be as harmonious and productive of good as that of any Governor the State has ever had.

Gossip heard among the legislators gathered for the sessions of the General Assembly indicate that every reform urged by the new Governor will meet with the approval of the majority of the members of both Houses.

Bills Are Now Ready.

It is regarded as significant, and indicative of the success of Governor Slaton's administration, that many bills embodying the recommendations and suggestions made in his inaugural address have been prepared and will be introduced and action taken on them during the present session. Several already have been introduced, both in the House and Senate.

It is generally understood, though it has never been officially confirmed, that Governor Slaton will send no more messages to the General Assembly during the present session unless some unforeseen emergency should arise that demands immediate attention. He has given his views on the sort of legislation that is needed, and has often expressed his complete confidence in the ability and the willingness of the Legislature to do what was right and necessary without any prompting from the head of the State Government.

The respect and confidence that Governor Slaton feels in ex-Governor Brown is shown by the fact that almost without exception the men who served the latter during the four years of his incumbency will also hold office during the Slaton administration.

Jesse G. Perry, who has served Governor Brown as private secretary, will fill the same position under Governor Slaton.

Ulm Is Executive Secretary.

Hardy Ulm is also retained as Executive Secretary. The knowledge these men have, gained through their connection with Governor Brown, is expected to be one of inestimable benefit to Governor Slaton during the first few weeks of his incumbency.

That Governor Slaton intends to give all his time to the business of the State and serve them to the utmost of his ability is shown by the fact that though he owns a handsome home on Peachtree Street, and a country home on Peachtree Road, he has moved his family into the ancient executive mansion on Peachtree Street, and will occupy the building as his home during his term as Governor. He took possession of the mansion Saturday afternoon within an hour after his inauguration as Governor of the State.

After a short stay in the reception room of the Governor's office at the capitol, where Governor Slaton and ex-Governor Brown greeted their friends. Governor and Mrs. Slaton and Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mrs. Slaton's mother, were entertained at luncheon by ex-Governor and Mrs. Brown, at the executive mansion. After the luncheon Mr. Brown turned over to Governor Slaton the mansion that had been his home, and with Mrs. Brown boarded a train for Marietta.

Marietta Greets Brown.

They were given a tremendous reception by the citizens of the Cobb County capitol. Practically two-thirds of the population of Marietta, headed by a reception committee of prominent citizens, met them at the depot and welcomed them to the town that had been their home for many years before Mr. Brown became Governor. Mr. and Mrs. Brown plan to spend the coming week in Marietta, and will then retire for the summer to their Cherokee County farm.

Though the inauguration of Governor Slaton was simple, it is not thought that his home life will follow the same plan. Mrs. Slaton is recognized as one of the most brilliant hostesses in Atlanta, and society folk are all agog over the rumored plans of a brilliant social campaign which it is generally understood Mrs. Slaton will inaugurate as soon as she has completed her establishment as the first lady of the State. An inaugural reception will be held July 2.

The precedent set by Governor Brown and continued by Governor Slaton of eliminating all pomp and display from the inaugural ceremonies has aroused considerable favorable comment throughout the State, especially among the members of the Legislature, and it is probable that Georgia will never see a return to the "brass band" inaugurals of former years. The inauguration of Governor Slaton was, if anything, just a little more simple than the last inauguration of Governor Brown. There was no display of any sort, and the very absence of elaborate ceremony added to the strength and impressiveness of the occasion.

Sweeping Reform in System Of Taxation Urged by Slaton

Laws to aid the finances of Georgia and sweeping reforms of the tax system of the State are stressed in the inaugural message of Governor Slaton.

In part, Governor Slaton said:

Our system is wrong. The Legislature can appropriate what it pleases, and the tax rate remains the same. The Legislator has made himself a favorite with his constituency by voting for every popular appropriations and nothing suffers but the State's credit.

Unless some check be made, an increase of revenue will be of no avail in preventing the financial embarrassment of the State. Under the enthusiasm of the moment one appropriation bill may exhaust it.

More than four-fifths of the States of the Union derive revenue from what is known as an inheritance tax. I am informed that this tax is the subject of least complaint.

This form of tax has been approved by the highest authorities and is one of the easiest borne and subject to fewer hardships than any other. The inheritance tax is to some extent a corrective.

Corporation Taxation.

Prior to the year 1905, many efforts were made to collect an occupation tax from corporations. Governor Terrell, in his message of the year 1905, recommended a tentative privilege tax based on capital stock of $100,000 per year on corporations having a capital of $1,000,000, or over. He anticipated from this source more than $100,000 a year, and thought that such sum could reasonably be expected without a hardship. The State, however, has not received one-half this sum, and during the year 1913 the estimated revenue from this source is $48,000.

I recommend that the maximum occupation tax on corporations having $1,000,000 capital and over be $200 per annum, and the tax on corporations of less capital be adjusted accordingly.

Equalization of taxes, either through the enforcement of present laws, or new correctives, so that each may bear his proportionate burden, would not mean the increase of taxes upon any one now performing his duty, but would rather mean the lightening of his unfair portion of the load. I commend this subject to your attention.

Bonded Debt To Be Refunded.

An additional reason for establishing and maintaining the State's finances on a sound basis is the necessity of making provision for more than one-half of the entire bonded debt of the State, maturing in 1915. This is an imperative duty resting on this Legislature.

No sinking fund was provided by law to retire the bonds aggregating $3,679,900 which are due in 1915. The entire State's debt is $6,452,500, which does not include the obligations to the University, amounting to $291,500, and the landscrip fund of $90,000.

All the debt of $6,452,500 is provided for, or will be provided for, by the sinking fund required to be raised annually until the debt is paid off, except the $3,679,000 which falls due in May and July, 1915.

If refunding bonds were issued in 1915, making the first $100,000 fall due in 1935, then the sinking fund could be made to run continuously and retire each year, until paid, $100,000 of this series of 1915 refunding bonds.

This plan would seem advisable in order to relieve the treasury and the people of the increased burden at this time, unless financial conditions at the time of the sale of the bonds should demand that their redemption begin at an earlier period in order to effectuate their more satisfactory disposition.

Registration of Voters.

We believe the present registration law should be so amended that when a voter has once proven his qualification by registering and being enrolled, he shall remain a registered voter unless disqualified for cause due to himself.

The foregoing extract from the last platform upon which I was elected, expresses a principle which deserves universal acceptance. It contemplates no change of the constitution which provides for the qualification of the voter.

I recommend that the present registration law be amended to correct the injustice indicated. It would always be provided that the voter must have paid his taxes and not subjected himself to any of the disqualifications provided by law.

Highways.

It is needless to impress upon you the importance of our highways. Their value is an asset of the entire State. An intelligent Highway Commission, or Commissioner, clothed with proper authority, could be the means of untold benefit in suggesting proper methods of building the road adapted to the locality, or in solving the problems of engineering which might arise in various sections.

I call your attention to the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the lease of which terminates in 1919. No one, I apprehend, would or should consider its sale, but the problem of its disposition should be considered by a commission with directions to report its recommendations and its reasons therefor.

To delay this matter will mean to put the State at the inexcusable disadvantage of unpreparedness when the time arrives for imperative action.

The Criminal Code.

One of the fundamental purposes of government is the protection of life and safety of the citizen. If the rules of evidence are so shaped as to prevent the discovery of the truth, and if the State is deprived of the means of sifting the facts, the judges and juries are not to be blamed if crimes are allowed to go unpunished.

It is an anomaly that a defendant should take the stand, make any statement that he sees fit or that his shrewd lawyer has prepared, and being immune from cross-examination, demand that the judge shall charge the jury that they may accept his unsworn statement in preference to all the evidence in the case.

I, therefore, recommend that a law be passed abolishing the defendant's statement, and providing in its place that he be sworn as a witness, if he desires, but his failure to be so sworn be not subject to adverse comment by prosecuting counsel. This is in accordance with current Federal and State law.

The legislation in Georgia against carrying concealed weapons has in recent years been conspicuous. It has been suggested by the law of self-preservation. Daily we read of men who have shot others, and have been acquitted on the old statement that the deceased threw his hand on his hip pocket, and the defendant shot in fear of his life. When searched, the dead man was found generally unarmed.

If the carrying of concealed weapons were made a felony, subject to be reduced to a misdemeanor by either judge or jury, the deterrent effect of such a law would be the saving of many a life. I earnestly recommend to you the consideration of this question.

Banking Laws.

The banks of a State perform public functions, and as such are properly subjected to governmental supervision. The bankers of the State, with the desire of maintaining a high standard of responsibility and of affording guarantees against improvident management, that imperil the money of the people, recommend legislation looking to the accomplishment of these objects. I commend this subject as one worthy of your serious consideration.

My predecessors have recommended the creation of the position of State Auditor, and in this recommendation I heartily concur. His services could be utilized in checking the cost of new buildings for which requests may be made by the various institutions. Those who have served on the appropriations committees are aware of the inadequate facilities of the State in arriving at the amount of the necessary expenditures.

The Constitution.

The Constitution is the expression of the supreme law of the land. It can only be changed by the people speaking in their sovereign capacity. In order that they may vote intelligently on any proposition it is essential that they understand it. I recommend that in proposing Constitutional amendments, you plainly indicate the proposition to the voter in such language that he may understand the meaning of the question submitted.

My predecessor has called attention to the fact that some of the agricultural schools are well attended, while others receive little patronage, whether due to the matter of location or lack of interest, or from what cause, I am unable to say. Each obtains the same appropriation from the State for maintenance. I recommend that you investigate their condition, and apply the proper remedies.

Slaton is Inaugurated With Simple Ceremonies.

With ceremonies that gained in strength and impressiveness through their very simplicity, John Marshall Slaton to-day became Governor of the State of Georgia, succeeding Joseph M. Brown. The oath of office was administered by Judge William H. Fish, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, at 12:02 o'clock.

Governor Slaton was inducted into office in the presence of a brilliant assemblage of Georgia men and women, including his own and the retiring Governor's family and intimate friends, members of the State Legislature and prominent jurists. For the first time in the history of the State the United States was represented by Judge William T. Newman and Judge Don A. Pardee, of the Federal Court. They occupied seats directly in front of the Speaker's stand.

Galleries and the floor of the House were filled with spectators. By 10 o'clock virtually every seat in the visitors' gallery was taken and room had been provided for a large number on the floor. In the corridors another crowd, unable to gain entrance into the hall, waited patiently for a glimpse of the new executive.

Joint Session Held.

Neither the House nor the Senate transacted any business, convening at 11 o'clock and immediately taking a recess. At 11:45 o'clock both Houses again convened, and the Senate at once adjourned and marched to the House, where members took seats in a semi-circle about the speaker's stand. In the front row of seats about the speakers' stand sat the intimate friends and relatives of Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton. Twenty-eight chairs had been reserved for members of Governor Slaton's family and eight for the family and friends of Governor Brown.

In Governor Slaton's party were Major William F. Slaton, father of the Governor; Mrs. John M. Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Slaton, Justice and Mrs. S. C. Atkinson, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Waldo, Mrs. W. H. Blanchard, Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant, John M. Slaton, Jr., W. F. Slaton, Jr., Slaton Waldo, Albie Waldo, William D. Grant, Miss Margaret Grant, James Jackson Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Phillips and Miss Robinson. In Governor Brown's party were Mrs. Joseph M. Brown, Miss Cora Brown, Charles Brown, Miss Sally Brown, Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Connolly, Mrs. Frances Connolly and Thomas W. Connolly.

Governor Brown Receives Friends.

Governor Brown arrived at the Capitol shortly before 11 o'clock, and went at once into his private office, where he received a number of friends and visitors.

Governor-elect Slaton drove up in his automobile to the Washington Street entrance of the Capitol, accompanied by Mrs. Slaton and his father, Major William F. Slaton. They proceeded to the reception room of the Governor's office, where the inaugural procession formed.

Promptly at 11:45 o'clock Speaker Burwell called the House to order, and immediately thereafter members of the Senate arrived.

The inaugural procession moved from the Governor's office on the first floor. The procession was led by Governor-elect Slaton and Governor Brown. After them came ex-Governor Henry D. McDaniel, and then followed the Justices of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals, the Federal Judges, the State House officers, the members of the joint legislative committee on inauguration, and the immediate families of Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton.

Governor Slaton Presented.

Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton took their places on the Speaker's stand, the first standing to the left of Senator Randolph Anderson and Speaker Burwell and the latter to the right. Rev. James B. Robbins, of the Trinity Methodist Church, opened the ceremonies with prayer, in which he invoked Divine aid for Governor Slaton in the conduct of the affairs of the State.

Randolph Anderson, President of the Senate, presented Governor-elect Slaton to the people of Georgia and the Legislature, and immediately thereafter Justice Fish administered the oath of office. In a speech expressing great confidence in the ability of the incoming executive, Governor Brown presented Governor Slaton with the Great Seal of the State of Georgia.

After the inaugural ceremonies Governor and Mrs. Slaton and ex-Governor and Mrs. Brown lunched at the Executive Mansion. Ex-Governor and Mrs. Brown retired to their farm near Marietta, and Governor Slaton took possession of the mansion in the afternoon.

Church Bars Wedding And Girl Files Suit

Breach of Promise Action Started, Though Both Parties Declare They Are Ready for Ceremony.

ATCHISON, KANS., June 28.—Although both parties to a $25,000 breach of marriage contract suit filed here recently say they are willing to wed, the suit will go on.

Miss Mary Falk, of Purcell, alleges that she entered into a verbal contract to marry William Burke, of Troy, a few months ago.

Church officers say they will not marry Burke because he is unable to procure a sworn statement from his mother in Ireland certifying to the time of his baptism in the Catholic Church. Burke says he will marry Miss Mary Falk any time, and, in her petition for the suit Miss Falk says she is still willing to marry Burke.

But as a priest will not marry them, as both are unwilling to forsake their religion, Miss Falk says she can not consistently dismiss the suit, although she still loves Burke. Miss Falk's petition alleges that Burke is wealthy.

Wheat, 10 cents per bushel in the Underwood bill, was added to the free list, but the Senate committee retained a retaliatory provision for a duty of 10 cents a bushel on wheat, 45 cents a barrel on flour and 10 per cent ad valorem on other wheat products when imported from a country that imposes duty on American wheat or wheat products.

A retaliatory duty of 10 per cent upon potatoes imported from countries imposing duties against the United States also was inserted. Potatoes were unreservedly on the free list in the Underwood bill.

Other changes affecting living cost were as follows, the new Senate rate being stated first in each instance:

Atlanta Medical Schools Unite to Make Big College

National Recognition Will Be Obtained Through Merger—Officers and Faculty of Institution Are Unanimous.

A union of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons and the Atlanta Medical College has been effected, and as a result an institution to be known as the Atlanta Medical College has been formed. Details of the consolidation were announced Saturday by representative committees from both colleges.

Ambitious plans for the new college are outlined. The immediate effect of the consolidation will be the placing of the Atlanta Medical College in Class A by the American Medical Association. It renders the newly formed college eligible to membership in the Association of American Medical Colleges, admitting its graduates to practice anywhere in the world. Its doors open with the new college year in September.

The consolidation will force the abandonment of the property of the Atlanta School of Medicine on Luckie and Bartow Streets and the establishment of a considerable plant in connection with the present equipment of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons on Butler and Armstrong Streets.

Officers Are Announced.

The new college will be officered by W. S. Elkin, dean, and W. F. Westmoreland, president, of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons, and by two officers to be nominated by the Atlanta School of Medicine.

All these plans were announced by a committee from the Atlanta School of Medicine, consisting of George H. Noble, L. C. Fischer and Edward G. Jones, and a committee from the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons, whose members are W. S. Elkin, W. F. Westmoreland and C. W. Strickler.

Consideration of the proposition has been under way for some time, stated the committee members.

"It has been the one object of these deliberations," they announced, "to organize an institution of dignity and of permanent promise, whose graduates will receive general recognition throughout the United States—an institution so constituted as to make it a real public asset, and so conducted as to expect and to deserve the heartiest popular commendation."

So complete have been the preliminary deliberations that before word of the union had been breathed every plan was worked out, even to the appointment of a faculty and of a board of trustees.

The faculty proper will consist of the following physicians:

Department of Medicine—W. S. Kendrick, C. W. Strickler, R. T. Dorsey, J. C. Johnson, J. C. Olmsted, E. C. Thrash, E. B. Block, C. E. Boynton, L. B. Clarke, George M. Niles, L. M. Gaines, S. R. Robe..s and B. Wolff.

Department of Surgery—W. F. Westmoreland, F. W. McRae, E. G. Jones, W. S. Goldsmith, F. K. Boland, J. L. Campbell, L. C. Fischer, M. Hoke and A. L. Fowler.

Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology—George H. Noble, W. S. Elkin, E. C. Davis and S. T. Barnett.

Department of Materia Medica and Therapeutics—M. M. Hull, L. B. Clarke (with other salaried associates).

Department of Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat—F. P. Calhoun, Dunbar Roy and J. M. Crawford.

Department of Physiology—George Bachman (with other salaried associates).

Department of Anatomy—J. W. Papez (with other salaried associates).

Department of Pathology—John Funke (with other salaried associates).

Department of Chemistry—Edgar Everhart (with other salaried associates).

Associate Faculty Not Named.

The associate faculty has not been completed. It will embrace the names of 50 or 75 additional physicians of prominence in the city.

The probable board of trustees of the Atlanta Medical College will be Reuben R. Arnold, H. M. Dorsey, Judge George Hillyer, G. S. Lowndes, E. W. Martin, F. J. Paxon, Judge T. P. Westmoreland, H. H. Cabaniss, John J. Eagan, John H. James, H. J. Lowry, Wilmer L. Moore, J. Carroll Payne, C. E. Currier, T. A. Hammond, Marion M. Jackson, R. F. Maddox, Bishop C. K. Nelson, J. S. Prather and W. S. Witham.

The union of the two colleges is significant as a historical event. The name of the first medical college founded in Atlanta was that of the consolidated school—the Atlanta Medical College. This institution was formed in 1854, was suspended during the war and its building used as a hospital. It was merged in 1898 with the Southern Medical College, which was organized in 1878, to form the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons.

The Atlanta School of Medicine was organized 1905. Both the colleges erected new buildings in 1906, Andrew Carnegie having given $25,000 and Dr. A. W. Calhoun $15,000 to the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons for this purpose, other citizens giving various sums. The Atlanta School of Medicine has also operated a hospital in connection with the college.

Sell Luckie Property.

It is the present plan to put on sale the Luckie Street property of the Atlanta School of Medicine, and to provide for the college work to be carried on entirely at the Butler Street plant, ample room being there for additional buildings and extensions. The proximity of the Grady Hospital is an additional reason for transferring everything to that locality.

The total enrollment in the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons last session was 334, and in the Atlanta School of Medicine 218. The announcement by the joint committee declares:

"It will not be the future intention to increase the enrollment so much as to elevate the standard of professional instruction. After January, 1914, one or more years of work in a literary college will be required for entrance, the minimum requirement this fall being a high school education."

Committee Tells Hopes.

The committee, in a statement to the public, tells of its purposes and hopes, saying:

"The recent awakening of the public mind to a knowledge of the past shortcomings of medical education, the evident cordial interest in plans, wherever launched, to invest medical education with a degree of excellence which will protect the public as it ought to be protected; the late tendency of private philanthropy to recognize properly organized medical colleges as deserving of its bounty; the recognition promised abroad to the proposed institution, which recognition could not have been obtained as long as the colleges remained separate; the strategic advantages of Atlanta as the site for a medical college of superlative merit; the excellence of the professional talent in the city; the immense momentum implied in a united instead of a divided professional energy—all these and other considerations alike of sentiment and of common sense, have seemed to us to constitute a responsibility which it would discredit us to neglect, and an opportunity which it would distinguish us to embrace."

MOVE BEATEN FOR FREE WOOL GOODS

Clothing Duty Under New Tariff Schedule Will Be From 20 to 35 Per Cent.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The question of dutiable wool manufactures in the tariff bill was raised in the Senate Democratic caucus to-day and brought a lengthy debate. Senator Chamberlain, of Oregon, favored the free listing of these commodities, arguing this was only fair to the public and the manufacturers with raw wool on the free list.

The goods affected are stockings, socks and blankets, women's and children's dress goods, ready-made clothing and other articles of wearing apparel. Ad valorem rates, ranging, from 20 per cent on stockings to 35 per cent on ready-made clothing are in the bill as reported to the caucus.

At the recess of the caucus Senator Simmons announced that the proposition to free list wool manufactures was beaten by a close vote.

"We expect to finish the hemp, silk, paper and sundries schedules to-night," said Senator Simmons, "and take up the administrative and income tax features of the Underwood bill Monday."

PUPS AND CHICKS SWAPPED.

RAVENNA, OHIO, June 28.—A fair exchange that satisfied both swappers was pulled off here when a Scotch collie transferred her litter of seven puppies to a Barred Rock hen for her brood of ten chicks.

FLAGLER WILL UNCHANGED AND RELATIVE'S HINTS OF A CONSPIRACY FALL

Codicils Show That Millionaire Railroad King Left Only Son With but Small Share of His Fortune. Bulk of Wealth Held in Trust.

By TARLETON COLLIER.

WEST PALM BEACH, June 28.—While a number of the charges made by Amasa Flagler, of California, regarding strange circumstances surrounding the death of Henry M. Flagler to-day are found to be substantial, the principal accusations that codicils were added to the Flagler will, completely changing its effect, and that the dying man was given insufficient medical attention appear to fall without support.

Seven codicils to the will are not significant. Investigation into the charges by Amasa Flagler that dark work accompanied the end of his kinsman was conducted by The Sunday American. The stories of the California man that Henry M. Flagler was kept in deep seclusion until the end; that visitors, including himself, were refused admittance; that the most rigid privacy shrouded every detail of the railroad king's illness—all are found to possess a substantial basis of fact.

Palm Beach, deserted, boarded up, uncanny in its summer desolation, today furnishes the setting for a belated story of tragedy—the tragedy in the death of Henry M. Flagler, the Florida railroad king, who died May 20, 84 years old, his brain worn out.

Built Empire;
Dies in Seclusion.

The story is how a man who had built an empire came to die in seclusion on a deserted island, attended by unskilled nurses, denied to visitors—and some of them his kinsmen—and with never a word given out as to his condition, from time to time.

Amasa P. Flagler, of California, who says he is the closest male relative of Henry M. Flagler, except for Harry Harkness Flagler, a son, came to Palm Beach while the financier was dying, and was refused a sight of him. To-day he is talking freely to newspaper men, hinting at mystery in the death of Henry M. Flagler, charging that the great railroad man was not given the proper treatment or care, and that Mrs. Flagler, J. B. Parrott and Dr. W. R. Keenan, the three who were practically alone with him toward the end, and who, he points out, were the beneficiaries under the will, kept visitors away purposely.

Amasa P. Flagler, according to the variety of opinions maintained by residents of Palm Beach, is anything from a faker to a justly aggrieved person. The fact remains, however, revealed as a result of investigations by The Sunday American, that Henry M. Flagler died in loneliness and in enforced seclusion.

He died in a small room of a frame cottage on the Atlantic beach, to which he had been moved some time before the end. From one window is to be seen "The Breakers," his own great hotel. It has been locked and deserted since March. Through the other window there is the sight of a stretch of parched grass, the beach and the ocean.

George Conway, a boy who waited on Mr. Flagler during his illness, said to-day that the dying man kept his eyes always on the ocean.

"He loved it," said Conway. "One time, not long before the end, he said to me: 'George, there is the greatest thing in the world,' pointing out at the sea. 'If there ever comes a time when you would be proud of yourself and of what you have done, think about that ocean. There is something greater, more wonderful than anything a man can ever make or become. Railroads and cities are nothing.' But a lot of the times he was not conscious to what went on."

Mr. Flagler was moved to the beach cottage from his mansion, "Whitehall," when summer began to set in at Palm Beach. He was moved at the combined orders of his physician, Dr. W. R. Keenan, and Mrs. Flagler. Dr. Keenan is Mrs. Flagler's brother. Because has was moved Amasa P. Flagler finds the basis for a denunciation of those who took care of him, declaring that his kinsman was taken to the empty beach cottage that he might be more securely isolated.

Joe Jefferson Died
In Same Cottage.

Investigation reveals that many of the statements made by Amasa P. Flagler in his interviews regarding the death of his relative are exaggerations. He is said to have declared that the beach cottage in which Henry M. Flagler died was old and dilapidated and isolated from the community. It is, however, "The Nautilus," one of a colony of seven cottages on the beach, and is within 200 feet of "The Breakers." It is leased for $5,000 a season of three months to the winter visitors from the North, and last season was occupied by "Fingy" Conners, the Buffalo politician. Joseph Jefferson, the actor, according to the beach traditions, died in the same cottage.

Local physicians, although none of them was called in to assist Dr. Keenan and Dr. Castleberry, watched the case as well as possible in view of the privacy attached to it. Several to-day said that they would have indorsed the move from Whitehall to the beach cottage, considering more desirable the sea breeze and the relief from the sultriness that is always the lot of Whitehall in the early summer.

West Palm Beach is divided into two hostile camps on the question of the treatment of Henry M. Flagler, many contending that the charges of a deliberate isolation and of inadequate care of the dying man may be substantiated by a chain of circumstances, and others laughing at the scandal that Amasa Flagler has sprung.

Trained Nurses
Succeeded by Boy.

The rapid decline of the railroad king began about March 1, when, already ill, he was injured by a fall in the reception hall of "Whitehall." He took to bed at that time, and never H. E. Bemis, wife of the manager of the "Royal Ponciana."

From the fact that the attending physicians are related to beneficiaries under Flagler's will, and that one, Dr. Keenan, is himself a beneficiary, Amasa Flagler has drawn evidence of irregular conduct in the care of Henry M. Flagler.

Little Told
From Bedside.

During the period of the financier's illness little definite news came from his bedside. Newspaper men of West Palm Beach and of Jacksonville declare that no bulletins were issued, and that inquiries were met always with indefiniteness.

For weeks Flagler lay thus. No one was admitted. The gossip of servants has lingered in West Palm Beach, declaring that the dying man in his delirium called frequently for his son, and frequently also for William Fremd, his gardener. The son, Harry Harkness Flagler, who has been estranged from his father for 21 years, was not summoned until by Amasa P. Flagler. Fremd, another for whom Mr. Flagler called, lived on the grounds, within a half a mile of the cottage, but was never taken to the sick room.

The same gossip has recorded that J. A. McDonald, of Miami, an old friend of Mr. Flagler, and Father McLoughlin, a Catholic priest of Miami, were others who could not see the sick man.

Along toward the end came Amasa Flagler. According to his own story, he had sent a telegram to herald his visit. Reaching Palm Beach, he was informed that he could not see the sick man. He declares that he virtually was ordered from the grounds by J. B. Parrott, vice president and general manager of Flagler's railroad, who became president by the express terms of the Flagler will.

Incensed, Amasa Flagler went to the citizens of West Palm Beach with his story. He had telegraphed ahead for a room in "The Breakers," but these were denied him. "The Breakers," he was informed, was closed for the season.

Telegram Sent
To Flagler's Son.

Amasa Flagler found quarters in "The Gables," a less pretentious hotel in West Palm Beach, whose proprietor, R. C. McGriff, listened to his story and to this day believes in him. Amasa Flagler was the first to send a telegram to Harry Harkness Flagler. "Your father is calling for you," is the message he sent.

According to the statement to McGriff Parrott, over in Palm Beach, heard that Harry Flagler was coming to his father's side, and came across to "The Gables" to engage a room and bath for the financier's son. There was no room for Harry Flagler, either, it seems, on Palm Beach.

No room and bath was available in McGriff's establishment, and Amasa Flagler offered to give up his suite to Harry Harkness Flagler. But Harry Flagler, when he arrived, stayed with an old friend in the town. He arrived in time to see his father alive.

Amasa Flagler declares that he was not allowed to see the body of Henry M. Flagler after death. The Tropical Sun, the daily paper of West Palm Beach, bears a story of how Amasa Flagler was leaving the town, full of wrath at his treatment. At the station, according to the story, he could obtain no information about his trains.

The employees at the railroad station, the Flagler railroad station, would tell him nothing. He asked information regarding a special train, and was met with an indefinite answer. Finally, he called a boy and commissioned him to obtain the information. The boy did. Upon his return with the message, Mr. Flagler is said to have given him $50.

"You are the only person connected with this road who has exhibited the slightest consideration or courtesy toward me," he told the boy, according to the story.

Undertaker Imported
To Conduct Funeral.

The body of the dead millionaire was taken in hand by an undertaker imported from Miami. Undertaker McGinley, in West Palm Beach, was not consulted. Citizens of the town believe this to be the case because Henry M. Flagler and the city of West Palm Beach had little in common. The two have been antagonistic of late years, in spite of the work of development which Flagler has done for East Florida, and a number of local ordinances and regulations were passed inimical to the Flagler interests.

Residents of West Palm Beach now declare that the feeling that grew up was not personal to Flagler himself, but was occasioned by actions of other officials of the Florida East Coast Railroad.

Flagler's funeral was held in St. Augustine, and his body placed in an elaborate vault which he had built in connection with the Memorial Presbyterian Church. St. Augustine he made his home, it is said here, because he was repelled by the attitude of West Palm Beach citizens.

Makes Charges
Against Beneficiaries.

According to his story, Amasa Flagler was denied a part in the funeral. He went on his way North, where he has made his sensational charges that Mrs. Flagler, Dr. Keenan and J. B. Parrott kept the dying financier secluded, denying all admission that they might maintain an influence over him.

The three are the principal beneficiaries under the will, and it is Amasa's inference that because they were with him continually, to the seclusion of others, their claims were made secure. He hints, in his interviews, that codicils to the original Flagler will were made under their domination, cutting out other legatees, particularly Harry Harkness Flagler, the son of the financier.

However, an examination of the will and codicils proves this accusation to be without foundation. There are seven codicils, but none materially effective.

The documents are in the court house in St. Augustine, where they have reposed since being made. The original will was drafted February 1, 1902, and names W. H. Beardsley, of New York; Dr. William R. Keenan, of Lockport, N. Y., the physician who was with him at his death, and J. R. Parrott, of Jacksonville, another of the little party with him most of the time during his last illness, as his executors and trustees. His wife, Mrs. Mary Lillie Flagler, he names as the residuary legatee, and his son Harry Harkness Flagler, he cut off with the relatively small legacy of 5,000 shares of Standard Oil stock. This, at the time of Flagler's death, was worth $642 a share.

Declares Son Didn't
Show Filial Regard.

"I have already given my son securities sufficient to bring him an income of $75,000 a year," the will stated. "My son has not shown for me the filial regard that would make me inclined to do more for him than is done by this item of my will."

No beneficiary will profit by the will, however, for at least five years. By its terms, a trust is created, the testator declaring:

"It is my intention in the future to foster, protect and properly develop such properties; and to provide against my decease while such properties are in process of development, and to relieve my beloved wife from the immediate cares and responsibilities of so varied and extensive interests, I hereby declare a trust for all my properties. From this trust is excepted $60,000 to the Stetson University and $20,000 to the Florida Agricultural College for the construction of a gymnasium.

The trust is to last five years, according to the will, and if the Florida East Coast Railway, or the Florida East Coast Hotel Company, at that time should require financial aid, then it is to continue as long as is necessary. Until the expiration of trust, Mrs. Flagler is to receive $100,000 a year and the Memorial Presbyterian Church of St. Augustine $3,000 a year.

Many Legacies
Left by Will.

Other legatees mentioned in the original will are: To receive $5,000, Miss Annie C. McKay, Mrs. Ella Green, Stephen A. Brave, John P. Beckwith, William H. Chamblis, Ed J. Triay, George W. Wilson, Bernard O'Brien, his coachman; George Holland, his butler, and Ida Scheiffer, his housekeeper; to receive $10,000, James A. McGuire, R. T. Goff, John Anderson, Fred Sterry, Joseph D. Price, Henry W. Merrill, J. A. McDonald, William H. Beardsley and Jasper G. Salter; to J. E. Ingraham, $20,000; to J. R. Parrott, $100,000; to C. D. Boice and L. C. Hayes, $2,500; to the Florida Agricultural College, $80,000; to the John B. Stetson University, $40,000; to Hamilton College, New York, $100,000; to the Memorial Presbyterian Church Society, $75,000.

By the terms of the will J. R. Parrott is to continue in the same relation to the Flagler interests as he maintained during the lifetime of the testator.

There are seven codicils to the will, made, respectively, February 17, 1903; April 28, 1904; January 8, 1906; April 7, 1908; December 22, 1910; January 10, 1912, and September 13, 1912.

It is these, Amasa Flagler declares, which are damaging to the original document, but none of them seem materially to affect it. The first codicil gives his trustees the power to complete the southern extension of the Florida East Coast Railroad, which he denied them in the will.

The second codicil defines the meaning of the term "expiration of trust," which occurred frequently in the will, and provides that if Harry Harkness Flagler is not living at the end of the "expiration of trust" then the 5,000 shares of oil stock lapse to the estate. In this codicil also he revoked the legacies of $80,000 to the Florida University and $40,000 to the John B. Stetson University, and provided for bequests of $10,000 to J. P. Greaves, Robert Murray and Leland Sterry, and giving W. H. Beardsley $50,000 instead of $10,000. If he survived his wife, Flagler specified in this codicil, the residue of his estate is to be divided among Roy H. York, W. L. Harkness and Mrs. John D. McLennan, of Cleveland; W. R. Keenan, Jr., J. K. Wise and Sarah G. Keenan, of Wilmington; J. R. Parrott, of Jacksonville, and W. H. Beardsley, of New York.

No Increase for
Son's Share of Estate.

The third codicil announces that upon consideration the testator found incorrect the statement in the will that he had given his son securities netting $75,000 a year. However, he said, this mistake did not warrant an increase in the legacy to Harry Harkness Flagler.

The codicil also provides for a legacy of $10,000 to Harry E. Bemis, and empowers his trustees to borrow money for the extension of his railroad to Key West.

Codicil four specifies that the smaller legatees are not to receive the amounts provided unless at the time of his death they are in the employ of the Flagler railroad or hotel interests.

Codicil five empowers his trustees to continue to pay to Horace H. Flagler, of St. Augustine, the dividends on 50 shares of Standard Oil stock. It provides, too, that the legacy to the Memorial Presbyterian Church Society apply only if the church remain in the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America.

Codicil six makes provision for the maintenance of his mausoleum by the expenditure of a portion of the income from the $75,000 which he bequeathed to the church in St. Augustine.

The last codicil, drafted September 13, 1912, provides that the legacy of 5,000 shares of oil stock to his son be effective in spite of the change in the form of Standard Oil stock. This was drafted soon after the dissolution of the Standard Oil Company, apparently looking to safe-guarding Harry Harkness Flagler against losing his inheritance on technical grounds. The last provision is the revocation of his previous bequest to Horace H. Flagler, substituting therefor an annuity of $2,000.

No resident of West Palm Beach or its vicinity was mentioned in the will, although common gossip had named several as likely legatees.

Flagler's Isolation
Necessary, Says Doctor.

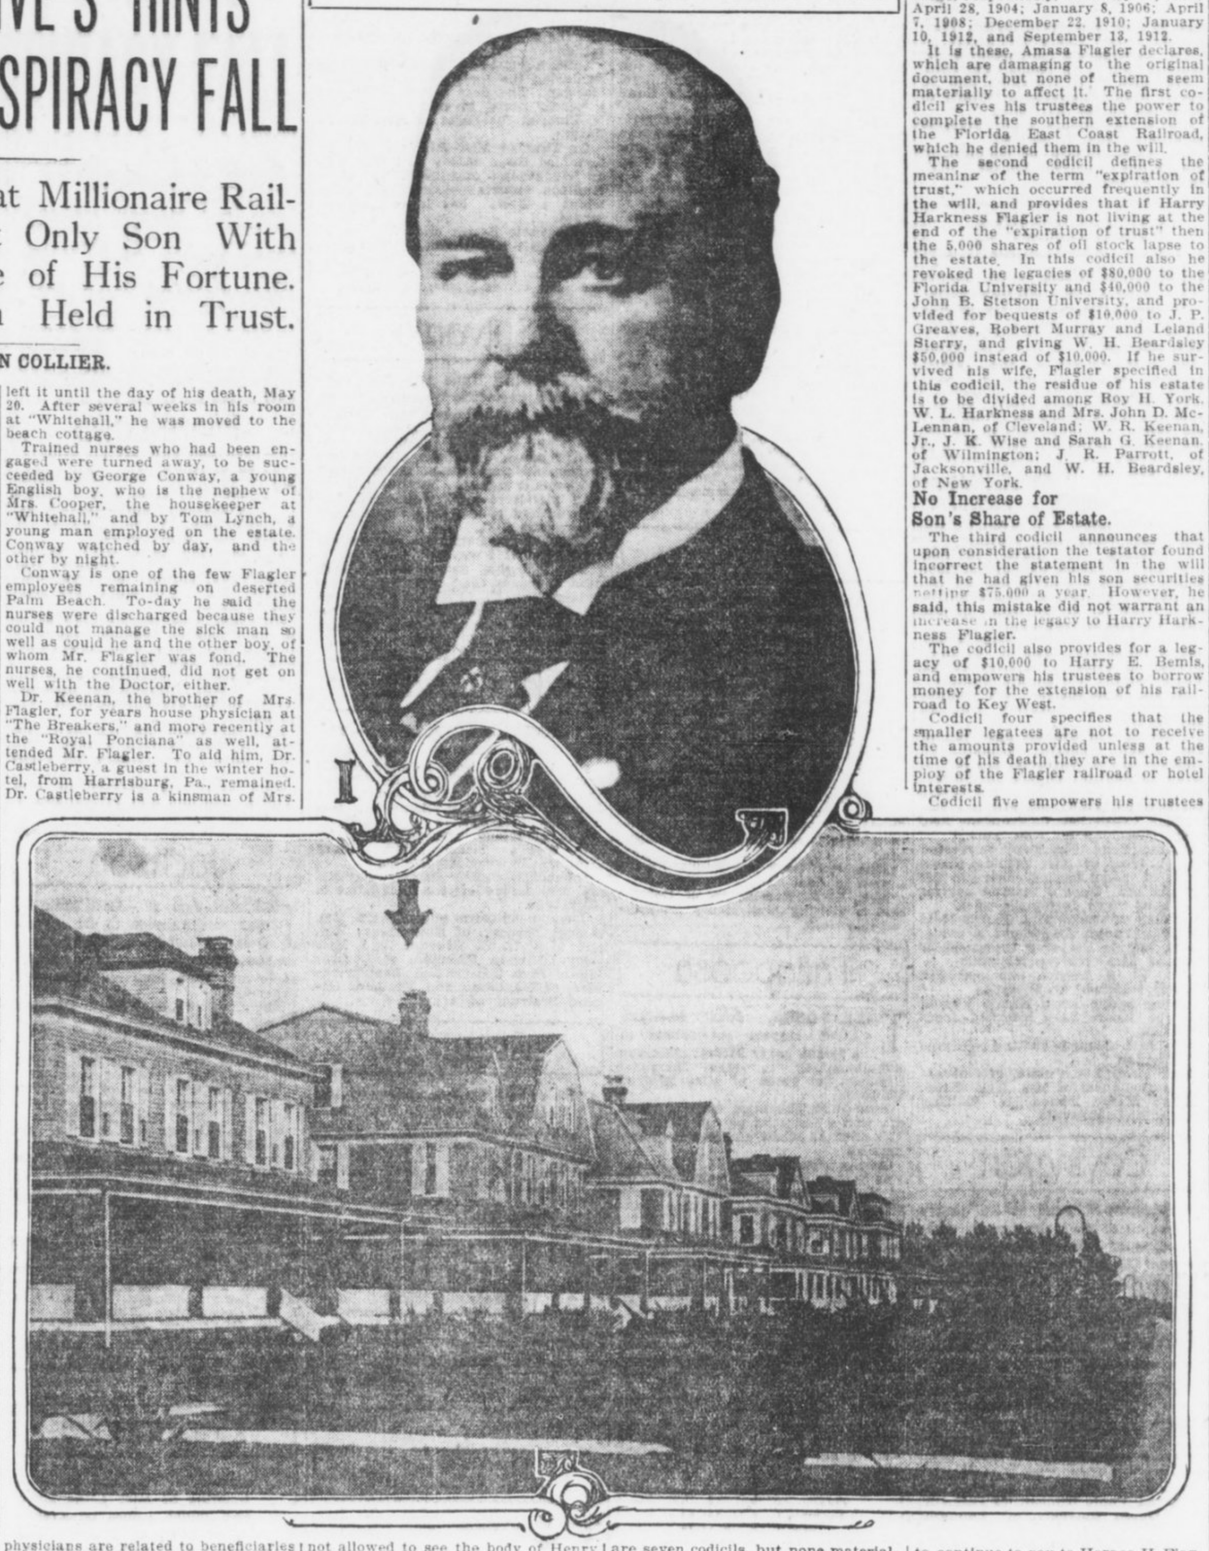
NEW YORK, June 28.—Dr. Owen Kenan, brother of Mrs. Henry M. Flagler, to-day issued a vigorous denial of the charges of Amasa Plummer Flagler regarding the circumstances which surrounded the death of his patient at West Palm Beach.

"There isn't a word of truth in the whole thing," he said. "The only explantation is that these so-called 'charges' originated in the brain of some cunning adventurer with an ax to grind. Publication of these unfounded rumors have annoyed us greatly, and Mrs. Flagler is in no condition to be interviewed, so that I can speak for her.

"So far as I can make out, the greatest objection to conditions this Amasa Flagler found at the Beach was the isolation of the sick man. That was natural. Mr. Flagler was old, his illness was serious and he needed quiet. The cottage in which he died is not dilapidated. It rents for an enormous sum every season, and some prominent Boston society people had it last winter.

"If Amasa Flagler's object is to induce Harry H. Flagler to contest the will it will fail. Harry Flagler is a gentleman, although he had not spoken to his father but once in the last seventeen years. He was left $5,000,000 and each of his children gets $4,000,000. That seems to me to be eminently fair.

"As to our conduct of the case, Dr. Castlebury and I did the best we could. Henry M. Flagler had as tender and loving care as any man ever had up to the moment of his death. There was no secrecy other than that was absolutely necessary, and nothing to be concealed."



AMASA FLAGLER, who hinted at plot to influence Henry M. Flagler in making will, is shown in the top picture, while in the lower photograph the arrow indicates the cottage in which the railroad magnate died. This cottage was referred to as a "lonely hut" by Amasa Flagler in his first statements.

HEIRS TO RICHES LEFT BY TITANIC VICTIM SOUGHT

J. Montague Smart, Prominent Business Man, Left Fortune. No Trace of Beneficiaries.

NEW YORK, June 28.—During his active life J. Montgomery Smart was a man of mystery. Now that his bones lie in the sunken Titanic, his past is a greater puzzle than ever, and so far it is unsolved. Usually when a man dies, even though he may have been of distinction, his hidden history is buried with him. But Smart was a man of wealth, and it became necessary to try to discover vital facts of his intimate personal life.

Thus began a world-wide search that has served only to make the case of J. Montgomery Smart all the stranger. He was an honored and successful man of business, whose transactions were international in scope, even extending from New York to Australia.

Necessary to Find Heirs.

Having left money, it became necessary to find his heirs. It was remembered that this man of silence never described his family. It was known that he had been married and that his wife had died ten years before. Vague words dropped here and there were gathered and it became apparent that Smart had two children, a boy of 20 and a girl of 18.

But no one could be found who had any definite idea of their whereabouts.

Into three countries of Europe the filaments of inquiry extended. The American consuls of many ports were asked to aid in the hunt. That was in May, 1912.

One fact was discovered in the course of the Belgian hunt. It was asserted that the children were in charge of a Mrs. Cook, who was a great friend of Mrs. Smart, and that Smart was paying her liberally to care for them. But who was Mrs. Cook? Her identity was also impossible to discover, and the hunt settled down into a hope that the guardian would write for funds, thus solving the riddle. But she has been swallowed in silence.

Had Many Acquaintances.

As president of the American Cold Storage and Shipping Company, Smart had made many acquaintances among prominent business men of New York, London, Berlin, Paris and many other cities throughout the world. Many believed that they knew him well. But when the test came, they were surprised to find that only the barest information was obtainable about his personal affairs.

Smart was a hermit in a great city, and he was a hermit in his many voyages and travels in foreign countries.

Mashers Told to Think of Sisters

Pastor Says That Presuming on Feminine Acquaintance Is Greatest Aid to White Slavery.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 28.—"A spendthrift sweetheart and an extravagant wife have ruined many lives," said the Rev. T. W. Stout in a sermon at Calvary Methodist Church. "Young women can help to form high moral standards among the boys by not permitting great expenditures upon themselves."

He illustrated how laziness makes a weak character that falls in the crisis of life by knocking the prop from under a three-legged chair. "White slavery begins with presuming on feminine acquaintance and bold advances to clerks," he said. "It ends in blood money and lost souls. Every young man should ask himself in dealing with girls: 'Suppose my sister were in her place—what would I want done?'"

TROOPS TO MAKE CAVALRY RAID OF THE SHENANDOAH

Realistic Advance Next Month Into the Historic Valley May Mean New System.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Troopers at Fort Myer have begun preparations for their 70-mile march into the Shenandoah Valley next month to participate in maneuvers expected to result in reorganization of the mounted forces of the army.

The Shenandoah Valley, where "Phil" Sheridan made his famous ride 50 years ago, has been chosen as the bloodless battle ground for the test. For two months this summer a full brigade of cavalry and a battery of horse artillery will maneuver and "fight" over the red roads, the green hills, and fields near Winchester.

The department has leased a tract of ground one mile broad and two miles long in the heart of the Shenandoah, 70 miles away, and orders were issued to the troops some time ago.

Oglethorpe Troopers on March.

Two regiments of the brigade, those from Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., and Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., must ride 700 dusty miles under a summer sun before they can reach the valley, and they must report July 20. The First Squadron from Fort Myer will have only 70 miles to go, and the horse battery from Fort Riley, Kans., will be sent by rail.

Secretary Garrison will be a frequent spectator. Major General Wood, chief of staff, United States Army, probably will spend much time there, and President Wilson may make the trip.

The necessity for a rehabilitation of the cavalry was disclosed when the general staff some time ago made ambitious plans for the reorganization of the army so as to prepare it for the defense of the country against attack by any great military power. This resulted in the sending to Europe last year of a board of six cavalry officers, who studied the German, Russian, Austro-Hungarian, French and English organizations.

Officers Study Abroad.

Four months were spent abroad by these officers, and since their return they have prepared plans for radical changes in the organization and use of cavalry of the American army.

The tests will take place under the direction of Colonel C. H. Murray, of the Twelfth Cavalry, as Brigadier General E. J. McClernand, the head of the cavalry board, is prohibited from exercising actual command by virtue of his retirement. General McClernand, however, with Lieutenant Colonels J. T. Dickmann and Fred S. Foltz, Major Jesse McI. Carter and Captain Frank Parker, all members of the board which studied the European systems, will be present.

Some of the practical questions to be worked out are:

How large a command can a captain handle successfully?

How many such units can a colonel handle to the best advantage under conditions approximating hostilities?

The new formation of the cavalry into double ranks also will be tried out on a large scale, a practical test by Captain Parker, of the Eleventh Cavalry, at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., with an experimental squadron having been pronounced a complete success by General H. L. Scott.

NORTH GEORGIA AND AUGUSTA NEWS

AUGUSTA WINS FIGHT AGAINST FEVER GERMS

Malaria and Typhoid Deaths Reduced in Eleven Years From 122 to 41.

INCREASING WAR ON INSECTS

Dr. Eugene E. Murphey, Head of Health Board, Genius Who Wrought Change.

AUGUSTA, June 28.—In 1901 there were 95 deaths in Augusta from malarial fever, and in 1912 there were 27. In 1901 there were 27 deaths from typhoid fever. In 1912 there were 14. There is a reason for these marked decreases and that "reason" is Dr. Eugene E. Murphey, president of the Board of Health. Of course, Dr. Murphey has had able assistants, but he is the genius who revolutionized Augusta's Health Department and converted this ordinarily malaria-ridden community into one of the most healthful in the South.

This city is in a pocket, so to speak, with the Savannah River on one side and sandhills on another, while immediately to the east and southeast are swamps caused by backwater from the river.

Augusta's fight against malaria began in earnest soon after it was discovered by medical men that the mosquito conveyed fever germs. War on the mosquito was started, and it never has let up.

Draining the swamps near the city, filling up ditches, draining surface water in the outskirts of the city through terra cotta pipes, placing fish in the lakes and fountains, and the liberal use of petroleum are the factors primarily responsible in emancipating Augusta from the mosquito and, consequently, from malaria.

Also campaigns of education have been conducted by the Board of Health, which have taught the people not to permit stagnant water on their premises.

The average life of a mosquito is probably two weeks, says Dr. Murphey, and one rarely travels more than 300 yards from its birthplace. Sanitary inspectors make regular rounds of inspection and report to the authorities any conditions likely to breed mosquitoes or produce any kind of disease.

The placing of petroleum in the sand traps where the sewage water collects, in the stagnant water which for some reason must remain stagnant, and the improved sewage system have caused the mosquito problem—and therefore the malaria problem—to vanish.

In 1903 the Sanitary Department used 200 gallons of oil, while in 1912 there were 13,425 gallons consumed.

The decrease in the number of deaths from typhoid is attributed by Dr. Murphey to the "swat the fly" campaigns and better milk. Augusta's milk inspector is rigid in his requirements and frequent examinations of the milch cows and dairies are made.

NEGRO FARMER PLOWS UP GOLD COINS IN FIELD

Alfred Gaines Finds More Than Seven Thousand Dollars Hidden Treasure Near Rome.

ROME, June 28.—Fifteen miles from Rome on a Gordon County farm lives a negro who, it is said, has unearthed a box containing more than $7,000 in gold. While the amount found is undetermined, it has been confirmed that the negro, Alfred Gaines, a preacher, plowed up the money.

Gaines has only one arm and has a hook on his left arm to assist him in his farm work. One day recently he was cultivating when his plow struck a decayed wooden box and a handful of shining coins fell, ringing, on his plow. Gaines stooped down to examine the pieces and was overpowered to find they were gold, United States money of the coinage of 1822 to 1848.

A few days later when Gaines went to Plainville and rang down $850 to pay off a mortgage, the mortgager almost fainted. He could not understand where the negro got so much money, and in gold, too. Gaines refused to answer any questions. He paid off every cent he owed in Plainville.

Who buried the treasure is the question that has been asked often since that time. Dugan Miller, a prominent Calhoun man, says he is inclined to believe the gold was buried by his grandfather before the war, being the price received for six slaves he sold. Miller's ancestors owned the land, but sold it.

Army Officers Buy Georgia Farm Lands

Military Men Pay $25,000 for 2,200 Acres of Columbia County Realty.

AUGUSTA, June 28.—Confidence in Georgia dirt has recently been shown by a group of army officers who have invested $25,000 in Columbia County farm lands. Captain R. E. Woods, U. S. A., now in the quartermaster's department in the Canal Zone, with a number of associates, has just purchased 2,200 acres of land in Columbia County, about fifteen miles from Augusta. They have formed the Columbia County Cotton Company.

Before purchasing land the officers investigated carefully the different soils and the topography in various portions of the country, and finally decided to purchase in Columbia County.

SLAYER DOES NOT NOW FEAR GHOST OF VICTIM

GAINESVILLE, June 28.—Believing that if he washed his hands and feet in the blood of the negro he had slain the ghost of his victim would not haunt him, Otis Mitchell went to the house where he had shot and killed "Lucky Boy" Walker, found a small quantity of dried blood on the floor, gathered it up and rubbed it on his hands and feet. Mitchell was exonerated by the Coroner's jury for slaying Walker.

Athens Bank Head Now Facing Trial

J. W. Griffin Accusd of 'Wrecking' Trust and Banking Company. Cashier Sentenced.

ATHENS, June 28.—The trial of J. W. Griffin in the Clarke Superior Court, for "wrecking" the Athens Trust and Banking Company some months ago is creating much interest throughout this part of the State. Griffin was president of the bank, which failed eighteen months ago, and in the investigation which followed he and R. H. McCrary, the cashier, were indicted for "irregularities" in the bank's business.

In Superior Court some months ago both pleaded guilty to the charges with expectation of getting a fine, but Judge Brand sentenced them to five years each in the penitentiary. They appeared to the Court of Appeals and secured new trials.

A special term of court was called. When arraigned, Cashier McCrary pleaded guilty, and under a promise to give State's evidence in the trial of President Griffin, was sentenced to three years by Judge Brand. The cases against Griffin are being tried now and will require probably several days to finish.

BRILLIANT BATTLE SURE IN FRANK TRIAL IN CLASH OF HOOPER AND ARNOLD

Order Has at Last Been Rested and Indications Are That Struggle of Attorneys Will Be Waged in the Most Ethical Manner.

By AN OLD POLICE REPORTER.

As deplorable as the Phagan case is, in all its melancholy details, it already is evident enough that there will come of it eventually much that the community may be thankful for.

In the first place, Atlanta and Georgia, and incidentally the entire South will have learned a good lesson in law and order, justice and fair play, and to that extent may be the better prepared for the next case of the kind that comes to their attention.

In the second place, there will be in the future no such wretched bungling and frenzied appeal in and from police headquarters, as for a time marked the Phagan case unique among its kind.

It looks now as if the decks have been pretty well cleared for action and that Leo Frank's trial may be expected to proceed in dignity and order, and that in its final analysis the truth of Mary Phagan's murder may be established, at least to the extent of Frank's real or suspected participation therein.

If Frank should be convicted, that would mean the subsequent indictment and conviction of the negro Conley, as an accessory after the fact.

Conley Indictment May Follow.

If Frank should be found not guilty, that would mean the indictment of Conley, as principal to the murder, in all human probability.

It evidently is the purpose of the State to hold Conley free of indictment, pending the disposition of the charges against Frank. His status as a material witness depends much upon this, of course.

There always is a chance, however, that a Grand Jury may take up a thing of this sort of its own motion, and to that extent there remains the possibility of prior indictment hanging over Conley.

It seems more likely, however, that the case will go to trial about as it shapes up now.

I do not incline to think the State really has any further sensational or particularly effective thing up its sleeve. Neither do I think the defense has.

There may be, on both sides, bits of corroborated evidence or evidence to offset this, that, or the other to come, but in the main I think the public is in possession of all the essential facts in the Phagan case to date.

The public must remember, however, that not all the things it has read in the newspapers, not yet one-half the things, ever will go before the jury trying Leo Frank as competent evidence.

And it is upon the COMPETENT evidence alone that the court will permit Leo Frank to be judged.

For instance, nothing that Mrs. Frank has said in the public prints will go before the jury. A wife is estopped in law from testifying either for or against her husband.

Fomby Woman Rejected.

The Fomby woman already has been rejected as a possible witness against Frank. Her story admittedly is too preposterous even for the State to bother with it further.

How much of Conley's story the jury will hear is entirely problematical.

He will be warned that he need not testify to anything calculated to incriminate himself, and even if he elects to disregard this warning there is much in his statement that likely will go down and out as incompetent or irrelevant.

The ponderous assurances of Frank's guilt, so frequently thundered from police headquarters by Detective Lanford, will, so far as the jury is concerned, not be there. Detective Lanford will not be on the jury—and his opinion as to the innocence or guilt of Frank will not be immediately valuable, therefore.

Frank's own statement, it must be rembered, will be delivered to the jury, not under oath.

The jury will be instructed by the court that it may accept the defendant's statement as the truth in its entirety, and to the exclusion of ALL the sworn testimony, if it sees fit; or it may accept it in part and reject it in part; or it may reject the statement as a whole.

The jury, and the jury ALONE, will be the judge of the facts.

The law—the impersonal law—that the jury will be required to apply to those facts it will get from the court.

It looks, then, as if the Phagan case, getting down to brass tacks, will revolve finally about these persons:

Leo Frank, the defendant; Solicitor Dorsey and Attorney Frank Hooper, representing the State; Luther Z. Rosser and Reuben Arnold, representing the defendant; the judge, the jury and a dozen or so competent and material witnesses.

Order at Last Comes.

So, at last, has order been brought out of chaos, after weeks and weeks of hysteria, stuff and nonsense, passion and prejudice, facts and near-facts, truth and lies, impatience and intolerance—all jumbled into about the worst mess I ever undertook, in my way, to analyze and unravel, in seeking the truth!

Leo Frank will receive a fair trial, and the written and recorded verdict, whatever it may be, will be accepted generally as the truth.

If the jury agrees that Frank is guilty, that verdict will be taken to be a just one. Nothing short of the most sensational and revolutionary new evidence likely would serve to re-establish his good name, once he is convicted in the Superior Court.

On the other hand, if the jury shall agree that Frank is not guilty, I think he will be taken back into the friendly and fair-minded good will of the people of Atlanta, a free and untarnished man, and there likely will come a revulsion of popular feeling in his behalf, that will go far toward offsetting and reconciling him to the horrible ordeal he passed through.

The approaching trial likely will be one of the greatest legal battles ever fought in Georgia.

On the one hand—that of the State—Hugh Dorsey, the Solicitor General, has done the drudgery, and Frank Hooper is to handle the picturesque. Hooper likely will figure much more in the public eye hereafter than Dorsey will, for it will be Hooper's business to paint the rainbow, snatch the stars from the heavens, and open the floodgates of tears—if he can!

On the other hand—that of the defense—Luther Z. Rosser has done the drudgery, and Reuben Arnold will have the delicate task of leading the jury along the primrose path that leads to Frank's acquittal.

All Have Big Reputations.

All of these men are great lawyers, with reputations to sustain, and each one may be depended upon to act a part entirely in keeping with the honorable profession of the law. I do not believe there is sufficient money in Atlanta to secure the services of any one of these men in an unworthy undertaking.

Each one of these men may be depended upon to do his best by his client, and as each one is of the quality I note, a fair trial seems assured.

It is a happy and a consoling circumstance that the trial of Leo Frank is to be presided over by an upright and just judge, argued by upright and honorable attorneys, and a verdict written by twelve "good men and true," as the law—the LAW in all its majesty—directs!

While by no means as spectacular a thing to say as something else might be, it is a matter of deep and abiding significance that Leo Frank, with his life, his good name, and all that he holds most dear at stake, is assured of a fair trial and a just verdict, notwithstanding all the frenzied and sinister detail of irrelevant and incoherent "testimony" and "evidence" set forth here and there, as time has run on since Mary Phagan was slain.

Victory for Society.

In the trial of Leo Frank THE SUPREMACY OF THE LAW will be vindicated beyond carping or cavil—and therein the most tremendous victory to society will be achieved.

Frank Hooper is one of the most experienced prosecuting attorneys in the State. He has served as Solicitor General on one of the most important circuits in Georgia, and his career thereon was entirely to his credit.

He is suave, incisive, deliberate, calm in action and eagle-eyed in seeing a point that may be turned to his client's advantage.

In summing up the case of the State against Leo Frank, Hooper will be at his best. He is a master in presenting his case to the jury for its consideration. I understand he is to be associated soon with Judge Arthur Powell and John D. Little, in Atlanta, in the practice of law. They will make a great team. Hooper is an attorney of the same class and caliber as Powell and Little.

But there to combat the best efforts that Hooper may put forth will stand that remarkable lawyer, Reuben Arnold.

Whatever qualms Frank may feel when he thinks of Hooper, doubtless they are relieved in large measure when he turns his thoughts to Arnold.

Reuben Arnold is a lawyer of constant surprises. Age can not wither him nor custom stale his infinite variety. Frank's case will be presented to the jury as few men could present it, when Arnold undertakes the work.

Convinced of Innocence.

Arnold says he never entered the case until he had convinced himself of Frank's innocence, and I quite believe he speaks the truth. I do not think there is the shadow of doubt either in Arnold's or Rosser's mind that Frank is entirely guiltless of the killing of Mary Phagan.

That Hooper may have some doubts as to the full strength of the State's case against Frank seems likely, for soon after entering the case he said this:

> I have not been employed in the case to prosecute Leo M. Frank, but to help find and convict the murderer of Mary Phagan. If the trial proves we are wrong, we will begin work on another angle. We have but one object and idea. It is that justice and the law be vindicated. We are, however, convinced we have a strong case against the accused.

Now, I do not think a manlier thing has been said in all the mass of things that have been said in the Phagan case than the foregoing.

If any person who does not know Frank Hooper has any doubts as to his complete integrity and lofty ideals the statement credited to him herein should remove them. Only a man who wishes to do right could or would say what Hooper said, soon after taking up the State's end of the Phagan case.

The most ardent, if honest, extremes of opinion well may meet on the platform Hooper sets up!

And if everybody in Atlanta will say, as he says, "I want to help find and convict the murderer of Mary Phagan, regardless of whom that murderer may be," everybody will find himself on a platform of decency and fair play—and that's where he ought to wish to find himself.

I have sought, in these articles, neither to prosecute nor to defend Frank. I have sought, in such manner as I might, to help find the murderer of Mary Phagan. I want to see him found and convicted.

I, like Hooper, have desired, above all things, to see JUSTICE AND THE LAW VINDICATED, and I indorse and agree with Hooper's expressed desire that both may be.

Search Will Continue.

If the State fails to convict Frank—the State will turn its eyes elsewhere.

Could any man ask a fairer or squarer promise from Hooper than that?

It merely means that Hooper WILL ACCEPT THE FINDINGS OF THE COURT, after orderly and prescribed procedure, frankly and unquestioningly, as the TRUTH of the matter.

If Frank is guilty, then the law will take its course.

If he is not guilty, he will take his place once more among his fellowmen, as free of stain as any of them.

That's where Hooper stands, and that's where I am satisfied to stand also!

And if somebody, early in the investigation of the Phagan case, had calmed the mad scramble for "clews," "evidence," "testimony" and what not, with the deliberate and convincing words of Frank Hooper, some of the utterly ridiculous theories would never have been evolved and the entire case would have rested upon a basis of sanity, which would have eliminated many of the ugly features.

Happily, however, the chatterboxes and the human phonographs have been given most effective pause in their wild riot of talk, and if the Society for the Suppression of Unnecessary Noises has rounded them up for good and all, so be it, and praise forevermore!

Sanity and THE LAW OF THE LAND have taken the Phagan case in hand, and through these agencies will the truth of the murder of Mary Phagan be set up eventually.

Luncheon Lurch Aid to Digestion

Pre-Prandial Prance Society Fad

Variation of Tango Brings Dancers One Step Nearer Dining Each Step They Take.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The Luncheon Lurch, the latest variation of the Tango and the Turkey Trot, which has seized the society of the Capital, is declared by experts on gastronomy to be the greatest known appetizer and first aid to digestion.

So effective has it been found along these lines that the Martini is now almost unknown on the boards of Washington hosts, while the pepsin tablet supply of the druggists is practically considered worthless stock.

There is a deep method in the Luncheon Lurch. Contrary to the Tango, which is danced after tea, the Lurch is a preprandian pastime. At a given time before the viands are to be served the orchestra strikes up something syncopated.

Guests immediately begin lurching and continue the dance until they have worked up an appetite considered commensurate with the feast about to be served.

Each step carries the dancers nearer the dining room, and observant ones declare that it is an invariable rule that the best trenchermen always dance with a remarkable celerity, while the dyspeptics lurch so slowly that they are to all appearances posing in tableau.

Among the prominent lurchers are Miss Katherine Elkins, Miss Dorothy Williams, Miss Sally Williams, Miss Katherine Britton, Miss Marguerite Barbour and Mrs. James F. Curtis.

$2,000,000 TAX GAIN EXPECTED IN CHATHAM

SAVANNAH, June 28.—That the total tax returns of Chatham County will show an increase for 1913 of close to $2,000,000 is the opinion of Tax Assessor Marcus S. Baker. This will make the total returns for the year over $40,600,000—a new record for Chatham County.

But this increase will have no effect on the tax rate, says Judge Oliver T. Bacon, chairman of the board of county commissioners. The net income from this estimated increase at 77½ cents a thousand is only about $14,000.

ALL WOMEN TO VOTE IN TIME IS SENATE'S IDEA

Even the Most Conservative Members Believe the Fair Sex Will Cast Ballot the World Over.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—That women in all civilized countries will be permitted to vote is regarded as inevitable by the most conservative Senators and Representatives.

It is their opinion that steady progress is being made and that Great Britain, the United States and other leading nations will eventually recognize that further delay is useless.

Two-Thirds Vote Needed.

The resolution proposing an amendment to the Federal constitution under which women would be given the ballot, now awaiting consideration by the Senate, is expected to be passed on at the next session. A two-thirds vote would be necessary for its adoption.

It would require the appoval of sixty-four Senators to make women suffrage operative for submission to the States, so far as the upper branch of Congress is concerned.

The chief handicap preventing woman suffrage lies in the opposition of Southern Congressmen. The votes for the women's movement have made headway in the South. A bitter struggle is in progress in Alabama, where Representative Hobson is seeking the Senatorship, as against Mr. Johnston, on a platform favoring woman suffrage and temperance. Senator Johnston says he will achieve re-election without difficulty.

Have Twenty-Four Votes.

It is figured that these Senators will certainly support the Chamberlain resolution providing for a constitutional amendment permitting women to vote; Ashurst and Smith, of Arizona; Thomas and Shafroth, of Colorado; Borah and Brady, of Idaho; Myers and Walsh, of Montana; Gallinger and Hollis, of New Hampshire; Chamberlain and Lane, of Oregon; Smoot and Sutherland, of Utah; Jones and Poindexter, of Washington; Clark and Warren, of Wyoming; Gore and Owens, of Oklahoma; Ransdell and Thornton, of Louisiana.

This totals but twenty-four of the sixty-four votes necessary in the Senate. In view of recent action in Iowa, Illinois and Kansas it is possible that Senators Cummins, Kenyon, Sherman, Lewis, Bristow and Thompson may be added to the list, making thirty in all. It is claimed that two or three additional votes may come from New England, but no names are suggested.

Cupid Moves to Vancouver, Wash.

Oregon's New Law Requiring Health Certificates Held Responsible.

VANCOUVER, WASH., June 28.—The record for marriage licenses issued in one day during the 60 years in which records have been kept was broken here when ten couples secured marriage licenses. Nor is this all.

At the present rate, in fifteen days the greatest month's record will be broken in one-half the time—and all because Oregon passed a law requiring certificates of health from men making application for marriage licenses. Already 58 licenses have been issued this month, the record being 65 for any entire month.

BURN ATLANTA CLEAN, PLAN OF SANITAR YCHIEF

Settlement of Crematory Row Leaves Mayor, Council and Everybody Pleased.

John Jentzen, Sanitary Chief, is the happiest man in Atlanta as a result of the settlement Saturday of the crematory row. Operating his department without an incinerator, he said, was like trying to sail a ship on dry land, and that he had had to bear the brunt of complaints against the situation from thousands of exasperated citizens.

"That decision in the Mayor's office marks a new era in Atlanta," he said. "We shall begin a general clean-up the day the crematory is completed. I understand that that will not be longer than ten days. We shall burn Atlanta pure.

"Let the people take note of these instructions:

Gives Sanitary Rules.

"Keep the lids on garbage cans.

"Pile up the trash in yards and notify the sanitary department to come and get it.

"Don't throw things into streets and alleys.

"Help us put an end to the flies and musquitoes. You know trash breeds them."

The Chief said the new crematory would increase greatly the efficiency of his department and that it would shorten hauls and allow sanitary wagons to make more frequent visits.

He declared it would reduce the death rate and make Atlanta a more pleasant place to live in.

Mayor Well Pleased.

Although Mayor Woodward has been almost unanimously opposed in his attitude by the Council and brought most bitter criticism on himself, he smiled and said he was well satisfied over the outcome.

The Mayor's victory in the Supreme Court caused the price of the incinerator to be reduced from $276,000 to $260,000. His recent firm stand caused him to gain a point of honor.

Council endeavored to avoid allowing him to execute the contract. The concession is that he will execute it, following a special meeting of the Council Tuesday. That point has been the whole cause of the last controversy.

Turkish Bath Cures Rheumatism at Home

Costs But 2c a Bath.

Quickly Cures Kidney Trouble, Nervous Prostration and All Skin Diseases.

The Robinson Thermal or Turkish bath, taken at home, is becoming a rage. Those who have used the bath have been completely carried away with enthusiasm because of the astonishing results obtained.

Well known physicians say that the Robinson Thermal Bath at home is about to become an almost universal conqueror of disease. This is not an exaggeration. Any man or woman can prove its results inside of 24 hours, in some cases 30 minutes.

In cases of rheumatism, especially, the uric acid poison is extracted from the system through the pores, almost as liquids are sucked up through a straw. Drugs merely smother the poison or ease the pain. They do not extract the poison from the body.

Just read this letter:

"I loaned my cabinet to an old friend all crippled up with rheumatism, last May. Feet, legs, and hands badly swollen. He had spent some time at different Hot Springs without relief. A week ago he started in to use the cabinet, taking the steam heat in the morning and the dry heat at night, before going to bed. He kept this up a week, and yesterday and to-day he was as well as ever.

"GEORGE A. FREEMAN,
"Mgr. Temptation Mining and Milling Company, Silverton, Colo."

Anyone can now take Robinson Thermal baths at home and at a cost of only about 2c a bath. They make the thick, sluggish blood normal, take out the impurities and cure "spring fever" right off. The only way to take these baths is by the use of the Robinson Thermal Bath Cabinet, which is a unique and marvelous invention.

That great book, "The Philosophy of Health and Beauty," retail price $2.00, free at our Main Store upon request for a limited time only. Be sure to get a copy. Also see the interesting demonstration of the Robinson Thermal Bath Cabinets; no obligation to purchase. Jacobs' Pharmacy, Main Store and Laboratory, 8-10 Marietta Street.—Adv.

UNCLE SAM IS NOW GREATEST HORSE BREEDER

Supplies Mounts for the Army From His Virginia Farm and Turns Out Thoroughbreds.

FARMERS ARE HIS PARTNERS

System So Successful That Other Large Studs Will Be Established in the West.

FRONT ROYAL, VA., June 28.—Uncle Sam has recently embarked in the horse business on a gigantic scale. He has started here what is probably the largest horse farm in the world, 5,600 acres, only a few hours' ride from the capital. And this is only the first of his farms. He intends to start several and turn out thoroughbreds by the tens of thousands.

To-day the farm is supplying practically the entire United States Army with its mounts. A short time hence and it will be supplying civilians, and soon, according to Captain Caspar H. Conrad, in charge, and generally acknowledged one of the greatest experts in horse flesh in America, it will be suppyling most of the civilized nations of Europe. And the price—now $144.15—may become even cheaper for Americans.

The farm represents an expenditure of more than $600,000, with some $400,000 to be spent within the next year.

Horses Have Everything.

On the farm are all sorts of buildings, sanitary baths, swimming pools, drinking fountains, resting sheds, pleasure paths and even a gigantic hospital—all for horses. Here and there are huge houses wherein reside men. These men look out for the horses.

They talk of little else. Indeed, it would be strange if the case were otherwise, for there are only 100 of these men, and daily they have to look after from 1,500 to 2,000 horses.

It took a long time to start the horse farm—more than half a century.

One day a few years ago a number of high staff officers of the army, watching a cavalry review, made some rather disparaging remarks concerning the appearance of the horses.

"Some of 'em look like mountain goats, and the rest like buffaloes," said one of the officers, and the remark got to the ears of Captain Conrad, and set him to thinking.

After that Captain Conrad had the approval of the War Department to start the farm. August Belmont made Uncle Sam a present of his six best stallions. Those stallions are known the racing world over, as Henry of Navarre, Octagon, Footprint, Belfry II, Vestibule and Marshall King. The six of them, when but two years old, cost $100,000.

Two More Horses Given.

James Camden, millionaire horseman of Versailles, Ky., heard of Belmont's gift and made Uncle Sam a present of his two famous stallions, Boola Boola and Wheelwright, worth about $25,000. Thus the farm was started.

But even with fifty stallions and mares by the hundred breeding on the farm was too slow. Something had to be done to increase the scope of the work—and the answer was found in a scheme to have Uncle Sam take every farmer in the South into partnership. This was done.

The ultimate plan is to sell the horses at a gigantic auction sale, with an army officer as auctioneer, knocking down the animals to the highest bidder.

Uncle Sam's horse farm is probably the only place in the country where no matter what animal you buy you may rest assured of getting a horse that is perfect. If the animal has the slightest blemish it will not be sold.

"Of course," said Captain Conrad, "we know that in this particular case the scar was due entirely to accident. But the farmer doesn't know it. He might have a mare scarred up purely by accident, but we wouldn't take his word for. We demand perfect mares and colts, so we give perfect stallions."

One Word to Decide Estate Ownership

Will Filed for Probate Causes Legal Discussion of Meaning of "And" and "Or."

WOODBURY, N. J., June 25.—The will of the late Aaron Knisell, of Sewell, was offered for probate in the Surrogate's office. This instrument has raised a contention among the heirs. The will left the entire estate to Mrs. Knisell, who died two weeks before her husband, and it is claimed that its provisions lapsed with her death.

The property was left to Mrs. Knisell "and her heirs." Had it read "or" heirs, it is claimed, the estate would go to her heirs; but, as it says "and" heirs, Knisell's brothers claim the estate. A ruling by the court will be necessary to interpret the instrument.

Evelyn Thaw Tells Her Ambition Will Try Something Worth While Reveals Her Plans to Alan Dale

Evelyn Thaw in the days she took New York by storm.

Evelyn Thaw as she is to-day.

As Miss Nesbit, Now Dancing at the Hippodrome, and Booked for Paris and Vienna.

By ALAN DALE.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—It was "Hullo, Rag-Time," at the Hippodrome that brought Evelyn Thaw within my jurisdiction, as it has brought many others who I never expected to meet.

So, with the open sesame of elusive art as a go-between, "Miss Nesbit," as she is programed here, received me without hesitancy in her rooms at the St. James Hotel, off Piccadilly, and our art robbed me of qualms. It was quite early morning.

Evelyn Thaw wore a loose peignoire of a black, shiny something, slashed at the back with yellow. Her hair was loosely fluffed out; she was devoid of the slightest effort at make-up, her ivory-white face and her unreddened lips looking quite startlingly natural. She was as pretty as any picture of—herself, and though the edge of reluctant youth may have frayed a little, there isn't a shadow of a doubt on the score of Evelyn Nesbit's charm. Never in all the ladies I have professionally met have I found more self-possession, a keener poise and less self-consciousness than in Evelyn Thaw. She made me wonder. She spoke easily, gracefully, reassuringly, without a trace of hesitation or nervousness.

On the Spur of the Moment.

"It was awfully sudden," she said, as we sat opposite each other. "I had no idea of going back to the stage after all these years."

"How many?" I asked. "You need not answer."

"Oh, I'm not like that," she said, with the first wistful smile; "I don't mind recalling anything. The last previous time I appeared on the stage was in 1904 in 'The Wild Rose.'

"Well, on the Olympic, coming over, I met a lot of theatrical people, among them Lee Shubert, Martin Beck and Albert DeCourville. They all advised me to make the break, especially DeCourville, who is manager of the Hippodrome.

"He has just married Shirley Kellogg, by the bye. I thought it over carefully, for I was a bit afraid, you know." She seemed to take it for granted that I knew. I did; I quite understood. "If I had made the break in New York I should have been a 'freak,'" she said. "Oh, there have been other women who have been through trials like mine who first tried New York, and it was hopeless. So when DeCourville telegraphed me at Paris to come at once to London and appear I realized that it was up to me, and I went, afraid, of course, but you know I'm no novice at harrowing experiences."

A Wild Turkey Trot.

"I was determined that nothing should force any attention from me to that sort of thing." She was now an artist before the public, and I was—me.

"I had to do a wild turkey trot with a dancer, and he was hard to find. I had seen Jack Clifford at the Cafe De Paris, and I remembered that he used to dance with Irene Weston, so we engaged him and rehearsed for one week only at the Irish Club, opposite the Hippodrome. Oh! it was terrible work. He throws me around—I am tossed up in the air and I see my heels at an angle I never expected to view them. And I'm an old married woman, with stiff joints."

Evelyn Nesbit laughed. So did I. She was as simple and unaffected as the inevitable school girl. It was impossible not to like her. She amused me a lot.

"They sneaked us on at a Saturday matinee without announcement," she said, "and luck favored me. The turn went well, and we are a hit.

"I'm engaged for six weeks, with an option, and then I go to Paris, Berlin, Vienna, St. Petersburg, Moscow, Copenhagen——"

"And New York?" I asked.

"New York, surely," she replied, smiling, "when I feel that I've put it over, but not until then. Oh, I do want to earn my own living, and the stage is good, and I don't mind hard work. In the old days, when I had nothing on my mind but my hair, I used to shirk rehearsals. Now, I'm Johnny-on-the-spot. I don't mind how much we rehearse. In fact, I rehearse every day. I've always loved dancing, and have studied all the successful dancers. If only I don't get fat like Ethel Barrymore and others."

She Won't Get Fat.

"You couldn't," I opined, for she didn't look the part.

"I won't," she retorted; "it would be a great pity, and I have another ambition that I'll tell you, for it may surprise you. Do you remember what Jerome said about me?"

Again I refused to remember anything.

"Well, he said that there were four great actresses—Sarah Bernhardt, Eleanora Duse, Mrs. Fiske and myself. I don't forget that. Some day I may try to act—to do something worth while, something serious, something emotional. So there you are! You will laugh, because I know you are funny.

"Theatrical people take themselves very seriously, and they can't understand why you don't do the same, but you don't—you can be as funny as you like about me. I sha'n't mind a bit, for I really have a sense of humor, and I'm not very serious." She laughed again, and I was quite disarmed. Evelyn Nesbit had impressed me as I didn't believe I was going to be impressed.

"All I do in London," she said, "is to work and eat good food. I love the food in London. Do go to the Cheshire Cheese and taste the chops. I was there yesterday, and I sat in Dr. Johnson's chair and enjoyed myself hugely. I'm going to get on, and I'm going to surprise everybody. One must have a beginning. Look at Elsie Ferguson. She was the stupidest chorus girl I ever met, but she had big moments, and now she is a very charming actress. Don't forget to write something funny about me, for I shall enjoy it."

But, somehow or other, Evelyn Nesbit hadn't appealed to my sense of humor. She was, at least, spontaneous and natural.

earliest day that he could learn, attributes to him none of the characteristics of a prodigy or perhaps of a genius. He has been taught to think, to concentrate his mind, and this training has enabled him to develop a remarkable memory.

He seldom reads an interesting topic more than once in order to commit it to memory, and he studies physiology, arithmetic, grammar, civil government and literature with little aid from his mother. When he enters high school he will take up the study of Latin, algebra, rhetoric, physical geography and ancient history.

BOY, NOT YET 8, TO ENTER HIGH SCHOOL IN FALL

New Mexican Prodigy Received All His Training From Mother. Wonderful Memory.

ROSWELL, N. MEX., June 28.—When the public schools open next fall there will be a new student in the high school department, a boy who has never been to school a single day and who will not at that time have reached his eighth birthday.

This is the boy who, at the age of eighteen months, startled the city of Denver by repeating the names of the Presidents of the United States, and who at the age of five recited several pages from Hiawatha in a school entertainment in Artesia, N. Mex. His name is Raymond Ray. He is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. G. F. Ray, of Roswell.

The mother of this boy, who has

WHY 200,000 PEOPLE NOW BATHE INTERNALLY

When you are ill, the first step your Physician takes is to clean out the Large Intestine.

He does this because the chances are ten to one that if you had no accumulated waste in the Large Intestine you would not have been ill at all.

The new process of Internal Bathing by means of the "J. B. L. Cascade" thoroughly cleanses the Lower Intestine, removes all waste and poisonous matter, and keeps it as pure as Nature demands it to be for perfect health.

It is Nature's own way of curing Constipation—simply warm water properly applied.

Enlightened physicians everywhere are using and prescribing it—

And instead of waiting to be ill, over 200,000 delighted Americans are warding off disease and increasing their efficiency and energy by its use.

Until recently the "J. B. L. Cascade" has been obtainable only by sending to its inventor, Charles A. Tyrrell, M. D., of New York City.

The demand for it now, however, has become universal, through the recommendations of those who are using it. Call at our main store and we will be glad to show you the "J. B. L. Cascade" and explain it in detail.

We are also distributing a very interesting booklet on internal bathing, called "Why Man of To-day Is Only 50 Per Cent Efficient," which can be obtained on request, without cost. Ask us for it to-day and inform yourself about this safe and sane method of curing constipation without drugs.

Wife Refuses to Stop Husband and Daughter's Eloping

Declares to Humane Society That She Tolerated Act to Preserve Happiness of Her Child.

LOS ANGELES, June 28.—Telling a most unusual story, filled with peculiar complications, in which she accuses her husband of eloping with and marrying his own stepdaughter and then stealing her two children in order to secure property belonging to her, Mrs. Ruella Nicholson has appealed to the police, the humane society and the county officers to help her in locating her husband, Edward Nicholson, and thus get back her children.

How she learned of the fact that her daughter had married her own stepfather, and did not interfere with the marriage because she wanted her child to be happy was a part of the strange story alleged by the woman.

Tired, hungry and practically penniless, the elderly woman appealed to the humane society.

Society Women Sound Knell for Mourning

Boston Leaders Declare That Custom of Donning Black for Dead Is Relic of Barbarism.

BOSTON, June 28.—Society women of Boston have answered the question, "How long should society women wear mourning for their dead relatives?" by saying in substance that mourning should not be worn. It was the consensus of opinion that it is a survival of barbarian days.

Mrs. Charles P. Putnam, wife of Dr. Putnam, said, "It seems to me that there is altogether too much mourning worn considering our present enlightened state of civilization. The world is dark enough as it is without women wearing crepe to make it any more gloomy.

Women Taught to Save Million a Year

Kansas Garbage Cans Are Cheated of Immense Amount by Domestic Science Instruction at School.

TOPEKA, KAN., June 28.—Kansas cheated the garbage cans of the State out of $1,000,000 last year, and the amount will be increased at the rate of $500,000 a year until there will be virtually no wasted foods in the entire State.

That is the aim of the Kansas Agricultural College, and the State is spending $40,000 a year to help.

Seven hundred girls completed the domestic science courses at the agricultural college this week, and the college has just closed its movable cooking schools, which were attended by 11,000 women in the ten weeks in which they were operated.

PET CANARY OF PRETTY WOMAN HALTS VESSEL

Captain of Liner Agrees to Delay Voyage Until She Can Send Home for Bird.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Mrs. Green is young and very charming. That is why the officers of the Vestris, of the Lamport and Holt line, gave her their fullest attention when she announced in plaintive but positive tones that she had lost her Rickey.

"I forgot to bring Rickey," she exclaimed.

"Who's Rickey?" demanded the second officer.

"Rickey's our pet canary," she said, "and I am taking him to South America to my husband. I mean I was to have taken him, but I left him at home."

Brought Food, Forgot Bird.

"It's too late now to get him," said the officer, "for we leave in thirty minutes."

"But I wouldn't dare go without him. I've brought the seed and the cuttlefish and everything, but I forgot the bird."

"Where do you live?" asked the officer.

"Mrs. G. F. Green, 59 West Fifty-third Street," was the reply, and the officer solicited the assistance of H. S. Damage, the line's passenger agent. After consultation with the Vestris' captain it was agreed to hold the vessel until ten minutes after five o'clock—ten minutes later than her schedule called for—and Mr. Damage and Mrs. Green sought a telephone.

Bird's Owner In Hysterics.

To an agent of a taxicab company the young woman explained that she wanted to go to the Fifty-third Street number and get a canary bird.

But no canary bird bearing taxicab arrived at the pier by ten minutes after five o'clock, and Mrs. Queen was in a state of hysteria as she watched the sailors haul off the gang plank.

Just as the Vestris was swinging at the end of the pier and before the last spring line was cast off the taxicab arrived. With the bewildered canary in its cage one of Mrs. Green's friends ran to the end of the pier and fastened the cage to a piece of rope. Then, very slowly and with due reverence—for Mrs. Green's brimming eyes were upon him—a sailor hauled the line with the cage attached over the side.

Woman Loves Mouse; Eats Meals With Him

Pet Comes Daily to Dine With Hotel Employees, and Girl Feeds Him From Hand.

CINCINNATI, June 28.—It is an old saying that all women are afraid of mice, but one has at last been found who is not afraid, and even says she likes them.

She is Miss Ella Eversfield, an operator at the Grand Hotel, who takes her meals with her favorite mouse every day. The employees of the hotel have a private dining room, and some time ago a mouse was discovered there. At the time Miss Eversfield had not learned to love mice and she probably screamed, but the mouse was game and stuck it out, and, having learned the meal hours, he insisted on putting in his appearance every day, until finally the employees learned to consider him as one of their number, and now he eats his meals from the hand of Miss Eversfield.

TRENTON, June 28.—Because her hair turned gray as the result of injuries sustained when she was struck by a trolley car, Mrs. Mary G. Hibbs, of Bristol, to-day started suit against the Trenton and Mercer County Traction Company for $10,000. Mrs. Hibbs was injured in Trenton when she attempted to cross a street in front of a car.

NEW ANSLEY HOTEL GIVES MOST MODERN HOSTELRY OF SOUTH TO ATLANTA

No Detail Has Been Spared to Make It Unsurpassed for the Traveling Public and People of City—Formal Opening Monday.

Machinery and Equipment Latest Devices for Aid of Sanitation and Comfort—Mural Decorations Picture Events of Georgia.

Only to those who "put up" after Monday at the Hotel Ansley will it be given in fullest measure to say, with Shenstone, that they have "found life's warmest welcome at an inn."

At least, the builder and the lessee and the press agent have endeavored to make it even so, and the very few favored persons permitted to inspect the building and its appointments in advance of the opening agree they planned wisely and builded well.

When the Ansley, Atlanta's newest hostelry, opens its doors to guests on Monday, it will be unexcelled among the inns of the country for efficiency, service, accommodations, equipment and modernity of its appointments. No detail was overlooked in the planning; no expense was spared in the building.

Banquet Hall Seats 500.

With its banquet room seating 500, its rathskeller accommodating 300 and its hundreds of rooms supplied with fresh filtered air continuously; with its costly historical mural decorations, each a work of art, the sumptuous furnishings of its rooms and suites and its perfect service system, the Ansley will be without a superior for business, conveniences and safety.

As "Marse" Henry Watterson expressed it, at no place "on the Rambla and in the Ring, in Piccadilly and the Corso, beneath the colonnades of the Rue de Rivoli of Paris and 'Unter den Linden' of Berlin—indeed, all the way between Chicago and Cannebiere, including many nooks and corners of little old New York," can the man or woman with a trunk and a handbag live higher, sleep safer and spend less than at the Hotel Ansley.

Two well-known quotations imprinted on the tapestry will greet the eye of all who pass the portals of the Hotel Ansley. The first one is the hotel man's favorite verse, from Shenstone, as follows:

Whoe'er has traveled life's dull round,
Where'er his stages may have been,
May sigh to think he still has found
Life's warmest welcome at an inn.

The next is a Scriptural quotation, taken from Hebrews, and the Ansley management promises to apply the precept and the compliment to every guest alike. Here it is:

"Forget not to show love unto strangers, for thereby some have entertained angels unawares."

Indicate Spirit of Hotel.

These two familiar quotations are printed across the underbeam of the winding marble stairways in the Ansley foyer. They are intended to indicate the spirit in which guests should apply and expect to be received.

Appearance of the lobby is enhanced by three historical paintings on tapestry, each 12 by 10 feet, situated on the upper mezzanine floor and facing the Forsyth Street entrance. The paintings recall important historical happenings in Georgia.

The first panel depicts the meeting of General Oglethorpe and Tomochichi at Savannah, May 21, 1733. The next represents John Wesley teaching the Indians under the oaks of St. Simons, and the third shows the burning of the Yazoo fraud papers at the state house in Louisville, Jefferson County, in the year 1796.

The papers were ignited by means of a magnifying glass and the sun's rays, showing that the fire which destroyed such an infamy should come from Heaven.

On the ground floor are a dozen or more other paintings of historical interest.

Dining Room Is Italian.

The dining room of the Ansley is known as the Italian room, on account of its architecture and mural paintings. The latter consist of the Vatican gardens, showing the cupola of St. Peter's in the distance; the garden of Villa Borghese in Florence, the garden of Villa Lante, the Hercules fountain in the garden of Villa Reale of Florence, and a view of Venice canals, all of which are painted on canvases, each 12 by 10 feet.

The rathskeller, one of the largest and most luxurious in the South, is remindful of college life. Its walls are decorated with portraits of the seals of the leading Georgia colleges, interlaced with varicolored bands waving over a golden background.

The waiting room is trimmed and wainscoted with Georgia sycamore. A distinctive feature of this room, indeed, of the hotel is a full size true-to-life portrait of Lieutenant General William Tecumseh Sherman, beneath which is the following inscription:

"Under whose orders Atlanta was burned, and who said war is hell."

Old Photographs Reproduced.

Actual 1865 photographs are reproduced, showing Atlanta before and after the famous conflagration. On other panels of the writing room are the Great Seals of Atlanta and the State of Georgia. Those who have seen this room are unstinted in their praise of its historical interest and value.

The Ansley equipment for cleaning silverware and dishes is unexcelled. The silverware will be cleaned by chemically generated electricity, made by water, soda and salt.

Dishes will be cleansed and sterilized by powerful streams of hot water thrown against them while incased in a metal washing machine.

The kitchen of the Ansley is replete with modern machinery and other implements for prompt and efficient service. Its appointments are products of as great attention to detail as was given the office, the rathskeller or any other part of the hostelry.

Five Lang ranges form a battery kept at even temperature by a single furnace. The bake ovens are built on the skyscraper plan—four stories high—thus utilizing space and insuring uniform results. The meat department is equipped with a slicing machine, insuring uniform-sized slices without rough edges.

Has Own Ice Plant.

The Ansley has the best equipped ice and refrigerating plant in Atlanta. It is a duplicate affair with a capacity of fourteen tons a day. The cold storage room could accommodate a carload of meat.

From a service bar in the basement all orders will be filled for the rathskeller, private dining rooms and guests' apartments, thus keeping the waiters out of the main buffet, which opens on Forsyth Street.

Distinctively a unique feature for any hotel is the sanitary bathing subbasement for the hotel's servants. Each compartment is equipped with lockers, and all waiters, cooks, bellboys, porters, etc., will be required to take a shower bath before starting each day's work.

Not the least attraction of the Ansley is its contemplated scale of charges. Rooms with running water and private toilet will cost $1 a day, rooms with connecting bath $1.50, with private bath $2, $2.50 and $3. Club breakfasts will be served for 25 cents and up, lunch for 50 cents from 12 till 2 o'clock, and 6 to 8 o'clock dinner for $1.

Indian Girl Writes Opera on Sioux Life

Zitkala Sa Composed "The Sun Dance"—Gave It on Reservation.

SALT LAKE CITY, June 28.—On the Uintah reservation at Vernal, Utah, nearly 100 miles from a railroad, an Indian girl has written an opera, with her people as the theme and motif. It is one thing to write an opera and another to have it produced. Zitkala Sa, a full-blooded Sioux, has accomplished both these things.

When "The Sun Dance" was sung in Vernal, Indians and whites drove in from 40 miles around to hear it; and, having heard it, they pronounced it a triumph. Efforts are being made to have the opera sung in Salt Lake City during the week of the National Education Association, July 5 to 11.

"The Sun Dance," as it was produced at Vernal in March, was not altogether the work of Kitkala Sa and her copper-hued brethren of the Uintah reservation. Professor William F. Hansen, of the faculty, and white as well as Indian students of Uintah Academy played important roles in the preparation and singing of the piece. It was, in fact, part of the academy work.

12,000 Drinks in Five Years Basis of Suit

Wife Declares Husband Protected Himself With Walking Stick in Driving Rain Storm.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Twelve thousand drinks, ranging from simple mixed potations to fancy concoctions, is the record which Mrs. John Barry Sears posts up against her husband in five years of married life.

Mrs. Sears, who is suing for divorce, said Mr. Sears started his career of conviviality during his honeymoon and has kept it up.

In one instance, according to Mrs. Sears, her husband had come home in a driving rain.

"He carried his walking stick elevated above his head," she testified, "and held his umbrella closed in his hand. He was soaking wet, but did not know it."

Oregon Freshman Reads of Social Science, Philosophy and Religion.

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, EUGENE, June 28.—Max H. Sommer, a freshman in the University of Oregon, registered from Portland, has a record for assiduous reading during the past collegiate year. According to the report of Librarian Douglass, Sommer's card shows that he has taken out 89 volumes, the majority of which would be classed as "heavy reading."

Of the 89 volumes perused by this freshman, 47 are devoted to social science, 28 are classed as pure literature, 5 are works of history and biography, 5 are of a philosophical and religious nature and 4 deal with journalism.

Oregon Governor Opposed to Autos

Declares State Appropriation Would Have Made Him Travel Like 'Piker.'

SALEM, OREG., June 28.—Despite rumors to the effect that he would be a candidate for re-election, Governor West positively announces that he will not be a candidate.

The Governor said that the financial drain on him was large, particularly his traveling expenses. The State now provides $1,000 for the traveling expenses of the Governor when on the State's business, but until two years ago only $500 a year was provided. The Governor declared that he could not live like a "piker" when away from home, and the expenses of many of his trips were paid by himself.

Governor West said that he had never bought an automobile because he did not want one, wouldn't have one if somebody would make him a present of it, couldn't operate it if he had it, and, above all, could not afford a machine.

DANCING MASTERS DECLARE TURKEY TROT IS IMMORAL

ASBURY PARK, June 28.—The "turkey trot" is an immoral dance in the opinion of members of the American National Association, masters of dancing, in session here, and at today's meeting the delegates were urged to co-operate with local authorities in banishing the figure that is fast becoming the rage.

The "tango" was not treated so severely. If properly taught, the masters believe, it may be danced.

Miss Ackerman said the happiest and most professional women are in Australia.

Canton, Ohio, Folks Must Get in Tub at Least Once a Week Authorities Declare.

CANTON, O., June 28.—Canton folks must bathe at least once a week, and "all over," at that. The board of health has said so.

In order that none can misunderstand, the board has arranged to post in every home where soap and water are believed to be at a premium a set of rules printed in five languages and specifying $25 and costs as punishment of any one who neglects the weekly cleanup.

DIVA BELIEVES BABIES BEST, FARM LIFE NEXT

Schumann-Heink, Who Has Just Passed Her Fifty-second Birthday, Purchases Big Tract.

SAN DIEGO, CAL., June 28.—"Yes, now I am a farmer; also I am a mother, and I have just had my fifty-second birthday."

It was Mme. Schumann-Heink who spoke. Wreathed in smiles and radiating health—the great artist, accompanied by her youngest child and most beautiful daughter, descended from an incoming train to begin a six-month vacation here.

She had just completed her longest American tour and returns with the greatest profits made by any artist in concert this season.

Last year Mme. Schumann-Heink bought 3,000 acres here. She plans to make ranches with gardens, barren wastes into orchards and her rancho the garden spot of America.

"Farming," enthused Madame, "next to the rearing of babies, is the most interesting work in the world."

"But the farming, madame, surely you will not hoe?"

"Look at these two hands. I ask you, do they not appear capable? I have raised and worked for my children and they are yet strong—nicht?" Madame held her pink palms upward. One of the most convincing proofs of what she said was their appearance. The fingers are long and slender and young and strong enough to be envied by any woman half the diva's age.

And this can also be said truthfully of her face and form. Mme. Schumann's flamed with health.

"Yes, I shall be getting out and digging like a regular farmer. Oh, that is nothing to dig," she stated. "Once I made a garden at my New York home.

"Ach, yes, it is good to grow fruit, but it is better to be the mother of babies."

Babies Saved From Bolt by Feather Bed

Children Are Found Unhurt in Mattress After Room Is Wrecked by Lightning.

NEW YORK, June 28.—A feather mattress saved two children of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Johnson on the Peter Cortelyou farm, at Franklin Park, near New Brunswick, N. J., when a bolt of lightning struck their bed. The parents were awakened by a tremendous crash and a shriek from the children in an adjoining room. A flash of lightning just as they reached the room revealed a big hole in the roof and one in the floor.

The father obtained a lamp and found the bedstead shattered to pieces. Securely rolled up in the feather mattress, however, were the two little ones, almost suffocated with heat but unhurt.

SWEETPEAS IMPORTED BY AUSTRIAN EMPEROR

Special Cable to The American.

VIENNA, June 28.—Sweetpeas, which were practically unknown in Austria only a few years ago, are now prominent in the Imperial Gardens at Schonbrunn.

The aged Emperor Francis Joseph is the first in Austria to "take up" the sweetpea. The director of the Imperial Gardens was sent to London and brought specimen plants back with him. Now the tables at the castle at Schonbrunn are decorated with sweetpeas in one color or at most two. The Emperor prefers pink and white to other combinations.

Chief's Gold Badge Found to be Nickel

New Head of Police Department Finds That Predecessors Had Worn Base Metal Insignia.

PASADENA, June 28.—"Silver Threads Among the Gold," merrily whistled newly appointed Chief of Police W. S. McIntire as he scraped off the gold from the badge that was turned over to him by his predecessor, W. F. Wood, who resigned from the office.

When Wood resigned he presented his successor with the badge containing the words, "Chief of Police, Pasadena." On making a close inspection of the badge, which had long borne a reputation of being solid gold, the new chief observed that it was somewhat tarnished.

A cleanser was then applied, with the result that the badge in a few minutes was a shining nickel-plated star and greatly similar to the other badges worn by the balance of the police department.

Free Market Starts To Cut Cost of Living

San Jose, Cal., Plans To Do Away With Profit Made by Middle Man.

SAN POSE, CAL., June 28.—San Jose hit the high cost of living a solar plexus blow to-day when, under the direction of the city administration, a free market was opened in South Market Street at the City Hall Park.

A score of produce wagons came for the opening, and long before the selling day was over every scrap of salable goods had been disposed of and a crowd clamored for a chance to purchase.

Market Master Joseph Napoli declares that the first day's business demonstrated that producers received 25 per cent more for their sales than they could get from the middle man and that buyers saved a minimum of 25 per cent by doing business directly with the producers.

CONVICTS DINE IN HOTEL THEN SEE MOVING PICTURE

COLUMBUS, O., June 28.—Five penitentiary prisoners, serving sentences ranging from manslaughter to pocket picking, were taken from their cells by an official of the State Board of Administration and treated to a banquet at one of the large hotels. Following the banquet the prisoners were taken to moving picture shows and given an entertainment which they will long remember.

JAP EMIGRANTS NOW COLONIZING BRAZILIAN LANDS

1,500 Arrivals But Vanguard of Orientals to Be Sent to South America.

SEATTLE, WASH., June 28.—How Japan is colonizing Brazil was given in detail here with the arrival of the Japanese steamship Sanuki Maru.

Fifteen hundred Japanese emigrants were landed at Santos, Brazil, May 15. They are the vanguard of a great population to be sent to South America to become a part of the first permanent Japanese colony in Brazil under the Sao Paulo colonization agreement recently entered into between Japan and Brazil.

The first award of territory comprises approximately 150,000 acres of agricultural land.

Another Japanese Brazilian colonization enterprise has been completed and passengers of the Sanuki say that the two Governments have arranged for the concession of a considerable area of fertile country which will be settled by Japanese. Settlers for this colony will leave Japan about the end of the present year.

Japanese contract labor is now being sent into South Africa and both Brazil and Peru are being supplied with coolies, who leave Japan under contract with various South American industrial organizations.

CONTESTANTS WORKING HARD FOR MORE VOTES

Manager of Pony Race Advises Girls and Boys to Use Follow-Up System.

SYSTEMATIC WORK WINS

Shetlands Are Growing Fat and Strong at Loomis Avenue Stable Where They Are Kept.

The last week of the "clubs of five" bonus offer in The Georgian and American pony contest begins with all contestants straining hard to take advantage of the benefit to be gained by getting subscriptions before the time limit is up.

Standings published in The American show great gains, but they are small compared with the leaps forward which will be shown when the bonus votes are reckoned up for publication in next Wednesday's Georgian. The contest manager believes it will take the office force all of the night of July 5 to make the proper entries.

There also is a bonus of 50,000 votes for the first $30 turned in for subscriptions by any of the contestants. This offer may be withdrawn at any time.

Use Follow-Up System.

The contest manager wishes to repeat his suggestion that contestants take a leaf from the books of the successful business man and institute a "follow-up" system. A list of those whose subscriptions expire soon should be made, and all such subscribers visited with a request for a renewal. Nine times out of ten, a renewal is easier to get than the first subscription, for at the end of a short trial the subscriber generally gets to like The Georgian and American so well that he wants to continue.

It is systematic work of this sort which counts for more than the spurts of a day or two, which, while they may yield remarkable results, are not frequent enough to build up totals to the point where the contestant can feel sure of a pony.

None Sure of Winning.

No contestant has a right to feel sure of winning as yet. There is not a boy or girl in the race who can not be passed by an energetic rival, and some who are leading now have a very poor start, indeed.

Meanwhile, the ponies are "eating their heads off" at 55 Loomis Avenue, where their future owners are invited to call and see them. All are rounding into great shape, and they are prettier every day. It is going to be a hard task for the winners to pick the ponies they like best from the splendid bunch The Georgian and American have bought.

"I subscribed to The Georgian and American a week ago, and the paper has not begun to come to my home yet," is a complaint heard every now and then.

Usually it develops that the subscriber gave his money to one of the contestants, and that the contestant is "holding back."

This is poor policy, particularly if it is a short-term subscription, for when a contestant treats a subscriber in this way the man is not going to be as willing to give the contestant his renewal.

"Don't hold back," is the advice of the contest manager—and he knows best.

BONUS OFFER IN PONY CONTEST GIVES 1 WEEK MORE OF OPPORTUNITY

Wanting to win and working to win differ widely. Working to win is what counts, and working to win now, while the special bonus vote offers are in effect in The Georgian and American pony contest.

July 4 means more than cannon crackers, picnics and general celebrations to the pony contestants. It means, to them, the end of one of the bonus offers, and July 4 is little more than a week away.

Clubs of five subscriptions, yearly, half-yearly, or for three months, bring great rewards until the expiration of the period thus limited. And "when the polls close" for these club bonus votes the office force of the contest manager expects an all-night session reckoning up the strength of the many candidates.

Some have brought in five subscriptions at a time to take advantage of the bonus. Others have brought them in one, two or three at a time. In either case, the clubs will be credited accurately. And overnight the standings will seem to have doubled, though the bonus votes represent weeks of work.

The ponies now are at 55 Loomis Avenue, where contestants are welcome. If they arrive at the right time they will see the ponies being exercised.

Fortune in Gold Awaits Claimants

Insane Kansas Woman Leaves Bag of Nuggets and Dust Worth $10,000.

HUTCHINSON, KANS., June 28.—A bag of gold nuggets and gold dust worth $10,000 awaits any heirs who may be found to the estate of Mrs. Ann M. Bernhart, who died recently in Davenport, Iowa, according to the announcement of G. M. Duckworth, administrator.

Several years ago Mrs. Bernhart was adjudged of unsound mind. Duckworth was named her guardian. The cottage here where she lived alone was closed and she went to an asylum. Upon her death Duckworth thoroughly searched her cottage. The nuggets and dust in small bags were found secreted in the dwelling.

WHAT ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS AND JOBBERS ARE DOING

MANUFACTURES DINNER PLANNED FOR EVE OF 4TH

New Ansley Hotel Will Serve Atlanta Factory Owners to the Number of 200.

HOME EXHIBIT PLANS TOPIC

Brooks Morgan Has Definite Proposals for Acceptance or Rejection—Pledges Desired.

Atlanta manufacturers, to the probable number of 200, will gather on the evening of July 3 at the Ansley Hotel for a dinner.

The object of the dinner is to discuss the proposed permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods, and at the same time, to discuss the advisability of holding the annual temporary exhibit, such as was held last year at the time of the Southern Merchants' Convention.

The dinner had been set for June 24, but the unavoidable absence from the city of Brooks Morgan necessitated a postponement.

The new date was set at an informal conference of Mr. Morgan, Wilmer L. Moore and Walter G. Cooper held Wednesday.

Invitations to the big "Manufacturers' Dinner" will be sent out at once, and a general response is expected.

At the dinner, Mr. Morgan will lay before the manufacturers definite proposals for lease or purchase of buildings suitable for the installation of a manufacturers' exhibit. It will, in brief, be a "show down." The permanent exhibit project has been gone over thoroughly. The manufacturers have seen Chattanooga's display, and they have learned in detail of New Haven's success. There has been plenty of time for them to make up their minds. At this dinner they are expected to signify what they intend doing.

If, as is expected, the will of the manufacturers is seen unanimously in favor of the exhibit, a start will be made. But the backers of the project do not wish to start unless they have assurance of 200 exhibitors and 40,000 or 50,000 feet of floor space.

Strenuous Work Done Preparing for Convention.

When the four or five thousand merchants from all over the South gather in Atlanta for their convention, during the first two weeks of August, it is doubtful if any of them will be able to realize the care and effort that has been expended to make their meeting a success.

For instance, one energetic committee has been toiling throughout the hot week in an effort to raise funds for the entertainment of the visitors. As a result of their conscientious endeavor, the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association sees its way clear, as to finances, to play host to the gathering.

Another committee has been hard at work preparing the program. The program is to be an elaborate affair. Three or four topics a day will be discussed, and most of the discussion will be in the shape of five-minute addresses. The traveling men are doing yeoman's work in finding the good speakers scattered throughout the territory, men who have opinions worth hearing and experience likely to be helpful to other merchants in their lines.

Moving Big Concern Takes Almost Week

Dougherty-Little-Redwine Co. Get to Temporary Quarters by Dint of Hard Work.

Almost a week has been required for moving the Dougherty-Little-Redwine Company from its old home in North Pryor Street to temporary quarters at 30-32 South Pryor Street. It is estimated that about forty boxcar loads of goods were moved, the stock being valued at $150,000.

"That amount of silks would not make much of a showing, but when it comes to underwear, it is a different story," remarked J. Little.

Jordan Thinks Europe's Land Banks Ideal for South

Cheap Loans on Farm Lands Spell Financial Independence for Cotton Grower, He Says.

Special Cable to The American.

By COLONEL HARVIE JORDAN.

(Member of the American Farm Credits Commission and President of the Southern Cotton Association)

OLDENBERG, GERMANY, June 28.—The capitalization of Southern cotton growers through the mortgage bank system, giving them mortgage loans at low interest with easy payments, would completely reorganize the cotton-growing industry of the South. I am convinced that the land mortgage business in America can be systematized along the lines of similar mortgage systems in Europe.

If this is done it will bring a new era of prosperity to the South and greatly increase the cash returns from cotton, which now represent practically the entire balance of trade of the United States.

Southern cotton growers to-day are just one year behind financially. They have been behind since the Civil War.

The curse of the cotton farmers is the store lien system, under which they are obliged each spring to purchase their supplies on credit from the supply merchants. Frequently farmers pay 50 per cent or more in excess of the cash price of goods for the privilege of this credit. Moreover, the supply merchants secure absolute control over the farmers.

Marketing Is Hurried.

The cotton crop has to be marketed as soon as harvested. Farmers have practically no control over the marketing. This is because they have no financial independence. The American commission has studied the mortgage systems which place European farmers in far stronger positions as borrowers than our own farmers. In America we still are clinging to the antiquated practice of forcing short-time loans on the agriculturist.

European farmers borrow through an intermediary society and enjoy as strong positions as any railroad or municipality. If our Southern farmers mortgage their land they must pay back the entire principal in lump sum in a few years, else pay a costly commission for renewal. So long as this is true naturally the farmers won't mortgage their land until actually pressed to the wall.

In contrast to this European farmers repay their loans in small annual installments. So long as they meet their interest payments they can never be sold out. Their entire payments for both interest and principal amount to less than our farmers frequently are required to pay for interest alone.

Cash Basis Possible.

If Southern farmers can get a device to act as their agent in borrowing and can capitalize their land holdings on terms that will permit them to repay little by little, we can put the cotton-growing industry of the South on a cash basis. This would enable our farmers to buy on a cash basis and secure financial independence. It would break the power of the supply merchants. It would be the surest way to a New South. A New South would mean prosperity to the nation.

There is no theory in this proposition. I have studied these mortgage systems here. They are straight business enterprises that we Americans can adopt, perhaps improve upon. The Legislature of every State in the Union should take this matter under consideration.

When currency reform is enacted in the United States this should form part of the program. Farmers never up to this time had any consideration whatsoever given their requirements as borrowers. In currency or banking legislation they have been left to get along as well as they could. This has been largely responsible for the financial positions of the Southern farmers to-day.

Men's Hats For Next Fall Pert Affairs, Blue and Green

Fall, 1913, hats for men are being shown by jobbers in Atlanta.

Take them big and large, they deserve the name the women give their headgear—they are "creations."

One "creation," for instance, is green velour, with a little bow at the back, and a button-hole stitched edge.

Brown-Perryman-Greene Company say velours, particularly in blue and green, are "the thing" for fall. Velours retail from $3.50 to $7.50.

The "Trooper" shape is proper. To make a "Trooper" shape, punch out a crown, then strike it with the edge of the hand, lengthwise. That's all.

Another "creation" particularly fetching is blue, with red, white and blue stitching which runs up and down the crown and around and around the brim. A button is in the geometrical center of the crown.

Perhaps the best of the bunch, to many tastes, is a green felt hat, "Trooper" shape, of course, with "zebra" finish. "Zebra" finish means that it is 'self-striped." Alternate stripes are smooth, the others are unfinished—fuzzy, in a word. The stripes are something less than half an inch wide, and run vertically on the crown. The hat really is not "freaky." It is attractive.

Other soft hats are lined with gay silk, have welt edges, or are otherwise adorned.

Brand-new is a chinchilla hat. Corduroy and cloth of all kinds will be much in vogue this autumn.

Caps promise to continue their unprecedented popularity. They come in all patterns—one, for instance, a "cubist" design in maroon and tan.

For the man who will wear a derby, regardless, it may be news to know that the derby crowns will be a bit higher this fall, the brims about the same. Crowns seem to be working back from the flat effect of a year back to the old-fashioned high crown. They change a bit each year.

Boys—the little fellows—wear telescope shape hats, while you can't give them to their elders.

Of course, this takes no account of the "staples"—the conservative styles which never change.

LUMBER SALES SHOW BUILDING KEEPS UP WELL

Dealers in Supplies Tell of Big Things in Prospect for the Coming Autumn.

Dealers in lumber, brick, cement, plaster and building supplies report that Atlanta is going straight ahead in its expansion.

Unanimously they report good trade. One particularly encouraging feature, according to their expressions, is the steady increase in the number of small residences, homes costing between $3,000 and $4,000, seeming to predominate.

Furthermore, building supplies dealers are unanimous in saying that there are great plans in store for fall. If all rumors are to be believed, property owners are contemplating improvements at almost a "boom" rate as soon as summer is past.

Paint dealers also are cheerful. They report contractors figuring on work far ahead, and also general activity in refurnishing buildings which are not new, but which are being remodeled to meet the city's growing needs.

Expressions from dealers in these lines follow:

V. H. Kriegshaber: "Our observation is that there is a good deal of building contemplated—in the wind, so to speak. When conditions settle down this fall, we look for an excellent trade in building supplies."

Randall Bros.: "Our business is better than it ever has been in lumber and building material. The increase has come from the increase in medium priced houses, residences to cost between $3,000 and $4,000.

"It is hard to tell about the fall, but we look for a good trade. Prices are a little lower. This always is the case in June and July. There will be a reaction in August and September, and quotations will be stronger. This is the history of every year."

Willingham-Tift Lumber Co.: "Business has been quite brisk up to the present time, with particular activity in the erection of small houses. This looks to us like the right time to build, for prices, in our opinion, are at the bottom."

Seiple Sons: "Business is fairly good at the present time, and it is picking up rapidly. We look for a very good trade for the rest of the year. The market is steady, still prices are reasonable and it is a good time to build. We notice a revival particularly in the erection of small houses."

Dozier & Gay: "From the number of contractors who are figuring on painting to be done between now and fall, we look for a big business.

"Every indication is that a large number of new homes are to be built, and there are rumors of several large buildings for wholesale houses and small factories.

Trained Men Great Need Of Business World To-day

Germany and other European countries are far ahead of the United States in the matter of commercial education. This point was brought out in a speech before the annual convention of the National Association of Credit Men at Cincinnati.

"The annual losses by reason of failures in the United States amount now to some $200,000,000," said Mr. Gaehr, "or over $2 per capita. To put it concreately, the national annual loss from bad debts equals one-half the estimate cost of the Panama Canal.

"Professor Munsterberg of Harvard University observes that a great difficulty of our educational system has been that it does not teach a man to find himself, and when he learns his strong and his weak points, his real inclinations toward and qualifications for a pursuit in life, it is usually too late.

"We find the highway of commerce and life marked with sad monuments of men crushed under the wheels of progress who would have made a success in life had they had the proper direction and counsel and had they been taught to fashion their thoughts to fruitful issues, men who could and should have been helped to usefulness.

"A further difficulty is that the vocational demands are not sufficiently fixed and brought to the attention of the younger generations. They know comparatively little of the inner labors, the inner values, and inner difficulties of various professions and callings.

"Then, too, in many cases trivial chance influences decide the choice of a vocation. Young men often drop into a place, rather than deliberately choosing business as a life vocation.

"The need of better trained men, especially commercially, made itself felt several years ago, and as a result a number of universities and colleges of high standing organized schools of commerce, Harvard University ranking its School of Business Administration as one of the graduate schools. Several cities have established high schools of commerce, yet the schoolmaster and the business man are still too far apart.

Auto Sales Gaining Over Last Season

Business Gradually Working to Credit Basis—Men Buy Cars as They Buy Homes.

"So far as we are able to judge from the business done by our clients, automobile sales in Atlanta have been exceptionally good for the period which began January 1," says Joseph N. Moody, of the Auto Credit Sales Company.

"The automobile firms whom we represent as a credit clearing house report an increase over last season.

"Sales probably would be larger yet if we did not check them. Amusing as the idea may seem, we are in a sense philanthropists, for we are saving the people from themselves, in this way: Suppose a man with moderate income tries to buy an auto on time. We investigate carefully. If he has a family of girls, let us say, all living at home, and no income but his salary, we turn him down. If he had a family of boys, all working and able to help purchase a car, all well and good.

"The automobile business is working more and more toward a time basis. A man buys his motor car now just as he would buy his home—on payments. I believe the future will see 90 per cent of the business done in that way."

City Salesmen Take Outing; Truce Kept

Jobbers Agree Not to Scout for Business During Absence of Their Representatives.

City salesmen will be conspicuous by their absence this week. The grocer or dry goods merchant who needs to replenish his stock must telephone to his jobber. The jobbers have agreed not to solicit business for the week, but just to take what comes to them in the natural course of events.

The reason for this strange pact is that the jobbers are on their annual outing at the Isle of Palms, near Charleston, S. C.

In order not to take advantage of their absence, fifty or more jobbers signed a formal agreement of neutrality for the week, and O. T. Camp, president of the Retail Grocers' and Butchers' Association, sent a letter to all members of his organization acquainting them with the state of affairs, and asking that they fill urgent needs only, by using the tele-

SELLING NOTES.

The heavy demand for sport coats this season is helping the dress goods trade over some rough spots. Chinchillas and sponges are used principally in the manufacture of these garments, and makers and wholesalers of these fabrics are doing a good business in them.

The firmness of 39-inch, 80 squares, is one of the features of the print cloth market at the moment. Printers have taken this construction in good quantities, and as a result of curtailed production by the mills the supply has fallen somewhat behind the demand.

A thing that is regarded as a good omen for the future of the men's wear fabrics trade is the promptness with which the manufacturing clothiers are settling up their accounts with the mill agents. In view of losses sustained by the clothiers as a result of the strike earlier in the year this action on their part is said to indicate the thorough soundness of the clothing industry.

RUSSIA SEEKING U. S. FRIENDSHIP IN NEW TREATY

Renewal of Pact Abrogated by Congress Is Proposed by Diplomats of Czar.

JEWISH QUESTION RISES

Washington Is Silent, but Understanding Is That Bryan Is Willing to Renew Negotiations.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Russia has asked the United States Government to take up the question of a renewal of a treaty of amity and commerce. The treaty of 1832 on that subject was abrogated out of hand by the Congress of the United States.

Secretary of State Bryan said today that the question of renewing negotiations had been discussed with the President, but that there was nothing yet to state in the way of detail.

It has been stated to Russia, however, that the United States is willing to resume negotiations which had been commenced during the administration of the office of Secretary of State by Mr. Knox.

Two Diplomats Suggested.

The President is soon to appoint an Ambassador to the Court of St. Petersburg and the report is that a selection will be made between Charles R. Crane and Frederick Penfield, of Philadelphia and New York.

The administration will have to meet the question of the Jewish passport and the recognition of the Jews as American citizens without regard to race or religion in the new negotiations. It is well known that Russia was anxious to renew negotiations very soon after the affront to the Jewish race under the old treaty or by Russia's construction of the old treaty was wiped out by the joint resolution of Congress which abrogated the treaty of 1832. This action of Congress was unequivocally an act to rebuke Russia for her treatment of the Jews generally and specifically for her continued refusal to recognize passports issued to Jews.

Knox Charges Discrimination.

Secretary of State Knox held that the question of Jews should not enter into the matter at all, and that the real question was that the treaty of 1832 discriminated against American citizens.

It was stated during the last administration that Russia was trying to separate the Jewish passport question from all other questions which would enter into a treaty of amity and commerce, such as is made with all enlightened nations.

The statement was made at the time that the old administration frowned on this none too subtle suggestion of Russia and held that there should be no treaty except one that would do full justice to all Americans—Jews, Irish, English, Germans—no matter what their origin if they were citizens of the United States.

White House Silent.

The State Department at that time knew that if a treaty was sent to the Senate which did not include a solution of the passport question it could not be ratified. It is said that the present administration understands the situation thoroughly and will endeavor to get a treaty which will cover all American interests favorably or none at all.

At the White House no expression of opinion is yet obtainable from any official reflecting the views of the President. There is no question, however, that the Ambassador to be appointed by the President will be fully instructed on the passport question before he goes to St. Petersburg.

SOCIETY WOMAN GOES TO WORK IN BIG STORE

LOS ANGELES, June 28.—Miss Florence Lord, a graduate of Smith College, prominent socially in Chicago, New York and many other Eastern cities, and influential in suffrage clubs, has been working for a week or more in a Los Angeles department store, "to study the sociological conditions" at first hand, in order "to get away with her stunt."

Verses Tell How 'Imperator' Ought to be Pronounced

Great Trouble Found With Largest Liner Is That Everyone Gives Her a Different Name.

NEW YORK, June 28.—There is one fault already found with the Imperator, the giant vessel of the Hamburg-American line, which has just made her maiden voyage as the biggest ship afloat. The trouble is no one knows how to pronounce her name.

Many think they do, and as a result, she is called many things as Amerson Hough, the author, who answers to Huff, How, Hoe, Huge and a few other things.

In reply to inquiries as to the pronunciation the publicity agent says that the German pronunciation which is sanctioned by the modern Latinists makes the "a" in Imperator sound like the "a" in father. The accent is on the next syllable to the last. The poet laureate of the line has been so much puzzled by the variety of pronunciations that he has celebrated them in verse. Here are some of the couplets:

Biggest ship upon the water,
Gorgeous, quetnly Imperator.

If you do not like that style of calling the ship, perhaps the poet laureate remarked, you may take this:

In the finest class we state her,
Peerless, German Imperator.

"And please," the poet said, "do not make peerless "beerless." Then, after running his fingers through his hair, the poet emitted and submitted this:

Vastness!—making senses totter!
Sea Collossus, Imperator!

"To the tune of 'Dixie,'" said the poet, we might get still another line on the pronunciation by singing:

Buckwheat cakes and a little batter
Taste quite good on the Imperator!

Greatest Salmon Run in Puget Sound

Quadrennial Migration of Horde of Fish From Fraser River Begins on Pacific Coast.

SEATTLE, June 28.—Steamship men report the approach of the annual Sockeye salmon run, which this year is the quadrennial big run, the greatest fish migration in the world. The fish now entering the Sound were born four years ago.

When the first white men came to the Northwest the Indians told them of this periodical big run, which had been regular as far back as their tribal legends went. It is the Canadian theory that the fish making up the big run are hatched in Fraser River and grow to maturity off the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Four years ago so many traps were set for the mature fish that few were able to enter the Fraser, and the Canadians have insisted that the big run of 1913 would be a failure. Hence there is international interest in the size of the approaching swarms of salmon.

Anything Shocking Police, Called Bad

Criticism of Chiefs of Present Styles Declared Cause for Women of Country to Act

JOHNSTOWN, PA., June 28.—Attacking immodesty in women's dress, Mrs. H. W. Black, of Riverdale, today stirred the delegates and visitors gathered at the annual convention of the Cambria County Sabbath School Association, in session here.

"Christian women should not wear clothes that cause people to turn and look at them after they pass," declared Mrs. Black.

"The police chiefs in convention at Washington have gone on record demanding a reform in women's dress. When it gets so bad that the police have to ask such a thing, I think it is time Christian women should act."

My Experience With Tacco ---The New Handy Varnish

By EVELYN WREN

HOUSEWIVES realize that a coat of varnish is often more satisfactory than a new piece of furniture. It is a gratification to see the marred chair which belonged to the first parlor suit look like new. The dining table has held many simple breakfasts, many delightful luncheons and many bountiful dinners, and the steaming dishes have left ugly marks upon its once shining surface. To see it emerge from its varnish treatment is like welcoming back an old friend.

Varnishing seems like tiresome, dirty work, and a task suitable for men attired in overalls. I had always associated it with laborers' muscles and rough clothing until one day when I decided my desk at The American office needed some attention.

You do not become wholly unfeminine even if you are a newspaper woman. I was tired of seeing the black spot where the inkwell had overturned. I did not like the white mark where a glass of ice water had stood. All at once I had a hunch that I could do my work better if a marred place did not constantly remind me of a loss of temper and consequent lowering of self-respect and dignity. The refinishing of my desk became an obsession.

I read advertisements. Fortunately I am influenced by them. When I saw an advertisement of a varnish which a woman could apply with a cloth just as a furniture polish is applied, I resolved to investigate the novel preparation.

I went to the sixth floor of the Forsyth Building and entered the offices of The Amber Chemical Company. There I almost breathlessly inquired for Tacco, the water-proof, dust-proof and heat-proof varnish. (To tell the truth, I did not much mind about the heat-proof feature, for most of the heat in our office is caused by irritable nerves, and not by the weather. I am no exception.)

A bottle of Tacco was put into my hand, and I grasped a piece of cheesecloth and went energetically to work. I used just as much muscle as three years of typewriting will produce in a feminine arm. I worked as hard as any furniture polisher ever dreamed of doing in his worst nightmare. I thought I was doing well.

Imagine my chagrin and the expression on my face when the cloth was quietly taken from my vigorous grasp and I was shown that Tacco requires no rubbing. You do not have to use as much energy as I do in ordinary dusting.

Dust the article first. If it is much stained you might well apply a little soap and water. Then apply your Tacco to the dry surface. A piece of cheesecloth is the best medium, and a firm, gentle movement like that of dusting will put the varnish on in the best form. Then let it dry. At the end of five hours view the result and feel proud of your work which is really but a pastime.

Have a Tacco day. Take the breakfast cloth off when husband has departed for the office. Apply Tacco according to the directions on the box, and the dining table will be ready for use at lunch time. Of course if husband is a capitalist and breakfasts at 10:30 instead of at 7 you will probably not have the pleasure of using Tacco yourself. Let us hope that you are one of those domestic little housewives who just "loves" to make your home pretty with your personal effort, and that husband has not outgrown his appreciation of the little touches which you can give just a bit better than any hired help.

The table in the living room has played an important part in the happiness of the household. You could not think of home without that table, and the ones you see in the store windows never look quite as hospitable or nearly so homelike. Here Jack has read his paper and graciously explained politics to your bewildered self as you stitched on little frocks which were to go to Kindergarten with Little Girl. It has held Big Brother's school books and his drawing instruments. (Said drawing instruments are responsible for the big unsightly gash at the end.) All in all, you feel as you begin to apply Tacco with a gentle hand that this table has many dear memories. You would like to see it as fresh and pretty as it was when you and Jack picked it out. It seemed the finest table in the world on that day. How you blushed, and how manly Jack looked as he quietly drew the money from his pocket and ordered it sent to your new home.

When the table is finished the big chair will seem more worn and bruised than ever. You never realized how shabby the living room was getting. It seems but a day or two ago that you decided to surprise Jack with that comfortable chair on his birthday. You saved from your housekeeping money bit by bit and grew anxious toward the last for fear the fund would not be large enough. You grow tender toward that big chair as you remember Jack's eyes when he first espied it and then quickly gazed at you. The lovelight was there, even if you had been married a half-dozen years, and had but recently lost many hours of sleep with Little Girl's teething episode.

The tender feelings do not interfere with the application of Tacco. Let retrospection have its sway, and when you have had the pleasure of many happy memories look at the result. The table will shine like new. The gash made by Big Brother's steel ruler will not show. Tacco has acted as a filler and made the surface smooth as glass. Dusting will be a light task now. You may even scrub the table, for it has a water-proof finish now. The chair will bring the lovelight to Jack's eyes anew, for he, too, will remember the day your love made the gift.

If you are a housekeeper, you will welcome Tacco as a means of making your home brighter and more cheerful. You need never wish for an opportunity to send shabby furniture away to be refinished. You can buy a bottle of Tacco for only 50 cents. The economy of it will be demonstrated by its first use, and you will be ready to purchase a quart, half-gallon or gallon can before many days.

When I like anything I never take my liking for granted. I analyze my appreciation. Here is my analysis of my fondness for Tacco:

It requires absolutely no rubbing.
It dries in from two to five hours.
It is water-proof as well as dust and heat proof.
It is economical in time and money.

Well, my desk at The American office has had its Tacco treatment. Come in to see it, if you like. Then investigate Tacco as I did, if you like, or better still, benefit by my written experience and buy a bottle or can at any good drug or hardware store.

BOY CONFESSES KILLING MOTHER AND BROTHER

Berkley Fleming, 19, of Ironton, Mo., Appears Unconcerned When Accused of Crime.

IRONTON, O., June 28.—Berkley Fleming, 19, has confessed to shooting his half-brother, Culbertson Stewart, almost three years ago, and his mother a few days ago.

The police took the boy to his grandfather's farm, where he pointed out the grave of his mother and stood by unconcerned as the body was removed. He was not impressed when the skeleton of Culbertson was exhumed.

Believe Boy Degenerate.

Chief of Police King, Dr. Wells and the Rev. W. H. Hampton, who have suspected for several months that Berkeley killed Culbertson, believe Berkeley a degenerate of the worst type.

Their theory is that he killed Culbertson because of jealousy and that he had worked out his carefull arranged plan of concealing the crime before he shot his brother.

The murder of the mother, they believe, was a part of his plan to keep her from exposing his former murder. A bullet hole in the back of the head of each victim and the mother's bruised face, say these men, destroy any accident theory.

Mother Is Suspicious.

Culbertson Stewart disappeared July 14, 1910, Berkeley's 17th birthday. The other brother afterward wrote letters to his mother purporting to come from Culbertson. She became suspicious, and he decided to kill her also.

After the crime he was found at a hotel waiting for dinner. He had gone there in a buggy to take his sweetheart riding. He made no objection to going to the police station, where he confessed.

Aged Pair Perform Own Marriage Rites

Bridegroom, 75 Years Old, Declares It Was His Sixth Experience With Such Ceremony

BEAVER, PA., June 28.—Dr. Akkelon Mercer, seventy-five years old of Beaver Falls, and Sarah L. Calgrove, sixty-five years old, of Wetzel county, West Virginia, performed their own marriage ceremony here.

When the pair obtained their license they informed Hamilton, the clerk, that all they needed was a license, as they could dispense with all bridal attendants and the minister.

Doctor Mercer and Mrs. Calgrove to Hamilton issued the license for marry themselves in the presence of witnesses. Doctor Mercer stated that he had been married five times, and in each instance he and his bride had performed their own ceremony, always in the presence of two witnesses.

Defaulter Hired to Audit Bank's Books

Man Who Wrecked Financial Institution, Will Go to Work to Untangle Its Affairs.

CARUTHERSVILLE, MO., June 28.—A. B. Tindle, cashier of the Pemiscot County Bank, which closed its doors following the discovery that he was short in his accounts, will be retained by the reorganizers to aid in straightening out its affairs.

"There is no desire on the part of the directors of the bank to prosecute Tindle," one of the directors said to-day. "He has turned over all his property and has been punished enough by his sudden fall from a position of trust and respect in the community."

Tindle's personal fortune is estimated at $200,000.

The action of the directors of the bank in retaining him in the task of straightening out the confusion caused by his shortage meets with the approval of a majority of the citizens it is said.

Prehistoric Flying Reptile Discovered

Skeleton of Pterodactyl Monster Is Found in Wyoming Fossil Bed by Geologists.

CASPER, WYO., June 28.—Dr. F. Salathe and D. VanWagener, geologists, who are prospecting this vicinity for oil, reported the discovery eighteen miles from Casper of a fossil bed, conspicuously visible in which is the almost perfect silicified skeleton of a flying reptile, probably of the pterodactyl, which measures at least sixty feet in length. The creature in life must have had a wing expansion of eighty feet.

Millionaire Gives Free Circus to Pay Pledge of Boyhood

Packer Leaves Home as Child to Make Fortune After Missing Show for Lack of Money.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Edward Tilden, millionaire packer, produced a circus to-day for "all the children within walking or riding distance" of the Tilden estate at Lake Delavan, Wis.

The huge entertainment cost $10,000 and had been planned for 25 years by the host. It grew out of a painfully vivid recollection of a circus that had come to town and gone away again without his getting inside the tent. It was fresh in his mind when he left Delavan a quarter of a century ago to come to Chicago to "make his fortune." At the train Edward Tilden told friends:

"I'm coming back some day and buy the town and give everyone a good time, and let every boy here see a circus."

A special carload of entertainers left Chicago for Delavan this morning. A dog and pony show and a band of 40 pieces left last night. The children also saw an aeroplane flight, had automobile rides and a big dinner.

Child Offered Home For Looking Pleasant

Smiling Face of Orphan in Photographed Group Wins Hearts of Couple Who Lost Baby.

POCAHONTAS, ILL., June 28.—In Pocahontas there may be a home for a little girl because she "looked pleasant" when a photographer took the picture of a group of children waiting for an automobile ride. Children in the orphan asylums on that day were given an outing by the Automobile Club of St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Miles, of Pocahontas, adopted a little girl several years ago. She died. Something about two of the little girls whose pictures appeared in the newspaper reminded them of the little one who died, and they have written for information about the children.

INDIAN GIRLS WILL TRY SKILL AT HAT-MAKING

CARLISLE, PA., June 28.—Indian art will now show itself in hats. At least that is the natural conclusion drawn from an announcement made by the Carlisle Indian School that a course in millinery has been established for aborigines.

Indian art, the absolutely original gift of America to the world, has expressed itself in pottery, in rugs, in a dozen other ways, but it has never before entered the field of headgear, and it is expected that this new innovation may yet cast the chic French models into the deep shadows.

SCHOOL ROLLS FAIL TO KEEP UP WITH BIRTHS

Wide Discrepancy Is Shown in Number of Pupils and Increase of Children.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Chapters on "Roman Catholic Schools," "Typical Health Teaching Agencies of the United States," and "Parent-Teacher Associations" are special features of the annual report of the United States Commissioner of Education, just issued.

In addition to these the report contains substantial chapters on the following subjects: General survey of the year; educational legislation during 1912; higher education; city school systems; rural education; recent movements in negro education; a review of agricultural education; progress in vocational education; library development; education in Alaska, the Philippines, Hawaii, Porto Rico, and other dependencies; Indian education; educational activities in Canada, Latin-America, Great Britain, Northern Europe, France and Switzerland, Germany, Southern Europe and Russia; together with a general view of conditions in Asia, Africa, Australia and New Zealand.

In his introduction to the report the commissioner discusses the wide discrepancy between the increase in the number of children of school age and the actual enrollment; an apparent reduction in teachers' salaries during the year; the remarkable increase in high schools and high school enrollment throughout the country; the decrease in professional schools, due to the enforcement of higher standards, lack of preparation of teachers, which Dr. Claxton characterizes as "one of the greatest evils of our school systems;" the shortness of the school term in the United States as compared with other civilized nations; and the abnormally large percentage of illiteracy in the rural districts.

Woman Jury Awards Verdict in Oregon

Plaintiff Is Awarded Damages of $5 in Legal Fight Over Cut of a Skirt.

ST. JOHNS, ORE., June 28.—The first regularly called woman's jury to serve in the State of Oregon tried a case in Justice Williams' court here and, after twenty minutes' conference, returned a verdict of $5 for the plaintiff. The jury was drawn in the regular form from a list of fifty women who have been chosen as liable for jury service during the year.

The case was one involving the price of a skirt. The plaintiff averred that a skirt which she had made by a local seamstress did not fit. She brought suit to recover the price of the skirt.

The fair jurors fixed the damages at $5.

FINDS COIN BEHIND PANEL; DIVIDES WITH FRIENDS

SHARON, PA., June 28.—As six carpenters were tearing down a house near the Leesburg coal mines, one found a false panel in a wall of the dining room from which he took a powder can containing $1,500.

The finder kept $500 as his share and each of his fellow workmen was given $200.

USE OF SCHOOLS AS AID TO LOVE MAKING URGED

Peace Executive Would Make Social Centers of Houses of Instruction in Big Cities.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Arthur Deering Call, executive director of the American Peace Society, has undertaken to win for the young men and women of America the right to make love to each other.

Said he:

"One of the nation's greatest needs is the promotion of acquaintance between young men and women, the fathers and mothers of the next generation, under free, attractive and wholesome conditions. We need more wholesome conditions for 'courting.'

"I can think of nothing so important to this generation as the lifemates of its various individuals, or so vital to the next as its fathers and mothers and home life generally.

Would Use Schools.

"I propose a wider use of school buildings for social and neighborhood purposes. I do not want love-making a part of the school curriculum, but I think that the same lips that recite the multiplication table or decline a noun in the class room in the garish light of day might just as well whisper tender nothings while the moon peeks in at the window later on.

"For a great majority of our young people in the cities the dance halls provide the only regular amusement they can afford, where any man who has the price can step up to any young woman and ask her to dance. No wonder such places become recruiting places for vice.

No Instruction Needed.

"Why not let the school be a cross between the church and the saloon? Every school should be arranged so that in the evening the young folks could gather there for games, folk-dancing classes, music, athletics, sewing classes and moving pictures.

"All the young folks want is opportunity to meet under proper environment. We don't have to teach the men how to make love, or young women how to listen to them, but we owe it to the race not to hinder or pervert their natural tendencies by improper environment."

NEGRO GIVES FOUR PENNIES FOR FIVE DOLLAR BILLS

INDIANAPOLIS, June 28.—While Miss Stella Koch was busy tending a stand on the city market last night, a well dressed negro asked if she could give him some paper money for gold.

"I have four $5 gold pieces," he explained, "and I would like to get some paper money in exchange for them, as I do not like to carry gold in my pocket."

The girl said she could accommodate him, and going to the cash drawer produced four $5 bills. She handed the bills to the negro, and he dropped four bright, shining pennies into her oustretched hand.

TARIFF CUTS IN SENATE TO AID NATION'S DINING ROOM

Many House Figures Lowered and Free List Increased — Despite Cuts, Bill Is Expected to Produce $5,000,000 More Cash.

Atlanta's Need for Help to Reduce the High Cost of Living Is Shown by Figures Indicating Soaring Price of Foodstuffs.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The revised tariff bill laid before the Senate Democratic caucus by Mr. Simmons, chairman of the finance committee, carries important reductions in the Underwood tariff bill rates on iron, steel and other metal products. It added cattle, wheat, pig iron, Angora wool, and many other articles to the free list, and increased rates on many classes of cotton goods and some silk products.

President Wilson's desires as to free wool in 1916 and free wool at once, prevailed in the redraft of the bill. To the list of "market basket" reductions the Underwood bill contained, the Senate committee added many important items.

In the general level of its rates the "Simmons bill" represents a heavier cut from the present Payne-Aldrich rates than the House bill.

Senator Simmons believes the caucus will discuss the bill not longer than a week.

Simmons' Statement.

The bill probably will come to a vote in the Senate by September 1.

In a statement Chairman Simmons said:

"The revenues of the Government will be increased approximately $5,000,000, haid in hand with a reduction of the taxation following the reductions already made in the House bill. These increases in revenues will be made up by a tariff on bananas and restoration of the full internal duty of $1.10 per gallon on brandies used in fortifying wines.

"With regard to the sugar schedule no change was made from the provision of the Underwood bill except to strike out 'sugars tinctured and colored,' for fear that ultramarine blue used in bleaching sugar might be regarded as colored matter and thereby refined sugar become subject to a duty of 2 cents a pound.

"With regard to cigars and other tobacco products from the Philippines the provision of the Underwood bill permitting cigars with 80 per cent of tobacco the product of the Philippine Islands and 20 per cent the produce of foreign countries to be admitted into the United States free of duty, was stricken out of the bill. Only cigars and tobacco products exclusively of Philippine tobacco to be admitted free of duty into the United States."

The Liquor Schedule.

Of the amendment to the liquor schedule, the statement said:

"An additional section is added repealing so much of the act approved October 1, 1890, and acts amendatory thereto, so far as they relate to the use free of tax of spirits for the fortification of sweet wines, and providing that hereafter all wine spirits, grape brandy and alcohol so used shall be subject to the same tax as in other cases.

"It is intimated that this tax will result in an increase of revenue of approximately $7,000,000 per annum.

"The Senate Finance Committee followed the House and treated the cotton yarns as the House bill treated cotton cloth," the statement continued, "by adding a duty of two and one-half per cent upon cotton cloth when combed, bleached, dyed, mercerized or colored. This is the most important change that the Senate committee made in the House cotton schedule."

Retaliatory Clause.

The amendment permitting the President to proclaim special rates when foreign nations discriminate against the United States provides that he shall exercise this authority on certain articles, as follows:

"Fish, fresh, smoked and dried, pickled or otherwise prepared, 1 cent per pound; on wheat, 10 cents per bushel; on wheat flour, 45 cents per barrel; on coffee, 3 cents per pound; on tea, 10 cents per pound.

"On the following articles a duty

Pigeons to Keep City Sane, Says Expert

Dr. B. Chester King, of Atlanta, Tells Chicago That Its Safety Rests With Doves.

CHICAGO, June 28.—If Chicagoans are to be saved from the mad house at all it will be by the pigeons.

Dr. B. Chester King, an Atlanta alienist, finds hope for the city's sanity in the pigeons that flutter about the Loop all day.

"Several times each day," says the doctor, "the man who works in an office building should go to a window with the expectation of seeing one or more doves. Should he spy them, I suggest that he forget all else. There is something in just the name 'dove' that has a soothing effect upon the nerves."

Pastor Gets Town To Give Day to Ball

All Girard Suspends Business to Attend Games, but There Is No Playing on Sunday.

GIRARD, KANS., June 28.—Girard has found a happy solution to the problem of Sunday baseball by setting out one day in the week when everybody suspends business operations and goes to the ball game.

This arrangement came through the suggestion of the Rev. M. L. Morrison, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, after considerable wrangling early in the summer between people who wanted ball games on Sunday and those who did not. The new arrangement was tried yesterday for the second time. Everyone is pleased and the blue laws are enforced.

THE STICK-AT-IT CHARACTERISTIC

And the cumulative force of hard work reap richer rewards than genius.

All men can not have brilliant minds, but almost every one can cultivate continuity of purpose and develop a large capacity for work.

All great business successes have been the results of ceaseless and unremitting labor rather than the outgrowth of unusual intelligence.

REBELS STORM MEXICAN TOWN; MASSACRE 1,000

Federal Soldiers and Civilians Shot Down in Cold Blood at Durango.

CAPTIVES PUT TO TORTURE

Atrocities Practiced to Force Citizens to Reveal Hiding Places of Wealth.

MEXICO CITY, June 28.—One thousand soldiers and civilians were slaughtered by rebels when the city of Durango, capital of the State of the same name, fell into the insurgents' hands, according to word received here to-day from that city. Many of the victims were members of prominent families.

Men and women were tortured to death when they did not produce wealth at the bidding of the rebels.

Fighting between federals and insurgents is going on at Uruapam in the State of Michocan. Cuquio, in the State of Jalisco, was taken by rebels yesterday and the garrison put to the sword.

Rebels Advance on Juarez; Fight Nearer.

EL PASO, TEXAS, June 28.—Pancho Villa, Mexican rebel leader, who has announced his intention of taking Juarez and executing General Salazar, commander of the garrison, in the bull ring, established outposts within three miles of the town.

Ortega, who has 500 men, may cooperate with Villa. If Juarez falls, it will remove the most important Mexican port of entry on the United States border from Huerta and may result in the downfall of the Huerta government.

Prince of Wales Spends $1.25 a Week

Writes Home for More Money, but Mother Considers That This Amount Is Ample.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—The amount allotted to the Prince of Wales for pocket money has just become known. Every Saturday he receives just $1.25, which he terms his "old age pension." He is occasionally a trifle extravagant and mortgages his money in advance.

Toward the end of the last term at Oxford he was asked by a friend to join a party to visit the theater.

The Prince's reply was, "Sorry, old man, but I am clean broke."

"Why don't you write home for some more?" asked the friend.

"I did," replied the Prince, "but mother said I was too extravagant."

Mrs. Marshall Finds $2,000 House at Last

Wife of Vice President Refuses to Pay More, Wishing to Live Within Husband's Salary.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The long house hunt of Mrs. Marshall, wife of the Vice President, is probably over, as she has found a suitable house on Columbia Road, Northwest. Her hunt was prolonged owing to the fact that she set $2,000 yearly as the price they would pay. The Marshalls have said they must live within their salary, and Washington society is eagerly watching to see how they will manage with the many social and financial demands upon them. Mrs. Marshall wanted to go to the country, but feared it would be too far for the Congressional wives to visit.

Congress to Force White Slave Inquiry

Reasons for Postponement of Diggs-Caminetta Case by Department of Justice To Be Bared.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Investigation of the postponement of the Diggs-Caminetti white slave case by the Department of Justice must go on, is the edict of the Congressmen behind the resolutions.

They are determined to bare the entire correspondence between McNab and the Attorney General and uncover the influences behind the white slave and Western Fuel cases.

If the House for any reason fails to take up the investigation Tuesday, the Senate is determined to dig to the bottom of the matter itself. No "pull" or influence can block this inquiry, it is declared.

King George Finds Platonic Romance With Fair Countess

Monarch Pays Marked Attention to Wife of Lord Mar While Queen Mary Is Absent.

Special Cable to The Sunday American.

LONDON, June 28—Every one thought King George so extremely domestic and conventional that it has come as rather a shock to people outside court circles to find him paying marked attention to the beautiful Countess of Mar and Killie.

The lovely countess, who is in her prime and a favorite of King Edward, is to be found wherever the King is.

Lord Mar goes about very little, but it was noticed that he and his wife were included in the royal house party at Windsor Castle for the Ascot races.

When Queen Mary was absent from the races, Lady Mar was always at the King's side, but when Her Majesty was present Lady Mar mixed with the general crowd in the royal inclosure.

Lady Mar is very sympathetic and attractive. The inner circle at the court is intensely amused at this mild platonic flirtation.

Mrs. Astor Bars Too Fervid Trotting

Society Youth Comes to Grief When He Disregards Rules of Conduct Fixed by Hostess.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—Mrs. John Astor is becoming known in social circles as a hostess whose rules of conduct must be obeyed by her guests. One young man who, until recently, doubted this, is now lamenting his mistake. Mrs. Astor permits the "tango" and "turkey trot" at her dances, but insists that they be danced in moderation. When this guest so far forgot himself as to verge on to the vulgar, he was quickly shown the door.

Mrs. Astor's example is not followed by all of London's hostesses. At the entertainments of a certain duchess the ragtime is accompanied by a great deal of roughness, being usually danced with the lights out.

Early Cold Injures Crops of Michigan

Wheat Promises but Half a Crop, Hay One-third, and Fruit Outlook Is Poor.

LANSING, MICH., June 28.—Michigan Agricultural College field men and district supervisors report crop prospects of the State the poorest in years, due to the early cold, wet season and late frosts, followed by the present hot, dry weather.

Wheat promises little better than half a crop, hay one-third, oats one-half. Early potatoes have been badly frosted in sections and will not produce over one-quarter crop without rain.

Fruit is equally poor. Plums and grapes are expected to be about 30 or 40 per cent of a crop.

St. Louis Tourist Unexpectedly Finds Self in Noblewoman's Car and Romance Ripens.

NEW YORK, June 28.—James Hurley, a railroad man of St. Louis, while automobiling in Paris a year ago, ran his car into that of the Baroness Barbara Ursula Kalinowski of Weisbaden and was hurled into the tonneau, where the Baroness was sitting. He gave her his card and later offered her his heart.

Arriving here by the Hamburg-American liner Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, she left for St. Louis, where the Baroness will be married to Mr. Hurley.

Gatun Gates Stand Their Supreme Test

Atlantic Waters Reach Sea Level and Locks Must Hold Against Full Pressure of Water.

PANAMA, June 28.—The Atlantic waters which have been allowed to run slowly against the lower gates at Gatun are at sea level to-day. The large gates are being put to the actual test of full pressure for the first time.

The engineers are watching the rise of the water with interest, and they report that the gates are watertight. The water is at the 50-foot stage.

PRICES TO STAY AS THEY ARE NOW, SAYS SULZBERGER

NEW YORK, June 28.—"Meat will never be any cheaper in the United States than it is now," declared G. F. Sulzberger, of Sulzberger & Schwarzchild, on his arrival from Europe on the Mauretania. "The only effect the change in the tariff will cause will be to keep prices where they are. Without this revision in the tariff, there would undoubtedly have been a big jump in prices."

SLATON'S BILLS READY TO PASS

Inaugurated With Utmost Simplicity

Legislature Wants to Aid Governor

Inaugural Address of Slaton Urges New Taxation System

SWEEPING legislative reforms are urged by Governor John M. Slaton in his inaugural address and message delivered to the Legislature Saturday. Following are the ten most important reforms he urges:

1. An occupation tax on corporations, with the maximum $200 per annum on corporations of more than $1,000,000 capital; the tax on smaller corporations to be adjusted accordingly.

2. Changes in the registration laws. He says: "The present registration law should be so amended that when a voter has once proven his qualification by registering and being enrolled, he shall remain a registered voter unless disqualified for some cause due himself."

3. The need for good roads, with a highway commissioner or a commission. The message says: "An intelligent highway commission, or commissioner, clothed with the proper authority, could be the means of untold benefit in suggesting the proper methods of building roads."

4. A declaration that the sale of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the State's property, should not be considered. The problem of its disposal should be considered by a commission, with directions to report its recommendations and its reasons therefor.

5. The passage of a law abolishing the defendant's statement in criminal trials, and providing in its place that he be sworn as a witness, if he so desires.

6. The Legislature is urged to consider legislation making the carrying of concealed weapons a felony, subject to reduction to a misdemeanor by either judge or jury.

7. Consideration of proper and remedial banking laws. "The banks of a State perform public functions, and as such are properly subjected to governmental supervision," says the message.

8. The creation of a new office, to be known as State Auditor.

9. Sweeping reforms in the tax system of Georgia. The system in vogue in this State is wrong, and the equalization of taxation, either through enforcement of present laws or new correctives, is urged.

10. That the Legislature investigate the decline of the agricultural schools and take steps to apply the proper remedies.

Gainesville Naval Academy to Hold a Regatta on July 4

Riverside Cadets Expect Hundreds of Visitors to See Sports on the Chattahoochee.

GAINESVILLE, June 28.—The first regatta of the Riverside Summer Naval School and Camp, which was opened here Thursday, will be held on July 4. Hundreds of visitors are expected to be on hand to see the sports.

The naval school and camp has a large enrollment this year, students being registered from practically all of the Southern States, including Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana, Tennessee, South Carolina, North Carolina, North Carolina, Kentucky and Virgina.

Captain Patterson, of the Culver Ind., Military Academy, will have charge of the naval and swimming departments this year, while Professor R. E. Brooks, superintendent of the Dublin public schools, will assist in the academic department.

Georgia Bankers to Urge Laws at This Legislative Session

One Provides Larger Salary for State Treasurer—Banking Department Considered.

The Georgia Bankers' Association, of which L. P. Hillyer, of Macon, is president and Haynes McFadden, of Atlanta, secretary, will urge new laws in the present session of the Legislature, according to announcement Saturday.

The association now has under advisement several bills including one for a constitutional amendment providing larger appropriations for the State Treasurer, who supervises $6,000,000, it is said, on a salary fund of $3,100.

The amendment, though, is being considered only by the association thus far. It has not been acted on. Haynes McFadden Saturday said a bill creating a banking department probably would not come up at this session of the Legislature.

New Executive Plans To Be at Work Early Each Day and to Devote Entire Time to State.

Inducted into office with a simplicity that harked back to the days of Thomas Jefferson, John Marshall Slaton will enter the Capitol Monday morning for the first time as Governor of the State of Georgia. Eager to begin work for the State and the people, Governor Slaton plans to be at his office at an unusually early hour, and will plunge into the affairs of the State of Georgia with the energy and ability that has made him a leading figure among the attorneys and citizens of Atlanta.

Backed by his dominant personality and with the support of practically every member of the Senate and the House of Representatives, Governor Slaton's administration promises to be as harmonious and productive of good as that of any Governor the State has ever had.

Gossip heard among the legislators gathered for the sessions of the General Assembly indicate that every reform urged by the new Governor will meet with the approval of the majority of the members of both Houses.

Bills Are Now Ready.

It is regarded as significant, and indicative of the success of Governor Slaton's administration, that many bills embodying the recommendations and suggestions made in his inaugural address have been prepared and will be introduced and action taken on them during the present session. Several already have been introduced, both in the House and Senate.

It is generally understood, though it has never been officially confirmed, that Governor Slaton will send no more messages to the General Assembly during the present session unless some unforeseen emergency should arise that demands immediate attention. He has given his views on the sort of legislation that is needed, and has often expressed his complete confidence in the ability and the willingness of the Legislature to do what was right and necessary without any prompting from the head of the State Government.

The respect and confidence that Governor Slaton feels in ex-Governor Brown is shown by the fact that almost without exception the men who served the latter during the four years of his incumbency will also hold office during the Slaton administration.

Jesse G. Perry, who has served Governor Brown as private secretary, will fill the same position under Governor Slaton.

Ulm Is Executive Secretary.

Hardy Ulm is also retained as Executive Secretary. The knowledge these men have, gained through their connection with Governor Brown, is expected to be one of inestimable benefit to Governor Slaton during the first few weeks of his incumbency.

That Governor Slaton intends to give all his time to the business of the State and serve them to the utmost of his ability is shown by the fact that though he owns a handsome home on Peachtree Street, and a country home on Peachtree Road, he has moved his family into the ancient executive mansion on Peachtree Street, and will occupy the building as his home during his term as Governor. He took possession of the mansion Saturday afternoon within an hour after his inauguration as Governor of the State.

After a short stay in the reception room of the Governor's office at the capitol, where Governor Slaton and ex-Governor Brown greeted their friends. Governor and Mrs. Slaton and Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mrs. Slaton's mother, were entertained at luncheon by ex-Governor and Mrs. Brown, at the executive mansion. After the luncheon Mr. Brown turned over to Governor Slaton the mansion that had been his home, and with Mrs. Brown boarded a train for Marietta.

Marietta Greets Brown.

They were given a tremendous reception by the citizens of the Cobb County capitol. Practically two-thirds of the population of Marietta, headed by a reception committee of prominent citizens, met them at the depot and welcomed them to the town that had been their home for many years before Mr. Brown became Governor. Mr. and Mrs. Brown plan to spend the coming week in Marietta, and will then retire for the summer to their Cherokee County farm.

Though the inauguration of Governor Slaton was simple, it is not thought that his home life will follow the same plan. Mrs. Slaton is recognized as one of the most brilliant hostesses in Atlanta, and society folk are all agog over the rumored plans of a brilliant social campaign which it is generally understood Mrs. Slaton will inaugurate as soon as she has completed her establishment as the first lady of the State. An inaugural reception will be held July 2.

The precedent set by Governor Brown and continued by Governor Slaton of eliminating all pomp and display from the inaugural ceremonies has aroused considerable favorable comment throughout the State, especially among the members of the Legislature, and it is probable that Georgia will never see a return to the "brass band" inaugurals of former years. The inauguration of Governor Slaton was, if anything, just a little more simple than the last inauguration of Governor Brown. There was no display of any sort, and the very absence of elaborate ceremony added to the strength and impressiveness of the occasion.

Sweeping Reform in System Of Taxation Urged by Slaton

Laws to aid the finances of Georgia and sweeping reforms of the tax system of the State are stressed in the inaugural message of Governor Slaton.

In part, Governor Slaton said:

Our system is wrong. The Legislature can appropriate what it pleases, and the tax rate remains the same. The Legislator has made himself a favorite with his constituency by voting for every popular appropriations and nothing suffers but the State's credit.

Unless some check be made, an increase of revenue will be of no avail in preventing the financial embarrassment of the State. Under the enthusiasm of the moment one appropriation bill may exhaust it.

More than four-fifths of the States of the Union derive revenue from what is known as an inheritance tax. I am informed that this tax is the subject of least complaint.

This form of tax has been approved by the highest authorities and is one of the easiest to collect and to fewer hardships than any other. The inheritance tax is to some extent a corrective.

Corporation Taxation.

Prior to the year 1905, many efforts were made to collect an occupation tax from corporations. Governor Terrell, in his message of the year 1905, recommended a tentative privilege tax based on capital stock of $100,000 per year on corporations having a capital of $1,000,000, or over. He anticipated from this source more than $100,000 a year, and thought that such sum could reasonably be expected without a hardship. The State, however, has not received one-half this sum, and during the year 1913 the estimated revenue from this source is $48,000.

I recommend that the maximum occupation tax on corporations having $1,000,000 capital and over be $200 per annum, and the tax on corporations of less capital be adjusted accordingly.

Equalization of taxes, either through the enforcement of present laws, or new correctives, so that each may bear his proportionate burden, would mean to the increase of taxes upon any one now performing his duty, but would rather mean the lightening of his unfair portion of the load. I commend this subject to your attention.

Bonded Debt To Be Refunded.

An additional reason for establishing and maintaining the State's finances on a sound basis is the necessity of making provision for more than one-half of the entire bonded debt of the State, maturing in 1915. This is an imperative duty resting on this Legislature.

No sinking fund was provided by law to retire the bonds aggregating $3,679,000 which are due in 1915. The entire State's debt is $6,452,500, which does not include the obligations to the University, amounting to $291,500, and the landscrip fund of $90,000.

All the debt of $6,452,500 is provided for, or will be provided for, by the sinking fund required to be raised annually until the debt is paid off, except the $3,679,000 which falls due in May and July, 1915.

If refunding bonds were issued in 1915, making the first $100,000 fall due in 1935, then the sinking fund could be made to run continuously and retire each year, until paid, $100,000 of this earlier of 1915 refunding bonds.

This plan would seem advisable in order to relieve the treasury and the people of the increased burden at this time, unless financial conditions at the time of the sale of the bonds should demand that their redemption begin at an earlier period in order to effectuate their more satisfactory disposition.

Registration of Voters.

We believe the present registration law should be so amended that when a voter has once proven his qualification by registering and being enrolled, he shall remain a registered voter unless disqualified for cause due to himself.

The foregoing extract from the last platform upon which I was elected, expresses a principle which deserves universal acceptance. It contemplates no change of the constitution which provides for the qualification of the voter.

I recommend that the present registration law be amended to correct the injustice indicated. It would always be provided that the voter must have paid his taxes and not subjected himself to any of the disqualifications provided by law.

Highways.

It is needless to impress upon you the importance of our highways. Their value is an asset of the entire State. An intelligent Highway Commission, or Commissioner, clothed with proper authority, could be the means of untold benefit in suggesting proper methods of building the road adapted to the locality, or in solving the problems of engineering which might arise in various sections.

I call your attention to the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the lease of which terminates in 1919. No one, I apprehend, would or should consider its sale, but the problem of its disposition should be considered by a commission with directions to report its recommendations and its reasons therefor.

The neglect of this matter will mean to put the State at the inexcusable disadvantage of unpreparedness when the time arrives for imperative action.

The Criminal Code.

One of the fundamental purposes of government is the protection of life and safety of the citizen. If the rules of evidence are so shaped as to prevent the discovery of the truth, and if the State is deprived of the means of sifting the facts, the judges and juries are not to be blamed if crimes are allowed to go unpunished.

It is an anomaly that a defendant should take the stand, make any statement that he sees fit, or that his shrewd lawyer has prepared, and being immune from cross-examination, demand that the judge shall charge the jury that they may accept his unsworn statement in preference to all the evidence in the case.

I, therefore, recommend that a law be passed abolishing the defendant's statement, and providing in its place that he be sworn as a witness. If he desires, but his failure to be so sworn be not subject to adverse comment by prosecuting counsel. This is in accordance with current Federal and State law.

The legislation in Georgia against carrying concealed weapons has of recent years been conspicuous. It has been suggested by the law of self-preservation. Daily we read of men who have shot others, and have been acquitted on the old statement that the deceased threw his hand on his hip pocket, and the defendant shot in fear of his life. When searched, the dead man was found generally unarmed.

If the carrying of concealed weapons were made a felony, subject to be reduced to a misdemeanor by either Judge or jury, the deterrent effect of such a law would be the saving of many a life. I earnestly recommend to you the consideration of this question.

Banking Laws.

The banks of a State perform public functions, and as such are properly subjected to governmental supervision. The bankers of the State, with the desire of maintaining a high standard of responsibility and of affording guarantees against improvident management, that imperil the money of the people, recommend legislation looking to the accomplishment of these objects. I commend this subject as one worthy of your serious consideration.

My predecessors have recommended the creation of the position of State Auditor, and I join in this recommendation. I heartily concur. His services could be utilized in checking the cost of new buildings for which requests may be made by the various institutions. Those who have served on the appropriations committees are aware of the inadequate facilities of the State in arriving at the amount of the necessary expenditures.

The Constitution.

The Constitution is the expression of the supreme law of the land. It can only be changed by the people speaking in their sovereign capacity. In order that they may vote intelligently on any proposition it is essential that they understand it. I recommend that in proposing Constitutional amendments, you plainly indicate the proposition to the voter in such language that he may understand the meaning of the question submitted.

My predecessor has called attention to the fact that some of the agricultural schools are well attended, while others receive little patronage, whether due to the matter of location or lack of interest, or from what cause, I am unable to say. Each obtains the same appropriation from the State for maintenance. I recommend that you investigate their condition, and apply the proper remedies.

Slaton is Inaugurated With Simple Ceremonies.

With ceremonies that gained in strength and impressiveness through their very simplicity, John Marshall Slaton to-day became Governor of the State of Georgia, succeeding Joseph M. Brown. The oath of office was administered by Judge William H. Fish, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, at 12:02 o'clock.

Governor Slaton was inducted into office in the presence of a brilliant assemblage of Georgia men and women, including his own and the retiring Governor's family and intimate friends, members of the State Legislature and prominent jurists. For the first time in the history of the State the United States was represented by Judge William T. Newman and Judge Don A. Pardee, of the Federal Court. They occupied seats directly in front of the Speaker's stand.

Galleries and the floor of the House were filled with spectators. By 10 o'clock virtually every seat in the visitors' gallery was taken and room had been provided for a large number on the floor. In the corridors another crowd, unable to gain entrance into the hall, waited patiently for a glimpse of the new executive.

Joint Session Held.

Neither the House nor the Senate transacted any business, convening at 11 o'clock and immediately taking a recess. At 11:45 o'clock both Houses again convened, and the Senate at once adjourned and marched to the House, where members took seats in a semi-circle about the speaker's stand. In the front row of seats about the speakers' stand sat the intimate friends and relatives of Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton. Twenty-eight chairs had been reserved for members of Governor Slaton's family and eight for the family and friends of Governor Brown.

In Governor Slaton's party were Major William F. Slaton, father of the Governor; Mrs. John M. Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Slaton, Justice and Mrs. S. C. Atkinson, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Waldo, Mrs. W. H. Blanchard, Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant, John M. Slaton, Jr., W. F. Slaton, Jr., Slaton Waldo, Albie Waldo, William D. Grant, Miss Margaret Grant, James Jackson Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Phillips and Miss Robinson. In Governor Brown's party were Mrs. Joseph M. Brown, Miss Cora Brown, Charles Brown, Miss Sally Brown, Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Connolly, Mrs. Frances Connolly and Thomas W. Connolly.

Governor Brown Receives Friends.

Governor Brown arrived at the Capitol shortly before 11 o'clock, and went at once into his private office, where he received a number of friends and visitors.

Governor-elect Slaton drove up in his automobile to the Washington Street entrance of the Capitol, accompanied by Mrs. Slaton and his father, Major William F. Slaton. They proceeded to the reception room of the Governor's office, where the inaugural procession formed.

Promptly at 11:45 o'clock Speaker Burwell called the House to order, and immediately thereafter members of the Senate arrived.

The inaugural procession moved from the Governor's office on the first floor. The procession was led by Governor-elect Slaton and Governor Brown. After them came ex-Governor Henry D. McDaniel, and then followed the Justices of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals, the Federal Judges, the State House officers, the members of the joint legislative committee on inauguration, and the immediate families of Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton.

Governor Slaton Presented.

Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton took their places on the Speaker's stand, the first standing to the left of Senator Randolph Anderson and Speaker Burwell and the latter to the right. Rev. James B. Robbins, of the Trinity Methodist Church, opened the ceremonies with prayer, in which he invoked Divine aid for Governor Slaton in the conduct of the affairs of the State.

Randolph Anderson, President of the Senate, presented Governor-elect Slaton to the people of Georgia and the Legislature, and immediately thereafter Justice Fish administered the oath of office. In a speech expressing great confidence in the ability of the incoming executive, Governor Brown presented Governor Slaton with the Great Seal of the State of Georgia.

After the inaugural ceremonies Governor and Mrs. Slaton and ex-Governor and Mrs. Brown lunched at the Executive Mansion. Ex-Governor and Mrs. Brown retired to their farm near Marietta, and Governor Slaton took possession of the mansion in the afternoon.

Church Bars Wedding And Girl Files Suit

Breach of Promise Action Started, Though Both Parties Declare They Are Ready for Ceremony.

ATCHISON, KANS., June 28.—Although both parties to a $25,000 breach of marriage contract suit filed here recently say they are willing to wed, the suit will go on.

Miss Mary Falk, of Purcell, alleges that she entered into a verbal contract to marry William Burke, of Troy, a few months ago.

Church officers say they will not marry Burke because he is unable to procure a sworn statement from his mother in Ireland certifying to the time of his baptism in the Catholic Church. Burke says he will marry Miss Mary Falk any time, and, in her petition for the suit Miss Falk says she is still willing to marry Burke.

But as a priest will not marry them, as both are unwilling to forsake their religion, Miss Falk says she can not consistently dismiss the suit, although she still loves Burke. Miss Falk's petition alleges that Burke is wealthy.

Atlanta Medical Schools Unite to Make Big College

National Recognition Will Be Obtained Through Merger—Officers and Faculty of Institution Are Unanimous.

A union of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons and the Atlanta Medical College has been effected, and as a result an institution to be known as the Atlanta Medical College has been formed. Details of the consolidation were announced Saturday by representative committees from both colleges.

Ambitious plans for the new college are outlined. The immediate effect of the consolidation will be the placing of the Atlanta Medical College in Class A by the American Medical Association. It renders the newly formed college eligible to membership in the Association of American Medical Colleges, admitting its graduates to practice anywhere in the world. Its doors open with the new college year in September.

The consolidation will force the abandonment of the property of the Atlanta School of Medicine on Luckie and Bartow Streets and the establishment of a considerable plant in connection with the present equipment of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons on Butler and Armstrong Streets.

Officers Are Announced.

The new college will be officered by W. S. Elkin, dean, and W. F. Westmoreland, president, of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons, and by two officers to be nominated by the Atlanta School of Medicine.

All these plans were announced by a committee from the Atlanta School of Medicine, consisting of George H. Noble, L. C. Fischer and Edward G. Jones, and a committee from the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons, whose members are W. S. Elkin, W. F. Westmoreland and C. W. Strickler.

Consideration of the proposition has been under way for some time, stated the committee members.

"It has been the one object of these deliberations," they announced, "to organize an institution of dignity and of permanent promise, whose graduates will receive general recognition throughout the United States—an institution so constituted as to make it a real public asset, and so conducted as to expect and to deserve the heartiest popular commendation."

So complete have been the preliminary deliberations that before word of the union had been breathed every plan was worked out, even to the appointment of a faculty and of a board of trustees.

The faculty proper will consist of the following physicians:

Department of Medicine—W. S. Kendrick, C. W. Strickler, R. T. Dorsey, J. C. Johnson, J. C. Olmsted, E. C. Thrash, E. B. Block, C. E. Boynton, L. B. Clarke, George M. Niles, L. M. Gaines, S. R. Roberts and B. Wolff.

Department of Surgery—W. F. Westmoreland, F. W. McRae, E. G. Jones, W. S. Goldsmith, F. K. Boland, J. L. Campbell, L. C. Fischer, M. Hoke and A. L. Fowler.

Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology—George H. Noble, W. S. Elkin, E. C. Davis and S. T. Barnett.

Department of Materia Medica and Therapeutics—M. M. Hull, L. B. Clarke (with other salaried associates).

Department of Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat—F. P. Calhoun, Dunbar Roy and J. M. Crawford.

Department of Physiology—George Bachman (with other salaried associates).

Department of Anatomy—J. W. Papez (with other salaried associates).

Department of Pathology—John Funke (with other salaried associates).

Department of Chemistry—Edgar Everhart (with other salaried associates).

Associate Faculty Not Named.

The associate faculty has not yet been completed. It will embrace the names of 50 or 75 additional physicians of prominence in the city.

The probable board of trustees of the Atlanta Medical College will be Reuben R. Arnold, H. M. Dorsey, Judge George Hillyer, G. S. Lowndes, E. W. Martin, F. J. Paxon, Judge T. P. Westmoreland, H. H. Cabaniss, John J. Eagan, John H. James, H. J. Lowry, Wilmer L. Moore, J. Carroll Payne, C. E. Currier, T. A. Hammond, Marion M. Jackson, R. F. Maddox, Bishop C. K. Nelson, J. S. Prather and W. S. Witham.

The union of the two colleges is significant as a historical event. The name of the first medical college founded in Atlanta was that of the consolidated school—the Atlanta Medical College. This institution was formed in 1854, was suspended during the war and its building used as a hospital. It was merged in 1898 with the Southern Medical College, which was organized in 1878, to form the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons.

The Atlanta School of Medicine was organized 1905. Both the colleges erected new buildings in 1906, Andrew Carnegie having given $25,000 and Dr. A. W. Calhoun $15,000 to the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons for this purpose, other citizens giving various sums. The Atlanta School of Medicine has also operated a hospital in connection with the college.

Sell Luckie Property.

It is the present plan to put on sale the Luckie Street property of the Atlanta School of Medicine, and to provide for the college work to be carried on entirely at the Butler Street plant, ample room being there for additional buildings and extensions. The proximity of the Grady Hospital is an additional reason for transferring everything to that locality.

The total enrollment in the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons last session was 334, and in the Atlanta School of Medicine 218. The announcement by the joint committee declares:

"It will not be the future intention to increase the enrollment so much as to elevate the standard of professional instruction. After January, 1914, one or more years of work in a literary college will be required for entrance, the minimum requirement this fall being a high school education."

Committee Tells Hopes.

The committee, in a statement to the public, tells of its purposes and hopes, saying:

"The recent awakening of the public mind to a knowledge of the past shortcomings of medical education, the evident cordial interest in plans, wherever launched, to invest medical education with a degree of excellence which will protect the public as it ought to be protected; the late tendency of private philanthropy to recognize properly organized medical colleges as deserving of its bounty; the recognition promised abroad to the proposed institution, which recognition could not have been obtained as long as the colleges remained separate; the strategic advantages of Atlanta as the site for a medical college of superlative merit; the excellence of the professional talent in the city; the immense momentum implied in a united instead of a divided professional energy—all these and other considerations alike of sentiment and of common sense, have seemed to us to constitute a responsibility whch it would discredit us to neglect, and an opportunity which it would distinguish us to embrace."

MOVE BEATEN FOR FREE WOOL GOODS

Clothing Duty Under New Tariff Schedule Will Be From 20 to 35 Per Cent.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The question of dutiable wool manufactures in the tariff bill was raised in the Senate Democratic caucus to-day and brought a lengthy debate. Senator Chamberlain, of Oregon, favored the free listing of these commodities, arguing this was only fair to the public and the manufacturers with raw wool on the free list.

The goods affected are stockings, socks and blankets, women's and children's dress goods, ready-made clothing and other articles of wearing apparel. Ad valorem rates, ranging from 20 per cent on stockings to 35 per cent on ready-made clothing are in the bill as reported to the caucus.

At the recess of the caucus Senator Simmons announced that the proposition to free list wool manufactures was beaten by a close vote.

"We expect to finish the hemp, silk, paper and sundries schedules to-night," said Senator Simmons, "and take up the administrative and income tax features of the Underwood bill Monday."

FLAGLER WILL UNCHANGED AND RELATIVE'S HINTS OF A CONSPIRACY FALL

Codicils Show That Millionaire Railroad King Left Only Son With but Small Share of His Fortune. Bulk of Wealth Held in Trust.

By TARLETON COLLIER.

WEST PALM BEACH, June 28.—While a number of the charges made by Amasa Flagler, of California, regarding strange circumstances surrounding the death of Henry M. Flagler to-day are found to be substantial, the principal accusations that codicils were added to the Flagler will, completely changing its effect, and that the dying man was given insufficient medical attention appear to fall without support.

Seven codicils to the will are not significant. Investigation into the charges by Amasa Flagler that dark work accompanied the end of his kinsman was conducted by The Sunday American. The stories of the California man that Henry M. Flagler was kept in deep seclusion until the end; that visitors, including himself, were refused admittance; that the most rigid privacy shrouded every detail of the railroad king's illness—all are found to possess a substantial basis of fact.

Palm Beach, deserted, boarded up, uncanny in its summer desolation, to-day furnishes the setting for a belated story of tragedy—the tragedy in the death of Henry M. Flagler, the Florida railroad king, who died May 20, 84 years old, his brain worn out.

Built Empire;
Dies in Seclusion.

The story is how a man who had built an empire came to die in seclusion on a deserted island, attended by unskilled nurses, denied to visitors—and some of them his kinsmen—and with never a word given out as to his condition, from time to time.

Amasa P. Flagler, of California, who says he is the closest male relative of Henry M. Flagler, except for Harry Harkness Flagler, a son, came to Palm Beach while the financier was dying, and was refused a sight of him. To-day he is talking freely to newspaper men, hinting at mystery in the death of Henry M. Flagler, charging that the great railroad man was not given the proper treatment or care, and that Mrs. Flagler, J. B. Parrott and Dr. W. R. Keenan, the three who were practically alone with him toward the end, and who, he points out, were the beneficiaries under the will, kept visitors away purposely.

Amasa P. Flagler, according to the variety of opinions maintained by residents of Palm Beach, is anything from a faker to a justly aggrieved person. The fact remains, however, revealed as a result of investigations by The Sunday American, that Henry M. Flagler died in loneliness and in enforced seclusion.

He died in a small room of a frame cottage on the Atlantic beach, to which he had been moved some time before the end. From one window is to be seen "The Breakers," his own great hotel. It has been locked and deserted since March. Through the other window there is the sight of a stretch of parched grass, the beach and the ocean.

George Conway, a boy who waited on Mr. Flagler during his illness, said to-day that the dying man kept his eyes always on the ocean.

"He loved it," said Conway. "One time, not long before the end, he said to me: 'George, there is the greatest thing in the world,' pointing out at the sea. 'If there ever comes a time when you would be proud of yourself and of what you have done, think about that ocean. There is something greater, more wonderful than anything a man can ever make or become. Railroads and cities are nothing.' But a lot of the times he was not conscious to what went on."

Mr. Flagler was moved to the beach cottage from his mansion, "Whitehall," when summer began to set in at Palm Beach. He was moved at the combined orders of his physician, Dr. W. R. Keenan, and Mrs. Flagler. Dr. Keenan is Mrs. Flagler's brother. Because has was moved Amasa P. Flagler finds the basis for a denunciation of those who took care of him, declaring that his kinsman was taken to the empty beach cottage that he might be more securely isolated.

Joe Jefferson Died
In Same Cottage.

Investigation reveals that many of the statements made by Amasa P. Flagler in his interviews regarding the death of his relative are exaggerations. He is said to have declared that the beach cottage in which Henry M. Flagler died was old and dilapidated and isolated from the community. It is, however, "The Nautilus," one of a colony of seven cottages on the beach, and is within 200 feet of "The Breakers." It is leased for $5,000 a season of three months to the winter visitors from the North, and last season was occupied by "Finzy" Conners, the Buffalo politician. Joseph Jefferson, the actor, according to the beach traditions, died in the same cottage.

Local physicians, although none of them was called in to assist Dr. Keenan and Dr. Castleberry, watched the case as well as possible in view of the privacy attached to it. Several to-day said that they would have indorsed the move from Whitehall to the beach cottage, considering more desirable the sea breeze and the relief from the sultriness that is always the lot of Whitehall in the early summer.

West Palm Beach is divided into two hostile camps on the question of the treatment of Henry M. Flagler, many contending that the charges of a deliberate isolation and of inadequate care of the dying man may be substantiated by a chain of circumstances, and others laughing at the scandal that Amasa Flagler has sprung.

Trained Nurses
Succeeded by Boy.

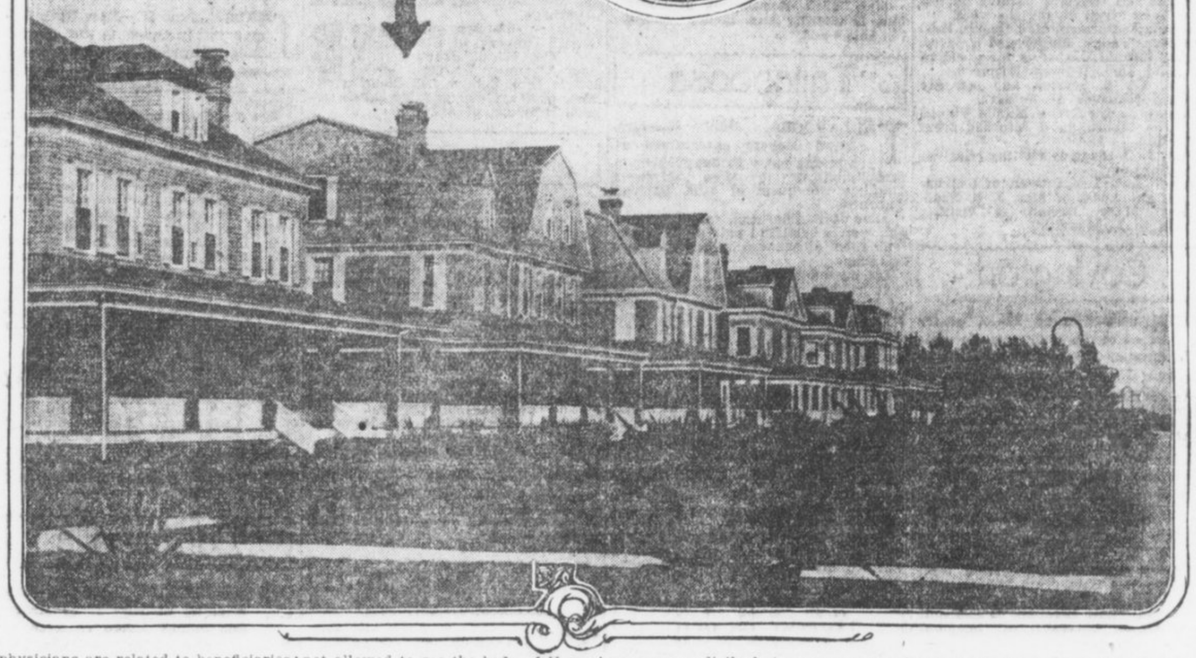
The rapid decline of the railroad king began about March 1, when, already ill, he was injured by a fall in the reception hall of "Whitehall." He took to bed at that time, and never left it until the day of his death, May 20. After several weeks in his room at "Whitehall," he was moved to the beach cottage.

Trained nurses who had been engaged were turned away, to be succeeded by George Conway, a young English boy, who is the nephew of Mrs. Cooper, the housekeeper at "Whitehall," and by Tom Lynch, a young man employed on the estate. Conway watched by day, and the other by night.

Conway is one of the few Flagler employees remaining on deserted Palm Beach. To-day he said the nurses were discharged because they could not manage the sick man so well as could he and the other boy, of whom Mr. Flagler was fond. The nurses, he continued, did not get on well with the Doctor, either.

Dr. Keenan, the brother of Mrs. Flagler, for years house physician at "The Breakers," and more recently at the "Royal Ponciana" as well, attended Mr. Flagler. To aid him, Dr. Castleberry, a guest in the winter hotel, from Harrisburg, Pa., remained. Dr. Castleberry is a kinsman of Mrs.

AMASA FLAGLER, who hinted at plot to influence Henry M. Flagler in making will, is shown in the top picture, while in the lower photograph the arrow indicates the cottage in which the railroad magnate died. This cottage was referred to as a "lonely hut" by Amasa Flagler in his first statements.



physicians are related to beneficiaries under Flagler's will, and that one, Dr. Keenan, is himself a beneficiary. Amasa Flagler has drawn evidence of irregular conduct in the care of Henry M. Flagler.

Little Told
From Bedside.

During the period of the financier's illness little definite news came from his bedside. Newspaper men of West Palm Beach and of Jacksonville declare that no bulletins were issued, and that inquiries were met always with indefiniteness.

For weeks Flagler lay thus. No one was admitted. The gossip of servants has lingered in West Palm Beach, declaring that the dying man in his delirium called frequently for his son, and frequently also for William Fremd, his gardener. The son, Harry Harkness Flagler, who has been estranged from his father for 21 years, was not summoned until by Amasa P. Flagler. Fremd, another for whom Mr. Flagler called, lived on the grounds, within a half a mile of the cottage, but was never taken to the sick room.

The same gossip has recorded that J. A. McDonald, of Miami, an old friend of Mr. Flagler, and Father McLoughlin, a Catholic priest of Miami, were others who could not see the sick man.

Along toward the end came Amasa Flagler. According to his own story, he had sent a telegram to herald his visit. Reaching Palm Beach, he was informed that he could not see the sick man. He declares that he virtually was ordered from the grounds by J. B. Parrott, vice president and general manager of Flagler's railroad, who became president by the express terms of the Flagler will.

Incensed, Amasa Flagler went to the citizens of West Palm Beach with his story. He had telegraphed ahead for a room in "The Breakers," but these were denied him. "The Breakers," he was informed, was closed for the season.

Telegram Sent
To Flagler's Son.

Amasa Flagler found quarters in "The Gables," a less pretentious hotel in West Palm Beach, whose proprietor, R. C. McGriff, listened to his story and to this day believes in him. Amasa Flagler was the first to send a telegram to Harry Harkness Flagler.

"Your father is calling for you," is the message he sent.

According to the statement to McGriff, Parrott, over in Palm Beach, heard that Harry Flagler was coming to his father's side, and came across to "The Gables" to engage a room and bath for the financier's son. There was no room for Harry Flagler, either, it seems, on Palm Beach.

No room and bath was available in McGriff's establishment, and Amasa Flagler offered to give up his suite to Harry Harkness Flagler. But Harry Flagler, when he arrived, stayed with an old friend in the town. He arrived in time to see his father alive.

Amasa Flagler declares that he was not allowed to see the body of Henry M. Flagler after death. The Tropical Sun, the daily paper of West Palm Beach, bears a story of how Amasa Flagler was leaving the town, full of wrath at his treatment. At the station, according to the story, he could obtain no information about his trains.

The employees at the railroad station, the Flagler railroad station, would tell him nothing. He asked information regarding a special train, and was met with an indefinite answer. Finally, he called a boy and commissioned him to obtain the information. The boy did. Upon his return with the message, Mr. Flagler is said to have given him $50.

"You are the only person connected with this road who has exhibited the slightest consideration or courtesy toward me," he told the boy, according to the story.

Undertaker Imported
To Conduct Funeral.

The body of the dead millionaire was taken in hand by an undertaker imported from Miami. Undertaker McGinley, in West Palm Beach, was not consulted. Citizens of the town believe this to be the case because Henry M. Flagler and the city of West Palm Beach had little in common. The two have been antagonistic of late years, in spite of the work of development which Flagler has done for East Florida, and a number of local ordinances and regulations were passed inimical to the Flagler interests.

Residents of West Palm Beach now declare that the feeling that grew up was not personal to Flagler himself, but was occasioned by actions of other officials of the Florida East Coast Railroad.

Flagler's funeral was held in St. Augustine, and his body placed in an elaborate vault which he had built in connection with the Memorial Presbyterian Church. St. Augustine he made his home, it is said here, because he was repelled by the attitude of West Palm Beach citizens.

Makes Charges
Against Beneficiaries.

According to his story, Amasa Flagler was denied a part in the funeral. He went on his way North, where he has made his sensational charges that Mrs. Flagler, Dr. Keenan and J. B. Parrott kept the dying financier secluded, denying all admission that they might maintain an influence over him.

The three are the principal beneficiaries under the will, and it is Amasa's inference that because they were with him continually, to the seclusion of others, their claims were made secure. He hints, in his interviews, that codicils to the original Flagler will were made under their domination, cutting out other legatees, particularly Harry Harkness Flagler, the son of the financier.

However, an examination of the will and codicils proves this accusation to be without foundation. There are seven codicils, but none materially effective.

The documents are in the court house in St. Augustine, where they have reposed since being made. The original will was drafted February 1, 1902, and names W. H. Beardsley, of New York; Dr. William R. Keenan, of Lockport, N. Y., the physician who was with him at his death, and J. R. Parrott, of Jacksonville, another of the little party with him most of the time during his last illness, as his executors and trustees. His wife, Mrs. Mary Lillie Flagler, he names as the residuary legatee, and his son Harry Harkness Flagler, he cut off with the relatively small legacy of 5,000 shares of Standard Oil stock. This, at the time of Flagler's death, was worth $642 a share.

Declares Son Didn't
Show Filial Regard.

"I have already given my son securities sufficient to bring him an income of $75,000 a year," the will stated. "My son has not shown for me the filial regard that would make me inclined to do more for him than is done by this item of my will."

No beneficiary will profit by the will, however, for at least five years. By its terms, a trust is created, the testator declaring:

"It is my intention in the future to foster, protect and properly develop such properties; and to provide against my decease while such properties are in process of development, and to relieve my beloved wife from the immediate cares and responsibilities of so varied and extensive interests, I hereby declare a trust for all my properties. From this trust is excepted $60,000 to the Stetson University and $20,000 to the Florida Agricultural College for the construction of a gymnasium.

The trust is to last five years, according to the will, and if the Florida East Coast Railway, or the Florida East Coast Hotel Company, at that time should require financial aid, then it is to continue as long as is necessary. Until the expiration of trust, Mrs. Flagler is to receive $100,000 a year and the Memorial Presbyterian Church of St. Augustine $3,000 a year.

Many Legacies
Left by Will.

Other legatees mentioned in the original will are: To receive $5,000, Miss Annie C. McKay, Mrs. Ella Green, Stephen A. Brave, John P. Beckwith, William H. Chambliss, Ed J. Triay, George W. Wilson, Bernard O'Brien, his coachman; George Holland, his butler, and Ida Scheiffer, his housekeeper; to receive $10,000, James A. McGuire, R. T. Goff, John Anderson, Fred Sterry, Joseph D. Price, Henry W. Merrill, J. A. McDonald, William H. Beardsley and Jasper G. Salter; to J. E. Ingraham, $20,000; to J. R. Parrott, $100,000; to C. D. Bolce and L. C. Hayes, $2,500; to the Florida Agricultural College, $80,000; to the John B. Stetson University, $40,000; to Hamilton College, New York, $100,000; to the Memorial Presbyterian Church Society, $75,000.

By the terms of the will J. R. Parrott is to continue in the same relation to the Flagler interests as he maintained during the lifetime of the testator.

There are seven codicils to the will, made, respectively, February 17, 1903; April 28, 1904; January 8, 1906; April 7, 1908; December 22, 1910; January 10, 1912, and September 13, 1912.

It is these, Amasa Flagler declares, which are damaging to the original document, but none of them seem materially to affect it. The first codicil gives his trustees the power to complete the southern extension of the Florida East Coast Railroad, which he denied them in the will.

The second codicil defines the meaning of the term "expiration of trust," which occurred frequently in the will, and provides that if Harry Harkness Flagler is not living at the end of the "expiration of trust" then the 5,000 shares of oil stock lapse to the estate. In this codicil also he revoked the legacies of $80,000 to the Florida University and $40,000 to the John B. Stetson University, and provided for bequests of $10,000 to J. P. Greaves, Robert Murray and Leland Sterry, and giving W. H. Beardsley $50,000 instead of $10,000. If he survived his wife, Flagler specified in this codicil, the residue of his estate is to be divided among Roy H. York, W. L. Harkness and Mrs. John D. McLennan, of Cleveland; W. R. Keenan, Jr., J. K. Wise and Sarah G. Keenan, of Wilmington; J. R. Parrott, of Jacksonville, and W. H. Beardsley, of New York.

No Increase for
Son's Share of Estate.

The third codicil announces that upon consideration the testator found incorrect the statement in the will that he had given his son securities netting $75,000 a year. However, he said, this mistake did not warrant an increase in the legacy to Harry Harkness Flagler.

The codicil also provides for a legacy of $10,000 to Harry E. Bemis, and empowers his trustees to borrow money for the extension of his railroad to Key West.

Codicil four specifies that the smaller legatees are not to receive the amounts provided unless at the time of his death they are in the employ of the Flagler railroad or hotel interests.

Codicil five empowers his trustees to continue to pay to Horace H. Flagler, of St. Augustine, the dividends on 50 shares of Standard Oil stock. It provides, too, that the legacy to the Memorial Presbyterian Church Society apply only if the church remain in the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America.

Codicil six makes provision for the maintenance of his mausoleum by the expenditure of a portion of the income from the $75,000 which he bequeathed to the church in St. Augustine.

The last codicil, drafted September 13, 1912, provides that the legacy of 5,000 shares of oil stock to his son be effective in spite of the change in the form of Standard Oil stock. This was drafted soon after the dissolution of the Standard Oil Company, apparently looking to safe-guarding Harry Harkness Flagler against losing his inheritance on technical grounds. The last provision is the revocation of his previous bequest to Horace H. Flagler, substituting therefor an annuity of $2,000.

No resident of West Palm Beach or its vicinity was mentioned in the will, although common gossip had named several as likely legatees.

Flagler's Isolation
Necessary, Says Doctor.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Dr. Owen Kenan, brother of Mrs. Henry M. Flagler, to-day issued a vigorous denial of the charges of Amasa Plummer Flagler regarding the circumstances which surrounded the death of his patient at West Palm Beach.

"There isn't a word of truth in the whole thing," he said. "The only explantation is that these so-called 'charges' originated in the brain of some cunning adventurer with an ax to grind. Publication of these unfounded rumors have annoyed us greatly, and Mrs. Flagler is in no condition to be interviewed, so that I can speak for her.

"So far as I can make out, the greatest objection to conditions this Amasa Flagler found at the Beach was the isolation of the sick man. That was natural. Mr. Flagler was old, his illness was serious and he needed quiet. The cottage in which he died is not dilapidated. It rents for an enormous sum every season, and some prominent Boston society people had it last winter.

"If Amasa Flagler's object is to induce Harry H. Flagler to contest the will it will fail. Harry Flagler is a gentleman, although he had not spoken to his father but once in the last seventeen years. He was left $5,000,000 and each of his children gets $4,000,000. That seems to me to be eminently fair.

"As to our conduct of the case, Dr. Castlebury and I did the best we could. Henry M. Flagler had as tender and loving care as any man ever had up to the moment of his death. There was no secrecy other than that was absolutely necessary, and nothing to be concealed."

HEIRS TO RICHES LEFT BY TITANIC VICTIM SOUGHT

J. Montague Smart, Prominent Business Man, Left Fortune. No Trace of Beneficiaries.

NEW YORK, June 28.—During his active life J. Montgomery Smart was a man of mystery. Now that his bones lie in the sunken Titanic, his past is a greater puzzle than ever, and so far it is unsolved. Usually when a man dies, even though he may have been of distinction, his hidden history is buried with him. But Smart was a man of wealth, and it became necessary to try to discover vital facts of his intimate personal life.

Thus began a world-wide search that has served only to make the case of J. Montgomery Smart all the stranger. He was an honored and successful man of business, whose transactions were international in scope, even extending from New York to Australia.

Necessary to Find Heirs.

Having left money, it became necessary to find his heirs. It was remembered that this man of silence never described his family. It was known that he had been married and that his wife had died ten years before. Vague words dropped here and there were gathered and it became apparent that Smart had two children, a boy of 20 and a girl of 18.

But no one could be found who had any definite idea of their whereabouts.

Into three countries of Europe the filaments of inquiry extended. The American consuls of many ports were asked to aid in the hunt. That was in May, 1912.

One fact was discovered in the course of the Belgian hunt. It was asserted that the children were in charge of a Mrs. Cook, who was a great friend of Mrs. Smart, and that Smart was paying her liberally to care for them. But who was Mrs. Cook? Her identity was also impossible to discover, and the hunt settled down into a hope that the guardian would write for funds, thus solving the riddle. But she has been swallowed in silence.

Had Many Acquaintances.

As president of the American Cold Storage and Shipping Company, Smart had made many acquaintances among prominent business men of New York, London, Berlin, Paris and many other cities throughout the world. Many believed that they knew him well. But when the test came, they were surprised to find that only the barest information was obtainable about his personal affairs.

Smart was a hermit in a great city, and he was a hermit in his many voyages and travels in foreign countries.

Husband Will Woo Wife if He's Divorced

Tells Judge He Will Renew Methods of Courting Days if Decree Is Granted.

KANSAS CITY, June 28.—"If my wife succeeds in getting a divorce from me I am going to begin all over with my courting days and try to win back her love," Andrew Mathers said in Judge Johnson's court. "Her charges in this case do not in any way affect my devotion and admiration for her."

Mathers is a wealthy building contractor and lives at 4403 Virginia Avenue. He has been contesting the suit of his wife, Louise Mathers. They were married in 1896 and have three children.

Mrs. Mathers charges that her husband became intoxicated frequently.

Rides Box Car in Boy Garb to Meet Fiance

Victim of Ohio Flood Travels to California on Freight Train to Become Wife.

VENICE, CAL., June 28.—Miss Ethel Johnston, a young woman from Dayton, Ohio, arrived here in begrimed and torn boy's costume to join her fiance. Miss Johnston and J. L. Perry had been sweethearts in Dayton. The youth moved West a short time ago to prepare a home for his sweetheart.

When the flood came Miss Johnston, who was living with her aunt, lost her home, as well as her only relatives. She cut her hair short, donned boys' clothing and struck out with but a few dollars for the coast. She traveled almost the entire distance on freight trains.

Dog Rescues Girl With Dress Aflame

Shepherd Leaps Into Brook and Then Shakes His Dripping Body on Blazing Skirt

NEW YORK, June 28.—The remarkable intelligence and devotion of a Shepherd dog saved Miss Florence Sheldon, of 4 Llewellyn road, Montclair, from serious injury yesterday when her dress was accidentally set on fire.

Unconscious of the smouldering fire, the girl sat on the bank of a brook throwing sticks into the stream. Suddenly the dog began to bark furiously. He dashed into the brook, and returning, threw his dripping body on the now blazing skirt and extinguished the fire. A square foot of the garment was burned.

COMMISSION FINDS $4 FAMILY'S DAILY NEED

LOS ANGELES, June 28.—Four dollars a day is the minimum wage on which a family can be supported in this city, according to the report today of the Municipal Industrial Investigating Committee. Of nearly 50,000 cases covered by the inquiry, more than 6,000 men and considerably more than half of all the women employed received less than $2 a day. A permanent wage commission is urged.

Mashers Told to Think of Sisters

Pastor Says That Presuming on Feminine Acquaintance Is Greatest Aid to White Slavery.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 28.—"A spendthrift sweetheart and an extravagant wife have ruined many lives," said the Rev. T. W. Stout in a sermon at Calvary Methodist Church. "Young women can help to form high moral standards among the boys by not permitting great expenditures upon themselves."

He illustrated how laziness makes a weak character that falls in the crisis of life by knocking the prop from under a three-legged chair. "White slavery begins with presuming on feminine acquaintance and bold advances to clerks," he said. "It ends in blood money and lost souls. Every young man should ask himself in dealing with girls: 'Suppose my sister were in her place—what would I want done?'"

Skylarkers Mobbed By Throng of Women

Man Falls in Baby Carriage While He Plays on Sidewalk and Starts Small Iot.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Several hundred persons, most of them women attacked Frederick Mochson and Raymond Dragoni, last night when one of the men, as a result of skylarking, fell in the baby carriage of the 18-months-old son of Joseph Bilion in front of the Billon home, at 57 East One Hundred and Eleventh Street.

The baby carriage rolled off the sidewalk. Then the crowd got active. Mochson and Dragoni were dragged in the gutter and kicked and pummelled. Stones and garbage were thrown at them. When the reserves learned what had started the affair they locked up the two men on charges of disorderly conduct.

Grandparents Get College Diplomas

Grandson Member of Audience When Couple Receive Degrees From Baylor University.

WACO, TEXAS, June 28.—It leaked out to-day that among the graduates of Baylor University this commencement were a husband and wife.

They possibly possess the honor of being the only grandfather and grandmother to complete a college course in the presence of their grandchild.

Mr. and Mrs. William Porter received their sheepskins while in the audience were Leeland Rook, of Bosqueville, their grandson, and Mrs. Matilda Porter, of Waco, Mrs. Porter's mother.

Finds Watch Indian Took From Father

Surveyor Recovers Timepiece of Parent Slain in Massacre of Thornburg's Troop.

CRAIG, COLO., June 28.—D. W. Grams, Government surveyor, returned from a few days spent in the White Rock reservation in Utah. While there he recovered a gold watch from one of the Indians which had evidently been removed by one of the braves from the body of his father following a battle with the red men during the early days.

The elder Grams was a sergeant in Major Thornburg's troop, which was ambushed and almost annihilated while marching from Rawlins to the relief of the Indian agency at Meeker, and he was among those killed.

John Bunyan's Anvil Found in Junk Pile

Relic Bears Name of Author of "Pilgrim's Progress," and Is Dated 1647.

PASADENA, CAL., June 28.—Bearing the name of J. Bunyan, the date 1647, and the word Holstowe, an ancient anvil, the original property of the author of "Pilgrim's Progress," is now in the possession of Maurice Beagarie, of 57 Green Street.

The relic was discovered in a junk heap in St. Neots, near the town of Elstowe, or Helstowe, where Bunyan lived, by Beagarie's father, about 30 years ago, and was presented by him to his son ten years ago.

Horsewhips Teacher Who Lashed Her Son

Angry Mother Purchases Rawhide From Harness Shop When Boy Exhibits Marks of Punishment.

OXNARD, CAL., June 28.—Angered because Principal C. A. Marcey, of the Filmore Grammar School, inflicted corporal punishment on her small son, Mrs. E. M. Taylor horsewhipped him on the street of the town.

The boy exhibited the marks of punishment to his mother.

Mrs. Taylor went to a harness shop and purchased a blacksnake whip.

Concealing the weapon in a piece of paper she stole upon Principal Marcey as he was engaged in conversation on the street. Without warning she dealt him a blow and continued to apply the lash.

RUTGERS BESTOWS DEGREE ON GRADUATE OF '34, AGE 100

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., June 21. Among the honorary degrees conferred by Rutgers College at its one hundred and forty-seventh annual commencement was that of doctor of laws upon the Rev. John Fryer Mesick, a graduate of Rutgers, class of 1834, the oldest living college graduate in the United States. To-day was his hundredth anniversary.

TROOPS TO MAKE CAVALRY RAID OF THE SHENANDOAH

Realistic Advance Next Month Into the Historic Valley May Mean New System.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Troopers at Fort Myer have begun preparations for their 70-mile march into the Shenandoah Valley next month to participate in maneuvers expected to result in reorganization of the mounted forces of the army.

The Shenandoah Valley, where "Phil" Sheridan made his famous ride 50 years ago, has been chosen as the bloodless battle ground for the test. For two months this summer a full brigade of cavalry and a battery of horse artillery will maneuver and "fight" over the red roads, the green hills, and fields near Winchester.

The department has leased a tract of ground one mile broad and two miles long in the heart of the Shenandoah, 70 miles away, and orders were issued to the troops some time ago.

Oglethorpe Troopers on March.

Two regiments of the brigade, those from Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., and Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., must ride 700 dusty miles under a summer sun before they can reach the valley, and they must report July 20. The First Squadron from Fort Myer will have only 70 miles to go, and the horse battery from Fort Riley, Kans., will be sent by rail.

Secretary Garrison will be a frequent spectator. Major General Wood, chief of staff, United States Army, probably will spend much time there, and President Wilson may make the trip.

The necessity for a rehabilitation of the cavalry was disclosed when the general staff some time ago made ambitious plans for the reorganization of the army so as to prepare it for the defense of the country against attack by any great military power. This resulted in the sending to Europe last year of a board of six cavalry officers, who studied the German, Russian, Austro-Hungarian, French and English organizations.

Officers Study Abroad.

Four months were spent abroad by these officers, and since their return they have prepared plans for radical changes in the organization and use of cavalry of the American army.

The tests will take place under the direction of Colonel C. H. Murray, of the Twelfth Cavalry, as Brigadier General E. J. McClernand, the head of the cavalry board, is prohibited from exercising actual command by virtue of his retirement. General McClernand, however, with Lieutenant Colonels J. T. Dickmann and Fred S. Foltz, Major Jesse McI. Carter and Captain Frank Parker, all members of the board which studied the European systems, will be present.

Some of the practical questions to be worked out are:

How large a command can a captain handle successfully?

How many such units can a colonel handle to the best advantage under conditions approximating hostilities?

The new formation of the cavalry into double ranks also will be tried out on a large scale, a practical test by Captain Parker, of the Eleventh Cavalry, at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., with an experimental squadron having been pronounced a complete success by General H. L. Scott.

MACON AND MIDDLE GEORGIA NEWS

FIGHT BREWING IN MACON OVER MAYOR'S OFFICE

Bridges Smith, City Clerk, or John R. L. Smith, Lawyer, Are Likely To Be Chosen.

DASHER FIRST CANDIDATE

Executive Committee Chairman Takes His Own Time About Calling Meeting.

MACON, June 28.—The approaching mayoralty campaign is featured by a seeming lack of interest. With the election less than ten weeks off, the candidates are still in their shells, and local politics seem to be stagnated.

Alderman A. L. Dasher, Sr., for years one of the strongest adherents of the administration party, is the only candidate so far in the field. He announced in December on an anti-administration platform. On account of this complete reversal of form, the citizens have been at a loss as to how to take him, and his campaign has made little progress. It is understood that Mr. Dasher is arranging an aldermanic ticket, which will be announced in a few weeks.

The administration will offer either Bridges Smith, the present City Clerk, or J. Ross Bowdre, the present Mayor Pro Tem and administration leader in Council.

Mr. Smith was Mayor for nine years, and retired only to let his friend, John T. Moore, run. Mr. Moore was defeated by Judge A. L. Miller. Next time he beat Judge Miller by less than 200 votes. Two years ago he defeated N. I. Brunner, an Alderman, by a safe majority.

Mayor Moore Ineligible.

Under Macon's present charter rule, Mayor Moore is ineligible for a third successive term. Consequently, Mr. Smith, as the strongest man of the administration faction, is looked upon to maintain the party in office.

Mr. Bowdre is in line for the nomination, but he insists that he would rather not be Mayor, and it is not lively that he will get in the race.

The Moore administration has done many things to arouse criticism and cause enemies, while at the same time making a progressive record along other lines. The chief complaint is that it has been too open. The prohibition law is discounted in the city. The administration has established a wide-open restricted district and the police department has been subject to unenviable criticism.

"Law and Order" Movement.

Just now "law and order" leaders are talking of John R. L. Smith, a prominent Macon lawyer, for Mayor on an independent ticket. Mr. Smith has never been in politics, and in that respect he has an absolutely unblemished record. It is said that no one knows how he has ever voted on any issue, local or State. He is a successful business man, a great believer in the enforcement of law, and at the same time a man of rather liberal tendencies. A movement is on foot to ask him to run. Unless this movement crystallizes, it is probable that Bridges Smith will be the next Mayor.

Bridges Smith was originally a printer, and then a newspaper reporter. Incidentally he was a minstrel and has also engaged in various business enterprises. About 25 years ago he became Clerk of Council, and held that place until Mayor Daisy Price died in office. Then he was elected to fill the vacancy. Afterwards he was re-elected for four successive times. Just as soon as Smith got out of office a legislative act was secured, restricting the Mayor's tenure to not more than four successive years.

Aldermanic Probabilities.

As to an aldermanic ticket, at least seven of the present Council will run on the administration ticket, they being Aldermen Chestney, Bowdre, McKenna, Happ, Hines, Adamson and Bernd. Alderman P. L. Hay will run on an independent platform. L. J. Kilburn, a labor leader and former Representative in the Legislature; L. A. Mitchell, R. C. Hazlehurst and two other successful business men are also expected to be administration candidates for Council.

The primary will be held about September 15. The regular election takes place in October, and the Mayor and Council change in November.

Just now there is an agitation to secure a new executive committee. The present committee was elected three years ago, and served its purpose. However, it has simply remained in office, because the chairman, W. D. Nottingham, forgot all about calling a meeting. This week a demand was made upon Mr. Nottingham to call the committee together so that it could arrange for a mass meeting by which a new committee will be named. The point was made that the new committee should be chosen before the citizens are rent by factional politics. But Judge Nottingham—he was once judge of the City Court—is obdurate. He says that he is going to call the committee whenever he gets good and ready. A number of the committeemen have publicly criticised Chairman Nottingham for his attitude, and eight of the ter members have requested him in writing to call the committee.

Macon Judge Ends Feeless Marriages

Justice Hugh McKervey Victim of His Own Generous Customs, Calls a Halt.

MACON, June 28.—Justice of the Peace Hugh McKervey, who has been a judge for five years and never charged a fee, says now that he is going to break this rule.

Recently his constable picked up a cow, and after keeping it the required period sold it to the highest bidder. The owner of the cow then brought suit and recovered his cow. The man who had bought it at auction then sued Judge McKervey for the $11 he had paid for the cow at public sale. And the justice, although he has never taken in a fee, had to pay out $11, his constable not being financially able to pay it.

"This experience means the end of feeless marriages in Bibb County," says Judge McKervey.

COUNCIL AGAINST THE SPARKS PARK SCHEME

Macon Likely to Get Baraca Meet

World Convention of Church Society Almost Assured—Usual Attendance Is 4,000.

MACON, June 28.—There is no doubt that Macon will be awarded the 1914 annual convention of the Baraca and Philathea societies of the world. The Macon delegation, which has returned from Nashville, Tenn., say that the executive committee is practically unanimous for Macon, although several other larger cities made bids for the next meeting.

Macon was awarded the office of world-wide secrtary, this being given to D. S. Wagnon, of this city, and it is the custom to place the succeeding convention in the home city of the newly elected secretary. About 4,000 delegates attend the convention.

Father and Sons Officers of Lodge

Crawford, Ala., Masons Confer Unusual Honor on Prince Family. Public Installation.

COLUMBUS, June 28.—B. F. Prince, a well-known citizen of Crawford, Ala., and his seven sons were installed as officers in Huckabatchee Lodge of Masons this afternoon. A public installation was conducted, followed by an old-fashioned country barbecue. Several hundred invitations were sent out and Masons throughout this section attended.

The Prince family is one of the most highly respected in East Alabama, and the fact that all have been elected to offices in the same lodge is an indication of their popularity in the community. The father, who is past 70 years of age, is worshipful master; B. C. Prince, senior warden; R. R. Prince, junior warden; J. E. Prince, treasurer; W. R. Prince, secretary; Sidney Prince, senior deacon; C. H. Prince, junior deacon, and S. F. Prince, tyler.

FOOTBALL STAR ENTERS PROFESSIONAL BASEBALL

ATHENS, June 28.—The University of Georgia football team suffered a heavy loss this week when Halfback Bowden entered the list of professionals and became a member of the Cordele Empire State League team. Bowden was considered one of the greatest halfbacks in the South and was being counted on as a great running mate for McWhorter next fall. He is a good baseball player, being awarded all-Southern catcher in 1912. An injured shoulder kept him out of most of the games this year.

LANDS IN JAIL BECAUSE HE POSED AS DETECTIVE

ROME, June 28.—Because he tried to play detective and search negro homes, Gus Harris, a young white man, is in the county jail. Harris armed himself with a pistol and a badge and with these convinced a number of blacks that he was an officer of the law. In most instances he secured whisky, and this he carried to a confederate. They drank it and disposed of it in other ways. He was arrested and bound over.

UNIQUE PRISON BUILT FOR CONVICTS IN HALL

GAINESVILLE, June 28.—Hall County has a most ingeniously built house for the accommodation of the inmates of the convict camp. It is 50 by 80 feet, of roomy proportions, built of wood, containing not a single nail, but put together by bolts and capable of being taken down and moved from place to place. Edwin Smith, son of John A. Smith, supervisor of county road work, built the prison at a cost less than a tent the same size. Road men from other counties have seen the building, and it is said that others may adopt the same plan.

Finds $500 Diamonds By Means of 'Lost' Ad

Columbus Woman Recovers Five Rings Dropped on Street Car Two Months Ago.

COLUMBUS, June 28.—Through the means of a small "lost ad," diamond rings valued at $500 have been recovered by Mrs. S. J. Guined, of this city, after she had about given up all hope of finding them.

On April 10, Mrs. Guined rode up town on a street car. In a chatelaine purse she carried she had five rings valued at $100 each. The rings slipped out of the purse. She did not discover her loss until that night. She advertised for them.

A day or two ago a man learned the whereabouts of the rings, and, remembering the ad, notified police headquarters. Conductor J. A. Duffey and Motorman Ed Gurley, who were in charge of the car on which she had ridden, were arrested and the diamonds recovered. Mrs. Guined refused to prosecute the men and they were released. The Traction Company discharged them.

To Stand Trial for Attack on Reporter

James Randall, Augusta Barber, Will Be Arraigned in City Court.

AUGUSTA, June 28.—The most interesting case to be tried in the City Court next week is that against James Randall, a white barber, charged with assaulting M. J. Mabry, a newspaper reporter.

Randall is a well-known police character, having been in trouble several times and he is also somewhat notorious as the hangman of Arthur Glover, a white man executed here several years ago. Neither the Sheriff, the jailer nor any of the deputies would spring the trap to send Glover into eternity, so Randall was paid $10 for the work.

Some time ago Randall was arrested on the charge of gambling, and Mabry, accompanying the officers who made the raid, found some poker chips which the officers had overlooked. Randall threatened him at the time and in the City Court room a short time afterward he attacked Mabry.

H. Fleming, H. C. Middleton, E. P. Verdery and E. W. Andrews against the power company will be argued.

COLUMBUS CITY OFFICIAL HOLDS PLACE 50 YEARS

Another Week Will Complete Half Century of Service for M. M. Moore.

COLUMBUS, June 28.—A half century's service for the same municipality is something rarely seen, yet if City Clerk M. M. Moore, of Columbus, lives until July 6 he will have completed 50 years in the same office.

At a meeting of the City Council of Columbus on July 6, 1863, Mr. Moore, then hardly 26 years of age, but known as a successful business man and one faithful and upright in all of his dealings, was chosen City Clerk. He was elected over two strong competitors, and took immediate charge of the office, serving through the closing days of the war between the States and continuously since.

Through all these years of service he has rendered the city there have been but few times when anyone sought to take the office from him.

For many years past there has been no one to offer opposition to him, and he has been elected term after term by Councils which change more or less every two years.

Mr. Moore will be 76 years of age November 15, and the fact that he has given 50 years of his life to the discharge of his duties as a city official is evidence of his popularity with all the people. While Mr. Moore has never been robust physically, he has been blessed with average health. He is a native of Columbus and has lived here all his life, except for a very few years when he was a child, and then he lived just across the river in Girard. In 1868 he married Miss Sallie Peabody, a member of one of the most prominent families of this section. To them were born five children, four of whom are now living. They are James M. Moore, John P. Moore, Miss Lula Moore and Mrs. W. R. Hester, all of whom now reside in this city. His wife died last year.

COLUMBUS BURGLARS ROB CATHOLIC CHURCH

COLUMBUS, June 28.—Not content with robbing undertaking establishments and the Muscogee County court house, burglars have now turned their attention to churches in Columbus, and as a result the Church of the Holy Family has been looted of a number of valuables.

Gaining an entrance through a window the burglars stole small marble slabs, scarfs and other adornment. The convent was not disturbed.

Wimberly Explains Opposition to Depot

Refutes Imputation That Connection With Railroad Prompts His Fight Against Station.

MACON, June 28.—Representative Minter Wimberly, whose opposition to the erection of a union passenger station at Fifth and Cherry Streets will probably delay Macon's new depot project for this year at least, today stated his position, answering those who have criticised him. He indignantly denounces as "a grave, cruel and unworthy injustice" the charge that I am opposed to the Cherry Street site because of my connection with the Macon, Dublin and Savannah Railroad as general counsel."

Mr. Wimberly says that Council is giving too much to the Central of Georgia for what it receives in return, and by allowing the Central to close up five streets the city will permanently and absolutely impair the value of all of the land within the city limits on the other side of the closed section. He is for the Cherry Street site for the depot provided the streets are not closed. As it will take legislative enactment to close the streets, Mr. Wimberly's opposition is likely to defeat the project.

BRILLIANT BATTLE SURE IN FRANK TRIAL IN CLASH OF HOOPER AND ARNOLD

Order Has at Last Been Rested and Indications Are That Struggle of Attorneys Will Be Waged in the Most Ethical Manner.

By AN OLD POLICE REPORTER.

As deplorable as the Phagan case is, in all its melancholy details, it already is evident enough that there will come of it eventually much that the community may be thankful for.

In the first place, Atlanta and Georgia, and incidentally the entire South will have learned a good lesson in law and order, justice and fair play, and to that extent may be the better prepared for the next case of the kind that comes to their attention.

In the second place, there will be in the future no such wretched bungling and frenzied appeal in and from police headquarters, as for a time marked the Phagan case unique among its kind.

It looks now as if the decks have been pretty well cleared for action and that Leo Frank's trial may be expected to proceed in dignity and order, and that in its final analysis the truth of Mary Phagan's murder may be established, at least to the extent of Frank's real or suspected participation therein.

If Frank should be convicted, that would mean the subsequent indictment and conviction of the negro Conley, as an accessory after the fact.

Conley Indictment May Follow.

If Frank should be found not guilty, that would mean the indictment of Conley, as principal to the murder, in all human probability.

It evidently is the purpose of the State to hold Conley free of indictment, pending the disposition of the charges against Frank. His status as a material witness depends much upon this, of course.

There always is a chance, however, that a Grand Jury may take up a thing of this sort of its own motion, and to that extent there remains the possibility of prior indictment hanging over Conley.

It seems more likely, however, that the case will go to trial about as it shapes up now.

I do not incline to think the State really has any further sensational or particularly effective thing up its sleeve. Neither do I think the defense has.

There may be, on both sides, bits of corroborated evidence or evidence to offset this, that, or the other to come, but in the main I think the public is in possession of all the essential facts in the Phagan case to date.

The public must remember, however, that not all the things it has read in the newspapers, not yet one-half the things, ever will go before the jury trying Leo Frank as competent evidence.

And it is upon the COMPETENT evidence alone that the court will permit Leo Frank to be judged.

For instance, nothing that Mrs. Frank has said in the public prints will go before the jury. A wife is estopped in law from testifying either for or against her husband.

Fomby Woman Rejected.

The Fomby woman already has been rejected as a possible witness against Frank. Her story admittedly is too preposterous even for the State to bother with it further.

How much of Conley's story the jury will bear is entirely problematical.

He will be warned that he need not testify to anything calculated to incriminate himself, and even if he elects to disregard this warning there is much in his statement that likely will go down and out as incompetent or irrelevant.

The ponderous assurances of Frank's guilt, so frequently thundered from police headquarters by Detective Lanford, will, so far as the jury is concerned, not be there. Detective Lanford will not be on the jury—and his opinion as to the innocence or guilt of Frank will not be immediately valuable, therefore.

Frank's own statement, it must be rembered, will be delivered to the jury, not under oath.

The jury will be instructed by the court that it may accept the defendant's statement as the truth in its entirety, and to the exclusion of ALL the sworn testimony, if it sees fit; or it may accept it in part and reject it in part; or it may reject the statement as a whole.

The jury, and the jury ALONE, will be the judge of the facts.

The law—the impersonal law—that the jury will be required to apply to those facts it will get from the court.

It looks, then, as if the Phagan case, getting down to brass tacks, will revolve finally about these persons:

Leo Frank, the defendant; Solicitor Dorsey and Attorney Frank Hooper, representing the State; Luther Z. Rosser and Reuben Arnold, representing the defendant; the judge, the jury and a dozen or so competent and material witnesses.

Order at Last Comes.

So, at last, has order been brought out of chaos, after weeks and weeks of hysteria, stuff and nonsense, passion and prejudice, facts and near-facts, truth and lies, impatience and intolerance—all jumbled into about the worst mess I ever undertook, in my way, to analyze and unravel, in seeking the truth!

Leo Frank will receive a fair trial, and the written and recorded verdict, whatever it may be, will be accepted generally as the truth.

If the jury agrees that Frank is guilty, that verdict will be taken to be a just one. Nothing short of the most sensational and revolutionary new evidence likely would serve to re-establish his good name, once he is convicted in the Superior Court.

On the other hand, if the jury shall agree that Frank is not guilty, I think he will be taken back into the friendly and fair-minded good will of the people of Atlanta, a free and untarnished man, and there likely will come a revulsion of popular feeling in his behalf, that will go far toward offsetting and reconciling him to the horrible ordeal he passed through.

The approaching trial likely will be one of the greatest legal battles ever fought in Georgia.

On the one hand—that of the State—Hugh Dorsey, the Solicitor General, has done the drudgery, and Frank Hooper is to handle the picturesque. Hooper likely will figure much more in the public eye hereafter than Dorsey will, for it will be Hooper's business to paint the rainbow, snatch the stars from the heavens, and open the floodgates of tears—if he can!

On the other hand—that of the defense—Luther Z. Rosser has done the drudgery, and Reuben Arnold will have the delicate task of leading the jury along the primrose path that leads to Frank's acquittal.

All Have Big Reputations.

All of these men are great lawyers, with reputations to sustain, and each one may be depended upon to act a part entirely in keeping with the honorable profession of the law. I do not believe there is sufficient money in Atlanta to secure the services of any one of these men in an unworthy undertaking.

Each one of these men may be depended upon to do his best by his client, and as each one is of the quality I note, a fair trial seems assured.

It is a happy and a consoling circumstance that the trial of Leo Frank is to be presided over by an upright and just judge, argued by upright and honorable attorneys, and a verdict written by twelve "good men and true," as the law—the LAW in all its majesty—directs!

While by no means as spectacular a thing to say as something else might be, it is a matter of deep and abiding significance that Leo Frank, with his life, his good name, and all that he holds most dear at stake, is assured of a fair trial and a just verdict, notwithstanding all the frenzied and sinister detail of irrelevant and incoherent "testimony" and "evidence" set forth here and there, as time has run on since Mary Phagan was slain.

Victory for Society.

In the trial of Leo Frank THE SUPREMACY OF THE LAW will be vindicated beyond carping or cavil—and therein the most tremendous victory to society will be achieved.

Frank Hooper is one of the most experienced prosecuting attorneys in the State. He has served as Solicitor General on one of the most important circuits in Georgia, and his career thereon was entirely to his credit.

He is suave, incisive, deliberate, calm in action and eagle-eyed in seeing a point that may be turned to his client's advantage.

In summing up the case of the State against Leo Frank, Hooper will be at his best. He is a master in presenting his case to the jury for its consideration. I understand he is to be associated soon with Judge Arthur Powell and John D. Little, in Atlanta, in the practice of law. They will make a great team. Hooper is an attorney of the same class and caliber as Powell and Little.

But there to combat the best efforts that Hooper may put forth will stand that remarkable lawyer, Reuben Arnold.

Whatever qualms Frank may feel when he thinks of Hooper, doubtless they are relieved in large measure when he turns his thoughts to Arnold.

Reuben Arnold is a lawyer of constant surprises. Age can not wither him nor custom stale his infinite variety. Frank's case will be presented to the jury as few men could present it, when Arnold undertakes the work.

Convinced of Innocence.

Arnold says he never entered the case until he had convinced himself of Frank's innocence, and I quite believe he speaks the truth. I do not think there is the shadow of doubt either in Arnold's or Rosser's mind that Frank is entirely guiltless of the killing of Mary Phagan.

That Hooper may have some doubts as to the full strength of the State's case against Frank seems likely, for soon after entering the case he said this:

I have not been employed in the case to prosecute Leo M. Frank, but to help find and convict the murderer of Mary Phagan. If the trial proves we are wrong, we will begin work on another angle. We have but one object and idea. It is that justice and the law be vindicated. We are, however, convinced we have a strong case against the accused.

Now, I do not think a manlier thing has been said in all the mass of things that have been said in the Phagan case than the foregoing.

If any person who does not know Frank Hooper has any doubts as to his completeintegrity and lofty ideals the statement credited to him herein should remove them. Only a man who wishes to do right could or would say what Hooper said, soon after taking up the State's end of the Phagan case.

The most ardent, if honest, extremes of opinion well may meet on the platform Hooper sets up!

And if everybody in Atlanta will say, as he says, "I want to help find and convict the murderer of Mary Phagan, regardless of whom that murderer may be," everybody will find himself on a platform of decency and fair play—and that's where he ought to wish to find himself.

I have sought, in these articles, neither to prosecute nor to defend Frank. I have sought, in such manner as I might, to help find the murderer of Mary Phagan. I want to see him found and convicted.

I, like Hooper, have desired, above all things, to see JUSTICE AND THE LAW VINDICATED, and I indorse and agree with Hooper's expressed desire that both may be.

Search Will Continue.

If the State fails to convict Frank—the State will turn its eyes elsewhere.

Could any man ask a fairer or squarer promise from Hooper than that?

It merely means that Hooper WILL ACCEPT THE FINDINGS OF THE COURT, after orderly and prescribed procedure, frankly and unquestioningly, as the TRUTH of the matter.

If Frank is guilty, then the law will take its course.

If he is not guilty, he will take his place once more among his fellowmen, as free of stain as any of them.

That's where Hooper stands, and that's where I am satisfied to stand also!

And if somebody, early in the investigation of the Phagan case, had calmed the mad scramble for "clews," "evidence," "testimony" and what not, with the deliberate and convincing words of Frank Hooper, some of the utterly ridiculous theories would never have been evolved and the entire case would have rested upon a basis of sanity, which would have eliminated many of the ugly features.

Happily, however, the chatterboxes and the human phonographs have been given most effective pause in their wild riot of talk, and if the Society for the Suppression of Unnecessary Noises has rounded them up for good and all, so be it, and praise forevermore!

Sanity and THE LAW OF THE LAND have taken the Phagan case in hand, and through these agencies will the truth of the murder of Mary Phagan be set up eventually.

Luncheon Lurch Aid to Digestion

Pre-Prandial Prance Society Fad

Variation of Tango Brings Dancers One Step Nearer Dining Each Step They Take.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The Luncheon Lurch, the latest variation of the Tango and the Turkey Trot, which has seized the society of the Capital, is declared by experts on gastronomy to be the greatest known appetizer and first aid to digestion.

So effective has it been found along these lines that the Martini is now almost unknown on the boards of Washington hosts, while the pepsin tablet supply of the druggists is practically considered worthless stock.

There is a deep method in the Luncheon Lurch. Contrary to the Tango, which is danced after tea, the Lurch is a prepandian pastime. At a given time before the viands are to be served the orchestra strikes up something syncopated.

Guests immediately begin lurching and continue the dance until they have worked up an appetite considered commensurate with the feast about to be served.

Each step carries the dancers nearer the dining room, and observant ones declare that it is an invariable rule that the best trenchermen always dance with a remarkable celerity, while the dyspeptics lurch so slowly that they are to all appearances posing in tableau.

Among the prominent lurchers are Miss Katherine Elkins, Miss Dorothy Williams, Miss Sally Williams, Miss Katherine Britton, Miss Marguerite Barbour and Mrs. James F. Curtis.

$2,000,000 TAX GAIN EXPECTED IN CHATHAM

SAVANNAH, June 28.—That the total tax returns of Chatham County will show an increase for 1913 of close to $2,000,000 is the opinion of Tax Assessor Marcus S. Baker. This will make the total returns for the year over $40,600,000—a new record for Chatham County.

But this increase will have no effect on the tax rate, says Judge Oliver T. Bacon, chairman of the board of county commissioners. The net income from this estimated increase at 77½ cents a thousand is only about $14,000.

ALL WOMEN TO VOTE IN TIME IS SENATE'S IDEA

Even the Most Conservative Members Believe the Fair Sex Will Cast Ballot the World Over.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—That women in all civilized countries will be permitted to vote is regarded as inevitable by the most conservative Senators and Representatives.

It is their opinion that steady progress is being made and that Great Britain, the United States and other leading nations will eventually recognize that further delay is useless.

Two-Thirds Vote Needed.

The resolution proposing an amendment to the Federal constitution under which women would be given the ballot, now awaiting consideration by the Senate, is expected to be passed on at the next session. A two-thirds vote would be necessary for its adoption.

It would require the appoval of sixty-four Senators to make women suffrage operative for submission to the States, so far as the upper branch of Congress is concerned.

The chief handicap preventing woman suffrage lies in the opposition of Southern Congressmen. The votes for the women's movement have made headway in the South. A bitter struggle is in progress in Alabama, where Representative Hobson is seeking the Senatorship, as against Mr. Johnston, on a platform favoring woman suffrage and temperance. Senator Johnston says he will achieve re-election without difficulty.

Have Twenty-Four Votes.

It is figured that these Senators will certainly support the Chamberlain resolution providing for a constitutional amendment permitting women to vote; Ashurst and Smith, of Arizona; Thomas and Shafroth, of Colorado; Bornh and Brady, of Idaho; Myers and Walsh, of Montana; Gallinger and Hollis, of New Hampshire; Chamberlain and Lane, of Oregon; Smoot and Sutherland, of Utah; Jones and Poindexter, of Washington; Clark and Warren, of Wyoming; Gore and Owens, of Oklahoma; Ransdell and Thornton, of Louisiana.

This totals but twenty-four of the sixty-four votes necessary in the Senate. In view of recent action in Iowa, Illinois and Kansas it is possible that Senators Cummins, Kenyon, Sherman, Lewis, Bristow and Thompson may be added to the list, making thirty in all. It is claimed that two or three additional votes may come from New England, but no names are suggested.

Cupid Moves to Vancouver, Wash.

Oregon's New Law Requiring Health Certificates Held Responsible.

VANCOUVER, WASH., June 28.—The record for marriage licenses issued in one day during the 60 years in which records have been kept was broken here when ten couples secured marriage licenses. Nor is this all.

At the present rate, in fifteen days the greatest month's record will be broken in one-half the time—and all because Oregon passed a law requiring certificates of health from men making application for marriage licenses. Already 58 licenses have been issued this month, the record being 65 for any entire month.

BURN ATLANTA CLEAN, PLAN OF SANITAR YCHIEF

Settlement of Crematory Row Leaves Mayor, Council and Everybody Pleased.

John Jentzen, Sanitary Chief, is the happiest man in Atlanta as a result of the settlement Saturday of the crematory row. Operating his department without an incinerator, he said, was like trying to sail a ship on dry land, and that he had had to bear the brunt of complaints against the situation from thousands of exasperated citizens.

"That decision in the Mayor's office marks a new era in Atlanta," he said. "We shall begin a general clean-up the day the crematory is completed. I understand that that will not be longer than ten days. We shall burn Atlanta pure.

"Let the people take note of these instructions:

Gives Sanitary Rules.

"Keep the lids on garbage cans.

"Pile up the trash in yards and notify the sanitary department to come and get it.

"Don't throw things into streets and alleys.

"Help us put an end to the flies and musquitoes. You know trash breeds them."

The Chief said the new crematory would increase greatly the efficiency of his department and that it would shorten hauls and allow sanitary wagons to make more frequent visits.

He declared it would reduce the death rate and make Atlanta a more pleasant place to live in.

Mayor Well Pleased.

Although Mayor Woodward has been almost unanimously opposed in his attitude by the Council and brought most bitter criticism on himself, he smiled and said he was well satisfied over the outcome.

The Mayor's victory in the Supreme Court caused the price of the incinerator to be reduced from $276,000 to $260,000. His recent firm stand caused him to gain a point of honor.

Council endeavored to avoid allowing him to execute the contract. The concession is that he will execute it, following a special meeting of the Council Tuesday. That point has been the whole cause of the last controversy.

Turkish Bath Cures Rheumatism at Home

Costs But 2c a Bath.

Quickly Cures Kidney Trouble, Nervous Prostration and All Skin Diseases.

The Robinson Thermal or Turkish bath, taken at home, is becoming a rage. Those who have used the bath have been completely carried away with enthusiasm because of the astonishing results obtained.

Well known physicians say that the Robinson Thermal Bath at home is about to become an almost universal conqueror of disease. This is not an exaggeration. Any man or woman can prove its results inside of 24 hours, in some cases 30 minutes.

In cases of rheumatism, especially, the uric acid poison is extracted from the system through the pores, almost as liquids are sucked up through a straw. Drugs merely smother the poison or ease the pain. They do not extract the poison from the body.

Just read this letter:

"I loaned my cabinet to an old friend all crippled up with rheumatism, last May. Feet, legs, and hands badly swollen. He had spent some time at different Hot Springs without relief. A week ago he started in to use the cabinet, taking the steam heat in the morning and the dry heat at night, before going to bed. He kept this up a week, and yesterday and to-day he was as well as ever. "GEORGE A. FREEMAN,

"Mgr. Temptation Mining and Milling Company, Silverton, Colo."

Anyone can now take Robinson Thermal baths at home and at a cost of only about 2c a bath. They make the thick, sluggish blood normal, take out the impurities and cure "spring fever" right off. The only way to take these baths is by the use of the Robinson Thermal Bath Cabinet, which is a unique and marvelous invention.

That great book, "The Philosophy of Health and Beauty," retail price $2.00, free at our Main Store upon request for a limited time only. Be sure to get a copy. Also see the interesting demonstration of the Robinson Thermal Bath Cabinets; no obligation to purchase. Jacobs' Pharmacy, Main Store and Laboratory, 8-10 Marietta Street.—Adv.

UNCLE SAM IS NOW GREATEST HORSE BREEDER

Supplies Mounts for the Army From His Virginia Farm and Turns Out Thoroughbreds.

FARMERS ARE HIS PARTNERS

System So Successful That Other Large Studs Will Be Established in the West.

FRONT ROYAL, VA., June 28.—Uncle Sam has recently embarked in the horse business on a gigantic scale. He has started here what is probably the largest horse farm in the world, 5,500 acres, only a few hours' ride from the capital. And this is only the first of his farms. He intends to start several and turn out thoroughbreds by the tens of thousands.

To-day the farm is supplying practically the entire United States Army with its mounts. A short time hence and it will be supplying civilians, and soon, according to Captain Caspar H. Conrad, in charge, and generally acknowledged one of the greatest experts in horse flesh in America, it will be suppyling most of the civilized nations of Europe. And the price—now $144.15—may become even cheaper for Americans.

The farm represents an expenditure of more than $600,000, with some $400,000 to be spent within the next year.

Horses Have Everything.

On the farm are all sorts of buildings, sanitary baths, swimming pools, drinking fountains, resting sheds, pleasure paths and even a gigantic hospital—all for horses. Here and there are huge houses wherein reside men. These men look out for the horses.

They talk of little else. Indeed, it would be strange if the case were otherwise, for there are only 100 of these men, and daily they have to look after from 1,500 to 2,000 horses.

It took a long time to start the horse farm—more than half a century.

One day a few years ago a number of high staff officers of the army, watching a cavalry review, made some rather disparaging remarks concerning the appearance of the horses.

"Some of 'em look like mountain goats, and the rest like buffaloes," said one of the officers, and the remark got to the ears of Captain Conrad, and set him to thinking.

After that Captain Conrad had the approval of the War Department to start the farm. August Belmont made Uncle Sam a present of his six best stallions. Those stallions are known the racing world over, as Henry of Navarre, Octagon, Footprint, Belfry II, Vestibule and Marshall King. The six of them, when but two years old, cost $100,000.

Two More Horses Given.

James Camden, millionaire horseman of Versailles, Ky., heard of Belmont's gift and made Uncle Sam a present of his two famous stallions, Boola Boola and Wheelwright, worth about $25,000. Thus the farm was started.

But even with fifty stallions and mares by the hundred breeding on the farm was too slow. Something had to be done to increase the scope of the work—and the answer was found in a scheme to have Uncle Sam take every farmer in the South into partnership. This was done.

The ultimate plan is to sell the horses at a gigantic auction sale, with an army officer as auctioneer, knocking down the animals to the highest bidder.

Uncle Sam's horse farm is probably the only place in the country where no matter what animal you buy you may rest assured of getting a horse that is perfect. If the animal has the slightest blemish it will not be sold.

"Of course," said Captain Conrad, "we know that in this particular case the scar was due entirely to accident. But the farmer doesn't know it. He might have a mare scarred up purely by accident, but we wouldn't take his word for. We demand perfect mares and colts, so we give perfect stallions."

One Word to Decide Estate Ownership

Will Filed for Probate Causes Legal Discussion of Meaning of "And" and "Or."

WOODBURY, N. J., June 25.—The will of the late Aaron Knisell, of Sewell, was offered for probate in the Surrogate's office. This instrument has raised a contention among the heirs. The will left the entire estate to Mrs. Knisell, who died two weeks before her husband, and it is claimed that its provisions lapsed with her death.

The property was left to Mrs. Knisell "and her heirs." Had it read "or" heirs, it is claimed, the estate would go to her heirs; but, as it says "and" heirs, Knisell's brothers claim the estate. A ruling by the court will be necessary to interpret the instrument.

Evelyn Thaw Tells Her Ambition Will Try Something Worth While Reveals Her Plans to Alan Dale

Evelyn Thaw in the days she took New York by storm.

Evelyn Thaw as she is to-day.

As Miss Nesbit, Now Dancing at the Hippodrome, and Booked for Paris and Vienna.

By ALAN DALE.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—It was "Hullo, Rag-Time," at the Hippodrome that brought Evelyn Thaw within my jurisdiction, as it has brought many others who I never expected to meet.

So, with the open sesame of elusive art as a go-between, "Miss Nesbit," as she is programed here, received me without hesitancy in her rooms at the St. James Hotel, off Piccadilly, and our art robbed me of qualms. It was quite early morning.

Evelyn Thaw wore a loose peignoire of a black, shiny something, slashed at the back with yellow. Her hair was loosely fluffed out; she was devoid of the slightest effort at make-up, her ivory-white face and her unreddened lips looking quite startlingly natural. She was as pretty as any picture of—herself, and though the edge of reluctant youth may have frayed a little, there isn't a shadow of a doubt on the score of Evelyn Nesbit's charm. Never in all the ladies I have professionally met have I found more self-possession, a keener poise and less self-consciousness than in Evelyn Thaw. She made me wonder. She spoke easily, gracefully, reassuringly, without a trace of hesitation or nervousness.

On the Spur of the Moment.

"It was awfully sudden," she said, as we sat opposite each other. "I had no idea of going back to the stage after all these years."

"How many?" I asked. "You need not answer."

"Oh, I'm not like that," she said, with the first wistful smile; "I don't mind recalling anything. The last previous time I appeared on the stage was in 1904 in 'The Wild Rose.'

"Well, on the Olympic, coming over, I met a lot of theatrical people, among them Lee Shubert, Martin Beck and Albert DeCourville. They all advised me to make the break, especially DeCourville, who is manager of the Hippodrome.

"He has just married Shirley Kellogg, by the bye. I thought it over carefully, for I was a bit afraid, you know." She seemed to take it for granted that I knew. I did; I quite understood. "If I had made the break in New York I should have been a 'freak,'" she said. "Oh, there have been other women who have been through trials like mine who first tried New York, and it was hopeless. So when DeCourville telegraphed me at Paris to come at once to London and appear I realized that it was up to me, and I went, afraid, of course, but you know I'm no novice at harrowing experiences."

A Wild Turkey Trot.

"I was determined that nothing should force any attention from me to that sort of thing." She was now an artist before the public, and I was—me.

"I had to do a wild turkey trot with a dancer, and he was hard to find. I had seen Jack Clifford at the Cafe De Paris, and I remembered that he used to dance with Irene Weston, so we engaged him and rehearsed for one week only at the Irish Club, opposite the Hippodrome. Oh! it was terrible work. He throws me around—I am tossed up in the air and I see my heels at an angle I never expected to view them. And I'm an old married woman, with stiff joints."

Evelyn Nesbit laughed. So did I. She was as simple and unaffected as the inevitable school girl. It was impossible not to like her. She amused me a lot.

"They sneaked us on at a Saturday matinee without announcement," she said, "and luck favored me. The turn went well, and we are a hit.

"I'm engaged for six weeks, with an option, and then I go to Paris, Berlin, Vienna, St. Petersburg, Moscow, Copenhagen——"

"And New York?" I asked.

"New York, surely," she replied, smiling, "when I feel that I've put it over, but not until then. Oh, I do want to earn my own living, and the stage is good, and I don't mind hard work. In the old days, when I had nothing on my mind but my hair, I used to shirk rehearsals. Now, I'm Johnny-on-the-spot. I don't mind how much we rehearse. In fact, I rehearse every day. I've always loved dancing, and have studied all the successful dancers. If only I don't get fat like Ethel Barrymore and others."

She Won't Get Fat.

"You couldn't," I opined, for she didn't look the part.

"I won't," she retorted; "it would be a great pity, and I have another ambition that I'll tell you, for it may surprise you. Do you remember what Jerome said about me?"

Again I refused to remember anything.

"Well, he said that there were four great actresses—Sarah Bernhardt, Eleanora Duse, Mrs. Fiske and myself. I don't forget that. Some day I may try to act—to do something worth while, something serious, something emotional. So there you are! You will laugh, because I know you are funny.

"Theatrical people take themselves very seriously, and they can't understand why you don't do the same, but you don't—you can be as funny as you like about me. I sha'n't mind a bit, for I really have a sense of humor, and I'm not very serious." She laughed again, and I was quite disarmed. Evelyn Nesbit had impressed me as I didn't believe I was going to be impressed.

"All I do in London," she said, "is to work and eat good food. I love the food in London. Do go to the Cheshire Cheese and taste the chops. I was there yesterday, and I sat in Dr. Johnson's chair and enjoyed myself hugely. I'm going to get on, and I'm going to surprise everybody. One must have a beginning. Look at Elsie Ferguson. She was the stupidest chorus girl I ever met, but she had big moments, and now she is a very charming actress. Don't forget to write something funny about me, for I shall enjoy it."

But, somehow or other, Evelyn Nesbit hadn't appealed to my sense of humor. She was, at least, spontaneous and natural.

New Mexican Prodigy Received All His Training From Mother. Wonderful Memory.

ROSWELL, N. MEX., June 28.—When the public schools open next fall there will be a new student in the high school department, a boy who has never been to school a single day and who will not at that time have reached his eighth birthday.

This is the boy who, at the age of eighteen months, startled the city of Denver by repeating the names of the Presidents of the United States, and who at the age of five recited several pages from Hiawatha in a school entertainment in Artesia, N. Mex. His name is Raymond Ray. He is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. G. F. Ray, of Roswell.

Wife Refuses to Stop Husband and Daughter's Eloping

Declares to Humane Society That She Tolerated Act to Preserve Happiness of Her Child.

LOS ANGELES, June 28.—Telling a most unusual story, filled with peculiar complications, in which she accuses her husband of eloping with and marrying his own stepdaughter and then stealing her two children in order to secure property belonging to her, Mrs. Ruella Nicholson has appealed to the police, the humane society and the county officers to help her in locating her husband, Edward Nicholson, and thus get back her children.

How she learned of the fact that her daughter had married her own stepfather, and did not interfere with the marriage because she wanted her child to be happy was a part of the strange story alleged by the woman.

Tired, hungry and practically penniless, the elderly woman appealed to the humane society.

Society Women Sound Knell for Mourning

Boston Leaders Declare That Custom of Donning Black for Dead Is Relic of Barbarism.

BOSTON, June 28.—Society women of Boston have answered the question, "How long should society women wear mourning for their dead relatives?" by saying in substance that mourning should not be worn. It was the consensus of opinion that it is a survival of barbarian days.

Mrs. Charles P. Putnam, wife of Dr. Putnam, said, "It seems to me that there is altogether too much mourning worn considering our present enlightened state of civilization. The world is dark enough as it is without women wearing crepe to make it any more gloomy.

Women Taught to Save Million a Year

Kansas Garbage Cans Are Cheated of Immense Amount by Domestic Science Instruction at School.

TOPEKA, KAN., June 28.—Kansas cheated the garbage cans of the State out of $1,000,000 last year, and the amount will be increased at the rate of $500,000 a year until there will be virtually no wasted foods in the entire State.

That is the aim of the Kansas Agricultural College, and the State is spending $40,000 a year to help.

Seven hundred girls completed the domestic science courses at the agricultural college this week, and the college has just closed its movable cooking schools, which were attended by 11,000 women in the ten weeks in which they were operated.

PET CANARY OF PRETTY WOMAN HALTS VESSEL

Captain of Liner Agrees to Delay Voyage Until She Can Send Home for Bird.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Mrs. Green is young and very charming. That is why the officers of the Vestris, of the Lamport and Holt line, gave her their fullest attention when she announced in plaintive but positive tones that she had lost her Rickey.

"I forgot to bring Rickey," she exclaimed.

"Who's Rickey?" demanded the second officer.

"Rickey's our pet canary," she said, "and I am taking him to South America to my husband. I mean I was to have taken him, but I left him at home."

Brought Food, Forgot Bird.

"It's too late now to get him," said the officer, "for we leave in thirty minutes."

"But I wouldn't dare go without him. I've brought the seed and the cuttlefish and everything, but I forgot the bird."

"Where do you live?" asked the officer.

"Mrs. G. F. Green, 59 West Fifty-third Street," was the reply, and the officer solicited the assistance of H. S. Damage, the line's passenger agent. After consultation with the Vestris captain it was agreed to hold the vessel until ten minutes after five o'clock—ten minutes later than her schedule called for—and Mr. Damage and Mrs. Green sought a telephone.

Bird's Owner In Hysterics.

To an agent of a taxicab company the young woman explained that she wanted to go to the Fifty-third Street number and get a canary bird.

But no canary bird bearing taxicab arrived at the pier by ten minutes after five o'clock, and Mrs. Queen was in a state of hysteria as she watched the sailors haul off the gang plank.

Just as the Vestris was swinging at the end of the pier and before the last spring line was cast off the taxicab arrived. With the bewildered canary in its cage one of Mrs. Green's friends ran to the end of the pier and fastened the cage to a piece of rope. Then, very slowly and with due reverence—for Mrs. Green's brimming eyes were upon him—a sailor hauled the line with the cage attached over the side.

Woman Loves Mouse; Eats Meals With Him

Pet Comes Daily to Dine With Hotel Employees, and Girl Feeds Him From Hand.

CINCINNATI, June 28.—It is an old saying that all women are afraid of mice, but one has at last been found who is not afraid, and even says she likes them.

She is Miss Ella Eversfield, an operator at the Grand Hotel, who takes her meals with her favorite mouse every day. The employees of the hotel have a private dining room, and some time ago a mouse was discovered there. At the time Miss Eversfield had not learned to love mice and she probably screamed, but the mouse was game and stuck it out, and, having learned the meal hours, he insisted on putting in his appearance every day, until finally the employees learned to consider him as one of their number, and now he eats his meals from the hand of Miss Eversfield.

TRENTON, June 28.—Because her hair turned gray as the result of injuries sustained when she was struck by a trolley car, Mrs. Mary G. Hibbs, of Bristol, to-day started suit against the Trenton and Mercer County Traction Company for $10,000. Mrs. Hibbs was injured in Trenton when she attempted to cross a street in front of a car.

NEW ANSLEY HOTEL GIVES MOST MODERN HOSTELRY OF SOUTH TO ATLANTA

No Detail Has Been Spared to Make It Unsurpassed for the Traveling Public and People of City—Formal Opening Monday.

Machinery and Equipment Latest Devices for Aid of Sanitation and Comfort—Mural Decorations Picture Events of Georgia.

Only to those who "put up" after Monday at the Hotel Ansley will it be given in fullest measure to say, with Shenstone, that they have "found life's warmest welcome at an inn."

At least, the builder and the lessee and the press agent have endeavored to make it even so, and the very few favored persons permitted to inspect the building and its appointments in advance of the opening agree they planned wisely and builded well.

When the Ansley, Atlanta's newest hostelry, opens its doors to guests on Monday, it will be unexcelled among the inns of the country for efficiency, service, accommodations, equipment and modernity of its appointments. No detail was overlooked in the planning; no expense was spared in the building.

Banquet Hall Seats 500.

With its banquet room seating 500, its rathskeller accommodating 300 and its hundreds of rooms supplied with fresh filtered air continuously; with its costly historical mural decorations, each a work of art, the sumptuous furnishings of its rooms and suites and its perfect service system, the Ansley will be without a superior for business, conveniences and safety.

As "Marse" Henry Watterson expressed it, at no place "on the Rambla and in the Ring, in Piccadilly and the Corso, beneath the colonnades of the Rue de Rivoli of Paris and 'Unter den Linden' of Berlin—indeed, all the way between Chicago and Cannebiere, including many nooks and corners of little old New York," can the man or woman with a trunk and a handbag live higher, sleep safer and spend less than at the Hotel Ansley.

Two well-known quotations imprinted on the tapestry will greet the eye of all who pass the portals of the Hotel Ansley. The first one is the hotel man's favorite verse, from Shenstone, as follows:

Whoe'er has traveled life's dull round,
Where'er his stages may have been,
May sigh to think he still has found
Life's warmest welcome at an inn.

The next is a Scriptural quotation, taken from Hebrews, and the Ansley management promises to apply the precept and the compliment to every guest alike. Here it is:

"Forget not to show love unto strangers, for thereby some have entertained angels unawares."

Indicate Spirit of Hotel.

These two familiar quotations are printed across the underbeam of the winding marble stairways in the Ansley foyer. They are intended to indicate the spirit in which guests should apply and expect to be received.

Appearance of the lobby is enhanced by three historical paintings on tapestry, each 12 by 10 feet, situated on the upper mezzanine floor and facing the Forsyth Street entrance. The paintings recall important historical happenings in Georgia.

The first panel depicts the meeting of General Oglethorpe and Tomochichi at Savannah, May 21, 1733. The next represents John Wesley teaching the Indians under the oaks of St. Simons, and the third shows the burning of the Yazoo fraud papers at the state house in Louisville, Jefferson County, in the year 1796.

The papers were ignited by means of a magnifying glass and the sun's rays, showing that the fire which destroyed such an infamy should come from Heaven.

On the ground floor are a dozen or more other paintings of historical interest.

Dining Room Is Italian.

The dining room of the Ansley is known as the Italian room, on account of its architecture and mural paintings. The latter consist of the Vatican gardens, showing the cupola of St. Peter's in the distance; the garden of Villa Borghese in Florence, the garden of Villa Lante, the Hercules fountain in the garden of Villa Reale of Florence, and a view of Venice canale, all of which are painted on canvases, each 12 by 10 feet.

The rathskeller, one of the largest and most luxurious in the South, is remindful of college life. Its walls are decorated with portraits of the seals of the leading Georgia colleges, interlaced with varicolored bands waving over a golden background.

The waiting room is trimmed and wainscoted with Georgia sycamore. A distinctive feature of this room, indeed, of the hotel is a full size true-to-life portrait of Lieutenant General William Tecumseh Sherman, beneath which is the following inscription:

"Under whose orders Atlanta was burned, and who said war is hell."

Old Photographs Reproduced.

Actual 1865 photographs are reproduced, showing Atlanta before and after the famous conflagration. On other panels of the waiting room are the Great Seals of Atlanta and the State of Georgia. Those who have seen this room are unstinted in their praise of its historical interest and value.

The Ansley equipment for cleaning silverware and dishes is unexcelled. The silverware will be cleaned by chemically generated electricity, made by water, soda and salt.

Dishes will be cleansed and sterilized by powerful streams of hot water thrown against them while incased in a metal washing machine.

The kitchen of the Ansley is replete with modern machinery and other implements for prompt and efficient service. Its appointments are products of as great attention to detail as was given the office, the rathskeller or any other part of the hostelry.

Five Lang ranges form a battery kept at even temperature by a single furnace. The bake ovens are built on the skyscraper plan—four stories high—thus utilizing space and insuring uniform results. The meat department is equipped with a slicing machine, insuring uniform-sized slices without rough edges.

Has Own Ice Plant.

The Ansley has the best equipped ice and refrigerating plant in Atlanta. It is a duplicate affair with a capacity of fourteen tons a day. The cold storage room could accommodate a carload of meat.

From a service bar in the basement all orders will be filled for the rathskeller, private dining rooms and guests' apartments, thus keeping the waiters out of the main buffet, which opens on Forsyth Street.

Distinctively a unique feature for any hotel is the sanitary bathing subbasement for the hotel's servants. Each compartment is equipped with lockers, and all waiters, cooks, bellboys, porters, etc., will be required to take a shower bath before starting each day's work.

Not the least attraction of the Ansley is its contemplated scale of charges. Rooms with running water and private toilet will cost $1 a day, rooms with connecting bath $1.50, with private bath $2, $2.50 and $3. Club breakfasts will be served for 25 cents and up, lunch for 50 cents from 12 till 2 o'clock, and 6 to 8 o'clock dinner for $1.

Indian Girl Writes Opera on Sioux Life

Zitkala Sa Composed "The Sun Dance"—Gave It on Reservation.

SALT LAKE CITY, June 28.—On the Uintah reservation at Vernal, Utah, nearly 100 miles from a railroad, an Indian girl has written an opera, with her people as the theme and motif. It is one thing to write an opera and another to have it produced. Zitkala Sa, a full-blooded Sioux, has accomplished both these things.

When "The Sun Dance" was sung in Vernal, Indians and whites drove in from 40 miles around to hear it; and, having heard it, they pronounced it a triumph. Efforts are being made to have the opera sung in Salt Lake City during the week of the National Education Association, July 5 to 11.

"The Sun Dance," as it was produced at Vernal in March, was not altogether the work of Kitkala Sa and her copper-hued brethren of the Uintah reservation. Professor William F. Hansen, of the faculty, and white as well as Indian students of Uintah Academy played important roles in the preparation and singing of the piece. It was, in fact, part of the academy work.

12,000 Drinks in Five Years Basis of Suit

Wife Declares Husband Protected Himself With Walking Stick in Driving Rain Storm.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Twelve thousand drinks, ranging from simple mixed potations to fancy concoctions, is the record which Mrs. John Barry Sears posts up against her husband in five years of married life.

Mrs. Sears, who is suing for divorce, said Mr. Sears started his career of conviviality during his honeymoon and has kept it up.

In one instance, according to Mrs. Sears, her husband had come home in a driving rain.

"He carried his walking stick elevated above his head," she testified, "and held his umbrella closed in his hand. He was soaking wet, but did not know it."

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, EUGENE, June 28.—Max H. Sommer, a freshman in the University of Oregon, registered from Portland, has a record for assiduous reading during the past collegiate year. According to the report of Librarian Douglass, Sommer's card shows that he has taken out 89 volumes, the majority of which would be classed as "heavy reading."

Of the 89 volumes perused by this freshman, 47 are devoted to social science, 28 are classed as pure literature, 5 are works of history and biography, 5 are of a philosophical and religious nature and 4 deal with journalism.

Oregon Governor Opposed to Autos

Declares State Appropriation Would Have Made Him Travel Like 'Piker.'

SALEM, OREG., June 28.—Despite rumors to the effect that he would be a candidate for re-election, Governor West positively announces that he will not be a candidate.

The Governor said that the financial drain on him was large, particularly his traveling expenses. The State now provides $1,000 for the traveling expenses of the Governor when on the State's business, but until two years ago only $500 a year was provided. The Governor declared that he could not live like a "piker" when away from home, and the expenses of many of his trips were paid by himself.

Governor West said that he had never bought an automobile because he did not want one, wouldn't have one if somebody would make him a present of it, couldn't operate it if he had it, and, above all, could not afford a machine.

DANCING MASTERS DECLARE TURKEY TROT IS IMMORAL

ASBURY PARK, June 28.—The "turkey trot" is an immoral dance in the opinion of members of the American National Association, masters of dancing, in session here, and at today's meeting the delegates were urged to co-operate with local authorities in banishing the figure that is fast becoming the rage.

The "tango" was not treated so severely. If properly taught, the masters believe, it may be danced.

On this trip she visited fifty-two countries and experienced every kind of ancient and modern travel.

Miss Ackerman said the happiest and most professional women are in Australia.

Canton, Ohio, Folks Must Get in Tub at Least Once a Week Authorities Declare.

CANTON, O., June 28.—Canton folks must bathe at least once a week, and "all over," at that. The board of health has said so.

In order that none can misunderstand, the board has arranged to post in every home where soap and water are believed to be at a premium a set of rules printed in five languages and specifying $25 and costs as punishment of any one who neglects the weekly cleanup.

DIVA BELIEVES BABIES BEST, FARM LIFE NEXT

Schumann-Heink, Who Has Just Passed Her Fifty-second Birthday, Purchases Big Tract.

SAN DIEGO, CAL., June 28.—"Yes, now I am a farmer; also I am a mother, and I have just had my fifty-second birthday."

It was Mme. Schumann-Heink who spoke. Wreathed in smiles and radiating health—the great artist, accompanied by her youngest child and most beautiful daughter, descended from an incoming train to begin a six-month vacation here.

She had just completed her longest American tour and returns with the greatest profits made by any artist in concert this season.

Last year Mme. Schumann-Heink bought 3,000 acres here. She plans to make ranches with gardens, barren wastes into orchards and her rancho the garden spot of America.

"Farming," enthused Madame, "next to the rearing of babies, is the most interesting work in the world."

"But the farming, madame, surely you will not hoe?"

"Look at these two hands. I ask you, do they not appear capable? I have raised and worked for my children and they are yet strong—nicht?" Madame held her pink palms upward. One of the most convincing proofs of what she said was their appearance. The fingers are long and slender and young and strong enough to be envied by any woman half the diva's age.

And this can also be said truthfully of her face and form. Mme. Schumann's flamed with health.

"Yes, I shall be getting out and digging like a regular farmer. Oh, that is nothing to dig," she stated. "Once I made a garden at my New York home.

"Ach, yes, it is good to grow fruit, but it is better to be the mother of babies."

Babies Saved From Bolt by Feather Bed

Children Are Found Unhurt in Mattress After Room Is Wrecked by Lightning.

NEW YORK, June 28.—A feather mattress saved two children of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Johnson on the Peter Cortelyou farm, at Franklin Park, near New Brunswick, N. J., when a bolt of lightning struck their bed. The parents were awakened by a tremendous crash and a shriek from the children in an adjoining room. A flash of lightning just as they reached the room revealed a big hole in the roof and one in the floor.

The father obtained a lamp and found the bedstead shattered to pieces. Securely rolled up in the feather mattress, however, were the two little ones, almost suffocated with heat but unhurt.

SWEETPEAS IMPORTED BY AUSTRIAN EMPEROR

Special Cable to The American.

VIENNA, June 28.—Sweetpeas, which were practically unknown in Austria only a few years ago, are now prominent in the Imperial Gardens at Schonbrunn.

The aged Emperor Francis Joseph is the first in Austria to "take up" the sweetpea. The director of the Imperial Gardens was sent to London and brought specimen plants back with him. Now the tables at the castle at Schonbrunn are decorated with sweetpeas in one color or at most two. The Emperor prefers pink and white to other combinations.

Chief's Gold Badge Found to be Nickel

New Head of Police Department Finds That Predecessors Had Worn Base Metal Insignia.

PASADENA, June 28.—"Silver Threads Among the Gold," merrily whistled newly appointed Chief of Police W. S. McIntire as he scraped off the gold from the badge that was turned over to him by his predecessor, W. F. Wood, who resigned from the office.

When Wood resigned he presented his successor with the badge containing the words, "Chief of Police, Pasadena." On making a close inspection of the badge, which had long borne a reputation of being solid gold, the new chief observed that it was somewhat tarnished.

A cleanser was then applied, with the result that the badge in a few minutes was a shining nickel-plated star and greatly similar to the other badges worn by the balance of the police department.

Free Market Starts To Cut Cost of Living

San Jose, Cal., Plans To Do Away With Profit Made by Middle Man.

SAN POSE, CAL., June 28.—San Jose hit the high cost of living a solar plexus blow to-day when, under the direction of the city administration, a free market was opened in South Market Street at the City Hall Park.

A score of produce wagons came for the opening, and long before the selling day was over every scrap of salable goods had been disposed of and a crowd clamored for a chance to purchase.

Market Master Joseph Napoli declares that the first day's business demonstrated that producers received 25 per cent more for their sales than they could get from the middle man and that buyers saved a minimum of 25 per cent by doing business directly with the producers.

CONVICTS DINE IN HOTEL THEN SEE MOVING PICTURE

COLUMBUS, O., June 28.—Five penitentiary prisoners, serving sentences ranging from manslaughter to pocket picking, were taken from their cells by an official of the State Board of Administration and treated to a banquet at one of the large hotels. Following the banquet the prisoners were taken to moving picture shows and given an entertainment which they will long remember.

JAP EMIGRANTS NOW COLONIZING BRAZILIAN LANDS

1,500 Arrivals But Vanguard of Orientals to Be Sent to South America.

SEATTLE, WASH., June 28.—How Japan is colonizing Brazil was given in detail here with the arrival of the Japanese steamship Sanuki Maru.

Fifteen hundred Japanese emigrants were landed at Santos, Brazil, May 15. They are the vanguard of a great population to be sent to South America to become a part of the first permanent Japanese colony in Brazil under the Sao Paulo colonization agreement recently entered into between Japan and Brazil.

The first award of territory comprises approximately 150,000 acres of agricultural land.

Another Japanese Brazilian colonization enterprise has been completed and passengers of the Sanuki say that the two Governments have arranged for the concession of a considerable area of fertile country which will be settled by Japanese. Settlers for this colony will leave Japan about the end of the present year.

Japanese contract labor is now being sent into South Africa and both Brazil and Peru are being supplied with coolies, who leave Japan under contract with various South American industrial organizations.

CONTESTANTS WORKING HARD FOR MORE VOTES

Manager of Pony Race Advises Girls and Boys to Use Follow-Up System.

SYSTEMATIC WORK WINS

Shetlands Are Growing Fat and Strong at Loomis Avenue Stable Where They Are Kept.

The last week of the "clubs of five" bonus offer in The Georgian and American pony contest begins with all contestants straining hard to take advantage of the benefit to be gained by getting subscriptions before the time limit is up.

Standings published in The American show great gains, but they are small compared with the leaps forward which will be shown when the bonus votes are reckoned up for publication in next Wednesday's Georgian. The contest manager believes it will take the office force all of the night of July 5 to make the proper entries.

There also is a bonus of 50,000 votes for the first $30 turned in for subscriptions by any of the contestants. This offer may be withdrawn at any time.

Use Follow-Up System.

The contest manager wishes to repeat his suggestion that contestants take a leaf from the books of the successful business man and institute a "follow-up" system. A list of those whose subscriptions expire soon should be made, and all such subscribers visited with a request for a renewal. Nine times out of ten, a renewal is easier to get than the first subscription, for at the end of a short trial the subscriber generally gets to like The Georgian and American so well that he wants to continue.

It is systematic work of this sort which counts for more than the spurts of a day or two, which, while they may yield remarkable results, are not frequent enough to build up totals to the point where the contestant can feel sure of a pony.

None Sure of Winning.

No contestant has a right to feel sure of winning as yet. There is not a boy or girl in the race who can not be passed by an energetic rival, and some who are leading now have a very poor start, indeed.

Meanwhile, the ponies are "eating their heads off" at 55 Loomis Avenue, where their future owners are invited to call and see them. All are rounding into great shape, and they are prettier every day. It is going to be a hard task for the winners to pick the ponies they like best from the splendid bunch The Georgian and American have bought.

"I subscribed to The Georgian and American a week ago, and the paper has not begun to come to my home yet," is a complaint heard every now and then.

Usually it develops that the subscriber gave his money to one of the contestants, and that the contestant is "holding back."

This is poor policy, particularly if it is a short-term subscription, for when a contestant treats a subscriber in this way the man is not going to be as willing to give the contestant his renewal.

"Don't hold back," is the advice of the contest manager—and he knows best.

I nominate, as a candidate in The Hearst's Sunday American and Atlanta Georgian Pony Outfit Contest:

BONUS OFFER IN PONY CONTEST GIVES 1 WEEK MORE OF OPPORTUNITY

Wanting to win and working to win differ widely. Working to win is what counts, and working to win now, while the special bonus vote offers are in effect in The Georgian and American pony contest.

July 4 means more than cannon crackers, picnics and general celebrations to the pony contestants. It means, to them, the end of one of the bonus offers, and July 4 is little more than a week away.

Clubs of five subscriptions, yearly, half-yearly, or for three months, bring great rewards until the expiration of the period thus limited. And "when the polls close" for these club bonus votes the office force of the contest manager expects an all-night session reckoning up the strength of the many candidates.

Some have brought in five subscriptions at a time to take advantage of the bonus. Others have brought them in one, two or three at a time. In either case, the clubs will be credited accurately. And overnight the standings will seem to have doubled, though the bonus votes represent weeks of work.

The ponies now are at 55 Loomis Avenue, where contestants are welcome. If they arrive at the right time they will see the ponies being exercised.

Fortune in Gold Awaits Claimants

Insane Kansas Woman Leaves Bag of Nuggets and Dust Worth $10,000.

HUTCHINSON, KANS., June 28.—A bag of gold nuggets and gold dust worth $10,000 awaits any heirs who may be found to the estate of Mrs. Ann M. Bernhart, who died recently in Davenport, Iowa, according to the announcement of G. M. Duckworth, administrator.

Several years ago Mrs. Bernhart was adjudged of unsound mind. Duckworth was named her guardian. The cottage here where she lived alone was closed and she went to an asylum. Upon her death Duckworth thoroughly searched her cottage. The nuggets and dust in small bags were found secreted in the dwelling.

WHAT ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS AND JOBBERS ARE DOING

MANUFACTURES DINNER PLANNED FOR EVE OF 4TH

New Ansley Hotel Will Serve Atlanta Factory Owners to the Number of 200.

HOME EXHIBIT PLANS TOPIC

Brooks Morgan Has Definite Proposals for Acceptance or Rejection—Pledges Desired.

Atlanta manufacturers, to the probable number of 200, will gather on the evening of July 3 at the Ansley Hotel for a dinner.

The object of the dinner is to discuss the proposed permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods, and at the same time, to discuss the advisability of holding the annual temporary exhibit, such as was held last year at the time of the Southern Merchants' Convention.

The dinner had been set for June 24, but the unavoidable absence from the city of Brooks Morgan necessitated a postponement.

The new date was set at an informal conference of Mr. Morgan, Wilmer L. Moore and Walter G. Cooper held Wednesday.

Invitations to the big "Manufacturers' Dinner" will be sent out at once, and a general response is expected.

At the dinner, Mr. Morgan will lay before the manufacturers definite proposals for lease or purchase of buildings suitable for the installation of a manufacturers' exhibit. It will, in brief, be a "show down." The permanent exhibit project has been gone over thoroughly. The manufacturers have seen Chattanooga's display, and they have learned in detail of New Haven's success. There has been plenty of time for them to make up their minds. At this dinner they are expected to signify what they intend doing.

If, as is expected, the will of the manufacturers is seen unanimously in favor of the exhibit, a start will be made. But the backers of the project do not wish to start unless they have assurance of 200 exhibitors and 40,000 or 50,000 feet of floor space.

Strenuous Work Done Preparing for Convention.

When the four or five thousand merchants from all over the South gather in Atlanta for their convention, during the first two weeks of August, it is doubtful if any of them will be able to realize the care and effort that has been expended to make their meeting a success.

For instance, one energetic committee has been toiling throughout the hot week in an effort to raise funds for the entertainment of the visitors. As a result of their conscientious endeavor, the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association sees its way clear, as to finances, to play host to the gathering.

Another committee has been hard at work preparing the program. The program is to be an elaborate affair. Three or four topics a day will be discussed, and most of the discussion will be in the shape of five-minute addresses. The traveling men are doing yeoman's work in finding the good speakers scattered throughout the territory, men who have opinions worth hearing and experience likely to be helpful to other merchants in their lines.

Moving Big Concern Takes Almost Week

Dougherty-Little-Redwine Co. Get to Temporary Quarters by Dint of Hard Work.

Almost a week has been required for moving the Dougherty-Little-Redwine Company from its old home in North Pryor Street to temporary quarters at 30-32 South Pryor Street. It is estimated that about forty boxcar loads of goods were moved, the stock being valued at $150,000.

"That amount of silks would not make much of a showing, but when it comes to underwear, it is a different story," remarked J. Little.

Jordan Thinks Europe's Land Banks Ideal for South

Cheap Loans on Farm Lands Spell Financial Independence for Cotton Grower, He Says.

Special Cable to The American.

By COLONEL HARVIE JORDAN.

(Member of the American Farm Credits Commission and President of the Southern Cotton Association)

OLDENBERG, GERMANY, June 28.—The capitalization of Southern cotton growers through the mortgage bank system, giving them mortgage loans at low interest with easy payments, would completely reorganize the cotton-growing industry of the South. I am convinced that the land mortgage business in America can be systematized along the lines of similar mortgage systems in Europe.

If this is done it will bring a new era of prosperity to the South and greatly increase the cash returns from cotton, which now represent practically the entire balance of trade of the United States.

Southern cotton growers to-day are just one year behind financially. They have been behind since the Civil War.

The curse of the cotton farmers is the store lien system, under which they are obliged each spring to purchase their supplies on credit from the supply merchants. Frequently farmers pay 50 per cent or more in excess of the cash price of goods for the privilege of this credit. Moreover, the supply merchants secure absolute control over the farmers.

Marketing Is Hurried.

The cotton crop has to be marketed as soon as harvested. Farmers have practically no control over the marketing. This is because they have no financial independence. The American commission has studied the mortgage systems which place European farmers in far stronger positions as borrowers than our own farmers. In America we still are clinging to the antiquated practice of forcing short-time loans on the agriculturist.

European farmers borrow through an intermediary society and enjoy as strong positions as any railroad or municipality. If our Southern farmers mortgage their land they must pay back the entire principal in lump sum in a few years, else pay a costly commission for renewal. So long as this is true naturally the farmers won't mortgage their land until actually pressed to the wall.

In contrast to this European farmers repay their loans in small annual installments. So long as they meet their interest payments they can never be sold out. Their entire payments for both interest and principal amount to less than our farmers frequently are required to pay for interest alone.

Cash Basis Possible.

If Southern farmers can get a device to act as their agent in borrowing and can capitalize their land holdings on terms that will permit them to repay little by little, we can put the cotton-growing industry of the South on a cash basis. This would enable our farmers to buy on a cash basis and secure financial independence. It would break the power of the supply merchants. It would be the surest way to a New South. A New South would mean prosperity to the nation.

There is no theory in this proposition. I have studied these mortgage systems here. They are straight business enterprises that we Americans can adopt perhaps improve upon. The Legislature of every State in the Union should take this matter under consideration.

When currency reform is enacted in the United States this should form part of the program. Farmers never up to this time had any consideration whatsoever given their requirements as borrowers. In currency or banking legislation they have been left to get along as well as they could. This has been largely responsible for the financial positions of the Southern farmers to-day.

Men's Hats For Next Fall Pert Affairs, Blue and Green

Fall, 1913, hats for men are being shown by jobbers in Atlanta.

Take them big and large, they deserve the name the women give their headgear—they are "creations."

One "creation," for instance, is green velour, with a little bow at the back, and a button-hole stitched edge.

Brown-Perryman-Greene Company say velours, particularly in blue and green, are "the thing" for fall. Velours retail from $3.50 to $7.50.

The "Trooper" shape is proper. To make a "Trooper" shape, punch out a crown, then strike it with the edge of the hand, lengthwise. That's all.

Another "creation" particularly fetching is blue, with red, white and blue stitching which runs up and down the crown and around and around the brim. A button is in the geometrical center of the crown.

Perhaps the best of the bunch, to many tastes, is a green felt hat, "Trooper" shape, of course, with "zebra" finish. "Zebra" finish means that it is 'self-striped." Alternate stripes are smooth, the others are unfinished—fuzzy, in a word. The stripes are something less than half an inch wide, and run vertically on the crown. The hat really is not "freaky." It is attractive.

Other soft hats are lined with gay silk, have welt edges, or are otherwise adorned.

Brand-new is a chinchilla hat. Corduroy and cloth of all kinds will be much in vogue this autumn.

Caps promise to continue their unprecedented popularity. They come in all patterns—one, for instance, a "cubist" design in maroon and tan.

For the man who will wear a derby, regardless, it may be news to know that the derby crowns will be a bit higher this fall, the brims about the same. Crowns seem to be working back from the flat effect of a year back to the old-fashioned high crown. They change a bit each year.

Boys—the little fellows—wear telescope shape hats, while you can't give them to their elders.

Of course, this takes no account of the "staples"—the conservative styles which never change.

LUMBER SALES SHOW BUILDING KEEPS UP WELL

Dealers in Supplies Tell of Big Things in Prospect for the Coming Autumn.

Dealers in lumber, brick, cement, plaster and building supplies report that Atlanta is going straight ahead in its expansion.

Unanimously they report good trade. One particularly encouraging feature, according to their expressions, is the steady increase in the number of small residences, homes costing between $3,000 and $4,000, seeming to predominate.

Furthermore, building supplies dealers are unanimous in saying that there are great plans in store for fall. If all rumors are to be believed, property owners are contemplating improvements at almost a "boom" rate as soon as summer is past.

Paint dealers also are cheerful. They report contractors figuring on work far ahead, and also general activity in refurnishing buildings which are not new, but which are being remodeled to meet the city's growing needs.

Expressions from dealers in these lines follow:

V. H. Kriegshaber: "Our observation is that there is a good deal of building contemplated—in the wind, so to speak. When conditions settle down this fall, we look for an excellent trade in building supplies."

Randall Bros.: "Our business is better than it ever has been in lumber and building material. The increase has come from the increase in medium priced houses, residences to cost between $3,000 and $4,000.

"It is hard to tell about the fall, but we look for a good trade. Prices are a little lower. This always is the case in June and July. There will be a reaction in August and September, and quotations will be stronger. This is the history of every year."

Willingham-Tift Lumber Co.: "Business has been quite brisk up to the present time, with particular activity in the erection of small houses. This looks to us like the right time to build, for prices, in our opinion, are at the bottom."

Seiple Sons: "Business is fairly good at the present time, and it is picking up rapidly. We look for a very good trade for the rest of the year. The market is steady, still prices are reasonable and it is a good time to build. We notice a revival particularly in the erection of small houses."

Dozier & Gay: "From the number of contractors who are figuring on painting to be done between now and fall, we look for a big business.

"Every indication is that a large number of new homes are to be built, and there are rumors of several large buildings for wholesale houses and small factories.

Trained Men Great Need Of Business World To-day

Germany and other European countries are far ahead of the United States in the matter of commercial education. This point was brought out in a speech before the annual convention of the National Association of Credit Men at Cincinnati.

"The annual losses by reason of failures in the United States amount now to some $200,000,000," said Mr. Gaehr, "or over $2 per capita. To put it concreately, the national annual loss from bad debts equals one-half the estimate cost of the Panama Canal.

"Professor Munsterberg of Harvard University observes that a great difficulty of our educational system has been that it does not teach a man to find himself, and when he learns his strong and his weak points, his real inclinations toward and qualifications for a pursuit in life, it is usually too late.

"We find the highway of commerce and life marked with sad monuments of men crushed under the wheels of progress who would have made a success in life had they had the proper direction and counsel and had they been taught to fashion their thoughts to fruitful issues, men who could and should have been helped to usefulness.

"A further difficulty is that the vocational demands are not sufficiently fixed and brought to the attention of the younger generations. They know comparatively little of the inner labors, the inner values, and inner difficulties of various professions and callings.

"Then, too, in many cases trivial chance influences decide the choice of a vocation. Young men often drop into a place, rather than deliberately choosing business as a life vocation.

"The need of better trained men, especially commercially, made itself felt several years ago, and as a result a number of universities and colleges of high standing organized schools of commerce, Harvard University ranking its School of Business Administration as one of the graduate schools. Several cities have established high schools of commerce, yet the schoolmaster and the business man are still too far apart.

Auto Sales Gaining Over Last Season

Business Gradually Working to Credit Basis—Men Buy Cars as They Buy Homes.

"So far as we are able to judge from the business done by our clients, automobile sales in Atlanta have been exceptionally good for the period which began January 1," says Joseph N. Moody, of the Auto Credit Sales Company.

"The automobile firms whom we represent as a credit clearing house report an increase over last season.

"Sales probably would be larger yet if we did not check them. Amusing as the idea may seem, we are in a sense philanthropists, for we are saving the people from themselves, in this way: Suppose a man with moderate income tries to buy an auto on time. We investigate carefully. If he has a family of girls, let us say, all living at home, and no income but his salary, we turn him down. If he had a family of boys, all working and able to help purchase a car, all well and good.

"The automobile business is working more and more toward a time basis. A man buys his motor car now just as he would buy his home—on payments. I believe the future will see 90 per cent of the business done in that way."

City Salesmen Take Outing; Truce Kept

Jobbers Agree Not to Scout for Business During Absence of Their Representatives.

City salesmen will be conspicuous by their absence this week. The grocer or dry goods merchant who needs to replenish his stock must telephone to his jobber. The jobbers have agreed not to solicit business for the week, but just to take what comes to them in the natural course of events.

The reason for this strange pact is that the jobbers are on their annual outing at the Isle of Palms, near Charleston, S. C.

In order not to take advantage of their absence, fifty or more jobbers signed a formal agreement of neutrality for the week, and O. T. Camp, president of the Retail Grocers' and Butchers' Association, sent a letter to all members of his organization acquainting them with the state of affairs, and asking that they fill urgent needs only, by using the tele-

SELLING NOTES.

The heavy demand for sport coats this season is helping the dress goods trade over some rough spots. Chinchillas and eponges are used principally in the manufacture of these garments, and makers and wholesalers of these fabrics are doing a good business in them.

The firmness of 39-inch, 80 squares, is one of the features of the print cloth market at the moment. Printers have taken this construction in good quantities, and as a result of curtailed production by the mills the supply has fallen somewhat behind the demand.

A thing that is regarded as a good omen for the future of the men's wear fabrics trade is the promptness with which the manufacturing clothiers are settling up their accounts with the mill agents. In view of losses sustained by the clothiers as a result of the strike earlier in the year this action on their part is said to indicate the thorough soundness of the clothing industry.

Briefly, here are the advantages offered by the RED SEAL Shoe Factory, located right here in Georgia, to the merchants of the South:

2nd. RED SEAL Shoes are the best advertised in the South. Buying a well-advertised line is the next thing to buying a well-established business.

3rd. Style and Values. It would be easy to say right here "they're the best in the world." Any manufacturer can and most of them do modestly claim that about their goods. It doesn't prove anything. We simply invite comparison on style, quality and value between RED SEAL Shoes and any competitive line on the market.

MERCHANTS AND MANUFACTURERS ASSOCIATION

RUSSIA SEEKING U. S. FRIENDSHIP IN NEW TREATY

Renewal of Pact Abrogated by Congress Is Proposed by Diplomats of Czar.

JEWISH QUESTION RISES

Washington Is Silent, but Understanding Is That Bryan Is Willing to Renew Negotiations.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Russia has asked the United States Government to take up the question of a renewal of a treaty of amity and commerce. The treaty of 1832 on that subject was abrogated out of hand by the Congress of the United States.

Secretary of State Bryan said today that the question of renewing negotiations had been discussed with the President, but that there was nothing yet to state in the way of detail.

It has been stated to Russia, however, that the United States is willing to resume negotiations which had been commenced during the administration of the office of Secretary of State by Mr. Knox.

Two Diplomats Suggested.

The President is soon to appoint an Ambassador to the Court of St. Petersburg and the report is that a selection will be made between Charles R. Crane and Frederick Penfield, of Philadelphia and New York.

The administration will have to meet the question of the Jewish passport and the recognition of the Jews as American citizens without regard to race or religion in the new negotiations. It is well known that Russia was anxious to renew negotiations very soon after the affront to the Jewish race under the old treaty or by Russia's construction of the old treaty was wiped out by the joint resolution of Congress which abrogated the treaty of 1832. This action of Congress was unequivocally an act to rebuke Russia for her treatment of the Jews generally and specifically for her continued refusal to recognize passports issued to Jews.

Knox Charges Discrimination.

Secretary of State Knox held that the question of Jews should not enter into the matter at all, and that the real question was that the treaty of 1832 discriminated against American citizens.

It was stated during the last administration that Russia was trying to separate the Jewish passport question from all other questions which would enter into a treaty of amity and commerce, such as is made with all enlightened nations.

The statement was made at the time that the old administration frowned on this none too subtle suggestion of Russia and held that there should be no treaty except one that would do full justice to all Americans—Jews, Irish, English, Germans—no matter what their origin if they were citizens of the United States.

White House Silent.

The State Department at that time knew that if a treaty was sent to the Senate which did not include a solution of the passport question it could not be ratified. It is said that the present administration understands the situation thoroughly and will endeavor to get a treaty which will cover all American interests favorably or none at all.

At the White House no expression of opinion is yet obtainable from any official reflecting the views of the President. There is no question, however, that the Ambassador to be appointed by the President will be fully instructed on the passport question before he goes to St. Petersburg.

SOCIETY WOMAN GOES TO WORK IN BIG STORE

LOS ANGELES, June 28.—Miss Florence Lord, a graduate of Smith College, prominent socially in Chicago, New York and many other Eastern cities, and influential in suffrage clubs, has been working for a week or more in a Los Angeles department store, "to study the sociological conditions" at first hand, in order "to get away with her stunt."

Verses Tell How 'Imperator' Ought to be Pronounced

Great Trouble Found With Largest Liner Is That Everyone Gives Her a Different Name.

NEW YORK, June 28.—There is one fault already found with the Imperator, the giant vessel of the Hamburg-American line, which has just made her maiden voyage as the biggest ship afloat. The trouble is no one knows how to pronounce her name.

Many think they do, and as a result, she is called many things as Amerson Hough, the author, who answers to Huff, How, Hoe, Huge and a few other things.

In reply to inquiries as to the pronunciation the publicity agent says that the German pronunciation which is sanctioned by the modern Latinists makes the "a" in Imperator sound like the "a" in father. The accent is on the next syllable to the last. The poet laureate of the line has been so much puzzled by the variety of pronunciations that he has celebrated them in verse. Here are some of the couplets:

Biggest ship upon the water,
Gorgeous, quetnly Imperator.

If you do not like that style of calling the ship, perhaps the poet laureate remarked, you may take this:

In the finest class we state her,
Peerless, German Imperator.

"And please," the poet said, "do not make peerless "beerless." Then, after running his fingers through his hair, the poet emitted and submitted this:

Vastness!—making senses totter!
Sea Collossus, Imperator!

"To the tune of 'Dixie,'" said the poet, we might get still another line on the pronunciation by singing:

Buckwheat cakes and a little batter
Taste quite good on the Imperator!

Greatest Salmon Run in Puget Sound

Quadrennial Migration of Horde of Fish From Fraser River Begins on Pacific Coast.

SEATTLE, June 28.—Steamship men report the approach of the annual Sockeye salmon run, which this year is the quadrennial big run, the greatest fish migration in the world. The fish now entering the Sound were born four years ago.

When the first white men came to the Northwest the Indians told them of this periodical big run, which had been regular as far back as their tribal legends went. It is the Canadian theory that the fish making up the big run are hatched in Fraser River and grow to maturity off the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Four years ago so many traps were set for the mature fish that few were able to enter the Fraser, and the Canadians have insisted that the big run of 1913 would be a failure. Hence there is international interest in the size of the approaching swarms of salmon.

Anything Shocking Police, Called Bad

Criticism of Chiefs of Present Styles Declared Cause for Women of Country to Act

JOHNSTOWN, PA., June 28.—Attacking immodesty in women's dress, Mrs. H. W. Black, of Riverdale, today stirred the delegates and visitors gathered at the annual convention of the Cambria County Sabbath School Association, in session here.

"Christian women should not wear clothes that cause people to turn and look at them after they pass," declared Mrs. Black.

"The police chiefs in convention at Washington have gone on record demanding a reform in women's dress. When it gets so bad that the police have to ask such a thing, I think it is time Christian women should act."

My Experience With Tacco ---The New Handy Varnish

By EVELYN WREN

HOUSEWIVES realize that a coat of varnish is often more satisfactory than a new piece of furniture. It is a gratification to see the marred chair which belonged to the first parlor suit look like new. The dining table has held many simple breakfasts, many delightful luncheons and many bountiful dinners, and the steaming dishes have left ugly marks upon its once shining surface. To see it emerge from its varnish treatment is like welcoming back an old friend.

Varnishing seems like tiresome, dirty work, and a task suitable for men attired in overalls. I had always associated it with laborers' muscles and rough clothing until one day when I decided my desk at The American office needed some attention.

You do not become wholly unfeminine even if you are a newspaper woman. I was tired of seeing the black spot where the inkwell had overturned. I did not like the white mark where a glass of ice water had stood. All at once I had a hunch that I could do my work better if a marred place did not constantly remind me of a loss of temper and consequent lowering of self-respect and dignity. The refinishing of my desk became an obsession.

I read advertisements. Fortunately I am influenced by them. When I saw an advertisement of a varnish which a woman could apply with a cloth just as a furniture polish is applied, I resolved to investigate the novel preparation.

I went to the sixth floor of the Forsyth Building and entered the offices of The Amber Chemical Company. There I almost breathlessly inquired for Tacco, the water-proof, dust-proof and heat-proof varnish. (To tell the truth, I did not much mind about the heat-proof feature, for most of the heat in our office is caused by irritable nerves, and not by the weather. I am no exception.)

A bottle of Tacco was put into my hand, and I grasped a piece of cheesecloth and went energetically to work. I used just as much muscle as three years of typewriting will produce in a feminine arm. I worked as hard as any furniture polisher ever dreamed of doing in his worst nightmare. I thought I was doing well.

Imagine my chagrin and the expression on my face when the cloth was quietly taken from my vigorous grasp and I was shown that Tacco requires no rubbing. You do not have to use as much energy as I do in ordinary dusting.

Dust the article first. If it is much stained you might well apply a little soap and water. Then apply your Tacco to the dry surface. A piece of cheesecloth is the best medium, and a firm, gentle movement like that of dusting will put the varnish on in the best form. Then let it dry. At the end of five hours view the result and feel proud of your work which is really but a pastime.

Have a Tacco day. Take the breakfast cloth off when husband has departed for the office. Apply Tacco according to the directions on the box, and the dining table will be ready for use at lunch time. Of course if husband is a capitalist and breakfasts at 10:30 instead of at 7 you will probably not have the pleasure of using Tacco yourself. Let us hope that you are one of those domestic little housewives who just "loves" to make your home pretty with your personal effort, and that husband has not outgrown his appreciation of the little touches which you can give just a bit better than any hired help.

The table in the living room has played an important part in the happiness of the household. You could not think of home without that table, and the ones you see in the store windows never look quite as hospitable or nearly so homelike. Here Jack has read his paper and graciously explained politics to your bewildered self as you stitched on little frocks which were to go to Kindergarten with Little Girl. It has held Big Brother's school books and his drawing instruments. (Said drawing instruments are responsible for the big unsightly gash at the end.) All in all, you feel as you begin to apply Tacco with a gentle hand that this table has many dear memories. You would like to see it as fresh and pretty as it was when you and Jack picked it out. It seemed the finest table in the world on that day. How you blushed, and how manly Jack looked as he quietly drew the money from his pocket and ordered it sent to your new home.

When the table is finished the big chair will seem more worn and bruised than ever. You never realized how shabby the living room was getting. It seems but a day or two ago that you decided to surprise Jack with that comfortable chair on his birthday. You saved from your housekeeping money bit by bit and grew anxious toward the last for fear the fund would not be large enough. You grow tender toward that big chair as you remember Jack's eyes when he first espied it and then quickly gazed at you. The lovelight was there, even if you had been married a half-dozen years, and had but recently lost many hours of sleep with Little Girl's teething episode.

GET THE WORD THEN GET THE MEANING
TRADE MARK
TACCO
BRAND
A HINT TO THE WISE

The tender feelings do not interfere with the application of Tacco. Let retrospection have its sway, and when you have had the pleasure of many happy memories look at the result. The table will shine like new. The gash made by Big Brother's steel ruler will not show. Tacco has acted as a filler and made the surface smooth as glass. Dusting will be a light task now. You may even scrub the table, for it has a water-proof finish now. The chair will bring the lovelight to Jack's eyes anew, for he, too, will remember the day your love made the gift.

If you are a housekeeper, you will welcome Tacco as a means of making your home brighter and more cheerful. You need never wish for an opportunity to send shabby furniture away to be refinished. You can buy a bottle of Tacco for only 50 cents. The economy of it will be demonstrated by its first use, and you will be ready to purchase a quart, half-gallon or gallon can before many days.

When I like anything I never take my liking for granted. I analyze my appreciation. Here is my analysis of my fondness for Tacco:

It requires absolutely no rubbing.
It dries in from two to five hours.
It is water-proof as well as dust and heat proof.
It is economical in time and money.

Well, my desk at The American office has had its Tacco treatment. Come in to see it, if you like. Then investigate Tacco as I did, if you like, or better still, benefit by my written experience and buy a bottle or can at any good drug or hardware store.

Do you live out of town? If you do, you would like to hear about a splendid proposition for out-of-town dealers. Write to-day for information and do not risk the loss of the agency in your town. Write and see what The Amber Chemical Company has to tell you.

BOY CONFESSES KILLING MOTHER AND BROTHER

Berkley Fleming, 19, of Ironton, Mo., Appears Unconcerned When Accused of Crime.

IRONTON, O., June 28.—Berkley Fleming, 19, has confessed to shooting his half-brother, Culbertson Stewart, almost three years ago, and his mother a few days ago.

The police took the boy to his grandfather's farm, where he pointed out the grave of his mother and stood by unconcerned as the body was removed. He was not impressed when the skeleton of Culbertson was exhumed.

Believe Boy Degenerate.

Chief of Police King, Dr. Wells and the Rev. W. H. Hampton, who have suspected for several months that Berkeley killed Culbertson, believe Berkeley a degenerate of the worst type.

Their theory is that he killed Culbertson because of jealousy and that he had worked out his carefull arranged plan of concealing the crime before he shot his brother.

The murder of the mother, they believe, was a part of his plan to keep her from exposing his former murder. A bullet hole in the back of the head of each victim and the mother's bruised face, say these men, destroy any accident theory.

Mother Is Suspicious.

Culbertson Stewart disappeared July 14, 1910, Berkeley's 17th birthday. The other brother afterward wrote letters to his mother purporting to come from Culbertson. She became suspicious, and he decided to kill her also.

After the crime he was found at a hotel waiting for dinner. He had gone there in a buggy to take his sweetheart riding. He made no objection to going to the police station, where he confessed.

Aged Pair Perform Own Marriage Rites

Bridegroom, 75 Years Old, Declares It Was His Sixth Experience With Such Ceremony

BEAVER, PA., June 28.—Dr. Akkelon Mercer, seventy-five years old, of Beaver Falls, and Sarah L. Calgrove, sixty-five years old, of Wetzel county, West Virginia, performed their own marriage ceremony here.

When the pair obtained their license they informed Hamilton, the clerk, that all they needed was a license, as they could dispense with all bridal attendants and the minister.

Doctor Mercer and Mrs. Calgrove to Hamilton issued the license for marry themselves in the presence of witnesses. Doctor Mercer stated that he had been married five times, and in each instance he and his bride had performed their own ceremony, always in the presence of two witnesses.

Defaulter Hired to Audit Bank's Books

Man Who Wrecked Financial Institution, Will Go to Work to Untangle Its Affairs.

CARUTHERSVILLE, MO., June 28.—A. B. Tindle, cashier of the Pemiscot County Bank, which closed its doors following the discovery that he was short in his accounts, will be retained by the reorganizers to aid in straightening out its affairs.

"There is no desire on the part of the directors of the bank to prosecute Tindle," one of the directors said to-day. "He has turned over all his property and has been punished enough by his sudden fall from a position of trust and respect in the community."

Tindle's personal fortune is estimated at $200,000.

The action of the directors of the bank in retaining him in the task of straightening out the confusion caused by his shortage meets with the approval of a majority of the citizens it is said.

Prehistoric Flying Reptile Discovered

Skeleton of Pterodactyl Monster Is Found in Wyoming Fossil Bed by Geologists.

CASPER, WYO., June 28.—Dr. F. Salathe and D. VanWagener, geologists, who are prospecting this vicinity for oil, reported the discovery eighteen miles from Casper of a fossil bed, conspicuously visible in which is the almost perfect silicified skeleton of a flying reptile, probably of the pterodactyll, which measures at least sixty feet in length. The creature in life must have had a wing expansion of eighty feet.

Millionaire Gives Free Circus to Pay Pledge of Boyhood

Packer Leaves Home as Child to Make Fortune After Missing Show for Lack of Money.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Edward Tilden, millionaire packer, produced a circus to-day for "all the children within walking or riding distance" of the Tilden estate at Lake Delavan, Wis.

The huge entertainment cost $10,000 and had been planned for 25 years by the host. It grew out of a painfully vivid recollection of a circus that had come to town and gone away again without his getting inside the tent. It was fresh in his mind when he left Delavan a quarter of a century ago to come to Chicago to "make his fortune." At the train Edward Tilden told friends:

"I'm coming back some day and buy the town and give everyone a good time, and let every boy here see a circus."

A special carload of entertainers left Chicago for Delavan this morning. A dog and pony show and a band of 40 pieces left last night. The children also saw an aeroplane flight, had automobile rides and a big dinner.

Child Offered Home For Looking Pleasant

Smiling Face of Orphan in Photographed Group Wins Hearts of Couple Who Lost Baby.

POCAHONTAS, ILL., June 28.—In Pocahontas there may be a home for a little girl because she "looked pleasant" when a photographer took the picture of a group of children waiting for an automobile ride. Children in the orphan asylums on that day were given an outing by the Automobile Club of St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Miles, of Pocahontas, adopted a little girl several years ago. She died. Something about two of the little girls whose pictures appeared in the newspaper reminded them of the little one who died, and they have written for information about the children.

INDIAN GIRLS WILL TRY SKILL AT HAT-MAKING

CARLISLE, PA., June 28.—Indian art will now show itself in hats. At least that is the natural conclusion drawn from an announcement made by the Carlisle Indian School that a course in millinery has been established for aborigines.

Indian art, the absolutely original gift of America to the world, has expressed itself in pottery, in rugs, in a dozen other ways, but it has never before entered the field of headgear, and it is expected that this new innovation may yet cast the chic French models into the deep shadows.

SCHOOL ROLLS FAIL TO KEEP UP WITH BIRTHS

Wide Discrepancy Is Shown in Number of Pupils and Increase of Children.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Chapters on "Roman Catholic Schools," "Typical Health Teaching Agencies of the United States," and "Parent-Teacher Associations" are special features of the annual report of the United States Commissioner of Education, just issued.

In addition to these the report contains substantial chapters on the following subjects: General survey of the year; educational legislation during 1912; higher education; city school systems; rural education; recent movements in negro education; a review of agricultural education; progress in vocational education; library development; education in Alaska, the Philippines, Hawaii, Porto Rico, and other dependencies; Indian education; educational activities in Canada, Latin-America, Great Britain, Northern Europe, France and Switzerland, Germany, Southern Europe and Russia; together with a general view of conditions in Asia, Africa, Australia and New Zealand.

In his introduction to the report the commissioner discusses the wide discrepancy between the increase in the number of children of school age and the actual enrollment; an apparent reduction in teachers' salaries during the year; the remarkable increase in high schools and high school enrollment throughout the country; the decrease in professional schools, due to the enforcement of higher standards, lack of preparation of teachers, which Dr. Claxton characterizes as "one of the greatest evils of our school systems;" the shortness of the school term in the United States as compared with other civilized nations; and the abnormally large percentage of illiteracy in the rural districts.

Woman Jury Awards Verdict in Oregon

Plaintiff Is Awarded Damages of $5 in Legal Fight Over Cut of a Skirt.

ST. JOHNS, ORE., June 28.—The first regularly called woman's jury to serve in the State of Oregon tried a case in Justice Williams' court here and, after twenty minutes' conference, returned a verdict of $5 for the plaintiff. The jury was drawn in the regular form from a list of fifty women who have been chosen as liable for jury service during the year.

The case was one involving the price of a skirt. The plaintiff averred that a skirt which she had made by a local seamstress did not fit. She brought suit to recover the price of the skirt.

The fair jurors fixed the damages at $5.

FINDS COIN BEHIND PANEL; DIVIDES WITH FRIENDS

SHARON, PA., June 28.—As six carpenters were tearing down a house near the Leesburg coal mines, one found a false panel in a wall of the dining room from which he took a powder can containing $1,500.

The finder kept $500 as his share and each of his fellow workmen was given $200.

USE OF SCHOOLS AS AID TO LOVE MAKING URGED

Peace Executive Would Make Social Centers of Houses of Instruction in Big Cities.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Arthur Deering Call, executive director of the American Peace Society, has undertaken to win for the young men and women of America the right to make love to each other.

Said he:

"One of the nation's greatest needs is the promotion of acquaintance between young men and women, the fathers and mothers of the next generation, under free, attractive and wholesome conditions. We need more wholesome conditions for 'courting.'

"I can think of nothing so important to this generation as the lifemates of its various individuals, or so vital to the next as its fathers and mothers and home life generally.

Would Use Schools.

"I propose a wider use of school buildings for social and neighborhood purposes. I do not want love-making a part of the school curriculum, but I think that the same lips that recite the multiplication table or decline a noun in the class room in the garish light of day might just as well whisper tender nothings while the moon peeks in at the window later on.

"For a great majority of our young people in the cities the dance halls provide the only regular amusement they can afford, where any man who has the price can step up to any young woman and ask her to dance. No wonder such places become recruiting places for vice.

No Instruction Needed.

"Why not let the school be a cross between the church and the saloon? Every school should be arranged so that in the evening the young folks could gather there for games, folk-dancing classes, music, athletics, sewing classes and moving pictures.

"All the young folks want is opportunity to meet under proper environment. We don't have to teach the men how to make love, or young women how to listen to them, but we owe it to the race not to hinder or pervert their natural tendencies by improper environment."

NEGRO GIVES FOUR PENNIES FOR FIVE DOLLAR BILLS

INDIANAPOLIS, June 28.—While Miss Stella Koch was busy tending a stand on the city market last night, a well dressed negro asked if she could give him some paper money for gold.

"I have four $5 gold pieces," he explained, "and I would like to get some paper money in exchange for them, as I do not like to carry gold in my pocket."

The girl said she could accommodate him, and going to the cash drawer produced four $5 bills. She handed the bills to the negro, and he dropped four bright, shining pennies into her oustretched hand.

TARIFF CUTS IN SENATE TO AID NATION'S DINING ROOM

Many House Figures Lowered and Free List Increased — Despite Cuts, Bill Is Expected to Produce $5,000,000 More Cash.

Atlanta's Need for Help to Reduce the High Cost of Living Is Shown by Figures Indicating Soaring Price of Foodstuffs.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The revised tariff bill laid before the Senate Democratic caucus by Mr. Simmons, chairman of the finance committee, carries important reductions in the Underwood tariff bill rates on iron, steel and other metal products. It added cattle, wheat, pig iron, Angora wool, and many other articles to the free list, and increased rates on many classes of cotton goods and some silk products.

President Wilson's desires as to free sugar in 1916 and free wool at once, prevailed in the redraft of the bill. To the list of "market basket" reductions the Underwood bill contained, the Senate committee added many important items.

In the general level of its rates the "Simmons bill" represents a heavier cut from the present Payne-Aldrich rates than the House bill.

Senator Simmons believes the caucus will discuss the bill not longer than a week.

Simmons' Statement.

The bill probably will come to a vote in the Senate by September 1.

In a statement Chairman Simmons said:

"The revenues of the Government will be increased approximately $5,000,000, laid in hand with a reduction of the taxation following the reductions already made in the House bill. These increases in revenues will be made up by a tariff on bananas and restoration of the full internal duty of $1.10 per gallon on brandies used in fortifying wines.

"With regard to the sugar schedule no change was made from the provision of the Underwood bill except to strike out 'sugars tinctured and colored,' for fear that ultramarine blue used in bleaching sugar might be regarded as colored matter and thereby refined sugar become subject to a duty of 2 cents a pound.

"With regard to cigars and other tobacco products from the Philippines the provision of the Underwood bill permitting cigars with 80 per cent of tobacco the product of the Philippine Islands and 20 per cent the produce of foreign countries to be admitted into the United States free of duty, was stricken out of the bill. Only cigars and tobacco products exclusively of Philippine tobacco to be admitted free of duty into the United States."

The Liquor Schedule.

Of the amendment to the liquor schedule, the statement said:

"An additional section is added repealing so much of the act approved October 1, 1890, and acts amendatory thereto, so far as they relate to the use free of tax of spirits for the fortification of sweet wines, and providing that hereafter all wine spirits, grape brandy and alcohol so used shall be subject to the same tax as in other cases.

"It is intimated that this tax will result in an increase of revenue of approximately $7,000,000 per annum.

"The Senate Finance Committee followed the House and treated the cotton yarns as the House bill treated cotton cloth," the statement continued, "by adding a duty of two and one-half per cent upon cotton cloth when combed, bleached, dyed, mercerized or colored. This is the most important change that the Senate committee made in the House cotton schedule."

Retaliatory Clause.

The amendment permitting the President to proclaim special rates when foreign nations discriminate against the United States provides that he shall exercise this authority on certain articles, as follows:

"Fish, fresh, smoked and dried, pickled or otherwise prepared, 1 cent per pound; on wheat, 10 cents per bushel; on wheat flour, 45 cents per barrel; on coffee, 3 cents per pound; on tea, 10 cents per pound,

"On the following articles a duty

Pigeons to Keep City Sane, Says Expert

Dr. B. Chester King, of Atlanta, Tells Chicago That Its Safety Rests With Doves.

CHICAGO, June 28.—If Chicagoans are to be saved from the mad house at all it will be by the pigeons.

Dr. B. Chester King, an Atlanta alienist, finds hope for the city's sanity in the pigeons that flutter about the Loop all day.

"Several times each day," says the doctor, "the man who works in an office building should go to a window with the expectation of seeing one or more doves. Should he spy them, I suggest that he forget all else. There is something in just the name 'dove' that has a soothing effect upon the nerves."

Pastor Gets Town To Give Day to Ball

All Girard Suspends Business to Attend Games, but There Is No Playing on Sunday.

GIRARD, KANS., June 28.—Girard has found a happy solution to the problem of Sunday baseball by setting out one day in the week when everybody suspends business operations and goes to the ball game.

This arrangement came through the suggestion of the Rev. M. L. Morrison, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, after considerable wrangling early in the summer between people who wanted ball games on Sunday and those who did not. The new arrangement was tried yesterday for the second time. Everyone is pleased and the blue laws are enforced.

All men can not have brilliant minds, but almost every one can cultivate continuity of purpose and develop a large capacity for work.

REBELS STORM MEXICAN TOWN; MASSACRE 1,000

Federal Soldiers and Civilians Shot Down in Cold Blood at Durango.

CAPTIVES PUT TO TORTURE

Atrocities Practiced to Force Citizens to Reveal Hiding Places of Wealth.

MEXICO CITY, June 28.—One thousand soldiers and civilians were slaughtered by rebels when the city of Durango, capital of the State of the same name, fell into the insurgents' hands, according to word received here to-day from that city. Many of the victims were members of prominent families.

Men and women were tortured to death when they did not produce wealth at the bidding of the rebels.

Fighting between federals and insurgents is going on at Uruapam in the State of Michocan. Cuquio, in the State of Jalisco, was taken by rebels yesterday and the garrison put to the sword.

Rebels Advance on Juarez; Fight Nearer.

EL PASO, TEXAS, June 28.—Pancho Villa, Mexican rebel leader, who has announced his intention of taking Juarez and executing General Salazar, commander of the garrison, in the bull ring, established outposts within three miles of the town.

Ortega, who has 500 men, may cooperate with Villa. If Juarez falls, it will remove the most important Mexican port of entry on the United States border from Huerta and may result in the downfall of the Huerta government.

Prince of Wales Spends $1.25 a Week

Writes Home for More Money, but Mother Considers That This Amount Is Ample.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—The amount allotted to the Prince of Wales for pocket money has just become known. Every Saturday he receives just $1.25, which he terms his "old age pension." He is occasionally a trifle extravagant and mortgages his money in advance.

Toward the end of the last term at Oxford he was asked by a friend to join a party to visit the theater.

The Prince's reply was, "Sorry, old man, but I am clean broke."

"Why don't you write home for some more?" asked the friend.

"I did," replied the Prince, "but mother said I was too extravagant."

Mrs. Marshall Finds $2,000 House at Last

Wife of Vice President Refuses to Pay More, Wishing to Live Within Husband's Salary.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The long house hunt of Mrs. Marshall, wife of the Vice President, is probably over, as she has found a suitable house on Columbia Road, Northwest. Her hunt was prolonged owing to the fact that she set $2,000 yearly as the price they would pay. The Marshalls have said they must live within their salary, and Washington society is eagerly watching to see how they will manage with the many social and financial demands upon them. Mrs. Marshall wanted to go to the country, but feared it would be too far for the Congressional wives to visit.

Congress to Force White Slave Inquiry

Reasons for Postponement of Diggs-Caminetta Case by Department of Justice To Be Bared.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Investigation of the postponement of the Diggs-Caminetti white slave case by the Department of Justice must go on, is the edict of the Congressmen behind the resolutions.

They are determined to bare the entire correspondence between McNab and the Attorney General and uncover the influences behind the white slave and Western Fuel cases.

If the House for any reason fails to take up the investigation Tuesday, the Senate is determined to dig to the bottom of the matter itself. No "pull" or influence can block this inquiry, it is declared.

King George Finds Platonic Romance With Fair Countess

Monarch Pays Marked Attention to Wife of Lord Mar While Queen Mary Is Absent.

Special Cable to The Sunday American.

LONDON, June 28—Every one thought King George so extremely domestic and conventional that it has come as rather a shock to people outside court circles to find him paying marked attention to the beautiful Countess of Mar and Killie.

The lovely countess, who is in her prime and a favorite of King Edward, is to be found wherever the King is.

Lord Mar goes about very little, but it was noticed that he and his wife were included in the royal house party at Windsor Castle for the Ascot races.

When Queen Mary was absent from the races, Lady Mar was always at the King's side, but when Her Majesty was present Lady Mar mixed with the general crowd in the royal inclosure.

Lady Mar is very sympathetic and attractive. The inner circle at the court is intensely amused at this mild platonic flirtation.

Mrs. Astor Bars Too Fervid Trotting

Society Youth Comes to Grief When He Disregards Rules of Conduct Fixed by Hostess.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—Mrs. John Astor is becoming known in social circles as a hostess whose rules of conduct must be obeyed by her guests. One young man who, until recently, doubted this, is now lamenting his mistake. Mrs. Astor permits the "tango" and "turkey trot" at her dances, but insists that they be danced in moderation. When this guest so far forgot himself as to verge on to the vulgar, he was quickly shown the door.

Mrs. Astor's example is not followed by all of London's hostesses. At the entertainments of a certain duchess the ragtime is accompanied by a great deal of roughness, being usually danced with the lights out.

Early Cold Injures Crops of Michigan

Wheat Promises but Half a Crop, Hay One-third, and Fruit Outlook Is Poor.

LANSING, MICH., June 28.—Michigan Agricultural College field men and district supervisors report crop prospects of the State the poorest in years, due to the early cold, wet season and late frosts, followed by the present hot, dry weather.

Wheat promises little better than half a crop, hay one-third, oats one-half. Early potatoes have been badly frosted in sections and will not produce over one-quarter crop without rain.

Fruit is equally poor. Plums and grapes are expected to be about 30 or 40 per cent of a crop.

Baroness Will Wed Man Hurled in Auto

St. Louis Tourist Unexpectedly Finds Self in Noblewoman's Car and Romance Ripens.

NEW YORK, June 28.—James Hurley, a railroad man of St. Louis, while automobiling in Paris a year ago, ran his car into that of the Baroness Barbara Ursula Kalinowski of Welsbaden and was hurled into the tonneau, where the Baroness was sitting. He gave her his card and later offered her his heart.

Arriving here by the Hamburg-American liner Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, she left for St. Louis, where the Baroness will be married to Mr. Hurley.

Gatun Gates Stand Their Supreme Test

Atlantic Waters Reach Sea Level and Locks Must Hold Against Full Pressure of Water.

PANAMA, June 28.—The Atlantic waters which have been allowed to run slowly against the lower gates at Gatun are at sea level to-day. The large gates are being put to the actual test of full pressure for the first time.

The engineers are watching the rise of the water with interest, and they report that the gates are watertight. The water is at the 50-foot stage.

PRICES TO STAY AS THEY ARE NOW, SAYS SULZBERGER

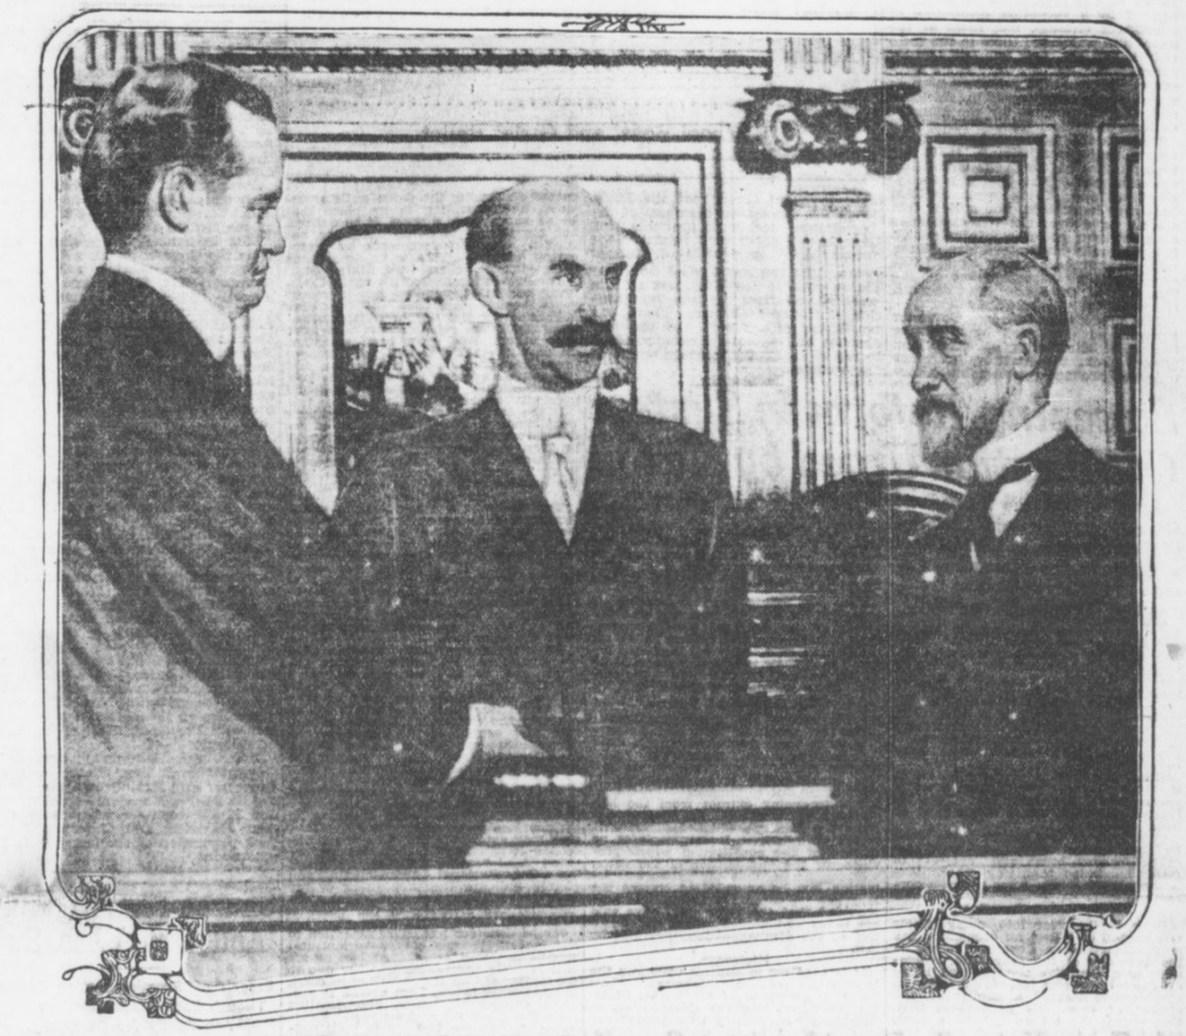
NEW YORK, June 28.—"Meat will never be any cheaper in the United States than it is now," declared G. F. Sulzberger, of Sulzberger & Schwarzchild, on his arrival from Europe on the Mauretania. "The only effect the change in the tariff will cause will be to keep prices where they are. Without this revision in the tariff, there would undoubtedly have been a big jump in prices."

SLATON'S BILLS READY TO PASS

Inaugurated With Utmost Simplicity

Legislature Wants to Aid Governor

Governor John M. Slaton, taking the oath of office at the Capitol yesterday. On the left is the new Executive, while Randolph Anderson, of Savannah, President of the Senate, is shown between him and Governor Brown, who retired to private life as soon as the oath was administered.



Inaugural Address of Slaton Urges New Taxation System

SWEEPING legislative reforms are urged by Governor John M. Slaton in his inaugural address and message delivered to the Legislature Saturday. Following are the ten most important reforms he urges:

1. An occupation tax on corporations, with the maximum $200 per annum on corporations of more than $1,000,000 capital; the tax on smaller corporations to be adjusted accordingly.

2. Changes in the registration laws. He says: "The present registration law should be so amended that when a voter has once proven his qualification by registering and being enrolled, he shall remain a registered voter unless disqualified for some cause due himself."

3. The need for good roads, with a highway commissioner or a commission. The message says: "An intelligent highway commission, or commissioner, clothed with the proper authority, could be the means of untold benefit in suggesting the proper methods of building roads."

4. A declaration that the sale of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the State's property, should not be considered. The problem of its disposal should be considered by a commission, with directions to report its recommendations and its reasons therefor.

5. The passage of a law abolishing the defendant's statement in criminal trials, and providing in its place that he be sworn as a witness, if he so desires.

6. The Legislature is urged to consider legislation making the carrying of concealed weapons a felony, subject to reduction to a misdemeanor by either judge or jury.

7. Consideration of proper and remedial banking laws. "The banks of a State perform public functions, and as such are properly subjected to governmental supervision," says the message.

8. The creation of a new office, to be known as State Auditor.

9. Sweeping reforms in the tax system of Georgia. The system in vogue in this State is wrong, and the equalization of taxation, either through enforcement of present laws or new correctives, is urged.

10. That the Legislature investigate the decline of the agricultural schools and take steps to apply the proper remedies.

New Executive Plans To Be at Work Early Each Day and to Devote Entire Time to State.

Inducted into office with a simplicity that harked back to the days of Thomas Jefferson, John Marshall Slaton will enter the Capitol Monday morning for the first time as Governor of the State of Georgia. Eager to begin work for the State and the people, Governor Slaton plans to be at his office at an unusually early hour, and will plunge into the affairs of the State of Georgia with the energy and ability that has made him a leading figure among the attorneys and citizens of Atlanta.

Backed by his dominant personality and with the support of practically every member of the Senate and the House of Representatives, Governor Slaton's administration promises to be as harmonious and productive of good as that of any Governor the State has ever had.

Gossip heard among the legislators gathered for the sessions of the General Assembly indicate that every reform urged by the new Governor will meet with the approval of the majority of the members of both Houses.

Bills Are Now Ready.

It is regarded as significant, and indicative of the success of Governor Slaton's administration, that many bills embodying the recommendations and suggestions made in his inaugural address have been prepared and will be introduced and action taken on them during the present session. Several already have been introduced, both in the House and Senate.

It is generally understood, though it has never been officially confirmed, that Governor Slaton will send no more messages to the General Assembly during the present session unless some unforeseen emergency should arise that demands immediate attention. He has given his views on the sort of legislation that is needed, and has often expressed his complete confidence in the ability and the willingness of the Legislature to do what was right and necessary without any prompting from the head of the State Government.

The respect and confidence that Governor Slaton feels in ex-Governor Brown is shown by the fact that almost without exception the men who served the latter during the four years of his incumbency will also hold office during the Slaton administration.

Jesse G. Perry, who has served Governor Brown as private secretary, will fill the same position under Governor Slaton.

Ulm Is Executive Secretary.

Hardy Ulm is also retained as Executive Secretary. The knowledge these men have, gained through their connection with Governor Brown, is expected to be one of inestimable benefit to Governor Slaton during the first few weeks of his incumbency.

That Governor Slaton intends to give all his time to the business of the State and serve them to the utmost of his ability is shown by the fact that though he owns a handsome home on Peachtree Street, and a country home on Peachtree Road, he has moved his family into the ancient executive mansion on Peachtree Street, and will occupy the building as his home during his term as Governor. He took possession of the mansion Saturday afternoon within an hour after his inauguration as Governor of the State.

Riverside Cadets Expect Hundreds of Visitors to See Sports on the Chattahoochee.

GAINESVILLE, June 28.—The first regatta of the Riverside Summer Naval School and Camp, which was opened here Thursday, will be held on July 4. Hundreds of visitors are expected to be on hand to see the sports.

The naval school and camp has a large enrollment this year, students being registered from practically all of the Southern States, including Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana, Tennessee, South Carolina, North Carolina, North Carolina, Kentucky and Virgina.

Captain Patterson, of the Culver Ind., Military Academy, will have charge of the naval and swimming departments this year, while Professor R. E. Brooks, superintendent of the Dunlin public schools, will assist in the academic department.

Georgia Bankers to Urge Laws at This Legislative Session

One Provides Larger Salary for State Treasurer—Banking Department Considered.

The Georgia Bankers' Association, of which L. P. Hillyer, of Macon, is president and Haynes McFadden, of Atlanta, secretary, will urge new laws in the present session of the Legislature, according to announcement Saturday.

The association now has under advisement several bills including one for a constitutional amendment providing larger appropriations for the State Treasurer, who supervises $6,000,000, it is said, on a salary fund of $3,100.

The amendment, though, is being considered only by the association thus far. It has not been acted on. Haynes McFadden Saturday said a bill creating a banking department probably would not come up at this session of the Legislature.

Governor Tells Legislators That Reckless Passing of Appropriation Bills Must Stop.

capitol, where Governor Slaton and ex-Governor Brown greeted their friends., Governor and Mrs. Slaton and Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mrs. Slaton's mother, were entertained at luncheon by ex-Governor and Mrs. Brown, at the executive mansion. After the luncheon Mr. Brown turned over to Governor Slaton the mansion that had been his home, and with Mrs. Brown boarded a train for Marietta.

Marietta Greets Brown.

They were given a tremendous reception by the citizens of the Cobb County capitol. Practically two-thirds of the population of Marietta, headed by a reception committee of prominent citizens, met them at the depot and welcomed them to the town that had been their home for many years before Mr. Brown became Governor. Mr. and Mrs. Brown plan to spend the coming week in Marietta, and will then retire for the summer to their Cherokee County farm.

Though the inauguration of Governor Slaton was simple, it is not thought that his home life will follow the same plan. Mrs. Slaton is recognized as one of the most brilliant hostesses in Atlanta, and society folk are all agog over the rumored plans of a brilliant social campaign which it is generally understood Mrs. Slaton will inaugurate as soon as she has completed her establishment as the first lady of the State. An inaugural reception will be held July 2.

The precedent set by Governor Brown and continued by Governor Slaton of eliminating all pomp and display from the inaugural ceremonies has aroused considerable favorable comment throughout the State, especially among the members of the Legislature, and it is probable that Georgia will never see a return to the "brass band" inaugurals of former years. The inauguration of Governor Slaton was, if anything, just a little more simple than the last inauguration of Governor Brown. There was no display of any sort, and the very absence of elaborate ceremony added to the strength and impressiveness of the occasion.

Sweeping Reform in System Of Taxation Urged by Slaton

Laws to aid the finances of Georgia and sweeping reforms of the tax system of the State are stressed in the inaugural message of Governor Slaton.

In part, Governor Slaton said:

Our system is wrong. The Legislature can appropriate what it pleases, and the tax rate remains the same. The Legislator has made himself a favorite with his constituency by voting for every popular appropriations and nothing suffers but the State's credit.

Unless some check be made, an increase of revenue will be of no avail in preventing the financial embarrassment of the State. Under the enthusiasm of the moment one appropriation bill may exhaust it.

More than four-fifths of the States of the Union derive revenue from what is known as an inheritance tax. I am informed that this tax is the subject of least complaint.

This form of tax has been approved by the highest authorities and is one of the easiest borne and subject to fewer hardships than any other. The inheritance tax is to some extent a corrective.

Corporation Taxation.

Prior to the year 1905, many efforts were made to collect an occupation tax from corporations. Governor Terrell, in his message of the year 1905, recommended a tentative privilege tax based on capital stock of $100,000 per year on corporations having a capital of $1,000,000, or over. He anticipated from this source more than $100,000 a year, and thought that such sum could reasonably be expected without a hardship. The State, however, has not received one-half this sum, and during the year 1913 the estimated revenue from this source is $48,000.

I recommend that the maximum occupation tax on corporations having $1,000,000 capital and over be $200 per annum, and the tax on corporations of less capital be adjusted accordingly.

Equalization of taxes, either through the enforcement of present laws, or new correctives, so that each may bear his proportionate burden, would not mean the increase of taxes upon any one now performing his duty, but would rather mean the lightening of his unfair portion of the load. I commend this subject to your attention.

Bonded Debt To Be Refunded.

An additional reason for establishing and maintaining the State's finances on a sound basis is the necessity of making provision for more than one-half of the entire bonded debt of the State, maturing in 1915. This is an imperative duty resting on this Legislature.

No sinking fund was provided by law to retire the bonds aggregating $3,679,000 which are due in 1915. The entire State's debt is $6,452,500, which does not include the obligations to the University, amounting to $291,500, and the landscrip fund of $90,000.

All the debt of $6,452,500 is provided for, or will be provided for, by the sinking fund required to be raised annually until the debt is paid off, except the $3,679,000 which falls due in May and July, 1915.

If refunding bonds were issued in 1915, making the first $100,000 fall due in 1935, then sinking fund could be made to run continuously and retire each year, until paid, $100,000 of this series of 1915 refunding bonds.

This plan would seem advisable in order to relieve the treasury and the people of the increased burden at this time, unless financial conditions at the time of the sale of the bonds should demand that their redemption begin at an earlier period in order to effectuate their more satisfactory disposition.

Registration of Voters.

We believe the present registration law should be so amended that when a voter has once proven his qualification by registering and being enrolled, he shall remain a registered voter unless disqualified for cause due to himself.

The foregoing extract from the last platform upon which I was elected, expresses a principle which deserves universal acceptance. It contemplates no change of the constitution which provides for the qualification of the voter. I recommend that the present registration law be amended to correct the injustice indicated. It would always be provided that the voter must have paid his taxes and not subjected himself to any of the disqualifications provided by law.

Highways.

It is needless to impress upon you the importance of our highways. Their value is an asset of the entire State. An intelligent Highway Commission, or Commissioner, clothed with proper authority, could be the means of untold benefit in suggesting proper methods of building the road adapted to the locality, or in solving the problems of engineering which might arise in various sections.

I call your attention to the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the lease of which terminates in 1919. No one, I apprehend, would or should consider its sale, but the problem of its disposition should be considered by a commission with directions to report its recommendations and its reasons therefor.

To delay this matter will mean to put the State at the inexcusable disadvantage of unpreparedness when the time arrives for imperative action.

The Criminal Code.

One of the fundamental purposes of government is the protection of life and safety of the citizen. If the rules of evidence are so shaped as to prevent the discovery of the truth, and if the State is deprived of the means of sifting the facts, the judges and juries are not to be blamed if crimes are allowed to go unpunished.

It is an anomaly that a defendant should take the stand, make any statement that he sees fit, or that his shrewd lawyer has prepared, and being immune from cross-examination, demand that the judge shall charge the jury that they may accept his unsworn statement in preference to all the evidence in the case.

I, therefore, recommend that a law be passed abolishing the defendant's statement, and providing in its place that he be sworn as a witness, if he desires, but his failure to be so sworn be not subject to adverse comment by prosecuting counsel. This is in accordance with current Federal and State law.

The legislation in Georgia against carrying concealed weapons has in recent years been conspicuous. It has been suggested by the law of self-preservation. Daily we read of men who have shot others, and have been acquitted on the old statement that the deceased threw his hand on his hip pocket, and the defendant shot in fear of his life. When searched, the dead man was found generally unarmed.

If the carrying of concealed weapons were made a felony, subject to be reduced to a misdemeanor by either judge or jury, the deterrent effect of such a law would be the saving of many a life. I earnestly recommend to you the consideration of this question.

Banking Laws.

The banks of a State perform public functions, and as such are properly subjected to governmental supervision. The bankers of the State, with the desire of maintaining a high standard of responsibility and of affording guarantees against improvident management, that imperil the money of the people, recommend legislation looking to the accomplishment of these objects. I commend this subject as one worthy of your serious consideration.

My predecessors have recommended the creation of the position of State Auditor, and in this recommendation I heartily concur. His services could be utilized in checking the cost of new buildings for which requests may be made by the various institutions. Those who have served on the appropriations committees are aware of the inadequate facilities of the State in arriving at the amount of the necessary expenditures.

The Constitution.

The Constitution is the expression of the supreme law of the land. It can only be changed by the people speaking in their sovereign capacity. In order that they may vote intelligently on any proposition it is essential that they understand it. I recommend that in proposing Constitutional amendments, you plainly indicate the proposition to the voter in such language that he may understand the meaning of the question submitted.

My predecessor has called attention to the fact that some of the agricultural schools are well attended, while others receive little patronage, whether due to the matter of location or lack of interest, or from what cause, I am unable to say. Each obtains the same appropriation from the State for maintenance. I recommend that you investigate their condition, and apply the proper remedies.

Slaton is Inaugurated With Simple Ceremonies.

With ceremonies that gained in strength and impressiveness through their very simplicity, John Marshall Slaton to-day became Governor of the State of Georgia, succeeding Joseph M. Brown. The oath of office was administered by Judge William H. Fish, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, at 12:02 o'clock.

Governor Slaton was inducted into office in the presence of a brilliant assemblage of Georgia men and women, including his own and the retiring Governor's family and intimate friends, members of the State Legislature and prominent jurists. For the first time in the history of the State the United States was represented by Judge William T. Newman and Judge Don A. Pardee, of the Federal Court. They occupied seats directly in front of the Speaker's stand.

Galleries and the floor of the House were filled with spectators. By 10 o'clock virtually every seat in the visitors' gallery was taken and room had been provided for a large number on the floor. In the corridors another crowd, unable to gain entrance into the hall, waited patiently for a glimpse of the new executive.

Joint Session Held.

Neither the House nor the Senate transacted any business, convening at 11 o'clock and immediately taking a recess. At 11:45 o'clock both Houses again convened, and the Senate at once adjourned and marched to the House, where members took seats in a semi-circle about the speaker's stand. In the front row of seats about the speakers' stand sat the intimate friends and relatives of Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton. Twenty-eight chairs had been reserved for members of Governor Slaton's family and eight for the family and friends of Governor Brown.

In Governor Slaton's party were Major William F. Slaton, father of the Governor; Mrs. John M. Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Slaton, Justice and Mrs. S. C. Atkinson, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Waldo, Mrs. W. H. Blanchard, Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant, John M. Slaton, Jr., W. F. Slaton, Jr., Slaton Waldo, Albie Waldo, William D. Grant, Miss Margaret Grant, James Jackson Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Phillips and Miss Robinson. In Governor Brown's party were Mrs. Joseph M. Brown, Miss Cora Brown, Charles Brown, Miss Sally Brown, Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Connolly, Mrs. Frances Connolly and Thomas W. Connolly.

Governor Brown Receives Friends.

Governor Brown arrived at the Capitol shortly before 11 o'clock, and went at once into his private office, where he received a number of friends and visitors.

Governor-elect Slaton drove up in his automobile to the Washington Street entrance of the Capitol, accompanied by Mrs. Slaton and his father, Major William F. Slaton. They proceeded to the reception room of the Governor's office, where the inaugural procession formed.

Promptly at 11:45 o'clock Speaker Burwell called the House to order, and immediately thereafter members of the Senate arrived.

The inaugural procession moved from the Governor's office on the first floor. The procession was led by Governor-elect Slaton and Governor Brown. After them came ex-Governor Henry D. McDaniel, and then followed the Justices of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals, the Federal Judges, the State House officers, the members of the joint legislative committee on inauguration, and the immediate families of Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton.

Governor Slaton Presented.

Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton took their places on the Speaker's stand, the first standing to the left of Senator Randolph Anderson and Speaker Burwell and the latter to the right. Rev. James B. Robbins, of the Trinity Methodist Church, opened the ceremonies with prayer, in which he invoked Divine aid for Governor Slaton in the conduct of the aqairs of the State.

Randolph Anderson, President of the Senate, presented Governor-elect Slaton to the people of Georgia and the Legislature, and immediately thereafter Justice Fish administered the oath of office. In a speech expressing great confidence in the ability of the incoming executive, Governor Brown presented Governor Slaton with the Great Seal of the State of Georgia.

After the inaugural ceremonies Governor and Mrs. Slaton and ex-Governor and Mrs. Brown lunched at the Executive Mansion. Ex-Governor and Mrs. Brown retired to their farm near Marietta, and Governor Slaton took possession of the mansion in the afternoon.

Church Bars Wedding And Girl Files Suit

Breach of Promise Action Started, Though Both Parties Declare They Are Ready for Ceremony.

ATCHISON, KANS., June 28.—Although both parties to a $25,000 breach of marriage contract suit filed here recently say they are willing to wed, the suit will go on.

Miss Mary Falk, of Purcell, alleges that she entered into a verbal contract to marry William Burke, of Troy, a few months ago.

Church officers say they will not marry Burke because he is unable to procure a sworn statement from his mother in Ireland certifying to the time of his baptism in the Catholic Church. Burke says he will marry Miss Mary Falk any time, and, in her petition for the suit Miss Falk says she is still willing to marry Burke.

But as a priest will not marry them, as both are unwilling to forsake their religion, Miss Falk says she can not consistently dismiss the suit, although she still loves Burke. Miss Falk's petition alleges that Burke is wealthy.

A retaliatory duty of 10 per cent upon potatoes imported from countries imposing duties against the United States also was inserted. Potatoes were unreservedly on the free list in the Underwood bill.

Atlanta Medical Schools Unite to Make Big College

National Recognition Will Be Obtained Through Merger—Officers and Faculty of Institution Are Unanimous.

A union of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons and the Atlanta Medical College has been effected, and as a result an institution to be known as the Atlanta Medical College has been formed. Details of the consolidation were announced Saturday by representative committees from both colleges.

Ambitious plans for the new college are outlined. The immediate effect of the consolidation will be the placing of the Atlanta Medical College in Class A by the American Medical Association. It renders the newly formed college eligible to membership in the Association of American Medical Colleges, admitting its graduates to practice anywhere in the world. Its doors open with the new college year in September.

The consolidation will force the abandonment of the property of the Atlanta School of Medicine on Luckie and Bartow Streets and the establishment of a considerable plant in connection with the present equipment of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons on Butler and Armstrong Streets.

Officers Are Announced.

The new college will be officered by W. S. Elkin, dean, and W. F. Westmoreland, president, of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons, and by two officers to be nominated by the Atlanta School of Medicine.

All these plans were announced by a committee from the Atlanta School of Medicine, consisting of George H. Noble, L. C. Fischer and Edward G. Jones, and a committee from the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons, whose members are W. S. Elkin, W. F. Westmoreland and C. W. Strickler.

Consideration of the proposition has been under way for some time, stated the committee members.

"It has been the one object of these deliberations," they announced, "to organize an institution of dignity and of permanent promise, whose graduates will receive general recognition throughout the United States—an institution so constituted as to make it a real public asset, and so conducted as to expect and to deserve the heartiest popular commendation."

So complete have been the preliminary deliberations that before word of the union had been breathed every plan was worked out, even to the appointment of a faculty and of a board of trustees.

The faculty proper will consist of the following physicians:

Department of Medicine—W. S. Kendrick, C. W. Strickler, R. T. Dorsey, J. C. Johnson, J. C. Olmsted, E. C. Thrash, E. B. Block, C. E. Boynton, L. B. Clarke, George M. Niles, L. M. Gaines, S. R. Roberts and B. Wolff.

Department of Surgery—W. F. Westmoreland, F. W. McRae, E. G. Jones, W. S. Goldsmith, F. K. Boland, J. L. Campbell, L. C. Fischer, M. Hoke and A. L. Fowler.

Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology—George H. Noble, W. S. Elkin, E. C. Davis and S. T. Barnett.

Department of Materia Medica and Therapeutics—M. M. Hull, L. B. Clarke (with other salaried associates).

Department of Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat—F. P. Calhoun, Dunbar Roy and J. M. Crawford.

Department of Physiology—George Bachman (with other salaried associates).

Department of Anatomy—J. W. Papez (with other salaried associates).

Department of Pathology—John Funke (with other salaried associates).

Department of Chemistry—Edgar Everhart (with other salaried associates).

Associate Faculty Not Named.

The associate faculty has not yet been completed. It will embrace the names of 50 or 75 additional physicians of prominence in the city.

The probable board of trustees of the Atlanta Medical College will be Reuben R. Arnold, H. M. Dorsey, Judge George Hillyer, G. S. Lowndes, E. W. Martin, F. J. Paxton, Judge T. P. Westmoreland, H. H. Cabaniss, John J. Eagan, John H. James, H. J. Lowry, Wilmer L. Moore, J. Carroll Payne, C. E. Currier, T. A. Hammond, Marion M. Jackson, R. F. Maddox, Bishop C. K. Nelson, J. S. Prather and W. S. Witham.

The union of the two colleges is significant as a historical event. The name of the first medical college founded in Atlanta was that of the consolidated school—the Atlanta Medical College. This institution was formed in 1854, was suspended during the war and its building used as a hospital. It was merged in 1898 with the Southern Medical College, which was organized in 1878, to form the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons.

The Atlanta School of Medicine was organized 1905. Both the colleges erected new buildings in 1906, Andrew Carnegie having given $25,000 and Dr. A. W. Calhoun $15,000 to the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons for this purpose, other citizens giving various sums. The Atlanta School of Medicine has also operated a hospital in connection with the college.

Sell Luckie Property.

It is the present plan to put on sale the Luckie Street property of the Atlanta School of Medicine, and to provide for the college work to be carried on entirely at the Butler Street plant, ample room being there for additional buildings and extensions. The proximity of the Grady Hospital is an additional reason for transferring everything to that locality.

The total enrollment in the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons last session was 334, and in the Atlanta School of Medicine 218. The announcement by the joint committee declares:

"It will not be the future intention to increase the enrollment so much as to elevate the standard of professional instruction. After January, 1914, one or more years of work in a literary college will be required for entrance, the minimum requirement this fall being a high school education."

Committee Tells Hopes.

The committee, in a statement to the public, tells of its purposes and hopes, saying:

"The recent awakening of the public mind to a knowledge of the past shortcomings of medical education, the evident cordial interest in plans, wherever launched, to invest medical education with a degree of excellence which will protect the public as it ought to be protected; the late tendency of private philanthropy to recognize properly organized medical colleges as deserving of its bounty; the recognition promised abroad to the proposed institution, which recognition could not have been obtained as long as the colleges remained separate; the strategic advantages of Atlanta as the site for a medical college of superlative merit; the excellence of the professional talent in the city; the immense momentum implied in a united instead of a divided professional energy—all these and other considerations alike of sentiment and of common sense, have seemed to us to constitute a responsibility whch it would discredt us to neglect, and an opportunity which it would distinguish us to embrace."

MOVE BEATEN FOR FREE WOOL GOODS

Clothing Duty Under New Tariff Schedule Will Be From 20 to 35 Per Cent.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The question of dutiable wool manufactures in the tariff bill was raised in the Senate Democratic caucus to-day and brought a lengthy debate. Senator Chamberlain, of Oregon, favored the free listing of these commodities, arguing this was only fair to the public and the manufacturers with raw wool on the free list.

The goods affected are stockings, socks and blankets, women's and children's dress goods, ready-made clothing and other articles of wearing apparel. Ad valorem rates, ranging from 20 per cent on stockings to 35 per cent on ready-made clothing are in the bill as reported to the caucus.

At the recess of the caucus Senator Simmons announced that the proposition to free list wool manufactures was beaten by a close vote.

"We expect to finish the hemp, silk, paper and sundries schedules to-night," said Senator Simmons, "and take up the administrative and income tax features of the Underwood bill Monday."

FLAGLER WILL UNCHANGED AND RELATIVE'S HINTS OF A CONSPIRACY FALL

Codicils Show That Millionaire Railroad King Left Only Son With but Small Share of His Fortune. Bulk of Wealth Held in Trust.

By TARLETON COLLIER.

WEST PALM BEACH, June 28.—While a number of the charges made by Amasa Flagler, of California, regarding strange circumstances surrounding the death of Henry M. Flagler to-day are found to be substantial, the principal accusations that codicils were added to the Flagler will, completely changing its effect, and that the dying man was given insufficient medical attention, appear to fall without support.

Seven codicils to the will are not significant. Investigation into the charges by Amasa Flagler that dark work accompanied the end of his kinsman was conducted by The Sunday American. The stories of the California man that Henry M. Flagler was kept in deep seclusion until the end; that visitors, including himself, were refused admittance; that the most rigid privacy shrouded every detail of the railroad king's illness—all are found to possess a substantial basis of fact.

Palm Beach, deserted, boarded up, uncanny in its summer desotation, today furnishes the setting for a belated story of tragedy—the tragedy in the death of Henry M. Flagler, the Florida railroad king, who died May 20, 84 years old, his brain worn out.

Built Empire; Dies in Seclusion.

The story is how a man who had built an empire came to die in seclusion on a deserted island, attended by unskilled nurses, denied to visitors—and some of them his kinsmen—and with never a word given out as to his condition, from time to time.

Amasa P. Flagler, of California, who says he is the closest male relative of Henry M. Flagler, except for Harry Harkness Flagler, a son, came to Palm Beach while the financier was dying, and was refused a sight of him. To-day he is talking freely to newspaper men, hinting at mystery in the death of Henry M. Flagler, charging that the great railroad man was not given the proper treatment or care, and that Mrs. Flagler, J. B. Parrott and Dr. W. R. Keenan, the three who were practically alone with him toward the end, and who, he points out, were the beneficiaries under the will, kept visitors away purposely.

Amasa P. Flagler, according to the variety of opinions maintained by residents of Palm Beach, is anything from a faker to a justly aggrieved person. The fact remains, however, revealed as a result of investigations by The Sunday American, that Henry M. Flagler died in loneliness and in enforced seclusion.

He died in a small room of a frame cottage on the Atlantic beach, to which he had been moved some time before the end. From one window is to be seen "The Breakers," his own great hotel. It has been locked and deserted since March. Through the other window there is the sight of a stretch of parched grass, the beach and the ocean.

George Conway, a boy who waited on Mr. Flagler during his illness, said to-day that the dying man kept his eyes always on the ocean.

"He loved it," said Conway. "One time, not long before the end, he said to me: 'George, there is the greatest thing in the world,' pointing out at the sea. 'If there ever comes a time when you would be proud of yourself and of what you have done, think about that ocean. There is something greater, more wonderful than anything a man can ever make or become. Railroads and cities are nothing.' But a lot of the times he was not conscious to what went on."

Mr. Flagler was moved to the beach cottage from his mansion, "Whitehall," when summer began to set in at Palm Beach. He was moved at the combined orders of his physician, Dr. W. R. Keenan, and Mrs. Flagler. Dr. Keenan is Mrs. Flagler's brother. Because has was moved Amasa P. Flagler finds the basis for a denunciation of those who took care of him, declaring that his kinsman was taken to the empty beach cottage that he might be more securely isolated.

Joe Jefferson Died In Same Cottage.

Investigation reveals that many of the statements made by Amasa P. Flagler in his interviews regarding the death of his relative are exaggerations. He is said to have declared that the beach cottage in which Henry M. Flagler died was old and dilapidated and isolated from the community. It is, however, "The Nautilus," one of a colony of seven cottages on the beach, and is within 200 feet of "The Breakers." It is leased for $5,000 a season of three months to the winter visitors from the North, and last season was occupied by "Fingy" Conners, the Buffalo politician. Joseph Jefferson, the actor, according to the beach traditions, died in the same cottage.

Local physicians, although none of them was called in to assist Dr. Keenan and Dr. Castleberry, watched the case as well as possible in view of the privacy attached to it. Several to-day said that they would have indorsed the move from Whitehall to the beach cottage, considering more desirable the sea breeze and the relief from the sultriness that is always the lot of Whitehall in the early summer.

West Palm Beach is divided into two hostile camps on the question of the treatment of Henry M. Flagler, many contending that the charges of a deliberate isolation and of inadequate care of the dying man may be substantiated by a chain of circumstances, and others laughing at the scandal that Amasa Flagler has sprung.

Trained Nurses Succeeded by Boy.

The rapid decline of the railroad king began about March 1, when, already ill, he was injured by a fall in the reception hall of "Whitehall." He took to bed at that time, and never H. E. Bemis, wife of the manager of the "Royal Ponciana."

From the fact that the attending physicians are related to beneficiaries under Flagler's will, and that one, Dr. Keenan, is himself a beneficiary, Amasa Flagler has drawn evidence of irregular conduct in the care of Henry M. Flagler.

Little Told From Bedside.

During the period of the financier's illness little definite news came from his bedside. Newspaper men of West Palm Beach and of Jacksonville declare that no bulletins were issued, and that inquiries were met always with indefiniteness.

For weeks Flagler lay thus. No one was admitted. The gossip of servants has lingered in West Palm Beach, declaring that the dying man in his delirium called frequently for his son, and frequently also for William Fremd, his gardener. The son, Harry Harkness Flagler, who has been estranged from his father for 21 years, was not summoned until by Amasa P. Flagler. Fremd, another for whom Mr. Flagler called, lived on the grounds, within a half a mile of the cottage, but was never taken to the sick room.

The same gossip has recorded that J. A. McDonald, of Miami, an old friend of Mr. Flagler, and Father McLoughlin, a Catholic priest of Miami, were others who could not see the sick man.

Along toward the end came Amasa Flagler. According to his own story, he had sent a telegram to herald his visit. Reaching Palm Beach, he was informed that he could not see the sick man. He declares that he virtually was ordered from the grounds by J. B. Parrott, vice president and general manager of Flagler's railroad, who became president by the express terms of the Flagler will.

Incensed, Amasa Flagler went to the citizens of West Palm Beach with his story. He had telegraphed ahead for a room in "The Breakers," but these were denied him. "The Breakers," he was informed, was closed for the season.

Telegram Sent To Flagler's Son.

Amasa Flagler found quarters in "The Gables," a less pretentious hotel in West Palm Beach, whose proprietor, R. C. McGriff, listened to his story and to this day believes in him. Amasa Flagler was the first to send a telegram to Harry Harkness Flagler.

"Your father is calling for you," is the message he sent.

According to the statement to McGriff, Parrott, over in Palm Beach, heard that Harry Flagler was coming to his father's side, and came across to "The Gables" to engaged a room and bath for the financier's son. There was no room for Harry Flagler, either, it seems, on Palm Beach.

No room and bath was available in McGriff's establishment, and Amasa Flagler offered to give up his suite to Harry Harkness Flagler. But Harry Flagler, when he arrived, stayed with an old friend in the town. He arrived in time to see his father alive.

Amasa Flagler declares that he was not allowed to see the body of Henry M. Flagler after death. The Tropical Sun, the daily paper of West Palm Beach, bears a story of how Amasa Flagler was leaving the town, full of wrath at his treatment. At the station, according to the story, he could obtain no information about his trains.

The employees at the railroad station, the Flagler railroad station, would tell him nothing. He asked information regarding a special train, and was met with an indefinite answer. Finally, he called a boy and commissioned him to obtain the information. The boy did. Upon his return with the message, Mr. Flagler is said to have given him $50.

"You are the only person connected with this road who has exhibited the slightest consideration or courtesy toward me," he told the boy, according to the story.

Undertaker Imported To Conduct Funeral.

The body of the dead millionaire was taken in hand by an undertaker imported from Miami. Undertaker McGinley, in West Palm Beach, was not consulted. Citizens of the town believe this to be the case because Henry M. Flagler and the city of West Palm Beach had little in common. The two have been antagonistic of late years, in spite of the work of development which Flagler has done for East Florida, and a number of local ordinances and regulations were passed inimical to the Flagler interests.

Residents of West Palm Beach now declare that the feeling that grew up was not personal to Flagler himself, but was occasioned by actions of other officials of the Florida East Coast Railroad.

Flagler's funeral was held in St. Augustine, and his body placed in an elaborate vault which he had built in connection with the Memorial Presbyterian Church. St. Augustine he made his home, it is said here, because he was repelled by the attitude of West Palm Beach citizens.

Makes Charges Against Beneficiaries.

According to his story, Amasa Flagler was denied a part in the funeral. He went on his way North, where he has made his sensational charges that Mrs. Flagler, Dr. Keenan and J. B. Parrott kept the dying financier secluded, denying all admission that they might maintain an influence over him.

The three are the principal beneficiaries under the will, and it is Amasa's inference that because they were with him continually, to the seclusion of others, their claims were made secure. He hints, in his interviews, that codicils to the original Flagler will were made under their domination, cutting out other legatees, particularly Harry Harkness Flagler, the son of the financier.

However, an examination of the will and codicils proves this accusation to be without foundation. There are seven codicils, but none materially effective.

The documents are in the court house in St. Augustine, where they have reposed since being made. The original will was drafted February 1, 1902, and names W. H. Beardsley, of New York; Dr. William R. Keenan, of Lockport, N. Y., the physician who was with him at his death, and J. R. Parrott, of Jacksonville, another of the little party with him most of the time during his last illness, as his executors and trustees. His wife, Mrs. Mary Lillie Flagler, he names as the residuary legatee, and his son Harry Harkness Flagler, he cut off with the relatively small legacy of 5,000 shares of Standard Oil stock. This, at the time of Flagler's death, was worth $642 a share.

Declares Son Didn't Show Filial Regard.

"I have already given my son securities sufficient to bring him an income of $75,000 a year," the will stated. "My son has not shown for me the filial regard that would make me inclined to do more for him than is done by this item of my will."

No beneficiary will profit by the will, however, for at least five years. By its terms, a trust is created, the testator declaring:

"It is my intention in the future to foster, protect and properly develop such properties; and to provide against my decease while such properties are in process of development, and to relieve my beloved wife from the immediate cares and responsibilities of so varied and extensive interests, I hereby declare a trust for all my properties. From this trust is accepted $60,000 to the Stetson University and $20,000 to the Florida Agricultural College for the construction of a gymnasium.

The trust is to last five years, according to the will, and if the Florida East Coast Railway, or the Florida East Coast Hotel Company, at that time should require financial aid, then it is to continue as long as is necessary. Until the expiration of trust, Mrs. Flagler is to receive $100,000 a year and the Memorial Presbyterian Church of St. Augustine $3,000 a year.

Many Legacies Left by Will.

Other legatees mentioned in the original will are: To receive $5,000, Miss Annie C. McKay, Mrs. Ella Green, Stephen A. Brave, John P. Beckwith, William H. Chamblins, Ed J. Triay, George W. Wilson, Bernard O'Brien, his coachman; George Holland, his butler, and Ida Scheiffer, his housekeeper; to receive $10,000, James A. McGuire, R. T. Goff, John Anderson, Fred Sterry, Joseph D. Price, Henry W. Merrill, J. A. McDonald, William H. Beardsley and Jasper G. Salter; to J. E. Ingraham, $20,000; to J. R. Parrott, $100,000; to C. D. Boice and L. C. Hayes, $2,500; to the Florida Agricultural College, $30,000; to the John B. Stetson University, $40,000; to Hamilton College, New York, $100,000; to the Memorial Presbyterian Church Society, $75,000.

By the terms of the will J. R. Parrott is to continue in the same relation to the Flagler interests as he maintained during the lifetime of the testator.

There are seven codicils to the will, made, respectively, February 17, 1903; April 28, 1904; January 8, 1906; April 7, 1908; December 22, 1910; January 10, 1912, and September 13, 1912.

It is these, Amasa Flagler declares, which are damaging to the original document, but none of them seem materially to affect it. The first codicil gives his trustees the power to complete the southern extension of the Florida East Coast Railroad, which he denied them in the will.

The second codicil defines the meaning of the term "expiration of trust," which occurred frequently in the will, and provides that if Harry Harkness Flagler is not living at the end of the "expiration of trust" then the 5,000 shares of oil stock lapse to the estate. In this codicil also he revoked the legacies of $80,000 to the Florida University and $40,000 to the John B. Stetson University, and provided for bequests of $10,000 to J. P. Greaves, Robert Murray and Leland Sterry, and giving W. H. Beardsley $50,000 instead of $10,000. If he survived his wife, Flagler specified in this codicil, the residue of his estate is to be divided among Roy H. York, W. L. Harkness and Mrs. John D. McLennan, of Cleveland; W. R. Keenan, Jr., J. K. Wise and Sarah G. Keenan, of Wilmington; J. R. Parrott, of Jacksonville, and W. H. Beardsley, of New York.

No Increase for Son's Share of Estate.

The third codicil announces that upon consideration the testator found incorrect the statement in the will that he had given his son securities netting $75,000 a year. However, he said, this mistake did not warrant an increase in the legacy to Harry Harkness Flagler.

The codicil also provides for a legacy of $10,000 to Harry E. Bemis, and empowers his trustees to borrow money for the extension of his railroad to Key West.

Codicil four specifies that the smaller legatees are not to receive the amounts provided unless at the time of his death they are in the employ of the Flagler railroad or hotel interests.

Codicil five empowers his trustees to continue to pay to Horace H. Flagler, of St. Augustine, the dividends on 50 shares of Standard Oil stock. It provides, too, that the legacy to the Memorial Presbyterian Church Society apply only if the church remain in the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America.

Codicil six makes provision for the maintenance of his mausoleum by the expenditure of a portion of the income from the $75,000 which he bequeathed to the church in St. Augustine.

The last codicil, drafted September 13, 1912, provides that the legacy of 5,000 shares of oil stock to his son be effective in spite of the change in the form of Standard Oil stock. This was drafted soon after the dissolution of the Standard Oil Company, apparently looking to safe-guarding Harry Harkness Flagler against losing his inheritance on technical grounds. The last provision is the revocation of his previous bequest to Horace H. Flagler, substituting therefor an annuity of $2,000.

No resident of West Palm Beach or its vicinity was mentioned in the will, although common gossip had named several as likely legatees.

Flagler's Isolation Necessary, Says Doctor.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Dr. Owen Kenan, brother of Mrs. Henry M. Flagler, to-day issued a vigorous denial of the charges of Amasa Plummer Flagler regarding the circumstances which surrounded the death of his patient at West Palm Beach.

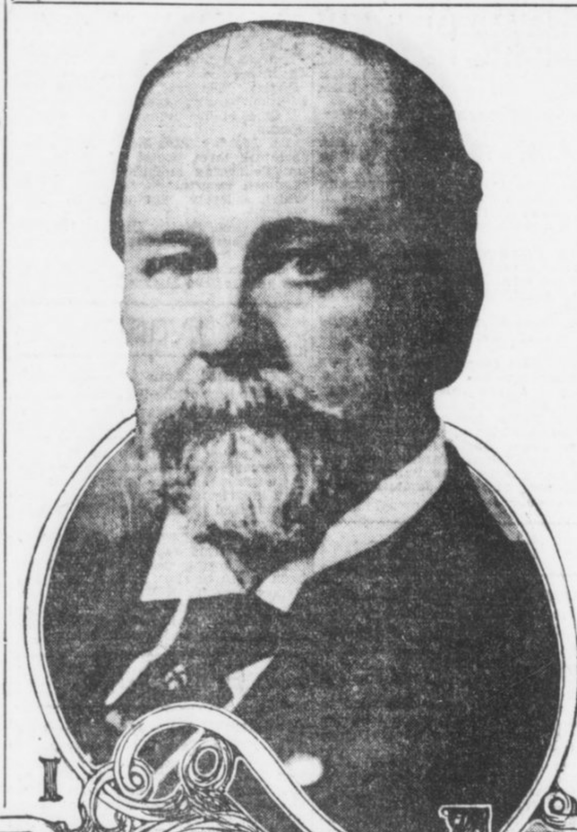
"There isn't a word of truth in the whole thing," he said. "The only explantation is that these so-called 'charges' originated in the brain of some cunning adventurer with an ax to grind. Publication of these unfounded rumors have annoyed us greatly, and Mrs. Flagler is in no condition to be interviewed, so that I can speak for her.

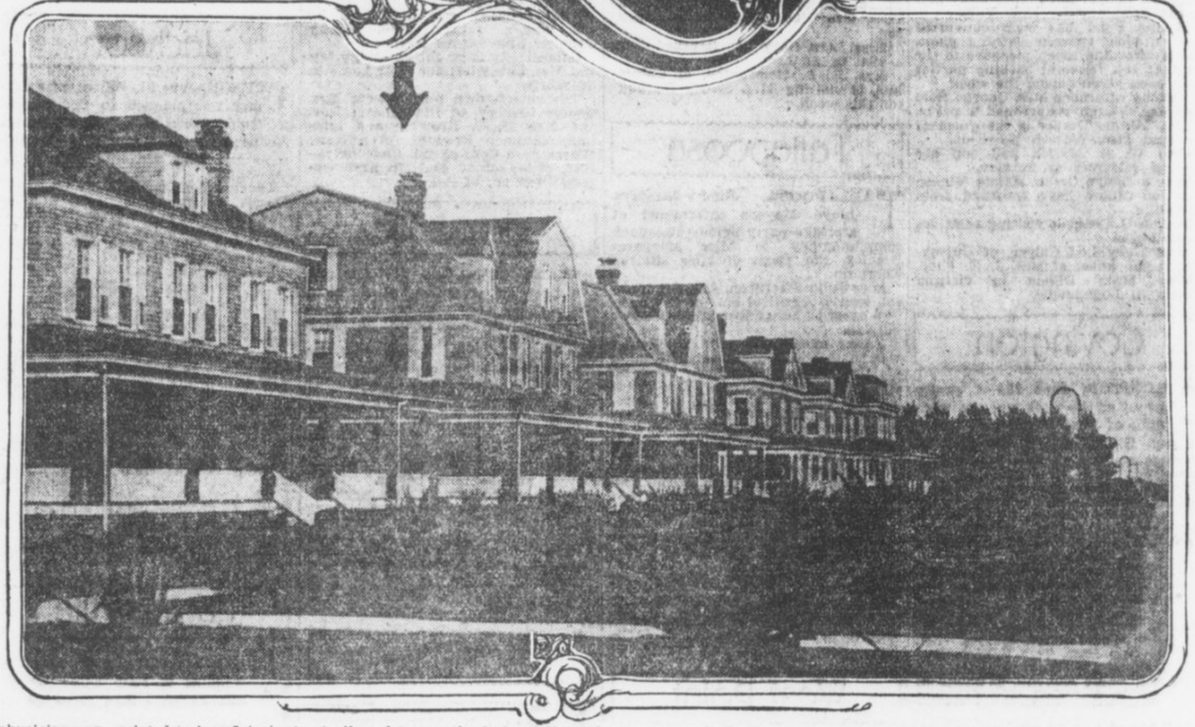
"So far as I can make out, the greatest objection to conditions this Amasa Flagler found at the Beach was the isolation of the sick man. That was natural. Mr. Flagler was old, his illness was serious and he needed quiet. The cottage in which he died is not dilapidated. It rents for an enormous sum every season, and some prominent Boston society people had it last winter.

"If Amasa Flagler's object is to induce Harry H. Flagler to contest the will it will fail. Harry Flagler is a gentleman, although he had not spoken to his father but once in the last seventeen years. He was left $5,000,000 and each of his children gets $4,000,000. That seems to me to be eminently fair.

"As to our conduct of the case, Dr. Castlebury and I did the best we could. Henry M. Flagler had as tender and loving care as any man ever had up to the moment of his death. There was no secrecy other than that was absolutely necessary, and nothing to be concealed."

AMASA FLAGLER, who hinted at plot to influence Henry M. Flagler in making will, is shown in the top picture, while in the lower photograph the arrow indicates the cottage in which the railroad magnate died. This cottage was referred to as a "lonely hut" by Amasa Flagler in his first statements.





HEIRS TO RICHES LEFT BY TITANIC VICTIM SOUGHT

J. Montague Smart, Prominent Business Man, Left Fortune. No Trace of Beneficiaries.

NEW YORK, June 28.—During his active life J. Montgomery Smart was a man of mystery. Now that his bones lie in the sunken Titanic, his past is a greater puzzle than ever, and so far it is unsolved. Usually when a man dies, even though he may have been of distinction, his hidden history is buried with him. But Smart was a man of wealth, and it became necessary to try to discover vital facts of his intimate personal life.

Thus began a world-wide search that has served only to make the case of J. Montgomery Smart all the stranger. He was an honored and successful man of business, whose transactions were international in scope, even extending from New York to Australia.

Necessary to Find Heirs.

Having left money, it became necessary to find his heirs. It was remembered that this man of silence never described his family. It was known that he had been married and that his wife had died ten years before. Vague words dropped here and there were gathered and it became apparent that Smart had two children, a boy of 20 and a girl of 18.

But no one could be found who had any definite idea of their whereabouts.

Into three countries of Europe the filaments of inquiry extended. The American consuls of many ports were asked to aid in the hunt. That was in May, 1912.

One fact was discovered in the course of the Belgian hunt. It was asserted that the children were in charge of a Mrs. Cook, who was a great friend of Mrs. Smart, and that Smart was paying her liberally to care for them. But who was Mrs. Cook? Her identity was also impossible to discover, and the hunt settled down into a hope that the guardian would write for funds, thus solving the riddle. But she has been swallowed in silence.

Had Many Acquaintances.

As president of the American Cold Storage and Shipping Company, Smart had made many acquaintances among prominent business men of New York, London, Berlin, Paris and many other cities throughout the world. Many believed that they knew him well. But when the test came, they were surprised to find that only the barest information was obtainable about his personal affairs.

Smart was a hermit in a great city, and he was a hermit in his many voyages and travels in foreign countries.

KANSAS CITY, June 28.—"If my wife succeeds in getting a divorce from me I am going to begin all over with my courting days and try to win back her love," Andrew Mathers said in Judge Johnson's court. "Her charges in this case do not in any way affect my devotion and admiration for her."

Mathers is a wealthy building contractor and lives at 4403 Virginia Avenue. He has been contesting the suit of his wife, Louise Mathers. They were married in 1896 and have three children.

Mrs. Mathers charges that her husband became intoxicated frequently.

Victim of Ohio Flood Travels to California on Freight Train to Become Wife.

VENICE, CAL., June 28.—Miss Ethel Johnston, a young woman from Dayton, Ohio, arrived here in begrimed and torn boy's costume to join her fiance. Miss Johnston and J. L. Perry had been sweethearts in Dayton. The youth moved West a short time ago to prepare a home for his sweetheart.

Dog Rescues Girl With Dress Aflame

Shepherd Leaps Into Brook and Then Shakes His Dripping Body on Blazing Skirt

NEW YORK, June 28.—The remarkable intelligence and devotion of a Shepherd dog saved Miss Florence Sheldon, of 4 Llewellyn road, Montclair, from serious injury yesterday when her dress was accidentally set on fire.

Unconscious of the smouldering fire, the girl sat on the bank of a brook throwing sticks into the stream. Suddenly the dog began to bark furiously. He dashed into the brook, and returning, threw his dripping body on the now blazing skirt and extinguished the fire. A square foot of the garment was burned.

LOS ANGELES, June 28.—Four dollars a day is the minimum wage on which a family can be supported in this city, according to the report today of the Municipal Industrial Investigating Committee. Mashers Told to Think of Sisters

Pastor Says That Presuming on Feminine Acquaintance Is Greatest Aid to White Slavery.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 28.—"A spendthrift sweetheart and an extravagant wife have ruined many lives," said the Rev. T. W. Stout in a sermon at Calvary Methodist Church. "Young women can help to form high moral standards among the boys by not permitting great expenditures upon themselves."

He illustrated how laziness makes a weak character that falls in the crisis of life by knocking the prop from under a three-legged chair. "White slavery begins with presuming on feminine acquaintance and bold advances to clerks," he said. "It ends in blood money and lost souls. Every young man should ask himself in dealing with girls: 'Suppose my sister were in her place—what would I want done?'"

Skylarkers Mobbed By Throng of Women

Man Falls in Baby Carriage While He Plays on Sidewalk and Starts Small Iot.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Several hundred persons, most of them women attacked Frederick Mochson and Raymond Dragoni, last night when one of the men, as a result of skylarking, fell in the baby carriage of the 18-months-old son of Joseph Bilion in front of the Bilion home, at 57 East One Hundred and Eleventh Street.

The baby carriage rolled off the sidewalk. Then the crowd got active. Mochson and Dragoni were dragged in the gutter and kicked and pummelled. Stones and garbage were thrown at them. When the reserves learned what had started the affair they locked up the two men on charges of disorderly conduct.

The elder Grams was a sergeant in Major Thornburg's troop, which was ambushed and almost annihilated while marching from Rawlins to the relief of the Indian agency at Meeker, and he was among those killed.

John Bunyan's Anvil Found in Junk Pile

Relic Bears Name of Author of "Pilgrim's Progress," and Is Dated 1647.

The relic was discovered in a junk heap in St. Neots, near the town of Elstowe, or Helstowe, where Bunyan lived, by Beagarie's father, about 30 years ago, and was presented by him to his son ten years ago.

OXNARD, CAL., June 28.—Angered because Principal C. A. Marcey, of the Filmore Grammar School, inflicted corporal punishment on her small son, Mrs. E. M. Taylor horsewhipped him on the street of the town.

The boy exhibited the marks of punishment to his mother.

Mrs. Taylor went to a harness shop and purchased a blacksnake whip. Concealing the weapon in a piece of paper she stole upon Principal Marcey as he was engaged in conversation on the street. Without warning she dealt him a blow and continued to apply the lash.

TROOPS TO MAKE CAVALRY RAID OF THE SHENANDOAH

Realistic Advance Next Month Into the Historic Valley May Mean New System.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Troopers at Fort Myer have begun preparations for their 70-mile march into the Shenandoah Valley next month to participate in maneuvers expected to result in reorganization of the mounted forces of the army.

The Shenandoah Valley, where "Phil" Sheridan made his famous ride 50 years ago, has been chosen as the bloodless battle ground for the test. For two months this summer a full brigade of cavalry and a battery of horse artillery will maneuver and "fight" over the red roads, the green hills, and fields near Winchester.

The department has leased a tract of ground one mile broad and two miles long in the heart of the Shenandoah, 70 miles away, and orders were issued to the troops some time ago.

Oglethorpe Troopers on March.

Two regiments of the brigade, those from Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., and Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., must ride 700 dusty miles under a summer sun before they can reach the valley, and they must report July 20. The First Squadron from Fort Myer will have only 70 miles to go, and the horse battery from Fort Riley, Kans., will be sent by rail.

Secretary Garrison will be a frequent spectator. Major General Wood, chief of staff, United States Army, probably will spend much time there, and President Wilson may make the trip.

The necessity for a rehabilitation of the cavalry was disclosed when the general staff some time ago made ambitious plans for the reorganization of the army so as to prepare it for the defense of the country against attack by any great military power. This resulted in the sending to Europe last year of a board of six cavalry officers, who studied the German, Russian, Austro-Hungarian, French and English organizations.

Officers Study Abroad.

Four months were spent abroad by these officers, and since their return they have prepared plans for radical changes in the organization and use of cavalry of the American army.

The tests will take place under the direction of Colonel C. H. Murray, of the Twelfth Cavalry, as Brigadier General E. J. McClernand, the head of the cavalry board, is prohibited from exercising actual command by virtue of his retirement. General McClernand, however, with Lieutenant Colonels J. T. Dickmann and Fred S. Foltz, Major Jesse McI. Carter and Captain Frank Parker, all members of the board which studied the European systems, will be present.

Some of the practical questions to be worked out are:

How large a command can a captain handle successfully?

How many such units can a colonel handle to the best advantage under conditions approximating hostilities?

The new formation of the cavalry into double ranks also will be tried out on a large scale, a practical test by Captain Parker, of the Eleventh Cavalry, at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., with an experimental squadron having been pronounced a complete success by General H. L. Scott.

Rivers states that several years ago while he and his wife were visiting at the Oaks they consulted a fortuneteller, who told them that they would discover the treasure. She stated that it would be found in a cave in a rock which is a prominent feature of the coast scenery near Nestucca Beach.

FIGHT BREWING IN MACON OVER MAYOR'S OFFICE

Bridges Smith, City Clerk, or John R. L. Smith, Lawyer, Are Likely To Be Chosen.

DASHER FIRST CANDIDATE

Executive Committee Chairman Takes His Own Time About Calling Meeting.

MACON, June 28.—The approaching mayoralty campaign is featured by a seeming lack of interest. With the election less than ten weeks off, the candidates are still in their shells, and local politics seem to be stagnated.

Alderman A. L. Dasher, Sr., for years one of the strongest adherents of the administration party, is the only candidate so far in the field. He announced in December on an anti-administration platform. On account of this complete reversal of form, the citizens have been at a loss as to how to take him, and his campaign has made little progress. It is understood that Mr. Dasher is arranging an aldermanic ticket, which will be announced in a few weeks.

The administration will offer either Bridges Smith, the present City Clerk, or J. Ross Bowdre, the present Mayor Pro Tem and administration leader in Council.

Mr. Smith was Mayor for nine years, and retired only to let his friend, John T. Moore, run. Mr. Moore was defeated by Judge A. L. Miller. Next time he beat Judge Miller by less than 200 votes. Two years ago he defeated N. I. Brunner, an Alderman, by a safe majority.

Mayor Moore Ineligible.

Under Macon's present charter rule, Mayor Moore is ineligible for a third successive term. Consequently, Mr. Smith, as the strongest man of the administration faction, is looked upon to maintain the party in office.

Mr. Bowdre is in line for the nomination, but he insists that he would rather not be Mayor, and it is not lively that he will get in the race.

The Moore administration has done many things to arouse criticism and cause enemies, while at the same time making a progressive record along other lines. The chief complaint is that it has been too open. The prohibition law is discounted in the city. The administration has established a wide-open restricted district and the police department has been subject to unenviable criticism.

"Law and Order" Movement.

Just now "law and order" leaders are talking of John R. L. Smith, a prominent Macon lawyer, for Mayor on an independent ticket. Mr. Smith has never been in politics, and in that respect he has an absolutely unblemished record. It is said that no one knows how he has ever voted on any issue, local or State. He is a successful business man, a great believer in the enforcement of law, and at the same time a man of rather liberal tendencies. A movement is on foot to ask him to run. Unless this movement crystallizes, it is probable that Bridges Smith will be the next Mayor.

Bridges Smith was originally a printer, and then a newspaper reporter. Incidentally he was a minstrel and has also engaged in various business enterprises. About 25 years ago he became Clerk of Council, and held that place until Mayor Daisy Price died in office. Then he was elected to fill the vacancy. Afterwards he was re-elected for four successive times. Just as soon as Smith got out of office a legislative act was secured, restricting the Mayor's tenure to not more than four successive years.

Aldermanic Probabilities.

As to an aldermanic ticket, at least seven of the present Council will run on the administration ticket, they being Aldermen Chestney, Bowdre, McKenna, Happ, Hines, Adamson and Bernd. Alderman P. L. Hay will run on an independent platform. L. J. Kilburn, a labor leader and former Representative in the Legislature; L. A. Mitchell, R. C. Hazlehurst and two other successful business men are also expected to be administration candidates for Council.

The primary will be held about September 15. The regular election takes place in October, and the Mayor and Council change in November.

Just now there is an agitation to secure a new executive committee. The present committee was elected three years ago, and served its purpose. However, it has simply remained in office, because the chairman, W. D. Nottingham, forgot all about calling a meeting. This week a demand was made upon Mr. Nottingham to call the committee together so that it could arrange for a mass meeting by which a new committee will be named. The point was made that the new committee should be chosen before the citizens are rent by factional politics. But Judge Nottingham—he was once Judge of the City Court—is obdurate. He says that he is going to call the committee whenever he gets good and ready. A number of the committeemen have publicly criticised Chairman Nottingham for his attitude, and eight of the ten members have requested him in writing to call the committee.

Macon Judge Ends Feeless Marriages

Justice Hugh McKervey Victim of His Own Generous Customs, Calls a Halt.

MACON, June 28.—Justice of the Peace Hugh McKervey, who has been a judge for five years and never charged a fee, says now that he is going to break this rule.

Recently his constable picked up a cow, and after keeping it the required period sold it to the highest bidder. The owner of the cow then brought suit and recovered his cow. The man who had bought it at auction then sued Judge McKervey for the $11 he had paid for the cow at public sale. And the justice, although he has never taken in a fee, had to pay out $11, his constable not being financially able to pay it.

"This experience means the end of feeless marriages in Bibb County," says Judge McKervey.

Father and Sons Officers of Lodge

Crawford, Ala., Masons Confer Unusual Honor on Prince Family. Public Installation.

COLUMBUS, June 28.—B. F. Prince, a well-known citizen of Crawford, Ala., and his seven sons were installed as officers in Huckabatchee Lodge of Masons this afternoon. A public installation was conducted, followed by an old-fashioned country barbecue. Several hundred invitations were sent out and Masons throughout this section attended.

The Prince family is one of the most highly respected in East Alabama, and the fact that all have been elected to offices in the same lodge is an indication of their popularity in the community. The father, who is past 70 years of age, is worshipful master; B. C. Prince, senior warden; R. R. Prince, junior warden; J. E. Prince, treasurer; W. R. Prince, secretary; Sidney Prince, senior deacon; C. H. Prince, junior deacon, and S. F. Prince, tyler.

Summer School to Open Term Monday

ATHENS, June 28.—With hundreds of teachers here the Georgia Summer School will open Monday for six weeks—when lectures, lyceums and demonstration work will be the program.

Among the attractions will be President Southwick, of the Emerson School of Oratory; the Chicago Ladies' Orchestra, Alton Packard, one of the leading cartoonists of the country; the Riheldaffer-Galley company of singers and musicians; Miss Millie Rutherford, in her lecture on the ante-bellum South, and Edwin Aldine Pound, who will give his account of the "Passion Play."

BIG FOURTH OF JULY FOR ATHENS BEING PLANNED

FOOTBALL STAR ENTERS PROFESSIONAL BASEBALL

ATHENS, June 28.—The University of Georgia football team suffered a heavy loss this week when Halfback Bowden entered the list of professionals and became a member of the Cordele Empire State League team. Bowden was considered one of the greatest halfbacks in the South and was being counted on as a great running mate for McWhorter next fall. He is a good baseball player, being awarded all-Southern catcher in 1912. An injured shoulder kept him out of most of the games this year.

LANDS IN JAIL BECAUSE HE POSED AS DETECTIVE

ROME, June 28.—Because he tried to play detective and search negro homes, Gus Harris, a young white man, is in the county jail. Harris armed himself with a pistol and a badge and with these convinced a number of blacks that he was an officer of the law. In most instances he secured whisky, and this he carried to a confederate. They drank it and disposed of it in other ways. He was arrested and bound over.

UNIQUE PRISON BUILT FOR CONVICTS IN HALL

GAINESVILLE, June 28.—Hall County has a most ingeniously built house for the accommodation of the inmates of the convict camp. It is 50 by 80 feet, of roomy proportions, built of wood, containing not a single nail, but put together by bolts and capable of being taken down and moved from place to place. Edwin Smith, son of John A. Smith, supervisor of county road work, built the prison at a cost less than a tent the same size. Road men from other counties have seen the building, and it is said that others may adopt the same plan.

Finds $500 Diamonds By Means of 'Lost' Ad

Columbus Woman Recovers Five Rings Dropped on Street Car Two Months Ago.

COLUMBUS, June 28.—Through the means of a small "lost ad," diamond rings valued at $500 have been recovered by Mrs. S. J. Guined, of this city, after she had about given up all hope of finding them.

On April 19, Mrs. Guined rode up town on a street car. In a chatelaine purse she carried she had five rings valued at $100 each. The rings slipped out of the purse. She did not discover her loss until that night. She advertised for them.

A day or two ago a man learned the whereabouts of the rings, and, remembering the ad, notified police headquarters. Conductor J. A. Duffey and Motorman Ed Gurley, who were in charge of the car on which she had ridden, were arrested and the diamonds recovered. Mrs. Guined refused to prosecute the men and they were released. The Traction Company discharged them.

To Stand Trial for Attack on Reporter

James Randall, Augusta Barber, Will Be Arraigned in City Court.

AUGUSTA, June 28.—The most interesting case to be tried in the City Court next week is that against James Randall, a white barber, charged with assaulting M. J. Mabry, a newspaper reporter.

Randall is a well-known police character, having been in trouble several times and he is also somewhat notorious as the hangman of Arthur Glover, a white man executed here several years ago. Neither the Sheriff, the jailer nor any of the deputies would spring the trap to send Glover into eternity, so Randall was paid $10 for the work.

Some time ago Randall was arrested on the charge of gambling, and Mabry, accompanying the officers who made the raid, found some poker chips which the officers had overlooked. Randall threatened him at the time and in the City Court room a short time afterward he attacked Mabry.

FLOYD COUNTY FARMS SUFFERING FOR RAINS

On no less than ten days recently the thermometer has crept up to 99 degrees, and Friday it attained a maximum mark of 101.

He says she has made life miserable for him and that finally she drove him from his home with sticks of wood.

AUGUSTA, June 28.—A petition for a permanent injunction to prevent the Georgia-Carolina Power Company from using the lands of the petitioners will be heard July 7, in Charleston, before Judge Smith, of the United States Court, when the case of W. H. Fleming, H. C. Middleton, E. F. Verdery and E. W. Andrews against the power company will be argued.

The petitioners want $50,000 for 42 acres of land which is needed by the power company to complete its dam across the Savannah River.

COLUMBUS CITY OFFICIAL HOLDS PLACE 50 YEARS

Another Week Will Complete Half Century of Service for M. M. Moore.

COLUMBUS, June 28.—A half century's service for the same municipality is something rarely seen, yet if City Clerk M. M. Moore, of Columbus, lives until July 6 he will have completed 50 years in the same office.

At a meeting of the City Council of Columbus on July 6, 1863, Mr. Moore, then hardly 26 years of age, but known as a successful business man and one faithful and upright in all of his dealings, was chosen City Clerk. He was elected over two strong competitors, and took immediate charge of the office, serving through the closing days of the war between the States and continuously since.

Through all these years of service he has rendered the city there have been but few times when anyone sought to take the office from him.

For many years past there has been no one to offer opposition to him, and he has been elected term after term by Councils which change more or less every two years.

Mr. Moore will be 76 years of age November 15, and the fact that he has given 50 years of his life to the discharge of his duties as a city official is evidence of his popularity with all the people. While Mr. Moore has never been robust physically, he has been blessed with average health. He is a native of Columbus and has lived here all his life, except for a very few years when he was a child, and then he lived just across the river in Girard. In 1868 he married Miss Sallie Peabody, a member of one of the most prominent families of this section. To them were born five children, four of whom are now living. They are James M. Moore, John P. Moore, Miss Lula Moore and Mrs. W. R. Hester, all of whom now reside in this city. His wife died last year.

COLUMBUS BURGLARS ROB CATHOLIC CHURCH

COLUMBUS, June 28.—Not content with robbing undertaking establishments and the Muscogee County court house, burglars have now turned their attention to churches in Columbus, and as a result the Church of the Holy Family has been looted of a number of valuables.

Gaining an entrance through a window the burglars stole small marble slabs, scarfs and other adornment. The convent was not disturbed.

Wimberly Explains Opposition to Depot

Refutes Imputation That Connection With Railroad Prompts His Fight Against Station.

MACON, June 28.—Representative Minter Wimberly, whose opposition to the erection of a union passenger station at Fifth and Cherry Streets will probably delay Macon's new depot project for this year at least, today stated his position, answering those who have criticised him. He indignantly denounces as "a grave, cruel and unworthy injustice" the charge that I am opposed to the Cherry Street site because of my connection with the Macon, Dublin and Savannah Railroad as general counsel."

Mr. Wimberly says that Council is giving too much to the Central of Georgia for what it receives in return, and by allowing the Central to close up five streets the city will permanently and absolutely impair the value of all of the land within the city limits on the other side of the closed section. He is for the Cherry Street site for the depot provided the streets are not closed. As it will take legislative enactment to close the streets, Mr. Wimberly's opposition is likely to defeat the project.

BRILLIANT BATTLE SURE IN FRANK TRIAL IN CLASH OF HOOPER AND ARNOLD

Order Has at Last Been Rested and Indications Are That Struggle of Attorneys Will Be Waged in the Most Ethical Manner.

By AN OLD POLICE REPORTER.

As deplorable as the Phagan case is, in all its melancholy details, it already is evident enough that there will come of it eventually much that the community may be thankful for.

In the first place, Atlanta and Georgia, and incidentally the entire South will have learned a good lesson in law and order, justice and fair play, and to that extent may be the better prepared for the next case of the kind that comes to their attention.

In the second place, there will be in the future no such wretched bungling and frenzied appeal in and from police headquarters, as for a time marked the Phagan case unique among its kind.

It looks now as if the decks have been pretty well cleared for action and that Leo Frank's trial may be expected to proceed in dignity and order, and that in its final analysis the truth of Mary Phagan's murder may be established, at least to the extent of Frank's real or suspected participation therein.

If Frank should be convicted, that would mean the subsequent indictment and conviction of the negro Conley, as an accessory after the fact.

Conley Indictment May Follow.

If Frank should be found not guilty, that would mean the indictment of Conley, as principal to the murder, in all human probability.

It evidently is the purpose of the State to hold Conley free of indictment, pending the disposition of the charges against Frank. His status as a material witness depends much upon this, of course.

There always is a chance, however, that a Grand Jury may take up a thing of this sort of its own motion, and to that extent there remains the possibility of prior indictment hanging over Conley.

It seems more likely, however, that the case will go to trial about as it shapes up now.

I do not incline to think the State really has any further sensational or particularly effective thing up its sleeve. Neither do I think the defense has.

There may be, on both sides, bits of corroborated evidence or evidence to offset this, that, or the other to come, but in the main I think the public is in possession of all the essential facts in the Phagan case to date.

The public must remember, however, that not all the things it has read in the newspapers, not yet one-half the things, ever will go before the jury trying Leo Frank as competent evidence.

And it is upon the COMPETENT evidence alone that the court will permit Leo Frank to be judged.

For instance, nothing that Mrs. Frank has said in the public prints will go before the jury. A wife is estopped in law from testifying either for or against her husband.

Fomby Woman Rejected.

The Fomby woman already has been rejected as a possible witness against Frank. Her story admittedly is too preposterous even for the State to bother with it further.

How much of Conley's story the jury will hear is entirely problematical.

He will be warned that he need not testify to anything calculated to incriminate himself, and even if he elects to disregard this warning there is much in his statement that likely will go down and out as incompetent or irrelevant.

The ponderous assurances of Frank's guilt, so frequently thundered from police headquarters by Detective Lanford, will, so far as the jury is concerned, not be there. Detective Lanford will not be on the jury—and his opinion as to the innocence or guilt of Frank will not be immediately valuable, therefore.

Frank's own statement, it must be rembered, will be delivered to the jury, not under oath.

The jury will be instructed by the court that it may accept the defendant's statement as the truth in its entirety, and to the exclusion of ALL the sworn testimony, if it sees fit; or it may accept it in part and reject it in part; or it may reject the statement as a whole.

The jury, and the jury ALONE, will be the judge of the facts.

The law—the impersonal law—that the jury will be required to apply to those facts it will get from the court.

It looks, then, as if the Phagan case, getting down to brass tacks, will revolve finally about those persons:

Leo Frank, the defendant; Solicitor Dorsey and Attorney Frank Hooper, representing the State; Luther Z. Rosser and Reuben Arnold, representing the defendant; the judge, the jury and a dozen or so competent and material witnesses.

Order at Last Comes.

So, at last, has order been brought out of chaos, after weeks and weeks of hysteria, stuff and nonsense, passion and prejudice, facts and near-facts, truth and lies, impatience and intolerance—all jumbled into about the worst mess I ever undertook, in my way, to analyze and unravel, in seeking the truth!

Leo Frank will receive a fair trial, and the written and recorded verdict, whatever it may be, will be accepted generally as the truth.

If the jury agrees that Frank is guilty, that verdict will be taken to be a just one. Nothing short of the most sensational and revolutionary new evidence likely would serve to re-establish his good name, once he is convicted in the Superior Court.

On the other hand, if the jury shall agree that Frank is not guilty, I think he will be taken back into the friendly and fair-minded good will of the people of Atlanta, a free and untarnished man, and there likely will come a revulsion of popular feeling in his behalf, that will go far toward offsetting and reconciling him to the horrible ordeal he passed through.

The approaching trial likely will be one of the greatest legal battles ever fought in Georgia.

On the one hand—that of the State—Hugh Dorsey, the Solicitor General, has done the drudgery, and Frank Hooper is to handle the picturesque. Hooper likely will figure much more in the public eye hereafter than Dorsey will, for it will be Hooper's business to paint the rainbow, snatch the stars from the heavens, and open the floodgates of tears—if he can!

On the other hand—that of the defense—Luther Z. Rosser has done the drudgery, and Reuben Arnold will have the delicate task of leading the jury along the primrose path that leads to Frank's acquittal.

All Have Big Reputations.

All of these men are great lawyers, with reputations to sustain, and each one may be depended upon to act a part entirely in keeping with the honorable profession of the law. I do not believe there is sufficient money in Atlanta to secure the services of any one of these men in an unworthy undertaking.

Each one of these men may be depended upon to do his best by his client, and as each one is of the quality I note, a fair trial seems assured.

It is a happy and a consoling circumstance that the trial of Leo Frank is to be presided over by an upright and just judge, argued by upright and honorable attorneys, and a verdict written by twelve "good men and true," as the law—the LAW in all its majesty—directs!

While by no means as spectacular a thing to say as something else might be, it is a matter of deep and abiding significance that Leo Frank, with his life, his good name, and all that he holds most dear at stake, is assured of a fair trial and a just verdict, notwithstanding all the frenzied and sinister detail of irrelevant and incoherent "testimony" and "evidence" set forth here and there, as time has run on since Mary Phagan was slain.

Victory for Society.

In the trial of Leo Frank THE SUPREMACY OF THE LAW will be vindicated beyond carping or cavil—and therein the most tremendous victory to society will be achieved.

Frank Hooper is one of the most experienced prosecuting attorneys in the State. He has served as Solicitor General on one of the most important circuits in Georgia, and his career thereon was entirely to his credit.

He is suave, incisive, deliberate, calm in action and eagle-eyed in seeing a point that may be turned to his client's advantage.

In summing up the case of the State against Leo Frank, Hooper will be at his best. He is a master in presenting his case to the jury for its consideration. I understand he is to be associated soon with Judge Arthur Powell and John D. Little, in Atlanta, in the practice of law. They will make a great team. Hooper is an attorney of the same class and caliber as Powell and Little.

But there to combat the best efforts that Hooper may put forth will stand that remarkable lawyer, Reuben Arnold.

Whatever qualms Frank may feel when he thinks of Hooper, doubtless they are relieved in large measure when he turns his thoughts to Arnold.

Reuben Arnold is a lawyer of constant surprises. Age can not wither him nor custom stale his infinite variety. Frank's case will be presented to the jury as few men could present it, when Arnold undertakes the work.

Convinced of Innocence.

Arnold says he never entered the case until he had convinced himself of Frank's innocence, and I quite believe he speaks the truth. I do not think there is the shadow of doubt either in Arnold's or Rosser's mind that Frank is entirely guiltless of the killing of Mary Phagan.

That Hooper may have some doubts as to the full strength of the State's case against Frank seems likely, for soon after entering the case he said this:

I have not been employed in the case to prosecute Leo M. Frank, but to help find and convict the murderer of Mary Phagan. If the trial proves we are wrong, we will begin work on another angle. We have but one object and idea. It is that justice and the law be vindicated. We are, however, convinced we have a strong case against the accused.

Now, I do not think a manlier thing has been said in all the mass of things that have been said in the Phagan case than the foregoing.

If any person who does not know Frank Hooper has any doubts as to his complete integrity and lofty ideals the statement credited to him herein should remove them. Only a man who wishes to do right could or would say what Hooper said, soon after taking up the State's end of the Phagan case.

The most ardent, if honest, extremes of opinion well may meet on the platform Hooper sets up!

And if everybody in Atlanta will say, as he says, "I want to help find and convict the murderer of Mary Phagan, regardless of whom that murderer may be," everybody will find himself on a platform of decency and fair play—and that's where he ought to wish to find himself.

I have sought, in these articles, neither to prosecute nor to defend Frank. I have sought, in such manner as I might, to help find the murderer of Mary Phagan. I want to see him found and convicted.

I, like Hooper, have desired, above all things, to see JUSTICE AND THE LAW VINDICATED, and I indorse and agree with Hooper's expressed desire that both may be.

Search Will Continue.

If the State fails to convict Frank—the State will turn its eyes elsewhere.

Could any man ask a fairer or squarer promise from Hooper than that?

It merely means that Hooper WILL ACCEPT THE FINDINGS OF THE COURT, after orderly and prescribed procedure, frankly and unquestioningly, as the TRUTH of the matter.

If Frank is guilty, then the law will take its course.

If he is not guilty, he will take his place once more among his fellowmen, as free of stain as any of them.

That's where Hooper stands, and that's where I am satisfied to stand also!

And if somebody, early in the investigation of the Phagan case, had calmed the mad scramble for "clews," "evidence," "testimony" and what not, with the deliberate and convincing words of Frank Hooper, some of the utterly ridiculous theories would never have been evolved and the entire case would have rested upon a basis of sanity, which would have eliminated many of the ugly features.

Happily, however, the chatterboxes and the human phonographs have been given most effective pause in their wild riot of talk, and if the Society for the Suppression of Unnecessary Noises has rounded them up for good and all, so be it, and praise forevermore!

Sanity and THE LAW OF THE LAND have taken the Phagan case in hand, and through these agencies will the truth of the murder of Mary Phagan be set up eventually.

Luncheon Lurch Aid to Digestion

Pre-Prandial Prance Society Fad

Variation of Tango Brings Dancers One Step Nearer Dining Each Step They Take.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The Luncheon Lurch, the latest variation of the Tango and the Turkey Trot, which has seized the society of the Capital, is declared by experts on gastronomy to be the greatest known appetizer and first aid to digestion.

So effective has it been found along these lines that the Martini is now almost unknown on the boards of Washington hosts, while the pepsin tablet supply of the druggists is practically considered worthless stock.

There is a deep method in the Luncheon Lurch. Contrary to the Tango, which is danced after tea, the Lurch is a preprandian pastime. At a given time before the viands are to be served the orchestra strikes up something syncopated.

Guests immediately begin lurching and continue the dance until they have worked up an appetite considered commensurate with the feast about to be served.

Each step carries the dancers nearer the dining room, and observant ones declare that it is an invariable rule that the best trenchermen always dance with a remarkable celerity, while the dyspeptics lurch so slowly that they are to all appearances posing in tableau.

Among the prominent lurchers are Miss Katherine Elkins, Miss Dorothy Williams, Miss Sally Williams, Miss Katherine Britton, Miss Marguerite Barbour and Mrs. James F. Curtis.

$2,000,000 TAX GAIN EXPECTED IN CHATHAM

SAVANNAH, June 28.—That the total tax returns of Chatham County will show an increase for 1913 of close to $2,000,000 is the opinion of Tax Assessor Marcus S. Baker. This will make the total returns for the year over $40,600,000—a new record for Chatham County.

But this increase will have no effect on the tax rate, says Judge Oliver T. Bacon, chairman of the board of county commissioners. The net income from this estimated increase at 77½ cents a thousand is only about $14,000.

ALL WOMEN TO VOTE IN TIME IS SENATE'S IDEA

Even the Most Conservative Members Believe the Fair Sex Will Cast Ballot the World Over.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—That women in all civilized countries will be permitted to vote is regarded as inevitable by the most conservative Senators and Representatives.

It is their opinion that steady progress is being made and that Great Britain, the United States and other leading nations will eventually recognize that further delay is useless.

Two-Thirds Vote Needed.

The resolution proposing an amendment to the Federal constitution under which women would be given the ballot, now awaiting consideration by the Senate, is expected to be passed on at the next session. A two-thirds vote would be necessary for its adoption.

It would require the appoval of sixty-four Senators to make women suffrage operative for submission to the States, so far as the upper branch of Congress is concerned.

The chief handicap preventing woman suffrage lies in the opposition of Southern Congressmen. The votes for the women's movement have made headway in the South. A bitter struggle is in progress in Alabama, where Representative Hobson is seeking the Senatorship, as against Mr. Johnston, on a platform favoring woman suffrage and temperance. Senator Johnston says he will achieve re-election without difficulty.

Have Twenty-Four Votes.

It is figured that these Senators will certainly support the Chamberlain resolution providing for a constitutional amendment permitting women to vote; Ashurst and Smith, of Arizona; Thomas and Shafroth, of Colorado; Borah and Brady, of Idaho; Myers and Walsh, of Montana; Gallinger and Hollis, of New Hampshire; Chamberlain and Lane, of Oregon; Smoot and Sutherland, of Utah; Jones and Poindexter, of Washington; Clark and Warren, of Wyoming; Gore and Owens, of Oklahoma; Ransdell and Thornton, of Louisiana.

This totals but twenty-four of the sixty-four votes necessary in the Senate. In view of recent action in Iowa, Illinois and Kansas it is possible that Senators Cummins, Kenyon, Sherman, Lewis, Bristow and Thompson may be added to the list, making thirty in all. It is claimed that two or three additional votes may come from New England, but no names are suggested.

Oregon's New Law Requiring Health Certificates Held Responsible.

VANCOUVER, WASH., June 28.—The record for marriage licenses issued in one day during the 60 years in which records have been kept was broken here when ten couples secured marriage licenses. Nor is this all.

At the present rate, in fifteen days the greatest month's record will be broken in one-half the time—and all because Oregon passed a law requiring certificates of health from men making application for marriage licenses. Already 58 licenses have been issued this month, the record being 65 for any entire month.

BURN ATLANTA CLEAN, PLAN OF SANITAR YCHIEF

Settlement of Crematory Row Leaves Mayor, Council and Everybody Pleased.

John Jentzen, Sanitary Chief, is the happiest man in Atlanta as a result of the settlement Saturday of the crematory row. Operating his department without an incinerator, he said, was like trying to sail a ship on dry land, and that he had had to bear the brunt of complaints against the situation from thousands of exasperated citizens.

"That decision in the Mayor's office marks a new era in Atlanta," he said. "We shall begin a general clean-up the day the crematory is completed. I understand that that will not be longer than ten days. We shall burn Atlanta pure.

"Let the people take note of these instructions:

Gives Sanitary Rules.

"Keep the lids on garbage cans.

"Pile up the trash in yards and notify the sanitary department to come and get it.

"Don't throw things into streets and alleys.

"Help us put an end to the flies and musquitoes. You know trash breeds them."

The Chief said the new crematory would increase greatly the efficiency of his department and that it would shorten hauls and allow sanitary wagons to make more frequent visits.

He declared it would reduce the death rate and make Atlanta a more pleasant place to live in.

Mayor Well Pleased.

Although Mayor Woodward has been almost unanimously opposed in his attitude by the Council and brought most bitter criticism on himself, he smiled and said he was well satisfied over the outcome.

The Mayor's victory in the Supreme Court caused the price of the incinerator to be reduced from $276,000 to $260,000. His recent firm stand caused him to gain a point of honor.

Council endeavored to avoid allowing him to execute the contract. The concession is that he will execute it, following a special meeting of the Council Tuesday. That point has been the whole cause of the last controversy.

Turkish Bath Cures Rheumatism at Home

Costs But 2c a Bath.

Quickly Cures Kidney Trouble, Nervous Prostration and All Skin Diseases.

The Robinson Thermal or Turkish bath, taken at home, is becoming a rage. Those who have used the bath have been completely carried away with enthusiasm because of the astonishing results obtained.

Well known physicians say that the Robinson Thermal Bath at home is about to become an almost universal conqueror of disease. This is not an exaggeration. Any man or woman can prove its results inside of 24 hours, in some cases 30 minutes.

In cases of rheumatism, especially, the uric acid poison is extracted from the system through the pores, almost as liquids are sucked up through a straw. Drugs merely smother the poison or ease the pain. They do not extract the poison from the body.

Just read this letter:

"I loaned my cabinet to an old friend all crippled up with rheumatism, last May. Feet, legs, and hands badly swollen. He had spent some time at different Hot Springs without relief. A week ago he started in to use the cabinet, taking the steam heat in the morning, and the dry heat at night, before going to bed. He kept this up a week, and yesterday and to-day he was as well as ever.

"GEORGE A. FREEMAN,
"Mgr. Temptation Mining and Milling Company, Silverton, Colo."

Anyone can now take Robinson Thermal baths at home and at a cost of only about 2c a bath. They make the thick, sluggish blood normal, take out the impurities and cure "spring fever" right off. The only way to take these baths is by the use of the Robinson Thermal Bath Cabinet, which is a unique and marvelous invention.

That great book, "The Philosophy of Health and Beauty," retail price $2.00, free at our Main Store upon request for a limited time only. Be sure to get a copy. Also see the interesting demonstration of the Robinson Thermal Bath Cabinets; no obligation to purchase. Jacobs' Pharmacy, Main Store and Laboratory, 8-10 Marietta Street.—Adv.

UNCLE SAM IS NOW GREATEST HORSE BREEDER

Supplies Mounts for the Army From His Virginia Farm and Turns Out Thoroughbreds.

FARMERS ARE HIS PARTNERS

System So Successful That Other Large Studs Will Be Established in the West.

FRONT ROYAL, VA., June 28.—Uncle Sam has recently embarked in the horse business on a gigantic scale. He has started here what is probably the largest horse farm in the world, 5,500 acres, only a few hours' ride from the capital. And this is only the first of his farms. He intends to start several and turn out thoroughbreds by the tens of thousands.

To-day the farm is supplying practically the entire United States Army with its mounts. A short time hence and it will be supplying civilians, and soon, according to Captain Caspar H. Conrad, in charge, and generally acknowledged one of the greatest experts in horse flesh in America, it will be suppyling most of the civilized nations of Europe. And the price—now $144.15—may become even cheaper for Americans.

The farm represents an expenditure of more than $600,000, with some $400,000 to be spent within the next year.

Horses Have Everything.

On the farm are all sorts of buildings, sanitary baths, swimming pools, drinking fountains, resting sheds, pleasure paths and even a gigantic hospital—all for horses. Here and there are huge houses wherein reside men. These men look out for the horses.

They talk of little else. Indeed, it would be strange if the case were otherwise, for there are only 100 of these men, and daily they have to look after from 1,500 to 2,000 horses.

It took a long time to start the horse farm—more than half a century.

One day a few years ago a number of high staff officers of the army, watching a cavalry review, made some rather disparaging remarks concerning the appearance of the horses.

"Some of 'em look like mountain goats, and the rest like buffaloes," said one of the officers, and the remark got to the ears of Captain Conrad, and set him to thinking.

After that Captain Conrad had the approval of the War Department to start the farm. August Belmont made Uncle Sam a present of his six best stallions. Those stallions are known the racing world over, as Henry of Navarre, Octagon, Footprint, Belfry II, Vestibule and Marshall King. The six of them, when but two years old, cost $100,000.

Two More Horses Given.

James Camden, millionaire horseman of Versailles, Ky., heard of Belmont's gift and made Uncle Sam a present of his two famous stallions, Boola Boola and Wheelwright, worth about $25,000. Thus the farm was started.

But even with fifty stallions and mares by the hundred breeding on the farm was too slow. Something had to be done to increase the scope of the work—and the answer was found in a scheme to have Uncle Sam take every farmer in the South into partnership. This was done.

The ultimate plan is to sell the horses at a gigantic auction sale, with an army officer as auctioneer, knocking down the animals to the highest bidder.

Uncle Sam's horse farm is probably the only place in the country where no matter what animal you buy you may rest assured of getting a horse that is perfect. If the animal has the slightest blemish it will not be sold.

"Of course," said Captain Conrad, "we know that in this particular case the scar was due entirely to accident. But the farmer doesn't know it. He might have a mare scarred up purely by accident, but we wouldn't take his word for. We demand perfect mares and colts, so we give perfect stallions."

One Word to Decide Estate Ownership

Will Filed for Probate Causes Legal Discussion of Meaning of "And" and "Or."

WOODBURY, N. J., June 25.—The will of the late Aaron Knisell, of Sewell, was offered for probate in the Surrogate's office. This instrument has raised a contention among the heirs. The will left the entire estate to Mrs. Knisell, who died two weeks before her husband, and it is claimed that its provisions lapsed with her death.

The property was left to Mrs. Knisell "and her heirs." Had it read "or" heirs, it is claimed, the estate would go to her heirs; but, as it says "and" heirs, Knisell's brothers claim the estate. A ruling by the court will be necessary to interpret the instrument.

Evelyn Thaw Tells Her Ambition Will Try Something Worth While Reveals Her Plans to Alan Dale

Evelyn Thaw in the days she took New York by storm.

Evelyn Thaw as she is to-day.

As Miss Nesbit, Now Dancing at the Hippodrome, and Booked for Paris and Vienna.

By ALAN DALE.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—It was "Hullo, Rag-Time," at the Hippodrome that brought Evelyn Thaw within my jurisdiction, as it has brought many others who I never expected to meet.

So, with the open sesame of elusive art as a go-between, "Miss Nesbit," as she is programed here, received me without hesitancy in her rooms at the St. James Hotel, off Piccadilly, and our art robbed me of qualms. It was quite early morning.

Evelyn Thaw wore a loose peignoire of a black, shiny something, slashed at the back with yellow. Her hair was loosely fluffed out; she was devoid of the slightest effort at make-up, her ivory-white face and her unreddened lips looking quite startlingly natural. She was as pretty as any picture of—herself, and though the edge of reluctant youth may have frayed a little, there isn't a shadow of a doubt on the score of Evelyn Nesbit's charm. Never in all the ladies I have professionally met have I found more self-possession, a keener poise and less self-consciousness than in Evelyn Thaw. She made me wonder. She spoke easily, gracefully, reassuringly, without a trace of hesitation or nervousness.

On the Spur of the Moment.

"It was awfully sudden," she said, as we sat opposite each other. "I had no idea of going back to the stage after all these years."

"How many?" I asked. "You need not answer."

"Oh, I'm not like that," she said, with the first wistful smile; "I don't mind recalling anything. The last previous time I appeared on the stage was in 1904 in 'The Wild Rose.'

"Well, on the Olympic, coming over, I met a lot of theatrical people, among them Lee Shubert, Martin Beck and Albert DeCourville. They all advised me to make the break, especially DeCourville, who is manager of the Hippodrome.

"He has just married Shirley Kellogg, by the bye. I thought it over carefully, for I was a bit afraid, you know." She seemed to take it for granted that I knew. I did; I quite understood. "If I had made the break in New York I should have been a 'freak,'" she said. "Oh, there have been other women who have been through trials like mine who first tried New York, and it was hopeless. So when DeCourville telegraphed me at Paris to come at once to London and appear I realized that it was up to me, and I went, afraid, of course, but you know I'm no novice at harrowing experiences."

A Wild Turkey Trot.

"I was determined that nothing should force any attention from me to that sort of thing." She was now an artist before the public, and I was—me.

"I had to do a wild turkey trot with a dancer, and he was hard to find. I had seen Jack Clifford at the Cafe De Paris, and I remembered that he used to dance with Irene Weston, so we engaged him and rehearsed for one week only at the Irish Club, opposite the Hippodrome. Oh! it was terrible work. He throws me around—I am tossed up in the air and I see my heels at an angle I never expected to view them. And I'm an old married woman, with stiff joints."

Evelyn Nesbit laughed. So did I. She was as simple and unaffected as the inevitable school girl. It was impossible not to like her. She amused me a lot.

"They sneaked us on at a Saturday matinee without announcement," she said, "and luck favored me. The turn went well, and we are a hit.

"I'm engaged for six weeks, with an option, and then I go to Paris, Berlin, Vienna, St. Petersburg, Moscow, Copenhagen——"

"And New York?" I asked.

"New York, surely," she replied, smiling, "when I feel that I've put it over, but not until then. Oh, I do want to earn my own living, and the stage is good, and I don't mind hard work. In the old days, when I had nothing on my mind but my hair, I used to shirk rehearsals. Now, I'm Johnny-on-the-spot. I don't mind how much we rehearse. In fact, I rehearse every day. I've always loved dancing, and have studied all the successful dancers. If only I don't get fat like Ethel Barrymore and others."

She Won't Get Fat.

"You couldn't," I opined, for she didn't look the part.

"I won't," she retorted; "it would be a great pity, and I have another ambition that I'll tell you, for it may surprise you. Do you remember what Jerome said about me?"

Again I refused to remember anything.

"Well, he said that there were four great actresses—Sarah Bernhardt, Eleanora Duse, Mrs. Fiske and myself. I don't forget that. Some day I may try to act—to do something worth while, something serious, something emotional. So there you are! You will laugh, because I know you are funny.

"Theatrical people take themselves very seriously, and they can't understand why you don't do the same, but you don't—you can be as funny as you like about me. I sha'n't mind a bit, for I really have a sense of humor, and I'm not very serious." She laughed again, and I was quite disarmed. Evelyn Nesbit had impressed me as I didn't believe I was going to be impressed.

"All I do in London," she said, "is to work and eat good food. I love the food in London. Do go to the Cheshire Cheese and taste the chops. I was there yesterday, and I sat in Dr. Johnson's chair and enjoyed myself hugely. I'm going to get on, and I'm going to surprise everybody. One must have a beginning. Look at Elsie Ferguson. She was the stupidest chorus girl I ever met, but she had big moments, and now she is a very charming actress. Don't forget to write something funny about me, for I shall enjoy it."

But somehow or other, Evelyn Nesbit hadn't appealed to my sense of humor. She was, at least, spontaneous and natural.

BOY, NOT YET 8, TO ENTER HIGH SCHOOL IN FALL

New Mexican Prodigy Received All His Training From Mother. Wonderful Memory.

ROSWELL, N. MEX., June 28.—When the public schools open next fall there will be a new student in the high school department, a boy who has never been to school a single day and who will not at that time have reached his eighth birthday.

This is the boy who, at the age of eighteen months, startled the city of Denver by repeating the names of the Presidents of the United States, and who at the age of five recited several pages from Hiawatha in a school entertainment in Artesia, N. Mex. His name is Raymond Ray. He is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. G. F. Ray, of Roswell.

The mother of this boy, who has been his only tutor since the very earliest day that he could learn, attributes to him none of the characteristics of a prodigy or perhaps of a genius. He has been taught to think, to concentrate his mind, and this training has enabled him to develop a remarkable memory.

He seldom reads an interesting topic more than once in order to commit it to memory, and he studies physiology, arithmetic, grammar, civil government and literature with little aid from his mother. When he enters high school he will take up the study of Latin, algebra, rhetoric, physical geography and ancient history.

Raymond is now studying Spanish, elocution and vocal music. He has some excellent talent in music, and sings with real melody, spirit and understanding.

WHY 200,000 PEOPLE NOW BATHE INTERNALLY

When you are ill, the first step your Physician takes is to clean out the Large Intestine.

He does this because the chances are ten to one that if you had no accumulated waste in the Large Intestine you would not have been ill at all.

The new process of Internal Bathing by means of the "J. B. L. Cascade" thoroughly cleanses the Lower Intestine, removes all waste and poisonous matter, and keeps it as pure as Nature demands it to be for perfect health.

It is Nature's own way of curing Constipation—simply warm water properly applied.

Enlightened physicians everywhere are using and prescribing it—

And instead of waiting to be ill, over 200,000 delighted Americans are warding off disease and increasing their efficiency and energy by its use.

Until recently the "J. B. L. Cascade" has been obtainable only by sending to its inventor, Charles A. Tyrrell, M. D., of New York City.

The demand for it now, however, has become universal, through the recommendations of those who are using it. Call at our main store and we will be glad to show you the "J. B. L. Cascade" and explain it in detail.

We are also distributing a very interesting booklet on internal bathing, called "Why Man of To-day Is Only 50 Per Cent Efficient," which can be obtained on request, without cost. Ask us for it to-day and inform yourself about this safe and sane method of curing constipation without drugs.

Wife Refuses to Stop Husband and Daughter's Eloping

Declares to Humane Society That She Tolerated Act to Preserve Happiness of Her Child.

LOS ANGELES, June 28.—Telling a most unusual story, filled with peculiar complications, in which she accuses her husband of eloping with and marrying his own stepdaughter and then stealing her two children in order to secure property belonging to her, Mrs. Ruella Nicholson has appealed to the police, the humane society and the county officers to help her in locating her husband, Edward Nicholson, and thus get back her children.

How she learned of the fact that her daughter had married her own stepfather, and did not interfere with the marriage because she wanted her child to be happy was a part of the strange story alleged by the woman.

Tired, hungry and practically penniless, the elderly woman appealed to the humane society.

Society Women Sound Knell for Mourning

Boston Leaders Declare That Custom of Donning Black for Dead Is Relic of Barbarism.

BOSTON, June 28.—Society women of Boston have answered the question, "How long should society women wear mourning for their dead relatives?" by saying in substance that mourning should not be worn. It was the consensus of opinion that it is a survival of barbarian days.

Mrs. Charles P. Putnam, wife of Dr. Putnam, said, "It seems to me that there is altogether too much mourning worn considering our present enlightened state of civilization. The world is dark enough as it is without women wearing crepe to make it any more gloomy.

Women Taught to Save Million a Year

Kansas Garbage Cans Are Cheated of Immense Amount by Domestic Science Instruction at School.

TOPEKA, KAN., June 28.—Kansas cheated the garbage cans of the State out of $1,000,000 last year, and the amount will be increased at the rate of $500,000 a year until there will be virtually no wasted foods in the entire State.

That is the aim of the Kansas Agricultural College, and the State is spending $40,000 a year to help.

Seven hundred girls completed the domestic science courses at the agricultural college this week, and the college has just closed its movable cooking schools, which were attended by 11,000 women in the ten weeks in which they were operated.

PET CANARY OF PRETTY WOMAN HALTS VESSEL

Captain of Liner Agrees to Delay Voyage Until She Can Send Home for Bird.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Mrs. Green is young and very charming. That is why the officers of the Vestris, of the Lamport and Holt line, gave her their fullest attention when she announced in plaintive but positive tones that she had lost her Rickey.

"I forgot to bring Rickey," she exclaimed.

"Who's Rickey?" demanded the second officer.

"Rickey's our pet canary," she said, "and I am taking him to South America to my husband. I mean I was to have taken him, but I left him at home."

Brought Food, Forgot Bird.

"It's too late now to get him," said the officer, "for we leave in thirty minutes."

"But I wouldn't dare go without him. I've brought the seed and the cuttlefish and everything, but I forgot the bird."

"Where do you live?" asked the officer.

"Mrs. G. F. Green, 59 West Fifty-third Street," was the reply, and the officer solicited the assistance of H. S. Damage, the line's passenger agent. After consultation with the Vestris captain it was agreed to hold the vessel until ten minutes after five o'clock—ten minutes later than her schedule called for—and Mr. Damage and Mrs. Green sought a telephone.

Bird's Owner In Hysterics.

To an agent of a taxicab company the young woman explained that she wanted to go to the Fifty-third Street number and get a canary bird.

But no canary bird bearing taxicab arrived at the pier by ten minutes after five o'clock, and Mrs. Queen was in a state of hysteria as she watched the sailors haul off the gang plank.

Just as the Vestris was swinging at the end of the pier and before the last spring line was cast off the taxicab arrived. With the bewildered canary in its cage one of Mrs. Green's friends ran to the end of the pier and fastened the cage to a piece of rope. Then, very slowly and with due reverence—for Mrs. Green's brimming eyes were upon him—a sailor hauled the line with the cage attached over the side.

Woman Loves Mouse; Eats Meals With Him

Pet Comes Daily to Dine With Hotel Employees, and Girl Feeds Him From Hand.

CINCINNATI, June 28.—It is an old saying that all women are afraid of mice, but one has at last been found who is not afraid, and even says she likes them.

She is Miss Ella Eversfield, an operator at the Grand Hotel, who takes her meals with her favorite mouse every day. The employees of the hotel have a private dining room, and some time ago a mouse was discovered there. At the time Miss Eversfield had not learned to love mice and she probably screamed, but the mouse was game and stuck it out, and, having learned the meal hours, he insisted on putting in his appearance every day, until finally the employees learned to consider him as one of their number, and now he eats his meals from the hand of Miss Eversfield.

Hibbs, of Bristol, to-day started suit against the Trenton and Mercer County Traction Company for $10,000. Mrs. Hibbs was injured in Trenton when she attempted to cross a street in front of a car.

NEW ANSLEY HOTEL GIVES MOST MODERN HOSTELRY OF SOUTH TO ATLANTA

No Detail Has Been Spared to Make It Unsurpassed for the Traveling Public and People of City—Formal Opening Monday.

Machinery and Equipment Latest Devices for Aid of Sanitation and Comfort—Mural Decorations Picture Events of Georgia.

Only to those who "put up" after Monday at the Hotel Ansley will it be given in fullest measure to say, with Shenstone, that they have "found life's warmest welcome at an inn."

At least, the builder and the lessee and the press agent have endeavored to make it even so, and the very few favored persons permitted to inspect the building and its appointments in advance of the opening agree they planned wisely and builded well.

When the Ansley, Atlanta's newest hostelry, opens its doors to guests on Monday, it will be unexcelled among the inns of the country for efficiency, service, accommodations, equipment and modernity of its appointments. No detail was overlooked in the planning; no expense was spared in the building.

Banquet Hall Seats 500.

With its banquet room seating 500, its rathskeller accommodating 300 and its hundreds of rooms supplied with fresh filtered air continuously; with its costly historical mural decorations, each a work of art, the sumptuous furnishings of its rooms and suites and its perfect service system, the Ansley will be without a superior for business, conveniences and safety.

As "Marse" Henry Watterson expressed it, at no place "on the Rambla and in the Ring, in Piccadilly and the Corso, beneath the colonnades of the Rue de Rivoli of Paris and 'Unter den Linden' of Berlin—indeed, all the way between Chicago and Cannebiere, including many nooks and corners of little old New York," can the man or woman with a trunk and a handbag live higher, sleep safer and spend less than at the Hotel Ansley.

Two well-known quotations imprinted on the tapestry will greet the eye of all who pass the portals of the Hotel Ansley. The first one is the hotel man's favorite verse, from Shenstone, as follows:

Whoe'er has traveled life's dull round,
Where'er his stages may have been,
May sigh to think he still has found
Life's warmest welcome at an inn.

The next is a Scriptural quotation, taken from Hebrews, and the Ansley manageemnt promises to apply the precept and the compliment to every guest alike. Here it is:

"Forget not to show love unto strangers, for thereby some have entertained angels unawares."

Indicate Spirit of Hotel.

These two familiar quotations are printed across the underbeam of the winding marble stairways in the Ansley foyer. They are intended to indicate the spirit in which guests should apply and expect to be received.

Appearance of the lobby is enhanced by three historical paintings on tapestry, each 12 by 10 feet, situated on the upper mezzanine floor and facing the Forsyth Street entrance. The paintings recall important historical happenings in Georgia.

The first panel depicts the meeting of General Oglethorpe and Tomochichi at Savannah, May 21, 1733. The next represents John Wesley teaching the Indians under the oaks of St. Simons, and the third shows the burning of the Yazoo fraud papers at the state house in Louisville, Jefferson County, in the year 1796.

The papers were ignited by means of a magnifying glass and the sun's rays, showing that the fire which destroyed such an infamy should come from Heaven.

On the ground floor are a dozen or more other paintings of historical interest.

Dining Room Is Italian.

The dining room of the Ansley is known as the Italian room, on account of its architecture and mural paintings. The latter consist of the Vatican gardens, showing the cupola of St. Peter's in the distance; the garden of Villa Borghese in Florence, the garden of Villa Lante, the Hercules fountain in the garden of Villa Reale of Florence, and a view of Venice canals, all of which are painted on canvases, each 12 by 10 feet.

The rathskeller, one of the largest and most luxurious in the South, is remindful of college life. Its walls are decorated with portraits of the seals of the leading Georgia colleges, interlaced with varicolored bands waving over a golden background.

The waiting room is trimmed and wainscoted with Georgia sycamore. A distinctive feature of this room, indeed, of the hotel is a full size true-to-life portrait of Lieutenant General William Tecumseh Sherman, beneath which is the following inscription:

"Under whose orders Atlanta was burned, and who said war is hell."

Old Photographs Reproduced.

Actual 1865 photographs are reproduced, showing Atlanta before and after the famous conflagration. On other panels of the writing room are the Great Seals of Atlanta and the State of Georgia. Those who have seen this room are unstinted in their praise of its historical interest and value.

The Ansley equipment for cleaning silverware and dishes is unexcelled. The silverware will be cleaned by chemically generated electricity, made by water, soda and salt.

Dishes will be cleansed and sterilized by powerful streams of hot water thrown against them while incased in a metal washing machine.

The kitchen of the Ansley is replete with modern machinery and other implements for prompt and efficient service. Its appointments are products of as great attention to detail as was given the office, the rathskeller or any other part of the hostelry.

Five Lang ranges form a battery kept at even temperature by a single furnace. The bake ovens are built on the skyscraper plan—four stories high—thus utilizing space and insuring uniform results. The meat department is equipped with a slicing machine, insuring uniform-sized slices without rough edges.

Has Own Ice Plant.

The Ansley has the best equipped ice and refrigerating plant in Atlanta. It is a duplicate affair with a capacity of fourteen tons a day. The cold storage room could accommodate a carload of meat.

From a service bar in the basement all orders will be filled for the rathskeller, private dining rooms and guests' apartments, thus keeping the waiters out of the main buffet, which opens on Forsyth Street.

Distinctively a unique feature for any hotel is the sanitary bathing subbasement for the hotel's servants. Each compartment is equipped with lockers, and all waiters, cooks, bellboys, porters, etc., will be required to take a shower bath before starting each day's work.

Not the least attraction of the Ansley is its contemplated scale of charges. Rooms with running water and private toilet will cost $1 a day, rooms with connecting bath $1.50, with private bath $2, $2.50 and $3. Club breakfasts will be served for 25 cents and up, lunch for 50 cents from 12 till 2 o'clock, and 6 to 8 o'clock dinner for $1.

Indian Girl Writes Opera on Sioux Life

Zitkala Sa Composed "The Sun Dance"—Gave It on Reservation.

SALT LAKE CITY, June 28.—On the Uintah reservation at Vernal, Utah, nearly 100 miles from a railroad, an Indian girl has written an opera, with her people as the theme and motif. It is one thing to write an opera and another to have it produced. Zitkala Sa, a full-blooded Sioux, has accomplished both these things.

When "The Sun Dance" was sung in Vernal, Indians and whites drove in from 40 miles around to hear it; and, having heard it, they pronounced it a triumph. Efforts are being made to have the opera sung in Salt Lake City during the week of the National Education Association, July 5 to 11.

"The Sun Dance," as it was produced at Vernal in March, was not altogether the work of Kitkala Sa and her copper-hued brethren of the Uintah reservation. Professor William F. Hansen, of the faculty, and white as well as Indian students of Uintah Academy played important roles in the preparation and singing of the piece. It was, in fact, part of the academy work.

12,000 Drinks in Five Years Basis of Suit

Wife Declares Husband Protected Himself With Walking Stick in Driving Rain Storm.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Twelve thousand drinks, ranging from simple mixed potations to fancy concoctions, is the record which Mrs. John Barry Sears posts up against her husband in five years of married life.

Mrs. Sears, who is suing for divorce, said Mr. Sears started his career of conviviality during his honeymoon and has kept it up.

In one instance, according to Mrs. Sears, her husband had come home in a driving rain.

"He carried his walking stick elevated above his head," she testified, "and held his umbrella closed in his hand. He was soaking wet, but did not know it."

Youth Likes Books On Heavy Subjects

Oregon Freshman Reads of Social Science, Philosophy and Religion.

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, EUGENE, June 28.—Max H. Sommer, a freshman in the University of Oregon, registered from Portland, has a record for assiduous reading during the past collegiate year. According to the report of Librarian Douglass, Sommer's card shows that he has taken out 89 volumes, the majority of which would be classed as "heavy reading."

Of the 89 volumes perused by this freshman, 47 are devoted to social science, 28 are classed as pure literature, 5 are works of history and biography, 2 are of a philosophical and religious nature and 4 deal with journalism.

Oregon Governor Opposed to Autos

Declares State Appropriation Would Have Made Him Travel Like 'Piker.'

SALEM, OREG., June 28.—Despite rumors to the effect that he would be a candidate for re-election, Governor West positively announces that he will not be a candidate.

The Governor said that the financial drain on him was large, particularly his traveling expenses. The State now provides $1,000 for the traveling expenses of the Governor when on the State's business, but until two years ago only $500 a year was provided. The Governor declared that he could not live like a "piker" when away from home, and the expenses of many of his trips were paid by himself.

Governor West said that he had never bought an automobile because he did not want one, wouldn't have one if somebody would make him a present of it, couldn't operate it if he had it, and, above all, could not afford a machine.

DANCING MASTERS DECLARE TURKEY TROT IS IMMORAL

ASBURY PARK, June 28.—The "turkey trot" is an immoral dance in the opinion of members of the American National Association, masters of dancing, in session here, and at today's meeting the delegates were urged to co-operate with local authorities in banishing the figure that is fast becoming the rage.

The "tango" was not treated so severely. If properly taught, the masters believe, it may be danced.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Miss Jessie Ackerman, the woman champion globe-trotter, arrived here to-day from an eight years' tour around the world, her eighth globe-girdling trip in twenty years. She has broken the woman's record, with 381,000 miles to her credit.

On this trip she visited fifty-two countries and experienced every kind of ancient and modern travel.

Miss Ackerman said the happiest and most professional women are in Australia.

Health Board Posts Weekly Bath Order

Canton, Ohio, Folks Must Get in Tub at Least Once a Week Authorities Declare.

CANTON, O., June 28.—Canton folks must bathe at least once a week, and "all over," at that. The board of health has said so.

In order that none can misunderstand, the board has arranged to post in every home where soap and water are believed to be at a premium a set of rules printed in five languages and specifying $25 and costs as punishment of any one who neglects the weekly cleanup.

DIVA BELIEVES BABIES BEST, FARM LIFE NEXT

Schumann-Heink, Who Has Just Passed Her Fifty-second Birthday, Purchases Big Tract.

SAN DIEGO, CAL., June 28.—"Yes, now I am a farmer; also I am a mother, and I have just had my fifty-second birthday."

It was Mme. Schumann-Heink who spoke. Wreathed in smiles and radiating health—the great artist, accompanied by her youngest child and most beautiful daughter, descended from an incoming train to begin a six-month vacation here.

She had just completed her longest American tour and returns with the greatest profits made by any artist in concert this season.

Last year Mme. Schumann-Heink bought 3,000 acres here. She plans to make ranches with gardens, barren wastes into orchards and her rancho the garden spot of America.

"Farming," enthused Madame, "next to the rearing of babies, is the most interesting work in the world."

"But the farming, madame, surely you will not hoe?"

"Look at these two hands. I ask you, do they not appear capable? I have raised and worked for my children and they are yet strong—nicht?" Madame held her pink palms upward. One of the most convincing proofs of what she said was their appearance. The fingers are long and slender and young and strong enough to be envied by any woman half the diva's age.

And this can also be said truthfully of her face and form. Mme. Schumann's flamed with health.

"Yes, I shall be getting out and digging like a regular farmer. Oh, that is nothing to dig," she stated. "Once I made a garden at my New York home.

"Ach, yes, it is good to grow fruit, but it is better to be the mother of babies."

Babies Saved From Bolt by Feather Bed

Children Are Found Unhurt in Mattress After Room Is Wrecked by Lightning.

NEW YORK, June 28.—A feather mattress saved two children of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Johnson on the Peter Cortelyou farm, at Franklin Park, near New Brunswick, N. J., when a bolt of lightning struck their bed. The parents were awakened by a tremendous crash and a shriek from the children in an adjoining room. A flash of lightning just as they reached the room revealed a big hole in the roof and one in the floor.

The father obtained a lamp and found the bedstead shattered to pieces. Securely rolled up in the feather mattress, however, were the two little ones, almost suffocated with heat but unhurt.

SWEETPEAS IMPORTED BY AUSTRIAN EMPEROR

Special Cable to The American.

VIENNA, June 28.—Sweetpeas, which were practically unknown in Austria only a few years ago, are now prominent in the Imperial Gardens at Schonbrunn.

The aged Emperor Francis Joseph is the first in Austria to "take up" the sweetpea. The director of the Imperial Gardens was sent to London and brought specimen plants back with him. Now the tables at the castle at Schonbrunn are decorated with sweetpeas in one color or at most two. The Emperor prefers pink and white to other combinations.

Chief's Gold Badge Found to be Nickel

New Head of Police Department Finds That Predecessors Had Worn Base Metal Insignia.

PASADENA, June 28.—"Silver Threads Among the Gold," merrily whistled newly appointed Chief of Police W. S. McIntire as he scraped off the gold from the badge that was turned over to him by his predecessor, W. F. Wood, who resigned from the office.

When Wood resigned he presented his successor with the badge containing the words, "Chief of Police, Pasadena." On making a close inspection of the badge, which had long borne a reputation of being solid gold, the new chief observed that it was somewhat tarnished.

A cleanser was then applied, with the result that the badge in a few minutes was a shining nickel-plated star and greatly similar to the other badges worn by the balance of the police department.

Free Market Starts To Cut Cost of Living

San Jose, Cal., Plans To Do Away With Profit Made by Middle Man.

SAN POSE, CAL., June 28.—San Jose hit the high cost of living a solar plexus blow to-day when, under the direction of the city administration, a free market was opened in South Market Street at the City Hall Park.

A score of produce wagons came for the opening, and long before the selling day was over every scrap of salable goods had been disposed of and a crowd clamored for a chance to purchase.

Market Master Joseph Napoli declares that the first day's business demonstrated that producers received 25 per cent more for their sales than they could get from the middle man and that buyers saved a minimum of 25 per cent by doing business directly with the producers.

CONVICTS DINE IN HOTEL THEN SEE MOVING PICTURE

COLUMBUS, O., June 28.—Five penitentiary prisoners, serving sentences ranging from manslaughter to pocket picking, were taken from their cells by an official of the State Board of Administration and treated to a banquet at one of the large hotels. Following the banquet the prisoners were taken to moving picture shows and given an entertainment which they will long remember.

PREACHER DIVORCES HIS WIFE.

OMAHA, NEBR., June 28.—The Rev. F. P. Jolly, formerly of Joliet, Ill., was granted a divorce from his wife, the grounds being extreme cruelty. Mrs. Jolly is now living in Joliet.

JAP EMIGRANTS NOW COLONIZING BRAZILIAN LANDS

1,500 Arrivals But Vanguard of Orientals to Be Sent to South America.

SEATTLE, WASH., June 28.—How Japan is colonizing Brazil was given in detail here with the arrival of the Japanese steamship Sanuki Maru.

Fifteen hundred Japanese emigrants were landed at Santos, Brazil, May 15. They are the vanguard of a great population to be sent to South America to become a part of the first permanent Japanese colony in Brazil under the Sao Paulo colonization agreement recently entered into between Japan and Brazil.

The first award of territory comprises approximately 150,000 acres of agricultural land.

Another Japanese Brazilian colonization enterprise has been completed and passengers of the Sanuki say that the two Governments have arranged for the concession of a considerable area of fertile country which will be settled by Japanese. Settlers for this colony will leave Japan about the end of the present year.

Japanese contract labor is now being sent into South Africa and both Brazil and Peru are being supplied with coolies, who leave Japan under contract with various South American industrial organizations.

CONTESTANTS WORKING HARD FOR MORE VOTES

Manager of Pony Race Advises Girls and Boys to Use Follow-Up System.

SYSTEMATIC WORK WINS

Shetlands Are Growing Fat and Strong at Loomis Avenue Stable Where They Are Kept.

The last week of the "clubs of five" bonus offer in The Georgian and American pony contest begins with all contestants straining hard to take advantage of the benefit to be gained by getting subscriptions before the time limit is up.

Standings published in The American show great gains, but they are small compared with the leaps forward which will be shown when the bonus votes are reckoned up for publication in next Wednesday's Georgian. The contest manager believes it will take the office force all of the night of July 5 to make the proper entries.

There also is a bonus of 50,000 votes for the first $30 turned in for subscriptions by any of the contestants. This offer may be withdrawn at any time.

Use Follow-Up System.

The contest manager wishes to repeat his suggestion that contestants take a leaf from the books of the successful business man and institute a "follow-up" system. A list of those whose subscriptions expire soon should be made, and all such subscribers visited with a request for a renewal. Nine times out of ten, a renewal is easier to get than the first subscription, for at the end of a short trial the subscriber generally gets to like The Georgian and American so well that he wants to continue.

It is systematic work of this sort which counts for more than the spurts of a day or two, which, while they may yield remarkable results, are not frequent enough to build up totals to the point where the contestant can feel sure of a pony.

None Sure of Winning.

No contestant has a right to feel sure of winning as yet. There is not a boy or girl in the race who can not be passed by an energetic rival, and some who are leading now have a very poor start, indeed.

Meanwhile, the ponies are "eating their heads off" at 55 Loomis Avenue, where their future owners are invited to call and see them. All are rounding into great shape, and they are prettier every day. It is going to be a hard task for the winners to pick the ponies they like best from the splendid bunch The Georgian and American have bought.

"I subscribed to The Georgian and American a week ago, and the paper has not begun to come to my home yet," is a complaint heard every now and then.

Usually it develops that the subscriber gave his money to one of the contestants, and that the contestant is "holding back."

This is poor policy, particularly if it is a short-term subscription, for when a contestant treats a subscriber in this way the man is not going to be as willing to give the contestant his renewal.

"Don't hold back," is the advice of the contest manager—and he knows best.

BONUS OFFER IN PONY CONTEST GIVES 1 WEEK MORE OF OPPORTUNITY

Wanting to win and working to win differ widely. Working to win is what counts, and working to win now, while the special bonus vote offers are in effect in The Georgian and American pony contest.

July 4 means more than cannon crackers, picnics and general celebrations to the pony contestants. It means, to them, the end of one of the bonus offers, and July 4 is little more than a week away.

Clubs of five subscriptions, yearly, half-yearly, or for three months, bring great rewards until the expiration of the period thus limited. And "when the polls close" for these club bonus votes the office force of the contest manager expects an all-night session reckoning up the strength of the many candidates.

Some have brought in five subscriptions at a time to take advantage of the bonus. Others have brought them in one, two or three at a time. In either case, the clubs will be credited accurately. And overnight the standings will seem to have doubled, though the bonus votes represent weeks of work.

The ponies now are at 55 Loomis Avenue, where contestants are welcome. If they arrive at the right time they will see the ponies being exercised.

Fortune in Gold Awaits Claimants

Insane Kansas Woman Leaves Bag of Nuggets and Dust Worth $10,000.

HUTCHINSON, KANS., June 28.—A bag of gold nuggets and gold dust worth $10,000 awaits any heirs who may be found to the estate of Mrs. Ann M. Bernhart, who died recently in Davenport, Iowa, according to the announcement of G. M. Duckworth, administrator.

Several years ago Mrs. Bernhart was adjudged of unsound mind. Duckworth was named her guardian. The cottage here where she lived alone was closed and she went to an asylum. Upon her death Duckworth thoroughly searched her cottage. The nuggets and dust in small bags were found secreted in the dwelling.

WHAT ATLANTA MANUFACTURERS AND JOBBERS ARE DOING

MANUFACTURES DINNER PLANNED FOR EVE OF 4TH

New Ansley Hotel Will Serve Atlanta Factory Owners to the Number of 200.

HOME EXHIBIT PLANS TOPIC

Brooks Morgan Has Definite Proposals for Acceptance or Rejection—Pledges Desired.

Atlanta manufacturers, to the probable number of 200, will gather on the evening of July 3 at the Ansley Hotel for a dinner.

The object of the dinner is to discuss the proposed permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods, and at the same time, to discuss the advisability of holding the annual temporary exhibit, such as was held last year at the time of the Southern Merchants' Convention.

The dinner had been set for June 24, but the unavoidable absence from the city of Brooks Morgan necessitated a postponement.

The new date was set at an informal conference of Mr Morgan, Wilmer L. Moore and Walter G. Cooper held Wednesday.

Invitations to the big "Manufacturers' Dinner" will be sent out at once, and a general response is expected.

At the dinner, Mr. Morgan will lay before the manufacturers definite proposals for lease or purchase of buildings suitable for the installation of a manufacturers' exhibit. It will, in brief, be a "show down." The permanent exhibit project has been gone over thoroughly. The manufacturers have seen Chattanooga's display, and they have learned in detail of New Haven's success. There has been plenty of time for them to make up their minds. At this dinner they are expected to signify what they intend doing.

If, as is expected, the will of the manufacturers is seen unanimously in favor of the exhibit, a start will be made. But the backers of the project do not wish to start unless they have assurance of 200 exhibitors and 40,000 or 50,000 feet of floor space.

Strenuous Work Done Preparing for Convention.

When the four or five thousand merchants from all over the South gather in Atlanta for their convention, during the first two weeks of August, it is doubtful if any of them will be able to realize the care and effort that has been expended to make their meeting a success.

For instance, one energetic committee has been toiling throughout the hot week in an effort to raise funds for the entertainment of the visitors. As a result of their conscientious endeavor, the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association sees its way clear, as to finances, to play host to the gathering.

Another committee has been hard at work preparing the program. The program is to be an elaborate affair. Three or four topics a day will be discussed, and most of the discussion will be in the shape of five-minute addresses. The traveling men are doing yeoman's work in finding the good speakers scattered throughout the territory, men who have opinions worth hearing and experience likely to be helpful to other merchants in their lines.

Moving Big Concern Takes Almost Week

Dougherty-Little-Redwine Co. Get to Temporary Quarters by Dint of Hard Work.

Almost a week has been required for moving the Dougherty-Little-Redwine Company from its old home in North Pryor Street to temporary quarters at 30-32 South Pryor Street. It is estimated that about forty boxcar loads of goods were moved, the stock being valued at $150,000.

"That amount of silks would not make much of a showing, but when it comes to underwear, it is a different story," remarked J. Little.

Jordan Thinks Europe's Land Banks Ideal for South

Cheap Loans on Farm Lands Spell Financial Independence for Cotton Grower, He Says.

Special Cable to The American.

By COLONEL HARVIE JORDAN.

(Member of the American Farm Credits Commission and President of the Southern Cotton Association)

OLDENBERG, GERMANY, June 28.—The capitalization of Southern cotton growers through the mortgage bank system, giving them mortgage loans at low interest with easy payments, would completely reorganize the cotton-growing industry of the South. I am convinced that the land mortgage business in America can be systematized along the lines of similar mortgage systems in Europe.

If this is done it will bring a new era of prosperity to the South and greatly increase the cash returns from cotton, which now represent practically the entire balance of trade of the United States.

Southern cotton growers to-day are just one year behind financially. They have been behind since the Civil War.

The curse of the cotton farmers is the store lien system, under which they are obliged each spring to purchase their supplies on credit from the supply merchants. Frequently farmers pay 50 per cent or more in excess of the cash price of goods for the privilege of this credit. Moreover, the supply merchants secure absolute control over the farmers.

Marketing Is Hurried.

The cotton crop has to be marketed as soon as harvested. Farmers have practically no control over the marketing. This is because they have no financial independence. The American commission has studied the mortgage systems which place European farmers in far stronger positions as borrowers than our own farmers. In America we still are clinging to the antiquated practice of forcing short-time loans on the agriculturist.

European farmers borrow through an intermediary society and enjoy as strong positions as any railroad or municipality. If our Southern farmers mortgage their land they must pay back the entire principal in lump sum in a few years, else pay a costly commission for renewal. So long as this is true naturally the farmers won't mortgage their land until actually pressed to the wall.

In contrast to this European farmers repay their loans in small annual installments. So long as they meet their interest payments they can never be sold out. Their entire payments for both interest and principal amount to less than our farmers frequently are required to pay for interest alone.

Cash Basis Possible.

If Southern farmers can get a device to act as their agent in borrowing and can capitalize their land holdings on terms that will permit them to repay little by little, we can put the cotton-growing industry of the South on a cash basis. This would enable our farmers to buy on a cash basis and secure financial independence. It would break the power of the supply merchants. It would be the surest way to a New South. A New South would mean prosperity to the nation.

There is no theory in this proposition. I have studied these mortgage systems here. They are straight business enterprises that we Americans can adopt perhaps improve upon. The Legislature of every State in the Union should take this matter under consideration.

When currency reform is enacted in the United States this should form part of the program. Farmers never up to this time had any consideration whatsoever given their requirements as borrowers. In currency or banking legislation they have been left to get along as well as they could. This has been largely responsible for the financial positions of the Southern farmers to-day.

Men's Hats For Next Fall Pert Affairs, Blue and Green

Fall, 1913, hats for men are being shown by jobbers in Atlanta.

Take them big and large, they deserve the name the women give their headgear—they are "creations."

One "creation," for instance, is green velour, with a little bow at the back, and a button-hole stitched edge.

Brown-Perryman-Greene Company say velours, particularly in blue and green, are "the thing" for fall. Velours retail from $3.50 to $7.50.

The "Trooper" shape is proper. To make a "Trooper" shape, punch out a crown, then strike it with the edge of the hand, lengthwise. That's all.

Another "creation" particularly fetching is blue, with red, white and blue stitching which runs up and down the crown and around and around the brim. A button is in the geometrical center of the crown.

Perhaps the best of the bunch, to many tastes, is a green felt hat, "Trooper" shape, of course, with "zebra" finish. "Zebra" finish means that it is 'self-striped." Alternate stripes are smooth, the others are unfinished—fuzzy, in a word. The stripes are something less than half an inch wide, and run vertically on the crown. The hat really is not "freaky." It is attractive.

Other soft hats are lined with gay silk, have welt edges, or are otherwise adorned.

Brand-new is a chinchilla hat. Corduroy and cloth of all kinds will be much in vogue this autumn.

Caps promise to continue their unprecedented popularity. They come in all patterns—one, for instance, a "cubist" design in maroon and tan.

For the man who will wear a derby, regardless, it may be news to know that the derby crowns will be a bit higher this fall, the brims about the same. Crowns seem to be working back from the flat effect of a year back to the old-fashioned high crown. They change a bit each year.

Boys—the little fellows—wear telescope shape hats, while you can't give them to their elders.

Of course, this takes no account of the "staples"—the conservative styles which never change.

LUMBER SALES SHOW BUILDING KEEPS UP WELL

Dealers in Supplies Tell of Big Things in Prospect for the Coming Autumn.

Dealers in lumber, brick, cement, plaster and building supplies report that Atlanta is going straight ahead in its expansion.

Unanimously they report good trade. One particularly encouraging feature, according to their expressions, is the steady increase in the number of small residences, homes costing between $3,000 and $4,000, seeming to predominate.

Furthermore, building supplies dealers are unanimous in saying that there are great plans in store for fall. If all rumors are to be believed, property owners are contemplating improvements at almost a "boom" rate as soon as summer is past.

Paint dealers also are cheerful. They report contractors figuring on work far ahead, and also general activity in refurnishing buildings which are not new, but which are being remodeled to meet the city's growing needs.

Expressions from dealers in these lines follow:

V. H. Kriegshaber: "Our observation is that there is a good deal of building contemplated—in the wind, so to speak. When conditions settle down this fall, we look for an excellent trade in building supplies."

Randall Bros.: "Our business is better than it ever has been in lumber and building material. The increase has come from the increase in medium priced houses, residences to cost between $3,000 and $4,000.

"It is hard to tell about the fall, but we look for a good trade. Prices are a little lower. This always is the case in June and July. There will be a reaction in August and September, and quotations will be stronger. This is the history of every year."

Willingham-Tift Lumber Co.: "Business has been quite brisk up to the present time, with particular activity in the erection of small houses. This looks to us like the right time to build, for prices, in our opinion, are at the bottom."

Sciple Sons: "Business is fairly good at the present time, and it is picking up rapidly. We look for a very good trade for the rest of the year. The market is steady, still prices are reasonable and it is a good time to build. We notice a revival particularly in the erection of small houses."

Dozier & Gay: "From the number of contractors who are figuring on painting to be done between now and fall, we look for a big business.

"Every indication is that a large number of new homes are to be built, and there are rumors of several large buildings for wholesale houses and small factories.

Trained Men Great Need Of Business World To-day

Germany and other European countries are far ahead of the United States in the matter of commercial education. This point was brought out in a speech before the annual convention of the National Association of Credit Men at Cincinnati.

"The annual losses by reason of failures in the United States amount now to some $200,000,000," said Mr. Gaehr, "or over $2 per capita. To put it concreately, the national annual loss from bad debts equals one-half the estimate cost of the Panama Canal.

"Professor Munsterberg of Harvard University observes that a great difficulty of our educational system has been that it does not teach a man to find himself, and when he learns his strong and his weak points, his real inclinations toward and qualifications for a pursuit in life, it is usually too late.

"We find the highway of commerce and life marked with sad monuments of men crushed under the wheels of progress who would have made a success in life had they had the proper direction and counsel and had they been taught to fashion their thoughts to fruitful issues, men who could and should have been helped to usefulness.

"A further difficulty is that the vocational demands are not sufficiently fixed and brought to the attention of the younger generations. They know comparatively little of the inner labors, the inner values, and inner difficulties of various professions and callings.

"Then, too, in many cases trivial chance influences decide the choice of a vocation. Young men often drop into a place, rather than deliberately choosing business as a life vocation.

"The need of better trained men, especially commercially, made itself felt several years ago, and as a result a number of universities and colleges of high standing organized schools of commerce, Harvard University ranking its School of Business Administration as one of the graduate schools. Several cities have established high schools of commerce, yet the schoolmaster and the business man are still too far apart.

Auto Sales Gaining Over Last Season

Business Gradually Working to Credit Basis—Men Buy Cars as They Buy Homes.

"So far as we are able to judge from the business done by our clients, automobile sales in Atlanta have been exceptionally good for the period which began January 1," says Joseph N. Moody, of the Auto Credit Sales Company.

"The automobile firms whom we represent as a credit clearing house report an increase over last season.

"Sales probably would be larger yet if we did not check them. Amusing as the idea may seem, we are in a sense philanthropists, for we are saving the people from themselves, in this way: Suppose a man with moderate income tries to buy an auto on time. We investigate carefully. If he has a family of girls, let us say, all living at home, and no income but his salary, we turn him down. If he had a family of boys, all working and able to help purchase a car, all well and good.

"The automobile business is working more and more toward a time basis. A man buys his motor car now just as he would buy his home—on payments. I believe the future will see 90 per cent of the business done in that way."

City Salesmen Take Outing; Truce Kept

Jobbers Agree Not to Scout for Business During Absence of Their Representatives.

City salesmen will be conspicuous by their absence this week. The grocer or dry goods merchant who needs to replenish his stock must telephone to his jobber. The jobbers have agreed not to solicit business for the week, but just to take what comes to them in the natural course of events.

The reason for this strange pact is that the jobbers are on their annual outing at the Isle of Palms, near Charleston, S. C.

In order not to take advantage of their absence, fifty or more jobbers signed a formal agreement of neutrality for the week, and O. T. Camp, president of the Retail Grocers' and Butchers' Association, sent a letter to all members of his organization acquainting them with the state of affairs, and asking that they fill urgent needs only, by using the tele-

SELLING NOTES.

The heavy demand for sport coats this season is helping the dress goods trade over some rough spots. Chinchillas and eponges are used principally in the manufacture of these garments, and makers and wholesalers of these fabrics are doing a good business in them.

The firmness of 39-inch, 80 squares, is one of the features of the print cloth market at the moment. Printers have taken this construction in good quantities, and as a result of curtailed production by the mills the supply has fallen somewhat behind the demand.

A thing that is regarded as a good omen for the future of the men's wear fabrics trade is the promptness with which the manufacturing clothiers are settling up their accounts with the mill agents. In view of losses sustained by the clothiers as a result of the strike earlier in the year this action on their part is said to indicate the thorough soundness of the clothing industry.

WHAT DOES IT OFFER?

That's the question every wise merchant mostly considers in selecting his shoe market.

Briefly, here are the advantages offered by the RED SEAL Shoe Factory, located right here in Georgia, to the merchants of the South:

1st. The quickest and most convenient service. Our mail order system will enable you to keep your stock sized up from week to week, to do a bigger business on a smaller stock. It eliminates any accumulation of dead styles, and our nearness to you means quite a saving in freights.

2nd. RED SEAL Shoes are the best advertised in the South. Buying a well-advertised line is the next thing to buying a well-established business.

3rd. Style and Values. It would be easy to say right here "they're the best in the world." Any manufacturer can and most of them do modestly claim that about their goods. It doesn't prove anything. We simply invite comparison on style, quality and value between RED SEAL Shoes and any competitive line on the market.

Thousands of money-making Red Seal dealers and millions of satisfied wearers make us confident of your verdict.

A postal will bring catalog or salesman without obligation on your part.

RUSSIA SEEKING U. S. FRIENDSHIP IN NEW TREATY

Renewal of Pact Abrogated by Congress Is Proposed by Diplomats of Czar.

JEWISH QUESTION RISES

Washington Is Silent, but Understanding Is That Bryan Is Willing to Renew Negotiations.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Russia has asked the United States Government to take up the question of a renewal of a treaty of amity and commerce. The treaty of 1832 on that subject was abrogated out of hand by the Congress of the United States.

Secretary of State Bryan said today that the question of renewing negotiations had been discussed with the President, but that there was nothing yet to state in the way of detail.

It has been stated to Russia, however, that the United States is willing to resume negotiations which had been commenced during the administration of the office of Secretary of State by Mr. Knox.

Two Diplomats Suggested.

The President is soon to appoint an Ambassador to the Court of St. Petersburg and the report is that a selection will be made between Charles R. Crane and Frederick Penfield, of Philadelphia and New York.

The administration will have to meet the question of the Jewish passport and the recognition of the Jews as American citizens without regard to race or religion in the new negotiations. It is well known that Russia was anxious to renew negotiations very soon after the affront to the Jewish race under the old treaty or by Russia's construction of the old treaty was wiped out by the joint resolution of Congress which abrogated the treaty of 1832. This action of Congress was unequivocally an act to rebuke Russia for her treatment of the Jews generally and specifically for her continued refusal to recognize passports issued to Jews.

Knox Charges Discrimination.

Secretary of State Knox held that the question of Jews should not enter into the matter at all, and that the real question was that the treaty of 1832 discriminated against American citizens.

It was stated during the last administration that Russia was trying to separate the Jewish passport question from all other questions which would enter into a treaty of amity and commerce, such as is made with all enlightened nations.

The statement was made at the time that the old administration frowned on this none too subtle suggestion of Russia and held that there should be no treaty except one that would do full justice to all Americans—Jews, Irish, English, Germans—no matter what their origin if they were citizens of the United States.

White House Silent.

The State Department at that time knew that if a treaty was sent to the Senate which did not include a solution of the passport question it could not be ratified. It is said that the present administration understands the situation thoroughly and will endeavor to get a treaty which will cover all American interests favorably or none at all.

At the White House no expression of opinion is yet obtainable from any official reflecting the views of the President. There is no question, however, that the Ambassador to be appointed by the President will be fully instructed on the passport question before he goes to St. Petersburg.

SOCIETY WOMAN GOES TO WORK IN BIG STORE

LOS ANGELES, June 28.—Miss Florence Lord, a graduate of Smith College, prominent socially in Chicago, New York and many other Eastern cities, and influential in suffrage clubs, has been working for a week or more in a Los Angeles department store, "to study the sociological conditions" at first hand, in order "to get away with her stunt."

Verses Tell How 'Imperator' Ought to be Pronounced

Great Trouble Found With Largest Liner Is That Everyone Gives Her a Different Name.

NEW YORK, June 28.—There is one fault already found with the Imperator, the giant vessel of the Hamburg-American line, which has just made her maiden voyage as the biggest ship afloat. The trouble is no one knows how to pronounce her name.

Many think they do, and as a result, she is called many things as Amerson Hough, the author, who answers to Huff, How, Hoe, Huge and a few other things.

In reply to inquiries as to the pronunciation the publicity agent says that the German pronunciation which is sanctioned by the modern Latinists makes the "a" in Imperator sound like the "a" in father. The accent is on the next syllable to the last. The poet laureate of the line has been so much puzzled by the variety of pronunciations that he has celebrated them in verse. Here are some of the couplets:

Biggest ship upon the water,
Gorgeous, quetnly Imperator.

If you do not like that style of calling the ship, perhaps the poet laureate remarked, you may take this:

In the finest class we slate her,
Peerless, German Imperator.

"And please," the poet said, "do not make peerless "beerless." Then, after running his fingers through his hair, the poet emitted and submitted this:

Vastness!—making senses totter!
Sea Collossus, Imperator!

"To the tune of 'Dixie,'" said the poet, we might get still another line on the pronunciation by singing:

Buckwheat cakes and a little batter
Taste quite good on the Imperator!

Greatest Salmon Run in Puget Sound

Quadrennial Migration of Horde of Fish From Fraser River Begins on Pacific Coast.

SEATTLE, June 28.—Steamship men report the approach of the annual Sockeye salmon run, which this year is the quadrennial big run, the greatest fish migration in the world. The fish now entering the Sound were born four years ago.

When the first white men came to the Northwest the Indians told them of this periodical big run, which had been regular as far back as their tribal legends went. It is the Canadian theory that the fish making up the big run are hatched in Fraser River and grow to maturity off the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Four years ago so many traps were set for the mature fish that few were able to enter the Fraser, and the Canadians have insisted that the big run of 1913 would be a failure. Hence there is international interest in the size of the approaching swarms of salmon.

Anything Shocking Police, Called Bad

Criticism of Chiefs of Present Styles Declared Cause for Women of Country to Act

JOHNSTOWN, PA., June 28.—Attacking immodesty in women's dress, Mrs. H. W. Black, of Riverdale, today stirred the delegates and visitors gathered at the annual convention of the Cambria County Sabbath School Association, in session here.

"Christian women should not wear clothes that cause people to turn and look at them after they pass," declared Mrs. Black.

"The police chiefs in convention at Washington have gone on record demanding a reform in women's dress. When it gets so bad that the police have to ask such a thing, I think it is time Christian women should act."

My Experience With Tacco ---The New Handy Varnish

By EVELYN WREN

HOUSEWIVES realize that a coat of varnish is often more satisfactory than a new piece of furniture. It is a gratification to see the marred chair which belonged to the first parlor suit look like new. The dining table has held many simple breakfasts, many delightful luncheons and many bountiful dinners, and the steaming dishes have left ugly marks upon its once shining surface. To see it emerge from its varnish treatment is like welcoming back an old friend.

Varnishing seems like tiresome, dirty work, and a task suitable for men attired in overalls. I had always associated it with laborers' muscles and rough clothing until one day when I decided my desk at The American office needed some attention.

You do not become wholly unfeminine even if you are a newspaper woman. I was tired of seeing the black spot where the inkwell had overturned. I did not like the white mark where a glass of ice water had stood. All at once I had a hunch that I could do my work better if a marred place did not constantly remind me of a loss of temper and consequent lowering of self-respect and dignity. The refinishing of my desk became an obsession.

I read advertisements. Fortunately I am influenced by them. When I saw an advertisement of a varnish which a woman could apply with a cloth just as a furniture polish is applied, I resolved to investigate the novel preparation.

I went to the sixth floor of the Forsyth Building and entered the offices of The Amber Chemical Company. There I almost breathlessly inquired for Tacco, the water-proof, dust-proof and heat-proof varnish. (To tell the truth, I did not much mind about the heat-proof feature, for most of the heat in our office is caused by irritable nerves, and not by the weather. I am no exception.)

A bottle of Tacco was put into my hand, and I grasped a piece of cheesecloth and went energetically to work. I used just as much muscle as three years of typewriting will produce in a feminine arm. I worked as hard as any furniture polisher ever dreamed of doing in his worst nightmare. I thought I was doing well.

Imagine my chagrin and the expression on my face when the cloth was quietly taken from my vigorous grasp and I was shown that Tacco requires no rubbing. You do not have to use as much energy as I do in ordinary dusting.

Dust the article first. If it is much stained you might well apply a little soap and water. Then apply your Tacco to the dry surface. A piece of cheesecloth is the best medium, and a firm, gentle movement like that of dusting will put the varnish on in the best form. Then let it dry. At the end of five hours view the result and feel proud of your work which is really but a pastime.

Have a Tacco day. Take the breakfast cloth off when husband has departed for the office. Apply Tacco according to the directions on the box, and the dining table will be ready for use at lunch time. Of course if husband is a capitalist and breakfasts at 10:30 instead of at 7 you will probably not have the pleasure of using Tacco yourself. Let us hope that you are one of those domestic little housewives who just "loves" to make your home pretty with your personal effort, and that husband has not outgrown his appreciation of the little touches which you can give just a bit better than any hired help.

The table in the living room has played an important part in the happiness of the household. You could not think of home without that table, and the ones you see in the store windows never look quite as hospitable or nearly so homelike. Here Jack has read his paper and graciously explained politics to your bewildered self as you stitched on little frocks which were to go to Kindergarten with Little Girl. It has held Big Brother's school books and his drawing instruments. (Said drawing instruments are responsible for the big unsightly gash at the end.) All in all, you feel as you begin to apply Tacco with a gentle hand that this table has many dear memories. You would like to see it as fresh and pretty as it was when you and Jack picked it out. It seemed the finest table in the world on that day. How you blushed, and how manly Jack looked as he quietly drew the money from his pocket and ordered it sent to your new home.

When the table is finished the big chair will seem more worn and bruised than ever. You never realized how shabby the living room was getting. It seems but a day or two ago that you decided to surprise Jack with that comfortable chair on his birthday. You saved from your housekeeping money bit by bit and grew anxious toward the last for fear the fund would not be large enough. You grow tender toward that big chair as you remember Jack's eyes when he first espied it and then quickly gazed at you. The lovelight was there, even if you had been married a half-dozen years, and had but recently lost many hours of sleep with Little Girl's teething episode.

GET THE WORD THEN GET THE MEANING — TRADE MARK TACCO BRAND — A HINT TO THE WISE

The tender feelings do not interfere with the application of Tacco. Let retrospection have its sway, and when you have had the pleasure of many happy memories look at the result. The table will shine like new. The gash made by Big Brother's steel ruler will not show. Tacco has acted as a filler and made the surface smooth as glass. Dusting will be a light task now. You may even scrub the table, for it has a water-proof finish now. The chair will bring the lovelight to Jack's eyes anew, for he, too, will remember the day your love made the gift.

If you are a housekeeper, you will welcome Tacco as a means of making your home brighter and more cheerful. You need never wish for an opportunity to send shabby furniture away to be refinished. You can buy a bottle of Tacco for only 50 cents. The economy of it will be demonstrated by its first use, and you will be ready to purchase a quart, half-gallon or gallon can before many days.

When I like anything I never take my liking for granted. I analyze my appreciation. Here is my analysis of my fondness for Tacco:

It requires absolutely no rubbing.
It dries in from two to five hours.
It is water-proof as well as dust and heat proof.
It is economical in time and money.

Well, my desk at The American office has had its Tacco treatment. Come in to see it, if you like. Then investigate Tacco as I did, if you like, or better still, benefit by my written experience and buy a bottle or can at any good drug or hardware store.

Do you live out of town? If you do, you would like to hear about a splendid proposition for out-of-town dealers. Write to-day for information and do not risk the loss of the agency in your town. Write and see what The Amber Chemical Company has to tell you.

BOY CONFESSES KILLING MOTHER AND BROTHER

Berkley Fleming, 19, of Ironton, Mo., Appears Unconcerned When Accused of Crime.

IRONTON, O., June 28.—Berkley Fleming, 19, has confessed to shooting his half-brother, Culbertson Stewart, almost three years ago, and his mother a few days ago.

The police took the boy to his grandfather's farm, where he pointed out the grave of his mother and stood by unconcerned as the body was removed. He was not impressed when the skeleton of Culbertson was exhumed.

Believe Boy Degenerate.

Chief of Police King, Dr. Wells and the Rev. W. H. Hampton, who have suspected for several months that Berkeley killed Culbertson, believe Berkeley a degenerate of the worst type.

Their theory is that he killed Culbertson because of jealousy and that he had worked out his carefull arranged plan of concealing the crime before he shot his brother.

The murder of the mother, they believe, was a part of his plan to keep her from exposing his former murder. A bullet hole in the back of the head of each victim and the mother's bruised face, say these men, destroy any accident theory.

Mother Is Suspicious.

Culbertson Stewart disappeared July 14, 1910, Berkeley's 17th birthday. The other brother afterward wrote letters to his mother purporting to come from Culbertson. She became suspicious, and he decided to kill her also.

After the crime he was found at a hotel waiting for dinner. He had gone there in a buggy to take his sweetheart riding. He made no objection to going to the police station, where he confessed.

Aged Pair Perform Own Marriage Rites

Bridegroom, 75 Years Old, Declares It Was His Sixth Experience With Such Ceremony

BEAVER, PA., June 28.—Dr. Akkelon Mercer, seventy-five years old, of Beaver Falls, and Sarah L. Calgrove, sixty-five years old, of Wetzel county, West Virginia, performed their own marriage ceremony here.

When the pair obtained their license they informed Hamilton, the clerk, that all they needed was a license, as they could dispense with all bridal attendants and the minister.

Doctor Mercer and Mrs. Calgrove to Hamilton issued the license for marry themselves in the presence of witnesses. Doctor Mercer stated that he had been married five times, and in each instance he and his bride had performed their own ceremony, always in the presence of two witnesses.

Defaulter Hired to Audit Bank's Books

Man Who Wrecked Financial institution, Will Go to Work to Untangle Its Affairs.

CARUTHERSVILLE, MO., June 28.—A. B. Tindle, cashier of the Pemiscot County Bank, which closed its doors following the discovery that he was short in his accounts, will be retained by the reorganizers to aid in straightening out its affairs.

"There is no desire on the part of the directors of the bank to prosecute Tindle," one of the directors said to-day. "He has turned over all his property and has been punished enough by his sudden fall from a position of trust and respect in the community."

Tindle's personal fortune is estimated at $200,000.

The action of the directors of the bank in retaining him in the task of straightening out the confusion caused by his shortage meets with the approval of a majority of the citizens it is said.

Prehistoric Flying Reptile Discovered

Skeleton of Pterodactyl Monster Is Found in Wyoming Fossil Bed by Geologists.

CASPER, WYO., June 28.—Dr. F. Salathe and D. VanWagener, geologists, who are prospecting this vicinity for oil, reported the discovery eighteen miles from Casper of a fossil bed, conspicuously visible in which is the almost perfect silicified skeleton of a flying reptile, probably of the pterodactyl, which measures at least sixty feet in length. The creature in life must have had a wing expansion of eighty feet.

Millionaire Gives Free Circus to Pay Pledge of Boyhood

Packer Leaves Home as Child to Make Fortune After Missing Show for Lack of Money.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Edward Tilden, millionaire packer, produced a circus to-day for "all the children within walking or riding distance" of the Tilden estate at Lake Delavan, Wis.

The huge entertainment cost $10,000 and had been planned for 25 years by the host. It grew out of a painfully vivid recollection of a circus that had come to town and gone away again without his getting inside the tent. It was fresh in his mind when he left Delavan a quarter of a century ago to come to Chicago to "make his fortune." At the train Edward Tilden told friends:

"I'm coming back some day and buy the town and give everyone a good time, and let every boy here see a circus."

A special carload of entertainers left Chicago for Delavan this morning. A dog and pony show and a band of 40 pieces left last night. The children also saw an aeroplane flight, had automobile rides and a big dinner.

Child Offered Home For Looking Pleasant

Smiling Face of Orphan in Photographed Group Wins Hearts of Couple Who Lost Baby.

POCAHONTAS, ILL., June 28.—In Pocahontas there may be a home for a little girl because she "looked pleasant" when a photographer took the picture of a group of children waiting for an automobile ride. Children in the orphan asylums on that day were given an outing by the Automobile Club of St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Miles, of Pocahontas, adopted a little girl several years ago. She died. Something about two of the little girls whose pictures appeared in the newspaper reminded them of the little one who died, and they have written for information about the children.

INDIAN GIRLS WILL TRY SKILL AT HAT-MAKING

CARLISLE, PA., June 28.—Indian art will now show itself in hats. At least that is the natural conclusion drawn from an announcement made by the Carlisle Indian School that a course in millinery has been established for aborigines.

Indian art, the absolutely original gift of America to the world, has expressed itself in pottery, in rugs, in a dozen other ways, but it has never before entered the field of headgear, and it is expected that this new innovation may yet cast the chic French models into the deep shadows.

SCHOOL ROLLS FAIL TO KEEP UP WITH BIRTHS

Wide Discrepancy Is Shown in Number of Pupils and Increase of Children.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Chapters on "Roman Catholic Schools," "Typical Health Teaching Agencies of the United States," and "Parent-Teacher Associations" are special features of the annual report of the United States Commissioner of Education, just issued.

In addition to these the report contains substantial chapters on the following subjects: General survey of the year; educational legislation during 1912; higher education; city school systems; rural education; recent movements in negro education; a review of agricultural education; progress in vocational education; library development; education in Alaska, the Philippines, Hawaii, Porto Rico, and other dependencies; Indian education; educational activities in Canada, Latin-America, Great Britain, Northern Europe, France and Switzerland, Germany, Southern Europe and Russia; together with a general view of conditions in Asia, Africa, Australia and New Zealand.

In his introduction to the report the commissioner discusses the wide discrepancy between the increase in the number of children of school age and the actual enrollment; an apparent reduction in teachers' salaries during the year; the remarkable increase in high schools and high school enrollment throughout the country; the decrease in professional schools, due to the enforcement of higher standards; lack of preparation of teachers, which Dr. Claxton characterizes as "one of the greatest evils of our school systems;" the shortness of the school term in the United States as compared with other civilized nations; and the abnormally large percentage of illiteracy in the rural districts.

Woman Jury Awards Verdict in Oregon

Plaintiff Is Awarded Damages of $5 in Legal Fight Over Cut of a Skirt.

ST. JOHNS, ORE., June 28.—The first regularly called woman's jury to serve in the State of Oregon tried a case in Justice Williams' court here and, after twenty minutes' conference, returned a verdict of $5 for the plaintiff. The jury was drawn in the regular form from a list of fifty women who have been chosen as liable for jury service during the year.

The case was one involving the price of a skirt. The plaintiff averred that a skirt which she had made by a local seamstress did not fit. She brought suit to recover the price of the skirt.

The fair jurors fixed the damages at $5.

FINDS COIN BEHIND PANEL; DIVIDES WITH FRIENDS

SHARON, PA., June 28.—As six carpenters were tearing down a house near the Leesburg coal mines, one found a false panel in a wall of the dining room from which he took a powder can containing $1,500.

The finder kept $500 as his share and each of his fellow workmen was given $200.

USE OF SCHOOLS AS AID TO LOVE MAKING URGED

Peace Executive Would Make Social Centers of Houses of Instruction in Big Cities.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Arthur Deering Call, executive director of the American Peace Society, has undertaken to win for the young men and women of America the right to make love to each other.

Said he:

"One of the nation's greatest needs is the promotion of acquaintance between young men and women, the fathers and mothers of the next generation, under free, attractive and wholesome conditions. We need more wholesome conditions for 'courting.'

"I can think of nothing so important to this generation as the lifemates of its various individuals, or so vital to the next as its fathers and mothers and home life generally.

Would Use Schools.

"I propose a wider use of school buildings for social and neighborhood purposes. I do not want love-making a part of the school curriculum, but I think that the same lips that recite the multiplication table or decline a noun in the class room in the garish light of day might just as well whisper tender nothings while the moon peeks in at the window later on.

"For a great majority of our young people in the cities the dance halls provide the only regular amusement they can afford, where any man who has the price can step up to any young woman and ask her to dance. No wonder such places become recruiting places for vice.

No Instruction Needed.

"Why not let the school be a cross between the church and the saloon? Every school should be arranged so that in the evening the young folks could gather there for games, folk-dancing classes, music, athletics, sewing classes and moving pictures.

"All the young folks want is opportunity to meet under proper environment. We don't have to teach the men how to make love, or young women how to listen to them, but we owe it to the race not to hinder or pervert their natural tendencies by improper environment."

NEGRO GIVES FOUR PENNIES FOR FIVE DOLLAR BILLS

INDIANAPOLIS, June 28.—While Miss Stella Koch was busy tending a stand on the city market last night, a well dressed negro asked if she could give him some paper money for gold.

"I have four $5 gold pieces," he explained, "and I would like to get some paper money in exchange for them, as I do not like to carry gold in my pocket."

The girl said she could accommodate him, and going to the cash drawer produced four $5 bills. She handed the bills to the negro, and he dropped four bright, shining pennies into her outstretched hand.

TARIFF CUTS IN SENATE TO AID NATION'S DINING ROOM

House Figures Lowered and List Increased — Despite Cuts, Bill Is Expected to Produce $5,000,000 More Cash.

Atlanta's Need for Help to Reduce the High Cost of Living Is Shown by Figures Indicating Soaring Price of Foodstuffs.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The revised tariff bill laid before the Senate Democratic caucus by Mr. Simmons, chairman of the finance committee, carries important reductions in the Underwood tariff bill rates on iron, steel and other metal products. It added cattle, wheat, pig iron, Angora wool, and many other articles to the free list, and increased rates on many classes of cotton goods and some silk products.

President Wilson's desires as to free sugar in 1916 and free wool at once, prevailed in the redraft of the bill. To the list of "market basket" reductions the Underwood bill contained, the Senate committee added many important items.

In the general level of its rates the "Simmons bill" represents a heavier cut from the present Payne-Aldrich rates than the House bill.

Senator Simmons believes the caucus will discuss the bill not longer than a week.

Simmons' Statement.

The bill probably will come to a vote in the Senate by September 1.

In a statement Chairman Simmons said:

"The revenues of the Government will be increased approximately $5,000,000, laid in hand with a reduction of the taxation following the reductions already made in the House bill. These increases in revenues will be made up by a tariff on bananas and restoration of the full internal duty of $1.10 per gallon on brandies used in fortifying wines.

"With regard to the sugar schedule no change was made from the provision of the Underwood bill except to strike out 'sugars tinctured and colored,' for fear that ultramarine blue used in bleaching sugar might be regarded as colored matter and thereby refined sugar become subject to a duty of 2 cents a pound.

"With regard to cigars and other tobacco products from the Philippines the provision of the Underwood bill permitting cigars with 80 per cent of tobacco the product of the Philippine Islands and 20 per cent the produce of foreign countries to be admitted into the United States free of duty, was stricken out of the bill. Only cigars and tobacco products exclusively of Philippine tobacco to be admitted free of duty into the United States."

The Liquor Schedule.

Of the amendment to the liquor schedule, the statement said:

"An additional section is added repealing so much of the act approved October 1, 1890, and acts amendatory thereto, so far as they relate to the use free of tax of spirits for the fortification of sweet wines, and providing that hereafter all wine spirits, grape brandy and alcohol so used shall be subject to the same tax as in other cases.

"It is intimated that this tax will result in an increase of revenue of approximately $7,000,000 per annum.

"The Senate Finance Committee followed the House and treated the cotton yarns as the House bill treated cotton cloth," the statement continued, "by adding a duty of two and one-half per cent upon cotton cloth when combed, bleached, dyed, mercerized or colored. This is the most important change that the Senate committee made in the House cotton schedule."

Retaliatory Clause.

The amendment permitting the President to proclaim special rates when foreign nations discriminate against the United States provides that he shall exercise this authority on certain articles, as follows:

"Fish, fresh, smoked and dried, pickled or otherwise prepared, 1 cent per pound; on wheat, 10 cents per bushel; on wheat flour, 45 cents per barrel; on coffee, 3 cents per pound; on tea, 10 cents per pound.

"On the following articles a duty

Pigeons to Keep City Sane, Says Expert

Dr. B. Chester King, of Atlanta, Tells Chicago That Its Safety Rests With Doves.

CHICAGO, June 28.—If Chicagoans are to be saved from the mad house at all it will be by the pigeons.

Dr. B. Chester King, an Atlanta alienist, finds hope for the city's sanity in the pigeons that flutter about the Loop all day.

"Several times each day," says the doctor, "the man who works in an office building should go to a window with the expectation of seeing one or more doves. Should he spy them, I suggest that he forget all else. There is something in just the name 'dove' that has a soothing effect upon the nerves."

Pastor Gets Town To Give Day to Ball

All Girard Suspends Business to Attend Games, but There Is No Playing on Sunday.

GIRARD, KANS., June 28.—Girard has found a happy solution to the problem of Sunday baseball by setting out one day in the week when everybody suspends business operations and goes to the ball game.

This arrangement came through the suggestion of the Rev. M. L. Morrison, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, after considerable wrangling early in the summer between people who wanted ball games on Sunday and those who did not. The new arrangement was tried yesterday for the second time. Everyone is pleased and the blue laws are enforced.

REBELS STORM MEXICAN TOWN; MASSACRE 1,000

Federal Soldiers and Civilians Shot Down in Cold Blood at Durango.

CAPTIVES PUT TO TORTURE

Atrocities Practiced to Force Citizens to Reveal Hiding Places of Wealth.

MEXICO CITY, June 28.—One thousand soldiers and civilians were slaughtered by rebels when the city of Durango, capital of the State of the same name, fell into the insurgents' hands, according to word received here to-day from that city. Many of the victims were members of prominent families.

Men and women were tortured to death when they did not produce wealth at the bidding of the rebels.

Fighting between federals and insurgents is going on at Uruapam in the State of Michocan. Cuquio, in the State of Jalisco, was taken by rebels yesterday and the garrison put to the sword.

Rebels Advance on Juarez; Fight Nearer.

EL PASO, TEXAS, June 28.—Pancho Villa, Mexican rebel leader, who has announced his intention of taking Juarez and executing General Salazar, commander of the garrison, in the bull ring, established outposts within three miles of the town.

Ortega, who has 500 men, may cooperate with Villa. If Juarez falls, it will remove the most important Mexican port of entry on the United States border from Huerta and may result in the downfall of the Huerta government.

Prince of Wales Spends $1.25 a Week

Writes Home for More Money, but Mother Considers That This Amount Is Ample.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—The amount allotted to the Prince of Wales for pocket money has just become known. Every Saturday he receives just $1.25, which he terms his "old age pension." He is occasionally a trifle extravagant and mortgages his money in advance.

Toward the end of the last term at Oxford he was asked by a friend to join a party to visit the theater.

The Prince's reply was, "Sorry, old man, but I am clean broke."

"Why don't you write home for some more?" asked the friend.

"I did," replied the Prince, "but mother said I was too extravagant."

Mrs. Marshall Finds $2,000 House at Last

Wife of Vice President Refuses to Pay More, Wishing to Live Within Husband's Salary.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The long house hunt of Mrs. Marshall, wife of the Vice President, is probably over, as she has found a suitable house on Columbia Road, Northwest. Her hunt was prolonged owing to the fact that she set $2,000 yearly as the price they would pay. The Marshalls have said they must live within their salary, and Washington society is eagerly watching to see how they will manage with the many social and financial demands upon them. Mrs. Marshall wanted to go to the country, but feared it would be too far for the Congressional wives to visit.

Congress to Force White Slave Inquiry

Reasons for Postponement of Diggs-Caminetta Case by Department of Justice To Be Bared.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Investigation of the postponement of the Diggs-Caminetti white slave case by the Department of Justice must go on, is the edict of the Congressmen behind the resolutions.

They are determined to bare the entire correspondence between McNab and the Attorney General and uncover the influences behind the white slave and Western Fuel cases.

If the House for any reason fails to take up the investigation Tuesday, the Senate is determined to dig to the bottom of the matter itself. No "pull" or influence can block this inquiry, it is declared.

King George Finds Platonic Romance With Fair Countess

Monarch Pays Marked Attention to Wife of Lord Mar While Queen Mary Is Absent.

Special Cable to The Sunday American.

LONDON, June 28—Every one thought King George so extremely domestic and conventional that it has come as rather a shock to people outside court circles to find him paying marked attention to the beautiful Countess of Mar and Killie.

The lovely countess, who is in her prime and a favorite of King Edward, is to be found wherever the King is.

Lord Mar goes about very little, but it was noticed that he and his wife were included in the royal house party at Windsor Castle for the Ascot races.

When Queen Mary was absent from the races, Lady Mar was always at the King's side, but when Her Majesty was present Lady Mar mixed with the general crowd in the royal inclosure.

Lady Mar is very sympathetic and attractive. The inner circle at the court is intensely amused at this mild platonic flirtation.

Mrs. Astor Bars Too Fervid Trotting

Society Youth Comes to Grief When He Disregards Rules of Conduct Fixed by Hostess.

Special Cable to The American.

LONDON, June 28.—Mrs. John Astor is becoming known in social circles as a hostess whose rules of conduct must be obeyed by her guests. One young man who, until recently, doubted this, is now lamenting his mistake. Mrs. Astor permits the "tango" and "turkey trot" at her dances, but insists that they be danced in moderation. When this guest so far forgot himself as to verge on to the vulgar, he was quickly shown the door.

Mrs. Astor's example is not followed by all of London's hostesses. At the entertainments of a certain duchess the ragtime is accompanied by a great deal of roughness, being usually danced with the lights out.

Early Cold Injures Crops of Michigan

Wheat Promises but Half a Crop, Hay One-third, and Fruit Outlook Is Poor.

LANSING, MICH., June 28.—Michigan Agricultural College field men and district supervisors report crop prospects of the State the poorest in years, due to the early cold, wet season and late frosts, followed by the present hot, dry weather.

Wheat promises little better than half a crop, hay one-third, oats one-half. Early potatoes have been badly frosted in sections and will not produce over one-quarter crop without rain.

Fruit is equally poor. Plums and grapes are expected to be about 30 or 40 per cent of a crop.

Baroness Will Wed Man Hurled in Auto

St. Louis Tourist Unexpectedly Finds Self in Noblewoman's Car and Romance Ripens.

NEW YORK, June 28.—James Hurley, a railroad man of St. Louis, while automobiling in Paris a year ago, ran his car into that of the Baroness Barbara Ursula Kalinowski of Weisbaden and was hurled into the tonneau, where the Baroness was sitting. He gave her his card and later offered her his heart.

Arriving here by the Hamburg-American liner Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, she left for St. Louis, where the Baroness will be married to Mr. Hurley.

Gatun Gates Stand Their Supreme Test

Atlantic Waters Reach Sea Level and Locks Must Hold Against Full Pressure of Water.

PANAMA, June 28.—The Atlantic waters which have been allowed to run slowly against the lower gates at Gatun are at sea level to-day. The large gates are being put to the actual test of full pressure for the first time.

The engineers are watching the rise of the water with interest, and they report that the gates are watertight. The water is at the 50-foot stage.

PRICES TO STAY AS THEY ARE NOW, SAYS SULZBERGER

NEW YORK, June 28.—"Meat will never be any cheaper in the United States than it is now," declared G. F. Sulzberger, of Sulzberger & Schwarzchild, on his arrival from Europe on the Mauretania. "The only effect the change in the tariff will cause will be to keep prices where they are. Without this revision in the tariff, there would undoubtedly have been a big jump in prices."

SLATON'S BILLS READY TO PASS

Inaugurated With Utmost Simplicity

Legislature Wants to Aid Governor

Inaugural Address of Slaton Urges New Taxation System

SWEEPING legislative reforms are urged by Governor John M. Slaton in his inaugural address and message delivered to the Legislature Saturday. Following are the ten most important reforms he urges:

1. An occupation tax on corporations, with the maximum $200 per annum on corporations of more than $1,000,000 capital; the tax on smaller corporations to be adjusted accordingly.

2. Changes in the registration laws. He says: "The present registration law should be so amended that when a voter has once proven his qualification by registering and being enrolled, he shall remain a registered voter unless disqualified for some cause due himself."

3. The need for good roads, with a highway commissioner or a commission. The message says: "An intelligent highway commission, or commissioner, clothed with the proper authority, could be the means of untold benefit in suggesting the proper methods of building roads."

4. A declaration that the sale of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the State's property, should not be considered. The problem of its disposal should be considered by a commission, with directions to report its recommendations and its reasons therefor.

5. The passage of a law abolishing the defendant's statement in criminal trials, and providing in its place that he be sworn as a witness, if he so desires.

6. The Legislature is urged to consider legislation making the carrying of concealed weapons a felony, subject to reduction to a misdemeanor by either judge or jury.

7. Consideration of proper and remedial banking laws. "The banks of a State perform public functions, and as such are properly subjected to governmental supervision," says the message.

8. The creation of a new office, to be known as State Auditor.

9. Sweeping reforms in the tax system of Georgia. The system in vogue in this State is wrong, and the equalization of taxation, either through enforcement of present laws or new correctives, is urged.

10. That the Legislature investigate the decline of the agricultural schools and take steps to apply the proper remedies.

Gainesville Naval Academy to Hold a Regatta on July 4

Riverside Cadets Expect Hundreds of Visitors to See Sports on the Chattahoochee.

GAINESVILLE, June 28.—The first regatta of the Riverside Summer Naval School and Camp, which was opened here Thursday, will be held on July 4. Hundreds of visitors are expected to be on hand to see the sports.

The naval school and camp has a large enrollment this year, students being registered from practically all of the Southern States, including Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana, Tennessee, South Carolina, North Carolina, Kentucky and Virginia.

Captain Patterson, of the Culver Ind., Military Academy, will have charge of the naval and swimming departments this year, while Professor R. E. Brooks, superintendent of the Dublin public schools, will assist in the academic department.

Georgia Bankers to Urge Laws at This Legislative Session

One Provides Larger Salary for State Treasurer—Banking Department Considered.

The Georgia Bankers' Association, of which L. P. Hillyer, of Macon, is president and Haynes McFadden, of Atlanta, secretary, will urge new laws in the present session of the Legislature, according to announcement Saturday.

The association now has under advisement several bills, including one for a constitutional amendment providing larger appropriations for the State Treasurer, who supervises $6,000,000, it is said, on a salary fund of $3,100.

The amendment, though, is being considered only by the association thus far. It has not been acted on. Haynes McFadden Saturday said a bill creating a banking department probably would not come up at this session of the Legislature.

New Executive Plans To Be at Work Early Each Day and to Devote Entire Time to State.

Inducted into office with a simplicity that harked back to the days of Thomas Jefferson, John Marshall Slaton will enter the Capitol Monday morning for the first time as Governor of the State of Georgia. Eager to begin work for the State and the people, Governor Slaton plans to be at his office at an unusually early hour, and will plunge into the affairs of the State of Georgia with the energy and ability that has made him a leading figure among the attorneys and citizens of Atlanta.

Backed by his dominant personality and with the support of practically every member of the Senate and the House of Representatives, Governor Slaton's administration promises to be as harmonious and productive of good as that of any Governor the State has ever had.

Gossip heard among the legislators gathered for the sessions of the General Assembly indicate that every reform urged by the new Governor will meet with the approval of the majority of the members of both Houses.

Bills Are Now Ready.

It is regarded as significant, and indicative of the success of Governor Slaton's administration, that many bills embodying the recommendations and suggestions made in his inaugural address have been prepared and will be introduced and action taken on them during the present session. Several already have been introduced, both in the House and Senate.

It is generally understood, though it has never been officially confirmed, that Governor Slaton will send no more messages to the General Assembly during the present session unless some unforeseen emergency should arise that demands immediate attention. He has given his views on the sort of legislation that is needed, and has often expressed his complete confidence in the ability and the willingness of the Legislature to do what was right and necessary without any prompting from the head of the State Government.

The respect and confidence that Governor Slaton feels in ex-Governor Brown is shown by the fact that almost without exception the men who served the latter during the four years of his incumbency will also hold office during the Slaton administration.

Jesse G. Perry, who has served Governor Brown as private secretary, will fill the same position under Governor Slaton.

Ulm Is Executive Secretary.

Hardy Ulm is also retained as Executive Secretary. The knowledge these men have, gained through their connection with Governor Brown, is expected to be one of inestimable benefit to Governor Slaton during the first few weeks of his incumbency.

That Governor Slaton intends to give all his time to the business of the State and serve them to the utmost of his ability is shown by the fact that though he owns a handsome home on Peachtree Street, and a country home on Peachtree Road, he has moved his family into the ancient executive mansion on Peachtree Street, and will occupy the building as his home during his term as Governor. He took possession of the mansion Saturday afternoon within an hour after his inauguration as Governor of the State.

After a short stay in the reception room of the Governor's office at the capitol, where Governor Slaton and ex-Governor Brown greeted their friends,. Governor and Mrs. Slaton and Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mrs. Slaton's mother, were entertained at luncheon by ex-Governor and Mrs. Brown, at the executive mansion. After the luncheon Mr. Brown turned over to Governor Slaton the mansion that had been his home, and with Mrs. Brown boarded a train for Marietta.

Marietta Greets Brown.

They were given a tremendous reception by the citizens of the Cobb County capitol. Practically two-thirds of the population of Marietta, headed by a reception committee of prominent citizens, met them at the depot and welcomed them to the town that had been their home for many years before Mr. Brown became Governor. Mr. and Mrs. Brown plan to spend the coming week in Marietta, and will then retire for the summer to their Cherokee County farm.

Though the inauguration of Governor Slaton was simple, it is not thought that his home life will follow the same plan. Mrs. Slaton is recognized as one of the most brilliant hostesses in Atlanta, and society folk are all agog over the rumored plans of a brilliant social campaign which it is generally understood Mrs. Slaton will inaugurate as soon as she has completed her establishment as the first lady of the State. An inaugural reception will be held July 2.

The precedent set by Governor Brown and continued by Governor Slaton of eliminating all pomp and display from the inaugural ceremonies has aroused considerable favorable comment throughout the State, especially among the members of the Legislature, and it is probable that Georgia will never see a return to the "brass band" inaugurals of former years. The inauguration of Governor Slaton was, if anything, just a little more simple than the last inauguration of Governor Brown. There was no display of any sort, and the very absence of elaborate ceremony added to the strength and impressiveness of the occasion.

Sweeping Reform in System Of Taxation Urged by Slaton

Laws to aid the finances of Georgia and sweeping reforms of the tax system of the State are stressed in the inaugural message of Governor Slaton.

In part, Governor Slaton said:

Our system is wrong. The Legislature can appropriate what it pleases, and the tax rate remains the same. The Legislator has made himself a favorite with his constituency by voting for every popular appropriations and nothing suffers but the State's credit.

Unless some check be made, an increase of revenue will be of no avail in preventing the financial embarrassment of the State. Under the enthusiasm of the moment one appropriation bill may exhaust it.

More than four-fifths of the States of the Union derive revenue from what is known as an inheritance tax. I am informed that this tax is the subject of least complaint.

This form of tax has been approved by the highest authorities and is one of the easiest borne and subject to fewer hardships than any other. The inheritance tax is to some extent a corrective.

Corporation Taxation.

Prior to the year 1905, many efforts were made to collect an occupation tax from corporations. Governor Terrell, in his message of the year 1905, recommended a tentative privilege tax based on capital stock of $100,000 per year on corporations having a capital of $1,000,000, or over. He anticipated from this source more than $100,000 a year, and thought that such sum could reasonably be expected without a hardship. The State, however, has not received one-half this sum, and during the year 1913 the estimated revenue from this source is $48,000.

I recommend that the maximum occupation tax on corporations having $1,000,000 capital and over be $200 per annum, and the tax on corporations of less capital be adjusted accordingly.

Equalization of taxes, either through the enforcement of present laws, or new correctives, so that each may bear his proportionate burden, would not mean the increase of taxes upon any one now performing his duty, but would rather mean the lightening of his unfair portion of the load. I commend this subject to your attention.

Bonded Debt To Be Refunded.

An additional reason for establishing and maintaining the State's finances on a sound basis is the necessity of making provision for more than one-half of the entire bonded debt of the State, maturing in 1915. This is an imperative duty resting on this Legislature.

No sinking fund was provided by law to retire the bonds aggregating $3,679,000 which are due in 1915. The entire State's debt is $6,452,500, which does not include the obligations to the University, amounting to $291,500, and the landscrip fund of $90,000.

All the debt of $6,452,500 is provided for, or will be provided for, by the sinking fund required to be raised annually until the debt is paid off, except the $3,679,000 which falls due in May and July, 1915.

If refunding bonds were issued in 1915, making the first $100,000 fall due in 1935, then the sinking fund could be made to run continuously and retire each year, until paid, $100,000 of this series of 1915 refunding bonds.

This plan would seem advisable in order to relieve the treasury and the people of the increased burden at this time, unless financial conditions at the time of the sale of the bonds should demand that their redemption begin at an earlier period in order to effectuate their more satisfactory disposition.

Registration of Voters.

We believe the present registration law should be so amended that when a voter has once proven his qualification by registering and being enrolled, he shall remain a registered voter unless disqualified for cause due to himself.

The foregoing extract from the last platform upon which I was elected, expresses a principle which deserves universal acceptance. It contemplates no change of the constitution which provides for the qualification of the voter.

I recommend that the present registration law be amended to correct the injustice indicated. It would always be provided that the voter must have paid his taxes and not subjected himself to any of the disqualifications provided by law.

Highways.

It is needless to impress upon you the importance of our highways. Their value is an asset of the entire State. An intelligent Highway Commission, or Commissioner, clothed with proper authority, could be the means of untold benefit in suggesting proper methods of building the road adapted to the locality, or in solving the problems of engineering which might arise in various sections.

I call your attention to the Western and Atlantic Railroad, the lease of which terminates in 1919. No one, I apprehend, would or should consider its sale, but the problem of its disposition should be considered by a commission with directions to report its recommendations and its reasons therefor.

To delay this matter will mean to put the State at the inexcusable disadvantage of unpreparedness when the time arrives for imperative action.

The Criminal Code.

One of the fundamental purposes of government is the protection of life and safety of the citizen. If the rules of evidence are so shaped as to prevent the discovery of the truth, and if the State is deprived of the means of sifting the facts, the judges and juries are not to be blamed if crimes are allowed to go unpunished.

It is an anomaly that a defendant should take the stand, make any statement that he sees fit, or that his shrewd lawyer has prepared, and being immune from cross-examination, demand that the judge shall charge the jury that they may accept his unsworn statement in preference to all the evidence in the case.

I, therefore, recommend that a law be passed abolishing the defendant's statement, and providing in its place that he be sworn as a witness, if he desires, but his failure to be so sworn be not subject to adverse comment by prosecuting counsel. This is in accordance with current Federal and State law.

The legislation in Georgia against carrying concealed weapons has in recent years been conspicuous. It has been suggested by the law of self-preservation. Daily we read of men who have shot others, and have been acquitted on the old statement that the deceased threw his hand on his hip pocket, and the defendant shot in fear of his life. When searched, the dead man was found generally unarmed.

If the carrying of concealed weapons were made a felony, subject to be reduced to a misdemeanor by either judge or jury, the deterrent effect of such a law would be the saving of many a life. I earnestly recommend to you the consideration of this question.

Banking Laws.

The banks of a State perform public functions, and as such are properly subjected to governmental supervision. The bankers of the State, with the desire of maintaining a high standard of responsibility capable of affording guarantees against improvident management, that imperil the money of the people, recommend legislation looking to the accomplishment of these objects. I commend this subject as one worthy of your serious consideration.

My predecessors have recommended the creation of the position of State Auditor, and in this recommendation I heartily concur. His services could be utilized in checking the cost of new buildings for which requests may be made by the various institutions. Those who have served on the appropriations committees are aware of the inadequate facilities of the State in arriving at the amount of the necessary expenditures.

The Constitution.

The Constitution is the expression of the supreme law of the land. It can only be changed by the people speaking in their sovereign capacity. In order that they may vote intelligently on any proposition it is essential that they understand it. I recommend that in proposing Constitutional amendments, you plainly indicate the proposition to the voter in such language that he may understand the meaning of the question submitted.

My predecessor has called attention to the fact that some of the agricultural schools are well attended, while others receive little patronage, whether due to the matter of location or lack of interest, or from what cause, I am unable to say. Each obtains the same appropriation from the State for maintenance. I recommend that you investigate their condition, and apply the proper remedies.

Slaton is Inaugurated With Simple Ceremonies.

With ceremonies that gained in strength and impressiveness through their very simplicity, John Marshall Slaton to-day became Governor of the State of Georgia, succeeding Joseph M. Brown. The oath of office was administered by Judge William H. Fish, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, at 12:02 o'clock.

Governor Slaton was inducted into office in the presence of a brilliant assemblage of Georgia men and women, including his own and the retiring Governor's family and intimate friends, members of the State Legislature and prominent jurists. For the first time in the history of the State the United States was represented by Judge William T. Newman and Judge Don A. Pardee, of the Federal Court. They occupied seats directly in front of the Speaker's stand.

Galleries and the floor of the House were filled with spectators. By 10 o'clock virtually every seat in the visitors' gallery was taken and room had been provided for a large number on the floor. In the corridors another crowd, unable to gain entrance into the hall, waited patiently for a glimpse of the new executive.

Joint Session Held.

Neither the House nor the Senate transacted any business, convening at 11 o'clock and immediately taking a recess. At 11:45 o'clock both Houses again convened, and the Senate at once adjourned and marched to the House, where members took seats in a semi-circle about the speaker's stand. In the front row of seats about the speakers' stand sat the intimate friends and relatives of Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton. Twenty-eight chairs had been reserved for members of Governor Slaton's family and eight for the family and friends of Governor Brown.

In Governor Slaton's party were Major William F. Slaton, father of the Governor; Mrs. John M. Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Slaton, Justice and Mrs. S. C. Atkinson, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Waldo, Mrs. W. H. Blanchard, Mrs. W. D. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Grant, John M. Slaton, Jr., W. F. Slaton, Jr., Slaton Waldo, Albie Waldo, William D. Grant, Miss Margaret Grant, James Jackson Slaton, Mr. and Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Phillips and Miss Robinson. In Governor Brown's party were Mrs. Joseph M. Brown, Miss Cora Brown, Charles Brown, Miss Sally Brown, Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Connolly, Mrs. Frances Connolly and Thomas W. Connolly.

Governor Brown Receives Friends.

Governor Brown arrived at the Capitol shortly before 11 o'clock, and went at once into his private office, where he received a number of friends and visitors.

Governor-elect Slaton drove up in his automobile to the Washington Street entrance of the Capitol, accompanied by Mrs. Slaton and his father, Major William F. Slaton. They proceeded to the reception room of the Governor's office, where the inaugural procession formed.

Promptly at 11:45 o'clock Speaker Burwell called the House to order, and immediately thereafter members of the Senate arrived.

The inaugural procession moved from the Governor's office on the first floor. The procession was led by Governor-elect Slaton and Governor Brown. After them came ex-Governor Henry D. McDaniel, and then followed the Justices of the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals, the Federal Judges, the State House officers, the members of the joint legislative committee on inauguration, and the immediate families of Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton.

Governor Slaton Presented.

Governor Brown and Governor-elect Slaton took their places on the Speaker's stand, the first standing to the left of Senator Randolph Anderson and Speaker Burwell and the latter to the right. Rev. James B. Robbins, of the Trinity Methodist Church, opened the ceremonies with prayer, in which he invoked Divine aid for Governor Slaton in the conduct of the affairs of the State.

Randolph Anderson, President of the Senate, presented Governor-elect Slaton to the people of Georgia and the Legislature, and immediately thereafter Justice Fish administered the oath of office. In a speech expressing great confidence in the ability of the incoming executive, Governor Brown presented Governor Slaton with the Great Seal of the State of Georgia.

After the inaugural ceremonies Governor and Mrs. Slaton and ex-Governor and Mrs. Brown lunched at the Executive Mansion. Ex-Governor and Mrs. Brown retired to their farm near Marietta, and Governor Slaton took possession of the mansion in the afternoon.

Church Bars Wedding And Girl Files Suit

Breach of Promise Action Started, Though Both Parties Declare They Are Ready for Ceremony.

ATCHISON, KANS., June 28.—Although both parties to a $25,000 breach of marriage contract suit filed here recently say they are willing to wed, the suit will go on.

Miss Mary Falk, of Purcell, alleges that she entered into a verbal contract to marry William Burke, of Troy, a few months ago.

Church officers say they will not marry Burke because he is unable to procure a sworn statement from his mother in Ireland certifying to the time of his baptism in the Catholic Church. Burke says he will marry Miss Mary Falk any time, and, in her petition for the suit Miss Falk says she is still willing to marry Burke.

But as a priest will not marry them, as both are unwilling to forsake their religion, Miss Falk says she can not consistently dismiss the suit, although she still loves Burke. Miss Falk's petition alleges that Burke is wealthy.

Atlanta Medical Schools Unite to Make Big College

National Recognition Will Be Obtained Through Merger—Officers and Faculty of Institution Are Unanimous.

A union of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons and the Atlanta Medical College has been effected, and as a result an institution to be known as the Atlanta Medical College has been formed. Details of the consolidation were announced Saturday by representative committees from both colleges.

Ambitious plans for the new college are outlined. The immediate effect of the consolidation will be the placing of the Atlanta Medical College in Class A by the American Medical Association. It renders the newly formed college eligible to membership in the Association of American Medical Colleges, admitting its graduates to practice anywhere in the world. Its doors open with the new college year in September.

The consolidation will force the abandonment of the property of the Atlanta School of Medicine on Luckie and Bartow Streets and the establishment of a considerable plant in connection with the present equipment of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons on Butler and Armstrong Streets.

Officers Are Announced.

The new college will be officered by W. S. Elkin, dean, and W. F. Westmoreland, president, of the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons, and by two officers to be nominated by the Atlanta School of Medicine.

All these plans were announced by a committee from the Atlanta School of Medicine, consisting of George H. Noble, L. C. Fischer and Edward G. Jones, and a committee from the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons, whose members are W. S. Elkin, W. F. Westmoreland and C. W. Strickler.

Consideration of the proposition has been under way for some time, stated the committee members.

"It has been the one object of these deliberations," they announced, "to organize an institution of dignity and of permanent promise, whose graduates will receive general recognition throughout the United States—an institution so constituted as to make it a real public asset, and so conducted as to expect and to deserve the heartiest popular commendation."

So complete have been the preliminary deliberations that before word of the union had been breathed every plan was worked out, even to the appointment of a faculty and of a board of trustees.

The faculty proper will consist of the following physicians:

Department of Medicine—W. S. Kendrick, C. W. Strickler, R. T. Dorsey, J. C. Johnson, J. C. Olmsted, E. C. Thrash, E. B. Block, C. E. Boynton, L. B. Clarke, George M. Niles, L. M. Gaines, S. R. Roberts and B. Wolff.

Department of Surgery—W. F. Westmoreland, F. W. McRae, E. G. Jones, W. S. Goldsmith, F. K. Boland, J. L. Campbell, L. C. Fischer, M. Hoke and A. L. Fowler.

Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology—George H. Noble, W. S. Elkin, E. C. Davis and S. T. Barnett.

Department of Materia Medica and Therapeutics—M. M. Hull, L. B. Clarke (with other salaried associates).

Department of Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat—F. P. Calhoun, Dunbar Roy and J. M. Crawford.

Department of Physiology—George Bachman (with other salaried associates).

Department of Anatomy—J. W. Papez (with other salaried associates).

Department of Pathology—John Funke (with other salaried associates).

Department of Chemistry—Edgar Everhart (with other salaried associates).

Associate Faculty Not Named.

The associate faculty has not yet been completed. It will embrace the names of 50 or 75 additional physicians of prominence in the city.

The probable board of trustees of the Atlanta Medical College will be Reuben R. Arnold, H. M. Dorsey, Judge George Hillyer, G. S. Lowndes, E. W. Martin, F. J. Paxon, Judge T. P. Westmoreland, H. H. Cabaniss, John J. Eagan, John H. James, H. J. Lowry, Wilmer L. Moore, J. Carroll Payne, C. E. Currier, T. A. Hammond, Marion M. Jackson, R. F. Maddox, Bishop C. K. Nelson, J. S. Prather and W. S. Witham.

The union of the two colleges is significant as a historical event. The name of the first medical college founded in Atlanta was that of the consolidated school—the Atlanta Medical College. This institution was formed in 1854, was suspended during the war and its building used as a hospital. It was merged in 1898 with the Southern Medical College, which was organized in 1878, to form the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons.

The Atlanta School of Medicine was organized 1905. Both the colleges erected new buildings in 1906, Andrew Carnegie having given $25,000 and Dr. A. W. Calhoun $15,000 to the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons for this purpose, other citizens giving various sums. The Atlanta School of Medicine has also operated a hospital in connection with the college.

Sell Luckie Property.

It is the present plan to put on sale the Luckie Street property of the Atlanta School of Medicine, and to provide for the college work to be carried on entirely at the Butler Street plant, ample room being there for additional buildings and extensions. The proximity of the Grady Hospital is an additional reason for transferring everything to that locality.

The total enrollment in the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons last session was 334, and in the Atlanta School of Medicine 218. The announcement by the joint committee declares:

"It will not be the future intention to increase the enrollment so much as to elevate the standard of professional instruction. After January, 1914, one or more years of work in a literary college will be required for entrance, the minimum requirement this fall being a high school education."

Committee Tells Hopes.

The committee, in a statement to the public, tells of its purposes and hopes, saying:

"The recent awakening of the public mind to a knowledge of the past shortcomings of medical education, the evident cordial interest in plans, wherever launched, to invest medical education with a degree of excellence which will protect the public as it ought to be protected; the late tendency of private philanthropy to recognize properly organized medical colleges as deserving of its bounty; the recognition promised abroad to the proposed institution, which recognition could not have been obtained as long as the colleges remained separate; the strategic advantages of Atlanta as the site for a medical college of superlative merit; the excellence of the professional talent in the city; the immense momentum implied in a united instead of a divided professional energy—all these and other considerations alike of sentiment and of common sense, have seemed to us to constitute a responsibility which it would discredit us to neglect, and an opportunity which it would distinguish us to embrace."

MOVE BEATEN FOR FREE WOOL GOODS

Clothing Duty Under New Tariff Schedule Will Be From 20 to 35 Per Cent.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—The question of dutiable wool manufactures in the tariff bill was raised in the Senate Democratic caucus to-day and brought a lengthy debate. Senator Chamberlain, of Oregon, favored the free listing of these commodities, arguing this was only fair to the public and the manufacturers with raw wool on the free list.

The goods affected are stockings, socks and blankets, women's and children's dress goods, ready-made clothing and other articles of wearing apparel. Ad valorem rates, ranging from 20 per cent on stockings to 35 per cent on ready-made clothing are in the bill as reported to the caucus.
